OBITUARIES

Hendrix.

Brother Q. A. Hendrix, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hendrix, was born at Corinth, Ark., on March 30, 1888. Here on a farm with his parents he lived and toiled in lowly obscurity during his boyhood days. From a during his boyhood days. child he was taught the holy Scriptures by his godly father and mother. In 1902, under the preaching of Brother Stephens, he obeyed the gospel of Christ. In 1904 the family moved to Texas, near Abilene, where he finished his education in the Abilene Christian College, and also took some work in Simmons College, of that place. When he had successfully taught three years in the public schools of Texas, he re-turned to his old home, where he farmed and taught for two more years. On October 20, 1911, he was happily married to Miss Lillian Dyer, a Christian lady, who was ever to him a kind and loving wife. After spending two years near Abilene, they returned to the place that gave them birth, to make their final home. In 1914 he graduated in a business college in Texarkana. The remainder of his days he spent in the schoolroom and on a farm. The church was first and above all with him. The good that he did was not interred with his bones, for he had woven into the lives of his pupils and others thoughts and feelings, rich, beautiful, grand, and noble, which will tend to make their after lives brighter and better. On November 14, 1918, the death angel came, and as he silently breathed his last and gently closed his eves in death he bade farewell to his dear little wife whom he loved so well. His soul was wafted away on the wings of the sweet angel of peace to the home above, where it shall rove forever in the beautiful sunlight of love.

Robison.

Alice Robison, wife of W. S. Robison, was born on November 6, 1860, and died on January 13, 1919. She was married to W. S. Robison on January 9, 1877. To this union ten children were born, of whom six are still living-one son and five daughters, all members of the "one body." in life Sister Robison obeyed the gospel, and she strived to live as God directs. After the conversion of her husband she planned and worked for the purchase of a lot and the erection of a house in which the ancient gospel could be preached and God worshiped as taught by the Bible. Out of her faithful work stands a house (Burrus Chapel) and a congregation including all of her children and many friends that were near and dear to her. Very few of the young members know of the labor, prayers, patience, and zeal of this good woman, now gone, in bullding up the dear old church of God at that place. After rearing six of her own children to be grown, her son lost his wife, leaving him with three small children, the youngest a girl. She took them into her home and patiently, lovingly set about the task of rearing these grandchildren, who have sustained a double loss in her death-two mothers gone. Sister

Robison was a good wife, a good mother, a good neighbor, and a good Christian. In her death, the loss to her husband, children, grandchildren, the community, and the congregation at Burrus Chapel is great. All keenly and sensibly feel the great loss that her death means to them. While she quietly sleeps in the dark, cold grave, her work follows on and will increase with the coming years, and after a while she can fully enjoy the fruits of all-her labor in that sweet home where sad parlings come not. We "sorrow not, even as the rest, who have no hope," but hope to meet her in that place where Christ has gone to prepare for them that love him. While complant these few lines to her many penning these few lines to her memory the tears well up in my eyes and my heart is touched by her death, and my prayers and sympathy go out to her heartbroken family.

JOHN R. WHILIAMS.

Cathey. " "Death is the king of terror" unto the unprepared; no hope of future happiness adds sorrow to sorrow for the living and the departed. Not so when death claims a devoted, conse-crated child of God. To the mourners there is great comfort. "Sorrow not as those who have no hope." "Grief as those who have no hope." "Grief endureth for the night, but joy cometh in the morning." "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." It is simply passing from a house of clay to mansions above; the redemption of the body from corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God; the crossing from a wilderness of corrow to the from a wilderness of sorrow to the heavenly Canaan; the inheriting of all things; the time when all tears are wiped away; the exchange of the weak, dishonorable, corruptible, mortal body for one of power, glory, honor, in-corruptible and immortal. This we believe will be the everlasting experience of Sister Alma Cathey, wife of Brother E. L. Cathey, whose end came on January 17, 1919. She was thirty years of age, obeyed the gospel at twelve, mar-ried Brother Cathey seven years back, and leaves a little girl some two years old, her mother, one brother, and one sister. Her memory is cherished as one of the best of God's children who have lived in Fort Worth, Texas. She bore the reputation of being gentle in manner, humble in spirit, and un-selfish in life. Consequently her influ-ence for good was great and her friends and admirers were to the ex-tent of her acquaintances. A busy, brief, useful life is her bequest to the world. What better could she have left? From our viewpoint, it would have been best for her to remain longer here, in her family, church, and community; but surely not so, else she would have. However, we rejoice in the consolation that all is well evermore with her. Surely one with her attributes and well-ordered life finds the celestial host singing her welcome home. A large body of friends assem-bled in the church auditorium, weeping together, sympathizing with each other, and especially with her hus-band, mother, brother, sister, and her little daughter, Leona Birchfield Ca-they. To live in-obedience to her last request means a happy meeting whither she has gone. May the Lord help all so to do. J. W. DUNN.

DRUGGISTS! VICK'S VAPORUB SHORTAGE OVERCOME AT LAST

The Deal Scheduled for Last November, Which Was Postponed on Account of the Influenza Epidemic, Is Now Reinstated-Good During the month of March

OVER ONE MILLION JARS OF VAPORUB PRODUCED EACH WEEK

It is with pride that we announce to the drug trade that the shortage of Vick's VapoRub, which has lasted since last October, is now overnome. Since January 1 we have been running our laboratory twenty-three and a half hours out of every twenty-four. Last week we shipped the last of our back orders; and retail druggists, therefore, are no longer requested to order in small quantities only.

NOVEMBER DEAL REINSTATED

This deal, which we had expected to put on last November and which had to be postponed on account of the shortage of VapoRub, is reinstated for the month of March. This allows a discount of ten per cent on shipments from jobbers' stock of quantities of from one to four gross. Five per cent of this discount is allowed by the jobber and five per cent

We advise the retail druggists to place their orders immediately, so that the jobbers will be able to get prompt shipments to them

THANKS OF THE PUBLIC DUE THE DRUG TRADE DURING THE INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC

The thanks of the American public are certainly due the entire drug trade-retail, wholesale, and manufacturing-for what they accomplished during the re-cent influenza epidemic. The war caused a shortage of physicians, nurses were almost impossible to obtain, the demand on the drug trade was unexpected and overwhelming, and to this demand they responded nobly. Retail druggists kept open day and night and slept where they dropped behind the prescription counter. Wholesale druggists called their sales-men off the road to help fill orders; hundreds wired us to ship Vick's VapoRub by the quickest route, regardless of expense.

A TREMENDOUS JOB TO INCREASE OUR PRODUCTION

In this emergency we have tried to do our part. We scoured the country for raw materials—our traffic manager spent his days riding freight cars in; we shipped raw materials in carload lots by express, and pleaded with manufacturers to increase their deliveries to us.

But it was a slow process. Some of our raw materials are produced only in Japan; supplies in this country were low, and shipments required three months to come from the Far East. Then we had come from the Far East. Then we had to recruit and train skilled labor. We brought our salesmen into the factory and trained them as foremen. We invented new machinery, and managed to install it on Christmas day, so as not to interfere with our daily production.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-THREE JARS OF VAPORUB EVERY MIN-UTE DAY AND NIGHT

By January I we had everything ready to put on our night shift, and since then our laboratory has been running day and night. To feed our automatic machines, which drop out one hundred and forty-three jars of VapoRub a minute, or one million and eighty thousand weekly, has required a force of five hundred people. Our Café Department, created for the benefit of these workers, served seven thousand meals during the mouth of January alone.

THIRTEEN MILLION JARS OF VAPORUB DISTRIBUTED SINCE OCTOBER

An idea of the work we have accomplished this fall may be given by our production figures—13,028,976 jars of VapoRub manufactured and distributed since last October—one jar for every two families in the entire United States.

During the influenza epidemic Vick's VapoRub was used as an external ap-plication in connection with the physipictation in connection with the physi-cian's treatment, and thousands of peo-ple, imable to obtain a doctor, relied on Vick's almost exclusively.

A Challenge.

In the confusion and manifest bewilderment of the world the church has its chance. It is the day for broad thinking, resolute planning, devotion to the larger good. The church must accept the challenge of sacrifice and carry forward the enterprise at whatever cost. The men in the army of liberty have taught us that on many a field. O, church of Christ, they are remaking the map of the world! What shall be the boundaries of the kingdom of God?-Luther B. Wilson.

Astounding Preventative for Influenza.

In one department of the Iron Mountain Railway, of Texarkana, in which forty men were employed, twenty of them commenced the use of Hawley's Olntment at the outset of the 1918 influenza epidemic, every man of whom remained at his post every day during the period following, while the other twenty all suffered attacks of the disease that confined them to their homes.

Hundreds of other such tests have shown Hawley's Ointment to be an astounding preventative for influenza, and equally useful during treatment of the disease. The influenza bacillusis a germ which attacks the lungs, being breathed in through the nose and throat, the infection developing chiefly in the nasal and bronchial secretions. Hawley's Ointment is a prophylactic preventative for influenza. It keeps the nostrils thoroughly sterilized, killing the influenza bacilli as they are inhaled. Hawley's Ointment is a dependable treatment for colds, cold sores, coughs, croup, early stages of pneumonia, and generally for bronchial troubles. Its base is readily absorbed, and it, therefore, does not inflame the nostrils when applied therein, as do most ointments having only a vaseline base.

Beginning on Wednesday night, February 12, and continuing over Sunday night, I was with the preachers in the get-together meeting at Jackson Street Church, in Nashville. The meeting was well attended and a grand success. Many good things out of the old Book were presented.

Brother T. Q. Martin preached for us on the fourth Lord's day, in the afternoon, on the subject of "Forgiveness." It was a noble effort. All enjoyed the sermon and say for him to come again. Brother M. Keeble spoke at the morning service, Brother Harris at 7:30 P.M.

I am very thankful to the congregations and the brethren and sisters for their contributions for the months of January and February. I hope the work will still be remembered by all.

This writing leaves me at Sugar Grove, Ky. We had two good services here on the first Lord's day in March, morning and night, with encouraging attendance, attention, and interest. We asked to remain over to the second Lord's day and night. 'The little band here seems to be moving on fairly well. Important Questions.

BY W. S. LONG.

When the few brethren set their hearts to build a house of worship in the city of Washington, some questions of very much importance came to the elders. These questions were just and right, and I am glad I can answer them so favorably.

The first question was: "Will the deed contain the restrictive clause?" Yes, indeed. The property will be so safeguarded by the clause in the deed that no one can use the house only those who worship as the New Testament directs.

"What will the building cost?" In answer to this question, I will say that in times when the prices for material and labor are normal we could secure the lot and erect a good house in keeping with the surroundings for about fourteen thousand dollars; but, as we all well know, everything is very high and will be for a long time to come, and for that reason the build-Ing the brotherhood ought to have in our national capital will cost in the neighborhood of twenty-five thousand dollars. We gain nothing in getting a lot in an obscure place and on a street not well known. It is far better to pay double and get a well-located lot. Neither do we act wisely to build a cheap house, one of which we would afterwards be ashamed. While we are building, let us do our work well and build a house that will be a credit to the cause we love. A good house of worship proves that we mean to do something worth while. It also proves that we believe in giving God the best. A sister at McMinnville, Tenn., in a letter to us, urges that we do this work well, saying that, as it is to be the first house of worship for the pure gospel in the greatest center of the United States, we need to use not less than thirty-five thousand dollars in order to have what will be needed in the future. She sent some money along to help. If we had three thousand women like this one, we would soon have good houses of worship in many cities.

"When are you going to begin building?" We hope to begin the building In the early spring. If the brotherhood will fellowship the good work. as they should and are able, we will not let the workmen stop till it is completed. The sooner you help, the sooner the church of Christ will have a house of worship in Washington. We are young and weak here, yet we are giving of our daily means more than old congregations that will outnumber us by far. If we were able to build the house alone, we would not call on any one. We are going to do what we can; and as the Bible says, "Bear ye one another's burdens," we

Grand Saline, March 10,-We had two very splendid services here yester-Brother Jernigan preached to a full house both morning and evening. At the evening service three made the confession and two were restored. To-day, at the water, another young lady made the confession and was baptized with the others. Brother Jernigan and Brother C. Nocona, March 6,-I have just returned from Alex, Okia., where I met the great Freewill debater, Elder W. A. Hearon, Brother R. Thompson had engaged him a few-nights' sermonabout fashion; but he and I hooked up on feet washing in the church, the name, and the new birth. He was "dead easy" all the time, and I am certain he will never be induced to meet another gospel preacher. He is a very nice man in debate, never stooped to mud-slinging till the last night, when he called me a "Campbellite." I came alive then, and he took it back and apologized before he was allowed to go a step further with his speech. They do not put that over me. Brethren R. Thompson and C. B. Glasgow live there. They are good preachers who should be kept busy. I go to Marietta, Okla., this week for a meeting. Owing to having a meeting called off, I have time for a meeting beginning on the fourth Lord's day in August and running three Sundays. Who wants that time? I would like to go to Arkansas for that time, but will work anywhere. The work here is fine and we have great hopes for better things. We had a fine class in the Bible last night.-Tice Elkins.

Edifying as the Need May Be

The Overdignified.

As a rule, we do not admire the man who is overdignified in the sense that he seems to be conscious of superior attainments, so that we speak of him as "standing on his dignity." Children are afraid of such a character and grown folks do not warm up to him. We much prefer the society of one who is "as plain as an old shoe." Abraham Lincoln was a very tall man. When a friend jokingly asked him one day how big a man's feet should be if he were seven feet tall, the great commoner said: "I don't know exactly how big his feet should be, but they should touch the ground." Certainly we appreciate the man whose feet touch the ground of common human interests. The dignity that makes a man unsympathetic is to be deplored, if not despised.

Righteous Dignity.

But there is a righteous dignity which every man should possess for the reason that he is a man originally made in the image of God; such a dignity as is not the sign of arrogance or false pride, but the sign of a thankful and appreciative heart.

Perhaps the best idea of man's true dignity may be obtained by turning back to the book of Genesis and reading afresh the story of the creation. After creating the worlds and suns, the plants and animals, the Almighty paused as if the task now before him called for great care and deliberation. "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness," he said. We make a serious mistake if we associate the idea of the image altogether with the body. I did this when I was a child, and was very much confused. I could not understand how God's body could be so wonderfully perfect if our imperfect bodies were copies of his. We should remember that God is a Spirit, and therefore there can be no great likeness of our material bodies to his spiritual body. The real likeness is found in the soul of man, which is especially in God's image, his reasoning mind, his free will, his self-consciousness, his conscience, his feeling after God, his capacity for holiness.

A class had been studying United States history. "And now what do you think of Lincoln?" the teacher asked. An immigrant boy who had a thoughtful mind answered and said: "He was born in a dirt house, but he wasn't a dirt man." There is a fine thought in the boy's answer. We must not confine ourselves to the thought of this tenement of clay, if we would find the real image of our Maker.

Physical and Mental Dignity.

Man has dignity physically. He is above the beasts of the field in his erectness and in his power of speech, two particulars which mark him as Godlike. God might have used a million elements in the creation, but, as a matter of fact, he used less than a hundred, and most of them are in our bodies. No wonder a man of great scientific knowledge said to a company of students: "You are made of the best stuff in the universe. There is nothing better anywhere." David said: "I will give thanks unto thee; for I am fearfully and wonderfully made: wonderful are thy works; and that my soul knoweth right well." (Ps. 139: 14.)

Man has dignity mentally. We note the fact that when he was created he was made a man in the complete sense of the word. He did not come up from a lower level of organisms, but came from the hand of God a perfect human being, intelligent, possessed of a moral and spiritual nature and capable of fellowship with his Creator. God acknowledged his supremacy over all his created works when he made man to "have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the heavens, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." Furthermore, the wisdom of God has been fully demonstrated by the way in which man has exercised this dominion. An earthly father is never better pleased than when his son proves himself capable of following him in business, taking up his work with zeal and success and revealing the fact that he is a "chip of the old block." The same feeling must be in the heart of our Heavenly Father. In our generation man has won dominion over the air with wireless telegraphy and the aëroplane, over the water with the dreadnaught and the submarine, and has at last reached both poles of the earth. In the material world, at least, man is proving worthy of his divine sonship, Moral Dignity.

Man has dignity morally. Better than anything I can say along this line is a quotation from the deep-thinking Carlyle: "He is of the earth, but his thoughts are with the stars. Mean and petty his wants and desires; yet they serve a soul exalted with grand and glorious alms, with immortal longings, with thoughts which sweep the heavens and wander through eternity. A pigmy standing on the outward crest of this small planet, his far-reaching spirit stretches outward to the infinite, and there alone finds rest."

Contrastively speaking, astronomy places man as an infinitesimal speck in a vast universe. I have never ridden in an aëroplane, but I have been told by some who have that, viewed from a high altitude, a human being closely resembles an ant. Geology places man as an atom in the midst of unnumbered worlds of varying altitude; biology reveals him as a gasping breath in the midst of the clutching fingers of death; but when we come into the arena of thought, we find him to be a ruler, an earth lord, a king.

Next week I will write of how man loses his dignity.

A Campaign to Raise Money for the Improvement of David Lipscomb College.

BY E. A. E.

This college has been in operation for more than a quarter of a century. The good it has accomplished cannot be measured by "the flight of years." Eternity alone can do this.

The money to be raised by this campaign is for the erection of a new girls' home and other much-needed improvements of the college buildings and grounds.

The present girls' home is not adequate in any particular to meet the demands now made upon it and to accommodate the young ladies knocking at its doors for admission.

The directors of this college have its greatest good—and the greatest good, therefore, of the youth of the country—at heart.

Realizing most deeply the need of that education—really of true education—which will prepare the young for the greatest usefulness in life and help to build for them the strongest and purest characters, Brethren Lipscomb, J. A. Harding, and other generous men founded this school. A lasting and sacred obligation has been left upon its directors to guard and carry out the purpose for which it was established. Not only so, but this obligation rests upon all, at least, who consider true education the same as these men did.

The main purpose of this school, with a complete and thorough collegiate course, equal to the best, with all that a collegiate education means, without going into detail, is to teach the Bible as a textbook to all pupils alike, and to teach it in all its parts and benefits and blessings: its history: its literature; its characters; its business principles -industry, economy, diligence, just weights and measures, uprightness, integrity, fair dealing, and common honesty; its missions and proper spheres of man and woman; its teaching on marriage and divorce, home building, duties of parents and children, man's duty to God and his fellow men, purity of life, and "all things that pertain unto life and godliness." The Bible is a far greater book on industry and conservation of food and clothing and energy and time than one that any government on earth has ever or can ever put forth. Why not go directly to the Bibleand, therefore, to the authority of God-for these lessons, and practice them at all times because God teaches them and because they promote the greatest happiness? these things named should be taught and practiced as the will of God, whether required by any human government or not. The Bible is the greatest everyday guide for the everyday affairs of life in the world or that can ever be in the world, as well as a revelation of the life that is to come. To teach the Bible in school is not to teach human philosophy and theology, human dogmas and speculations, or to emphasize any one part of the will of God more than all other parts of it.

It is grievous to be forced to think that many "teachers of Israel" seem not to know what teaching the Bible means.

TRUE EDUCATION

We use the term "true education" advisedly, knowing that all education in the popular meaning of the word is not true education. With all the learning and wisdom, culture and efficiency of the world, that education which only refines pride and vanity, worldliness and wickedness, without lifting people out of them and above them; which tends to loosen the sacred marriage bond and legalize adultery; which increases the love of money and greed of gain; which only whets the appetite and sharpens the wits of thieves and robbers and renders gigantic fraud and astute villainy respectable; which makes more barbarous and brutal the passions and lusts of the flesh; which intensifies ambition for conquests and power; which devastates prosperous and peaceful countries and destroys thousands of quiet and happy homes; which drives millions of harmless youths, in whose tender hearts is only good will to men, to the butchery of battle fields, as so many hogs and cattle to the slaughterhouse, and compels them to take the lives of as many more innocent young men; and which drenches continents with human blood and fills the earth with poor cripples and widows and orphans, is only false and even corrupt education.

There is a wisdom which is earthly, sensual, and devilish. (See James 3: 15.)

Mr. Balfour said about two years ago, in substance, that when he was younger he thought that learning and culture and efficiency meant civilization, but that he had learned better. Long ago I learned that men may be educated to the highest degree in the popular meaning of education and remain great rascals and scoundrels. This education never changes the hearts of men, but only renders them the more efficient for accomplishing their base purposes.

The Germans furnish a strong and very convincing demonstration of all this. They were looked upon as the best-educated—the most scientific, the most skillful, and the most efficient—people in the world. There was but little illiteracy among them. But with all their learning, they cut the Bible to suit their philosophy and flooded the colleges and universities of the world with their infidelity. The blood runs cold when one reads of their inhuman and satanic deeds.

The allies will find that it was much easier to overcome Germany in mortal combat than it will be to save the world from her false education and infidelity.

It is a sad comment on education when the best-educated nation on earth plunged the other greatest and best-educated nations into the greatest and worst war the world has ever known.

True education is more than physical and mental development to the highest degree, more than scientific discovery, more than the wisdom of this world; it is also the training of the conscience and heart in the development of the noblest purposes and desires for the greatest good. Men who do not realize and act upon their responsibility to God and their fellow men are not truly educated. No man lives unto himself. Man's supreme duty is to God:

to fear God and to keep his commandments is the top rung in the ladder of true education. This controls all other duties and holds men in their true relationship to one another as the law of gravitation holds all worlds in their proper places. The world, for instance, can never have world-wide and permanent peace until the purposes and wills and hearts of people have been educated to that glorious end, and that can never be done without the Bible and the Prince of Peace as the ideal. At least a sufficient number of peoples must be thus educated to influence and leaven all the rest. Nations cannot have military training and teach war and instill the spirit of war in schools and otherwise and have permanent peace; they must teach peace on earth and good will to men in order to have permanent peace. God speed the day!

Right-thinking people know there was never greater need for true education than now, and we are glad to think there was never a greater demand for it. Shall not schools be built and maintained which furnish the facilities for such education?

That education, with all its culture and refinement and grace, music and art and literature, which instills into young ladies the spirit of worldliness and earthly glory and which trains them out of woman's God-ordained sphere and mission, is false and dangerous to the homes and good of mankind.

David Lipseomb College desires and works to send forth young men of good characters, rooted and grounded in right principles and prepared for the greatest usefulness in whatever honest callings they may choose to follow, and young ladies refined and cultured, with meek and quiet spirits, and fitted to fill the sphere in life appointed by their Creator There is no character so attractive, so admirable, and so influential as woman in her place, adorned by the graces of Christian womanhood.

WILL YOU HELP US TO ENLARGE THIS COLLEGE?

The business management of the college property has been good and successful from the beginning. The directors of the college-seven men-and the faculty of the college are different bodies or boards of men. The faculty has not the control and management of the college property. The ground, consisting of seventy acres, all the college buildings, and all property whatever belonging to the college are held in trust and managed by the directors for the good of humanity. No man has any individual financial interest whatever in the college. There are no stockholders. It is not an individual enterprise. Brother Lipscomb, who gave the entire seventy acres of ground, his private dwelling, other money besides, and his teaching and time for almost twenty-five years, and all other generous ones who contributed to the building of the college, gave all to and for the public good. All money contributed now will be for this same purpose.

The teachers in the college receive their support from the tuition of the pupils. No money contributed goes to pay teachers. All, as stated, goes to the improvement of the buildings and for the good it may do. The directors do all their work cheerfully and free of charge. Nothing contributed will be of any financial benefit to them; all the property of the school has been generously donated and deeded and chartered for the good of the young men and young women of the country, and especially for those of moderate means. The rich, if they choose, can send to colleges and universities anywhere.

The directors, after mature deliberation, decided to make this appeal for money to make these improvements. The whole country has learned to respond so cheerfully and in such large amounts to other worthy causes that they feel well assured that all those who stand for true education will respond liberally to this great cause.

To erect a modern girls' home with all modern improvements and conveniences and to make other necessary improvements, the directors estimate, will require fifty thousand dollars.

They think best at present to divide the country somewhat into sections, request some persons in each section to take charge of that section, and to make a "drive" for the required amount. All should be willing to help to accomplish this.

Statements will be made from time to time and all necessary information given.

Prompt acknowledgment will be made of all donations and pledges.

Prof. H. Leo Boles, president of the college, is treasurer of the building committee, and all donations or pledges should be sent to him, David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn.

Pledges for future donations, Liberty Loan bonds or war stamps will be gladly accepted.

Enoch-Translated.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

The earth is a vast cemetery; around us are the graves of the millions of earth. The poet has expressed it this way: "All that tread the globe are but a handful to the tribes that slumber in its bosom." If tombstones had been erected over all the graves of the dead, there would be little room for anything else upon the earth; the continents of the earth would only be the foundation for the "silent city of the dead." The first man, Adam, is there, outside the gates of Eden; Abel is there, in the field of his martyrdom and glory; Seth is there, in a piece of hallowed ground; Enos is there, Kenan is there, Methuselah is there; but Enoch is not there. "He was not, for God took him." These words ring through the desert and echo through the tabernacle; they inspire through the exile and give hope to all the prophets.

The life that had been awalk with God has now ended at the throne of God; this life of faith and holiness was so near the life of glory that it has been taken to be glorified. What encouragement and consolation this furnishes to all who are now walking with him! By what process Enoch was translated we are not told. I am not interested in any of the dreams of the visionaries nor the fables of impostors respecting the manner that God disposed of Enoch. I do not even respect the bold fiction of Mahomet, the false prophet, or the wild conjectures of Jewish rabbi. It is enough for me to know that God took him, or that he was in the care of Jehovah. He walked with God here, and he is with God up there. He was translated from earth to heaven. "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and he was not found, because God translated him: for he hath had witness borne to him that before his translation he had been well pleasing unto God." (Heb. 11: 5.) His faith is such a potent factor in his character that it has transformed him into the likeness of God; he is no stranger in that world, as he had made the acquaintance with God and walked with him in this world. He is well prepared for the eternal abode in the presence of God.

We are not told what changes in body were necessary for his translation, but we are told that he did not see or suffer the pangs of death. Paul, in discussing the resurrection, describes a mystery. He tells us: "We all shall not sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." (1 Cor. 15: 51, 52.) Some of God's people will be living at the resurrection and will be translated or carried to heaven. "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we that are alive, that are left unto the coming of the Lord, shall in no wise precede them that are fallen asleep." (1 Thess. 4: 15.) Those who are alive at the coming of the Lord and are living as did Enoch, pleasing unto God, will be taken, or translated, as was Enoch. This should be the prayerful desire of all who love his appearing.

It is said that Enoch is the universal symbol of man's immortal hope. Christ said: "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." (John 11: 26.) The fullfledged hope of Christian immortality is typified in the translation of Enoch. The personality and translation of Enoch becomes the center around which cluster the bright prospects and beautiful hope of the patriarchs. The translation of Enoch begets in the minds of the patriarchs the passion for eternal life. To live forever, to see no corruption, "to keep undimmed life's pristine glow," is the aspiration which arises in the heart of every one who learns of Enoch, and it is the aspiration which permeates the morning and the evening of the Jewish dispensation. It is not the waking from the sleep of death which stimulated the hope of the Jew, but rather the hope that the soul will never sleep-the hope that the soul will see its "Promised Land" before it sees death.

Scholars have usually recognized three dispensations in studying the Bible. These dispensations help to make clear the proper division of the Word of Truth. The first is known as "the patriarchal dispensation." This dispensation began with the creation of man and continued over a period of about twenty-five hundred years to the giving of the law upon Mount Sinai. The second dispensation, familiarly known as "the Jewish dispensation," began with the giving of the law upon Mount Sinai and continued for a period of about fifteen hundred years to the death of Christ, until the law was taken away, nailed to the cross. The third dispensation, commonly called "the Christian dispensation," began with the death of Christ and will continue to the second advent of the Savior. The patriarchal dispensation has been called, because of a lack of revelation on the future of man, "the starlight age;" the Jewish dispensation, because of a fuller revelation, has been called "the moonlight age;" and the Christian dispensation, because of the fullness of the glorious light of the gospel, has been called "the sunlight age." Jesus is called "the Sun of righteousness;" he lighteth every man that cometh into the world. Enoch lived back in the starlight age, and walked with God, and was not, for God took him. He was taken from earth and translated into the paradise of God above, thus pointing man to the life which is to come. He becomes one of the great standard bearers of immortality and the future home of man. Elijah lived in the midst of the Jewish dispensation, or moonlight age, and was carried to heaven in a chariot of fire, thus again pointing the human family heavenward and emphasizing the fact that there is a life beyond this life. Again, at the beginning of the Christian dispensation, or sunlight age, Christ arose from the dead and ascended to the Father, Each dispensation has its standard bearer of immortality and eternal life. This is mentioned that we may see the relation Enoch sustains in the revelation of God to man, There are some points which need to be noticed as we study the history of God's people. Enoch, Elijah, and Christ serve as mileposts along the journey of life for the generations of earth, pointing all who travel life's mortal pathway to the eternal destiny of the human race. Enoch was taken from the walks of men and translated; Elijah, likewise, while busy in the affairs of life, ascended to glory; but Christ, who died, arose from the dead and ascended to the Father. A servant of God of ancient days had asked the question: "If a man die, shall he live again?" It seems that they knew from the example of Enoch that there was another life which could be enjoyed, if God should translate one before death; but if one should die, the question as to whether there was any hope for him was a perplexing one that dimmed their hope and staggered their belief. Christ has answered that question and demonstrated the fact that though a man should die and go into the grave, yet, if he has walked with God, he shall live again.

Let Us Fill the Fanning Orphan School With Worthy Needy Girls.

BY E. A. E.

We publish the following from Brother A. N. Trice, that our readers may see what is being done and that they may be encouraged to do still more:

Dear Brother Elam: I inclose herewith a list of donations received for the Fanning Orphan School since last report, amounting to $802.11. This, I am glad to report, will be sufficient to about meet our present obligations.

On behalf of the school and the Board of Trustees, wish to express our sincere thanks to all of the donors for the help they have given, and we pray that the good work may continue. The fact that we are about out of debt does not mean that the school will not need further help. In order to keep the institution filled to its capacity with poor orphan girls who have no other means of obtaining an education, considerable help will be needed; and should we take on a sufficient number to fill the school to its capacity, it would quickly bring us in debt again unless we do get the necessary help.

I believe that if the readers of the Gospel Advocate were fully acquainted with the work being done at the Fanning Orphan School, they would heartily support the institution in maintaining enough pupils to fill it to its capacity.

Yours fraternally,

A. N. TRIC

The names of the donors and the amounts given are as Charlotte Avenue Church, Nashville, Tenn., $23.80; Belmont Avenue Church, Nashville, Tenn., $100; B. H. McCain, Coldwater, Miss., $20.30; church at Lynchburg, Cam, Colowater, Miss., $20.30; church at Lynchourg, Tenn., $100; Mrs. Gertrude Sims, Christiana, Tenn., $1; Ephesus Church, Wilson County, Tenn., $5; "A Brother and Wife," $5; Mrs. Ben C. Barry, Gallatin, Tenn., $10; readers of the Gospel Advocate, $500; Charlotte Avenue Church, $22.01; Miss Emma Martin, Wilmington, N. C., $5; Mrs. J. N. Hairston, Huntsville, Ala., $10. Total, $202.11 $802.11.

We are very grateful for the prompt replies to our appeals. The good Lord bless all! As Brother Trice says, the school should be filled with the worthy poor girls and orphans for which it was established. The income of the school for the present can support only about thirty or thirty-five girls at the limit. More funds would enable it to carry more girls. There are enough friends of orphans to furnish the necessary money.

In addition to this, for one hundred dollars per session any one person or congregation can keep a girl in the school, and any congregation that makes the effort can raise the hundred dollars.

If any good person or congregation wishes to keep a girl in school and has not the girl, the school can find one, since there are so many who ask for the benefits and blessings of the school.

Take this matter up at once, and have all arrangements made before the fall term opens.

Address A. N. Trice, care Washington Manufacturing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

The sum of our happiness and our perfection in this life and the next consists in perfect conformity of our will with the divine will.-Selected.

We are requesting the churches to make a liberal contribution to the Tennessee Orphans' Home on the first Lord's day in April. "The gift without the giver is bare." Is there an urgent need and demand for gifts to care for orphan children? Then give, but give also for your "own soul's sake." In giving you are answering the need of your own soul.

The Bishop-Vincent Mission.

BY W. W. FREEMAN.

Some of us will not read this article. We loathe the idea of giving to mission work. Others will delight to read of the progress and the needs and will give "once and again" to the work. Are you enthusiastic over Christian missions? I wish we could always rejoice in doing what we can to spread the gospel of eternal life to dying humanity.

Sister Vincent and Brother Hiratsuka reported a choice lot where they wanted it that could have been had for thirty-two hundred and fifty dollars. One thousand dollars is at interest in a Tokyo bank. The Japanese brethren will raise two hundred and fifty dollars. Brother Yokoo, a faithful elder there, will lend five hundred dollars without interest. I understand that Brother Vincent has five hundred dollars. This leaves one thousand dollars. To date I have one hundred and ninety-seven dollars and eighty cents. Brother Janes likely has a small amount. You see what we need more. Now let us have it. If you have nothing, perhaps you can earn a nice sum soon and help. There are hundreds able to write a check for the required amount or a large part of it.

But the worst is yet to come. The latest from Japan is that the best location is lost because the necessary cash amounts to close the bargain was not available and the lot went to other people. Another lot may cost five hundred dollars more; so, including the loan, we need two thousand dollars. Brother Hiratsuka writes: "Our earnest desire is this: Please you raise the money and send to us, then we will keep it in the One Hundred Bank, in which we keep our money from Brother Vincent; and when we find the suitable lot, we will buy it." It takes cash to close a deal should they have a chance at a part on time.

Finally, reader, note this from Brother Hiratsuka: "Please tell us the good words for the plan for the lot and the new building. You know the heathen people are going to do their goodness. But let us buy a suitable lot and build the house of God. This is my earnest prayer through my future life." If this spirit from a native preacher, tried and true, does not move our hearts, we are past feeling and are hopeless objects of mission effort ourselves.

My salary as a teacher in a Christian school is moderate, but not more than half what I could get elsewhere. To begin with, wife and I have tithed it as an offering to help in the school work proper. We give about a dollar a week to the regular contribution. We have bought bonds and stamps and have helped every call for aid. We feel like giving fifty dollars to finish on the lot and to put up a house. The future is not clear, but we shall await it with confidence.

Now, brethren and sisters, there is no need for me to talk of the needs, the good done and the bright prospects, or of the scripturalness of the plea or the plan. What I want is your help to establish this work. It should be no burden on any one for us to raise ten thousand dollars when others are raising hundreds or millions for denominational work. If the funds do not come, it is a sign of apostasy and dead faith. I believe the brethren will do more if they are told more, but I want to see my confidence made good now. All gifts are reported monthly.

Since last report of funds for the Bishop-Vincent Mission in Japan, made on December 5, the following funds have come:

For the lot: From V. Celsor, White Oak, Tenn., $7.10; C. C. Chenault, Old Union, Tenn., $11.50; Mrs. M. A. Davis, Kansas, $5; K. S. Mills, Cedar Springs, Ky., $22. Previously reported, $152.20. Total, $197.80.

Regular expenses: From K. F. Potter, McMinnville, Tenn., $25; L. L. Wells, Parkland, Ky., $14; S. Y. Thornton, Lamine, Mo., $19.35; Mrs. Lizzie Beals, Kentucky, $1; Christian Leader, $1; J. R. Cummins, Pennsylvania, $4; Dayton, Ohio, $14; H. Potter, Rich Pond, Ky., $4.06; Earl Hodson, Alabama, $5; I. H. Grimes, Woodsfield, Ohio, $3; Fairplay, Mo., $25. Total, $115.41.

Forwarded to Brother Hiratsuka, $50; forwarded to O. D. Bixler, for Vincent, $60. Balance, $5.41.

From the above figures we see that only a tithe of the fund for the lot has been raised in two months. I fear we shall not keep up the present rate, which is too slow, anyway. Do what you can to raise this fund soon. My address is Abilene, Texas.

While fully in sympathy with the movement to help the war sufferers in foreign countries, some of the contributors to this fund have expressed a preference to have their contributions used for the care and education of orphan children here in the United States. This is a very praise-worthy motive, and I am in position to carry out their wishes. Hardly a week passes but what some poor widow calls or writes to this office asking assistance in the care of her dependent children. We always investigate such cases, and most of them are deserving. The Fanning Orphan School and the Tennessee Orphans' Home are providing for many such dependents, but they are not in position to care for them all. If you wish your contribution used for this purpose, kindly designate it "Home Orphans' Fund."

So far as practical, our orphans in this country should be placed in Christian homes. It would mean a blessing, not only to the orphans, but to those adopting them. If some kind-hearted reader is moved to take this step, I will do what I can to secure for them the names of available children.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

We are requesting the churches to make a liberal contribution to the Tennessee Orphans' Home on the first Lord's day in April. "The gift without the giver is bare." Is there an urgent need and demand for gifts to care for orphan children? Then give, but give also for your "own soul's sake." In giving you are answering the need of your own soul.

Training Little Children

Article 34.

Let Us Not Cripple Our Children's Self-Dependence and Initiative. For City Boys, Four Months of Camping Out in the Summer Provide Much Wholesome Development.

I sometimes wonder what the city child is able to show in the way of self-dependence and initiative when the inevitable day arrives that he must stand on his own feet. It seems to me that he is never left alone. In well-to-do families he usually passes from the teacher's hands directly into the hands of his governess or futor, who instantly assumes the responsibility for his safety and well-being. He works and plays under supervision, and has no opportunity to develop initiative or a sense of responsibility. In the name of education we are crippling what we should cultivate. The best way to develop initiative is to let the child alone for at least a part of each day. I think it shows an almost insulting lack of faith in his intelligence, this constant attendance on him. Even if he does make a few blunders, he will be developing himself that way.

My husband and I were brought up in all the freedom of large spaces; and after a few years of New York apartment life, with summers in boarding houses, we realized that our boys were going to lose out on most of the joys of childhood unless something was done about it. So we bought, for almost nothing, a one-hundred-acre valley, two thousand feet up in the Catskills, and five hundred feet above the nearest village-a real wilderness into which no self-respecting servant would dream of setting foot. There was a rough little cabin in it, which was quite adequate for a summer home. Our object was to have a place where the children could stretch their bodies and souls, and incidentally where the parents could also-where light and heat and water did not come by means of taps and buttons.

We had to do all the work ourselves, and the boys, then five and six, were expected from the beginning to do their share. They fetched the milk from the nearest farm, a half mile distant, realizing fully that if they did not get it there would not be any milk, a crisis which could not exist in town. We have most of our dinners outside over a camp fire, which, of course, the boys soon learned to make. They often serve us doubtful meals, over which they labor joyfully for hours beforehand. They have absolute freedom to wander over the mountains, with only their dogs for protection. There are hours and hours when I have no ldea where they are, and they come home with the most wonderful adventures to recount. For four months out of every year they live the life of the pioneer boy.

I think every city child should have some such summer experience, if possible, where responsibilities can be given him which he may assume or not, but where he must take the consequences. The child brought up under artificial conditions necessarily prevailing in city life, or in the summer notel, has no point of contact with the old, simple, universal forms of human living, from which all wholesome developments took their root.

The soldier of the Cross is a shepherd. His insignia is a staff, not a sword. In the No Man's Land of spiritual conquest there are the "other sheep" of which the Chief Shepherd spoke. It is the shepherd's duty to seek for "the hungry sheep that look up and are not fed;" and to lead them toward the green pastures, beside the still waters of safety and comfort, so that there shall be, at last, one flock and one Shepherd.-Selected.

O Man of Nazareth, Divine.

O Man of Nazareth, divine, Unhonored still save by the few Whose true hearts knew their Master, when He walked with them, a Man of men; The friend of all, yet lonely, too-What were the burdens thou did'st bear? What joys hadst thou no man could share?

O thorn-crowned One upon the cross, We cannot know thy agony; We, who so little pain must feel, Yet dread that little, only kneel In reverent love to worship thee, And seek our lesser griefs to meet, Like little children at thy feet,

O King upon thy altar throne, Still thou art waiting patiently; Unclaimed by many, patient still-While men neglect to do thy will-Thou call'st thy little ones to thee. Lord, though like children we forget, Grant us thy blessed friendship yet.

Dear Lord, in that last awful day, When thou shalt come in majesty And show thy Kingship unto men, When we perceive thy glory then, And fearing, dare not look at thee: Wilt thou not, loving to the end, Let us discern our human Friend?

A Righteous World.

There is only one safety for the nations. It is righteousness. The world, as we knew it before 1914, will be no more. It must be better or it will be worse.

Our Lord, the divine Ruler, shows us his righteousness, which is assured national preservation if the nations shall choose to live under his law. He would have a better world than men have ever dreamed. He would have a world whose nations should be of one family, each possessed of its own right, and all sharers in the common right; each recognizing the individual rights of its citizens and receiving from its citizens their common duty to its welfare and their fraternal duty to each other. would have a world of justice, and a world of justice is a world of peace.

To establish the justice of Jesus, thereby attaining the peace of Jesus, is the demand upon all the Christian citizenship of the world.-Selected.

Jesus in the Home.

In the last analysis every home is either hospitable or hostile to Jesus. In many homes he is the unseen Guest at every meal, the Partaker of every joy, and the Sanctifier of every sorrow. In many others he is practically, if not willfully, excluded, save in the greater crises of life. Much of the gospel material shows us his thought for the family, His human genealogy must have interested him; he practiced filial obedience and reverence. His gracious benediction fell on the homes in which he visited, with Peter and Matthew, with Jairus and Lazarus. "He adorned and beautified with his presence and first miracle" the marriage in Cana; and in parental affection he found the highest interpretation of God's disposition toward us .- D. L. Ferris.

December.—From Mrs. A. W. Bowman, $5; church at Belzoni, Miss., $6.85; Mrs. W. S. Long, $2; through Brother Bradley, $50; sisters at Donelson, Tenn., $16.05. Total, $79.90.

The total receipts for the year 1918 were $890.05. Exchange on this, not less than $60; on deposit, $115; expenses of my native helper and otherwise for the cause, $150; tuition, $52; in hand, $50. The sum total of above expenditure is $427. Hence my personal expenses, including house rent, food, fuel, clothing, etc., for the year were $463.05. Throughout the year I tried to keep strict account of all expenditures, and the above are the figures as kept; however, there may be a slight variation in some points. I have no words to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to all those who have had part with me in this great fight for Christ against idolatry and superstition. May the Lord bless you.

An Unavoidable Delay.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

The authorities here have declined to grant me a passport on the condition that one was granted me in 1911 on coming to Japan, which condition contained the clause, "as far as my conscience as a Christian will allow." This made it necessary to refer the matter to Washington, and I was told that it would take three months at least. As the application was forwarded from the American Embassy about December 10. I cannot expect the passport earlier than March 10. Friends will please note this and address me at 68 Zoshigaya, Tokyo, Japan, as usual, till further notice. Letters that arrive after my departure will be duly cared for.

My plans have been much interrupted by this delay, but I take it that the Lord had a better one in store for me. I am not sure that I can say with Paul that I "rejoice in tribulations also," but at any rate I am getting so accustomed to them that they begin to seem "sort o' natural."

Many and warm have been the words of welcome home, which makes me feel that I have a warm place in your hearts and which is a great comfort in the hours of trial.

My monthly reports have already appeared in the papers. The total amounts received during 1918 are as follows: For Miss Sarah Andrews, $38.75; for Miss Lillie Cypert, $335.36; for Brother Fujimori, $47; for literature, $65.70; for the Sendagaya Church work, $249.66; for C. G. Vincent's work, $683.75; for J. M. McCaleb, from America, $1,658.04; earned in Japan, $338.16; for the Zoshigaya work, $246.75. Total, $3,663.17.

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

This paper is malled regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. All communications should be addressed to Gospel Advocate, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Guarantee of Advertising.

All the advertisements in this paper are, we believe, signed by trastworthy persons. To prove our faith by works, we will make good to actual subscribers any loss sustained in trusting advertisers who prove to be deliberate swindlers. We shall not attempt to adjust trifling disputes between subscribers and honorable business men who advertise, nor pay the debts of honest bankrupts. To make this guarantee effective, in all cases say in writing advertisers, "I saw your advertisement in the Gospel Advocate;" and if anything goes wrong, notify us immediately in writing.

Questions on the Church, the Kingdom, and the Missionary Society. No. 2.

BY M. C. K.

The following are the remaining questions in the list recently submitted by Brother J. L. Hines, of Meaford, Ontario, Canada:

8. Would it be wrong for all of the local churches to gather at one place and appoint delegates to receive funds and select and send out missionaries, provided all the local churches so assembled agreed?

9. Would this not be the same as one local church investing such authority in one or two messengers?

10. Did not the churches (not church) of Galatia province) appoint one or more messengers to take their contribution to Jerusalem? If so, cannot the churches of a State or Union appoint any number of messengers to receive their funds and deliver it at the place and for the purpose designated by said churches?

11. Would such messengers have the right to exercise all authority invested in them by the churches?

12. Would it be wrong to pay these messengers as any other laborers?

13. Give us a clear-cut example as to how the so-called "society churches" form their "society" and how they carry on missionary work.

Due consideration of these queries will help the reader to see the one vital principle violated by the missionary society and which is almost always overlooked by the average advocate of the society. We shall again number our answers to correspond with the number of the queries.

- 8. It would not be wrong for any number of "local churches to gather at one place" in the interest of their work, provided they did not do anything, whether in arranging for the receipt and disbursement of funds or for anything else, that interferes with or contravenes something which God himself has established. The wrong of the churches at this point in the modern missionary-society arrangement is not in "gathering at one place" to confer about mission fields, workers, etc., but in establishing an organization, no matter whether its members be called "delegates" or what not, which takes away from the local churches the matter of authority and control in religious work which God himself placed in them. Neither is the wrong here in the fact that a method has been adopted which is not mentioned in the New Testamentthis of itself would not invalidate it-but because it is a method which interferes with and contravenes God's order. Even if "all the local churches so assembled agreed" on such a measure, that would not make it right. If we would be loyal to the Lord, we must, of course, respect and be true to any order which he himself has established.
- 9. Neither "one local church" nor any other number of local churches has the right to invest "authority in one or two messengers" that would contravene God's order as shown in the answer to query 8. Where God says a thing or establishes a given order, that thing and that order must be respected, and must not be changed by any human arrangement.
- 10. Yes, "the churches of a State or Union" may "appoint any number of messengers" that may be needed "to receive their funds and deliver them at the place and for the purpose designated by said churches;" but they have no right to "appoint any number of messengers" or anybody else to take out of the hands of the churches the supervision and control of their work which God himself placed in them. God did not establish some particular way for churches to handle their funds, and they can adopt any way they please which does not anywhere contravene something which God has established.
- 11. Whether messengers would "have the right to exercise all authority invested in them by the churches" depends, of course, upon how much "authority" has been "invested in them by the churches." If they are merely messengers in the New Testament sense, simply bearing and delivering a message to the proper persons and receiving, bearing, and delivering one in return, if there be one, both their appointment and their function are entirely proper; but it would be wrong to invest them with "authority" over the churches. This is sacred ground, and human feet must not trespass upon it.

12. As to paying messengers of churches, since, in all cases, as so abundantly recognized in the Scriptures. "the laborer is worthy of his hire" (Lev. 19: 13; Deut. 24: 15; Matt. 10: 10; Luke 10: 7; 1 Tim. 5: 18), it is right, of course, to pay any expenses necessarily involved, including the living expenses of the laborer.

13. The only material thing calling for our attention in this last question is the point at which the "society churches" depart from the Scriptures; and by their departing from the Scriptures we do not mean that they are merely pursuing a method or course that is not mentioned in the Scriptures. As before observed, this point of itself would by no means invalidate their course or show any impropriety in it. The only point at which we raise an objection is in the way "they carry on missionary work"—that is, in their founding a central organization with a central board of supervisors and managers, and in transferring to this board the matter of authority and control which God has placed in a board of supervisors and managers in each local church for that purpose. It sets aside God's way for man's way; displaces divine wisdom with human wisdom; in short, it simply changes the divine order and instead establishes a human order.

We should be glad indeed for our society brethren to see and properly appreciate the fact that it is because there is involved in their arrangement, as it seems to us, such a violation of divine order, as has herein been set forth, that we offer, from principle, any objection at all to their society.

The Peace League.

BY J. C. M'Q.

It is so much easier to tear down than to build up, to destroy than to construct, that I fear sometimes we do too much pulling down and not enough constructive work. Without in the least seeking to justify war, I must say that some of our scribes have been much more active and ready to criticize the government than they have been in encouraging the peace league, or peace among all the nations of the world. It doubtless will require much hard work and somebody must make very great sacrifices before people will be brought to a realization of the language of holy writ which says: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men." (Luke 2: 14.)

It is not the purpose of this article to deal with politics in any sense, nor to say whether the league of nations will accomplish or fail to accomplish the desired end of bringing about peace among all the nations. I am glad to commend heartly the efforts of Ex-President Taft, Presidents Lowell of Harvard and Faunce of Brown, in going from city to city throughout the land, explaining misunderstandings, combating prejudices, enlightening ignorance with regard to this colossal plan, and also to emphasize the fact that Christians are under lasting obligations to work for peace, pray for peace, now and so long as they are permitted to live in the world.

It cannot and will not be questioned that mistakes will be made in the peace league. Even the greatest men are fallible, and men with the purest and best of motives are liable to err. But while this is true, not a man living who has proper respect for truth and righteousness questions for one moment the statement that all the nations of the earth should be at peace among themselves.

For the enlightenment of our readers, I will state that a general plan for a league of nations to secure permanent peace after the war was made in Philadelphia on June 17, 1915. At that time there was a convention of some three or four hundred prominent men interested in the subject, and coming from all parts of the country. Since that time, however, another meeting has been held, and the program formed at the first meeting was enlarged. This last meeting was held on November 24, 1918. The purposes of that meeting, as outlined by Ex-President Taft, are as follows:

First, that the judgments of the international courts on justiciable questions should be enforced.

Second, that the league should determine what action, if any, should be taken in respect to recommendations of the Council of Conciliation in which the parties concerned did not acquiesce.

Third, that provision should be made for an administrative organization of the league to conduct affairs of common interest and for the protection and care of backward regions and international places and other matters jointly administered before and during the war, and that such administrative organization should be so framed as to insure stability and progress, preventing defeat of the forces of healthy growth and changes, and providing a way by which progress could be secured and the needed change effected without recourse to war.

Fourth, that a representative Congress of Nations should formulate and codify rules of international law, inspect the work of the league's administrative bodies, and consider any matter affecting the tranquillity of the world or the progress or the betterment of human relations.

Fifth, that the league should have an executive council to speak with authority in the name of the nations represented and to act in case the peace of the world is endangered.

Christians should rejoice that the sentiment of our nation and government is such that it favors peace. This sentiment is due to the Bible and its influence. Christians, therefore, should do nothing that will discourage peace among the nations of the earth. Some Christians may hold the view that it is not possible for a league of nations to be a success, that it is not possible to bring about an effective peace among all mankind; but those who hold this view must know very well that whenever they became Christians, thus devoting their lives to the service of the Lord Jesus Christ, they pledged themselves to live in peace with all men, and that the Holy Spirit admonishes Christians: "Be at peace among yourselves." (1 Thess. 5: 13.)

It is now time for Christians who cannot conscientiously take up arms to use all of their energy, ability, and influence to bring about the peace that should reign on earth when the reign of the Lord Jesus Christ is supreme. It is far better to do this than to find fault with the effort that our President and the rulers of other nations are making to bring about a league of nations that will be helpful in bringing about the desired peace, even though the league be an imperfect one. Even though Christians believe that this state of peace can never be brought about by the governments of this world, the sensible thing for them to do is to so live and act as to create such a sentiment for peace that it will be next to impossible for the world any more to engage in such a cruel war as the one through which we have just passed. Unless we have lost faith in Christ and have concluded that the gospel agencies are to fail in the conversion of sinners, we must know that the day is sometime to come when wars will cease to be. The prophet tells us: "And he will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." (Isa. 2: 4.)

I ask those who are pessimistic, I ask those who are fighting the policy of our President, how do they know but that this is the time of which the prophet prophesied and that the day is soon to dawn when nation shall not lift up sword against nation? The man who believes in Christ with all of his heart and fully accepts the teaching of the Bible must know that the religion of Jesus Christ discourages war. The kingdom of Christ is not of this world, and those who have imbibed his spirit will not encourage and foster war.

I am constrained to believe that the day will come when just such a state of affairs will be brought about as that for which the leading rulers of the world are now working. How much better it is to teach people to lead peaceable, quiet, godly lives than to encourage them to pillage, destroy, and bring devastation and ruin to all! One is the work of the Lord Jesus Christ; the other is the work of the archfiend of the human family.

Why is not now the time to create such a sentiment for peace that it will be impossible to have war? Christ teaches us: "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called sons of God." (Matt. 5: 9.) It is not Christilke, it is not manly, it is not noble, to sit down and whine that it is impossible to bring about such a condition. The same spirit would never have broken the Hindenburg line; the same spirit would never have conquered Germany and made her sue for peace. The same spirit would never have overcome the archfiend of night in that superhuman conflict and brought ministering angels to the feet of Jesus after it was over. The same spirit will never overcome the world, the flesh, and the devil, and bring the crown that is sure to come to the faithful. The same spirit will never preach the gospel to the heathen of this world and offer to them that peace that passes all understanding. Christians, instead of having such a spirit, should say: "By the grace of God, we will be helpful in bringing peace to the whole world. We will encourage all men to work to this end, for it is a consummation to be most devoutly wished." Those who thus live and work for peace have the assurance that they will be preserved by Jehovah. "The God of peace himself sanctify you wholly; and may your spirit and soul and body be preserved entire, without blame at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Thess. 5: 23.)

Let me encourage all of our readers to be constructionists and not destructionists. We all know that peace is a good thing, and a thing to be much desired; and while we may not agree with all of the plans that are made to bring it about, let us not be among the "knockers," but let us work as God directs us to in order to help and bless the world.

I am glad to inform our readers that our religious neighbors are speaking out for the league of nations. I might give a number of quotations, but will give only one, from the Presbyterian (Philadelphia), which says:

The day has dawned. The peoples of the world are striking hands in a common rivalry which is generous and beneficent. The day is at hand when all bitterness and jealousy shall be swept away and all nations shall be united by the ties of universal brotherhood, animated by one spirit, one purpose, one common life, and one hope, and will gladly assist each other in building up rather than tearing down, and the power of law shall be established and substituted for war, reason for force, and righteousness, and not might, shall determine international disputes. May the league of nations soon be formed!

"Dancing Mad."

BY E. A. E.

Gertrude Atherson, writing from Paris for the Courier-Journal, February 9, says: "France, since the day of the armistice, has gone dancing mad."

It is justice to say that she praises most highly the patriotism and heroism of all classes of French women, saying: "For four and a half years, unless they broke down physically, they worked like slaves, giving themselves unintermittently, almost forgetting that pleasure had ever existed in that Boche-smitten world." But now she adds that while the English women may "have formed the habit of work, . . . the French girls, at least, never want to hear of it again." She declares that "tremendous reaction" has come. Opera managers are encouraging fine dress and a display of jewelry, saying: "Let us have the most brilliant season ever known. The women of Berlin are simply gorgeous at the opera. Shall Paris, for centuries the Queen of Fashion, play second fiddle to the vulgar capital of the Boche?" Wealthy women have sent south for their jewelry, where it has been stored during the war. This writer adds:

Let no one imagine for a moment that the result of this war will be a new simplicity, except where the bank account is too lean to admit of any sort of extravagance.

One regrets very much to see these statements. While churches and individual Christians and hundreds who are not church members are giving liberally and gladly to support poor, distressed, shocked and shivered French orphans, it is disheartening to read that wealthy French women and girls have "gone dancing mad," never want to hear of work again, will not live in "a new simplicity" unless compelled to by their lean bank account, and are striving in worldly vanity and wicked pride to outdo and outshine in extravagance of dress and brilliancy of jewels the rich German women.

Why cannot, or why will not, these rich French women support, or, at least, help to support, their own widows and orphans? This the Bible teaches is the rule to go by.

After all her suffering and chastisement, Paris, "for centuries the Queen of Fashion," still aspires to lead the world in this empty and foolish and sinful thing.

However, in generosity let us continue to care for the orphans in France that fashion and foolishness and sinful pleasure cause these French women to neglect.

No one can criticize France for rejoicing with exceeding great joy over her victorious peace; but this joy should be manifested in generosity to the poor orphans and widows of the soldiers who died to save France from the inhuman Boche and not in going "dancing mad." There is no better way to show gratitude than by self-denial and liberally helping the poor.

But France is not the only place which has "gone dancing mad." There are such places in our country. In some of these places church members are seriously afflicted with the same disorder. Preachers and godly elders may point out the dangers and destruction to many of dancing, may emphasize the responsibility of influence, and quote God's command to "abstain from every form of evil;" yet with one voice such church members cry, "On with the dance!"

The church has no control over fashionable France and vulgar Germany, and the worldly people of these countries and of our own country may do worse than dance and array themselves gorgeously; but church members claim to be Christians, the children of God, to have the Spirit of Christ, and to shine as lights in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation. It is with church members we have to deal and whom we endeavor to persuade, not only to keep unspotted from the world, but also to be the salt of the earth and the light of the world. They cannot be Christians and fail to do and to be this. Ah me! Foolish, dancing church members the light of the world, the salt of the earth! No one can believe it, and Satan laughs in his sleeve at the thought.

Some church members who are mothers and fathers are as dancing mad as their frivolous and fashionable daughters. They want "to put their daughters out," and think dancing and reflecting the character of the world is the way to do it. Where there is a difference, as a rule, mothers seem more foolish and more anxious for their daughters to dance than fathers. It is a great pity and irreparable sin against children for a mother to lead them into worldliness against their fathers' protest. The father is the head of the family by divine right, but sometimes the mother takes the lead, to the detriment and, maybe, ruin of her children and to her own grief in the end. On the other hand, there are numerous fathers and mothers, for whom we are thankful, who are perfectly agreed and united in effort and prayers, but are in mutual deep distress over dancing and otherwise worldly and disobedient children. They weep together and pray in the solemn hours of the night for wisdom to know how to influence their children to be faithful to the Lord. May it please God to hear and answer them!

The church, it seems, has been bluffed and stands non-plussed, while, in places, the majority of its young members, and sometimes not a few of its older ones, are swept onward by the flood of worldliness which for the present has overwhelmed it.

Why cannot and why do not all godly parents, all other pious people—the elders of the church, preachers, and all the church—take a united stand—"as one man," even as God and Christ are one, God in Christ and Christ in the church-against the sinful modern dance, immodest apparel, and all other worldliness and wickedness, and have the church sanctified and cleansed, "not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish" and "a glorious church?" (Eph. 5: Why not? "Well," says one, "because, while many church members do not dance, they are otherwise just as worldly, if not more so: some gossip, repeat scandal and slander, if they do not originate the slander; some are not fair and straight in their dealings with others, but defraud, cheat, steal, and lie; some love money and are covetous and greedy, want something for nothing, 'deal in futures,' strive to get rich from the misfortunes of others; and some preachers are guilty of impure conduct. The kettle cannot call the pot black; so all have agreed to be black together." Yes, but I said cleanse the church "from all defilement of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." (2 Cor. 7: 1.) ALL is the word. It may be puzzling to know where to begin; but the work must be done.

We may receive chastisement and learn lessons from any war; but all know that war is demoralizing, has always been and will always be. It removes restraints, tears away barriers, dulls the sensibilities, deadens the conscience, and corrupts society. The world war has demoralized the church, at least in places, in our country. It has been weakened in discipline, in courage, in spiritual power, and in efficiency. The attendance may be as large and even larger, because the multitudes go where they can hear that which they are pleased to hear; but pleasing the multitudes is not preaching the gospel. In many places the preaching of the gospel-"Christ, and him crucified," "the power of God unto salvation," "all things that pertain unto life and godliness," "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints"-has been exchanged for the proclamation of the wisdom of the world; psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, and the song of the angels -glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will to men-have been exchanged for war songs of devastation and carnage; the spirit of the gentle and lowly and loving Nazarene has given place to the spirit of the world; and the church stands in a dimmer light than it did before the war. It has been published to the world that a preacher of "the Christian Church" offered a prayer in the name of the flag of the United States. All know that Brother McGarvey taught all his life against the use of instrumental music in worship and left the church which he served and in which he worshiped for a number of years when instrumental music was introduced; yet over his dead body, when he could no longer speak for himself, instrumental music was used in the funeral service, and in the house and congregation which he left because of it. Numerous good people said this was outrageous. Brother David Lipscomb taught vigorously his long life through that Christians cannot engage in carnal warfare or even take part in civil government and wrote a book on the subject; yet before he has been long dead, in the house his money helped largely to build and of which congregation he was an elder and preacher for almost forty years has been hung a "service flag." Away goes the principle, "If meat causeth my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh for evermore, lest I cause my brother to stumble." Granting that the brother who has conscientious convictions against engaging in war "in any form" is the weak brother, yet, according to the law of love, no one can hang a service flag in the house of worship against his conscience. The flag is not essential to the worship of God, the work of the church, or the salvation of souls. Then why have it in the house of worship? "Render therefore unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's; and unto God the things that are God's." Hang the service flag of carnal warfare in its place and the banner of "the Prince of peace" in its place. The Lord's Supper is in the right place in the congregation on the first day of the week. "This do in remembrance of me."

The Literary Digest speaks against "heckling the church." Let it be understood that when we speak of ' church," we mean the church as used in the Bible, whose maker and builder is God, whose head is Christ and Christ alone, whose lawgiver is its head, which was purchased with the blood of Jesus, whose mission the Lord has given, and whose history is written in the New Testament; not the Roman Catholic Church with its priests or clergy; not the various and numerous Protestant religious denominations, or a "pool" or "league" of these denominations; not the "Knights of Columbus," the Y. M. C. A., the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, etc. These, one and all, do a great charitable work in many ways. The religious and charitable work of these the secular press means when it speaks of "the church." But all readers of the Gospel Advocate know we do not mean these when we write of the church and its work. To criticize them is not to criticize the church, and to defend them is not to defend the church; or defending the church is not defending them. They may flourish or they may perish, but the church goes on forever.

One thing which dims the light of the church is placing it, with its pure worship of God "as it is written" in the New Testament and its God-appointed work, on a par with all these religious institutions and attempting to defend them, and the failure to draw the distinction between this worship of God in spirit and truth and any sort and all sorts of religious services.

Another thing which dims the light of the church is that, with all the abundance of money thousands of church members have given through other institutions to worthy causes and the suffering over the sea and with the exceedingly high cost of everything, the churches, as a rule, have never seen the necessity of increasing the support of worthy preachers. The wages of all laborers have been raised, but the preachers, simply because they will do so, are suffered to live still on the small amount given them before the war and when living was about one-third what it is now. The preachers who have had the courage to continue through this neglect and to continue through all disturbances to preach the gospel have suffered. The churches have shown that they have the money by the free use of it in all other directions.

Other work of the church has been neglected. Is this seeking first the kingdom of God and his righteousness?

Then, have not some placed themselves where they can no longer consistently and heartily contend for the allsufficiency of the church to do all the work God has committed to it, and to say:

Unto him be the glory in the church and in Christ Jesus unto all generations forever and ever. Amen (Eph. 3: 21)?

Men must be "made over," "must be born again," "must be born from above," must be "born of water and the Spirit," must have the Spirit of Christ, must escape from the corruption that is in the world by lust, and must become "partakers of the divine nature," before the church can stand out before the world in its true light.

While there was never so much dancing by church members, there were also never so many divorces and they were never treated so lightly; there were never so many preachers going wrong; there were never so many contentions and divisions; there was never so much self-seeking, so much self-justification, and so much vainglory; and there never was so little regard paid to God's command to "give diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (a league of denominations and pooling the Interests of all is not "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace").

The church should take its bearing-but my space is full.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

- A. B. Lipscomb reports a good start in the meeting at Henderson, Tenn.
- L. L. Yeagley will preach at both services at the Russell Street Church next Sunday.

Brother McQuiddy has returned from a business trip in Alabama. He preached at Russell Street Church, this city, Sunday.

Hear Henry T. King this week at South College Street Church, this city. You will be edified and the congregation will be encouraged.

From L. L. Brigance, Murray, Ky.: "Interest in the church work here is growing. Brother Elam is to hold us a meeting, beginning on the first Sunday in April."

He who takes hold of one end of the litter on which a hurt brother is prone must not pause to question the name and affiliation of the man who takes hold of the other end.—Christian Herald.

Marriage—Brother Alfred Lamb and Sister Lillian Muirhead, both of the Fairview Church, Detroit, Mich., were married, at 118 Tyler Avenue, Highland Park, on March 7, 1919. E. G. Rockliff officiated.

Our readers will be grieved to learn of the death of W. H. Smith, of Athens, Ala., aged seventy-one years. He was the only brother of F. W. Smith, our beloved coworker. The deceased was an excellent Christian character and will be sadly missed. The Gospel Advocate extends to all the bereaved an expression of deepest sympathy.

We are requesting the churches to make a liberal contribution to the Tennessee Orphans' Home on the first Lord's day in April. "The gift without the giver is bare." Is there an urgent need and demand for gifts to care for orphan children? Then give, but give also for your "own soul's sake." In giving you are answering the need of your own soul.

From W. N. Abernathy, Westport, Tenn.: "For more than thirty years I have farmed and taught in the rural schools of my neighborhood. I have also done some preaching. My physical strength has failed me, so that I find it necessary to seek lighter work. I enjoy teaching Bible classes and lecturing on various subjects. If interested, write me."

The Board of Trustees has announced the reëlection of H. Leo Boles to the presidency of David Lipscomb College and the selection of E. A. Elam to be dean of the Bible Department for the ensuing year. There will be some changes in the faculty to be announced later. The trustees wish to enlarge the usefulness of the college and desire the support and coöperation of all the readers of the Gospel Advocate. Do not fail to read the statement of Brother Elam relative to the prospects and needs of the school, printed on another page in this issue.

The pathway of God to one heart is through another heart. John Smith or Mary Jones may possess that heart, Every atom in the universe acts on every other atom. But each atom acts most strongly on the atom that is nearest. The big things in life are accomplished by those who are faithful in the matter of the little things. The duty for every man and woman is the next duty. In the last analysis the mountains all reduce to grains and the ocean to drops. If the world is beautiful in its vastness, it is because it is first beautiful in its atoms.—Christian Herald.

From C. A. Trevillion, Des Moines, N. M., March 17:

"The congregation at this place is desiring to build a meetinghouse. The congregation is comparatively small, and we are struggling hard to build up the cause of Christ at this place. We have the lots in a very desirable location and have them paid for. The deed will contain the restrictive clause. We desire to erect a house that will cost from fifteen hundred to eighteen hundred dollars. We will appreciate it very much if each congregation will send us one Lord's-day's contribution. All contributions will be acknowledged through the papers. Brethren, do not throw this aside unconsidered, for the cause of Christ is very young in this section of the country, and we are fighting very hard to build up the work. The sectarian element has the lead, and they do not like for us to worship in their houses. Send all contributions to B. F. Nottingham,"

From Tice Elkins, Nocona, Texas, March 18: "I closed out at Marietta, Okla., last Sunday night, with a great interest. We were compelled to leave the church house the middle of the week for want of room, and moved to the courthouse, where we had a full house until Sunday night, and then there was not room for the people. Every church in the town was running wide open, but we had all we could manage. There were twenty-four additions to the body there, and the brethren were all encouraged. I will be here at Nocona over next Sunday. There are great hindrances to the work here, and I have lost hope of removing them. But still we have done much good here. Elder J. M. Rice and I will undertake to reestablish the crippled cause at Ryan, Okla., the last two weeks in April, and it will be largely a mission job this time. We will need your support. Who will help? Send offerings to T. H. Field, Nocona, Texas, and state that it is for the Ryan meeting."

The editor of this page attended the preachers' meeting at Tracy City, Tenn., on Tuesday, March 18. Upon arrival I found the church very much enthused over the good start already made. Inspiring addresses had been delivered by C. E. Wooldridge, of Murfreesboro, Tenn.; G. C. Brewer, of Winchester, Tenn.; and R. N. Moody, of Albertville, Ala. On Tuesday evening F. B. Srygley preached a memorable sermon on "The Infallibly Safe Course." The attendance was good at each service. R. E. L. Taylor, of Decherd, Tenn., was in charge of the program and was doing his part well. Among the visitors were J. R. Bradley, of Elora, Tenn.; C. E. Coleman, of Macon. Ga.; and S. F. Morrow, of Nashville, Tenn. The church members at Tracy City were unstinted in their hospitality and kindness to all the visitors. The meeting was largely attended by the people of the community. This is not a full report, as the meeting was only half over when I returned to Nashville.

James Russell Lowell, while ambassador to Great Britain, was at one time the guest of honor at a banquet in London. Some one spoke sneeringly of Christianity, and Mr. Lowell responded: "When the keen scrutiny of skeptics has found a place on this planet where a decent man may live in decency, comfort, and security, supporting and educating his children unspoiled and unpolluted; a place where age is reverenced, infancy protected, womanhood honored, and human life held in due regard-when skeptics can find such a place ten miles square on this globe, where the gospel of Christ has not gone before and cleared the way and laid the foundations that made decency and security possible, it will then be in order for these skeptical 'literati' to move thither and there ventilate their views. But, so long as these men are dependent on the very religion which they discard for every privilege they enjoy, they may well hesitate to rob the Christian of his hope and humanity of its faith in that Savior who alone has given to men that hope of eternal life which makes life tolerable and society possible, and robs death of its terrors and the grave of its gloom."

Reminiscences.

BY H. W. JONES:

When I look back over the past and think that though the days of my life have been less than twoscore and six years, yet have I lived to see so many of our beloved brethren pass over to the great beyond, it causes a sad, lonely feeling to creep o'er my spirit and wonder to seize my heart while meditating as to who will fill their places and as to whose time will come next. But I know we should not feel sad and lonely while the Lord is with us; and he is ever with us while we are with him. (See 2 Chron, 15: 1-4.) Great consolation this! But the loss of a living example, a faithful proclaimer of the truth of God, is, indeed, a great loss to those who need encouragement in the right way and have to strive through trials and difficulties in being of those who "contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." (Jude 3.)

Yes, I well remember, during my youthful days, hearing Brethren J. R. Hill, John McCoy, and W. A. Utley proclaim the truth of God with zeal and power in these parts; but-alas!they have passed over into the great beyond, many years ago. I will ever remember the great good these godly men did in these parts for the cause of New Testament Christianity.

Later on I remember hearing and reading after such great men of God as David Lipscomb, Dr. T. W. Brents, T. R. Burnett, and others of wellknown renown; but, sad to contemplate, they have all passed from the land of the living, "that they may rest from their labors; and their works do [verily] follow them." (Rev. 14: 13.) But, thanks be to God, the memory of such lives will not pass away for many years to come Again, I remember, with love and admiration for their work's sake, Brethren Bell and Joseph E. Cain (late editors of the Christian Leader). J. M. Barnes, W. P. Richardson, "Weeping" Joe Harding, and W. H. Devore, who recently died. These brethren and others I had learned to love through their writings and because of their "works of faith and labors of love;" but they are gone from us forever!

But I cannot close these short reminiscences without a word of love and appreciation for the work done by such living brethren as E. G. Sewell, J. A. Harding, T. B. Larimore, and others who are still lingering with us on the shores of time, but are ripe in years and experience for the sweet bliss awaiting them over on the shores of eternity's bright home! May the Lord help us all to be faithful and ever content to walk in the old paths our fathers have trod.

Page.

Maj. A. W. Page was born in Davidson County, Tenn., on November 15, 1834, and passed to the higher life on November 7, 1918, aged eighty-three years, eleven months, and twenty-three days. In early life he was married to Miss Annie E. Creel, to which union were born six children—W. S., Alice H., Albert M., Annie E., W. G., all of whom survive him, and one unnamed who passed out in infancy. He was preceded to the higher life by his wife preceded to the higher life by his wife more than forty years. In 1874 he was married to Miss Sallie Hight, who still survives him. Major Page, in September, 1861, heeded his country's call and donned himself with the gray, which he wore with credit to himself and to the cause he dared to espouse during the four long and stormy years of that unfortunate struggle. His old comrades say he made a fine war record. He was Adjutant of Camp S. G. Shepherd, No. 941, of which he was a member up to his death and in which he took great interest. He was also interested in the welfare of the old soldiers and their families everywhere and in many instances rendered very valuable assistance in helping them to secure pensions, establish monuments, and many other things of interest to them. In 1866 he enlisted in the army of the great "Captain of our salvation" and was one of the charter mem-bers of the church of Christ in Lebanon, Tenn. He was always interested in the welfare of the town and wanted right to prevail in everything. Inter-ested and well balanced on all questions pertaining to the work and wor-ship of the congregation, he was one of the faithful "stand-bys," teaching a class of sisters for more than fifteen years in the Sunday school. He was a good teacher and was loved very much by the class. All in all, Brother Page lived out a well-rounded life and had many friends, but now he rests from his labors, and his works follow with him. (See Rev. 14: 13.) We pray the richest benedictions upon Sister Page and the children. May they all live long, be good, do good, and be happy while here below, and finally reach the home above, there to meet all the pure and redeemed, and to be with God, our Father, and Jesus, our Savior, for ever-more. George W. Farmer.

Andrews.

On July 10, 1852, there was born to Brother Varney F. Andrews and his wife, Catherine, a baby boy, whom they named "William George" in honor of his grandfathers. Blessed with Christian parents, this boy grew up to young manhood in an atmosphere of Christian devotion, which always produces a strong, wholesome, lovable character. On January 27, 1877, he was married to Narsissa C. Smith, who also was reared in a Christian home. Shortly after his marriage he obeyed the Lord in baptism, and these two young people be-gan their life journey together as united workers for their Master. To them six children were born, five of whom lived to be mature men and women. The highest ambition of W.

G Andrews and his wife was to bring up their children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and, in order to do this, they realized that they must so live that their lives would be a daily example to their children. In addition to this, they began early to instill into the hearts of their little ones the teachings and commandments of our Savior, Needless to say, all of these children became servants of the Lord early in life, their ages ranging from twelve to nineteen years when they were baptized. To me, their daughter, it seems that if they had done nothing more than this, their reward must needs be great. But W. G. Andrews was an earnest worker in the vineyard; and when the death angel claimed him on the night of December 25, 1918, many there were who had been helped along life's way by his deeds of kindness and love. All his acquaintances will unite in saying that he was a good man-a Christian indeed and in truth. Yet none but his immediate family know just how faithful he was to the Master, how devoted to parents, wife, and children. He is survived by his wife: three children-Clint Andrews, now with the United States Army in Russia; Mrs. F. N. Williams, of Tompkinsville, Ky.; and Mrs. J. E. Hoffman, of Roswell, N. M.; and one granddaughter, Ophelia Douglas Will-iams. We feel deeply our loss, yet we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we know that "precious in the eyes of Jehovah is the death of his saints;" and Paul assures us that and Paul assures us that when the saints of Christ are absent from the body, then they are present with the Lord. Therefore, we think not of him as one lost, but as one gone to a better country, whither we shall one day follow him if we are faithful. While we, his children, sorrow in his absence, we rejoice that we have with us our mother, to counsel and guide us in the way into which they two so prayerfully led us when we were but children. How blessed are those who have for their heritage a godly father and mother! Mrs. J. E. Hoffman.

The Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its most listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a choe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in-cluding not only comfort, but style, dura-bility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth-while shoe malities, may have a copy of his moneyqualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

Physician Explains Who Should Take Nuxated Iron

Practical Advice on How To Help Build Up Great Strength, Energy and Endurance.

Commenting on the use of Nuxated from as a tonic, strength and blood builder by over three million people annually, Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.) New York, and The Westchester County Hospital, said, "Lack of Iron in the "Lack of fron in the blood not only makes blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but if utterly robs him of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life. It may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered walk of life. It may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable. I have strongly emphasized the great necessity of physicians making blood examinations of their weak, anaemic, rum-down patients. Thousands of persons go on year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscies without ever realizing the real and true cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food merely passes through the body something like corn through an old mill with rollers so wide apart that the mill cant grind.

For want of iron you may be an old man to the state of the land of the grind.

For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable and all "run-down," while at 50 or 60 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with vim and energy.

The accompanying article of Dr. Sullivan should be carefully read by every man and woman who wants to possess perfect health, great physical endurance and a strong, keen mentality. Dr. Sullivan, tells how to increase the iron in our blood and thereby gain greater physical and mental power, brighter intellects and better health.

how to increase the iron in our blood and thereby gain greater physical and mental power, brighter intellects and hetter health.

But in my opinion you can't make strong, via orous, successful, sturdy iron men, and healthy, rosy-cheeked women by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron—Nuxated Iron—before they are ready to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Netwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insimply, I suppose, because costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic from—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble then purchase Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron.

Manufactures' Note.—Nuxated Iron which is used by Dr. Sulliwan and others with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not foure the teeth, make them black the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not foure the teeth, make them black the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not foure the teeth, make them black the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not foure the teeth, make them black the older inorganic iron products are successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. Marietta, March 12 .- I am at Marietta in a very interesting meeting, which began last Saturday night. The crowds are rapidly outgrowing the house, and we are expecting to move to the courthouse this week. I do not to the courthouse this week. I do not know how long we will continue, but until we do what good we can see the way to. Brother R. M. Womack, Brother F. S. Vance, Brother McMean, and Brother Webb are among the preachers who are attending and assisting me in the meeting, and they are all true helpers. There are several good gospel preachers running loose over in this neck of the woods who ought to be busy and who are waiting for calls for meetings; and while I think they should get out and hunt work, yet I also believe the churches are doing wrong in not calling them to work now instead of waitdress, of Bowie, Texas, one of the strongest and best preachers in the country, has some time for meetings not yet taken, and you will never do better than to call him for your better than to call him for your summer work. Medicated Smoke Out Catarr

Dr. Blosser, a respected physician, and for forty-four years an enormously successful specialist in Catarrh, is the originator of a combination of medical herbs, flowers and berries, to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared eigarette. In the process of smoking this vapor reaches the air passages of the head, nose and throat, when inhaled, AS

SHOWN IN THE ACCOMPANY-ING ILLUSTRATION. The warm, healing, antiseptic vapor is carried directly to the very parts affected. Dr. Blosser's Remedy fights and kills the catarrhal germs where liquids, sprays, douches, salves and medicated creams of the catarrhal germs where liquids are cannot possibly go. His Remedy is pleasant, simple and convenient, so it may be used at home by man woman or child. It is entirely harmless

From Trial Outfit you can decide which form of the Remedy you prefer. They will also send you an illustrated booklet explaining about Catarrh, together with letters from customers who have used this Remedy with satisfactory results. hundred dollars' worth of work having the house finished, besides seats, which we will have to put off until We will get some chairs and borrow some more from the meet-We certainly appreciate the help the brethren have given in the cause here, but we need more help. Brethren, if you believe in home missions, this is one place where you should all send a donation to help push the work to completion. We have only about thirty in Sunday school, and I see that there is more interest since we have moved from the courthouse to the church. We are doing what we can and trying to build a house better than we are able to do without help; but the success of the cause in a place of three thousand population requires a respectable and well-located church, and we are helping ourselves. The writer gave over two months' salary last year. This county has had less apostolic preaching in it than any other, I suppose, in West Tennessee, consequently there are few of the belief in the county, only two small congregations outside of this place. Brethren, if you will make a request to your church next Sunday to set a Sunday's contribution aside for the cause here, let it be small or large, you can do a good deed in the Master's name. Hawley's Ointment has been found to be most effective in preventing influenza. Many cases have been especially noted where every person in an organization suffered attacks of influenza, except those who used Hawley's Ointment as a preventative. This ointment kills the influenza germ and keeps the nasal passages thoroughly sterilized. It is also wonderfully effective in treating nasal catarrh, colds, cold sores, coughs, croup, and early stages of pneumonia, and general inflammatory conditions of the membranous surfaces.

Hawley's Ointment is readily absorbed by the mucous membranes. Ointments having only petroleum as a base tend to inflame the air passages when applied, forming a waxy coating which checks the normal function of the membranes. URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You -Drink Lots of Water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back, or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive. It cannot injure, and makes a delightful efferves-cent lithia-water drink.

Mr. Edward Goodenough, of Goodenough and Wogkam Sunday School Supply House, secured a remurkable formula for a skin ointment, which he sold privately for a half century by personal recommendation, making up the preparation at his home. So remarkably efficient did it prove for all skin troubles that Mr. Goodenough received large numbers of the most enthusiastic commendations from his customers. His grandson, Mr. F. E. Kirby, as vice-president of The Morgan Drug Co., 1521 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., is still active in the production of this ointment under the name so widely and well known to grateful users as Falmer's "Skin-Success." Mr. Kirby is as entusiastic as his grandfather over its merits and declares that it is the best preparation of its kind on the market or known to the medical profession for freckles, tan, sunburn, pimples, eczema and other skin troubles. The Germ in the Word

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

The word of God is the seed of the kingdom. If the word has no germ in it, the seed will not grow. Reader, did you ever know of a farmer sowing wheat, then sending off to "Sears" for germs to go into the grains, or of one planting corn and then sending for shoots to go on the stalks? Perhaps you have heard preachers preach tnat the word of God found in the Bible was a dead letter. I know I have heard such. And after they got through they would pray for the Lord to send the Spirit and apply the word to the heart and make it grow. Jesus said: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." (John 6: 63.) The words which Jesus spake were not empty; they contained "ideas," and those ideas were spiritual and divine; they imparted knowledge; they were instructive, and the thoughts contained therein were spiritual germ thoughts. The germ in the word will grow when the seed falls into good round, called "an honest heart." Herod opposed the work of the apostles in their preaching, for which he died. Here was an example and a demonstration of God's wrath upon any man who would prevent a worthy preacher from preaching the word, After Herod's death, Luke says: "But the word of God grew and multiplied." (Acts 12: 24.) When the word of God grows, it produces a Christian. When Paul went to Ephesus, he preached the word in such a way that many believed and confessed and further demonstrated their faith by burning about twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of worthless, heathenish, idolatrous creeds and religious literature; and the inspired writer's comment is: "So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed." (Acts 19: 20.) The word of God warms the heart and produces spiritual life. David, in his meditations upon the word of God, said: "My heart was hot within me; while I was musing the fire burned." (Ps. 39: 3.) And Jeremiah said: "But his word was in mine heart as a burning fire." (Jer, 20: 9.) And in Jer, 23: 21-36 is a description of the power there is in the word, and the Lord himself says: "Is not my word like as a fire?" No wonder that the apostles' hearts burned within them when Jesus explained unto them the life germ of the prophecies concerning his crucifixion, burial, and resurrection. The word of God is perpetual. It "endureth forever." which it could not do unless it was alive! "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." (1 Pet. 1: 3.) The spiritual germ ideas in the word are Busy in the Master's Work.

BY J. HANNON.

I went to Nashville, Tenn., on February 12 and was there two days with the Jackson Street Church in a meeting. I had the pleasure of meeting a good many of the preachers of Tennessee and one other from Mississippi. While in Nashville I went to the Gospel Advocate office, and found the editors friendly and nice. Any reader of the Advocate who was never in Nashville would do well to visit the home of the Gospel Advocate. There are many things of interest to be seen there.

I was at Tuscumbia, Ala., on the fourth Lord's day in February and preached both day and night. I baptized one young lady and left one to be baptized on my next visit, the Lord willing.

We have a working little body in Corinth, Miss. I preach for them once a month, on the third Lord's day. I have three other churches to which I give one Lord's day each month. When a month has five Sundays, I put in the fifth Sunday visiting new fields. So you can see that I have no time to visit kinsfolk or friends-the calls are too great and the laborers are too few; yet I work just like everybody else. We should all keep busy in the Master's work.

It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor, Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

The Tender Shepherd.

BY C. PETTY.

This can be said of only one that ever lived, and that is the Savior, who came to earth and lived and loved and labored so tenderly as the great Shepherd of his sheep, that he might lead them tenderly through all the dangers that might befall them in life, and also watch over them day and night until they are led into heaven's fair pastures beyond all dangers forever.

One can study the life of the Shepherd and see how he loved his own. When the disciples returned from their first preaching trip, the Savior called them into a desert place, to a much-needed rest from their toil. The multitude noticed the way they went, and went "out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him. And Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd: and he began to teach them many things." (See Mark 6: 33, 34.) Before he let them go to their homes, he fed them, knowing that they had listened to his teaching till they were hungry. Thus is shown his tender love for the needy of earth-not only for those that are hungry, but for all the distressed of earth. He keeps watch over them by day and by night, How blissful the thought! Though I may be friendless in this unfriendly world, so far as man is concerned, away from home and a pilgrim, with no one to care for me, yet the tender Shepherd is watching over me and will abide with me to the end!

"And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice. And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers." (John 10: 4, 5.) It is true today, as well as in the days when the good Shepherd was on earth, that when his sheep study his word they know his voice, or what he says, and also what the apostles say, and will not follow the voice of any one else, and no stranger need to talk to them. Again: "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." (Verse 11.) No wolf need ever expect to find the good shepherd away from his sheep, neither will the good shepherd flee when the wolf ap-

Peter tells "strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia," who were "in heaviness through manifold temptations," that "the trial of your [their] faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." He says: "For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls "that is, they returned to the following of the good Shepherd not only when they left Judaism, but also after they came up through a great trial of their faith they were drawn closer to the tender Shepherd, and he to them, and they loved him still. Peter tells them further: "Whom having not seen, ye love: in whom, though now ve see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory; receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls." A glorious ending to those even that were being put to death for their faith at that time; for they entered into glory, and the good Shepherd would always be there to lead them in the better world, and say to them: "You have Mstened to my voice all the way through life, and have followed me all the way; now rest from your toil, away from all harm and danger." Peter best expressed it when they should come to the end of the way: "When the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." It is sweet to know that the tender Shepherd will be with us till the end and will brush back the chilly waters of death till the crown is ours.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here' a Slepi Receipt that Anybody Can Apply With a Hair Brush.

The use of sage and sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy, and attrac-tive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at drug store for a fifty-cent bottle any drug store for a fifty-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Com-pound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after an-other application or two it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Com-pound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation, or prevention of dis-

What Doctor Pierce Has Done For Humanity!

BY DOCTOR CRIPPS.

It has always seemed to me that Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., should be placed near the top when a list of America's great benefactors is written. He studied and conquered human diseases to a degree that few realize. Whenever he found a remedy that overcame disease, he at once announced it in the newspapers and told where it could be bought at a small price. He did not follow the usual custom of keeping the ingredients secret, so that the rich only could afford to buy the medicine, but openly printed the name of each root and herb he used. And so to-day the names of Dr. Pierce and his medicines are widely known, and they stand for better health and better citizenship.

One of this great physician's most successful remedies is known as Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. These are little, sugar-coated pills, composed of Mayapple, leaves of aloe, root of jalapthings that Nature grows in the ground. These Pellets are safe because they move the bowels gently, leaving no bad after-effects, as so many pills do. Very often they make a person who takes them feel like a new man or woman, for they cleanse the intestines of hard, decayed and poisonous matter that accumulates when one is costive. If you are constipated, by all means go to your druggist and get some of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They may prove to be the very thing your system requires to make you well and happy.

A naughty little weed one day
Poked up its tiny head.
"To-morrow I will pull you up,
Old Mr. Weed," I said.
But I put off the doing till,
When next I passed that way.
The hateful thing had spread abroad
And laughed at my dismay.

A naughty little thought one day Popped right into my mind. "Oho," I cried, "I'll put you out Te-morrow, you will find!" But once again I put it off, Till, like the little weed, The ugly thing sprang up apace And grew into a deed!

So, boys and girls, heed what I say
And learn it with your sums:
Don't put off till to-morrow, for
To-morrow never comes.
To-day pull up the little weeds,
The naughty thoughts subdue,
Or they may take the reins themselves,
And some day master you!

War Between Truth and Error.

BY D. S. LIGON.

There have been wars and rumors of wars in these last days—war on land, in the air, on the water, and under the water; but the greatest war or conflict in any age of the world's history is the war between truth and error. Truth has always had her enemies, and, I judge, this war will continue to be waged till time is no more.

Perhaps the greatest battle fought in these last days between truth and error is the battle with the "unknowntongue" and "divine healing" folk. Brethren, there are hosts of good and honest people, from one end of the earth to the other, being fooled and led into this downright mockery and false teaching, and the time is now upon the church of God when this doctrine must be exposed.

The "unknown-tongue" and "divine healing" adherents are publishing small tracts and putting them all over the land, thus sowing the doctrine all over the whole earth; but what is the church of God doing to battle against the spread of these "damnable heresies" and save many from the clutches of the doctrines of men? It is much easier to teach people the truth of God before they become fooled and accept this false doctrine. But few preachers have given the doctrine any thought.

I have had to get up against the best of their preachers in defense of the truth. When I began the study, I made some inquiry for a book exposing the fad, but did not find a thing written against the doctrine. I found it necessary to get right down to hard study so as to be able to meet them in debate and be able to defend the truth. One result of this study is my little booklet, "A Great War; or,

How Shiver Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism.

According to the standard medical books, rheumatism is not a germ disease, but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate, and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart, and other organs. To relieve rheumatism, it is, therefore, necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kldneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer with rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder, or liver, uric-acid poisoning, or any condition due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, inclose the amount, and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring, Box 21B, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your offer and inclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send; and if it falls to benefit my case, you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

Battle Between Truth and Error." This tract is the only thing published on these questions. It fully exposes the doctrine as taught by these modern "apostolic" folk. Every preacher should get one at once and be able to get into the battle in defense of the truth on the subject.

Brethren, my plan is to get each congregation to buy at least one dozen copies—not to try to sell them to the people, but to hand them out with the request to hand them back, and then hand out again and again, thus keeping the tracts on the go all the time. Now do not get it into your head that I will get rich selling these tracts to you. My hope is to pay for them and let them get out and do good. You know it costs money to publish books now. I give away lots of them. Can't the church do some of this work?

The price is only 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.50. The chapter on "Who Are Witnesses for Jesus" is worth more than the price of the book. Order now. Address D. S. Ligon, Denton, Texas.

The Welcome Guest.

There is scarcely any one who does not wish to be a welcome guest, yet every one knows that some persons possess the ability to make themselves far more desirable in the home than others. The visitor who brings a sunny, fresh point of view with her is always sure of a cordial reception, providing she is careful to carry out certain other requisites which a successful guest is wise enough to follow, whether she has ever analyzed them in this cold fashion or not. It might be safe to guess that she has never thought about it all, but, guided simply by her sincere desire to express real fellowship, has instinctively fulfilled her obligations: yet when considered, perhaps the one thing more than another which insures one's renewed welcome may be summed up in the single word " adaptability."-Exchange.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of tolks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot-water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys, and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile, and indigestible material left over in the body, which, if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels; the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood, and all sorts of allments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply cannot get to feeling right, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make any one a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

"Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening, and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Man's Fall.

It is sad indeed to turn from the picture of man's dignity to a consideration of his fall; but truth and our own salvation demand it. Just as we find the best illustration of man's dignity in the book of Genesis, we learn from the same source the story of his lost and ruined condition. Shame on the wiseacre who tells the people that the story of Adam and Eve is nothing but imagery! Shame on the college or university teacher that repudiates God's explanation of how sin came into the world. Too much time is spent philosophizing and theorizing about the origin of sin, when all we have to do is to take God's word for it. Josh Billings gave a very practical truth in quaint language: "Menny people spend their time trying to find the hole where sin got into the world. If two men brake through the ice in a mill pond, they had better hunt for some good hole tew to get out, rather than get into a long argument about the hole they cum to fall in."

Three Elements in Every Sin.

From the third chapter of Genesis we learn that after God had made man in his own image he placed him in Eden. In the midst of this paradise or garden were two trees: the tree of life, whose fruit conferred immortality, preventing old age and decay, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, whose fruit gave insight into matters beyond what God knew to be best for man. The fruit of the latter tree man was forbidden to touch under pain of death. Analyze the story of the first recorded sin, and you will find three elements that are in every sin-namely: (1) something apparently enjoyable and desirable, but really harmful for man; (2) God's loving care of man, expressing itself in a law pointing out the harmful thing and forbidding it; (3) man's free will, able to obey the law or to disregard it. Now, if a man cut this story out of the Bible under any pretense, he will vitiate some of its profoundest teachings that are based upon it. For example, John writes: "Sin is the transgression of the law." (1 John 3: 4.) Where could one find a better example of transgression than the first one? In one of his letters Paul points out the moral of the story of Adam and Eve: "Be not deceived [as they were deceived by the serpent]: God is not mocked [with impunity]: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." (Gal. 6: 7. &.) If Adam and Eve had sown obedience, they would have reaped happiness, the flower and fruit of obedience; but they sowed disobedience, and reaped sorrow, its flower, and death, its fruit.

The most fearful characteristic of sin is its tendency to perpetuate itself and to become fixed. On this point, Isaiah, the clear-thinking prophet of the Old Testament, gives us a thought that is strikingly illustrated in the story of the first sin: "Your iniquities have separated between you and your God," just as Adam and Eve were ashamed to meet and talk with God in the garden, "and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." (Isa. 59: 2.)

The Worst Thing About Sin.

The most serious charge ever brought against sin is found in Isaiah's words: it separates from God. No man can justly claim that the pleasures of the world do not create a certain kind of enjoyment. That they have pleasure in them cannot be denied. Take dancing for an example. There must be a world of pleasure in dancing, else so many boys and girls and fathers and mothers would not be so crazy about it. "But what is the charge against dancing?" some one asks "What harm is there in it?" or, "Where is the sin in it?" The sin is found in the fact that "it separates from God." People who like to dance do not like to pray, and that is a sure indication that Satan has gotten into the heart. For the sinner has less and ever less inclination to pray and draws farther and farther away from God the more he has need of him. The closing chapter of the Bible contains a solemn warning of the terrible result: "He that is unrighteous, let him do unrighteousness still: . . . and he that is righteous, let him do righteousness still." (Rev. 22: 11.)

There comes a time when sin has destroyed the last feeble desire for better living and the soul is fixed in wickedness forever.

"Sleeping Sickness."

I read in the daily papers that a mysterious malady has appeared in this country in the wake of the "flu" epidemic. The learned physicians call it "encephalitic lethargia," but the common people know it as "sleeping sickness." The patient afflicted with this strange disease falls into a deep sleep and remains unconscious until his death. It may be that most of us shall escape this disease, but we need to fear something that is infinitely worse—to fall asieep in sin, to be awakened only at the judgment. Newman said: "Our great security against sin consists in our being shocked at it." The evil work of sin is seen at once in wasted health, in lost reputation, in poverty and loneliness, in ruined homes, in sorrow and remorse. But the terrible consequences of sin are not seen till we leave time and consider the endless reaches of eternity. Then, when "the whole world" has passed away and only "his own soul" is left, a man sees the folly that Jesus warned against when he said: "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" (Matt. 16: 26.) At least once every day we would all do well to put ourselves, in imagination, in the next life, and ask: "How is it now with my soul?" For that is the viewpoint we are sure to occupy. "For God will bring every work into judgment, with every hidden thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." (Eccles. 12: 14.) 0 0 0

Man Restored.

The beautiful climax in the story of man is found in his restoration. Redemption with all of its glory and grace finds its explanation in the story of man's creation and fall. It is God's supreme work, but not his "strange" work. It is entirely compatible with God's nature as disclosed in the Scriptures. Our great, loving Father could not contemplate the thought of man's ruin without moving every available agency for his remedy. The life of his only begotten Son was not too great a price to pay for the rescue of a fallen and helpless race. One soul outweighs all earthly values. The cross is the measure of its worth.

I might write many things along this most pleasing division of my subject, but I prefer to give you the simple, practical teaching of the apostle Paul addressed to the Ephesian Christians, who had once been steeped in sin, but were now restored and transformed both in character and conduct. To them he wrote: "But ye did not so learn Christ; if so be that ye heard him, and were taught in him, even as truth is in Jesus: that ye put away, as concerning your former manner of life, the old man, that waxeth corrupt after the lusts of deceit; and that ye be renewed in the spirit of your mind, and put on the new man, that after God hath been created in righteousness and holiness of truth." (Eph. 4: 20-24.)

A Fresh, Clean Garment.

The best thought in this passage is that Christ holds out a fresh, clean garment to every one of us; we have only to take it and to put it on. When the process of the draft was being felt all over this country, an Eastern writer made this observation: "In New York City I saw a large company of men starting for Camp Upton. Among them were all sorts and conditions of men, many of them shabbily dressed, some of them evidently failures, some indifferent, some surly. Yesterday that same company of men passed through New York on their way to the steamer that was to carry them over to France. They had put off the old man and put on the new. The civilian clothes had been exchanged for khaki uniforms and their former spirit of discouragement and frivolity had disappeared and from their eyes gleamed a new spirit of earnest purpose, of brave determination."

Let this martial illustration suggest again that Christ has called us to a holy warfare. We cannot attempt it with the soiled garments of sin clinging to us. We must be renewed in the spirit of our mind and "put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." But it is a stupendous task to clothe a mighty army. Is Christ able to take every man who comes to him in filth and rags and clothe him anew?

The answer is: "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."

The Sadness of Farewells.

BY F. W. SMITH.

When loved ones bid each other farewell for even a brief separation in this life, though there be the hope of meeting again in the flesh, there is a degree of sadness often accompanied with tears; but when good-by is spoken by one to whom we are bound by the strongest ties of earth, who is about to embark upon the journey to a land from whose bourne no traveler ever returns, the sadness filling the hearts of loved ones left behind is inexpressibly deep and strange. When it dawns upon the living that for the last time they have looked into the love-lit eyes and gazed upon the form and face of a precious one, the world becomes wrapped in gloom, and the sun of life seems to be buried within the bosom of impenetrable darkness. For the time they find themselves ushered into a different world, a world void of sun, moon, or star, notwithstanding the hope of a meeting and greeting upon a fairer shore. Are such feelings and experiences a sign of weakness or a distrust of the promises of God? No. God made us thus, and endowed us with fountains of tears through which the pent-up grief of aching hearts may find an outlet. How memory holds to the last word, the last act, and the last expression of the eyes out of which the light of life has flashed for the last time! Death has stilled the tongue, folded the hands, and pushed down the eyelids never to open again, and we silently, sadly, and mournfully gaze upon speechless lips once so full of the warmth of love. The vacant place at the fireside, the empty chair at the table, and the hushed music of a familiar voice linger to haunt the memory with joys of the past, to return no more on this earth.

Such are the feelings and experiences of the writer of these lines, and he knows full well that they are a common heritage. Millions have lived, loved, and lost; and if all the tears of grief and sorrow which have rolled down saddened cheeks could flow together, they would make a mighty river. I have seen father, mother, sisters, and brothers slip away into the shadows of death until I alone am left. My only remaining sister, Mrs. W. M. Robertson, fell asleep in Jesus on December 26, 1918; and on March 19, 1919, less than three months, my only living brother, W. Henderson Smith, bade us farewell and his noble spirit took its flight through limitless space to the God who gave it. I feel so strangely and so lonely in this big world with them all gone. Of course, I have known all the while that one of us would be the last to go, but never thought, should it be I, that such a strange feeling would possess me. It seems that I am so far from home, and this thought is ever present: shall I see them all again, and, if so, shall I know them?

Dora was such a gentle, sweet, and lovable sister, as were all of my sisters. Her husband preceded her something more than two years, and for one year of that time she made her home with me, and my family were devoted to her. Her departure fell heavily upon us, but we realized it was better to go than to suffer as she did.

My brother William and I attended school together, fished and hunted together, and for several years prior to his removal to Alabama we were in business together. Our hearts and lives were linked and knitted together in the sweetest and tenderest of ties. Neither possessed anything too good for the other, and we were never happier than the times of our personal association. He was married late in life, and to the only woman he ever loved.

His wife's maiden name was Stubbs, but at the time of their marriage she was the Widow Rutland. A more devoted wife never lived, and during the last illness of my brother her devotion and loyalty, the patience and gentleness with which she nursed him and attended his every want, were truly sublime. Although my brother has gone, the tie between his faithful wife and me is not broken, and nothing but death will sever it. She will always be my sweet and precious sister, and my heart's deepest interest for her welfare will ever remain. My brother was as brave as a lion and as gentle and modest as a woman. He was the very embodiment of honor, possessed a sympathetic heart, and made and held friends by the score. He was simply a good man, and his friends and neighbors were devoted to him, doing all within their power to keep him with them. I preached his funeral in the presence of a large audience which assembled at his residence to pay their tribute of love to his memory. There were others who could have and would have gladly rendered the service of preaching my brother's funeral, but I wanted to do it myself. I knew him better than any one else, and knew that he would have preferred my speaking the last words over his frail and lifeless body. The day was so fitting, harmonizing so beautifully in its calmness and sunshine with the life and character of Billie Smith. He had been a member of the church for many years, and had implicit faith in God and his word. It grieves me to know that never again will I see him in this life-never again to walk with him and talk with him of days long gone by. His faithful and precious wife and I will battle on with the storms and waves on life's tempestuous sea, hoping and praying to clasp hands with him in God's own home. Farewell, dear brother and sister, and may your loved ones meet you in a world free from the sadness of farewells.

Can Prophecy Be Understood?

BY U. G. WILKINSON.

In the Gospel Advocate of January 23, page 82, is a question and answer. The querist seems desirous to understand something about the prophecies of Revelation, but the answer indicates that the writer seems to believe that prophecies are either not understandable or a mere mass of useless rubbish, maybe inserted in the Bible as a mere "filler." Now, if God does not intend us to understand prophecy, why did he give them to us?

It is true that there are many fanciful and even foolish interpretations of prophecy. The same may be said of Bible doctrines; but who rejects and refuses to understand Bible doctrines because this is true? The same may be said of Bible types and symbols; but who refuses to understand the types and symbols of the Bible because some give fanciful and foolish interpretations of them? The same might be said of the parables of Christ; yet what grand lessons are derived from the teachings of the parables by thoughtful student! Why may not the same be true of Bible prophecies?

Daniel, in the close of his prophecy, is told by the angel that partly explained the visions to him that the words were "sealed till the time of the end." (Dan. 12: 9.) Then the angel added: "Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." "The wise" certainly are those wise ones whose minds are enlightened by gospel truth and who carefully and prayerfully study to understand the prophecies as well as the other scriptures. In Rev. 13: 18 the wise man is authorized to "count the number of the beast;" that is the man of understanding. In Rev. 17: 9 the mind that has wisdom is again told to understand about the seven heads and ten horns, etc. Doubtless these are the wise virgins with oil in their lamps. Beware brother, that you be not one of the foolish virgins with no oil in your lamp! Again, when "the sixth angel poured out his vial" and the "three unclean spirits like frogs" went forth to do their work, we find this: "Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." (Rev. 16: 12-16.) Better be watching, brother, and filling your lamp with oil, even if it necessitates a study of prophecy, which these passages certainly imply!

But I am surprised that a gospel teacher, a writer in a gospel paper, would suggest that studying books on prophecy is more likely to confuse than enlighten. If this be true of books on prophecy, why not of books on other Bible subjects? And why not apply it with equal effect to the Gospel Advocate, making its teachings confusing, as well as those commentaries on Revelation therein mentioned? I have read most of these books myself, and confess that I have received very great benefit from them. In fact, I am sure that I would never have understood much about the Bible without the help of these and other books by consecrated Bible students. And why should brethren discourage the study of this branch of Bible knowledge, which is the seventh candlestick, the one that throws so much light on the great future? I believe that a better and more correct understanding of Bible prophecies will be one of the principal means of destroying infidelity, confounding the enemies of revealed truth, and converting the world. And surely the time is due for us to begin to understand many of the prophecies. They have many of them been fulfilled since the days of the apostles, and surely one ought to be able, with history before us, to at least in a general way understand many of the fulfilled prophecies. Of course unfulfilled prophecies are different and might easily be misunderstood, at least, in many details. This was true in the time of Christ. The people understood the prophecies concerning him in a general way and were expecting his advent, though many missed them in the details. Why not the same be true now? It is to be deplored that so many of our writers and preachers among the ablest ones seem to understand so little about the prophecies themselves and discourage their study. Brother, don't do this. Study them more carefully yourself and find in them a hidden beauty that, like all other Bible truth, is undreamed of by the uninitiated who never study God's holy

I myself have prepared a book on the present fulfillment of prophecies in the world war and other events of the time, which I am sure it will greatly profit any one to read. I will send it, postpaid, for fifty cents. Address U. G. Wilkinson, Comanche, Okla.

In regard to the above criticism from Brother Wilkinson, the editors of the Gospel Advocate feel that it is quite sufficient to reproduce the query referred to, with Brother McQuiddy's answer, and let the intelligence of our readers determine as to who has suggested the more practical and the safest way to treat the book of Revelation. We will also let them judge as to whether or not Brother McQuiddy's language has been distorted when he is set down as one creating the impression "that studying books on prophecy is more likely to confuse than enlighten." Read the query and the answer and then form your own conclusion:

"Brother McQuiddy: As teacher, I feel the need of help. We have just started in the book of Revelation, with one preacher in the class. He has much to say about the dragon, papal Rome, and pagan Rome. I do not see that in the first three chapters. As helps I have Martin on Revelation, Raple, DeMoss, B. W. Johnson, and White's "Sermons on Revelation." Can you recommend anything better? New or secondhand and where I could get it and cost. I understand that J. L. Martin's son wrote a book on Revelation that far surpasses "The Voice of Seven Thunders." Please give me the benefit of your experience and observation on the study of the book of Revelation.

querist certainly has a sufficient number of commentaries on Revelation. He does not need more, for it is probable more would confuse rather than enlighten. 1913 we printed for Brother P. Jay Martin, son of J. L. Martin, "The Mystery Finished; or, The New Heaven and the New Earth." I am not informed as to where Brother Martin is now located. My observation and experience teach me that human keys do not fit the divine lock. Each commentator has a new interpretation or key with which to unfold or unlock the mysteries of Revelation. Instead of seeking to interpret mysterious symbols, I devote my time to the many practical truths clearly taught in Revelation. Many practical things are enforced and taught concerning the seven churches of Asia. Of the church in Laodicea the Revelator wrote: "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. So because thou art lukewarm, and neither hot nor cold, I will spew thee out of my mouth." (Rev. 3: 15, 16.) This is clear enough, and so is this: "I know thy works (behold, I have set before thee a door opened, which none can shut), that thou hast a little power, and didst keep my word, and didst not deny my name." (Rev. 3: 8.) And so also is this clear: "Blessed are they that wash their robes, that they may have the right to come to the tree of life, and may enter in by the gates into the city." (Rev. 22: 14.) And the following is beautiful and clear enough to encourage all God's people to be faithful: "And he showed me a river of water of life, bright as crystal, pro-"And he ceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb, in the midst of the street thereof. And on this side of the river and on that was the tree of life, bearing twelve manner of fruits, yielding its fruit every month; and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." (Rev. 22: 1, 2.) There is much in Revelation that is simple, practical, and helpful. Only a morbid curiosity leads us to devote our talents to the unraveling of symbols that cannot be unraveled. There are many things connected with the plan of salvation on the divine side that are unsolvable mysteries, that we will never be able to explain to our own satisfaction, and surely not to the satisfaction of any one else. It is the part of wisdom to devote ourwhich God requires us to do. "The secret things belong unto Jehovah our God; but the things that are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law." (Deut. 29: 29.)

A Misunderstanding.

BY J. C. M'Q.

I cheerfully give this letter from Brother C. D. Crouch, which calls attention to the article that I wrote concerning the Henderson school. Doubtless I was not as careful in my phraseology as I should have been, otherwise the brother would not have misunderstood my meaning.

Wellington, Texas, March 21, 1919.—J. C. McQuiddy, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Brother: I notice in the Gospel Advocate, issue of March 13, that you write an article under the heading, "The Henderson School," and in that article you say: "A Christian brother suggested that the institution should be enlarged and that the Christian brotherhood of the South should permanently secure it." "Of course, they cannot turn their property over to the brotherhood without making a sacrifice," etc. Then you say the Gospel Advocate bids the undertaking Godspeed and is ready to cheerfully do what it can to advance the interest of this institution.

If my memory serves me correctly, our digressive brethren had some trouble a few years ago with reference to a "Brotherhood Publishing House," and the Christian Standard fought the undertaking, and, I think, very consistently; and unless I am very badly in error on this point, the Gospel Advocate expressed its views in the matter in such a way as to show that it was in sympathy with the Standard.

Be that as it may, what is the difference, in principle, between a "Brotherhood Publishing House" and a "Brotherhood School?" If there is no difference, how would you take to the idea of getting up a fund and securing the McQuiddy Printing Company to the brotherhood of the South?

I have no interest in any school or printing business, but I am a member of the church of Christ, and as a member of the great brotherhood I protest against this undertaking. I do not want to own any interest in such things.

and I cannot help it if some of the brethren force the same on the "brotherhood," for I am a member of the brotherhood," you see.

I have no objection to the brethren's raising a fund and purchasing the Henderson school and deeding the same to a number of trustees for the education of the rising generation. Neither do I object to the thing's being chartered and its being required in the charter that each trustee be a member of the church of Christ, etc. If I am not very much in error, that is about the way all the schools taught by disciples, and in which the Bible is taught, are fixed. But I do not understand that they are "brotherhood schools."

If I am in error as to the meaning and purpose of your article, I hope you will clear it up; but as I understand it. I must object to the proposition, though I love the Henderson school. Very truly yours, C. D. Croven.

I had no thought that the brethren intended to make a "Brotherhood School" in the sense of a "Brotherhood Publishing House," or anything of the kind. I was looking intently to one thing, and that was to the fact that many of our leading universities are teaching infidelity and that the Christian people do not have a school that gives a university education that is free from teaching higher criticism and other forms of infidelity.

The intention of the brethren at Henderson was to deed the property to a number of trustees, have the institution chartered as a nonprofiting corporation, and to have in charge of the teaching men who are loyal and faithful to the word of God and who would not teach infidelity to those intrusted to their care. Christians would be fortunate to have such a school to which they could send their children, for as yet there is no such school, so far as my knowledge goes, among Christians. It is true that there are a number of schools owned by disciples, but not one is able to give a university education.

I have never thought that it was the work of the school to do the work of the church, and have no thought of encouraging any institution to do a work that will supplant the church in its work.

So far as I am concerned, I would be glad to have brotherhood banks, brotherhood farms, and brotherhood schools, meaning by this schools that Christians could patronize without having the faith of their sons and daughters undermined and schools that are devoted to Christ. Do you not agree, my brother, with me in this? Christians who run a bank, who teach a school, or who run a farm, are all under obligations to use such in a way that will advance the church of the Lord Jesus Christ. If not, why not? Instead of such banks and schools and farms undermining the church or doing the work that the church was founded to do, they would only encourage and help the church in doing the work God ordained for it to do.

While some people have had me departing from the faith for thirty-four years or even longer, I am glad to say that I have made slow progress and that I have never had anything to do with forming any association of Christians or taking part in any preachers' meetings or anything else which is calculated to take away from the church the work that God has appointed for It to do.

I am glad our brother called attention to the article, as it gives me an opportunity of explaining just what I meant.

Introducing Freed-Hardeman College.

BY A. B. L.

While conducting the meeting at Henderson, Tenn., it was my privilege to attend a conference of the friends and supporters of the National Teachers' Normal and Business College held on March 25, 26. This conference was very largely attended by brethren from Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas, Missouri, Texas, Mississippi, and Alabama. Enthusiasm prevailed from start to finish. They all came with the one purpose to wisely consider how to perpetuate and to safeguard the interests of the school and at the same time enlarge its field of usefulness. Brother N. B. Hardeman presented a simple, straightforward statement of the history of the school, its present status, and Its immediate needs. After mature deliberation, it was decided by the meeting to purchase the school plant from Freed and Hardeman and to recharter and to rename it. A new charter was drawn and a directorate of five brethren were selected to exercise control over the property. This board is composed of Walter Warren, Rives, Tenn,; L. A. Winstead, Dresden, Tenn.; J. G. Hardeman, Henderson, Tenn.; R. G. Watson, Crockett County, Tenn.; Dr. W. M. B. Cox, Baldwyn, Miss. These brethren will have the benefit of an Advisory Board of twenty-five men to be selected. With the unanimous approval of all present, it was decided to launch a campaign for the purpose of raising one hundred thousand dollars with which to buy, enlarge, and further equip the school plant. It is very encouraging to report that practically twenty thousand dollars, or one-fifth of the amount asked for, was raised at this meeting. As a distinct mark of recognition of the untiring and self-sacrificing efforts of the present managers, the committee decided to rename the institution "The Freed-Hardeman School." To do this, it was necessary to overcome a vigorous protest from the two men who were thus signally honored.

That the school is exercising a potent and ever-increasing Christian influence for good at home and abroad was clear to all. Perhaps the best mark of its local influence is that during the first five days of our meeting twenty-five of its students made the good confession, and the end is not yet.

I give this encouraging bit of news in the hope that all our readers may eatch the vision of a greater and more unselfish service in our Master's vineyard. We wish for the friends and supporters of the Freed-Hardeman School great success in their undertaking.

	AND DESCRIPTION OF THE PARTY OF

The following Associated Press report, under date of March 16, tells the sad story respecting conditions in the Near East:

Thousands of men, women, and children are starving to death in the Caucasus, according to the first report from Dr. James L. Barton, chairman of the commission recently sent to that region by the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, received at the headquarters of the committee here to-day.

"There is no bread anywhere," said the report. "The government has not a pound. There are forty-five thousand persons in Erivan without bread, and the orphanages and troops all through Erivan are in terrible condition

"There is not a dog, cat, horse, camel, or any living thing in all the Igdir region. We saw refugee women stripping the flesh from a dead horse with their bare hands to-day.

Another week will score ten thousand lives lost.

"For heaven's sake, hurry! We have enough food in the country now at Baku and Batum to keep the starying people alive for a time. The railways are doing all they possibly can to get food to the sufferers, but snow is our enemy at present.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners,

We rarely enter into appreciation of the simplest blessings God gives us until for a brief period we are deprived of them. Never is the sky so blue or the sunshine so glorious: never the grass so richly green or the flowers more radiantly beautiful; never does the song of the birds fall more sweetly on the listening ear than when from some deep, dark cavern beneath the earth we come again into the glorious freedom of the noonday. Never does the dear homeland seem so transfigured for us as when, after the long absence and the journeying through the realms afar, we catch the first faint outline of its shores from the deck of the vessel homeward bound. Health, strength, and the use of our special senses, how little do we value them when all goes well; but when for a while God takes them away. how precious do they become to us! The Sisters' Class.

Never before has there been such interest in any of our class work as now exists in our sisters' meeting on Tuesday afternoons. The class grows from week to week, and those who are not members are falling in with us in our Bible study. Just recently this class raised the funds to buy three suits of clothes, with shoes and other needed articles, for the sons of one of our sisters who was unable to properly dress her children for attendance at our Lord's-day-morning Bible study. They are there now every Lord's day, and their faces are always bright and happy. We have secured a nice supply of the "Soldiers and Sailors Edition" of "Eunice Loyd" from Brother Rowe, and the spring campaign for the conversion of souls is on. We were never so hopeful of doing greater things for the cause of Christ. Q. Q.

Larger Quarters.

As some of our readers know, the West End Avenue congregation is the mother church in this city. Out of it have come the East Point and South Pryor Street congregations, with a number of other smaller congregations further out. I am glad to say that we have outgrown our building again, and steps are now being taken to enlarge the West End Avenue house of worship, as we are not just ready yet to start a new congregation. Brother Brooks continues to grow in favor with the East Point brethren, and the work there is growing right along. Brother Templeton is helping some with the work at Rockmart now, and is greatly appreciated by the brethren at that place. The Rockmart brethren are not only having preaching, but they are now using about a column and a half in the weekly paper published at that place as a means of "preaching the word." Brother Garrett is helping some with the Macon work and is enjoying it. Brother Flavil Hall is visiting Dalton and Tunnel Hill once a month, and they are much pleased with him.

"The Women's Club" Disturbed.

Some days ago I saw in our city papers a resolution passed by "The Women's Club," calling attention to the indecency of some of the modern styles of women's dress, especially among our girls, and insisting that a reformation is needed. They claimed that the present styles, some of them, if continued, would have a terribly demoralizing effect on the boys returning from France. I thought the suggestion a most timely one and will be pleased to see good result therefrom.

But as I meditated upon the resolution and its timeliness, I wondered how many girls from our Christian homes needed the advice. By "Christian homes" I simply have in mind the homes where the father and mother are members of the church of our Lord and Savior. Is it not true that about all the influence that some of our own girls receive, so far as the style of dress is concerned, is what they receive from the world, not from the church or home influences? Is it not true that, as a rule, our girls are continually looking elsewhere for such things, and that it never occurs to them that advice along such lines should be received at home? And is it not also true that this state of affairs is not so much the fault of our girls as it is the "thick-headedness," stupidity, or criminal neglectwhatever else you may be pleased to call it-of our fathers and mothers?

It is amazingly strange to me why our Christian fathers and mothers are so slow in grasping the seriousness as well as the sacredness of the obligations that rest upon them toward their children. Our Christian girls should receive absolutely all advice as to decent and indecent dress from their own mothers or from the elderly women in the church. It is a sad day when such organizations as "The Women's Club" have to take steps to save our girls in the church from such styles of dress as will lead them on to ruin and to the demoralizing of the young manhood of our country. Of course, the resolution had reference to all girls who yield to indecent styles of dress; but who will say that some of our own girls in the church are not among the number? Elders and evangelists should remember that it is their duty to teach along these lines, and indecent styles of dress should not be tolerated in our churches. When young ladies who are members of the church receive not the proper instruction at home and yield to the objectionable styles of dress, a protest should at once be made by the elders wherever the membership of such young ladies may be. If not, why not?

Home.

What has been said above constrains me to say a few words about our homes. What kind of places should our homes be? Do you know that, as a rule, our young people had rather be almost anywhere else than at home? Why is this? Should it be so? And does it prove that our young people are naturally "bent" the wrong way? It does not. The trouble is that too many of our fathers and mothers make home so unpleasant to the children that they want to get away for an agreeable change. Home should be made the sweetest place on earth to the child. Who will deny it? But when the father and mother are cross with each other and continually nag the child, how can the child love home? "There is no place like home" certainly is true; but this applies to a home that is what God would have it be. Some of our children, I fear, could say: "There is no place so unpleasant as home." Such conditions should never be where the father and mother claim to be Christians.

Listen, mothers! Become a girl again with your daughters. Enter with them into those things that are interesting to girls. Play with them, laugh with them, have the innocent jokes with them, and make them have a jolly, good time at home. Why not? Listen, fathers! Be a boy with your boy. Take some interest in his innocent games. Get down on the floor and be a boy again. It will help you as much as the boy. Be the best chum your boy has. Be such an interesting and jolly chum that your boy can find no other chum that excels you. This will make the boy love home because there is something lovable at home. And, mother, don't forget to ever meet your boy with a smile. Let him know how exceedingly interested you are in seeing him grow into the best of men. And the father should remember that there is an interest he must take in his daughters. Be sweethearts, indeed, with them. Let no man be kinder to them, or more thoughtful of them.

Now will some one say I am a dreamer and that these things are not practical in our homes? Tell me not that I am correct. I know it is so. Nothing else is compatible with pure and undefiled religion. It would be hard to get such a course as I have suggested carried out in some homes, because they have started wrong and have become almost immovably fixed in the wrong way.

If you will pardon me for the reference, I will say that nothing does me more good than to know how much my own son loves to be with me. We are the best of chums. His love for home, companionship, and the fact that he is ever conscious that his mother and I enter into all his pleasures give a joy indescribable. And the way I have tried to tell you to do is exactly the way we have endeavored to do. The Lord bless our homes and make them all happy, attractive places for our young people to live in!

Why Not "Put It Across?"

BY C. G. VINCENT.

The above heading is an army slogan. We all know its meaning. We might wisely use and apply it to our missionary effort. Specifically I have in mind the matter of assisting the Japanese brethren to secure that much-needed lot. A letter from Brother Hiratsuka makes a strong appeal for immediate action. They have a suitable lot, about twenty-three by two hundred feet, near their work in Tekyo. They need, in addition to what they now have on hand, about two thousand dollars. This sum can and ought to be raised in sixty days; in fact, it could be done in thirty days. There is, it seems to me, no need to question the wisdom or the sincerity of these Christians; for their Christianity is as genuine as ours, and the ability of these elders is above the average. They are worthy of our full confidence and any assistance we can give them. I shall advise them to go ahead and secure an option on the lot by a payment. Can they depend on you to see them through successfully-to "put it across?" The world war and its demands are over. Those Liberty Bonds you purchased will increase in value. Business is good and will improve, so experts in economics tell us. So there is no need of anxiety as to "dark days" ahead. The churches have been liberal in the past. They should be more liberal in the future, especially as regards activities in foreign lands. The need I am appealing for calls the loudest and has called the longest. Why not take care of it at once? I feel confident that the brotherhood will respond liberally and promptly. An investment in this cause will pay dividends in time and eternity. As stated before, Brother W. W. Freeman, of Abilene, Texas, will receive and forward offerings for the lot and for current expenses.

Sorry to say, the lot desired has been taken by others while we waited on brethren and sisters for funds necessary to close the deal. Nearly two thousand dollars is yet needed to pay for the lot. Then we must assist the native brethren to put a good building up. Both Brother McCaleb and Brother Vincent report the native brethren as doing well their part. The Kamitomizaka church is old and stands on rented land. Brother Vincent worked six months to raise ten thousand dollars to put up a two-story building on a well-located lot. Thus a home for the missionary, a schoolroom, a church, and a kindergarten would be furnished. He is still working and praying for it.

We find general unrest and dissatisfaction with past records. The mission work of churches of Christ is not an exception in this. When only five hundred of nine thousand "loyal" churches are giving anything, and only a hundred of these are giving regularly, there is cause and reason for unrest. When denominations raise millions and millions, it is a shame for such a record as the above approximate facts to be made. All papers to whom I report and all those who send to missionaries agree that we should not switch gifts; that regular support should be continued; and, my point now, that one special emergency should be pushed at a time. So I want all of us to get behind this matter and push it "over the top" as soon as possible. We can. Will we do it? Lives spent in this work so far, the hundreds already reached, the prospects, and the love of God call for our best. I report all funds and accounts are audited quarterly. W. W. FREEMAN.

Contributions received since last report: From Dayton, Ohio, $14; Christian Leader, $32; Meaford, Ontario, Canada, by Janes, $36; by Miss Nellie Straiton, $2.50; church at La Mine, Mo., $7.03; J. R. Cummins, Pennsylvania, $2; Parkland, Ky., $7; Earl Hodson, Alabama, $5. Total. $105.53; Forwarded since last report, two drafts of $70 each.

Regular expenses now are $22,40 a month more than when we got this amount from rent of Vincent home there. It is now occupied by women workers.

Other people are raising millions. Why may we not get together at an early date ten thousand dollars to put up a two-story plant where we have a fine work begun? The natives are doing well their part. No charges are made for handling funds. Every cent goes to the work. "It is up to you" to do something. Address me at Abilene, Texas.

The Church and the War.

