condition will soon be overcome, think. The scattered disciples there are very desirous of doing greater things for God, and we are expecting them to accomplish their desire. From Cedartown I went to Rome, Ga., on Thursday, May 22, and preached to a good-sized audience that night, without any visible results, save many expressions by the faithful to the end that they are expecting to accomplish much for our Master this year. Brother Cameron, of Winchester, Tenn., was expected there for a meeting soon when I was there. My next stop was Ga., where I preached on Lord's day, May 25, morning and evening, to fine audiences. The work at Lyerly moves along splendidly, with prospects for doing a great work this year. From Lyerly I went to Summer-ville, Ga., on May 26, and met Brother L. H. Reavis, who lives there and who "works with his hands," and preaches the gospel with fine results. There is no regular meeting of the disciples there, but the faithful attend elsewhere. I did my best to encourage them to continue faithful, and, with Brother Reavis living there, we think the work will grow. My next stop was "Lookout Hall," out from Trion, Ga., where I preached on Tuesday night to a small, but appreciative, audience. The few faithful disciples there are not the kind to give up, but they are of the kind that "press on unto perof the kind that 'press on the perfection." On Wednesday evening I was with Brother John T. Smithson, of Montgomery, Ala., in Trion, Ga., where he has been for about ten days in a fine meeting. The meeting closed in a fine meeting. The meeting closed on Wednesday night with five souls baptized into Christ and one leaving the doctrines of men and taking God's word for the only guide. Brother Smithson surely does "preach the word." His work in Trion will live on and on after he goes to his reward. From Trion I came to Buchanan, Ga., where I found prospects good for some good work soon. On yesterday (Lord's day, June 1) I was with the brethren at Austell, Ga., and preached at the morning service. The "work of the church" at Austell is not what it should be, yet, with a faithful and con-tinued "work of faith and labor of love," we hope to report an improvement soon. It must be done, and it can be done. Those there who are faithful need to know more assuredly that the Lord sees and will give them the help they need.

I am now at home in Atlanta, expecting to begin some protracted-meeting work soon at a mission point.

California.

Riverside, May 28 .- 1 came to this place nearly three months ago and began laboring with the brethren in an effort to enlarge the borders of the kingdom here. I am very much pleased with the work and look forward to good results. The interest is increasing. The audiences are larger than at first. A good spirit prevails among those who compose the congregation. I have promised to assist the brethren at San Francisco in a meeting, beginning the fourth Lord's day in June,-E. M. Borden.

Florida.

Miami, May 31.-The work here moves along nicely. I shall leave here for my home, Yuma, Tenn., on June 23. I have time for one or two short meetings the last of July as a result of some changes. I am also in position to assist in meetings during September and October,-Joe L. Netherland.

Kentucky.

Paducah, May 26.—We are having a fine meeting at the Goebel Avenue church of Christ here. Brother Brigance is doing the preaching, and his sermons are so instructive and good that we all make it a point to be in our places at every service. There have been ten additions up to date, and we are hoping that others may come before the meeting closes.-J. N.

Oklahoma.

Guymon, May 27 .- We have a few here who are trying to worship according to the teaching of God's word. We have contracted for a house that was built by the Presbyterians, for which we are to pay one thousand dollars. The lumber to build this house cost over two thousand dollars, to say nothing about the building and the seats and other things. We want a good preacher to come and live with us, and we think he could get a good living. Crop prospects were never better. This is a healthy country. If any preaching brother would like to come here and wants to know more about this country, let him write me .- D. A.

Tennessee. -

Tennessee City, May 29.—I closed a meeting at Pond, three miles from Dickson, last Lord's-day night. One was restored. The attendance was as good as could be expected, considering the rainy weather.—J. H. Murrell, Coalmont, May 20.—Brother Bailey Brooks, of Tracy City, is holding one of the greatest gospel meetings here we have ever had. He is a forcible speaker, and he knows how to preach the word as it is found in the Bible. Brother Brooks has a winning way; people have come out to hear him that have not been inside of a church in eight years. There has been one confession and baptism.—W. H. Warren.

Celina, June 1 .- My work for the last six months has been very limited. The health of my wife (which is never good) has been such as to keep me at home almost all the time. A few times I have been able to fill appointments at near-by points where I could attend and return the same lay. I have no line of work laid out for the future, except just such days as I may visit near-by congregations. If in the future wife's condition will permit, I will be glad, indeed, to again give much time to the greatly needed work in the Martine greatly needed work in the Master's vineyard,-John H.

Decherd, May 22.-I closed a twoweeks' meeting at Estill Springs with two baptized. The attendance was fine throughout the meeting. This is a small congregation, but they are strong and courageous. This is the home of Joe Mason, a godly man, who This is the is always at his post of duty and who spends most of his earnings having the gospel preached. The loyal brethren stood by me well in the meeting. I went from Estill Springs to Daus, in Sequatchie County, where I began a meeting last Lord's day and preached two sermons. I took very ill on Sunday night and had to return home. I am now under the doctor's treatment. The brethren at Daus were very much disappointed, as all necessary arrangements had been made and all were looking forward to a good meeting. R. E. L. Taylor.

Manchester, May 27.—This congregation is engaged in doing mission work in the county. Last Sunday Brother Willis drove me six miles in the country, in the afternoon, where he taught the lesson and I preached. There were about fifty assembled in an old schoolhouse. I am to go back next Sunday afternoon and from time to time. As soon as the roads improve and the crops are "laid by," we will hold a meeting. Then, Brothwe will hold a meeting. Then, Brother Willis told me of another place five miles in another direction. Then another place six miles from Manchester is just waiting for the roads to improve and the busy season to pass. Summitville is a mission point. This is a busy, generous, Bible-loving peo-ple, who, while they feel the need of preaching themselves, wish to share with others the bread of life.—Isaac C. Hoskins.

Texas.

McLean, June 2.—I am preaching twice a month at Texola, Okla., on the second and fourth Sundays; at Sham-rock, Texas, on the first Sunday; and at Plymouth, Texas, on the third Sun-day. Interest is good at all these places. I am now ready to arrange meetings for the summer.—A. C. Huff.

Corpus Christi, May 31.—1 began a meeting here on Tuesday night, to continue for some three weeks. The church is rather weak here, owing to division over Sunday school and other things. But there are some fine peo-ple in the little congregation. This is the home of Brother C. W. Sewell, who has been largely responsible for the building up of the church here. He is held in high esteem by the members here.—G. Dallas Smith.

Beaumont, June 2.—We had a good day here yesterday. It has been raining so much here this spring that the interest has abated somewhat. Yesterday a week ago it rained all out except about fifty at the morning service, and it rained us all out that night. Yesterday was a clear day and the interest was fine at both morning and evening services. We are making some improvements on our building now and are talking of making an addition to it. We also need a baptistery. The Lord willing, I shall be here till June 30.—J. C. Estes.

Wellington, May 27.—I am now preaching each night at Plymouth, about fifteen miles north from Wellington. The people listen well, and I hope to accomplish some good in the Master's name. I recently held a series of meetings near Tulia, on the plains, where the people have made no crops for two or three years. It is inspiring to labor among such people. The spirit of the people is fine. They are wholly undaunted by failure. They all seem to have confidence in the country and in each other. The banks, I understand, have borrowed heavily and are supporting the people nobly. The wheat prospects are good and all have an optimistic spirit, thinking they will get out of debt and have something ahead from this crop. meeting was supported by the church at Wellington. Some of the brethren in that community went from here and were among those who made the greatest sacrifices to establish the cause of the Lord in this place. The church here has supported two meetings there during the hard years since those members have been up there, and the cause of the Master is in a good spiritual condition there now. The work in this part of the country is prospering. I shall hold several mission meetings this summer. I shall hold the meeting at Quail in August. Brother J. E. Black will be with the church here in August for a pro-tracted meeting, and Brother W. H. George will begin at Plymouth on the third Sunday in August. Any congregation desiring a strong preacher for a meeting either at home or at mission points can be put in touch with one by writing me.—C. D. Crouch.

West Virginia.

Buffalo, Box 81, May 23.—Last Lord's day Brother Hypes and I opened a new mission point four miles west of here in a thickly settled locality. We expect to continue there until we obtain results. Altogether we are keeping up some seven or eight mission points, for all are really mision points. From one to four dol-lars a trip is as much as we ever get in this country, and sometimes in new places we get nothing at all. I do not see how we can live under present conditions until we can train and develop the brethren we have in this section, unless the brethren at large will help us liberally now. I am never very well, and neither is my wife; I am never and at times we both suffer intensely from mental depression, and it is hard to throw it off under present conditions. Brethren, for Christ's sake and in behalf of a beloved companion, I beseech you to help me liberally in my work now. My wife and I have suffered much in the interests of the true cause of Christ. Please do help us to do this work as it should be done. And please remember Brother George E. Hypes, my associate in the Lord's work. His address is R. F. D., Buf, falo, W. Va.—F. P. Fonner.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mostistinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a choe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about 1 shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

While weak in numbers, they are rich in faith and good works. There were no visible results in the way of additions to the one body, but our faith was strengthened and determination was made to do greater things in the future. Brother Smith is a forceful, logical speaker, and his earnestness made an impression even on those without the fold. The church at Brownsville is to be complimented for its work in the past year, and it remains for us to en-courage them and others to do even more in the future. Cleveland, June 5.—On May 19 I went over to Etowah to take charge of a meeting that was begun by a Brother Daugherty on the day before. I stayed with this meeting twelve days, preaching every evening and three times on Lord's day. In some respects this is the hardest place this preacher ever tried to conduct a meeting. Etowah is a town of four thousand or more people in McMinn County, on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad between Knoxville and Atlanta, and is a division on the road, and their shops are here. On all the shifts they work about six hundred men. Wickedness, strong religious prejudice, a self-satisfied disposition, and indifference in general make it hard to get the truth before the people. We succeeded in working up some interest and in rounding up the church pretty thor-There is a very determined oughly. band of thirty-odd members here in a very good house, very well located. As a result of our labors, two were restored and five took membership, and two more elders and four deacons were appointed. On Saturday morning I left the meeting in the hands of Brother W. C. Phillips, and he continued it till the following Lord's-day evening. I came back to Cleveland and preached to good audiences on Lord's day, both forencon and evening, and in the afternoon several of us went six miles west to a place called "Free Will," where they had an all-day singing. There I preached to an immense crowd at three o'clock. Our church building will soon be completed.—George W. Farmer.

Kirbyville, June 2.—I closed a well-attended mission meeting at Center Schoolhouse, in Hardin County, last night. We were rained out three nights of the eight. Denison, June 3.—Texas has a wonderful crop, if the farmers can only save it. That is our anxiety about the Lord's harvest. "The harvest is indeed great, but the laborers are few." I hope the brethren will spend more money this year for the Lord than ever before. Sound out the word from pulpit and press. The work is doing fine here. There are additions nearly every Lord's day. Brother Lee P. Mansfield will begin our meeting on the third Sunday in June. May the Lord bless the workers in his vineyard everywhere.—Thomas E. Milholland.

REV. J. W. MALONE, A.M., D.D., Pres., Cleveland, Tenn.

Meeting at Tampa, Fla.

BY T. B. THOMPSON.

Tampa is one of the best of Southern cities, and a place of more than ordinary interest to Northern tourists. It is situated on Tampa Bay at the mouth of Hillsboro River. It is a great ship-building and cigar-manufacturing town. It possibly has seventy-five thousand inhabitants. But I am not setting out to tell about the city and its points of interest, but about our great meeting with the church of Christ in this beautiful city.

This meeting began on May 11, with Brother Hoover, local minister, preaching the first Lord's day and evening, I being detained at Avon Park for that day in order to assist Brother Henry Russell and Sister Amy Hinton to get started to mutual housekeeping. They are our very best. Sister Amy is the daughter of our own Brother Homer Hinton and wife, while Brother Henry is from one of our best Christian families near Tampa. On Monday I arrived in Tampa and did the preaching through the remainder of the meeting. The church seemed to be in trim for the meeting, a conclusion which I feel sure the interest during the meeting and the sequel plainly demonstrate. Our audiences began to grow from the start and held up well to the last. One of the features of the meeting was the beginning of the song service at half past seven o'clock each evening. The audiences that attended this early service were good to the last. I feel that the thirtyminutes' extra song service lent great impetus to our other efforts in the meeting. The sun would scarcely be well down when time came for the regular preaching service. Everything had in it the spirit of great interest, and those who attended were influenced thereby. The members talked the meeting in their homes and the homes of their neighbors, as well as on the streets and at their places of work. I believe it has never been my pleasure to engage in a series of meetings in which the membership stood more loyally by the meeting than this one. Brother Hoover conducted the song service, and did it well. This meeting resulted in eighteen additions. Seventeen were baptized and one returned to her "first love" who had been connected with the Methodist Church for some time. A number of those baptized were either Methodists or Baptists. One of the most impressive things that took place during the meeting was the coming of an entire family, with the exception of one son who was already a member of the body of Christ-father, mother, sister, and two sons-at the same invitation, to make confession of their faith in Christ. The after meeting was principally taken up with loving embraces and tears of joy, and the people seemed loath to leave the place.

There are many nice things I would like to say about Brother Hoover, his splendid family, and the church; but it would make a book if all were said, hence I forbear. The meeting continued fifteen days, and yet many thought it might have gone on longer with profit. This church works definitely. Already they are laying apart a certain per cent of their contribution for the purpose of erecting a larger building. Notwithstanding the fact that this people have enlarged their building within the last couple of years, they find themselves outgrowing their present quarters and expect to build in the near future. This meeting demonstrated the fact that a new building is needed. I predict that you will hear of greater things from this splendid congregation. They have one of the greatest fields in the South, and have only to move forward and possess the land.

The Christian prays as he lives and lives as he prays. But Christian prayer is the prayer of faith and not merely of form; it is prayer of the heart and not merely of the lips; it is prayer which rests not in bodily posture, but in spiritual power.—James Hastings.

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

Those Two Giants.

In our last article we spoke of the first of the two great giants, Opportunity and Responsibility.

Opportunity - the open-door, the numbers, the means, and the material.

Responsibility is no less a giant than is Opportunity, because the one is the natural consequence of the other. Are we not responsible for the use we make of our opportunities? Will God open the doors to so many heathen nations for the gospel that saves men's souls and say to us: "Though I have left you as a light in the world, you may do as you like about entering these open doors with that light?" Will we in very deed choose to stay out of them? Will we let these modern men of Macedonia cry, "Come over into Macedonia, and help us" (for some of the heathen are actually making this ery), and will we refuse to heed them, or will we do as Paul did-turn our faces from what we had in mind to do and go forthwith to their rescue? Yea, as we look toward these open doors we see the hand of God writing: "Go ve into all the world, and preach the gospel."

Then, what about your helping to support those few who are gone? And again, what about others that should be sent to China, India, Africa, Syria and Turkey, Persia, Korea, Japan, United States, Siam, Great Britain, France, Burma, Mexico, Greece, Russia, Pacific Islands, etc.?

"There were glants in those days," and no less are there glants in our days. Every age has its glants, and there will be greater glants than these. Some day, if these glants of our day are not properly dealt with, those future glants may "fall on us," and glad may we then be and among others say, "and hide us from the presence of the Lord."

In the days of the apostles, when there were few in number in comparison to us, there was vastly more done than now; in fact, there is no comparison in this respect. They "went everywhere preaching the word." True, a persecution scattered them abroad; and we may yet awake to find a persecution scattering us into places to preach where we would not go by the choice of a good will. O, what a scattering that would be! And do you suppose we would be found telling the good news or telling of our mistreatment at others' hands? Many, indeed, are we; but one could not tell it by the amount of mission work we do. If we were to send one foreign missionary to every ninety-two members, as did the Brethren Church as far back as 1893, how many would we send forth? And what a contrast that would be to what we are doing!

Weekly Health Talks

Where Most Sickness Begins and Ends

BY FRANKLIN DUANE, M. D.

It can be said broadly that most human ills begin in the stomach and end in the stomach. Good digestion means good health, and poor digestion means bad health. The minute your stomach fails to properly dispose of the food you eat, troubles begin to crop out in various forms. Indigestion and dyspepsia are the commonest forms, but thin, impure blood, headaches, backaches, pimples, blotches, dizziness, belching, coated tongue, weakness, poor appetite, sleeplessness, coughs, colds and bronchitis are almost as common. There is but one way to have good health, and that is to put and keep your stomach in good order. This is easy to do if you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a wonderful tonic and blood purifier, and is so safe to take, for it is made of roots and herbs. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., stands behind this standard medicine, and it is good to know that so distinguished a physician is proud to have his name identified with it. When you take Golden Medical Discovery, you are getting the benefit of the experience of a doctor whose reputation goes all around the earth. Still more, you get a temperance medicine that contains not a drop of alcohol or narcotic of any kind. Long ago Dr. Pierce combined certain valuable vegetable ingredients—without the use of alcohol—so that these remedies always have been strictly temperance medicines.

If piles are torturing you, get and use Pierce's Anodyne Pile Ointment. The quick relief it gives is hard to believe until you try it. If constipated, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be taken while using Anodyne Pile Ointment. Few indeed are the cases which these splendid remedies will not relieve and usually overcome. They are so good that nearly every drug store has them for sale.

Or suppose we had one foreign missionary to every five thousand members, as did the Protestant churches at that date, what would we do? Back to that date (1893), twenty-six years ago, how many had we in the mission field? And this fact placed by the side of our Lord's last command before his ascension: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Or compare ourselves to the apostolic age, in which generation the whole world was evangelized!

Our increase of numbers in this country has come largely of proselytism and not of pure missions. Paul was not desirous of building on other men's foundations; so he did not bother about running down those that were preaching for other than the one good purpose, but said: "I go rather where Christ hath not been named."

Much could be said of our responsibility as to the use of the money God has put into our hands, but this must be left for a future article. True it is that not many of the rich are called, but there is sufficient of this world's goods among us to enable us to do all we can otherwise do; and this we have, too, right when many doors are wide open and when there are some waiting to go into any field to labor when they are sent! "Where then is that gratulation of yourselves?"

May the good Lord have mercy upon us and bless us in doing, every one, his good pleasure.

Heartfelt Conversion.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

Over fifty years ago I read the Bible through to find out how many times the word "heart" was used. According to my counting, I found the word used in the singular six hundred and forty times, and ninety-eight times in the plural. That was before I was able to own a concordance, and after I came in possession of one I found it to be correct. I was a little surprised to find that the fleshly heart of man or beast was indicated only a few times. At that time much of the sectarian preaching was to show that the heart must be converted or changed; but they never told how it was done, what the heart was, nor what it could do. A change of heart was the usual theme, and they would always leave that greatest and most important work for the Lord to accomplish in his mysterious way and in his own good time, thus throwing the responsibility of the corruptness of all unchanged hearts upon the Almighty. And many followed their pernicious ways. Fifty years ago preachers would often reply to each other, but now that kind of work is considered out of place. While I am free to admit that the Bible does present one special case where a change of heart is actually mentioned, and the history of the case plainly shows that the change of heart did actually occur (and it is the only place in the whole Bible where the change of heart is recorded), I am also free to admit that I have never preached that kind of a change of heart in order to man's salvation. Please read Dan. 4: 16 and see if I am right. Here it is: "Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him." The Bible shows plainly that the heart is capable of acting; and whatever the heart does, the soul does; and whatever the soul does, the spirit does. We read of the contrite heart, soul, or spirit; the sad heart, soul, or spirit; the troubled heart, soul, or spirit; the glad heart, soul, or spirit; the rejoicing heart, soul, or spirit; the purified heart, soul, or spirit; the believing heart, soul, or spirit; the speaking heart, soul, or spirit; the righteous heart, soul, or spirit; the evil heart, soul, or spirit. The above being true, when I desire the conversion of a man from the error of his ways, I begin to work upon the intellectual powers. His heart being (as I suppose) capable of acting, he can understand. So I preach to him. He can believe or disbelieve. He can receive the word in his heart or reject it. He can love the truth with his heart or hate it. He can reform his ways or remain wicked. He can obey with his heart, soul, and spirit, and in his full obedience he is converted in faith, in understanding, in affection, in conduct, and in speech. And the transition act by which the man is translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of Christ is that of baptism, where Jesus placed the ceremony, in which act the person passes out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of Christ, and is then converted in heart, soul, body, and spirit.

A Godsend to Rheumatics.

A Godsend to Rheumatics.

Here it is. Those swful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Saits, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood. The cause of rheumatism is uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expels the uric acid from the system. Renwar is enfiely dependable. It does not in any wayinjure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar falls to relieve you of your rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial, and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." GIRLS! MAKE A BEAUTY LOTION

.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth, so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness, and tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener, and beautifier.

Just try It! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms, and hands. It naturally should help to whiten, soften, freshen, and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. is truly marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

An Interesting Report.

BY M. KEEBLE.

Knowing as I do that the harvest is great and the laborers are few, I am endeavoring to keep busy in our Master's vineyard. At the time of my last report I was in Mississippi, and remained in that State until April 24.

I went to Hicks, Ark., and preached on Friday night, April 25, and also on Saturday night, in the home of Brother Ed. Harris who always tries to make arrangements to get the gospel of Jesus Christ to his neighbors, several of whom were present to hear the word of God. I find that during the apostles' days they went from house to house preaching the word, and it is good to follow the example of these old servants.

The next place I visited was Blackton, Ark., where I preached on the fourth Lord's day in April, and enjoyed two splendid services with this faithful congregation. This congregation was established through the faithful efforts of old Brother Nathan Cathey, who moved in here over thirty years ago from Hickman County, Tenn. If all who move into new fields would go to work as this old servant did, great would be the spread of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Brother Cathey died last year, leaving a wideawake, working congregation as the fruits of his labors. Brother D. J. Bynum and I have been engaged to labor with this church a month in mission work.

On April 28, 29, I was with the little band at Cotton Plant, Ark., and the interest was good at both services. We are planning to hold a meeting there this fall.

I began a meeting with the Memphis mission on April 30 and continued it ten days. The interest was good, but there were no additions. The work there has been hindered in many ways. There are some as faithful and earnest brethren and sisters there as I have ever met, but they need encouragement and instruction. Brethren and sisters from Neshoba and Capleville, who live from sixteen to twenty miles away, attended these services, showing an interest in the work. While here I made my home with Brother D. J. Bynum and wife, and I shall never forget their kindness.

Returning to Nashville, I preached at the Jackson Street Church on the second Lord's day in May, with good attendance at both services. I was proud to find them faithfully working and trusting Jesus.

On the third Lord's day in May, assisted by Brother T. H. Bushy, I began a meeting at Sparta, Tenn. Brother Busby did the singing and some of the preaching, and he did his part well. There is a splendid meetinghouse in the town which was given to the brethren by the white congregation there, but its doors had been closed for over two years prior to this We succeeded in getting meeting. regular worship started again, and Brother Busby is to visit them once a month. Though the work has been virtually dead, the white brethren are willing to assist in reviving it. Brother Hal Harris, who is highly esteemed by all the white people, promised to look after the work and see that the doors are kept open for services in the future. I am to go back at an early date and hold a meeting.

On the fourth Lord's day in May I went to Lebanon, Tenn. The brethren and sisters, with a large auto truck, were at the station to meet me. I joined them and we went out the Hartsville pike to old St. John's Church, where there was a faithful congregation years ago; but it has gone down, and even the house has rotted down. But the church at Lebanon has begun a building so the work can be reëstablished. I preached two sermons under the trees. A large crowd was present, and there was an old-fashioned basket dinner on the ground for all. Nearly forty dollars was raised to complete the building. I preached at night in town, and the interest was good. This is a working church, and I pray that the spirit of peace may abide with them.

I went to Henderson, Tenn., on May 27, and remained three days. The services were well attended and two persons made the good confession. One of these was a Baptist preacher. Two years ago I went there and found four members; now there are about one hundred, and they are preparing to build a meetinghouse. I will hold another meeting there in July. I have never met better white people

After Years of Suffering, this Lady Sought and Found Relief in PE-RU-NA, the Great Catarrh Remedy.

While there is nothing unusual in the experience of Miss Louise Bruecker of 1326 East Twelfth St., East Oakland, Cal., her letter cannot help but be an inspiration to every sufferer from catarrh.

This it what she says: "Diphtheria left me with catarrh of the throat. After years of suffering and disappointment, I gave up hope until I heard of PERU-NA. I tried it. Followed instructions and have had no catarrh since. Now, we always keep PERU-NA and MAN-A-LIN in the house."

It is not necessary for any one to go on year after year suffering with catarrh in any form. PE-RU-NA is just as effective for catarrh of the stomach, bowels, liver and other organs as it is for coughs, colds and catarrh of the nose and throat. It is by regulating the digestion and aiding elimination that PE-RU-NA insures a rich supply of pure blood and nourishment being carried to the mucous linings everywhere, By keeping membranes healthy, keeping the mucous healthy, the body is better able to repel disease and ward off such troubles as the Grip and Spanish Flu. PE-RU-NA is of extraordinary value in rebuilding to normal health and the body strength.

Tablets or Liquid. Sold Everywhere, than those at Henderson. Brother J. Hannon, who lives at Corinth, Miss., preaches for the colored brethren there once a month, and they all love him.

On May 30 I preached at Corinth, Miss., and found them still faithful in the work. Although Brother Hannon preaches a good deal, he does not forget his home work.

I am now in a meeting at Bell-buckle, Tenn., which began June 1, and the interest is increasing. This is my seventh meeting here. We have raised thirty dollars to assist in building a meetinghouse. They now have a little over one hundred dollars in the building fund. Brethren who love to do real mission work should send a contribution to W. R. Mingle (white), who is managing the business for them until some colored brother develops who can take the work. Address him at Bellbuckle, Tenn.

I am glad that I had the privilege of being present at David Lipscomb College on May 14, because I saw the need of Christian education as never before. It was worth the trip to hear the speeches made by Brethren A. B. Lipscomb, Elam, McQuiddy, and others. May these Christian men live on, for such men are a blessing to the church and to the world. Brother David Lipscomb put a coal of fire among the brethren before God took him, which will never die.

Quarterly Report from the Belle Haven Orphans' Home, of Luling, Texas.

BY MRS. JENNIE CLARKE.

Receipts for the quarter beginning January 27, 1919, and ending April 27, amounted to $1,169.52. Balance on hand, April 30, $11,702.07. Checks issued since April 30, $346.84. Balance on hand, May 8, $11,355.23.

Disbursements during the period covered from last quarterly report amount to $2,012.91. About one thousand dollars of this amount has been expended on labor and pipes for a more efficient system of waterworks. The work is not completed, and it will take some time and more money to complete the work now in progress.

Number of children placed in private homes, three. Present number in the Home, fifty-seven.

Deeds and Words.

Deeds are greater than words. Deeds have such a life, mute, but undeniable, and grow as living trees and fruit trees do; they people the vacuity of time and make it green and worthy. Why should the oak prove logically that it ought to grow and will grow? Plant it, try it; what gifts of diligent judicious assimilation and secretion it has, of progress and resistance, of force to grow, will then declare themselves,-Carlyle.

Must Have Real Merit.

Anybody or anything to command confidence must deserve it.

A medicine that has commanded the confidence of the public for half a century, as Hood's Sarsaparilla has done, has merit, real merit.

This is something for you to bear in mind when you are in need of a medicine for your blood, stomach, liver, or kidneys, the ordinary diseases or ailments of which are cured or relieved by Hood's Sarsaparilla, as thousands of three generations have voluntarily testified.

When you buy Hood's Sarsaparilla, you buy a medicine that has outlived the formative period, in which there is more or less experiment, and has been fully developed for years, during which it has made a unique record by what it has accomplished for the sick and ailing, according to their own story.

Demand for Holy Places.

So long as religion exists, men will look for its holy places. If they do not find its sanctuaries ready at hand in the natural features of the country in which they live, or if they are not provided with places consecrated by the history of the past, they will make them for themselves in their churches and their shrines.

Men need some special place where they can know that they are in the divine presence and can offer their homage before his throne. The places of men's veneration are frequently impressive and beautiful; but, on the other hand, they may be the barest buildings, having nothing of grace or beauty to please the eye. Yet the meanest building becomes ablaze with divine glory to those who have met God within its walls; and where generation after generation of men, each in its turn, has bent in reverence to worship, or to listen in faith to the word of the most high in warning, encouragement, or comfort as they most need, they have dedicated holy places with a reverence due to the honor of God and the memory of his people.-London Times.

OBITUARIES

Chambers.

On January 28, 1919, our hearts were made very sad by the death of Allie Eudora Chambers. She had seen only twenty-two summers. It seems so hard for one to be taken so young in life, especially one who had such a sunny, lovable disposition. She was very optimistic and possessed many lovable traits of character. She obeyed the gospel and was baptized about six years ago. She was a joy to her own family and to her other A COUSIN. relatives.

Bondurant.

Virginia Catherine Bondurant was born on April 10, 1866, and died on April 7, 1919. She obeyed the gospel in September, 1899, being baptized by Brother J. K. Hill. She is survived by her husband, seven children, and four grandchildren. Her older son is in France. She had lived a consecrated life to her Lord since her obedience and died in the faith. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." (Rev. 14: 13.) "Yea, though I walk through (Rev. the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." (Ps. 23: 4.) Her husband (Ps. 23: 4.) Her husband and three children are members of the church of Christ. The son that is in France spent one term in the David Lipscomb College and did some preaching before he was called to go R. E. L. TAYLOR. oversea.

Jarratt.

Mrs. Rosa E. Jarrett, daughter of J. B. and M. M. Clonch, of Kimball, Tenn., was born on March 11, 1883, and departed this life, at Trenton, Ga., on April 21, 1919. On March 21, 1906, she was united in marriage to Jeffer son D. Jarrett, and was a true and faithful wife. To this union were born three children—Marvin M., Tally D., and Charles Leslie. Besides the immediate members of the household, she leaves two sisters to mourn her loss-Miss Leslie Clonch, of Trenton, Ga., who was with her during her illness, and Mrs. Minnie Belk, of Shepherd, Tenn. In 1911 she obeyed the gospel and was united to the church at Union, near Trenton, Ga., and lived as a faithful Christian the rest of her Her health had been bad for several years, and for the last five months she was confined to her bed. During all of her awful suffering she was never heard to murmur nor complain, Let us not weep as those who have no hope, but let us strive to meet her where we will spend an eternity with her at home with Jesus.

J. D. JARRETT.

Redding.

James Newton Redding, son of Brother and Sister J. T. Redding, of Campbell Station, Tenn., was born on November 13, 1875, and died on April 19, 1919. At about the age of fourteen he was baptized by Brother E. G. Sewell and ever afterwards lived a consistent Christian life. On January 23, 1901, Brother Redding was married to Mary Etta Wilkes. They were fitted for and worthy of each other. Theirs was, indeed, a happy married life and a beautiful Christian home. Three children—Everette, Mary, and Neal—blessed their union and added to their happiness. In Brother Redding's life and home were demonstrated the beauties and realities of the Christian life. His life was, indeed, a living epistle, known and read of all who knew him. His going away marks a great loss, not only to his family and congregation, but to his entire community as well. Sympathy is extended to his aged parents, wife and children, brother and sister, and many friends. After funeral services conducted by the writer at the church where he had obeyed the gospel and worshiped all his life, he was buried near his home. Thus another one of God's noble servants "rests from his labors," and his works follow after him.

J. T. Clark.

Crump.

A life of faith, love, and prayer, ever looking unto the eternal home, is the most beautiful, most admirable, and most noble of all. Such a life ended in the death of Brother Denar Crump, of Haynesville, La. Brother Crump was born on July 13, 1886, and died on December 19, 1918. He was the son of M. N. and Alice Crump, of Haynesville. He hardly knew what it is to have father and mother, for he was left an orphan when he was only a lad of five years. He was married to Georgia Ware, of Haynesville, on September 11, 1904, and leaves her here to mourn her great loss. They had no children, but they had a happy home. One bright day in August, 1913, these two were baptized into the body of Christ, and from that date they were true coworkers in Christ. Brother Crump was a faithful Christian, a good citizen, and a loving companion. He had as few enemies and faults as any man we know here. His good wife is very sad and lonely. May our Heavenly Father watch, guard, guide, protect, and comfort her. Our lamented brother also left a number of brothers, sisters, and other near relatives, together with a host of friends, to grieve over their great loss and to rejoice in the noble life which was finished as such a glorious consummation.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in line laving condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. He was assigned to duty in the fifth squadron of Rifle Grenadiers, Company M, 142d Infantry. He was born in Rantoul, Infantry. He was born in Rantoul, Kan., on April 15, 1887. Two years his parents moved to Oklahoma, locating on a farm near the present site of El Reno. It was here that Jesse grew into manhood. In 1901 they moved to Rush Springs, Okla., where Jesse and his father engaged in the grocery business, which business they have since continued in. On September 26, 1915, the writer of these lines had the privilege of baptizing him into the body of Christ. Since be-coming a member of the church of Christ he had ever conducted himself as a "good soldier" of the cross. He loved the cause of Christ because he had a true vision of what it means to fallen humanity. Truly, he "grew in grace and in the knowledge of the truth," for he studied to show himself approved unto God. A good boy has gone from us. Edifying as the Need May Be Leaving Out Conditions.

To make his message complete, every man who professes to be a teacher of the truth, a preacher of righteousness, a proclaimer of the gospel, should include in his story of God's love the conditions of acceptance. Many preachers are content with preaching only part of the gospel without telling poor dying sinners all that they must do in order to be saved. Consequently the message is not full. It is not complete because it does not explain the way into the spiritual kingdom of Jesus Christ. It is a noticeable and lamentable fact that the condition which is most often omitted by the great evangelists of this country is that which Jesus Christ himself names as the very door to his kingdom. Dwight L. Moody is reported to have said in the very height of his career as a preacher: "I would rather lose my right arm than preach on baptism." If that be true, God only knows how many thousands of people he led to the door of the kingdom and then left them to die. God only knows in how many minds he created the impression that this divine institution, ordained of Jesus Christ himself, was unimportant. One may read in the public prints of a great mine that is being developed and which is soon to be opened. In flaming headlines he may read of the great opportunity for the small investor, but because he has not enough money for a single share the announcement does him no good. Once I looked through a telescope at the stars, and instantly the thought came: "How wonderful, but how far away!" So is it with those who speak in eloquent tones of God's love and neglect to tell the New Testament conditions of salvation. It is pointing out a great mine to the alien sinner without furnishing the means for a single share. It is making Jesus Christ a hidden mystery where he ought to be a living reality. It is making his gospel an idle dream where it ought to be a glorious and tangible truth. The gift of teaching or preaching comes from God, and we ought to remember that genuine thankfulness proves itself by a grateful and righteous administration of the gift. Is the Giver forgotten in the enjoyment of the blessing? Is the Giver mocked by some merely formal expression of thanks, or is the Giver glorified by our sincere appreciation as expressed in our Christian conduct?

Ingratitude's Deadening Influence.

We cannot fail to notice the corresponding reflexive effects of gratitude, false or true, upon the beneficiary, The deadening influence of ingratitude is not described in the story of the nine ingrates, but in the letter to the Romans it is indicated as the path to heathenism. (See Rom. 1: 21.) The cheap formality of the Pharisee made his gifts the sacrament of unholy pride and vitiated his prayer; but the genuine gratitude of the Samaritan begot a faith in Jesus which, in spite of racial differences, led a grateful alien to a knowledge of the gospel. Let us learn the lesson that God's gifts are not only revelations of his love, but every one of them is intended to be educational in developing the best possibilities that lie within us. The true use of them approves us before men as Christians more than anything else in the world. The grateful heart approaches the Giver through the exercise of its gift, and thereby makes possible that receptivity which is the chief condition for the bestowment of still greater blessings.

Gratitude Unrestrained.

When the Caliph Haroun had put to death his vizier, Bermekee, he ordered that none should speak in praise of the latter under pain of death. But, despite the warning, one old Arab continued to declare the merits of the late minister. Summoned into the presence of the king and being asked why he dared to transgress, the old man replied: "I should have been a monster of ingratitude had I not." Then he related how the dead man had raised him from a condition of poverty and obscurity to position and influence. The king, struck with the fidelity and courage of the man and desiring to gain his confidence for himself by more splendid generosity, presented him with his golden scepter. "I take it," cried the grateful but undaunted Arab: "but this, also, Commander of the Faithful, Gratitude will endure much to exis from Bermekee." press itself.

If Christian people would only remember that every good thing they receive in this world, whether from heaven direct or through the instrumentality of men, comes from the Father, "with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning," their hearts would flow to him and their gratitude would be supreme. It would be greater and more enduring than Jacob's pillow, greater than Joshua's twelve stones at Gilgal, finer than Israel's pot of manna and Aaron's rod which budded, higher than the Ebenezer altar, and more precious than David's sword.

Our humble Christian service would then become the living monument of our gratitude, declaring the Father's love and shouting the Father's praise.

Book Notices.

We are giving a Teachers' Testament to our readers. It is the book to read.

Send us $1.25 for a copy of "Instrumental Music in the Worship," by M. C. Kurfees.

We have left a few copies of "Folk-McQuiddy Discussion on the Plan of Salvation." Price, $1.25.

Help us circulate the New Testament and the Gospel Advocate. Send in a long list of new subscribers at once,

For $1.25 you can buy a copy of "Life and Sermons of Jesse L. Sewell," by David Lipscomb. It is a good book.

Send us one new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate, accompanied by $2, which is the regular subscription price, and we will forward you a copy of the Teachers' Testament. We hear you say: "A good thing to do, and liberal enough."

RENEWAL OF THE SPECIAL NUMBERS.

In response to a friendly and widespread demand upon the part of our readers, the editors of the Gospel Advocate have decided to resume the publication of special numbers. Our effort along this line during the years of 1915 and 1916 met with universal favor. Everybody was pleased, and many helped in securing for them a large circulation. We recall with pardonable pride and unfeigned pleasure the genuine enthusiasm and heartfelt appreciation evoked by the appearance of the "Bible Study Number," the "Lord's Supper Number," the "Home, Father and Mother Number," and many others of equal interest. Following a precedent already established, we will print thirty-two pages in each special number. These pages will be brimful of splendid and timely contributions from the best writers available.

Beginning with the last week in July, we will issue a special number each month until the end of the year. The title of the first will be the "Giving Number." It is generally conceded that few Christians have learned how to apply for themselves and to teach others the God-given principles on this all-important subject. The purpose of this number will be to bring out this teaching in a clear, unmistakable manner. We desire it to be so scripturally complete that it may serve hereafter as a kind of reference work on the subject that will be entirely worthy of preservation. Other numbers will follow, devoted to such vital and soul-stirring themes as "Prayer," "Loyalty," "A Better Ministry," "The Christian Armor," "Christian Additions," etc.

No reader can afford to miss these special numbers. Hundreds of our readers wrote us that one of them was worth a year's subscription. Others had the series bound and placed in the library. The new series of special numbers will be as helpful as the last, and, if possible, improvements will be made. We wish each reader to send us a new subscriber at once in order that many may enjoy the feast of good things. Be sure that you do not permit your subscription to be in arrears. Send us your order to-day.

Was Christ Divine? No. 1.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

I choose this form of the proposition because it is definite and specific. If this proposition can be proved, all corollaries are easily deduced from this specific proposition. "The religion of Christ," "Christianity is supernatural," and "a defense of Christianity"—all these themes are dependent upon the main proposition, the divinity of Christ. If Christ was not divine, then all of the other propositions fall to the ground. The whole scheme of redemption demands that Christ be divine, and the salvation of the human family is predicated upon his divinity.

Apologetics is usually defined as that branch of theology which vindicates Christianity from objections urged against it, by setting forth its true nature and by showing its relation to other knowledge, and thus inducing the mind to accept it. From this definition it is clear that apologetics has a double function: first, to answer all reasonable objections made against Christianity; second, to set forth the origin, true nature, and power of Christianity in the world. The first function of apologetics may be performed by logically presenting the second. When it is clearly shown that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God and the author of the Christian religion, then all objections made to Christianity are weakened, if not fully refuted. The opponents of Christianity shift their ground from time to time; hence, the arguments refuting the opposition must be changed in order to meet the new opponents. We are admonished in the Scriptures to be "ready always to give answer to every man that asketh you a reason concerning the hope that is in you, yet with meekness and fear." (1 Pet. 3: 15.) It is not enough to know the arguments that have been made in ages past by antichristian thinkers and the answer that the defenders of the faith made then; it is more important to us to know what objections and arguments are made now by scientific and philosophical thinkers and to be ready to give satisfactory arguments answering these modern

The evidence for the support of this proposition may be divided into two classes—(1) external evidence and (2) internal evidence of the Scriptures. The Scriptures announce the proposition that Christ is divine; the Scriptures claim that God has expressed his power, wisdom, and love to man in this proposition. Of course, before using the Scriptures as evidence in favor of this proposition, it must be proved that the witness of the Scriptures is true, then the proposition necessarily follows. It shall now be our task to show both by external evidence and internal evidence that the Scriptures are genuine and credible.

It may be stated that a rejection of the Bible—and, therefore, a rejection of the Christian religion—is equivalent to a rejection of all religion. The pious worshipers of any other faith may lay aside their own and accept the Christian religion; many have done this; but no man who has thoroughly investigated the evidences of the Christian religion has turned aside and accepted another religion. If proof cannot be found in favor of the divine origin of the Christian religion, it cannot be found in support of Buddhism or Mohammedanism, the other two universal religions; and if not found for the universal religions, it cannot be found for the local religions, which are many. Richard Watson, in his "Theological Institutes," Volume

I., page 105, has well said: "It is universally acknowledged among us that there is but one book in the world which has claims to divine authority, so presumptively substantial as to be worthy of serious examination." It is to be understood that if the Bible is not a book from God, then the world is robbed of all the blessings which religion can bring to any people; there is no alternative religion to which intelligent men can turn; if Christ be not the Son of God, "to whom shall we go?" Christianity claims not only to stand, but to stand alone; it demands not only that we believe and accept it, but that we must deny every other system of faith; it is, like God, its author, jealous, and will not share its honor with another religion. If Christ be not divine and if Christianity be not of divine origin, its essential doctrines must be false; its whole structure without foundation and the greatest fraud that has been perpetrated upon an intelligent people.

The external or historical evidence for the genuineness and integrity of the New Testament Scriptures has been variously expressed and compiled from many sources. The first argument in support of this proposition has been stated by McIlvaine and Everest in the following language: "The books of the New Testament are quoted by an unbroken series of writers reaching back to the days of the apostles, proving their existence when quoted, and attributing them to their reputed authors." There is no need of proof from the present time back to the fourth century. There are many great manuscripts of the New Testament which have come down to us from the fourth century. The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, published in 1915, states that there are about four thousand manuscripts, in whole or in part, of the Greek New Testament which are now known. These manuscripts furnish abundant evidence for determining the reading of practically the entire New Testament, while the evidence for the Gospels and most important Epistles is unprecedented for quantity and for clearness. They are usually divided into two classes-uncial, or large hand, and minuscule, or small hand. The uncials comprise about one hundred and forty copies extending from the fourth century to the tenth century; the minuscules include the remaining manuscripts and fall between the ninth century and the invention of printing.

There are six great manuscripts of the Greek New Testament belonging to the uncial class.

Codex Sinaiticus, found by Tischendorf at Saint Catherine's monastery on Mount Sinai and now in the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg. It belongs to the fourth century, and is the only uncial which contains the whole New Testament.

Codex Alexandrinus, so named because it came from Alexandria, and was presented to Charles I. in 1627. In 1757 it was presented to the Royal Library and is now in the British Museum. It belongs to the fifth century, and contains the entire New Testament except portions of Matthew, John, and First Corinthians.

Codex Vaticanus belongs to the fourth century and is thought to be the oldest and the best of the New Testament. It is now the chief treasure of the Vatican Library, and has been in this Library since 1481. It contains all the New Testament except portions of Hebrew, Philemon, and Revelation.

Codex Ephraemi—in other words, Scriptus—was brought to Italy from the East in the sixteenth century and was later carried to France and is now in the National Library in Paris. It originally contained the whole New Testament, but now approximately about half of every book is lacking, and Second Thessalonians and Second John are entirely gone. It belongs to the fifth century.

Codex Bezae was obtained by Theodore Beza in 1552 from the monastery of St. Irenæus at Lyons. In 1581 he gave it to the University of Cambridge, where it is now to be found. It is a very important manuscript, since it is written in Greek and Latin. It belongs to the fifth century, and contains only the Gospels and Acts with a fragment of Third John.

Codex Washingtoniensis is now in the National Library (Smithsonian) at Washington, D. C. It belongs to the fourth century, and was obtained by C. L. Freer, of Detroit, in 1906, from Egypt. It was edited by Prof. H. A. Sanders for University of Michigan Press in 1911.

In addition to the above evidence, reaching back to the fourth century, may be mentioned the fact that the New Testament has taken such a part in civil and religious affairs and is so interwoven with the world's literature that no intelligent critic has been found bold enough to deny the existence of the New Testament and its wide distribution. Any person with ordinary information can trace the line of testimony from the present time to the fourth century; hence, we pass to the fourth century and will begin producing evidence for it. Innumerable quotations from all of the books of the New Testament, made in this century, can be found. It is claimed that eleven formal and distinct catalogues of the books of the New Testament are now extant. Of these, two catalogues may be mentioned. One was made in A.D. 397 by the council assembled at Carthage. This council consisted of forty-four bishops. The second catalogue was made A.D. 350 by the council of Laodicea. This catalogue does not differ from the present catalogue except in the omission of Revelation. Augustine and Eusebius lived in this century and wrote very extensively. Augustine wrote many books. His Book of Sermons contains seven hundred discourses, from which are taken many quotations from the New Testament. Eusebius is called the "Father of Church History." He was born A.D. 260 and was a great student. His Ecclesiastical History, in ten books, was completed A.D. 325. He quotes from all the books of the New Testament in this century and is not disputed by any scholar, Christian or

The evidence for the third century is very simple, clear, and positive. Its strength is found in the fact that all the enemies of Christianity admit its truthfulness and force. Origen, of Alexandria, was born in Egypt A.D. 186, and died about A.D. 253. He was held in high esteem by both friend and foe of Christianity. From his writings more than three thousand quotations from the New Testament are found. He quotes from twenty-five books of the New Testament. He lived within one hundred years of the death of the apostle John, and was, therefore, so near the time of the publication of the books of the New Testament that he could gather the most accurate knowledge of the origin and authors of the books of the New Testament. There are other witnesses of this century for this century, among whom may be named Victorrinus, Cyprian, Gregory, and Dionysius.

The fact that the books of the New Testament were in existence in the third century and so extensively copied from by many writers is evidence that they were in existence during the second century. Clement of Alexandria was born about A.D. 160 and died about A.D. 220. He quotes freely from many books of the New Testament. This quotation from him is of great weight: "The blessed Paul, in the First Epistle to the Corinthians, says: Brethren, be not children in understanding." To his testimony is added that of Tertullian, Irenæus, and Melito.

The early part of the second century furnishes the testimony of Justin Martyr, who died at Rome, A.D. 167. Three of his numerous works have been preserved—two Apologies and a Dialogue. He quotes one hundred and twenty-five passages from the books of the New Testament.

This regressive method brings us back to the apostolic age, the last half of the first century, and the evidence for this period of time is very conclusive. Between the years

A.D. 70 and A.D. 120 the "apostolic fathers" lived. They are Clement of Rome, Barnabas, Hermas, Ignatius, and Polycarp. The first three are supposed to be named in the New Testament. The writings of Clement furnish thirtyone quotations from seventeen books of the New Testament; those of Barnabas furnish twenty-four quotations from twelve books; those of Hermas furnish twenty-three quotations from fourteen books; those of Ignatius furnish nineteen quotations from nineteen books of the New Testament; Polycarp furnished forty quotations from the New Testament books. This evidence is as strong as can be expected and proves the proposition that "the books of the New Testament are quoted by an unbroken series of writers reaching back to the days of the apostles, proving their existence when quoted, and attributing them to their reputed authors."

A Visit to Birmingham, Ala.

BY F. W. SMITH.

At the invitation of the congregation with which Brother C. M. Pullias labors, the writer assisted in a meeting lasting more than two weeks. Birmingham is a city of two hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants, spread over a vast territory, and is called "The Magic City of the South." Its growth has been nothing short of the phenomenal, and from present indications it is only in its infancy. The small village of Elyton, in Jones' Valley, with mountains of iron ore on one side and mountains of coal on the other, and layers of limestone rock between, slept for ages encircled with billions of wealth, wholly unconscious of the rich provisions of nature right at her doors. But the day of awakening came when the demands of an onrushing civilization sent out keen-eyed inspectors in search of hidden treasures in the bosom of mother earth. Railroads, steamships, and a thousand and one other things must be built which required steel and iron. Hence, when the word went forth that coal and iron in exhaustible quantities surrounded Elyton, Ala., streams of capital began to flow in that direction; huge furnaces, shops, business houses, and residences sprang up as if by magic; and to-day little old Elyton is completely encompassed by a modern city. This little village with its small and antiquated buildings remind one of the swaddling clothes of a mighty giant as the shadows of skyscrapers are cast upon it and the clouds of smoke from miles of furnaces float over it. How wonderful are the provisions of an all-wise providence! No matter what may be the demands of a marching civilization, Nature is prepared to furnish all needed materials. It is estimated that those mountains contain coal and iron to keep vast enterprises humming for at least four hundred years. The weekly pay roll of the different works amounts to two million dollars! What a vast sum put in circulation every week! No wonder Birmingham can have the largest skyscrapers, biggest banks, finest hotels, and most costly hospitals in the South. But sin and wickedness keep pace with all of her wealth. In her mad rush for the dollar and the worldly pleasure which it will afford, she wears the mantle of sin and shame. The only saving grace she possesses consists in the comparatively handful of godly men and women within her borders. Birmingham needs the gospel as do all other cities, and there are at least two men in that city doing their utmost to preach it to her citizens in no uncertain sound-viz., John T. Lewis and C. M. Pullias. Brother Lewis began work there many years ago with about as little promise of success as any man ever had. He broke ground, planted the seed, and patiently awaited the harvest, which came by and by. This faithful man of God has done a wonderful work in Birmingham under the most discouraging circumstances. If he had not been made of the right kind of stuff, he would have abandoned the field and hunted greener pastures. But John was not after dollars, but longed for the souls of men; hence, he stayed by the ship in storm and tempest. To-day there are six or seven hundred disciples in Birmingham, with two good meetinghouses paid for; a mission point in Pratt City, meeting in a brick storehouse belonging to the disciples; and they are contemplating the purchase of a church house owned by the Baptists in another part of the city. Brother Pullias has been a colaborer with Brother Lewis for a few years, and they make a team that can pull any kind of a load, uphill. downhill, or on the level. The truth is, they pull on the level all the time. There is no compromise of the truth upon the part of these men in anything whatever. They stand for the whole counsel of God to sinner and saint. They have as fine a lot of men and women to hold up their hands in the work as can be found anywhere. A more hospitable band of disciples does not exist, and it is the kind of hospitality that flows from the heart as well as from the lips. I was never treated better in my life, and will always cherish in my memory the kindness of those good people. My home was with Brother Lewis and his most estimable wife. A better home could not have been provided for me, and I could not find sufficient words with which to express my appreciation. There were eleven baptisms during the meeting. Three of these made the confession at Woodlawn, where Brother Lewis preaches. One who had been immersed united with the congregation. There is a splendid foundation laid for a great work in Birmingham, and men on the ground to do it. Brother Pullias was called away on account of the death of his aged father, and I am sure he had the sympathy of all who know him. The Gospel Advocate extends sympathy to our beloved brother in the loss of a loving father. But, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

Spiritual Food Needed as Well as Temporal.

BY W. L. REEVES.

I have taken notice all the while of the weekly reports of the continuous contributions to the "War Sufferers' Fund" as given through the Gospel Advocate, and am favorably impressed with such manifestations from all the givers. Such is evidence of interest in the temporal relief and rescue of those who are destitute of daily food. Such liberal contributions prove what can be done if people only become interested enough to do what appeals to them as their duyt. Being servants of Christ, we are commanded to feed the hungry, even our enemies: "If thine enemy hunger, feed him." (Rom, 12; 20.) The Christian life consists largely in giving. Such is true relative to those who have this world's goods when the giving is limited to temporal needs. But a Christian's giving does not end with his having contributed a few dollars to buy food and clothing.

Brethren, we are to give a far greater gift than this, if we do as we should relative to the needs of the Armenians, Syrians, Poles, and many other peoples of earth. These people stand in great need of the gospel of Jesus Christ presented to them in its purity, presented to them unmixed with human creeds, presented to them just as it is recorded in the New Testament Scriptures. What is the use of our giving our thousands of dollars to their temporal needs, and but few, if any, nickels and dimes to their soul's great need? They are starving for lack of spiritual food, which is far more necessary than temporal food. In my giving, I wish to give to the needy that which they need most.

I am sure that as many thousand dollars could be given each year, by those very congregations and individuals who have been mentioned in the Gospel Advocate, for the support of preachers which should be sent to teach these very people the word of God. As much could be raised each year and no one suffer need as a result. Not many would miss what they might give.

Brother A. B. Lipscomb has been very generous and faithful in his efforts to raise the funds for their temporal needs, serving free of charge and paying all postage and fees out of his own purse, if I am correctly informed. Where is there a man who will undertake to raise the funds to send spiritual food along with the temporal food?

It seems to me that what is being given by the brethren just for temporal needs is adding strength to the false religions among them, unless these same brethren or others will make as great sacrifice and send the gospel to them, too. Am I wrong in this? I would like to hear from others on this subject.

Think of the church of Christ giving food and clothing to a nation of people and withholding the true gospel from them; while the Roman Catholics, Mohammedans, and others are laboring hard to keep them in the dark—might I not as well say "in the dark?" For they are in the dark in such religious environments.

I am highly in favor of giving both temporal and spiritual help to the war sufferers. I am one who will be willing to give as much to send them the gospel as I will to feed and clothe them. All should be thus willing to support the gospel anywhere the people need it as much as those "priest-ridden" Poles need it.

The church of Christ and the gospel of Christ is the only hope for the people of the world; so, brethren, why fool away your time and means trying to do your duty through substitutes? I have no time nor money to waste in building up institutions in which I do not believe, "for whatsoever is not of faith is sin." (Rom. 14: 23.) Let us labor as Christ has directed and trust God for results.

The Meeting at Rochester, N. Y.

BY A. B. L.

A card announcing the gospel meetings to be conducted by Brother Elam in Rochester, N. Y., beginning on June 22, states the following: "These meetings will embrace the preaching of the gospel, the singing of gospel songs, prayers, study of the Bible, and exhortations to righteousness and godliness."

The following are some of the subjects announced for his discourses:

- God Is—He is from Everlasting to Everlasting, the Same Yesterday, To-day, and Forever.
- 2. God rules—He Rules the Earth (Overruling All People to His Glory) and Throughout the Universe To-day.
- Man's Responsibility to God—His Supreme Duty is to God.
- 4. The Bible is God's Revealed Will, and There is No Other.
 - 5. Did God Make Man, or Did Man Make God?
 - 6. God Has Spoken to Men-How?
 - 7. The Power of the Word of God.
- 8. The Gospel of God—(1) What is It? [This embraces Jesus of Nazareth as the Christ, the Son of the living God—Christ, and him crucified.] (2) What is Obedience to It?
- (3) What Will Be the End of the Disobedient?
 - 9. What Must One Believe in Order to Be Saved?
 - 10. What Must One Do in Order to Be Saved?
- 11. True Worship—(1) The Proper Object of Worship; (2) The Proper Way; (3) The Proper Spirit.
 - 12. "As It is Written."
 - 13. The Holy Spirit and His Work,
- 14. The Church of the New Testament—(1) Its Foundation, Builder, and Head; (2) Its Mission; (3) Its Destiny.
- 15. The World vs. the Church—(1) Christ's Kingdom is Not of This World; (2) The Devil is the Prince of This World; (3) Christ is the Prince of Peace; (4) The World Crucified Jesus and To-day Hates His Subjects; (5) Friendship of the World is Enmity with God; (6) The World Has Not Received, and Cannot Receive, the Holy Spirit; (7)

The Spirit of God, or Holy Spirit, is in the Kingdom of Christ.

- 16. What is "Spiritual Service" and Spirituality?—(1) Is Every Act of Service which God Commands Spiritual Service? (2) If not, Which is Not Spiritual?
- 17. All "Religious Services" are Not True Worship of God—There Are Many Religions, as There Are Gods Many and Lords Many.

More than one sermon will be necessary to fully discuss most of these subjects.

This important mission work in Rochester was started by a devoted Christian woman whose energy and faith are far above the average. The prospect seems good for the establishment of a loyal congregation of disciples in that great commercial center of the East. On account of the distance from Nashville and necessity of renting a large central auditorium, the expenses for this mission meeting are more than ordinary. Our readers would do well to have some fellowship in it. Send your contribution to Mrs. Eunice C. Fisher, in care of Mechanics Institute, and it will be promptly acknowledged.

"The Spirit of Intolerance."

Brother Showalter: I wish to express my hearty approval of many things you say in your article under the above heading of June 19, inst. "Intolerance" is the one great cause of most troubles in the home, the school, the government, and especially the church. It is an undesirable spirit anywhere.

But you make serious charges against some brethren in the following language: "Such would-be lords in the church would boldly dictate in matters of opinion as well as in the realm of faith. Transcending all bounds of their jurisdiction and prerogative, they proceed to condemn and denounce men whose lives are pure and whose characters are above reproach; whose faith and doctrine they cannot gainsay, and who are in good standing in their home congregation and in good report from those who are without."

Now, my brother, in justice to the brotherhood, let us have the names of those "would-be lords in the church" who "condemn" and "ostracize" all preachers and writers who do not agree with them.

Also, give us the names of brethren "whose lives are pure," sound in "faith and doctrine," whom these "would-be lords" condemn. Let us make the fight in the open against the man or men of this intolerant spirit, and defend the brother or brethren of clean lives and sound faith and teaching. Please give us names through your paper. Of course, you would not make such grave charges without having the facts.

A. G. Freed, Henderson, Tenn.

[Brother Freed has furnished us a copy of the above, with a request that we publish it in the Gospel Advocate. This we are glad to do.—Editor.]

God is not better defined to us by our understanding than by our wills and affections. He is not only the Eternal Reason, that Almighty Mind and Wisdom which our understandings converse with, but he is also that Unstained Beauty and Supreme Good which our wills are perpetually catching after; and wheresoever we find true beauty, love, and goodness, we may say, here or there is God. And as we cannot understand anything of an intelligible nature, but by some primitive idea we have of God. whereby we are able to guess at the elevation of its being and the pitch of its perfection; so neither do our wills embrace anything without some latent sense of him, whereby they can taste and discern how near anything comes to that Self-sufficient Good they seek after; and indeed without such an internal sensating faculty as this we should never know when our souls are in conjunction with the deity, or be able to relish the ineffable sweetness of true happiness.-John Smith.

Mutual Responsibility Between the Missionaries and the Churches Supporting Them.

BY M. C. K.

In the brilliant light of plain New Testament facts and principles as presented in previous articles embodying, as they do embody, explicit teaching on the subject in hand, certain vital and important conclusions necessarily follow; and we desire, at this stage of the investigation, to emphasize these conclusions. We are firmly settled in the conviction that the New Testament is practically as plain in its facts and principles which are to govern churches in their work as it is on the act or the design of the act for Christian baptism, and we believe that if the two subjects are studied with the same diligence and impartiality the same conclusion regarding each will be reached by the average reader. It is difficult, in some cases, for men trained from infancy to believe that sprinkling and pouring are baptism not to see something here and there in the New Testament which, to them, seems to favor what they have been taught to believe, and we should be slow to condemn them when, their attention being directed to matters which are perfectly plain to us, they fail to agree with us; and we feel precisely the same way toward men who have been trained up to believe and honestly practice certain things which we have become convinced are wrong. Let us bear and forbear, continuing to turn on the light, and the truth will ultimately triumph.

For the sake of clearness, as well as order, we shall now number some of the conclusions which we think have been established, and to which we wish to call special attention.

1. From the passages placed before our readers from the Corinthian Epistles, it clearly follows that a church should know that a missionary is capable and worthy before it can consistently contribute to his support. We are responsible for what we teach either directly or through others; and hence we are responsible for the support and spread of error by upholding men in the mission field or anywhere else, for that matter, who are either false teachers or otherwise unworthy of support. Not only is this necessarily implied in the Corinthian Epistles, but it is clearly taught in Paul's address to the Ephesian elders (Acts 20: 28-31) and elsewhere in the New Testament. Elders or overseers of the churches are admonished to "watch" in order to prevent being imposed on by false teachers or by men of improper character.

- 2. It follows that churches, and particularly their overseers, should be wide awake on the whole missionary problem-the demands of the field of operation, the character and worthiness of the missionaries who go to that field, and the matter of looking after their support and any other demand of the work.
- 3. As a matter of order and decency, it follows that a church or churches, as the case may be, should ascertain what will be the living expenses of the missionary or missionaries and, as far as possible, any other expenses which the mission field may necessarily involve, that the needed amount demanded by the work may be known by the supporting church or churches, that each church, with an intelligible idea of the obligation it has assumed, may proceed to supply it at the proper time and in a businesslike way.
- 4. From the order and decency required by the passages in question, it further follows that periodical reports to the church or churches should be made by the missionaries whom the churches are supporting, that both parties to the arrangement may be duly informed at all times concerning the needs and progress of the work.
- 5. Finally, it follows, with the clearness of a demonstration, that, in all such cases, there is mutual obligation with consequent mutual responsibility between the church or churches and the missionaries whom they support. The churches are to be kept constantly informed as to the condition and progress of the work, thus being able at all times to see whether they are wisely or unwisely expending their means; while the missionaries, with such order and decency in the conduct of the work at both ends of the line, are kept without disturbing care as to their means of support, knowing that this matter is in worthy and responsible hands and will receive the required attention.

With such order and system in the conduct of missionary work as it relates to the duty of both churches and missionaries, there is no good reason why there should not be scores and hundreds and even thousands of missionaries at work in different parts of the world at all times; nor would there be any good reason for confusion or failure in the work. Neither would the question of distance, no matter how far away from the supporting churches the missionaries might be sent, have anything to do with the case, so far as orderly procedure is concerned. Of course, the further away the missionaries might be sent, the longer it would take to reach them with contributions to the work; but, by proper calculation of the time required for transportation, this matter would soon regulate itself so that the work could proceed practically with the same method and smoothness that might characterize it if it were done in the immediate home field of the churches.

What is needed, and most seriously needed, is that the churches and missionaries, or those who would be missionaries, shall wake up to the demands of the situation and go to work as indicated, in a systematic and businesslike way. Let them proceed to enter into it with an exercise of common sense in the adoption of business methods of procedure precisely as they would do, or at least as most churches and preachers do, in arranging for work in the immediate home field of the churches, and all will be well. No mortal man can give a good reason why there may not be the same method and orderly procedure in the conduct of religious work by the churches in fields far away as there is when it is conducted right at their doors. Let them put New Testament facts, examples, and principles into practice with decency and good order, and the work will proceed with harmony and without friction or confusion, and the cause of God will prosper.

We have still more to say on the matter of responsibility in missionary work.

Confession.

BY J. C. M'Q,

I call attention to confession at this point, not that there is a command requiring any special form of confession as a condition of salvation. We may search Acts of Apostles, and we will never find in any of the accounts of conversions where a person was required to make a formal confession as a condition of salvation.

In all statutory law all conditions are expressed and not implied. In the great commission, which may be regarded as the statutory law of Christ, in order to enjoy remission of sins, we find no mention of a formal confession, and, in fact, there is no place for an implication of one. Taking the commission as recorded by Matthew, Mark, and Luke, we find that Christ authorized the apostles to promise salvation, or remission of sins, on the conditions of faith, repentance, and baptism. According to this commission, the person who believes in the Lord Jesus Christ with all his heart, repents of his sins, and is baptized into the solemn names of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, has the promise of the remission of his past sins. No one who understands the word of God will contend that a person who believes and is baptized is saved in heaven. This simply brings him into the kingdom of God, and then it is necessary for him to fight the good fight of faith in order to be crowned in glory.

However, every faithful minister of the gospel must have some expression of faith before baptizing a person into the solemn names of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Christ said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." When a person comes demanding baptism, the preacher, in order to be safe, must be assured by that person that he has faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, this being the faith that qualifies and fits one for baptism. The man who believes with all his heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, has scriptural faith and is ready to be baptized in obedience to the command of Christ. Hence, in some way, I always learn before baptizing a person that he has this faith. It is my duty to know this, and a failure to know this would be displeasing to Christ. We learn that after Christ had been preached to the eunuch and when they had come unto a certain water, he said: "Behold, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" This was the only confession that the inspired teacher required. Philip did not demand that the eunuch make some formal confession; but as this declaration was an expression of his faith, "he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him." This is the only conversion that is pointed to as authority for a formal confession; but when we take the American Revised Version, we find there is no authority here for it. Furthermore, if we rely upon the King James Version, we will find that verse 37 does not make formal confession a condition of salvation. It says: "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God," Even the King James Version gives authority only for inquiring to know whether a man has faith or not. It furnishes authority for nothing else. Turning again to the commission under which the apostles were acting, taking the conversion of the Pentecostians and every other conversion recorded in Acts of Apostles, I repeat that there is not any authority whatever for holding that a formal confession is a condition of salvation. I am not making this statement for the sake of controversy or argument, but because it is in harmony with the truth, and all who are satisfied with the truth must know this to be true.

Simply because, however, a formal confession is not a prerequisite of scriptural baptism, we should not conclude that it is not important that we confess our sins. Confession is an acknowledgment of sin or that we are sinners.

Our confession should always be as extensive or as broad as the sin itself. Men are required to confess their sins throughout their lives. The man who has been guilty of a grievous sin, if he is really sorry for his sin and has learned to loathe and hate it, is ready and anxious to do all in his power to destroy the effects of that sin. He is not willing to cover it up and to make a partial confession when he knows that thereby the truth will be hindered and not advanced. Confession of sin and of wrongdoing is a part of, and inseparable from, all acceptable obedience. "Then went out unto him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about the Jordan; and they were baptized of him in the river Jordan, confessing their sins." (Matt. 3: 5, 6.) When one really hates sin as he must in order to be saved, he does not hesitate to confess his sin. There is no chance for the man who is ready to cover up and deny his sin. Christ says: "Every one therefore who shall confess me before men, him will I also confess before my Father who is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 10: 32, 33.) The most effective way to deny Christ before men is to entertain, harbor, and love sin. The man who does not hate and loathe sin with all the intensity of his being denies Christ in his daily life. Hence, we are taught by the Holy Spirit, as recorded by the beloved disciple in 1 John 1: 8, 9: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness," There are thousands who claim to believe on the Christ and to accept him as their Savior, and yet refuse to confess him. Such an inactive faith, which refuses to come out in the confession and in the life, never yet saved or justified a soul. "Nevertheless even of the rulers many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess it, lest they should be put out of the synagogue: for they loved the glory that is of men more than the glory that is of God." (John 12: 42, 43.)

I would not fail to emphasize the fact that this confession is not made in the heart, but is made with the mouth. Many people who are guilty of public sins act as though they could make confession of these public sins by simply resolving to turn away from them without publicly confessing them with their mouths, but the Bible does not so teach. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." (Rom. 10: 10.) Hating our sins, we are ready to confess them. Christ set us the example of confession when he witnessed a good confession before Pontius Pilate. (1 Tim. 6: 13.) Let no one be deceived by sin. Sin does its work insidiously; it is deceptive and misleading. Often we deceive ourselves, and we may even deceive the very elect, but we cannot deceive Jehovah. God looks down into our hearts and sees us just as we are. He knows our every purpose, desire, and ambition. In the great judgment day our secret thoughts will be open unto him. How earnest we should be to stand justified before him! But if we fail to confess in this life, the day is coming when every one shall confess. "For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, to me every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess to God." (Rom. 14: 11.) As the bold and fearless Peter promptly confessed, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," so we should confess, by a life of purity, sacrifice, and godliness, our faith in the immaculate Son of God, who died to purify us and redeem us from iniquity.

How Are You Living, My Brother?

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Paul says: "Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." (1 Cor. 9: 13, 14.)

Just as certainly as the Lord hath ordained that they which preach the gospel shall live of the gospel, just so certainly hath he ordained that those who hear the gospel shall support those who preach it; for, otherwise, it could not be possible for those who preach the gospel to live of the gospel—the very thing Paul declares the Lord hath ordained.

I have been trying to preach the gospel approximately fifty-five years, preaching most of the time twice every day and three times each Sunday, and it has been said of me that I have "preached more sermons and baptized more people than any other living man;" but, whether that is a manifest exaggeration or a conservative statement of facts, I have neither right, reason, nor inclination to boast, murmur, or complain; "for though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of," and though I be neglected, forsaken, and forgotten, greater and better men have endured more in the service of Him from whom all blessings flow, in the name of Him who died that we might live.

I am not afraid, however, of being neglected, forsaken, or forgotten. I have never demanded support, "neither have I written these things that it should be so done unto me." "I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel." If I have ever sought a salary or hunted a job, I have forgotten all about it; but my race is nearly run, my work is nearly done, and "the time of my departure is at hand;" hence, personally, it matters little to me what others may think or say or do, except that I am interested in their welfare, both temporal and eternal; hence, I should like to know whether those whose duty it is to support those who preach the gospel have been giving three or four or five times as much to that end since prices began to soar as they gave before. If not, why not? And how do they expect preachers to live? If not, they have unquestionably neglected their duty, if they did no more than their duty before. All this, provided they are able to do more, of course.

I infer, from what is written on the subject in the divine record, that the offerings brought to the altar to which Paul refers were precisely the same offerings when prices were high as when prices were low—that is, that the price of beef had nothing to do with the size, quality, or condition of the animals offered, but the commercial value of the offerings was proportionately greater, of course, when the price of beef was higher. How about your offerings, my brother? Do you give five times as much to support the gospel when your Shorthorns or White-faces or Berkshires or Poland Chinas are twenty cents on foot as you gave when they were only three or four cents? For your sake I ask this question, and suggest that you "think on these things."

Not many months ago—and I presume the situation is still the same—I knew something of a church of Christ that paid its preacher for half his time only a little more than enough to pay the rent he had to pay for the rooms in which he lived, another church paying him about one-third as much for the other half of his time, he devoting all his time to "the work of the ministry;" while that very same church—the one that about paid the preacher's rent—paid each of two vigorous young men who were drawing large salaries for secular work to which they devoted almost their entire time, to preach for it one Sunday monthly. That may not be giving the children's bread to the dogs; but I'd be afraid the devil would get me, if I were that church or either of those two men-not preachers, for preaching was not and is not their vocation.

Brother B. B. Sanders once said: "We have more Bible and less sense than any other people on earth." I am not willing to acknowledge that we have less sense than other mortals, but we certainly do not always make the best possible use of our sense—or cents, either.

My brother, if all of us did as you do, while the cost of living is so excessively high, could those who preach the gospel live of the gospel? You say, No. Then, who is responsible for their not living of the gospel? Remember, the Book of books teaches us that, long ago, the Lord Almighty ordained that those who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel. Let us neither ignore nor fight against God.

So far as I know, all prices are high, except the price of preaching. I am neither proud nor ashamed of having plowed for four dollars a month, when we plowed from the rising to the setting of the sun, even when the days were longest, devoting one hour to rest and dinner at noon. Now, here in Kings County, California, a boy who plows from seven A.M. till five P.M., devoting the noon hour to rest and dinner, demands four dollars a day for his work—and he gets it, too.

My experience is, of course, not peculiar; hence, the point I make is proper. Preachers are not supposed to be financiers; but they must live—at least as long as they preach—and Divinity hath ordained that they shall live of the gospel. How are they going to do it?

Probably it is not improper for me to repeat that I am not appealing for proper giving "that it should be so done unto me." "Friends that have loved me are slipping away," and I am far from the homes of thousands who know me and have helped me; but I am not suffering, and, if I were, I'd never mention it. I may starve, but I'll never beg.

Dr. Bliss, one of the agents of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, who is on the field, writes as follows: "One of the contributing causes of the unhealthy condition here is the lack of normal food, another is the effect of prolonged personal suffering and gazing on scenes of horror, and another is the despair into which the loss of their people and the break-up of all life's ordinary machinery have plunged these men and women. I cannot emphasize enough the value of the hope instilled into all hearts by the news of the operations of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East and the American Red Cross. The psychological effect of the news even before actual relief came was remarkable."

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Brother Kurfees, of Louisville, Ky., paid this office a visit this week.

- A. B. Lipscomb reports a good start in the meeting at Foster Street Church, this city.
- M. C. Cayce conducted a good meeting at Charleston, Miss. One was baptized and much good was accomplished otherwise
- R. A. Hovius, of Vicksburg, Miss., will begin a meeting for the church on Twenty-second Avenue, North, this city, on Sunday, June 22. Take Buena Vista cars to Twentysecond Avenue.

Married, at the Tulane, Hotel, this city, on Thursday, June 12, Mr. Glenn C. Hodges, of Cowan, Tenn., and Miss Annie May Carter, of Cornersville, Tenn., A. B. Lipscomb officiating. The Gospel Advocate extends congratulations.

A good seamstress is needed at the Tennessee Orphans' Home, at Columbia, Tenn. Applicant must be a Christian woman of irreproachable character. Address Mrs. Granville Lipscomb, Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn.

From Ben West, Ennis, Texas, June 10: "We had two fine services and one addition yesterday, with the largest attendance and offering in the Sunday school in the history of the church. The membership is active and doing good work."

From R. A. Craig, Vanburen, Ky., June 10: "I have just closed a good meeting at Fairmount. Nine were baptized and two took membership with the church. Two others came to unite with us when I went back for my regular appointment, one from the Baptists. This church is in fine condition. Brother Malphurs will begin work here in September. I am now in a good meeting at Vanburen."

A. G. Freed closed the meeting at Russell Street Church, in Nashville, on Sunday evening. It was a very fruitful meeting, resulting in several baptisms and much good otherwise. On the last day a sister came in from the Baptists, while her husband made the good confession together with a little girl. All were pleased with the very forceful and inspiring messages from Brother Freed. His visit to Nashville will be pleasantly remembered, and we believe it will bear much fruit in the years to come.

W. S. Greer, Pikeville, Tenn., writes: "I would like to buy a good farm somewhere in Middle Tennessee. I want from one hundred and fifty to two hundred acres. I would like to get within easy car reach of a good congregation of Christians. It is my purpose to put my older children in the David Lipscomb College and the younger ones in the nearest school that I can get them to. If any reader knows of such a farm for sale, please write me or have owner write, giving description of farm, roads, improvements, and location."

From J. C. Estes, 105 Highland Avenue, Beaumont, Texas, June 12: "We had a good service here last Lord's day. With a few exceptions, this little congregation is getting along fine now. Soon I shall have to go away to other fields of labor of love in the Master's service. All my time till September, 1920, and very likely till March, 1921, except enough time in August this year to hold a meeting, is promised. My last meeting just before this time will be at Rector, in Northeast Arkansas. Any one wanting my services in a meeting in August, beginning about the second or third Sunday, will please write me at once, that I may arrange this time to suit all concerned."

From Willis G. Jernigan, Grand Saline, Texas, June 11: "I preached to a large crowd on Saturday night and Sunday morning at East Center. Brother Record filled the pulpit for me at this place on Sunday morning and was at Riverside on Sunday night. I am to begin a meeting at Star next Lord's day. From there I will go to Dale, forty miles south of Austin, to moderate for Brother Record in a debate with Elder G. W. Greer, a Christadelphian. The general church proposition, the nature of man, and the punishment of the wicked will be discussed. We are looking forward to a great victory for the truth, as Brother Record has held a number of debates with Baptists, Methodists, Russellites, Adventists, and Universalists, in which the truth as presented by Brother Record always prevailed."

The American Bible Society has just issued its annual report, which shows that the past year, in spite of war conditions, was a record-breaking year from a point of view of the number of Scriptures published. More than six million volumes were turned out by this society, which is the largest Bible publishing agency in America. These have been distributed not only in this country, but in many foreign lands. More than half of the Testaments printed in recent years have gone to the men of the armies and navies of the world. This society alone has published and distributed more than seven million copies to the soldiers and sailors of the allies. The society has just celebrated its one hundred and third anniversary, and during the century has published more than one hundred and thirty-four million volumes of the Scriptures in one hundred and fifty languages. These have been distributed to all parts of the world. The society's budget, including costs of transportation, revision, production, and distribution, is approximately one million dollars annually. The officers of the society are: Churchill H. Cutting, president; William Foulke, treasurer; William I. Haven and Frank H. Mann, general secretaries. The offices are at the Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

From A. C. Traylor, Union, S. C., June 13: "The tent meeting continues, with good crowds and increased interest. One has come out from the Adventists and one from the Baptists to stand on the Rock of Ages, to be and do only what the Bible says, nothing less and nothing more. Two precious souls came forward to make the good confession and be buried with the Lord in baptism. There is no creek or river closer than five miles, but there is a small spring branch which runs across a vacant lot just below Brother Burton's home, and a good, big-hearted man owns this lot, and he gladly gave us permission to dig a place to baptize. With our own hands we dug a pool in which to baptize, of which we are very proud, and we will this evening, the Lord willing, baptize the first soul into Christ in the pool that we had the pleasure of making ourselves. Brethren, rejoice with us, for we are, indeed, a happy little band, putting forth every effort to plant the seed of the kingdom in every heart that it is possible for us to reach. "We never heard anything like it before"-so say the people here. Is it not a shame, brethren, that the brotherhood of Christ, those who have the truth, will not back it up with their prayers, their pocketbooks, and their lives, if need be, so that it might be preached to people right here in our own country, to souls who are hungering and thirsting for the pure, simple gospel of Christ? There is enough gospel wasted every year in Tennessee and other places on church members who sit and sleep during the entire meeting to save thousands of souls in such places as this, where the people sit with eyes and ears wide open, hungering and thirsting for the word of God. When are we going to wake up to a realization of the fact that Jesus said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature?" If we do not watch out, we will wake up at the judgment bar of God and find that we are a tree without fruit and only having leaves. If you cannot go yourself and preach the gospel, then it is your solemn duty to send some one."

One Example Out of Many.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

About one year ago I was asked to subscribe for a proposed history of our village, Zoshigaya. On March 17 a man brought me the book. As I looked through it, I saw a number of pictures of public buildings, shrines, and a write-up of the same, but no mention whatever of our Zoshigaya plant. I pointed this out to the man and asked why, but he could give no reason. I further reminded him of the fact that I had been here twelve years as a teacher of the Christian religion, the best religion in the world, and that no true write-up of Zoshigaya could thus ignore us. He promised to make correction in the next issue. Then he said he would like to hear about Christianity himself and asked if I could spare him about twenty minutes.

I invited him in and began by saying that there is one God for the human race, just as there is one sun for all countries, and that we were to him like children to a father. We have become disobedient children, but God wants us again to become obedient that we may live and be happy. He loved us so that he sent Jesus to call us back to himself. In this way I talked along for ten or fifteen minutes. When I paused, he gave assent. He then said that his trouble was saki, and that he just could not quit.

I told him that while the drink habit was, indeed, difficult to quit, yet it was not an impossible thing to do. "If you knew that cup of saki you are going to drink the next time would certainly and suddenly kill you, would you drink it?" He said he would not. "Well," said I, "it may not suddenly kill you, but it certainly will destroy you, both soul and body. Next time you are tempted to drink, think of this, and it will help you to be strong against it."

Encouraging him further by my own experiences, I continued: "When I grew up, saki (whisky) drinking was common in America, and nearly every home drank more or less, just as they do now in Japan. My father sometimes drank and gave it to us children. But when I got to be twenty-one and began to think as a man, I made a vow in my own heart before God that I would not touch it any more, and I have kept that vow to this day. Now saki is no temptation to me at all, for each victory over temptation makes one stronger for the next."

"Have you any children?" I continued. "No," he replied. "Wife?" "No." "Father?" "Yes." "Mether?" "Yes." "Well, I have a wife and three children in America. For seven years I have lived in Japan alone, and, being a man, I have often been tempted by women. I could have practiced secret sins in my own home. You may visit my home night or day and go anywhere you please in it, but you will never find such women about; and, if you were to search in the closets, you would not find any saki. I have often traveled in the country, and, as you know, in the hotels the waltresses are girls, and they all carry on bad for the asking. Not one was ever invited to my room. One reason for this is that I realize that God, as a loving Father, is always present, and thus to sin would be sin against him. Another thing that helps me to be pure is my family. My children have perfect trust in their father. And though we have been separated with thousands of miles between us for seven years, my wife also has the utmost confidence in me as a husband, pure and true. When temptation comes, I think of her and of my children, and ask myself: Can I, for only a moment's gratification of the flesh, afford to betray that confidence and have to meet them with deception or a shameful confession? Can I afford, just for one brief moment, to carry that perpetual remorse of conscience that would haunt me in my dreams by night and shadow me as a specter by day? You think of your father and mother when you are tempted to drink. Does it not trouble them?" "My father is greatly troubled about me," he said. "Then, remember that you have a duty to him, and it will help you overcome."

The afternoon sun was now streaming in at the windows, for it was nearly two o'clock. The twenty minutes he asked for had been lengthened into about two hours. He thanked me and went away, carrying a copy of Luke and a tract, "The Fukuin."

Mission Work in Hawaii.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

When Paul and his company reached Philippi, they "were in the city tarrying certain days," and on the Sabbath they went out by the river where there was a little prayer meeting of women. This was the beginning of the gospel in that place. I have been similarly situated here in Honolulu. However, I have spoken a number of times at different places since reaching here. We have met three times in private homes for the Lord's Supper, at which I have read and explained the Scriptures. Four times we have met in the evening in Brother and Sister Bowman's home for Bible study. One Sunday morning I spoke at the Christian Church on "Who Is My Brother?" (Matt. 12: 48, 49.) I attended a prayer meeting at the same place and by request spoke on "Temptation." On Wednesday night, May 21, I am asked to lead the prayer meeting. One Sunday evening I spoke in one of the Japanese churches to an audience of more than a hundred. Three times I have attended a Monday-night Bible class gathered out from various sources as a sort of protest against the destructive criticism that is being taught from the pulpit here. This class consists of over fifty people. I spoke once at one of these meetings. I have been to the "Gospel Mission," near the depot, four times. Two of these meetings were prayer meetings, and I was asked to lead. Two were evangelistic, and both times I made speeches of about thirty minutes along the line of what a sinner must do to be saved. These people call themselves "Brethren," and they endeavor to get away from all denominations. They observe the Lord's Supper every Sunday, but they fail to tell fully what people should do to be saved. But they have raised no objections to my teaching, though I have not shunned to declare the whole counsel of God.

A married missionary is greatly needed to come and locate here. It is a great field for work; and if there is a church anywhere in any of the eight islands just such as we read about in the New Testament, I have not yet located it.

A letter received on May 18 says that my son has returned from France. This makes me all the more anxious to get on to the homeland. But the boats are all so overcrowded that I cannot tell whether it will be the next boat (May 27) or later. I have sent my family support for June. As the date of my leaving here is so uncertain, I request all friends to write me in care of Mrs. J. M. McCaleb, 2625 Montgomery Street, Louisville, Ky., till further notice.

Each high achievement is a sign and token of the whole nature's possibility. What a piece of the man was for that shining moment, it is the duty of the whole man to be always.—Phillips Brooks.

Training Little Children

By MRS. MARIEK, CHAFFEE

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Kindergarten Methods as Valuable for Home as for School.

About a year and a half ago a number of mothers in a small town petitioned their school board for a public kindergarten. They knew that there were at least twenty-five children in the community who would attend, and that there was a vacant room in one schoolhouse which could be used for the purpose. But the school board contended that there were too many other expenses for the coming year and that the town could not afford to establish a kindergarten.

The mothers, however, persisted in their idea that the need for a kindergarten was very great, and after many months of patient work they succeeded in persuading the school committee to give the use of the vacant room. A class of eight children has now been started, and it is in charge of a young pupil kindergartner who is taking this work as her senior practice teaching, charging only a small sum for each child. She is full of enthusiasm, and the work has been progressing steadily under her inspiring direction.

The children who attend the kindergarten are nearly all from good families. It impressed me strongly, as I canvassed the town in search of pupils, that the very parents who could and did give their children every possible advantage were the ones who were quick to realize the opportunities in kindergarten training. Other parents, whose children were "running wild" physically and mentally, so to speak, would say, "We don't think our child needs to go to a kindergarten;" or, "We cannot afford to pay so much for just having Mary amused."

All mothers should know that the kindergarten is not a place where a child is "just amused," nor is it a school-room where facts are drilled into a child's head for hours at a time. A well-managed kindergarten is like a well-managed home, a place where the children may develop naturally and normally. In the kindergarten they do this to the very best advantage under the careful guidance of a teacher trained for her work and in the companionship of other children.

After a kindergarten has been started, mothers should visit it frequently and attend the mothers' meetings which the kindergarten conducts in order to explain to them the purpose of the kindergarten and how they may help its work and influence. In this way they will come to understand the value of the games and other activities of the kindergarten, and will gain many helpful ideas and suggestions, which may be used equally as well in the home as in the kindergarten. And right here should be pointed out the opportunity the kindergarten mother or the mother who knows something of kindergarten methods has in her community. She can start the right spirit among the mothers and children all about her, if she so desires. She can form mothers' clubs and have a kindergarten training teacher or supervisor give talks. The spirit of kindergarten games can be carried into the whole community, gathering in the fathers and mothers, and thus greatly helping the child-welfare movement.

I know a mother who never had any kindergarten training, but became interested in it when her babies were small. She read all the books she could find on the subject and visited many kindergartens in order to understand more of the value of play as Froebel explains it. Then the mother began to apply Froebel's methods systematically in the home education of her children. One of her daughters, when she grew up, became a student of mathematics, and the mother always says that the first lesson in mathematics began when her daughter was a little girl and wore curls. As the mother brushed the curls each morning, the child would count, and add and subtract them, and thus an instructive as well as a merry game was made out of what is usually a tedious performance.

This mother has brought up four children; but even though the boys and girls are all grown, this family has never lost its play spirit. How far we stray from the path of youthfulness and joy in starving the play side of our make-up! A man is old only when he has lost the love of play. It is not merely, "Come, let us live with our children," but "Come, let us play with our children."

"Consider the Lilies."

If the Christian life is to be winsome and attractive, it must be perfectly natural; it must remind people of "the lilies of the field."

If the Christian life is to be akin to the life of the lilies, then it must be life that is lived in certain prescribed conditions. The lilies abide, and they absorb. We do not find them in the evening in one corner of the field, and next morning in the center. They are not vagrants over an estate; they are dwellers in a locality; they live the settled life. That is surely one secret which I must take over into the life of the soul. For I know how apt I am to be a vagrant. I am rooted here for a day, and there for a day, and next day finds me yonder. I try this expedient and that expedient, and my rootage is constantly changed. I worship in this church and in that church, and I have no home. I go to revival after revival, and every new thing begets a new movement. The consequence is the Christian life is full of unrest and turmoil, and comes to no large and ripe attainment.

The first thing I must do is to check these vagrant habits and learn how to abide. "He that abideth in me, the same bringeth forth much fruit." I am to put myself in Christ, and remain there. I must make a choice, a definite and deliberate choice, and adhere to it. I must repeat that choice in every new enterprise; in every new initiative I must see to it that my roots are in the Lord.—J. H. Jowett, in the Christian Herald.

H. E. Eller, Sparta, Tenn., Route 2, desires an answer in these columns to the following questions:

How many were baptized in the Spirit on the day of Pentecost? Was it the twelve apostles or the one hundred and twenty disciples? (Acts 2.)

Well-informed people understand that the division of the Bible into chapters and verses was made by man. The baptism of the Holy Spirit was promised to the twelve apostles, and not to the one hundred and twenty disciples. The structure of the language shows that the twelve apostles were baptized in the Holy Spirit. The word "apostles" in the twenty-sixth verse of the first chapter of Acts is the antecedent of "they" in the first verse of the second chapter of Acts. The apostles were all together in one place, and they, the "apostles," were all filled with the Holy Spirit; or, in other words, the promise to them was fulfilled and they were baptized in the Holy Spirit.

A. J. Biggers, Hampton, Ark., inquires concerning the laws given for the government of the people in the different ages:

Will you kindly explain Rom. 5: 13? Does this refer to the law of Moses? If not, to what law does it refer? What have been the laws governing the peoples of the different ages? Has there ever been a time when there was no law?

Rom, 5: 13 reads: "For until the law sin was in the world; but sin is not imputed when there is no law." This evidently refers to the law of Moses. While sin existed before the law of Moses was given, there was no law that imputed sin prior to the law of Moses. Yet sin must have been in the world from the time of Adam, because death, which is due to sin, reigned from Adam to the law of Moses. Prior to the law of Moses the patriarch, or the head of the family, was the ruler. The law of Moses was in force until Christ took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross. Since the abrogation of the law of Moses we have been under the law of Christ. There has never been any age of the world in which God did not require obedience. This is true of the patriarchal age, of the Jewish age, and also of the Christian age. While different acts constitute obedience in different ages of the world, yet there has not been any age in which God did not require obedience to his law. Noah was required to obey God in building the ark. Abraham was required to obey God in offering up his son Isaac on the altar. The Jews were required to obey God in offering the bloody sacrifices. So we are required to-day to present our bodies living sacrifices, holy, acceptable unto God.

W. A. Dowell, Alexandria, Tenn., sends in the following relative to the works of our Savior and the building of the ark by Noah:

(1) Please explain John 14: 12. How could any one do "greater works" than the Savior? (2) Does the Bible state how long Noah was in building the ark? If so, please give chapter and verse.

(1) John 14: 12 reads: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father." Christ preached during his personal ministry only in Judea and made about five hundred converts. At the end of the first gospel sermon, under the new dispensation, about three thousand souls were converted by the preaching of the apostles. Christ preached only in the language of his country. The apostles preached through the most of the then known world and in all the languages of all countries. The forgiveness of sins was a greater work than the healing of the body. It appears evident that the "greater works" referred to the greater number of conversions made under the apostles' ministry. (2) The Bible nowhere states how long Noah was in building the ark. The Bible gives us sufficient evidence to warrant us in the conclusion that Noah was considerably less than one hundred years in building the ark. Gen. 11: 10 declares: "Shem was a hundred years old, and begat Arpachshad two years after the flood." Shem was old enough to have a wife and to enter the ark when the flood of waters came upon the earth. He was one hundred years old two years after the flood. So we see that the length of time in which the ark was built was considerably less than one hundred years, and there is no authority for the opinion that Noah was one hundred and twenty years in building the ark.

J. B. W., Poteau, Okla., in reference to the miraculous manifestations on the day of Pentecost, writes:

Recently I heard a preacher, in making an argument on the baptism of the Holy Spirit, say that, on the day of Pentecost, Peter spoke in his mother tongue. Prior to this, in laying the premises for his argument, he stated that those who were baptized with the Holy Spirit were enabled thereby to perform miracles, or do something they were unable to do before, and that this should be the test as to whether the individual had been baptized with, or in, the Holy Spirit. If this rule is true, who, on the day of Pentecost, gave evidence of having received the baptism of the Holy Spirit—Peter, who spoke in his mother tongue, or the multitude, which heard in their own tongue wherein they were born?

Evidently the apostles were baptized in the Holy Spirit. From the twenty-sixth verse of the first chapter of Acts we learn that Matthias "was numbered with the eleven apostles." "Apostles" is the antecedent of "they" in the first verse of the second chapter of Acts. If I get the meaning of the querist, he wishes to know whether the tongues of the apostles or the ears of the people were doctored. I am sure the tongues of the apostles were doctored, and not the ears of the multitude. The apostles were not permitted to preach Jesus until they were baptized in the Holy Spirit. "And, being assembled together with them, he charged them not to depart from Jerusalem, but to wait for the promise of the Father, which, said he, ye heard from me: for John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized in the Holy Spirit not many days hence." (Acts 1: 4, 5.) "And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." (Acts 2: 4.) The Holy Spirit spoke through them. "For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of the Father that speaketh in you." (Matt. 10: 20.) "For no prophecy ever came by the will of man: but men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit." (2 Pet. 1: 21.) It is but reasonable to understand that whenever a person presented himself to one of the apostles, the Holy Spirit immediately enabled one apostle to address the man in his own language. It is also reasonable to think that there was nothing miraculous about the hearing or the understanding. This wonderful occurrence was a fulfillment of the prophecy of Joel, who had predicted that God's servants should prophecy. God baptized the apostles in the Spirit, and not the multitude. The very fact that the people were not baptized in the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost should lead us to understand that people are not now baptized in the Spirit. The evidence is clear that the Holy Spirit spoke through the apostles to every hearer in his own dialect, and it is also wholly unreasonable to suppose that the Lord worked a miracle on the hearing of the multitude. If he did this, there was no necessity for the baptism of the Holy Spirit.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

Brother Pittman's Work in Atlanta.

Brother S. P. Pittman, of the David Lipscomb College, Vashville, Tenn., began a revival with the South Pryor-Jassar Streets congregation on the fourth Lord's day in day and continued it over three Lord's days, preaching wice each Lord's day and every night through the week, xcepting Saturdays. He did a most excellent work while tere and very much endeared himself to those who heard tim. His preaching was mostly to the church, and he left he members much stronger in faith and zeal, and we shall expect better things of the South Pryor Street brethren ecause of this meeting. Quite a number of the members if the East Point and West End Avenue congregations ttended, and thus the influence for good reached the most of the Atlanta members.

Brother Pittman is a man who is clean and consecrated n his daily walk and has done much in extending the ause of Christ at the many places he has visited. Perhaps is greatest work has been accomplished in the David apscomb College, in which institution he has labored for bout twenty years. He has taken a special interest in vorthy boys who wanted to educate themselves for greater sefulness in life, and quite a number of such young men re now accomplished workers in the vineyard of our Lord ecause of the help he has given them. A greater work han this could not be done. The Lord preserve and bless Im for a continued life of such usefulness and "enlarge Is borders" to the end that he may do greater good.

R. H. Rogers Comes to Atlanta.

The South Pryor Street congregation is to be congratuited in securing the services of Brother R. H. Rogers, of brt Deposit, Ala., who is due to begin work with them te first of next month. Brother Rogers is a young man the finished his course in the David Lipscomb College aout two years ago. He is consecrated and full of energy. I a great work is not accomplished at South Pryor, it will b no fault of his. May every member there be made to fel that he or she is responsible for his success or failure it his efforts to extend the cause in that section of our cty. Paul beautifully expresses the secret of success in the following words: "From whom all the body [church] fily framed and knit together through that which every ient supplieth, according to the working in due measure oleach several part, maketh the increase of the body unto th building up of itself in love." (Eph. 4: 16.) Every mmber has a work to do; and one of the things-the most inportant of all—that they must not forget to do is to love. Te church cannot be built up in love unless the members dca great deal of loving. The fact is, no church has ever faed that allowed "brotherly love to continue." (Heb. 13 1.) 0 0 0

Satan's Gaining the Advantage.

'aul, in writing to the Corinthian brethren, says: "That noadvantage may be gained over us by Satan: for we are no ignorant of his devices." (2 Cor. 2: 11.) To be not ignrant of Satan's devices (and certain it is that we shald not be)-to know his movements, his "wiles," or triks-is to be quite well informed; for his "devices," "vles," or tricks, are many. When two armies are opposinseach other, each does its best to learn the devices, the intations and movements, of the other. The better they lean this, the less liable are they to suffer defeat. an general to fail to put forth his every effort to learn thesecrets and the movements of the other side, and let this be known, would mean his elimination as a leader at once by the government that backs him. For him to be careless and let the other side know all about his intentions and movements beforehand would be just as great reason for eliminating him.

It was Christ who said: "For the sons of this world are for their own generation wiser than the sons of light," (Luke 16: 8.) It is a burning shame that this is so. We sit like dead men and seem to be wholly unconscious of Satan's "devices." If Paul and the Corinthian brethren were not ignorant, neither should we be. How true it is of many of the workers that Satan knows every purpose and intention of theirs, all their intended movements, and these workers know nothing of his! Wisdom is a great thing. Solomon says: "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom." (Prov. 4: 7.) "Then shalt thou understand righteousness and justice, and equity, yea, every good path. . . . Discretion shall watch over thee; understanding shall keep thee." (Prov. 2: 9, 11.) Certainly we are not using wisdom when we allow ourselves to be ignorant of Satan's "devices," and, because of this ignorance, allow him to get the advantage of us.

When Does Satan Gain the Advantage?

It is well to ask the question: When has Satan gained the advantage? The answer is easy to be seen-viz., whenever he succeeds in leading us into sin; and he holds the advantage so long as he keeps us there. Sin may be considered under the two most used words, "transgression" and "disobedience." (See Heb. 2: 2.) Transgression is going beyond what our Lord teaches; disobedience is stopping short of what he teaches. Nadab and Abihu were guilty, not so much of disobedience as of transgression, when they "offered strange fire before Jehovah." (See Lev. 10: 1, 2.) God had commanded them to burn incense, and this command they were obeying when they "took each of them his censer" and began to burn incense, but transgressed in allowing themselves to use a fire not commanded. In all of our work and worship, let us see to it that our obedience is not nullified by our transgression in going beyond what our Lord has commanded by using things as substitutes for what he has plainly prescribed for us to use. How often Satan gets the advantage of man here, and then holds the advantage by man's letting the obedience he has rendered blind him to the transgression Satan has led him into. Here Satan has caught his millions. Saul, the first king of Israel, was disobedient when he stopped short of carrying out Jehovah's instructions to destroy all the Amalekites with all that they had. (See 1 Sam. 15; 1-23.)

Going back now to our text, it is easy to be seen that Satan came dangerously near gaining the advantage over the Corinthian church in leading them into a state of carelessness about withdrawing from the disorderly member mentioned in the first letter (chapter 5). A congregation is disobedient when this is the case. But the Corinthian brethren quickly took this advantage from Satan by obeying Paul's instructions to withdraw fellowship from him. In the second letter (chapter 2) we find that this brother has repented, and Paul now desires that he be forgiven, and the context clearly shows that Satan would gain the advantage if he was not forgiven and restored to fellowship. How often has he gained the advantage over congregations and held it by causing the congregation to retain in its fellowship members who are known to be disorderly! And just as often, perhaps, has he gained the

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. advantage in causing brethren to let go the forgiving spirit, which spirit rejoices to see the sinner turn from the error of his way and be restored to fellowship.

The Book says if a brother sin against you, go to him and talk with him, just you and he alone. You are disobedient when you do not do this. But if he will not hear you, your first going will be nullified if you go not the second time, taking with you one or two others that love him and that will help you to try to win him from his sins; and if you go this second time, both the first and second going will be nullified if you then refer it not to the church for the final effort to save him; and if this last effort fails, all efforts are nullified if fellowship is not withdrawn, because you simply stop short of what God says and allow yourself to become disobedient. Certainly it is true that partial obedience is disobedience. Go back and consider again Saul's disobedience. Saul did much, but he did not do enough; hence, it was all disregarded by Jehovah.

My brother, my sister, I close by asking the question: Has Satan, at any point in Christian duty, gained the advantage over you? If so, will you let him hold that advantage?

At the close of a discourse on this subject, recently, a sister came forward and said: "My feelings were hurt this morning, and I said I would never put my foot in the church house again. Satan got the advantage over me, but he shall not hold it." Let others think along these lines.

BY ED. S. DUNCAN.

Let all the readers of the Gospel Advocate be sure to read this:

Dear Brother Duncan: Is there any chance for you to come here and preach some for us? As you know, one other brother (a blind man) and myself and wife are the only members of the one body in this entire country. Ignorance and sectism are rampant here. O how badly we need the pure We will make all the sacrifice possible to have you come; but we are too poor to do but little, and I know that you are the one man to do the work. Can't you give us a small meeting sometime this summer?

Your brother in Christ, J. A. G.

Brethren, you can never know how badly I wish that I was financially able to answer all such calls as the above. I know this good brother and sister well, also the blind brother (he was born blind), and that they are worthy; but-alas!-I, too, am a poor man and several hundred dollars in debt, and my summer's work is about all I have to depend on to try to live and pay my debts, to keep "busybody" brethren, not the world, from trying to ruin me. But I have set a resolution that I will take the time and go to the relief of these good people, and trust that some of my purehearted brethren and sisters will help me carry the burden. I know that hundreds will see this who could at least donate a few cents to this work, and, all together, it would be a wonderful help to me and do unending good in this destitute field. Brother, sister, what do you say? If you doubt my worthiness or ability to do this work, write me, and I will give you some of the best references in Texas and Oklahoma. I write this through the Gospel Advocate, as I consider it and its readers the best of poor men's friends. Write me at once, expressing your sympathy with this work. plan the meeting for the first half of July. This place is in Bowie County, Texas. My address is Mount Pleasant, Texas.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a Class of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You Drink Lots of Water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with saits occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back, or sick head-ache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sedi-ment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive. It cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn. N. Y., says that all who wish to know about 1 shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

Fort Smith, June 4.—The meeting at Poteau, Okla., closed last night. I succeeded in getting seventeen members to promise to meet regularly and carry on the worship. I learned of several members yet to be rounded up; and if we succeed in getting them, there will be at least twenty-five in I learned that we once had a good congregation, and had a house of worship all paid for, except about three hundred dollars; but, somehow, the devil got in the lead, the church disbanded, and the house was sold under mortgage, etc., and there has not been a meeting in the town for some eight I did not know these things until after the meeting had started. I have asked Brethren Taylor and Busby to give Poteau the mission meeting they are to hold this fall. Brethren, Eastern Oklahoma is in great need of missionary workers. Will you not help in some way? May God bless the faithful.—W. W. Slater.

Washington, June 8.—The services were full of interest to-day and were enjoyed by all. Among our visitors were Sister Bashaw, of Manchester, Tenn., and Brother W. W. Moody, of. St. Louis, Mo. It is encouraging to have a visit by old friends and faithful members. I am giving the best part of my life to this mission field, and, by the help of a faithful few, we are fighting with all our might to build a house of worship and give the lost the gospel. With so many strong congregations in the United States, I see no reason why a house of worship could not be built without delay. Brother, if you will help, it can be done. I say "you"—not the other brother, but you. This is the best way you can use some of God's moneynot your money, but God's money. Brother and Sister A. M. Mississippi.

Senatobia, June 9.—The meeting at Perryville, Ark., closed last Thursday evening, with seven additions—four from the Baptists, one from the Methodists, and two from the world. On the first Sunday in June of next year I am to begin a meeting at Perryville, which is to continue one month. I shall look forward with much interest to that time, as it will be my sixth meeting with the congregation at that place. The cause at Perryville owes its growth very largely to that prince among men, J. E. Rose. I reached home from Perryville in time to preach for the church at Thyatira last Sunday, and was greeted by the usual large and attentive audience. There are but few churches that will equal Thyatira. My next meeting will be at Belzoni, Miss.—J. P. Lowrey.

Pearl, May 29.—I landed here on January 5, this year, and began to January 5, this year, and began to preach the gospel as "it is written." It was a new and strange doctrine, but the people would come to hear it. Since coming here I have baptized sixteen, and the prospects are favorable for many more. Some of those baptized were Missionary Baptists and Primitive Baptists, and nearly all of them were heads of families, a great field for missionary work. am about forty miles south of Jackson, the capital of the State. Somehow, our brethren have never come this way. I am here ready and willing to do all in my power to preach the word; and if those who see this feel disposed to help in this work, it will be very greatly appreciated. I have been laboring here at my own expense so far. Jesus says, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature;" but folks who have been well taught know that the gospel must be supported. We have a few faithful ones that meet every Sunday and worship after the New Testament order, with preaching every Sunday and very often at private homes. Brethren J. J. Gordon, Miley Matthews, and Andrew Welch are among our leading members.-A. B. Gunter.

South Carolina.

Union, June 4.—Brother Burton reports one soul added to the fold by baptism and one from the Baptists since last report. I preached to about twenty attentive listeners last Lord'sday afternoon in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce. Each one seemed to be grasping at every word of the truth of God. I have never met a more happy and enthusiastic little band of disciples in my life. Thanks be to God for such men and women as Brother and Sister Burton. They left home and friends and loved ones and came into this big State, not being ashamed of the gospel of Christ, and by the help of God they have started work the results of which eternity alone can tell. We began a tent meetsing in the central part of the town on Sunday night. There were about fifty out the first night, a few more on Monday night, and last night the chairs were almost all taken. After the service was over Monday night a lady told me that she had been wishing for some pure gospel and that her wish had been fulfilled by my coming. and said she was coming some more. Last night two ladies told Brother Burton that they were in the Meth-odlst Church just because they could not do any better here. Does not that sound good, brethren? We are just as happy as we can be over the prospects of many souls being added to the body of Christ here in the next few months. Brethren, pray for us, for we are pressed on every side by opposition. We need seventy-five tent chairs, and we must have them. If there is a congregation that has any surplus folding chairs on hand, please send them to us; and if you have no chairs, send us one Sunday's contribution to buy some chairs. In sending contribution for chairs, please specify same.—A. C. Traylor.

Tennessee.

Greenbrier, June 9.- I am temporarily located, and since arriving in Tennessee, May 10, I have preached three Lord's days at Bethel and one at Coopertown. The attendance and interest have been very good at all these services. I will preach at Springfield next Lord's day, the Lord willing. Having devoted more than seven years in the ministry in Southern California, I am enjoying the pleasure and privilege of mingling with old friends and chums of my childhood days, and more especially in working together with them in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. My protractedmeeting work will begin at Bethel on the second Lord's day in July, Dur-ing August and September I will be engaged in meetings in Kentucky. I would be glad now to arrange for some work for October and November. Address me at Greenbrier, Tenn., Route 2, until further notice. - B. W.

Texas.

Houston, June 9.—Brother L. S. White will begin our meeting at the Central Church on June 16. Brother Sam Pittman will begin a meeting with the Sweeny Church on the fourth Lord's day. The cause of Christ is rapidly spreading in South Texas.—C. P. Poole.

What Is a Christian?

BY J. T. J. WATSON,

To give the essential elements of Christianity, one might mention faith, love, justice, mercy, and forbearance, for these contain the highest attributes attainable by man; but since these are characteristics of God and were followed perfectly by Christ as an example on earth for us, and are not inherent in man except in a moderate degree, the question arises: How much progress must a person make before he is entitled to the name "Christian?"

Remember, the word "disciple" means a learner; also, that Jesus said to those Jews that believed on him: "If ye abide in my word, ye are my disciples indeed." We see that, as Jesus taught it, his disciples were those who were not only storing their minds with the lessons he taught, but were also learning to practice them. Bear this in mind while we study Acts 11: 26: "The disciples were first called Christians at Antioch." Hence, those who were learning the lessons taught by Jesus and were learning to practice.

them are the ones that were called "Christians" in apostolic times.

Christianity takes an individual "in the rough" and educates him to higher ideals and nobler endeavors. It is for all, regardless of heredity or environment. Since some are lower in mentality and morality than others, it follows that there is no minimum standard of perfection to be reached in order to be a Christian in a scriptural sense.

In Paul's letter to Philemon it may be learned that Onesimus had become Philemon's slave, yet Philemon was a Christian. This shows that wrong may be tolerated in a Christian until he can learn and turn away from his error. But it is plain that one must study constantly to inform himself in all virtues, else he ceases to be a Christian.

John the Baptist prepared a people for the Lord. When soldiers asked him what they must do, he did not tell them in a direct way to give up military service, but he gave instruction by which they could be prepared for the coming Lord, and which would, in its working, lead them out of militarism. (Luke 3: 14.)

Thus, as discipleship leads both the slaveholder and the soldier into a more brotherly feeling and practice, so it leads mankind into kindlier living and to desire and labor to grow in all the Christian graces.

If, besides this, one has obeyed God's law of admission into his church and faithfully endeavors to comply with each and every requirement of his will according to his ability to learn it from the New Testament, taking It, and it alone, for his creed and discipline, that person is a Christian, even though his development in the divine life may be slow.

Do justice to your brother (you can do that whether you love him or not), and you will come to love him.

—Ruskin.

Gospel Trumpet Blasts.

BY A. A. BUNNER.

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." (Ps. 122: 1.)

"For the Lord hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest forever; here will I dwell, for I have desired it." (Ps. 132: 13, 14.)

"For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." (Ps. 84: 10.)

I am glad to say that I am now out of the hospital and am now trying to hold a mission meeting at Horse Neck, W. Va. While I do not gain very rapidly in either strength or weight, still I have gained somewhat in both, for all of which I am profoundly thankful to a kind and merciful Father, and I do hope to soon be able for duty and labor in the great work of the Lord. We are having large and attentive audiences at each session of our meeting. My two sons, Dr. R. R. Bunner and A. A. Bunner, Jr., are taking me to and from the meeting each night, a distance of six miles, in their automobiles, and A. A. Bunner is assisting me in the reading, prayers, singing, and exhortations; and between us both, I guess we are able to make a third of a hand in the work, and we hope to accomplish much good in the way of building up a new congregation of the Lord in that neighborhood, provided that my strength holds out and continues to increase. My expenses were great-too great-at the hospital; and if any of the dear brethren in Christ should feel as though they would like to share with me in bearing this burden, they can send their fellowship to me at Waverly, W. Va., as this will be my address for a while yet, as the doctors want to look after my case for at least a month longer. Pray for me.

A few evenings ago I was sitting in my room looking out through the window. The house where I am lodging in on the banks of the beautiful Ohio River. A show boat was lying anchored near the shore. The music from its calliope was making the evening hideous, not melodious, saying to the followers of the world, the flesh, and the devil: "Come and spend your money with our show to-night." And what did my eyes behold? The road along the bank of the river, each way, was lined with men and women, old and young, with their children along, with the lads and the lassies, church members and all, wending their way to the boat to spend their money and more than half the night in revelry. Had that crowd (I mean that part of the crowd that was composed of church The next time you buy calomel ask for members) give what they spent on that show for themselves and their children that night to the support of the gospel of Christ, they would soon convert the town to New Testament Christianity and have their church house paid for, and their children would be brought up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" and learn to walk after the Spirit and not after the flesh. But no! They will freely give their twenty-five and fiftycent pieces and their precious time to an ungodly show, and reserve their pennies (when they do very relactantly go to the house of the Lord, only semi-occasionally) for the work of the Lord, while men and women are dying in sin and their children on their way to hell. I was told that one sister who is scarcely ever seen at the worship, when asked, "Why don't you come out to worship more frequently than you do?" would always reply to the question thus: "Poor old daddy is not well, and I just will not go and leave him alone." But the same person who told me this also told me that the night that the show boat was there this same sister took herself and children to the show and left "poor old daddy" alone until midnight. church members could not say with the psalmist: "A day in thy courts [the courts of the Lord] is better than a thousand." Talk about sending the gospel to the heathen abroad, when we not only have the heathen at home, along with thousands of worldly and carnal-minded church members who need converting and saving, and need it badly, too! Such church members have no appetite for the worship of God, in hungering and thirsting after righteousness. Right at this point I wish to make a quotation from the first-page editorial in the Gospel Advocate of May 29: "The work of the next generation depends upon what we are teaching the children of to-day by precept and by example. In everything else but religion the child has as his unit of value, not the penny, but the nickel. He has a nickel for the moving-picture show, a nickel for the street car, a nickel for the soda fountain, and a penny for the church, With the logic of childhood he reaches a conclusion as to the relative value of these commodities: the moving picture, he figures, is worth a nickel, but the church is four cents cheaper."

But no one is to blame for this state of things but the child's Christian (?) parents, and they will be called upon to render up to God a strict account for this kind of bringing up of their children. Awake, thou careless and neglectful one, before it is too late!

Brother McQuiddy and others of the Gospel Advocate staff are to be highly commended for their faithfulness, in recent issues of the Advocate, in strictly paying heed to Paul's charge (which is a charge to them as well) to his son Timothy. (See 1 Tim. 1: 3, 4.) The editors of the Advocate have certainly been doing some good and much-needed work along these lines, in addition to their other good and wholesome teaching along other important lines. If ever there was a day in the history of the church when such noble work as the Advocate is doing was needed, it is in this day, and all lovers of the truth should bestir themselves and extend its circulation far and near, and all who are in arrears on their subscription should pay up at once and renew it for two years in advance, and also pay a year's subscription in advance and send the paper to some alien or sectarian neighbor and thereby do good and lasting mission work. I know that there are thousands of disciples of Christ who can well afford to do all of this and have fruit to abound to their account when the great harvest is gathered into the heavenly garner. Let us begin to-day and start the Gospel Advocate out on a great campaign of mission work as a silent missionary. What say you, brethren, to this? "And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ"

A sister-not old, but young enough to work, and does work-said to the writer not long ago: "I do not feel able to get out very often to the worship, but I feel that I can remain at home and read my Bible and love my Savior and do all of my duty in this way." Such self-deceived and deceiving kind of Christians will be terribly surprised when they wake up in eternity's darkest night and see "Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all of the prophets, in the kingdom of God," and they themselves cast out. Among all such there will be "weeping and gnashing of teeth." Such Christians neither read the Bible nor love the Savior. "Then they that feared the Lord spoke often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him." (Mal. 3: 16, 17.) "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." (Acts 2: 42.) Say, you that think you can stay at home and read your Bible and love your Savior, does Acts 2: 42, also 1 Cor. 16: 1, 2, include you? If not, then what?

Who Will Help in This Work?

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

There are in Bradley County, Tenn., and adjoining counties, some communities where we once had congregations; but, for the want of some one to break the bread of life to them, they have gone down, disbanded, and died out. We want to have some meetings held at these places and see if we cannot revive the work, and we want to try out some new places also and see if we cannot build up some new congregations.

I have arranged with Brother Ridley Stroop, of the David Lipscomb College, to hold these meetings, and he is to take up this work about July 1. Brother Stroop is very highly recommended by Brethren Boles and Pittman, of the college, and we believe a good work will be done in these places this summer and fall.

Now, at some of these places we can expect little or no help in the way of financial support; and that being true, we will have to ask for fellowship from congregations and individuals outside. Now, dear brethren, how many of you will help in this muchneeded work? Please do not pass it up unnoticed, as is so often done, and as has been the case with so many in regard to our appeals for the Cleveland work. Decide in your own minds at once and write me, that I may know what to depend upon. Address me at Cleveland, Tenn.

Looking Back. No. 3.

BY J. W. ATKISSON.

Brethren J. J. Lane and Hutcherson tried to plant the primitive, apostolic church in the towns and villages near where I was raised, but, on account of the sectarian prejudice and opposition, they never could get the ears of the people; but when the gospel did finally get a foothold there, it made such inroads on the sectarian bodies that strong complaining was heard on every hand. Pedobaptists had to immerse many of their old-time members or lose them entirely; and the Baptists had to preach doctrinal sermons and indulge in much undignified criticism and misrepresentation of the socalled "Campbellites" to satisfy what they had left.

Brethren Adam S. Wright, H. Drennan, O. A. Carr, E. N. George, G. B. Hancock, and W. W. Blalock did much pioneer work in South Missouri and North Arkansas; and they were opposed by all clans and classes. The rich and the poor, the wise and the foolish, the high and the low, the learned and the unlearned, all had something to say against what they regarded as a new and very dangerous heresy. One in particular whom I now call to mind was a poor girl, a domestic employed in my father's family, by the name of "Catherine Green." She was earnest and conscientious in her opposition to the "new heresy," but rather uncouth in She could see no her expressions. good reason for hearing or learning anything new in the line of religious teaching. For she said that her father, Gabriel Green, "was as good a man as God Almighty ever slapped a gut into," and that "he had been a Primitive Baptist for forty years; and if there was anything any better in the Bible, he'd have found it afore now."

All my father's family and near relatives on both sides were brought up in the faith of the Primitive Baptists. So you may know what a struggle we had to give up the teaching of our fathers and accept something which they regarded as new and deceptive, not to say "damnable." But the truth is mighty and will prevail. If people would only put away all prejudice and receive the word of God, the seed of the kingdom of heaven, into a well-prepared heart (and the preparations of the heart belong to the individual-see Prov. 16: 1, R. V.), they would have no difficulty in coming to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." (Ps. 19: 7.) But the trouble is, some people will not receive the word. They put it from them and judge themselves "unworthy of everlasting life." (Acts 13: 46.)

But the first sermon I ever heard preached by one claiming to be a Christian and nothing else was preached by W. W. Blalock on the subject of how to study the Bible. His preaching was clear and forceful, and I then and there began to suspect that there was something wrong with the doctrine of Calvinism, the faith of my fathers, and I got into an argument about it with some of my friends. Then I decided to call on Mr. H. C. Kitchen for some advice in the matter, as he was a good, kind man, and the only so-called "Campbellite" then living in the town, except, perhaps, old "Aunt Susan Ormsby, and she was not "working at it" much at that time. Brother Kitchen greeted me cordially; and when I had explained the situation to him, he advised me to read the eighteenth chapter of Ezekiel as a cure for Calvinism, and that was about all that he said at that time. I bade him good-by and went home and read that chapter in Ezekiel carefully several times, and was regarded as a "Campbellite" ever after that. One Methodist preacher accused me of being "a cross between a Campbellite and a Primitive Baptist." But I kept on reading the Bible, and I obeyed the gospel a few years later on. I was baptized by Brother Blalock in a beautiful, clear stream near Evening Shade, Ark.

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and It appears that Mr. Simon's shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his quarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

Wisdom. No. 2. By S. W. BERBYMAN.

"There be four things which are little upon the earth, but they are exceeding wise: The ants are a people not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer; the conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses among the rocks; the locusts have no king, yet go they forth all of them by bands; the spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in kings' palaces." (Prov. 30: 24-28.)

Having noted some of the lessons of wisdom taught by the ants and conies, we shall now study the locusts and spiders.

"The locusts have no king, yet go they forth all of them by bands." The locusts have no king, yet they go forth united. Sometimes they appear in such great quantities that they completely devour all vegetation and growing crops. Their work is always destructive because they go forth united-in bands. Their work is one of unity. Where one appears, thousands may be found. Sometimes in foreign countries they appear in such great numbers that they obscure the sun. Crops and all green vegetation are completely destroyed by them. In this the power of unity is clearly seen. Brethren, do we desire to make great progress in the work of the Lord? If so, we must be united. If we would drive back the enemy and plant the banner of truth on his soil, we must "go forth in bands." Lincoln said: "In unity there is strength." Then we might state that unity is reasonable from every viewpoint. Jesus said: "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Some one has said: "United, we stand; divided, we fall." Paul said: "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might," (Eph. 6: 10.) We cannot be "strong in the Lord" without we are united. Every division weakens the body of Christ and sorely injures the cause for which he died.

Unity is reasonable from a viewpoint of progress. The locusts make great progress because they are united. When the first colonies came to America, they were not united. They made no progress whatever in establishing a government and improving the new world. Pretty soon they formed a union, and to-day one of the greatest nations in the world exists as a result of this union. Divisions have done more to check the progress of God's people than any other one thing. Things which cause divisions are not expedient and should be avoided. Instrumental music in the worship is not ordained of God and has done untold injury to the cause of Christ. Those who caused such horrible divisions among God's people will some day be sorry of it. Every one who was instrumental in causing such a division is an abomination in the sight of God. (See Prov. 6: 16-19.)

Not only is unity reasonable from a viewpoint of progress, but also from a viewpoint of peace. "I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 1-3.) "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which ye also are called in one body; and be ye thankful." (Col. 3: 15.) "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints." (1 Cor. 14: 33.) Divisions drive out peace and bring in the spirit of carnality and war.

Jesus condemned divisions and prayed for unity. (Matt. 12; 25-27; John 17: 20-23.) Paul condemned divisions and taught unity. (1 Cor. 1: 10-13; 3: 1-3.) As the locusts go forth by bands, so must God's people go forth united. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" (Ps. 133: 1.) The possibility of unity is seen in the fact that God requires it of his people. (1 Cor. 1: 10.) That which God demands can be done. His ancient people met his demand in this respect. (Acts 1: 14; 2; 44-46.) We can and must do it, too, if we hope to gain a home in heaven. (Rev. 22: 14.) Then, brethren, let us profit by the locusts' example, and go forth united, or in bands. How abominable in God's sight is a divided congregation! Division is a work of the devil; and where divisions exist, the devil has been invited in. Remember that God is not the author of divisions. The life and work of the church must be one of unity.

"The spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in kings' palaces." (Prov. 30: 28.) Is it possible that we can profit by observing the work of a spider? Possibly so; for Solomon says they are "exceeding wise." It is quite interesting to note the spider's skill in web weaving. First, she runs the main cords of her web. When this is done, she tests the strength of each cord by swinging to and fro upon it, If a cord appears to be weak, she takes it up and puts in a new one. Thus she works till the main lines of her web are strongly fixed. This work being accomplished, she proceeds to weave her web. The strength of each cord is tested before she leaves it. Every cord must be strong and durable. When the web is finished, no loose cords nor weak places can be found in it. Why is she so particular in this matter? Because her life depends upon the strength of her web. The insects that fly into this web become her prey. Every few days she goes over her web and inspects it. All weak places are repaired and made strong.

We should exercise the same skill and judgment in building a character that the spider does in building a web. As the spider's life depends on the kind of a web she builds, so does eternal life with us depend on the kind of a character we build in this world. As words, deeds, and thoughts go to form character, we should be very careful what we do, say, and think. Our deeds should be noble, our words and thoughts pure. As the spider examines her web, so should we examine our lives to see if they are in harmony with, or meet, the demands of God's word. Paul says: "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." (2 Cor. 13: 5.) As the chief object of the spider, in examining her web, is to strengthen the weak places, so should it be with us. In examining our lives, if we find that we have formed habits that are not good, we should drop them and strengthen our characters by forming good habits. Jesus tells us how we can build a character that will stand the test in the final day. (Matt. 7: 24-27.) By doing what Jesus says, our characters will stand the test in the judgment day and will be fit for the association of the redeemed in heaven. Then, let us build wisely, that we may gain an entrance into the city of our God.

Brethren, let us profit by this lesson and keep our lives clean and our thoughts pure. As our eternal happiness depends on the kind of character we build, we cannot be too careful.

Only the rock the trial will stand."

Influence.

The world is just only beginning to understand the extent to which Individuals and nations may be and have been swayed by silent mental influence. A man prefers, of course, to believe that he is the master of his own conclusions and the arbiter of his own conduct; but let any one ask himself how he arrived at any given conclusion or decided upon a certain line of conduct, and unless he can own to an intelligent conception of divine principle upon which he relies for guidance, he will have to admit, if he is equal to the analysis, that he has been swayed throughout his career by influences not his own.-Selected.

Edifying as the Need May Be

God's Premium on Purity.

God has always placed a premium on purity in his dealings with men. It is the one word that expresses the standard of divine excellence; and that standard he has beld aloft throughout the ages, a fact which is patent to every student of the Bible. We first behold it in the story of the Genesis, and there it is raised over every creature—over the beast of the field, the fowl of the air, the fish of the sea, and over man, who exercised dominion. God saw to it personally that everything of its kind was not only good, but "very good."

I have often tried to comprehend just what must have been the charm of living in a place where everything flourished in its pristine goodness and at a time when no single commandment had been broken. No need for James' implied exhortation, "Keep yourselves unspotted from the world," for before Satan intruded, the world itself was spotless, clean, and pure. There was no sign of old age or decay, no vestige of sickness or sorrow, and death was not even a dream.

Bible history does not relate how many sinless days clapsed before the first pair yielded to the tempter's wiles—just how many or how few; but I know those were days of unutterable joy and bliss, when man and woman alike could look up toward the heavens and say: "We have not tasted of sin; our hands are clean; our hearts are pure; our bodies are fresh from our Maker's breath!"

The Divine Watchword.

After the great eviction, "purity" has been the divine watchword just as truly as before. With a mortal environment where all things are subject to impurities, man has not only been urged, but entreated, to bold fast to that which is good. In a world where alloyage is an art and adulteration a habit, God has been teaching his children in each succeeding generation to refuse admixtures and to search only for the precious stones of truth. Every commandment that has been given for their guidance and keeping has been "pure, enlightening the eyes." Every temple of worship that man has builded at God's direction has emphasized the thought of purity. The ark and all of its appurtenances were overlaid with pure gold. The same was true of the tabernacle and its furniture. Its lamps were filled with the purest olive oil; its tent perfumed with frankingense of the rarest odor. Nothing common nor unclean could be sacrificed upon its altars. Everything must be both pure and perfect. When Solomon built the temple, he had the whole interior finished in pure gold, even the floor on which they walked. The cedar he used was transported from a Lebanon forest, the best that the world afforded. The stones were hewn stones of the most costly type. Perfection was its hall mark through and through

In issuing instructions as to how these structures should be built, God was both specific and definite; and be it said to the credit of the builders that they were particular in following the instructions given by the divine Architect. The purity which constituted the keynote of the plans became the essence of the finished buildings. Every workman on the tabernacie built as Jehovah commanded Moses.

Purity in the New Testament.

When the Old Testament was supplanted by the New Testament, purity did not cease to be the cardinal principle. Under the Christian dispensation the principle is given a still wider application in that it is applied to persons rather than things. It becomes now the essence of the living temple, where before it had found expression in altars and stones. The church of the living God is its highest embodiment. In that institution purity must characterize not only the individual members, but the body itself. To this end Jesus "gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a people for his own possession, zealous of good works." His must be a "pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father," and its substance is "to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world "-a forcible reminder of the fact that we do not live in Eden despite the fact that there is many a spot described as a paradise on earth.

"Blessed," the Master said, "are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." Paul urges the young man Timothy to become "an ensample to them that believe, in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity." Note the ascending scale, with purity as the climax. The younger women are to be exhorted as "sisters in purity." Our bodies must be presented holy; they are not for fornication, but for the Lord. Passage after passage impresses upon our minds the thought that purity, which finds no place in the teaching of Socrates or in the system of Aristotle, is the distinguishing virtue of the Christian religion.

One Man's Eyes and Another's.

This is the test that Paul applies to every man's religion when he writes: "Unto the pure all things are pure." It is a lesson that primarily concerns the cultivation and regulation of our thoughts. In one way the eyes of a man are just like the eyes of every other man. In point of vision, however, the eyes of one man may be entirely different from those of his neighbor. It all depends upon the thought. Judas saw Mary breaking the alabaster box, and said: "What an awful waste of money!" His thoughts were sordid and small. Jesus sald: "She hath done what she could." His thoughts were pure and good. One man may look upon a sculptor's masterpiece and think only of his art. His thoughts are noble. Another man may view the same piece and be attracted by its scanty dress. His thoughts are vulgar. One may look upon a chaste, beautiful woman and be inspired. His thoughts are high. Another man may look upon the same woman and lust after her. His thoughts are low.

Through the Finest Lens.

One great beauty of the Christian life is that we see everything through the finest lens. The good in this world eternally overshadows the evil. Everything wears its brightest dress. Our eyes rest upon the glory of the mountain tops. They never linger long upon the squalor of the valleys. One of the newest of the social organizations is that formed in an Eastern city and called "Life as a Fine Art Club." "Its aim," we are informed, "is not to exploit any new doctrines, or any new religion, or any new therapeutics. Its purpose is to bring people together to discuss frankly and openly the questions that make for happiness, the troubles that make for misery, and to help each other over seemingly insurmountable difficulties, and in so doing to increase buman happiness." Do you know that we have had this kind of a club in the church of God ever since its organization and that it has meetings once a week? The only difference is that we call it a prayer meeting, and consider it not as an adjunct to the church, but the work of the church itself.

Is it not strange how people, in their eagerness to form new organizations, often hit upon some glorious principle taught in the word of God and practiced in the church and try to give it to the world in an emasculated form? Long before this happy phraseology had dawned upon the minds of the twentieth century the Bible had been teaching people to look upon life as a fine art, and we do not need my organization besides the church to emphasize the fact if Christians do their duty.

The Effect of Study.

Francis L. Patton tells us: "A man's studies should have a moral as well as an intellectual influence upon him. Physics should make him more truthful; astronomy, more reverent; literature, more genial; social science, more benevolent; philosophy, more belleving." This is doubtless true, but at the same time no one will gainsay the fact that a man who studies the Bible may have all of these qualities and more without pursuing any of these studies. Many a poor man is truthful and reverent who has never seen a textbook on physics and astronomy. Many a poor woman is kind and companionable, "full of falth and good works," who never heard of Thackeray or Victor Hugo. For each has learned to think of the things that are true and honorable, just and pure, lovely and of good report. Each has found a wondrous beauty in that quiet meditation we sometimes sing:

"Purer yet and purer
I would be in mind;
Dearer yet and dearer,
Every duty find;
Hoping still and trusting
God without a fear,
Patiently believing
He will make all clear."

RENEWAL OF THE SPECIAL NUMBERS.

In response to a friendly and widespread demand upon the part of our readers, the editors of the Gospel Advocate have decided to resume the publication of special numbers. Our effort along this line during the years of 1915 and 1916 met with universal favor. Everybody was pleased, and many helped in securing for them a large circulation. We recall with pardonable pride and unfeigned pleasure the genuine enthusiasm and heartfelt appreciation evoked by the appearance of the "Bible Study Number," the "Lord's Supper Number," the "Home, Father and Mother Number," and many others of equal interest. Following a precedent already established, we will print thirty-two pages in each special number. These pages will be brimful of splendid and timely contributions from the best writers available.

Beginning with the last week in July, we will issue a special number each month until the end of the year. The title of the first will be the "Giving Number." It is generally conceded that few Christians have learned how to apply for themselves and to teach others the God-given principles on this all-important subject. The purpose of this number will be to bring out this teaching in a clear, unmistakable manner. We desire it to be so scripturally complete that it may serve hereafter as a kind of reference work on the subject that will be entirely worthy of preservation. Other numbers will follow, devoted to such vital and soul-stirring themes as "Prayer." "Loyalty." "A Better Ministry," "The Christian Armor," "Christian Additions," etc.

No reader can afford to miss these special numbers. Hundreds of our readers wrote us that one of them was worth a year's subscription. Others had the series bound and placed in the library. The new series of special numbers will be as helpful as the last, and, if possible, improvements will be made, We wish each reader to send us a new subscriber at once in order that many may enjoy the feast of good things. Be sure that you do not permit your subscription to be in arrears. Send us your order to-day.

Was Christ Divine? No. 2.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

All the heretical sects and public enemies of the ancient church accepted the books of the New Testament as genuine. There are two very prominent sects which flourished in the second century and later—the Ebonites, who believed that Christianity was just a further development of Judaism, and the Gnostics, who attempted to interpret the facts of Christianity in the light of Greek philosophy. The Ebonites used the Gospel of Matthew as proof of their contention; while the Gnostics used all four of the Gospels in their interpretation. Heracleon wrote an entire commentary on the Gospel of John, showing that it sustained Gnosticism.

All the early adversaries of Christianity granted the genuineness of the New Testament books. These adversaries had an intense hatred for Christianity and used every weapon in their power to destroy it. Among these enemies may be mentioned Julian, Hierocles, Porphyry, and Celsus. Porphyry attacked the genuineness of some of the books of the Old Testament. His attack on the genuineness of the book of Daniel is a skillful effort. This shows that such a mode of attack was familiar in those days, and they would have used this method against the books of the New Testament If they had thought it would have met with success; and a failure to do this is an admission on their part of the genuineness of the New Testament books, It is a remarkable fact that these bitter enemies of Christianity are made to bear such strong evidence in behalf of the genuineness of the New Tetament books with such unwillingness.

The books of the New Testament were not forged. No one would have forged such books if he could, because the contents of the New Testament are opposed to the evil passions, prejudices, and purposes of wicked men, and, therefore, would not have been written by deceivers. These books were offensive to every sect among the Jews. Jews would not have written their own condemnation. Neither could they have been written by Gentiles, for no Gentile would have so honored a Jew and Jewish history in order to deceive the world. No one could have forged such books if he would. No one could have invented such a perfect character as Christ and portrayed in him such harmonious attributes. No deceiver could invent such true manhood and such a system of morality. A stream cannot rise higher than its source. An impure fountain could not send forth such a pure stream. The books of the New Testament are not forgeries.

There have been but few variations and changes made in the books of the New Testament since they were written. A comparison of the books of the New Testament as translated now with the old manuscripts reveals no material changes in thought. No new doctrine has been interpolated, neither has any essential principle been omitted. The argument for the divinity of Christ and the origin of the Christian religion depends chiefly upon the historical books of the New Testament, and these have been handed down to us without any changes in the historical facts; so that we may conclude with assurance that the New Testament books as we now have them contain the testimony concerning the divinity of Christ as the primary witnesses gave it to the world.

It remains now to prove the credibility of the books of the New Testament. A book may have been written by the reputed author, and yet its content may not be worthy of confidence; a book may be authentic and yet not credible. If a book asserts itself to have been written by reputed authors, then the genuineness and the credibility of that book stand or fall together; and when either is established, it helps to prove the other. Such is the case with the books of the New Testament. Since we have proved that the New Testament books are genuine, we may use that proposition as proof of the credibility of these books.

The testimony of the New Testament books is credible because the witnesses had the means of knowing; they were eyewitnesses. It is a rare thing that the eyewitnesses are also the historians. The most authentic history that we have of secular events was not written by eyewitnesses. The history of the New Testament is of the first class and should receive full credence. The books of the New Testament must be placed in the class of reliable histories. The witnesses gave the facts just as they saw and heard them. They do not record inferences and conjectures. They had the means of knowing, and gave the central facts connected with a simple life for a brief period of time. The historical books of the New Testament record a single line of events which occurred in Judea and Galilee. There are eight independent witnesses or writers of the New Testament, and their evidence is harmonious. These witnesses are men of great candor; even their enemies give them credit for being honest. At one time a small class of enemies accused them of being base impostors, but the intelligent critics of Christianity have since abandoned this mode of attack. Their moral and rellgious tone and their power of moral renovation in society torbid such a conclusion. Their suffering of martyrdom prove their sincerity and honesty, so we have reason to rely with implicit confidence upon the honesty of these historians. Since they had the opportunity of knowing, since they had the mental ability to grasp the facts, and since they were honest in recording these facts, we have reenforced evidence that their testimony is true.

The undersigned coincidences between the books of the New Testament is an unanswerable proof of their credibility. The close student can find many examples of coincidences. Each writer gives his testimony in a simple, straightforward way without any attempt to convince the reader of the truth of what he relates. This is particularly true of the writers of the Gospels. Each Gospel writer narrates the events with a simple and unembarrassed manner of ease and confidence which nothing but an assurance of unimpeachable consistency can explain. It seems that the writers were willing to commit their records, undefended, unvarnished, into the hands of friend or foe with a confidence born only with a consciousness of the truth and integrity of honesty.

The books of the New Testament having been proved to be genuine—that is, written by the reputed authors—and having been proved to be credible—that is, the evidence of honest, truthful men—we may conclude with the cogency of logic that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God, or we must assign him a place somewhere between these two extremes. These three positions cover the whole ground.

He cannot be assigned to any middle rank. His claims will not permit us to class him as an ordinary man. He claimed to have come from God to earth; to have the power to forgive sins, to raise the dead, and to ascend back to the Father after his resurrection from the dead. Such wonderful claims will not permit him to be ranked as an ordinary man. He was either a base impostor or the Son of God.

He cannot be classed as a base deceiver. His superlative goodness and moral purity forbid his being a deceiver.

He loved all men and went about doing good unto all. No one can imitate his character, walk in his footsteps, imbibe his spirit, and love righteousness, and become wicked. One will become great, noble, and true to that degree that one imitates Christ. The whole history of his life and spirit of his teaching forbid our classing him as a base impostor. Therefore, he must have been what he claimed and what the New Testament testifies what he was—the Son of God and the Lord of Glory.

"Narrowness, Bigotry, and Intolerance." BY F. W. SMITH.

The above terms are freely and flippantly used in these days of a growing sectarianism and a deeply rooted sentimentalism against any man or paper that would dare to lift a voice in protest of false teaching. Hence, he who would obey the solemn mandate, "Contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints," must be branded as "narrow, bigoted, and intolerant," assuming to be an "arbiter of the faith of others." To undertake obedience to the apostolic injunction. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but prove the spirits, whether they are of God; because many false prophets [teachers] are gone out into the world" (1 John 4: 1), simply means to call down upon your head the condemnation of people filled with the spirit of sectarianism or drunk on the spirit of a sickly sentimentalism. Sentiment is a fine thing in its proper place; but when allowed to warp the judgment and blind the eyes to danger, it becomes a curse, and there is nothing more harmful to the truth and to the best interests of society. Perverted sentiment is one of the most dangerous things against which the truth of God and the laws of good government have to contend. Men and women under the spell and influence of a false sentiment will trample underfoot the most sacred things of God and ride roughshod over the best institutions of the land Public sentiment aroused is stronger than any human law. and when perverted will mock at the law of God. There are those who, because they were comrades in arms, fought side by side upon the battle field, ate out of the same pan and slept under the same tent, will stand by each other, right or wrong. There are those who, because they were schoolmates, sat in the same classes and graduated from the same institution, will uphold each other in that which is patently wrong. Some pupils, because a former teacher has been criticized, will rush to his or her defense without stopping for one moment to consider whether said teacher is right or wrong. All that is necessary for them to know is, "my teacher has been criticized, and I will not stand for it." There are those who, because a favorite preacher is criticized, will rush headlong to his defense, as if said preacher were immune from mistakes. Now, all such procedure is prompted by a perverted and sickly sentimentalism of which sensible men and women should be most heartily ashamed. But he who dares to lift his voice in the defense of God's truth against false teachers may expect condemnation from those under the influence of misdirected and perverted sentiment. Such characters will flippantly and freely call to their aid in expressing their displeasure such descriptive words as "narrow, bigoted, intolerant," and for good measure they will throw in "arbiters of the faith of others." They do this without considering the fact that they may be blaspheming the word of God. To charge those who are contending for God's truth with possessing such a spirit is a charge against God instead of man, and herein lies the danger to which these sentimentalists subject themselves.

People cling tenaciously to foolish and absurd traditions born of an unreasonable sentiment. main props of sectarianism is the sentimental feelings for the religion of ancestors, and until this false sentiment is eliminated there will be no place in the heart for the simple gospel of Christ. Why do not some of these modern sentimentalists in the church of Christ (and there are many of them) charge the Campbells and their colaborers with being "narrow, bigoted, intolerant," and the "arbiters of the faith of others?" They are quite ready to refer to these men about different matters; and I ask, have they ever read of the course pursued by Alexander Campbell and others toward Aylett Rains, who had imbibed the doctrine of the Restorationists? When the matter came up, Alexander Campbell drew the distinction between faith and opinion, "showing that Rains' views were a question of opinion, and not faith, because there was no testimony in the Book on the subject, and therefore it could not be a matter of faith. He suggested that Mr. Rains promise his brethren to preach the gospel as the apostles preached it and retain his opinions as private property." These quotation marks mean what they imply; and I ask, were those men "narrow, bigoted, intolerant," and "arbiters of the faith" of Mr. Hains? If not, suppose a like case should occur to-day, would it be proper, right, and just to bring forward the charge of "narrowness, bigotry, intolerance," and "arbiters of the faith of others?"

Because of the promulgation of speculative opinions equally as dangerous and subversive of the truth of God as were those held by Aylett Rains, churches and individual members of the body of Christ have been divided and rent asunder. Behold the Highland Church, in Louisville, Ky., at one time one of the best churches for which the writer ever held a meeting. I have known many of its members for at least twenty-five years, and can truthfully say they were God's very own. The results of E. L. Jorgenson's speculative opinions, received by him at secondhand, was the thrusting out of a church they did so much to build up two of the purest and most godly men I have ever known-viz., Robert Rubel and Cam Taylor. They were shamefully and wickedly thrust out of the church because they would not stand for the foolish and absurd doctrine taught by E. L. Jorgenson. The Christian character of Rubel and Taylor was attested by the fact that about forty of the best men and women of the church left because of the unjust treatment of those two godly men. I wonder if these forty odd saints, godly men and women, are the "narrow, bigoted, and intolerant" people, sitting as "arbiters of the faith of others," that preachers, editors, teachers, and pupils are writing and talking about? So long as the Gospel Advocate honors me with a place on its pages, I shall not sit Idly by and witness men, whether preachers, teachers, editors, or pupils, indulge in the charge of "narrow, bigoted, intolerent arbiters of the faith of others," without lifting my voice in protest. Hence, I repeat my request-viz. give us the names and proof to sustain these charges or else retract and apologize for the wrong. This is no child's play, but a matter that must be settled here or at the judgment. If preachers, editors, teachers, or pupils think they can bring such grave charges against others without having the demand made of them for identification and clear proof of said charges, they are greatly mistaken. Silence upon the part of those making these charges will be regarded by all right-thinking people as a clear confession of sin and cowardice.

"What's the Matter?"

"What's the matter" with Brother Pittman? In his article of May 22, under the above title, he gives a clear, forceful, and interesting review of the successive Protestant reformations from Luther to Campbell. The entire article is well written and, historically, shows a good study of his theme; the style of his paper also is excellent; but what I cannot understand is Brother Pittman's spiritual viewpoint. If some lifelong sectarian or denominationalist had written the article, I should not have been surprised; for even though he had read his Bible daily, he would, of necessity, have done so with a veil over his spiritual eyes, being creed-bound. Such as he cannot have a clear spiritual discernment. But when Brother Pittman, with the opportunities he has had, writes about reforming human institutions until the Campbell Reformation is reached, "so ideal and attractive"-well, I scarcely know what to say.

He writes: "The trouble is with us who have espoused the movement." I say! I have espoused no such movement, nor shall I ever, God helping me, accept anything in the service of God that has human origin. And moreover, I shall "hold fast the form of sound words," and shall teach that the church now is the same it was in apostolic days and that God adds to it "such as are being saved."

Reformation of error until the world gets back to truth! 'Tis not reformation in the religious world that is needed. 'Tis restoration. Our young preachers need to heed Paul's admonition to Timothy, "Preach the word." They need to pray God, whenever they take up his Book to study, that he will give them "eyes to see, ears to hear, and a heart to understand;" then they will not count themselves a part of any religious movement, so-called, but will know that restoration of the divine order in work and worship is what is needed.

"What's the matter" with Brother Pittman when he deplores the attitude of our older brethren? So far as I have been able to discover, they have "contended earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints," a thing we should all do. They have done this in love, too—love of the truth and love of souls—and in the fear of God. I have felt, since investigating thoroughly, that they have dealt most gently with the erring; but I notice that in nearly every instance the erring have lacked in gentleness. I shall always thank God that it has been my exalted privilege to come under the influence of their teaching and example. May the Lord help us all to be absolutely loyal, to have perfect hearts toward him, and may he give us greater spiritual discernment.

A SISTER

We are glad to publish the above from a most excellent Christian woman. Before investigating the matter fully this sister was almost persuaded that the young brethren who are speculating and causing disturbance in the churches had been wronged by those who were simply striving to lead them out of their errors into the light of truth; but after a complete examination she reached the conclusion that while they had been dealt with gently, they themselves had been harsh and bitter against those who had sought to benefit them by getting them to receive the truth as it is in Christ.

For men to take upon themselves the business of being "the arbiters of the faith" of others is not only a gross and arrogant presumption in the sight of God, but it is a sin and an outrage upon the liberty and equality of all men in Christ, and whoever is guilty of it is not fit to preach the gospel nor worthy of the confidence of men. Hence, let the men be named, and let the naming of them be accompanied with the proof that the charge is true, and let there be no delay in the matter. It is wrong to make such a damaging charge and leave the whole brotherhood virtually resting under it for any time, and we, therefore, call upon Brother Pittman to promptly name the men who are now assuming to be, and are posing as, arbiters of the faith of the younger men. We insist that there be no generalization that implicates everybody without mentioning any one in particular. If there be such men, it is a Christian duty to point them out and insist that the churches of which they are members deal with them as the word of God directs. We not only request, but, in justice to all, Insist, that Brother Pittman come forward at once with the names of these men and the proof of their guilt. EDITOR.

The Work in Washington, D. C.

BY E. W. SMITH.

A few brave souls have been trying for some time to maintain the purity of New Testament teaching and practice in the capital of our nation, and out of the liberality of their souls, with the aid of the saints elsewhere, they have purchased and paid for a lot, well located, on which to erect a house in which to worship. They should be commended for their zeal and determination to firmly plant a New Testament church in that great center, the point to which the eyes of a mighty nation are constantly turning. But they need help to consummate this laudable undertaking, and unless the churches over the land to whom God has intrusted his worldly goods come to their aid, they cannot carry on the work of building. A liberal contribution from each church would enable them to complete the work so nobly begun, and the churches giving to the enterprise would be blessed through the grace of giving. Brethren, this is a common cause, and we all should feel a deep interest in the matter. It should be a matter of holy pride with us to plant the cause in all of the cities of commerce and influence. Brother W. S. Long has been and is still untiring in his efforts to build a house in Washington in which the pure gospel can be preached and where people can worship "as it is written." This appeal Is made to the brethren everywhere to hold up his hands and encourage him in this work by sending a contribution for the purpose of building the house. Do not turn it down without serious consideration. Give the matter your prayerful thought, and I am sure you will not turn him away empty-handed.

Saint Katharine, of Sienna, desiring to know the true and short way to perfection, was taught by God in these words: "Know that the well-being and perfection of my servants consist in this one thing, that they should do my will alone, and strive with utmost zeal to fulfill it. The more diligently they apply themselves thereto, the nearer they approach to perfection, because they cling the closer to me, who am the sum of all perfection."—Exchange.

Do something to associate yourselves with Christ's apostiles—something that, in another life, you may look back upon as having contributed, however little, to carrying on the great enterprise that began when our Lord bade these simple Galileans make disciples of all the nations, and that will only end with the last hour of time.—H. P. Liddon.

EDITORIAL

Baptism and Remission.

BY J. C. M'QUIDDY, IN THE "FOLK-M'QUIDDY DISCUSSION."

As will be observed by the casual reader, Editor Folk sings over the same tune in the same words. I have heard of singing the same tune in different words, but never knew any one before to sing the same tune to the same words all the time.

