gives us the beautiful apple, the juicy peach, and the delicious pear.

But it is in man, his masterpiece of creation, that we see most to admire, for truly man is fearfully and wonderfully made.

Think of the skill required to form the seeing eye. No curtain ever formed by man can be opened and closed like the curtain that protects the pupil of the eye: no jewel case was ever more skillfully arranged than the socket that holds the eyeball. Nor is the eye of the bird that soars high above its prey, or the eye of the fish in its liquid home, fashioned like the eye of man, but each is adapted to its peculiar need. But if the eye fills us with admiration for the One who formed it, what shall we say of that delicate piece of machinery called the "lung?" Hidden away in the interior of the body, it draws in the deep breath of air and in a moment's time separates it into its component parts, throwing out the parts it cannot use and converting the remainder into the life-sustaining tissues of the body. Also, I am filled with amazement when I examine the vocal cords and understand their power. Scarcely an inch in length, placed in the back of the throat, and seemingly unable to produce the faintest sound, yet they give the silvery tones to the orator and the melody to the sweet singers in Israel. Nor will we be less interested if we study the handiwork of the Creator as he demonstrates his skill in forming the brain of a Newton, a Gladstone, or a Solomon.

No wonder, then, that we worship and adore this mighty Creator who is able to take the colors of the rainbow and weave them into a scarf and throw them around the shoulders of the dying storm, or the One that is able to dip his fingers into the ocean of eternity and shake out a hundred million worlds. But if his power and greatness should cause us to fall on our faces and worship him, what shall we say of his wonderful love—that love that prompted him to send Jesus to this world to redeem fallen humanity!

Fancy, if you can, the Prince of heaven in his glorified state, joint creator and ruler of the universe, seated upon a throne of jasper, in a city of gold, adored by the angelic hosts; and yet, at his Father's request, he came to this world of darkest night, was born and laid in a borrowed manger, buried and laid in a borrowed tomb. His first pillow was straw and his last one a crown of thorns. His first companions were cattle and his last ones thieves. Nor was he allowed to enter the dark valley alone, but was surrounded by a mocking, jeering mob who defied him to assert his power and descend from the cross. But the quaking earth, the blackened sun, and the bloody moon mourned with him in his dying hour.

And why all this suffering by a God? Ah, that you and I might escape the awful consequences of sin. Sin—you cannot even pronounce the word without sounding the hiss of the serpent.

Some people seem to think that sin is a small thing, but I tell you it is no small thing that lifted Jesus off of the throne of the universe, hastened him down to this weeping world, and caused him to shed his innocent blood that he might pay the price of man's redemption. If you could mount upon the wings of electricity to the gates of pearl, dash down the streets of gold, across the river of life, and scatter the seeds of sin in the fields of glory, you would have to send for a gravedigger to come and start a cemetery in the paradise of God, for I tell you the wages of sin is death. Without sin, even this world would be fairer than a poet's dream; but the trail of the serpent is over all, from the humblest house of the workingman to the Capitol of the nation. The mark of death is stamped upon the cheek of health; and although man has been able to harness the lightning, make the sea his pathway, ride in triumph on the bosom of the clouds, advance with safety on the bottom of the sea, speak across the ocean, measure the distance to the sun, weigh the planets, look either into the past or the future and tell the time of every eclipse, reproduce the voice of men now dead, and do many other wonderful things, yet he must ground arms and surrender when it comes to dealing with sin. One sting from the deadly monster, and the victim is doomed forever; and in all this vast universe there is but one remedy, and that is the cross of Christ.

You may own the cattle on four thousand hills; you may dig every diamond and every ounce of gold from the depth of the earth; you may gather in every pearl from the seven seas and multiply their value a millionfold, and yet you cannot pay off the mortgage on a single soul. This you must leave to the power and wisdom of the Master Workman of the universe. Will you do it?

A Solid Rock.

BY E. W. SEWELL,

"Upon this rock I will build my church." (Matt. 16: 18.) These are the words of Jesus. They form the strongest statement oftered by him while on earth. They are the whole effort of Christianity epitomized. To the accomplishment of it our blessed Master gave all, endured all, and suffered all. Every healing touch upon the aching sick, every comforting word to the downhearted by the wayside, every lonely prayer out on the mountain top in the midnight hour or in the flower garden after their little faces had been closed in sweet sleep, and every quiver of his tender flesh as the spikes pierced his hands and feet while they nailed him to the cross were so many separate vibrations of energy set forth to the one purpose that Jesus might build a church distinct from all other organizations, and peculiar to the purpose of the salvation of the souls of dying men and womn.

That the church was built, and that it was just such an institution as Jesus desired it to be, having conditions of membership according to his wishes and laws of limitation governing its subjects to the carrying out its purpose, all must acknowledge from the following reasons: (1) Its foundation was laid. (1 Cor. 3: 11.) (2) Its frame was fitly erected together. (Eph. 2: 21.) (3) The building was completed and became the holy temple of the Lord and a habitation of God. (Eph. 2: 19-22.) (4) It was given a name separate and distinct from all other organizations on earth. (Rom. 16: 16.) (5) It proceeded to do the work for which it was organized, and to do it just as the law required. Read the book of Acts and the Epistles for full proof of this statement. (6) Its members passed from this life in full faith, having a sweet hope and full assurance of a crowning reward. (2 Tim. 4: 6-8.)

Now, these things were accomplished without any of the modern societies, such as the various missionary organizations with their dictatorial boards and the little societies within the churches too numerous to mention, and they were done without the modern inventions of man, such as instrumental music in all its variety. I have often put this question to many who seem to be tired and sick of the way churches are taking up with every human invention that is brought out: "If the work of the Lord was done once without these human institutions, and the record shows that it was, and that, too, with much better results, can it not be done again as a church of Christ without them?" Almost all reply that it can be done, and they prefer that it should be done; but they ask what they should do when there is no church of Christ near them and the church to which they belong will not cease supporting and having under their care those innovations.

If there is a brother anywhere in these circumstances, my heart goes out in prayer for you; and if you will pardon a personal reference, I believe I can direct you into a way that will give much more pleasure in the service of our Lord. I have been living for some time where there is no church of Christ; but rather than support the things practiced that are unscriptural, I call my little family around me, and we read the Scriptures and sing songs unto the Lord, and each in turn leads our hearts to God in prayer. We cannot express the heavenly feeling in our hearts the first prayer our little boy made in our family worship. The thrills his little words put into our souls were far sweeter than the music any fine organ or orchestra ever produced. Brother, try it once: it will put a smile upon your face and a song in your heart. Heed the admonition of John on the lonely island on the Lord's day: "And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." (Rev. 18: 4.) All admit that if one obeys the gospel, and remains in the church of Christ as God has placed him, and works and worships as the Holy Spirit has instructed men, without the addition of any other instrumentalities than those recorded in the New Testament, he is safe. If I am safe upon that ground, I shall not go about seeking other foundations, however fascinating they may be.

When he shall come with trumpet sound, O may I then in him be found, Dressed in his righteousness alone, Faultless to stand before the throne. On Christ, the solid rock, I stand; All other ground is sinking sand.

A Mighty Good Example.

BY G. DALLAS SMITH.

Perhaps ten months ago the church at Mount Calm, Texas, through one of the brethren, wrote me, asking me to hold them a meeting embracing the first two Sundays in July this year. I answered that I would make my arrangements to be there on time, the Lord willing. Well, as all Texans know, it has rained some here this year. As a brother expressed it a day or so ago: "It can look more like raining in Texas and rain less, and look less like raining and rain more, than any place in the world." Whether this is a fair statement of Texas or not, it has rained much for the first six months of this year. As a result of the continued rains, farmers everywhere have been greatly behind with their work. The membership of the Mount Calm church are mostly farmers, and the first of July found them about as busy in their crops as they had been any time since pitching them early in the spring, and naturally they felt like it was next to impossible to have the meeting at the appointed time. So they decided to write me and ask me to cancel the meeting just about one week before it was to begin. Well, I had a number of calls for meetings up to this time, but could not accept them because I had promised my time (two weeks of it) to Mount Calm. I had given up my regular work at Cleburne for six weeks, and the Cleburne church had arranged for another preacher to take my place while I was away in meetings. Now, the Mount Calm church might have written me that it was impossible for them to have their meeting at the time announced, owing to so much rain, and that they were very sorry, and hoped that I might be able to arrange for another meeting with them sometime. They might have done this way and left me without any support, when I had held that very time for them for eight or ten months. But what did they do? In a letter asking me to cancel the meeting they inclosed a check for one hundred dollars, saying: "This will help along with expenses." And this is the "mighty good example." This was nothing but right, of course; but it is so uncommon that I think it should be told to the credit of this church. Then it may provoke others to follow this good example. However, after writing me to cancel the meeting, the church, having heard that some in the community were intending to obey the gospel, wired me to come on at the appointed time. So I went, and, notwithstanding the busy times, we had a good meeting, at the end of which they contributed fifty dollars more toward my support. This church remembers that Paul said the Lord had "ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel."

Funds for Sister Lillie Cypert.

BY NELLIE STRAITON.

I am now taking a special interest in Sister Lillie Cypert, in Japan, and will endeavor each month to raise and forward to her direct the funds necessary to carry on her work. I shall still be glad to receive funds for any of our other missionaries also, but will send them each month to whoever is caring for each of the missionaries, and will advise the contributor to whom I send the money. If you wish to learn something of our missionaries and the work they are doing, and who is looking after each one, write me, and I will gladly tell you about these things. Do you want to help, financially and personally? There is a great deal you can do.

On June 30 I forwarded to Sister Cypert direct contributions as follows: From L. C. Carter, Texas, $5; V. B. Christopher, Texas, $2; Mrs. V. G. Stuart, Georgia, $1; J. R. Wilmore, Texas, $1; Miss Laura Cooke, Texas, $1; Mrs. E. Emberson, Texas, $2; Mrs. Esther L. Booth, Nebraska, $1; Mrs. Arthur Brown and Sunday-school class, Texas, 65 cents; a church in Texas, per H. White, $4; "A Sister," Texas, $1; Mrs. Roberta Grigsby, Texas, $1; I. B. Bradley, Tennessee, $2.50; "A Sister," per I. B. Bradley, Tennessee, $2.50; Miss Amanda Few, Tennessee, $5; Miss Minnie Holmes, Virginia, $15; Mrs. Robert G. Johnson, Texas, $1; Mrs. F. S. Blair, Oklahoma, $2; Mrs. B. P. Sloan, Tennessee, $2; Mr. Neal, Oklahoma, 50 cents; Mrs. E. O. Garrett, Oklahoma, 50 cents; anonymous, Texas, $1; a church in Texas, per Mrs. J. E. Thompson, $3.95; Mrs. Joe Chandler, Arkansas, $2; "A Sister," Colorado, $1; Mrs. M. A. E. Johns, Tennessee, $2; several sisters in Texas, per Mrs. Sluder, $5; Mrs. H. F. Lambert, Florida, $2; church in Florida, per Mrs. F. L. Russell, $2.25; Albert Lowe, Canada, $5; church in Indiana, per W. E. Dillman, $5; church in Texas, per Mrs. Bonnie Gaulden, $4.19; Mrs. M. A. Roach and Sunday-school class, Alabama, $5; Nellie Straiton, Texas, 96 cents. Total, $90.

Hang Up a Smile.

BY W. M. WILSON.

If you would a blessing be
To the human race,
Hang a smile where all can see,
'Twill the clouds replace.
As the sunshine from the sky
Gilds the earth anew,
To the weary passer-by
Your smiles will do.

Smiles revive the drooping heart
As the gentle rain
Doth in summer time impart
Freshness to the grain.
Be a smile giver to all
As you onward go;
Smile for both the great and small,
Blessings bestow.

CHORUS.

Hang up a smile in front of your face; You'll find it is worth while in every place. Hang up a smile, 'twill cheer and bless Somebody o'er life's mile in sore distress.

My God, in everything I see thy hand; in every passage, thy gracious discipline.—John Austin.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

"The End of the Charge."

Paul says: "But the end of the charge is love out of a pure heart and a good conscience and faith unfeigned: from which things some having swerved have turned aside unto vain talking." (1 Tim. 1: 5, 6.)

"Love out of a pure heart." What could mean more to the great work in which every child of God should be interested, and especially to ourselves as individuals, than such love? Love is a big word in the gospel of Christ. I know of nothing that really comprehends more. We must love God and Jesus Christ, his Son, who died that we might live. We must love everything that is holy, just, and good. We must love the salvation of souls continually. We must love, and must love much, and, regardless of what comes or goes, we must never forget to love. The word "hate" has a place in our religion, but I know of absolutely nothing against which we can exercise it righteously, except the devil and sin. We are licensed from our Lord to hate absolutely nothing but sin and the devil, but to love everything else.

Too often we allow ourselves to let hatred come in where love should be exercised. Love the brethren; love those who are not brethren, and even those who hate us. No one living can show one thing he ever gained from hating any being on this earth, but certainly can find where he has lost by it. The crying need of the church is this love out of a heart made pure by the blood of Jesus and kept so by sincere love. Such love and such purity of heart keep down evil surmising-seeing evil where evil does not exist-and enable us to let all we do, write, or say come from the one motive to do good. How much we need to consider, before we speak, write, or act, the question; Now, can good, and no evil, come from this? How much would be left unsaid, unwritten, and undone, if this question should ever be considered seriously first! I see so much written, hear so much said, and see so many things done, and just how the writers, talkers, and actors could expect good to come from it goes beyond my power to see.

Now this love does not mean that we are to be that goody-goody" kind of Christian that goes around smiling at everybody and everything, throwing kisses at everybody and everything. The very reverse is true. There is one thing that love can never smile at nor encourage—viz., a flagrant violation of God's law. People who do such things must be rebuked and their wrongs pointed out; but this must be done because of hatred for sin, loyalty to God, love and respect for his right to rule us, and love for the sinner. There is nothing more certain than this one thing—viz., that if love out of a pure heart we have, the right thing, as a rule, will be done and said by us, and done and said in the right way.

"A good conscience." Nothing means more to us than keeping our conscience pure. We should not engage in questionable things. But, above everything else, let us not do and say things that destroy a good conscience toward God and man. Some people, if they were to meet, would feel cowed because of the ugly and unkind things they have said and done toward each other. Jehovah we must meet. We stand a poor chance to stand there, if we have so conducted ourselves as to be unable to stand before each other. We should strive to take a stand on every question and let all we say and do be such that it will not give us the slightest discomfort in the judgment when every thought and real motive of our hearts shall be made manifest. Let us keep ever conscious of the fact that we are living in God's presence. He knows and cannot forget any wrong thought or evil motive, unless we repent and turn wholly from it.

"Faith unfeigned." This simply means faith without hypocrisy. All faith that we hear people talking about having is not unfeigned. There is too much pretended faith in God and his word. If people really believed what they profess to believe, they would act quite differently. We certainly would not hate each other. "He that hateth his brother is a murderer; and you know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." (1 John 3: 15.) If we have the faith we claim to have in the Bible, we will be slow to make additions and subtractions to and from the word. We will not be found perverting the truth: We would be afraid to do this. If we really believe, we will know this is a dangerous thing to do. (See Gal. 1: 6-9.) We would be slow to stir up strife over foolish and untaught questions, (1 Tim. 6: 3-5; 2 Tim. 2: 16, 23.) We will be careful to "follow after the things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another."

If faith we have, indeed and in truth, and not merely pretended faith, we will not be found teaching sprinkling and pouring for baptism. If we really believe, we will be afraid to do this. True faith establishes a godly fear in our souls. Neither will we be found trampling underfoot the plain-as-day teaching in Jehovah's word about how to save disorderly members by withdrawing fellowship from them to the end that they may be saved. If faith we have, we will go about such with but one desire in our heart, one controlling motive—viz., to be loyal to God and save the sinner. If the unfeigned faith we have, we will be found well-rounded Christians, standing "perfect and complete in all the will of God."

"Vain talking." Paul says that some turned aside from this love out of a pure heart, the good conscience, and the faith unfeigned, unto "vain jangling" or talking. What better could we expect of people who love not as they are taught to love, whose hearts are not pure, whose conscience is not good, and whose faith is a mere pretense? I know nothing better to say in helping us to examine ourselves to see if this love, purity of heart, good conscience, and unfeigned faith we have than to suggest that we consider carefully all we have done and have not done, and ask ourselves the question as to the motive we had in doing and in not doing certain things. Did you refuse to do that because you were certain it was best for man that it be left undone, unsaid, or unwritten? Did you do what you have done because you whole-heartedly believed it would be best for the cause of Christ and the good of some soul? Did you, now? Get the motive that has been moving you. and it will be a true index to the heart that is behind it.

Let us not forget that the end and aim of all God's dealings with us is to establish within us love, purity of heart, a good conscience, and faith that is unfelgned. If all who claim to be Christians had it, what a different world we would have, to say nothing of the glory of the church!

Brother R. R. Brooks is stirring things as none of our other workers are just now. He recently held an eight-days' meeting at Liberty Hill, with ten additions. He closed an eight-days' meeting at Austell on August 24 with two confessions. They want Brother Brooks back the first of October. When this reaches our readers, he will be near Grayford, Texas, for no other reason than to try to lead his father and brother to Christ. The St. Elmo congregation is paying his expenses there and back.