There are, indeed, only two possible laws for man's guidance. One is the law of the jungle, which holds that man must be regarded as a more highly developed beast. The other is the law of Life, which is revealed by the incarnate One. This rests in the admission that the law of man's life and the law of God's life are identical. German philosophy has frankly declared that the first is the only practical theory. Germans have undertaken to compel its acceptance by mankind. . . . After the war is ended and the race is safe from organized brutality, will it stupidly begin to build again on the old foundations and again erect a temple to sordidness? It will depend on organized Christianity. The church of the living God must fulfill its mission if scientific materialism is not again to lure men away from the truth which will make them free .-Bishop Lloyd, in the Spirit of Missions.

"It Is I; Be Not Afraid."

BY FANNIE HURST.

On the storm-tossed Galilee,
In the fourth watch of the night,
Vainly the weary disciples
Were rowing with all their might;
And the Lord saw their distress
As alone in the mountain he prayed,
And he came to their rescue, saying:
"It is I; be not afraid."

Though storms and disappointments
I encounter on my way,
I know that Christ will help me,
If I serve him day by day.
E'en when hours may seem the darkest,
He, on whom my cares are laid,
Tenderly will speak peace, saying:
"It is I; be not afraid."

Lord, let me not fear the tempest
As I cross life's Galilee;
Let me know that thou art near me,
Having put my trust in thee
Help me to live a life so Christlike
That, when I enter the Valley of Shade,
That dear voice will greet me, saying:
"It is I; be not afraid."

An Inconsistent Denial.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Brother Jorgenson replies to the charge that he taught

Prichard, Ala., December 13, 1918.—Brother McQuiddy: A young preacher of Louisville, Ky., who held a tent meeting for us several years ago, taught publicly that baptized believers are not yet in the kingdom, but only in the vestibule of the kingdom. He also taught that it is just as necessary to wash one another's feet as it is to partake of the Lord's Supper. Please give me book, chapter, and verse to prove these things, as he did not.

I am glad to give our readers that part of his letter of denial that has any bearing on the subject. He says:

Louisville, Ky., March 12, 1919.—J. C. McQuiddy, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Brother: I have already explained to you the reason for my delay in answering your inquiry relative to my teaching at Prichard, Ala.

The charges as stated are false. The testimony of my sermon notes and written testimony now in hand from my Prichard audience settle that. I knew the report was false as soon as I read it in the Gospel Advocate of January 10, but I delayed my present to your inquiry until I had 9, but I delayed my answer to your inquiry until I had examined and secured the testimony mentioned. The examined and secured the testimony mentioned. charges sound so much like some that were manufactured in Louisville that some connection is almost certain.

On your first question, I teach now, and I taught then, that baptized believers are in the kingdom. (Col. 1: 13; John 3: 3, 5.) As the house is larger than the vestibule, but includes the vestibule, so the kingdom of God is larger than the church, but includes the church. If I have ever used the vestibule illustration, it was in this comparison. On foot washing, I teach now, and I taught then, exactly as you do in the last paragraph of your article, January 9; exactly as you do in "Query Department," March 6; and exactly as Brother Elam did, commenting on John 13 in the "Gospel Quarterly." If you and he have taught what is charged, then I have; but if you have not, then I have

C. A. Taylor, whom you defend, has wickedly misrepresented me without cause. I had been making the point that since our differences do not change our congregational practices, they should not divide us. Unable to meet this point, he trumped up something that would affect congregational practice. Without an evil purpose, no man could have made out the hair's breadth of a difference between my teaching on foot washing and the teaching of yourself, Elam, and others whom he regards as "sound." When he attacked me on the subject, I asked Roy Bagby about proposing to Taylor that he and I sign and read Elam's comments to the class, as representing us both. set forth my teaching perfectly, and I did not see how Taylor could refuse; but when Bagby made the excellent point that it would be the creed principle and would set the precedent of agreeing on human statements of faith, I gave up the idea.

Now, if you care to be just in this matter, you will correct the slander against me and against every other "young preacher of Louisville, Ky.," which you printed January 9; and will you kindly print this letter in full if you refer to the matter at all?

I could say something about your ungodly "Janes-Me-Henry-Martin-Jorgenson combination" article; but I will see first if you have the honor to correct the Prichard misrepresentation, and I do not wish to widen the breach nor hinder a settlement. Sincerely and fraternally,

As Brother Jorgenson now states his position on the subject of foot washing, it is eliminated from this article, leaving it to him and the Highland brethren to decide what he taught on foot washing in the Highland Church, which produced a very decided argument over his teaching. This being out of the way for the present, attention will be given to the charge that he "taught publicly that baptized believers are not yet in the kingdom, but only in the vestibule of the kingdom," and his denial.

It is a matter for deep regret that he considered it proper to appeal to his audience to know what he taught. Brother Jorgenson should know what he taught; and if he does not, he is not a safe teacher and should give special heed to the following admonition of the Spirit: "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2: 15.) Brother Jorgenson should be able to settle this matter, and I am sure he does settle it, without an appeal to his notes and the andience

Simply to corroborate Brother Jorgenson in what he says he teaches concerning baptized believers being only in the vestibule of the kingdom, I submit a letter from Brother

Dear Brother McQuiddy: The first time I ever heard a professed member of the church of Christ teach that the kingdom of God has not yet been established was at Prichard during a Bible class being taught by me under a tent where E. L. Jorgenson was conducting a tent meeting, made the point that the kingdom of heaven had already been established, being identical with the church. to make the point impressive, I referred to the prayer of the Savior in which he prayed, "Thy kingdom come," called attention to the time of the prayer, and stated that Christians cannot intelligently pray that part of that Christians cannot intelligently pray that part of that prayer now, for that particular request the Lord has already granted once and for all. I stated further that the well-informed Christian will pray not for the kingdom to come, but for its influence to be extended. It was here that Brother Jorgenson interrupted with the statement that, on the contrary, Christians could understandingly pray for the kingdom to come. This precipitated a short argument on the kingdom question, in the course of which he presented some ideas that were then entirely new to me. stating that Christians are not in the kingdom, but in a state of preparation for it—as it were, in the vestibule of the kingdom—in a state of readiness or preparation to enter into the kingdom itself when that kingdom should Fraternally, JERRE WATSON.

Brother Watson was the teacher and not the hearer. If he had been simply a hearer, Brother Jorgenson might say he was mistaken; but coming as it does, when his teaching was called in question, only makes his evidence more conclusive and convincing.

I could not think that a man of Brother Jorgenson's intelligence did not know what he taught regarding baptized believers. He now confirms that view in his own words: "On your first question, I teach now, and I taught then, that baptized believers are in the kingdom. (Col. 1: 13; John 3: 3, 5.) As the house is larger than the vestibule, but includes the vestibule, so the kingdom of God is larger than the church, but includes the church. If I have ever used the vestibule illustration, it was in this comparison."

So he teaches that the church is to the kingdom as the vestibule is to the house. The vestibule, or porch, of a house is a very tame affair. Without the house, it would be almost worthless, if not wholly so. But as a man in the porch is not in the house, so the man in the church is not in the kingdom, according to Brother Jorgenson, but only in the vestibule of the kingdom. But the house "includes the vestibule," says our brother. So does it include the roof; but the man on top of the roof is not in the house. When Christ was tried, Peter was in the court, but later it is said of him: "And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him." (Matt. 26: 71.) He left the court and went out into the porch So he teaches-and he quotes Col. 1: 13 and John 3: 3, 5 as proof-that baptized believers are in the kingdom because they are in the church, which is the vestibule of the kingdom. He is in the kingdom because he is in the vestibule, and the vestibule is included in the house. The baptized believer does not get into the dining room, kitchen, and living room, where there is a cheerful fire to warm and wholesome food to sustain and strengthen him; but he gets only into the vestibule, where there are none of these comforts to enjoy. I am uncompromisingly opposed to the teaching that keeps a baptized believer in a vestibule exposed to the rain and freezes, while giving him nothing with which to warm, feed, and develop him-Brother Watson's letter and Brother Jorgenson's statement of his teaching convict him and exonerate the sister and me of the charge of slander. It is dangerous to seek to hide the truth under the charge of slander.

So far as the saved are concerned, the church is as broad as the kingdom of heaven. All saved people are in the church and also in the kingdom of heaven. All people who are called out from the world are in the church; and the same people, being governed by Christ as their King, are in the kingdom of heaven. John the Baptist and Christ during his personal ministry preached that the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Christ uses the church and the kingdom of heaven interchangeably. To Peter he said: "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it. I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 16: 18, 19.) Peter had the keys of the kingdom; and in making known the conditions of entrance into it, he made known the conditions of entrance into the church, which are identical. On the day of Pentecost (Acts 2) he made them known to the Jews, and at the household of Cornelius (Acts 10) he made them known to the Gentiles. If the keys given to Peter did not fit the church as well as the kingdom, it is very remarkable that no one has ever discovered the keys with which he unlocked the church, which recent Adventism would have us believe will be caught up with the Lord at what its advocates term the "rapture," while Christ's kingdom will be established when he comes again at the millennium.

Brother Jorgenson's language belittles the church and all gospel agencies. It convicts him of teaching something not warranted by the Bible and establishes beyond a doubt that he cannot state his doctrine in Bible words, as he and his associates claim to be able to do. Let him show where the Bible compares the church to a vestibule, or let him even find the word "vestibule" in the Bible. It grieves all godly people when teachers set up theories not warranted by the Bible and then try to force the Bible to support them.

Recent Adventism teaches that when Christ comes again he will begin a reign of a thousand years, whereas the Bible teaches that he will come again at the end of the world and then will be the judgment. That at Christ's second coming will be the end of the world is emphasized by the teaching of many parables.

Brother Jorgenson's harsh words concerning Brother Taylor and his calling in question his motives is unchristian and shows a spirit of persecution of which I do not believe he would be guilty had he not wronged him. If he were justified in withdrawing fellowship from him, which he was not, his spirit is bad and he is now doing wrong. If he is right and Brother Taylor wrong, he should try to save him. Withdrawal should be for the salvation of the offender and the protection of the church. "And if any man obeyeth not our word by this epistle, note that man, that ye have no company with him, to the end that he may be ashamed. And yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother." (2 Thess. 3: 14, 15.) Cutting off a member should be the last resort. The surgeon does not amputate a limb and then persecute the suffering patient. The public would not permit such severity and cruelty; neither will the church uphold Brother Jorgenson in his bitter persecution of those from whom he led the Highland Church to withdraw. He can have no peace with justice and right until he repents and undoes his wrong. There is a ceaseless conflict between virtue and vice.

As to the missionaries, the churches have a right to know, and should know, whom they are supporting. They should know how funds supplied by them are used. In a recent letter, Brother Rowe, publisher of the Christian Leader, says:

I have just to-day received McHenry's report for 1918. I notice among his personal expenses that he mentions: "Approximately seven hundred and fifty dollars from personal receipts was used in paying off a deficit and expenses of a court trial," I cannot see why the brotherhood at large should be called on to pay his court expenses. If I print his report, it will be in a very condensed form.

The churches should select the missionaries, should support them in the work, and the missionaries should be amenable to and give reports to the church or churches supporting them. On this subject Brother Rowe also says:

Brother Shepherd brought out the importance of the congregation's standing behind the missionary. That is, if a missionary is sent out, let the announcement be made by the congregation, and let the support of the missionary be sent to that congregation, and keep the congregation and its missionary before the people, rather than the missionary and some self-appointed secretary. I find that there is much objection to the course pursued by Brother Janes and others. This thing of their announcing missionaries right and left, I think, has reached the limit; but if the papers insist that the missionaries be indorsed by the home congregation and the financial support conducted by the home congregation, it would take all of this out of Janes' hands and place it where the Scriptures long ago placed it.

The Bible appoints no man to select and send out missionaries and then autocratically call on the churches to support them. Interest in the truth and the church of Christ demand that some one fearlessly, firmly, but kindly, call attention to this unscriptural practice. Loyalty to truth and God demands that the facts be given the churches,

Color Blind As to Dress. BY E. A. E.

Continuing our charitable consideration of many who claim to see no harm in certain practices, we are forced to conclude that if there be any "professing godliness" who see no harm in some extreme fashions of dress, they are indeed "blinded" by "the god of this world." (2 Cor. 4: 3, 4.)

Note with seriousness the following:

CLUB CALLS ON WOMEN TO DRESS MODESTLY.

New York, February 8.—(Associated Press.)—Asserting that women's evening gowns have led fashions to the extreme limit of indecency, which is having a most demoralizing influence upon the youth of the country, the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, at a meeting Friday, adopted a resolution calling on women to dress modestly, and on designers and shopkeepers to control indecency in dress. A committee was appointed to rush the war on scanty evening gowns.

Especial attention is called to the expressions, "extreme limit of indecency," "having a most demoralizing influence upon the youth of the country." These are strong expressions. Combine this "extreme limit of indecency"—this exposure of much of woman's form—with the exciting contact in the dance with this form, and who can say there is anything but evil in the dance?

Think of mothers, professing to be Christians, dressing their daughters thus for the dance! Some daughters may thus dress and dance in spite of their godly mothers' advice and warning and influence, but Christian mothers themselves cannot encourage them.

This is not saying that all who dance dress in this "extreme limit of indecency;" and it is not saying that all who dress in this "extreme limit of indecency" dance. Some dancers may border only on indecency, and some do dress modestly; but all lend their influence to that which is immodest and indecent and wrong. Christians cannot do this.

If decent and modest club women find it necessary to pass such resolutions in order to save sister women from "indecency" of dress and exerting a "demoralizing influence upon the youth of the country," what ought the women of the church, "professing godliness," to do? Should they not "adorn themselves in modest apparel;" "with shamefastness and sobriety;" "with good works" (1 Tim. 2; 9, 10); and "in the incorruptible apparel of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price" (1 Pet. 3; 3-6); and should they not, with all the influence of Christianity, "train the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be soberminded, chaste, workers at home, kind, being in subjection to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed" (Tit. 2; 3-5)?

But what do many women of the church—foolish mothers and giddy and fashionable daughters—care for the teaching of the Bible? They trample that underfoot. They make a joke of it and laugh when one quotes it to them. They mock it. Paul declares that all women who do not dress and live as the New Testament requires "blaspheme the word of God." Do women desire to be blasphemers? Christian women—real godly women—do not.

Not only should the older women in the church set the good example and teach the younger women and girls in the church the lessons of modesty and humility and the womanly behavior of the Bible; but all elders of all churches should be such characters, in the first place, as the New Testament requires, and should clearly and distinctly teach all the word of God says against indecent dress, all immodesty, and all evil; and all preachers, presuming to instruct and to lead people to Christ, should set, to begin with, a good example in all purity and humility, and, in modesty themselves, teach in all gentleness and dignity, in all wisdom and the power of the truth, all the counsel of God on the subject of modest apparel and against worldliness. But some preachers seem to destroy the effect of their sermons on these subjects by making a joke of them.

Think of woman, whose name stands for modesty personified, which is a synonym of all that is innocent, virtuous, and pure, dressing in "the extreme limit of indecency" and in a lust-exciting fashion so as to have "a most demoralizing influence upon the youth of the country!" All who do this bring shame upon woman's good name.

Since the world needs men—men of integrity and uprightness and honor, manly men and "sun-crowned men;" it likewise needs women—real womanly women clothed with dignity and strength and crowned with the beauty of holiness.

Women—wives, mothers, and sisters—who have worked so hard and so continuously for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors and against the cigarette habit should work as hard and as long for the prohibition of indecency in dress and against its "most demoralizing influence upon the youth of the country." Can the whisky habit and the cigarette habit have a more "demoralizing influence upon the youth of the country" than "the extreme limit of indecency" of the dress of women?

Indecency of dress of women goes with the demoralization, corruption, and downfall of nations. Reproving Judah of other sins, Isaiah reproves the women of their manner of dress. (Isa. 3: 16-26.)

But to reform the fashion of immodest dress, one must begin, not with the fashion and not on the outside, but with the heart. First of all, the hearts of men and women must be right. I pray God to create a new heart and to renew a right spirit within many women and not a few men. If my prayers alone could produce such a change, all hearts in all the world would be pure and clean and right in the sight of God. Truth is, decent women dress decently, modest women dress modestly, and Christian women dress in the manner which becomes Christian character. When the hearts of women are right, their dress will be right.

Dress does not make the man or the woman, but both women and men are known by their dress.

THE CHURCH SHOULD TAKE ITS BEARING.

The church should do this in order to see whether or not it is simply drifting with the current or stemming the tide and making proper headway toward the heavenly port.

The church should learn from the only source of information—the Bible—what the church of God is—its foundation, its builder, its construction or organization, its head and lawgiver, its government, its only standard and guide, its mission, its relationship to the world, the world's antagonism to it, and its destiny. It should again "ask for the old paths" and "where is the good way," and should "walk therein." It should "put on the whole armor of God," that it may "be able to quench all the fiery darts of the evil one" (Eph. 6: 10-20), may "war the good warfare" (1 Tim. 1: 18), may "fight the good fight of the faith," and may lay hold on eternal life (1 Tim. 6: 13.) It should not sleep on Delilah's lap until shorn of its power and delivered helpless into the hands of the enemy. It should form no entangling alliances with various religious denominations, but should rejoice still in the freedom wherewith God has set it free. It should likewise form no unholy relationship with the world, because "the friendship of the world is enmity with God" and spiritual adultery against Christ. (James 4: 3, 4.) It should raise its voice clear and strong against the dance, the increasing divorce evil, adultery in every form, immodest dress, fraud and rascality, immorality and unrighteousness, and ungodliness of every sort.

The Literary Digest recently quoted largely from an article, indorsing the article, in which is the following:

Again, we submit that all too frequently the whole accent has been placed upon future bliss rather than present world betterment; but our age has witnessed revolutionary changes, not only in the church's teaching, but in the church's methods. There may not be many martyrs in our day, but there are certainly church heroes to be found in every town and city ready to spend and be spent, not only that their fellows may have a closer relation to a future heaven, but a more perfect relation of a better world in which we now live.

There have been no "revolutionary changes" in the teaching of the church of the New Testament, and there cannot be. This teaching "was once for all delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3) by revelation and cannot be changed. Famines, pestilences, wars, and all upheavals among the nations of earth cannot change it. Here it is:

Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work. (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.)

What "revolutionary change" can there be in this? He who talks about any revolutionary change in the teaching of Christ talks infidelity and rejection of the will of God. The apostles "preached the gospel . . . by the Holy Spirit sent forth from heaven" (1 Pet. 1: 12), and an power of men or revolution on earth can change it.

But though we, or an angel from heaven, should preach unto you any gospel other than that which we preached unto you, let him be anathema. As we have said before, so say I now again, If any man preacheth unto you any gospel other than that which ye received, let him be anathema. (Gal. 1: 8, 9.)

It is absolute foolishness and infidelity to talk of changing the gospel of Christ or the teaching of the New Testament church. Such talk is of the world and is prompted by the wisdom and spirit of the world. It may sound smart and is just at this time popular; but it is the very essence of rejection of Christ.

Revolutions and upheavals of nations may change the teaching of various religious denominations—the theories, speculations, doctrines and commandments, traditions and dogmas of men—and we would that all these were changed and surrendered for the word of God; but that makes no change in the gospel of Christ.

The Literary Digest and other secular papers seem to class all teaching of all denominations—Roman Catholic and Protestant—as that of "the church." The church of the New Testament does not embrace all such contradictory and confusing teaching.

Again, when less "accent has been placed upon future bliss" and less close "relation to a future heaven" is maintained, the whole work of redemption and the glorious consummation of the gospel have begun to be destroyed. The teaching of the church of the New Testament is:

Seek the things that are above, where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God. Set your mind on the things that are above, not on the things that are upon the earth. For ye died, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall be manifested, then shall ye also with him be manifested in glory. (Col. 3: 1-4.)

To what are Christians dead? They are dead to sin—dead, therefore, to the love of money, to the love of pleasure, to the love of the world—dead to the world, and have been buried in baptism out of and away from all these, and have arisen from this burial to live a new life.

If in this life only we have hoped in Christ, we are of all men most pitiable. (1 Cor. 15: 19—margin.)

Spiritual growth, development, and power cannot be measured by material prosperity. It is a woeful mistake to estimate spiritual things by material prosperity. People may be at the height of worldly prosperity and glory and in the depths of corruption and sin. Israel was. The rich man enjoyed great material prosperity and came short of "future bliss" and "future heaven." How about Lazarus?

Godliness has "promise of the life which now is, and of hat which is to come." (1 Tim. 4: 8.) Christians, all hings being equal, live the best, live the longest, see good lays, and get the most real contentment and peace and ood out of this life; but the end is eternal life. (See 1 'et. 3: 8-12; Rom. 6: 22, 23.)

The governments of the world use religion of every kind and denominations of all orders to enhance their material rosperity. With the governments of earth, as governents, religion and all religious denominations are only means to a material end. Not so with the church of the trist and kingdom of heaven.

When all seems to be utterly dark, listen to the loneliss of others. Giving is the very seed of getting.—Kaufun.

But One Way to Be Perfectly Safe.

BY E. G. S.

No one can be safe as to the welfare of the soul and be guided in all things by human wisdom. In worldly matters we may do very well to be guided by human wisdom; but in matters spiritual, matters of divine wisdom, we must be guided by divine power. Human wisdom cannot guide us aright when it comes to the salvation of our souls; in that we can be safe only when guided by the word of God. If we were cut off from all the wisdom that comes from God, we could know nothing about the salvation of our souls. We could not even know that we needed salvation, could not know anything about salvation, were it not for the light that comes from God. We could not know that there is any salvation that comes from God if he had not revealed it to us. Hence, we are wholly dependent upon God for all our knowledge of things divine.

God, in his tender mercy, has made known to us all that we need to know about things of divine nature. He has made known to us our origin and our eternal destiny. He has taught us how to live so that we may be sure of eternal happiness if we yield our hearts and lives to the guidance of his revealed will. He has also shown us that we shall suffer throughout eternity if we disregard the requirements of his revealed will. He has said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 7: 21.) This shows who it is that is always safe. Those that are not doing the revealed will of God cannot claim this safety either here or hereafter. Hence, true wisdom will strive through life to be doing the Lord's will.

Now, strange as it may seem, the masses are on the broad way, the unsafe way. This is not because there is danger surrounding the narrow way; but, on the other hand, the danger is on the broad way, because that is the road that leads to perdition. Should death overtake us on the broad way, there will be no chance for us to escape eternal ruin. While people live is their only chance to find the narrow way and avoid eternal darkness and woe. It is strange that people that seem to be sensible in all things else will cling to the dark way, while the narrow way is still in reach. But in the days of Jesus the masses were in the broad way, and he foretold that many would remain there and be eternally lost. The masses of this world to-day are in the broad way just as they were when Christ was on earth, and it will likely be so when Christ comes again.

But the question comes up: Why should it be so? No good or sensible reason can be given for it. As sure as the Bible is true, those who remain in the broad way until death will remain there in eternity, for there has been no plan made for any change after death. As the song says:

Life is the time to serve the Lord, The time to insure the great reward.

There is no plan revealed by which sinners can be changed into holiness after death. There is a very plain way revealed by which sinners may turn to Christ in this life and serve the Lord until death, and thus be ready for eternal life. Why all do not embrace it is passing strange, but that many do not is certain. If people were assured that they could make this preparation after death, they might put it off with a good degree of safety; but there is no such plan. But the Lord has arranged a plan by which salvation can be secured during life, without any room for doubt. Then, why people should allow their own thoughtlessness and indifference to take them down to eternal perdition, when the Lord is tenderly calling upon them to come to Christ and be saved, is wonderfully strange. The Lord provided the gospel plan of salvation for those who would accept it, although he knew the masses would reject it and be lost.

L. L. Yeagley preached at Russell Street Church, in Nashville, Sunday.

A. B. Lipscomb reports twenty-five baptisms for the first five days in the meeting at Henderson, Tenn. The interest is great.

From Joe A. Mason, Estill Springs, Tenn.: "R. E. L. Taylor, of Decherd, Tenn., will begin a series of meetings at this place, beginning on the fourth Sunday in April."

From M. S. Mason, Rogersville, Mo.: "Please announce that I have the last two weeks in November for a meeting. If I do not place the time by May 1, I will devote it to mission work."

From H. M. Phillips, Miami, Fla., March 25: "There were four baptisms here on March 23, 24. Some people yet are satisfied to do as God says. The three class rooms added to the church house are finished and better work can be done. Success to the Gospel Advocate."

From Willis G. Jernigan, Grand Saline, Texas, March 24: "I was with the church at Shady Grove, eight miles north of Big Sandy, yesterday, and preached three times to large crowds. The churches in East Texas are doing a splendid work. C. D. Record was with the church in Grand Saline yesterday. Pray for us."

From W. S. Long, Jr., 1420 Massachusetts Avenue, S. E., Washington, D. C., March 25: "I have just received the Gospel Advocate. It is good, and full of profitable lessons through and through. The deed has been written and the building site paid for in cash. We hope to be able to build the house that way—'pay as we go.' The church will be known as the Massachusetts Avenue church of Christ."

G. Campbell Morgan is to be in America again. The Bible Teachers' Training School has received a cablegram from W. W. White, the president, who is now in Europe, stating that Mr. Morgan would join the staff of the school in October. This date marks the opening of the twentieth year of the school's history. The same cablegram also brings word that Prof. T. R. Glover, of St. John's College, Cambridge, a writer and lecturer of wide reputation in both Great Britain and America, will come to this country to participate in the work of the school during July and August next.

From J. H. Lawson, Sherman, Texas, March 24: "I am to conduct a meeting at Dixon Springs, Tenn., in September, and would be glad to spend September and October in meetings in Tennessee or Kentucky. I have now been with the army going into the second year, doing what I could for our boys in a religious way. My labors have been appreciated, and I feel that it has been the greatest work of my life. I am now with the flying boys at Call Field, but expect to leave the field the first of April. I have no work planned to July, but must be busy in the Master's cause in some way. This field will be abandoned, and the boys are now being sent to all parts of the country. I am truly glad to see them getting back into civil life. This work has been the hardest of my life, but I have enjoyed it."

From Will W. Slater, Muskogee, Okla., March 24: "I have resigned my position with the Express Company and am now engaged in a singing school at Spaulding, Okla. There are one hundred and fifty in the class, and the school seems to be a success. I preached for the brethren here yesterday, and we had two splendid services. They have asked me to hold their meeting, but I have not yet decided as to whether the time I have vacant will be suitable or not. School will close Thursday, and I will return home and preach for the brethren at Muskogee over the fifth Sunday. I will then move my family to Fort Smith, Ark., and take up the work for the Park Hill or Jenny Lind Avenue congregation on the first Sunday in April. I will preach two Sundays in each month for the Park Hill Church; one Sunday at Shady Point, Okla.; one Sunday near Greenwood, Ark., for the Valley View congregation; and the fifth Sundays will be given to the Slatonville congregation. We hope to accomplish much good in our new location. Pray for us. My new address will be Box 241, Fort Smith, Ark."

W. M. Oakley, superintendent of the Potter Orphan Home and School, Bowling Green, Ky., addresses this to the churches of Christ: "I am glad to announce that the contract has been let (by competitive bids) for our longtalked of water plant, and work will begin at once. The plant complete will cost about twelve hundred dollars. We have in bank eight hundred and fifty dollars, with some promises when the work begins. I have urged the board of trustees to start this work, with the promise that I would raise the money lacking by the time the work is complete, which is promised by April 15. I must push this plant to completion on or before May 1, the welfare of our dear children demanding it. Many have already contributed to this fund, some to waterworks, others to water Many have already conand lights. Will not others let their contributions come I am sure you want some fellowship with us in this much-needed improvement. Do not be afraid too much will be contributed. If we have any money over, we will apply it to the fund for lights, which are also sorely needed and which we hope to have installed by our July meeting. Water first, lights next! Will you relieve our anxiety by letting your contributions come at once? We confidently expect you to do so, and I pray that we may not be disappointed."

R. E. L. Taylor writes: "The preachers' meeting at racy City, Tenn., began on the third Sunday in March and continued eight days. The preaching brethre in at-Tracy City, Tracy City, Tenn., began on the third Sunday in March and continued eight days. The preaching brethren in attendance were: C. E. Moody; "The Holy Spirit in Conversion," G. C. Brewer; "The Eldership," R. W. Jernigan; "Supporting the Gospel," E. H. Hoover; "Instrumental Music in the Worship," M. C. Kurfees; "Did God Write the Bible?" S. P. Pittman; "The Proper Division of the Word," R. W. Jernigan. These were all the subjects appearing on the original program that were discussed, some pearing on the original program that were discussed, some of the brethren choosing to speak on other subjects. all, there were eighteen addresses, and the great variety of preachers and subjects were not only interesting and entertaining, but highly instructive and edifying. The exercises were conducted just as in a protracted meeting. The speeches were really sermons, after which an invitation was given as in all of our meetings, and the most scrupulous could have engaged in the meetings without any violation of conscience. One thing to detract from the pleasure and profit of the meeting was the absence of the venerable Brother J. D. Floyd, who, on account of his age and health, was not able to be with us. It was largely through his labors that the cause of Christ was established Tracy City, and it would have been a great pleasure to the congregation here, especially the older members, to have had him with them during the meeting, and no doubt he would rejoice to see the abundant fruit of his labors. This was, no doubt, the most profitable meeting ever held The attendance was good throughout the meeting, and the church was greatly strengthened. eight baptisms and two restorations. Another thing from which we expect much good is that while here Brother Moody sold twenty-six copies of his book, 'Eunice Loyd,' which has already done much good here and elsewhere. say this not only to recommend Brother Moody's book, but to impress on the minds of the brethren the impertance of putting good literature in the hands of the people. It is a great power for good. The hospitality of the breth-ren and sisters at Tracy City is unsurpassed. Every home was thrown open to the visitors and every one was given a cordial welcome. Besides their hospitality, they saw that no preacher went away without a check to cover his expenses. It was a meeting that will be long remembered and eternity alone can reveal the good that will come of it It was one of the best and happiest weeks of the writer life; and though he took no part in the regular program yet he kept on the jump all the week visiting from hous to house and doing personal work, besides opening an closing the meetings and doing the baptizing, and he wi always appreciate the hearty cooperation of the brethre and sisters in the work. Besides the preachers presen there were a number of visiting brethren and sisters from neighboring congregations."

A Sermon to Preachers.

1 am greatly disappointed with some preachers of to-day

With their logic and their ethics, their aristocratic way;

With their science and their theories, and their new theology,

Full of everything but Jesus and his love for you and me.

There is plenty in the Bible for the preachers of to-day, they will but search its pages and for help divine would pray;

For God's word is everlasting, and it never will grow old-

Tis, indeed, a priceless treasure—far more precious e'en than gold.

What we want is consecration in a good, true man of God.

With a Bible education and a love for God's dear word;

Who can lead us and direct us to the truth, the life, the way,

Which brings peace to soul and body through the burdens of the day.

If the preachers in our churches would preach Jesus crucified,

How through love for us he suffered and through love for us he died,

Then our pews would not be empty, as so many are to-day,

But be filled to overflowing, in a Pentecostal way.

What we need is just plain gospel, in the good, old-fashioned way,

Place of Emerson or Shakespeare, or some topic of the day.

What care we for all their sayings, or their teachings true and tried?

We want just the dear old story of the Savior crucifled.

That alone can make men better, that alone can make men free—

Just the precious, dear old story of God's love for you and me.

That is what the people's wanting; there is where the crowd will be-Where they hear the same old story which they heard at mother's knee. -Luetta Cummins.

Weekly Health Talks

BY DOCTOR WATSON.

People are easily frightened when they think something is the matter with their lungs or heart, and well they may be; but few people understand the dangers of diseased kidneys. These organs have a duty of vital importance to perform, and if they are diseased. there is no telling how or where the symptoms may appear. The kidneys are filters, and when they are healthy they remove the poisons from the blood and purify it. When the ki diseased, the poisons are spread where, and one of these poisons is uric acid. The uric acid is carried all through the system and deposited in various places, in the form of urate salts-in the feet, ankles, wrists and back - often forming bags under the eves. Sometimes the resulting trouble is called rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica and backache. Finally, come stone in the bladder, diabetes and Bright's disease.

Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., in recent years, discovered that a certain combination of remedies would dissolve uric acid (urate salts) in the system. He found this combination to be harmless, so that he made it up in tablets, of double strength, and called them Anuric Tablets. They dissolve uric acid in the human system as hot coffee dissolves sugar. If you have uric acid troubles, don't delay in taking Anuric Tablets, which can be secured in the drug stores. You can write Dr. Pierce, too, and he will tell you what to eat and how to live so that more uric acid will not form in your system. Dr. Pierce will not charge for this advice,

Our Hopeless Condition Without Christ.

BY S. WHITFIELD.

"And as Esaias said before, Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been as Sodoma, and been made like unto Gomorrha." (Rom. 9: 29.)

Sodom and Gomorrah were very wicked, and God destroyed them with brimstone and fire. They had filled their cup until it was overflowing with wickedness, and God made a short work of them by cutting them off. They were without God and without hope; hence, God made an example of them to all succeeding generations who would go in the same way of sin and rebellion against their Maker.

Now, Paul says that if God had not left Israel a seed they would have been like Sodom and Gomorrah, or they would have been all destroyed. They had all wandered away from God. "For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth these things shall live by them." (Rom. 10: 5.) But none of them did this. They all broke the law and were sinners before God. They had all sinned and fallen very far short from the glory of God. This was the condition of the Jews, and it was our condition, and it is the condition of the whole world, for all responsible people have sinned. So, if God had not seen fit to have mercy upon us, we would have been all destroyed. Hence the hopeless and helpless condition of the whole human family without Christ.

"It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not." (Lam. 3: 22.)

The mercy and compassion of God have been great toward us. We are not worthy of the least of his goodness. If justice had been meted out to us, we would have been all lost; but God saw fit to send Jesus Christ to die for us, that we might have life, and have it more abundantly. We should be very thankful to God for all that he has done for us.

"There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." (Prov. 14: 12.) "O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." (Jer. 10: 23.)

The way that the Jews thought was right was that they would all be saved and all others would be lost, but this was a sure way of death to them. Neither Jew nor Gentlie could direct his way to God. The law could not save, and all the works of man could not save. Being the fleshly descendants of Abraham could not bring salvation to a single soul. God has

The Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its most distinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was premptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, including not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, he made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

"This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4: 11, 12.)

Jesus was despised, cast out, and rejected by men in general; yet he was the Son of God, man's only hope, and the only one that died for man's eternal good and salvation. It seems strange that one that should be so much appreciated should be so much rejected; but such is the way of the world, always has been and always will be. The more we know of the world, the more we can understand what it has done and what it will do. Jesus was appreciated by the few, but was set at naught by the masses, He is the only one through whom we can be saved. "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not." (Isa. 53: 3.)

"The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." (John 1: 29.)

Jesus is the only one that can take away the sin of the world. He is the one that died in man's place, that man might be saved from his sins. He died that man might be saved from the curse of a broken law and from the penalty that was resting on him. He has opened up man's only escape from sin.

But how does he take away our sins? He does this through his death and blood. The blood of animals could not atone for sin, but the blood of Jesus can cleanse us from all sin. When man sinned, he died or was separated from God; but through the death of Jesus and the offering of his blood man may find life. Jesus died for our sins, to deliver us from death. But to gain that life that Jesus died to give us, there is something for us to do. He fought the battle against man's greatest enemy and gained the victory. He has made it possible for man to be delivered from the devil. Jesus had the right to lay down the conditions of reconciliation or peace. He has made them known, and man should be willing-yea, glad-to comply with them; and all those who hunger and thirst after righteousness and who really want to be saved in the Lord's own way will gladly comply with them.

Jesus wants the sinner to believe on him, repent of his sins, confess him before men, and submit to a burial in "With the tremendous strain imposed by over two years of almost ceaseless work in the cause of his fatherland, of which he is the foremost figure today, it is easily understood why Paderewski sought the sustaining tonic benefit of Nurated Iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullvan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.). "Let brotherly love continue." (Heb. 13: 1.) "But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased." (Verse 16.) Once upon a time I was eating dinner at a good brother's house, and I called for milk, and he jokingly replied: "Milk is scarce at this place. We only get about ninetyfive gallons of milk a day." But, without exaggerating, it does seem that the milk of brotherly kindness has ceased entirely to flow in many localities.

"But as touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you; for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another." (1 Thess. 3: 9.)

My little children, let us not love in word, neither with the tongue; but in deed and truth." (1 John 3: 16-18.)

The Christian brother or sister who would not sacrifice his or her worldly goods to assist a needy brother would not think of such a thing as laying down his or her life for the brethren. A Century of Service

In 1829 a good, old-fashioned doctor in North Carolina prepared an cintment for skin eruptions. It met the needs of his patients, and has likewise met the needs of millions of other doctors' patients. Gray's Ointment, the compound he prepared, is now rounding its hundredth year of honest, good. old-fashioned service and value. Our Gifts.

As the Magi came bearing gifts, so do we also bear gifts that relieve want; gifts that are sweet and fragrant with friendship; gifts that breathe love; gifts that mean service; gifts inspired still by the star which shone over the City of David two thousand years ago.—Kate D. Wiggin.

Sources of Happiness.

Human happiness is produced not so much by great pieces of good fortune that seldom happen as by little advantages that occur every day.— Benjamin Franklin.

Prayer has, by God's covenant of mercy, a spiritual and supernatural blessing. It draws down, as it were, to your aid, Him who proceedeth from the Father and the Son—the Holy Spirit of God and of Christ, the Comforter and Guide of believing souls. Indeed, the very words of the precept which point out prayer as so sure a remedy point out also that it is not always, nor for the most part, an immediate remedy for the evils of life.

Linch.

Paralee Isabella Linch was born on November 25, 1854, and passed from this life on March 14, 1918. For a short while early in life she was a Primitive Baptist, but was led into the true light under the preaching of Brother F. M. Dearing and had lived a Christian since that time, which was Christian since that time, which was in her twenties. She was married to John Thomas Linch on February 13, 1873, and to this union were born seven children, five of whom are still living. Father passed from this life on September 11, 1915. He, too, lived a Christian from a boy. While they a Christian from a boy. While they did not have much of this world's goods, they possessed the richest gift under heaven, which is the spirit of Christ. We surely miss them here, but we have the blessed hope of meeting them again where there will be no more sorrow or tears, if we follow in their footsteps and keep in loving touch with Christ, A DAUGHTER.

Wilson.

On January 20, 1919, the death angel visited the home of J. J. Wilson, of Coopertown, Tenn., and claimed for its victim Rosa, his devoted wife. She was born on June 9, 1883, and was married to Brother Wilson on April 7. 1901. In 1904 she obeyed the gospel of Jesus Christ at Coopertown. In her home she was a ray of sunshine, and was untiring in her efforts to make her husband and children happy. beautiful life of purity and devotion beautiful life of purity and devotion rises as sweet incense and inspires us to emulate her example. She will be missed by her many friends, in her home, and in her Sunday-school class, of which she was a loyal member. She is survived by her husband, two children, mother, father, four brothers, and two sisters. The funeral services were conducted at Coopertown by Brother Brewer. We shall hear her Brother Brewer. We shall hear her sweet voice no more, bringing comfort and cheer, nor see her loving face, scattering sunshine along the paths of life; but, loved ones, rest assured that she is asleep in the arms of Jesus.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

Gooch.

Death is a mystery, but he reaps with a sickle keen, nor does he have respect of persons; all ages and condi-tions of manking must yield to him respect of persons; all ages and conditions of mankind must yield to him. "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven," said the Savior of men. What a glorious thought, and what a great consolation, when the door little or the contraction of the door little or the door little or the door that the door little or little or the door lit when the dear little ones are snatched from the family circle, leaving sorrow-ing ones behind, to think of them as being in the glory land, free from sin forever! Margaret Louise Gooch came into this world and gladdened the hearts of Brother and Sister Jerry Gooch for a little more than three years. She was a bright, sweet child, the sunshine of the home; but her sparkling eyes and beautiful face will be seen in this world no more. That dread disease, influenza, seized upon her little form and took her away. To the bereaved ones we would say: Think of your darling as in a land of light and love, another rosebud plucked from earth to bloom in heaven through eternity, waiting and watching at the beautiful gate to welcome loved ones left weeping behind, W. Derryberry.

Pierce.

In the still, quiet hours of the morning, December 7, 1918, Sister Dena Pearl Pierce passed into that realm of rest where all the good and pure abide. She left a legacy to her husband and two little children, Mary Evelyn and Oliver Goldsmith-not a legacy of gold and silver and precious stones, but the richer legacy of ministry and sacrifice. She left a legacy to her father and mother—not of material things which can be weighed in a scale and placed in a balance, but the virtues of a duti-ful and obedient life, the memories of which will never die and the light of which will shine more and more until the perfect day. She left a legacy to her two brothers-not one which can be seen with the eyes and grasped with the hands, but one which touches the "unseen things" of Paul, which assures the soul of its safety within the veil, though the body be anchored to the bottom of the grave in death. She obeyed the gospel, at Hillsboro, Texas, under the preaching of Brother T. B. Larimore, when evil days had not come, nor when the end of life's years had drawn nigh. She remained faithful and true to the name of Jesus, on whom she believed and in whom she trusted. WARREN E. STARNES.

Rainey.

On November 28, 1918, at 3:20 A.M., our home was visited by the angel of our home was visited by the angel of death, who took from us one of the dearest ones on earth. Homer Echols Rainey, son of W. E. and Janie L.; Rainey; grandchild of Josiah L. and Nancy A. Rainey, formerly of Maury County, Tenn.; and great-grandchild of Thomas Mutter and Mary Claiborne Rainey, of Caswell County, N. C., was born on February 24, 1902, at Cottage Grove, Henry County, Tenn. Homer had beeen afflicted for about thirteen years with infantile paralysis, being years with infantile paralysis, being compelled to wear a body brace with chin rest. He bore his affliction with Christian fortitude. Every one loved him and did what they could to make life pleasant for him. Homer was converted to the primitive Christian faith under the preaching of Elder A. R. Wilson, of Farmington, Ky., and was baptized by him on July 5, 1915, in the beautiful waters of the Obion River, at Jones' Mill, Henry County, Tenn. He was seldom absent from the Lord's-day meeting, having been taught the importance of this, and was as strong in the faith as most Christians of mature age. He was possessed of an unusually bright mind and fully appreciated every kindness verted to the primitive Christian faith and fully appreciated every kindness shown him, He is survived by his fa-ther; his sister, Annie Catherine; and his brother, Joe Hunt Rainey. Ho-mer's death has left us sad and lonely, and we earnestly ask the prayers of the brotherhood that we may so live as to be accepted in that great and final day and be with him and his mother in that land where no death or sorrow ever comes. Rheumatism and Indigestion.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between indigestion This view is suband rheumatism. stantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for dyspepsia and indigestion, relieves rheumatism and the rheumatoid diseases, such as gout, sciatica, neuralgia, and nervous headache. All of these dis-eases are probably related and all are probably due, in whole or in part, to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection:

In this connection:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician. writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, if used continuously for a reasonable time, it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, adding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant, of Savannah, writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consuited a number of our best local physicians; went to Baltimore and consuited specialists there; and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living, when I began to use Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes, of Virginia, writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of "rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. I am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam, of South Carolina, writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism, and, after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water, was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter, of Virginia, writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

Secret of Concentration.

One reason for the remarkable powers of concentration possessed by some is the intense love of their work, into which they throw themselves with such ardor as to forget everything else about them; and this, after all, is the secret of all success-to forget onesolf in one's work and to become a part of that work itself, and so achieve, "forgetting and forgot" of all about except the one task to which force, physical and mental, has been brought .- Exchange.

Unwise Giving.

It is a very easy thing to toss a copper to a beggar on the street: it is generally an easier thing than not to do it. Yet love is just as often in the withholding. We purchase relief from the sympathetic feelings roused by the spectacle of misery at a copper's cost. It is too cheap-too cheap for us, and often too dear for the beggar. If we really loved him, we would either do more for him, or less .- Henry Drummond.

Astounding Preventative for Influenza.

In one department of the Iron Mountain Railway, of Texarkana, in which forty men were employed. twenty of them commenced the use of Hawley's Ointment at the outset of the 1918 influenza epidemic, every man of whom remained at his post every day during the period following, while the other twenty all suffered attacks of the disease that confined them to their homes.

Hundreds of other such tests have shown Hawley's Ointment to be an astounding preventative for influenza, and equally useful during treatment of the disease. The influenza bacillus is a germ which attacks the lungs, being breathed in through the nose and throat, the infection developing chiefly in the nasal and bronchial secretions. Hawley's Ointment is a prophylactic preventative for influenza. It keeps the nostrils thoroughly sterilized, killing the influenza bacilli as they are inhaled. Hawley's Ointment is a dependable treatment for colds, cold. sores, coughs, croup, early stages of pneumonia, and generally for bronchial troubles. Its base is readily absorbed, and it, therefore, does not inflame the nostrils when applied therein, as do most ointments having only a vaseline base.

A Pitiful Story.

BY TICE ELKINS.

It is a pitiful story I have to tell, and God only knows how hard it is to write these lines. For the last three years my wife has been breaking down in health, and no change and no treatment has helped her much. I moved her back to Childress, hoping the climate would help her. I was called by telephone from Nocona to come to her, arrived there Monday evening, and this is what the doctor tells me I have to face: That she will probably live a year, but he will not expect it: that she will be absolutely insane in less time than a year. He also tells me that it will not do to leave her alone again. Her trouble is epilepsy, running into apoplexy, induced by dropsy and other conditions incident to her age.

So I write these lines to inform the brethren everywhere and the churches where I have meetings arranged, that they may arrange with other preachers. I have twelve meetings for the season, and I must give up every one of them. Brother Rice will hold the meeting at Ryan, Okla.; so let those who were preparing to help me in it go ahead and help him, and support him well. Also, let all the congregations who were expecting me get some one else. I will be confined here at home for an indefinite time, until there is a change in wife's condition. I hate so much to give up my work; it meant bread for my little children, and God only knows how we will live; but we will trust him and hope for the best. Let those who desire to know more write to Dr. T. M. Morgan, Childress, Texas, attending physician.

I have more books I will sell-Write me what you need. I will need the money to meet bills. I am heavily in debt on account of so much sickness in the last three years. I want the prayers of all Christians that I may yet get to preach the gospel again. I will do what I can here at home.

I will write more later, brethren, and keep you informed of wife's condition. Address me at Childress, Texas, Box 536.

STOP HEADACHE REMOVE CAUSE

Your Money Back While You Wait at Counter if Aspironal Elixer Does Not Relieve in Two Minutes.

You can save half an hour or more of headache pain by taking the new Aspironal Elixir instead of the slow-acting tablets that have to wait so long to be digested and absorbed. Aspironal, being fluid, acts almost instantly, and is preferred by the doctors for the reason that it is not dangerous to the heads.

The next time you have a headwhe, go to your nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspironal, and tell him to serve you one or two teaspoonfuls (according to severity) in a little water or your favorite soda-fountain drink. With your match in your hand, count off two minutes, and call for your money back, as per manufacturer's guarantee, if you can't feel your headache fading away within the time limit.

Doctors recommend and druggists guarantee Aspironal, because they know it acts so much quicker, without the slightest danger to the heart, and because it removes the cause of billous and sick headaches by its gentle action on the liver. Aspironal corrects billousness and constipation, thereby preventing the return of your headache next day. All druggists invite and expect you to try. Aspironal; so don't be bashful. I trust that the brethren will remember us often until the true cause of Christ is fully established in this section. Personally, I am very much troubled over religious conditions in this valley. Ever since we came here, and at almost every mission point, we have been obliged to wedge in between sectarian meetings in order to have any meetings at all. The little congregation here has been gathered by preaching under trees, tobacco sheds, and in private houses, and at the present time we have no better place to meet than our own living room; and all this at a point where hundreds of people would attend our meetings if we could accommodate them. But we are poor and cannot build a house of worship unless can get liberal outside help. we came here some excellent teachers have been developed, and we expect to send some of these into other mission fields when we get our house of wor-In fact, one of these brethren is already doing mission work mainly at his own expense. To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that I have had the opportunity of examining the preparation, G. S., purchased in the open market in Atlanta, Ga., and of exhibiting the same in medical practice.

I find it to be a meritorious remedy, carefully compounded, and of high therapeutical value in the treatment of derangements of the functions of the kidneys, liver, and spicen, which derangements are indicated by rheumatic, rheumatoid, and gouty disorder.

The exact cause of rheumatism is unknown, but it is generally supposed to be due to an excess of uric acid in the blood. That excess occurs when the functions of the kidneys, liver, and spicen are deranged.

Therefore, as G. S. restores those functions, and thus frees the blood of uric acid and all else that is contaminating, it stands to reason that it is remedial of rheumatism, gout, lithernia, urleacidemia, and auto-infection from all suboxidation products of the uric acid type.

Respectfully and heartily submitted.

Edifying as the Need May Be

The Riches of His Grace.

Paul is very apt in associating the word "rich" with spiritual ideas, as if he would hammer in the great truth that the only true wealth is the wealth of the soul. He speaks of the "riches of his grace" and the "riches of the glory of his inheritance." The North American Indian estimated his wealth by his strings of wampum; the native African estimates his by the number of cattle he has with which to buy wives; the farmer estimates his by the title to a hundred or more acres of land; the banker estimates his by one or two hundred thousand dollars; the capitalist in the great city measures his by the million. In some communities the wealth of the community is estimated by the number of automobiles in proportion to the population. The head of a great merger or corporation estimates his wealth by the billion. If there is this advance in passing from the savage to the plutocrat, what must the standard of riches be when we rise above men and angels to the infinite God!

Grace is bigger than our biggest things. We can never measure either the volume or the quality of God's grace, but it is enough to know that "Plenteous grace with thee is found—Grace to cover all my sin."

Grace Brings Humility and Growth.

Paul tells us, too, that "by the grace of God I am what I am." He believed that the lives of all of us, however full of good works, are "not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace." James declared that "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." Faith is the first lesson in the School of Grace, and humility is the second. Grace is a growing and expansive force. Therefore, Christians are compared to fruitful trees. Progress is the law of life. Only living things grow, and all living things do grow. No man is born into the full Christian life, any more than he is born into manhood on coming into the world. No one grows who does not mean to grow. Great growth springs from a great purpose. "This one thing I do." To grow in one grace is to grow in all the graces. They are not isolated productions. Grace is the pledge of full and final salvation. It is glory begun, as glory is grace perfected. John Newton said:

"Through many dangers, toils, and snares
I have already come;
"Tis grace has brought me safe thus far,
And grace will lead me home."

"The Grand Christian Act."

Repentance was the keynote of apostolic teaching, as it must continue of all true evangelism. Any preaching which modifies or minimizes this essential duty is radically and fatally defective. A large part of so-called "repentance" is not a genuine sorrow for sin, but a kind of sullen sorrow because sin is not permitted. The only repentance that is acceptable in God's sight is the repentance which involves contrition and separation from sin. True repentance always produces results. John the Baptist demanded of the flocking multitudes that they bring "forth fruits meet for repentance;" the rich, by becoming unselfish; the publicans, honest in their collections and accounts; and the soldiers, by ceasing from violence. Nineveh repented at the preaching of Jonah, and king and peasant sat in sackcloth and ashes side by side. The prodigal son repented when, humbled and hungry, he faced homeward, framing his confession as he went, demanding nothing, and asked only a servant's place. Confession accompanies repentance, as forsaking follows it. Both are conditions of moral restitution. (Prov. 28: 13; 1 John 1: 9.) If these elements enter, we may say with Carlyle: "Repentance is the grand Christian act."

No Riddle About Repentance.

A quaint writer of the past has propounded something that he calls the "Riddle of Repentance." Here are his words; "Turn or burn; there is no remedy. 'Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.' Repentance is a most excellent grace; a fair daughter of a foul mother. She looks backward and moves forward; is herself a dark cloud, yet brings a fair sunshine. Is this a riddle to you? I will read it. Sin is the mother, repentance is the daughter. The mother is black and ugly; the daughter, fair and lovely. God is the Father of repentance, and he could never endure the mother's sin, but hates her society; being born, she slew her mother, for by repentance sin is slain, and in so doing God doth bless her; she no sooner receives breath but she cries for pardon and forgiveness. Miracles she works. The blind eyes are by her made to see the filthiness of sin; the deaf ear she causeth to hear the word of truth, the dumb lips to cry out for grace, and the heart that was dead becomes now alive to God, and the devil that ruled in it is now expelled." It occurs to me that to speak of repentance as a "riddle" is a misnomer. Really, where is there anything strange about it as taught in the Bible or learned from experience and observation? Everything seems to say, "The way of the transgressor is hard," and the sensible person will want to change his course.

Our Worship.

BY LEE JACKSON.

All of my lifetime, so far back as I can remember, I have experienced feelings of fimidity when trying to express my sentiments in prayer. This was the case before I became a Christian and long before I understood anything about the meaning of true worship, for my mother taught me to pray in my early childhood. She was a devout little woman, holding fast to the religious ideas inherited from her Moravian ancestors. Since I have become habituated to offering prayers before public audiences my embarrassments have increased instead of diminishing with the passing of the years. When addressing an audience of men and women, I can usually feel at ease and speak with freedom: but when I pray, I am impressed with the fact that I am addressing myself to God and that I am not to be heard for my much speaking nor for the correet formation of my sentences. I am afraid of long, wordy prayers.

With the permission of the Gospet Advocate, I will present a few suggestions relative to Christian worship. By "Christian worship" I mean that worship which is required of Christians and which is acceptable to God through the mediation of Christ. This, of course, will exclude from our consideration all of the ritualistic elements which belonged to Israel's worship under the old covenant.

Under the gospel dispensation there is no place divinely consecrated as a place of worship. If we think of our chapels and meetinghouses as divinely appointed in order to make worship acceptable, we are out of harmony with the spirit of that worship which the New Testament authorizes. Under the Old Testament system of types and shadows, God told the Israelites, through Moses, that where he recorded his name, there would he meet with them, and bless them there, (Ex. 20: 24-26,) This recording of the divine name was first upon the altar that consecrated the worship associated with the tabernacle, and afterwards upon the altar of the temple worship in the city of Jerusalem. In our Savior's conversation with the woman of Samaria at the well of Sychar, the woman said to him; "Our fathers worshiped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship. Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when neither in this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, shall ye worship the Father. Ye worship that which ye know not: we worship that which we know: for salvation is from the Jews. But the hour cometh, and new is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and truth: for such doth the Father seek to be his worshipers. God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship in spirit and truth." (John 4: 20-24.) Under the reign of grace, as personified in the reign of the Christ, there is no one place more acceptable to God as a place of worship than are all other places where men are found. The divine name is now recorded in the personality of the Christ as man's Savior; therefore, the matter of first importance in order to make worship acceptable is that the worshiper must be in a saved relationship to Christ. It is in Christ that "mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other." (Ps. 85; 10.) It is in man's behalf that this bringing together of mercy and truth and of righteousness and peace in the person of the Christ has been ordained in the wisdom of God, and it is only in and through the Christ that men can worship acceptably. All meetinghouses, all so-called "chapels" and other designated places of worship, are simply human arrangements for the convenience and comfort of the worshipers; they have nothing to do with making worship acceptable. In every hovel and in every palatial home, in caves and secluded recesses of the mountains, in the shaded woodlands and beside the brooklets and the rivers, on the lonely islands and in the crowded cities, the Christian's worship is as acceptable to God as it is in the most venerable church or chapel; and any innovation which would make worship void in church or chapel would have the same effect in making it void in the home, in the grove, on the city streets, or anywhere else that the Christian might engage in worship.

In the New Testament certain acts which men can perform are authorized as acts of worship. The first of these acts of worship is the partaking of the Lord's Supper, to be done on each first day of the week. In the assembled congregation on Lord's day, this is the one act of worship that is of first importance. It is the essential center around which all else gathers. It serves the divine purpose of calling to memory the one all-sufficient Sacrifice which has made acceptable worship possible for man. Without the death of Christ as our only meritorious sin offering, we could not worship God acceptably in any manner. It is in the observance of the Supper institution that this death is commemorated. Other authorized acts of Christian worship are prayers, thanksgivings, reading and meditating upon the things of the word of God, and the singing of hymns and spiritual songs. All this is to be done in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving the glory to God through him.

As it is enjoined upon Christians not to forsake the assembling of themselves together (Heb. 10: 25), loyalty to the authority of Christ demands that we meet, together in a worshiping assembly on the first day of the week-the day designated as the Lord's day-the central feature of this assembly worship being the partaking of the Lord's Supper. This is in accord with the practice of the congregations established by the apostles, as shown in New Testament teaching. This is emphatically stated as true of the first congregation of Christians brought into existence under apostolic preaching in Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2: 42); and to readers of the Advocate it is useless to repeat that this was the divinely ordained practice of all other congregations belonging to the apostolic age. Such local assemblies of Christian worshipers are the only institutions recognized as "churches" in the New Testament Scriptures. In my feeble efforts to study the subject in the light of all available sources of information, I find no New Testament authority for anything as a general "church" institution with which men and women can be responsibly associated as Christian worshipers. As being God's redeemed people, all Christians are subjects of the one kingdom of God and of Christ; but their responsible "church" relationship is that of the local assembly as a worshiping and working body of persons. There are many "churches" (congregations), but there is but the one kingdom, over which Christ is the ruling head. While loyalty to Christ as the ruling head requires that all things be done in an orderly manner, yet the New Testament furnishes no legalized order for the various parts of the worship in which an assembly of Christians may engage. There is nothing said about the order of the prayers, nor the number that may be offered; nothing whatever about the number or order of the songs to be sung, when they are to be sung, nor whether they are to be sung by the assembly in concert or simply by some one member who feels disposed to sing a hymn or song for the edification of those present; and in the partaking of the Supper, there is nothing to indicate that anything more than self-examination and the giving of thanks is required to make this act of worship acceptable, and this regardless of any public praying or singing either before or after the supper. So far as anything that we learn from the Scriptures to the contrary is concerned, the simple giving of thanks makes the partaking of the Supper acceptable without any other formal acts of worship being associated with it. This is in keeping with the principle of New Testament teaching which knows nothing about systematic ritualism or ceremonial forms.

Whether worshiping in the home, in the pursuit of our daily toil, or in the assembly of the saints, it is the condition of the heart and the attitude of the individual person that makes his or her worship acceptable. Neither singing nor praying by any public assembly can be performed as a substitute for the worship that is required of each individual member. Each member that participates in the praying, the singing, the thanksgiving, or any other act of worship, is alone responsible for his own attitude of mind and heart. Each one is to sing with the understanding and in spirit, if singing be the act engaged in; and so of praying and other acts that true worship requires. In partaking of the Supper, each one is required to examine himself, but is not required to examine any one else. No one is held accountable for those in the assembly who may be guilty of partaking unworthily; and things done by certain members of the assembly which may make their individual worship a worthless form can have no effect in making void the worship of the member who does worship in spirit and truth.

Wisdom. No. 1.

BY S. W. BERRYMAN,

"Teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom," (Ps. 90: 12.) "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding." (Prov. 3: 13.) "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding." (Prov. 4: 7.)

There are many lessons of wisdom taught in the word of God. God has selected small and simple things to teach us wisdom; for instance, the ant, the locust, the rabbit, and the spider. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise: which having no guide, overseer, or ruler, provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest." (Prov. 6: 6-8.) "The ants are a people not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer." (Prov. 30; 25.) In this we see one of the most wonderful lessons ever presented to mankind.

Let us consider the ways of the ant and see if they are not wise. During the sunshine of summer she prepares for winter. Why? Because she knows perfectly well that when the cold and chilly tide of winter begins the plants and herbs on which she subsists will be killed. Hence, during summer, when the plants are full of sap, she cuts them and stores them away in her home. Moreover, she knows that when winter comes it will be too cold for her to gather food even if it existed in great quantities. Winter never catches the ant without a good home and plenty of food. She knows that winter is coming, and she knows that when it does come it will be entirely too late then for her to prepare for it. Hence her wisdom in making preparations in time.

This is a warning that we should prepare for the judgment. We know good and well that the judgment is coming, and we know that when it comes it will be too late to make preparations for it. "The night cometh, when no man can work." "Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. . . . Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." (Matt. 24: 42-44.)

Another thing about the ant. She is always busy. Did you ever see an idle ant? I never did. I have watched them many times, and they are always at work. This is not true of brethren.

Remember the ant and the grasshopper. The old grasshopper came to the little ant one summer day and found her toiling and struggling in the heat to lay away some food for winter. "Why are you toiling so hard?" inquired the grasshopper. "We have plenty to eat and drink; the weather is warm and we need no shelter. Come, let's have a good time. Put on your best clothes, go into society and be gay." "Winter will soon be here," said the little ant; "then we will need a home and some food, and I must work every day to that end." "O, no," said the grasshopper; "the sunshine is warm and the wind is pleasant. I don't think we will have any winter. I must enjoy myself." But—alas!—winter came, and how cold! The little ant went into her home and was comfortable; the grasshopper was cold and hungry. Remember the rich man and Lazarus. (Luke 16.)

Another lesson from the ant. They assist each other. If a blade of grass is too heavy for one, two will take hold of it. If two cannot carry it, another one will join them. In this way they can move objects many times larger than they are. Brethren, this is a fine lesson on cooperation. We must cooperate with each other in the Lord's work, if our labors are to be effective. In the support of the gospel, some brethren carry all the burden. They give really more than they are able to give, while others sit on the stool of do-nothing idling their time and means away just like the grasshopper. A small congregation is capable of giving some means, but not enough to support a preacher. Here is another congregation in the same condition. Neither of these congregations is able within itself to support a preacher. By cooperating, the two congregations can put a man in the field and support him amply. But how many congregations are doing this? None where I have labored. Brethren, we need to go to the ant and "consider her ways, and be wise." I fear that many congregations will be held accountable for not supporting the gospel. There are thousands of people in the world who have never heard the gospel in its original simplicity and purity. The church could do ten times as much as it is doing if it would follow the New Testament example of cooperation. Remember, brethren, it is our duty to work together, and we can never accomplish what our Savior demands of us unless we cooperate and work to the same

"The conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks." (Prov. 30: 26.) The conies, or rabbits, have a wise purpose in making their houses among the rocks. The rock is a place of shelter and safety. When little dog Rover gets after the rabbit and he goes into the cleft of the rocks, he is safe so far as his enemy is concerned. No scratching him out; the rock protects him. Jesus is the Rock of our salvation. In him, and in him alone, do we find shelter and protection from the enemy. "Because I will publish the name of the Lord: ascribe ye greatness unto our God. He is the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he." (Deut. 32: 3, 4.) "I will love thee, O Lord, my strength. The Lord is my Rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my high tower." (Ps. 18: 1, 2.) "They drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ." (1 Cor. 10: 4.) As the conies are safe in the rock, so we are saved in Christ, All blessings are in him. (2 Cor. 1: 19, 20.) "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ." (Eph. 1: 3.) In Christ "we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins." (Eph. 1: 7; Col. 1: 14.) We are baptized into Christ. (See Rom. 6: 3; Gal. 3: 27.) "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." (Rev. 14: 13.)

Dear reader, are you out of Christ? If so, you stand condemned by the God of heaven. Will you not take heed to the lesson of wisdom taught by the rabbit? Make no delay, but flee to the Rock of salvation for safety and rest. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." (Matt. 11: 28.) Do not neglect or wait too long. You know not what to-morrow has in store for you. God says: "To-day, now, is the time." The devil says: "Wait till some other time." Obey now, and Heaven will crown you with blessings.

Spirit of the Press

The Church Rebuking Peace-League Politics.

Party ambitions and party issues are plentifully charged in the lay press as explaining attitudes for or against the League of Nations. Violent language may be used in some cases, but, without violent language, just as deep conviction seems to actuate the religious press, with this difference-that not one member of it, so far as we have observed, opposes the League in toto. "Four-fifths of the opposition or indifference to the League of Nations," asserts The Congregationalist (New York), the leading organ of that church, "is due, we believe, to prejudice against, or distrust of, President Wilson." It points to the fear of his critics and opponents "that he is going to secure some personal or political advantage if he carries through the proposition on which he is concentrating all his energies." The Congregationalist wonders why "the worth of a proposal affecting the destinies of mankind be pivoted upon the character or characteristics of any one man." It goes further:

Americans have a right to think what they please of their President, provided they seek to appraise him fairly and honestly, but they have no right to let their judgment with reference to his domestic policies or his political methods prevent them from forming a candid and intelligent opinion of this proposed Society of Nations. Defective as it may be, requiring, as it probably does, clarification and amendment here and there, the twenty-six points block out a path of progress for the human race.

Forget Mr. Wilson's personality for the moment and study the document. As a matter of fact, it is a composite product. The idea behind it was publicly championed by Mr. Taft long before Mr. Wilson proclaimed his adherence to the general plan. English, French, and Italian statesmen have had much to do with its basis and its phrase-ology. They are as keen for it to-day as is President Wilson himself.

We cannot, therefore, understand the attitude of those who would be secretly or openly happy if the League should fail, because of the effects of such failure upon the feelings and fortunes of Woodrow Wilson. He can stand defeat better than this great American nation. Having once taken a man's part in the world problems of our time, shall we now heed the counsels of those who would have the nation undertake to crawl back into a shell which has been forever shattered?

Our own belief is that in the long view of history, the American nation will be proud of the share which its President has had in helping to frame a project designed to avert wars and bind the nations together. Men returning from foreign lands speak of the esteem felt for him around the globe and wonder why in certain circles here in America the antipathy to Mr. Wilson is so intense and deep-seated. It is comparable only to the attitude cherished by certain sections of the English population a generation ago toward Mr. Gladstone.

But the question before us at the moment is not what Mr. Wilson is to-day or what will be thought of him ten years hence. The truly broad-minded men and women among his political opponents should see that a great international issue, bearing upon not the future of civilization only, but of Christianity, is to be settled on a higher basis than that of opposition to, or admiration for, any one participant in the Paris Conference.

The Presbyterian (Philadelphia) is not so outspoken as its Congregational brother, but it reminds "every Senator" that he is "under solemn duty to give this matter most careful deliberation, and this should be in the most courteous manner." The Methodist Zion's Herald (Boston) sees the League as "neither a Republican nor a Democratic proposition, but one that comes from the heart of the people, both in America and in Europe, who desire an end of all wars." It goes on:

"The first thing that I am going to tell the people on the other side of the water," said Mr. Wilson, "is that an overwhelming majority of the American people is in favor of the League of Nations." In this he interpreted aright, we believe, the feeling of the nation.

The Christian Advocate (New York), another Methodist organ, does not openly charge party politics, but feels it "obviously improper to advocate any plan of such importance merely as a party measure, or because of personal loyalty to the President," for—

The consequences of success or failure are so immeasurable for good or III that no such consideration should be allowed to weigh. And it is quite as discreditable to assume an attitude of hostility to the plan for fear that in the event of success some advantage will inure to the opposite party. As politics were largely subordinated to winning the war, so they should be sternly relegated to the rear at this time, when the one objective of the world's effort ought to be the establishment of peace upon foundations which give the greatest promise of permanence. Any nation should be willing to purchase such a boon at a considerable price to itself. Although there are conspicuous exceptions to these rules on both sides of the Senate chamber, it is not to be believed that such men as Senator Hitchcock or Senator Lodge, however diverse their opinions, are actuated by any other motive than the desire to promote the highest good of their country. This is no time to limit one's thought to the self-interest of his conntry. There are too many American graves in foreign soll for us ever to drop back to that prewar isolation. As Bishop Quayle said, "It is a million years since 1914," yet some men in responsible station continue to write and speak as if the events of 1918 were not. They seem to forget that the Yankee soldiers died in the faith that they were thus bringing an end, not to one, but to all wars.

The Christian Work (New York) has faith that the League shall rise above the clash of party turmoii:

While there are pessimists who cry that it is a Utopian idea and can never be made practicable, and while there are very grave difficulties in the way, and while nations may have to make distasteful sacrifices perhaps, still we must believe that an establishment of a workable League of Nations will surely be achieved and that it will be the only possible ending to the victory which we have won. President Wilson is working as hard as any other man to bring about this thing, and every intelligent citizen cannot fail to see how important it is that he should have the whole-hearted support of the nation behind him.—Literary Digest.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

W

A. B. Lipscomb closed a twelve-days' meeting at Henderson, Tenn., last Friday. There were thirty-four baptisms.

Change of address: W. J. Johns, from Gainesville, Ark., to Paragould, Ark.; Charles L. Talley, from Howell, Tenn., to Cookeville, Tenn.

From Dr. James M. Kyle, V. S., Lucy, Tenn.: "I would like to locate in some little Arkansas town where I could get a good veterinary practice and where there is a church of Christ."

From J. W. Dunn, Fort Worth, Texas: "The Central church of Christ will begin a series of meetings on the second Sunday in April with home forces. The church is enjoying a steady growth."

From J. A. Cullum, Alamogordo, N. M., Box 114: "I will be in Memphis, Tenn., in June, and again in September and October, and would be glad to arrange some meetings within a reasonable distance of that place. Until further notice address me as above."

From M. S. Mason, Rogersville, Mo., April 1: "Since writing I have filled my regular appointments and conducted two funerals. I was at Bona, Dade County, last Lord's day, and will be at Springfield next Lord's day. All our religious papers are growing, and the Gospel Advocate heads the list."

From G. Dallas Smith, Terrell, Texas, March 27: "I am in a meeting here with my brother, R. D. Smith. The meeting is now twelve days old and the interest is good. There have been four additions—three baptized and one restored. The meeting will continue one more week. After this my brother will do the preaching in a meeting at Cleburne, beginning on the second Sunday in April."

From S. W. Berryman, Yellow Pine, Texas: "East Texas is a destitute field indeed. There is only one or two congregations in this (Sabine) county that meet regularly for worship. I am farming this year and preaching at points in reach of me. I am preaching at one place where the gospel was never preached before. Congregations desiring my services in meetings in the summer should write me at once."

A. N. Kennedy writes from Scranton, Ark.: "I filled my regular appointment at Slate Hill. We have a little band of faithful Christians at that place. I have some choice time open for protracted meetings this summer, and should be very glad to be engaged in the Lord's work. I should like to hold some meetings in Southern Arkansas or Louisiana, or anywhere I am wanted. Address me at Scranton, Ark."

W. F. Lemmons writes from Tyler, Texas: "I have just closed a short meeting near Hope, Ark. No visible results, but fine interest. I go from here to Newark, Ark., and then to Pocahontas. It is likely that I will put in part of May in Montana, June in Colorado, and I have promised September in Mississippi and July in Texas. I can give August to some place. All my calls for August meetings have fallen down."

From C. H. Smithson, Malone, Texas: "I was at Kingston on the third Lord's day in March, with large crowds, fine interest, and one confession. I left the church happy and looking for me next third Lord's day. Last Lord's day I was at Commerce in the morning and at Wolfe City at night. I am here for a few days, and prospects are good. I have some time yet to engage, so I will appreciate an invitation to serve you in the Master's cause. Address me at Ben Franklin, Texas."

C. W. Sewell writes: "On March 16 I preached the first sermon in the new church house at Bishop, Texas. I preached the first sermon in the new town of Bishop some seven or eight years ago. The congregation there has had a hard struggle all these years. I have labored with them only a part of these years, I have been visiting them once a month for more than a year now. I rejoice that they have a good, nice building in which to worship, I am glad, too, that it is paid for, and, too, without having to ask aid from outside. They seem to be determined to press on to the accomplishment of greater things for Christ."

From W. C. Ramsey, Stop, Ky.: "J. D. Walling, of Winchester, Ky., was with us from March 18 until the last Lord's-day night in March. He did some interesting preaching, and we were glad to have him back with us again. Our crowds were large. There was one baptism, We would like to have some good preacher hold us a meeting this summer. Any one wishing to know anything about us can write to J. D. Walling, Winchester, Ky.; Eugene Pearson, Wesley Hall, Nashville, Tenn.; or F. B. Srygley, 16 Academy Place, Nashville, Tenn. Our congregation is young and we need all the preaching we can get. Pray for us."

We are grieved to announce the death of two noble Christian characters. Brother Frank Anderson, of the Twelfth Avenue congregation, died last Friday. Brother Owen Allen, one of the oldest and best-beloved members of the Owen's Chapel congregation, near Brentwood, Tenn., also died last Friday. They were two of the most useful men in the brotherhood and will be sorely missed. H. Leo Boles and W. Silas Moody conducted the funeral service for Brother Anderson. F. W. Smith and Dr. J. S. Ward conducted the service for Brother Allen. Both services were largely attended. The Gospel Advocate extends sincere sympathy to all the bereaved.

From W. G. Jernigan, Grand Saline, Texas: "The church at this place has paid the building out of debt, furnished it with new seats and aiste runners, and made the interior comfortable in many respects—quite an improvement over former conditions of things. C. D. Record is in my home at the present time, and we have been discussing the condition of the congregations in this part of East Texas. We are both rejoicing over the great interest the brethren are taking in the work of the Master. We are planning for a great day the third Lord's day in April. We hope to have a meeting of all the East Texas congregations, or representatives from each, here on that day."

We are glad to report that all differences between brethren in connection with the Lone Oak congregation at Paducah, Ky., have been amicably and happily settled. It is also very gratifying to announce that the Melrose Church and the Grandview Heights Church, in the Flat Rock section of Nashville, have come together in peace and harmony and will hereafter meet at one place. By special request, Brother Elam visited the Lone Oak congregation and the two churches in Nashville and was the humble instrumentality of the Lord in bringing about these fine results, which were obtained by mutual confessions, apologies, and forgiveness. He will shortly write an article about these matters.

From J. C. Estes, Beaumont, Texas, March 31: "It has been some time since I have sent in a report, but I have been busy just the same. We began a meeting here vesterday, with good prospects for a fine meeting, but were almost rained out last night. I do not know just how long the meeting will continue. I have a limited time myself, unless I change some of my previous arrangements, which maybe I can do, provided interest here demands my doing so. This congregation is the one I worked with the latter part of 1916 and first half of 1917, and where I have many warm and faithful friends with whom I am more than glad to work again in a meeting. May the Lord bless our efforts here and elsewhere."

From James H. Morton, Lewisburg, Tenn., Route 9: "I am still in failing health. I am afflicted with a serious throat and bronchial disease that doctors and throat specialists have failed to cure. The Lord willing (and if my health will permit), I will leave Tennessee about April 5 for New Mexico and probably Arizona, hoping that the change will prolong my days on this side of the river. I am past seventy-seven—too old to expect to receive a permanent cure. I am sincerely grateful to a few brethren, sisters, and congregations who have sent me a few small offerings to help me in the expenses incident to this long journey. I pray the Lord to bless them all. I will stop over in New Orleans, La., and probably San Antonio, Texas, on my way."

W. A. Schultz writes from Calico Rock, Ark.: "It is unnecessary for me to introduce E. N. George to the brethren of North Arkansas and South Missouri. For more than forty-five years he labored abundantly in this region. He taught and baptized thousands into Christ, more than a score of whom have made preachers. Among them are J. Will Henley, J. H. Lawson, W. S. Deatherage, W. M. Thompson, W. G. Cypert, S. C. Garner, and the writer. He built up many new congregations and strengthened and put to work many old ones. He is now past his threescore years and ten and is patiently waiting the summons home Because of his age and infirmities he is unable to preach any more. Brethren, it is enough to tell you that that worthy old soldier of the cross is in need. It is a debt you owe the cause of Christ to relieve his necessities. Address E. N. George, Gamaliel, Ark."

Order or System in Missionary Work.

BY M. C. K.

When the New Testament says, "Let all things be done decently and in order" (1 Cor. 14: 40), the statement includes and announces an important principle which, if properly observed, will not only add efficiency and strength to the churches in all their work, but the work will commend itself to the sober and unbiased judgment of men everywhere. Surely the friends of the Lord should be sufficiently jealous of his cause and of their own good name not to adopt slipshod plans of procedure, and sometimes practically no plan at all, which bring that cause and themselves into disrepute with right-thinking men of the world; and nothing, perhaps, has been more potent in bringing such work into disrepute with many such men than the lack of system and consequent confusion that sometimes characterizes the work of Christians, and especially their missionary work.

The purpose of this article is to show how easy it is, if the churches will only wake up to the situation and the serious and vital importance of the principle involved, to carry on missionary work in an orderly and respectable manner. When we come to think properly of the subject, both the work to be done and the matter of method in doing it are marked by the greatest possible simplicity. This does not mean that the work is not sometimes arduous and has to be prosecuted under great disadvantage and with great difficulty. Even Paul sometimes found it so. But the work itself-preaching the gospel to men and pointing them to the way of salvation-is simple. And the same may be said of methods of its prosecution. Ponderous methods with much intricate machiney in organization may be adopted, and usually are adopted when the principle of centralization is followed, but this is all unnecessary so far as the work of the churches is concerned. Let us look at the facts and see.

First of all, let it be distinctly observed and remembered that, in all cases where the financial ability of a church is sufficient, each individual church should assume direct responsibility for the maintenance or support of one or more missionaries according as it may be able. In such a case, with the missionary and the field of operation both selected and the arrangement mutually and voluntarily entered into, the worker goes to the said field free from all care and anxious thought as to how he is to live, and is thus free to give his whole time and attention to the work. This is precisely as it should be. Paul says: "No soldier on service entangleth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who enrolled him to be a soldier." (2 Tim. 2: 4.) To make the application, Christians must not involve themselves in worldly affairs so that they cannot serve as good soldiers of Jesus Christ; and, by necessary implication, it shows that, when a man undertakes to devote his time and talents to preaching and teaching the word of God to men and to the work of bringing them into the kingdom, he should be relieved of all care as to how he and his household are to be fed and clothed. Faithful children of God should enter into a covenant with him to furnish these things, that he may be free and untrammeled to do the work of an evangelist.

Such an arrangement is just as practicable, and may be entered into just as easily, even if the field of operation is on the other side of the earth, as it would be if the same church and preacher were entering into an arrangement for him to labor with them in the local field at home. Why not? Why should distance make any difference so far as the plainness of the plan is concerned? In such a case, a church on one side of the earth, with its missionary on the other, can periodically place in his hands the means for his support precisely the same as if he were located with the church as its evangelist at home. Why not?

Some churches are able to sustain two missionaries, and in some instances a very wealthy church might sustain even a dozen or more men either in the same field or in different fields; and there need be no more friction nor confusion about it than in entering into an arrangement for evangelistic work in the local field at home. The Jerusalem church did this identical thing when it sent Barnabas to the great field of missionary endeavor in the city of Antioch. "And the report concerning them [concerning the open door for the gospel in Antioch] came to the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem; and they sent forth Barnabas as far as Antioch." (Acts 11: 22.) Verse 24 gives some of the results of his labors in Antioch: "He was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord." Here the Jerusalem church sent Barnabas, and, of course, the Jerusalem church was responsible for his support and would make all necessary arrangements to have it forthcoming. Why may not a church do the same thing now?

In one of Paul's great statements about missionary work, he incidentally teaches us that where churches are poor, more than one of them can contribute to the support of the same missionary, "Ye yourselves also know, ye Philippians, that in the beginning of the gospel, when 1 departed from Macedonia, no church had fellowship with me in the matter of giving and receiving but ye only; for even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again unto my need." (Phil. 4: 15, 16.) "No church had fellowship with" him in that case except the Philippian church, but his remark clearly shows that others could properly have done so; and it all shows that churches can do the same thing now. If one of them is not able to sustain a missionary, let two arrange to contribute to him and sustain him; or three or any other number that may be neces-

This article will be followed, the Lord willing, by a consideration of the support of missionaries and who is responsible for it.

Teaching the Word of God.

BY J. C. M'Q.

The request below from the two brethren is so far-reaching that I cannot possibly comply with it, even if I would. considering the limited space at my disposal. I cannot hope to give anything like all that the New Testament reyeals on the subject of teaching.

Under the word "teach" I find, by reference to Young's Analytical Concordance, more than one hundred passages. There are other words also that convey the same idea as "teach," with possibly a slight shade of difference in the meaning; so I shall not undertake to give all the New Testament reveals on the subject of teaching. But here is the request:

We have the question of teaching raised here in our meeting, and we would be glad if you would assist us by giving us everything you know the New Testament teaches W. P. McLeon. A. M. CATHCART.

The growth and development of the church is dependent upon teaching. Christ devoted much of his life to teaching. He was the greatest of all teachers. He commanded the apostles to teach all nations.

Christianity is best served not by great sermonizers swaying the minds of adult unbelievers, but by teachers studying and teaching children and the child life individually whenever an opportunity presents itself. It appears that in the early church the plan of child teaching was divinely approved, as is evident from a number of scriptures. It is said of Theophilus: "That thou mightest knew the certainty concerning the things wherein thou wast instructed." (Luke 1: 4.) It says of Apollos: "This man had been instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in spirit, he spake and taught accurately the things concerning Jesus, knowing only the baptism of John." (Acts 18: 25.)

Jesus and his apostles devoted much of their lives to teaching I will ask our brethren to get a concordance and read the passages that speak of Christ and the apostles engaged in teaching. Matt. 4: 23 says: "And Jesus went about in all Gallice, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of disease and all manner of sickness among the people." Also, in Matt, 5: 2 it is said of Christ: "And he opened his mouth and taught them." Then follows the Sermon on the Mount, which he delivered to his disciples. But as the New Testament abounds so much in teaching, it is wholly unnecessary to refer to more passages. All will admit that it is important to teach and that no church can grow and develop without proper scriptural teaching. There are different methods of teaching, but there is no distinct method of teaching revealed to the exclusion of other methods. The command is to teach, but the Holy Spirit leaves the manner of teaching to the teacher. Some can teach more successfully by one method, while others can teach more successfully by a different method. As the Holy Spirit has not bound any special method of teaching on the church, no man has a right to bind the church where the Holy Spirit has not bound it. To do so is rebellion against God. Preaching the gospel is simply one form or method of teaching. Some in preaching use the chart or blackboard, while others do not. The preacher who uses the blackboard is not to be regarded as a heretic by the one who does not use it. Teaching is done most successfully, as a rule, by means of an exchange of ideas, the ones being taught having a right to ask questions as well as to have questions asked them. This method is used to advantage, especially in the development and growth of the church.

Some Questions About Christians' Going to War.

BY E. A. E.

Consideration will now be given to a communication which was sent to me several weeks ago. Here it is:

Brother Elam: I want to congratulate you on your boldness in proclaiming the word of God with reference to carnal warfare. If we do not have more of this kind of teaching, I fear but very few Christians will after a time believe it wrong to engage in carnal warfare; for you know that during the war nearly all the preachers taught it was our duty as Christians to take up arms, or they kept silent, retusing to condemn it.

And now, Brother Elam, as I contended all during the war that it was contrary to the teaching of the New Testament to engage in carnal warfare, I was plied with numerous questions. Two of them I would appreciate very much if you would answer for me-viz.:

1. Although the sixth commandment says, "Thou shalt of kill," still it must be understood that this does not apply to carnal warfare; for God himself is called the "God of battle," and did he not lead the children of Israel in their battles and gain the victory for them?

2. It is admitted that a Christian, as a Christian or Individual, should not resent evil or retaliate; but when the government calls upon him to take up arms, he must obey; for we are told in Rom. 13; 1 that "the powers that be for we are told in Rom. 13; 1 that "the powers that be are ordained of God," ministers of God, whom God uses for the purpose of executing wrath upon those who do evil. Therefore, if a Christian refuses to obey the government to take up arms, he refuses to work in one of God's appointed organizations to execute wrath on those that do evil.

I know, Brother Elam, that you are a busy man; bur if you will take the time to enable me to answer more intelligently such reasoning as the above, I will appreciate it very much and put it to good use. Very truly yours, Replying to the first question first, I will say that I do not remember seeing in the Bible the expression, "the God of battles." A German pastor said: "Away with the gentle-Nazarene and give us a God of battles," This means the Germans could not follow Jesus and commit the horrible. inhuman, and blood-curdling deeds which they did commit; this means they had to give up either war or Christ. They are logicians, and they saw and felt the utter inconsistency of claiming to take "the gentle Nazarene" for their leader to be Christians-and at the same time plundering, devastating, murdering the innocent, shedding blood until the land is drenched and the rivers run red. The indescribable, fearful thing is, they gave up Christ and plunged the world into war.

But-ah, me!-if the Germans cannot learn war, go to war, and pursue this bloody course and follow Jesus, who can? Christians are followers of Christ. Do Christians propose to accept the logic and follow the consistency of the Germans-namely, reject Christ and learn and practice

Furthermore, when the Germans did away with "the gentle Nazarene," they rejected "the God and Father" of "the gentle Nazarene." God and Christ are one. God is in Christ. The teaching of Christ is the teaching of God. (See John 5: 19, 30; 6: 38; 7: 16, 17; 8: 28, 29; 12: 48-50.) But this truth applies to others as well as to the Germans: All who do away with Christ and the teaching and Spirit of Christ reject God.

We find the following expressions in the Bible: "Fight Jehovah's battles" (1 Sam. 18: 17); "the battles of Jehovah" (1 Sam. 25; 28); "Jehovah strong and mighty, Jehovah mighty in battle" (Ps. 24: 8); "Jehovah is a man of war" (Ex. 15; 3); "Jehovah of hosts is mustering the host [the Medes to destroy Babylon] for the battle." (Isa. 13: 4.) Isaiah (13: 9-16) declares that which God intended to do (and did finally do) to Babylon through her enemies: "Behold, the day of Jehovah cometh, cruel, with wrath and flerce anger; to make the land a desolation, and to destroy the sinners thereof out of it, . . . Every one that is found shall be thrust through; and every one that is taken shall fall by the sword. Their infants also shall be dashed in pieces before their eyes; their houses shall be rified, and their wives ravished." Also: "Shall the trumpet be blown in a city, and the people not be afraid? shall evil befall a city, and Jehovah hath not done it?" (Amos 3: 6.) "I form the light, and create darkness; I make peace, and create evil; I am Jehovah, that doeth all these things." (Isa. 45: 7.)

All these declarations and many more such declarations show that "the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will" (Dan. 4: 25); that "he changeth the times and the seasons; he removeth kings, and setteth up kings; he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that have understanding" (Dan. 2: 21); that "he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou?" (Dan, 4: 35); that not only does he rule in the kingdom of men and give it to whomsoever he will, but also "setteth up over it the lowest of men" (Dan. 4: 17); and that he overrules all the affairs of nations and of the whole world, using warlike and wicked nations to chastise, correct, punish, or even destroy other wicked nations, as serves his righteous purposes, to the betterment and good otherwise of his people, for the uplift of the race, and for his own glory. None can question his righteousness and goodness and wisdom in all this, stop him in his just course, or ask him what he is doing. He alone is God, the All-wise, the Almighty, the Righteous and Just One, "merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and abundant in loving-kindness and truth, keeping lovingkindness for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin: and that will by no means clear the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, upon the third and upon the fourth generation." (Ex. 34: 6, 7.)

But because God does all these things, can Christians blow trumpets, make darkness, create evil, take vengeance, punish sinners, declare wars, and destroy incorrigibly wicked nations? God is an Avenger, but Christians are forbidden to take vengeance. God is Judge, but Christians are forbidden to judge. They are commanded to do good for evil, to pray for their enemies, etc. Christians are not to act in God's stead; they are not God; they must obey God.

When a man's ways please Jehovah, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him. (Prov. 16: 7.)

When Israel of old taught and did the law of Jehovah, feared Jehovah, and pleased him, the kingdoms of the surrounding countries made no war against them (2 Chron. 17: 9, 10); but when God's people disobeyed him, he chastised them by leading them into war and leading heathen nations against them until finally Jerusalem and the temple were destroyed and the people led into captivity. Sin leads to war and has always done so. (James 4: 1, 2.) Righteousness never has led, and never can lead, to war. All sin and its consequences—war, for instance—God overrules for chastisement or the destruction of the sinful; hence, it is said he blows trumpets, creates evil, and makes wars.

But the kingdom of Christ is "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit," (Rom. 14: 17.) Its subjects in deed and truth cannot fight.

My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews; but now is my kingdom not from hence. (John 18: 36.)

As God overrules sinful nations and their wars to punish and destroy other wicked nations on earth, so he has ordained hell for the final destruction of all the wicked. He does this in his great wisdom and justice and love; but Christians cannot destroy enemies and condemn people to hell. God uses nations for war which are in lusts and passions fitted for war. Christians with the mind and spirit of Christ, who could have called twelve legions of angels to his defense, but did not, and did not in any way resist him that is evil, cannot fight and kill, make widows and orphans and cripples, and devastate countries; they are not fitted to do this. Peter, or John, or Paul, could not betray Jesus; Judas could. Must Christians betray and crucify Christ because God overruled the wickedness of Judas and Pilate to the redemption of the world? God uses Satan to rule hell, because he is the only one fitted in character to do this. God does not use Gabriel to do this.

Saul was fitted in character to destroy the Amalekites, and God sent him to do so utterly. He disobeyed God, too, when he refused to do this, and lost his kingdom. Were God now to command Christians to fight, to kill their enemies, even to kill one another, to burn houses and cities, and to make cripples and orphans and widows, it would be rebellion against him, as in Saul's case, not to do so. But he emphatically forbids this. A new commandment, says Jesus, he gives to his followers. (John 13: 34, 35.) He says it has been said, "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," etc., but now he says "resist not him that is evil;" "turn to him the other cheek;" "love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you;" "avenge not yourselves;" "overcome evil with good," etc.

Let us not forget this "new commandment"—the one which Jesus calls "new." This commandment is love. Not that people have never before been commanded to love; but Jesus gave to love a deeper, higher, broader, and new meaning,

It was said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy: but I say unto you, Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you; that ye may be sons of your Father who is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust. For if ye love them that love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the Gentiles the same? Ye therefore shall be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect. (Matt. 5: 43-48.)

As we have seen, when the children of Israel of old sinned, God chastised them by bringing wars upon them and, therefore, by leading them into war; but that fact cannot be used as proof that under the rule of the Prince of Peace God's children must now go to war. Under the Prince of Peace (Isa. 9: 6, 7) and governed by the law which went forth out of Zion and the word of the Lord which went from Jerusalem, nations shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks and learn war no more. As fast as people become Christians, they do this.

Question No. 2 will be answered next week.

The Home-Coming Prospects of Brother Jelley. BY J. C. M'Q.

I regret very much the necessity of calling for more funds to bring Brother Jelley and his five children to America. Brother Jelley explains that the reason why we have not sent him sufficient funds to bring him home is this: Before we cabled him the money his support had been cut off by the action of Brethren Janes and McHenry. Not having received anything for many months from the brethren, he was about one thousand dollars in debt, which indebtedness had to be taken care of. Brother Jelley says:

The money (thirteen hundred dollars) would have been sufficient had it been sent in time. It was based on an estimate given me in February, 1918; some months later fares were raised. Brother Rowe's statement and that of others cut off our income entirely, as the brethren suppose we are now in America. This compels us to eat our money until passage can be secured.

I am sending Brother Rowe a clipping from the Calcutta Statesman, showing that there are ten thousand applications to the government for passage to England. I have my application registered among them. The sickness of the entire family and the burial of my wife have eaten a sad hole in the passage money. Will the faithful brethren help us now?

I have just received a letter from Brother Jelley, stating that he would not be able to secure passage before June, and that his funds by that time would be reduced to six hundred or seven hundred dollars.

For the information of the brethren, I will state that Brother Jelley is a member of the Vancouver Church, British Columbia, and that Brother Sanders, of that church, is ready to put up more funds in order to bring him home. Under existing circumstances, I believe that five hundred dollars more would secure Brother Jelley and his family, three sons and two daughters, first-class passage to America. I am willing to be one among the number to contribute funds to bring him home. Prompt action is now necessary.

This is the last appeal that I think it will be necessary to make, and I ask the brethren to send their contributions at once to me, so that I may cable it to Brother Jelley, in order that he may have it in hand before the time of sailing in June. After we get the funds in hand necessary to bring Brother Jelley and family home, it will be too late to write him, so we must cable the money.

In order that our readers may understand exactly the situation, I give in full a letter to Brother Jelley concerning his application for priority certificate:

Bombay, February 4, 1919.-E. S. Jelley, Esq., Harvest View, Dehra Dun.-Dear Sir: We beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 29th ultimo, inclosing the B3 priority certificate in favor of yourself, three sons and two daughters, requesting us to register your names for accommodation in a vessel leaving during February.

The steamers for the latter part of March, April, and May have not yet been arranged, but there is no likelihood large passenger-carrying vessels being available of anv during those months, and the ships which will be available will only be able to carry a comparatively small number of passengers. The accommodations in the vessels during March and April will hardly be sufficient for all the pas-sengers with high "A" grade certificates who have regis-tered their names for passage, and under the circumstances we are, therefore, unable to register the names of "B" priority certificate holders for accommodation by the homeward mail steamers before the month of May, and the names of "C" grade priority certificate holders before June. It must be clearly understood that such registration does not guarantee that accommodation will be available even then. Your priority certificate is returned here-Yours faithfully, Pro Mackinnon, Mackenzie & Co., Agents. with.

The February steamers have already been berthed by us and all accommodation has been allotted to passengers holding "A" grade priority certificates. Will you kindly inform us whether you wish your names registered for accommodation in any vessel during May, and if so, what grade of accommodation?

It will be observed from this letter that Brother Jelley has applied for low-grade passage, B3. I believe that the brethren will not be content for him and family, because they are missionaries, to come home on this grade of passage.

Brother Jelley did very effective work in India, as has already been explained. Differences arose which destroyed his effectiveness, so that the results have not been satisfactory in recent years.

Brother Jelley's mother is living in Dayton, Ohio, and is in straitened circumstances. She is longing and praying to see her son and family. She needs his attention and care, so Christians should do unto him as they would be done by under similar circumstances. The needs of our own souls demand that we give promptly, liberally, and cheerfully. We are in the world in order that we may do good, and we should not be willing to pass through without extending a helping hand to the brother who is passing through the shadows.

So soon as we have the five hundred dollars in hand we will cable it at once to Brother Jelley, with the request that he come home at the earliest possible date.

The American peace delegation made an appeal to the American press for assistance in relieving the suffering from famine and plague. A telegram from Minister of Interior Khatissian says: "Famine reigns in Armenia. Two thousand persons are dying daily from hunger. For three days there has been no bread, even for the hospitals. The epidemic of typhus, intensified by famine, likewise is causing great ravages. In the region of Sourmalou people are eating bodies."

The president of the Armenian Parliament also has sent a telegram, saying: "I doubt not that the American nation will heed this appeal of the Armenian people, and will not allow them, now delivered from oppression, to perish of the scourge and misery of famine."

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Jerusalem.

Is there any story in human history like the story of Jerusalem? It has been besieged and captured twenty-four times. Its walls have been again and again leveled, its very site has been plowed and sown with salt. It has belonged to the ancient Canaanite, to the Jew, to the Greek, to the Roman, to the Syrian, to the Chaldean, to the Arab, to the Turk, to Latin Europe, and to England. . . . It is associated with the faith of the Jew, the fanaticism of the Mohammedan, and the adoration of the Christian. All the great religions, the great cultures, have met before its walls and striven to possess it. . . . But the story of Jerusalem does not end with the records of time; it projects itself into the expectations of eternity. It owes half its wonder to a deeply held and often-adjourned, but never-surrendered, hope which has made it the symbol of Christian idealism and the far-sought refuge in another world of the weary and heavy laden. The old Jerusalem is a battlescarred city which has covered the hills upon which it was originally built with manifold destruction. . . . But the new Jerusalem, with its walls of twelve manner of precious stones and its gates of pearl, is lifted foursquare against the horizons of eternity, unscarred by any battle, not to be darkened by any sorrow, but built by the power of hope upon the foundations of faith.-Gaius G. Atkins.

Give diligence, that thou come with a pure mind, and, as the Scriptures saith, with a single eye, unto the words of health and of eternal life; by the which, if we repent and believe them, we are born anew.-Tyndale.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

By J. C. McQUIDDY

Tice Elkins, Nocona, Texas, sends the following queries:

Is it scriptural and right for a sister, a good woman of mature years and unspotted character, to assist in the teaching of a class of children on Friday nights at the meetinghouse of the church of Christ?

If it is wrong for a sister to teach a class of children on Friday nights, or any other night in the week, at the meetinghouse, it is wrong for her to teach children anywwhere. Yet the Bible very clearly and plainly enjoins upon her the duty of teaching her children and of bringing them up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." The truth is, she cannot do ber Christian duty without teaching her children. Friday night or any other night, teaching them whenever an opportunity presents itself; and if an opportunity should not present Itself, she should find one. Nothing is worse than neglecting to teach our children the word of the Lord. This is a failure of which many parents are guilty, and one in which they need no encouragement. God, through Moses, commanded the Jews to teach their children. He said: "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be upon thy heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thy hand, and they shall be for frontlets between thine eves. And thou shalt write them upon the doorposts of thy house, and upon thy gates." (Deut. 6: 6-9.) Timothy was taught the word of the Lord by his mother. Eunice, and his grandmother, Lois, from lisping infancy. Of Timothy, Paul writes: "Having been reminded of the unfeigned faith that is in thee; which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and, I am persuaded, in thee also,"

Would it be wrong for her to have them prepare a program including some speeches and dialogues which teach a good lesson, and follow the regular Bible lesson with a few minutes that way?

I can see nothing wrong or nothing specially meritorious in preparing a program including speeches and dialogues which teach a good lesson.

Has one elder in a congregation the authority to appoint other elders? Whose duty is it to appoint elders in the church of Christ?

This depends entirely upon whether or not the elder in the church is a God-appointed elder or a man-appointed elder. If the church has more than one God-appointed elder, all the elders together should do the work. The Bible teaches that a church should have more than two elders whenever it is possible to have them. However, If there is only one man in the church who is doing the work of an elder and he has the qualifications of an elder, I do not see why he would not have the authority to designate or appoint an elder. We learn from Acts 14: 23 that Paul and Barnabas appointed elders: "And when they had appointed for them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they had believed." Also, Titus was left in Crete to set in order the things that were wanting and appoint elders in every city; "For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that were wanting, and appoint elders in every city, as I gave thee charge," (Tit. 1: 5.) In Acts we learn that the apostles called together the multitude of disciples and commanded them: "Look ye out therefore, brethren, from among you seven men of good report, full of the Spirit and of wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." (Acts 6: 3.)

From this we learn that the church should look out men of good report and men who have the Spirit of Christ. Simply appointing a man an elder who has not the fitness does not make him a God-appointed elder, but a man-appointed elder. Only those who have the Spirit of Christ and who have the qualifications as laid down in the Bible should be appointed elders. We learn from the sixth chapter of Acts that the apostles appointed those selected; have the Spirit of Christ. If those who appoint elders in every city; and we learn from Acts 14: 23 that Paul and Barnabas appointed elders. Thus it would appear that any faithful elder or evangelist has the scriptural authority to appoint as elders those who are selected by the church for such work. However, the church should always be careful to select those who are fitted and qualified for the work. The church should be careful not to lose sight of the fact that a man must show fitness for the work and must be able to do it before his appointment. Appointing a man without the fitness and without the qualifications will not qualify him for the work. A man who is to serve the church is not fitted merely from the fact that he holds the office, but more because he is fitted to do the work and does it. Doing the work qualifies an elder more than does the office. It is not so much an office as it is a work.

What process should be followed in setting elders and deacons over the house of God?

The Bible reveals no process to the exclusion of other methods by which elders and deacons should be set over the church. As I have already indicated, it is clear that all the appointing that men can do does not make an elder. However, when men are selected and designated or appointed for the work of an elder, it is eminently proper that those engaged in the selecting and appointing should not only pray, but should also be sure that they have the spirit of Christ. If those who appoint elders wish to pray and fast and lay hands on them, I can see no reason why this should not be used to designate the elders. as well as any other method. However, I do not see that this method of designation has been made binding upon the church. It should be clearly understood that the elders cannot now, by laying on hands, confer spiritual gifts, as was done by the apostles.

Is not a congregation better off and in better condition to prosper without any elders than it is with men who are not qualified for the place?

The church is really without elders if it has only manappointed elders who are not qualified for the work. The appointment does not make them elders.

J. M. Wallace, Wardell, Mo., briefly writes:

Please tell me, through the Gospel Advocate, who is the "elect lady" mentioned in 2 John.

I will give our Brother B. W. Johnson's comment in The Peoples' New Testament on the "elect lady." He says: "The term is 'Kyria' in the Greek, a term which we know to have been a female proper name. Hence, many of the best commentators from the time of Athanasius have held that this is the name of the sister. If not a proper name, 'Kyria' would be the feminine form of 'Kurlos' (Lord). The term applied to Christ a worldly title unaccountable in the church, which does not recognize artificial distinctions of rank. To avoid this difficulty, some have held that by 'Kyria' the church is meant. It is better to regard the term a proper name." Adam Clarke, after giving several theories, says: "But others have considered it the proper name of a woman, 'Kyria,' That this is a very ancient opinion is evident from the Peshito Syriac, the oldest version we have, which uses it as a proper name, 'Kourcea,' as does also the Arabic, 'Koorcea.'

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

The Atlanta Work.

More than twelve years ago, by the providence of God, wife, son, and I landed in this great city, and our lot was cast with a handful of members, so to speak, who were worshiping in a modest frame building for which they then owed above one thousand dollars. I shall never regret having come, and my faith has grown all these years in the fact that God stands by his people and enables them to do anything that should be done, if they will only bury themselves in the work and do their best.

These years have not been spent in this work without sacrifice, for which sacrifices I am thankful. The "digressives," and others who are not content to abide by what is written," I need not say, failed to give me a hearty welcome, but, rather, all the opposition that they well could. Along with such opposition, we have had our experience with what Paul calls "false brethren" and "deceftful workers;" but as we look back over the journey. I cannot say that we would change one single experience. for out of it all good to the cause has come.

Some of our readers know that West End Avenue is the "mother church," out of which a number of others have come. The South Pryor-Vassar Streets and East Point congregations have better houses than we have, and they are paid for; and, besides this, they have the best help they have ever had in the way of preachers. Brother R. R. Brooks is doing a most excellent work with the East Point brethren, and Brethren John A. Klingman and Silas E. Templeton are doing a good work with the South Pryor Street brethren, besides the work they do at other places. These congregations not only meet their home expenses, but are helping others.

The West End Avenue congregation has been in the habit of "swarming" when its house could not accommodate the membership, but this time we have decided to enlarge our present building. The workmen are pushing this to get things ready for the spring revival. Last Lord's day more than fifteen hundred dollars was pledged for this improvement, and we are expecting to owe nothing when the work is completed. Our regular Lord's-day contributions will average fifty dollars, and every call for a special contribution for the sick and afflicted is met with a liberal response. Harmony and peace reign, and the members are glad to "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

Nothing pleases me more than the impression made on visitors by our Sunday-morning services. Just recently a brother dropped in who was visiting his married daughter, of this city, which brother and daughter are affiliated with congregations that teach and practice things not in the Book. I had a very pleasant conversation with him before services began, and he raised the points of difference between us, and, of course, thought we were making a sad mistake not to have in our work and worship the modern inventions that they use; but when the services ended, he came to me and said: "I am so glad I came. Never in my life have I seen such an orderly congregation and enjoyed so much church services." Just last Lord's day another visitor dropped in, who had been in our city but three weeks. She was miserably unhappy and sorely distressed on account of some problems that had come into her life that she could not solve. She knew not a soul in our congregation, but in looking over the church announcements in Saturday's paper she was impressed to come to our place of worship. How glad was I to listen to her speak of the good the services did her, and of her coming having made her almost a new woman! I could not give the number who have visited us and so testified. Every time I hear it I think of I Cor. 14: 25, which teaches us that our worship, when assembled, should be such as to make even unbelievers fall down upon their faces and "report that God is in you of a truth." One of the greatest sins that congregations commit is this boring people to death with dry, unedifying, "draggy," empty services. "Where two or three are gathered together in my name," says Christ, "there am I in the midst of them," Do your best to let God and his Son be in every song, every prayer, every item of the worship and service-yes, in every handshake and expression of your face—and the stranger that drops in will be blessed and the saints edified.

Good Must Come.

I know of nothing that could mean more to a child of God than faith: undoubting confidence in the fact that "God is," that Christ is his Son, that he died for us and is now at the Father's right hand thinking of us every moment, and, along with this, believing with the whole heart everything God says. One of the things he has said is "that all things work together for good to them that love God." Just one thing we must ever make it a point to see to-viz., that we love God, with all that this word "love" means. If this we do, good must come from everything that we experience. This is what the Book says, hence must be so.

Notwithstanding the clearness of the teaching of the Bible on this question, you will find some disciples, who have done their best, worrying about things they should not.

Certainly there is no sin worse than causing division among brethren, but certain it is that good comes to the faithful from even division. Paul, in writing to the church at Corinth, says: "For there must be also heresies [sects. factions) among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you." (1 Cor. 11: 19.) God is not the author of "factions," "sects," and "parties," but he does use such in cleaning out congregations and ridding them of people who love not God, but who are "lovers of self," hence of their own opinions and hobbies, thus freeing congregations of burdens and enabling them to do a greater work toward saving souls.

Man Sees Not As God Sees.

By the heading of this paragraph, I do not mean that man cannot and should not see as God sees. I am quite sure that Paul's language in 1 Cor. 13: 12 refers not to our state or condition of knowledge after death, but to the fact that "after that which is perfect" (the completed revelation of the New Testament) had come, then we should know even as also we are known. We come to see things as he sees them, not because It is natural with us to do so, but just because he has shown us how he sees things. Isa, 55: 8, 9 and Jer. 10: 23 certainly teach that if man looks at things as he is naturally inclined to look. he will differ with God; but we are taught to crucify self. to turn our own thoughts down, and take things as God sees them, and so walk through life.

There is one thing which I am perfectly sure that even those who call themselves Christians do not believe as they should believe, because of their natural inclination not to see things as God sees them. It is this-viz., the hateful and abominable sin of division. Honestly, now, do we line up with God here as we should? I think I know brethren who would not think of harboring in their congregations liars, murderers, fornicators, drunkards, etc., but who will wink at those who divide churches, and

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if Kidneys Feel Like Lead or Bladder Bothers You —Meat Forms Uric Acid.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness, and all sorts of bladder disorders:

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean; and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

CONFEDERATE ENVELOPES.

Look up old letters in your attic, searching for envelopes mailed in the year 1861. Some of these have large value, even though they are franked envelopes bearing no stamps. If you will send them to Mr. Haroid C. Brooks, Marshall, Mich., he will offer you their value. Send complete envelope. Don't detach the stamps. Mr. Brooks will return those which are of no value, and the others also unless his offers are accepted, in which case he will settle promptly. Take care not to tear the stamps or put plas through them. The advertising department of this publication knows Mr. Brooks personally and indorses him as thoroughly reliable.

give them the freest and fullest fellowship. And here I might say that our papers are not as careful as they should be about such matters. They will publish to the world the names of those guilty of adultery, running off with other men's wives, drunkards, etc., and-warn churches against them; but "the divider of churches," the "party maker," can continue to advertise himself in the very papers that condemn these other sins. All of this is due, to a large degree, to the fact that these other sins look blacker to man than the sin of division. To be perfectly frank, I have not the power to see how the one that causes division is as bad in God's sight as the whoremonger and murderer; but God puts them all in the same class, and there I shall let them remain. God sees not as man sees things. There are sins that look rather respectable to man that are as black as the infernal regions in the eyes of our God. Note that in Prov. 6: 16-19 "he that soweth discord among brethren" is classed with "a proud look," "a lying tongue," "hands that shed innocent blood," "a heart that deviseth wicked imaginations," "feet that be swift in running to mischief," "a false witness that speaketh lies," and that they are all things that are hated by Jehovah and are an abomination unto him. Too, I would have you note that in Gal. 5: 19-21, A. R. V., "factions," "divisions," and "parties" are classed with "fornication," "uncleanness," "lasciviousness," "idolatry," "sorcery," "drunkenness," etc. Now, who has the authority to take those who divide churches over untaught questions, over their hobbies and opinions, from among the number of other sinners with whom God puts them and whitewash them and place them with those to be fellowshiped? Here it would be well to be governed by Paul's advice in Rom. 3: 4: "Let God be found true, and every man a liar."

May God help us to keep his Spirit within us by ever being governed by all he says on any subject; to see things as he sees them; to hate evil and cleave to that which is good.

Letters From Rheumatics.

Possibly you have imagined that you could never get your own consent to write a testimonial letter; but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of rheumatism, you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring. This water overcomes many diseases, including indigestion, gout, urle-acid poisoning, and liver and kidney diseases; but no patrons of the Spring are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water than those who have been relieved of their rheumatism.

Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the management:

It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all polsonous matter."

Dr. Avant, of Savannah, writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians; went to Baltmore and consulted specialists there; and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living, when I began to use Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes, of Virginia, writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. I am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam, of South Carolina, writes: "Mrs McClam, of South Carolina, writes: "Are has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

Notice to Scattered Disciples.

BY C. C. MERRITT.

I should like for all of the brethren who see this notice, who live where they have no church of Christ near their homes where they can worship God acceptably, to give answers to the following questions and mail them

- 1. Are there other members of the church in your locality?
- 2. Near, or on, what railroad is your community located?
 - 3. Are you permanently located?
- 4. What is the name of the congregation where you were formerly located, and the names of its elders or
- 5. What is your nearest known congregation?
- 6. Has there been any effort to establish the cause there, and by whom?

If you know of any members of your congregation that have located where they have not the opportunity of attending worship, please send me their names. Send them the above list of questions, asking them to fill out and send to me.

The purpose of this is to locate the persons and places where they have not the privilege of a congregation and to so arrange things that they may have the gospel in their own community. A congregation may not be established in every place, but a few can be established, to the salvation of souls and to the glory of God.

I believe that in a little while a few congregations will be found that will gladly take up such a systematic work, and work. Will yours be one?

Write now. Do not wait for others to start this. Let us have home missions, and work as did the churches of Macedonia. Missionaries like Paul will not be found for this work, for he was a foreign missionary. Perhaps a Timothy or a John Mark may take up this work. "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord." Send the desired information to C. C. Merritt, Davis City, Iowa.

Heartfelt Religion, Again.

BY J. M. DENNIS.

The majority of the readers of the Gospel Advocate are probably well enough acquainted with the teaching of the Bible on the heart as to be able to distinguish between the fleshly heart and the spiritual heart. But there may be some who do not understand this; so I am willing to aid in lifting the cloud of obscurity from the vision of those who are honest seekers for truth, that they may understand what is meant by the word "heart" when associated with the word "religion," and especially in the phrase "heartfeit religion."

Paul says in Rom. 14: 7: "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself." Hence, every man has at least some one who will listen to what he says and will be more or less influenced by it. All religious teachers have some following, notwithstanding their ignorance of the Bible, I once knew a Baptist preacher who was so ignorant of the Bible as to be unable to run the simple references in it and who could not for the life of him number and name the books in the New Testament; but one thing he could do: he could, under announcement to preach, call together a number of men, women, and children, and, by the use of good, strong lungs in doing what he and the poor backwoodsmen called "preaching," praying, and singing sensational songs, get up the greatest animal excitement, which was strongly demonstrated by loud shouts and screams, clapping of hands, and so on. The most unfortunate part of it all was that it was palmed off on them as a special blessing from "on high" and denominated "heartfelt religion," which the preacher told them the Lord had sent to them in answer to prayer. As a rule, the converts of that preacher did not rank among "Philadelphia lawyers" nor among pure gospel preachers, but as poor dupes they went out to make proselytes of others who were more ignorant than they themselves. Poor people! When I think of them and remember that many of them were dear to me by ties of nature. I am moved to tears, and, like Paul, could say that "my heart's desire and prayer to God for them is that they might be saved." How unfortunate it is to preach a false doctrine and thus deceive the people! O. the awfulness of denominationalism! But for it these unscriptural phrases, such as "come through," "get religion," and so on, would never be heard; for such is the language of Ashdod, and not of the Bible.

"Heartfelt" means deeply felt, deeply affecting, and may be used either of joy or sorrow. Now, as "the fleshly heart is not susceptible of either joy or serrow, we at once conclude that it is a fatal mistake to refer in any way to the fleshly heart when talking of "heartfelt religion." Two instances in scripture will serve to show the ridiculousness of referring to the fleshly heart when talking of "heartfelt religion." With reference to the conspiracy of Absalom against King David, his father, it is said that Absalom "stole the hearts of the men of Israel." (2 Sam. 15: 6.) Two things are here mentioned that forbid the idea of a fleshly heart. First, Absalom stole the hearts of the Israelites by the use of words; secondly, the men whose hearts Absalom stole lived on and joined him in the great conspiracy against the king. Even the simple-minded know that the fleshly hearts of men cannot be taken out by words; for when a thing is stolen, the owner is dispossessed of the thing stolen. Again, they know that men do not continue to live without hearts. The word "heart" is often used with reference to the whole heart, and often it is used with reference to only one faculty of the heart-the mind of man. The spiritual heart is divided into three apartments-intellect, sensibility, and will. In this middle faculty, sensibility, is found what is called the affections, or power to love or admire. This is what Absalom stole from the Israelites their love, their admiration. The second case in point is found in Dan, 4: 16, with reference to Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon: "Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him; and let seven times pass over him." O, how foolish to think of the fleshly heart of a beast being given to the king of Babylon! This matter is made plain in the following words: "And he was driven from the sons of men; and his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses: they fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven; till he knew that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men, and that he appointeth over it whomsoever he will." (Dan. 5: 21.) We learn from Dan, 4: 34-36 that at the end of seven years Nebuchadnezzar's reason and understanding returned to him. The things that returned were the things that were The Lord took from taken away. Babylon's king his intellectual powers and made him to depend on instinct, like to that of the beast, so he approved of the grass as food (Verse 33.)

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an Inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins, before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising a glass of hot water, with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening, and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the

How to Think, Live, and be Saved.

BY H. W. JONES.

1. How to Think. Not think as worldly-minded people think; not think so and so because grandma or grandpa thought it, not because "pa" and "ma" think it, and not because our beloved "pastor," or preacher, or any other human being said so. But we should "think soberly" and just as the Lord teaches us in his holy word-think just what the Lord says in the Bible. "O Jehovah, I know that the way of man is not in himself." (Jer. 10: 23.) No, "the way of man is not in himself," but is in God's word. (Matt. 4: 4.) "Think on these things." (See Phil. 4: 8.)

2. How to Live. Not live as the world does; not live in a careless, prayerless way, as the world would have you do; not live for self only. But live as God directs and be happy; live to serve God and benefit humanity as marked out in the Bible; live to be instrumental in saving the lost. "For the grace of God hath appeared, bringing salvation to all men, instructing us, to the intent that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world," etc. (Tit. 2; 11-14.) Yes, "live according to God in the spirit" and thus be happy and be blessed.

3. How to Be Saved. This is God's work. Man is passive-that is, he cannot save himself, except in the sense that he can place himself in the attitude where the Lord has promised to save him. Thinking and living is the work of man, but being saved from our sins is the work of Jesus Christ our Savior. But Jesus has promised to save those who comply with the conditions stipulated in the New Covenant and sealed with his blood. What, then, are these conditions? First, to be saved from alien sins, we must (1) believe on the Christ whole-heartedly, (2) repent of all our sins, and (3) be buried with Christ in baptism. (Mark 16: 16; Acts 2: 38; 8: 36-38; Rom. 6: 5.) And after this we must continue to live carefully, prayerfully, soberly, righteously, and godly-yes, worship the Lord in his own ordained institutions, requirements, laws, and commands-and a crown of life will be given at the end of the race.

WHAT AILS THE WORLD

By Rev. J. E. Mahaffey

Surprising in matter and style, and flaming with imagery like a moving picture of human life from Adam to Woodrow Wilson, this STRANGE DRAMATIC ALLEGORY, written just as it came, unveils the real cause of all sin and suffering. Wholly unlike anything in all the world of literature!

The leading character is the "Son of Time" who was present when God made Adam, and as a witness of events from then to now, he visits a pastor at midnight and tells the vivid story that UNFOLDS THE MYSTERY of groaning ages; also explains how Sabbath changed places with Sunday when the sun stood still, and because of desecration, was veiled from men until the Sunday after crucifixion

It explains many difficult Scriptures, reveals the cure of ills that mark the bloody path of nations, and sees our autocratic woman—"Miss Ed. U. Cation"—giving place for better things of the coming age under the Christian Standard. Sooner or later, its truth must be accepted by all men!

Cloth, 200 pp. Large new edition now ready, cuts cost to $1.10, Timellest book of this age or money back! Read its story now!

"Do Little."

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

I used to hear my uncle call a person "Do Little," as though that were his name. I learned that he was so called because he did but little. This thought causes me to think of some congregations posing as the church of Christ. I think an appropriate name for them would be "Do Little," I saw a statement a few days ago that gave the number of members of the church of Christ in the United States as one million five hundred thousand. I saw another that gave the number of foreign missionaries as thirteen. So in this work of the church we can be called "Do Little,"

There are many large cities in the United States with not a single congregation in them. Some counties and some States are almost destitute of the church of Christ. So it seems to be appropriate to speak of our home mission work as "Do Little." Calls are made for a few homes where orphans are kept and not supplied; houses are to be built, and not enough to pay for the material; the poor need, and the church is slow to help; many preachers are kept from more active work because of a lack of a support; many a congregation dies because the activities, as such, almost cease. In all this we may appropriately say " Do Little."

It is not because of a lack of the truth; we have that. Nor is it a lack of members; we have enough to be great workers. Neither is it the lack of money, for we possess much of the filthy lucre. No one will say it is a lack of opportunities, for these are legion. It is not a lack of willingness of many to go and do, but it is a lack of zeal and getting at it. Shall I say, also, it is a lack of practicing true Christianity? It may be a lack of love for God and man. There is something wrong. Will we set it right?

We do not lack in objectors, hinderers, dividers, fussers, nor unskilled leaders, for in these we might be called "Do Much;" but if we compare what we do with what we ought to do, is it incorrect to apply the title of "Do Little" to most churches? Brethren, let us increase in our doings in the Lord.

Chambers.

Just about nine o'clock, Tuesday morning, January 24, 1919, the spirit of Miss Allie Eudora Chambers, of Tigrett, Tenn., went out in its grand eternal quest. May God's richest and most abundant blessings crown the lives of her loved ones and friends with the sweet memory of a life well spent and that she has just gone to receive her crown, one of which awaits every faithful child of God.

ONE WHO KNEW HER.

Boulton.

After having been in falling health for the past few years, Brother I. G. Boulton fell asleep, on September 3, 1918, at Dublin, Va. Kind friends, a loving wife, and a skilled physician did all they knew; yet their efforts were all in vain. Brother Boulton was seventy-two years, eleven months, and seven days old. He was reared in Tennessee, but spent nearly fifty years of his life in Texas, moving from there to Virginia four years ago. He was a member of the church of Christ, being baptized some thirty years ago by Brother Pringle. Those who knew Brother Boulton best will most deeply feel his loss from the Master's vineyard. There are many friends who mourn with his wife in the loss of her husband, who was ever thoughtful of her comfort and wel-fare. May she not mourn as those who have no hope. Brother Boulton's remains were laid in Mountain View Cemetery to await the coming of "the bright and morning star," who said: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

THE PARTY OF THE P Quarles.

On March 26, 1885, into the family of Brother and Sister Andrew McCulloch a baby girl was born, bringing renewed interest and greater inspiration to their home. Some thirteen years later Cora was born anew— "born of water and of the Spirit" into God's family. She remembered her Creator in the days of her youth and ever afterwards characterized herseif as a sober, thoughtful Christian. Well do I remember meeting this noble girl, yet in her teens, around sickbeds, kindly offering her services in such a quiet, meek, and gentle manner that she was regarded as a "pearl of great price." Cora was married to Byron Quarles on November 11, 1911, and on October 15, 1918, quietly and peacefully passed "over the river," peacefully passed "over the river," having contracted influenza, followed by pneumonia. Her death was not anticipated, but was a surprise in view of her age, good health, and according to the surprise of the surprise tive life, and came as a great shock to her family and friends. She was strong and active, physically, mentally, and morally, specially noted for her persistent works in her home and her devotion to her family and church. Death to her was but a simple transformation, a sweet release

God. It is hard to give her up, yet why should we weep? How sweetly she is resting in the bosom of Jesus! She has only gone on a little while before us to meet her dear father, and they are beckoning us to come. We shall miss her, but let us not grieve; but let us spend the rest of our lives in preparation to meet her and all the dear ones where we can clasp glad hands and never say good-by. She is expecting us, and we must not fail her.

ALICE BILLINGSLEY.

Dickinson.

Life, like a river, runs smoothly at times, and at other times turbulently. After much meandering, it empties into the wide ocean of eternity. The Diskinson home in Smyrna, Tenn., Dickinson home in Smyrna, Tenn., was saddened and the community shocked a second time by the sudden taking away of the husband and fa-ther, Brother T. W. Dickinson. Just about two months before, the family had experienced a similar shock when the baby of the home, a boy of fifteen, was killed suddenly by a falling tree. This time the father was instantly killed in the long-to-be-remembered wreck on the Nashville, Chattanooga long-to-be-remembered and St. Louis Railroad, not far from the city of Nashville, July 9, 1918. Brother Dickinson was born in 1846. In 1861 he entered the service of the army of the Southern Confederacy. He was captured at Fort Donelson in 1862, and was held a prisoner at Camp Butler, Ill., for seven months, when he was released by exchange. On October 13, 1863, he entered the service of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad Company, and at the time of his death was the oldest, man in the service. But there was another service which he entered early in life -a service far more important than that of the army or the railroad company. It was the service of the Lord. But, like many, after entering this service, he failed to live up to the high standard of the church of the living God. In 1866, through the preaching of Brother E. G. Sewell, he came back to the fellowship and service of the church and became an ardent supporter of the cause of Christ. Although there is a temptation in railroad life to be negligent about religious duty, Brother Dickin-son was faithful in his attendance on the first day of the week, much of the time being able to attend the Lord'sday services of his home congregation at Smyrna. In early life Brother Dickinson was married, but was soon bereft of his companion, and in 1884 he was married to Mary Evelyn Carter. Four children blessed their home, three of whom, with their mother, are survivors. May the rich blessings of this life and the still richer blessings of the life to come be theirs.

Thousands of tests have been made since the outbreak of the influenza epidemic. The influenza germ is breathed in through the nose or throat, the infection lying chiefly in the nasal and bronchial secretions.

Hawley's Ointment has been found to be most effective in preventing influenza. Many cases have been especially noted where every person in an organization suffered attacks of influenza, except those who used Hawley's Ointment as a preventative. This ointment kills the influenza germ and keeps the nasal passages thoroughly sterilized. It is also wonderfully effective in treating nasal catarrh, colds, cold sores, coughs, croup, and early stages of pneumonia, and general inflammatory conditions of the membranous surfaces.

Hawley's Ointment is readily absorbed by the mucous membranes. The Many Mysteries of Nature

BY L. W. BOWER, M. D.

You can take an onion seed and a pansy seed, and plant them side by side in the same spot of ground. In one case, you get an onion, with its peculiarly strong ador, and in the other you get a flower of care beauty. You can plant a poppy seed and get opium (a dangerous, habit-forming lrug), or you can plant a rhubarb seed and get something that helps constipation. No scientist, living or dead, can explain these mysteries of Nature. Behind the invisible life germ in each seed is hidden the deep secret that nobody understands. Everything growing out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing natural conditions. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He earned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening frains, bearing-down pains, periodical irregularities, pelvic inflammations, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of lady's slipper root, olack cohosh root, unicorn root, blue to back and Oregon grape root. Women who take this standard remedy now that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it.