The contention of the Baptist and Reflector is that faith which is barren justifies, though the paper straddles and saves before and without baptism, then damns the scripturally informed man who refuses to be baptized. editor has even made an issue of his own, contending that the man who is not informed as to the duty of baptism, who trusts Jesus and is not baptized, is saved. He has deserted his first position, leaving it to the mercy of a cold and merciless world. Is he ashamed of his own child? If he is, I may adopt his orphan!

My position is that faith in the heart leads to obedience in the life. As to how well this view is upheld and supported by the Scriptures, I leave our readers to judge from what has already been written.

For the enlightenment of the editor of the Baptist and Reflector, I shall quote from the ablest Baptist scholars, showing that they are in perfect accord with my position. I quote first James W. Willmarth, member of the Board of the American Baptist Publication Society and chairman of the Committee of Publication. The quotations from him are from the Baptist Quarterly, Philadelphia, July, 1877, "Baptism and Remission."

"It is feared that if we give to 'els' its natural and obvious meaning, undue importance will be ascribed to baptism, the atonement will be undervalued and the work of the Holy Spirit disparaged. Especially is it asserted that here is the vital issue between Baptists and Campbellites. We are gravely told that if we render 'cis' in Acts 2: 38 'in order to,' we give up the battle, and must forthwith become Campbellites; whereas if we translate it on account of,' or 'in token of,' it will yet be possible for us to remain Baptists.

"Such methods of interpretation are unworthy of Chrissuch methods of interpretation are unworthly of Christian scholars. It is our business, simply and honestly, to ascertain the exact meaning of the inspired originals, as the sacred penmen intended to convey it to the mind of the contemporary reader. Away with the question, 'What ought Peter to have said in the interest of orthodoxy?' The real question is: 'What did Peter say, and what did he mean, when he spoke on the day of Pentecost, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit? (Page 304.)

I contend that salvation from past sins is promised to believers after baptism. The Baptist and Reflector has stoutly argued that salvation is necessary to baptism. Read Willmarth:

"Fourth, Finally, suppose we force 'eis' in Acts 2; 38 to bear the unnatural and unauthorized meaning of on account of.' After all, we have gained nothing. Other passages there are which cannot be explained away. our Savior said, just before he ascended the heavens: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." shall hardly dare to tamper with his royal word and make it run, 'He that believeth and is saved shall be baptized.' And unless we do thus change his saying, we have by the highest authority an importance attributed to baptism certainly not less than that given to it in Acts 2: 28, translated according to its obvious meaning. What, then, is the advantage of violently torturing 'eis,' the construction and the context?

"We conclude without hesitation, and in accordance with such authorities as Hackett, Winer, Meyer, etc., that the proper rendering of 'els aphesin hamartion' in Acts 2: 38, as in Matt. 26: 28, is 'unto,' 'for'—i. e., 'in order to'—remission of sins." (Page 306.)

The Baptist and Reflector contends men may trust and be saved without baptism, while I contend the New Testament does not give an example of believers failing to be baptized under the preaching of the apostles. Again Willmarth agrees with this position:

"The catechumenical system was yet unknown. ious seats, 'rising for prayers,' and all modern 'revivalis-tic' methods, good and bad, were unheard of. The gospel was preached as a practical thing-a divine message to be at once obeyed. Those who received it were made the subjects of no spiritual diagnosis; but their profession of faith in the Lord Jesus was accepted, and they were immediately baptized. By that act the convert crossed the great gulf which separated the church from Jews and pagans, and rendered himself liable to persecution, perhaps to death. Everything was in solemn earnest; sensational-ism and fanaticism were not yet introduced, and hypocrisy was rare." (Page 307.)

Willmarth says of John 3: 5:

"We are confirmed in this by our Savior's words to Nicodemus, who came to him during that early period to Nicodemus, who came to him during that early period to learn more fully, no doubt, of the kingdom which Christ and John were preaching. Christ sald to him: 'Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God'—i. e., baptism and remewal by the Spirit are the conditions of true citizenship in the kingdom of God on earth. Unquestionably remission was one of the blessings of that kingdom." (Fage 309.)

I have contended that to refuse to be baptized is to disbelieve. Willmarth says:

"Note also that in those early days baptism swiftly followed that which it expressed, closely conjoined with repentance and faith, in time as well as in teaching, so that little opportunity was given for the question, 'What is the status of an unbaptized believer?' No one who accepted the gospel in reality was ever known to refuse baptism; and as to exceptional cases, such as the Impossibility of re-ceiving the ordinance, be it remembered that God was then, is now, free to go before the letter of his gospel promise, or to go beyond it, whenever, in his own sover-eighty, he may see sufficient cause for so doing." (Pages 314, 315,)

The Baptist and Reflector talks of baptism as an emblem, a symbol of forgiveness through faith alone. Brother Willmarth says:

"Certainly, it would seem that baptism must be very important, intimately connected with remission and salvation. How can an unprejudiced mind survey this testimony and then relegate baptism to the realm of mere emblem, symbol, and profession? However, they are to be explained, the facts from the record are these: Our Lord before his departure commanded that those who would be his disciples should be baptized, and united baptism with faith in the promise of salvation. The apostles and their colaborers directed inquirers to repent, believe, and be immersed in order to remission. Baptism is often alluded to in the Epistles in harmony with this view of it, and also as related to other important things in Christian life and hope. The apostles seem never to have conceived of the possibility of a penitent believer refusing to be baptized; but if one professing this character had refused baptism, is it possible to doubt, with this record before us, that they would have warned him of the guilt and danger of 're-jecting the counsel of God concerning' himself? If these are the facts, and that they are is obvious, the Scriptures do teach that baptism is a part of what is meant by 'obedience to the gospel, which has the promise of remission of sins and of eternal life." (Pages 311, 312.)

After producing many scriptural reasons connecting baptism and remission, Mr. Willmarth summarizes as follows and holds that baptism is a condition of salvation, just as I hold.

"1. The relation of baptism to remission is not that of an emblem or a profession of an assured fact regarded as already accomplished.

"2. The relation of baptism to remission is not that of a single, specific, and invariable condition, on which remission absolutely depends.

3. The relation of baptism to remission is this: Baptism is the third of three gospel requirements or condi-tions, to which, jointly, is annexed the promise of remis-The others are repentance and faith, which baptism is designed to express, embody, and consummate." 318, 319.)

I next quote from Alvah Hovey. He was president of Newton Theological Institution, Newton Center, Mass.; professor of Theology in the same institution; editor of "An American Commentary on the New Testament," in which series he wrote the "Commentary on John." The quotations are made from "Handbook on Baptism."

"We may say that being 'born of water' (baptized) must signify being cleansed from sins, or forgiven; while being born of Spirit cannot signify less than being ingenerated, if we may use the word, with a new and holy principle of life by the Spirit of God." ("Commentary on Appendix, page 423.)

"Repent, and be baptized every one of you in [or upon] the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission [or forgiveness] of your sins.' (Acts 2: 38, R. V.) Here repentance and baptism are represented as leading to the forgiveness of sins." ("Commentary on John," Appendix, page 420.)

"'Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acis 22: 16.) Of course there is no such thing possible as a literal washing away of sins. But there is such a literal washing away of sins. But there is such a thing as forgiveness of sins; and this may be described figuratively as washing them away, so that henceforth the soul may be 'clean' from the guilt or stain of sin." ("Commentary on John," Appendix, guilt or stain of sin." mage 420.)

I quote next from Horatio B. Hackett, a Baptist scholar of much note, professor of Biblical Literature and New Testament Exegesis in Rochester Theological Seminary, "Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles:"

"'In order to the forgiveness of sins' (Matt. 26: 28; Luke 3: 3) we connect naturally with both the preceding verbs. This clause states the motive or object which should induce them to repent and be baptized. the entire exhortation, not one part of it to the exclusion of the other." ("Commentary on Acts," 2: 38, page 53.)
"'And wash [bathe] away thy sins.' This clause states baptism in language derived from the naa result of the ture of that ordinance. It answers to 'for the remission of sins,' in Acts 2: 38—i. e., submit to the rite in order to be forgiven." ("Commentary on Acts," 22: 16, page 258.)

I close these quotations with one from J. R. Graves, who stood, in his day, head and shoulders above any other Baptist in the South in influence. One Matilda T. Hoy had written him to express his views on John 3: 5. His

"If Brother Vaughn convinced us that 'born of water' refers to anything but the baptism of one previously born of the Spirit, we never knew it, and we would have owned it to him and to our readers. It means nothing else, and no Baptist we ever heard or read of ever believed other-wise until A. Campbell frightened them away from an interpretation that is sustained by the consensus of all scholars of all denominations in all ages." (Tennessee Baptist, page 5, October 30, 1886.)

My position in this discussion is upheld by the leading Baptist scholars as well as by the words of inspiration. There can be no appeal from the Bible.

I call upon the editor of the Baptist and Reflector to harmonize his positions, not only with the Bible, but also with the leading lights and scholars of the Baptist Church. This he will never do, for he is overwhelmed by the Scriptures and the weight of the scholarship of his own leading

Editor Folk manufactures scripture to suit his cause. I find in one instance a part of a passage from the Revised Version and a part from the Authorized Version without calling attention to the change. Here is Eph. 2: 8, 9, as quoted: "For by grace ye have been saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any should boast." The passage reads in the Authorized Version: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." The same scripture reads in the Revision: "For by grace have ye been saved through faith; and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God; not of works, that no man should glory." He also quotes a number of passages from Romans and Galatians. I have not been able to find the scriptures as quoted in any version. He quotes the following: "Yet knowing that a man is not justified by works of law, but only through faith in Jesus Christ, even we believed on Christ Jesus, that we might be justified by faith in Christ, and not by works of law, because by works of the law no flesh shall be justified." It is a perversion of this scripture to quote it to prove we are saved by faith alone. We are saved only through Christ, but not by Christ alone. Gal. 2: 16, in the Authorized Version, reads: "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the falth of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." The Revision reads: "Yet, knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law but through faith in Jesus Christ, even we believed on Christ Jesus, that we might be justified by faith in Christ, and not by the works of the law; because by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." Satan did no worse than this when he added "not" to the word of God. Editor Folk could not find a scripture to prove his doctrine, so he perverts one. The Holy Spirit says: "Ye see that by works a man is Justified, and not only by faith." Space and time will not permit me to call attention to other glaring misquotations.

The scriptures he claims to quote from Romans and Galatians refer to the law of Moses. I have never taught that we could be justified in obedience to that law. Those of the circumcision must obey the law; but the bloody sacrifices could not blot out sin, only roll them over from year to year. (Heb. 10: 1-4;) They must look forward to Christ, and the blood of Christ reached backward and blotted out the sins of the obedient, (Heb. 9: 15.) So obedience has been required in every age of the world.

Faith has a law (Rom. 3: 27), and by this law we are required to walk in order to justification by faith; "And the father of circumcision to them who not only are of the circumcision, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham which he had in uncircumcision." (Rom. 4: 12.) Paul settles beyond all question that the obedient are justified in compliance with the law of faith; "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus made me free from the law of sin and of death," (Rom, 8: 2.)

The Campaign to Raise Funds to Improve the Buildings of David Lipscomb College.

BY E. A. E.

Kind readers, please give heed to these statements.

The directors of the College have decided to concentrate their energies and the efforts of all friends of true and the best education upon the last week in August-August 24-31 toward raising the remainder of the funds necessary to complete these Improvements.

Let all set their hearts on this work, this time, and this consummation.

This is the time when we request that sufficient pledges and contributions to complete the work be made and for-

All pledges and contributions will be publicly acknowledged on the opening day of the college-Thursday, Sep-

We are progressing well with the work of raising funds and receiving pledges; but the time for work on the buildings has come, and this matter must now be pushed to completion. We must do the work of erecting the girls' dormitory and repairing the other buildings during the summer and fall. The work must be done while it is day. We must have the funds before we can do the work.

All are under the same obligations as the directors to work for and contribute to this great achievement.

Think of the worldliness in most of the schools and the infidelity in many colleges and universities! Dancing has become a part of the course of instruction in some public schools, fashion and foolishness pervades not a few private schools, and, however much many may oppose militarism, the disposition generally now is to make military training compulsory. It is the fashion now. People who wish to educate their children to the greatest advantage and usefulness feel greatly grieved that such worldliness is to be forced upon their children and the spirit of the world driven into them, and they have no other recourse except to build schools in which these things do not exist and in which gentleness of manner, real refinement, true culture, and all that is useful and good will be taught, and, so far as possible, all that is worldly and wicked will be left out.

The need and demand for such schools is great and growing greater. This is the reason for such liberal responses to these calls for funds to improve and to enlarge David Lipscomb College.

We state the progress of the work in order to show the friends and supporters of true education how much more money is needed to complete this work.

Let every one "talk up" this work and put forth the energy and effort to make the rallying week—August 24-31—a full success.

Send your contributions and pledges to Prof. H. Leo Boles, David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn.

A House Needed on the Farm of the Tennessee Orphans' Home.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Our readers have already been notified of the fact that it has been deemed best to hold the farm of the Tennessee Orphans' Home and to use it in a way that will serve the interests of the Home. The farm needs much improvement, and in order to make this improvement it is necessary first to have a house on this farm for the tenant. The directors convened on June 14, 1919, and passed a resolution that a good farmhouse of six or seven rooms should be built, to cost not exceeding three thousand dollars.

Brother W. W. Gant, who contributed eight thousand dollars to the purchase of the farm, will furnish as much as fifteen hundred dollars toward the crection of this house, Sister W. W. Gant has also proffered to give one hundred dollars for this improvement. The directors have also agreed to be liberal in the matter of raising the necessary funds. Of course, while we are raising three thousand dollars for this improvement, the orphans must still be fed, clothed, and educated. We will need our regular fund for taking care of the orphans and the amount necessary to erect this building in addition. We have also found it necessary to get an additional matron, in view of the fact that at last report we had sixty-seven children in the Home, most of these children being from four to seven years of age. Children of this age require considerable attention; therefore, the labor of caring for and properly looking after them is heavy. The management of the State Charities commends the manner in which the finances of this Home have been managed and the number of children cared for. There are many people wishing to put their children in the Home, but the room that we now have and our resources for caring for them will not allow us to undertake to care for more children at the present time. Since October 31, 1917, to date, we have cared for one hundred and fifty-three children in the Home. We have returned to parents and placed in family homes within that time eighty-six children. We now have in the home sixty-seven children.

This is a work in which all can engage without any protest or without any mental reservation. Any one who will not have fellowship in housing, feeding, and clothing orphan children must think meanly of himself. After the weary march of life is over and the last battle has been fought and the great victory won, it will be delightful to hear the Master say: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me." It is a great opportunity that every Christian has to benefit himself and to improve his own spiritual condition.

We are stating the facts in order to take our readers into our confidence, and also to give them an opportunity to contribute to this institution as the needs of their own souls require. No one should regard this as begging, for it is not. Christians who refuse fellowship in such a work will soon die the spiritual death, if not already dead. As we are going to need more funds to carry on the work successfully, we are emphasizing this fact to our readers, because we have never known them to fail to meet the demands of this institution. We believe that they will meet them promptly and cheerfully so soon as this call is made. A number of brethren, competent and fitted for such work. have been selected to look after the building of the house and to protect the interests of the institution. All funds should be sent to John W. Fry, treasurer, Columbia, Tenn. We would be glad to have you contribute whatever amount you wish. We will ask the churches to make an offering for the Home on the first Lord's day in July. In making this offering, please do not forget that we will need at least three thousand dollars in addition to the amount that we have been receiving. "Let every man give as he purposes in his own heart." Don't forget the date-the first Lord's day in July.

In acknowledgment of our last remittance to the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, we have received the following letter:

Dear Mr. Lipscomb: We are inclosing our official receipt in acknowledgment of the generous contribution of one thousand dollars from the readers of the Gospel Advocate. We appreciate their generosity and thank them for it. Also kindly accept our warm appreciation for your own personal cooperation. Sincerely yours, H. C. JAQUITH.

A late report from the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief reads:

Apart from the two great burned districts of Constantinople, almost all of whose inhabitants are absolutely dependent upon charity, fifty thousand persons are fed daily in the soup kitchens alone. No charitable organizations have money enough to aid all the deserving who come to them. Conditions in many places in the interior are much worse than in the city.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners

Don't wait for a statement. Look at your label; and if your subscription is in arrears, send us your renewal.

S. M. Jones, of Beamsville, Ontario, Canada, will begin a meeting for the Dunlap congregation, at Duck River, Tenn., on July 13.

William P. Walker wishes to secure a good song leader for the first two weeks in July. Address him at Route 4, Clarksville, Tenn.

From M. A. Creel, Hanceville, Ala.: "J. H. Horion and I are in a meeting at Cullman. The attendance is as good as we expected. Pray for the success of the meeting here."

Tweive members were added to the Foster Street congregation, this city, during the first week of A. B. Lipscomb's meeting. Seven of this number were baptized, one coming from the Methodists.

E. S. Jelley writes from India: "Petros Sasane and others report that there were three baptisms at the Varkhede pligrimage. I have been offered passage and shall doubtless leave my children and start in from three to six weeks."

H. C. Shoulders makes the following report of money received for the Lexington (Ky.) work: "Previously reported, $2,383.99; church at Lynn, Ind., by Andrew J. Skinner, $24.55. Many thanks to one and all who have contributed to this great cause."

From Mrs. T. J. McRae. San Francisco. Cal.: "J. M. McCaleb, recently from Japan, was with us on June 8 and preached two good, interesting sermons. The outlook for the church is very encouraging. Remember our new address—Richmond Hall, corner Fourth Avenue and Clement Street."

From James E. Laird, Campbell, Mo.: "The meeting at Bragg City closed on Sunday, June 15. One person was baptized and ten brethren and sisters promised that they would begin meeting regularly for worship on the first day of the week. I will begin another mission meeting at Cotton Plant next Lord's day."

From Carl Burcham, Columbia, Tenn., Route 8: "I want to hear from all the boys I knew and met in the Lord's-day services at Camp Gordon. Some of us were together only a few times; others of us were together much. But I want to hear from all of them—those who were sent to other camps, those who were sent to England, and those who went to the front. Write to me at Columbia, Tenn., Route 8."

From Joe L. Netherland, Miami, Fla.; "The work here continues with a steady increase of interest. One young man from the Methodists was baptized last Wednesday night, a young lady was buried with her Lord in baptism to-night, and another (a father) from the Methodists is to be baptized to-morrow night. I will be back in Tennessee In a few days, and have time for one meeting the latter part of July. Then I go to Texas. Write me at Yuma, Tenn."

The Surgeon General of the United States has sent us a copy of a booklet entitled "To-day's World Problem in Disease Prevention." This booklet is a nontechnical discussion of syphilis and gonorrhea, and was prepared by Dr. Stokes originally for distribution to the preachers of all churches throughout the United States, but is now offered free to all who are interested. Requests for the booklet should be addressed, "The Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service, Washington, D. C.," and should state that the publication desired is a copy of "To-day's World Problem in Disease Prevention."

From Alonzo Ault, Shadyside, Ohio, June 8: "Brother Dasaro opened another mission to-day. He had in attendance fifty young people. The brethren at Shadyside have taken this up and are going to help him teach. If other congregations would come to his assistance and would support him financially so he could use his time entirely in this work, it would be more encouraging and his work would prosper. Please ask the brethren to help out in this cause. We should be willing to give something for the cause of Christ—he gave so much for us. There will be a report of this work sent in each month, so that the brethren will know what he is doing."

From E. Gaston Collins, 507 West Clinton Street, Huntsville, Ala., June 14: "I am on my way to Oneonta, where T. C. King and I are to begin a meeting to-morrow. Last King and I are to begin a meeting to-morrow. Tuesday night R. A. Largen, of Fayetteville, Tenn., closed a thirty-days' campaign in Huntsville-two weeks in West Huntsville and the remainder in Dallas. At West Huntsville eight were baptized and five restored. At Dallas sixteen were baptized, twelve restored, three came from the Baptists, and four came forward who never reported for Brother Largen is a forceful speaker, though not baptism. the most logical. He has a way of drawing people to him. all his own. It was estimated that from eight to ten thousand people heard him during the thirty days. On the last Sunday night at Dallas between one thousand and twelve hundred people were at the tent. With the exception of three or four services, the writer had the privilege of lead-Ing the song service."

From J. L. Hines, Meaford, Ontario, Canada, June 18: "E. A. Elam and wife, also Sister C. Chestnutt and two daughters, of Montgomery, Ala., were with us three or four days last week, having come here from the 'June meeting' at Beamsville, Ontario. They were a streak of Southern sunshine in the Northern clime. There were eight Americans present at one of our services. So the 'June meeting' and the Meaford services were a mixture of all kinds of things (those who were present will understand what I mean). Brother Elam preached three fine discourses for us, and the whole church was edified and built up in the faith. I would that we had more such men, men who are content with 'what is written.' Brother Elam was at Meaford nineteen years ago, and many who greeted him then have passed to the other side. He left for Toronto on June 14 to spend a few days, and intends to go from there to Rochester, N. Y., for a meeting. May God's hand be with him there. I am in a good meeting at Griersville, Ontario, One baptized to date. Pray for us."

From A. A. Bunner, Waverly, W. Va., June 14: "Since coming out of the hospital at Parkersburg, W. Va., I have been engaged in one of the most interesting meetings of my life at Horseneck, W. Va. A crowded house of the most intensely interested hearers have greeted us at every session of our meeting, and people young and old are almost nightly responding to the invitation of the gospel. We expect to close here with a large and an enthusiastic congregation of disciples of Christ. We have had additions from the Baptists, Methodists, and the Christian (New Light) Church. Up to this date there seems to be no abatement in the enthusiasm and interest of the meeting. My son, A. A. Bunner, Jr., is assisting me in the meeting. My son, and has preached two or three times, to the satisfaction of the brethren and congregation. He is bidding fair to make a strong worker and preacher in the church of Christ. I will report fully the results of the meeting at its close. The harvest indeed is plenteous, but laborers of the true type are few. Pray the Lord of the harvest to send more laborers of the right kind into the great harvest of neverdying souls,"

From J. D. Patton, Bessemer, Ala.: "For thirty years I have been regularly and continuously engaged in teaching singing schools, conducting normal musical institutes. training classes and choruses, and singing in protracted meetings when not engaged in my regular line of work. During this time I have had pleasure in editing and compilling seven gospel song books, also second place to editor in chief of seventeen books, making a total of twenty-four which I have had part in arranging and publishing for a large and appreciative constituency. My work of teaching, etc., has covered some seven or eight Southern States. and for twenty years my time, for the most part, has been engaged ahead for three or four years. The past year or so I have discouraged the demand on my time to teach regularly as I have done for so long a time, preferring a change of work, during the spring of year, to that of singing in meetings. In this connection I wish to state that I very greatly appreciate the interest brethren have shown in their effort to engage me to sing in meetings, as I have received many calls from different parts of Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Texas. But they wait to extend the call within a week or so for the meeting to begin, and not a few times have I been called by telephone to come the week following, and once or twice I was wanted at once. Owing to previous engagement, I could not in either case accept the work, however much, as I assured them, I should like to have done so. I should be pleased to sing in meetings next March, April, and May, and possibly in June; but those wishing my help will please write me early in the year, otherwise I will be engaged and cannot go when called."

By MRS. LOUISE GULDLIN SIMENSON

In the Kindergarten Children Are Taught Such Virtues As Obedience, Kindness, Orderliness.

A garden is a place where a plant receives the nurture it needs for its development, the proper amount of heat, light, and moisture. So a kindergarten may be thought of as an inclosure where each child is supplied with the right conditions for its development—no forcing nor pushing, just a natural unfoldment of life.

Considering how much a child learns during his first six years, how important it becomes that he should be supplied with just the right material and the most intelligent supervision!

All the virtues are developed in kindergarten. The first and most important one for a child to learn in early life is obedience. We mothers know how difficult it is to establish this habit. Now the kindergarten believes that a child may be led into obedience without being forced into it, and it uses many devices to strengthen the habit of obedience during the early years.

One of the ways in which kindness is taught in the kindergarten is to have the children prepare and give gifts at Christmas and Easter, Valentine's Day, and May Day.

Courtesy is developed through games and stories.

The habit of orderliness is started by requiring the children to put their playthings away neatly when they are through with them, and they instinctively acquire a sense of order from the orderly procedure followed in the plays and games and work.

The stories used in kindergarten are such as all children love to hear. They are written by experts in child study, and prepared and told in an interesting manner. While they are always amusing and delightful, they also contain a vital truth which sinks deep into the subconscious mind, imperceptibly teaching the children some important moral or ethical lesson. We mothers little know how much of the courtesy, cheerfulness, and gentleness which our little ones seem naturally to possess may be traced back to some impressions made upon their plastic minds through these stories, Kindergarten games strengthen and develop the muscles and develop fairness, service, and appreciation of the rights of others. Some of the games draw the child's observation to the workaday world about him, awakening an appreciation of what the farmer, the miller, the grocer, the baker are doing for all of us, and thus arousing the first dawning sense of responsibility in regard to the work of the world. These games foster and develop gratitude, a trait lacking in many persons.

The music and songs of the kindergarten appeal strongly to the child. All that the child feels within, he must be given frequent opportunity to express without; for, as Freebel says, even affection may die in a child if not properly nourished. The following song is part of a game in which the children play they are gathering flowers for father's birthday:

THE FLOWER BASKET.

Weave the little basket, fill it up with posies.
Roses from the garden, blossoms from the wood.
With our birthday wishes, with our songs and kisses.
Give it to the father, dear and kind and good.
With smiles and with singing.
Our gift we are bringing;
But love is the treasure
We give without measure
(Emily Huntington Miller.)

A child feels a great deal which he cannot express in words. Froebel noted the restlessness of the little child and his constant use of his hands. He, therefore, devised a series of occupations appropriate to this mental stage. Ella Flagg Young said recently that the child mind, to be trained efficiently, must have much emotional as well as purely academic or intellectual experience. She spoke of the industrial work of the school as giving this in its most wholesome form, and said that every time the child's hand grasped a tool with which he might work out an idea he had an emotional impulse that benefited him. Now the child in kindergarten is given material and tools and allowed to work out his own ideas. Thus the powers of imagination and creativeness are kept alive instead of being allowed to die out, perhaps never to appear again, as is the case with so many people.

Such construction work has helped my children greatly; for, after they come home from kindergarten, they always want to make things, and if I supply material, appreciation, and interest in what they are doing, they pass many busy, happy hours during the afternoons in severe winter weather when it is too cold to play outdoors. It has developed their ingenuity to a remarkable extent, until now they see possibilities in almost everything.

For instance, from the cards found in milk-chocolate packages they cut out the pretty houses and barns, mount them on stands, and make villages.

They cut away one end of a gelatin box, put gables on the other end, and cut doors and windows in the sides.

From oatmeal boxes they cut out the figure of the man, and also cut out the letters for making little words or learning the alphabet.

In a picture book which they had themselves colored and become tired of they found pictures of a wolf and some flowers. These they cut out and mounted. On an old calendar they found a picture of a little girl resembling Red Riding Hood, which they also cut out and mounted. Thus, with the wolf and the flowers and the little girl, they were able to picture out the whole story, all from materials which would otherwise have been destroyed. I think it is their kindergarten training which has developed such ingenuity in the children.

Awakening.

Ask not why nor whence it came,
If come it will,
But nurture well the little flame,
And bid, "Be still,"
Thy questionings.

The wise men followed out their light,
And—lo!—behold,
They found the Christ that holy night,
The Christ forefold
By prophet kings.

The light shall kindle in thy sout,
And all mankind
[papel thee seek a better goal,
Where thou shalt find Thy Christ divine.

If thou but in the silence dwell,
And list a while;
God shall whisper, "All is well,"
And his sweet smile
Be thine.

Report from Japan.

BY SARAH SHEPHERD ANDREWS.

January.—From the church at Belzoni, Miss., $10; through I. B. Bradley, $50.

February.—From sisters at Donelson, Tenn.. $1; church at Belzoni, $10; through Miss Straiton, $8; through Brother Bradley, $50.

March.—From Brother H. T. King, $10; David Lipscomb College Church, $22.50; through Brother Bradley, $50; through Miss Straiton, $3.25; church at Belzoni, $7.

The above donations were gratefully received and have been acknowledged.

There were eight baptisms at the Kamitomizaka Church on the first Lord's day in April, and there are to be several more next Lord's day. It was indeed a happy thing to hear the good confession of these eight people and to see them baptized into Christ in this land of superstition and idolatry. Two of this number were the keeper of an umbreila shop and his wife, who keep shop quite near the meetinghouse. When we first began passing this shop, there was a god shelf, as is seen in almost all shops; but this morning when I called, I saw no gods on the shelf. The man said his wife had been quite ill, but they were very thankful that the Lord had given her health again. Another of this number was a dear girl friend whom I have been interested in for a long time, but whose mother, a devout Buddhist, refused to allow the girl to go to church or be a Christian. On account of the daughter's attentiveness to her mother through a long illness, she, at last, gave her consent, and the girl is happy. Beginning next Sunday, this girl will help in the Sunday school at Kamitomizaka: Another one of this number is a member of my Bible class. Below is a letter from this student, dated March 26; shortly before he was baptized:

Dear Friend Miss Andrews: I am afraid I took up too much of your time this afternoon. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for your instructive speech and warm reception.

Now I ask you to answer my question. I will begin with my spiritual changes. When I was eight or nine years old, I was baptized by the orthodox church, owing to the fact that my parents were believers of that church. As I was only such a little boy, I did not see into the heart of the church, but all that I knew then was the existence of God and the resurrection of Christ; but as I grew older and became possessed with discretion, I began to feel dissatisfied with the sect, though I thought Christianity the best of all religions. And I wished to enterinto the church which is vital and active, coming from the true source, and which would give me the key to the doubts in which I was buried, and some of them are still unconvinced. But I think you will kindly explain them gradually. Since I happened to go to the church, perhaps by the direction of God—it was July last year—I have begun to cherish some holy idea in my mind, and it came to pass that I heard your speech about baptism to-day, when I felt the dawn of true faith break out in my heart, which had been surrounded by darkness and sadness. The shadow of night of sin was swept away and everything within and around me was filled with the light of dawn. How happy I am! And I wish to enter into the church of Christ which comes from the true source. But to fulfill the righteousness, what shail I do? Because I have been baptized already. Have I to be rebaptized? Please teach me what I ought to do. I will be much obliged if you will reply before Sunday.

Again thanking you for your cordial reception and good teaching, and expecting from you happy tidings.

Yours truly, Tsuyoshi Kaji,

I give the above to show that people in Japan want the truth. They do not want sectorianism. Here is another example of this fact: A few days ago a student came to talk Christianity. We talked for about two hours, and I got so Interested I forgot to serve tea, as the custom is in Japan. When he started away, I excused myself for being so rude, and he said: "That is all right: I can get tea anywhere, but I certainly can't get what you have been giving me anywhere." He further stated that his friends, too, were not satisfied with sectarianism, nor do they want man's ideas, but just what the Bible teaches.

Divorce in the United States.

One marriage in nine ends in a divorce. This statement is based on figures compiled by the Bureau of the Census recently made public. Excluding South Carolina, where all laws permitting divorce were repealed in 1878, the three lowest divorce rates in 1916, for which year returns are now complete, are shown for the District of Columbia, North Carolina, and New York, where the rates were 13, 31, and 32 per 100,000 of population, respectively. The highest rates were returned for Nevada, Montana, and Oregon, which show 607, 232, and 225, respectively. In all States except Maine, West Virginia, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Colorado, the divorce rates were higher in 1916 than in 1906, In 31 per cent of the cases in 1916 the divorce was granted to the husband, while the husband's rate in 1906 was 67 per cent. Desertion is shown by the figures to have been the cause for about 38 per cent of the divorces. Among other leading causes were cruelty, infidelity, and failure to provide. Such figures drive the serious-minded to ask whether the American home is disintegrating.-Christian-Evangelist. 0 0 0

The League of Nations.

A tremendous effort is made to confuse the question of the League of Nations. Some persons are treating the subject very unfairly by assuming that the point of issue is whether we shall have a League of Nations. That is not the question at all. The real questions are: What sort of a league shall we have, and, second, shall it be included in the peace treaty? To note the last question first: We believe that careful consideration will convince most people that the two things are entirely separate. We have been at war. Peace terms are most important for the protection of the world against Germany in the future, and to secure some reparation for the awful barbarisms committed. Now these questions of peace have nothing whatever to do with a League of Nations. That may concern future wars, but not the present. Unnecessary complications are always to be avoided. Success is usually gained by taking one thing at a time. It has been a great misfortune that the attention of the world has been turned away from the proper conditions of peace to talk of a League of Nations. The statement that the league was necessary to enforce peace is utterly fallacious. The terms of a treaty can be carried out by the nations that make it. Commissions can be appointed from the allies to do everything that it is proposed a League of Nations shall do, without complicating their own relations or affairs. commissions have been found necessary with the proposed league. The commission on reparation, for instance, deals with one of the most important subjects in the treaty. The only purpose of mixing the League of Nations with the peace treaty is to get a different sort of a league from what the allies would otherwise consent to adopt. This is not democracy, but kaiserism .- Journal and Messenger, Sayings of Elihu Root Before the Senate Committee Investigating the Leak.

Senator Smith, of Arizona: "In view of what has been said here, I would like to know whether it was a wise or an unwise thing to do, if the President had solemnly agreed with the others at the table, France, England, Italy, and Japan, that this treaty, during the process of its formation, should be kept secret, and, at their suggestion and request, solicitation, if that be true, he did agree that it would not be made public in the United States—under that condition, do you think it was incumbent upon him at any time or proper for him to have placed the treaty before the Senate of the United States or the Committee on Foreign Relations?"

Mr. Root: "Senator, I do not think it was legally incumbent upon him to send the treaty to the Committee on Foreign Relations or to the Senate. He is the constitutional judge of that. I would be deeply impressed by the effect of any agreement made by him with other countries about when he would send the treaty to the Senate of the United States. He must himself be the judge of that, I should think. But, Senator, my view is that of course there was an understanding about not publishing it. That is implied in the course of the negotiations. You cannot negotlate with a man who is going out to blat everything that is said and done-out on the street; but when the negotiations had gone to the point of placing the document in the hands of Germany, the other party to the negotiation, and that party having the right to make it public and exercising that right, It was no longer secret and could not be made so by any agreement with all the powers on earth. But I do not want to discuss the President's action. He exercises his constitutional power, and I do not want to criticize him or discuss him."

Senator Williams: "It is not a part of his duty as a negotiator to do that [confer with the Senate about peace negotiations]?"

Mr. Root: "No, that is his business-to form his own judgment."-Christian-Evangelist.

Mr. Taft and the League of Nations.

Former President William Howard Taft has evangelized the United States in the interest of the proposed League of Nations. He closed his last tour on June 7 at Albany, N. Y. There has never been a more distinguished, able, or unselfish service rendered the peace movement, which means the real progress of the race, than by the work of Mr. Taft. He has shown himself a great, unselfish citizen—an American too large for mere party lines when large issues are involved. We hear many people saying these days that the ex-President deserves fine recognition by his nation, and the people may find a handsome way in which to express it.

In his closing speech at Albany, Mr. Taft warned business men especially to examine arguments against the League of Nations covenant. Because, he declared, if any substantial amendments were made by the United States Senate to the treaty and they were not subsequently ratified by the other signatories, the United States would be in a state of war with Germany, while Germany would be at peace with the other nations and in a position to trade with them.

The "four great steps of progress" occasioned by the league, Mr. Taft summarized as follows: "Limitation of armament, the provision by which members of the league undertake to respect and preserve territorial integrity and political independence of all its members, the clauses in which provision is made for the settlement of differences between members of the league by arbitration or mediation and a covenant of the nations not to begin war until machinery for settling differences peacefully shall have been tried, and "open diplomacy."

Are not these movements needed above all others to-day?

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

By S. H. Hall

"That No Advantage Be Gained Over Us By Satan."

"That no advantage be gained over us by Satan" are the words of the peerless apostle to the church at Corinth. He had just been instructing the Corinthian brethren as to the importance, the absolute necessity, of his and their fully and freely forgiving the erring brother from whom fellowship had been withdrawn, which brother had repented and was about to be swallowed up with overmuch serrow. "Sufficient to such a one is this punishment inflicted by the many," declares Paul. The fact that this church stood as "one man" in the withdrawal doubtless had much to do in bringing this fornicator so quickly to repentance. Often the withdrawal from the disorderly utterly falls of its purpose, so far as saving the one withdrawn from is concerned, because of some of the members sneaking around and telling the brother he has not been treated just right, that the church was too hasty, that more time should have been given for him to think and meditate; and thus a spirit of resentment is created in him, and rebellion and stubbornness crowned fully as his masters. Satan has not only gained the advantage of the one withdrawn from, which made the withdrawal a necessity, but he has also gained the advantage over other members when they stand not wholly in the act of withdrawal, but eat and drink and keep company with the disorderly as they formerly did, and speak criticizingly of the withdrawal. Such are in danger of having the blood of the disorderly to rest upon them in the judgment. (See Ezek. 3: 18-21.)

Most certainly is it true that Satan can gain the advantage over the church and some brother be withdrawn from without just and scriptural grounds. The utmost carefulness and prayerfulness should ever be exercised here; and if the church has a heart that is right with God, and the withdrawal was done wholly and solely in the spirit in which our Lord teaches us to do it-viz, for the good of the one withdrawn from-it will be willing for the fullest investigation to be made by impartial brethren, that any mistake may be discovered and corrected. While we have no specific directions here, so far as I know, in the Scriptures, the very spirit and tenor of the religion of our Lord make it a matter of course. We have wandered far from the teaching of Christ and very close to the pope of Rome when we assume that our every act is infallible and beyond inspection and criticism. Then, if we really love the disorderly, if there is room for even a doubt of the righteousness of the withdrawal, we will be glad to have the grounds of the withdrawal carefully and prayerfully gone over by unprejudiced souls who seek the good of all and the continued welfare of the church of the living God.

But if the brother withdrawn from repents, let us forgive—yes, let us so forgive him that there can be no question, no doubt, about our doing so, "that no advantage be gained over us by Satan."

When Has Satan Gained the Advantage?

It matters not who you are, what your claims are, and what people believe you to be, whenever Satan succeeds in leading you into sin by getting you to disobey God by stopping short of doing all he says or to transgress his will by going beyond his teaching, Satan has gained the advantage, and he holds the advantage so long as he keeps you in the position into which he has led you. The important question to you and to me, my brother, is: Has Satan, at any point, gained the advantage? If so, shall he hold it? Here we should continually examine ourselves to the end that Satan shall never gain and hold the advantage over us.

To illuminate the thought, suppose a brother sins against you. Satan has gained the advantage over him, else he would not have done so, would he? But has he not gained just as much advantage over you, if you take not the language of Christ In Matt. 18: 15-17 and do exactly what it says? And suppose you go and talk to him, just you and he alone, and fall to settle the trouble, and stop there. Has not Satan gained the advantage in that he has led you into disobedience, a stopping short of doing all the will of God on the subject? Certainly he has. But suppose you take two brethren with you after your first going and falling, and he hears you not still? Then, if it is not referred to the church in the final effort to settle it, Satan has gained the advantage. And if it is taken to the church, and the brother who has sinned against you hears not the church, Satan has gained the advantage over the church, if the whole church let not the disorderly be unto them as a "heathen and a publican." If not, why not? Why not get well fixed in your soul an intense hatred for the devil, such hatred that you detest the idea of Satan's getting the slightest advantage of you? Is it not possible to have developed in you such a hatred for the devil that it makes it easy for you to do the hardest things just because of the consciousness that you are keeping the devil from getting the advantage? I sometimes wonder if some brethren believe there is such a thing as Satan. There are no signs of their hating him, no sacrifices made to keep him from gaining the advantage over them or the cause of Christ as a whole. I wonder if it were because Peter was afraid brethren would forget there is a devil that he thundered in their ears: "Be sober, be watchful: your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." (1 Pet. 5: 8.) And some are liable to ask: "Why the necessity of watching, if the 'devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about?' Does it not seem that he would be observed, if he thus walks about?" Well, brethren not believing much in the devil's existence, they seem not to recognize him. He has recently walked among us "as a roaring lion," as the great "war god," and people did him obeisance, thinking it was patriotism.

Yes, there is a devil; and the sooner we become grounded in this faith, the quicker will we try to keep him from gaining the advantage over us, and see that he does not.

Does Obedience Sometimes Blind Us to Our Transgression?

Here I am constrained to ask the question: Does obedience sometimes blind us to our transgression? I think it does. Take Nadab and Abihu, for instance. (See Lev. 10: 1, 2.) Were they not obedient when they "took each of them his censer, and put fire therein, and laid incense thereon," and offered it before the Lord? Did not God command them to offer incense before him? Were they not in the act of obedience when they did this? I hardly think they could be accused of disobedience. But they certainly allowed themselves to transgress, go beyond the instructions received, when they offered fire Jehovah had not commanded. If God had not slain them, do you not think there would have been great danger of the obedience they had rendered meeting the demands of conscience and thus blinding them to their transgression? I am sure, kind reader, that there are thousands living in transgression who are blinded to their transgression because of the little obedience-or much, as to that matter-they have rendered to God.

And think of Ananias and Sapphira. (See Acts 5: 1-11.) They lied; and not a very bad lie at that, if we judge things by the way the world looks at them. They wanted to appear as liberal as others. While our Lord had not commanded any one to sell all he had and bring it and place it at the apostles' feet, many were doing so. (See Acts 4: 34-36.) Ananias and Sapphira, seeing this, wanted the impression made that they were doing as much as others; so they sold a possession, and brought a part of it and laid it at the apostles' feet, keeping back a part of it. It would have been acceptable to our Lord if they had brought only a part and gave it as a part, and not sought to make the impression that they were giving all the possession brought. Verse 4 shows conclusively that this was left with them, that no demand was made that they give all. Well, they were killed for this lie, But suppose God had not slain them. Do you not suppose the much they did give and their many other acts of service and worship would have soon caused them to forget that lie, and that they would have gone on to their graves with this against them? Doubtless the fact that Jehovah saw this, that Satan had the advantage and would hold it till death, had something to do in his letting them die then and there as a warning to others. If there had been any hope of a reformation, I hardly think our Father would have allowed the end to come then.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay: "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fig. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

How many in the church to-day are held captives by the devil and do not know it! It seems to me that the following language of Paul has this especially in view: "And the Lord's servant must not strive, but be gentle toward all, apt to teach, forbearing, in meekness correcting them that oppose themselves; if peradventure God may give them repentance unto the knowledge of the truth, and they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, having been taken captive by him unto his will." (2 Tim. 2: 24-26.)

I think Satan has gained the advantage over any of us-decidedly sowhen he succeeds in leading us into a state of disinterest in any good work. We are commanded to "bear fruit in every good work." (C61. 1: 10.) Do you know of any good work, my brother, in which you take no interest? "Forsaking not our own assembling together" is a good work. (See Heb. 10: 25.) Here Satan has gained the advantage over many church members, and he holds it. They need to come to see this, to the end that they may be saved. Laying by in store upon the first day of the week, giving of our money for the support of the gospel, is a good work. (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.) Satan has gained the advantage over many here, and is holding it. And on and on I could name duties that should be seen in every Christian life, which are not seen in some because Satan has gained the advantage. Many take no interest in many of the good works others seek to be fruitful in, just because the devil has planted in their hearts a doctrine that makes them believe the good work is wrong; hence, they are led by Satan to oppose it, to make war on it, doubtless, as Saul before his conversion, thinking they are doing God's service. With such Satan's satisfaction must be supreme.

How much we need to study God's truth, to pray to him without ceasing, to be exceedingly anxious that God have his way with us, to the end that Satan gain no advantage over us at any time or place!

EVER SALIVATED BY CALOMEL? HORRIBLE!

Calomel Is Quicksilver and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Calomel loses you a day! Do you know what calomel is? It is mercury -quicksliver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones, and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated, and all knocked out, and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel, just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and cannot salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children, because it is perfectly harmless and does not gripe.

Shall We Grasp the Opportunity?

BY J. G. MALPHURS.

What a splendid opportunity! Just the very place for such an undertak-The beautiful green lawn and inviting shade trees join hands with all nature to welcome every little wall that casts a wishful eye for a home. The buildings, whose walls once echoed the Master's teachings and whose windows gave vent to the melodies of worshipful hearts, open wider, if possible, their doors of opportunity and welcome just such little children as Jesus seemed most interested inthe fatherless, motherless, and homeless. The location on a splendid farm, two miles from Bowling Green, Ky., can hardly be better. Just where young men and women learned lessons from the Master, "the pattering of little feet " is now heard, and childish hearts and voices in praises to Jesus have changed the scene.

We can make it better. I speak of the Potter Orphan Home and School. It was my pleasure to visit this institution recently and to see the splendid work that is being done; but to see and know what Brother Oakley could do, if we would be as charitable as we ought, makes me think some one should speak aloud, and in no uncertain voice, in behalf of this orphanage. There are enough students of Potter Bible College to see that this lacks nothing. Of course. sometimes we need to be told our duty. You know that you would like to see this place, which was such a blessing to you, and which these little ones have inherited, so to speak, better equipped than any Masonic or Odd Fellows' orphanage. We, more so than other Christians (while it is a duty and privilege of all), should give it our support.

Do you ask, "What do they need?" Because the equipment of Potter Bible College was turned over to the Home, some may think all has been done and nothing more in the equipment is needed. A number of things are sorely needed, and it is a shame, and I might say a disgrace, for them to be denied. Christians, thoughtful Christians, those who love Jesus and his commandments, should respond.

- 1. They need a better lighting system, electric lights more suitable. Just think of the trouble, inconvenience, and danger of so many little fellows having to use coal-oil lamps, when a few loving Christians could supply the proper lights. Who will send to this fund?
- 2. A library for small children is badly needed. They have none. Let Christian people send good books to this Home. You may have some books that your child will never use any more; here is a place for them.

Nuxated Iron Physician Warns Against Danger Of Accepting Substitutes—Says That Ordinary Metallic Iron Preparations Cannot Possibly Give The Same Strength, Power and Endurance As Organic Iron-Nuxated Iron

UXATE

As Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron

The remarkable results produced by Nuxated Iron and its widespread sale (it being estimated that over three million people inmunity are today using it) has led to the offering of numerous substitutes, and these physicians mentioned below say that health officials and doctors everywhere should caution the public against accepting substitutes for Nuxated Iron, as these substitutes instead of being organic iron may be nothing more than a metallic from compound which may in some cases produce more insem than good. Those who feel the need of a strength am blood builder, should go to their family doctors and othain a prescription calling for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and present this to their druggist so that there may be no question about obtaining the proper article. But if they do not wish to go to the trouble of getting a prescription for Nuxated Iron then they should be sure to look on the label and see that the words NUXATED IRON are printed thereon.

There are thousands of people taking iron who do not distinguish between or-printed thereon.

There are thousands of people taking iron who do not distinguish between organic fron and metallic iron and such persons often fail to obtain the vital energy, steength and endurance which they seek simply because they have taken the wrong form of iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength and see how much you have gained.

Manufacturers' Note: The widespread publication of the above information has been suggested by Dr. Junes Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevie Hospital (Outdoor Department) New York and the Westchaster County Hospital; Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author and othergase that the public imay be informed on this subject and protected from the use of metallic fron under the delusion that it is Nuxated Iron at lasty something as good as Nuxated Iron, Nuxated Iron is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists. [Inlike the older, inorganic fron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the feeth, make them black how upart the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they well refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

3. A church or a few individuals could make the girls happy by sending them a good piano. Some of the girls want to study piano music, but they have no instrument, save one that was worn out by the college.

4. There should be more regular and systematic fellowship. The Home is not doing half as much as it could do, because the support is not sufficient. The third floor is not occupied, and children are being turned away for the lack of funds. Brother, you need to know this. Why put your money into lodges and then complain that the church will not do its duty, when such a chance faces you? Shall we, who claim to have the truth, the light of the New Testament, let Catholics, Odd Fellows, and Woodmen boast of their benevelent works, while we let such a chance pass by? You know, I know, and God knows, that we can do better; we are not paupers; let us do it willingly and gladly. There is happiness in the doing.

Fort Smith, June 12.-Last Lord's day was a great day with us at Park Hill Church. We had an all-day servtice, with dinner on the ground; as song service in the afternoon, with special quartet singing by the "Slater Quartet." Three of my brothers and my sister were here to help in the singing. My mother was also with us. A large crowd was in attendance, and we had a time of rejoicing throughout the day. Brother J. M. Harrison, of Poplar Bluff, Mo., and Brother G. R. Mathews, of Independence, Kan., two of our preaching brethren, were with us. Brother Mathews preached at the evening service and Brother Harrison preached on Monday evening. These men should be kept busy. Call them out, brethren. We also had with us Brother Stegall, from Dallas, Texas, There was one confession at the evening services Sunday. We met on Wednesday evening to attend to the baptizing, and I made a talk, and four more made the confession and five placed their membership with us, making ten additions in all. Our new house has been completed, but we have not seated it yet. It will cost us five hundred and fifty-three dollars to seat the building. The brethren have made great sacrifices in building, but they will not quit the job until we have seats to accommodate our audiences. Pray for us .- W. W. Slater.

If you want to do some mission work, come to Washlugton and you will find plenty of it; but if you cannot come in person, you can help the few Christians who are here, and who are making a great sacrifice to build up the cause and save souls. To prove to our brethren that we are doing what we can to raise the money for a house of wor-ship, as well as to feed the hungry and clothe the naked, our Lord's-day's contributions range from forty to three bundred and fifty dollars. Yet there are only a few of us, and we live of our dally labor.-W. S. Long.

Florida.

Lake City, June 19 .- For eight days, beginning on June 8 and closing on June 15, I labored in the mission field of Alachua County, near Micanopy, in a schoolhouse. In the midst of dense sectarianism, where prejudice against the truth that saves never ran higher; yet, as a result of patiently and persistently sowing the good seed of the kingdom, three souls were baptized into Christ and two wanderers came back to walk closer to God. A few scattered brethren worship at a point about eight miles away, and the faithful ones among them encouraged the work by their presence and prayers. A movement was started to build a meetinghouse there, and I pray that this may be done, thus making it possible to more effectively spread the gospel in that community. This is a fine farming section. Christians who anticipate moving to Florida will make no mistake in investigating this part of the country. Interested parties should write C. C. Brown, Micanopy, Fla.; E. T. Austelle, Reddick, Fla. or D. R. Mixon, Reddick, Fla. These are faithful brethren, and they will be glad to correspond with any loyal Christian who desires to locate in Florida. I shall leave on Saturday for Taylor County, where I am to hold two meetings.—J. O. Barnes.

Illinois.

Paris, June 16 .- Last Sunday I went to my old home church. I went six miles on the Interurban car, then walked two and one-fourth miles. Fifteen persons, in all, were present. That church was started ninety-three years ago the fourth Sunday in last April. It is weaker now than ever. have preached there over four hundred times and over fifty funerals, but of late years I do not get there often. It is the only loyal church in the county where I can preach now .- J. J. Vanboutin.

Kentucky.

Hopkinsville, June 18 .- We had a good hearing Sunday, with one added by commendation. The work is growing. Brother F. W. Smith will be with us on July 7.—J. H. Hines.

Mississippi.

Belzoni, June 17.—I am now in a meeting at Belzoni. The attendance is small, but the interest and attention are very good. We have only a few brethren here, but they are true to the cause of the Master, not the kind that give up when everything is not smooth. salling,-J. P. Lowrey.

Tennessee.

Cleveland, June 16.—The services were good here yesterday. While quite a good many were out of town, yet there was an increased attendance of young people at the Bible school. Brother Holder was at Antioch and Union Grove, and Brother Phillips was at Ooltewah, with one added at his services. He begins a meeting at Athens this evening. There is no congregation there, but several members. George W. Farmer.

Texas.

Itasca, June 16 .- We had good meetings here yesterday, though the crowds were unusually small on account of rain and sickness. Because of my going to school this fall, the work here will be open for another man for all his time. We need about four more preachers here in Hill County. This is a good field for some man who is not atraid of work .- L. E. Carpenter.

Childress, June 16.—Yesterday was a great, glad day for the church at Childress, also at Kirkland. We had a good, helpful service in the forenoon, and in the afternoon we took our vocal class of some sixty odd children to Kirkland, where we en-gaged in singing for two hours. The Kirkland brethren promised to repay by all coming up to sing with us on the afternoon of the first Sunday in All the folks around are invited to be with us. Brother Lawson will begin our meeting on the evening of July 3, and we are working hard to get ready for it.-Tice Elkins.

The Christian College.

BY BATSELL BAXTER.

There are two ideals of Christian colleges. One is that of a school taught by men who are thoroughly consecrated to the service of God, men who love the gospel and are in the work for the good they can do. Such men will have great influence for good, and will do all in their power to lead, by teaching and example, the young folks placed with them into high ideals and Christian service. Such men will bless those boys and girls who have the good fortune to be associated with them. With them. Christianity will mean more than everything else, and the Christian environment of the school will be closely watched after. They will be careful that everything that will help in the proper development of the student is provided, and they will be just as careful that everything that has hurtful tendencies will be got rid of as far as possible. Their aim is not to make money, but it is to make noble, pure, consecrated lives. The other ideal is that of a school whose only claim to be called a "Christian college" is that it is supported by the brethren. It is taught by men who are nominally members of the church, but the spiritual side of the school is not cultivated. The main idea is to get plenty of patronage and good salaries. Everything which makes for advancement in the texts is provided as in the other school, but little attention is paid to hurtful tendencies so long as they draw students, and especially are they allowed to go along if their removal would lose students. In short, this ideal is of a school that is just like the commonest schools around us. Such a school is a counterfeit, and the more dangerous because it constantly poses as genuine. Let us hope that such an ideal of a college work may never take root among us; and if it ever does, let all true Christians work hard for the real Christian college. Let us constantly watch the ideals and the lives of the men who teach our boys and girls. When we find that true, Christian men are giving their lives to provide real, true education, let us hold up their hands so that they will have plenty of backing, and the good work can go on without any hindrance.

The Italian Mission.

BY W. L. BEEVES,

I notice a statement from Alonzo Ault, of Shadyside, Ohio, in the Gospel Advocate of May 29, page 512, in which he reveals one of the best opportunities of which I know for those who wish to do "mission work."

It seems to me that any man or woman who even makes the claim to be a member of the church of Christ should be awakened with a burning desire to give liberally to sustain this able Italian preacher, Brother Dasaro, so he can spend his time teaching the two hundred or more Italian school children of which Brother Ault speaks.

In the course of a few years Brother Dasaro might prepare a number of those Italian children so that they could and would preach the gospel to other Italians in this country. That is not all I count this a great opportunity to do missionary work-foreign missionary work, at that-in the years to come. I am sure it is the most successful way to eventually send the gospel to Italy. Who would be better to educate and train up to take the pure gospel to Italy than a native Italian? The idea is to give liberally to support Brother Dasaro so he can devote all of his time to teaching the Italian children at Shadyside and Bellaire, Ohio.

The world needs the gospel. That is the only remedy for the evils now raging more or less everywhere. Men cannot lay aside God's remedy for these evils and substitute human laws of any sort that will do the work so much needed.

All the good there is in any code of human laws consists of those principles couched in them which were taken from the gospel of Jesus Christ. If I had the means, I would love to pledge a year's support right now for Brother Dasaro; but I cannot do so, for I am trying to teach the gospel as best I can to Americans here in North Carolina, and, as a matter of course, I cannot follow some secular calling by means of which to secure money to give much; however, my wife and I give as liberally as we can well afford.

I cannot see why any man professing to be a Christian does not love to give to the best cause in the world. Any man should give much more to God's kingdom than he gives in taxes to support human governments.

Just the taxes levied by Casar belong to Casar, but "the earth and the fullness thereof" belong to God. Man himself belongs to God, and so all he has belongs to God. To whom does he owe the most—to the kingdoms of men or to the kingdom of God? Many so-called "Christlans" need converting to Christ.

Christ said for us to give Cesar his belongings, which he (Christ) taught are taxes; and to God, those things which belong to God. (Matt. 22: 15-22.) Christ also taught through Paul, "Ye are bought with a price" (1 Cor. 6; 20); and he further adds: "Be not ye the servants of men" (1 Cor. 7: 23). "All are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." (1 Cor. 3: 22, 23.) Christ said give God the things which are his. Then give yourself and all that you have into his service.

Send money for this Italian mission to Brother Alonzo Ault, Shadyside, Ohio.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, case and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a thoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes It is said that its sale there during the last twelve mouths has increased fully three-hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y. says that all who wish to know about 1 shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

A Good Example.

BY F. E. EXUM.

On Sunday, May 18, at the Ryman Auditorium, in Nashville, Tenn., was splendidly demonstrated what can be accomplished by even a spasmodic cooperation of a part of the congregations of Nashville and vicinity. On that day several thousand dollars was subscribed to make up part of the fund for building a new girls' dormitory at the David Lipscomb College. The members realized that this is a good work and needs to be done, and It is refreshing to see how they are working together to raise the money. Now why should not such cooperation be put on a permanent and systematic basis and applied to the church as a whole for the purpose of sending out and maintaining missionaries and evangelists? In no other way can the mission of the church to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature ever be carried out. A systematic cooperation of the congregations comprising the whole church would develop enough power to sweep forward and make great progress toward carrying the gospel all over the world during the present generation. It is a strange thing that we have fallen in with the idea that in this twentieth century, when the civilized world is large and the number of inhabitants runs into hundreds of millions, we are bound hand and foot by being permitted to use only such facilities and expediencies as the anostles found it necessary to use in the beginning of the first century, when the civilized world was small and the number of people comparatively few; but this seems to be the idea a large part of the membership have in mind. I am glad to say, however, that those to whom I have talked on the subject agree readily that the principle of cooperation among the congregations of the church is the one thing that is lacking. This is not something new; it is as old as the New Testament, and older; but we have simply neglected to make use of this one principle that would carry us forward at a rapid rate in carrying out the great commission. not need a league or a separate organization of any kind. What we need is for the elders, the leaders of the congregations, to do more leading and get together in a series of meetings and bring about the tying of the whole body compactly together in conformity with the words of the apostle Paul in Eph. 4: 16 and Col. 2: 19. This would bring into practical use the great potential strength of the church chiefly through increasing the contributions and then centralizing the surplus of all the congregations to send out and maintain evangelists and missionaries. Every member would do his work as a Christian, as a member of the church of Christ only. When the apostles found it expedient to appoint men over a specific work, they did it, and the leaders of the church should do the same thing

The King's Hall Congregation. Louisville, Ky.

BY B. A. CRAIG.

We celebrated our first anniversary at King's Hall on Sunday, May 25. While this is a new congregation, we rejoice to know that many of the members are excellent leaders and teachers. One attending our Sunday service is impressed with the spirit of unity that prevalls, and the desire of every member is to "know nothing but Jesus Christ, and him crucified.' I visited in the homes of these loyal brethren for a few days, and nowhere have I received a more cordial welcome. Our prayer meeting was conducted at the home of Sister Hodgen. and stirring lessons were given by Brethren Rubel, Taylor, and Jean. Brother Kinnard led the service, and did his work in an admirable manner. We are planning big things for the coming year, and we feel sure that much and lasting good will be accom-

I here give a report of our work for the year ending May 25, 1919. The work at King's Hall began with fortyone members. Six members were added during the year, making a total of forty-seven members. There were no losses during the year. One young man came from a local congregation last Sunday, desiring to worship with the brethren who have courage to defend the truth. We have preaching once per month; preaching two Sundays per month after September. Total contributions for the year, $822,50. Balance at end of the year, $350. Building fund created, at end of the year over $300. Entire contribution to building fund one Sunday each month. We contributed during the year to foreign missions, home missions, soldiers' Bible fund, and to the worthy poor.

Lemons Whiten and Beautify the Skin! Make Cheap Lotion juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most re-markable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth, so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness, and tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener, and beautifier,

Just try it! Make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms, and hands. It should naturally help to whiten, soften, freshen, and bring out the hidden roses and beauty of any skin. It is won-derful for rough, red hands.

Your druggist will sell three ounces of orchard white at little cost, and any grocer will supply the lemons.

Work With Isolated Brethren.

BY C. C. MERRITT.

You perhaps noticed my notice to the isolated brethren and wondered how I intended to help them in so wide a territory.

Well, in the first place, I am getting many letters from Canada to the Gulf, and from California to North Carolina. These letters reveal the need of many workers, and they also show that there are many fine opportunities right at our doors that are being overlooked.

Here is my plan: First, I get the names of the old home congregations of those isolated parties and the names of the congregations near by. I also find out if there is a good preacher near them who may be secured for the work for a time at those places. I then write to all these and get the plan started for the work just as quickly as possible and then turn my attention to other places.

There are many of these places where the old home congregation, with a little help from the congregations near by, can wholly finance the work in some of these places without the assistance of others. There are other places where preachers have nobly lent their help without the promise of finance, and where there are no hopes of any, except from those who see this, whose heart the Lord may open to give to this work.

Such men as these are already helping to get this work started: C. D. Moore, M. D. Baumer, F. L. Cox, E. C. Fuqua, W. F. Cox (Canada), and O. S. Boyer. Others are ready to help when the places are in their reach.

I need to get into communication with some preachers in Mississippi and Louisiana who are willing to get out into some of these places. Write me and tell me who you are and what you will do. And, of course, if I do not know of you. I would like to have some reference as to your work and standing.

If you are a prospective home missionary and are willing to go out into bare fields and declare the whole counsel of God in the face of many and strong obstacles, lovingly and meekly to work, let me hear from you.

If you can help only in a financial way, send your help to me, and I will forward the same to the workers and report all this in the papers.

The reason some men do not succeed is because their wishbone is where their backbone ought to be.— Selected.

Fifty Against Two:—It is not reasonable to expect two weeks of outing to overcome the effects of fifty weeks of confinement. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla along with you it refreshes the blood, improves the appetite, makes sieep easy and restful.

Cannot Praise This Remedy too Highly

THE WAY ONE LADY FEELS AFTER SUFFERING TWO YEARS

Judging from her letter, the misery and wretchedness endured by Mrs. Charlle Taylor, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 144, Dillon, S. C., must have been terrible. No one, after reading her letter, can continue to doubt the great healing power of PE-RU-NA for troubles due to estarrh or catarrhal conditions in any part of the body. Her letter is an inspiration to every sick and suffering man or woman anywhere. Here it is: "I suffered two years with catarrh of the head, stomach, and bowels. Tried two of the best doctors, who gave me up. I then took PE-RU-NA and can truthfully say I am well. When I began to use PE-RU-NA, I weighed one bundred nounds. My weight now is one hundred and fifty. T cannot praise PE-RU-NA too highly, for it was a Godsend to me. I got relief from the first half bottle, and twelve bottles cured me. I advise all sufferers to take PE-RU-NA."

As an emergency remedy in the home, there is nothing quite the equal of this reliable, time-tried medicine, PE-RU-NA. Thousands place their sole dependence on it for coughs, colds, stomach and bowel trouble, constipation, rheumatism, pains in the back, side, and loins, and to prevent the grip and Spanish Flu. To keep the blood pure and maintain bodily strength and robustness, take PE-RU-NA.

You can buy PE-BU-NA anywhere in either tablet or liquid form.

Thorp Spring Christian College.

BY W. P. LEDLOW.

On May 22 the college closed its forty-eighth year's work. This was a very pleasant and profitable year in every way. Many who attended the closing exercises pronounced them the best they had ever seen at Thorp Spring. Our special teachers had worked hard and the results were apparent to all. The school and community join in an invitation to all old students to be with us at the opening of the next term. September 16, 17, and 18 will be "Old Students' Reunion." We want all who can attend to be present, regardless of what year they attended the school. Please writeus now in case you can come. This will be a great event, and you will enjoy it.

Our new catalogue will be ready to mail in a few days. We want to mail a copy to all who are interested in our work. It will be much larger and better than usual. Write us for a free copy.

Brother J. O. Garrett will remain with the college through the summer, and will be glad to assist any one who may wish to rent or buy property at Thorp Spring. He is directly in touch with the work and can render the assistance needed.

The cause of Christian education seems to be greatly on the advance. Our schools must succeed—all of them. We have none to spare. It is hoped that the brethren will send their children to Christian colleges rather than to sectarian institutions. The work at Thorp Spring Christian College is standard and is accepted and fully credited by all the best universities. The junior college is the best place in the world or a person to do the first two year of university work.

Make Best Use of Time.

Every man has the same chance in the use of time. One may be faster than another, but there are usually compensating conditions that equalize things. Not always to the swift is the race. Many a tortoise has beaten hares in life. It is the use of the hours that counts. Make the minutes hum with well-directed industry and you have a profitable life in the making. It is every man's right to make the most of himself. He does this by his use of the minutes.—Exchange.

When human ties are slackened, and earthly kingdoms rock,

And thrones and scepters crumble like potsherds in the shock.

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his quarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

Moore.

Brother Gilbert Fletcher Moore was born on April 27, 1876, and died, of influenza, on January 18, 1919. He had been married twice. His first wife was a Miss Sanders. several years ago, leaving four girls, of which three survive their father. They are: Mrs. Alma Hayes, of near Troy, Tenn.: Mrs. Earla Moore and Vera Moore, of Johnsonville, Tenn. In 1909 he was married to Miss Metle Mabra, and two children blessed this union. Besides his wife and five children, he leaves an aged father, a stepmother, and several brothers to mourn his death. He obeyed the gos-pel several years ago and was a faith-ful Christian until his death. We miss him at the Lord's-day services, he was so much help in every way. He is gone from us, but his memory still lingers with us. Funeral services were conducted at the home by Brother T. M. Carney, after which the body was laid to rest in the Troy cemetery.

Erwin.

Jesse N. Erwin was born on July 1873, and departed this life, March 12, 1918, at his home in Nashville, Tenn. He was born and reared in Marshall County, Tenn., and joined the Presbyterian Church while young. A few years later he obeyed the gospel at Cross Roads, in Bedford County, Tenn., under the preaching of Brother W. H. Dickson, He gan making public talks soon afte he was baptized. He began hole tized. protracted meetings about eightee ars ago and til declining continued in the work health would not I known him to work ery day and so and three preach every night for weeks at a time. I kn. Brother and Sister Erwin and wor sped at Reid Avenue Church, in ashville, for seven years. He was loyal to his duty, and was always ready to minister unto the needy, to visit the sick or any one in distress. He leaves a wife and one son to mourn his death. May the Lord bless them and be with them in their bereavement. May the Lord help the son to be a pure and useful Funeral services were ducted at the Reid Avenue Church by Brother Moore, assisted by Brother Derryberry and Brother Lawson. The remains were laid to rest in Mount Olivet Cemetery. M. C.

Smith.

Simeon Smith was born on December 3, 1831, and died on March 5, 1917. He was the son of Wiley and Polly Smith. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Cazzy, and this union was blessed with fourteen children. Three died when small, eleven reached manhood and womanhood. Two have died since grown. But all eleven became Chrisgrown. But all eleven became tians. Nine of them have families, and, so far as I know, all that are old enough are Christians. Brother Smith was "born again," born into God's family, under the preaching of Brother D. R. Rivers, and lived the Christian life for over forty years, when he was called to "come up higher." David said of the death of such men as Brother Smith: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." To his wife he was all that God requires; to his children, a loving tather. As a citizen and neighbor, he was faithful and true. He bore his sufferings patiently. He died in the home of one of his faithful children, where his every want was filled. He leaves a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but his aged companion (now more than eighty-two years old) will miss him more than all. His body sleeps in the cemetery at Hohenwald, Tenn., in the county of his birth. R. T. Sisco.

Brown.

Mrs. Mollie Owen, daughter of the late Harold Brown and wife, was born on June 28, 1860. She was added to the church of Christ white quite young, and lived a consistent, Christian life till death. She was married to J. N. Owen in December, 1883. this union were born one daughter— Myrtle—and three sons—Ernest, Homer, and John. Her married life was a very happy one; but sorrow comes to all. On April 12, 1910, death took the father and husband from his famthe lather and husband from his family. Her sorrow was great, but was deepened by the death of three of her children—Homer, in 1911; Ernest, in 1912; and Myrtle, in 1913. Thus in the short period of four years she was deprived of her husband and her three oldest children, leaving her to fight life's battles alone, with her youngest son, John, only thirteen years of age; but, being clad with "the whole armor of God," she met those battles bravely until she was called to her reward, Thursday, March 13, 1919. She leaves, to mourn their loss, one son, four brothers, two sisters, a number of relatives, and a host of friends; but we sorrow not as those who have no hope. May the bereaved ones be comforted in the thought that she sweetly rests in the Savior's loving care. May they realize that it is one tie less to bind them to earth, one more to bind them to heaven. May the blessings of Him who "marks the sparrow's fall and hears the ravens when they cry" rest upon us all. Funeral services were conducted by Brother Coleman Overbey, of Murray, Ky. Short talks were made by J. O. and H. A. Brown (brothers of the deceased) and the writer (a cousin), and her body was laid to rest in the Mount Zion graveyard, near Buchanan, Tenn.

Sister Elizabeth Irvin Smith, the faithful and devoted wife of Brother Sam Smith, of Mooresville, Ala., quietly and peacefully fell asleep at the home of Miss S. B. Sawyer, in Albany, Ala., who was to her a faithful friend and a competent and trusted murse on February 7, 1919. For two nurse, on February 7, 1919. For two or three years Sister Smith had been more or less subject to pain, and, seeming to realize the approach of a serious attack of which she seemed from the first to be apprehensive of the result, she requested her husband to bring her to the home of her friend and nurse. This request was cheerfully granted, and for her all was done that could be done; but God knew best, and for some purpose which we know was for the best he took from Brother Smith his wife, and from three sweet little children—Elizabeth, Sam, Jr., and Jack—their precious mother. It was the writer's pleasure to be present with them in this dark hour and to bear with them as best he could this burden, and to comfort them with our Father's promises to the faithful and true. The Beamsville June Meeting.

SY J. L. HINES.

This meeting was held in Beamsville, Ontario, Canada, by the church of Christ, June 7, 8, 9.

Brother L. E. Huntsman opened the meeting with a short address of welcome, which was followed by short talks by all of the preaching brethren on the value of such meetings and how such gatherings inspire us on to greater activities.

At 7 P.M. on the first day Brother Sam Whitfield spoke on "The Christian Warfare," taking as a foundation the seventh chapter of Romans. He showed that there is a continual struggle between the fleshly man and the spiritual man. He was followed by Brother O. E. Tallman, who spoke on "Wait for Jehovah," showing that we should not become overanxious or discouraged because things do not come to pass as we think they should, but should press forward in the great work and "wait for Jehovah," for he will accomplish his end and fulfill his promises.

At 10 A.M. on the second day Brother Ralph Schell spoke to us on "Evangelization," declaring that we are obligated to evangelize the world, and that the churches of Canada should more closely cooperate in sending out and supporting the evangelists.

At 11 A.M. we had communion service, followed by a discourse by Brother Daniel Sommer on "The Completeness of the Church." In his driving-the-point manner he showed that the church is God's "missionary society," "endeavor society," "educational society," "benevolent institution," etc.

Brother E. A. Elam spoke to us at 3 P.M. on the subject of "God," showing the attributes of God; that "he is the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever;" and, hence, just as hear to his people to-day as in the olden times; also that he overrules all things and all peoples for his glory and the good of those who serve him.

Brother Elam also spoke at 8 P.M. on "The Power of the Word," taking the first chapter of Hebrews as his basis. He showed that God speaks now through his Son, and gave the eight or ten reasons stated in Heb. 1 why we should hear Jesus. He extolled Jesus as "King of kings and Lord of lords;" and emphasized God's own conclusion: "Hear ve him."

At 10 A.M. on the last day there were short talks by the following brethren: O. H. Tallman, O. E. Tallman, H. D. Jackson, Fred Sommer, L. J. Keffer, A. E. Firth, Daniel Sommer, and E. A. Elam, on "Evangelization." Every one emphasized the truth that we should have the evangelistic spirit and that the work should be done, but the time allotted to each speaker was so short that the New Testament order of cooperation could not be fully set before the assembly.

At 3 P.M. Brother A. E. Firth gave us a short address on "Contending for the Faith," showing that we should fear God, have the courage of our convictions, and present God's message and not ours.

He was followed by Brother L. J. Keffer, who spoke on "Christian Liberty or Freedom," proving that we were loosed from the tyrannical power of the devil, and thus freed from his law, but that we are bound by the law of the great Monarch—the Christ. So, because we have been loosed from a tyrant, we should not do as we please.

The writer addressed the assembly at 8 P.M. on the subject, "Let Brotherly Love Continue,"

Brother D. H. Jackson concluded the meeting with an address on "We Do Not Well" (2 Kings 7), showing by the acts of the "four leprout men" that if we have the gospel. Christ, we ought to tell others.

Brother Daniel Somr Beamsville and preach during the week ar June 15. Brother E. Meaford with the wr for us three nights. is glad to have suc Elam to come this joyed his powerful remained in every night er Sunday, lam came to nd preached church here as Brother and all ens.

The Prayer of the Upright.

I have seen a lark rising from his bed of grass and soaring upwards. singing as he rises and hones to get to heaven and climb above the clouds; but the poor bird was beaten back with the loud sighings of an eastern wind, and his motion made irregular and inconstant, descending more at every breath of the tempest than it would recover by the vibration and frequent weighings of his wings, till the little creature was forced to sit down and pant and stay till the storm was over; and then It made a prosperous flight and did rise and sing as if it had learned music and motion from an angel as he passed sometimes through the air about his ministries here below. So is the prayer of a good man .- Jeremy Taylor.

You Do More Work.

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

Edifying as the Need May Be

W

The Defiled.

It is true that "to them that are defiled and unbelieving nothing is pure." Our habits invariably determine the purity or impurity of our thoughts. No man who is defiling himself with immoral women can ever retain the proper conception of his mother's purity. Such a man lies when he professes to honor the chastity of his wife or sister. He is incapable of high and noble thoughts; and even though he may provide for his mother and the other members of his family, his action is prompted, not by a genuine love for them, but to serve as a cloak for his wrongdoing. His thoughts are really no purer than those of the wicked woman who tempts him. We cannot differentiate the actions of the body from the thoughts of the mind. The apostle Paul makes this point clear and emphatic by asking a question: "Know ye not that your bodies are members of Christ? shall I then take away the members of Christ, and make them members of a harlot? God forbid." (1 Cor. 6: 15.) He draws a fine distinction between the sin of fornication and other sins when he explains that "every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body." (Verse 18.)

Love of Money.

The love of money is undoubtedly the most vitiating force in the world to-day. This is not peculiar to our age. It was true in the apostolic age. That is what Paul means when he calls this unholy love the "root of all evil." We meet people every day who have faithfully resisted the other temptations to which the flesh is heir, and yet who have fallen an easy prey to avarice. They come to the house of worship with the same spirit of Ananias and Sapphira-bringing only part of the offering, and all the time seeking to make the impression that what they bring is all that God could possibly expect or require of them. Their selfish habits have put the impure thought in their minds -the thought that they are giving all they can affordan impure thought, for it is one directly contrary to the teaching of the Master, who commended the good woman who gave all that she had, and who said: "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over, shall they give into your bosom." (Luke 6: 38.) It is false economy when one attempts to save money by cutting down the part or share of his prosperity that should be set aside for the Master's use; and if you have been attempting to save anything in this way, you have been losing all the time, and to you the message comes as it came to Simon: "Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray the Lord, if perhaps the thought of thy heart shall be forgiven thee." (Acts 8: 22.)

I know a certain lawyer who has made many thousands of dollars by his practice at the bar. The largest amount of this money has been made dishonestly-that is, by suborning witnesses and influencing the minds of weak jurors and stooping to do many things that high-minded attorneys would not even consider for a moment. His work along this line is so notorious that when a rich man gets into trouble the first advice he receives from his friends is: "Don't worry over it; just see --, and see him first." But now this lawyer is growing older. Soon his mental powers will wane and the sun of his fortune will suffer an eclipse; and so they are trying to make the impression that he is charitable. I have heard it said that in many cases he has made large contributions which were not publicly acknowledged because those who received them were ashamed to let the people know the source of the contributions. A forcible illustration of how a man's love for money has not ruined his own life, but has cast its frightful odium over the entire community,

We can take it as a God-given principle, and one that is sadly illustrated over and over again in the history of the human race, that when one becomes entangled with the lusts of this world, whether the liaison be with men or women, with money or merchandise or books, so long as the union is impure, impurity of thought and purpose will be the inevitable result. Such a person cannot possibly see things aright. His whole mind and conscience is defiled. He must give up the sinful habits which have vitiated his thought or else he is lost. And sooner or later the awful hour will come when God will give him up unto a reprobate mind to do those things which are not fitting.

The Unbelieving.

But the apostle Paul censures the "unbelieving," and I am glad that he does; for there are so many people in the world who are not notoriously wicked enough to be called "defiled," yet at the same time they can truly be classified with the unbelieving. And in this category belong, I am sure, some of the smartest people, from a worldly viewpoint. All of the modern critics—sometimes called "higher critics"—that have sprung up like mushrooms within the last half a century must be identified with the unbelieving. All of these "smart Alecks" that are trying to pick flaws in the Bible and to find fault with the people Jesus died to redeem must clasp hands with Paine and Ingersoll and other infidels. There is no other place for them to stand unless it is with the defiled.

Nothing is pure to them, for they have taken up the study of the Bible, not with any pure thought to find the plan of salvation, but with an avowed intent to plunder and destroy the faith of other men. God does not ask us to swallow the Bible at a single gulp; he does not ask us to accept its teachings without deep investigation; but he does ask us to study it with the right motive in view. Those who study it in such a spirit shall know of the doctrine and it shall make them free. To those who approach its study with an unholy purpose and in a disrespectful attitude God sends a delusion, that they shall believe a lie. (2 Thess. 2: 11.)

The man who is ready to treat God's word with the same courtesy and the fairness he would give to an ordinary textbook need not entertain a single fear but that he will know the truth, and the truth shall make him free, and shall also make him pure. All the critics in the world cannot take away that man's religion. He has the power of purity behind it of which Lord Byron wrote:

Tis said that a lion will turn and flee From a maid in the pride of her purity; And the Power on high that can shield the good Thus from the tyrant of the wood, Hath extended its mercy to guard me well From the hands of the leaguering infidel.

"Every Word of God Is Pure."

"Every word of God," the wise man said, "is pure." (Prov. 30: 5.) The Christian should believe that statement absolutely, and he should supplement it with the declaration of the apostle Paul: "Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work." (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.) One who believes that has a pure thought about the Bible, and he will not be ashamed to read, teach, or accept any portion of it. You will never hear that person say that there are some portions of the Bible he is ashamed to read to his wife or to his children. Watch the person who makes that remark about the Bible. Be convinced there is nothing the matter with the Bible, but there is something seriously wrong with that man's thoughts. There are some portions of the Bible that are not always appropriate to read, but there is no portion of the Bible that any Christian needs to be ashamed of.

A man who has a pure thought of the Bible is going to insist that God's people stand for pure worship—a form that is unmixed with the teachings of men. He is going to be satisfied with the simple service prescribed in the New Testament—reading and prayer and exhortation, the Lord's Supper, singing of hymns, and the weekly contribution. That was good enough for his fathers, for those who gave up their lives for their religion, and that is good enough for him. He is going to be as careful and as painstaking in preserving the purity and simplicity of God's temple to-day as Moses was in building the tabernacle of old. He is going to give the very best of his time and his thoughts and his talents in teaching and preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ and raising the walls of Zion; and as surely as God rained manna from heaven, just so surely will be feed and take care of the pure in heart to-day. As surely as the faithful ones entered the promised land, just as surely will the plodding Christians enter into the everlasting kingdom.

"Who shall ascend into the hill of Jehovah? and who shall stand in his hely place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart. . . . He shall receive a blessing from Jehovah, and righteousness from the God of his salvation." (Ps. 24: 3-5.)

Establishment of the Work in Birmingham, Ala.

Editor's Note: In relation to the establishment of the work in Birmingham, Ala., Brother E. R. Barnes, of Montgomery, has written an interesting letter to Brother John T. Lewis. This letter is printed upon the request of Brother Lewis.

Mr. John T. Lewis, Birmingham, Ala.—Dear Brother Lewis: In the Gospel Advocate of June 19 was an article by Brother F. W. Smith regarding your work in Birmingham. In it he wrote: "Brother Lewis began work there many years ago with about as little promise of success as any man ever had. He broke ground, planted the seed, and patiently awaited the harvest, which came by and by."

Some two or three years ago an equivalent statement was made by some other writer in the Advocate who had held you a meeting—Brother Kurfees or Brother Elam, perhaps.

These statements go to make history, and they are incorrect. Hence my interest in them, for they are silent about one who labored in Birmingham and whose memory is dear to me.

My father, J. M. Barnes, organized a congregation in Birmingham in the 90's, I think. For a long while it met in an upstairs hall down town somewhere. I do not remember the name of any one of the number, but one man who took a prominent part was a policeman.

This congregation furnished the nucleus for the present membership in Birmingham, and I am almost sure the West End congregation is a direct outgrowth of it. My father, I know, went often to Birmingham after you began preaching there. He supported you with his influence.

Furthermore, J. M. Barnes and others of the older preachers preached in Jones Valley and along the Louisville and Nashville Railroad before you and I were born; also, they preached in Birmingham when it was only a small city.

You have done a great work in your city, for which you deserve credit. This letter is written, not in any spirit of censure or criticism of either you or Brother Smith, but to clear the records in our minds. I am writing Brother Smith along this same line.

With best wishes for your continued success in Birmingham for the Master's cause, I am, Sincerely,

E. R. BARNES.

Has God Established a Criterion by Which Man Is to Be Judged? No. 1.

BY C. NETTERVILLE.

That God has a purpose in all that he does certainly will not be questioned by any thinking man. It seems to me that a cursory view of his handiwork would convince the most skeptical of the truth of this proposition. It is simply unthinkable that He wrought without a definite object in view who made, fashioned, and controls the innumerable bodies composing this vast universe, whirling on their way at an incredible velocity, thereby making perilous their passage through space, if they were not guided by faithful hands directed by that inerrant wisdom possessed only by Him who framed them all and set in motion the forces that drive them on their endless journey with an accuracy so precise that not one of these untold millions interferes in the least with the course pursued by all the others. That he has not always revealed that purpose to man is an obvious fact. The reason for this is not "far to seek." The Christian religion is based on faith; and if man knew the reason why and the purpose wherefore everything was done that has been done for his salvation, there would be lack of room for that faith or trust in God which is required of him.

That God had a purpose in the creation of man would seem to be too self-evident a proposition to need argument or demonstration in its support. That he has not directly revealed that purpose to the human family militates not against the truth of the proposition. That a knowledge of that purpose is not necessary for man's salvation is reason sufficient why no revelation has been made on that point. That man, by the exercise of that reasoning faculty with which his Creator has endowed him, should arrive at a reasonable basis on which to found a rational conclusion as to what that purpose was, is nothing more than should be expected of inquiring man.

On a previous occasion I endeavored to show in these columns that God's purpose in the creation was to prepare material out of which to evolve workers in the government and control of this vast universe, and that special and peculiar qualifications are required of such workers. I think that by a similar course of reasoning I showed that the outstanding or preponderating characteristics which attach to such agents were implicit confidence in, and unquestioning obedience to, the divine will. Whether I succeeded in doing this to the satisfaction of my readers, I know not. Neither is it essential that I should have suceeeded in doing this. The outstanding fact that these qualifications are required of man is made very clear to my mind by a perusal of the pages of holy writ. And whether or not we comprehend the reason why this has been done cuts little figure in the matter, since "we walk by faith, and not by sight" (or knowledge). And as it is heaven's decree that man must be saved by faith, perhaps it was the part of wisdom for the Master not to reveal all that inquiring man would like to know.

If there is an effort made in the record of God's dealings with the human family to clearly demonstrate any one thing, to place any one thing beyond the peradventure of a doubt, it is the one fact that, to be an acceptable servant of the Lord, man must yield himself whole-heartedly to that service, and must demonstrate the fact that he relies unreservedly upon the wisdom of God and is willing to yield to him the fullest confidence and most implicit obedience in everything pertaining to man's salvation.

Do you think, O vain man, that you can circumvent the Almighty; that you can deviate just a little from what be has prescribed because you do not think it is a matter of any consequence? Do you think you can change immersion to sprinkling in the ordinance of Christian baptism, and change the subject from a believing penitent adult to an infant incapable of exercising its reasoning faculties? Do you say that you are not guilty of this (and yet you add to God's equipment a man-made institution to do the work assigned by the great Jehovah to a divinely appointed agency), and that you can add instrumental music to the prescribed order of worship, which he commanded you not? I say, do you think that you can render acceptable service to your Maker, complying with the divine will in the one instance and failing in the other? If so, I would suggest that you study carefully some instances given for our instruction in the history of God's dealings with man in matters of this kind, wherein men received God's disapproval for failures not so great as yours.

That so much pains has been taken by the sacred historians to record so many such cases in such minute detail is evidence sufficient that it is a matter of very great importance that man add nothing to and subtract nothing from what God wants done, and especially that he substitute nothing for any divine command or God-given institution. So particular was the great Jehovah in this matter that, when he gave the law to the Israelites through Moses, he said: "Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish aught from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you." (Deut. 4: 2.) And in closing his revelation to man, he said through the apostle John: "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book,' If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city. and from the things which are written in this book." (Rev. 22: 18, 19.) In speaking to us through the apostle Paul, he says: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.) "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope." (Rom. 15: 4.) "Now all these things happened to them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." (1 Cor. 10: 11.) Will you now, bearing these scripture quotations in mind, go with me to a few instances in God's dealings with mankind wherein men thought they might deviate just a little from the instructions given them by their Lord and Ruler, and wherein he administered unto them, in some instances, swift and condign punishment; in others. certain and unavoidable retribution? In Lev. 10: 1, 2 we read: "And Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took either of them his censer, and put fire therein, and put incense thereon, and offered strange fire before the Lord, which he commanded them not. And there went out fire from the Lord, and devoured them, and they died before the Lord." In 1 Sam. 15: 1-27, the writer says: "Samuel also said unto Saul, The Lord sent me to anoint thee to be king over his people, over Israel: now therefore hearken thou unto the voice of the words of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, I remember that which Amalek did to Israel, how he laid wait for him in the way, when he came up from Egypt. Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass. . . And Saul smote the Amalekites from Havilah until thou comest to Shur, that is over against Egypt. And he took Agag the king of the Amalekites alive, and utterly destroyed all the people with the edge of the sword. But Saul and the people spared Agag, and the best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them: but everything that was vile and refuse, that they destroyed utterly. Then came the word of the Lord unto Samuel, saying, It repenteth me that I have set up Saul to be king; for he is turned back from following me, and hath not performed my commandments. . . And Samuel came to Saul: and Saul said unto him, Blessed be thou of the Lord: I have performed the commandment of the Lord. And Samuel said, What meaneth then this bleating of sheep in my ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear? And Saul said, They have brought them from the Amalekites: for the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God; and the rest we have utterly destroyed. . . . Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the Lord, but didst fly upon the spoil, and didst evil in the sight of the Lord? And Saul said unto Samuel, Yea, I have obeyed the voice of the Lord, and have gone the way which the Lord sent me, and have brought Agag the king of Amalek, and have utterly destroyed the Amalekites. But the people took of the spoil, sheep and oxen, the chief of the things which should have been utterly destroyed, to sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in Gilgal. And Samuel said, Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams? . . . And Saul said unto Samuel, I have sinned: for I have transgressed the commandment of the Lord, and thy words: because I feared the people, and obeyed their voice. Now therefore, I pray thee, pardon my sin, and turn again with me, that I may worship the Lord. And Samuel said unto Saul, I will not return with thee: for thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, and he hath rejected thee from being king over Israel." A number of other instances could be cited, but I think that these are enough for my present purpose.

Do you think, my friend, that you could frame a better excuse or put up a better argument than those parties could for deviating just a little from the "will of the Lord?" Or do you say that these parties were under the "old covenant," which has been abolished? I grant you that; but the lessons designed for our instruction therefrom have not been abolished, as is evidenced by the language I have quoted from the apostle Paul.

"Reconstruction."

BY H. W. JONES.

Much has been written lately concerning "reconstruction," and I want to "say on" just a little here, please.

Many of the worldly-wise churchmen are contending that the church needs a general reconstruction, or should be so adjusted as to fit the new order of world reconstruction after the world war; and some of our own brethren of the school of "higher criticism" are advocating a compromise of plainly revealed truth in order that union of denominationalism may be promoted. They even go so far (wrong) as to receive unimmersed people into their ranks. The Christian Century recently approved a quotation in which a progressive brother said that "the supreme blunder of our pioneers was when they fixed upon 'baptism for the remission of sins,'" etc. Now, is not that going the limit in digression from the truth? (See Mark 16: 16; Acts 2: 38; 22: 16; 1 Pet. 3: 21.) And right here in Kentucky semi-infidelity and skepticism are fostered in "the College of the Bible" at Lexington, according to J. B. Briney and others of the progressive ranks! The idea of students "losing their faith in the Bible" while attending "the College of the Bible" is awful to contemplate! Surely these schools of "higher (?) criticism" need "reconstruction."

What does "reconstruction" mean, anyway? Let's see. The prefix "re" means "back, again, anew," etc. The word "construct" means " to set up; to build; to form; to make; to arrange," etc. The suffix "tion" means "the act of," etc. So the word "reconstruction" means "the act of rebuilding, or building again; to remedel; to form again, or anew."

Now, if I know anything about the Bible, the church has already been "built, set up, arranged," and fully "set in order" by the Lord himself. So, if the church needs any change other than its individual members' living closer and closer to the teaching of God's word, I do not know what it is. (Heb. 6: 1, 2.) No, the church, or body of Christ, does not need to be changed or "remodeled" one bit to suit or fit the requirements of the world after the world war. "Reconstruct" means "to remodel," and surely the church of the New Testament does not need any remodeling or forming anew. The entire plan or "model" of the New Testament church is perfect (or the Lord made a failure), and the faithful members of the church are "reckoned" as perfect, or righteous, by the Lord. (Rom. 4.)

So we see it is the world that needs "reconstruction;" yes, it is the world that should be so adjusted as to meet the requirements of the church, instead of the church being changed so as to meet the requirements of the world after the war, or any other time, as to that. The church should never, never compromise a single Bible truth to be popular with the world. The church should try assiduously to adjust itself to the teaching of the old Book instead of trying to adjust itself to the whims and fancies of the world for popularity's sake. For the church to compromise with the world (as Rome did) means ruination for both. But the church, or kingdom, has never been completely destroyed, and never will be (Luke 1: 32, 33), thank God; hence it cannot be changed, rebuilt, or remodeled to suit a degenerate world. "Ye [saints] are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be saited?" says the Savior. Yes, if the world is ever saved, it must be done in accordance with the demands of King Jesus; and his true followers are the only ones on earth to carry forward these demands of our heavenly King and see to it that Christ's will is done on earth as it is in heaven. But, in the face of all this, many of the professed followers of Jesus Christ are limping and halting in their vain efforts to carry the church on one shoulder and the world on the other. Restoration is needed here. (Gal. 6: 1.)

Now, amid these trying times without and discouraging conditions within the church, it certainly behooves "the faithful few" to preach the plain gospel of Jesus Christ with all their might and leave the results with the Lord. This is all the church can do with the approval of Almighty God. The gospel of Christ, without addition or subtraction, is all that can save a lost and ruined world. Any other course the church may take, such as catering to the world or to worldly-minded church members. only pleases Satan and leads to eternal ruin in the end. I know it is unpopular "to declare the whole counsel of God" to the world and to the church, yet this is the only safe course for the faithful ones to take. And-alas!in some places the faithful preacher of the gospel is almost, if not quite, alone in this glorious work of our Lord. It takes faith and courage and hope and love to work in such places as this. I have preached in places where only one or two or three were present to encourage the good work, yet the Lord was with us. I also remember preaching for a church in a "protracted meeting," and when I discoursed on baptism, showing in a respectful way that sprinkling and pouring are out of the question, a howl was set up by some outsiders who had kin and friends in that congregation, one worldly man saying he would not hear me again; and, to my chagrin, part of the church there joined in with the kickers, and so I have not been wanted there any more (by the slackers, at least). But this did not hurt me.

Again, I was preaching regularly for a large congregation in this county, and had the courage to condemn the public sin of working all day one Sunday, making molasses, by several members there, the elders and best members standing with me. And what was the result? Why, some of these sinners threatened to "get another preacher next year." I just told them to get one; that I did not want the job if I had to wink at public sins like that to hold my job. And think of it-all this happened after they had enjoyed the most prosperous year's work the church there ever had, near thirty being immersed and several backsliders reclaimed in our protracted meeting with them. Wonderful appreciation and encouragement by some! But I feel sorry for these rebels against God's government, for they have not rejected me, but they have rejected Jehovah. (See I Sam. 8; 2 Tim. 4: 1-4; 1 Tim. 5; 20.)

So the faithful ones have all kinds of sins and errors to contend with, from without and within; yet the faithful church needs no "reconstruction," as I see it. Let the faithful few continue to live right, disseminate the truth, feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and visit the sick. What the world and worldly-minded church members need is the pure word of God, without addition or subtraction. So let us give it to them respectfully, but "straight from the shoulder," without any compromise or "sugar-coating" about it, praying, in the love of God and lost humanity, that the word of God may have free course and that those ordained to eternal life may believe the same readily.

Where Did He Get It?

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

In the current issue of Word and Work, Brother R. H. Boll has the following to say: "All proposed unity that does not take for its basis all the teaching of God's word—holding all that is known, and providing for room and acceptance of that which may become known in the course of our study of God's word—any unity that depends upon the observance of human limitation of faith and teaching and does not stand upon all the truth, I say, is a false unity, sectarian in its nature."

The trouble Brother Boll has caused by his speculations is much to be deplored, and were it in my power I would gladly do something to set matters as they were in the past. But as that cannot be done, I want to protest against the course Brother Boll is pursuing in the matter. Read the above quotation again. Do you see what he is trying to do? I can see it. He is trying to make his readers believe he is being persecuted for finding out and preaching some new and wonderful truths, which the rest of the church has not found out. He intimates that some are trying to prevent his preaching truths which he has really found out from the study of God's word.

To one familiar with the circumstances it is clear that these peculiar doctrines of his are not truths. There is no proof for his doctrines, and in the very nature of the case there never can be. That is, he deals principally with the future as represented by certain symbols in Daniel and Revelation, placing his peculiar interpretation upon them. He may be a thousand miles off, and he cannot prove to the contrary. He may be right on some things, but no man under the sun can prove it. No one ever can know till time tells us. It is a serious mistake to call that truth which cannot be proven to be truth; and especially is it wrong to blame others for not accepting it, and accuse them of rejecting the word of God.

He says we must make room for "that which may become known in the course of our study of God's word." No one can object to that statement of the case. But what I do object to is the implication that he has learned these strange doctrines through the "study of God's word." He never learned them there. He learned these strange doctrines from men who do not even know the first principles of the doctrine of Christ. They can be proven to be wrong in their explanations of simple things like baptism—its action, design, subjects, etc. How, then, can any one be so cocksure that he is right in the interpretation of the symbols of Daniel and Revelation? How any man can follow off after such teachers and estrange himself from the soundest and safest teachers since the apostles is more than I can see.

Now, since he seems bound to continue these speculations at the cost of division of congregations and estrangement of the brethren, it seems to me he ought to be man enough to call the stuff his new opinions, or speculations, or even his prophecies, instead of calling them the truths which he found from studying God's word. For it is not truth, in the first place; and, secondly, he did not find it out by studying God's word; and if he had confined his study to the word itself, we never would have had this trouble.

In acknowledgment of our last remittance to the Polish Victims' Relief Fund we have received the following letter:

My Dear Mr. Lipscomb: We beg to acknowledge receipt of your check for five hundred dollars, representing a contribution from the readers of the Gospel Advocate to our fund. Please accept the expressions of our sincere gratitude and of our heartfelt appreciation for all you have done for us. We beg of you, if it is not asking too much, to thank, through the columns of your most worthy publication, all the generous people who have given such evident proof of their kind interest in the cause of Poland and in that of humanity. By the same opportunity I am sending you inclosed the translation of a letter which I have just received from my mother, Mrs. Paderewski, who is at present in Warsaw. I think it contains much interesting information, and this is why I take great pleasure in sending it to you. Most gratefully yours,

W. O. Gorski, Honorary Executive Secretary.

Mrs. Paderewski's letter describes conditions of intense suffering and makes a further appeal for quick relief.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Will you not make a liberal contribution for the Tennessee Orphans' Home on the first Lord's day in July? During the high cost of living more is required to feed an orphan. As the Lord has prospered you, will you not contribute for the orphan? Here is a splendid opportunity to help yourself and to quicken your spiritual life.

Christian Unity.

BY J. C. M'QUIDDY,

In the Gospel Advocate of March 6, 1919, I presented to our "young brethren" who are speculating the proposition for unity which we presented to them several years ago. I have always maintained and urged that, in order to enjoy Christian unity, Christians must walk in the light "as he is in the light," and that unity can be obtained only by believing in and obeying Christ. Near the close of that article I quoted this scripture: "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" To promote and maintain unity, opinions must be held as private property.

Division is the great curse of the church of Christ. Christ foresaw that division and strife would be the weakness of the church and destructive of the salvation of sinners. The church of Christ is "the light of the world" and "the salt of the earth." Christ prayed that his disciples might be one. He prayed not for the world, but prayed that all believers might be sanctified through the truth. He says: "Neither for these only do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word; that they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us: that the world may believe that thou didst send me." (John 17: 20.) Thus it is clear that, without that oneness among his children, the world can never believe that he was sent by the Father and that he is the Christ, the Son of God. Without this belief, which leads to the acceptance of Christ as Lord and Savior and to obedience to God through him, no man can see God in peace.

As God's people are required to give "diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," the apostles in their teachings condemned and warned against divisions and strifes within the churches as the cause of weakness and inefficiency, of defilement and corruption, which unfitted them for temples of the Holy Spirit; that disabled and disqualified them from saving their own members and from proving a savor of life to the world. That this is true is evidenced by the following scriptures: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.) "Now the God of patience and of comfort grant you to be of the same mind one with another according to Christ Jesus: that with one accord ye may with one mouth glorify the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 15: 5, 6.) "Make full my joy, that ye be of the same mind, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind; doing nothing through faction or through vainglory, but in lowliness of mind each counting other better than himself." (Phil. 2: 2, 3.) "Finally, be ye all likeminded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tender-hearted, humble-minded." (1 Pet. 3: 8.) "Only let your manner of life be worthy of the gospel of Christ: that, whether I come and see you or be absent, I may hear of your state, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one soul striving for the faith of the gospel." (Phil. 1: 27.)

This unity of the Spirit has no reference to the unity of denominationalism, as there were no denominations in the days of the apostles. The unity of denominations will never be and is not desirable. We learn from Eph. 1: 22, 23, that Christ is the head of the church: "And he put all things in subjection under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." Thus we see that Christ is the head of the church, which is his body. Again, the Spirit declares: "And he is the head of the body, the church." (Col. 1: 18.) So we see that the church is the body, and the body is the church. Hence, if we find that there is but one body, we learn that there is but one church. The Spirit has not left us in doubt here, but says: "But now they are many members, but one body." (1 Cor. 12: 20.) So in the days of the apostles there was but one church. It should be so, and is so, now, and all true followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, wherever found, are members of that one church, or body. Unfaithful professors, hypocrites, and the unregenerate are not members of that one body; but all who "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," all who are of one mind and who have the Spirit of Christ, are members of that one body. This is so clear and self-evident that it needs no further elaboration.

Since I seriously asked if the young brethren would, for the sake of unity, cease to propagate speculative teachings. the editor of Word and Work has published something on the subject of unity in the April, May, and June issues of his paper. In the April issue he says: "These men for whose unity exclusively the Lord Jesus prayed are those who had come to him, to whom he gave God's word, whom he cleansed, separated from the world, endowed with eternal life. The prayer is extended in verse 20 to include all those also who shall believe on him through the apostles' word. That he means by this true believers only, having the same essential qualification as the apostles. need not be mentioned. For the unity of these and no others did the Lord Jesus pray. It is evident, therefore, that in a union of the unsaved, unwashed, who are still of the world, or in an amalgamation of these with his own people, the Lord Jesus can have no interest; but as to the latter, is absolutely opposed to any such alliance." In the same issue of Word and Work he writes: "What shall we say? What can we do? If in that which was the church of Christ in the apostles' days, and which came into existence through their labors, a perfect unity could not be obtained, we cannot expect it now, nor need to be distressed if it cannot be accomplished or maintained." If it is impossible to have scriptural or perfect unity in the church of Christ, it is remarkably strange that the apostles nearly everywhere and almost all the time commanded Christians to "give diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 3.) The unregenerate, pretenders, and hypocrites are not in the church. Those who are carnal-minded and walk after the flesh are not Christians, and, therefore, are not in the church. The tares among the wheat which were sown in the field were sown in the world. "The field is the world." If It be not possible, as taught by the editor of Word and Work, that perfect or scriptural unity should be in the church of Christ, I do not see why the word of God should abound in teaching commanding and admonishing us to be of one mind. The very fact that the church at Corinth was divided over opinions and were agreed in faith proves that we can "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." The Corinthians had exalted their opinions of, and preferences for, the apostles to the position of essentials of salvation. This course always brings alienation and division and is the very course we entreated the editor of Word and Work not to pursue. I have too much faith in God and in Christ to believe that they would command us to be of one mind if it be not possible for us to be united. The editor of Word and Work must have lost sight of the true church as defined by himself when he put unregenerate persons and those who walk after the flesh, and factionists, in the church of Christ. A casual reading of the Word of God shows that the church is commanded to withdraw from those who thus walk disorderly. Such characters are tares, which were sown by the devil. The tares were sown in the field, which is the world. Therefore the unregenerate and carnal-minded and factionists are not in the church of Christ, and Christians are not expected to keep "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" with them. As it is impossible to make falsehood truth, vice virtue, and uncleanness purity, so it is impossible to unite the good with the bad. Righteousness has no fellowship with unrighteousness. Christians who walk by faith, and not by sight or opinion, may and do enjoy perfect unity. "In faith, unity; in opinions, liberty." While we do have in the church babes in Christ and full-grown men, yet they are one in faith while differing in ability and in temperament. But the editor of Word and Work, instead of agreeing to hold as private property things which he himself has said "are not strictly fundamentals," prefers to agitate these things, claiming that they advance to a truer standard of faith and life. Listen to him: "But that which should be a blessing to the church often becomes an occasion of disturbance, when, rather than to learn or to be corrected, rather than to admit that they do not know all there is to be known, rather than to advance to a truer standard of faith and life, some find it more convenient to cast out their brethren."

This is a severe accusation against his brethren. This indefinite, insinuating accusation reflects on the entire brotherhood and leads one to think that the editor of Word and Work is lacking in courage, humility, and piety. I must say that in all my experience I have never met a brother yet who claimed to know all there is to be known and who refused to advance to a truer standard of faith and life. I here call upon the editor of Word and Work to name the brethren who are egotistic enough to refuse to admit that they do not know all there is to be known and who decline to reach out after a stronger faith and nobler life. By all means, let us have the names of the brethren who, rather than do this, cast out their brethren. I know that the Highland Church in Louisville, Ky., for which the manager of Word and Work preaches, cast out two faithful brethren, claiming that fellowship was withdrawn from them on account of purely doctrinal differences. These doctrinal differences were only matters of opinion and speculation, which are no part of faith. If opinions are to be made a test of fellowship. I grant it is impossible to have Christian unity.

In my next article I shall show that it is scriptural to ask a brother to hold his opinions as private property, and that the man who forces his opinions into the church over the protests of brethren is the sinner and is responsible for the separation. The Bible requires all Christians alike to hold their opinions as private property.

Commending Brother Kurfees' Recent Articles Presenting the Teaching of the New Testament on the Responsibility of Churches to Do Missionary Work and on the Business Principles and Other Features of this Work.

BY E. A. E.

This is as short a heading as I can give to this commendation and do justice to the articles I would commend, and then I may fail. These are very timely and most worthy articles, because they are very much needed and because they present most clearly and strongly the teaching of the New Testament on the subjects discussed.

Some good preachers and not a few earnest congregations desire to do missionary work at home and abroad, but seem not to know how to cooperate in order to do it. Zeal without knowledge will do harm, and knowledge without zeal proves fruitless and sinful. When preachers and churches are zealous to cooperate in doing missionary and benevolent work, but do not know the New Testament way of cooperation, they are most likely to organize something not known to the New Testament. Zeal and knowledge must go together. The Jews, "ignorant of God's righteousness, and seeking to establish their own, did not subject themselves to the righteousness of God" and were not saved. (Rom, 10: 1-3.)

Brother Kurfees' articles most clearly point out the New Testament cooperation of churches. When all the features of this subject have been studied, as he says, with the same spirit and purpose to do God's will, and to do his full will, as some other subjects have been most properly and faithfully studied, the churches will become as fully enlightened in regard to these features—every one of them—as they are in regard to the ones which have been so diligently and thoughtfully studied

A question which involves so much must have the most earnest and prayerful study.

An obligation so high, so broad, and so far-reaching must be met most earnestly and most conscientiously. It cannot be passed over with indifference, and it cannot be passed over at all without sin. To know to do good and to do it not is sin.

Then, would the all-wise and merciful Heavenly Father lay such great obligations upon the church without giving some particular directions as to how to meet them? Would he do so without giving also inspired examples of meeting them? Certainly not, 'Then, in these inspired examples, as well as in God's directions, we see how to cooperate in preaching the gospel at home and abroad.

Many of us can say the church is "the pillar and ground of the truth" and is all-sufficient for the accomplishment of every good work; but this is not enough. We must study and teach how the church in New Testament times did all this work under the inspired direction and guidance of the apostles. We must study and teach all features of all this work God has committed to the church—justice, common honesty, equality, fair dealing, individual responsibility, regularity, all the business principles involved—and the inspired examples set before us.

No one-sided investigation will ever bring out all the truth. By such a course we can never learn our whole duty.

Preachers of to-day should follow the teaching and inspired examples and should have the spirit of the preachers of the New Testament, and all churches of to-day should follow the teaching and inspired examples of the New Testament churches and should manifest the same generous spirit.

Not attempting to call attention again to every good lesson Brother Kurfees' articles are teaching, I wish to emphasize, if possible, the fact that he has most clearly pointed out the scriptures and inspired examples which show:

1. That every church is independent of all other churches and all other religious organizations in its government in all particulars, being amenable alone to its Head, who is Christ, and is guided by the New Testament alone; therefore, that every church handles its own finances and manages its own affairs. But that every church, under the same Head, in the spirit of Christ, and governed by the New Testament, is in perfect unity and peace with all others and coöperates with them in the good work God has committed to his people.

2. That, according to the principles of common honesty and integrity, which control honorable business men of the world, churches, including preachers, of course, must manage-receive, disburse, and account for-their financial matters; that it is no distrust or lack of confidence in men or lack of faith in God to conduct the financial affairs and all the business matters of the church according to wellestablished and accepted business principles, which all honorable men of the world and also God approve. To do otherwise begets distrust, destroys confidence, and places the church in a bad light before the world. This principle of procedure in the handling of money has been less studied and taught than almost any one thing connected with the work of the church. Has God taught this in vain? Should not his people respect his teaching on this point?

3. That all benevolence, such as caring for widows and feeding people in distant and drought-stricken lands, as well as supporting preachers of the gospel, was done through the church; therefore, through church cooperation. This is seen from 1 Tim, 5: 1-16; Acts 11: 44-48; and Paul's instruction to the churches of Achaia, Macedonia, Galatia, and other countries. There is nothing more plainly taught in the New Testament, and there can be nothing more systematic, more equal, more completely in harmony with approved business principles, and more successful, than the order of this work set forth in the New Testament. There can be nothing of this kind of work done in a way which so honors God, because he is the author of this order. On the contrary, with God's order of work before us, it is wholly dishonoring to him to turn from this order that we may follow one of our own. Such a course would question and impeach the wisdom of God. The very cases given in 2 Cor. 8; 1 Cor. 16: 1, 2; and Acts 11: 44-48 show that God taught the churches both to cooperate in helping the poor and how to cooperate in doing this work. The examples and the scriptures which Brother Kurfees cites show most clearly the perfect cooperation of churches, even great distances apart, and, at the same time, the freedom and independence of each church in both caring for the poor and preaching the gospel. The cooperation, faith in God, and submission to him are the same in either case-unto God "be the glory in the church and in Christ Jesus unto all generations forever and ever. Amen." I cannot refrain from especially commending the overwhelming conclusion to which Brother Kurfees leads us-namely, that no organization other than the church is necessary to the preaching of the gospel throughout the world; and that to turn to some human, though religious, organization, which takes out of the control of the churches their own finances and other affairs and otherwise usurps authority over them, is to reject the church and will of God. Can men do this without rejecting the blood of Christ, because he has purchased the church with his own blood? (See Acts 20: 28.) Another thing with which we are impressed is that, in order to preach the gospel and to honor God, one does not have to belong to and become a part of any religious institution or organization, except the church. Is this true? Then, in order to preach the gospel, one does not have to become a member of the Y. M. C. A. Ah, me! Just here, as Isaiah says, the whole head becomes sick and the whole heart faint. On the contrary, one cannot preach the full and unperverted "gospel of Christ" (see Gal. 1: 6-10) and "gospel of peace," "the whole counsel of God," "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," the pure worship of God "in spirit and truth" and "as it is written," and retain membership in any religious organization on earth, except the church. Christ is "head [director and ruler] over all things to the church." (Eph. 1; 22, 23.) Loyalty to King Jesus, faithfulness to God, my own conscience, and "anxiety for all the churches" compel me to write this.

4. That preachers and other workers sent out and supported by one church or a number of churches must be approved by this one church or this number of churches. Of course, it is understood that the churches themselves have grown sufficiently in the knowledge and practice of the truth to be able to judge of the honesty, uprightness, faithfulness, and comprehension of the gospel necessary to qualify one as a true missionary or any other kind of worker. Timothy "was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium" before Paul accepted him as a missionary. So were the men of 2 Cor. 8, as Brother Kurfees shows. The things which Timothy had heard from Paul among many witnesses he was to commit to faithful men, who were able to teach others also. This is God's rule throughout the Bible-" look ye out therefore, brethren, from among you men of good report, full of the Spirit and of wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business;" "the bishop therefore must be without reproach" and "must have good testimony from them that are without;" "and let these first be proved;" "whomsoever ye shall approve" (1 Cor. 16: 3.) Barnabas was sent by the church at Jerusalem to Antioch in Syria because "he was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and faith." The result was, "much people were added unto the Lord." (See Acts 11: 19-26.) Suppose Barnabas had not been a good man, full of the Holy Spirit and faith, what would have become of the church at Antioch? All men to-day are not so good and so filled with the Holy Spirit and faith as was Barnabas. Men must prove themselves faithful and good and must manifest the Holy Spirit before the churches can know that they possess these most estimable characteristics and can commend them because of such. Again, this is God's order of selecting and commending workers, and to turn away from this is to turn away from God's will. Even to neglect this is sinful, which neglect has led to great evil. Again, the conclusion of this teaching of the New Testament, as Brother Kurfees points out, comes upon us with mighty and irresistible force. Then, it is radically contrary to the will of God for a self-constituted convention of men and women, separate from the church and no part or outgrowth from the church, to select and send out missionaries or other workers for the churches whom the churches do not know, have never seen, and cannot, therefore, approve. Is this wrong? Then, it is as radically wrong for any one man, for any editor, or for a number of editors, or for any other men, to do the same. No one man, no set of men, has any right whatever to select and to appoint workers for the churches and then call upon the churches to support these workers, when the churches cannot approve them, for the reason, if for no other, that they do not know them. This course can only produce confusion. No man, editor, or college president, or whatever he may be, can appoint another man to select and send out missionaries for the churches. The churches must do this for themselves, and must, therefore, know the men, or know enough about the men, in order to approve and support them. When men "have many times proved" themselves "earnest in many things;" when "their praise in the gospel" has spread "through all the churches," and they have been "also appointed by the churches" to do certain work, whether of benevolence or of preaching the gospel, or of both, then the churches will cheerfully rally to their support. Whenever one man, a set of men, a convention of men and women, undertake, consciously or unconsciously, ignorantly or otherwise, to select and appoint men for any work of the churches, confusion and failure and division follow inevitably. Good and wise men may teach us, may teach the churches, all the will of God; but that is all they can do. They have no authority to go any further or to do any more than that. It must then be left with us and with the churches whether or not we will do the will of God. This is all Jesus and the apostles

We are glad Brother Kurfees announces that he will have more to say on the different features of this subject.

Further Reflections on the Matter of Responsibility.

The loose and haphazard methods of mission work which have so largely prevalled in recent years will never be thoroughly corrected and superseded by good order and system in the work until the matter of responsibility for its proper conduct is better understood and appreciated. It is the purpose of this article to call special attention to, and to emphasize the importance of, this fact in connection with the work.

First of all, the churches themselves have been too listless and negligent at this point. In some instances they are practically asleep or have become the victims of stolld indifference. Many of them do not seem to realize the magnitude of their mission and that they are divinely intended to be, as Paul so significantly expresses it, "the pillar and ground of the truth." (1 Tim. 3: 15.) If there were no other passage bearing on the subject in all the word of God, this one alone would be sufficient to show that the churches must not support error. But unless they know whom they support as missionaries either at home or abroad, they may be aiding and abetting in sowing the seeds of error over the earth and in defeating the very purpose of their own existence. Hence, our article in the Gospel Advocate of June 19, 1919, emphasizing the vital importance of certain conclusions following the premises which had been submitted, specified among others the following: "A church should know that a missionary is capable and worthy before it can consistently contribute to his support." Not only is it clearly and pointedly taught in the New Testament that churches must be careful and not send out to the world those who will teach error and sow the seeds of discord, but they are to "watch" and not permit such teachers to come into their own midst to carry on such work. As examples of such teaching, see Acts 20: 28-31; 1 Tim. 1: 3, 4; 6: 20; 2 Tim. 4: 1-4; Heb. 13: 9; 2 Pet. 2: 1; 2 John 9-11.

These important principles have been ruthlessly ignored, and, in some instances, to the great confusion and injury of the work. According to the facts which have been previously brought to light in our columns, this was at least one of the secreis of trouble and confusion in the work in far-away India. Unknown to some of the churches and no doubt to the churches in general, men who were in sympathy with the Russellite and Advent doctrines, whose advocacy here at home has brought about confusion and division in the churches, were sent over there as missionaries. But who sent them? "Ay," to use the pointed language of the author of Hamlet, "there's the rub!" In the very unwise and unreasoning determination to propagate these doctrines, some things have been done stealthily and insidiously, the first intimation of which to the Gospel Advocate, as was shown in our issue of May 22, 1919, came when it was learned "that a number of young preachers had on foot a movement to propagate certain doctrines in the Gospel Advocate which would cause opposition and division;" and whether all the truth about the sending of these missionaries to India is ever known or not, it now appears that, aside from those who are in this "movement to propagate certain doctrines" or who are in sympathy with those who are in it, not a single church or preacher, as far as we have been able to learn, had anything to do with sending them,

Just here is an important fact that should be clearly and distinctly understood. So far as we know, nobody questions the right of any one to teach any part or all of Russellism and Adventism who wants to teach it; and nobody, so far as we know, questions the right of such persons to send out missionaries into any part of the world to teach these doctrines. All things else being equal, one man or one church has as much right to teach these doctrines and send out missionaries to teach them as any other man or any other church has to oppose them, and we have not a single word to say against the full and unreserved exercise of this right by any man or by any church. But when they send out missionaries who believe and will teach these doctrines, let them support such missionaries themselves, and not palm them off on churches which do not believe in such doctrines and, of course, do not want to become a party to the crime of spreading them over the earth. In the contributed article of Brother W. H. Carter, in our issue of May 15, 1919, who spoke a timely word of warning, there appears this true and wise statement: "The faith and teaching of men who go as missionaries to a foreign country should be well known. No true disciple will want to help support a man to preach things to the heathen that he would not want preached to his own people at home. If a man wants to preach Adventism, let him be man enough to say so, and then those who believe such can foot the bill."

That is a true and exact statement of what honor and consistency require both in those who go as missionaries and in those who send them. Those who sent these men knew, of course, that the churches in general do not believe the doctrines in question; and yet the churches were expected to support them!

But the churches are getting their eyes open to this "movement to propagate certain doctrines," and they can know where and to whom to make their contributions and where and to whom not to make them. And let no one be deceived as to what these "certain doctrines" are.

They are Russellism and Adventism pure and simple. Sometimes, when confronted with this charge, the leaders in this "movement" say it is not Russellism and Adventism, but that it is the doctrine of the Bible. But that is exactly the claim made by Russell himself and by the Adventists. They, too, say it is not Russellism and Adventism, but that it is the doctrine of the Bible. It is sufficient to say in reply to both that those who know the Bible know that no such doctrine is taught in the Bible, and that Russell and the Adventists, or those from whom they borrowed, are the authors of it. The Gospel Advocate knows very well that those who are in this "movement" do not believe and teach all of Russellism and Adventism; at least, it has no knowledge of their ever advocating all of these doctrines; but it also knows that as far as the "movement" has gone in its advocacy of these "certain doctrines," it is Russellism and Adventism precisely as Russell and the Adventists themselves teach it. Those who are in this "movement" can, and they sometimes do. pick out certain things in Russellism which they do not believe, and they magnify their opposition to these things and herald it abroad that they are opposing Russellism! But this ruse will no longer conceal the fact that, on certain vital matters, they teach Russellism and Adventism, precisely as Russell and the Adventists themselves teach it. As far as the Gospel Advocate can reach it with the facts, the public shall no longer be deceived and misled at this point. They not only teach some of the principal doctrines of Russellism and Adventism, but it so happens that the particular parts of these systems which they do teach, and which they admit they teach, completely upset the teaching of the New Testament. The churches should know these things, that they may understand the situation and hence may avoid supporting doctrines which they do not believe. And in the light of all the facts, churches which do not believe in Russellism and Adventism will know how to govern themselves in the case of missionaries sent out by this "movement."

Finally, let the churches and preachers everywhere wake up and see to it that those, and those alone, who "preach the word," as Inspiration requires, without any admixture of the opinion of men, whether on unfulfilled prophecies or on anything else, are sent out and sustained as missionaries. We are responsible for what we teach directly and for what we teach indirectly through those whom we sustain.

Our plan in the present series includes two more articles, the next one to be devoted to the question of unity and cooperation in mission work, and the closing one to a comparison of what are improperly called "independent missionaries" with those who work under the missionary society.

L. K. Harding.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Speaking of L. K. Harding, in the Gospel Advocate of May 29, 1919, F. O. Howell says: "Brother Harding is a prince among men."

I wish to say "Amen" to that, and add: He is not only a prince among men, but princely among women, and almost peerless wheresoever he is.

He led the song service in my meetings about ten years, and added immensely to the interest and success of our meetings everywhere.

He is not only a wonderful leader of sacred song service, but an intelligent and scholarly preacher of the gospel, loyal and true. He speaks English, which, some one has said, few do, and is proficient in Latin and Greek.

He was to me, in all our work and wandering together, as an affectionate son to a father. Never once did he deviate from that.

He never boasts of his pedigree or of anything else; but he's high-grade Kentucky stock on both sides. He is a grandson of J. W. Harding, of Winehester, Ky., a glorious gospel preacher, who, though nearly a hundred years old, is still preaching the word.

He is a son of James A. Harding, our beloved brother of faith sublime, who has graciously and gladly given all his powers and possessions to Christ and his cause.

His full name is Leon Knight Harding, "Knight" being his mother's maiden name. The Knights rank as high in Hopkinsville, their home, as the Hardings in Winchester; and both families rank high wherever known.

L. K. Harding is an M.D., having graduated in medicine the very day he began evangelistic work with me. On that memorable day, about twenty years ago, he stood at the forks of the road, the parting of the ways. One way led to wealth; the other, to poverty. He chose the latter, and is a lifetime laborer in the vineyard of the Lord.

Long may Leon live, to tell the sweet, sad story of Jesus and his love.

Let us not see in vain the crowns at the race's end and sit down in the shades of ease; let us not keep in vain these sacred memorials, to be only a reproach to our unprofitable lives. But let us stretch out ourselves and pursue to the mark for the glorious prize that is set before us.—John Austin.

RENEWAL OF THE SPECIAL NUMBERS.

In response to a friendly and widespread demand upon the part of our readers, the editors of the Gospel Advocate have decided to resume the publication of special numbers. Our effort along this line during the years of 1915 and 1916 met with universal favor. Everybody was pleased, and many helped in securing for them a large circulation. We recall with pardonable pride and unfeigned pleasure the genuine enthusiasm and heartfelt appreciation evoked by the appearance of the "Bible Study Number," the "Lord's Supper Number," the "Home, Father and Mother Number," and many others of equal interest. Following a precedent already established, we will print thirty-two pages in each special number. These pages will be brimful of splendid and timely contributions from the best writers available.

Beginning with the last week in July, we will issue a special number each month until the end of the year. The title of the first will be the "Giving Number," It is generally conceded that few Christians have learned how to apply for themselves and to teach others the God-given principles on this all-important subject. The purpose of this number will be to bring out this teaching in a clear, unmistakable manner. We desire it to be so scripturally complete that it may serve hereafter as a kind of reference work on the subject that will be entirely worthy of preservation. Other numbers will follow, devoted to such vital and soul-stirring themes as "Prayer." Loyalty," "A Better Ministry," "The Christian Armor," "Christian Additions," etc.

No reader can afford to miss these special numbers. Hundreds of our readers wrote us that one of them was worth a year's subscription. Others had the series bound and placed in the library. The new series of special numbers will be as helpful as the last, and, if possible, improvements will be made. We wish each reader to send us a new subscriber at once in order that many may enjoy the feast of good things. Be sure that you do not permit your subscription to be in arrears. Send us your order to-day.

Missionary

From a Christian Viewpoint.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

God being supreme, he must have the first place in the hearts and lives of his creatures. Having the power both to kill and to make alive, he must have homage over every human being. I am a Christian first, and, second, a citizen of my country. The Christian viewpoint is not national, but universal; not for one nation, but for all, and without respect of persons.

Always remembering that he is first subject to the law of God, a Christian should submit to the laws of the country where he dwells, maintaining an attitude of passive submission to law rather than an active participation in political affairs. In case he is called upon to do that which is a violation of Christian principle, he cannot do otherwise than decline and submit himself to whatever penalty, if any, the powers may see fit to inflict. His rule of conduct must always be to bless those who persecute him and to return good for evil.

Recently a friend expressed surprise that the Christian nations of Europe should be at war. I suggested that it was because they go on the principle of country first and Christ second. He replied by saying that it was the same in Japan. It is not only the same in Japan, but in every other country, whether called "Christian" or not.

But it is worthy of note that the Founder of the Christian religion made no effort to liberate his country from the Roman yoke, nor in any way attempted to build up the nationalism of the Jewish commonwealth. He was not so much a lover of his country as a lover of mankind. He took no part whatever in the political affairs of the people. Once they attempted to make him king, but he resolutely declined. His disciples in like manner held aloof from the affairs of state. Peter taught that the Christian should "be subject to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake," but with the reservation that, when the ordinance of man runs counter to the ordinance of God, "we ought to obey God rather than men."

For three centuries the Christians maintained that a follower of the Prince of Peace should hold aloof from government offices and decline to use the sword, save the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God. Tertullian, who was born within fifty years of the apostle John, wrote: "The image of Cæsar, which is on the coin, is to be given to Cæsar, and the image of God, which is on man, is to be given to God. Therefore thy money thou must indeed give to Cæsar, but thyself to God; for what will remain to God, if all be given to Cæsar?"

Good-By to the Hawaiians.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

Owing to the great congestion now on the Pacific, due to the shortage in ships, it was by no means certain just when I would be able to get away. I was warned of this by the agent at Yokohama, Japan, but neither of us supposed it so great. I found hundreds waiting to get back to San Francisco, and some who had been waiting six months. Having a chance on two lines, I went at once and booked, requesting that I be given my regular turn; that I sought no advantage over others, nor wanted others to take advantage of me. Three ships came and went, and still there were others ahead of me. On Saturday morning the telephone rang, and Sister Bowman called, saying that somebody wanted to talk with me. "That's the T. K. K.," I said, "and they have a place for me on the next boat:" and it turned out to be as I had surmised. The agent said: "Can you come down to the office this morning?" "Yes." "When can you come?" "Right now." It was not long till I had my hat to start. Sister Bowman said she had never seen me with such an expression before, and I judge she was right. As a result, I was assigned a berth on the Tonyo Maru of the Toyo Kisen Kwaisha, due to sail on May 28, just forty-one days from the time I arrived, and only eleven days longer than I had intended staying, and time enough yet to get home to Louisville as I had promised. If I had left Japan earlier than April 7, I would have left too soon, and if I had left Honolulu earlier than May 28, I would have left too soon, as the facts which I cannot now relate will go to show. God knows best, and we should ever be contented to let him time our movements.

In spite of the uncertainty of my getting away, my stay in Hawali was a delightful one. The people generally impressed me as being unusually hospitable and kind. Never have I seen so many races mingle with such freedom and friendliness. And the Hoppers, the Bowmans, the Livingstons, and the Camerons, who all live clustered together, for they are all one family, have a way of making one feel entirely welcome though he should be destined to tarry with them all summer. As I was extending my time over such a long period. I attempted to enter into some sort of financial arrangement with them, but was so completely squelched that I never tried it again. Brother and Sister Bowman, whose home was mine, never tire of showing acts of kindness and deeds of love. Brother Bowman, though engaged in the bank, managed to find time to lay plans and make suggestions as to how I might best put in my time for the Master, and it was due to him that I accomplished much that otherwise could not have been done. And, too, the walks, the mountain climbs, the automobile rides, and the sea bathing made us genuine companions: but especially the swims, which got to be a sort of hobby with us. For a real tonic, I know of nothing better than sea bathing. Being a fair swimmer in my way, which is the common bullfrog style, I did not practice the overhand lick like the native Hawalians; but I must give Brother Bowman credit for teaching me one new stunt-that is, how to float. One throws himself on his back with arms spread out above his head, and he rises to the surface and remains there indefinitely. It is not only a very delightful experience, but, in case of being thrown into the sea, might be the means of saving one's life. Our last swim together, which I hope may not be the last, was about five o'clock. Tuesday evening, May 27. The ship sailed next morning at eight. We waved a final good-by from ship to shore and from shore to ship "till we meet again."

My address is 2625 Montgomery Street, Louisville, Ky. I hope to reach there about June 24.

Each true heart in which there is a spark of the divine life turns eagerly toward the unblemished page, the untrodden way, of the new year, not with wonder simply, or with hope, but with fervent resolve that the dead past shall bury its dead, and that a nobler, fuller, sweeter spirit shall glisten in the chalice of existence.—F. B. Myer.

Lord, I strive not to penetrate thy lofty nature, for in no way do I compare my understanding with it; but I desire in some degree to understand thy truth, believed and loved already in my heart; for, indeed, I do not seek to understand in order that I may believe, but I believe in order that I may understand. For this also I believe—namely, that unless I believe I shall not understand.—Selected.

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

Brother J. F. Davis, Verona, Mo., seeks information concerning the parable of the tares:

Please explain the parable found in Matt. 13: 24-30. Some understand that "the field" is Christ's kingdom, and that to this kingdom he had reference when he said: "The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that cause stumbling."

I will ask the reader to turn to the thirteenth chapter of Matthew and give the parable, with the explanation, a careful reading. It will be observed from the Savior's explanation of "the parable of the tares of the field" that the field in which the Son of man sowed the good seed, and in which the devil sowed the tares, is the world. The tares are sons of the evil one, and the good seed are the sons of the kingdom of God. While the unregenerate, hypocrites, and pretenders may appear outwardly to be in the kingdom of God, they are only in the field, which is the world, and are not in the church. No superhuman effort is to be used to separate them from the sons of the kingdom, but they are to be permitted to grow with them in the world until the end of the world, and at the end of the world the angels shall separate the wheat from the chaff, and the chaff, or the wicked, shall be cast into the furnace of fire. The righteous shall "inherit the kingdom," but the wicked shall be cast out of the kingdom, where there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

Brother William Thurman, Chicago, Ill., has called my attention to the fact that I said "law" when I should have said "bond." He says he wishes me to reread the passage, which I have done. He writes:

In answer to the query of G. H. Byars, in the Gospel Advocate of June 5, you make this statement: "The middle wall of partition was broken down and the law was taken out of the way and nailed to the cross." (Col. 2: 14.) I would like to have you read the passage carefully and see if it was not the "bond," and not the "law," that was taken out of the way. If this idea were corrected, I believe a great deal of mist and false theory would disappear and we could see more vividly the life that was brought to light through the gospel.

The original is "cheirographon," which means "what is written with the hand, handwriting, a bond." The following phrase in the original, "tois dogmasin," are literally translated "in the decrees," which means "the law in the handwriting;" so no violence is done to the word of God by translating "law." Whether translated "law" or "bond" does not alter the meaning.

M. L. Moore, Mineola, Texas, Route 5, seeks an explanation of 1 Pet. 3: 19, 20, and says;

To whom was the preaching done? Who did the preaching? When was the preaching done? What was the prison? I have always believed the ones preached to were the disobedient in the days of Noah, and that Noah did the preaching before the flood.

The passage in its connection reads: "In which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison, that afore-time were disobedient, when the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved through water: which also after a true likeness doth now save you, even baptism, not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the interrogation of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ." (Verses 19-21.) Christ preached through the agency of the Spirit and not in person. The Spirit which raised him from the dead was not his own personal spirit. "If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwelleth in you, he that raised up Jesus from the dead shall give life also to your mortal bodies through his Spirit that dwelleth in you." (Rom. 8: 11.) The Spirit that raised up Christ was the Holy Spirit. Christ controlled or directed the Spirit. "I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may be with you forever, even the Spirit of truth. (John 14: 16, 17.) Christ preached by the Spirit through Noah. Christ had the power to send the Holy Spirit and work or speak by and through whom Christ through Noah preached to the wicked antediluvians. The account does not say they were in prison when preached to, but it does teach that the spirits now in prison were preached to in the days of Noah when they were disobedient, "when the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." The result of the preaching was the salvation of eight souls and the destruction without excuse of the disobedient. I know of no scripture that authorizes the view that lost spirits will have the gospel preached to them in the next world.

Brother H. N. Mann, of Riverside, Tenn., writes to inquire about the use of the individual communion service:

Sister A. H. Daniel, a good woman of the Hohenwald church, seems to be in trouble to some extent over the idea of the church wanting to use individual communion cups, or to adopt them. She asked me to refer the matter to the Gospel Advocate. I once heard of an old brother telling some brethren, who were afraid of germs, that he wished Methuselah had known about them in his day; for, if he had, he perhaps would have lived to be an old man.

There is nothing in the Bible as to how many cups or as to how many plates shall be used in the communion service. So far as getting germs by a number of brethren using the same cup in the communion service is concerned, it is more imaginary than real. I never heard of any one contracting disease from the communion service. The number of cups we use in the service depends largely upon the number to commune. There is as much scriptural authority for using one hundred cups as two cups in the service. Our great concern should be to be spiritual and not worldly-minded. We should come to the Lord's table in a spirit of appreciation. We should have a lowly, contrite spirit. We should be thankful that the Lord's body was bruised, mangled, pierced, and torn for us, and that he shed his blood in order that we may live. When Jesus speaks of "this cup," he means the fruit of the vine; he does not mean that special cup before him, but the fruit of the vine used for the same purpose even until he comes again. He will drink of this cup, the fruit of the vine, when he comes again, which shows that he means by this that which is like this and which is used for the same end. The abuses which grew out of the Supper proved that they did not all drink of one cup. One ate and drank before another, and each seems to have brought his own bread and wine and plates and cups, and then some got drunk, which they could not have done if all drank from the same cup of wine, for there would not have been enough wine in one cup to make them all drunk. But we should have no conscientious scruples over such matters. and should not be among the number of whom the Savior speaks when he says that there are some who "tithe mint and anise and cummin, and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice, and mercy, and faith." God teaches nothing on the subject of whether there should be one loaf or cup or more. Such things should be controlled entirely by propriety and order.

night at Gadsden. My address is 507 West Clinton Street, Huntsville, Ala."

From M. A. Creel, Hanceville, Ala., June 26: "J. H. Horton and I have just closed a meeting in the town of Cullman, county seat of Cullman County. Seven years ago the church of Christ was divided over the music question. Just a few remained true to the Book and are still worshiping the Lord 'as it is written.' We have revised the church record, and we find thirty-six persons who are anxious to worship as the New Testament requires. Much good was done in the meeting. Brethren who may chance to pass that way will always find a hearty welcome at the place of worship in West Cullman."

We learn with sorrow of the death of Sister J. D. Floyd, of Tullahoma, Tenn. She passed to her reward on Saturday, June 28, at 7:30 A.M. A note from her venerable and beloved companion reads: "She had been failing for some time, but was at the table eating breakfast and fell over dead. We have fought the battles of life together for nearly fifty-four years. If I have done any good as a preacher, I owe it to her. She cared for things at home while I was out at work." The editor of the Gospel Advocate sympathizes very deeply with Brother Floyd in his great loss and pray that the good Lord may sustain him every hour.

E. N. Glenn, 2310 Pittsburg, El Paso, Texas, writes: "I have been living here for about six months. The church is not progressing very much, but holding its own pretty well. Two have been baptized lately and one brother acknowledged his wrongs. Several young people have rerecently married. We still owe about five hundred and fifty dollars on our church building. Some are very anxious to pay off this debt by the first Sunday in July, as this is the building's birthday. Are there not some good brethren or churches who would like to have fellowship in this good work? Please write me the amount we may expect by that date or soon after."

From T. M. Carney, Union City, Tenn., June 28: "On the second Lord's day in June, A. L. Wilson, of Farmington, Ky., began a meeting with the Central church of Christ, Fulton, Ky., and continued it over the third Lord's day. Brother Wilson did some good preaching, as is characteristic of him. It was a very busy season for a meeting and we did not continue as long as first planned, but a fairly good attendance was had, and on the last Sunday evening of the meeting the speaker was greeted with a large audience. Brother Wilson is held in high esteem in his State and community as a Christian gentleman and a gospel preacher. The writer preaches for this church half time, and assisted Brother Wilson in the services."

From Mrs. Lou Barber Freeland, Portland, Tenn., Route 4, June 27: "I wish to appeal for help to rebuild our church house here at Corinth, which was so damaged by a storm that it will have to be rebuilt. We would like to build a better house than the other one, and would appreciate any amount given us. Remember, the Lord wants the best of everything. The workmen are ready to begin work on it now. We would like to get it completed so we could have our protracted meeting. Brother Yeagley, of Nashville, was expected to begin our meeting on the second Sunday in July, but we will have to put it off until we get our house rebuilt. This is an old landmark, and some of our old landmark preachers preached here in the long ago. E. H. Rodgers preached his first sermon here. 'Weeping Joe' Harding first established the cause here in 1875, and the work is still going on. Send donations to Wade Freeland, trustee, Portland, Tenn., Route 4, or to James Hodges, treasurer, Fountain Head, Tenn., Route 3."

P. H. Black, who does not give his address, writes as follows: "The third Lord's day in May marked the beginning of one of the most interesting and successful meetings ever held during the history of the Jefferson Street church of Christ, which lasted two weeks. This meetings was conducted by Elders J. D. Bynum, of Memphis, Tenn, and D. M. English, of Belfast, Tenn, both being among the most able speakers identified with the body. Despite the fact that the weather was rainy all the while, deep interest was manifested by the congregation and friends and the attendance was very good. The brethren mentioned, however, promised to spend two or three weeks with the Jefferson Street Church and the South Hill Mission in the fall, and they will be welcomed and supported by both congregations. During this May meeting five precious souls heard the truth, believed it, made the good confession, and were baptized. The members are greatly encouraged and very active in the work, expressing themselves as being willing and determined to do all within their power to promote the work of their Master."

BY J. PERRY HODGE.

"And when he had opened the fourth seal. I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see, And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him. And power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death ["pestilence"-Revised Version]. and with the beasts of the earth." (Rev. 6: 7, 8.)

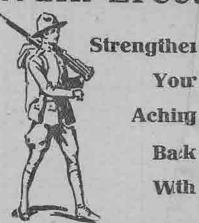

We have seen that the horses with their riders, or those conveyed in chariots by the horses, as seen by Zechariah in his vision, were explained to him to be "the four spirits of the heavens," sent "forth from standing before the Lord of all the earth," "to walk to and fro through the earth." (Zech. 1: 8-10; 6: 1-5.)

We have seen that one of the spirits sent to walk to and fro through the earth during the gospel age is the Spirit of Christ in the character of the Lamb that was slain (Rev. 5: 6), and that this Spirit includes all the seven Spirits of God, and that, as compared to other spirits sent to walk to and fro through the earth, he is represented under the symbol of the white horse and he that sat thereon going forth conquering and to conquer. (Rev. 6: 1, 2; 19: 11-21.) We have seen that the spirits taken and cast into the lake of fire and brimstone by this Spirit is the false prophet, the beast, and the dragon (Rev. 19: 20; 20: 10), which is "that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan" (Rev. 12: 9); and we have seen that the spirit that went forth out of the mouth of these three were "the spirits of devils, working miracles," coine "forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty." (Rev. 16: 13, 14.)

We have seen that another one of the spirits sent to walk to and fro through the earth, in opposition to the Spirit of Christ, is the spirit of the devil in the character of an angel of light (2 Cor. 11: 13-15), transforming his ministers as ministers of righteousness, false prophets, through whose mouth the doctrines of devils was preached, and by giving heed he thereto the servants of God were seduced and turned away from the tru faith (1 Tim. 4: 1-3) and led in false systems of religion as substitufor the true. This spirit of the d is represented in John's vision v^t the symbol of the red horse at that sat thereon. (Rev. 6: 3, 4 irit

We have seen that the thir the sent to walk to and fro thre earth, in opposition to the in the Christ, is the spirit of the d

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen South Carolina, visiting New York on portant business, chanced to meet the important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its moslistinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a thoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three tundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

character of the tempter, and that he is represented in John's vision under the symbol of the black horse and he that sat thereon (Rev. 6: 5, 6) with a pair of balances in his hand, as though there might be buying and selling.

We come now to a consideration of the fourth spirit that is walking to and fro through the earth, in opposition to the Spirit of Christ, and this spirit is called "Death." The devil has the power of death (Heb. 2: 14), and the fourth spirit that walks to and fro through the earth is the spirit of the devil in the character of Death, the great destroyer, and is represented in John's vision as the pale horse and he that sat thereon. (Rev. 6: 7, 8.)

Like the other spirits, this one is not new, but has been walking to and fro through the earth from the death of Abel to this present moment, and will continue to do so until it, as the last enemy, shall be destroyed by Him that sits upon the white horse when he destroys him that has the power of death, which is the devil. (Heb. 2; 14; 1 Cor. 15; 23-26.) Neither were the activities of the devil in this character confined to the future at the time of John's vision, for all men were subject to death and were dying all over the world even while John wrote; but the thing about it that was future to John at that time was the activities of the destroyer as it would in time affect the church, which in John's day, even, had the elements of death working in it, since "the wages of sin is death " (Rom. 6: 23; 1 John 2: 18, 19; 3; 8; 4; 1-6; 2 Thess, 2; 1-12; Matt. 13: 24-30, 36-43), the church being the fourth part of the earth in the sense that those who were led by the Spirit of Christ were the church, and in view of the fact that the Spirit of Christ was one of the four spirits sent forth to walk to and fro in the earth.

John was shown, by this symbol, the destruction of such of the followers of the rider of the white horse who, by giving heed to seductive spirits and the doctrines of devils, were turned away to follow the rider of the red horse, or who turned away through temptation to follow the rider of the black horse-not that they would not have died, anyway, but that their death, who followed either the red or black horse, would have no promise of the crown of life promised to those only who are faithful unto death (Rev. 2: 10), the eternal life beyond the grave (Rom. 6: 23). Therefore Hell followed with Death in their destruction; for If hell, or Hades, means the state of those who are dead, this state would continue to be theirs after death and the judgment, or, in other words, hell would be their judgment. The devil has power of death, not over death, and the power he has of death lies in his power to cause men to sin, for "the wages of sin is death." (Rom. 6: 23.) Jesus, however, has power over death, for he has the keys of death and of hell-that is, those in whom his Spirit dwells have passed from death into life (John 5: 24), and those who died belleving in him before the gospel dispensation he has the power to call forth out of the dead state into life (John 11: 25, 26), for he is the resurrection and the life, and they who are dead shall hear his voice and come forth (John 5: 25-29).

The real struggle or warfare, therefore, between Christ and the devil is that those who are faithful to Christ unto death will be given life eternal, and the devil opposes this, and exerts all the power he has to turn the followers away from Christ, in order that, instead of receiving life eternal; they shall go down into everlasting death. The false prophet seduces and turns men away from the true faith into false systems that appear to them to be true, and the tempter seduces and turns men away from following Christ by enticing and alluring through the lusts of the flesh, the lust of the eyes and the pride of life, and death is the wages that all who are seduced by either will receive; and the dead condition, or hell, will follow afterwards.

Finance in the Church of God.

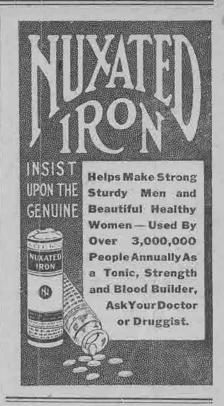

BY TICE ELENS.

I am bound at home, and cannot get away to preach much, and many who claim to have been helped by my feeble attempts as a writer are begging me to do lots of that kind of preaching while I have to remain at home. I will try to say something worth while in this article about our duty as regards the finances of God's work.

There are many who think that it is impossible to pay the proportion God requires and live and prosper. Many do not believe that God has any more to do with the temporal affairs of the righteous than he has with the wicked. For their benefit, I will reason on this from a purely human standpoint. For the sake of clearly bringing out the point, we will suppose they are right; that God exercises no special providence in favor of the righteous, so far as things in this life are concerned. But even in this case it is possible and reasonable for God's people to give as much for benevolent purposes as the wicked pay for sinful pleasures and to gratify their depraved appetites.

The majority of the unsaved around you spend much time and money for things that are unnecessary. Many spend hundreds of dollars every year for tobacco and strong drink. They spend much for traveling and amusements. They live in the height of fashion, and in many cases they prosper. They even boast of their prosperity. They start in life without friends or money, and you see them prospering. Some spend as much as one-third of all they make on amusements. If the wicked can spend this proportion in worldly gratifications, cannot the children of God, who claim to be saved from all these things, pay as much into his work and service? Men will boldly declare how God has saved them, and how they no longer have a desire for the things of the world, and how much they used to waste on worldly things, and how now they are spared this great expenditure; and yet, if they are asked to give half of that amount to God's work, they will declare it is impossible, they cannot spare it. Does this not prove that before they became Christians they were ready to sacrifice more for their whisky and tobacco and sinful amusements than they now are for the gospel and church, for God and souls?

Just so, women who spent a great many dollars for dress and jewelry and costly apparel and luxuries, before they became Christians, are now unwilling to spend half as much for the cause of Him who gave his life to save them from eternal death. Many, all over the land, who profess to be Christians, but still continue to cling to their sins and run after the same crowd they did before, will come to church and grieve over the souls of those who are going to ruin, and yet they will not give as much as onetenth of their income to help save these souls. They pay out their money for fine clothes and handsome furnishings In their homes; but when one of God's servants comes and pleads with them for means to send the gospel to lost souls, they declare that if they should give any more their families would come to want. Plead hard times! No wonder they cannot give much, when they spend so much on the lust of the flesh.

In many homes, even of professed Christians, at least half the time is given to unnecessary work; a day to extra washing and ironing, at least a day to extra sewing, and often as much as two days to extra cooking. By "extra" I mean that which does not add to health or comfort, but which is done for the sake of appearance, or for self-gratification. In most homes at least half the money is spent for unnecessary things. All this waste could be saved to God. It is estimated on good authority that sixty million dollars is spent in the United States alone every year for finger rings, besides other jewelry. Just think of it! Sixty millions robbed from God's treasury every year, and the majority of professed Christians are among the robbers.

Many a family could live comfortably and economically on one-half of what they do, and have the rest to give to the cause Christ bled for. A preacher once said to his congregation: "If that woman that comes to church and prays so much for the poor would even give her cast-off clothing, her prayers would be answered. Her extra clothing would furnish one family a whole winter." Reader, are you also guilty? I used to be, but, thank God, no mouth will go hungry or a back naked in this world again because I waste my Lord's treasures. I know to-day how much a few cents means to him who has it not.

When the call is made for means to do God's work, many excuse themselves by quoting this scripture: "If any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house. he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." Some say, "I cannot pay much to the church, because I am in debt," and quote this scripture: "Owe no man anything, but to love one another." If this is a sufficient reason for not paying your part into the church, then two things are plain: first, you violated God's word by going into debt, and, second, you have a poor way of showing your love to your neighbor. A love must be spurious that avoids sacrifice.

Will you not make a liberal contribution for the Tennessee Orphans' Home on the first Lord's day in July? During the high cost of living more is required to feed an orphan. As the Lord has prospered you, will you not contribute for the orphan? Here is a splendid opportunity to help yourself and to quicken your spiritual life.