Brother Silas E. Templeton recently closed a good meeting at Palestine, Ala., with good crowds to preach to and one baptism. He is now at Hall's Valley, the home of Brother Flavil Hall, in a meeting, with one baptism to date. He goes next to Wilson's Mill, near Kingston, Ga.

Training Little Children

By MRS. ISABEL S. WALLACE

Being a Good Mother Requires Understanding, Devotion, and Sacrifice.

The education of young girls should prepare them for the greatest work in the world—wifehood and motherhood; and I wish they could all have courses in home training, domestic science, and kindergarten training.

My training as a kindergartner taught me many things, among them keeping strictly to a schedule; so my baby was fed, bathed, and put to bed regularly. Habit is formed early in life, and can help to make or mar character, depending on whether habits are good or bad. This carrying out of a regular schedule was not always easy, for it meant sacrifice of many pleasures. But I wanted to be a good mother, first of all, and I was rewarded by having a happy, good baby. Even now at six years old there is no fuss at nap time or bedtime. One of the things taught unconsciously in the kindergarten is regularity and promptness, and these can be taught in the home just as well.

Long before baby could talk she knew the little play for the fingers, "Here's a Ball for Baby."

Here's a ball for baby,
Big and soft and round!
Here is baby's hammer—
O, how he can pound!
Here is baby's music—
Clapping, clapping so!
Here are baby's soldiers,
Standing in a row!
Here's baby's trumpet.
Toot-too-too. Too-too!
Here's the way that baby
* Plays at "Peek-a-boo!"
Here's a big umbrella—
Keep the baby dry!
Here's the baby's cradle—
Rock-a-baby by! (Emilie Poulsson.)

The ball is made with the two hands rounded together; the hammer, by doubling up the hands and pounding one on top of the other. Baby's soldiers are made by holding all the fingers up straight. The hands are clapped together for the music, and doubled up, one in front of the other, for a trumpet. For peek-a-boo, the fingers are spread in front of the eyes, so that baby can see between them. The umbrella is made by placing the palm of one hand on the index finger of the other, and the cradle by putting the two hands together, insides of the palms touching and outer sides open.

As I said the words of this little play and made the motions, baby would try to make the motions, too. She also knew "Five Little Squirrels," "Good Mother Hen," and "Little Squirrel Living Here." Of course, she could not play them perfectly, but she loved them and wanted me to play them for her over and over.

Baby also loved music, and even when very tiny would stop crying to listen to soft music. She has always loved stories also. First, we took up "Mother Goose Rhymes." I would repeat them over and over to baby as I sat sewing and she played on the floor, and before she was two years old she knew a great many of them. She also knew the words of several little songs, such as "Rock-a-bye Baby." It was enchanting to hear her say them in her sweet baby way. I never actually taught her the songs, however, simply singing them over and over again.

Baby played with two other little girls from the age of three until over four. One was younger and the other older than she. The two little girls did not have much home training, as their mother was a society woman and left the children to the care of a maid. They almost lived at our house. When the children grew quarrelsome, I usually suggested a party. The little table and chairs were gayly set on the plazza, weather permitting, and milk, Graham biscuits, and dates were served, or grape juice and arrowroot biscuit. Sometimes an apple or an orange was carefully prepared for the occasion. Such a party always stopped the quarreling. Sitting down rested them and eating quieted them. Then, after they had finished, I left my work and told them a story. O, how eager their little faces were!

One day the younger visitor, who was spoiled and selfish and consequently quarrelsome, was making things unpleasant for the other two. I entered the room and quietly took her on my lap. She knew she had been naughty and was a little afraid of me, and also curious as to what was going to happen. The other two children watched with awe and wonder on their little faces. Very quietly I told a story my grandmother used to tell me about "Naughty Spotty." It made a great impression on them all, and, as I had foreseen, it was not necessary to say one word of direct censure to the naughty child.

Both of our little visitors were story hungry. Their mother said she could not tell stories. By reading a story over several times and getting its meaning and spirit, any one can tell a story. Do not be afraid to put expression into your voice and face. No stories should be told which may frighten a child. The children may dream about them or lie awake in fear; such stories also make them afraid in the dark.

Then there are pictures. Good pictures and picture books are very necessary for children. One or two pictures that are worth while are better than many poor ones. Since babyhood my little girl has known and loved pictures. She learned nearly all of the animals in that way. She has also learned how to handle a valuable book, and now she can be trusted to go to the bookcase and take out and replace a book after looking at the pictures and asking about them. Good pictures are an education to all children, and they love them.

In kindergarten children play with blocks, among other things—at first with the simplest kind, then with more complicated and larger sets. They are directed and taught how and what to build, and it trains the eyes and hands, teaching accuracy and construction. At home most children have blocks and can build on the floor, and love to build for hours. My husband builds castles and all kinds of wonderful houses with our little girl, and in this way the building becomes more and more instructive and worth while.

Crayons have played a large part in our daughter's life. She loves to draw and can really draw well. I have drawn simple things for her, and she tries to copy them. She also tries to draw what she sees, and thus in these two ways she is acquiring another medium of self-expression.

Love.

RY J. B. REDD.

Love that's deep and love that's long. Love that's big and love that's strong, And yet it never harms an enemy. Love that's right and never wrong. And that fills your heart with song. Is the love of Jesus only.

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

Brother Milam Gregg, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., wishes an explanation of Mark 16: 17-20, which reads: "And these signs shall accompany them that believe: in my name shall they cast out demons; they shall speak with new tongues: they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall in ho wise hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover. So then the Lord Jesus, after he had spoken unto them, was received up into heaven, and sat down at the right hand of God. And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word by the signs that followed. Amen." The querist wishes to know whether the signs shall follow believers of the present day.

I am inclined to the view that "them that believe" refers to a limited number during the apostolic age. We must go back to verse 14 in order to get the grammatical antecedent of "them" in verse 17. Christ in verse 14 upbraided his disciples for their unbelief, because they had not believed them that had seen him after he was risen. He then assured the disciples to whom he was speaking that they should cast out demons and speak with new tongues. They did this, as we learn from a number of passages of scripture. (See Acts 2: 4; 5: 16; 8: 7; 16; 18; 28: 3,)

In answer to another question, "Can we receive the Holy Spirit?" it is only necessary to refer the querist to Acts 5: 32, which declares: "And we are witnesses of these things; and so is the Holy Spirit, whom God hath given to them that obey him." The Holy Spirit is given to those who accept and obey the truth. Read, also, Gal. 4: 6; "And because ye are sons, God sent forth the Spirit of his Son into our hearts, crying, Abba, Father."

Brother J. E. Rowlett, of Fort Henry, Tenn., sends the following questions with the request that we answer them through the Gospel Advocate:

- (1) Does the Bible forbid women answering questions in the study of the Scriptures or quoting a passage relative to the question? (2) Does it even forbid them taking a class to itself and teaching? (3) Does the Bible teach that we should use only one cup and one plate in the communion service?
- (1) No. The Bible forbids woman usurping authority over the man. It also forbids her doing public teaching. The Bible is clear against women speaking in public. It says positively: "Let the women keep silence in the churches." Evidently this refers to spiritually endowed women. God not only respects womanly modesty, but he carefully preserves and cultivates it "in all the churches of the saints." Read 1 Tim. 2: 11-14: "Let a woman learn in quietness with all subjection. But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have dominion over a man, but to be in quietness. For Adam was first formed, then Eve; and Adam was not beguiled, but the woman being beguiled hath fallen into transgression."
- (2) Woman is commanded to teach. She is to train and teach her children at home. It is her duty to train and teach them in all places and on all occasions, wherever she may be. When she teaches her children in a class, she is not teaching publicly nor usurping authority over the man,
- (3) The Bible nowhere teaches just how many cups or how many plates we should use in the communion service. See answer given in the Advocate of July 3, page 636, in answer to H. N. Mann.

Brother T. K. Rouse, 2241 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill., requests an answer through the Gospel Advocate to the following questions:

Brother A, who was preaching in the church of Christ, converted and baptized Brother B. Later Brother A realized that he himself had not been baptized scripturally and was rebaptized. Seeing this, Brother B became dissatisfied with his baptism on the ground that a disciple indeed should have baptized him. Now the question arises, is Brother B's baptism genuine or not? Please explain fully.

The genuineness of baptism depends upon the genuineness of faith, and not upon the genuineness of the baptism of the administrator. If one's baptism depends upon the spiritual condition of the administrator, no man can ever know that he has been scripturally baptized. If such be the scriptural teaching, even now B does not know that he has been scripturally baptized, for the word of God declares: "For who among men knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of the man, which is in him? even so the things of God none knoweth, save the Spirit of God." (1 Cor. 2: 11.) In the light of the teaching of the word of God, I would say that when B was baptized it was genuine, and that he was not authorized to be rebaptized, provided his faith and repentance were sincere and genuine when A baptized him. We can never know what motive prompts the preacher to preach the gospel. We can never know from outward appearances just what is the true condition of the heart. The Holy Spirit, through Paul, declares: "Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will; the one do it of love. knowing that I am set for the defense of the gospel; but the other proclaim Christ of faction, not sincerely, thinking to raise up affliction for me in my bonds. What then? only that in every way, whether in pretense or in truth, Christ is proclaimed; and therein I rejoice, yea, and will rejoice." (Phil, 1: 15-18.)

- J. P. Milby, Lynnville, Ky., wishes to know the meaning of 1 John 3; 8-10; Col. 3; 13.
- (1) 1 John 3: 8-10: "He that doeth sin is of the devil: for the devil sinneth from the beginning. To this end was the Son of God manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil. Whoseever is begotten of God doeth no sin. because his seed abideth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is begotten of God. In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother." These passages teach that it is not consistent for the child of God to sin, and so long as the Spirit of Christ abides in him he cannot sin. thought that the apostle meant to emphasize is that the child of God cannot practice or live a life of sin. The spirit begotten of God does not sin and cannot sin continually and remain God's child; but sometimes the old nature revives, exerts its power, and for the moment the child of God may lapse into sin. The Christian, however, does not continue in sin, but turns away from it and seeks forgiveness as God directs. In keeping the commands of God and living lives of righteousness God's children are manifest, just as are the children of the devil manifest in doing evil and living criminal lives. They are not of God, because they do not his will. The man who does the will of God not only loves God, but he loves his brother
- (2) Col. 3: 13: "Forbearing one another, and forgiving each other, if any man have a complaint against any; even as the Lord forgave you, so also do ye." The child of God has no ground on which to claim forgiveness so long as he refuses to forgive those who trespass against him. (Matt. 6: 12.) The Bible often enjoins forbearance and long-suffering. It should be the earnest desire of every Christian to forgive those who have sinned against him.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

- W. F. Ledlow is now in a meeting at Denton, Texas.
- F. W. Smith began a meeting Monday evening at Tomp-kinsville, Ky.
- J. C. Estes and wife are taking a collegiate course at Davenport, Iowa.

Change of address: T. M. Carney, from Union City, Tenn., to 204 College Street, Fulton, Ky.

The next special number will be devoted to "Prayer" and will appear the last week in this month.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Allen, of Muskogee, Okla., announce the advent of little Miss Nancy Adelyn Allen, born on August 23, 1919.

Brother Larimore's meeting at his old home at Mars' Hill, Ala., was very fruitful. There was a large attendance of old friends and acquaintances.

L. H. Elrod will move with his family to Smyrna, where he has been engaged to be principal of the high school. The good wishes of many friends attend him.

From J. T. Harris, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., August 15: "On last Monday I closed a nine-days' meeting at Appleton with five baptized and one from the Baptists."

Mrs. M. E. Burnett, of Sunset, Texas, writes: "The special numbers are worth the price of the paper. The one on giving is just what the brethren should teach."

Our faithful friend and brother, Andrew Aynes, of Monmouth, Ore., has been a reader of the Gospel Advocate since the fall of 1873. He certainly belongs on the honor roll.

We have some extra copies of the special numbers on "Giving" and "A Better Ministry," which we will supply on request for ten cents per copy. Send in your order early before the supply is exhausted.

We are glad to report considerable improvement in the condition of C. M. Pullias, of Birmingham, Ala. He appreciates the many letters of sympathy he has received and says they are "above the price of gold."

From F. B. Srygley, Nashville, Tenn.: "I closed a meeting near Prentiss, Okla., on August 17, with thirteen baptized and one reclaimed. The preaching was done in a grove. The audiences were good at every meeting."

From G. A. Dunn, Memphis, Tenn., August 30: "I have just closed a meeting at San Saba, Texas, with eighteen additions—fourteen baptisms. Too much rain, but crowds came through mud and rain and at times overflowed the tent. I am to begin at Baldwyn, Miss., to-morrow."

Wanted—One copy of "The Sabbath and Seventh-Day Adventism," by L. S. White. The McQuiddy Printing Company wishes to print a revised edition of this tract; and if you will send a copy of the last edition, you will be given in return a copy of the revised edition when off the press.

H. H. Adamson, of Lewisburg, Tenn., is conducting a meeting for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, in Nashville. There was one confession on Sunday evening. S. M. Jones, of Beamsville, Canada, began at Reid Avenue on Tuesday evening. We shall anticipate good reports from both meetings.

From Eph. P. Smith, Martin, Tenn.: "Our meeting at Knob Creek, near Dukedom, continued eleven days. Four were baptized and five were restored. At Dillton, near Murfreesboro, six were baptized. At Rutherford four were baptized. At Berea one woman took membership, coming from the Baptists."

From D. D. Woody, Rives, Tenn., August 31: "In spite of the religious indifference so common among the people of to-day, the cause of Christ is still progressing. Our meeting at Cox's Chapel, in Crockett County, closed with interest at high tide. Nine more precious souls submitted themselves to the will of Christ."

From W. S. Long, Jr., Union City, Tenn., September 1: "I have been preaching for thirty days in West Tennessee, with forty-three additions as a result. The field is ripe, but we need more laborers. I shall return to Washington, D. C., in a few days, and those wishing to write me may address me at 2500 Pennsylvania Avenue, S. E., Washington, D. C.'

From R. N. Moody, Petersburg, Tenn., August 29: "The meeting at Friendship, Lincoln County, closed last night. The attendance and interest were good throughout the meeting. No additions. They asked me to hold their meeting next year, which I shall do, the Lord willing. I go to New Market, Ala., for the fifth Lord's day and the week following."

A letter from his daughter contains the sad information that there is very slight improvement in the condition of J. D. Walling, of Winchester, Ky., who recently suffered a paralytic stroke. She fears he will be helpless for life. The Gospel Advocate joins with hundreds of others in expressing heartfelt sympathy and in offering prayers in Brother Walling's behalf.

From B. C. Goodpasture, Shelbyville, Tenn., September 1: "The meeting at Portland continued fifteen days and resulted in fifteen baptisms. I closed an eight-days' meeting at New Hermon last night. The attendance and interest were good. There were two baptisms. S. H. Hall will begin our protracted meeting in Shelbyville next Sunday. L. G. Kennamer will conduct the song service."

S. Houston Proffitt writes: "Mr. J. B. Taylor and Miss Dora K. Walker were married at 1:30 P.M., Monday, August 25, at my home, in East Chattanooga. Elder T. B. Larimore, in his usual impressive and pleasing manner, performed the ceremony, Mr. Taylor is the son of Brother and Sister C. A. Taylor, of Doyle, Tenn., and Mrs. Taylor is the daughter of Brother and Sister J. T. Walker, of Dunlap, Tenn."

Wanted—One hundred churches to donate one hundred dollars each for a new, good house of worship in Washington. Do this in September and we will begin building on October 1. If you delay your donation, you delay the work. We will begin building as soon as we can get fifteen thousand dollars on hand. The rest will come while the house goes up. Confidence and quick action are what we need. Do your best.—W. S. Long.

From C. A. Buchanan, Handley, Texas, August 27: "I have devoted the most of my time the past year to Handley. I held a meeting in July at Floresville, where I formerly lived, and have contracted to labor with the church there for a year, beginning in September. I assisted Brother Nichol in our meeting here, in which there were three baptisms and much effective work done along other lines. I have just closed a meeting at Plajnview Church, near Stephenville, with five baptized. I promised to hold their meeting next year."

From W. M. Wilson, Homeland, Ga.: "We wish to call the attention of any brother who is a composer of music to the poem, "Hang Up a Smile," which, through the courtesy of the brethren, appears in this issue of the Gospel Advocate. The poem, as you will see, is smoothflowing, is perfect in rhythm and accent, and would, in the hands of a competent composer, lend itself to a good musical setting. Should any one who may chance to see it deem it worthy of his effort to set it to music, he will address me at Winokur, Ga., my school address, or Homeland, Ga., my home address."

From J. C. Estes, Dallas, Texas, August 21: "On Sunday night, August 10, we closed, with five baptized, a most interesting meeting at Rector, Ark., and next day went to Locust Bayou, Ark., where we began that night, closing last Sunday night with one baptized and one to be baptized on Monday. The meeting should have gone on all this week there. Interest was fine and crowds large and attentive. They were anxious for it to go on, but I did not have the time to stay there. I leave here to-night for Davenport to enter school for another year. May the Lord bless all the faithful in Christ Jesus."