Favorite Prescription should have the full confidence of every woman in America because it contains no alcohol and no narcotic. Dr. Pierce knew, when he first made this standard medicine, that whiskey and morphine are injurious, and so he has always kept them out of his remedies. The East Tennessee Work.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER,

The work at Cleveland is growing in interest, with good attendance at all the services. One of the great needs of the church here is more personal workers. We are now getting ready to finish our meetinghouse. We want to complete it by May 1.

Brethren, can you imagine a section in Tennessee where there are whole counties without a single congregation of the church of Christ, and possibly where we have no members? Such is even so in East Tennessee. Plenty of churches, such as they are: plenty of preaching, such as it is. This seems to me to be just about as sad a condition as any in which people can be thrown. Is there anything for people in the plea for which we stand? Is there anything in that old Jerusalem story to bless the world and make it better? If there is, let us see that East Tennessee has a chance at it. We do not want to burden the columns of our religious journals in advertising the needs and our efforts to meet these needs: but if what we may try to state concerning the work here should become burdensome and worrisome, then pitch the paper into the wastebasket. We try to avoid undue advertising, and I have felt at times like just going on and doing all I can and sounding no trumpet about it to the world. Of all the gospel fields of which I know, this has been the most woofully neglected. Every now and then they tell me of a community where there was once a congregation of the church of Christ, but now there nothing there-all gone down. Should we not try to resurrect the cause at these places and, in addition to that work, plant the cause in many new places? Our strong hope to get the cause established in this country is to get certain congregations strong enough to become radiating centers which can support the cause and from which the word may be sounded out. There are no preachers here. Because the preachers have been pushed out for want of support. Tennessee is a living example of what churches will do without having the preacher break the bread of life to them. They absolutely die out. Many have gone and others are going that When you think of Cleveland, do not think of one of those strong congregations with plenty of money and plenty of workers. Such is not the case. The church is weak here. Would you not like to have fellowship with your humble servant in trying to make the church here one of those strong centers-a radiating point from which great succor is to go out in disseminating the pure gospel? Or will you let this servant do all the work, make all the sacrifice, and then have to give up an unfinished work? What interest will you take in this needy gospel field? Any?

It is dangerous to abandon one's self to the luxury of grief; it deprives one of courage, and even of the wish for recovery.—Amiel.

What Many Especially Need.

In these days of strain and stress, anxiety and worry, many people become pale, nervous, dyspeptic; in a word, all run down. Their condition calls especially for iron—but iron in a form in which it is pleasant to take, agreeable to the stomach, easily assimilated, and nonconstipating. Iron is combined in this form with nux, celery, pepsin, and other tonics and digestives in Peptiron, a real tonic, which is accomplishing a great deal in restoring health and strength, vitality, vigor, and vim.

Iron is indispensable to the perfect nutrition of the body. Peptiron supplies it in therapeutic doses, and in a remarkably short time seems to make a new and perfectly working system out of an old and broken-down one, enriching the blood, giving good color to the lips, cheeks, and ears, and brightening the eyes. Peptiron is a product of the C. I. Hood Company, and is sold by all druggists.

The Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its most listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, including not only comfort, but style, bility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth while shoe emplifies more beautiful. qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

Gospel Trumpet Blasts.

BY A. A. BUNNER.

Brother elders, if all of the congregations of Christ would support the gospel of Christ just with the same liberality that the congregation over which you preside, about how well would the gospel of Christ be supported, and how well would the faithful preachers of the gospel live? Answer as those who must give an account to God.

Brother, sister, read and study carefully Matt. 25: 31-41, and then ask yourself the question: "Which shall I hear-Matt. 25: 34 or Matt. 25: 41pronounced upon me in that great day?" Just as sure as that Jesus, the Christ, reigns, it is going to be one or the other of these; and the whole affair is left with you to decide-and it must be decided while in this lifewhich it shall be. So it behooves you to get serious and in earnest over the matter.

To the elders of the churches in the large cities, such as Pittsburgh, Pa., and Cincinnati and Cleveland, Ohio: If the church of Christ in Nashville, Tenn., had never been more energetic and liberal in its support of the gospel of Christ in Nashville than the congregations over which you preside have been and now are in your respective cities, how strong would the cause of Christ be in Nashville to-day? Serious and willful neglect of duty may confront you when you "appear before the judgment seat of Christ" to "receive the things done in the body."

It requires no sacrifice to "love in word" and "with the tongue" (see 1 John 3: 18); but to love "in deed and truth" is the only love that will stand the test at the court of heaven, and this love means constant and daily sacrifice. (See Heb. 13: 16.)

I never read a better commendation of a preacher of the gospel of Jesus Christ than the following: "But 1 hope in the Lord Jesus to send Timothy shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state. For I have no man like-minded, who will care truly for your state. For they all seek their own, not the things of Jesus Christ." (Phil. 2: 19-21.) But Timothy was, no doubt. like all true preachers of the gospel, including even the apostle Paul himself (see 2 Cor. 12: 15)—the more he did for a certain class of so-called "Christians," the less they would care for him and the more they would operate against him and hinder him in his work in the Lord; but still he must labor on and "endure bardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ."

My good Christian brother and sister, if you would follow out strictly the great law of love of the brethren as set forth in the word of God, what would you do with Gal. 6: 6, which reads as follows: "But let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things?"

If the church of God is "the pillar and ground of the truth" (see 1 Tim. 3: 14, 15), and if the church is to sound out the word "in the regions heyond" (see 1 Thess. 1: 6-8; 2 Cor. 10: 16) and to support those who are engaged in preaching the gospel (see Phil. 4: 15-19), and if judgment is to "begin at the house of God" (see 1 Pet. 4: 17, 18)-if judgment should now begin at the house of God, how would the account stand with a majority of the so-called "loyal" congregations of the present day? Would the Judge not spew them out of his mouth? (See Rev. 3: 14-18.)

The Work in Colorado.

BY E. C. FUQUA.

In February I was enabled to report five additions to the church as a result of my work in Fort Collins. So far I can report no additions for March, because weather and sickness have Interfered with my preaching, except on Lord's days. But I have not been idle. We have in Fort Collins a congregation of about twentythree members, and we own our house of worship, one of the best in the city. This report seems strange when we remember that this work was not begun until about the middle of January, While I came here early in September, the "flu" had us all under quarantine the remainder of the year, when I was taken sick. After my recovery, I went to work in a borrowed Methodist meetinghouse, and the result is the house belongs to the church of Christ, and the congregation and the outsiders fill the house at each meeting. I confess I am a little suprised at this rapid growth, but I was confident that this city was ripe for a great work. And the future holds other surprises, I am sure. A brother said to me recently: "This new house in Fort Collins will have to be doubled in size within five years; for I have never seen friends to any cause made more rapidly than are now being made by your work." Neither have I ever seen it. The result cannot be attributed in any manner to me, since I have preached here just as have preached everywhere; but neither can it be attributed to the word, since that is the same here as everywhere. It must be attributed to the people, who gladly hear the word and are zealous to conform to its demands. This condition I judged of this city before I preached a sermon in it.

We now own a splendid house at Bellvue, nine miles west, fully paid for, and one in Fort Collins, which will be paid for before the debt is due, I earnestly trust. We paid five hundred dollars cash (we had to borrow two-thirds of this amount) and gave our note for fifteen hundred dollars, due in two years, at six per cent. We secured all we will ever need in this city in the way of church property. For the two thousand dollars we came into possession of property nearly double this value. The house alone would cost us about two thousand dollars; but we get the house, with all furnishings complete, and a fine residence lot-a corner lot facing the street-car line-for the amount. Brethren J. M. Cook and L. P. Healy we owe credit for the financial aid that backed us in our cash payment. These brethren, who recently moved here from other States, promise to make excellent workers. We thank God for all the favors which surround this work. My plans are to hold some five or six meetings in this city this year, using my tent.

Raised Entire Incubator Hatch

Mrs. Dan Holycross, Silverwood, Ind., writes: "Reefer's Ready Relief is all it is said to be. I have not lost one of my last incubator hatch, and they are now four weeks old." And G. W. Miller, of Pittsburg, Okla., writes: "Hatched 175 chicks, and haven't lost one."

You can have the same success. Ready Relief in your baby chicks' first drinking water will save them from dying off with that dreadful plague, white diarrhoa. My Faith.

The views of infidel professors in leading colleges camoumand in the guise of higher criticism are so frequently named before the public that it should prove both retracking and simulating to read what an eminent teacher In one of the best universities in the hand has to say in favor of the saving and uplifting power of the word. infer to an article written sometime ago by Howard A. Kelly, M.D., Li.D., professor in Johns Hapkins University, and printed in Appleton's Magazine. The article is all the more pleasing because it was not written in combative myle, bût is a simple, straightforward, yet scholarly, provotation of the author's personal fatth and an explana-

Why I believe

What my falth means to me

What my faith means to me
It is not an easy task to step aside from an excessively that and practical life and adoquately state just what is more faith and the reasons for it, and almost impossible to analyze coolly ned critically that which iles within the realin of the emolions. At less may categorical statements turn more, as the author certically that which iles within the medical and thought is strick from the danger of in-adoquate infillment or so responsible an undertaking, yet for the sake of others to be won for Christ i do not retrain, but commit such efforts to the Author of my filth.

I have, within the just twenty years of my life, come may of uncertaint, and doubt tailo a faith which is an absorbed dominating conviction of the trail and about which I have not a roadow of doubt. I have been intimately assorbed with uniquent solutions to have mixed tragged in the life work, and so know the value of such opinions. I was once profoundly disterbed in the traditional faith in which I had been brought up—this of a Professiant Episconalism—by induces which were made upon the book of toucsia by the filters which were made upon the book of toucsia by the filters which were made upon the book of toucsia by the filters which were made upon the book of toucsia by the filters which were made upon the book of toucsia by the filters which were made upon the book of toucsia by the filters which were made upon the book of them, not knowing Hebrew nor archeology well, and to me, as to many, to pull out one great prop was to make the whole foundation uncertain.

So I Boundered on for some years, trying, as some of my higher critical friends are trying to-day, to continue to use the Bible as the word of God and at the same time bolding it of composite authorabip, a curious and disastrons pless of mental gymnastics—a bridge over the chasm separating an older Bible-loving generation from a nower Bible-eman elpated race. I saw in the Book a great light and glow of cipaled race. I saw in the Book a great light pun plow a heat, yet shivered out in the cold.

One day it occurred to me to see what the Book had to say about itself. As a short, but perhaps not the best, mothed. I took a concordance and looked out "word," when I found that the Bible claimed from one end to the other to be the authoritative word of God to man. I then tried the natural plan of taking It as my textbook of rellgion, as I would use a textbook in any science, testing it its submitting to its conditions. I found that Christ himself invites men (John 7: 17) to do this.

I new believe the Bible to be the inspired word of God, inspired in a sense unterly different from that of any models harmon book.

I believe Jesus Christ to be the Son of Ged, without human father, conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary; that all men without exception are by nature sinners, allenated from God; and when thus utterly lost in sin the Son or God himself came down to earth, and by shedding his blood upon the cross paid the infinite penalty of the paint of the whole world. I believe he who thus receives fesos Christ as his Savier is born again sofritually as definitely as in his first birth, and, so horn spiritually, has new privileges, appetites, and affections; that he is one body with Christ the Head and will live with him forever. I believe no man can save bimself by good works: ever I believe no man can save bimself by good works, or what is commonly known as a "moral life," such works being but the necessary fruits and evidence of the falfil

Satan I believe to be the cause of man's fall and sin, and Saint I believe to be the cause of man's fall and sin, and his releitlen against God as running soverner. Saint is the prince of all the kingdoms of this world, yet will in the end be east into the pit and made harmless. Christ will come again in glory to earth to reign even as he went away from the earth, and I look for his return day by day.

I believe the Bible to be God's word, because as I as it day by day as apiritual food. I discover in my own life, as well as in the lives of those who likewise use it, a transformation correcting etil tendencies, purifying affections, giving pare desires, and teaching that concerning the right counsess of God which those who do not so use it can know nothing of. It is as really food for the spirit as bread is for the body.

Perhaps one of my strongest reasons for believing the Bible is that it reveals to me, as no other book in the world could do, that which appeals to me as a physician, a diagnosis of my spiritinal condition. It shows me clear by what I am by nature—one best in sin and alternated from the life than in in God. I find in it e consistent and wonderful revelation, from Genesis to Revelation, of the character of God, a God far removed from any of my natural imaginities.

It the reveals a smallerer and nearness at God in Carrell 1997.

It also reveals a sendency and neuross of God in Christ which satisfies the neur's longings, and shows me that the infinite God. Creater of the world, took our very as are upon him that he might in infinite toys is one with his people to redeem them. I believe in it because it reveals a religion adapted to all classes and races, and it is intellectual suicide, knowing it, not to believe it

What it means to me is as intimate and difficult a question to answer as to be required to give reasons for love of father and mother, wife and children. But this reasonable faith gives me a different relation to family and friends: greater tenderness to these and deeper interest in all men. It takes away the fear of death and creates a bond with those gone before. It shows me God as a Father who perfectly understands, who can give control of appetites and affections, and rouse one to fight with self-instead of being self-contented.

And if faith so reveals God to me, I go without question wherever he may lead me. I can put his assertions and commands above every seeming probability in life, dismissing cherished convictions and looking upon the wisdom and ratiocinations of men as folly if opposed to him I place no limits to faith when once vested in God, the sum of all wisdom and knowledge, and can trust him though I should have to stand alone before the world declaring him to be true.

So many scholarly men have borne testimony to the inspiration and power of the Scriptures that we accept each new statement as a matter of course. Usually they do not affract the attention that an attack upon the Bible by some "professor" would elicit. A sore on a man's face is more noticeable than that part which is whole; so the vaporings of some blatant infidel often attract more attention than the accumulated evidence of the centuries in favor of the word.

The Meeting at Henderson, Tenn.

Brother A. G. Freed has sent us the following report for publication:

The meeting at Henderson, Tenn., closed on Friday evening, April 4, after continuing about two weeks. The preaching was done by Brother A. B. Lipscomb, our first-page editor. There was no uncertain sound given. The gospel was preached in love. The people heard him gladly. The interest grew from the first. There were confessions and baptizing at almost every service—two the last sermon. Thirty-four young men and women became obedient to the faith. Brother Lipscomb needs no encomiums. He did his duty well. He is held in the highest esteem by the church and people here.

The church was greatly strengthened and is in a healthy condition. It is planning larger things. It will do its part nobly in making permanent the Freed-Hardeman College for the brethren.

It is not unusual for nice things to be said about the preacher in connection with a successful meeting, but the good work of the congregation is not so often emphasized. We all understand, of course, that the glory in such matters belongeth to the Lord, but it is not out of place to speak of the efforts of those who are his humble instrumentalities. Such may be efficient and wide awake, or they may be indifferent to the cause of Christ. No one can hold a meeting for the church at Henderson, Tenn., and not be immediately and continually impressed with the good influence of the school as felt in the church and in the community; and this influence begins with and radiates out from two strong personalities-Freed and Hardeman. It is shown in the lives of the church members and in the ambitions and activities of the students of both sexes who come from many States to be educated. It was my privflege to attend most of the chapel exercises, and I could see that every boy and girl believed in the school, was proud of its success, and loved and appreciated their teachers. Freed and Hardeman and the other members of the faculty have a way of enlivening the ordinary routine of school affairs so that all thought of drudgery is dissipated and the students thoroughly enjoy their work. Brother Freed begins the day with a spelling bee that isn't all fun by any means, and yet it is so originally conducted that everybody enjoys it. In addition to learning how to spell, those engaged in this exercise also learn the art of attention, which Spurgeon said was "just as difficult as the art of homiletics." I was invited into the arithmetic class, and went with fear and trembling. When I went to school, I often found myself wishing that the man who invented mathematics had never been born. This was because I hated the many hard rules without which progress seemed impossible. But in Brother Freed's class things are different. He never has the class memorize a rule. The day I visited the class he was teaching cube root, the bane of many a scholar's existence. While I expected to be bored, I soon found myself fascinated. Brother Freed teaches it with blocks, and each student is urged to bring his own blocks, much like the children do in the kindergarten. I visited Brother Hardeman's grammar class, with the same result. He began by talking in a fluent way about modes and tenses, but he ended by discussing the difference between the apostle Paul's commands and his entreaties; and all of it, mind you, had its bearing upon the lesson in hand. Surely it is no mean accomplishment to know how to enthuse students with their students so that hard, earnest work becomes as delightful as play.

Articles have been written already concerning the desire of these brethren to greatly enlarge and increase the usefulness of the school. We hope they may reap the rewards of their labors.

Think not that thou hast found true peace, if thou feel no heaviness; nor that all is well, when thou art vexed with no adversary; nor that all is perfect, if all things be done according to thy desire. Neither do thou think at all highly of thyself, nor account thyself to be specially beloved, if thou be in a state of great devotion and sweetness; for it is not by these things that a true lover of virtue is known, nor doth the spiritual progress and perfection of a man consist in these things. Wherein, then, O Lord, doth it consist? In offering thyself up with all thy heart to the divine will, not seeking thine own interest, either in great matters or in small, either in time or in eternity.—Thomas a Kempis.

The Day of Small Things.

BY F. W. SMITH.

"For who hath despised the day of small things?" (Zech, 4: 10.) This is a very pointed question propounded by the Lord himself. It is rather in the form of a challenge to the fearful and faint-hearted who would hesitate at any undertaking God might order in the face of seemingly overwhelming difficulties. It is hurling a divine defiance in the face of his enemies or the enemies of his people who undertake to impede or destroy a work of God with a seemingly insignificant beginning. The language has direct reference to the rebuilding of the temple under the leadership of Zerubbahel with a handful of impoverished and discouraged Jews. The work was stupendous, and, with such a small beginning under the most unfavorable circumstances, had, from the viewpoint of God's enemies, failure written large upon its face. They said: "What are these feeble Jews doing? will they fortify themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they revive the stones out of the heaps of rubbish, seeing they are burned?" (Neh. 4: 2.) These questions of derision came thick and fast, and were capped off with the following: "Even that which they are building, if a fox go up, he shall break down their stone wall." It was, indeed, a day of small things; but, notwithstanding it was despised by the enemies of God, from out of the rubbish and ruins of the once glorious temple of God came another encircled by impregnable walls of defense. Why this wondrous success? Because God had ordered it, and "the people had a mind to work." The combination of these two things insures success in all the plans and purposes of God where both divine and human agencies are employed.

A Contracted Vision. In contemplating the great things about us, we lose sight of the little things of which they are composed. We look with wonder and admiration upon the majestic river sweeping its mighty volume of water on toward the sea without considering the many little streamlets trickling down the mountain sides that compose that immense volume of water. Overwhelmed with the enchanting view of the white-capped billows that break and dash their foam at our feet, we forget the tiny grains of sand composing the seashore that holds old ocean within its bounds. The mogul engine, puffing and throbbing like a thing of life, draws our thoughts away from the small particles of ore hidden away in the earth of which that monster is composed. We meet the strong, Christian man or woman, and note with what seeming ease they combat the difficulties of life, how they overcome this and that which gives us so much trouble, and forget the little things of which those characters are made and the long time consumed in their making. How true the saying: "Tall oaks from little acorns grow, and large streams from little fountains flow!" What mighty men and women grow up from a proper combination of the little things of Iffe!

Who Despises the Day of Small Things? The naturalist does not. He casts the tiny seed into the earth and waits in patience and hope for its reappearing in the form of growth to fruit and flower. The philosopher gives heed to the smallest particles of matter, conscious of the fact that minor must precede the major. The teacher begins at the bottom and in much patience instructs the child in the elementary principles of education. Satan never loses sight of the little things. In fact, he begins all of his work of destroying the souls of men and women by the use of little things. If he can get a child of God to be careless about little duties, he knows it is paving the way to carelessness about larger ones. Absence now and then from the Lord's-day service is all he asks to begin with, for he knows full well it will not be long until a cold indifference will steal over his victim. Negligence in little things is the string on which Satan plays his fascinating music. God that made the universe does not lose sight of little things. He brought into existence a universal empire, over which Christ, his Son, reigns, with such a small beginning that it called for a tiny grain of mustard seed as an object of comparison. Christians should give the greatest heed to the little things entering into and making up the character that God will own and bless in time and eternity.

How We Should Deal with Small Things. We should exercise especial care with them, giving them the greatest tenderness and attention. Nurture them as nature does a tender plant. If it be a small and weak faith, nurse it as a mother nurses her babe, for it is the most precious thing in all this world. Cultivate It, feed it on the spiritual food of God's word, and warm it with the sincerest love. If it be a dim hope, cling to it as a wayworn and lost traveler would hold on to his flickering torch in the darkness of the night. If it be the weakness of self-control. hedge the resolution to conquer with prayerful watchfulness. Be active in the employment of all the means of divine grace to conserve and develop the small beginnings of Christian character. Take God as a partner, let him guide and lead the way, and victory will ultimately come to the builder of a Christian character. God said of the work he assigned Zerubbabel, this: "He shall bring forth the headstone." That is, he shall complete the temple. If we despise not the day of small things, we, too, shall complete our life's work, placing on it the capstone of Christian perfection.

Why We Should Live a Christian Life.

BY BERTHA BERRYMAN.

If we follow our Savior in all his ways, he will lead us safely into the kingdom of heaven; but if we live a harmful life, we shall be cast into a lake of fire.

Just think of how Christ suffered on the cross for us!

When we reach that beautiful home above, we shall see many of our loved ones over there; but if we reject Christ and are cast into the lake of fire, there our tongues will parch, and we will cry out, "Please give me one drop of water to cool my parching tongue." No one will hear but the demons of hell, and they will not answer our cry.

While you are lying in the lake of fire, you will be thinking of how you treated the Lord's day, and thinking, too, of how you had to pass by the church of Christ, and probably looked in and saw the sweet little children in front listening to what the minister was saying, and yet you passed on. You made fun of the people who worked hard during the week and then on Sunday would take their little children to church and teach them the right way.

Just think of how sweet it will be to be prepared on the judgment day and to join the happy angel band!

All who have been baptized and live as a Christian should live shall be saved; all who live a sinful life shall be cast into the lake of fire, where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth throughout eternity.

As there is but one God and Father of us all, whose glory gives light and life to everything that lives, whose presence fills all places, whose power supports all beings, whose providence ruleth all events; so everything that lives, whether in heaven or earth, whether they be thrones or principalities, men or angels, they must all, with one spirit, live wholly to the praise and glory of this one God and Father of them all—William Law.

The Upper Room: Communion and Revelation.

On the way to the cross the Master stopped for five or six hours one evening in what we now call "the upper room." It was in a private home, somewhere in Jerusalem, and is supposed to have belonged to the mother of John Mark. That one evening of heart and hymn consecrated the home forever and made it the symbol and source of the soul's most sacred moments. It linked the church and home together as the two institutions that mean most to humanity in reaching the goal of its best ideals.

The persons and events of that far-away upper-room meeting had an influence of especial meaning and suggestiveness. They won John Mark to the ministry, and he wrote the strong, vivid, quickening little book we know as the "Gospel of Mark."

When homes have upper rooms in which the Master and his disciples are welcome, there will issue from them gospels and preachers.

To-day the home and the church stand too far apart. It is had for both. If growing boys and young men saw more of ministers, got better acquainted with them, beheld their devotions, and felt the power of their enthusiasms, aims, and loyalties for personal association, more of them would be easer to be sent out into the world to proclaim the evangel of forgiveness, of love, and of eternal life.

Every home ought to have a room of prayer where kindred souls might gather to wait at the feet of the Master. Thus would it have conscious and satisfying connection with "the home eternal" "beyond the sunset's radiant glow."

The upper room was a place of reconciliation and brotherhood. When the twelve went into that wonderful evening, they were fevered with ambitions about who should be greatest—a curse that somehow has hurt the church ever since—and it was stained with the presence of one in whose heart ran the black blood of the traitor. The Master "emptied himself" and took "the form of a servant" and washed the feet of those apostles fevered with such unhallowed ambitions, and thus shamed them into repentance and exalted them into humility.

Doubtless the Master washed the feet of Judas along with the rest, but it did not cleanse him. Judas could not endure the light and fled. Thus the upper room was rid of the one false presence which hindered the free flow of fellowship and stood in the way of reconciliation.

It is only by the spirit of humility, of devotion, of sincerity, of service, and of loyalty that the fellowships of life are possible. It is in this spirit alone that we may look for the healing of torn and bleeding Christendom

The upper room was the place of visions and revelations. There the apostles were invited to look into the heart of the Master in a deeper, clearer way, and the purposes and methods of God were unfolded to them as never before. The Lord's Supper, which was to be observed to the end of time, was established in the upper room, and it would remind them and all the followers of Christ that his presence was with them, that their hearts should not be troubled, and that they should always in their divine and difficult work have his peace, his power, and his leader-ship.

It is likely that the five sublime chapters, John 13-17, were spoken in the upper room, and they may be considered the Master's thoughts beside the communion table. The most comforting words ever spoken are the "four-teenth of John." The Bible, especially of people who have trouble and sorrow, is well worn and often tear-stained there, and many have gone down into the valley and shadow of death holding it in their hands as the light that guides them "until the day dawn and the shadows flee away."

The upper room has a window of vision that looks far beyond time and the stars, into the Father's house of many mansions where in the morn we shall again see those angel faces smile which we have loved long since and lost a while.

The upper room is a preparation for the daily task and a shield against the day of temptation. For the Master, just beyond it was Gethsemane, where he again folled the tempter and where, after his bloody sweat, "angels came and ministered unto him." The soul that has an upper room may pass through fire, and blood, and thorus, not without tears of piercing, but without stain or defeat, and be made ready and unafraid to enter the throne room of the Father's house of many mansions.—Christian-Evangelist.

O O O Has Christ Come?

Momentous questions such as these, "Has Christ come, or is he vet to come?" " Have the Bible predictions concerning the second coming of Christ been fulfilled, or are they yet to be fulfilled?" are raised and answered, along with others suggested by them, in a new volume, which has just appeared from the pen of our old friend, Dr. James M. Campbell, author of many other useful volumes, and published by the Methodist Book Concern, of New York. Dr. Campbell believes that the Bible promises relating to Christ's second coming have already been fulfilled and that he is really and spiritually present to-day. His second coming occurred on Pentecost, but is not to be identified, according to Dr. Campbell, with the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, in whom Christ's spiritual presence was and is manifested. As Christ was the revelation of the Father, so the Holy Spirit was and is the revelation of Christ. Christ's second coming synchronized with "the end of the age" (alon), and not with "the end of the world" (kosmos). He is now here, though invisible to the eye of sense, but in the fullness of his redemptive power, carrying on in and through his church the work of his kingdom. His presence will become increasingly manifest by the power and work of the Spirit as time goes on. This view of Christ's second coming is the view to which my own study of the New Testament brought me many years ago. The literalism and pessimism of the Second Adventists, who hold that the world is bound to grow worse until Christ comes again in bodily form, do not appeal to me, t prefer to think of Christ as present in the world, seated on his throne, and causing his kingdom to come with increasing power. Ills presence in the world to-day seems to be manifest in the mighty events that are now being enacted on the stage of current history. Dr. Campbell, of course, meets the objections to his view, as he proceeds in the three parts of his book: (I.) "The New Testament Teaching Regarding the Second Advent;" (11.) "Implications and Applications:" (III.) "A Catechism on the Second Coming of Christ."- J. H. Garrison, Editor Emer-Itus Christian-Evangelist.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

W

B. P. Odeneal, of Tyronza, Ark., has been suffering with "fin" for five weeks. He will be thankful for any assistance while in this distressing condition.

A. G. Freed, president of Freed and Hardeman College, Henderson, Tenn., will hold the meeting for the Russell Street congregation, beginning on May 25.

Foy E. Wallace, Jr., changes his address from Fort Worth, Texas, to Temple, Texas, where he will reside and devote his time to general evangelistic work.

We have received an encouraging report of M. L. Moore's meeting at Gallatin, Tenn: Large audiences are in attendance at each service and good results are assured.

Sister Irma Lee Batey writes encouragingly of a revival of interest in the work at Charlotte, Tenn. Charles Brewer, of David Lipscomb College, preached for them last Sunday.

R. V. Cawthon will begin a meeting at Grandview Heights, this city, next Sunday. In view of the recent reunion of brethren in this vicinity and the settlement of all troubles, this should be a glorious meeting.

Two meetings are in progress this week in Nashville. W. S. Morton, of Columbia, Tenn., is preaching at Pilcher Avenue; S. P. Pittman, of the David Lipscomb College, at Eighth Avenue, North. Both meetings deserve encouragement.

From A. H. Lannom, Obion, Tenn., April 7: "I underwent an examination at the Dyersburg Hospital to-day and was advised that I had chronic appendicitis and would have to undergo an operation. I ask the prayers of all the falthful."

From G. W. Jarrett, Woodlawn, Tenn., April 8: "I am in a meeting near Woodlawn, with good interest to date. If any congregations near here want me to hold a meeting for them in May or June, address me at once at Woodlawn. Tenn. I am from Coffeeville, Ala."

From T. B. Clark, Denton, Texas, April 10: "The work here is moving on quietly, C. R. Nichol is at home this week and preaching for us at night. He is doing some excellent work, which is characteristic of him. I intend to spend the most of the summer in protracted meetings."

The congregation worshiping at Bethany, in Warren County, Tenn., would like to get in touch with a Christian brother who is a physician, with the view of having him locate in their midst. They would also like to hear from a good, loyal preacher. Those interested should address L. T. Hutcheson, Route 1, Rock Island, Tenn.

From Joe L. Netherland, Yuma, Tenn.; "I will labor with the congregation at Miami, Fla., during the months of May and June. All correspondence should be addressed to me at Miami during that time. I will be in Texas in July and August. I am now arranging to give all my time to preaching. I have time for meetings in September and October."

From Harry Hayes, Flornbeak, Tenn.: "Please announce through the Gospel Advocate that I will sing in meetings or teach singing schools wherever I am needed until July 14, at which time I am to begin my school work. I am now at the close of a singing school. The need is great, I might add that I have been in this work some each year for several years."

We rejoice with the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church, at Dallas, Texas, in the improvements to be made in their church property. They have outgrown their present building. At a recent meeting of the congressation the sum of five thousand dollars was piedged, with a large proportion of the members yet to be heard from. A. O. Colley's ministry for this church has a far-reaching influence for good.

From Rue Porter, Bristow, Okla., April 10: "I am now located at this place to help all I can to build up the cause of the Lord. I preached on Lord's-day, morning and night. Two identified themselves with us at the morning service. Prospects are bright because all are willing workers. We have just bought a house and lot, but the house is badly in need of repair. The congregation is weak and would appreciate help from the outside. I am the only loyal gospel preacher in this (Creek) county."

From C. B. Glasgow, Alex. Okla., April 3: "I officiated at the marriage between Mr. Thomas Mahon and Miss Ethel Corzine, at the bride's home, one mile west of Alex, last night at 9:30 o'clock. There was a large crowd of relatives and friends present, some coming from Chickasha in automobiles through a steady rain. It was a very enjoyable affair. Thomas is a son of Brother Mahon, our leader in the church here, and is a fine man. I am told that his bride is one of the best girls in this community. God bless them,"

John M. Rice writes from Merkel, Texas: "Tice Elkins, one of our best gospel preachers, is held at home all the time on account of his wife's severe sickness. The doctors in Chiniress say she can never be well any more. Brother Elkins has canceled all his meetings for the year. His bills must be paid. Brethren, send him some help at once, to Childress, Texas. Brother Elkins has six children that must be clothed and fed. Brethren, do not just breathe a prayer for him and withhold your means. See James 2: 15, 16."

From L. S. White, Sherman, Texas, April 9: "Work commenced to-day on the new church house at this place. The house will have basement bullt of concrete, main auditorium, balcony, several large classrooms, a rest room for the ladles to care for their children, and will have every convenience needed. The house will be centrally located, and built of brick and stone. The house and lot will cost forty thousand dollars. Yesterday at 6:15 P.M. more than three hundred people assembled on the lot for the first public service. There were three songs, two prayers, a short sermon, and one of the elders, eighty-two years old, moved the first shovel of dirt. We are praising God for the growth of the work in Sherman.

Sunday was a day of great joy at Belmont Avenue Church, this city. Horace Lipscomb, who is the leader of the young people's Bible class, spoke, and eight of the boys and girls gave themselves to Christ. There has been a total of twenty-four new people put on the Belmont roll in 1919. Some of these were converted, and others came by relation. The congregation plans to continue a revival throughout the entire year, 'A number of tent meetings will be held later, some in the city and others at destitute places out of town. At a business meeting in the evening, Morgan H. Carter was selected to continue serving as evangelist for the church another year, beginning on June i. Appropriations have also been made for orphans and for mission work, both local and foreign. "Christ saves, Follow Him." Is their motto.

From W. W. Slater, Box 241, Fort Smith, Ark., April 11: "I began work with the Park Hill congregation here last Sunday. My family came Wednesday. The church gave us the greatest surprise we ever had by giving us a good 'pounding' last night. Between twenty-five and thirty dollars' worth of provisions were brought in, ranging from a bar of seap up to a ham of nieat, for all of which we are very thankful. May the Lord bless each and every one of those who took part in this wonderful feast of good things. We will hold services in our new church building on the fourth Sunday in this month, at which time we will have an all-day service, with dinner on the ground. All who live in reach are cordially invited to come and spend the day with us. The church house will cost something like twenty-five hundred dollars, and the brethren need some five or six hundred dollars. Will you not send them one Lord's-day's contribution? There are but a few members here, and they will appreciate your assistance. Send money to S. A. Lynch, Circuit Court Clerk, Fort Smith, Ark. I give J. B. Nelson and W. T. Kidwell, of Dallas, Texas, as reference. God bless the faithful."

Do the Kingdom and the Church Mean the Same Thing?

BY J. C. M'Q.

I had not intended to write any more for the present concerning the charge made by Brother Watson and others that Brother Jorgenson taught at Prichard, Ala., that baptized believers are not in the kingdom, but only in the vestibule of the kingdom. However, Brother Jorgenson sends the following letter, with the request that I publish It in full:

Louisville, Ky., March 29, 1919,-J. C. McQuiddy, Nashville, Tenn.-Dear Brother: I have received yours of the 27th and thank you for your promised correction on the foot-washing question. Not only do 1 now "agree with the Bible teaching," but I have agreed with it all along. I shall certainly expect you to make this point clear,

On the kingdom question the charge was, in part, that I taught that baptized believers were not yet in the king-dom, and my statement, which you say "confirmed what the sister charged," said in part; "I teach now, and I taught then, that baptized believers are in the kingdom." (Col. 1; 13; John 3: 3-5.) The difference between my statement and the teaching charged is this: The one says that baptized believers are in the kingdom, and the other says that baptized believers are not in the kingdom!

says that baptized believers are not in the kingdom!

I would thank you to print this entire letter in "the next Advocate" in the space which you will save by eliminating a part of my "statement." of March 12; failing in this, will you kindly print alongside of, or in connection with, the third paragraph of that statement (which you intend to use) the following quotations from the founder and "grand old man" of the Gospel Advocate, David Linesonh? David Lipseomb?

In answer to the query, "Do the kingdom and the church mean the same thing or not?" he wrote: "Not exactly. The kingdom embraces the church, but is, I think, more

My words at Prichard, as my notes show, were almost identical with these words of David Lipscomb, and the vestibule illustration covered this exact point—that the kingdom of God is "more extensive in its reach" than the Fraternally, church: E. L. JORGENSON.

I am glad for Brother Jorgenson to be heard so long as he writes in a dignified, courteous manner. I want us both to conform to the truth, so that we may agree with each other. We are not now considering foot washing.

We should all be interested in teaching the truth, and nothing but the truth, as to whether or not "baptized believers are in the kingdom." We should rejoice when one teaches the truth and should grieve when one teaches Brethren of unquestioned veracity and integrity bear testimony that Brother Jorgenson taught that "baptized believers are not yet in the kingdom, but only in the vestibule of the kingdom." Brother Jorgenson makes the statement that "baptized believers are in the kingdom:" but his explanation of the statement does not put them in the kingdom, but only in "the vestibule of the kingdom."

AS THE VESTIBULE TO THE HOUSE. SO THE CHURCH TO THE KINGDOM.

So his explanation makes the church the vestibule of the kingdom. He believes, as I do, that when believers are baptized into Christ, the head of the church, they are baptized into the body of Christ, which is the church of Christ, I believe that when they are baptized into Christ they are baptized into the body, which is the church, and also into the kingdom of Christ; for the church of Christ embraces all the saved in the world, and in this sense is as broad as the kingdom of Christ. His explanation puts them in the church, which is the vestibule of the kingdom; but it does not follow that, because the vestibule is included in the house, those in the vestibule are in the house, any more than it follows that, because the chimney is included in the house, a person in the chimney corner is in the house. As the vestibule is a very small affair, not many people can get into it. Pronounced Adventism expects very little of the church. It teaches that the church will be caught up to meet Christ before he comes in "the millennial kingdom." W. E. Blackstone, the author of "Jesus Is Coming," the book that Brother Boll advises young preachers to read, says: "Hence, we conclude that the church shall be recompensed in reigning, with Christ, over the millennial kingdom. 'Fear not, little flock; for It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." (Luke 12: 32; Dan. 7: 18, 22, 27.) O, then, let us pray as Jesus taught us: 'Thy kingdom come.'" (Page 94.) Again, in "Jesus Is Coming" (page 87), W. E. Blackstone says, under the title, "Thy Kingdom Come:" "The Church militant, which was begun on the day of Pentecost (Acts

2), ends at the rapture, before the tribulation. The kingdom begins with the revelation, at the close of the tribulation." With him, the church ends before, and the kingdom begins at the close of, the tribulation. As this makes the kingdom yet in the future, Brother Jorgenson must repudiate this teaching of Blackstone and the action of his editor in chief, if he really believes baptized believers are in the kingdom of God. I would be glad for Brother Jorgenson to answer this question: Do you believe that the kingdom spoken of in Dan. 2: 35 was set up on Pentecost?

This vestibule doctrine belittles the church of Christ, destroys its efficacy and strength, and makes it appear that the gates of Hades have prevailed against it. West exclaims: "Gigantic is the misconception to dream that God has given the church, unable to reform herself, to build the Christian state up to a 'kingdom of Christ, or to reform the world. . . . More and more the Christian state is a tool of Satan." ("The Thousand Years in Both Testaments," pages 448, 456.)

It is inexcusable to appeal to the writings of David Lipscomb in a way to make it appear that he in his whole life. wrote one line that dishonors Christ and his church asdoes the doctrine I am combating. It is bad enough to misrepresent the living, but much worse to garble the writings of the dead. If Brother Jorgenson had any desire to deal fairly with the dead, I cannot understand why he should leave out of the quotation the very part, and the only part, that has any reference to the subject in hand. And yet he and Brother Boll have done this repeatedly. It is one of their stock arguments and has been featured in their own paper, Word and Work, where Brother Lipscomb's friends had no opportunity to make correction. If Brother Lipscomb were living and in his vigor, no one would have the effrontery to make such an attempt. How the boastful have fallen! These brethren have assured me and others that they could state their doctrine in the very words of the Bible. I admire Brother Lipscomb for his work's sake; I am much indebted to him for counsel and assistance; but, loyal, brave, and true as he was, I have never yet appealed to him instead of the New Testament. But the brother shall profit nothing and shall not bolster up any false doctrine by leaving out the only part of the quotation that has any bearing on the kingdom of God from the viewpoint we are considering it. Here is what Brother Lipscomb says of the church, which was left out; "It has both a local and a general application. In its local application it refers to those in a community separated from the world, meeting together to worship God in his appointments. In its general application it embraces all the disciples in a country, nation, or the world, separated to the service of God."

The kingdom of God does not contain any more than all the disciples in the world. If our brother will examine a complete concordance of the New Testament, he will be surprised to find that almost universally, if not entirely so, the kingdom of God on earth is used as no larger than the church of God. When we view it from the standpoint of the saved, this is undoubtedly true. It is also true that the rule of God extends over the kingdoms of men and the universe itself. "Jehovah hath established his throne in the heavens; and his kingdom ruleth over all." (Ps. 103: 19.) This is what Brother Lipscomb meant of the kingdom when he said, "but it is viewed from a different standpoint." In this sense the rule of God embraces the wicked and even hell itself. Is this what Brother Jorgenson means by the kingdom of God being larger than the church? Surely not; but if so, it has no place in this investigation, for we are considering the saved and not the wicked.

In the very next query following the one that Brother Jorgenson quoted, Brother Lipscomb teaches that the kingdom was put into harmonious working order. He also says: "The church is as much the kingdom of God when it does not attract attention as when he comes in his power and glory. It is called 'the kingdom of God' when a little stone, when it attracts ne attention by outward displays of earthly power; it is called 'the kingdom of God' when preached by John, when among the disciples in its elements in the life of Jesus; and all through the days of the apostles it was recognized as an established kingdom; received by them, and preached as an existing kingdom." It may be scripturally taught that the kingdom of God existed in promise, prophecy, preparation, and establishment. Christ comes in every great crisis of the kingdom, such as Pentecost, when all the elements of the kingdom of God. unorganized, were brought together, organized, and put into harmonious working order. He came when the middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile was overthrown, making of the twain one new man, or church, But beyond these preliminary displays of power, he is yet to come in that transcendent visitation which will signallze the consummated and perfected kingdom, the ideal order of eternity. Peter exhorts Christians to give dilligence to be faithful in the existing kingdom in order that they may enjoy the triumphs of the perfected, the eternal and heavenly kingdom. "Wherefore, brethren, give the more diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never stumble: for thus shall be richly supplied unto you the entrance into. the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." (2 Pet, 1: 10, 11.)

Some Questions About Christians' Going to War.

BY E. A. E.

One question was answered last week. Attention will be given to the second question in this article. That we may have it before us, I will give it again:

It is admitted that a Christian, as a Christian or individual, should not resent evil or retaliate, but when the government calls upon him to take up arms, he must obey; for we are told in Rom. 13 that "the powers that be are ordained of God," ministers of God, whom God uses for the purpose of executing wrath upon those who do evil. Therefore, if a Christian refuses to take up arms, he refuses to work in one of God's appointments to execute wrath on those who do evil.

God ordained the church, too. He ordained heaven, he ordained hell; he blows the trumpet, forms darkness, and creates evil (Amos 3: 6; Isa, 45: 7); he not only ordained civil governments, but he also sets over them, at times, the basest of men (Dan. 4: 17); and, just as it serves his righteous and just and merciful purposes, he removes kings and sets up kings (Dan, 2: 21); the ungodly and heathen Nebuchadnezzar was his "minister," or servant, to "execute wrath" even upon his own people (Jer. 25; 8-11; 27; 5-7; 43; 8-13); and Cyrus was his shepherd to help them back to Jerusalem (Isa, 44: 28 to 45: 7-read these passages with seriousness); and Satan is God's " minister " to " execute wrath," and Jesus Is his " minister" to save. God ordained the church for one purpose (God's children-Christians-are the church) and "the powers that be" (civil authorities) for quite a different purpose; he ordained heaven for one purpose and hell for Simply because God has ordained an institution or power is no reason within itself that Christians, under penalty of disobedience to him, should work in that institution and under that power. They should not work under Satan. They must do that which God has "ordained" for them to do, and refuse to do that which he has "ordained" for them not to do. God's commands or ordinances do not conflict. Since he has ordained his church for the all-glorious purpose which he himself gives and sent it on its mission of mercy and love and salvation, and since he forbids his children's avenging themselves, retaliating, doing unto any mun evil for evil, using carnal weapons, killing others, devastating, making widows and orphans and helpless cripples, no one can expect him in any way to contradict himself by ordaining that they must do these forbidden and horrible things under penalty of disobedience to him.

God forbids Christians to avenge themselves, for the reason that vengeance belongs to him and HE will repay. Christians must leave all that matter to him, and, instead, feed their enemies, give them to drink, pray for them, do good for their evil, and overcome their evil with good. But how does God avenge evildoers? Read the last of Rom, 12 and first of Rom, 13 in connection. He has ordained "the powers that be" for that purpose. The rulers in these governments are "set up"-ordained-by him to be a "terror" and "avenger for wrath" "to the evil," and to be "ministers" of God to Christians "for good." Since God forbids Christians to avenge themselves to punish or harm enemies; since HE takes vengeance, and since the rulers of earthly governments are his means or "ministers" for doing this-his avengers-he forbids Christians' joining these rulers and following them in killing their enemies, in making widows of their enemies, helpless women and orphans of their enemies innocent children and pure and helpless babes, and in burning homes and destroying and in every way devastating prosperous countries.

What, then, are Christians to do in any civil government -republic, kingdom, or monarchy-in which they may live? They are to submit in all cheerfulness, paying tribute and custom and all taxes, honoring the king or whatever ruler the government may have, being law-abiding and peace-maintaining and orderly; but should the government require them to do that which God forbids, they must then, as Peter and John say, obey God rather than men. (Acts 4: 19, 20.) It was "the powers that be," the civil governments, which forbade under penalty of death Peter and John's preaching the gospel at all. According to the reasoning of the above question, Peter, John, all the apostles, and all the church of God disobeyed God in going to all the world and preaching the gospel to the whole creation, because the civil authorities commanded them not to do that, and God says submit to "the powers that be." The apostles and all the church then did not believe this and were killed-many of them-by "the powers that be" for obeying God. If under no circumstances and in no condition Christians must disobey rulers. then there would never have been a Christian martyr. Everybody knows this. The Roman rulers and Jewish supreme court and leaders crucified the Son of God. If Jesus had submitted here to "the powers that be," he would never have been crucified and the world would never have had a Savior. The civil powers imprisoned Peter and John, Paul and Silas, all the apostles, and martyred thousands. Prisons and the block and the cross were under the control of the civil authorities. No one can be imprisoned or hanged or electrocuted now without the authority of "the powers that be;" neither could one in the days of Christ and the apostles. Were the imprisonment and execution of Christ, the apostles, and thousands of others right because God ordained these powers that did 11? When Paul wrote Rom, 13 and God commanded Christians to submit to "the powers that be," the bloody lyrant, Nero, ruled Rome. Did God mean for Christians to submfi to Nero in his bloody and tyrannical deeds? "No," you say. Then there may be orders of rulers that Christians in obedience to God cannot obey. All right-thinking people know that God means for Christlans to be subject to "the powers that be" in so far as these powers do not require disobedience to him, and he teaches that. Our own government recognized that when it wrote into the Constitution the principle of religious liberty, and it recognizes and is governed by it now when it writes into its draft law that members of any religious sect whose creed or "principles" forbid its members going to war in any form shall be exempted from combatant service. Some Christians are more exacting than the government itself and do not respect the consciences of their own brethren so much as the government does.

Suppose the bloody Nero had commanded Christians to arm themselves and to kill other Christians in his persecution of them, should they have done so because "the powers that be" ordered that done? "Most certainly not," one says. Then there are times when Christlans are not required by the Lord to kill in submission to "the powers that be." By what and by whom, then, is it to be decided when Christians must submit to "the powers that be" in doing such horrible things? But brethren who think Christians ought to go to war think Christians ought to kill other Christians, make widows of their wives and orphans of their children, burn their homes, and devastate their country in general. This is true, because all Christians are not on one side in any war. There must be some Christians on the other side. "But," says one. "our side is the side of righteousness and freedom; we are not on the side of plunder, conquest, greed, and carnage," No difference, there must be some Christians on the other side; and since they must go to war because their rulers bid them to, they must kill and plunder, burn and devastate. According to this, Christians will have to cut one another's throats in obedience to God. Who can believe this?

Christ prayed in John 17 that his disciples may "all be one," even as he and God are one—be in God, God in him, and God and Christ in all Christians. All Christians throughout the world must be one, having the Spirit of Christ, the mind of Jesus, the same love, and be of one accord and one heart and soul. Who can think of God and Christ killing each other? Then Christians in one country cannot under any circumstances kill Christians, etc., in another country. The thought of Christians' going to war is horrible.

The Nashville Banner of March 22, in an editorial article, commenting on Senator McKellar's speech made the day before in Nashville, says:

Senator McKellar yesterday gave the view of a business man of his acquaintance, who, from the purely economic viewpoint, argues that war is insane and insufferable.

The Banner Itself says:

The horrors and expense of the great world war, and the suffering, debt, and demoralization that have come in its wake, have brought the world to understand the waste, cruelty, and folly of war as it never did before; and if the advanced nations are to endeavor to prevent its future recurrence, now is the best possible time, and Paris, where the leading representatives of all the nations are assembled, the best place, for the movement to begin.

We are commanded to pray for kings and all other rulers, "that we may lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity." (1 Tim. 2: 1, 2.) Then let us pray for peace—for all this according to God's will. May God guide these rulers.

Lieutenant Nichols, an English poet and soldier, spoke in Nashville recently, according to the Banner, to a very large, intelligent, and appreciative audience. Of him the reporter says: "He was a member of the immortal 'First Hundred Thousand,' and fought valorously through the war until, wounded and gassed and suffering from shell shock, he was invalided to the hospital, where he lay for several months. The marks of his wounds are plain to see. . . . but the scars of his soul speak louder. It is they which have torn away all illusion as to the high spiritual results of war." And again: "He spoke of the sham fallacy of any spiritual upilit coming out of war. In a shaking voice and with outstretched, nervous hands, he said passionately:"

"There are no spiritual properties to war; I do not think being shot at improves a man's temper or his moral fiber. War is what one of your American generals called ithell '-and it is suffering and defilement. Any man who justifies it, except for the cause of defending national honor, is a liar and criminal and ought to be crucified. The love of officers and men is the one beautiful thing which developed, and these will disqualify them for civil life. The mere capacity to suffer in company does not help anything. And the awful suffering did not help at the time or now. You may learn more about life. soldler simply has got to stick it. War makes no man finer. It is a process of defilement, a time when you wait and lurk to kill your neighbor, as he is waiting and lurking to kill you. To say that such as that makes a soul better is blather."

The reporter further says that Lieutenant Nichols read several poems from different authors in a most impressive way, and "each of them brought out the horrors of war, the doomed lives that were wasted and the suffering entalled, with horrible vividness and strength. Incidentally Lieutenant Nichols criticized the attitude of newspapers of the world in regard to war and gave no uncertain sound as to what he thought about them."

I wonder what the brave young poet has to say about preachers who claim to follow "the gentle Nazarene," the "Prince of Peace," and to preach "Christ, and him crucified," and about religious papers that take the same attitude in regard to war as the newspapers of the world.

How can preachers and religious papers preach, teach, and encourage that which warriors themselves call "hell?"

The Campaign to Raise Funds to Enlarge and Improve the Buildings of David Lipscomb College.

BY E. A. E.

As previously stated, this college must have a new and larger home for young ladies and other improvements in order to receive the young ladies who wish to attend or whose parents desire to send to this school. Other improvements must be made in order that the school may accomplish the good it was and now is intended for it to accomplish.

We would emphasize with power the importance and crying need of true education as set forth in the best article on this subject. This is the one thing needful of this generation. We have seen this cruelly and fearfully demonstrated by the scientific, philosophic, educated, and efficient Germans. With all this, they virtually discarded Christ and set the Bible aside. True science and knowledge of all things earthly are not enough. The present generation, especially the youth, must be taught to know Jehovah, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom God has sent into the world; their obligations to God and responsibilities to men; the Bible as the word of God; their mission; and their destiny. There can be no true education without this.

The good work of enlarging this school cannot be done without money, and it has no way whatever of obtaining the necessary money except by donations from lovers of true education. Its directors have sufficient confidence in such people as to believe the required amount will be given. They are not asking for any enormous sum, but only for what is really necessary to do this work.

See what others are doing. Vanderbilt not long since

See what others are doing. Vanderbilt not long since asked the city of Nashville for a very large sum and received it forthwith. Besides, it received a rich gift from another source. The Episcopalians are doing the same. Other institutions are asking for large sums. Note what the Methodists for other purposes are calling for. The riends of true education in Nashville could and should rally to David Lipscomb College and largely help enlarge its buildings, fully equip them, and broaden its scope of usefulness.

This campaign is now on, and the directors are confident of success, because: (1) the cause is a most worthy one; (2) the friends of true education are many and are on the increase; (3) they are not asking for a large sum—only enough to actually accomplish the purpose; and (4) the people have the money and are willing to give it.

Begin now—with this date—to send donations, or statements of what you will do, any Liberty bonds and thrift stamps you desire to devote to a good cause, and speak to others about all this. Any amount to the whole amount will be gratefully received. Why cannot some good and able man or woman contribute the whole amount, and let us take what others may give to still greater usefulness?

Send all to Prof. H. Leo Boles, David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn., for he has been chosen treasurer of the building committee

A Valuable Helper.

We are pleased to Inform our readers that Brother H. Leo Boles has joined the publishers of the Gospel Advocate and will devote his ability to increasing the usefulness of the paper. This does not mean that he will cease to devote his energies to the development and improvement of David Lipscomb College. This he regards his first duty, and he has proved his faith by his works. He is a man who does things and appreciates the responsibilities that rest upon him. Busy men do things. He does not neglect his work for other things, no matter how important they may appear. We are glad to welcome him to the Gospel Advocate force and shall expect to find him a valuable acquisition to the paper. He is in full accord with the purpose of the Advocate and will cooperate heartly with it in advancing every good work. The paper will continue to assist and encourage all schools that are not teaching infidelity, will encourage unity among all Christians, and will vigorously oppose division and factionalism in the churches of Christ,

Query Department

John A. Finch asks some questions the answers to which should be of interest to our readers at this time;

Is it not highly probable that we as Christians are making a great mistake in contributing so much and so freely to Liberty loans, war savings stamps, Y. M. C. A., Red Cross, war sufferers' fund, and the like, which should be regarded by us Christians as a mere form of taxes, and not visiting the soldier boys that were put in Pederal prisons because they would not take a combative position in this last war (I mean boys that were truly Christians)? Do you know of any one that is boosting for Christians to go to these Federal prisons and visit these boys, that they may not hear that awful sentence: "I was sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not?" Would it not be the part of wisdom for the Gospel Advocate to insist on its readers' watching very carefully about this matter and, if it can, give them the names of the boys in the different prisons? I have heard of one Ben Jackson, of near Dresden, Tenn., but I have not learned where they sent him. It seems to me that the masses are saying, "Lo, here is Christ," thinking that the end justifies the means, and will fall to show the true spirit of Christ without any veiling or covering of the government agencies.

The querist evidently is misinformed. The government dld not force those who were conscientiously opposed to fighting to enter the service as 'a combatant, but did require those subject to draft to take the position of a noncombatant. Certainly those who invested their means in Liberty loans or war savings stamps because they considered such investment a good investment should not on this account fail to give liberally to the church of the Lord Jesus Christ. The truth is, nothing should come between us and Christ. Christians should be ready to give cheerfully, and to give liberally, as the Lord has prospered them. Giving refers not only to money, but to service. Many Christians are ready to give of their money, and yet are not ready to give time and service to Christian work It is the duty of all Christians to visit the sick, warm the cold, and feed the hungry. The man who is sick and in prison is deserving of the support and sympathy of Christians, regardless of the cause that placed him there. The Gospel Advocate is ready to do what it can to stir and arouse the brethren to more activity in visiting those who are sick and in prison and in feeding the hungry.

W. L. McClellan, Lumber City, Ga., seeks a satisfactory explanation of a scripture passage. He writes:

Please explain 1 Cor. 3: 12-16, 1 have never heard the meaning of the gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble, etc., explained satisfactorily.

I answered this inquiry in 1917, and, as the meaning of this passage has not changed, I can do no better than to repeat the answer here, which is as follows; "These verses concerning the one foundation for all builders to build upon appear to be susceptible to two interpretations. Some consider that the gold, silver, and precious stones built upon Christ, the foundation, represent the converts made by an evangelist. These represent faithful Christians. The wood, hay, and stubble represent converts that do not remain faithful, but who finally are lost. The builder, or the evangelist, will be saved, yet as by fire. Others hold that the gold, silver, and precious stones represent the truth that one teaches; while the wood, hay, and stubble represent the error that one teaches. If the teacher is honestly mistaken in teaching error and does not do it maliciously, he will be saved, 'yet so as by fire.' If his teachings are incorrect and false, his works shall perish as worthless and be of no benefit to the world. He is saved because he intended well, but is barely saved, like one who escapes from a burning house where all of his property is consumed."

Rena Howell, Atlanta, Ga., makes this request:

Please explain, through the Gospel Advocate, Mark 3: 28, 29,

It is not becoming to be dogmatic as to what is the sin against the Holy Spirit. There have always been differences on this subject. Some hold that those who charged Jesus with casting out devils by Beelzebub committed the sin against the Holy Spirit. The connection will bear that interpretation. However, it will bear another construction. Those who made this charge against Jesus sinned against him. People had sinned against John the Baptist in refusing to accept his teaching. He warns them: "You may sin now against me and find opportunities to repent; but when the Holy Spirit comes, if you reject him by rejecting his teaching, there will be no torgiveness, neither in this life nor in the life to come." When Christ was speaking, the Holy Spirit was not the lawgiving and directing power. The Spirit was not giving the law, so could not be sinned against; but after the Holy Spirit came on the day of Pentecost, if men turned away from his teaching and refused to be guided by it, there would be no forgiveness for such sin, as no other way of salvation will be provided.

T. K. Rouse, 2304 Walnut Street, Chicago, III., sends these two questions:

Will you kindly give me the proper definition of the word "Christian," both as a noun and as a verb?

A Christian is a follower of Christ, one who has the Spirit of Christ and who is seeking to walk in his steps. "Christian" is never used as a verb.

Do the words "Holy Ghost" (Acts 10: 44) and the words "gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2: 38: 10: 45) mean the same?

It would hardly be scriptural to say that "Holy Spirit" referred to in Acts 10: 44 is the same as the "gift of the Holy Spirit" spoken of In Acts 2: 38 and 10: 45. The Jews on the day of Pentecost and the Gentiles at the house of Cornelius received the same conditions of pardon, accepted and obeyed them, and, in consequence of their sins being blotted out, received the Holy Spirit as a gift. The apostles received the baptism of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost; and so, while Peter yet spake at the house of Cornelius, the Spirit fell on all them that heard, and fell on them in a miraculous measure, so that they were able to speak in different tongues. The Holy Spirit was received in different measures by the early Christians, but the baptism of the Holy Spirit was the greatest measare in which it was ever conferred upon any one.

Mrs. J. R. Tarkington, Stuttgart, Ark., makes this very brief request:

Please explain Luke 17: 34-37.

The passages in question evidently refer to the great suffering that should be experienced when Jerusalem should be destroyed. The meaning appears to be that the calamity should be so general that no two persons, wheresoever found or about whatsoever employed, should both be able to escape, and that captivity by the sword should have complete victory over the unhappy people. Christ would, therefore, warn his disciples to be watchful and prayerful, lest they should sin; for just as where the carcasses are, there will be the birds of prey, so wherever sin is found, there will be punishment.

Gospel Trumpet Blasts.

BY A. A. BUNNER,

Many so-called "loyal" congregations of Christ with which I am acquainted have neither time nor incilnation to support the gospel and sound out the word, solely on account of the quarrels and divisions among themselves, all of which divisions and allenations have been brought about by men on all sides of these ungodly conflicts who love to have the preeminence. O Lord, if it be possible, deliver the churches out of the hands of all who worship "a god with guts!" (See Rom. 16: 17, 18.)

Did you notice in the paper recently that St. Peter's Church was struck by lightning and almost destroyed? Yes, I read, the account of the circumstance in the morning paper. As the stroke came from heaven, it may have been sent to show Saint Peter that he had no business to own a church, "O, it is not St. Peter's church; it is the Catholic Church, and they just named it for Saint Peter!" Well. then, Saint Peter himself may have sent the stroke of lightning to show you Roman Catholics that he does not want you to name your churches for him. While Paul did not send a stroke of lightning to Corinth, he sent something sharper-the word of the Lord-giving the Corinthians and all others to strictly understand that he did not want them to name their sect churches for him. (See 1 Cor. 1: 10-15.)

"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another." (John 13: 35.)

I am now in West Virginia, and as the cruel war is over and the "fin" conditions have somewhat changed for the better, I hope, my health permitting and the Lord willing, to be able to send in several new subscribers to the Gospel Advocate from this field. I hope the Gospel Advocate may enter the homes of many thousands of new readers during the present year. Paris, April 4 .- 1 am not likely to have any employment here soon; only a few churches left to what there used to be, and a few in control have their preacher "once a month," and are not willing to permit any other preacher to visit them occasionally, during his three Sundays' absence, regardless of the earnest request of a number of good people. To me this is deplorable and very humiliating after over fifty years' faithful work in the church.—J. J. Vanhoutin.

Astounding Preventative for Influenza.

in one department of the Iron Mountain Rallway, of Texarkana, in which forty men were employed. twenty of them commenced the use of Hawley's Ointment at the outset of the 1918 influenza epidemic, every man of whom remained at his post every day during the period following, while the other twenty all suffered attacks of the disease that confined them to their homes.

Hundreds of other such tests have shown Hawley's Ointment to be an astounding preventative for influenza, and equally useful during treatment of the disease. The influenza bacillus is a germ which attacks the lungs, being breathed in through the nose and throat, the infection developing chiefly in the nasal and bronchial secretions. Hawley's Ointment is a prophylactic preventative for influenza. It keeps the nostrils thoroughly sterilized, killing the influenza bacilli as they are inhaled. Hawley's Ointment is a dependable treatment for colds, cold sores, coughs, croup, early stages of pneumonia, and generally for bronchial troubles. Its base is readily absorbed, and It, therefore, does not inoffame the nostrils when applied therein, as do most eintments having only a vaseline base.

Liberty Is Responsibility.

Peace and order and security and liberty are safe so long as love of country burns in the heart, of the people. It should not be forgotten, however, that liberty does not mean lawlessness. Liberty to make our own laws does not give us license to break them. Liberty to make our own laws commands a duty to observe them ourselves and to enforce obedience among all others within their jurisdiction. Liberty is responsibility and responsibility is duty, and that duty is to preserve the exceptional liberty we enjoy within the law and for the law and by the law.-McKinley.

Pirtle.

Robert Wesley Pirtle was born on December 19, 1889, and died, some-where in France, on November 11, 1918, of meningitis following influ-enzs. The saddest and darkest day of my life was the day on which I received the telegram (November 27) telling me of his death. He was one of the dearest and sweetest boys ever saw. He had been pure and good all his life. At an early age he was bereft of a father's care and love. Being the oldest of the three children that were left to me, he did his part so faithfully in trying to help me support them. He was such a kind, obedient son, and a good, sweet brother. As they were left to my care, I thought the greatest thing I could do for them was to bring them up in the way they should go, and in my feeble way I taught them the best I could, and I have had the pleasure and satisfaction of living to see all three of them members of the church of Christ. The youngest of them died five years ago. Then "Bob," as we all called him, went to Paris, Texas, to work in a dry-goods store with his half-brother. Capt. J. O. Pirtle, intending to take me there later so I could be with him; but his country called him and he had to go. He entered the training camp at San Antonio, Texas (Camp Travis), and was sent from there to Camp Doniphan, in Oklahoma, and was put in Battery E. 128th Field Artillery, and went to France with that battery, and remained in it till he died. He obeyed the gospel eleven years ago, under the preaching of Brother F. O. Howell, and lived a pure, consistent, Christian life to the end. He was always ready to do anything he was called on to do. He was superintendent of the Sunday school at Paris, Texas, at one time. He lived such a pure, Christian life while there that he greatly endeared himself to all, as the many letters of sympathy which I have received from them show. Dear, precious boy, it seems so hard that he had to die so far from home and mother. Our hearts are broken, but we realize that our loss is his gain. He is survived by his mother; one brother—Roy B.
Pirtle, of Toone, Tenn.; one half-brother—Capt. J. O. Pirtle, of Paris,
Texas; and two half-sisters—Mrs. R. F. Maelin, of Stanton, Tenn., and Mrs. Blake White, of Bolivar, Tenn. We sorrow, of course, but not as those who have no hope, for we will meet him in a home where sorrows come no more, if we continue faithful.

HIS MOTHER,

Vann.

Again the grim reaper has thrust his sickle into the heart of a happy family and cut down by death the de-voted wife of Elder J. E. Vann, who resides near McAlpin, Fla. The passing away of this good woman has cast a gloom over the home and hearts of her husband, five children, and an aged mother, who also resides in the home, and the community is saddened because of the great loss it has sus, tained. Sister Vann was a good moth-er and an affectionate wife, always cheerful, patient, and charitable. The home of Brother and Sister Vann, with its warm welcome and genuine hospitality, was our home while in their midst during the past year doing the work of an evangelist and monthly ministry, and we enjoyed our sojourn there so much. Sister Vann was thirty-six years old, and was a faithful member of the church of Christ at Evergreen, near her home, for ten years. She died in the Lord and has the promise of eternal happiness after the resurrection. To the heartbroken family I would say: Weep not for her as one who has no hope, but look up to Jesus, who will give her eternal life "In the morning of joy," when all the redeemed of earth shall be ushered into that beautiful city of God, where there shall be no more death or pain or sad parting, and where we can sing hallelujahs to Christ throughout the endless ages of eternity.

How Shiver Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism.

According to the standard medical books, rheumatism is not a germ disease, but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate, and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart, and other organs. To relieve rheumatism, it is, therefore, necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer with rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder, or liver, uric-acid poisoning, or any condition due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, inclose the amount, and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Hunt.

Mrs. Martha Hunt, wife of Samuel Hunt, a citizen of Lake City, Fla., for many years, but of recent years a resident of Dade City, died on Febru-ary 2, 1918, and was brought to Lake City and laid to rest in the City Cemetery beside her husband, who pre-ceded her in death several years ago. Sister Hunt was about seventy-five years old. She was always frail, but very industrious and painstaking, al-ways doing her work well as an affectionate wife and mother; and as a neighbor she was quiet, peaceable, and useful, every ready to assist in time of need. For many years she was a member of the Methodist Church; but after hearing the gospel preached in Lake City by Brother M. H. North-cross, on April 18, 1908, she was buried with her Lord in baptism, and was ever afterwards faithful to her Christian duty. So long as she was able to go to worship on the Lord's day, she was present, and she died in the Lord. The writer conducted funeral services over her body in the house of worship in Lake City. May the God of heaven comfort the bereaved ones in time of trouble, and may her example and earnest pleadings, together with the guidance of the Holy Spirit through the gospel, be the means of bringing them to obedience and unto salvation from sin.

Cherry.

Brother J. S. Cherry, of Model, Tenn., was born on May 5, 1852, and departed this life on October 8, 1918, aged sixty-six years, five months, and three days. He was married to Nellie Gentry on April 14, 1878. Sister Nel-lie Cherry died on November 8, 1901. Brother Cherry was then married to Sister Alice Jones on March 5, 1903. He obeyed the gospel on October 16, 1881. He has two sons, E. B. and A. C. Cherry, who, together with his last wife, survive him. He was a man who read the Bible, believed the Bible to be a revelation from God, and committed his soul to God's keeping in well-doing. In his death the commu-nity has lost a good citizen; the church, a stanch supporter; his wife, a devoted husband; and his sons, a A. L. ALLISON kind father.

The Work in Wayne County, Ry. BY J. D. WALLING,

It was my pleasure to spend a couple of weeks in Wayne County recently, preaching and visiting among the brethren. On Monday night, March 17, I was with the church at Monticello. We had a very pleasant service, and my heart was made glad to again witness the zeal and earnestness of those dear disciples. On Tuesday night I began a meeting at Stop. with a splendid audience, and the attendance increased to overflowing before the close on Sunday evening. There was one baptism here. On the following Thursday night I was at Rankln, with a splendid audience of a splendid and lovable people. The church there is alive to its duty and opportunities. They plan to do a great work this year. They have Bowser promised for a meeting with the colored people in Monticella: Charles Brewer is to hold a meeting for the church in August; M. P. Lowery is to spend a month in the county, beginning about the third Lord's day In August; I am to hold a meeting in September; while Brethren O. F. Shearer and W. C. Ramsey will be busy all the time. Can you heat it?

The brethren in Monticello are preparing to complete their house of worship, and hope to have It all finished before their meeting in August. In Brethren O. F. Shearer and W. C. Ramsey the county has two very able, earnest and consecrated young preachers that bid fair to be a power in their community. May God bless them; they are worthy. The disciples at Monticello need to put up the brick veneer and to seat their house. It will then be almost complete. They are not asking for help, but they need help, and need it badly. If any one wants to put his money where it will be properly used, send it to O. F. Shearer, Monticello, Ky. Why cannot other counties do as Wayne County is doing and take the world for Christ? This is no time to fight and devour one another. Souls are perishing. Preach the word!

EVER SALIVATED BY CALOMEL? HORRIBLE!

Calomel Is Quicksilver and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Calomel loses you a day! Do you know what calomel is? It is mercury—quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones, and should never be put into your system.

When you feel billous, sluggish, constipated, and all knocked out, and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel, just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and cannot sallvate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children, because it is perfectly harmless and does not gripe.

LEMONS BRING OUT THE HIDDEN BEAUTY

Make this lotion for very little cost and just see for yourself.

What girl or woman has not heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to bleach the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness, and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating, and should be mixed with orchard white this way: Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well, and you have a whole quarter pint of skin and complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms, and hands, it should help to bleach, clear, smoothen, and beautify the skin.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost, and the grocer has the lemons.

Newmarket, April 1 .-- 1 preached here last Sunday at 11 A.M. and at night, in the Baptist meetinghouse, to fairly good crowds, and had splendid attention. Four families live here who are simply Christians. They need a house in which to meet and have the gospel preached. The opposition is strong are it usually is in places where the denominations are agreed on re-fraining from preaching doctrinal ser-mons. The doctrine of Christ is new mons. The doctrine of Christ is new here, but there are people here who will become Christians if the truth Is preached. I know places where I preached more than forty years ago where there was no church of Christ. but where there are now strong congregations, such as Tracy City, Hillsboro, and many other places through the country. It takes time and faithful work and right living to surmount such difficulties. The many preachers whe visited Tracy City during the rewho visited Tracy City during the re-cent meeting there bear witness to this. I spent a few days with them, including the fourth Sunday in March. It was a feast of spiritual things. It seemed good to be there. The church was inspired to press on for greater things. Our much beloved brother, J. D. Cleveland, April 7.—The services at the church of Christ were good yesterday. The day was beautiful and everybody happy, I go to Ooltewah this afternoon, to be there to-night and to-morrow night. On next Lord's day shall begin a meeting at Benton. This is strictly a mission place. Only two or three members there. If any two or three members there. Brethren, remember him and his family in your member him and his family in your means. They prayers and with your means. They are being severely tried, and the expenses are evidently enormous.— George W. Farmer.

Terrell, April 3.—Our meeting here closed on Tuesday night, after con-tinuing seventeen days. The preachtinuing seventeen days. The preaching was done by G. Dallas Smith, of Cleburne, and our people were highly pleased with his work. It was simple, clear, and plain, and of the sort calculated to edify, strengthen, and build up the cause. I think it is the general opinion that this was one of very best meetings the church here has had. The attendance from the outside was good, and we feel that the cause stands far in advance of what It was before the meeting, for the reason that many have been able to see the position of the church and her grounds of contention as they have grounds of contention as they have never seen it before. On the last night, though a week night, the at-tendance was perhaps the largest of the meeting. It had been well announced that the subject would be "Why We Do Not Use Instruments of Music in the Worship," and the subpeople. We could not comfortably seat the audlence. All who came know the facts and will have no room for doubts in the future. There were four persons received into the congregation-two men and their wives. One had wandered out of the way, but was made to see his lost condition and persuaded to return to the fold. The baptized.-R. D. Smith.

Weekly Health Talks

Where Most Sickness Begins and Ends

BY FRANKLIN DUANE, M. D.

It can be said broadly that most human ills begin in the stomach and end in the stomach. Good digestion means good health, and poor digestion means bad health. The minute your stomach fails to properly dispose of the food you eat, troubles begin to crop out in various forms. Indigestion and despession are the comtroubles begin to crop out in various forms. Indigestion and dyspepsia are the commonest forms, but thin, impure blood, headaches, backaches, pimples, blotches, dizziness, belching, coated tongue, weakness, poor appetite, sleeplessness, coughs, colds and bronchitis are almost as common. colds and bronchitis are almost as common. There is but one way to have good health, and that is to put and keep your stomach in good order. This is easy to do if you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a wonderful tonic and blood purifier, and is so safe to take, for it is made of roots and herbs. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., stands behind this standard medicine, and it is good to know that so distinguished a physician is proud to have his name identified with it. When you take Golden Medical Discovery, you are getting the benefit of the experience of a doctor whose reputation goes all around doctor whose reputation goes all around the earth. Still more, you get a temper-ance medicine that contains not a drop of alcohol—so that these remedies always have been strictly temperance medicines.

If piles are torturing you, get and use Pierce's Anodyne Pile Ointment. The quick relief it gives is hard to believe until you try it. If constipated, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be taken while using Anodyne Pile Ointment. Few indeed are the cases which these splendid remedies will not relieve and usually over-come. They are so good that nearly every drug store has them for sale.

This Thing or That.

"If you read this book, you can't read that," quoted an eminent educator, addressing a body of teachers. His subject was literature, and his point that since no one can read all the books, it believes each to select wisely.

I liked the little admonition, so fraught with meaning and, by a slight alteration in the wording, applicable to so many situations in life. By changing it to " if you do this thing, you can't do that," I found it invaluable as a reminder to me, a busy mother, that I must ever be on the alert to distinguish between essentials and nonessentials.

Here are a few of my applications: I adore an orderly house, and, fundamentally, ours is an orderly house. But one is a philatelist; one is devoted to athletics, another to natural history; while their tather, working all day in an office at high tension, enjoys and needs an uncensored freedom in his home.

So, though I have frequently to clear away a litter of stamps and stamp journals before laying the table for a meal; though ball bats, gloves, skates, and even bleycles sometimes find their way into the best room; though bugs, pebbles, discarded snake skins, leaves, and grasses are wont to tumble out from odd corners; and though the parental newspapers are invariably strewn about, yet-mark you, precise housekeepers-I say never a word! To my boys who litter the house, home is the best place of all, and here they are always to be found unless urgently called elsewhere. An immaculate house or a contented. home-loving family. I dare take no chance. If I have this thing, I might not have that.-Lelia K. Williams, in Mother's Magazine.

To Stop Falling Hair,

The cause of baldness, hair falling out, loss of luster and color, is found in the roots of the hair itself. Our hair is but a portion of our body, and, like the other organs, cannot subsist without food. The hair finds its food in the fat layer of skin next to the skull. When this source of food is stopped or impeded, out comes the hair. The dreaded disease, dandruf, is a germ. It collects on the bottom of the hair and eats away its life. The hair sack from which the hair comes is embedded in the layer of under skin. When the scalp is diseased and the hair falls out, often this small hair sack closes. Eventually, as a result of the dandruff germs, baldness comes. The proper method of restoring the hair and stopping the falling out must necessarily be in the destruction of the dandruff germs and in the reopening of the little bair sacks. Furthermore. In order to rejuvenate the scalp and make the growth of new hair more vigorous, it is necessary that the system be able to furnish an abun-dance of hair food. Many artificial methods have been tried in restoring the hair, which were only surface remedies, and, falling to reach the small hair sacks, were unsuccessful Re-opening the hair sack allows the new bair to grow. Calvacura begins at the root of the trouble, and its use is, therefore, advised. Its mission is to feed the new hair as well as the old and rid the scalp of all dandruff germs. By thus cleansing and rejuvenating the entire scalp, a healthy growth of hair is assured. Falling of hair is stopped; new life and color to dead, gray hair is developed, and the hair becomes smooth and velvety. It is not an unpleasant treatment, and takes only a few minutes of time each day for about six week. The Union Laboratory, 214 108th Street, Binghamton, N. Y., will send you a liberal sample of Calvacura No. 1, free, together with a booklet, "The Triumph of Science Over Baldness," if you will send your name and address, together with ten cents in silver or postage stamps to help pay the distribution expenses

Looking Back.

BY J. W. ATKISSON.

When I was a boy, I attended the village school where the school term lasted about three or four months in the year, and was usually taught by a very stern old man who taught "Readin' and 'Ritin' and 'Rithmetic to the tune of a hickory stick." 1, a timid little boy, was afraid of dogs and stern men, and cross, snappy women. I ran away from school one day at noon and went nearly home and played by the roadside until the time to get home from school in the evening, and then went on home; but I did not tell my parents what I had done, for I felt sure I would get a whipping if I told them about it, But pretty soon the old teacher came along and told my parents that he had not seen me since noon; and, O, how humiliated I was just then! My father and mother scolded me severely and said I must never do so any more: but the old teacher talked real nice to me before my parents and kindly invited me to come back to school the next day, which I did. But when school "took in," I found out that the old teacher's kindness and gentleness of the evening before had fled away, and he seemed to be full of anger and hatred. He called me up to his desk and made me stand on the floor in front of the school while he, with stick in hand, proceeded to give me a very severe lecture, and said he had a mind to "cut the blood" out of me, and that he certainly would do so if I ever ran away from his school again. That scare and humiliation completely turned me against the school, and I told my parents that I would rather die than to go to school, and that I would not go any more. They tried every way to get me to go to school, but I just would not go. Then my father said he would put me at hard labor and maybe that would make me want to go to school. So I took an ax and went with the hired hands to clear up and fence a tract of new land. I chopped down trees, grubbed up stumps, cleared away and burned the underbrush, helped to make rails and build fences. The love of school had gone from me entirely, and this is the reason that I grew to manhood without any education to speak of. But after I was twenty-one years old I attended three short terms of school, and I also taught a few terms of school In the country. But my Himited education caused me to give up teaching and try my fortune in the great city of St. Louis, Mo. I have been here nearly thirty years, but have not accumulated a fortune as yet.

A Difference.

A young man stepped into a curlo shop to look about, when he was instantly accosted by a pleasant clerk who not only offered to display his goods, but failed not to ask if there was not something in his stock that he could sell him. There was, and he made the purchase.

He entered a department store for a leisurely stroll, only to be met by a gentlemanly floorwalker who offered the services of a guide that no interesting feature be missed; and goods were so attractively displayed, he parted with some of his coin in exchange therefore:

He stopped in front of an automobile salesroom just to look, when instantly an affable gentleman came out to invite him to a closer inspection. He stepped within and for a quarter of an hour was at school learning of gas engines, tires, etc., and as he departed he received a most cordial invitation to possess himself of that particular machine when he got ready to purchase.

Upon Sunday morning he stepped inside a church at the hour of worship. The single usher was engaged lowering a window, so he sought and found (easily) a comfortable seat, At the service's close he mingled with the slowly issuing company; and though recognized as a stranger, none expressed pleasure at his visit or urged his return.-Selected.

The Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its moslines; an enthusiastic admirer of its moe listinctive features, case and comfort, had suggested the name ExWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a thoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and country that the country is the country of the co bility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a since that combines all worth-while shocks. qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

Renew Your Health At Nature's Fountain

Without the Expense and Loss of Time Necessary for a Visit to the Spring

THE CRISIS

There comes a time in the life of practically every man and woman when their digestive or eliminative organs, or both, fail to respond to drugs prepared by human skill. In fact drugs seem to do them about a much harm as good for their systems 1 bel against all drugs. These are the cases which physicians call "stubborn" and "chronic" for the reason that they persist in spite of drug treatment, I do not refer to incurable diseases such as cancer and consumption, but to that larger class of functional disorders which we meet every day, where the organs of digestion and elimination are impaired.

For this class of cases our best physicians and our big city specialists send their wealthy patients to the mineral springs where, in the great majority of cases they are permanently restored or decidedly benefited. But what about the poor man who has not the money or the busy man or woman who cannot spare the time to spend several weeks or possibly months at a health resort? Shall circumstances deny them the restoration to health which Nature has provided? Read my answer in the coupon at the bottom of this page.

I have the utmost confidence in the Shivar Mineral Spring Water for to it I owe my Restoration to Health and probably my Life. It has made me tens of thousands of friends in all parts of America and even in foreign countries, whose faces I have never seen. Yet I count them my friends for the Shivar Spring Water has bound them to me by lasting gratitude.

I ask you to read their letters, a few samples of which I publish below for your benefit, and if you find among them any encouragement as to your own health do not hesitate to accept my offer which has no limits or conditions except those shown on the coupon. If you could read the letters that come to me daily, numbering about ten thousand a year, and the vast majority of them similar to those printed below, you would not wonder that I make this offer displaying my absolute confidence in the restorative powers of Shivar Mineral Water.

INDIGESTION

Savannah, Georgia.

I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomens for several months. I had lived on milk, soft eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantities as possible, for its properties are so happliy blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that I have had the opportunity of eximining the proparation, G. S., purchased in the open market in Atlanta Ga. and of exhibiting the same in medical practice.

I find it to be a meritorious remedy, carefully compounded, and of high therapositical value in the treatment of derangements of the functions of the kidneys, liver, and spless, which derangements are indicated by rheumatic, theumatoid, sad gouty disorder.

The exact cause of rheumatismy is unknown, but it is generally supposed to be due to an excess of wrice add in the blood. That excess county when the functions of the kidneys, liver, and spless are deranged.

Therefore, as G. S. restores those functions, and thus frees the blood of urle acid and all size that is contaminating, it stands to remyon that it is remedical of rheumatism, goal, litheratic, urleadidemia, and auto-infection from all suboxidation products of the urle acid type.

Respectfully and heartily submitted. W. H. MORSE.

Edifying as the Need May Be

Dreams and Visions.

Do dreams and visions sustain an important relation to our lives? Shakespeare said:

> We are such stuff as dreams are made of. Our little life is rounded by sleep.

This is poetry, you say. But poetry is often the highest expression of truth. Tyndall said: "We are woven with something that is not ourselves. The essential part of us no surgeon's knife has found nor can find. What is the nature of our aspirations and ideals that send us to work every day, put burdens upon us, and continually beckon us to higher attainments? They are such stuff as dreams are made of, invisible, intangible, yet to be reckoned with in the making of our lives."

The world has not hesitated to scoff at its dreamers, Like Joseph's brethren, we hear men say in tones of derision: "Behold, this dreamer cometh." But we cannot close our eyes to the fact that dreamers have been men of mark and distinction. Joseph, the dreamer, sold as a slave into Egypt, became the governor of that country. Moses, feeding his flocks in Midian, becomes the great lawgiver of his people. He was a dreamer. Columbus, who crossed the untraversed seas in the hope of discovery, was a dreamer. Franklin, who drew the lightning from the clouds, was a dreamer. Washington, who snatched thirteen jewels from the British crown, was a dreamer. Lord Nelson, who said before the battle of the Nile, "To-morrow I shall have gained a peerage or Westminster," was a dreamer. Oyama, the Japanese marshal, who won the applause of nations when he telegraphed to Tokyo, "To-morrow I shall be in Mukden," was a dreamer. Marconi, who sent the first wireless message across the deep, was a dreamer.

Eastern people and the Jews in particular have always shown great regard for dreams. They observed them and applied to them that pretended to explain them. The antiquity of the custom is illustrated in the Bible by the dreams of Pharaoh's butler and his baker and that of Pharaoh himself. It is illustrated among the Chaldeaus by the dream of Nebuchadnezzar that Daniel interpreted.

Old Testament Teaching About Dreams.

The law of Moses expressly forbade the Israelites from consulting with diviners. They were to pay no attention to the words of such prophets even if their signs and wonders came to pass, lest they be led away into idolatry. Howbeit, if any israelite had a significant dream, he might counsel with the prophet of the Lord or with the high priest for its interpretation. We find that Saul consulted with a familiar spirit just before the battle of Gilboa, because the Lord had departed from him and would not answer him nor discover the success of the battle, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by the prophets.

The Bible reveals the fact that God sometimes revealed his will in dreams and sometimes raised up prophets to explain them. By a dream he informed Abimelech that Sarah was Araham's wife and thereby saved him a lot of trouble. By a dream be revealed to Jacob the mysterious heavenly ladder. He favored Joseph early with prophetic dreams and gave him power to interpret the dreams of the baker and the butler even as he gave to Daniel the power to interpret the dream of Nebuchadnezzar. In the book of Numbers he declares that he will often speak to his prophet by a dream. In the New Testament we read that the Lord appeared to Joseph many times in a dream. In that way he assured Joseph of his wife's integrity. He warned him in a dream to flee into Egypt, and through a dream brought him back again. Dreams and visions were among the signs and wonders that would follow the preaching of the gospel. Simon Peter on the day of Pentecost quotes from the prophecy of Joel: "Your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams."

Have They Any Value?

What about dreams? What is their meaning? What is their interpretation? Sometimes they come as visions of the night so distinct and startling that they serve us with comfort or with distress during our waking hours. Sometimes the dream is so fleeting and evanescent that the memory of it vanishes with the morning. Some people like dreams. Others like their sleep as the Kentuckians take their famous product—straight. But since they do come to us, shall we dismiss them with the saying, "Only dreams," or shall we find in them, as in everything else, some practical and positive value? Certainly we should not be superstitions about them. I have no patience with those parents who come down to the breakfast table after a restless night and, yawning before their children, say: "O, I had such a bad dream last night!" "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

Outside of the Bible our own observation and reading teach us many things about dreams. They have a physiological value, Dreams are often symptoms of disease. They advertise indigestion. Nightmare sometimes precedes nervous prostration or warns us against pressure against some vital organ.

Dreams have a psychological value. Dreams are mental facts and must be accounted for in the construction of mental science. Among other things, they are evidence of the occasional, if not perpetual, continuity of our thoughts. What an interesting problem is suggested here! Is the mind separate from the body? Does it sleep with the body? President Freed of the Henderson College told me once that some of his best sermons were prepared in his sleep. Here was a case of a man sermonizing in his sleep. It is certainly true that many sleep while we sermonize.

A veteran of the Civil War woke one fine morning in an awful sweat. "What is the matter?" his good wife asked. "You look as if you had been plowing all night?" "Worse than that," replied the battle-scarred hero. "Last night I fought for five long years." He had lived the Civil War over again. In school we learned that the events of a lifetime have been covered in a dream that consumed only a tew minutes' time. Does this not help us to understand the meaning of the Master's words when in quiet tenderness he enters the chamber of death, bends over a still, cold face, and says: "She is not dead, but sleepeth?" Does it not reveal the truth and beauty in the song we sing, "Death Is Only a Dream?"

The New Testament's View.

What is the religious significance of dreams to-day? If we have a dream, who is to give us its interpretation? One passage from the New Testament should settle that problem for us. "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spoke in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things." From the riven heavens comes a voice, saying: "Hear ye him!" The question resolves itself into this: What does Christ teach us about his dreams? And If we have a dream, how shall we interpret it? Only through his word. And what does his word in the New Testament teach us about dreams? Beyond the mention of Peter's dream on the housetop and Paul's three visions and the Apocalypse, It teaches us nothing specifically. But it does teach us about ourselves. It shows the kind of characters we should possess. It teaches us that we should be loving, obedient children; followers after truth and righteousness; people of pure and noble thoughts, who shall bear the message of salvation to the world.

And if dreams can help us to attain such a character, to possess such noble qualities, and to correct the evil that is in our lives, shall we not look upon them as heavenly ministries? For one thing, they serve as witnesses to our present character. They illustrate the law of cause and effect in our lives and are in general an announcement of self. They commonly take their setting from their familiar circumstances. Jacob's ladder to heaven was the shadow of the rocky stairway formed before his eyes as he fell asleep. Peter, waiting, hungry, upon the housetop, saw a wonderful provision for his hunger. dreamed of cattle and corn along the banks of the Nile, Travelers tell us that cattle and corn are the famous products of that country, and we know that the Nile is its famous river. But there is more to a dream than its setting. They expose our personal qualities. They reveal a substream in our consciousness of which we were not previously aware. The self-control and self-conceit we are capable of is abandoned in sleep. Objectionable symptoms may be suppressed during the day; but at night, when we lose ourselves in sleep, they offer sure testimony. What we are usually determines the character of our dreams Hence, the miser dreams of gold, the libertine dreams of lust, the prince dreams of power, the devotee of fashion dreams of dress, the Christian dreams of Christ.

Hallowing Tokens.

Dreams in the Scriptures are often vehicles of warning or encouragement. The Bible is full of illustrations, and many come within our observation. A mother overtaxed with care for her child dreamed that she had drowned him. She awoke from the horror of her imagined deed to cultivate a new thought of love for that child and never grow weary of caring for him again. John Bunyan relates that he was told to flee from the wrath to come through a dream, and John Newton tells that he was recovered from backsliding through the same means.

Again, there are dreams of comfort. Dear ones we have loved long since and lost a while come back to us and renew the sweet converse of former years. The child we gave to God with grief nestles in our arms again. Sometimes we are translated ourselves and, like some saint of old, see sights we cannot describe. Then we awake to find our arms still empty and the homestead still furnished with many a vacant chair. It was only a dream, and we awake to begin over the toils and trials inevitable to our lot. But the impression of the dream abides like a healing and hallowing token from God, so that we can sing:

"Yet in my dreams I'd be Nearer, my God, to thee."

A GIFT FOR YOU.

The New Testament should be circulated. A copy should be owned by every one. Christians should circulate the book.

- 1. A Teachers' Testament is given to every one who sends us one new yearly subscriber to the Gospel Advocate, accompanied by $2, the regular subscription price. You should be interested in circulating a Testament worth $1.10 and also in placing in a new home a paper that is uplifting and helpful.
- We will give a copy of the Teachers' Testament to every old subscriber to the Gospel Advocate who will pay up to date and renew for two years in advance at the regular subscription price.

All are delighted with the Teachers' Testament. It is most helpful for Bible study, and especially sultable now for use in the Bible-school lessons for this and the next quarter, which are in the new Testament.

The text is that of the American Standard Version, with proper names marked for pronunciation and the words of Christ emphasized in heavy-faced type. All notes should be read with a grain of salt. The Introduction to each book is, indeed, instructive and helpful.

A Personal Statement.

One always hesitates to write something which has the appearance of, or may be construed as, self-defense, especially when he knows that he has been misrepresented or maligned. It has been my invariable rule to let misrepresentation and ugly epithets pass without attention or notice.

Nevertheless, it would be selfish upon the part of any one to ignore personal misrepresentation when it injures a good cause. Hence, against my own inclination, I am now yielding to the advice of many good brethren and herewith send forth a signed statement.

Almost immediately after I came to the office of the Christian Standard, the report was started by critics of the Standard's policy that I had sold my convictions to the Standard Publishing Company. This report was peddled until brethren in every section of the country wrote us that it had reached their ears.

In its issue of September 6, 1917, the Christian Century editorially boosted the report by declaring that I had been a "liberal" and intimating that I had conveniently changed my views simultaneously with my acceptance of the editorship of the Christian Standard. The report, of course, at once became more insistent, and now for a year and a half it has gone back and forth across the country, hand in hand with the boycott against the Standard.

Also, quite recently Prof. E. W. McDiarmid, of Texas Christian University, without calling names, was kind enough to make a statement which is calculated to give further and more intensive currency to the report; and the Christian-Evangelist, in its issue of March 20, was kind enough to pass Professor McDiarmid's statement on to its readers. This statement reads:

The religious journal, pronouncedly outspoken in its defense of the faith, will tolerate in its corps of writers one or more whom intimate knowledge has endeared to the proprietors, although, intellectually and sympathetically, these writers are not at home where they are.

At the age of twenty-two, I began a ministry of five years with the First Church, Norfolk, Va. 1 resigned the Norfolk ministry to accept a position as State evangelist of Virginia. At the close of a year's service as evangelist, I entered upon a ministry of fifteen years with the Third Church of Philadelphia, Pa. January 1, 1913, I began a ministry with the Broad Street Church, Columbus, Ohio, and remained with that church until I came to the Standard office, July 1, 1916. My adult life, thus far, has been practically spent in four cities; and in those cities it has been an open book. While I have had critics, a number of them quite pronounced and quite hostile, I have never been an enigma to people. Every one has always known where I stood on current issues. For instance, during the latter half of my Philadelphia ministry I regarded the Christian Standard as a reactionary journal, did all I could to discourage its circulation in the church, and even went so far as to denounce it from the pulpit. I likewise read a paper before the Philadelphia Ministerial Conference which threw the meeting into anything but a beautiful frame of mind. On that occasion Evangelist L. M. Munhall led the discussion in opposition to my paper. I did not then try to conceal the fact that "assured scholarship" had a fascination for me, nor shall I now deny that it had. My reading and thinking and preaching were along the line of "assured results." Even now my private library is top-heavy with rationalistic books.

The time came, however, when I took an inventory of the teaching of which I had been a zealous, open-and-aboveboard advocate. I was familiar with the various "modern viewpoint" authors, and, looking at the contents of one book in the light of a kindred book, it was not difficult to see the "general trend" and to spot the objective of the "new teaching" as a whole. Miracles were ruled out; Messianic prophecy was imaginary; the Bible was not an inspired book; Jesus, though a good man and a reformer, was a mere man; the atonement was superstition; God was an evolution in the human mind. When I saw whither the "assured scholarship" had led me, I was driven to the inevitable conclusion that I had been an atheist and didn't know it.

Shortly after my removal to Columbus, I stated from the pulpit that I had changed my viewpoint with respect to "assured scholarship." The sermon that morning emphasized the renunciation of my former position, and from that day until this I have openly resisted the teaching which I had openly indersed.

During my three and a half years' ministry in Columbus I was absorbed by, and Intensely interested in, my work. As a minister and lecturer, I had an income considerably larger than that of the average preacher. I therefore had no occasion to complain of my lot or to entertain journalistic aspirations. As a matter of fact, journalism was one thing that had never even remotely touched my dreams.

It was at least a year after I had acquainted the public with my change of viewpoint that the editor of the Standard requested me to take a place on his staff of contributors. I wrote for the Standard regularly for about two years, but with no thought of ever exchanging the ministry for journalism. Finally, something over three years after I had publicly renounced the "made in Germany" brand of teaching, the Standard Publishing Company opened negotiations with me respecting the position I now occupy.

Now, the story is told—to be believed or ridiculed or scorned. The reader may analyze or dispose of it as he pleases. I shall forget that I wrote it, and go straight ahead—resisting, as best I can, the teaching which nearly wrecked my faith, and which I am convinced is wrecking the faith of thousands.—George P. Rutledge, in Christian Standard.

Paul to the Saints at Philippi. No. 1.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Through much affliction, stripes, imprisonments, and severe humiliation did Paul and his companion plant the church in the city of Philippi, a church that became one of the best of New Testament times. This church was thoroughly imbued with a missionary spirit and aided in spreading the gospel to "the regions beyond." The letter Paul wrote to this church, and which has, by the grace of God, been preserved to us, contains teaching and principles applicable to saints in all ages of the world. Some of the main lessons of the epistle will be discovered under certain heads used in its study.

NEW TESTAMENT CHURCH POLITY.

The word "polity" means the "form or constitution of a government." Hence, there can be no such thing as a government, either civil or religious, without a form or polity. In harmony with this well-established fact, all civilized governments have certain fundamental laws for their constitution, and whatever may be proposed not in strict harmony with these fundamental laws is regarded unconstitutional and a violation of governmental polity. Now, the church of the New Testament has its polity, or form of government, which is found simply and solely in the local church or organization, and there is not a single law in the New Testament for the government or guidance of any other institution.

THE SIMPLICITY OF NEW TESTAMENT CHURCH POLITY.

The New Testament speaks as follows: "But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ." (2 Cor. 11: 3.) Let it be under stood that this "simplicity that is in Christ" does not refer to any one item of the great plan of salvation to the exclusion of all others. It not only includes the manner of life a Christian should lead, but includes the entire doctrine of Christ; and this doctrine has as much to do with church polity, or organization, as it does with faith, repentance, baptism, or any other individual act of Christian duty. But this "simplicity" of the New Testament is in vivid and marked contrast with the cumbersome machinery of human ecclesiasticisms with which the religious world is weighted down. There are wheels within wheels until a vast, complicated system is built up, and people are slaves to ponderous systems of human devising. These systems are dominated by popes, cardinals, archbishops, bishops, archdeacons, deacons, prelates, priests, presiding elders, and pastors, all absolutely unknown to the New Testament. Then comes "centralized power" in the form of councils, assemblies, conferences, associations, and delegated conventions, with a corresponding corruption of the 'simplicity that is in Christ." Centralized power always brings corruption, whether in politics, commerce, or religion, and the leaven that works and transforms purity into putrefaction is centralized wealth. God made no provision for such in his word, but every principle of divine legislation is unalterably opposed to it.

NEW TESTAMENT CHURCH OBGANIZATION.

The introductory part of this epistic to the saints at Philippi contains the whole of it-viz.: "Paul and Timothy, servants of Christ Jesus, to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippl, with the bishops and deacons." (Phil. 1: 1.) There it is, "the saints . . . with the bishops and deacons," and in vain do we turn the leaves of our New Testaments in search of anything more in the way of an organization. From this extreme "simplicity that is in Christ" the religious world has departed and drifted so far out into the sea of human speculation, with its foam and fog, until only a few are able to see what God has left upon the earth through which to redeem man. As to officialism, if officials there be in the church of the living God, they consist solely in the bishops and deacons in each local church, with absolutely no authority or jurisdiction beyond the limits of their respective congregations. Whatsoever is more than this is not of God, and can but work evil, corrupting the "simplicity that is In Christ."

THE WORK OF BISHOPS AND DEACONS.

This is so clearly laid out in the oracles of God that it would seem almost a reflection upon common intelligence to point it out. Paul's charge to the elders, or bishops, of the church at Ephesus applies to all bishops in every church and for all time. "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." (Acts 20: 28.) Of course, he means spiritual food—the word of God—giving to each their portion in due season. Peter wrote: "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly, not for fifthy lucre, but of a ready mind, neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock."

(1 Pet. 5: 2, 3) Taking these two statements from these apostles, we find, in the first place, that elders are to feed, teach, instruct, and lead the church over which they are placed as undershepherds. This requires fitness for the work, a work which cannot be delegated to an imported man called an "evangelist." To be sure, if the church has no one competent for the work of teaching publicly and from house to house, one from abroad may be invited to become the elder that labors in word and doctrine and should be supported by the church. But let not a church corrupt the simplicity that is in Christ by adding a functionary to the congregation not provided in the pattern. In the next place, we learn that in temper, manner of life. good works, and all things needful to the formation of Christian character, an elder must be an example to the flock. This requires a circumspect walk before both the world and the church. The work of deacons seems to be clearly laid out in Acts 6: 1-3. They were appointed to attend to a certain "business," and the business was looking after the poor and needy of the church or community, This, of course, involved the providing of the necessary means for the purchase of such things as food, shelter, clothing, and whatever else was needed to properly transact "this business" committed to them. The church must supply the money, not grudgingly, but willingly, gladly, and cheerfully. God gives to us, and we must give to those who need it. It is not ours. We are only the stewards of God's grace; and when he calls through the needs of the poor, we had better return it to God. For faithful service upon the part of elders, Peter says that "when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." (I Pet. 5: 4.) To the efficient and godly deacon, Paul says: "For they that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." (1 Tim. 3: 13.) Are the blessings vouchsafed to faithful elders and deacons a sufficient recompense of reward? Who will dare say they are not worth tolling for?

Mrs. Paderewski, wife of the Polish premier, writes:

"Poverty is in the extreme. The people suffer terribly. The conditions prevailing in hospitals could not be worse. Thousands of prisoners of war are also arriving from Germany. All are emaciated beyond words, practically living skeletons. They look haggard and act as though their minds were blank—terror is in their eyes. The majority of them are consumptive. O, it is too horrible for words! The working class is without occupation and the enforced idleness is driving them to despair. They want to work, but there is nothing for them to do; for all factories have been either destroyed or made useless by the Germans, who carried away indispensable pieces of machinery. In spite of the activities of Bolshevik and socialist agents, the workmen of Poland have remained orderly."

From J. O. Barnes, Lake City, Fla.: "There is an opening for a good undertaker and embalmer at this place (there is only one here). Lake City is a beautiful city of seven thousand population, healthy, and with good school advantages and a church of Christ worshiping after the New Testament order. I am anxious to have some one move here who is a faithful member of the church of Christ, who will help us in the work of the church; and inasmuch as a good opportunity seems to be open for an andertaker, we would be glad to see one come who is a faithful member of the church of Christ. Any one interested will please write to me."

T. F. Colvin writes from Washington, D. C.: "Let me specially invite your attention to the article of W. S. Long regarding the work in this city and assure you that we all have reasons to rejoice that a building site is now paid for and a safe and sound title procured. Now cannot all help to have a building completed before Christmas? It can be quickly assured by a prompt action toward providing the funds to finish the task. I heartily thank those who have responded so promptly and liberally, and say to one and all that your help is most highly appreciated, and we hope to do, with your help, a work here that will make all rejoice. May God bless you for your faithfulness."

From J. G. Allen, 1412 Baltimore Avenue, Muskogee, Okla., April 15; "Please report the following money to build a church house in Muskogee: Previously reported, $348.10; Foster Street Church, Nashville, Tenn., $10; Belmont Avenue Church, Nashville, Tenn., $25; Mrs. L. We appreciate these contributions very much, and we pray God to put a spirit of liberality in the minds of the brotherhood, so that we can have a house in which to worship God in this city without the fear of being dispossessed before our next meeting. Let this good work continue until completion, brethren."

From O. E. Phillips, Hillsboro, Texas, April 17: "We are closing the most successful meeting in the history of the Hillsboro church. About one month ago Foy E. Wallace, Sr., and I agreed to exchange meetings. We were ready from the first day, and the church worked unceasingly throughout the meeting. As a result, we had fifty-three Thirty-seven were baptized, only five of whom were children. Old men and women, young married people and middle-aged people were among the ones baptized, Nearly all were heads of families. Sixteen were received by letter and reclamation. We are planning to erect a twenty-five-thousand-dollar building in the near future. This is one of the fastest-growing churches in Texas; and if we can keep everybody faithful and happy, we hope to save many more souls. I will go to Longview on the fourth Sunday for the return meeting."

From Will W. Slater, Slatonville, Ark., April 17: "We had a great day at Shady Point, Okla., last Lord's day. Large attendances at all the services and good interest manifested. I am here at Slatonville this week, preaching to appreciative audiences. I will close on Friday night and go to Valley View to my regular appointment there. I preach at Shady Point on the first Sunday; Valley View. third Sunday; and at Fort Smith, second and fourth Sundays. We will hold services in our new church house in Fort Smith on the fourth Sunday, at which time we desire to have an all-day service. Brethren in reach are invited to attend any and all of these services. I have placed my home at Council Hill, Okla., in the hands of L. G. Park. He is instructed to sell on any terms that are suitable to the purchaser. So if any one wants a home on his own terms and can bring a letter of recommendation from the elders of the church where he worships, this is an opportunity. This is a splendid farming country and will grow almost anything. Brother Park is anxious to build up the cause at Council Hill. Write him. May God bless the

I. C. Hoskins, of Manchester, Tenn., writes to Brother Elam as follows: "I publicly commended your article of last week on 'Dancing,' and now 'Dancing Mad' is so good I must write and commend your strong articles. Why cannot and why do not all godly parents, all other pious people-the elders of the church, preachers, and all the church-take a united stand-as one man, even as God and Christ are one, God in Christ and Christ in the church -against the sinful modern dance, immodest apparel," etc.? I believe the immodest apparel is largely responsible for the Increased Immorality. But here I go. I only intended to speak a word of encouragement and to say 1 expect to preach on 'Dancing' here at Manchester on the second Sunday. I have preached on this subject both in protracted meetings and in local work. By God's help, I changed a whole community near Florence, both with reference to this worldly amusement and gambling or card playing. At another place I baptized a ringleader, her sister and brother, and she gave herself to Christian work and led a number of young people to the better life. You are doing great good. 'Stand fast.' This needs no reply."

EDITORIAL

An Honorable Course and Fair Play.

BY M. C. K.

On page 387 of this issue of the Gospel Advocate we publish an article, entitled "A Personal Statement," from the pen of George P. Rutledge, editor of the Christian Standard, which appeared in the editorial columns of that journal in its issue of April 5, 1919. We wish it clearly understood that it is no part of our purpose to join in a journalistic family quarrel, or to defend one religious journal, as such, and to oppose another; but because of the very vital and fundamental principle at stake in the attack on Editor Rutledge, as well as to give further publicity to the matter of simple justice and fair dealing toward a brother, we lay before our readers this "personal statement" from the Standard's editor. Regardless of what our own peculiar convictions may be, it seems to us that we should all be ready at all times to defend the sacred principle involved when a brother, though he has been caught by the glamour of "advanced thought" and entangled in the meshes of destructive criticism of the Bible, nevertheless, on seeing, or at least believing that he sees, the error of his way, has the moral courage and virility to turn away from this fascinating, but faithdestroying, system.

In such a case, to make the charge, in the absence of positive proof, that a brother has "sold" his "convictions" is nothing short of a piece of unreasonable and wicked persecution, of which men who believe in fair play and honorable dealing ought to be ashamed. We not only iail to see anything dishonorable, or that calls for the slightest adverse criticism, when a man, becoming convinced that the way in which he has been led to walk is wrong, turns away from it, but, on the contrary, we see the very quintessence of honor and integrity in the act. Persecution in such a case is not only wrong, but it is positive proof of littleness which cannot see other men pursue a course different from its own without maligning their motives.

Let it be further said in this connection that to us it is not at all strange that young men of high character and worthy ambition are often misled by the specious and alluring tenets of a system which poses as the custodian of the world's learning and becomes the cynosure of all the presumptuous and self-styled "advanced thinkers" of the time. From the days of Ferdinand Christian Baur and Bishop Colenso, who, during the first half of the nineteenth century, attacked the traditional or accepted view of the divine origin of the Bible, when the battle between destructive and conservative criticism really began in earnest, down to the present day, the distortion of facts and other misrepresentations concerning the biblical records have been so well concealed under the gloss of learning and the glamour of great names that it would be strange, indeed, if young men of the class just mentioned did not sometimes fall victims to its seductive power.

The "higher criticism" of the Bible, as it is styled, precisely as the application of the same method to any other historic document, is both a legitimate and valuable process, and the friends of the Bible, equally with its enemies, welcome its most rigid application to every book of the Bible and are glad to have every claim made for it by the advocates of the traditional view subjected to the searchlight of the severest criticism; but they do not propose to sit still and see the sacred volume chopped to pieces and reduced to the level of a human document by the efforts of misguided manipulators of even a legitimate method without tearing off their mask and laying bare their empty and pompous pretensions.

Touching the case in hand, it appears that, in the early days of his pulpit ministry, when quite a young man, the present editor of the Christian Standard, like numerous others, was fascinated by the glittering tinselry of this self-styled modern scholarship which has distinguished itself mainly by its unfriendly and often unscientific attacks upon the Bible, and he was led to accept the "assured results" of this coterie of scholars. At that time, as well as now, the Christian Standard was waging a timely and unceasing warfare against this pernicious system, and its present editor is sufficiently ingenuous to make the following frank and open statement:

During the latter half of my Philadelphia ministry I regarded the Christian Standard as a reactionary journal, did all I could to discourage its circulation in the church, and even went so far as to denounce it from the pulpit. I likewise read a paper before the Philadelphia Ministerial Conference which threw the meeting into anything but a beautiful frame of mind. On that occasion Evangelist L. M. Munhall led the discussion in opposition to my paper. I did not then try to conceal the fact that "assured scholarship" had a fascination for me, nor shall I now deny that it had. My reading and thinking and preaching were along the line of "assured results." Even now my private library is top-heavy with rationalistic books.

From the days of Paul to the present time men of sterling qualities and of the highest integrity have been led to embrace false systems of religion and to defend them with unrestrained zeal and persistency; but in the case of our brother, as in that of Paul, there came a time when he was fortunately led to review his record and to reexamine the foundation on which he was building, concerning which he makes the following fair and frank statement:

The time came, however, when I took an inventory of the teaching of which I had been a zealous, open-and-aboveboard advocate. I was familiar with the various "modern viewpoint " authors, and, looking at the contents book in the light of a kindred book, it was not difficult to see the "general trend" and to spot the objective of the "new teaching" as a whole. Miracles were ruled out: Messianic prophecy was imaginary; the Bible was not an inspired book; Jesus, though a good man and a reformer, was a mere man; the atonement was superstition; God was an evolution in the human mind. When I saw whither the "assured scholarship" had led me, I was driven to the inevitable conclusion that I had been an atheist and didn't Shortly after my removal to Columbus, I stated know it. from the pulpit that I had changed my viewpoint with re-The sermon that mornspect to 'assured scholarship." ing emphasized the renunciation of my former position, and from that day until this I have openly resisted the teaching which I had openly indorsed.

Concerning the facts contained in these two quotations, we respectfully ask, can argus-eyed infidelity itself see in them anything dishonorable or that even remotely suggests selling one's convictions. To those who dare to answer this question in the affirmative, we recommend a careful perusal of the following parallel case:

I verily thought with myself that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth. And this I also did in Jerusalem; and I both shut up many of the saints in prisons, having received authority from the chief priests, and when they were put to death I gave my vote against them. And punishing them oftentimes in all the synagosues, I strove to make them blaspheme; and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto foreign cities. . . For ye have heard of my manner of life in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and made havor of it. . . I was before a biasphenier, and a persecutor, and injurious; howbeit I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief. (Acts 26: 9-11; Gal. 1: 13: 1 Tim. 1: 13.)

Such facts, reflecting the luster and glory of a great character, not only do not indicate a weak and vacillating spirit, but they indicate the very opposite quality, with the metal of which martyrs are made. All honor to men who, under any circumstances, renounce what they have become convinced is error, no matter how deeply rooted they may have been in their conviction that it was truth, nor how ardently they may have fought in its defense; but most especially, all honor to men who, because of such change of conviction, have the courage to renounce a system which is fascinating and popular in itself and whose advocacy is destined to promote popularity with the world.

As we understand matters, the editor of the Christian Standard has convictions with which the Gospel Advocate does not agree; but this fact in no wise deters us from speaking out in favor of fair play in dealing with him and in defense of a vital principle in his conduct when that principle is attacked by unfriendly critics. To all other young men brought under similar influences we heartily commend his course and his fine example, and pray that the Lord may grant him many years in which to continue the noble, brilliant, and timely fight which his journal is making against a system which, as we humbly believe, mutilates the Bible and destroys the faith of men in its dlying origin.

The Trouble in the Church at Lone Oak, Ky., Is Settled.

BY E. A. E.

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

"To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not irksome, but for you it is safe."

Jesus prayed that his disciples "may all be one," "that the world may believe" that God did send him. He emphasizes this by repeating it and makes it stronger by saying, "that they may be perfected together into one: that the world may know" that God did send him.

All disciples of Christ in all places on all the earth, If they do not already do so, should be led to realize keenly and deeply the most grievous, most fearful, and far-reaching evil results of strife, contention, and division, and that they are sins against God and men. They check the spiritual development and dwarf the growth of the congregation in which they exist; they estrange and embitter otherwise good men and women; they affect other congregations, begetting the same carnal feelings within them; they cripple the influence of preachers connected with them; they prevent the world's believing in Christ and knowing that God sent him; and they send not a few to perdition.

The trouble in the congregation at Lone Oak, Ky., a village five miles west of Paducah, was grave, and was spreading as a gangrenous sore. But I am glad to report to all concerned that this congregation and all persons in any way connected with its trouble have adjusted completely, by the grace of God, all differences; are all happy over this adjustment; are now "giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace;" and, above all, have "put on love, which is the bond of perfectness." HOW MUCH BETTER! All who knew of this trouble will be glad to learn of this peace and love.

All the brethren connected with this matter request me to state, as I think best, the pleasant fact of this adjustment. I prefer to do this in such a way as to encourage them and to help others.

In the first place, the elders, purely in the light of the word of God, were brought to see the wrongs they had done Brethren Farthing and Record, and any others, and gladly took the scriptural steps to right these wrongs. This is praiseworthy and a fine example. We are reminded just here that elders are to be "ensamples to the flock."

Brethren Farthing, Record, Wharton, and others saw their own wrongs and as gladly confessed them, apologized, and asked forgiveness. Brother Charley Taylor reached the meeting on its last day, received apologies from Brother Wharton, and also asked forgiveness for whatever wrongs he had done Brother Wharton or the church-

All others connected with this trouble were led to see the sin of it, to confess their own part of the wrong, and to ask forgiveness.

All matters of misunderstanding and of difference between members of this congregation and the one meeting on Gobel Avenue, Paducah, were removed by mutual apologies, and the two are in perfect fellowship in the good work of the Lord.

It may be doubted if that country ever witnessed such frank, straightforward, full and free confessions of faults to one another, asking pardon, granting it, and praying to God for forgiveness. All this was in obedience to God (James 5: 16: 1 John 1: 9; 2: 1-6), and we are assured that God forgave them.

That whole community saw a light in that congregation, and will continue to see it, which had not been seen before for a long time.

This did not all occur as deliberately as I am writing it; for brethren who went to the meeting on Tuesday morning—the time set for the general adjustment after two days of hard preaching and earnest prayer—with documents in their pockets to convict and to condemn others began, without producing these documents, to—well, as it is sometimes expressed—"to run over one another" to confess in tears their own wrongs and to pray for forgiveness.

Inasmuch as Brother Record is a young preacher, capable of doing much good, and is known in many places, and inasmuch as he has been published in this paper as withdrawn from, it is due him to state now that not only did he confess his wrong in writing a letter reflecting on the elders of the church and using some ugly words against the church, but that the elders rescinded their action in withdrawing from him, since their course in his case, as in the withdrawal from Brother Farthing (although Farthing dld wrong), could not be sustained by the word of God.

Brother Charley Taylor, who lives in Paducah and preaches for the Gobel Avenue congregation, is a good preacher, and, better than that, is a good man, and had nothing to do with the origin of this trouble. He did what he could to adjust it, but repeated some things it was thought he should not have done, inasmuch as it was claimed he had been corrected. He cheerfully set that right, as has been stated. I say this that he may not be misunderstood. He stands well wherever he goes.

Brother Wharton Is a man of no mean ability as a teacher and preacher. People are delighted to be in his Bible class. He was a principal factor of this trouble. But he most completely covered all wrongs he did any one by as full and tearful confession as any man could make, and he as graciously granted pardon to others. He said a fine thing when he declared that from henceforth people could fuss without him, fuss about him, but could not fuss with him. We should all say this. Let us remember that it takes two to make a fuss, anyway.

So far as this entire matter is concerned, these preachers—Brethren Wharton, Record, and Taylor—stand clean and in a bright light before the church and the world.

Brethren from Gobel Avenue; Bandana, Ky.; and Brook-

port, Ill., were present and assisted much in different ways in this settlement. Those from Brookport and Bandana were requested to assist in the investigation and to advise as to whether the elders had always proceeded scripturally. Brother W. T. Beasley, of Belleview, Tenn., was present two days, helping with prayers and exhortations. Last, but not least, Brother Joe Ratelliffe, of Bardwell, Ky. was present all the while, teaching, advising, persuading, singing, praying, smiling, weeping, working, and saying "Amen"—a most worthy colaborer. It was not only pleasant, but helpful, to be with him. The good Lord bless you and yours, Joe, these other good men, and these churches!

Now, with our minds on elders, purely for the good it may do others, it seems well to say in a general way that all should consider all the Bible teaches in regard to elders. An elder is not to be rebuked, but exhorted as a father; against an elder an accusation is not to be received, "except at the mouth of two or three witnesses;" the ones who sin are to be reproved in the sight of all, that "the rest" of the church may fear. (1 Tim. 5: 1, 19, 20.) This shows that elders may sin as all other mortals. Men who conclude that they are infallible are not fit to be elders. This shows, too, how to treat elders when they do wrong. Receive not an accusation against them, "except at the mouth of two or three witnesses;" do not rebuke them; exhort them as fathers; reprove the ones who sin before all, that "the rest" of the church may fear.

Hearsay must not be received and must not be acted upon in any one's case. It must not be circulated. It is wrong to circulate evil reports or reports not established as true; and when reports are true, they should not be circulated unless their circulation is necessary and will do more good than harm.

These instructions of God must be obeyed as much so as all others to the church, or as to the steps necessary to take in order to become Christians. Almost innumerable debates have been held from one end of the country to the other over the steps, and what the steps are, which must be taken in order to become Christians. Why not manifest as deep an interest and show as much zeal in all the church's—elders and "the rest"—taking the steps necessary to "walk worthily of the calling wherewith" they are called? (Eph. 4: 1.) Why not more seriously and earnestly study and regard the qualifications, responsibilities, and all work of elders? Why not study and teach and perform all duties the church owes to its elders? And why not study and teach and practice all other duties and responsibilities?

Peter (1 Pet. 5: 1-4) says that elders must willingly shepherd "the flock of God" in the full meaning of the word "tend," "exercising the oversight, not of constraint, but willingly; . . . nor yet for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as lording it over the charge allotted to" them, but making themselves, "ensamples to the flock." Then they will receive from "the chief Shepherd" "the crown of glory that fadeth not away." Also, Paul teaches that "the elders that rule well" must be "counted worthy of double honor, especially those who labor in the word and in teaching," because "the laborer is worthy of his hire." But some elders do not "labor in the word and in teaching," and some do not "rule well," but badly. The rule of elders is not an arbitrary one, is not "lording it over" the church; but is first practicing in humility the will of God, then teaching it to the church and helping others to practice it. They cannot be parties to strife or to any division contrary to the doctrine of Christ. They must be above all such; must be at peace among themselves; must teach forbearance, forgiveness, and peace to the church; and must "see that none render unto any one evil for evil." (Read 1 Thess. 5; 12-15.) They must do all this "well." Elders must first take heed to themselves and then to the church. (Acts 20: 28.) They must not be self-willed, and yet they must be more than mere figure-heads, ruled and used by some stronger will in the church to serve the purpose of that stronger will; they must exercise the oversight of the church, defending and protecting it, feeding and building it up.

UNITY AND PEACE AT FLAT ROCK.

Flat Rock is in the southern edge of Nashville and a part of the city. Three or four years ago some of the leaders in the congregation began to differ over ways and means of working and some personal matters, the congregation was finally divided, and a new house was erected on the same street on which the original house stands, and only a short distance from it. All this was wrong. I am grieved that I have had to behold the like of this in other places.

Let us consider applicable to this case all the principles stated above.

By the power of the word of God, by their tears and prayers and love for one another, and by the assistance at different times of good men not connected with either congregation, these two congregations were made one again on the first Lord's day in April. This was done by mutual confession and forgiveness of whatever wrongs had been committed against one another, against the church there and elsewhere, and against God.

It is most difficult to lead parties to strife, contention, and division in the church of God—the body of Christ—to see the sin against God and the church and themselves they are committing.

It is a great blessing to these two congregations—which were two—at Flat Rock, a great blessing to all families belonging to them, and a great blessing to the community that they, in penitence and confession and forgiveness from God, have returned to their first love.

May the peace of God, which knows no ending, flow as a river among them; may the love of our Lord Jesus Christ and the communion of the Holy Spirit abide with them both now and forever. Amen!

What it Means to be a Christian.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Webster defines a Christian as "one who believes, or professes or is assumed to believe, in Jesus Christ, and the truth as taught by him; an adherent of Christianity; especially, one whose inward and outward life is conformed to the doctrines of Christ." According to the New Testament, a Christian is one who believes in the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, with all his heart, and whose faith manifests itself in obedience to the commands of Christ. The faith that is conceived in the heart must be developed in the life. The faith that crowns the life with success and victory speaks out and comes out in action. "For hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example, that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again: when he suffered, threatened not: but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously: who his own self bare our sins in his body upon the tree, that we, having died unto sins, might live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed." (1 Pet. 2: 21-24.) In becoming like Christ, In being a Christian and walking in his steps, it is not possible to go wrong. We may go wrong by getting out of his steps and by becoming something else than a Christlan.

Recently I heard a lady engaged in "settlement work" say that she could not be a Methodist, a Baptist, or a Presbyterian. To be a member of any denomination would hinder her work. Another lady told her that she should do as a bey who was a Baptist. He found that he could not do his work successfully as a Baptist, so he decided to be simply a Christian, simply that and nothing more; and he was a Christian both in name and deed. He was kind, faithful, and lived up to the Golden Rule. The advice was good. No denominationalist will object to one's being a Christian. No one should wear the name "Christian" as a partisan. The man in Corinth who was for Christ as a partisan was as guilty as the one who was a partisan for Apollos. It is not enough to be a Christian in name only, but one must be a Christian in deed and in truth.

No one can be a Christian without being a follower of Christ. Christ came down from heaven to do his Father's will. "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to accomplish his work." (John 4: 34.) As Christ's consuming desire was to do the will of his Father, so the Christian hungers and thirsts to do the will of Christ, realizing that he shall be filled with unspeakable joy and unalloyed bliss. But the Christian knows that his strength is in Christ, and he can say doubly of himself as Christ declared of himself: "I can of myself do nothing: because I seek not mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 5; 30.) Christ's purpose in living was to honor and do the will of his Father. "For I am come down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 6: 38.) So long as one refuses to obey God, so long as he turns a deaf ear to the cries of the poor, it is vain for him to protest his fidelity and devotion to Christ. The love of Christ means keeping his commandments. "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." (John 14: 15.) Again: "Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my word: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. He that loveth me not keepeth not my words; and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's who sent me." (John 14: 23, 24.) 'The Christian has respect for God's word and is scrupulous in its observance. Not like a professed Christian once said to me: "If anybody goes by the New Testament, your people do; but this is not necessary now." Evidently in his own mind he had outgrown the Bible, so it was not necessary for him to keep the words of Christ; but all such love not the Father nor Christ. The Bible nowhere intimates that it is not necessary to keep the commandments of Christ, and such teaching is downright infidelity. As Christ came to do the will of his Father without modification, so every Christian with scrapulous exactness does the will of God, not making void the word of God for the traditions of his fathers. He will not exalt any act, however meritorious, into an act of worship to God. Washing hands as a religious service is condemned by the word of God.

The Christian respects both the spirit and the letter of the word. He does God's will in the fear and love of the truth. Among the first truths Jesus taught his disciples is poverty of Spirit. "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5: 3.) The Christian is sensible of his own spiritual destitution. Poverty of spirit is the humility which leads to faith in and communion with God. The Pharisee was so proud and haughty that he did not really appreciate his need of God. The publican was "poor in spirit" and fully conscious of his own spiritual destitution. He prayed: "God be merciful to me, a sinner." Humility is a virtue that shines, and is the virtue that is the most admired and yet is the least practiced. How hard it is to take the lowest seat in the synagogue! How slow are we to practice "In honor preferring one another!" We are slow to do the work and give the glory to another. Preachers are envious and jeaious of each other. They are slow to prefer others before themselves. Selfishness, envy, and jealousy on the part of preachers in particular and Christians in general are retarding the growth of the church. Christians should not lose sight of Christ, the light of the world. They should behold Christ as he gave up the riches of heaven for the poverty of earth. They should look upon him as he expires upon the cross.

"When I survey the wondrous cross
On which the Prince of glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride.

"Forbid it, Lord, that I should boast, Save in the death of Christ, my Lord; All the vain things that charm me most I sacrifice them to his blood."