There is no better way of forgetting one's troubles than by attempting to relieve some one else who is in trouble. The more one thinks of his own troubles, the more power over him these troubles gain. When he is turned away for a time from himself in the effort to help another, personal

Questions and Answers About East Tennessee.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

- 1. How many counties in the division called "East Tennessee?" Answer: Thirty-four.
- 2. Have we many churches of Christ in East Tennessee? Answer: Very few. Not exceeding eighteen; all small, as a rule.
- 3. Have we any counties with no congregations? Answer: Very few of this group of counties have congregations.
- 4. Have we any counties in this division with no members? Answer: Probably there is not a single member in some of these counties.
- 5. How many congregations in Bradley County? Answer: Only two. They are both weak, numerically and financially.
- 6. Have we any Bible schools in East Tennessee? Answer: None.
- 7. Could a Bible School be maintained in East Tennessee? Answer: Not without outside help. Kimberlin Heights and Milligan College are the schools in this section, and they are in the hands of the Christian Church ("digressives").
- 8. Do these schools turn out young preachers? Answer: Yes, quite a good many of them.
- 9. What is the greatest need in establishing the cause in East Tennessee? Answer: Preachers who are true to the Book and financial aid.

Conditions in Hawaii.

BY JAMES H. BOWMAN.

Less than one hundred years ago the people of Hawaii heard of the true God, as revealed in Jesus Christ, for the first time. But the "modern view" of God and Jesus places the teaching of the early missionaries in the same catalogue with the heathen conception of worship that obtained here before the missionaries came. The struggles and privations of a century are being betrayed by the very descendants of the faithful men and women who braved the perils of uncharted seas to bring the Word of Life to this benighted people.

The modern pulpit finds but little opposition here in sowing the nefarious seed. The inspired word becomes more and more distasteful as the days go by, and the certain result is that fewer are finding the straight and narrow way that leads to life. The fathers have fallen asleep; and O, how they were mistaken! Then Christ was the Son of God; now he is the natural son of Joseph and Mary. Then he was manifested to take away our sins; now we have no sins that charity will not cover. Then men were reconciled to God through Jesus Christ, He was made sin for us, who knew no sin. But now they say: "No! There was no efficacy in the so-called sacrificial death. The blood that flowed from the pierced side on Calvary's cross was in no way different from the blood that flowed at Verdun and the Marne. No. we do not believe in the blood atonement. Christ was not the propitiation for our sins. If we thought that God demanded anything so material as blood to wash away sin, we would defy him. That is merely the Hebrew conception of God." And so the modern teaching continues, rejecting the virgin birth, rejecting the miracles, rejecting the atonement-in fact, rejecting everything fundamental-so as to conclude that God was not in Christ reconciling the world unto himself.

I contend that a people submitting themselves to the "modern view" in religion will in less than one hundred years revert to a condition worse than heathen. Enough has been seen already in Europe, where "modern kultur" has displaced faith in God for twenty-five years, to indicate that my statement will hold.

Is the church of Jesus Christ ready to do anything? Do men light a candle and place it under a bushel? We must determine now what our answer is going to be at that day when Christ. comes to make up his jewels. Here in Hawaii we have these souls to make answer for: American, British, German, and Russian, 30,400; Chinese, 22,250; Filipino, 20,400; Hawaiian, 22,850; part Hawaiian, 16,100; Japanese, 106,800; Portuguese, 24,250; Porto Rican, 5,200; Spanish, 2,270; Korean, 5,000; others, 660. HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day, Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

The Master's Vineyard

Alabama.

Alabama City, June 23.—Brother J. D. Gunn has just closed a nine-days' meeting at Attalla, two miles from here. Nine persons made the good confession and were baptized and one came from the Baptists. There are just a few that meet there to take the Lord's Supper. They meet in a rented house. Brother Gunn is to come back next year and hold another meeting. We need a good preacher all the time.—G. L. Foster.

Arkansas.

Fort Smith, June 23.—We had splendid services at Park Hill Church yesterday. Some out-of-town folks were with us. Eight members placed their membership with us, giving us a membership of above fifty. We are planning great things for the future, and will have a meeting in August and one in October. I filled my regular appointment at Valley View on the third Sunday. A man and his wife made the good confession and were baptized. I will begin a singing school at Delaney on Wednesday, which will be followed with a meeting. I will close at Delaney on the third Sunday in July.—Will W. Slater.

Kentucky.

Shelbyville; June 23.—I have just closed a good meeting at Vanburen, with seventeen additions. I consider this one of the best meetings I have been in for some time. The best of interest prevailed throughout and the church was strengthened to a great extent. My next meeting will be at Parksville. We hope to bring this church to the front line of the Christian ranks.—R. A. Craig.

Benton, June 23.—I am now in a meeting at this place. Benton is non-progressive in business, morals, and religion. The "digressives" have a church here, but are weak. Out of quite a number of brethren who refuse to meet with the "digressives." only one is taking an active interest in the meeting. The rest seem to be ashamed to take a stand with God's people. I hope to accomplish much in the name of the Lord in spite of the many odds against the work.—Coleman Overby.

Oklahoma.

Grant, June 16.—I have been working for years to get the cause established in this locality. Our church is small, and all are poor people. We have no house of our own and are not able to build. We worship in a schoolhouse and have to support a preacher as best we can. I am seventy-seven years old and my wife is seventy-three, and I have to work to make our living. I wish I were able to do more for the cause of Christ than I am.—J. J. Bearden.

South Carolina.

Union, June 23,—The tent meeting continues, with good crowds and the best of interest manifested. Nine souls have been baptized into Christ since last report. Two came from the Baptists last night, and one made the good confession and will be baptized Tuesday evening, the Lord willing. "Rejoice in the Lord always; and again I say, Rejoice." Rejoice with us, brethren, for his truth is marching on. Those who have been baptized have not sat down on the stool of donothing and folded their hands, but are bringing others to the fold. They are not hearers that forget, but doers that work. Brethren, pray for us; for we are in a big State, surrounded by opposition, but we are overcoming daily with the Spirit's sword.—A. C. Traylor.

Tennessee.

Vanleer, June 25.—We are in an interesting meeting at this place. Good audiences and excellent singing are marked features of the meeting. Brother J. D. Derryberry, of Nashville, is directing the song service.—William P. Walker.

Tracy City, June 18.—Brother Bailey Brooks and I held a very successful meeting on Myers Hill, about two miles east of Tracy City, the first of this month, with three additions and much good seed sown. Brother Brooks had one confession at Coalmont on the first Lord's day in June. I had one confession at Tracy City on the fourth Lord's day in May. We have just closed a meeting about two miles west of Tracy City, with five additions. We are overjoyed with our success as young preachers. Brother Brooks is a blacksmith and works almost every day in the shop. I am a railroad man. We both long to see the time when we can give up everything else and go into the field. We will hold other meetings later.—Earl Mason.

Decherd, June 24 .- I closed a meeting at Dunlap, in Sequatchie County, with three baptized. One confessed her wrongs. This was a good meeting for more than one reason. I think this is one of the most prejudiced places I have ever visited. We succeeded in filling the house several times, and had a good crowd every night. This had a good crowd every night. This was something unusual. The preachers of the other churches came out several times. They dismissed their prayer meetings and their Lord's-day services and attended our meeting, We broke down much prejudice. people of the town seem to be stirred up over the meeting. This was my second meeting at that place. ised the brethren to be with them in another meeting next April. This is the home of Brother Tillman Walker, who has done much for the cause of Christ. He is an active, working member, always ready to do anything he can to advance the cause of Christ. I am now in a meeting at Fairview, in Franklin County, and having large crowds to begin with. My health is still improving.—R. E. L. Taylor.

Texas.

Ennis, June 23.—Yesterday was a fine day. Large crowds, good interest, and one baptized. No summer vacations, no excursions, in this church, All lines of the church work are good. Ben West.

Holland, June 23 .- I began a meeting here last Saturday night. On June 15 I closed a three-Sundays' meeting at Shamrock, with three baptisms and two restored.-J. B. Nelson.

McKinney, June 17 .- I preached at this place last Sunday, both morning and night, to a small but appreciative audience. I am visiting my father for a few days. I have some time open for meetings if any one wants me, but they must be where the brethren are able and willing to pay,-A. W. Ken-

Corsicana, June 23.—Brother W. F. Ledlow, of Thorp Spring, closed a twelve-days' meeting with the church at this place last Thursday night. The church feels that it has been made stronger and better after having this good man with them even for this brief period. Brother Ledlow is a man of unusual ability and presents the truth in a forcible and effective manner. Brother Hugh H. Miller, one of our young preachers, lives here, and he proved an able assistant in the meeting.-G. Mitchell Pullias.

Childress, June 23.-I preached here at Childress yesterday, and conducted song practice last evening, and we will practice singing several evenings for the next two weeks, preparatory for our meeting, which begins July 3. I shall preach next Lord's day at Valley View Schoolhouse, seven miles out, also at a mission in town in the afternoon and at the church at night. never worked harder than at present, trying to get the church ready for a meeting; but I find much stupor, inactivity, and carelessness on the part of many members. Many seem to have not the least idea that God wants or expects them to do anything. Some even seem surprised when I ask them why they are not at work for the cause. I preach often here on Christian duties, practical Christian living, and many do not like that sort of preaching; but I hope and pray for good things here yet. If Brother Lawson does not find things ready for him here, he shall know it is not my My wife is slowly improving, actually getting well, I believe; but it will be months yet before I can go to the "white and wide harvest fields." I shall hold two meetings close home, if possible, but can promise nothing definite yet. Pray for us.-Tice Elkins.

Denton, June 24,-I have not been able to do much this year, neither have I said much in the papers, for the reason that I have been confined at home on account of sickness. I held a meeting near Woodward, Okla., in March, which is the only work I have done this year. Not only were my family sick, but I had a bad spell myself, and am just able to be out now. I am to begin a meeting near Havana, Ark., next Friday, and will be there over the first Sunday in July. I do not know about conditions there, but understand it is an effort upon the part of a few brethren to establish the cause out there. I am to begin a meeting at Ravia, Okla., on July 11. I have time for a meeting from July 26 to August 3, and also from August 23 to August 31. Let any congregation needing this time write me at once. Always address me at Denton, Texas, if you do not know where I am in a meeting. I have one order for my booklet, "A Great Battle," which my booklet, exposes the unknown-tongue and divine-healing doctrines, with no address given. If the brother will give me his address, I shall be glad to fill the order. Brethren, please do not send stamps at all, nor personal check for just one book; a money order is better,—D. S. Ligon.

West Virginia.

Buffalo, June 20 .- We have received additions to our building fund as follows: From Miss Parks, $1; church of Christ near Lewisburg, W. Va., $3; Ed. Hartley, $10. We are very thankful for this help; but we have not received a sufficient amount to enable us to begin our church building. We must have at least three hundred dollars more before we can begin. Sure-ly the brethren will raise that small amount for us now. It can be done in a very short time, if a number of congregations will take up a special contribution for us at their next meeting. The united testimony of a number of leading brethren is to the effect that we are entirely worthy. So please do help us now. The Gospel Advocate force has been so kind in publishing our statements, and this kindness will surely be remembered when we are safe here; and may God speed the day. We expect to remem-ber every kindness shown us by any one since we began this work. We (wife and I) have sowed in sorrow and in tears. Please help us to reap Send me a check to be added to building fund. I have also received personal support as follows: From the church of Christ at Odell, W. Va., $10; Mrs. Noah Miller, $1; Rich Fork congregation, Ohio, J. M. Steed, $10; Mrs. Alice Miller, $1.25; A. M. George, $4; Jacob Stamm, $1,25, A. M. George, $4, Jacob Stalm, $2; church of Christ at Sellersburg, Ind., $10; "A Sister," Calvert, Texas. $5; "A Sister," Coldwater, Miss., $1; John F. Kemp, Sr., $1. This includes all the personal help received since March to date. I am very thankful indeed. I wish to say to the brethren that this is no mushroom work. By God's help we intend to make it permanent. I do not measure any man's success by the number of baptisms he reports, but by the number of strong religious characters developed under his own personal ministry. I am in duty bound to look after every con-vert of mine until he is "taught in the Lord." I must follow him up and care for him until he becomes strong. I must not place him under the care of incompetent persons. So, when you help us, you are surely helping us to do real mission work. I wish you would send some help for Brother George E. Hypes, my associate in the Lord's work. When writing me, do not forget him .- F. P. Fonner.

Woman Suffrage,

I desire in this to have a talk with my sisters in the Lord. All over the country the women are crazed over the question of woman suffrage as they clamor for the ballot box. Not a few sisters in the Lord are belittling themselves as Christian mothers and keepers at home over this question. They manifest more zeal and love for the cause of woman suffrage than they do for the cause of the Lord. It has been said that "men make the laws, but women make the men," and this is eminently correct. They make them out of the boys they bear and raise to be men. God has given her this great power, and there is no greater power than this when she uses it properly. Old Sister Hannah, of the Old Testament, set a great example when she lent her boy to the Lord, and then watched after his childhood interests. To lay aside this God-blessed right and privilege, turn "society crazed," and follow after the things of a perverse nation bathing in the cesspool of politics, forsaking "home, sweet home," where sanctity, modesty, and virtue are so befitting to womanhood, and more especially motherhood, to run wild at the ballot box over political questions, is but an outrage on humanity and pure and undefiled Christianity. The duties of men and women are equally important, but they are not the same. You sisters have fathers, brothers, and husbands, and they are competent to take care of the political situation. If they are not, be it known to you that they are just such men as you women have given birth to and failed to raise up as you should have done. God made man and placed him head over the woman, as Christ is head over the church. Your greatest influence, my sister, is wielded in the home and not at the polls. God never made woman a king, but a queen. He did not make her a lawgiver, but a law enforcer. He did not make women elders and deacons and preachers, but helpers in the great work. When you go to the ballot box, just buckle a sixshooter on, and a pair of cowboy spurs on your feet, and get you a plug of tobacco and a box of cigars, and do not forget to "cuss" a little so as to attract as much attention as possible. Remember that you sacrifice all of the God-given virtues you ever possessed when you dabble with politics. Better clothe yourselves with that meek and quiet spirit which is in the sight of God of great price, and teach your children to love, honor, and fear the Lord.

Brightest Ray of Hope.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

All infidel writers admit that there was such a man as Jesus, but deny that he was divine. Even Thomas Paine said: "The character attributed to Jesus was a model of virtue and perfection." They admit that the body was missing from the tomb on the morning of the third day. There are but two positions in regard to the missing body: it was either stolen or it was raised from the dead. If stolen, he was an impostor, and the hope of every believer in the world is blighted, Christianity is a false doctrine, and the Bible is no better than a bundle of fables. If the body of Jesus was resurrected, he was divine and the Bible is divine, Christianity is true and the Christian's hope is sure, and there is a future for man. The Man of sorrows has brought life and immortality to light. How cheering it is to true Christians to know that they have the true light which now shines through the dark veil of death and informs them that they can live forever! This earth is not our abiding place. Soon we must bid farewell to home and friends and all that is near and dear to us of an earthly nature, and close our eyes in death; but the resurrection of Christ proves that it will not be forever. Then, to whom can we go for aid, but to Jesus, our only hope and the sinner's best friend, and lean upon the strong arm of One who is mighty and able to save, and through our faith in him rest assured in the hope that we shall live again? The Christian tie which binds our hearts as one will never, never die. And the true source of joy and comfort in the hour of death and bereavement is the fond memory and hope of meeting loved ones in the great spiritual world, where death and pale decay are never known and tears of sorrow never dim the eye, where the storm king's frost can bring no terror and no lightnings slumbering in the rainbow cloud can e'er disturb the peaceful rest. As Christians, our separation at death will not be forever. Our implicit faith in the word of God leads us to hope for a better land, undimmed by sorrow and unhurt by time, where kindred ties are never severed and the awful sleep of death is never known, and life eternal reigns through the rays of our brightest hope.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back If you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

Rowden.

Rowden departed this life John C. on March 22, 1919. He was sixty-eight years old, and a member of the church of Christ for many years. He was a student of the Bible, a devoted Christian, full of faith and love. He was an elder of the East Chattanooga congregation for a number of years, and was liked and loved by all who knew him. He was always found at his post of duty unless he was sick. He was in bad health for many years, and this prevented him from being present at the Lord's-day services a few times at the Lord s-day services a few times in his last days on earth. He is survived by one sister, who resides in Texas, and one brother, S. E. Rowden, of Chattanooga, Tenn. He leaves a wife and nine children—six girls and three boys. Eight of this number are members of the church of Christ. The writer conducted the funeral services in the presence of a large assemblage of people. His remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Hooker, Ga. May the surviving ones strive to meet him in the home above, where all is joy and peace and love.

Lasater.

Thomas Harrison Lasater, seventy years, fell asleep in Jesus on February 26, 1919. He was married in early life to Miss Tabitha Golsten, and to this union were born ten children, all of whom, except one son, survive him. He was a soldier in the Confederate Army and gallantly did service until the close of the war; but in early manhood he entered a greater service, the service of the Master. He was at his post every Lord's day at the Lebanon church of Christ, where he worshiped. His highest aim in life was to live right, and he was always ready to condemn that which he thought to be wrong. He will be missed by her who was his Beggars.

This world is so filled with beggars and cripples of one kind and another that the most of us are disposed to give them a wide berth. Unless it be some member of our own family, the sight is repellant rather than appealing. We need more of the milk of human kindness. We need to look with attentive and helpful eyes upon the deaf and the dumb, the lame and the blind. And over and above all, we should have a tender regard for the spiritual cripples; whose number is legion. How truly said: "Childhood is a beautiful gate, but it is filled with cripples; youth is a beautiful gate, but it is filled with cripples; life itself is a beautiful gate, but-O!-how many cripples!" Naaman was a mighty man, but he was a leper. A little captive Jewish maiden pointed him to the gate of the prophet and healer. David was a man after God's own heart, but he fell into gross sins. Nathan, with a simple parable, led him to the gate of repentance. Judas Iscariot was numbered with the twelve, but he was a thief. Alas, he never came to the gate! I believe the gospel is a beautiful entrance. Its beauty is not the splendor of gold, the flash of silver, or the sparkle of diamonds, but a beauty made luminous through love, attractive through sacrifice, and glorious through grace. O that the spiritual cripples of the world might be laid at this gate, borne thither in the arms of faith and prayer and unremitting zeal!

Small Beginnings.

Paul did not appreciate it at the time, perhaps, but the "mightiest thing done in Europe that morning was when he sat down by the river bank and spoke to that handful of women." It does not require a big house or a big audience to begin a mighty work for the Lord. The open air has been the scene of the greatest victories for the cross.

The mightiest truths of the Reformation were not taught in classic halls, but under brush arbors. If there comes to you the opportunity—and it will come over and over again—to preach the gospel to one or two or three persons, preach it with all the powers of your being. If you are asked to help at some humble mission point, go to it with the undaunted spirit of the man who said: "But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." Remember that God classifies deeds according to their consequences. The longer they last, the wider they reach, the deeper they go, the greater the act which sets them in motion.

Let no man become discouraged or give up if he finds that his pet plan is crossed and thwarted by a higher wisdom than his own. Remember, a good man's steps are ordered of the Lord. "As you go down the long corridor you will find that God has preceded you and locked many doors which you would fain have entered; but be sure beyond these there is one which he has left unlocked. Open it and enter, and you will find yourself face to face with a bend of the river of opportunity, broader and deeper than anything you have ever dared to imagine in your sunniest dreams. Launch forth on it; it conducts you to the open sea,"

Exercise.

There never was a time when so much care and attention were given to the exercise of the body as there is today. The idea of bodily exercise in the open air is the most popular one in the physician's realm. It has pervaded the schools and colleges until it actually threatens to disrupt the study of arts and sciences. It has become the most attractive feature of the various young men's organizations throughout the world. And yet, in the face of all this activity and all this popularity, the apostle Paul said: "Bodily exercise profiteth little." The exercise that the world needs is the exercise which bullds up the soul. The exercise that is worth the time, pains, and endeavor is the kind which promotes a spirit of godliness, which always belongs to the perfect man. If we would gain the victory, we must make the effort; we must exercise ourselves for it; we must make constant application of God's teachings to our conduct; we must do the things about which we think and talk and pray and sing. There are two other overwhelming reasons that should inspire us. First, there is the infinite value of the soul. There is the question of the Master: "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul "-the priceless thing? Second, there is the welfare of those around us. There is the message, which says: "Do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." It has been said: "The times are big with change and destiny. God only knows the kind of people with whom we deal. Perhaps the next man we meet will be like Ishmael, son of the desert and son of strife, his hand against every man and every man's hand against him. Perhaps he will be like Isaac, son of laughter, whose tents are spread in green pastures and beside the still waters." But whoever that man is, we must do him good. And for our own encouragement let me say, in conclusion, if we give to our spiritual exercise that same thought which some of us bestow upon our bodies; if we bring to His service that same eagerness and enthusiasm that we waste upon the games of life; if we use the tremendous forces that are in our hands, not for the selfish interests of time and sense, but for the salvation of our souls, the strength of our brethren, and the betterment of the world, we shall have done our part in raising the church of Jesus Christ toward that high plane of usefulness and goodness toward which it has been climbing for two thousand years.

Regular Attendance.

An important requisite in spiritual culture is a regular attendance upon God's worship. Without stopping here to point out all the items of scriptural worship, without considering the question of its comparative quality, let us say that the question of attendance is an inherent duty which no thoughtful man can fail to recognize. The spiritual life is primarily an individual life. Every one must give an account of himself before God; every one must work out his own salvation with fear and trembling. But we must remember, too, that because its essence and excellence is love the spiritual life has a social aim. It craves love and friendship, and it wants to give love and friendship. It pines away and starves if this desire is denied. The true disciples of Jesus both need and wish to confess their sins, to render their thanks, to offer their prayers, to enjoy their blessings, and to speak of their hopes together. In order that our social service may not fall short of its scriptural purpose, there are two characteristics which should be kept in mind. In the first place, one must be qualified to worship. That means he must be a member of the church. He must have returned obedience to the divine conditions of salvation-he must be buried with his Lord Jesus Christ in baptism and through this open door enter into his spiritual kingdom. Going to church all of one's earthly life will not save a man if he is not completely incorporated into its membership and does not add his contribution to its work and worship. I make this point clear because so frequently we hear it said of a man after his death, as if it were a commendation: "This person was a constant attendant upon such and such a church, although he was never a member of it." That very fact would speak volumes against him before the judgment of God. question that would confront him then would be: "How could you willfully neglect so great salvation in the face of so many wonderful opportunities?" Our attendance upon God's worship should be regular. If we observe a man staying away from his place of business with great regularity, we will not be surprised any day to hear that man has failed. If we observe a pupil attending school only at intermittent periods, we will not be surprised to find that pupil deficient along all the lines of his education. With corresponding exactness, when we observe a man or woman attending the Lord's worship at irregular intervals, we will not be surprised to find that his or her service ends in disastrous neglect.

Helping or Hindering the Cause We Love. No. 2. BY EARL M. HOBSON.

Helping or hindering the cause we love is not confined to our attitude on giving, missions, and prayer, but also to the influence the many little habits or faults that we as Christian individuals may possess. Unfortunately, the public teachers influence a greater number of sectarians and sinners than do those of us whose work is confined to a narrow field. In mentioning these things, I do so because of my love for the cause and not to be critical. God help all of us to guard against the little foxes that spoil the vines.

If a teacher be a Christian, he must indeed be careful of his every act toward the children in his care. To illustrate: A few years since an old woman died, who admitted that she had never become a Christian because in her childhood one of her teachers, known to the community as a "Campbellite," had needlessly offended her, and she had always associated the offense with those who are Christians only. A poor excuse, indeed; but who knows how many others have been thus influenced? A Christian must be more careful than any denominationalist. Every Christian teacher should live such a blameless life that even the children may know that he is a Christian.

Equally as important is the conduct of each of us in the house of public worship. There are men and women who have rejected Christ because they have seen his professed followers whispering, laughing, and showing an utter lack of reverence even as the Lord's Supper is being celebrated, or because they have seen the song leader selecting a song and getting "the pitch" as the emblems were carried among the members. There is a lack of reverence in our church buildings that is painful to see and that causes the sectarian devoted to his creed to become disgusted with the simple worship of Christ instead of respecting it when he attends the services. A few times in my life I have persuaded Catholic acquaintances to attend the services with me. They were, at least, learning to know some truth, I felt; but one of them remarked to me: "When you go to our place of worship, every one gets very still at the door and there is no more talking and laughing when we go in. When one goes to your place, it is like going to a theater; every one is talking and laughing right up to the time for the service, and indoors at that." I felt all too keenly the sting of his remark and thereafter gave but faint invitations to him to return.

Another form of irreverence that has made many a man lose respect for the very cause we wanted him to love is the conduct of many professed followers of Christ at the obedience of baptism. At such times men—and sometimes women—crowd to the water's edge and jestle and crowd each other as at a show, even humorously making remarks about "dipping them under."

How often, too, have elders and even preachers been guilty, in their efforts to remove from the church building some dog that certainly ought not to have been there, of greater disturbance than the dog would ever have made! I know a man who had begun to attend regularly the public services at a place, but quit because the preacher made a great disturbance and showed much spirit over the presence of a dog in the building one Sunday. The sinner remarked the next day that the preacher did not show a very Christian spirit in his attitude toward the dog. The man himself, so far as I know, has never heard a simple gospel sermon since. It seems that it would have been wiser to have overlooked the dog than to have driven the sinner away.

It is right to contend earnestly for the truth and to fight wrong at all times; but when the preacher, elder, or any other member of the congregation shows in his contentions a spirit of exultation over the defeat of his contestant similar to that exhibited by the politician who wins in the race, the cause we love is hindered and not helped. Any show of personal feeling is unnecessary; for the cause of Christ is truth, and the champion of truth has no reason to manifest personal feelings in its defense. O that all of those who proclaim publicly the Scriptures would search themselves carefully, that they might throw away those little peculiarities and modes of illustration that tend to drive away the honest ones who love their man-made creeds! More than once has the attempt to be humorous in the stand turned the serious-minded from the cause we love, and more than once have I seen illustrations used that hindered rather than helped. Particularly do I recall that the effect of the statement that we should stand on the Bible alone was completely destroyed when the preacher attempted to make it concrete by placing the Book upon the floor and standing on it. Such an illustration brought disgust to the sincere sectarian and turned him from the cause we love.

And then, again, is not singing a part of the worship? And yet have you not seen otherwise devout men and women not only not join in the singing, but talk throughout the song service? Can it be that this is often because the songs sung are utterly lacking in the spirit of worship, or were written by some man whose own denomination would not use them, who prided himself on getting out a new book every year, or is it because we have let the denominations rob us of the truly spiritual songs and prefer their rejected rhymes? No wonder we hinder the cause we love in failing to sing the songs we ought to sing. Again, have we not been guilty of condemning the organized choir, and yet have invited the "singing class," led by a sinner or a rank denominationalist, to sit on the front seats and do our singing for us, and praised them for it, and forgotten that many who would like to have sung God's praises were prevented from doing so that the class might show its training?

O that men and women everywhere would help and not hinder the cause we love by giving more for its advancement, living and praying more for its good, and guarding the little things that may hinder the friends whom we want to come! What I have said has been poorly said, but I have said it because I love the cause of Christ. I have been grieved more than once, again and again, by seeing sinners repelled because some follower of Christ failed to guard his actions. God pity and pardon us all and help us to do more for him out of a heart of love.

Jesus Our Savior and King. (Read Matt. 21: 1-17.)

"Tell ye the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass." (Matt. 21: 5.) This quotation is from Zech. 9: 9. Jesus, in riding thus into Jerusalem in fulfillment of this prophecy, applied to himself a prophecy which all the Jews themselves admitted referred to the Messiah. In this he asserts his majesty as the Messiah and King, and yet in such a way as to show his kingdom is not of this world, and, therefore, not a temporal and political one. In this, too, he allowed his disciples and the applauding multitude to acknowledge him as Messiah and King.

"Hosanna" means "save, we pray." To this Mark adds:
"Blessed is the kingdom that cometh, the kingdom of our father David: Hosanna in the highest." And Luke adds:
"Blessed is the kingdom that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest." This means that Jesus is King in "the kingdom of our father David," and that he is, therefore, on David's throne. To acknowledge Jesus as the Son of David was to acknowledge him as King. In Acts 2: 25-36 Peter declares "by the Holy Spirit sent forth from heaven" that God, having exalted Jesus to his own right hand and having made Jesus "both Lord and Christ," has fulfilled his promise to David, which is confirmed with an oath, "that of the fruit of his [David's] loins he would set one upon his [David's] Jesus is now the Messiah-God's anointed Prophet, Priest, and King. No one doubts that Jesus is now "that prophet," above all prophets, who was to come. (See Deut. 18: 15, 16; John 1: 21; Acts 3: 22; 7: 37.) No one doubts that Jesus is now that Priest who was to be, not after the order of Aaron, but after "the power of an endless life" and "forever after the order of Melchizedek." (See Heb. 7: 15-28; 5: 5-10.) Then no one who believes the New Testament can doubt that Jesus is now, as "the seed of David," on David's throne. (See Matt. 21: 5; Mark 11: 10; Acts 2: 25-36; Heb. 2: 9.)

"Christ" means "anointed." Prophets, priests, and kings were anointed, and Jesus is God's anointed. Why believe he is now God's anointed in being "that prophet" and God's anointed in being "a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek," and not believe he is God's anointed in being King over "the kingdom of our father David," and, therefore, on David's throne? The quotations from Matthew, Mark, and Luke, in giving the prophecy of Zechariah, declare that he fulfilled this prophecy; and Peter says God fulfilled his promise to David when he raised Jesus from the dead, exalted him to his own right hand, and made him both Lord (King) and Christ.

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even forever." (Isa. 9: 6, 7.) Since this has been fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth—since he is now the "Prince of Peace," since he has received "the government" (see Matt. 28: 18; 1 Cor. 15: 24, 25), etc.—he is now also "upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom," etc.

Suppose some wise Jews had undertaken several hundred years or any time before Jesus was born to tell how these prophecies would be fulfilled—not only Zech. 9: 9; Isa. 9: 6, 7; but also Amos 9: 14, 15, and all similar prophecies—would they have found their fulfillment in a poor carpenter of Nazareth, or humble peasant of Galilee, riding an ass' colt into Jerusalem, or in this lowly man's being led as a sheep to the slaughter, whose judgment of being innocent of all false charges and unrighteous accusations in his humiliation, as a lamb, was taken away, and in his crucifixion between thieves? Indeed, they would not. They did picture out the fulfillment of these prophecies, and rejected Jesus as their King and killed him because God did not fulfill these prophecies as they had expected they would be fulfilled.

This matter of foretelling how unfulfilled prophecy will be fulfilled is stated by Peter as follows: "Concerning which salvation the prophets sought and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what time or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did point unto, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glories that should follow them. To whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto you, they did minister these things, which now have been announced unto you through them that preached the gospel unto you by the Holy Spirit sent forth from heaven; which things angels desire to look into." (1 Pet. 1: 10-12.) Angels and inspired prophets knew that God said these things, and studied them, and the prophets taught what God foretold; but neither prophets nor the angels knew when these prophecies would be fulfilled or in what way they would be fulfilled. It was not necessary to know. When they were fulfilled, as stated, the wise men (!) among the Jews rejected God's fulfillment of them and in their ignorance (see Luke 23; 34; Acts 3: 17; 13: 27) helped to fulfill them by murdering their Savior. Otherwise men now, in their ignorance of unfulfilled prophecy, may help to rend the spiritual body of Christ, and thereby fulfill his prediction that "it is impossible but that occasions of stumbling should come; but woe unto him through whom they come! It were well for him if a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were thrown into the sea, rather than that he should cause one of these little ones to stumble," (Luke 17: 1, 2.)

Just so now all should study prophecy, fulfilled and unfulfilled, and should teach all that God says through them; but when men begin to search and to seek diligently "what time or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ," who was in the apostles and prophets, points out when he speaks in yet unfulfilled prophecy, and especially the things which, as in the olden time, angels did not know, and do not stop there, as the prophets and angels did, but teach their speculations as the truth of God, they are not only treading forbidden paths, but gendering strife. God will fulfill all his promises and bring to pass all his prophecies, and faith in him and trust in Christ implicity rely on him to do so, knowing that not one jot or tittle of his word can fail. "We walk by faith, not by sight."-E. A. Elam, in Advanced Gospel Quarterly, Lesson XIII, (review lesson for September 28, 1919).

A Novel Experience.

BY J. D. FLOYD.

Place: Tracy City, Tenn.

Time: Middle of August, about 1895.

Special locality: A beautiful pool made by damming a small mountain stream a little out of the town.

Persons: Myself, six candidates for baptism, and members of the Christian congregation there; the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North), his congregation, and the same number of persons to be baptized; and a crowd of spectators, many of them "rude men of the baser sort,"

At the time and place an unusual incident occurred, which is here recorded. It was the eighth day of a very interesting meeting I was holding in cooperation with the church at Tracy City. At the beginning everything indicated that there would be additions to the church. On account of the fitful nature of the small streams in and around the town, a suitable baptizing place was often hard to find. I had often baptized in a very suitable place, but, going to the same place for the same purpose afterwards, found the pool either dried up or filled with coke ashes.

Old Brother Warren was a member of the church there. He was a humble, unobtrusive man; never talked in public, never led the public prayer, was not tuned up for singing, but withal a very useful man. Many little things that did not seem to amount to much, but which would add interest to the meeting, he would look after. He looked after the ventilation and tightened up the rattling windows, and saw that the seats were properly placed. I do not know how other preachers are, but it always makes me nervous for the seats to stand one this way and another that. You could always depend on this good brother to look after these little matters. Men like him are very useful.

In my work I have had many appreciated helpers; none more so than Brother Tolbert Blankenship, of Culleoka, Tenn., who some years ago passed to the better land. He was with me eight days in a meeting at "Greenwood." in Glies County, Tenn. He would lead the prayer. Though old, his voice was clear, and it was a delight to hear him sing. He sang "with the spirit" and "with the understanding." I would go miles now to hear him sing "Will You Be There?" (No. 246 in "Christian Hymns"). "Greenwood" is in a country of hills and hollows, and there are a number of streams. There were a number of additions during the meeting. We tried to suit the convenience of those to be baptized, and hence went to a new place for nearly every baptism. Brother Blankenship would always go ahead, and when I would get there he would come to me and say: "You stand here, and take your candidate down to that place, which is the best water." That was an enjoyable week to me, and much of it from the association with this good brother. But I have wandered, and will return to the main subject.

At the beginning of the Tracy meeting, seeing from the interest manifested that a baptizing place would be needed, Brother Warren took his ax one morning and went out to one of the near-by streams. He found a place where there was an eddy in the stream. On the side next to the town was a thicket; on the opposite side, a small cleared piece of ground that had been in cultivation. He first cleared away enough of the thicket to make an open space for a good-sized congregation, cleared a road up to it, and then made a dam across the stream, and thus by a half day's work, without help, had a splendid place for baptism. For a week we had to use it almost every day. On Saturday night and Sunday morning there were six confessions, and 3 P.M. Sunday was appointed as the time to baptize them. The Methodist Episcopal Church had recently held a revival, with several accessions to the church. Six of them demanded immersion. They had appointed 2 P.M. the same day as the time, and at a place above the town. On reaching it, they found the pool filled up with coke ashes. The preacher, in a somewhat petulant way, said; "I cannot baptize here. Now what will we do?" Some one spoke up and said: "The Campbellites have a good place down below the town." So the preacher and his crowd came down to that place. It was near the time we were to meet there when they got there. When we reached the place, the preacher was conducting his preliminary service. With both crowds, the space Brother Warren had cleared away was packed full, while on the opposite side was a loose crowd of perhaps two hundred. The preliminary service being through, the M. E. preacher took his first candidate, a middle-aged lady, down into the water. He went in near the dam, but, to get to suitable water, had to go about twenty steps up the stream. The lady, as soon as she was raised up, began to throw her arms and shout, while the preacher broke out in a hearty laugh. (I never have known whether it was a holy laugh or just an ordinary laugh.) With perhaps two exceptions, this scene was repeated in each case. Catching the infection from the preacher, the loose crowd across the stream soon became hilarious. Two of the persons I was to baptize were Brother E-- and his wife. both threescore years of age. Seeing, as I thought it, such mockery, I went to Brother E--- and told him I was not willing to baptize him and the others while such things were going on, and suggested that we put it off until next day; but as he did not express himself, I said no more about it. The last one the M. E. preacher took down into the water was a rather tall woman, perhaps fifty years of age. When raised up, she surpassed all the others in her demonstration. I suppose the preacher had got tired of it, and, hence, pulled away from her and walked out, leaving her, saying: "When you get enough of that, you can come out." When this occurred, as the boys say, "the cap flew off," and the crowd across the stream just whooped and yelled. At this Brother E-, to whom I had spoken, came to me and said: "This is a shame; let us go away and come back to-morrow." I agreed to it. Brother Polk Sims, a farmer-preacher from Pelham, a man who has done untold good in the regions around, was there, and, overhearing our conversation, said: "Let us not do that, but let us try to quiet the crowc: but if we cannot, then it will be time enough to give up." I replied: "Brother Polk, that is right." Then he, in a loud, commanding voice called, "Attention!" I then stepped to the edge of the water and asked the people to hear me. While never gifted of speech, for about ten minutes, I incline to think, I made the best talk of my life. I felt that something had to be done. I called attention to the fact that baptism is a divine institution given by Jesus to the apostles in the last hours he spent with them before he ascended to his mediatorial throne; that it was connected with the supernal names of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; and described the crucifixion of Christ, his intense suffering for three hours on the cross, the commotions of nature, the darkened heavens, the trembling earth, and the opening graves. As best I could I told of the kindness of Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus in taking the body of Jesus from the cross, their anointing it and burial in the tomb, and said the darkest days in the world's history were the three days the body of Jesus lay in the tomb, but the brightest one was when the angel came and rolled away the stone and Jesus took up the life he had laid down. I then said: "Ladies and gentlemen, the institution to which we are here to attend represents these last solemn scenes. you, then, conduct yourselves in an orderly way while we attend to it?" Some one, setting the example, took off his hat, and, so far as I was able to see, every hat came off, and, with heads bare in the hot August sun, that former rollicking crowd stood as silent as death until the service was over.

Take it all in all, simple, orderly, New Testament Christianity lost nothing by the events of that day. I shall not bother myself to hunt up lessons from the incident, but perhaps a statement of a young friend to me next day meant something. Meeting him on the street, he said: "Brother Floyd, you must not be too hard on us. I was in that crowd at the baptizing yesterday; and if they had behaved, we would. In proof, I call attention to our conduct when you had charge of the service."

The Spirit of Christ. BY F. W. SMITH.

I have been, for a long time, fully convinced that many religious people have a one-sided conception of "the spirit of Christ." I use "the spirit of Christ" in the sense of the mind or disposition of Christ. My conclusions are based upon the way people speak and write about the spirit of Christ, which is the only way I have of estimating their conception of the matter. Their false ideas on the subject have led them to deprecate and deplore all contentions, oppositions, and discussions on religious subjects, holding that the Bible and the religion of Christ are too sacred and too holy to be brought within the realm of contention and discussion. Hence, they cannot stand to hear or read anything bordering on religious discussion, and for that reason will not read a paper nor hear a man preach that antagonizes the faith and practice of others, claiming that all such is contrary to the spirit of Christ. All those with such a conception of the spirit of Christ have read to little profit the record God has given of his Son, for it is only through that record that we can know the spirit of Christ. The things he spoke and did reveal to us his spirit; and when we come to consider how the Master spoke and how he acted, we have no trouble in discovering the false conceptions many have of his spirit. That Christ was gentle kind, and compassionate, full of tenderness and mercy, and long-suffering toward the weak, will be fully admitted by all who have even casually read the New Testament; and it is equally true that he was extremely severe in his denunciation of sin, the exposure and condemnation of hypocrites, false teachers, and perverters of God's word. Much of his time was spent in contentions and religious discussions with the Jews, showing how they had departed from the law of God, perverted and corrupted the worship and service of God.

A few examples of the spirit of Christ along these lines will suffice to show what a one-sided view some people have of the Christ. To hypocrites he said: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he has become so, ye make him twofold more a son of hell than yourselves." (Matt. 23; 15.) Again: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchers, which outwardly appear beautiful, but inwardly are full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but inwardly ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity." (Verses 27, 28.) He called these characters "serpents" and "vipers." "Ye serpents, ye offspring of vipers, how shall ye escape the judgment of hell?" (Verse 33.) To those who loved money to such a degree that they had polluted the sacred temple of God, our Master said and did as follows: "And Jesus entered into the temple of God, and cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrow the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold the doves; and he saith unto them, It is written, My house shall be called a house of prayer; but ye make it a den of thieves." (Matt. 21: 12, 13.) To those who perverted, added to, and took from the word of God he said: "Well did Isaiah prophecy of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. But in vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men. Ye leave the commandment of God, and hold fast the tradition of men. And he said unto them, Full well do ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your tradition." (Mark 7: 6-9.)

Thus we see how Jesus condemned and publicly criticized hypocrites and false teachers; and yet, if one of his disciples tries to follow the spirit of the Master in these things, he is accused of not having "the spirit of Christ." In so far as religious discussion is concerned, one has only to glance at the pages of the New Testament to discover the fact that Christ and the apostles were constantly engaged in contentions with opposers of the truth. To one who sought to turn a man away from the truth, the apostle Paul spoke boldly: "But Saul, who is also called Paul, filled with the Holy Spirit, fastened his eyes on him, and said, O full of all guile and all villainy, thou son of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?" (Acts 13: 9, 10.) This same apostle told the apostle Peter to his face that he had acted the hypocrite. (See Gal. 2: 11-13.) Did Paul manifest the spirit of Christ in this? Is there one so bold as to deny that Paul was following the Master in these things? Again, when false teachers went from Jerusalem to Antioch and began to teach their false doctrine, what did Paul do? Did he sit idly by and permit them to do so without a protest upon his part? Not much; but he fought them to a finish, thus manifesting again the spirit of Christ."

One of the greatest weaknesses of the church of Christ to-day is the sickly sentimentalism pervading its membership, toadying to sectarianism by decrying all religious controversy. Many refuse to read religious discussions in our papers, seemingly ignorant of the fact that they would be compelled to discard the Bible upon the same principle, for it is the most controversial book ever written. So far as I am concerned, this sickly stuff in no way is appealing, and, by the grace of my God, I intend to contend with all of my power against false teachers, whether in the church of Christ or out of it.

Is Christian Unity Possible?

BY J. C. M'QUIDDY.

The position that denies the possibility of Christian unity is at variance with the Bible and the practice of the New Testament churches. The churches in Jerusalem, Antioch, Corinth, Rome, Ephesus, Philippi, and everywhere else, as described in Acts of Apostles, enjoyed unity in matters of faith. If the position of the editor of Word and Work be true, that "if a perfect unity could not be obtained" in the church of Christ in the days of the apostles, "we cannot expect it now, nor need to be distressed if it cannot be accomplished or maintained," we are forced to the conclusion that the God of heaven issued a solemn command to man which he knew man could not obey. The New Testament church enjoyed unity in faith and liberty of opinions. Liberty of opinions, however, does not permit the introduction of opinions into the worship. It does not give one a right to speak on nonessentials where the Bible has not spoken, and thus force opinions into the worship. This course at Corinth had brought strife and discord to the Corinthians. For this conduct Paul arraigned the Corinthian church so severely that the wrong was cured, and we do not find a lack of unity when the second letter is written to the same church.

Speaking where the Bible speaks and being silent where it is silent requires each and every one to respect the silence of the Bible. For one to bring his opinions on nonessential things into the worship over the protest of another destroys the God-ordained equality of Christians. The condemnation of the Corinthians for bringing opinions over nonessentials into the church shows conclusively that such action is unscriptural and forbidden by the Holy Spirit. On this subject the lamented David Lipscomb says: "To receive and tolerate these in the church is to open the door for all innovations and perversions of the divine order. It is to crowd the church with the follies, fads, fancies, and preferences of the thoughtless, the giddy. the frivolous, the godless members of the church, and it is to drive out of the church reverence for God and his holy word, consecration, and devotion. It is to cast out the spirit of piety and holiness and reverence for the appointments and commandments of God, and of self-denial and self-consecration for God and his cause, and is to substitute for it the spirit of levity and frolic, of lightness and fleshly gratification. It is to pervert the religion of Christ in all its holy and essential elements of devotion and worship to one of lightness, frolic, and entertainment."

THE SPIRIT AUTHORIZES OPPOSITION TO THE INTRODUCTION OF OPINIONS INTO THE SERVICE OF GOD.

The introduction of an opinion into the service of God has cursed the human family from the very beginning, It was Eve's opinion that to eat the forbidden fruit would not bring death. This opinion set aside a clear command of God. She acted on her opinion, and all the fearful consequences followed that have cursed the world. Cain's opinion was that his offering would be accepted. Without having any divine testimony or any faith, he acted on his opinion. As a result, he became a murderer, a fugitive and a vagabond on the earth. Abel acted on what was clearly commanded respecting the plain command of God without speculating as to what was God's meaning on something that was not clearly revealed. The Spirit declares that Abel "being dead yet speaketh." does his example say? It says impressively and emphatically: "Do what is plainly commanded by God, but give no place to opinions or things based on opinions in the service of God." The Old Testament abounds in such teaching; but these examples are sufficient to show that it is the duty of Christians to oppose the introduction of opinions into the service of God, since such introduction has always brought misery, ruin, and death.

IT IS SCRIPTURAL TO HOLD OPINIONS AS PRIVATE PROPERTY,

In some things God has not clearly defined the way. In such cases man is left to follow his own judgment. But in such cases one man's course of action does not necessarily affect that of others nor God's appointments. Teaching on this subject is given in the fourteenth chapter of Romans. Things incidental and indifferent are treated in this chapter. To the man who could eat meats offered to idols without conscience toward the idol, to eat or not to eat was a matter of indifference to him; but they must not be eaten if thereby the weak consciences of others were led into idolatry. Some had an opinion that they could eat only herbs, while others held the opinion that they could eat meat. The man who ate meat must not condemn the man who ate only herbs, and the man who ate only herbs must not condemn the man who ate meat. Some thought it well to observe other days than the appointed Lord's day for worship. God permits this. But while Paul could eat meat offered to idols without any respect to the idol, if such eating would lead a weak brother into sin, he would not eat meat. He says: "Wherefore, if meat causeth my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh for evermore, that I cause not my brother to stumble," (1 Cor. 8: 13.) Let it be clearly understood that God does not allow any one to impose this optional service in such matters on the consciences or lives of others. The Spirit says: "The faith which thou hast, have thou to thyself before God. Happy is he that judgeth not himself in that which he approveth." (Rom. 14: 32.) This means things not commanded by Jehovah. The man may even have faith, but he is to keep it to himself with God. He is not to teach his faith in nonessentials or to practice it in such a way as to impose it on others, or in a way that will interfere with the consciences of others. Others may not be able to practice his convictions about indifferent things in faith, may have their doubts in regard to it, and hence in the doing of it would be condemned; for "whatsoever is not of faith is sin." service that lacks faith is sin. Faith cannot enter into service resting on the opinions of men. Whoever induces one to do what his conscience doubts is of God leads him into sin. The Holy Spirit commands: "Destroy not with thy meat him for whom Christ died." When you sin against the brethren and wound their weak consciences, by leading them to do what they do not believe to be commanded, "ye sin against Christ."

We have insisted, and do insist, that all teach things plainly commanded and clearly revealed. We have also urged that men respect the silence of the Bible and that they hold their opinions as private property. Instead of showing a willingness to do this, the editor of Word and Work and his associates have insisted that their peculiar views are vital, and that, therefore, they should be introduced into the churches, even if such introduction produce contention and strife. Our contention has been that he should teach the word of God; and in teaching the word of God he should teach that which is clearly revealed and plainly commanded, avoiding speculative questions that do gender strife.

SPECULATIVE TEACHING OF THE EDITOR OF WORD AND WORK. Some years ago the editor of Word and Work said to me that the way to be practical in the service of God was to teach the imminent coming of Christ. In the May issue of Word and Work, concerning the second coming of Christ, he says: " In view of this imminence of the Lord's coming-he standing, as it were, already with his hand on the doorknob, ready to open the door at an instant, at what instant we know not-the apostle urges us to be patient, and forbear murmuring one against another, lest we ourselves be judged at his appearing. Murmuring breeds trouble among brethren. Disruptions and factions among God's people always originate in much previous grumbling. As a preventive of this sort of thing, God urges a vital faith in the imminent coming of the Lord." The first definition of "imminent" is "threatening to occur immediately." Brother Boll is teaching that we should have a vital, living faith in the immediate appearance of Christ. He is so sure that Christ is going to come at once that he has him standing with his hand on the doorknob ready to open the door. This is merely his opinion, which he is making a vital faith, and, therefore, is seeking to force it into the service of God. Christ's coming may be a thousand years off, it may be ten thousand years off, or it may be fifty thousand years off. No one knows just how long it will be. According to the teaching of Brother Boll, it was imminent in the days of the Thessalonians, and yet nearly two thousand years have passed and Christ has not come the second time. Christ himself says: "But of that day and hour knoweth no one, not even the angels in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father only." (Matt. 24: 36.) It is an opinion pure, simple, and speculative, that Christ's coming is immediate. The attitude of the Christian is one of patient waiting, and not one of nervous anxiety. The editor is doing the very thing that is condemned by the New Testament when he makes his opinion a vital faith.

Matters that are plainly taught and clearly revealed in the word of God must be taught regardless of consequences. No man has a right to ignore or compromise the faith of Christians. If the teaching of the truth produces division. then division must come. There can be no fellowship between truth and error. The teaching of Christ produces division between right and wrong, the good and the bad, and the true and the false. The editor of Word and Work, in the June issue, writing under the head. "The False Unity Plea," says: "(1) All proposed unity that does not take for its basis all the teaching of God's word-holding all that is known, and providing for room and acceptance of that which may become known in the course of our study of God's word-any unity that depends upon the observance of human limitation of faith and teaching and does not stand upon all the truth, I say, is a false unity, sectarian in its nature. (2) Christians who passively tolerate or actively uphold the disguised popery of this false sort of unity plea enslave their children's children and make sectarians of themselves." If this be the editor's faith, it is no wonder that he believes we can never have Christian unity. No man will ever fully understand or comprehend all the word of God. Beginning with Adam and taking the combined knowledge of the world from Adam to the last man that lives upon the earth, and give the last man the knowledge of all human beings combined, and still that man would not be able to fully comprehend the infinite. But the editor would have us believe that to so teach limits human development and growth. But far from this. We may take what is clearly revealed and plainly commanded and have enough to occupy the minds of the brightest beings this world has ever known. We may concede that the editor of Word and Work has an astute, learned, and profound mind; yet he may use all the faculties of that mind upon the plain commands until Gabriel blows his trumpet, and still he will not be able to comprehend all that is in them. "Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men." (1 Cor. 1: 25.) No man knows all the Bible, and, therefore, cannot unite on that which he does not know; but every Christian should and does know enough of the plain commands of God to obey them, to unite with Christians on them, and to be faithful until death. This does not mean that a man should not read and study all the Bible, but it means that he should read and study all the Bible in order that he may know and obey the plain commands of God. We are not to reach out after unrevealed things. We have never been commanded to develop our minds by speculating over things not revealed in the Bible. "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." (Phil. 4: 8.) Speculations over unfulfilled prophecy are neither true, honorable, pure, just, lovely, nor of good report. It is the part of wisdom to study and obey the plain commands of God and leave alone the things that are not revealed. The infallibly safe way is to heed the admonition of the Spirit through Paul when he says: "The things which ye both learned and received and heard and saw in me, these things do," Instead of teaching speculation, Paul commands us to "hold the pattern of sound words," and also "foolish and ignorant questionings refuse, knowing that they gender strifes."

Some Things.

BY E. A. E.

Numerous letters have come to me from thoughtful men and good women of different and distant States commending the articles on the world as arrayed against the church, including the ones on dancing, and on the teaching of the New Testament against Christians' engaging in carnal warfare. It has not been possible to publish these commendations, however much they are appreciated. Not a few of these letters are from earnest and conscientious preachers. Besides these letters, many have orally expressed their approval of these articles. One sister desires to furnish money to put the articles on dancing in tract form, and a preacher sent five dollars in advance for this purpose.

These approvals have been expressed in no uncertain sound. I use this method of both acknowledging them and expressing my appreciation of them. But I appreciate them because they show that not a few godly women and many pious men still stand for the church's keeping unspotted from the world and for the teaching of the New Testament against Christians' engaging in carnal warfare. With such men and women to approve and to encourage, one does not feel so much alone.

I have never considered the articles on "The World Against the Church" complete, and hope to renew the consideration of the subject at once. Here is "the irrepressible conflict." There is eternal warfare between the world and the church. Again I ask, what is the church? The New Testament frequently mentions that something which it calls "the world," out of which the church has been called, and against which it most solemnly and most constantly warns the people of God. What is "the world?" All Christians desire to know what "the world," which they are forbidden to love, is, so that they may keep themselves unspotted from it.

"WHAT IS THE MATTER?"

Since this question has been raised before the public, I suppose any one who is sufficiently interested has the privilege of attempting an answer, provided it is given "with meekness and fear." (1 Pet. 3: 15.) Then one may fall short of a full, clear, and satisfactory solution of the question.

But wait just a moment-I hear an echo and reverberation of "meekness and jear." Jesus was "meek and lowly in heart;" "who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." Jesus was heard in prayer "for his godly fear." "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." "A meek and quiet spirit" is of great price in God's sight. "The meek shall inherit the land." "Moses was very meek, above all men that were upon the face of the earth," and very great. "The high calling of God in Christ Jesus" embraces "all lowliness and meekness," long-suffering, forbearance, and love. "But to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my word." If I remember correctly, Jesus says something somewhere about "the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." "Wherefore, receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken, let us have grace, whereby we may offer service well pleasing to God with reverence and awe; for our God is a consuming fire." Gentle reader, when did you see an article and hear a sermon on meekness, lowliness, poverty and contrition of spirit, trembling at God's word, reverence and godly fear? How many thousands of sermons have been preached, how many thousands of articles have been written, which engender strife, resentment, division, hatred, vengeance, and even bloodshed!

Yet the question, "What is the matter?" has been raised.

Can the matter be that teachers in Israel, together with the taught, speaking in general terms, do not sufficiently respect the word of God, do not tremble at it, and are lacking in reverence and godly fear? Are they satisfied with their present knowledge of the word of God, their present growth in "the divine nature" and grace of God, and have they "settled on their lees," as Judah of old (Zeph. 1: 12)? Paul was not. (See 1 Cor. 9: 26, 27; Phil. 3.) The Laodiceans were self-satisfied, but before God were "miserable and poor and blind and naked," and were lost unless they should repent. With all the abominable idolatry of Judah, with impending destruction, the people were not only satisfied with themselves, but said to others: "Stand by thyself, come not near to me, for I am holier than thou." Such characters, says God, are "smoke" in his nose and "a fire that burneth all the day." (Isa. 65: 5.) Judah did not know what was the matter, and would not believe Isaiah, Zephaniah, Jeremiah, and others when their idolatry, rebellion, and destruction were most plainly and continuously pointed out. Is it the matter that we will not now study these prophecies of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Zephaniah, Amos, Hosea, and of others; will not learn God's dealings with the nations of the earth; will not receive his warnings and repent; and will not draw nigh unto him, that he may draw nigh unto us?

Then, "what is the matter?"

It appears that many are agreed that there is something the matter.

In the first place, then, let me ask, "Lord, is it I" with whom something is wrong? When there was something most fearfully wrong with one of the apostles and Jesus had announced the startling fact, not one accused the other, but each said: "Lord, is it I?" This is free from all suspicion, is most generous, is most admirable, and is a most lofty example. Self-examination is taught in the Bible—that is, it is commanded by the Lord—and without it none can grow in the Christian graces. Let me first obey this command of my Lord before I attempt to teach others.

Try your own selves, whether ye are in the faith; prove your own selves. Or know ye not as to your own selves, that Jesus Christ is in you? unless indeed ye be reprobate. But I hope that ye shall know that we are not reprobate. (2 Cor. 13: 5, 6.)

We know this does not mean simply to subscribe to the right theory as "our doctrine," or as "our distinctive plea;" but that it means to prove ourselves by the will of God and to know and to show that Christ is in us (see Gal. 4: 19), and that we are not reprobates. Paul hoped that the Corinthians would know that he was "not reprobate." So now let us try ourselves in order to see whether or not Christ really has been formed in us, and whether or not, therefore, our own hearts are right before God and we are really godly and are actually practicing in daily living true holiness.

But let a man prove [put to the test by God's standard, or test] himself, and so let him eat of the bread, and drink of the cup." (1 Cor. 11: 28.)

I make this and the following quotations to show God's command for self-examination:

Stand in awe, and sin not: commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still. (Ps. 4: 4.)

I call to remembrance my song in the night: I commune with mine own heart; and my spirit maketh diligent search. (Ps. 77; 6.)

Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting. (Ps. 139: 23, 24,)

Who can discern his errors? Clear thou me from hidden faults. Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be clear from great transgression.

Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight. O Jehovah, my rock, and my redeemer. (Ps. 19: 12-14.)

Withhold not thou thy tender mercies from me, O Jehovah; let thy loving-kindness and thy truth continually preserve me. For innumerable evils have compassed me about; mine iniquities have overtaken me, so that I am not able to look up; they are more than the hairs of my head; and my heart hath failed me. Be pleased, O Jehovah, to deliver me: make haste to help me, O Jehovah. (Ps. 40: 11-13.)

Jesus declares that he did always the things which are pleasing to God, and that for this reason God had not left him alone (John 8: 28); that he spoke not from himself, that his teaching was not his, but God's who sent him (John 7: 16; 12; 44-50); and Paul says that Jesus pleased not himself (Rom, 15: 3), and he says this to teach Christians to please not themselves, but to please others for their edification and good. And Christ teaches all to follow him.

Thou therefore that teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal? thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou rob temples? thou who gloriest in the law, through thy transgression of the law dishonorest thou God? (Rom. 2: 21-23.)

May not people now in a partisan spirit glory in the gospel and in disobedience to it dishonor Christ?

With all these scriptures before us, we readily see that one's standing before God in purity of heart and holiness of life is the most important thing; that Christians are far more afraid of wronging others than of being wronged; and that they search more diligently for their own mistakes, inconsistencies, false teaching, and other sins than for the mistakes, inconsistencies, heresies, and transgressions of others. Also, that Christians may yield to temptations and sin, "for in many things we all stumble" (James 3: 2); but, then, they repent in sackcloth and ashes, endeavor to repair the injury they have done others, are humble, and, as the psalmist says, are "not able to look up." But is a man right before God, when, guilty of grievous sins, he is vain and presumptuous and bold, and, even upon confession of his wrongs, demands the chief seats? "There is no man that sinneth not" (1 Kings 8: 46); but are the men who live in secret sinuntil detected, who practice fraud until condemned, or who persist in teaching that which God declares must be avoided, right before God and pure and safe and scriptural teachers? The real broken hearts and contrite spirits are anxious to be restored to the joys of God's salvation, to be received into the blessed fellowship of God's children, and to be doorkeepers only in God's house. The greater sin is not that one has yielded in weakness to strong temptation, but is bold and daring and manifests the spirit of effrontery afterwards. And, to be sure, no man can constitute himself a judge of another's conscience, or broken heart and contrite spirit, or humility and penitence; but modesty, humility, contrition, meekness, and submission to the will of God come from the heart and are manifested in the life as heat and light from the sun. They cannot be assumed, or put on as a garment; they can be, and must be, cultivated and become controlling elements in life.

The fact that Paul mentions many questions which God says must be avoided cannot be denied. Will I obey God? Just here do I tremble at his word? Do I fear to disobey him? Am I self-conceited, daring, and self-willed? In my scrutinizing self-examinations, do I find that I have determined not to preach myself, but Christ Jesus as Lord, and myself a servant for Jesus' sake (2 Cor. 4: 5); "not to know anything . . . save Jesus Christ, and him crucified;" to avoid all untaught questions; to "hold to the pattern of sound words," "even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ;" to speak only as the oracles of God speak; to give diligence to present myself approved unto God, a workman who needs not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth (2 Tim. 3: 15); and to hold all my opinions to myself? Are all these commands of God to be trifled with? There can be no unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace without faithful and implicit obedience to them. (To be continued.)

Book Notices.

We are giving a Teachers' Testament to our readers. It is the book to read.

Send us $1.25 for a copy of "Instrumental Music in the Worship," by M. C. Kurfees.

We have left a few copies of "Folk-McQuiddy Discussion on the Plan of Salvation." Price, $1.25.

Pay your subscription to the Gospel Advocate up to date, renew for two years in advance, and we will give you a copy of the Teachers' Testament, which has delighted many of our readers.

Send us one new subscriber to the Gospel Advocate, accompanied by $2, which is the regular subscription price, and we will forward you a copy of the Teachers' Testament. We hear you say: "A good thing to do, and liberal enough."

Measures for the care of the thousands of Christian women and girls who have been released or rescued from Turkish harems since the signing of the armistice have been taken by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian relief.

A cablegram from Constantinople to the committee in New York announces that homes for the women and girls, and for many children also taken from the harems, have been started in fifteen cities in Asia Minor, and that preparations have been made for the industrial training of the women and girls under the direction of a committee of experts. In the homes of the Turks these Christian women and girls were treated as slaves and were not permitted to study or acquire any useful accomplishments.

After the signing of the armistice, many of the Turks, believing that by so doing they might escape punishment, set free the Christian women in their harems, turning them out on the streets to starve. Hundreds of these have been wandering the country, some of them crazed from their experiences. Many other Christian women were recovered from harems by the allied troops.

Another cablegram predicts an epidemic in the Armenian provinces and appeals for medical supplies in the largest quantities as quickly as possible. Great distress exists in the provinces, says the message.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

The Community Church.

One Mr. Holmes has undertaken to found a "Community Church," meaning by "community church" one which leaves God, Christ, and Christianity out of consideration. Any citizen is a member of said church. "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." (Ps. 53: 1.) Such folly will die without opposition; but we cheerfully give here some things said of this man's folly in the Literary Digest:

The other side of the Community Church idea is presented by one who does not at all see the brilliant aspect represented by John Haynes Holmes, who has converted the church of the Messiah into a nonsectarian church requiring not even a profession of faith for membership, cerquiring not even a protession of fath for membership, cer-tainly no emphasis upon anything that might be called "Christian." Dr. Hoimes rings the old slogan of a church of the people, by the people, and for the people," and rejoices in the divorcement of the denominational alliance. There is a bright vision of a coming day when the Community Church "will unite in a common brotherhood all the people who desire to serve without regard to race, class, or previous condition of religious servitude." Some arguments against this project are presented in The Congregationalist (Boston) by Mr. Arthur E. Holt, who exhibits the indictment most crucially from the standpoint of the small community:

Isolation is the curse of the small community. only point of contact which many communities have with the outside world is through the channels of an internathe obtaine world is through the chambers of an interna-tional church organization which takes community thought out to the world problems and brings world problems and world characters to the community. If the church is now isolated with the community, how great is that isolation!

"Again, the small community does not spontaneously generate a beautiful spirit of worship out of its own uncultivated resources. One wise man plus one wise man plus one wise man plus one wise man may create a council of great wisdom, but one fool plus one fool plus one fool plus one fool will never give expression to anything except accentuated foolishness. The scrubby, degenerate stock of some herds of wild horses is the product of isolation and inbreeding. The great stock breeders of the West search the world for strains of the best breeds which they may introduce into their Western herds in order to build up the quality of these herds. The scrub stock is found in the communities where no outside blood has had the chance to penetrate. The strongest contribution to a scrub human stock which could be made would be made by a community church which isolated the people from the best which has existed in the past religious history or does exist in present life.

"It will doubtless be maintained by those directing the Community Church movement that it contemplates the Huking of the communities together in larger fellowship. But does any one think that all other religious organizations will be displaced, and shall we not have one more religious organization multiplying denominations in the interest of church unity? Has the history of part of our denominations nothing to teach us along this line?"

The logic of dispensing with Christian attributes for the Community Church is declared unassailable. be the case with the church which decides to stand on a community platform," says Mr. Holt; but, he maintains, "this only proves how much superior is the church which is willing to stand on a Christian platform and maintain a community program." For-

Such a church keeps itself in touch with the best which the world has known and at the same time places this best at the disposal of the most needy community in fellowship and service, and such a church will of necessity relate itself not to some rarefied form of the church invisible. but to some sensible form of the church visible.

"Again the advocate of the Community Church assumes that geography is the determining fact in the lives of peo-Geography may bring people together, but it is a lacking in power to cause them to unite. The ortotally lacking in power to cause them to unite. society will never or cause them to unite. The or-ganization which draws a qualitative line through human society will never organize people on the basis of geogra-phy. A man's foes may be those of his own household and his own community.

"The advocates of no denominationalism gratuitously assume that a denomination can be the contraction."

assume that a denomination can bring only tyranny to a community, which is exactly the opposite of the truth. denomination may be the channel through which the nation's greatest blessings can come to a community. Great personalities find their influence extended to even the most out-of-the-way place through ecclesiastical channels. The denominations with their experts can carry expert knowledge to communities which would otherwise be entirely lacking in heip along these lines. An organization may be a source of life-giving power. Such a program as the Interchurch World Movement offers to the small community has infinitely more of promise than the program of the Community Church."

Less opposition appears in the Christian Register (Boston), which formerly functioned as the spokesman of the Unitarian Church. It prefers to be regarded now as a journal of liberal Christianity, going not so far as Pr. Holmes in easting off the terms which signify alliance with the historic church. In the following reasoning it appears that the whole matter is more a question of terms than of inner spirit, and Dr. Holmes, in running ahead of his time, anticipates the future indeed, but denies himself some of the strength of the present. We read:

Now Dr. Holmes will have his chance. The church has changed its name to the Community Church of New York, and it will proceed to 'receive members,' according to his statement, 'in the same way and to the same end that a community receives its inhabitants—on the basis, that is to say, of cittzenship. Any man or woman who is a citizen of a community will by that fact also be a member of the church. [We hope so.] As freely as he enters the town meeting and shares in the public business, so freely will he enter the town church and share in the public worship. Making allowance for negligent townspeople, surely this is an acceptable proposition. In fact, it is already in effect in many places, though with explicit Christian conditions. The Community Church as 'the community functioning religiously' is one of the objectives of the Massachusetts Federation, and in Colorado they are attempting essentially the same thing in towns where denominations are not in operation. Though he eliminates the Christian name, Dr. Holmes here describes an entirely Christian Ideal. It is congenial to the Unitarian denomination, which in every community is peculiarly in sympa-thy with the community rather than the sectarian mind. We are not, moreover, sticklers for a name. Dr. Holmes only launches upon an enterprise ahead of his time. Other churches everywhere are doing in denominational name almost as supersectarian work as Dr. Holmes is doing, and they will do it with less of the name more and more; and denominations will pass away. We have never doubted that. Let us get right to the heart of the matter. What is the religion of Jesus Christ but that very nameless and elemental human thing which is native to every soul? In sum, Christianity has its distinction not because it is something sui generis, but because more than any other religion we believe it is the common and natural religion of all mankind, in doctrine, spirit, and deed. More than one Unitarian dislikes his name. It arouses in many minds all the difficult feelings that embarrass any other denomination. It remains to see how quickly the new idea grows. Of course, it will not mean that the members will agree in all things; but they will have less and less regard for an already diminishing list of beliefs. Of these there are many which mean nothing and add nothing to the life that now is or is to be. The really greatest thing of all is that only a Christian Church could become a Community Church. But this, we understand, Dr. Holmes denies.

Nature is the raw material which grace molds for God: and a strong nature does not lose its strength because it has been made holy and pure. Such is the range and power of grace that we can despair of no man. Out of the very stones of pride and of unbellef it can raise up children to the Father of the faithful.-H. P. Liddon.

A man can gain much profit every day, if he refer all actions not in themselves praiseworthy or blameworthy, such as eating, drinking, walking, sleeping, etc., to the divine Will; and, therefore, he neither eats nor drinks, hungers nor thirsts, but because it has pleased God that he should do so .- Selected.

How Good the Thought, "The Father Knows!"

What should be more consoling, more comforting, more encouraging, than the thought that our Father in heaven knows—absolutely knows—our every motive, desire, and purpose in all that we try to do, and knows all about our circumstances and the difficulties under which we sometimes have to work? I ask again, what should be more helpful to us than this? People so often misunderstand us and attribute motives to us that are unjust, and sometimes about this we worry. But why should we worry? Does not the Father know? And the consciousness that he knows, and that your motive was as pure as it was possible for you to make it, should drive every shadow of worry or anxiety from you; and this it will do unless you are slightly afflicted with the fleshly weakness that loves the praise of men.

There are a number of scriptures just here that I wish to introduce for the purpose of raising the question, "Are we believing and obeying them?" First, let us notice 1 Pet. 5: 7: "Casting all your anxiety upon him, because he careth for you." This comes in direct connection with the command to "humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." (See verse 6.) It is our business to make the surrender, to humble ourselves before our God; and it is his to exalt us when he sees it is best, and to control, absolutely, the consequences of all our experiences and make them work good to our souls. Is it not so? (See Rom. 8: 28.) Why should we worry, then, if we have the consciousness of the absolute purity of our every motive and purpose in life? The Father knows this as well as we, and will take care of us.

Then here is another scripture: "In nothing be anxious; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." (Phil. 4: 6.) If you are honestly doing your best to please God, to save souls, and are keeping your conscience clear toward God and man, then why not just leave all results with the One who knows this so, well and who is so abundantly able to take care of us? Why should you worry? The next verse is sufficient to tell you whether you are doing this or not. Verse 7 says, conditioned on our doing what is said in verse 6: "And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding [especially yours], shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus." Do you have this peace? Or are you tormented almost to death for fear some man or set of men will misunderstand you and think your motives are not just what you want them to think they are? "Men pleasers," it seems to me, can never be free from anxiety. When you start out to get yourselves understood by men, you are up against a pretty tough proposition. Some men are too perverse to understand; others are too prejudiced and so eternally busy thinking of themselves that they have no time to give you thought. Why not take the Bible way, the better way, the only way that is good for man-viz., just see to it that you are right with God, and be satisfied in the consciousness that he knows? Is this not enough? "So that with good courage we say, The Lord is my helper; I will not fear: what shall man do unto me?" (Heb. 13: 6.) Isaiah put it exactly right when he wrote: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee." (Isa, 26: 3.)

In this singleness of heart, may God ever keep us. We have just one God, the Heavenly Father. Beside him there is no other to whom we must go and before whom we must fall. In the name of his Son, and through his Son, our Lord, let us ever keep our heart fixed on him, and all will be well. He is able and willing to do for us "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think." It is enough to please him. Do this, and just as many men on earth will be also pleased with us as should be, and the rest will be displeased with us, and it is best for us that they so be.

How Dreadful the Thought, "The Father Knows!"

While the thought of the Father's knowing all about us is sweet and encouraging to the man or the woman whose heart is right before him, who each and every day is doing his or her best to do the things that are honorable, just, pure, lovely, and of good report (Phil. 4: 8), it is also true that the thought of his knowing is dreadful to those who are not so living. Whether this thought is dreadful to them now is not the question; for I hardly think they give God much thought: they are giving self more thoughtself-justification too much thought to let God in. But certainly it is true that the thought of people's being deceived, thinking they are right when God does not think so, forgetting things they have done when God has not forgotten, making impressions on men's minds about matters that are the very opposites of what God thinks about it-I say such a thought as this is dreadful!

O, fools we are! Will we never come and fully surrender to the fact that God knows and will never forget our sins and transgressions unless we repent and put things in a condition for him to forget? We may forget our wrongdoing, but never can be forget unless we "clear ourselves," and to this end whole-hearted repentance is an absolute essential. (2 Cor. 7: 8-11.)

Do you remember the lie Ananias and Sapphira told? Turn to Acts 5: 1-11 and read it prayerfully. They simply tried to make the impression that they were giving more than they really were giving-viz, all that the possession they sold brought, like others were doing, when they had brought only a part of the price of the possession. God killed them then and there, as an example, because, I am quite sure, he saw that they would never do better than this, would soon forget the lie they had told, come to think they were the very best in the church, die in this condition, and be forever lost. I am sure they would not have been killed if God had seen any hope for them. The language that God "is long-suffering to you-ward, not wishing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance," certainly teaches this. (See 2 Pet. 3: 9.) But if he had not killed them, how soon they would have forgotten this-as man would view it-"small bit of deceit, this slight false impression," and would have filled their places in the congregational worship and been called Brother Ananias" and "Sister Sapphira," and eulogized and admired by many as among the best in the church, and would have come to believe, with all the sense they had, that they were good people, and gone to their graves having forgotten a thing that God had not forgotten!

Our workers were all busy in this section yesterday (June 29). Brother John Klingman spoke at South Pryor Street in the forenoon, and then was driven over into Cobb County, to Liberty Hill, where he spoke in the afternoon. Brother Garrett took Brother Brooks' place at East Point in the forenoon and at night, doing some baptizing at the close of the evening service. Brother Brooks spoke at St. Elmo, in Chattanooga. Brother Silas E. Templeton was at Hardie's Chapel and Macon, in which section he has been laboring for the last few days. The writer spoke at West End in the forenoon; at Providence Baptist Church, out from Palmetto, in the afternoon; and at the tent, on the corner of Glenn and Cooper Streets, at night, where the revival continues with unabated interest.

MISSIONARY

Report for January, February, and March.

BY LILLIE CYPERT.

January.—Received through Brother Janes, $31; through Miss Straiton, $24.75; through Brother McCaleb, $25.

February.—Received through Miss Straiton, $8.95.

March.—Received through Brother Janes, $36.25, $21,30; through Miss Straiton, $18.20; from David Lipscomb College, $22.50.

The above liberal contributions paid my expenses and removed the deficit that has been mentioned from time to time in the papers, leaving me a balance of $10.77. I am so happy to have the deficit removed, and am thankful indeed to all the donors, and especially so to those faithful ones whose names seldom fail to appear in the list of names sent to me. May they all be abundantly blessed.

I have recently bought a bicycle to assist me in the work, since my work is so scattered and some of it off the car line. Out of my income I now support the Zoshigaya Sunday-school work, and the rest I use for my daily needs generally. My great desire and prayer is that I may be a faithful servant and use the means that God gives into my care as it pleases him. Pray with me to this end.

The Zoshigaya Sunday-school work is increasing both in number and interest. The sewing school has increased about one-third in number at the beginning of this term. The work at all the other places is prospering. There were ten baptisms at the Kamitomizaka Church on Sunday, April 6. Two of these were for the Otsuka Church. Brother McCaleb left us on April 7. We all miss him very much, but rejoice with him that he can at last go home.

Last Days in Hawaii. No 1.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

On May 21 I conducted the prayer meeting at the Christian Church in Honolulu, and took for a subject: "Fruit Bearing" (John 15). About a dozen women and four or five men were present. It will be remembered by those who read the Gospel Advocate more than twenty years ago that Brother F. D. Garvin started the church in Honolulu without connection with the society or the use of the instrument. It was not long, though, till the society agents came along and usurped the work. The church also in its early history had some mission points in other parts of the city, the work largely of Brother W. K. Azbill and Sister Calla J. Harrison. But the spirit of the world continued to enter in, a new house was decided on and the missions given up that they might centralize on the big church. The preacher turned skeptical, preached destructive criticism, and conditions have continued to go on from bad to worse. One of the strange things is that, while the church and its missions were established by those called "antimissionary," the missionary work of the church was stopped by those posing as champions of the missionary cause. There are still some good people in the church who would love to see a return to the New Testament order.

May 22.—Went with Mr. and Mrs. Schleiffer, Mr. Copeland, and Misses Starksburg and Caton to the town of Aiea, about an hour's ride by train. We took lunch along and had a picnic by the sea, not far from some laborer's tent. By it was a cotton stalk that had grown up into a bush; for, as there are no frosts here, cotton, the castor bean, and other similar plants grow up into small trees, and even weeds do not know when to die. After the picnic we proceeded to the picture-show house for a meeting. The young men went out and "compelled them to come in," so that we had an audience of about three hundred—a mixed multitude, indeed—Filipinos, Portuguese, Chinese, Hawaiians, Japanese, and those mixed in between. large per cent being Japanese, I was requested to speak in their tongue. The Japanese preacher, Mr. Fujishiro, was present. The two young men spoke in English and Mr. Weeden spoke in Chinese. So the language of the speakers was about as badly mixed as the audience. Indeed, we spoke in tongues that night. The two unmarried women were Pentecostal people; the two young men, Plymouth Brethren; the Chinese, not defined; while the writer was just a plain sort of Christian, such as we read about in the New Testament, having no denominational distinction. The Pentecostal sisters believe in Christians now having spiritual gifts such as they had at Pentecost. While we were picnicking at the sea I suggested to Miss Starksburg that to-night would be a good time for her to exercise the gift, as we had such a mixed crowd; but she said she could only exercise the gift when given by the Holy Spirit. She and Miss Caton have spent several years down in the Fiji Islands, a group of islands lying in the South Pacific near the equator. I asked If the Lord endowed them with the Fijian tongue, and they said, "No." It will be noted that this is where Darwin, in his earlier days, went as a scientist and found the natives naked cannibals. Some twenty years later he made another visit and found that the missionaries had converted the whole population to the extent that they had ceased eating one another, wore clothing, and observed Sunday. He was so impressed with the change that he became a convert to missions and was ever afterwards a regular contributor. These two women confirmed the story. They said, however, that their religion was not of a very high order and that about half were Methodists and the others Roman Catholies. The Seventh-Day Adventists have about six hundred converts.

May 24.—Being Saturday, Brother Bowman had a half holiday from the bank; so we planned on an auto ride to the beach. Sister Bowman and little Margaret, her little cousin Genie and her papa, Mr. Livingston, Brother Bowman, and the writer made up the party. We skirted the beach for a mile or two, then went back of Diamond Head, a volcanic mountain that stands right out in the sea and resembles a crouching lion, from all directions the most conspicuous object about Honolulu; then up a valley by a stock ranch of horses, cows, pigs, and chickens; then by Koko Head, which reminds one of Mount Sinai, and around the base to the great sea. Here we came upon some men fishing with hook and line. The bank, which was sand, sloped rapidly, so that a little way out the water was deep. They baited with pieces of fish. With an overhand sweep of the pole they would throw the line as far out at sea as possible, then, sticking the pole in the sand, sit down and wait for a bite. They had caught five or six about two feet long, a kind of sucker called in the Hawaiian tongue "oio." A little further on the black volcanic rock jutted right out into the sea; but it lay in ledges, forming an excellent place to walk. The rock, by the constant washing of the waves, had been worn into many odd and fantastic forms. Basins had been hollowed out, some of which were three or four feet deep, and which were left full of water by the receding tide. These pools were teeming with small fish (some were five or six inches long), crabs, and other denizens of the deep. As I was looking at one of these pools, I thought what an excellent place for baptizing. At one place the water had bored its way under for thirty feet or more, then up ten or fifteen feet to the top of the rock, making a hole the size of an ordinary well. As the waves came rushing in they caught the wind and forced it and the water up through this natural well in a white spray that at high tide rose fifteen or twenty feet high.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

G. W. Jarrett, of Woodlawn, Tenn., has some open time for meetings in August and September.

From Ben West, Ennis, Texas, July 2: "Sunday was a fine day here. Attendance and interest excellent. The Bible classes are well attended."

After an absence of seven years, Brother McCaleb is enjoying a visit with his family in Louisville, Ky. His address is 2625 Montgomery Street.

William P. Walker, one of our most useful evangelists, desires to rent a tent to be used in Fayette County, Tenn, the last two weeks in July. Address him at Route 4, Clarisville, Tenn.

From M. S. Mason, Rogersville, Mo., June 26: "Since writing I have filled my regular appointments. Reclaimed one at Walnut Hill and baptized one at Masters. Owing to deay of crop by rain, I called off my meeting at Bethel, near Marmaduke, Ark., and will not begin protracted-meeting work till July 12, at Kennett, Mo."

From J. G. Malphurs, Russellville, Ark., July 5: "Beginning in July 20, C. R. Nichol, of the church of Christ, will meet a discussion L. H. Shelton, Materialist, at the Mill Creek church of Christ, the debate to last four days. There is a treat in store for all those who can attend. Those who come from a distance will be taken care of by the Mill Creek brethren. Let us know if you can come."

Fron J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., July 1: "The following gifs to build a church house in Muskogee have been receivet; Previously reported, $395.50; Mrs. G. T. Criner, Stepheis, Ark., $2; church at Bixby, Okla., $15.85. We appreciate the kindness of every one who has assisted us in this much-needed work, and we hope that many others will respond to this call, so that we can have a permanent house and not clways stand in fear of having to move before our next service. My address is 1412 Baltimore Street, Muskogee, Okla"

From Irs. Ida Harding, Lehi Junction, Utah, June 24; "As I reat the Gospel Advocate and see so much good reading in it ind notices of so many good meetings, I wonder why there cannot be a church of Christ established here. There is not a church in this community or anywhere close, only a Mormon Church, or the 'Latter-Day Saints,' as they cal themselves. It seems so terrible that we cannot go to our meeting on the first day of the week, simply because there is not any near us. We are members of the little church of Christ in Gainesville, Ark. When we are sending misionaries to foreign fields, I think it would be good to have one here. Why not?"

From A. J. Traylor, Union, S. C., July 3: "The tent meeting coninues with interest and good crowds. Last Sunday was I great day with us. We organized our Sunday school, and fifty-three were enrolled. Every one present was ready and willing to enroll with us and seemed to be glad to have the opportunity of being in a Sunday school where hey could study the Bible as it is written. Two more preious souls have made the good confession and will be buted with their Lord in baptism on Saturday evening. Man more are 'almost persuaded.' Satan's agents are at work with all of the power that they possess, but, by the hell of God and the 'sword of the Spirit,' we are marching onto victory. Brethren, pray for us, that we may be able to gercome the wiles of the devil."

Our readers wil be glad to learn that the mission meeting that began inRochester, N. Y., on June 22, has already borne good fruit. An encouraging report has been received from Sistel Eunice C. Fisher, through whose untiring efforts the meeting was arranged. She tells us that when the meeting is over Brother Elam will leave a band of fourteen people at least, perhaps more, who will worship "as it is written." We will depend upon Brother Elam to give us a more lengthy account of conditions in Rochester and the prospect. Those who have aided this meeting in any way may know that the contribution was well bestowed. L. G. Kennamer, of Woodville, Ala., led the song service in this meeting, and did his work well. Upon his return from Rochester, N. Y., Brother Elam will preach on the second Sunday at Olmstead, Ky., and will begin a meeting at Christiana, Tenn., on the third Sunday in July.

Annie Peters, secretary of the Orphans' Home, Luling, Texas, writes: "I wish to remind the brethren everywhere that Sister Clarke's birthday is again approaching-July 20. This is always a happy occasion to the children here. as we celebrate that day, and all offerings sent are used for our pleasure and benefit. This year we wish to purchase a new typewriter. This Home has always used a secondhand machine, and this is why I do not send out well-written letters. Besides, I have not yet completed my high-school course, and a good machine will enable me to have more time to devote to my studies. We also want something else, and that is a victrola. I can imagine I hear some say: 'Those children do not need that; our children have none.' Brethren and sisters, if this should be the opinion of any, I ask you to consider that your children are not in an orphans' home, where almost all of the entertainment we have is provided. Your children can go from their homes to hear music and be entertained in various ways not practical for us, as there are too many of us. To be happy and contented, we need innocent amusements provided. I trust you will indorse this appeal and send liberal offerings to Sister Jennie Clarke for this

J. P. Halbrook sends us an interesting report of a meeting at Belzoni, Miss. He writes: "In a meeting beginning on June 15 and closing on June 22, with preaching at night only during the week and twice each Lord's day, J. P. Lowrey, of Senatobia, Miss., did some excellent preaching to the faithful few in Belzoni who refuse to desist in worshiping and working 'as it is written.' While there were no additions to the one body, and we that are members are few in number and were able to persuade only a few from the various denominations to hear, still we are not discouraged to the point of giving up in the effort of getting the people to hear, believe, and obey the simple story of Jesus' and his love, and, therefore, mean to 'have it over' at some future date, the Lord willing. Brother Lowrey preaches the gospel in clear and unmistakable terms, so that any present may know what to do to be saved-a thing so conspicuous by its absence in the preaching or lectures of sectarians. If in the State of Mississippi there were one dozen loyal preachers as anxious to get the gospel before the people, in the face of the sacrifices incidental thereto, as is Brother Lowrey, denominationalism and sectarianism would to a large extent soon melt away as the mists before the sun. We believe that Brother Lowrey is making his sacrifice willingly; for he seems, with the peerless apostle Paul, to feel that woe is unto him if he preaches not the gospel, and, like Paul, he has not picked an easy place in casting his lot in the State of Mississippi. But where are the eleven to help him evangelize the State? We believe there are enough to 'go around' all right, if the old and numerically big congregations with whom they labor-or, rather, of whom they are a part-would only insist on their going, and they (the preachers) had the faith and energy to say with God's servant of old: 'Here am I; send me.' We must not, we cannot, give up the fight. May God continue to bless and encourage us through his word and through such faithful servants as Brother Lowrey."

Training Little Children

Learning to Play and Work With Others, the Child's First Lesson in Social Training.

I like to remember that Froebel said: "The nursery was my university." This statement gives every mother a bond of understanding and sympathy with Froebel and his ideals as they have been worked out in the kindergarten.

The best modern kindergartens center their programs largely around the natural home activities of the child; hence, even though mothers may find it impossible to secure kindergarten privileges for their children, materials and opportunities are close at hand with which to provide, to some degree, at least, for this need.

Last February a laddie who was just "half past three," with hands well scrubbed and nails manicured, cut out thirty-eight valentine heart cookies for his mother. Before he had finished, he learned to be neat, quick, firm of touch, and economical in his spacing. In addition, he was unconsciously gaining a sense of participation and cooperation and the feeling of being a "real help" to mother.

Last autumn the same little laddie gathered a large pailful of scariet summer seeds, which we plant every spring around the play fence.

Children love to have a place that Is their "very own." My husband and I feel that the eight dollars we invested In a fence for a play yard for our two boys were well spent. The play yard is fifteen feet square and contains a little cherry tree, some grass, and a large space from which grass has long since disappeared. Here we put a big sand pile, which, when wet, supplies dough for all sorts of delectable bakery products, and when dry affords opportunities for constructing bridges and mysterious tunnels.

The play yard is the place for tea parties in the "hungry middle of the afternoon," It has not only supplied the needs of our own children, but is quite the social center of the neighborhood-too much so, one mother sometimes thinks!

Songs, stories, handwork, and nature study are important lines of kindergarten activity which a mother can pursue at home, with the help of a few good books and her own resourcefulness. The child deprived of kindergarten is not so likely to suffer for want of these activities as for the lack of the social training, which, to me, is the biggest contribution of the kindergarten. The child needs to play with other children. "Here," says Jean Paul, "the first social fetters are woven of flowers." And therein lies the unique value of the little play yard. Children learn there to give and take, to adjust themselves to each other and cooperate. They also develop the initiative that makes for leadership.

Play in the play yard is undirected, so long as harmony prevails.

The neighborhood is the next larger natural group after the family and prepares the child for a conception of the larger school group and the community. In the summer I invite the children of the neighborhood-about sixteen in all-to come to our big lawn twice a week and join in our "Twilight Play Circle." During the winter I also invite them to come once a week to play indoors. We call the winter meeting our "Neighborhood Fun Club." I took my neighborhood as I found it, and the children vary from three-year-olds to two eighth-grade girls. One of the latter plays the piano for us and the other helps in numberless ways. I serve no refreshments.

Last winter we learned three simple folk dances and a number of the beautiful games that are so deeply moted in the early social experiences of the race, such as "London Bridge" and "Here we go 'round the mulberry bush."

We also played other games suitable for a large number of children indoors and learned about thirty riddles. Children who could read prepared special contributions, such as child poems of Eugene Field and Robert Louis Stevenson. Two little girls sang duets for us, and one day we had a little guest who taught us some charming solo dances based on "Mother Goose" rhymes.

The children's love of the dramatic was shown by their fondness for guersing pantomimes. A child usually planned a patomime beforehand and then invited others to help him work it out for the rest to guess. Our jantomine material was drawn largely from "Mother Goose," "Æsop's Fables," and well-known fairy tales,

Our "Fun Club" takes some of my precious spare time, as well as a considerable amount of energy, but I fed that it pays for myself as well as for the children. It makes me realize what Froebel's friend meant when he said: "It is like a fresh bath for the human soul when we dare to be children again with children." .

He That Loseth His Life.

Religion demands social expression like all other great human impulses. Without an organization to prodaim it, to teach it, to stimulate it, the religious life would probably be greatly weakened in the best, and in many would be powerless and unknown. The mischief begins when the church makes herself the end. She does not exis for herown sake; she is simply a working organization to create the Christian life in individuals and the kingdon of God in human society. She is an agent with large povers, and, like all other agents, she is constantly tempted to use her powers for herself. Our modern political parties were organized to advocate certain political principles and realize them in public life. Gradually they have come to regard their perpetuation as an end in itself, and public welfare is subordinated to party victory. Our public-service corporations exist for the public; but we know how these, our servants, have become our masters, so that the publicexists for their dividends. This slow, historical embezzlement of public powers, this tendency of organizations and institutions to aggrandize themselves at the exense of the ends for which they were called into existence, is one of the most important phenomena in moral life. There is no permanent institution but has succumbed to this temptation. The organization of the church is simpy one sinner among many, and not the worst by any mems. Her history is the story of how she fell by rising and rose by falling. No one who loves her can serve her better than by bringing home to her that by seeking he life she loses it, and that when she loses her life to serve the kingdom of God, she will gain it.-Walter Rauschenlasch.

Our Lord's Army. BY F. E. EXUM.

The bulk of the work performed by the church of Christ since the reconstruction period has been to enlist a comparatively small army to fight for righteousness. It is a standing army, and, because of inactivity, is falling away almost as fast as it is being recruited. The leaders of this army are doing very little leading; they are not putting it out in the field. The order from our Lord Jesus Christ, the great Commander in Chief of this army, is: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." This is a stupendous task, and at the rate we are now going we cannot carry it out in a hundred thousand years. The sooner we look the facts squarely in the face and take steps to remedy the situation by using every good facility at hand and the principle of cooperation as set forth by the apostle Paul, the sooner we will begin to make creditable progress toward carrying out the great commission. The Lord's army is of sufficient size and quality to make good progress, if the parts comprising this army were cooperating together and concentrating on the An army on the battle field would be doomed to certain defeat if each regiment acted independently, without regard for what the other regiments were trying to do, and at the same time they would all have the same object in view-viz., the defeat of the enemy. This is exactly the condition of the church now; all congregations have a desire to bring about the defeat of Satan, but they have no unity of action to couple with this unity of purpose. What little work is being done is of a local nature, with very few exceptions, and this is because of noncooperation because each congregation is isolated from the other. Could an army on the field dig a trench thirty miles long in a single day without cooperation and without concentrating on the lines mapped out? No. And neither can the Lord's army accomplish anything noteworthy toward carrying the gospel to the whole world without using the principles of cooperation and concentration -concentration of strength and cooperation of effort in applying that strength. The former applies principally to the finances of the church.

There are towns in our own State where there are no congregations of the church of Christ, and there are whole States in the United States that scarcely have a congregation, and at the same time there are in Nashville and a few other places hundreds of young men who are quite able to preach the rudiments of the gospel that would be glad to go and preach daily and establish congregations in

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and umusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos distinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a choe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last welve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fig. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't walt, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

these destitute places; but why don't they go? It is not because of a lack of faith, as some would have you believe; it is because these men realize that it is inconsistent for them to go into communities where there are no members of the church of Christ and ask the people there to support them, and because the congregations comprising the whole body are not joined together by joints and bands of cooperation to give them financial support. It is the power of the gospel that saves souls; "but how shall they hear without a preacher?" The bulk of the body (what should be the real strength and driving power of the body) is composed of members who say that they cannot do active public work. The only way, then, that they can do their full duty is to "minister seed to the sowers" (those who are doing active public work); and I believe they would be glad and willing to minister the seed if the sowers were put out in the field.

Reports of later contributions will follow. The struggling brethren in Washington wishes again to express their sincere thanks for the donations received. We hope others may come to our aid soon, so that we may erect the house without delay. Since God has blessed you with an abundant harvest, cannot every farmer give the price of one bushel of wheat to build a house of worship in the capital of the United States? At three o'clock to-day (June 28) the treaty of peace was signed by Germany. Now let us turn our hearts to God in thanksgiving and prove our love to him by giving to the spread of the gospel as we have never done before. Let us build a good house of worship in this city, which is before the world as the greatest city on the globe at this time.

Scientific Treatment for Rheumatism.

Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rhaumatism, it is necessary to neutralize this acid. Financial Report.

BY H. A. ROGERS.

The following is a report of receipts and expenses in connection with evangelistic labor from February 20, 1918, to June 16, 1919:

Received from Schnellar Church, Saskatchewan, Canada, $95; Knoxville Church, Saskatchewan, $60; Lyndale Church, Saskatchewan, $20; Sister James Graham, Saskatchewan, $3; MacRorie Church, Saskatchewan, $56; Omaugh Church, Ontario, $65; Brother W. W. Husband, Wawota, Saskatchewan, $175; Brother R. Wil-Hamilton liams, Ontario, $87; Church, Ontario, $185; Meaford Church, Ontario, $12; Ellis Brown, Saskatchewan, $2; Sister Eckstein, Saskatchewan, $1; "A Brother," Ontario, $7; Sherwood Church, Ontario, $30; Cape Rich Church, Ontario, $10; Brother John Fonstad, Saskatchewan, $5; Brother H. L. Richardson, Ontario, $2; Sister Gertie Tallman, Ontario, $1; people of Quinton, Saskatchewan, $22; Brother Gordan Tavell, Manitoba, $10; Brother A. Beamish, Manitoba, $5; Brother F. Morgan, Manitoba, $5; Brother T. Laycock, Manitoba, $10; "A Sister," Meaford, Ontario, $10; "Unknown," Carman, Manitoba, $25; Leonnardville Church, Ontario, $24; Sister Johnson, Ontario, $2; Woodgreen Church, Ontario, $6.60; Brother S. Whitfield, Ontario, $5; Brother Perry's mission, Saskatchewan, $86; Wardsville Church, Ontario, $12.30; Brother Johnson, Deep Creek, B. C., $40; Brother John Mallory, Deep Creek, B. C., $50; Calgary Church, Altamont, $30; Regina Church, Saskatchewan, $15; Sister Olang Strom, $5; Brother E. Fisher, Ontario, $4.90; Sister James Hall, $2; Mr. James Hall, $5; Punnichy Church, Saskatchewan, $11; church at Richardson, N. B., $10; meeting at East Millars, Manitoba, $12.35. Total, $1,224.65.

Out of this the writer paid to J. P. Kimbrell $59.50, and to Brother E. H. Clark, who is carrying on the work I began at Punnichy, Saskatchewan, last winter, $115. This, with expenses in connection with the work—such as traveling, board, hall rent, and such as is necessary—amounted to $749.80 for the sixteen months. Deducting $174.50 paid to Brother Clark and J. P. Kimbrell, there is a balance of $575.50.

Dear brethren, I desire herein to express my sincerest thanks to you for the cooperation received in this grand work.

I have worked hard to sow the seed of the kingdom of Christ into the hearts of the people. Out of the sixteen months, I spent four at my home helping to look after the necessaries of life for my family, leaving me twelve months on the evangelistic field. During this time I established a church at Knoxville and Punnichy, Saskatchewan; revived the church at MacRorie, Saskatchewan; conducted meetings at Deep Creek and Hulcar Hall, B. C.; spoke twice to the Vancouver Church; spoke six times at Calgary, Altamont; conducted meetings at Perry's, near Punnichy, and at Mount Green, Tribune, Quinton, and Lyndale, Saskatchewan; and was one week at Carman, Manitoba. During this time I preached two hundred and ten times, baptized thirtyfive, and reclaimed two. If you consider the work which has been done worthy of a continuation of your cooperation, I would be glad of the same. Much seed has been sown which should bring forth fruit if the good work were followed up.

You will notice that Brother and Sister W. W. Husband, of Wawota, Saskatchewan, come second in the list of contributors. This, indeed, speaks the sincerity of their hearts for the Lord's cause in this country. There are hundreds of brethren, no doubt, who are in as good a position as Brother Husband is to give. If we only had one hundred to give thus, how many evangelists we could have in the field, and how many churches established!

Brethren, let us not weary in welldoing. We shall reap if we faint not. If I have overlooked any contributions, please advise me.

Giving Entire Satisfaction.

There is a remarkably effective combination of blood-purifying, nervestrengthening, liver-stimulating remedies. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, for the blood, taken before eating; Peptiron, for the nerves, taken after eating; and Hood's Pills, for the liver, taken as needed.

It is giving entire satisfaction. Persons suffering from a combination of ailments, such as cause eruptions on the face and body, paleness, pallid lips, cheeks, and ears, and constipation, especially find it beneficial.

The treatment accomplishes so much that, although there are three medicines, it is the most economical. Each of these medicines is of superlative merit for the troubles for which it is especially recommended. Each is good alone; all are good totogether. You are bilious, siuggish, consti-pated, and believe you need vile, dan-gerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here is my guarantee: druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it does not start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick, I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel to-day, and to-morrow you will feel weak and sick and nau-seated. Do not lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone to-night and wake up feeling great. It is perfectly harmless; so give it to your children any time. It cannot salivate; so let them eat anything afterwards.

OBITUARIES

Hyde.

On April 9, 1919, the angel of death went into the home of Brother Robert Hyde, of Wyatt, Miss., and took away Rosa B, Hyde, his wife. Sister Hyde was born on August 13, 1886, and was married to Brother Hyde on August 12, 1906. A few days after she became the wife of Brother Hyde she obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Jasper Dunn. She was a loyal Christian. In her home she never tired in her efforts to bring sunshine and happiness. She will be missed in her home, in the community, and in the church. She is survived by her husband, four bright little girls, and three brothers. The funeral services were conducted by the writer. Her life was one of beauty and devotion here, but it will be more beautiful "over there."

J. P. LOWREY.

Towery.

Brother Henry M. Towery was born on May 1, 1837, in Hamilton County, Tenn., and died on April 25, 1919, in the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Wilson, in Fort Smith, Ark., at the ripe age of eighty-one years, eleven months, and twenty-four days. was married to Miss Sarah Elizabeth Shelley on May 8, 1865, to which union were born six children—four girls and two boys. Two preceded him in death. He leaves a faithful and somewhat feeble companion, three daughters, one son, several grandchildren, together with many friends, to mourn their loss. Brother Towery became a member of the Baptist denomination earlier in life, but he saw the true light and obeyed the gospel about forty years ago, since which time his influence and sacrifices have been above the average for good in the church of Christ. So far as I have learned (and I have been in his home and in his surrounding community a good deal), there were few doubts of his honesty, integrity, and sincerity. He was a friend and a father to me from the first meeting. I was called to speak words of comfort to the bereaved at his burial, which took place the fourth Lord's day in April—a day which he had anticipated enjoying with the church in the all-day services in the new meetinghouse at the Prairie View (Ark.) cemetery, near their old home. A large audience attended, and their friendship and love were manifested in many ways. He will be greatly missed; but he so lived while He will be here that, though he rests from his labors, his works will follow him.

J. H. WHISNANT.

Craig.

William Davis Craig, son of O. T. and Anna M. Craig, was born in Franklin, Tenn., on March 20, 1859. He was struck by a train in Tacoma, Wash., on April 14, 1919, from which he died the following day. He was married to Dora Beech, of Williamson County, Tenn., in the spring of 1887, to which union were born four boys and four girls. The wife preceded him to the spirit world about thirteen

LEMONS BRING OUT THE HIDDEN BEAUTY

Make this lotion for very little cost and just see for yourself.

What girl or woman has not heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to bleach the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness, and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating, and should be mixed with orchard white this way: Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well, and you have a whole quarter pint of skin and complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms, and hands, it should help to bleach, clear, smoothen, and beautify the skin.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost, and the grocer has the lemons.

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national head-quarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the in ventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

years, and the oldest daughter, Mabel, about six years. Being of a very quiet, unassuming disposition, he was not so widely known as some who, perhaps, do no more and no greater work than he. While yet in his "teens" he began making talks on Sunday afternoons to those who would gather at the schoolhouse in the hill these efforts he gradually grew in grace and knowledge of the truth and soon began to much soon began to reach out into other fields, confining his work almost solely among the poor and unlearned. Not long after marriage he moved to Arkansas, and then, after a year or two, to Mississippi. In these States and to Mississippi. In these States and West Tennessee he spent a number of years, where he established a number of congregations, teaching the truth to many who never before had heard. Later he lived and labored in like manner in Alabama and Florida. In the fall of 1905 he and family, in com-pany with the writer and family, removed to the State of Washington, where he made his home till the fatal He always lived a poor man among the poor, never seeming to try among the poor, never seeming to try to accumulate the things of this world, but rather set his "affection on things above," "where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God," "not on things on the earth." The house in which he lived was once destroyed by fire; an appeal was made (without his knowledge) through the Gospel Advocate, and in a short while, having received sufficient funds to replace the very little furniture, he requested that no more be sent to him, but to others more needy. I have labored more or less in the same territory, and found that he was held in high esteem wherever he lived. When John was despondent in prison, he sent two of his disciples to Jesus to ask: "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" Jesus replied: "Go show John again those things which ye do hear and see: the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to Brethren, we may not be able, and are not able, to accomplish the healing of all these physical ailments as was the Savior; but by a proper administration of the gospel, the true spiritual remedy, we may be able to heal those, or at least many of those, who are spiritually blind, lame, deaf, or dead, and it is certain that we can see that the gospel, "the power of God unto salvation," is preached to the poor. We are glad indeed to know that though the children are left or-phans, they are Christians, and the older ones will do all in their power to be father and mother to the young-May Heaven's choicest blessings be theirs. Havana, July 1.—I am now in a meeting near this place, which began on June 27. This is a mission point, and, while a few sermons have been preached here by our brethren, this is the first gospel meeting ever held in this community. One brother and his wife live here, and they are wanting to give the people a chance to hear the gospel in its purity. Brethren around are coming some, which is, indeed, very encouraging to us. I go from here to Ravia, Okla., for my next meeting. Let us work, watch, and pray, and God will help and bless us along the way.—D. S. Ligon.

California.

Tulare, June 26.—Our meeting began on June 8 and closed on June 22. Brother T. B. Larimore did the preaching. Two souls were added by bap-tism and one by membership. Although our audiences were small, except on Sundays, we feel that the meeting was a glorious success. The brethren from other localities were The present on Lord's days and some came during the week. Brother Larimore shunned not to declare "all the coun-sel of God." We are still working to the end that souls may hear the gospel, believe the gospel, and obey the gospel. During the meeting we sucgospel. During the meeting we succeeded in adding a number of donations to our building fund for the purpose of securing lots on which to build a house of worship. Tulare is taking on new life, and we think that in the near future we will have a place of worship of our own. Any loyal brethren desiring to come West will not make a mistake in locating in or near Tulare. Two new school buildings and a public auditorium will be built this year, and a nice hotel and other buildings will follow, which will put Tulare on the map.-L. Meade Williams.

Portageville, June 26 .- I am now in the midst of a mission meeting at this place. This is my second meeting I held a meeting here last September, and we started a small congregation to meeting in the City Hall. We are here in a tent. The people of the city are attending well. I recently held a meeting at Steele. There is an open door here for the pure gospel. There are a few members in almost every community. The cause of sectarianism is weak and the masses are ready to hear the pure gospel. Southeast Missouri is the most inviting mis-sion field of which I have any knowledge. We have only two preachers in all the domains of this country—Brother Laird, of Campbell, and Brother Mason, of Rogersville. Both of them are fully employed. There are several counties that have not a preacher in them. The fields are preacher in them. The fields are white unto harvest, but not a single laborer in the harvest. Will the churches of the South hear the Macedonian call and send forth laborers into this harvest? The church at Obion, Tenn., where I preach, will be one congregation to give ten dollars per month toward supporting a preacher in this much-neglected field. Let brethren and churches who are inter-Let ested write me at Obion, Tenn.-F. O. Howell.

If we would indeed have knowledge thrive and flourish, we must water the tender plants of it with hollness .-Selected.

BY J. PERRY HODGE,

The Spirit of Christ and the spirit of the devil are engaged in deadly combat, and their warfare is for the final mastery, their objective being destruction of the works undertaken by the other. "For this purpose the Son of man was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil." (1 John 3: 8.) Therefore "there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels." (Rev. 12: 7.) The dragon is the devil. (Rev. 12: 9.) The Spirit of Christ leads to life eternal; the spirit of the devil leads to eternal death.

When Jesus was born, the devil was standing before the woman that brought him forth, and with the Roman arm in the person of Herod sought to slay him, and did slay all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the borders thereof, from two years old and under, in his efforts to slay him (Matt. 2: 16); but this Child who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron (Ps. 2: 9; Rev. 12: 5) completed his personal ministry which his Father gave him to do before he was finally slain, and was caught up unto God and to his throne (Rev. 12: 1-5). The devil in this exercised his power of death, but hell did not follow in this case, for Jesus did not remain in the dead state, because he, having the power over death, came forth out of the dead state, and was caught up to God, and to his throne, for he has the keys of death and of hell. (Rev. 1: 18.)

The woman of Rev. 12, that brought forth Jesus the Christ, is the new covenant, and answers to Jerusalem which is above, and is the mother of all babes in Christ and all that keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ. (Gal. 4: 24, 26.) This allegory is explained by Paul at Gal. 4: 22-26. Of course, Mary was the mother of Jesus according to the flesh.

When the dragon, which is the devil (Rev. 12: 9), laid violent hands upon the only begotten of the Father and crucified him, but was powerless to prevent his resurrection or to prevent the testimony of them who saw and talked with him after his resurrection. he was overcome, for "they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony" (Rev. 12: 11), and he was cast down to the earth, and his place was found in heaven no more (Rev. 12: 8). "And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child! . . . And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her

So the dragon stands before the woman now and seeks to destroy all babes in Christ as soon as they are born; for as soon as the seed, which is the word of God (Luke 8: 11), the incorruptible seed of which all such babes are born (1 Pet. 1: 23), falls into their heart, he does all that can be done through the false prophet and the tempter to catch away the truth out of their hearts (Matt. 13: 4, 19), or to bring troubles or persecutions upon them such as will cause stumbling and falling in those not strong (Matt. 13: 5, 6, 20, 21), or to bring cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches as means of choking out the word in those who otherwise would have been fruitful (Matt. 13: 7, 22). and in every way known to his diabolical mind, making war against those who keep the commandments of God and have the testimony of Jesus Christ (Rev. 12: 17), even to slaying them for the word of God and the testimony which they hold; but of this class we are to speak under another Those who by any means heading. are turned away or prevented from following Christ, through lusts or through cares of this life or riches or any other thing, are they that will go down into death, and who after the judgment will enter into the second death, which will be everlasting; for hell follows the death of all such.

This warfare, which extends throughout the world and in which angels of both are engaged, and which is being waged for the dominion over mankind, has for its actual battle ground the heart of the individual, and every individual in which this warfare is being waged is servant to him to whom he yields obedience; for "know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" (Rom. 6: 16.) Every false system of every kind must be destroyed, and every agency that is employed in building up false systems must be destroyed, and every cause that produces false systems must be destroyed; but the weapons used in their destruction by those guided by the Spirit of Christ must not be carnal. "For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh; (for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds;) casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." (2 Cor. 10: 3-5.) "For we wrestle not against

Look around at the men and women you meet in a single day. One glance is enough to tell the ones with plenty of rich, red blood, strength and physical energy to back up their mental power and make them a success in whatever they undertake.

Dr James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.). New York and the Westchester County Hospital, says that to help make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans there is nothing in his experience which he has found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated fron. It often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, rundown people in two weeks' time. It is conservatively estimated that Nuxated Iron is now being used by over three million people annually and it has been used and endorsed by such men as Hon, Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the Treasury and ex-Governor of Iowa; General John L. Clem (retired), the drummer boy of Shiloh, who was Sergeant in the U. S. flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." (Eph. 6: 12.) But while the Spirit of Christ wrestles not with flesh and blood, nor uses carnal weapons, the devil, in his effort to bring death and destruction upon all. arrays the flesh against the spirit; for he knows that if he can get people to live after the flesh, they will die (Rom. 8: 13), and that hell will follow the death of all such. "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." Your Greatest Problem—That Boy of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations, his ideals, his inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs, and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects. Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection that character. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., to-day, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

Slayden, July 2.—Our meeting at Vanieer closed last Sunday night. Two were added to the body of Christ. We are in an interesting revival here this week.—William P. Walker.

Memphis, July 1.—On the fourth Sunday in June I preached for the colored disciples near Neshoba, about fifteen miles from the city. The services resulted in two additions. On the fifth Sunday morning I preached in Brother Norred's place at Harbert Avenue to a nice congregation. In the afternoon, in company with Brother Wright and family, I again visited the colored brethren. They had three additions that day-two at the morning and one at the evening service. These people are extremely zealous and strong in the faith. A good part of what has been accomplished in this section among the colored people is due to the untiring efforts of Sister Annie Tuggle. She is strong in the faith, and not only stands well among her people, but the white brethren speak of her in high terms. You may sometime have the pleasure of meeting her, as she is devoting a good por-tion of her time and talent to the conversion of her race; and when you do meet her, you will be perfectly safe in giving her assistance in so far as circumstances permit. Brethren, as we have opportunity let us help them help themselves .- J. A. Cullum.

Denton, June 30.—On June 8 I closed my work with the church at Terrell and moved to Denton to labor with the church here. The church at Terrell numbers only about seventyfive, but in most respects it is the strongest church I have yet labored with. The brethren own their building, a neat, modern, pressed-brick structure, and on decidedly the best location for a church in the city. During the time I labored with them they kept up the support regularly every week; kept up their running expenses, put in a new furnace and a heater for the baptistery, installed book racks, the baptistery, installed book racks, and bought one hundred new song books, all amounting to not less than three hundred and fifty dollars, and, besides this, they sent to the Belle Haven Orphans' Home, at Luling, about twelve dollars and fifty cents per month, and answered many other calls for assistance. Still they had on hand, I think, about two hundred dollars when I closed my labors with Considering everything, I feel sure that I have never served a more faithful congregation, nor a more appreciative one. We separated with the best of feelings, and I am sure there will ever be a warm friendship between the congregation and my family and myself. On account of sickness, we reached Denton a little late, and I was not able to even be present at the services the first Sunday ever, the next Sunday I attended the morning service and spoke for a while. There was a large and apprewhile. There was a large and appreciative audience, and they gave us a right royal welcome. In my humble judgment, Denton is a most promising field for the accomplishment of great good. With the large congregation and its wide influence and the great schools here, who can measure the good that is possible? We have two other preachers in Denton-Brother R. L. Whiteside, who has labored for about four years for the church here, and Brother D. S. Ligon, who is doing evangelistic work. I am expecting much assistance in the furtherance of the Lord's work from these good brethren, and I hope to be of service to them in their work. All meetings were well attended and interest good yesterday. Nine young ladies identi-fied themselves with the congregation yesterday and one on last Sunday,-R. D. Smith.

A Century of Service

In 1820 a good, old-fashioned doctor in North Carolina prepared an ointment for skin eruptions. It met the needs of his patients, and has likewise met the needs of millions of other doctors' patients. Gray's Ointment, the compound he prepared, is now rounding its hundredth year of honest, good, old-fashioned service and value. It is very effective for sores, boils, cuts, bruises, burns, stings, eczema, and the many similar forms of skin cruption. It soothes the pain, cleanses the wound, kills the germs, and begins healing. Poultry Expert Gives Away Chick Food

To introduce to the poultry raisers of this section a Chick Food that is nationally known, E. J. Reefer, the Poultry Expert, Third Floor Reefer Building, Kansas City, Mo., is giving away free a one-dollar package of Chick Food absolutely free to every poultry raiser who agrees to tell his neighbor about it. This medicated Baby Chick Food is sold on an absolute guarantee to raise chicks for six weeks, and it is backed by the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City. Send Mr. Reefer one dollar and he will not only send you one regular dollar size package of Chick Food, but he will include in the same shipment an extra package absolutely free, which means he will send you two regular full-size dollar packages of this scientific medicated Baby Chick Food for only one dollar. And he will prepay all charges on the first order. Considering that this product is guaranteed by the National Reserve Bank and that it keeps baby chicks for six weeks, every poultry raiser should certainly try this scientific medicated Baby Chick Food without further delay. It will pay you to write Mr. Reefer to-day.

Edifying as the Need May Be

The New Life.

When John A. Broadus was preaching in one of our Southern States just after the Civil War, an old colored man attended the services, and after the sermon he was asked just what he thought of the eloquent preacher's effort. The old man shook his woolly head and gave a grunt of dissatisfaction. "He ain't no great preacher; I understood every word he said." In speaking of this incident, Mr. Broadus accounted it the greatest compliment that was ever paid his preaching. Simplicity should be a cardinal note of all our teaching. The Bible, that part of it which God intended for us to understand and obey, that part which delineates the gospel plan of salvation, is so simple and plain that a child of tender years with ordinary intelligence can appropriate its truth. We shall endeavor to write simply in the presentation of a very profound subject. The New Life.

Bear in mind this thought, that a subject may be very profound and yet not hard to appropriate. The sea, we know, is very deep; but if a man falls overboard, it won't take long for him to reach the bottom of it. Again, a thing may be a mystery, never at any time clearly intelligible, but its blessing easily within our reach. For instance, no scientist will ever be able to explain the complex composition of the human eye, but the smallest babe in Christendom can see with its eyes. No scientist will ever be able to explain the workings of the human hand, but the smallest child in the Sunday school can truthfully sing, "I've two little hands to work for Jesus."

Jesus worked miracles, but it was not necessary for people to understand how his miracles were wrought in order to become beneficiaries. It was only necessary to believe that Jesus had the power and obey. The United States Department of Agriculture experimented for several years in an effort to produce an orange that would grow in Northern climates, and finally met with success. "Tangelo" is the name of this new fruit. How was it produced? The wiry, tough, sour, little orange of Japan was united with the luscious Florida orange. This is only one of many miracles that men have wrought. We cannot understand just how the marriage took place, but we can eat the oranges. Every time a man obeys the gospel, is buried with Christ in baptism, and rises, he rises from that watery grave a new creature. These words describe a miracle that is constantly being performed, where God works the miracle and we receive the blessing.

There is a great law known to naturalists as "the principle of selection." It has been called "the magician's wand by which the agriculturist may summon into life whatever form he pleases." What is possible to man in the natural realm is more than possible to God in the spiritual. He can, and he will, "make all things new." We should not question his miracles any more than we question the miracles of man.

We cannot hope to bear fruit pleasing to God unless we are united with our Savior in the holy act of baptism. Before we can live a life, we must enter that life. Before we can grow into spiritual manhood, we must be born a spiritual babe. Before we can add to our faith, there must be a demonstration of that faith. There is an old legendary tale that the crab-apple tree said to the cherry tree; "I think I will produce cherries this year." "That is strange," laughed the cherry tree-"that such an absurdity should enter the heart of a crab-apple tree; for as far back as the memory of trees goes was it never known that a crab-apple tree could produce cherries." "O, well," said the crab-apple tree, "you need not be so amused about it. I am a tree, as you are; and if I want to raise cherries, I am sure I can; at any rate, I'll take my chances with you." "But there are no chances," said the cherry tree. So the spring sped on and the blossoms came. Nor was the crab-apple tree without its share of blossoms-but not cherry blossoms; and as the days went on the full-ripe cherries hung upon the cherry tree, while somewhat later there also appeared fruit upon the other tree-but no cherries. Now, the crab-apple tree might have been grafted in some way or other with the cherry tree so as to produce cherries; but of itself, apart from the other tree, it could do nothing.

There are many who display the foolishness of the crabapple tree in their arguments about life. They seem to think that they can live right and bear fruit pleasing to God without ever entering into the church at all. Of this kind are they who say: "My lodge is enough for me. I honor Christ in the lodge. Why, don't you know we never let a man in unless he believes in Christ?" Without saying anything to the discredit of the lodge or anything disparaging of the many good works that it accomplishes, I want to say that you cannot get into Christ by getting into the lodge, and you have absolutely no promise of escape from condemnation out of Christ. The lodge may serve other useful purposes, but surely no one will claim that it was ever instituted to save the soul. Entering a lodge is by no means equivalent to entering Christ.

The Campaign to Raise Funds to Improve the Buildings of David Lipscomb College.

BY E. A. E.

The more we see of the trend of modern education, the ways and foolishness of the world, the standards set before the youth of the land, and the numerous cults and almost innumerable phases of various religions, the more we are impressed with the solemn duty of all parents to teach the word of God in the home dillgently to their children, to nurture them most prayerfully in the chastening and admonition of the Lord, to set them a good and faithful example, and, when they send them to school, to be sure not to send to any which will undermine their faith in Christ and the Bible, fill them with vain ambitions and worldliness in general. But to find schools free from these objectionable features is the question.

Then, the more we inquire into this matter, the more we see and feel the need of such schools as David Lipscomb College, where the Bible is taught as a textbook daily to all pupils alike. The need of such teaching as such schools should give cannot be estimated. The young must be taught not to measure life and life work and their true mission by material prosperity, the accomplishment of vain ambitions, and worldly standing; because life is "more than the food, and the body than the raiment," and "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." Correct and high ideals must be placed before the young. When they go from their parents' hands to school, they must be placed where the ideals will not be lowered.

The time is short, the summer will soon be ended, and the directors of the school must have the money to make these improvements at once. Let us all work now. Do not forget that the week embraced between August 24 and August 31 is rally week, when we want to roll up the amount necessary to do the work, which we must complete this summer and fall. School opens on Tuesday, September 9, and on that day all pledges and contributions will be publicly acknowledged; and we hope, too, we can then say the money has been raised.

Generous reader, give what you are able to give to this cause of true education, talk this matter up with others and persuade them to give, and help in both these ways to complete this good work.

Send all contributions and pledges to Prof. H. Leo Boles, David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn.

War Work in Montgomery, Ala.

BY E. R. BARNES.

In the fall of 1917, Camp Sheridan was opened at Montgomery, Ala., and the vanguard of the Buckeye Division began to arrive for military training. Soon, also, two aviation fields, a remount depot, and an immense base hospital were added.

Leaders of all the churches and social organizations in the city began to consider and to devise methods for entertaining and safeguarding the soldiers who were to sojourn in their midst. Thirty thousand young men suddenly injected into the body of a municipality of barely thirty thousand white population was going to create problems. The task of providing for their spiritual and moral welfare was going to be stupendous. Every thinking Montgomerian foresaw this.

The story of Montgomery's achievement in caring for these thousands of boys will never be fully written. Chapters of it, however, have been written in the letters of thanks from them and from their grateful home folks. During the holiday seasons of 1917 and 1918 thousands of visitors were entertained also—visitors from the North, from the South, from the West, and from distant New England, even. Montgomery cared for them all. Homes of wealth and homes where mothers did the housework alike were thrown open. The retired cotton planter's mansion sheltered the Woolworth salesgirl come to bid good-by to her soldier husband, a buck private. Southern hospitality—or, better, Christian hospitality—advanced its reputation many degrees.

THE CATOMA STREET CHURCH.

The Catoma Street church of Christ is situated only three blocks from "the Square," the city's heart. Its leaders realized that it would necessarily have a big part In ministering to the needs of the soldier boys. So it turned out. Those Ohio lads were churchgoers. They came to Catoma Street Church in numbers. They filled the auditorium.

After watching experiments and making some, Catoma Street decided that it could do the most good by supplying the "home touch" to these boys far from their homes. So they were urged to join Sunday-school classes, to occupy front seats at the church services, to attend song practice. These things they readily did. Furthermore, after a soldier boy had proved himself, he was called on for active service. It was often that four stalwart young Christian soldiers would wait at the Lord's table. One served as song leader, some taught classes, others would lead in prayer or make exhortations, and twice brethren in khaki filled the pulpit.

But Catoma Street Church did more. It undertook to invite home to a family dinner every man in uniform. Some Sundays this was utterly impossible because of the many soldiers present. The strange ones, the lonely-looking ones, were given preference. How they did enjoy the home-cooked meal! How vastly more they enjoyed the companionship of good men and women, of happy young people! What a relief from camp scenes and routine! How much better than treading down-town streets or visiting sinful places! The Sunday afternoons of Catoma Street Church members for two years were largely given over to entertaining soldier boys. Week-day evenings and holidays, too, were often spent thus. The boys would talk of their homes and exhibit pictures of their dear ones.

Let it not be concluded that in showing kindness to soldiers any lines were drawn. Never was it asked, "Are you a member of the church of Christ?" but, "Have you an Invitation to dinner?" In one home alone were entertained representatives of the following religious beliefs: Catholic, Christian Scientist, Lutheran, Evangelical, Jew, and all the well-known Protestant bodies. Nineteen States were represented, and France and England.

So well did the Catoma Street congregation do its part that its ability was utilized by the War Camp Community Service. Frequently a homesick, despondent boy was sent to the church of Christ for warmth and encouragement. One elderly sister was appointed to "mother" a New Yorker (religion not known), who was threatening to be A. W. O. L. His mother had just died of influenza. His brother had "gone West" among the poppies. He himself, being refused a furlough, was growing desperate. He was steadied safely through this dark hour by the sister. A Pittsburgh lieutenant greeted his father and mother at the train and led them forthwith to meeting at Catoma Street Church. So rejoiced were they, although Presbyterians, over this church association that upon their return to their Northern home they began the practice of taking a soldier home:

APPLIED CHRISTIANITY.

We speak of applied mathematics. This was applied Christianity. Nothing could be more practical, more beneficial, than to "keep the home fires burning" and to keep the church ties binding for these young soldier boys, absent from home and church. "Will you write mother, please, and tell her I was at church?" came the request many a time. The anxious parent back home could tell, too, how much consolation the letter brought.

No sight could be sublimer than a doubly brave youth in the khaki of the federal soldier being guided into the baptismal water by his aged Christian father wearing the bronze cross of the Confederate veteran. That pair worshiped again at Catoma Street Church on June 29, the youth just back, safe and sound, from France. No music could be more affecting than soldier worshipers resolutely singing:

"Be not dismayed whate'er betide, God will take care of you; Beneath his wings of love abide, God will take care of you."

These were boys of the Thirty-seventh Division, and very likely some who sang gave up their lives in the Argonne Forest. Catoma Street Church feels that it did something to fortify these brave fellows for danger here and to increase their desire for eternal glory hereafter.

BROTHER STUBBLEFIELD.

In all that was done, Brother C. M. Stubblefield, the minister, was the director. He took the ground that it was no time for discussion, but for action. Not theories were needed, but work for the salvation now and hereafter of those dear boys. He gave his time and means freely; he visited the camps and the hospital; he distributed good literature; he wrote letters; he cultivated intimate relationship with the soldiers; and, chiefest of all, he preached wholesome, scriptural sermons. To him much of the credit is due for the good accomplished.

Only through character and goodness did Christ win his right to judge human souls. Only by preserving character and goodness can his ministers retain their hold upon the consciences of men. Christ himself is the ladder on whom we climb to heaven. The church is the ladder, because it stands for and represents Christ himself.—W. L. Kinsolving.

The Proposed Peace League.

BY LEE JACKSON.

I have read with much interest Brother McQuiddy's recent editorial comments relative to the proposed league of nations. In truth, this is a matter about which I have felt great concern, and for this reason I have read with interest all on this subject that has come into my hands.

As Brother McQuiddy has wisely suggested, all consideration of the subject as a question of national concern should be wholly divorced from partisan politics. Timeserving politicians are neither mentally nor morally prepared to properly handle questions of such momentous concern to our nation and to the world of mankind at large. Back in the days of the Roman empire, when tribes and nations were brought together under one ruling head, and that head was Rome, the power of Rome to enforce her demands upon the other peoples of the world was very great, indeed; and yet the giant power of ancient Rome was but a pigmy compared to what would be the power of a compact league of modern nations, equipped with all the modern instruments of deadly warfare. If unselfishly actuated by the spirit of the Prince of Peace, such a league might mean the beginning of a millennium of peace; but if, on the other hand, it should be actuated by a worlddominating spirit of commercial greed, it would mean more extensive and bloodier wars than any of the wars of the past, with the rights of the people of the weaker countries altogether ignored. The great power of Rome did not quell the weaker nations into submission to her selfish demands; and so bloody wars continued until Rome's great power was eventually frittered away by her continual hammering at her despised enemies-everlastingly trying to bring a peace to her empire, which never did come. Should this league compact introduce us into a period of world warfare instead of peace, it would then mean the suffering and dying of thousands of our home boys upon foreign battle fields in Asia and Europe, and possibly in Africa. At this present time the word "peace" has an alluring, fascinating sound to all lovers of peace and friends of righteousness, and these good persons need to be warned that all those who are now calling for an international peace league are not wanting this league simply for the sake of peace. It is plainly visible that commercialism and political self-aggrandizement are large dominating factors in all of their plannings.

In one of his editorials Brother McQuiddy deplores the fact that some of us are more ready to pull down than we are to build up. But it must be remembered that a league of nations as a means of securing world peace is an untried measure and has not yet been built up. Some of us are simply asking to be shown the very best of reasons why we should lend our influence toward pulling down any of our American freedom under existing institutions in order to make room for an untried measure which may not bring peace. Under our governmental Constitution, as it is written, we have heretofore enjoyed our civil and religious liberties, with just enough restrictions thrown around us to make us good citizens of our American republic. With this Constitution, which guarantees our institutions of freedom, the great heads of European powers have never been satisfied; and here in our own country. with increasing wealth and expanding ambitions, many of our own citizens have become dissatisfied with it and want to either change it or advoitly discipline our people in drifting away from it. Only recently we have experienced the effects of a temporary suspension of a part of this Constitution, simply a suspension that was made necessary because of a temporary alliance with European nations. Men could not openly express their conscientious convictions in regard to certain matters because of this suspension in the interest of the alliance. With this recent experience before us, we certainly do not want to pull down the fencings of our free institutions in order to give free rein to those who wish to impose upon us an untried measure that will to a greater or less extent place us under the control of the ruling powers of Europe.

President Faunce, of Brown University, has written a book, entitled "Religion and War." He is placed before us as one of the great educators who favor the formation of a league of nations as a means of securing the world's peace. In justifying his claim that war is sometimes necessary as a righteous means for correcting evils, President Faunce cites the history of the Israelites, and says: "It is, therefore, clear that the sanguinary wars of the twelve tribes were not waged in spite of their religious faith, but because of it. Warfare was not a lapse from moral purpose, but was the fierce and resistless incarnation of that purpose. The people fought not in occasional forgetfulness of Jehovah, but in devout remembrance of his explicit commands. . . . Nationality and religion were one. To be constantly ready for war was the finest proof of religious devotion." In this manner our devout advocate of a league of nations leads up to further saying: "The hard sayings of Jesus cannot mean the passive acceptance of evil as if it were good. They cannot inculcate the duty of neutrality in the face of crying injustice and oppression. . 'Resist not evil,' and all the sayings that go with it, never can mean cowardice, nor easy acquiescence in wrong, nor weak self-effacement, nor indifference to the precious things that are threatened by evil powers." This quotation from President Faunce simply presents a conception of the foundation principle of the proposed league, and it is the principle by which it is proposed that it shall be maintained. As respects the necessity for war, or if any "crying injustice and oppression" calls for war, then the conscience of the individual must be governed by the national conscience, and the nation must determine its course of proceeding by the decision of the supreme council of the league. The tendency of this teaching is to make nationalism and religion the same thing. It means that the decision of the supreme council is to settle the question as to whether at any time a just cause for war exists, and that all national wrongs are to be righted by the combined power of strong armles. If an erring nation can be brought to terms without the use of these armies, all will be well; but if not, then war is to be the means by which the league's demands are to be enforced. Our wellmeaning visionaries may think that they are advocating a measure whereby the peace of the world is to be kept through moral suasion, but I have seen no claim put forth by any of the national leaders that does not require the maintenance of large armies, and as a member of the league our own country is to furnish her full quota of troops; and it may be well for us to take notice that none of Europe's nations appear to want the league if the United States is not made a party to it.

At some time in the future years—it may be far distant or it may be near—I am looking for the fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy of peace, when nation shall not lift up sword against nation, and men shall not learn war any more; but that good time cannot be realized by means of leagued nations that seek to enforce peace by use of well-drilled and well-armed soldiers. With these preparations for war, we may expect wars to continue.

"None of the stories of atrocities committed by the Turks on the Armenians are exaggerated in the least."

This statement was made by E. B. Chappell, who has just returned from Armenia and Syria, where he has been conducting an investigation of the conditions in Armenia.

Mr. Chappell was a member of a commission of eighteen, appointed by the United States Government last March, to visit Egypt and the remains of the Turkish empire to report on and do relief work among the Armenians.

The first place visited was Port Said, where more than seven thousand Armenians were huddled together in a concentration camp, brought there and cared for by the British and French forces who had rescued them from the hands of the unspeakable Turk. From there the commission journeyed to Cairo, where they arrived in the midst of a riot, which the British soldiers quelled after charging the mob with fixed bayonets.

On his visit through Syria, Mr. Chappell said he found conditions among the Armenians were the same in nearly all places. Thousands of men, women, and children were starving in spite of the fact that the American and British governments were trying to stop the suffering. Several orphanages and hundreds of relief stations have been established to help stop the suffering.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

O Ye of Little Faith!

BY LOULA MARIE ADKISSON.

The wild winds rage, the angry waves mount high, And darkness falls on Galilee's blue sea. The bark's adrift, the seamen face the spray, The lightning leaps—ah, see that form, O see! It treads the seething sea with kingly mien; Nearer still, and they peer so anxiously. But hark! a voice is calling to them, "Be of cheer." 'Cross the sea he comes—Galilee's blue sea—Comes softly walking on the water's crest, Comes gently wooing wind and wave to rest.

Across the waves the daring Simon calls:
"Lord, bid me come to thee upon the sea."
He bids him come; faith looms like mountains high; With eyes fixed on his Lord, he treads the sea—Softly—firmly—then the footsteps falter,
Then a plaintive cry—"Lord, save me," he saith.
With hand outstretched, he bows his kingly head As to him he says: "O, thou of little faith."

The wind and waves were gently wooed to rest, The moonlight softly fell on Galllee, Again the pale beams flecked a quiet sea.

O soul that's sinking in the sea of sorrow, 'Neath the waves of doubt and fear, to you He saith: Look thou to me, "O ye of little faith."

Precious, O Lord, in thy sight is the death of thy saints, which finishes thy greatest work, the perfecting of souls: whom thou esteemest as the jewels of heaven and choicely gatherest them into thine own treasury.—John Austin.

One of the surest proofs of growth in the spiritual life is the increased depth of contrition.—T. T. Carter.

MISSIONARY

Last Days in Hawaii. No. 2.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

May 25 was the last Lord's day I spent in the mid-Pacific paradise. Miss Calla J. Harrison and her adopted daughter, Cora, observe the Lord's Supper in their own home at Wahiawa, about twenty-five miles from Honolulu, where they are engaged in teaching. I went out to meet with them. We selected 1 John 5 and read verse about. Though there were only three of us, it was a season of refreshing and a communion with the Lord as well as one another. Sister Harrison is one of the first missionaries whom I met on going to Japan, twenty-seven years ago last April. She was then under the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, but has long since severed connection with that body and for many years has been teaching for a support, and at the same time has been teaching Christ. Her soul is still aglow with missionary zeal; and she says when a missionary of the true order is sent to these Islands, she will lend him her support.

I returned to Honolulu in time for the night meeting at the "Gospel Mission," near the station. This is a work conducted by the Plymouth Brethren. They observe the Lord's Supper every Lord's day and practice immersion. They try to avoid all denominational names, but, with many others, hold the error that one is saved as soon as he believes. None of their "gatherings" in America use the organ, they told me, and here they never use it at the Lord's-Supper meeting. They were very cordial to me and invited me to speak on several occasions. I did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. Mr. Piesch (Peach) on this occasion also invited me to speak. I took for my theme the conversion of the jailer. After I had closed, he followed with some remarks and tried to agree with me, but at the same time emphasized Paul's words: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." After the meeting was over, a Filipino expressed a desire to be baptized. Mr. Piesch said they would attend to it the following Thursday. I felt a regret that I was not in full control, so that I might attend to it myself "the same hour of the night" if need be. One or more of the churches of Christ in America should select a married man, full of faith and the Holy Spirit, and hasten him on to this field, where the harvest is plenteous, but the laborers few.

These audiences at the "Gospel Mission" are made up of several nationalities, among them a sprinkling of American soldiers. On this occasion there were two, a Mr. Black and a Mr. Titus, a member of the Trement Temple Baptist Church, in Boston. I gave them some tracts, and he asked for more to distribute among his comrades. I sent him some the next day by mail. There are to be thirty-five thousand soldiers stationed here in the near future by "Uncle Sam." Among them will be Christian boys that need shepherding. This in itself would be a great work occupying the time of one man. Then, a married couple to furnish a home and a single missionary for this soldier work would be a good start. The work ought to be self-supporting in a few years. On another occasion there were two Adventist soldier boys present, Mr. Ogden and Mr. McIntosh. After the meeting we assembled around the table for conversation. Mr. McIntosh was the chief speaker of the two. He endeavored to show that we should keep the Ten Commandments now as did the Jews. On the other hand, I endeavored to show that we should not. Mr. Copeland and Mr. Schleiffer, being young men, were not so familiar with the Seventh-Day Adventist teaching, so left the conversation mostly to me. We continued till eleven o'clock. He is a well-informed young man, and one thing I like about him is that he lives up to the light he has. He will not work on Saturdays, but insists that the government must allow him to worship according to the dictates of his own conscience.

On Monday night, May 26, Brother Bowman and I went to a Bible class somewhat on the order of the Moody school at Chicago. The subject was "Eternal Life." Under the subheading on the printed outline, "How to Obtain Eternal Life," was a reference to John 3: 3-5. In looking over it, I wondered a little that they would give John 3: 5, for they usually stop short at John 3: 3; so I waited to see what would happen. When it came the reader's turn who had this passage, he read through verse four and then stopped. The leader of the class, Mr. Foster, did not call for it. When the class was over, I called the attention of Mr. Strause to John 3: 5, not being sure whether it was he or not who read that passage. "What is John 3: 5?" he asked, and, turning to it, he read the verse and exclaimed: "Ah, baptism!" Then he called to Mr. Foster, who happened to be near, and pointed the oversight out to him. Turning to me, he asked: "Do you think that means water?" "Yes," I said. "Real water?" "Real water." "That doesn't mean water; it means the word. Do you say one must be baptized to be saved?" I quoted: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" then, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." "Do you say one cannot be saved without baptism?" he continued. "I say he can be saved with it. The reason why so many people are in doubt as to whether they are saved or not is because they do not yield a full obedience." I then handed him an outline of what was required in order to be saved and asked if he would examine it, and he said he would.

As to Mr. Strause, he comes from Louisville, Ky., and belongs to the family forming the company of Kaufman & Strause, and, though an Israelite, he has married a Hawaiian girl, and, with her, is an earnest student of the Bible.

Parts of Monday and Tuesday were spent in consulting with the tentmakers as to the price of a tent. In this perpetual summer land a tent can be used the year round both for worship and evangelistic meetings; and to avoid the show of the world in fine and expensive church buildings, it would be well to keep to the tent perpetually.

Unity and Co-Operation in Missionary Work-Their Value and Destruction.

BY M. C. K.

The question of unity and cooperation among brethren is paramount in importance and significance in all lines of Christian activity, and it introduces one of the most delightful themes for consideration in the whole range of missionary operations. Our present series of articles would be signally incomplete without giving consideration to this vital phase of the subject. Not only did David say, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity" (Ps. 133: 1); but wherever that blessed condition is realized under our observation, we there behold, with our own eyes, the goodness and pleasantness of it, and hence the truth of the Psalmist's declaration, In the pure atmosphere and under the benign influences of such a condition, brethren, in the prosecution of any line of Christian work, not only meet and greet each other with a feeling of mutual joy and gladness, but they generously give each other the elbow touch of sympathy and encouragement, and thus, as one man, strive together for the gospel of God. In fact, such an exhibition of sweet concord and harmony, pervaded by the spirit of brotherly love and mutual consideration, is a long step toward man's complete transformation into the image of God.

In the conduct of mission work, whether done by the united and harmonious efforts of the members of a single congregation or by such efforts of the members of different congregations, the element of strength derived from such union and harmony is incomparable. No church can rise to the full measure of its power and usefulness without this element, and no combination of churches can so rise without it. In fact, all Christian endeavor of every kind furnishes, for those engaged in it, an exemplification of Kentucky's motto: "United, we stand; divided, we fall." But a greater than George Pope Morris has said: "I beseech you . . . that there be no divisions among you." (1 Cor. 1: 10.)

But, in spite of all the beauty and blessedness and power of such a delightful condition, the devil always mars it whenever and wherever he finds an opportunity; and one of the saddest and most distressing facts in connection with present missionary operations among the churches within the bounds of our readers is the check which has been placed upon the work by the entering wedge of strife and division and the consequent destruction, in some localities, of unity and cooperation among the churches. In such a situation, our series on mission work calls for a statement of such facts as will properly inform and protect the churches. The wedge of division in this case has been driven, as our readers already know, by the promulgation of certain views or opinions of unfulfilled propheciesviews which, as those well informed in the word of God know, are completely subversive of the plain teaching of the New Testament; and the churches are entitled to know something of the well-laid plan to drive this wedge, and the earnest efforts that were made to prevent it when the plan was discovered.

According to facts which have come to light, not a solitary public attempt was ever made to propagate these views by the promoters of the scheme until a number of young preachers had been filled with them in private classes and prepared to go forth and attempt to propagate them among the churches. Under the overruling providence of God, our office was notified "that a number of young preachers had on foot a movement to propagate certain doctrines in the Gospel Advocate which would cause opposition and division." What a burning shame! A deliberate plan to propagate views essential to nobody's salvation which it was known "would cause opposition and division" in the body of Christ! Both Paul and Jude point out and condemn identically such men and such conduct, speaking of "false brethren privily brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ" (Gal. 2: 4), and of "certain men crept in privily" (Jude 4). In Louisville, Ky., where the "movement" had Its origin and where its deadly work of destroying unity and cooperation between its adherents and those who oppose it is complete, there was not the slightest suspicion on the part of anybody outside of its adherents or those In sympathy with it that any such "movement" was on foot until it was discovered that the foundation for its mischieveous work was already laid. After this denouement and the plan to introduce these "certain doctrines" into the churches became known, it was further discovered, as one of "the signs of the times," that Blackstone's book, "Jesus is Coming," with other similar literature, was being freely circulated and commended by the leaders of the "movement," and that, in short, the "certain doctrines" to be taught were nothing more nor less than a revamp of Russellism and Adventism, pure and simple.

However, even after this discovery was made, it was not yet too late to prevent serious division if the leaders had heeded proper counsel; and hence, before the matter had gone to the general public, and for the specific purpose of preventing strife and division, they were privately appealed to and earnestly pleaded with to hold such views as private property. They were even carefully and definitely assured that their merely holding such views would not interfere with cooperation between them and the opponents of the doctrines, but that the attempt to propagate them would necessarily have to be opposed by those who believe them to be subversive of New Testament teaching, and, hence, that such an attempt would create an insuperable barrier to unity and cooperation. These private appeals and entreaties were coolly set aside, being met only with the stolid and expressed determination on the part of the leaders of the "movement" to continue to teach and preach whatever "views" they believed to be true.

Of course, being confronted by such an ironclad determination on the part of the advocates of these views, nothing remained for the opponents to do but to meet the disturbing doctrines with counter-arguments from the Bible. Some of these doctrines are that the kingdom of God has not yet come; that it will not come till Christ comes in a body of flesh and bones without blood glorified to sit on David's literal throne in literal Jerusalem in the land of Palestine, where he will set up his kingdom; that after he thus comes there will be another chance for salvation, when every Jew then living will be saved; and that Christ is a ruler now over the universe as God rules over all creation, but will not rule over the kingdom of God till he comes in the aforementioned way.

With all due respect for these young preachers, nobody who understands and has respect for the New Testament can accept such doctrines; and yet, by their persistent course, they have served notice upon us that they will not hold them as private property and that we cannot take them without taking these doctrines; that we cannot uphold them without upholding these doctrines; in short, that we cannot cooperate with them without cooperating with these doctrines. That settles it, and the issue between them and their opponents becomes clean-cut and clear. Hence, let the churches everywhere understand that they cannot support the representatives of this "movement" without supporting these doctrines. Unless we are badly mistaken, the churches are few and far between that want to support Russellism and Adventism in whole or in part, and they should know, as they have the unquestionable right to know, whom they are called upon to support. As stated in a former article, any preacher or any church that wants to teach any part of Russellism and Adventism has the unquestioned right to teach it and to send out missionaries to teach it; but it is an inexcusable imposttion for such a "movement" to send out missionaries and then attempt to palm them off on churches indiscriminately for support.

The latest turn which they have taken is significant. Knowing that they cannot teach these views without friction and division, yet being determined to teach them regardless of consequences, they now, as shown by their own public statement, not only try to justify themselves for causing division, but they actually take the position that we need not be "distressed" over the failure to preserve unity—that "a perfect unity could not be obtained" even "in the apostles' days," and, of course, "we cannot expect it now, nor need to be distressed if it cannot be accomplished or maintained." There you have it! Was the like ever heard of! And how woefully the New Testament misses it when it issues the injunction "that there be no divisions among" us, and that we "be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment!" (I Cor. 1: 10.)

But this is not all. Feeling the force of positive New Testament teaching condemning division among brethren and enjoining unity even to the extent of being "perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment," they set up the inconsistent claim that the doctrines in question do not affect congregational practice, and, hence, that there need be no division in a church over such teaching, since those members who do not believe the doctrines can decline to accept them, while the church, through its pulpit or otherwise, continues to teach them. This claim is supremely absurd and preposterous. The teachers of destructive criticism, alias infidelity, in Transylvania University and the College of the Bible at Lexington, Ky., are making identically the same claim and for identically the same reason. They plead for the right to teach their views and that the churches ought to support the College with such teachers in its chairs and have no division! The teachers in the present case add a section of Russellism and Adventism to their teaching and then expect the churches where these doctrines are preached to say nothing and have no division! No, no, young brethren, you cannot put Russellism and Adventism upon us in that way. The only possible circumstance under which they could consistently expect union and cooperation would be where the disturbing views are held as private property by those who hold them at all. Of course, anybody knows, who is capable of understanding such things at all, that wherever a man or a church teaches a doctrine, whoever upholds and sustains that man or that church, upholds and sustains that doctrine. If not, why not? It would be just as consistent to claim that one who believes infant baptism to be wrong might uphold and sustain a man or a church that is teaching it and yet not be responsible for upholding and sustaining infant baptism.

But the determination of the leaders of this "movement" to teach these disturbing views wherever they can in spite of all circumstances is seen in the course they pursued in the Highland Church, of Louisville, Ky., where they went to the extreme of withdrawing from good men who stood in the way of the teaching. This case has already been made public, and we call particular attention to it here, not only because it furnishes a vivid illustration of their complete program of operations from its apparently innocent beginning to the ultimate extreme to which they there showed themselves ready to go, but because it presents an equally vivid illustration of the complete destruction of unity and cooperation wrought by such a program; and the case is, therefore, especially germane to the present series of articles designed not only to instruct and encourage the churches in New Testament mission work, but to warn and protect them against any similar disaster. Not only did the leaders in that case bring about the church's withdrawal from two of God's faithful servants; but as a travesty of justice, fairness, and propriety in dealing with brethren, the case is unexcelled by anything recorded on history's page since the days of Servetus. It is a blot upon the fair escutcheon of the church of God, and it will never cease its loud cry for retribution till it is righted. Not only are there scores of good men and women in Louisville, intelligent and thoroughly capable of judging such matters, who know Brethren Rubel and Taylor. and have known them for twenty-five or thirty years, to be eminently worthy of Christian fellowship, but the misguided instigators of the crime against them, being called on to state before the public the act or acts which they had done that made them unworthy of Christian fellowship, used nine columns of the Gospel Advocate without naming a solitary act of the kind and without proving a solitary thing against them, except that they opposed the "certain doctrines" which their "movement" was set on foot to teach. If leaders in a church, by means of a majority vote, may bring about the withdrawal of Christian fellowship from such worthy men and not be held strictly accountable for it, then we may bid good-by to all New Testament order in dealing with brethren. It is simply useless for anybody to attempt to shield or defend them in an act the glaring wrong of which goes up to heaven with its cry for retribution. The unblushing character of the proceedings is partly revealed by the fact that an acting elder in the church, and one of the best men in it, who had been influenced to take part in the unbrotherly act, came to Brethren Rubel and Taylor just after the action, made a full and magnanimous acknowledgment of the great wrong done them, asked their forgiveness, and expressed an eager desire to have the shameful wrong righted. Brethren Rubel and Taylor subsequently published the following statement:

We feel glad and grateful to add that Brother L. T. Logsdon, a noble man and one of the best men in the church and a member of the committee which visited us, having been induced to vote for withdrawal from us, came to us a few days after the church's action, and in a most magnanimous and Christian way acknowledged that he had done wrong in taking such action against us. equal frankness he said we had done things which he did not approve at the time and did not yet approve, but that were not of a character to justify the action taken against us; and that while, for the moment, he thought he was doing right in voting for withdrawal from us, yet immediately after casting his vote he realized that he had done us a great wrong, and that, having been unable to rest over the matter since it occurred, he had come to undo, as far as possible, what he had done. Of course, we accepted his magnanimous apology and were glad to forgive him. We hope and pray that the others may repent of their act.