From W. F. Cox, Selkirk, Ontario, Canada: "By invitation of the brethren at Fenwick, Ontario, I preached for them, both morning and evening, on August 10. By telephone, on August 16, I received word from Beamsville that Sister Culp, beloved wife of our much-esteemed brother. Matthew Culp, was dead, and that Brother Culp wished me to conduct the funeral services; so on Monday following, at 2 P.M., I was there to speak, in my feeble way, words of sympathy and consolation. The subject on which I spoke was, 'The Victor's Reward in Heaven,' to sit with Christ in his throne. (Rev. 3: 21.) Since last report three persons have been added to the one body by baptism at our regular services. More are expected."

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is malled regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The League of Nations and the Peace of the World. BY M. C. K.

To the diligent student of history and the careful observer of current events it is most evident that the nations of the world are now passing through one of the greatest crises of all history, if not, indeed, the greatest of all. There has never been such a time. Not even the day of Xerxes with his million soldiers, nor the day when the earth groaned under the tramp of Roman legions, nor yet the day when the brutal Attila, "The Scourge of God," led his merciless hordes of Huns in the fifth century of our era, witnessed anything like it; and devout souls are praying Almighty God that its like may never be witnessed again.

From different points of view and on different lines, great changes are taking place. Many times has the map of the world been changed, and, so far as mere geographical and national boundaries are concerned, sometimes even to a greater extent than will result from the unprecedented cataclysm and international upheaval of the past five years; but in point of man power and other vast material resources dedicated to the conflict, with the fearful destruction wrought, nothing has ever even approximated it. The prodigious sacrifice of human life, the enormous outlay of money, the ruthless destruction of works of art, the impious profanation of sacred things, the blighting of happy homes, and the heartless devastation of fair lands have all been on a gigantic scale which the world has never before seen. Moreover, we may also add, and with a profound sense of gratitude to the living God who is "mighty in battle" (Ps. 24: 8), that the declared and distinguishing purpose of this great struggle, at least on the part of the entente allies, was not merely to rescue civilization from threatened destruction, but to put an end to war and to lay the foundation for permanent world peace and a better conception of the brotherhood of man. This does not mean that their conception of brotherhood was that of the high and holy and purest of all brotherhoods, the brotherhood of men in Christ; but it does mean that the principle of "liberty, equality, and fraternity" among men, which was the principle underlying the French and American revolutions, shall be recognized and accepted by all the nations. Indeed, so far as the entente allies were concerned, the advice of Cicero was strictly carried out, which, expressed in English, reads: "Let war be so carried on that nothing but peace shall seem to be sought."

It is no part of the purpose of this article to enter into a detailed discussion of the League of Nations formed at Paris and now submitted to the different nations for acceptance and ratification. The men framing it are men of unquestioned ability, of broad and cultured minds, of sterling integrity and statesmanship, and of clear vision, and they declare that their purpose in framing it was to produce an instrument that would abolish war and secure permanent international peace with the ultimate disarmament of all the nations.

We waste no time in discussing whether the peace contemplated by this league is the peace of God chanted by the angels at the birth of the Prince of Peace. We know that it is not; but Christians ought to encourage, and be glad of the opportunity to encourage, any kind of peace among the nations that will rid the world of war and give the church a chance to "preach good tidings of peace by Jesus Christ." (Acts 10: 36.) Yea, they should thank God that the pistol shot fired at Serajevo in 1914 has ended as it has at Versailles in 1919. It is certainly an unenviable disposition to be ready to criticize when there is something to blame, and then to say nothing when there is something to praise. On the ground that their consciences compelled it, some preachers in Kentucky and elsewhere got themselves into trouble by criticizing the government for going into war; and yet, so far as we know, not a word of encouragement for the League of Nations to preserve peace has been spoken by this class. Think of it! Men on conscientious grounds criticize the government for going into the war, and then when the government is trying with other governments to effect an arrangement to prevent war, they have not a word to say! "Consistency. thou art a jewel." If for any reason such men during the war appeared to government officials as inconsistent as this course makes them appear now, it is not surprising that their "conscientiousness" sometimes failed to impress the government.

"But if the nations would accept the Lord's terms." they tell us, "it would stop war more effectually than any league man can make." Of course it would, but that has nothing to do with the point here. The nations have not yet accepted the Lord's terms; but when they propose to stop war even on terms of their own making, surely we should encourage them; and if they succeed, it will give us an open door to present to them the Lord's terms for the abolition of war and all other wrongs. As to whether the League will accomplish the end in view will be a matter of experiment; but in spite of clashing opinions over its discussion, it is our deliberate judgment, formed from a careful perusal of the document, that, if adopted, it will at least be an important step in the direction of putting an end to war, and so we miss no opportunity to encourage its adoption.

Let no one be frightened by the bugbear of internationalism contemplated by the League. The misinterpretation of Washington's remark about "entangling alliances abroad"-a remark only justified by circumstances now forever gone—has led to erroneous conclusions about the isolation of the United States. This country's isolation was once a fact, but that situation is gone forever. Modern science and invention have annihilated it. At the time of the famous remark it took three weary months of toilsome and zigzag sailing to cross the Atlantic Ocean; and while steam eclipsed that record years ago and brought the voyage within eight or nine days, yet they now fly across the same great ocean in less than three days. Isolation indeed! Washington and London are as near neighbors as Washington and San Francisco. By steam; by electricity; by ocean cables; by that miracle of modern invention and discovery, wireless telegraphy; and last, but not least, by that winged creature of man, the airship, which spreads its wings in old England and in a few hours lights on the American shore-by all of these, under the magic touch of man's inventive genius, have distances been annihilated, and with them the isolation of the United States, until Washington, and London, and Paris, and Berlin, and Petrograd, and Shanghai, and Tokyo are neighbors. While this editorial is being written the Courier-Journal, a great national daily newspaper, makes this announcement;

If a paper comes fluttering down to you from the skies to-morrow morning, don't be surprised. It will be merely a copy of the aërial edition of the Courier-Journal—a suggestion of the part aircraft will soon be playing in our everyday life. The plane will be sailing around over the State Capitol by eight or eight-thirty, and over the hustling metropolis of the bluegrass, Lexington, by nine o'clock.

The isolation of George Washington's day is not only a back number, but a far-back number; and, whether we want it or not, internationalism is here and has come to stay. Truly did the New York World recently say:

What is the chief concern of the world to-day is the manner in which this internationalism is to express itself: whether it is to be the internationalism of Wilson and Idoyd George and Clemenceau or the internationalism of Lenine and Trotzky and Bela Kun; whether it is to be the internationalism that subjects the nations to the reign of law or the internationalism that subjects them to the reign of anarchy.

Hence, concerning the League of Nations, there are two points in particular which all Christians, no matter what they may think is their duty to civil government in time of war, can afford to emphasize and encourage in all proper ways.

1. Granting that the League may not be all that is desired—its framers admit that it is not—yet its object is to stop war, to establish such a comity of nations as will lead to the settlement of international disputes by friendly arbitration instead of resorting to arms and bloodshed for their settlement. Surely Christians, at every opportunity, should encourage the nations to experiment in that direction. The League is subject to amendment in the light of experience; and who knows but its adoption may be a long step toward the glad time when the nations "shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks;" and when "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

(Isa. 2: 4.) Possiby such a step will bring the realization of Adelaide Proctor's beautiful lines:

Joy is like the restless day, but peace divine Like quiet night; Lead me, O Lord, till perfect Day shall shine Through peace to Light.

2. But even if the League should be a complete failure as a war preventive, or even produce war, the nations have lost nothing by the experiment; for nothing could be a greater war producer than the old system, which has not only kept the world full of wars for thousands of years, but surely the recent horrible slaughter is painful proof that it would be difficult for any other system to do worse. Hence, there is everything to gain and nothing to lose by the experiment. We may pender with profit the sensible words of Senator Beckham in a recent speech in the United States Senate:

All other methods have failed in the past to keep the peace of the world. Triple alliances, entente cordiales, balances of power have all failed and broken down; and is it not well for us to try another plan, one which comes to us with the indorsement of the leading statesmen of all the nations who took part in the Peace Conference at Paris? . . . We would infinitely rather take this league as it is, admitting its imperfections, than to go back to the international chaos that made possible the horrible tragedy which bereaved the whole world, sent to slaughter nearly eight millions of the strong and brave young men of the world, and left in its wake a train of sorrow and desolation never before equaled in all history.

Again, in October, 1914, when the lurid conflagration of war already enveloped continental Europe, the late Theodore Roosevelt, strongly favoring a league of nations, said:

The one permanent means for obtaining peace which has yet been suggested, with any reasonable chance of obtaining its object, is by an agreement among the great powers, in which each should pledge itself not only to abide by the decisions of the common tribunal, but to back with force the decision of that common tribunal. The great civilized nations of the world which do possess force, actual or immediately potential, should combine by solemn agreement in a great world league for the peace of righteousness. They should, furthermore, not only agree to abide, each of them, by the decision of the court, but all of them to unite with their military forces to enforce the decree of the court as against any recalcitrant member. Under these circumstances it would be possible to agree on a limitation of armaments that would be real and effective.

Finally, let us thank God that, under his overruling providence, it came into the heart of our own President and into the hearts of the rulers of the other leading nations to abolish war and to form a league to keep the peace of the world; and if, in the midst of many complications and the embarrassing and sometimes insuperable difficulties they had to encounter, they produced an instrument that does not accomplish at once and completely the high end in view, let us be grateful that they did the best they could in that direction under the circumstances; that they have taken at least an important step in the direction of its complete accomplishment; and that, under God, it may possibly lead to the glad day when all can sing with Edmund Hamilton Sears:

It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old;
For lo! the days are hastening on,
By prophet-bards foretold,
When with the ever-circling years,
Comes round the age of gold;
When Peace shall over all the earth
Its ancient splendors fling,
And the whole world send back the song
Which now the angels sing.

Precious to us, O Lord, is the death of thy saints, which make us heirs of so great a wealth: which leaves us furnished with so great variety of examples, that every want is abundantly supplied.—John Austin

Communion With God.

BY J. C. M'Q.

The Christian should not fail to make known his petitions to God. His chief delight should be to praise and thank God for the gifts and blessings that he enjoys, for every good and every perfect gift comes from Jehovah. In prayer Christians should be serious, reverent, and deeply in earnest. As no person can live a spiritual life without communion with God, it behooves us to consider the question.

WHO SHOULD PRAY?

It is wholly unnecessary to devote time to the consideration of the thought that it is worthless for the irreverent, disobedient, and insincere to pray. The man who is full of conceit and who feels abundantly able to guide and direct his own course in life will not and cannot pray to God. A man must feel his need of a Savior to direct his steps. The first beatitude is: "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." A man must be humble, must appreciate his own weaknesses and his own sinfulness, before he will seek God in the sacred hour of prayer. God seeks those who are poor in spirit to worship him. In Isa, 66; 2 the prophet declares: "But to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my word." The man of a presumptuous, haughty spirit, and who has not enough respect for the word of God to obey its teachings, will not feel the necessity of appealing to God in prayer. Paul, in writing to Timothy, says: "I desire therefore that the men pray in every place, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and disputing." Those who pray should lift up holy hands in every place, calling on the name of the Lord. Men who pray in faith and in harmony with the will of God are assured that God will hear and answer their petitions: "But if any of you lacketh wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all liberally and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing doubting: for he that doubteth is like the surge of the sea driven by the wind and tossed." (James 1: 5, 6.) "For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears unto their supplication: but the face of the Lord is upon them that do evil." (1 Pet. 3: 12.) "And this is the boldness which we have toward him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us: and if we know that he heareth us whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions which we have asked of him." (1 John 5: 14, 15.)

The man who is turning to Christ and who accepts by faith the conditions of salvation as they are proclaimed by the Holy Spirit is of a broken, contrite spirit. He is not turning away his ear from hearing the law, but is walking as the law of God directs. It is as natural for this man to pray as it is for him to breathe. The Pentecostians prayed after they had believed on Christ, when they cried out: "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" It is true that Solomon says: "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer is an abomination," (Prov. 28: 9.) Also we read: "We know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshiper of God, and do his will, him he heareth." (John 9: 31.) These scriptures do not indicate, however, that the man who comes believing the gospel, sincerely calling on God to bless him as he moves forward in obedience, is turning away his ear from hearing the law. As there must be a turning point in every life, this man, by faith, is heeding the law and is doing just what God commands him to do. It is very different, however, when a man calls on God to do something he has never promised to do, instead of by faith accepting the commands of God and keeping them.

The Bible nowhere teaches a man to pray for pardon while he is living in downright disobedience and rebellion.

While prayer is connected with the plan of salvation, so, also, is obedience. "To obey is better than sacrifice." Though he was a Son, yet learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and having been made perfect, he became unto all them that obey him the author of eternal salvation." (Heb. 5: 8, 9.)

DOES GOD ANSWEB PRAYER?

The Scriptures already quoted make it superfluous to ask this question. However, in the face of such plain scriptural teaching, there are some who contend that God does not answer prayer. It is held by them that there is simply a reflex influence in prayer—that prayer reacts and rebounds upon a man and makes him a better man. They contend that this is all there is in prayer. Such teaching is infidelity and denies outright the plain and positive teaching of the Bible. If a man is led to believe that God does not answer his petitions, he will as readily pray to a little Chinese idol as to the God of heaven. If there is nothing more than a reflex influence in prayer, the prayer addressed to the idol would rebound and react upon the man the same as would the prayer addressed to Jehovah. A man may patiently fish all day in a stream where he knows there are beautiful trout, although he is not successful in making a single catch; but the same man would not fish for one minute in a barrel of rain water where he knows there are no fish. The man who would do so would be considered a fit subject for the lunatic asylum.

We have many examples, however, in the Bible where God heard and answered prayer. Peter was cast into prison by Herod. The church made prayer for him. God heard and answered the prayer. An angel was sent to the prison and released Peter. No reflex influence on the church that was doing the praying would have sent the angel out of heaven and have released Peter from the cell in which he was sleeping and have caused the chains to fall off from his hands. This example teaches beyond doubt that God heard and that God answered the prayer that was offered up for Peter. Again, we find Paul and Silas in the Philippian jail. Their backs were all bleeding and torn. At midnight's quiet hour they prayed and sang praises unto God. God heard and answered them. A great earthquake was the result. The foundations of the prison were shaken, the doors were thrown open, and every one's bands were loosed. It is worse than folly to intimate that any reflex influence on Paul and Silas could have been responsible for all this. It was only the power of God that could have done it. God heard, God answered their prayer. Again, we learn that the prayer of the righteous dried up the fountains of the great deep for three years, "and it rained not on the earth for three years and six months. And he prayed again; and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." (James 5: 18.)

As we cannot tell how electricity dwells in our bodies, so we may not be able to tell just how God hears and answers prayer. As certain as God's word is true, we may know that he does answer the prayers of his people. While we contend that it is the law of nature for water to run downhill, yet we see the pumping station in the valley and water running uphill. Again, we see the locomotive plowing the track at the rate of fifty miles per hour, tunneling mountains, capping rivers, and bearing its precious freight of human souls. The lever is reversed, and the same power that was carrying the train forward at such a rapid speed is now reversed and the train moves backward. There is no law of nature violated. Just so God hears and answers prayer without the violation of any of his laws. It is the will of God for his people to pray, and it is his will to hear and answer all scriptural prayers.

How Many Cups?

Below I give a criticism of an answer that I gave Sister A. H. Daniel in the Gospel Advocate of July 3. I admire the candor and frankness of our brother, notwithstanding the fact that I am sure he misunderstands the scriptures that he is quoting. Here is what he says:

Brother McQuiddy: In your answer to Sister A. H. Daniel on page 636 of the Gospel Advocate of July 3, you certainly give the most unscriptural arguments possible. However, you state one good, sound, scriptural truth-viz., is as much scriptural authority for using one hundred cups as two cups in the service;" for, indeed, there is none for either, but there is abundant authority for the use of only one cup and no more than one. Please read the following scriptures carefully: Matt. 26: 26-29; Mark 14: 17-26; Luke 22: 14-21: 1 Cor. 11: 17-34. In all of these you will see plainly the expressions, "the loaf," "a loaf," "the cup," "a cup"—never "loaves" or "cups." But in next to the last sentence in your answer you reach the climax of your unscriptural teaching by stating: teaches nothing on the subject of whether there should be one loaf or cup or more." Now, Brother McQuiddy, will one loaf or cup or more." Now, Brother McQuiddy, will you please turn to 1 Cor. 10: 14-22? In verses 16, 17 we read: "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not a communion of the blood of Christ? The bread [margin, "loaf"] which we break, is it not a communion of the body of Christ? seeing that we, who are many, are one bread [loaf], one body: for we all partake of the one bread [loaf]." Could the Holy Spirit make it any plainer in [loaf]," Could the Holy Spirit make it any plainer in telling us to partake of one loaf? Therefore we can now understand what the Holy Spirit means in the aforesaid scriptures when he says "a loaf" (the loaf), "a cup" (the cup), because it cannot now mean anything else but one loaf, one cup. Now, then, my brother, who speaks where the Bible speaks and is silent where the Bible is silent—they who use one loaf and one cup, or those who use more than one loaf and one cup?