Christians have the same spirit of humility that was in Christ. The Spirit, through Paul, admonishes the Philippians: "Doing nothing through faction or through vainglory, but in lowliness of mind each counting other better than himself; not looking each of you to his own things, but each of you also to the things of others. Have this mind in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, existing in the form of God, counted not the being on an equality with God a thing to be grasped, but emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death, yea, the death of the cross. Wherefore also God highly exalted him, and gave unto him the name which is above every name; that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow. of things in heaven and things on earth and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." (Phil.

Christianity means a giving up and losing sight of self and selfishness. Self must be dedicated to the service of God. Christ, who is our example, denied himself in order that he might save others. His mission was to relieve the suffering and the broken-hearted and save sinners. For him no sacrifice was too great. He toiled constantly that he might dispel the darkness and usher in the light. No base, sordid man can be his disciple. No man is a Christian while serving mammon. With the Christian the kingdom of God is the most important consideration. "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." (Rom. 8: 9.) It is not enough to boast of the good we have done, it is vain to wear the name of Christ, if we have not the Spirit of Christ. Those who have the Spirit of Christ will walk in his steps; they will feed the hungry and warm the cold. They will make sacrifices to save the lost and will cheerfully observe. "All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them; for this is the law and the prophets." (Matt. 7: 12.) Christians rejoice in sufferings for Christ's sake and glorify God in his name. "If ye are reproached for the name of Christ, blessed are ye; because the Spirit of glory and the Spirit of God resteth upon you. For let none of you suffer as a murderer, or a thief; or an evildoer, or a meddler in other men's matters; but if a man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God in this name." (1 Pet. 4: 14-16.)

A Campaign to Raise Funds to Erect a New Home for Girls and to Improve the Other Buildings of David Lipseomb College.

BY E. A. E.

We are making an earnest effort to place and to keep this campaign before the people until the necessary amount has been raised.

The government has a fine way of putting the Victory Liberty Loan before the people, and the people have a fine way of taking all these bonds in a given time. A safer and better financial investment, so far as this life is concerned, cannot be made; besides, the government needs the money

Now, will not the people who prize true education, the foundation of which is the fear of God and in obtaining which the very greatest of all textbooks, the Bible, must be studied, show the same readiness of mind in responding to this appeal? There can be no true education without the principles and truths of the Bible. In not a few common schools and in many colleges and universities the Bible is being undermined. The youth of our country must not lose faith in the integrity and inspiration of the Bible. All who contribute to the building of such schools as the David Lipscomb College will not receive their interest in dollars and cents and earthly gain, but in the good characters of hundreds of young men and young women, the good such young men and young women do. and their reward in heaven. Kind reader, if you have inclinations to help the school, but desire to buy Victory Loan bonds, and cannot do both, you can kill two birds with one stone; buy the Victory bonds and make them over to the school. This can be done easily.

The Baptist school at Jackson, Tenn., is wanting to enlarge its borders and is asking for a liberal sum. Vanderbilt University is asking now for two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to erect a memorial hall, eighty-five thousand of which it requests Nashville to give. A member of the Christian Church in Nashville has given to this Vanderbilt fund the sum of one thousand dollars. Sewance is raising an endowment fund of one million dollars. It seems that the friends and supporters of David Lipscomb College should give to it just now fifty thousand dollars, and they will. Nashville ought to raise more than one-half of this.

The school needs money now to begin and to carry on this work. Who will be the first contributor, and the next, and on? Begin now.

Send all donations to Prof. H. Leo Boles, David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn.

Junius Bizzell, Steele, Mo., asks in reference to women's asking or answering questions in the Bible class:

Does the Scripture forbid the women to ask or answer questions in a Bible class of men and women on the Lord's day?

The Bible forbids women's usurping authority over men. It does not authorize their taking the lead and assuming authority over the men. As a reason for this, Paul tells us that man was first formed and then woman. The Bible nowhere forbids a woman's quietly asking or answering a question in a Bible class. She has as much right to do this on the Lord's day as on any other day in the week. Conybeare and Howson, in the "Life and Epistles of Paul," translate 1 Cor. 14: 34 as follows: " In which congregation, as in all the congregations of Christian people, the women must keep silence; for they are not permitted to speak in public, but should show submission, as it is said also in the Book of the Law, and if they wish to ask any question, let them ask it of their own husbands at home, for it is disgraceful for a woman to speak publicly in the congregation." It is the public teaching, the public asking of questions in the whole congregation, that is forbidden. If we hold that silence means absolute silence, then a sister would not be allowed to sigh or sneeze in the congregation. No one should take such an inconsistent position.

J. H. Hines, Hopkinsville, Ky., submits the following for explanation:

In Matt, 12: 29 we have this language: "Or how can one enter into the house of the strong man, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then will he spoil his house." Who is the "strong man?" What are "his goods?" When was he bound? When were his "goods spoiled? Who entered into the house of the "strong man?" When?

The Pharisees accused Jesus of casting out demons by Beelzebub, the prince of demons. Jesus, knowing their thoughts, taught them that a kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation, and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand; so if Satan casts out Satan, he is divided against himself and his kingdom shall not stand. Also, if he cast out demons by Beelzebub, he inquired, "by whom do your sons cast them out?" But, he says, if he cast them out by the Spirit of God, then was the kingdom of God come unto them. He then suggests another illustration, that unless he was stronger than Satan, he could not enter the house in which Satan, the strong man, dwelt, bind him, and take his goods. Evil and evil works are the goods of the devil. When the person who has made himself a fit receptacle for a house in which Satan dwelt accepts the truth of the gospel and is purified in obedience thereto, Satan is bound and his evil works are destroyed. When the man out of whom the evil works are cast dedicates his life to the service of Christ, Christ through his teaching enters the house of the strong man. This is done when the man who has fitted himself for the works of the devil receives the truth and obeys it. The truth is bound by unbelief, "And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief," (Matt. 13; 58.) So the devil is bound by the truth.

What authority have we to take a collection when people meet in the capacity of a Sunday school, or Bible school, on the first day of the week?

Christians should meet as the church and teach the word of God as the church upon the first day of the week. Upon this day Christians are commanded to contribute as God has prospered them, (Read 1 Cor. 16: 1-3.) Just how often the Christian shall contribute upon the first day of the week or how many times the congregation may be dismissed is not revealed in the word of God. People should be more concerned about contributing liberally and as the Lord has prospered them than about how often they contribute.

Wilson Vantrease, Norene, Tenn., inquires concerning the following passage:

Does 1 Cor. 6: 18 mean that every sin that a man does is without the body?

The passage reads: "Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body." The enticements and temptations to sin are from without the body and assail the man through the senses. This is the rule in the case of sin. It is not said of fornication that it is not stimulated from without or that it alone of sins assails the body, but that it is peculiarly a sin against the body, defiles the body, which is designed to be a temple of the Holy Spirit. It separates it from union with Christ and unites it with a harlot. Such a sin is exceedingly sinful in that it desecrates the temple of the Holy Spirit and destroys the usefulness of a body which has become a member of Christ. Sin of every kind has a tendency to destroy life, yet none are so deadly to the body as that of fornication. It strikes immediately at the basis of the constitution. By the just decree of God all these irregular and sinful connections are joined to death. Neither prostitutes, fornicators, nor unclean persons of any description can live out half their days. As the body of Christ is the temple of the Holy Spirit and as the Holy Spirit dwells in the body of Christians, as surely as the living God dwelt in the Mosaic tabernacle and in the temple of Solomon, so it is an awful sin for Christians to defile their bodies by

"If You Have a Friend."

Some time ago a good sister at Hillsboro, Tenn,, sent me a poem, with the following words accompanying it: "The author of this little poem is as unknown to me as you are, personally; but I have endeavored, for many years, to practice the teaching of this poem preserved by me in my school days, and I cannot fully carry out its teaching without trying to let you know something of the good your writings have done me and mine. . . . May your work for Jehovah accomplish as much good in other households as it has in our own." Here is the poem:

If you have a friend worth loving, love him. Yes, and let him know

That you love him, ere life's evening tinge his brow with

Why should good words ne'er be said of a friend-till he

If you hear a song that thrills you, sung by any child of song,

Praise it. Do not let the singer wait deserved praises long.

Why should one who thrills your heart lack the joy you may impart?

If you hear a prayer that moves you by its humble, pleading tone,

Do not let the seeker bow before his God alone. Why should not your brother share the strength of "two or three" in prayer?

If you see the hot tears falling from a brother's weeping eves.

Share them; and by kindly sharing own our kinship in the skies

Why should any one be glad when a brother's heart is

If a silvery laugh goes rippling through the sunshine on his face, hare it. This the wise man's saying-for both grief and Share It. joy a place.

There's health and goodness in the mirth in which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy by a friendly helping hand,

Speak out brave and truly ere the darkness veil Say so.

Should a brother workman dear falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness all enriching as you Z0-

Leave them Trust the Harvest Giver; he will make each seed to grow

So until the happy end, your life shall never lack a friend.

I very much appreciate knowing that my feeble efforts are not In vain. Only a part of the letter is given for the simple reason that it has served its purpose, and I see not the wisdom in publishing what others have to say about my humble efforts to do good.

The poem is scriptural. May the Father help us to grasp every opportunity to speak or write a word of cheer, to lend all a helping hand, to "rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep."

"Jehovah Sees Not As We See."

Under the above heading something was said a few weeks ago, and I now desire to say more. In stating the sins so abominable in Jehovah's sight that he commands the faithful to withdraw fellowship from those who are guilty, we find covetousness among the number. "If any man that is named a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a reviler, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such a one [keep company?-S. H. H.] no, not to eat," (1 Cor. 5: 11.) Paul says "covetousness is idolatry." (Col. 3: 5.) Paul says in Eph. 5: 3 for us not to let "covetousness" even be named among us, as becometh saints." It is certain, therefore, that covetousness is a hateful, abominable thing in the sight of our God.

But where is the congregation that so considers it? 1 mean by this, where is the congregation that is as quick to withdraw fellowship from a member guilty of covetousness as they are for other sins, such as fornication and murder? Is it not a fact that we have in many congregations members who would "raise a rough house," so to speak, if we retained in our membership people known to be guilty of adultery and murder, yet the same members who would be so anxious to have such withdrawn from are steeped with the sin of covetousness and extortion?

It is a very easy matter to know the sin of covetousness. It is so desiring what the other fellow has that you would do him an injustice in order to obtain it. To simply desire what others have is not necessarily covetousness. The trouble comes when you control not this desire.

I have been wondering of late if it is not covetousness that causes members to keep back money they should put into the Lord's treasury. Certainly there is such a thing as "robbing God," else the Book would not say so. (See Mal. 3: 8.) I sometimes see members pledge so much to the Lord's work and afterwards seem to regret it. I wonder if this is not due to covetous practices in their business.

Sin is a most hurtful thing. We need to come to know and see the exceeding sinfulness of all sin, but this we cannot do unless we let God tell us all about sin. There is too much of this habit of looking at things as the world looks at them. It is a fact that the world regards not covetousness as sin. The world makes laws to punish the murderer and to hinder people in fornication and adultery; but there is no law against covetousness, so far as I know. Let us, therefore, stop looking at things as the world does, and see things as God sees them, and let the members who are guilty of covetousness be saved by being dealt with as such, and not continually recognized as saints while guilty of such sins.

The second Lord's day in this month was a very busy day for all our workers. Brethren Klingman and Brooks filled their regular appointments at South Pryor Street, and East Point, respectively. Brother Templeton preached to a full house at West End Avenue in the forenoon and joined East Point in a union service at night. Brethren Garrett and Coggins were with the writer at Macon both morning and evening. Brother X. W. Morgan preached at Constitution. Brother Morgan was a stranger to us until just a few days ago. He had been doing some mission work at Star, N. C., and stopped over on his return to Oklahoma, and we put him to work. We found him a most excellent man; and he not only helped us in the preaching in and around Atlanta the little time he was with us, but helped to start the meeting at Dalton, where the writer is now engaged in a revival, and donned his overalls and worked nearly three days on the West End Avenue house of worship.

Brother John T. Lewis, of Birmingham, is now engaged in a revival at Macon. 'The brethren there are to be congratulated for securing the services of this good man.

Like Peptiron May Be Just What You Need This Spring.

Need This Spring.

Probably nine people out of ten have lost or are losing their grip on health in these trying months of awful epidemics, exposure to damp, changeable weather, and association with sick people in overheated homes. Depleted blood, loss of the red corpuscles, shattered nerves, loss of appetite, dull, dozy feelings in the head irritability, all loudly call for the real tonic strength and nourishment that Peptiron will give you. It is a wonderful corrective of anemic tendency, paleness, languor, nerve exhaustion.

Peptiron restores the red corpuscles to the blood and gives a natural vigor and snap that keeps up courage, makes you cheery and helpful to your family and friends, and contributes wonderfully to the health of all. Remember this one thing—as vitally, positively true—Peptiron is a real iron tonic.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Brush This Through Faded, Streaked Locks and They Secome Dark, Glossy, Youthful.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly com-pounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked, or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sul-phur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about fifty cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair bebeautifully dark, glossy, and comes attractive.

Rheumatism and Indigestion.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between indigestion and rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for dyspepsia and indigestion, relieves rheumatism and the rheumatoid diseases, such as gout, sciatica, neuralgia, and nervous headache. All of these dis-eases are probably related and all are probably due, in whole or in part, to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the perves. and also by eliminating. through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic Indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, if used continuously for a reasonable time, it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, silmulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant, of Savannah, writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians; went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living, when I began to use Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes, of Virginia, writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of rheumatism with this water."

What Doctor Pierce Has Done For Humanity!

BY DOCTOR CRIPPS.

It has always seemed to me that Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., should be placed near the top when a list of America's great benefactors is written. He studied and conquered human diseases to a degree that few realize. Whenever he found a remedy that overcame disease, he at once announced it in the newspapers and told where it could be bought at a small price. He did not follow the usual custom of keeping the ingredients secret, so that the rich only could afford to buy the medicine, but openly printed the name of each root and herb he used. And so to-day the names of Dr. Pierce and his medicines are widely known, and they stand for better health and better citizenship.

One of this great physician's most successful remedies is known as Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. These are little, sugar-coated pills, composed of Mayapple, leaves of aloe, root of jalap-things that Nature grows in the ground. These Pellets are safe because they move the bowels gently, leaving no bad after-effects, as so many pills do. Very often they make a person who takes them feel like a new man or woman, for they cleanse the intestines of hard, decayed and poisonous matter that accumulates when one is costive, If you are constipated, by all means go to your druggist and get some of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They may prove to be the very thing your system requires to make you well and happy.

The Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, case and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a those would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three bundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

Work and Opportunity.

BY B. C. GOODPASTURE,

"So, then, as we have opportunity, let us work that which is good toward all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of the faith." (Gal. 6: 10.)

Paul's admonition is weighty and consistent. Almost thirty years of his great and strenuous life were spent in self-sacrificing service for the salvation of men. He "labored more abundantly than they all," (1 Cor. 15: 10.) His willingness to toil and serve was measured only by the utmost limits of his possessions and his soul. Sald he: "I will most gladly spend and be spent for your souls." (2 Cor. 12: 15.) The ancient Pharisees would "say, and do not" (Matt. 23: 3); but Paul, like Christ, did and taught (Acts 1: 1). That preacher who is not living what he teaches should not be surprised if his sermons do not impress his audience. Such a preacher has, at least, one mark of the old Jerusalem hypocrites. The pharisaical tribe is not yet extinct. He "hath not the Spirit of Christ" and "is none of his." (Rom. 8: 9,) Until such men repent, the church will prosper more without their efforts. Even the world condemns this class of men in religion. Because of them, true men are "evil spoken of." (2 Pet, 2: 2.) Paul left an example for all men, for he lived and taught in the Spirit of Christ.

1. The Time. This commandment must be observed as often as we "have opportunity." These who do good only when they have convenience or a chance for popular display do not fully, If at all, obey this scripture. Those who take advantage of an occasion to do good for the purpose of reflecting public praise upon themselves are playing the exact rôle of the trumpet-sounding hypocrites of old. (Matt. 6: 1-4.) Some people help and give to no profit; for they love the praise of men rather than the cause they serve. They are timeservers; they adore the goddess of public opinion.

This is an exceptional age; the twentieth century is the synonym of religious opportunity. Never were there more widows and orphans than now. The Orient, a Rachel bereft, bemoans the sad fate of her helpless and homeless children who have starved and died. Armenia, Syria, and Poland are now begging at our gates. The eyes of war-torn Europe are looking to us with a hopeful gaze. This is a great day to do good and live a "pure religion." (James 1: 27). What will God do with us in the day of judgment, if it be found that the needy have cried in vain?

The religious outlook is equally ap-

Inactive Kidneys Cause Disease

Godfrey, Forest Grove, Oregon.

Too much work and too little work seem to have about the same effect on persons past middle age. Proper action of the kidneys is necessary to good health. They act as a filter and remove from the blood poisonous waste matter which if permitted to remain in the system leads to many waste matter which it permitted to remain in the system leads to many complications.

Many nervous, tired, run-down men and women suffer from pains in the back and sides, dizzy spells, bladder weakness, sore muscles and stiff joints and fail to realize that rhenmalism, diabetes or even Bright's disease may result.

If you have cause to believe that your kidneys are weak, disordered or inactive you should act immediately. Foley Kidney Pills have been used by young, middle aged and old with complete satisfaction. They act quickly and surely and have given relief in cases of ten years' standing.

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the in-ventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

palling. Too long men have been spending their money "for that which is not bread." (Isa, 55; 2.) Several preachers, judging from what they preach, have forgotten that "man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God!" (Matt. 4: 4.) In the pulpit they have neglected Christ to curse the Kaiser. The primitive gospel has been relegated to the days of the "outgrown past."

Although men have ceased to preach the pure and primitive gospel, it has not yet lost its power to save. (Rom. 1; 16; 1 Cor. 15: 1-4,) The word of God has been forsaken at home and withheld from the regions abroad. We must evangelize the nations. We are standing at the threshold of a new and better era for foreign missions. True missionaries could not be needed much more than now. It was enough to fire the soul of Livingstone to hear Moffat tell of an African hilltop from which could be seen the smoke of a thousand villages where no missionary had ever gone.

H. The Work. Spiritual life and growth cannot continue long without work. As well had a mother expect her child to mature into vigorous young manhood without exercise as for a Christian to expect to grow unto "the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ" (Eph. 4: 13) without work. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling," (Phil. 2: 12.) If Christians would work now as they did at the dawn of the current Reformation, it would not be long until the earth would be "filled with the knowledge of the glory of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea." (Hab. 2: 14.)

There are only two kinds of workthe good and the evil, or the nongood. There is no possibility of an intermediate neutrality. Men must accept or reject the Son of God; they must be either "cold or hot" (Rev. 3: 15) in their love and regard for him. Lukewarmness is not neutrality. To be lukewarm is to be against Christ. "He that is not with me is against me; he that gathereth not with me scattereth." (Matt. 12: 30.)

Under no circumstances does the Bible permit a Christian to do wrong, (1 Thess. 5: 22.) Our Master, who is our example (I Pet. 2; 21), "went about doing good." (Acts 10: 38.) Christians are exhorted to be "prepared unto every good work" (2 Tim. 2: 21), "fruitful in every good work" (Col. 1: 10), and "perfect in every good work" (Heb. 13: 21). Be positively good. Not only "turn away from evil," but also "do good, . . . seek peace, and pursue it," (1 Pet. 3: 11.)

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that gllstens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life; and if not overcome, it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen, and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store, and just try it.

for every man. (Heb. 2; 9.) gospel is not for the select classes and nations alone; but it is for rich and poor, wise and foolish, Jew and Gentlle, allke. (Rom, 1: 14; Gal. 3: 28.) He who makes discriminations or distinctions in respecting persons sins. (James 2: 9.) Christianity sounds every depth and touches every shore of sin-cursed humanity. Our Redeemer "is able to save to the uttermost them that draw near unto God through him." (Heb. 7: 25.)

In respect to Christianity, there are only two classes of men-those "of the household of the falth" and those not "of the household of the faith." Toward both classes we must work "that which is good." "Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you." (Matt. 5: 44.) "Render to no man evil for evil "-" but overcome evil with good." (Rom. 12: 17; 21.) "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?" (John 6: 60.)

We are commanded to do good "especially" toward the people of God. It seems that the principle here enjoined requires us, even in matters of business, to patronize those who are our brethren rather than those who are not.

Opportunities to serve and do good are thundering in our ears from every quarter. If we regard them not, fearful are the consequences they will heap upon us.

A healthy body is good; but a soul in right health-it is the thing beyond all others to be prayed for; the blessedest thing that earth receives of heaven .- Carlyle.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out; to feel clean inside-no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, billous attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism, or gassy, acid stomach—you must bathe on the in-side like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels, drink before breakfast each day a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify, and freshen the entire allmentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel-like you felt before your blood, nerves, and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons-begin this treatment, and, above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening, and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast act on the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels.

The Washington Deed Secure.

BY W. S. LONG.

The members of the church of Christ, as a rule, are not covelous; but they love to give to a worthy undertaking when they have the assurance that what they give will be properly applied and, for all time, will be used to support the principles for which Christ died and which we love.

It will be a source of pleasure to the readers of the Gospel Advocate to know that the building site for the house of worship in Washington, D. C., has been paid for in cash and that a strong deed binds the property for all time for the right purpose. Following is the restrictive clause as it went into the deed that was recorded on April 3: "The funds for the purchase of the land herein described and for the erection of a church building thereon were contributed by the brotherhood of the church of Christ upon the express conditions, and purchase is made of the property in question upon said conditions, which are as follows: That no organ or other musical instruments be used in connection with the worship or be kept on said premises; also that no fair, show, or festivals be held upon or about said premises for entertainment, or for raising money, and that no society other than the church of Christ shall be permitted to use said premises; that the congregation shall in all work and worship use only what is ordained and required in the New Testament; and in the event of the introduction of any of the aforesaid Items, or any others not authorized by the New Testament, the title shall be vested in those members of the congregation who may be opposed to those things, whether in the majority or minority, who shall own and control the property subject to the above conditions."

The location of the building site is ideal and is only a fifteen-minutes' walk from the nation's Capitol, and the same distance from the Grand Union Station. It will be known as the "Massachusetts Avenue church Christ." Many have watched with easer eyes to see the wisdom of the brethren in the selection of the site. Others have held back their help till they could see how the deed would be drawn. Now that this part of the work is well done, brethren, so that there can remain no further doubt in your mind. I feel that you can give heartily and liberally; and, as our Savior said, "good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom." (Luke 6: 38.)

I urged that twenty thousand sisters send one dollar each from the splendid profits they are receiving from their butter and eggs. Only a very small per cent answered this call. We urged that the churches in the States give us one Lord's-day's contribution. Less than five per cent answered the appeal.

Since we have but one national capital and this is the first time the church of Christ has owned property here on which to build, let us erect a house which we may ever look upon or refer to with pride. The church at Florence, Ala., sent a New York draft for one hundred dollars and fifty-six cents and urged that we build a good house if it should cost thirty-five thousand dollars, and this is the wish of many others who have accompanied their desire with a strong donation.

We are asking all the churches in the United States to make a contribution on the first Lord's day in May to assist us in erecting this house of worship. If you will do this, we can have the contractors at work on the house by June. If you cannot give the offering of the first Sunday in May, give It on the second Sunday. If we can have one united effort, there will be no need for a further appeal, because the means will be here like it came when you gave to the Red Cross work. You have bought war stamps and Liberty bonds; now give for a greater work than that, and the harvest will be greater.

Send all donations to T. F. Colvin. Box 51, U Street Station, Washington, D. C.; J. W. Gibson, 2500 Pennsylvania Avenue, S. E.; E. L. Mills, 2002 G Street, N. W.; or to the writer, 1420 Massachusetts Avenue, S. E., Wash-Ington, D. C.

The Sympathy of the Savior.

BY W. HALLIDAY TRICE;

"Jesus wept." This is the smallest verse in the Bible, but it presents one of the finest characteristics of the faultless Friend. The Master sympathized with everybody and everything at all times and under all circumstances. He was "touched with the feeling of our infirmities." He "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." He not only loved his own country and kin, but he loved the entire universe and willingly gave his life for the salvation of the race. Jesus was anxious to see the righteous more righteous and the just more just; but he came to save the lost, even those whom "the outcasts cast out." He died that his enemies might "God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Love for one's family and friends is natural affection; love for one's country is patriotism; but genuine philanthropy is love for man simply because he is a human being.

Christ knew no country, color, class, or creed line. He was a democratic cosmopolitan. He was the typical and ideal Philanthropist. He always did good and harmed no one; still, those he sought to benefit put him to death. Once the motley mob was stoning him, when he said: "Many good works have I showed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me?" Too often we fail to appreciate our benefactors until it is too late. One of the perversities of human nature is that we have to be urged, and sometimes forced, to do what is obviously best for us. However, humanity needs and craves genuine sympathy; and if we would be Christlike, we must sympathize with each other.

On the eastern slope of the mount of Olives nestled the village of Bethany, the home of Martha, Mary, and Lazarus, dear friends of Jesus. The Master had often enjoyed the hospitallty of that home and the companionship of its inmates. He was at Bethabara, some sixty miles away, when the sorrowing sisters sent him the sad message: "Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest [Lazarus] is sick." He tarried two days, and when he arrived Lazarus had been dead four days. In the house with Martha and Mary were a number of friends who had come to show their sympathy with the sisters by weeping with them over their brother's death. As Jesus neared the village some one told Martha that he was coming, and she quietly arose and went to meet him. When Martha saw Jesus, she said to him mournfully: "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

WOMAN WORKS 15 HOURS A DAY

Marvelous Story of Woman's Change from Weakness to Strength by Taking Druggist's Advice.

Women who suffer from any such allments should not fail to try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. housework, then go to a factory and work

And even now I know that, whatsoever thou shalt ask of God, God will give thee." Jesus said: "Thy brother shall rise again." Martha said: "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." Then Jesus said unto her: "I am the resurrection, and the life." Martha went away "and called Mary her sister secretly, saying. The Teacher is here, and calleth thee." Mary " arose quickly, and went unto him. Jews then who were with her in the house, and were consoling her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up quickly and went out, followed her, supposing that she was going unto the tomb to weep there. Mary therefore, when she came where Jesus was, and saw him, fell down at his feet, saying unto him, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died. When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping who came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and was troubled, and said. Where have ye laid him? They say unto him, Lord, come and see. Jesus wept." When the Jews saw this genuine expression of his sympathy, they exclaimed: "Behold, how he loved him!" The mighty Master, who could calm the raging sea and bring the dead to life, was not ashamed to "weep with them that weep." Tears of real sympathy are more eloquent than ten thousand tongues.

Upon another occasion we find him in the midst of a marriage feast. He joined in the festivities of the occasion and thus showed his willingness to "rejoice with them that do rejoice." When the wine had failed, his mother turned to him for assistance, either because she knew his wonder-working power or for the reason that one naturally turns to those in whom confidence is placed when trouble appears. Jesus turned the water into wine and thus relieved the situation and performed his first miracle.

The justice, mercy, and sympathy of the Master are exhibited again when the woman taken in adultery is brought into his presence. To her accusers he said: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." The Pharlsees fled, and to the unfortunate woman he said: "Go thy way; from henceforth sin no more." Many human beings have a double standard of morality, one for men and one for women; but with the Christ there is no respect of persons. Then, too, there are some who have no sympathy for those who fall for a temptation, when that particular temptation does not appeal to them. However, they may have other weaknesses and be overcome by other temptations; but for lack of sympathy they have no patience with the individual who has a fault they do not happen to have. Such persons should take a lesson from the Savior's treatment of this woman.

It was a beautiful sentiment and showed the Master's tender care for his mother when upon the cross he said to her, "Woman, behold, thy son!" and then to the beloved disciple he said, "Behold, thy mother!" Unlike some people of our day, he did not leave his mother uncared for and unprotected, but he requested John to care for her; "and from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home."

Perhaps the greatest exhibition of his love and sympathy is displayed when on the cross he prayed for his murderers. Human nature would want to retaliate, but the divine element in his nature said: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." Truly, "Socrates died like a philosopher, but Jesus Christ died like a God."

Power for Good and Evil.

Into the hands of every individual is given a marvelous power for good or for evil-the silent, unconscious, unseen influence of his life. This is simply the constant radiation of what a man really is, not what he pretends to be Life is a state of constant radiation and absorption; to exist is to radiate; to exist is to be the recipient of radiations.-Selected.

To Stop Falling Hair.

The cause of baldness, hair falling out, loss of luster and color, is found in the roots of the hair Itself. Our hair is but a portion of our body, and, like the other organs, cannot subsist without food. The hair finds its food in the fat layer of skin next to the skull. When this source of food is stopped or impeded, out comes the hair. The dreaded disease, dandruff, is a germ. It collects on the bottom of the hair and eats away its life. The hair sack from which the hair comes is embedded in the layer of under skin. When the scalp is diseased and the hair falls out, often this small hair sack closes. Eventually, as a result of the dandruff germs, baldness comes. The proper method of restoring the hair and stopping the falling out must necessarily be in the destruction of the dandruff germs and in the reopening of the little hair sacks. Furthermore, in order to rejuvenate the scalp and make the growth of new more vigorous, it is necessary that the system be able to furnish an abun-dance of hair food. Many artificial methods have been tried in restoring the hair, which were only surface remedies, and, falling to reach the small hair sacks, were unsuccessful. Re-opening the hair sack allows the new Rehair to grow. Calvacura begins at the root of the trouble, and its use is, therefore, advised. Its mission is to feed the new hair as well as the old and rid the scalp of all dandruff germs By thus cleansing and rejuvenating the entire scalp, a healthy growth of hair is assured. Falling of hair is stopped; new life and color to dead, gray bair is developed, and the bair becomes smooth and velvety. It is not an unpleasant treatment, and takes only a few minutes of time each day for about six week. The Union Laboratory, 214 109th Street, Bing-hamton, N. Y., will send you a liberal sample of Calvacura No. 1, free, to-gether with a booklet, "The Triumph of Science Over Baldness," if you will send your name and address, together with ten cents in silver or postage stamps to help pay the distribution expenses.

CHURCH NEWS

Tennessee.

Rock Island, Route 1, April 7.—The little congregation of disciples worshiping at Bethany, Warren County, nine miles east of McMinnville, on the McMinnville and Spencer road, was set in order in 1912, and has since been struggling against rather strong opposition, but slowly increasing in numbers and devotion until now we number about forty members, most of whom are zealous workers for the Master, attending the Lord's day school and church services on the first day of the week. The eldership sees to it that every young man in the church has something to do, and most of them has sometaing to do, and most of them take a leading part in the worship regularly. We are content with the word. We have a humble home, but it is paid for, and without any public appeal; and we meet for worship every first day of the week and allow nothing to hinder. We are in a good farming section, three miles south from Rowland on the Sparts broads. from Rowland on the Sparta branch of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway.-L. T. Hutcheson.

West Virginia.

Buffalo, April 15 .- Our work in this section is doing very well, considering our lack of means and facilities for work. Our greatest desire is to reach all the people in this and adjacent territory, but we cannot do this without a house of worship. Our circum-stances are such that we cannot build a meetinghouse without outside help; neither can we evangelize this terrineither can we evangelize this terri-tory without the cooperation of our brethren. Therefore, we solicit the help of God's faithful children in this enterprise. We hope for a liberal re-sponse to this brief statement. Please send help on our building fund to F. P. Fonner, treasurer, Buffalo, W. Va., Box Sl. Please do not delay. Brethren F. P. Fonner and G. E. Hypes, evan-gellsts, join me in this,—T. P. Hall (acting elder).

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach Sluggish Liver and Bowels Take Cascarets to-night.

Furred tongue, bad taste, indiges-tion, sallow skin, and miserable headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery-indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A ten-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. ing good for months.

LAXATIVE Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

A Remarkable Influenza Preventative.

Thousands of tests have been made since the outbreak of the influenza The influenza germ is breathed in through the nose or throat, the infection lying chiefly in the nasal and bronchial secretions.

Hawley's Ointment has been found to be most effective in preventing influenza. Many cases have been especially noted where every person in an organization suffered attacks of Influenza, except those who used Hawley's Ointment as a preventative. This ointment kills the influenza germ and keeps the nasal passages thoroughly sterilized. It is also wonderfully effective in treating nasal catarrh, colds, cold sores, coughs, croup, and early stages of pneumonia, and general inflammatory conditions of the membranous surfaces.

Hawley's Ointment is readily absorbed by the mucous membranes. Ointments having only petroleum as a base tend to inflame the air passages when applied, forming a waxy coating which checks the normal function of the membranes. This result is so accentuated with some persons as to prohibit their use. Such persons can use Hawley's Olntment with assur-

Hawley's Ointment is sold in 35-cent and 50-cent tubes, postpaid, by the Vincent Drug Company, Manufacturers, Texarkana, Texas-Ark.

And do you sit so silently, Your hands clasped firmly, tight. And turn your trusting face to Him And ask for heavenly light

"What Ails the World?"

FOUND AT LAST!

A strange and surprising book, flaming with imagery like a moving picture from Adam to Woodrow Wilson, shows the real cause of all sin and sorrow. There is nothing like it in all the world of literature!

The leading character was present when God made Adam, and as a witness of events from then to now he visits a pastor at midnight and re-lates the vivid story that unfolds the mystery of groaning ages, also ex-plains that because of desecration, Sabbath was hid from men when the sun stood still, and found in Sunday after crucifixion Wednesday.

It clears many difficult Scriptuves, reveals the cure of ills that mark the bloody path of nations, and shows our education ideas are about as correct as farming was a hundred years ago; but it sees better things for the coming It sees better things for the coming age. In many places the book goes from house to house among readers cager to know its story. A large, new edition reduces the price to $1.10, if ordered direct from York Bookstore, Box $4G, York, S. C. Unless we know "What Alls the World," we cannot hope to cure it. It is our duty to know—Advt.

Prospects for Abilene Christian College.

RY J. P. SEWELL

Abilene Christian College will open the 1919-26 session as a first-class college. This means that four years of thorough standard college work will be given above the high school. This work will lead to the B.A. degree, and the degree will be worth face value in the educational world. Every requirement of the State Department of Education and the Association of Texas Colleges for an A-plus college will be complied with.

Freshmen who do five college courses, including one course in Education, will be given four-year firstgrade teacher's certificates, and students who receive the Bachelor of Arts degree, having done four courses in Education, will receive permanent certificates.

Each department will be presided over by a man with either a Master's or Doctor's degree, strong natural qualifications, and years of successful teaching experience. Above all, each member of the faculty will be a devoted, faithful Christian; no other kind will be used.

Each student will study the Bible.

The College of Arts and Sciences in the beginning will consist of eight schools-Bible, English, Mathematics, Social Sciences, Education and Philosophy, Ancient Languages, Modern Languages, and Science.

In addition to the College of Arts and Sciences, we will have a complete, thorough seminary, in which work for preachers and others who desire to become efficient church workers will be given. This work will lead to the Bachelor of Theology and Master of Theology degree. It will be as comprehensive and thorough as that given in any of the "divinity" or "theological" schools of the country, and will remove entirely every excuse for preachers and others who desire to become efficient church workers going to the denominational schools for their training.

There will also be a first-class fouryear Academy.

The following Fine Arts Departments will be conducted: Art, Plano, Voice, Violin, and Expression.

There will be a school of Home Economics and a first-class Commercial Department.

In connection with the Education Department there will be a Model Primary; and the sixth and seventh grades will also be taken care of,

The following men will constitute the college faculty: H. E. Speck, A.M., Dean, Mathematics; George A. Klingman, A.M., Ph.D., Bible; William Webb Freeman, A.B., Th.D., Ancient Languages; H. L. Schug, A.M., Modern

Renew Your Health At Nature's Fountain

Without the Expense and Loss of Time Necessary for a Visit to the Spring

THE CRISIS

There comes a time in the life of practically every man and woman when their digestive or eliminative organs, or both, fail to respond to drugs prepared by human skill. In fact drugs seem to do them about a much harm as good for their systems i bel against all drugs. These are the cases which physicians call "stubborn" and "chronic" for the reason that they persist in spite of drug treatment. I do not refer to incurable diseases such as cancer and consumption, but to that larger class of functional disorders which we meet every day, where the organs of digestion and elimination are impaired.

For this class of cases our best physicians and our big city specialists send their wealthy patients to the mineral aprings where, in the great majority of cases they are permanently restored or decidedly benefited. But what about the poor man who has not the money or the busy man or woman who cannot spare the time to spend several weeks or poseibly months at a health resort? Shall circumstances deny them the restoration to health which Nature has provided? Read my answer in the coupon at the bottom of this page.

I have the utmost confidence in the Shivar Mineral Spring Water for to it I owe my Restoration to Health and probably my Life. It has made me tens of thousands of friends in all parts of America and even in foreign countries, whose faces I have never seen. Yet I count them my friends for the Shivar Spring Water has bound them to me by lasting gratitude.

I ask you to read their letters, a few samples of which I publish below for your benefit, and if you find among them any encouragement as to your own health do not hesitate to accept my offer which has no limits or conditions except those shown on the coupon. If you could read the letters that come to me daily, numbering about ten thousand a year, and the vast majority of them similar to those printed below, you would not wonder that I make this offer displaying my absolute confidence in the restorative powers of Shivar Mineral Water.

INDIGESTION

Savannah, Georgia.

I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all list train of horritying phenomens for soveral months. I had lived on milk, not eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of her vous withlity and general debility. To refered ten gallons of your Mineral when pocessary, and in four months galued twenty nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. It prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantifies as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most dufficate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

Edifying as the Need May Be

The Human Mind Demands an Object Lesson.

One of the first things that teachers learn when they begin to teach is that the human mind does not readily grasp abstract truth. Theories without proof or illustration go begging. If we could present the Christian religion as a material thing, so that one's eyes might see it and one's hands could handle it, and one's mind behold its every working, it would commend itself with almost irresistible power; but when we present it as a holy, consecrated life, the product of the gospel, the power of the word working in the hearts of men, we often see that our propositions, though they be God's eternal truth, fail of ready acceptance. The reason is that the human mind demands an object lesson. Teaching, to be effective, must be illustrated.

Paul wrote to the Corinthian church: "Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men." From this we learn that the chief object lesson of the Christian religion must be individual Christians. That religion expressed in theory is powerless to touch the heart, crystallized into character, it is living, burning eloquence. To bring the lesson home to ourselves, if I teach men and women the way of life as it is in Christ Jesus and they ask for proofs of its genuineness, I must point them to the local congregation. If they ask concerning the profit derived from Bible study, I should be able to show them a church that is not only rightly dividing the word, but one that is systematically and faithfully teaching it. If they should ask concerning the meaning of the Lord's Supper, I should be able to show them a body of Christian men and women who get much of their spiritual sustenance from it. If they should ask me that time-worn question, "Does God always answer prayer?" I should be able to call upon the members of my congregation for testimony. If they should ask me to show them some of the best results of the gospel, I should be able to speak of "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, self-control," as manifested in that congregation.

The "You" Is Collective.

It will never do to size up a congregation by referring to one man in it. The preacher, standing by himself, cannot be Paul's living epistle. His "you" is collective and not individual. Almost every day we are told by somebody or other that he "belongs to Doctor So and So's church," with the added information that we "ought to hear him preach." What would you think of the owner of a large orchard, if, being asked to send samples of his fruit, he should send one apple and it had specks on it?

Let us be fair. Let us think and speak like Paul. The Christian religion in our community rests upon you, upon me, upon all of us. The church can never fall in our midst unless her deathblow comes from the inconsistent lives of her professed followers. We must realize the power of a holy Christian character. No argument can take hold like that. It is worth all the logic of centuries, all the studied volumes of theology. If argument has won its thousands, character, the life behind the argument, has won its tens of thousands,

Three little girls stood before a beautiful window on Christmas Eve. The smallest child was behind the other two, and they were describing to her the many toys they saw in the window. Just so, if this blind world shall ever see Christ in his beauty, it must see him through our eyes; and if we who call ourselves Christians are walking by sight and not by faith, how can we show the world anything? "Can the blind lead the blind?"

The disciples of Christ should not overlook the fact that their religion is only one of many. Christianity itself in the broad sense is split up into many fragments, just as many as there are Protestant denominations. There are many systems that claim equal truth with us, challenging men to accept them and to know them by their fruits. The average person says: "If another faith can more satisfactorily solve the problems of my life, can better cleanse my heart from sin, and give me peace, assurance, and joy, then it must take precedence of yours." It behooves the disciples of Christ to show by their lives that neither Mohammedanism, nor Confucianism, nor Hinduism, nor Christian Science, nor New Thought, nor any denomination can possibly bring the joy and peace and salvation that may be found in being a Christian only. There is in this city a very fine, cultured young lady who recently left the disciples and joined the Unitarian Church, much to the dismay of her family and friends. Of course she had no legitimate excuse, but I believe that her action was prompted to some extent by the fact that she saw so little fruit in the lives of those Christians with whom she was surrounded. For the world reads Christians a great deal more than it reads the Bible.

Induced Currents.

If you are interested in electricity, you know something, of course, about the subject of induced currents. You may be conducting a telephone conversation with some brother about a church matter, and you will hear other voices and catch fragments of another conversation. The wires are not crossed, as people commonly believe, but the confusion is caused by induced currents. Two wires are strung near each other. When a strong current is sent over the one, it induces upon the other that hangs near it a reproduction of itself. That is what we mean by an induced current.

Now the same thing is happening every day in our moral experiences. You associate every day with a man who is intensely selfish, and you will have to fight the same temptation in your own life. It is because that strong current of selfishness in another's life is inducing a reproduction in yours. You go with boys and girls who are either dancing or all the time talking about it, and you will likely get the "bug" in your own system. It is simply that current or worldly-mindedness transferred from one life to another. On the other hand, you stand before lives that are pure, Christlike, and holy, and instinctively you have felt the induced current that has called you to better things. I have never made a call upon an aged, God-fearing Christian but what I did not come away the chief beneficiary. There is no life so perfect that it does not feel the induced current when standing before that which is holy, true, and Christlike.

When the apostles set forth to preach, the people "perceived that they had been with Jesus." The likeness in this case was not found in mannerisms, but in character. It is this principle that gives point and emphasis to some of the finest passages in the New Testament. We hear the Savior say: "Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 5: 16.) Peter tells us how husbands may be won to Christ by the behavior of their wives (1 Pet. 3: 1), and Paul urges such a high ideal of goodness "that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of us." (Tit. 2: 8.)

Truth and Personality.

God has ordained that truth and personality must work together. Either one is insipid weakness without the other. In every great reform in the world's history you will notice that the truth in it has never triumphed until it has been lifted in glowing utterances in the life of some one who has been inspired by it. The power of that period known as the reformation was its truth fired in Luther's heart and kindled into flames by the burning words of Knox. Modern slavery met its deathblow when the truth involved leaped into utterance in the glowing personalities of Sumner, Garrison, and Lincoln. Our President is one of the great men of the earth to-day, not because he is President, but because he is the personification of the truth that the world must be made safe for democracy, Just so the Christian religion gets its real utterances in the lives of Christians. Men put off the shoes from their feet before one who is dead in earnest. Evil shrinks and cowers before the eye that flashes truth and the brow that is Illumined by it:

No man can exert a Christian influence who is a Christian in name only. In the rotunda of the Capitol building at Washington there is a picture of angels. When the artist first showed his work, the committee said: "Your form and color are all right, but the faces lack spirituality." Again he painted, and again he was told the same thing. He tried the third time and received the same criticism. Completely discouraged, he went to his studio and wondered why he could not paint so as to satisfy his critics. Finally it dawned upon him that in order to get the spirituality into the faces of his angels he must first have it in his own heart. We are told that he began to lead a new life, and then he finished his work to the satisfaction of all. Surely we have no power in making others spiritual-minded if we ourselves are lacking.

"What I Have Written, I Have Written."

Paul says the epistle is "known and read of all men." That is enough to fill us with a deep and lasting sense of responsibility. But it is more startling still to realize that the epistle is known and read of Almighty God, and when once it is finished it never can be changed. Pilate wrote, "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews;" and he would not change it. Many other things he wrote that he could not change. He wrote his own name on history in Christ's blood. It is indelible. He wrote his own life on Palestine in injustice. It is unalterable. When Queen Elizabeth had put her name to Mary of Scots' death warrant, she trembled for a time, then sent in haste to cancel the order. Too late! The writing could not be undone. What are we writing? Some write: "Life is a jest." Others write: "Man is nothing more than flesh." others write: "Let us eat, drink, and be merry." Go write: "Jesus is my Savior; I will take him at his word and be saved through his blood." Sign your name to that declaration, and in eternity you can say to him: "What I have written, I have written. Let it stand, dear Lord; let it stand." After all, is there anything better than this: for the world to look and perceive that you and I have been with Jesus?

You are writing a gospel,
A chapter each day,
By deeds that you do,
By words that you say.
Men read what you write,
Whether faithless or true.
Say! What is the gospel according to you?

Rational Basis for Theism.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

The sources of evidence supporting this theme are many, but I shall confine my remarks in this paper to only one phase, that of anthropology. Man is a very complex being; he is composed of mind, soul, and body. Each of these parts is very complex in its organization and varied in its function. Man was created in the image of his Creator. He has certain limitations and finite attributes which have no correspondence with his Creator; he also possesses something which identifies him with his Creator. That which identifies him with his Creator may be called the divinity within man. Jehovah has many characteristics which are not found in man. Should we be able to subtract the human elements from man and disregard the divine elements found in Jehovah, but not found in man, then we could more clearly see the perfect correspondence or likeness between God and man,

In the analysis of man, we find that he is a religious being. It matters not what class or grade of the human family we may examine, or at what period of man's existence we make the analysis, he is found to be a religious being. There is found in man a theistic consciousness which is reaching out for something, and is satisfied only when a being that is found worthy of worship is found. The demand of our entire nature-moral, intellectual, asthetic, and emotional-is for its complement, which we call God. In man is found the power of recognition and admiration of the true, the good, and the beautiful. The true, the good, and the beautiful emanate from God; they are qualities of his being, and the divine that is in man responds to them. Thus theism is an implication of all our faculties and has the sanction of our entire being. If not only has the sanction of our entire being, but theism is required to satisfy our entire nature. The elements of our entire nature reach out so naturally after God that man is said to be religious instinctively and intuitively.

The mind of man is one of the common or corresponding parts of man and God; both God and man have minds. Mind can communicate with mind, not with matter. Mind may use matter, changing its form, analyzing its elements, estimating its mass, and measuring its force, but it cannot hold communion with it. Neither can matter communicate with mind. Mind may enter the realm of matter, but matter can never enter the realm of mind. In the communication of mind to mind, language must be used; hence, God has communicated to man through man's language. Man could not, being finite, choose the dialect of angels of God; but God, being infinite, could use the language of man. Mind is conscious; consciousness is an essential mark or characteristic of mind. Through this consciousness of man, God is known. The consciousness of mind determines personality, and personality can be expressed only by spiritual terms. It is through personality that we must interpret other beings like ourselves; also through personality we are able to transcend the material realm and enter the spiritual realm and there recognize the personality of God and hold communion with him. Man's personality is finite, limited by reason of a material body, but God's personality is infinite and perfect. However, mind has no magnitude, but has worth and dignity. The smallest expression of personality is greater in worth than all physical bodies; in fact, mind and matter, being so different in nature, are not comparable.

Man has what is called a "conscience," sometimes designated as "categorical imperative," This determines the ethical man, and an ethical judge or standard implies an ethical universe or realm. Conscience must be obeyed. This is what the ancient precept means, "Reverence thyself." This seems to imply an absolute law which man must obey. But a law implies a lawgiver; hence, we look to God for absolute laws, and to his authority for the enforcement of these laws. The mind of man is conscious of the authority of the Great Lawgiver. This recognition implies freedom on the part of man to obey and emphasizes another likeness between God and man.

Man can see and hear by means of his physical organs. Of course, it is not the eye that sees nor the ear that hears; but the mind, by means of these organs, sees and hears. These powers of man imply that man's Creator can see and hear with infinitely greater perception and accuracy. Surely He who made the eye to see can see, and He who made the ear to hear can hear. The thinking, seeing, hearing, and reasoning done by man are only counterparts of God. The making of an eye implied adjustment and adaptability to physical surroundings; it also implied light by which to see. The creation of an ear implied sound or sound waves by which to hear. All of the physical organisms of man are perfectly adjusted to man's physical environments. There is perfect agreement and correspondence between man as a physical being and his physical surroundings. It is reasonable to expect perfect adaptation and correspondence between spiritual man and his spiritual surroundings. All that is spiritual within man calls for a God. We may reasonably infer from man's spiritual yearning that there is a Being who can satisfy the deepest yearnings and longings of the human soul. This leads us to theism.

The strongest natural desires of the human heart are opposed to annihilation or an eternal absorption into the divine essence. It is a universal, strong desire of man to live forever; to preserve his own personal identity among the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds. Why was the desire to live forever and to preserve our own personality ever implanted in the human soul, if it is not to be gratified? How consonant with man's desires and man's happiness is the assurance found in theism that man was made for immortality! Man's life, its meaning, purpose, and desire, can never be understood if he be regarded as a mere mortal being, with no existence save what begins with birth and ends with death. "The scale on which an immortal being is planned is not commensurate with any measure of mortality." There must be a God to correspond with this great desire of the soul.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Paul invoked the blessings of the Father and the Son upon the church at Philippl as follows: "Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ." (Phil. 1: 2.) This shows his tender love and solicitude for the spiritual welfare of those saints. The blessings for which he prays on behalf of the church are expressed by the words "grace" and "peace," and in order to appreciate this apostolic benediction we must consider the meaning of these words. As two things, grace and peace, are included in the benediction, we will consider them separately.

THE MEANING OF THE WORD "GRACE."

Much confusion and false teaching have grown out of a misconception of the meaning of the word "grace" when applied to something God does for man. This word occurs one hundred and fifty-five times in the New Testament, and when properly viewed it becomes the biggest word in the Bible aside from the names of Deity. It stands at the beginning and the end of nearly all the epistles to the churches. It is an all-comprehensive word when applied to the scheme of redemption, because it relates to an infinite Giver and a helpless recipient. Salvation by grace expresses the divine attitude toward man as guilty and condemned, and also man's compliance with the terms of pardon through and by which he appropriates the blessings of salvation. Scholars tell us that the word "grace" comes from two or three roots in the Hebrew and Greek from which spring a family of words. In the Greek are words and derivations meaning "grace, gift, to give freely, forgive, bestow freely, joy, rejoice, thanksgiving, give thanks, thankful." In English derived from Latin, "grace, gratis, gratitude, grateful, gracious, gratefully, graciously." Notwithstanding this large family of words springing from one or two roots, they all retain the root meaning-viz., "favor." Hence, divine grace simply means the favor of God to man. It is not a negative quantity, but an active principle; not simply feeling, but force. Grace tells of God's heart to feel for us and God's hand to help us. Hence, from "grace" comes "gift"-the gift of Christ to die for man, the gift of every blessing from on high. Grace is simply mercy pitying, wisdom planning, power performing, love providing, and it all culminates in the gospel of God's grace, which is his power unto salvation.

WHAT IS SAVING GRACE?

Since man is said to be saved by grace-"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2: 8)-it is proper to talk about "saving grace," especially so since much is spoken and written on the subject. But it is clearly evident that many who write and speak on "saving grace" have very erroneous ideas relative to Bible teaching on the subject, There are two statements by the apostle Paul that will shed light on this matter. First: "But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." (Acts 20: 24.) Here the gospel is called "the gospel of God's grace; and since the gospel is declared to be God's power unto salvation (Rom. 1: 16), it follows most conclusively that saving grace comes through the gospel. Again: "And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." (Acts 20: 32.) It is here affirmed that "the word of his grace" is able to build one up and bring him to an inheritance in Christ; and with many other scriptures these show that "saving grace" cannot be divorced from the gospel, or the word of God. The salvation associated with the grace of God is said to come "through faith" (Eph. 2: 8); and since faith is inseparably associated with the word of God (Rom. 10: 17), "saving grace" cannot be something that God infuses into the souls of men in a mysterious and incomprehensible way. The person who believes and obeys the gospel of Christ is in possession of saving grace, and there is no other way revealed in all the oracles of God for man to be saved by the grace of God. Men pray and preach as if the grace of God whereby one is saved were a thing taken by the Holy Spirit and carried directly or immediately to the heart of a sinner, resulting in a happy and joyous feeling. Of course, feeling cannot be divorced from "saving grace," but the feeling is the result of faith in the promise of God.

GOD'S PROVIDENTIAL GRACE.

This is most forcefully expressed thus: "For in him we live, and move, and have our being: as certain also of your own poets have said. For we are also his offspring." (Acts 17: 28.) Again: "That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust." (Matt. 5: 45.) Thus it is seen that the very life of man, his food, drink, and raiment, are the gifts of God, and, hence, constitute God's providential grace. The seed, the soil, the rain, the sunshine, and the physical strength that enables man to plant, cultivate, and gather into his barns constitute God's "saving grace" for saint and sinner allke-that is, temporal salvation. But the principle is the same in both temporal and spiritual salvation. God provides the means of salvation in both, and man, in order to receive God's "saving grace," must appropriate these means. The grace of God is infinite, beyond the comprehension of man, in that he should love and care for rebellious man to the extent of perpetuating his life and saving his soul. Hence we are made to exclaim:

> "That thou shouldest love a wretch like me, And be the God thou art, Is darkness to my intellect, But sunshine to my heart."

A Plan for Missionary Work.

BY C. W. SEWELL.

Brother J. G. Malphurs, in the Gospel Advocate of December 12, complains, and that justly, of the inefficiency and lack of business methods in our mission work. In reference to Brother Kurfees' articles on the subject, he says: "I was in hopes that the matter would be taken up by other able brethren and a better plan handed over to the churches." Of course, Brother Malphurs does not want a plan "handed over to the churches" that is not scriptural. But any plan that is scriptural was "handed over to the churches" when the New Testament was written. But is any such plan contained in the New Testament? I maintain that there is, and we are at fault if we do not find it.

The deficiency of our present system of operations is in our manner of raising money. Yet there is a plain, definite, systematic plan "handed over to the churches" in the New Testament. Some thirty years ago or more I put out a little tract setting forth this plan, but no one paid any attention to it. But in ignoring it they did not ignore me, but the New Testament and Paul, who wrote it out. If we are anxious to be New Testament churches and to follow the teachings of the Lord in all things, why not in this? What is the difference in raising money to relieve the wants of missionaries and the wants of poor saints? God has given us a clear-cut systematic plan for the latter, and why will it not do for the former? Paul undertook to raise means to relieve the poor saints at Jerusalem, and he went about it in a businesslike way.

THE PLAN.

The churches of Macedonia, Achaia, and Galatia engaged in this work. "But now I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints. For it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem." (Rom. 15: 25, 26.) "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye." (I Cor. 16: 1.)

As to the time and manner of raising this money, there need be no question, for Paul gives orders to the church of Galatia and that at Corinth thus: "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.) This all can easily do now; but how can we so combine as to form a cooperation of churches in this work? Did not "churches" (plural) cooperate in this work? "For it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem." (Rom. 15: 26.) Here we see the churches of two provinces, Macedonia and Achaia, engaged in the same work, and the churches of

Galatia were ordered to do the same; but whether they did or not, I know not.

Now let us see how this cooperation was worked up. Was it by calling a State or district meeting to generate enthusiasm? We are not so informed. In a quiet way certain brethren were chosen "messengers of the churches" to work up this contribution. We learn that Titus was one of them. "But thanks be to God, which put the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you. indeed he accepted the exhortation; but being more forward, of his own accord he went unto you. And we have sent with him the brother, whose praise is in the gospel throughout all the churches; and not that only, but who also was chosen of the churches to travel with us with this grace. . . And we have sent with them our brother, whom we have oftentimes proved diligent in many things. . . . Whether any do inquire of Titus, he is my partner and fellow helper concerning you: or our brethren be inquired of, they are the messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ." (2 Cor. 8: 16-23.) From this we see that these brethren were "chosen of the churches to travel . . . with this grace" and are called "messengers of the churches." Notice in this that we have "churches" (in the plural) and "messengers" (in the plural). Not one messenger for each church, for it is said of one of these brethren, "who was also chosen of the churches "-more than one church chose the same messenger. Is not this cooperation?

But some one will ask, How was this choosing done? We will look into that in due time. We wish now to look into the work of these messengers. We have seen that Paul says they were chosen "to travel with us with this grace." "This grace" was the work of collecting and disbursing funds for the poor saints. From this quotation it appears that Paul was also chosen for this work. In carrying out this work, how did they act? We see from the above quotation that these messengers, except Paul, had been sent to Corinth, and in 2 Cor. 9: 5 we have the object for which they were sent: "Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your bounty. this way they engendered enthusiasm. How was this contribution conveyed to the poor saints at Jerusalem? This was evidently the work of these messengers, for this was a part of "this grace" for the ministration of which they were chosen. But Corinth has as yet had no hand in the matter-has not chosen any messengers. To them Paul says: "And when I come, whomsoever ye shall approve by your letters, them will I send to bring your liberality unto Jerusalem." From this we see that the church at Corinth had charge of its own contribution and was to choose or "approve by letter" a person to carry it to Jerusalem. Paul and these other brethren, though chosen as messengers of the churches to travel with this grace, claimed no power over the church at Corinth. Corinth must be allowed to choose or approve by letter its own messengers. See in this how Paul recognized the independence of each individual church.

Now we are ready to answer the question, "How were these messengers chosen?" We have found Paul and We have found Paul and certain other brethren chosen of the churches; but Corinth has had nothing to do in this choosing, and Paul gave them liberty to choose or "approve by letters" "whomso-ever" they would. Now, if they shall approve of Paul and these other brethren, they will then be messengers not only of these other churches, but also of Corinth. And this is just what they do, at least, as to Paul. " But I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints. For it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem." (Rom. 15: 25, 26.) Here we find Paul bearto Jerusalem the contributions of Macedonia and Achaia, and Corinth was in Achaia. But Paul is not alone in this, for he tells the Corinthians: "And if it be meet they shall go with me." I go also, He anticipates that they will choose him, but tells them that others shall (See his reasons for this in 2 Cor. 8: 20, 21.) not this scriptural cooperation? Now, if Is not this scriptural cooperation? allow that this system of cooperation be applied to missionary work, I can see how all may work together in harmony. (1) If a church worshiping at A has an evangelist at work in a destitute field, it is the duty and privilege of that church to make weekly contributions on the first day of the week and, like Philippi, send "once and again" unto his necessity. (2) Not being able to fully sustain their evangelist by their own contributions, they (2) Not being able to fully may select one or more brethren as messengers and send them to the church at B to lay the matter before them and "make up their bounty." (3) The church at B, if it agrees to cooperate in this work, may approve of these or other messengers and send them to the church at C. Thus the work may be extended from church to church till a sufficient number has been enlisted in the cooperation to support the evangelist, and there the work should (4) The same or other messengers may be approved to carry the bounty to the evangelist. They, of course, may make use of the mails or any other facilities for forwarding to his necessity. This will be equally available for home or foreign work.

Close to the Cross.

Close to the cross of my Savior I'm drawing, Closer, closer still at the end of the day. Nothing can harm me, I know, keeping ever Close to the cross where he hears when I pray.

Shadows of eventide gather around me, Vanished at last is the sun's golden ray Yet I fear not, for his loving hand guideth Close to the cross where he hears when I pray.

Sweet are the roses and Illies of summer. Sweet is the sunlight filling my way; Sweeter by far is his tenderness leading Close to the cross where he hears when I pray.

Whispering winds through the treetops slip softly, So all the days of our lives pass away. Yet there is peace, whatsoever my trials, Close to the cross where he hears when I pray.

O, when at last I shall cross the dark river. Passing from night into radiant day, Still may I sing to his glory forever, Saved through the cross where he hears when I pray. Grace Imogen Gish.

"Doomed If I Did. and Doomed If I Did Not." BY J. C. MO.

The above is the language of Brother E. L. Jorgenson in commenting on my editorial, "An Inconsistent Denial," which appeared in our issue of April 3.

I publish his letter of April 15, 1919, leaving out only that part which refers to an extract from the writings of David Lipscomb, which has been published. Here is the letter:

J. C. McQuiddy, Nashville, Tenn.—Brother McQuiddy: You had in hand before publishing "An Inconsistent Denial" statements that would have exonerated me completely before your readers, had you printed them, and you know it. I am so sure of this that all I ask is that you publish either those statements or this, my last letter to you on the subject.

The notes from my sermon on foot washing which convinced you (as you admit in your letter of March 27) that I "agree with the Bible teaching "-notes which you ent out of my published letter—or your promised statement that you understand me to "agree with the Bible leaching"—either of these would have been sufficient; and you ought to publish one or the other, especially as you professed to give your readers that part of my letter

"that has any bearing on the subject." Mark that these notes and extracts which convinced you were from the very sermon in the Highland Church that my opponent condemned! Privately you admitted this teaching on foot washing was "Bible teaching," and publicly you created uncertainty and doubt.

2. The one and only point that I made in my vestibule illustration was that "the kingdom of God is larger than the church, but includes the church." But you seem more willing to "convict" me than to look for the agreement. Otherwise you would have seen nothing necessarily culpable in my not trusting "a convenient memory" (as you call it), but waiting to examine my notes before answering your question, nor in my securing testimony from the same quarter that you got yours—"my audience." I think that if I had answered offhand from memory, you would have made me out a falsifier by means of the "testimony" which my adversaries have furnished you. So, to paraphrase slightly, I was "doomed if I did, and doomed if F didn't."

If you will bear in mind that Brother Taylor volunteered the point, as Brother Lipscomb can inform you, that past matters, even if afterwards "settled," could be properly used for purposes of defense, and if you will examine Paul's references to disciplined men (1 Tim. 1: 20; 2 16-18; 4: 14, 15), perhaps you will not think I disobeyed 2 Thess. 3: 15 in my letter of March 12. At any rate, 1 do not wish to wrong him, for I love him sincerely and our estrangement pains me greatly. We did "try to save him" throughout three years of patient forbearance, then by discipline, then by other means. If, instead of defending misconduct, you and others would help to secure such corrections as would cover the points, at least, which so munifistly call for correction, we could succeed, I think, in restoring unity, or at least friendship and cooperation.

Most sincerely yours, in His name, E. L. Jorgenson.

It is encouraging to see that Brother Jorgenson wishes to be exonerated of the teaching with which he is charged concerning foot washing, and also that "baptized believers are not in the kingdom, but only in the vestibule of the kingdom." I am glad that he is ashamed of such teaching, and am urging him to make such a clear disavowal of it that all may know just what he does believe and teach. By a clear and complete disavowal, he, and he alone, can exonerate himself. It is not a matter of surprise that when he gives an illustration in explanation of his teaching that puts a man either in the kingdom or out of the kingdom, owing as one views the illustration, that he finds himself "doomed if he did, and doomed if he didn't."

I have not knowingly misrepresented Brother Jorgenson, and am willing to leave the question of misrepresenting him to our readers. As he states his teaching concerning foot washing to me, I am frank to say that I can see no objection to it and that he states correctly the Bible teaching; but this is not the difficulty in the case. Others charged that he taught differently in a sermon in Louisville, which sermon was delivered in the Highland Church.

I preferred not to discuss the foot-washing question with him; but, as he insists that he be heard on this subject in full, I cheerfully give all that he has written me on the subject, which does not in the least modify the position as already given in the Gospel Advocate of April 3, which I understand to be in harmony with Bible teaching. It does show, however, a difference between his teaching as written to me and the position that he took in a sermon in Louisville, as will be later shown in this article. What Brother Jorgenson claimed to teach on the foot-washing question has already been published, with the exception of the following:

In that very sermen which he attacked, I said, in commenting on the scripture, "Ye also ought to wash one another's feet;" "The example includes all lowly acts. We ought to wash one another's feet -and other lowly acts of love on the same principle. But it is not an ordinance (church ordinance). (1 Tim. 5: 10; compare Acts 20; 7.) The difference between a sick room and a church ordinance. Why is it not a church ordinance? 1 Tim. 5: 10 is the only other mention; private." I believe that Brother C. A. Taylor will not object to Brother Jorgenson's teaching on foot washing as he has stated it to me, but Brother Taylor did object to his teaching on that subject as presented in the sermon above referred to, as is clear from the following letter of April 15, 1919:

Louisville, Ky., April 15, 1919.—Mr. J. C. McQuiddy. Nashville, Tenn.—My Dear Brother McQuiddy: In view of Brother E. L. Jorgenson's vindictive charge that I have "wickedly misrepresented" his teaching on "foot washing," I feel that you should know the following facts, for I have never, in any way, misrepresented Brother Jorgenson or his teaching on "foot washing," or on any other subject; and in the light of what has taken place, publicly, in the Highland Church, I am wondering what even his own partisan followers will think of his claim that he has been presenting on the subject of "foot washing" the same teaching as you and Brother Elam. Brother Jorgenson's claim would be surprising to me had I not long ago become accustomed to his denial of well-known facts when he believes his own personal interests are best served by such a course.

The discussion I had with Brother Jorgenson on the subject of "foot washing" was not in connection with the question of "congregational practices," as he would have you believe, but came about in this way:

While I was a member of the Sunday Bible class taught by Brother Jorgenson, we had for our lesson the thirteenth chapter of John; and when Brother Jorgenson again taught that this chapter teaches not only the principle of humility, but also the act of "foot washing" as a "religious ordinance." I took occasion to say to the class that I was pleased to note, and to call to their attention the fact, that Brother Jorgenson had repeated exactly the teaching on "foot washing" that I had represented him as having taught in a previous sermon devoted especially to this subject. I explained that they now knew I had not misrepresented him, as had been publicly charged by Brother Don Carlos Janes in one of his speeches in support of the Highland Church's retaining Brother Jorgenson.

Brother Jorgenson became exceedingly angry during our very energetic discussion, and I told him in the presence of the entire class of about twenty-five persons that I had no desire to misrepresent him and that I would repeat what he had taught in the sermon already mentioned, and challenged him to deny one single item. I then told him and the class that he had taught that the thirteenth chapter of John teaches not only the principle of humility, but also the act of "foot washing" as a religious ordinance, and that he said in the same sermon that when asked, as he sometimes had been, what the difference is between "foot washing" and the Lord's Supper, he always answered that the only difference is that "one is observed in public and the other is done in private." I challenged him to deny having so taught, and he would not do so. but repeatedly fired at me the question; "Does not the Book say, Wash ye one another's feet?" I argued that when the quotation he persistently fired at me was taken in connection with its context, the entire passage teaches the principle of humility, and does not teach "foot wash-ing" any more than any other act, except when fidelity to the principle of humility makes foot washing the act to be performed. To this he persistently replied: "But does not the Book say, Wash ye one another's feet?"

I do not know what he teaches now, but I do know what

I do not know what he teaches now, but I do know what he taught then, and I am going to suggest that you ask him the following questions, insisting on a yes or no answer:

1. Did you ever discuss with C. A. Taylor, while he was a member of your Lord's-day Bible class, the teaching of the thirteenth chapter of John on the subject of "foot washing?"

2. Did you and C. A. Taylor agree?

3. Did C. A. Taylor ever contend for "foot washing" as a religious act?

4. If you and C. A. Taylor differed as to the teaching of John 13, about what did you differ?

5. Did you ever teach that the only difference between "foot washing" as a religious ordinance and the Lord's Supper is that one is done in private and the other is observed in public?

Did you ever teach that the thirteenth chapter of John teaches not only the principle of humility, but also the act of "foot washing" as a religious ordinance.

If Brother Jorgenson will candidly answer these questions, I think you will fully understand whether or not he has been "wickedly misrepresented."

As I now recall, I have never met Brother C. A. Taylor. Those who know him tell me that he is a Christian and a gentieman. I knew well his father, G. G. Taylor, and knew him as "a prince among men." I know of no misconduct in C. A. Taylor to defend; but I do see misconduct in Brother Jorgenson and am earnestly pleading with him: "Physician, heal thyself." He is discouragingly lacking in sincerity. In one sentence he says of C. A. Taylor, "I love him sincerely;" and in another, that he has turned him over to Satan, and is, therefore, justified in persecuting him, and that in so doing he is not disregarding the injunction to "admonish him as a brother." As fairness and justice demand it, I insist that he answer the foregoing questions

I cannot accept Brother Jorgenson's teaching as stated by Brother Taylor as in harmony with the Bible. If Brother Jorgenson believes now and teaches as he stated in his letter to me, I suggest to him that he disavow publicly the teaching as represented by Brother Taylor and give assurance that he will teach the Bible so clearly on this subject in the future as not to give any occasion for any one justly having such an understanding. I am sure that Brother Taylor would prefer that Brother Jorgenson teach the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, and that he will have no objection to his correcting any mistakes that were made in the sermon.

There are other living witnesses who heard Brother Jorgenson teach as Brother Taylor charges and who state that Brother Taylor was calm and quiet, while Brother Jorgenson became very angry, for which he afterwards apologized. If Brother Jorgenson does not stand for the teaching as stated by Brother Taylor, he should disavow it and say he made a mistake in so teaching, and that he correctly presents the Bible teaching on foot washing in his letter to me.

Color-Blind As to Dealing in Futures.

BY E. A. E.

A good brother whose home is in a State adjoining Tennessee asks: (1) What is the wrong in dealing in futures, and (2) what is the difference between dealing in futures and raising and dealing in live stock?

We shall have to refer again to the illustration of being color-blind and to the scripture which says:

Of whom [Christ and his priesthood] we have many things to say, and hard of interpretation, seeing ye are dull of hearing. For when by reason of the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need again that some one teach you the rudiments of the first principles of the oracles of God: and are become such as have need of milk, and not of solid food. For every one that partaketh of milk is without experience of the word of righteousness; for he is a babe. But solid food is for full-grown men, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern good and evil. (Heb. 5: 11-14.)

A color-blind engineer who cannot tell the difference between a danger signal and one to go forward will dash his train into the ditch or the river, and himself and his passengers into death. Teachers in the church and others who are "without experience in the word of righteousness" and "who by reason of use" have not their senses exercised to discern the wrong in dealing in futures and the difference between that and raising and dealing in live stock are babes in Christ still, needing milk only, and are color-blind to God's danger signals and to some of his plain commandments.

The scripture just quoted states that some do not understand the will of God because they do not study it; because they "are dull of hearing," or slow through lack of application to learn the truth and sluggish in practicing what little of it they already know; instead of being alive to their responsibilities to teach and to save others, they must be taught again the very beginning of the oracles of God, must still be fed on baby food; the tenderest care must be exercised to preserve their spiritual life; they have no experience in the exercise of righteousness, in keeping a conscience void of offense toward God and men, and have made no growth and development in the Christian life; and, for these reasons, their hearts are darkened, their minds are blinded by the god of this world, they feel no responsibility for their bad influence, and they are really unable to discern the difference between good and evil.

This is a fearful state, an alarming condition; but those who are in this sad state, like the Laodiceans, do not realize it. On the other hand, they think they are knowing ones, congratulate themselves on having business sense, on being rich, on being broad and liberal in their views, and on having need of nothing; when before God and in the light of the Bible they are wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked. (Rev. 3: 14-22.)

Dealing in futures is a violation of the will of God and Is wrong, therefore, because:

1. Christians, having the spirit and mind of Christ, are determined to engage in nothing even of questionable propriety; to "abstain from every form of evil" (1 Thess. 5: 22); to keep "unspotted from the world" (James 1: 27); to set in all ways a good example; and, as epistles read and known of all men, to be read always on the safe and bright side of all questions (2 Cor. 3: 2, 3).

2. God condemns the love of money as a root of all kinds of evil," reaching after which some "have been led astray from the faith, and have pierced themselves through with many sorrows," and commends and enjoins godliness with contentment as great gain. (1 Tim. 6: 3-10.) Dealing in futures springs from both the lack of contentment and from the love of money. Jesus warns his disciples for all time against "the deceitfulness of riches," which choke the word of God out of the heart. (Matt. 13: 22.) When a man is deceived, he is misled or blinded and thinks that which leads to evil is good and that which God condemns is right. Again, "a snare" is a deception by which unsuspecting birds and other animals are entrapped; figuratively, it is any device or trick or allurement to deceive and lead people into temptation, sin, and death. Study the following:

But they that are minded [have the inclination or purpose] to be rich fall into a temptation and a snare and many foolish and hurtful lusts, such as drown men in destruction and perdition. (1 Tim. 6: 9.)

A man who deals in futures is "minded to be rich;" if not, he would not so deal. All men can make an honest living in the eyes of the world and in the sight of God by engaging in nothing doubtful, can have all the comforts and blessings of life, "be rich in good works," "rich in faith," and with clean hands and pure hearts be saved in heaven.

3. God's command is to "take thought for things honorable in the sight of all men" (Rom. 12: 17); and Paul says he took "thought for things honorable, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men" (2 Cor. 8: 20, 21). In handling the funds of the churches he was honest, not only in the sight of the Lord, but he handled these funds in the open and businesslike way that all men admit is honest, clean, and above suspicion. This is mentioned here to show that Christians in money matters must guard their influence upon the world as well as to deal honestly before God—must give the world no ground for questioning their methods.

4. It is God's immutable law that in the sweat of man's face shall he eat bread. God has ordained that man shall work for a living—shall use his abilities of mind and body in obtaining a livelihood, and in this way help and bless others. There is really no work in dealing in futures, in commanding man to work for a living, God condemns getting something from others for nothing. The Bible teems with teaching against getting something for nothing.

Let him that stole steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have to give to him that hath need. (Eph. 4: 28.)

"The thing that is good" means an occupation or profession which will bring good to others as well as make a living for the workers. No man, whether saint or sinner, has any sort of right to work at anything which will resuit continually in injury only to all others, while it may increase his own finances. God forbids that men as mere animals should prey upon one another. All must consider the welfare and general good of others, "Let no man seek his own [good only], but each his neighbor's good." (1 Cor. 10: 24.) Again, God teaches that no man lives unto himself and that one must render to all their dues. There are hundreds of professions and occupations at which people can work and both make an abundant living for themselves and families and bless mankind. The man who deals in futures benefits no one. All the money he gains, some other man loses.

Gambling in every form is not only unchristian, but is unpatriotic. The gambler does not seek his neighbor's good, the good of his country, or the honor and glory of God. He is seeking something for absolutely nothing. One principle of common honesty is to give true value for that which one receives.

The man who can see no difference between raising and handling live stock and dealing in futures is not only color-blind, but was born blind. The one who raises live stock and the grass and hay and grain and does the work necessary to develop them and prepare them for market does a most valuable work-"that which is good "-without which the world would starve to death. The man who handles live stock, from the country trader to Armour. makes an honest living in an honest occupation and helps to feed the world. The man who gives his time to buying the chickens, hogs, sheep, lambs, cattle, mules, grain, and all other products of the country and transports them to market renders a great service to the producers and to the consumers, works hard at something real and something useful, and should have a legitimate profit. dealer in futures produces nothing, gets nothing when he buys, delivers nothing when he sells, does nothing to feed and clothe and help others; but is a leech, lurking in bucket shops to suck the blood of others.

I carried in my pocket for several weeks a clipping from the Louisville Courier-Journal giving a decision of a court in Kentucky that dealing in futures is gambling, but I have lost it.

In Behalf of David Lipscomb College.

The Board of Trustees of David Lipscomb College earnestly desire and request your presence at a meeting of the friends and patrons of the college to be held in Nashville, Wednesday, May 14, during commencement week. The purpose of the meeting will be to create enthusiastic and sympathetic interest in the campaign to raise funds for a new girls' dormitory and other much-needed improvements. This meeting, we trust, will be attended by hundreds of the friends of the college from various parts of the country. You will renew old acquaintances, meet many Christians, and get in closer touch with the work of the college.

We are sending out a prospectus of our campaign, and we ask that you give it a careful reading and take the matter up with those in your congregation and community who should be interested. In that way you will be prepared to speak their sentiment when you come to Nashville. The meeting will begin at 10 A.M., and some of the best speakers available will be on the program. Dinner will be served on the grounds.

So far as practical the Christians in Nashville desire to entertain all visitors, and for their convenience we kindly request that you notify us as early as possible. We shall be greatly disappointed if we do not receive a favorable response.

From A. N. Kennedy, Scranton, Ark., April 22: "I preached on Sunday at Hobart to a large and appreciative audience. On the second Lord's day I preached at Blaine to a small audience. I can still be had for meetings in June or July; also have time for a meeting in May. Address me at Scranton, Ark."

From R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., April 23: "The meeting at Tracy City, continued from the preachers' meeting, closed with twenty-one baptized, five from other churches who had been immersed, and several restorations. G. C. Brewer, of Winchester, did the preaching; the writer did the personal work and the baptizing."

From Wilbur H. White, Temple, Texas, April 21: "I have changed my address from Thornton to Temple. I took up work with the Temple church on the first Sunday in April. There were sixty in prayer meeting the first night. The work is two Sundays old, with fifteen additions; seven baptized at the service last night. I am in a good meeting with home forces. Pray for us."

From J. P. Kimbrell, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, April 23: "After preaching six times at Carman, I came to Winnipeg to spend a week with the church here before going to Saskatchewan. My stay in Carman was pleasant in the extreme. I am also enjoying very much the time spent here. I am comfortably situated in the home of Brother and Sister A. H. Beamish. Western Canada is a great field, ripe unto harvest, and offers great opportunity. More workers are needed."

From H. D. Jeffcoat, Ackerman, Miss., April 20: "I am glad to do what I can to get your paper in the homes of the people. I find it an easy thing to get the readers of the Gospel Advocate to work. Let every reader do his best to send in at least one new subscriber. I preach at Reform on the second Lord's day in each month, and at Shady Grove on the fourth Lord's day. Last Lord's day was a good day with us at Reform. They are getting ready to build a house. We need your prayers."

R. A. Craig writes: "I was at Van Buren and Russell Schoolhouse on Sunday, April 20. Attendance was good at both places. We will make an effort to build a new house at Russell Schoolhouse this year. The people are very anxious for the building, and I believe that the money will be raised without any trouble. The work at Van Buren is reaching higher ground, and I feel that our meeting there will be a success this year. Old Fairmount and New Fairmount are pulling together. The Cedar Springs brethren are wide awake, the King's Hall brethren are planning big things, and I am very busy."

From Jesse P. Sewell, Abilene, Texas: "In a recent article of mine about Abilene Christian College, in a statement about our special Bible work, there is this sentence: 'This work leads to the B.Th. and M.Th. degrees.' To this should be added: 'But we will not give these degrees.' What I mean by this is that our work will be as comprehensive and scholarly as that of the various 'divinity' schools in which they confer these degrees. We will confer no degrees for this special work. Diplomas and certificates will be given showing the work done and the grades made. If for any reason the student should desire to transfer the work to one of these schools, it will be fully credited."

The following statement in regard to the proposed Northcut monument is submitted by R. E. L. Taylor, of Decherd, Tenn.: "Contributions have been received as follows: From West Riverside congregation, $11.70; Soddy, $6; Northcut's Cove, $12: Dunlap, $10; Petersburg, $27; Flat Cheek, $12.50; Thompson's Creek, $5; Whitwell, $20; Joe Johnston (individual), $5; Byers' Chapel, $10; Summerfield, $10; Price Billingsley, $10; Sewanee congregation, $25. Total, $164.20. Any one wishing to contribute to this fund will please send all contributions to Sister Northcut, at Tracy City, Tenn., and she will send receipt for same, as I shall be away the balance of this year. I have received less than half enough to pay for this monument. I feel like it has been overlooked by many of our brethren."

An appreciation from Brother Jelley: "I deeply appreciate the words of sympathy in the Gospel Advocate of January 30, as well as Brother McQuiddy's personal letter of condolence. Brother McQuiddy is right. God is the only source of comfort in such afflictions. I had thought to write an oblituary for wife, but feel unable to do so Suffice it to say that Mrs. Jelley, although disinclined to come out to India in 1911, was, nevertheless, a most devoted missionary to the women of India. She was a woman of faith and prayer, and I am proud to have been permitted to be the husband of such a woman, now an angel. I hereby acknowledge receipt of Brother McQuiddy's check for two hundred and twenty-two dollars, and have previously acknowledged the money wired to me on two occasions."

From E. W. Sewell, Thornton, Wash.: "I am coming back into Tennessee in the near future to evangelize. As the days come and go and events in the religious world transpire, I am more and more thankful that I learned the truth from the teachings of our faithful brethren. One can stand aloof from the religious doings just a little while for prayer and meditation and see the beautiful contrast between the 'Christian Church' and the church of Christ. The former drifts, as the years go by, further into Romanism, and, self-inflated by the popular applause, becomes drunken with her observation of days and seasons and ungodly excuses. The 'Christian Churches' at Spokane and Portland observed 'Holy Week' and ended with the celebration of Easter. Otherwise, how beautiful to realize, though we are far away and cannot meet with our faithful brethren, that they are still loyal to primitive Christianity and hold forth its simplicity as preached by the apostles!"

From J. H. Lawson, San Antonio, Texas, April 22: "I am now in Camp Travis, San Antonio, helping the young men of the army in every way I can, and shall be with them until July 1, at which time I am to begin my protracted-meeting work. There are thousands of young men here, and many of them in the hospitals. This is one of the largest demobilization camps of the country and one of the largest hospitals. There is a great opportunity for service, and I shall do my best. D. Bills and Harvey Scott live here and work with the two congregations of the city, and have rendered a splendid service to the young men. They will stand by me and help, and together we hope to accomplish much for the young men. The two churches will help push the work, and I am glad to be able to report that the two churches of San Antonio are live bodies assisted by live preachers. I would be glad to hear from those who have relatives or friends here, that I may visit them and cheer them along the pathway of life. Address me, care Army Y. M. C. A., Camp Travis, San Antonio. Texas."

Query Department

By J. C. McQUIDDY

A. P. Doggett makes this request:

Please explain James 1: 15: "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."

The passage reads: "Then the lust, when it hath conceived, beareth sin: and the sin, when it is full grown, bringeth forth death." Sin is described as being conceived in the heart and coming forth in a birth. The sinful desire is the conception: the wicked deed, the birth; moral and eternal death, the final result. Every wicked desire that completes itself in a wicked deed, if persisted in to completion, leads to both moral and eternal death.

A disciple sends in the following statement, which reveals a queer situation:

We have a man here from whom the church has withdrawn. He has been notified, but he continues to take an active part in the Bible class and church worship. For a few times he refused the emblems, but he now takes them regularly. There is no doubt that he is an offense to some good members. Now, can the church act further on this matter, since they have withdrawn from him?

The above is surely a peculiar case, if correctly represented. The offender should be encouraged to know and love the truth. There should be no objection to the greatest sinner's studying the Bible in the Bible class or anywhere else. Everybody should be encouraged to study the Bible. The church should not associate with the offender in any way that fellowships him as a Christian. Those who pass the emblems to the members should not hand them to him. Members in handing from one to another on the same seat should not hand to him. When he sees from such action that he is disfellowshiped by the whole church, he will either repent and confess his sin or desist from such an ungodly course.

A brother sends in some practical questions which are here given due consideration:

Is it scriptural for the church to own and control a college or an orphans' home, since both are organizations separate from, or in addition to, the church? If such are to do the work of the church, what would be the difference between such and a missionary society?

The Scripture does not warrant a church, as such, in owning or controlling property aside from the house in which it meets. God has ordained the church for the conversion of the world, and has not ordained that it shall, as such, teach school or own orphans' homes. However, individual Christians as trustees have a right to charter orphans' homes and colleges and as individual Christians look after the interest of orphans' homes and colleges. That there is a necessity for schools wherein the Bible is taught and made a part of the daily curriculum will not be denied. In many schools the Bible is not taught at all, and in some schools it is even forbidden that it be taught. Christians are commanded to bring their children up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." The growth and stability of every religious movement has been, and is, dependent upon its teaching. Hence, Jehovah commanded every priest to teach "Jacob thine ordinances, and Israel thy law:" and every Jewish parent was commanded to teach the word of the Lord diligently, and to talk of it when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." Every synagogue was a school in which the law was taught. Jesus was the greatest Teacher of all the ages. When the divine philanthropy had accomplished its work and all things were in readiness, he commanded the twelve: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations." Hence, it is clear that it is the duty of individual Christians to use every scriptural means possible in order to teach their children and to feed, educate, and clothe orphan children.

Is it scriptural to have a Sunday school, with officers and a separate collection, which is an organization other than the church, doing the teaching of the church?

The Scriptures do not authorize a Sunday school separate and distinct from the church of God. It does make it the duty of every Christian to teach the word of God according to his ability. Teaching the word of God is service to God and belongs to the worship the same as does prayer, singing, and breaking of bread. The elders of the church should take the oversight of the teaching just the same as they do the prayers, the breaking of bread, or any other part of the worship. The Bible does not tell us how many collections we are to take up on the first day of the week, but tells us to contribute as God has prospered us upon the first day of the week. The collection taken upon that day should all be placed in the treasury of the church.

How can the church teach the word every day, care for the orphans, or teach on Sunday, orderly, without some kind of an organization other than the church officers or as a church organization as revealed in the Scriptures?

Individual Christians who compose the church have individual duties and obligations that they must meet every day and which cannot be met in the public assembly of the saints. Christians should teach from house to house, and should teach the word of God whenever an opportunity presents itself. It is made the duty of Christians to care for orphans, and to fail to do so is to fall at the peril of their souls. The elders have the same scriptural right to designate those best fitted to teach and to take the oversight of the teaching on the Lord's day that they have to call on certain Christians to serve at the table, to hand around the emblems, etc. Most people call this orderly selection of those best fitted for the work of teaching "a Sunday school;" but I see no reason why it should be considered a separate organization from the church, for it is not.

Is it unscriptural for a woman to write an article on a Bible lesson or any scriptural theme and have a man read it before the church, the woman neither being named in public nor placed before the assembly? Is she disobeying 1 Cor. 1: 34, 35 and 1 Tim. 2: 11, 12 in so doing? If what she writes cannot be read before the public, then would it not follow that what she said could not be? If either is true, could any public speaker use anything taught by a woman? Could Apollos have used what Priscilla taught him, if such be the case? Is it not the public appearance as such a teacher that Paul condemns? Does it place a woman as usurping authority, or as a public teacher, for a man to read or speak what she has written or said? Is not a woman permitted to teach any way that a man is, except in public?

The querist has already answered this question very satisfactorily. The Bible nowhere forbids woman to teach. It makes it her duty to teach at home in a quiet way. It only forbids a woman to teach publicly in a way that usurps authority over the man. Is a woman who has ability to be forbidden to use that ability to bless the world just because some man is an ignoramus? Shame on those who try to close all avenues of usefulness to a woman. I would feel no more hesitancy in reading a strong scriptural document from a woman to an audience than I would in reading one written by a man.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

The Helpless Wanderer.

And "belpless wanderers" we must be, if we do not come to see that the truth was spoken when Jeremiah declared: "O Jehovah, I know that the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." (Jer, 10; 23.) No lesson do we need more to learn than man's continued need of Jehovah as his guide. He has promised to be our guide even unto death, and most certainly we need him all the way. (Ps. 48: 14.) How Jehovah guides his people is plainly stated: "Thou wilt guide me with thy counsel, and afterwards receive me to giory." (Ps. 73: 24.) "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and light unto my path." (Ps. 119: 105.)

We need, therefore, to bury ourselves in Jehovah's truth, to study it continually so long as we live on the earth, that we may ever know how to walk, how to act, how to judge, under any and all circumstances. It is never safe to leave questions pertaining to the welfare of the soul to human judgment; we must go to God's eternal truth for the answer to all such questions. It is never safe to leave the welfare of local congregations to human judgment; we must ever, if the congregation is to be what God would have it be, have elders, leaders, who study the Bible daily. who depend on its teaching to make them such leaders as will have the congregation developed continually in every good work, and such leaders as to make the congregation proof against devouring wolves who come in sheep's clothing. My heart grows sick sometimes when I see the criminal carelessness of some who claim to be elders, preachers. and teachers. They may be good farmers, good carpenters. etc., but they seem to have little care for the welfare of the church of the living God.

The question has often been raised why it is so exceedingly difficult to appoint in the different congregations an efficient eldership. The answer is easy. It is not because the qualifications of an elder are hard to obtain. It is not because the duty of elders is not easy to be seen. There is but one cause-viz., finding men who are absolutely converted; men who make the kingdom of heaven first, at all times and on all occasions: men who love the church better than they love their own families; men who are ever wide awake and guard the interest of the church just as the trustees of a bank guard its interest. If such elders existed in every congregation, it would mean more to the cause of Christ than any other one thing that we could have. It would mean more than a multiplicity of preachers, unless they were above the present-day preacher, as a rule. Too many preachers care too little about the good of the cause of Christ; with them it is more a place to preach, sleep, and eat, than it is to declare the whole counsel of God on every subject upon which our King has spoken. Please do not understand me to say that we do not have many, many good preachers, men who would die for the cause of Christ, if need be; but I do say that we do not have enough such preachers and too many who do not really love the cause of Christ. The latter cannot be expected to strengthen congregations, develop efficient elders, and start new congregations as they should be started. 0 0 0

Human Judgment Will Come In.

By this heading I do not mean that it should come in and that there are not places where human judgment is left right where God wants it to be exercised and our Father's voice ever recognized on all questions upon which he has spoken, but that, as a rule, human judgment is allowed to creep in where its voice should be hushed; and when it does come in, it always does more or less harm. Never can it be shown that man's ways on things upon which God has spoken could, in any age of the world, have brought about better results than complying with Jehovah's directions.

Something has been said, recently, on this page, about Jehovah's seeing "not as man seeth." This we should ever remember, and it is well that it is so; for if God and man ever saw alike, how could it be determined whether man was following God or himself? The things upon which our Father has spoken that we do see as he sees are not the things that test our loyalty to him; the things that test our loyalty to him are the things he has said that we cannot accept and obey without turning our own feelings. desires, and judgment down. When God speaks, this should end the matter with us, and, live or die, sink or swim, we should do what he says and leave consequences in his hands. And who will say that success will fail us if this we do? Who will say that some other course would be better for us to take? The way from earth to heaven is a simple thing. It is summed up in the brief statement; Hear and do what Christ says. (See Matt. 7: 24-27.) What is easier than knowing what he says? Just hearing and doing the things that he says that suits us and leaving the rest unheard is equivalent to not hearing him at all. If the church of Christ lives up to her creed, her profession, she must hear Christ "in all things whatsoever he says" unto us. (See Acts 3: 22, 23.) Let us hear Christ, then, on the sin of covetousness, as well as adultery, murder, drunkenness, and fornication. The poor drunkard, I am quite sure, has often been withdrawn from by elders who were steeped in covetousness, just because "covetousness" by man is not seen as God sees it. Factions and party makers are encouraged by people who would not think of telerating drunkenness and fernication. simply because they do not look so dirty from a human point of view. In some things we must let Jenovah lead us all the way, because, if left with self, we simply will not go that way. This test of our loyalty is placed at the very door of the church, and you cannot enter it unless you submit to it: hence, we find baptism the last act that puts a man into salvation, into the church. Many take sprinkling instead, simply because they think it will do as well; hence, they let human judgment in where it should ever be shut out. Where is the person who cannot see just what baptism is, if he wants to see it? Where is the person who will hesitate to be baptized or take some substitute for baptism, if he or she, as the case may be, is whole-heartedly seeking just what Christ says, is letting him have his own way with them?

How sorely is the need of man's falling-yes, all those who claim to be Christians-at the feet of Jesus and letting him teach and guide them! Indeed, there is "a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of Jehovah." (Amos 8: 11.) This prophecy was fulfilled when Christ came in the flesh to the Jews. Remember, it is not a famine of God's word, but a famine of "hearing the words of Jehovah." The word was there to be heard, but they heard it not. Is it not true that the word is with us to-day, but a famine of hearing the word is among us? May every faithful child of God pray for this famine to be driven out of the land, so far as the church is concerned, and that the heart and ear of every disciple may be open to all our Lord has spoken. 0 0 0

Religious Education.

BY W. W. FREEMAN.

Education is often defined as a kind of development. At best, it would be such a harmonious development of the powers of an individual as best fits him for his proper tasks in life. We see, then, that Christian idealism is the principle by which educational values must be measured among Christian people. With the above conception of education, we are compelled to declare many spheres of school life and curricula to be uneducative or perversions in education.

Since thoroughgoing Christianity defines education in terms of religious idealism, it is not easy to distinguish "religious" education from general education. Though all true education includes Christian elements, there are certain courses of study that in their objective content and in their subjective Influence are preëminently religious. But just as religion is not a sphere in life to be isolated from our general activities, so religious education considers objects, truths, relations, and ideals as they have ministered and may minister to the development of Christian character, social development, and divine blessing.

Only extremists question the finality of the Christian religion. Its universal democracy and divine inspiration allow and require such growth as the developing world order needs. seems impracticable only in that It is beyond all human hopes of attainment, but this feature is the inspiring and redeeming factor that marks it as both divine and eternal. Thus religious education becomes to us a study of Christianity in its origin, content, history, and present usefulness. It is not altogether objective; for, so considered, it may lead as well to selfishness, vanity, and skepticism as to spiritual improvement. The reaction and development of the individual in his proper sphere in life must be noticed as they are related to this objective study in Christianity. Deeds test creeds in an important respect; and though facts of the first century are not changed because of changes in men and in their mental concepts, the value of truths and ideals is limited by the extent to which they may be appreciated and applied by the learner. The product of schooling is thus made up of teacher, lesson, and learner. No one of these may safely be neglected. It is, we believe, no accident that primitive Christianity holds up a divine ideal for each of these.

A WORD ABOUT THE KIDNEYS

BY DOCTOR WATSON.

People are easily frightened wher they think something is the matter with their lungs or heart, and well they may be; but few people understand the dangers of diseased kidneys. These organs have a duty of vital importance to perform, and if they are diseased. there is no telling how or where the symptoms may appear. The kidneys are filters, and when they are healthy they remove the poisons from the blood and purify it. When the kidneys are diseased, the poisons are spread everywhere, and one of these poisons is uric acid. The uric acid is carried all through the system and deposited in various places, in the form of urate salts-in the feet, ankles, wrists and back - often forming bags under the eyes. Sometimes the resulting trouble is called rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica and backache. Finally, come stone in the bladder, diabetes and Bright's disease.

Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., in recent years, discovered that a certain combination of remedies would dissolve uric acid (urate salts) in the system. He found this combination to be harmless, so that he made it up in tablets, of double strength, and called them Anuric Tablets. They dissolve uric acid in the human system as hot coffee dissolves sugar. If you have uric acid troubles, don't delay in taking Anuric Tablets, which can be secured in the drug stores. You can write Dr. Pierce, too, and he will tell you what to eat and how to live so that more uric acid will not form in your system. Dr. Pierce will not charge for this advice.

A Vision of Christ.

A vision of the Christ each day I see upon my pilgrim way; And if from right I turn aside, My heart still sees the Crucified.

For when I sin, that wondrous Face My fault reproaches by its grace; So Love restores my soul again, And calms the sinner's grief and pain.

When flowers on my pathway grow, My life with happiness aglow. Or when the heavy cross I bear, Still shines on me the Vision fair,

Upon the battle field, I hear, The Vision often doth appear; The wounded, dying, see its light, And those who hasten on to fight.

The Vision fair I see in dreams, And radiance on my pathway gleams; So ever on my pilgrim way I see its beauty, night and day. -Martha A. Kidder.

Was Solomon the Man?

BY J. J. VANHOUTEN.

Solomon is the only man named in the Bible to which the number 666 is in any way connected. Germany's surrender broke into the speculative theories of many sermons about the beast whose number was the number of a man, and that man's number was 666. It appears like John requested that the man who would count this number should understand it. I do not claim to be wise above what is written, and therefore have no speculative sermons showing what the Almighty is going to do and how he will do his work, for Paul says his ways are "past finding out." Solomon committed four great national sins, and the income from these transgressions brought him 666 talents of gold a year. These four sins were committed for his own self-interest. One was the sending to Egypt for horses and merchandise; another was the illegal marriage to so many "outlandish women;" and still another sin for self-interest, greed and gain, was to send ships to Ophir for gold. Solomon violated the law of God in Deut. 17: 15, in national affairs, when he appointed "Hiram king of Tyre" as one of the overseers in building the great temple. Yet this appointment was of great financial Interest to both Solomon and the national kingdom of Israel. There was a combined money power in Solomon's individual interest for wealth after the temple and his own dwelling were completed. Then it appears that the entire form of worship began to be placed upon a money basis, sects soon began to form, and every sect was for itself, making the law of God and the worship void by their traditions. The Scriptures represent unauthorized power as a beast, because it exists by brute force in place of righteousness. Soon after Christianity was established it became contaminated by false teachers who taught their views in place of God's word. And in order to draw away disciples after them for greed and gain and self-aggrandizement, they taught perverse things, and soon sects and parties were organized. Then worldly orders and societies were established upon a money basis for the benefit of their own members to the exclusion of all others. And this power to "boycott" and prevent people from buying or selling, having its origin in Solomon's sins, will never rise higher than 666 talents of gold in a year to any one man. And that brute force and boycotting power will continue and will be destroyed at the proper time after peace leagues are broken, and aëroplanes are ready to carry " the fire of God" for the battle between "Gog and Magog" in Armageddon, has never occurred and will not be until the aëroplanes are ready!

To Stop Falling Hair.

The cause of baldness, hair falling out, loss of luster and color, is found in the roots of the hair itself. Our hair is but a portion of our body, and, like the other organs, cannot subsist without food. The hair finds its food in the fat layer of skin next to the When this source of food is stopped or impeded, out comes the hair. The dreaded disease, dandruff, is a germ. It collects on the bottom of the hair and eats away its life. The hair sack from which the hair comes is embedded in the layer of under skin. When the scalp is diseased and the hair falls out, often this small hair sack closes. Eventually, as a result of the dandruff germs, baldness comes. The proper method of restoring the hair and stopping the falling out must necessarily be in the destruction of the dandruff germs and in the reopening of the little hair sacks. Furthermore, in order to rejuvenate the scalp and make the growth of new hair more vigorous, it is necessary that the system be able to furnish an abundance of hair food. Many artificial methods have been tried in restoring the hair, which were only surface remedies, and, failing to reach the small hair sacks, were unsuccessful. Re-opening the hair sack allows the new hair to grow. Calvacura begins at the root of the trouble, and its use is, therefore, advised. Its mission is to feed the new hair as well as the old and rid the scalp of all dandruff germs. By thus cleaning and rejuvenating the entire scalp, a healthy growth of hair is assured. Falling of hair is stopped; new life and color to dead, gray hair is developed, and the hair becomes constituted and valvety. It is becomes smooth and velvety. It is not an unpleasant treatment, and not an takes only a few minutes of time each day for about six week. The Union Laboratory, 214 109th Street, Binghamton, N. Y., will send you a liberal sample of Calvacura No. 1, free, together with a booklet, "The Triumph of Science Over Baldness," if you will send your name and address, together with ten cents in silver or postage stamps to help pay the distribution expenses:

What the Church Could Do With Co-Operation.

BY F. E. EXUM.

For the past several years I have heard many preachers in many different congregations bemoaning the fact that the church is not making sufficient progress in carrying out the great commission, and they have cited various reasons why this is true; but never have I heard one strike what seems to me to be the keynote to the situation. I agree with them perfeetly that the church lacks very much in carrying out the duty assigned to it in the great commission, which Is to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. We sing loudly about the time when the word of salvation shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea, but move along at the same snail's pace year in and year out. We move at snall's pace because we have not appropriated the lessons of unity of action as taught by the apostle Paul. We have unity of faith on doctrinal points, which is as it should be, but we do not couple with it unity of action. To be more specific, each congregation is isolated from the other and working separately, as though it were a separate body and not merely one part of the body of Christ. As a consequence of this, we have an enfeebled giant; for one congregation by itself is weak, and as the congregations do not throw their strength together, the whole body is weak.

The great task before the church cannot be accomplished without making full use of the power of money. We are not doing this; if we were, we would be sending out hundreds of evangelists on the firm basis laid down by the apostle Paul that "they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel." To make full use of the power of money, the necessity of giving liberally in order to carry out the great commission would have to be impressed on the members of each congregation, and then specified sums sent in each month from each congregation to some point of concentration, where it would be paid out to the evangelists for their expenses. But some one says: "O, we would have to have a treasurer!" Why, certainly, call him a "treasurer" if you want to. Some one of necessity would have to receive and disburse the funds that were centralized; but he and all others engaged would do their work simply as Christians, members of the church of Christ only.

Let me give you some estimates and an example of what could be done in Nashville alone. I estimate that there are three thousand members of the church of Christ in twenty-six congregations in Nashville. I estimate that the monthly contribution is approximately fifteen hundred dollars per month, or fifty cents per member per month, and that the total monthly expenses of the congregations are thirteen hundred dollars, leaving a small balance of two hundred dollars per month that is appropriated to some gospel work. This is a very small contribution. It is so because each member knows that no great work is planned to be executed, and he, therefore, contributes small change to pay the necessary expenses of the congregation. If great objectives were planned and held up before the members and they were made to see that they could be instrumental in the salvation of many souls by keeping preachers and missionaries in the field with their contributions, I believe the contributions would be many times as much as they now are. They contribute small change for a small purpose. But to go on with the example. Surely the average contribution could be easily brought up to two dollars for each member per month. That is not a large contribution, but even that much would amount to approximately six thousand dollars per month; and with thirteen hundred dollars taken away for overhead expenses, this would leave forty-seven hundred dollars for gospel work each month. That means that forty-seven evangelists could be sent forth to preach the gospel with one hundred dollars per month for expenses. It would be inconsistent to send evangelists out where we have no members and expect the people there to pay their expenses; and as we do not concentrate the money, we do not send them anywhere. How many evangelists are the churches of Nashville sending out? None. Why? Because the congregations are not knit and joined together by the joints and bands of congregational cooperation. Here is what the apostle Paul says: "The whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love," "Let no man (Eph. 4: 16.) beguile you of your reward in a volhumility and worshiping of angels, intruding into those things which he hath not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind, and not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God." (Col. 2: 18, 19.) Not until the congregations which are the parts comprising the whole body of Christ are welded together in a compact and harmonious working unit can the great commission ever be carried out and the church do its duty in the world. O yes, we all preach the same doctrine; but where are those "joints and bands" that would bind the whole body together in a compact cooperative working unit? They do not exist. Why are many of our elders and preachers so much more conservative than the apostle Paul that they will not make practical use of this very important principle set forth by himcooperation?

Blessing Through Abraham's Seed.

BY JARRATT L. SMITH,

Because Abraham was willing to offer up Isaac, his only son, God said: "That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the seashore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed: because thou hast obeyed my voice." (Gen. 22: 17, 18.) What a wonderful promise to Abraham! But he was a good man and God could trust him.

The history of the church of Christ in every age lies in the promises made to Abraham. There is not a blessing that any child of God under any subsequent dispensation ever received which is not the result of the covenant which God made with Abraham. All Gentiles travel to all mercies through the Jews; therefore, should hold them in high respect and not speak of them in terms of deri-

We notice that Abraham had the purpose of God respecting the Jews unfolded to his mind very gradually. Little by little God gave them revelations, and at last he said, "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed," adding, "because thou hast obeyed my voice." From this we learn that a course of practical obedience is the nearest road to the understanding of prophecy. His seed in its natural sense is the blessing of the whole world. It was this when God made it the depository of his truth and committed to them his word. In every generation the Jews have nobly and faithfully done their work in the guardianship of God's word for the people. It is a blessing because in God's dealings with Israel we see warnings for our instruction and our peace. Again, it is a blessing because Gentile Christians are indebted to the Jews for whatever spiritual privileges they enjoy. The present state of the Jews should be regarded as the great standing evidence of the truth of revelation. 'Some one may ask: "In what sense is Abraham's seed to be counted the blessing to the world?" God had a definite intention when he made the promise to run in the singular and not in the plural number. He did not say, "In thy seeds," as of many, but "In thy seed." The Lord Jesus is the "seed" in which all nations receive blessing. It is an argument of indisputable consolation to know that the nature of the great Elder Brother places him in fellowship with our trials, that he is still a man-Abraham's "seed." Through Christ we become the seed of Abraham, and there is not a prophecy of love of which I may not say that it is mine because I am Abraham's seed.

Minton.

On February 12, 1919, Brother J. L. Minton was called from this world of trials and trouble to that world where trouble will be no more. Brother Minton had been a true and faithful Christian for twenty-seven years. He had lived with us for several years, and was always at his post of duty until about four years ago, when he was afflicted with paralysis. He bore his affliction with cheerfulness. He was born on February 26, 1852, near Scottsboro, Okla. He leaves behind three children: George Minton, who is now in France; Mrs. D. L. Burnett, of Van Raub, Texas; and Mrs. J. B. Clark, with whom he was living when he died. All of his children are Chris-tians. Funeral services were conducted by the writer.

J. D. SHIPMAN.

Burk.

I have just received a letter from Sister B. F. Mansfield, of Marysville, Texas, bringing the sad news of the death of her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Burk, in St. Louis, Mo., on December 30, 1918, from the dread malady, influenza. Sister Burk was married to J. M. Burk in 1905 and obeyed the gospel in 1908, in Vernon, Texas. She worshiped with the Christian Church III 1911, when, under my preaching, she identified herself with the church of Christ. Sister Burk was a grand-daughter of that grand minister and soldier of the cross, J. M. Milburn, now living in Oakland. Okla. Her mother writes that she was faithful until death, and this brings sweet assurance. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life. She leaves her old grandfather and grandmother, her mother, her husband, three little children, and a host of other relatives and friends, to mourn their loss; but they weep not as those that have no hove for they as those that have no hope, for they have the assurance that she has the promise of the crown of life and that they may meet her in the "sweet by and by." Darden.

A. B. Darden was born on April 17. 1848, and was reared in Tennessee. He was killed in an accident in Waco, Texas, during the summer of 1918, He was a member of the church for over forty years and for twenty-five years served as an elder. He was married to Miss Dorcas Anderson on March 20, 1866. To this union were March 20, 1866. To this union were born four children—three boys and one girl. Two of the boys are dead. Besides his aged wife, he leaves a daughter and a son, a brother and a sister. He lived in Waco for thirty years, and fifteen years of this time was spent as an elder of the congregation. He spent his life solely for his family and the church. The writer while serving the church as writer, while serving the church as an evangelist, found him to be loyal and faithful to the cause of Christ. He acted the part of a father to all young men, especially young preachers. I am glad that I came in contact with him, for he was a great help to me in my local work. To his sor-

Womack.

Robert R. Womack was born, in Warren County, Tenn., in 1865, and died, in Cookeville, Tenn., on Febru-ary 25, 1919. He had the influenza in October and it was followed by pneumonia. He fought bravely for his life for four months, but every turn of the disease seemed to be for the worse, and on February 25 he was compelled to surrender to death. All was done for him that could have been done; but nothing could arrest the dreadful disease, so he had to yield. His brother, Dr. J. P. Womack, of Nashville, stayed with him much of the time during his sickness, and he called to his assistance the best talent in the country, but all to no avail. He had to leave his family, his friends, and the church he loved, to go up higher. Brother Womack was first a Presbyte-rian in religion, but under the teaching of the brethren his faith changed. and when it did be was brave enough to change his church relations. As a church member, he was brave and true to his convictions. The popular current had no effect on him to change his conduct. He did not run with the masses to do evil, but walked by his own faith and convictions. The church at Cookeville will miss him; in fact, such men are missed anywhere. this age, when so many people are controlled in their religious conduct by the popular will, it is truly refreshing and encouraging to find a man big enough and brave enough to have convictions and to walk by them. Of course, most of all, Brother Womack's family will miss him. They will miss his quiet Christian companionship, his righteous council, and his faithful walk. The congregation at Cookeville walk. will miss his presence in their meetings, his brave and manly advice in their fight against sin and wickedness. and his strength of character in their contentions against innovations. His friends will miss him. I feel myself that I have sustained a personal loss in his death. But it is sweet to be-lieve in immortality and to rejoice in the hope of a reunion in the glory world. "Sine Cera."

"Sincere" is derived from sine cera -without wax. In ancient Rome it was often customary for a dishonest mason to apply wax to a chipped piece of marble in order to conceal the defeet. The deception was only discovered when the hot sun began to melt the wax. A sincere person must be without a flaw, and able to endure all kinds of weather with perfect equanimity.-Selected.

A SLIP OF THE KNIFE

resulting in an injured finger, a stubbed toe, a splinter, or any other of the numberless petry injuries that are likely to happen any day, may not seem serious at first, but, when neglected and aided by the carcless touch of a dirty hand, may become infected and develop into an ugly sore and blood poison: Don't play with fate. Apply Gray's Ointment immediately and freely in all skin injuries. It gives immediate relief, soothes the pain, wards off blood poison, and immediately begins its healing effect. Its constant use for ainety-nine years has made it a famlly word in every household. Ask your druggist or write W. F. Gray & Co., 818 Gray Bullding, Nashville, Tenn., for sample.

Always Ask for Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin"

Only Aspirin Tablets with the safety "Bayer Cross" on them are genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," owned and made by Americans and proved safe by millions of people. The Mission Work.

BY C. C. MERRITT.

Some one has said: "Time has brought forth two great glants—Opportunity and Responsibility." Glants they are if left untouched by our bands in the way that God has asked us to deal with them; but if we shall be "faithful and obedient," they will mean no more to us than Goliath meant to David.

Let us first consider the giant Opportunity. Doors have been opened in the last fifty years to the gospel of God that have been almost marvels in our eyes; yet how many of those doors have we entered, and to what extent? Of China, India, Africa, Syria and Turkey, Persia, Korea, Japan, Siam, Burma, Mexico, Pacific Islands, Madagascar, Egypt, Ceylon, Assam, Brazil, Malaysia, Afghanistan, Arabia, Chili, Java, New Guinea, etc.-of these, Japan, India, and possibly Africa have only been touched. And what could be said of some of the States in the great West, Northwest, and Northeast?

As far back as 1893, Protestant churches were sending a missionary to foreign fields for every five thousand members. The Brethren Church alone was sending one of every ninety-two members. But in making this statement methinks I can hear some one say, "They that compare themselves with themselves are not wise;" and so it may be. But I am comparing ourselves with others. We who make such great claims to being so very apostolic and loyal may be both such in some things, but we are greatly lacking in some others as well. It is only a system of false argumentation that can do away with missions in the church of Christ to-day that would make her apostolic without them.

But there is more to this giant of Opportunity than merely the open door. Christ has hundreds of thousands of professed followers in the United States. We have the numbers. Numerically, we are stronger than some of the denominations that are doing—shall I say it?—a thousand times more than we are! So we cannot "begin to make excuses" here,

Nor is this all sides of this giant Opportunity. We have the means. By this I mean the money. God has put millions upon millions into the hands of his saints. I myself know of single congregations that are worth one-half million each. And yet God continues to test our faithfulness, not only by allowing us to keep what we have, but by giving us even more. But we seem not to be willing to be faithful stewards. Selfishness has the sway over us. We are not willing to undergo the self-denial that is absolutely necessary in rendering a faithful account of our stewardship. The history of the rich fool is being repeated in us as we pass one by one. "What shall I do? My barns are full," etc. No that of others in him; no that of lost souls in us. "I will tear down my barns and build greater," A sad state of insensibility and morbid, prolonged sleep is very apparent. How else may we interpret our lack in the "greater works?" A sister asks: "Should more missionaries be going to the field, when those already there are not properly supported?" Think of it—a very few, and they not properly supported! "Should we send more?" Yes, and then more. God's Spirit will not strive with us always to get us to this work. Soon we will have to render an ac-

But there is still another side to this giant of Opportunity. There are others ready to go. "But how shall they preach, except they be sent?" We have the willing-minded men and women; we have the material.

God is speaking to the hearts of some, saying: "Whom shall I send?" And they respond: "Here am I; send me." In his word he tells us to send those out who have so gladly accepted that invitation. But we say: "Not so." But may God rebuke us so that we may not add, "This shall never be."

Let us bestir ourselves from this apathy and lethargy. Let us say unto our God: "O Lord Jehovah, we have sinned. Forgive our sins and we will walk in thy way. Give us strength to have the grace to love those whom thou lovest, that we may take the glad message of Christ's death and life; for thou hast been so gracious unto us as to have it sent to us first, trusting us to carry it unto others. O Lord, forgive! O, Lord, help! And let thy promise, which cannot fail, be upon us, that thou wilt never leave us. Amen."

MAN CUTS HIS HAND! DIES OF BLOOD POISON

You see something of this kind in the papers every now and then. A neglected wound, blood poisoning sets in; then it is too late. We all neglect these seeming trivial hurts—will take a chance.

Carboil prevents blood poison. It draws out the inflammation and heals. And it stops the pain, too—almost as soon as applied.

A box of carboil should be kept handy for such emergencies as burns, cuts, bruises, and sores. It is the best treatment for boils.

Clip and mail this to Spurlock-Neal Company, Nashville, Tenn., for liberal sample. Your druggist guarantees and sells Carboil. A large box costs only 25 cents, and lasts a long time.

The Perpetuity of Man.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

Pliny said: "Man is the being for whose sake all things else appear to have been made." And one of the most profound questions in ages past was: What is man? From whence came the idea of a God? Man did not create the idea, for it is impossible for man to create; and as far back as the existence of man can be traced, the idea of a God was in existence. Man's relationship to God has never been fully understood, and never will be in this life; yet it has been believed in and was taught by the greatest philosophers of the ages as well as some of God's greatest servants, such as Abraham and David. Webster said: "My greatest thought is my relationship to God." Josephus (page 493) said: "The bodies of all men are indeed mortal, and are created out of corruptible matter; but the soul is ever immortal, and is that part of the divinity which inhabits our bodies." Human bodies are of a material nature. The intelligent part which dwells in the body and acts through the physical organism is not of a material nature. That is the part which knows, understands, and comprehends. That part is called the "soul," "heart," or "spirit," and can exist as independent of the body as well as in the body, it being the offspring of God. who "formeth the spirit of man within him." (Zech. 12: 1.) It partakes of the nature of its Father, God; and as God is immortal, incorruptible, and indestructible, the child spirit of which God is the Father, is, therefore, immortal, incorruptible, and indestructible. When Paul stood in the Supreme Court of Athens, called "Mars' Hill," to plead his own case, he having been arrested for setting forth another God (they, having about thirty thousand, had decreed that no more gods should be set forth), Paul's first plea would have released any one. He said: "I beheld an altar with this inscription, To the unknown God, whom you ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." Then he set forth how nations existed, their habitations, God's greatness, and then proved by their own great statesman and poet, Aratus, that they, as well as all nations, were the offspring of this (to them) unknown God, which is not of a material nature like their carved idols made by hand. In their language they used the word "Jove." Reader, please bear with me and I will give you the poem of Aratus that Paul quoted from, which shows that man sprang from an intelligent first cause, God:

"With Jove we must begin, nor from him rove.

Him always love, for all is full of

He fills all places where mankind resort.

The widespread sea, and every sheltering port.

"Jove's presence fills all space, upholds this ball; All need his aid, his power sustains us all:

For we his offspring are, and he in love

Points out to each his portion from above.

Aratus died about one hundred and forty-six years B.C. He was an idolatrous worshiper, yet believed that the soul-spirit part of man was the offspring of the great Creator, who in love guides and controls the present and future destiny of all men.

How men undervalue the power of simplicity! But it is the real key to the heart.-Wordsworth.

There is a very effective way to remove freckles and make the skin clear and beautiful. It is in this way that Kintho Cream gradually gets rid of the old, freckled skin, and gives a soft, clear, white, youthful and beautiful skin, which of course should have no freekles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed, and your freekles should begin to disappear in a day or two. It is well to get a cake of Kintho Soap also, as this helps to keep the freckles away, once Kintho has removed them.

CHURCH NEWS

Canada.

MacRorie, Saskatchewan, March 22. Arriving here on March 5, I began a meeting the same night and have continued it until the present, and expect to continue it until Monday. invited here while I was at Funnichy. The church here was in a bad condition, almost lifeless, taken up with dancing, pool, cards, etc. My task did not look like an easy one. I was in-formed prior to my coming that the church was almost divided and that hopes for recovery were faint. I took the matter to God daily and sought his guidance, and am so glad to be able to say that a grand reformation has been brought about. I endeavored to use all diplomacy possible in dealing with the above questions and yet not beat around the bush, exhorted my hearers with all my being to surrender to Jesus Christ indeed and in truth, set forth our responsibility before God and the world, and pleaded with the church to give up everything which tended to hinder our progress which tended to hinder our progress in leading souls to Christ; and at last Wednesday's meeting of the church, when the invitation was given to all who realized that they had gone wrong in the dance, cards, pool, etc., and who saw their wrong and were willing to confess their evil and pledge themselves before Cod and the best of the confess their evil and pledge themselves before Cod and the progress of the code and t themselves before God and the church to put away all these evils and endeavor from thenceforth to let bygones be bygones and let all ill feeling which had existed among brethren be forever laid aside, and to work together as Christians in love and obedience, to stand up. I then asked that we all take a more humble attitude before our God while upon our knees we con-God in penitence to more faithfully follow the Savior A business meeting of the church was then conducted, marked with humility and kindness. Many expressions of gladness and ap-preciation have come from the brethren because of the course I pursued and the results obtained. During the business meeting I was invited to return as soon as possible and labor with the church, or, if I could not do so, to send some one who, in my Judgment, would be suitable for the field; and the church agreed to see, so far as in their power, that the laborer would be supported. Brethren, we need more men for this province. I am corresponding with a Texas brother at present, and I pray that he may be the man for this field. However, we still need one or two more besides this brother. Will not some young brother who reads this find it in his heart to come out into this field and sow God's word into the hearts of this people which are in darkness? Help us place one or two more men in this province, brethren,—H. A. Rogers,

Texas.

"What Ails the World?"

FOUND AT LAST!

A strange and surprising book, flaming with imagery like a moving picture from Adam to Woodrow Wilson, shows the real cause of all sin and sorrow. There is nothing like it in all the world of literature!

The leading character was present The leading character was present when God made Adam, and as a wit-ness of events from then to now he visits a pastor at midnight and re-lates the vivid story that unfolds the mystery of groaning ages; also ex-plains that because of desecration, Sabbath was hid from men when the sun stood still, and found in Sunday after "crucifixion Wednesday."

It clears many difficult Scriptures, reveals the cure of ills that mark the bloody path of nations, and shows our education ideas are about as correct as farming was a hundred years ago; but tarming was a hundred years ago; but it sees better things for the coming age. In many places the book goes from house to house among readers eager to know its story. A large, new edition reduces the price to $1.10, if ordered direct from York Bookstore, Box $4G, York, S. C. the Romantic Story of Southlard's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its moslistinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was premptly adopted. The husiness man from the South, knowing how welcome such a thoe would be in his part of the country, arged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, duration to the country of the cou bility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn. N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving thoe book for the asking.

It is not always necessary to make a conscious effort to help others. If we are trying our hardest to do right, helpfulness will radiate from our lives, as heat radiates from a fire. The Motive for Obedience.

Perhaps the simplest definition of obedience is "doing what we are told to do." We are not obligated to obey those who have no right to command us, but we ought to obey those who have that right. Parents have the right to command children, teachers to command pupils, employers to command their workmen, officers to command soldiers, rulers to command subjects, and Christ to command his followers. All of these except Christ may sometimes err and command us to do what Christ tells us not to do. In that event, Christ alone is to be obeyed, because he always commands us to do that which is right. Our motive in obeying Christ should be love. He makes it the foundation of friendship when he says: "Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you," Love leads to light. If we love and obey Christ, we will see him and become like him. This is the reward of obedience.

The First Corinthian letter was written to a body of Christians many of whose practices, as individuals, were unwise and immoral. It was written to correct these errors. The keynote of the letter is love, Christian love, binding the soul to God in worship and obedience and binding men together in helpful coöperation, will solve all hard problems and correct all evil practices. Teaching, preaching, prophesying, the working of miracles—all these have their place in the church, says Paul; but there is "a still more excellent way," the way of love.

The Distinctive Mark.

Jesus said: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." (John 13: 35.) The Pharisee was known by his broad phylactery; the priests and scribes were marked by their peculiar robes. The Roman was distinguished by his toga, even as the German is known by the eagle on his belmet. The Mohammedan is known by his headgear, the Brahman by his flowing robes. But Jesus gave a new order and instituted a new badge of discipleship. It was not a medal or a star or a garb, but it was the manifestation of love.

Jesus recognizes three degrees of love: "Love your enemies;" "his neighbor as himself;" and "one another as I have loved you." Love is the root from which spring all the other graces. In Paul's enumeration he declares that the "fruit of the Spirit is love." All the rest are its expressions. It is the inspiration and joy of service. When love abates, obedience slackens. Love always gives its best. It breaks its alabaster boxes for the Savior's anointing. James teaches that love brings us under the "perfect law of liberty." Only the service of love affords freedom. Love gives wings to hope. Paul commends those "that love his appearing." It is the strongest bond between man and man. In its fires the hearts of men are welded. No other bond will stand the strain of selfishness and the stress of circumstances,

"This world is full of beauty, as other worlds above; And if we did our duty, it might be full of love."

About Prayer.

Prayer is any communion of the human soul with God. It is not mere petition any more than the conversation of two human friends is; it also includes adoration, thanksgiving, and quiet listening for what our Father has to say. Prayer is the noblest and most blessed activity in which we can engage. James says: "The prayer of a righteous man availeth much in its working." It is better to be mighty in prayer than to rule a nation. Of course the Savior, who lived a life of prayer completely and perfectly, would put much about prayer in his teaching. We can have no wiser teacher. He teaches us concerning the place, the manner, and the spirit of prayer.

We should not be hypocritical when we pray-and, of course, all Christians pray; for a person who does not pray could hardly be said to have enough of the Christ in his life to wear his name. Theirs was the false motive; ours must be the true, if we would be heard of God. Conspicuous places and vain repetitions characterize some prayers to-day. But Christ's servants go into the inner room and, closing the doors, pray to their Father. And just think! Jesus says the Father will hear our prayers and recompense us. Yet some contend that the petitions of individuals or companies are not rewarded except in psychological reflex actions. They say we just think it will help us, and, like those who take dough pills, we feel better afterwards. Away with such infidelity! Is God less powerful than his own law? Is Jehovah a prisoner bound up in the universe he created? Do we know all law, that we may deny God's power to overrule what we understand, even as we daily overrule gravitation and many other natural laws? Who says our Father does not answer his children's prayer? Unreasonable, unscriptural, unfaithful lie; believe it not. God has promised, not only to hear us, but to give us whatsoever we ask, if we abide in Christ and his work abide in us. (John 14: 6.) Christ was neither deceived nor a deceiver. Heaven and earth may pass away, but his words will not pass away. (Matt. 24: 35.) The only limit to our receiving what we ask is that we abide in Christ. But remember, abiding in him, our desires harmonize with God's purpose and the master passion of our soul is: "Not my will, but thine, be done."

Baptism and Christian Union.

BY J. D. WALLING.