It is true that, by some means, after this noble act of Brother Logsdon, he was led to sign a document which represented its signers as standing with the church in its action; yet when told that it was reported that he had done so, he promptly explained all that he had understood that document to mean when he signed it, to which Rubel and Taylor thus refer in a subsequent statement:

Brother Logsdon, whom C. A. Taylor met on the street, voluntarily brought up the matter himself, and thanked for our having so correctly represented his actions, and for having quoted him so correctly, saying in effect that we had been so accurate that we "had quoted him that we had been so accurate that we "had quoted him almost word for word." C. A. Taylor then informed him that he had heard that he signed a statement to the contrary, though he had never seen it, which had been sent to Nashville, and in which, as C. A. Taylor had been informed, he had said he was standing by and supporting the church in its action of withdrawal from us. Logsdon promptly replied that he understood that statement to mean, and all he had meant by signing it was, that he merely proposed to continue his membership in the Highland Church, and not to leave it on account of its We have unwavering confidence in the action against us. integrity and veracity of Brother Logsdon, and evidently Brother Jorgenson or Brother Janes or some one else misled him as to what he signed, for on no other grounds can we understand his course.

Now that the matter is up again, we not only take occasion to indorse and commend Brother Logsdon's course as manly and Christian, but to say that there are other good men and women in that church, whose integrity and sincerity of purpose there is no ground to doubt, and who, without sadly mistaken leadership, would never have suffered themselves to be parties to the crime of withdrawing from such men. For the sake of their own standing before God; for the sake of the two good men whom they have wronged; for the sake of restoring broken unity and cooperation; and for the sake of the cause of God at large, we again, in the fear of God and in the name of our common Master, appeal to their sense of justice and righteousness in the hope that they will yet right the wrong. Upon reflection, they must know, as numerous others know, that the two men from whom they withdrew are not only worthy, but highly worthy of Christian fellowship, and that, of course, the Lord went with them when they were thus turned out, precisely as he went with the blind man whom the Jews cast out for opposing them and contending for his convictions (John 9: 34-38); and hence, as surely as Jehovah said of his wronged people in Egypt, "The cry of the children of Israel is come unto me" (Ex. 3: 9), so surely does he now say of those who wrong his children: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me" (Matt. 25: 40). We pray that they may not go to the judgment of God with this sin upon their hands.

Finally, it must be clear to every thoughtful and unbiased person that it is utterly impossible for preachers and churches "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph. 4: 3), and, hence, to maintain unity and cooperation in Christian work and worship, except by holding all disturbing opinions as private property. This does not mean that brethren may not properly have different views about many things, for they may have, always have had, and always will have; but it does mean that any opinion or view which God does not require to be taught, but which is a mere inference from something which God has said, and whose promulgation causes strife and division, should be held as private property. Anybody who knows the New Testament knows this, and anybody who does not do it either does not know the New Testament or willfully disregards its precepts, one or the other. And how much more forcibly does the precept apply where the teaching, as in the present case, is a mere opinion about unfulfilled prophecy! When the promulgation of our conflicting opinions produces strife and division, the apostle distinctly declares that we should hold them "to" ourselves "before God" (Rom, 14: 22)-that is, hold them as private property. On this specific point he gives this solemn admonition: "Let us follow the things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another." (Rom. 14: 19.)

In another article concluding the present series, it is the purpose to compare what are incorrectly termed "independent missionaries" with those who work under the missionary society.

[Note.—Knowing absolutely nothing of, and having never read nor even heard anything about, any kind of "flesh" except mortal flesh, I inadvertently used the word "mortal" in one of my editorial references to this new doctrine of Christ coming in a "body of flesh and bones without blood glorified." The originator of the doctrine called my attention to the word. While my representation of his doctrine was based mainly on statements from his own lips made to me personally, it was partly made on statements of Nashville brethren who heard him preach his doctrine in that city, and I promptly wrote him as follows:

You did not mention to me the component parts of the body in which Christ would come again, but you did this in Nashville. However, in representing this in a subsequent statement, perhaps I should not have used the word "mortal," for the brethren in Nashville did not tell me that you used it. I myself am responsible for the introduction of that word, and I was led to it by the word "flesh." I should have simply said again, as I had said before, "flesh and bones without blood," just as they testify that you taught it. If a public correction of this minor point becomes necessary, I will gladly make it.

Further reference to this point, when writing subsequently about this "movement," has escaped my mind until now, or otherwise I would have published the correction long ago. I gladly publish the facts, and think it proper to add that I have not yet found any one who is able to give me any light on, or who knows anything about, immortal flesh. However, the originator of the doctrine has the same right, so far as I know, to teach that Christ is coming in an immortal body of "flesh and bones without blood" that he has to teach that he is coming in the flesh at all. I myself am wholly uninformed in this realm, and hence I give out no teaching on it.—M. C. K.]

Opinions Destroy Unity.

BY J. C. M'QUIDDY.

Solomon tells us: "Behold, this only have I found: that God made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions." (Eccles. 7: 29.) It is a sad fact that when men begin to speculate and to introduce their speculations into the service of God, they soon give more attention to their own inventions and devices than they do to the plain, clear, and positive commands of God. Instead of dealing with the things that are clearly revealed and plainly commanded, they devote their attention and time to speculative questions that are no part of the faith of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. They exalt their inventions to the position of essentials and minify the strictly fundamentals of salvation. In proof of this, I insert in full the book notice given by the editor of Word and Work in the June issue of that journal:

"AFTER THIS;" OR, THE CHURCH, THE KINGDOM, AND THE GLORY."

From Philip Mauro's new book, "After This," we printed a portion in last issue of Word and Work, so well do we Mr. Mauro is the author of the invaluable work, like it. "The Number of Man," and of a number of other able He is a powerful writer, clear, strong, perspicuous, God-fearing. He treats on prophetic themes with insight, and is one of the few premillennial teachers who give due recognition and weight to the fact that God's kingdom is on earth now, which truth he sets forth and defends in the present volume with force and clearness. In the point that "the kingdom of heaven" announced by John the Baptist was not the kingdom promised in the Old Testament, I believe Mr. Mauro mistaken, but think that this point detracts but little from the general excellence of the work. If the reader should feel compelled here and there to differ from the author's conclusions, the benefit of the strong and healthful teaching contained in this book is not lost nor impaired thereby. The practical this book is not lost nor impaired thereby. The practical teaching concerning personal conduct, forgiveness, etc., is exceedingly fine. Mr. Mauro's splendid fight against the ultra-dispensationalism which pares down the word of God and cuts away the personal teaching of our Lord, and makes large portions of the New Testament of no effect, is worthy of all praise. The subject of the kingdom of God is one of great and swiftly growing importance in these days, and we welcome such light and help from the Scriptures as comes to us through this new volume of Mr. F. H. Revell Company, $1 net.

The statement should not be overlooked that the editor of Word and Work says of Philip Mauro that he "is one of the few premillennial teachers who give due recognition and weight to the fact that God's kingdom is on earth now, which truth he sets forth and defends in the present volume with force and clearness." Mr. Mauro is clearly right in taking the position that the kingdom of heaven, or kingdom of God, was established on the day of Pentecost; for if such be not the case, it is not possible to understand much the New Testament has said concerning the kingdom of heaven. Mr. Mauro says on page 78 of "After This:"

No other kingdom ever was his purpose for this age; nor is there the faintest suggestion, in the New Testament Scriptures, that any other kingdom was contemplated or was announced by John the Baptist, or by Christ and his apostles. Therefore we assuredly maintain that, when God did cause it to be announced that the kingdom of heaven was "at hand," it was at hand; and that all that has occurred since that announcement has been strictly in accordance with "the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God."

Of this position the editor of Word and Work says: "Which truth he sets forth and defends in the present volume with force and clearness." This is the New Testament teaching, and this is the position which the Gospel Advocate has fearlessly and boldly advocated. But here is what I cannot understand: the editor of Word and Work has indorsed and freely circulated "Jesus is Coming," by the noted premillennialist, W. E. Blackstone, who, in explaining why the kingdom of heaven did not appear, on page 88, says:

This we believe is the true explanation of this subject. The kingdom did come "nigh" when Christ came, and had they received him, it would have been manifested, but now it is in abeyance, or waiting until he comes again. However, the Greek word "engizo," which is translated "at hand" in Matt. 3: 2: 4: 17; 10: 7, and "is come nigh" in Luke 10: 9-11, does not necessarily mean immediately near. For we find the same word used in Rom. 13: 12, "the day is at hand;" and in Heb. 10: 25, "as ye see the day approaching;" and in James 5: 8, "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh;" and in 1 Pet. 4: 7, "the end of all things is at hand," each of which passages are yet unfulfilled. So we see that the word "engizo" (is at hand) covers a period of more than eighteen hundred years, and reaches unto the second coming of the Lord.

According to the teaching of premillennialists, the kingdom of heaven, which John the Baptist said was at hand, has not come within almost nineteen hundred years; hence, premillennialists are forced to "spiritualize" these passages. Are we now to understand that Brother Boll repudiates Blackstone's teaching that the kingdom was held in abeyance because the Jews rejected Christ? And do we understand him to teach with Mauro that it was established on the day of Pentecost? If Mauro is right, then Blackstone is wrong, and vice versa. It is not possible to indorse both.

Another thing demands the attention of the editor. As he now has the kingdom of heaven, or the kingdom of God, on earth, he should inform us whether he has repudiated his former position that Christ is not yet on David's throne and that Dan. 2: 44 was not fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. It is our earnest desire that he may teach the truth and not error; but one or the other of these positions is wrong. It may be that both are wrong, but both cannot be right. As the editor of Word and Work has offered to deny in debate that Jesus is now on David's throne and that Dan. 2: 44 is fulfilled, and as he now indorses the position that the kingdom of heaven, or the kingdom of God, is present on earth, the public is entitled to know whether he repudiates his past teaching and now holds that the kingdom of God was established on the day of Pentecost. There is no way of escaping from this unless he contends that God has many kingdoms. This will bring him no relief, however; for the word of God, in both prophecy and history, always, without an exception, speaks of the kingdom of God, or the kingdom of heaven, in the singular-that is, there was to be, and is, but one kingdom of God on earth, over which Christ was to be head or king.

Mr. Mauro, in his volume, "After This," under the title, "The Two Kingdoms," page 73, says: "The kingdom of heaven begins at Pentecost and continues to the resurrection and rapture of the saints. It will be followed immediately by 'the kingdom of the Son of man.' The latter is also the kingdom of God, but it is not the kingdom of heaven." Concerning this the editor of Word and Work says: "In the point that the kingdom of heaven announced by John the Baptist was not the kingdom promised in the Old Testament, I believe Mr. Mauro mistaken." So, as he does not hold that the Old Testament predicts a plurality of kingdoms of God, it behooves him to tell us that he repudiates his former position and accepts the scriptural position that the kingdom of God was established on the day of Pentecost.

THE CHARACTER OF THE KINGDOM.

On page 77 of "After This" the author says: "Then, the character of the kingdom will be completely transformed: 'The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them that do iniquity.'" It was in the purpose of God that Christ should be rejected and despised; that he should be crucified on the cross and rise on the third day. He tells us that his servants do not fight, because his kingdom is not of this world. In his church, or kingdom, he teaches his subjects not to resist evil, but to love their enemies and to pray for them that despitefully use them. But Mr. Mauro tells us that the kingdom of the Son of man is an earthly kingdom, in which Christ shall reign on David's throne in Jerusalem, and that the character of the kingdom will be changed. In this earthly reign of Christ he will rule with a rod of iron. It would be quite a humiliation for Christ, who is now Lord of lords and King of kings, to descend from his throne where he is ruling the universe and come down to earth to rule the Jews in a body of flesh and bones. In order to meet this changed condition of the character of the kingdom, Mr. Blackstone has taught that it is reasonable to expect new revelations and conditions of salvation. The editor of Word and Work also informed me that there would be new conditions of entrance into this kingdom when established and on account of changed conditions it would be reasonable to expect new revelations. It is now in order for him to tell us whether or not he repudiates this former teaching. On page 143 of "After This" Mr. Mauro says: "Since Israel is not only to be saved, but also is to be placed at the head of the nations of the world, it follows that the fulfillment of prophecy calls for the redemption of the whole world." As a complete answer and exposure of such teaching, I quote from Sheldon's "Studies in Recent Adventism," pages 142-145:

Another objection to recent Adventism is the poor respect which it pays to the universalism of Christianity or its transcendence of national distinctions. The New Testament, as has already been shown, rises above national distinctions and establishes an ideal incongruous with conservation of any temporal or religious preëminence to Israel. Its teaching implies that as the law was a schoolmaster to bring men to Christ, so Israel fulfilled its divine calling as a forerunner to the all-embracing system or dis-pensation inaugurated in Christ. Who can read such a description of the centrality of Christ to the spiritual universe as is contained in the first chapter of the Epistle to the Colossians, and then think of his reign as conditioned upon, or specially allied with, a perpetuated Jewish nationalism? The New Testament ascends to an outlook wherein the metes and bounds of Jewish nationality seem thoroughly out of place. Rationally, too, to put the stamp of a perpetual preference upon a single nation is hard to Even the temporary position of Israel as an elect nation involved serious hazards. There was a danger that, after having fulfilled the office of a forerunner of Christ, it should become lacking in humility, and refuse to accept that true maxim of a forerunner so nobly uttered by John the Baptist in the words: "He must increase, but I must decrease." (John 3: 30.) History shows that the danger was far from being evaded. A Christ, not thoroughly subordinated to its own distinction and preëminence, Israel would not deign to own. It came to entertain such a stubborn conviction that it had a special lien on the divine favor that it was no longer pliable to the divine will. If this result could not be avoided in connection with a temporary national distinction, what is to be said of the natural effect of a scheme which sets Israel above the nations in the final disposition of earthly forces? What is to guarantee that the stamp of aristocratic superiority will not effect a sense of self-importance peril-ous to the religious character of those to whom it has been affixed on the ground of nationality? Plainly, something approaching to omnipotence would be needed to counteract the inherent tendencies of the scheme, and to prevent its working toward the religious undoing of Israel. Rather, we should say omnipotence might well be baffled in the attempt to overcome the force of the artificial condi-

The rational objection to a perpetual exaltation of a single nation reënforces the interpretation which, on other grounds, has been given to the Old Testament prophecies respecting Israel's future. We have an added ground for declining to construe those prophecies literally; and that means a ground for declining to find in them forecasts of a millennium proper.

ESSENTIALS.

On page 57 of "After This" Mr. Mauro says of baptism that it is "a happy privilege accorded to those whose sins are forgiven:" that "baptism effects nothing, but it expresses much." He also says on page 163 of the same volume: "Those who repent and believe the gospel are baptized by the Lord Jesus Christ with the Holy Spirit." According to the editor of Word and Work, Mr. Mauro's speculation concerning the kingdom is so strong and helpful that it is not impaired by such teaching-that baptism effects nothing, that men were saved before and without it, and that those who repent and believe the gospel are baptized in the Holy Spirit. According to Brother Boll, it is not dangerous to preach another gospel, but the Holy Spirit declares that the man who does so will be accursed. Of the way of salvation the prophet says: "The wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err therein." (Isa. 35: 8.) Matters of faith are healthful and helpful; while vagaries, fancies, and speculations about unfulfilled prophecy and the kingdom are confusing and destructive. Brother Boll tells us that the book contains "strong and healthful teaching," the benefit of which is not impaired by the author's conclusions, which flatly contradict the plain teaching of the Bible on the fundamentals of salvation. This exaltation of that which is not clearly revealed to a position of more importance than that which is plainly commanded cannot be too severely condemned.

Some Things.

BY E. A. E.

"THE PEACE MOVEMENT."

The Christian-Evangelist, speaking of Ex-President Taft and the League of Nations, said recently:

Former President William Howard Taft has evangelized the United States in the interest of the proposed League of Nations. He closed his last tour on June 7 at Albany, N. Y. There has never been a more distinguished, able, or unselfish service rendered the peace movement. He has shown himself a great, unselfish citizen—an American too large for mere party lines when large issues are involved. We hear many people saying these days that the ex-President deserves fine recognition by this nation, and the people may find a handsome way in which to express it.

Let Ex-President Taft have all the praise and honor and votes of the people he deserves for his "unselfish service rendered the peace movement," and let the League of Nations be established; but what about the "Prince of Peace?" How "large" and how "unselfish" a Person is he? And what should he have, therefore? He has "evangelized," not the United States only, but the whole world, and has done so for centuries past, "in the interest" of the great "peace movement" which was inaugurated in heaven in the wisdom and love of God-peace on earth and good will to men; but little attention has been paid him and little honor bestowed upon him. He has sent forth his "gospel of peace," which has been "preached in all creation under heaven" (Col. 1: 23), but comparatively few are living in obedience to it and praising him for it. Truth is, when nations want to fight, Christ's "gospel of peace" must stand adjourned. Then, when the war is over, men claim more honor for some "peace movement" of their own than they are willing to bestow upon Him who, "when he was reviled, reviled not again;" who declares that "all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword," and that his kingdom is not of this worldif so, his subjects would fight, Again, I ask, if Mr. Taft should be elected President of the United States as a reward for his "unselfish service rendered the peace movement" after war is all over and the nations want peace, how should the Christian-Evangelist and the whole church honor Him who alone is the author of real peace; over whose birth the angels sang, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will to men;" who teaches all nations to turn their spears and swords and other death-dealing instruments into useful agricultural implements; the weapons of whose warfare "are not of the flesh, but mighty before God to the casting down of strongholds;" and who commands his subjects to be at peace among themselves? Should he not be honored some? Ah, my beloved, he should be served in all faithfulness and loyalty, adored, and honored as "King of kings, and Lord of lords."

All hail the power of Jesus' name! Let angels prostrate fall; Bring forth the royal diadem, And crown him Lord of all.

Some who will vote for Taft for President of the United States in order to reward him for his interest in this "peace movement," and who are using this as an electioneering scheme and political stroke, will reject the teaching of Christ on true and permanent peace. Christ lays down the only basis of lasting peace. Why not go directly to him unreservedly and drink freely at once from his fountain of peace, and not from some branch of a "peace movement" of men?

It costs nothing to be for a "peace movement" when the world wants peace, or to be for war when the world wants war. It is easy to follow public sentiment. But God forbids going with the multitude to do evil. (Ex. 23: 3.)

Almost all religious journals and pulpits of almost all denominations smoked and burned, blazed and crackled with war and its devastation and carnage less than a year ago, while now the same are crying peace. Two years ago, when it seemed to many seditious and was considered almost a crime to quote Christ on peace to his own church-"For what have I to do with judging them that are without? Do not ye judge them that are within? But them that are without God judgeth" (1 Cor. 5: 12, 13)-the prediction was made that in a short while the same journals and preachers would be crying loudest for peace, and even quoting Christ on peace. There are no faith and courage. no conviction and consistency, no "Prince of Peace" and "gospel of peace" in such a course. Christ is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, and in all countries. His disciples in one government cannot fight and kill his disciples in another government, and only because they happen to have been born citizens of these different governments and because of circumstances they had no choice whatever in bringing about. Jesus is everywhere and forever the "Prince of Peace," the author of peace, and his gospel is "the gospel of peace;" he is not the god of war to one nation and the "Prince of Peace" to another, or the god of war at one time, when in passion and lust men and nations want to fight, and the "Prince of Peace" when men and nations want peace. He is not governed by the whims and passions, greed and vengeance of men and nations; but all must be governed by him. The German pastor was consistent when he said, "Away with the gentle Nazarene and give us a god of battles," because he knew he could not follow "the gentle Nazarene" and the god of battles at the same time. Christians cannot, either.

But if there is so much unselfishness in Mr. Taft's "evangelizing" the United States in the interest of a "peace movement" in time of peace and when the world wants peace, how much unselfishness and faith and courage were there in the men who preached peace to the children of God and in his kingdom when the kingdoms of the world wanted war; in the young Christian men who could not conscientiously engage in war and took the consequences; and in Jesus himself, who did not take up the sword in order to force the world to lay it down, but meekly died without resistance to establish peace?

Let the world have the League of Nations, because it is good for the nations, and rejoice over it; but let the church of Christ cleave to the new testament in his blood, "and above all things put on love, which is the bond of perfectness."

"What's THE MATTER?"

Continuing from last week, Paul very clearly states what was the matter with the church at Corinth. Some had lawsuits with one another, some defrauded others, and some practiced such fornication as was not among the Gentiles.

Or know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with men, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God. (1 Cor. 6: 9, 10.)

Is not the matter now the existence of many of these sins and the lack of strong teaching against them? Since the purpose of preaching is to save souls, should it not be clear and strong on the whole counsel of God, and, therefore, against all these sins and all others which destroy soul and body in hell?

For I fear, lest by any means, when I come, I should find you not such as I would, and should myself be found of you such as ye would not; lest by any means there should be strife, jealousy, wraths, factions, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults; lest again when I come my God should humble me before you, and I should mourn for many of them that have sinned heretofore, and repented not of the uncleanness and fornication and lasciviousness which they committed. (2 Cor. 12: 20, 21.)

How does all this sound in contrast with the moralizing, generalizations, and even platitudes now called "preaching?" Do not "strife, jealousy, wraths, factions, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults, . . . uncleanness, fornication, and lasciviousness" exist now in abundance in places? How many preachers who have been guilty of adultery in the last few years can be named? It was clearly stated in the last article that Christian men under strong temptation may be "overtaken" in sin, may repent, be forgiven, continue in the Christian life, do much good, and be saved; but planning for and living in adultery, while pretending to be a teacher of purity and righteousness, is quite a different thing. Such characters must be treated by the churches now as Paul directed the church at Corinth to treat them. The church stands for purity, righteousness, and godliness, and must keep itself unspotted from the world.

Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself up for it; that he might sanctify it, having cleansed it by the washing of water with the word, that he might present the church to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish. (Eph. 5: 25-27.)

Contrasting that which Christ teaches the church to be with what it really is in many places—wrinkled and spotted and blemished by whisperings, backbitings, scandal, internal strife, divisions, the practice of fraud and licentiousness by some preachers—it appears to some of us that it can be clearly seen what the matter is. Has there been any failure to—

Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and declare unto my people their transgression, and to the house of Jacob their sins (Isa, 58: 1)?

Timothy was a good man and an inspired teacher, who had known the holy scriptures from a babe, and who "was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium," where he lived; yet Paul warned him against untaught questions, charged him most solemnly to "preach the word," and gave him full instructions in regard to his conduct toward elders and young men, elder women and young women. He must treat the young women as sisters "in all purity" and the "elder women as mothers." (1 Tim. 5: 1.) When some preachers obey God just here, and some "sisters" are more discreet, much trouble will be eliminated.

Paul told Timothy and Titus not only what to preach, but to use "sound words" and "sound speech" in doing so, and to let no man despise their youth. He also told Timothy, although inspired, to study in order to show himself approved unto God, not unto men, a workman who would not be put to shame. Is there anything the matter with this instruction?

Paul says: "Be not wise in your own conceits." Instead of determining not to know anything, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified, are not some preaching themselves (2 Cor. 4: 5) and their own experiences and exploits and "own conceits"—untaught questions and speculations, premillennialism or postmillennialism, the adaptation of the old gospel and the old church to "the new age," politics, the League of Nations, and the wisdom of the world in general with a tinge of religion? Are not some temporizing between the true worship of God and every kind of religious service?

James (3: 1) says: "Be not many of you teachers, my brethren, knowing that ye shall receive heavier judgment." Can the matter be that many of us are too smart and assume too much the rôle of keeping everybody straight and not enough the position of learners? A thoughtful and good man of age and experience, but not a preacher, suggested to me recently that many preachers are already too smart, are no longer hungering and thirsting after right-eousness, and read in the religious papers but little more than their own articles. He did not say how little they study the Bible. Can it be that each thinks he knows enough already and that it is his business simply to teach the other man?

Another good man of a different place, who has been a daily student of the Bible for than forty years and an elder of his congregation for about thirty-five years, and who is a man of sound judgment and a clear head, suggested to me that I preach the A B C's of the gospel-Jesus of Nazareth as the Christ, the Son of the living God; faith, what it is and how it comes; repentance, what it is and its fruits; what it is to really confess Christ; baptism, what it is, who should be baptized, and when, and why; the kingdom or church of Christ, when set up, whom it embraces, and its work; the Holy Spirit and his work, and how he does it; the Lord's Supper, what it is, who should partake of it, and when, and why; the two covenants; the great commission; the many cases of conversion under the preaching of the apostles and inspired evangelists; and everyday holy living down on the earth in the home and all the common affairs, doing all duties-making an honest living, speaking every man truth with his neighbor, dealing fairly with all, meeting obligations, giving thanks in everything, being generous toward all, pious at homeheartily as unto God and in the name of Christ. He said the younger generation, in the church and out of it, do not know these things, simply because they are not preached now in the clear and strong light of the gospel as the former generation of preachers preached them.

It is well enough to raise the question, "What is the matter?" and to remember the important point the good sister made when writing on this question, that it is the restoration of the New Testament order of things and life the world needs.

Book Reviews.

AFTER THIS; OR, THE CHURCH, THE KINGDOM AND THE GLORY. By Philip Mauro. Published by Fleming H. Revell Company, New York. Pages, 190. Cloth. Price, net, $1.

The chief value of this volume consists of its clear handling of the "postponement theory" and in showing that the kingdom of heaven, or the kingdom of God, was established on the day of Pentecost. The author handles this subject in a clear, forceful, and vigorous manner. In his exposure of the "postponement theory" he has done the world a distinct service. He clearly shows the fallacy of the position of the noted premillennialist, W. E. Blackstone, that Christ came to establish the kingdom of heaven, but that, on account of the rejection of his work by the Jews, the kingdom is now held in abeyance and awaits his second coming. The author's tendency to speculate on the meaning of unfulfilled prophecy is to be deplored. He makes distinctions for which there is no authority in the word of God. He holds that the kingdom of the Son of man is different from the kingdom of heaven and the kingdom of God. He loses sight of the fact that the Bible nowhere speaks of the "kingdoms" of God, but always speaks of the "kingdom" of God, or the "kingdom" of heaven, or the "kingdom" of the Son of man, in the singular. He is clearly in error in holding that the kingdom prophesied in the Old Testament is different from the kingdom of heaven, or the kingdom of God. The general teaching of the book is marred by statements of the author that those who repent and believe are baptized by Christ with the Holy Spirit, and that baptism has no effect, but should be regarded as a privilege accorded to those whose sins are forgiven through the death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ. But as he is a layman in the membership of the Plymouth Brethren, and as in faith they seem to be strongly antinomian, which means justification by faith alone, without the practice of the moral law, we should not be surprised at his presentation of this view. However, despite the defects of the teaching of the book. the writer expresses himself forcefully, and the discriminating reader may derive much benefit from its careful perusal. The book may be purchased from the publisher. or, if desired, we will order it for any of our readers.

God's Present Kingdom. By Philip Mauro. Published by Fleming H. Revell Company, New York City. Pages. 270. Cloth. Price, net, $1.25.

The whole purpose of this book seems to be to establish the fact that the kingdom of God is already existing in the world and that it is not held in abeyance. The author shows that Christ and John the Baptist uttered the truth when they came preaching that the kingdom of heaven and the kingdom of God is at hand. He shows that the advocates of the postponement theory who contend that the kingdom of God did come nigh in the days of John the Baptist, but is now held in abeyance, do not tell us just when the break or change in the purpose of God came -in other words, just when God decided to abandon the establishment of the kingdom and to substitute the church as a surprise institution. The author states that some positions taken in his book, "After This," have been modified in some important particulars in the volume now under review. He shows that it was never in the purpose of God to restore an earthly kingdom to Israel at the first coming of Christ. He is clearly at fault in holding that an earthly kingdom is to be restored from heaven, and that the character of this kingdom will be different from the kingdom of heaven, or the kingdom of God, that is now existing in the world. The thoughtful, discriminating reader will be benefited by reading the book.

CHRIST'S SECOND COMING. By J. M. Stanfield. Published by the author, Cleveland, Tenn. May be ordered from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn., or from the publisher. Pages, 86. Price, 35 cents.

This little booklet will repay a careful reading. Many fallacies of premillennialists are exposed. The teaching on the resurrection and the judgment are to the point and convincing. He also shows that premillennialists spiritualize and are not literalists, as they claim to be. We bespeak for the pamphlet a wide reading.

We can retire into no depth or center of thought and being where we do not meet Him, or where we can meet Him on equal terms.—H. P. Liddon. W

AT HOME AND ABROAD

- C. 1. Holt, of Florence, Ala., dropped in to see us last week. He had just closed a meeting at Summitville, Tenn.
- J. 7. Grant has returned from an interesting meeting at Reder, Ky., in which there were two baptisms. A small and of Christians worship at that point.

Froi B. W. Davis: "I wish to report two excellent services at Coopertown, Tenn., on July 6, with one confession and batism. I will begin a series of meetings at Bethel on Jul, 13."

Owin to a change in schedule, A. J. Veteto has the time from Jly 20 to September 1 open for his services as song leader. His address will be Ardmore, Okla., until July 17; after th time, 401 Union Avenue, Memphis, Tenn.

From A. Douthitt, Sedalia, Ky., July 10: "I have just closed agood meeting at Bandana. We had large crowds at nightbut few in the day. We have some fine brethren in that mmunity. J. R. Stockard, of Milan, Tenn., did the singig. I shall begin a meeting next Sunday morning at Wildewille, Tenn."

The Beiont Avenue Church, this city, supported a mission meets at Fisher's Chapel, near Greenbrier, Tenn. James A. lien did the preaching, and he was ably assisted in the meing by S. F. Morrow, who is one of the Belmont elders. T members of the Greenbrier congregation cooperated vlingly in the work. One person was baptized and two cae from the Methodists.

From Ti Elkins, Childress, Texas, July 10: "I am leaving to that to take my wife to Dr. Harris' Sanitarium at Fort Wth. Texas, where she will be operated on at once. We il be there perhaps three weeks, and any one writing wilplease address me at Fort Worth, Texas, General Delry. I specially request the prayers of all for her recoveryed our general welfare."

Jess D. Jes writes: "After being sick for two years with pellagr@sister D. L. Haile went to rest on June 15. Brother Hails left with six children and a two-thousand-dollar mortga on his little home. He is a worthy gospel preacher, andor the sake of Jesus, let us help him bear this burden, nd to D. L. Haile, Fouke, Ark. Write him a letter, wheth you can help him or not."

From W. Cls Porter, Monette, Ark., July 4: "My debate with A. Nugger (Adventist) will begin on September 10, to contist en days. It will be held near Goodman and Anderson, ., in the southwestern part of the State. Dugger is their ampion. Every body invited. If any congregation in Cheastern Oklahoma wants my debate with T. A. Phill ('digressive'), please write me."

A clipping frethe Ennis (Texas) Daily News reads: "Elder Ben Wesas resigned the pastorate of the church of Christ in Em effective August 1, and has accepted the pastorate of ichurch at Waxahachie. Mr. West has been with the En church the past three years and has done a splendid k, during which time the church has had a remarkable owth. Mrs. West has taught in the Ennis public school They will both be missed in Ennis in various circles."

From J. G. Malpi, Russellville, Ark., Route 3, July 7: "C. R. Nichol will et in discussion Mr. L. H. Shelton, Materialist, on July at Mill Creek. The debate will last four days. Brother hol is too well known to need an introduction; Mr. Shn stands well with his people here. None that live nearough to attend this debate should miss this grand oppointy of hearing Adventism exposed. The church will try ke care of all that attend from a distance, especially theachers." From James McConathy, LeBlanc, La., July 4: "I am writing this to inform the brethren that our dear brother, G. W. Johnson, of Kinder, has been down now four months, also one of his sons, with typhoid fever. Brother Johnson has spent everything that he had, and he has now to undergo an operation, which must be attended to at once. He is now destitute of funds and must have help at once or it will be too late. Brother Johnson is one of our strongest ministers and has done an efficient work in this community as an evangelist. He is highly respected by all. Let us all help this worthy man, who has given his life to the cause of Christ. Send contributions to Mrs. G. W. Johnson, Kinder, La."

From J. E. Hoffman, 202 South Pennsylvania Avenue, Roswell, N. M.: "The revival meeting at Artesia, held by Jones, Cox, and Hoffman, began on June 20 and closed on July 1. The town was first spread with announcements and invitations, which aided in getting a good audience on the first night. Sewell Jones, of the David Lipscomb College, opened the meeting with the first six sermons. This was followed by Brother Cox's sermons on conversion. The closing sermons were given by J. E. Hoffman, and were lessons to the church and an appeal to those in sin. Much personal work was done, the interest was fine, and two were baptized. We feel indebted to the people of Hope, Cottonwood, and Roswell for the assistance rendered in this meeting. Brother and Sister Cox live at Artesia. He preaches the word without charge, and she is a fine personal worker. The brethren at this place need a house. With a house of their own, their opportunity to accomplish something in the cause would be great.

From J. P. Lowrey, Senatobia, Miss., July 10: "The writer held a few-days' meeting in June at Belzoni. There were no additions, but it was a very enjoyable meeting. There are a few faithful brethren at Belzoni who refuse to worship except as 'it is written.' My stay there was an enjoyable one. On my return home I took my wife to Memphis to the Lucy Brinkley Hospital, where she had a very heavy operation. For more than a week she has made a noble fight for life and just now seems to be on the winning side. We are praying that she may be restored to health. The church house at Senatobia is going up rapidly, and we hope to have it ready for a meeting by the last of August. N. B. Hardeman, of Henderson, Tenn., preached at Thyatira on the first Sunday to a large and appreciative audience. He was to have preached at Senatobia on Sunday evening, but was 'rained out.' I hope to hold a meeting in Natchez sometime this year. The 'digressives' have made an effort to capture the work there, but to no effect."

From J. W. Brents, Italy, Texas, July 10: "I have just returned home from Missouri, where I was conducting a meeting. This trip was the sweetest and saddest I have ever experienced. I had visited my mother and sister at Pulaski, Tenn., and preached for the church there a week. To me it was such an enjoyable trip. Then I had started a meeting in Missouri. On July 3 I received a telegram that our baby boy was dead. He had been sick only four days when death came. I arrived home in time to see him buried. It was an awful shock to us, and we earnestly desire the prayers of our friends that we may bear it. He was such a bright, promising fellow. But amid the gloom and darkness about us, God's love light is still beaming upon us and we can look up through tearful eyes to the hills crimsoning with eternal morn and know that the reunion kiss will more than make up for the parting one. Horace Busby came and spoke words of cheer and consolation to us.'

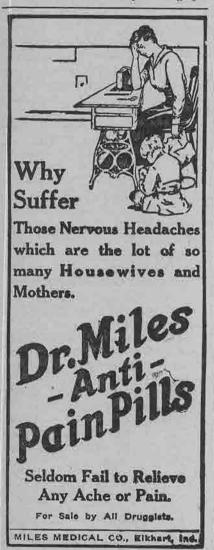

Brother Brents has the sympathy of the editors of the Gospel Advocate in his bereavement.

AT THIS SEASON LOSS OF APPETITE

Is very common. In many cases it is due to impure blood, which cannot give the digestive organs the stimulus necessary for the proper performance of their functions.

Thousands know by experience that Hood's Sarsaparilla restores appetite and would advise you to give it a trial this season. It originated in the successful prescription of a famous physician. Get it today. Take Hood's Pills if you happen

BY M. S. MASON.

In this article I resume the discussion of Mr. Bandy's proof texts for his ante-Pentecost kingdom.

He quotes Matt. 23: 13. Here Jesus refers to the kingdom in its preparatory state.

Luke 22: 19. I cannot see the application of this verse; but, on account of the expression in the eighteenth, he might have been dodging that and hit the nineteenth.

Mark 12: 34. Here Mr. Bandy would have us believe that the kingdom was in existence at the time of his conversation with the scribes. That is not necessarily so. He could have meant, and doubtless did mean. that the scribe exhibited such principles as would make him an acceptable subject when the kingdom would be set up. But we might turn the expression around and say "the kingdom was not far from the man." And that was right. That was what John the Baptist has tried to teach him, but he has refused to learn. He has told him it was "at hand," not present, as Mr. Bandy contends.

Luke 4; 43. This passage teaches the same truth as those passages which say the "glad tidings" of the kingdom were taught. The teaching was to the effect that the kingdom of God was to come, not that it had already come. Luke 8: 1 is an exemplary passage.

Luke 10: 9. This passage says the kingdom has come "nigh unto you." We do not disagree with Mr. Bandy on the truth of the passage. But why did Mr. Bandy use it? It does not say "to" them; it says "nigh unto" them. That is just what we believe.

Luke 11: 20. The kingdom of God in one sense means the reign of heaven, or its power. He had just cast out the devils. Jesus said that as he had done this with the finger of God, then the kingdom of God had come upon them. That did not necessarily mean that the kingdom had come with all its completeness or elements. It simply means that the power of God was manifest in this Luke 16: 16. Of course, Mr. Bandy would have us believe that this passage means that the law and prophets ceased with John. That is not so. Jesus means that all we had until John was the law and prophets. After that we had John's additional testimony, but not the origin of the kingdom or the end of the law and prophets. From Matt. 3: 2 we know how the kingdom was preached-" at hand;" and from Matt. 11: 12 we know how they pressed into it. It was "prematurely," as I explained in a previous article.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was premptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shee would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durabilliy and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

make an application of this passage, and I suppose he means that in the choosing of Matthias the apostles were doing church work. There is enough evidence in Acts 1, when connected with Mark 9: 1, if this is Mr. Bandy's contention, to disprove it. Mark 9: 1 tells us that the kingdom was to come with power. Acts 1: 8 tells us that the power was to come with the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost had not come when Matthias was chosen. So the power had not come; and inasmuch as the kingdom was to come with the power, the kingdom had not come.

Matt. 13: 11. Here Mr. Bandy wishes to make the point that as these apostles were to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, then the kingdom was established. apostles knew mysteries of the kingdom of heaven long before even Mr. Bandy says the kingdom was established. So if the passage proves the establishment of the church from the time of the beginning of revelation of mysteries, then Mr. Bandy has erred in placing the time of origin. This is recorded in the thirteenth chapter, and in the sixteenth chapter Jesus places the church still in the future. So, if Mr. Bandy makes the proper application of the passage, Jesus contradicts himself.

Acts 2: 46. I do not know what use Mr. Bandy intended to make of this. I cannot even guess what reference it has to the matter under dis-

1 Cor. 12: 28. If Mr. Bandy wishes to make the point here that the apostles were first, and associates the origin of the church with the choosing them, then he is in accord with Paul in the passage quoted. Here Paul is talking about rank, not time, and with offices mentioned in rank the apostles are first. The time they were set in is not the matter under discussion; it is the rank. But grant Mr. Bandy that it refers to time. Paul, speaking of the same thing in Eph. 4: 11, says that it follows the burial and resurrection of Christ, as shown in verses 8-10. This ruins Mr. Bandy's theory, for he has them set in months before.

Mr. Bandy complements his effort with these passages and says that without comment they establish his ante-Pentecost theory; but I believe every sincere reader who has followed my review has very serious doubts about it.

Delaney, July 9.—This leaves me in the midst of a fine meeting here, taught a short session of singing, closing on Saturday, and began the meeting Sunday with a large attendance. A fine interest is being manifested, and we hope to do much good. The meeting will close on Friday after the second Sunday, and I will preach at Wesley over the third Sunday. I will begin a meeting at Center Ridge, in Conway County, on Wednesday after the third Sunday. I shall be busy day and night now until November, I have one meeting in Texas, two in Oklahoma, and the rest of my work is in Arkansas. May God bless those who are laboring faithfully for the advancement of his cause.—Will W. Slater.

Havana, July 7 .- Because of the interest, we did not close the meeting at Piney Fork on Sunday night, but will continue a few nights longer. There was one confession last night and the targest crowd we have had at any time. The people are "talking Bible" on every hand here now. I will do the baptizing to-day. Lake City, July 10 .- I began a meeting at Pine Level, three miles north of Perry, in Taylor County, on June 28, and labored with the faithful few there for a week, but the work was much hindered in various ways and the attendance was small. Two souls came to the body by relation. From there I went to Spring Warrior, about twelve miles away, and began a meeting immediately, which continued, with services both day and night, until the Fourth of July. At the after-noon service on the last day there were two sermons (we had dinner on the ground), and, notwithstanding there were "picnics" and several places of amusement only a few miles away, quite a large assembly was present and fine interest was manifested, and nothing to mar the sacredness of the occasion was manifest. The meeting was well attended all the time. Two souls were baptized and the church seemed much revived and encouraged to press onward and up-ward. I feel that this was one of the best meetings I have held for many months. I was glad to notice the in-creased interest in the congregation along the lines of mission work, and believe that the prospect is now bright for this congregation to become a great working body. I am to return as soon as I can and assist them in another meeting .- J. O. Barnes.

Murray, July 7.—My meeting at Benton closed on Lord's day, with good interest. There were no visible results in the way of additions, yet I am persuaded much good was accomplished. This is especially true in regard to the First Christian folks. The right man might be able to bring about a union. I began at New Providence yesterday. Prospects are good. Coleman Overby.

Mayfield, July 8.—On last Lord's day I began a meeting with the church at Bethel, four miles east of Mayfield. There are some excellent people here, and we should accomplish much good in this meeting. I am staying in the home of Brother L. N. Gray, an ideal Christian home. Union, July 7.-Our work here is moving along exceedingly well, much better than we had ever hoped for. I baptized four persons Saturday evening; one made the good confession at the morning service and three at the evening service and three at the evening service on Sunday. Many others seem to be almost ready to give up denominationalism for the true church. The most who have come with us were Baptists. Almost every one demands baptism. This we are well pleased with. We had more than seventy in our Sunday school vesterday. About two hundred came yesterday. About two hundred came to the service last night. I have never seen people as happy as those who have heard, believed, and obeyed the gospel. They are all poor in this world's goods, but very rich in faith. Brethren, do not forget that we are over here. Be sure to remember us at the throne of grace. We are the only church in the State, except a few brethren who are meeting in a brother's house in Charleston. The devil is certainly at work. I have never seen so much opposition. But that makes us much stronger. Some of the preachers are certainly tiptoeing. That is fun to us. It makes us think that we are doing something, anyway. -Thomas H. Burton.

Pikeville, July 8.—We had a fine meeting on July 4. Five ministers were present, all of whom spoke to the crowd. I am now at Lee's Station, and will preach at Iron Hill next Sunday. On the fourth Lord's day in August we will be at Rocky Branch. First sermon at 11 A.M., by J. C. Mosley, "The Operation of the Holy Ghost;" 1:30 P.M., by G. S. These brethren have stood by me well according to number, as well as any congregation that I have ever preached for. On the second Lord's day of the meeting I led fifteen persons into the river at one time, all being baptized and going out of the water to meet their friends on the bank. There was much rejoicing. Regarding J. Paul Kimbrell.

BY H. A. ROGERS.

I very much regret that I have reason to sound a loud note of warning to my brethren everywhere in regard to a young preaching brother, J. Paul Kimbrell, of Tennessee. Brother Kimbrell saw my appeals through the papers for evangelistic help some months ago and answered the same, volunteering to come here and labor, giving me reference to the elders of the church at Whitewright, Texas, for recommendation. I wrote to these elders and received a favorable reply, upon receipt of which I wired Brother Kimbrell to come to Carman, Manitoba, Canada.

Brother Kimbrell arrived in Carman the fore part of April and made his home at our house for some weeks. After he had been with us about a week, I talked with him in a very plain manner, advising him that if he continued his present manner of life it would be useless for him to stay. He said he could return to the South again. I advised him that it would be hurtful for him to return, as the brethren knew that he came here to labor, and that they would be suspicious of his inability to do the work, and that he had the ability and could do the work, provided he conducted himself becomingly. He talked as though he would change.

A few days passed, when I had reason to think that he was still not trying to guard his influence. I talked with Brother Daniel Stewart (elder of the Carman church) about the inadvisableness of Brother Kimbrell's going to Saskatchewan. Stewart informed me that he had had a long talk with Brother Kimbrell that morning and advised him that he was injuring his influence by his conduct. I was quite decided by this time to ask this brother to return. However, Brother Stewart, whose counsel is usually the best, advised that we not send him back, but talk to him and endeavor to get him to put away his frivolous actions. (Brother Kimbrell had gone through a mock marriage with a young lady in Winnipeg, according to his own story, and pretended that they were married.) On two later occasions I talked with Brother Kimbrell concerning his demeanor, when he led me to think that he would change.

Finally he came to Saskatchewan, at which time I went to Minneapolis for one week. Upon my return home, I further learned of what, in my indement, was very unbecoming conduct for a gentleman, not saying anything of a Christian. I at once advised Brother Kimbrell and the Bromhead (Saskatchewan) brethren that, in so far as I was concerned, I did not wish Brother Kimbrell to labor there, and that I would not encourage his being supported. I arrived at Bromhead on June 7. Brother Kimbrell had received one hundred and thirty-nine and one-half dollars from the Winnipeg and Carman churches and myself. On June 9 this brother demanded more money, when I offered to give him what would buy his ticket to Minneapolis. This he refused to accept and sued me for one hundred dollars. The Bromhead brethren are expressing themselves through the papers of the brotherhood as to this brother's conduct while in their midst. For any further information regarding Brother Kimbrell, I would suggest that you write to Brother Daniel Stewart, Sister S. Eby, Brother L. McGill, or Sister D. McIver, all of Carman, or any of the Bromhead brethren whose names appear under their report. I believe Brother J. L. Hines, of Meaford, Ontario, can also give some information as to this young man's conduct.

Brother Kimbrell is about twentyfour years of age, stands about five feet and nine inches, is rather slim, and weighs about one hundred and forty pounds. He can preach a good discourse, but, in my judgment, is a flirt when among young ladies. When talked to about what people think of him, a common expression of his is: "I don't care what people think of me." His coming to Canada has been very unfortunate, but at our expense the brethren elsewhere may profit and be guarded against injurious invasion. Any one desiring information regarding the truthfulness of J. P. Kimbrell may have facts by writing me at MacRorie, Saskatchewan, Canada.

WARNING TO THE BROTHERHOOD.

For the sake of loyal brethren who may in the future desire the help of an evangelist, we feel that this ought to be published.

Brother J. P. Kimbrell came to us on May 23 last, and we have found him to be a young man entirely unworthy the calling of an evangelist. He disregards his influence with the world. He shows an unwillingness to abide by Paul's teaching in 1 Cor. 8: 13: "Wherefore, if meat causeth my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh for evermore, that I cause not my brother to stumble." He made the statement repeatedly that his brother in Christ was a fool (Matt. 5: 22 tells us what Christ says of this), and, contrary to the teaching in 1

Cor. 6, went to court before unbelievers and sued him. He violates plain scriptures and disregards admonition given him.

[Signed] Sampson Mann, Bromhead, Saskatchewan; John Fonstad, Mount Green, Saskatchewan; H. J. Good, Bromhead, Saskatchewan.

"Wish You Well."

BY W. S. LONG.

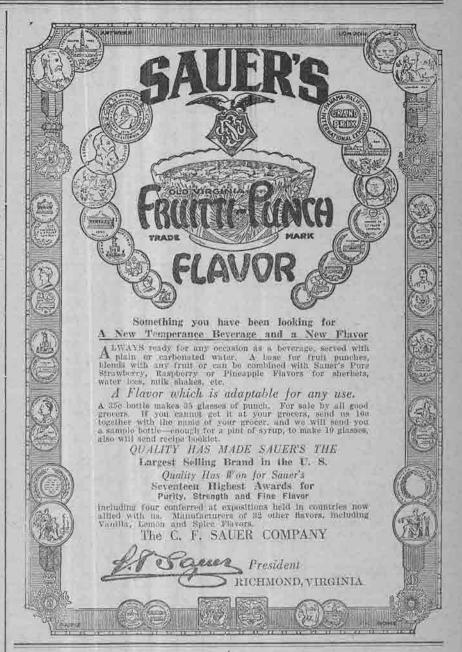

Perhaps you have had many people to say to you, "I wish you well;" and you were very much encouraged by their good wishes and felt that there was something of a substantial nature behind what they said. Sometimes weeks and months and years pass, and they still feed and clothe the hungry and help you to preach the gospel and save souls with that inexpensive "I wish you well."

A few years ago I went to a Southern city to spend several months in doing the work of an evangelist. A few days after I had begun my work I was asked to go with a faithful brother to call on a member of the church who was a business man. A few words were passed about the work, and he expressed his joy over my coming to labor in that city. He assured me that much work was needed, and he felt sure I was the man to do it, and then added: "I wish you well." Three months of hard work went on. I called on this member several times and urged him to come and help in the work. He never failed to tell me I was doing a great work and he hoped I would remain. He never came to the service one time or offered to give a penny to help the cause along, yet he "wished me well."

This is the extent of some people's help in saving souls. A billion wishes made a billion times a day by a billion people will never save one soul nor get the "well wisher" any nearer heaven.

While millions of souls are walking in darkness down the road to ruin, many church members are "at ease in Zion," sitting and nursing their hands and wishing the workers well.

Far too many churches are "sounding in the word," when they should follow the divine instruction to "sound out the word." Churches in little towns in which several good preachers live will send hundreds of miles away to have what they call a "new preacher" come from year to year to hold a meeting. They feast from year to year on the best preaching, but have never sent a missionary to the East where the gospel has never been heard. When for the time they ought to be teachers, they have need that some one teach them the "first principles." What is going to become of those who continue that course? I tremble for my people when I read Ezek. 3: 18.

There is another little city that is the home of forty good preachers, yet from year to year they send far away to have preachers to come to them and "sound in the word." How will we ever get the gospel even as far as New York if we hold all the talent in "Jerusalem?" In the name of Christ, brethren, instead of calling the best talent to preach at home, let us send these preachers to some of the Eastern cities where there is no church and where the pure gospel has never been heard.

We boast of our wonderful nation and of the beautiful city which is our national capital, and yet what a shame that the church of Christ has no place in Washington to meet and invite people to hear the gospel! I bow my head in shame to think that such is the case; and I wonder why one hundred years has passed in which the gospel has been proclaimed in the United States, yet the capital city has been neglected.

Since last November the few brethren have been working day and night to get means to build a house of worship in Washington, but many of the strongest churches have turned a deaf ear to this earnest appeal, although they have young members here from their home church. These members have wondered why their home churches do not help to plant the cause in this gospel-forsaken city.

Our Heavenly Father does not feed and clothe us with good wishes, neither will he attempt to make us happy with good wishes; but by the greatest sacrifice the world has ever known has he bought us and saved us. What shall we do in return?

"He who fails to contribute in some way to society as much as he takes from it has failed of ordinary honesty and is to be regarded as a pauper or a thief, whatever his wealth may be."

"The gates of heaven are closed to him who comes alone; Save thou a soul, and it shall save thine own."

Stronger than these lines are the words of Christ: "Ye are the salt of Four Figures in the Christian's Life.

BY S. W. BERRYMAN.

The Christian is represented as sitting, standing, walking, and running with Christ. Paul refers to the Ephesian Christians as sitting with Christ. "And raised us up with him, and made us to sit with him in the heavenly places, in Christ Jesus." (Eph. 2: 6.) By the term "sit" Paul does not mean that he and the Ephesian brethren had taken their seats in the kingdom of Christ and become inactive. They had been raised up from the liquid grave of baptism and were sitting with Christ, but not in a physical sense. Christian is not in a state of inactivity while sitting with Christ. To "sit" with Christ means to have fellowship with him. "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of scoffers." (Ps. 1; 1.) To sit in the seat of scoffers would be to have fellowship with them; to sit with Christ is to have fellowship with him. This blessed fellowship does not begin till we are "raised up" in baptism. As long as we are in the kingdom of the devil, we have no fellowship with Christ; but as soon as we are translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son, we become heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ. We now have the promise of an eternal inheritance. God is our Father and Jesus Christ our Elder Brother. In this state of fellowship we can approach God in prayer through Christ, our High Priest, who knows our every need and who ever lives to "make intercession for us." If we continue to "sit" with Christ or continue in fellowship with him through this life, when he returns we shall receive "an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away." We shall then be permitted to continue in fellowship with him through the ceaseless ages of eternity. Heaven, with all that heaven means, shall be ours to enjoy. In that beloved country God shall wipe away every tear from our eyes, and the joy of our home shall be eternal. Nothing will be permitted to enter there that would interfere with our happiness. But in order to enter that home we must live in fellowship with Christ in this world. We come into fellowship or covenant relationship with him by obedience; we continue in that state by walking "after the Spirit, and not after the flesh." Walking after the Spirit, we have fellowship with Christ; but if we walk after the flesh, we have fellowship "with the un-fruitful works of darkness." (Eph. 5: 11.) We cannot walk in darkness and have fellowship with Christ; and "if we say that we have fellowship with him and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth." (1 John 1: 6.) To have fellowship "with the unfruitful works of darkness" is to "fulfill the lust of the flesh;" and if we do so, we have no inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. (Gal. 5: 16-21; Eph. 5: 3-5.)

We, as children of God, should never cease to praise our Heavenly Father for his great love in leading us out of darkness into light and fellowship, into the kingdom of his dear Son, where we have forgiveness of sins and an inheritance among them that are sanctified; where we are "fellow heirs, and fellow members of the body, and fellow partakers of the promise in Christ Jesus through the gospel." God, through his unfailing love, has delivered us from condemnation to a state of justification and fellowship, where we are no more " strangers and sojourners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." Being members of the house of God (God's family), we enjoy the blessings of assurance. Our hearts are filled with love and hope. In this blessed state we press forward with happy hearts toward the goal, having fellowship with God, Christ, and one another.

Those of us who know the truth should work day and night to bring others to Christ, that they, too, may have fellowship with him and be made heirs of the "inheritance of the saints in light." There are thousands who know not the truth, and we come in contact with some of them almost every day. Now, if we live right ourselves and take the interest in teaching them this truth that we should, I am sure that our efforts would not be in vain. Everybody would not turn a deaf ear to our message, but some would give heed to the truth when spoken in love. But many church members, instead of talking to the lost about their condition and striving to teach them the right way, talk to them about things that will not benefit them, neither in this life nor in the life to come. In this way Christians fail to let their light shine before others.

Now, in conclusion, let us remember that if we live in fellowship with Christ and his people in this world. we will be permitted to live with them in the world to come. It is a fact beyond dispute that if we go through this life in fellowship with the devil and his people, we will spend eternity in fellowship with them. The joy of heaven is worth too much to miss for a few worldly pleasures. Then, we can well afford to deny ourselves all fleshly desires in order to gain an entrance there. Do not forget that in that fair land we shall be fully satisfied. Everything that the heart can possibly desire will be ours to enjoy. May God help us to so live that we may enter there Humility.

BY JARRATT L. SMITH.

"When wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul; discretion shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee." (Prov. 2: 10, 11.) Humility has been described as the first sought and the last won of the Christian graces. Humility is not the effervescence of momentary abasement, but the sum total of modest thought. It is not to be gained by lowly speech, sober looks, or submissive gaits; it is to be gained by the gradual molding of the heart in the wholesome experience of trials, defeats, progress, and blessings, and in the increasing knowledge of God and the Lord Jesus Christ. So it is that this grace resides upon the highest pinnacle of the Christian edifice.

Humility looks forward to a soaring spirit. As obedience implies the capability of disobeying; as faith is brightest when inducements to unbelief are spread around; so, and even in a higher degree, humility exists only when the soul is uplifted to high and lofty things. The wisest of men has said: "Better it is to be of a humbl spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud." (Prov. 16: 19.) Why? Because "pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." (Prov. 16: 18.) Our Lord places humility in the very front of his teaching. "Blessed are the poor in spirit"there is the abasement: "for theirs is the kingdom of heaven"-there is the soul set upon uplifted aims.

Self-repression is another element of humility. Repentance must begin with humility. Some great astronomer said: "As the moon appears smaller when she approaches the sun, so does the soul become less in its own sight as it draws nearer to God."

Reverence for God is another element of humility. He who is uniANDERBILT NIVERSITY

On the Colorado Field.

BY E. C. FUQUA.

Yesterday (June 22) I baptized two excellent ladies, a mother and daughter, who came about eighty miles for this purpose, having read one of my tracts on "The New Testament Church" and learned that God still has a true church on the earthone which can still be entered as it was entered in the days of the apostles. Tired of the superfluity of religious naughtiness with which the world is to-day overrun, these excellent persons determined to be religiously right or not religious at all. That is, to my mind, the sensible thing to do. Why be religious at all. if our religion is of no value against the indulgence of the flesh? (Col. 2: 23.) Like the eunuch, they wanted to know what hindered them to be baptized. I told them exactly what the evangelist told the eunuch; and there were two baptisms exactly like that one recorded in Acts 8: 36-40. and two more happy persons who went on their way rejoicing. In this religiously confused old world it is refreshing to know that there is still a church which men may enter, and in which they may be blessed, precisely as existed in New Testament times. This church appeals to all sincere seekers after truth and righteousness when once they learn of it. The one thing essential is to first remove the sectarian veil which shrouds the religious heart when it reads the New Testament, so the heart can see clearly exactly what the New Testament says. True conversion will always follow this. And this is the most essential work needed to-day, To read and understand the New Testament is all men need to convert them to Christ; but this veil which lies upon their heart when they read it-the confusion wrought in their minds by the conflicting religious theories of this age-must first be removed, and then they can see clearly. It is peculiar how easily one who was reared a pedobaptist can see that the eunuch was sprinkled, and that there were habies in Lydia's household; and how clearly it is stated, to one reared a modern Baptist, that the Pentecostians were baptized after their sins were remitted, and not "unto the remission" of their sins! This is due to the sectarian veil that shrouds the hearts of these people, which it is our duty to remove by insisting that the language of the New Testament, in both these cases, is altogether unseen and unbelieved, and that the real cause of these different visions is unbelief of the truth, by which alone men may be saved.

This is the principal work to be done in the Western mission field. The denominations call it "proselytThe next time you buy calomel ask for ing; " but, with me, a people who can see babies in Lydia's household, and people saved before being "baptized into Christ," "in whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses," or sins, (Eph. 1: 7; Col. 1: 14), are not possessed of sufficient judgment in religious matters to have any weight in lessening my energies in the direction of leading deluded children of God out of denominational "Babylon." It is a sin for any child of God to enter spiritual Babylon; and, call it what we may, to get such deluded people out of that thing is to save them from their sins. "Come forth, my people, out of her, that ye have no fellowship with her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." (Rev. 18: 4, 5.) This applies as much to any Protestant denomination as it does to the Roman Catholie Church, and I will strive as earnestly to get a child of God out of the one as I would to get him out of the other.

But in Colorado we have an exceptional privilege of reaching vast numbers of sincere men and women who have never been imbued with sectarian religious training, but who, on reading the New Testament, can straightway see what it says and become "obedient to the faith" taught therein. I baptize many of these characters here. Indeed, this field is ripe for teaching along all lines. Never in my life have I been as enthusiastic over the prospects of the future as now. I pray for wisdom and strength with which to fully do the work that should be done. I have found a schoolhouse, and one sister living within a few miles of it, in Wyoming, some fifty miles from Fort Collins, and here I hope to plant a congregation. I am booked for a meeting there immediately. Brethren, pray for this and for all other mission fields.

Edifying as the Need May Be

Friendship Promotes a Glad Heart.

Of the early Christians it was said: "They did eat their meat with gladness." Next to having a pure heart, there is nothing that can come to us in this world so good as a heart that is glad, a heart that goes bounding along the way, happy to be alive and busy about its work. The world is full of heavy-hearted people. We meet men and women every day, and we know when we look into their eyes that their hearts are like lead. Sometimes they are rich people who have an abundance of the things that others envy, but they seem to have nothing that can drive away the enemies of gladness. I am convinced that no message on this subject is of any value unless it may apply to us all alike, rich or poor. It must be universal and within the reach of every soul to be of any great comfort. I believe that there are some things that may be depended upon to lighten the heart of its load.

The first secret of a glad heart is friendship. You recall the familiar lines:

> 'Tis friends who make this desert world To blossom as the rose, Strew flowers o'er our rugged path, Pour sunshine o'er o'r woes.

We can never be quite in despair so long as we are conscious that we have good, strong, noble friends whose hearts are true to us. It is a great mistake to live in this world without cultivating friends. I do not mean doing it in a commercial way in order that they may stand by you when you need them; but I mean that our hearts should come into sympathetic touch with good people, so that we shall draw daily from the knowledge of their sympathy and appreciation. Jesus Christ, the Son of God, felt the need of such friendship. That is one reason why he chose the twelve apostles and kept them close around him. The apostle Paul craved such friendship. "Having confidence in you," he wrote to the Corinthians, "that my joy is the joy of you all." And the beloved John wrote: "Greater joy have I none than this, to hear of my children walking in truth." We must not forget that the nucleus around which all our great friendships must gather is our friendship with Jesus. He said to his disciples, and through them to us: "I have called you friends." If we sustain that relationship to Jesus, then we have constantly one great window of light into our hearts.

Those Who Think Well of Us.

Another secret of a glad heart closely akin to friendship is found in the consciousness that some people who know us think well of us and regard our work with kindness. The action of such a consciousness is very quick. Who of us has not risen in the morning from an almost sleepness night, gone through the breakfast without enthusiasm or appetite, and thought of the day's work to come with fear or disgust? But the postman brought with him a remedy all but miraculous in its effect. It was in the shape of a letter full of thanksgiving and appreciation and breathing a kind regard. How quickly it acted on the tired nerves! The headache was swept away at once; all the languidness was gone. Life was worth liv-Your work was not a failure, after all. Somebody cared; somebody thought of you; and so you went to your work with a glad heart and faced the day with music in your soul.

Now, it is always possible to have that kind of help to give us good cheer for the beginning of every day; for if we live honestly toward God, true to the light of our knowledge, trying to please him in everything, we shall certainly have the consciousness that God, who knows us better than any one else, is pleased with us. Is it not true that much of the unrest and disquietude of soul from which we suffer comes from the consciousness that, however much other people may be pleased with us, God is not pleased? In such a case there is only one way to have a glad heart, and that is to make it up with God, to frankly confess our sins and receive forgiveness. In one of David's psalms he exclaims: "I will go unto God the gladness of my joy." Even in the midst of the storms of life the trusting child of God can say: "I have seen the Pilot's face, and he smiled." 0 0 0

Other Secrets of a Glad Heart.

Another secret of a glad heart is found in the consciousness that we are helpful. I have always noticed that it is more likely to be the person in a family who is waited on and petted and spoiled who is heavy-hearted than the one who carries most of the family burdens. Selfishness never has any wings. Selfishness is like heavy dough that will not rise, but always sinks. You might as well fill a ball-with lead and expect it to bounce as to fill your heart with selfishness to make it cheerful and happy. Jesus was happy though he saw the cross before him, because he saw how much he would help and bless the world. During the cruel war that is just ended we heard more people sing and saw more people smile than ever before. The fact that the world was sad and weary could not keep them from being glad, because they were doing their level best to be helpful. It reminded us of these words of Emerson: "Wondrous is the strength of cheerfulness; altogether past calculation are its powers of endurance."

Finally, a certain secret for a glad heart lies in the assurance that this is God's world and not the devil's; and though we cannot see how it may be coming out for the best, God does see; and though we do not behold it, there is a bright side to any present difficulty, and in his own good time God will make us know that all things work together for good to them that love him. "Weeping may endure for the night, but joy cometh in the morning."

Count them over again for your soul's comfort, these secrets of a glad heart; Friendship, appreciation, helpfulness, God's guidance. Now, any one of these could keep us from despair, but every one of us may have them all. You may have them just as surely in the narrow path of the wage earner as if your income were counted by millions. You may have them in the kitchen or in the foundry as certainly as in the parlor or in the countingroom. They are doors which God sets before you, and which no man or woman other than yourself can shut.

The Home.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

Among the well-recognized forms of human society which have the support and approval of the common people, the home stands out as preëminent; it is the fundamental institution. The other forms of association may be said to be by-products of the home. It is not my intention to give expression to the many sacred sentiments which cluster round the home, but to call attention to some things which need to be emphasized to-day in order to preserve the sanctity of it.

The family is the oldest institution in the world. It was organized in the garden of Eden by Jehovah when Eve was created. After the lapse of ages the ways of living and habits of life were crystallized into social institutions. The most common of these are the State, the school, the church, and industrial organizations. The family is the primary and the most important of all the institutions of man; it is God-ordained and heaven-regulated; hence, it is at the foundation of all human societies. Moral and religious life have ever centered in the home, and from the home life must come all the issues of the social life.

The child's earliest education is obtained in its mother's lap in the home. Home is the first and most important school of character in which are taught the most sacred lessons of life. Here every human being is supposed to receive the best moral training: it is here that he imbibes the noble principles of conduct which shall govern him throughout his life. We have frequently heard it said, "Manners make the man;" less often have we heard it said, "Mind makes the man;" but I think that a truer statement would be, "Home makes the man," for the home training is fundamental in developing a character and includes the manners and the mind. In the home the heart is trained, the habits are formed, the intellect is stimulated, the ambition is fired, the hope is brightened, and the character is molded. Surely the place and the institution where such wonderful work is done must be held as sacred.

Whatever may affect the home for evil jeopardizes all social institutions. The home is the source or beginning of all progress, development, and civilization; it must be kept pure or the other institutions will be corrupted. The safety of any country or nation lies in the purity and sanctity of the home. I fear that the modern trend of society and our present-day civilization are detrimental to the home. If this fear is well founded, it behooves us to look well to the home life. The living and rearing of family in apartment houses and in crowded tenement houses of the city have a tendency to destroy the reserve and restraint which belongs to home life. We are reminded here of the adage that "God made the country, and man made the city." I am constrained to believe that the country furnishes better opportunity for the ideal home life than the city. The opportunities for the quiet instruction of moral and religious principles are better in the reserved quietude of the country home. In the city, the retired modesty, purity, and sanctity of the family life is so often dwarfed. I deplore the restless desire of the country people to flock to the cities. Children cannot be so well trained in the sterling habits and duties of life with such environments as are often found in the cities.

The family has had an interesting growth as an institution in society. No moral good seems to have been given readymade from heaven, but the gifts of God have been such as to call forth the best of human endeavor. The early families as recorded in the Bible were not perfect. Adam and Eve, Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, Jacob with Rachel and Leah are not perfect examples of home life, but they were lofty examples of domestic virtue for the Amalekites and Canaanites, and many families today would be improved by imitating these Old Testament models. One of the first moral lessons of the Old Testament is a family lesson. Under the instruction of Jehovah, the Hebrew nation gradually threw off the corruption of polygamy, emerged from the baseness of human passion, strengthened itself against the laxity of the divorce evil, and attained the purity, power, and permanence of the Christian family with its perfections under the New Testament teaching. It was a slow, but successful process by which, under the guidance of the sacred truth of God, so divine a creation as the Christian home has been developed. When the Christian home stands out in its completeness, perfected by the discipline of the New Testament teaching and guided by the Spirit of Christ, it becomes an emblem or type of heaven itself.

The Christian we has been chosen and consecrated as a means of grace the world. It is interesting to note that much of the teaching of Christ is done in the home. His personal influence was felt in the homes of men. A record of his life as given in the Gospels reveals the fact that he sought the opportunities of the home life to teach his sacred lessons. He went to the home, the heart of society, and there implanted the principles of his kingdom. He sat at meat with publicans and sinners; he went in the house of the Pharisees; abode in the house of Simon, the leper; attended a feast at the house of Levi; lent the influence of his presence at the marriage feast in Cana; and was received into the house of Mary and Martha. He made the home and its opportunities the means of his redemptive power and grace, sanctifying and hallowing the home as one of the great redemptive forces of the world. The truths and principles he gave for the regulation of the home life become the means of salvation to each member of the family. No one can follow the spirit and teaching of Christ pertaining to the home without becoming a child of God. If there were more home teaching and house-to-house preaching to-day, the church of God would be in a better condition. Paul taught "publicly, and from house to house." Foreign missionaries have learned that the most effective teaching is from house to house. Present-day teachers are putting the emphasis upon public teaching or pulpit preaching and neglecting teaching from house to house. Churches and communities make a mistake when they board a preacher at a hotel during a meeting and let him deliver sermonettes to the assembly. The preacher should go from house to house, not just to eat a good dinner or have lunch, but as a messenger from God to that home. If the example of the Savior and the early disciples were followed, great good would be accomplished.

The virtues which spring up and flourish in the shelter of Christian homes are the healing virtues of civilization. Every true home must be the center around which cluster the blessings of God and from which radiate the light of beautiful character. The Christian home must be the center and power of a better and a holier life. One cannot be a Christian, cultivating all the beautiful graces of the Christ life, independent of some home life. The institution of the home is not exalted above the church or public assembly; but without Christian homes, there can be no true churches. If any great reformation is brought in any community, State, or nation, to be the most effective, it must begin in the home. Every home true to Christ must be an altar upon which must be sacrificed the noblest and best of human lives.

I deplore the fact that in recent years women have invaded the field of politics and business, leaving and neglecting the home duties. The modern tendency in education is to train women in the different professions of life instead of training them for home builders. It seems that the more proficient women become in these professions, the less she is prepared to make the home what God intended it to be. Women should be taught their true mission in life; they should be trained to be "discreet, chaste, keepers at home." God has made husband and wife equal partners in building and maintaining the home; it is her part to be a keeper at home; her business is at home. She is not only to stay at home, but to work at home, doing such work as will add to the support and comfort of the family. The whole movement of woman's suffrage has a tendency to wreck home life and, I fear, will bring disaster to the nation. Anything that so vitally affects the home life will also affect the church. All who would sacredly guard the home must oppose modern activities of women in public life.

> "Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest; Home-keeping hearts are happiest; For those who wander they know not where Are full of trouble and full of care; To stay at home is best."

The Need of More Bible Schools. No. 1. BY G. DALLAS SMITH.

That there is a great need of more Bible schools among us to-day is evident to every thoughtful person. The need is absolutely urgent. The store of Bible knowledge possessed by the average Christian is pitiably small. In fact, the general lack of Bible knowledge among Christians is simply appalling. The Bible is, we all admit, the greatest and best book in all the world, and yet we usually treat it as if it were of no account to us or to our children. We will bend every effort to give our children a literary education (all of which is well enough), but frequently take little or no interest in studying the Bible ourselves or having it taught to our children. How can we reconcile such practice with our profession! Some years ago an elder in the church said to me, as I was urging him to bring his children to the Bible class: "My children just cannot attend the class; they cannot make their grades unless they stay at home and prepare their lessons," Now, the clear implication was this: "My children must make their grades whether they ever know anything about the Bible or not." And this is no isolated case. This is the spirit manifested by Christians everywhere. We see to it that our children do not miss a day from school, if possible, and that they prepare their lessons, even if they do have to "burn the midnight oil" to do so. Our children can better afford to neglect any other study than that of the Bible.

I heartily appreciate all the good work that has been done and that is being done by our various "Bible colleges"-such as David Lipscomb College, Abilene Christian College, Freed-Hardeman College, Thorp Spring Christian College, and other like institutions. They have done a great work, and are still doing a great work, and I would that their number could be greatly increased. But I am thoroughly convinced that such schools can never meet the real demands of the day. And if we had five times as many such schools as we now have, all well equipped and endowed, still they would be inadequate to meet the demands of the situation. The trouble is that such schools. as good and as great as they are, can never reach the great mass of those who need their influence. The great mass of boys and girls will not be able to attend these schools. Comparatively few of our young people will go away to any college. Then there are multitudes of fathers and mothers who need to be taught the Bible as badly as the young people do, but who, for good reasons, cannot attend these Bible colleges. All these need to be taught the Bible, of course. And some provision should be made to this end.

Neither can we expect all our preachers in the future to come from these Bible schools, as desirable as this may be. Not long since I heard a young brother state it as his honest conviction that in ten years from now a preacher without a college education could not find any place to preach. Now, I am not much of a prophet, but I predict that college graduates will be about as scarce in our pulpits ten years from now as they are at the present time, and they are painfully scarce to-day. Most college graduates are looking for something that promises more financial success than preaching the gospel. I recently met a young brother who is a college graduate and who has preached a few times. Speaking of this young man, another brother said: "He is a very fine young man, and is well educated. He could make a great preacher, but I fear he has too much education to preach." I asked: "What! Has he become too smart to believe the Bible?" "No," said the brother, "but there are so many opportunities for such young men to make money." And so it is. Not many college graduates are content to work for what the churches are willing to give. And I see no reason to think that college graduates will be any more willing to make the sacrifice in the future than they are now.

Furthermore, many of our very best and most successful preachers of to-day are men who never rubbed their backs against a college wall. They have not been able to quote Greek and Hebrew as fluently as college graduates can do; but they have learned to "dig" for themselves, and have been able to educate themselves in the "school of adversity." They have learned the word of God and are able to preach it with telling effect. And if this class of preachers should suddenly drop out of the ranks, I imagine the few who would be left would feel quite lonely. And in the future we may reasonably expect a goodly number of our best preachers to come from the homes of poverty and want, and, therefore, to enter the work without a college education. Now, these poor boys who are to become our preachers in the future should have the very best opportunity possible to learn the word of God. The knowledge of Hebrew, Greek, and Latin is quite important, to be sure; but a knowledge of God's word is absolutely indispensable to a preacher. He cannot succeed without it. And such a knowledge is indispensable to every child of God.

Now, how can this great mass of boys and girls, men and women, fathers and mothers, be reached? Our Bible colleges cannot reach them. This is evident. Even if we had fifty Bible colleges instead of a half dozen, they could not reach the classes described above. What, then, is the remedy? This problem would be easily solved if every congregation in the land would become a Bible school in and of itself. And this is just what every congregation should be, if it is to be true to its mission in the world. The work of teaching the word of God is in the hands of the church, and every congregation has a work to perform in carrying out this great work. What is your congregation doing along this line? Are the members of your congregation, old and young, being taught the word of God effectively? Every congregation could and should become a real Bible school, and who can estimate the good that would result in a few years?

Letter from France.

To My Friends: I am now (July 4) on my way to Paris to get my sailing orders. I am at the classification camp at Le Mans, France, where my son, Clark, has been for about five months. Clark was discharged from the army in France in order that he might accept a business position with the National War Work Council, so that he could remain in France and go home with his father. We expect to depart immediately on our journey back to our dear homeland. We should reach New York not later than July 25, if not too much delayed. Sailings are very uncertain. I shall be delayed a few days in New York getting my discharge from the National War Work Council. There is a lot of red tape to be unwound. Clark and 1 hope to reach home by August 1. How much we do want to go home! Every true American in France wants to go home. I never before in my life so much desired to go home.

I feel most thankful for three things: (a) That God has sustained my family and me during these trying circumstances; (b) that such good people as the Cookeville church and other personal friends made it possible for me to go; (c) that God, in his providence, permitted me to go into the armies and for almost two years perform the service I have. If God so wills, I hope to give the church and the world a better service because of the experience I have. But it will not be possible for me ever again to endure the hardships I have endured. I have seen the world as I never could have seen it without this experience. I think I have a broader view of life and a deeper sympathy for suffering humanity.

It appears to me that peace is coming to the world, that the League of Nations to prevent war is to come into existence; and with these conditions, there will be a new era in the history of the world. I think we are at the dawn of the greatest era for world-wide propaganda of Christian teaching since the days of the apostles. We must take a larger view of life, get a vision of the whole world, and measure up to our responsibilities. God is opening the door and offering unto us a world-wide opportunity. Let us not throw the opportunity away.

The peoples of the European and Asiatic nations are looking to America for help. They hardly know what they need. If the world is to be made a better world, there must be a vast amount of follow-up teaching done to bring the peoples of these nations up to self-government. Something better must be given them. Now is our greatest opportunity to get Christianity before all of the people. I don't want to be a dreamer, but I do think I see an immense opening, the dawning of a better day. I do want to see my brethren get out of the ruts and stretch themselves to reach and help the people of the world who are in darkness.

This shall in all probability be my last until I reach home, sweet home. Fraternally, John E. Dunn.

Love.

Three persons were talking of love. They were not all old, for love is of all ages; neither were they all men or all women, for love is of both sexes; and they were not all educated, for love speaks all languages and yet can converse in silence, for the foundation of love is perception. The young man said: "Love is the power whereby a man rises to greater heights. He finds it in ambition, in work, in his home and wife and children. It is a living soul that he discovers for himself, and it warms his heart and makes him able to leave life enriched and fruitful." The young woman said, and she was only a peasant girl: "No, love is something different from that, as I have found for myself. It came to me unexpected like a flery flame, and it devoured me. Many bitter tears I shed upon its smoldering ashes; often I would have drowned its flames with my tears. It cost me all that I possessed and in a measure left me a beggar girl. Yet it was glorious; for I tasted the bittersweet of self-sacrifice, and I learned that in losing my life I found it. At times it strained the very vitality of life itself; at other times it seared my powers of thought, my capacity of joy, my hope of living; but ah, it was something divine and has left me surer of my immortality." The third speaker had listened with a look of profound interest. He, too, was a man; but no words can describe the simplicity of his appearance, the worldly poverty of his condition. He said: "The true love is not of ambition or home or work, neither is it of a glorious self-sacrifice, but it is the love of love. To love what love really is in itself, to seek it or its shadows through all created and uncreated things, to hover when it springs slowly forth to life, to guard it when it grows mid strange surroundings, to adore it when it puts forth the power immortal and transforms base things unto itself. God is love, and love of love is love of God. It has ambition-to rise to him: it has work and home, for in his Father's house it does its daily round of prayer and work; it has self-sacrifice-for the cross stands everywhere, and as men or women stretch their arms to seize what love can give they make that mystic sign that calls forth from the universe the soft murmur of 'Calvary.' Let us seek its first earthly home: let us now go even unto Bethlehem."-Selected.

I ought to consider the duty to which I am called each day, as the work that God has given me to do, and to apply myself to it in a manner worthy of his glory—that is to say, with exactness and in peace. I must neglect nothing; I must be violent in nothing; for it is dangerous either to perform the works of God with negligence or to appropriate them to ourselves by self-love and false zeal. In that case, we act from our own individual feeling, and we do the work ill, for we get fretted and excited and think only of success. The glory of God is the pretext that covers this illusion.—Selected.

As through language the soul speaks to the ear of man, so by action the soul addresses itself to the eye of man. Action is a more perfect unveiling of the soul than language, for it implies more deliberation.—H. P. Liddon.

By MRS. EUTH HEPPNER SWAINE.

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Develop Right Relationships from the Start.

All kindergartens have one characteristic in common the respect which the children show for the individual rights of others. Where many little children are gathered together, there must be governing laws and obedience to these laws.

In the ideal kindergarten these laws are more feelings than facts. The children grow to respect and obey them spontaneously, almost unconsciously. Thus, even when they are four and five years old, they can be led to a right relation toward their fellow beings. Could anything be more important?

All children do not live near a kindergarten, but all children have playmates. A wise mother will quickly establish the law of right relationships among the children who play in her home. Even a busy mother—and are not all real mothers very busy?—can with a word now and then impart a feeling for the rights of others; and this, once gained, is never lost through life.

The kindergarten is the most democratic of institutions. The children feel no class distinctions; in fact, there are none in the world of the three-year-old. My Philip plays as joyfully with the little fellow in the servant quarters next door as he does with the son of my best friend. The public-school kindergarten is particularly interesting, because all classes mix freely and are entirely free from self-consciousness. Each little individual contributes his personal traits toward the making of the whole. A fault may serve as great a purpose as a virtue, and both may serve as mirrors wherein the child sees himself. Under the guidance of the kindergarten he will see wisely.

Moreover, the children soon learn to love the calm of the kindergarten room, and come readily under the influence of the ruling spirit—the denial of self for the good of the whole.

In your own garden, the back yard, there cannot be the close supervision that there is in the kindergarten, and elimination sometimes becomes a necessity. If you are fortunate enough to live among your own kind, where all the children in your neighborhood are reared similarly, you will probably not have any serious problem; but if you live in a cosmopolitan neighborhood and there is an older child with avowedly wrong tendencies, the safest step is to encourage him to seek his older playmates. I would deny him my babies of three to six. If the child comes to your gate who has had less of a chance than your own little ones, it is surely a privilege to take him in, for he will soon begin to thrive under the new influences. If you have much spare time, take in as many children as you can. Supervise them closely; and rather than let willful weeds grow among your flowers, eliminate.

Be one of the playmates yourself as often as possible. Join the little group in the yard for a few glorious minutes, and you will come back to your housework completely rested. A whistle from mother for a moving train is such a surprise, or an unexpected laugh over the tumbling blocks makes it only a joke where it might have been a tragedy.

The child feels your interest ever in back of him then, and it is very human to desire the interest of those we love. Toss the ball around the circle, push the swing, make believe partake of the sand cakes, and observe the new values the old plays take on.

Draw the children of the neighbohood to your own garden if you wish to experience a delightful sense of peace and love. No flowers you might coax to grow there are half so worth while. With your guidance and their daily association, they will learn many lovely things and carry them through life. Friendship, care for the weaker ones, unselfishness, joy in the joy of others, and a feeling for the right are the beautiful things of life that may be cultivated and that will be a joy forever.

Great art thou, O Lord, and greatly to be praised; great is thy power, and of thy wisdom there is no end. And man, being a part of thy creation, desires to praise thee-man, who bears about with him his mortality, who bears about with him the witness of his sin, even the witness that thou "resistest the proud "-yet man, this part of thy creation, desires to praise thee. Thou movest us to delight in praising thee; for thou hast made us for thyself, and our hearts are restless till they find rest in thee. And how shall I call upon my God-my God and my Lord? For when I call him, I ask him to come into me. And what place is there in me into which my God can come-into which God can come, even he who made heaven and earth? Narrow is the dwelling of my soul; do thou enlarge it, that thou mayest enter in. It is in ruins; restore thou it. There is that about it which must offend thine eyes; I confess and know it. But who will cleanse it, or to whom shall I cry but to thee?-St. Augustine.

Premillennialism. No. 1.

BY J. C. M'QUIDDY.

Premillennialists claim to interpret literally. They quote Luke 1: 32 to prove that Christ is literally on the throne of his father David. They make much of "dispensational truth." They divide into three periods-Yesterday, Today, and Forever. The first era, Yesterday, comprises the "days of his flesh," which extend from his birth at Bethlehem to his death on Calvary. The second era, To-day, they make this present age. The third era is the coming time of the Lord's return to the earth in power and great Premillennialists teach that Christ expected to establish his kingdom during his first advent and that God had foreordained and predestined that this should be done. However, when the Jews rejected Christ and did not accept him as their king to sit upon David's literal throne, he went back to heaven, where he is now seated on the throne at the right hand of his Father. The kingdom waits, or is held in abeyance. They claim that it did come nigh in the days of John the Baptist. After Christ's rejection and crucifixion, the church was put in as a surprise institution. The church was established on the day of Pentecost and will continue until the Rapture. They teach that at the Rapture the first resurrection will occur, when all saints who have ever lived will be raised from the dead and, together with the living saints, ascend in the air to meet Christ. Then, the premillennialists teach that a great tribulation period, which is to last seven years, will follow. During this time the church and the Holy Spirit will be taken from the earth and the "man of sin" will be supreme ruler of the earth. It is contended by them that this period will be characterized by the greatest wickedness and persecution the world has ever known. During these seven years the Jewish nation will pass through great distress and persecution. After this seven-years' period they claim that Christ and the holy angels and the saints will descend to the earth at Jerusalem, destroy the man of sin, and the church of Christ will rule over the nations of the world, while the world will be forced to accept and acknowledge Christ as King of the Jews and the world. They tell us that at this time Christ will reign for one thousand years in Jerusalem on David's throne. This will be a literal reign, one of flesh and physical force. This they call the "kingdom age, or millennium." During this period of one thousand years Satan is bound, regathered Israel is converted, and a vast majority of the inhabitants of the earth are saved. Israel shall have the preëminence over all other peoples. After this thousand years Satan is released, wickedness again prevails, judgment is set, the wicked dead are raised and judged, and later the fallen angels are judged, who, with the wicked, take up their eternal abode in the lake of fire, or hell. An eternity of joy has now begun for the righteous and an eternity of misery for the wicked. This is but a brief outline of the doctrine of millennialism.

I shall now give some reasons and cite some scriptures which prove beyond a doubt that this doctrine is not true. We should interpret literally whenever this is possible and other scriptures do not forbid. Christ on the throne of David was to rule over the house of Jacob forever. We know that this cannot refer to a literal reign, for there was no ruler over Israel during the Babylonian captivity, and there has been none now for nearly nineteen hundred years. Christ's reign shall be an unbroken reign and shall last forever. Not only this. Christ did not come to restore the fleshly kingdom to Israel, for he tells us that his kingdom is not of this world. He taught his subjects not to resist evil, not to render railing for railing, but contrariwise blessing. He never came to force the world to obedience by the acceptance of the law of Moses. The Holy Spirit declares: "For not through the law was the promise to Abraham or to his seed that he should be heir of the world, but through the righteousness of faith." (Rom. 4: 13.) Again, we read in Gal. 3: 29: "And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, heirs according to promise." Paul had just shown that there was no distinction in Christ between the Jew and Gentile, but all who by faith had accepted Christ were heirs of the promise and were the spiritual seed of Abraham.

Just so we learn that Christ sitting on the throne of David should be a great spiritual ruler, who would rule his subjects, not with a rod of iron, but by love and by leading them to accept principles of righteousness and justice. "For the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit." (Rom. 14: 17.) The Bible nowhere conveys the idea that the final judgment of part of the human family will be before the death of all mankind. The judgment comes after death. The Spirit says: "And inasmuch as it is appointed unto men once to die, and after this cometh judgment; so Christ also, having been once offered to bear the sins of many, shall appear a second time, apart from sin, to them that wait for him, unto salvation." (Heb. 9: 27, 28.) "Men" here embraces the human family. To the human family it is appointed to die. After this death cometh judgment. Christ will appear at this judgment to judge all according to the manner in which they have lived. This gives us the idea that the whole human family will be judged at the great judgment day and not at different times, as represented by the premillennialists. Eternal destinies are fixed at Christ's second coming. The Scriptures plainly teach that the premillennialists are wrong in contending that after Christ's second coming the predicted salvation of Israel will occur and through them and Christ's personal presence the salvation of the world will be almost accomplished.

The Scriptures place the second coming of Christ after this event. In support of this position, I quote 2 Thess. 1: 6-10: "If so be that it is a righteous thing with God to recompense affliction to them that afflict you, and to you that are afflicted rest with us, at the revelation of the Lord Jesus from heaven with the angels of his power in flaming fire, rendering vengeance to them that know not God, and to them that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus: who shall suffer punishment, even eternal destruction from the face of the Lord and from the glory of his might, when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be marveled at in all them that believed (because our testimony unto you was believed) in that day." It should be noted that when the Lord comes the second time he comes in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God. There is nothing said about his coming at the Rapture to resurrect the saints and to save the living righteous and give time for repentance to the wicked. There is not an intimation that there will be a thousand years between Christ's second coming and the destruction of the wicked. He is represented as coming in flaming fire, which means the destruction of the wicked; and when he comes thus to destroy the wicked, "he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be marveled at in all them that believed." This coming is sudden and the change "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." (1 Cor. 15: 52.)

There is nothing here to warrant the belief that the righteous dead will be resurrected and that the righteous living shall meet the Lord in the air, while the Lord shall begin a thousand-years' reign for the conversion of the Jews and the salvation of the world. We find the same thought in Matt. 25: 31-46: "But when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all the nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as the shepherd separateth the sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. . . . Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels. . . . And these shall go away into eternal punishment; but the righteous into eternal life." "When" and "then" are key words to show us the meaning of this scripture. When Christ comes the second time, then shall the righteous inherit eternal life, and then shall the wicked go away into eternal punishment. No man, who has not been biased by premillennialists' teaching, can read this scripture and imagine for one moment that the eternal punishment of the wicked is to be delayed for one thousand years after Christ's coming and that the righteous do not inherit the kingdom until one thousand years after his coming; for "when" and "then" apply to both alike. These scriptures clearly fix Christ's second coming at the end of time. This is when he meets his bride, as seen in 1 Thess. 4: 15-17, which read: "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we that are alive, that are left unto the coming of the Lord, shall in no wise precede them that are fallen asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we that are alive, that are left, shall together with them be caught up in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

The millennialists' theory of the second coming of Christ makes a final separation of the good and bad one thousand years before the end of time, according to their interpretation of Matt. 10: 25. Their position humiliates Christ by taking him down from the throne where he rules as "Lord of lords, and King of kings," where he is sovereign over all, and makes him become a ruler over Israel in a body of flesh and bones. It takes him out of heaven, where he is ruling, and puts him on David's literal throne in Jerusalem as a fleshly ruler, and to rule with a rod of iron. Again, premillennialists, by their interpretation, separate the wheat and the tares before the harvest, which harvest is the end of the world.

"The Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace."

BY E. A. E.

Dear Brother McQuiddy: At this time (July 9) we are in Winchester, Ky., on our way home from our meeting in Rochester, N. Y. I had no opportunity of seeing the Gospel Advocate of July 3 until now.

I have just read with interest and encouragement your good article on "Christian Unity," clearly setting forth the teaching of the Bible on this subject.

The failure of not a few teachers of Israel to study and to see the meaning of Christ's prayer in John 17 and the plain teaching of the New Testament on this subject and the utter disregard of the will of God some congregations, or many members of some congregations, have manifested in forming factions have become very discouraging and grievous. All the strife and bitterness, confusion and division in different places come from disobedience to God's command to strive to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." All must in deep reverence for the will of God tremble at his word on this duty as much so as on every other subject; but we know this has not been done. Many, it seems, give no heed to the scriptures which you quote on lowliness, meekness, forbearing one another in love, teaching and admonishing one another with all longsuffering, and "giving diligence to keep" this unity and to maintain this peace. With all the teaching of God before us on eating meat, for instance, or not eating meat, when that causes one to do wrong; on avoiding untaught questions and others which Paul mentions; on eating vegetables and observing days and against attempts to decide upon the weak brother's scruples (let him hold these to himself); on forbearance, forgiveness, and love. with all that love embraces-with all this before us, it seems that no casual reader of the Bible can fall to see just how this unity and peace are to be kept or to feel the enormity of the sin of causing division contrary to the teaching of Christ. (Rom. 16: 17, 18.)

You most clearly show that Christ did not pray for, and the New Testament does not teach, the simple merging of all religious denominations into some huge organic union by temporizing and swapping doctrines and doing away with the gospel in general. Christ did not pray that Pharisees, Sadducees, Herodians, etc., might compromise with one another and get together in some religious organization for economical or any other reasons. They were together in crucifying him.

Recently a good brother of no mean ability referred to John 17 as Christ's "unanswered prayer." The prayer of Christ unanswered! At the grave of Lazarus, Jesus said: "Father, I thank thee that thou heardest me. And I knew that thou hearest me always." (John 11: 41, 42.) Paul declares that Jesus was "heard for his godly fear." (Heb. 5: 7.) "The unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" in the church at Jerusalem-"the mother church," the model church-is an answer to Christ's prayer. There were many thousands of members in that church. 2: 41; 4: 4: 5: 14; 6: 7.) Soon the number of men in the church, not counting the women, were five thousand. After that "multitudes both of men and women" were added, and after that still the number "multiplied . ceedingly," and, in addition to all that number, "a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." These multitudes of disciples were from the Jews, "devout men, from every nation under heaven," with their different and conflicting ideas and customs. Yet through the teaching of the word of God they continued "in fellowship," "had all things common "-that is, "sold their possessions and goods" and gave to the needy, but only "according as any one had need;" ate "their food with gladness and singleness of heart;" were of "one accord" and "of one heart and one soul." Could there be more complete unity of the spirit" and greater and more perfect peace? When a difference arose, or "a murmuring of the Grecian Jews against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration," how was it settled? In a way that "pleased the whole multitude." Just after that we read that "the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem exceedingly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." (Acts 6: 1-7.) This perfect unity and peace and great generosity brought the church into favor with God and men-" and great grace was upon them all." Over so great and grave a question as whether or not the Gentiles must submit to circumcision, etc., in order to be saved, "the apostles and elders, with the whole church," came to "one accord," and acted accordingly.

The same cause—the same spirit of humility and service, unity and peace, love and generosity—will produce to-day the same result. Also, in the same way the church will grow in the grace of God, gain favor with men, and command the respect of all. But how is it? In many places that which is called "the church" has become a reproach, and in others, through lack of unity and peace and all speaking "the same thing," the church has lost an opportunity of a generation,

Not only was the peace, unity, generosity, and fellowship of the church at Jerusalem an answer to Christ's prayer, but every congregation to-day working in the same spirit and love is an answer to it.

Another brother of influence and ability says of Christ's prayer and the unity and peace taught in the New Testament, as you quote him:

These men for whose unity exclusively the Lord Jesus prayed are those who had come to him, to whom he gave God's word, whom he cleansed, separated from the world, endowed with eternal life. The prayer is extended in verse 20 to include all those also who shall believe on him through the apostles' word. That he means by this true believers only, having the same essential qualification as the apostles, need not be mentioned. For the unity of these and no others did the Lord Jesus pray. It is evident, therefore, that in a union of the unsaved, unwashed, who are still of the world, or an amalgamation of these with his own people, the Lord can have no interest; but as to the latter, is absolutely opposed to any such alliance.

Just about the time I am ready to say amen to this I am called back to the expressions, "these men for whose unity exclusively the Lord Jesus prayed" and "having the same essential qualification as the apostles," and I am puzzled to know what he does mean. When he says Jesus means by all "that believe on me through their word" "true believers only," I understand him and say, yes; but when he says "men for whose unity exclusively the Lord Jesus prayed," "having the same qualification as the apostles," "who had come to him, to whom he gave God's word, whom he cleansed, separated from the world, endowed with eternal life," I ask, has he not done this now for all his disciples, or Christians? And I confess I do not understand him; or if I do, I cannot harmonize his teaching with the prayer of Jesus and teaching of the New Testament. Hence, I ask, "exclusive" of whom? Are not all Christians "true believers?" And what is "the same essential qualification as the apostles?" Does he draw a distinction by these expressions between this exclusive class and other disciples? And that Jesus prayed for the unity of this class and not for all his disciples? If he does not mean this, why does he use these expressions? If he does mean this, he is clearly in opposition to the word of God. He further darkens counsel and seemingly contends with the Almighty by saying:

What shall we say? What can we do? If in that which was the church of Christ in the apostles' days, and which came into existence through their labors, a perfect unity could not be obtained, we cannot expect it now, nor need to be distressed if it cannot be accomplished or maintained.

This forces upon us the concrusion that by the expressions, "men for whose unity exclusively the Lord Jesus prayed," "having the same essential qualification as the apostles," etc., he means the unity of an exclusive class among Christ's disciples, which unity the ordinary disciples cannot maintain. He shows this by saying there are disciples "for whose unity exclusively the Lord Jesus prayed"—the apostles and those who have "the same essential qualification as the apostles" (essential to what?)—and that in "that which was the church of Christ in the apostles' days, and which came into existence through their labors, a perfect unity could not be obtained," and that "we cannot expect it now, nor need to be distressed if it cannot be accomplished or maintained."

Are there any now for "whose unity exclusively" Christ prayed, "having the same essential qualification as the apostles?" And who are they?

All this is a flat contradiction of Christ's prayer and the teaching of the New Testament. We have seen that "the church of Christ in the apostles' day, and which came into existence through their labors," did maintain or "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Besides, these declarations have God teaching churches to endeavor to do that which God knew "could not be obtained" or "maintained;" for if they could not do it, God knew they could not.

After openly declaring that that for which Christ prayed and God teaches cannot be "accomplished," this brother himself lays down a false basis of unity, as quoted by Brother Earnest C. Love:

All proposed unity that does not take for its basis all the teaching of God's word—holding all that is known, and providing for room and acceptance of that which may become known in the course of our study of God's word—any unity that depends upon the observance of human limitations of faith and teaching and does not stand upon all the truth, I say, is a false unity, sectarian in its nature.

"Providing for room and acceptance of that which may become known in the course of our study of God's word" is the crux of this, as Brother Love says. This makes provisions for unity which Christ does not. He says, "but for them also that believe on me through their word." That is all, and, by the way, that embraces all—"that they may all be one"—and not "these men for, whose unity exclusively" Jesus prayed. Paul teaches that faith comes through hearing the word of God. God's basis of unity is that "all speak the same thing," When "all speak the same thing," all will hear the same thing, believe the same thing, do the same thing, be the same thing, and "be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." In order to "speak the same thing," all must "preach the word," speak as the oracles of God speak; "hold the pattern of sound words," even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ;" "know nothing," "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified;" and, on the other hand, must avoid all "questionings and disputes of words," all "fables and genealogies," all "foolish and ignorant questionings," "profane babblings," untaught and unrevealed things. In Eph. 4: 1-6 Paul lays down lowliness, meekness, long-suffering, forbearing one another in love, one body, one Spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one God and Father as the basis of "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Phil. 2: 1-11 contains the same unity and conditions of it. In the face of all this teaching of the word of God, together with Rom. 14; 15: 1-13; 1 Cor. 8 and 10, how do such excerpts as the above sound?

Again, I ask, shall not the word of God on "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" be respected and obeyed?

Moral Decay of the Modern Stage.

Dr. William Burgess, Director of the Illinois Vigilance Association, presents an indictment of the modern stage. He says:

"With a few worthy and notable exceptions of legitimate drama, the stage now reeks with such moral filth and sensual exhibits which might make deviis blush. Art, music, beauty, dress, gross and grotesque ugliness are all woven into scandalous revels of diabolic movements—libels upon the very name of dance or ballet.

"Only a few years ago the Parisan cancan was tabooed, and the so-called burlesque theater was a resort only of men whose baser desires found response there, and a few women whose character was only too well understood.

"Now, in the presence of many women, young girls, and children, no hug-step or wriggling monstrosity is too vile for the burlesque and vaudeville stage. They parade the stage, down the aisles, or on raised platforms over the heads of men in the audience. The chief attractions, not only of this class of shows, but of many of the higher-priced theaters, are not the sprinkling of really clever and worthy acts one finds on the program, but displays of fleshly debauch of seminudeness, more repulsively lewd than naked human form can ever be; and these wanton revels are employed chiefly as settings for sensual song, filthy story, dialogu, and action, of all which it is a libel to call them 'comedy.'"

Mr. Burgess says he "is furnished, for his expose of this modern degradation of the stage, with a mass of evidence taken from private interviews and secret investigation, which he expects to have completed for a campaign of attack upon this moral rottenness."

"For foulness of suggestion; for evidence of downright vice; for base allusions to the natural functions and powers of sex; for vile suggestions of sex perversion, and for chorus-girl corruption (despicable and cruel as anything in the records of white slavery itself), nothing can exceed this testimony. If published as evidence, for appeal or for courts of justice, like the reports of vice commissions, much of it must appear in cipher."

Mr. Burgess is a believer in the stage in its legitimate function and purpose. He is a Shakespearean scholar and author of "The Bible in Shakespeare." He urges that the National Dramatic League join in a conflict against this degradation of the theater. He calls for a movement supported by all churches—Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, and others—to redeem this nation from corruption of the divine instinct for amusement.

"There is no greater force for education than that which reaches the young mind through amusements. To permit this force to be exploited for money, as a direct accessory and often as agent for the worst forms of vice, is an infallible way to counteract the moral worth of the school, the library, and the church,

"Our cities are suffering from panies of crime and vice." No wonder! We have sown the seed. This is the harvest!

Legislation controls our public schools and determines the matter and methods of education, while licentious plays and seductive moving-picture shows are poisoning the morals of our youth.

To save the nation, the theater must be purged of this diabolic show of flesh and the devil, which is demoralizing men, women, and children by millions more rapidly and more effectively than all the forces can educate them for healthful and honorable citizenship.

Charity does not demand of us that we should not see the faults of others; we must, in that case, shut our eyes. But it commands us to avoid attending unnecessarily to them, and that we be not blind to the good, while we are so clear-sighted to the evil that exists. We must remember, too, God's continual kindness to the most worthless creature, and think how many causes we have to think ill of ourselves; and, finally, we must consider that charity embraces the very lowest human being. It acknowledges that, in the sight of God, the contempt that we indulge for others has, in its very nature, a harshness and arrogance opposed to the spirit of Jesus Christ.—Fénelon.

First, keep thyself in peace, and then shalt thou be able to make peace among others.—Thomas à Kempis.

Our interest in Armenian and Syrian relief should not be either discontinued or diminished. Why should the general interest in this great relief enterprise sag? The peoples of the Near East have been robbed and wounded and left lying and bleeding by the wayside. The priest and the Levite have passed on, and the good Samaritan—the Christian heart of the world, and especially the Christian heart of America—must apply the wine and oil and otherwise relieve the necessities of the pathetic situation.

Thousands of our brethren have probably not contributed to the Armenian and Syrian fund or the Polish fund. The Savior is in distress in the Near East. The persecution endured, especially by the Armenians, resulted very largely from their faith in Christ. Is it possible, therefore, that any church or individual Christian in the United States can turn the deaf ear and thus say "nay" to this cry of distress?

Whether the offering be large or small, it should be made. A contribution of one dollar or fifty cents will help—no one knows how much. The rich and the poor should have part in this great relief task. "It is acceptable according as a man hath, not according as he hath not." (2 Cor. 8: 12.)

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Missionary

From San Francisco to Tulare.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

I landed in San Francisco on June 3 and was met by Brother Love. We dined with Sister McRae, then went to Santa Rosa, the home of Brother Love. I spoke four times to the Santa Rosa church, and, by request, wrote a brief of three of my speeches for one of the Santa Rosa papers. Brother Love is working hard to establish a printing plant so that he can produce more Christian literature. I was pleased to find him much better equipped than he was seven years ago. What he needs most now is a thousand dollars to pay off what remains on the press. The churches on the coast should rally more liberally to his support and thus put him in a position to do even a greater work than he has yet done. I was also glad to note that the Santa Rosa church had built a neat house of worship since I was with them seven years ago. Brother Felix Owen, a natural architect, has taken a leading part in putting up the house. He is also an efficient leader in the song service.

On Sunday morning, June 8, I returned to San Francisco, accompanied by Brother Owen, and spoke to the church both morning and evening. As at Santa Rosa, the brethren here are moving on in peace. Both churches show marks of progress. I found Brother Green preparing, with his wife and sister-in-law, to go to the Samoan Islands, down toward Australia, south of the equator, as a teacher in the public school. He is a zealous young man, well reported of by all the church, and he promised to write me concerning his experiences while there. I was also pleased to meet young Brother Sewell, son of L. R. Sewell and a scion of the old stock back in Tennessee. I met his widowed mother at Madera, Cal., ten years ago. Sister McRae is the same untiring worker and is the Phœbe of the church. I spent the night with Brother Dumm, who, like the Sewell boys, was only a lad when I saw him last back at Logansport, Ind., when we (wife and three children) were the guests of Sister Chronice, who, I learned, is now in Pensacola, Fla. In addition to the meetings of the church, a pleasing feature of Sunday's experiences was the picnic in the Golden Gate Park instead of going home for dinner.

On Monday morning I went across the bay from the "city" to Patterson. Brother Craig and his daughter, Virginia, met me in the car. Sister Craig is the same cheerful woman with her household duties, her chickens and turkeys. I found Brother Oscar Kirk sick with malaria. Sister Kirk comes from Springfield, Mo., a beautiful town with its great elm trees along its streets and the squirrels playing among them, a picture so pleasing that, though seen but once twenty years ago, it has never been forgotten. I spoke on Monday night to some of the brethren at Patterson. Next morning I helped Brother Craig hunt up the old turkey and her little ones, which had strayed off into the alfalfa fields. On the way to the depot we called by Brother Kirk's and left a jar of Sister Craig's good buttermilk she sent over. The little town of Patterson has grown much since seven years ago. The brethren seemed pleased with my report of the work in Japan. Patterson gives a regular percentage of its weekly offerings to the work in Japan.

The train ran into Fresno ahead of the time announced and there was no one to meet me. I lingered around a while, and was just about to go out into the town in search of some one when Sister Arterburn and Chess laid hands on me and prevented my departure. I spent two nights with the brethren. I met Brother Hall, with whom I stayed overnight down in Florida and helped him pick some beans. Brother Hall has lost his wife since then. Here I also met and dined with Willie Miller, a neighbor boy back at Shady Grove, in Hickman County, Tenn. We had a pleasant season together in talking over old times and the changes since then. I took one meal with Brother Halliday Trice. Sister Trice is a faithful mother to her five sturdy boys. Brother White and Sister Etta Larimore White came seventeen miles and were at the first night's meeting. She said she knew all of my family except me, having met them back in Louisville a few years ago. I met Brother White at his father's home at Pomona several years ago when he was only a boy. Sister White seems to have a good husband, and I am certain he has a good wife.

At Tulare the first one whom I met was a lady newspaper reporter. She kindly told me the way to the home of Brother Williams. As I was leaving the station, I saw two men approaching who seemed to have their eyes on me; and as they seemed to come peaceably, I put down my grip and greeted them, and they proved to be Brother Williams and Brother White. The latter I had met seven years before on my way out to Japan. Soon we were in the car, but had not gone far till we saw the tall figure of Brother Larimore, and we all returned to 129 D Street together. I was glad to see Brother Larimore and "Miss Emma " looking so well. My sole object in stopping off at Tulare was to visit friends and hear Brother Larimore, who is conducting a series of meetings here. Our beloved brother, however, rather insisted that I speak, and I took it that he meant it and yielded, to my own disappointment.

Since arriving at San Francisco several have suggested to me that I ought to work with the Japanese on the coast here rather than go back to Japan. Brother and Sister White were especially anxious that I do so. I have long felt that somebody ought to be giving their whole time to teaching the Japanese here in California. But for me to take up work here would only be robbing Peter to pay Paul and would really be detrimental to the work as a whole. A much better thing would be for some new man to come to the coast here and take up his abode in a Japanese settlement, get him a Japanese teacher, and associate with the people as much as possible, and thus get into their customs, manner of life, and modes of thought. I would be quite willing to spend a few weeks with such a one to help him get started in his work among them.

Query Department

By J. C. McQUIDDY

Ben Isenberg, Cave City, Ky., writes that there was some discussion in their Sunday school over 1 Cor. 13: 9, 10. He desires to know if the New Testament is that "perfect" thing spoken of. He says:

Of course we teach that the New Testament is that "perfect" thing spoken of, but can we give chapter and verse to prove it? If so, write me where to find it. I understand the New Testament is a perfect law, but that does not suffice. There are other perfect things, too. What I want to know is, can we give chapter and verse to prove that the New Testament is that "perfect" thing?

There is no chapter and verse showing that the "perfect" thing spoken of is the New Testament. When the language referred to was written, the New Testament had not been given to the world. As the chapter clearly shows, there were those who spoke with tongues, others were prophets, and hence the necessity of interpreters to explain the meaning of tongues and prophecies; but the time was soon to come when prophecies and tongues would cease and when knowledge should vanish away. As a matter of fact, we know that the gift of prophesying has ceased long ago. The same is true of speaking in unknown tongues. These were granted to the church while it was still in an immature state. When Paul wrote First Corinthians, he stated that knowledge was only partial, and assigned this as a reason why prophecies and gifts should pass away, as knowledge and gifts were only imperfect and fragmentary. When God's revelation was fully completed and the church was fully matured, a perfect state or condition would come; and when the church was fully matured, special gifts ceased. But it appears to me that the perfect order will not come until we have a complete and glorified church.

Brother G. B. Reagor, West Point, Miss., sends the editor the following queries:

Did the devil have "the kingdoms of the world" to give Christ if he would worship him? (Matt. 4: 8, 9.)

The devil had acquired by conquest the kingdoms of this world. Jesus came to be a King, a spiritual King, and as a spiritual ruler to sit upon the throne of David and control the universe. The way to this crown was weary, painful, and beset with thorns and blood. Satan proposes to Christ an easier way. He would rally the Jewish nation around him, set him on the literal throne of David, and make him, the Messiah, king of the world, if he would only give up his idea of a spiritual kingdom "not of this world" and worship the god of this world by conforming his kingdom to the worldly ideals of Israel. If the devil had not been able to make good his promise, the offer would have been no temptation to Christ. Satan tempted Christ to turn away from the path of self-denial, the cross, and the tomb, and to establish an outward worldly domain. The devil tempted him to do the very thing that premillennialists say that he came to do, but did not do because the Jews rejected him.

After one worships as directed on the first day of the week, is there any scripture prohibiting him from doing manual labor as on any other day, except to be governed by the laws of the country?

When one does his full duty on the first day of the week and worships God, as did the early church, he will not have much time left for anything else. The first day of the week is to be given to the service and worship of God. Man's constitution demands one day's rest in seven from manual labor. The New Testament nowhere forbids man working on the first day of the week. As the law of the land forbids, and we are required to be subject to "the powers that be," no one with the proper respect for the religion of Christ will devote his time to manual labor on that day.

W. L. Hughes, Haleyville, Ala., requests an explanation of some things mentioned in 1 Cor. 7: 36-39. Read the passage. He asks:

(1) How can a man behave himself "uncomely toward his virgin?" (2) What does Paul mean by the phrase, "so decreed in his heart?" What does he mean by "giveth her in marriage" and "giveth her not in marriage?" (3) What is meant by "the flower of her age?" How old would the virgin have to be before she passed "the flower of her age?"

(1) Paul was discussing whether it was better to marry, or not to marry, holding that it was preferable not to marry, provided the unmarried were content. If a father had a daughter who was not content to remain in the single state, he would behave himself unseemly toward her to prohibit her marrying.

(2) But if a father has decided that it is better for his daughter to remain single, having considered all the facts in the case, it is well for her to so remain. All that is meant by giving her in marriage is that the father gives consent for his daughter to marry, and not giving her in marriage means the withholding of his consent to the marriage of his daughter.

(3) "The flower of her age" means when the daughter arrives at the years of maturity. This would not be the same age with all persons. But Paul is discussing the subject of marriage; and while he holds that it is better not to marry, provided one is content, yet he positively says. "Let him do what he will; he sinneth not; let them marry," showing that it is not a sin to marry. The Bible teaches elsehere that it is better to marry than to live in sin.

H. L. Kirby, Hartselle, Ala., inquires as to the meaning of 1 Cor. 14: 33, 34, which reads: "For God is not a God of confusion, but of peace. As in all the churches of the saints, let the women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but let them be in subjection, as also saith the law."

When this language was written, the church was in its Incipiency or undeveloped state. There were persons who spoke with tongues and there were also prophets. It was necessary to have interpreters to explain the meaning of those who spoke with tongues and also to give the meaning of prophesy; but in order that everything in the church should be done decently and in order, but one should speak at a time. The "law" referred to in verse 34 is evidently Gen. 3: 16, which says: "Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy pain and thy conception; in pain thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." Clearly, the speaking that is forbidden is public speaking and such speaking as usurps authority over the man. As man was first created and then the woman, so woman must be in subjection to the man, as directed by the Holy Spirit.

Lee Mansfield is in the midst of a fine meeting at Wichita Falls, Texas.

- F. W. Smith has returned from a very successful meeting at Hopkinsville, Ky.
- S. F. Morrow preached at Fisher's Chapel, near Greenbrier, Tenn., Sunday. There were two baptisms.
- A. B. Lipscomb reports one baptism at the regular service at Russell Street Church, this city, last Sunday.
- R. A. Craig writes: "The work is moving along nicely here at Parksville, Ky. Nine were baptized Tuesday."

We hear good reports from the newly established congregation at Rochester, N. Y. Sister Eunice Fisher wrote that twenty-nine persons met for worship the first Sunday after Brother Elam's meeting.

From R. W. Jernigan, Bridgeport, Ala.: "On July 5 I began a tent meeting at Gonce, Ala., which continued ten days, with good crowds and fifteen additions."

Brother Jernigan paid this office a visit last week, which was appreciated.

Report of funds forwarded to Forest Vale Mission, July 15: From Charleston Church, $7; William F. Fierbaugh, $2; C. W. Sewell, $1; William J. Campbell, $5; by Christian Leader, $31; Garrett Avenue Church, $5; Beauchamp, $10. Total, $61. This report is made by F. B. Shepherd, Amarillo, Texas.

From J. D. Floyd, Tullahoma, Tenn.: "I wish, through the Gospel Advocate, to say to the many brethren and sisters who have written me letters of sympathy on account of the death of my dear ones that I fully appreciate their thoughtfulness in writing and ask that they will accept this as a reply."

From C. G. Vincent, New York City, July 14: "Arrived yesterday on the 'Cap Finisterre' from Brest. Had a rich experience during my term of eight months with the A. E. F. in France. Am leaving for Battle Creek, Mich., where my wife is taking treatment. Address me for the next few weeks in care of Sanitarium, Battle Creek, Mich."

An Announcement.—From about the first of September 1 hope to start on a trip south as far as Florida, and west as far as Abilene, Texas. Churches in these regions who wish assistance in stirring up the membership to more Christian activity in the missionary cause will please write me now, so that I may lay my plans in advance.—J. M. McCaleb, 2625 Montgomery Street, Louisville, Ky.

The latest word from Brother Jelley, Belapur, India, June 13, reads: "No word of a ticket yet. The passage agent thought he could get me off on June 14, as there are always cancellations at the last moment, and he promised to wire me of any chance. I even agreed to come first class if unable to get second-class passage. I could do this, as I am leaving the children. The controller of passages states that all of the A's and B's will doubtless get off between the twenty-first of this month and the first part of July. I am a B3. The other day I attended the baptism of two men in the Nasik District. They will no doubt be outcast, there not being even a nominal Christian of their caste in that district. Pray for them."

From A. J. Traylor, Smyrna, Tenn.: "James A. Allen and I held a very successful meeting here last week. The good seed sown will live in the hearts of the people for years to come. We had large crowds and splendid singing. One was baptized into Christ, and two who had wandered away came back to make a new start. O, if we could only realize what Paul said: 'For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain!' I will begin a singing school at Lascassas on Monday, July 21, which will be followed by a meeting, conducted by C. E. Wooldridge. I believe that all of God's people ought to learn to sing. Isn't it sweet to lift our voices up and praise God? Paul exhorts us to sing and make melody in our hearts to the Lord."

James E. Laird and M. S. Mason commend Charles F. Hardin, of Campbell, Mo., an available preacher and song leader. They write: "Brother Hardin is a devoted Christian, a promising preacher, and a talented and accomplished vocal music instructor and leader. He has resigned remunerative secular employment to devote his entire time to spiritual work. He must be called and kept busy in order to have support for his family. As a song leader and general assistant, he will double the results of meetings wherever he goes. The cause demands that we support good song leaders and bring our singing up to the standard. Do not let Brother Hardin return to secular employment. We are sacrificing the cause when we do it. He is willing to do his part in sacrifice if the brethren will do theirs in liberality. Write him."

From Tice Elkins, Fort Worth, Texas, July 14: "My wife went on the operating table to-day at eleven o'clock and was under the power of drugs one hour and a half. I came here with less than fifty dollars, and the operation, room rent, board and room for myself, and extra nurse for my wife will cost me three hundred and fifty dollars. We have been well treated by our brethren, have suffered for nothing; but now my money is all gone and I must have your fellowship again. I may get to work some this fall—I hope to—but it is uncertain; and the surgeons are very frank to tell me that wife will never be cured, never be well again. We will be here three weeks yet, and any one writing me will address me at Fort Worth, Texas, care of Dr. Harris' Sanitarium. Brethren, pray that the mother of my little children may be restored to them."

M. S. Mason writes: "This call is made to all loyal brethren, but especially those who may read this whom Brother Lemon served. B. J. Lemon died in Northeast Arkansas about one year ago. He was a brilliant, sacrificing, and successful preacher. He left no relatives and only enough money for burial expenses. He deserves a monument to mark his grave. James E. Laird and I are each giving five dollars. The congregation where he gave his best services, perhaps, gave twelve dollars. There is about fifty dollars at hand. The monument will cost about one hundred and twenty-five dollars. We are placing the proposition before those we believe obligated and concerned, and we want the money not later than September 1. This is a very worthy way to show appreciation and gratitude for services so capably rendered. Send your contributions to James E. Laird, Campbell, Mo."

From Thomas H. Burton, Union, S. C., July 14: "The Master's work in Union is progressing nicely. We have had seven confessions and one who was satisfied with her baptism since last report. Sixty-eight in Sunday school yesterday-about twenty-five grown people, a large class of young people, and the remainder children. It certainly makes us happy to see how the dear people are taking to the gospel way. We now have about thirty-five members. The majority are women-working pepole, at that. So we have not much of this world's goods, but we are growing rich in heavenly things. We are planning to buy a centrally located lot and build a nice house to worship in. We see no reason why we cannot have a congregation in this town numbering two hundred and fifty inside of twelve months after the meetinghouse is completed. I will spend September in Tennessee, if the Lord wills. I have some meetings to hold near Lebanon, and I will also visit my aged father while on the trip. I will have Brother Gibbs, who is located with the Pikeville brethren, to work here while I am absent. Pray for us."

SICK KIDNEYS MAKE LAME BACKS

Cause broken, unrefreshing sleep, and in many cases that tired feeling that makes it so hard to get up in the morning. They also cause loss of appetite, lack of ambition, and other troubles.

Juice of Lemons! How to Make Skin White and Beautiful

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream, one can prepare a fu!! quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as sallowness, freckles, and tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener, and beautifier. Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fra-grant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms, and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach, and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. is wonderful to smoothen rough, red hands.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic, If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

CHURCH NEWS

Delaney, July 14.—The meeting at this place is progressing with great interest. Four confessions and bap-tisms to date. All-day services yesterday, with dinner on the ground. is the home of Brother M. S. Gabbard, one of our able young preachers. He is helping much in the meeting. Brother Robert Reed, another able preacher, from Combs, is also helping with song and prayers. I will close here Friday night, then preach at Wesley over Sunday, then on to Center Ridge.-Will W. Slater.

Havana, July 14.—Our meeting a few miles out from this place closed on Thursday night with one baptism. This was a mission meeting arranged by Brother L. O. White, who lives out in that neighborhood. Brother White and his good wife came into the church from the Methodists, and they are live and working members. attend the worship here at Havana every Lord's day. I am now at Ha-vana in a meeting that starts off fine. The largest crowds, they tell me, they have ever seen at our meetings. I will close here next Sunday; then I go to Ravia, Okla., to hold a meeting.-D. S. Ligon.

But not all this is due to my efforts. Others planted, I watered, and God gave the increase. The church here stood by me loyally in the way of support. I began last night at Oak Valley, in Marshall County, with good interest. Everything points to a successful meeting.—Coleman Overbey.

Louisiana.

Forest Hill, July 12.-Beginning on Tuesday night, July 2, and closing one week later, I assisted Brother A. K. Ramsey in a meeting at Simpson. Much opposition was manifested by the "Holiness" people; but we had a most enjoyable meeting, with one from the Baptists to take her stand for the Bible alone. We believe this to be only the first fruits of a great harvest for His name's sake. Simpson is supposed to be the oldest congregation of disciples in Louisiana, but it has dwindled down to a very few. ever, Brother Ramsey is building upon the sure Foundation, and the harvest is almost ripe.-C. Doctors Discourage Use of Poultices

In Boils and Carbuncles

Doctors say that boil germs thrive on mussy linseed and similar poultices and plasters; they multiply and spread. That's why other boils appear near the affected part of the body.

Carboil kills all boil germs. It is an antiseptic compound that quickly 'softens," "cleans out," and heals boils and carbuncles. But the most remarkable quality is that Carboil stops the pain. This salve is also fine for abscesses, sores, piles, burns.

Mission Plans.

BY MAX LANGPAAP.

The subject of missions is of transcendent importance. It is a real live, burning, everyday issue with the church of Christ. By this I mean that we cannot shirk the responsibility of preaching the gospel to those who are in need of it. Individually and collectively, the church must cheerfully and gladly bear this burden. It continually stares us in the face. simply cannot get away from it. well try, as the prophet Jonah did, to get away from the all-seeing eyes of the Almighty God as to think for a moment that we are not responsible in a measure for the spreading of the glad tidings, not only in our own country, but also in the lands far across the waters. Let the church of Christ shake off the indifference that comes from the lack of consecration to, and sacrifice for, the grandest work the world has ever seen or can see. Awake, brethren, and let your light shine in the darkness! world sorely needs the pure gospel. If we do not get it to the perishing, they will probably not get it at all. We have a glorious mission, and we ought to be immensely proud of the great honor given to us.

The situation that engages our present serious thoughts is concerning those Christians "scattered abroad." The question is, how may these brethren get the work started in their localities?

Bv. "scattered the expression abroad" we mean that there are members of the one body who have become isolated from an established congregation. We have hundreds of such cases throughout the country, and there are not a few of them in California. How are these brethren going to start a work in their respective localities? The advice I am giving along this line may help some. I hope that it will, and I give it that God may be glorified.

A mission, using the word in its religious sense, is an embryo congregation. It is the ambition of the one starting a mission to see it broaden out into a real congregation.

You may have read of the banyan tree of India. This is a remarkable tree. It seems to start growing like any other tree, with a single trunk and roots and branches. It is only when it gets to be of any size that it shows a most remarkable way of spreading itself. From the spreading branches it drops down shoots that take root in the ground also, this being done continuously until some trees have been known to cover literally acres of ground. This is a splendid example of how the church of Christ should be growing.

But what about the isolated breth-In the first place, when a brother or sister is compelled by circumstances to go to any section of the country where there are no other members of the one body, it is his or her duty to keep in touch with the home congregation or to get in touch with one nearer. How are we to know that there is a brother or sister in this or that place, if he or she does not make it known?

In the second place, this brother, isolated from his brethren in Christ, ought to feel that he is responsible to a certain extent for seeing that the gospel is preached where he now lives. Such a one does not need to be a publie speaker. Some of the finest preachers the church has are not public speakers. Many a precious soul has been led to Christ through the medium of quiet, unassuming, private work. This kind of work can only be done successfully by an entire consecration of the teacher to the cause of Christ. By this I mean that the heart must be wholly the Lord's. Present your bodies a living sacrifice-that is, all of the best that is in you.

When a Christian removes to a place where there is no church, he ought to first find out whether there is any other Christian in reach. If there is, then he has the nucleus for a mission, and perhaps a real congregation. If he cannot find any other Christians, then he ought to try to convert his neighbor. At least, he can sow the good seed. He will not be the less rewarded if some one else reaps the harvest.

A keen insight of human nature, a meek and quiet spirit, and a mind as tolerant as the Bible teaches are essentials in this work. Too often an opportunity of doing much good in a certain place has been nullified by the extreme intolerance of the Christian and the lack of good common sense used in approaching the one who ought to be taught the way of salvation. A burning love for the salvation of souls is a stimulus that is absolutely required for personal preaching. A half-hearted love will accomplish little of benefit.

Praying without ceasing that the blessing of God may foster and further the work is a duty that cannot be neglected. God may know what we need, but he requires the asking of it from him through prayers of faith and confidence.

Every church in the country ought to be in touch with one or more of the brethren scattered abroad, and it is their responsibility to see to it that the brother has the proper encouragement in this mission work. There is not a church in the United States but what ought to have several missions started in needy places. I do not think that it is always a lack of money that causes such a dearth of this kind of work. I think it is a lack of consecration to the cause of our Lord and Master; a lack of burning love for the salvation of the souls of the perishing; a narrow vision of the mission of the Christ and his people; indifference, indecision, selfishness; and to sum up the whole matter, there is not enough of the fear of God in the hearts of many of those who call themselves "Christians." Why cannot petty opinions and theories be either abandoned or kept at home in a great crisis of this kind? I know, and you know, and so does every one else who has made a close study of the situation know that the church of Christ in the earth to-day, as a whole, is not at all living up to the ideal set forth by our Lord. The world for Christ is proclaimed aloud by the writers of the New Testament. are the custodians of this gospel. It is too good and precious to keep entirely to ourselves. If we do not love perishing souls of men enough to lay ourselves out in this great and noblest of all works, then there has not been the presenting of the body as a living sacrifice to the service of God. May God bless and help us open our hearts to the urgent needs of mission work.

Loss of Vitality is loss of the principle of life, and is early indicated by falling appetite and diminishing strength and endurance. Hood's Sarsaparilia is the greatest vitalizer it acts on all the organs and functions, and builds up the whole system.

The Mission of the Commission.
BY IBA B. HENTHORN.

It has been said that all a good soldier desires to know is that he has understood his orders correctly. He receives his instructions from a superior officer—a higher authority; he understands clearly the commission given him; he performs his full duty under that commission. It is not a question of reward, nor yet of commendation. He is told to do; he does what he is told. He is told to go; he goes.

We speak of the Christian life as the "Christian warfare;" we sing, "Onward, Christian soldiers." We exalt Christ with our lips as our "Great Commander;" we sing, "I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord;" we attest our obedience, our reverence, our loyalty, in many words, and straightway we forget what we have said—and what He said who is "head over all things to the church, which is his body."

Jesus said to the eleven: "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth." The argument of practically the whole of Hebrews is the supremacy of Jesus Christ over all other authorities whom the people of God had known before. We, as churches of Christ, accept his authority with great acclaim, deploring and condemning every tendency to detract from it or divide it with pope, presbytery, or ecclesiastical conference.

Christ's witness to his own authority was given the eleven before he gave them his orders. He identified himself—donned his insignia of the rank which gave him the right to give orders—and then transmitted to them his "great commission;" and the first two words of that great order from that great Commander in Chief are, "Go ye,"

"Go ye." A mission, forsooth! A command, rather; a command to action. "Go ye therefore." The Supreme Commander has spoken. The order is from authority. The "therefore" points out the right to command, the source of the order, the "all authority." The good soldier now needs but to understand the command—to comprehend fully his instructions. Go where, Lord, and what to do?

"Go ye into all the world." "Make disciples of all the nations." "Preach the gospel to the whole creation." "Baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned."

It is truly a great commission. It enjoins what is in fact embodied in that word, if we but separate from it

Calomel Salivates and Makes You Sick

Acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver and you lose a day's work.

There is no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid, which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it does not make you sick and cannot salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel to-day and you will feel weak, sick, and nauseated to-morrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue, or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you do not find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel, your money is waiting for you

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shee, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

the first syllable—a mission. It is specific, easy to understand. There is no need for extended explanation.

"But we of to-day are not enjoined to go into all the world," says one. "That was spoken to the eleven, and the eleven did it. Hence, we have no commission to do that." Then it would follow that we have none to "make disciples," nor any order to be "baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." The same eleven received the latter part of the commission as received the first portion. They received it at the same time, from the same authority. Furthermore, they did the latter duty as the first; and their orders read further, "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you."

If they relieved us—you and me—of obligation in the first, by what logic can it be shown that in the same accomplishment they did not relieve us of obligation in the latter? And with the obligation, the authority also, by which we go and "make disciples" and continue "baptizing them?" What about the "all things?" Was not the last command one of the "all things?"

But where are "all the nations?" Where will we find "the whole creation?" How big is "all the world?" How reach so great a field? Suppose we ask, "Who may be saved?" Let Jesus answer: "Whosoever." Let Paul testify by the power of the Spirit: "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." But will they call on him on whom they believe not? Or, indeed, can they believe on him of whom they have not heard? Or will they ever hear, except one preach the good tidings? But, says Paul, "how shall they preach, except they be sent?" Where? Sent to our neighbors? Yea, verily. Do you feel the need of sending one to preach to the next county? "Go ye." Is there a great and needy field in Maine, or Florida, or Idaho, where you want to labor in person or by a "sent" messenger? "Go ye!" Are there representatives of all the world in the great untouched Northwest? There are, indeed-Swede, Dane, German, Russian, Chinese, Armenian-Oriental and Occidental. All need the faith which "cometh of hearing." Would you go into that field, rather than others, with your effort? Then "go ye," for you are needed. And "to the whole creation," even "unto the uttermost part of the earth."

"Be urgent in season, out of season," "Do the work of an evangelist," if you may; or help send a preacher, if you cannot reach and teach those whom you feel ought to have as good a chance, at least, as you have had, to hear, to believe, and call on the name of Christ in obedient surrender to him, wherever they may be. If they do not live in Kansas, or Texas, or America, are they to blame? Or is your duty less? "Fulfill thy ministry," whatever thy ministry may be. Do, not your bit, but your best, to get the message of salvation to all the lost. Fill up, yourself, from the fountain of life, the word of God. Let your heart overflow with the love of Christ. Remember, if you would speak the words of salvation to others, that "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Take a special interest in, and interest others in, some definite needy field of the many. Concentrate your efforts and prayers and let the Lord use you in his own way.

"Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, that they are white already unto harvest." "The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest."

Ho! reapers of life's harvest, why stand with rusted blade,

Until the night draws 'round thee and day begins to fade?

Why stand ye idle, waiting for reapers more to come?

The golden morn is passing. Why sit ye idle, dumb?

What if the day is near when the "great voice" will say: "Send forth thy sickle, and reap: for the hour to reap is come; for the harvest of the earth is ripe?" (Rev. 14: 15.) Will there then be those who might have been saved by your effort, but were not because you hesitated—those who were "aimost" saved by your help—"almost, but lost?" "Go ye."

The Pale Horse. No. 3.

BY J. PERRY HODGE.

It is important that we understand the difference between death which is followed with hell and death that is followed with a crown of life; for in Adam all must die. There cannot be any escape from this death. But in Christ shall all be made alive. (1 Cor. 15: 22.) In Christ alone, then, is there any chance of living again after paying the Adamic penalty; all others must pay the Adamic penalty, and, after paying it, condemnation will still rest upon them, and hell, the death condition, will be their portion. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh; but after the Spirit." (Rom. 8: 1.) "But he that believeth not is condemned already" (John 3: 18); and not only will death end their present life, but hell will follow. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Rom. 6: 23.)

In the great warfare between the Spirit of Christ and the spirit of the devil, the false prophet and the tempter have been and are still prominent factors in leading men away from following Christ, into sin, thereby placing them under the devil's power of death, with hell following. The spirit of the devil in the false prophet, in the beast, and in the dragon have merely operated to gather men together to fight against God through a false system of religion, through beastly desires as the basis of government (a false idea of government), and through rebellion and actual warfare against the principles of righteousness, yielding themselves instead to the service of sin, and death as the wages thereof. (Rom. 6: 16.) This warfare is "the battle of that great day of God Almighty" (Rev. 16: 13, 14) in which the spiritual contest is being fought out in the great Armageddon (Rev. 16: 16), of which the battle in the valley of Megiddo, in which Josiah in disguise went against Necho contrary to the word of the Lord (2 Chron. 35: 20-24) and was slain, is said by some to be a type, since, it is said, "Armageddon" means, in Hebrew, "the valley of Megiddo," and since Josiah did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, turning neither to the right nor to the left (2 Chron. 34: 1, 2), until in disguise he chose to fight, in a battle where the word of God had warned him not to engage, and was mortally wounded. The word "Megiddo," or "Megiddon," means "place of God." Whether or not there is some typical connection I shall not presume to say; but if God has told us to beware of false prophets who come to us in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves, and has told us that by their fruits we shall know them, and in the face of all this we are deceived by their seductive doctrines, turned away from following the Spirit of Christ, and follow them into the various false systems, it seems that all such as do these things and are thus led into serving sin, that leads to death, instead of serving righteousness, that leads to life, are engaging in a battle in which God has warned them not to engage, and will certainly receive their mortal wound if they are not dissuaded from entering the battle into which the spirit of the devil, through the mouth of the false prophet, the mouth of the beast, or the mouth of the dragon, has led them. Those who have been led by the false prophet or by the tempter into this great warfare have gone into war and have been slain by the sword; and hunger, through oppression and bad government, has resulted in the death of many who have been impoverished, maimed, and otherwise disabled to provide for their wants and necessities; pestilences have come to curse humanity through uncleanliness and a lack of proper sanitation, and wild beasts have disputed the right of man to invade their domains in the wilds where they have fled from oppression arising from beastly rule which they by yielding to sinfulness have helped to build up. All these agencies of destruction have done their work "in the fourth part of the earth," where, if they had continued faithful unto death, a crown of life would have been theirs, instead of hell following the death to which they went because of their having been turned away from following the Spirit of Christ, one of the four spirits sent forth to walk to and fro through the earth, to follow the course that leads to such a death, with hell following.

That load becomes light which is cheerfully borne.—Ovid.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fig. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

Rays of Hope Still Brighter.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

Christianity is the spiritual monument which was erected over the empty tomb of Jesus. His wonderful life, death, resurrection, and teaching before and after his death were a complete fulfillment of about four hundred and seventy-six prophetic declarations found in the Old Testament, Over forty years ago I read the Old Testament Scriptures through three different times just to find out the number, and no infidel, heathen worshiper, or Epicurean philosopher has ever been able to remove one of those ancient prophetic declarations or give to mankind any theory that gave a brighter ray of hope. The denial of Christ's resurrection leaves the human race in the darkness of death without one ray of hope. Without the light of the Bible, no man can tell from whence he came, whither he goes, and whether or not death ends all. Is man mortal or immortal? Is he doomed to grow up like a fading flower, and then, after a few brief years have fled and the tolls of life are over, lie down in death and forever cease to be?

The doubtful mind in dismal disbelief, The word of God in heart will not receive.

O faithless man, if you are brought to grief,

Then blame yourself, not God, who would retrieve.

No one can read the Holy Scriptures faithfully, reverently, and thoughtfully, and practice its teaching, without being made purer and better in life and stronger in the hope of immortality. The Bible has been extolled and eulogized by about all of the leading good men of our world until a person can scarcely speak a word of praise in regard to it without using words which millions have used in eulogy of its greatness. It is the Lord's great table from whence all spiritual food for the soul is obtained. It contains the best laws and most profound teaching and greatest mysteries that were ever written. It gives more comfort and consolation to the true believer in the hour of affliction and bereavement than all other books in the known world. It settles all subjects in debate and removes all doubt from the troubled mind. It encourages the poor, strengthens the weak, and consoles the orphan. It contains the best will that was ever sealed and leaves to the obedient the greatest inheritance ever known. It contains all that the Lord requires of us, and is the law by which we are to be judged. It appears to be the great lamp which God has taken off the mantle of heaven and handed down to all mankind to illuminate their pathway, brighten their hope. and guide them to the haven of everlasting rest.

A Century of Service

In 1820 a good, old-fashloned doctor in North Carolina prepared an cintment for skin eruptions. It met the needs of his patients, and has likewise met the needs of millions of other doctors' patients. Gray's Ointment, the compound he prepared, is now rounding its hundredth year of honest, good, old-fashioned service and value. It is very effective for sores, boils, cuts, bruises, burns, stings, eczema, and the many similar forms of skin eruption. It soothes the pain. cleanses the wound, kills the germs, and begins healing. If your druggist cannot supply you, send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., $18 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., and a liberal sample will be sent you.

Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN B. WILLIAMS.

Now that the peace treaty has been signed and the Willard-Dempsey pugilistic contest has come and gone at a cost of one hundred and twenty-seven thousand five hundred dollars paid to them for brutality, the people are anxiously waiting for something else of a sensational nature to interest them. The majority of the people are interested more in such things than they are in the salvation of their souls. These are certainly trying times for those who are striving to follow in the steps of the blessed Christ. A great number of the returned soldiers are worse morally than when they went away, while a few seem to be as good or better than before going into the war. Some preachers were greatly affected by the war spirit and to some extent have lost influence with the church. Members of the church, some of them, took a very active part in the way of assisting the government, but will not do anything for the church-will not even attend the worship on the first day of the week. All these things militate against the efforts of the few who are trying to spread the gospel-God's "power unto salvation."

The time for protracted meetings is at hand, but I hear but little said about it, unless it be that the farmers are so far behind with their work they cannot attend. I am, the Lord willing, to begin a meeting at Glady Hill next Lord's day (July 13). Heretofore it has been a camp meeting, but now I think that is a thing of the past-people too busy. On the first Lord's day in August I am to begin at Jones' Chapel, in Lake County; the fourth Lord's day in August, at Bethel; the first Lord's day in September, at Cloverdale; and the fourth Lord's day in September, at Hornbeak-my home congregation. Sometime in August Brother R. C. White is to begin a meeting at Oak Ridge; Brother Slayden begins at Glass sometime in August; Brother Carney is to hold a meeting at Mount Zion, but I have not learned the date. I am hoping and praying for good meetings at all these places.

Brother Freed is to hold the meeting at Troy this year. Brother J. W. Dunn is to be at Rives sometime during the summer. Brother L. E. Jones, of Troy, goes to Warren County for three or four meetings. Brother Joe Ratcliffe is to hold a meeting at Burrus Chapel, in Lake County. I have not heard from Brethren Howell and Lannom, of Obion, as to their summer's work.

A few days ago I saw L. E. Jones, of Troy, and he tells me that he does not get enough from his preaching to support his family. Brethren, call him for work and keep him busy. He is a good man and a good preacher. If he is not a good man, I am not in possession of facts; but I do know him to be a good, loyal preacher of the gospel.

I hope to be able to make good reports of the work in West Tennessee during the year. Subscribe for the Gospel Advocate and keep posted.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos distinctive features, case and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there, That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

The Master's Vineyard

Tennessee.

Lewisburg, July 7.—As usual, we had two good meetings yesterday. We begin here for a protracted meeting with home forces next Lord's day.—H. H. Adamson.

Greenbrier, Route 2, July 14,—According to previous arrangements, our meeting at Bethel opened yesterday, with services morning and evening, and with large attendance and excellent attention. There were visiting brethren from Nashville, Coopertown, and other places. We hope that much and lasting good may result from our labors in the name of our blessed Master.—B. W. Davis.

Indian Mound, July 15.—Our tent meeting continues with much interest. It is the talk of the town. Everybody here is discussing the "new doctrine." This is the first revival ever conducted here by a minister of the church of Christ. We came here to establish a New Testament church. We have accomplished our desired purpose. They will begin the work and worship next Lord's day. I will give a more definite report of the meeting next week. The kingdom is spreading.—William P. Walker.

Brownsville, July 14.-We met in our new meetinghouse on the first Sunday in February last. Though we are few in number, we started building last August, and, by the assistance of the brotherhood and by donating all we could afford, we have a nice, neat Brethren John T. Smith and house. Fred Blanchard held a week's mission meeting here the first week in June, supported by the churches at Dickson, Maury City, Friendship, and Bethel. Brother W. S. Long, of Washington, D. C., is to hold a meeting at Cliff Creek, eight miles east of here, beginning on July 27, and we are expecting him to preach a few times for us here in town when he gets through at Cliff Creek. There has never been a strong church in this county. Cliff Creek is the largest of the three congregations in the county. Following are the donations on the church since last report: Church at Rucker, Tenn., $5; Fayetteville, Tenn., $10; Trezevant, Tenn., $11; Sunday school at Stantonville, Tenn., $5; Hartsville, Tenn., $10; Berea congregation, Bethpage, Tenn., $10; Ethridge, Tenn., $10; Bues Chapel, Lake County, Tenn., $7; Viola, Tenn., $15; Yorkville cong Dyer, Tenn., $7.50. Brother Yorkville congregation, William Ethridge, of Dresden, was with us on the fifth Sunday in June. He said we had a good field before us and that this county was truly a mission field that ought to be developed. We are planning to finish the outside of the house this summer. We had a business meeting after services yesterday and raised nine hundred and twenty-two dollars from seven families. We need about three hundred dollars help from churches that wish to help worthy congregations that are doing their best to establish the common faith. We are already carrying a large note. Brethren, speak to the churches and have them join you in this God-given opportunity.—Walter L. Brum-

Seagoville, July 14.—Our meeting at Pleasant Grove, near here, in the midst of a most busy time with farmers and truckers, has grown in interest from the beginning-one week ago yester-However, there have been no additions so far. Last night the crowd and attention were simply fine. good many prejudiced sectarians are beginning to come out, to the glad surprise of many of the brethren. Many of the brethren tell me here, as at many other places: "This is the most prejudiced hole you ever struck." Yet they do not know what I have been up against. Comparatively speaking, this is an easy place; still, it is hard enough. It is hard to do much good following some would-be ministers of the gospel unless you can stay there a long time and wear away the prejudice first .- J. C. Estes.

I go from here to Atlanta for my next meeting. I have four more meetings for the summer. I have received eight dolsummer. summer. I have received eight dol-lars and fifty-six cents on the mission work in Bowie County. This is a very small amount, but I am thankful for it, and ask others to fellowship me in this work. I assure every one that this will be used strictly in this work, as well as any more that may be contributed. I would give a list of the contributors, but have lost three of the names; but I thank the brethren and sisters, anyway. The war has wrecked our happy home by taking the life of one of my darling boys. Pray for us .- Ed S. Duncan.

Doucette, July 10.—I held a meeting near Elbert, Col., the first of June, but no results. I preached one Lord's day for the struggling band in Denver, and met a lively little congregation.

I would not discourage foreign mission work, but it seems to me that we could reach the goal quicker by converting the foreigners in the cities in this country and sending them to their own countries to do mission work. Denver, with over two hundred thousand population, has one church, with possibly fifty or sixty members. Several preachers could be kept busy in Denver, and there are other large cities in the same condition, and these cities have hundreds of thousands from every country in the world. Surely the large cities, as well as the districts, are being neglected; but "how can they preach, except they be sent? At Elbert, fifty-two miles south of Denver, Brother J. C. Schmidt and family are the only loyal mem-bers, and they read the Gospel Advo-They supported the meeting. and were exceedingly liberal. I visited Colorado Springs, Colorado City, the Garden of the Gods, and went up on the top of Pike's Peak, and to the top of the tower that stands on the summit of the Peak, and through a powerful telescope I saw into the ad-joining States and looked down upon the beautiful city of Colorado Springs, which hovers under the shadow of the mountain. Leaving Denver, I boarded the Colorado Southern for Enid, Mont. We passed through the entire State of Wyoming, along the mountain range, through tunnels and along deep canyons, up Windy and Big Horn Rivers, passing close to Yellowstone National Park, with its snow-capped mountains, which were in plain view, to Billings, Mont. Here I changed cars, and took down the Yellowstone River, passing through beautiful irrigated valleys on one side and the mountains on the other to Enid. This trip carried me along the mountain range over a thousand miles from Denver, and every mile was interesting, and makes one glorify the wonderful works of God. From Enid, I had a cross-country trip about eighteen miles, which carried me across the Divide between Yellowstone and the Missouri Rivers to Elmdale, Mont., where the meeting was held. The meeting was a success. Large crowds and fine interest. were restored and one made the confession, and a number of others were expected to make the confession at the water on Monday; but I was pressed for time and could not remain for the baptizing. I left that in the hands of Brother J. O. Golphenee, the only loyal preacher in that country, and this is the only loyal congregation in the State. The members are Missourians, and one is soon impressed with the idea that they have to be "cited," for no disloyal preacher will find any comfort among these brethren. June 30, in company with Bre with Brother Younge, we started in his "Ford" Culbertson, where I boarded the Great Northern for Doucette, where I am now in a meeting. This route carried me through North Dakota, to Minneme through North Dakota, to Minne-apolis, St. Paul, Des Moines, Kansas City, Pittsburgh, Joplin, Calvin, Tex-arkana, Shreveport, and Nacogdoches. I left my home, Tyler, Texas, on March 7 and arrived at Doucette, Texas, on July 4, traveling through twelve States, covering about forty-five hundred miles. So I have been very busy in the work. I begin a meeting at Prairie Grove, near Mount Vernon, Texas, July 19; at Cloverport, near Toone, Tenn., on August 2; Marietta, Miss., on August 16; Delay, Miss., August 30; and Water Valley, Miss., on September 13. I expect some real good meetings when we get on the east side of the Mississippi. Each place will please take notice and be ready for the work.—W. F. Lemmons.

Alvin, July 8.—Brother Ulrich R. Beeson and the writer closed a meeting here last evening, with a fine crowd present. One baptism and a congregation of twenty members set in order. We begin at Myrtle Springs next Sunday.—John W. Hedge.

Through the columns of this paper we wish to thank the former friends and customers of John B. Vaughan for their continued support of the work which he gave so much to build up.

Mr. Vaughan has given to the world great message in sacred song-the story of Jesus, and him crucified. His love, power, and mercy is told in such beautiful variety that the work is a great power for good. We aspire to nothing greater in this life than to be permitted to successfully carry on the work, as many from over the States write us how the singing of the songs has brought many to a saving knowledge of their Lord and Savior Jesus Thus the Lord, true to his Christ. promise, continues to bless the labor of dear Mr. Vaughan, just as he will that of you and me if we work in his name and for his glory.

Mr. Vaughan was among the first writers of new Sunday-school songs, and edited the first song book ever published south of the Mason and Dixon line.

Respectfully,

Not Equipment, But the Man Makes the Difference.

Every great school, college, or university has been built around the personality of some one man. The educated men of America, who have accomplished great things and who stand well in professions, look back on their college training and attribute much of their accomplishments to the dominating personality of the school in which they were educated. The dominating personality of Morgan School is that of Prof. R. K. Morgan. His influence for good and better things does much toward the molding of morals and stimulating of broader ideals in the students who are so fortunate as to attend Morgan School. Mr. Morgan has devoted his life to the training of boxs.

The thoughtful, considerate parent feels that the school to which he sends his son must be equipped and its faculty chosen with the primary end of training the boy to become a man, to teach true Christian faith, to develop manly independence and self-confidence, to inspire high ideals of life and service, to strengthen and develop mind and body alike.

Such an institution is the Morgan School, which has been built up around the Christian character and wholesome, inspiring personality of Robert K. Morgan, who has been principal for twenty-six years.

A postal card to Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., will bring you a catalogue and full information about this school.

Work in Florida.

BY ALONZO M'EWEN.

Feeling it our duty to Jesus the Christ, the brotherhood, and Brother Joe Netherland, we desire to come within the notice of the brethren in other States, and consequently report the splendid meeting we have just had at this place. Two months ago the services of Brother Joe Netherland, of Yuma, Tenn., were secured, and he began a series of meetings here, during which he preached some very interesting gospel sermons. But after this the work was left to drift, and a house-to-house canvass was begun, which at first showed little signs of good results, but after a few days the 'tide turned" and some became obedient to the faith. The baptizing was done at the place of worship, the brotherhood having equipped the building with a pool during the meeting.

One of the most stirring and joyous incidents was when a man who had served the "faith only" plan for forty-two years came forward, made the good confession, was buried with the Lord in baptism, and rose to walk in newness of life. While we welcome any and all on the divine plan, we were especially interested in this because of his sons and their wives being "lively stones." We feel assured we have one more live one.