Again, my brother, you say: "But we should have no conscientious scruples over such matters and should not be among the number of whom the Savior speaks when he says that there are some who tithe mint and anise and cummin and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice and mercy and faith." Now, brother, evi-Now, brother, evidently, from your reasoning, you would have said the same about Nadab and Abihu. They obeyed God all right in offering up incense in their censers; but they did not take fire from the one altar, and fire came forth from before Jehovah and devoured them. They could not separate the fire from the one altar, and neither can you nor any one else separate the one cup from its contents. In Luke 22: 17 we read: "And he received a cup, and when he had given thanks, he said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves." In Matt. 26: 27 we read: "And he took a cup, and gave thanks, and gave to them, saying, Drink ye all of it" -which is only another way of saying "divide it among yourselves." Now, as an argument in your favor, you claim the perverted way of those in the church of Corinth proves your claim of more than one cup. You are wrong again, for the Holy Spirit is rebuking them for perverting the Lord's Supper, and especially their using the individual cup and loaf. B. ZEEBUYTH.

The brother loses sight of the fact that, literally, no man can drink a cup. If he thinks he can, he can only disabuse his mind by trying it. If we take the language literally, as does our brother, then we would be called upon to use the identical cup that the Savior used, for he says, "This cup is the new covenant in my blood," as recorded in 1 Cor. 11: 25. That literal cup could not represent even the new covenant in his blood, but the contents of the cup represents the blood of Christ. He commanded his disciples, also, when he took the cup: "Drink ye all of this." This makes it clear that the Savior refers to the contents of the cup they were to drink and not to the cup itself. Thayer, in his Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament, in defining the original word that is here translated "a cup," says, "By metonymy of the container for the contained, the contents of the cup, 'what is offered to be drunk," and gives Luke 22: 20 and 1 Cor. 11: 25 as examples of this use of the word. It is so clear that no one can drink a cup that it needs not further elaboration. His disciples can drink of the fruit of the vine through all time to come.

The abuses that grew out of the Supper show that they did not all drink of one cup, for there could not be enough of the contents of one cup to make them drunk. It was customary in Corinth to eat a meal together, as did Christ and his disciples at the Passover, when the Lord's Supper was instituted. This meal should have been eaten at home; but they brought their own plates and cups, and when they came to eating the Lord's Supper, they drank so much that they became intoxicated. The abuse that the Spirit condemned is that of making a feast out of the Lord's Supper, of eating regular meals at the same time instead of coming together and observing the Lord's Supper as directed. It is clear that they were using a number of cups in the Lord's Supper, and for this conduct Paul does not rebuke nor reprove them. I do not care to enter into an extended discussion of this subject, for it is so clear as not to need any extended argument.

The good work accomplished by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief has received the following indorsements from public men:

President Woodrow Wilson: "American diplomatic and consular representatives and other American residents recently returned from Western Asia assure me that many thousands of lives were saved from starvation by the gifts of the American people last winter. They also bring full assurance of the continued effective distribution of relief, and report that the suffering and death from exposure and starvation will inevitably be much greater this winter than last unless the survivors can be helped by further contributions from America. In view of the urgent need, I call again upon the people of the United States to make such further contributions as they feel disposed, in their sympathy and generosity, for the aid of the suffering peoples."

Former President William H. Taft: "The Armenian Relief has been organized now for some years; it needs more money; it is spending well and effectively; it is helping the poor people of the Near East wherever it can find them. You can be sure that whatever money is given will be properly administered for a people that need it sorely."

Charles E. Hughes: "Out of the horror and nightmare through which these people have passed comes the gratifying word that we can be of assistance, that our efforts will prove availing, and that we can share with them the bounty which we, as Americans, have enjoyed for years. The work done by this committee has been most unselfish and effective under conditions of great personal sacrifice."

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Opening at David Lipscomb College.

Opening exercises and enrollment of pupils will begin next Tuesday, September 9, at 10 A.M., in the college chapel. Brief addresses will be made by prominent brethren. The trustees will make a report of the progress made in the campaign for new buildings and improvements. Friends and patrons are invited.

An Appeal for the Church at Lake City, Fla.

We, as elders and trustees of the church of Christ at Lake City, Fla., wish to place before the brotherhood an earnest plea for the needs of this church; and when you have heard the story, we ask you to prayerfully consider the importance of this call and come at once to the rescue of the faithful few who are making this great struggle to advance the cause of Christ at this place.

Fourteen years ago the church was planted here at a great sacrifice of a few poor, but earnest. New Testament Christians. All these years the church here, largely consisting of women, has continued to "contend earnestly for the faith, with not even a breach of one Lord's day in the assembly (worshiping in the homes during the "flu" epidemic). We see our great mistake made in the beginning by not putting a good house on a good lot, rather than an inferior house in the suburbs of the city. We are now justified in the conclusion that the church could have done fully twice as much good had we located it more centrally in the city, having a good house on a good lot

We have bought for six hundred dollars a choice lot in the best residential portion of the city, three blocks from Main Street. (The creed is in the deed.) We are going to tear down the present house and use it in building a larger one, adding the needed conveniences. We have borrowed twelve hundred dollars with which to make this change for the betterment of the cause. A mortgage on the property has been given and notes signed by the trustees as security. The church has, at nearly all times of its history, been made up of poor, laboring people; consequently many of its most able and willing members have moved away. This is why we are forced to ask for help.

Lue first name below has labored for this church here during these fourteen years, at a great financial sacrifice, to advance the cause of Christ. Brethren Cameron, Shoulders, Northcross, Nelson, Estes, Malphurs, and Robert E. Wright have been here and can testify to these facts. Now, brethren, you know the present cost of labor and material is high, and we must have your help or fall in this great effort for good. We are all doing all we can. We shall continue to work and pray for this prize. Will you not pray and work with us to this end?

We thank you in advance for your donation, large or small. We believe you will help us, and, like Jacob of old, we will "not leave this till the Lord blesses." J. O. BARNES.

J. M. COLE.

The Needs of Amite, La. BY W. J. JOHNSON.

For some time we have been laboring to erect a meetinghouse here, and we are making some progress toward this end. The lot has been paid for and a few hundred dollars on the building fund raised. Material is being put on the ground, and we are anxious to have the house erected before winter. In order to accomplish this, we must have help from other places, as the cost of material and labor is so high; but much of the labor will be done by the members.

Amite is in the midst of a ripe barvest field. The church here has had more than forty additions during the past two years. Some of them have moved to other places, which will give us local advantages to do mission work where they live. Every member of the body in this section is doing his part cheerfully and gladly, for all realize the advantage gained by having a strong congregation at a good central point.

We earnestly desire the assistance of Christians in other places, so that the word of God may be more speedily carried to other points in this field. We believe that others desire to help and will help when given an opportunity. The restrictive clause is in the deed, to prevent those who would hinder our Master's work from Interfering with their innovations. Brethren, pray for our success. All gifts will be acknowledged promptly.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fig. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic, If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, hao suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a thoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, duratilities of the country o bility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor. Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn. N. Y. says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

We sincerely thank all the contributors for their liberality.

A Timely Note to Brethren.

BY R. L. GILLENTINE.

To my many friends and brethren who are readers of the dear old Gospel Advocate: I thought possibly it would be of some interest to you to see a few lines from me, as you doubtless remember me in my younger days and work. I have spent forty-three years as a preacher, and had arrangements for protracted meetings during this summer; but early in the spring my health began to fail, and in July I broke down, and have been confined to my bed and room ever since. In many respects I think I am better, and hope that I may be able to be out again before long. I have had all the care and sympathy and friendship that any man could ask. My children and my faithful wife have done all they could for my ease and comfort, besides a host of brethren and sisters who have tried to cheer and comfort me in every way they could. I have had lack of nothing. I need no donations nor contributions from anybody -the Lord has blessed us with abundance.

I have been taking the Gospel Advocate for over forty years; I am also reading the Firm Foundation and the Gospel Herald. I have noticed the challenge of Brother Boll to the cospel Advocate, also the challenge of Brother Chism to Brother Boll to debate those questions pertaining to the second coming of Christ and the mlllennium, and I am sick and tired of all such nonsense, and want to say that if these brethren would devote their time to getting the people in a proper state of mind and heart to receive the Lord when he does come, they might be of some benefit to the cause of Christ. To discuss these questions can do no good, and I am afraid the desire to do so arose out of vainglory and a love for leadership among men.

If they have nothing else to do and cannot find employment, let them come to Oklahoma and I will get them a job of picking cotton. Farm labor is worth four dollars per day here, and that would be worth more to the | mention the Gospel Advocate.

cause of Christ than all they all know or ever will know about the second coming of Christ.

If I am never heard from any more, let my last advice be to my preaching brethren to live soberly, righteously. and godly, looking for the coming of the Lord Jesus, so that whenever he sees fit to come, whatever he has for us. we will be prepared to receive it. However, I am afraid that if he were to come now, the first thing he would have to do would be to bind and cast out a lot of his professed followers before he could have any peace in his kingdom, whether his reign be on earth or in heaven.

If I get well, you may hear from me again; If not, I am ready to meet Him when he comes.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

NOTHING LIKE PLAIN BITRO-PHOS-PHATE TO PUT ON FIRM, HEALTHY FLESH AND TO INCREASE STRENGTH, VIGOR, AND NERVE FORCE,

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness;

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by almost all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, Bitro-Phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance, the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

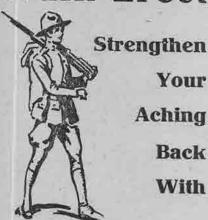

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness, and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, duil eyes ought to brighten, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION.—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on fiesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

The Cause of Christ at Meaford, Ontario.

BY J. L. HINES.

It is just a line to let the brotherhood know about the cause of the Lord in this part of the Dominion of Canada. 1 came here something over two years ago, following such men as J. A. Harding, E. A. Elam, John T. Hines, A. E. Elmore, John T. Lewis, J. E. Dunn, and others of like caliber. All of these men did good work in the vineyard of the Lord, and under their instructions many souls were added to the "one body." Brother Elmore baptized eighty odd persons in one meeting. When an infidel wave struck this part of the country and that which was supposed to be Christianity was crumbling before it. Clarke Braden. then a mighty giant for God, came to Meaford and laid infidelity in the dust: then it was not long until Brother J. A. Harding defended the truth here against Methodism, winning a great victory over Elder Wilks.

The cause was first planted here in the year 1845 and has prospered ever since, with the exception of some trouble arising a few years ago over a certain preacher who was bent on having his own way and advocating things that were unscriptural. This preacher was "shipped," and went direct from here to labor with a digressive church somewhere in the States. The Meaford church has been successful in sounding out the word, being instrumental in establishing a church at Griersville, about five miles south; one at Cape Rich, about six miles north; some churches in the Manitoulin Island and in several other places. Prospects were never brighter than now. The membership is full of zeal, love, and good works; and all are of one mind, heart, and soul. I have never labored with a better church or a more warm-hearted people than the brethren here. Since my stay with them several have been added to the church. The church is in fine condition financially. It is doing foreign and home missionary work, contributing monthly to the relief fund, supporting their minister, and the young girls of the congregation sew for the orphans; besides this, they have purchased a house and lot for the use of their evangelists. The church meets every Monday evening for Bible instruction, every Wednesday evening for prayer services and Bible study, and every Lord's day for communion and preaching.

I am not writing this for notoriety, but that the brotherhood may know that we are not frozen up, up here in the North country; but with all of this, brethren, the cause has been badly neglected here in Canada. In Ontario alone, which is about five times as large as Kentucky or Tennessee, with a population of about two and a half million, there are about eighteen well-established congregations of loyal brethren, and some forty or fifty mission points, where the brethren meet in halls or private dwellings. There are about thirteen preachers in the provinces, of which only three or four give their full time to the ministry of the word. But the Meaford Church has turned out seven ministers that I know of. Two are laboring in the Western provinces, one in the Manitoulin Island, one in Texas, and the other three in Ontario. There have been many other preachers started out by the Canadian churches. but where are they? The most of them have gone to the States. Brethren, we need you back in Canada. You know the people better here, their ways and customs. Your own countrymen are calling and begging you to come back and help them. Won't you come? How many preachers will sit down right now and write me that they will come to Canada and labor for the Lord?

The Lord willing, I am to start out on a missionary tour of the churches

Report of Mission Work.

" BY C. C. MERRITT.

Since last report I have had some encouraging things from the workers in the destitute fields.

We have, through the assistance of two neighboring congregations, been able to have Brother W. A. Sevedge, of Wichita, Kan., move here and help us in this part. He is a young man who has for some time been wishing to get started in the work of preaching the gospel of God. We are glad to be able to thus help him, and also glad for the help he is able to render in the work here. He has evident signs of making a fine preacher, and even now has nothing to be ashamed of. He is humble, full of faith and of the Spirit. He has good talent and is not afraid to use it.

The congregation at Ruskin, Neb., sent thirty-five dollars to the meeting Brother E. C. Fuqua held near Cheyenne, Wyo. The community gave about eight dollars to reimburse Brother Fuqua for some equipment secured for the meeting. He reports a fine meeting and a great prospect for future work.

Brother J. H. Murrell, of Tennessee City, Tenn., will move to Olathe, Col., in September or October. It is my earnest desire to see the congregations assist him in this work, so that he may be free to give all his time and attention to the work that is so badly needed in that part. You may send to me for this work until he gets settled. and then all donors will be requested to forward direct to him.

Brethren, I am not ashamed of the work that has been done, but I am ashamed that there are so few working at this work and so little is being done. Do you blame me? What can you do-what will you do-to help change the situation?

EVER SALIVATED BY CALOMEL? HORRIBLE!

Calomel Is Quicksilver and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Calomel loses you a day! Do you know what calomel is? It is mercury—quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones, and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated, and all knocked out, and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel, just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and cannot salivate.

Don't take calome! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children, because it is perfectly harmless and does not gripe.

FIELD REPORTS

Kentucky.

Bardwell, August 27.—I closed my sixth meeting last night with Burrus Chapel, in Lake County, Tenn., with nineteen additions to the congregation—seven by baptism, eleven by restoration, and one by membership. The singing was led by Brother E. V. Wilson, of Union City, Tenn., assisted by B. G. Swinny, of Greenfield, Tenn.; and they did their work well. We had large crowds.—Joe Ratcliffe.

Wingo, August 26.—The meeting at Hickory Grove, near Almo, closed with large attendance, splendid interest, and nine souls yielding obedience to the gospel. Moving from there to Cairo, Tenn., Brother W. Claude Hall, of Dyer, Tenn., and I were colaborers in preaching the word during the past week. The meeting was closed at an early date on account of the serious illness of some of the members. Excellent interest and plenty of hospitality, but no additions.—J. Alonzo Williams.

Tennessee.

Lynnville, August 25.—I closed a week's meeting near Fayetteville on the second Sunday in August. Two persons were baptized. This was one of the best meetings of my life. I am now in a mission meeting near this place, using my tent.—J. Clifford Murphy.

Pikeville, August 27.—I recently held a good meeting at Eaton, with six baptisms and one from the Presbyterians who claimed she had been baptized for remission of sins. Eaton is as fine a place as I ever was at to hold a meeting. The brethren there are going to keep ng house for the Lord. Andrew Perry, G. S. Marsh, Emmet Cagle, and J. C. Mosley were at the reunion at Cold Springs and Rocky Branch.—J. Mosley.

Bethel Springs nest 25.—The Refuge meeting, correct R. L. Colley, be and closed on August 17 and closed on August 17. There were two sermons daily (morning and afternoon), except in last day, when we had only one. In a persons were baptized and one took membership. Brother Colley presents his subjects with an earnestness which seems to say that "wee is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." While he presents the gospel attractively to all, there is nothing in his teaching or preaching that could be construed as a compromise with error.—D. M. Archer.

Clarksville, August 27.—The meeting conducted in the schoolheuse at Skeen's Corner, eight miles from Lebanon, closed on Lord's-day morning. There were no baptisms, but there were many "visible results." I consider it one of my most successful meetings so far this summer. I preached at Jackson's Temple, near Burns, on Monday night. Two persons made the confession. They were immersed yesterday evening. Brother J. D. Derryberry and I will begin a meeting at Norene, Wilson County, Saturday night, in the Methodist meetinghouse. Brethren, remember our work in all your prayers.—William P. Walker.

GIRLS! MAKE A BEAUTY LOTION WITH LEMONS

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth, so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness, and tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener, and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms, and hands. It naturally should help to whiten, soften, freshen, and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is truly marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.

The fourth Lord's day in July found me at Rocky Point, near Bon Aqua, Tenn., where we had one of the best meetings I ever held. Eight persons were baptized, all the Eight persons were baptized, all the congregation except a few made a general confession and took on new life, and several were restored. The first of August found me in Obion County, at Oak Ridge, ready for my fifth meeting there. Only one was immersed; but, as elsewhere, the church seemed determined to do better. This meeting closed earlier than church seemed determined to do better. This meeting closed earlier than former ones, one reason being that I had to go to Georgia, so far away. One sermon was preached at Cloverdale, near Oak Ridge, where I established a congregation in 1913. I enjoyed going back after several years to "see how they fared." I find brethren and others hungering after the solid gospel and asking more for brethren and others hungering after the solid gospel and asking more for the "old paths." Sad departures have been made by many, but I am hoping all such will not hesitate to correct errors. A great many breth-ren seem to think they can remain out of duty and then return and go to work without confession of wrongs. to work without confession of wrongs. The Highland Park Church of Christ, Montgomery, Ala.

BY JOHN T. SMITHSON.