In some quarters it seems that baptism-or, as some express it, "making too much of immersion"-is in the way of Christian union. One writer puts it this way: "We must, of course, be true to our understanding of Christ's command; but can we fellowship as Christians. others who do the same, but whose understanding differs from ours? That is a question which the disciples must face-yea, are now facing." This is from J. H. Garrison, in the Christian-Evangelist of January 30. In the same paper W. P. Keeler asks some questions, among them this one: "As there cannot be entrance upon the Christian life without initiation into his body, even as the invariable rule of 'Initiation' applies with all man-manufactured fraternities, is there any other God-prescribed, visible act of induction into Christ, apart from immersion?" To which Garrison makes the following reply: "Here is where logic leads to legalism. The conclusion of this syllogism seems to be that no one has gained entrance into the Christian life who has not been immersed. But Brother Keeler would hardly affirm that proposition. He knows of many good Christians who have never been immersed. Where is the logic lame? Of the two parts of baptism-the inward spirit and purpose and the outward form-all must admit that the former is by far the more important. Where the purpose is right, God can forgive the mistake in form and take the will for the deed. If he does not do this, what hope have any of us of being accepted by him? We must practice baptism as we understand it, but we must allow that others who do the same in all sincerity of purpose are Christians though they differ from us, if so be their lives are as Christian as ours. That is why we worship with them, unite in mission work with them, exchange pulpits with them, admit them to the Lord's table, and treat them as brethren in many ways. Wasn't this Christ's way?"

No, no, that was not Christ's way; but it is an awfully good way to make infidels and to do away with the Bible. Suppose "logic" does "lead to legalism;" if that law be of God, why should a Christian deplore it?

But he says: "The conclusion of this syllogism seems to be that no one has gained entrance into the Christian life who has not been immersed." And did not Jesus so teach? All in the Christian life are in the kingdom of Christ, and all in the kingdom of Christ have been "born of water and of the Spirit" (John 3: 5); and all in the kingdom are there legally. Jesus said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 7: 21.) God's will is the same as God's law. Law is "a rule of action." Then, all who enter the kingdom of God enter by God's "rule of action." God's "rule of action" includes immersion. In Tit. 3: 5, Paul tells us that we are saved by the washing that belongs to regeneration, and this washing is immersion. Again, all that are in the "Christian life" are the sons of God. But God has no sons but those born of "water and of the Spirit." All of God's children are his by law. "If ye know that he is righteous, ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him." (1 John 2: 29.) David said: "All thy commandments are righteous." (Ps. 119: 172.) But immersion is one of God's commandments. (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) Since all that "doeth righteousness" are born of God, and immersion is God's righteousness, then all who are immersed are born of God. But God has no children that are not in his kingdom. God has no children that are not in his family. All in the family were immersed into it. All in the family are in Christ. All in Christ entered by immersion. "For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 27.) One would as well talk about salvation without the blood of Christ as to talk of entering the Christian life without immersion. For Christ's blood was shed in his death. "But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already," etc. (John 19: 33.) It is only by immersion that one enters his death. "We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life." (Rom. 6: 4.) But only those can walk in a new life who have died to the love and practice of sin, who have been planted into a likeness of the death of Christ and raised in a likeness of his resurrection. But Garrison says: "He knows of many good Christians who have never been immersed." He has not yet told us how he found this out, but he says it is so. It would have been so much more convincing had he given chapter and verse. Wonder if he really believes the Bible, anyway?

Again, Garrison says: "Where is the logic lame? Of the two parts of baptism—the inward spirit and purpose and the outward form-all must admit that the former is by far the more important," Baptism is composed of two actions. There can be no baptism without a burial and a resurrection. There is no such thing as a scriptural immersion till one has been begotten by the word of God. But when and where did any man of God ever speak of the "inward spirit" and "the outward form" of baptism? God always found what the inward purpose of man was by man's obedience to his commands. But Garrison says: "Where the purpose is right, God can forgive the mistake in form and take the will for the deed." No! "Where the purpose is right," man will find the will of the Lord and do it. He will not stop to ask whether the Lord can forgive the mistake in form or anything else. If his purpose is right, he will know that the Lord will punish the disobedient. Wonder why the Savior did not think about that when he was in such great agony in Gethsemane? He said: "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from mer nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." (See Matt. 26: 39.) God could not take the "will for the deed" with his Son, but Garrison says he can do it with the denominations now. I wonder who told him? Does God think better of denominations than of his Son? If we do not find the will of the Lord and do it, it is not God's fault. His will is plain, and men like J. H. Garrison would much better serve the Lord if they would teach the world the importance of learning God's will and doing it, and leave to the Lord all such questions as what God can and cannot do.

But Garrison says: "We must practice baptism as we understand it, but we must allow that others who do the same in all sincerity of purpose are Christians though they differ from us, if so be their lives are as Christian as ours." If we do not understand baptism, who is to be blamed? Is it God's fault? Will ignorance excuse us? Is it possible for one to understand the Bible to mean one thing, and another to understand it to mean an entirely different thing? If the Bible means immersion when it says immersion, is it God's fault if one thinks sprinkling will do just as well? Garrison knows better. Christ's way was to do God's will. "I am come down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." "Not my will, but thine, be done." It will be much better for the world when all such men as Garrison learn that the "we" are very small potatoes, that all of God's children are in his family by virtue of a birth, that they are all of the same relationship, and that there is no such thing as "admitting them to the Lord's table." All of God's children are in his household, so do not need any admittance to his table. In fact, no one has a privilege that the others do not enjoy. As well speak of my fellowshiping in a fleshly relationship one who was never born into my family as to fellowship in a Christian sense one not born of God. Garrison says: "That is why we . . . treat them as brethren in many ways," but "if so be their lives are as Christian as ours." Why not "treat them as brethren" in every way? If their lives are Christian, they are Christians. Sinners do not have Christian lives. Only those have the Christian life who are "born of water and of the Spirit." Why not teach them that the same process that makes one a Christian adds him to the church, which is the family of God, and entitles him to all the benefits and blessings that belong to the kingdom of heaven?

But here is the worst ever: "But I could hardly think that he regarded baptism as a fundamental in his redemptive plan." O, no; it was just put in so some could exercise their understanding! You know it is so difficult of understanding, some do and some don't! But hear Christ: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you." (Matt, 28: 19, 20.) But the things Christ commanded were to "make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them." The way to make disciples, therefore, is to baptize them. Is it "fundamental" that the nations should be discipled? If so, then baptism is "fundamental in his redemptive plan;" for he commands all disciples to "make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them."

Paul to the Saints at Philippi. No. 3. BY F. W. SMITH.

"Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ." (Phil. 1: 2,) The second item in this apostolic benediction is that of "peace," and it is the result of appropriated grace. Divine grace unappropriated will profit or bless no one; but when the grace of God that bringeth salvation is accepted by sinners, the result is peace of mind and a conscience void of offense toward God and man. "And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." (Phil. 4: 7.) let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful." (Col. 3: 15.) The peace that is from God must be the ruling principle of our lives, if we get out of the religion of Christ what is intended for us. The subject of peace is threefold in its application. It must be from God through Jesus Christ. (Rom. 5. 1.)

PEACE WITH GOD.

The Scriptures represent the unregenerate as at enmity with God. "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed (Rom, 8: 7.) This enmity must be broken down can be." and man brought into peaceful relations with his Maker, if he would be saved from sin and its awful consequences. The person through whom this peace is obtained is the Lord Jesus Christ. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5: 1.) Christ alone is the Mediator between God "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus," (1 Tim. 2: 5.) The reconciliation between God and man is effected through the gospel of Christ, which is termed "the gospel of peace." (Eph. 6: 15; Rom. 10: 15.) It is also affirmed that both grace and peace come through knowledge. "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord." (2 Pet. 1: 2.) From all the revealed facts on the subject we can reach but one conclusion-viz.: an intelligent faith-that is, belief of the proper thing-and obedience to the right thing, the gospel of Christ, are absolutely essential to the obtaining of peace with God. Peace with God, therefore, is not a mere feeling, but a state of justification brought about through a knowledge of and obedience to the gospel. To be sure, there is an ease of mind and a joy unspeakable, but these arise from the consciousness of having complied with the terms of "the word of reconciliation," (2 Cor. 5: 19.) Thus one can have a solid ground for the rejoicing that accompanies peace; for the evidence of peace with God lies not in feeling, but in faith. God commands and promises, and man believes, obeys, and rejoices.

PEACE WITH ONESELF.

Conscious guilt brings unrest and trouble to the soul. Many people sin against themselves, and go about with their secret sins like a millstone about their necks. No wonder David prayed: "Cleanse thou me from secret faults." (Ps. 19; 12.) Paul wrote: "Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth." (Rom. 14: 22.) John wrote: "For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things." (1 John 3: 20.) When one's own heart condemns him, it is because he believes he is doing that which is wrong; and the Bible teaches that when one does that which he believes to be wrong he sins against himself, although that thing may not be wrong within itself. If one through erroneous teaching is made to believe it would be a sin to eat meat, to him it would be a sin, but to others it would be no sin to eat it. Thus we see that peace with oneself has to do with those sins committed against self, sins that affect the individual alone. What, then, is the remedy whereby such unrest of mind may be relieved and peace made to reign within? Simply this: cease the practice of anything and everything about which there may be the slightest doubt as to its being right and proper for a Christian to do. Play on the safe side of all doubtful things, pursue that course about which there can be no debate in the mind as to whether or not it is the proper thing to do. If it be a question of not paying enough for services rendered, pay the laborer a little more than the amount agreed upon. If there be a doubt about paying the widow or poor man or any one else enough for the cow, horse, or pig. add more to it; for the peace of mind it will bring is worth far more than a few paltry dollars.

PEACE WITH FEILOW BEINGS.

On this phase of the subject we have this positive infunction: "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men." (Rom. 12; 18.) Again; "And be at peace among yourselves." (1 Thess. 5: 13.) These two passages cover the whole ground of our relations to the beings of this world. Here is the duty to each other as Christians, the children of God, and also the duty toward all men, whether in or out of the church. There are many things constantly arising between men and women in their business and social relations calculated to produce friction, strife, and alienation, and to avoid these requires much tact, wisdom, and prudence. Now, there is a remedy that, if adhered to, can never fail to maintain peaceful relations among men and women in and out of the church-viz.: "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." (Luke 6: 31.) The observance of this divine rule will always and under all circumstances prevent trouble and preserve peace between man and man. The great trouble is not so much in getting people to see what is right, but in getting them to do the right. Paul's admonition, "As much as lieth in you"

(Rom. 12: 18), lays a tremendous responsibility upon each individual. I am tempted to say that if each one would do "as much as lleth in" him to maintain peace, we would never hear nor read of the shameful, soul-cursing, churchblighting, and God-dishonoring divisions among the churches over the land that are in existence to-day. The devil gets in his work among churches and individuals on the grounds of "personal rights" being disregarded, "personal offenses" offered, and the rejection of "personal hobbies." When a member of the church puts "personal rights," "personal offenses," and "personal hobbies" above the peace, harmony, and prosperity of the church for which Jesus Christ shed his blood, it is a manifestation of self-love greater than a love for Christ, and is based upon a contemptible egotism. Any man or woman who is not willing and anxious to be deprived of any "personal rights" and to take "personal offenses" and to give up " personal hobbies" for the peace and harmony of a church of Christ is not fit to be a member of the body of Christ. It is the sin of self-love that disrupts and destroys the peace and fellowship among God's people. It is I, I, I, and mine, mine, mine, that the devil plays on to win his victories. With self-lovers, such passages as this never appeal to them: "Why do ye not rather take wrong? why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?" (1 Cor. 6: 7.) Better suffer such than to lose the soul because of I, I, I, and mine, mine, mine.

Paul's Ambitions. No. 3.

BY JOHN STRAITON.

The last of Paul's three great ambitions seems to me, if comparison be possible, to be the most noble and the worthiest of them all. "We are ambitious, whether at home or absent, to be well pleasing unto him." (2 Cor. 5: 9.) He has been comparing two states of man: at home in the body and absent from the Lord, or absent from the body and present with the Lord. Or, as we would more briefly put it to-day: "Whether we be alive or dead, we are ambitious to be well pleasing to Christ."

1. How may we be well pleasing to Christ? What things please him? Paul, in discussing the eating of meats offered to idols, reaches the conclusion that it is a matter of indifference whether men eat or abstain from eating. "Food will not commend us to God: neither, if we eat not, are we the worse; nor, if we eat, are we the better." (1 Cor. 8: 8.) As a matter of self-denial and for the good of others, "it is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth." By considering what is good for others rather than using our liberty, we can fulfill our ambition and be well pleasing unto God. "For he that herein serveth Christ is well pleasing to God, and approved of men." (Rom. 14: 18.) In pursuing this course of conduct, we are following a very great example, "for Christ also pleased not himself." (Rom. 15: 3.) If any one ever had the right to do as he pleased, a right of which we very frequently hear men boasting, it was the Lord Jesus. But it is better for us, will yield us more happiness and promote the growth of the church, if instead of each one's seeking to please himself and do just as he likes, we will each one of us seek to please our neighbor for that which is good unto edify-

2. Why we should seek to be well pleasing unto God. When we sincerely love a person, we instinctively seek to please that person and to be well pleasing in his eyes. We do not do it by processes of reason or because of exhortation to do it; it comes naturally to us. The young man who seeks a worthy young woman for his wife so conducts himself that he may be well pleasing to her. It is love that does it. We love Jesus because he first loved us. When that love takes possession of us and becomes a burning power and passion in our lives, we cannot help but seek to please him. Greater love hath no man than to lay down his life for his friend; but Jesus showed his love for us by laying down his life for us while we were his enemies.

3. Our model in pleasing God. When Jesus was baptized, the voice of Jehovah spoke from heaven and said: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." The quality of what we accomplish depends very largely upon what or whom we take as our model. In Jesus we have not only the highest pattern of virtue, but the highest incentive to its practice. The Christian religion is eminently a practical religion. "To do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased." Not only have we examples to follow, but lighthouses to warn us away from the dangerous rocks where many have made shipwreck of their faith. When God delivered the Jewish fathers from Egypt, they did not all reach the promised land of rest-the land flowing with milk and honey. With most of them God was not well pleased; for they were overthrown in the wilderness because they lusted after evil things. So, then, let us who have named the name of Christ so speak and live that we may be well pleasing, not unto men, but unto God.

> Jesus! I live to thee, The loveliest and the best; My life in thee, thy life in me, In thy blest love I rest.

> Living or dying, Lord, I ask but to be thine; My life in thee, thy life in me, Makes joy forever mine.

Therefore let us make it our ambition that, whether we live or die, we may be well pleasing unto Christ.

The Campaign to Help the Colleges. BY L. L. BRIGANCE.

The Hundred-Thousand-Dollar campaign for Freed-Hardeman College is now getting started in earnest. It has taken time and a great deal of labor to get ready. Those that have been selected to carry the message to the churches are beginning their work. It is hoped to reach all the churches throughout West Tennessee, Western Kentucky, Eastern Arkansas, Northern Mississippi, and North Alabama during the spring and summer. More than a hundred brethren from several States have attended the meetings at Henderson, and every one of them has heartily indorsed the movement. Practically all of the preachers of the above-mentioned territory are in sympathy with the proposition and are helping to put it "over the top." Such men as John R. Williams, Hornbeak, Tenn.; J. L. Holland, Greenfield, Tenn.; Joe Ratcliffe, Bardwell, Ky.; C. A. Norred, Memphis, Tenn.; A. B. Lipscomb, Nashville, Tenn.: Joe Blue, Morristown, Ark.; and James E. Laird, Campbell, Mo., with a great host of others, most of whom have been students in the school, are giving their hearty approval, and most of them are now, or will be, engaged in the campaign. It is the biggest thing the brethren in this territory have ever undertaken. It means more for the advancement of the cause in this section than any other one thing. Stop and think what Mars' Hill College and "Larimore and His Boys" have done for New Testament Christianity, of the mighty work that has been done by the Nashville Bible School, and of the scores of faithful preachers of the "old Jerusalem gospel" that have gone out from Henderson, and then ask yourself whether or not it pays to build such schools.

The Southern Methodist Church at this writing is in the midst of a campaign to raise $35,000,000 for religious purposes within eight days. In addition to this colossal amount, they have already authorized another campaign to raise $20,000,000 more for educational purposes alone. I have no doubt that they will raise every dollar of the $55,000,000. The Episcopalians are raising a million-dollar | forward them to the proper commissioners.

endowment fund for Sewanee. The Baptists and Presbyterians are also in the midst of campaigns to raise hundreds of thousands of dollars for their schools.

Brethren, are we going to sit still and hold our purse strings and let denominationalism take the world? How, in the name of common sense, are we going to meet this onrushing tide unless we wake up and resolve by the grace of God to "spend and to be spent" for a cause that ought to be dearer to us than life itself? The denominations are showing a wonderful and commendable zeal in raising millions of dollars to promote that which they love. They are "proving their faith by their works" and thereby putting to shame some who cry loud and long that "faith without works is dead." We claim to have the truth; and we do, so far as the theory is concerned. I have no doubt of that. And for that very reason we ought to be all the more zealous and earnest and unselfish in supporting it. We spend our money for the things that we love. Let us prove to the world that we love the cause of the Master by supporting liberally every righteous enterprise for its advancement.

David Lipscomb College is asking for $50,000 to build a modern boarding home for girls. It has to turn them away for the lack of sufficient room. Freed-Hardeman College is asking for $100,000 to buy, build, and enlarge it, so that it may do a greater and better work than it has ever done. Let us give these schools what they are asking for. Compared to the great abundance of wealth among the brethren, the amount is small. I am sure we have many times the amount asked for lying away in Liberty Bonds and War Stamps. You have helped the government in buying them; now why not turn them over to the greatest cause on earth and let them bless the world now and throughout the years to come?

Brethren, we must wake up. We have slept on our rights, slept on our opportunities, slept at the post of duty. long enough. Our conception of things has been too small. Our interest has been too local. Christianity is a worldwide institution and our interest in it must be world-wide; We stand at the threshold of a new age-at the dawn of a new day. The world is going to be different to what it has been. Humanity is in a fearfully turbulent condition. If there ever was a time when Christians should exert themselves to the utmost to save the world, that time is now. May God help us to see and do our duty.

Responsibility for the Support of Missionaries.

BY M. C. K.

The recent article on "Order or System in Missionary Work" prepared the way, as was indicated at its close, for a consideration of the support of missionaries and those responsible for that support. Of course there should be order or system here, and we may very properly observe that, at this particular point, the evil effects of the slipshod methods, to which we have strenuously and vigorously objected, are most painfully manifest and most keenly felt among the churches, and it is to be hoped that a healthful reaction will set in and that the evil which has been done may be overruled for good.

In turning away from the hurtful extremes represented in the missionary society, the opponents of the society, in some instances, have gone to an equally hurtful extreme in the opposite direction on the matter of arranging for the support of missionaries. In many instances, and perhaps we should say in the great majority of them, pracfically no arrangement at all is made, and no wonder there has been confusion. This has been vividly and sadly illustrated by what, in missionary parlance, are called "independent missionaries." Sometimes they have seemed to glory in the independent feature of their way of going. The favorite way of expressing the position and attitude of such missionaries among the antisociety people is to say that they go "trusting in the Lord for support." The implication here is that those who go under the missionary society do not go "trusting in the Lord for support." This is a plain misrepresentation, and we who very properly oppose the society should not be guilty of it. Of course men going under the missionary society may go without trusting in the Lord, just as men going under the direct supervision of a church may go without trusting in the Lord; but it certainly does not follow, in either case, that there is a lack of trust in the Lord because the missionaries and those sending them exercise sufficient common sense to enter into a decent and orderly arrangement, based on business principles, for the support of the former; and we want it distinctly understood that, so far as a decent and orderly arrangement for the support of missionaries is concerned, those going under the society will encounter no objection from us. This is not the ground on which any proper objection to the society was ever urged; and when such an objection is made, those going under the society might very consistently and properly reply: "If such an arrangement on our part means that we do not go trusting in the Lord, and your going without such an arrangement means that you do go trusting in the Lord, then why do you not practice what you preach? Why do you appeal to the churches after you get to the field of operation, and most especially why do you complain at the churches, and sometimes abuse them, for your lack of support? If the churches are not to be consulted and no arrangement is to be made with them for your support, why do you blame them when you fall to get a support? Why not trust in the Lord?"

Antisociety brethren cannot meet such an arraignment if they oppose the society on the ground of an orderly and systematic arrangement for the support of missionaries, and we should make it a point, always and everywhere, to steer clear of all opposition on such a ground.

The New Testament distinctly says: "Even so did the Lord ordain that they that proclaim the gospel should live of the gospel" (I Cor 9: 14); but how, in the name of common sense, we may respectfully ask, can this scripture ever be carried out, in a decent and orderly way, if those who are to furnish the "living" know not what it is? And how can they ever know what it is without some sort of mutual exchange and understanding between those "that proclaim the gospel" and those who furnish the "fiving?" Neither this passage nor any other passage specifies where the field of labor shall be, whether in the immediate home field of those furnishing the living or on the other side of the earth, nor does any passage specify how long the laborer shall continue in that field-matters of human judgment on which God has said nothing; but the passage does specify "that they that proclaim the gospel should live of the gospel;" and therefore it clearly and necessarily implies, if we are to have decency and order in carrying out the obligation it imposes, that the "living" of the gospel proclaimer must be a matter of mutual knowledge between himself and those who fur-

It is sometimes difficult to keep men from being lopsided in their reasoning as well as in their practice; and hence the conclusion is erroneously drawn that because we oppose the society, and, for proper reasons, should oppose it, we must, therefore, oppose all that the society does and everything about the society. Such reasoning, followed to its legitimate end, would stop the preaching of the gospel itself; for men who go under the society sometimes preach the gospel, and preach it as straight and loyally as those who go some other way. Instead of falling a victim to such unsound and misleading reasoning, we should be careful to encourage and, wherever efficiency demands it, adopt any practice of the missionary society, or of any religious denomination, for that matter, that does not contravene some biblical principle. If it be the case of a missionary going out under a single church financially able, without the assistance of others, to furnish the "living," let the necessary amount of it be mutually ascertained and agreed upon by the said missionary and church, and then both the work and supplying a living for the workman are, as the apostle distinctly expresses it, "done decently and in order."

The very idea of one man, self-chosen and self-appointed, taking upon himself, or of a dozen men, for that matter, self-chosen and self-appointed, taking upon themselves, to select and send out missionaries, without ever consulting the churches that are expected to support them, and then appealing to such churches to support them, is both absurd and preposterous as well as presumptuous, and some of the evil results of such presumptuous procedure have already come to light in our columns. Under God's arrangement the churches, in the conduct of religious affairs, are supreme, and to thus ignore their right to know whom they support as missionaries is a presumption that deserves rebuke.

This phase of the subject we hope to develop in another article.

Should Exonorate Himself.

BY J. C. M'Q.

I could not exonerate Brother Jorgenson if I would, so I am endeavoring to get him to exenerate himself. A noted essayist has truly said: "It is impossible for a man to be cheated by any one but himself." So I may add, in harmony with the idea, that it is impossible for Brother Jorgenson to be acquitted only by himself. I cannot accept the principle that he has the same right as I to appeal to his audience to know what he taught, for he is expected to know what he taught and I am not. I will say, however, that all evidence has come to me unsolicited and I have appealed to no one but Brother Jorgenson. I am sure he knows what he teaches and is not ignorant of what he taught at Prichard. Ala. In the words of a leading auther, I would say to him: "Speak your latent conviction, and it shall be the universal sense; for the inmost in due time becomes the outmost, and our first thought is rendered back to us by the trumpets of the last judgment. Familiar as the voice of the mind is to each, the highest merit we ascribe to Moses, Plato, and Milton is, that they set at naught books and traditions, and spoke not what men but what they thought." As God revealed himself to Moses in speaking what he thought, he spoke the will of God. So, as God has revealed his will to us through his own Son, we are called upon to present only the will of God.

Brother Jorgenson is accused of preaching at Prichard, Ala., that "baptized believers are not in the kingdom, but only in the vestibule of the kingdom." A sister of unimpeachable veracity first made the accusation. Brother Watson confirms the sister's evidence, and even gives, if possible, stronger evidence by stating the circumstances under which Brother Jorgenson made known his heretical doctrine. Brother Jorgenson himself confirms their testimony, not by saying the kingdom is larger than the church, but by saying:

AS THE VESTIBULE TO THE HOUSE, SO THE CHURCH TO THE KINGDOM.

This clearly makes the church the vestibule of the kingdom. Brother Charles Talley informs me that he followed Brother Jorgenson at Prichard in a protracted meeting and that it was current talk that Brother Jorgenson taught that "baptized believers are not in the kingdom, but only in the vestibule of the kingdom." But strong as is the evidence presented, it is not all. To render the task of acquittal hopelessly impossible, Brother C. A. Taylor makes the following statement over his own signature, and makes it without solicitation:

I have frequently heard Brother Jorgenson teach, both publicly and privately, that the kingdom has never been "set up" in fulfillment of Dan. 2: 44; that this (the present) period in history is what he calls the "parenthetical age," and that Dan. 2: 44 will be fulfilled when Jesus returns and sets up his kingdom in Jerusalem. He teaches that Jesus came to establish his kingdom, but the Jews, as a nation, rejected him, and that this rejection led to a postponement until he comes again. He teaches that Jesus is a King, but that he is a King without a kingdom and he illustrated this by saying that Aguinaldo was rejected by the Filliphos, but that he was still a king, though without a kingdom over which to rule. He teaches that God ruled over the "universe," including, of course, heaven and earth, planets, and all created things, and that when Christ was given power to rule over "all things" he became ruler over the "kingdom" of the universe, and this (the universe) is the "kingdom" over which Brother Jorgenson teaches Christ is now ruling, and this is the kind of a King he teaches Christ now to be; but he does not teach that Christ is "King" in fulfillment of Dan, 2: 44, that the kingdom" of which Daniel prophesied.

The editor in chief of Word and Work denies that Christ is now sitting on David's throne and that Dan. 2: 35, 44 were fulfilled on Pentecost. He also teaches that Luke 1: 32 is literal and that Christ will rule in a body of flesh and bones on the throne of David in Jerusalem. Brother David Lipscomb years ago called my attention to Brother Boll's holding this view, stating at the time that he suggested to him that the promise was spiritual and not temporal. He said Brother Boll dropped his head and made no reply. Any one who does not know such teaching to be the doctrine of Adventism does not know what Adventism is.

Brother Jorgenson must have been reading "Jesus is Coming," for, on pages 83-85. W. E. Blackstone says: "This kingdom was at hand—that is, it came nigh (or approached, same Greek word) when Jesus, the King. came. So much so that the three favored disciples witnessed the foretaste of its glory and power on the Mount of transfiguration. But the Jews rejected it and slew their King. They were not willing to have this man reign over them, and, therefore, the kingdom did not 'immediately appear.' It became like a nobleman which 'went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.' (See Luke 19: 11-27.) By this parable Jesus distinctly taught that the kingdom was in the future."

This doctrine makes the Jews more powerful than Christ. Christ intended to establish the kingdom when he came before, but the Jews would not permit him to do so, and, falling in his purpose, he went back to heaven to try again. Accepting this teaching as correct and judging the future by the past, is it not reasonable to suppose that the Jews or somebody else will overrule him the next time he tries to establish his kingdom?

This damnable heresy not only makes the kingdom future, but it robs God and Christ of their power and ability to do what they had predetermined to be done. There is absolutely no warrant in the New Testament for the belief that the kingdom of God as a working and harmonious organization is not here now. W. E. Blackstone, on whom Brother Jorgenson and his associates rely for proof, cites the following scriptures to prove the kingdom still future: Luke 22: 16:18; Matt. 26: 29; Mark 14: 25; Luke 23: 42; Mark 15: 43. These scriptures in point of time antedate Pentecost, so the kingdom was then in the future. He also relies on Acts 14: 22; 2 Thess, 1: 4, 5; and 2 Pet, 1: 10, 11 to show that it has no existence now. It is easy to show these scriptures warrant no such conclusion. The kingdom of which Daniel (2: 44) prophesied and which was established on Pentecost "shall never be destroyed" and "shall stand forever." It should be an everlasting kingdom. While this kingdom was to be opposed for a time, in the end it would triumph over all the kingdoms of the world. The strifes and conflicts of the kingdoms of earth will end in the final triumph of God's kingdom, From Acts 14: 22 we learn that Paul encouraged the disciples to faithfully endure tribulations in order that they might enjoy the everlasting state of the kingdom. Fidelity in the kingdom now insures the blessings of the everlasting state of the kingdom, just as fidelity in this life insures a blissful everlasting life. 2 Thess. 1: 4, 5 reads; "So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and in the afflictions which ye endure; which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God; to the end that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer." This teaches that the kingdom was in existence at that time and that the Gentiles, being counted worthy of the kingdom, had been called into it. On verse 5. Macknight, in his "Epistles," comments: "This your exemplary faith and patience under persecution, we told the churches, is a demonstration of the righteous judgment of God, who counted you Gentiles worthy of the kingdom of God, into which he hath called you (1 Thess. 2: 12) and for which ye even suffer." The passage from Peter refers to entrance into the heavenly kingdom and exhorts to diligence now in the kingdom of God in order that such an entrance shall be richly supplied unto the faithful.

Having shown that there is no warrant in the New Testament for the doctrine that the kingdom has not been established and will not be until Christ comes again and sits on David's literal throne, in literal Jerusalem, with a religious preëminence given to Israel, let us refer to some scriptures that show the absurdity of such a position. If the kingdom of God was not to be established until long after the parties addressed were dead, and it may be for ten thousand years after their death, these scriptures only mock those to whom addressed. Why teach men nearly two thousand years ago that the kingdom is at hand, draws nigh; to seek first the kingdom of God; to enter the kingdom of God; that the kingdom of God is not far from you; that the kingdom shall be taken from you and given to others; that others should enter the kingdom of God before you; that the harlots shall go into the kingdom of God before you; that the kingdom of God is within you; that the Gentiles had been called into it and the Colossians translated Into it-why teach these things, when there would be no kingdom for thousands of years? Such a doctrine is an insult to God. Yet we are seriously informed by young brethren who boast of their piety and humility that Dan 2: 35, 44 were not fulfilled on Pentecost. A very inconsistent humility! Blackstone, whom I heard largely quoted and indersed in a sermon, tells us that "the kingdom, which, for these centuries, has been hid in mystery," " will be future until Jesus, 'having received the kingdom,' shall return to recompense tribulation to those who have troubled the church and 'sit in the throne of his glory." Then Christ is not on his throne and the kingdom is not here, both according to Blackstone and R. H. Boll. No wonder, if these two are correct, that Brother Jorgenson finds it difficult to believe and teach that baptized believers are in the kingdom of God. Do we find why these brethren like to delve into mysteries from the fact that Blackstone tells us the kingdom of God has been hid in mystery for these centuries? I shall cling to the simple gospel and leave severely alone the mysterious kingdom of which the Bible is silent, May God open the eyes of our young brethren which are closed by the mysteries of Adventism, and may he lead us all into the glorious light of truth.

I will ask Brother Jorgenson to give a yes or no answer to the following questions:

- 1. Do you believe the church of Christ on earth to-day and the kingdom referred to in Dan. 2: 44 are the same?
- 2. Do you believe the kingdom referred to in Dan. 2: 44 has been set up?
- 3. Do you believe Jesus is reigning to-day as the successor to David?
- 4. Do you believe that when the Savior returns he will rule over the Jews in any way differing from his rule, at that time, over the Gentiles?
- 5. Do you believe that any Jews, living in unbelief at the time of the Savior's return, will have opportunity, after he returns, to believe on and accept him as their Savior?
- 6. Do you believe that the kingdom spoken of in Dan. 2: 44 will be established before Christ comes the second time?
- 7. Do you believe the church will be caught up with Christ in the air before Christ rules in his kingdom?

The Campaign to Raise Funds to Improve David Lipscomb College.

BY E. A. E.

COMMENDATORY.

Abilene, Texas, April 7, 1919.—Brother Elam: I am writing to tell you how glad I am that you are going to make the campaign for David Lipscomb College. I hope you will make it vigorously and push it until you have every dollar that is needed for a Christian college that will give, as it does now, thorough genuine Christian service, and at the same time give work just as advanced and as good as can be given by any denominational or secular college.

It is hard enough for our young people to stay with the truth, simple worship, and pure living of Christianity in the midst of the error and wicked worldiness about them even when we make the truth just as strong, the worship just as rich, and purity of life just as beautiful as possible. We owe it to them to make it just as easy as possible for them to be loyal to our Lord. It will be hard enough, anyway.

If it is good for them to be influenced and taught as they are for the time they stay in David Lipscomb College, it will be good for them to be influenced and taught in the same way for the two additional college years and for the years given to graduate work. In fact, it is in a lot of this higher work that the greatest danger is to be found. They are going to take it somewhere. Let us give it to them under men who will guide and protect them until they are firmly and safely fixed.

May God bless you and guide you in this great work. We will never know in this world what that school has meant in Christian service. May it never lose one particle of its loyalty to the Lord and his will, and may it grow stronger in power and influence during all the days to come, is my prayer.

I cannot close without commending your article, "Colorblind as to Dress." I hope you won't quit. Keep piling up the truth of God against the glittering wickedness of so many kinds, standing ready and anxious on every hand to devour our fine boys and girls. Are our Christian homes and our congregations of Christians doing what they should do, could easily do, to protect and save them? Boys and girls are ignorant and silly and foolish many times, but they are not mean. They need to be understood, loved, trained, directed. This takes time, work, thought, and lots of patience. Too often the homes and congregations find it too much trouble and work and do not do it. It is not better boys and girls we need; it is better fathers and mothers and churches we need. And the same is true of schools. I do hope you will not quit along these lines.

Sincerely and fraternally, J. P. Sewell.

We appreciate heartily Brother J. P. Sewell's letter commending our work to make the school more useful and to enlarge its borders so as to accommodate more students.

enlarge its borders so as to accommodate more students.

Brother Sewell was a student in this school. With all the former students rallying to it in this way, we feel confident the necessary amount of money will be forthcoming.

Our aim is to keep the school in line with the purpose for which it was founded. It cannot take the place of home training or fill the mission of the church. It is nothing but a college for educating young men and young ladies for the greatest usefulness and greatest good in life.

As Brother Sewell says, when students have graduated from this college and wish to attend some university, which only a very few do, we would like for them to be able to resist the insinuating and destructive infidelity which they may meet in some universities. And as to thoroughness and advancement in literary and scientific attainments, we want this college as sound as the soundest, as good as the best, as pure as the purest, and as standard as the highest real standard.

"Kultur" with "the gentle Nazarene" left out drenched a continent in blood and shocked the civilized world. Higher education, of college or university, in our own homeland which leaves out God-the God of the Bible, the one true and living God-the gentle Nazarene, the meek and lowly PRINCE OF PEACE, and the Bible, and in any degree inculcates the military spirit is the same in kind. if not in degree, as that thing called "kultur." Why decry that thing in others and follow it ourselves? Why not learn the lesson at once in humility and submission which our God and Father would teach us? Instead, the spirit of military training pervades the schools, from the young boys' training school to the so-called Christian college and university. Why teach in school the authority of the Prince of peace and the use and power of the sword of the the Spirit and the whole armor of God and train the students in the use of deadly carnal weapons? practice as we teach.

The rule is to teach children that which they will need when grown. Then, teach them to tell the truth, to love justice, to be merciful and kind and helpful, to be sincere and honest and truthful from the heart out, to pray that integrity and uprightness may preserve them, to have some useful occupation or profession, to be industrious, to be helpful to others, to render to all their dues, to be governed in all things by correct principles, and to fill the missions for which God created both men and women. Do not teach them one thing and train them to do another. But when all these principles of truthfulness, honesty, uprightness, probity, gentle manners, good morals, usefulness, etc., are taught in any school, the Bible to that extent is taught, for they all come from the Bible as light from the sun.

Some good men seem not to know what teaching the Bible is. It seems that with them teaching the Bible is promulgating some theological dogmas and creeds of men, whether written or not, and that teaching the true principles of real manhood and gentle and beauteous womanhood is not teaching the Bible. Then, again, some think that the only thing for which the Bible is taught in school is to make preachers, as if none should know the Bible but preachers, and none should be kind and true, honest and upright, industrious and economical, faithful to God and men, but preachers.

Kind readers, when you are helping to enlarge and sustain the David Lipscomb College, you are helping—

- (1) To enlarge and sustain a college in the true meaning of that term, chartered, with an accepted curriculum, and in all a first-class literary institution.
- (2) But you are helping one which, in addition to all this, teaches the Bible as a textbook as the word of God in all its practical principles and fear of God and obedience to his will to all pupils alike.
- (3) You are helping to prepare young men and young women, therefore, for the greatest usefulness and greatest good in life.
- (4) You owe it to the rising generation especially at this critical and trying time to do this.
- (5) All you give goes directly to the improvement of the buildings and betterment of the school. The property belongs to the school, is held in trust by the directors for the good of mankind, and all donations go directly to the school and only for the good of the school.

Let all attend the meetings of the school as will be an-

All the saints have ever taught us that true humility is the groundwork of every virtue, for humility is the offspring of pure charity, it is truth itself. . . It does not consist, as some suppose, in the performance of outward acts, though in themselves they are valuable, but it consists in being what God has made us. He who prizes anything in himself is not humble; neither is he who seeks anything for himself. But he who so entirely forgets himself that he does not think about or contemplate himself; who is lowly within and never wounded; who speaks of himself as he would of another; who does not affect to be forgetting himself, while he is, in fact, thinking of nothing else; who is charitable without considering what the effect may be; who can bear to be thought lacking in humility; finally, he who is full of charity—this man is truly humble. . . The humble man gives himself up to God as clay in the potter's hand, and therein lies true humility. A truly humble man is perfectly obedient, because he has renounced his own will. He yields, unmurmuring, to all that is ordered for him. He has no self-will. He seeks nothing, asks nothing, for he knows not himself what he needs most. "Of such," Christ has said, "is the kingdom of heaven." Let us, then, bravely give up ourselves. If God does nothing with us, he is but just; for what good have we of our own? If through us he work any good, it will be his glory, and we shall say with the blessed Virgin, he hath regarded our lowliness.-Fénelon.

D. H. Jones inquires in reference to the Lord's Supper:

Have we any scripture for parting the loaf, breaking it in half, before partaking of it?

We have accounts of the institution of the Lord's Supper in Matt. 26: 26-29; Mark 14: 22; Luke 22: 19; and 1 Cor. I1: 23-25. In every occurrence the language refers to Jesus' taking bread and, after blessing or giving thanks, breaking it. This is all I know on the subject. I have seen the loaf broken in two pieces. I have seen it broken in six pieces, or as many pieces as the number of deacons who were serving at the table. I would think it a matter of convenience or expediency as to the number of parts into which the loaf should be broken after thanks have been offered.

W. C. Ramsey, Stop, Ky., sends this:

In what way did Paul become a Jew that he might gain Jews, as stated in 1 Cor. 9: 20?

The passage declares: "And to the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, not being myself under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law." Paul did not sacrifice any truth or principle of justice and right. With Jews, he lived as a Jew in order to save them. He observed their distinctions of meats, kept their feasts, and circumcised Timothy. He observed the law to save those who were under the law. To those who were without law, he did not come as an enforcer of the law of Moses. In matters not essential to salvation, such as matters of indifference, taste, and preference, he yielded in order to reach both Jew and Gentile. His purpose was to lead all to Christ.

W. I., Watters, Bogota, Texas, inquires in reference to members who absent themselves from the services of the church:

What should the elders of the church do when a member fails to attend the Lord's-day worship from time to time and has been admonished many times? How long should the body bear with a member when they know that there is absolutely no excuse for his staying away from the Lord's-day meetings? If a withdrawal is to take place, how should it be gone about?

The withdrawal of fellowship from a disorderly member should be the last resort. The purpose of withdrawal should be (1) for the salvation of the offender and (2) for the protection of the church. As Christians are under obligation to cultivate forbearance, they should be longsuffering before withdrawing from a disorderly member. The surgeon does not amputate a limb so long as there is any chance to save the patient and the limb also. He amputates the limb only when he would lose both the patient and the limb without the amputation. No rigid rule can be given as to just how long a disorderly member should be borne with. Each individual case should be dealt with according to circumstances. Some Individuals have more ability, and hence are more culpable for wrongdoing than others. If a member persists in staying away from the worship, and does so indefinitely, after repeated admonitions, he has already withdrawn himself from the church. This should be called to the attention of the membership of the church, and the elders of the church should announce his withdrawal and that he is no longer a member of the body of Christ. Further action than this is entirely unnecessary, as the disorderly member has already formally withdrawn. The church, however, before taking action, should be sure that everything possible has been done to restore the offender. The Holy Spirit admonishes: "Brethren, even if a man be overtaken in any trespass, ye who are spiritual, restore such a one in a spirit of gentleness; looking to thyself, lest thou also be tempted. Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." (Gal. 6; 1, 2.)

A subscriber sends me the following clipping, with the request that I give my idea on this question:

Rev. F. G. Dickson's subject Sunday morning at the Methodist Church will be, "What Is the Estate of the Souls of the Dead Until the Resurrection?" (Luke 16.) A cordial Invitation is extended to all to attend.

Before answering the question, I would emphasize that we should be more concerned about being among the righteous while living than about the estate of the souls of the dead until the resurrection. The man who lives right will die right and will be prepared to enjoy a blissful hereafter. We have never taken much interest in discussing the state of the righteous dead, but have tried to urge the people to so live that when they come to die they will be prepared to meet Christ in glory. Previous to the death of Christ there are several allusions in the New Testament to what is called the intermediate state. At death the good and the bad alike went into Hades. The rich man lifted up his eyes in Hades, being in torment. Christ was in Hades while his body was in the grave. Hades included both Paradise and Tartarus. Lazarus was carried by the angels to Abraham's bosom. This was but a Jewish expression for Paradise. To the penitent thief Jesus said: "Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Then we conclude that the righteous, before the resurrection and ascension of Christ, went to Paradise, which is a department of Hades, and that the wicked went to Tartarus, which is also a department of Hades. Before the ascension of Christ every passage in the word of God, both in the Old and the New Testament, that alludes to the state of the righteous dead recognizes this fact. After Christ's ascension it is not once recognized in the New Testament. It appears that Christ's death, resurrection, and ascension abolished the intermediate state and that from that time forward the righteous went immediately to Christ at death. When the faithful Stephen was put to death, he saw Jesus standing on the right hand of God, and prayed, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit," showing that he expected to go directly to Jesus. 2 Cor. 5: 1-8 teaches; "For we know that if the earthly house of our tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building from God, a house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens. . . . We are of good courage, I say, and are willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be at home with the Lord." Thus it is clearly seen that when we are absent from the body we are at home with the Lord. It shows us, then, that at death our spirits go directly to Jesus. Phil, 1: 23 also declares: "But I am in a strait betwixt the two, having the desire to depart and to be with Christ; for it is very far better." The New Testament clearly establishes the fact, and there is not a passage after the ascension that teaches to the contrary, that when the Christian dies his spirit goes to be with Jesus. This should be satisfactory to every child of God.

The total amounts received during 1918 are as follows: For Miss Sarah Andrews, $38.75; Miss Lillie Cypert, $335.36; Brother Fujimori, $47; literature, $65.70; the Sendagaya Church work, $249.66; C. The amounts reported for others do not represent all that those persons received, but only such amounts as were sent to me to be forwarded. The total amount for myself is $1,996.20. Of this, I gave $404.75 to the work, and sent $910.74 to my wife and daughter in Louisville, Ky., leaving a balance of $680.81 for my own living. Of this, I had a balance at the end of the year of (maybe) a hundred dollars.

It was stated in the letters that $131.81 of the above amounts was for my home-coming. I have put $155 on deposit to meet a payment on our sewing school for girls. If the support of the other missionaries is kept up properly, I shall have enough left to buy my ticket to San Francisco and supply me with the necessary outfit for traveling. The response of the brethren has been prompt and liberal, for which I am most grateful. The Zoshigaya church is now self-supporting. Brother Hashimoto, the elder, and the writer have charge of the church. Miss Cypert and five Japanese teachers have charge of the Sunday school. The Sunday school gave 7,22 yen to Brother Yoshihara, who is in the hospital with tuberculosis. The church also contributed 3.33 yen. The Zoshigaya Gakuin has been self-supporting all along. So both school and church are now financially independent.

A Contrast.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

Last Lord's day (March 16) the Sunday school and church meetings were unusually good. Before the time to begin about fifty children were sitting quietly in their places. As the teachers happened to be a little late, I occupied them with two songs, one of which they knew better than I did.

Brother Hashimoto spoke at the meeting for the Lord's Supper. There were about thirty present, which was a good turnout for Zoshigaya. The singing was excellent. Having labored long and hard for such results, though not yet so very large, I felt a thrill of joy that filled me, and before we parted I felt that I must add a word as follows: "I have been making a contrast between the meetings today and our first efforts when we opened work here twelve years ago. Then only half of the school building was up and we had no church building. Not a child was heard on the streets to sing a Christian song, nor scarcely any other, in those days. Well do I remember our first attempt at a Sunday school. We used one of the rooms of the school building, or intended to, but not a child would come into the house. Mr. Iida and I then took a song written on a large sheet of paper about three feet square, such as we use now, and tacked it up on the outside of the house. We got about a half dozen children to come as far as the swing in the corner of the yard. Mr. Iida explained the song and then we sang, while the children looked at each other and wondered. Not one would join us. That was our beginning twelve years ago; but this morning I was met by fifty children, all in the house and quietly waiting to begin. And so well did they know the song that they even taught me, carrying me over the points I did not know. Then there was not a church member; now there are fifty names on the record, and this morning's service was a genuine inspiration."

Moving Pictures.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

Brother Hiratsuka has been confined to his bed about a month with influenza, but is now able to be up again. With the bad January weather, it has broken out anew in Japan and is said to be more fatal than at the first.

There are said to be twenty-five thousand primary schools in Japan and fifteen hundred and seventy of higher grade. They contain over a million students. Comparatively few of these schools exclude Christian literature. Many of them ask for it.

Already many friends have written me, giving me a warm invitation to the churches and a cordial welcome to their homes. This is encouraging and is very much appreciated. I shall most gladly follow up these invitations as far as the circumstances and the time at my disposal will allow.

Spirit of the Press

The Texas Mammon of Righteousness.

A church that refuses to grow rich is naturally the object of wondering comment. The Merriman Baptist Church, at Ranger, Texas, discovered oil beneath its property, and is put in the way of dealing with the plutocratic temptation. It derives from wells sunk on its land a comfortable income which it distributes in charity. It refuses a cool million for boring privileges in the adjacent churchyard. The congregation, says an Associated Press dispatch from Fort Worth, limited to twenty-nine members, has voted that none shall personally profit by its good fortune, but that the entire income "shall be devoted to the glory of God." Already it has distributed one hundred thousand dollars among Baptist institutions in the State. The stand regarding the cemetery seems, according to the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, to be not as firm as the press dispatch conveys. It charitably observes that "few religious congregations have ever been placed in a dilemma" such as faces the Ranger people: "According to press dispatches the offer was refused, but it is intimated in news from other sources that the congregation is not a unit in this refusal. Some of the members argue that no desecration would be involved in turning the graveyard over to the oil operators, if the bodies interred there were first removed to some spot less desirable as an oil location."

Perhaps such a view as that of the Louisville Times will later come to prevail with the tempted flock: "The twentynine members of the Merriman Baptist Church, at Ranger, Texas, have shown a very commendable spirit in refusing to profit by the oil dividends the church draws from leases on the churchyard, but perhaps they are a trifle academic in their attitude toward the little cemetery that adjoins the church, and for leases on which oil interests have offered one million dollars. The church property is entirely surrounded by oil wells, and It seems that those who lie in the graveyard would be better off if removed to some land not troubled by the continuous clank of the drilling rigs. The church, it seems, now draws two hundred thousand dollars per year from its interest in oil wells sunk upon its property. Ranger, as is generally known-especially to those interested in oil—is a bonanza, the town being virtually honey-combed with producing wells. As remarked, the church is surrounded by wells, as is the burying ground; and it would seem the part of good judgment all around to remove the dust of those who sleep behind the church to some more quiet spot, give over the entire property to the production of oil, and worship at a better distance from the greasy appurtenances of industry. Assuredly the cause of God would prosper with the dividends to accrue from that same industry."

Another observer from Rochester, The Post-Express, does not miss the opportunity for the spiritual lesson in the example, and applauds it accordingly: "Any one who knows the probable financial status of a church of twentynine members in a rural community of two or three hundred people will realize at once that no ordinary temptation was resisted when they voted that no one of them should personally profit by the oil flow, but that the entire income should be devoted to the activities and institutions of their church. Wiser thus was their decision than that of the opulent ruler in Israel who found himself worrying about the future. The prospect of treasures in heaven appealed to him strongly, yet his treasure on earth was a bird in the hand; so he departed sorrowfully to think it over, seeming not to have come back, and all we know about him is the moral the incident points. It is true that this little group had, as he did not, the impressive statement about the camel and the needle's eye to help them to right conclusions. Nevertheless, it must be admitted that their action gives the country one of the most extraordinary instances of self-denial and genuine ardor for right-eousness on record. Certainly this little group of believers seem to take the teaching literally and seriously; and if this be that foretold time when it was to be asked if faith should be found on earth, the question is answered in the affirmative, for the little Texas hamlet has an excellent brand of it to show."—Literary Digest.

World Prohibition Next.

"World Prohibition" is now the watchword of the tem perance forces of America. This is the logical expression of a great movement both because we appreciate the blessings of prohibition and because the world through the war has been made a vast neighbrhood. National isolation is ended. International interests overlap. The welfare of one nation is now the welfare of all. The world, therefore, must become one school, one social community, one human solidarity, one Christianized family dwelling together in mutual respect, confidence, and peace. We cannot avoid our relations and obligations to other peoples if we would, and surely we are in constant danger of the effects of after-the-war immigration if they come to our land. If they have already given us one-tenth of our population. so changing radically our social ideals, a further influx from Europe means our laws favoring temperance and sobriety may be really jeopardized. Merely as a means of making our prohibition law effective, we must see to it that our future immigrant populations are free from blood stain through long use of alcoholic liquors. This means that the gospel of temperance must be preached to all the world. The temperance missionary must accompany the church missionary. As it is now, the work of missions is retarded and made incalculably more difficult because of the degrading influence of liquour in mission lands. The people of Africa and China and South America must be rescued from this bondage before they can enjoy to the fullest degree the blessings of the gospel.

Under these conditions one cannot feel altogether patient with England. Surely a people so great will not long postpone a movement so radical and effective as we have experienced at home. Into this field, also, temperance leaders must go to help them solve this question and to enter into the fruits of so great a social regeneration.

In brief, we now know that drink is a world question just as war is a world question. Like the gospel, world prohibition is a world necessity, and its realization is a present and immediate opportunity along with world democracy, world peace, and world evangelization. To this task it behooves the disciples of Christ to bring their best resources of treasure and men.—L. E. Sellers, in World Call.

Joy Cometh in the Morning.

Just as the mighty waves of ocean break
Where God hath set their bound upon the shore, Break Sorrow's waves; and back their fury take,
What time God saith, "No more."

Just as the light-bestowing Sun appears
At his set time, Night's empire to destroy,
So, on the long-enduring night of tears,
Rises a morn of joy.

Believe this, while the billows round thee roar;
Believe it, when thou sitt'st in deepest night;
Listen to hear the Voice that salth, "No more,"
And watch to see the light.

Brother Elam greatly endeared himself to us by his humble and kindly manner, his godly walk and conversation, and his unfelgned faith in God and his word. He stayed only eight days, but his visit will long be remembered. The attendance and interest were fine, No additions,"

From C. C. Merritt, Davis City, lowa, April 26: "There are several members of the church fiving at Delaware, Ky., who desire to have the gospel preached in their community, and they have asked me to assist them in getting the work done. Lowry, of Winchester, and J. M. Dennis, of Kuttawa, will begin a meeting at Stop about the first of August; J. W. Grant, of Nashville, Tenn., will begin at Stop on the second Lord's day in September. From M. S. Mason, Rogersville, Mo., April 30: "Since writing I have filled my regular appointments, and also preached on the fifth Sunday at Bona, in Dade County. J. W. Dollison stopped with us en route to Rocky Comfort, McDonald County, for a meeting on the nights of April 21, 22. He also stopped at Springfield the next two nights. He did very effective work at both places. The work is progressing satisfactorily in this field. Rogersville seems to be greatly on the mend at present. A. N. Phipps is conducting a singing school here now, which is very successful. I was at Masters, in Cedar County, last Lord's day; will be at Springfield next Lord's day."

From E. D. Shelton, Fayette City, Penn., P. O. Box 275, May 1: "Beginning on April 13, J. H. McBroom, of Rogersville, Ala., was with the church of Christ at Fayette City during a series of meetings, which lasted until the night of April 27. The interest was good throughout the meeting. Many expressed a desire that they continue another week. Brother McBroom preached the truth of God boldly and fearlessly, yet with meekness and love. He made many friends while in Fayette City, not only among the members of the church, but among outsiders as well. As a result of these meetings and some preparations beforehand, there was one who came from the Mormons (or Latter-Day Saints) and one who came from the Methodists saying they desired to be Christians only. Nine were baptized. Four others made the good confession on Sunday night, at the last service, and will be baptized next Sunday night. There is a bright future for the church here. Pray for us."

Lake City, April 28.—I have just returned from Taylor County, where I have been for a ten-days' meeting with the church at Spring Warrior, in which, we trust, much good was done. persons were baptized into Christ, God having used me to this end, also to the edification of the body. This is an old congregation, perhaps thirty years old; and while the membership is small now, since its beginning much good has been done and many souls have been brought to Christ through its influence. From there I went to another point ten miles away, where I have labored some be-fore and succeeded in gathering in a few who are struggling against many odds to worship God as the books directs. I preached three sermons to an appreciative people, for odds to worship God as the Book of is practically a mission point, and I expect to return and help to strengthen the work there soon. I am doing all can to place the dear old standard bearer, the Gospel Advocate, in the homes of Christians; for I believe it to be one of the best visitors to enter the homes of God's people, also one of the best and cheapest missionaries among the unsaved when placed in their homes by Christians, May It ever live!-J. O. Barnes.

Tennessee.

Decherd, April 30.-I have just closed a good meeting at Whitwell. Twelve were baptized and twelve confessed their wrongs. The church was very much edified. Brother Perry Young is much edified. Brother Perry Young is the leader of this congregation. He is a loyal Christian and is always found at his post of duty. I made my home with Brother and Sister Herbert Reader. I will go back there for a meeting next year, the Lord willing.— R. E. L. Taylor.

Texas.

Temple, April 28 .- I am still in a meeting with home forces. The meeting is one week old, with twenty-five added. The congregation here has a "mind to work." I have never labored with a church that has accomplished so much in so short a time. On April 1 I began work with the church; so please note my change of address to Box 311, Temple, Texas.—Wilbur H.

Cleburne, Texas, April 28 .- The Central church of Christ at this place has just closed quite a good meeting of fifteen days' duration. The preaching was done by my brother, R. D. Smith. of Terrell, Texas, and It was very satisfactorily done. He is not, strictly speaking, argumentative, yet he is clear in his presentation, and always earnest in his appeals and exhortations. He preaches to the hearts of the people, as well as to their heads, in common parlance. There were twenty-two baptisms, and one placed her membership with us. This brings our membership up almost to six hundred, and the members are at peace and the church in good working order,—G. Dallas Smith.

Treckles-

There is a very effective way to remove freekles and make the skin clear and beautiful. It is in this way that Kintho Cream gradually gets rid of the old, freckled skin, and gives a soft, clear, white, youthful and beautiful skin, which of course should have no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed, and your freekles should begin to disappear in a day or two. It is well to get a cake of Kintho Soap also, as this helps to keep the freckles away, once Kintho has removed them.

Medicated Smoke

Dr. Blosser, a respected physician, and for forty-four years an enormously successful specialist in Catarrh, is the originator of a combination of medical herbs, flowers and herries, to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. In the process of smoking this vapor reaches the air passages of the head, nose and throat, when inhaled, AS SHOWN IN THE ACCOMPANY-

ING ILLUSTRATION. The warm, healing, antiseptic vapor is carried directly to the very parts affected. Dr. Blosser's Remedy fights and kills the catarrhal germs where liquids, sprays, douches, salves and medicated creams cannot possibly go. His Remedy is pleasant, simple and convenient, so it may be used at home by man, woman or child. It is entirely harmless, CONTAINS NO TOBACCO or habit forming drugs. No matter how severe or long-standing your case may be, you should know what this Remedy will do for you.

SEND TEN GENTS FOR TRIAL SUPPLY

Buffalo, Box 81, April 29.—Last Lord's day was a busy day for us here. I was at Bethel, six miles east of here, and Brother George E. Hypes was at Fairview Schoolhouse, eight miles southwest of here. He reports good audiences and good attention at every meeting. The indications are that we will be able to report some more baptisms soon. At some mission points we must clear away the rubbish and create a sentiment in favor of the truth before we can expect additions. Brother Hypes has a large family of little children to support; and in send-ing personal help to me, you might add something for him, or you can address him personally. His address is Buffalo, W. Va., Route 1. If any weak congregation—not too far away—needs teaching, and will do their duty financially and otherwise to the extent of their ability, we are ready to help them to the extent of our ability. But we are not able to pay car fare and other traveling expenses in order to reach places where brethren are not willing to do something for them-selves, and especially so when there is so much mission work to be done nearer home. Surely the brethren in any locality where there are a few members can keep up the Lord's-day meetings; and they will do it, if they are true to Christ. Personally I will need all the help I can get this spring and summer, but I cannot give details at present. Let us all work for God.—F. P. Fonner. is so much mission work to be done

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. The Many Mysteries of Nature

BY L. W. BOWER, M. D.

You can take an onion seed and a pansy seed, and plant them side by side in the same spot of ground. In one case, you get an onion, with its peculiarly strong odor, and in the other you get a flower of are beauty. You can plant a poppy seed and get opium (a dangerous, habit-forming grug), or you can plant a rhubarb seed and get something that helps constipation. No scientist, living or dead, can explain these mysteries of Nature. Behind the invisible life germ in each seed is hidden the deep secret that nobody understands. Everything growing out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing natural conditions. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He naturally best for women's diseases. He earned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Dr. Plerce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening Irains, bearing-down pains, periodical irregularities pelvic inflammations and for regularities, pelvic inflammations, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of lady's slipper root, black cohosh root, unicorn root, blue sohosh root and Oregon grape root. Women who take this standard remedy know that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it.

Favorite Prescription should have the full confidence of every woman in America because it contains no alcohol and no narcotic. Dr. Pierce knew, when he first made this standard medicine, that whiskey and morphine are injurious, and so he has always kept them out of his remedies. CHURCH NEWS

District of Columbia.

Washington, April 21.-The services here yesterday were full of spiritu-ality and joy. There were more than ality and joy. There were me a hundred in attendance. We so much enjoyed having Brother and Sister A. B. Comer, of Nashville, Tenn., with us. Brother Comer's earnest prayer and encouraging talk filled us with new hopes and determination to push on in the good beginning. Please remember that the building site for the new house of worship is free of debt and we are anxious to begin the building. The first Lord's day in May (May 4) has been set for one united effort to raise the means to begin the building. We kindly ask all the churches in the States to give the offering of that day. May God bless you in doing so. Make it "Washington Day." One united effort of the brotherhood will do a great work for the cause we love. Let us hear from all .- W. S. Long.

Kentucky.

Franklin, April 22.—Our meeting starts well here. We began Sunday with good crowds, and last night the audience was very good. I hope to do some good in the meeting. I mean to make a special effort to eradicate all this visionary stuff about the kingdom from the membership of the church, and hope I may succeed, at least, in removing some of it. I would be glad to be able to say that the church is fully united and anchored on the truth when the meeting is concluded. Brother Moore will be with us quite a bit, and I hope he may have oppor-tunity to consider the question more. Brother Neal Hannah is here conduct-ing the song service. It is needless to say that he is doing it well. He has made a good reputation already that will help to advertise the meeting.-H. T. King.

Oklahoma.

Isabella, April 19 .- I am glad to announce that, as a humble instrument in the Master's hand, I have buried four more souls with the Lord in baptism. The meeting at Lacy is now history. The brethren there were good to me. I love them. This evening I shall begin services here .- J. A. Hud-

Comanche, April 13.—Brother Wilkinson went to Waurika yesterday to fill his monthly appointment there today. The church here is making up a contribution for Brother Tice Elkins and will send it to him shortly. Brother Wilkinson has at last received from the printer his new book. "The Great World War in Prophecy." It has been mailed to all who ordered If any have not received it who had ordered it, let them notify us at once. We desire to thank all those who made advance orders for it, for without these orders we would not have been able to print it. For the rest of this mouth I will send the book, "Infidelity Against Itself," and his new book, "The Great World War in Prophecy," also his latest poem, "Oklahoma at St. Mihiel," all for one

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says Inside-bathing makes any. one look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness. while the bowel pores do.

For every cunce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day, it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases, and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream through the lymph ducts, which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases, and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire allmentary canal be-fore putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make any one an enthusiast on inside bathing. and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head, or have furred tongue, bad tasts, nasty breath, sallow complexion, and others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach, or constipation, are assured of pro-nounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

How Shiver Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism.

According to the standard medical books, rheumatism is not a germ disease, but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate, and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart, and other organs. To relieve rheumatism, it is, therefore, necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe It. If you suffer with rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder, or liver, uric-acid poisoning, or any condition due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, inclose the amount, and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring, Box 21B, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your offer and inclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send; and if it falls to benefit my case, you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

Indian Mound, April 29.—The work of faith in this county has a very promising future. Last night I began a series of meetings here in the Free will Baptist Church. Some one said that it had been twenty-five years since Christian minister had preached here. Fine interest and an excellent prospect of accomplishing much good for primitive Christianity — William P. Walker

Cleveland, April 21.—The services here yesterday were marked by much interest despite the fact that several of the members were out on account of sickness-renewed epidemic of the Two were restored to the fellowship of the church. One of the features of special interest was the presence of Brother W. C. Phillips, just ence of Brother W. C. Phillips, just-out from the sanitarium at Chatta-nooga. We hope and pray that he may fully recover soon and be able to take up his work. It is so much needed. On the second Lord's day in this month I began a short meeting at the courthouse in Benton. There is no congregation there. We found is no congregation there. We found and learned of eight members, all told, within reach of that place. The attendance was all that we expected. The teaching was new to the people and the prejudice was strong against our people; but we got the attendance, attention, and respect of some of the best people of the town, and we bemuch prejudice was removed. In the main, the people treated us very courteously and kindly. While there, I visited the jail and preached to about sixteen or twenty prisoners. I have premised to see that the people at Benton get preaching occasionally and that they get another meeting later. I do wish that some of our congregations that are at ease in Zion could see, learn, and feel as I do in regard to this needy field.—George W. Farmer.

Selfishness and Thoughtlessness Keep Souls in Darkness.

BY H. L. RICHARDSON.

How a person can be a Christian and have no live interest in making Christians of other lost souls, I cannot very well see.

The desire to save souls may be rather weak within us; but we should recognize that desire as worthy, then feed, foster, and stimulate it till it bears glorious fruit. Do not allow it to wither and die. Our own eternal salvation depends on our interest in our Heavenly Father's business.

I venture that not one of us meant to be careless, thoughtless, or selfish when we became Christians. But the devil deludes some of us into centering our minds upon our own selfish affairs of this life; and a selfish, vain hope grows in the heart, of getting all that is worth while out of Christianity without putting anything worth while into it. But if you hope to get eternal life out of it, you must put your present life into it.

Without any selfish purpose, the habit of thoughtlessness appears to have grown on some. The really earnest, ever-present necessity of thinking, studying, investigating, and meditating upon Bible themes, live issues, the condition of the church, or the rescuing of the perishing, has not taken hold of their being. They did not have to find the solutions to religious problems, or be ready to give answer to every one who asked why they turned from that large popular sectarian body to the plain and humble church of Christ. Their parents have fought the battles for them. The need for continual personal study is not readily apparent, and consequently the earnest desire to save souls, resulting from personal study, is lacking. They can scarcely conceive of themselves being in darkness, because that from a babe they have been instructed concerning the way of salvation as the apostles originally taught it. They have become accustomed to the fact that most of their school chums did not understand it that way. The age of hustling for pleasure and then hustling for business is upon them, and their time and attention is so fully occupied that the thought of personal responsibility for the blood of the lost is choked or smothered, Preaching brother, and you who read these papers, it is up to you to prepare frequently a stirring message for the "not a few" who "sleep." There is abundance of wealth among our brethren to support a much greater work than is being done, and they should be busy laying up their treasures in heaven.

Young Christians, why stand ye here all the day idle? Were the souls all saved before you were converted? Is the fight of faith all finished? Are the victories all won? Surely there is some way that you can use these passing moments, and the dimes and dollars you needlessly waste, to interest some soul in the message; to fit and improve yourself for soul-saving; and to help some Christian, who is more devoted to the cause than yourself, in the greatest work in the world.

Every Christian must plan his course, and work his plan, to make his own life count for saving souls.

Most Effective and Economical.

An expert pharmacist says that the best treatment he knows of for those whose blood is poor, nerves weak, livers torpid, or whose systems are generally run down, is Hood's Sarsaparllla before eating, Peptiron after eating, and Hood's Pills as necessary.

The ingredients of these medicines are indicated, he says, in most cases of blood impurities, nervousness, paleness, constipation, and are prescribed every day by physicians who have long known their efficacy. They are put up for physicians in preparations whose formulas are similar to those of Hood's Sarsaparilla, Peptiron, and Hood's Pills; but these already prepared medicines so combine them as to have superlative merit and to be the most effective and economical preparations in which to take them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, Peptiron, and Hood's Pills are products of the C. I. Hood Company, Lowell, Mass., and form their Triple Combination Treatment.

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

SALTS IF BACKACHY AND KIDNEYS HURT

Drink Lots of Water and Stop Eat-ing Meat for a While if Your Bladder Troubles You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region, it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you must relieve them -like you relieve your bowels-removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

There is One fighting for us who is brooding over the waste and the void of our present civilization, one whose hands were pierced and whose brow was lacerated by human experience. He knows it all, because he, the great God, voluntarily subjected himself to all the austerities and disciplines and penalties which he had ordained for the world of sinful man, He is moving to and fro among us. He is gathering together in his hand all the tangled threads and weaving them into a new and wonderful tapestry; or, to change the simile, he is presiding over the birth of a new world. He is saying: "Behold, I make all things new." And we who are suffering in these birth pangs of a new world will not allow ourselves to be belittled by self-pity, but with the splendor of self-devotion to God will march onward and forward until God has finished the one incomplete thing in his workshop-human life-and has brought it up to the perfection of his ideal. O God of nations, who through thy prophets of old bast foretold a day when the armaments of war shall be beaten into the implements of peace, hasten, we beseech thee, the fulfillment of this thy sure promise; quell the haughty cries of the nations; scatter the peoples that delight in war; and speedily bring us out of our present confusion into the order and righteousness of thy kingdom; through Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace, our Savior. Amen.-Bishop Brent.

"What Ails the World?"

FOUND AT LAST!

A strange and surprising book, flaming with imagery like a moving picture from Adam to Woodrow Wilson, shows the real cause of all sin and sorrow. There is nothing like it in all the world of literature!

The leading character was present when God made Adam, and as a witness of events from then to now he visits a pastor at midnight and relates the vivid story that unfolds the mystery of groaning ages; also plains that because of desecration, Sabbath was hid from men when the sun stood still, and found in Sunday after "crucifixion Wednesday."

It clears many difficult Scriptures, reveals the cure of ills that mark the bloody path of nations, and shows our education ideas are about as correct as farming was a hundred years ago; but It sees better things for the coming age. In many places the book goes from house to house among readers eager to know its story. A large, new edition reduces the price to $1.10, if ordered direct from York Bookstore, Box 84G, York, S. C. To Stop Falling Hair.

The cause of baldness, hair falling out, loss of luster and color, is found in the roots of the hair itself. Our hair is but a portion of our body, and, like the other organs, cannot subsist without food. The hair finds its food in the fat layer of skin next to the When this source of food is skull. stopped or impeded, out comes the hair. The dreaded disease, dandruff, is a germ. It collects on the bottom of the hair and eats away its life. The hair sack from which the hair comes is embedded in the layer of under skin. When the scalp is diseased and the hair falls out, often this small hair sack closes. Eventually, as a result of the dandruff germs, baldness comes. The proper method of restoring the hair and stopping the falling out must necessarily be in the destruction of the dandruff germs and in the reopening of the little hair sacks. Furthermore, in order to rejuvenate the scalp and make the growth of new hair more vigorous, it is necessary that the system be able to furnish an abun-dance of hair food. Many artificial methods have been tried in restoring the hair, which were only surface remedies, and, failing to reach the small hair sacks, were unsuccessful. opening the hair sack allows the new hair to grow. Calvacura begins at the root of the trouble, and its use is, therefore, advised. Its mission is to feed the new hair as well as the old and rid the scalp of all dandruff germs. By thus cleansing and rejuvenating the entire scalp, a healthy growth of hair is assured. Falling of hair is stopped; new life and color to dead, gray hair is developed, and the hair is developed, and the hair is developed. becomes smooth and velvety. It is not an unpleasant treatment, and takes only a few minutes of time each day for about six week. The Union Laboratory, 214 109th Street, Bing-hamton, N. An Appeal for the Church at 2 馬のこ Fort Smith, Ark,線序 二

We, the members of the Park Hill congregation of the church of Christ, were set in order last February by Brother W. T. Kidwell, of Dallas, Texas. There were thirty-three members at that time, but some two or three have been added since. We are building a new meetinghouse. We paid four hundred dollars for the lot and laid a good concrete foundation. We then borrowed sixteen hundred dollars from a building and loan company. Altogether these few brethren, who are poor financially, depending on day labor for support, have raised something near one thousand dollars, or possibly near twelve hundred dellars. We figured our building to cost two thousand dollars. We have the frame up, roof on, and floor down. Since starting the building, we see that it will take at least three thousand dollars to complete it. We lack nearly six hundred dollars having enough to finish it. As stated, we are poor financially and have about reached our limit, as we are supporting a preacher for half time and paying twenty-five dollars a month on our loan. We now come to the brethren for help. realize that call after call is being made by others for help on meetinghouses, etc. All are worthy calls, no doubt; yet few who are calling have made the sacrifice that these disciples have made. We do not like to impose on the brotherhood too much; hence, we have done what we could before making this appeal. We wish to state now that this will be our last appeal. Could you not set aside at least one Lord's day's contribution for this work? We have stated facts as they are, and submit them for your careful and prayerful consideration. May we count on you? Our attendance at all services is increasing from time to time, and we believe-have good reasons to believe-that, with our house finished, we will soon have a membership of a hundred or more. Help us, and the Lord will bless you. Send contributions to S. A. Lynch, Circuit Court Clerk, Box 306, Fort Smith, Ark, [Signed] H. B. Moran, J. G. Maner, J. W. Wilson, elders.

We, the undersigned, have worshiped with the above-named congregation; we know them to be loyal and that the restrictive clause is in the deed; and we believe you will be helping a worthy cause. Help them to-day.

It is easy. Get the cafarrh out of your system. That is your trouble, Catarrh is sapping your vitality by upsetting the work of nutrition. Your food is not digesting properly. It is passing through the digestion tract without the nourishment being extracted. What you eat is largely wasted. Fort Worth, April 28.—The meeting conducted by home forces at the Central church of Christ closed last night. We all enjoyed it, and a splendid spirit permeates the body. There were thirteen baptisms, two restorations, and three by membership.—J. W. Dunn.

Childress, April 24.-I am happy to tell the brethren that our doctor now says that there is now some hopes for the recovery of my wife. He says she is showing splendid signs of improvement, and that if no serious complications arise I can safely leave home again by the first of July. But I write this to let all know that they will not have to support me in idleness much longer. If any church where I was engaged has not made arrangements for a preacher, hold the meeting for me, and I believe now I may get there, I hope this is not asking too much. However, if you think it unsafe to do this, I will bear the loss as well as I can and look for work elsewhere. I have a fine garden and some chickens, and we are getting help enough at present to get along very well. I need your prayers and what work you may have for me when I am free again to go. I am proud that I was able to come home and wait on my wife, but we will both be glad when I can go to work again. I am trying to keep out of debt, but already owing a great deal, that is hurting me; but, God helping me, I will get to it after awhile. Let those churches that will hold their meetings for me write me at once and let me know. Since last report we have received the following amounts from brethren and sisters to help us during wife's affliction: From the church at Comanche, Okla., $5,90; J. N. Hieronymus, Illinois, $5; Elmer Wright, Oklahoma, $25; R. Thompson, Oklahoma, $2; Miss Addie Travers, Arkansas, $5; Francis Quinley, Ohio, $2; "a late 'flu gift." $1; church at Charlie, Texas, $17,50; P. E. Adams, Texas, $5; Sister Wilson, Comanche, Okla., $6; church at Kootenay Bay, B. C., $6; Mrs. F. J. Bickford, Tennessee, $1; B. T. Burks, Arkansas, $1; Sister W. P. Willis, Tennessee, $1; Brother Rowe, Cincinnati, Ohio, $1$. during wife's affliction: From the Brother Rowe, Cincinnati, Ohio, $18. Our wants are being cared for in a very good style, and we extend our heartfelt thanks to the brotherhood at large for the noble manner in which they are showing that our Heavenly Father never forgets his own. God bless you all. Now, I have an abun-dance of gospel tracts, my review of B. M. Bogard's "One Hundred Reasons for Not Being a Campbellite," at fifteen cents each, $1.25 per dozen; also my tract on "Foot Washing in the Church," same price. I was a "foot washer" for several years, and I know the arguments in favor of it, and I have refuted every one of them. Send me the price for them and put them to work, and it will help me. If I can weather the storms for three months longer, I will again be in the field, I have reasons to believe.—Tice Elkins.

Assist Nature.—There are times when you should assist nature. It is now undertaking to cleanse your system. If you will take Hood's Sarseparilla, the undertaking will be successful. This great medicine purifies and builds up as nothing else does.

Horse Cave, April 29 .- I have been silent for some time, but by no means silent for some time, but by no means idle. I have been preaching Sundays only, but shall begin a meeting with the Hickory Grove church of Christ, near Lecta, to-morrow night. I am giving a fourth of my time to each of the following places this year: Mount Vernon church of Christ, Fairview church of Christ, Coral Hill church of Christ, and the church of Christ at Willow Shade, Fifth Sundays are given to the faithful few at Slick Rock. All of these places are near my home, and I find a lot of work that home, and I find a lot of work that must be done. Let me say that the work at Coral Hill is growing. We have the new meetinghouse completed. Best of all, it is paid for, and without the aid of the society machine, too. The Lord willing, I shall hold some meetings in destitute places this summer. Brethren, do not let the preachers do all the mission work this year. Help them, and the Lord will bless you in so doing.—Emmett G.Creacy.

Why Lack of Iron In The Blood May Be Costing You Money Every Day

Many a Capable Man or Woman Falls Just Short of Winning Because They Don't

Back Up Their Mentality With Physical Strength and Energy.

Get some of the money—don't let the other fellow have it all—just because you are too weak, nervous and run-down to go after it with the same vim that gets him what he wants. Make yourself a man of blood and iron—a woman of power and vitality.

"Many a capable man or woman falls just short of winning because they don't back up their mentality with the physical strength and energy which come from having pienty of iron in the blood" says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Rellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York and the Westchester County Hospital, "Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weaking, nervous, Irritable, easily fatigued but it utterly robs him of that virile force, that stamina, and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life it may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable. To help make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxited fron. It often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time."

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended by physicians and which is now being used by over three million people armuality, is not a secret remeds, but one which is well-known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic fron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Edifying as the Need May Be

Paul's Summing Up.

When Paul wrote his second letter to Timothy, his earthly life was practically closed. He had nearly reached the end of his long and heroic struggle, and now he gives us a brief epitome of his achievements in three concise statements: "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith." In the first statement he makes use of a metaphor. The original Greek does not restrict his meaning to a fight only, but includes any competitive contest for supremacy, such as wrestling, boxing, leaping, or racing. But we must not fail to observe the fact that his is a good contest in the sense that, however legitimate and honorable these other things might be, the Christian's unswerving devotion to the cause of Christ is the most glorious service in which one can possibly be engaged. The one word which most thoroughly characterizes the Christian life is not "watch," although watchfulness is constantly enjoined; it is not "pray," although "the prayer of a righteous man availeth much;" it is not "work," although "faith without works is dead." It is the word seized upon by the apostle Paul: it is "fight." I made this point in a sermon some years back, and an old farmer began to feel around for his hat, and, leaning over to the brother on the bench beside him, he said: "I am not going to stay and listen to that man. He is one of those fightin' Campbellites, and he is just getting ready to deliver one of their fightin' sermons." I hope no reader will misconstrue my usage of this word. I only want to emphasize the thought that was once set forth by the lamented Roosevelt when he said: "The religion of Jesus Christ is not the religion of a weakling or coward, but it is a religion of constant and heroic endeavor."

"I Have Fought a Good Fight."

The man who obeys the gospel in the right spirit is the man who does things. The most stirring, the most forceful, and the most truthful figure of his activity in all this world is that of battle-a fight, and a fight to the finish. The Christian's warfare is not carnal. He has nothing to do with great marshaling of forces by which men's blood is shed. Jesus said to Pilate: "My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews." It was not expedient for his servants to fight even for the life of the Son of God. But it is not only right, but it is eminently necessary, that every Christian should "fight the good fight of the faith " and " lay hold on the life eternal;" that he "suffer hardship, . . . as a good soldier of Christ Jesus." It is important that he put on the whole armor of God, that he may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil: for "our wrestling is not against flesh and blood, but against the principalities, against the powers, against the world rulers of this darkness, against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places."

It has been frequently remarked that there is nothing worth having in this world that is not worth fighting for. I am willing to admit this statement without a single equivocation, if by fighting for a thing the inference is that there is a clean, manly, honorable contest without injury to Christian character. But the trouble is, we engage in so many fights where there is nothing to be gained except our own selfish ends. And whatever may be the object of our aspirations, whether political honors or educational or athletic honors, we should bear in mind this fact: that if we lose Christ, we eventually lose all that is worth the striving. For he himself asked the question: "What shall It profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" 0 0 0

"I Have Finished the Course."

Employing another metaphor, the apostle Paul makes his second statement: "I have finished the course." There is the figure of the race course where not horses, but men, are the contestants. Paul, the runner, had continued without stopping until he reached the goal. A great many people look upon the Christian religion as a spasmodic religion in its effects upon their lives and conduct. Christian service, they seem to think, is an intermittent sort of thing. They take it up for a while, and then suddenly they drop it and lapse back into their former sins. This kind of Christians are those who make the matter of church attendance a matter of inclination and convenience. If the sun shines bright and the day is pleasant, they go; or if it is some special occasion, as, for instance, a revival service or the appearance of some new preacher, they go; but let it be a dark and cloudy day, or let it be an ordinary occasion, just the celebration of the Lord's Supper, and they make no effort to come. Does that remind you of running a race? Does it even suggest finishing a course? Suppose a horse entered in a mile race should get a good start and run at a splendid gait for a quarter of a mile and then suddenly stop and begin to nibble the grass along the track, what would you think about his antics? You would likely say, "He hasn't been well trained;" and this, no doubt, would be the right explanation. The apostle Paul would train us, by his words and by his example. to keep right on until we reach the goal; not to stop, not to falter, but to run "the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." 0 0 0

"I Have Kept the Faith."

In the third statement Paul drops the metaphor and tells us in plain words: "I have kept the faith." It is very fortunate that he uses this unmistakable expression, "kept the faith;" for if he had only mentioned the fight and the race, preachers who delight to speak in figures and read in metaphors might have taken some undue advantage of his final declaration. But he does not desire to be misunderstood. He does not run the risk of using too general terms. Summing up all of his experiences, recounting all his trials. and recalling all of his victories, he says: "I have kept the faith." Notice the article, "the faith." It is not his Baptist faith, his Presbyterian faith, his old-fashioned Methodism, his Campbellite doctrine; but, "I have kept Our minds immediately refer back to that passage in the Ephesian letter where he says: "There is one Lord, one faith, one baptism." So long as the apostle Paul preached, he taught this dectrine of Christian unity; so long as he lived, he recognized but one faith; so that when he comes to die it is peculiarly appropriate that he glorify that faith in the last great product of his mind. But how had he kept the faith? (1) He had kept the faith by preaching it. His message to the Romans was his message to all: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." His manner of presentation as described to the Corinthians was his manner at every place. (2) He had kept the faith by showing confidence in it in the face of the bitterest of trials and persecutions. The list is so long that I cannot repeat it here. Read it for yourselves in his letters. (3) He had kept the faith by defending it against error. For the sake of its truth he had withstood the apostle Peter to his face; for the sake of its honor he had challenged the veracity and sincerity of his false Judaizing brethren; and now for the sake of its undying influence he is ready to lay down his life at the hands of a Roman despot.

Only those who, like Paul, have completed the work which Christ has given them to do are entitled to use these triumphant words concerning themselves. Only those who keep the faith by steadfast obedience to the teachings of God's word, who defend that word against superstition and error, can die like him.

It Must Be Sweet to Live.

BY MRS. C. W. MARTIN.

(Written in appreciation of the Gospel Advocate.)
It must be sweet to live, if just to make

This old world better, gladder, for thy part; To talk and write on themes that must awake A chord of music in another heart,

And send to some dark corner of the earth
The gospel message: one encouraging word,
Like tiny seeds, might waken into birth
And riven to a harvest for the Lord.

The earnest prayer, through His divine control, May bring a blessing, some one to reclaim; Or just to offer one poor thirsting soul The "cup of cold water" in His name.

It must be sweet to touch or so attune
To love, and peace, and harmony divine,
This throbbing, pulsing world; sweet to commune
With other hearts and lives akin to thine,

And thus from life's dull care to bring release: In rounding all to sweet, harmonious rhythm, World-weary souls may seek the heavenly peace, And know to give the glory all to Him.

God May Be Seen Through the Beauties of Creation. BY H. LEO BOLES.

All the works of man bear the impress of man's mind, hand, and character. The purpose, plan, and design of human efforts are seen in the finished product of man's work. Man may be seen and judged by his work. "A carpenter is known by his chips." This is equally true in regard to God. He may be seen in all his handiwork; or, putting it in another way, the works of God bear silent, yet certain, evidence of his character, attributes, and wisdom. The closer we study the works of God, the more clearly we can see God in them; and the more closely we come in touch with the works of God in nature, the more closely do we draw to God in grace.

Beauty is a part of nature. God is the God of order and not confusion. Harmony of sounds, color, lines, curves, principles, are the products of his creative power; and a study of all of these will teach us of his beauty. ever leads the mind to the Author of the universe should be studied. Whatever helps mingle the voice of nature with the call of the gospel blesses humanity; whatever teaches us to see the varied goodness and beauty of Him "in whom we live, and move, and have our being," deepens our appreciation of him. In the beauties of nature there is an uplifting and purifying influence. The silent awe of woods and deep glens, the majesty of the mountains and the deep rolling tides of the ocean-in all these we may be led to appreciate the beauty of God, reflected. The beauties of fields and flowers, of radiant landscapes and forests tinged with living green or blazing with the gorgeous colors of autumn, portray the beauties of the spiritual realm. It has been said that the material world corresponds with the spiritual realm and is but a reflection of the invisible beauties and harmonies of the Creator.

All the beauties in nature, from the verdant hues of the grass which carpets the earth to the "glittering brother-hood of planets and stars which jewel the heavens above," are the witnesses of God. The bard of Israel, in the long ago, sang: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." These things could not declare the glory of God without at the same time declaring the existence of God; to declare the majesty, power, and glory of a being is to declare the existence of that being. "The bird sings of him in the foliage, the thunder proclaims him in the heavens, the sturdy oak stretches his mighty arms out toward him, the ocean declares his immensity." From the center of the sea to its remotest shores, it is filled to the brim with his beauty. Man alone has said, "There is no God." All nature, with its plan, purpose, design, harmony, and beauty, shouts the praises of God and contradicts the feeble utterance of man when he says, "There is no God." Man is the only being that has ever attempted to deny its Creator, and only then when blinded to the good, the true, and the beautiful as portrayed on every hand.

The beauties of nature silently call for the purest and the best that is within man, and he who is deaf to this call has not come into the fullness of life. We do not have a vivid description of the garden of Eden and are left to draw on our imagination for the rich glories and fresh beauties of that earthly Eden; yet we are told that the tree that tempted Eve was "pleasant to the eyes," or "it was a delight to the eyes." Its beauty was not given as a temptation. The abuse of a good gift of God does not take away its right use, so we are to conclude that man has abused this refining gift of God. Again, the writer of Ecclesiastes has said: "He has made everything beautiful in its time," (Eccles, 3: 11.) And Jehovah declared unto Job that at the creation "the morning stars sang together" and that Jehovah "bound the cluster of the Pleiades and leosed the bands of Orion." The sense of the beautiful bears direct testimony to the loving-kindness of God. As we can look in nature and see design and purpose, we conclude that there was a great Architect who planned and caused; so we may behold the beauties of nature and conclude with valid reason that there is a great artist. As we behold the symmetrical forms of the hills and mountains, we conclude that there was a great Sculptor " who laid the corner stone thereof and stretched the line upon it." As we behold the planets rolling in space with mathematical exactness, we exclaim with the poet, Addison:

Forever singing as they shine, The hand that made us is divine.

The same God is the author of the invisible as well as of the visible world. The moral grandeur and beauty of the invinsible world finds its counterpart in the beauties of the visible world; in fact, the wonderful beauty in the physical creation is but the outward manifestations of the eternal beauties of the invisible world, and these, in turn, are the harmonious attributes of the invisible God. The artist who paints his picture is imitating God; and the nearer perfection is reached by the artist, the closer the approach to God. The orator praises the beauty of God in his oration, the poet sings of his beauties in his poem, and the artist expresses with brush and canvas his soul's appreciation of God in pictures. Beautiful as the natural world is for its sublimity, who would compare it with the sublimity and beauty of the moral world? Christ used the beauty of the outward world to represent the inner beauty; and he who cannot see God in nature cannot see him in revelation. Christ said: "Behold the birds of the heaven. they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns. . . Consider the Illies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." So long as birds fly, this message will be fresh with love and interest to man; so long as flowers bloom and lilies unfold will this teaching of the Son of God shed fragrance into the hearts and lives of people. Jesus has so interwoven his teachings with the objects and language of nature that it is impossible to understand his truths without going through the beauties of nature to the glories of spiritual truth.

There is a sensuous beauty which produces pleasurable sensations; there is also an ideal beauty which is apprehended only by that power of intellect which responds to it. The realm of the ideal beauty is far above the merely sensuous beauty. It is in the realm of ideal beauty that we speak of things and persons being graceful, picturesque. The fact that God has created man with his appreciation of the beautiful is evidence that he will furnish that which corresponds to, or satisfies, this part of man's nature. God has frequently appealed to man through the beautiful, and many of the saints as beautiful, fair, lovely. Sarah is described as "a woman that was very fair;" Rebekah was "a damsel . . . very fair to look upon;" Rachel was "beautiful and well favored;" David was "a youth, and ruddy, and withal of a fair countenance;" Daniel and his three companions were found to be "fairer" than all the youths of Babylon; Christ is described as "a rose of Sharon, a lily of the valleys;" he is said to be "the chiefest among ten thousand" and "altogether lovely." The tabernacle and temple were adorned with beautiful figures and the priests were clothed in holy array. We are taught that "the glory of young men is their strength; and the beauty of old men is the hoary head." We are taught to worship God in the beauty of holiness. This teaches us that there is a beauty in the worship of God; and not only should we worship him in the beauty of holiness, but we should worship him in the holiness of beauty.

Shall We Say It?

BY W. H. CARTER,

It is hard, sometimes, to decide which is best—to speak out or keep silent. I am sure I do not wish to unjustly criticize or injure any one. I would not make a wrong impression or influence any to not discharge a Christian duty. But from what has developed and recently been revealed in regard to certain men who went to India as missionaries, I have impressions that I feel like giving expression to.

- 1. The faith and teaching of men who go as missionaries to a foreign country should be well known. No true disciple will want to help support a man to preach things to the heathen that he would not want preached to his own people at home. If a man wants to preach Adventism, let him be man enough to say so, and then those who believe such can foot the bill.
- 2. I am impressed that, under the head of "mission work," money has been given that would have gone into other channels had the whole truth been known.
- 3. To collect money from loyal brethren to support a man who you know will sow the seed of discord, division, and strife among brethren, and keep this hid from them, is close akin to dishonesty.
- 4. The impression is that an advantage has been taken of uninformed and unsuspecting brethren. Will they continue to allow themselves to be fooled? My experience with the Boll crowd is, they do not wish to come out in the open and defend their vagaries. One Jorgenson, of Louisville, Ky., flew into me in the Christian Companion with a defense of one C. T. Russell on the kingdom question, and when I replied he fled, and the next I heard of him he had raised a racket and, by the help of Don Carlos Janes, had turned some good brethren out of the church and divided the congregation because they would not bow to the speculative theories of Boll. Their teaching on the kingdom of Christ, that it has not yet been established, is in conflict with, and a denial of, plain scripture teaching, is heresy, and, in my judgment, all loyal churches should have withdrawn fellowship from them sometime ago. That episode in a Louisville church clearly shows the spirit by which they are actuated, and now to think that Janes has been collecting money and forwarding it to McHenry and Martin to disrupt the work in India does not look well to me.

Such proceeding can only operate to hinder and greatly cripple legitimate mission work, and the blame should rest on the one responsible for it. The work in India, it seems, was moving along nicely until these advocates of this new ism, that brings schism at home, were sent there. In the future we should know what a man will teach before we help to send him; and if he resorts to vagaries such as these are charged with, then cut off their rations.

Paul to the Saints at Philippi. No. 4. BY F. W. SMITH.

"I thank my God upon every remembrance of you, always in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy, for your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now; being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." (Phil. 1: 3-6.) We come now to one of the most intensely practical features of the whole scheme of redemption—viz., "fellowship in the gospet." The apostle leads up to this vital point by telling the saints at Philippi with what joy he made supplication to God in their behalf. There was nothing in Paul's remembrance of this church that gave him sorrow or any great anxiety, because it was a devoted church, full of zeal, piety, and good works. What an example for all the churches in all time!

WHAT IS MEANT BY FELLOWSHIP IN THE GOSPEL?

The term "fellowship" is but another word for "partnership," and when used in connection with the gospel it becomes a matter of the greatest importance. This is true because we have a divine Partner in the Lord Jesus Christ, and because of the business involved in the partnershipviz., the salvation of never-dying souls. It is here stated that "fellowship" had to do with "the furtherance of the gospel "-that is, with the spread of the gospel and the success of the kingdom of God. Hence, whatever is involved in the success of the gospel is involved in this fellowship. Now, the "fellowship" of the saints at Philippi, as with the saints everywhere, began with their acceptance of the gospel. The very moment one was baptized into Christ, he or she became a partner with Christ, pledging himself or herself with all earthly possessions to do everything within his or her power to uphold and advance the interests of Christ's kingdom. But there are multiplied thousands of disciples who have never seriously considered these sacred obligations and who have never gotten beyond their baptism in the way of fellowshiping in the gospel. They do not give anything toward having the gospel preached, feeding the hungry and clothing the naked, and are thus year by year robbing themselves of the joys of Christianity.

ELEMENTS OF THIS FELLOWSHIP.

1. Self consecration is the very first step toward a partnership which involves an agreement between the parties concerned. The agreement demands that each party devote himself strictly to the interests of the business in which they are engaged. To have "fellowship" with Christ, we must first give ourselves unreservedly to his cause. deep sense of ownership makes self-consecration a much easier matter. One reason, and, we may say, the chief reason, why it was so easy for the churches of Macedonia, out of their poverty and trials of afflictions, to give so liberally and freely to the poor saints in Judea can be found in the following: "For to their power [ability], I bear record, yea, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves; praying us with much entreaty that we would receive the gift, and take upon us the fellowship of the ministering to the saints. And this they did. not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God." (2 Cor. 8: 3-5.)
"They first gave their own selves to the Lord." What a depth of meaning there is in these words! How much easier and with what greater joy can one enter into the "fellowship" in the gospel who will first unreservedly give himself—his heart, soul, and body—to the Lord!

- Personal work, Self-consecration always leads to service, and in this service there is the personal element expressed thus: "But let every man prove his own work. and then shall he have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another. For every man shall bear his own burden." (Gal. 6: 4, 5.) There are in every congregation of disciples some who will stand by and see others do all the paying, praying, and work of spreading the gospel, while they do not give a cent nor lift their little finger toward carrying the burdens of the church. They are simply religious parasites, trying to "deadhead" their way to heaven; but the road they are traveling does not lead in that direction. The extent of this personal work is set forth thus: "That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God." (Col. 1: 10.) The time for such service is all the time. "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." (1 Cor. 15: 58.)
- 3. Financial offerings are as much included in the personal element of service as in praying, eating the Lord's Supper, or anything else required. The injunction is: "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase." (Prov. 3: 9.) The personal element is expressed by the apostle in this manner: "For I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened: but by an equality," etc. (2 Cor. 8: 13, 14.) There can be no shifting of personal responsibility; for "as a man soweth, so shall he reap." Sow stinginess and reap poverty of the soul; sow bountifully and reap the joys of salvation.

FURTHERANCE OF THE GOSPEL.

The word "furtherance" means to go forward, to advance with the message of salvation. The field is broad, embracing the wide world. With reference to rebuilding the walls, Nehemiah (4: 19) said: "The work is great and large." The Savior said: "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few," (Matt. 9: 37.) He also enjoins: "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." (Matt. 9: 38.) Those claiming to be his disciples must pray this prayer to be worthy of the name, and the prayer binds on him or her who prays it the obligation to help sustain the laborers or go into the field himself or herself. The crying need is: "Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" (Isa. 6: 8.) Shall our answer be: "Then said I, Here am I; send me?" (Verse 8.) Who will help to further the gospel?

The Credulity of Skepticism.

BY G. C. BREWER,

No man who is at all acquainted with present-day philosophy or who knows the color of current thought can doubt that we are living in an age of skepticism—skepticism so far as belief in the Bible as God's word or as a standard of faith and morals is concerned. So widely diffused is this manner of unbelief that some preachers of the gospel feel called upon to apologize whenever they refer to certain stories told in that marvelous Book of books; for if a man professes to believe these stories, he thereby advertises the fact that he has never been to college, especially if he be a young man, one whose college days would have been under the "new order." Or if he is known to be an academic man, if he has college degrees and still believes the fables (?) of the creation, of the fall, the exploits of Jonah, of Joshua and Samson, and many other episodes of Hebrew history and the miracles of Christ, he is looked upon as so narrow-minded, bigoted, and credulous as to be impervious to the new ideas and advanced thought of present-day scholarship.

On the other hand, a man may not have credits enough for college entrance; but if he will announce his disbelief of the Bible and proclaim himself an original freethinker, he may preach any sort of preposterous make-believe philosophy and the world will call him a profound thinker, a ripe scholar, and an intellectual giant. I could give instances. If a man preaches only that which the Bible teaches and gives it for his authority in all that he believes, he will be of small repute; but if he advances the most extravagant speculations concerning things spiritual and states them as positive facts and conditions, giving no higher authority than his own ipse dixit, he will be hailed as "some great one," and he will have many followers. This, however, is not peculiar to our age. It was true in the day of Christ. On this point he said: "I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not; if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive."

It is very evident that the disbelief of the ancient and time-honored Book of God is not caused by any lack of credulity on the part of present-day skeptics; nor has it ever been. Men who cannot worship the God that made them find no trouble in worshiping the god they made. Men who will not believe the teaching of the Bible concerning the future life hold to some of the most fanciful and fantastic theories about the great beyond. In fact, these things come as a natural result of unbelief. Skepticism is not only an unhappy state, but it is also an abnormal condition. And whenever a nation or an individual has been long away from "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints," It or he invariably goes into superstition, sometimes the most absurd and degrading superstition. Chateaubriand said: "Men are ready to believe anything when they believe nothing. They have diviners when they cease to have prophets; witchcraft, when they cease to have religious ceremonies; they open the caves of sorcery when they shut the temples of the Lord."

The accuracy of this observation is clearly demonstrated by the widespread belief in spiritism and clairvoyance among the literary and scientific people of the present day. Among those who have gone off after this superstition in its present revival, there is not a single one, so far as I know, who believed the Bible. They had long ago outgrown the Bible. They were all skeptics-at least, they were not "orthodox;" they did not accept the Bible as God's revealed will, final and sufficient for human guidance and salvation. Many of them are eminent men, however. Among the most prominent of those whose names are now associated with the idea of communicating with the dead and other ideas concerning the dead, mystical and mythical, may be mentioned Sir Oliver Lodge, Sir Alfred Turner, Sir William Crookes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Lambroso, Flammarion, Maeterlinck, H. G. Wells, and Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Of course, these are all intellectuals, and yet the things they profess to believe are repugnant to reason. Mrs. Wilcox receives messages from her dead husband through the ouija board, and Sir Oliver Lodge communicates with his son, Raymond, who was killed in the first battle of the Marne, through a fat old woman who professes spiritualistic powers-a woman in no way equal to Sir Oliver, of course.

These things seem entirely unworthy of these cultured people. In fact, they seem absolutely unconscionable. Broad-minded and learned these people are, but behold what they believe! It is easier to see why the poetic and sensitive soul of Mrs. Wilcox, especially since she does not accept God's word of promise, would be subject to such a delusion than it is to understand how a man of science like Sir Oliver Lodge can give credence to the things he seems to believe. Mrs. Wilcox's story of the condition of her mind after the death of her husband is a sufficient explanation. She is sweet-spirited and kind and tolerant of everything, except orthodoxy, and he would be hardhearted and unfeeling, indeed, who would not sympathize with her in her sorrow. Our deepest sympathy goes out to both her and to Sir Oliver Lodge, and we would like to offer them the consolations of the gospel and comfort them with the words of eternal life if they would believe them. "leave the secret things with the Lord our God," and "wait and murmur not." But they think the Bible is an antiquated Book, and they speak of the fundamental facts of Christianity as "worn-out dogma;" yet the things they believe were worn out before the Christian era began, They were old in the days of Egypt and Babylon.

But such is the history of human weakness; we have a day of idolatry and superstition, then a day of civilization, then a day of skepticism, and then another day of superstition. It was so with Rome, and it was true of Athens. Athens, "the eye of Greece, the home of art and eloquence," was also the home of idolatry and of gods innumerable. A Roman satirist said it was easier to find a god there than it was to find a man. But the superstition of all the world flowed into Rome and was repeatedly expelled, each time to return, find new votaries, and reëstablish itself. The Roman republic was born in superstition, outgrew it in the period of its glory, but returned to it with redoubled ardor in the days of its decline.

It is related that Tarquin the Proud, alarmed by the appearance of a serpent in the royal palace, sent his sons, Titus and Aruns, to consult the oracle at Delphi. They, for their amusement, took along with them Brutus, who had feigned madness to escape the fate of his older brother, who had been put to death by their uncle, Tarquin, for the sake of his wealth. When the oracle, in response to the inquiry of Titus and Aruns as to who would succeed to the throne, said, "He who first kisses his mother," Brutus stumbled to the ground and kissed mother earth. True to the ambition he then displayed, he later threw off his disguise, banished the Tarquins, and established the republic. This was some five hundred years before Christ. The educated Romans had repudiated such superstition and had again returned to it before Christ came. In the days of the declining republic, at the time of the First Triumvirate, when the oracle had long been silent, Pompey, Crassus, and Cæsar sought information from Oriental astrology.

Rome was the mistress of the world in the days of Christ and Paul. The old religions had decayed and philosophy and education were considered the supreme good. Yet there was never a greater time of mysticism, fortune telling, and superstition. The conquered nations had sent not only their tribute money, but also their fanaticisms, into the imperial city. The "dregs" of Athens and Corinth, "hungry Greeks" and "Syrian fortune tellers," flocked into Rome. Juvenal's picturesque statement of this was that "the Orontes itself flowed into the Tiber."

Every part of the East sent its share of superstition into the great metropolis. The gods of Egypt and Phrygia were worshiped there. The temples of Isis and Serapis were more than once erected and destroyed. Asia Minor sent her soothsayers; Syria, her music and her medicines; and Chaldea, her "Babylonian numbers." Even the Jews, the people of God, had so far lost faith in their laws and their prophets as to contribute their part to the general corruption of the age. The Jewish beggar woman was the gypsy of the first century, shivering and crouching in the outskirts of the city telling fortunes, as Ezekiel said of old, "for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread."

However, it was not the common people only who were drawn aside after the varied fanaticisms. The eminent men of the republic and the first rulers of the new empire all seemed to be dupes of some of the pretenders to mysterious powers. According to Plutarch, the great Marius kept with him in his army camps a Syrian prophetess—probably a Jewess (her name was "Martha")—by whose divinations he was governed in his campaigns. The great Latin satirist, Juvenal, gives us a picture of the Emperor Tiberius "sitting on the rock of Capri, with a flock of Chaldeans round him;" and we know from a better source that Sergius Paulus, the governor of Cyprus, and "a man of understanding" or learning, probably a philosopher, kept his Elymas in his court. Indeed, "they all from the least to greatest gave heed unto these things."

This illustrates the fact that is seen in the history of all nations of men—namely, that man must have a god, a prophet, a heaven, and a future life; and whenever he rejects the true, he always accepts the false. In all instances and in all ages, when unbelief becomes conscious of its weakness, it is glad to lend its hand to superstition. It is true to-day, and it will no doubt become more and more evident.

The Books Burned. BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

We are accustomed to judge laws and principles, not so much by the native merits of their phraseology as by the results, good or bad, that grow out of their operation. The foreigner, coming into our midst, knows and cares very little about the wording of our civil law. He arrives at his conception of the merits or demerits of our law by the way it touches the public conscience and enlists or repels the public regard. In a large measure, this is also brue with respect to "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus."

Let us judge that law of the new heart and the new creature, then, by its results. Let us lay the ax at the root of the tree of Christianity and see whether that tree be hewn down. To this end, let us analyze briefly the example of those Ephesian magicians who, when delivered from satanic influence by the religion of Christ, "brought their books [of magic] together, and burned them before all." (See Acts 19: 18-20.)

- 1. They gave up their lifelong occupation. Ephesus was noterious for its sorcery, the center of the magical arts in the Roman empire. Two causes for the practice of incantation are assigned in the New Testament-namely. gain and popularity. An influence that induced those people to abandon a course of action by which they obtained a livelihood or maintained their social prestige was no ordinary force, nor was it of human origin. Employ convincing human reasoning, persuasive eloquence, and earnest entreaty, and pour it assiduously into the ears of evildoers, and see how signally you fail to win them from their sinful course. You have met man's love of ease and pride, and you have failed to jostle it. Moreover you ran counter to an obvious law of nature-namely, whatever one has learned to do from habit, he is prone to keep doing. The old horse, when turned out on the pasture after a life at the sweep, involuntarily described a circle with a radius corresponding to that of the sweep, and kept to his path day after day. Men follow the daily beat of sin so mechanically that some dynamic force must be brought to bear to deliver them from such inveterate thralldom. Christianity is such a force. It proved itself so at Ephesus.
- 2. They arrayed themselves against their former occupation. It required courage to abandon sorcery; it required greater courage to array themselves diametrically against the art. It was turning squarely against the old order of life and antagonizing any who still should practice or patronize the nefarious business. They must not only denounce it as false and sinful, but must seek other means of subsistence; must suffer not only in popular esteem, but in gain. Some people may be induced to quit certain practices if they may maintain a passive attitude toward them. Christianity alone instills the moral courage to hate and oppose the things which were once loved.

- 3. They abandoned an enticing art. Magic always has been interesting and entrancing. Anything possessing the element of mysticism arouses curiosity, and curiosity has its devotees. Behold the patrons of the gypsy fortune teller thronging her tent. What a multitude, evening after evening, sit dallying with ouija boards! Satan knows the value of fascination, and sorcery was one of his clever devices at Ephesus. It is easy to give up unconditionally an uninteresting thing, but only the gospel of Christ can save people from the "primrose path of dalliance" and the allurements the devil has spread, with so much curning and charm, before us all.
- 4. At a money loss. Books were rare. Fifty thousand pieces of silver would amount to about eight thousand dollars-a sheer loss that would stagger the present-day economist. If Judas Iscarlot had been present to offer advice, his plaintive interrogatory would have been: "Why were not those books sold for eight thousand dollars, and the money given to the poor?" If Simon, the sorcerer, had been in Ephesus, he would have offered them money for a textbook on magic to "amaze the people" further with his incantation. But in this destruction of their dark volumes of sinister craft those enlightened magicians exhibited an utter contempt for the wealth that damns. There is a story of a saloon keeper who, when converted to Christianity, rolled his barrels of nerve-numbing, character-destroying liquor into the gutter, where it escaped into the sewer. He needed no Carrie Nation with her hatchet, The word of God had cut deep into his heart. Another saloon keeper persuaded himself to believe that Sam Jones had converted him. "I will sell enough rum to buy me a home," he said, "and then I will quit this business." A home at the price of blood-character-souls!
- 5. It was a public fire. Those books were not carted to a back alley; they were burned on the public square. No camouflage about the transaction. True contrition impels undisguised confession. Much is said about public confession and private confession, offenses against the church and offenses against individuals. There is a burning desire on the part of the genuinely converted man to confess any and every wrong both to God and to man. The more public the confession and the more freely made, the more perfect is the ease of conscience. Penitent souls, like the Ephesian converts, will come "confessing, and declaring their deeds." They will put away the last vestige of sin, and will not be satisfied until the blood of Christ has washed away the last stain of guilt. There is a story of a woman who had been an indiscreet reader of unchaste literature. Finally convinced that the practice was wrong, she made ready to destroy the dog-eared novels that cluttered her rooms. The young people of her town clamored for the poison, and she dispensed it to them. On the other hand, I knew a brusque old lady, wife of a blacksmith, who came upon her husband at a game of cards in the shop. She ordered him to destroy his treasure before her eyes. The pack of cards went up in the smoke of the forge. Do not dispense poison, but destroy it. Loathe the thing that induced sin. To prevent a return of the temptation, destroy it out of your sight.

We need some blazing, consuming fires to-day. No doubt many bad books should be burned. Gambling devices, such as cards, should go up in smoke. But we need a purifying fire—in the heart. The dross there wants destroying utterly. The word of God is such a fire.

MISSIONARY

Bishop-Vincent Mission.

BY W. W. FREEMAN.

Since last report I have received $80.67 for the regular work and five dollars for the building fund.

Miss Sarah Shepherd Andrews, who went from the church at Dickson, Tenn., and who receives funds through Brother I. B. Bradley, writes that her work is primarily with the Kamitomizaka church, where Brother Vincent has left Brother Hiratsuka in charge. Miss Andrews says another lot has been found nearer the old location. She will be disappointed not to get this one. It is larger and is cheaper per tsubo (six feet square) than the other one was.

I understand that the brethren there have bought the lot, but it will be kept in the name of an individual until funds for it are sent in. We shall also be obliged to pay interest on the deficit at the rate of eight per cent, payable semiannually. We shall send in funds for the lot as fast as we can get as much as a hundred dollars. Brother Clinton Davidson, of Louisville, Ky., has four hundred dollars for the fund. No one should drop other regular work to do this special work, but I wish we had a short article in every issue of the papers till this fund is in. It seems too bad that, after years of waiting, after several lives have been invested in the work, after fine results and fine prospects have been reported, and after the first home is insufficient and is worn out, we should wait a year to get funds. The ten thousand Christians of Texas could raise it with only a dollar apiece.

Brother Hiratsuka has lived with wife and five children on poorer quality of food than ordinary folks eat. Why? He has had only twenty-seven dollars and fifty cents a month for his whole time. Miss Andrews urges that we give him more. We shall try to give him thirty-five dollars for a time. It is not my work, brethren, nor is it your work; it is his work. Let us do some real Christlike giving, or, at the least, what in a business way will seem reasonable. Are you a shirker, a jerker, or a worker?

For Miss Lillie Cypert: By D. C. Janes, $65.75.

For Girls' Sewing School: Sisters of the church at Charleston, Miss., $5.

For C. G. Vincent's work: W. W. Freeman, $50.

For the Sendagaya Church: Nothing received in February. It still takes $17 a month to pay the land rent on which the building stands ($4.50) and $12.50 for Sister Kurachi, the Phoebe of the church. The church has its aim toward self-support and is working to that end.

It will be noted that we make no further report for the support of Brother Ishii. He has returned to his native home in the northern island of Hakkaido, and is now able to get on without help. Neither do we make further reports for the church at Zoshigaya. It became necessary last September to discontinue the services of Sister Yoshie, which has proved a great blessing to the church in several ways, one of which was a solution of the problem of selfsupport. Instead of one inefficient Sunday-school teacher at a cost of twenty dollars a month, we now have, including Miss Cypert, six who gladly give their services free of charge. The children have become orderly, classes have been formed, and everything moves on like clockwork. Brother Hashimoto is giving practically all of his time to the Gakuin (students' home) and the church, and does not ask or expect anything for it. He is in easy eircumstances and has no desire to accumulate more. He says he wants to devote the rest of his life wholly to God's service. He has borrowed eighteen volumes from my library (all of them on religion) to read during my visit to the homeland. He and I take it by turns preaching. The spirit of the church has much improved lately and the audience and the Sunday-school are growing. As the church is yet small, it may be necessary occasionally to ask for a little help; but as a regular thing, the church has now passed that stage. They have a neat church home with no debts and with $10.50 in the treasury. The contribution on March 16 was $1.81.

Also the Kamitomizaka church, though not yet self-supporting, is doing a commendable work about one hundred miles from Tokyo in the village of Shieda, where there are about twenty Christians starting out independently. They have a lot and mean to build soon. The community is helping them. Brother Hiratsuka visits them about twice a year.

Mr. Tsuda.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

About twenty years ago in Osaka was a small boy who sometimes went to Sunday school, not to learn, but to disturb the meeting. Later he came to Tokyo and entered the Aoyama Gakuin, a mission school. He still showed his antagonism to the Christian religion and became so disobedient he was expelled.

Recently a young man entered the English Bible class of Sister M— at Sendagaya, thinking, according to his own confession, it would be a good opportunity to improve his English. But somehow his heart was touched, and almost before he was aware of it he found himself really interested in the word of God; and the people in the church also were so kind and friendly that he liked to be with them. On February 26 Mr. Tsuda was baptized.

This is only one instance among many where the evil in the boy was overcome by the good in the Christian. Let us all take courage and be more prayerful and patient with those who are wayward and unruly.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

叫

Churches in need of a reliable song leader may address J. D. Derryberry, 744 Benton Avenue, Nashville, Tenn. He has some time for work of this kind.

Two good assistant matrons are needed at the Tennessee Orphans' Home, at Columbia. They must be Christian women of high character. If you are interested, write to Mrs. Granville Lipscomb, Columbia, Tenn.

From J. D. Walling, Winchester, Ky., May 5: "I expect to be in Cookeville, Tenn., May 13; at McMinnville, May 18; and hope to be in Nashville on May 20. The church here is growing in interest and attendance."

Andrew Perry writes: "If there are congregations in Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky, or Mississippi that can use me in meetings this summer, I would like to hear from them at once. Address me at Box 116, Route 4, Watseka, Ill."

From H. T. King, Franklin, Ky.: "In the Gospel Advocate of May 8 I unintentionally do M. L. Moore an injustice. Brother Moore believes and preaches that the 'church of God,' 'the kingdom of his dear Son,' was established on the first Pentecost after the ascension of Christ."

A. B. Lipscomb met many fine Christian people at Moulton, Ala., Sunday, where he delivered a commencement address. Returning, he stopped over at Decatur, Sunday evening, and thoroughly enjoyed a good sermon by G. C. Brewer, who is in a meeting there. J. Pettey Ezell and Claude Woodruff are his coworkers.

Encouraging reports come from all of the Nashville meetings. Brother Elam is at Chapel Avenue; R. V. Cawthon continues at Twelfth Avenue; J. G. Allen reports six confessions at Green Street; Charles Brewer is doing good work at Joseph Avenue; J. D. Gunn is with the Eleventh Street congregation; and R. C. White is in a good meeting in the western portion of the city.

From Flavil Hall, Trion, Ga., May 7: "I spoke for the church of Christ on North Broadway, Knoxville, Tenn., last Lord's day, morning and evening, and was delighted at the apparent zeal of the congregation. I baptized two persons at Catlett, Ga., near Lafayette, on April 28. The church at Rossville, Ga., was much uplifted by F. B. Srygley's recent meeting there. Seven were baptized."

Several have requested information about securing tents for evangelistic work during the summer. W. G. White, of this city, is now prepared to make tents at reasonable prices. It would be a good move for the churches in each county to own a tent and keep it busy. It is an article that cannot be easily shipped without considerable damage. Address Brother White at 326 Peachtree Street, Nashville, Tenn.

From C. C. Merritt, Davis City, Iowa, May 8: "There are a dozen or more members of the church at Yuma, Arizona, who desire to have some one to hold them a meeting early in the fall. This little band was started sometime ago by Brother Biggs. Since then their house has been blown away, and, with other discouraging things, they have not been meeting. If any one who sees this intends to go that way and can stop there or go there for the purpose of holding the meeting, please write me."

Mrs. Herbert Barnett writes from Michie, Tenn., May 8: "Reading so much in the Gospel Advocate of the good work going on elsewhere, I can no longer resist writing and inviting some of the brethren in the ministry to come and preach for us. There is a great good to be done here. There are several members of the church in the neighborhood, though there is not a church house and we have no Sunday school. The neighborhood is the Shiloh National Park. Any information wanted will be gladly given by me. I hope some brother will accept the invitation."

From W. Curtis Porter, Goodman, Mo., May 7: "I preached at Neosho on the fourth Lord's day in April, and at Fox Schoolhouse, near Powell, the first Lord's day in May. I am now trying to arrange for my debate with A. N. Dugger (Adventist). I am trying to get it about the first of July Watch the Gospel Advocate for further announcements. Remember that Dugger is their champion debater. If there is any man in the world that can defend their doctrine, certainly he is the man. I hope to meet many of my preaching brethren at this debate. It will be held near Goodman and Anderson under a large tent."

J. B. Briney, the weil-known preacher, lecturer, and writer, will deliver a series of six lectures dealing with the fundamentals of the Christian religion, in Nashville, beginning next Sunday evening. The lectures will be delivered at the Ryman Auditorium, and will be free to the public. Brother Briney's themes are: (1) "Science and the Bible:" (2) "The Bible and Evolution;" (3) "The Bible and Higher Criticism;" (4) "The Gospel—What It Is and How It Saves;" (5) "Our Plea for Christian Unity;" (6) "The Foundation of Christian Hope," All who love and respect the word of God should avail themselves of the opportunity to hear these lectures.

From C. H. Smithson, Ben Franklin, Texas, May 7; "The work is progressing nicely. Two have been added since last report. I have never had better coöperation, and am expecting better results in the future. I have been invited to the Mothers' Day services at the Presbyterian church next Lord's-day afternoon, and I am to deliver an address in behalf of mother. I aim to return to Tennessee this fall, as I have some meetings promised. I also have time for some more work. I will consider local work for next year. I have been in this small county for four years, and believe a change would be best. Any one interested can address me at once."

From Mrs. T. J. Bonner, Bradford, Ark.. May 4: "I wish to thank all who have helped me in this, the saddest hour I ever knew. It is so sad to give up our loved ones, but I feel sure my dear husband has gone to receive the reward of the faithful. I am now where there is no congregation, and think I should move to a place where I can rear my children under the influence of the church. I have decided to buy a small place, a few acres, near a church, school, and market, as soon as I can, so I will not have to pay rent. I would be glad if any one who knows of such a place at a reasonable price, or can put me in touch with some one who does, would write me. I have tried to answer personally all who have written me. May God's blessing rest upon all who have helped me in any way."

From Will W. Slater, Fort Smith, Ark., May 5: "I closed at Price's Chapel, three miles north of Sallisaw, Okla., at the water, last Saturday morning. I was there only a few days, but baptized four persons, one a Nazarene Holiness. This was a mission point. I filled my regular appointment at Shady Point, Okla., yesterday. We had splendid services. One was baptized. I am teaching a singing class for the Park Hill Church this week. Work on our new church building is moving along nicely. We need about six hundred dollars. If those who are able would help us a little, we could accomplish so much good here in this city. We are planning another all-day service for the second Sunday in June, at which time we hope to have our house completed. Pray for us."

From F. O. Howell, Obion, Tenn.: "Our meeting at Ridgely began on the second Sunday in April and continued eleven days. Thirteen were added to the congregation. Harry Hayes, of Hornbeak, conducted the song service, and he did his work well. This congregation was established by the mission efforts of the Obion church. They are few in number and have little of the necessities of life, but they are rich in faith and good works. They built a nice church house at a cost of five thousand dollars, and they still owe about one-half of the amount. Churches and brethren who wish to help those that do their best could not send a contribution to a more worthy cause. S. H. Gore and wife are among the most worthy Christians I have had the pleasure of knowing. Send your check to them at Ridgely, Tenn. You will help a worthy cause and be rewarded of our Father in heaven."

Dr. Jerre Watson writes from Anniston, Ala.: "It may be of interest to the brotherhood to know that the work founded in Anniston about three years ago, about which R. S. King then wrote to the Gospel Advocate, is growing from every standpoint. During the past month there were three additions to the body, and that without any 'protracted' meeting. The church conducts mission meetings in the city and adjacent territory. C. H. Woodroof, who is supported by the congregation as an evangelist, does the work of a real evangelist, visiting adjoining congregations from two to three Sundays each month. He is now laboring with other brethren in a series of meetings at Albany, When he is away, all the work of the church is carried forward by the brethren. Anniston is so situated that it is frequently visited by tourists from the North and West en route to Florida. The church here extends to all brethren who may visit this city a cordial invitation to be present with it in its worship."

"What the Editor Believes." No. 1.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Repeated inquiries addressed to Brother R. H. Boll, editor in chief of the Word and Work, lead him to publish and answer twelve questions setting forth his belief. Omitting questions 3, 4, 5, 6, and 12, for the present, as they are of no special interest to our readers, we publish the remainder:

I. Do you teach Russellism? Answer. I oppose every single distinctive doctrine of Russell's.

2. Do you teach Adventism? Ans. Not so much as one distinctive doctrine of Adventism. The Adventist view as to the kingdom, the millennium, and their whole system of interpreting prophecy, I repudiate:

7. Have you pressed this teaching to the disturbance and disruption of the church? Ans. I have been preaching and teaching classes at the Portland Avenue (Louisville, Ky.) congregation for fifteen years; and during this time there has been so little occasion to discuss the nature of Christ's resurrection body that I would estimate that the propulous have could not tell when you ninety per cent of the members here could not tell what my position on that point is. If I did not "press" it here, it is not likely that I "pressed" it elsewhere. I have caused no disturbance or disruption anywhere. If trouble has been caused anywhere, it has been by the intolerance of others. These points of doctrine involve no congregational practice, and there is nothing in them that should raise a barrier beween brethren who differ concerning them. are subjects for profitable brotherly investigation and discussion.

8. Do you believe that Christ will sit on a literal throne in literal Jerusalem, to rule the nations with a literal rod of iron? A "throne," in the Bible and in common usage. stands for government rule and authority. the scepter, again a common expression denoting the exercise of royal power. A scepter of iron is a strong and strict rule. The "literal Jerusalem." will be transformed and renewed, and the cloud of glory-the token of God's presence—which once led Israel in the wilderness and rested upon the tabernacle will be over her as a canopy. The impression that Jesus Christ will have his residence in Jerusalem under ordinary human conditions is too absurd to be seriously denied. Jerusalem will be his glorious resting place, and the center of his world government in the age to come. (Isa, 11: 10: 4: 4, 5: Ps. 132: 13, 14.) 9. Do you believe that baptized believers are in the kingdom? Ans. I do. (See Col. I: 13.) I have never taught otherwise.

10. Do you believe that the church is the kingdom, or is it only the vestibule of the kingdom? Ans. There is no kingdom of God on the earth, save the church. All that are in the church are in the kingdom. The church is, as David Lipscomb expressed it (Gospel Advocate, May 21, 1903), "the kingdom in its present stage." It is, therefore, not merely the vestibule of the kingdom.

To show how "the keys of the kingdom" can admit a man into the church, and how the man who is in the church is in the kingdom, while yet the church is not all there will be of God's kingdom, I have sometimes used the Illustration of a man's opening a meetinghouse to me and how, tion of a man's opening a meetinghouse to me and how, after I had entered the vestibule, I was indeed in the meetinghouse, while yet the "vestibule" is not the same thing as the "meetinghouse," nor coextensive with it. A man cannot be in the vestibule without being in the meetinghouse; a man cannot be in the church without being in the kingdom. But to the kingdom in its future stage the church bears a much more important relation than a "vestibule." The church are not merely the subjects of it, but corulers with Christ over the nations. She is his bride and shares his throne. (2 Tim. 2: 12; Rev. 2: 26, 27; 3: 21.) 3: 21.)

believe that all the word of God should be taught. We Do you believe these things to be essential? have no authority for drawing a line through the word of God and distinguishing between "essentials" on the one side and "nonessentials" on the other. We never know what part of God's word may prove essential to move a sinner to be saved (Jer. 26: 3) or to help a Christian in a time of need. No servant of God has the right to discard or suppress or discredit any part of God's teaching, or to demand his fellow servant to do so,

It is the inalienable right of every man to state what he believes, and also the unquestionable right of the public to compare his present with his past teaching. If his past teaching was the free and outspoken utterances of his heart, while his present statement is recorded under the pressure of adverse criticism, naturally the former statements will have greater weight and influence with the public in deciding what he believes. From his published statements and indorsement of "Jesus is Coming," by W. E. Blackstone, and the "Outline of Sermon Notes," by J. B. Rotherham, a number of able and faithful preachers have charged Brother Boll with teaching some of the distinctive features of Adventism and Russellism. In the questions and answers published above he disavows believing and teaching a single distinctive doctrine of either Russellism or Adventism. Inasmuch as the public in general are not familiar with the teachings of C. T. Russell and the Adventists, it shall be the purpose of this article to show a few of the fundamentals of both systems, which are destructive to some of the cardinal principles of the gospel of Christ, and to compare these with what Brother Boll has taught and what he even now teaches in his denials. The venerable and lamented David Lipscomb said: "I have never known men who started out to teach the doctrine that Brother Boll and some other young preachers are teaching that would not recede from it when pressed." The answers under review are a clear vindication of Brother Lipscomb's words. That he recedes from former positions is gratifying, but it is not pleasing that he makes an effort to convict those of misrepresentation who have charged him with teaching otherwise. He should have pursued the manly, Christian course by saying: "I have made statements in the past which are not correct, but I now disavow them." Candor is an admirable trait, and always opens the way for a favorable hearing. It is well known that Adventists teach that the kingdom is not established and that it will not be established until the Lord comes again. Now Brother Boll, by indorsing Blackstone and Rotherham, and by word, has been teaching precisely the same doctrine. He has sent out with his approval Blackstone's book, "Jesus is Coming," both to young preachers and others, not even intimating to them that it should be accepted with a grain of salt. When he himself has been confronted with this fact, he has made no disavowal of its teachings. For the teachings of this book we shall have use later in this article.