Again we were made to rejoice over an elderly man who has a large family of little ones, whose wife was already a disciple, and at whose home we had an interesting service. During our services at the place of worship he came forward and yielded to the Master. We especially commend his wife, our sister, for gaining her husband, and we feel assured that she, somewhere and sometime, had explained "the way of the Lord more perfectly" to him.

In addition to this, Brother Netherland was called to a home where a woman had had a severe fever that badly impaired her hearing. He, in his untiring and amiable way, taught her with scratch pad and pencil, and she became obedient. This was joyous, indeed.

Another incident was one considerably out of common in our meetings. Brother Netherland was called by one of the brethren to teach a colored Methodist minister, and after two or three visits he was baptized for the remission of his sins in the river Miami. There is "much water" there, and Brother Netherland preferred handling the subject instead of the element, as all Christians do. We all contemplate much real good to come from this conversion, for he is very zealous and active and is being well taught. Brother Netherland furnished him all the help he could during the time he remained with us.

Our meeting closed on Sunday night with two baptisms, and Brother Netherland left on Monday. We shall miss him very much, and hope it may be ours to enjoy another such meeting in the future, conducted by this worthy friend and brother.

Another elder was appointed, and we feel very proud in securing such a consecrated character, zealous of good works, persistent for truth, and an efficient teacher. The elders are outlining a mission work to begin here soon, and they are promised the cooperation of the brotherhood.

Just a word about our little city. It is situated mainly between the Biscayne Bay and Miami River, on the Florida East Coast Railroad, about four hundred miles south from Jacksonville. It is only a few miles to the Atlantic Ocean, where there is plenty of fishing, bathing, and yatching (ask Brother "Joe"). The streets are made especially attractive with coconuts, mangoeos, guavas, grape fruit, Avacada pears, and many other good things, and made beautiful as well as fragrant with the royal ponceannah and lovely tropical flowers too numerous to detail. The climate is that of perpetual summer. And when I say "summer," I do not wish to convey the idea that it is oppressive or excessively hot; it is cool and nice, being fanned by the gentle breezes from the water. The city has a very progressive spirit, there being many fine buildings now under construction. and many plans and details are now being worked out, which, together with her thirty-five thousand population, makes it especially desirable to live in. Come to Miami; we welcome all, and especially our brotherhood.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

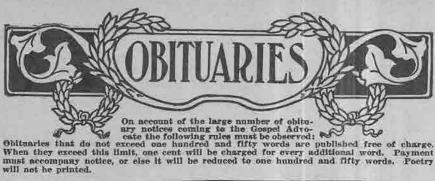

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHIII TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic prop-erties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S

Powell.

At 12:40 P.M., October 17, 1918, the spirit of M. L. Powell, of Strayhorn, Miss., left its house of clay and crossed over into the great unknown. Brother Powell was forty-eight years old when he died. He was one of the first members of the Crockett congregation, and when the congregation was organized he was made a deacon. He read and believed the Bible. The read and believed the Bible. writer was with him when the end came. He called around his bed his family and admonished each member to take the Bible as a guide through life. He then called for the negroes that worked for him and gave them the same admonition. In his death the community has lost a splendid citizen; the church, a faithful members his wife a deathed husband and ber; his wife, a devoted husband; and his children, a kind father. are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." J. P. Lowrey.

Ferges.

Isham Evans Ferges was born in Virginia on April 11, 1826. Twelve years later the family moved to North Carolina, and from there to Shelbyville, Ill., where he lived until grown. At the age of twenty-one he was married to Amanda J. Harrison, and to this union nine children were born. At the age of twenty-two he embraced the gospel of Jesus Christ and lived as true to its teaching as mortal creatures well can here on earth. He had lived near Liberty Hill, Texas, for many years, Sister Ferges died eleven years before he did. It was a long and lonely period to him; but his daughter-in-law and son were ever kind and good. Sister Sudie is as good, kind, and sympathetic a creature as I have ever met, and Brother Ferges dearly loved her. He has often expressed himself to me of her being so good to wait on him day or night. He left this earthly tabernacle on August 22, 1918. He was a pilgrim on earth ninety-two years and a faithful servant of the Lord seventy years. Such a life is worth living.

J. P. WHITEFIELD:

Pewett.

On April 30, 1919, God called home to rest Mrs. Rebecca Pewett, who for more than half a century blessed the home of Brother W. P. Pewett with her wifely love and care. Sister Pewett was born just three-fourths of a century ago last December 5, and we are made to feel that she must have been an obedient child to her parents, for her days have been "long in the land." She was a constant reader of the Gospel Advocate, often reading over again old ones until her sight became too poor to read. She reared two sons and five daughters, all of whom, save one daughter, survive her.
Truly her children were blessed in having her care and counsel through their youth until they had reached the years of mature manhood and womanhood. In her younger days she was a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, but in after years, having been taught "the way of the Lord more perfectly," she became a Christian in name and in practice, studying the Scriptures and rejoicing in the promises contained therein. She had been very feeble for more than a year before her death, weakening and fad-ing away as the days went by; and just as the April showers were wooing the flowers of May into bloom, she fell peacefully asleep in the arms of Jesus. So peaceful, indeed, was the going down of her life's sun that it was like the setting of the morning star, which goes not down behind the darkening west, nor hides behind the tempest cloud, but fades away into the light SAM HARBISON. of heaven.

Renwar Relieves Rheumatism.

Renwar Relieves Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by urle acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve, or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 56-cent bottle has done me more good than all santorium treatment; and what it did for me why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." Watch Your Blood When The Iron Runs Low You Are In Danger

The Same As When The Mercury Goes Down You Know There Will be a Frost

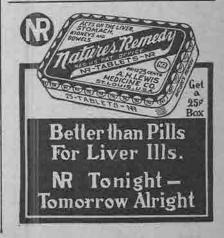

How To Make The Test That Tells

Actual blood tests show that a fremendously large aumber of people who are weak and ill lack from in their blood and that they are ill for no other reason than lack of from from deficiency paralyzes healthy, forceful action, mults down the whole organism and weakens the entire system. A pale face, a nervous fritable disposition, a lack of strength and indurance and the inability to cope with the strong, vigorous folks in the race of lifethese are the sort of warning signals that Nature gives when the blood is getting thin pale, watery and literally starving for want of iron. If you are not sure of your condition, go to your doctor and have him take your blood count and see where you stand or else make the following test yourself: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated fron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. By enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells Nuxated fron strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened issues and helps to limitly renewed everyy and power into the whole system.

Unlike the older inorganic iron products Nuxated fron is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black hor upset the stemach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Poultry Expert Gives Away Chick Food

To introduce to the poultry raisers of this section a Chick Food that is nationally known, E. J. Reefer, the Poultry Expert, Third Floor Reefer Building, Kansas City, Mo., is giving away free a one-dollar package of Chick Food absolutely free to every poultry raiser who agrees to tell his neigh-bor about it. This medicated Baby Chick Food is sold on an absolute guarantee to raise chicks for six weeks, and it is backed by the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City. Send Mr. Reefer one dollar and he will not only send you one regular dollar size package of Chick Food, but he will include in the same shipment an extra package absolutely free, which means he will send you two regular full-size dollar packages of this scientific medicated Baby Chick Food for only one dollar. And he will prepay all the charges on the first order. Considering that this product is guaranteed by the National Reserve Bank and that it keeps baby chicks for six weeks, every poultry raiser should certainly try this scientific medicated Baby Chick Food without further delay. It will pay you to write Mr. Reefer

FROM THE FIELD

Texas.

Ennis, July 14.—Fine crowds, good interest, and one addition yesterday. Brother D. F. Draper spoke at both hours. I close three years' work with the Ennis church this month and begin with the church in Waxahachie on August 1.—Ben West.

Mount Calm, July 14.—The series of sermons by Elder G. Dallas Smith, of Cleburne, during the last ten days, at the church of Christ at this place, closed on Sunday night. Thirteen souls accepted Christ by primary obedience, putting on Christ in baptism, and five others who had neglected their Christian duties confessed their faults and announced their intention to live as the Lord directs. Brother Smith, by his faithfulness and Christian deportment, endeared himself to the entire membership, and promised to return the first Sunday in next July to help us in our labor in the vineyard of the Lord.—C. A. Zachary.

Mount Calm, July 14.—I closed a good meeting with the church here last night, with thirteen baptisms. Also a number confessed their faults. It has been quite a pleasant meeting to me. The congregation is composed largely of two families—the Goodloes and the Nelsons, formerly from Rutherford County, Tenn. Having lived six years at Murfreesboro, it is good to meet these people who know so many of the people whom I know and learned to love during those years. They are a thrifty and liberal people, and the church here is in a healthy condition. I am to return for a meeting next July, the Lord willing.—G. Dallas Smith.

Houston, July 6.—The meeting conducted by Brother L. S. White for the Central Church was a success from every view. Brother White did his work well and the brethren were sure that they had the right man. Four were baptized and several took membership with us. Central Church was organized under the direction of Brother G. A. Dunn and other godly brethren who thought that a church was badly needed in the central part of the city. They began this work in January, 1918, with only a few members. Since that time this church has contributed over three thousand dollars to this work. They are now getting ready to buy a lot which is to cost about thirty thousand dollars, and a building is to be erected as soon as possible. There are only about sixty or seventy members, but each is untiring in his efforts. Many in this church contribute one-tenth and even more of their income. Our place of worship at present is in the Chamber of Commerce room,—C. P. Poole.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

The New Testament Ideal of Giving

John R. Weathers Discusses Two Bestowments.

In speaking of religious giving, I refer exclusively to the giving that is manifest in "true religion," so concisely defined in James 1: 27. In this form of giving will be found two kinds of bestowment—one that results simply in a gift, and the other as a payment. The real gift is a thing bestowed as an occasional charity, mark of approval, or expression of remembrance or affection; but a payment is that which is given or yielded to meet a prescribed or legal obligation that cannot be justly avoided. Gifts may be given; debts must be paid. The word of God abounds with allusions to gifts and gift-making, and shows that the practice of giving gifts prevailed generally even among the heathen.

One of the plainest instances in the New Testament is to be found in the first part of the sixteenth chapter of the First Corinthian letter, wherein Paul urges a congregation of the church of Christ to take up a special collection for the immediate relief of persecuted saints located in Judea. This exhortation of the apostle was for a charitable gift to meet a pressing emergency that existed in a certain locality. And the same thing is occasionally done at this time by our Christian brotherhood as necessities from time to time arise. Paul further directed that, in order to accommodate him, the collection should be made and laid by in store "upon the first day of the week," and that members should contribute as God had "prospered" them; but he did not say what part of their prosperity should be given. It was not necessary to do so on that occasion.

I am unable to see that Paul, in the incident of his missionary career referred to above, had in mind a general rule for the financial support of the gospel. This matter, as I understand it, had been disposed of in the ninth chapter of the same letter. In this chapter the apostle discussed the Lord's general provision for the substantial, or financial, care of his covenants. In verse 13 Paul asked; "Do ye not know that they who minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?" Here the Corinthians were reminded of what the Lord had required—even the tenth part of the income of his "chosen people"—for the substantial support of his ministration on the earth. This was God's financial standard of assessment.

In the next verse (14) of the same chapter the apostle declares: "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." Are you doing so now, brother preacher? If not, why not? Paul tells us in this verse that "the Lord hath ordained." Ordained what? An indefinite something? The phrase, "even so," means "in like manner;" it is the same "Lord" that dealt with the typical tribes of Israel; and we have learned that the ordinances of the Lord are divine laws. What are the nature, application, and limitations of this ordinance? It certainly belongs to the gospel age and is a divinely important item in "the perfect law of liberty."

In view of Paul's purpose in this ninth chapter and the intimate relationship in thought, language, and position of these two verses, and of the vital importance of this reasonable interpretation, may we not safely and loyally accept the declaration expressed in the inspired fourteenth verse as the literal reënactment by the Holy Spirit of the Lord's standard assessment for use in the church? Are we not compelled to refer to the thirteenth verse for the logical interpretation of the fourteenth?

I know that, in our desire to be guided by the word of God alone, we may properly suspicion and resent the intrusion of anything apparently beyond the ordinary pale of "the perfect law of liberty." I would not dare to wrest the Scriptures. But we know that the whole Bible is the word of God, and that the Old Testament and the New Testament have a close interdependent relationship. Jesus said early in his Sermon on the Mount: "Verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." the need for substantial support of God's cause in the world been fulfilled? If so, when did it go, and what has taken its place? Of what was the Mosaic tithe a type? Is the haphazard practice in vogue in our congregations now the real antitype of the tithal shadow? Our venerable Christian friend, the lamented David Lipscomb, says in his "Queries and Answers" (page 420): "We may use the old dispensation and the decision under it to see how to interpret the laws of the new covenant." So, as we all believe that we owe something to the cause of Christ, and as the New Testament is generally held by our brotherhood to be silent regarding the part of our increase divinely required, we must look back through the history of God's unfolding operations till we find the divine financial standard, which I truly feel was (and is) the tenth part.

Furthermore, since it is generally held that the New Testament is silent respecting the tax rate, any rate may be paid into the treasury without violation of divine requirement. Then, why not preach and practice the conscientious payment of the tenth part into the Lord's treasury? It can be properly done. Think of what it would mean! The brotherhood would feel stronger and happier; preachers could devote their whole time to proclaiming the gospel; missionaries could go boldly and triumphantly into all the world and preach the pure gospel; our great half-heathen cities could be reclaimed and redeemed; the poor and distressed could be clothed and fed; our superannuated and disabled preachers and their families could be cared for; the press and libraries of our "peculiar people" would flourish and grow mightier in influence; Christian schools would spring up and grow and fill the world with the light that once appeared only in Judean skies. Brethren, the tenth is the talisman of triumph, the companion of the truth, the Mosaic shadow that will lead us out of the wilderness of doubt and confusion, and the part that has always pleased the Lord. Why not meet it in our giving and "go over the top" in triumphant pursuit of the chattering cohorts of Satan? Let us give more money for the support of the most vital cause in all the

Among "professed" Christians the principle of giving is generally recognized. Even those who have only a "smattering" idea of the teachings of the Bible admit that it is our duty to give. I have met just a few "old skinflints," misers, covetous, men—Shylosks, Scrooges, Silas Marners—who denied it both in theory and in practice. I think of an old man, who is nominally an elder in the church and who is in prosperous circumstances, that argues against it and refuses to practice it. But such examples are exceedingly rare, so rare that they almost excite our curiosity as to whether such a one is not a heathen or a reprobate. But with the "multitudes of them that believe," this phase of the subject needs no argument.

The fact that it is generally conceded to be our duty to give by no means proves that we are meeting the divine requirement in this respect. It is one thing to acknowledge a duty and quite another to perform it. When the contribution plate is passed, the majority of church members go through the formality of giving-that is, contribute something because is is customary to do so; others are doing it, and it might attract unfavorable attention if they aid not. The matter has been given no thought, no conscientious attention. Out of whatever "change" happens to be in the pocket a small piece is selected and cast into the Lord's treasury. About the only care taken is to see that the piece is not too large. And thus consciously or unconsciously we express our interest in "the greatest cause on earth." The real trouble is that Christians in general have never given the matter any careful, conscientious thought. They have not searched the Scriptures dillgently to learn what their duty is, nor have they given it any serious consideration when they have been taught. On account of our innate selfishness, the subject is not as attractive as the "mode" or design of baptism, and consequently we have had very little regard for it.

A primary mistake of Christians has been their failure to recognize God's ownershp. Man has assumed that everything belongs to him-that he owns the earth. He has counted God out entirely and claimed all creation for himself. The exact opposte of this assumption-or, rather, presumption-is the truth. Man owns nothing, not even himself. "Know ye not that . . . ye are not your own? for ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's." (1 Cor. 6: 19, 20.) If a man is not his own, how can he own anything? "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof." (Ps. 24; 1.) "Seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things." (Acts 17: 25.) "Who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." (1 Tim. 6: 17.) "The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts." (Hag. 2: 8.) "Both riches and honor come of thee." (1 Chron. 29: 12.) The earth, with all its wondrous wealth of land and sea, belongs to God; man owns nothing. God owes man nothing; man owes God everything.

Man very irreverently and impiously talks about what belongs to him—what he has made or acquired. Man can create no wealth, nor can he acquire it except by God's permission and help. "And [lest] thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth, . . . thou shalt remember the Lord thy God: for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth." (Deut. 8: 17.) God is the owner of the earth with all its natural resources. He very graciously leases it to man upon very liberal terms, and man, out of his ingratitude and dishonesty, is rarely willing to pay the rent. He doesn't charge him so much per acre and compel him to pay it regardless of success or failure, but just a part of the crop—as he is prospered. (1 Cor. 16; 2.)

A steward is one employed to look after the business and interests of another. He holds the property of his master in trust to be used for his good. He is bound by every moral and legal principle to be honest, industrious, and discreet in the administration of his trust. He must not misappropriate nor use for himself that which belongs to another.

Christians are stewards. (See Luke 12; 42; Tit. 1: 7; 1 Cor. 4: 1; 1 Pet. 4; 10; etc.) They are only trustees of the property they control—not the owners. They must administer it as a trust according to the will and directions of their Lord. They have no right to use it as they please, but as he pleases. It is his will that they use a part of it—whatever is necessary—to supply their own needs. He is very liberal with man in this matter and in general allows him by far the greater part of what he receives for his own use. But in the face of God's generosity, man is frequently so greedy that he refuses to divide with God at all; and when he does, it is often a mere pittance that he gives him.

Most men will admit that God requires us to give, and that we ought to give, etc. They accept the proposition in theory and deny it in practice. "Many begin by giving God everything in general, and then go on giving him nothing in particular." But the question is, how much shall we give? We are told in the New Testament that "it is more blessed to give than to receive;" that "God loveth a cheerful giver;" that "he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully;" and many other passages of like import. Under the law the Jews were required to give a tenth of all their increase for the Levites (Num. 18: 21-24), and it seems also a tenth for the feasts (Deut, 14: 22-24), and a tenth every third year for the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow (Deut, 14: 28, 29). In addition, there were the freewill offerings, which constituted another large amount. Altogether it seems safe to say that the Jew gave not less than a third of his income to the Lord, and in spite of these demands God said; "Thou shall lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow." (Deut. 15: 6.) But I can almost hear somebody thinking now: "Yes, but we are not living under the law." No, but we are living under the gospel-"that which excelleth," "is more glorious," and whose blessings in every way are a thousandfold greater than those of the law. While the New Testament does not say just what per cent of our income we shall give, by what process of reasoning can we conclude that God requires less of us under the gospel than under the law? Will some one answer this question? The gospel endeavors to enlighten the mind, to appeal to our conscience, and to stir up our sense of gratitude, rather than to lay down hard and fast rules about giving; but there is every reason to believe that woe will be to him who, out of a covetous and selfish soul and an ungrateful heart, withholds more than is meet.

It would probably be safe to say that members of the denominations give upon an average five or ten times as much for their religion as those do who claim to stand aloof from and oppose all denominations. A slogan that is now being given great publicity is, "A million tithers in Methodism." The Mormon Church enforces tithing upon its members. About seventy years ago it was driven out of the Eastern States and compelled to settle down on the scorching plains of the West. But it went to work and made the "desert rejoice and blossom as the rose," spite of their being compelled to give a tenth of all their income, no people has ever enjoyed greater prosperity than the Mormons. To-day the Mormon Church is one of the strongest financial institutions in the world. The president of the church, as trustee of its funds, is a director in a long list of the greatest financial enterprises in the United States; its temple at Salt Lake City is one of the finest buildings in the world; it carries on a world-wide religious propaganda and its missions reach every quarter of the globe. How do you account for the world importance of this semi-heathen, semi-Christian religious body? The answer lies in its zeal and liberality.

The Adventists are another prosperous people who practice tithing. There may be others of the denominations that follow this practice; and if not churches, thousands of individuals.

Ought all Christians to give a tenth? I do not say so. But I am not the one to decide and settle this matter, except for myself. The New Testament does not say what part or per cent we should give; but while the tenth may not be the exact part we should give, I feel sure that upon an average we ought to give ten times as much as we are now giving. Our conception of the money side of Christianity has been, and is yet, shamefully small. The average church has been content with nickel and dime giving. For a man to give a dime or a quarter when he is able to give a dollar or five dollars is a disgraceful piece of shame and hypocrisy. We are told to "purpose" in our hearts and to give as the Lord has "prospered" us. We ought to make a careful estimate of our expected or known income and then purpose to give a certain per cent-ten, twenty-five, or fifty per cent, according to our prosperityand then carry out that purpose as faithfully as we do any other financial obligation in life. No Christian is living right before God who is not giving regularly into the Lord's treasury up to the fullness of his duty "as he has been prospered." It is doubtful if any one ought to give less than a tenth, and no doubt many ought to give much more. No Christian has a right to hoard up money. He has no right to lay up more than a sufficient amount to meet his reasonable needs through life. All over and above this should be invested in the kingdom of God. Hence, those who are greatly prospered above their needs should give far more than a tenth.

If all church members would just obey the gospel and give as the Lord prospers them, the Lord's treasury would be full; and with the proper use of these funds, the kingdom could be extended rapidly to the ends of the earth. I think one of the greatest of all duties before us to-day is to teach, urge, and exhort Christians and churches everywhere to greater liberality in the cause of Christ. Every preacher, editor, elder, deacon, and all spiritual-minded persons will be recreant to their duty if they fail to put forth and keep up a greater effort along these lines in the future. May the grace of God, the love of Christ, and the influence of the Holy Spirit all combine to help us do it.

W. L. Reeves Tells Us Why.

God so manifests his goodness to us in the abundance he gives us of this world's goods that we get a most splendid lesson from his example concerning our duty to give.

Labor, punctually and judiciously expended, will bring to almost all of us more than we need of the temporal blessings of this world's goods. Think of the wheat, corn, potatoes, etc., one man can harvest as the result of his own labor. He cannot consume it all himself. Since God, the bountiful giver, has thus continuously blessed us, what can we lawfully do with the overplus?

Paul says for man to "labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have whereof to give to him that hath need." (Eph. 4: 28.) This passage makes it clear as to our duty in the matter. There are many needy people in the world, and God gives the increase, and has ordained that through our ability, which he also gives, we are to "bear . . . one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ," (Gal. 6: 1-5.) If we do not do as he says, he, the great Judge, will hold us accountable for our stewardship. (Luke 16: 2.)

If it be but little with which any of us are blessed, we are stewards over that amount, according to our ability; and Christ says: "He that is faithful in a very little is faithful also in much: and he that is unrighteous in a very little is unrighteous also in much." (Luke 16: 10.) Thus we see, if we do not give liberally, we are not faithful servants, but are unrighteous.

From the law of Moses we learn that in that "moonlight" age of the world God demanded of every man that h should bring a gift when he appeared before the Lord at the three appointed times in a year. God told them he would bless them with increase, and he has told us the same in these words: "He that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." (2 Cor. 9: 6.) But here is what he told those people back there: "Jehovah thy God will bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the work of thy hands, and thou shalt be altogether joyful. Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before Jehovah thy God in a place which he shall choose: in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles; and they shall not appear before Jehovah empty; every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of Jehovah thy God which he hath given thee," (Deut. 16: 15-17.)

Now, the very same principle that we find in the foregoing is as clear as the noontide sun in the New Testament. So let us compare points and see.

- 1. God promised to bless them with increase from the work of their hands. It is promised us that we shall reap bountifully if we sow bountifully. (2 Cor. 9: 6.)
- 2. They were to "be altogether joyful." We are to "rejoice evermore." (1 Thess. 5: 16.)
- 3. They were to appear before Jehovah at stated times and appointed places to worship as instructed. We must do the same. Here is the law to us: "Not forsaking our own assembling together, as the custom of some is." (Heb. 10: 25.) Again, we read: "And upon the first day of the week, when we were gathered together to break bread. Paul discoursed with them." (Acts 20: 7.) Thus our duty to assemble is made very clear.
- 4. They were required to bring something to give. Moses said: "And they shall not appear before Jehovah empty: every man shall give as he is able." (Deut. 16: 16, 17.) The New Testament demands no more nor less of us. It commands every member of the church to give as much as he or she is able to give.
- "It is acceptable according as a man hath, not according as he hath not." (2 Cor. 8: 12.) "He that giveth, let him do it with liberality." (Rom. 12: 8.) Again, in the Old Testament we read: "The liberal soul shall be made fat." (Prov. 11: 25.) There is no question for controversy about it. God certainly will bless those who are liberal givers, and especially is this the case when the giving is done according to his will. But to give according to his will, several things are absolutely necessary for the gift to be acceptable unto the Lord.
- 1. It must be from a willing mind. "For God loveth a cheerful giver." (2 Cor. 8: 12; 9: 7.)
- 2. It must be given in the right motive. Love is that motive. "And if I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing." (2 Cor. 13: 3.)
- 3. It must be done regularly and continuously. "Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper." (1 Cor. 16: 2.)
- 4. We must give liberally, and not grudgingly. Our giving should be so liberal that we will have to deny ourselves at considerable sacrifice. A living sacrifice is what is demanded. (Rom. 12: 1, 2.) Christ said: "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." (Luke 9: 23.)
- 5. Giving must be done in the name of Christ and to the glory of God. "And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." (Col. 3: 17.) Again: "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." (1 Cor. 10: 31.)
- 6. Most certainly, all the giving any Christian does must be done in the church. "Unto him be the glory in the church and in Christ Jesus unto all generations forever and ever." (Eph. 3: 21.)

Giving is for the benefit of the needy. We should not do all of our giving to the rich, hoping to receive more in return; but the law of Christ says to "give to him that hath need." (Eph. 4: 28.) We can do no better than to give to the world that which they need most of all, and that is the gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord. I am sure this is the only remedy for the evils and needs of the world as it is to-day. This being true, how incumbent it is upon every professed Christian to make a great sacrifice in giving liberally of his or her means to send the gospel to those so badly in need of it!

The gospel, when obeyed, will cause the rich to divide their goods with the poor; it will make good men of bad ones; it will drive out ignorance and make people wise unto salvation; it will put the indolent and idle people to work; and, by doing these things, it will cause enmity, strife, and fightings to cease; and love, joy, and peace will prevail instead, and plenty of this world's goods will be supplied for all those who are now naked and on starvation.

Then, giving to support true gospel preachers so they can take the gospel—God's only remedy for the evils of this world—to all people of the earth is the greatest work any man or set of men can do for ignorant, suffering humanity. I appeal to those who have this world's goods that they give more liberally to the spreading abroad of the "glorious gospel of Jesus Christ," which is the only hope of the ignorant, suffering, sighing people of the sincursed earth.

M. L. Moore on First Giving Ourselves.

We are the Lord's by creation. He has made us and sustains us daily, although at times we use the strength he has given us to weaken his cause, both in ourselves and others. So that being the Lord's by creation does not make it sure that we please him. Some of the creatures he has made seem to do all they can to set aside God's purpose in their lives.

Next, we are the Lord's because he has bought us with the precious blood of his Son, our Savior. What a price for such unworthy beings! How sad to think the purchase necessary!

Again, we are the Lord's because we give ourselves to him. In the matter of our creation and our purchase or our redemption we were passive, as it all came about through the grace of God.

It is not a small matter to always act so as to show that we belong to another. When we belong to another, all that we have and all that we are belong to that one. Then, having given ourselves to the Lord, of course all that we have and are belongs to him. So, then, we cannot think, speak, or act as we please, but as our Lord directs in all things. Since we are the Lord's, wholly his, we do not have the right to think or speak of what we shall give to the Lord's cause, for "the earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof;" but, rather, we should think of what we shall take out of the Lord's cause for ourselves. The temptation is great in these days of money loving and money getting to rob God. I am truly fearful that many of us give just enough to the Lord's work to keep our consciences from hurting us. We are all too prone to measure our giving by the standard of another. If we have really given ourselves to the Lord, we will not become overexercised about the actions of others. Our vision will be all the clearer to get the mote out of our brother's eye when the beam is removed from our own. This beam is not found in the eye of one who is fully given to the Lord. The Lord says, "Fret not thyself because of evildoers;" yet I often find myself failing to keep the Lord's direction here. This, I fear, is because I have not fully given myself to him. I love to think of our Lord's answer to one who asked him: "Lora, and what shall this man do?" "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me."

I am so thankful that we are to stand or fall in the eyes of our Lord, and not according to our way of thinking of one another, to say nothing of the evildoers in the world. May the Lord help us to so give ourselves to him that we may, like him, love those who may even seek to do us greatest harm. Let us not fear to come near to Him whose we are, and always think, speak, and act as in his presence.

F. W. Smith Discusses the True Spirit in Giving.

The most important element entering into the matter of offerings in the service of God is not the "quantity," but the motive back of the offering. This fact is most clearly taught, not only in clear and explicit passages of scripture, but also in concrete examples. As to whether or not God will accept an offering and bless the giver depends entirely upon the spirit or motive prompting it.

"For if the readiness is there, it is acceptable according as a man hath, not according as he hath not." (2 Cor. 8: 12.) The context in which we find this passage deals with the matter of giving to the poor saints in Judea, and the very basis of acceptance is a readiness or willingness of mind. This same principle holds good with reference to every gift or offering we make in the service of God, be that offering much or little. When David, the king of Israel, was gathering material out of which the temple, the house of God, was to be constructed, he said: "Who then offereth willingly to consecrate himself this day unto Jehovah?" (1 Chron. 29: 5.) God wanted no material in that marvelous building that did not come as a freewill offering, and nothing by constraint or compulsion would have been accepted; and the same is true regarding the spiritual temple, the church of Jesus Christ. Money procured by church fairs, mock marriages, ice-cream suppers, etc., for religious purposes, is an abomination in the sight of God, a prostitution of the holy religion which Jesus Christ died to establish, and a surrender to the world the sacredness of a blood-bought institution.

No doubt there are some who give to charitable and religious institutions, prompted more by a desire to be lauded by men for their liberality than simply from a desire to honor God and be blessed of him. The case of the rich men who cast into the treasury of their abundance, but received no blessing, while the poor widow's gift was recorded as worth more than that of all the rest, is in point. They gave only of their "superfluity," which embodied no element of sacrifice, while she gave all of her living. The spirit or motive in this case was very different, hence the praise bestowed upon the widow. It is a poor service—if, indeed, it can be called "service" at all—when men and women devote to the cause of Christ that, and only that, which they think they can well spare from their possessions for fear of running short.

Again, the Master said: "Take heed that ye do not your righteousness [almsgiving] before men, to be seen of them; else ye have no reward with your Father who is in heaven. When therefore thou doest alms, sound not a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men." (Matt. 6: 1, 2.) Here were men who gave to be seen of men, in order to receive the plaudits of men, and in so doing lost the blessings of God. Why? They were prompted by the wrong spirit. They did this, too, in the synagogue, the place where they went ostensibly to worship God. Instead of being possessed of a spirit of devotion, humility, and supreme reverence, they were thinking of themselves-their own glory and honor. Hence, they must needs call the assembly's attention to what they were doing; and to accentuate it still more, they must talk it on the street. If there had not been a danger then and also now of Christ's disciples becoming guilty of this sin, then how can we account for this teaching and warning given by the Christ?

Let us, then, one and all, examine our hearts and see that the proper spirit actuates or prompts us in all of our giving, whether it be much or little. Do not wait to be "begged" and "drummed" to give when the duty is before you, for fear you may give under protest and lose your reward. Let the gift be a voluntary offering, as free as a flowing fountain, and God will richly reward the giver.

J. W. Brents Discusses the Gain in Giving.

"But godliness with contentment is great gain. Forwe brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment let us be therewith content. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." (1 Tim. 6: 6-10.)

The above was written by an inspired man, but it would have been true just the same, inspiration or no inspiration. As I write these lines I am reminded of near and dear friends "who would be rich," but have fallen "into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts;" men whose lives were full of good deeds, and their lives were a benediction and a blessing to the world; but the "love of money" has led them away from their "first love" and they are "fallen." Only true repentance can save their souls from "perdition and destruction."

The money problem is the most vexing one that we have to meet. It is in our nation, our homes, and in the church of the living God. There is no doubt that the church is woefully handlcapped for the lack of funds. There are innumerable places where the gospel could be preached and should be preached, and there are many who would love to enter these virgin fields, but a support is lacking. The widows and orphans are often neglected because the church treasury is empty. We need to send out millions of tracts, while to-day we are doing nothing worth while along these lines. These things go neglected and undone all because there is no money to do it with.

Then, when the preacher opens his mouth along these lines, he is accused of being "out for money," when he "had better be preaching the gospel and saving souls." Also, when our papers publish worthy calls for help, some are ready to have their paper stopped. Such people are like the old negro whose wife was constantly begging him for money. Some one asked him what she did with so much money. His reply was: "I don't know; I ain't nebber gib'n her none yit." So, brother, when you criticize the preacher and the paper for teaching along these lines, ask yourself: Have I answered any of these worthy appeals and done my part along these lines?

The money problem will never be solved till all are taught to give. Not just the head of the family, but father, mother, brother, and sister should give. If not, why not? Can the head of the home do all the praying and singing and partaking of the Lord's Supper for the whole family? The Bible says: "Let each one of you lay by him in store." And I think, instead of giving our children pennies to give to the Lord, we should give them nickels and dimes. When they buy the little dainties they love, we always give them nickels and dimes; but when they start for the lesson on Lord's day, we send the penny along. Here at Hollywood a banker asked one of our elders why the penny was so much more moral than the twenty-five-cent piece? The elder failed to answer. When the banker counted out the contribution which was made on the previous Lord's day, most of it consisted of pennies. Hence, the banker's answer was: "Pennies go to church more than the quarters."

There are several reasons why we should give. The best one I know of is this: God, our Father, requires it. "But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall also reap bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity for God loveth a cheerful giver." "Let him that stole steal no more: but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth." God teaches us to give, and that is enough for any Christian. He tells us also that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." Many of us are too much like the old darky who said it was good enough for him just to receive. Too many of us fail to realize that there is a blessing couched in every gift we make. It is like Shakespeare's mercy; it is twice blessed—it blesses him that gives and him that receives. It is certainly right that we should give to help the poor and needy and all worthy undertakings; but I, for one, believe in giving to help myself. I should realize that I am poor and needy, wretched and miserable, blind and impotent in His sight; and, instead of blessing him only that receives, let it also bring God's favors and mercies and benedictions again to me. The attitude we take toward our money is a true index to our lives and characters.

C. A. Norred on the Savior's Rule and Promise.

The words of our blessed Master as recorded in Luke 6: 38 amount to an announcement of the rule of divine retribution—the rule that that which we give will, under divine providence, be returned unto us.

It is not always easy to believe that the rule here stated is true. The man of the world can see little sound judgment in such a statement. To him it seems that to give is to lose. Many Christians, also, have failed to learn the truthfulness of this rule; they fail to grasp its reality. The rule is stated in words that are as clear as those which announce the divinity of Jesus. There can be no mistake. "Give, and it shall be given unto you." Marcus Dods observes that "wealth pursues the men who part with it most freely." This observation is not without scripture confirmation. Abram, while a wanderer, relinquished, as with a wave of the hand, all the rich plain of the Jordan. At first glance it might seem that Abram possessed little business insight, but a comparison of the lives of Abraham and Lot will show that Abram was richly rewarded.

But there are rewards other than dollars and cents. To live in the hearts of those whom we have served is no small thing. The gratitude of the Galatians, which was sufficient to make them ready to pluck out their eyes for the apostle Paul, was evidently remembered with tender affection by the writer of the letter to the Galatians.

Next to the riches of godliness is the riches that consists in true friends. He who out of a warm and generous heart sows unsparingly will find springing up around him a wealth of friends that will make his life richer and fuller of meaning.

"Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over, shall they give into your bosom."

The Day of Big Things.

BY A. B. BARRET.

I sometimes think that there is less of the majestic and more of the microscopic about us than any other people in the world. We are in need of the tonic of something big. Yonder are the mountain peaks, but we have lost ourselves in the maze of the host of obstacles that lie between. We are too prone to drift among small things, as small anxieties, small pleasures, small ideas, small talk, Some one has well said that "we can forget our tiddlywinking in the contemplation of immensity;" and this is true, for "it is magnificent medicine." If we could only sink our shallow worries forever in the unplumbed depths of some big and worthy thing! We may not sit by and behold the stupendousness of Niagara, nor that of the Pyramids, but we surely can have "the mind which was in Christ Jesus." God has said: "They shall ery unto the Lord, and he shall send them a Savior, and a great one,

No doubt you have heard no little exhortation not to despise "the day of small things." My fear is that we have already become so enamored of the day of small things that we are not looking for the day of big things. I am praying that God will yet send us a faithful servant to lead us into the blazing sunlight of something immense! Our grave danger that lurks by our pathway is that of putting the emphasis in the wrong place. Yes, disproportionate emphasis is our danger. Emphasis and proportion touch every phase of our being, true or false, sane or insane. It all depends upon whether or not we have properly placed the emphasis and closely observed the proportion of things. A beautiful work of art can be marred by drawing one feature out of proportion. So it is that the entire meaning of a word can be changed by giving it a different accent. Great and bloodless theological wars have been waged over the pronounciation of one word! This is how sectarianism thrives. The sectarian says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" or, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" but the Christian quotes it just as it has been emphasized by the Holy Spirit. There are certain features of the truth that God has stressed, and they are important, just as the sun is the central luminary about which all of the lesser planets revolve.

In our text our Lord adroitly exhibits the shame of the Pharisees, which lay in the fact that they had lost themselves in the labyrinthine forest of little things. Spiritual disintegration and decay were the result, and they became the "straitest sect of the Jews' religion." They paid tithe of mint, anise, and cummin—O, yes!—but they neglected the weightier matters of the law, justice, mercy, and faith. The one they ought to have done, but not to have left the other undone. As blind guides, they strained at the gnat and swallowed the camel. And so do many of us. If we would hold justice, mercy, and faith as the weightier matters of God's law, the smaller things would thereby be adjusted in the very nature of things.

But where are our justice and mercy for each other, and our faith in each other? Remember what God has said about him who has shown no mercy! The trouble is, we do not love each other. For this cause we are suspicious and afraid of each other. John says: "There is no fear in love: but perfect love casteth out fear, because fear hath punishment; and he that feareth is not made perfect in love." (1 John 4: 18.) What justice and mercy are there in a heart that condemns and ostracizes a worthy brother because he happens to differ from us in some of his views touching Bible teaching? Are we just and merciful in acting thus, and that before we have heard the man himself? The Romans and the Jews did not condemn criminals before they were first heard in their own behalf, (Acts 25: 13-26; 1 John 7: 45-52.) We are cruelly jealous for our tithe of mint, anise, and cummin, and thus we lose sight of the weightier matters, justice, mercy, and faith. The secret is, we are supersensitive and hypercritical. I remember to have seen a cartoon in the Ram's Horn some years ago that exactly fits the case. A critic had his microscope down carefully scrutinizing the text, and he was terribly worried to know whether he had discovered a period or a flyspeck. Too many of us have discovered the flyspeck. Our pharisaical spirit demands that if you would be numbered with us you must subscribe to our own special, private interpretation of scripture; and that in the face of the declaration by Peter, inspired of the Holy Spirit, "that no prophecy of scripture is of private interpretation." (2 Pet. 1: 20.) The Pharisees virtually said to Christ that if he should persist in eating with publicans and sinners he need not expect their indorsement: for they were like the elder scn, in their own estimation. (Luke 15: 1-32.) And we remember what Christ said: "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and the Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven."

But we are not one whit behind John, in one particular at least. You remember, he said: "Teacher, we saw one casting out demons in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followed not us." Of course, it was the supreme offense not to follow John and his companions; but did you never read what Christ said? "Forbid him not: for there is no man who shall do a mighty work in my name, and be able quickly to speak evil of me. For he that is not against us is for us. For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink, because ye are Christ's, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward." And then follows that majestic word of warning that it behooves every one of us to heed: "And whosoever shall cause one of these little ones that believe on me to stumble, it were better for him if a great millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were cast into the sea." (Mark 9: 38-42.) Even Paul could say: "Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will; the one do it of love, knowing that I am set for the defense of the gospel; but the other proclaim Christ of faction, not sincerely, thinking to raise up affliction for me in my bonds. What then? [Ah, yes! What then? Brethren, hear this answer!] only that in every way, whether in pretense or in truth, Christ is proclaimed; and therein I rejoice, yea, and will rejoice." (Phil. 1: 15-18.) It were a great thing for Christians to say as much to-day. Brethren, have we the courage to be so bold? Is it not possible that we might entertain (hear) angels unawares? (Heb. 13: 2.) Certain I am that I much prefer to run the risk of hearing one who is "not of us" than to be found guilty of having offended "one of these little ones" that believe on Christ.

Brethren, what boots it if we place the emphasis where God has not put it? Indeed, we shall be as sounding brass and clanging cymbal, though we speak with the tongues of men and of angels, if we have not love. Yea, we may do ever so much, but it will profit us nothing, if we have not love. God says love never fails. It abides. It is the greatest thing in the world. God is love. We ought to love him, because he first loved us. But if we say we love him, and hate our brother, we lie. The truth is not in us. Then shall we not rather love one another with pure hearts fervently? (1 Cor. 13: 1-13; 1 John 4: 1-21; 1 Pet. 1: 22-25.) Ephesus had been preëminently a church of love. More than twenty times do we find the word "love," some form, in the Ephesian letter. It closes with this sweet message: "Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ with a love incorruptible." But-alas! -they soon came to love with a corruptible love. O, yes! They had works, toil, and patience; they could not bear evil men, and didst expose the false apostles among them; they were patient, and didst bear for Christ's sake, and they did not grow weary, and they hated the works of the Nicolaitans; but And this was the on: they had left their "first love." thing that Christ held against them. It was enough. They had fallen, and needs must repent and do the "first works." We pride ourselves in the thought that we have the truth, and we are confident that we are loyal to Christ; but I tell you, we have fallen far short of the big, fine spirit of love that runs through Christian doctrine, like a golden thread through some rare tapestry. I do pray that we may have a vision, and that it shall be the Lord of love and mercy beckoning to us to come up from whence we have fallen and "do the first works." This will be our day of big things.

Old Testament Examples of Giving.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

The word "give" is a very common word in the Old Testament; there are more than a thousand instances of the use of the word referring to sacrifices. The Old Testament is a book of types and shadows. Every fundamental principle and institution of grace found in the New Testament is set forth in figure and shadow in the Old Testament. "The Old Testament is the New Testament concealed; the New Testament is the Old Testament revealed," is largely an expression of truth. Hence, we may study with profit the examples of giving in the Old Testament, as they unfold the beautiful principle of sacrifice and service revealed in the New Testament.

It may be well to remark that the subject of giving to the Lord is broader than is generally supposed; it includes not only the giving of money and property, but also the giving of service, self, love, and life. The giving of money may be considered the least sacrifice that man can give; while one cannot give himself and life without at the same time consecrating his money to the Lord or honoring Jehovah with his substance and with the first fruits of all the increase. "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice." "For thou delightest not in sacrifice; else would I give it; thou hast no pleasure in burnt offering. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise." (Ps. 51: 16, 17.) The idea of substitution is found in Old Testament giving; the gift or sacrifice represents the giver. The poet well expressed the truth when he said:

> Not what we give, but what we share; For the gift without the giver is bare.

There are so many Old Testament examples of giving that all cannot be mentioned in one short article. Only a few have been selected to impress the universal principle of sacrifice. A sacrifice calls for a gift. Some have made sacrifices and gifts synonymous; others make a distinction. The first example that we have on record is that of Cain and Abel as recorded in the fourth chapter of Genesis. We are told that "by faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, through which he had witness borne to him that he was righteous, God bearing witness in respect of his gifts: and through it he being dead yet speaketh." (Heb. 11: 4.) This example is mentioned to call attention, not to what was given, but to the principle which is involved in the giving. This principle is an Old Testament example of giving. The gift is a substitute for the giver, and it must be done according to the law of Jehovah; it must be offered or given by faith. Jehovah has revealed this condition of giving in the record of the first example that we have. God must be obeyed. No sincerity, no uprightness of intention, can atone for the violation of this principle. This is seen in the example of Cain. It is fundamental that "without faith it is impossible to please God," and "he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him."

Next, attention is called to Noah. Noah has the distinction of being the second father of the human race. After the flood had subsided and the dry earth began to appear, Noah and his family made arrangements to go out of the ark. The earth once more appeared fresh and new. It was expedient that the wicked generations of earth should die, that the earth might appear fresh and cleansed. The first thing that Noah did after going out of the ark was to build an altar to offer sacrifices unto the Lord. In the newness and freshness of the earth, this altar was the first building in the new world. Animals were scarce; only those that had survived in the ark could be had; yet, before they were turned loose to replenish the earth and before Noah and his family could use any for food, an offering is made unto Jehovah. We may gain the lesson that poverty and destitution do not excuse one from giving unto the Lord. Jehovah demands the first fruits of our increase either in time, talent, brawn, brain, muscle, or money. The first day that Noah spends upon this washed and reconsecrated earth is neither a day of business nor of pleasure, but one of piety and gratitude toward God, which is expressed in his sacrifices, and giving a portion of what had been protected in the ark unto the Lord.

Abraham is one of the preeminent examples of Old Testament giving. After he had rescued his nephew, Lot, from the wicked kings of Canaan, on his return, he met Melchizedek, king of Salem and priest of the most high God. Melchizedek blessed Abraham, and Abraham gave him tithes of all the spoils. The gifts which the patriarch brings to the priest of God are expressions of his deep gratitude for the victory over his enemies and a pious acknowledgment that Jehovah was an exceeding great reward. In this example we find the amount given expressed: he gave him "tithes"-a tenth of his increase. amount was later required of the children of Israel. The writer of Hebrews, commenting on the greatness of Melchizedek, says: "Now consider how great this man was, unto whom Abraham, the patriarch, gave a tenth out of the chief spoils." (Heb. 7: 4.)

There is another instance in the example of Abraham which should not be overlooked. Jehovah commanded him, saying: "Take now thou son, thine only son, whom thou lovest, even Isaac, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of." (Gen. 22: 2.) A New Testament writer, commenting upon this supreme gift of Abraham, says: "By faith Abraham, being tried, offered up Isaac; yea, he that had gladly received the promises was offering up his only begotten son." (Heb. 11: 17.) This demand was stern and absolute; the response was prompt and immediate; there was no hesitation or delay; the resignation was full and complete. Abraham gives in faith the dearest treasure of his life. We do not have anything that is too good or too precious to withhold from Jehovah. God pours out the rich treasures of heaven upon that one who so completely and faithfully gives unto him his best. Abraham's character was stronger, his life purer, his service unto Jehovah freer, and his joy in the blessings of God sweeter, after he had been tested and had offered this gift. From the example of Abraham we get the lesson of offering our children unto the Lord. They should be nurtured in the admonition of the Lord, trained in the way that they should go, educated to give their service and all unto God. The great need of the church to-day is for fathers and mothers who will train their children for the Lord. Where there is an Abraham in the home to-day, there will be an Isaac upon the altar.

Jacob had been driven from home by the threats of Esau, by the fears of Rebekah, and by the commands of Isaac. He was on his way from Beersheba to Haran. He stopped overnight at Luz, or Bethel. Jehovah appeared unto him there in a dream and revealed himself to him as the God of Abraham and his father Isaac. Next morning, before continuing his journey, he made a vow that if God would be with him and keep him and provide for him, and would bring him back to his father, that he would give him one-tenth of all that he should possess. Before leaving the place of so sacred a vow, he set up the stone that he had used for a pillow as a monument and named the place "Bethel," the house of God. He consecrated the place by pouring oil upon the stone. The oil with which he consecrated this pillar was a part of the slender provision that he was taking with him. Undoubtedly he had but little with him; yet of that little he freely and cheerfully gives a portion of it, if not all, to the Lord. The amount that Jacob vowed to give Jehovah was afterwards incorporated into the law of Moses, and all faithful Jews tithe their increase. In addition to the tithing of the Jews, they had their daily, weekly, monthly, and yearly sacrifices of their peace offerings, sin offerings, meal offerings, burnt offerings, and trespass offerings. The great lesson of giving and sacrificing was impressed upon Israel through all of these offerings, sacrifices which were destined to keep alive in the Hebrew heart the sense of sin and the need of atonement until the Lamb slain before the foundation of the world should be made or given for the sins of the world.

Moses is another example of Old Testament giving. This is an instance of giving himself in behalf of others to the Lord. He had been upon the mount forty days receiving the law to be delivered unto Israel. Upon his return, he found that Israel had gone back to idol worship, and the blaze of Jehovah's wrath burning fiercely. Moses steps in between the hot anger of Jehovah and a rebellious people and begins to make intercessions for Israel. His supreme sacrifice is not found in his intercession, but is seen in his offering to die for the people. He offers himself as an atonement for Israel. He was willing to die; willing for Heaven's wrath to fall upon himself, if only the people might be spared. There seems to be in this sublime self-devotion of the great servant of God and leader of Israel a foreshadowing of the wonderful love which was manifested by Christ in giving himself for sinful man. The psalmist expressed it in this language: "Therefore he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses his chosen stood before him in the breach, to turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them." (Ps. 106: 23.) There is a similar example in the life of David, who offered himself for the people. David prays: "Let thy hand, I pray thee, be against me, and against my father's house." willingness to die for the people seems to touch the heart of Jehovah and his anger is turned from the people,

We should not fail to mention the sacrifices of the three mighty men who broke through the ranks of the Philistines and brought David water from the well of Bethlehem. After it was brought to David, he would not drink it; it was too precious, as it represented the lives of his three friends, so he gave it as an oblation to Jehovah. He felt he was too unworthy to drink of this cup; it was "the chalice of that love that can look with a smile into the face of death." Hence, he must give such a priceless sacrifice unto his God.

I must close with reference to Hannah, the mother of Samuel, as an example of Old Testament giving. She was the beloved wife of Elkanah. She was barren. While worshiping Jehovah in Shiloh, she prayed for a son. She vowed that if Jehovah would give her a son, she would give him unto Jehovah all the days of his life. Jehovah answered her prayer, and she gave Samuel unto Jehovah. Hannah had long been afflicted with barrenness and cruelly insulted by her rival on account of her barrenness, but is now blessed with an infant, which calls forth all of the maternal instincts and duties; she is possessor of perfect bliss on earth in the fond affections of a mother. She willingly and cheerfully gives this son in the very tender years of his life unto Jehovah. She is separated from him as he lives with Eli in the tabernacle. Samuel was a gift obtained from God by prayer and devoted to God in gratitude. God received Samuel from Hannah, and blessed her with other children. He takes our gifts and multiplies them and returns them unto us. Before Hannah died, she reaped abundant interest for her precious loan to the Lord, as Samuel became a mighty blessing unto all Israel even in her day. God be praised for the many lofty examples of giving revealed in the Old Testament.

Money As a Test of Our Loyalty to Christ. BY LEE JACKSON.

Apparently there are great numbers of men and women among us who believe themselves to be loyal Christians while holding very grave misconceptions as to their responsibility to God for the use of their money. Of course, it is understood that by the term "money" is meant that which as a medium of commerce represents our wealth or worldly possessions. This is what is meant by the term in its modern use, and it is what it means as used in the Bible. The real value is in such things as sustain life and which minister to man's comfort and happiness. If the earth produced nothing and no wealth of this world's goods was accumulated, all the money that could be coined as a medium of commerce would do us no good.

One of the great mistakes that many well-meaning people make is in holding to the idea that efforts put forth for the accumulation of wealth are necessarily wrong. Even the teaching that we are to lay by in store for the Lord's treasury as we prosper shows that it is the Lord's will for us to prosper by a judicious management of the things that we possess for use in his service. The admonition, "in diligence not slothful; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord" (Rom. 12: 11), is to the effect that we are to do the best that we can in our business use of such worldly advantages and opportunities as we may possess; and, other things being equal, these advantages and opportunities are much greater for those who are "rich in this world's goods" than they are for those who are handicapped by poverty. It is not the accumulation of valuable wealth, but the misuse of that wealth after it is accumulated, that is sinful. There is a legitimate use to be made of our time and opportunities for the increase of our worldly possessions, and this right use of efforts for the gain of such goods as will be helpful to ourselves and helpful to others in doing the Lord's work for the good of his cause is required of us as a duty. In his instruction that a man should "labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have whereof to give to him that hath need" (Eph. 4: 28), he sets forth a principle that underlies everything in the line of Christian service. In order that we may be ministering servants of the Lord in an effective way, it is necessary for us to increase our possessions beyond what is absolutely required for our own legitimate wants. A slothful and improvident life is not in harmony with the precepts of New Testament teaching, and we are held to account for any willful neglect to properly apply our time in the use of our opportunities In the parable of the talents it is said of the unfaithful servant, "Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the bankers, and at my coming I should have received back mine own with interest." The unfaithful servant is condemned in the parable because he neglected to so use his Lord's money that there might be an increase in interest. This applies as much to the use of our material wealth with which God blesses us as it does to the use of mental endowments, bodily organs, or personal advantages. God designs that wealth in the hands of his people shall be a blessing, and not a curse. The more wealth that the Lord's people possess, if it is rightly used, the greater the good for the Lord's cause in the world. The Master receives his own with interest.

The fatal mistake that so many make is in thinking that they hold an absolute personal right to all they possess, and that, therefore, they have the right to use their own money as they please, regardless of the claims of God or the claims of man. Under this fatal error vast sums of money are wasted in foolish luxuries, and is thus as truly lost to the community as if sunk in the depth of the ocean. There are certain things belonging to what are designated as luxuries that we can indulge in legitimately to a limited extent, and the money thus spent is not really lost to the general community; but there are useless, foolish, and hurtful things for which men are constantly spending their money, and that money is lost to the community as completely as if consumed in the flames. Not only the cause of Christ, but the general material and moral good of society suffers immeasurable loss as the result of this reckless expenditure of money. Deluded by this idea that they have an absolute right to use their own money as they please, professed Christians are as guilty of thus wasting their God-given wealth as the men of the world who make no pretensions to a recognition of God's claims upon them. In the light of the parable of the talents, as well as in the light of the whole tenor of New Testament teaching, as unfaithful servants, men and women will be held to account for this misuse of this wealth which they only hold in trust as the Lord's stewards. As only stewards, and as not holding anything as a possession by absolute right as against the claims of God, Christians are to understand that whatever wealth they possess is to be used as a means to the attainment of an end, and the end which is to be sought is the enlargement of the cause of righteousness among men who need the saving and ameliorating effect of gospel teaching. Not to use any of the powers which we possess for the advancement of God's cause is unfruitfulness in his vineyard, and the unfruitful branch is to be cut off. This applies to the use of our worldly goods; and the man who claims loyalty to Christ in everything else and yet withholds his money from the Lord's service is grossly in error as to what loyalty to Christ really means. It is on this question as to the right use of money that the Bible needs to be thoroughly studied, and in our preaching so as to properly enforce its lessons we ought to avoid making the impression that certain amounts in limited gifts is all that God requires; it is the complete consecration of men and women in the use of all that they possess that God is calling for.

As properly understood, no man can give anything to God, for God does not stand before us in the attitude of a beggar. God alone holds absolute ownership in all that the world is and in all that the world contains. We cannot benefit God by using our money in his service, but we can benefit ourselves and benefit those who are dependent upon God's grace and upon his material bounties. We receive God's blessing in the consecration of ourselves and all that we have to his service, and through our Christian ministrations the sin-afflicted world is blessed of God. There have been many and varying remedies proposed for the correction of existing evils in the world of mankind, and remedies are still being proposed for the righting of conditions that appear to be getting worse; but all organizations and all measures proposed for the righting of the world's wrongs and for the alleviation of human suffering have only shown themselves to be failures in the last analysis. As was remarked by one of Robert Owen's members of Lanark colony: "These worldly measures serve only to patch up poor human nature; but when the evil is stopped in one place, it breaks out in another." The only potent remedy for these existing evils is Christianity; the complete conversion of men and women to Christ-a conversion that will mean the complete surrender of men with all that they possess to the service of the Christ. There is probably a greater condemnation to-day resting upon professed Christians for their failure to consecrate their money to the service of the Lord than ever before, and this because of the fact that they have more money and better opportunities to do good in the use of it than ever before. Our wealth, if scripturally used, would educate our children in a way that would fit them for efficient service in the kingdom of Christ; the gospel would be preached, and all worthy and efficient preachers would be cared for in a manner that would keep them from becoming dependents in their declining years; in a large measure the evil of improvident poverty would cease, because humble workers would be encouraged by the prevailing spirit of the Christ to cheerfully labor at the work for which they are suited; and the helpless would be fed and clothed. As men and women earn their wealth they need to be taught how to use it in the name of the Christ and to his honor and glory.

Wisdom vs. Gold.

BY H. L. COPELAND.

"How much better is it to get wisdom than gold! and to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver!" (Prov. 16: 16.)

The above text opens the door to unlimited and the gravest thought. The figure is Interrogative. The writer of the proverb neither doubts nor expects an answer to the question. Every sane person, I suppose, especially every member of the family of God, accepts without question the divine decision that "the love of money is the root of all evil," even though many appear to give it no heed. The book of God reveals the unquestioned truth that "they who coveted after money erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."

What seems to be the ultimate object of the majority of people? The answer is not difficult. Think of the homes wrecked and ruined, the lives disgraced and imprisoned, the crushed hopes and the almost endless hours of wretched restlessness caused by the infamous love of money! That eager desire to get money robs the mutual and most devoted lovers of the peaceful and unspeakable happiness of righteous devotion. It grabs you and grips you; you hate it like a demon for a season, then you love it and become worse than the worst.

The love of money carries with it characteristics which make you shun the righteous and their exhortations and seek the vile. It magnifies the possibilities of its possession and minimizes the true grandeur, gentle worth, and destiny of the truly righteous. It forces you to praise it, and yet you condemn it, but God teaches that it is a fine thing to shun.

"Very few are are able to possess wealth and not be stained by it. The spell begins by telling you that you must have money and that people require it of you; then the power of that "wisdom that is from above," which is "peaceful" and "easy to be entreated," begins to wane, and that which is base, sensual, and vile begins to ascend the throne and soon rules with a mighty force. It causes you to question the veracity of others and lose confidence in your own ability to make good.

Wisdom's nature is entirely different; it sees good in all men and everything. It is gentle, kind, patient, loves and is lovable, is easily entreated, and makes life short, peaceful, and prosperous. It thinks no evil and is guileless. It vaunteth not itself and is meek and lowly in heart. Righteous wisdom is closely related to divine love; in fact, they go together and cannot be separated.

It is not wrong to make money and use it rightly, but it is a grave and great sin to make money for its own sake. The wisdom which is from above is industrious; it loves God, and "all things work together for good to them that love God;" hence, those who are righteously wise will receive all the necessaries and have the sacred assurance that God loves them and will never forsake them. The grace of God and the hope and sweet assurance of another life increase with each day and hour,

Why should people waste their lives in weary pursuit of that which is so destructive to them? The great organic Cause which conceived the stupendous scheme of creation knew its every detail and spoke with an infinite love for, and deepest interest in, mankind. May we not listen to Him with unquestionable confidence?

Giving from the Woman's Viewpoint

Sister Fannie Hurst Explains the Motive.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life." (John 3: 16.) And that blessed Son, Jesus, in perfect obedience to his Father's will, gave up his home in heaven and came down and gave more than thirty years of his life to humanity that he might place before us a pattern after which to fashion our lives, and finally gave himself for the cause that he loved. O, matchless examples of giving! And what unspeakable love that prompted such gifts! And, that we may in turn give expression to our love for him, God has bestowed upon us the great privilege of giving to him, and what a glorious privilege it is! For when a man loves or is interested in anything, either spiritual or carnal, he not only has a strong desire to give, but he is going to give of his time or talent or influence or money, or even of all these, to that thing. For example, the man who loves money more than anything else is willing to give practically all of his time and strength to the making and hoarding of money. Then there is the young man who loves and sacrifices his earnings to "a good time," as does the young lady who worships beautiful raiment. But the man in whom the love of God dwells richly is the man who considers it not a burden, but a happy privilege, to give to the advancement of Christ's kingdom; for, after all, it is only an outlet for the love that is continually springing up within him, and he is happy in the knowledge that up yonder where his heart is he is laying up for himself treasures, "where neither moth nor rust doth consume, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." (Matt. 6: 20.)

We are told that our Father loves the man who gives cheerfully. He says: "Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." (2 Cor. 9: 7.) Here we also learn that God is not well pleased with his children when they cast their offerings into the treasury with an almost audible groan and then go away complaining that the preacher is always begging for money, when the truth is, they themselves are lacking in love; and if they would study God's word, they would find that this matter of giving has never been emphasized enough. When Christians learn to put God first in their lives, instead of placing the things of the world before Jehovah, they are going to stop grumbling about the little they put in the church; for, because of the wonderful peace and joy that will be theirs as a result of giving, they will learn that it is indeed "more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20: 35.) Then it will be that the church will be in a position to do more effectually the work that God has given us to do-namely, to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to minister to the sick, to care for the widows and orphans, and not only to preach the gospel to the poor in our homeland, but to rally to the support of the blessed missionaries who have given up their homes and kindred and have gone into lands that they know not, because Jesus Christ, just before his ascension, told them to go. Do you fully realize that God promises to reward us only as we give? In 2 Cor. 9: 6 he tells us: "He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." Here we notice that not even a small reward is promised to the man who gives nothing; yet there are some members of the body of Christ who exercise great care in keeping away from worldly places and who look with much disfavor upon sin generally, and yet, somehow, they have soothed and lulled their consciences until they can face God on the first day of the week and refuse to lay by even the smallest amount to help carry on his work. If asked why they failed to participate in that part of the worship, they would say they were not able. Ah, we had better be absolutely sure that we are, indeed and in truth, not able, before we make that statement; for God knows whether or not we are keeping back for our own use that which belongs to him.

Then there are those who say by their actions that they love tobacco or the picture show and circus with all the attendant evil influences, or other things too numerous to mention, more than they love Jesus Christ, who died that they might live. Why do I say this? Because they seem to give freely and cheerfully to these things; but when it comes to giving to the Lord, they have very little, if anything, for him. Brother, sister, God is proving every one of us, for he is looking behind the gift, or the failure to give, and is seeing that within us that prompts the deed. Then let us wake up and begin now to follow the instructions given us by Paul, who says: "Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper." (1 Cor. 16: 2.) This commandment was not given to the rich only, but to "each one," which embraces every Christian in every congregation, it matters not how remote it may be. He also tells us to give as we may prosper; so, if we have been giving only ten or even twenty-five or fifty cents each Lord's day, when the Lord has prospered us to the extent that we should give a dollar, we have not been living in obedience to this command. God told the children of Israel, when they failed to give as he had commanded, that they had robbed him (Mal, 3); and he has told us how he was displeased with them so that we might not make the same mistake and

It may be that you are in doubt as to how much God would consider giving as you are prospered. Well, he was not pleased with less than a tenth from the Jews. Do you not feel that you would be void of appreciation and love, if you should be willing to give less than did the Jews, when God has done so much more for you than for them? He has given his Son as a sacrifice for you, and has brought you from under the law of bondage and placed you under the law of liberty, and, instead of a temporal home in the land of Canaan, he is offering you an eternal home in heaven.

Let us not feel embarrassed or discouraged if we have not as much to give as some other brother has; for if, in giving a penny, we are actually giving as we are prospered, God considers it as great a gift as, and perhaps even greater than, the largest amount cast in by the rich; for we are told that when the rich men were casting much into the treasury, and the poor widow came and cast in "two mites, which make a farthing," Christ "called unto him his disciples, and said unto them. Verily I say unto you. This poor widow cast in more than all they that are casting into the treasury: for they all did cast in of their superfluity; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living." (Mark 12: 43, 44.)

God has made stewards of all his children; and while some have charge of more of his goods than others, we will all be called upon some day to give an account of our stewardship. Perhaps you had never thought seriously of the fact that out yonder in the future, when we shall all stand before the great Judge, this question of giving will be brought up again, and for the last time. Then will many be cast into "the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels," not necessarily because they were murderers or thieves or adulterers, but because, while in this life, they had passed by this commandment to give as a thing of little or no importance. But, on the other hand, the King will say to them who have given of their time and means: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was hungry, and ye gave me to eat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee hungry, and fed thee? or athirst, and gave thee drink? And when saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? And when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me." (Matt. 25: 34-40.)

Sister J. J. Walker Pleads for a Real Sacrifice.

- "I gave my life for thee, What hast thou given for me?"
- "I've suffered much for thee, What hast thou borne for me?"
- "I bring rich gifts to thee, What hast thou brought to me?"

If I give the leavings of my means, it is certain my service is trashy. I must give until I suffer or feel the weight of the gift, else I have made no sacrifice. Webster says sacrifice is "to make an offering of," "a great lessening of the amount of," etc. Paul says: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

God never demands more of any one than he is able to bear. When he said, "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom" (Luke 6: 38), he spoke a truth. For who of us has not seen this principle hold fast in the lives of Christians who give unselfishly and willingly until those who observe think they have gone the limit of their ability; yet, when an opportunity for good and giving presents itself, that one was ready with his means to support the cause? "God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work." (2 Cor. 9: 8.)

Those who put nothing—or no sacrifice—into the cause of Christ neither give good service nor receive blessings from it. "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase: so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." (Prov. 3: 9, 10.)

If we love the cause of Christ, it must cost us something. We must serve the Lord with our money and labors.

Jacob vowed a tenth of all his property to God. (Gen. 28: 22.) God instituted tithing in the law of Moses on Sinai. One-tenth was holy to the Lord. (Lev. 27: 32.) When we as Christians tithe, we only give what is the Lord's; and if we give no more, we do not make a sacrifice to him.

Our children must be trained to give. This lesson drilled into them during their impressionable years makes them more useful men and women in the cause of Christ when they become citizens of his kingdom. Nothing can be more vital to building a character than usefulness.

We sometimes make the mistake that the head of the family can give for every member of the family. Paul said, "Let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him," which shows that we are responsible for all that passes through our hands, whether men or women.

The Widow's Mite.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

"And he sat down over against the treasury, and beheld how the multitude cast money into the treasury: and many that were rich cast in much. And there came a poor widow, and she cast in two mites, which make a farthing. And he called unto him his disciples, and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, This poor widow cast in more than all they that are casting into the treasury: for they all did cast in of their superfluity; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living." (Mark 12: 41-44.)

There are some leading thoughts contained in the above passages to which our minds should be directed, that invite a careful, prayerful, and thoughtful consideration—(1) the treasury, (2) the rich and poor, (3) the much and little cast into the treasury.

The treasury was something into which all were casting money. The Lord "beheld how the multitude cast money into the treasury." Let us not forget the fact that to-day he beholds how we cast money into his treasury—the motive and the amount given. The Lord watches the action of men and women to-day as well as then; he watches the rich, the poor, the much, the little, and blesses us accordingly. He it was that said: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Let us call attention to the rich. "For they all did cast in of their superfluity." "Superfluity" means abundance, excess, more than needed. "And many that were rich cast in much;" but the "much" was in excess of their needs, of the "abundance" above their needs.

Next he calls the attention of the disciples to "a poor widow, and she cast in two mites, which make a farthing." We are told that the "mite" was the smallest piece of money used in Palestine in the time of our Lord. This poor widow, when she cast in two mites, "cast in all she had, even all her living." The rich gave that which they did not need, without which they could get on in the world. That which they needed, they kept; that which they did not need, they gave. That which the poor widow needed, she gave—"even all her living."

But we are told by Paul that we can give all we have and then not be profited. "And if I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and if I give my body to be burned, but have not love, it profiteth me nothing." (1 Cor. 13: 3.) Now we have touched upon the keynote, the true motive behind our every gift-love. How much love for God does that man have who is worth thousands of dollars and then puts a dime, nickel, or copper cent into the Lord's treasury on the first day of the week, knowing that the Lord is beholding how we cast money into his treasury? When he puts in his dime, nickel, or copper cent, does he expect to hear his Lord say: "Behold, how he loves me?" The worst part of it is, when he puts in this small amount, he calls it "the widow's mite," thus lying to himself and to God. He seems to forget, if he ever knew, that one man and his wife were killed because they lied to God about what they gave.

If God should strike dead to-day all who lie about their giving, the help to bury them would be scarce indeed.

"I gave, I gave my life for thee; What hast thou given for me?"

After all, the poor widow was richer than the rich, because she, like her Lord, gave all.

That giving is a duty we owe to God needs no argument for those who believe the Bible. "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." Love is, therefore, the prompting motive in all duties of the true and faithful child of God.

"But this I say, He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." (2 Cor. 9: 6, 7.) One great trouble with the church to-day is that it does not plan and purpose how much (not how little) it intends to do for God and suffering humanity. Unless we have some "purpose" in view, some object to be attained, we have nothing to encourage us to work, nothing to induce us to give.

Now I wish to impress upon the minds of all who may chance to read this article this one stubborn fact: if the church of God in Obion County would even give as the rich, of their superfluity, of their excess of the money not needed for a living, a house of worship could be erected in every neighborhood and filled with true, devoted, converted men and women to sing God's praise and make known his law for poor, fallen, sinful man.

"Come now, ye rich, weep and howl for your miseries that are coming upon you. Your-riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and your silver are rusted; and their rust shall be for a testimony against you, and shall eat your flesh as fire. Ye have laid up your treasure in the last days." (James 5: 1-3.) Certainly this is a sad, sad description of the money lover—of the man who refuses or fails to give of his means for the spread of the gospel and the salvation of the lost. The man who places money above life is a dangerous man in any community; and the sooner the last spadeful of dirt is placed upon his grave, the better it will be for that community.

Quit lying about the widow's mite, open your pocketbooks, and give—give freely, lovingly, cheerfully—and the Lord will bless you in your giving.

"Giving for the Spread of the Gospel."

BY F. B. SHEPHERD,

In casting about for a reason why the church of the Lord Jesus has not made the advancement equal to her possibilities and opportunities, perhaps nothing can be more nearly correct than to say it is because of her failure to properly finance her activities. We have only to read the sacred Book to realize that one of the greatest handicaps God's work has suffered has been the lack of liberality upon the part of his professed followers. The first difficulty that came up to mar the beautiful harmony of the Jerusalem church was over the question of giving (Acts 5); and if to-day we look over the large number of underpaid (and sometimes unpaid) preachers who are forced to forsake the active service in order to find in secular employment the necessaries of life for their families, we should not wonder that hundreds of talented young men coming from Christian homes and educated in Christian colleges are seeking other walks of life rather than pay the price of being preachers.

When asking for an article on this subject, Brother Lipscomb did not designate what phase he wished me to discuss; so I shall take the liberty of stating general principles. Perhaps the first thing we need to learn in giving for the spread of the gospel is that "giving" is really au accommodative term. We brought nothing here (1 Tim. 6: 7), can acquire nothing of our own (Job 1: 21), and may carry nothing away (Eccles. 5: 15); but are merely "stewards" of God's property (1 Cor. 6: 20), and must give account to him for the way we have administered it while in our charge (Rom. 14: 12). There is in the sixteenth chapter of Luke a rather significant parable which the Lord concludes with: "If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? and if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?" How sad to think that many will not be allowed to enjoy the mansions prepared ! for them because they have failed to administer the Lord's property here to the furtherance of his cause!

There are four great principles that apply in "giving to spread the gospel," which, if observed, will insure its being carried to the "uttermost part of the earth" and firmly established.

- 1. We should give as we are prospered. (1 Cor. 16: 2.) It is unfortunate that in making the Authorized Version the translators interpolated the name of God, so that many have tried to excuse their thriftlessness by accusing God of being responsible for their having nothing to give. How wonderful the divine wisdom that allows no loophole for excuse and leaves man's accountability to be measured by his possibility, his responsibility by his ability, his obligations according to his advantages! (Luke 12: 48.) So that many will be held responsible for having nothing to give. (Eph. 4: 28; Tit. 3: 14.) It is not what a man gets from his religious life that measures the depth and quality of it, but what he gives to it. Many a man's religion is so cheap it is not worth carrying home.
- 2. We should give liberally. (2 Cor. 8: 7.) He who assumes the name of Christ simultaneously assumes responsibility for the welfare, sustenance, extension, and perpetuation of his kindom. (Matt. 25: 14-30.) Billy Sunday says: "There are churches in which, if you were to call for the singing of 'Old Hundred,' some 'tightwad' would ask to sing 'Ninety and Nine' and save the difference." How awful to think that such an illustration is all too nearly the facts in the case; when, if it had not been for the liberality and love of God, our Creator, this life with all its sorrows and disappointments would be but a brief prelude to an eternity of soul anguish!
- 3. We should give cheerfully. (2 Cor. 9: 7.) Here, perhaps, lies the secret of our lack of means to spread the gospel. The preachers have taught people to give; they have begged them to give; they have, perhaps, sometimes tricked them into giving; but they have failed to teach them the "joy" of giving. Let us put our giving on the highest possible plane. Let us not give just to excel the church over yonder; let us not pay our preacher merely that he may set a better table or own a finer car than his fellows; let us not build Bible schools and endow chairs that we may "compete successfully" with the Baptists or Methodists, or have two missionaries to their one (this is sectarian rivalry); but let us give because we love to give -give until it hurts, give until we know not what to do with what we have given-then the love of God will be shed abroad upon us, the windows of heaven will open and floods of prosperity will sweep over us until our storehouses will not contain the good things God will send, and we will have experienced the real joy of giving. The church or the individual that learns the "joy" of giving, rather than the "responsibility" of it, is realizing the blessedness of the Christian life. As well talk of the responsibility of breathing in order to live as of the responsibility of giving to further the cause of Christ.
- 4. We should give by equality. (2 Cor. 8: 12-14.) Let us realize that the financing of the kingdom is a mutual obligation. The case of the widow and her mite is illustrative of this principle. She is commended, not because she gave a mite, but because she gave all she could; and the rich are condemned because they did not do as well. "According as a man hath" is the requirement, and we must learn that every member, whether young or old, rich or poor, should have fellowship in supporting the gospel. Fathers cannot give for their children, nor husbands for their wives. A few rich men should not finance the work to the extent of robbing poorer ones of the joy and plessedness of giving; but if the system as prescribed by Paul were followed to-day and the rich gave in the same proportion as the poor, we could flood the world with missionaries instead of being able to count them on our fingers.

The Question of Church Finances

H. T. King Considers Three Important Questions.

Church finances is a subject that lies close to the heart and life of every congregation, whether large or small; for it is not possible for a congregation to live without having some expense, and to meet this expense involves the problem of finance. There are many phases of this great subject that could be discussed with propriety, but it seems well to limit this paper to just three.

I. How SHALL CHURCH FUNDS BE RAISED?

There is a pronounced tendency upon the part of many to disregard the how, just so the funds are obtained. Because of this sentiment we witness fairs, festivals, suppers, and worse things given for the purpose of raising money to meet the expenses of the church. These things are possible because of two things-ignorance and an unwillingness to sacrifice for truth and right. God has ever demanded of his servants sacrifice; for with sacrifice he is well pleased, and by sacrifice we are ennobled. It is not so much that God needs the money as that we need the blessing of sacrifice that we are taught to give. Any giving, then, that does not involve sacrifice will fail to meet the approval of God. We, then, should know that, to raise money for the work of God through the church, each one should "lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him;" each one should give "as he hath purposed in his heart; . . . for God loveth a cheerful giver;" each one should give with the full understanding that "he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."

God not only teaches that each one should give liberally and cheerfully and regularly, but he also teaches that we should give proportionately. This is one thing that woefully hinders our work. Our finances will always be in a depleted state until the church membership is induced to recognize its partnership with God and is led to give to God a definite proportion of its income. I do not say that each one should give the same proportion, nor do I undertake to say what proportion any one should give; but I do say that God demands that we give as we are prospered, and that plainly demands a proportionate distribution of our income. It is true that the Jews were required to give a tenth, and it seems to me that we should be ashamed to give less. But to give liberally and intelligently and regularly and cheerfully will help us to find the right proportion.

II. WHO SHALL HOLD AND DISBURSE CHURCH FUNDS?

The New Testament teaching on this phase of the subject is clear that this work comes within the duties of the elders and deacons. It seems to me that they should discuss all features of this work fully and frequently among themselves and present their conclusions and make their recommendations to the congregation, and also at frequent intervals make full report of the financial obligations and standing of the church. To facilitate this work, one of the board of elders and deacons should serve as church treasurer and work in harmony with them as they direct affairs in obedience to God.

III. WHAT IS LEGITIMATE CHURCH EXPENSE?

Only in a very limited fashion can this question be answered in an article of this kind, but in a general way I will point out some things that should be recognized as church burdens to be assumed by the whole church and paid for from the general church funds.

(1) As a place to meet inheres in the idea of a congregation, the meetinghouse becomes a financial burden that should arouse the interest and enthusiasm of every member of the local body of Christ. Our meetinghouses should be erected for and held in trust for our King and his work. With that end in view, we should carefully consider the full nature of his work and build our meetinghouses accordingly. We have been too miserly in these things, and, as a consequence, many of our houses of worship are not suited to the work that every church should render. Especially have we overlooked the important items of teaching the word in class formation and caring for those who want to be baptized. It is not at all rare to find congregations trying to conduct a number of classes in Bible study in the main auditorium and then going miles to water for the baptizing of those who want to obey the Lord. A little more comprehensive planning and more scriptural liberality will correct these evils. In addition to the house of worship, we must have Bibles and Bible-study helps, song books, communion service, wine, etc.; and as these are for the entire church, they should be provided for from the common treasury.

(2) Helping the poor, just plain charity, is a matter that should not be overlooked when studying this question. In fact, some of the finest lessons of the whole Scriptures are given in connection with this very phase of the subject. To meet our obligations in this work is to serve God in a very pleasing manner. As objects of charity, we should consider first of all our needy brethren in our own congregation. We should not overlook the worthy poor near our doors. But if we have these provided for, we should have fellowship with suffering brethren and humanity in general as far as we possibly can. We should work with our hands that we may have to give to them that have need, whether they are found in our own congregation or community or wherever they are.

(3) Supporting the gospel by having fellowship with faithful men who proclaim it is one of the greatest works that can be engaged in by a congregation, and the expenses of this work should be assumed and borne with gladness. Congregations should support those men who preach for them to the extent of their ability according to the nature of their work and their needs. It is not right that men should be starved into disrespect by their brethren with whom they labor. Any man who can preach the gospel has ability. If he has deliberately chosen this work in which he serves to the glory of God, his needs should be met by the church. If he gives full time to a congregation, that congregation should supply his needs directly or by scriptural cooperation. If he goes about as an evangelist, churches that know him to be faithful should do for him as the church at Philippi did for Paul-should send "once and again" to supply his needs. Not only should we have fellowship with men of God who preach the gospel to us, meeting their needs as fully as we are able and as their work with us justifies, and then, in addition to that, extending fellowship to those who go into destitute places to build up the Lord's cause, making provision for them to do the work with boldness; but we should also help to provide for those men who have preached the word with power, but are now by some circumstance kept from doing anything further in that line. I think one of the best things about the church at Philippi was her fellowship with Paul, the aged prisoner, in his dungeon in Rome. It is a shame for grand old men to be neglected in their declining years just because they were unable, out of the pittance received, to provide something in the earlier years to tide them over to the end of the journey.

James A. Allen on the Contribution.

A financial contribution, in either goods, possessions, or money, has always been required of adherents by all ecclesiastical systems. Man is a dual being, having a soul as well as a physical body, being a spiritual as well as a material being; and in this present world, according to the nature of things, a system that contributes to man's spiritual wants lays a contribution upon his carnal things. If he is not open, free, and liberal in contributing his carnal things, he has not got very deep into spiritual things. He is still at the door of spiritual participation and enjoyment.

If the love of money is a root of all evil, the proper use of it is vitally connected with the advancement of all good. Paul says: "If we sowed unto you spiritual things, is it a great matter if we shall reap your carnal things?"

The contribution under Christian law is taken upon a different principle than was the contribution under former dispensations. The Mosaic law was a government of restraints, checking evil actions without touching the heart, from which the action comes. The law of Christ is a government of principle, making the action pure by cleansing the heart. So, under the Mosaic law, the Jews gave a tithe of their possessions. Even their father Abraham gave a "tenth of all" to Melchizedek. Jacob vowed that "of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee."

Paul teaches Christians how to give in 2 Cor. 9. Among other things, he says: "But this I say, He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver."

F. E. Exum Proposes a Financial System.

For years I have taken note of the fact that the greater part of the preachers of the church of Christ, during the course of their sermons, complain that the church is not making creditable progress toward carrying out its mission in the world, and not a few attribute the cause to the fact that the great majority of the members of the church are contributing but a small part of what they are actually able. They, however, seeming to realize the futility of small and scattered efforts, usually touch rather lightly on the subject of giving by only intimating that the members are not contributing enough, and let it go at that. The situation as it stands is a grave one and can never be remedied by the spasmodic efforts of preachers who now and then touch on the subject of giving, but will require the combined and systematic effort of the elders of the congregations and the preachers. What the church needs is a real financial system, and that is what it must have if the great power that is now lying dormant and useless is ever to be brought into use. Around about us in practically every State in the Union and in every nation under the sun are great fields white and ready for the harvest, but the church of Christ is not sending harvesters into them. Why? Because we have no real financial system; we are not doing all things "decently and in order." There is great confusion in handling the finances of the church, because each congregation, which is really but a small part of the whole body, handles all its finances independently, as though it were the whole body. Congregations made up in the main of quite prosperous members, both in the cities and in the country, that should be imparting great strength to the body of Christ through the medium of money for the purpose of sending out and maintaining preachers in the great fields about us, are really giving little or no strength to the body as a whole because the leaders seem to feel that the only need they have for money is to meet the small incidental expenses of the congregations, and the members contribute small change to these small purposes. A permanent and real financial system can be obtained only by conforming to the teachings of the apostle Paul in Eph. 4: 16, 17 and Col. 2: 18, 19, where he shows us that the whole body should be knit compactly together by joints and bands into a cooperative and harmonious working unit. The working of the church with all the parts thus tied together would embrace the cooperative and systematic handling of the finances of the church. It seems to me that the elders and preachers should first get together in a series of meetings and establish among themselves the cooperation necesssary to bring clearly and forcefully before the members of each congregation the gravity of the situation, the reason for it, and the remedy. This should have the effect of raising the average contribution per member from nickels, dimes, and quarters to dollars. The elders would need to appoint a member or a committee to receive and disburse funds for evangelistic, missionary, free literature, and other great work. Each congregation should then send weekly or monthly to this central treasury all money above the needs of the home congregation and vicinity. By so doing, a steady stream of money amounting to thousands of dollars per month would be made to flow into the central treasury. a great many evangelists and missionaries would be sent out on the firm basis set forth by the apostle Paul that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel," and every member would have opportunity of doing his full duty. To bring this all about, we need no separate organizations, but simply need to put together the pieces of the great organization lying about us.

S. F. Morrow Discusses Fellowship.

"And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the (Acts 2: 42.) We here ask the question for pravers." the careful and prayerful consideration of the reader in the light of the teachings of the Bible: Who can say that one of the above-named Christian duties is more important than the other? We feel certain that all will agree that they are equally important. Therefore, can we worship God acceptably on the first day of the week, if we fail to do any one of them? Just here, I fear that most of us treat "fellowship," like some of the denominations treat baptism, as nonessential, and, if at all, sprinkle, pour, or immerse, just as you please. We say "copper," "nickel," or "dime," just any one of them. All will admit that this is our fearful condition.

"Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I gave order to the churches of Galatia, so also do ye. Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper." (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.) From these verses I want to call attention to two lessons.

First, the collection is being made for a specific purpose. Just here I want to say that elders should keep the work that is to be done before the congregations more than they do. There are always widows to care for, poor that need the gospel, and old and infirm need the best of the land.

Second, give as you "may prosper." This certainly means to give a part of all that we may make, except necessities. Under the law of Moses they were required to give a tenth. We who are living under the "perfect law of liberty" should not think of giving less than a tenth. Our beloved David Lipscomb said: "Money can be used as angels' wings to carry us to heaven, or as a leaden weight to carry us to hell."

Dear brethren, will you please answer this question: "Am I using the means, time, and talent that the Lord has blessed me with, to his honor and for the salvation of precious souls for whom he died?"

The War's Lessons on Giving.

BY M. C. K.

The subject of giving cannot be properly understood and appreciated in all its varied relationships and bearings without a fair knowledge of the whole Bible. Extending all the way from Genesis to Revelation, its consideration is not only coextensive with God's dealings with man as revealed therein, but it is reflected in the changing light of different dispensations, different peoples, different circumstances, and for different objects. Including the variety of motives that may prompt it and the different ends which it may have in view, with its multifarious effects, salutary and otherwise, upon both the giver and the receiver, it is truly a many-sided subject; and it is to be hoped that, in designating this issue of the Gospel Advocate as our "Giving" Number and in devoting its columns exclusively to a general and special consideration of the theme, there may be such an exhaustive treatment of its various phases as will set the whole subject in an informing and inviting light.

As the heading indicates, it is the purpose of the present article to call attention to the war's lessons on giving. Of course this means the gigantic world war which practically ended on November 11, 1918, when the armistice was signed, and which has been followed by the momentous Paris Peace Conference and the signing of the Treaty of Peace at Versailles. This world-wide holocaust, with its tens of millions of men and money involved and with its long and heart-rending chapter of indescribable suffering and sacrifice, contains many valuable lessons on giving, to some of which we now invite attention.

This does not mean that the war originated any principles on giving that did not exist before its lurid glare flashed over continental Europe and thence practically over the whole civilized world. It only means that the great war, with its tremendous tax upon the man power and other resources of the different nations which had been drawn into the mightiest struggle of the ages over the question whether might makes right or right makes might, furnished the occasion and the inspiring motive for such a gigantic outpouring of gifts as the world has never before seen. It did not create the principles, but furnished the occasion for their exemplification in practice. Like the candle or the lamp, which does not create the light, but furnishes a point for its manifestation to men, so the war did not create anything on giving, but furnished a manifestation point from which its radiant light even now gleams over the world.

So far as the purposes of this article are concerned, it is unnecessary to have a complete statement of all the vast sums that were given by all the nations during the war, the gigantic total of which, as well-informed readers know, would mount up to many billions. To show the normal operation of the principle of giving and its far-reaching effects when the people become fully aroused and stirred to the point of genuine appreciation of what it means to be liberal when their own priceless interests with those of all others are involved, it is sufficient to note its operation in any one of the so-called "drives" for funds after the people became truly awakened. For this purpose we select the Red Cross drive of the summer of 1918. In the preceding summer, just after the declaration of war, the first effort put forth by this agency to raise funds for the relief of suffering in connection with the war succeeded in enlisting about five million givers out of the population of one hundred million in the United States; but, after a year's experience with the horrors and sufferings entailed by the war, the effort made by the same agency succeeded in enlisting forty-seven million enthusiastic contributors, an increase of forty-two million givers in one year, which was nearly half the total population of our country. The sum asked for by the nation at this time was one hundred million dollars. Before the figures of the "drive" were all in, the Literary Digest of June 15, 1918, said:

The Red Cross fund mounts to a figure nearly two-thirds in excess of the original sum asked for. From Washington it was announced on June 2 that the total was $166,439,291, with indications that when all reports are tabulated "a $70,000,000 oversubscription of the $100,000,000 goal will be shown."

Mr. Henry P. Davison, the government's agent in charge of the work, after stating that "every Red Cross division in the country oversubscribed," says:

The supreme feature of this achievement is to be found not in the amount of money subscribed, but in that it came from every part of the United States—from its cities, its towns, its farms, its factories; from the rich and the poor, regardless of sect, color, or political creed.

And The Nation, a New York publication, said:

We have tapped new resources, have laid bare unsuspected possibilities of unity, discipline, organization, unselfish generosity, that required only the occasion to make them flame into blazing activity. Where in the world's history has there been an instance of democratic unity to surpass the manner in which the American people followed their chosen leader into this conflict, giving him whatever powers he held necessary to carry on a war from which every American shrank?

Here is a twofold lesson that should be impressed, not only upon every church, but upon every individual heart. (1) "The supreme feature of this achievement," says Mr. Davidson, "is to be found not in the amount of money subscribed," great as that amount was, but it was in the fact that "it came from every part of the United Statesfrom its cities, its towns, its farms, its factories; from the rich and the poor, regardless of sect, color, or political creed." That is, all were aroused, all were stirred, and practically the whole country was awakened and felt the importance of contributing even the smallest amount toward the widespread and pressing need. This is one of the secrets of success in giving in the churches: all must be enlisted, all must be stirred up to feel the pressing demands of the appeal, and then all, according to their ability, must give, no matter whether rich or poor; and thus not only are the needed means supplied, but the fellowship is complete and both givers and receivers are blessed. (2) "We have tapped new resources, have laid bare unsuspected possibilities of unity, discipline, organization, unselfish generosity, that required only the occasion to make them flame into blazing activity." This is another and a most vital secret of success in giving in the churches. They must know the object for which they are called upon to give; yea, they must be thoroughly intelligent at this point to the full extent of appreciating the genuine and pressing need to which they are called upon to give, so that they can and will give, not because some other person calls upon them for it, but because they see and appreciate the worthiness and pressing need of the object; and when they are thus confronted with the serious and imperative demands of the case, their ability to give, as The Nation expresses it, will "flame into blazing activity."

In numerous instances and on various occasions these principles of giving are exemplified in all periods of man's history covered in the Bible. At the building of the tabernacle and the temple, as well as on other occasions, the people were called upon to give, and the response was usually prompt and generous and God was recognized as the ultimate source of all gifts. When the people "offered willingly with a perfect heart to Jehovah" for the temple, "David, the king, also rejoiced with great joy," and said:

Blessed be thou, O Jehovah, the God of Israel our father, forever and ever. Thine, O Jehovah, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heavens and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Jehovah, and thou art exalted as head above all. Both riches and honor come of thee, and thou rulest over all; and in thy hand is power and might; and in thy hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name. But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee. (1 Chron. 29: 10-14.)

This was the true conception of giving even in that age of the world; but, notwithstanding the many instances of lavish giving recorded in the Old Testament, the sacred principle involved in the act was never fully brought to light in all its sublime glory and beauty until its radiance beamed from the cross of Calvary. Here, concerning the greatest of all gifts of all the ages, we are told that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life." (John 3: 16.) This was God's side of it. Then we are told that "the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." (Matt. 20: 28.) And again: "1 lay down my life, that I may take it again. No one taketh it away from me, but I lay it down of myself." (John 10: 17, 18.) This was the Son's side of it. And, finally, of the Macedonian Christians, Paul says: "First they gave their own selves to the Lord, and to us through the will of God." (2 Cor. 8: 5.) This is man's side of it; and when man thus gives himself to the Lord, all other giving that is required of him will come as a matter of course.

Moreover, the full extent of the blessedness of giving is never realized without this complete self-surrender and sympathetic enlistment of the givers in the cause to which they give. In this respect giving is like "mercy" in the mouth of the author of "The Merchant of Venice:"

The quality of mercy is not strained; It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven Upon the earth beneath. It is twice blessed; It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.

Hence, those who do not give, not only fail to bless others, but they fail to be blessed themselves. They do not appreciate the words of Jesus, "It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts 20: 35), and those of Paul, that "God loveth a cheerful giver" (2 Cor. 9: 7). Benefit to the giver as well as to the receiver is an essential consideration in the program of all true giving.

That man may last, but never lives, Who much receives, but nothing gives; Whom none can love, none can thank— Creation's blot, creation's blank.

Finally, let the question of giving be clearly and forcibly presented at proper intervals from the pulpit, and let the churches become thoroughly informed on the subject. It was the fact of becoming enlightened on the part of the people on the world situation and their becoming awakened to the ravages of the war and the needs of suffering humanity which brought generous response to the appeals for help; and on the same principle, in proportion as the churches become informed as to the entire worthiness and pressing needs of any object which they are called upon to help with their money, will their response be prompt and generous. All the churches everywhere should learn a most valuable lesson here from the great war. The people must know about, and be brought into sympathetic appreciation with, the worthiness of that to which they are called upon to give. Bring them face to face with appealing and unanswerable facts in the realm of motive, and they will give with a generous hand.

God's Will on Giving.

BY E. A. E.

It is useless to attempt to teach people to give according to the will of God until they have been convinced that it is his will for them to give. So long as they think they can give or not give as they choose, or according to their own convenience, or that they are doing so as an accommodation to others, or that they can select their own institutions or channels through which to give, they cannot be taught to give regularly, cheerfully, and liberally to the glory of God, and, therefore, as he directs. All who give in obedience to God not only do so regularly, cheerfully, and liberally, but really enjoy giving and are greatly blessed in so doing.

Giving is the foundation of salvation. God in his love gave his dearly beloved and only begotten Son to save all who believe on him. (John 3: 16; 1 John 4: 10.) Jesus, though rich, became poor that we through his poverty might become rich, and for this great reason Paul urges all to give. (2 Cor. 8: 8, 9.) "Giving" is a very comprehensive word, and, as used in the Bible, embraces the life of service to God. The first thing to be done in order to be saved and to live the Christian life, therefore, is to give one's self to God-body, mind, and soul. The secret of the great liberality of the churches of Macedonia so highly commended by Paul was that they first gave themselves to the Lord and then to Paul to assist him according to the will of God to the utmost in relieving the poor. gave out of their "deep poverty" so cheerfully and freely as to be "rich" in liberality. Read 2 Cor. 8: 1-5 and note these facts: (1) They rejoiced in an opportunity to help those in distress; (2) they themselves were afflicted and in "deep poverty," yet the riches of their liberality abounded; (3) they gave according to "their power," which means their ability to give; (4) they went "beyond their power," or the rule of giving according to their ability, and denied themselves for the time of the comforts of life in order to give more; (5) thy "gave of their own accord;" (6) they did not have to be entreated by Paul to give, but they besought him "with much entreaty" to allow them to participate in "this grace and fellowship in the ministering to the saints;" (7) they went beyond Paul's desire and expectation in this matter-not as he "had hoped;" and (8) the reason for all this, as has just been stated, is, they first and without reservation gave themselves to the Lord.

When people now do this first thing, they will find no trouble in learning what to give, when to give, to whom to give, through what to give, to whose honor to give, and why they should give.

Giving money is only a part of the much which must be given. We must give money and other material things; but we must give time and attention, give sympathy and personal service, give encouragement and support, give fellowship and love. Love is "the bond of perfectness."

Hereby know we love, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. But whose hath the world's goods, and beholdeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion from him, how doth the love of God abide in him? My little children, let us not love in word, neither with the tongue; but in deed and truth. (1 John 3: 16-18.)

Speaking briefly, God required abundant offerings of the Israelites—namely, daily offerings of different kinds; offerings on the Sabbath, at new moons, the great yearly festivals; sin offerings, peace offerings, freewill offerings; the first fruits and first-born of animals; the tithes, and the tithe of the tithes offered by the Levites; the gleanings of the fields and vineyards left for the poor; the sabbatical year, when the ground was not tilled, the vineyards were not pruned, the fruit was not gathered, but was all left for the poor, the hired servant, the stranger and sojourner in the land; the year of jubilee, when every man was restored to his possession and family, the bond servant was released, but was not sent out empty; no interest and rent were required of the poor Israelites. (See Lev. 25.) Besides, great offerings were made on special occasions. Note the sacrifices David offered when Solomon was made king-"a thousand bullocks, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their drink offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel;" also the gifts out of his own private treasury for building the temple. (1 Chron. 29.) Solomon, at the dedication of the temple, in gratitude and as a "peace offering," sacrificed "two and twenty thousand oxen, and a hundred and twenty thousand sheep," and he and the people "sacrificed sheep and oxen that could not be counted nor numbered for multitude." (1 Kings 8: 5: 63.) See what Hezekiah and Josiah offered. (2 Chron. 29: 32-36; 30: 24; 35: 7.) All these, from the daily offerings to the great numbers offered by these kings, were very costly. The Israelites gave far more than a tenth. We must not stop with saying they gave a tenth, when they were required to give so much more.

To neglect the offerings which God required of the Israelites was to rob God, to lose his blessings, and to invite curses and destruction. (Mal. 3: 9-12.) The earth is Jehovah's, and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein," and he claimed all this as due him; besides, the salvation from sin was in the shed blood of the animal sacrifices as a type of that blood without the shedding of which there is no remission. (Heb. 9: 22.)

So long as Israel obeyed God in making these offerings, in caring for the poor, in looking after the stranger and sojourner, in releasing the bond servant and restoring every man to his possession, and in being faithful otherwise, he greatly blessed them with abundant harvests, in their families and homes, in spiritual blessings, and in causing all their enemies to be at peace with them.

All these offerings and this treatment of the poor in the Old Testament have been "written for our learning, that through patience and comfort of the scriptures we might have hope." (Rom. 15: 4.) "The Israel of God" (Gal. 6: 16; 3: 7, 29; Phil. 3: 3) to-day should be more liberal according to God's will than Israel after the flesh. All our readers know that God still commands his children to give. He forbids their setting their affections "on the things that are upon the earth;" he commands them to set their hearts "on things that are above." (Col. 3: 2.) He forbids their laying up for themselves treasures on earth, but commands them to lay up "treasures in heaven," and gives the reason-" for where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also." (Matt. 6: 19-21.) He declares they cannot serve God and mammon (Matt. 6: 24) and commands them to seek first his kingdom and his righteousness, which embrace useful employment and industry, and makes them the promise that "all these things shall be added." He commands them in following honest callings with industry and economy to be contented with food and covering and not to be envious and jealous and restless, for the reason that they brought nothing into this world and it is certain they can carry nothing out, and "godliness with contentment is great gain." He teaches that all who "are minded to be rich fall into a temptation and a snare and many foolish and hurtful lusts, such as drown men in destruction and perdition," and that "the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil: which some reaching after have been led astray from the faith, and have pierced themselves through with many sorrows." (1 Tim. 6: 6-10.) He charges those who "are rich in this present world that they be not high-minded, nor have their hope set on the uncertainty of riches, but on God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, that they be ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on the life which is life indeed." (1 Tim. 6: 17-19.) He commands them to feed and clothe the hungry and naked, to care for the poor, to help widows and orphans, and to do good unto all men as they have opportunity. (1 Tim. 5: 1-16; James 1: 27; Gal. 6: 10.) He has ordained that, as they that ministered about sacred things of the temple and waited upon the altar had their portion with the altar, so they that proclaim the gospel should live of the gospel. (1 Cor. 9: 13, 14.) And he says that he who lays up treasures for himself "and is not rich toward God" is a fool. (Luke 12: 13-21.)

THE BIBLE WAY OF CONTRIBUTING.

"Concerning the collection for the saints," the churches are instructed as follows: "Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper, that no collections be made when I come." (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.) This manifests the wisdom of God, for God is the author of this system. Note the following: (1) It places before all a proper purpose for giving—"the necessity of the saints;" (2) regularity, and when—"upon the first day of the week;" (3) who—"each one;" (4) how much—"as he may prosper." This is equality; none are eased and none are burdened. (2 Cor. 8: 13, 14.) No human wisdom or system can equal this, to say nothing of surpassing it. God, who created and controls the universe, can direct the finances and other affairs of a congregation.

God requires a congregation to use only the money which it has; he does not require more of a congregation than it can do. It is not money as such that he seeks; he seeks to lead his people through their own liberality to higher and richer spiritual blessings and to salvation eternal.

Jesus and the apostles had a treasury—"the bag" (John 12: 6) (which Judas robbed). Out of this treasury they bought things to be used in the service of God and gave to the poor. (John 13: 29.) The church at Jerusalem had a treasury (Acts 2: 44, 45; 34: 35; 5: 1, 2; 11: 29, 30.) Paul taught churches to have one.

It should be added here that all contributions to the poor, to the spread of the gospel, and to the general good of men cannot go through the contribution made by the church on the first day of the week, or "the church treasury." Christians are commanded to do good unto all men as they have opportunity, "and especially toward them that are of the household of the faith." (Gal. 6: 10.) Individuals are to entertain strangers, feed the hungry, clothe the naked, visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, teach the ignorant, and help in different ways by personal effort to support and to extend the gospel. Besides, much help and sympathy can never go through the treasury.

THE WAY TO MAKE MONEY TO GIVE,

God's way of making money "for the church" is stated as follows:

Let him that stole steal no more: but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have whereof to give to him that hath need. (Eph. 4: 28.)

As Paul labored with his own hands in order to minister unto his own necessities and to those with him, he set the elders of Ephesus and the whole church an example, that so laboring they ought to help the weak, "and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that he himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20: 35.) This is God's way, the right way, therefore, and the successful way to "raise money for the church," as it is called; but this way many shun. They are either unwilling to work or to give of what they have made. If all church members would do this, they would have all the money God wants them to give, for he does not want them to give more than they can honestly make. Many work hard to make money to hoard up or to spend upon their own lusts; but few work for it to give to others-to give to the Lord. They may give a little of what is left after supplying their own needs and comforts; but they do not work to make it to give. When many fail to make and to use money as God directs, they resort to other ways to raise it, such as suppers, excursions, charades, foot-andankle shows, mock marriages, and various other entertainments which gratify the appetites and lusts of the flesh. Such things, instead of sacrifices, are abomination in God's sight. David spurned the thought of making an offering to God which cost him nothing. (2 Sam. 24: 18-25.) Araunah's gift could not have been David's offering. So, now, the gifts of others cannot be our sacrifices. We must give of our own labor and earnings and until it costs us something.

Laying By in Store.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

"Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.)

As we come to consider the important lesson taught in the above scripture, we are forced to remember with shame and regret that the finance of the church for long years past, and even down to this very day, has been, and is, one of the most difficult features of the church work to handle. In many instances the church has been shorn of its power and robbed of its influence, God and the Christ have been dishonored (Eph. 3: 21), and the holy religion of Christ is put in the background or brought into disrepute because of the church's failure to provide means by which its work is to be done.

To make up for for this lack, in some instances, the would-be dear children of our dear Heavenly Father have been driven, or allowed themselves to be led, into practices ridiculous and shameful—box suppers, cake raffles, baby shows, foot shows, leg shows, old fiddler's contests, ad infinitum.

Now, why all of this fuss-and-feathers botch and bunglesome failure? It is the same old story over and over. When we depart from the Lord's appointed ways, we always fail.

Let us hear Paul to Titus: "Who [Christ] gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a people for his own possession, zealous of good works." (Tit. 2: 14.) Again, we hear Faul's charge to Timothy: "Charge them that are rich in this present world, that they be not high-minded, nor have their hope set on the uncertainty of riches, but on God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, that they be ready to distribute, willing to communicate: laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on the life which is life indeed." (1 Tim. 6: 17-19.) Paul to the church at Colosse: "To walk worthily of the Lord unto all pleasing, bearing fruit in every good work." (Col. 1: 10.) Paul to the church at Corinth: "But this I say, He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound unto you; that ye, having always all sufficiency in everything, may abound unto every good work: as it is written, He hath scattered abroad, he hath given to the poor; his righteousness abideth forever." (2 Cor. 9; 6-9.)

The points that we wish to note in the above scripture connections are those pertaining to good works in which God's people are to engage. They are created to do good works, to be rich in every good work, to abound in all good works.

Let us here ask ourselves this question: What are some of the good works in which we are to engage that call for our material means, as is indicated in the text? They are clearly pointed out in God's holy word: feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, administering to the sick and afflicted, and caring for the orphans: relieving the distressed, oppresed, and suffering in every way possible within our means (Matt. 25: 31-46); preaching the gospel, making Christians, establishing churches, building church houses, and providing in an honorable way all things necessary to carry out this work.

But how is it to-day? Are we succeeding as well as we should in this work? Is not the progress of the work in most instances, if not all, greatly retarded because of want of means? We have whole counties in Tennessee, as well as in other States, where we have not a single congregation after the New Testament order; in fact, we have counties in our State and in other States where it would be hard to find a single member after the New Testament order. We claim to be missionary in spirit; we make large claims to be exponents of the New Testament order, pure and simple; and yet how few missionaries we have in the foreign fields, aside from the fact that there are many fields we have never touched; and many fields are abandoned, both at home and abroad, because of a want of means to continue the work. Evidently we are derelict in a large measure in our solemn duty to provide means by which the work of the church is to be carried out.

Just let us go back to the early history of the church and see the readiness with which God's people responded to the needs and demands of the church, "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the prayers." (Acts 2: 42.) Let us note the term "fellowship." Here it is taken in its largest sense, as we believe. It means an association of persons in partnership with each other. Then, Christians are partners with each other, sharing in each other's joys, sorrows, sufferings, distresses, sacrifices, work, toil, victory, and defeat; in fact, the whole realm of human duty is embraced in the inspired declaration, "We are God's fellow workers." (1 Cor. 3; 9.) Each individual, be he young or old, rich or poor, should calculate and lay his plans to do some of this work, even to the extent of his ability; and each congregation, be it old or young, rich or poor, should calculate and lay its plans to do this work, even to the extent of its ability.

Some congregations and some individuals never calculate to do much, if anything; therefore, they lay no plans to do, and, of course, do not "abound unto good works."

Let us here note the liberality of the early Christians; "And all that believed were together, and had all things common, and they sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all, according as any man had need," (Acts 2: 44, 45.) "For neither was there among them any that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto each, according as any one had need." (Acts 4: 34, 35.) Read in this connection Acts 6: 1-7, and you will see their willingness and their preparedness to care for their widows. I know of widows and their children to-day who do not get to go to church eyen, because of their deep poverty. Luke, supposed to be the writer of the book called "Acts of the Apostles," has certainly given us this history for our edification and encouragement; for he says he wrote that we "might know the certainty of things," and this is the reason why we refer to them.

We see the readiness and preparedness for this particular work.

But Paul says: "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye." He proposes the Galatians as an example to the Corinthians; the Corinthians, to the Macedonians; the Corinthians and Macedonians, to the Romans. (Rom. 15: 26, 27; 2 Cor. 9: 2.)

When is it to be done—this laying by "in store?" "Upon the first day of the week." Some people never lay by anything unless there is a preacher there when they are expected to be called upon, or when the protracted-meeting is on hands and they are expected to do something toward supporting the meeting. It is shown by observation and experience that more is contributed when contributed regularly at appointed times than when all is contributed at one time.

How many? Each one—those in moderate circumstances as well as those in good circumstances—each one is to "lay by him in store" as he is prospered. The meaning certainly is that each one set apart, and look forward to that end, an amount in proportion as he is prospered, and this is to be done on the first day of the week; not as he is prospered on that day only, nor the week following the first day, but for the whole week preceding the first day

Where is he to put it? "Lay by him." By putting in the bank, in the bag, at the bottom of the trunk, behind the chink, in a hole in the wall, or buried away in a tin can in the earth? Suppose each member should do one of these ways! Then what? There would have to be a gathering "when I [Paul] come," and that he does not want. No congregation would ever be in position to do anything in a regular, systematic way to undertake it in that way. There is to be fellowship; and in order to that, these individual contributions are to be gathered. Some of our best commentators, in commenting on this scripture, say let each one lay by him, putting it into the treasury. This seems to me to be the only sane, businesslike way.

But, after all, the question of how much we must "lay by "comes up. Two or five men may be prospered equally under like conditions, and each may give as he feels he is prospered, and yet one or two give as much as, or more than, the other three. There is no "equality" in this, and God wants "equality" in this laying by. (2 Cor. 8: 11-15.) How is this to be settled? As to myself, I have decided how to settle it and have my own conscience at ease. I go back and study the requirements of the Jews under the law. First I read Gen. 28: 22; then the law for tithing. (Lev. 27: 30-33; Num. 18: 21-28; Deut. 12: 5-18; 14: 22-27; 26: 12-14; Mal. 3: 7-10.) I suggest that we all study these scriptures.

But some one is ready to say: "You are now wanting to resurrect the old law." No, no, by no means. Paul says the law was the "schoolmaster to bring us to Christ" (Gal. 3: 26); but if Jehovah required a tenth of the Jew under the law, when things stood in the relation of types and shadows to the real, the true, to one who stands in the blazing sunlight of the gospel noonday and amid the church with all of its glories and privileges, with its weighty and far-reaching responsibilities-is Jehovah going to require and expect any less of that one! I can hardly believe that he will. Nay, he has a right to expect more, if any difference. Let us not take umbrage under the fact that the law is dead, and by so doing hinder the spread of the "glorious gospel of Christ." We owe something to God to-day. We talk about giving. We do not give at all; we owe it to the Lord; and he has provided an easy way for us to pay it, if we will only follow that way.

If each congregation would school its members to lay by in store in proportion as they are really prospered, even one-fifteenth instead of one-tenth, we would be able to preach the gospel in every nook and corner in all the world and help in every other worthy cause. The fact is, too many of us have been playing too long at this sacred work.

It is to be hoped and greatly desired that there will be great improvement along these lines. May God bless and save all the faithful.

Are There Many Children in Need?

Many good, inexperienced people wonder whether there are so many children, after all, that are in need as seem to be represented by the various child-saving agencies. They look a bit skeptical when the statement is made that in the United States there are at least 200,000 children every year who become public charges. This estimate is very conservative. Probably more than a quarter of a million children reach the point every year of dependence upon some one else than their parents for support. The Provident Association of St. Louis alone last year aided 5,774 children under fourteen years of age. The question as to whether these children would perish or survive, would be handicapped by disease or be strong and healthy, would be illiterate or be cultured, whether they would be stunted in their moral growth or develop into desirable citizens, was largely determined by the assistance given them through the people who sustain the Provident Assoclation.

What is true in the city of St. Louis is true of every other great city in the country. One of the greatest fields of activity challenging the modern church of America today is that offered by the dependent children. These children are susceptible and responsive to Christian influence. If the church will come to their rescue in their misery and wretchedness and throw around their lives a wholesome, Christian influence, the ranks of the church will be recruited, while the ranks of the criminal element will be reduced.—World Call.

So great is the need in Syria that Dr. Howard Bliss, speaking for the A. C. A. S. R., said that the dogs in Beirut had long ago disappeared. They were the natural scavengers of the Oriental cities. But they had disappeared because their places had been taken by women and men and children, pawing over the refuse piles in the city, not once or twice, but many times, in the hope that they might discover by some chance a grain of wheat. They pawed over the dung of horses and mules and donkeys for some lost piece of grain. Now, around the magazines of distribution one can always see a group of boys and girls picking up the separate grains which may have been dropped in the road.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Be sure and keep this number for future reference.

May this special number promote the happiness of the cheerful giver.

The "Giving" Number of the Gospel Advocate deserves a careful reading.

We are indebted to the many contributors who have written special articles for this number.

The editors of the Gospel Advocate are pained to learn of the very serious illness of C. M. Pullias, of Birmingham, Ala. We wish for him a speedy recovery.

J. S. Trotter closed a meeting at Beasley's Chapel, near Boston, Tenn., Sunday. Three were baptized. He begins next Sunday at Pinedale, in Davidson County.

John T. Smithson writes: "The meeting at Rose Hill, Tenn., closed with good interest and one baptism. My next meeting will be at Pleasant Ridge, Tenn."

The many friends of C. A. Moore, this city, will be grieved to learn that he is suffering from a distressing accident in which his left leg was badly fractured. He is in the city hospital.

The death of D. J. Shipp, of Lebanon, Tenn., on July 19, removes from this world a most worthy citizen and an exemplary Christian in every respect. He was for many years a member of the Bellwood congregation. Brother Elam conducted the funeral services.

From Andrew Perry, Watseka, Ill., July 26: "Please tell all the readers of the Gospel Advocate that I will be in Tennessee at once. While I have some work promised, I still have more time to devote to the Master's work. Address me at Bethel, Tenn., till August 6; then at Clifty, Tenn., for two weeks longer."

From George T. Searcy, Oklahoma City, Okla., July 21: "My meeting at Chismville, Ark., will begin on August 9 and continue ten days. I will spend two months in Arkansas on my vacation. Any congregation in Arkansas wanting a meeting during those months should write me at 734 East Ninth Street, Chismville, Ark."

From Joe Ratcliffe, Cardwell, Mo., July 24: "Our meeting here is seven days old. There were six confessions last night. This is a splendid church. I go from here to Paradise, Texas, for a meeting, and from there to Tennessee for some meetings. All of my time is taken till October 15, at which time I could begin another meeting."

From J. N. Armstrong, Franklin, Tenn., July 23: "I am in a meeting near Franklin. Healthy growth; one baptism. I held a meeting here nineteen years ago. Not many here now that heard me then. I am to begin a meeting Sunday at Woodson's Chapel, on the Edmondson pike, out of Nashville about ten miles, four miles from the Flat Rock car line."

From E. V. Cowan, Success, Ark., July 23: "We had a real good meeting at Heber Springs. Three obeyed the gospel and many others were convinced, and some renewed their 'first love' and promised that they would continue faithful. I am now in a good meeting at Success, with interest good. I go from here to Water Valley for my next meeting."

From D. D. Woody, Rives, Tenn., July 26: "For the encouragement of the Christian brotherhood, I desire to report a series of meetings which I conducted near Jackson a few days ago. Aided by a few brethren, I held services under a tent for about eight days. Notwithstanding the difficulties and opposition, we succeeded in baptizing seven persons into Christ. I thank God that my efforts have redounded to his honor and glory."

From J. S. Daugherty, Kirbyville, Texas, July 21: "I closed my second meeting this year at Steep Creek, in San Augustine County, last night. Three erring brethren were restored and four were baptized into Christ. Also a congregation of about twelve agreed to keep house in the future for the Lord. This is the sixteenth congregation in eleven different counties, all in Texas, which the writer has 'set in order' during his nine years' ministry."

The Belmont Avenue church of Christ, this city, is conducting an open-air meeting at the corner of Division and Nelson Streets. The revival began Sunday night with a splendid audience. Morgan H. Carter is preaching each evening at eight o'clock. The series of messages will be of interest to those in Christ as well as others. The cooperation of all Nashville Christians is requested. Take a Belmont car to Division Street and walk down two blocks.

From R. A. Craig, Shelbyville, Ky., July 24: "The church at Parksville, Ky., needs a preacher and teacher at once. This is a great opportunity for some preacher who wishes to be busy most of his time. Parksville is in Boyle County, in the center of an excellent farming district, and traveling facilities are fine. Nowhere can you find better people than the brethren at Parksville. The school salary is sixty-five dollars per month, with liberal contributions from two churches. If you are interested in this work, write me at once."

From A. J. Traylor: "J. W. Grant and I have closed a meeting at Sharpeville, Tenn. One who had wandered away came back with the determination that she would live for Christ. Brother Grant presented some splendid sermons, but it seems he could not get the unsaved to realize how dangerous it is to live out of Christ. We worked faithfully to add more to God's family, but it seems that they wanted to live in the world a little longer. I am glad of the interest the people took in the singing school this week at Lascassas."

From R. R. Clark, Red Boiling Springs, Tenn., July 22: "T. B. Larimore was with us last Lord's day and preached to a large audience. He and Sister Larimore were visiting the Springs for a few-days' rest. It had been about nine years since he was here, and we were delighted to have him with us, and wished that he could have stayed longer. He also went to Willette, where he held services at the burial of our dear brother and kinsman, Gilbert Crabtree. M. L. Moore, of Franklin, Ky., will conduct our meeting, beginning on the fourth Lord's day in August."

From W. F. Lemmons, Mount Vernon, Texas, July 23: "I closed a meeting at Doucette a week ago, but had no additions. However, we put the little band to work on every first day of the week, under the leadership of Luther R. Campbell, who lives at Woodville, only two or three miles away, and publishes the county paper there. The few were pleased with the work we did. I go from here to Cloverport, near Toone, Tenn., to begin a meeting on August 2, and from there to Mississippi. I am in a meeting at this place, with unusual attendance and interest. The crowds are large, and w hope to see some results."

From W. S. Long, Jr., Brownsville, Tenn., July 27: "I am now in a meeting at Cliff Creek church of Christ, near Brownsville. From here I will go to Sharon for a meeting in August, and shall return to the work in Washington, D. C., the last of August. It is my earnest prayer that all the churches will help heartily to build a house of worship in the national capital, and do so soon, for it is seriously needed. We have about one-third of the funds needed. The faithful members are doing what they can, and your support will be sincerely appreciated. Address all donations to J. W. Gibson or T. F. Colvin, elders, 2500 Pennsylvania Avenue, S. E., Washington, D. C., or to E. L. Mills, treasurer, 2002 G Street, N. W.

M. C. Cayce writes: "On July 13 I closed an eight-days' meeting at Walter Hill, Tenn. This was my second meeting with them, and I have been preaching there once a month between meetings. Closed with a packed house; three baptized, two restored. I am wanted back next year. Jeff D. Derryberry was a great help with his splendid song leading. I hope to have him with me again. I am now in a meeting at Jackson's Temple, in Dickson County. This is a young, but enthusiastic, congregation. Brother Carter is a fine song leader, and the song service is excellent and earnest. Attendance and attention good. One added to date. On the first Sunday in August I am to begin a meeting at Rock Church, Bellvue, five miles from Dickson."

From H. A. Rogers, Macrorie, Sackatchewan, Canada, July 21: "The meeting in Monmowala Schoolhouse closed with five baptisms. I am holding a meeting in Macrorie, with good interest and attendance. In my financial report for sixteen months in the Gospel Advocate of July 10, it will be noticed that after expenses were deducted there was a balance of five hundred and seventy-five dollars. I purchased a Ford roadster for this work only, which cost me six hundred and fifty dollars, leaving seventy-five dollars on the other side, and all my time given to Christ, Brethren, contributions have been very light of late, and unless more assistance comes I shall be obliged to do something else for a time. The door is wide open in this country for the Lord's cause. Shall we heed the Macedonian call?"

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

Havana, July 20.-The meeting here is the best. Brethren tell me that people are coming almost every night who never before attended our meetings. A very large crowd last night, and two confessions. I baptized one yesterday and will baptize these others to-day. Some of the brethren thought we would not have the large crowd we had been having during the week, as it was "show night," but the crowd was large and the interest the best. Brethren, it is a great mistake to let people think the church must give the right of way to the "movies" on Sat-orday nights. Where I hold meetings, in city or country, I preach on Saturday night the same as other nights, and it is a mistake not to do it. I may close here to-night. The meeting at Ravia, Okla., will begin next Friday and continue over the third Lord's day in August .- D. S. Ligon.

Macrorie, Saskatchewan, July 17.— On June 21 Brother H. A. Rogers, of Carman, Manitoba, arrived here to hold a meeting in the Monmawala Schoolhouse. Brother Rogers held a meeting here during the winter while the writer and family were at the coast. On this occasion four were baptized into Christ and the church revived to such an extent that the members were encouraged to work to earnestly for the Master. Owing to bers were encouraged to work more Brother Rogers, we naturally looked forward to meeting him with considerable pleasure. Upon acquaintance with Brother Rogers, we found that the reports we had received were more than justified. He is a powerful and earnest speaker, loyal and true to the Master, and brings out his points in a forceful and unmistakable manner. He is a man blessed with many lovable qualities, a consistent visitor, and a great measure of his success is doubtless to be attributed to this part of his work. From the commencement the meeting aroused considerable interest, which was sustained right on through to the end. The actual results would be difficult to ascertain. Five adults were baptized into Christ four sisters and one brother. brings our total membership to thirty-The meeting continued till the afternoon of the second Lord's day in July, Brother Rogers speaking twice each Lord's day and once every evening with the exception of Saturday. On the evening of July 13 he began a meeting in the village of Macrorie. We trust that his efforts will bring much glory to the Master and that Washington, July 15.—Many of the brethren in the United States are interested in seeing a good house of worship in the national capital. Many have said: "Let us build a good house while we are at it." I am glad to hear them say so, for that is the right thing to do. Now it is right that every one know the facts in the case, and I am taking this opportunity to give them, We are compelled to build a building that will meet the requirements of the Engineering Department of Washing-The building inspectors of the city demand a fireproof house with a thirteen-inch wall, and one that is in keeping with the section of the city in which the house is to be erected. This being true, we must build a good house. If we wanted to build a cheap house, we would not be allowed to do it. I am glad that this is so, for the church of Christ should have a good house of worship in Washington. Now, Christians, you have said you wanted to see a good house in this city; then help us now, and do it by multiplying your donation by two. We have raised $9,500. The lot cost $5,295, counting guarantee of deed, etc. We have on hand in the bank $4,105 to go into the building. The house we shall be re-quired to erect will cost twenty-five thousand dollars. So you see we need twenty thousand dollars yet in order to complete the building. Send all contributions to J. W. Gibson, 2500 Pennsylvania Avenue, S. E., Washington, D. C., or to E. L. Mills, 2002 G Street, N. W.—W. S. Long.

Sedalia, July 22 .- I closed the meeting at Wildersville, Tenn., yesterday morning, at the water. baptized eight persons; two from the Baptists and one from the Methodists. We had large crowds at each service. The church at Wildersville is in a fine condition. The brethren there have the cause of Christ at heart; they are proving their faith by their works. Brother Sam Ringold led the singing, and he did it well. I go to Pottsville for my next meeting.—I. A. Douthitt.

Melber, July 22.—I have just returned from Sharpe, where I held a good meeting. One young man, a brother-in-law of the lamented young Brother Luton, became obedient to the gospel. I do not think I have ever seen a church, as a whole, manifest their appreciation of one's obedience to the truth more than did they of his. This church has made marked improvemen's in the past four years. They have remodeled and repainted their house, and the spiritual atmos-phere is much better. Brother Overby, of Murray, preaches for them monthly. The Lord willing, I shall hold their meeting next year, begin-ning on the fourth Lord's day in July. If not providentially hindered, I shall begin a meeting at Pleasant Hill, Ark., first of August. I shall go from that place to Antioch, in the northern part of Louisiana; from there to a place in Kentucky; and then to the David Lipscomb College.-L. E. Pryor.

Your Greatest Problem-That Boy of Yours.

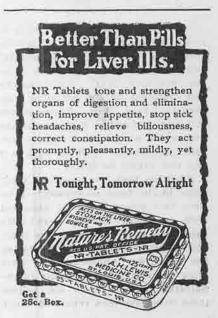

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations, his ideals, his Inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. nizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs, and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects. Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., to-day, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

NUXATED IRON

-MASTER STRENGTH BUILDER

OF THE BLOOD

The Power Behind the Strong Sturdy Men and Healthy Beautiful Women of Today

"To make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron" says Dr. James Francis Suliivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York and the Westchester County Hospital, Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new blood cells strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed energy and endurance into the whole system. It often increases the strength of weak, delicate people in two weeks' time. It is estimated that over 3,000,000 people use Nuxated Iron annually as a tonic, and blood-builder.

MAKE THIS TEST YOURSELF And Find Out Where Your Blood Stands

See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form.

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated from recommended and prescribed by physicians is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic from products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

What Are You Doing for the

BY R. A. CRAIG.

Brother, are you doing anything to make the church a stronger institution, both spiritually and financially? Is it not a fact that the church is being neglected, while denominations and fraternal orders are being supported? That these denominations and fraternal orders are wide awake and taking advantage of every opportunity to increase their strength is a fact that cannot be denied.

What has made the Salvation Army forge to the front so rapidly? I believe this question can be answered with one word—namely, work! We know they have labored hard to reach the people, and especially so during the great war. Soldiers come back from the front singing praise to the Salvation Army, I do not believe these boys have been converted, but I do believe they have learned something of the spirit of the Master. Not only is the Salvation Army busy, but denominations and fraternal orders are doing a wonderful work indeed. The Methodists are calling for millions of dollars, and they will raise it without trouble.

"But," says one, "you are just alarmed and have not considered what we have done in the past." I think it is time to be alarmed. A call has gone out from Washington, our national capital, for funds to help build a church. This call, I think, is over a year old and the work is not complete; the money has not been raised, when, in fact, it should have been raised in one week after the call was made. Brother, is not this enough to alarm us? It shows plainly a lack of love for the cause of Christ.

I believe the church should be an organized body. I also believe the order of organization is laid down in the word of God. Webster says an organization is "a number of individuals systematically united for some end." I do not believe we are systematically united. If we were systematically united, we could do far more and greater work than we have ever done. I believe our preaching brethren should come together at least once a year to discuss in a scriptural way the work of the church. I do not, know what the church is doing where you preach; I do know it would do more if the brethren were scripturally organized. One thing that hinders greatly the work of the church is its members' working for the good of temporal orders. Brother, why not drop your life-insurance policy and use that money in the church? Why not come out of the lodge and support the church? I am not sure that I have the popular side of the question, but I am sure that I have the scriptural side. "No man can serve two masters." We cannot join these orders and please God. I firmly believe that any man who lends his influence to these orders loses faith in God. Brother, what is the church for? Why did Christ shed his blood for the church? I am persuaded that when you answer these two questions you will for all time see the importance of the church.

The Acceptability of the Gift.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

Gifts are usually a demonstration of respect and the love the giver has for the person or object for which the gift is given. Under the Jewish worship, gifts were usually the tenth part of what a man produced; and when a man gave as he was "prospered," he usually gave the tenth; and where that law or rule was binding, there was just about as much love manifested in the gift as there is now when a man pays ten dollars tax on one hundred dollars' worth of property. Some pay willingly and some pay grudgingly; but who ever heard of a man going beyond and paying more than what the law required? While paying tax is right, it is not done as a manifestation of love. When Paul gave the rule to lay by in store as God had "prospered" them (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2), their love prompted them to go far beyond what Paul at first had required them to give. About a year after this he wrote his second letter, in which he approves and commends their liberality, prompted by love, and urges them to continue in their willingness to give, that it was a manifestation of their love, and then rescinds his first order to lay by in store as God had prospered them, and says, "I speak not by commandment," thus placing the acceptability of their gifts upon the principle of love, leaving every man to decide for himself as to what he could willingly give; for, in order that the gift be acceptable, there must first be a willing mind.

On the day of Pentecost the first Christians found themselves severed from the Jewish worship and deprived of food and the right to partake of the Jewish feast. Then the Christians began to divide out among themselves, and many sold out and made equal division; but after the fraud by Ananias this selling out was checked. (See Acts 5: 13.) From the second chapter of Acts, and first verse, to eighth chapter, it appears that we have only three days' time, and it is plainly stated where the apostles stayed during the two nights. And the persecution and dispersion of the church in the evening of the third day, at the death of Stephen, forever ended the sale and equal division of property. Then freewill gifts or offerings became the rule, and is to the present

A gift in promise is not acceptable until it is paid. The Lord does not work upon a credit system. When Paul repealed the amount specified in the word "prospered" in 1 Cor. 16: 2, he did not repeal the day. So the first day of the week still stands as the day upon which Christians should contribute of their means for the benefit of the poor and the support of the gospel, these being the only two things for which any mention is made for using the gifts. The Lord surely left the members of his church the right. and privilege to provide for their own comfort and convenience, the cost of which is in no way required of the Lord to be paid out of his treasury. My Christian brother, if God's great love for the world (and you) so prompted him to give his Son to die for you that you might be redeemed, why not, in return, freely give of your richest treasures that the hungry souls might be fed with the "bread of life?" The preacher is not to bear the burden alone. And the Lord "loveth a cheerful giver," for the Christian's great duty is to remember the poor.

Quiet Giving.

Almsgiving has been exalted by the scribes to an act in itself meritorious before God. The word "alms" and "righteousness" were, indeed, used interchangeably. "For one farthing given to the poor," said the rabbis, "a man will receive heaven." "He who gives alms will be kept from all evil." In an age when the religious spirit was dead, outward acts of religion were ostentatiously practiced, at once to earn a reward from God and to secure honor for holiness from men.

Religion was acted for gain, either present or future. Against such hy pocrisy Jesus warns his followers. They were to draw no attention to their charity by having it proclaimed in the synagogue or by ostentatiously giving it in the streets, to earn praise of men, but were to hide it as if they would not even let their left hand know what their right hand was do-Sincerity only gave charity ing. value. The amount was not essential; the spirit was all. Insincerity had no reward but the empty honor from men, got by deceit; sincerity was rewarded by their Father in heaven, who saw the secret deed .- Geikie.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from he South, knowing how welcome such a the would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully thre hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. 'undred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. I think I have never been in a more ideal home for preacher. Brother Mann preaches all over the country near Riverside, and is held in high esteem by everybody in the neighborhood. He has collected the material for several congregations, and he is frequently called on to baptize several at his ordinary monthly appointments. Brother Jeff Logue, of Mount Pleasant, led the song service, and did it well. The meeting was a pleasant affair to me and will long be remembered.—C. S. Austin.

Dickson, Route 3, July 23,-I left Florida on June 23, and have just finished my third meeting since coming into this section of country. I preached ten nights at Colesburg, near Dickson, with one restored and one baptized: preached eight days at Northcut's Cove, near McMinnville, with two baptisms; spent eight days at Chestnut near Viola, with nine baptized and eight reclaimed. I go to Friendship congregation, near Murray, Ky.;

Fountain Head, July 23.—The first of the year found me in charge of mission points at Buck Lodge and Pondville. Early in the year I got the "flu" and was prevented from preaching for about three months. Since then I have preached monthly at the above-named places and at Sulphur. My mother died in May, and I am now homeless. I have just closed a protracted meeting at Buck Lodge. was once a good congregation at this place, but because of deaths and re-movals there are very few left. Among those who have preached here in the past are J. A. Harding, Walter Harding, Flavil Hall, J. H. Curry, and J. M. Dennis. Buck Lodge is on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, about ten miles north of Gallatin. If any of the preaching brethren should stop off here, ask for Joe Wilson or Richard Ashlock, and you will be sure of a welcome. I would be glad to find a location where I could preach to one or more good congregations and find some work to do during the week to make my living. The "fu" has left me in a weakened condition, so I am unable to stay on the farm or work at hard labor, and my entire support from the churches this year is between four and five dollars. Any one desiring my services in a protracted meeting or for a permanent location should address me in care of J. W. Hodges, Fountain Head, Tenn., Route 3.-Albert L. Stewart.

Texas.

Center Grove, July 21.-I am here in a fine meeting and am hoping for the best. This is one of the best churches in all Texas. They have a good membership, a new house, and our singing is fine. The rain has hindered some, but the sun is bright to-day. I go next to Wylie, and then to Hatfield, Ark. I am then coming to Tennessee for some work, and have time for two meetings. Any one in-terested may address me at Ben Franklin, Texas.—C. H. Smithson.

Waxahachie, July 21.—The Amarillo meeting continued fifteen days, with fourteen added by baptism and seven by restoration and membership. Patrick's Chapel meeting continued eleven days and resulted in nineteen baptisms and one restoration. I am now at Bardwell in a meeting. The Bardwell church is one of the strongest in Ellis County. I go from here to Syl-vanna, and then to Delta County. I have had nearly one hundred baptisms this year. Too much rain in for meetings and farmers. Sad to see crops ruined as they are by so much rain.-J. S. Dunn.

Grand Saline, July 20.—I closed a ten-days' meeting at Sand Flat last Lord's-day night. Three were buried with the Lord in baptism and the congregation was greatly strengthened. A Nickel for the Show, a Penny for the Church.

BY D. S. LIGON.

I do not wish to be a pessimist in the eyes of the people, but an optimist; but allow me to say just here that I am not so optimistic that I cannot see things as they really are before my eyes. If I am not mistaken in the way things look to me, parents are making a very poor effort to obey the divine injunctions to "train up a child in the way he should go" and to "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Instead of this, they are "bringing them up" in the way they should not go, both by precept and example.

Because of the conduct of many parents to-day, the children have a very light estimate of the church. The father will smoke his nickel cigar in the home, in the meetinghouse, and all other public places before ladies and decent men, and also right before his own boy and the boys of others, without, it seems, a single thought of his bad example set before the public, and especially his own children. And the mother-some mothers, at least, in some countries-will get out her mouth mop, fill it full of snuff, and swab and spit, and then spit and swab, right before her daughter. Of course, she is very particular to tell the girl she must not do that. But what is the use to tell the girl this? Actions speak louder than words. Such passages of scripture as, "Dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." has but little meaning to some church members. I offered to preach the gospel for one whole year in a certain county in Oklahoma just for the amount the brethren in the county spent a year for tobacco in all forms. They did not take me up, but went on their way chewing their cud. O, how it does grieve me to see a little, innocent boy going about smoking a cigarette! But who is to blame? In most cases it is the father, but not always; but it is surely the example set by some tobacco worm in the form of a man.

Then comes the moving-picture show. And I put it down right here that nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand are too low, suggestive, sensual, and devilish for the eyes of parents, much less of their children. Once we had preaching on Saturday nights, but nowadays it seems to be out of order to even try to have preaching on Saturday night even in protracted meetings. The evening is given over to the cravings of the flesh and the demands of the enemy of souls. I have held meetings where members would deliberately take a "lay-off" and go to a show any time they took a "show fever;" and when Saturday night came, I have known members of the church who seemed to think it just awful to have preaching on Saturday night, as this night seems to be given over to the devil by parents, the church, and many of the preachers. Brethren, too many of the members of the church are wanting to have a "good time" on Saturday night at any cost, then place a penny in the contribution box on Sunday. Many parents will give their children a nickel or a dime once or twice a week to go to the show, and on Sunday they hand them a penny for the Lord. Parents, be not deceived; your children can see where your heart is and where your interests are. I tell you, brethren, I know what I am talking about; for I once was engaged to take a religious line of pictures and lecture on them over the country, but the picture-show man would almost invariably throw in one of his that would kill all the good influence of any man's lecture. I remember when I was in Camp Cody I gave a lecture one night, and as soon as my lecture was over the director put on a "show" for the boys, and I tell you now the picture was so sensual and suggestive it could not be of any moral help to the boys, but sapped from their minds, no doubt, much of what I had taught them. The show is largely like the dance in effect on moral life. Yes, the show is incompatible with Christianity, and I do not believe there is any Christian, old or young, who can visit the show from one to three times a week and keep the soul in tune with the divine Spirit and be as devoted to the church as the Lord demands. Yet some Christians will "pay the way" to the show on Saturday night, and are not alarmed when their children will not, or, at least, do not, go to the Lord's house for worship on Sunday.

I sometimes wonder what the average member of the church thinks the following scriptures really mean: "Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore would be a friend of the world maketh himself an enemy of God." "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." I tell you what I think about them. Here it is: No child of God can be friendly with the wicked ways of the world and at the same time be a devoted friend of God and his cause. And if any man love the Father, the love of the world will not be in him.

I know the preacher who preaches against these things will be put on the "black list" by many members of the church, but he certainly will be approved of God. I was refused an appointment once because I had lectured in the town against the saloon, and have been frowned upon and perhaps will never be asked to preach at some places where I have spoken out against tobacco and the show practice among members of the church; but I know whom I serve. It is the Lord, and not man. But here it goes—a nickel for the show and a penny for the Lord.

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

FIELD REPORTS

Texas.

Fort Worth, July 25 .- I write to say that my wife is improving very well, if outward appearances are to be trusted. The doctors do not seem to be entirely satisfied about her, but I am in great hopes now that she will get well. It will be two more weeks, at least, before I can take her home. Now, there are several brethren who are sending to our relief, but I have not reported the donations lately. The reason is that several notations of money received is in a book at home, and I cannot report them from memory; so I have intended to wait till I get back home and then report all at the same time. But every cent I re-ceive will be reported as soon as I can Brother W. E. Morgan canie get to it. to see us to-day, and brought a lovely bouquet of flowers from Sister Philpot at Bowie. Many are sending flowers and other remembrances more substantial, but none the more pleasing. Brother Morgan is one of the noble sons of God on earth. Many of the brethren and sisters of Fort Worth visit wife and cheer her up, and she is responding to their encouragement well. I preach every Sunday here, and find a host of friends who know how to make life's burdens lighter. I will in a few days report all money received, and make known the latest decision of the doctors about her condition. Pray for us. Write to me in care of the Harris Sanitarium.—Tice Elkins.

West Virginia.

Waverly, July 21.—At our regular meeting at Horse Neck, yesterday, four excellent persons, all heads of families, came forward at the night service and confessed their faith in Christ, and are to be buried with their Lord in baptism on Wednesday evening. Great crowds of deeply interested hearers attend every session of our meetings there, and we confidently expect ac-cessions to the one body there. It is the most inviting field for home mission work known to me. Even at our Wednesday-night prayer and singing services the house is crowded to over-flowing-not with a bunch of "rowdies," but with persons, church mem-bers and others, eager to learn and take part in singing the sweet songs of Zion. They are now engaged in building a neat and comfortable house of worship at that place, and they need help in this work. Let any reader of the Gospel Advocate who would like to have fellowship with them in this needed work send an offering to Brother Noah Brothers, Willow, W. Va., Route 1, Box 31, and it will be faithfully applied to the work and gratefully acknowledged through the columns of the Gospel Advocate. Beginning on the last Monday evening in October, the Lord willing, a four-teen-weeks' Bible reading will be held with the church there. It is hoped to read the Bible (both Testaments) through at that reading. Any young men or women desiring to prepare themselves for more and greater usefulness in the church of Christ are cordially invited to attend this Bible reading. Boarding and lodging can be obtained on reasonable terms among the brethren there. It is a delightful place at which to attend a reading of this kind. For further particulars concerning boarding, etc., address R. R. Bunner, M.D., Waverly, W. Va. As I am not able to do much work, I am striving to make this an ideal New Testament congregation of disciples of Christ in all things that pertain to the work and worship of the church of God, and, as far as can be seen now, it is getting well along in this direction. In connection with the reading of the Bible, we hope to have a good class in English grammar and church history.—A. A. Bunner.

The church feels that it has been made stronger and better by having him with us. We hope to have him with us again next October. Brethren, let us pray that God will give us more preachers like Brother Taylor, men who will dare to have a purpose and will dare to make it known—Christian men of undaunted courage, undying love, and unwavering faith, who will thrust "the sword of the Spirit" into the very heart of sectarian theology until, mangled and bleeding, false religions shall die.—Ada Maxwell.

Childress, July 5.-It is with a sad heart that I write to say that all our hopes are crushed again, at least for a time. For two months my wife has gradually grown better, and all of us and the doctor felt sure she would soon be perfectly well again; but yesterday morning, from 2 A.M. until 10 A.M., she had seven of those terrible spells, two of them horrible beyond description. She is very low this morning, and I am writing the brethren where I expected to go in July for meetings to make the for meetings to make other arrangements. I now expect it will be two more months before I can leave her safely; but if she recovers sooner, 1 will go to some work, for we cannot live much longer unless I do. 1 want to say that I am not going to appeal to the brotherhood again for help, for some have censured me for doing this, and, because my wife was not confined to bed all the time, have said I should have been at work paying my debts. My debts are growing now, and I know not what the end may be; but I can labor with my hands, and have done it all spring and summer, and, while we thank those who have helped us so much with all our hearts, we will try to make it somehow until 1 can leave home and work out a living. God bless the noble-hearted who have helped us, and God bless those who have hindered us and made it harder for us to live,-Tice Elkins.

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

The Pale Horse. No. 4.

BY J. PERRY HODGE,

As a matter of fact, death with hell following is the portion of all the world who fail for any reason to accept Christ, for there is salvation in no other. "For there is none other name under heaven given among men. whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4: 12.) Therefore the fact that through the falling away of those who had accepted Christ, they, too, would fall under the great destroyer, death, and having not remained faithful to him till that time, hell would also follow this fourth part of the world the same as those who had not accepted him at all. This was the matter that was of interest to John and to all those who are followers even now; for unless we remain faithful unto death, hell will follow us the same as though we had never been in Christ. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." (Rom. 8: 1.) "But he that believeth not is condemned already." (John 3: 18.)

The spirit of destruction represented by the pale horse, therefore, is the work of the dragon, "that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world." (Rev. 12: 9.) He has deceived the faithful through false prophets; he has deceived them that would have been faithful by giving them substitutes for the true faith; he has enticed and led astray through tempters such as were led by the beast nature in them to follow after the flesh instead of the Spirit. He planted the seeds of death and destruction in our mortal bodies: he has poisoned and polluted the truth and cast it down to the ground (Dan, 8: 12) and sown the elements of death in every institution that has ever been established for the upbuilding of the human race; but he will yet be taken and bound for a thousand years (Rev. 20: 1-3), and after being loosed for a little season (Rev. 20: 3, 7) will be cast into the lake that burns with fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever (Rev. 20: 10). This will be the destruction of death, the last enemy that is to be destroyed. Let us rejoice and be glad that the rider of the white horse and those that follow with him are still going forth conquering and to conquer.

In conclusion, we wish to make it clear that the four spirits that are represented by the four horses and their riders are still engaged in deadly combat, and that one or the other of these spirits prevail in the lives of each and every individual man and woman on earth to-day. If the spirit that rules your life is Christ, then you are at war with the other three. If you are a false prophet or a part of some false system that has been built upon the doctrines of the devil as taught by the false prophet, then you are at war, either consciously or unconsciously, against Christ; and since Christ will ultimately prevail against every enemy, you who have been seduced and led astray by these false doctrines, unless you come out of that condition, will have your part in the lake that burns with fire and brimstone when the false prophet is finally cast there. If you are led by the beastly desires and instincts of your nature instead of by the Spirit of Christ, then you are at war with Christ; and when the beast, with all his governments of earth and his dominion over the hearts and lives of men who have been and are drawn away and enticed through the beastly desires and appetites, is cast into the lake that burns with fire and brimstone, you will also have your part there, unless you crucify this old beastly nature and put on Christ and continue faithful unto death in his service. If you are engaged, either actively or passively, in destructive work against the principles of truth as made known in the word of God. whether you have been seduced by the false doctrines of the false prophet or have let your unbridled nature have its way in your life through the lusts thereof or through indifference, or from any other cause you are not building for Christ, then you are following the road of death and engaged in the work of destruction and are at war with Christ, and death and hell will be your portion when the dragon is finally cast into the lake that burns with fire and brimstone; for all these, the false prophet, the beast, and the dragon, with all their systems and their followers, will be taken by the rider of the white horse and shall all be cast into that take (Rev. 19: 20; 20: 10), for whosoever is not for Christ is against him. There is but the one safe way, and that is to be for Christ, Those who are for Christ know that they are for him when they walk by faith and not by sight. There is no other safe rule. When the word of God directs every step in your life, then you are walking by faith and on the safe side. There are many ways that seem right to a man, but the only absolutely safe rule to follow is that of letting the word of God direct your every step.

MAN CUTS HIS HAND! DIES OF BLOOD POISON

You see something of this kind in the papers every now and then. A neglected wound, blood poisoning sets in; then it is too late. We all neglect these seeming trivial hurts—will take a chance.

Carboil prevents blood poison. It draws out the inflammation and heals. And it stops the pain, too—almost as soon as applied.

A box of carboil should be kept handy for such emergencies as burns, cuts, bruises, and sores. It is the best treatment for boils.

Clip and mail this to Spurlock-Neal Company, Nashville, Tenn., for liberal sample. Your druggist guarantees and sells Carboil. A large box costs only 25 cents, and lasts a long time.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hasten; the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward. of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortime out of poultry.

Edifying as the Need May Be

Jesus Christ, the King.

When John the Baptist began preaching in the wilderness, he said: "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Hence the kingdom of heaven is essentially connected with the office and ministry of Jesus Christ. It is the system of divine government and grace through Jesus Christ. It is a kingdom because Christ is King, saved men and women are subjects, and God's will is law; it is of heaven because heaven is its origin; its nature partakes of the nature of heaven and heaven is its consummation. The Jews were familiar with the expression, and to them it meant that God was King, and it referred also to the reign of the Messiah which they were expecting.

If you will search your Encyclopedia Britannica, you will find that Peter the Great of Russia, in order to teach and uplift the Russian people, entered the army himself as a private soldier, worked for wages as a ship carpenter, lived among the workmen in a small two-roomed hut. He learned personally nearly all that he wanted to knowgunnery at Konigsberg, shipbuilding at Deptford, anatomy at Leyden, engraving at Amsterdam. There is still another example of a king leaving his palace and all the insignia of a king, his decorations and his magnificence, to go among his people, among the poor and sick, to learn their needs and give them aid, as was done at Messina after the earthquake. The king was just as really their king then as when he sat upon his throne; but he did not have the appearnace of a king, but the form and appearance of a common man, a helper, a doctor, a nurse. Albert, king of the Belgians, during the war did not sit upon his throne, but there was not a subject at home or in exile who did not consider him the noblest king alive. These historical examples help us to understand and appreciate Paul's matchless description of heaven's exiled King.

Paul says in Heb. 10: 12: "But he, when he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God." In anticipation of that time he said to the apostles in the commission: "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth." And the first time they stood up to preach, Peter said: "Let all the house of Israel therefore know assuredly, that God hath made him both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom ye crucified." His name then began its power, for it marks the time when he took his seat on his mediatorial throne and was bequeathed the scenter. The reign of Christ on earth began on the day of Pentecost. The significance and power of his name shall continue through all the centuries of the Christian dispensation in which we are now living until the time when the purposes of his reign have been accomplished and he hands over the kingdom to his Father. "For he must reign, till he hath put all his enemies under his feet." (1 Cor. 15: 25.) To ignore the name of Christ is to repudiate his mediatorship between God and man; to seek to pull the crown from his head, the scepter from his hand, and to dethrone him as the rightful ruler and lawgiver, priest and prophet of the world.

Everybody's Book.

The Bible is everybody's book, as no other book is or can be. Some books are written for the rich, some for the poor; some for the learned, some for the ignorant; some for the wise, others for the simple; some for little children, others for grown people; some are for people of one language, and some for those of another; some for people of one occupation, which have no interests to people who follow other pursuits. There are works on navigation, agriculture, mechanics, mineralogy, mining, astronomy, geology, biology, theology, finance, politics, archæology, etymology, ornithology, icthyology, and so on to the end of the chapter. Then there are works on mathematics, music, art, sculpture, architecture, painting, drawing, and every conceivable subject. All these run in special lines, cater to special tastes, and reach special classes.