It has been my pleasure to labor with the church of Christ worshiping at Highland Park, Montgomery, Ala., for nearly two years. Now that I am leaving, I feel that it is due all concerned to make some statements about the work during the time I was working with them, and also to state what the church wants in the future.

I have preached for several congregations, and was delighted to live among and labor with the members, but I have never labored with a congregation where there was more peace and good will toward each other than there is in the church at Highland Park. There are some as good and faithful members in that congregation as can be found in any congregation. The church there is not doing all it could do, perhaps; but where is the church that is doing all it can do?

It is equal to any in spiritual life; and while poor in this world's goods. it is rich in faith and good works. As to its wealth, it is behind none in giving. Only a few members own their homes, but they are very liberal and contribute freely of their means. During the time I was there several special contributions were made for special purposes, and we were not ashamed of the amount contributed. While, on account of the high cost of living and the continual advance in prices, I did not receive from the church, for my services, enough to support me, yet I was not forgetten in time of great need. The congregation gave me seventy odd dollars at one time, and other things also were given along through the years. I was away in some meetings, and the church also gave me the contribution. This helped me considerably to bear a burden of a financial kind; and while, with all the gifts and favors shown me, I did not break even, yet I did not ask the church to share the rest. I am glad I worked with the brethren there, and shall never forget them, and will always be willing to do them good.

I would like for a good man to go there and take hold of the work. It grew while I was there, and will continue if a good man takes hold of it, for he will have a good backing by the members. They did more than they agreed to do, and did it cheerfully. They will do any good man that way. I love all the members there, and the only reason I am leaving now is the lack of support. We have had no disagreement nor trouble any way. They offered to do all they could and the best they could, but realized it was not sufficient for me to live; so they cheerfully released me from my labors with them, October 1, and it was by my request. I verily believe I could yet remain with them if things would get lower so that I could live in the range of the financial strength of the church, Brethren, this congregation wants a good, faithful, earnest, consecrated man to labor with it. It will support a man to the amount of about one hundred dollars per month, or near that amount. They will do what they say they will do. They never fell behind with me, but paid up promptly what we agreed on. If any good, true preacher wants to labor with this church, I cheerfully commend it to you, and they would like for you to begin the work as soon after September as you can. The work will be pleasant and agreeable. They do not want any one who is not faithful to the word of God. I will be glad to know that a good man would get in the field as I move away.

There was a short statement in the Gospel Advocate of August 14, announcing my leaving Montgomery, in which I stated that the union of the two congregations in town was effected and much good by them can be done. There is no congregation more willing to do right than Highland Park. Any one who may be interested in this may write Brother Allen Dillard, 112 South Perry Street, Montgomery, Ala., or Brother Henry Craig. Forest Avenue, Montgomery, Ala.; or he may write me, care of the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Statement from the Highland Avenue Church at Montgomery, Ala.

In the Gospel Advocate of August 14 appeared a letter from Brother John T. Smithson, headed, "Leaving Montgomery, Ala." While we are sure Brother Smithson did not intend to cast any reflection on the congregation at Highland Avenue, still the wording of his letter is misleading and might create the impression that we had not fully met our obligations to him, and that any one coming here to labor with us would not be supported as he should be. As Brother Smithson is out of the city on his vacation and his present address is unknown, we wish to correct any such impression

Brother Smithson made his own terms when he came to Montgomery, a substantial increase over what we were then paying, and insisted that it be for two years, which will not expire until January 1, 1920. We accepted these terms and have met our obligations promptly, most of the time in advance. Realizing the advanced cost of living and sickness in his family, we have on several occasions raised very liberal contributions for him, additional, besides, we have allowed him all moneys in excess of salary while preaching abroad, which in total has been equal to or more than the average salary of members of the congregation.

Our congregation is not large or wealthy, but any brother whom we may select to take up the work at this place need have no lear of not receiving support to the amount promised, and that promptly, on terms acceptable to him; and in case he finds in the future that it is not sufficient, if the congregation feels that it can do no more, it will be gracious enough to release him from any obligation to them, as it has done in Brother Smithson's case, and allow him to seek more remunerative work.

FROM THE FIELD

Tennessee.

Lucy, August 28.—The first Sunday in August I began a meeting with the Solo congregation, which was attended by large crowds and attentive hearers. Twenty-six persons were baptized into Christ and seven were restored to fellowship. The brethren supported the cause well. I began a meeting at Detroit, Elm Grove congregation, on the second Lord's day. We had the largest crowds that ever attended a meeting at that place. Seven were baptized, one was received from the Baptists, and six were restored. On the third Lord's day in August I began a meeting at Covington. The attendance was reasonably good. Four were baptized and the church was aroused to do greater things for Christ. I am now in a meeting at Gilt-Edge, with large crowds and attentive hearers.—Porter Norris.

Texas.

Fort Worth, August 21.—The meeting at Ada, Okla., lasted twelve days and nights. Thirty-one were added to the congregation—twenty by confession and baptism. I shall leave to-morrow for my sixth meeting at Stephenville, Texas.—T. W. Phillips.

Fort Worth, August 25.—If I can leave my wife, I will begin a meeting at Keller next Friday night. She is again in the Harris Sanitarium at Fort Worth, and in a critical condition. The epilepsy has returned, and I know not what the end will be. Brethren, will you pray for us?—Tice Elkins.

Itasca, August 22.—We have just closed a good meeting here. Brother Ledlow did the preaching and Brother Dow Martin led the songs. Brother Earl Smith and I are in a meeting near here, with fine interest, though the weather is unfavorable. I go to Three Rivers soon for a mission meeting. This is a needy field.—L. E. Carpenter.

Ben Franklin, August 24.—I had to close the meeting at Hatfield, Ark., the third day on account of diphtheria. Still we had six baptisms and bought a lot for a new church house, as the present one is too small. We gave three hundred dollars for the lot, and were offered six hundred dollars for it before we got the deed. I will return next month to finish the meeting. I am at home to-day. Heath is my next appointment, and I hope for a fine meeting.—C. H. Smithson.

Waxahachie, August 28.—We had near two hundred at the hour of prayer this week. Brother John E. Dunn was hindered in reaching us with a lecture of his experiences in France. Many were here from different congregations in the county. We have good crowds at all the services. Brother J. S. Dunn has just closed a good meeting at Rattan, with five baptized, one a Methodist woman seventy-eight years old. He will begin a meeting at Jessie to-night and at Maypearl on September 7. The brethren at Reagor Springs are building a new meetinghouse. Brother Gardner spent the month of August at Ennis. He has done good, and the brethren report good services. For its size, there is no better church in the State than Ennis. Brother Dum spends much time in the county, where he is greatly loved.—Ben West.

Grand Saline, August 27.—I closed a meeting last Lord's-day night at Coreen, near Jacksonville, with five baptisms and one restoration. At the last service the Baptist preacher arose and challenged me to meet D. N. Jackson, of Texarkana, in oral discussion. The debate will be some time in September. The congregation at Coreen has been established only fourteen months. Its establishment was due to the labors of Brother F. L. Handley, of that place. Brother Handley is a God-fearing man, speaking where the Book speaks and having no mercy on gainsayers. The Baptists had held sway in the community for the last thirty-five years without opposition until the brethren began to meet there. Since that time fourteen have been added to the one body, while only two small boys have "joined" the Baptist Church.—W. G. Jernigan.

Kirbyville, September 1.—I have just returned home from a thirty-six-days' campaign in Central and North Texas. My first meeting was at Hirst Springs, Coryell County. Late thrashing and lack of interest by the members caused this meeting to be an utter failure. My next meeting was on the Colorado River, San Saba County. Belated thrashing and sect prejudice gave us a small attendance, but the meeting was a success. Only three aliens attended. Two of them, splendid married men, were baptized, one coming from the Freewill Baptists. I am to be with them in 1920. My third and last meeting was at Old Caddo, Johnson County. This was a three-Sunday meeting; and although rained out two nights, it was the largest attended and withal the most interesting meeting I have been in for years. The membership joined right in for a victory for truth, and we won. Seven were baptized and three were restored.—J. S. Daugherty.

TREMENDOUS VALUE FOR 15c.

The Pathfinder, Leading Weekly Magazine of Nation's Capital, Makes Remarkably Attractive Offer.

Washington, D. C. (Special),—People in every section of the country are hurrying to take advantage of the Pathifider's wonderful offer to send that splendid illustrated review of the whole world thirteen weeks for 15 cents. It costs the editor a lot of money to do this; but he says it pays to invest in new friends, and that he will keep the offer open until the Pathinder passes the 300,000 circulation mark, which will be in a few weeks. Fifteen cents mailed at ence with your application to Pathinder, 120 Douglas Street, Washington, D. C., will keep the whole family informed, entertained, helped, and inspired for the next three months.

POSITIONS

We want three young men and four young women (16 to 38), from each county, to train at home for office positions paying from $1,200.00 to $2,000.00 a year. For list of positions and other valuable information, address DRAUGHON'S COLLEGE,

West Virginia.

Buffalo, Box 81, August 28.—Since last report I have received additions to our building fund as follows: From Mrs. Ardie Teets, $3; T. P. Freeland, $25. We are very thankful for this help. The last offering reported herein came from a man almost eighty years old. I have known him almost forty years. When I first began preaching the word, he encouraged me, and he has been doing so ever since. If twenty persons will now send us twenty-five dollars each, we can soon have a house of worship. Will they do it, or will the grandest and noblest brotherhood on earth allow us to be crushed out entirely and forever in this sectarian country? With my heart centered upon the "precious promises" of God, I await the answer of every one who may read this note. With what money we have and five hundred dollars more we can build a small meetinghouse this fall. Give us this house now, and we can evangelize this territory within a few years. We must have a base from which to operate. I can use checks or money orders. I am the duly accredited treasurer of the congregation, and I will see that your money is rightly used. I will also see that the church property is safeguarded against innovations. Please address me at Buffalo, W. Va., Box 81. Always tell what your offering is for. The very little help that I get here goes into our building fund, and that is hard on me. Let every true Christian help to dispose of this matter now by adding something to our building fund.—F. P. Fonner.

Scientific Treatment for Rheumatism.

Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism, it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a sait combination scientifically prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless, but effective. Positively guaranteed by moneyback offer. It is a Godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis, of the Nashville Rallway and Light Company, says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief. Too much cannot be spoken in behalf of Renwar for rheumatism." Sold by druggists; price, 50 cents; or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE.

Edifying as the Need May Be

The Prospect in South Carolina.

Not only the supporters of the work, but all who like to hear of the advancement of the kingdom of Christ, will be pleased to learn of the very favorable start that has been made by Brother Thomas H. Burton and his coworkers in South Carolina, which is truly virgin soil, so far as the primitive gospel is concerned. Brother Burton writes:

Our work here has progressed beyond our expectations so far and has come to the place that the future progress depends largely upon the brotherhood. I have searched the town over looking for a place to meet in this winter; and when we get a place, it is only a short time until we are locked out. Now the best we can do is to meet in a small, dark, upstairs room over a business house. We cannot grow much in this kind of a place. I really believe if we had a bouse to worship in that we would have a membership of two hundred and fifty inside of twelve months. The people are waiting to see what we are going to do. I have secured an option on a beautiful, well-located lot on Main Street, opposite the courthouse, a place we will never be ashamed of. It is forty-four by one hundred and twenty feet. This lot will cost us fifteen hundred dollars. The one joining it is held at two thousand dollars, and the one next to it at twenty-five hundred dollars. The little congregation here has pledged itself for three hundred and forty-five dollars, and only one of us owns his home. We expect to do much more than this. Brethren, what will you do? We must certainly have a place to meet. The cause must not be neglected any longer in this State. God has richly blessed you; what will you do now for him? Please send a contribution immediately, as we cannot afford to let this opportunity slip. The option on the lot only lasts until the first of October. "What thou doest, do quickly." Make all checks payable to Thomas H. Burton, Union, S. C.

The Health of the Soul.

A good friend of mine once moved from the heart of the city several miles out into the country, where he had hought a few acres of ground, just enough for a garden and some apple trees. He seemed so delighted and happy amid the new surroundings that his city friends said he was "a changed man." "Yes," he said, "I am happier than ever before, for now I have room to turn around and breathe." More and more the people of to-day are learning the value of breathing room to their physical health. The public schools are teaching it and the doctors are prescribing it as never before. In some States the health boards are enforcing laws that provide for adequate ventilation wherever people are brought together. Due to constant agitation in the magazines and newspapers, factory and tenement conditions have been considerably bettered over the country. The light and air that God gives so freely to all must not be cut off from any of his "little ones." Every reform of this kind is good and practical; but would to God we could in some way arouse the people to the importance of breathing room for the soul! What a refreshing prayer is that that the elder John offers in behalf of his friend Gaius: "Beloved, I pray that in all things thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth." A great many people enjoy good health in every respect except their souls. Their bodies are strong and well, but their souls are weak and sick. With Gaius the reverse was true. His soul was prosperous, but there was doubtless some bodily allment that Paul prayed might be removed. 0 0 0

What to Do for the Soul Ache.

Many years ago lived Laura Bridgman, an exceedingly interesting girl, who, like Helen Keller, was deaf and dumb and blind. Her instructor, endeavoring to show the difference between the material and immaterial, used the word "soul" "What is soul?" she asked. "That which thinks, feels, hopes, loves," replied the teacher, "And aches," she added, eagerly. While not deprived of the three senses mentioned; all of us are ready to testify that our souls often ache. What is the remedy? As we say of our bodies, we must give our souls room to breathe. We must create for them the atmosphere in which they can breathe at their best. The supreme folly of the "fool" mentioned in one of our Savior's parables was in thinking that he could feed his soul on the things that are stowed away in barns. (See Luke 12; 18.) Substitute banks for barns and you read the folly of many who are rich or desirous of riches to-day. When Lot pitched his tent toward the important city of Sodom, he thought that he was making wonderful provision for himself and his household. But later, when he was being led away from the doomed cities of the plain, he was glad enough to go to some quiet little place. "O let me escape thither, (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live." (Gen. 19: 20.) Now he sadly awakes to the fact that while providing for the comforts and luxuries of the body, he had been stifling the health of his soul. Sodom and Lot are far removed from us both in point of time and place, but the lesson is one and the same. There are some Christians who need a change of climate for the good of their souls. They are in places where it is easy to crowd their lives full of the things that appeal only to the temporal. There are some who are unable to resist the lure of sin in the cities. They lived reasonably pure lives before they moved to town. They may be prosperous in other ways, but their souls are on the retrograde. If you believe the change would be healthful, remember Lot and move.

Everyday Helps to the Soul.

Louis Albert Banks says: "The best soul atmosphere in the world is that which clings about the word of God," All Christians believe that, but comparatively few of us are seeking more and more to enjoy this atmosphere. No lesson is more plainly taught in the Scriptures. The idea of their nourishment is fundamental. Simon Peter said to newborn spiritual children: "Putting away therefore all wickedness, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as newborn babes, long for the spiritual milk which is without gulle, that ye may grow thereby unto salvation." (1 Pet. 2; 1, 2.) Paul speaks of some who had "tasted the good word of God." Timothy had been "nourished in the words of the faith," Surely one who reverently reads the Bible every day is making breathing room for his soul. The same is true of prayer. Jesus. while busy and borne down with the cares of teaching and healing, left the scenes of his greatest activity and spent whole nights with God in prayer. His soul must be nourished; its health must be preserved. It was said of him that he "went about everywhere doing good." This life of sacrifice and self-denial for others was one great factor in the preservation and renovation of his spiritual nature. If Jesus Christ incarnate needed these things for nourishment, surely we need them, too. By keeping the body under, we must keep the soul on top.

May God give to each struggling disciple that estimate of its worth once pronounced by a Christian martyr as he was being led to the fagots: "I will suffer my body to be burned rather than have my soul defiled."

Seeking the Truth.

BY JAMES E. SCOBEY

There is a widespread and growing thought among the professed followers of Jesus Christ that the doctrines of one sect, or denomination, are about as good as, if not a little better than, another. If the teaching of Jesus and his apostles and prophets is reliably true, there is something radically wrong in some of the teachings among his professed followers. They largely disagree in what they teach in reference to the things that pertain to life and godliness.

It must be a matter of prime importance that we have the unadulterated truth upon the subject of what we must do to be saved, if we are to do anything, Every man, every woman, every boy, and every girl who has arrived at the age of responsibility should know the truth. It will free them from error and will lead them in the path of peace and righteousness. Upon the subject of religion there is no truth to be found, save that which has been revealed to the world by the Holy Spirit.

Paul, in writing to the Ephesians, said: "There is one body, and one Spirit: even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one falth, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." I believe all professed Christians agree that the "one body" spoken of is the church of the living God, or kingdom of Christ. The "one Spirit" is the Holy Spirit, the revealer of the things of God. God, who spoke in past time through the prophets, has in these last days spoken unto us by his Son. The prophets spoke by the Spirit; Jesus spoke by the Spirit, being endowed with it without measure. He himself said: The words which I speak are not mine; the works I do are not mine: I speak the words I hear of my Father, and I do the work he has appointed me to do. Paul says in the Corinthian letter: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." (1 Cor. 2: 9, 10.) As man's spirit in him knows all his things, so God's Spirit knows the things of God. Paul said he had not received the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things freely given to us of God. So there is nothing pertaining to spiritual things we may know, save those which have been revealed to us by the Spirit. Our faith, therefore, in God, in Christ, and in a future state, depends on the revelation made by the Spirit of God.