Some years ago Brother Boll submitted for discussion the following propositions: "Resolved, that Dan. 2: 35 and 44 was fulfilled on Pentecost.' I deny. 'Resolved, that Christ is now sitting on David's throne.' I deny.' Thus it is clear to the reader that Brother Boll denies that the kingdom was set up on the day of Pentecost, the same as do Adventists and Charles T. Russell. Before he had been cornered on passages that plainly teach that the kingdom has come, Brother Boll himself asked Brother Kurfees the direct question whether he believed the kingdom spoken of in Dan. 2: 44 has yet come; and when Brother Kurfees promptly gave an affirmative reply, he just as promptly and emphatically retorted that he did not believe that it has yet come. Dan. 2: 44 declares; "And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." But what are the facts? Simply these: The kingdom prophesied of by Daniel was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, as is generally agreed and accepted. The kingdom was set up on that day and people entered into it. Proof: Jesus taught that those born of water and of the Spirit entered the kingdom, and to be horn of water and the Spirit means to believe and be baptized. It follows, therefore, since people on the day of Pentecost and during the apostolic times believed and were baptized, that the kingdom was in existence. Again, the kingdom of which Daniel prophesied was to have this characteristic: it shall never be destroyed. Now, inasmuch as the editor of the Word and Work contends that the kingdom of which Daniel prophesied will be a literal kingdom, set up in literal Jerusalem, with Christ on David's throne, Jerusalem and the world could not be destroyed without destroying the kingdom; but Peter says the heavens and earth shall be destroyed; hence, we know the kingdom of which Daniel prophesied cannot be such an institution as that for which the editor contends. Again, Adventists, Blackstone, and Brother Boll teach that because the church has passed through a state of opposition, persecution, and depression, that it cannot be the kingdom of which Daniel prophesied, and that, therefore, that kingdom must still be set up in the future. They contend that because the prophecy of Daniel concerning this period of persecution and opposition has been fulfilled, that therefore the kingdom was not set up on Pentecost. The truth is that the church, or kingdom, set up by the God of heaven was during the Dark Ages, just when God said she should be, under the power of her enemies, persecuted, opposed, and depressed. yet never destroyed. The very fact that the church, or kingdom, which was set up on Pentecost has passed through such a period of depression is positive proof that it is the kingdom of which Daniel prophesied. The truth is, had not the kingdom gone through that period as foretold by the prophet, it would not be the true church, or kingdom, of God. If this kingdom is yet to be set up, as contended by Boll, Charles T. Russell, and Adventists, when it is set up, even if it be at the "revelation," It must pass through a similar period of depression; otherwise it is not the kingdom of which Daniel prophesied.

Brother Boll, in his denial that the kingdom of which Daniel prophesied was set up on Pentecost, does not tell us when it will be set up; but Blackstone, whom he indorses, tells us in his book (page 93) that it will be set up at the "revelation." Following is his diagram:

THE CHURCH IN TRIBULATION OF THE KINGDOM

The teaching of Blackstone is that the church will be caught up in the air with Jesus at the "rapture." This removes the church from the earth, but still there is no kingdom. Hence, the church cannot be, according to this teaching, any part of the kingdom. After the "rapture" comes the "tribulation," and after the "tribulation" comes the "revelation," during which period the kingdom is set up. At this time it is claimed by Blackstone that Dan, 2: 44 is fulfilled. According to Blackstone and Brother Boll, we have this prophecy fulfilled at the "revelation," and at the same time the church rules with Christ over the nations. While Brother Boll denies that he teaches any distinctive doctrine of Russellism or Adventism, I will show from his denial that he teaches precisely the same thing. Concerning the "revelation" and what occurs at that time, Blackstone says: "The Lord reigns over the earth with his bride, the church." What does the editor of the Word and Work say is his belief on this subject? Listen to him: "But to the kingdom in its future stage the church bears a much more important relation than a 'vestibule.' The church are not merely the subjects of it, but cornlers with Christ over the nations. She is his bride and shares his throne, (2 Tim. 2: 12; Rev. 2: 26, 27; 3: 21.)" Blackstone also quotes 2 Tim. 2: 12 and passages from Revelation. H might be well for the editor to tell the public just how many kingdoms God will set up.

Brother Boll teaches that while the kingdom was not set up on Pentecost, the church was. This shows that he does not believe that the church is the kingdom. Again, he gives us the vestibule illustration to show how the keys of the kingdom can admit a man into the church. In this he clearly teaches that the kingdom and the church are not the same. As he unlocks the church with the "keys of the kingdom," it is strange that he does not see, if there is no kingdom, that there can be no keys of the kingdom, and as Christ is not yet on David's throne, that we can have no kingdom, as we have no King to rule over it. Furthermore, we have no keys with which to unlock the church. He had better leave severely alone his vestibule illustration and, holding fast the pattern of sound words, speak as do the oracles of God. By his teaching and illustration, he has not only no kingdom of God upon the earth, but he makes the church a worthless institution without occupants. In his "Sermon Outline" on the kingdom, J. B. Rotherham says that we are called upon "to hasten its approach." Be it remembered that Brother Boll unreservedly indorses this. If he is correct, the kingdom is not here. I heard Brother Srygley, in a conversation with Brother Boll, ask him the meaning of Mark 9: 1, which reads: "There are some here of them that stand by, who shall in no wise taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God come with power." Brother Srygley asked Brother Boil if these were all dead. He replied that the lives of some of them might be preserved supernaturally until the coming of the kingdom. Also Brother H. T. King asked him for an explanation of this passage. In his answer to him he claimed that the lives of some of them might be supernaturally preserved and that the Lord might be hiding them out in the earth. If he really believes that baptized believers are in the kingdom and has never taught otherwise, as he says, he is in very poor business having the Lord preserve the lives of people and hiding them out until the kingdom comes. He should explain such inconsistent conduct to the satisfaction of a thinking people.

No Compromise With the World.

BY E. A. E.

There is something, a terrible and mighty something—a subtle and fearful power called in the New Testament "the world." Jesus was not when on earth, and Christ is not now, "of the world." His kingdom "is not of this world." He has chosen his disciples "out of the world;" he forbids their loving "the world;" also, he commands them to keep themselves "unspotted from the world." He declares that "the world" hates his disciples, because it hated and killed him. He further declares that the devil is "the prince of this world," has nothing in him, and has been judged and sentenced in the end to the lake which burns with fire and brimstone.

Let all who are interested and who desire not to go with the devil into eternal perdition endeavor to learn from the word of God what this something is which is called "the world." Let us not hesitate, or dodge, or mince words.

Hoping by the grace of God to have more to say on the subject in a future article, attention is now called to but one passage:

Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the vainglory of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever. (1 Jehn 2: 15-17.)

From this passage we can get an idea of what that something is which is called "the world," of which Satan is the prince, of which Christians are no part, which hates them, which crucified their Savior, and whose doom to pass away has been fixed.

The question is, do we really believe the word of God? Unbelief has been the besetting sin of all ages and is the besetting sin of this age. You who preach that men must believe the word of God, do you believe it?

There must be no child's play, no temporizing, no compromising, no "logicizing," no hair-splitting, no wresting the Scriptures, no perverting the gospel, no handling the word of God deceitfully, no running with the hounds and holding with the hare, no straddling, and no falling down in these grave matters of life or death. Which shall it be? There is no halting place or halfway ground between "THE PRINCE OF PEACE" and "the prince of this world."

That our readers may see what others are teaching as well as ourselves, I take the liberty to give some excerpts from Brother F. D. Kershner's article in the Christian Standard of May 3 on the stand the church should take before the world and against the world. He argues from the fact that the church is "the light of the world." He says:

"A CITY THAT IS SET ON A HILL CANNOT BE HID."

The supreme fruition of the Christian is to bear aloft the banner of high moral idealism amid the lower crosscurrents of human passions and ambitions. . . . Practical dealing generally means compromise and choosing the "second best," but the church dare never compromise her message nor choose any goal short of perfection. "Be ye also perfect" is her watchword.

The idea that Christ's church should ever take a secondary place, that it should play the part of a camp follower rather than the leader of the charge, that it should allow other agencies to blaze the way in the hard and straight pathway upward, certainly finds no warrant in the teaching of the Scriptures. The church was poor in worldly goods in the apostolic days, it had no especial standing in the circles of high society, but it was independent, vigorous, and uncompromising in the proclamation of its message. Eventually it shook the world because it gave humanity a definite word concerning the deeper problems of life. It assumed the position of leadership because it could not be true to its mission and do anything else.

The pathos and tragedy of the present-day religious situation consists in the fact that the church follows rather than leads. As an eminent American minister said the other day: "Seldom, to its shame be it said, has the church ventured upon new paths until common sentiment has pronounced them safe." The city set upon a hill has changed its location to a valley and the bushel covers the candlestick. Kings and politicians use the church to promote their own selfish purposes, but have little interest in it otherwise. The people, looking for light, follow all sorts of will-o'-the-wisps because the church, as a whole, has lost the great prophetic note of Amos or Isalah or John the Baptist, to say nothing of the Carpenter himself. In the old tyrannical days of the Tzars, when the gallows and the knout were the fate of all who strove for political or religious freedom in the most populous nation of Europe, the church meekly obeyed the existent order. Occasionally a solitary prophet, like Tolstoy, arose, and the church drove him out of the fellowship.

Is not this true now? How many to whom we look for leadership have "meekly obeyed the existent order?" Think on the next paragraph.

The fact is that most of our modern church leaders seem to have no clear-cut vision of the Christian ideal for the age. They temporize, hesitate, wait to "size up things"—in short, follow rather than lead. Instead of announcing fearlessly the "word of the Lord" for the times, they wait to see what public opinion, or the political leaders, or some other outside agency, may have to say before committing themselves. It is as though Amos should have consulted the leaders at the court of Jeroboam II., or Isaiah the politicians who gathered around Ahaz, or John the Baptist the popular sentiment of Judea, before opening their mouths.

Jesus Christ proclaimed, as clearly as human words can proclaim anything, the doctrine that not force, but love, must rule the world; that loyalty to him and to his word must come first in everything; that the triumph of his gospel is above all other considerations. . . As never before, there is need for the church to be about its real business and to show the way. The demons of hatred and oppression and injustice must be cast out or the situation will speedily become worse than it was before. It is quite possible, if those to whom our Lord has intrusted his healing message should prove recreant to their trust, for a still more terrible Armageddon to come upon the world. Only love can save our shattered humanity, and it is the supreme business of the church to incarnate and to proclaim love. Will Christianity measure up to the crisis situation which confronts it? That, in part, depends upon each one of us.

The great problem, after all, is a matter of faith. Do we really believe that Jesus was right when he proclaimed his gospel of love, or do we, in our heart of hearts, accept another gospel? One thing is certain: we gain nothing by formal adherence to him and to his teaching so long as our actions give the lie to our words. Nominal Christianity, in the new age, must either get back to Christ, or else be stamped for the paganism which, in large measure, it really is. The world war has torn off the mask, and it can never be replaced again. A church which compromises with the world, which plays second fiddle to kings and politicians, which follows where it ought to lead, and which has no voice but an echo, will be roughly brushed aside by the multitudes who are asking for bread and will not be satisfied with a stone.

I solemnly ask, has the church of the New Testament been in the lead so as to make its impress upon the world—"the kings of the earth" and "the rulers" (Acts 4: 25, 26)—to shake the world, as Brother Kreshner says it did when, "independent, vigorous, and uncompromising," it first proclaimed the gospel and that Christ's disciples were not of the world? Has it not felt its way along in not a few places in a fawning attitude to find out first the public sentiment—the feeling of "the world," which hates it? And has it not in these places been led into "the dark valley of the shadow of death," so that it has about lost its identity? I also ask most seriously, what does "the world" do that the church does not do? Where is the line of demarcation? What do the various religious denominations do, as denominations, that the church in places does not do? During the terrible war period the Salvation Army preserved its identity; the Knights of Columbus preserved their identity; but what did the church do? What impress did the church of the New Testament make upon the world? Whom will God hold responsible for this?

Reader, have you not seen it stated in this paper, in substance, as Brother Kershner says, that "kings and politicians use the church to promote their own selfish purpose, but have little interest in it otherwise?" The highest conception many individuals seem to have of religion and various religious institutions and the church itself is, not to seek the glory of God and happiness of men, but to serve their own earthly and selfish ends. The difference between seeking first God's kingdom and his righteousness to his honor and glory and using the church and the Bible itself to serve one's own comfort and aggrandizement and selfish aims is as great as the difference between heaven and perdition. Am I seeking simply to "get by" or to preach "Christ, and him crucified," and to know nothing else, to keep unspotted from the world myself and to teach the church to do the same? Whose standard bearer am Ithe world's or Christ's? Am I allowing God to use me for his own glory, the purity of the church, and the salvation of sinners, or am I using the church and religious things as a cloak of covetousness and God and the Bible to serve my own worldly and selfish ambitions?

Let us, as Brother Kershner suggests, compare the direct, straightforward warnings and teachings of Isaiah, Amos, Hosea, Jeremiah, and other true prophets of God in most perilous times with the temporizing, compromising, moralizing, split-the-difference, camouflaging teaching and preaching of the present. Have I not be sought all to read these prophets and the New Testament in order to learn how God deals with individuals and nations, to imbibe the spirit of Christ, and to learn and teach the will of God? "No man can serve two masters;" and we know the rest. One may serve himself, serve the mammon of unrighteousness, serve the world with great zeal in the garb and name of religion; one may in the spirit of "the new age" and of the world preach to the glory of men and to the dishonor of Christ. Truly the church must blaze the way, and not creep and crawl and cringe in the wake of the world, afraid to assert its independence and to preach the word of God. When teachers and preachers in the church do this, God will remove them and raise up men who will bravely and boldly proclaim his whole counsel against all wickedness and worldliness, sin and rebellion, unfaithfulness and unbelief, and "play the second fiddle" to no power on earth. His church will stand forever!

"THERE IS NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN."

Let us not, under this present glamour of the world's "new age," be deceived into thinking there is something new and wonderful for the church to do and be led away from the solemn and paramount duty to call upon all everywhere to repent of all their ungodly deeds and sins against men, to put all violence out of their hands, to turn away in sorrow from the pleasures of sin and greed of gain, and to return in humility and submission to God. I am going to ask another question: How many earnest, scriptural, and burning sermons have you heard in the last several years against the divorce evil—legalized adultery—and adultery not legalized, the pleasures and deceitfulness of sin, covetousness, the love of money, selfishness, graft, greediness, fraud, corruption, and all kinds of worldliness? Instead, many preachers, scribes, and teachers proceed as if there is something new to be preached and done, if it is only to fit the old gospel and the old church to a "new age." Ah, my beloved, God, Christ, the Holy Spirit, the angels, the church, the gospel, salvation, heaven, the old devil, human nature, sin, the world, and hell are all the same. "There is nothing new under the sun" in all these tricks and snares and deceptions of Satan.

Whom the Lord loves he chastens, and his chastisements yield the peaceable fruits of righteousness only when laid to heart and produce repentance. It is a most grievous thing that all preachers and scribes and teachers are not with all earnestness and zeal calling upon all people everywhere to repent and to turn to God in humble submission, lest a worse thing come upon them. They seem to be seeking for a lesson everywhere except in the right place and in everything except in repentance and in living the humble, simple, useful, Christian life.

Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double-minded. Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness. Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall exalt you. (James 4: 8-10.)

Brother Srygley Seeks Discussion.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY,

As already announced in the Gospel Advocate, I am to begin a meeting at F Street Church, Louisville, Ky., on Sunday, May 11. I take this opportunity of saying that 1 want to investigate the doctrine taught by Brethren Boll and Jorgenson and others as to what the Bible teaches on the subject of the establishment of the kingdom and what Christ will do when he returns to this world in person. I invite these brethren, one or all of them, to be present, and promise them fair treatment and an equal division of time to show that their peculiar doctrine is according to the Scriptures. They have been claiming they wanted to discuss these questions with some one, and now they shall have the chance. They may have an equal division of time with me for one night or as many nights as they choose One of them may have all the time allowed their side, or they may divide it among themselves as they see proper. Come, brethren, and let us reason together.

Who Really Does This?

In Second Thessalonians, chapter 2 and verse 10, Paul speaks of "them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved." Have you ever taken time enough to think just how many people are included in this statement? I well remember when my thoughts went not beyond the Roman Catholic Church when studying this chapter that contains such striking statements about "the man of sin," "the son of perdition," who "opposeth and exalteth himself against all that is called God or that is worshiped." And while I am sure that the Catholic Church has, to a large degree, fulfilled quite a bit of Paul's prophecy in this chapter, I am firmly convinced that many of us have looked too long and persistently at the corruptions of Rome and not enough at our own sins and mistakes; not that we should stop seeing and condemning all the corruptions that this gigantic religious organization has thrust upon the people, but that we should see to it that our own hearts are kept clean and pure and in harmony with all the teaching of our Lord.

Who Really Loves the Truth?

When we come to consider the subject of receiving "the love of the truth," that we may be saved, it would be well to ask the question: Who is it that really receives "the love of the truth?"

Certainly it is not the Christian who receives only that part of the truth that suits him and the rest of the truth he flagrantly rejects. On this point there can be no controversy. How often have we who have pleaded long and loud for the religious world to return to the will of God, and all the teaching of our Lord on the conversion of the alien sinner, allowed ourselves to go no further than this in our plea for a reception of the love of the truth! Most certainly we must ever contend for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the pure word of God here; but we must see to it that we are just as certain not to stop here, but go all the way with the teaching of Christ, and plead, with Paul, that we "stand perfect and complete in all the will of God." (See Col. 4: 12.)

Brother David Lipscomb came more nearly loving all the truth than any man under whose influence it has ever been my good fortune to fall. Not that he is the only one who has lived and died in this age who loved the truth, for others have lived and died that loved it as ardently as he; but I am merely speaking of the one in whom I saw this love in such comprehensiveness and with such unyielding determination. His was a love for all the truth on all questions upon which God has spoken. I shall never cease to thank God for having seen and known this great disciple of our Lord.

Some Other Truths We Need to Love.

Let us not forget the importance of continuing to love God's truth to the alien sinner, and think never of compromising one word of it; but, along with this, let us love all he says to us as Christians. I think the Bible teaches that the Christian must live on the word of God—that it is his spiritual food. (See Matt. 4: 4.) This scripture says we must live "by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." In nature there is such a thing, I am told, as a "balanced diet." The same is true in grace. Try living for a while on "bread alone" and leave the meats and other foods out, and see how you will get along. One of the reasons for so many sickly, high-tempered, unbalanced Christians is the fact that they are feeding—if feeding at all—on an unbalanced diet; they take a part of God's word and try to live on it alone. This will not do; it takes all the word of God on all questions upon which he has spoken to us to make a well-rounded, strong, and fully developed disciple of our Lord.

- 1. How about the forgiving spirit that the Bible says so much about? Have we received the "love of the truth" on this point of the doctrine of Christ? It is needless for me to introduce the scriptures, for every reader knows the doctrine of Christ abounds in it. Does not the Bible teach us to love, and not to hate, one another? I go no further here, but leave you, kind reader, to settle this question for yourself; but I must ask an additional question—viz.: If you love not the truth here, how much better are you than those who love not the whole teaching of our Lord to aliens?
- 2. What about the teaching of Christ concerning those who have fallen, and who arise and make another effort to overcome their weaknesses and live for God? I heard of a young sister who made her mistakes-not as great, however, as some who fell and rose again and made excellent Christians-and who went before the church and made her confession and asked the prayers of all the members to the end that she might be saved; but quite a number of the younger set in the church gave her the "cold shoulder," so to speak, and for the meat that she asked they gave her a serpent, and for the bread that she asked they gave her a stone. This young sister became discouraged and quit trying. Now there is just as much hope for one as the other; if any difference, the latter may have the better chance for heaven. When did Christ ever turn his back to a soul that asked for salvation, succor, and help? When did he ever fail to take an interest in any soul, regardless of how far that one had fallen, if he or she asked for salvation? Can we be his disciples and refuse to forgive the prodigal that returns? Are we receiving "the love of the truth" to the end that we may be saved, If we turn our backs on them and discourage them? Here, also, I will say, there is no room for discussion. May the Lord keep us back from such sinning and create within us a heart that longs for the salvation of all.
- 3. Something has already been said of late, on this page, about the importance of our loving what Christ teaches concerning our withdrawing fellowship from those who walk disorderly. Do we love his teaching here as much as we do on other points of doctrine?
- 4. We have also had something to say about how God looks at those who cause division in the church of our Lord. Do we love his teaching on the oneness for which he prayed as we do on other questions? If so, we will see to it that we are not the dividers of churches, but those who take harmony and peace instead of strife and confusion everywhere we go. Has God said anything about our striving "about words, to no profit, to the subverting of them that hear?" (2 Tim. 2: 14.) Has he said anything about our "foolish and ignorant questionings" that "gender strifes?" (Verse 23.) Do we love his teaching here as well as other things he has said?
- 6. Do the elders and deacons of our different congregations love the teaching of our Lord as to their qualifications to fill such places and as to their duty so clearly pointed out in the Bible? Do the elders really have the good of the church at heart as much as they do their business affairs that they daily pursue for a living here on earth? I say, have our elders "received the love of the truth" on this point of teaching as much so as they have on other points? Are they "given to hospitality," and do they love to be so? Are they "apt to teach," and are they studying and praying to become more so? Think how Brother John T. Lewis' work with the Macon church did much good. His sound, logical teaching greatly strengthened the faithful there.

Our short meeting at Dalton greatly strengthened the work at that place. The meeting was begun by Brother Flavil Hall and closed by Brother Garrett. Some of the best letters that I have received from that section have come since the meeting closed, and they bring unmistakable evidence that the work goes well. We have some splendid people in the Dalton church, and we are expecting to hear nothing but good from them.

Brother Silas E. Templeton will be busily engaged in general evangelistic work, the Lord willing, for the balance of this year in this State. His special work will be that of visiting the scattered disciples in the State. If you want him to visit your section, drop us a card, and arrangements will be made to this end.

You Will Write a Letter Like This.

I wish I knew which one of the thousands of letters I receive would have the most weight with you, my friend. I cannot quote all of them here, but I am going to ask you to read these carefully and then give me a chance to renew your health and make you write me one very much like them:

Barnard Street, Savannah, Ga.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.

Dear Sir: I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders, and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft-bolled eggs, shredded wheat—a very insufficient diet for an active working man—and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe to in my practice, and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantity as possible, for its properties are so happily blendsd and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and biadder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find it has acted nicely in each case; and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M.D.

These are not selected cases, nor are the results unusual. I receive thousands like them from physicians, ministers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers, and every conceivable profession. I want the satisfaction of receiving such a letter from you. No matter what your complaint may bedyspepsia, indigestion, nervous headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, or any curable atiment that has not responded to drugs. Gospel Trumpet Blasts.

BY A. A. BUNNER.

"Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense. And again, The Lord shall judge his people. [A great consolation for his people to be assured of this fact.] It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." (Heb. 10: 30, 31.)

"For our God is a consuming fire." (Heb. 12: 29.)

"Without are the dogs, and the sorcerers, and the fornicators, and the murderers, and the idolaters, and every one that loveth and maketh a lie." (Rev. 22: 15.)

"But for the fearful, and unbelieving, and abominable, and murderers, and fornicators, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, their part shall be in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death." (Rev. 21: 8.)

I rely upon the mercy of God to keep me and save me from the described fearful and unending doom. Are you real sure of this, my kind friend? If so, what are you doing? Absolutely nothing. I have cast myself wholly upon Him, and I shall trust my all in the hands of a merciful and heavenly Benefactor, and I feel sure that he is too full of tender mercies to allow me to perish forever. But "how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" (Heb. 2: 3.) And if doing nothing is not neglecting "so great salvation," I confess that I do not know the meaning of that fearful word "neglect." I grant that God is merciful; but with all of this, I know of no mercy for the disobedient, only as set forth in his merciful plan of salvation in the gospel (see Tit. 3: 5, 6), and they must, as humble, believing penitents, become obedient to the claims of this merciful plan of salvation before they can lay claim to any share in his great mercy for a lost and ruined race. "Therefore bath he [God] mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth" (Rom. 9: 18), and whom he "hardeneth" he will "miserably destroy" (Matt. 21: 41; Ps. 145; 20); and all of this he will do because of his great mercy that he has for his government and all of his faithful subjects, because "his mercy endureth forever." I now cite my readers to his wonderful doings in behalf of his faithful ones as recorded in Ps. 136. Listen. God "smote Egypt in their first-born." (Verse 10.) Why? Because "his mercy endureth forever." He "overthrew Pharaoh and his host in the Red Sea." (Verse 15.) He did this great act because "his mercy endureth forever." He "smote great kings." (Verse 17.) Wherefore did he do all of this? "For his mercy endureth forever." "And slew famous

How Organic Iron-Nuxated Iron-helps Solve Problem of Supplying Iron Deficiency, Thereby Increasing the Strength and Endurance Delicate Care-worn Women in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

Many a woman who ought still to be young in feeling is losing the old-time vim and energy that makes life worth living simply because her blood is thinning out and possibly starving through lack of iron. In commenting upon the alarming iron deficiency in the blood of the average woman of today, Dr. George H. Baker, formerly Physician and Surgeon Monmouth Memorial Hospital of New Jersey said:

"What women need to put roses in their cheeks and the springtime of life into their step is not cosneties or stimulating drugs, but plenty of rich pure red blood. kings" (verse 18), for the great reason that "his mercy endureth forever." He slew "Sihon king of the Amorites," and "Og the king of Bashan," and took their land from them and gave it for "an heritage unto Israel" (verses 19-22)-all of this because of the fact that "his mercy endureth forever." But while "his mercy endureth forever," It is only in behalf of, and extended to, his loyal and obedient subjects throughout his entire dominion, visible and invisible. On the other hand, he will "reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." (2 Pet. 2: 9.) Again, he says: "For he shall have judgment without mercy, that hath showed no mercy; and mercy rejoiceth against judgment," (James 2: 13.) Still, "his mercy endureth forever," but is extended only to his faithful ones. "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance [not mercy, though "his mercy endureth forever "] on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day." (2 Thess. 1: 7-10.) Again: "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." (Matt. 25: 46.) "And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever." (Rev. 20: 10.) Again: "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire," (Verse 15.) Now, friendly sinner, recalcitrant Christians, and hypocritical professors of His holy religion, let me warn you that the God of the Bible, the Creator of all creation, is not a universalist God, neither is he a sectarian God, but he is a God who is the Almighty One, and he loves justice and mercy; and while "his mercy endureth forever," he will by no means "clear the guilty" (Ex. 34: 7; Num. 14: 18), but will consign the finally incorrigibly disobedient, including all Hars and vile slanderers, along with the old Accuser of the brethren, to eternal flames, "where their worm dieth not, and their fire is not quenched." (See Mark 9: 42-48.) In view of all this, O sinner, along with all recalcitrant and lukewarm Christians, hasten to repent and turn; for now in this life only is the day of salvation. Heed the warning voice now.

Jackson, May 1.- I will write something of the condition of the Highland church of Christ, at this place. er L. S. Lancaster is located here and preaches for us twice a month; Brother A. G. Freed, of Henderson, once a month. We are very much delighted with their earnest efforts to build up the cause here, and the church seems to be in a very prosperous condition. The officers are: A. M. Tucker, W. H. Sanders, T. E. Tatum, elders; W. J. Hall, J. E. Stovall, A. M. Dees, deacons. These men seem to be willing and ready to sacrifice their time and means for the good of the cause. This congregation was established only a few years ago, and I think our membership is between one hundred and one hundred and twenty-five and gradually growing stronger. Quite a number come from other sections and unite with us and are helping to hold up the banner of Christ, and we appreciate their help and influence. We are not yet what we hope and expect to be, Brethren, let us pray for more zeal and a greater willingness to sacrifice time and means to help the unsaved, the poor, and the fallen .- John T. Hall.

Nashville, May 5,--A good work is being carried on by the church at Reid Avenue, in Nashville. The members are almost all up and doing in helping to harvest the ripened grain. success of bringing many into the church and Sunday-school work is largely due to the earnest, untiring efforts of Brother A. S. Derryberry, who is now engaged in the third year's work with the church at this place. The many good results of his faithful work and the esteem and love which this church has for him was manifested on the night of April 28, when about one hundred members of the congregation met at his home and gave him a pleasant surprise—a purse of forty-five dollars as a birthday present-and were joined by Brother Derryberry and his companion in celebrating his sixty-eighth birthday by sing-ing, praying, and talking of how the most good could be accomplished. They served refreshments, and all went away happy. Brother Derry-berry has been a faithful worker with the church here. On the first Lord's day in each month Brother W. Bates occupies the pulpit at the morning and evening services. He is one who proclaims the simple gospel of Christ in an earnest and impressive manner, and good results can be seen of his earnest and faithful teaching, Brother J. C. Lawson, a great help and support in many ways to the church. comes to us occasionally with a good lesson that is always beneficial. Brother Lawson is a brother and teacher whom we should appreciate. I pray that we may all grow stronger in the Lord and that we may try each day to do more and more to keep the good work moving on, and finally all be permitted to enter the beautiful home in heaven.—Mrs. Ed. "What Ails the World?"

FOUND AT LAST!

A strange and surprising book, flaming with imagery like a moving picture from Adam to Woodrow Wilson, shows the real cause of all sin and sorrow. There is nothing like it in all the world of literature!

The leading character was present when God made Adam, and as a witness of events from then to now he visits a pastor at midnight and relates the vivid story that unfolds the mystery of groaning ages; also explains that because of desecration, Sabbath was hid from men when the sun stood still, and found in Sunday after "crucifixion Wednesday."

It clears many difficult Scriptures, reveals the cure of ills that mark the bloody path of nations, and shows our education ideas are about as correct as farming was a hundred years ago; but it sees better things for the coming age. In many places the book goes from house to house among readers cager to know its story. A large, new edition reduces the price to $1.10, if ordered direct from York Bookstore, Box 84G, York, S. C. Unless we know "What Alls the World," we cannot hope to cure it. It is our duty to know.—Advt.

We are planning to return this fall for another meeting, and we expect to keep "pegging away" until we establish the cause at this place. I have promised to hold a meeting at Poteau, Okla., beginning the latter part of May. We have one or two members there. We have no house, and they have not yet found a building suitable for the meeting. We building suitable for the meeting. We would appreciate the use of a tent for this work. Who can spare a tent for the first two weeks of June? Shady Point congregation will bear the expenses of shipping the tent to and from the meeting. Write me at and from the meeting. Write me at once. The time is ripe for a meeting at Poteau. Help us in this matter. Pray for us.—Will W. Slater.

California.

Fresno, May 1 .- The work at the Nevada Avenue congregation is moving along nicely. We have had a number of additions by letter and one baptism recently. The following preaching brethren have recently visited us and favored us with good sermons; Brethren T. B. Larimore and L. D. Perkins, of Armona; Brother Car-gyle, of Escalon; and J. A. Craig, of Patterson. The members of the congregation gave the writer and family quite a surprise on Friday evening of last week. More than sixty persons assembled at our home and gave us a china shower. They also brought their lunches with them, and after enjoying ourselves the sisters arranged the table and we "had joy and gladness, a feast and a good day." We not only appreciate the gifts, but we are very grateful for the kindness and thoughtfulness that prompted the givers.-W. Halliday Trice.

Illinois.

Brookport, May 6.—Our meeting began on April 15 and closed on May 4. Brother D. A. Sommer, of Indianapolis, Ind., did the preaching. Six persons were baptized and others "almost persuaded." The members are at peace with each other and the cause was greatly strengthened by this meeting.—A. T. Kerr.

Dugger, May 1.—I was at Bismarck, Ill., on the third Lord's day in April. After the meeting for worship one person came forward and made confession of his faith, and I immersed him that afternoon. The next Saturday night and Sunday and till Tuesday

Freckles-

There is a very effective way to remove freckles and make the skin clear and beautiful. It is in this way that Kintho Cream gradually gets rid of he old, freckled skin, and gives a soft, clear, white, youthful and beautiful skin, which of course should have no freckles.

Just get a box of Kintho Beauty Cream at any drug store and apply it night and morning as directed, and your freckles should begin to disappear in a day or two. It is well to get a cake of Kintho Soap also, as this helps to keep the freckles away, once Kintho has removed them.

Hatched 175 Chicks

G. W. Miller, of Pittsburg, Okla., writes: "I used Reefer's Ready Relief, and out of 175 chicks hatched didn't lose one." Mrs. T. E. Murphy, of Hughesville, Mo., writes: "Have been using Ready Relief for white diarrhea, and lost only one chick out of 140."

You can do as well. Reefer's Ready Rellef in your baby chicks' first drinking water will save them from dying off with that dreaded white diarrhea plague. This remedy is the discovery of a famous scientist. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 9255 Poultry Building, Kansas City, Mo., for a package that will save 509 baby chicks. Aren't your delicate downy baby chicks worth five for a cent? You take no risk. Mr. Reefer will refund every cent of your money if you are not entirely satisfied, and a million-dollar bank backs up this statement. Send for a $1 package to-day, or, better still, send $2.35 on special discount for three regular $1 packages and insure every hatch you get. If you don't want to try this bank-guaranteed chick saver, at least write to-day for Mr. Reefer's free valuable poultry book that gives the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

I find all these points taking on a more active life in the work of the Lord, and we are trusting that greater results will attend their labors. I am now at Dugger. I spoke to a few persons here last night and will preach again to-night. I would say to the brethren in Alabama, Tennessee, and Kentucky that I am thinking of making a trip South again this summer, and will appreciate it if they will keep me at work in meetings. If my help is desired in any of these States, brethren, just write to me at once so I can arrange the work. My home address is Waiseka, Ill.—Andrew Perry.

Van Buren, May 5.—I am now in a good meeting at Fairmount. Attendance fine at each service. We expect many souls to come to Christ. I will probably go from here to Louisville for a few days' work with the King's Hall brethren.—R. A. Craig.

Paducah, May 6.—Last Lord's day was a great day with the brethren on Goebel Avenue, this city. There were five additions at the morning service—three from the "digressives" and two by confession and baptism. Brother

L. L. Brigance, of Murray, will be with us in a meeting beginning on the third Lord's day in this month. Pray for us. We are expecting a great meeting. —Charlie Taylor

Comanche, May 5.—I recently spent a few days preaching at Loco; also preached on the fourth Sunday in April at Valley View Schoolhouse near Yukon, but the rain interfered. I was with the brethren at home yesterday. I shall go to Wheeler County, Texas, this week, for some work in that part of the country. I have several places to visit in the Texas Panhandle, preaching and lecturing. If there ever was a need for faithful, sacrificing gospel work, it is now.—U. G. Wilkinson.

In Memoriam-W. Norman Luton. BY H. LEO BOLES.

Several weeks ago there appeared in the Gospel Advocate an announcement of Brother Luton's death. It was thought best to give further notice to this most excellent young preacher. Brother Luton was born on March 17. 1895, and fell a victim of the influenza on October 25, 1918.

My acquaintance with Brother Luton began in 1913. In September, 1913, he entered the Nashville Bible School, now David Lipscomb College. He had been preaching the gospel for some time before he entered the Nashville Bible School, and came to that school to better prepare himself for preaching the gospel. He felt keenly the responsibility of a public proclaimer of the gospel and loved the truth of God so truly that he wanted to prepare himself for the greatest influence.

He remained in school for three years, graduating with the degree of B.L. in May, 1916. He returned to the college for another year and was graduated with the degree of B.S. in May, 1917. As a student, he was industrious, energetic, and faithful to all of his duties. I do not recall that he ever broke any of the regulations of the college the four years that he was in school. Brother Luton had strong intellectual powers and was a strong character in the student body. He was not satisfied with a slight knowledge of the subject, but wished to master whatever he undertook. He was above the average in thoroughness and mental grasp.

Of course, during his four years in college he put the emphasis upon the study of the Bible. It was my pleasure to be his teacher in the Bible while he remained at college. He never neglected his Bible studies, as some pupils do. He grew very rapidly in the knowledge of the truth and made much progress as a preacher of the gospel. It was not his method to study the Bible merely to get more sermon outlines; he studied the Bible from Genesis to Revelation with a desire to know it and to be able to teach others. Many young preachers make the mistake in just studying the Bible to get sermons and do not have a clear understanding of the Bible. During the four years Brother Luton was in college he studied the entire Bible, going through it twice in the class room. This gave him a broad, systematic knowledge of the Book of God.

Brother Luton used logical reasoning and could present the arguments with great power. He preached with success in Georgia, Tennessee, and Kentucky. All who knew him loved him and had reason to expect the Lord to use him for great good, should he be permitted to remain here on earth the allotted time for man. It was with deep regret that I learned of his premature death. Brother Luton died in the triumph of the living faith and has the promise of the reward of those "who die in the Lord."

Differences in Trees.

In studying a vast collection of growing trees, such as may be found at the Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University, the imaginative mind may see and detect unthought-of new laws of nature at work. So strikingly are the likes and dislikes of certain trees for methods of growing that even an amateur soon learns something of their care and the attention and conditions for growth that they require.

To Stop Falling Hair.

The cause of baldness, hair falling out, loss of luster and color, is found in the roots of the hair itself. Our hair is but a portion of our body, and, like the other organs, cannot subsist without food. The hair finds its food in the fat layer of skin next to the When this source of food is stopped or impeded, out comes the hair. The dreaded disease, dandruff, is a germ. It collects on the bottom of the hair and eats away its life. The hair sack from which the hair comes is embedded in the layer of under skin. When the scalp is diseased and the hair falls out, often this small hair sack closes. Eventually, as a result of the dandruff germs, baldness comes. The proper method of restoring the hair and stopping the falling out must necessarily be in the destruction of the dandruff germs and in the reopening of the little hair sacks. Further-more, in order to rejuvenate the scalp and make the growth of new hair more vigorous, it is necessary that the system be able to furnish an abundance of hair food. Many artificial methods have been tried in restoring the hair, which were only surface remedies, and, failing to reach the small hair sacks, were unsuccessful. Reopening the hair sack allows the new hair to grow. Calvacura begins at the root of the trouble, and its use is, therefore, advised. Its mission is to feed the new hair as well as the old and rid the scalp of all dandruff germs. By thus cleansing and rejuvenating the entire scalp, a healthy growth of hair is assured. Falling of hair is stopped; new life and color to dead, gray hair is developed, and the hair becomes smooth and velvety. not an unpleasant treatment, and takes only a few minutes of time each day for about six week. The Union Laboratory, 214 109th Street, Binghamton, N. On January 13, 1919, the angel of death visited the home of Brother John T. Smithson and claimed the spirit of their little daughter, Mary Elizabeth, only about one year old. Where Most Sickness Begins and Ends

BY FRANKLIN DUANE, M. D.

It can be said broadly that most human ills begin in the stomach and end in the is begin in the stomach and end in the stomach. Good digestion means good health, and poor digestion means bad health. The minute your stomach fails to properly dispose of the food you eat, troubles begin to crop out in various forms. Indigestion and dyspensia are the commonest forms, but thin, impure blood, headaches, backaches, pimples, blotches, dizziness, belching, coated tongue, weakness, poor appetite, sleeplessness, coughs, ness, poor appetite, sieepiessness, coughs, colds and bronchitis are almost as common. There is but one way to have good health, and that is to put and keep your stomach in good order. This is easy to do if you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a wonderful tonic and blood covery. It is a wonderful tome and blood purifier, and is so safe to take, for it is made of roots and herbs. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., stands behind this standard medicine, and it is good to know that so distinguished a physician is proud to have his name identified with it. When you take Golden Medical Discovery, you are getting the benefit of the experience of a dector whose reputation goes all around getting the benefit of the experience of a doctor whose reputation goes all around the earth. Still more, you get a temperance medicine that contains not a drop of alcohol or narcotic of any kind. Long ago Dr. Pierce combined certain valuable vegetable ingredients—without the use of vegetable ingredients—without the use of alcohol—so that these remedies always have been strictly temperance medicines. If piles are torturing you, get and use Pierce's Anodyne Pile Ointment. The quick relief it gives is hard to believe until you try it. If constipated, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be taken while using Anodyne Pile Ointment. Few indeed are the cases which these splendid remedies will not relieve and usually overcome. They are so good that nearly every drug store has them for sale.

be taken. Being sick herself, Sister Smithson could not attend to the children, and little Mary Elizabeth was denied that loving tenderness and care that the mother alone can give; and Sister Smithson is denied the consolation of having ministered to the child in its last hours. Over all the graves in its last hours. Over all the graves filled by war and scourge Jesus stands, saying, "I am the resurrection, and the life;" and when we have passed through a few more of them, he will gather the faithful into a country where such are unknown. My soul leaps forward at the thought.

Jordan.

On April 10, 1919, I was called to Jamestown, Texas, to conduct the funeral services of Brother William Jor-dan, who lived four miles north of Canton, Texas. Brother Jordan was a grand and noble man of God, and had worn the bright armor of righteous-ness for the past thirty years. When only a young man he became one of the elders of the Jamestown congregation, and his deeds of love still linger in the hearts of many that knew him Brother Jordan dled on the morning of April 9. His death was a sudden one. His life was wafted away almost without a moment's notice when his home was blown away by a eyclone. Brother Jordan was always ready to give an answer for the hope that was within him. He was sixty-one years of age, and is survived by eight children and four grandchildren While in the Bible class the last time the met with the brethren, he spoke of the assurance of his hope. He fought the good fight, kept the faith, finished his course, and henceforth for him there is laid up a crown that will never fade. Whats G. Jernigan.

Hewgley.

Tolbert Fanning Hewgley was born on September 17, 1890, in Davidson County, Tenn. Having contracted influenza, he quietly passed "over the river" on Friday night, December 27, 1918, in Cheatham County, and was buried at the old Dozier graveyard. In September, 1916, during a meeting at Bull Run, Brether Hewgley obeyed the gospel, being baptized by the writer. He leaves a father and mother, four brothers and three sisters, a wife and three little girls, besides many brethren and friends, to mourn his departure. May these loved ones mourn not as those who have no hope, but may they so live that they may meet their loved one in the "sweet by and by." It is both comforting and consoling to know that "precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." "Grief endureth for the night, who is the morning. From our viewpoint, it would have been better for him to have remained longer here; but "the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

fifty-two grandchildren, forty-seven great-grandchildren, and seven greatgreat-grandchildren, making a total of one hundred and seventeen children in the five generations. Sixty-two years ago Sister Jones confessed her Savior at Antioch Church and was buried with him in baptism at the hands of Brother J. W. Hard-ing, by which she was made a member of the body of Christ and in which she has lived a long Christian life. She had passed the eighty-ninth mile-stone on life's highway and was nearing the ninetieth when, on February 26, 1919, she grew too weak and weary with her load, and, taking her burden for a pillow, quietly and serenely laid herself down to silent rest. Sister Jones was a sweet old soul whom everybody loved. The minister of the Main Street church of Christ conducted funeral services at the home. O. D. Maple.

To Brother and Sister Whitehead were born five children—two boys and three girls—O, T. Whitehead, Oxford, Miss.: girls—O. T. Whitehead, Oxford, Miss.; W. A. Whitehead, Tula, Miss.; Mrs. W. T. Davis and Mrs. G. W. Brummett, Tula, Miss.; and Mrs. W. H. Lagrone, of Delay, Miss.—all of whom are still living, and all members of the church of Christ, with their family Hes. The writer was well acquainted with Sister Whitehead and her good family. They all have our heartfelt sympathy in this time of grief and sorrow, but there is no reason for our sorrowing as those who have no hope. Sister Whitehead was a true Christian companion, mother, and neighbor. Everybody who knew her loved her for her good deeds, Christian character, and integrity. Peace be to her ter, and integrity. Peace be to her ashes while her spirit rests in the third heaven to await the coming of the Master and the welcome plaudit: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." War and disease War and disease have wrought destruction among us, and aching hearts have sought the comfort that God alone can give. What a blessed thought that "our light affliction, which is for the moment, worketh for us more and more an exceedingly an eternal weight of glory!" On January 7, 1919, Sister Martha Elizabeth Cobb, mother of the writer's wife, was called to her heav-enly reward. She was in her seventyfirst year and was apparently in her usual state of good health when stricken with Spanish influenza, which took the pneumonia course, resulting in her death ten days later. She is survived by six children—three sons and three daughters—all of whom were with her when the end came, except one son who has been in France

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos-listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was premptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, dura-bility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes sprung up in the South for Ezwear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn. N. Edifying as the Need May Be

An Address in Behalf of David Lipscomb College.

Behind our plans for to-day there is a serious and noble purpose. If our plans materialize, this day will become memorable in the history of this institution. It will live to remind us of a new era of usefulness. If we fail—but why should we speak of failure? I like these words:

"Live in the sunshine, don't live in the gloom; Carry some gladness the world to illume."

To-day there will be a test of our stewardship. What do we mean by "Christian stewardship?" I answer by a reference to the parables of our Savior. Parables are valuable because they give us spiritual truths in the setting of familiar everyday experiences. The parable of the prodigal son portrays the Father's love in a truly wonderful way. The parable of the sower reveals the right and wrong attitude toward the truth. The parable of the good Shepherd shows us God's care for the individual. The parable of the hidden treasure emphasizes the value of the kingdom.

In just the same way our relationship to God through our possessions is made known from Heaven's viewpoint in the parables of the steward and the talents. Recognition of the force of other parables brings us to accept the Savior's teaching as to our stewardship. We are pitifully slow to grasp the fact that it is inconsistent to accept all that Jesus says about love's gifts to us and then to disregard the call for our gifts of love to others.

There exists a fundamental misconception in the view of multitudes of disciples as to their relation to their possessions. Men constantly boast of their ownership, when this ground of boasting is denied us altogether. What do the Scriptures say on this subject? Moses said to Israel: "Behold, unto Jehovah thy God belongeth heaven and the heaven of heavens, the earth, with all that is therein."

(Deut. 10: 14.) In Haggai's book we read: "The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith Jehovah of hosts." (Hag. 2: 8.) In David's psalms he has Jehovah say: "For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills." (Ps. 50: 10.) And beyond these strong words it is strikingly significant to hear Paul say: "Ye are not your own; for ye were bought with a price." (1 Cor. 6: 19, 20.) How little ground do these ringing words of holy writ leave us for that pitiful pride which boasts of "our" possessions!

The real problem is not that we give more or upon a different plan, but that we give a radically different conception of our relation to our possessions. We are not owners, but stewards. What we have we hold in trust. The recognition of this principle would transform religious conditions. A new day will dawn when a sense of actual accountability to God for all of our resources comes to possess the hearts of the people. The thought of the child of God should be that every dollar, in its use, should tell upon the advancement of the kingdom of God in the earth. In medieval times the Venetians had in their currency a gold ducat which bore a Latin inscription, which, translated, read: "To thee, O Christ, be given this ducat, which is thine own coin." This was the thought of Livingstone when he exclaimed so splendidly: "I will place no value on anything I have or may possess, except in its relation to the kingdom of Christ."

What is finer than the conscious integrity of a man who has handled faithfully the estate of another? Such is the feeling of the man who has dealt fairly with God. Who among us enjoys life the most? That man who in proportion to his means gives the most.

The trustees of this institution believe that you will find in our plans for a new girls' dormitory and other much-needed improvements a fine opportunity for the investment of the Lord's money. Brother James A. Harding believed in its promise of usefulness so strongly that he gave it the best years of his life and devoted to it all the energies of his magnanimous heart. Uncle David Lipscomb believed in it so strongly that with one stroke of his pen he bequeathed practically all of his earthly possessions. Their day of earthly sacrifice is done. One of them has gone to his heavenly reward and the other is waiting by the river. But what of ourselves? What will we do to continue the work that was so gloriously begun?

We ask you to think not especially of the past history of the school—although its record will bear the closest scrutiny. We ask you not to think of the present; the present speaks for itself. But we ask you to think of the future. As the brave engineer, pinioned beneath the wreck of his engine, said to those who would rescue him, "Don't mind me now; go back and flag the train that is coming on;" so let us think of the army of children who are coming on and who need a true education, which is the leading of human souls to what is best and making what is best of them.

We may make some mistakes in the conduct of the school, but we should never fail to keep before us its holy purpose. The only one who never mistakes is the one who never does anything. "Preserve us from the man who eternally wants to hold the scales even, and so never gets done his weighing—never hands anything over the counter. Let the rest of us go ahead and make our mistakes—as few as we can, as many as we must—only let us go ahead."

As Emerson put it:

"Life is too short to waste
In critic peep or cynic bark,
Quarrel or reprimand;
"Twill soon be dark.
Mind well thine own aim,
And God speed the mark."

What's the Matter?

The casual observer of affairs, whether pessimist or optimist, knows that something is radically wrong with the world in general. That there is something radically wrong with the moral and spiritual world is equally apparent to the casual observer of religious affairs. A Paul or a Silas is needed to turn the world upside down. (Acts 17: 6.)

When Mohammedanism, that incongruous mixture of truth and error, that combination of Christianity, Judaism. and Paganism, was one hundred years old, it had almost conquered the whole civilized world. Christianity, the only true, God-ordained, perfect religion, is nearly two thousand years old, and yet not one-half the people of earth have embraced it. Does the fault lie with the religion or its Founder, with the adherents of Christianity, or with the rebellious inhabitants of this world? Certainly not with the system per se, nor with its Author. The blame does not rest entirely with the unconverted, even those who have hardened their hearts and stiffened their necks. The blame attaches largely to the arrogance and self-satisfaction of those who have, or think they have, the truth, With the acquirement of truth comes responsibility. It may be better to say with Pilate, "What is truth?" than to boast, "We have the truth." Progress is the essential to success in Christianity, and self-satisfaction is the enemy to progress. Self-satisfaction means stagnation, and stagnation means corruption.

For a thousand years the Roman Catholic Church rested at ease, satisfied with her doctrine, her hierarchy, her ritualism, and her moral status—with everything, in fact, but the limitation to her temporal power. Nothing but absolute spiritual and temporal control over the civilized world could satisfy a Hildebrand, or an Alexander III., or an Innocent III. This stagnation in morals and religion naturally stirred some godly souls now and then; hence, we find such men as Benedict, Francis, Dominic (called "saints"), Savonarola, and Wycliffe striving to make a reformation entirely within the pale of the Roman Church. But, with all their high ideals and lofty aspirations, they could not prevent the stagnation and the consequent corruption.

Not until Luther had passed through thrilling experiences, bitter, and yet, to a man of his temperament, sweet, did it dawn upon reforming spirits that the reformation should be external and not internal—that the papacy must be ignored and the connection with the ancient church must be broken. These changes that took place in the break with Rome were momentous. They were ecclesiastical. Rome's traditions were disregarded, her doctrines were challenged, her authority was overridden, and her morals were called in question. To Luther and his coadjutors we are undoubtedly indebted.

But the period of reformation was not to end when Luther passed away. Other reformations based upon his were to come. Each would have its peculiar and distinctive feature.

The reformation of Calvin's was doctrinal and civic. Learned as he was, Calvin reduced the doctrines of the Reformation to a concise statement in the "Institute of the Christian Religion." But Luther and Calvin were antagonistic, as Luther and Zwingle had been. The disagreement among the great Protestant reformers furnished a cudgel to be used by the conservative Catholics, and in the Catholic counter-reformation the old, established church presented a solid front against a divided and dissentious Protestantism. Surely, right ought to be as agreeable as wrong; truth, as concordant as error. Truly "the sons of this world are for their own generation wiser than the sons of the light."

The English Church reformation need not detain us long, since not conscience, but convenience, and not dissatisfaction with doctrine, but dissatisfaction with papal decree and papal obstinacy, were the primary causes of the break of the English Church with the mother church. To be sure, changes for the better, both in doctrine and practice, eventually came; but the Anglican reformation was only partial, and ever remains thus.

The next reformatory movement that needs exploiting and that deserves much commendation, a reformation that made an indelible impress upon the religious world, was that of the Wesleys. The English Church had lapsed into self-satisfaction, lethargy, and stagnation. It needed a revival; and that revival came with the preaching of John and Charles Wesley and Whitefield. England and America were stirred with enthusiasm by the godly example and eloquent appeals of these men. Methodism was the result. From the standpoint of consecration to God, that reformation was quite ideal. Holy living was the chief purpose in view. What greater design could a reformer have than to stir Christians to holier living? Was not the climax of reformation reached? What was left for Campbell and his associates to do, if Luther had made an ecclesiastical, Calvin a doctrinal, and Wesley a moral and spiritual reformation? Nothing if these had all been perfect and permanent. But they were neither. Something was wrong with the basis-the fundamental principles employed. The Book of God had played a part in all these reformations, but it had not yet been duly exalted as the only basis of Christian unity, the only source of Christian doctrine and the fundamental means of obtaining moral strength and spiritual grace. It is the motto, "The Bible, and the Bible alone, as our rule of faith and practice," which makes the Campbell reformation so ideal and attractive.

The caption of this article is, "What's the Matter?" What is the matter with what? With the movement started so auspiciously by the Campbells and others? Why, the trouble is not in the movement, nor in the men who inaugurated it. The trouble has been with us, who have espoused the movement, while refusing to wear the name of this great reformer and while denying that we are his followers (it would be better if some did follow him more scrupulously than they do).

Campbell would combine the good of all the preceding reformatory movements; but what have we done? We have stressed the "faith" (doctrine) and minimized, or neglected outright, the "practice" (spirituality). To keep these in proper balance is a difficult task, but yet it is our task. It must be done. We should welcome any tendency upon the part of the sectarian world to a purer doctrine—to a "Thus saith the Lord." Thrice welcome should be any attempt upon the part of believers in Christ to become more spiritual-minded and to make their lives more godly. Shall we ridicule the "holiness" movement? Never! It is the cry of some earnest, but misdirected, soul for a higher and holier life, for a more spiritual plane of living.

In our belief that "we are right," that we occupy "infallibly safe grounds," we are prone to become (have become) narrow, bigoted, intolerant. It is not the novice alone who is this; it is the more experienced brother, whose life and influence should be a benediction.

I deplore the attitude of our older brethren who feel that they are the arbiters of the faith of the younger, who feel called upon to condemn in bitter terms the mistakes they may make, and who are ready to ostracize those who cry out for a deeper spirituality, because they are guilty of some doctrinal irregularity. "And the Lord's servant must not strive, but be gentle toward all, apt to teach, forbearing, in meekness correcting them that oppose themselves." (2 Tim. 2: 24, 25.)

Paul to the Saints at Philippi. No. 5.

BY F. W. SMITH.

"Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." (Phil. 1: 6.) He that began "a good work" in the saints at Philippi was the Lord, and this he did through the gospel preached unto them by Paul and Silas. But without their consent and cooperation the Lord could not have begun such a work, and neither could he have continued it without their will and cooperation. Hence we may truthfully say that it is one thing to begin a good work and quite another to continue in it. All who have had an experience know that it is a simple and easy matter to enlist in the service of the Lord, for it requires but few things, which are easy to do. But the service of God is manifold, made up of duties having to do with every relation of life. These different relations impose obligations which call for the very best there is in us, but we cannot measure up to the duties of life by our own wisdom and strength. This is clearly brought out by the Master in these words: "I am the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing." (John 15: 5.) Hence, we must note the fact set forth in the scripture (Phil. 1: 6) in the beginning of this.

GOD WORKS IN HIS SERVANTS.

After teiling the saints in Phil. 2: 12 to "work out your [their] own salvation with fear and trembling," the apostle adds: "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." (Verse 13.) Now, these passages merely state the fact that God works in his servants without stating how he so works. We must look elsewhere to find how God works in his children that which is good. This fact is most clearly stated in this passage: "For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe." (1 Thess. 2: 13.) The word of God works faith in the heart (Rom. 10: 17), and that same word in the heart of faith works the development of the Christian graces and every good deed of the Christian life. Thus, through the instrumentality of his word, the incorruptible seed (1 Pet. 1: 23), God works in his children.

THE DANGER OF NOT CONTINUING IN GOOD WORKS.

While Paul expressed his confidence that the "good work" begun in the saints at Philippi would continue, yet he knew the possibility of its ceasing, because such work begun by the Lord depended on the will and cooperation of the saints for its continuance. We know this to be true because of the weakness of humanity and the oft-repeated admonitions of this kind: "And let us not be weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." (Gal. 6: 9.) This is but one of multiplied texts setting forth the fact that a child of God may cease in his service to God, faint by the way, and be lost forevermore. How, important then, it becomes that we keep the fires of zeal and service burning upon the altars of our souls, for fear the fires of holy consecration kindled in the beginning of our Christian lives smolder into dying embers and reach the impossibility of being rekindled. There are dangers all about us, and it becomes an easy matter for Satan to switch us from the right way, unless we watch with prayer and a continual increase of zeal for God and his cause.

"THE DAY OF JESUS CHRIST."

Paul expressed the hope that the good work begun in the saints at Philippi would continue until "the day of Jesus Christ." What did he mean by "the day of Jesus Christ?" It could not have meant the final coming of Christ; for Paul knew that many, if not all, the saints at Philippi would die before the final coming of the Lord. This we gather from his letter to the saints at Thessalonica, as well as from other scriptures. This becomes an important item in view of modern teaching on the final coming of Christ; hence, let us consider it well. "Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition." (2 Thess. 2: 1-3.) Paul here asserts that certain things had to transpire before the final coming of Christ, and it is certain that the "man of sin" was not fully developed in Paul's lifetime. He knew that he would die before that great and notable day should come. Hear him: "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." (2 Tim. 4: 6.) Peter also knew that he would die before the final coming of Christ, for he said: "Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance; knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath showed me." (2 Pet. 1: 13, 14.) This the Lord showed him in a personal conversation as recorded by John. "This spoke he, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me." (John 21: 19.) In view of these facts, it stands to reason that in referring to "the day of Christ" (Phil. 1: 6) the apostle did not mean the final coming of Christ, but to another "day of Christ," or "coming of Christ." What, then, could he have meant by those words? He wrote to the church of Thessalonica: "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Thess. 5: 23.) He knew from inspired predictions made by himself that some, if not all, of those saints would die before the final coming of Christ, and that their bodies could not be preserved (kept from dissolution and decay), but would go back to dust, whence they came. Hence, we are forced to the conclusion that the "coming of the Lord Jesus Christ" here simply means his coming to his saints at their death. There are a number of the "comings of the Lord" mentioned in the Bible. (See 2 Sam. 22: 10-12; Ps. 97: 2-5; Isa. 19: 1; 2 Thess. 2: 8; 1 Cor. 1: 8; 2 Thess. 5: 23; Matt. 16: 27, 28; 2 Thess. 1: 6-9.) Some of these refer to his final coming, but the context shows that some of them refer to other comings. The important lesson for us all is to keep the fires brightly burning and not let the flame of holy zeal become extinguished. Be ready always for either one of two events -viz., death or the final coming of the Lord. There is as much exhortation and admonition to prepare for one as for the other, and he who is prepared for the one is also prepared for the other.

Divergent Views.

BY C. E. HOLT.

This article was suggested by a very thoughtful man of the world, as we are accustomed to speak of them. I here give the substance of some remarks he made to me, not many moons since, and which remarks have caused me to make a careful survey of the route over which we have traveled, and which reaches back to the beginning of the nineteenth century—a period of time covering and including about four generations. It would seem that this is at least a part of the time mentioned by the prophet Daniel when he said: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." (Dan. 12: 4.)

Mr. A -- said to me: "Brother Holt, why is it that your people hold many divergent views on Bible questions? They all seem to be trying to follow the Bible, and they seem to be of one mind in regarding the Bible the only rule and guide in religion; but their differences among themselves are as great as are the differences among the denominations against which they made war in the beginning of their work in the United States, about a hundred years ago. I have read the Christian Baptist and a few volumes of the Millennial Harbinger, and was greatly impressed with them, but it seems that your people have failed to keep pace with the movement set on foot by the first preachers of your church. I do not read any of your papers now. I have not read any of your papers since the controversy between the Advocate and a man in Texas over the rebaptism question. I am told that that Texas man became the recognized leader of a distinct faction in Texas. I have been told that you now have two main divisions, and also a number of subdivisions. It seems that the Utopian dreams of your people to unite the religious world have proven to be a flasco."

It sometimes helps us to know what others think of us. It enables us to see ourselves as others see us. Friendly criticism is helpful if received in the proper spirit.

When what is called the great "Restoration Movement" was begun in the first part of the nineteenth century, religion was in a very chaotic state. What is called Protestantism, a great force which had grown up as a result of the work of Wycliff, Luther, Calvin, Knox, and others in their protest against Romanism, was divided into a number of warring sects which were fighting and devouring each other, and thus, in a large measure, rendering their efforts to restore primitive Christianity nugatory and ineffective.

While some were building up, others equally zealous and plous were engaged in tearing down. Almost all the religious bodies were hampered by creeds or humanly devised standards of doctrine and church polity, which made it utterly impossible for them to make any further progress in Christianity without laying themselves open to the grave charge of heresy and disloyalty. Many of the preachers of that time were ignorant of the message of salvation, and had substituted the fickleness and delusiveness of the feelings or emotions for an intelligent faith. The gospel ordinances were perverted and taken from their proper settings. The Bible was interpreted in the light of human creeds and human formularies.

There was a feeling of great dissatisfaction among a large number of people in many of the most prominent and most enlightened denominations. The attitude assumed by the first recognized leaders of the restoration movement had much to do in molding the minds of the future friends and adherents of the movement, especially their attitude toward the Protestant denominations of the day. All were of one mind in regard to Roman Catholicism, but they differed among themselves as to the relationship of the different religious bodies to the church of the New Testament. One of the first, and also one of the most vital, questions with which the first preachers among us had to deal was what should be our attitude toward the already existing religious bodies. They reasoned about this way: If we are set for a complete restoration of apostolic teaching and practice-in other words, if we stand for a complete reproduction of the New Testament churchhow should we feel and act toward the religious bodies which are wearing unscriptural names, and which are teaching and practicing many things antagonistic to the spirit and genius of the New Testament church-things which are post-apostolic and resting solely upon the authority of councils and conventions of uninspired men? It was seen and appreciated by some of the greatest and clearest-minded men among us that the leading Protestant denominations held vital truths in common with each other; that these truths were of vital importance, not because they were held by the different religious bodies of the day, but because they came from, and belong to, the great reservoir of truth, the word of God.

By reason of this fact it was held that upon the truths held in common by the different religious bodies particular emphasis should be placed, not so much from the fact that the religious bodies held these truths, but because these truths, are divinely essential and essentially divine, and are, therefore, a part of Christianity itself.

Only the things which are distinctly denominational were to be rejected and eliminated from the body ecclesiastic. Upon this idea was based another, and one which proved to be of far-reaching consequences. It was the possibility and the feasibility of Christian union, such as that for which our Savior prayed.

The truths which the denominations held in common were to be given full credit and force, and only the opinions of men which had been exalted into conditions of fellowship and of church membership were to be given up, and these, not because they were hurtful within themselves privately held, but because they had been allowed to occupy a place of equal value to matters of faith. At this point a clear discrimination was sought to be made between matters of faith and matters of opinion. Many of the most consecrated and most illustrious preachers of the day accepted this view of the situation, and their sermons on Christian unity were so charmingly sweet, and so convincingly strong in logic and reason and scriptural appeal, that multitudes were drawn to them, and the great works like an avalanche swept large sections of country into the greatest movement since the great Pentecost in Jerusalem. There were others connected with this reformatory and restorative work whose attitude toward the Protestant religious bodies was essentially different from the leaders just mentioned.

These leaders held rigidly and tenaciously to the idea that the different religious bodies are the ecclesiastical children of Rome; that the Roman Catholic Church is the great harlot of John's vision on Patmos, and the Protestant denominations are the offspring of her harlotry. At this point I wish to call attention to the teachings of some very zealous men whom I first heard preach what was then vulgarly styled "Campbellism." They interpreted the language in Rev. 13: 18 as a symbolic description of the sects in Christendom. As the number of the beast was six hundred and sixty-six, so there are just six hundred and sixtysix denominations to-day.

I accepted this view, thinking the preachers certainly knew what they affirmed, and did not know any better until I made an investigation of the matter. I found this to be a partisan and unwarranted view of the facts. There are fewer than two hundred denominations, counting every little party in the world. But the teaching of those who took this latter view of the matter was, in a sense, very different from the teaching of the more charitably inclined and of the more liberal-minded leaders. This latter class of leaders admitted that the denominations held many truths, but these truths were vitiated and rendered nugatory by the errors held in connection with the truth. Assuming this attitude toward the religious bodies of the day, they could not with consistency enter into the great work of Christian union which was so strongly featured by the former class of leaders. Hence there has grown up two very diverse and very distinct types of people whose aims and purposes are the same, so far as the restoration of primitive Christianity is concerned, but whose policy as to methods of accomplishment are radically and fundamentally different. There are lesser and smaller bodies within these two, but these two leading elements constitute the greatest forces to be reckoned with in our investigation of the subject. These two elements are agreed, and have always been agreed, upon the unity of God, the Lordship of Jesus, the mission and work of the Holy Spirit, the integrity and all-sufficiency of the Old and New Testaments, the conditions of salvation, and the importance of the church as the only divine institution through which to reach and save the world.

But we shall adjourn and wait for another installment.

The Campaign to Raise Funds for the Improvement of David Lipscomb College.

BY E. A. E.

This effort on the part of the directors is meeting with the most encouraging success.

The reunion of the friends and old pupils of the college on May 14 on the college grounds was largely attended and the contributions and pledges were liberal and pleasing, going beyond our expectation. The directors are thankful and use this means of expressing their gratitude for the generous response in every way to their appeals—the presence of so many, their cheerful countenances, the most bountiful dinner prepared by the near-by friends, and especially the contributions.

Again, the meeting at Ryman Auditorium on Sunday afternoon, May 18, was likewise well attended. Earnest talks were made by different ones, setting forth the origin and purpose of the college, its growth and development, its present needs, and the inestimable importance and demand for true education. The responses to the appeals to enlarge the borders and usefulness of the college were likewise cheerful and generous. And again the directors desire to express their gratitude,

The directors feel their responsibility deeply and sensibly because the management of the college property, its enlargement, and the guarding and keeping the work of the college true to the original purpose of its founders have been placed in their hands. But are they any more responsible for the true education of the youth of the land than all others? Every Christian especially should see to-day as never before the difference between true education and that most popular education which fills the young with the love of pleasure, the consuming desire for material prosperity and earthly honors, worldliness in general, and the very spirit which animates and controls the world.

All flesh is as grass, and the glory thereof as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower falleth: but the word of the Lord abideth forever.

And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever.

All, then, as well as the directors of this college, should feel likewise the great responsibility to maintain schools in which the correct and eternal principles of right living are taught-that is, the word of God, which alone contains these principles, and which abides forever.

Some suggest that we raise this much-needed fund and then cease to make appeals for the school. This cannot be, unless we are satisfied with what little we are doing, our present attainments, and never expect to hold out our hands to bless any more of the youth of the land than we are at present doing. But there is no standstill. Then, we must either go forward or backward, and we are not going back. There is no way of enlarging these buildings and grounds, and especially the great work of the college, except by generous donations from the true friends of true education. It is not an individual enterprise. No one has any financial interest in the property of this college or derives one cent profit from these donations. There are no stockholders, and have never been, in the college. The faculty receive their support from the tuition only of the pupils. Neither the directors nor the faculty can furnish the means to erect new buildings and enlarge the great work of the college; hence, this must be done, as the college was founded, out of the generosity of the friends of true education. AND IT IS BEING DONE, AND WILL CONTINUE TO BE DONE.

Please remember the preceding articles on true education.

When the friends and supporters of true education throughout the country-not only the State of Tennessee. but other States-respond as liberally as was done at the reunion mentioned and at Ryman Auditorium, as we feel encouraged to believe they will do, we will have the money desired and can begin at once these improvements.

Let us hear from you, kind reader, at once, so we may know upon what we may depend. Give ten thousand dollars or ten dollars, or ten cents, as you feel able to do; but give something. Give it by installments-some now, some later on, and some still later on-if you desire. Give bonds, war saving stamps, or anything convertible into

It is not so much my purpose to discuss "if" as it is to make it the leading word in some important questions that it would be well for those of us who claim to be Christians

If we should put no more thought, no more time, no more labor, no more sacrifice, into our business followed for a livelihood than some of us put into the work of the Lord, how long would our business houses stay open? How long before we would go into bankruptcy? Answer this question, my brother, my sister. Do you not know that some of us must make a change, if we are ever to be saved? If there is the slightest shadow of a promise of a man's being saved who makes religion a matter of secondary importance, I know nothing of it, neither do you; for it is not in the Book. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God," is the way Christ puts it. (Matt. 6: 33.) "If any man would come after me," says Christ, "let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." (Matt. 16: 24.) Again, he says: "So therefore whosoever he be of you that renounceth, not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple." (Luke 14: 33.)

Is it not a fact that nothing is more outstanding in the holy Scriptures than the fact that, if we are ever saved, we must make salvation first? What shall we do with the parables of "a treasure hidden in a field" and the "pearl of great price" (Matt. 13: 44, 45), if we are to teach that man can put a lower estimate on salvation than he does on other things, yet be saved? Remember, the finders of the "pearl of great price" and "the hidden treasure" sold all they had in order to purchase these things; that they prized them above all they possessed. Just so must we prize salvation and the things pertaining to the extension of the kingdom of heaven.

But is it not a fact that nothing is more painfully apparent than that religion and the work of the church, with many, are matters of secondary importance? Do they go to church as they go to work? Do they get there on time as they do at work? Do they put the thought into it that they do into their business? Now, I am one that believes that there should be no such thing as "business affairs" and "religious affairs." I believe it all should be "religious affairs." But it is easy to tell who is making the work he follows for a living one kind of affair and his religion another. Those who do this are prompt and punctual in their business and late in getting to services and will let almost anything hinder them. Who is it that lets the opening of his office door every morning through the week or being at his desk or behind his counter be a matter that is governed by his having company or not having it? Do we stay away from our work, let our shop doors stay closed, fail to report where we are employed, just because 'Aunt Jane" or "Uncle Ephraim" dropped in to see us?

Think on these things. Let me tell you a truth that we all must know-viz .: that man, that woman, whose influence is felt most for good in the world, and that man or that woman whose religious pretensions are respected most by friends and acquaintances, is the man or the woman who makes pleasing God the first thing in life; who is as prompt in filling his or her promises to the church and ever being at his or her post of duty as he or she is with other things. This we know. Another thing: we know that such are happy and full of hope, and those who live otherwise are not happy and hopeful, and, more than this, they are without the promise of salvation.

2. If all the members of the church of Christ did as you do, what kind of church would the church of Christ be?

Have you seriously thought of this? If all gave as little as you give, how far would the church go toward evangelizing the whole world? If all were as irregular in attending services as you are, how often would our church doors be opened on Lord's days? Now, if you can be saved and live this way, so can I and every other child of God. Do you think it would be well for us to follow your example? Is it not a fact that the church which Christ died to establish would go out of business, if all the members should do as some of them do? Are you such a member? If so, will you not repent and go to work before it is too late?

May the Lord help us all to know that nothing-absolutely nothing-is so important as making salvation, pleasing God, receiving in the fullest sense "the love of the truth," the first thing in life, and to do this every day and hour we live here.

Not many days ago we were sitting on the platform in the chapel of a Home of the National Benevolent Association, with almost a hundred boys and girls assembled before us for the evening prayer service. As we looked into their bright faces and listened to the music of their sweet voices, they seemed to us to be in the full possession of childhood's heritage of happiness. However, an active mind could not permit us to linger long among these happy surroundings. It carried us back of the scenes into the presence of the events of the past, until back of every smiling face and singing voice we saw some crushing heart tragedy. There in the background we saw poverty, disease, death, cruel suffering and neglect, sin and shame. What a dark setting for such a beautiful picture! But the children continued to sing, and as they sang the light broke through the darkness and the glory of the dear all-Father's face appeared, "standing back amid the shadows, keeping watch above his own;" and while they sang and smiled the shadows fied away. Looking down the pathway of the coming years, we saw these boys and girls grown to manhood and womanhood, strong in body and mind, trained in habits of industry, possessed with the spirit of Christ, consecrating themselves in grateful service to God and humanity. And then we joined the song, grateful to God for the glorious privilege of having part in this fellowship.-World Call.

The more you are offended at your evil thoughts, the less they are yours; the more they are your burden, the less they are your guilt. The knowledge or thought of evil is not evil; it is not what you know, but what you consent to.-Benjamin Whichcote.

None more deceive themselves than they who think their religion is true and genuine, though it refines not their spirits and reforms not their lives.—Benjamin Whichcote.

The Twenty-Third Psalm.

God is my Shepherd: I shall never want. He maketh me to feed in pastures green, He leadeth me where waters are serene, He saves my soul, and guideth me to take The paths of righteousness for his Name's sake. Yea, though in death's dark valley I shall be, I fear no evil; I am safe with thee. Thy rod and staff console and comfort me. A table thou hast set against my foes, Anointed me with oil—my cup o'erflows; Thy kindness follows me till life is o'er, And I will dwell in thy house evermore.

Missionary

Departure from Japan.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

My time for sailing for the homeland was so unsettled that some of my Japanese friends, I fear, began to doubt whether I was going to sail at all. But, though long delayed, the day finally arrived, and on April 7 I had all things in readiness for starting. As I never make very extensive preparations, getting ready was not a very difficult task. I have found from experience that it is better to avoid trunks and use smaller pieces of baggage.

Some of the young men who had examinations and some friends who had other duties excused themselves and bade me good-by at the door, others accompanied me as far as the station, and still a goodly number went as for as the ship. They wanted to see over the vessel and the room where I was to stay. Miss Andrews and Miss Cypert had prepared a bouquet of flowers which they placed by the mirror, where they remain; and though this is the fifth day out at sea, these mementoes of love are still fresh and beautiful. All seemed to think I would have a nice and comfortable home while crossing the sea. When all my friends were in, the room was about full, not being over ten feet square. Misses Mizue and Kame, two little schoolgirls, were still outside in the hall. When I stepped out, I found Kame weeping because I was going away. I dried up her tears and brought them both inside. We then went upon deck, assembled on the seaward side away from the crowd and noise, and joined in singing, "God be with you till we meet again." Then there were several prayers.

Soon the gong sounded for everybody to go ashore, save the passengers. Then began the final farewells. From the time they began to say good-by in the morning till now the request was repeated, "Hurry and come back," and not a few added that they wished me to bring my family when I return.

A little more waiting on shore while a pile of mail bags were swung on board, and soon the bridge was let down, the ropes were untied, and the great vessel began to move backward toward the open sea. Hats waved in the air, and there went up a shout of "Banzai," which literally means "ten thousand years;" but in the present connection it meant "A happy voyage to you," or something like that. Handkerchiefs and hats continued to wave as long as we could see them. Soon all faded into the dim distance, the ship had turned front foremost, and we were well on the way across the great and trackless sea. I sought a quiet place and sat down to let my mind reflect and become quiet and my tired body rest. I did not try to think, but rather left my mind free like the revolving of machinery after the power has been cut off; and the thoughts came to me of the tears of parting, the words of good-by, the farewell meetings, and the gifts of love and remembrance, and I thanked God that my labors had not been in vain.

I reached Honolulu on April 17 at half past six. Brother and Sister Bowman met me at the landing, and, after my goods were looked through by the officers, we were soon all in the auto speeding toward their home back of the city and up the mountain side. We stopped in front of a beautiful residence amid luxuriant foliage so characteristic of these tropical islands, the home of Brother and Sister Bowman, and my home as long as I sojourn here. I cannot now go into details, but it is just like being in a fairyland. Everything is different from any other place where I have ever been—a little like Japan, a little like Florida or Southern California, but different from all.

Write me in care of E. C. Love, Santa Rosa, California, till further notice.

Moving Pletures.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

Miss Andrews is contemplating opening a new work about a hundred miles from Tokyo on the seacoast.

Some say Christianity has been tried and found wanting, but rather we should say that it has been found difficult and not tried.

He who carries a secret sin will tell a lie to hide it; but, like bad blood, secret sins are bound to come to the surface sooner or later.

True education consists in knowing the facts that relate to human happiness, and then to have the wisdom to apply them in our daily lives.

A young man, Mr. Betsuda, was baptized at the Kamitomizaka church by Brother Hiratsuka on March 16. He is of Miss Cypert's Bible class.

Religion should not be confused with superstition. Superstition is often a cheap substitute for religion, and imagination a substitute for knowledge.

At the Sendagaya church in Tokyo, a church founded by a sister who never allows her name to appear in the papers, there were three baptisms in February and two in March.

Back of intellectuality is morality, and back of morality is religion. Destroy our religion, and away goes our morals; take away our morals, and away goes our enlightenment.

The brethren in the city of Washington, D. C., are trying hard to raise money to build a place for work and worship. You may have seen their appeals, but did you heed them? If not, do it now, for they are worthy. Send to J. W. Gibson, 2500 Southeast Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.

A brother asks: "What is your judgment about sending funds abroad directly to natives?" My judgment is that all mission funds sent to the various mission fields from America should be distributed to the native workers on the field through the resident missionaries. Native Christians, on the other hand, are entitled to handle their own funds which they themselves raise. If there are no missionaries in the field where funds are needed, then some should be sent at once.

"He that would love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: and let him turn away from evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and pursue it." (1 Pet. 3: 10, 11.) Who is it that does not love life and to see good days? And what better advice could be given than the above? Purity of thought, purity of speech, and purity of conduct make sure to us a long and happy life, provided we also keep in harmony with God's natural laws.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

I.

Brother Srygley reports a good start in his meeting at F Street, Louisville, Ky.

Charles Brewer has closed a good meeting at Joseph Avenue Church, this city,

The response to the call for funds for David Lipscomb College has been quick and generous.

1. B. Bradley, of Dickson, Tenn., is preaching to large audiences at Charlotte Avenue Church, this city.

The meeting at Eleventh Street, this city, continues with increasing interest. Several have been baptized.

Brother Elam's sermons in the Chapel Avenue congregation, this city, are being enjoyed by all who attend.

Brother Kurfees was called home from the meeting at Campbell, Mo., to preach a funeral at Louisville, Ky.

- J. N. Armstrong, of Harper, Kan., came to see us on Monday. He held a meeting at Allensville, Ky., with four baptisms.
- J. E. Thornberry, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., paid us a pleasant visit last week. He will spend the summer at his old home near Louisville, Ky.

We had many visitors in connection with the commencement exercises and the mass meeting at David Lipscomb College, and all were appreciated.

Twenty-six persons were baptized during R. V. Cawthon's meeting at Flat Rock, near this city. He is now in a meeting with the Twelfth Avenue brethren.

Two made the good confession at Russell Street Church Sunday and one lady placed her membership with the congregation. It is encouraging to note the steady, normal growth.

F. W. Smith is in a good meeting at Birmingham, Ala. John T. Lewis, of the home forces, is backing him up. Brother Smith reports the church to be in splendid working condition.

N. B. Hardeman and wife, of Henderson, Tenn., were among our visitors last week. Brother Hardeman delivered the commencement sermon for the high school at Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

Those in need of competent song leaders would do well to address L. G. Kennamer, Woodville, Ala., or A. J. Traylor, Smyrna, Tenn. Brother Kennamer has had considerable experience in preaching and is prepared to hold some meetings.

From W. T. Kidwill, Dallas, Texas: "I expect to be in Tennessee the first of September, to spend about two or three months in meetings. Will give notice of places and dates for meetings later. Address me at 612 North Winnetka Street, Dallas, Texas."

Repairs on the auditorium of the Russell Street Church, in Nashville, were not finished in time for Brother Freed to begin the meeting on next Sunday as previously announced. We hope to have everything ready for the meeting to begin on Sunday, June 1.

From Mrs. T. J. McRae, San Francisco, Cal., May 1: "The church is now meeting in a hall, corner Fourth Avenue and Clement Street. Brother Scott preached some good sermons for us, which we appreciated. We hope our new place for meeting will enable us to accomplish greater good in this city. We are always glad to see visiting friends when they are in our city."

From W. W. Freeman, Abilene, Texas, May 9: "Brother Hiratsuka reports eight baptisms at Koishikawa last month. This is fine for a shack of a house on rented land and no American missionary on the job. He also reports a great trip with a number of baptisms and several points touched with the message for a good hearing. I am at Jeffersontown, Ky., for the summer."

From Tom Walker, Bonham, Texas, May 12: "C. E. Wallace, of Weatherford, closed a two-weeks' meeting in this city last night, with three baptisms. Brother Wallace is one of our greatest preachers. He is clear and logical in his sermons, driving the truth into the hearts of his audience. He won the hearts of the Bonham people, and they hope to have him return some day for another meeting."

From W. N. Abernathy, Westport, Tenn., Route 2: "By some misunderstanding the report has gone out that the church at Williams' Chapel opposes the purchase of the school at Henderson by the brotherhood. The church has never taken any definite action in regard to the matter, but has the subject under consideration. Unfortunately, the literature sent out has reached us at inopportune times for consideration. The fact that some of our leading members expressed doubts concerning the wisdom of the enterprise should not be taken as evidence that the church is not alive to a good work."

Morgan H. Carter writes: "Churches and Christians everywhere are urged to carefully secure the name and correct address of every Christian that has gone from a loyal congregation to any city, town, or rural district where there is not a congregation of New Testament Christians. An important movement has been inaugurated by the Belmont Church, in Nashville, to establish many new churches in such localities, and all available information should be sent in immediately. It should result in great good and will mean the conversion of many and the building up of God's church in a large number of radiating centers from which it can spread to multitudes yet untaught. Address Morgan H. Carter, 226 Fourth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

C. Petty, of Pineapple, Ala., writes to Brother McQuiddy as follows: "I have been reading with very much interest your kind and strong pieces in the Gospel Advocate to Brother Jorgenson, and believe they will do great good to many others who might be weak in the faith, whether you help Jorgenson or not. I wish to say that I belong to no vestibule, nor am I in one, for Jesus never said, 'Upon this rock I will build my vestibule;' neither did he say, 'Except ye wash one another's feet, ye cannot be saved.' Why can't Brother Jorgenson just say what the Bible says, the way it says it, and stop? I am so glad you are giving us those Iessons at this opportune time, for it will save some one's faith from shipwreck; and I regret that Brother Jorgenson does not see the great harm he is doing the cause. I pray the Lord to bless you in your good work till your toils shall end; then he will say: 'Well done, faithful one; enter in, for your work is done."

The Selection, Sending, and Support of Missionaries. BY M. C. K.

The article in a recent issue on "Responsibility for the Support of Missionaries" closed with the following statement: "The very idea of one man, self-chosen and selfappointed, taking upon himself, or of a dozen men, for that matter, self-chosen and self-appointed, taking upon themselves, to select and send out missionaries, without ever consulting the churches that are expected to support them, and then appealing to the churches to support them, is both absurd and preposterous as well as presumptuous."

That statement was not made without an occasion both justifying and demanding it. In fact, the occasion not only justified and demanded it, but it justifies and demands that much more be said. Loose and slipshed methods of mission work resulting often in mere haphazard procedure have borne their evil fruit. Combined ignorance and carelessness have been tolerated long enough, and both pulpit and press should cry aloud: "Let there be light." New Testament facts and principles should become sufficiently known among the churches that when one man, or a little coterie of men, shall dare to usurp authority over them in any form and to any extent, such arrogance and presumption will meet with the prompt and sharp rebuke which they so richly deserve.

Not only should the selection and sending of missionaries be with the distinct approval of the churches which are expected to support them, but the collection and handling of missionary funds, a very grave and responsible duty, should be with the same distinct approval. Things have come to a pretty pass when, according to facts recently published in these columns, one man not only takes upon himself to collect and handle the missionary funds of the churches without consulting the churches or being chosen and approved by them for such a work, but takes upon himself to write to one of our papers, as he recently wrote to the Gospel Advocate, the following dictatorial and autocratic order: "I urge the Advocate to show more interest in financing our missionaries in 1919 than it has been showing for a good while in the past." Of course such an autocratic and oracular utterance is in strict keeping with the self-importance of a self-chosen and self-appointed generalissimo of missionary operations, but it is in as complete antagonism to the New Testament order of things as is the missionary society itself. "I urge!" Exactly. That is to say: "I take upon myself to collect and handle the missionary funds of the churches without being chosen and appointed by them to such a position and without even consulting them about it; and if the religious papers do not cooperate with me in this business as I think they should, I will issue orders directly to them!"

Even if the arrogance and egotism of such a procedure were not out of place and disgusting, such procedure itself is a diametrical contradiction of plain New Testament teaching. Paul distinctly refused to do the very thing which this brother coolly assumes and exercises the right to do, and he refused, as his own inspired pen informs us, because it was not "honorable in the sight of men" to proceed in any such way. Listen to his instructive and wise words: "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I gave order to the churches of Galatia, so also do ye. Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper, that no collections be made when I come. And when I arrive, whomsoever ye shall approve, them will I send with letters to carry your bounty unto Jerusalem: and if it be meet for me to go also. they shall go with me." (1 Cor. 16: 1-4.) The margin of the American Revised Version reads: "Whomsoever ye shall approve by letters, them will I send," etc. Side by side with that significant passage we place another in which, still referring to the matter of collecting and handling money for the churches, the apostle says: "And we have sent together with him the brother whose praise in the gospel is spread through all the churches; and not only so, but who was also appointed by the churches to travel with us in the matter of this grace, which is ministered by us to the glory of the Lord, and to show our readiness: avoiding this, that any man should blame us in the matter of this bounty which is ministered by us: for we take thought for things honorable, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men." (2 Cor. 8: 18-21.)

Now let us carefully sum up and note the facts of these significant passages:

- 1. A contribution for poor saints was to be made by the churches.
- 2. The needed amount was to be secured by weekly con-
- 3. The weekly contributions were to be made on the first day of the week, each member to give as he might be prospered.
- 4. This orderly and systematic procedure was that there might be no collections after the apostle's arrival.
- 5. Those whom the churches might approve as their messengers or trusted bearers of the money, "them" would the apostle "send with letters to carry" their "bounty unto Jerusalem."

- 6. Even if it should "be meet for" the apostle "to go" to Jerusalem, those whom the churches might approve should also go with him. Mark this fact, for it is most significant.
- 7. An unnamed "brother whose praise in the gospel" was "spread through all the churches" was one of the men whom the churches approved and appointed to handle their funds which were to be "ministered by" Paul and others "to the glory of the Lord."
- 8. The purpose of having the funds thus intrusted to men duly approved and appointed by the churches was, as specifically stated by the apostle himself, that they might avoid having "any man" to "blame" them "in the matter of this bounty."
- 9. The underlying and solemn reason for the whole matter of system and order in the collection and handling of funds is distinctly stated by the apostle himself in these weighty words: "For we take thought for things honorable, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men."

Let the reader carefully review and ponder these nine facts. They are pregnant with meaning and most vital in the present discussion, making it as clear as the light that those who undertake to collect and handle the funds of the churches should be approved by the churches themselves for this work, and that the churches should know the missionaries whom they are to support as capable and worthy men.

We have still more to present on this vital and timely theme.

"What the Editor Believes." No. 2.

BY J. C. M'Q.

As space forbade notice last week of all the answers of the editor of Word and Work, I shall make a review of those to which no notice was given in the last article.

Division.

Some years ago, before I had realized that a number of young brethren were teaching Russellism and Adventism, a young preacher approached me in our office, took me to one side, and told me that a number of young preachers had on foot a movement to propagate certain doctrines in the Gospel Advocate which would cause opposition and division. These young brethren had been expecting opposition from the older brethren, such men as David Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, and others, for two years. He said the issue had to come; that the older brethren were sectarians, moving in a rut and lacking in spirituality. While I was among the number moving in a rut and was to be retired to give place to others better qualified both spiritually and intellectually than I, yet I was not alarmed and did not give serious consideration to the suggestion. Little did I think that one of the editors of the Gospel Advocate, whom I had especially favored through the years, was behind the movement. At a later date reports came that certain preachers were teaching things concerning the establishment of the kingdom that were not in accord with the Bible. Still later I had a talk with the editor of Word and Work, who said to me that the kingdom had not yet been established, and he felt that it was his duty to teach that it had not, even if such teaching did create opposition and division. He said that all reformers, such as Calvin and Campbell, met with opposition and persecution.

That the teaching of Brother Boll which is under consideration does create division is evident from the following: When G. Dallas Smith was asked if he would allow Brother Boll to preach his peculiar views in his pulpit, he replied emphatically, "No." This shows division between Brother Boll, created by his teaching, and Brother

G. Dallas Smith, one of his warmest friends. It is not simply the nature of Christ's resurrection body that is under fire, but the many peculiar and unwarranted interpretations of scripture that Brother Boll has perpetrated on an unsuspecting public. It is clear, both from the statement of the young preacher who called to see me and from the admission of Brother Boll, that he was expecting opposition and division on account of his peculiar teaching. Sometime ago Brother Boll wrote a document and signed with his own hand, in which he stated: "Such judgment as I shall use in reference to certain questions over which there have been some disturbances lately is not dictated to me." This shows that he understood very well at that time that the teaching was the occasion of disturbance. The only way he can press his peculiar views is to teach them himself and encourage others to teach them. This he is doing; and he is also recommending, without note or comment, Blackstone's book, which destroys the spirituality of the reign of Jesus Christ by making it a literal reign over fleshly Israel, or the house of Jacob. Exposure of, and opposition to, false teaching is not intolerance; but Brother Boll certainly would have been surprised if he had not been opposed in his teaching.

The editor of Word and Work contends that his doctrines involve no congregational practice and should not raise a barrier between brethren who differ concerning them. As his teaching destroys "the unity of the Spirit," it certainly involves congregational practice, as, for instance, the church at Corinth, where one was for Paul and one for Apollos, for which they were rebuked by the apostle. His doctrine is that the kingdom has not been established. This makes incomprehensible almost, if not entirely so, every allusion to the kingdom of God in the New Testament. Blackstone, whom Brother Boll Indorses, teaches that there is no reference to the church in the Old Testament. He teaches that "the kingdom did come 'nigh' when Christ came, and had they received him it would have been manifested, but now it is in abeyance, or awaiting until he comes again;" that, as the Jews outdid Jehovah, killed Christ, and would not receive the kingdom, the church came in as a mystery, but was never intended for the conversion of the world; and that the world shall grow worse and worse under the rule of the church and Holy Spirit, even abounding in sin. The doctrine for which Brother Boll stands belittles the church, the Holy Spirit, and all the spiritual agencies now at work for the conversion of the world. Those with pronounced views on this subject contend that they are without warrant in the Bible who are looking for the conversion of the world by the preaching of the cross and the extending influence of the church. In no portion of the Scripture is such a hope justified, we are told. Such teaching is calculated to destroy the church itself. A doctrine that tends to wipe out the church certainly involves congregational practice,

THE LITERAL THRONE.

While the definition of "throne" given by Brother Boll is not in exact accord with Webster, I shall pass it by unnoticed. He says the literal Jerusalem will be "transformed and renewed." He gives in proof of this Isa. 11: 10: 4: 4, 5; Ps. 132: 13, 14. I have examined all of these scriptures carefully and find no reference to a transformed and renewed Jerusalem, and yet he claims to be able to state his doctrine in the very words of the Bible. Isa. 11: 10 simply refers to "the root of Jesse," which all understand is Christ. Ps. 110 is a good comment on this verse, Verse 1 reads: "Jehovah saith unto my lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool." Peter, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, quotes this language and teaches us that it was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. He says: "Let all the house of Israel therefore know asssuredly that God hath made him both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom ye crucified." Isa. 4: 4, 5 contains neither the word "transform" nor the word "renewed." These verses simply teach that God threatens to blast Israel into the midst of Jerusalem, as into a furnace, and to melt them. There is nothing in the passage whatever to establish the doctrine that the temple is to be "reconstructed" and that Jerusalem is to be transformed and renewed, as taught by the editor of Word and Work. Ps. 132: 13, 14 reads: "Jehovah hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my resting place forever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it." There is no reconstruction idea in this passage; yet Brother Boll taught, in answer to a question in Word and Work, that the temple will be reconstructed. The Lord chose Zion instead of Shiloh or Kirjath-jearim as the place of his rest. Verse 14 evidently refers to the church of Christ. This is God's place forever. After the dispensation of the church closes, there will never be another. Christianity is the end and completes all communication from heaven to earth. God has nothing greater to give to mankind on this side of heaven than the church. Man needs nothing better, nor is his nature capable of anything more excellent,

Having seen that there is nothing in the proof offered, I will now quote the statement of the editor of Word and Work and place by the side of it the teaching of Blackstone. R. H. Boll says: "The 'literal Jerusalem' will be transformed and renewed, and the cloud of glory-the token of God's presence-which once led Israel in the wilderness and rested upon the tabernacle will be over her as a canopy. The impression that Jesus Christ will have his residence in Jerusalem under ordinary human conditions is too absurd to be seriously denied. Jerusalem will be his glorious resting place, and the center of his world government in the age to come." Blackstone says: "Judah and Israel shall be restored and dwell safely. There shall be no harm nor destruction in all God's hely mountain, and even the animals shall be at peace. Again, from all these passages, and especially Isa. 60, we see that restored Israel and Jerusalem are to be the very central glory of the millennial kingdom. But God does not restore Israel and rebuild Zion, or Jerusalem, until he appears in his glory." ("Jesus is Coming," page 92.) The discriminating reader will see that the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee is the difference between Boll and Blackstone. According to the doctrine of Blackstone and other Adventists, when the Lord comes in his kingdom and reigns over the earth with his bride, the church, the following things will happen:

The Lord makes the new covenant with his people, Israel and Judah, (7) forgiving their iniquity, and remembering their sin no more; (8) while punishments are visited by him upon his enemies, (9) including Gog and his armies, (10) who are overthrown and destroyed (11) The Jewish people come into possession of the full extent of their land (12) according to promise, (13) including the Great Desert, which "blossoms as the rose." (14) The temple (15) and the city (16) are rebuilt after the divine plan; and the Levitical sacrifices and form of worship are with some modifications reëstablished. (17) Nothing shall hurt or destroy in all the holy mountain. (18) The Lord sets his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, both Israel and Judah, from the four corners of the earth. (19) Jerusalem is made a praise, the joy of the whole earth, (20) The Lord in her midst (21) is her glory and everlasting light; there shall be no night there. (22) All nations go to worship the King and keep the feast of tabernacles. (23) The earth is full of the glory of the Lord. (24)" ("Jesus is Coming," pages 191, 192.)

Thus it will be seen that, according to this doctrine, only with the reappearance of the Lord and the inauguration of his reign will evangelism succeed on any great scale. With his reappearance, Christ shall rule with a rod of iron. This point of view puts a premium on physical instrumentalities and is out of harmony with the New Testament estimate of spiritual agencies.

PROPHECY AND ESSENTIALS.

Here Boll is out of harmony with himself on essentials. Not only this, but he is guilty of the sophistry of which an editor should not be guilty. No one has intimated that all the word of God should not be studied. It is the imperative duty of every man to study every inspired word of God, from the first word in Genesis to the last "amen" in Revelation. The prophecies should be studied; Revelation should be studied and restudied; and yet, because we had insisted that his interpretation of unfulfilled prophecy should not be exalted to the position of a command which must be obeyed, the editor seeks to make the impression that we do not believe in studying prophecy at all. While there are many promises in the Bible, it is not essential to salvation to obey a promise, for a promise cannot be obeyed. While we may learn an important lesson from the offering of Isaac upon the altar, yet we are not called upon to do the same thing; and if we were to do such a thing now, it would be downright disobedience and rebellion. While we should read and study the genealogies, yet we have never seen anything in the genealogies to be obeyed; but he who reads and studies all the Bible will be condemned if he refuses to believe with all his heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God. The positive commands and ordinances of God must be obeyed.

On June 30, 1915, Brother Boll wrote us as follows: "I inclose you herewith my article. It aims to set forth the fact that the prophetic teaching is not strictly fundamental." When he restated his belief, he must have overlooked this letter, for he then drew a line between fundamentals and incidentals for which he says there is no authority. Will he tell a discriminating public when he has obeyed all the Bible? In the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah we have a prophecy concerning Christ. If Brother Boll had been living at that time, could he have foretold the meaning of that prophecy and when it was to be fulfilled? I am sure he could not; for he is not now able to tell us when Dan, 2: 44, which has already been fulfilled according to the Bible, was fulfilled, but is contending that its fulfillment is yet in the future. Before I began this review I wrote Brother Boll the following letter, on April 30, 1919:

Dear Brother: In the April issue of Word and Work, page 113, under the caption, "What the Editor Believes," appear twelve questions. Will you publish a courteous review of some of your answers in your paper? If so, I shall be glad to give some things you say a careful and prayerful consideration. An early reply will oblige.

On May 9 I received the following reply:

Louisville, Ky., May 6, 1919.—J. C. McQuiddy, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Sir and Brother: Regarding your inquiry of April 30, I wish to say that if you desire to review anything I have written, you have your own paper and your own columns in which you may say and do as you please, just as you have been doing all along. I have just one request: should you decide to review in your paper my statement under the caption, "What the Editor Believes," kindly reprint that article just as it stands.

R. H. Boll.

I know my rights as to what to publish in the Gospel Advocate, but directed my inquiry to him to know if he would criticize us in his columns and then refuse us a courteous reply in order that his readers might pass on the justice or injustice of the criticisms of his teachings. He completely ignores all demands of fairness and requests that we insert all of his article, regardless of whether we criticize or review it. With the same propriety he could request us to publish all of his journal. I cheerfully met all the demands of justice by publishing in full that which I reviewed. "Now unto him that is able to guard you from stumbling, and to set you before the presence of his glory without blemish in exceeding joy, to the only God our Savior, through Jesus Christ our Lord, be glory, majesty, dominion and power, before all time, and now, and for evermore. Amen."

The World vs. the Church.

BY E. A. E.

Before we can understand the difference between the church and the world, we must know what both the church and the world are. In order to get a clear conception of the church, let us note the following facts:

- 1. The church was established at the wonderful cost of the blood of Christ. (Acts 20: 28.) God's estimate upon the church can be measured only by its price—the "precious blood" of the Lamb. God did not pay this great price for something which is worth nothing and without which people can be saved. If people can be saved without the church, they can be saved without the blood of Christ, without Christ, and without becoming Christians.
- 2. The truth that Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ, the Son of God, is the foundation of the church. "Upon this rock I will build my church." (Matt. 16: 18; see Eph. 2: 19-22.) "For other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 3: 11.)
- 3. Christ is the head of the church (Col. 1: 18)—"head over all things to the church" (Eph. 1: 23); he is its sole lawgiver, with "all authority . . . in heaven and on earth" (Matt. 28: 18, 19.)
- 4. The word of which "church" is a translation means "called out." Christ's church is his called-out onescalled out of darkness into light (1 Pet. 2: 9; Col. 1: 13); called out of the world, whatever "the world" is (2 Cor. 6: 14 to 7: 1); and is called out to remain out and to keep unspotted from the world (James 1: 27). For this reason the world hates the church, as it hated and still hates Jesus. (John 15: 18-35.) And "the friendship of the world is enmity with God." The friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God, and a worldly church member is an adulterer against the Bridegroom of the church, Jesus Christ. (James 4: 1-6.) All, then, who have accepted the call of the gospel (2 Thess, 2: 14) and have come out of the world into Christ constitute his church. All Christians, or children of God, or citizens of the kingdom of heaven (Phil. 3: 20; Eph. 2: 19), in a given place, constitute the church in that place, as "the church of God which is at Corinth" (1 Cor. 1: 2), "the church throughout all Judea" (Acts 9: 31). The church in Jerusalem "were all scattered abroad" (Acts 8: 1, 4), and "went about preaching the word." All the children of God in the world constitute the church on earth. (Heb. 12: 22-24.)
- 5. The church is the house of God (Heb. 3: 6); the building of God (1 Cor. 3: 16); the temple of God (1 Pet. 2: 5); the habitation of God (Eph. 2: 20-22); God's "husbandry," or "tilled land" (1 Cor. 3: 16); God's flock (1 Pet. 5: 2; Acts 20: 28); the body of Christ, and Christians are "severally members thereof" (Col. 1: 18, 24; 1 Cor. 12: 12-14, 20); "the pillar and ground of the truth," whose mission is to practice the truth, maintain the truth, and extend the kingdom of God among men; it is the fulfillment of God's "eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus" to save mankind, and is the manifestation of his "manifold wisdom," and through which this wisdom is to be proclaimed (Eph. 3: 9-12).
- 6. "There is one body" (Eph. 4: 4-7); "all the members of the body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ" (1 Cor. 12: 12-14, 20). Hence, there can be but one church of Christ, and that is the same in all places and in all centuries. Its head, its construction or organization, its laws, its worship and work cannot be changed to suit the civilization or barbarism of any age; it transforms all into the divine nature and image of Christ.
- 7. The life of the church and work of the church are the same, being the life all Christians must live and the work all Christians must do. "Church work" is nothing more or less than the work God commands Christians to do, whether private or public. Making an honest living in - obedience to God, paying one's debts, building Christian homes, rearing children in the fear of the Lord, visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction, keeping unspotted from the world, helping the poor, sympathizing with the sorrowful, cultivating a meek and quiet spirit, adorning oneself in modest apparel, worshiping God on the first day of the week as he directs, preaching the gospel in the love of truth, winning souls to Christ by private influence or public speech, etc., are all "church work." Much of the work God commands Christians-the churchto do is not called "church work" by many people; they call some of it "drudgery," being "buried alive," etc.; while much of that which many call "church work"-"aid societies to the church," "suppers," "fairs," public speaking by women, etc.—is forbidden by the Lord. This note gives only an idea of the difference between what the life and work of the church are and that which many erroneously call "church work."

- 8. The church in the New Testament is called "the church of God" (1 Cor. 1: 2; 2 Cor. 2: 1), "the house of God" (1 Tim. 3: 15), "the church." The church at different places make up "the churches of Christ." (Rom. 16: 16.) "The seven churches of Asia" (Rev. 1: 4) were the same church at these places, and were "churches of Christ."
- 9. All who constitute "the church of God" or "the church" are called "Christians" (Acts 11: 26; 1 Pet, 4: 16), "saints," "disciples of Christ," "children of God," "fellow citizens," "the household of God," "fellow workers," "fellow soldiers," etc., according to the relationship which they sustain to one another and to God and Christ. They are "the Israel of God" to-day.
- 10. A congregation of Christians, of "fellow citizens," in the kingdom of heaven, of saints, etc., is sometimes called "the church," with "congregation" in the margin. (1 Cor. 11: 18, 22.) The church at times congregates for worship and work. (1 Cor. 14: 23.) At all other times the church exists, but is not assembled together. Where is the church when not assembled together? It is wherever Christians are in private life and at work in their proper spheres as men and women in all of life's relationships and duties. (See Acts 8: 3.)
- 11. Before his death and ascension Jesus said: "And upon this rock I will build my church. . . . I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 16: 18, 19.) "Will build" and "will give" look to the future and show the church had not then been built. The first Pentecost after Jesus ascended, upon which the Høly Spirit descended, upon which the apostles began to preach Christ and him crucified and repentance and remission of sins in the name of Christ, and upon which it is stated the Lord added the saved together, has been called "the birthday of the church," and Peter refers to it as "the beginning" (Acts 11: 15). After this the church is spoken of as really in existence and as increasing.
- 12. All religious denominations have sprung up since Christ built his church. He is the true vine, and every child of God, not every denomination, is a branch. (John 15: 1-10.)
- 13. When one becomes a Christian, one becomes at the same time and in the same way a member of the church, a child of God, a citizen in Christ's kingdom, a lamb of God's flock, a soldier of the cross, etc. For instance, one must be born again in order to become a child of God or to "enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3: 3-8); but when one has been born again, one has entered in that way the family of God, which is the church.
- 14. There is nothing then to join. All that is necessary and required of God is to proceed to do every day at home and in business and in the worship of God all that he commands his children to do. Whatever is done in word or deed must be done in the name of Christ (Col. 3: 17), aid the glory of all work done must be given to God "in the church and in Christ Jesus unto all generations forever and ever. Amen." (Eph. 3: 20, 21.)

5. One cannot do the work of the church out of the church or through some other institution.

5. The church at Jerusalem has been called "the mother church." It was the first church built by the apostles, and wa a model church. Especial emphasis is placed upon its uniy and peace. There are so much strife, contention, and division in congregations that the unity and peace of he Jerusalem church should be studied the more and the more practiced. Many do not seem to know the enomity of the sin of contention, strife, bitterness, and division. On the other hand, they seem to glory in their self-onceits and in the sin of division.

In Memory of Loved Ones.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

"Ad Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that geneation." Thus passed that generation. So had passed all generations preceding that one. Thus have passed all generations from that generation to this one; and so shall pass his generation and all subsequent generations, till time pall cease to be.

Katerine Jean Anderson, second daughter of James T. and Mry A. Anderson, was born, in Hickman County, Tenn.,near Lyles Station, December 20, 1883; obeyed the gospelit her dear old home, Hurricane Mills, Humphreys County Tenn., when she was a sweet little girl of fourteen summers; was married to District Attorney E. V. Hortonof Clifton, Arizona, December 15, 1910; died July 10, 1913

An obdient daughter, an affectionate sister, a faithful friend, consistent Christian, a faultless wife, and a model mother, er departure left in the hearts of those who knew her, anotherefore loved her, an aching void this world can neve fill.

She we the mother of two bright little boys, Edward and Jans. Edward passed away January 15, 1917. James, ny about six years old, is his father's constant companion and their companionship is delightful to behold.

Katherii was not the first of her father's family to go hence. The happy household once consisted of father, mother, sen boys, and four girls. Two of the boys—Ernest an Edward—and two of the girls—Ethel and Katherine—ave passed away—"not lost, but gone before;" for ty were all faithful Christians, "children of the heavenlKing,"

Ethel, therst of the family to pass into the fathomless, limitless dens of the boundless beyond, was a sweet, young, Chrisin woman, wife, mother, who left a precious little girl to treared in her dear old Hurricane home.

"Ed," the ext to go, was such a wonderful business boy, such an rnest, skillful, reliable helper, though only in his seventeth year, that his father felt, when Ed went home, in 1910as Robert E. Lee must have felt when, Stonewall Jackn having fallen, he said: "I have lost my right arm."

Then Ernest, to oldest son of the family, in the very prime of hopefuoung manhood, passed away, after a long struggle against e disease that finally sapped his strength and ended his liftin the summer of 1912.

While Brother d Sister Anderson have passed through seasons of sorrowhey have much more cause to "rejoice evermore," and anys be glad, than they have to ever be even momentarillorrowful and sad; for all their children have obeyed e gospel, and there is not, and never has been, "a blackheep in the flock." Indeed, cheerful compliance with des demands has always been a manifest characteristic the Hurricane Mills home.

Three of the children—Katherine, Myrtle, and David—were married at the same time—one ceremony sufficing for all—but they all married well; hence the shock of the triple break in the family was not severe.

Murray, the last, as well as the least, of the eleven—now only about thirteen years old—is, in helpfulness to his father, simply marvelous. But Murray and John and George and David and Bond and Myrtle and Lois and their father and mother must go, as Ethel and Edward and Ernest and Katherine have gone. The thought, however, that is to these thoughts as sunlight to the mists of the morning is: "Beyond the sunset's radiant glow," in a lovelit land of perfect bliss, perpetual and eternal, all such families, if faithful until death, shall be reunited, to be separated never, but to be unspeakably happy forever.

The American Commissioner at Constantinople sends the following cablegram: "The Armenian republic on the Russian side of the line and our relief committee working together are not able adequately to feed the refugees. Meanwhile seeding time is here and passing. Another season of famine is inevitable unless there is immediate action by some compelling power. The world appears to be unconscious of the overwhelming human tragedy that is being enacted in the Caucasus. The Turk and his racial confederates are carrying forward with growing efficiency the policy of extermination developed during the war by the method of starvation. Starvation is aided by typhus; and already, as if in anticipation of the hot season, cholera is developing. At this last moment can Christian civilization do something to restore and heal?"

For the searching of the Scriptures and a true knowledge of them an honorable life is needed, and a pure soul, and the virtue that is according to Christ; so that the intellect guided by it may be able to attain and comprehend the things which it desires, in so far as it is possible for human nature to arrive at an understanding of the word of God. For without a pure mind and a modeling of the life after the saints no one can comprehend the words of the saints. For just as one wishes to see the light of the sun, he at least wipes and brightens his eye, purifying himself in some sort like what he desires, so that the eye thus becoming light may see the light of the sun; or as, if a man would see a city or country, he at any rate comes to the place to see it; thus he that would comprehend the mind of those who speak of God ought first to wash and cleanse his soul by his manner of living, and to approach the saints themselves by imitating their works; so that leading with them a common life, he may understand also what has been revealed to them by God, and thenceforth, as closely knit to them, may receive what is laid up for the saints in the kingdom of heaven, things which "eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither entered into the heart of man," whatsoever things are prepared for them that live a virtuous life, and love the God and Father, in Christ Jesus our Lord .- Selected.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert-vigorous and vivacious-a good, clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion, and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place!

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anæmic-looking men, women, and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run-downs," "brain fags," and pessimists, we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosycheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water, with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweeten-ing, and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, bil-lousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds, and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice in-ternal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

In the Golden Afterwhile.

(John 14: 1-3.)

BY W. M. WILSON.

Beyond the sunset bars There is a city bright, More radiant than the stars; For Jesus is its light. I'm longing to go there When through with earth's last trial, Eternal joys to share In the glad Afterwhile, I'm near the harbor bar, Out on life's stormy sea; The distance isn't far, The lighthouse I can see. O blessed thought, that I Am so near the soul's home, Where I shall never sigh, And never more shall roam!

Expectantly I wait The summons from on high To call me from this state Where I shall never die. Methinks I see a throng Who'll greet me with a smile, The loved ones gone so long-O blessed Afterwhile!

CHORUS:

In the golden Afterwhile, Will Jesus greet us with his smile: When we're gathered home, Never to roam, To dwell with Christ ages to come.

Baptists vs. Campbellites. No. 6. BY M. S. MASON.

Touching the matter of the church's being established before the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus Christ, I ask, if this be true, why did Christ die, why must his body go into the cold tomb, and where was the glory of his resurrection?

Resuming the discussion of Mr. Bandy's proof texts, I want to "finish" him on his "finish" argument. Christ meant the whole program was finished when he used the language in John 17, what did he mean when he said on the cross, "It is finished?" Evidently it was not all done when the language in John 17 was used. But if it were not all done in John 17, why should we say it was all done in the latter passage? May we not say that Jesus in neither case was talking about the subject under consideration as a whole? The facts are that Jesus in each case was speaking about some particular feature of the great procurative program of our salvation. In the first he was speaking about his teaching the apostles or his preparation of them for the great work ahead. The context proves this. In his farewell address and concluding prayer he "finished that work." In the second instance he spoke of the sacrifice of his body on the cross, and truly it was "finished" when he bowed his head and died. Nothing in that argument for an ante-Pentecost kingdom.

He next uses John 18: 37, attempting to establish the present kinship of Jesus at that time by what he said.

But he did not say it. He said to Pilate, "Thou sayest I am king;" but if he had been king, it was only in promise and preparation, not one in power and perfection: In Luke 2: 11 we read: "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." That makes Jesus a Savior from his birth. That is too early for Mr. Bandy. Of course, Mr. Bandy would say that Jesus was a Savior in promise at his birth. Just so he was a king in promise during his personal ministry.

He next introduces Matt. 18: 11: "For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost." Sure! That was his purpose in coming, and he was born with that purpose. But Mr. Bandy would not say he was Savior at his birth; neither was he saving the lost at the time of his utterance simply because he had come with that purpose.

His next is Matt. 11: 12: "From the days of John the Baptist the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." Mr. Bandy does not believe his own passage. It says " from the days of John the Baptist;" but Mr. Bandy says the kingdom originated with the calling of the twelve, which was several months after John began his work. This passage originates the kingdom too early for Mr. Bandy. Of course, Mr. Bandy argues from this passage that the kingdom must have been in existence in the days of John, or before Christ's death, or it could not have suffered violence and been taken. But before I examine the contention on its real merits I want to feed Mr. Bandy "out of his own spoon." Inasmuch as Mr. Bandy sets up the kingdom after John the Baptist had preached several months-and, therefore, there could be no kingdom between John's advent and the calling on the mountain-and inasmuch as in the days of John the Baptist (all the days of his preaching) the "kingdom suffered violence and was taken," I ask Mr. Bandy how could it "suffer violence" and be taken when it was not in existence, according to his own contention? This presents just as grave a problem for Mr. Bandy as it does for us. But what is the meaning of Matt. 11: 12? We read (John 6: 15) that on a certain occasion the people would take Jesus by force and make him a kingthat is, they were premature. Matt. 11: 12 carries the same idea. The word "violence" carries with it the idea of "premature," as also does "force." They were not attacking the kingdom as existing; they were pressing on and trying to affiliate with it and carry out its principles before they were ready. To illustrate: Sup-

Had Chronic Bronchitis For Twenty-Six Years Now Well and Happy

THIS IS WORTH READING.

The experience of Mr. E. J. Toupalik, 1433 Rose Street, LaCrosse, Wis., is chiefly remarkable on account of the length of time he was afflicted. He writes:

"I have been suffering with chronic bronchitis for twenty-six years, and every winter I would catch cold and become so hoarse I could not speak for six or eight weeks. I could get only temporary relief.

"This winter I was taken with grip, and was in awful shape. A fellow workman advised me to take PE-RU-NA. By the time I had used three-fourths of a bottle the hoarseness was gone, also that tired feeling. I am on my second bottle. Hereafter PE-RU-NA will be constantly in my house. It is the best medicine ever put up for the purpose."

For any disease due to catarrh or catarrhal conditions, PE-RU-NA is equally dependable. Coughs; colds; catarrh of the head; stomach trouble; constipation; rheumatism; pains in the back, side, and loins; bloating; belching gas; indigestion; catarrh of the large and small intestines, are some of the troubles for which PE-RU-NA is especially recommended.

PE-RU-NA can be purchased anywhere in either tablet or liquid form.

A"Real Godsend

You can have the same success. Reefer's Ready Relief in your baby chicks' first drinking water will help save them from the white diarrheas that kills off more than half the chicks that are hatched. Reefer's Ready Relief is the discovery of a famous scientist. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3255 Poultry Bullding, Kansas City, Mo., for a package of Ready Relief that will positively help you save your baby chicks. Aren't your delicate, downy baby chicks worth saving? You take no risk. Mr. Reefer guarantees to refund every cent of your money if you are not entirely satisfied, and a million-dollar bank backs up this statement. Send for a $1 package to-day, or, better still, send $2.35 on special discount for three regular $1 packages and insure every hatch you get. Aren't your baby chicks worth five for a penny? When writing to advertisers, please say you saw their "ad." in this paper.

o'clock. The pupils come at eight, demand entrance and that the school convene and begin active session. It may be said of them that they take the school "by force," and through them the school "suffereth violence." They are taking it or pressing on it prematurely. So Matt. 11: 12 does not record the attacks of the kingdom's enemies; instead, it records the premature encroachments of its overzealous friends.

Lexicography sustains this also. According to Young's Analytical Concordance and Thayer's Greek-English Lexicon, there are two words from which our English term "violence" comes. They are "biazomai," to be forced or argued, and "diaselo," to shake thoroughly. The former is used in Matt. 11: 12; the latter is used in Luke 3: 14-"do violence to no man." We see from this that the term "biazomai" could not be used to mean the attack of an enemy to injure; but when that meaning is conveyed, as in Luke 3: 14, another word was used which carries that meaning. This is a deathblow to Baptist doctrine on the establishment of the kingdom; for this premature, violent, forceful setting up of the kingdom is just exactly the thing of which Mr. Bandy and his brethren are guilty.

Notes from the Field.

BY M. KEEBLE.

On the second Lord's day in March I visited Christiana, Tenn., and preached at McClain's Chapel. I am to hold a meeting there in August, the Lord willing.

On March 10, 11, I preached at Bellbuckle. This is a mission point; but we have purchased a large lot and have some money in the treasury with which to build as soon as possible. We want to thank all who helped us to buy the lot, and we hope all who can will give us a little aid, so that we can begin building. I believe if we had a meetinghouse here, a good many would obey the gospel. All we need is something to impress them that we are here to stay. I am to hold a meeting here beginning on the first Lord's day in June. This will be my seventh meeting at this place. I was glad to find Brother W. R. Mingle (white), who began teaching the colored people at this place four years ago, still engaged in the work; and he says he wants to see a house built for them to worship in as soon as possible.

On March 12 I was with the little band at Tullahoma. They are planning to have an old house they have bought moved on to a lot that they purchased some time ago. I will hold a meeting here, beginning on the third Lord's day in June. Brother T. Busby, a preacher, who lives here, is doing a good work in this section. Brother Busby and I will hold a meeting at Sparta, beginning on the third Lord's day in May. The white brethren and sisters at Sparta built a nice meetinghouse for the colored disciples some years ago, but for several years there have been no services in the house; so we want to spend some time there trying to revive the work and get the scattered sheep together. I am sorry that we have not made an effort at this before now. All who wish to aid us while doing this work may do so. We will have to live in the meetinghouse while there unless some one will take us into their home. We mean to stay there and make the effort, trusting Jesus, who promised to be with those who preach his word.

On March 13, 14, I preached at Morrison. The attendance was good.

On March 16 I preached at Viola. This is a working congregation, and they know how to make one pleasant in their home.

On March 17, 18, I preached at Smartt. There are some fine people in this church who are trying to live Christian lives.

On March 19-21 I preached at Mc-Minnville. Interest increased at each service, and some insisted that I stay longer.

On the fourth Lord's day in March I preached at Cookeville, and also went up to Algood and preached in the afternoon to an interesting congregation. The little band at Cookeville is doing well, with Brother G. A. Johnson as their leader. Brother Henry Clay, one of our faithful preachers, has moved here to live and do evangelistic work. He will be a great aid to the work here. The members at Jackson Street Church, in Nashville, where he and his wife were faithful members, wish them well in their new field.

On March 26 I preached at Lebanon, with good interest manifested. This is a growing and working congregation. They are planning to hold several meetings around Lebanon this year.

On the fifth Lord's day in March I preached for my home congregation (the Jackson Street Church), and fifty-seven dollars and fifty cents was contributed to repair the house. Interest was fine at each service. Old Brother Womack, who was one of the beginners of this congregation, is growing very feeble, and unless a great change takes place he cannot be with us much longer; but the Lord's will be done.

On March 31 and April 1 I was with the congregation at Center Star, in Hickman County, and had a splendid time. These are faithful and humble people.

On the first Lord's day in April I met the church at Brownsville. We had two fine services; the interest was fine. These brethren are planning to build a new church house and use the old one for a public school building. This is a real progressive congregation. I will hold a meeting this year at Bells, and this church will support the meeting.

On April 7 I went to Dyersburg, a mission field. I preached on the porch of Sister Brewer to a large congregation of people. I am aiming to go back in the future and stay longer. On April 8, 9, I preached at Newbern, in the Odd Fellows' Hall. Interest good.

On April 10, 11, I preached at Obion. This is a wide-awake congregation. They are arranging to build at once.

On the second Lord's day in April i was with the faithful little band at Neshoba. I was blessed with the privilege of meeting Brother James Hamilton, and he preached three impressive sermons. I was in this section three days, preaching at Neshoba, Capleville, and Forest Hill.

On April 17 I preached in Memphis. The work has been on a drag here for some time, but we are working to revive it again.

I will begin my protracted-meeting work about the first of May, and I am to be busy until late in the fall. Brethren, pray for me.

V. I. Stirman and Wife.

BY IRA L. WINTERROWD.

From their home at Garrett, Texas, in the month of January, 1919, there passed into the great beyond the venerable Brother V. I. Stirman and wife. She preceded him only twenty-three days, crossing over on January 6 and he on January 27.

Sallie White Stirman was born, in Florence, Ala., in 1850. She came to Texas when a young lady, and was married to Brother Stirman in 1885, To them were born one son and two daughters-White, Nelle, and Ruth, all of whom are living. There was no more consecrated mother in Israel than was Sister Stirman. She had long been a member of the body of Christ, and had rendered a humble, graceful service in the Lord's house. Consequently she was prepared to "enter in through the gates into the city." We all mourn our loss of her exemplary life. Her taking away was a shock to the family and friends; but their sorrow was because of earthly ties, for no one doubted her destiny.

Valentine Irving Stirman was born in Kentucky, in 1830. He came to Texas in 1840, and resided in that State the remainder of his life. Had he lived till April 27, he would have reached his fourscore years and nine. He had been a man of great vitality, but had judiciously conserved his energy. During only the last few years he had been failing noticeably, for it was just three years ago that he had his first real break in health. But he rallied and was able to go about, to church and elsewhere, especially attending the summer meetings and taking an interest in the work. In November last he felt well enough to really contemplate entering again the field as a preacher. But Sister Stirman's death seemed to be his immediate undoing. Brother Stirman had been married four times and had now seen his fourth faithful wife laid to rest. He must have been altogether ready to follow. His life had been filled with honorable and profitable service. He obeyed the gospel early, and had been a minister of it for more than fifty years. As a pioneer preacher, he rode hundreds of miles, suffering hardships as a soldier of the cross. During this time he baptized many people, established churches. conducted funerals, officiated at weddings, and, as he regarded his greatest work, was an elder of the church for a long period. It has been said that he was as scriptural an elder as one could find. He had a real concern for the church, sorrowed at times over its state, contended for the doctrine once delivered to the saints, and was always against innovations and practices that were inclined to conform the church to the world. His last work was the organizing, teaching, and building up of the church at Garrett, his home, and he will ever be remembered by the people in and out of the church there as a benefactor to the community. He baptized the writer nearly seventeen years ago, and has taught, counseled, and corresponded with him ever since. I loved the man, revered his judgment, admired his stand for the truth, and shall honor him by referring to his consistent life as one worthy of emulation. For a long time I have associated Brother Stirman and Brother David Lipscomb in my mind, because they were about the same age, had fought the good fight during the same period of the church's history, and differed but little, if any, in their conceptions of Bible teaching. We believe they have now taken their abode with Abraham and all the faithful ones of old, after whose characters they tried so hard to pattern. With sympathy for all the broken-hearted in their hours of sadness, let us remember to sorrow not as those who have no hope, but to watch and pray that we all may be with the redeemed in the New Jerusalem "some sweet day."

Immanuel, God With Us.

The steps of the way we know not, But our Leader we know full well; Our hands are in his, we fear not,

In the depths of his peace we dwell. He knows where he leads us, we know not.

But we trust in his love each day; Our hearts are his own, we fear not, For the way is the Lord's highway.——Selected

To Stop Falling Hair.

The cause of baldness, hair falling out, loss of luster and color, is found in the roots of the hair itself. Our hair is but a portion of our body, and, like the other organs, cannot subsist without food. The hair finds its food in the fat layer of skin next to the When this source of food is skull stopped or impeded, out comes the hair. The dreaded disease, dandruff, is a germ. It collects on the bottom of the hair and eats away its life. The hair sack from which the hair comes is embedded in the layer of under skin. When the scalp is diseased and the hair falls out, often this small hair sack closes. Eventually, as a result of the dandruff germs, baldness comes. The proper method of restoring the hair and stopping the falling out must necessarily be in the destruction of the dandruff germs and in the reopening of the little hair sacks. Furthermore, in order to rejuvenate the scalp and make the growth of new hair more vigorous, it is necessary that the system be able to furnish an abundance of hair food. Many artificial methods have been tried in restoring the hair, which were only surface remedies, and, failing to reach the small sacks, were unsuccessful. opening the hair sack allows the new hair to grow. Calvacura begins at the root of the trouble, and its use is, therefore, advised. Its mission is to feed the new hair as well as the old and rid the scalp of all dandruff germs. By thus cleansing and rejuvenating the entire scalp, a healthy growth of hair is assured. Falling of hair is stopped; new life and color to dead. gray hair is developed, and the hair becomes smooth and velvety. It is unpleasant treatment, and not an takes only a few minutes of time each day for about six week. The Union Laboratory, 214 109th Street, Bing-hamton, N. CHURCH NEWS

Florida.