The Bible touches every class. Translated into hundreds of languages, it meets the wants of people on every continent and every shore. The aged love it, the young delight in it, little children lisp its sacred lessons, and aged men and women murmur its words of promise with broken voices and tearful eyes. Men in the vigor of health rejoice in the words of heavenly grace; weary souls on beds of pain and sickness are comforted by its divine consolations. Thousands of years ago men found these words of God more precious than necessary food. Now, after centuries have gone by, they still remain the solace and the joy of trusting hearts. Savage nations find their best literature and instruction in this first book they learn to read; and the civilized and enlightened, those who lead the march of human progress and know the blessings of culture and refinement, prize this book above all other books the world has known. Everything about it bears the impress of a divine mind, revealing universal law and uni-

Not Enough to Be Respectable.

The New Testament teaches that merely respectable people may be esteemed, respected, admired, and even courted in this world, and yet they will be damned in the other. Dives, who awoke in the other world in torment, was very likely a respectable citizen in this world. He doubtless lived in the handsomest house in town and by his gracious hospitality enriched the circle of his friends. The priest and the Levite who saw a wounded man on the Jericho road and passed by on the other side were on their way to church. The Pharisee who said, "God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are," told the truth. He was not as many other men are. He was no extortioner, no adulterer. He attended divine services with amazing regularity and made his proper support to the religious institutions of his day. You will find a long, pious procession of such people on the pages of the Bible. They pass by with hands folded, praying and singing as they go; but they are going straight in the direction of the bottomless pit. After a while they will stand before God in the judgment, and, harking back to their respectable lives, they will say: "Lord, Lord, we have preached in thy name, and in thy name we have cast out devils; we come before thee bringing our good records with us." But the righteous Judge will frown upon them and say: "I never knew you. I never heard a prayer you said; you did not pray to me. I never heard a sermon you preached; you did not preach to me." No, they preached and prayed and did their works of charity and public service for their own satisfaction and for the impression it would create upon the community. They had no religion. They had respectability in the place of it.

Unmask!

I have never been to such a function, but I am told by those who have attended a mask ball that for the greater part of the time dancers wear their masks, and while wearing them they dance and laugh and flirt outrageously. But late in the evening the master of ceremonies cries "Unmask!" and then they all come off. If Jesus were here to-day, I believe he would say to a great many professing Christians: "Why feignest thou thyself to be another?" Don't wait for death to unmask you. Don't wait until you reach the border line between time and eternity. But unmask! Unmask! Tear away the gauze of selfcomplacency and respectability that beclouds your eyes and let the world see who you really are. It may embarrass you at first, but it will save you at the last. Are you sick and tired of pretense and hypocrisy? Do you not long for something truer and nobler and grander than merely make-believe? Would you not be wholesome and genuine and true? Are you not ready to say, with the great apostle Paul: "By the grace of God I am what I am?" Are you not ready to pray with David: "Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting?'

"Who is a Christian?" No. 1.

BY J. D. WALLING,

Under the above caption, A. McLean writes two articles in the Christian-Evangelist. His purpose evidently is to prove to his readers that one can be a Christian and go to heaven when he dies without being immersed. If this is true, the world should know it. But the Bible, and the Bible alone, is authority on "who is a Christian." Brother McLean is able to sustain his contention by this authority, all is well. In article No. 1 he starts off with a question and answer in the Millennial Harbinger, as follows:

Under date of July 8, 1837, a good woman in Luenburg wrote Alexander Campbell a letter in which she expressed her surprise at a statement from him in the Millennial Harbinger, published by Mr. Campbell, to the effect that he found Christians in all Protestant parties. She asked: "Does the name of Christ, or 'Christian,' belong to any but those who believe the gospel, repent, and are buried by baptism into the death of Christ?"

Mr. Campbell's answer is as follows: "In reply to this conscientious sister, I observe that if there be no Christians in the Protestant sects, there are certainly none among the Romanists, none among the Jews, Turks, Pagans; and therefore no Christians in the world except ourselves, or such of us as keep, or strive to keep, all the commandments of Jesus. Therefore, for many centuries there has been no church of Christ, no Christians in the world; and the promises of Messiah have failed, and the water of hell have prevailed against his church! This cannot be; and therefore there are Christians among the sects. But who is a Christian? I answer, every one that believes in his heart that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah, the Son of God, repents of his sins, and obeys him in all things according to his measure of knowledge of his will. A perfect man in Christ, or a perfect Christian, is one thing, and a 'babe in Christ,' a stripling in the faith, or an imperfect Christian, is another."

Then Mr. Campbell argues from this contrast, and concludes by saying:

But every one is wont to condemn others in that in which he is more intelligent than they; while, on the other hand, he is condemned for his pharisaism or his immodesty and rash judgment of others, by those that excel in the things in which he is deficient. I cannot, therefore, make any one duty the standard of Christian state or character, not even immersion into the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, and in my heart regard all that have been sprinkled in infancy, without their own knowledge and consent, as aliens from Christ and the well-grounded hope of heaven. 'Salvation was of the the well-grounded hope of heaven. 'Salvation was of the Jews,' acknowledged the Messiah; and yet he said of a foreigner, an alien from the commonwealth of Israel, a Syrophenician: 'I have not found so great faith, no, not

Following this, McLean goes on to say: "Should I find a pedobaptist more intelligent in the Christian Scriptures. more spiritual-minded, and more devoted to the Lord than a Baptist, or one immersed on a profession of the ancient faith, I could not hesitate a moment in giving the preference of my heart to him that leveth most." The most deplorable of all this is that God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit are all left out of it. What if the "conscientious sister's" faith does find no Christians in the "Protestant sects," and this does prove there are none "among the Romanists, none among the Jews, Turks, and Pagans," whose fault is it? When did God. Christ, or the Holy Spirit make the faith and practice of the Romanists, Jews, Turks, and Pagans the standard by which the world is to know who are Christians and who are not? Jesus said to the Jews: "Ye will not come to me, that ye may have life." (John 5: 40.) The Holy Spirit, speaking through Peter, said: "Of a truth 1 perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him." (Acts 10: 34, 35.)

God for four thousand years honored the limitations of man. When the world was in its infancy, the loving Father nursed it through the patriarchal age, then for fifteen hundred years he provided a schoolmaster till it should be able to "walk by faith." If men now fail or refuse to exercise that faith, whose fault is it? Not God's, surely. Jesus said: "I came that they may have life, and may have it abundantly." (John 10: 10.) But he said: "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.)

But suppose that "for many centuries there has been no church of Christ, no Christians in the world;" what has that got to do with the present question, "Who is a Christian?" All that have gone on before are in the hands of God, and nothing that man can say, believe, or do can change their condition. But Brother Campbell's premise is false, and, therefore, his conclusion is false. He says: "The promises concerning the everlasting kingdom of Messiah have failed, and the gates of hell have prevailed against his church! This cannot be; and therefore there are Christians among the sects." Christ did not promise that the gates of hell should not prevail against the church, but the gates of hell should not prevail against the matter under consideration-that is, the confession that Peter had made: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." This test was made. See Heb. 2: 14, 15; also, Rev. 1: 17, 18: "I am the first and the last, and the Living one; and I was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore, and I have the keys of death and of Hades." Should the church fail, as it did for centuries, the life principle is in the seed, and the seed sown can produce the fruit. But the seed must produce the fruit, if it is ever grown. Jesus said: "The seed is the word." We have not said that "there are no Christians among the sects;" but we do say that, if there are, they are Christians because they were made so by a faithful obedience to the truth. The Holy Spirit, speaking through the apostle Paul, said: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." (Gal. 6: 7.)

Brother Campbell says: "I cannot, therefore, make any one duty the standard of Christian state or character." But God has not left it to man, not even to Alexander Campbell, to "make any one duty the standard." Neither has he left it to man to limit his standard to one or any number of duties. God has fixed the standard and said: "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" If people would be content with the Lord's standard, find what it is, and do it, there would be no such questions as "who is a Christian?" To be sure, Christ said to a Syrophenician: "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." But when did he say it? Not till the centurion had given him evidence of that "great faith," or his faith had expressed itself in action. Read the record—Matt. 8: 5-14.

From the foregoing Brother McLean says: "Should I find a pedobaptist more intelligent in the Christian Scriptures, more spiritual-minded, and more devoted to the Lord than a Baptist, or one immersed on a profession of the ancient faith, I could not hesitate a moment in giving the preference of my heart to him that loveth most." To be sure, you could not. But what will Jesus say to each of them? "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments." (1 John 5: 3.) But McLean plugs his own gun when he says: "It is the image of Christ the Christian looks for and loves, and this does not consist in being exact in a few items, but in general devotion to the whole truth as far as known." Exactly so, and this much is known. "Jesus saith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to accomplish his work." (John 4: 34.) "I can of myself do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is righteous; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 5: 30.) "Except one be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5.)

But look at this: "The preachers of 'essentials,' as well as the preachers of 'nonessentials,' frequently err. The essentialist may disparage the heart, while the nonessentialist despises the institution. . . . I would not sell one of my eyes for all the gold on earth; yet I could live without it. There is no occasion, then, for making immersion, on a profession of faith, absolutely essential to a Christian -though it may be greatly essential to his sanctification and comfort," But, Brother McLean, there are no "nonessentials" in the gospel. Paul says the gospel is "the power of God unto salvation." (Rom. 1: 16.) There are no "nonessentials" in God's power. Therefore, Paul says: "For therein [in the gospel] is revealed the righteousness of God." (Rom. 1: 17.) There are no "nonessentials" in God's righteousness. David said: "For all thy commandments are righteousness." (Ps. 119: 172.) Baptism is a commandment of Christ. "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) But Jesus' command was to "make disciples." How make disciples? "Baptizing them." Then Jesus' command was to baptize the taught. Christians are, therefore, made by teaching, and baptizing the believers. Sprinkling and pouring are not baptism. Can one be a Christian and go to heaven when he dies in disobedience? Hear Paul: "When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Thess. 1: 7, 8.) Baptism is in the gospel as a command of God. But the Lord Jesus will take vengeance on those that obey not the gospel. Therefore, the Lord Jesus will take vengeance on the unimmersed. When things have become "nonessential," God has taken them away, as he did the law. Brother McLean needs his eyes, because there are lights and objects. He has a use for eyes. But if he were a fish in the Mammoth Cave, he would have no need for them, and would have none. Solomon said: "For the commandment is a lamp; and the law is light; and reproofs of instruction are the way of life." (Prov. 6: 23.) David said: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and light unto my path." (Ps. 119: 105.) Again: "The opening of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple." (Verse 130.) Again: "And all thy commandments are truth." (Verse 151.) Jesus said: "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 32.) But all God's "commandments are truth," and baptism is one of God's commandments. Therefore, by obedience to God's commandment to be baptized one is made free. But Jesus is the Savior. Brother McLean would better sell his eyes than depart from the truth. When he leaves the word of God, he is going it blind.

The Need of More Bible Schools. No. 2.

BY G. DALLAS SMITH.

Continuing from a recent article, let me emphasize the fact that the work of teaching the Bible is not in the hands of a few men and women who may be teaching in Bible colleges. While theirs is an important work, and I bid them Godspeed and wish their number might be greatly increased, still, as has been pointed out, such colleges can never meet the crying demands of the day. The great mass of Christians, old and young, who need the influence of Bible teaching, cannot attend these Bible colleges, of course. Some other means of reaching the masses must, therefore, be devised.

But with every congregation turned into a Bible school, with every congregation in the land faithfully teaching the Bible, our purpose would be, in a large measure, accomplished. One of the God-given duties of every congregation is to teach the Bible to all, both young and old—to saints and to sinners. But many of our congregations are asleep on this subject. They seem to have but little conception of their duty at this point. Brother, will you not get busy and see what can be done in your congregation to improve and make more effective the teaching service? Remember, it is God's means of lifting up Christ before the world; it is God's means of drawing people to Christ that they may be saved. Teaching the Bible is, therefore, the greatest work in all the world to-day. Why do we take such little interest in it?

"But we have our Sunday school, or Bible school, every Sunday morning," says one. Well, every legitimate effort to teach the Bible, whether on Sunday or some other day of the week, should be encouraged, of course. And whether we call it a "Sunday school," a "Bible school," or simply "Bible study," as long as the congregation is conducting the work under the direction of the elders of the congregation, no one should hinder such a work. If any one should object to the name "Sunday school," I would not contend with him for a minute (although it would be a Sunday school if taught on Sunday, of course). But should any one object to the congregation teaching the Bible to all, both young and old, on Sunday or any other day in the week. I am ready to contend at this point; for the Bible clearly teaches that every Christian should become a teacher in course of time. There may be some good objections to what is commonly called the "modern Sunday school;" but there can be no vital or reasonable objection urged against teaching the Bible to all people, old and young, saints and sinners, on Sunday or any other day of the week. And let us remember that this work of teaching the Bible is not all in the hands of the preachers. It is the work of the church-of every member of the church. Are you doing your part, my brother, my sister?

But the "Sunday school," or the Sunday-morning "Bible school," as usually conducted, does not accomplish what is needed, by any means. There are several reasons for this. First, but little interest is taken in the work by the members in general. Usually a few men and women and a few children compose the school, while the great majority of the members remain at home. Now, as a matter of fact, every member of the church should be interested in this Bible study; for frequently the members need it as badly as the children do. In the second place, not enough time is given either to the preparation of the lessons or to the recitations. Not infrequently the teacher and pupils come to the class without any preparation-a thing they would never think of doing in literary schools. And in the classes where the lessons have been prepared, usually so little time is given to the recitation that very little can be accomplished. In the third place, the International Sunday-school Lesson plan, which is generally used in the Sunday-morning classes, is not, in my judgment, conducive to the best work in Bible study. It is a poor system, if worthy to be called a "system" at all, and would not be tolerated in our literary schools for a moment. I intend no criticism of those why may prepare the comments on these lessons, of course. It is the plan of the lessons-the unsystematic plan, which we are, by common consent, forced to follow-that I criticize. I have thought for some years, and I still think, that our brethren should get together and bring out some courses of study that would enable us to teach the Bible with more satisfactory results. But until this is done, if ever, by all means have your Sunday-morning Bible study, using the International Lesson helps, or any others you may choose; for a Bible school with such helps is a thousand times better than no Bible study.

Every congregation in the land might meet one night in the week and spend from one to two hours in learning and teaching the Bible. Such a Bible class might take the place of the midweek prayer meeting, for which there is no specific requirement, and which usually amounts to but little. And it is safe to say that almost any congregation could increase their Bible knowledge one hundred per cent in one year by meeting weekly and following some systematic plan of Bible study. Brother, will you not undertake to work up such a class in your congregation? Eternity alone can reveal the good that you may accomplish in this way, Promises and Faith.

BY JULIA ERLE M'RAE.

"He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust. Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler. Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day; nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday. A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee. Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see the reward of the wicked. Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation; there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling. For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone. Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder: the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet. Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: I will set him on high, because he hath known my name. He shall call upon me, and I will answer him: I will be with him in trouble: I will deliver him, and honor him. With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation." (Ps. 91.)

These beautiful promises are for the security of the godly, and it is with such promises that our spiritual bodies are nourished. As our daily trials and temptations greet us, we must stop and think of Christ's suffering on this earth. Think, too, of the wonderful love for us that prompted him in giving his life for us. Can we, then, as children of God, fail to stand the test-fail to know that each trial is only a step upon the ladder of knowledge and wisdom that we must gain in order to become strong in his service? Can we not be faithful and true, even as Christ was faithful and true? Indeed, we can, if we only possess that love and that faith which, when combined, win victory. Then with simplicity let us humble ourselves to God, who in his wisdom and justice will be a light to our pathway and a comforter in times of trials and misfortunes.

He that dwelleth in God's teachings shall abide with God, and God shall watch over him and protect him from the snare of the fowler and from the pestilence. Just stop and think how perfectly secure one is when he trusts in and abides by the word of Jehovah! He that maketh the Lord, the most High, his habitation, shall not be afraid of the enemies by night nor by day. Even though many enemies try to crush him to earth and trample upon him, the promise is, they shall not come nigh thee; no evil shall befall thee, because God has given his angels charge over thee. What a blessed thought this is! What a strong link in the chain of wonderful promises! How can one of God's children refuse to believe and know these promises are true? Is it not because our faith and trust in God are weak and not near the mark of perfection?

God will never leave us nor forsake us if we abide in his word. He gives us these promises to make us stronger, and we should have such implicit faith in him that to meditate upon them would strengthen our poor wearied souls. We are too weak to grasp the depth of its meaning at once, but step by step do we gain the knowledge and wisdom of God, our Father.

In our daily life we meet many trials and some very sad misfortunes; but if we will believe that God is with us, we may gain the victory and be stronger for thus trusting in him. Christ is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. How many have thoughts about this when overcome with trouble? To believe and feel his presence in our hours of trial is to partake of his wonderful blessings. He is ever willing and ready to be a loving Father, if we but give heed to his call.

May we understand and know that each cross we are called upon to bear is only to strengthen us and draw us closer to him. May God in his infinite wisdom bless and direct our lives, so that we may at the end of our journey on earth gain an entrance to that beautiful home on high, where the Prince of Peace reigns supreme, where home sorrows are never known.

A Question to the Point.

BY JAMES B. REDD.

Uncle Anderson Randolph, an old colored man, eighty-seven years old, sat in his daughter's shanty among the cedar glades of Middle Tennessee, almost helpless, for his hands were paralyzed, and his daughter, who took in washing, led him from his bed to his chair. I chanced to stop there one day and leave a little bundle of laundry, and a few days later called for it. The old darky requested me to sit down and talk for a few minutes, and the following conversation took place:

"I doan' know who yo' is, boss, an' I ain't got no way findin' out but to ask you. But I wants to know, is you made yo' peace with yo' God?"

I replied that I had.

"Thank the good Lawd, I'se so glad yo' have. Haw! haw! Would you mind readin' me a chapter from my New Testament?"

"I'll be glad to."

"Bettie, get me my Book. I'se gwine have this white folks read for me."

From the mantle shelf she took down an old, worn-out, large-type New Testament and unwrapped from around it a large, red handkerchief that had been used to keep from losing the leaves, which were badly worn and loose. I read the desired chapter by supplying the words that were gone. He thanked me very kindly for the favor that I had granted.

"Is yo' made yo' peace with yo' God?" is still ringing in my ears.

Baptists Are Raising Six Millions of Dollars.

In some respects it is a critical time with the $6,000,000 campaign. It is usually easy to get the early subscriptions in any enterprise. The largest subscriptions often come first. The bringing up the last ten per cent is often the hardest work. Everybody expects this $6,000,000 to be raised. Some people have felt so sure of it that they have failed to contribute. We expect it to be raised; but we know that its success depends on many contributions. There must be a determined effort in all States, and the $6.000,000 ought to be completed this week and next. President Ayer tells us that there are churches which have as yet done very little. An effort should be made everywhere to reach them. No one expects that in a campaign of this kind every church or every Baptist will do his exact share. Some men and some churches must do a great deal more than their share, or the campaign fails. This is true in all our church work. But no church ought to do less than its apportionment, since this was designed as a minimum, and would alone provide less than half the $6,000,-000. Hence, if any church has not raised its apportionment, as made by its State or associational committee, it ought to devote next Sunday to an effort to secure, at least, this. Then, to complete the half million which was lacking at the time of the Denver convention, we must get money from many quarters: from many churches which long ago "went over the top;" from individuals who feel that the completion of the $6,000,000 is so important that they are willing to make additional sacrifices-feel that it is a privilege to help in this greatest financial campaign the Baptists have ever begun. There are many who intend to give who put it off till "the last day, in the afternoon," which makes a great deal more work for somebody. Cannot every church make an effort next Sunday to help end this deficiency?-Journal and Messenger.

A young relief worker, recently an aviator in the army, writes from Urfa:

We have now from five to six hundred orphans here. O, the tragedy that is written on all their faces! Here is a boy whose father's throat was cut before his very eyes; here, another that saw his father hanged; here, one whose father was butchered at the slaughterhouse along with the goats and sheep. Over there is a young girl that came in from the plains, having just run away from the Arabs. She is in rags and her body worn and spoiled from the abuse she has received. Here is a girl, the daughter of one of the richest Armenians in Urfa, whose father has been killed along with the rest of the family. She seeks refuge here, and now she is being trained into a waitress for our table. The other night, in making the rounds, we came across a huddled heap in one corner of the yard. moved it with my foot at first, then stooped down to pick it up, and found a little girl with her wee small brother lying there—it was their bed for the night. We brought them in, and when Miss Holmes mothered them they dropped off to sleep, placing all trust in the strange, kind hand that petted them so gently.

A Visit to Hopkinsville, Ky.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The writer assisted the church of Christ worshiping on Cleveland Avenue, in West Hopkinsville, in a meeting during the first part of July. Although the weather was extremely warm, the attendance was fairly good, and there were ten additions to the congregation while I was there, two more taking their stand on the truth the following Sunday after I left. Brother J. H. Hines labors with this congregation; and he is a young man full of zeal, energy, and devotion to the cause of Christ. He is in favor with not only the church with which he labors, but the entire community. He is prudent, a good speaker, a diligent student, and is not afraid to preach what he believes. During his short tenure over forty have been added to the congregation and a splendidly located lot procured at a cost of fourteen hundred dollars, on which, we hope, a suitable house will be erected this fall. Several thousand dollars has been pledged for that purpose, and there is no reason why it should not be pushed to completion.

Hopkinsville is a town of at least twelve thousand population, situated in one of the finest farming sections in the great State of Kentucky, and it was here that "Uncle Minor" (V. M. Metcalfe), one of God's noble men, lived and reared his family. He traveled much; and being a great lover of children, he devoted much time to their instruction. They all loved him and called him "Uncle Minor." Brother Metcalfe, with a few others, started the work on Cleveland Avenue-that is, organized a congregation and built a small house. Really, Sister Hillie, Brother Metcalfe's only daughter, was faithfully at work teaching children in her home before the congregation started. Sister Hillie and two of her brothers, John and Tom Metcalfe, are members of this congregation, striving with other faithful men and women to carry on the work begun by their noble father.

I shall always cherish the memory of "Uncle Minor." He was a friend to me at a time that I needed a friend Indeed. It was he who spoke the last words over the remains of one of my sisters and those of my sainted mother. Under his own kindly roof and in his own tender and sympathetic manner he comforted us regarding our sister, and in the very house where I held this meeting he preached my mother's funeral, and I shall never forget his words of tenderness as he spoke of the long life of devotion and service my mother gave to her Lord. The very spot seemed sacred as I stood night after night telling the old story she so dearly loved. Twenty-six long years have rolled into the dead past since that cold, wintry day, and yet it all seemed but a day; for I could almost see the casket in which her weary and aged form lay, and hear the splendid tribute to her life and character as it fell from the lips of "Uncle Minor." He knew her, and knew how she had served the Master; hence, he could speak with the greatest confidence.

I went out to the silent city, the city of the dead, where the remains of my mother and sister repose, and stood by the sacred mounds. While I knew that neither of them were there, only the houses in which they had lived, now crumbled into dust, still my soul was swept with emotions known only to those of like experience. Had I possessed the power, no doubt they would have been called back to life; but it would have been selfish to have disturbed those at rest. But, as it was, a lonely and almost desolate feeling crept over me when this thought came to me: "You are the only one left—gone, all gone—and how soon you may go, God alone knows." I turned away from that sacred spot determined by the grace of God to go where I believe with all my heart they have gone.

My mother knew the word of God as few women have ever known it, and she was not afraid to contend for it. I have tried to emulate her example, and there are those who wish to criticize me for contending for God's truth against some in and out of the church. Do so to your heart's content, but rest assured that none of such things move me.

Brother T. D. Moore lives at Hopkinsville, and, in company with Brethren Hines and Pitts, I went to see him at his home. Brother Moore for years was one of the ablest preachers in Southern Kentucky. He preached for old Concord, nine miles west of Hopkinsville, where my mother lived, and she was devoted to him. I have held meetings with Brother Moore years ago, and always found him to be a companionable yokefellow. I was truly glad to see him, and we had a pleasant hour together. Owing to the condition of his health, he has not preached for some time.

My home was with Brother Hines, and he, with his faithful wife, treated me royally. They have three children (a rich preacher), and the oldest, John Pepper, is a born diplomat. He is only five, but from his diplomacy you would take him to be much older. But the trouble with John is, he can work his diplomatic schemes on only one of the heads of the department—viz., John, Sr. As to the other member of the firm, Sister Hines, John Pepper cannot get by. She calls his hand every pop, and has a way of turning the trick that John does not relish. When John desires to put one over dad, he uses his vocal cords, and he knows exactly what kind of a tune to play. But with it all, John Pepper is a fine boy and bids fair to make a good man.

I have promised to return to Hopkinsville for a meeting next year, the Lord willing.

Our Christian Schools.

BY T. M. CARNEY.

By the above term I mean schools in which one may not only get a well-rounded literary education, but schools in which the Bible also is taught and used as an essential textbook for all those who will accept it as such.

The time has arrived for God's people to express their appreciation of such schools. On every hand new theories are springing into action—theories contrary to every Bible principle, and, therefore, destined to turn mankind from the true, simple, and living way. I say the time has arrived for us to express our appreciation of the ame, and express it as never before. Why? The answer is that we were never so prosperous as now. My brother, you can never estimate the good to be accomplished by contributing liberally of your means to help maintain schools in which the Bible is taught as a textbook.

If men who were so gifted in speech and writings as David Lipscomb, Alexander Campbell, and others, could give their all to assist in maintaining schools wherein the word of God was taught, do you not think it our duty to continue the great work begun by them? Brother Lipscomb gave his tongue, pen, and all his earthly possessions to this worthy cause of Christian education. Brethren Freed and Hardeman, of Henderson, Tenn., have given, and are still giving, the strength of their youthful and useful manhood to the cause of Christian education. Brother Lipscomb has gone to his reward, and the last-named brethren will eventually do likewise. Brethren, the question is: "Shall we keep faith" with such noble men of God? Every Christian in all the land should "see to it" that true Christian education shall not wane for lack of a material support. If we suffer such to happen, something evil and destructive will be established and maintained in its stead.

My brother, will you think on and pray over this important matter, and then express your convictions and perform your duty in regard to same? If every member who is able will do this, Christian education shall never stand in the background, and the glorious banner of our Lord and Savior will ever stand in the forefront to lead the legions of earth on to higher and holier ground.

$2.06 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself. The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

BY J. C. M'Q.

The word of God does not warrant the conclusion that Christ at his second coming will resurrect only a part of the human family at the "rapture;" that the Holy Spirit and the church shall be taken away and that there shall be seven years of tribulation, in which some will be saved; and that then Jesus will begin a thousand-years' reign, which is to result in the salvation of the Jews and most of the world, after the church has made a failure in its efforts for the conversion of the world. This human scheme of redemption makes no provision for Christ's second ascension after his thousand-years' reign.

On the contrary, the Bible teaches conclusively that God has appointed a day in which he will judge the world. At this time the mediatorial reign of Christ ceases and human probation is at an end. This is the general judgment, which occurs after all efforts for the salvation of man have been brought to an end. This is clearly taught in the scriptures here presented. Acts 10: 42 reads: "And he charged us to preach unto the people, and to testify that this is he who is ordained of God to be the Judge of the living and the dead." This shows that it is Christ who is to judge the living and the dead. We find the same thought contained in 2 Tim. 4: 1: "I charge thee in the sight of God, and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the living and the dead, and by his appearing and his kingdom." This shows that Christ will judge the living and the dead, by which is meant the entire human family, when he appears the second time. Acts 17: 31 reads: "Inasmuch as he hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by the man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." These scriptures show beyond all doubt that the human family is not to be judged in parcels and resurrected in parcels, but that all, both living and dead, shall be judged upon a day appointed by Jehovah. We find the same thought in 1 Cor. 15: 23, 24: "But each in his own order: Christ the first fruits; then they that are Christ's, at his coming. Then cometh the end, when he shall deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have abolished all rule and all authority and power." Thus it is seen that when Christ comes the second time, instead of continuing his mediatorial reign for a thousand years, he will deliver the kingdom to the Father, having abolished all rule and all authority and power. And this is the meaning, and with it accords perfectly the teaching of 1 Thess. 4: 15, 17: "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we that are alive, that are left unto the coming of the Lord, shall in no wise precede them that are fallen asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we that are alive, that are left, shall together with them be caught up in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." These scriptures clearly teach that the judgment is not in piecemeals, and that the resurrection of both the good and bad also is not at different times, 2 Cor. 5: 10 also affirms the universal judgment of both good and bad, which occurs at Christ's second advent, "For we must all be made manifest before the judgment seat of Christ; that each one may receive the things done in the body, according to what he hath done, whether it be good or bad." In writing to the Philippians, Paul says: "For our citizenship is in heaven; whence also we wait for a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of his glory, according to the working whereby he is able to subject all things unto himself." (Phil. 3: 20, 21.) Christ's second coming is synchronous with the resurrection and the glorification of the body. This is the plain teaching of Paul, as is evidenced by 1 Cor, 15: 51, 52: "Behold, I tell you a mystery: We all shall not sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." John 5: 28, 29 teaches a general resurrection and judgment: "Marvel not at this: for the hour cometh, in which all that are in the tombs shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of judgment." This teaches that all who are in their tombs shall hear his voice and come forth-not that only the good shall come forth at Christ's second coming, and then one thousand years later the wicked shall be resurrected. The twentyfifth chapter of Matthew teaches that, at the judgment, before Christ "shall be gathered all the nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as the shepherd separateth the sheep from the goats "-not that the separation had occurred a thousand years before that time.

"POSTPONEMENT THEORY."

The "postponement theory" originated with man, not with Jehovah. There is nothing in all the teaching of the Bible that gives the least encouragement to the view that Christ came to restore an earthly kingdom to Israel, nor does the Bible warrant the view that because Israel rejected him the restored earthly kingdom was held in abeyance. Every principle and every doctrine enunciated by the Lord Jesus Christ discourages such a view. He tells us in John 10: 17, 18: "Therefore doth the Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I may take it again. No one taketh it away from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment received I from my Father." Thus it is clear that Christ came to lay down his life and to take it again. It was necessary for him to be made perfect through suffering before he enjoyed his exaltation to the throne. He also taught his subjects to humble themselves in order that they might be exalted. That it was the Father's will for him to die, and that he was conceived of the Holy Spirit and born of the Virgin Mary in order to be the Redeemer of mankind through his death, is clear from the teaching of God's holy word, "But behold him who hath been made a little lower than the angels, even Jesus, because of the suffering of death crowned with glory and honor, that by the grace of God he should taste of death for every man." (Heb. 2: 9.) Again, it is plainly declared: "For the Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost." (Luke 19: 10.) Instead of seeking to restore to Israel an earthly kingdom in which he should rule with a rod of iron, he suffered and died for us. The Holy Spirit declares: "Because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example, that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously: who his own self bare our sins in his body upon the tree, that we, having died unto sins, might live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed." (1 Pet. 2: 21-24.) Also, John the Baptist, forerunner of Christ, did his work perfectly and completely in preparing the people for the coming kingdom of Christ, Matthew (3: 1) announces that this kingdom "is at hand." Also, Mark (1: 14, 15) tells us that Jesus came preaching that "the kingdom of God is at hand," Also, Luke (3: 3) says that John "came into all the region round about the Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance unto remission of sins." John came to call the people to repentance, and not to teach them that Christ had come to restore an earthly kingdom to Israel. I repeat that John did perfectly his work in preparing the kingdom for Christ and that the New Testament nowhere intimates that the kingdom was postponed. It is, indeed, absurd to suppose that the Jews would reject Christ when he had come to do the very thing that they wanted him to do and were expecting him to do; and yet this is the absurd view that Blackstone and all the advocates of the "postponement theory" uphold.

Premillennialists and Adventists should see the absurdity of claiming that "at hand" in the days of John the Baptist does not mean to occur immediately, but may extend over two thousand years and even more, and then contend that the same "at hand" in the Epistles means to occur immediately. They should interpret "at hand" literally and take its common acceptation when there is nothing in the word of God to forbid; but, in order to uphold the "postponement theory," they abandon a literal interpretation and make it mean far in the future, thus destroying and rendering senseless practically all the teaching in the word of God upon Christ's mission to the world and the kingdom of God.

It is distressing to discover what a hold the theories of men have upon some people. The theory that takes Christ off of the throne where he is now seated, at the right hand of God, being sovereign over all, and brings him down to Jerusalem and seats him on the literal throne of David to rule over the Jews in a body of flesh and bones, is, indeed, humiliating. It is also very discouraging to think that some men by their theories will change the character of the kingdom, take the church and the Holy Spirit out of the world, and make it necessary for us to have new laws in order to govern the people and new conditions of salvation for the thousand-years' reign of Christ. This explains why Blackstone says on page 134 of 'Jesus is Coming:" "But we have no evidence that the church is the only agent, and it is quite probable that she is not, for we read of another agent in Rev. 14: 6." The angel here referred to had the gospel preached by Paul and the word of God, which is everlasting, which lives and abides forever. May God give us all wisdom to discern and know the truth and to reject the errors promulgated by men.

The Spirit of Christ.

[I republish Chapter XIII. from "Salvation from Sin," by D. Lipscomb. As the chapter is lengthy, I reproduce it in three articles. It is especially needed just now, as there are many who think and teach that a deep spirituality is consistent with a spirit that is prone to discount the importance of doing just what God has said do. As I view the matter, the most spiritual-minded people are those who adhere strictly to the keeping of the commands of Christ. Brother Lipscomb has discussed this subject in a most thorough and convincing manner, and, believing that its publication will accomplish great good at this time, I am cheerfully giving it to our readers.—J. C. McQ.]

"The sweet reasonableness and righteousness, the charity of the gospel, summed up in the single phrase, 'the Spirit of Christ,' is the true orthodoxy of Christianity." This sentence I copy from an article intended to deprecate what the writer denominates the narrowness and sectarianism of those who insist on a rigid adherence to the teachings and a strict construction of the precepts and examples of the Scriptures. It is intended to indicate that the Spirit of Christ is tolerant of variations from his law and does not require rigid obedience to law; that just so there is a mild, pleasant, amiable temper, somewhat religious, even though the laws of God are not strictly obeyed, Christ approves. Now, is there any foundation in the life, the teachings, or the examples of Christ to justify such a conclusion? I fully agree that if we act toward God and man according to the Spirit of Christ, he is pleased with us and our salvation is made sure. If we do not act according to his Spirit, we are none of his.

CHRIST'S SPIRIT MANIFESTED IN HIS TEACHINGS AND LIFE.

We can learn the Spirit of Christ only as it is manifested in the life and teachings of Christ. Has he in his life and teachings indicated that an amiable spirit that looks with favor or excuse upon departures from his law and his examples is acceptable or will be tolerated? The prophecy of Moses, his type as lawgiver, was: "Every soul that shall not hearken to that prophet, shall be utterly destroyed from among the people." (Acts 3: 23.) The forerunner said of him: "Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly cleanse his thrashing floor; and he will gather his wheat into the garner, but the chaff he will burn up with unquenchable fire." (Matt. 3: 12.) He came to fulfill the law. His first work was to purge out every human addition to the law, to burn up all that was not of God with unquenchable fire. It would be difficult to conceive of an expression indicating greater tolerance of all additions to the word of God. He began his ministry by walking sixty-five miles to be baptized; and when the forerunner, with conscious inferiority, objected to baptizing him, he said: "Suffer it now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness" (Matt. 3: 15)-do the whole will of God. His second recorded expression is, "It is written" (Matt. 4: 4), and an appeal to it as his only support. The first sentence of his teaching was, "Blessed are the poor in spirit" (Matt. 5: 3)-those who have no way or spiritual resources of their own, but are willing to receive help of God upon God's own terms. "Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets that were before you." (Verses 11, 12.) Much of the Sermon on the Mount is taken up with purging out from the law of God the human additions to the law and restoring the law to its rigid purity as it came from God, that he might fulfill God's law, unadulterated, unmixed with human additions. "Ye have heard that it was said to them of old time, Thou shalt not: . . . but I say unto you" (verses 21, 22), changing to the pure and perfect will of God. He closes it by saying: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord [that is, worships me as Lord, Lord], shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy by thy name, and by thy name cast out demons, and by thy name do many mighty works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." (Matt. 7: 21-23.) Here are men full of religious zeal, so full of his Spirit, they think, that they can work miracles in his name, prophesy, cast out demons in his name; and yet he pronounces them workers of iniquity, and says that he will reject them in the last day. This ought to be a warning that no amount or degree of religious zeal, no amount of service or devotion, no amount of religious feeling, that neglects the will of God, is looked upon with the least allowance by the Son of God. This sermon is closed with the warning that he spoke as one having authority, and not as the scribes, which indicates that what he commands must be accepted because he commands it, and that the service depends upon his authority for its virtue and efficacy. No man can change or modify his commands without attacking the authority of Jesus the Christ. His commands stand by his authority. "One jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass away from the law, till all things be accomplished." (Matt. 5: 18.) Christ would be the last being in the universe to encourage or tolerate departures from the strict law of God. He declared to his disciples that it was his meat and drink to do the will of his Father, that he remained one with his Father and in the love of his Father by keeping his Father's commandments, and admonished them to remain in his love by keeping his commandments.

Jesus said to the Pharisees and scribes, "In vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men" (Matt. 15: 9) -that is, the observing of a commandment or expediency of man in the worship of God renders the whole worship vain. God refuses to accept worship from one who introduces the precepts of men among the appointments of God. He then presents as a sin as simple and harmless a practice as washing the hands before eating when done as an act of worship, and declares that they who do such things "are blind guides. And if the blind guide the blind, both shall fall into a pit," (Matt. 15: 14.) He says of these: "Every plant which my Heavenly Father planted not, shall be rooted up." (Verse 13.) He denounces as hypocrites those who profess to follow him, yet by human traditions and experiences make vain the commandments of God, who set them aside or substitute for them or dovetail into his service human inventions or devices, even though they be the traditions handed down from the fathers. Now, if as simple and harmless-nay, commendable-a practice as washing the hands becomes a sin and vitiates the whole service when done as an act of worship without divine sanction, what practice not ordained of God can be added that will not vitiate the service and bring condemnation on those doing it? Christ not only shows thus that any worship vitiated by the admixture of human inventions, traditions, and experiences, is offensive to God, but he distinctly declares: "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may be with you forever. . . . He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself unto him. . . . If a man love me, he will keep my word: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. He that loveth me not keepeth not my words: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's who sent me. . . . That the world may know that I love the Father, and as the Father gave me commandment, even so I do." (John 14: 15-31.) "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." (John 15: 10.) "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever ye will, and it shall be done unto you." (Verse 7.) "Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you." (Verse 14.) Every relationship connecting us to God, every blessing that comes from God, and the love of God itself, depends upon our rigidly, at whatever cost, casting out from our service everything not commanded by God, and warning others to do the same, else all our service to God is vitiated and he refuses to recognize us as his friends. "This is the love of God, that ye keep his commandments." (1 John 5: 3.) Love to God cannot be manifested, does not exist, save in obedience to him. He refuses to recognize any man as loving him, pronounces his profession of love hypocrisy, who does not rigidly put from him every act of worship and service not ordained by God. He who adds to or changes the divine order is classed as an enemy of God.

The apostles follow up this thought with the same teaching. Paul says: "If any man thinketh himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him take knowledge of the things which I write unto you, that they are the commandments of the Lord." (1 Cor. 14: 37.) To acknowledge this is to obey the things written by Paul as the commandments of God. Obedience to the commandments of God stood above all manifestation of spiritual or prophetic power as showing that the man was of God. James said: "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is become guilty of all." (James 2: 10.) "Receive with meekness the implanted word, which is able to save your souls. But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only. deluding your own selves." (James 1: 21, 22.) Peter said: "Ye have purified your souls in your obedience to the truth." (1 Pet. 1: 22.) John said: "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light [do the commandments of God as Christ did them], . . . the blood of Jesus his Son cleanseth from all sin." (1 John 1: 7.) Not if we are religious, kind, friendly, and fraternal; but if we keep his commandments as Jesus kept them, without a single addition or subtraction, then, and only then, does the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanse our souls from sin. When we turn from the blood-sealed commandments of God, we turn from the blood itself. Revelation closes with the solemn, awful warning: "I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto them [the things written in this book], God shall add unto him the plagues which are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part from the tree of life, and out of the holy city, which are written in this book." (Rev. 22: 18, 19.) It is a slander, a gross slander, upon the Son of God, upon the Holy Spirit, upon the word of God, to intimate that they or any one of them manifest a spirit that looks with favor or allowance upon any degree of amiability, zeal, or religious devotion that sets aside the word of God or brings human inventions into the service of God. The whole Bible, the life of Jesus Christ, the teachings of the Spirit, the lives of the holy apostles, all declare with one voice that implicit obedience to the divine word and order, rigidly excluding all traditions and devices and inventions of men, alone can secure God's blessings. It is infidelity to teach that men can turn from the blood-sealed appointments of God, can neglect or turn from his commandments, and accept any inventions or devices of men in lieu of obedience to divine law, no matter how much they may cry: "Lord, Lord." It is a glaring misrepresentation of the spirit of Christ to say that any one can turn from a rigid and exclusive adherence to the commands of God and still possess his spirit. The spirit of Christ is by preëminence the spirit of faithful, rigid, zealous, exclusive obedience to God in all of his appointments, and the equally rigid exclusion of everything not commanded by him.

The great question of accepting or rejecting God and of God's accepting or rejecting us is involved in this point. He who rigidly and exclusively walks in the appointments of God, accepts him; he who walks in other paths, adds to or takes from his commandments, rejects him. He who consciously rejects or modifies one point or adds one point to God's law is guilty of all. We ought to see and act on the issue involved in this point. The position is ridiculed as legalism, but it is only infidelity lurking in the heart that ridicules a faithful, rigid, exclusive walk in the blood-sealed appointments of God. The spirit of Christ is by preëminence the spirit of a zealous regard for and obedience to the commands of God, and an equally zealous purging out, rooting up, every plant not planted by God.

Christ said: "I am come down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 6: 38.) "I can of myself do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is righteous; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 5: 30.) "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to accomplish his work." (John 4: 34.) These declarations clearly show that the spirit of Jesus is to do just what God willed and commanded. He came to earth by his life to show exactly what a human life conformed perfectly to the will of God would be, and to encourage others by his example to do that will with a perfect assurance that it would bring happiness in both this world and in that which is to come. The very mission of Jesus precludes the idea that he possessed a spirit that could in any manner tolerate under any pretext a setting aside the strict commands of God. He recognized that God, his Father, was a jealous God and did not tolerate any interference with his law or modification of his appointments. Jesus watched over and guarded the law and appointments with the same jealousy that God himself did. He was jealous of his Father's law and of his Father's honor. His Father's will was his will. "My meat [the very staple of my life, without which I could not exist] is to do the will of him that sent me." It is a gross perversion and misrepresentation of the spirit of Christ to intimate that he could look with the least shadow of allowance upon the changing of the laws and appointments of God.

To give his very best to God would save many a young man from the worst pitfalls that entrap him. It is because he gives the second best of his love, his strength, his ambition, to spiritual things, and keeps his best energies for the rest of life, that the average Christian is such a weak specimen. As George Meredith expresses it: "The reason so many fall from God is that they cling to him with their weakness, and not with their strength."—Selected.

God's Will on Giving.

BY E. A. E.

How Much Should One Give?

Every one should give "according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver." (2 Cor. 9: 7.) From Deut. 15: 7-11 we learn what is meant by "grudgingly;" the heart is not to be hardened against the poor, the eye is not to be evil, there must be no grief over that which is given, but the hand must be opened freely to the needy. The gift must be cheerfully offered. Every one, then, must give cheerfully according to ability. The offering is accepted by the Lord according to that which one has, and not according to that which one does not have. One who in poverty gives little cheerfully is as liberal as one who gives much out of abundance. The widow who cast into the treasury her two mites, that being "all that she had," cast in more than the rich, who "cast in of their superfluity." (Mark 12: 42-44.) Giving must be according to the need. Great need requires great giving, even to the selling of possessions.

LENDING TO THE LORD.

He that has pity upon the poor and gives to the poor lends to and honors Jehovah. (See Prov. 14: 14, 31: 19: 17; 28: 27.) This is one way of honoring Jehovah with one's substance and the first fruits of all one's increase. (Prov. 3: 9.) Since in the last few years, in response to the call of the government, many church members with others have invested in war savings stamps and Liberty bonds and have contributed to the Y. M. C. A. and the Red Cross, they should the more bountifully and regularly and gladly respond to God's call to contribute in every way to his cause. Christians are commanded to render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's-to pay tribute, custom. taxes, and all that the government exacts of them, for the future use of which God does not hold them responsible; but they are commanded also to render unto God the things which are God's. God must be obeyed in each case. What is God's must be given to him. When God calls for a loan or a gift, it must be forthcoming. Different religious denominations are raising millions upon top of millions to further their purposes. What should the church of Christ, simply as such, do? Should it be put to shame?

Jehovah will repay the giver. (Prov. 19; 17; 28; 27.) In this way our bread is cast upon the waters. (Eccles. 11: 1.) This is a very safe investment—safer and far more extensive in rewards than government investments. This is laying up "treasures in heaven." The interest is paid abundantly and regularly day by day in this life, and the principal will be returned in the end in the incorruptible inheritance of eternal life.

THE TRUE MOTIVE OF GIVING.

The motive for giving and the purpose to be accomplished by it are clearly set forth in the Bible: "not grudgingly, or of necessity;" not with a blast of trumpets and to receive glory of men (Matt. 6: 2)—for "if I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, . . . but have not love, it profiteth me nothing;" but they are to feed and clothe and to minister unto Jesus, to give to the support and spread of the gospel, to honor God, to give him his own, to lay up "treasures in heaven," to be "rich in good works," to be "rich toward God," to be saved.

EXAMPLES OF SUPPORTING PREACHERS.

The Philippians showed great grace or liberality in sustaining Paul as a preacher (1) in their "fellowship in furtherance of the gospel from the first day [of their existence as Christians] until now [when Paul wrote this letter]" (Phil. 1: 5); (2) in sending time and again to his necessities while at Thessalonica for a short time (Phil. 4: 16;

Acts 17: 1-3; (3) in filling the measure of his want after he departed from Macedonia and while in Corinth (Phil. 4: 15; 2 Cor. 11: 7-9); (4) in sending a contribution to him by Epaphroditus when old and a prisoner in Rome (Phil. 4: 18, 19). This congregation did this because it had been taught to do so. Since it did this "from the first day," we must conclude that from the first Paul taught it this grace of giving. All preachers and teachers should teach the same now. Have not churches been dwarfed in growth in giving in the full meaning of the word for lack of both teaching and study? Have not many preachers and elders shied the subject, lest it should be said they were preaching for money? Paul was not shy of this subject. He taught all churches fully in regard to it. He very plainly states that he taught the whole will of God on it, but not that it might be so done unto him. He set the matter forever at rest with those who impugned his motives by declining to receive anything from them (see 2 Cor. 11: 9, 10), but he never ceased to teach the will of God concerning it. His declining to receive anything gave the opportunity to teach the more strongly and effectively on it. The only right thing to do is to rise above self, to quit thinking of self, and to teach the whole truth in the love of truth for the sake of saving souls, regardless of consequences. Here is the right course as Paul states it: "Not that I seek for the gift; but I seek for the fruit that increaseth to your account" (Phil. 4: 17); "for I seek not yours, but you" (2 Cor. 12: 14). Preachers can very soon demonstrate the fact that they seek the souls of people, not their money, but fruit which increases to their account, and preach, too, all the Bible says on the subject; and if they have any other motive, they cannot long conceal it. To have hearts right before God, to preach the right thing for the right purpose, is the only right course to pursue.

Other churches did in the support of the gospel that which the Philippians did. (2 Cor. 11: 8.) Paul made known his "affairs" and his "state" to some churches (Eph. 6: 21, 22; Col. 4: 7-9), said to the Romans that he hoped "to be brought" on his way into Spain by them (Rom. 15: 24), and exhorted the Corinthians to set Timothy "forward on his journey in peace" (1 Cor. 16: 11). The church at Antioch in Syria "brought on their way" the men they sent up to Jerusalem. (Acts 15: 3.) It seems that this being "brought on their way" and "set on his way" implies the necessary expenses of the journey.

That the church is "the pillar and ground of the truth" shows that it must have "fellowship in furtherance of the gospel," or, in other words, support preachers of the gospel. God has ordained that "they that proclaim the gospel should live of the gospel," and he has enforced this lesson in many ways upon all churches. The church that does not practice this, refuses to learn and to do the will of God. As the soldier serves not the government at his own charge, as he who plants a vineyard must eat first of its fruit, as he who keeps a flock must drink of the milk, as the ox must not be muzzled when he treads out the corn. as the man who plows and threshes must enjoy the products of his labor, and as the priests lived of the things of the altar, so must faithful and true preachers of the gospel be supported. This means a generous support. And it is no great thing that they should receive carnal things, since they have sown spiritual things. The true preacher is no pauper or beggar. He has the God-ordained right to a liberal support. H chas the right, too, to marry, and to expect a support for his wife as well, so long as she does the work of other Christian housewives. again and again 1 Cor. 9-read it all and study it carefully.) There is more in the New Testament on this subject, but this is given as examples and to arouse in all churches a desire and determination to do all the will of God in regard to this grace also.

EXAMPLES OF HELPING THE POOR.

The church at Jerusalem, the model and "mother church," furnishes a most striking example and bright light in caring for the poor and in "fellowship" in every way. Acts 2: 41, 47; 4: 4; 5: 14; 6: 7 show the many thousands of members. The great majority of these were from different and distant countries and had no means of subsistence. They "were together and had all things common." Those who had goods and other possessions sold them and distribution was made "according as any man had need." Only the needy received anything. This was a common fund, or a treasury, out of which to supply the needy. This was not a communistic, or leveling-up and leveling-down, affair, or joint stock company, with the apostles as general managers. It was a manifestation of great liberality. Liberality to-day in the church should be equal to the necessity, even if that requires the sale of property. (See also Acts 4: 32-37.)

Antioch in Syria is another splendid example of generosity in helping the poor (Acts 11: 27-30), and a demonstration of how God teaches churches to contribute and to handle their means in such work. Study the passage referred to.

Another noted example is the work of the churches of Macedonia, Achaia, Galatia, and of other places in helping the poor Jews. When "James and Cephas and John" gave to Paul and Barnabas "the right hands of fellowship," that they should go to the Gentiles, they exhorted them to "remember the poor," and Paul adds, "which very thing I was also zealous to do." (Gal. 2: 9, 10.) The great contribution Paul raised from the Gentile churches shows not only his zeal for the poor, but the liberality of the churches. This shows also complete church coöperation. (Read 2 Cor. 8: 9: 1 Cor. 16: 1, 2; Rom. 15: 25-29.)

Other examples are visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction;" children and grandchildren showing "piety toward their own family," and requiting their parents by taking care of their own parents and grand-parents and widows; and the church's taking care of widows indeed, or those who have no others upon whom to depend.

THE BLESSEDNESS OF GIVING.

The consideration of this subject would be incomplete without noting the blessedness of giving. The temporal blessings are: (1) seed for sowing, bread for food, increased harvests, enriching the liberal so that they can give still more. The spiritual blessings are: (1) goodness of heart, generosity of soul, the mind of Christ to make the offerings; (2) fills "up the measure of the wants of the saints;" (3) causes abundant and "many thanksgivings to God;" (4) proves the submission of the contributors to God; (5) causes the recipients to "glorify" God for this "confession unto the gospel of Christ;" (6) causes the recipients also to make supplications for the contributors; (7) is an offering to the Lord (Heb. 13: 16), "an odor of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well pleasing to God" (Phil. 4: 17); and (8) saves the soul. Certainly "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Give What We Have.

A colored man was asked if he had a thousand sheep would he give the Lord the tenth. He said of course he would. Then, again, if you had three hundred sheep, would you give the Lord one-tenth? Of course I would. If you had two sheep, would you give the Lord one? He said: "You get out of here; I have only two." We can give if we do not have money. People are dying for want of encouragement, love, sympathy, and many things we may give them.—Selected.

"The Obedience of Your Confession."

There is a great deal said about "confession" in the New Testament. Paul says that "with the mouth confession is made unto salvation," (Rom. 10: 10.) He also speaks of "the good confession" that Christ himself made before Pilate and that Timothy made in the sight of many witnesses. (1 Tim. 6: 12, 13.) Paul also says that "every tongue shall confess that Jesus is Lord." (Phil. 2: 11.) Christ says: "Every one therefore who shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 10: 32.) From these and numerous other scriptures that could be cited, it goes without any room for debating that "our confession"-the one we must make-is a thing of no little importance.

But in this article I wish to say a few things about what Paul calls "the obedience of your confession unto the gospel of Christ" (2 Cor. 9: 13), and that, whatever it means, it is vitally connected with our giving of our means to support the poor and have the gospel of Christ preached to the whole world. All that is necessary just here to get you to see this is to have you read carefully the scripture in which you find this expression. When I come to it, I will put in italics the thought to be considered in connection with its context.

"For as touching the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you: for I know your readiness, of which I glory on your behalf to them of Macedonia, that Achaia hath been prepared for a year past; and your zeal hath stirred up very many of them. But I have sent the brethren, that our glorying on your behalf may not be made void in this respect; that, even as I said, ye may be prepared: lest by any means, if there come with me any of Macedonia and find you unprepared, we (that we say not, ye) should be put to shame in this confidence. I thought it necessary therefore to entreat the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your aforepromised bounty, that the same might be ready as a matter of bounty, and not of extortion. But this I say, He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound unto you; that ye, having always all sufficiency in everything, may abound unto every good work: as it is written, He hath scattered abroad, he hath given to the poor; his righteousness abideth forever. And he that supplieth seed to the sower and bread for food, shall supply and multiply your seed for sowing, and increase the fruits of your righteousness: ye being enriched in everything unto all liberality, which worketh through us thanksgiving to God. For the ministration of this service not only filleth up the measure of the wants of the saints, but aboundeth also through many thanksgivings unto God; seeing that through the proving of you by this ministration they glorify God for the obedience of your confession unto the gospel of Christ, and for the liberality of your contribution unto them and unto all; while they themselves also, with supplication on your behalf, long after you by reason of the exceeding grace of God in you, Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift." (2 Cor. 9: 1-15.)

Macknight uses these words in translating the thought emphasized: "The saints in Judea, through the proof which this ministry affords them of your conversion, thanking God for your professed subjection to the gospel of Christ.'

It should ever be remembered that "the good confession"-that confession that saves our souls and causes Christ to confess us before the Father-has an obedience absolutely essential unto its life and power, as blood is essential to the life of the body. "The obedience of your [our] confession" begins when we repent of all our sins and are buried with Christ in baptism and arise to walk in the new life. No confession from the lips of aliens is ever listened to by Jehovah, unless the obedience of this confession is seen in baptism or the doing of what Christ says to them to do to be saved. We should not forget the words of our Lord: "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.) How strongly do we who claim to be simply Christians, members of the "one body," just this and nothing more, emphasize the importance of this "obedience of our confession" at the beginning of the Christian's life! But here let me say that this obedience must continue, and that it can never continue with us unless we live the life of continual giving to the Lord. If we were, indeed, converted, we gave "ourselves to the Lord." May we ever remain a gift; and the only way this can be done is to let the Lord control us by going where he wants us to go, staying where he wants us to stay, writing as he wants us to write, talking as he wants us to talk, thinking as he wants us to think, and ever being just what he wants us to be. To do otherwise is to take ourselves back unto ourselves and away from the Lord, thus becoming our own again, which means death and destruction to us. Remember, Paul said: "Ye are not your own; for ye were bought with a price: glorify God therefore in your body." (1 Cor. 6: 19, 20.)

But the mere giving of ourselves to the Lord is not enough. The giving of our money comes next, and is indispensable. Read carefully the eighth chapter of Second Corinthians. The Macedonian Christians gave much, and gave freely, to the Lord, so Paul declares; but their first gift was themselves. "But first they gave their own selves to the Lord," (Verse 5.) In addition to this, they gave their money; and Paul wants the church at Corinth to do likewise: "As ye abound in everything, in faith and utterance, and knowledge, and in all earnestness, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also." (Verse 7.) The grace of giving is what he is talking about a thing that both the Father and the Son abound in, in that the Son was given freely to us to die that we might live; and through him everything that we need the Father freely gives, if we will only abound also in the grace of giving.

But why write more? Is it not true that every truly converted man or woman gives much, gives freely and willingly, toward the spread of the gospel and the accomplishing of every good work in which money is needed? If we are not giving, just as certain as giving is a proof of our conversion, just so our not giving proves that we have not been converted, else that we have fallen from grace. May the Lord bless us all in "abounding in this grace."

AT HOME AND ABROAD

W

T. H. Roberson, of Russellville, Ala., writes to tell us that "the 'Giving' Number is simply fine."

A. B. Lipscomb will begin a meeting next Sunday for the Fairview congregation, on the Hillsboro road.

At the Sunday-morning service at Russell Street Church, this city, there were visiting brethren from Texas, Kentucky, Alabama, and Florida.

Andy T. Ritchie, of Madison, Tenn., is in a good meeting at Little Rock, Ark. He will hold three other meetings while in that State. Two of these will be in destitute fields.

From A. G. Freed, Troy, Tenn.: "The meeting here grows. Five baptisms last night, one reclaimed yesterday. The church here is alive. The coming session of the Freed-Hardeman College will be great."

William G. Little, an elder of the church in Pittsburgh, Pa., which meets at the corner of Howard and Estella Streets, acknowledges a gift of twenty-two dollars from Brother and Sister R. R. Scoggan and their daughter, of Louisville, Ky.

We are receiving many expressions of appreciation of the "Giving" Number. The next special will be a "Better Ministry" Number. It will appear the last week in this month. Do not let your subscription lapse, but send us a

From W. T. Buffaloe, Star Route, Monette, Ark., July 29: "I am located for this summer in a Methodist community where I spent my boyhood days. There are possibly three members of the church here. Some teaching has been done here, but little."

From John W. Hedge, Wills Point, Texas, July 28: "The meeting at Myrtle Springs, near here, was a success in many respects. Eight were baptized. Brother Beeson and the writer are now engaged with the church at Alsa. Fine crowds are in attendance."

From Mrs. T. J. McRae, San Francisco, Cal., July 27: "Our meeting began with Brother Borden preaching an excellent sermon to an audience which filled our hall. All visitors are welcome. We meet in Richmond Hall, corner Fourth Avenue and Clement Street."

There is a little preacher in the home of Brother and Sister J. H. Whisnant, of Coal Hill, Ark. His name is "Douglas." Brother Whisnant contemplates a change of location and would like to get in touch with brethren who are interested. He can hold some meetings.

From John T. Smithson, Woodbury, Tenn., August 1: "I am now in an interesting meeting at Pleasant Ridge, near Woodbury. The crowds are large and the interest is good. To date four have been restored to fellowship and one has been baptized. The meeting continues."

A brother writing from Paris, Tenn., forgot to sign his name to the following report: "I am in a good meeting with the congregation at Sulphur Well Academy, with eight additions by primary obedience to date. We are having fine crowds. I go from here to Thyatira, Miss. I have some time for meetings in September and October."

From C. N. Hudson, Lobelville, Tenn., July 31: "On July 20 I began a meeting with the Brush Creek church of Christ, six miles from Linden, which closed on July 26, with nine baptisms and five reclamations. I then preached a few times at Friendship Schoolhouse on my way home, and baptized one. I will begin here at home next Lord's day."

R. N. Moody writes: "The meeting at Acton, Tenn., closed on July 31. There were twenty-two additions—twenty baptized. There were eight confessions the last night of the meeting and three more the next morning at the water, making eleven to be baptized at the last baptizing. This leaves me in Huntsville, Ala., en route to New Hope, where I begin a meeting to-night (August 2)."

From R. A. Craig, Vanburen, Ky., August 2: "My meeting at Parksville, Ky., closed with twenty-two additions. I have just closed a meeting at Shiloh, near Shelbyville, with fourteen additions. I am now in a meeting in Nelson County. We will make arrangements for a preacher to come to Shiloh. The brethren there are coming to life, and I feel that the church has been greatly strengthened by the word."

From W. F. Lemmons, Mount Vernon, Texas, July 28: "I closed an interesting meeting five miles from this place yesterday at the water. Only one was baptized, but there were large crowds and fine interest from start to finish. I go from here to Cloverport, near Toone, Tenn., for a meeting to begin on August 2. Toone will be my post office while there ten days; thence to Mississippi. I hope to accomplish much good while in that field."

We cheerfully give to our readers the following indorsement from J. M. Pigg, S. B. Pigg, W. R. Pack, and James C. Pigg, members of the church of Christ at Friendship, Tenn.: "We wish to say that Prof. A. L. Dixon, of Dellrose, Tenn., has been with us for the past ten days in a singing school and has proven himself to be worthy of his calling in every respect; and those in need of a song leader, either for schools or meetings, would do well to write him at once."

From Charles L. Talley, Cookeville, Tenn., August 1: "I have just finished reading the special number on 'Giving.' It is fine. I think congregations should get them in numbers and distribute to every member not taking the paper. Of course, all should be doing that; but how few of the church members find time or money for that work! Our work here seems to be doing quite well. Two men, heads of families, have been baptized in the last two weeks."

From W. A. Dowell, Sykes, Tenn., August 2: "Beginning on the third Lord's day in July and continuing until Monday night, July 28, our beloved brother, George W. Farmer, preached the pure word of God to us, the visible results being nine added to the one body—eight by baptism and one reclaimed—and a church with thirty-three members set in order to work for the Lord. All who have heard Brother Farmer know he fails not to declare 'the whole counsel of God.' Brethren, remember us in your prayers."

Claude Woodroof will begin a series of meetings at Carroll Street church of Christ, this city, beginning on August 17, with the song service to be conducted by his brother, Everett Woodroof. The Carroll Street Church is halfway ground between the Green Street and South College Street churches. The three congregations are going to cooperate in this meeting, and the Carroll Street people think this will be the biggest meeting they have ever had since they have been located there. Everybody is invited to come and hear the Alabama evangelist. He is an able speaker.

From William Behel, St. Joseph, Tenn., July 31: "On July 20 I began an eight-days' meeting with the church at Mountain Springs, Ala., which resulted in two baptisms. Two sermons each day; good attendance. J. Pettey Ezell was in a fine meeting at the same time only a few miles away. A goodly number were added. I will be quite busy the next few weeks. I am thankful to God that my son, who had been in the army twenty-one months and fourteen days, has arrived home safe. This will give me a better chance to stay in the field, as my son will stay with his mother while I am away. Pray for me."

From George W. Graves, Cookeville, Tenn., August 1: "I began a meeting on the last Lord's day in June with the Palmer's Chapel congregation, in Summer County, which continued eight days with good interest, but no additions. My next meeting began on the second Lord's day in July with the Wood congregation, in Cannon County. This meeting was well attended, the best we have ever had here. There was one reclaimed. Then our meeting with the Coldwater congregation, on Stones River, continued eight days, with one reclaimed. At present I am engaged in a meeting with the Smyrna brethren, near Cookeville. We hope to have a good meeting."

From T. H. Matheson, Bonita, Texas, July 25: "I have not made a report of my work in over a year, and during the time have had a trying experience. Wife has undergone an operation in the Sherman Hospital, and I have been an almost constant sufferer from rheumatism. Besides, we all had the 'flu.' Thank the Lord that I have in a way carried on my work all the time, with the exception of four weeks, and then I could pull and drag around and keep up appointments preaching. I closed a short meeting at home, Corinth, last Saturday night, with three restored. I am now at Tyler Bluff, preaching to large audiences at night. I go from here to Dye Mound, the largest congregation in Montague County. I have held two meetings at Dye Mound, with about seventy additions. From Dye Mound I return to Bonita, and from Bonita to Bulcher. I am glad that all these places are near home. Physically, I am stronger than ever. I desire very much the prayers of the church."

GOSPEL TRUMPET BLASTS

The timely articles of Brethren Kurfees, Elam, Mc-Quiddy, A. B. Lipscomb, and others appearing in recent issues of the Gospel Advocate, if read and studied by all concerned as they should be, will certainly do much good in this day of sad departures from the faith.

"Let Me Alone." (Job 7: 16.)

It is utterly impossible. It is not in the order of things that we should be let alone. If the mother should let the babe alone, the infant would perish. If the sun should let the ice and water alone, the rivers would dry up and our fertile fields would become parched ground. If the soil should let the roots alone, there would be no green on the branches, no fragrant blossoms, no fruitful harvests. The hand cannot say to the heart, "Let me alone." The eye cannot say to the ear, "Let me alone." No, we are all "members one of another." The American cannot say to the Britisher, "Let me alone." The Italian cannot say to the Frenchman, "Let me alone." It cannot be done. No nation lives unto itself. In the Old Testament are these "Ephraim is joined to his idols; let him alone. If at this point God should answer our prayer and let us alone, it would mean certain perdition. He gives us conscience, faithful friends, his word, the pulpit's flaming message. He will not let us alone; for "God is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

Do not let us alone, we pray. If we "take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea," may we find thee there. If we "make our bed in hell," do not let us alone. Awake our conscience and keep it awake, that our souls may not enter into the slumber that is the sleep of death. If we are bent upon the pathway of sin, throw across it the brightness of thine own presence, that we may behold the better way. Though we are joined to our idols, do not let us alone; stir us up; arouse us from our lethargy: sever us from the evil thing. Bruce S. Wright.

The above good article I clip from the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Christian Advocate of July 3. It is good and worth a careful reading and study. "Let me alone" is the final argument of the devil and all who want to remain in error and innovationism. The true man of God cannot let any one alone whom he knows to be in gross religious He would be doing a wicked thing and be the enemy of the ones in error. I wonder if Mr. Wright himself would cry, "Let me alone," if one should try in the right spirit to teach him "the way of the Lord more perfectly." Mr. Wright is in gross religious error when he teaches (1) that faith is a direct gift from God; (2) that we are justified by faith only; (3) that sprinkling and pouring are baptism; (4) that infants are subjects for baptism; (5) that the Holy Spirit works independently of the word of God in the conversion of sinners and the sanctification of Christians; and (6) Mr. Wright is wrong in being a Methodist and in teaching for doctrine any part of Methodism. Mr. Wright should wholly abandon and come out of Methodism and be only a Christian and a Christian only, and speak in all things as the oracles of God, and then, while he has his being in this world and is able for duty, "let" no one "alone" who is in religious error. "Cry aloud, and spare not."

Crude and Savage.

No words that are truer, more kindly, or which carry a deeper reproach and a more needful admonition to all of us, were ever uttered than these, spoken recently by a high church official at a public reception in a home for

There are no illegitimate children. That word should be expunged forever. There are illegitimate parents, yes; but these children are all legitimate; all worthy and fine, and will grow up to be a blessing and an honor to the nation.'

Through all the ages the brand of illegitimacy has been inflicted by an unjust and unreasoning world upon all children born out of wedlock. It has fastened upon them a name that is the most degrading and fraught with the most shame in all human language. Yet these children are innocent—as good as any other children and entitled to the same chance in life. It is not they, but their parents, who are illegitimate. The mere statement of that fact compels its acceptance without cavil or contradiction.

Perhaps the war, which is awakening mankind to so many of its sins and imperfections, will wipe out this ancient and hideous injustice. In its desolate wake there are many helpless children of this kind, and there will be many more. Some of them will be brought to this country. To blast their lives with this old prejudice would be a cruelty not less than that which brought them into the Surely civilization is not worthy of its name if it world. cannot put this crude and savage wrong away from it.

The above is a clipping from an editorial in the Cleveland (Ohio) News, and it is so good, true, and timely that I want to help to give it as wide circulation as I possibly can. Several years ago I lived in a certain Ohio town, and in that town lived a young German Methodist preacher (a newly married man), who, to all appearances, seemed to be a nice and good-intentioned fellow. But, unfortunately, his first child came on the stage of being several months too soon. Shortly after the birth of his first-born the presiding elder of that district (a German) came, called a meeting for the trial of the young preacher, and cut off the ministerial head of this young preacher for the sin of fornication. After the trial and its results this presiding elder came into the town and stopped overnight with an old German, a brother in his church, with whom I was acquainted, and the result was that I had quite a conversation with the presiding elder about the whole affair, and in this conversation I asked him: "For what length of time have you suspended the ministerial work of this young preacher?" His reply was: "For all time." I inquired: "Is not that a severe sentence?" He answered; "It is; but the church cannot countenance fornication in any way, and especially in its teachers. If it does, it lets down the bars for all manner of lewdness. The sentence cannot be too severe. It is bound to be severe in order to safeguard the purity of the church."

A case of this kind in the church of Christ never came under my observation. I do not even remember of ever hearing of a case of this kind in the church; and as our work of discipline is congregational, I am not able to say what the majority of the congregations would do with a case of this kind. Perhaps many of the elders of the churches would say, "He married her and the sin is healed, and we can do nothing with him now," and the chances are the transgressors would never be brought to trial. I made up my mind a long time ago that if a young man would take advantage of a young woman and then forsake her and leave her to bear the shame and disgrace that follow these things, though he might become a member of the church and also a preacher, that he never could repent sufficiently that I would listen to him preach if I knew it. This is the way I have always felt about the matter, and I have never seen any reasons for changing my mind. The editorial is good, true, and timely, and deserves a wide circulation.

The brethren at Horseneck are now building their new house of worship. A splendid business man, Mr. W. H. Naish (pronounced Nash), of Williamstown, W. Va., donated the lot on which to build the house, and this lot includes one of the finest springs in the State of West Virginia; hence, the congregation will be known as the Naish Spring congregation. As they are now building and have done what they can financially, they need help; and any help sent to Brother Noah Brothers, Willow, W. Va., Route 1, Box 31, will be appreciated by all concerned. My prayer is that they may speedily receive the much-needed help, for great good is being accomplished in that region.

WHAT OF YOUR BOY?

His education and training and the development of his mind, body, and character depend on you, his parent. It is a grave responsibility, for there are so many antagonistic influences that come into play in a boy's life. As every boy looks back over his education and training, he can always point out some one influence, some one life that has had a more profound influence. To thousands of boys this influence has been the guiding spirit, the personal association, and the inspiring character of Mr. Robert K. Morgan, principal of Morgan School for twenty-five years. He knows boy nature. The close personal associations which has fostered between his boy he students and himself, his carefully chosen faculty, his careful attention to the boy's work, his thoughts, his talents, and his special needs, have given great prominence to his school and have characterized the success he has merited in successfully shaping the lives of thousands of youths at the shaping age.

A postal card to Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., will bring you a catalogue and full information about this school.

Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

The meeting at Glady Hill, conducted by the writer, closed on the last Sunday night in July. In some respects it was not like former meetings. This year there were no campers; all too busy with their work. Several of the members could not attend regularly, being behind with their farm work on account of so much rain in the spring. But, after all, we had a good meeting. The brethren all think a very favorable impression was made upon the minds of those who attended of other religious bodies. I hope they are correct in this. Four were baptized, two came from the Baptists, and one erring brother confessed and repented of his sins and was received back into fellowship of the congregation-seven in all. This was my eighth meeting at that place, in addition to serving them once a month for the eight years. At the close of the meeting the congregation, by unanimous consent, extended to me a call for life to preach monthly and hold their annual meeting. I certainly appreciate such confidence, and more especially as this congregation is in my home district and only five miles from my home, where I am known best as a man and a preacher.

Next Lord's day (the first Lord's day in August) I am to begin my ninth meeting at Jones' Chapel, in Lake County. I have served this congregation for eight years in monthly preaching, assisted in a four-days' debate with the Baptists, and held their annual meeting each year.

Some congregations change preachers every year, while others seldom change. Sometimes a change is for the best and sometimes it is not. If the preacher is out for what money he can get from preaching, the sooner a congregation changes from him, the better it is for the congregation.

Brother Lannom, of Obion, tells me that he will be forced to take up some kind of secular work, as he does not receive enough from preaching to support his family. When preachers have to seek secular employment to feed and clothe their families, there is nothing to induce young men to enter the evangelistic field. One trouble, however, with a great many young preachers is that they seek employment from old congregations instead of going out into new fields to convert the people and establish congregations. If a young preacher will go into such places with no other motive than to do good, to convert sinners and build up congregations, I am sure he will be fed and clothed. This I speak from personal experience. Congregations are becoming a little slow to call the money-loving and money-serving preachers, be they old or young. Worthy young preachers should be supported by the congregations and kept busy in new fields, building up congregations and erecting new meetinghouses.

Lemons Beautify! Make Quarter Pint of Lotion, Cheap

Here is told how to prepare an inexpensive lemon lotion, which can be used to bring back to any skin the sweet freshness, softness, whiteness, and beauty.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness, and tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener, and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms, and hands, and see for yourself.

Four Figures in the Christian's Life. No. 2.

BY S. W. BERRYMAN.

Christians are not only referred to as sitting with Christ, but also standing. However, we do not stand with Christ in a physical sense, but in a spiritual sense. We cannot sit and stand with Christ at the same time physically, but we can spiritually. All Christians are sitting and standing with Christ.

Paul writes to the Galatian brethren: "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free." (Gal. 5: 1.) The Christian life is a battle, and in order for us to stand in the battle we must be properly equipped. Hence, Paul says: "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." (Eph. 6: 11.) If we do not put on the "whole armor of God," we cannot fight the battles of the Lord successfully. "Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God." (Verse 13.) Paul is very careful to impress us with the fact that we must put on the "whole armor." It would not do for a soldier to enter a fleshly battle partly equipped. He must have a complete equipment to accomplish anything as a soldier. The peace and liberty of his country and his own life also depend on the kind of weapons with which he is furnished and the way he uses them. The same is true with us. Our eternal welfare depends on the manner in which we use the weapons our Heavenly Father has given us. The armor is complete: and if we will take all of it and use it as the Lord directs, we will have no trouble in standing against the wiles of the devil. The armor is both defensive and offensive.

"Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth." Truth is the Christian's girdle. Truth is a wall of defense. Then, all should get into the truth and stay there. Sink down into the truth; let it surround you. It is safe, it is sure.

"And having on the breastplate of righteousness." (Verse 14.) The Roman soldier was furnished with a breastplate. This part of the armor was for the purpose of protecting the heart and lungs of the soldier. Righteousness is our breastplate. If our hearts and lives are filled with the righteousness of Christ, they are not likely to suffer harm. We are commanded to live "soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world." (Tit, 2; 12.)

Stand having "your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace," (Eph. 6: 15.) The Roman soldier wore sandals, or shoes. There were nails fastened in the bottoms of them which prevented the soldiers from slipping and aided him in travel. He could walk over thorns, gravel, and rocks, and his feet were protected. The Christian's sandal is the "preparation of the gospel of peace." If we are prepared to carry the gospel of salvation and to defend its teaching against all error, this will aid us greatly in the battle of the Lord.

"Above all," Paul says, take "the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." (Verse 16.) soldier needs a shield. The shield of the Roman soldier was an instrument made of steel or iron. It was fifteen or eighteen inches wide and was oval shaped. It was from five to seven feet long and fastened on the left arm. This was a great protection to the soldier. Our shield is faith, If our faith in Jehovah's word is what it should be, we will never faint by the wayside or give up the battle. Brethren, let us cultivate our faith, that it may be as strong as that of Abraham. Genuine faith will extract sweetness out of every flower; it brings light out of darkness, comfort out of distress, mercies out of miseries, and honey out of the rock. Faith stimulates to endeavor and ennobles the whole life. Last, but not least, it gives calmness in the hour of death.

"And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." (Verse 17.) Paul speaks of this helmet in 1 Thess, 5: 8 and calls it the "hope of salvation." Then hope is the Christian's helmet, What would we do were it not for hope? Rich and glorious is hope. It encourages all things good, great, and noble. How dreary would life's pathway be without hope! Hope is an anchor of the soul." (Heb. 6: 19.) Our sword is "the word of God," will have no trouble in fighting life's battles if we will use this sword aright. "The word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit. and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." (Heb. 4: 12.)

Now, in conclusion, let us remember that we must stand with Christ in this life if we hope to stand with him in the world to come. The great God and Father of all will bless us and crown us with eternal victory, if we will obey the mandates of our King. Then, brethren, let us stand firm to the end, for our "labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Reward of Men's Approval.

The mingling of regard for man's approbation with apparently righteous acts absolutely disqualifies them for receiving God's reward, for it changes their whole character and they are no longer what they seem. Charity given from that motive is not charity, nor prayer offered from it devotion.

I think Christ's ear catches the screech of the brazen trumpet in a good many of the ways of raising and giving money which find favor in the church to-day. This is an advertising age, and flowers that used to blush unseen are forced now under glass for exhibition. No one needs to blow his own trumpet nowadays. We have improved on the ruder methods of the Pharisees, and newspapers and coliectors will blow lustily and loud for us and defend the noise on the ground that a good example stimulates others. Christ condemned ostentation. His followers too often try to make

In its coarsest forms this ostentation is out-and-out hypocrisy, which consciously assumes a virtue which it has not. But far more common and dangerous is the subtle, unconscious mingling of it with real charity. The hypocrisy which hoodwinks ourselves is more common and more perilous than that which blinds others.—Maclaren.

Among the Colored Folks

Brother Womack's Report.

By an invitation of my sister and other good Christians of Cookeville, Tenn., I gave my presence in a meeting held by Brother M. Keeble, as the doctor had advised me to stay out of the city for my building up in health. It was a source of pleasure to me to be there and hear this young man preach and to spend the time this way with those brethren and sisters. Brother Talley, the white preacher, was present and preached on Tuesday night before the meeting closed. His sermon was a plain, able presentation of the truth. There was a good interest in the meeting. I do not know of any of the colored preachers of the church of Christ that are doing a greater work than this young man. The world is calling for such men. I sometimes think that my days for holding meetings are gone by, and I am trusting and praying the Lord to send more and greater men into the field. I am doing but little preaching.

I am very thankful to all who have remembered me during my days of illness. They are: Hopeful Church, near Munford, Ala., by W. L. Camp; the little band out on the Charlotte pike, by Brother Robert Tolbert and Josie Carney; Brother and Sister T. B. Larimore; the Sugar Grove mission, in Kentucky; sisters of the South College Street Church; Beech Grove, near Brownsville, Tenn., by I. C. Waller; Belew, Miss., by James Hamilton; Brother W. T. Selley and Brother Joe Hasty, this city; Brother Ed Smith; and others. All who have aided and remembered me, when they read this, will know what they have done. The Lord will provide.

The Jackson Street Church is now arranging for a meeting to begin on the first Lord's day in October; and I am thinking of asking the brethren and sisters to come to the city during the Christmas holidays and spend the time in reasoning together, preaching, singing, praying, and talking about and over the Master's work. Brother M. Keeble and other brethren will take up the matter later on, and you will hear from them.

S. W. WOMACK.

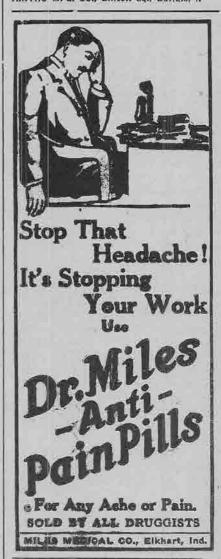

Brother Keeble's Report.

At the time of my last report I was engaged in a meeting at Bellbuckle, Tenn. In this meeting a man and a woman were baptized into Christ. I preached in the schoolhouse, and we were interrupted three nights on account of the school exercises. The white congregation, through Brother

As soon as the warm sunshine or the hot winds bring them out, causing the natural embarrassment that every woman feels, get from your druggist a package of Kintho Beauty Cream. This is usually an easy and effective way to remove them, and quickly have a soft, clear, youthful and beautiful complexion, which of course, should have no freckles.

Use Kintho at the first sign of freekles, applying night and morning, and you should be designted to see how rapidly these uzly spots begin to disappear. It is also well to use Kintho Soap is this helps to keep the skin clear and youthful LINTHO MFG. CO., Ellicott Sq., Buffglo, N

W. R. Mingle, assisted me in the meeting. The white brethren are laboring hard to establish a colored congregation here.

On the third Lord's day in June I began a meeting at Tullahoma and continued it two weeks, with good interest throughout the meeting. We have no meetinghouse here, so the brethren rented the Masonic Hall; and they interrupted us several times during the meeting, demanding the house to give entertainments in. However, we believe a lasting impression was made in favor of the church of Christ. We were blessed with the presence of the white brethren and sisters several nights; and Brother McQuiddy, the elder of the white congregation, made a splendid address, which all enjoyed. He also influenced the church to assist in supporting the meeting. Brethren and sisters came from Manchester, Morrison, McMinnville, Bellbuckle, Shelbyville, Cortner, and Lynchburg to attend this meeting. and their presence served to stimulate an interest. Brother Busby and Brother Curtis are the only colored brethren here, and they made it pleasant for me while with them. On the fifth Lord's day in June I began a meeting at Cookeville. This is a faithful little band with only two male members. Interest increased throughout the meeting. Old Brother S. W. Womack's presence in the meeting seemed to add life to the services. He preached here years ago when there was not a colored member here. This faithful servant is now growing old and feeble, but his work will live after he has gone. Brother Talley, the miniter of the white church here, spoke for us on Tuesday night. Through Brother Hayden Young, the white church aided me in this meeting. There were three confessions.

I am very thankful to all who have aided me in my work. M. KEEBLE.

Calomel Dynamites A Sluggish Liver

Crashes into sour bile, making you sick, and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It is mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, con-stipated, and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is a harmless vegetable substi-tute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful, and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day, you will be sick and nauseated to-morrow; be-sides, it may salivate you; while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It is harmless, pleasant, and safe to give to children; they like it.

CHURCH NEWS

Alabama.

Oakman, July 28 .- Since last report we have moved to Oakman, where I have been busy in the work of the Lord, working with the church here and at New Hope. The work is progressing nicely. I am now in my pro-tracted-meeting work. I have just closed a week's meeting at White House, with sixteen added to the one I will assist them in a meeting next year, if the Lord wills. I am now in a meeting at Liberty Hill, near Oakman, with fine interest. I go next to Moulton Valley for meetings at Fairfield, Aldredge Grove, and Moul-I shall be busy till October, and shall then take up the work at Oakman for another year .- A. D. Dies.

Arkansas.

Rector, July 28.—Last September 1 assisted the church here in a good meeting in which several were baptized and the church was much built up and strengthened in Christ Jesus. I have been called back, and now our meeting starts off nicely. Good audiences and fine attention both yesterday and last night. We are trusting, hoping, praying, and working that the meeting may prove the very best possible. In the way of additions and so far as I could see, our meeting at Pleasant Grove, near Seagoville, Texas, was a failure. I cannot say who nor what was to blame. May the Lord bless the Gospel Advocate.-J. C. Estes.

Russellville, July 29.—The recent discussion at Mill Creek Church between C. R. Nichol and L. H. Shelton was clean and uplifting. Mr. Shelton was to have established a church while here, but now the movement is laid on the shelf, if not buried. On the establishment of the kingdom, Brother Nichol forced Mr. Shelton to admit that when the kingdom was established in Jerusalem all who have not had a chance to be saved would then have a chance, while Satan would be bound, thus taking the same position as Pastor Russell, yet not claiming to be a Russellite. The discussion would have done some of the materialists in the church of Christ good. Brother Nichol's argument that, since the body of a dog is made of the same material as that of man, there is no difference between them, according to Adventists, was too strong to be endured by them.—J. G. Malphurs.

Fort Smith, July 22.-1 closed the meeting at Delaney, Friday night, with four confessions and baptisms the "same hour of the night." We had a great meeting. Fifteen were baptized for the remission of sins. have been asked to return for a meeting next year. The success of the meeting is due largely to the untiring efforts and faithfulness of Brother Gabbard. He is one of the best men I have ever been associated with, and he made great sacrifices for the success of the meeting. Brother Robert Reed, of Combs, another godly man, assisted much with prayer and song. He is a good preacher, a fine literary teacher, and a splendid singer. I will be glad to be with these brethren again. They paid me two hundred

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing wea nervousness and sickness. weakness, laziness,

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic prop-erties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

We got along nicely and closed with the very best of feelings. The Methodists stated that they would not try to hold a series of meetings in the future without our assistance. The preaching was done in the Methodist meetinghouse. We had the Lord's table prepared, and almost every Methodist member ate the Lord's Supper. As it was my time to preach, I took the Bible and taught them why we eat the Lord's Supper each Lord's day. Many of the Methodists said this was the best day they had ever spent in their meetinghouse. I asked them to not use the organ and have congregational singing, and they agreed without a word. They set the organ aside, did away with the choir, and we had the best singing, I believe, I ever heard. The singing was led by Brother T. A. Nicks, a splendid song leader and church worker.—R. E. L. A Church House at Horseneck, W. Va.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ: We come to you with this appeal in this time of need to our congregation. We are building a neat and comfortable house of worship, and at this time we are in great need of your brotherly fellowship in our work.

We are not asking you for help and failing to reach down into our own pockets, but we ourselves have gone the limit in our offerings to the work, and we ask of you that you help us by setting aside at least one or more of your Lord's-day's contributions, and send it to Brother Noah Brothers. Willow, W. Va., Route 1, Box 31, and he will faithfully apply the same to the work of building the house and acknowledge receipt of the same through the Christian Leader and the Gospel Advocate.

Now, brethren and sisters Christ, we intend to be a faithful and lively band of Christian workers and cooperators with you in every good word and work in the kingdom of God's dear Son, and intend through the help of the Lord to do mission work to the fullest extent of our ability, both at home and in every place where mission work needs to be done; and if you need help in any way, we will gladly assist you in return.

Do not lay this appeal aside, but help us, and we will appreciate the help from the depths of our hearts. We are a loyal band of faithful workers with you in the kingdom and patience of God's dear Son.

Send all help as indicated above. [Signed] C. W. Evans, Noah Brothers, and R. R. Bunner, M.D., elders.

We, the undersigned, evangelists of the church of Christ, do heartily indorse the above appeal, and hope that all loyal disciples of Christ will at once and without delay help these brethren in their time of great need. Send contributions to Brother Noah Brothers, Willow, W. Va., Route 1, Box 31.

A Godsend to Rheumatics.

A Godsend to Rheumatics.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood. The cause of rheumatism is uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expels the uric acid from the system. Renwar is endrely dependable. It does not in any wa, injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar falls to relieve you of your rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial, and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price, 50 cents. Ask your druggist for it or write WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Advt.

Cost of the Rays of Hope.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

Our faith in divine testimony leads us to hope for that which we do not see. The Old Testament Scriptures contain the divine prophetic testimony. The apostles preached "Christ, and him crucified," according to the Scriptures or books of the Old Testament. Did you ever consider what those books cost? Ptolemy Philadeiphus desired to have these Scriptures translated out of the Hebrew into the Greek language, but was refused because his father had brought so many Hebrews into bondage. It appears that Philadelphus desired to make amends for the wrongs against the Hebrews which his father had done: so he inquired as to the number of Hebrew slaves, but no one knew. He then ordered an enumeration and engaged enough men to complete the work in seven days. On the seventh day the report was made, and there were one hundred and twenty thousand Hebrew slaves. He paid thirtythree dollars and thirty-three cents for every one and set them free, paying one hundred and twenty thousand times thirty-three dollars and thirtythree cents. Please count up the cost of this first ray. Then gifts were made to Eleazar the high priest and to the Jewish worship, amounting to one hundred times one thousand six hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-six cents. Here is the cost of the second ray of hope. Then Philadelphus, having won the good will and favor of Eleazar the priest, who had charge of the Hebrew Scriptures, obtained permission from Eleazar to translate them into the Greek. They selected seventy-two men, six from each of the twelve tribes. They were the most profound scholars known. The king paid each one three times one thousand six hundred and sixtysix uollars and sixty-six cents, making in all seventy-two times four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine dollars and ninety-eight cents. Here we have the cost of the third ray of hope for the Gentiles. Those translators were furnished board, rooms, servants, and everything needful, and completed the work in seventy-two days. There was great rejoicing over the work; even the king wept for joy. That greatest

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, case and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a hoe would be in his part of the country, arged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last welve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shor that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving choic book for the asking.

of all books, now known as the "Old Biole," was placed in the Alexandrian Library at a cost of near three million four hundred thousand dollars. The rays of light were shaded in prophecy. Then Philadelphus gave permission to all nations to translate the Scriptures into their own language. In this way the nations came in possession of the law (of Moses), the prophets, and the psalms, whice contained the four hundred and seventy-six prophecies concerning Christ, his birth, death, burial, and resurrection. Then, when the aposties were commissioned to "go preach to all nations," they would preach "how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures." Then, by the power of the Holy Spirit, they would perform some wonderful miracle, in proof of the truthfulness of the prophecies in those ancient Scriptures which were then in the hands of all Gentile nations. In this way the testimony of the law, the prophets, and the psalms, together with the testimony of the apostles, who were living witnesses of the resurrection of Christ, gave to the Gentile world, as well as the Jews, bright rays of hope which led the true believer through the dark valley and shadow of death.

Edifying as the Need May Be

Jesus' Plainness of Speech.

Jesus Christ, the great Teacher, presented for our consideration a remarkable photograph of that society which his disciples were to purify and illuminate. In our examination of his teachings we cannot fail to be impressed with the plainness of speech that is employed. The great Teacher does not mince his words. He does not use ambiguous terms. He does not cover up his fearful warnings by niceties of expression. He does not administer his sharp medicine of rebuke in sugar-coated pills. He strikes out straight from the shoulder and "calls a spade a spade." In his portrayal we find such characters as persecutors and Hars, haters of Christ's disciples, money lovers, self-indulgent, pleasure seekers, unreasonable litigants, libertines, perjurers, the revengeful, enemies, hypocrites, thieves, the morally blind, the censorious, the insincere, talse teachers, evildoers, sinners, dogs, and swine. It was the same world as that in which we now live. These faults, for the most part, are those which are prominent in the world of to-day. While it is true that some new terms have been added to our category of sinful practicessuch as "grafters," "apostates," "higher critics"-after all, the Christian's duty is the same. To be salt for such a corrupt earth and light for such a dark place is the problem that confronts him now. It is his part not to withdraw from such an environment nor to take up residence in some new State, but to live a new life amid the old surroundings.

Our Filial Relationship,

In this task two requisites are necessary-right relations to God and right relations to men. Jesus constantly spoke of our fillal relationship with God, and he taught that our sonship is appropriately expressed by such a ministry to the unfriendly world as will cause it to glorify the Father. To do this, we must imitate the divine example in dealing with men, obeying that heavenly injunction: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in beaven is perfect." There must be a constant desire to please Him rather than to win the praise of the world. This principle pertains to the matter of giving. "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them; otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven." It also applies to the matter of prayer. "And when thou prayest, thou shall not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward." There must be undivided loyalty to his truth and sovereignty. "The light of the body is the eye; If therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light. But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness." There must be a perfect trust in Him for all temporal good-a principle taught by the preservation of the fowls of the air and the flies of the field. In a word, we sustain the right relationship to God only when his righteousness occupies the supreme place in our affections. We succeed when we follow the divine rule which says: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you."

A martyr does not always die for his testimony. When Stephen "fell asleep" at the stoning of the mob in Jerusalem, he was a martyr to the person and character of Jesus. But at the same time there were other martyrs, even they who threw the stones, and Saul, the young man at whose feet the martyrs laid their clothes. Jesus declared that "at the mouth of two or three martyrs every word (testimony) should be established." John the Baptist was a martyr of the light, and bore witness to the personality and authority of Jesus. The woman of Samaria was a martyr of him who told her "all things that ever she did." Jesus was a martyr of himself, and his Father was a martyr of him. The seven men chosen to take the oversight of the distribution funds, in the days when all things were common property, were men of good martyrdom. The Holy Spirit is a martyr to the efficacy of the blood of Christ, the offering by which he has "perfected forever them who are sanctified."

The Family, BY H. LEO BOLES.

In a former article on "The Home" it was seen that the family is the primal institution of man, and also the greatest and holiest. It was seen that the highest type of civilization is had only when the family is kept pure; that even the church of Christ is deflied when the family is corrupted. Man's greatest happiness is realized and his mission fulfilled only in the faithful relationship of the family. The beginning, continuation, and end of his earthly life are connected with family relations, and his future life is to be enjoyed in the realization of the Fatherhood of God and the family above.

The ideal family consists in at least six members—the father, the mother, son, daughter, another son and another daughter. These six members give opportunity for the description of the control of all family relations. The relations of the and and wife, father and mother, are enjoyed; each son has a brother and sisters; each daughter has a sister and brothers; and the children enjoy the relationship of a father and mother. It may be said that, if the above relationship is true, there are but few ideal families; yet it seems to take all these members of the family to call out and develop all the relationships of family life.

The father and mother are partners in this relationship; they are equal partners. The Ten Commandments are a succinct summary of all the moral relations and duties of man. The first four of these commandments pertain to man's relation to God; the other six pertain to human relation. Of these six, three pertain to the family and become the fundamental law regulating the family life. The fifth commandment is: "Honor thy father and mother." This regulates the relationship of children to parents. It seems to imply one father and one mother in the family and thus excludes polygamy or polyandry. The equality of father and mother is clearly expressed and stamped upon the minds of the children. There is no question of the rank of the mother in the family, so far as her position in the family is concerned. There is no cloud on the majesty of mother; she stands before the children by the side of her husband, sharing with him all the respect, henor, affection, and reverence. The New Testament has not changed this relationship; for Paul, in writing to the Ephesians, quotes the commandment and tells children to obey their parents in the Lord. This shows that children are to respect the authority of mother as well as that of father. The mother of the family is not to be considered as chattel property or an inferior being. It is clearly understood that the father takes the lead as the executive of

All the relationships of the family demand one father and one mother, at least, at the same time. The Bible clearly teaches monogamy—the union for life of one man and one woman in marriage as the basis of the family. This principle is dominant throughout the whole Bible. The instances of polygamy recorded in the Bible are contrary and antagonistic to this fundamental principle of the human family. Disaster and evil consequences have followed every violation of this basic principle. The ideal of the monogamy relation has prevailed in every highly civilized country and is put in the forefront of the history of man.

The history of the human family is introduced to us with this language: "And God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." (Gen. 1: 27.) The first time that the relation of the sexes to each other was mentioned is expressed in this language. "And the man said. This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh." (Gen. 2: 23, 24.) Attention is called to the singular number of the noun, "the man" and "his wife." These words regulate the husband to one wife and the wife to one husband. Jesus, commenting upon this, said: "So that they are no more two, but one flesh." (Matt. 19; 6.) This makes marriage life-lasting; the dualism becomes an individualism; the two become one. Nothing but death can separate the man from his own flesh. The wife becomes one flesh with the husband, and nothing but death should separate them. Paul says: "For the woman that hath a husband is bound by law to the husband while he liveth; but if the husband die, she is discharged from the law of the husband." (Rom. 7: 2.)

Eve, the mother of all living, is as distinct a personality as Adam. She is a rational and accountable personality as much so as Adam. God holds her equally responsible with Adam for the sins of Eden. This shows that the wife and mother are equal partners with the husband and father in the family. Different physical consequences are placed upon Eve for the transgression, but Adam does not escape punishment for sin. The seventh commandment was intended to regulate the family and secure the blessings of the home as was originally intended in the mating of Adam and Eve. It is intended to regulate the increase of the race by having children born into the family, having them family-born, thus making both parents equally responsible for the life, training, and destiny of the children. The marriage relation sets the boundary for sex union. All sex union outside of the family is sin. This important truth needs to be thundered in the ears of the present generation. A failure upon the part of father or mother to be regulated by the principles that should govern the family begets a disrespect on the part of children for the relationship that they sustain to the family. The parents should set the example in obeying the family relationship. Like parent, like children, is a general truth in the family. We are told that Byron's mother was proud, violent, and ill-tempered; that Nero's mother was a murderess. Ahaziah was a most wicked king in Israel. for he walked in the way of his father, Ahab, and his mother, Jezebel; and we do not expect much better of him. Lord Shaftesbury said: "Give me a generation of Christian methers, and I will undertake to change the face of society in twelve months." How important for society and for the happiness of the human family for the father and mother to be regulated in the family by the principles of God's truth!

Those "Stumblingblocks."

BY LEE JACKSON.

After reading the strictures of Brother Kurfees on what had been said by J. B. Lehman in regard to his "stumblingblocks" in Mississippi, I was reminded of some things written and published in the Gospel Advocate by our lamented brother, David Lipscomb, more than twenty-five years ago. I have preserved these things in a scrapbook, and it is from this scrapbook that I make quotations.

in reply to an article written by a Mississippian, wherein the claim had been set forth that other agencies besides the local congregations were necessary in order to carry on the work of the Lord successfully. Brother Lipscomb said: "There is not the shadow of any universal church in the New Testament, nor is there the representation of a tangible church, or of one that may be reached and associated with, save the local church." And in support of his contention for the completeness and sufficiency of the local congregation as an agency for the maintenance of missionary and benevolent work, Brother Lipscomb cited the following passages: "They assembled themselves with the church.' (Acts 11: 26.) 'When they had ordained them elders in every church." (Acts 14: 23.) 'When they were come, and had gathered the church together.' (Acts 14: 27.) Being brought on their way by the church.' (Acts 15: 3:) 'Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas.' (Acts 15: 22,) When he had landed at Cesarca, and gone up, and saluted the church. (Acts 18: 22.) 'Greet the church that is in their house. (Rom, 16: 5.) 'Unto the church of God which is at Corinth.' (1 Cor. 1: 2) 'As I teach everywhere in every church,' (1 Cor. 4: 17.) 'If therefore the whole church be come together in one place,' (1 Cor. 14: 23:)" These, and other passages were quoted, and then Brother Lipscomb said: "These passages might be indefinitely multiplied. No one can possibly doubt that they apply to the individual and local churches." These passages were used by Brother Lipscomb for the purpose of showing that each separate congregation is an independently distinct institution, and that if it is worshiping and working according to New Testament teaching it thus fulfills all that the New Testament means by "church," and fulfills all that is required in order to successfully do the Lord's work in saving sinners. The stumblingblocks that have caused the downfall of so many congregations in Mississippl, as elsewhere, have come as the result of efforts to reach beyond what the New Testament teaches and requires. Men and women love to make a show before the world-love to advertise their own personal importanceand, therefore, become dissatisfied with the simple things which the Lord has ordained for the confounding of the wisdom of the world. Men in their vanity love to feel that they are identified with some general institution, either as a general "Christian Church" or general "church of Christ," and in their zeal for this general institution they torget the necessity for the spiritual upbuilding of the local congregations. This desire to be able to boast of the great things that "our general church" is doing, or of the great amount of money that "our society" controls, has been a very great stumblingblock in the pathway of so many peopic-a stumblingblock in the pathway of those who, with consecration and humble-mindedness, could have done so much for the Lord's cause.

In the article to which I refer Brother Lipscomb continues; " 'He is the head of the body, the church,' (Col. 1: 18.) 'For his body's sake, which is the church.' (Verse 24.) 'Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular" (1 Cor. 12; 27); and he compares one member to an eye, one to the foot, one to the ear, the hand, etc., showing beyond all doubt that the church at Corinth was a complete body of Christ within itself and without reference to any other church or Christian in the world. He speaks of the 'whole church' at one place. We say sometimes, man is erect. We do not mean by this that there is a being consolidating all the men in a State, nation, or the world, that is erect; but we mean erectness is a quality common to all men, and so we speak of man as a whole. Just so, when speaking of things common to all churches, we say the church is the body of Christ, not meaning that all the churches are consolidated together to make one body, but that each and every church is the body of Christ in its locality, and what is common to all is affirmed of the church as of one body."

Much more from the same source could be quoted. When I first began reading such teaching from the pen of Brother Lipscomb, now more than twenty-five years ago, I am ready to admit that I was in a state of confusion on the subject of the church, imagining that in some sense there must exist something as a general church in order to fill up the demands of scripture teaching. This misuuderstanding was to me a serious stumblingblock. The reading of Brother Lipscomb's articles led me to restudy the whole subject-matter of scripture teaching as to the church, and this has convinced me beyond the shadow of a doubt that it is through the local congregation, built up and made strong as an effective working force, that the wisdom of God is to be manifested to the powers and principalities for the pulling down of vain imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and the bringing into captivity the thoughts of men to the obedience of Christ. (2 Cor. 10: 5; Eph. 3: 10.) Men in their vanity have sought out many devices for the conversion of the nations and the regeneration of society: but when the trying crisis of war or famine comes, their most cherished ideals are shattered. After centuries of religious working under the most powerful ecclesiastical machinery, endowed with millions of money, only recently a blow was struck that caused the highest civilization in Europe to show itself a failure. Hatred of the vilest type became the actuating force in the hearts of men, and bloody and cruel war broke loose right at a time when men and women were languidly resting under the delusion that the civilized world had gotten beyond that sort of hellish work. And yet, with all of the past bloody lessons before us, we are slow to learn. Everywhere at this present time men are working to bring about stronger organizations and to collect larger sums of money, laboring under the old delusion that organization and money are all that is required to convert the world and bring in a reign of universal peace. Some well-meaning, but misguided, enthusiasts are laboring under the impression that the Almighty has ordained that President Wilson shall organize a League of Nations that will pave the way for the return of the Jews to Palestine and usher in the reign of millennium. Truly the human Imagination is a stretchy thing when given a little room for stretching. A great stumblingblock in the way of many people is this imagination that if they were only attached to some great organization they could do great things. The attachment might Inflate their foolish vanity, but they would be no greater than before. Money is a great thing, and when rightly used it is a great blessing to the world; but when wrongly used, it is a great curse. The leaven for the lump of human society is the congregation of Christians permeated by the Spirit of Christ, working and worshiping as God has ordained, and no organization nor wealth of money can ever be effectively substituted in its place.

Training Little Children

By MRS. RUTH HEPPNER SWAINE.

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Be Kind, but Firm, in Your Insistence on the Right.

The child is a primitive little being. His desires are near the surface, and primarily very selfish. He wants all things for his own. He must also be first in everything; and if he is the biggest force in the play group, what more natural than that he should try to make everything conform to his wishes? But this child, if once actuated by the right, becomes the most generous, the most considerate, and the gentlest of little fellows. A few words, a firm but kind insistence on your part, and he knows the pleasure of giving up for others.

All children have their difficulties with one another; and sometimes, if one judges by the noise in the back yard, they are very big ones.

A moment's wait will usually show whether it is wise to run and help the children readjust their little world. Do this only when necessary. Hold your breath behind the door, and see if happily they are not righting the situation themselves. Even the physical hurts need much less sympathy than the average mother is apt to bestow. Would we coddle our children into becoming physical cowards? From earliest babyhood begin to turn their attention when hurt to some new interest, and observe how quickly the pain is forgotten.

A strong conviction has grown out of the passing years of my motherhood that the greatest service a mother can do her child is to teach him self-reliance. If you begin with the baby, the habit forms easily, and before you know it self-reliance has really become a habit with him. Hold yourself free from fear as he tries out his growing powers. Watch alertly, but wait. Let him try the reach that may topple him over, but secures for him the bright ball. Let him make all the moves he wants to, and, if necessary, be there to catch him as he falls. Hesitate long before you turn a child deliberately away from the thing he has set his heart on doing. Strong initiative is too glorious a characteristic to nip in the bud. Try for one day to stop and think before you deprive your child of the pleasure of simple achievement.

There are countless little tasks a child can do for himself to help mother. Each mother will think of many of these in the course of a day. Remember that in the child's world of new impressions the most trite acts to us are to him the most delightful of plays.

Play is the vital employment of childhood. The art of playing alone, being friends with himself, is a foundation for self-reliance in greater things later in life. A child cannot be more than contented. So besitate, dear mother, to interfere when your child is quietly employing himself in his own chosen way, even if it is only baby with his toes. Let the spell last as long as it will; the next will last longer. Soon your child of three will play hours by himself. The busy mother often needs this respite.

Desire is wrong when indulged in such a way that the failure of what we desire makes us discontented. Mere discontent—a sort of sourness that grows upon people who see themselves outstripped in the race of life, an inclination to be fretful and think themselves injured or overlooked, a disposition to give up everything in despair because they are not so successful as others—is not this the temptation of the man with the one talent, the man whom, after all, most everyday people resemble. Many of us need a sharp illness or bereavement to make us realize how very much there is to be thankful for even in a commonplace lot. Perhaps a visit to the incurable ward of a workhouse, where we see an invalid lying on her back for years, yet so happy to try a new pattern of patchwork or to get hold of a new book, or so grateful for some tiny luxury in the way of food, puts us sometimes to the blush. I used to think the man with the one talent-if such a thing may be said without irreverence-was a man who had a rather hard measure dealt out to him; but the experiences of life show every year more forcibly what a strong lesson needs to be given to the mediocre and those just above medlocrity-that is, to most of us Christians who have not the stimulus of brilliant success and great opportunities or the very strong impulse of a special call, and yet who might be such very valuable men and women if we would be cheerful and thankful and "faithful in a little." -Elizabeth Wordsworth.

Hope looks up and onward with glad expectancy, and is unknown except among the Christians. The heathen world is hopeless. Four hundred million Chinamen look back and down, worshiping their ancestors. Three hundred million Hindus long to be lost in vague unconsciousness because active life to them is full of terrors. But since Jesus was resurrected the Christian is jubilant with hope. The grave has no terrors for him, for he knows he will never be down in it; it only receives his cast-off body. He shall live because his Lord lives. He shall never die, but shall some day simply move out of the tenement of hisperishing body and be forever with the Lord. His friends who died in the Lord are not dead, but living, robed in splendors, throned in light, washed from every stain and freed from every throb of pain. Blessed be God for the streams of light pouring forth from the open and empty grave of Jesus, flooding the future with joyous hope-hope that smites the face with radiance and that maketh not ashamed!-War Cry.

A True Friend.

BY JAMES R. REDD.

When you've spent all your "dough,"
And you've nowhere to go.
And earth friends you have no other.
There's one that is true.
And she'll welcome you,
"Tis your dear, old, gray-haired mother.

You were clothed and fed At the old homestead Where to night she utters a prayer: Though her poor heart aches Till it almost breaks, Yet you'll find her waiting there.

Now she's wrinkled and bent, And her life's well-nigh spent For you, my sister and brother. Though she's feeble and slow, Yet her heart's all aglow With the love of a true, noble mother.

Why longer roam?
Why not go home?
And cheer her while you can?
She gave you birth,
She's the best friend on earth.
Go, care for her like a man.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

We appreciated a visit last week from Andrew Perry, of Watseka, III.

- J. Pettey Ezell will begin a meeting at Springfield, Tenn., on August 24.
- L. S. White, of Sherman, Texas, began a meeting at Lebanon, Tenn., last Sunday.
- C. H. Baker reports large crowds and good attention in the meeting at Mount Vernon, Ky.
- W. N. Carter writes that he has been preaching eight days at Bartlett, Texas, and reports eight additions. Of these, seven were by baptism.

Brother Elam writes us that he is in a fine meeting at Viola, Tenn. Five persons had been baptized and there was a "general confession of faults and praying for one another."

A. B. Lipscomb reports a good start in the meeting with the Fairview congregation on the Hillsboro road. Two young ladies made the good confession at the first evening service.

John E. Dunn, who recently returned from France, gave an interesting lecture Sunday morning at the Russell Street Church, in Nashville. His theme was "Religious Conditions in France."

Married, at the Hermitage Hotel, in Nashville, on Saturday, August 9, Mr. Dale Younger, of Columbia, Tenn., to Miss Lula Mai Green, of Franklin, Tenn., A. B. Lipscomb officiating. We extend many good wishes.

From I. B. Bradley, Phil Campbell, Ala., August 4: "I am glad the special numbers are to come out. I know they will all be gems. I am in a very interesting meeting here. Only a few brethren. One added last night."

From J. Clifford Murphy, Ethridge, Tenn., August 8:
"Our meeting of ten days' duration at Riversburg, five miles north of Pulaski, closed on Wednesday morning at the water, six in all being baptized. I go next to Lincoln County, near Fayetteville."

From F. C. Sowell, Paul's Valley, Okla, August 6: "I have just closed a fine meeting at Garrett, Texas, with nineteen added to the army of the Lord. I began last night at Paul's Valley. This is a mission field, but prospects are good for a fine meeting."

Z. D. Barber has closed a successful meeting at New Bethel, near Judsonia. Ark. Ten obeyed the gospel and two were restored to fellowship. Brother Barber is now at Mount Zion, near Newark. Five have been baptized and the prospect is very encouraging. His next point is Magness, Ark.

A sister writes from Flat Rock, Tenn.: "Elder S. T. Nix began a meeting here on July 27, which continued eight days and nights. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, the interest and attendance were exceedingly good. One was added from the Baptists and seed was sown for a future harvest."

From H. M. Phillips, Tuscumbia, Ala., August 8: "I have just closed a meeting at Barton. There were good crowds, fine interest, and one baptism. I will go to Christian Chapel, near Kenton, Tenn., next week, for a meeting. The 'Giving' Number of the Gospel Advocate was excellent. Give us some more special numbers."

James E. Chessor writes: "I have just received your splendid special 'Giving' Number and read a few of the articles, among them L. L. Brigance's on 'How Much to Give.' Couched in his usual simple English and strengthened by faultless logic and scriptural argument, this article is good enough for a tract and should have a wide reading."

From L. K. Harding, Trenton, Fla., August 6: "The meeting here is eleven days old, with twenty-six additions to date—nine to-day. Large audiences, splendid coworkers among the brethren, excellent singing. I go to Stover, Miss., next, where the body of Christ is represented by one good woman. I leave for Henning, Tenn., my home, on August 11."

Married, at Chisca Hotel, in Memphis, Tenn., on August 8, Mr. Oliver Wendell Hall to Sister Annie Pearl Brummette. Mr. Hall is a business man of Wheatley, Ark., who has served his country in France lately. Sister Brummette is of Brownsville, Tenn., and is one of our most faithful members of the church of Christ, W. S. Long officiated. We wish them a life of happiness.

From A. J. Traylor: "C. E. Wooldridge and I have been in a meeting at Lascassas, with large crowds, excellent singing, and great interest manifested. Two were baptized into Christ, one of them from the Baptists. She said that was the first gospel preaching she ever heard. The harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Let us pray and work to get more laborers into the harvest."

From W. S. Long, Sharon, Tenn., August 10; "The meeting at Cliff Creek, near Brownsville, closed at the water on Sunday afternoon with twenty additions to the one body. This is one of the best congregations in Haywood County. I made my home with James Alken. It is a delightful home for a hard-working preacher. I preached three times in Brownsville, with one baptism. The meeting in Sharon starts off with good interest."

From C. N. Hudson, Lobelville, Tenn., August 8: "I closed a five-days' meeting with the home church last night, with three baptized and four reclaimed. This brings the total of baptisms at this place by the writer since 1910 up to ninety-nine. So we feel that God has been with us in our efforts for good. C. L. Mitchell, of Cuba Landing, conducted the song service. We will begin at Bakerville on the night of August 9, if the Lord wills."

From G. Dallas Smith, Cleburne, Texas, August 1: "I closed a meeting at Killeen last Sunday night with three baptized and one restored to the fellowship. This is the home of our good brother, A. J. McCarty, who has recently lad to give up all work and go to bed. It is doubtful if he will ever be able to preach any more. He has been a strong, vigorous, and thoroughly earnest worker in the Lord's vineyard for many years, and it almost breaks his heart to have to give up the work. May the Lord abundantly bless him and his and greatly multiply his kind on the earth."

From L. S. White, Sherman, Texas, August 5: "Recently I held a meeting for the Central church of Christ, in Houston, which continued over three Sundays and the two intervening weeks, with two services daily. G. A. Dunn is the minister of this church, and he, together with several other preachers who live in Houston, worked hard for the meeting. Twelve persons were added to the congregation, several of them by baptism. The church is planning to buy a lot and build a house in the heart of the city. The building of the new church house in Sherman is going right ahead. We expect to complete it before the end of the year."

Earl M. Hodson writes from Leighton, Ala., August 4: "With great pleasure I have read the 'Giving' Number of the Gospel Advocate. I cannot say in words how much wish that every member of the church of Christ would read and put into practice the teaching and suggestions contained in this issue of the Advocate; and if done, I believe that the Bible teaching on giving would bring re-I do not see why sults such as the world has never seen. every elder, every minister, and every devoted follower of the Master does not advocate the giving taught in 1 Cor. 9: 13, 14-the tenth of all; then how wonderfully would the gospel be sent through our homeland and to foreign Let us urge giving as never before, the giving of the tithes, for we have something more to give the world than have those organizations which are tithing. Personally, my wife and 1 do this and much more, and we know the blessedness of doing so. Teach tithing and preach it, and let us do more than ever before

From R. D. Smith, Denton, Texas, July 31: "The meeting at Lewisville closed last Sunday night after continuing fifteen days. There were two baptisms, and several confessed their faults and asked to be restored. As is so common, some differences had arisen and estrangements had resulted, and we consider it the best work of the meeting that these matters were adjusted. The best part of the matter, according to my way of thinking, was the fact that those who were concerned in the matters all showed penitence. I feel sure that this is the beginning of better things for them. The Lewisville church is composed of an excellent lot of people, and, with the splendid equipment they have, there is no estimating the good they may accomplish, and we believe them intent upon doing Their treatment of the writer during the two all they can. meetings held this and last year was most courteous and They made the very best arrangements for my comfort, and I could wish no better support than they supplied. May God bless the church at Lewisville and prosper them according to their worthy work."

Brother E. L. Jorgenson's "Challenge" and the Facts in Reply.

BY M. C. K.

Choosing the circuitous route extending from Louisville to Nashville and from Nashville back to Louisville, Brother E. L. Jorgenson, in a letter to Brother J. C. McQuiddy, sent the writer of this article a "challenge" by this indirect and roundabout way. But the point of chief interest in this particular attempt at strategy is not the choice of a circultous route by which to send a challenge, but it is the fact that he would dare to send such a challenge under such circumstances at all. What could be his motive in sending a challenge which, as the reader will see from the facts, he must have known could not with propriety, and, therefore would not, be accepted? Going through with such a hollow and empty form, which is only one link in a long chain of similar disingenuous proceedings, is enough to make the angels weep; and the only rational ground on which to explain his sending a challenge which, if he had proper regard for facts, he knew would not be accepted, was his desire to make capital of the refusal; and hence, as the truth with the real situation in such a case, in the face of such maneuvering, ought to be known, we deem it necessary to give to the public ourselves both his challenge and the facts which not only justify the refusal, but show what would be the utter absurdity of any other course. His challenge, going by way of Nashville through Brother McQuiddy's hands and back to Louisville, is as follows:

I ask you to communicate to Brother Kurfees my own personal challenge on the following proposition: "Re-solved, That the discipline exercised by the Highland church of Christ upon C. A. Taylor and R. O. Rubel was scriptural." E. L. Jorgenson affirms; M. C. Kurfees denies. Brother Kurfees has spread it far and wide that our disciplinary action was an unholy proceeding, an unmitigated outrage, cruel injustice, high-handed wickedness, a great wrong, a crime, an unchristian course, in which we "were determined not to be just," etc. Moreover, you have refused to publish my answer to the further challenges put forth by him in the Gospel Advocate of October 10, 1918. In view of these things, I feel justified in challenges him this time to meet me in this aver. lenging him this time, to meet me in this way.

Now the reader will be thoroughly prepared to draw the correct conclusion after pendering the fact that such a challenge was sent under the circumstances set forth in the answer which was promptly sent to him, and which is as follows:

Hotel Watterson, Louisville, Ky., July 22, 1919,-Mr. J. C. McQuiddy, care of the Gospel Advocate, 317 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Brother McQuiddy: Your letter inclosing one from Brother E. L. Jorgenson of July 11, 1919, requesting "you to communicate to" me his "personal challenge" contained therein, is received.

Replying at once to this characteristic, but thoroughly understood, stratagem, "I ask you to communicate to Jorgenson the information, since his memory seems to be somewhat defective, that he is rather late with this little ruse, there being a challenge on the identically same proposition now on his own hands, and has been there for about a year, from the publishers of the Gospel Advocate, which he not only never met, but furnished posi-tive proof that he could not meet. Yea, more, you may refresh his memory with the significant fact, for some reason strangely overlooked by him, that he was twice confronted with the same challenge on the same proposi-tion, once before a company of men in private and once before the public, and on both occasions be himself furnished the incontestable proof that he could not meet it.

Moreover, to enable him to see the true setting of his present maneuver and the bright light which it casts upon his unique career, a résumé of certain facts seems necessarily called for; and you will, therefore, please further remind him that, before "Brother Kurfees," or anybody else connected with the Gospel Advocate, "spread" anything anywhere about the sad and most regrettable case in the Highland Church, and before the Gospel Advocate itself said anything on it, in order that it might certainly avoid doing injustice either to him, to the church, or to those withdrawn from, it took the time and incurred the expense of sending a personal representative from Nashville to Louisville to the Highland Church to ascertain what Rubel and Taylor had done that led to the with drawal from them. Both sides were called together and Brother Jorgenson and his allies were patiently heard from eight o'clock in the evening till about midnight, and neither he nor any one else could name a solitary thing in the conduct of the two men, except that they differed from and opposed certain doctrines which he was teaching. At the close of that long and tedious session, with not a single act of disorderly conduct named against either of the two men, the Advocate representative stated to them frankly that, returning to Nashville the next day, he would be compelled to condemn their action in withdrawing from such men with nothing against them except that they opposed what they believed to be false doctrine. They then besought him to remain and have another con-ference the next evening, saying that they had many things which they had not yet presented. Feeling confident that, if there had been anything to the point, they, of course, would promptly have presented it that evening, he protested against staying over another day, but finally yielded, being determined to give them every possible opportunity to produce evidence, if there was any, to justify their action, and an appointment was made for another conference the next evening. It also lasted till near midnight and ended precisely as the other had ended, with absolutely nothing from the record against Rubel and Taylor, except their opposition to teaching which they believed to be contrary to the word of God.

Following this utter and complete failure to name anything against them that was disorderly, the Gospel Advocate, in its issues of June 20 and June 27, 1918, published a joint statement from Rubel and Taylor and condemned the action of the church in withdrawing from them, basing the condemnation on the incontrovertible facts furnished by Brother Jorgenson and his allies themselves, showing that they had nothing to justify the withdrawal.

You may further refresh Brother Jorgenson's memory with the fact that, following this public condemnation of his unbrotherly and unjustifiable action against Rubel and Taylor, and the exposure of his utter and inglorious failure to show any disorderly act in their conduct, he began to receive letters of inquiry, asking him to explain why, under such circumstances, he would withdraw from them, and in reply to these inquiries he began to write private letters stating that he had "startling" things against Rubel and Taylor which had not been given in the Advocate, and that, if the people could "see the facts," they would be "amazed" at the Advocate's "slander and misrepresentation."

Fortunately, through the kindness of some of the reciplents of these private letters, he was caught by the publishers in this underhand attempt. He should profit by the wisdom of the author of King Lear:

"Time shall unfold what plaited cunning hides."

Learning from an incontrovertible source of this attempt through private letters to injure Rubel and Taylor with those who knew not the facts, the publishers of the Gospel Advocate, justly indignant at this piece of unrighteousness, promptly challenged him to produce at once, for publication in the Advocate's columns, the alleged "startling" things that justified the church in its action against them, and thus to furnish proof of the very identical proposition which he now puts forth with his feint challenge, evidently hoping to reach some persons with it who do not know these facts. In their vigorous and pointed letter to bim, the publishers, among other things, said:

"For the express purpose of informing ourselves before saying anything on the case, Brother A. B. Lipscomb, one of our editors, took the time and went to the expense of a to Louisville, where, in the long conference referred to with both sides, he repeatedly called on you and others to name some word or deed in the conduct of these brethren that makes them unworthy of Christian fellowship and justifies you in withdrawing it from them; but you utterly failed to name a solitary word or deed of the kind, and anybody with a grain of intelligence knows that you would have done so if you could. . . . We have been duly apprised of at least one of the recent turns in your tactics. . . You are writing private letters over the country attempting to create the impression that Brethren Rubel and Taylor are gullty of bad conduct not reported in our columns, saying that you 'have startling and unpublished disclosures to make,' and touching our defense of the good name and character of these men, that, when the people 'see the facts,' they 'will be startled and amazed that the Advocate could stoop to such slander and misrepresentation.' Now, we promptly meet this unbrotherly and underhand work of yours in attempting privately to injure two good men by challenging you to produce at once the alleged 'startling and unpublished disclosures which you have 'to make.' You shall not, in our You shall not, in our knowledge, attempt to smirch the reputation of these good whose characters are known by us to be above reproach, without being held strictly responsible for your We have not attempted to shield them from exposure for any bad conduct, and we would not knowingly do so; but we do not hesitate to tell you that we look upon your private attempt as nothing more than a part of the ques-tionable and underhand method which has marked your career in the Highland Church and led to its division, and we do not believe for one moment that you have anything against them that can be properly thus described; but you say that you have, and that we are guilty of 'slander and misrepresentation,' and we demand that you at once either produce specifications in both cases in confirmation of your charges or be further exposed in our columns yourself.

You will please further refresh Brother Jorgenson's memory with the quite significant fact that, unexpectedly confronted with this bar to his clandestine tactics, he took several days before writing the publishers at all, and then he only wrote to say that he had decided to accept their challenge, but asked for time to prepare his case. When, however, the time came, his acceptance proved to be an unmitigated sham, as shown by the significant fact that, although he used nine columns of the Gospel Advocate he merely filled them with a hotchpotch of irrelevant things, a manifest resort to camouflage, and did not name a solitary act of Rubel and Taylor that justified withdrawal from them, or that even had the appearance of being distorderly, much less did he name anything that was "startling;" and upon the farce which he had thus enacted the publishers made the following comment:

"And, sure enough, Brother Jorgenson had nothing! It is indeed a shameful procedure to write such letters in such a case. If the reader will read his lengthy article, he will see that our brother does not specify one solltary act against Rubel and Taylor, except just such acts and act against Rubel and Taylor, except just such acts and such a course as any godly man would be compelled to pursue, or some equivalent to it, in opposing his false teaching. Yet he had circulated the statement in private letters that he had "startling and unpublished disclosures" to make and that the Advocate had stooped to "slander and misrepresentation." Since he had not only not given a solltary specification to make good his unbrotherly attack, but had merely taken advantage of our challenge to get more of the Boll propaganda before our readers, we wish here to say, in defense of our judgment and sense of propriety as publishers of the Gospel Advocate, that we promptly decided to return his article with the refusal to publish in our paper such a thing in reply to such a challenge, and it is only in deference to the very vigorous and earnest insistence of Brethren Kurfees, Rubel, and Taylor, and other brethren in Louisville, their reasons for which are given in their reply to the document, that we gave our consent at all, and even then reluctantly, to let it appear In our columns.

Hence, when they received from him another long-drawn hotchpotch of irrelevant things which he calls his to the further challenges," they, of course, declined to dignify it with a place in their columns. Moreover, as Moreover, as the facts show, he is indebted to me and to other Louisville brethren for being permitted to see his first specimen of that sort in the Advocate at all; but we felt that, in Justice to the cause of truth and righteousness, the public should see his characteristic manner of dodging and attempting to confuse the issue and the people with a mullitude of irrelevant things and how complete his failure was to meet the challenge; and we knew that his long-drawn hotchpotch article would not only clearly show this but that it would also show that his acceptance of the challenge was only a sham to hide, if possible, his flagrant mistreatment of two good men who stood in the way of his opinions and whom he induced his church, by a majority vote, to east out. Furthermore, if his memory of things is not too defective, he knew when he sent his present feint challenge that a proper sense of propriety would not allow me to accept it; but this, of course, could not prevent his telling, where the facts might not be known, that he sent me a "personal challenge" and I would not accept it! I shall take pleasure in doing what I can to help him advertise the fact that I would not accept such a challenge under such circumstances. This turn in his tacties is exactly on a par with the finesse and scheming which, for four years, have marked his unfortunate course in the Highland Church in executing, by public and private efforts, mainly the latter, the unreasoning determination of himself and others to press their opinions. But the facts in connection with this last ruse may become more widely known than he imagines. "It is a long lane that has no turning;" and our sadly misguided brother should know that, while he may succeed for a time in hiding from men such scheming, yet it will be certain to come to light sometime and in some way.

Finally, as you know, we ceased long ago to ask Brother Jorgenson for anything against Rubel and Taylor. We know that he has nothing. He himself furnished the incontestable proof that he has not. Why should we pay any attention to a fake challenge from him on the identically same proposition on which the publishers of the Advocate challenged him and on which he himself furnished the proof to a demonstration that he had nothing? Hence, you will please "communicate to Brother Jorgenson the reminder that the debate on his proposition is closed; that the issue over it was joined about a year ago by himself and the publishers of the Gospel Advocate, when they forced him to the demonstration that he could produce nothing against Rubel and Taylor, except their opposition to his false and hurtful dectrines; that all that "Brother Kurfees has spread far and wide" is this loud and telling fact furnished by Brother Jorgenson himself; that, knowing he could not possibly hurt his case or make it worse than it already is, he now only seeks an occasion to confuse the people and, if possible, break the force of facts against him in his indefensible position; that "Brother Kurfees" declines to assist him in getting the publicity he thus seeks: that, instead of joining him in the farce of a debate over a proposition on which he himself was challenged about a year ago and turnished the proof that he had nothing, "Brother Kurfees" will merely continue to state this fact wherever he has occasion to say anything at all, and that he will do this in the hope that Brother Jorgenson will yet do what he can to make amends for his ruthless mistreatment of, and his unjust withdrawal from, two imperfect, but noble and worthy, bretheren in the Lord, thus righting as far as he can the great wrong which he has done.

Praying that the misguided perpetrators of this most unjust and inexcusable deed may yet be led to repentance, I remain, Yours most fraternally, M. C. Kurfees.

Is There a Literal Hell.

BY J. C. MIQ.

I have been requested to write an article on the subject of a hell of fire. The following letter from Brother J. J. Whitlock is self-explanatory:

Please write in the next issue of the Gospei Advocate an article on "hell." I have some friends around my place, or office, who like to read my paper, the Advocate, and they say it just suits them. However, they say that they do not believe in hell as being a lake of fire and brimstone that burns forever, and that the Bible does not teach such. I know it does, but do not know just where to find all the references to make it clear to them. So, if you will write an article on this subject, I believe it will do some good.

It is undoubtedly true that in days past some preachers depended too much on moving people by fear of torment rather than by inducing them to live lives of righteousness because God is a God of love, and "perfect love casteth out fear." People Imagine many things concerning hell for which there is no warrant either in the Old Testament or the New Testament. This abuse of the teaching of the word of God on the subject of hell led some preachers to conclude that there is no hell in the Bible at all. The pendulum always swings from one extreme to the other. Some have gone so far as to say that "the Revised Version has done away with heil," This doctrine has grown so popular that we do not hear much preaching on the subject of hell at the present time. As vox populi is not vox Dei, or the voice of the people is not the voice of God, our chief concern should be to know just what the word of God teaches on the subject. We are not concerned about whether there has been a change in the preaching on "hell" or not. I freely admit that there has been a change in the preaching on the subject, but I do not admit that there has been any change in the teaching of the Bible on the subject of hell. When we observe the conduct of the lawless, the criminal, and the murderer, we are constrained to believe that there should be a hell, to say the least of it. There should be a place of terment for the wicked and a place of joy for the righteous.

THE WORD "HELL"

The word "hell" occurs thirty-two times in the King James Version of the Old Testament. The word "hell," in the American Revision, does not occur in the Old Testament at all. Where the word "bell" occurs thirty-two times in the King James Version, we have in the American Revision the Hebrew word "Sheol." This is simply a transliterated word which meant to the Jewish mind the unseen world whither went the spirits of men at death. It was "the underworld, the land of darkness, of the shadow of death, where the light is as darkness, with its gates and bars, its subterranean depths swallowing men allve, its snares taking hold of the living; insatiable, stern and cruel," says Matthews in his sermon on "The Fear of Hell," As pictured to the Jewish mind, it thus stood for the unseen world without any reference to the pains and penalties that souls might suffer as a final retribution for sin. The American Revision Committee was justified in leaving out the word "hell," as the Hebrew word "Sheol," which is variously translated "the grave, the pit, or the underworld," does not have in it the idea of retribution for sin. The thought of retribution is invariably connected with hell in our minds. Our idea of hell is not contained in the Hebrew word "Sheel." "Sheel" simply conveys the idea of the unseen world, the same as does the Greek word "Hades." In order, therefore, to get the idea of punishment or retribution for sin, we must look to another word. The idea of eternal punishment for sin is not contained in the Old Testament at all. The Old Testament as a revelation is incomplete, fragmentary, and prophetic. Its sayings about the future life of the godly or ungodly are sometimes vague, indefinite, and imperfect. Here and there is a ray of light from the lips of prophet or seer which gives us hope concerning immortality. We cannot, however, appeal to the Old Testament for the terms of salvation or conditions of pardon. Its doctrine is not a perfect doctrine concerning the retribution beyond the grave. To the New Testament we must go for a full revelation of the truth, for the plan of salvation, and for the idea of reward and punishment after death. "God, having of old time spoken unto the fathers in the prophets by divers portions and in divers manners, hath at the end of these days spoken unto us in his Son, whom he appointed heir of all things, through whom also he made the worlds." (Heb. 1: 1, 2.) In the New Testament, in the King James Version, the word "hell" occurs twenty-three times. In the American Revision the word "hell" occurs only thirteen times. The King James Version translates "Hades" ten times "hell;" the American Revised Version inserts the word "Hades" instead of "hell," which is a transliterated word. "Hades" means the unseen world, and in these ten passages has no reference to hell at all. The passages do not teach retribution for sin. In the American Revision we find the Hebrew word "Gehenna" translated twelve times "hell." Eleven times Christ himself used the word. One time it occurs in James 3: 6. The Hebrew word "Gehenna" Christ finds current among the Jews in the sense of retribution of the wicked, and in this sense Christ uses the word. The word "Gehenna" means literally "the valley of Hinnom." The Jews so abhorred the place that they cast into it not only all refuse, but even the dead bodies of animals and of unburied criminals who had been executed. This narrow valley was in Old Testament times the scene of the idolatrous worship of Moloch, to whom the apostate Jews burnt even infants in sacrifice. King Josiah, in his work of reformation (2 Kings 23), desecrated the abominable place; and since fires were always needed to consume the dead bodies, that the air might not become tainted by their putrefaction, it came to pass that the place was called "the Gehenna of fire."

EXAMPLES OF CHRIST'S USE OF THE WORD.

Now, the interest that we should have in the doctrine of hell turns on the use made of this word "Gehenna" by the Lord Jesus Christ. I refer to some of the passages in which he used the word. Matt. 5: 22 reads: "But I say unto you, that every one who is angry with his brother shall be in danger of the judgment; and whoseever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council; and whoseever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of the hell of fire." Thus the Savior makes the phrase, "the hell of fire," the place of future punishment for the wicked. Christ said what he meant when he said "the hell of fire." Also, read verse 29 of the same chapter: "And if thy right eye causeth thee to stumble, pluck it out. and cast it from thee; for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not thy whole body be east into hell." The word occurs again in Matt. 23: 33: "Ye serpents, ye offspring of vipers, how shall ye escape the judgment of hell?" This shows bell to be a place of condemnation and retribution for sin. Does it not sound solemn and awful? In Mark 9: 47, 48, note the use that Jesus made of "Gehenna," translated "hell:" "And if thine eye cause thee to stumble, cast it out: it is good for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell; where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." Here are other strong passages showing how terrible it is to be cast into hell: "But I will warn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him, who after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him," (Luke 12: 5.) "And be not afraid of them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." (Matt. 10: 28.) I might quote other passages containing the word "hell" as used by Christ, but space forbids. The word occurs also in 2 Pet. 2: 4: "For if God spared not angels when they sinned, but east them down to hell, and committed them to pits of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment," etc. This is not from the Hebrew word "Gehenna," but from the Greek word "Tartaroo"-Tartaros, the name of a subterranean region, doleful and dark, regarded by the ancient Greeks as the abode of the wicked dead, where they suffer punishment for their evil deeds. It answers to the Gehenna of the Jews. Thus we see that both the Jews and the Greeks regarded hell as a place of terrible retribution and punishment for the wicked. As we find that a "hell of fire" is still retained in the Bible, the important question for us is, what are we going to do to shun such a place? Will we heed the solemn warning of God and live soherly, righteously, and godly, so as to avoid that terrible place?

THE DOOM OF HELL.

As the word of God abides, so does hell. Conscience bears witness of hell. Human experience vindicates the truth of the Scriptures concerning hell. In the dens of vice and crime, the gambling hole, the barroom, the brothel, where men and women riot in debauchery, we may get a vague idea of the awful misery of hell. From the assassin, the murderer, and the drunkard we may have a faint conception of the awful doom of hell. "And to you that are afflicted rest with us, at the revelation of the Lord Jesus from heaven with the angels of his power in flaming fire, rendering vengeance to them that know not God, and to them that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus: who shall suffer punishment, even eternal destruction from the face of the Lord and from the glory of his might."

The Spirit of Christ. No. 2.

[Republished from "Salvation from Sin" (Chapter XII.), by David Lipscomb.]

CHRIST'S SPIRIT ONE OF SELF-DENIAL,

The spirit of Christ was one of self-denial. This was possibly his most striking characteristic. It was shown in his whole mission and life. It was self-denial for the good of others. He left the throne of the universe, where he was so highly exalted in honor and glory that it was no robbery of God, no derogation of his honor, for Christ to be made equal with God. He came to earth to be born in a manger; to live with no place to lay his head; to wear the crown of thorns and die on the cross; to lift up and exalt rebellious, sinful, dying man. His whole life was one of denying self of all fleshly gratifications, of refusing earthly honors, that in his self-denial and humiliation he might saye man.

If we would have Christ's spirit, we must have the same desire to deny self. We must be willing to deny fleshly gratifications and self-seeking pride, forego earthly pleasures, comforts, possessions, and honors, to save our fellow men. A man who, in order to gain riches and honors, to gratify the flesh or secure earthly place, is willing to see men suffer and go down to eternal darkness without God.

is willing to see God's laws trampled under foot and dishonored, rather than give up all for him, does not possess the spirit of Christ and can be none of his. He who is determined to have good things in this life must be content with evil things in the world to come. "Abraham said [unto the rich man], Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and Lazarus in like manner evil things: but now here he is comforted, and thou art in anguish," (Luke 16: 25.) Jesus said: "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever would save his life shall lose it: and whoseever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it." (Matt. 16: 24, 25.) It is not only needful that man should sacrifice this personal pride and gratification, but he must have the same disposition to have no will of his own; his pleasure, his meat and his drink must be to do the will of God who is in heaven. This firm, patient, tenacious, unyielding adherence to and maintenance of the word of God in all its parts is entirely compatible with the spirit of gentleness, kindness, mercy, and love that shone forth in the life of humiliation, selfdenial, and tenderness manifested by Christ. It is not only compatible with that spirit of charity that without measure was manifested in the life of the Son of God, but is an essential part of the spirit of Christ, its chiefest characteristic of that spirit, and without that spirit we are none of his.

CHRIST WAS KIND AND FORUTVING.

Christ was tender and gentle, kind and forgiving to humanity. Because he was, it is assumed that he looks with allowance upon the departures from divine law of men who worship him. He has constantly guarded against such assumption. He warned that " not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord," is accepted. He has warned that those are hypocrites who draw nigh unto him with their mouth and bonor him with their lips, while their heart is far from him. (See Matt. 15: 3-5.) God accepts the actions of the life as the only true expression of the heart. Hence, these people, professing to serve him, yet following the tradition of the fathers, are said to draw nigh with the lips, honor him with the mouth, but their heart is far from him. The heart is right and acceptable with God only when it seeks carnestly to know the will of God and walks in that will, neither adding to nor taking from it.

Christ was tender to the unfortunate, kind to the afflicted, and merciful to the sinning. He delivered the woman taken in adultery from those as guilty as she, who were accusing and abusing her. He refused himself to condemn her if she would sin no more. He held up the publican who "would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote his breast, saying, God, be thou merciful to me a sinner" (Luke 18: 13), as accepted of God rather than the self-righteous Pharisee who, in his religious zeal, neglected the commands of God. He received the publicans and sinners, went to their houses and ate with them, while condemning and rejecting the scribes and Pharisees as hypocrites. To understand the full force of this, we must remember that the scribes and Pharisees were religious people, devoted worshipers of God, but had changed the laws and appointments of God to suit the convenience of time and place, and had exalted the tradition of the fathers to be of equal authority and sanctity with the commandments of God. The publicans and the sinners were those who, making no pretension to religion, gave way to fleshly lust and indulgence. He had a tender regard for these. He are with them. It is said of him: "And it came to pass, as he sat at meat in the house, behold, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with Jesus and his disciples. And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his disciples, Why eateth your Teacher with the publicans and sinners? But when he heard it, he said, They that are whole have no need of a physician, but they that are sick.

But go ye and learn what this meaneth, I desire mercy, and not sacrifice: for I came not to call the righteous, but sinners," (Matt. 9: 10-13.) The self-righteous, the overconfident, that assumed a devotion that could modify or add to or take from the appointments of God, could not be saved, while the vilest sinner was the object of the Savior's tenderest compassion; and the Lord showed sympathy toward him, that he might draw him away from and out of his sins to an obedience to the law of God. His sympathy with human suffering was tender and compassionate. As the result of his walk among men, "the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, and the dead are raised up, and the poor have good tidings preached to them." (Matt. 11: 5.) Of his mission he declared: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor; he hath sent me to proclaim release to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord." (Luke 4: 18, 19.)

Over Jerusalem, that rejected him, Jesus could weep and cry: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, that killeth the prophets, and stoneth them that are sent unto her! how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her own brood under her wings, and ye would not!" (Luke 13: 34.) The reason of the awful fate that awaited them, that called out this deep sorrow, was that these people added to the laws of God and refused to receive him and turn at his warnings. God had loved Jerusalem and her people with an earnest and persistent love. Jesus sorrowed over Jerusalem with a peculiar anguish because they would not listen to his teachings and turn. The changes of the law of Moses and the failures to walk by it were the groundwork of the rejection of Jesus Christ. In his compassion for man and in his joy at redeeming man, he lived as a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, and died the excruciating death of the cross to redeem man. He did this to establish and consecrate with his own blood the perfect law of God. These sorrows, this deep grief for man, this death of shame, was endured, because without conformity to the divine law man could not be saved. Christ in the very agoules of the cross could look upon his persecutors with tenderest compassion and pray: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." (Luke 23: 34.) That prayer could only be answered through their coming to the Father's will. They worshiped God, but did not worship and serve him according to his will.

CHRIST HAS NO SYMPATHY FOR PRESUMPTION.

Notwithstanding all this tender compassion for man, all this sympathy with him in his weakness, his infirmity, his sins, there is not in the whole life and teaching of Jesus a single word of allowance or sympathy for the slightest departure from or change of the institutions of religious service or from the plain will of God. "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites!" (Matt. 23: 13), is the usual style of address to those worshipers of God who presumed to change or set aside the divine law.

God is tolerant of human weakness and infirmity. He has no forbearance with the human presumption that changes his law, modifies his ordinances, undertakes to determine what is right in his service by what seems good to man or that works best. It takes as high authority to change a law, to modify it, to add to it, to take from it, as it does to enact it. For men to assume to do any of these things is to assume the prerogative which God has reserved to himself. That is to assume the seat of God. It is the essential element of antichrist. Whosoever adds to or takes from the appointments of God, no matter how religious or devoted, he is antichrist. He who imagines, because Christ is kind to human weakness and infirmity, forgiving to human sinfulness, that he is tolerant to departures from the law of God, wholly mistakes and misapprehends the spirit of Christ. The spirit of Christ is: "I am come down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 6: 38.) Every one who possesses the spirit of Christ is jealous of the prerogatives of the Father, guards his laws against change of perversion, and seeks to bring about that state of affairs in which God's will shall "be done, as in heaven, so on earth." (Mait, 6: 10.) The spirit of Christ is the spirit that jealously guards the will and institutions of God from change or modification by human hands.

Jesus Christ had more compassion on those who nailed his fleshly body to the cross than on those who, under the garb of superior sanctity and greater devotion, changedtook from, added to-the will of his Father. One stabbed and mutilated his fleshly body; the other, his spiritual body, which he sacrificed the fleshly body to build up, and which is more precious and sacred to him than the fieshly body ever was. Let us not mistake the spirit of Christ. It never looked with allowance upon any service of God, save a faithful, loving walk in the will of God, jealously observing all the appointments of the Lord, eschewing the additions and changes of man. They all lead away from God, and whatever leads from God is sin and an enemy of God and man. Christ was the most perfect legalist this world ever saw. He complied in both spirit and letter with the law of God in its most minute particular. Not one jot or tittle could pass from God's law until all was fulfilled. This was the law from Sinal, sealed with the blood of bulls and goals. Much more jealously will be demand the observance of the law from Zion, sealed with his own lifeblood

The spirit of Christ is manifested in his unyielding attachment to the will of his Father. He under no circumstances yielded or compromised the will of God. "Till heaven and earth pass away, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass away from the law, till all things be accomplished." (Matt. 5: 18.) "It is easier for heaven and earth to pass away, than for one tittle of the law to fall." (Lake 16: 17.) Jesus Christ reverenced with a holy devotion every jot and tittle of the law of God, and in his life, with faultless obedience, walked in and fulfilled every point of that law even to the least, and with a godly jealousy guarded against the slightest departure from it. His union with God was perfected by and dependent upon his doing his commandments, and our union with God is dependent upon our guarding with godly jealousy against setting aside his law in the least particular. "Whoseever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, shall be called least in the kingdom of beaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them, he shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5: 19.) The object of Christ's mission to earth was to so reinstate the rule, dominion, and authority of God that his will shall "be done, as in heaven, so on earth." The spirit of exact and unquestioning and jealous obedience to every commandment of God, even to the least particular, is the spirit of Christ.

The Holy Spirit came to guide the aposties into all truth and to call to their remembrance all things whatsoever he commanded them. They were to follow Christ in his faultless obedience to the will of God. Paul said: "Be ye imitators of me, even as I also am of Christ." Now I praise you that ye hold fast the traditions, even as I delivered them to you." (1 Cor. 11: 1, 2.) "Whereunto we have attained, by that same rule let us walk. Brethren, be ye imitators together of me, and mark them that so walk even as ye have us for an ensample." (Phil. 3: 16, 17.) In every letter there is the earnest exhortation to walk in the footsteps of Paul—to do the things he did, to follow him with the exactness and fidelity with which he followed Christ the Savior. They are everywhere warned against following human wisdom. "For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and the discernment of the discerning will I bring to naught. . . . The foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men. . . God chose the foolish things of the world, that he might put to shame them that are wise; and God chose the weak things of the world, that he might put to shame the things that are strong; and the base things of the world, and the things that are despised. did God choose, yea and the things that are not, that he might bring to naught the things that are: that no flesh should glory before God." (1 Cor. 1: 19-29.) This shows clearly that human wisdom is not a safe guide in providing substitutes for divine provisions. It is infidelity to God to talk of setting aside or departing from divine example with human wisdom or "sanctified common sense."

The Spirit says: "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things that were heard, lest haply we drift away from them. For if the word spoken through angels proved steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great a salvation?" (Heb. 2: 1-3.) In this two things are notable: (1) The word spoken by angels was steadfast-that is, could not be changed, bent, modified, or set aside. It was firm, Immovable, and as inexorable as God himself. (2) Under it "every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward." Here are two kinds of sins: (1) Transgression is going beyond the divine law, presuming to go or to do where God has not commanded. This is a sin. Disobedience is not obeying the will, not doing the thing commanded. This is a sin. In Bible enumerations the greater of things comes first. Transgression, then, is a greater sin than disobedience. Transgression partakes more of the nature of the presumptuous sin. A man presumes on his own wisdom, adds to the appointments and word of God. He corrupts the divine law and order. Going where God has not led the way, doing what God has not commanded In religion, is of the essence of presumption-walking without God. Disobedience is from human weakness and human frailty, is a failure to do the will of God. But it leaves that law uncorrupted and undefiled as God gave it and God's institutions unperverted. God looks with much more allowance on this sin than on that. It is clearly better to fall to do, in service to God, what he has commanded, from weakness and infirmity, than it is to go beyond his commandments and do what he has not commanded. A diligent study of the Scriptures will show that every example of God's dealing with man, in both the Old and New Testaments, confirms this as true. This passage clearly teaches that transgressing and disobeying the will of God under the new dispensation is a much more fearful crime against God and will be visited with a much severer punishment than the same offenses received under the law of Moses. Yet under that law every act of doing more than God required or failing to obey him met the recompense that was just for the violation. The transgression was always more severely punished than the disobedience, as was just. A transgression is necessarily an adding to the law of God. It is passing beyond, outside of, his law, the lines of his guidance, the limits of his institutions, and is a doing what he commanded not to be done, or doing what he had not commanded to be done. Now you may look back and see that a mistaken zeal and an over degree of anxiety to protect divine institutions from neglect, rather than a watchfulness that we do the will of God, often brought swift punishment to him who offered zeal and devotion in lieu of obedience to God.

There is scarcely a page in the Bible that does not emphasize the truth that to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than any degree of zeal or devotion that we

. . is not crowned, except he can bring. "A man have contended lawfully." (2 Tim. 2; 5.) "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." (Gal. 5; 9.) That is, a slight departure from the word of God makes room for widespread departures; and such departures never run backward; they always increase and spread. The spirit that treats lightly a departure in one point prepares for a departure in another. It grows in intensity, boldness, and degree by being exercised. The only place to check the spirit of innovation is before it begins to work. Hence, the Holy Spirit says, "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is become guilty of all " (James 2: 10), and fearfully warns that whosoever adds to the things written in the book, to him shall be added the plagues written in the book. The spirit of Christ is the spirit of rigid adherence to the divine precepts and examples, and it jealously guards against the slightest addition to or taking from these by human wisdom.

THE PURPOSE OF SPECIAL NUMBERS.

The recent special number of this paper was on "Glving."

As the publishers stated, the purpose of "the special numbers" is to present the teaching of the Bible on the subjects considered "in a clear, unmistakable manner, so that each number will be so scripturally complete that it may serve hereafter as a kind of reference on the subject that will be worthy of preservation."