But we shall never be able to receive and embrace the truth as it is in Christ Jesus as long as we are prejudiced and prepossessed in favor of the interpretations of the Scriptures of the great religious leaders of the past, or. as for that, those of the present era. Luther and Calvin and Wesley and Whitefield and Campbell were great and good men. They were honest and conscientious in their views with reference to the teaching of the Scriptures. But Luther and Calvin differed widely in their conclusions. They protested strongly against Roman Catholocism and produced a great religious reformation. But this reformation became divided. The followers of Calvin embraced his doctrine of election and predestination; while another leader, Arminius, strongly opposed the doctrine of Calvin. Calvin's followers were called "Calvinists," and those who agreed with Arminius were called "Arminians." Thus began Protestantism. Wesley and Whitefield, the fathers of modern Methodism, were not Whitefield was in principle a Calvinist and agreed. Wesley an Arminian

The misfortune is that the professed followers of Christ are separated into warring factions, each claiming to be teaching the pure and unadulterated, systematic, revealed truth of God. It is absolutely certain that all are not in harmony with the teaching of the word of God. Indeed, none may be. The present condition of the religious world is due to false teaching, of which I shall have more to say in this article.

In reference to false teaching, I am met with the statement that there is little or no ground for us to differ concerning the things necessary to become a Christian. There is but one essential element in Christianity. That element is faith—not in a system of doctrines, but faith in Jesus, the Son of God. Christians all believe in him. As to other things you may do, they are of minor importance and matters of indifference, not being essential to salvation—such as baptism, joining a church, etc. If you desire to be baptized, you may choose the mode; and if you desire to join a church, you can choose the church.

Those who preach such doctrine have no respect for the teaching of Jesus and the apostles. That which makes one a Christian puts him into the church, and he does not have to join the church, or be confirmed, or be taken into it by some man or men. God adds to the church those that are being saved.

In all the great meetings carried on in the great cities by such men as Sam Jones, Billy Sunday, and some others who are aping Sam Jones, not one has ever told a penitent what Peter told the Pentecostians to do. When they were convinced of their sin, they "said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." (Acts 2: 37, 38.) Nor will you hear one of them quote the commission Jesus gave to the apostles as recorded by Matthew and Mark. Their great slogan is: "Quit your meanness and be good;" "Take Jesus as your personal Savior." No one can learn what to do to be saved from such teaching as that. It is misleading, and therefore false, not being in harmony with God's word. If we heed the word of God, we will perceive that our best interest will be found in our ability to recognize false teaching and to reject it, from whatever source it may come. Jesus, in his Sermon on the Mount, said: "Beware of false prophets." (Matt. 7: 15.) Not only has Jesus warned his disciples against false prophets, but the apostles in their Epistles have strongly emphasized the warning. Paul, in his exhortation to the elders of the church of Ephesus, said: "For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." (Acts 20: 29, 30.) Yes, and they are now engaged in that very work, and have been exceedingly active in their effort to draw away disciples after them. (Read 1 Tim. 1: 3, 4; 2 Pet. 2: 1.)

There is no greater danger to churches which would be faithful to Christ than to fall under the influence of false teaching, which may be propagated by some preacher or writer of reputation, and for whose opinions they have respect, as well as a warm personal friendship.

But you may ask: "How are we to know false teachers?" In answer, I would say that every man and every woman, as for that matter, preaching or teaching upon any subject, is moved either by the spirit of truth or the spirit of error. If one wish to convert a man to Masonry, odd Fellowship, or anything else, political, social, or religious, he is moved by the spirit of that institution. False teaching, religiously, always ensues when one teaches less or more than has been clearly and fully revealed by the Holy Spirit as recorded in the Scriptures. If the teacher cannot give a clear, clean-cut "saith the Lord" for his statements, indulges in doubtful interpretations of the Scriptures, he or she becomes an unsafe leader.

I can remember almost the beginning of the great reformatory movement begun by Alexander Campbell, Barton W. Stone, John T. Johnson, and others. I have heard Campbell preach in the city of Nashville. Both my grandfathers and grandmothers were baptized by Barton W. Stone. The position of these men, religiously, commanded the attention and received the hearty indorsement of thousands. They proclaimed the word of God as their only rule of faith and practice. They pleaded with the various religious bodies to meet with them and stand with them on the Bible. They were eminently successful, and there grew up a large body in the Middle States of those who called themselves "Christians," or "disciples." They were of one heart and one soul and held the unity of the faith in the bond of peace. There were no divisions, or factions.

What are the conditions now? Do they all speak and teach the same thing? (1 Cor. 1: 10.) What is the matter? What is the cause of all the contentions, factions, unrest, and confusion? Unfaithful and false teaching. The opinions of men have more weight in determining the actions of the great majority than the plain, simple teaching of the Scriptures.

When I was a student at Franklin College, there was an announcement made that the disciples would hold a convention at Cincinnati, and the brethren generally were invited to be present for the consultation. President Tolbert Fanning went. On his return he gave an account of the meeting in the college chapel. He said the brethren in that meeting had taken a step which would result in disaster to the church. The leaders proposed to form a society. He had publicly, in a speech, opposed such a step. The next day, as discussion on the proposition proceeded, he arose to speak again. He was told that he had had his say and that others would be heard. He left the meeting and returned home. I remember distinctly that he said in the chapel that they were gone, were adrift, were in the fog without starlight, sunlight, or compass; that they had ignored the guidance of God's word and there was no telling where they would land, if they should land at all; that, having no certain standard, they would become another great sect, with less stability than those religious bodies which have written creeds. I have not quoted his words, but have, I am sure, given his thought, God's word gives ample direction for every good work (2 Tim. 3: 15-17.) Timothy needed nothing else, and we need nothing more.

There are now many preachers in the land, who claim to be only Christians, who have made void God's word and are teaching things for the adoption and observance of their infatuated followers of which the Bible knows nothing. They be false prophets. But the great leaders or would-be leaders of religious thought are not all found in the pulpit. They are also found as editors and correspondents of religious magazines. But the most fearful, the most deadly infidelity is found among the teachers in some of the colleges and universities of this and other countries.

To give an idea of the trend of some of these men's teaching on the subject of religion, I quote a few passages from an article in the international Christian Messenger. It says that a few menths ago the University of Chicago published a book, entitled "A Guide to the Study of the Christian Religion." The volume contains essays of thirteen leading professors. Among them are Dr. Faunce, of Brown University; Dr. George Cross, of Rochester University; and Dr. F. A. Christie, of Meadville Theological Seminary.

Now let us see what these leaders of "religious thought" teach.

Professor Gates, of the Disciples Divinity School of the Chicago University (he belongs to the Christian Church), writes: "In the light of the new historical criticism of archæological discoveries and of studies in comparative religion, it was discovered that the sacred book of the Hebrews had grown up as the sacred books of all other religious peoples, and were a record and a reflection of their civilization and religious evolution. In other words, the Bible itself was discovered to be a natural instead of a supernatural book, and to reflect the scientific knowledge of ancient people, rather than anticipate that of the modern world."

I might give many other extracts, but suffice it to say that, with the Bible classed with the natural production of men, the way is open to deny the facts upon which Christianity is founded.

These infidels have determined that we need a new religion, one suited to the progress of the (wentieth century, and that we (they) must make it. The deity of the Christ is a myth; the doctrine of the atonement, foolish.

Dr. T. G. Soarse says: "We no longer think of salvation as dependent upon the acceptance of certain redemption facts." By this he means that the obedience to the gospel is entirely unnecessary, so far as our welfare and happiness are concerned.

This "modern viewpoint" and archæological investigation had its beginning in Germany many years ago. The Bible was discredited, the people became infidels and were taught that might made right. Behold the result!

No, my brethren and friends, the Bible is either a revelation from God or it is not. It certainly is not the product of man. Its authenticity is vouched for by the history of the world. Jesus was born of a virgin, lived as a man, died as a here. He has taught us the last great lesson of life. He has brought immortality to light, and by his suftering has become the author of eternal salvation to all who obey him. (Heb. 5: 8, 9.)

I have, I trust, placed before you the danger of false teachers. I close with the exhortation of the apostle Peter: "Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness." (2 Pet. 3: 17.)

Divorce—Old Testament Teaching. BY H. LEO BOLES

We have already seen that in the creation male and female created he them, and that the two became one flesh, which teaches that God contemplated the union in marriage for life. The two in becoming one flesh formed the basis for offspring like unto this one flesh. The man shall leave his father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife. He is to leave the nearest and dearest relationship of life and cleave unto his wife. It follows that if he should leave the dearest relationship of life, then no other relationship should interfere with this union. We are told that the word "husband" comes from two Anglo-Saxon words-"hus," meaning house, and "band," or bond. An ancient spelling was "housebond." He is to be the bond of the house, or family, which should not be broken. ery description that God has given of husband and wife contemplates a permanent union.

There is no scripture that pertains to a separation until we come to the law of Moses. For twenty-five hundred years, during the patriarchal dispensation, God gave no permission for a separation or instruction concerning the divorced husband or wife. However, the evil of divorce was practiced; and when the law was given, this sin, with others, was restrained and regulated by the law of Moses. Christ, commenting upon the law, says: "Moses for your hardness of heart suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it hath not been so." (Matt. 19: 8.) This shows that the union of husband and wife in the beginning was fundamental and permanent in the perpetuation of the human race.

With this clear understanding, we may proceed to the investigation of the law of Moses upon this question. The law is expressed in this language: "When a man taketh a wife, and marrieth her, then it shall be, if she find no favor in his eyes, because he hath found some unseemly thing in her, that he shall write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house. And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife. And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house; or if the latter husband die, who took ner to be his wife, her former husband, who sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife, after that she is defiled; for that is abomination before Jehovah; and thou shalt not cause the land to sin, which Jehovah thy God hath given thee for an inheritance." (Deut. 24: 1-4.) One has said that Moses' aim was "to regulate and thus to mitigate an evil which he could not extirpate." This is in harmony with the interpretation which Jesus gives. This seems to give the husband the lead in the separation. Professor Israel Abrahams, of Cambridge, England, makes this comment on this point: "In all such cases where the wife was concerned as the moving party, she could only demand that her husband should divorce her. The divorce was always, from first to last, in Jewish law, the husband's act." The common word used in the Hebrew text means "the sending away of a wife." "The woman thrust out." is the term applied to a divorced woman. The masculine form of the word is not found in the Hebrew text. This seems to have given the husband the advantage of the wife; however, Jehovah intended to make it as difficult as possible for a separation to occur. Later in the history of the children of Israel and during the days of the Savior on earth, the putting away of a husband by the wife was practiced. Before the husband could put away his wife, he must give her a bill of divorcement; and this had to be drawn up by some constituted legal authority and in due legal form. This would make it difficult and would have a restraining in-

The grounds of divorce as set forth in the law of Moses was a very much disputed question among the learned Jews. The source of dispute among them was as to what constituted a valid reason or just cause for separation. The language is variously translated, which lends encouragement to widely differing interpretations. There were two great schools of commentators and translators among the Jewish rabbis. The Shammai party maintained that nothing less than unchastity or adultery furnished a just ground for divorcing a wife; Hillel and his disciples went to the extreme and said that a man could put away his wife for every cause or any cause. The Pharisees tempted Jesus by trying to get him to commit himself to either Shammai or Hillel, as is found in the nineteenth chapter of Matthew. But Jesus did not commit himself to either party; he answered their question from the law of Moses and thus defeated their scheme and confused them in their own devices. He then adds that God did not originally intend that there should be any separation or divorcement, except on the ground of adultery or fornication.

The Hebrew prophets make a spiritual application of divorcement. They regarded Jehovah not only as Lord and King of his chosen people and thus entitled to obedience and loyalty from Israel, but they also conceived of Jehovah as a husband married to Israel. "For thy Maker is thy husband; Jehovah of hosts is his name," (Isa. 54: 5.) Again: "Return, O backsliding children, saith Jehovah; for I am a husband unto you." (Jer. 3: 14.) These show that Jehovah sustained the relationship of a busband to Israel. The union which bound Israel to Jehovah is thus beautifully symbolized by the marriage relation Israel was untrue, like an unfaithful wife, to this relationship. The prophets bring this charge against Israel. "Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, wherewith I have put her away?" (Isa. 50: 1.) And again: "I saw, when, for this very cause that backsliding Israel had committed adultery. I had put her away and given her a bill of divorcement, yet treacherous Judah her sister feared not; but she also went and played the harlot." (Jer. 3: 8.) Any unfaithfulness or sin on the part of Israel was regarded as spiritual adultery, which necesarily broke off the spiritual ties and divorced the nation from God. These scriptures lend encouragement to the position that originally there should be no separation, except on the grounds of fornication.

Life is a succession of lessons which must be lived to be understood.—Emerson.

A Plea for the Orphans.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Recently many have sought to place their children in the Tennessee Orphans' Home, but because of lack of funds and equipment we were compelled not to receive them. Many of the boys and girls who came to us were bright, talented, and healthy children, such as are destined to make useful men and noble women, provided they are properly trained and developed physically, morally, and spiritually. When I listened to the plea of relatives of these children, who are wholly unfitted and unable to take proper care of them, I was very much grieved that we had to inform them that we had no place for the children. It is even pathetic and touching to find so many bright, beautiful children actually suffering for the want of proper care and attention.

While God has ordained the Christian home for the rearing and training of children, and while I would not encourage any one to believe that he is not responsible for the training of his children, yet there are many fatheriess and motherless children that will grow up in Ignorance, unfitted and unqualified for the responsible duties of life, unless individual Christians make some sacrifice in order to give them the proper environment and attention.

I am sure no Christian can engage in the work of feeding, clothing, and educating orphan children without being greatly benefited morally and spiritually himself. As Christ longed for the soul that was hungering and thirsting for salvation, so the Christian heart reaches out to the helpless and fatherless. The man who does not delight to do such work has not the spirit of Christ. The needs of our own souls actually require and demand that we render help and assistance to those about us. We cannot sit with closed hands and folded arms and go to heaven. If we would reach heaven at last, we must take somebody along with us.

The high cost of living naturally makes it more expensive to maintain the children in the Home. The Home now has about seventy children. If we had more funds, we could doubtless care for other children that must now be turned away. Individual Christians and churches have been very liberal, and some have contributed regularly and systematically to the Tennessee Orphans' Home. I regret to say, however, that our contributions last July were lighter than they had been heretofore. Perhaps that was my fault, as little publicity was given to the demands of the Home. The building needs repairing, the farm owned by the Home Is running down and needs proper attention; besides, we are endeavoring to raise money to erect a suitable house on the farm. On the last of October we must take our bearings and see just what we have done during the past year. Brother John W. Fry, who handles the funds of the Home, has just written me that it will take very close management to get through the present month with the funds that the Home has on hand. I am sure that all that is necessary will be to call the attention of Christians to this fact. It is certainly not necessary to beg them to have fellowship in this work. The first Lord's day in October is the time for our next regular contribution for the Home. When you come to your contribution for the Home, remember that two dollars now does not go any farther than one dollar did a few years ago. Contributions should be at least doubled in order to get the same results that we have been getting in the past. I suggest this to the churches so that they may make their contributions accordingly

Many people desire to place their children in the Tennessee Orphans' Home. The standing of the Home is good, and we hear now only words of commendation of the work that it is doing. In order that this usefulness may continue, and even that it may do still greater good in the future, we are stating plainly the facts to our readers so that they may know how to act intelligently. It is hard to think that any one who is worthy of the name "Christian" would be willing to go through life without having fellowship in such work. When we stand before the judgment bar of God, it will be inexpressibly delightful to hear the great Judge say: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me," How terrible and how awful it will be if on that great day the Judge turns us away because we turned deaf ears to the cries and entreaties of orphan children! Do not forget a liberal contribution to the Home on the first Lord's day in October. Remember that "it is more blessed to give than to receive" and that "the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." Send all contributions direct to the Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn.

THE FARM.

We have already raised a considerable amount for the purpose of building the house on the farm. We have not sufficient funds as yet to complete the house. It ought not to be necessary to ask our readers again to make sufficient contributions to erect a suitable farmhouse. Are there not twenty brethren scattered thoughout this State and other States who will contribute fifty dollars for the erection of this house? Many brethren could do this and never miss the contribution. If we can get twenty brethren to make a contribution of fifty dollars each, we will have sufficient funds to begin work on the house, at least, and will guarantee to see that the house is erected. We are not wishing to dictate to any brother, but we feel sure that there are many brethren who would like to have fellowship in this work by putting at least fifty dollars into a good farmhouse. Brethren who will do this, or who wish to contribute especially for building the house on the farm in order to make the farm property more valable, are requested to send their contributions direct to J. C. Mc-Quiddy, Nashville, Tenn., who is chairman of the Board of Directors, and who will see that all funds are properly applied. If you cannot send as much as fifty dollars, or if you prefer to send even more, send whatever amount your own heart dictates; but be sure to remember that you need to make the gift, and that whenever you do so you will be the greatest beneficiary.

Church at Lawrenceburg, Tenn., Exonerates Brother Kimbrell.