Miami, May 11.-I began a meeting with the church here to-day with good interest. I find Florida a splendid field for labor. I think there are but few congregations in the State and few preachers. This is a city with thirty-one thousand people. The climate is about the same throughout the Tourists going and coming all the time, and it seems that opportunities are great for preaching the gospel. Joe L. Netherland.

Louisiana.

Forest Hill, May 8.—There were four confessions in Brother McQuid-dy's meeting at Duck's Mill Saturday and Sunday. Brother Ramsey had a good meeting at Simpson same date. The church there recently suffered a great loss in the death of Brother W. A. Jackson, who was in his seventy-fifth year. There were four confessions at Glenmora, two at lota, and one at Maxie recently.-A. K. Ramsey.

New Mexico.

Roswell, May 5.—April was a good month for the church in Roswell. Although we have no regular preacher, our home forces are operating with visible results. We have recently had three baptisms, and a number of oth-ers are interested. We have seven classes in Sunday school, a midweek Bible study, a singing school, and some personal workers. Plans for our summer meeting are being made in hope that we will have a great meeting. The Lord's people have wonderful opportunities this year; yet there is need of more preachers, more singers, more personal workers, and higher stand-ards of Christian living. If every Christian will be a personal worker instead of depending upon the preachers to do all the work of bringing souls to Christ, there will be many more people saved and the Lord will be greatly glorified .- J. E. Hoffman.

South Carolina.

Union, May 2.—Our work moves along nicely. We are having cottage meetings every night in the week but Much interest is being manifested. Conditions are such in the business world in this age that all a business man has to do is to furnish the goods and then let the public know what he has. This is done by advertising in one way or another. The man that does not advertise today is the man that is not doing much business. The advertising man of to-day is the busy man to-morrow. This principle will hold good in the Mas-ter's business. We have the goods (the Bible) to give to the people, and we should be preaching it in every home that we can reach. To do this, we need thousands of tracts to distribute. I am sure that in this State, where we are perfect strangers and where there is not a loyal band of disciples to meet on the first day of the week to worship, good literature would do lots of good. I find that many peo-ple here are anxious to know something about the church of Christ. In-

"CASCARETS" WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels Take Cascarets to-night.

Furred tongue, bad taste, indiges-tion, sallow skin, and miserable head-aches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery-indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A ten-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts Before Break-fast if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid, which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the elimina tive tissues clog, and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness, and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn Y., says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

What Doctor Pierce Has Done For Humanity!

BY DOCTOR CRIPPS.

It has always seemed to me that Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., should be placed near the top when a list of America's great benefactors is written. He studied and conquered human diseases to a degree that few realize. Whenever he found a remedy that overcame disease, he at once announced it in the newspapers and told where it could be bought at a small price. He did not follow the usual custom of keeping the ingredients secret, so that the rich only could afford to buy the medicine, but openly printed the name of each root and herb he used. And so to-day the names of Dr. Pierce and his medicines are widely known, and they stand for better health and better citizenship.

One of this great physician's most successful remedies is known as Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. These are little, sugar-coated pills, composed of Mayapple, leaves of aloe, root of jalapthings that Nature grows in the ground. These Pellets are safe because they move the bowels gently, leaving no bad after-effects, as so many pills do. Very often they make a person who takes them feel like a new man or woman, for they cleanse the intestines of hard, decayed and poisonous matter that accumulates when one is costive. If you are constipated, by all means go to your druggist and get some of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They may prove to be the very thing your system requires to make you well and happy.

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the in-ventor. Girls! Try it! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a small bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glis-tens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life; and if not overcome, it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen, and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store, and just try it.

An Appeal from Evensville, Tenn.

BY H. B. YOUNG,

Brethren, since many of the pulpits of Rhea County and adjoining counties are closed against me and my brethren of the church of Christ, and not being able to build a church house in all of the different communities, nor even able to buy a tent to move from place to place, I have decided to buy a small printing press and print for free distribution a small journal, to be known as "The Rhea County Missionary." I will distribute copies by hand and by mail all over this county and wherever I can get in touch with people who are willing to investigate.

This I shall endeavor to do at my own expense; but if there are any to whom this may come who want fellowship with me in this work, their fellowship will enable me the sooner to get started, and will be gratefully and thankfully received and faithfully used. All who have fellowship will receive a copy of the journal. While this is a comparatively destitute section so far as pure gospel teaching is concerned, yet I am not begging for help. I am just giving the saints a chance to help do a much-needed work. Address me at Evensville, Tenn.

Some men are rich and do not know it-rich in health, rich in a large and happy family, rich in friends, rich in influence and standing in their communities, rich in the spirit of charity and brotherly love. These same men may be poor in this world's goods; but they are rich, just the same .-Crosman.

And the blue of the autumn sky; It's the purple sheen on the grasses green,

And the wings of a butterfly. It's the gleaming gold that the sunsets hold.

And the rose at the dawn of day; And the spray that's bright where the waves are white

OBITUARIES

Hogan.

On the morning of November 22, 1918, ten minutes before four o'clock, the death angel entered the home of Homer Hogan and claimed him as its own. He was taken sick on November 8 with the influenza, which developed into pneumonia. It was sad indeed to give him up. The wife was sick also during his illness and was not able to attend the burying. Brother John R. Williams spoke words of comfort to the father, three brothers, one sister, and wife and babe. Homer was born on September 17, 1882. He was mar-ried to Onie May Wallace on May 28, 1916, and to this union were born two boys-one dead, the other a little over two months old at the time of his father's death. Homer was a kind and loving husband, and he loved his little boy (Carney Ray) so much. Homer had just begun to build up a little home of his own. The home was hum-ble and poor, but sunshine and happiness were ever in that home. He was a good singer, and his voice will be missed in the church. He was poor in this world's goods; but Jesus said: "Blessed be ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God."

THE WIFE.

Goodloe.

Among the many sad messages that have come to American homes during the last year, few, if any, meant more than the one announcing the death of Brother John L. Goodloe, of Mount Calm, Texas. Brother Goodloe was born in Readyville, Tenn., October 28, 1889, and came to Texas with his parents in October, 1901. He obeyed the gospel in 1903 and was always active in the church work. On April 14, 1918, he was married to Miss Cassie Morgan, of Mount Calm. Brother Goodloe was called into the service and sent to Camp Bowie on February 14, 1918, and was assigned to Company C, One Hundred and Eleventh Field Signal Battalion, and assigned to the duty of motorcycle dispatch bearer, and while performing his duty in this capacity in France he met death in a motorcycle accident about October 25. While it was not my pleasure to know Brother Goodloe personally, I feel that I do know him from the record he left in the community where he lived. I have visited in the home of his parents many times and have also preached for the church where he worshiped. In the home I find a loved and obedient son gone; in the church, a useful and devoted Christian. Brother Goodloe is survived by his parents, wife, two brothers, and two sisters, of Mount Calm, and one brother in France, besides a host of friends and brethren, to mourn his loss. Let us not sorrow as those who have no "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

about twelve miles south of Nashville, bade farewell to the scenes of this life and his deathless spirit returned to God who gave it. He was born on August 5, 1841; obeyed the gospel in 1858 under the preaching of Brother R. B. Trimble; and was married to Avie A. Collins, who survives him, on June 25, 1861. He lived to see nine of his ten children and two granddaughters grow up in "the nurture and admonition of the Lord." One died in early life. He was partially educated at Franklin College, under Brother Tolbert Fanning. He was a charter member and liberal contributor in establishing the Owen's Chapel congregation, where his membership has always been and where he was the leading elder for many years. Brother Allen was an industrious and successful farmer; he provided well for his family and was "ready to give, willing to share," in all worthy causes. He lived a quiet, sober, Christian life. He loved the church and made mani-festations of his love by faithful attendance and participation in its services. The many friends who assembled at the funeral, the tear-dimmed eyes, and the words of commendation all indicated that he had not lived in vein but had left an axnot lived in vain, but had left an example worthy of being imitated and a memory that stimulates to higher and nobler things. Brother Allen has gone to his reward, and the memory of his life and character will be an inspiration to those who knew his worth, and will always remain a precious heritage and comfort to the loved ones left behind, and will serve as a beacon light to guide their footsteps to that bright land where he awaits to give them a joyous welcome. The funeral services were conducted by Brother F. W. Smith and the writer, at Owen's Chapel, Sunday afternoon, April 6. Interment in Mount Hope Cemetery, Franklin, Tenn.

Report from North Carolina.

BY W. L. REEVES.

Our North Carolina work is improving considerably.

The Haw Pond congregation have raised funds and improved their meetinghouse to the extent of new doors and windows and new weather-boarding, and have painted it inside and outside, and have new lights installed, and have arranged with the writer to conduct a meeting beginning on July 6. We pray for a good meeting.

The Reedy's Creek congregation, which has been doing nearly nothing for a number of years, is greatly revived under the able ministry of Brother L. D. Campbell, who is to begin a meeting with them on May 18. They have a splendid meetinghouse since they recently made some improvements on it. When I came here four years ago, I found that every meetinghouse in this section of country needed considerable repairing, which has at last been done. The best work we all together have done, though, is having built up our "spiritual walls." That is why the material walls have been so nicely reconstructed.

Brother W. J. Butler was with the brethren at Warner's Chapel on May 3 for song practice and on May 4 to preach. He reports the work there improving nicely after the war and the "flu" have subsided.

My wife and I visited the Jericho congregation on April 27 and found the work there still moving onward. Jericho is in Davie County, near Mocksville. It is the old home of the scholarly M. C. Kurfees, who has for about forty years lived and preached much in Louisville, Ky. During all these years he has never failed to return to his old home each summer and hold a meeting at Jericho, where his influence is great among his relatives and boyhood neighbors and friends.

On May 4 I preached at Corinth, near Germanton, N. C. The outlook for more work done by some of this congregation, at least, is quite a bit better. Better attendance among the members is needed at Corinth. Too many automobiles and too much indifference seem to hinder some from attendance.

The work at my home in the city of Winston-Salem is doing splendidly. We are planning to hold some mission meetings both in and out of the city. The support in money for such meetings is insufficient to push them as they should be. Brother L. D. Campbell is an able preacher, but has to work six days each week to support his family. He should be holding

Are You Such a Man?

Or a man who lacks iron in his blood—who has no energy, force nor strength to meet the problems of the day, and wishes he could sleep until noon?

Look around at the men you meet every day. You can tell the ones with plenty of rich, red blood—they are the strong, healthy fellows, vigorous in body and mind—successful in whatever they undertake. One glance is enough to put the others in the weakling class.

That irritable twitch, that fit of despondency, that dizzy, fearful feeling—these are the sort of signals nature gives to tired, listless folks when the blood is starving for strength-giving iron. Iron is absolutely essential to change food into living tissue, muscle and brain. Without iron there can be no strong, red-blooded men and unless this iron is obtained from the foods we cat, it must be supplied in some form that is easily absorbed and assimilated. Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened lissues and helps to instill renewed energy and endurance into the whole system. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Nuxated Iron will increase the strength, power and endurance of delicate, nervous run-down people in two weeks time in many instances.

Edifying as the Need May Be

Martin Luther's Three Conversions.

Martin Luther once said that every man needed three conversions, and they involved his head, his heart, and his pocketbook. In closing the first Thessalonian letter, the apostle Paul utters a beautiful benediction: "And the God of peace himself sanetify you wholly; and may your spirit and soul and body be preserved entire, without blame at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," (1 Thess. 5: 23.) Certainly no man is sanctified wholly and meet for the Master's use until his pocketbook is sanctified. We might emphasize this point by asking the personal question: "Whose pocketbook do you earry?" "Mine, of course," some one answers; "whose else should it be?" But the real ownership of the purse depends upon another question. If you belong to the Lord Jesus Christ, then I believe that the purse is his also. "Well," says the man thoughtfully, "I hope I do belong to the Lord, but, somehow or other, I never included my pocketbook." That is the case with most of us.

The Liberal Giver.

One looks in vain in the New Testament for a passage stipulating the exact amount a Christian must give. There is no hard and fast rule on this point, but nevertheless the Guidebook presents a standard of giving that calls for our very best. Oftentimes the tithing system is recommended by modern writers; but Paul says: "He that giveth, let him do it with liberality." (Rom. 12: 8.) We all know the meaning of that word "liberal" as used in daily parlance. We often hear of a "liberal spender." He spends freely. If it is a matter of taking a drink, the amount spent is determined only by the crowd present. Certainly there is nothing in his action suggestive of a tenth or smaller than a tenth. He spends just what the occasion requires.

Jesus Christ would have us appropriate the same meaning of this word-not as prodigals, not as spendthrifts, but as earnest Christians, desiring to honor the Lord with our substance. We should observe the standard of liberality and teach our children to observe it. The great missionaries of to-morrow are among the children of to-day; the great givers of to-morrow are in the Bible classes on Sunday morning; the men and means for preaching the gospel are among the youth of to-day. Their interests must be aroused, their sympathies secured, their talents enlisted, if the world is to be won to Christ. A Catholic priest once said: "I read the church advertisements, and see that you Protestants are screaming for a big audience next Sunday. We Catholics are slower. We want a big audience in the next generation." Thus speaks Rome with a wisdom of a thousand years.

The Unit of Value.

The work of the next generation depends upon what we are teaching the children of to-day by precept and by example. In everything else but religion the child has as his unit of value, not the penny, but the nickel. He has a nickel for the moving-picture show, a nickel for the street car, a nickel for the soda fountain, and a penny for the church. With the logic of childhood he reaches a conclusion as to the relative value of these commodities: the moving picture, he figures, is worth a nickel, but the church is four cents cheaper. The child who has only chance pennies to spend on himself is being educated to give when he drops in a penny for missions, but the child who has quarters and dimes and nickels for self and pennies for God is getting ready to join the army of the un-Interested. The great war has taught the world to think and to give in terms of billions where beforetime it thought and gave in terms of millions; it has taught people to think in terms of millions where beforetime it spoke of thousands. This lesson should not be lost upon the church.

Millions for Education.

If the world can give so much to carry on a cruel, devastating war, what should not Christians be willing to give to carry the message of peace and good will to the ends of the earth and to promote the true education of their children? It appears that the denominations have learned this lesson well. This I gather from their well-advertised plans. In the State of Kentucky alone the Baptists are raising $1,400,000 for their schools. The Southern Baptist Association is raising $15,000,000 for educational purposes. The Southern Methodist Church expects to raise $35,000,000 in one week, from May 18 to May 25, and then two years later $20,000,000 more for their schools. In behalf of David Lipscomb College we are asking for only $50,000; and we wish this amount raised, not in order to make a show, but for the simple reason that every dollar of it is sorely needed to increase the usefulness of the institution.

The Hardest Test.

I would write nothing that will discourage that person who has only a little to give from giving that little, and giving it cheerfully. The steward is not to be praised or blamed for the amount of things placed in his hands, but for the way he administers what has been committed to his trust, whether it be big or little. He that is faithful in very little is faithful also in much. On the other hand, he that is unfaithful in little proves his unworthiness for a greater position of trust. The widow who gave two mites was a more dependable steward than some who gave larger amounts. The penny test is perhaps the severest test. Some are able to give only a little; but will they give that, or will they say: "It is not worth while. There are many others who are better able, and what I fail to give really makes no difference." But it does make a difference to you and to God. If all the members would be faithful, far more could be done by the church in Jesus' name. God would be pleased and honored and you would be fitted for greater things. For as regards the motive, we are dealing with heaven and not with men.

Give as you would if an angel Awaited your gift at the door; Give as you would if to-morrow Found you where giving is o'er.

Give as you would to the Master, If you met his loving look; Give as you would of your substance, If his hand the offering took,

The Body of Christ.

BY T. F. YOUNG.

In the New Testament the church is called by several names, but every time it signifies its relation to Christ in some way—that is, if it is called "church of God," it refers to that institution that God sent his Son into the world to establish; if it is called "church of Christ," it refers to that which Jesus said he would build, or that he purchased with his own blood; if it is called "family of God," it refers to that body of people of whom God is their Father, Jesus our elder Brother, and we are brothers and sisters in Christ,

But in 1 Cor. 12: 27 and Eph. 1: 23 it is called "the body of Christ." Now the question is, why is it called "the body of Christ?" We see that it differs from all other institutions in being called "the body" of an individual. We speak of other institutions as great bodies of men; but this one, composed of men and women, is called "the body of Christ."

To find out why this name is given to the church, we must look at the life Jesus lived here in the flesh, then look and see what is required of us as his followers. When we do this, we will get the answer, and it will be this: that, as his followers, we are to continue the life or the way of living he began on earth. We all admit that he lived the perfect life, the life that was right in every way, and that he requires of us, as his followers, to live the right life; and when we live the life he requires of us, we are the body of Christ, and in living that life we are always imitating him, so that makes it a continuation of the life he lived in the flesh.

But to make it plain that the above is true, we will look at the earthly life of Jesus and compare it with what is required of us.

- We find that Jesus practiced self-denial. We are told to deny ourselves and follow him.
- 2. We see him always doing good. We are required to always be doing good.
- 3. The first recorded words of Jesus are: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" We should always be about our Father's business.
- 4. Our Savior's order of work was "to do and teach." (See Acts 1: 1.) If we do right, we will observe the same order. Of course, we should be active in teaching, but should not let our teaching go ahead of our doing.
- 5. Our Savior fed the poor and helped the needy. In every way this is required of us. Here we might say that he never turned down a worthy appeal. As the body of Christ, the church should follow his example.

6. Jesus as an individual did all the preaching he could, then sent missionaries out to preach. If the church of Christ to-day is the body of Christ, it must preach and send missionaries out to preach. I could mention other items of resemblance between the life of Christ and our requirements; but this is enough to show us what a grand institution the church of Christ is intended to be and would be if it were living as it should. It would surely be as a city set on a hill that could not be hid.

But, brethren, what of the church of Christ to-day? How does it compare with the perfect life that is given us as its example? Or did you ever think of what the church is doing and compare it with what is required of it? If not, then I want to call your attention to some of the items I have mentioned—(1) the charity or benevolent work of the church and (2) the missionary work.

In charity work, Jesus fed and helped every worthy one according to his ability. He never turned any away. Does the church of Christ do that? Look in your own town or community. Are there any needy ones there? Are they worthy? Is the church helping them? Many times, I fear, it is not. Take up our papers, look at the worthy appeals that are printed there, and we know many of them receive very little attention. But to show what it is doing and how it compares with other benevolent orders, I will repeat a short conversation I had some time ago with an old brother, who was also an Odd Fellow. We were talking on the all-sufficiency of the church, and that Christ set up the only institution that was needed. The old brother said: "Yes, I admit that is true, but the church is not doing the work." Then he gave an example. He said that, a good many years ago, when Galveston was blown away, the Odd Fellows of the North sent a train load of supplies to their brethren there, and the church did not do that, and he asked me why the church did not do it. I could not answer his question then, but silenced him by saying that I did not know, unless men, like himself, who know they ought to give through the church, give through other channels. But the question is still unanswered; the church is not doing the work.

As regards missionary work, I am informed that the missionary society, for which the church of Christ says there is no Bible authority, has more than three hundred missionaries in the field; while the church, the body of Christ, that rejects all human laws, has only twelve or fourteen missionaries in the field.

Now, why is this? Is it because human rules for doing charity and missionary work are better than divine rules, or did our Savior make a mistake in not making provisions for the body of Christ to do this work? No, human rules are not better than divine rules, and Jesus made no mistake in providing for the church to do this work, and to do it better than any human order can do it. Then the question is, why isn't the church doing the charity and missionary work as it ought to be done? I have studied the question seriously and have found an answer. Jesus is not to blame. His way is perfect. The fault lies with us, the church of Christ. I obtained the answer I will now give you in this way: I wrote six or seven letters to some of our strong congregations, places where our ablest men have preached and are preaching. In these letters I asked three questions: "How many members in your congregation? How much money in your treasury? What is your church debt?" I now give some of the answers. First letter: "Our membership, all told, one hundred and fifty; very little money in our treasury; our debt, thirty-five hundred dollars. In the light of God's word that says, "Owe no man anything, but to love one another," I could not see how they could do anything but pay debts for a long time. The second letter said: "Our membership is about sixty; less than fifty dollars on hand; very little church debt, if any. Finance badly managed." Another said: "One hundred members; forty dollars on hand; no debt." Other answers were like these. Now, with the exception of the big debt mentioned in the first letter, I take it that the other answers show an average of what the church owns; and when you compare it with other charitable institutions, you see it is the poorest institution on earth. Then the answer to this question, "Why doesn't the church do the work?" is this: because it is too poor. Compare its assets with other charitable institutions and the answer becomes plainer. Others have their thousands and millions of dollars to do with; the church has very little or nothing. I am speaking of what the church owns. I know many individual members own hundreds and thousands, but, like it was with Ananias (see Acts 5: 4), it belongs to them till they give it to the Lord. So the church of Christ is too poor to do the work.

Now, the next thing to find out is, why is the church of Christ so poor? In answering this question, I am sure I will cross the religious path of some brethren and by them be looked upon as unsound; but I ask all to study my answer well before passing judgment. In answering this question, I will say that I learn two things from Moses' writings that I do not learn so clearly anywhere else—that is, how to make a living and what the Lord's portion is. When Moses wrote, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," we all take that as meaning we must work for a living; and while it is spoken of in other places, there is no place so plain as this first statement, and I take it as being binding on the human family from then till now; and when we work for a living, we are obeying God, if Moses did say it. In Lev. 27: 30 Moses says: "And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's." I know that in the New Testament we are told to give cheerfully, freely, and willingly, and to lay by as we are prospered, but nowhere except in Moses' writings are we told what the Lord's portion is. Now notice how it reads. It doesn't read like a command, but like the announcement of a fact. "All the tithe [tenth] . . . is the Lord's." Take all the Bible says about it, and it doesn't sound like a command, but like something that was always true. Abraham gave it, Jacob promised it, and the Jews robbed God when they did not give it. (See Mal. 3: 8.) So I contend that the tenth is the Lord's; and that being true, we are prepared to answer the question, "Why is the church of Christ so poor?" I take now an average congregation that I know. Its net income last year was thirty thousand dollars. Of course, the Lord's portion was three thousand dollars. Of that amount, they gave five hundred dollars. They lacked twenty-five hundred dollars giving the Lord his portion. Now, if this congregation is an average one—and I think it is, though I hope there are many that are better—then the answer to the question, "Why is the church so poor?" is, because the members do not give to the Lord his portion.

Now that you have the answer, what do you think of it, brother? Many times have worldlings and members of human orders told me, if the church was doing its duty, there would be no need for any other order. This is certainly true. Then, shall we give the Lord his portion, that the church may do its duty? O God, I pray that we all may be more devoted to thee.

"The Preacher's Pay."

BY J. B. NELSON.

A few days back I clipped from the Dallas (Texas) Dispatch an article that appeared on the editorial page on April 2. There is so much truth in it that I cannot refrain from letting the readers of the Gospel Advocate get the views of a man that is not a preacher, but one that is unprejudiced toward the ministry and can see the woeful neglect on the part of the church toward the self-sacrificing preacher. Many people, and even church members, go about criticizing the ministry; but when they get sick, they welcome the preacher's visit. When death comes to the careless church member, the minister that has been halfway supported and criticized for wanting an increase in salary is expected to give at least one day of his time, pay his own car fare or furnish his own automobile (if he should be so fortunate as to own one), conduct the funeral and offer no criticisms of the man's life; but, on the other hand, pass all the bouquets he can, speak in glowing terms of his most wonderful family, calling each one by name, etc.

A noted educator spoke in Dallas a few days past, and gave proof that the increase in the cost of living in the past year had increased sixty-five per cent over the past year. This being true, are the churches willing to increase the preacher's support in proportion? Read what the Dispatch has to say:

The average salary for preachers in twelve leading denominations is $774 a year.

That's $2.12 a day.

The average preacher is married. Most of them are raising children, feeding them, clothing them, buying medicine for them, and sending them to school.

The average preacher works seven days a week. He must wear good clothes; his wife must dress well,

He must wear good clothes; his wife must dress well, and his children cannot appear in tattered and torn rags. His congregation insists that the preacher and his family must not display any sign of poverty, and the preacher must wear a smile—always. He must have a cheery word for every man, woman, and child he meets. He must not complain.

Once in a while a preacher quits the pulpit and takes another job—one which will leave something in his pay envelope after taking out the tolls of butcher, candlestick maker, and the baker. Then his congregation speaks of "his fall from grace," and he is a branded outcast.

A preacher ought to preach. What right has he to stew and fret about shoes for his children, food for his table.

and the declining years of his life?

And, above all, a preacher should never mention his pay envelope; for his congregation has arrived at the conclusion that their pastor will reap his reward in the hereafter, than which no human being could desire a greater reward.

So the congregation distributes haloes, passes to Paradise, and reserved seats in heaven to its pastor. Having been thus generous in the matter of spiritual rewards, the members of the average congregation hand over about two cents a day, which totals the munificent sum of $2.12 every twenty-four hours for the preacher.

You know, the average congregation imagines its pastor never would get to heaven unless it permitted him to preach to it each Sunday. That's the impression the preacher must receive every time he gets his lean pay envelope.

So he goes on preaching and praying for his employers and for everybody else under the sun. We suppose there are times when a preacher gets to pray for himself and preach to himself. Usually, though, the average preacher has his hands full preaching to and praying for his congregation.

When he is not preaching and praying, he is visiting the sick and helpless, the aged, and the backslider. Aside from these duties, he has nothing else beyond attending to the lawn socials, the half dozen or so church societies, the boys and girls, the Sunday school, the choir, soliciting money for a new church roof, collecting for home and foreign missions, burying us and marrying us, baptizing us and converting us. Once in a while the average $2.12 congregation will permit its pastor to take exercise mowing the church lawn or sweeping snow off the sidewalk.

Truly is the "laborer worthy of his hire." The only

Truly is the "laborer worthy of his hire." The only trouble in the matter of the preacher's hire is that his congregation expects the Lord to pay about eighty-eight per cent of the hire.

It is better to increase the content of the preacher's pay envelope than to contribute for homes for aged pastors, and it is more pleasing to preachers to get regular-sized pay envelopes while they live than bronze tablets after they are dead.

The Real Life.

BY R. P. CUFF.

Usually we think of realism as distinct from idealism, but the real life is idealistic. Many of the busy folk of the world never get into the higher life. They miss the beauties which the Creator has provided for them. It behooves us to study the real life—what it is, and how to attain it.

There has been a time in our young lives when our parents employed all the gentle arts of guardian care to make us happy. But we must emerge from under that youthful protectorate; we must leave the loving provision and safeguards of that parental domicile and be thrown upon the mettle of our own manhood to win a place in the world and establish a character.

There is a diversity of lives that we might live; society life, political life, religious life; good, bad, better, worse, best, worst, and indifferent. Changing circumstances, opportunities, and environment come tumbling after each other in wild confusion. It is our privilege and our duty to select the best.

The component parts of the real life are education, friendship, service, and freedom from worry. "Each man's future lies out before him like a block of unwrought marble; he may work it into what he will." It is entirely within our capacity to exalt the grand and the noble in our lives, and to lay the foundation stones of certain success.

No man should go through life without an education. It broadens his personal vision and increases the scope of his activities. Let him drink deep of the fountains of learning—the pure, sweet waters of perpetual youth and renewal. Learning is knowledge purged of all that is untested and ephemeral. It has come into the world, not merely to clear men's eyes and give them mastery over ever-changing circumstances, but to keep them always young like the stars and the hills, and the sea and the vagrant wind.

From time immemorial the principles of education have been respected. Before civilization burst into the beauty of modern bloom, the foremost patriots of ancient kingdoms recognized its merits. The primitive leaders of our own nation were its firm advocates. "Educate the people" was the first admonition addressed by Penn to the colony which he had founded. "Educate the people" was the legacy of Washington to the nation which he had saved. "Educate the people" was the unceasing exhortation of Thomas Jefferson. Of course, all thinkers of our age stanchly support it. Above all, God believes in education. He educated Moses for the work of delivering Israel. The scriptural advice is to train the children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

Not all the education of life is obtained in the schoolroom. Solomon said: "Wisdom crieth in the streets." But at school we should obtain a taste for study, the habit of mental application and intellectual discipline. What we get there is merely a stepping-stone to higher things. During life we are to be educated in love and duty, truth and all virtue.

True education calls for friendship. Some one has defined it as "a golden knot tied by an angel's hand." Aristotle defined it as "one soul abiding in two bodies." Woodrow Wilson said: "Friendship is a much larger, much finer, much deeper thing than mere relish of good company." It was Shakespeare who said: "The friends thou hast and their adoption tried, grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel, but do not dull thy palm with entertainment of each new-hatched, unpledged comrade."

No man can afford to be self-centered. He needs friends. There are times when they are worth more to him than gold. No success is comparable to success in friendship. Friendships are indispensable to a noble life.

The book of Proverbs tells us: "A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity." "Faithful are the wounds of a friend." "Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart: so doth the sweetness of a man's friend by hearty counsel."

How to make friends is the next problem. The secret of friendship is just the secret of all spiritual blessing: the way to get is to give. Trust is the first requisite for making a friend; suspicion kills friendship. Faithfulness is the first requisite for keeping a friend.

Whether or not we get all the education in life that we want, surely we can make friends. We should study carefully human nature and worm our way into the hearts and lives of our fellows. We ought to be courteous, kind, and gentle with all, but not to all can we open up the sanctuary of our heart.

After we have made friends, we should serve them; and we should serve our enemies, too. It is our mission to be used for others. We are to take an interest in our fellow man, feed the poor, help the feeble, comfort the discouraged, and give a warm hand and a sympathetic ear wherever there is the call of human need, the voice of human sorrow. The chief blessing of our lives is to be a blessing to our fellow man. To seek the good of men is to seek the glory of God.

Who could not be happy when making others happy? Who would resort to worry? Yet there are people who spend their time in endless worrying. But the greater part of their fears and worries are over things which never come to pass. The worrying disposition is to be stoutly condemned. It tears down the tissues and saps the vitality of man.

Disappointment is not worry. All of us must experience disappointment. He who never fails in an undertaking is, usually, of a soul so narrow that it can be of little consequence to the world whether he succeeds or does not succeed. Oftentimes, too, we are disappointed from other causes than failure in an undertaking. Our best wish for our friend would be, not that he might never have a disappointment, but that he might never have a disappointment that might not be for his good.

There is a distinction between sorrow and worry. Sorrow is sweet or bitter according as it is drunk in submission or in rebellion. Let us note the philosophy of sorrow. Our faculties and affections are graduated to objects greater, better, fairer, and more enduring than can be found in this world. They demand a scale and depth of being which outwardly they do not meet, yet inwardly they are the organ for apprehending. Hence, a certain glorious sorrow must ever mingle with our life: all our actual is transcended by our possible; our visionary faculty is an overmatch for our experience; like the caged bird, we break ourselves against the bars of the finite with a wing that quivers for the infinite. To stifle this struggle, to give up the higher aspiration, is to cut off the summit of our nature and live upon the flat of a mutilated humanity. To let the struggle be, however it may sadden us, to trust the pressure of the soul toward diviner objects and more holy life, and measure by it the invisible ends to which we tend—this is true faith; the unfading crown of an ideal and progressive nature. A nature which reaches forth to the perfect from a station in the imperfect must always have a pathetic tinge in its experience.

Christ is the perfect learning distilled into wisdom, the perfect friendship lifted to the utter heights of self-sacrifice, the perfect sorrow steeped in hope. Not all the hearded counsel of the world is worth the example of that one man.

Now do we get the meaning of real life, and shall we incorporate in our lives a full measure of education, friendship, service, and happiness, and begin to live?

Can We Measure Up to the Standard?

BY A BEADER.

The apostle Paul, in 1 Cor. 13: 1-4, spares no pains to emphasize the importance of charity. Since charity is so important, we should be very sure that it abounds in our hearts. A good way to tell whether or not we have charity in our hearts is to critically analyze our everyday actions: for we may be sure that if it exists in our hearts, it is going to show forth in our actions. Indeed, the surest way we have of judging of a man's heart is by his daily actions. "Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." (Matt. 7: 16, 17.) Just so, a pure heart is going to show itself by good and pure actions; while an evil heart is just as surely going to show itself by evil actions. Therefore, if charity has not been showing itself in our daily walk among men, it is time to bestir ourselves; for that is a certain sign that very little, at least, really exists in our hearts.

But some one says: "How may we judge of our actions so as to tell whether or not we have charity?" Judge by God's word. God has set up an infallible standard for us (his children) to judge ourselves by; and if we measure up to the requirements laid down in this standard, well and good; if not, then we should be earnestly striving to conform ourselves to them. In 1 Cor. 13: 4-9 the divine standard in regard to charity is laid down. Let us, then, earnestly and impartially measure ourselves by these verses and see if we can in any measure fill the requirements.

Verse 4 tells us: "Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up. Are we always as long-suffering as we should be? I fear that few of us are. In a great many cases, if some one has mistreated or imposed on us in some way, instead of being patient and bearing it as best we can, we instantly begin thinking of how we can pay him back, and treat him as bad as, perhaps a little worse than, he did us. Surely this is not the spirit of charity. The next statement, "Charity envieth not," is one that most of us need to do some serious thinking about. When we see some one else that is doing a little better than we are, it is human nature to envy him; but we should fight this desire of the flesh as we would a deadly serpent, for charity and envy will not dwell in the same house. Again: "Charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up." It is but natural for a man to be puffed up, or, as it is very commonly put, "get the big head," when he has been uncommonly successful. Indeed, it takes quite a good deal of the Spirit of God to entirely overcome this tendency; but it can and must be done before we can ever measure up to the requirements of our standard.

In verse 5 it is said that charity "doth not behave Itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil." How many of us can truthfully say that we are living up to the principles of this verse? How many of us are not easily provoked? It is true that many things come up in our daily lives that are very annoying; and the temptation to lose our temper and say and do things of which in our sober moments we would be thoroughly ashamed is very strong; but we should bear in mind that such a spirit is entirely foreign to the teaching of God's word. Are our thoughts always as pure as they should be? I fear that there are very few of us but what sometimes let evil thoughts slip into our minds. If we would have charity, we must think no evil.

Again, verse 6 tells us that charity "rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in truth." So, if we would have charity, we must always be glad to see truth triumph at whatever cost; and if we are really glad to see the victory of truth and right, we are going to put our shoulder to the wheel and do our very best toward that end.

Again (verse 7), charity "beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." So we see from this that, before we can measure up to the standard, we must be willing to bear all things for Jesus' sake; to believe every single thing he has said; and to endure all the suffering, privations, sacrifices, and hardships that come to us as his servants. It means a great deal for us to live up to the requirements here laid down, and before we can do it we must learn to lean on an Arm that is stronger than ours and to daily ask help and guidance of Him who doeth all things well. It will mean the giving up of much that the word holds dear, of working and living for the future rather than the present, and the enduring of the scorn, ridicule, and abuse of the world; but surely, with the divine example of our Savior's life constantly before us, this should not seem hard. If at any time our load seems heavy and we feel that we are put to a test harder than we can stand, we have but to turn and look at what our Savior endured for us; when-lo!-our afflictions are as nothing compared to his. Then, we have the divine assurance of Paul: "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." (2 Cor. 4: 17.) Though the price we pay is great, still greater is the reward: for is it not a crown at God's right hand and the privilege of spending an endless eternity in his presence? Surely, no price is too great for this.

Let us, one and all, resolve to try earnestly and persistently to make our lives conform more nearly to the standard from this day forth than they have heretofore.

For the lot, last report was of $197.80. For two months nothing has come except two offerings, as follows: D. R. May, Texas, $5: Paul R. Gray, Michigan, $100. A late letter from Japan says they have not purchased the lot, We ought to contract for the lot, lest we lose it as we did the other one. But Brother McCaleb perhaps wisely counsels that we get more funds in before we turn loose what we have. Brethren, here is a good place to put your bonds. I believe I can get full face value for all bonds that are sent to me on this fund.

We have examined the account of mission receipts and disbursements by W. W. Freeman and find them to be correct as reported from time to time.

Searching for His Wife in the Form of a Snake.

BY E. S. JELLEY.

Writing to an English brother about my wife's promotion to glory, I received an invitation to visit him and seek solace among praying brethren. I went and enjoyed the holy atmosphere of the place, although I cannot say that the void place in my heart felt much less void while there.

However, I started out to tell a story the brother told me while there. He said the wife of a Brahman near him died, and the old man in deep despair was looking about for a snake, thinking that would be likely to be the form his wife would take in her transmigration. What a terrible contrast to our blessed hope!

To-day the Arya Samaj is turning heaven and earth to undo the work of the gospel in this land, and they claim to have within a generation attained the strength that Protestants have attained in two hundred years. The Aryas are up-to-date reformers, striving to abolish caste, idolatry, and child marriage; but a false sense of patriotism has induced them to seek to uproot all faith in Christ as the Savior of the world. Some years ago I wrote about a banner I saw at a meeting of theirs in Barellly: "Swami Dayanand Died for Us." India is now being granted home rule, which will, without doubt, greatly add to the anti-christian bigotry.

In the meantime there are our two thousand odd converts almost entirely unsheperded, there being only six workers among them; and they, at the instigation of a brother in America, are being so poorly supported that several of them have had to leave home and seek famine relief or employment at something secular. As for our little seminary, it has been closed for the past year. Remember, not one in one hundred of our converts or their children are able to read the word of God.

There are also many other needs. Will you help one of them?

All the great works and wonders that God has ever wrought or shall ever work in or through the creatures or even God himself, with all his goodness, so far as these things exist or are done outside of me, can never make me blessed, but only in so far as they exist and are done and loved, known, tasted, and felt within me.—Selected.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

"His Blessings Continue."

Nothing has seemed to give more general satisfaction than the improvement we have made on our West End house of worship. We have increased the seating capacity considerably, and it now seems that we will have to enlarge it again, else start a new congregation, a thing we hope soon to do. Yesterday (May 18) every seat was taken. We thought it well to have a short revival, hence began it, and it is proving to be the most interesting revival we have ever had at West End Avenue. At this writing we have had only five services, and a great ingathering of souls seems imminent.

Brother Hugh E. Garrett was with the Macon brethren yesterday, and preached both morning and evening. He baptized a man, the head of a family, and about thirty-five years of age. He is hopeful of getting the whole family. Brother Garrett is doing a most effective work at Macon, visiting that place twice a month; and from the way the Dalton brethren write of his recent visit, he is to mean much to the work at that place. He is to go there twice a month also, the Lord willing.

"What Is Good."

Micah says: "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?" (Mic. 6: 8.)

1. "Do justly." This can never lose us one cent nor bring one harm to us, either in this life or the life that is to come. We certainly want others to "do justly" when it comes to dealing with us; but are we just as anxious to see that all our acts toward others are just? Do we not sometimes accuse others of believing things they do not believe and teaching things they do not teach? Is this "doing justly?" One of the most striking things in the life and character of the lamented D. Lipscomb, of whom something was said recently on this page, was his determination not to misrepresent any one of whom he spoke or wrote. He was just as careful to "do justly" in his acts and writings about the Mormons or Catholics as he was about his own brethren. Something was said on this page, recently, about the importance of receiving "the love of the truth," that "we might be saved." How essential this is! If the truth we love, only this will we speak in all of our teaching to men about salvation; and If the truths spoken to us by our Heavenly Father we have received and love, we most certainly will love truthfulness, and will speak and write only the truth about others, and will love this, delight in this, just as much as we delight in having only the truth spoken about ourselves and desire that others ever "do justly" in all their dealings with us. It matters but little what we claim or pretend to be; what we really are—this is the thing that counts. Facts are stubborn things; and if it be a fact that we have failed to "do justly" in our dealings with others, pretty sermons and high-sounding articles in the papers about "the law of love" and "philology" will never change them. Facts can be changed by whole-hearted repentance, confession, and prayer; but without these things, the stubborn facts of our wrongdoings and injustice to others remain, and in the judgment we must face them. How careful and prayerful we should all ever strive to be along these lines, lest we be among the number to whom God sends a "strong delusion," because we "received not the love of the truth," that we "might be saved."

2. "Love kindness." That we all love for others to be kind to us, I presume, will be admitted; but do we love to be kind to others? It is certainly true that some will not appreciate kindness on your part, that they will trample it under foot, and, swinelike, turn and try to rend you. But God holds us not accountable for the conduct of others. Paul's statement, "If it be possible, as much as in you lieth, be at peace with all men," contains the principle. Do your part, keep your side beyond question, is the idea. One of the most uncalled-for things known to me is wrangling, strife, and division among brethren. Nothing else does the Bible condemn more severely. Knowing the tendency of such, when the Atlanta work was begun, in our first business meeting it was suggested that differences were liable to arise as the work continued. The question was raised as to how we could best avoid creating strife and division and escape such when we saw it brewing. It was agreed that there was but one way-viz., see to it that we learned to pray and not to fuss, and to settle all questions in the spirit of prayer, with brotherly love and a whole-hearted search in God's truth for light to guide us on all occasions. It was determined in that meeting that all troubles must be settled, even if it demanded fasting and prayer for days to this end. I consider that nothing has had more to do with our success than this. Difficult problems have come up, but this has settled them all, so far as the churches here are concerned. Any man who claims to be a Christian and is not willing to walk by this rule is unworthy of fellowship. Adopting this rule and following it has kept the congregations united and harmony and peace reigning. Satan has made his efforts to work in, but never can he enter and wreck and ruin the work until those within cease to be governed by God-ordained rules in which we are commanded to walk. "Finally, be ye all like-minded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tender-hearted, humble-minded: not rendering evil for evil. or reviling for reviling; but contrariwise blessing; for hereunto were ye called, that ye should inherit a blessing. For, he that would love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: and let him turn away from evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and pursue it. For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears unto their supplication: but the face of the Lord is upon them that do evil." (1 Pet. 3: 8-12.) "And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you." (Eph. 4: 32.) Let us, therefore, love kindness and do justly; for this is good-a thing not only declared in God's Book, but that we know from our own experience and observation.

3. "Walk humbly with thy God." How much we need the spirit of humility! If we walk humbly with our God, we will ever live in the consciousness that "the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." (Jer. 10: 23.) Hence, with David, we will say: "For this God is our God forever and ever; he will be our guide even unto death." If this humility we have, we will cast down our imaginations, and every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God, and bring every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ, (See 2 Cor. 10: 5.) Walking in our own thoughts, making laws of our own, and trampling under foot God's law, we will never do, if we walk humbly with him. And, of course, this makes us receive the love of the truth in the fullest sense; and on it, and only it, will we live and walk all the days of our life. Where is the skeptic, now, that can show that doing those things mentioned above-"doing justly," "loving kindness," and "walking humbly with our God "-is not the very best thing for man-that it brings him only good, and that continually?

To date four have been added to the fellowship of the congregation, and the meeting continues with much interest, Brother Harding is a prince among men. I will begin at Steele, Mo., on May 27."

From E. Gaston Collins, 507 West Clinton Street, Huntsville, Ala., May 24: "For seven months I have been engaged in secular work and preaching on Lord's days; but now I have decided to give all my time to the work in holding meetings or singing. It is rather late to make arrangements for a summer's work now; but there might be some place wanting a meeting or a song leader, and this is to advise that I am ready. I am assisting Brother Largen in a meeting at West Huntsville now. Eight to be baptized this afternoon. I begin to-morrow for him with the Dallas Mills congregation, and will assist him through the meeting."

From James E. Laird, Campbell, Mo., May 24: "Last Lord's day was a great day for the church at Kennett, Mo. I preached for them on Saturday night and on Lord's day and Lord's-day night, and baptized three. The church there bought a lot on which to build a meetinghouse at the close of a meeting Brother Dollison and I held for them last July, and they paid for it all last year, with the exception of about fifty dollars. After the baptizing last Lord's day they met to raise this fifty dollars to pay off the last note on the lot, and raised about sixty-five in a few minutes. They also made arrangements to begin work on a new tabernacle at once. M. S. Mason will hold their meeting in July, and they hope to have the tabernacle done for the meeting."

J. A. Hudson writes from Hobart, Okla., May 18: "We began a meeting at this place yesterday. Last night we did not have seating capacity enough to accommodate the people. I have been in Oklahoma for nearly two months, all of which time I have been very busy in evangelistic work. I held a meeting at Isabella. We labored over three Lord's days. The religious element of that place is a peculiar complexity and the brethren there have extreme opposition. Next I went to the Fairview congregation, north of Carnegie, where I delivered five discourses to an overflowing house. One man was baptized. I promised to return for a longer meeting in July. I shall be in Oklahoma until the middle of September, when I shall return to Alabama."

Alonzo Ault, elder of the congregation at Shadyside, Ohio, writes: "The brethren should support this Italian mission. We have a good opportunity here if it was supported as it should be; but, as it is, Brother Dasaro has to work at the factory twelve hours each day in order to support his family. Now you understand his circumstances. If he had the time to look after this work right, he could accomplish much. At Bellaire there are something like two hundred and fifty to three hundred school children that he could get to teach if he had the time. He has a class he teaches on Lord's-day afternoon. I was there on April 20. He is getting along fine. They had about sixty-five children out that day." We urge our liberal brethren to put this Italian mission on their list for donations.

From R. C. Bell, Thorp Spring, Texas, May 20: "Since school opened last September I have been busy with school work and preaching on Sundays. In addition to full teaching work in Thorp Spring Christian College, I have had four regular Sunday appointments each month. I have visited Floyd, Hunt County; Alvord, Wise County; and Lingleville and Thurber, Erath County, monthly. The Lord has blessed me with health and with will and opportunity to work, and I have been busy and happy. My address will remain Thorp Spring till about the first of September, when I expect, the Lord willing, to move to Abilene, where I will teach the English courses in Abilene Christian College next year. Again I will have the Sundays for monthly appointments with churches within reach of Abilene and expect to keep busy."

From F. P. Fonner, Buffalo, W. Va., May 23: "I have received help on our building fund as follows: From E. C. Jordan, $5; Mrs. Alice L. Miller, $1; church of Christ at Vinton, Ohio, $10. I have also received personal help in my work as follows: From C. D. M., $1; Mrs. Sarah A. Soper, $5; T. P. Freeland, $5; church of Christ at Morven, Ga., $5; Burley F. Black, $2.50; T. E. Anderson, $5; Mrs. J. D. Swannack, $2.10; church of Christ at Hamlin, W. Va., $2.50; J. H. Jones and son, $1; Mrs. Ira C. Hardesty, $1; Mrs. Ardie Teets, 50 cents. We thank God and all the donors for their help. May God bless all of them, including the Gospel Advocate force. The Advocate is a grand paper and must have your help now. Please do help us on our building fund now; and please do not forget our personal needs. State what your offering is for."

W. W. Slater, of Fort Smith, Ark., writes, May 22: "I was with the brethren at Valley View last Lord's day. We had three splendid services. These brethren manifest as much brotherly love and Christian spirit as I have ever seen anywhere. They love the Lord and his cause. preaching at Bellemont, out from Prague, Okla., this week. This is a mission point. T. J. Brown recently moved here from Arkansas. He was anxious to get the work started here and asked me to come out and preach this week. are having large crowds and great interest manifested. have succeeded in getting together eleven members who have promised to meet regularly for worship. They would like to have a meeting, beginning on the third Sunday in July or the third Sunday in August. They will support a meeting very well. What loyal preacher can come at that Write T. J. Brown, Route 1, Prague, Okla. have an all-day service at Fort Smith on the second Sunday in June, at which time we hope to have our new house of worship completed. All in reach are invited to attend this service.

Eliza King, of Packard, Ky., makes this request:

Please explain Gen. 3: 1-4. What kind of fruit was it they were forbidden to eat?

The forbidden fruit spoken of in Gen. 3: 1-4 is regarded by many as an apple. I do not believe that the evidence is sufficiently convincing to warrant any one in taking that position. If God had seen proper and had attached enough importance to the matter to gratify our curiosity, he would have told us just what kind of fruit the forbidden fruit was. As there is no definite and specific information on the subject, I prefer to call it "forbidden fruit," and with that to let the subject rest, as does the Bible. I understand that the Greek word corresponding to our word "apple" is "malum." Smith's Bible Dictionary says: "It was used by the Greeks and Romans to represent almost any kind of tree fruit." Granting this to be true does not warrant any one in contending that the forbidden fruit was certainly an apple. The matter is certainly not of sufficient importance to provoke discussion.

Abel Hale, Route 5, Petersburg, Tenn., asks for an explanation of a passage of scripture bearing on idolatrous and immoral practices:

Please explain Acts 15: 29: "That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well." What does "blood" here mean, and "strangled?"

There are four things mentioned in the passage quoted above which are forbidden. The four items forbidden were common customs of the Gentile world, and about which Christians should have a clear understanding. The first inhibition not only means to refrain from worshiping idols or eating meat offered in idol sacrifice, but to refrain from all pollutions that belonged to the system of idolatry. Immorality was almost universal among the Gentiles and chastity was the exception. Fornication is strictly forbidden. "Things strangled" were forbidden for food because when an animal was put to death by strangling the blood was retained in the flesh. The use of blood was prohibited by the Mosaic law, and for wise reasons this prohibition was extended to the Gentile world. The Roman epicures would drown fowls in wine and then use the flesh as a delicacy. It was not an uncommon thing for them to drink wine mingled with blood. The Holy Spirit, through the apostles, sought to destroy these savage practices by prohibiting their use. For the Gentiles to use blood would be contrary to the law of Moses, would not be best for them, and would be shocking to the Jews.

A sister, of Kennett, Mo., requests that we give some light on the subject presented in the following statement:

A brother is withdrawn from by the church for disorderly conduct and stays away for several years, and now comes back without making any amends and goes to work, leading in the song service and praying, and another member becomes offended and does not want to fellowship that brother until he makes amends. What should be done?

Time does not wear out sin. There is only one way to get rid of sin, and that is to repent of it and confess it. Repentance is a change of will produced by godly sorrow, which leads to a turning away from sin. (See Matt. 12: 41; Jon. 3: 10.) Simply staying away for two or three years did not undo or atone for the sin committed. If the offending member made confession of his sin while away from the church at Kennett and was properly restored by another local church to full membership, he should have brought a letter showing full membership and good standing in that local congregation. I suppose that he has never made any such confession, judging from the language of the querist. Hence, I understand from the Scriptures that he should be scripturally restored to the church before he is recognized as a member in full fellowship and good standing. Because he is doing wrong is no reason why another should commit sin. If the offending brother has not set himself right with God, he really has no communion with true Christians, neither has he any communion with God. The brother who is offended, instead of ceasing to do his duty, should encourage the church to insist on and demand the offender to make a scriptural confession and amends before attempting to lead in the worship. I do not see why the church should have any trouble over a condition like this. There is but one way out of wrongdoing, and that is the scriptural and right way.

C. J. Mayes, of Bernie, Mo., requests an explanation of a familiar passage of scripture, saying:

Please explain James 5: 14, 15. Does that refer to us, or only to the apostles? We have some brethren who claim that if we had the faith we could do these things.

The passage referred to in James reads: "Is any among you sick? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save him that is sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, it shall be forgiven him." Some hold the view that this passage refers to the early church, when miraculous gifts were imparted by the laying on of apostolic hands as a sign to unbelievers. One of these was the gift of healing. It is held that in many of the early churches there were elders who had this gift. I am not able to accept this view, but believe that the passage is to be applied to the church now. The anointing of oil in ancient times was a very common remedy in sickness. If the passage simply refers to miraculous healing, there could be no reason for the Holy Spirit's directing the use of oil, which is a natural means and not miraculous. If a miracle was intended, it could have been wrought as well without the oil as with it. It is not intimated that even this unction is to save the sick man, but the prayer of faith. What is here recommended is to be done as a natural means of restoring health, which, while they used prayer and supplication to God, they were not to neglect. We learn that the anointing with oil was freely used in the time of Christ. Mark 6: 13 declares: "And they cast out many demons, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them." Furthermore, that it was the custom of the Jews to apply it as the means of healing, and that James refers to this custom, is evident from the case of the wounded man ministered unto by the good Samaritan. (Luke 10: 34.) The anointing with oil is for the cure of the body and not of the soul. It is the prayer of faith that saves the sick. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. God uses the prayer of faith as the means of a sick man's recovery. However, it does not mean that the prayer of faith shall always save the sick. There are often cases where faith and prayer are both ineffectual, because God sees it would be prejudicial to the patient's salvation to be restored; hence all faith and prayer should be offered on this ground: "If it. be for thy glory and eternal good for the man's soul, let him be restored; if otherwise, Lord, pardon and purify him and receive him to thyself in glory.'

Paul's Voyage to Rome.

BY J. C. M'Q.

This article will give attention especially to the latter part of Paul's voyage and to his landing in Rome. The reader will doubtless call to mind how Paul had been tried by Felix, Festus, and King Agrippa. When King Agrippa heard him, he said unto Festus: "This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed unto Cæsar." When it was determined that Paul should be sent to Rome, he, with certain other prisoners, was delivered to a centurion named "Julius," of the Augustan band. It will be remembered how the winds were contrary, and that after fourteen days of perilous sailing and fasting all on board the ship escaped safe to the land. The two hundred and seventy-six men landed on a hospitable shore. The Island on which they landed was called "Melita." While the inhabitants were called "barbarians," they were not savages, but were so called to distinguish them from the Greeks. When they landed, a cold, drizzling rain was falling, such as might be expected during October and November. The inhabitants received Paul and his companions kindly. Christians would do well to imitate their example. Such acts of kindness are never without reward. The Holy Spirit admonishes us: "Forget not to show love unto strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." Hospitality is a Christian virtue that should not be overlooked. The inhabitants of the island kindled a fire and cheerfully received the entire number of two hundred and seventy-six men. It certainly required no small fire to warm so many people, and especially when this fire was in the open.

Paul was not a modern clergyman. He did not stand by and wait for the inhabitants or some one else to make the fire for him, fearing to soil his hands with menial labor. Losing no opportunity to be helpful to others, he gathered a bundle of sticks and laid them on the fire. The heat brought out a viper, which fastened itself on the hand of Paul. The barbarians supposed that Paul was a murderer who had escaped the vengeance of the sea. They reasoned that justice had not suffered him to live. Paul shook off the viper from his hand and took no harm. They had expected that he would have swollen or fallen down dead suddenly. When their expectation was not realized and they beheld that nothing amiss came to him, they changed their minds and said that he was a god. Lystra is reversed. At Lystra they first took Paul for a god, and afterwards stoned him, dragged him out of the city, and left him for dead. Here they first take him for a murderer, and afterwards for a god. Publius, probably a Roman ruler, was the chief man of the island. Having possessions in the island, he entertained the company three days courteously. The father of Publius lay sick of fever and dysentery. Paul laid his hands on him and healed him. This led many others in the island who were diseased to come to Paul and be cured of their diseases. In this example we see clearly exemplified the scripture that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." Publius, out of the goodness of his heart, bestowed many honors upon Paul and his companions. While he did this without any sordid motive, yet we see that he is far more blessed than was Paul and his companions. None of us ever know what a day will bring forth. The sun may be shining in the horizon to-day, but to-morrow may bring dark and angry clouds which threaten to overwhelm us. A generous thought or a noble deed cannot be in vain. It costs us nothing to be kind and considerate to others; therefore, we should not fail to brighten and cheer the lives of others as we pass through this world.

After remaining on the island three months, the company set sail in a ship of Alexandria which had wintered in the island. The sign of this ship was "The Twin Brothers." Perhaps it had wintered there either to unload freight or on account of tempestuous winds. On the second day they came to Puteoli, where Luke tells us "we found brethren." That brethren were in this place shows how extensively the gospel had been preached in Italy. They tarried with these brethren seven days, and thus Paul and his Christian companions enjoyed the privilege of breaking bread. This is a privilege of which the faithful Christian will not willingly be deprived.

We are next told that brethren from Rome, when they heard of Paul and his Christian companions, came to meet them as far as "The Market of Applus and The Three Taverns; whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage." This would indicate that Paul had had some misgivings as to how he would be received by the brethren in Rome. How different is his coming to Rome from that he had doubtless hoped! He had unceasingly mentioned the Roman brethren in his prayers, making request that he might have a prosperous journey unto them. But now, instead of going as a free man, he is going as a prisoner, sent for trial, and is being kept under a military guard night and day. How dismal his prospect for preaching the gospel to those who were in Rome! Paul was going to the proud city of Rome a prisoner in chains, not with bright anticipations, but with doubts. Brethren who are not willing to stand firm in darkness as well as in the light, in adversity as well as in prosperity, in tribulations as well as in sunshine, would be tempted to stand aloof from Paul as he appeared in Rome a prisoner bound in chains. If such should be the case, he doubtless felt that he would have a poor opportunity for accomplishing anything while a prisoner or even after securing his freedom. however, the brethren showed themselves so true in Christian sympathy as to ignore timeserving considerations and to come as though they were meeting a man who would reflect honor upon them, all gloomy doubts were dispelled, and he took courage.

When Paul reached Rome, he made no delay in beginning his work. He called together the chief of the Jews. While the Jews had heard no evil report of him and had not received letters from Judea concerning him, yet they were sufficiently just and honest to desire to hear of Paul himself what he taught concerning Christ. They said: "But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this sect, it is known to us that everywhere it is spoken against." (Acts 28: 22.) This example I commend to religious partisans. Many people are so little, so narrow, and so full of prejudice that they will not concede to a man the right to present his own views.

The fact should not be overlooked that while Paul journeyed to Rome as a prisoner, and while he was in a shipwreck, and while he suffered a fast of fourteen days, yet in the midst of all of these he so conducted himself as to make a friend of the centurion who was guarding him. On reaching Rome, he was not confined in the common military prison with the other prisoners, but was suffered to abide by himself with the soldier that guarded him. have often thought that this soldier was greatly favored by being permitted to guard such a man as Paul. As the guard was changed every three hours, this would bring a number of soldiers into contact with Paul. We have evidence that Paul did not lose his opportunity to teach these soldiers of the Christ. Turning to Phil. 4: 22, we read: "All the saints salute you, especially they that are of Cæsar's household." This is a great example for us. Any one can keep sweet and cheerful under sunny skies, but it is very different when under the clouds and in the midst of the storms of life. The true character of Paul shines out in that he conducted himself in such a way while passing through threatening storms as to win those with whom he associated to Christ. While it would be natural to suppose that his chains would make against him in his work, yet we learn that the things that he considered as a hindrance proved to be helpful in advancing the cause of Christ in Rome. He tells us: "Now I would have you know, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the progress of the gospel; so that my bonds became manifest in Christ throughout the whole prætorian guard, and to all the rest; and that most of the brethren in the Lord, being confident through my bonds, are more abundantly bold to speak the word of God without fear." (Phil. 1: 12-14.)

Paul had good helpers in Rome. He abode two whole years in his own hired dwelling. He received all that went in unto him, and doubtless many were carried to him by his fellow workers. To all who came to him he preached the kingdom of God and taught things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ with all boldness, none prohibiting him. While it is hard to endure privations when passing through them, yet, after we have endured, we may look back and rejoice that we were counted worthy to suffer for Christ. The chief secret of Paul's success is in the fact that he learned, "in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content." He says: "I know how to be abased, and I know also how to abound: in everything and in all things have I learned the secret both to be filled and to be hungry, both to abound and to be in want. I can do all things in him that strengtheneth me." (Phil. 4: 12, 13.)

Some Meetings.

BY E. A. E.

As has been stated by Brother L. L. Brigance, the meeting of the congregation in Murray, Ky., was an interesting and profitable one, while no one at the time was added to the saved. Attention is called to this congregation to commend the unity, peace, and love which exist there. Not a note of discord was sounded in the preacher's ear during the entire meeting; nothing but expressions of good feeling and Christian fellowship were heard. This was the more appreciated because of the strife, criticisms, condemnations, and bitterness heard and manifested in some other places. It was a genuine pleasure to learn how appreciative the whole congregation is of Brother Brigance's work and of him and his wife as faithful servants of the Lord. This happy condition of congregations is always encouraging and shows the power of Christian love.

It was helpful also to me to enjoy the company, prayers, and songs of the several preachers who at times attended the meetings.

It is especially commendable in this congregation that, with the great advance in the cost of living, it has advanced in its support of the preachers, a most vital thing the majority of churches have overlooked.

WHAT WORD SHALL I USE?

What shall I say in regard to this neglect? Shall I say it is shameful? Shall I say it is grievous? Shall I call it disobedience to God? It is all these. Paul shamed "the church of God" at Corinth for its neglect to support him while there in want preaching the gospel. He said it was even no great thing for the faithful preacher to reap their carnal things when he had sown unto them spiritual things. Brethren, think of this: While you bought war savings stamps and Liberty Loan bonds, and gave freely to the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., and other measures of carnal warfare, should you not as generously and as freely and as liberally have invested and still invest in the Christian warfare and do as much, at least, to extend the kingdom of God among men?

I am not raising a word of objection to the world's rewarding its hero by buying a farm and equipping it for the young man, York, of Fentress County, Tenn., who killed in one fray twenty-five German soldiers, captured at the same time one hundred and thirty-two, including a major, and put thirty-two machine guns out of commission; but I am raising a most serious objection to the churches' not sufficiently remunerating or supporting the hard-worked, selfsacrificing, heroic, and brave preachers of the gospel, who are at the front holding aloft the banner of "the Prince of Peace" and valiantly leading "the good fight of the faith" to glorious victory. These men should be made comfortable and have homes of their own, equipped, at least, with the comtorts of life. This contrast and this neglect bring tears to my eyes while I write. But "if we suffer with HIM, we shall also reign with him."

It is right and praiseworthy and blessed to help generously all the widows, orphans, cripples, the hungry and naked, the suffering and sorrowful throughout the world, when done in the name of Christ; but the work of the church, the advancement and glory of the church at home, must not be shoved to the background, and the true and faithful soldiers of the cross in preaching the gospel and nothing else be neglected and allowed to go homeless and in want. There is a worldly display and glamour and sounding of trumpets more enticing and flattering than the humble, patient work of the church and of the spirit of letting not the left hand know what the right hand does. There is danger of being blinded by the god of this world and of losing the Spirit of Christ.

It is right to commend the church at Murray, Ky., for this generosity, as much so as to state how many additions there have been in other meetings; and it is encouraging to meet with such churches, for there are others.

CHURCHES IN MONTGOMERY, ALA.

From Murray, Ky., I went to Montgomery, Ala., to hold one meeting with the two churches, Highland Avenue Church and Tacoma Street Church. The time was equally divided between the two houses in which these congregations meet, but the meeting was one, and so spoken of, the two congregations attending preaching in both houses. This was right; but that which is right is commendable, pleasing, and beautiful. There were eleven additions during the meeting at both places.

Once upon a time and for unnecessary reasons division arose in the one congregation in Montgomery and another congregation was established; but it was sufficiently far from the original one to interfere in no way with its work, but rather to be advantageous to the cause of Christ in the city. God overruled the evil of some to the good of others and to his own glory. Referring no further to these unpleasant things and turning at once to pleasing and joyous ones, in the course of time, and, it seems, in the providence of God, these two congregations were very fortunate indeed in securing the services of two faithful and beloved men, Brethren John T. Smithson and C. M. Stubblefield. These good men understand the truth, and hence love peace and unity, and know how to preach the gospel of peace and to inculcate the spirit of good will and Christian fellowship. They met, declared they would work in harmony and brotherly love, and do all in the power of truth to eradicate all bad feeling and all such things as God commands to be laid aside and bring all together in the unity of the Spirit and bond of peace; and they have succeeded most admirably. It is due these brethren, and should be most helpful to some others, to state this good work, and it is due these two congregations to announce to all who have heard of their differences to say that these differences are no more and that peace flows among them as a river. To use the expression of Brethren Stubblefield and Smithson, they warmed up these two congregations in the furnace of God's love to a welding heat, and requested me to strike only the few licks with the hammer of truth which did the welding. I was happy to do anything I could toward this glorious consummation. So this meeting was an enjoyable one to me. These are good and most hospitable people, and I am grateful to them for the Christian love shown me while among them. The prospects are good for a great increase in the work of the Lord there. This is that "psychological moment" which we hear about for them. Brethren Smithson and Stubblefield should be kept right there busy at work. One most pleasing and happy thing was the unanimous good feeling of these churches toward these men and their faithful wives and the very kind way in which all spoke of them.

"Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God."

We boast our light; but if we look not wisely on the sun itself, it smites us into darkness. The light which we have gained was given us not to be ever staring on, but by it to discover onward things more remote from our knowledge.

—John Milton.

The Care of God Over His People.

BY E. G. S.

The first question is, who are the Lord's people? The Lord's people are those that are faithfully doing his will. Very many claim that they are doing the will of the Lord who are leaving out some things that the Lord requires and are putting in some things the Lord does not require. The Lord requires that those that would be his people should be baptized, but thousands are leaving out baptism and putting sprinkling in its place. Those that do this cannot scripturally claim that they have been baptized, for the baptism of the New Testament is called a "burial." Not only is it called a "burial," but it is said to put people into Christ. Hence, those that have only been sprinkled have not been baptized, are not in Christ, and, therefore, are not saved. Baptism is the act in which people put on Christ. There is no other act named in the New Testament by which any one can enter into him. No one can enter Christ by sprinkling. God never ordained sprinkling as an act of baptism, and uninspired men have no right to attempt to ordain any ordinance in the realm of things divine. God did ordain baptism, and Christ himself was baptized by John the Baptist, but not one soul in New Testament times was ever sprinkled for baptism. Sprinkling is wholly of human origin. If a single man or woman had been sprinkled and that act called "baptism" by divine authority, then it would be all right for people to be sprinkled now for baptism; but there is no such case on record. There are lots of records of people that were baptized-that is, immersed, for that is what the word "baptize" means; but there is no record of a single case of sprinkling that was called "baptism," and there is not a word of authority in the New Testament for it.

When Jesus sent out the apostles into the whole world to preach the gospel to the people, they were to baptize believers, and the promise was made that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." When God made the requirement that people should believe, repent, and be baptized, the things to be done were plain and easy to be understood. To believe the gospel was so plain a matter, when the apostles first began to preach it, that thousands could understand it, believe it, and obey it the same day. In the beginning thousands could believe and obey it the first time they ever heard it. Then human opinions were not in the way. The people were willing to hear the gospel plan of salvation as preached to them by inspired men without changing any part of it. But this state of things did not continue very long. Then men began to change, to add to or take from, the word of God to make it fit their opinions and thus make it as they wanted it to be. It was not long till immersion began to be changed into sprinkling, and soon millions of people began to accept sprinkling instead of immersion, and millions more are still doing the same thing, thus following human wisdom instead of the wisdom and authority of God as found in the New Testament. All that do that reject the plain word of God and accept the word of uninspired men in its place. Those who persist in this course will never have the blessings of God to rest upon them. The watchful care of God can never be scripturally claimed by those that reject or drop out any part of the New Testament. Hence those that leave out immersion and practice sprinkling have no promise of salvation. Let us, then, try to regard all that he has given and leave out all that he has not given. We need never trouble ourselves a moment about what the Lord has not given, but should be very careful to properly regard all that he has required of us. If we will be faithful in this, the Lord will be careful to care for us in all that we need; but if we turn away from his word, he will surely turn away from us. So let us be faithful in doing what he has required us to do.

The Campaign for Raising Funds to Improve the Buildings of David Lipscomb College Progresses Well.

BY E. A. E.

This campaign is progressing well. The directors feel much encouraged and pleased with the cheerful and liberal responses to these appeals; but we most earnestly request the friends of the school and of true education to consider the importance of the great work we have undertaken and to make their donations liberal, and to send in their pledges or contributions at once. We have progressed sufficiently to draw the plan and to make specifications of the new building, but we must have much more money than has been given and pledged to begin and finish the work. We do not want to place ourselves in the foolish position of the man in the New Testament who began to build, but was unable to finish.

Let us know, kind readers, what we can depend on.

Read the letters and folders we are sending to you and act now

Money is easily made now. Some have made thousands of dollars, all legally, in the last year or so; let this school have a few thousand to use in the proper training of the young. No better investment can be made than in the worthy youth of the country. The dividends will be a hundredfold in this life and immeasurable in the world to come. Give your thousands and enjoy the gift twice: first, in seeing with your own eyes the good it accomplishes; and, second, in the great hereafter.

Here is what a good and sensible man and clear and trong preacher, whose home is beyond the border line of he United States, says:

May 15, 1919.—My Dear Brother Elam: Your letter and Prospectus" received and read. "Its Purpose Emphased" and "True Education" are fine, magnifying the Ord. Too many are minimizing it, shortening it, and indernizing it. I do not believe the church has ever had sth a testing time as now. She has been more bitterly prescuted. She is suffering at the hands of her own hasehold. I wonder if Jude saw our day when he wrote vese 11?

'he Bible is taught every day to all pupils alike as a texbook, from beginning to end, in David Lipscomb College Knowledge of this Book of books is a part of true education, and to imbibe and practice the principles of this Boo and to follow the wisdom of God in all business and relationships in life is the very best and highest education.

Donot forget that the college needs enlarged buildings in over to accommodate the pupils who are asking for admision into it and that these buildings cannot be erecte without money, and the money must be given by you.

Senctions and pledges to Prof. H. Leo Boles, David Lipscoib College, Nashville, Tenn.

Wher there is much desire to learn, there of necessity will be nuch arguing, much writing, many opinions; for opinion n good men is but knowledge in the making. Under thes fantastic terrors of sect and schism, we wrong the earnst and zealous thirst after knowledge and understanding which God hath stirred up. What some lament of we rater rejoice at, should rather praise this pious forwardness mong men to reassume the ill-reputed care of their religon into their own hands again. A little generous prudere, a little forbearance of one another, and some grain of chrity might win all these diligences to join and unite in he general and brotherly search after truth, could we bt forego this prelatical tradition of crowding free conscinces and Christian liberties into canons and precepts ofmen. Give me the liberty to know, to utter, and to argu freely according to conscience, above all liberties.-Johi Milton.

I put more value on prayer, which is the torch of all the virtues; on devotion, which consecrates all our actions to the service of God; on humility, which makes us have a low esteem of ourselves and of our actions; on sweet temper, which makes us kind to all the world; on patience, which makes us bear all things; than on heroism, magnanimity, liberality, virtues which do not cover so much ground and are more seldom in use. And these more splendid virtues are a little dangerous, because their brilliancy gives more occasion for vainglory, which is the true poison of all the virtues.—St. Francis de Sales.

A Worth-While Creed.

BY LILLIE FIRELINE.

Face the world with smiles and laughter,
Tho' the path of thorns you trod;
For frowns will never lighten burdens,
Nor help you climb the heights to God.

Send up a prayer when life is gloomy,
Don't let your face get long.
You can't work for God and be a "groucher;"
He wants a soul that's thrilled by song.

In your heart keep joy bells ringing,
Let their music chase the gloom away.
You had better spend a day in singing
Than to grouch it all away.

If you're burdened, don't beg for pity;
"Twill augment your troubles all the more."
"Carry on" till you reach the Holy City,
And then your troubles will all be o'er.

Life is yours until death claims you,
Then flesh and soul must part at the sea;
And you need not be a "rebel,"
For death will have his way with thee.

So enjoy life while you have it;
And if you are called to bear the cross,
Just smile and thank your loving Savior,
For it is your gain and Satan's loss.

Weekly Health Talks A WORD ABOUT THE KIDNEYS

BY DOCTOR WATSON.

People are easily frightened when they think something is the matter with their lungs or heart, and well they may be; but few people understand the dangers of diseased kidneys. These organs have a duty of vital importance to perform, and if they are diseased. there is no telling how or where the symptoms may appear. The kidneys are filters, and when they are healthy they remove the poisons from the blood and purify it. When the kidneys are diseased, the poisons are spread everywhere, and one of these poisons is uric The pric acid is carried all through the system and deposited in various places, in the form of urate salts-in the feet, ankles, wrists and back - often forming bags under the eyes. Sometimes the resulting trouble is called rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica and backache. Finally, come stone in the bladder, diabetes and Bright's disease.

Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., in recer years, discovered that a certain con bination of remedies would dissolve un acid (urate salts) in the system. It found this combination to be harmles, so that he made it up in tables, of double strength, and called thm Anuric Tablets. They dissolve ric and in the human system as hot coecciosolves sugar. If you have uric sid troubles, don't delay in taking Anric Tablets, which can be secured in the drug stores. You can write Dr. Pirce, too, and he will tell you what to eat and how to live so that more uricacid will not form in your system. Dr. Ierce will not charge for this advice.

CHURCH NEWS

Kentucky.

Hopkinsville, May 21.—The work here is moving along nicely. Two were added to the church on Sunday—one by statement and one by baptism.—J. H. Hines,

South Carolina.

Union, May 19.-The work here moves along remarkably well, considering all things. About five or six weeks ago we began a cottage prayer meeting, and this feature has grown until we have a meeting every night in the week and an uptown meeting each Sunday afternoon. As a result of our cottage meetings, two fine young men were added to the one body by obedience to the gospel yesterday afternoon. Many others are almost persuaded. Thousands of souls are now living in this State who would be Christians if they only had the opportunity. Just think of only one gospel preacher in a big State like this! Brethren, wake up and send forth laborers into the field to gather the precious golden grain. "Why stand ye all the day idle?" "Why stand ye all the day We are going to be judged by what we What are you doing? gin tent work in a few days and will be busy until the first of the year try-ing to establish congregations. The Cookeville church is furnishing me a tent, and a congregation (name un-known to me) in Nashville has sent me sixty-five chairs. But I need about seventy-five more. The David Lipscomb College congregation will furnish me a singer for three months. We have to go six miles to baptize. Pray for us.—Thomas H. Burton.

Tennessee.

South Pittsburg, May 21.—Beginning on May 3, a meeting of much interest to South Pittsburg and vicinity was conducted by Brother E. H. Hoover, of Chattanooga, assisted by W. N. Hannah, of Lawrenceburg, as singer. The house was crowded beyond its capacity almost every night. Some from all denominations came. The meeting was a great success and closed on May 19 with twelve additions. The congregation were well pleased with both Brother Hoover and Brother Hannah, They have engaged Brother Hoover for a meeting next May.—Hugh Braden.

Lucy, May 17.—The church at Lock is getting back in working order since the influenza or epidemic. One addition, from the Baptists, since the first of March. The church at Detroit is doing fine. We have a packed house at every appointment, with splendid interest. Eight restorations and one from the Baptists since the first of March. The work at Solo Church is making headway for Christ. On the first Lord's-day morning in May I preached at Solo; in the afternoon I preached at the home of a Mr. Hines, a man afflicted with a cancer, near Solo. He confessed Christ and was baptized. The doctor said it would kill him to be baptized, but he is still living and doing fine. It is better to obey the Lord than man.—Porter Norris.

Etowah, May 20.—The services at the church of Christ at Cleveland last Lord's day were fine. Brother Fred Little preached at eleven o'clock. There was one confession. A party of us motored to Ooltewah in the afternoon, where I preached to a good and appreciative audience at three o'clock; then back to Cleveland for services at eight o'clock, where I preached to a large audience and did the baptizing at the conclusion of the services, in the new baptistery. I am with the church here in a meeting to continue ten or twelve days. We are praying and hoping that much good may be accomplished.—George W. Farmer.

Cookeville, May 19.- We had two very fine services yesterday. Two persons made the confession at the morning service and were baptized after the evening service. This makes three confessions and baptisms quite re-cently. Our attendance is quite good and seems to be improving as we get better acquainted and in touch with the congregation. I am fully persuaded that personal work should be pushed to the front. This appears to be one of the things that has been sadly neglected in many places. The outlook for some real good work in this field is quite encouraging at present. The congregation here, becoming alive to the fact that it is a good plan for the church to own and hold in common with the church a nice home for the minister or ministers that should be called to work with them and under their direction, have bought a nice home for that purpose. Other places might do this with pleasure and profit.-Charles L. Talley.

Texas.

Ennis, May 19.—We had good services vesterday and one added. Interest is good in all lines of work.—Ben West

Childress, May 19 .- Wife seems better, and I am going to get a chance by the first of July to hold a meeting or two. She will undergo an operation soon that will cost me nearly two hundred dollars, and I believe she will be well afterwards. Donations received lately are: From Fred Dennis, Ohio, $1; Frank Clark, B. C., $2; B. E. Martin, Florida, $2; T. H. Field, for church at Nocona, Texas, $5; Mrs. Barksdale, Texas, $5; J. C. Wilkes, Ohio, $1; Charlotte Hutchinson, Oklahoma, $2; T. H. Field, Texas, $5; A. L. Yowell, Texas, $10; Rena Carpenter, California, $2; "A Sister," Nocona, $3; church at Childress, $15. I read letters now and then telling me of brethren who refuse to assist us in this time of need, for what reasons I know not; but J dred dollars, and I believe she will be for what reasons I know not; but J would be so glad if those brethren would write me a kind and Christlike letter and tell me the reasons that we are not worthy of help when I cannot leave home to earn a dollar .. May God bless them, and I pray that they may never know at their own homes what we have passed through in mine .-Tice Elkins.

Brother Dunn's European Experiences.

Brother John E. Dunn has written a very interesting letter to his family, which will be enjoyed by many of our readers. The letter follows:

My Dear Ones at Home: The fascinating thought never dawned upon me when I was a schoolboy and later when in the schoolroom I used to lead classes in geography and history, when we recited lessons about France and Spain, and when I used to read that the world circled around the Mediterranean Sea, that some day I should have the delightful pleasure of spending a week in the Pyrénées-Orientales.

One year ago while in conversation with Mr. Langley he asked me if I would volunteer to go to France. After a moment of hesitating, I said, "I will," and gave to him my address. It had about passed my mind when, on the morning of October 6, 1918, I received a telegram asking me to report to New York prepared to sail for overseas duty. It was November 22 when I landed in Brest in company with two thousand soldiers, one hundred and twenty-five officers, and twenty-five Red Cross nurses. The executive secretary of the Religious Work Department asked me where I wished to go. I chose the Thirtieth Division. My own son was in this division.

division. It is the policy of our officials to give us a seven-days' leave with three days for travel every four months. When any one has lived for four months as I have lived, in an army camp surrounded with thousands of soldiers every bit of the time, it gets on the nerves. It was four months in the cold rain and mud at Bordeaux and Le Mans, and it feels mighty good to me to get this bit of rest and diver-I selected Perpignan, Pyrénées-Orientales, bordering Spain and the Mediterranean Sea, as the place I would go on my leave of absence. The climate is ideal-a dry, pure air and perpetual sunshine. As I pen these lines I am seated in a chair away up the mountain side at an old abbey where I can lift my eyes and gaze upon Canigou, the highest point of these mountains. The snow-clad crest of the mountains forms a semicircle of beautiful snowy white, stretching from the southwest northward around to the northeast. Abbaye de Saint-Martain du Canigou, standing at an altitude of 1,065 meters on a small plateau, overhangs a sheer precipice. The abbey was founded in 1007 A.D. by Comte Guifred, who himself took the cloth in 1045 and died here The church of a four years later. very quaint Romanesque type presents Byzantine capitals and a crypt with three naves, eleventh century. Monthree naves, eleventh century. Mon-signor de Carsalade du Pont, Bishop of Perpignan, took possession of the ruins on November 11, 1902, and has undertaken the restoration of the ab-bey. The church, the cloisters, the monks' dwelling house, and the abbot's palace are now fully restored. Situated away up on a small plateau of the Pyrénées, it has become a relic of interest to the pilgrims of the Pyré-nées-Orientales.

We are stopping at the Grand Hotel du Portugal in the little town, Vernet-Les-Bains, the Paradise of the Pyrénées. It is one of the most interesting and charming places in Southern France. I have traveled a great deal during my twenty-seven years as an evangelist and have seen much of the beauty of the world, and would pronounce Vernet-Les-Bains one of the most charming beauty spots of the world. The following quotation expresses my sentiments: "On the border land between France and Spain, in a mountain valley two thousand feet above the sea, under the shelter of the snow-clad summit of the Pyrénées, and only twenty miles distant from the blue Mediterranean, lies Vernet-Les-Bains. It claims the notice of the world because of its health-restoring waters, its superb climate, its romantic environment, and the splendid and various accommodations it offers to people who look for comfort when traveling and living abroad.'

I have visited the Mediterranean The waters of the times. several Great Sea are beautiful and peaceful. I wish I could describe this beautiful country; thousands of acres of vineyards and orchards. I have seen the olive groves on the slopes of the Pyrenées. I have seen the walled cities and the citadel at Perpignan, consisting of a number of fortifications built successively by Louis XI., by Charles V. of Spain, and subsequently by Vauban. On my way to Canet, on the Mediterranean beach, I visited the hamlet of Castell-Rossello, with its conspicuous twelfth-century tower sixty-five feet high. This ancient citadel and the chateau are now in ruins. I climbed to the top of the tower and looked across the beautiful Rousillon plains into Spain. Here Hannibal made a treaty with the Gauls for the passage of his army, B.C. 218.

Some Very Strange Things.

BY F. P. FONNER.

If seems strange that brethren still persist in exalting mere human opinions above the authority of God's word. This is very strange, indeed, when the reformers emphatically declared that "faith in Christ and obedience to his commands is our only bond of union." They certainly meant to exclude human opinions as tests of fellowship among Christians. If they did not mean to do this, then their words are without meaning. It should be remembered that these noble, selfsacrificing men were not given to making vague and indefinite statements in regard to anything. Their object was to eliminate all mere human opinions as tests of fellowship. They thus sought to bring all religiously disposed persons into the "one body" of Christ. By this means they sought to restore the "ancient order of things," and by this means they also hoped to "restore a pure speech to the household of faith," But who hears anything about these matters now? But very few of us ever mention any of these things, and it is to be feared that many of us know but little about them. Too many of us are out on the great sea of speculation. We have cut loose from our moorings and are drifting aimlessly about without chart or compass. This may seem strange to some, but it is a sad fact. Indeed, it is one of the saddest facts in history. "Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man," was constantly emphasized by the reformers. Their main object, or, at least, one of them, was to carry out and apply every New Testament principle, regardless of human opinious or human speculations. These noble men of God and their associates, like the first Christians, "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." (See Acts 2: 42.) No human opinion or human tradition was set up by them as a test of fellowship to divide the people of God. As a rule, they dwelt together in "the unity of the Spirit" and in "the bond of peace." It is very certain that they never did set up any human opinion in regard to unfulfilled prophecy as a test of fellowship, as Russellites, Adventists, and some of our own people are doing now. They did not discourage the study of the prophets, but they did discourage speculation. It is not best to discourage the study of any part of God's word, as we know altogether too little about it. But it seems clear that no real Christian does discourage it; but there are some objections to making supposed newly discovered truths tests of fellowship until we are sure that we are right. It is certainly strange that our brethren will borrow certain crude notions from the sects and then endeavor to make these tests of fellowship among us. Some years ago certain members of the church of God got hold of a little Adventist pamphlet, and very soon they announced that they were soul sleepers. Then they endeavored to make this doctrine a test of fellowship; and failing in this, they became angry and absented themselves from the worship for nearly two years because the elder or minister would occasionally cross their views. And yet that elder and minister were earnest, godly men; and neither the elder nor the preacher could teach without crossing them in some way, because they entertained so many false notions. These notions were drawn from outside sources. Many a congregation has been destroyed in this way. Shall we allow this to continue, or shall we go back to Jerusalem and plead for a complete restoration of the "ancient order" as pleaded by the reformers? Truly, some strange things are happening.

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere. J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national head-quarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

Early-Day Buttons.

The ancients lacked buttons. One wonders, indeed, how they got along without them, but evidently they possessed studs of modern pattern, such as those with which we fasten our cuffs and collars; and, in truth, they did even have a kind of button (though not sewed on), which fastened garments with a pin and hook exactly in the way our brooches and clasp pins operate.—Exchange.

Calomel Dynamites A Sluggish Liver

Crashes into sour bile, making you sick, and you lose a day's work.

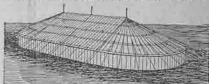

Calomel salivates! It is mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a singgish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile, it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated, and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful, and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel to-day, you will be sick and nauseated to-morrow; besides, it may salivate you; while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It is harmless, pleasant, and safe to give to children; they like it.

FROM THE FIELD

California.

Armona, May 16 .- On Tuesday of this week Brother and Sister C. F. Bonner and the prize girl from Pasadena spent the day with us, and we called Brother and Sister T. B. Larimore on the telephone to come also. This was one of those days spent on earth like we expect heaven to be. Brother Bonner had been to his old home town, Madera, for a visit, and was returning to his home in Pasadena. He contem-plates moving back to Madera on his country estate and making a home there. We welcome him back to the valley, and the churches will feel his help. Brother Larimore is to begin a meeting at Tulare on the second Lord's day in June, to continue indefinitely. We pray that much good may be done. He is to preach in Fresno next Lord's I am giving one-half of my time day. to Dinuba, and then Tulare, Fresno, and Hanford, and am enjoying work and the growth. In the Hanford district we have one of the largest fruit crops we have ever had, and it will be difficult to get enough help to harvest the crops. Land has advanced to almost double here in the last two years; yet there are many good buys, and thousands of acres unimproved that can be bought reasonably, improved, and sold at a good profit. I believe there is more money and more work here than any place I have ever been. Brother E. M. Borden has located at Riverside, buying property, and that gives us another of the best of preachers for California. We need more. Who will be next? There is a more. Who will be next? There is a great work to be done here. May the Lord bless the work.-L. D. Perkins.

District of Columbia.

Washington, May 20 .- Both services here last Lord's day were full of in-terest. Brother and Sister E. E. Joynes, of Philadelphia, were with us, and he preached us a good discourse on "Acceptable Service." At the even-At the evening hour the young men (home talent) made excellent talks on "The Christian's Work, and How to Scripturally Do It." The building site for the new house of worship was selected on Washington's birthday (February 22), and it is our aim to lay the corner stone for the new house on July 4. The cause here needs the hearty co-operation of all the faithful. We are going to ask every Christian farmer to give us one bushel of wheat, or the price of one bushel, to help to build this house. If you do not have the wheat, then rye, corn, oats, or potatoes will do. Congress has guaranteed a good price and a merciful God has given an abundant harvest. Now, if you will do this, the church for which Christ Jesus died will have a chance to preach the gospel in the national capital, and great will be the harvest. Truly, the harvest in this part of the United States is great and the laborers are very few.-W. S. Long.

Abilene, May 10.-Abilene Christian College exists only for the glory of God and the helping of men; so it has been customary for us to have a protracted meeting each year for the stu-dents that are not Christians. This year we have had a number of students from the denominations and several others who had not obeyed the gospel. After the lecture week we began working for the meeting. had for two months a mission study class meeting on Monday evenings. This class as a nucleus held prayers at noon three times a week. every noon of the school days was so used. These and others were ready and anxious for the meeting to begin. They had the names of all who were not Christians and had prayed for them often. With the beginning of the meeting, all engaged in personal solicitation and prayers for the sav-ing of souls. The singing was cen-tered on the best of songs, and all entered promptly and enthusiastically into the meetings. Teachers lightened the lessons slightly and gave such admonitions as they deemed proper. Others outside of the school were made to feel that the meeting was for them as well as for the school. President Sewell opened the meeting on Sunday and Sunday night. Brother J. S. Dunn, of Waxahachie, came on Monday night. He is the third of five preacher boys brought up by a widowed mother. Few men are able to weave the facts of experience so effectually into sermons and exhortations. Brother Dunn spoke earnestly, kindly, clearly, and with conviction. In five years he has spent fifteen hundred dollars more than he has received. His word and life stand as strong appeals to lead young men into active gospel work. In the ten days of labors with us we learned to love him fondly. cannot give the results of the meeting; God alone knows these. Thirtyeight were "buried by baptism into death" and "raised to walk in new-ness of life." All were strengthened by the efforts made to reach the unsaved. Seed was sown that will bear fruit in time to come. We were filled with joy and thanksgiving.-W. W. Freeman.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a thoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about I shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

The Church at Washington, D. C.

BY W. S. LONG.

No doubt you have read in our leading papers that a building site has been purchased in our national capital upon which to erect a house of worship. Such a building is seriously needed, as we have only a small hall in which to meet. To do this work, we are making a great sacrifice, and feel that we deserve the fellowship of the brotherhood,

The building site is centrally located; the "restrictive clause" is in the deed; the property is secure; so you are assured that your support will go to promote the worship as it is in the Bible.

It is our desire to lay the corner stone in June and to complete the building without delay. The house will be a substantial one, and one of which every brother and sister may be proud. This can be done speedily by the cooperation of all the churches, and we hope you will cheerfully respond.

We have neglected the cause in our national capital so long, and it is to our shame. Are you anxious to see a good house of worship in the capital of this great nation? Will you help to place it here?

If you have given to this work once before, remember that, in order to win the war, you gave freely, several times, to buy bonds and stamps, and for the Red Cross. In this we commend your liberality. Then, shall you not be more faithful in a work that is far greater in the sight of God? If you do not have the cash, you may send a bond or stamps.

We feel that you will stand by us in this struggle; and remember that success depends upon your help.

We are asking each congregation to set apart one Lord's day in May and give the contribution of that day. For this you may rest assured of our undying gratitude. We thank you in advance for the fellowship and encouragement.

Brother Womack's Report.

On our recent visit to Sugar Grove, Ky., we held four services. The weather was rainy, there was a great deal of sickness in the country, and the writer was not well. The little band were interested in the services, and showed their interest by their aid. There are some good, faithful men and women there. A few remembered me for Easter, for which they have my thanks. The first two weeks in September is the time set for their meeting. Brother M. Keeble is to do the preaching. They are looking forward for a good time.

I have not been able to hold any meetings this spring. For some time I have been under the treatment of the doctor, having suffered a nervous breakdown. I am looking to the Master to get back on foot again. Pray for me.

Any Woman who Tires Easily is Irritable, Nervous and Run-Down, Should Take Nuxated Iron to Help Increase Her Health, Strength and Vitality.

"There can be no strong, healthy, beautish, rosy-cheeked women, without iron," says live Ferdinand King,

New York physician and Medical Author, "I have strong yemphasized 1 he fact that doctors should preseribe more organizeron - Nuxated Iron—for their nervous, rundowth weak, haggardhooking women patients. Therefore you should supply the from deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use sait when your food has not enough sait."

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in Iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far

Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were alling all the while late most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form and tilts, after they had in some cases been going on for months without getting benefit from anything. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, Iron acetate, or tineture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, also, not that kind of iron. Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret ramedy; but one which is well known to druggists. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor input the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every mirchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Servants. BY S. WHITFIELD.

Man became a servant of sin, or of Satan, by sinning. When God made our first parents, they were alive to him and free from sin; but they did not remain in this condition. Eve heard the voice of the serpent, believed what he said, and obeyed it. Adam and Eve became sinners and servants of the devil. All responsible people have sinned and wandered away from God. All such, therefore, have become servants of sin. God told Adam and Eve that if they are of the forbidden fruit they would die. They did eat of it, and in doing so they transgressed the law of God, which is sin. Paul said: "For I was alive without the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died," (Rom. 7: 9.) Children are born into this world alive to God. Jesus said: "For of such is the kingdom of heaven." But when they get old enough to know right from wrong, and sin, then they die, or are separated from God. Then they are servants of sin. This is the condition of the world. They are away from God, and away from the mercy offered through Christ.

"That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." (Eph. 2: 12.) This was our condition, and it is just where the world is. It is an awful state. Dead in trespasses and in sins against God.

"Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" (Rom. 6: 16.) People yield themselves servants to sin by sinning and become servants of sin by sinning. In speaking of the Roman Christians before they came to Christ, Paul says that they were "the servants of sin." Paul also shows that when these Roman Christians lived in sin, it was a life of sin, and that it was "free from righteousness." The end of such a life is death, which means separation from God for-

"The wages of sin is death." (Rom. 6: 23.) A person lives all his life in the service of Satan, and the wages that he gets at the end is death. It is a worthless and hard service. Who would not desire and determine to get away from such a service? All should fiee from this awful wrath to come.

People need not continue to be servants of sin. Provision has been made for man to escape from this awful condition. All has been done that could be done for the sinner to be saved from his sins and thus fiee from the wrath to come. God has loved the world and given up his only Son that we might be saved. Christ came to this world, suffered, bled, and died on the cross, that all might have a chance to be saved. The way is opened up. Will we walk in it? If we are not saved, it will be our own fault. Let us appreciate the great salvation that has been brought so near us, and one that meets our demands.

If the sinner will hear Christ, believe on him, and obey him, then he will be brought into Christ. By believing on Christ, repenting of his sins, confessing Jesus as his Lord, and being baptized into Christ, he is brought to the blood of Christ and into his death, and through Christ's blood his sins are blotted out. This is a great privilege, and it should be much appreciated. "But thanks be to God, that, whereas ye were the servants of sin, ye became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered; and being made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness." (Rom. 6: 17, 18.)

"But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." (Rom, 6: 22.) So, then, when people become children of God, they become servants of God, and it is so much better to serve the Lord than to serve sin.

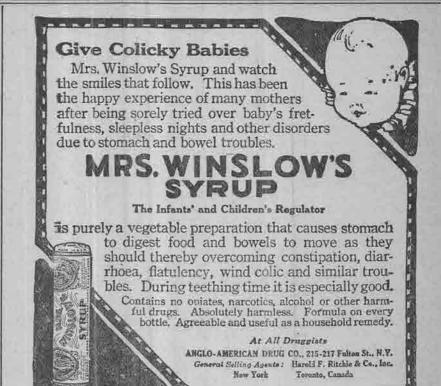

We have been bought by the blood of Christ, and we belong to Christ and to God. It is our duty to serve them with our whole hearts and give them our first and best service. This should be a great privilege to all of God's children. It should not be a service of bondage, but one of love. The mother serves for her children, but it is a service of love. We should delight in it.

Since we have become servants to God, it is just as unreasonable for us to run over to the devil and serve him as it is for a man who is a servant to a man to leave him and serve another person. Our service to God is as long as life lasts.

We should not let sin reign in us, but, rather, righteousness. We should let God and Christ rule in our hearts and lives; and if we do, all through life, the end will be everlasting life. Surely all of this is worth living for.

"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." (Rev. 14: 13.)

If you wish your neighbors to see what God is like, let them see what he can make you like.-Kingsley.

Finding Fault.

Addison says: "What an absurd thing it is to pass all over the valuable parts of a man and fix our attention on his infirmities!" But that seems to be the habit. About the first thing we try to find in a man is his faults. They are apt to transcend his virtues, even if the virtues are mountain high. It is a deplorable habit: for it not only does great injustice to the person criticized, but it hurts the critic himself. It lowers his views of life and confirms the habit of seeing the worst side of human experience and losing sight of the bright side. No man can be a moral man or a religious man of any faith, who is constantly searching for the faults of people. The first duty a man owes to his neighbor is to look for the bright side, and he will then find, in most cases, that the dark side is much smaller than he suspected. The thing to attack is the sin, for we will discover that that is greater than the man who is guilty of it.-Ohio State Journal.

Let Disciples Take Notice.

I wrote to the Gospel Advocate some time since about needing a preacher here at Linden, Ala., and our financial condition. We traded Nashville property on six hundred and eightytwo acres of fine land here. Every foot of it is good and in cultivation, except about fifteen acres in timber. It will grow anything you want to grow. Among other things, it will grow alfalfa without liming. But we are not able to cultivate it. We paid only one-third down. Now, if you can interest some of the brethren in buying some of this land so we can pay off the balance and have enough to stock up the remainder, I will cheerfully and gladly give David Lipscomb College one hundred dollars. If we could get the land in alfalfa, it would double in value. We would like for brethren and sisters to move in here, as we have no church, and only one man and his wife that are members, and they came in January. We have been trying to get a preacher to come and take up the work here, and we would board him free and help him every way we can. This is a fine country, and I do not see anything to hinder any one from making money here. Cattle, sheep, goats, and hogs do well, and require but very little feeding. Some of the natives, or, rather, most of them, do not feed their cattle at all through the winter. Now, Brother Lipscomb, do what you can to interest the brethren in coming here and to help us to pay for our land by buying some of it, and we can be of more help to the cause. If we could sell only fifteen hundred dollars' worth, we would be all right; and we will sell it like we bought it, just to get out of debt. If it were not for that, I would not sell for as much again as what I paid for it. I hope I have made everything plain so it can be understood, and that we may be able to help in the good work. We will sell enough of the land to pay off the debt at fortyfive dollars per acre.

Our New Dormitory.

BY W. F. LEDLOW.

The Board of Regents has just closed a contract for a new dormitory for the Thorp Spring Christian College. The new building will cost twenty-six thousand dollars and will be modern in every way. It will accommodate fifty students. For the present it will be used by the young ladies. We are quite sure that the new dormitory will be full next year. We are now getting calls for rooms. Two young ladies from a distance asked for reservations this week.

The college has the best future it has ever had. We owe nothing on the property, have full credit standing with the best of the higher institutions, and are rapidly gaining more property assets. We hope in the near future to be able to offer the full senior college work. We need a strong senior college in this part of Texas, and we feel that we can easily develop into such an institution.

For the present we offer full highschool work and two full years' work in real college courses. One who completes our work can take the B.A. degree at the best universities in two years. If you finish the high-school courses and do one year of college work, you can secure a first-grade, four year State certificate. For catalogues, address W. F. Ledlow, President, Thorp Spring, Texas.

Edifying as the Need May Be

The Church.

The church of Jesus Christ must be distinguished from all other institutions. By the church is not meant this religious body or that, or this local society or that, but the great body of baptized believers in Jesus Christ whose names are written in heaven. The church has an unselfish spirit. It seeks not its own advancement for advancement's sake. It does not seek to become great simply for the sake of being great. It has no worldly interests to serve. Its great purpose is the salvation of men and women. It gathers money, not for itself, but that it may carry out its mission of saving the lost and strengthening its members in grace and love. It does not seek popularity. It means a "called-out assembly." The calling out or separation is from the world. It is characterized by zeal, activity, and unparalleled heroism and devotion. The records of the church in the New Testament abound in acts of supreme sacrifice, for it is by sacrifice that every great benefit comes to man. The church stands for the best there is in life. The person who stays out of the church for any reason misses the great opportunity of life here.

The Place of Baptism.

Peter positively likens baptism to the deliverance of Noah and his family by the ark at the time of the flood. They were saved, not by understanding the construction of the ark, nor by looking at its proportions, but by actually entering into it. Christ is our ark, "in whom we have redemption;" but we must actually enter into him and become partakers of his nature. We may talk like Christians and act like Christians; but unless we are in Christ, we shall not be really saved. And just as the water bore up the ark, and in so doing completed the salvation of Noah, so water baptism saves us only in its relation to Christ. For we are baptized into Christ. It was the ark that saved Noah; it is Christ that saves us. In baptism there is a public renunciation of sin, of its pleasures, of the follies of the world. "And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.)

Church Letters.

Christians moving into a new community should be quick to seek out the local congregation and identify themselves with its worship. Such prompt action will encourage the congregation and will, in a measure, prevent the Christian from drifting into a state of careless indifference. It is our custom to present letters of introduction and recommendation when making entrée into new social or business circles. But no such letter can ever compare with the recommendation that one has been a devoted Christian and is, therefore, entitled to a place in the hearts of the people. An old sea captain was riding on a train going into Philadelphia, when a young man came in and sat down beside him. "Young man, where are you going?" "I am going to Philadelphia to live," was the reply. "Have you letters of introduction?" asked the captain. "Yes." replied the young man, as he pulled several out of his pocket. "Well," persisted the old man, "haven't you a church letter?" "O, yes; I didn't suppose you would want to see that." "Yes," was the reply, "1 want to see that. I am an old sallor, and I have been up and down in the world, and it's my rule, as soon as I get into port, to fasten my ship fore and aft to the wharf, although it may cost a little wharfage, rather than have my ship out in the stream, floating hither and thither with the tide."

Christians are constantly moving into our city from other cities and from rural communities. They could with very little trouble secure letters of commendation from their congregations and present them without delay. But as a rule this is not done. Many of them remain in the city for months before letting us know of their whereabouts or their religious affiliations. Others seek out some fashionable church that is not worshiping according to the Book. Why not show your colors and come and worship just where you belong? Let it be understood that a hearty welcome awaits you at any of the Nashville churches. But do not wait for us to "discover" you. There is no latchstring. The door is open for you and yours.

Events Connected With the Coming of the Lord. (Arranged by Z. T. Sweeney.)

I. He WILL COME LITERALLY AND PERSONALLY.

Acts 1: 11: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye looking into heaven? this Jesus, which was received up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye beheld him going into heaven."

II. WE ARE ALL TO SEE HIM.

Rev. 1: 7: "Behold, he cometh with the clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they which pierced him."

Jude 14: "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints."

I Thess. 4: 14: "Them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

III. ALL THE DEAD WILL BE RAISED AT HIS COMING.

1 Cor. 15: 22-24: "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits: afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power."

2 Thess, 1: 6-10: "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe," etc.

Matt. 25: 31, 32: "But when the Son of man shall come in his glory; and all the angels with him, then shall be sit on the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all the nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as the shepherd separateth the sheep from the goals."

IV. THE RIGHTEOUS SHALL BE RAISED IN GLORY,

1 Cor. 15: 43: "It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory."

Col. 3: 4: "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

2 Thess. 1: 10: "When he shall come to be glorified in

Phil. 3: 21: "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body."

V. THE WORLD WILL BE BROUGHT INTO JUDGMENT.

Matt. 25: 31: "But when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all the nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as the shepherd separateth the sheep from the goats."

VI. THE WICKED WILL THEN BE PUNISHED.

2 Pet. 3: 7: "But the heavens that now are, and the earth, by the same word have been stored up for fire, being reserved against the day of judgment and destruction of ungodly men."

2 Pet. 2: 9: "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to keep the unrighteous under punishment unto the day of judgment."

Rom. 2: 6-9: "Who will render to every man according to his works: to them that by patience in well-doing seek for glory and honor and incorruption, eternal life; but unto them that are factious, and obey not the truth, but obey unrighteousness, shall be wrath and indignation, tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that worketh evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Greek."

VII. THE RIGHTEOUS WILL ENTER EVERLASTING MANSIONS.

John 14: 1-3: "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you; for I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I come again, and will receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

Matt. 25: 34: "Then shall the king say unto those on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

VIII, THE MEDIATORIAL DISPENSATION WILL END.

1 Cor. 15: 24-28: "Then cometh the end, when he shall deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have abolished all rule and all authority and power. For he must reign, till he hath put all his enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be abolished is death. For, He put all things in subjection under his feet. But when he saith, All things are put in subjection, it is evident that he is excepted who did subject all things unto him. And when all things have been subjected unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subjected to him that did subject all things unto him, that God may be all in all."

IX. PUNISHMENT WILL BE UNLIMITED IN DURATION.

2 Thess, 1: 7-9: "And to you that are afflicted rest with us, at the revelation of the Lord Jesus from heaven with the angels of his power in flaming fire, rendering vengeance to them that know not God, and to them that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus: who shall suffer punishment, even eternal destruction from the face of the Lord and from the glory of his might."

Mark 3: 29: "But whosoever shall blaspheme against the Holy Spirit hath never forgiveness, but is guilty of an eternal sin."

Matt. 25: 46: "And these shall go away into eternal punishment: but the righteous into eternal life."

"What Is the Matter?"

BY F. W. SMITH.

Under the above short, crisp, and pointed query, Brother S. P. Pittman gives us an interesting and learned dissertation on the subject of religious reformations. His paper discloses a familiarity with religious history not enjoyed by the average preacher, and one can but be convinced on reading it that our brother had the matter well in hand. But I was pained on reading the concluding part of his otherwise interesting and instructive document. He concludes as follows:

Campbell would combine the good of all the preceding reformatory movements; but what have we done? We have stressed the "faith" (doctrine) and minimized, or neglected outright, the "practice" (spirituality). To keep these in proper balance is a difficult task, but yet it is our task. It must be done. We should welcome any tendency upon the part of the sectarian world to a purer doctrine—to a "Thus saith the Lord." Thrice welcome should be any attempt upon the part of believers in Christ to become more spiritual-minded and to make their lives more godly. Shall we ridicule the "holiness" movement? Never! It is the cry of some earnest, but misdirected, soul for a higher and holier life, for a more spiritual plane of living.

In our belief that "we are right," that we occupy "infallibly safe grounds," we are prone to become (have become) narrow, bigoted, intolerant. It is not the novice alone who is this; it is the more experienced brother, whose life and influence should be a benediction.

I deplore the attitude of our older brethren who feel that they are the arbiters of the faith of the younger, who feel called upon to condemn in bitter terms the mistakes they may make, and who are ready to ostracize those who cry out for a deeper spirituality, because they are guilty of some doctrinal irregularity. "And the Lord's servant must not strive, but be gentle toward all, apt to teach, forbearing, in meekness correcting them that oppose themselves." (2 Tim. 2: 24, 25.)

After stating that Campbell sought to combine all the good found in preceding reformatory movements, our brother asks the very pertinent question: "But what have we done?" He then proceeds to answer his own question after this fashion: "We have stressed the 'faith' (doctrine) and minimized, or neglected outright, the 'practice' (spirituality)." Against the charge of stressing the "doctrine" and minimizing the "practice," there is ground for an issue. No doubt in many cases there can be found those who "stress" what the brother terms "doctrine" (faith, repentance, and baptism), to the neglect of what he calls 'practice" (giving heed to Christian living); but it is by no means a wholesale matter, as indicated by the use of the pronoun "we." The fact is, the churches of this age are fully equal to those of Campbell's day in "practice," or spiritually, and most certainly are they an improvement on some of the churches of apostolic times. As to "stressing" the "faith" (doctrine), as charged by our brother, if he will devote a little time to the study of the style of the preaching done by Campbell and his colaborers, he will discover the fact that they laid much more "stress" on the "faith" (doctrine) than do the preachers of this age. In fact, if Campbell and his compatriots had laid as little "stress" on the "faith" (faith, repentance, and baptism for the remission of sins) as does the average preacher in the church of Christ now, they would not have amounted to a "hill of beans" in their efforts to restore the doctrine and church of the New Testament.

Our brother's reference to the "holiness" people demands a little notice. He asks: "Shall we ridicule the 'holiness' movement?" By no means "ridicule" any religious movement advocated by honest people; but if our brother will substitute the word "oppose" for "ridicule," I answer emphatically, yes, oppose the movement with might and main. What? Oppose people in seeking a holier life? Most assuredly, when they are perverting God's word in doing, so, even to the extent of rejecting and ridiculing God's holy commandment of baptism, as well as other duties enjoined.

But just here I am reminded that our brother says, "In our belief that 'we are right,' that we occupy 'infallibly safe grounds,' we are prone to become (have become) narrow, bigoted, intolerant." First, I will ask, Is there no way by which one can be certain he is right in his faith and practice? Is there not revealed in God's word an infallibly safe ground? If so, and one can express his faith and practice in the very words of holy writ, and can point out in the language of inspired men an "infallibly safe ground," should be be subjected to the charge of being "narrow, bigoted, and intolerant?" In the name of thousands of faithful, pious, and godly men and women who are contending earnestly for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints, I protest against the charge that Brother Pittman has brought against them. If we cannot be certain beyond a doubt of the ground on which we stand, then are we indeed in a pitiable plight. What is the Bible for, if not to give us undoubted assurance of our relation to God and his truth?

We now come to the last paragraph of our brother's article, and I wish to join him most heartily in deploring the attitude of "our older brethren" who have assumed the exalted office of "arbiters of the faith of the younger." Such an attitude is unchristian, unkind, and ungodly, to say the least of it, and it should be condemned by all rightthinking people. But for Brother Pittman and myself to be fair, we should particularize here by designating, pointing out by their names, the "older brethren" who have arrogated to themselves the office of "arbiters of the faith of the younger:" for, to be so indefinite in this wholesale manner, we may do injustice to some of the "older brethren" who are guiltless in this matter. Now, since I was wholly unaware of any "older brethren" being guilty of the charge made by Brother Pittman, and not wishing to accuse him of making such a charge without the facts to sustain it, I will kindly ask him to give us the names of the "older brethren" who are guilty of such grave misconduct. If not all the "older brethren" are guilty of this charge, we should not shoot at the whole bunch. Hence, I call upon Brother Pittman to give us their names; and not only their names, but produce the evidence wherein they have assumed to be "arbiters" of "the faith of the younger." Let us have no round about inneundoes and veiled insinuations. Brother Pittman and I must come out in the open and not engage in any "bushwhacking" business. If he and I are to defend the efforts of a few young brethren in trying to start a "reformation" based upon literalism-that is, the restoration of Judaism as advocated by Russell and Adventists, having Christ to set up when he comes over in Jerusalem a literal kingdom, etc.-we should be frank with the public and say so without dealing in such generalities. Of course, such young brethren engaged in such a business are guilty of slight (?) "doctrinal irregularity;" but what of that? Now, Brother Pittman, if you wrote that long dissertation on the subject of religious reformations in order to get that last paragraph out of your system, I hope you feel relieved; but you should, in all fairness to others, as well as in justice to yourself, work our of your system proof of the ugly charges you have brought against some of your brethren who have been trying to do exactly what you should have done yourself-viz., contended earnestly for the faith instead of sitting by until churches were rent asunder and criticize your brethren as you have done in your article. If to advocate a carnal and fleshly institution, such as Judaism was, constitutes a "cry out for a deeper spirituality," then may the Lord deliver us from such spirituality. I am sorry that Brother Pittman has picked up and uses against his brethren the old sectarian cry: "Narrow, bigoted, intolerant." Of course it stands to reason that the older brethren who have been serving God for, lo, these many years, and in whom the fires of youth are burning low, are much less spiritual-minded than the younger brethren with the red, rich blood leaping through their veins. Hence, the older brethren should be exceedingly careful not to forestall the efforts of the deeply pious and spiritual-minded young men!

Is There Any Need for the Church?

BY JOHN T. SMITHSON.

Perhaps this subject to some readers may seem foolish. However foolish it may seem to some, to others it may be interesting to read what is said. Not every one realizes that the church is a divine institution and that all the saved are in it. Many do not realize that it is the only institution in which God should have glory given to him throughout all ages. We have heard it said by religious people: "The church has nothing to do with saving people; one can be saved out of the church as well as in it." Now, if that be true, what need is there for the church? We do not believe that people can be saved out of the church, who are subjects for membership in the church. Before going any further we wish to say that some of our brethren have preached from the pulpit bravely and strongly that the church is all-sufficient. In this we think they are correct; and unless we are convinced that there is something else needed, we shall be content to believe the church is sufficient for all times and under all conditions. whether peace reigns or cruel and horrible war lays waste the country and leaves the ground covered with human bodies. When people say they can be saved out of the church as well as in it, that the church has nothing to do with the salvation of a man, we think they do not know what the Bible teaches concerning the church. If the church is not sufficient for every spiritual need of man and his salvation, then we need something else; and the other thing is of as much importance as the church, and should require the same earnest care and consideration as the church. We believe the church is a perfect institution; then, anything to assist it would render it imperfect.

The church is the only divine institution that God has given the world by which they may have all the spiritual blessings and salvation. Anything else is of human origin. Jesus says: "Every plant which my heavenly Father planted not, shall be rooted up." (Matt. 15: 13.) There are plants, we doubt not, that are growing very rapidly and are trying to take the place of the church, or aid the church. We think it likely that the weeds of human planting have grown to such extent that they have hid the church of God from the view of man; hence, man is saying the church has nothing to do with one's salvation. Would it not be a glad and great day if all these human organizations were rooted up and every eye could see the true church of God? Well, these things will be rooted up, for Jesus says so. All the labor and means used will be in vain. The time spent in these things of human invention will be lost. We should be careful lest all our time and means will be spent in vain and our souls will be lost.

We are taught in the sixteenth chapter of Matthew that there was going to be a church built, and the Son of God was going to build it. This institution was to mark the difference between responsible people. The line is drawn between the church, on the one hand, and the world, on the other. Now, is it not a fact that every responsible being is either in the church or in the world? This seems to be the only solution; and if it is true, there are only two places where the responsible being can be found: he is either in the church or he is in the world. If he is not in the church, he is in the world, no matter how many other organizations he may be in. For the church, then, to stand for anything at all, it must stand for it all.

Surely the man who says, "We can be saved out of the church as well as in it," does not mean to say that we can be saved without the blood of Christ as well as with it. But that is exactly what he says when he says man can be saved out of the church as well as in it; for the apostle Paul tells us that the Lord bought the church with his own blood. If any people are saved, it will be those who are bought with the blood of Christ. Those who are bought are the church; therefore, the saved are the church. No responsible creature can be saved out of the church.

The world is lost. All the world is lost; no part of it is saved. All the saved are in the church, I do not mean to say that all the lost are in the world, nor do I say that all that are in the church are saved. There are many in the church—or at least, who claim to be in the church—who are lost. Only the faithful in the church are the saved ones. The unfaithful in the church are condemned with the world.

The question now arises: How are we to answer those who say that "the church has nothing to do with saving a man, that a man can be saved out of it as well as in it?" I reply that not a saved person remains out of the church for one day. If the church has nothing to do with the salvation of any one, no one can be saved just for one day and not be in the church, for "the Lord added to them [the church] day by day those that were saved." The margin reads, "were being saved." (Acts 2: 47.) Now, we insist that the language means nothing at all unless it means that every day those who are being saved are added to the church the very day they are saved. There was no such thing in the days of the apostles as that people were saved a whole year and then were added to, or joined, the church. I would like to know where the saved are if they are not in the church. Will a man say that he is saved, that he has been saved for a year or longer, and has never been in the church? If he will, where will he place himself, since the word of God reveals to us the fact that the saved were each day-the day they were saved-added to the church? If they were not added to the church, they were not saved, hence were in the world and lost. I know of no changes in regard to this. We need the church if we have the saved. If there are no saved, then we do not have any church.

A Few Thoughts on Types and Antitypes.

BY LEE JACKSON.

For some reason I have long been interested in the study of the Bible types and their corresponding antitypes as these are presented in the light of New Testament teaching.

While this study of the Old Testament types in relation to their corresponding antitypes of the New Testament is always interesting, yet there is always present the danger of putting more meaning in the antitype than was originally designed in the use of the type. This can be unsuspectingly done through well-intentioned efforts to make the antitype correspond in all respects to the nature and character of the type. In making this blunder, some very intelligent and well-educated persons have been very erroneously led astray in their understanding of the Scriptures; and uneducated persons have often been led into gross misconceptions in their efforts to follow these false interpretations. This same statement holds true in regard to the use of our Savior's parables. Many false constructions have been given to New Testament teaching by pressing these parables beyond their legitimate application. In his use of these parables, it was the purpose of the great Teacher to illustrate and enforce certain of the principal features of his kingdom by comparison to only a few distinct points belonging to each separate parable, and any effort to make all that may be got out of any one parable apply in all respects to the kingdom will inevitably result in wrong ideas, discrepancies, and contradictions. our subject is the types and not the parables.

It is very questionable as to whether or not all the things selected from the Old Testament and used typically by New Testament writers were originally designed as types of what they are made to represent by these inspired teachers. It is possible that, seeing certain points by way of comparison that could be used instructively, these New Testament teachers simply took these things from the Old Testament history and used them for purposes of illustrating and enforcing the principles of their teaching. Examples of such uses of persons and things as types may be found in Paul's use of Adam as a type of Christ, in Rom. 5: 12-19; his use of Hagar and Sarah as types of the two covenants, in Gal. 4: 21-31; that of Melchizedek as representing the priesthood of Christ, in Heb. 7: 1-10; Peter's use of Noah's salvation from the pollution of the old world by the waters of the flood to represent man's salvation from the guilt of sin, In 1 Pet. 3: 18-22; and the use of the brazen serpent as a type, in John 3: 14, 15. In none of these typical uses did the inspired writers intend to press into their service anything belonging to the selected type that did not immediately represent the features of the antitype of which they were treating. They used these types only because of likeness of correspondence in certain ideas immediately before them, and which could, therefore, answer the demand for instructive illustration. Only this and nothing more; and when we go beyond this and press comparisons too far, we destroy the relationship between type and antitype and lose the benefit of the lesson designed to be taught.

Another Important point to be kept in mind is that the types from the Old Testament belonged to the earthly realm, while the corresponding antitypes of the New Testament belong to the spiritual or heavenly sphere. This must be kept in view as the essential difference between the nature of a type and its corresponding antitype. We take as an example the case of Melchizedek as used by Paul in Heb. 7: 1-10. Melchizedek was an earthly king, exercising the functions of an earthly priesthood, and without priestly descent, having neither father nor mother of priestly lineage. Paul takes these facts as pertaining to the earthly life and earthly priesthood of Melchizedek and uses them as typically representing the heavenly life and heavenly priesthood of Christ. If the priesthood of Christ had been on earth or while he was living in the flesh, the priesthood of Melchizedek would not have been used to typically represent it, for that is contrary to the principle upon which the types and antitypes of the Bible are grounded. As respects the relations between Aaron's priesthood and the priesthood of Christ in their correspondence as type and antitype, the same principle applies. Aaron's was of the earth; that of Christ is spiritual and in heaven. The same is true of the sacrificial victim upon the altar as a type of the great sacrifice made by Christ. That typical victim was an earthly animal upon an altar of earth, and its blood was sprinkled upon the mercy seat behind the veil of an earthly tabernacle; in the antitype Christ as the victim of the sacrifice is from heaven as the Lamb of God to take away the sin of the world, and then as a priest he enters into heaven itself to appear before God with his own blood in our behalf. As this is the principle governing in the scripture use of types, it is clearly seen that the antitype immeasurably transcends the type in its importance, its grandeur, and its glory, and that, unlike the type, it belongs to the realm of spiritual and heavenly things, the type being taken from the things of earth.

While the word "type" does not occur in our Authorized Version of the English Scriptures, yet we use it scripturally for the reason that the word corresponding to the word "type" belongs to the original, meaning a "figure." or "pattern." (Heb. 8: 5; 1 Pet. 3: 21; and other passages.) In his epistle to the Hebrews the apostle Paul uses the tabernacle as a type, or pattern. He refers to the instruction which God gave to Moses, saying: "See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern that was showed thee in the mount." (Heb. 8: 5.) Elsewhere in this same epistle he refers to this tabernacle with furnishings as being the "patterns," or "copies," of things in the heavens. (Heb. 9: 23.) It has been the general rule to consider the tabernacle as a type of the church, it being claimed that Paul so applies It in the uses that he makes of it. There was a time when I followed this rule of making this pattern of the tabernacle represent the church, and yet it is positively true that the apostle nowhere says that he uses it as a type of the church. The truth is that he teaches the opposite of this, for he says that the tabernacle with its parts and furnishings was a pattern of the things in the heavens, and, therefore, was not a type of any earthly institution that men call "church." It is true that the tabernacle in its structure and appointments foreshadowed the principles in the scheme of redemption upon which each church as a local congregation is grounded in its faith and in its spiritual life, but it did not typically foreshadow any sort of church as a general earthly institution. This false interpretation of the meaning of the tabernacle came into popular use after the apostasy had introduced the ecclesiastical idea that "church" and "kingdom" are equal to one another in their New Testament meaning. The holy place or sanctuary of the Christian is his acceptable relationship to Christ as a loyal subject of a kingdom that is not of this world, and the most holy place behind the veil for the Christian is in heaven, where Christ, as our kingly and priestly mediator, makes intercession for his people. The Christian's citizenship is in heaven.

It can truthfully be said that all of God's dealings with the people of Israel under the Old Testament economy typically foreshadowed the essential principles belonging to the mediatorial reign of the Christ as man's Redeemer. But it is so easy to make false steps in our interpretation of the meaning of so many of these Old Testament appointments that it is the part of wisdom not to attempt to use them in support of anything that is not clearly established by the plain precepts of gospel teaching. Everything that is necessary to man's salvation, also the things that are necessary for Christian worship and Christian fellowship in every good work, can be thus learned from these plain precepts. The question may be asked: "Why press into service unwarranted conclusions drawn from premises which we do not understand? We know that the Israelites were journeying toward their land of Canaan under the promise that they should enter in if faithful, and we know that because of unbelief all but two of that generation failed to enter into the promised possession. This foreshadowed the sublime truth that as the children of a covenant founded upon better promises we are journeying toward a city "whose builder and maker is God." The warning is that through our unfaithfulness we may fail to enter this home of eternal reward. Watchfulness demands that, as loyal subjects of a kingdom that cannot be moved, we give diligence to make ourselves acceptable by faithfulness to worship in the assembly and to the active work of the Lord in doing good as opportunity offers.

To the Knowing World-An Inquiry.

Men don't believe in a devil now, as their fathers used to do;

They have forced the door of various creeds to let his majesty through.

There isn't a print of his cloven foot, or a fiery dart from his bow,

To be found in earth or air to-day, for the world has voted so.

But who is mixing the fatal draught that palsies heart and brain.

And loads the bier of each passing year with ten hundred thousand slain?

Who blights the bloom of the land to-day with the fiery breath of hell.

If the devil isn't and never was? Won't somebody rise and tell?

Who dogs the steps of the toiling saint, and digs the pit for his feet?

Who sows the tares in the field of time wherever God sows wheat?

The devil is voted not to be, and, of course, the thing is true;

But who just now is doing the work the devil alone should do?

We are told he does not go about like a roaring lion now; But whom shall we hold responsible for the everlasting

To be heard in home, in church and state, to the earth's remotest bound,

If the devil by a unanimous vote is nowhere to be found?

Won't somebody step to the front forthwith, and make their bow, and show

How the frauds and the crimes of a single day spring up?

We want to know.

The dayli was fairly roted out and of source the dayle.

The devil was fairly voted out, and, of course, the devil's gone;

But simple people would like to know who carries his business on.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

W. E. Morgan, of El Reno, Okla., seeks information in regard to those who were punished under the law of Moses:

Will all those old-covenant characters who suffered capital punishment under the law of Moses be resurrected and turned into hell with all the nations that forget God?

The Bible tells us that all shall come forth from the grave. John 5: 28, 29 reads: "Marvel not at this: for the hour cometh, in which all that are in the tombs shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of judgment." All disobedient persons under the law of Moses will evidently be judged by that law. Those who obeyed it will be rewarded accordingly; those who disobeyed it will suffer the consequences.

A. L. Wilson, Farmington, Ky., writes of some who neglect the services of the church:

In one of our congregations we have some members who are moral citizens, and some of whom are good Masons or Odd Fellows, and very devoted to their lodge meetings; yet they are absolutely indifferent toward the work of the church. They do not even attend the monthly preaching, much less the Lord's-day meetings. Some, perhaps, average being at church once a year. The elders of this congregation have gone to their homes and admonished them in love: It seems to do no good. What should the church do under these circumstances?

Those who put lodges or any kind of human organization above the church of Christ are very poor Christians indeed. They are not working at the Christian religion and have nothing on which to build the hope of everlasting life. The man who does not seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, is an unfaithful steward and will never hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done." Of course, I know nothing of the peculiar circumstances to which the querist refers. However, it is always safe to be long-suffering and forbearing. Forbearance is a commendable virtue. When forbearance has been duly exercised, if the transgressors continue to neglect the Lord's worship and neglect to walk as the Holy Spirit directs, there is nothing to do but for the church to announce that they are no longer members of the congregation.