This is a most worthy and commendable purpose with the understanding that back of all articles is the desire to honor God and to save souls. This places in the hearts of all writers the purest and the strongest motive and the highest aim they can have. Any motive and purpose less than these spring not from love for God and men or desire to teach the truth.

This purpose implies, too, that the writers have thoroughly studied the subjects and are imbued with the teaching and spirit of God, and for this reason are determined to present them in full, clear, and scriptural light to the people. This cannot be done without study and prayer and without hearts set on the glory of God.

Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth. (2 Tlm. 2: 15.)

If God approves, what matters it if men disapprove?

Let us pray for wisdom and grace to do this—for that wisdom which "is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without variance, without hypocrisy." Let us, at the same time, pray God to save us from that other kind of wisdom-namely:

But if you have bitter jealousy and faction in your heartglory not and lie not against the truth. This wisdom is not a wisdom that cometh down from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed.

The truly wise and godly man of good understanding shows "by his good life his works in meekness of wisdom," "And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace for them that make peace." (See James 3: 13-18.)

But this must be the purpose of every article written and every sermon preached. Suppose it were the motive and purpose of every preacher and writer to make every sermon and every article "so scripturally complete" and to present them in a manner so clear and unmistakable, and in the "meekness of wisdom" and love of the truth, as to make them "worthy of preservation" and suitable to hand to a neighbor; then there would be a great deal more study of the word of God than is now done, a great deal more quoting from the Bible than from the learned men of various religious denominations and of the world, and a great deal more thoroughly scriptural teaching than the world and the church get to-day. It is so much clearer and stronger, so much more invigorating and strengthening, to go directly to the word of God for the truth and the proof of any scriptural teaching and to quote directly from the Bible than to scratch around in so much straw and chaff of the world's literature for a few grains of wheat or to gather up some fragments of truth from the learned of earth and then publish them as if they were more convincing than the plain, clear, direct, unmistakable, positive, and authoritative declarations of God himself. Let us rejoice in every grain of truth which the learned and great of earth find; let us commend them for learning that little; let us profit by the wisdom of the children of this world, who for "their own generation are wiser than the sons of light;" let us be as wise as serpents, even, and as harmless as doves; but let us drink directly from the fountain of the water of life, and not from some far-away stream made foul by the theories and doctrines of men. Why go to the trouble of filtering the water, when one can get it pure and tresh and free and directly from Him who is "the water of life?" Why feed people on chaff, when they can eat first-hand of the bread of heaven? Why not come at once to Jesus, sit at his feet, and learn from him? Honor and love for God and reverence for his word demand this; we owe it to both the church and the world to do this.

Paul was an educated, well-read, and learned man, and, of course, familiar with the authors of his time. He quoted some heathen poet or author a few times, and then only when such quotations served to impress the truth upon his hearers; but he determined to know nothing in his preaching and writing "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified," that the faith of the church "should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." (1 Cor. 2: 1-5.)

All we preach or write or do, "in word or deed," must be done "in the name of the Lord Jesus" and "heartly as unto the Lord, and not unto men," because from the Lord we receive "the recompense of the inheritance" and we "serve the Lord Christ." (Col. 3: 17, 23, 24.) To the Lord we are responsible for all we write and preach and do. Then, on "giving," and on "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," we must "preach the word," declare "the whole counsel of God," keep "back nothing that is profitable," and "contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints."

With our hearts filled with this motive and fixed on this purpose, as the needle to the pole, they cannot be turned from the "straight course in the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2: 15—margin.)

It has been said truly that no man is prepared to preach until he has preached his sermon first to his own heart. He who preaches effectively must first practice. He who would beget in others love for truth and reverence for God must first possess them.

THE CONDITION OF HEART NECESSARY IN ORDER TO RECEIVE THE TRUTH.

The same preparation of heart necessary to teach the truth is necessary to its reception. For this condition of heart or for the lack of it, every one is personally responsible. Since it is the duty of preachers to "preach the word," to declare "the whole counsel of God" on all subjects, there rests upon all the reciprocal obligation to receive the truth. People who will not receive the truth judge themselves unworthy of eternal life. (Acts 13: 46.) In order to receive the truth, the heart must be meek and contrite, must tremble at the word of God, and must be teachable (Isa, 66: 2, 5; James 1: 21): it must be honest—honest with its own interest and soul's salvation, honest with the truth, and honest with God (Luke 8: 15). Therefore, it must not "wrest" the scriptures (2 Pet. 3: 16), "pervert the gospel" (Gal. 1: 7), handle the word of God "deceitfully" (2 Cor. 4: 2), "corrupt" or "make merchandlse" of it (2 Cor. 2: 17—margin); but it must love the truth (2 Thess. 2: 10), must "hunger and thirst after righteousness" (Matt. 5: 6), and must will, amid all the templations of sin and amid all the clash and clatter and confusion of conflicting and jarring opinions and doctrines of men, to do God's will (John 7: 16, 17). Are we sure that it is God's will we desire and purpose and will to do?

Having this condition of heart, we cannot be deceived or prevented by Satan, with all his subtle and mighty influences, from learning and doing and teaching the will of God on the subject of giving and on "all things that pertain unto life and godliness." Neither can we be induced to teach and practice anything on untaught questions or the various subjects which God says must be avoided. Most certainly the hearts of all who refuse to avoid all these questions, the hearts of all who decline to teach the whole will of God on giving or any other subject, and the hearts of all who fail to give according to the will of God or otherwise to obey him, are not right in his sight.

This was written as a "foreword" to the article on giving, and not as an "afterthought," but lack of space forbade its publication then.

AN AFTERTHOUGHT, HOWEVER.

Men spend far more on their pride and vanity and to gratify fleshly appetites-soft drinks, picture shows, fine dress, tobacco, whisky, etc.—than they give to the Lord. And when the basest, most brutal and devilish passions of men-many otherwise civilized and Christian men-have been aroused, they will give more by far to aid and abet and to carry on war, with all that war means of unutterable cruelty and carnage and blood-curdling horribleness. and will sacrifice by the millions more human victims innocent and helpless babies and children, defenseless women, and young men driven at the point of the bayonet into battle as hogs and cattle to the slaughter pen-on the bloody altar of the satanic war god than has ever been offered to "the Prince of Peace" in order to further and establish his mission of peace on earth and good will to men, to build and to fill homes with quiet and rest and purity, to save lives and not to destroy them, to teach men to love and not to hate, to bless and not to kill, to save souls and not to corrupt and send them to perdition. Have not many church members given more zeal and money in the last few years for war purposes than they ever gave in a lifetime to the cause of Christ? Is this right?

And if I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and if I give my body to be burned, but have not love, it profiteth me nothing.

Have not many brethren and not a few preachers worked harder and done more to induce people to give for war purposes than to teach and persuade and arouse the church to give to the cause of Christ? Are these brethren willing to meet this in this shape at the judgment?

Should not the church bestir itelf now and give abundantly to save the world?

The Christian Attitude Toward Those Who Divide the Church.

BY J. C. M'Q.

On pages 782-784 of this issue appears a challenge from E. L. Jorgenson to M. C. Kurfees, and his reply. E. L. Jorgenson should have done his debating before he withdrew fellowship from brethren without scriptural warrant, and for which act he failed to give a single reason in nine columns of the Gospel Advocate. Failing to justify his wicked actions by the Scriptures, he now seeks to cover his defeat by affirming in debate with M. C. Kurfees that he did right in withdrawing from the brethren without any scriptural cause. His is not a debatable case, and he must know that he is condemned by God and by an indignant and righteous people. It is time for repentance and not for debating.

Christians should withdraw fellowship from him and in a spirit of gentleness should plead with him to repent and beg forgiveness for his unwarranted and unchristian conduct. No other course will satisfy the demands of justice.

While it is painful to expose such vicious conduct, the sin is the vicious conduct and not the exposure. Shall we cowardly stand by and see the innocent suffer without going to their relief, while the wicked persecutors go free? I pray God that the hand that writes this may be paisied before I shall ever be afraid to defend the innocent and condemn the wicked. Shall Christians sit Idly by while a preacher leads a church to withdraw fellowship from two intelligent, exemplary, and faithful Christian men without giving them a reason? This is not all. Those responsible for the withdrawal have failed to give a scriptural reason for their conduct, though most earnestly entreated to do so. Is such vicious conduct to go down as an example to the churches of the future, unrebuked and unreproved? It is not an ordinary case. For an utter disregard of the Scriptures, it has few, if any, equals, Every Christian should rebuke the wrong, not in a spirit of vengeance, but in a spirit of meekness. They should do it first for the salvation of E. L. Jorgenson and those responsible with him. Second, they should do it that other churches may not fall into a similar sin. David Lipscomb said: "Jesus Christ had more compassion on those who nailed his fleshly body to the cross than on those who, under the garb of superior sanctity and greater devotion. changed-took from, added to-the will of the Father. One stabbed and mutilated his fleshly body; the other, his spiritual body, which he sacrificed the fleshly body to build up, and which is more precious and sacred to him than the fleshly body ever was." It is an awful sin to divide the spiritual body of Christ, the enormity of which beggars description.

When young brethren began to agitate the churches with millennial-dawnism. I pleaded with Brother Friend, of Horse Cave, Ky., to hold speculative views as private property and not to present them to the churches. I also told him that we had no desire to discuss this particular doctrine, preferred not to do so, but that if they propagated it we would be forced, as a matter of duty, to expose the doctrine. His reply was that they would not cease to teach the doctrine. So long as the school of the prophets is conducted in Louisville and young men are filled with some of the errors of premillennialism, Adventism, and Russellism, all who love the truth will be called upon to defend it and to expose the errors of the misguided.

Those who are teaching that Christ has no kingdom on the earth should defend that position. The "head" of the school of prophets, who has indersed the position that the kingdom of God has not yet been established, but is held in abeyance awaiting the second coming of Christ, and who has also approved recently the position that the kingdom of God is here now, should tell the public which position he accepts to-day. If he has abandoned the "postponement" theory, which he formerly indorsed, we shall be glad. We shall rejoice with him as he discards error and embraces the truth. Their doctrine has been exposed and is prostrate on its back, pleading for defenders. It is vain for those who have embraced it to seek to cover their retreat behind "the cry of persecution and personal differences." There is no malice and nothing personal in this whole affair, and by the grace of God there Loving God is but letting God love us—giving welcome that is, to God's love, knowing and believing the love God hath to us.—Horace Bushnell.

The need of clothing in Syria is so great that many people have to borrow garments before they can appear on the street, according to a letter received by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief from Major James H. Nicol at Beirut. He says:

When we came into Syria after the occupation, it might really almost be said that there was no clothing in the Some who appeared on the street Lebanon mountains. in a fairly respectable way were found to have no underclothing of any sort and very little bedding in their homes. Cases are reported to me constantly where women have to borrow clothing to come down to the headquarters, certain pieces of clothing are handed from one person in a village to another; and this is the condition even after we have been working as hard as possible to make and distribute clothing for four months past. We should have had at least five hundred thousand garments to distribute, whereas the best we have been able to do up to the present is to make and distribute about one hundred thousand. This clothing need will go on for some time to come, as very little cloth is coming in, and most of the people in the mountains have no means for purchasing what there

A Challenge to R. H. Boll.

Whereas, R. H. Boll claims to be a member of the church of Christ and claims to hold to the faith of Christ, and whereas I claim the same; and whereas Boll is going from place to place over the country teaching things which I believe to be false and of such a nature that it will damn those who believe and teach it; and whereas he also denies points which I believe to be Bible truth, and of a most vital nature; and whereas I do not believe that a man can be a Christian in the true sense of that word and teach as Boll does; now, therefore, I challenge him to meet me on these issues, as he himself worded them, and debate them a sufficient length of time to thoroughly study them. Said debate to be in Boll's home town, and to be repeated, if he so elect, in Nashville, Tenn., and in Austin, Texas. The first of said debates to be reported by a competent stenographer and published in book form, each of us defraying half of the expense and each to receive half of the books published, with privilege to dispose of them as we may individually see fit. The following propositions to be discussed: (1) "The Scriptures teach that the kingdom of God mentioned in Dan. 2: 35-44 was established on the Pentecost following the resurrection of Christ." J. W. Chism affirms. (2) "The Scriptures teach that the second coming of Christ Is premillennial and imminent," J. W. Chism denies. We agree to debate each proposition at least four sessions and at a date which may be mutually agreed upon. Be it also understood that if Brother Boll refuses to accept this challenge and meet me on these issues, it shall be accepted by me as a concession of the point and an acknowledgment that his teaching along this line is false.

Yours in the Christ and for the truth as revealed in the Bible, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth,

The Folly of Stubbornness.

We are slow to learn that "facts are facts" and will so appear in the judgment. A fact is "something that is done or comes to pass; an act or deed." To argue against it, to try to talk around it, is the height of folly.

The command to Saul, in 1 Sam, 15: 3, is simple and nothing could be more easily understood: "Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass." There is nothing in this command to justify the sparing of "Agag, and the best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good," even if they did mean to offer such things as sacrifices to God. In spite of this, Saul contends that he has obeyed the voice of Jehovah. "Blessed be thou of Jehovah: I have performed the commandment of Jehovah," is the way he shouts to Samuel when he meets him. And when Samuel points out to him that he is mistaken, he comes back with a "Yea, I have obeyed the voice of Jehovah," with specifications, tries to shift the blame upon the people for what had been left undone, but minimizes it on the grounds that the fat cattle and sheep were saved "to sacrifice unto Jehovah thy God in Gilgal," which called forth the following answer and stinging rebuke: "Hath Jehovah as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of Jehovah? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as idolatry and teraphim. Because thou hast rejected the word of Jehevah, he hath also rejected thee from being king." It is true that Saul, at this stage of the conversation, exclaims, "I have sinned; for I have transgressed the commandment of Jehovah;" but this does not clear him of the terrible fact that he had stubbornly contended that he had obeyed when he had not.

I somtimes wonder how far stubbornness is responsible for much of the trouble in the religious world, and especially of that arising between brethren. Then, too, how much does stubbornness have to do in keeping troubles forever going and never settled! The right or wrong of any question certainly must be easy to be seen. If it is right, nothing but stubbornness, the outgrowth of perverse blindness, will keep us talking against it; if it is wrong, no amount of talking can make it right; and right or wrong, as it indeed is, just so will it go into the judgment. If it is right, then it is bad for me to go there with it. having fought it in this life; if it is wrong, I am in just as bad predicament to go there having defended it. It would be well for us to remember that Jehovah we must face, and that all questions must ultimately be settled as they are, and not as we try to make them appear to be.

It is sad to note the exceeding carelessness—and sometimes, I fear, extreme wickedness—of some when it comes to stating what others believe and practice. Should not things be said, as nearly as it is possible for us to say them, exactly as God sees them? How many of our scribes, when they go to write about the other fellow, ever think how God really sees the thing they are about to say? Well, better for us that we get in the habit of going about it this way, else some of us who have deceived ourselves into believing we are very truthful may turn out in the judgment to be first-class liars.

"No Greater Joy."

John, in his third Epistle, declares: "Greater joy have ! none than this, to hear of my children walking in the truth." (Verse 4,) What could give greater loy than this? Of course, to hear of other souls being saved would produce as great joy as this; but is it not true that keeping souls saved is very much akin to saving those who are unsaved? The true child of God is ever interested in those whom he has led to Christ, and carries them about in his mind and heart; he cannot forget them. There is a naturainess about this joy that makes it come spontaneously. Then there is a divineness about it that I like to think of God is interested in the salvation of every soul; so is his Son, the Holy Spirit, and all the angels in heaven. Truly it is divine to joy over souls that are being saved and the growth, steadfastness, and continued walk in the truth on the part of those who are saved. Is it possible for us to have the "divine nature," a thing we are taught to partake of, and not have joy also over these things? No, there is nothing more joy-producing than to hear, than to know, that those whom we have led to Christ, for whom we have prayed and labored, are walking in the truth,

This being true, it must be so that to hear that our children are not walking in the truth brings its sorrow. I think the beloved apostle could have as well said: "Greater sorrow have I none than this, to hear that my children walk not in the truth." There is no such thing as being a true child of God and sorrow not when you see those whom you have led to Christ—or those whom others have led to Christ, for that matter—fall away and go back into sin. Indeed, to rejoice over the salvation of souls is divine it is also true that to sorrow over the lost is divine.

I am sure that that man or woman who claims to be a Christian and who ever rejoices over those who are being saved, and who ever rejoices over the growth and development of those who are already saved, and who also is unable to drive sorrow away when he sees God's children turning aside into the ways of sin, lives not far from the bosom of our Heavenly Father. We need more such men and women in our congregations-men and women who will go after the erring and try to get them to come back to God: Here, truly, the divine nature is to be seen in all of its loveliness and tenderness. May every friend I have on this earth be just such a friend-one that cannot keep from rejoicing over the little that I do that is right, just, and holy, and who cannot see me sin without sorrowing over that sin. To have such friends around and about you is to have God very near unto you.

Brother G. E. Claus, assisted by E. B. Woodroof, will soon open a big campaign in Savannah. The South Georgia churches have bought them a large tent and mean to keep it busy in the good work. If any who read this have any friends or relatives in Savannah who are members of the church, send names and correct addresses to Brother Claus at Valdosta, and he will look them up.

The first Lord's day in August seemed to be an unusually good day for all of our workers. Brother Brooks reported an excellent time with the East Point congregation. He was with the writer at Liberty Hill in the afternoon and we had the largest crowd we have had this year.

Brother Rogers reported a large audience at the South Pryor Street services, with three additions at the forenoon service. Two were baptized during his meeting at Lakewood Heights, with others certain to follow.

Brother Templeton had a splendid service at Austell. He had just closed a good meeting at Tunnel Hill.

Brother G. E. Claus started the revival at Dasher for the writer and had an overflowing house, with two confessions and baptisms. Brother Coison took Brother Claus' place

The writer was at West End Avenue at the forenoon service, with a large crowd. Four who had allowed themselves to begin to "drift" confessed their neglect and reconsecrated themselves to God. Every true Christian has sorrow and sadness when he sees members drift away. It brings joy to see them return. "Greater joy have I none than this, to hear of my children walking in the truth." Brother John Klingman was with us at West End Avenue both morning and evening and spoke at the evening service. He is an excellent man.

The Dasher revival goes well at this writing. The house was full to-day (August 5) with the best of listeners to help the preacher. Brethren Claus and Prevatt and Brother Jesse Love, of Pensacola, Fla., were with us to-

Brother Fonner's Report.

BY F. P. FONNER.

Since last report we have received additions to our building fund as follows: From T. E. Anderson, $5; Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Miller, $1; P. C. Breeden, $2.50; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Smith, $5; Mrs. Sarah Drummond, $1. We are very thankful for this help; but It comes so slowly. We must begin our church building as soon as it is safe for us to do so. We have made an estimate of the amount needed. Five hundred dollars more money would enable us to begin building at once. If the brethren knew our real circumstances, they would certainly help us to that sum now. This matter has been on hands over a year. Time after time our acting elder and two or three evangelists have spoken of our needs through the papers; and once more we ask you to help us to build that church house. We are tired of preaching under trees, grape arbors, tobacco sheds, or wherever we can wedge in between other appointments. If we had that house, many would obey the gospel who are already convinced; but as it is now, we can hold no long meetings until we get the house. Please do send me your check upon reading this note; and make it as large as you can. I am confident that you will respond to this call. Please do not allow our mission here to perish for want of a meetinghouse or a few hundred dollars. I have also received personal help as follows: From Miss Gertrude McCoy, $15; Charles Berg, $1; T. E. Anderson, $5; J. W. Preult, $10. This last offering was overlooked by me in a former report. Thanks to all. I still need personal help. I am not very well.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHII TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood:

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

"Is your blood starving for want of Iron? Iron is red blood food. If you were to go without cating until you became weak, thin and cometated, you could not do a more serious harm to yourself than when you let your blood literally go hungry for want of Iron—Iron that gives it strength and power to change food into living tissue." says Dr. James Francis Sulltvan, formely pluvsician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Bepl.), New York, and the Westchester Country Hospital.

"Modern methods of cooking and the rapid pace at which people of this country live has made such an alarming increase in iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women that I have often marreled at the large number of people who lack iron in the blood and who never suspect the crops of their weak, nervous, run-down stare Rut in my opinion, you can't make strong, sturdy men and women by feeding licem on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron from them into organite iron. Nusated from before they are to be taken up and assimilited by the human system. Fort Smith, August 6.- I closed the meeting at Center Ridge on Sunday night. There was a large attendance throughout the meeting. One was baptized and two were restored. I be-lieve much good was accomplished in the Master's name. The brethren paid me well for my work and asked me to return next year, but I advised them to employ Brother Blue or Brother Nelson. I have almost enough calls already to fill my time for the sum-mer of 1920. I will begin a meeting with my home congregation, the Park Hill church of Christ, to-night. We made another stride forward to-day when we let the contract for seats for our new building. As has been stated before, we are few in number, set in order in January, and since that time have built our house and are now try-ing to seat it. I have received the following contributions toward the building and seating fund; From F. L.

Blair, Loving, Okla., $5; church at Okmulgee, Okla., $10; A. O. Colley, Dallas, Texas, $1; J. H. Caldwell, Charleston, Miss., $1; brethren at Wesley, Ark., $2. Brother Lynch has received about fifty dollars. We appreciate these gifts very much, but this is hardly a start toward the cost of our seats. If each of four hundred of our seats. If each of four hundred brethren would send us one dollar, it would mean so much to us. We are planning for greater things in the fu-ture.—Will W. Slater.

Florida.

Lake City, August 5.—The church of Christ at this place, amid great prejudice, persecution, and sharp criticism by the enemies of the truth, with a small membership, con-Unues faithful in the regular worship and grows gradually stronger in numbers. The writer preaches once a month for the church, and some are being saved. On July 13 I baptized our own boy, Barton, thirteen years old. I baptized his sister, Grace, at the age of eleven, four years ago. All the members of our family are now members of the "one body." There was one more confession last Lord's day. We have just purchased a cen-tral lot in the city on which we ex-pect to move our house of worship at once and add some needed room and conveniences in keeping with this ideal location. This will give us one of the most desirable church locations In Lake City.-J. O. Barnes.

Oklahoma.

Paul's Valley, August 2.- I will be in Texas and Oklahoma a month yet. My meeting at Paul's Valley is at a mission point. We have had nineteen additions at this place. The meeting will close to-morrow night .- F. C. Sowell

South Carolina.

Union, August 1.-The work here continues with interest. Last Sunday was a great day with us. There were about sixty present for Sunday school, and nearly every one who has named the name of Christ since we came to Union was present for worship. One of the first men to obey the gospel in Union took sick a little while back. He had one little boy, whose mother was dead, and he asked Brother Burton to see that the little fellow was cared for should anything happen to him. It was only a few days until the man had to be carried to the asylum; so Brother Burton made arrangements with Brother Oakley to put the boy in the Potter Orphan Home. We had a special contribution last Sunday to buy the little fellow some clothes and pay his way to the Home. The offering amounted to twenty dollars and thirteen cents. We also had a busi-ness meeting to see about buying a lot for the meetinghouse. Every one was ready and anxious to help to the best of his ability. There was not a single member present that did not subscribe something to help pay for the lot. There was three hundred and forty dollars subscribed to the lot fund. Every one seems so happy over the prospects here for greater things for God in the future .- A. C. Traylor.

Tennessee.

Portland, August 4.—The meeting starts off well; one confession last night.—B. C. Goodpasture.

Ravenscroft, August 5 .- Our meeting here began with good interest and good crowds. There is one to be baptized to-day. I shall go from here to Doyle, and then to Rocky Branch, near Pikeville.-J. C. Mosley.

Buchanan, August 2.—My meeting at Oak Valley, in Marshall County. closed with good interest. I am la-boring this week with the Blood River Church, in Henry County. So far two young men have confessed the error of their way. I go next to Mount Pleasant, near Wingo, Ky.—Coleman Overbey.

Decherd, August 5.—I recently held a ten-days' meeting at Center Grove, in Franklin County, with seventeen persons baptized. Among them were four Baptists and three Methodists. This was my fourth meeting at that place. I have had more additions in other meetings, but I believe this was the best one. The house was packed full, and there were many out of doors that we could not make room for. The brethren left their work to go to the baptizings and attended the day services well. They stood by me well in supporting me. We appointed elders and deacons.—R. E. L. Taylor.

Kenton, August 4.—My meeting at Portageville, Mo., resulted in two being baptized. The congregations were not large. My meeting at Trimble, Tenn., continued nine days, and two were baptized. There were large crowds and much interest. The brethren are preparing to build a church house there. The congregation has been meeting in the picture-show room for two years. This is a growing mission. My meeting at Nebo resulted in seven additions to the congregation and much good done otherwise. Brother W. R. Hassell, of Eaton, and Brother J. W. Dunn, of Texas, visited us during the meeting. I filled my appointment at home (Obion) yesterday, and at the close of the service four persons came forward—two for membership, one from the Baptists, and one for confession. The work here is progressing splendidly. I began a meeting at Kenton last night. I will go from here to Lemalsamac, near Newbern, to begin a meeting the next Sunday, and to Rogers Springs the third Sunday in this month. I am very busy.—F. O. Howell.

Duck River, August 5.—The arbor meeting in Fayette County, near Somerville, closed last Tuesday night. The services were well attended by people far and near. Our efforts resulted in eighteen additions, including baptisms, restorations, and statements. Some of these were previously Baptists, Presbyterians, and Methodists. Brother Montague had just completed a very comfortable, neat "log house" with a seating capacity of fifty or sixty peo-He willingly presented this to the new congregation for a house of worship until a better house can be erected. The earnest, fervent prayers of our venerable brother, I. W. Pilant, will long be remembered with pleas-ure and profit. Brother Derryberry's songs added inspiration and interest to the work. He is an untiring and zealous worker. All spiritual and financial cooperation of the brethren was appreciated. This new congregawas appreciated. This new congrega-tion desires monthly preaching. Let some West Tennessee preacher re-spond to their call. Address J. P. Montague, Route 5, Somerville, Tenn. We are in a meeting at Mars' Hill, in Hickman County, this week.—William P. Walker. P. Walker

Lawrenceburg, August 1.-I held a meeting at St. Joseph, beginning on July 6 and continuing eight days, with one added from the Methodists. audiences were large and attentive. We used a tent. I also held a meeting at Center Point, five miles from Lawrenceburg, beginning on July 20 and continuing ten days, with services day and night. Fourteen were baptized, six were restored, and two decided to throw away all human names and affiliations and be Christians only. Among those baptized was Prof. J. W. Yaughn, one of the greatest singing teachers and song leaders in the South. He had been there a week teaching and instructing the congregation how to sing. He had been leading the song service in meetings for the various denominations for years; but just one year ago he attended the meeting at Appleton, where he led the song service, and for the first time song service, and for the first time heard a gospel preacher through a a series of meetings. There the seed of the kingdom was sown into his heart and had grown to the point that it was ready for the harvest; so he three off his sectarian yoke, was buried with Christ in baptism, and is now happy. I hope the churches in this part of the Lord's vineyard will keep him busy, for just such work as he is able to do is badly needed. The Lord willing, I shall begin the annual meeting at Appleton next Lord's day J. T. Harris

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Selved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and discwhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the in ventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

New Hope, August 4.—I am now in a meeting at this place. Have preached three times. A full house. Prospects good.—R. N. Moody.

Athens, August 4.—Our eighth annual meeting at Mount Carmel closed on Saturday, at the water, with twelve baptisms. The audiences were good, I go next to Pleasant Valley.—Thomas C. King.

Huntsville, August 5.—Brother T. B. Jones, assisted in song by the writer, held a meeting the first week in July, at Canoe, with two baptized. The third week in July we held a meeting at Oakland, with three baptized and one restored. Last week I was with Brother H. N. Rutherford, at Berea, part of the time. I am now at Center Ridge, in Tennessee, in a meeting which began last Saturday night. We are having good crowds.—E. Gaston Collins.

Arkansas.

Rector, August 4.—I have been here a little more than one week now and the meeting will continue till August 10. The crowds and interest have seemed good in the greater part of the meeting so far, and we trust that they will continue to grow till the close. However, there have been no additions yet in any way. We are still trusting, hoping, and praying that there will be many added before we leave here for our next meeting, which is to be at Locust Bayou.—J. C. Estes.

Piggott, August 4.—I visited Springfield on regular appointment the first Sunday in July; also visited Jonesboro, Rector, Campbell, Senath, Cardwell, and Hollywood—all In Missouri, I closed a meeting at Kennett on July 28, with twenty-two additions and much good done otherwise. There are great prospects for the cause at Kennett if the brethren will do their full duty. I am now in an interesting meeting at Rogers Chapel, near Piggott. I will begin a meeting at Greenway, Ark., on August 17 and continue two weeks.—M. S. Mason

Jonesboro, August 4.—We closed last night a meeting with the church at North Fisher Street, which continued over three Lord's days and resulted in fourteen baptisms and one from the Christian Church. The brethren are rejoicing, and they say it was the greatest meeting the church has ever had. Brother Charles Hardin, of Campbell, Mo., led the song service the last week and did much to assist in the meeting. Brother Hardin is good help in a meeting, and the brethren should call him and keep him busy. The cause of Christ is prospering in Jonesboro. Brethren are working in harmony. We have had thirty additions to the congregation since the first of January.—J. W. Dollison.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an embusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, orged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes, It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

Brother Fuqua reports a great meeting at a point near Chey-eme, Wyo, Such interest was shown that he will visit them once a menth till he can hold another meeting there. I have not yet received his report as to the funds received and needed in this work. Frank L. Cox held a meeting at a mission point in New Mexico.

Five were baptized. He has promised to hold them another meeting. Brother and Sister Curtis and Alice Smith. of luka, Ill., sent one dollar that was sent to Brother Murrell for the Colorado work. Other places have not yet reported to me, but we hope to have good reports soon. Let these good things from the mission field encourage us to do much more. I will gladly receive and forward what you have for this work, -C. C. Merritt.

Hardyville, August 5.-1 held a good meeting at Shady Grove, in Hart County, with two added and two re-stored. I found the church in a dreadful condition. One elder and two (use to be) preachers had gone off after the Holiness people and were teaching that the "gifts" in 1 Cor. 12: 28 are in the church to-day. One went so far as to brand Brother E. A. Elam an unsound teacher. They also succeeded in getting several of the members to believe their teaching; but I am glad to say that I was able to open their eyes and get them to come back and confess their mistake. The church is in a fine condition and is "endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." I find that the churches need teaching along these lines. Every great school, college, or university has been built around the personality of some one man. Childress, August 3.-- I have celved to-day letters from the following brethren and sisters: Charles A. Swisher, West Virginia; Nellie English, Pennsylvania; Frances Quinby, Ohio: W. L. Eastham, Ohlahoma; P. C. Sams, Texas; A. O. Buckner, Texas; H. M. Eagon, Ohlo; Bessle Towler, Texas; P. J. Rogers, Texas; J. W. Mc Clure. Kansas; Mrs. Dan Leathers, Michigan. Each of them contained some financial help, which I will report later. But I mention it here that I may ask them not to look for a personal answer. I had thirty-five letters in one mail to-day; and while not many of them contained money, they all contained kind and helpful words and breathed a Christlan spirit. I cannot write to all who write. I have not missed one yet, but I will just have to let some be answered through the paper. Brethren, accept our love and thanks. Sin and Divorce.

BY W. B. RAINS:

How long, at the present rate of wickedness, will it be before people will cease to be friends and man and wife cease to love each other as the Lord commands and requires them to do? While this is a question, perhaps, that is unanswerable, it is reliably stated that the rate of divorces granted at present is one-half, or fifty per cent, of the number of marriages solemnized; and this, of course, because the failure to love each other as the Lord commands. Hence, if we love not those whom we have seen. how can we love God, whom we have not seen? Marrying has become more of a style, a business transaction, a frivolity, rather than a matter of leaving father and mother for the true love of the wife's sake, as the Lord hath ordained that the two shall become one, forsaking all others, and thus fulfill the divine law: No man will hate his own flesh. I believe a more strict moral law in regard to marriage would be good and probably would better conditions, but to be more obedient to divine law would be far better: in fact, strict obedience to the divine law would remedy the whole matter. Wickedness prevailed among the antediluvians to the extent that the Lord would not endure it any longer; and hence, for their continued wickedness, all mankind, except eight, was destroyed by the Lord by a flood of water. Then, as wickedness is the cause for the destruction of all things, would it not be wise in us to quit sin and learn to do well, and not let it be said of us that we are a wicked and adulterous generation?

An Honest Church.

BY #: B. NELSON,

At Mount Calm, Texas, there is a small congregation of faithful children of God. This congregation, as is the custom of most churches in Texas, had engaged their preacher, Brother G. Dalias Smith, for their annual meeting some time ahead. Brother Smith had booked the time for the meeting, the first part of July, and, of course, looked forward to be there according to promise. He, no doubt, had refused many other calls for meetings for this time; but, to be honest and honorable, he felt it his duty to keep his promise.

Mount Calm is in the rich farming belt of the black land of Texas. When we have a rainy season in the black land, it makes a great amount of work for the farmers. We have had an unusually wer spring in Central Texas; so the farmers have not had so much work to do in years

On Sunday before Brother Smith was to begin his meeting the brethren decided it would be utterly impossible to get people to attend, as the landlords would exact of the tenants close attention to their crops. The church decided that the best thing to do was to call the meeting off, and this was done. When Brother Smith received the letter calling the meeting off, he found a check inclosed for the time he had promised. A few days after the meeting had been called off, a few made known to Brother W. H. Nelson that they wanted to obey the gospel; so he telephoned Brother Smith to come over, and he did so, and preached several days to small audiences and baptized several, and the church increased his support one-half of the original check, which was a fairly good support.

I report this case to show that this church was not unmindful of the preacher's side of the matter.

A church that engages a preacher's time shead and holds it right up to a few days of the time for him to begin his meeting and then calls the meeting off, causing him to lose the time, has robbed that preacher and his family of the support for the time. 2 Cor. 8: 20-22 has been violated. They have not only failed to act honorably in the sight of men, but have violated the teachings of God on the support of the ministry.

No wender there is a scarcity of ministers in the church of Christ. A church engages a preacher to preach monthly during the winter. A cold, disagreeable Sunday comes, and only a few are out and the contribution is small; so the preacher goes home unable to meet his obligations or provide the necessities of life.

We should be just as honorable in matters of religion as in secular affairs. I had just as soon employ a farm hand or a clerk in the store, and when the week is up say to him: "I did not take in much this week, so you will have to go on short pay." How long do you suppose a farm hand or clerk could be kept?

A number of preachers have had meetings canceled in Texas this year. I guess very few have been paid for their time. I wish every member of the church would wake up to the needs of the ministry. The preachers of the church of Christ, as a whole, are self-sacrificing men and worthy of far more than they get. Whether worthy or unworthy, if a church calls for a man's time, the church is honor bound to pay for the time:

I suggest to those congregations that have failed to provide for the preacher's time they have robbed him of, that they repent and bring forth fruits meet for repentance by sending him pay for his time.

A Looming Danger.

"The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." And some foolish people who are unable to understand all the suffering of this present time are inclined to neglect the things of the Spirit. Some in their greater prosperity, others in their increased troubles, neglect the church which stands to offer the only hope we have out of the chaos of the times. True it is that a double portion of the world's work has fallen to our lot. But we are falling into a bad habit if we allow all our strength to go into daily toll and leave no time to seek from the Christ that refreshing which he promised to all "who travail and are heavy laden."-Selected.

A Missionary Undertaking in Wyoming.

BY E. C. EUQUA-

Through the thoughtfulness of Brother C. C. Merritt I learned of a sister living in Wyoming, far removed from any congregation of disciples, who was anxious to have her neighbors hear the pure word of God. After a short correspondence with this sister, I had her announce a meeting for me in the nearest schoolhouse, which was really an old Baptist Church building, six miles from her home. On July 6 1 began the first meeting ever held by the disciples in all the country adjacent to Cheyenne. found two sisters in Christ (who are also sisters in the flesh), each living six miles from the place of meeting and twelve miles from each other. Both attended the meeting and were greatly gratified on hearing once more the "old, old story," which to every true Christian is ever new. They had not heard a true gospel sermon for nine years, being completely isolated away out on the plains of Wyoming. The meeting was full of interest throughout, being attended by practieally all the people for miles around; and especially interesting were the many "cowboys" and "cowgirls" constantly in attendance. There were no additions, but an interest that is certain to bring forth fruit in the near future. I had here the best opportunity of my life to get in close spiritual touch with the famous "cowboys" and "cowgirls" of Wyoming-the most purely typical in all the world. My last Sunday afternoon in the community was spent with twenty-eight of these hardy sons and daughters of the plains, in conversation, singing, and watching their "roping" antics and all other typically Western performances. These young people and their parents completely filled the house where I was preaching, and, from the attention paid and the questions asked, they received a benefit that cannot be estimated. I preached to them ten sermons designed to help them understand the Bible, and especially how to become Christians and reach heaven at last. I have promised to visit them once a month until I can hold a second meeting, at which time I hope to reap from my former sowing.

I have also promised to hold a meeting in Hillsdale and one at Pine Bluffs, Wyo., as soon as I can get to them without neglecting my work at Fort Collins. These points are within some seventy-five or eighty miles of Fort Collins, and there is no good reason why I should not try to plant a congregation or two among those people in connection with my Colorado work;

Through sacrifice and spending considerably more than I received for my labors, I leave that field without one regret. Due to the efforts of Brother Stubblefield and myself, we got the two congregations there to manifest a better spirit and to cooperate in a meeting in union and brotherly love. For this one thing I shall ever be glad that I went to Montgomery,

I look back over my stay there with sorrow, not that I was not fully supported while there, but because our home was broken and the shadow grew very dark. Our darling baby left us, and left the home broken, never to be united here on earth again. As we move away, we leave her little body, beautiful and fair and perfect in form, returning to dust as it rests in beautiful Greenwood-the city of the dead. Wherever we go, we hope that some sweet day, when all tears are wiped away, we shall meet our darling and live forever.

We dislike to move away from Montgomery and leave the work with no one on the ground to go on with it. So if there is any one who would like to go there and labor with the church at Highland Park, you may write me, in care of the Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.; or Allen Dillard, 112 South Perry Street, Montgomery, Ala. Any one who goes there will find the work pleasant and agreeable, though it may not support a man as he should be supported.

Bishop-Vincent Japan Mission.

BY W. W. FREEMAN.

Since last report of the Bishop-Vincent work, funds for the regular work have been received as follows: From the Christian Leader, $17; church at La Mine, Mo., $29.11; Parkland, Ky., $21; Earl Hodson, Alabama, $15; Mrs. Figger, Kansas, $10; Petersburg, Tenn., by Nellie Straiton, $4; Dayton, Ohio, by H. N. Wolfe, $21; J. R. Cummings, $4; Mrs. Murphy, Texas, for the church, $10; Rich Pond, Ky., $3; Brother Helvey, Texas, $3. Total. $137.11. Forwarded last two months for work through Bixler, $155. Short in regular work, $17.89, which came out of old balance we try to keep on hand for such emergencies.

Lot Fund: On hand last report, $197.80; received from D. R. May, Texas, $5; Paul R. Gray, Michigan, $100; Christian Leader, $3 and $10. Total to date, $315.80. We need ten times this amount. This call has waited longest and is proving most deserving, a score having been added since the first of the year. The present house is dilapidated and on rented land that we soon must give up. We want a new lot and a plant on it to furnish a home for the American workers, a children's room, a classroom for teaching English Bible and the Christian religion to the many students available from the great public schools near by, a church home for the membership locally, and an office or press room as may be needed. Ten thousand dollars would suffice for the whole outlay. We have, perhaps, twenty-five hundred dollars raised. We need forty or fifty gifts of a hundred dollars or such amount,

There are many calls that are worthy and that will count for much eternally, but I doubt if there is one offering greater possibilities than this one. Pioneer work, planting the gospel on virgin soil, scattering the seed of the kingdom into the hearts of Japan's public leaders, teachers, and educators, as well as the masses and the promising Christian constituency already at work, is a wonderfully opportune undertaking. "As goes Japan.

so goes the Orient," say men of affairs. Unquestionably, the healthy growth attained, the crisis reached in the local needs, the present opportunity to reach leaders through this plant We propose as a token of love to those who have given their lives and of our loyalty to Jesus, and the opening this pioneer work will give to other lands of itself, justify a very strong response in us all. Let us put this project on our list to have a tithe of our earnings for a few months. A few give regularly and gladly, but more is required if we are to meet the present emergency. Every penny given goes to the actual work. Address me at Abilene, Texas.

"What Are Your Plans?"

BY C. C. MERRITT.

Some inquiries have been made concerning the work I have been trying to get started in the bome mission work; and as others will likely want to know the nature of the work and its working and the extent as well, I shall try to explain briefly.

What are we trying to do? We are trying to reach isolated brethren, not only that they may have an opportunity to work in a more favorable condition for the good of men, but that people may have the gospel preached unto them in a God-given way and be led to Christ for salvation; in short, that mission work may be done in the United States of America and Canada that will please the Lord both in what is preached and in the way brethren cooperate to do the preaching. We will do all we can, of course, where there are now brethren to start with; but this seems to be promising more results with less effort.

How may it be done? First, isolated brethren may write us and give us a description of the place and the number of brethren there; if any previous effort, what and by whom; and all other information that they think may be helpful. Some write us and then seem to forget. Remember, we cannot do for you what you will not do for yourself. We will not ask others to do for you what you are not willing to do for yourself. In most of the cases where these brethren take as much interest in the work and keep after it as long as we do, something usually results. Some weak congregations ask for help, and we do all we can for them. But we do not like to ask others to sacrifice for the work in these places when they themselves will not sacrifice. So please do not ask us to help to get the brotherhood to build you a meetinghouse if you have not done all you can to get it for yourselves. Some could, if they would, build their own meetinghouse. We desire to help such only to realize that they can do it without help.

Second, established congregations may send their help when they get letters from me concerning any places we may inform them of. They may send without special solicitation, for that matter. We ask the isolated brethren who write us to furnish us with the names of their old congregations and those near by, and these are solicited for the work there if possible.

This is the time when we should be occupying ourselves with the prayer Christ taught us all to pray—that is: "Pray ye that the Lord of the vine-yard may send forth more labors into the vineyard." When these laborers are sent forth, we will have all that is needed; for this term includes not only the preacher, but those who have the money to give to this work as well. Men (preachers) and money are the needs. Will you help supply them?

It seems that the Lord has raised me up a helper in this work in the person of none other than C. D. Moore. Brother Moore has been doing mission work for a long time, and for that reason his services are valuable. He is highly valued in this effort.

Brethren, if you should receive any literature from us, we ask you to read it carefully and bein us all you can.

Edifying as the Need May Be

"Let the Dead Bury Their Dead."

At a time and place when Jesus had given utterance to a vital truth, many of his disciples said in dismay: "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?" And just before his trial and crucifixion he said: "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." Our first impulse, when we hear him say, "Let the dead bury their dead," is to believe that this is a "hard saving" and one of the things that Jesus forgot to leave unspoken, one that is hard to hear and harder still to bear. There are many who profess not to understand either its reasonableness or its propriety. That is because they have never really made the effort to understand it. They lose sight of the fact that Jesus was a different kind of teacher from those to whom they are accustomed. They ignore the fact which the officers quickly recognized, that "never man so spake." His thoughts transcended the thoughts of men, and not infrequently this was true of his mode of expression. His remark about burying the dead is a fine illustration of this fact. Admittedly the vital truth here does not lie upon the surface. It requires some study to get it. But who will say that the truth to be gained is not worth our most diligent effort?

A certain disciple looked on Jesus with favor and expressed a desire to follow him when he could make it convenient. There was a matter at home that he considered more important just then than following the Saylor. Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father," Some explain that his father was not really dead, else the man would have been at home looking after the funeral arrangements. The father, they say, was aged and infirm and likely to die at any time. The son's request was equivalent to asking permission to stay with his father during his last days. Others teach-and this is the more generally accepted view-that the word "dead" is used here first in a figurative sense and secondly in a literal sense. In the figurative sense, they point out, the "dead" are those dead in their sins, dead to the true life. Perhaps there were brothers of this disciple in this condition. Let them bury their father, while their more enlightened brother should go and "publish abroad the kingdom of God." Still another explanation offered is that which makes the remark of our Savior purely a lesson of self-renunciation. "Let those that are dead to sin in Christ bury their sinful lusts and all that connects them with the dead past." It matters not which of these explanations seems most plausible to you. It matters not that you accept any of them. But you must accept the vital truth in Jesus' answer that over and above everything else in this world it is our supreme duty to follow him, and to do it now. He expects us to remove every obstacle from the way of our prompt accept-

The Alibis We Seek to Prove.

Burying one's father is but typical of the many excuses that we offer and which are usually accepted as valid. It represents the many alibis we seek to prove. Out in the country the harvest is just finished. When wheat is ripe, it is a universal law that it must be threshed. Wheat represents bread, and bread is the "staff of life." The world's food supply depends upon it. Last year I read that some farmers in Kansas had with shotguns forced idle men to go to their fields and help reap and thresh. Public sentiment did not condemn the landholders. It was the stern, inexorable law of the harvest, unwritten, but none the less imperative. The Mosaic law made special provision for the ingathering. Solomon describes a shameful son as one who "sleeps in time of harvest," and the Savior recognized the importance of this period when he made it prefigure the judgment. "The harvest is the end of the world." But important as the harvest is, there is something more important still.

Last week I talked to a dear, good brother who has been working far beyond his strength. He knows it. His friends see it. The doctors tell him that he must have a rest or suffer a mental breakdown. Important as rest may be to the overtaxed laborer, there is something more important still.

I know some parents on the verge of poverty who toil all day and far into the night in order to send their children to school. By staying at home they could help support the family and lighten their parents' load. But the parents consider only one thing; their children must have an education. Before this Important duty everything else pales into insignificance. They believe the words of Solomon: "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. For the gaining of it is better than the gaining of silver, and the profit thereof than fine gold. She is more precious than rubies: and none of the things thou canst desire are to be compared unto her." (Prov. 3: 13-15.) We honor this desire; but as the son and grateful beneficiary of such parents, I know there is something even more important than "getting an education" in the commonly accepted sense.

There is sickness in one of our homes. The baby hovers between life and death. The doctor comes repeatedly, but the case baffles him so that he can extend no appreciable hope. No one knows what the outcome will be. It is no time now to stop and count the cost of medicine, or the doctor's bill, or the loss of time. Whatever is needed must be secured regardless of expense or sacrifice. More important than any business matter is the duty of saving the baby. Even King David, mighty in battle and charged with great governmental duties, suspends all operations, watches, and awaits results. But important as the care of the sick may be, there is something more important still.

These are illustrations enough. It is now time to clinch and drive home the Savior's lesson. It is certainly important to reap the harvest, to educate the young, to secure rest for overtaxed nerves, to care for the sick and the dying; but far more important than any of these or all of them combined is our duty to God in the working out of our own salvation through the gospel. And I have the belief that if we do our supreme duty here, God will see to it that we have time and opportunity for all the exigencies of life. And this, I take it, is the essence of "Let the dead bury their dead."

The Deathblow to the "Convenient" Story.

The Savior's answer gives the deathblow to all those time-worn excuses that men offer under the category of "convenience." And it is worthy of our note that this man was a disciple, friendly to our Lord, and willing to work when convenient. The favorite excuse that I meet with among the disciples to-day is the "convenient" variety. It is an alibi that flashes quickly into our minds. I ask a brother to take some part in the prayer meeting on next Wednesday evening. "I would gladly," he responds, "but expect to be out of the city." Evidently the matter "out of the city" is of more importance. I speak to a sister about her absence from the Lord's table for several weeks in succession. "Yes, I am sorry to have missed." she replies, "but you know we have bad sickness in our home." Surely the preacher is not so unfeeling as to expect one to be away from the sick even on Lord's day, and yet she is down town away from the sick at the very time she offers the excuse. Now we church members, preachers included, have fallen into the habit of offering and accepting such statements as plausible and valid. To use an everyday expression, people "get by" with them every day. But would we get by the Lord Jesus Christ? Would we feel ashamed to offer them in the day of judgment? Read again the luminous story of another disciple who asked permission to go and bury his father and you will find the answer. If his excuse was profitless, ours will be worse than folly.

"Taking the Happiness Out of Life."

The following, clipped from Brother Rowe's "Observations" in the Christian Leader, is worthy of thoughtful consideration; hence, we pass it on for a wider circula-

I was talking to a young sister sometime ago, and some reference was made to a remark that another one had made reflecting on some little, childlike, innocent conduct that had been misconstrued. This young sister remarked: Some one always has to take the happiness out of life.

I have reflected on that remark considerably and realize There is a certain class that how true her statement is. are always watching for some little slip of word, or some little, innocent action that suggests evil thoughts or purposes to the minds of others.

am thankful that, for one, such things are beneath my notice, and I have found it far more profitable and conducive to friendships to try to see the innocent in everything. Why should I frown upon others and depress them without cause, when a smile on my part might precipitate happiness to them and make the whole world seem bigger and better and brighter in every way? Why should I suspicion evil without the slightest grounds for that suspicion? Why should I cause a cloud of gloom when there is no storm approaching and no need for clouds? Why should not the innocence and the happiness of childhood continue right on through life, especially toward those whom we have known for years and years, and whose hearts and lives we have every reason to believe are just as good and pure as our own? Why cannot we all discover that the real secret of happiness is in trying to make others happy, even as David said: "He who would have friends must show himself friendly?" "Happiness is a perfume you cannot pour on others without getting a few drops yourself."

Life is too short and too full of sorrow for any of us to be casting shadows over the lives of others. lives are all too full of errors and dark places to permit us to pick at and make sore spots on the hearts of others. Instead of robbing others of the happiness to which they are entitled in life, let us see if we cannot add a little bit to their happiness. Let us get away from our selfishness and think more of the other fellow. Let us try to apply Let us try to apply ter who said: "Look in our lives the philosophy of the writer who said: up, not down; look out, not in; look forward, not back-ward; and lend a hand."

I connection with the above, I would add that the Bible says something about love, and that if we have it not we are nothing. (See 1 Cor. 13: 1-3.) It also says that love "thinketh no evil." (See verse 5.) There is one thing love cannot do-viz., make evil where evil does not exist. Brother Rowe speaks of "a certain class that are always watching" for something out of which to make evil. This certainly is true, and we should strive to be all the more careful for this. Paul says: "The younger men likewise exhort to be sober-minded: in all things showing thyself an ensample of good works; in thy doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of us." (Tit. 2: 6-8.) This is good for young women, old men and old women.

It is exceedingly sad to see people who could do better degenerate into "evil-minded" persons, always looking for the bad, never for the good; always hoping to see those whom they have learned to hate say or do something out of which they can make evil. But why should Christians worry about such? "Keep on climbing," and waste not the time to even look down long enough to take thought of what they say. "Remember Lot's wife:" don't even ' look back " at " Sodom."

Has God Established a Criterion by Which Man is to Be Judged?

BY C. NETTERVILLE,

In the discussion of this question, I have not touched upon the moral status of him who expects to be approved of God for the obvious reason that no one denies that morality is one of the essential characteristics of the child of God. Consequently I do not deem it necessary to adduce proof thereof; but, in further substantiation of what has been said, I will introduce the testimony of the Master himself.

In the eighteenth chapter of Luke's Gospel, beginning at the fifteenth verse, the sacred historian says: "And they brought unto him also infants, that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them. But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein." There is but one character that can acquire citizenship in the kingdom of God, and we have it epitomized here. We have the Master's authority for saying that the citizens of that heavenly kingdom must have the characteristics of a little child. Now, what are the outstanding characteristics of a child in its infantile state? (These children were in that state, else they would not have been called "infants.") It seems to me that a child's purity of heart should be placed as its first outstanding characteristic, then its implicit faith in its parents, and then the unquestioning obedience it yields them as long as this purity and confidence remain with it. And when these depart, it is no longer a "little child." Is not this exactly the character that I have herein endeavored to delineate? Then, is not this the standard recognized by the Lord to which man must measure up if he expects to meet God's approval?

But I want to present for your consideration, my digressive brother, a specific instance wherein God has set the seal of his disapproval upon the course you pursue, in the exercise of your boasted "sanctified common sense," in prescribing the manner in which you shall worship the Almighty.

After the Lord Jesus had finished his work upon this earth, having given unto us all things that pertain to life and godliness and ascended to heaven, where he took his seat at the right hand of the Majesty on high, and after the "mystery of iniquity" which began its work in Paul's day had put in perhaps half a century of disintegrating work, the apostle John was banished to the Isle of Patmos. where he was called into the presence of the Most High to receive the last message from heaven's throne to fallen man. John says: "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and. What thou seest, write in a book, and send it to the seven churches which are in Asia. . . . And to the angel of the church which is at Pergamos write; These things saith he which hath the sharp sword with the two edges; I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is: and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, even in those days wherein Antipas was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth. But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to east a stumblingblock before the children of Israel, [by tempting them] to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication. . . Repent; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth." (Rev. 1: 10, 11; 2; 12-16.) Two questions naturally arise here-"Who was Balaam?" and, "What was the doctrine that was so displeasing to the Lord?" Balaam was a prophet of God under the patriarchal dispensation, but was not an Israelite, although a descendant of Abraham. The promise that God made to Abraham, that in him should all the nations of the earth be blessed, was limited to Isaac and his descendants through Jacob. The Mosaic covenant was not made with all the peoples of the earth, but was confined to the twelve tribes of Israel and was designed to accomplish a specific purpose. That purpose was accomplished in the coming of Christ, and the covenant, being fulfilled, was set aside. As the covenant that God made with these people excluded all other peoples of the earth, the system of worship under the patriarchs was not abolished; hence, Balaam could be a true prophet of God, although excluded from the covenant made with the Israelites. It seems that he was a Midianite and lived in a city of Mesopotamia near the country occupied by the Moabites. In order to ascertain what his pernicious doctrine was, it will be necessary to review the only instance in which Balaam appears upon the scene in this great drama that was staged while the chosen people of God were passing from Egyptian bondage to the promised land.

In their victorious march through the country the Israelites had come to the land of Moab, which caused great distress of mind to their king. He had seen this people successfully overcome all opposition in their triumphant march to their goal when they were faithful to their God; but when they corrupted his worship and departed from his instructions, they were left to their own devices and were easily overcome by their enemies. He realized that his only hope of successfully resisting their onward sweep through his country lay in his ability to seduce them from their fealty to their God, thus causing him to withdraw his protecting arm from them and leave them nothing but their own strength to depend upon. Knowing Balaam to be a true prophet of God, he centered his hope on his ability to appeal to him through the lust of the fiesh and induce him to corrupt the Israelites by inducing them to join in the worship of a heathen god. When Balaam was confronted with the proposition to accept a large reward to come to Balak and curse the Israelites, the temptation was so great that he could not refrain from making an attempt to get the Lord to change his mind or modify his prohibition of his cursing this people. I have not space to dwell upon the motives which prompted Balaam to pursue the course he did and the manner of his procedure in his endeavor to induce the Lord to change his mind, nor to analyze the process of reasoning by which he convinced himself that he had God's permission to curse God's own people when finally, in his impatience with Balaam's persistent folly. God said: "If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them; but yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do." (Num. 22: 20.) Suffice it to say that we have the outstanding fact that Balaam lacked that faith in God which is required of all who would worship and serve him acceptably, and this fact is all of this incident in this great drama. Then Balaam's offense was of the very same nature as the sin committed by Nadab and Abihu in offering strange fire before the Lord, and that of King Saul when he thought that sacrifices and burnt offerings were ceptable to the Lord than strict obedience to his instructions. The nature of that sin is characterized by the Lord himself as lack of faith in him. Now, this sin is the very same that you commit when you attempt to add a humanly devised and man-organized institution to the equipment which God has given you to use in his service and when you add instrumental music, "which he commanded you not," to that ordained by him to be used in his worship. I would like to say to you what Balaam said after being convinced that God means just exactly what he says. In addressing Balak after their great flasco, he said: "God is not a man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent; hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?" (Num. 23: 19.)

I think that I have shown that certain characteristics are prerequisite qualifications for citizenship in heaven. It necessarily follows that God has prescribed these qualifications for all applicants for admission into his kingdom, and has erected a standard by which these applicants are to be measured. Then, what can the man hope to achieve who presumes to prescribe other qualifications and to use another standard of measurement? Surely he will be classed among the vain worshipers whom Jesus himself described, and whose doom he pronounced beforehand. when he said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." (Matt. 7: 21-23.) Clearly, then, something more is necessary to make one acceptable to God than to live a moral and upright life and offer unto him a humanly devised or a corrupted system of worship. And those who fail to worship him in strict accordance with what is written in the word of God are charged by the Lord Jesus himself with being workers of iniquity whose fate he has already pronounced. In closing, may I not lay down this as a postulate: Whatever is necessary to develop in man those qualities of mind and heart that fit him for citizenship in heaven is required of him, and whatever is not necessary thereto is not required? Also, whatever is not required, but is helpful, is permissible, provided it is not a stumblingblock to others. "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak." (Rom. 14: 21.) "Then said he unto the disciples, It is impossible but that offenses will come: but woe unto him, through whom they come! It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones" (Luke 17: 1, 2)-" one of these little ones which believe In me" (Matt. 18: 6).

The Need of More Bible Schools. No. 3. BY G. DALLAS SMITH.

The Bible is preëminently the Book of books, and the work of teaching it is unquestionably the greatest work in all the world. That there is so little interest manifested in this great work among the brotherhood generally is to be regretted. Our Bible colleges have, during the last twenty years, done much to create interest in this allimportant work, and they should be encouraged in every legitimate way possible. But, as has already been pointed out, these Bible colleges can never meet the demands of the situation. They only touch one here and there of the great body of the disciples; and if we depend solely, or even mainly, upon the Bible colleges to teach the word of God to the membership of the church, then only a very small per cent of the membership will ever receive proper instruction in this, the greatest of all books. While practically every member of the church has the opportunity, or has had the opportunity, to attend the public school and receive literary training, yet comparatively few members have had, or ever will have, the opportunity to attend a Bible college. And shall this great mass of the members go through life without Bible training? Shall this work, the greatest work in the world, continue to be neglected?

I would not for any consideration reflect on the work that is being done in many of our congregations on Sunday mornings-the work of the "Sunday school," or "Bible school," or "Bible study." I am glad that such teaching is being done by so many congregations in the land. But how little is being done in this way, compared to what we might be doing! Think! Our children are expected to spend from eight to twelve hours a day for five days in the week, and for eight or ten months in the year, preparing and reciting lessons in their literary studies; and this is expected to continue from ten to fifteen years-all in order to prepare them for this life. Yet, to prepare these same children for eternity, we spend something like thirty minutes in studying the Bible one day in the week. Is not this out of all proportion? Is it any wonder that girls and boys graduate from our high schools and know but little more about the Bible than when they entered the first grade? And is it to be wondered at that graduates from the leading colleges and universities of the land are oftentimes practically blank as to the teachings of the Bible? Is it any wonder, I repeat, since we are placing practically all the emphasis on literary work, to the neglect of the Bible? Nothing else could be expected, of course. Let us not lose our heads over the establishment of junior and senior colleges for the favored few and leave the great mass of boys and girls, men and women, without opportunities to secure a general knowledge of God's word.

Certainly the question of how to provide adequate facilities for teaching the Bible to the masses is easier to discuss on paper than to solve in reality. But a matter of such weighty importance should have our serious consideration. Something should be done. At this point, and in concluding this series, let me make a few suggestions for our consideration; and if others have something to say on the subject, let them say on. I, for one, shall be pleased to hear any suggestions they may make.

First, let every Christian home in the land take more interest in studying and teaching the Bible. There should be a general revival of Bible study in the home. Let the father discontinue some of his secular papers (or all of them) for a while; the mother, her magazines; and let the children cease, for a while at least, the reading of storybooks, and let all—father, mother, and children—give themselves to Bible study as continuously and as faithfully as they have read and studied the papers, magazines, and storybooks during the past. This within itself would work a wonderful change in many communities.

Second, let the churches everywhere do more effective teaching on Sunday mornings. We should endeavor to enlist every member in the Sunday-morning Bible study. It is a great mistake to think this study is intended for children only. Every member of the church should be in the Sunday-morning Bible study, of course. Then there should be more time given both to the preparation and to the recitation of the lessons. Let us create the correct impression—that the study of the Bible is of supreme importance. We cannot afford to neglect it.

Third, it would be a splendid idea for every congregation to arrange to have a special Bible drill, or Bible class, each year. Our congregations usually arrange for a special series of meetings each year; and for this they secure the services of some preacher, and pay him for his services. These protracted efforts are usually made in the interest of sinners. The Bible drill should be made an effort to develop the membership of the church. These drills could be held during the winter months, following the protracted meetings, and for this work preachers could usually be secured. Generally speaking, the preachers would be the best leaders in these special drills. This would give the preachers work during the winter months when they cannot hold meetings. These drills would be of untold good to the congregations, and would be, at the same time, a blessing to the preachers. Many preachers who could do good work all the winter conducting Bible classes almost starve out for the want of work. Brother, see to it that your congregation calls some preacher this winter to conduct a Bible drill, and pay him for his services as you pay him for your meeting. In this way he can help you and support his family.

A Statement from Brother Kimbrell.

Nashville, Tenn., August 13, 1919.—To the Readers of the Gospel Advocate: In view of articles appearing over the signatures of H. A. Rogers and others in the Gospel Advocate of July 17, it becomes necessary that certain remarks should be made on my behalf. Personally, I have had no reply published, believing that it was the duty of my home congregation to investigate the matter and give a report. Closing out a meeting near Mount Vernon, Texas, I hastened to Lawrenceburg, Tenn., where I hold membership, and laid the matter before the church there. Investigation is at present being made, and my innocence or guilt of the charges will soon be determined and made known to the brotherhood. Your patience in waiting for full particulars will be appreciated.

J. P. KIMBRELL.

[Editor's Note,—The publishers of the Gospel Advocate heartily commend the course of Brother Kimbrell in reporting this matter to his home congregation and asking for an investigation. From his statement to us, it appears that he has not been guilty of any wrongdoing further than some indiscretions which he himself frankly admits. We sincerely hope that the final report upon these charges will thoroughly exonerate him and that he may continue to be busy and useful in the Master's service. "The harvest is great, but the laborers are few."]

"Who is a Christian?" No. 2. BY J. D. WALLING.

Brother A. McLean's second article is but a repetition of his first. In fact, he does not write anything himself, but merely quotes from A. Campbell's writing in the Millennial Harbinger, from which I note the following:

In an article on a query from Lunenburg, which appeared in the September number, certain sentences have been objected to by some two or three intelligent and much-esteemed correspondents. We gave it as our opinion that there were Christians among the Protestant sects; an opinion, indeed, which we have always expressed when called upon. If I mistake not, it is distinctly avowed in our first Extra on Remission; yet it is now supposed by these brethren that I have conceded a point of have hitherto been tenacious, and that I have misapplied certain portions of scriptures in supporting said opinion. In the article alluded to, we have said that we "cannot make any one duty the standard of Christian state or character, not even Christian immersion," etc. Again, we have said that "there is no reason for making immersion character, not even Christian immersion," on a profession of faith absolutely essential to a Christian, though it may be greatly essential to his sanctification and comfort." These two sentences contain the pith and mar-These two sentences contain the pith and marrow of the objectionable portion of said article, to which we again refer the reader.

Upon which we suggest that one must have some "standard of Caristian state or character." If not, how is he to know "who is a Christian?" Shall we make morality our standard, and thereupon regard all good, conscientious, moral people Christians? All Christians must be moral, but one may be moral and in no sense a Christian. It would be hard to find a better moral code than Confucius had. He substituted morality for theology. Five hundred years before Christ, Confucius said: "By this door men are to enter the kingdom of blessedness. Doing what is seen to be right will bring you to the desired goal." He taught that rulers must rule rightly, and subjects must be free to serve. In dealings of friend with friend, he states substantially the "Golden Rule." Then, if we are to regard all good, moral men as Christians, why send missionaries to China? Why not do as the "Church of the Messiah" has done—welcome the Chinese and the Jews to membership in the church?

Brother Campbell tells us that "we cannot make any one duty the standard of Christian state or character;" but, on the other hand, he seems to think he can eliminate that one duty from God's standard. Christ has fixed his own standard in these words: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 7: 21.) Paul says that Jesus is "the author and perfecter of our faith " (Heb. 12: 2)-that is, Jesus is the author of the words that produce faith. Men are saved by faith. Therefore, divine law is superior to moral law. God has had one principle of justification from the beginning. His principle has ever been faith, obedience, and blood. It was so in the patriarchal age; it was the same under the law of Moses; it is the same under Christ and Christianity. But none under any age had "peace with God," save "through our Lord Jesus Christ." Abraham was the father of the faithful, was justified by faith and justified by works (James 2: 21); yet he "died in faith, not having received the promises" (Heb. 11: 13).

Just here Brother Campbell says: "It would follow that not a few of the brightest names on earth of the last three hundred years should have to be regarded as subjects of the kingdom of Satan!" This certainly is strange language for one so learned. But read the entire eleventh chapter of Hebrews, and note the two last verses: "And these all, having had witness borne to them through their faith, received not the promise, God having provided some better thing concerning us, that apart from us they should not be made perfect." All that are saved at all are saved alike. These all had faith, justifying faith, and were justified by both faith and works, and yet they must wait in Paradise (at that time an apartment in Hades) for the shed blood of Jesus, that they and we should be saved in the same way. In reason's name, if God can and will save one man now without the blood of Jesus, why would he not save Abraham and all those old worthles without it? Why keep them out of heaven two thousand years, waiting for the blood of Jesus, if men can be saved without it? And why have Jesus die at all, if one can be saved without his death and shed blood? But Paul said: "And apart from shedding of blood there is no remission." 9: 22.)

But do you ask why Abraham and all the old worthies must wait in Hades (Luke 16: 23) and could not at that time go on to the "third heaven?" Because God had said: "And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for the redeemed: the wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err therein." (Isa. 35: 8.) There were no redeemed till Christ bought them with "a price." "The way of holiness" was not open till Christ's death and ascension. And "the unclean" could not go into the "third heaven;" they must, therefore, tarry till made clean by Christ's blood. (Read Heb. 9: 23-28.)

Do you ask: What has this to do with the question, "Who is a Christian?" I answer, much. None are Christians without the death, burial, shed blood, and resurrection of Jesus. Jesus said: "For this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins." (Matt. 26: 28.) But Jesus' blood was "poured out" in his death. (John 19: 33, 34.) All those "old worthies" were delivered from their bondage in the death of Jesus. (Heb. 2: 14-16.) But do you ask, What has immersion to do with all this? Much, since it is the blood of Jesus that cleanses from "all sin." (1 John 1; 7.) And since the blood of Jesus was shed in his death, it follows that, if one would be made clean, be made free from the bondage of sin, he must come to the death of Jesus. Therefore, Paul said: "Or are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life. For if we have become united with him in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection; knowing this, that our old man was crucified with him, that the body of sin might be done away, that so we should no longer be in bondage to sin." (Rom, 6: 3-7.) But Paul told the Colossians that they were "buried with him [Christ] in baptism, wherein "they were also raised with him through faith in the working of God, who raised him from the dead," and that they were made "alive together with him." (Col. 2: 12, 13.) Now let us examine this word "together." It means "with him," in his company. We find "crucified with him" (Rom, 6; 6); "baptized into his death" (verse 3); "united with him in the likeness of his death" (verse 5); " made us alive together with Christ"-Jews and Gentiles alike (Eph. 2; 5); "you . . . did he make alive together with him " (Col. 2: 13). But Christ was made alive in the grave, not before he was buried nor after he came forth from the grave. So, "having been buried with him in baptism," "ye were also raised with him," "having forgiven us all our trespasses." (Col. 2: 12, 13.) raised us up with him, and made us to sit with him in the heavenly places, in Christ Jesus." (Eph. 2: 6.)

How many of these blessings do the unimmersed receive? So Ananias said to Saul: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name." (Acts 22: 16.) Water does not wash away sins, but in the baptismal tomb we are with Christ in a likeness of his death, where we reach the cleansing power of his blood, and, being washed in his blood, are made free from sin, made alive with him, and raised in a likeness of his resurrection. Just so, Peter said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) And it is all comprehended in this: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except one be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5.) If God, in his justice, can find grace to save the unimmersed, I shall be only too glad; but in the meantime it occurs to me that Brother McLean can better serve his Master by preaching the gospel as it is in Christ Jesus and trust God for its promises. "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?"

The ulterior purpose of Mr. McLean seems to be to create sentiment whereby his brethren may federate with the denominations; but if he has a union of all Christians in view, I would kindly remind him that he is on the wrong trail. Christians can unite on only one basis, Religious denominations can unite upon any creed or articles of faith they may agree upon, but this would not be Christian union. Christ, the head of the church, has forever settled the question of the oneness of all Christians. It is this: "That they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us." "They" -who? They that formulate and agree upon a creed, or bond of union? No; "but for them also that believe on me through their word." The Christian's duty is, therefore, plain: to "preach the word," do all in his power to pursuade every other man to believe on the Christ as preached by the apostles, assuring them that they will not only be one, but one in God, in Christ, and in the Holy Spirit. Look at this: "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be perfected into one; that the world may know that thou didst send me, and lovedst them, even as thou lovedst me." Then there will be no need for such questions as "Who is a Christian?" The teaching of the aposties includes and is responsible for but one body. "Now I beseech you, brethren, through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.) God has but one family, and has no children out of his family. All of his children are begotten of the word (James 1: 18), through the preaching of the gospel by the apostles (1 Cor. 4: 15). Then, why talk of Christians out of the body of Christ, and Christian union upon any other creed than the Lord Jesus Christ and his word as the only rule of faith and practice?

In Behalf of the Church at St. Louis, Mo.

BY W. W. MOODY.

We have in St. Louis, Mo., a city of almost a million people, about twenty-five faithful members of the church of Christ meeting in a rented hall in the Hope Building, upstairs, corner Cherokee Street and Texas Avenue, and are making an effort to raise enough money to pay for a lot and build a meetinghouse in order to get the work permanently established here,

Realizing that there are numerous appeals being made to the brotherhood, it seemed best to ask help for St. Louis in such a way as would enable every one to contribute without seriously interfering with their giving support to other places, and it was decided to ask for contributors—congregations, families, or individuals—of one dollar per month for a period of not more than thirty-six months.

The St. Louis congregation is putting into the building fund fifty dollars per month, and to secure the amount needed, about ten thousand dollars, will require only two hundred and thirty more contributors. A few of these have been secured already; and surely there are enough, and many more, interested in this kind of work, who will read this and are willing to be among those to contribute to it to make up the additional number required.

Won't you write us to-day that we may put you down as a contributor? Others may forget to do so, and we are counting on you. You need not send any money until the required number of contributors has been secured.

Address Dr. J. W. Pruett, 6006 Virginia Avenue; P. B. Johnson, 1304a Mississippi Avenue; J. M. Snow, 4847 Page Avenue; George Miller, 5071 Arlington Avenue; or W. W. Moody, 3667 Botanical Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

In acknowledgment of our last remittance to the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, we have received the following:

Dear Mr. Lipscomb: We are inclosing herewith our official receipt for the recent generous remittance of five hundred dollars, from the readers of the Gospel Advocate. Will you kindly express to the various contributors of this fund our sincere thanks and appreciation, together with the heartfelt gratitude of the sufferers of the Near East?

We also wish to thank you for your own personal cooperation. Sincerely yours, H. C. Jagurri.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipseomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

The Campaign to Raise Funds for the Improvement and Enlargement of the Buildings of the David Lipscomb College.

BY E. A. E.

The Baptists are pushing a campaign for $6,000,000. Let us spell it out so we may know how it sounds: SIX MILLIONS! The Episcopalians, the Methodists, and others are making drives for millions more for their respective denominational uses. And they will raise all they ask for.

Lately, as all know, very many people gave liberally and loaned freely to the war purposes. The war cost the United States more than twenty-four billions of dollars, for which the country, in return, received absolutely no financial or material benefit. This enormous fund must be paid by the citizens in taxes. Of course, the rulers of the government and numerous other citizens think the country gained in national prestige, "moral good" (!), and otherwise by the war much more than it cost in money and the thousands of lives of the youth of the land. The thought is sickeningt

But the only point I wish to press here is, that since religious denominations are raising so many millions for the promotion of their enterprises, and since the government has given so many billions of dollars and has sacrificed on the altar of the bloody war god so many thousands of human lives for national honor and to check imperialism, should not the friends of true education, and for the permanent and greatest good of the youth of the land. give a few thousand dollars?

They have done so, and they will continue to give. Many have responded cheerfully and liberally to these calls for funds to improve the David Lipscomb College; they will yet do so; and still others will do so until the work has been completed. Please consider the following facts:

- 1. The name, "David Lipscomb," stands for generosity, since he gave so much in money and time and thought to this school. Also, that name stands for true education. All should join him in this good work until the college has all the financial and other support its usefulness requires.
- 2. For at least three years past more young ladies have sought to enter the college than it has room to accommodate. Practical and sensible parents and Christian parents are turning from the superficial and worldly education of not a few schools to the real, true, permanent, and useful education which may be received in such schools as the David Lipscomb College. But there are not enough such schools or room enough in the ones which now exist. For the coming session girls are already being turned away from this college for lack of room. The directors are doing their utmost to enlarge the buildings so as to bless all who may ask for admission. They must have generous help, and must receive it now,
- 3. The directors have let the contract for the new building and the foundation is now being laid-a modern, convenient, practical, brick structure with all necessary comforts and sanitation, but free from all useless adornments and expenses. The money must be forthcoming in order to pay all present and future bills. All who have promised money must now begin to pay it in. All know that the real money is now necessary to do the work.
- 4. Since we began to ask money for this work all building material has advanced, wages also have advanced, and the cost is going to be greater than the directors at first estimated, for this reason. They are under the absolute necessity to ask for more by many thousands than they first announced; but they know that all sensible men realize this and will respond accordingly.
- 5. It is more difficult to raise the last thousands in any enterprise than the first thousands. We have to begin building on what we have already promised in order to get the work done before winter. In this we show our faith in the brethren and friends of true education. We feel confident that they will rally to this urgent need and call. Since the directors are giving their money and doing so much work besides, they know that others will contribute freely to the completion of the work. Now is the time, however.
- 6. Contributions are coming in, but not in sufficient amounts to carry on the work. Let us all do our best to pay what we have promised and to raise more, that there may be now no hindrance to the work. Let every one see others and induce them to make a contribution.
- 7. August 24-31 is "drive" week. The directors have set apart this week as a special "drive" week. They respectfully request and urge all-every one specially-to solicit for this work. Some brethren have been named, and they are urged to make an effort in their respective communities to raise all that can possibly be raised during the week designated. But whether named or not, every one who sees this is kindly requested to be a committee of one to do the same. Let us roll up the amount the last week in August that will complete the work.

8. All amounts contributed, with the names of the contributors, will be read on the opening day of the next session of the school, September 9. To this opening meeting all are invited.

Friends, we make this appeal in all seriousness, in great urgency, and in faith and hope of such response as the need requires. There are a sufficient number of men and women in the land interested in true education to furnish all the money needed.

Send all contributions, in the meantime, to Prof. H. Leo Boles, David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn. Brother Boles is treasurer of the building committee and president of the college.

TRUE EDUCATION.

In connection with the above, attention is called again to the articles in this paper of July 24 by Brethren H. Leo Boles and G. Dallas Smith. These articles are timely and most commendable. It is encouraging to see such articles from these thoughtful men. Let all other good and true teachers and preachers present God's will on these subjects until the church, if not the world, shall know what the Bible teaches in regard to true education and the place where true wisdom can be found.

I read when a small boy, in one of my school readers as a reading lesson, the following:

But where shall wisdom be found? and where is the Man knoweth not the price place of understanding? thereof; neither is it found in the land of the living. deep saith, It is not in me; and the sea saith, It is not with me. It cannot be gotten for gold, neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof. It cannot be valued with the gold of Ophir, with the precious onyx, or the sapphire. Gold and glass cannot equal it, neither shall it be exchanged for jewels of fine gold. No mention shall be made of coral or of crystal: yea, the price of wisdom is above rubies. The topaz of Ethiopia shall not equal it. Neither shall it be valued with pure gold. Whence then cometh wisdom? and where is the place of understanding? Seeing it is hid from the eyes of all living, and kept close from the birds of the heavens. Destruction and Death say, We have heard a rumor thereof with our ears. God understandeth the way thereof, and he knoweth the place there-For he looketh to the ends of the earth, and seeth under the whole heaven; to make a weight for the wind: yea, he meteth out the waters by measure. When he made a decree for the rain, and a way for the lightning of the thunder; then did he see it, and declare it; he established it, yea, and searched it out. And unto man he said, Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart (Job 28: 12-28.) from evil is understanding.

Shall we not accept that which the all-wise One says is true wisdom? "The Lord knoweth the reasonings of the wise, that they are vain." "For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." It is as equally as foolish to acknowledge that there is a God and yet refuse to accept his wisdom and guidance. "The reasonings of the wise" on education are as vain as on all other things which God teaches. "The wisdom of this world" at this point is "foolishness with God. Shall we accept "the wisdom of this world" in preference to the wisdom of God?

Again, God declares:

The fear of Jehovah is the beginning of wisdom; and the knowledge of the Holy One is understanding. (Prov. 9: 10.)

There can be no true education without this. This is the very beginning of true education. All learning, culture, and so-called "civilization" without this is as a beautiful structure built on the sand, a magnificent palace or grand and imposing temple without foundation.

As Brother Boles so clearly and strongly says, let us begin in the home—begin with the beginning. Any education or teaching which depreciates home training, home influence, and the inestimable importance of home building and home-keeping is false and most dangerous. It is a most serious wrong, an undermining sin, and rebellion against God, by education and otherwise to lessen the obligations of parents to nurture their children "in the chastening and admonition of the Lord." The preacher, educator, or system of education that does this is false.

Let parents themselves in the home fear God and tremble at his word, and their children will be impressed with this before they can comprehend its meaning. Let this be taught in, and be a part of, the textbooks of all schools now, as it was of mine when a boy; let the fear of God and the power of his word be impressed now in all schools; let the Bible become a textbook in all schools, and let it first be loved and taught in all homes.

The first man I went to school to when a boy had his whole school to read a chapter in the New Testament every day. This teacher was a Cumberland Presbyterian. What was the wrong in this?

How is it now? The most learned and so-called "best educated" men of earth know not the price or value of true wisdom, or where to find it, or where is the place of understanding; for it is not "found in the land of the living"—that is, outside of the revelation of the will of God. The wisdom of men leaves the fear of God and the Bible out of education. Why should the very greatest Book in the world be left out of the education of the young? Parents leave it virtually out of their homes, many religious people leave it out of their churches, and not a few preachers leave it out of their sermons.

Brother Smith speaks directly to the point when he says that all homes and congregations of Christians should arrange for more effectual teaching of the word of God. He truly says there should be more schools in which the Bible is daily taught as a textbook. Parents and congregations should feel more sensibly and more deeply their obligations to teach the word of God more diligently and more intelligently than is being done. No pains and money should be spared in order to the accomplishment of this inestimably great work. Many parents, as well as children, as Brother Smith says, are in shameful need of the knowledge of "the Holy One."

All that Brother Smith says about "college graduates" and their preaching-rather, their not preaching-and more, is true. The college graduate, even from a Bible college, who quits preaching because he has so much education has not as much as he thinks he has, and what little he has is false education. He has studied other things more than he has the Bible and has some spirit other than that of Christ. Neither the uneducated man who preaches because he can make more money preaching than in any other way nor the college graduate or university-degree man who quits preaching because he can make more money at something else is fit to preach. Both make merchandise of the gospel. The "highly educated" man does not quit preaching because of his education, but because his education is not true education and because his heart is not right before God.

The trouble is, as a rule, the education of colleges and universities is worldly and governed by the vanity and pride, ambition and spirit of the world, and leads away from Christ and the Bible and unselfish service of God and men. Schools, colleges, and universities teach worldly greatness, but not true greatness—not that the servant of all is the greatest of all. Bible colleges are not altogether free from this spirit. All this talk of a "brotherhood university" may come out of rivalry and a worldly spirit. Something more than book learning and university degrees is greatly needed.

Some young and ambitious educated preachers may vainly imagine "that in ten years from now a preacher without a college education cannot find a place to preach," but they overestimate their importance and underestimate the power of the gospel and the love of God. Then the expression, "a place to preach," reveals the true inwardness of such preachers' hearts. "A place to preach" is far more important with some than saving souls.

This is the feeling and spirit of some educated (!) young preachers: "We mean to complete our university course and then offer ourselves to 'the brotherhood' at a living salary and do all the good we can; but if 'the brotherhood 'does not see fit to use us, then we must make a living independent of 'the brotherhood.'" I trust that no Bible school fosters such a spirit. This is a selfish and rather a presumptuous spirit. It is not the spirit of Jesus; not the one that actuated him who declared: "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." The true spirit and right heart are: "We are studying and educating ourselves that we may the better meet the criticism on the Bible of the astute sinners of the world, the educated(!) opposers of Christianity, and the more effectually preach the gospel in its simplicity and power; for we have given ourselves and all we have-body, mind, and soulto the service of God; and we intend to preach Christ, and him crucified, whether fed or hungry, well clothed or naked, because we can do all things through Him who strengthens us, and in order to teach and build up the churches until they also learn that God has ordained that the ones who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel." There will be no quitting in this.

The church will be the gainer to lose all educated preachers—college graduates and university preachers—who allow their false education to cause them to try to make more money at something else.

Paul, Campbell, Lard, Fanning, Lipscomb, Harding, and many more of the truest preachers who have ever lived were educated men, whose hearts were right before God.

Prayer. BY J. C. M'Q.

Prayer is a privilege and a blessing that should not be neglected. Christians that fail to pray, and to pray repeatedly, will not have the piety and devotion that should characterize all God's people. Christians are exhorted to pray without ceasing. No condition in life should arise in which Christians should cease to pray. In health, in sickness, in prosperity, in adversity, on land, on sea, whatever the condition or wherever the place, Christians should not fail to offer thanksgiving and make known their requests to God.

God is not displeased with us because we call upon him continuously and without ceasing, but he is displeased with us because our petitions are so infrequent and so faint that it is necessary for him to strain his omnipotent ear in order to hear them. In the eighteenth chapter of Luke he gives us the example of the importunate widow who continually appealed unto the unjust judge until he avenged her of her adversary. If an unjust judge, in order not to be worn out by the continual coming of the widow, would avenge her, how much more will a God of love and mercy hear and answer the cries of his people! God is long-suffering and plenteous in mercy. The Savior inquires: "Or what man is there of you, who, if his son shall ask him for a loaf, will give him a stone; or if he shall ask for a fish, will give him a serpent? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father who is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?" (Matt. 7: 9-11.)

Whenever and wherever Christians cease to pray, and pray earnestly, the religion of Christ is decadent. The soul that is hungering and thirsting after righteousness delights to hold sweet communion with God in the secret hour of prayer. To him there is no greater delight than to lock out the world and lock himself in with God. To all such the Savior says: "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret, and thy Father who seeth in secret shall recompense thee." (Matt. 6: 6.)

When Christians cease to have the altar of prayer in their homes and cease to read the Bible and pray with their children, it is a dark hour for the religion of Jesus Christ. Christ, who is our example, often retired into solitude and devoted himself to communion and prayer with his Father. It is no unusual thing to find him leaving the multitude and retiring into the mountain in order to pray. Whenever he had any great decision to make, or whenever some burden was weighing heavily upon his soul, he sought solace in prayer. We read in Luke 6: 12: "And it came to pass in these days, that he went out into the mountain to pray; and he continued all night in prayer to God." After thus spending the whole night in prayer, we find him calling his disciples and choosing from them the twelve, whom also he named apostles. When he was in the very shadow of the cross, the sins of the whole world weighing upon him like a mountain, he retired to the garden of Gethsemane and poured out his soul to his Father in prayer until his sweat became as great drops of blood. The Savior's example in praying when he had some great decision to make, or when some great burden was upon his soul, should be followed by his disciples. If we are sorely perplexed, and if our burden appears greater than we can bear, why not, like the Savior, approach near unto God in prayer? Why should we not unbosom ourselves fully, casting all our care upon him, knowing that he careth for us? Not only did the Savior pray all night. but we find Anna, a prophetess, fasting and praying night and day, as is evidenced by Luke 2: 37, 38: "And she had been a widow even unto fourscore and four years, who departed not from the temple, worshiping with fastings and supplications night and day. And coming up at that very hour she gave thanks unto God, and spake of him to all them that were looking for the redemption of Jerusalem."

We find the apostle Peter praying unto his Father. In the midst of the busy scenes of life, with its solemn duties pressing upon him, he did not imagine that he would suffer loss by devoting time to prayer. We read in Acts 10: 9: "Now on the morrow, as they were on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, Peter went up upon the housetop to pray, about the sixth hour."

After Christ had gone back to his Father, the apostles, doubtless being perplexed and not fully understanding at that time just what it all meant, returned unto Jerusalem to the mount called Olivet. They did not forget to pray in this hour of sadness to them, as is declared by Acts 1: 13: "And when they were come in, they went up into the upper chamber, where they were abiding; both Peter and John and James and Andrew, Philip and Thomas, Bartholomew and Matthew, James the son of Alphæus, and Simon the Zealot, and Judas the son of James."

It is said of Martin Luther that when he arose in the morning knowing that he had a very busy day, and one filled with great responsibilities, that he would say: "I must devote at least two hours to-day to prayer."

Christians, while enjoying the privilege of praying for their enemies, should not forget that it is their duty to pray for their brethren. I have been impressed with the great number of scriptures that allude to Christians praying for one another. In the space allotted to this article I will have room to call attention to only a few of these passages. If Christians would pray more for each other, they would not find so much fault with their brethren. It is the failure to pray for them that often leads them to magnify their shortcomings. I would not encourage any man to compromise with sin in any form; yet, sometimes, when we become cold and indifferent ourselves, and the trouble is with self, we imagine it is with the other man. We find Paul praying for the Roman brethren, as is declared in Rom. 1: 9-12: "For God is my witness, whom I serve in my spirit in the gospel of his Son, how unceasingly I make mention of you, always in my prayers making request. . . . For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established; that is, that I with you may be comforted in you, each of us by the other's faith, both yours and mine." Again, we find him praying for the church at Ephesus. He says: "For this cause I also, having heard of the faith in the Lord Jesus which is among you, and the love which ye show toward all the saints, cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers; that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you a spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him." (Eph. 1: 15-17.) Likewise we find him praying for the church at Thessalonica: "We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers; remembering without ceasing your work of faith and labor of love and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, before our God and Father." (1 Thess. 1: 2, 3.) Again, we find the apostle Paul not forgetting to remember an individual-his son, Timothy-when he came to pray: "I thank God, whom I serve from my forefathers in a pure conscience, how unceasing is my remembrance of thee in my supplications, night and day." (2 Tim. 1: 3.) Neither did he neglect to pray for Philemon: "I thank my God always, making mention of thee in my prayers, hearing of thy love, and of the faith which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all the saints." (Phile. 4, 5.) We also find Epaphras praying for the Colossian brethren: "Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ Jesus, saluteth you, always striving for you in his prayers, that ye may stand perfect and fully assured in all the will of God." (Col. 4: 12.)

I commend unto the churches these examples and exhort them to pray for one another. Christians should not forget this great blessing and privilege if they would stand fast in Christ. It is so much better to pray than it is to devote our time to tithing anise and cummin, while we leave undone the weightier matters of the law, justice and mercy and faith. These we should have done, and not to have left the other undone. A spirit of work and pray, and pray and work, instead of so much bickering and strife, would be found very helpful at the present time. Instead of compromising with evil, let us earnestly work and persistently pray to our Father for guidance, while we devote our talents, time, and means to the advancement of the gospel of Christ.

The Spirit of Christ. No. 3.

[Republished from "Salvation from Sin" (Chapter XII.), by David Lipscomb.]

CHRIST'S SPIRIT MANIFESTED IN THE CHARACTERS HE LOVED.

The spirit of Christ is manifested in the characters that he especially loved. Christ and God are one in their purposes, feelings, and loves. The persons whom God has approved in all ages of the world are those who tenaciously clung to the will of God as revealed in his law, without change or modification under any pretext whatever. He has placed under the ban of his condemnation all who, under whatsoever pretext, changed or modified it. We may begin with Adam and Eve; take Cain and Abel, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Esau, Jacob, Saul, David, every king, warrior, prophet, and priest, false or true, and God has shown his love, not for the man that was most amiable in disposition, not for the one that bestowed the greatest charity, nor for him who was most devoted and zealous in worship. A man may give all his goods to the poor and his body to be burned, and yet be nothing before God. (See 1 Cor. 13: 3.) But in all ages God has loved best him who most faithfully obeyed the will of God. Eve sought wisdom in disobedience to God. Cain was zealous in his devotion. Saul was earnest in worshiping God and in devising new ways to secure him special honor. God taught him that "to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." (1 Sam. 15: 22.) Josiah, the king, reigned long in Israel, and had the testimony that he did that which was right before the Lord. He kept a passover, of which it was said: "There was no passover like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did any of the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept." (2 Chron, 35: 18.) Yet by refusing to listen to the voice of God he died the death of a sinner before God. Then, too, as Uzzah drove the oxen that drew the ark, they stumbled, the ark tottered as though it would fall, and he put forth his hand to prevent it. It was unlawful for any, save the high priest, to touch the ark. God was wroth that Uzzah even under this impulse should forget the law, and smote him dead. (See 2 Sam, 6: 6.) It was of much greater importance in the sight of God that man should respect and reverence his law than that he should try to save from profanation the sacred ark of God through forgetfulness of the divine law. No setting aside of the law of God, no change of the order of God, under the desire of honoring God or out of desire to protect his institutions from profanation and disgrace, can be allowed by God.

When men were so steeped in ignorance and under dominion of fleshly lust as not to be able to appreciate the full, perfect will of God, he, as a training school, gave a less perfect law until they were elevated to the point of obeying God's perfect law, then this perfect law was revealed, as in the case of divorce; but the law of God in force must be obeyed.

Some who should know better seem to think that under Christ, as men walk by faith, not by sight, and are under faith in contrast with the law, there is not the same obligation to walk rigidly in obedience to the law of faith. The Spirit, after enumerating a number of violations of the law of Moses and the summary punishment of these violations of law, says: "Now these things happened unto them by way of example; and they were written for our admonition. . . . Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." (1 Cor. 10: 11, 12.) "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not when they refused him that warned them on earth, much more shall not we escape who turn away from him that warneth from heaven." (Heb. 12: 25.) Turning from God or neglecting his appointments, sealed by the blood of Christ, and accepting others not appointed by God, not sealed with his blood, is to turn from and reject God and to refuse and trample under foot the blood of Christ. It is a fearful thing to treat lightly or turn from the bloodsealed appointments of God-to lightly substitute other things for his will. The substitution of faith for works did not lessen the obligation to rigidly obey the exact will of God. It increased it. Faith puts heart in the service. When our heart is in a work, our feelings all enlisted and aroused, it is much easier to do a work than when we have no heart, no interest, in the work. Under Christ, where we walk by faith, the heart must be in the service, the feelings must be enlisted; hence, the service becomes a labor of love—one that we find pleasure and joy in performing. There is less temptation to neglect or turn from such service. The service is a joyful one; it is not burdensome; and so the greater condemnation rests on us if we fail to obey faithfully and exactly the will of God. Faith does not lessen the obligation to obey rigidly and faithfully the law of God. It increases it. Faith removes the burden of obedience and changes it into a loving, joyous service—the service of a child to a kind and loving father. It becomes the grateful return of a true heart for the redemption of the soul from eternal ruin. If we look at the precepts of the Savior, this truth is fully borne out. "It is easier for heaven and earth to pass away, than for one tittle of the law to fall." (Luke 16: 17.) "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them, he shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5: 19.) "I am come down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 6: 38.) Christ came to give man an example of walking by the will of God. For man to do this is to be lifted above his own feeble sense and wisdom and to be lifted up into the light and wisdom of Almighty God. This is what the religion of Christ proposes to do for man. It lifts him up from the darkness and the clouds, the doubts and uncertainties, that hang around his pathway here, to preserve him from the mistakes, the troubles, the wrongs into which frail human wisdom would lead him and to enable him to walk in the light and be guided by the infallible wisdom that comes from the throne of God. It is strange that any man, in the least particular, should turn from that wisdom to the poor, flickering light of human wisdom. A human wisdom that goes to displace this divine light is never "a sanctified wisdom."

Christ, in his dealings with his disciples, manifested his spirit by showing a peculiar love for those who most rigidly insisted on full and exact obedience to the law given. John is said to be "the disciple whom Jesus loved." John is usually esteemed a very gentle, amiable, and loving character. This may be true; but if so, it is because gentleness and love are often combined in the same character with the most earnest and rigid adherence to law and with something of fierceness in opposing the wrong. John from the beginning was called a "son of thunder," which indicates a fiery zeal in carrying out a work. John was rigid and fierce in opposing the wrong. He it was who would forbid those who journeyed not with them and would have called down fire to consume the village that did not receive them. The Savior loved the zeal for right, but showed that the right was not to be maintained by the use of these destructive means. It was John that saw and presented the character of Jesus as that of perfect submission to the will of God, as ignoring, crucifying his own will to exalt the will of his Father. It was John that especially appreciated and exalted the Lordly and Kingly characteristics of the Messiah, and that saw that the keeping rigidly and faithfully the commandments of God is the consummation, fulfillment, embodiment, and declaration of love; that to obey is to love. "This is the love of God, that we keep his commandments." (1 John 5: 3.) "If a man love me, he will keep my word." (John 14: 23.) "He that loveth me not keepeth not my words." (Verse 24.) "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." (John 15: 10.) It was John, the disciple whom Jesus loved, that declared in his old age: "Whosoever goeth enward [goes beyond the commandments of God] and abideth not in the teaching of Christ, bath not God: he that abideth in the teaching, the same hath both the Father and the Son." (2 John 9.) It was the same disciple, beloved of Jesus, that commanded: "If any one cometh unto you, and bringeth not this teaching, receive him not into your house, and give him no greeting: for he that giveth him greeting partaketh in his evil works." 10, 11.) No one who rejects the teaching of Christ could be countenanced. The Savior clearly made the apostle, who all through life, down to old age, most fully appreciated and taught the necessity of absolute obedience to God's law as the fulfillment of love and the means of union with God and of securing the cleansing of the blood of Christ, the special object of his signal love. Who dare say that he did not so love this disciple because of these very qualities that were the peculiar characteristics of John? Then the spirit of Christ is one that excludes all turning from or neglect of the commands of God, or substitution of other service for that ordained by God, and insists on rigid obedience to the divine will as the only fulfilling of love and the only means of union with God and of cleansing from sin by the blood of Christ.

Legalism is rigid adherence to law. The law of God requires an obedience to God's will that springs from the heart. Without the heart is in the service, no obedience is or can be rendered. Then the spirit of Christ is the essence of legalism. It insists upon an obedience to the whole law of God from a heartful trust in God. The more trusting the heart is, the more faithful and rigid will be the adherence to the will of God.

Freed-Hardeman College.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Our readers have been advised as to the progress that has been made in securing funds for the purpose of increasing the usefulness of Freed-Hardeman College. We are much gratified to learn that Freed and Hardeman are succeeding admirably in raising funds for the purpose of increasing the facilities of the institution.

McQuiddy Printing Company was favored with the printing of their new catalogue, which makes something like thirty to thirty-five years that this company has done the printing for this institution. They have put out a catalogue that is in keeping with the times and one that reflects credit on Freed-Hardeman College. It affords me pleasure to note the progress this institution is making. I sincerely hope that it may continue to grow until its usefulness and influence for good shall be felt throughout the whole country.

While it is generally understood that teachers as well as preachers are not paid much for the work that they do, yet these brethren have labored faithfully without murmuring or complaining, and so have merited the success that they have attained. This institution already has scattered throughout the country men of usefulness and ability engaged in the different callings and working for the development of that which is good and uplifting. Freed and Hardeman point with pride to the work that the institution has done, and, judging the future by the past, and with much assurance, they predict continued and increasing usefulness. Those who wish to educate their boys and girls would do well to write Freed-Hardeman College, Henderson, Tenn., for catalogue 1919-1920, and other printed matter.

There are, thank God, evidences of the turning of men's minds to a deeper and more reverent attitude. The Spirit of God is moving over the face of the waters of human thought and life. The appeal for an unselfish patriotism is finding a response in noble and sacrificing service. Let us thank God and take courage. But when peace comes and we can turn again to our profits and our pleasures, we shall be living in the same old world, with the same temptations and weaknesses, the same unregenerate natures, and its delusions to beguile and betray us. The problems of peace will be more difficult; the dangers of peace will be greater; the sins of peace just as deadly as these things are now. We need God quite as much in prosperity as we do in tribulation-nay, more. The improvement which we thankfully note will not be radical enough if it reach not into the innermost recesses of human life. It must touch the fountain head of human thought and conduct, in the attitude of the soul and the conversion of the will. We must be converted and become as little children. We must have a truer, deeper, purer religion. We must live more in God and for God. We must become Christian in spirit and in truth. If we do not, we shall only patch up the broken fragments of human society.—Selected.

Query Department

By J. C. McQUIDDY

Mrs. J. W. Peery, Hohenwald, Tenn., inquires the meaning of 1 Cor. 5: 11, which reads: "But as it is, I wrote unto you not to keep company, if any man that is named a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a reviler, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such a one no, not to eat."

This refers to an ordinary meal and not to the Lord's Supper. Corinthian Christians were not forbidden to eat with the heathen fornicator or idolater. All heathens engaged in such practices. But to eat with one was to recognize him as an equal, and they were forbidden to eat with a fornicator that was named a brother. Christians should do nothing that will encourage and recognize the sin of an erring brother.

Brother E. Wallace, Hacoda, Ala., inquires to know the meaning of these scriptures: (1) 1 John 3: 3; (2) 1 John 3: 9, 16: (3) 1 John 5: 15, 16.

(1) I John 3: 3 reads: "And every one that hath this hope set on him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." The man who takes Christ as his example and who is seeking to walk in his steps endeavors to live a pure, godly life, such a life as Christ himself lived. Of course, no fallible human being can reach the state of perfection that Christ attained. However, in following Christ, he will copy nothing that is imperfect, but may attain a relative perfection.
(2) John 3: 9: "Whoseever is begotten of God doeth

no sin, because his seed abideth in him; and he cannot sin. because he is begotten of God." Verse 16: "Hereby know we love, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." In interpreting a passage of scripture, we should interpret it in the light of other scriptures. Before giving the meaning of this passage, I will quote a number of other passages addressed to Christians, which show the danger of teaching a false doctrine by placing the extreme meaning of one class of scriptures to the exclusion of another class. The scriptures quoted are all addressed to Christians. The following scriptures teach the liability of Christians to sin: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us." (1 John 1: 8-10.) "My little children, these things write I unto you that ye may not sin. And if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." (1 John 2: 1.) "If any man see his brother sinning a sin not unto death, he shall ask, and God will give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: not concerning this do I say that he should make request. All unrighteousness is sin: and there is a sin not unto death." (1 John 5; 16, 17.) The passage under consideration, and also verse 6 of the same chapter, to some, seems to indicate the impossibility of a Christian's sinning at all. The same is true of 1 John 5: 18, which says: "Whosoever is begotten of God sinneth not." If we consider the latter passages alone, they would teach apparently the absolute holiness of the saint. The two classes are to be interpreted in the light of each other. The scriptures teach that the germ of sin, dormant, perhaps, remains in the flesh. There is a continual warfare between the flesh and the spirit. "The flesh lusteth against the spirit." A Christian may be overtaken in a fault and betrayed into sin for the moment. The sin is due to the temporary revival of the old nature. It is not the nature of the spirit which is born of the Spirit of God to sin; it is not disposed to sin. One born of God cannot and will not engage in willful sin, nor can be who abides in Christ. It is inconsistent for a Christian to practice sin; and it is so inconsistent that he will not continue in sin, will not be a willful sinner, even if he should occasionally lapse back into the old life and for the moment commit a sin.

(3) 1 John 5: 15, 16: "And if we know that he heareth us whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions which we have asked of him. If any man see his brother sinning a sin not unto death, he shall ask, and God will give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death; not concerning this do I say that he should make request." Verse 16 shows that if we are followers of Christ we should not only love him, but should love each other, and must be willing even to die for each other if necessary. The meaning of this passage is that if we ask anything in faith, and in accord or harmony with his will. he will hear our petition. Our petition should be to the glory of God, and not for the purpose of gratifying the lusts of the flesh. The sin that is unto death is a willful sin that is persisted in through life. We should not pray to God to forgive an impenitent soul that is willful and disobedient. A sin not unto death is one that is not persisted in, that is not willful, and of which one repents. Gal. 6: 1 gives us some light on this subject: "Brethren, even if a man be overtaken in any trespass, ye who are spiritual, restore such a one in a spirit of gentleness: looking to thyself, lest thou also be tempted." Our great concern should be to live a pure, holy life, avoiding the very appearance of evil. 0 0 0

Sister Lou Rice, Hanceville, Ala., wishes to know the meaning of 2 Cor. 12: 20, and she also inquires if it is right to debate on Scripture.

The sins to which reference is made in 2 Cor. 12: 20 are those that belong to a divided state of the church. "For I fear, lest by any means, when I come, I should find you not such as I would, and should myself be found of you such as ye would not; lest by any means there should be strife, jealousy, wraths, factions, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults." Paul severely condemned the Corinthians for introducing opinions and other untaught questions into the church and thus creating factions and strifes in the church. The apostle warns us to avoid questions that gender strife. Christians must "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" by teaching, preaching, and practicing the things that are clearly taught In the word of God. This does not mean, however, that it is wrong to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." To honestly search for the truth, even though it be in a discussion, is to be commended and not condemned. When Peter was in error, Paul withstood him to the face. Even so should Christians do to-day. Christ debated with the devil. He argued many questions with the Pharisees and Sadducees. Paul discussed with Felix, King Agrippa, Festus, and others. We learn from Acts 24: 25: "And as he reasoned of rightcousness, and self-control, and the judgment to come, Felix was terrified, and answered, Go thy way for this time; and when I have a convenient season, I will call thee unto me." All discussions should be conducted in the love of truth and for the attainment of more truth. Self-glorification and simply the desire to gain the victory over an opponent should never enter into any Bible discussion.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Oaude and Everett Woodruff are in a good meeting at Caroll Street Church, this city.

Biother Larimore will begin a meeting next Sunday for the durch in East Chattanooga, Tenn.

J. M. Dennis closed a meeting at Millerstown, Ky., on August 10. Two persons were baptized.

M. 6. Cayee closed a good meeting on August 10 at Rock Church, five miles from Dickson, Tenn. Seven persons were baptized and one was restored. He is now at Car-

A. B. Lipscomb closed a week's meeting for the Fairview congregation on the Hillsboro Road, near Nashville, Sunday evening. Seventeen persons were baptized and two were restored. Brother Lipscomb will resume his work at Russell Street Church next Sunday.

We hear good reports from the congregation at Fisher's Chapel, near Greenbrier, Tenn. They were visited Sunday by S. F. Morrow, H. S. Lipscomb, and B. B. Hackney, of the Belmont Avenue congregation, this city, who are taking a special interest in this work.

From George W. Graves, Cookeville, Tenn., August 15: "Our meeting with the Smyrna brethren continued ten days, with two baptisms. At present we are in a meeting with the Liberty brethren, near Cookeville. We are having good crowls and fine interest."

From W. A. Hecord, Murray, Ky., August 14: "I am on my way home from Blue Springs, Tenn., where I closed a splendid meeting last night. There were twelve baptisms and two restorations and the church seemed to take on new life. I go text to Rosebud, Ill."

From C. C. Brown, Micanopy, Fla., August 13? "I went out twenty miles from Micanopy to a mission point and preached once. There were three additions, and five others said they would be ready on my return to obey the gospel, after they have searched the Scriptures to 'see if those things were so.'"

From W. F. Lemmons, Toone, Tenn., August 16: "I closed a meeting at Cloverport with large crowds and fine interest, but no additions. The very serious church trouble which has destroyed the influence of the church for a number of years was settled. I think the way is open now for real good."

From H. W. Busby, Midlothian, Texas, August 15: "Austin Taylor and I closed at Desoto last night, with a large crowd present. Eleven persons were baptized, six were restored, and we were remembered extra well and shown every courtesy possible while there. We will be in Midlothian for the next ten days."

From E. Gaston Collins, 507 West Clinton Street, Huntsville, Ala., August 14: "We closed on last Tuesday night at Center Ridge. The meeting lasted ten days, with four baptisms and, the brethren think, much good otherwise done. I began here (Cyruston) last night with a good crowd and fair prospects for a good meeting."

William P. Walker writes: "Our labor last week at Mars' Hill, in Hickman County, terminated with two additions. At this writing Brother Derryberry and I are at Bethel Church, in Anderson's Bend, Hickman County. Yesterday we ate dinner and spent the afternoon with M. K. McCaleb, a brother of J. M. McCaleb, the Japan missionary."

Thomas H. Burton, Union, S. C., writes: "Congratulations on the 'Giving' number. It certainly came just at the right time with the right thoughts for the whole brotherhood. May God help us to study it and learn that it is more blessed to give than to receive. May God bless each donor to this great number. I hope you may see fit to give it to us in a pamphlet."

From Mrs. L. R. Hutchison, Enterprise, Ala.: "The meeting conducted by W. J. Haynes here last week was a very successful one. The good seed sown will live in the hearts of the people for years to come. Eight persons were baptized into Christ. The members are very much encouraged, and we wish the prayers of the people that we may grow in grace and do the work of the Master."

From R. L. Whiteside, McKinney, Texas, August 14: "This leaves me in a meeting at Bloomdale, near McKinney. Five persons have been baptized and two more are to be baptized this evening. I go next to Corinth, near Nashville, Ark.; thence to Kentucky and Tennessee for some meetings. I may be able to hold another meeting in that section. You may address me at Denton, Texas."

From Ben West, Waxahachie, Texas, August 11: "Fine services here yesterday. A large crowd of us went to Sylvana for dinner and met many friends from Oak Cliff Church in Dallas. Brother Dunn is closing a good meeting at Sylvana. Brother Gardner was at Ennis. Brother Sowell closed a great meeting at Garrett. Brother Reeves has closed a good mission meeting at Sardis, four miles out."

From T. B. Thompson, Clarksville, Tenn., August 16: "The Little Rock meeting, near Lyle, closed on August 12 with three baptisms and three reclamations. We had the largest crowds ever. This was my fourth annual meeting at that place, and I promised to give them a meeting the next time I am up in this part of the country, which will be, Jehovah willing, in 1921. I shall begin at Allen's Chapel, near Needmore, to-morrow."

W. A. Sisco writes: "E. S. Cambron, of Winchester, Tenn., conducted a tent meeting at my home the last week in July, with two added and others almost persuaded. This was purely a mission meeting. I closed a week's meeting at Theta, in Maury County, on Saturday before the second Sunday in August, with two additions. I went from there to Center Chapel, in Wilson County, for another meeting, which continued eight days and resulted in four baptisms. Both churches expressed themselves as being very much edified."

From W. G. Jernigan, Grand Saline, Texas, August 13: "I closed a meeting at Jackson, six miles south of Canton, on the night of August 7. We had large crowds, but no additions. The brethren have asked me to return next year. I was at home last Lord's day. At the morning service one was restored. I go next to Jacksonville and from there to Star, then to Colfax and Walnut Grove. My father, R. W. Jernigan, will begin a meeting at Friendship on the fifth Lord's day in this month. He is now in a meeting at Hohenwald, Tenn."

From R. N. Moody, New Hope, Ala., August 14: "The meeting here closed last night with a full house. The attendance and interest were good throughout the meeting. Two persons were baptized. I am to begin a meeting next Lord's-day with the Friendship congregation, in Marshall County, Tenn. By an oversight I have the fifth Sunday in this month and the week following in which I can hold a short meeting for any place not too far from Petersburg that may want me. Address me at Petersburg. Tenn., Route 2, care of W. R. Pack."

From C. S. Austin, Mount Pleasant, Tenn.: "Our meeting at Leiper's Fork closed on Wednesday night, July 23. The people of that community attend church as well as any place I have ever visited. The meeting was indeed a pleasant experience in my life. Great audiences attended almost every service. Eleven persons were baptized into Christ and two others confessed their sins and came back to the church. My home was with E. T. Johnson. He lost his wife about one year ago, but his home is yet a place where a preacher of the gospel is welcome."

From Coleman Overby, Murray, Ky., August 15: "I have just closed a splendid meeting at Mount Pleasant, near Wingo, Ky. Twenty 'became obedient to the faith' and three took membership. A young lady confessed faith in Christ, but her parents, being of the straitest sect of the Baptist religion, stubbornly refused to let her be baptized. However, I understand she means to obey the Lord in spite of her parents' opposition. This was my second meeting at this place. I promised to return next year. They supported me well in this work. I go next to Clearview, near Portland, Tenn."

From Guy Renfro, Snowdoun, Ala., August 15: "On the second Sunday in July I went to Cold Springs, near Deatsville, for a week's meeting. The congregation there has gone down and the house is unfit for meeting, so we held services in the schoolhouse. We had good audiences and seemingly good interest. I preached there again on the second Lord's day in this month and baptized three people—two from Methodist families. There is a move on foot now to repair the meetinghouse. On the fourth Sunday in July I began a meeting for the little congregation near Chapman, and we had a good meeting. Next Lord's day I am to begin a meeting for the congregation at Industry. These two congregations and two others that I know in this section of Butler County are without a regular preacher. They would be very glad if some good brother would locate in that section and preach for them."

Training Little Children

Simple Things Please Children.

How many things can be made by folding ordinary wrapping paper! Soldier caps for small boys keep them amused a long time. A house and furniture with a few cut-out dollies make such busy little girls. After all, it is the simplest things that make children happiest.

When at my mother's home one time, my little girl folded and cut a house-windows, doors, and all. Her grandmother was delighted, and the little one said: "We'll keep it to show grandpa, and I guess he'll say I am a smart Tottle." With a little thought, mothers can learn how to fold and teach their children to fold a number of things. It is excellent practice in accuracy and neatness, besides affording the joy of making something.

In a regular kindergarten all the sets of blocks, which are of different sizes, are kept in boxes with covers, and each child puts his away carefully and correctly or else the cover will not fit. Then all the sets are collected and packed in a closet by a few of the children. Children love to help keep things in order and enjoy doing it.

At home, also, a child should have a place for his toys. A playroom is ideal; but if this cannot be provided, some place surely can be found, even in a small flat, which a child may have for his very own to keep his toys in. From the age of sixteen months, I insisted that my little girl put her toys away neatly. We began it as play, and now it is a habit. Of course, sometimes she is in very much of a hurry to do something else, but the toys are put away in the end. We made her a large dry-goods box, standing up on end. My husband put cheap casters on it and two shelves across it. There all the small toys are kept. The blocks have their own boxes; the small things have baskets; and crayons, pictures, and papers go into a box with a cover. All of them fit into the shelves; also the animals, dolls' trunks, washtubs, and many other such things. The picture books have a compartment in the large bookcase. "A place for everything, and everything in its place," when little folks have finished playing, makes a good rule.

One day when my child was not at home, a little girl came in for a visit. I took her into the playroom and left her there very happy. After a short time, she went home. When I returned to the playroom, I found everything so scattered over the floor that there was hardly room to walk. The next time the little girl came, I had a talk with her. I have made it a rule-and it is a hard rule to keep, for some mothers are offended-that if a child will not help put away the toys carefully when he is ready to go home, then he cannot come back to play with that toy again until he is ready to do what I ask. My little girl was playing at a neighbor's a few days later. When it was time to come home, I went for her. The children were cutting out pictures and had made a dreadful mess on the table, chairs, and floor. I told my little girl to help pick them up before putting on her things. The mother said: "O, that's all right. Sadie never picks up scraps; I do that. So don't make your little girl do it." And my child smiled and calmly said: "It's all right, mother; I don't have to pick up here." Then I told the mother about my rule and explained that it was not mere crankiness on my part, but a desire to form good habits in the children and to develop character.

All children are naughty at times, and it is so hard to know how to deal justly with them. One day when I was very busy my little girl came in from playing in the garden. I suppose she was tired and hungry, but she did not herself know what was the matter. She began to try a new kind of naughtiness, lying down on the floor, kicking and screaming and saying naughty things to me. I was amazed and quite puzzled as to how to trest such a proceeding. At first I ignored her, but she kept it up. I asked a few questions in a kindly way, but that seemed to fan the flame. I was busy, in a hurry, warm, and tired. and began to get very angry. Nevertheless, I realized that if I could not control my temper, I could not expect a fiveyear-old child to do so. So I pondered over what to do. Finally I went and picked her up and carried her to a chair, where we both sat or flopped down, as it was no easy task carrying a kicking, crying mass of humanity. I never said a word, but rocked her quietly. After a little while she stopped, and I began to sing softly. She almost went to sleep. Then I knew she was simply overtired, and I was so thankful that I had not indulged my own temper in any way. After a short time we had lunch, and then she went to bed for her afternoon nap. She slept hours, repairing the wasted energy and her nerves in blessed sleep. She has never tried that trick again.

I find a word of praise goes so much further than blame. and the bright eyes give back such a grateful look.

Last autumn my little girl began to go to kindergarten. She loves the work and is always so proud to show what she has made. I was very anxious for her to go, as she was shy and needed to learn "team work" and to rub up against other children in order to polish off the corners.

The kindergarten is the link between home and school. There is more freedom, more spirit of comradeship, more play than in the classroom, and to me it seems like administering a rude shock to usher a child into definite studies fresh from the home. By-attending kindergarten. the child becomes familiar with a school building, school hours, and necessary rules. He develops courtesy and kindness toward others and enjoys listening at story time. He also likes working and playing in unison with others, and he learns to control the fingers-in fact, to control the whole body. No school is complete without a kindergarten.

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

The Cause of Christ in South Carolina.

BY L. R. BRIGGS.

I am writing an article to set before the brotherhood the cause of Christ as I see it in South Carolina.

I left Union County, the county that Brother T. H. Burton is now laboring in, and went to Wills Point, Texas, in the year 1915, and there heard and obeyed the gospel. I had heard so many conflicting ideas and opinions preached about the Bible that I had about drifted into infidelity, when I heard the pure, simple gospel of Christ preached in its purity and simplicity. The first sermon I heard preached by a gospel preacher, I went home and told my wife that I had found what we had been looking for, and we both went for a few nights and obeyed the gospel. After living there for about two years, we went back to Knoxville, Tenn., where we lived for three years, We moved back to South Carolina last February. Since coming back here I see the need of the gospel being preached here in its purity. It is a shame to note the ignorance of the people here on the gospel plan of salvation and Christian living. I feel deeply the responsibility of telling the people of Jesus and his love "as it is written." It was a great comfort to me when I found out that Brother Thomas H. Burton was in Union, and I went over there to spend a week and see for myself how the work was progressing. To my great surprise, I found that the work was being organized at a much more rapid rate than I had thought.

I was at their business meeting last Sunday when they met to see about buying a lot on which to build a meetinghouse. Though all are working people, each was ready and willing to do his best to help build up the church at that place and seemed glad of the opportunity to have a hand in the work

I am sure that if the people who live in Tennessee, Texas, and other places, who have heard the gospel all of their lives, could only realize how badly the gospel is needed in South Carolina, they would gladly take a hand in supporting the work here, thus preaching the gospel to these poor, dying sinners who have never heard the gospel in their lives. The harvest indeed is ripe, but the laborers are few. If the people of God all over the land and country could see that little band at Union holding high the blood-stained banner of Prince Immanuel and demanding a "Thus saith the Lord" for everything they do religiously, they would be only too giad to have fellowship in such a grand and noble work as is being carried on Brother Burton and Brother Traylor closed the meeting at Union on Sunday night and came to Woodruff on Tuesday to preach two weeks to the people of this community. We are meeting with all kinds of opposition; but a good many of the people are coming out to hear the gospet preached, and there are prospects of their leaving me a little congregation to work with when they go back to Union.

There are people all over the State ready to accept the word of God as it is written if they only had the opportunity. Therefore it is our solemn duty as children of God to carry out the great commission given by Jesus himself: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation." My brother, if you cannot go your own self and preach to them, then the duty devolves upon you to send some one. If there is a mission field in the world that needs the gospel, this is one of them right here at the door of people who have heard the gospel all of their lives. There are thousands and thousands in this State that never heard a gospel sermon in their lives.

Brethren, do not throw this aside, but give it due consideration and watch that you do not come to the judgment bar of God having borne no fruit while on your pilgrimage from time to eternity. Pray for us, that great and lasting good may be accomplished in the name of Jesus and to the honor and glory of God in this community. My address is Route 3, Woodruff, S. C.

You Do More Work,

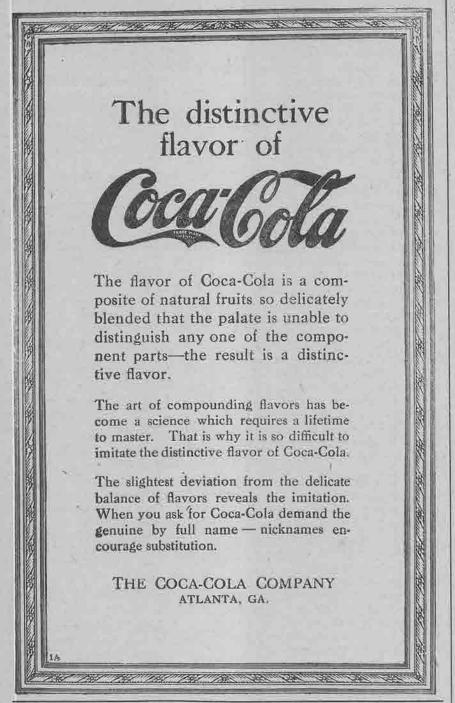

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

HICKORY N. C.

There are many things impossible to a few, which are made possible only by the cooperation of all. Your good health comes by each organ in your body doing its work. Paul likens the work of the church to the members of our bodies. (See 1 Cor. 12: 12.)

Now, I want to appeal especially to the elders, preachers, and leaders of the churches of Christ everywhere for our mission work. I do not mean to write about our duty to do mission work; we know that already, and enough has been said and written on this subject to convince all who would be convinced of our duty here. Brethren, we know we are not doing what w should along this line. Then, why will we continue in our neglect when we know it is a sin? The trouble is, we have never been definite enough, but have been too general in our teaching and plans on this subject. Then, it has not been pressed locally as it should. We teach it in the papers. but we do not have the cooperation of all the elders, preachers, and leaders to put it before each congregation and help enlist each member this way. And I think I know the chief reason for this. We all believe in teaching all nations, and all want to do that, too, but we feel that our congregation has about all it can do now financially. Is this not the chief reason for our not pressing this matter more?

AUGUST 21, 1919.

I know we all get many calls for help, and this is for our salvation; but I think I see how we can help in mission work, too. I think this impossible can be made possible for you.

God has not asked us to do more than we can in anything; but have you, as Mary, done what you could? Now, I do not know just how many churches of Christ there are in the United States; but let us figure here a little. We talk of the power of little things and can see it on every hand, even in nature. We see the greatest lodges meeting all their expenses with only a small assessment from each member, which illustrates this power of each one doing his "little bit." Now, suppose, to illustrate, we have five thousand churches in the United States, which will give one dollar "minimum" each per month to this work, to say nothing of the many churches which can and will give more than this. This would mean at least five thousand dollars per month for mission work-quite an increase over what we are doing! But some one says that there are some who cannot give that much. Let's see. Suppose you take a congregation with fifty members. Could they not sacrifice "two cents" each per month extra for missions? If there were only twenty members, could they not sacrifice just "five cents" each per month? And if only ten members (not many smaller than this), could they not sacrifice "ten cents" each per month for mission work? Now, where is your im-You see I have possibility here? placed this within reach o' every congregation that meets regularly at all, and have not hindered the one who can go beyond the one-dollar minimum per month, either.

Brethren, will we continue to let our home congregation be as the "onetalent" man-because we cannot do big things, do nothing along this line? If we do, we may well expect his reward also.

The secret of success in this work is not in big gifts, but in each member in each congregation doing his bit. How many churches will promise to enlist for this one dollar per month? This will not be done till the preachers, elders, and leaders get behind this work and ask each one to give his ten.

five, or two cents, as the need may be, to raise the definite amount of at least one dollar per month. We all know we will do more when we promise a definite amount, too. I think it best for each church to write to the papers or some one who is sending money to our mission workers and tell them how much you will give. Then the missionary can know how to plan his work to the greatest advantage. It is not like a preacher's work here; for the missionary has to use tracts, hire help, employ native workers, etc. In order to do this, he must know about what to expect of us, just like you would in hiring help for any other work. But the important thing is to give the one dollar (or more) per month, whether you write them or not.

Brethren, we may try, as did Moses, to excuse our neglect here by a lack of ability; but it is not here, for you can see that by each one doing his bit we can get at least one dollar from every congregation in the land each month, if the leaders will only make the proper effort to get it up.

I think I have two churches so far enlisted in this work on this basis, Let us get our heads, hearts, and pocketbooks together and enlist all the churches by the first of the year on this proposition. What do you say? How many will work and pray to this end from now till this is a reality? It will depend, not on a few, but on all and an every-member campaign. If this is done, we can enlist them, too.

I send this out with a prayer to our Father that all who read it may help enlist others in our effort to pledge all the churches to the plan of a definite amount every month for mission work before January, 1920. Can we count on you, my brother?

WHEN WRITING OUR ADVERTISERS PLEASE MENTION THIS PUBLICATION Seed Sowing.

BY W. S. VICKREY.

If I want a crop of corn, I plant corn: if I want a crop of wheat, I sow wheat; when I want a cotton erop, I plant cotton seed; and if I desire an oat crop, I always sow oats. No one but a crazy person or an idiot would think of producing any kind of a crop in any other way. But why do we always use a certain kind of seed in order to produce a certain kind of crop? Because all persons who understand sowing and reaping know that the laws of nature, which control vegetation as well as animal life, are so definitely fixed and unchangeable that like will always produce like, and that all must work in harmony with those laws in order to obtain success along any line of farming or stock raising. Furthermore, the above laws are just as inflexible when applied to any doctrinal teaching (seed sowing), either political or religious. I would be considered foolish if I should expect a Democratic erop from Republican seed sowing, or a Democratic crop from Socialist seed. If I wish a Camobellite crop, I must sow that kind of doctrine (seed): if I want to produce a Methodist crop, I must sow Methodist seed; if I desire a Baptist crop, I must sow Baptist seed; and this is no less true of Presbyterians, Adventists, Mormons, Spiritualists, and all other religious societies, with no exceptions whatever. But not one of the above-named seed, nor all together, will produce even one Christian. There is only one kind of seed that will produce a crop of Christians, and Jesus named it "the seed of the kingdom, the word of God." This is the only kind of seed that Jesus authorized his apostles, or any other man or woman, to sow on earth. There is not one divine promise of any crop being garnered at the judgment except that which is produced by sowing the pure and unadulterated "seed of the kingdom," the word of God. "But," say very many persons, "the plan of salvation is mysterious, and we cannot all see alike; and if we do the best we know how, and are honest and sincere, God will certainly not condemn us." Here is the fatal mistake that will cause all who will not take God at his word and obey the gospel to be condemned: for, as stated above, there is not a single divine promise of eternal life to any one who is not willing to be guided by God's will, the New Testament.

The idea of the plan of salvation being a mystery is as false as the devil can make it, and he is the author of it. Doubtless this idea was intended by him as his blackest slander of the three divine names; for Isaiah, the prophet, said that the way should be so plain and easily found that "the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein." (Isa. 35; 8.) God is not the author of divisions, strifes, and contentions among religionists; but the devil is, and doubtless he is greatly elated over his great success along this line.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos-listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a hoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully thre-hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

People certainly do not realize what a fearful charge they thrust at God. Christ, and the Holy Spirit by accusing them of framing a plan of salvation that is difficult to understand. Just think! If this were true, they would be more atrociously cruel than the devil. To arrange such a plan and scheme and require all persons to believe and obey it would be unspeakably cruel and infamous. It is the most diabolical slander that the devil has ever invented, and yet many hundreds of thousands of people accept. it as the truth, John (3: 16) says: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Peter says: "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness: but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." (2 Pet, 3: 9.) With such passages as these as evidences of God's infinite love and mercy, why will so very many insist that the plan of salvation is mysterious, when the plan is as plain as words can make it? The "mystery" has been implanted in the minds of the people by false teachers, whom Jesus named "wolves in sheep's clothing" and "blind leaders." People have been taught to accept their feelings as evidence of pardon, instead of God's written word. I challenge any living man or woman to find in the New Testament where any person was ever converted and pardoned without obeying all the commands of the gospel-faith, repentance, confession, and baptism. I refer to the time after Jesus arose from the grave. There is not one promise of eternal life to any one who is not willing to accept and wear the name of Christ, and "Christian" is the only word that contains it; and this name was given to God's people at Antioch. "And he is the head of the body, the church." (Col. 1: 18.) Notice that only one body is mentioned, and that is "the church;" and if we are not in this body (the church), we most assuredly will be fearfully disappointed at the judgment. Jesus says that many will go to the judgment thinking they are all right, and will plead for admittance; but they will be turned away because they have not obeyed his will as written in the New Testament, for all will be judged by that.

Try It! Substitute For Nasty Calomel

Starts your liver without making you sick, and cannot salivate.

Every druggist in town—your druggist and everybody's druggist—has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local drug-gist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs but a few cents; and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggish-ness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasanttasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach, or constipated bowels. It does not gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel to-day, and to-morrow you will feel weak, sick, and nauseated. Do not lose a day's work. Take Dedson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

Jackson, August 5.-Brother G. W. Jarrett closed a meeting at Jones Chapel last Lord's day with four bapchapel last Lord's day with fed the tisms and others convinced. Brother Jarrett is an able brother, sound in the faith, and should be kept busy all the time.-J. C. Cook.

Albertville, August 11.—The meeting at New Hope continues with increasing interest. The attendance has been good from the beginning, and last night over a hundred were turned away for want of seats. There have been two confessions to date.—R. N. Moody.

Coffeeville, August 6.-I have just closed a meeting near Coffeeville with four baptisms, and I would like to locate in Middle Tennessee. I am fifty years of age and have no family. I have no cranky ways. Any congrega-tion that wants me to locate with them or hold a meeting for them should address me at Coffeeville, Ala .- G. W. Jarrett.

Mooresville, August 10 .- The meeting at Ephesus, near Athens, closed last night, after lasting eleven days. Seven were baptized and two were restored to the fellowship of the church. The Mormons became very much disturbed and expressed a desire to have a debate with one of our brethren. We accepted the challenge, and as soon as arrangements can be made and the proper man secured the discussion will be announced. My next meeting will be at Linden, a mission meeting.-John Hayes.

Mars' Hill, August 11.-Yesterday was the first day of our annual Mars' Hill meeting-the first one I have attended in six years-and it seemed to be entirely satisfactory. We had a large all-day attendance, with preaching morning, afternoon, and night. "Egypt" (the old Wade community) was well represented, as was the whole country within a radius of twenty miles of Mars' Hill. Many of the old Mars' Hill pupils, their children and grandchildren, were there. So, you see, the audience was composed largely of my children and grandchildren in that sense, and several of my children and grandchildren in a literal sense were there. Then there were old-time friends with their children and grandchildren there. Hence, it was really a great reunion. I am preaching as have been preaching more than fifty years—twice every day and three times each Sunday. Services begin each Sunday at eleven, three, and eight-thirty; each week day, at three-thirty and eight-thirty.—T. B. Larimore.

Arkansas.

August 7.-I left my Damascus, home, in Fulton County, near Bakers-Mo., in June, since which time I have preached at the following places: Jonesboro, one week; near Winthrop, two weeks, with eleven baptisms and two restorations; at Guy, two weeks, with seventeen baptized and one restored. I am now in a meeting at Damascus. One is to be baptized this afternoon. A good interest is being manifested.—S. C. Garner.

Crossett, August 11 .- The meeting at Milo began on August 3 and closed at the water yesterday with seven baptized. In some respects this was the best of the ten meetings I have held for them. Large crowds and good interest prevailed throughout the meeting. I have promised to hold their meeting next year. I began preaching here last night in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium. We have no church building here and only a few members. This is the first effort to plant the gospel in this large manufacturing town. Brethren, pray that the word may have free course and that the cause of the Lord may be established here.—W. H. Sandy.

California.

San Francisco, August 8 .-Our meeting continues with good attendance and interest. One young man was baptized to-day. We have enjoyed Brothery sermon is interesting and instructive.—Mrs. T. J. McRae.

Louisiana.

Amite, August 7.—Brother Maston Sitman, of New Orleans, began a series of meetings at Oak Grove, near Independence, on the first Lord's day in July, which continued three weeks Three were restored and four were baptized. Last Lord's day I visited the congregation there and found them greatly encouraged in the work. One from the Baptists united with the church. Beginning on the second Lord's day in July, Brother A. K. Ram-sey, of Forest Hill, assisted the church here in an interesting meeting of three weeks' duration. The gospel was presented in the spirit of love and the services were inspiring and helpful. Thirteen were baptized, two came from the Baptists, and one was restored. One of those baptized came from the Methodists. Our lot is now paid for and some funds for the building have been raised. As building materials are so high, we shall have to appeal to the Christians abroad for help. The brethren here are not finan-cially able to meet the expenses of erecting the building required. Any help sent will be appreciated and duly acknowledged.—W. J. Johnson.

Mississippi.

Thyatira, August 9.—The meeting at Sulphur Well Academy, near Paris, Tenn., closed with seven baptisms and one restoration. We are now in an interesting meeting at this place.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

NOTHING LIKE PLAIN BITRO-PHOS-PHATE TO PUT ON FIRM, HEALTHY FLESH AND TO INCREASE STRENGTH, VIGOR, AND NERVE FORCE.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to stayed nerves. Our hodies need more excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, which is inexpensive and, is sold by almost all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, Bitro-Phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance, the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness, and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION.—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

This is one of the oldest and largest congregations in Mississippi. There has been one baptism to date, and one is to be baptized this afternoon .-William Etheridge.

Shaw, August 11.—I have just closed a meeting about eight miles from Shaw. There are just a few brethren here. This is a productive country and the spirit of the world dominates. I hope the good people here may build up the cause of the Lord, but they will have a hard fight. We had a good hearing for this place, but there were no additions. I have promised to preach here again next year, if it be the Lord's will.—J. A. Sisco.

Jacinto, August 2.—I began a meeting at Tishomingo on July 20 and labored with the faithful few there until the following Friday. Two souls were added to the body of Christ. On Jacinto. On Wednesday there were two sermons (we had dinner on the ground); and Brother Kelly, a minisground); and Brother Keily, a minister of the gospel, was with us. Large audiences were present during the week, with fine interest manifested. One young lady obeyed. Some of the members were walking disorderly, but confessed their faults both publicly and privately. The prospects are now bright for this congregation to become a great working body. I feel that this a great working body. I feel that this was one of the best meetings I ever held. I shall begin a meeting at Rock-port Landing, Tenn., to-morrow.— E. L. Whitaker.

Oklahoma.

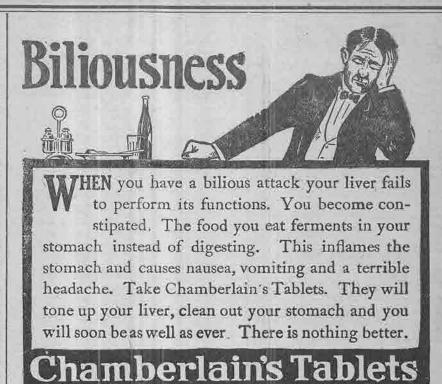

Konawa, August 9.—I have preached at Sentinel, Clinton, Mangum, Carnegie, and Oklahoma City since last reporting. The meeting at Francis, in the eastern part of the State, which was held during the last two weeks in July, resulted in fourteen baptisms and three restorations. We have a fine band of brethren there who believe in doing something in the Master's vine-May the Lord ever bless them. The meeting at Summers Chapel is being well attended.—J. A. Hudson.

South Carolina.

Woodruff, August 7 .- Our meeting near Woodruff continues with growing interest. We have had two baptisms to date—one woman and one young man. The opposition is great. I have never seen anything like it. Brother Traylor went to Union last Saturday and preached on Sunday, morning and night. He reports a good audience. We have secured the pictureshow house to meet in until we can build a meetinghouse. Brother Traylor will leave me in a few days, and I will need some one to assist me in this work. work. I also need a preacher who can spend about six weeks here. I am promised for some work in Tennessee, and I do not want to leave this work without some one in charge. If some one who can sing and preach, too, who is willing to give all his time to this work, will write me, I think we can make satisfactory arrangements for carrying on the work. Brethren, pray for us.—Thomas H. Burton.

Tennessee.

Newbern, August 12.—I recently held a five-days' meeting at Pleasant Hill, four miles southeast of Trenton. with good interest and seven baptisms. J. R. Stockard.

People suffering from blood poison, catarrh, skin, liver, kidney, bladder and chronic diseases, eczema, nervous debility, exhaustion, weakness of the lungs, heart and nerves should write me for free advice question chart and book describing their condition.

Bellbuckle, August 12.—I am now in a meeting at Deason, in Bedford County. On July 15 I closed a meeting at Beechwood, with seven baptized and two restored. On July 30 I closed a meeting at Fosterville, with ten baptisms and one restoration.—C. M.

Model, August 8.—My meeting at Hickory Grove, in Calloway County, Ky., closed last Lord's day, with seven added to the one body. This was a great meeting. A good feeling exists among the brethren there. They stood by me during the meeting as brethren should. I go to Liberty, Tenn., on August 10, to assist Brother David Thompson in a meeting.—R. B. Henry.

Kenton, August 9.—My meeting at this place closed to-day. This was a great meeting in many respects. The attendance was good at every service.

A few brethren have been meeting from place to place in the town for several years, but thought themselves too poor to build a house of worship. We convinced them that it was their duty to provide something permanent in the way of a house in which to worship and raised nine hundred and twenty dollars in a few minutes. A

Frank Hugh Davis.

Frank Hugh Davis, son of Bailey and Sarah Davis, was born at Brush Creek, Tenn., on October 19, 1891, and passed from this life on March 26, 1919. Some seven or eight years back the writer was holding a meeting at Brush Creek, and Frank obeyed the gospel. He, as a matter of course, was in the draft age, and he knew that he would be called to the army service. yet he believed he would be turned down on examination; so he did not wait to be called, but volunteered, leaving home and boarding the train for training camp on the fifth Sunday in March, 1918. He had not been in training long till they found it necessary to send him to a hospital in New York, where he underwent an operation. Just as soon as he had sufficiently recovered from the operation, they sent him overseas. But he did not stay with his company very long after getting over there. His health condition was such as to make it necessary to send him to the hospital over there, and in this hospital he remained till he was sent back to the United States. Landing in the United States on March 20, he was sent to the hospital at Camp Stuart, where he remained till the end came.

The strange coincidence in this is the fact that just one year to the day. and very nearly to the hour, from the boarding of the train for the training camp, his body was put off the train and carried to the home of his parents.

Frank was a good boy, and was loved and held in high esteem by all who really knew him. A most beautifully touching and consoling letter came to his mother from his chaplain on the morning before the funeral. The letter is as follows:

From Lieut, George T. Rowe, Chaplain, United States Army.—To Mrs. Sarah Davis, Brush Creek, Tenn.—Death of son, Private Frank H. Davis, Company F. 321 Infantry, United States Army.

It is indeed with a heart full of sorrow that I write this letter to a loving mother of one of our noble soldiers. It always makes me feel sad for any of our men to be called home, but at this time our heart is doubly sad on account of the death of one of our noblest soldiers. I know that you are rejoicing over the fact in this sad hour that in his make-up he had most of the noble, manly qualities that made the American Army the best, and therefore unbeatable, in the field.

It is indeed an honor to be the mother of such a fine young man, and my only wish is that all of our men could have some one from whom they might draw the noble things in life, and then our world would be a heaven in which to live.

Your boy had the happy faculty of numbering his friends by his acquaintances, and I think that all of the men in his regiment only knew him to love He was a patient sufferer, and while he was very sick, yet he was al-

Denton, August 10.—The meeting at Ravia, Okla., closed last Sunday night, with one baptism. This was a good meeting. I think brethren do wrong in counting their meetings a failure because they do not have a great number of additions. No one can tell the amount of good done in a meeting when the people come and the gospel is preached. It was a little hard to get the people started to coming, but they came, and the crowds increased to the close. I promised to hold their meeting next year. The whole town seemed to be anxious for me to return sometime soon and deliver a course of lectures. I aim to do this as soon as I can get around that way. I am now out near Pilot Point to begin today. I am to begin at Coxey. Ala., on August 23. If any congregation should want me for a meeting in that part, address me at Coxey, Ala.—D. S. Ligon.

Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word;

That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one:

I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.

Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world.

O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee: but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me.

And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them. $-John\ xvii.$

The Essentials of a Better Ministry

T. B. Larimore Emphasizes Purity.

Paul, experienced and inspired, wrote to Timothy, a young preacher, as a father to a son, making his plea for purity prominent, the following being samples of what he wrote:

"Keep thyself pure." (1 Tim. 5: 22.)

"Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart." (2 Tim. 2: 22.)

"For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness." (1 Tim. 6: 10, 11.)

"But refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness. For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." (1 Tim. 4: 7, 8.)

"Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." (1 Tim. 4: 12.)

Both reason and revelation demand that preachers be pure—be models for men in Christ Jesus, our Lord. Moreover, churches of Christ—congregations of Christians—should demand purity of preachers, certainly of those whom they encourage to preach.

The influence of every gospel preacher should be good, and only good, and that continually. They are admitted into the best homes and family circles everywhere, and they should exercise no bad influence anywhere. No gospel preacher has right to have any habit that the purest Christian wife and mother on earth cannot consistently and conscientiously commend to her own husband and children. Some sensitive souls, pure and chaste and clean, were shocked when they heard that a certain preacher whose character they knew had recently baptized seven sweet little girls. They said it was a shame that such a man should even touch one of those precious little treasures. Since then, however, the mask has been removed from the man, that the world may see him as he is.

We may reasonably expect more and more recognition and appreciation of purity as civilization advances. Some sections will, of course, surpass other sections in this, as in other things. The Methodist Episcopal Church—sometimes called the "Northern Methodist Church"—has long kept its pulpits free from the smoke and stain and smell of tobacco, while the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, supported multitudes of smoking and chewing preachers. Recently, however, the latter has decreed that "the old soaks" in the ministry may be allowed to apply to themselves the scripture, "He that is flithy, let him be filthy still," but that no user of the weed shall ever, hereafter, be ordained or licensed to preach for that enthusiastic, enterprising body.

We-well, we'll just let that pass, if you please.

Gospel preachers have no right to have any bad habits or habit. Do you ask me if I have none? That's a decidedly different thing. A father raved and ranted furiously because his child ran away with another child and got married. His wife said: "Don't be too hard on the children, honey. You know we ran away and got married when we were no older than they are." Frantically shaking himself loose from her restraining hand, he stormed: "That's a different thing entirely!" Just so the question of my having bad habits. That's a different thing entirely.

B. C. Goodpasture Gives Young Preacher's View.

It is clearly implied in the statement of the subject assigned to me that the present ministry is not what it should be; else, how could it be made better? It is a fact that the ministry of to-day will not, in all respects, compare favorably with that of the apostolic age, chiefly because the preachers are not now like they were then. In order to improve the ministry, the preachers must be made better. The betterment of the preachers in general will effect the betterment of the ministry in particular. The latter will follow as a consequence of the former. Properly, then, consideration should be given to the making of better preachers that we may have a "better ministry."

1. A better-educated ministry. The time has come when, more than ever before, a good education is an almost indispensable qualification for the successful ministry of the gospel. In the past, comparatively uneducated men, by their godly lives and earnest preaching, have done much good, and their labors should not be depreciated; but perhaps those men would not do so much good now, and perhaps they would have done more good then if they had been better educated. The masses of the people are better educated than they were a few years ago; the workings of sin have become more skillfully deceptive; "evil men and impostors have waxed worse and worse" (2 Tim. 3: 13); and all these things necessitate a better-qualified ministry. A liberal education, rightly used, will enable the preacher to reach more people and wield a greater influence for the truth. Paul, the model preacher and scholar of all time, used the vast resources of his learning to defend and proclaim the new and living way of the Lord. More than once he used his knowledge of things secular to demonstrate the truths of things spiritual. (Acts 17: 28; Tit. 1: 12.) He could discern the feelings, motives, and prejudices of men and adapt his message to them, 6.) Like his Master, he spake, not as he was able to speak, but as they "were able to hear" him. (Mark 4: 33.) In the acquisition of his great knowledge, he never neglected the holy Scriptures. He was mighty in the Scriptures. Above all things, the preacher must be familiar with "the oracles of God." How shall he teach that which he does not know? How shall he declare the whole counsel of God, if he knows only a part of it? To be schooled in the theologies of men and to be educated in the Scriptures of God are not the same thing. When the word of Christ dwells richly in the minds and hearts of the preachers, their sermons will be full of the truths that make men free; "for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." (Matt. 12: 34.)

2. A more deeply consecrated ministry. The preacher of the gospel is not likely to lead men closer to God than he himself is. He must live within the inner circle of his sublime presence—like Enoch, he must "walk with God"—If he would exercise a great influence over the hearts and lives of men. The power of the preacher is determined by his nearness to God. Others will hear him and truly respect him only when he lives the gospel that he preaches. Can the herald of the good tidings consistently urge others to do that which he has not done, or induce them to surrender to a Master whom he himself is unwilling to obey? A complete consecration to the service of God is always followed by an earnest desire to save souls. Consecration is equipment for genuine service. One of the great sources of Paul's success as a preacher was his unconditional surrender to the will and work of his Lord. To the Corinthians he wrote: "I will most gladly spend and be spent for your souls." (2 Cor. 12: 15.) Thus, without reservation, he dedicates all that he has and all that he is to the salvation of sinners. He will go to the utmost limit to extend the kingdom of God among men. Until this spirit of sacrifice and service comes mightily upon all the preachers, our ministry will not belong to that of the Pauline type and will never accomplish the purpose for which God ordained it. Did God require more of Paul as a preacher than he does of those who preach now? The standard of the Christian ministry is for all time the same.

3. A ministry with the vital message. Although it is "God's good pleasure through the foolishness of the preaching to save them that believe," yet he saves neither through foolish preaching nor through the mere act of preaching, but, as the marginal reading puts it, through "the foolishness of the thing preached." If it were through the simple act of preaching that God saves, it would be unnecessary to use discretion and choice as to the thing preached; anything would be all right, be it self, opinion, or dogma. But such is far from the case. The message determines the power and efficacy of the preaching. The apostles preached "Christ crucified, unto Jews a stumblingblock, and unto Gentiles foolishness." In the wisdom of the worldly-wise, the simple story or gospel of the crucified Lord is foolishness; but, in fact, it is the wisdom and the power of God, mighty to save. (Rom. 1: 16.) preach Christ, or the gospel, is to preach all that he said, all that he did, and all that he was. He who teaches less than the gospel of Christ does not teach enough; he who teaches more teaches too much. The gospel of Christ is the Alpha and the Omega of Christian evangelism. It will be a glad day for the world, for the ministry, and for the church of God, when every preacher sincerely feels that "necessity is laid upon me;" that "woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." When all of our preachers determine absolutely "not to know anything among" men, "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified," and preach according to that determination, we shall have a "better ministry.'

Whether the ministry shall be improved or not is, in the main, a question for preachers to settle. It is the imperative duty of every minister of the gospel to endeavor, to the extent of his ability, to make the ministry better by making himself better.

A. O. Colley Defines "Ministry."

The word "minister" is usually changed when we sign our names to a document as the "minister" of a church and send it to the secular press. They usually strike out the word "minister" and supply "pastor" in its place. The reason for this is that "minister" means "servant, subordinate, assistant of inferior rank;" and the press thinks a preacher belongs to a superior class of some distinction that the word "servant" does not fit. This is true to some extent, because the Catholics try to make two distinct divisions in church people-the "clergy" and the "laity." Denominations have caught the spirit and have bishops, presiding elders, etc., who run or boss the religious machinery. Preachers of the church of Christ are not all free from the "bossy" spirit. Some of them assume the entire leadership of the congregations where they preach and give the elders a "back seat," if any at all, with much embarrassment because of criticism heaped upon them for failure to run things right, when likely they have never had any chance to do so.

While a minister is a servant, his greatest service is to teach. He should teach each member his respective place of duty; try to bridge over common weaknesses of elders and others without too much criticism, but offer much encouragement; teach the members of the congregation their duty to the elders and the elders their duty to the church. Elders are not bosses nor lords, neither should they be treated as necessary figureheads to be controlled by every one else.

"A better ministry" means qualified men—men with too much dignity to stoop to low things; men of high ideals; Christian men that really love the Lord and his cause. Men who commercialize the gospel—who preach simply for the loaves and fishes—will fice when the wolf comes. They will go with the people who can put up the price.

We need an educated ministry. I do not mean that a man must be a finished product to do acceptable preaching or service. In fact, many of the "finished products? seem to be too much finished. Some of them desire to begin in the most responsible places without the real education that only work in the Lord's vineyard can give. I love the spirit of God's noble men who have gone in heat and cold, through mud and dust, in country and town, and preached the glorious gospel of Christ because they loved it. Some of them never had the advantage of great training in college, but grace and natural gifts empowered them to do great things in God's kingdom. Many of these grand men of God have gone to rest over on the other side of the river. Such men, as a rule, have baptized and taught other good men who are devoting their time and talents, their education, their all, to the great work.