Lawrenceburg, Tenn., August 28, 1919.—This is to certify that we have this day made an investigation of the charges recently brought against J. P. Kimbrell by H. A. Rogers and others, and are prepared to give out the following statement: Brother Kimbrell does not deny having brought suit against Brother Rogers for one hundred dollars expenses; consequently, we need offer no comment on that, Aside from this, we fall to find any ground for the accusation. He not only denies the charges, but has produced proof which, to our minds, substantiates his denial and establishes his innocence of any misconduct. In our judgment, the charges are absolutely false, and we feel that a serious injustice has been done him in that they have been published. If we believed in his guilt, we could not for a moment shield or uphold him; but, having known him for years and taking into consideration the evidence in the case, we cannot do otherwise than make this statement to rectify the mistake that has already been made. We do not know Brother Regers personally, and do not desire to cast any reflections upon him; but this is the result of VIRGIL G. HOLT. our investigation.

The Power of Intercession.

The weary ones had rest, the sick had joy that day,
And wondered how.
The playman singles at his work, had prayed;

The plowman, singing at his work, had prayed: "God help them now."

Alone in foreign lands, they wondered how Their feeble word had power. At home the Christians, two or three, had met To pray an hour.

So we are always wondering, wondering long,
Because we do not see
Some one, unknown perhaps, and far away
On bended knee.

Why Give to Support Christian Education?

BY W. W. FREEMAN.

Leaders of thought and of affairs must be educated. The loyal Christian people must have a larger share in this leadership; and to get it, we must provide educational advantages second to none.

Preachers are judged, not altogether by their message, but as well by their general culture and education. For this reason preachers and all Christians should have a liberal education to avoid casting reproach on the cause of Christ in its primitive purity and simplicity.

Man is not born educated. The forces of opposition are making great progress and in many cases outrank those which stand for the truth. To cope with this situation, Christian education is absolutely essential. The piece of steel must not only have the right temper, but it must be properly shaped and sharpened, if it is to fill the requirement. As with razors or needles, so with men.

Ignorance breeds superstition and destroys discipline in the ranks of any body of people. Leadership of Christian forces in this age demands the soundest of scholarship and the fullest and most accurate of information. Only the school that is directed in the interest of the Christian heritages will defend them and develop them. Now that every man is having world citizenship thrust upon him, it is exceedingly important that all learn the conditions and thus be able to meet the demands intelligently.

Jesus said: "Make disciples [pupils] of all the nations;" Preach the gospel in the whole creation." He spent his life on earth in this work, and he commissioned his followers to continue the process until the end of time. Shall we be true to the trust, or shall we let Pllate, or Calaphas, or Simon the sorcerer, make ruination of what we should use to the salvation of society and of the souls of men? Think on this, then act!

Solomon said: "Train up a child in the way he should go." "Bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," says the Holy Spirit. Are we doing it? The church is theoretically, with us, "the pillar (not "pillow"] and ground of the truth." This is meant to be a reality and not an item in a creed. Deeds, not creeds, are primary. A man may subscribe to the "Philadelphia Confession" or to the Sermon on the Mount; but If he fails to observe the Golden Rule, he is as "sounding brass," or a clanging cymbal." We are "stewards" in God's sight. Ye are not your own:" "ye are bought with a price"the blood of Christ. The people who do not give to the cause of Christ in education of mankind are religious slackers. No investment for self will bear fruit unto God. Treasures below are vain if they are not given to God's work. A school pouring forth Christian influences and Christian character will stand as the greatest monument in time and as a priceless treasure through eternity.

The best governments of the world separate politics or State affairs from religion. The State supports such schools as develop (not counting the religious influence which the church is supposed to furnish) the sort of characters she needs to uphold the authority of the State and to advance temporal interests. The devil has almost every form of agency to fit men for efficient destructive work in every field. Christian people have ideals peculiar to them. If their ideals are to have support, they themselves must give it. The State is not going into religious work, nor is the enemy of Christianity going to support it or look out for its success in the future. Christians must realize that they are "the salt of the earth." There is but one way to promote the interests of Christianity. and that is to get behind the movement and push it vigorously. Quick schemes, crooked methods, and hotbed processes in propagating error are everywhere supplanting the eternal and inspired truth. The only way to meet them effectually is to support the fundamental process of Christian education regularly and liberally.

The Hun threatened our homes, but worse is his destructive criticism that pervades in aggressive spirit the schools of our land. It would destroy our faith and our Bible; for it denies that the blood of Jesus Christ atones for sins, says he was born illegitimately in a natural way. and teaches all students that the Bible is simply and only an accumulation of human traditions. In Russia and other lands, and to no small degree in our own precious homeland, atheistic, communistic, and materialistic socialism threatens, with red flag, fire, and sword, the heritages of Christian civilization. They have no need for Bible, church, or home. Their god is licentiousness; their guide, depraved reason; and for homes they would substitute promiscuous intercourse and communal order. In mockery of Christian teaching as to the sanctity of marriage and as to immorality, reports of May 13, 1919, show that the Bolsheviki "conducted in a church with all ceremonles a mock marriage between an aged priest and a mare." Not only so; "official publications of Moscow soviets contain parodies in verse of church funeral services, supposed to be performed over the body of a dog." Unless Christians support in peace the forces of Christian education, heathen orgles and Oriental cults, following in the wake of materialistic evolution and destructive thought, will destroy our civilization, and the world will relapse into heathen darkness and the depravity of Babel, Sodom, Babylon, and Rome. Only a hundred years ago such a reign of terror engulfed France. God was dethroned for reason; the weak was banished and churches and institutions of Christian education were confiscated; and athelsm and free love were propagated instead of the gospel of Christ.

Ignorance, greed, misnamed "higher education," Mormonism, Catholicism, rank socialism, pharisaic "orthodoxy," and indifference and worldliness among professed Christians are terrible conditions that we cannot depy are general. The only hope of our fair land and of the church of God is in widespread, liberal, and sound Christian education. In particular, the cause of simple, primitive Christianity is desperately in need of more support. The crisis is here. With liberal support in general, the outcome need not be feared. With the establishment of world peace, an era of Christian education and gospel preaching would develop, such as the world has never dreamed of.

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Command the people that they go forward." This is the motto: "Onward, Christian soldiers!"

To strive against evil motions of the mind which may befall thee, and to reject with scorn the suggestions of the devil, is a notable sign of virtue, and brings great reward. —Thomas à Kempis.

Query Department

By J. C. McQUIDDY

J. T. Daniel, 1917 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill., requests an explanation of 1 John 3: 9, together with 1 John

I refer him to the answer given to E. Wallace in the "Query Department" of the Gospel Advocate of August 21, for an answer to 1 John 3: 9. The other passage, 1 John 5: 1, reads: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is begotten of God; and whosoever loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him." The meaning of this passage is clear: The man who believes in his heart that Jesus is the Christ is begotten of God, and whosoever loves God loves also the children of God.

Sister Carl Green, of Kennett, Mo., does not understand just what 1 John 3: 9 means. The passage reads: "Whosoever is begotten of God doeth no sin, because his seed abideth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is begotten of God." The exact point that our sister wishes information on is, when is one begotten of God? When one believes with all his heart in the Christ, he is begotten of God. This scripture has no reference to a fleshly birth, nor to the end of time. This begetting is done through the word of truth. James 1: 18 declares: "Of his own will he brought us forth by the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures." Other passages could be given, but this is sufficient.

M. Y. Rickman, Morristown, Tenn., inquires to know if Judas was present when the Lord's Supper was instituted. He was not. The Holy Spirit, through John, declares: "He then having received the sop went out straightway: and it was night." (John 13: 30.) I understand that the Lord's Supper was instituted at this point, after Judas went out. We learn from Matthew that this was after the Passover. For his order, read the twenty-sixth chapter of Matthew. We learn from this chapter that the order is as follows: (1) The Passover, (2) the exposure of Judas, (3) the Lord's Supper. John follows the same order, save that he omits, because so well known, the origin of the Lord's Supper here and simply tells of the departure of Judas. If he had followed the same order given by Matthew, he would have recorded the institution of the Lord's Supper after the departure of Judas.

J. W. Burgan, Sinal, Ky., inquires to know whether it is wrong to partake of the Lord's Supper twice on the first day of the week. He says:

If I go to a congregation to worship on the morning of the first day of the week and the opportunity is offered me to eat the Lord's Supper and I accept it, and in the atternoon I go to another congregation and the opportunity to eat the Lord's Supper is offered me again, and I do so in remembrance of the Lord and to proclaim his death till be come, being twice the same day, have I done wrong?

I know of no scripture that authorizes a Christian to meet and partake of the Lord's Supper twice upon the Lord's day. I do read, however, in Acts 20: 7, that the disciples met on the first day of the week to break bread. This does not say that they met twice on the same first day of the week to break bread. Of this passage Dean Howson says: "We have here an unmistakable aliusion to the practice, which began evidently immediately after the resurrection of our Lord, of assembling on the first day of the week for religious purposes." The Lord arose on the first day of the week; he appeared to the apostles the second time on the first day of the week; and one week later, on the first day of the week, the day of Pentecost, the church was founded and the apostles were baptized in the Holy Spirit. There is abundant authority for observing the Lord's Supper weekly upon the first day of the week; but I find neither example nor precept encouraging us to observe it twice on the first day of the week.

Sister B. A. Goad, 369 Olive Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., is troubled and writes for information. Here is what she says:

I want to do all I can to the glory of God and the advancement of his cause, but I cannot and do not view the negro question as some of our brethren do. They go and preach to them, and think I am not doing right that I do not go. Now, it appears to me in this light: If they have no preacher of their color, I think our preachers should preach to them, and I am more than willing to assist in securing a preacher for them (for we have some able colored preachers, and our preachers should preach to them until they can get one) and do all I can to advance the cause, but I cannot see it as they do. Now, if I am wrong, please help me, and I will certainly appreciate It. We have so many of our own color in this city whose souls are perishing for the want of the gospel, why not labor among them?

If I understand our sister, the question she raises is not as to whether it is right or wrong to preach the gospel to the negro. I understand that she accepts the Savior's commission where he says: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." I certainly think that she will find no one who objects to the negro preaching the gospel to his own race. White preachers should encourage negroes to do this, because the negroes will accept the gospel from one of their own color more readily than from one of another race. It seems to me to be the part of wisdom to equip the negroes and to encourage them to preach the gospel to their own people. I understand that our sister holds the position that white preachers should preach to the negroes only in the event that the preaching cannot be done by negroes. I do not see any reason for special objection to this position. All preachers should preach the gospel where they can do so most effectively, and should be prudent and wise in declaring the message to the people. I believe if our sister will encourage and help equip colored men for preaching the gospel to their own race, and then encourage white preachers to preach to the negroes when a negro preacher cannot be found to do the preaching, that all consecrated, devout Christians will cooperate with her in such work. As she states the question, I can see no ground for division, and feel sure that both white and black would do well to work for the salvation of souls.

Brother Rowe's Observations.

What Brother F. L. Rowe has to say in the Christian Leader of September 2 about dancing is too good and sensible and too well said not to pass it on to a larger reading; bence, I am giving it to the Gospel Advocate readers. Young ladles, if you want to be selected as a wife by the young man who has honorable ideas, who will love you, support you, and certainly keep you out of the divorce courts, stay away from the ballroom. Read thoughtfully what Brother Rowe has to say;

I have been asked how young people can be protected against the dangers of dancing.

I can hardly conceive of a Christian boy or girl engaging in such a needless and destructive pastime. And I cannot see how an adult Christian can see a young Christian boy or girl endangering both body and soul without attering a loud warning cry. But, realizing that there are times and places when dancing and other worldly pleasures are sometimes forced upon young Christians by their associates, I feet it a duty to warn both the young people and their parents. I do not see how any mother or father can consent to their children attending any dance, whether it be in the parlor at home or in a public hall. Any one who knows the ways of the world knows that there is great dange to the morals of the young in connection with dancing, the morals of the young in connection with dancing. Considering also the way the young women dress nowadays, the danger is tenfold greater. Any Christian father or mother who permits their child to attend a dance is playing with fire. I assert that no young man can dance with a young woman and keep his mind from evil thoughts. And if young girls could know the comment that some men make about girls they dance with, they would never dance again. The young girls are not to be judged so severely, for most of them are ignorant of conditions or emotions that their natures arouse. I can say, further, emotions that their natures arouse. I can say, further, that every young man respects a young woman who does not dance ten times more than one who does. The thought of any young man who happens to be in the dance hall, or in your set (most of them strangers to you and some of them, perhaps, men that you would not be seen with), being allowed the liberty of embracing your daughter, is something too repulsive for a pure-minded Christian to

I have never known of any Christian who was a regular attendant at the dance to amount to much in the church; their lives are too inconsistent. But I have known of hundreds of good, pure young women who keep themselves free from improper familiarities and free from gossip, and from the questionable comment of young men who sometimes like to boast of their success with this girl or that one, who have gone on in their Christian life and proven noble characters, possessing all of the beautiful Christian graces that should adorn pure womankind. The highest degree of refinement on the part of our young women is the surest assurance of the stability and moral uplift of our nation. If our young women are lax, loose, or lewd in their conduct, the community and the nation go down with them.

Mothers, talk to your daughters to show them the evils that always go with the dance. If you can keep them from this vice until they are twenty or twenty-two years of age, they will then have enough mature wisdom to recognize the danger for themselves and will then thank you for guarding them against this dangerous evil.

Here is a letter of appreciation from the secretary of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief-

Dear Mr. Lipscomb: I inclose a report of our Auditing Committee, which I hope you will receive and examine as in a very real sense a report of the work which you have helped to make possible. Thousands and tens of thousands of little children are living to-day who would not be alive had it not been for the substantial contributions that your readers have made. These children constitute the hope of the future, so far as the Near East, the cradle of the human race, is concerned.

I am leaving this week for a series of conferences in London, Paris, and Constantinople concerning conditions and requirements for the coming year; but before leaving I want to record our appreciation of the important part that you have had in this life-saving service and to place in your hands this preliminary auditors' report, though we will hope within a short time to give you a more complete statement of the multiform ministries represented in these tables of figures

I want, in behalf of our Executive Committee, and if I may in behalf of the rescued but destitute children of the Near East, to thank your readers for the cooperation that has made this work possible. Sincerely yours,

C. V. VICKREY, Secretary.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are Intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

W. H. Carter is in a fine meeting eight miles from his home at Lafayette, Tenn.

William P. Walker believes "these special numbers are making a good paper better."

J. H. Hines writes to tell us "the 'Better Ministry' Number was certainly wholesome."

Mrs. Leona Boykin, of Winter Garden, Fla., writes: "The Better Ministry' Number is just simply fine."

As we go to press it looks like we will have the largest enrollment in the history of David Lipscomb College on opening day.

E. S. Jelley, returned missionary from India, is visiting the Nashville churches. He wishes to interest the churches in giving better support to native workers.

G. W. Garrett closed a meeting at Haydenburg, Tenn., in which four persons were baptized and one was restored. He is now in another meeting "just across the mountain."

On the opening day at the Fanning Orphan School more girls were received than any other year in its history. New baths and a new laundry add much to the improvements of the school.

R. W. Jernigan, of Bridgeport. Ala., is visiting his son, Willis Jernigan, who lives at Grand Saline, Texas. While on this visit he is conducting a meeting four miles from Grand Saline.

W. S. Long preached for the Russell Street congregation, in Nashville, Sunday morning. In the afternoon he spoke at the Fanning Orphan School, and in the evening he preached to the Belmont congregation.

H. W. Wrye writes; "I closed a meeting at Arilngton, Texas, with ten baptisms and two restorations; at Wills Point, Texas, with ten additions; and at Spring Hill, Tenn., with ten baptisms. I am now in a fine meeting at Vine, Tenn."

From William P. Walker, Clarksville, Tenn., September 2: "The meeting at Norene has been postponed indefinitely. The Methodists voluntarily gave us permission to use their house, but later they decided that would not be expedient. This week I am doing some personal work for the church here. Next week I go to Indian Mound."

E. T. Austelle, Reddick, Fla., Route 1, Box 47, writes: "If any one knows of a gospel tent that we few members here could get to use in a meeting at Fairfield this fall, we would be so glad to hear from such a one. We used the tent belonging to the church at Jacksonville last year, but do not know to whom to write there. I hope this will be read by some one who will write me at once."

From Aruna Clark, East Lake, Tenn., September 3; "I consider the 'Better Ministry' Number of the Gospel Advocate by far the best of the specials that you have issued. The articles are all full of rich food, and the circulation of such literature among the brethren simply must do a lot of good. I think the special numbers are fine, because there is a definiteness about them that will help us all."

From R. N. Moody, New Market, Ala., September 6: "The meeting at Union Grove, three miles from here, closed last night. The attendance was larger than the house would accommodate. Three were baptized and one is to be baptized to-morrow. I go from here to McBurg, Lincoln County, Tenn., for a meeting, I promised to hold a meeting at Union Grove next year."

From J. B. Redd, Nashville, Tenn., September 6: "The meeting at the Herbeson Schoolhouse, on the Centerville Branch Railroad, five miles from Dickson, closed on the fifth Lord's day in August after two weeks' duration. This is the first meeting ever conducted by a member of the church of Christ at this place. One was baptized and the cause was started. This was my first protracted meeting. I leave on a trip through Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma."