O. F. Shearer, of Monticello, Ky., inquires in reference to negligent members:

Is continuous and persistent staying away from the first-day worship walking disorderly?

We learn from Acts 20: 7 that the disciples met on the first day of the week and broke bread. In this example we have the force of a command. The very fact that the disciples in the days of the apostles and under their guidance met on the first day of the week gives divine sanction to the act. Christians who love the Lord delight to eat the spiritual food that he has ordained for their spiritual growth and development. A persistent staying away from the Lord's service on the first day of the week, when there is no scriptural warrant for such neglect, shows that the heart is not right. Any disregard of divine example is disorderly walking. Christians should forbear with one another and should not withdraw from those who walk disorderly as long as there is any possibility of leading them to obedience. Withdrawal should always be the last resort.

Should such delinquents as are referred to in the preceding question be withdrawn from?

Those who persistently and continuously stay away from the worship upon the first day of the week have already withdrawn themselves. The only thing necessary in such a case is for the elders of the church to announce that certain members who have persistently stayed away from the worship are no longer members of the congregation in full fellowship and good standing. The members should be admonished to continue their efforts to restore them to the fellowship of the congregation. However, they should not be restored until they correct their lives and live in harmony with the teaching of the Bible.

G. H. Byars, Fresno, Cal., requests an explanation of some questions, as follows:

Please explain Ps. 118: 22-24. When was this stone made the corner stone, or what day was it? Does "the day which the Lord hath made" refer to the day that "the stone which the builders refused" became "the head-stone of the corner?" Is it the day that John refers to in Revelation when he says, "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day?" (2) Please explain, also, just why the Savior told the disciples to pray that their flight be not on the Sabbath day (Matt. 24: 20), when that flight was not to be taken until after the new covenant was established and after the Sabbath, as we believe, was no more to be kept. Here is a good place to comment on the covenant made with Israel concerning the Sabbath as a "perpetual covenant" and to be kept for a "thousand generations." I shall be very grateful for the explanation. On second thought, would like to have you, also, set forth in clear terms for what reasons we keep the first day of the week and just why we believe it to be the "Lord's day." I have always accepted it without very much effort to discover why we keep this day, and some very strong "Sabbatarians" have undertaken to convert me to the seventh day.

(1) The stone referred to in Ps. 118: 22-24 is Christ. The Lord quotes this language of David in Matt, 21; 42 and applies it to himself. The Holy Spirit tells us, through the apostle Paul: "For other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ." Again, we learn that the church is "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Christ Jesus himself being the chief corner stone." The Jews rejected Christ and nailed him to the cross. He was buried and rose again on the third and appointed morn. He went back to heaven and was crowned "Lord of lords, and King of kings," and sent the Holy Spirit to guide the apostles into all truth. On the day of Pentecost the church was established, and Christ then became the effective, chief corner stone. (2) Matt. 24: 20 refers to the second destruction of the temple. They were to pray that their flight should not be on the Sabbath because the gates of the cities were closed on that day, thus preventing departure. The Jews still kept the Sabbath, although the church had been established. A Sabbath day's journey was only about seven-eighths of a mile. From history we learn that the army of Cestius Gallus inclosed Jerusalem A.D. 67, who, being deterred by its strength, retired to Cesarea. This was the signal for which the church waited, and it then fled beyond the Jordan. The Sabbath was given to the Jews and was a perpetual covenant to them only. The Sabbath was never bound on the Gentiles, and hence they were not under obligations to keep it. The middle wall of partition was broken down and the law was taken out of the way and nailed to the cross. (Col. 2: 14.) We keep the first day of the week now in memory of Christ's resurrection from the grave. The first day of the week is held to be the same as "the Lord's day" spoken of in Revelation. The Satbath was given to the Israelites because they had been led out of Egyptian bondage, and for this reason they were commanded to observe it. We are to observe the Lord's day in commemoration of the fact that Christ has come forth from the grave, thus having robbed death of its sting and the grave of its victory. In this triumph over death and the grave, Christ took away from the devil the power of death. Every time we meet on the first day of the week we honor Christ and proclaim to the world that he arose a conqueror over death, hell, and the grave.

Another Delay in Honolulu.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

On leaving Yokohama, Japan, April 7, I bought a ticket through to San Francisco with the privilege of stopping over thirty days in Honolulu. I was notified at the time by the agent that they were crowded for room and that I had better go to the office here in Honolulu as soon as I arrived and arrange for passage on to San Francisco, or I would stand a chance not to get off in thirty days. I did as told, but found the congestion even greater than I had supposed. The boat I intended getting on sailed for San Francisco on May 14, but, being already crowded to its utmost capacity, no more passengers could be taken on, save two who had been waiting since February. My next chance is May 27, and the next June 11. I hope to get off at one of these dates. In the meantime I am busy about the Master's business, the details of which will be reported later. All friends will continue to address me in care of Earnest C. Love, Santa Rosa, Cal., until further notice.

Invitations.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

"I anxiously await your visit here. We count on your coming by here sure. Write me of it." (W. W. Freeman.)

"We will be glad to have you visit us while you are in the United States. We live in Southern Iowa now. I feel sure the churches here will welcome you and will be glad to have you tell them of your labors there. They are interested in sounding out the word at home and abroad." (William J. Campbell.)

"I have, for some time, followed with interest the report of your work, both in our papers here and in the Missionary Messenger; and when I read your article, 'Homeward Bound,' I thought that you certainly deserved a visit home. I trust that you have had a pleasant voyage across the Pacific and that your stay in the United States will be both pleasant and profitable." (Miss Nellie Straiton.)

"Inclosed herewith find check for ten dollars, contribution from the South Side-Central church of Christ. Glad you are having success in your labors in Japan." (W. A. Copher.)

"Through reading the good old Gospel Advocate we learned of your desire to return to America, and we are greatly in sympathy with your earnest wish; so you will find inclosed money order for two dollars to help you a little bit. We can have a faint idea of your longing to see your loved ones, as we have six children of our own, and it must, indeed, be hard to be separated for so long. We trust that you may have a most happy and blessed reunion with those loved ones you are longing to greet. And may your trip be the means of accomplishing great good for the Master's cause." (Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chittick.)

"I notice in the Gospel Advocate your instructions to mail as above, so I am sending this draft along. In this connection, the congregation here [Florence, Ala.] requests that I urge you to include our place in your visiting list while over here, and we hope you will do that." (H. P. Lucas.)

"I am writing you in care of Brother Bowman, so you will have time to think it over. We want you to stop with us a while before going East. Of course, if you must go on in order not to disappoint your little girl, then we have not a word to say; but if you can spare us a few days for preaching and visiting, we certainly will appreciate it. I do not want to keep you away from your family very long; but, somehow, I am afraid if you get back East, it will be a long time before we get to see you." (Earnest C. Love,)

"Your time to come home—rather, to start home—is drawing nigh, and I know you are happy in the thought. We, your friends in America, rejoice that another opportunity is being given you to return to us and to your loved ones. All these years we have tried to appreciate your sacrifice for the cause in Japan; still I am conscious that we have never known how keen these sacrifices have been. You make your sacrifices so cheerfully and easily that many do not know you make them; you bear your burdens so uncomplainingly that few know you have burdens. We are praying for your safe return to us and shall be so glad to see you again." (J. N. Armstrong.)

The above are some of the invitations and kind words that I found in a batch of letters on my arrival in Honolulu, April 17. As previously planned, I am stopping over here for about thirty days in the hope of starting a church according to the New Testament pattern. Nearly every kind of church imaginable is found here, save the one we read about in the New Testament.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

J. T. Harris, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., was among our visitors this week.

We are glad to print brief notices of protracted meetings. Send them in, brethren.

- J. Paul Kimbrell changes his address from Whitewright, Texas, to Mount Green, Saskatchewan, Canada.
- C. A. Norred, of Memphis, Tenn., and Paul Slayden, of Columbia, Tenn., exchanged pulpits last Sunday.

From B. P. Odeneal, Tyronza, Ark., May 27: "I am badly in need of help. I am sick and not able to work at all. I am past seventy-four years old. I pray that God may direct and bless you."

We are glad to report that James A. Allen, of Nashville, has entered the evangelistic field and has been engaged to hold several meetings. He will begin at Fisher's Chapel, near Greenbrier, Tenn., on June 15.

Brother Elam has gone to Beamsville, Ontario, Canada, for a meeting. He will begin at Rochester, N. Y., on June 22. An effort will be made to establish a loyal congregation there. Sister Elam accompanied him on this Northern trip.

Two fine audiences greeted A. G. Freed at Russell Street Church last Sunday and thoroughly enjoyed his sermons on "The Value of an Ideal" and "The Bible." Three young people were baptized at the evening service. The meeting continues with increasing interest.

Among the graduates of the Vanderbilt Dental College are Paul Srygley, son of F. B. Srygley, and Cleo C. Boles, son of H. Leo Boles. Both are fine young men. The Gospel Advocate wishes for them great success and hopes they will enjoy the good will of Christians wherever they may locate.

From Robert R. Hull, 1420 Fourth Avenue, Charleston, W. Va., May 14: "The meeting being conducted by Ira C. Moore and myself at 618 Virginia Street, West Side, continues. One confession Monday evening, who will be baptized Sunday, making three to date. Good interest developing, and we hope to do much good."

From B. F. Heaton, Dale, Ark., May 26: "We would like to have a good preacher to locate with us, one that is able to teach a country school and preach to a small congregation. We are located in a healthy part of the Ozark Mountains, but a poor country. Any one interested should address B. F. Heaton, Dale, Ark., and inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope."

From J. H. Murrell, Box 24, Tennessee City, Tenn., May 29: "Please announce through the Gospel Advocate that I expect to start right away on a trip to Colorado and perhaps other Western States for some meetings. I have not made definite arrangements for all of the trip and would be glad to hear from all parties interested in any way at their earliest convenience."

Wanted—Some good, Christian families to locate in Noxubee County, Miss. Our soil is underlaid with limestone. All clovers grow fine, making it a fine stock country. We are selling between three hundred and forty and three hundred and fifty dollars' worth of cream from twenty-four cows per month, raising the calves, and feeding four sows and seventeen shoats skim milk. If interested, write D. N. Barnett, Macon, Miss."

S. H. Hall writes from Atlanta, Ga.: "S. P. Pittman's meeting with the South Pryor Street brethren is doing well. He is doing a good work. J. N. Armstrong favored us with three strong sermons last Lord's day, which resulted in one confession, one from the Baptists, and three erring Christians' confessing their sins and neglectfulness and reconsecrating themselves to God."

J. P. Lowrey, of Senatobia, Miss., writes: "I am now in my fifth meeting at Perryville, Ark. It rains every day, but our crowds are good at each service. We have had two additions to date. The church at Perryville will build a meetinghouse this year. On my way to Perryville I spent one day at McCrory with my good friend, Dr. L. E. Jelks. The church at McCrory has also bought a lot and will build a house soon."

From Charlie Taylor, Paducah, Ky., May 30: "L. L. Brigance, of Murray, Ky., has just closed a splendid meeting with Goebel Avenue church of Christ, which resulted in twelve additions—eleven by primary obedience and one reclaimed. Brother Brigance is a strong, forceful preacher of the gospel, presenting it with simplicity. The church was greatly strengthened and the meeting was far-reaching in its results. I will begin a mission meeting with home forces on the second Lord's day in June, under our large tent, at the corner of Fifteenth and Trimble Streets."

From J. E. Wainwright, Pollock, La., May 28: "After several weeks' illness, I am again in the mission work. I am now engaged in a meeting here, with fair crowds and splendid attention. I expect to continue over the second Lord's day in June. Recently I visited Selma in the interest of the cause. I met four members of the 'one body.' My plans are to begin a mission meeting there just as soon as I close out here. Two other points are in view, and will be mentioned in my next report. I am glad to acknowledge twenty-five dollars from the Glenwood congregation at Fort Worth, Texas; also ten dollars in April and ten dollars in May from Forest Hill, La. Brother Walton, of Fort Worth, Texas, reports one dollar from a sister in Alabama for this work."

From Will W. Slater, Fort Smith, Ark., May 26: "I was at Bellemont, Route 1, from Prague, Okla., last week. I succeeded in getting together about fourteen members who promised to meet regularly for worship. We had large attendance in the meeting there. We had a fine day at Fort Smith Sunday. The brethren are up and doing and will soon have the new house completed. We will have our allday service there the second Sunday in June. I am in a meeting at Poteau, Okla., this week. This is a mission point. We had a strong congregation numerically here at one time, but the 'progressive' brethren wiped us out. I have found three faithful ones since the meeting began. We will continue next week. We are using the Presbyterian church, which will cost us twenty dollars for the two weeks. My protracted meetings will begin on June 25, and I will be busy until October 1. I need your prayers. May God bless the faithful in Christ."

From Tice Elkins, Childress, Texas, May 27: "I wish to say that since my last report my wife is worse again, and I am advised that an operation is the only chance for her. She will undergo the operation next week if she gets strong enough to stand it; if not, then just as soon as the doctor will advise. She has been up and has gone to church a few times, but her condition is such that we cannot tell when to expect a return of the convulsions and epileptic fits that she has been having. Now, as to meetings, I had hoped to hold a few; but, with two exceptions, brethren are hereby notified not to depend upon me, for I cannot leave home this summer. Places where I can go will be near and will be advised by letter, while the others must secure another preacher. I hope they will remember me for work hereafter when I am free to go again. Our support has been such that we have not suffered for anything as yet, but the operation will take all we have and much more. We need your prayers, brethren, as well as money; so do not forget us at the throne of grace."

Further Consideration of the Selection, Sending, and Support of Missionaries.

BY M. C. K.

It would be difficult at almost any time, but particularly at this time, to exaggerate the weighty significance and the serious importance of the nine facts enumerated at the close of the article on this theme in our issue of May 22, 1919. Those facts not only deal with the matter of collecting and handling the funds of the churches, but they give special and solemn emphasis to the serious responsibility involved in that particular line of work; and hence with great clearness and force they solemnly emphasize the obligation resting upon the preachers and the churches to see to it that, whenever and wherever there is an attempt to do this work at all, it be done in accordance with these principles.

It should go without saying that the principle involved in the matter of collecting and handling funds among the churches is the same, regardless of the particular object for which, or the persons for whom, the funds may be contributed. In the particular case under discussion by the apostle Paul in the Corinthian passages presented in our last article, the money collected was for the relief of poor Christians in the province of Judea; and the facts and principles carefully set forth in that case by an inspired penman furnish a bright light for the guidance of churches and preachers in all subsequent ages in their collection and handling of money for any purpose, whether it be for the relief of the poor or for the spread of the gospel over the earth. For the special purpose of this article, we will now recur to some of the facts in question.

1. According to the Corinthian passages, no one would be acceptable as a proper person to handle the funds of a church, or of any number of churches, except such person be first approved and chosen by the church or churches for that work. This fact stands out as clear as the cloudless sunlight in the language of Paul. According to his clear and explicit teaching, no man who does not "take thought for things honorable, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men" (2 Cor. 8: 21), is a proper man for such a position. In the absence of an appointment by the churches for that work, he himself distinctly refused to handle the funds of the churches and demanded of them to place their money in the hands of trusted persons whom they themselves had approved and chosen for that work. "If it be meet that I go, these shall go with me." That is, he would not lay himself liable even to the shadow or possibility of suspicion that any of the funds of the churches had been appropriated by him either to himself or to any other unauthorized object. According to this, we must "take thought for things honorable," not merely "in the sight of the Lord," but also "in the sight of men." That is to say, it is not enough for a man in such position merely to be honest so that God knows he is honest, no matter what men may think; but he must so conduct and situate himself that men, too, will also know that he is honest-that is, that he "takes thought for things honorable, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men." That is exactly what the apostle says.

2. By the same principle it is clearly and distinctly taught that churches should not be asked to support any brother as a missionary, or in any other capacity for that matter, without knowing who he is and that he is capable and worthy of support. Among others, this is one very decided advantage that the churches, operating each in the capacity of an independent institution, as is so plainly taught in the New Testament, have over the churches operating under a general missionary society. In the former, it is comparatively an easy matter to acquaint a church with the capability and worthiness of some brother whom it is called upon to support; whereas, in the latter, when the churches do no more than merely give their money over to the general organization, surrendering to it the authority to select, send, support, and recall missionaries, such an organization has the power, and often exercises it, to send numbers of persons to the mission fields whom the churches do not know, and hence they often support what and whom they know not. Under such an organization, where the missionary money of the churches all goes into such a general fund, no church can ever know with certainty whom its money supports, nor can there be the same vital and intimate connection in the way of mutual knowledge, love, and fellowship between the churches and the missionaries under such an arrangement. But in the case of local church independence, there is direct communication and fellowship between the church and the man or men whom it supports. There is simply no ground for doubt that this was the principle on which the primitive churches operated.

According to the facts and principles now before us, not only must those who collect and handle the missionary funds of the churches be approved by the churches themselves for this work, but the missionaries sent out to the work must also be known and approved by the churches supporting them, not only that the truth may be taught, but that "all things be done decently and in order." (1 Cor. 14: 40.)

We have still other matters to present in the light of these vital and significant New Testament principles.

Faith.

BY J. C. M'Q.

It is my purpose to write a number of articles on the fundamentals of the gospel. As we never get beyond the use of our A B C's, so we never become so strong in the Lord as not to need the fundamentals of salvation. Our faith must grow and develop and we must go from faith to faith all through the Christian life.

The Bible is not a book of definitions, but it does give us one definition of faith; and the apostle, realizing how difficult it is to define faith abstractly, proceeds at once to give us a number of object lessons, that we may the more clearly see the meaning of faith. While I usually use in my writing the American Standard Version, as I think it is the best translation, yet I have become so accustomed to the definition of faith given by the Authorized Version that I prefer to use it here.

In Heb. 11: 1 we read: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." There are two key words in this passage. The more important is "substance," and the one of less importance is "evidence." If we fully understand the meaning of the word "substance" as used in this passage, we will have a clear understanding of what faith is. "Substance" comes from two Latin words-sub, under, and stoe, to stand. Faith, then, is the substratum, the foundation on which our hope rests. We may define faith as the foundation of hope. The meaning is the same if we consider its Greek derivation. "Substance" comes from the Greek word hupostasis. The New Testament usage of this word is: a setting, or placing under; thing put under, substructure, foundation. The word "evidence" comes from two Latin words-e, out of, and video, to see. Faith is the conviction that we have of the truth of unseen things. The man who has visited London knows as a matter of fact that there is such a city. The man who has not visited London believes that such a city exists. What he has seen is a matter of knowledge, and what he believes is a matter of faith. His faith is the evidence that he has that such a place as London exists. While we have not been to beaven and do not know as a matter of knowledge that such a place exists, yet our faith is so firm and abiding that we act as though we knew in reality that there is such a place. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ with all the heart leads us to act as though we knew that heaven really exists. Faith is the foundation of our hope, and it is that that enables us to endure the trials and tribulations that overtake us in life's journey. Without it, we would indeed be miserable; without it, this world would be dark and dreary. It would be a desert without an oasis; it would be a night without Faith moves us to act in all the walks of life. It is the enabling act. It alone does not make sons, but gives us the right to become children of God. (John 1: 12.) It prompts us to action from the eradle to the grave. Every time we take a journey, faith is the foundation for the hope we have that the journey will be completed in safety. Every time we sow seed or plant a grain of corn, faith is the foundation that we have for the hope that by proper cultivation we will reap a harvest. We have faith to believe that when God sends the genial sunshine and the refreshing showers and we faithfully till the soil, that in due season we shall reap if we faint not. Every time we call a physician into our homes, faith is the foundation for the hope we have that he may be sufficiently skilled to cure the disease. Every time we buy a piece of real estate, faith is the foundation of the hope we entertain that we have made a wise investment and that the property will some day enhance in value. So we may emphasize that faith is the foundation of our hope in all the walks and callings of life.

There is no mystery about believing in Jesus, the Christ. He came to us in our nature-a man; eating, drinking, sleeping; hungry, weary, thirsty; joyful and sorrowful, weeping with those who weep and rejoicing with those who rejoice. Having the experiences of life in common with us, he came as close to us as we can get to one another. He came close enough to us to dwell in men and work in them. It is simply our duty to believe in him and trust him. We are not required to believe some difficult proposition, but to believe in the purest, best, and noblest Being this world has ever known. "Many other signs therefore did Jesus in the presence of the disciples, which are not written in this book: but these are written, that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life in his name." (John 20: 30, 31.)

But when the apostle had given us a clear definition of faith, in order to impress its truth, he at once proceeded to give us a number of illustrations or examples of faith. These examples are found in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. Space forbids that I should notice all the examples. The apostle impressed the importance of faith in verse 6 of that chapter in the following words: "And without faith it is impossible to be well pleasing unto him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is the rewarder of them that seek after him." He then (verse 7) refers to Noah: "By faith Noah, being warned of God concerning things not seen as yet, moved with godly fear, prepared an ark for the saving of his house; through which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is according to faith." This is one of the strongest examples of faith in the Bible. Noah was the only faithful man in the midst of a faithless generation. There was no rain, the world was in all probability dry, and no dark and angry clouds threatened to pour out the rain; and yet Noah, without seeing the flood and without ever having seen one, so far as we know, moved with godly fear, builded the ark just as God told him to do. His faith was the foundation of his hope; his faith led him to obey God and to build the ark just as prescribed and dictated by his Creator. The man of faith takes God at his word and does what God commands him to do. He never stops before God's commandments to argue with them. It is enough for him to know that God has commanded. He then says: "The Lord has spoken, and thy servant heareth and obeyeth." The lack of faith is the root of all disobedience and rebellion to God. If Noah had lacked faith in God, he would have ridiculed the very thought of a flood of water coming upon the earth and would have scoffed at the idea of being saved by water. Instead, however, of pursuing such a course, his faith was the foundation for the hope he had that the flood would come and that the ark would safely bear him over its waters and he would be permitted to come out and repeople the new world.

May I take another example? "By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed to go out unto a place which he was to receive for an inheritance; and he went out, not knowing whither he went." (Verse 8.) Men of faith follow God in the darkness as well as in the light. His faith did not waver because he could not see the end from the beginning. It still remained with him and was the basis of all his hopes which led him to do just what God commanded him to do. Take even the greater trial of his taith when he was called upon to offer Isaac upon the altar, his only son of the promise. It was through Isaac that all the nations of the earth were to be blessed, and yet God now tells him to take him and slay him with his own hand. When God commanded, Abraham did not stop to argue. His faith led him to take Isaac to the very spot commanded, to prepare the altar, to place him upon it, and to raise the glittering knife, just ready to bury it in the heart of his own dear boy, when God called to him: "Abraham, Abraham, . . . lay not thy hand upon the lad." Faith was the foundation for the hope he had that God would raise his son from the dead, and it was that faith that led him to obey God. When we reflect upon the strength of Abraham's love for his son, we have a faint conception of his devotion to God and of the strength of that faith that led him to make the sacrifice. It was not a dead, inactive faith. It was a faith that expressed itself in action; a faith that took God at his word and that came out in obedience to him. The faith that remains dormant in the heart is dead and can never bring forth fruits to righteousness. Only the living, active faith is pleasing to God and fits us for life everlasting. Our faith must lead us to obedience regardless of consequences. Our faith will lead us to obedience although we may not understand the philosophy of the cure.

When the man that was blind from his birth came to the Savior for a blessing, Jesus spit on the ground and made clay of the spittle and anointed his eyes with the clay. The blind man doubtless could not see any virtue in such an act; for the virtue was not in the act, but in Jesus, the Christ, who opened his eyes. When Jesus had done this, he commanded him to go and wash in the pool of Siloam. He could see no virtue in washing in the pool of Siloam to give him sight; yet his faith led him to do exactly what Jesus commanded, and, as a result, he came seeing. It was faith that led to the washing, and the faith that leads to obedience always leads to the blessing. May I quote a passage? "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." Those who have faith in Christ, as did the blind man, as did Noah and Abraham and all the others who obeyed God, will have the faith to do just what Christ commands to be done. As the faith of Noah, Abraham, and the blind man came out in action and did the thing that Christ commanded to be done, so our faith must come out in action and do the things that Christ now commands us to do. In order to obtain salvation, we learn that two things are mentioned: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." There is no promise to the man that believes so long as that faith does not come out in action, obeys not. I say to a man: "Dig me a cistern and wall it up with brick, and I will pay you one hundred dollars." The man digs the cistern, but does not wall it up with brick. Is he entitled to the one hundred dollars? We may correctly say that a man who sows and cultivates shall reap; the man who sows not shall not reap. These illustrations are no clearer than the language, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Baptism belongs to faith, is inseparable from faith, and has an element of faith in it. No man can be baptized into Christ without faith. Baptism is an expression of faith, and the man who has sufficient faith to save him will not stop to argue as to the necessity of obeying the command of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Brother Srygley's Louisville Meeting.

With the house packed with expectant people and in the midst of the profoundest interest, the F Street meeting, with preaching by Brother F. B. Srygley, closed on May 27. A death in the Campbell Street Church having called me home from the meeting at Campbell, Mo., it was my pleasure to attend the second week of the F Street meeting.

Brother Srygley did his work faithfully and well and greatly endeared himself to the people. His preaching was above the average even for him, and this is a distinct testimony in its favor. Not only was he thoroughly and exhaustively scriptural, making at all times a strong and searching appeal to the word of God for what he said, but he was clear, convincing, and logical.

The distinguishing feature of his preaching in this particular meeting was its open and vigorous attack on the revamp of Russellism and Adventism, which revamp had its origin here in our city and whose needless propagation has wrought complete destruction of the peace and harmony between the Louisville churches for and against it, as well as having caused trouble elsewhere. Besides his published challenge in the Gospel Advocate, inviting any of the advocates of these doctrines to come to the F Street meeting and offering to divide time with them in an effort to test the scripturalness or unscripturalness of their doctrines, he wrote a personal letter to Brother E. L. Jorgenson during the meeting, requesting him to announce in his own congregation in the Highlands and in the Portland Avenue congregation, the two congregations here in which these doctrines have been taught, his two sermons on Monday night and Tuesday night, respectively, on the establishment of the kingdom and the second coming of Christ, and inviting Brother Jorgenson himself to be present; but he not only did not come, but the last I heard from Brother Srygley, he had not even received an acknowledgment of his letter.

Brother Jorgenson and the Portland Avenue congregation not only started a meeting in which he was to do the preaching simultaneously with the F Street meeting and continued it simultaneously with the latter, but the information has just reached me to-day that the said Portland Avenue meeting was never announced until Wednesday night before the F Street meeting began and that it is expected to close to-night or to-morrow night. Brother Srygley, whose meeting closed last night, called public attention to the fact that the advocates of these Russellite and Advent doctrines, having pressed them to the dire extreme of dividing churches by withdrawing in one instance from good men with nothing proved against them except their opposition to such doctrines and thus stirring up the friends of the truth to the point of exposing and opposing them, were beginning to show signs of failing courage when they find themselves invited to come out into the open where their claims can be fairly tested; and the Jorgenson-Portland Avenue meeting, announced only a few days before the F Street meeting began, seems to be one of such signs. I wish indeed they could all have been present and heard the sermons on the kingdom and the second coming of Christ. These, as were all of his sermons, were preached with marked clearness and power, and they have made a profound impression. If any intelligent person who heard these two sermons was not convinced of the truth taught in the Bible, it would surely be interesting to know the reason why.

The main purpose of the meeting was to expose and counteract the baleful influence of these divisive teachings in our city, and on this line it was a brilliant success; but there was, besides this, one addition to the F Street congregation.

So far as this speculative movement to fasten upon the churches some of Charles T. Russell's most prominent doctrines is concerned, it has received a deathblow, at least in the minds of some of our Louisville people who had been confused over it. Brother Srygley showed from the Watch Tower, Russell's paper, and "Jesus is Coming," Blackstone's book—the book which the leaders and propagators of this revamp of Russellism heartily indorse and recommend—just what the doctrine is, and then, in the judgment of intelligent men and women, he completely annihilated it with the word of God. The meeting will long be remembered for the great good done.

The brethren at F Street are anxious to have Brother Srygley with them in another meeting some time, and of course the Campbell Street Church and the King's Hall Church will be ready and glad to cooperate with them again in such an effort.

Brother Jarratt L. Smith, a faithful and true man, is holding the fort at F Street and cooperated most heartily and faithfully in the meeting.

The soldier who said that nobody in the trenches ever doubts immortality suggested a fact that is as old as the race. You can put a thing out of your life and thought so completely that it will cease to exist for you. It will not cease to exist, but it will cease to exist for you. I once knew a man who put love out of his life in his youth and kept it out until it passed so far beyond all belief that in his old age it was impossible for him to think of even mother love as anything more than a chemical phenomenon. Music exists for those who give themselves a chance to realize it. So does love. So does God. So does immortality.—Edward Lee Pell.

My Will Be Thine.

Laid on thine altar, O my Lord divine,
Accept my will this day for Jesus' sake.
I have no jewels to adorn thy shrine,
Nor any world-proud sacrifice to make;
But here I bring, within my trembling hand,
This will of mine, a thing that seemeth small—
And thou alone, O God, canst understand
How, when I yield thee this, I yield mine all.

Hidden therein, thy searching gaze can see
Struggles of passion, visions of delight,
All that I love and am and fain would be,
Deep loves, fond hopes, and longings infinite.
It hath been wet with tears and dimmed with sighs,
Clenched in my grasp till beauty hath it none;
Now from thy footstool where it anguished lies,
The prayer ascendeth: "May thy will be done."

Take it, O Father, ere my courage fail,
And merge it so in thine own will that e'en
If, in some desperate hour, my cries prevail
And thou give back my will, it may have been
So changed and purified, so fair have grown,
So one with thee, so filled with peace divine,
I may not know or feel it as mine own,
But, gaining back my will, may find it thine.

There is at least one city in the world where there are no dogs, and that is Beirut, Syria. Most of the dogs have been eaten by the hungry population; the rest have starved to death.

This is according to Dr. Howard S. Bliss, president of the Protestant Syrian College at Beirut, who has arrived in this country. Ordinarily, he says, dogs are the natural scavengers of Syria, and are to be seen in large numbers in every town and hamlet. Now, in Beirut, they have disappeared entirely.

"Hundreds were dying every day in Beirut," said Dr. Bliss. "One could not step out of the college grounds without coming face to face with starvation and death on every hand. The heart-rending part of it was that we could do nothing for the starving multitudes who came to the college daily begging for help; for, while we had so much more than they, our supplies were insufficient for the two hundred and fifty students in our care, and they were our first responsibility.

"When you think that we were so impoverished that we had to turn our suits and improvise shoes from old footballs, you can imagine the extremity of the poor who had sold all they had for food, even their beds. Many families had but one real garment left, which they would take turns in wearing to go out begging for food. The others would remain indoors. I have seen human beings scratching in the dust of the road for bits of grain, which they would devour eagerly.

"Once you have lived through a siege like that, and know the torment of hunger, it is appalling to witness the dreadful waste still going on in America. Bread that would save hundreds of lives in that famine-stricken land is thrown away here every day."

The relief work in Syria now is handled by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, which has accomplished a great deal, in spite of the difficulties of transportation. It was this lack of transportation facilities, according to Dr. Bliss, that was responsible in large measure for the famine. As an illustration of the difficulty of communication, Dr. Bliss told of a man of means who, during the war, could not get to his home. When he finally succeeded in reaching it, he found that his wife had died of starvation and his children were wandering the streets begging.

Dr. Bliss said that the needs now are homes for the refugees and orphanages for the children. There are thousands of orphans, he said. Their parents died of disease and starvation.

Grandma Kept Her Locks Dark, Glossy, and Youthful With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked, and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

A Visit to the Front.

In addition to the other educational activities, the Y. M. C. A. and the Army have been conducting week-end excursions to the devastated regions of France. The fairness of this arrangement is obvious. Would it not be almost a "shame" if the S. O. S. (Service of Supplies) men-soldiers no less heroic than those who went over the top, for they have patiently performed their monotonous duties in providing all equipment for the front -were not allowed to visit the battle fields before returning home? It fell to my lot recently to conduct a party of forty-three men to Chateau-Thierry and Reims

It is simply impossible to find words to describe the horrible results of German downright meanness. No human mind can possibly imagine the completeness of the destruction wrought. The French know this. That is why they insisted on the American peace delegates' going to the front lines before making decisions as to reparations. That is why they were careful to bring the German delegates through these regions en route to Paris. It will help them to sign up the peace terms with more ease. The French are right.

Reims is typical. A beautiful and prosperous city of more than two hundred thousand people utterly laid waste, so much so that a yellow cat could find no comfortable dwelling place therein! Not a single house left undamaged. Hundreds of buildings-homes, schools, hospitals, stores, hotels, industrial plants, churches, the cathedral-the very soul of historic art-by shot and shell, mine and flame, turned into a vast heap of ruins! The work of men or devils? God have mercy upon them. Can even God forgive them? Certainly not without repentance on their part, of which we have but little evidence, if, indeed, any at all. The sight of the destruction, the thought of the misery thrust upon the people, and the memory of the heroic dead fill one's heart with unutterable sadness; but, to my mind, the saddest of all is the nonrepentance of the guilty. O, would there were prophets in Germany to lead the people to repentance and confession! This is their only hope before God.

The Work of the Summer.

BY T. F. COLVIN.

The many readers of the Gospel Advocate know of the work on foot in this city, and I desire to impress them with this one point. In the summer campaign of the churches of America, what one undertaking is it desired to have completed more than the building in this city? I can think of no other undertaking on foot that will have a more wide-telling effect in the salvation of souls than the work in Washington, the capital of the greatest nation on the globe. Each congregation that has not contributed is asked to specially include this among the things to be completed this year, and at the outset of the summer to forward one contribution to help in the work. You will thereby make possible a work for which prayers have been made for years. How can the rulers and lawmakers of our country be influenced by the gospel so long as there is not a single church building in this city where the pure gospel can be preached and where the simple worship as taught in the Bible can be had? This city and this nation needs the good that can come from the work which can be done if the loyal churches will but respond and make this one of the first things to receive consideration in the summer's work. You are praying for the blessings that can come from a work like this, and we are praying that you will help us. Will you do it? God will bless you and be glorified. My address is Box 51, U Street Station, Washington, D. C.

Doing the Will of God.

BY S. WHITFHELD.

"There came then his brethren and his mother, and, standing without, sent unto him, calling him. And the multitude sat about him, and they said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee. And he answered them, saying, Who is my mother, or my brethren? And he looked round about on them which sat about him, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother." (Mark 3: 31-35.)

I would not understand that Jesus was slighting his earthly relatives in what he said on this occasion. He only took advantage of this opportunity to teach a very important lesson, as he did on other occasions. This is a good lesson to us to watch for opportunities to do good; and if we watch for them, we will surely find them. We need not wait to do great things, but rather do the little things that come before us in life. Christ went about doing good while he was in this world, and we can do the same.

We should rejoice in the fact that we can be brothers, sisters, and mothers of Jesus, in a spiritual sense. When we believe on the Christ, repent of our sins, confess him before men, and are buried with him by baptism into his death, we are baptized into him. Then we are in him and he is in us. By this we have drawn near to him and he has drawn near to us. We are then children of God, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, All have this wonderful privilege, and it should be appreciated.

By doing the will of God, we enjoy this close relation to our beloved Master; but if we do not do God's will, we can never enjoy it. But some one might say that this is head religion and there is no heart in it. Well, whatever it is, it is just the kind that was taught by Christ, and that is the very kind we should all have. should be good enough for any of us. But Jesus tells us that we are to love God with our heart, mind, soul, and strength; and Paul tells us that the Christians at Rome had obeyed from the heart the gospel of Christ. All obedience to God must be from the heart, to be acceptable. An obedience that springs from the heart and through love to God and Christ is not properly named when it is called "head religion."

Sin and death were brought into the world by our first parents because of their failure to do the will of God. They did the will of the devil, and this brought trouble, sickness, and death. All the trouble that the world has known has come in the same way.

Jesus has come into the worll, and through his death for sin, his burial, and his resurrection he has brought life; and this can be enjoyed by doing the will of God from the heart

"His mother salth unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it." (John 2: 5.) In this the mother of Jesus preached a great sermon, and no greater could be preached along this line. Only a few have ever heeded this sermon. People do not seem to realize that it is necessary to do just as Jesus says. The servants did what Jesus said on this occasion, and it brought success, as it always will. No failures can come to us as long as we are doing the will of God and Christ.

Jesus has set us an example of obedience by always doing the will of God. He said that he did not come here to do his own will, but the will of him that sent him; that the doctrine was not his, but the Father's; that as the Father gave him commandment, even so he did. Although he was the Son of God, he learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and he is the author of salvation only to those who obey him. He said that it was not every one who said, "Lord, Lord," that would be saved, but those that did the will of his Father; and those who heard what he said, and did it, would be like a man that builded his house on a rock. He also taught that it was useless to call him, "Lord, Lord," and then not do what he said.

With this before us, and all the rest that he taught along the same line, we should see the importance of doing the will of our Heavenly Father. With such plain teaching on this important question, there is surely no excuse for us. "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." (Matt. 28: 20.)

"He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him. . . Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." (John 14: 21-23.) In these verses Jesus has shown who it is that loves God. If we love him, we will do his will. Many people make great claims that they love the Lord, yet they do not do what he says. Jesus teaches that such do not love him.

"See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spoke on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven." (Heb. 12: 25.) God was always particular about his word when spoken by Moses and others, but much more is he particular about it when spoken by his only Son. Let us respect and reverence the word of God.

Looking Back. No. 2.

BY J. W. ATKISSON.

But the very stern and cross old teacher was not the only thing to be dreaded in those days. There were also a few large, bad boys who took a special delight in teasing, tantalizing, humiliating, and whipping the smaller boys. They seemed to think it quite a pleasure to impose on a smaller boy. One Sunday morning just as the Sunday school let out, one of those big, burly boys, at least ten years my senior, caught me by both hands and swung me round and round, letting my feet and legs strike against the benches, and hurt me severely, but no bones were broken. One of the Sunday-school teachers bade him let me alone, which he did; but he went out boasting of what he had done and seemed to think that he was a brave fellow indeed. But I reminded him that he never picked on one of his own size and age, but invariably on one much smaller and younger than himself.

Before the nickel and the silver dime and half dime came into general use the small change was in paper money, by some called "shinplasters." Well, in the days of shinplasters my uncle and aunt, Dr. R. H. Morton and wife, came to visit us. They came about one hundred and fifty miles on horseback to make that visit. They gave to each of us children a silver half dime-about the first, if not the very first, that we had ever seen, and, of course, we were all very proud of the gift; and as there were fourteen of us, you can see that it took a few pieces of money to go round in our family. Some of the children bought candy or sweet cakes, others bought marbles, and so their money was soon gone; but I decided to hold on to my money. I wrapped it up carefully in a napkin and hid it away for safekeeping. In a few days some of the neighbor women came in to visit my mother, and, of course, I thought I must show them my coin; and as I proudly unwrapped it, it fell on the hearth in front of the open fireplace and bounced up and fell into the fire and was buried in the fire and ashes, and that was the last I ever saw of my treasure that I had laid up on earth. I searched diligently to find it, but failed. I felt that I was very unfortunate then, and I know that I have been somewhat unfortunate in financial matters ever since. But I think I can see the finger of God in it all.

"Blameless and Harmless." BY C. PETTY.

The admonition given by Paul in Phil. 2: 14, 15, almost the sweetest and best admonition of the great apostle, should cause all followers of the Savior to desire this blissful condition to be theirs every day they live; for it means to be without blame, or free from blame, and without harm and to cause no harm. But it can be attained only by doing "all things without murmurings and disputings." Now, the opposite of murmurings would be to do all things gladly and with joy; then life would be calm and serene, and there would be sunshine for some one who is traveling life's weary way.

I sometimes muse over this language of the apostle and wonder if I do spend days in a blameless and harmless state; and if so, it is so pleasant to think of. Then maybe faults and foibles, of which I cannot claim to be entirely free, will come before me, and then I feel that maybe I am not "blameless and harmless." But I shall continue to desire and to pray to live in such a tranquil state as this, even if I do miss this high mark, in the midst of the trials and temptations of life.

Paul, in speaking to the Corinthians, said: "So that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 1: 7, 8.) Thus Paul wanted these brethren to be blameless in the day of the Lord, or when he should come to call for them at the end of life; and all that wish for a blissful state beyond the grave are striving prayerfully to live a blaneless life here, so that they will be ready for the better world when the day of probation is over; and they know that, if they live this kind of life, there will be no end nor change by the flight of years. The songs of earth die away and are gone; the sweetest flowers fade away as all things earthly will do; but a blameless and harmless life is unending. And if every disciple would eliminate all murmuring and disputing from life and say, "I am determined to live a blameless and harmless life in the fear of the Savior," what a glorious life it would be, and what a glorious church would be in the world! The church would be what Paul says to the Ephesians-"a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but . . . holy and without blemish." (Eph. 5: 27.) But I fear we are not all living for this glorious day that shall come to all who are faithful to the end. Nothing but a faith that never falters will cause us to "be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world; holding forth the word of life." When the Savior sent out the apostles under the first commission, he told them to be "wise as serpents, and harmless as doves" (Matt. 10: 16)-that is, be too wise to be caught in any snare of the Jews, and be without harm to any one. While the apostle Peter did wrong, he repented as quickly as he remembered his wrong, and wept bitterly, and wrought stupendous changes in the world over men by his almost matchless preaching before he came to the end of the way; and when that came to him, he was waiting and ready for the crown. Now, why not all live, love, watch, and pray to be blameless, waiting for the crown at the end of the way?

An Interesting Letter from France.

Camp Genicart, Bordeaux, April 27, 1919.—I have been receiving the Gospel Advocate ever since I have been in the army and have even been getting it for the six long months I have been over in France, and must say it has been a most welcome paper and has relieved me of many a dull moment over here. It is as welcome to me as receiving a letter from home, and is always read by other comrades in service. We all look for it as regularly as we do our mail, and must say that it comes as regularly, many thanks to your promptness in mailing same

No doubt you have heard from some of your brother members who have been in service, so I thought I would also tell a little about our experiences. We left New York City on the sixth day of October of last year, on board the White Star liner Adriatic, and must say had some lovely weather almost all the way over. As Spanish influenza was very serious in the States at the time, we had quite a few cases on board; but as luck had it, we had very few cases in our Train, so we all landed almost in a body. The trip across took us just eleven days, and on the night of the tenth day, after our first glimpse of land, we had a little excitement on board, for we all heard a loud crash and the boat turned a little on one side; but after reaching the lifeboats we were told to go below, as the danger was all over. And from that day to this it has been said that we were attacked by a German submarine, and also said submarine being sunk. We were in a convoy of over thirty ships, consisting of about seven transports, three battleships, torpedo destroyers, and submarine chasers, also had aëroplanes and observation balloons, and came all the way over in a body. On the seventeenth day of October we landed in Liverpool, England, and on the morning of the eighteenth we boarded a train at Bootle, England, amid much cheering and bands playing. We rode all day to a camp at Winchester. After staying there a day and a half, we again boarded a train and arrived at Southampton, and there boarded a boat, and after a rough ride we crossed the English Channel and landed at Cherbourg. France. After staying there only one day, we got our first experience of riding in box cars; and after riding almost two days in these "side-door Pullmans," we arrived at a little town near Nantes, called "Pont Rousseau," and while here we had our drilling and all preparations to fit us up ready for the front. After three weeks' preparation we again boarded box cars, and after a day's ride we arrived at the Forwarding Camp at Le Man. So while here we lived the regular life of a soldier, as it was awful cold and the only shelter we had was to sleep in our pup tents. It being so cold here, we turned in every night before six o'clock, and after waking up in the morning we first had to build a bonfire in order to thaw our shoes before we could put them on. Everything was done here in the open, as we had no shelter. Even our cooking was done in the open, and our eating was done by either standing up or kneeling down, and our mess kits were always on the ground. Here we were when the armistice was signed, and just as we were getting ready to leave we were told that the war was over. Now we haven't seen the thick of battle, but we sure have done our share ever since, and are doing it till this day; for, instead of going up to the front, we again boarded a train, and after two more days of riding in box cars we arrived at Bordeaux; and from here we really had to work. We took convoy after convoy of trucks from Bordeaux to Chaumont, and even to Coblenz, Germany, some of these trips lasting over three weeks, and almost every day our driving was done in rain. After more riding in box cars, we again returned to Bordeaux, and here we are to be found, with no idea of when we are going home. work for us here is to haul troops to the docks, troops that are going home, and also to do all the other work, such as haul rations, clothing, and everything that is needed in the camp, as this is the embarkation camp at Bordeaux. We can always expect to work all hours of the night, as we never know when our services will be needed. We are all doing our work with a will, as we always expect to spend the Fourth of July in the good old U. S. A. again. At least, we all feel that way, and everything points in that direction.

Being a subscriber of the Gospel Advocate, I believe that every member of the church of Christ should subscribe for this grand paper; and wishing you all the success in your undertaking for good, I am,

Yours in the faith, George W. Grayson, Company E, 113th Supply Train, A. P.

If Your Back is Aching or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water and Eat Less Meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmiess salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In twenty-four hours they strain from it five hundred grains of acid and waste; so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water; you can't drink too much. Also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which every one should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Sweeny.

Fletcher Sweeny, wife of Bonie L. Sweeny, was born on October 14, 1890, and died on February 5, 1919. She lived for a number of years after marriage at Leiper's Fork, Tenn., where, in September, 1915, she obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother E. H. Hoover. She was a very highly esteemed neighbor, a devoted and faithful wife, a tender and affectionate mother, and a very consecrated Christian. She bore a good name in the community, which "is rather to be chosen than great riches." It was a misfortune to all left behind for her to be taken away, but we can look forward to a happy reunion. At the time of her death she lived at Memphis, and her remains were brought to Leiper's Fork for interment. The writer conducted the funeral in the presence of a number of relatives and OSCAR PARHAM. friends.

Light.

Brother Daniel A, Light, one of the oldest members of the church here, died at the home of a relative, near Falkville, Ala., March 13, 1919, and was buried at Center Grove, his old home, on March 15. He was a man greatly loved in his home community, where for more than thirty years he served them as justice of the peace. He served in the Confederate Army, and was ninety-eight years old. He had been a member of the church of Christ for many years. His wife, who is very feeble and only one day younger than he, survives him; also two sons-John Light, of Birmingham, Ala., and W. A. Light, of Center Grove-and one daughter-Lena Sivley, of Albany, Ala. To all of these we extend loving sympathy in their sorrow, and pray that the influence of a Christian father may serve to encourage them to persevere through faith and at last obtain the crown.

Borchet.

A. R. Borehet was born on June 23, 1880; was baptized on September 5, 1913; died on October 29, 1918. He was a charter member of the Jackson Temple congregation, Dickson County, Tenn., and was one of the pillars of the church, which has suffered a decided loss on account of his death. He was large and strong of physical stature and appeared to enjoy the best of health, but was afflicted with car-buncles followed by the influenza, which he was not able to survive. He died in the faith, looking forward to a realization of the Christian hope. It is a comfort to his faithful, Christian wife to know that he was ready to go hence. She sorrows, but not as those who have no hope. What causes sadness, sorrow, and heartaches here is glory and eternal happiness "over there," and we believe he will enjoy that glory and happiness in heaven forever. The funeral services were conducted by Brother M. C. Cayce, assisted by Brother I. B. Bradley.

OSCAR PARHAM.

Skellev.

Howard Skelley, a youth of seven-teen years, five months, and twelve days, and a son of Henry and Mary Skelley, of Boston, Tenn., died on De-cember 29, 1918. Some years ago, very early in life, he obeyed the gospel with commendable earnestness and was punctual to duty until death. He was unusually zealous for one so young, and had begun to help conduct the worship in the first-day-of-the-week meetings. He was a bright and interesting pupil in Brother Oscar Shaw's Advanced Quarterly class till he became teacher of one of the lower grades shortly before his death. school he was a bright student, loved by his teacher and his schoolmates. It was the intention of his parents to send him to David Lipscomb College and thus better fit him for the duties of life. It is, indeed, sad and disap-pointing for one so promising to be taken away in the bloom of life, but we would not call him back from his blessed abode in the paradise of God. OSCAR PARHAM.

Bell.

Sister Carrie Doggett Bell was born on August 25, 1883; obeyed the gospel at about the age of fourteen years; married William B. Bell on December 26, 1906; and died on December 8, 1918. It was my pleasure to know Sister Bell from her girlhood. I knew her as a young lady, and after her marriage I had the pleasure of being in her home several times, where I had the opportunity of noting her becoming conduct as a Christian wife and mother. It was beautiful to behold the quiet, dignified manner in which she went about directing the affairs of her home. She leaves an aged father and mother, two sisters and two broth-ers, a husband and three little ones, and many friends, to thank God for the gift of her life and the blessings of her influence. May our Heavenly Father comfort them. To them we can say in deepest confidence: Sorrow not, even as others who have no hope. After funeral services by Brother W. H. Morton, she was laid to rest in the Columbia cemetery. J. T. CLARK.

Parks.

Fred T, Parks was born in Lake County, Tenn., on February 3, 1893. On July 23, 1911, he was born again, this time into God's family—God's church. On June 28, 1918, he turned his back on his home, loved ones, all that was dear and precious to him, with sorrowful and last, last good-byes, left the home and fireside of his love and went into the army. He died in Germany on February 6, 1919, aged twenty-six years and three days, dying the month in which he was born and within three days of his birthday. Sad, sad to die so far from home, with no loved one there to close his eyes in death! His lieutenant wrote his father as follows: "He was a Christian boy who lived what he be-The knowledge of what he believed and how he lived at home and the testimony of this officer as to how he lived in camp furnish the greatest relief and sweetest consolation that can be given to torn and bleeding hearts. Not one of his relatives knows the spot where quietly and peacefully sleeps the body of Brother Fred; but the spirit has gone to the God who gave it, and the body will rise in judgment to die no more. The deepest sympa-thy of our hearts goes out to his family and the congregation at Jones' Chapel, of which he was a member and which he loved so dearly.

Swindle.

Capye Prevost Swindle was born on February 25, 1887. She was married to Don Swindle on the first Sunday in September, 1907. To this union two children, both boys, were born. In August, 1905, she obeyed the gospel of the Son of God, and lived in the faith until the day of her death, which occurred in the hospital at Dyersburg, Tenn., on May 1, 1919. The doctors Tenn, on May 1, 1919. The doctors said she was doing well and would soon be well enough to return home; so her husband and father went back home, and just after reaching home the sad news was telephoned to them that "Capye is dead." Her sister-inthat "Capye is dead." Her sister-in-law, Miss Nellie Swindle, was the only relative by her bedside when the spirit quit the earthly tabernacle and plumed its pinions for its flight to "fairer worlds on high." She was a true and faithful wife; a painstaking, devoted mother; and a consecrated Christian. Just before the spirit went out, she, with an earnest and piercing gaze of the eyes, said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Fa-ther who is in heaven." The writer conducted the funeral services at Jones' Chapel on the first Lord's day in May, in the presence of a very large audience. The casket was literally audience. The casket was literally covered with flowers, expressive of the love her brethren, sisters, and friends had for her. A loss to her home, to the church, and to the community is sustained in her death. Her part of the work will fall upon others, thus increasing their labor; but the good work must go on, and "some sweet day" all the faithful will meet where sad partings come not. May all her relatives look to the Lord for comfort and consolation in this dark hour. Let us so live that when death comes

Floyd.

In Tullahoma, Tenn., at the home of her father, the beloved Elder J. D. Floyd, Sister Emma Floyd departed to be with the Master whom she had long pe with the Master whom she had long and loyingly served, on the evening of February 27, 1919. Sister Emma was born in October, 1866. She obeyed the gospel in her early girlhood, being baptized by her father at Flat Creek, in Bedford County. Save a few years spent in school and teaching, most of her life was lived and given to her her life was lived and given to her parents, home, and the Flat Creek congregation and community. She was unusually strong in body, mind, and Christian character. She was a helper indeed at home, assisting and caring for her parents as a true and faithful child. She was a teacher of children in the work of the church many years. She helped always, and often led the congregation in singing, and with thoughtfulness and devotion assisted in every good work the congregation undertook. Moreover, she was one of the first and best helpers of the sick and unfortunate of all classes. Nearly three years ago her health gave way, and ever since she had been a great sufferer, but always a patient one. When it was known that Sister Emma could not recover, the family moved to Tullahoma, where the aged parents could have the help of another daughter and her children and where the very best care could be given the precious girl. On Saturday, March 1, followed by relatives and friends, the body was taken to Flat Creek for burial. Much as others feel the loss of this sister and friend, the greatest loss is to the aged parents; but for them there remain the comforting promises of the word of God, and they will patiently and with hope await the time when God shall call them home to be with him and the loved ones gone on. As members of a great family, let us all remember Brother and Sister Floyd in this sorrow and share it with them as those who love God's C. E. WOOLDRIDGE. own.

Thorp Spring Christian College.

BY W. F. LEDLOW.

At the close of the Civil War, Texas greatly needed men. The greater part of her young men had fallen in battle and the others had not had the opportunity to attend school. The country needed educated men—men not only educated in brain, but in heart as well.

Two young men, full of zeal and love for man and God, were moved to undertake this much-needed work—the education of the young. They felt that no other profession offered such great opportunities and that none other could pay such dividends for the time invested. These young men were Addison and Randolph Clark.

In 1869 the Clark brothers opened a school in Fort Worth, then a small town. They were not able to enroll many students, but they saw that the work was great and fully resolved to give their lives to the schoolroom. In 1871 Professor Cook, attracted by its natural beauty, its remoteness from the city, its most excellent environment, its healthful climate, and its fine and abundant water supply, established a school at Thorp Spring, which is forty miles from Fort Worth, one mile from the Brazos River, and on the banks of Stroud Creek. Mr. Thorp was one of the first settlers in the country. Near his home there is a strong sulphur spring. Hence the name, "Thorp Spring." The school was called "Thorp College."

In 1873 Randolph Clark was induced to go to Thorp Spring with a view of establishing a permanent school there. He carefully studied the location and its environment and convinced himself that the school and its atmosphere could be made ideal for his purposes. He explained in detail to his brother the advantages as he saw them and urged him to join him in the work, and suggested that the new school be named "Add-Ran College" in honor of Addison Clark's little son who had recently died. The plan appealed to Addison, and in 1874 he joined his brother Randolph at Thorp Spring. The Fort Worth school was discontinued. The school at Thorp Spring was chartered as the "Add-Ran College." The college opened its first session with eight students, only one or two of whom are alive now.

The new location appealed to young people, and parents considered the place well suited for their children. The institution grew rapidly and soon became known as one of the best colleges in Texas.

The college has changed its name several times and has operated under different charters. It was established as "Add-Ran College;" in 1887 it was changed to "Add-Ran Christian University;" about 1900 it became "Texas Christian University;" later it was called "Jarvis Institute," then "Jarvis College;" and in 1910 it became "Thorp Spring Christian College."

The funds that created this historic school were largely contributed by the Clarks. They sold their homes in Fort Worth and lands at other places and put the money into the school; they sold scholarships-board and tuition-and kept the young people in their homes in payment, and put this money into the school. The property that the Clarks sold, the proceeds of which were donated to the college, is now estimated to be worth more than two million dollars. There were but few donations from others.

In 1890 the Clarks deeded the college as a gift to the church. The committee that invoiced the property at that time estimated it to be worth forty-six thousand dollars. The college building was then about one-half its present size. When the increased size of the building is considered, the advanced cost of material and labor, the new laboratories, the library, the park, the new dormitory now ready to be erected, the new music hall, and the general equipment, the college holdings are now worth one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

"Uncle Joe Clark," as he was called, was the father of Addison and Randolph. He was the last to move to Thorp Spring. He acted as the business manager for the school and at times taught some Bible classes. Those who knew him loved him. His name is often heard still, and his memory still lives. His body sweetly and quietly rests in the tomb less than a mile from the school he loved and helped to build. Addison sleeps near

When Thorp Spring was at its best. five hundred students were in attendance each year. Three hundred of these were boarders. There were eighty-two counties in Texas and six outside States represented. The school had twenty-five professors.

During the forty years that Randolph Clark taught at Thorp Spring there were approximately ten thousand students enrolled, and not more than ten died in school. Such a remarkable record shows how healthful the place is.

We feel that our location is ideal. In all ages of the world the private schools have now and then sought the quiet and retired country life. Some of the strongest schools in America to-day are remote from the cities. Dartmouth College, I am told, is seventy-five miles from a city of any size. There are less than twelve hundred people in the village in which it is located, and which is across the river from the railroad. Its faculty praise its fine atmosphere. The Dartmouth spirit has become a proverb. This is a great school. It has more than six million dollars in material assets and has an annual enrollment of fifteen hundred students.

Thorp Spring Christian College has a similar location-one just as good as Dartmouth. Our college atmosphere is the best and our Thorp Spring spirit is unexcelled. We have no saloons, no picture shows, no dance halls, no pool rooms, no dens of vice. We have nothing but the church and the school. Our faculty and students create the environment. Our associates are the very best.

Its beautiful hills, trees, and landscapes; its fine water, bath pools, and parks; its wholesome atmosphere and healthful climate—these make Thorp Spring a fine place to live and a finer place to study. The spirit of the place is the thing.

Randolph Clark recently said: "I would not exchange the locality for a school for any city that I know. The school atmosphere at Thorp Spring cannot be created in a city, physically, morally, or spiritually. All it needs 's two hundred thousand dollars and it would be ideal.

Commending Brother Wainwright.

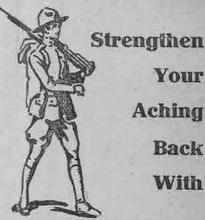

Fort Worth, Texas, May 16, 1919 .-This is to certify that Brother J. E. Wainwright, now of Pollock, La., was a member of the Glenwood church of Christ for about two years, until recently he moved to the mission field where he is now located, believing it his duty to go and preach the gospel to regions where it had not gone. Brother Wainwright and his family were loved by all who knew them for their work's sake, for his earnestness and ability to preach the word. We have always found Brother Wainwright to be a good, clean, dependable man. And now they are in this mission field, and they must have help to stay there, because he has had quite a lot of sickness which made his expenses very heavy.

The Many Mysteries of Nature

BY L. W. BOWER, M. D.

You can take an onion seed and a pansy seed, and plant them side by side in the same spot of ground. In one case, you get an onion, with its peculiarly strong odor, and in the other you get a flower of care beauty. You can plant a poppy seed care beauty. Systematic Evangelism.

BY H. J. STAFFORD,

It seems to me that Brother F. E. Exum and Brother C. C. Merritt, in the Gospel Advocate of May 1, gave us some excellent pointers along the line of missions that are well worth our prayerful consideration and that should create immediate action upon the part of all God-loving people who were privileged to read them.

1 am very much impressed with Brother Exum's idea of a system-not a society or board, but a system. There is no line of work that can successfully be done without some system. Then, how can we expect to carry the gospel to the lost of earth without a system? Why, in heaven's name, can't we do some mission work?

If I remember correctly, the readers of the Gospel Advocate contributed last year around fourteen thousand dollars to the war sufferers' fund, and a like sum in 1917. This year, so far, they have contributed between seven thousand and eight thousand dollars. This is commendable and encouraging, and is, indeed, a noble work; but is this work more important than carrying out the great commission? The war has taught us a lesson in giving. People have given more than was ever given before, yet they have prospered more. And now that the war is over, why cease to give? If the Christian people were to give for missions what they have for war work and relief, we could have gospel preachers in every country in the world, and many for destitute work in our own fair land. I am sick, tired, and disgusted at the progress we make along this line-we who pretend to be God's children and claim Jesus as our brother, then to be so slack with his blessed commandment. As for me, I have always been handicapped, not being financially able to do anything that would seem worth while; however, since I have forsaken the dangerous sectarian doctrines and obeyed the gospel, I have tried to be consistent in giving, as much so as in any other part of worship. But I have never understood how men with hoarded money, fine houses and land and automobiles, could sleep at night or invite God's blessings upon them, hold on to their treasures, while the blessed Christ goes begging, some abler brother please take this matter up, devise a plan that is scriptural, and let us get to work?

One's Career.

One's career ought to be one continual increasing accumulation of victory forces, of triumphant power. Every step of a man's progress ought to show an improvement, an increase in personal power, ought to mean growth.

There is no reason why a man should be permanently set back because a financial panic or the shifting tide of population has destroyed his business. The man himself should move on steadily, persistently, his life Independent, broadening and deepening, growing more powerful every day, accumulating more strength from his new and enlarged experiences.

Success and failure are character revealers. Success very often brings out a man's weaknesses. If he attains wealth, he can afford to indulge in his desires, indulge in luxuries, fads and fancies. If he attains a position of power, his domineering, aggressive qualities may be brought into action.

Failure also exposes a man's weaknesses. If he is a coward, if he lacks stam na and grit, he will quickly show it when adversity overtakes him, just as he will show the opposite qualities if he is brave and steadfast and deter-What a man does after he fails indicates how much lime there is in his backbone.-Nautilus.

Parents and Children. No. 2.

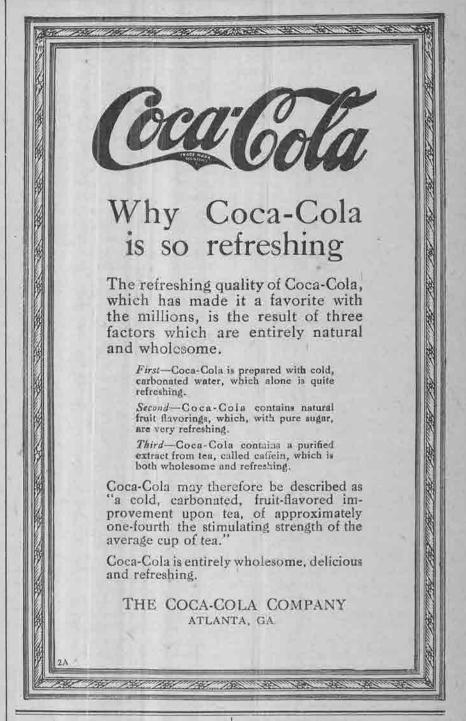

BY TICE ELKINS.

It has been a long time since the first installment of "Parents and Children;" but now, as promised, I will say what I can on the influence of parents over their children.

This is made too little of by many otherwise good fathers and mothers. and they are very careless of their examples, not thinking that what they do and say will take hold on the child, I speak from sorrowful experience, and nothing has ever been demonstrated with greater clearness than the fact that the child is but a duplicate of the man. Many years ago I became addicted to the tobacco habit. For twelve years I chewed and spit the filthy stuff on the clothing and in the faces of decent people, and made myself just as disgusting to people of refinement as those who use it now make themselves to me. My wife begged, cried, and pleaded with me to stop it. She watched it undermine my health, sap my strength, and break down my vocal organs until my voice would often fail me while preaching, and I would have to stop. She saw me with the terrible white plague, heard the physician tell me that I could not recover until I stopped the use of tobacco, and then pleaded with me to stop using it; and seeing the end of a common suicide before me if I persisted in its use, I stopped.

For seven years I have tried to conquer the habit, and, thank God, I have at last succeeded. But what of it all? My oldest boy saw me in this slavery for ten years before I quit it. He thought it was great for "Daddy" to do this. He wanted to be like his father. He began, when only ten years old, to tamper with the deadly cigarette. I tried to prevail upon him to cease, but he met me with this: "Why, you smoke, papa!" What could I do? But since freed from the curse I have tried all ways known to me to free him, but I find it all in vain. He is bound hand and foot with the habit, and who is to blame? Some one will say: "Perhaps he inherited the appetite." No doubt he did, as our people for ages used tobacco; but, as God is my judge, I tell you that there is a power more potent than heredity -the power of "parental example." If my child had never seen me a slave to the habit, I could frankly and with a clean conscience strive to save him, and have a chance to succeed; but, as it is, having lost my chance in this matter, I can do nothing with him, so far as this is concerned.

Every reader can call to mind some one who has been ruined or saved by the power of parental influence. In my boyhood days many fathers kept a jug of liquor in the house, took a dram before breakfast, and made a toddy for the visitor, and gave the boy—God pity him!—the sugar from the bottom of the glass! The boy broke his mother's heart, brought his father to shame, died a drunkard, and sleeps today without a rock to mark his grave; and the little mound stands a monument to the ruinous power of his father's example.

But to the Bible. "And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the way of his father, and in the way of his mother, . . . who made Israel to sin." (I Kings 22: 52.) It is ever thus: when the father and mother do evil, the child will do evil. But again—and my heart bleeds for this man, evil though he was, for he is not to blame alone: "He also walked in the ways of the house of

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear,

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a thoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

Ahab: for his mother was his counselor to do wickedly," (2 Chron, 22: 3.) O my soul! Was there ever written in history a sadder statement? This text stands as a witness to the blighting power of the example of a bad mother. I once heard a mother say: "Son, take this pistol and go out and shoot that man to death; he told a lie on you." I heard another mother say: "Here, son, is a dollar; go and get you some whisky for Christmas." O, the evil of such a mother's influence!

But I mention the most shocking, most horrible example of parental influence that has ever been recorded. John the Baptist had stood up before the greatest sinners in the land and as with a hot iron had branded them for their sins. They hated him until the infamous woman whom he rebuked for her adulterous alliance with her brother-in-law saw a chance for vengeance. Enamored with Herodias' daughter's sensuous and vulgar exhibition, called "dancing," the king promised her anything she should ask. "And she, being instructed of her mother, said, Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger." (Matt. 14: 8.) As long as the world stands this story will continue to tell of a bad mother's influence.

But there is a "silver lining." And the Lord was with Jehosaphat, because he walked in the first ways of his father David, and sought not unto Baalim." (2 Chron. 17: 3.) "The first ways of his father David!" Why? David walked close to God then; and his example led his son in the same way, and God loved and blessed him! If every father would do so, then his son, when grown, would say "no" to the tempter. He would say: "I am walking in the way of father and mother." How grand! "And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his father Amaziah did." (2 Chron, 26: 4.)

Paul's joy was unbounded when he remembered the unfeigned faith that was in Timothy, which had been handed down to him from his mother and grandmother, showing that the great apostle recognized the power of "parental example." And now, if we would have our children to honor our old age and grace the world with wisdom and truth, we must set before them a good example. Who has not heard the story of the boy who, seeing his father mistreat his aged grandfather for years, was one day engaged in whittling out a wooden spoon, and when asked by his father what he was doing, replied: "I am making a spoon to feed you with when you are old, like you do grandpa now." How many fathers to-day are sorrowing and complaining of the conduct of their children, of neglect, of misuse, who, if they could remember the long ago. would recall similar deeds they did!

The child is "the man in the making." Then, how carefully we ought to live, that they make men who will not bring shame to our faces and sorrow to our hearts! All boys who have done wrong did not learn it at home or from parents; but some from the kindest and cleanest of homes have gone out and mingled with the great "trainer," the world, and the world bested the home and walked away with the prize. Before letting them go, let us fill their minds with knowledge; with reverence for God, love for his word, respect for his cause, and regard for his people; and with an adoration for father and mother that will be to him a shield and buckler.

Good That Is Evil Spoken Of.

Our good is often evil spoken of because of our thoughtlessness. The woman who looked askance at a stranger who had been shown into her pew did not really mean to hurt that stranger's feelings, to send her away from church that day with the inward resolution never again to enter its doors, but such was the effect of her lack of thought, Our good is often evil spoken of because of the unnecessary harshness of our manner. It is an off-repeated excuse of offenders of this kind: "I was born with an unfortunate disposition; I am brusque, and have no fineness of touch; it is hereditary." This is an attempt to dodge responsibility, to transfer the censure to our ancestors-who cannot defend themselves. Harshness of manner may be temperamental, but it is hardly constitutional. It is an ungracious and harmful habit, and it can be cured .- Exchange.

Edifying as the Need May Be

We Think We Are Thankful.

If we should put the question to each individual heart, "Are you grateful for the blessings which you have received?" I have no doubt but in every case the answer would be in the affirmative. If we should ask all those who believe in the practice of returning thanks systematically and prayerfull, to indicate it by standing up, all would stand. If we should press the inquiry by asking, "Why are you thankful?" each would state offhand some substantial reason for rejoicing. But if we should ask each one just what sublime tokens of real gratitude you could lay to-day upon the altar of God's service, just what substantial evidence of a truly thankful spirit you could produce, the answer would not be so quick nor nearly so decisive. We may save a good deal of unnecessary argument by admitting that most of us are in a measure intelligently aware of God's blessings toward us, and that we believe in the thankful disposition, and that after the usual fashion we do on certain occasions seek to express our thankfulness. Instead of consuming our time proving these admitted premises, let us sound the well of our gratitude and see just how deep it is, and by searching the Scriptures let us find out for ourselves just what sacrifices real gratitude demands of us. 0 0 0

But Are We Thankful?

The spirit of thankfulness as portrayed by the teaching of Jesus Christ has three essential relations-those to the gift, to the giver, and to the beneficiary. There are three attitudes which men may sustain toward the blessings they receive in this world, and all of these are illustrated by the actions of certain persons who came within the circle of our Savior's beneficence. There is the attitude sustained by the ungrateful nine whose unconfessed appreciation ended with their own selfish enjoyment; there is the attitude of the legalistic Pharisee whose rigorous decimal tax on his possessions represented the sum total of his gratitude; and, like an oasis in a desert of bigotry and pride, there is the attitude of the Samaritan whose appreciation loudly proclaimed itself in thanksgiving and expressed itself in action. We should remember that these characters are typical. There are thousands of people to-day who receive the good things of life as a matter of course: their position, they think, entitles them to these benefits. There are thousands to whom gratitude is only a formal matter, adequately expressed, they think, by returning thanks occasionally in some conventional or mechanical way. There are, comparatively speaking, a few to whom gratitude is a spiritual grace that values both the gift and its significance. Whether we will it or not, our treatment of every benefit we enjoy, whether physical, financial, intellectual, social, or spiritual, places us in one of these classes. Christian people cannot afford to belong to but one of these, and that is the class of the truly grateful who believe in a constant and a prayerful spirit of thanksgiving. It is not a matter of a yearly proclamation, a yearly resume of the good things of life, a yearly suspense from labor. It is not a matter of a yearly feast, but a daily observance. God does not send his blessings in yearly installments. He sends them every day. Every day the message comes: "Be ye thankful." Every day we should "let the word of Christ dwell in" us "richly, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in "our "hearts to the Lord." (Col. 3: 16.)

"Where Are the Nine?"

In the matter of gratitude, we should also consider our relations to the giver. Again we refer for illustration to the results of our Savior's miracle. He asked the questions: "Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?" Before they had sought him eagerly, they had cried out for help: "Jesus, master, have mercy upon us." They had passed from his sight in utter forgetfulness of their benefactor. The Pharisee thanked a God whom he believed to be satisfied with what the law allowed. The Samaritan-thank God for him and for his noble exampleleaped from the sense of the gift to the thought of the giver and instantly searched for the mediator of his blessing. Because every good and perfect gift comes from God (James 1: 17), we can receive no blessing in this world that does not compel some sort of an attitude toward him. Gifts are manifestations of the divine love and are designed to lead us into spiritual relations with our Maker. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoseever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life." (John 3: 16.) This great declaration is supplemented by the apostle Paul's reasoning: "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not also with him freely give us all things?" (Rom. 8: 32.) But we should mind the conditions. Unless we believe on Jesus Christ, the Son, whom the Father gave for our redemption; unless we obey his commandments and are baptized into his church, the Father's monumental love and the Father's precious gift, so far as we are concerned, are useless and unnecessary. If our attitude toward the gift does not compel us to become the sons and daughters of God and brothers and sisters of Christ, the gift is empty and bestowed in vain.

Woman Suffrage.

BY AN AMERICAN.

Will you please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to woman suffrage? This question is now before Congress, and no doubt but what it will be settled in a short time; and the time to talk pro or con is while the battle is on. To talk of this question intelligently will take us back to the garden of Eden. There we find the first woman. Man was first created, and then woman was created as a companion for man. Coming down through the antedlluvian, or creative, age to the flood, and on through the patriarchal age to the giving of the law at Mount Sinai, a period of twenty-five hundred and thirteen years, all women that were in favor with God looked to man as their protector; and at the giving of the law at Sinai, the tenets of this law were ingrafted into the Mosaic law, which guided Israel from Mount Sinai to the cross, a period of about fifteen hundred years. During Christ's three years' ministry he chose twelve men and taught them concerning the kingdom he came to establish, and prepared them to go forth, after his death, burial, and resurrection, as ambassadors of that kingdom. We claim to be a Christian nation; and, to be such, we are supposed to follow the law of Christ's kingdom as proclaimed by the ambassadors of that kingdom. If not, why not? Let us listen now and hear what they have to say on this feminine question.

Paul, in writing to Timothy, says: "I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior; who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth. For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time. Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle, (I speak the truth in Christ, and lie not;) a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity. I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting. In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works. Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. Notwithstanding she shall be saved in childhearing, if they continue In faith and charity and holiness with sobriety." (1 Tim. 2.)

Again, Paul, in writing to the church at Corinth, uses this language: "Let your women keep silence in the churches [congregations]: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church [assembly]." (1 Cor. 14: 34, 35.)

And again, Paul, in writing to the congregation at Ephesus, uses this language: "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the savior of the body. Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish. So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that leveth his wife leveth himself. For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church: for we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church. Nevertheless let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband." (Eph. 5: 22-33.)

Now let us listen to one of the apostles, who is recorded as being first spokesman on that ever memorable day, the first Pentecost after the crucifixion and resurrection: Likewise, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, they also may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives; while they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear. Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection to their own husbands: even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement. Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honor unto the wife, us unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; that your prayers be not hindered." (1 Pet. 3: 1-7.)

Paul, writing to Timothy, uses this language: "I will therefore that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, give none occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully." (1 Tim. 5: 14.) In writing to the congregation at Philippl, he says: "Those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God of peace shall be with you." (Phil. 4: 9.) Again, in writing to the congregation of the Thessalonians, he says: "And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed." (2 Thess. 3: 14.)

Paul admonishes Titus in this language: "But speak thou the things which become sound doctrine: that the aged men be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience. The aged women likewise, that they be in behavior as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things; that they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed. Young men likewise exhort to be sober-minded." (Tit, 2:, 1-6.)

In commenting on the above scriptures, are not those who are preaching and talking woman suffrage as we hear it expounded at this day in direct contradiction, and are they not trying to annul what inspired men have taught about it? If they are not, what are they trying to do? I look upon this question, that to enact it into law will degrade woman and she will forget the high and lofty sphere in life that our all-wise Creator has ordained for her. I am conscious of the fact that, religiously speaking, we are passing through a period of time in which barriers seemingly almost impregnable have been broken down and a brotherly kindness has permeated the darkened horizon; but the gospel is the same to-day as it was when proclaimed eighteen hundred and eighty-two years ago, without multiplication, addition, or subtraction.

With Reference to the Follies of Men.

BY LEE JACKSON.

I had started to write as a caption for this article, "God's Wisdom and Man's Folly," but upon reflection I at once realized that such a heading would demand too much for a man of small capacity, and also that the subject-matter, to be properly handled, would mean a large book rather than a short article. In truth, leaving out everything relative to the wisdom of God, the follies of men would require several volumes. So I changed my heading in order to keep within the bounds of reasonable limits.

As soon as I began to think about the follies of men, I drifted into thinking about war-war in general and our present war in particular. Has it been generally noticed that there is a deep-seated and uncontrollable tendency on the part of human beings to keep on the popular side of all issues? Only a short while since a lifelong friend of mine reminded me that the number of people who have no individuality of character is very large. So many are airaid that they will be something, do something, or say something that will incur the disapproval of the majority that they are always on the lookout to catch the current of public opinion. This is a frailty of human nature. And a good way to start a current of public sentiment is to fix conditions so that people can get good wages for their labor and good prices for whatever they may have to sell. This reminds me that a number of my neighbors who in the beginning were talking vociferously against war eventually reached the point where they were in favor of war, making the plea that we were in a righteous war and claiming that God had raised up a Moses to lead us out of our Egyptian bondage. A great deal of this was being said by men who did not have to go into the army as fighters and who were in a position to make money out of war conditions. The young men who knew that they would have to do the fighting and the dying, if it became necessary for any dying to be done, were probably as loyal and patriotic as the rest of us, but they did less talking.

A good Baptist preacher, a friend of mine, and whom I highly esteem as a man, but whose judgment I am afraid to trust, felt that it was his duty to say something opposite to the war. So he wrote a series of articles for a Mississippi paper, setting forth the claim that it was the mission of Jesus to make the world safe for democracy, but the condition of the age and the opposition of the Jews had thwarted his purpose, and so it had remained for this present age, under the administration of our own government, to carry out this benign purpose. I knew that the man was talking as the foolish talk; but he had public sentiment on his side of the issue, and no one at that time was permitted to make an effective reply. One afternoon I heard a Methodist preacher making a speech in the interest of the first Liberty Loan. He represented the hosts of heaven and the powers thereof as being in a gigantic struggle with the Kaiser of Germany, and threatened every one with the curse of heaven who failed to come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. This was some more foolishness; but most of the crowd accepted it, and the rest of us grinned and endured it. We were willing and anxious to help the government, but we did not fancy being compelled to listen to a crazy man misrepresent the Lord. While we recognized our obligation to be patriotic and loyal toward our government, yet we could not understand why it was necessary for us to be made sick with so many of these silly harangues. We longed for the government to be able to send us sensible, soberminded men, who could explain matters to us in a straightforward manner. We listened to a wounded English soldier who was brought over from his own country to enlist our sympathies and make us appreciate our kinship to the English. After hearing the good man talk for half an hour, I decided that for practical results it would have been better for him to have stayed at home. His home government was either very short on orators or else they were deeply imbued with the notion that the American people would pay good money for the privilege of looking at an Englishman who had seen fighting in France. I expect that this last was the ruling motive that prompted them to send the young man across. Apparently there is a humbug suited to all classes of people. Even great men can be humbugged, provided you go far enough away from home to bring in the humbug. Of course there are people who cannot be humbugged with sleight-of-hand shows and monkeys. It takes the roar of cannon and the march of great armies to humbug the great leaders of the world. Satan has every imaginable kind of a trap in which to catch men.

The great sinfulness of mankind has been demonstrated through the long centuries by the prevalence of wars; and through all the centuries of time war has shown its power to transform human beings into flends. They are telling us that this present war—the war just ended—has been the most atrocious and cruel of all wars. The student of history knows to the contrary. The history of Europe, to say nothing of the cruel and devastating wars on the continent of Asia, has been one long record of cruel wars. This recent war has been more extensive in its scope and more far-reaching in its effects, perhaps, but other wars have been just as atrocious and cruel. War is a great crime against all that is highest and best in humanity's life; it prepares men for the commission of every other sort of crime. And it may be safely said that in the older cities of Europe, such places as Florence, Milan, Rome, in Italy, and Coblenz, in Germany, as well as many other cities, there is not a square yard of earth upon which at some time in the history of the past somebody has not died a violent death there. And the end is not yet. It requires reasons as high as heaven and as deep as hell to justify the sacrifice of human lives upon battle fields, and yet the number of lives that have been thus sacrificed through the ambitions of the world's leaders is perhaps ten times as great as now exists on the earth.

Helping and Hindering the Cause We Love. No. 1. BY EARL M. HODSON.

We who are Christians only may love the cause of Christ with an undivided love such as the denominationalist, as such, can never know; for, as far as I have been able to judge, he must, consciously or unconsciously, if he be loyal to his denomination, place it above the cause of our Master. This is but natural; for as human beings we all love those things which we ourselves have made or assisted in making above that which some one else has made, even though it be formed by our Creator himself.

Loving that cause as I do and as we all do, and not being a public minister, I take this method of bringing before the readers of the Gospel Advocate some suggestions for helping that cause and of mentioning a few things that are hindering the progress of the work.

GIVING.

What the Bible has been saying to us through all these centuries on giving has not been realized by those who are Christians only. While a few have given liberally, the greater number by far have failed to add to the Lord's portion that which is his own. We have despised the begging resorted to by man-made organizations, and in doing so we have overlooked the necessity for liberality that the cause might prosper; then, too, our public servants have hesitated to teach the truth of the matter lest they be considered as begging for themselves, or, as the world puts it, "preaching for money," and, in the last generation, by those preachers in rural sections who have themselves had homes and in many instances an abundance of this world's goods have left the subject untaught.

Personally, it seems to me that, as Christians, we cannot afford to give less than the tithe, since the cause we love is as far above that of the old law as is the blood of Christ above that of bulls and goats. The numerous scriptures on giving can as easily be found by the reader as can those on baptism or on falth, and if given here would not be read by any except those eager to know their duty. But let your attention be called to one passage, Heb. 7: 6, 7; study it carefully, and, many wiser men than I to the contrary, see if you do not think it would teach that we pay tithes to Him "of whom it is witnessed that he liveth."

No one doubts that the reason for the great spread of man-made creeds is the liberality of their support, and to-day the Methodist people are canvassing their vast membership to enlist at once one million men and women who will tithe their incomes that their faith may spread. Is the simple cause of Christ less worthy? Giving at least brings with it a greater love for the cause than we can know otherwise, and especially if we must sacrifice to do so. If all of those who are Christians only tithe, there will be no lack. God help us thus to aid the cause we love and for which our Savior shed his blood.

MISSIONS.

If our ministers-and by "ministers" I mean what the word means, servants of the church-if our ministers have failed to teach the Scriptures on giving, how much more have they neglected missions both at home and in foreign lands! Who has told our congregations that almost threefourths of the world's population does not so much as know there is a Christ, that the Bible is unknown to all these? Our preachers have not done so, and I yet have to hear my first utterance from any of them from the public stand as to the importance of this great work. Who is taking the Bible by thousands of copies, both in whole and in parts, to dark Africa, idol-worshiping India, China, and Japan? Not our people, but the denominations. Who is raising five million dollars now to further their already great work of sending teachers and preachers with Bibles to these people? The Methodists. Who is doing equally as much for their own creeds? Both the Baptists and the Presbyterians. Who is sacrificing that these heathen may know something of Christ? The missionaries of these creeds. And what are our brethren doing? They are fighting those creeds here at home to please their hearers, who in almost every instance are already convinced that the sects are wrong. Those creeds and errors ought to be fought; but it is probable that a hundred honest men and women would have given them up, to one that has, if half of the sermons preached had been directed to sending the gospel to foreign lands where it is unknown. Men and women here, bound to error, harden their hearts when they see that the truth is not being carried to the dark places of earth; and when error has begun to flourish there, can we teach against it more successfully there than here? Would Christ have us wait until the teachers of error have borne the hardships as pioneers and planted error and truth, that we might go then and pick out the error among those who are beginning to learn of the Way?

May God help us to aid and not hinder the cause we love by teaching the truth to all the world, and may we not hinder its spread by doing nothing for missions.

PRAYER.

If you will mark on the margin of your Testament as you read it each passage that refers to prayer, either directly or indirectly, you will find before you have read Revelation your number has gone well above seventy. A subject so important needs more attention than it receives. Well do I remember a sermon preached by a man now doing, as always, most faithful work. His theme was prayer. Among the hearers were two faithful ones of a large denomination. When the sermon was finished, these two said: "Surely God sent us here to-day to hear this sermon; we thought you people did not believe in prayer." How many others, faithful to their creed, believe this, too! And why? Have we not men who are preachers-and devout men, too-who fail to kneel at night and at morning before their Master in prayer? What conclusion must sectarians or the sinners reach when they know this? And they do know this. It is true to-day as in the past that the man of prayer is the man of power with God. No reference is made here to the prayers uttered to be heard of men with a voice as loud as the false prophets were compelled to use. Can we not help the cause we love by more earnest secret prayer? Why should the Christian become too busy for a few words from God's Book each day and a moment of prayer at his feet?

And, mothers, why do you neglect to teach those little ones of yours at your knee the little prayer:

"Now I lay me down to sleep; I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep. If I should die before I wake, I pray thee, Lord, my soul to take. In Jesus' name. Amen."

If thus they pray each night before the years of accountability, they will not be long when that time comes turning to Him as "Our Father;" and then at the last, when the evening of life draws nigh, they will truly turn to rest at at his feet, wearied and vexed with the cares of life, as in those innocent days they sought sleep and rest at your knee.

Well knows he who uses to consider that our faith and knowledge thrive by exercise, as well as our limbs and complexion. Truth is compared in Scripture to a streaming fountain; if her waters flow not in a perpetual progression, they sicken into a muddy pool of conformity and tradition.—John Milton.

You who are at the summits of society, and you who are at its base; you who teach, and you who learn; you who command, and you who obey; masters and servants, old and young, unlettered and scholars—each of you may bear his witness to our Almighty Savior.—H. P. Liddon.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Mrs. E. T. Austelle sends in the following statement and asks for advice:

There is a sister whose daughter also is a member, who told me last week that her mother was a divorced woman, but did not state the cause of the separation. (1) Should we go to her (she is married and living with her second husband) and try to learn the cause of her separation and divorce? What is the right thing to do? (2) Did we do wrong in taking the Supper with her last Lord's day? We want to do nothing but what is right, and come to you for advice.

(1) There certainly can be no impropriety in finding out whether the sister is living in adultery or is scripturally married to her second husband. It is proper to make such inquiry, and the elders should do it in a very quiet way. All should be done with proper respect to God's authority and with the desire to honor and glorify him. (2) Certainly you did no wrong in meeting and worshiping God on the first day of the week, as the Holy Spirit directs. Really you are communing with Christ and with those who are walking in the light, as he is in the light. Virtue can never have communion with sin. Paul tells us of "the false brethren privily brought in." There are hypocrites in the church who come to the Lord's table. True Christians are not responsible for their hypocrisy, and they should not neglect to serve the Lord simply because there are hypocrites.

Mrs. Lela Reed writes in reference to the "Holiness" people and their peculiar procedure;

The so-called "Holiness" people are taking the day here, and almost every one seems to be in a torn-up condition. They dance, shout, sing, pray, and talk in an unknown tongue, all at the same time. Even small children dance and shout. Now, is it wrong for Christians to go to hear them? I have been to hear them twice. The people seem to be almost wild about them; they come for miles to see what they do.

The Bible does not authorize the procedure described by the querist. Miraculous gifts and speaking with tongues vanished away and gave place to the "most excellent way" when God's revelation was completed and given to men to guide them in the way of light and truth. As we now have a complete revelation of God's will, we no longer need inspired interpreters to interpret the language of people who speak in an unknown tongue. We have no such interpretation. Those who lead people into such error and follies will eventually be destroyed. The wise thing to do is to take the word of God and be guided by it. "And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits and unto the wizards, that chirp and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God? on behalf of the living should they seek unto the dead? To the law and to the testimony! if they speak not according to this word, surely there is no morning for them." (Isa. 8: 19, 20.) I certainly would not feel justified in doing anything that would encourage such ignorance and superstition. It is discouraging that people have so little respect for the word of God.

E. J. Pea, Route 1, Murray, Ky., in a further search for light, sends the following:

When was the "Sabbath day," "the Lord's day," changed from the seventh day of the week to the first day of the week? I have been a diligent searcher for light on this subject for some time, but have failed thus far to find any substantial proof. I trust you can give me some light.

I have never been able to discover from the Bible when the Sabbath day, or the seventh day of the week, was changed to the Lord's day, or the first day of the week. I am sure that the Bible does not warrant any such teaching. We learn from the book of Genesis that "in the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." On the seventh day he rested. Gen. 2: 3 says: "God blessed the seventh day, and hallowed it; because that in it he rested from all his works which God had created and made." This was God's Sabbath, or rest day. The Sabbath was given to the Jews after they had been brought out of Egyptian bondage. Deut. 5: 15 declares: "And thou shalt remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and Jehovah thy God brought thee out thence by a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm: therefore Jehovah thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." The Gentile world has never been commanded to keep the Sabbath day, and it was not given to the Jews to observe until many hundred years after God had created and hallowed it. The Sabbath remained in force to the Jews until the old covenant was nullified, until the middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile was broken down. When Christ died on the cross, he "blotted out the bond written in ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us; and he hath taken it out of the way, nailing it to the cross." (Col. 2: 14.) After Christ ascended up on high, he sent back the Holy Spirit on the first day of the week, on the day of Pentecost, and established the church. He also rose from the dead on the first day of the week. From the establishment of the church on the day of Pentecost until the present we find the disciples of Christ observing the first day of the week instead of the seventh day. They keep it in commemoration of the fact that on the first day of the week Christ rose from the dead. Thus we see the Holy Spirit, which Christ promised to his apostles, came on the first day of the week. Christ rose from the dead on the first day of the week, and after this we find Christians assembling to worship on the first day of the week. There is not an exception to this in the Epistles. Hence, we are not to observe the Sabbath in commemoration of the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage, but we keep the first day of the week in commemoration of the Lord's resurrection from the tomb. "And upon the first day of the week, when we were gathered together to break bread, Paul discoursed with them, intending to depart on the morrow; and prolonged his speech until midnight." (Acts 20: 7.)

The large liberty of others displeaseth us, and yet we will not have our own desires denied us. We will have others kept under by strict laws, but in no sort will we ourselves be restrained; and thus it appeareth, how seldom we weigh our neighbor in the same balance with ourselves.—Thomas à Kempis.

The day has taken homeward flight,
To rest, O Lord, with thee;
Of all it bears on wings of light,
May thine the honor be.
The night steals on, the dawn is far,

But faith has no alarms;
Still underneath our weakness are
The everlasting arms.

From storm and noonday heat thou hast Covert and shadow been, Where, faint or weary, we might cast

Where, faint or weary, we might cas Our trouble, toil, and sin.

O Christ, whose will it was to bear The whole world's bitter shame, The love some burden seeks to share That follows in thy name.

Unto thy will our days be given, To thee our evening praise; Who art Eternal Light of Heaven, Thy children's Day of days.

Repentance.

BY J. C. M'Q.

When we remember that God commands men to repent, we at once realize the importance of doing so. The Savior commanded the apostles, as recorded in Luke 24: 46, 47, as follows: "Thus it is written, that the Christ should suffer, and rise again from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name unto all the nations, beginning from Jerusalem." Again, the Holy Spirit declares in Acts 17: 30: "The times of ignorance therefore God overlooked; but now he commandeth men that they should all everywhere repent." Luke 13: 3 declares: "I tell you, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all in like manner perish." These passages show conclusively and clearly the necessity and Importance of repentance if we would be saved, if we would enjoy the newborn joy of sins forgiven. If we would be justified in the sight of God and useful and happy even in this world, we must repent of all wrongdoing. So long as sin dwells in the system, so long as we harbor and nurse evildoing, so long will we be miserable and wretched in this life, to say nothing of the life to come.

May I say that God, in all his goodness, mercy, and love, cannot and will not forgive an impenitent soul? If God were to forgive the impenitent, the angels would naturally expect to be thrown out of heaven and the demons in hell would shout for joy, expecting to be transformed into angels of light and to sing praises around the throne of God. God so hates sin, and it is so contrary to his nature and being, that he will not forgive the impenitent. So it is not an arbitrary matter, but it is a matter of necessity, that the sinner must learn to loathe and hate his sins before he can have any peace with God. As there is no concord between truth and falsehood, between vice and virtue. between purity and impurity, so there is no agreement between God and the impenitent. The sinner who expects to be useful and happy in this life must hate sin and expel it from his system before he can expect to receive the approving smiles of his Heavenly Father.

It is not necessary to stop to point out just what is repentance. Men all understand sufficiently well what it is to know when they have repented. If one should confess his faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and be baptized, then get drunk on the next day, it would not take us all long to decide that that person has not repented. The world knows very well that repentance is a change of will produced by godly sorrow, which leads to a turning away from sin. The sorrow of the world worketh death, but godly sorrow leads to repentance that brings a reformation of life. A godly sorrow is not repentance, but it leads to repentance. The Pentecostians sorrowed for their sins, and were made sorry after a godly fashion. This sorrow, however, led them to repent, to turn away from sin and be baptized into the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Sorrow that brings salvation always leads a man to turn away from his wickedness.

We read in Matt. 12: 41: "The men of Nineveh shall stand up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonah; and behold, a greater than Jonah is here." Turning to Jonah, third chapter and tenth verse, we learn just what they did in repenting. Jonah had delivered the message to the Ninevites that in forty days Nineveh should be overthrown. They had heard the message, believed it, and had put on sackcloth and ashes. They had a change of will, which led them to cease their wickedness and to accept the life called for by the preaching of Jonah. Jonah 3: 10 reads: "And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil which he said he would do unto them; and he did it not." Thus we see, beyond all doubt, that, having heard and believed the truth and being sorry for their sins, the Ninevites turned away from their evildoing. This change of will produced by the preaching of Jonah, which led to turning from sin, is called by the Savior "repentance." Thus we may define repentance to be a change of will produced by godly sorrow, which leads to a reformation of life, or turning away from sin. Some people imagine that this is a defective repentance; but if this is defective, there is nothing perfect. No man can do more than have a change of will that leads him to turn away from sin. When a man so hates and despises sin that he ceases to do evil, it is not possible to do more. You may read every history of every nation; you may go from pole to pole, from sun to sun, from land to land, and from ocean to ocean, and yet you will never find a man that has done more than turn away from his sins. Without this turning away from sin, there is no enjoyment of the remission of sins, and there is no possibillty of such a character entering heaven. If the man who loves and harbors sin could enter heaven, he would make discord in heaven and mar the happiness of the angels and the glorified. It is certainly sad to reflect that some people are so foolish as to imagine that they can be useful and happy in this life while loving and entertaining sin. For our own good, for our own happiness and welfare in this world, to say nothing of the life to come, God demands that we shall turn away from wrongdoing.

Leaving Out Christ and Christianity.

BY E. A. E.

An editorial article in the Literary Digest of May 24, under the heading, "Dropping the Old and New Testament," says:

The Rev. John Haynes Holmes, paster of the Church of the Messiah, avers in the New York Tribune that the step his church has taken in dropping Christ and Christianity out of its creed will put it abreast of the times.

Preceding this statement the Literary Digest remarks:

A single New York church, the Church of the Messiah, seems rather to belie its name when it votes to drop all reference to Christ and Christianity in its statement of purpose.

The "pastor" of this church declares that he is a Christian, but believes "the day of denominationalism is gone;" that "the best in Christianity and the best in Judaism are identical;" that he already has "about fifty Jews and some Hindus" in his "membership," and that "Chinese are welcome regardless of their faith." He declares that Christianity is "denominationalism and sectarianism" and proposes to "embrace whatever is good in all religions."

How does all this sound to the man who has determined to know nothing in his preaching "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified?" How does all this look in the light of the teaching of Christ, the gospel of our salvation, and "the church of God," whose foundation and head is Christ alone? The only fitting answer to this is the plain and burning words of God:

Whosoever goeth onward and abideth not in the teaching of Christ, hath not God: he that abideth in the teaching, the same hath both the Father and the Son. (2 John 9.)

Who is the liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? This is the antichrist, even he that denieth the Father and the Son. Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: he that confesseth the Son hath the Father also. (1 John 2: 22, 23.)

He that bath the Son bath the life; he that bath not the Son of God bath not the life. (1 John 5: 12.)

The teaching of Christ is the teaching of God. Christ received his teaching from God, and taught only the word and will of God. (See John 7: 16; 12: 44-50; 17: 8, 14.) To place the teaching of Christ on a par with any teaching and Christianity on a level with any other religion is to reject God and the Holy Spirit as well as Christ and the

He that is of God heareth the words of God: for this cause ye hear them not, because ye are not of God. (John 8: 47.)

There can be no such thing as having God and the Holy Spirit without receiving Jesus as "the Christ, the Son of the living God."

The course this "pastor" pursues not only crucifies Christ afresh and puts him to an open shame, but rejects God's scheme of redemption.

The teaching of Christ, Christianity, is the one and the only divine standard. Every one and everything must measure up to that. The man who does not accept and obey the teaching of Christ is foolish; the man who accepts and obeys this teaching is wise. (Matt. 7: 24-27.)

The New Testament speaks of different religions—namely, "the Jews' religion" (Gal. 1: 13, 14), the religion of the Pharisee (Acts 26: 5), the religion of idolatry of various sorts (Acts 17: 22), vain religion (James 1: 26), and pure and undefiled religion (verse 27). There is only one religion which cleanses from all sin and renders people pure and undefiled before God, the Father, and that is "to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world." Christ teaches this; this is Christianity.

Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers: for what fellowship have righteousness and iniquity? or what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath

Christ with Belial? or what portion hath a believer with an unbeliever? And what agreement hath a temple of God with idols? for we are a temple of the living God: even as God said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch no unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be to you a Father, and ye shall be to me sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. Having therefore these promises, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all deflement of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. (2 Cor. 6: 14 to 7: 1.)

This is just the opposite of mixing all religions into one conglomeration and incongruous whole of infidelity and atheism.

Then, who is to be the judge of that which is good in Christianity? This implies that there is something in Christianity that is, at least, not so good, or not good at all, in the judgment of men. This is placing oneself above all that is called God and judging and discarding his wisdom. (2 Thess. 2: 1-12.)

But that which this one "pastor" and his church in New York do may not so much concern the readers of this paper; the point we must most guard is to prevent the widespread and dominating spirit of keeping "abreast of the times" out of the churches of Christ.

What this "pastor" says about the necessity of dropping Christ and Christianity in order to keep "abreast of the times" is true and has always been true. Christ and Christianity have never been popular. That something which the Bible calls "the world" hated and crucified Christ, and it hates and persecutes his church to-day. His church is "not of the world," even as he was not, and is not now, and never will be, of the world. Christ gave himself up for the church in order to deliver it "out of this present evil world." (Gal. 1: 4.) To keep "abreast of the times" and to keep abreast of Christ-to walk with Godare two distinctly separate and antagonistic things. One cannot do both at the same time; a church cannot. The church must decide which one it intends to do. But it must not belie Christ by claiming to be Christians while walking with the world.

While this "pastor" drops Christ and Christianity avowedly, openly, and above board, too many are doing the same in practice while claiming to be Christians and to preach the gospel. It is far more honest and better to be open and frank about it than to deny him while professing to know him, and, while professing to be his friend, to betray him with a kiss. Many, who claim to uphold the church of Christ as set forth in the Bible in all its strength and beauty and glory, and to preach the gospel in its simplicity and power, are mixing up with various "religious" and religious institutions not one time mentioned in the New Testament. They do this in order to keep "abreast of the times," or for some other reason not contained in the word of God, until with them the church has lost its identity, the gospel has lost its power, and they have lost their influence and ability to "contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." The tendency is to have preaching without the gospel, churches without Christ, and religion without Christianity.

It may be they do not mean to leave out Christianity in name, but they leave out such parts of it as their judgment decides is not good. With some it seems not good, in real practice, for instance, to be honest in all things, to be sincere and truthful, to squarely meet all obligations at all hazards, to treat all in justice and mercy and righteousness as they would be treated, to love their neighbors as themselves, to love and to pray for their enemies, to do good for evil, to love their brethren from the heart fervently, and to love God fully. On the contrary, in real practice, selfishness, self-esteem, the righteousness of men, the spirit and wisdom of the world, greed of gain, unfaithfulness, to "get by" in any way so as to escape the penitentiary and the gallows, hatred of enemies, vengeance, devastation, taking human life, making widows and orphans by the thousands, seem, under some circumstances, at least, good to them.

Again I ask, who is the judge of that which is good—God or man? Again, I quote: "Ye cannot serve God and mammon;" "Choose you this day whom ye will serve;" and, "We must obey God rather than men."

As every religion in the world, as we have seen, is not Christianity, inasmuch as all idols are not Jehovah, the true and the living God; so every "religious service" is not the worship of God "in spirit and truth" and, therefore, "as it is written;" hence, not pleasing and acceptable to God. While all preachers, elders, and teachers should set good examples in "all things that pertain unto life and godliness" and should teach "the whole counsel of God," some, for reasons which they themselves may have, are helping Satan to beguile the hearts of the innocent into "religious services" which Jesus denominates vain worship.

This people honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. But in vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men. (Mark 7: 6, 7.)

Many of the church in many places seem intoxicated with the pleasures of sin and drunken on the wine of the world. They are seeking that religion which calls for no self-denial, no self-sacrifice, no crucifixion of the flesh, and no keeping "unspotted from the world."

The first sentence in the article referred to in the Literary Digest is:

Dropping things considered useless, or worn out, or irrelevant in church services appears to be something of a mania.

I am not pretending to point out all the dangers which boldly assert themselves or lurk in this "mania." I am solemnly warning against this disposition and the effort to change Christianity, the Bible, Christ, the Holy Spirit, God, and heaven to suit "the times," or to adapt the old gospel to the new age. This appears to me as great a piece of presumption and deep folly as Satan has ever beguiled human wisdom to indulge in.

Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be clear from great transgression. (Ps. 19: 13.)

After the bitter scourging, sore chastisement, horrible destruction, and awful carnage of the great war, it seems that Satan has worked a new trick on the religious world in persuading it into the presumption and sin of trying to change the church of God, the Bible, Christianity, Christ, and God himself to suit new conditions, instead of repenting of all negligence, worldliness, wickedness, and the most fearful sins which have been committed and to turn to God in deep humiliation and contrition and make the greater effort to worship him in spirit and truth. It is the time to turn to God and to cry mightily unto him. Hearts must change, lives must change, wrongs must be righted, and men must escape from the corruption which is in the world through lust and must become partakers of the divine nature, must become Christlike and Godlike; but Christianity, the Holy Spirit, Christ, and God are always the same.

What great folly, presumption, and sin Satan has beguiled many otherwise sensible men into!

RAISING FUNDS TO IMPROVE DAVID LIPSCOMB COLLEGE.

This same spirit of worldliness, presumption, sin, and infidelity is pervading schools, colleges, and universities of the country. They, too, must "keep abreast of the times," Some public schools in cities have adopted training in dancing as a part of their course of instruction. Incipient infidelity and destructive criticism is spreading through others. Military training is becoming a part of the course of many. Some schools called "Christian Colleges," or "Bible Schools," have been so swept off their feet by the strong current of worldly wisdom and "keeping abreast of the times" as to become to some extent military training schools. To what schools can we send our children that they may receive all the necessary instruction in order to refine and nurture them into the gentle manners and graces and heart of true gentlemen and ladies, without the foolishness and sins of widespread worldliness; into the proper development of their minds, without planting at the same time the seeds of infidelity; and, above all, into the decision and strength of character which will make them strong and useful men and women?

We are striving to make David Lipscomb College such a school.

But to enlarge and to improve its buildings, the directors must have the hearty cooperation of all friends of true education in furnishing the funds with which to do this.

The directors were the first to contribute to this work, and in the board of seven about three thousand dollars has been raised. We are not asking others to do something we are not doing.

The American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief has received from its representatives in Constantinople the following statement on conditions in Turkey:

The situation as to unemployment is very grave. It may almost be said that there are no industries. There never were factories on a large scale, except upon foreign capital. These will not resume work until security is guaranteed. In areas of the deportation, looms and all implements of domestic industries were wantonly destroyed. The same was true of agricultural implements. The beasts of burden were taken. The seed grain has been largely eaten. Deportees are still huddled in camps or wandering along the roads endeavoring to reach their homes. Returning, they find their farms occupied by strangers who do not cultivate them. If the next month passes without sowing, there will be famine conditions here for more than a year.

Soldiers in tens of thousands are being discharged from the army at any spot where they happen to be. They are not transported to their homes. They are ragged and starving and often diseased. They have had no pay for months. They everywhere increase the number of the helpless unemployed and of the lawless.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Whosoever has set his will to deny himself and renounce his own will, to resign himself freely and give himself up to the will of God, his good will is perfect, and he spends his life free from fear and anxious care, despising all which fades and passes away, and feeling a certain assurance of obtaining everlasting life.—Blosius.

So smile away; folks understand what by a smile is meant. It's worth a million dollars and it doesn't cost a cent.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

- R. V. Cawthon is conducting a tent meeting for the Trinity Lane congregation, this city.
- A. B. Lipscomb will begin a meeting next Sunday with the Foster Street congregation, this city.
- L. L. Yeagley has closed a good meeting at Joy's Floral Garden, this city. Eight persons obeyed the gospel.

We are sending out statements to all who are in arrears. Our readers will confer a great favor by renewing promptly.

The Belmont Avenue congregation, this city, is conducting a mission tent meeting in the vicinity of Twentieth and Joe Johnston Avenues, Morgan H. Carter is preaching.

While acting as agent for the Gospel Advocate, J. B. Redd has filled several preaching appointments with very encouraging results. The publishers appreciate the courtesies shown him at every place. He is an earnest worker in the Master's service.

Tice Elkins writes from Childress, Texas: "Ira Y. Rice, of Hollis, Okla., has just closed an eighteen-nights' vocal drill with the church here, and a better one we never had. He endeared himself to all as an earnest worker in the song field. Brethren, if you want a good drill that will make you better able to praise God in song, get him."

The meeting at Russell Street Church, this city, continues with growing interest. All are pleased with the strong, forcible sermons of Brother Freed and much good is being accomplished. Nearly one thousand people attended the service Sunday morning. Two were received into the membership of the local congregation and one young lady made the good confession.

From W. P. Skaggs, Tom Bean, Texas, June 5: "Charlie Stout, who lives in Tom Bean, though reared by a Christian mother and though his brothers and sisters had become Christians, had never accepted the Christ. He is now very low with that dread affliction, tuberculosis. He sent for me on May 28, and, having confessed his faith in the Christ, we secured a large bath tub and placed it by his bed, and I baptized him. It is so sad to think of intelligent people, who have the opportunity of preparing to live, putting off their preparations until so near the end of life.

"'Nothing but leaves! Sad memory weaves
No veil to hide the past.
And as we trace our weary way,
And count each lost and misspent day,
We sadly find at last
Nothing but leaves.'"

W. M. Wilson, of Homeland, Ga., writes: "I desire to secure a school in the State of Georgia among my own brethren. I hold a first-grade general elementary license, general average ninety-three per cent, and valid for twentyfour years. I have been teaching among the 'Hardshells,' who want to circumscribe me to their way of teaching; and because I refuse to conduct my school as they require and openly and above board open my school with Bible reading and prayer, my work is rendered very unpleasant and less productive of results. Brethren, will you not cooperate with me and help me to secure a good school in a Christian community? I can teach your children not only their textbooks, but the Bible as well. I can also instruct them in vocal music, as I am a teacher of music and a song leader. Address me at once, as I want to perfect arrangements in time."

From Tice Elkins, Childress, Texas, May 4: "Since last report we have received the following donations on account of sickness: D. A. Haslacker, West Virginia, $5;

John White, Texas, $2.50; Claiborne Perry, Texas, $1; Mirtie Murdock, Ohio, $5; Henry McIntosh, Illinois, $1; H. W. Hygh, Arkansas, $5; church at Hollis, Okla., $50; J. N. Hieronymus, Illinois, $4; J. B. Dubose, for brethren at Marietta, Okla., $30; W. R. Peters, Texas, $5; J. J. Coats, Texas, $2; T. H. Field, Texas, $5; Foy E. Wallace, Jr., $2; J. M. Rice, for church at Duncan, Ariz., $37; Jim Daniels, Texas, $5; H. F. Oliver, for church at Wharton, Texas, $5; R. V. Robertson, personal, $1, and for church at Stephenville, Texas, $5; J. J. Coats, for church at Medicine Mound, Texas, $4; church at Childress, contribution last Lord's day, $9. Our gratitude is unspeakable for these precious souls who have helped us. We have never had a moment's doubt that we will be cared for. I am going to try to hold two meetings, one in July and one in August, but may have to cancel them any time. My wife is better, seemingly, to-day; and If her condition as it is to-day could only be permanent. I would not lose another day. I have received twenty-one calls for meetings and debates in the last six weeks, and turned every one down. Brethren, what about next year? Let's have some of them repeated. God bless the brethren and sisters everywhere."

Campaign Work for David Lipseomb College.

The members of the Board of Trustees of David Lipscomb College are gratified on account of the very favorable response that is being made to their appeal for the building fund. Among the large pledges received are one from the church at Franklin, Tenn., for one thousand dollars, and one from the church at Lewisburg, Tenn., for a similar amount. Other churches and individual Christians have been generous in proportion to their means. The Belmont Avenue congregation, in Nashville, has pledged more than two thousand dollars. The seven members of the Board of Trustees have shown their faith in the future of the college by pledging three thousand dollars. The list of contributors grows from day to day. Out of respect for the wishes of many of the donors, their names are withheld from publication; but an accurate list of all contributions is being kept by Brother H. Leo Boles, the treasurer of the building fund, and a faithful accounting will be

Plans are already drawn for the new girls' dormitory, which will accommodate one hundred girls. It will be thoroughly modern in every respect, but is not to be built along extravagant lines. Simplicity with convenience will be the cardinal point in its construction. Estimates already received indicate that the new dormitory and other improvements will cost a very large per cent more than before-the-war prices. Every cent of the fifty thousand dollars asked for will be required; and in order that the work may not be retarded, we urge all the friends of true education not to slacken, but to quicken, their efforts in behalf of the building fund.

The Board of Trustees are asking that all of the churches who read this appeal set apart the last week in August as "Campaign Week for David Lipscomb College," and that announcements and arrangements be made at once to insure a successful consummation of this campaign. There are five Lord's days in August, and we urge that all contributions or pledges be ready after the fifth Sunday, as we wish to report them on the opening day of the college a few days later. Pledge cards and advertising matter will be cheerfully furnished upon request. Wherever possible, it will greatly help the work to arrange for some brother to make a special talk, calling attention to the work and needs of the college. We ask that the alumni, who are scattered all over the country, remember their Alma Mater and bestir themselves to the utmost in its behalf. By all means we must reach the fifty-thousanddollar mark not later than September 1. Let our motto be: "We can, and we will."

Report for April.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

From Cordell, Okia., by N. O. Ray, $44.26; South Side-Central Church, Fort Worth, Texas, by W. A. Copher, $10; Florence, Ala., by H. P. Lucas, $46.67; Scottsboro, Ala., by J. M. Jones, Odessa, Mo., $16.50; Bernice B, Howard, Gunter, Texas, $8. Total, $156.18.

I am not only very grateful to all for these gifts, but more grateful still for what they mean. They do not mean simply money to buy things needed, to pay bills and defray traveling expenses, but fellowship, friendship, and love.

I have been in Honolulu, Hawaii—"the crossroads of the Pacific Ocean"—for two weeks. I was met at the landing by Brother and Sister Bowman and conveyed to their hospitable home, where I have been ever since. Brother Bowman says if I am not comfortably located, it is my own fault; for if there is anything they can do for me which they have not done, they will do it, if I will only let them know what it is. I cannot think of anything. To land on these mid-Pacific Islands is like entering a fairyland. The hospitality of the people would be hard to surpass.

I have spent two Lord's days since my arrival. The first one we met for the Lord's Supper in the home of Brother and Sister Hopper, with five present. Last Sunday we met with Sister Harrison, twenty-five miles out from Honolulu, with five present, one of whom was a Japanese young man. Two evenings we have met for Bible study in Brother Bowman's home, have made some personal calls and distributed a number of tracts. Last Wednesday evening Brother Bowman and I attended a meeting of the Christian Scientists. After dismissal I gave out some tracts I chanced to have in my pocket. A man and a woman came up, who seemed to be leaders, and said I was discourteous; that they never tried to proselyte anybody. I assured them that if it was a discourtesy it was wholly unintentional and I hoped they would overlook it. The woman said, "There is nothing to forgive," and they went away seemingly satisfied. I requested an interview with one of their number whom they considered a representative, and was introduced to Mrs. Hatch. We arranged that I should meet her the next day at her office, second floor, Boston Building, at one o'clock. I was there on time and had an hour's interview with her on the following points:

- 1. How do you regard Mrs. Eddy's writings as compared with the Bible?
- 2. Did the followers of Mrs. Eddy expect her to rise from
- 3. Do you believe the cures she claims of cancer and consumption as read from her book last night?
 - 4. How do you regard Christ?
 - 5. Do you recognize the existence of sin?
 - 6. Is there a personal devil?
- 7. How do you regard the claims of John Alexander Dowle and the Mormons in reference to divine healing?
 - 8. Do you believe in a bodily resurrection?
 - 9. How do you regard baptism and the Lord's Supper?

As she requested that I should not put her answers in writing, I simply leave the questions as they stand. Our conversation was most pleasant throughout. I gave her a tract, she gave me one, and we shook hands and parted.

There is much unrest here, and it is an opportune time for preaching a full gospel.

Friends will please write me at 2625 Montgomery Street, Louisville, Ky.

I certainly am glad to be able to report that with this month's remittance Sister Armstrong-Hopkins' deficit has been made up. Her indebtedness at the time of her death was very heavy, and I appreciate very much indeed the promptness with which many contributors remitted to this fund.

There are several brothers and sisters who have been contributing regularly to Sister Armstrong-Hopkins for some time; and now that this need no longer exists, please send to one of our other missionaries. Please do not let the matter drop. The missionaries need your assistance, and you need the pleasure of giving.

There are also many brothers and sisters who have not been contributing in the past. Will you give this month for the first time? Once you get in touch with the work being done in India and Japan, you will realize more forcibly the necessity for giving on the part of every Christian who is able to give. Write me, and I will be glad to give you news items of the work, the conditions, and the need. Address: Miss Neilie Straiton, 1030 South Lake Street, Fort Worth, Texas.

Training Little Children

Simple Devices for Keeping Children Happily Occupied and Mentally Active-They Also Help to Make Mother's Task Easier.

The routine duties of the wife and mother are the same In practically all homes. Food has to be purchased and prepared; the house has to be kept clean and in order; there is shopping to be done, and sewing, mending, and washing-a big item in families with young children; and there are the children.

Very often the mother would seem to have little time or strength to spend other than in attention to the children's actual physical care and requirements; and yet, by a little wise thinking and arranging, she can start many plays and occupations which will not only give the children pleasure and teach them how to do things, but result in a quieter, easier, and more joyous task for herself.

One of the most helpful factors in the harmonious development of mother-and-child life is a right attitude of mind. It is, of course, most desirable that it be one of contentment and peace; but too often mothers, in addition to the work of housekeeping and the bearing and rearing of children, are obliged to contend with problems of sickness and family disagreements. However, if she can meet such situations with intelligence, courage, and self-control, she will create a home atmosphere which will be measureless in its influence.

A vard can be made an ideal playground at a moderate expense. Playing in sand appeals more than anything else to children of three and four years. It will engross and keep them occupied for hours at a time; therefore, the first thing to put in the yard is a sand box. This can be done by nailing four boards together and partly embedding them in the ground. Babies should not be allowed to play by themselves in the sand until they are old enough to know that they should not put it in their mouths; and none of the children should be permitted to throw sand. because of the danger to the eyes.

Discarded cooking utensils and a few tin spoons give the children an opportunity to imitate mother's fascinating operations in the kitchen. In warm weather they can have water to mix with the sand. This makes the play all the more real and engrossing.

Older children find many more things to do with sand. They pile it up and make hills out of it, dig holes and fill them with water, or make representations of the many things that children love to play and think about,

Pretty patterns can be made in damp sand by drawing with a stick; by pressing stones, pebbles, or seeds into it; or by using such objects as grooved shells or the rim of a cup.

Gardening is one of the most wholesome and healthful ways in which children can be employed. Each child may well have a space in the yard allotted to him for planting and tending a little garden of his very own.

All kinds of outdoor games can be played in the yard and the children can romp to their hearts' content. For the young children, games with a rubber ball or with bean bags are the best.

Older children enjoy having a swing, but it is likely to be dangerous for the little ones when they are running heedlessly about.

Almost all children have wooden blocks of one kind or another to play with, and they scarcely need to be shown what to do with them. They love to make such things as houses, trains, trolley cars, buildings, bridges, and furniture. Any materials that lend themselves to representation of this kind are a delight to children. Kindergarten tablets (round, square, oblong, and triangular pieces of wood of the dimension of one inch) can be used for representing many things; also colored sticks and slats of different lengths and seeds of different varieties. A catalogue of kindergarten materials will be sent upon request by Milton Bradley Company, Springfield, Mass., or by E. Steiger & Co., 49 Murray Street, New York,

In the same way children enjoy representing objects in clay and by drawing and painting. Clay work, however, is better left for school by mothers who have much to do, as work in this material requires considerable attention and direction. 0 0 0

Justice to God and Man.

As the difficulty of discovering what is right arises commonly from the prevalence of self-interest in our minds, and as we commonly behave rightly to any one for whom we feel affection or sympathy, Christ considered that he who could feel sympathy for all would behave rightly to all. But how to give to the meager and narrow hearts of men such enlargement? How to make them capable of a universal sympathy? Christ believed it possible to bind men to their kind, but on one condition: that they were first bound fast to himself. . . . As love provokes love, many have found it possible to conceive for Christ an attachment the closeness of which no words can describe, a veneration so possessing and absorbing the man within them that they have said: "I live no more, but Christ lives in me." Now such a feeling carries with it of necessity the feeling of love for all human beings.

Love, wheresoever it appears, is in its measure a lawmaking power. "Love is dutiful in thought and deed." And, as the lover of his country is free from the temptation to treason, so is he who loves Christ secure from the temptation to injure any human being, whether it be himself or another.-Professor Seeley.

The Hollow of His Hand.

It was a hillman wrote, "the hollow of his hand;" Belike a shepherd gaunt, Anhungered for his native land, Whose eyes were dark with evening distances.

Isaiah taught Jerusalem; He dwelt within the gates. His speech clanged out like cymbals, But his heart knew not the softened cries Wrung from the lips of wanderers; His eyes knew not the hills at evening And at dawning. It was an exile saw the green-cupped pools From some scarce-trodden height; Who made his bed with chill night stars, And ere the first light broke Beheld small silver seas as still as God; Who raised his eyes and met the silence Folding him.

It was an exiled hillman, Belike a shepherd gaunt, Who graved his soul with humbleness; Who looked him down and said great words: "The waters in the hollow of his hand.

Brother Armstrong's Short Stay With Us.

We have appreciated nothing, of late, more than Brother J. N. Armstrong's short stay with us. He was visiting Brother and Sister Harding, whose oldest daughter he married quite a number of years ago, and Brother and Sister C. H. Paine, with whom Brother and Sister Harding now live. Sister Armstrong was with him and is extending her stay for a while longer.

Nothing helps the work more than having visitors drop in with us and go to work as did Brother Armstrong and his most excellent wife. The Hardings, Armstrongs, and Paines are full of religion, and that of the right kind. And it seems to me that the right kind of religion should be the easiest in the world to have; for it is the most reasonable, the most sensible, and the kind that brings the greatest good now and forever to the one who possesses it. Brother Armstrong spoke twice for the West End Avenue congregation and once at East Point, and then joined our forces with his presence and prayers at South Pryor, where Brother S. P. Pittman is doing a great work in a series of revival services. In his first address at West End Avenue, he spoke to us on "The Mind of Christ." He showed, in a most effective way, that unselfish mind, that humble mind, that our Lord had; a mind that humbled not itself merely before his superiors, if such Christ had, or before his equals, but gladly condescended to serve his inferiors. Here our Lord was beautifully portrayed in his great life of service for a fallen race. That our workers here were strengthened and drawn more closely to our Savior, I have no doubt. In his second address it was shown how utterly impossible it is to reach God without surrendering to Christ; that Christ is the only bridge, so to speak, over which we may pass from our fallen state to God; and that, in order to do this, we must hear Christ, not in a part of what he has said to us, but in "all things whatsoever" he says unto us. Here he drove home to his listeners what I shall call the practical side of this question to Christiansviz., that it is just as necessary to hear Christ in "all things whatsoever" he says to us as disciples as it is for the alien to hear him in "all things whatsoever" he says to them.

More and more and more such preaching do we need every day of our existence on the earth. To know what Christ says is an easy thing to learn. To actually do it may, at times, seem hard to do; but I venture the assertion that the very things that seem most hard, most painful, for us to do-that these are the very things we need most to do, and out of the doing of which things the greatest good will come to our souls.

These fundamental lessons, these lessons that are brimful of soul food, are the lessons that all of God's ministers should be most anxious to live out in their own lives and give to the people as the days come and go. Souls are too precious, life is too short and uncertain, for us to fail to give such lessons at every opportunity.

Come again, Brother Armstrong, and give us more such teaching. 0 0 0

Finding Ourselves.

I do not understand that when "God called unto the man, and said unto him, Where art thou?" that God did not know well where Adam was. Nor do I understand that in the many scriptures where God seems to be seeking to locate or learn something about man, that he does not know all about him. "For the ways of man are before the eyes of Jehovah." (Prov. 5; 21.) "The eyes of Jehovan are in every place, keeping watch upon the evil and the good." (Prov. 15: 3.) "And there is no creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked and laid open before the eyes of him with whom we have to do." (Heb. 4: 13.)

I wonder if God does not assume this attitude toward man-the attitude of one seeking to locate and learn about man-for the purpose of getting us to fall in line with him to the end that we may locate ourselves, find ourselves. "come to ourselves," a thing that is absolutely essential to our finding God, locating God, and coming back to him? Is it not true that God needs no one to tell him about man, to enlighten him concerning man's whereabouts or his spiritual condition? (See John 2: 24, 25.) But is it not true that we need him to help us in "finding ourselves?"

And when has man found himself? Is it not true that man has not found himself until he comes to see himself as God sees him, know himself as God knows him? How terribly undone would some who claim to be Christians feel if they would only find themselves by allowing themselves to see themselves as God sees them! The alien needs to find himself, and this he does when he comes to see himself lost and undone as God sees him. Never will he cry out, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" and do it, till he thus finds himself. The soul that has been led astray by "blind guides" into thinking he is saved when he is not saved needs to find himself, and those of us who are Christians should remember that it is our duty to help him find himself by preaching the pure word of God, without addition or subtraction. The man in the church who is lost because he gives not as God would have him, prays not as God would have him, commemorates not the death and suffering of Christ as he is commanded to do, yet feels he is safe, needs to find himself, does he not?

Finding ourselves by coming to see ourselves as God sees us is a thing of paramount importance.

Field Reports.

Brother Garrett preached to a full house at Macon on the first Lord's day in this month. Brother Coleman spoke at night.

The revival conducted by Brother S. P. Pittman at the South Pryor Street house of worship is proving to be one of the most helpful that we have yet had at that place. He is doing a great work, a report of which we will give later.

The first Lord's day in June was another good day for the West End Avenue congregation. The writer spoke on "Finding Ourselves," at the close of which two souls came forward and confessed their faith in Christ and were baptized into him, one came from the Baptists, and one prodigal confessed his wrongs and reconsecrated himself to God. Along with this good news, I am glad to report that Brother and Sister P. L. Sherrod, of Pearl and Bryan Streets Church, Dallas, Texas, cast their lot with us. We welcome them to this great city.

The churches and individuals who are helping us keep Brother Silas E. Templeton busy in this State, visiting the scattered disciples and the different congregations, will be pleased with the following, which is his first report since beginning this needed work:

On Lord's day, May 18, I filled my regular appointment at Rockmart, Ga., preaching morning and evening to average audiences, and spent Monday and Tuesday following in visiting many of the faithful members of his body there. encouraging them to hold fast their zeal and confession firm unto the end. It must be said that the Rockmart congregation loves the praise or approval of God rather than the praise or approval of men. From Rockmart I went to the praise or approval of men. From Rockmart I went to Cedartown, Ga., on Wednesday, May 21, and found a num-ber of earnest disciples. However, they are just now unorganized, so far as public meetings are concerned, which