A better ministry calls for the very best and most gifted men. The pulpit is no place for low witticisms and rough anecdotes to tickle the fancies or to appeal to the depraved conditions of human beings. It requires no special preparation to tell jokes. The greatest work ever assigned to a human being is the preaching of the gospel. A cheap preacher who will sell out for the praise of men or for money, or, worse than all, sell his honor and bring reproach on the church by a bad life, catering to the flesh and fleshly lust, is the cheapest commodity on the market.

Finally, "the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." (2 Tim. 2: 2.) Then, who shall be our ministers? (1) Faithful men; (2) those able to teach others. These are two qualifications laid down by the Lord through the apostle Paul to Timothy. He further instructs him: "Study to show thyself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." No man can preach who does not study for that purpose. Then, the four leading features of a minister's real preparation are: Faithfulness to the word of God; studiousness, to know how to work; ability to teach others; a pattern of good works.

A. S. Warren Warns Against Professionalism.

Because of much that is being said and left unsaid by the ministry, I am moved to write this article, simply to encourage, if I can, a better ministry.

There can be no doubt in the mind of those that have a think-box and uses one that the ministry is fast becoming professional and that there is more nonsense and less gospel preached to-day, comparatively speaking, than ever before in the history of our brotherhood. The tendency is to entertain rather than instruct, and much stress is placed on beautifully rounded sentences, worded so as not to offend, with all foreign words pronounced correctly, and self preached from start to finish in the most dramatic way possible. They speak extravagantly about the war, things they did not see and do not know, and some of them go so far as to violate a State law, debauch its people, encourage mockery, and then boast of it publicly. They are encouraging by their acts and preaching cooperation and federation which lead to denominationalism, and they seem to believe that sin will continue to increase until we become so very sinful that another reformation will be brought about by excessive sins, and they are making no effort to check it by preaching the gospel. This reminds me of the doctor who has a panacea for fits; who throws all of his patients, regardless of age, sex, or disease, into fits, and then goes after the fit. These professional preachers are tearing down faster than they build up; and if they continue at the rate they are now going, it is only a matter of time until all is swallowed up by the denominations. Some of them are thoughtless enough to be caught in the net of church union, which is possible and desirable; but everybody should know that we are further from God and church union than ever before since the days of Martin Luther. All informed people know, and these little professional preachers should know, that we could have had church union fifty or one hundred years ago, if it had not been for denominational preachers who have the jobs and draw the salaries. Martin Luther was a great and good man and a great reformer. John Wesley, who was an Episcopalian, was also a good and great man, but, like Martin Luther, made denominationalism possible, and neither of them had the correct idea of relying absolutely and entirely on the gospel for all of their faith and practice.

People have quit going to church on account of no gospel being preached; and if the tendency to preach nothing, teach nothing, continues to grow and prosper, the professional and narrow-minded little preachers will have to resort to war methods and conscript their audiences. Nonessentials seem to be a hobby with some of the preachers in both factions of our church, and they enjoy riding them, even if they are old, ugly, and poorly groomed, and I have often wondered what they would ride if their hobby should die suddenly and they be left with only the gospel and nobody to teach and train them. Preachers, like teachers, as a class, are not practical people, and thoughtful and informed people are not surprised at so many of them praising Mr. Wilson and advocating a League of Nations, but they are surprised at the eldership that permits it, for neither of them have any place in the ministry. During the war they were preaching democracy: now, the League of Nations and female suffrage; and what will be their next theme depends on circumstances, but I believe I will be safe in saying it will not be the gosnel.

The Christian minister that believes church union is probable on a scriptural basis is very much mistaken, and denominationalism is being encouraged by all such preaching, even if it is possible and desirable.

The League of Nations is nothing more nor less than a theory. Not one person in ten thousand knows very much about it, and nobody knows its effect on this country. Non-essentials are just what the word implies, and there is no more scripture for discussing them in the pulpit than there is in discussing the electric light that we are using and enjoying, and none of them have any place in a gospel ministry.

The Campbells, the greatest teachers of their day and of this day, preached only the true gospel, regardless of what anybody said, thought, or believed, and that is what should be preached by everybody to-day.

Washington and Jefferson, in the same class with Lincoln and Cleveland, great statesmen, advised against all foreign entanglements, and yet these little professional preachers in our church and the big ones in the denominational churches speak of them rather contemptuously and seem to believe a panacea for war has been discovered in the League of Nations. We have preachers with extreme views in both factions of our church, and in the progressive faction some with very pronounced and dangerous views, and others seemingly without views other than self and having a good time, and all tending to build up denominationalism, which is prospering as never before since the days of Martin Luther and John Wesley. The people want to hear the gospel, they need the gospel, and we should have a better ministry.

S. P. Pittman Analyzes the Situation and Needs.

"If thou put the brethren in mind of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Christ Jesus," (1 Tim. 4: 6.)

If we "hold the pattern of sound words," we will be loath to use modern phraseology. "Minister" in the Bible means "servant," Then "ministry" means "service;" and, strictly speaking, every Christian is a minister and entered the ministry when he became a disciple of Christ. A "better ministry," then, would simply mean a better service upon the part of all the membership—a better church. But, to adopt modern parlance for the time being, "the ministry" means pulpit service and the aggregation of those who proclaim the word from the rostrum.

It were folly to say that the ministry of the church of Christ could not be bettered; fatal to put forth no effort to make it better. Until we reach the acme of efficiency, of character, of perfection itself, there will still be room for improvement.

A bird's-eye view of the situation makes an impression concerning the ministry and its needs that is not materially changed by a closer and more scrutinizing investigation. Naturally the first question is as to numbers. Is the ministry super-numerous or sub-numerous? We need more of the efficient class, less of the inefficient. Too many have "entered the ministry" from sinister motives: for pecuniary advantage, to exploit talent, to gain notoriety, to furnish an opportunity to "see the world," to hide sin under a ministerial robe. Too few have entered with "love out of a pure heart, and a good conscience and faith unfeigned;" too few with a passion for saving souls; too few with a genuine love for God, for the truth, and for their fellow man.

SOME GENERAL OBSERVATIONS

- 1. Preachers have segregated. Even worthy preachers make the mistake of flocking to religious centers. The tendency to seek for a "mecca," a "Jerusalem" with its overplus of "scribes" and "doctors of the law," is manifestly unwise. The church at Jerusalem became more efficient when "scattered abroad," and preachers to-day could cover a wider scope and exercise a wider influence if not confined to "concentration camps."
- 2. Preachers are too migratory. As the rolling stone gathers no moss, so the roving preacher acquires little influence. How much wiser it would be to select some needy field, settle there, and create a sphere of influence! To labor from Maine to California and from Manitoba to Florida may add to one's reputation, but will not necessarily enhance one's influence. A better character and not a bigger reputation is what the ministry needs.
- 3. Our preachers are all classed and graded. To be sure, our grading is not uniform, nor is it at all accurate. One grades according to mental ability, another judges from comments in the religious press, another is influenced by personal attachment. But yet they are all classified; as much so as the pupils in a graded school; as much as the bolts in a hardware store. They are rated as the business man is rated by Dun or Bradstreet. Like the bore of guns, they are of different caliber, "What then is Apollos? and what is Paul? Ministers through whom ye believed." Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one."

4. We need to eliminate jealousy, envy, and snobbery. The bond of sympathy between different preachers should be stronger: between the better educated and the less educated; between those advanced in years, whose sacrifices in trying times and whose work of faith and labor of love we all appreciate, and those of less age and experience, but whose devotion to the cause under adverse circumstances we appreciate, too; between the "city preacher" with his temptations and his knotty problems and the "country preacher" with his hardships and scantier support.

5. We need a more consecrated ministry. We should never get to where "making tents" will not be regarded as an honorable avocation for the preacher in connection with his "ministry of the word," but the time may come when it is not expedient to divide one's time. No doubt there are farmers trying to preach who should give up the idea of preaching and devote themselves to their secular occupation; but there are preachers trying to farm who should cut loose from secular pursuits and devote their entire time to sounding out the word. The fear of creating a clerical class, a priesteraft, and the fear of "imitating the sects" has caused us to act injudiciously along this line. In this connection, Paul's advice to Timothy might be heeded: "Be diligent in these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy progress may be manifest unto all." (1 Tim, 4: 15.)

When we draw nearer to view the individual preacher (and the character of the ministry as a whole depends upon the character of the several individuals), the essentials of a better ministry may be summed up under three headings—viz.: Piety, Preparation, and Personality.

PIETY.

Piety is of prime importance and should not be lost sight of when considering the other essentials. Self-examination, self-discipline, and self-purification must be had before we are ready to "preach the word," to "reprove, rebuke, exhort." "Take heed to thyself [first] and to thy teaching," said Paul to Timothy; and to Titus he said, "In all things showing thyself an ensample of good works."

As a religious people, we have always demanded "sound doctrine," "sound speech, that cannot be condemned," in the pulpit. Until we demand of our preachers purity of speech, gravity of demeanor, piety out of the pulpit, we are guilty of straining at the gnat and swallowing the camel. If we denounce preachers whose speculations tend toward either materialism or spiritualism; if we will not tolerate those who preach innovations; if we bitterly condemn hobbyists, why not put the ban on those who begand whine, who are sore at the brethren for not supporting them; those who do not and will not pay their debts; those who have no standing in the church and do not "have good testimony from them that are without?"

The world has made a distinction between the clergy and the laity, and requires more morally of the former than of the latter. Let us as preachers of the gospel see that the world is not disappointed. Every preacher, as well as every other Christian, should have two standards of morality and spirituality: one for his fellow man, high and rigid; one for himself, still higher, still more rigid.

If this quality of the heart be lacking—this innate piety—it is a waste of time to begin "preparation" in a theological institution; and one's "entry" into the ministry without the first essential is a travesty upon the religion of Christ, which is "first pure, then peaceable, gentle," etc. Such men are an imposition upon the brotherhood and impede the progress of Christianity. "Thou that teachest, teachest thou not thyself?"

PREPARATION.

When an honest man who is "holding faith and good conscience" desires to "teach and exhort," to "preach the word," to save not only self, but "them that hear," the next thing to consider is an adequate preparation. "Neglect not the gift that is in thee;" "stir up the gift of God, which is in thee." If the miraculous gift imparted by the imposition of the hands of Paul and of the presbytery could be neglected or could be stirred up (margin, "into flame"), why could not and should not the natural endowment of mentality be stirred up and developed?

If the doctor goes through a long course of training before treating and operating upon the body, why is there not an equal obligation to prepare for treating the diseases of the soul? If the attorney must make strenuous preparation for handling the law, why not prepare strenuously for "handling aright the word of truth?" To neglect preparation is criminal.

"We have the truth" does not obviate the necessity of getting the truth before the public. Corn and cotton are commodities, but must be gotten on the market. There are media for getting the truth from God to the human heart. The Holy Spirit is God's medium. The Holy Spirit's medium is man, the earthen vessel, and man's medium is language. The message and the language through which the message is conveyed are so closely related that the study of grammar, rhetoric, and literature is of vital importance. "Matter" is of chief importance, but "manner" is not negligible. Any branch of study that develops the mind, enlarges the scope of vision, and sharpens the tools of the workman is not to be ignored.

Differences in capacity, temperament, facility, and environment render different degrees of educational attainment inevitable. Nor is this a calamity. Different fields call for different degrees of education. No man is adapted to every field of labor. The mistake is not in having preachers of different literary tastes and acquirements, but the danger is in a preacher's not realizing what sphere of usefulness he is best adapted to. The world is the field, but it is certain that one man cannot cover the whole field. Hence, it is expedient that one should find that part of the field where he can best influence the greatest number. Our ambition should be, not so much to fill a bigger sphere as to fill better the one we are in. It is true, however, that mental, moral, and spiritual growth will naturally enlarge one's sphere of operation.

PERSONALITY.

By "personality" is meant individuality, boldness, energy, and perseverance. The imitator in the pulpit is a failure. The cowardly preacher fails to declare the whole counsel of God. The lazy preacher is a "knot on the log," and the one easily discouraged will be only mediocre. It would not be reverential to call Jesus a "live wire." I would not call Paul that, neither do I like the term applied to the preacher of to-day. But there is an idea conveyed by the expression that is applicable to the successful preacher as well as to the successful business man of to-day. He needs to throw himself with his whole soul into his work. Paul expresses it thus to Timothy: "Be diligent in these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy progress may be manifest unto all."

The Ministry of Christian Women

A. A. Bunner Cites the Scriptures.

"I commend unto you Phebe our sister, who is a servant [Greek, "diakonon," deaconess-so says Prof. I. B. Grubbs] of the church that is at Cenchrea: that ye receive her in the Lord, worthily of the saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever matter she may have need of you: for she herself also hath been a helper of many, and of mine own self." (Rom. 16: 1, 2.) "Let none be enrolled as a widow under threescore years old, having been the wife of one man, well reported of for good works; if she hath brought up children, if she hath used hospitality to strangers, if she hath washed the saints' feet, if she hath relieved the afflicted, if she hath diligently followed every good work. But younger widows refuse: for when they have waxed wanton against Christ, they desire to marry; having condemnation, because they have rejected their first faith. And withal they learn also to be idle, going about from house to house; and not only idle, but tattlers also and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not. I desire therefore that the younger widows marry, bear children, rule the household, give no occasion to the adversary for reviling: for already some are turned aside after Satan." (1 Tim. 5: 9-15.) "That aged women likewise be reverent in demeanor, not slanderers nor enslaved to much wine, teachers of that which is good; that they may train the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be sober-minded, chaste, workers at home, kind, being in subjection to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed." (Tit. 2: 3-5.) "In like manner, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, even if any obey not the word, they may without the word be gained by the behavior of their wives; beholding your chaste behavior coupled with fear. Whose adorning let it not be the outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing jewels of gold, or of putting on apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in the incorruptible apparel of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. For after this manner aforetime the holy women also, who hoped in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection to their own husbands: as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose children ye now are, if ye do well, and are not put in fear by any terror." (1 Pet. 3: 1-6.)

All of these quotations are from the American Revised Version, Standard Edition, and all New Testament quotations in this article will be from this version. I am writing this for the benefit of Christian women.

When men or women who have come into the church in early life arrive at the age of fifty-five or sixty years, they are just what they have educated themselves to be, and any change in life will, as a rule, be along the same line. If they have grown in the good way, they will continue in the good; if in the evil way, they will continue to grow in that way-will grow worse and worse. Christianity means a growth and an education along all lines of goodness and betterment of one's self. Paul said of himself (and this applies equally alike to all Christians): "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content," (Phil. 4: 11.) "Be ye . . . content with such things as ye have." (Heb. 13:-5.) "Godliness with contentment is great gain." (1 Tim. 6: 6.) "We also rejoice in our tribulations." (Rom. 5; 3.) "I overflow with joy in all our affliction." (2 Cor. 7; 4.) Sister mine, when you have reached the age of sixty, if your life has been heavenward, it will continue heavenward; H It has been hellward, it will continue hellward, and, if you do not stop and seriously consider, your eternal ruin is sure.

While many women, like many men, read their Bibles, few of them read it in order to find out their individual duties. Are you a wife? Then read the word of God to learn the duties of a Christian wife. Are you a mother? Then study the word of God to learn and practice the duties of a Christian mother. Did you ever seriously consider 1 Tim. 2: 9-12; Tit. 2: 4, 5; 1 Pet. 3: 1-6? If not, why not? See Gen. 18: 12. One of the great needs of today for the family, the church, and the world is Christian wives and mothers of the former-day kind and a host of aged women who are "teachers of good things." (See Tit. 2: 3-5; Prov. 31: 10-31.) The church of to-day needs scores and scores of teaching women (deaconesses) of the kind described in Tit. 2: 4, 5, who have the courage to teach "the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be sober-minded, chaste, workers at home, kind, being in subjection to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed." For, indeed, many have turned aside after Satan and are following him, to the sad neglect of their own souls.

I am indeed glad to see such noble and talented women as our good sister, Eva B. Dunsmoor, of Zanesville, coming to the front as writers along these important lines. I believe I have been instrumental to some extent in inducing Sister Dunsmoor to make her appearance in the public press as one of our foremost and best writers. Go on, Sister Dunsmoor, with your good and well-begun work. Cry aloud and spare not, for your work is needed; and John needs your scriptural warnings as well as Jane. Continue to lift your voice like the crack of doom, and the Lord will bless your labors. Good and scriptural husbands and fathers are needed, good and scriptural wives and mothers are needed, in order that we may raise up families that love and fear Jehovah-families of whom it may be said, "There are giants in these days," as well as "in those days." The day for men who bow and smile and tip their hats to every woman they meet, except their own, and every woman who thinks every man she sees is better than her own husband, should by all moral and Christian pressure be forced into the days of the past. O God, hasten the day!

Sister Fannie Hurst Deeries Woman Suffrage.

When God created the earth and "saw that it was good," he reserved the choicest spot, where no thorn or thistle had ever sprung up; where sin was a thing unknown; where all nature was in perfect accord and where peace reigned supreme. There, amid those heavenly surroundings, he placed man, made after his own image, and into whose nostrils he breathed his own breath. "And Jehovah God said, It is not good that the man should be alone: I will make him a help meet for him. . . . And Jehovah God caused a deep sleep to fall upon the man, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the fiesh instead thereof: and the rib, which Jehovah God had taken from the man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man. And the man said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man." (Gen. 2: 18-23.) And as one they dwelt together in happiness that was, indeed, perfect, until the day that the serpent found his way into their beautiful lives-yea, even into the garden of Eden-and, with his wonderful power of persuasion and with subtlety more than that of any beast of the field, he deceived the woman, and she fell. Then, with no subtlety or guile at her command, she turned to her husband and invited him to partake, with her, of the forbidden fruit, and he likewise fell. When God saw the thing that they had done, he was sorely displeased. He saw that not only had woman sinned, but, with the aid of the great influence that it was hers to wield over man, she had caused him to sin, and, because she had done this, "unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy pain and thy conception; in pain thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast harkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground: for out of it wast thou taken: for dust theu art, and unto dust shalt thou return." (Gen. 3: 16-19.)

No man can successfully deny that this decree stands to-day unaltered and that it applies as forcibly to the present generation as it did to those two in the morning of time, and yet it is becoming more and more popular to ignore a part of it-namely, "Thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." To know that these words of Jehovah have stood through all the past ages and will continue to stand until the end of time, we have but to study God's word where we find such examples as the faithful Abram, who, with his beloved wife, Sarai, journeyed from Ur of the Chaldees to Canaan, and, with his name changed to "Abraham" and that of his wife to "Sarah," they journeyed on down to old age in the sweetest companionship; yet Sarah recognized his authority over her and called him "lord." It is true that Satan entered again into the heart of man and told him, since it was his God-given right to rule over woman, that it would be wise for him to rule her with a rod of iron, and again man fell, as a result of which woman was plunged into the darkest depths of despair, from whence God heard her cry and sent light into the world in the form of Jesus of Nazareth, and day began to dawn for woman. Since that time, wherever Christ has been preached, she has begun to rise to her rightful sphere. But, that she might not take advantage of her freedom and to show that his decree that man should rule over woman must forever remain unchanged, God says: "Let the women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but let them be in subjection, as also saith the law. And if they would learn anything, let them ask their own husbands at home: for it is shameful for a woman to speak In church." (1 Cor. 14: 34, 35.) "Wives, be in subjection unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, as Christ also is the head of the church, being himself the savier of the body. But as the church is subject to Christ, so let the wives also be to their husbands in everything." (Eph. 5: 22-24.) "Wives, be in subjection to your husbands, as is fitting in the Lord." (Col. 3: 18.) "Let a woman learn in quietness with all subjection. But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have dominion over a man, but to be in quietness. For Adam was first formed, then Eve; and Adam was not beguiled, but the woman being beguiled hath fallen into transgression." (1 Tim. 2: 11-14.) "That they may train the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be sober-minded, chaste, workers at home, kind, being in subjection to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed." (Tit, 2: 4, 5.) These are only a few of the passages God has given us along this line, none of which we can evade by saying that they applied only to the women living at the time these things were written, because of the customs that then existed. If this were true, God would have given us permission to change his word to suit the changes in the times and customs; but since, instead of that, he has said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away," we know that these commands were spoken as directly to us as they were to the women living centuries ago. But, in the face of all these warnings and commands of our loving Heavenly Father, that same crafty serpent has stolen into our nearest approach to Eden, the home, and is destroying the sacredness of the hearthstone and rendering happy homes fewer and fewer by telling woman that she is persecuted and downtrodden because she is not permitted to have equal rights with man, and, instead of resisting the devil and forcing him to flee from her, she has stopped to listen to his arguments and is being deceived, and, just as she did on that unhappy day just prior to her expulsion from Eden, she is using her influence over man, and again he is blindly yielding, and has already made woman suffrage a law, even though it is directly opposed to God's law.

Regardless of the fact that at first woman meekly asked only for the power to vote, we see her, where this has been granted, already making her way into public affairs and clamoring for office, imagining that, if she can get the government in her hands, or even partially so, a new and better era will be inevitable because of the marvelously improved conditions she so confidently expects to bring about, when, in truth, she is only glancing at the surface; and if she would but look beneath, she could see the great wisdom of God in placing the mother in the home to guide and shape the lives and characters of her little ones, instead of leaving them on the streets or in the hands of disinterested servants until they develop into a manhood and womanhood that plainly reflects the neglect they have suffered from infancy; for, whether they are fitted for the place or not, they will be forced to-morrow to shoulder the burdens and responsibilities that rest upon the parents of to-day, and, after that, their souls must spend eternity somewhere.

Mothers, wives, sisters, why can we not be content with the place God has given us? For it is far above rulership, If the sister, instead of being of the masculine variety, from whom her brother would flee to find refuge in some place of worldly amusement, would be gentle, loving, and kind, and would make home a place to be desired instead of dreaded, thus helping that brother to a true and noble manhood; and if the mother, instead of having her mind so engressed in political as well as other public affairs. would take the place that God has ordained that she should take, and would be a mother indeed, loving, tender, and sympathetic, to whom the children could go with the assurance that she had time to tie up the bruised finger or mend the broken doll, and if she would stand back of her husband inspiring him and encouraging him to press on In every laudable undertaking, a reformation would sweep over the whole world; while, on the other hand, we can never hope for this to be accomplished through woman suffrage. To say this is only to admit that, after all, God's way is the only way.

Woman suffrage may seem, for a time, to be a success, but it is doomed to failure; for, when the daughter forgets her mission and the mother forsakes the home, leaving her sons and daughters in their tenderest years, when their usefulness in life is being determined and their characters are in the making, without her constant care and guidance, each generation will become more and more corrupt until finally we will be brought face to face with the fact that we have been fighting against God and have failed, and will be made to know that, "till heaven and earth pass away, one jet or one tittle shall in no wise pass away from the law, till things be accomplished." (Matt. 5: 18.)

Those Who Stood by Paul.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

The law of cooperation seems to be deeply imbedded in the habits, instincts, and character of mankind; in fact, it is seen in the lower animals. Among the animals which flock together there may be seen the principle of cooperation. Gregarious animals associate in flocks, herds, schools, bevies, droves, packs, broods, and families. In these groups may be seen the effects of cooperation in the defense of each other and the benefits of food and protection. Human association and progress of civilization are based upon the law of cooperation. This law has greater influence over the actions of men and women than does the principle of competition. It is seen in the formation of communities, counties, States, and nations. The history of civilization might be written with the single sentence, "The law of cooperation is the basis of progress."

Competition has its part in the stimulation and inspiration of human endeavor and must be reckoned with in the affairs of life. But cooperation calls forth the very best that is in one. It stimulates every power of one's being and calls for a normal functioning of all these powers for the greatest possible good. The law of cooperation may be called "the law of love," and the kingdom of God on earth is the kingdom of organized cooperation of love. Cooperation calls for sacrifice and service. These words express the method of love and manifest the two elementary principles of cooperation. These two words circumscribe the Christian's activities in this kingdom of cooperation. These words draw meanings up from the memories of martyrs, the devotion of the heroes of faith, and the daily duties of the humble saints in the home life.

Those who stood by Paul in his life of sacrifice and service share with him in the glory and honor that belong to the church of God. The many faithful men and women who encourage and helped and coöperated with him in the wonderful life that he lived share with him in the rewards of God's herees and heroines. We have been so accustomed to seeing the greatness of the apostle Paul and have overlooked the lives of those who have stood by him; his greatness has overshadowed the services of others until we have forgotten the part that they had in making the apostle great. In our failure to look closer and see the sympathy, service, and sacrifice in their coöperation, we have missed many of the beautiful and helpful lessons taught in the word of God.

The sixteenth chapter of Romans has been called the "Honor Roll of Saint Paul." In this roll thirty-five persons are named. The Roman letter was probably written from Corinth, and there were nine persons with Paul when he wrote it—eight men and one woman (Phebe). There were twenty-four persons at Rome who were greeted—seventeen men and seven women. There were also some unnamed brethren and two unnamed women—the "mother" of Rufus and the "sister" of Nereus. At this time Paul had a great company who was standing by him in the work of the Lord. It is interesting to note with what tenderness and sympathy he speaks of those who were helping him in this great work.

In the honor roll of Paul's friends we discover, starred with Immortality, the nameless mother of Rufus and "mine." We are not told what sacrifice she made or what service she rendered unto Paul, and we do not need to have her deeds enumerated; the fact that he calls her his mother expresses more than a volume of catalogued duties performed. There are times when a faithful preacher of the gospel needs the sympathy, tenderness, and love of a mother in Israel. Nothing can soothe his aching heart and encourage his fainting soul as a saintly mother. Such a one as this mother helped Paul to endure the persecution, make the sacrifice, and render the service for the church. She is entitled to a part of the rich reward that belongs to the suffering apostle. This little phrase gives a beautiful picture of this saint who could mother others besides her children and who could give the apostle something of the tenderness that she bestowed on her own son, Rufus. The women in Christ Jesus to-day may see in the example of this nameless woman opportunity for rich service in the kingdom of God. This should help all to see a broader field of service for the Master in the thoughtful, prayerful, and sympathetic service that may be rendered unto those who are preaching the gospel publicly.

Among those who stood by Paul and deserve honorable mention is "Phebe our sister;" "for she herself also hath been a helper of many, and of mine own self." Her noble and unselfish devotion is entitled to the highest praise. She did not render service through any spirit of favoritism, but was "a helper of many" as well as of Paul. Many who render service to-day are prompted by favoritism. Some will entertain the preacher for the meeting, provided a certain preacher is procured; but If another one is to be had, no assistance will be given. Such is not in harmony with the spirit that prompted Phebe to stand by Paul. Those who stood by Paul may be expected to stand by any servant of God, as the great apostle would not encourage partiality and favoritism. I commend most earnestly the example of Phebe. It has been assumed that she received Paul into her home when he visited or passed through Cenchrea and that she "mothered" him as did the mother of Rufus. The current of womanly sympathy flowed out deep and strong and clear in her life and sustained the apostle Paul in his work there and elsewhere.

As we study the life of Paul in the light of those who stood by him, we are impressed with the possibility of work for the women in the church. Their work is often lost sight of, in the study of the public work done by the apostles; but when we begin to study the inner life of the apostle and the effective work of the church, the work of the women comes into view and is prominent in the ministration of the home life. The work of women takes a wider range and the inviting field of labor is broadened as we study the quiet work of the women; we begin to see more clearly the place which women are destined to occupy in relation to the social life of the church and the public administrations of the servants of God. Apphia, Euodia, and Syntyche are mentioned by name among the women who are directly or indirectly associated with Paul in promoting the cause of the gospel at Corinth, Colosse, and Philippi; and the honorable mention which Paul makes of these women and the earnest commendation which he gives of their work helps us to understand the sphere of woman's work in the church. For good or ill. for weal or woe, woman influences man, and to a great extent controls his destiny for time and eternity. The apostle Paul did not escape the influence for good that these women had upon him, and from the depth of his heart, guided by the Spirit of God, he gives unstinted praise and commendation to their work in standing by him in preaching the gospel.

Mention should be made of Priscilla and Aquila. Paul calls them "my fellow workers in Christ Jesus;" and he mentions the great sacrifice that they made on his behalf. He says that they laid down their own necks for his life. They are colaborers in Christ with Paul and are mentioned five times in the New Testament. They are not apostles nor prophets, neither are they called "teachers;" they are just helpers, fellow-workers; they are living in harmony with the great law of cooperation in the kingdom of God. Their occupation was tentmaking, and their hands were busy only that the gospel might be spread. When Paul came to Corinth, he found them there and abode with them. They gave him a true welcome into their home and hearts, which encouraged Paul and had much to do with his success in pianting the church at Corinth. They stood by Paul and shared their home and hospitality and love with him. When Paul came to Corinth, he was in need of that sympathy which feels for another's welfare and interest, and they gave him that kindness which is happy in serving and which says little and does much. With Priscilla and Aquila he found an open house and heart and mind, which are the true elements of hospitality. Every servant of God who goes away from home in preaching the gospel knows what a blessing such a home is. The success of many meetings depends upon such a home for the preacher. Our homes can be made places of helpfulness and encouragement to those who are preaching the gospel.

Paul did not always have friends to stand by him in his work. Sometimes he had to stand alone. In the last letter that he is supposed to have written he presents a very pathetic scene. "Give diligence to come shortly unto me: for Demas forsook me, having loved this present world, and went to Thessalonica; Crescens to Galatia, Titus to Dalmatia. Only Luke is with me. . . . first defense no one took my part, but all forsook me: may it not be laid to their account. But the Lord stood by me, and strengthened me." (2 Tim. 4: 9-17.) This presents a very pathetic scene in the life of the aged apostle. He is in prison, aged and infirm and forsaken by all human help; but the Lord stood by him and strengthened him. We are not told why all of them forsook him. Demas loved this present world, preferring its ease and comfort to sharing the sufferings with the apostle. Yet it is encouraging to know that though others may forsake us, still the Lord will stand by us, and this should encourage us to be faithful unto him.

Many others could be mentioned who stood by Paul in his sufferings, service, and sacrifice for the cause of Christ, but space will not permit commenting upon them. Not only did Paul have brethren and sisters in Christ to cooperate with him and stand by him, but also there were churches that stood by him. The church at Philippi had fellowship with him and "sent once and again unto my [his] need." Loyalty to Christ and his cause implies loyalty to his faithful servants; to stand by his servants is to stand by him. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me;" and, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me."

The Ministry of Evangelism.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The word "ministry" is a very comprehensive term, meaning simply to serve; and when applied to the religion of Christ, it embraces every phase of that service. Hence, every member of the body of Christ has a ministry to perform, because every member must serve in some capacity. The eye cannot say, "I have no need of the ear," nor the hand, "I have no need of the foot."

But it is more especially of the ministry termed "evangelism" of which I desire to speak—that class of men who go from place to place publicly proclaiming the gospel of God's grace for the salvation of men. Such men are termed "evangelists," and are bound by the following sacred and solemn charge: "I charge thee in the sight of God, and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the living and the dead, and by his appearing and his kingdom: preach the word; be urgent in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and teaching." (2 Tim. 4: 1, 2.) Inasmuch as the articles comprising these special numbers should be short and pointed, I shall not attempt to deal with the subject of evangelism in all of its phases, but simply note and emphasize a few of its outstanding features.

- 1. The charge is to "preach the word," meaning, of course, the word of God. In this there is great and pressing need of a more efficient ministry, a ministry that will adhere strictly to the divine injunction and steer clear of all human speculations and opinions about the word of God. Men are to be saved through a living faith, but no one can have such a faith without divine testimony upon which to predicate it. Faith comes by hearing the word of God, and not the opinions and speculations of men. Never mind about the consequences or results; preach the word faithfully, fearlessly, forcefully, lovingly, and kindly, and God will take care of the consequences. The biggest preacher is the one who preaches the word of God unmixed with the opinions and traditions of men. He may not be so with the world and ungodly church members, but with God he is a hero. He must reprove sinners and rebuke sin in and out of the church without the fear or favor of men, and shun not to declare the whole counsel of God on all lines pertaining to his ministry, that he may be free from the blood of all men. (Acts 20: 26, 27.)
- 2. Let it not be forgotten that the great commission under which he labors (Matt. 28: 19, 20) contains two partsthat which initiates people into the church and that of teaching them to observe all things necessary to the development of Christian character. Some evangelists go to extremes with either one part or the other of the commission, dwelling altogether upon one part to the neglect of the other. Some dwell altogether on first principles, while others attempt to hold meetings without stressing first principles. This is an injury to both the evangelist and the cause of Christ. But churches are somewhat to blame for this, because they are prone to measure the success of a meeting by the number of additions and do not relish any too much teaching on the practical part of religion. Hence, some evangelists work hard for additions, preaching almost altogether to the world. There is no better time for impressing and riveting on the minds of church members the duties of the Christian life than during a protracted meeting. Their minds are in a more receptive and pliable state than at any other time; hence, impressions are more easily and lastingingly made. Certain truths emphasized during a meeting will bear greater fruit in the lives of church members because they give more earnest heed to the things spoken than ordinarily.
- 3. The evangelist must remember that many even in the church will not endure sound doctrine. Whatever interferes with their unholy pleasures or with their illegitimate business interests will not be relished nor even tolerated, if it can be prevented. To all such worldly-minded and ungodly men and women the faithful evangelist will turn a deaf ear and cry aloud and spare not. (Isa, 58: I.) Let the evangelist stand by his guns, and those that are approved of God will be made manifest.
- 4. Above all, and first of all, the evangelist should look to himself and keep his heart and life clean and pure. Paul urged Timothy to keep himself pure, knowing full well that, no matter how faithful he might be in preaching the word to others, if he did not keep himself pure, it would destroy the effects of his ministry. Many able evangelists have not only destroyed their own usefulness as preachers, but have wrecked churches, by their unholy and ungodly lives. They have indulged in the lowest forms of sin, thus bringing shame and disgrace upon themselves and the cause they represented. Keep the banner of Christ high, that its folds may be kissed by the purest breezes and its name be kept untarnished by those who hear it.

A Soliloguy.

BY PATTIE DRAKE BURTON.

It is easy to give money, if you have the pelf. But righteousness means giving yourself. Is the church house full on prayer-meeting night, And the followers of Christ all out in his might, Praying together that we all may be one, Following the example of our Father's own Son, Studying his word and practicing it, too, Loving each other as we are told to do?

Are we wearing the breastplate of righteousness, Or losing interest by do-nothingness? Are we begotten of the Spirit—been "born again?" That alone keeps our religion from being vain! Do we pass each other, when we meet on the street, With scarcely a nod, or do we always speak Of the wonderful thing that God has done In making us joint heirs with his Son?

Do we crowd the church house on Bible-class day, Each eager to study and to learn the way That God has revealed and inspired men have given, Which will take us and our loved ones to heaven? Are we running the race so as to win the prize Of life eternal beyond the blue skies? Paul says: "So run that ye may obtain." To run uncertainly, we've nothing to gain,

A warning is given us, in the story of Saul, About changing God's way. Now listen to Paul. Take up your Bible, read Rom. 3: 7, 8. Will we heed this warning or wait till too late? Do our preachers all work, as Paul did of old, For the glory of God—not for glittering gold? Do we worship "as it is written"—do we? Waiting for an answer, we end this soliloquy.

An Efficient Eldership.

BY F. C. SOWELL,

Much needless controversy has been had over the eldership, and this could be avoided with a more careful study of the word of God.

There are three important items relative to an efficient eldership that I wish to bring out in this article.

FIRST-A DESIRE FOR THE OFFICE OF A BISHOP.

Whatever man does in the service of the Lord should be done with the proper motive and with a pure, deep feeling from the heart. "Whatever ye do, work heartily, as unto the Lord, and not unto men; knowing that from the Lord ye shall receive the recompense of the inheritance; ye serve the Lord Christ." (Col. 3: 23, 24.)

He who has grown and developed in the grace and knowledge of God, being led by the Spirit of the Lord, would naturally let his light shine, which opens the way for others to glorify God. If one desires to do the work for which he has a talent, it affords him pleasure in performing that duty. From this view of the matter, no one should act in the capacity of an elder who feels that it would be too irksome or the cross would be too heavy to bear; but, on the other hand, only such as esteem it a gladsome duty to be performed with a willingness of soul to please the Lord.

SECOND—THE QUALIFICATIONS OF AN ELDER.

A failure in this has been the sad cause of many falling by the wayside, starving to death for the want of meat and drink. All Christians may not have the qualifications of an elder. An elder "must be without reproach, the husband of one wife, temperate, sober-minded, orderly, given to hospitality, apt to teach; no brawler, no striker; but gentle, not contentious, no lover of money; one that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity; (but if a man knoweth not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?) not a novice, lest being puffed up he fall into the condemnation of the devil." (1 Tim. 3: 2-6.) There are three items in this a Christian may not have. He may not have a wife and he may not have any children, but he may be either a young man or an old man.

I will not say one elder may have some of the qualifications, another may have a part, and the third a part, and all together have them all. The apostle Paul does not give it after that manner. He makes it definite by saying that "the bishop therefore must be" as stated in the above quotation. Without any disposition of modifying anything he has said, it will make a better type of elder to let it stand.

THIRD-THE WORK AND TEACHING OF AN ELDER.

The elder is not to usurp authority or rule as with a rod. I fear many have been driven from the house of God by a spirit to whip and drive instead of love and to lead. Paul, speaking to the elders at Ephesus, said: "Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, in which the Holy Spirit hath made you bishops, to feed the church of the Lord which he purchased with his own blood." (Acts 20: 28.) The Holy Spirit does not make elders to abuse and whip the church of God. It cost too much for that. The Lord's people desire food, because it makes them feel good when they take it. The bread of life, when fed to them, will make them grow into manhood and womanhood in the Lord.

Wherever you find a congregation with bishops feeding the church and looking after its welfare generally, the result will be growth and prosperity. The bishop should study as earnestly and faithfully to know how to feed the flock as the evangelist should study to know how to preach the glorious gospel to men dead in trespasses and sin "The elders therefore among you I exhort, who am a fellow elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, who am also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: Tend the flock of God which is among you, exercising the oversight, not of constraint, but willingly, according to the will of God; nor yet for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as lording it over the charge allotted to you, but making yourselves ensamples to the flock." The elder should not only be a good teacher, but he should practice what he teaches and see after the flock with much feeling and tender love, realizing the dear and near relationship existing among the Lord's people. Men claiming to be elders have neglected very much the oversight of the flock, which has resulted in many sad spiritual deaths in the family of the Lord.

To sum up the whole matter: The elder is to desire the good work, qualify himself, then feed the flock, watch over it and tend it willingly and heartily, and in so doing he will make an efficient elder.

Paying the Preacher.

BY I. B. BRADLEY.

The question of church finances is at the present time a very interesting and absorbing theme. It is a very vital one, and one on which, in a very great measure, depends the success or failure of the enterprises of the church of Christ. As related to the church and her work, the subject is a very important one. While the church is not an institution that is organized and fostered as a financial proposition, and preachers are not financial agents nor "salary grabbers," yet the church cannot carry on the work of Christ, nor can the preacher do the work of an evangelist and give his entire time to the church, without means to sustain him and the demands made on him.

The money question, as related to the church, is one not very popular with the greater portion of the church. Brethren and sisters who delight in oral or written discourses on "the first principles" and things related to the sinner's duty will grow disinterested and tired when they hear or read a sermon on "Stewardship," "Supporting the Gospel," "The Needs of the Mission Field," "Paying the Preacher," etc. It is very apparent that they do not appreciate the efforts of one who would teach "all the counsel of God" on this phase of their duty; yet it must be done. It is not pleasant for the parent to do all that he has to do in order to the proper training and teaching of his children; yet this unpleasant responsibility must be assumed. It is not always pleasant to the physician to use heroic remedies in the treatment of his patients; but he does it as a matter of duty, necessity, for the good of his subject.

Paying the preacher is a very important matter, especially to the preacher's family, and in a large measure helps to determine the efficiency of the church. If the preacher is well paid, supported materially, he can do better and more efficient service than if his support is meager and his family is denied the necessities and comforts of life. All will agree, I think, that a preacher and his family deserve as good as the average family in the church, provided, of course, they are worthy, consistent Christians; if not, they deserve nothing. No preacher who cannot dress as well as the average member of the church can go before the public without embarrassment, and the same may be said of his family.

Statistics show that preachers and school-teachers receive the poorest support of any class of men and women in our country. The average support of preachers is less than eight hundred dollars, while the wages of the common day laborer is something near the same amount. The teachers of our public schools receive even less. The janitor of the school is paid an amount equal to the most efficient grade teacher.

God's word teaches that "the laborer is worthy of his hire" (Luke 10: 7; 1 Tim. 5: 18); that "they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel" (1 Cor. 9: 14); and that no man "goeth a warfare any time at his own charges" (1 Cor. 9: 7); also, that they which ministered in the temple lived "of the things of the temple" (1 Cor. 9: 13). These scriptures teach, without doubt, the preacher's right to a support, and his right to look for it when he has done his work. Moreover, they also teach that he has a right to expect a full measure, and that equal to the best. "The things of the temple" were the very choicest that the people had, for God would not accept less.

Again, the apostle Paul taught the lesson of compensation for service in the second letter to the Corinthian church. He says: "Did I commit a sin in abasing myself that ye might be exalted, because I preached to you the gospel of God for naught? I robbed other churches, taking wages of them that I might minister unto you." (2 Cor. 11: 8.) The same idea is set forth in Luke 10: 7, "The laborer is worthy of his hire," teaching very clearly that the preacher has a right to due and adequate compensation for his labors.

But what shall the preacher do? Shall he ask of the church or churches for which he labors a definite amount or have an understanding about his support (wages?) when doing the work? Or shall he do the work and take what the church allots him? Who is to say what his support shall be? Has he a right to know whether he can afford to do the work? Does he have a right to "sit down and count the cost" and decide whether he can do the work on the basis known, or must be trust to the possible (?) generosity and liberality of the church to meet his needs? If a preacher demands a definite amount for his time, many of the brethren look upon him as a "timeserver," as "commercializing the gospel," as "preaching for the many there is in it." Yet those same folks will ask of that same preacher one-fourth, one-half, or all of his time. They want, and they demand of him, a promise of so much of his time as they desire; but it is a sin if he demands or expresses a desire for a definite understanding as to what he shall get. They want him to agree to give to them his time, but they cannot give to him their support in a definite or stipulated amount. Brethren, how much more right have you to ask this of a preacher than for him to ask of you the support he must have? Without an understanding, the church might become aggrieved over some matters and say, "Well, we did not agree to support him to any certain amount; we will slack up on his support and let him quit," thus taking from the poor fellow that which is his and thereby causing him and his family to suffer, though he has done all he agreed to do, to the very best of his ability.

Consequently, I lay down this as a legitimate conclusion: If the church has a right to ask of the preacher the promise of a definite amount of time or labor, he also has a right to ask of them a statement or promise of such support as he may deem right. If not, why not? Wages! Hire! What do they mean? Compensation or reward for something done. The words both imply-yea, demandan understanding, an agreement, before the thing is done. whatever may be the nature of what is done. Then the preacher has a right to expect pay, and to know definitely, when he labors for a congregation, what the pay shall be. But if he does this, he is "making merchandise of the gospel," "preaching for money." There is not a preacher in the church of Christ, scarcely one, but who, by putting the same talent and energy into any secular work, could make far more money, get greater financial returns for his labor.

How raise the money? By God's way of financing the church and all her work. What saith the Scriptures? "Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper." (1 Cor. 16: 2.) "They gave of their own accord." (2 Cor. 8: 3.) "See that ye abound in this grace also." (2 Cor. 8: 7.) "If the readiness is there, it is acceptable according as a man hath, not according as he hath not." (2 Cor. 8: 12.) "Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." (2 Cor. 9: 7.) "He that giveth, let him do it with liberality." (Rom. 12: 8.) If this rule be followed, the church will always be able to support evangelists and every work of the church.

"Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things," (Gal. 6: 6.)

"Some to Honor, and Some to Dishonor." BY E. M. BORDEN.

"But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some to honor, and some to dishonor." (2 Tim. 2: 20.) In every congregation there are members who are only members in name. It seems that any person would rather be a vessel unto honor than a vessel unto dishonor. There are some who go to the Lord's-day worship when there is nowhere else to go. There are occasions where some members would be glad not to be members. Some do not go to church because they feel that the members are not in their class of society. Some prefer to associate with outsiders rather than with members of the church. It is not commendable in any one to follow the current of the stream, for any one can do that, but it takes a strong Christian to go against the tide. Some give all their time and talent to secret orders and are hardly known as members of the church. Some would ask their friends and associates to attend the church, but they are afraid the elder who officiates at the table will make a grammatical error or that the preacher will not be dressed just to his or her taste. Too many people are governed by public sentiment. If public sentiment was in favor of the church work and worship, we would have to enlarge our places of worship. A brother once said: "Yes, I have been a member of the church off and on for about fifteen years-off the most of the time." We find that class of members in many places.

The Value of Church Discipline.

BY S. H. HALL.

Church discipline, in its broadest sense, includes "all treatment suited to a disciple or learner;" the proper education and training of the members of the local congregation; and, too, the correction of members who walk disorderly, and the ultimate punishment of such if the efforts of the church fail to turn them from the error of their way.

Discipline, in its true sense, certainly can be found in the following words of Paul to the elders of the church at Ephesus: "Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, in which the Holy Spirit hath made you bishops [overseers], to feed the church of the Lord which he hath purchased with his own blood." (Acts 20: 28.) May the elders awaken here to the fact that, if God's will they do, they must see that the members over whom they have been placed are properly trained, educated, and developed. In too many of the churches the elders themselves are miserably inefficient; they seem to know nothing and care nothing about training and educating the members of the congregation.

I know of no work more important than that of the elders in the local church. How they should study and pray—and sometimes fast—to the end that they be, indeed, the feeders, overseers, and trainers in the church that God wills that they be! The way some have of simply playing at being elders is one of the distressing defects in many of the local congregations. The elders should be trained themselves, educated in the pure word of God; and they should see to it that every member of the church is also thus educated and that all the talent of the church is used and developed into efficiency. This includes all the men and women, boys and girls, in the church. The local church should be like a beehive—everybody at work—and it is the elders' duty to see that such is the case.

But it would be well to emphasize that part of discipline that has to do with correction and punishment, or chastisement, of members who walk disorderly. If our Lord has been plain and positive in his teaching to us about faith, repentance, and baptism, he has been more so in his teaching concerning the importance of correcting—and, if need be, chastising—the disorderly.

First, it must be done in the spirit of meekness and gentleness, and the controlling motive must be the salvation of the erring brother. (See Gal. 6; 1; James 5: 19, 20.) Any elder or evangelist—or any member of the church, as to that matter—who sees ungodliness and wrongdoing participated in by a brother or sister in Christ, and takes not steps to save the erring, puts himself in a most perilous position. "When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thy hand." (Read Ezek. 3: 18-21; 33: 1-10; Acts 20: 26, 27; 1 Tim. 4: 16.)

Second, in studying this phase of church discipline, the question of personal differences coming up between brethren must be considered. In Matt. 18: 15-17, we have perfeet directions about how to proceed. And in such cases there should never be tolerated the contention that "it is the other brother's duty to come to me," the "other brother" making the same contention, and the matter allowed to drag on, to the condemnation of both parties and to the disgrace and hindrance of the church. Brother, if you think you have been wronged or mistreated by some other brother, and it is such that the fullest and freest fellowship cannot exist, you must go to him, according to the directions in the scriptures cited above; but if you have no complaint against the brother, and learn that he has against you, whether he comes to you or not, as he is commanded to do, you must go to him. (See Matt. 5: 23, 24.) Personal differences, as a rule, will always be settled, if brethren will go about it as directed, trembling at Jehovah's word, and with a deep-seated desire to help the other fellow. But if this they do, and it fails, the brother who has tried to settle the matter is duty bound to refer it to the church for final consideration; and if the church fails, the disorderly must be treated as a "heathen and publican" until he repents. Here is where the chastisement, or punishment, comes in. But the elders of the local congregation must remember that it is their duty to see that brethren settle their differences. If neither will take the seriptural steps toward settling it, and they both persist in going on with the matter unsettled, they both should be withdrawn from until the matter is settled.

Third, when there are other cases of discipline in which the church is directly concerned in the very beginning of the adjustment. Please read, with care, the following scriptures: Rom. 16: 17; Tit. 3: 10, 11; 1 Cor. 5; 2 Thess. 3: 6-15. The first two scriptures cited have reference to "party makers," members who are "factious" and pull off parties in order to teach their own theories and opinions instead of the pure word of God. Such must be admonished; and if they persist in their hurtful course, fellowship must be withdrawn and they must be marked as those hurtful to the cause our Lord died to establish. If the Bible teaches not these things, it teaches nothing. But instead of elders doing their duty toward such, in many places, any preacher that comes along, let him be orderly or disorderly, factious or otherwise, withdrawn from by his home church or in good standing, they seem not to care, and he can mount the rostrum and preach as well as the orderly preacher, be entertained in their homes and invited back. And some of our "evangelists, as they call themselves, are just as bad; they will work with any preacher, regardless of these things, and give him all the encouragement they can. Well would they do to read Ezek, 3: 20, 21, and take warning. Also, 3 John 9-11 should be read.

Then, along with the "factious man," or "party maker," we have specified fernication, covetousness, idolatry, reviling, drunkenness, extortion, and laziness as sins sufficiently hurtful to withdraw fellowship from those who are guilty of such unless they repent. It must never be hastily done. "Lay hands hastily on no man." (1 Tim. Such sins must be rebuked before the whole 5: 22.) church, that others may fear, and prejudice and partiality must never be allowed to have one thing to do with II. (See 1 Tim. 5: 20, 21.) And it must be remembered that we are showing partiality if we withdraw fellowship from the drunkard or fornicator and let the extortioner and covetous man go. O, may God give us, indeed, a "better ministry" in these things. Discipline has been so neglected in some churches and, when exercised, so disregarded by others that disorderly members have but little, if anything, to fear from others when they are withdrawn from by their home churches. Better, indeed, would it be for you that a millstone be tied about your neck and you be cast into the sea than for you to harbor the withdrawnfrom member, and thus deepen his stubbornness and thwart the purpose of the withdrawal.

In conclusion, it would be well to say a word about the punishment. Fellowship was withdrawn from a brother in a certain congregation some years ago. He was a merchant. The members were instructed to settle all accounts with him and cease all business and social intercourse with him until he repented. This hurt to the core, and he said something about inflicting a terrible beating upon the persons of those who took the leading part in the withdrawal when he met them. After suffering for a few months, thinking that he "had it" on the elders, he called for an interview with them; and when they met him, the one question he wished to raise was as to their scriptural right, to use his own language, to "punish me as you are." He was then asked the question if it felt like punishment to him. He said it not only felt that way, but that it was punishment. "Then," replied the elders, "we have all the more reason for believing that we are handling your case as nearly right as men well could, for the Bible says it is punishment." The Bible was then opened at 2 Cor. 2: 6, and he was asked to read the verse, which says: "Sufficient to such a one is this punishment which was inflicted by the many." Paul, doubtless, was there talking about the withdrawal that he had instructed this church to exercise in the first letter and the fifth chapter. The brother, thus met, was then too stubborn to surrender; but, after suffering a few months longer, he called for a meeting, confessed his sins, and has been one of our most orderly members ever since, and now has charge of one of our missions.

Every well-organized home has in it punishment, or chastisement, for children who are stubbornly rebellious. The only chastisement that I know of in the church of Christ that the church, as such, can exercise is to withdraw fellowship from the member; and when this is done, all social and business intercourse is severed until he repents. If you will read 1 Cor. 5: 9-13, you will see we are allowed privileges with people of the world who are guilty of the same sins that we are not allowed to have with a brother from whom fellowship has to be withdrawn. It is God's way of punishing the disorderly to the end that he may repent and be saved. It should be attended to by the church exactly in the same spirit, with the same desire, in which we preach "Christ, and him crucified," to aliens. The salvation of the soul of the erring one must be the controlling desire. Malice and hate have absolutely no place in the proceeding and would be just as incongruous to those who exercise the discipline as such would be in preaching to aliens that they might be saved. May the church awake to this as-plain-as-day duty and step up on a higher plane in her work. I had as soon leave baptism out of the plan of salvation to the alien as to leave this teaching out of the life of the local church. One is taking from God's word and destroying souls as much as the other. In spite of this, we have preachers who have never withdrawn fellowship from a member in their lives, and who say nothing to the churches to encourage them to do so, but say much to hinder the churches in such practice. "A better ministry," indeed, we need; for this let us work and prav.

Keeping the Church Busy.

BY J. PETTEY EZELL.

My experience first as a lay member of the church, then as a minister, leads me to conclude that the crying need of the church to-day, as it long since has been, is a clearer vision of its duties, capabilities, and responsibilities, so as to enable it to rise up through faith and love and in the language of the great Exemplar say to the world: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" (Luke 2: 49.) "We must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." (John 9: 4.)

In too many localities, far too many, churches, when they have struggled, suffered, and sacrificed sufficiently to plant themselves in given communities, settle down in a state of satisfaction and inactivity to idle their time away and to bury their talents, except to keep up the Lord's-day meetings, and sometimes to have preaching one Sunday in each month and a meeting in July or August in the light of the moon, aside from which program they seem to think there is little to be done, and consequently often grow careless and indifferent toward this.

Do some, in their zeal and faith, dare stir up the church to abound in other good works in preaching the gospel, communicating to necessities of the saints, etc., then they are termed "enthusiasts" and their proposed plans a waste of energy and means, usually more directly the means; and sometimes those who are termed "elders" will withhold their hands, hearts, and means and lift their voices to discourage a work of faith and love not included in the usual program of the church.

Let every member of the church stop and meditate with prayer, and we shall all at once conclude that, had the apostles and early Christians so reasoned and acted, the church would never have extended beyond the pale of Jerusalem's walls and we ourselves, even we, should never have been translated from the kingdom of darkness "into the kingdom of his dear Son: in whom we have redemytion through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins." (Col. 1: 13, 14.)

The "truth" that made us free, brethren, liberated us from sin, purified our souls and made of us new creatures in Christ, came to us through somebody's toil, suffering, and sacrifice. Shall we, then, having known the Lord, or, rather, having come to be known of the Lord, be so selfish and so ungrateful as to bury our talents while the multitudes die without God?

Christ, our Savior, labored, suffered, and sacrificed for us, the righteous for the unrighteous. It was when the apostles and early disciples were busy in labor and suffering and prayer that the word of the Lord had free course and was glorified, and it is incumbent on the church today to keep its members busy, not only that "by reason of use they may have their senses exercised to discern good and evil," but that the word may have free course and glorify God in others also.

The world is perishing for want of "the bread of life," famishing for want of "the water of life." Millions at home and abroad, dying with each tick of the clock, have never been told of a Savior's love. The widows, the orphans, even the illiterate—"the poor ye have always with you." Shall the church remain idle longer, or shall we awake and in diligence do the will of our Father, that it may be said to us: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: even as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me?"

Millions to-day are groping in darkness without God and without hope. They need to know Him who is the life and light of the world. But he shines through us; hence, we are called "children of light" (1 Thess. 5: 5), "light of the world" (Matt. 5: 14). It shines through our "good works" (Matt. 5: 16; Phil. 2: 15).

Then, let us awake and arise from the dead, that he may shine upon us. (Eph. 5: 14.) Brother, the responsibility is great. What shall we do? Shall we not at once conclude that we have been selfish and ungrateful toward Him who has done, is doing, and has promised to do so much for us, and open our eyes to see there is much to be done, and in penitential tears come to him now—right now—as a loving son and a faithful, obedient servant, and say, with all our hearts: "Here am I, Lord; send me?"

Not only in these things should the churches abound, but especially let the church train every member to the work. Too many times no duties are ever assigned young people, and consequently there is a cry for preachers and elders all over the land. Just recently I closed my third meeting with the church at Cool Springs, in Giles County, Tenn., and it was so comforting to know that sitting all around me were not less than twenty men and boys upon whom I could call to assist in the worship.

I shall ever be grateful to God for Brethren Sam Cooper, Steve Howard, J. T. Harris, and others who put me to work when a boy, without which I should have spent my life not as a preacher. Few boys—no boys—put themselves forward in such things. Let the church take hold of the boys, extend a hand, and pray a prayer; for the harvest is ripe, and the laborers are few.

A Cleaner Ministry.

BY J. C. M'Q.

I should say that the Gospel Advocate does not use "ministry" in the sense of a professional ministry, as is sometimes done. A minister is simply one who serves. Every true minister is constrained to say, as did the apostle Paul: "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." (1 Cor. 9: 16.) Any man who thinks that he can serve God as successfully in other work as he can by preaching the gospel of Christ will prove a curse and not a blessing to the church. Every one who enters the ministry should do so because he believes that it is his imperative duty to preach the gospel and that a failure to do so will jeopardize his salvation. I have no encouragement for the idea that the clergyman is in a class separate and distinct from ether people, and that simply because he is a minister he is to be regarded as holier and better than the Christian who is not a public proclaimer of the gospel. To foster such a feeling drives the common people from the minister instead of drawing them to him. Nothing should be done that erects a barrier between the minister and those to whom he ministers. In order to have a clean ministry, it is necessary to have a pure people. Isaiah (24: 2) declares: "And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with his master; as with the maid, so with her mistress; as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the creditor, so with the debtor; as with the taker of interest, so with the giver of interest to him."

The ministry is examined and criticized periodically by self-appointed examiners and is usually found wanting. Almost all kinds of missiles, except gold nuggets, are thrown at its members. Associating with business men as I do, I have frequently heard ministers charged with being "grafters" and "crooks." Such accusations may be true of a few ministers, but it is wholly unwarranted and unfounded when applied to most ministers. Those who make such charges usually fail to worship as the Holy Spirit directs and have become corrupted themselves, otherwise they would not make them. We will never know just how great is the influence of a genuine, sacrificing, consecrated minister of the gospel, unless some day we are called upon to live in a world where the gospel is not preached. The Baptist denomination has recently been much disturbed because of the fact that its ministry is deteriorating in education, it being claimed that the education of the greater preponderance of the ministers was so inefficient as to poorly equip them for the ministry. The man who knows the gospel as it is in Christ, who can speak the English language fairly well, and who lives a pure life, is well equipped for winning souls to Christ. The men selected by Christ himself did not measure up to the present standard of educators. While it is not intended to depreciate an education, yet, when Paul went to Corinth, educated and equipped as he was, he determined not to know anything among the Corinthians "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." The man who can speak correctly his own language, who has the Spirit of Christ, and who knows the truth, is abundantly equipped to lead men out of darkness into light, Almost all my life I have heard it charged upon preachers that they were poor managers of finances. It is alleged that this is "the reason why so many churches are run in such a poor manner." It is doubtless true that there are some ministers who are poor managers, but it is not true that ministers as a class do not handle judiciously the funds that come into their hands. No man can manage well who has no funds to manage. To my mind, it is very doubtful whether any group of men make better use of what they have than the ministers. Ministers and their wives make what they have go farther than almost any other class of people. Many of them could give financiers points on how to make ends meet. While it is often charged that ministers' sons are worse than other fathers' sons, yet statistics have shown that ministers' sons stand right at the top when it comes to men of usefulness and influence. It is also true that the leaders in certain large enterprises are ministers. It is said that John D. Rockefeller has selected ministers to carry out some of his big financial ideas and plans. The difficulty in many of our churches is not that the preacher does not know how to handle funds, but there are ofttimes two or three closefisted, hard-headed business men who lack faith and vision and, unfortunately, nullify all of the efforts of the preacher. When a church is so stingy and niggardly that it will not pay the preacher a sufficient amount to live on by the closest economy, it should not condemn the preacher if, unfortunately, he is overwhelmed with debt, but should condemn itself. As a minister must be a man of integrity and should be one who pays his debts. I would suggest that it would be helpful in bringing about a cleaner ministry for the churches to give their ministers a more liberal support.

As we do not have absolute perfection among Christians. neither do we have a perfect ministry. Among the twelve whom Christ selected to be his apostles, one was a devll. Unfortunately, Judas Iscariot loved money more than he dld Christ. Even so It is to-day. Notwithstanding the fact that the soul is worth more than the world with all of its pleasures and wealth combined, yet we have men claiming to be ministers of Christ who sell their very souls for one moment's gratification. This is to be deeply deplored. With many of the Israelites God was not well pleased because they lusted after evil things. Some of them committed fornication, and fell in one day twenty-three thousand. These things were for our examples, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things as they also lusted. Every minister should be an example, not only in teaching, but also in faith, in veracity, and in purity. The Holy Spirit says: "Thou therefore that teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal? thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou rob temples?" (Rom. 2: 21, 22.)

For a minister to become an adulterer and a criminal is a disgrace on the fair name of Christ. While he can and may be forgiven for such vicious conduct, and while God is ready to cleanse him from his sin, yet for such sin he must suffer all the days of his life. When David had been guilty of a similar sin and had despised the word of Jehovah and done evil in his sight, the Holy Spirit, through Nathan, the prophet, said to him: "Now therefore the sword shall never depart from thy house, because thou hast despised me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife. . . . For thou didst it secretly: but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun." (2 Sam. 12: 10-12.) Preachers should heed the advice of Paul to Timothy as recorded in 1 Tim, 4: 12: "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an ensample to them that believe, in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity."

We should insistently and persistently agitate and advocate and educate until we rejoice in a cleaner, purer, and better-equipped ministry. It is useless for the papers, the churches, and individual Christians to talk about a better day dawning so long as they encourage impurity, falsehood, and a lack of integrity among its ministers. A better day dawned when John the Baptist and Christ came into the world, and both the harbinger and Christ himself fearlessly condemned sin wherever found. Christ called the wicked Pharisees the "offspring of vipers," and also labeled them "blind guides" who strained at gnats and swallowed camels. Those who love truth and righteousness and who stand for that which is pure and noble should leave nothing undone to bring such guilty offenders to repentance. If such lead the world, all will fall into the pit. I am not among the number who believe that all Christians are so cowardly and that all ministers are mollycoddles and weaklings. I believe that there are those who will point us to the way of righteousness while leading, not only theoretically, but also by practicing lives of purity and righteousness. There are those among us who will not be bribed by popularity or by money, nor led astray by the pleasures of sin. As is every faithful Christian, so is the true minister to-day the leaven of righteousness in every community. The voice of pure, consecrated preachers cannot and will not be silenced in this hour of the world's crisis. Church papers should not encourage a corrupt preacher by publishing his reports; churches and Christians should not in a partisan spirit uphold the minister who has been proven guilty of awful and unmentionable sins. The mission of a religious journal is to teach the truth and to keep its readers informed as to conditions just as they exist. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." (Gal. 6: 7.)

I close by admonishing all Christians alike to rise to a nobler and a purer life. Let the motto of each be: Still onward and still upward to where mere animal life ceases to exist; still onward and still upward until you stand on the ineffable mountain top of a perfected and consecrated life; still onward and still upward to where the snows of purity forever gleam in the glow of heaven; still onward and still upward until in the midst of the assembled universe Christ shall say of you: "These are they who have come up out of great tribulation, who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

The Inspiration of a Good Example.

BY M. C. R.

The very common and trite saying, "Actions speak louder than words," finds its verification in both good and bad examples, and possibly in no calling or sphere of life more than in the gospel ministry. In fact, so powerful and decisive is the influence of example in the preacher's calling that all other attainments, no matter how high nor on what line, are neutralized and defeated if the right example be lacking. It would be practically impossible to exaggerate the importance of this consideration.

The idea, conceived by our managers, of sending out an occasional special number of the Gospel Advocate, with special treatment of special themes, is a good one; and we think they could not have hit upon a nobler theme or one more timely than that of a better gospel ministry, to which this number of our paper is devoted. We hope its pages will ring with utterances worthy of the high calling. and that all our readers may be impressed anew with the mission and glory of this divine calling as it is portrayed by inspired pens on the pages of the New Testament. Here alone may the lofty ideal be found to which every preacher of the gospel should aspire. Pollok, the author of the "Course of Time," had the right idea when he said: "Would I describe a preacher, such as Paul, were he on earth, would own, approve, accept-Paul himself should guide me."

As its heading indicates, this article is to be devoted to the inspiration of a good example among preachers. The field that here stretches before us is large and the examples are numerous. It would be time well spent to dwell at length on the character and career of any one of a long list of noble evangelists whose voices, at different times and in different places, have echoed and recchoed along the ages, like that of John in the wilderness, calling men to repentance and reformation of life, and under whose thrilling and awe-inspiring message tens of thousands have enlisted in the army of the Lord. The early days of the nineteenth-century Restoration movement witnessed a veritable host of such heroes whose names are worthy of the highest place on the roll of the world's preachers and whose inspiring examples are worthy of all praise and imitation. They were not only great preachers, but merely as men they were examples of sterling integrity and of high moral excellence, and commanded unstinted respect and admiration from all classes of right-thinking persons with whom they came in contact.

It would be out of place here to undertake to even name them all, and we shall be content with the mention of a few specimens from the brilliant and illustrious retinue. The eloquent Walter Scott; the statesmanlike John T. Johnson; the pious and polished Aylette Raines; the industrious and matter-of-fact commoner, Samuel Rogers; the unique and humorous John (Raccoon) Smith; and that untiring and assiduous "noblest Roman of them all," Benjamin Franklin, constitute a small number of that great company of preachers covering three-fourths of the nineteenth century whose names are imperishable, whose characters were spotless, and who knew not how to condescend to anything ignoble or mean. The very lives of such men, aside from their message as preachers, are an invaluable blessing to the world.

But the great prominence given the subject of the preacher's example in the New Testament is positive proof of its power and influence, and no man should ever enter the gospel ministry without due regard for this teaching. Let us note what the inspired record says. To Timothy, a preacher of the gospel, this inspired message was addressed: "Be thou an ensample to them that believe, in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity." (1 Tim. 4: 12.) And to Titus, another preacher of the gospel, this message was addressed: "In all things showing thyself an ensample of good works; in thy doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of us." (Tit. 2: 7, 8.)

Summing up these items, the preacher is specially called upon to make himself an example to others in seven important particulars:

- 1. "In word." He must not only guard his tongue against the ordinary improprieties of speech, but he must at all times and under all circumstances use "sound speech, that cannot be condemned." Preachers sometimes cripple their influence by thoughtlessness and looseness at this point.
- 2. "In manner of life." Not only must the preacher's character in general be good and worthy of imitation, but his entire "manner of life" must be above suspicion and command the universal respect of right-thinking people. Even hardened men of the world who reject the gospel can be favorably impressed with religion by the preacher's example.
- 3. "In love." Of course this means the love which is peculiar to Christians—the love which they are to have for one another and for the world at large. Jesus himself makes it their badge of distinction. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." (John 13: 35.) The preacher especially is to be a living example of this love.
- 4. "In faith." He must be sound in the faith of the gospel, but he must be more than that. He must so live and so teach as to show to others "uncorruptness" in his "doctrine." They must be able to see from his example that he is sound in the faith and worthy of being followed by others.
- 5. "In purity." While all Christians should be pure in thought, in word, and in deed, yet it is preëminently true that the preacher must be so. He should be pure in thought, and no word that is impure, or that even suggests impurity, should ever escape from his lips. At this most vital point he should be a model for both sexes, and for all ages of both sexes. Let the very citadel of his heart be sacredly guarded and all impure thoughts kept out. Let his thoughts, his words, and his deeds create that wholesome atmosphere which it is safe and elevating for the youngest and tenderest heart to breathe. Then, and only then, will he be the example which every man should be who enters this high and holy calling.
- 6. "In good works." Not only is it true that in no good work should the preacher be behind, but his career as marked by good works should be a model for all other children of God. His good works should be an inspiration to others, leading them to like noble deeds. Thus, not only should be a leader in teaching, but in its practical exemplification in any line of good works as well.
- 7, "In gravity." Unquestionably there may be, with all propriety within certain limits, what is called "innocent fun," in which preachers, in common with all other Christians, may properly indulge; but under no circumstances should this indulgence, especially by preachers, be carried beyond the limit of dignity and a proper regard for sacred things. Preachers, precisely as in the case of others, are not required to act at all times and under all circumstances as if they were at a funeral; and yet they should never be undignified. Let them be sunny and cheerful, wreathed with smiles rather than frowns, but never forget that they are followers and representatives of Him who never lost sight of the seriousness of life. Anything even in the way of jest that borders on the unclean is out of place with all Christians, but It is thoroughly repugnant in preachers. At all times and under all circumstances they are to be models, exhibiting to the church and to the world the highest type of the Christian gentleman.

Finally, no thoughtful mind can conceive of these seven characteristics as combined in one man without conceiving of the highest type of man. And such all preachers preëminently should strive to be; and in this high attainment they will indeed be "ensamples to them that believe."

Sound Speech and Sound Practice.

BY E. A. E.

We cannot trifle with the word of God. In humility, with a contrite heart, and trembling at his word (Isa. 66: 2, 5), we must obey him implicitly. What he commands in regard to "sound speech" (Tit. 2: 7), "sound words" (1 Tim. 6: 3), "the pattern of sound words" (2 Tim. 1: 13), "speaking as it were oracles of God" (1 Pet. 4: 10), all speaking "the same thing" (1 Cor. 1: 10), preaching the gospel in the words which the Holy Spirit teaches and not in the words which man's wisdom teaches (1 Cor. 2: 13), must be obeyed. All that he says against "words to no profit," "profane babblings," "foolish and ignorant questionings," "a different doctrine," not consenting to "sound words," "disputes of words," and division must be heeded.

All who do not consent to "sound words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness," are "puffed up" and are "doting [or sick and making others sick] about questionings and disputes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, wranglings of men corrupt in mind and bereft of the truth, supposing that godliness is a way of gain."

(1 Tim. 6: 3-5.)

There is no other way except the one of using "sound speech," "the pattern of sound words," "even the words of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," of all speaking "the same thing," being "perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment," and of keeping "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." All who speak otherwise and use any other speech cause division.

Some years ago there was a much greater effort than there is now to restore "the sound words" and teaching of the New Testament. Much more was said then than now about "pure speech," expressing Bible thoughts in Bible language, and against the language of Ashdod. The children born unto some Jews of the women of Ashdod could not speak in the Jews' language, but spoke "half in the speech of Ashdod" or "according to the language of each people." (Neh. 13: 23-27.) Some now speak about half in the language of denominational parlance and the other half according to New Testament teaching.

The word "minister" in the New Testament does not mean a preacher only; the word "ministry" does not express the work only of a preacher. All know this; then why persist in calling a preacher "the minister" and his work "the ministry?" Is this done because those who do so are determined to "hold the pattern of sound words," "sound speech," "even the words of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," or are determined not to?

All know that "minister" in the New Testament, and out of it, means "a servant," and "ministry" means "service," One who waits upon a table and serves food is a "minister." One who cares for the sick and looks after the poor is a "minister." The rulers of this world, who are sometimes as wicked as Satan wants them to be, are God's "ministers." (Rom. 13: 4.) One who obeys the command of a king or serves his purpose is his "minister." Then, one who obeys God, or serves his purpose, is his "minister," whether one preaches the gospel, rules in the governments of earth, or sweeps and cares otherwise for a synagogue. (Luke 4: 20.) Those who serve God in preaching the word are "ministers of the word" (Luke 1; 2), "ministers of the gospel," "ministers of the new covenant" (Eph. 3: 7; 1 Cor. 3: 5; 2 Cor. 3: 6). Also, "the minister of all "-one who washes the feet of others and in any way does the work of a menial, etc.-is the greatest of all. Christ came, not to be ministered unto, but to minister. He did not mean "not to be preached to, but to preach." Certainly not. He meant what he said and did. The "minister" is not necessarily a preacher: he is not necessarily a Christian. The servant of God carries out God's purposes; the one who is voluntarily God's servant in obedience to his will is his "minister," ready to work to make an honest living and have something to give to the needy, to sweep and light and heat the house of worship, to wait upon the sick and care for the poor, to preach the gospel, or to do anything the Heavenly Master commands to be done. Then, by no authority whatever can a preacher be called the "minister," distinguishing him from all other Christians, or servants, or ministers of God. This is the language of Ashdod and a relic of ecclesiasticism. One may be a minister of the gospel, to be sure; but he is not "the minister" of a church, distinguished by this title, or in this way, from all other ministers or servants of God in that church. All are "ministers," "ministering" as each one has ability.

The same is true of "ministry." The law was "the ministration of death." (2 Cor. 3: 7.) Contributing money and distributing help to the poor is a ministration, or ministry. Martha was "cumbered about much serving." Peter's wife's mother ministered unto Jesus. This was a "ministry."

When we talk about "a better ministry," what, then, in the teaching of the New Testament, is meant? Do we mean better cooking, better service at the table of common meals, better and more liberal and extensive service of the sick and poor, or more faithful preachers of the gospel? "A better ministry" can mean only better service in any way that men can serve.

There are no such expressions in the New Testament as "preparing for," "studying for," and "entering" "the ministry."

There is no such thing in the New Testament as "minister," "evangelist," or "elder," as a title.

All know what Jesus says about titles-"Rabbi," "Father," "Master," etc. Then why seek them? Some brethren years ago were shamed out of using the title "Rev.," "pastor," etc. Some were disposed to use the word "pastor" as many now use "minister." But there was a flood of articles against the 'one-man-pastor's' rule, etc. "Pastor" is a New Testament word, and therein is the great work of pastors marked out; but there is no such thing as "the one-man-pastor's rule," But there is as much authority for the "one-man pastor" and his rule as there is for the one-man "minister" and his rule. The "minister" now rules the church as completely in places as "the pastor" or pope can do. Elders in these places neither do the work nor rule well the church-rule by teaching the word of God. "The minister" now in these places completely dictates the teaching the church is to have and the one who is to do it. He rules out such preachers as he does not want.

Let us restore pure speech, the New Testament order of work and worship, and raise up a large number of truly faithful and godly preachers of the gospel.

God gives the true motive which prompts every true and faithful preacher; the true purpose to be accomplished by preaching; the only right thing to be preached; the language to be used; and the manner and spirit in which to preach. He tells how to make or develop preachers and how to increase their number. When all follow God's direction and are filled, therefore, with his love and Spirit, this question of more and better preachers will be solved.

It is vain to reason or philosophize about "an educated ministry," how to increase and make "the ministry better," or to show that "the ministry" has been diminished on account of the high cost of living. These things have nothing absolutely to do with developing true and faithful preachers of the gospel or of increasing or diminishing the number of them. Teach people to love and obey God, to have the mind of Christ, to be filled with his Spirit, and to become "partakers of the divine nature," whether rich or poor, whether the cost of living is high or low, whether countries are at war or in peace, whether educated or uneducated, and the question of preaching the gospel at home and abroad will be settled. The preachers who allow high cost of living, the lack of support or much money, the war spirit and politics, or leading issues and philosophy of the day to cause them to quit preaching "Christ, and him crucified," are not fit to preach. It is well for the church to be rid of all such.

What a man preaches depends upon why he preaches.

In Paul's day there were false teachers and preachers, who perverted the gospel, who preached it of envy and strife, who wrested the scriptures, who handled the word of God deceitfully, who made merchandise of the truth and of the churches, who sought their own and not the things of Jesus Christ, who taught things they ought not for filthy lucre's sake, who turned godliness into a way of gain, and who served "their own belly." (Rom, 16: 17, 18,)

Paul says of Timothy when sending him to Philippi:

For I have no man like-minded, who will care truly for your state. For they all seek their own, not the things of Jesus Christ. (Phil. 2: 20, 21.)

Human nature, the world and its popularity, and the love of money are the same now as they were in Paul's time, and it is not impossible for there to be just as many and as various kinds of false teachers and preachers as there were then.

A very sensible and good man, who has been a lifetime Bible student and a teacher for almost so long, who is not far from sixty years of age, and who resides in a very large city north, writes that for many years the congregation he mentions "enjoyed strong teaching; but of late years there has been a decided change to the opposite direction and the influence has been detrimental to the work among the brethren at large." This is the cry from Dan to Beersheba. A letter from a sister in another large city on almost the opposite side of the United States from the brother referred to above speaks of the great need of the teaching of "the New Testament plan of salvation."

It is a good sign that the churches are calling for real gospel preaching and the teaching of the New Testament; and it is so strange and so grievous that all who claim no guide but the Bible do not preach it fully and clearly.

The way to make more faithful preachers is not to have necessarily more "college graduates." True education is a good thing; but a preacher may possess all the knowledge of the wise, understand all the science of the scientists, know all the philosophy of the philosopher, and be one of the greatest literati of the world, and yet he must know nothing but Christ crucified. The power to save from sin is the gospel of Christ. The power is in the word of God. "Preach the word" is God's charge.

Tithing as a Means Toward a Better Ministry

By L. S. White

Nothing, perhaps, is more helpful to Christianity than a clean, pure ministry. Ministers should "give themselves continually to prayer and the ministry of the word." (Acts 6: 4.) I have recently known a number of strong preachers to give up the ministry, wholly or in part, and go into business in order to make a living for their families. Last week one of the leading educators in a certain State told me that most of the preachers in the large county where he is Superintendent of Public Instruction had quit preaching and gone into other callings in order to make a living. He told me his county was dotted with churches, but no preachers. Why is this? Somebody is to blame, Who is it?

I believe a preacher should feel, as Paul did, "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel;" and if he cannot make a living in the ministry, then he should do something else for a living and preach all he can. A man who will not make a living for his family is unworthy of the name "minister." "If any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." (1 Tim. 5: 8.)

If a man can do some good—and he can—by giving one day in the week to the ministry, how much more can he do by giving all his time to the ministry? Can he not at least do seven times as much good? A man who gives only one day a week to his business will fail. To succeed, he must give six days each week to his business. "The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light." (Luke 16: 8.)

Both the ministry and the other members of the church have a duty to perform, and each should do his individual duty. It is a great relief to a minister for the others to look after his needs and let him give his entire time to the work of the church. His hands are then untied, and he can be a better minister and do better work for God and for humanity.

Christ says: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20: 35.) He also says: "Freely ye have received, freely give." (Matt. 10: 8.) There is much said in the Bible on giving. Our Lord said: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoseever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3: 16.) Paul teaches that we should present our bodies "a living sacrifice" to God. (Rom. 12: 1.) With these things before us, I lay down some principles from the word of God on giving:

- 1. We are all stewards in the hands of God, and are responsible to him for the use we make of the means he has intrusted to us.
 - 2. We are to "give as we are prospered." (1 Cor. 16: 2.)
 - 3. We are to "give cheerfully." (2 Cor. 9: 6, 7.)
- 4. There should be "equality in giving." (2 Cor. 8: 11-14.)

In order, at least, to carry out the second and fourth of these vital principles, there must be a standard for us to go by, and I believe this standard is taught in the Bible. I believe the Bible teaches that Christians should give back to the Lord, at least, one-tenth of their gross income. I believe this, not because it was taught to Jews, but because the Lord taught it both before and after the law of Moses.

When Abraham was returning from the slaughter of the kings who captured Lot, he met the priest of God, Melchizedek, and gave him a tenth of all he had. (Gen. 14: 18-20.) What caused Abraham to do this? Was it by mere chance, or was it the custom for the Lord's people to do this? About a hundred and fifty years later Jacob made a vow unto the Lord to give back to him the tenth of all he made. (Gen. 28: 20-22.) What caused him to do this? Surely he never thought of this by mere chance.

Paul declares that Jesus Christ was made a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek. (Heb. 5: 5-10.) He enlarges on this in Heb. 7: 1-17. "For this Melchizedek. king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him; to whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all." Notice this word "also." It shows that Abraham, in common with others, "gave a tenth part of all." "Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils." Notice this word "even." It shows that others gave a tenth to Melchizedek, and that even Abraham, with all his power and greatness, was not exempt from giving a tenth of all he had. Nothing seems to be plainer than that the people gave a tenth of their possessions to Melchizedek. Paul also says, in this connection: "And here men that die receive tithes; but there he [Christ] receiveth them, of whom It is witnessed that he liveth." He also says: "For that after the similitude of Melchizedek there ariseth another priest, who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life. For he testifieth, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek." From the above I am forced to this conclusion: (1) During the days of Melchizedek the Lord's people gave to him a "tenth part of all." (2) Christ is a "priest forever after the order of Melchizedek." God's people should give back to the Lord a tenth of their entire income. It seems to me to say that we will not would be to say Christ is not a priest after the order of Melchizedek.

When Jesus Christ says people ought to do a thing, I am slow to say they ought not. Listen to what he says: "Ye pay tithes of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." (Matt. 23: 23.) Here our Savior plainly declares that people ought to give tithes.

In ancient times God declared that his people who withheld the tithes robbed him, and asked: "Will a man rob God?" (Mal. 3: 8-10.) The Lord, in this connection, lays down a challenge to his people, and says: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." It seems that if we believed very much in this marvelous promise we would fulfill the conditions of receiving the blessing. All God's people would be made better by it, and this would help much toward a better ministry, as well as the expansion and enlargement of every phase of the Christian religion.

From the above, let us look at the following considera-

- 1. The gospel ought to lead Christians to do more than the Jews, and the Jews were taught to give a tenth part of all their income and a good many freewill offerings besides.
 - 2. Jews had greater difficulties than we have.
 - 3. We need a practical principle like this.
- 4. It is the only way to carry out Paul's teaching that there must be "equality" in giving. It also shows us how to give "as we have been prospered." If one's income is twice as large as his neighbor's, then he should give twice as much.
- 5. God never would have ordered it done had it not been for our good.
 - 6. It is a sure way of giving the Lord his right share.

- 7. The acceptance of a principle like this marks a distinct era of spiritual enlargement in any person's life.
- 8. It would bring the great religious awakening and expansion for which we long and pray.
- 9. That which we now call our own belonged to some one else before it came to us, and it will belong to yet another when we leave it; but while in our possession we are responsible for its use.
- 10. Tithing would solve the financial problems of the church, encourage more consecrated and intellectual men to enter the ministry, and leave those who are now in the ministry without excuse to go into other callings to earn a living.

May God speed the day when more of his people shall learn this great truth, realize what it would mean in the furtherance of the gospel, and practice it throughout the length and breadth of the land.

The Church in Washington, D. C.

BY W. S. LONG.

Those who are interested in doing mission work in destitute fields are anxious to learn occasionally how the cause is doing in Washington and when we can begin the erection of the new buildings. Brethren, I cannot answer all personal letters, but will keep you posted through the press.

The only place we have to meet is a small hall on the second floor of the Masonic Temple, at Eighth and F Streets, N. E. The Christian Science people use two rooms adjoining us, and the noise of their instrumental music, with only a wall between, is confusing. People seeking the place of the true worship are often misled and go home without finding us. It is a shame and a sin that we have no house in the national capital, when we have ten thousand congregations and one million members in the United States.

Since November we have raised $10,260. A well-located building site has been paid for in cash. This site cost $5,250 plus $45 to make good the title and taxes. I have just received $300, which will be sent to the elders this week. This gives us a start on the building fund of about $5,400. Besides this, the small band in Washington has helped the orphan homes and sent money to the sufferers in war-destroyed countries. One said: "O, you have done well!" No, I do not think so; and why? We have been ten months raising one-third of the funds for a house of worship. The little Salvation Army raised more than that in one day in one city. The Freed-Hardeman College raised $20,000 in one hour; the David Lipscomb College, $30,000 in a little while. There are ten thousand congregations in the United States; so the help that these churches have rendered will not average over sixty cents per congregation. Seven thousand letters were sent out for help, but six thousand were not answered. This is discouraging, but we shall not stop. The engineering department of Washington demands a fireproof house and one that will be in keeping with other nice buildings in that beautiful city; so we cannot erect anything but a good building. This is really good news to all the brethren, because we all want a nice house of worship in the capital city. The house complete will cost not less than $25,000 or $30,000. You see that we need $20,000 more to do the work, and do it right. Now, if each congregation will make one more liberal donation before September 1, we will have every cent of the needed amount in less than three weeks and the house ready for use by December 25. If you have given once, give again. Some one said: "Wait a while." Yes, wait till souls are lost in hell and your love for money and land leads you to ruin. No, do it now. Now is the time, to-day is the day.

There are four ways you may help: (1) Cash. (2)

Bonds or stamps. (3) You may give your note payable in six or twelve months. (4) We often borrow money to buy a home. Then, if in no other way you can give, it would be commendable to borrow what you desire to give.

The funds have grown slowly because the donations were so small. The largest donation was from Sparta. Tenn., which was $300; next was the Chattanooga churches, $257; then Birmingham, Ala., $220. The others run from one dollar up. We send each church or individual donor a card of thanks. The writer is now spending a few weeks out of Washington in meetings, but will return the first of September.

In the last month I have received and sent to the elders the following donations: From Sparta, Tenn., $227; R. G. Watson, $50; Manchester, Tenn., $20; Mrs. Eugene Stovall, $1; James Phillips, $4; Price Billingsley, $3; Mrs. R. H. Collier, $1; Cliff Creek, $48; Brownsville, Tenn., $18; C. C. Foy, $5; Lewis Foy, $5; L. A. Winstead, $25; James Winstead, $10; S. G. Winstead, $10; Alvin Revis, 50 cents; A. L. Wilson, $2. Here I desire to express our sincere thanks to every one who has graciously donated. If your noble example is followed by others, we will soon be placing the material into the building. Let us complete this task as soon as possible and then turn our attention to St. Louis, New York, and other such cities.

Send all donations to J. W. Gibson, 2500 Pennsylvania Avenue, S. E., or E. L. Mills, 2002 G Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

INTER NOS

From M. C. Cayce, Nashville, Tenn., July 31: "The meeting at Jackson's Temple, about eight miles from Burns, began on July 20 and closed on July 27, with interest intense and all regretting that it could not continue longer. Five were baptized and many others seemed impressed with New Testament Christianity. The singing, led by Mounce Carter, was spirited and good. I feel sure the seed sown will do much and lasting good. I am wanted back for another meeting next year. I am to begin a meeting at Rock Church, near Dickson, next Sunday."

From C. H. Smithson, Wylle, Texas, August 1: "I have just closed a fine meeting at Center Grove, in Titus County, with good crowds, fine interest, and ten additions. This is one of the best congregations in Texas. I am now at Cottonwood Church, three miles south of Wylle, for a meeting, and prospects are fine for a grand meeting. I go next to Hatfield, Ark., for a meeting, and then back home (Ben-Franklin) for a week. I am coming to Tennessee for some work, and could hold two more meetings if my services are desired. Address me at Ben Franklin, Texas."

From W. A. Record, Paducah, Ky., July 30: "I have just closed a ten-days' meeting at Calvert City. There was only one baptism, but much good in other way was accomplished. This church is only eleven miles from my present home, and in some respects it is a splendid church; but they have a bad case of the same disease that caused so much trouble at Corinth, and which will cause trouble at all other places where it exists—a division over preachers. All such disciples are 'carnal,' says Paul; and 'to be carnal-minded is death.' But there are a number of good people in this congregation endeavoring to walk the Christian pathway; and the two elders are not only splendid Christian men with highly respected families, but they are men who have the cause of Christ at heart and look after it in a safe, business way, and we may expect God to be glorified there."

Taking Care of the Poor and Needy.

BY MORGAN H. CARTER.

In 1917 the United States Government began the erection of an immense powder plant at Hadley's Bend, some fifteen miles from Nashville. The construction of this munition plant was rushed because of the urgent needs of the government. Exceptionally high wages were paid for most types of labor, and many workmen, both skilled and unskilled, were brought from a distance. Large numbers of girls and women were also obtained, some for cierical duties and others for waiters and various unskilled positions. There were but few residences on the powder-plant grounds for this mass of people at the beginning of the work; therefore, special trains were run from Nashville and many thousands found rooms and board in the city. The sudden influx of such a large mass brought a great increase in the rate of room rent and tended to inflate the already high prices of foodstuff and various necessities.

The moral standards among some of this mass were not so high as is desirable, and there were naturally many shifting and degenerate people, as well as an efficient and helpful element. Nashville, a city of about one hundred and thirty thousand, suddenly received an addition of about twenty thousand, which made an increase of about fifteen per cent in population.

At the close of the war it became economically necessary to greatly reduce the production of the powder plant. In fact, there was an almost entire closing down, for a period at least. This threw an immense number of Nashville people out of employment and also turned loose on the city a great mass who had moved here from various sections and had either entirely left their former positions or belonged to the shifting class who know no home except that in which they live at the moment.

Just as the war closed the influenza epidemic had been at its height, and much suffering, many deaths, and great poverty had followed in its track. Nashville being a city which depends largely upon the agricultural section surrounding it for its economic development, and not having a very large number of manufacturing establishments, necessarily found itself unable to supply positions to a great mass of its unemployed. Many of these sought work elsewhere; others remained in Nashville for various reasons, and the result was a large unemployed class, many of whom had but small savings, and all of whom must live at the high cost brought about through the prosperity which they no longer enjoyed.

Every year in Nashville, as in all other cities of its size, there is a certain per cent of unemployed, also some deficients and delinquents, who, together with the sick, constitute a dependent class. This was exceptionally large in the winter and spring of 1919. The suffering, however, was alleviated by reason of the exceptional weather conditions which reduced the gravity of the fuel problem. The assistance which Nashville renders to its dependent class is through the Charity Commission of Davidson County, an organization supported by funds appropriated by the city and by the County Court, and augmented by various individual and institutional gifts. This charity commission largely gives relief work, but some of its cases continue to be dependents for a much longer period than others. There is, of course, a county house for the poor, a reform school for boys and girls, both supported by the State, and we have the United Charities, which is an institution supported by gifts from various individuals, churches, societies, and lodges. The various lodges maintain certain charity work, some in the form of homes for the aged, some for dependent children, and some for both. The Episcopal, Methodist, Presbyterian, Catholic, and Jewish churches maintain various institutions of a helpful nature. Some of these are settlements, some clinics, and some homes. The United Charities maintains the Addison Street Day Home and the Fresh Air Camp, which is used the year round, but patronized most largely in the summer. The Baptists and the churches of Christ cooperate with others in the support of much of this work and each maintains an orphans' home of its own in the Nashville community.

From a careful study upon the part of Belmont Church, we have found that the cause of poverty in the various homes is due to sickness, lack of employment, insufficient wage, accident, old age, and death, the greater per cent being due to the first three causes. We have found a number of widows whose husbands died leaving them in a dependent condition. Eighteen per cent of the families were those of women with children who had been forsaken by their husbands. There were thirty-three and one-third per cent whose call upon charity was due to income being insufficient to meet necessary expenses. The wage of these people was in many cases insufficient for meeting the expense of a poor family in normal times, and the high cost of living makes it impossible for them to exist and obtain the lodging, clothes, food, and other necessities of normal life. The average family contains from three to five children. The greater per cent of these are below the age of fourteen and are, therefore, restricted from labor in our manufacturing industries. A number of the homes have children below school age; and as there was no caretaker for them, the mother could not be employed in remunerative work outside her own home without either leaving the children to the courtesy of the community or placing them in some institution for the day. The Addison Street Day Home meets the needs of many families in this line, but it is entirely inadequate for the needs of our whole city. Some of the settlement houses are doing helpful work. but there are masses of children belonging to families where mothers work who are not receiving proper care, and are, therefore, thrown under bad influences. Of the mothers employed, we found a large per cent working in industries which are undesirable and injurious to their health, such as snuff factories, overall factories, and selling papers on the street.

We believe from a careful study of the situation that no mother with a child below the age of five should be engaged in employment outside her own home, and that the employment which she does within her home should be limited to such hours as can be spared from household duties without neglect of the children.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

We are greatly indebted to our contributors for the "Better Ministry" Number.

The "Better Ministry" Number awaits your honorable digestion. We believe it will leave a good taste.

W. E. Morgan baptized ten persons in his meeting at Wagner, Texas. He is now in a good meeting at Floyd, Texas.

Thomas C. King closed a good meeting at Luna's Chapel, Tenn., on August 15. Ten persons were baptized. He is now at Summertown, Tenn.

Silas E. Templeton reports a good meeting at Braden Springs, Ala., in which one person was baptized into Christ. He is now at Hall's Valley, near Trion, Ga.

E. Gaston Collins closed a meeting on August 19 at Cyruston, Tenn. He had good attendance and one young lady was baptized. He is now at Garth, Ala.

From C. C. Brown, Micanopy, Fla., August 23: "I filled my regular appointment with my home congregation on last Lord's day, with one addition at the evening services."

John W. Hedge has closed a good meeting at Alba, Texas, in which fourteen persons were added to the membership. He and Brother Benson are now in a meeting at Duncan, Okla.

E. O. Coffman reports four weeks' evangelistic work in Lauderdale County, Ala., during which there were fortynine additions. He is now at Big Creek, in Giles County, Tenn.

R. P. Cuff reports seven baptisms in a meeting at Bellbuckle, Tenn., and six additions at Fairfield, five miles from Bellbuckle. His next meeting will be at Silver Point.

H. H. Adamson, of Lewisburg, Tenn., will begin a meeting for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, in Nashville, next Sunday. This is one of the best of our local congregations.

In the compilation of this special number we were reminded of Andrew Carnegie's epitaph: "Here lies a man who knew how to enlist in his service better men than bimself."

A. S. Derryberry reports one confession at Reid Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day. He will begin a meeting for the Berea congregation, in Wilson County, Tenn., next Sunday.

G. A. Dunn reports thirty-nine additions as the result of a short meeting at Chickasha, Okla. B. U. Baldwin did good work in the song service. Brother Dunn is now at Sabinal, Texas.

C. G. Vincent, who recently returned from "Y" work in France, is available for permanent work with some church or churches who can use him for the advangement of the Master's cause. Address him at 371 Blaine Avenue, Detroit,

L. S. White reports a fine meeting at Lebanon, Tenn., in which twelve persons were baptized and two were restored. The attendance was unusually good. W. G. Klingman led the song service. Brother White has returned to his home at Sherman, Texas.

J. J. Wyatt, of Fresno, Cal., is visiting relatives in Kentucky and is available for some protracted meetings. Brother Wyatt is highly recommended by L. L. Brigance and other brethren. We hope he may arrange for the meetings. Write him at Benton, Ky.

From William P. Walker, Lebanon, Tenn.. August 20: "One addition last week at Bethel Church, Anderson's Bend, in Hickman County. We began a meeting on Sunday, eight miles from Lebanon, in a schoolhouse. The attendance, interest, and singing are good."

From J. W. Dunn, Trezevant, Tenn., August 16: "We closed a real good meeting at Rives yesterday at the water. This was my third meeting with them. The Rives congregation is composed of fine people. It has at all times been a real pleasure to labor with them. I shall begin here

From Hal P. McDonald, Berry, Ala., August 22: "Alabama Christian College, Berry, Ala., has a good opening for a man and his wife who are teachers and who would like to engage in this kind of work. We also have a place for a good, Christian girl who is energetic and a good housekeeper and cook."

From W. P. Skaggs, Tom Bean, Texas, August 16: "Our meeting with the faithful few at Chalk continued twelve days and closed at the water this morning. Six were baptized and three restored. This was my third meeting with these good brethren, and I left them with the promise to be with them next year. I go to Justin next week."

John T. Smithson writes: "The meeting at Oak Grove, in Warren County, Tenn., closed with two restorations and two baptisms, one the last night. The crowds were large throughout the meeting and interest good. I have promised to hold another meeting for them next year. This will be my fifth meeting in succession for this congregation."

From J. H. Hines, Cave City, Ky., August 21: "I have just closed a good meeting at Fairview. Two obeyed the Christ. There was a good interest from the beginning. I believe much good was accomplished. I am at present near Cave City preaching in a barn which was erected for that purpose. Interest is fine. One has taken his stand with God's people. I hope to establish a church here."

From A. J. Traylor: "L. B. Jones and I held a very successful meeting at the Antioch church of Christ, near Porterfield, Tenn. They took great interest in the meeting and gave splendid attention. The lessons that Brother Jones presented were good, and he was very successful with them. Seven were baptized into Christ and one was restored. This meeting was one of the best I have been in this year."

A. G. Freed, Henderson, Tenn., writes: "'The Sweeney-Kurfees Tract' will soon be from the press. You will be pleased with Brother Kurfees' work. Brethren, let us give this tract a wide circulation. The expense of printing has been considerable. Send your contribution to the Gospel Advocate, that 'The Sweeney-Kurfees Tract' may be placed on the free distribution list, and ask for some to be sent you. Do not delay."

From Arthur B. Tenny, Cordell Okla., August 20: "I have been preaching at points within reach of Cordell on Sundays. I was at Amorita last Sunday. I will preach there on the second Sunday in each month while in college at Harper, Kan. There will be several good preachers—students and teachers—who will be glad to fill Sunday appointments. A. E. Freeman has moved to Guthrie. We need more life in our work."

From Will W. Slater, Fort Smith, Ark., August 21: "We closed our meeting at Park Hill Church, this city, last night. We had reasonably good attendance and good interest throughout. There were five confessions and baptisms, and we believe some good was done otherwise. I go next to Spaulding, Okla. I will be busy until October 22. If you need a singing school or normal late this fall or winter, write me at Box 241."

From Willie Hunter, Livingston, Tenn., August 14: Our meeting at Big Branch, Jackson County, closed last Sunday after eight days' duration. There were two additions to the church by baptism. This was one of the best meetings I ever engaged in, and we all felt that much and lasting good was done. This was my second meeting with the Big Branch brethren. I was asked to be with them again in 1920, which I promised to do. J. F. Brewing assisted in the meeting."

From F. C. Sowell, Gladewater, Texas: "Our meeting closed at Paul's Valley, Okla., with four added to the Lord-a husband and wife and two young ladies. Brother Yowell (our song leader) and I have accepted an invitation to return and hold their meeting next year. There are just a few members at that place, but they are strong in the faith. We have had twenty-three additions since coming to Texas and Oklahoma. I am in a meeting at West Mountain now. The meeting starts off well. I will return to Tennessee at the close of this meeting."

Commendatory of the service rendered by John E. Dunn in France is the following quotation from a letter written by Mr. S F. Hazzard, Regional Religious Work Director for the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations: "No man in the Bordeaux region is more warranted than yourself to leave with a sense of duty well and faithfully done. Thank you, sir, sincerely and deeply for your good work. Your intimate, personal interest in the men has been especially notable; your fine relation with the chaplains has been most commendable. You have richly earned full commendation for kindly, Christlike service."

Gillespie.

On Friday, May 30, 1919, at 11:30 A.M., the angel of death claimed one whose earthly sojourn was so consistent with her ideas of a Christian life as to make her loved by all who knew her. Mrs. Gillespie, who was Miss Pauline A. Gillaspie, was born near Winchester on July 1, 1831, and when quite young she obeyed the gospel, being baptized by Brother Jesse Sewell. On January 10, 1856, she was married to James H. Gillespie by Brother Shaw. To this union were born seven children, three of whom survive her. Mrs. Gillespie was confined to her bed for four years, during which time, although she was a very great sufferer, she was always kind and earnest, reflecting the spirit of love. Her most grievous regrets were that she was unable to attend services and meet with others around the Lord's table. She never failed to admonish old and young who visited her to be "faithful to the end." While her life was saddened several times by earthly separations, she knew that many stricken men and women have found solace in the dark hours of bereavement in knowing the soul's immortality. She has seen in this understanding a ray of heavenly light falling upon the great world's altarstairs that slope through darkness up to God, and with an eye of faith she would look from the open graves up to heaven, knowing the all-wise God would give her that understanding which we gain through earnest desire and efforts. Our hearts are filled with sympathy and our eyes dimmed with tears for the children and loved ones who survive her. The children are: Mrs. Laura Boren and H. W. Gillespie, of Decherd, Tenn.; W. L. Gillespie, of Nashville, Tenn. Funeral services were conducted by Elder John D. Floyd, of Tullahoma, Tenn., at the home of Mrs. Boren, and the body laid to rest under a blanket of beautiful flowers, in "the old cemetery."

EAT LESS AND TAKE BITRO-PHOSPHATE TO PUT ON FLESH

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Frederick S. Kolle, M.D., editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says that weak, nervous people who want increased weight, strength, and nerve force should take a five-grain tablet of Bitro-Phosphate just before or during each meal.

This particular phosphate is the discovery of a famous French scientist, and reports of remarkable results from its use have recently appeared in many medical journals.

Rheumatism

A HOME CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mall your name and address, and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar; but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer, when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

Sohel

William Sobel was born on March 11, 1867, in Hungary. He obeyed the gospel on February 5, 1888, being baptized by Brother Joe P. Grigg. On December 26, 1894, he was married to Lena E. Fergus, to which union seven children were born, five of whom survive him. After an illness of eight days with Spanish influenza, he died, at his home in Lavergne, Tenn., on March 18, 1919. Brother Sobel was indeed one of God's noblemen. He was a great man, for he served faithfully; and he was not only faithful in his church work, but was a devoted husband and father, a true friend, a con-secrated Christian, a useful neighbor, and a good citizen. and a good citizen. Being a Jew, when converted to Christ, his father disowned him, and he gladly gave up all fleshly ties for Christ's sake; and having accepted the Bible as his only rule of faith and practice, he clung closely to its teaching and allowed it to govern him both in his teaching and practice. Strong in faith, humble in life, bold in standing for what he thought right even if he had to stand alone, his was a great influence for good, and the church of Christ in Lavergne and the community in which he lived suffered a great loss in his death; but he leaves behind him an influence that will continue to live for good. It was always his delight to talk about the Bible and discuss its precious truths. His controlling and supreme desire was to please God, The wife and children have much to com-fort them, for the Christian's death is the most triumphant moment in his existence. Having passed through the fiery trials of this world, having met the responsibilities of this life faithfully, when he comes to breathe his last, he simply says farewell to the heartaches, temptations, and trials of this life and enters into that home where sad farewells are never said and sorrow and trials do not come.

TREMENDOUS VALUE FOR 15c. .

Washington, D. C. (Special).—An unusual offer is being made by the editor of the Pathfinder to send the paper to new readers thirteen weeks for fifteen cents. This wellknown national weekly magazine contains all the worth-while news of the world, illustrated and presented in a most entertaining manner. It is clean, sincere, nonpartisan, reliable, well printed in large type. It puts everything clearly, fairly, and briefly.

Washington, the home of the Pathfinder, is the nerve center of civilization. History is being made at this world capital. The Pathfinder's illustrated weekly review gives you a clear, impartial, and correct diagnosis of public affairs during these strenuous, epoch-making days. It is the only big weekly magazine at the seat of government. Send fifteen cents for thirteen weeks' trial subscription to the Pathfinder, 111 Douglas Street, Washington, D. C. The fifteen cents does not repay the editor, but he is glad to invest in new friends. How Shiver Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism.

According to the standard medical books, rheumatism is not a germ disease, but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate, and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart, and other organs. To relieve rheumatism, it is, therefore, necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer with rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder, or liver, uric-acid poisoning, or any condition due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, inclose the amount, and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring, Box 21B, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your offer and inclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send; and if it fails to benefit my case, you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

The Master's Vineyard

Alabama.

Berry, August 13.-The writer has lived and labored at this place for the past three years. These have been eventful years, not so much possibly on account of our work in arousing things of moment, but more on account of the fact that in meeting the world condition, so abnormal, it required the use of every possible energy. By the help of God, we have lived through it all. The past three years have been committed wholly to the work in the Alabama Christian Col-The school has grown each vear. This year I have had over two hundred students in my care. Over one hundred of these have been commercial students preparing for bookkeepers, typists, and stenographers. Several young men have been with the school preparing for the ministry. Some students have gone out as teachers. I have just closed a most excellent meeting at Landersville. Eight persons were baptized and two Baptist women came forward to unite with the church of Christ. School will open on Tuesday, September 16. We would be glad to send catalogues to any young people that might be interested.—Hal P. McDonald.

Arkansas.

Rector, August 18.—Our meeting at Water Valley was a fine one. There were thirty-one additions-twenty-five by baptism and six by restoration. We had fine interest throughout, I am now at Glass Church, near Rector, with good interest and bright pros-pects fine for a good meeting. I shall go from here to Bernie, Mo.—E. V. Cowan.

Hatfield, August 18.—I have just closed a fine meeting at Cottonwood, Texas. One was baptized and a fine interest was manifested. I am now in a meeting at Hatfield, and I am hopeful of a good one and a new church home. This is a fine place in the foothills of the Ozark Mountains. I go next to Heath, Texas, for a meeting, and then I go home (Ben Franklin) for a week .- C. H. Smithson.

Boyton, August 14.-We have been having some good meetings in and around Waldo. Brother Warren E. Starnes, of Dallas, Texas, conducted a meeting for us in Waldo, with splendid success. This is his third meeting with the church at Waldo. Brother C. L. Wilkerson, of Springfield, Mo., has been with us for three meetings this summer-one at Magnolia; one at Haynesville, La.; and one near Homer, La. These were all good meetings Brother Watson Starnes, of Millville, held a meeting at Friendship, fourteen miles north of Waldo. It was one of the very best meetings we have had. The last of July I closed a fine meeting at Bethel, seven miles north of Waldo. These gospel meetings have resulted in from twenty to thirty additions .- O. E. Billingsley.

Kentucky.

Van Buren, August 16 .- I have just closed a good meeting at Russell Schoolhouse with twenty additionseleven by primary obedience, six by letter, and three from the Baptists. We raised over eighteen hundred dollars for our new building, which we will begin at once. Work in Kentucky is moving along fine, but we need more preachers. There seems to be a greater shortage of loyal preachers than we have had for some time. I would urge parents to put their boys in school and encourage them to prepare to preach the gospel.-R. A. Craig.

Monticello, August 17,-I am sending a report of our meeting, conducted by Brother Charles Brewer, of Nashville, Tenn. Although there were no additions, yet, viewed in every other sense, the meeting was a good success. meeting was designed to break down the wall of prejudice that usually forms around the cause of Christ in a new section. Brother Brewer was just the man to do this, and the brethren are highly pleased with the results. Each service was attended by large crowds. We hope in the near future to reap the results of this meeting by way of additions.—O. F. Shearer.

Oklahoma.

Ravia, August 12.-Brother D. S. Ligon began a series of meetings at this place on July 25 and continued it ten days, with one baptized and much good done otherwise, especially in the way of prejudice being removed. He spoke and taught very plainly and gained the attention of nearly all the town, resulting in a large attendance. The Lord willing, he will be with us again next year.—G. T. Hale.

Geary, August 15.-1 am now in a meeting under a tent at Eden View, Okla., near Geary. This is one com-munity in Oklahoma in which the church of Christ was first, with the result that there is no sectarian church to bother with false doctrines. Brother L. L. McQueen lives here, and has from the beginning; and by his faithful life and preaching he has built up the cause of Christ and sectarianism has never been able to gain a fol-An all-day meeting, with dinner on the ground, is announced for next Lord's day, and we expect a large attendance from the surrounding country. From here I go to Walnut Springs, Texas, and from there to Dixon Springs, Tenn., to begin a meeting on the second Lord's day in Sentember. My meeting at Carl, Okla., resulted in five additions, two of the number being men of mature years, one a Baptist,-J. H. Lawson.

Pennsylvania.

Fayette City, August 12.—On next Lord's day my personal work with the church here will come to a close, at least for the time being. I have been located with the church here for about fourteen and a half months. I have enjoyed the work with these people very much. During the month of May, Brother J. H. McBroom, of Rogersville, Ala., was with us in a meeting which was successful in more than one way. The church was edified in the most holy faith, thirteen were added to the church as were the Pentecostians, and two were induced to be Christians only, who before had been wearing a dishonorable name. There was a division in the church some years ago. During the meetings both parties were induced to forgive and forget their differences and be united as the good Book teaches. I am leaving here for the purpose of entering school this fall, in order to better fit myself for greater usefulness in the service of the Master in the years to come. The church here is on the lookout for a preacher. There is a good field here for a further spread of the pure gospel of Christ. Any one interested may write to J. H. Maude, Fayette City, Pa.—E. D. Shelton.

South Carolina.

Union, August 14.—Our meeting near Woodruff moves along with growing interest. We had the largest audience of the meeting last night, with six confessions, bringing the total to date up to eleven. Brother and Sister Briggs came into this neighborhood from Knoxville last February and began preaching the gospel, and we are now reaping the harvest. If every member of the church had the zeal these two have, we would soon spread the gospel the world over. They do their work from house to house. Brother Traylor preached in Union last Sunday, morning and night, to two fine audiences. He will leave me next week, then I will need a helper.—Thomas H. Burton.

Tennessee.

Cleveland, August 18.—I have just closed a mission work of about six weeks' duration in and around Bradley County. There were no baptisms, but good interest and attention at most points. I thank those who have aided in this work, and wish to assure others who claim to have the spirit of Christ that this field extends a great opportunity for its manifestation.—J. Ridley Stroop.

Tracy City, August 14.—I am just back from Dixie, where I held a good meeting, with six added to the church. I preached nineteen times in one week. We had fine crowds. I also preached one week at Logan's Chapel, being the first one of our preachers to preach there. They asked me to hold a meeting for them next year, which, the Lord willing, I will do. I am preaching for the Tracy City congregation once a month.—Bailey Brooks.

Tennessee City, August 18.—My sixth protracted meeting at Shepp, in Haywood County, closed on August 17. Two were baptized and two restored. I would have continued longer had my family been well, but I am now on my way home to help care for the sick. If circumstances permit, I am to begin a meeting at Mount Zion, eight miles from Dyersburg, next Lord's day, and another at Bolivar on the first Lord's day in September.—J. H. Murrell.

Mulberry, August 14.—The meeting at Crystal Ridge closed last Friday evening with four baptized. The congregation at this place formed a resolution to do a better and greater work for the Master. Brother George W. Farmer, of Lebanon, did the preaching, this being the fourth meeting he has held here. Brother Farmer speaks Pulaski, August 15.—On the second Lord's day in July I began a meeting with the congregation at Ethridge and continued it thirteen days. The meeting resulted in one being added by primary obedience and one from the Baptists. I was with the Ethridge brethren in a meeting several years ago and was glad to be with them again, as I have many dear friends there. This is one of our strong old congregations that is capable of doing a great deal more for the Lord than they are doing at present. I devoted nearly my entire time to an effort to arouse the church to greater activity.

I believe some good was accomplished in that way. We have several preachers living at Ethridge and several came up from Lawrenceburg. I believe, in all, I preached to nine of our own preaching brethren and two Methodist preachers during the meeting. One brother became sufficiently aroused to propose to individually support a mission meeting and expressed a desire to use some of his means for the spread of the gospel when he is gone. That is a noble resolve. Who will be likeminded?—J. T. Clark.

We invite the attendance of students in our academy (high school) on the merits of this academy and not because we are a "senior" college. We invite the attendance of students in the freshman and sophomore years of our college on the merits of the work of these years and not because we are a "senior" college. The fact that we are a "senior" college does not within itself prove that our academy and junior-college work is better than the work of other Christian academies and junior colleges. If you are an academy or junior-college student and are considering which school to attend, we suggest that you decide first that it shall be a Christian school. You are not for the present interested in the junior and senior years of college; so just forget that Abilene Christian College is a "senior" college and consider its location, equipment, faculty, courses of study, etc., entirely on the basis of merit, in comparison with others; and if you decide to come with us, we shall be delighted to have you, and will do all in our power to make your stay with us pleasant and profitable. This we know we can do. But please bear in mind that we do not desire to draw students from other Christian academies and junior colleges on the ground that we are a "senior" college. We simply invite you to see what we offer in the academy and junior college, just as you see what others offer in these same departments, and decide on the merits of the things offered.

Of course we feel that we have a right to expect that patronage of our brethren where the junior-college work has been finished, because no other school among us is prepared at present to offer the additional two years' work.

There are enough students from Christian families in denominational and secular academies and colleges each year to fill to overflowing every school we have in Texas and elsewhere. There is no reason for this. Those who are still in the high school or junior college have a number of good Christian schools to select from, where they can get just as good work as they are getting where they are, and have the privilege of Bible study and Christian association and influence. Those who have finished the first two years of college work can now come to Abilene Christian College and do the two additional years and continue to study the Bible and enjoy Christian association and influence. We know that Abilene Christian College is absolutely genuine and sound in every department, beginning with the Practice School of the Department of Education (the first seven grades) and including the last year of college. We know that other Christian schools are sound and genuine in the departments they maintain. Brethren, let us fill every one of these schools full before we turn our children over to the denominations to have their faith changed, or, at least, so neutralized that it will count for nothing in their lives. Let us build up and strengthen the faith of our children and prepare them for more efficient service in the church and build up our own schools instead of injuring them and building up the denominations.

Our pride is not in our plant, the size and strength of our faculty, or the standing of our institution in the educational world, but in our product -our students. The business and professional men of Abilene, the people where they go for athletic and other contests, our visitors, and others tell us that they are "different," more refined and cultured, and that they are clean and honest. Our purpose is to develop Christian men and womenreal, genuine, Christian men and women-Christian, not in dectrine and faith only, but Christian in character, in life. From what we can see and hear, we have cause to believe we are succeeding to a reasonable degree. Read this extract from a letter written to us by the dean of a college where our boys spent three days and played two games of baseball this spring: "The Abilene Christian College baseball team was here for two games. The boys played clean baseball and conducted themselves in such a manner as to make us proud of them for you. We have had several college teams to visit us this season, but your boys are much the manliest set of men we have had. If we had not been told they were all Christians, we would have known from their conduct that It must be so." We do not apologize for being proud of such boys; and our girls are just as fine. Neither do we apologize for being proud of the spirit that makes such boys and girls.

FIELD REPORTS

Tennessee.

Decherd, August 15 .- I have just closed a good meeting at Morrison with twenty-three additions-twentyone by baptism and two from the Bap-This was one of the best meetings I have ever held. The brethren there have a beautiful concrete-brick building to worship in, and it is clear of indebtedness. They have arranged with me to preach for them once a month this winter. Immediately after returning home, in response to a request by telephone, I went to Tracy City and baptized a lady from Texas who was visiting Brother E. B. Tinney and who had heard the truth preached during the union meeting in which we engaged with the Methodists.-R. E. L. Taylor.

Viola, August 15.—The meeting at Viola closed last night at the water after thirteen days' duration. This was one of the best meetings I ever attended. Brother Elam falled not to declare "the whole counsel of God;" and while he rebuked sin with firmness, the gentle and humble way in which he administered the rebuke had a wholesome effect upon all, and his warm exhortations appealed strongly to sinners to repent and encouraged saints to be more earnest in their Christian life. Seven were baptized and many confessed their wrongs and asked the prayers of the church. The brethren were so well pleased that with one consent they asked Brother Elam to come back next year. May the Lord spare him for many years of service in his vineyard.—J. R. Stubblefield.

Union City, August 18 .- On the first Lord's day in this month I began a meeting with the New Hope congregain Hardeman County. meeting was well attended and the brethren seemed to be determined on greater things for God. A number of churches in Hardeman County are planning to locate an evangelist to labor in that field. They insisted that I take up the work there, but, owing to previous plans for work and other conditions over which I have no control, I deem it best not to enter upon the work there. There is a fine opportunity in Hardeman County for some capable gospel preacher to do good. shall assist in two meetings here in this county, then return to Hardeman County for another meeting with the brethren at Middleton,-T. M. Carney.

Mount Pleasant, August 15.--I am just back from a trip to my old home at Scott's Hill, in Henderson County.

I have been there in my sixth protracted meeting in succession. I always enjoy my trip there for the reason that I meet with those that are near to me in the flesh. I also hope that I have been instrumental in doing good in the Master's cause. persons made the good confession and were baptized. One of these was a man over sixty years old. The sad part of the report is that some that were once good Christians there have grown cold, and some even are very near to infidelity. We had a special meeting in which we made a special effort to get these to come back to the church. A few did so, but several did not. There are a few there that are faithful, and I am sure they will be unto the end .- C. S. Austin.

Tullahoma, August 19 .-- My meeting for the summer began on the first Lord's day in August, at Morrison, and was one of the greatest meetings of my life. Brother G. A. Johnson was with me and did some good preaching. The meeting was largely attended by both white and colored. My second meeting began on the second Lord's day in August at Christiana. My next meeting will begin tiana. next Lord's day, at Gum Spring. From there I hope to go to Arkansas. We have been praying and begging for a house of worship at this place, and at last our prayers have been answered and we have a nice house completed. The white brethren here have been very nice to us and aided us in every way that we might get a house; also the church at Rickman gave five dollars to help us in building. who will help the cause by helping us to pay off the debt? Our meeting here this summer was held by Brother M. Keeble, who did some strong preaching. Those that want to know more about the church here may write to V. C. McQuiddy, a white brother and an elder of the church of Christ, at Tullahoma, Tenn.—T. H. Busby (colored).

Texas.

Denton, August 18:-On the second Lord's day in this month I began a meeting with the Hemming congregation, about twenty miles north of here. The meeting closed last night with one addition. I was with those brethren last year, but there was a lack of interest among the members in the meeting this year from some cause. Several of the members went on a visit just before the meeting and others started during the meeting, so we had a hard pull of it all the way through. They have better crops this year than they had last year, but they did not support me as well this year as they did last year. Brother Berry lives out there, and his whole soul is in the Lord's work. I am at home now for a few days, then off to Alabama for a meeting. My address till the first of September will be Coxey, Ala.—D. S. Ligon.

Denton, August 13.-The meeting at Savoy closed last Sunday night with a splendid interest. I had not been at Savoy for many years, and there have been many changes in the congregation since I was there. A number of the older members have passed away, but their influence still lives for good. Quite a number of new members have moved to or near Savoy, and the con-gregation is far larger, it seems to me, than when I last preached for them. Brother Warren E. Starnes, now of Dallas, labored with the church at Savoy for several years, and it is largely due to his faithful work that the church is in such excellent condi-tion to-day. The meeting lasted ten days and the church made it very pleasant for me in every way. Two persons were baptized and three took membership with the congregation. I am now back at home to begin the work again with the congregation in Denton.—R. D. Smith.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud. Fig. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic, If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but Send $1 to-day to E. CHURCH NEWS

Alahama.

Florence, August 18.—The meeting at Macedonia began on the second Sunday in August and closed on last Friday night. We had large attendance all the way through. Five persons were baptized and the church was greatly edified. The preaching was done by Brother Thornton Crews, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn. He is a young man, but a power in the pulpit. He preaches the old Jerusalem gospelforceful, pure, simple, unadulterated.

T. O. Bevis.

Kentucky.

Hardyville, August 13.—I am laboring with the church at Fairview. Large crowds, fine attention, and in-terest great. The church is loyal to the Christ and his word. They are zealous workers in the Master's kingdom and have the respect of all. I go to Cave City next Monday, where hope to establish a church after the New Testament order that will be satisfied to wear only the name of Christ and to do nothing but what he teaches.-J. H. Hines.

Louisiana.

Amite, August 19.-Recently I held a meeting at Shiloh, a few miles east of One was restored and others almost persuaded to accept Christ. From there I went to McClean Schoolhouse, twenty-five miles east of here, to begin a meeting, which continues indefinitely. This is one of the several mission points where I shall preach this year. The harvest is ripe and laborers are few. May many la-borers be sent into the harvest.—W. J. Johnson.

Texas.

Bonita, Route 2, August 14.—We closed a meeting at Dye Mound last Ten persons were baptized and five returned to their "first love," go to Bonita to-morrow to remain over two Lord's days. I am working hard, and It will crowd me to get through my meetings without a breakdown The church is staying with me nobly. T. H. Matheson.

Grand Saline, August 18 .- My husband, Willis G. Jernigan, closed a meeting at Jackson on Wednesday after the first Sunday in August, with large crowds and good interest, but no additions. He preached for the congregation here on the second Sunday. He left on last Friday for Jacksonville to begin a meeting there. He will go next to Star to hold a meeting.
Mrs. Willis G. Jernigan.

August 19.—Brother Midlothian. Austin Taylor and I have been here since the fifteenth, with splendid interest and from one to three confessions each service. We have preached four nights and baptized ten persons. large crowds are attending. Christians from Dallas, Fort Worth, Waxahachie, Desoto, Venus, Mansfield, Cedar Hill, Maypearl, and other points are helping to make up the large audiences. We go from here to Cedar Hill, then to Mangum, Okla.-Horace W Bushy

San Antonio, 405 Porter Street, August 17.-I closed a good meeting with church at Sentinel, Okla., last k. While we were hindered a great deal on account of harvest, yet we had good crowds all the through. One was restored to fe One was restored to fellowship, one came from the "digressives," and three were baptized. One of those baptized was a young man who was preparing for the Methodist ministry. He will now preach the gospel, and I predict for him a very bright future. Work here is good,-W. D. Bills.

Vineyard, August 16,-I am here in a good meeting, with large gatherings and fine interest, and may continue until the first of September. The meeting near Maxey, in Lamar County, was well attended. We had fine in-terest. The people were aroused greatly. There were four baptisms and one restoration. I promised them to return next July for a four-weeks' meeting. I have one call for Mississippi and one for Florida, but I can accept more, as I want to be busy all the winter. My address at present is Vineyard, Texas, Route 1, Box 15.— My address at present is G. B. Lambright.

Dallas, August 22.-Brother John E. Dunn recently preached on the religious condition of France at the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church, in Dallas. His address was very instructive. Brother Dunn is an easy speaker and always has a good lesson for his audi-The church has arranged for Early Arceneaux, of Houston, to hold a tent meeting for us, to begin on the fifth Sunday in this month. We expect to do much mission work this year. We want to give every man, woman, and responsible child in Dallas a chance to hear and obey the gospel.-A. O. Colley.

San Angelo, August 19.—The first two Sundays in August I spent at Haleyville, Ala., in a meeting which was well attended. There were five baptisms. Quite a lot of good was accomplished in removing deeply-rooted prejudice. The song service was conducted by Brethren J. H. Stone and Jim Barton. Brother I. B. Bradley was with us one service during the meeting. Haleyville is a place where Brother Bradley helped to "break the Haleyville is a place where ice" years ago. Brethren B. F. Hard-ing, H. I. Copeland, and a young Brother Walker have done some good local work at Haleyville. They are held in high esteem. Brother J. D. Stone, who lives at Haleyville, was at home and helped very materially in the meeting. My home was with Brother and Sister W. W. Haley—a good home.—T. B. Clark.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was premptly adopted. The business man from he South, knowing how welcome such a hoe would be in his part of the country, arged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes, It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. FROM THE FIELD

.Tennessee.

Rives, August 12.—Our meeting at Polk closed with the Sunday-evening service. Three were baptized and one was restored. We are greatly encouraged. The church at that place is awake to its duty.—D. D. Woody.

Lawrenceburg, August 11.—Our meeting at Pleasant Valley, Ala., closed on Saturday. The brethren were pleased with the meeting. Ten were baptized. I am now in a good meeting at Luna's Chapel.—Thomas C. King, Lawrenceburg, Route 2, August 11.—Brother J. T. Hollis, of Allen Creek, began a meeting at Crewstown on Saturday night, August 2, and continued it to the following Thursday night. Nine were baptized and one came from the Baptists. Brother Hollis is an able young man who should be kept in the field doing the Lord's work. He is going to enter school at Lawrenceburg this fall.—John H. Crews.

Nashville, August 13.—Brother Mason, of Chattanooga, closed a meeting at Shady Grove, in Coffee County, on Sunday night, with nine baptisms. The brethren at that place are doing a good work. They have built a meetinghouse this summer and supported a good meeting. I led the song service there, and could lead in another meeting before September 1. My address is Huntland, Tenn., Route 1.—James J. Reynolds.

Clifty, August 9.-I left home, Watseka, Ill., on Saturday, July 26, and went to Clinton, Ind., and met with congregation at Fairview Lord's day, also preached that night and on Monday night. After services on Monday night, I boarded the train for Nashville, Tenn. On the train I found my wife and one of my daughters, and I went with them to the home of one of my brothers-in-law, near Elkmont, Ala. Near Elkmont I preached two nights at family residences to small audiences, also met several of the Elkmont brethren. I also preached in Elkmont on last Lord's day after the worship and at night, and on Monday and Tuesday nights I preached to good audiences at a schoolhouse some five or six miles from Elkmont. At Elkmont I met Brethren Frank Morrow, W. F. Tomson, and G. M. Peck. I made a trip to Athens, and near there I met two earnest sisters who had obeyed the gospel over thirty-three years ago in South Illinois. To find them still strong in the faith and faithful in the divine worship and life was a matter of re-joicing to me. On the train back to Elkmont I fell in company with Brother Ezell and Brother Brewer and had a short talk with them. On Wednesday I went to Nashville, where I had a pleasant time in the Gospel Advocate office with Brethren J. C. McQuiddy, A. B. Lipscomb, T. B. Larimore, and J. W. Grant. I then went to Tullaho-ma, where I called on Brother J. D. Floyd. I found the old brother in feeble health, but sound in the faith and ready to talk over the outlook of the Master's work. I enjoyed a visit with Brother V. C. McQuiddy and wife that night. On Thursday I came on to Clifty and out to Newton Schoolhouse, where I had promised to begin a meeting that night. I have preached two sermons up to the present and have a rapidly growing audience. I will continue for one week longer, and hope to have some good results before I close. Other calls are coming in, and I will probably be in East Tennessee for some time. I would be glad to get other calls. Write to me at Clifty.—Andrew Perry.

Texas.

Desoto, August 6.—I closed the Mansfield meeting at the baptismal service last Thursday evening. We had large crowds, fine interest, good singing, twenty additions, and good support. The Mansfield congregation is alive. I promised to return another year. Brother Austin Taylor and I are in a good meeting here in Desoto, with three baptized and one restored to date. We go next to Midlothian, the third and fourth Sundays.—Horace W. Busby.

Waxahachie, August 8.—I closed the most successful and happiest three years' service of my life with the church in Ennis on July 30. I regretted very much to leave the Ennis church, but a door was opened to me in Waxahachie and a larger field. The whole membership in Ennis is loyal to God and to the minister who labors with them. May God's richest blessings be theirs. Ennis and Waxahachie are fifteen miles apart. Brother J. S. Dunn lives here and is holding fine meetings in this county. There are near twenty churches in the county.—Ben West.

"As Much As in Me Is."

BY C. PETTY.

Paul wrote to the Romans: "So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also." (Rom. 1: 5.)

"As much as in me is"-that is, all that I have and am; nothing shall hinder me: all the power that I possess. No stronger expression could have been used to show Paul's determination to preach the gospel. Now put Paul's great zeal and God's power (the gospel) together, and we can see how he moved men to obey its divine mandates wherever he went. See him at Athens preaching the unity of all nations by one blood; and "certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them." (Acts 17: 34.) Also, read Acts 26, where Paul's preaching caused Festus to exclaim: "Paul, thou art beside thyself: much learning doth make thee mad." And Agrippa said unto Paul: "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." The need of having the gospel preached is as great to-day as it was then, for it is claimed that seventy-two million people in the United States do not belong to any religious organization. Subtract that number from a hundred and ten million, and it is seen that thirty-eight million of our nation are religious. Now add to this all the millions of every tribe and tongue of every nation on the earth, and you have the case made out. Then add to this the statement that is often made, that at every tick of the watch some one passes away. Now, should not this alarm every Christian and cause him to say, with Paul, "So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach," or to do with all the power that I have and all the means I possess to have the gospel of Christ preached to those in darkness, that they may have the light of life? Or will we sit idly by and let these opportunities pass unnoticed that are so great, and let many be lost that would be saved if we would wake up to the responsibility that now confronts us?

I do not believe there ever was a more important hour than now to hold up the Bible, and the Bible only, to the people as the only rule of faith and practice; and when preached thus, it leads to "one faith, one Lord, one baptism," which leads into the one church, and the only one, which our Savior "purchased with his own blood." The only place that men can be reconciled to God is "in one body by the cross." (Eph. 2: 16.) See the condition of the Ephesians before they heard the gospel and before they entered into the one body." "That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." (Eph. 2: 12: also Eph. 1: 13.) Could man be in a worse condition than to be without Christ, an alien, a stranger, with no hope, and without God? These five things show man's condition before he enters into the one body, or church, or is reconciled unto God in the one body. Now, in the face of this, how can any one say that a person can be saved out of the church as well as in the church? If a person will prove to me that a man can be saved without Christ, an alien, a stranger to the covenants of promise, without hope, and without God, I will admit that he can be saved out of the church, but no sooner, inasmuch as man's condition is no better now than it was when Paul wrote the Ephesian letter, Now, why not all try to show man his condition by the Bible and appeal to him, by the facts, commands, and promises, to believe and obey, "that he might be reconciled unto God in one body," or church? Now see his condition since he entered the church. "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God through the Spirit." (Eph. 2:

Man's salvation depends on his obedience to the gospel of Christ; and the Lord has made it the duty of man to preach it to man, and nothing else is allowed to be preached. Paul says; "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." (Gal. 1: 8, 9.) New, since the gospel is the only thing that builds men together for the "habitation of God through the Spirit" and leads them to that celestial home just beyond the gentle river, and since it is our duty to preach it to them, let us all strive to be faithful in preaching it, that we be not classed with the unfaithful watchman.

Sleeplessness. You can't sleep in the stillest night if your digestion is bad. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla—it strengthens the stomach and establishes that condition in which sleep regularly comes and is sweet and refreshing.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dolfar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, Fourth Floor Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo. Fads and Fancies.

BY H. W. JONES.

In most of the churches known to me there is a leading or predominating element which seems never to be satisfied with plain Bible truth, and that alone, but, instead, is on the constant outlook for some new fad or fancy that is as far from "the love of the truth" as "the east is from the west." I have been a careful observer of church affairs for many years, and I am convinced more and more that it is not so much the truth they love as it is popularity, entertainment, easy sailing, and things of a worldly nature. They seem to be on the unrest, always wanting a change in religious work and worship. Yes, so much so that I, as did Paul, "fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve in his craftiness, your minds [my brethren] should be corrupted from the simplicity and the purity that is toward Christ." (2 Cor. 11: 3.)

A plain gospel preacher may present the truth of God clearly and forcibly "as it is written" and solely in "the love of the truth," without any addition thereto or subtraction therefrom; yet, unless he resorts to some new twist or turn, fad or fancy, or uses some sort of deceit to make himself popular with the world and worldly-minded church members, he is "not wanted" very long at the same place, except by the "faithful few." He is "not popular;" "he is too plain;" "he preaches the truth, but we want a new man;" etc. Hence, from all this I conclude it is not the truth of God, the plain gospel of Christ, they love so much as popularity, innovations, entertainment, and things that appeal to the worldly-minded. Yes, in many places they "shelve" the home gospel preacher for no good reason and send hundreds of miles for a "new man" who is not a whit better man or preacher, and pay him far more than they ever thought of paying the home man. All this is strange, silly, and works evil to the cause we profess to love,

But amid all this confusion and clamoring for "something new," I well remember that our blessed Savior (and the gospel he preached) was not "popular" in his day and did not suit the worldly-minded Pharisees and rationalistic Sadducees; neither were the apostles of our Lord popular with worldly-minded people, and how little did the plain preaching of the apostie Paul appeal to all such! And about the worst thing about the whole matter is the sad fact that the "faithful few" who do really love the truth for the truth's sake will on many occasions "give In" to the kickers and "knockers" and growlers and those who have but little, if any, real "love of the truth" in their hearts! We need never expect the truth to have free course in the minds and hearts of the people generally where the church fails to "back up" the truth heartily and the faithful gospel preacher who delivers the same to a lost and perishing world! Let us wake up, brethren, and seek the truth, and not fads and fancies, and look to God and our Savior Jesus Christ, and not to puny man and his many inventions. The Lord help us so to do.

My Master.

My Master was so very poor, A manger was his cradling place; So very rich my Master was. Kings came from far To gain his grace.

My Master was so very poor, And with the poor he broke the bread: So very rich my Master was That multitudes By him were fed.

My Master was so very poor. They nailed him naked to a cross; So very rich my Master was, He gave his all And knew no loss.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHIII TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

Edifying as the Need May Be

Let Us Help the Church at Washington, D. C.

I wish to add my word of approval of the effort now being put forth to firmly stablish and strengthen the congregation in the nation's capital. Many letters and personal appeals have been made in their behalf. Brother W. S. Long writes me to the effect that while many generous contributions have been received, reports from some quarters are very discouraging. He informs us that some one started the report that he was in sympathy with the speculative teachings fostered by Boll and Chambers and that this report had to some extent crippled his influence in raising funds for the Washington work. I take pleasure in stating that Brother Long has no sympathy with this speculative teaching and that he so informed Brother Chambers five years ago. I esteem him to be a good preacher, worthy of the confidence of the brethren, and hope that this idle rumor will be dissipated. By all means, let us redouble our effort and push this campaign for the Washington building to a successful finish. Lack of space will forbid printing the names of all donors in the Gospel Advocate, but Brother Long and his associates will see to it that every gift is promptly acknowledged.

A Call from St. Louis.

Another deserving appeal that is now before us is the call for assistance from the small band of disciples in the great and thriving city of St. Louis, Mo. These brethren have sent us a brief statement which summarizes the present situation and needs and also suggests a simple plan by which many brethren may have fellowship with them at very little sacrifice to each. This statement follows:

We have bought a lot, corner of Spring Street and Blaine Avenue, 100x128 feet, for thirty-seven hundred dollars, and have made a cash payment of two hundred dollars from the contributions of our own congregation, the balance being covered by a deed of trust which has been assumed, and which was placed on the lot about four years ago, with another year yet to run.

It was fortunate for us that we were able to secure such a bargain as this, the purchase price being only two hundred dollars in excess of the deed of trust on the property, which has been in the hands of an estate for some time and was sold in the winding up of the estate. It is located just one block west of Grand Avenue, the main north-and-south thoroughfare of St. Louis, and is within one block of the Grand Avenue and the Park car lines, and is only three blocks from two other good car lines.

The selection was also made with a view of being able to locate all members of the congregation within walking distance, and it is the opinion of every one that a more ideal location in this respect could not have been found in any community in the city; yet it is only about thirty minutes, and direct car lines, from the downtown or business section of St. Louis.

Our plan is to secure at least two hundred and thirty contributors of one dollar per month, each, for thirty-six months, which, with the fifty in our own congregation of about twenty-five members, will give us the ten thousand dollars needed for the lot and building.

Won't you write us to-day that we may count you as one of these contributors? You need not send any money until the required number has been secured.

The Iron Master.

I hope it is not too late to pay a passing tribute to the lamented philanthropist, Andrew Carnegie. The life work of some men, as we survey it, gives the impression of solid strength and noble serviceableness. Like the mountains which rise above the surface of the earth, they remain steadfast in their place, enriching human existence. Like the streams which flow down from those mountains and run into the rivers and into the sea, they contribute to the fruitfulness of many lands. Such a man was Carnegie. For a long time he was regarded as one of the world's greatest financiers, but within recent years we have referred to him as a great philanthropist. We shall think of him, too, as a great philosopher, whose homely sayings will live in the hearts of the people for years to come. It was this great American who taught, "Take care of the shillings, and the pounds will take care of themselves," which, translated into our financial terms, means: "Take care of the dimes, and the dollars will take care of themselves." It was he who said: "Capital and labor and ability are three legs of a three-legged stool; neither is first, neither is second, neither is third, neither has precedence; all are equally necessary." It was indeed appropriate that he should select for his epitaph: "Here lies a man who knew how to enlist in his service better men than himself." The thinking public shall not soon forget the man who said: "It is a disgrace for a man to die rich." This should be comforting to the thousands who expect to

But with all of his goodness and greatness, I can but be reminded of Cornelius, who gave much alms to the people, yet had not complied with the simple conditions of the gospel. "Though I give all my goods to feed the poor, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing." And, "This is the love of God, that ye keep his commandments." Surely this involves obedience to the gospel.

The Divorce Evil.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

In former articles on "The Home and the Family" we have seen that anything that affects the general welfare of the home is a menace to society. There is no mistake that the divorce evil is a growing and alarming evil. It destroys the fundamental institution of society and is affecting for evil our present-day civilization. Those who are studying the welfare of the United States government have grave apprehensions of its great influence. We are told that the number of divorces in the United States is increasing three times as fast as the population, and that approximately one out of every twelve marriages ends in divorce. Within the twenty-year period, 1887-1906, nearly one million divorces were granted, and in forty per cent of these cases there were children involved. This means not only the breaking up of nearly a million homes, but also the lack of home influences for the vast number of children involved. The evil is increasing, as may be seen from court records and statistical reports. One of our daily papers in Nashville gave some interesting facts under the following headlines: "DIVORCE RUINS FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SIX HOMES HERE IN SIX MONTHS." This gives the number of divorces in Nashville for the first six months of 1919. Those who are familiar with the divorce situation say that the evil affects all classes of society. Some claim that the returning soldiers. suing for divorce, have augmented the number of cases. However, it is a most alarming question to the citizens of Nashville

Another article in a daily paper has this headline:

"1919 BIG DIVORCE YEAR." Under this headline we have the following facts concerning Cincinnati: Last year divorce cases occupied a third of the room on the Common Pleas Court dockets. Up to May 1919, the divorces occupy more than half of the space of this court. There had been four hundred and sixty-six divorce actions filed for the first four months of the present year. If something is not done to check the evil, what may we expect in a few more years? The number of marriages in proportion to the increase in population is decreasing, while the number of divorces is rapidly decreasing. It is easy to interpret these facts: the sin of lewdness and fornication is ominous and startling. We may reasonably expect that whatever so affects society will affect the church.

The United States has the unenviable reputation of leading the civilized world in the divorce evil. There are three great geographical centers of divorce in the United States—New England, the Central West States (including the Southern States), and the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast States. The Southern group of States shows the lowest proportion of divorces, notwithstanding the large negro population in the South; however, statistics show a rapid increase in the Southern States. I think that it is accurate to say that there is more Bible teaching done in the South than in any other section of our country, and that the Bible teaching has restrained, in a measure, this evil.

The divorce evil is greater among the Protestants than among the Catholics. This is due largely to the uncompromising attitude of the Roman Catholic Church against divorces. It is also observed that the number of divorces among the Protestants is greatest among those of no religious profession. This shows the effects of the Bible teaching upon this evil. It is time for all teachers of the Bible to awake from their indifference toward this subject and declare in no uncertain terms the teaching of the Bible upon this alarming evil. If there were no other reason for teaching the Bible, it would be greatly to the interest of our country and present-day civilization to have the Bible taught in order to restrain this deprayity.

Several causes have been assigned as the reason for the increase of divorces. The factory system of labor of girls and women is put down as one cause. The production has passed from the home to the factory. In earlier days the father farmed, the wife spun, and within the family circle were produced most of the necessities of life. To-day scarcely anything is produced in the home. Even the bread and other simple articles of food are bought instead of being made in the home; and if such continues, there will be very few girls and wives and mothers who can make good bread. The same may be said of all of the other necessities of the home. Home so often becomes merely a place in which to eat and sleep instead of a place of production. Of course, girls brought up in such a home as this cannot become good home-keepers.

The women of the wealthy class have nothing to do and live in idle ease; and this becomes a curse to society. Leisure time unprofitably employed saps the moral fiber far more than a hard-pressed existence. Work and industry are as essential to a strong moral character as they are to the accumulation of wealth. The entrance of women into the different professions of life have affected the home life and is productive of divorces. Again, the high standard of living has played its part in encouraging this evil. The wants and desires of people have increased faster than their income. Professional men are financially unable to meet all the obligations of a married life and are seeking to be released from its ties. Our new industrial system has resulted in an enormous growth of cities; and vice and immerality are so often associated with city life, and this has augmented the divorce evil.

Again, the rise of what is familiarly known as "individualism" has influenced the divorce evil; this is also known as the "Woman's Movement." One authority says: "Rising divorce rate reflects the growing freedom of the American women." The occupation of women in the factories, offices, and different professions has a tendency to make woman independent, and this causes her to look with less favor upon the marriage relation.

No stable family life can endure long without a religious basis; the history of all nations bears witness to this fact. The decay of religion in Rome was followed by an increase in divorces. We are told that new ethical conceptions of right and wrong are being formed and that we are witnessing the passing of the dogmatic age of religion; yet with this change comes an increase of divorce.

It is my purpose to follow this article with one on the Bible teaching on divorce,

Taking Care of the Poor and Needy. No. 2.

BY MORGAN H. CARTER.

We found eighty per cent of the homes untidy, unkept, and unattractive to normal individuals with any sense of the artistic. About seventy per cent of all individuals whom we met were personally untidy, and we have good reason to believe that eighty-five per cent of all houses which we visited were unsanitary. We found ninety-six per cent of the homes possessing no type of musical instrument, and the same per cent having no games or methods of amusement, save such games as can be introduced by individuals apart from any type of apparatus.

We believe these conditions are largely responsible for the prosperity of many cheap, unwholesome places of amusement and the breaking up of the home as the social center, especially among the dependent classes of our cities. Eighty-three per cent of the families live in houses which do not have adequate playground either at the front or rear; sixty per cent had no flowers either in the yard or potted plants in the house; six per cent lived in one room, fifty-nine per cent lived in two, twenty-eight per cent in three, and nine per cent in more. Forty-four per cent of these homes were located within three blocks of a public park. This is due to a degree by our investigation being conducted largely adjacent to the Addison Street Day Home, which is located near Watkins Park.

We find that much so-called "charity work" is done in an unsystematic manner, and that the mere giving to individuals what they seem to need for the moment is oftentimes injurious and never so thoroughly helpful as a constructive program of relief and education. We found no high-school graduates in our dependent class. We believe that the unproductive home is responsible very largely for present conditions, and that the restoration of the normal activities of the home wherein the whole family becomes responsible for the support of same and where the real necessities of life are produced will prove the only permanent solution of the present economic problem, which, in turn, produces the breaking up of homes and a general social unrest.

We found about seventy-five per cent of the adults to be members of some church, and yet seventy-two per cent of adults took little, if any, interest in any particular religious work, and a comparatively small per cent of children were receiving any definite type of religious education. The houses in which these people live are inadequate to the needs of a normal family, being to a large degree unsanitary, unpleasant, and without the necessary privacy that should attach itself to all homes and give them a unique individuality which they cannot otherwise possess.

From all facts gathered among the cases thus investigated I have reached the following conclusions:

First, there is a general need of reconstruction in our methods of dealing with dependent cases. We must see to it that deadbeats do not succeed, and that those who are really deserving be aided in such ways as are best adapted to their immediate needs; some should receive relief. others should be given loans payable on the installment plan. For some it is only necessary that they receive immediate employment, and others can be gotten on their feet by proper medical attention. The heavy hand of the court should be used in many cases of desertion, compelling the husband to furnish support. Our work along all of these lines must be constructive, tending toward the elimination of certain artificial economic conditions which have arisen in our society and are crushing out the lives of a large per cent of our people and causing much of the social unrest here, and, in addition, the spirit of anarchy and Bolshevism in other lands.

Secondly, we must combine our economic reconstruction with a definite educational program. Compulsory attendance laws must be enforced. Necessary laws and pensions must be provided in some cases for immediate relief, and public opinion must be raised that suitable housing conditions may be supplied at reasonable rates for the poor. These houses would be much better adapted to the needs of the poor were they erected on small plots of ground where garden and poultry yard could be developed and the cow and pigs could be kept. This would supply employment for the children, helping them along educational lines, and would make it possible for the mother to produce many of the necessities of the home, gradually reducing the cost of living and increasing the efficiency of the home, also offering a sufficient playground space for the children within their private dominion. But this can only be realized as the example is set by the people in the middle and higher classes. The problem of the dependent, therefore, resolves itself into the economic and social problem of restoring the productive home throughout all American society.

Furthermore, I recommend that proper recreations be planned and carried out by means of play-grounds, schools, and churches. Children will receive fundamental conceptions of right in properly guided, enthusiastic and interesting games suited to the various needs of boys and girls through childhood and youth. The constructive moral forces of these games can hardly be realized until we have actually experimented in these lines. We have thus far found that games largely tend to eliminate immorality and increase efficiency in study and build character.

Finally, I recommend that a better understanding between the church and eleemosynary institutions, all public charities, the public-school system, juvenile court, and the dependents be firmly established. Let each know the other and heartily cooperate in labor, prayer, contribution, and unselfish service, and let all come to know that there can be no financial, economic, or mere social reconstruction that will prove of real value, except as it is properly related to higher moral standards and realization of the fundamental truths of Christianity as revealed in the Fatherhood of God, the Sonship of Christ, and the brotherhood of man.

The Master Workman.

BY CLAUD F. WITTY.

What is your conception of the great Creator of the universe? Do you think of him as billions of miles away and with but little or no concern about the world we live in?

I like to think of him as a great Artist. Before our eyes he sets up a cloud for a canvas and with one quick stroke paints the rainbow; in another instant he takes the distant west for his easel and sketches the beauties of a sunset at sea; turning next to the hills and woodlands, he greets us with the dazzling colors of the autumn leaves, or perchance he pauses to shake his magic brush and leaves a meadow bedecked with wild flowers; next he is decorating the rosebud or making white the lilles of the valley; now he is putting a smile on the face of a baby and adding the blushing rose to the cheek of young womanhood; again, see him as he adds the sparkle to the diamond and gives color to the gay plumage of the wild birds, or with the frost for his pencil outlines the fern on the windowpanes of our homes.

Also, I like to think of him as the Master Workman of the ages.

In my mind I can see him using the storms, the earthquakes, and the volcanoes for his tools as he hews out the great mountain chains of earth, digs deep the beds of the rivers, and sets up bars and doors to the ocean, and says: "Hitherto shall thou come and no further, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed."

Also, I like to think of him as working with the different materials out of which so many useful things are made.

Take so simple a thing as water. During the stillness of the night he fashions it into the sparkling dewdrop and sets it on blushing flowers ready to greet us as we come forth to meet the new day. Of this same water he makes the tiny teardrop that lingers on the sleeping lids of the infant or rushes in torrents down the wrinkled cheeks of old age. Also it is this same water that he causes to sing and sparkle as it goes splashing and tumbling down the mountain side, or plunges and roars in its leap over Niagara's mighty falls, or rolls onward in its majestic sweep to join the mighty ocean, where it bears upon its proud bosom the commerce of the civilized world. It is likewise this same water that he drops down from the clouds in the form of refreshing rain, and, mixing it with the clods of the valley and seasoning it with the rays of sunshine, he