Matthew C. Cayce writes: "The tent meeting at Carpenter, Miss., closed on Friday night, August 29, with one baptism and the largest audience we had. I began the next night at Ridgeland, Miss., in the town hall. The attendance and interest were the best we have had in Ridgeland. We closed on Friday morning at the water, three persons being baptized. Mississippi is certainly a mission field that has been sadly neglected. Gospel preaching is badly needed. Some of our Nashville preachers ought to go to Mississippi. Next Sunday, September 7, I am to begin a meeting at Southside, Tenn."

From F. L. Paisley, Memphis, Tenn., September 2: "I wish to call the attention of any gospel preacher near Grant, Ala., or who may chance to pass through there, to a call for help. A letter written by Mrs. Alice Turner, Route I, Grant, to Sister Goad, of Memphis, indicates that her family wishes to know and obey the gospel. Mr. Turner, the husband, is not expected to live much longer, and wishes to know the truth. Any one that can reach them may tell them that Sister Goad sent him, for she gave me the letter to try to get some one in touch with them. Cannot some one play the part of Philip and take to them the gospel?"

Will W. Slater writes from Spaulding, Okla., September 3: "The meeting here is progressing with great interest, something like five hundred people attending. I baptized a 'Holy Roller' preacher yesterday. He is a good man and wields an influence over several others, and we hope to convert more of them before the meeting closes, next Sunday. A new boy put in his appearance in our home on August 26. He has a fine voice and a fine pair of lungs, and I see no reason why he should not excel his dad both as a singer and as a preacher. We have named him 'Joseph Nelson,' after Joe H. Blue and J. B. Nelson, two of the greatest preachers in the brotherhood, according to our way of thinking."

From W. P. Skaggs, Tom Bean, Texas, September 5. "Our meeting with the church in Justin resulted in thirteen becoming obedient to the faith. The song service was led by T. S. Teddile, an earnest Christian and one of our best song leaders. I left them with a promise to return and assist them next year. I go to near Noble, Okla., to begin a meeting next Sunday. My address after the first of October will be Itasca, Texas. The church at Tom Bean will need some good preacher to help them. I am leaving Tom Bean of my own accord. They have treated me well, and I leave as good friends as will be found anywhere Any one desirous of writing them may address T. W. Gann. Whitewright, Texas, Route 4, or J. W. Johnson, Tom Bean. Texas."

From Walter W. Sikes, Registrar of Abilene Christian College: "Every requirement for a senior college of the highest rank is being fully met by Abilene Christian College. Strong additions are being made to our already excellent faculty. We are spending twenty thousand dollars on improvements for the coming session, and the plant will be in first-class shape when school opens on September 23. Prospects are excellent for an enrollment of four hundred students during the first week. In order to take care of this increased number, we are building a comfortable and convenient wood structure which will furnish quarters for forty students. We will be able to give every student who comes to us a nice, comfortable, and sanitary room. Reservations are coming in by every mail. If you expect to be here, write us. If you want to know anything about Abilene Christian College, ask some one who knows, and pay no attention to the things you are told 'in confidence' by those who do not know."

From O. E. Billingsley, September 5: "The church of Christ at Remmel, Ark., and I have just closed a continued gospel effort of three weeks. There were fourteen baptisms and four restorations. Much good was done otherwise. Many of the people of Algoa, a mill town not far away, were impressed with the truth. Brethren Northcut, Cox, and Bert, preachers of Christ, were with us. One Baptist preacher attended some. Brother Northcut and Brother Cox live at Remmel. Elbert Bert lives at Newport, and operates a barber shop. Brother Northcut is a great sawmill man, but he does not lose his religion at it. He preaches almost every Lord's day. Brother Cox is making a preacher of himself while he helps run a store for Anderson McCartney. He is a worthy young man and a promising preacher. Our brethren over there are great people. Brethren Boman and McCartney are making as much money as anybody in the whole region, and they are among the best, most noble, and most liberal of the country. The sheriff, judge, treasurer, surveyor, and some other officers of the county are members of the church of Christ. Will Boman is a great road builder. He does the people honest work and sees that their money produces as much good road as possible. Bud Bridges is an inventor. He has invented a gin saw filer that absolutely does the work. The churches of Christ are doing more this year than last."

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is malled regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or fetters may be jost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the tirst week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The High Cost of Living.

BY J. C. M'O.

Men cannot violate the law of God without suffering the penalty. Since man fell in the garden of Eden, God's law has been that he should live by work. Jehovah cursed the ground, causing it to bring forth thorns and thistles, but he did not curse labor. Labor Is honorable; and whenever and wherever men labor as God has ordained, they do not fall into so many snares and temptations of the wicked one. I have observed in the conduct of our business that whenever we have a holiday some of the force do not report for work on the day following., "An idle man tempts the devil." Hence, the Lord said to Adam: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." (Gen. 3: 19.)

The Holy Spirit indorses or approves the command given to Adam when he says in 2 Thess. 3: 10-12; "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you. If any will not work, neither let him eat. For we hear of some that walk among you disorderly, that work not at all, but are busybodies. Now them that are such we command and exhort in the Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread." The Holy Spirit condemns every person who tries to get through the world by trickery or stealing or by neglecting to work with his hands. Eph. 4: 28 declares: "Let him that stole steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have whereof to give to him that hath need." This passage also clearly teaches that there will be those who have something to give and that there will be the poor who are in need. So long as God's word is true and abides, we will have the rich and the poor with us.

Since God has ordained that man shall live by work, it naturally follows that the man who does not work at all will live in positive violation of the law of God. The man who works little should naturally expect to receive little and should not demand something for nothing. Short hours and high wages naturally increase the cost of production and lessen the value of the dollar. It is impossible for prices to come down and stay down, except by the slow processes of more and harder work, increased production, and greater economy. We should not forget, when we violate the law of God, that we must suffer from the cost of high living. So long as nearly everybody is working short hours, doing less work and producing less, we shall find that the cost of production is heavy and that our dollar is worth about fifty cents. Christians everywhere should labor faithfully with their own hands, should be active and energetic, and should be economical, and they should endeavor to lead others to do likewise. Simple living and more production will bring down the cost of our products and increase the value of our dollar. In so far as the world departs from the simple life and increased production, so long will it be called upon to pay the penalty in higher prices.

I have recently read in the Literary Digest an article which shows how the consumer boosts prices. A Scotchman visited a restaurant in New York. He found roast beef listed at ninety cents a portion. "I'll no pay it," he said, and up he got and walked out. He walked across the street and purchased crackers and milk for twenty-five cents and made his meal. This sort of thing would bring the profiteer down to a basis of fair dealing much faster than all the investigations of Congress and laws which it will pass. If all Christians would lead the simple life that the Bible encourages them to lead, and if nobody would pay the prices asked for clothing and shoes and other articles, these articles would soon be left on the sellers' hands and prices would come down promptly enough. But it seems that even Christians have adopted another policy and that many of them are ready to pay high prices and make more purchases than ever before, I have read somewhere that the shoe merchants in Boston first sold their shoes at seven and eight dollars a pair. Some people clamored for higher prices; so the merchants revised their prices upward to twelve and fourteen dollars per pair.

I will cite a few of the incredible instances noted by the daily newspapers of the outrageous prices paid for nonessential articles. No matter how outrageous the swindle, victims come flocking. They tell of domestic servants who buy silk stockings at six dollars a pair, workingmen who willingly pay twelve dollars for a silk shirt, and Louisiana lumberjacks who sport five-dollar neckties. People who rarely ever before visited summer resorts are flocking to them now. Some people are mortgaging their homes in order to buy automobiles. The Joneses are keeping up with the Smiths, and the Smiths are keeping up with the Browns; and so the people are conducting a perfect carnival of frenzled buying. It is said that the four lines of business activity which report the greatest prosperity are jewelry, musical instruments, automobiles, and tobacco. While these are all nonessentials, so called, yet scandalously high prices are not a deterrent.

This journal discourages idleness as well as extravagant living in all alike. It encourages its readers to lead lives of frugality, industry, and economy, and thus be producers. In this way they may be of great service to their neighbors and to the world at large. Working shorter hours, strikes, and prodigality never bring down the high cost of living. Neither will the high cost of living be reduced by dividing into classes and by one class working against another class. All should work together, and all should observe the Golden Rule.

The prophet declares: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken dlligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight Itself in fatness." (Isa, 55: 1, 2.) A greater prophet and teacher than Isaiah says: "Work not for the food which perisheth, but for the food which abideth unto eternal life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him the Father, even God, hath (John 6: 27.) In the world crisis through which we are passing in this hour of agitation and unrest, Christians should work for the food which perisheth not, While faithfully performing their secular duties, and while being diligent in business, they should do all to the honor and glory of God in order that they may lay up treasure in heaven. So long as they faithfully work and serve God as he directs, they may be assured that the waves of unrest and dissatisfaction will not overwhelm them.

If all people would do their duty, there is really no necessity for the disturbed conditions through which we are passing. Accumulated evidence gathered by competent observers leaves now little room for doubt that the peak of the high cost of living was passed sometime ago and that soon the dollar will return to its normal value. There is no reason why from this time forward more rapid progress should not be made toward stability and prosperity. We would have been much further advanced than we are now, if production had been increased as it should have been in the months that have elapsed since the war closed last November. The world waste ceased when the productive forces of many of the largest countries which were engaged in destruction and were producing nothing at all returned home and went to work. This destruction of property and life has ended, and the men engaged directly or indirectly in such destruction are now, each of them, an asset in reconstruction. With all these forces at home producing and working as God directs, there is no reason to doubt that soon our production will easily supply all of our demands. The people of this country certainly have too much sense and good judgment to be discouraged by the threatening clouds that are still lingering since the war has passed. They should take a new hold upon God. eling more closely to the Bible than ever, and go forth to conquer the industrial problems that are now demanding a solution. So long as we live as God directs, we have nothing to fear.

Every worshiper of Christ must in his measure make disciples, and proclaim the undying commands and truths of Christ; and then with him too there shall tarry the presence of the Most Holy, as the sanction and warrant of his work .- H. P. Liddon.

"Qulet and Work."

BY E. A. E.

Under this heading the Nashville Banner of August 7 gave some wholesome advice on the necessity of a tranquil and quiet life and useful employment, as follows:

The labor people, who are starting so many strikes, do so mainly because of the high cost of living. At least, that is in most instances the alleged reason. They really contribute measurably to the problem. They force higher wages, which enters into the cost of production, but beyoud that they create unrest and produce alarm that is very detrimental to the public welfare and interferes with business.

What the world needs now more than anything else is quiet and hard work. The plague of the day is the agita-tor. He is at the root of most of the evils that have come to latter-day humanity.

Strikes mean enforced idleness and create contention and class hatred. They produce alarm, and conservative people put their savings into secure places. No one wishes to venture into new enterprises. Capital gets into a shell and waits for the storm to pass.

The condition is feeding on what those who most complain themselves produce.

Quiet and work both in Europe and America would soon bring sanity where there is now hysteria and produce enough for everybody to live on in comfort. are demanding much work. There is a great deal of re-construction to be done. Business should be unusually brisk. Capital is eager for investment if conditions are made safe

The world will come right when sanity and dependable dustry are restored. Quiet and work are the real soluindustry are restored tion of the whole trouble.

The purpose and spirit of this article are not to attempt any settlement between capital and labor, or labor and the government, only in so far as it is the duty of religious papers and religious teachers in every way to teach the word of God.

The word of God followed will adjust all differences and settle all troubles between all individuals and all nations. Differences arise and troubles ensue because the word of God is not followed

If agitators and strikers, capitalists and the government, would all follow what is called the "Golden Rule"

All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, even so do ye also unto them: for this is the law and the prophets-quiet and good will, peace and prosperity, satisfaction and contentment, would be the result. So long as one strong class of a country is arrayed against another strong class, or so long as a strong class is arrayed against a government, so long selfishness, high prices, strife, bitterness, and confusion must reign.

The Banner is right and wise in saying that quiet, hard work, productive employment, and economy will bring abnormal prices to the proper level and restore harmony and good will.

But the church has to do only with Christianity-that is, with Christians and the Christian life. Very well. How many of the laboring class, of the capitalist class, and of the lawmaking class and government officials are church members, claiming that they are Christians? Then, as Christians they must obey God, and they must obey God rather than men-human orders and governments-when the two conflict (Acts 4: 19: 5: 29), and must treat one another in the spirit of Christ as Christrequires. Every one must seek, not his "own profit," but the "profit of the many" (1 Cor. 10: 33), and must look not to "his own things," or selfish interests and welfare and salvation even, but "also to the things," or interest and welfare and salvation, "of others." (Phil. 2: 4.)

When the apostles said, "We must obey God rather than men" (Acts 5: 29), and, "Whether it is right in the sight of God to hearken unto you rather than unto God, judge ye" (Acts 4: 19), they were prisoners for Christ's sake, had been already in jail for teaching the truth, had been and were still being threatened with the law not to preach or teach any more in the name of Jesus, and were talking directly to the highest court or authority in the Jewish nation. To "obey God rather than men" means that God must be obeyed above all orders or institutions and rulers and governments of men, regardless of consequences—that is, persecution, imprisonment, or death.

A lesson some have not learned, it seems, is that the church has nothing to do "with judging them that are without." (See 1 Cor. 5: 12, 13.) The church must look after, exhort, discipline, and judge its own members only. This it must do; but it cannot prosecute, punish, or in any way take vengeance on disobedient and incorrigible members; it must withdraw from them. All outside the church-the world-God will judge. He governs and restrains the world now through civil rulers, whom he has appointed for this very purpose and whom he calls his "ministers." Sometimes these "ministers" are very wicked men, but God uses them to punish and restrain evildoers. (Rom. 13: 1-7.) No ruler of any government pretends to govern according to the New Testament, sealed by the blood of the Lamb, but by the constitution and laws of his own country, sealed by the blood of its soldiers. This difference many seem not to see, and hence in places church members will resort to the courts of the land in order to restrain other church members from wrongdoing and to punish them for it, instead of proceeding according to the forbearance and exhortations, persuation, warning, and love of the gospel of Christ. Christ and the apostles warned against and pointed out the destruction of sin; but they never prosecuted, took vengeance, or in any way resorted to law to punish delinquent church members or the vilest sinners. The civil authorities are for the punishment of evildoers and for the protection of all who do well. Christians, as dld Paul, can use and do use "the powers that be" for protection, but not for vengeance.

There are agitators, talebearers, busybodies, and meddlers in other men's matters in the church. By the time one disturbance in a church has been settled, they manage to stir up another. On the other hand, some people are peacemakers. They know how to allay strife and to maintain the tranquillity of the church and the whole neighborhood. The lives of such people are benedictions to any community.

Civil governments and the church, the world and the church, and the spirit of the world and the spirit of the church are entirely different things. The civil government and the church are wholly different kinds of governments. The church-that is, Christians-as was Christ, is in the world, but not of the world. To be of the world is to be a part of the world, to be under the influence of the world, to live after the manner and to work according to the ways of the world, to have the spirit of the world, and to be ruled by that spirit. But one cannot be ruled by the spirit of the world and the Spirit of Christ at the same time. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." God does not command Christians to have sometimes the spirit of the world and at other times the Spirit of Christ; to be of the world at times and of Christ at other times; to love the world and the things of the world and to work for them at times, and to love and work for Christ at other times. "The god of this world" and Jehovah cannot be served at the same time. THE GOD OF THIS WORLD! Think of it! What is the man to be called who in robes of righteousness preaches the spirit of the world into Christians and persuades them to serve "the god of this world" instead of Jehovah? This is the most fearful thing which has befallen the church in centuries

Knowing all this, numerous preachers and many other church members should see most clearly and feel most sensibly that it is not their business, or the business of the church, to preach and "run" politics, to try to "run" the world in general, to preach war and to help to carry on war and war work, and to punish the wicked. The church is "the pillar and ground of the truth." It is the business of the church to come out and be separate and to keep unspotted from the world, to "lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity," and to preach such a life to others—to preach peace and good will, contentment, the fear of God, and submission to his will. It is the business of the church to let its light shine through its good works and to prove itself the salt of the earth.

People of the world dance, have their various clubs, gamble, cheat, steal, rob, drink, operate "wildcat stills," sell whisky, commit fornication, murder, thirst for money and conquest and power, engage in unspeakably horrible and barbarous carnal warfare and devastation and carnage; but the church cannot regulate these evils or stop them by physical force and carnal warfare. They are not under the jurisdiction of the church. It can use only the mighty meral and spiritual influence of the gospel of "the Prince of Peace."

God separated the church and State—his spiritual kingdom and worldly governments—and he says to Christians;

Render to no man evil for evil. Take thought for things bonorable in the sight of all men. If it be possible, as as much as in you lieth [in so far as you are concerned], be at peace with all men. Avenge not yourselves, beloved, but give place unto the wrath of God; for it is written. Vengeance belongeth unto me; I will recompense, saith the Lord. But if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him to drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. (Rom. 12; 17-21.)

Immediately following this instruction, which is the last verses of Rom. 12, God states in the very first verses of Rom. 13 that his "vengeance," to which Christians are commanded to "give place," is recompensed to evildoers through his "ministers" appointed for this very purpose, "the powers that be." They are the ones, not Christians, to take vengeance on evildoers. This Christians are forbidden to do.

God commands Christians to "study [or to make it their aim or ambition—margin] to be quiet "and to attend to their "own business." In this way they will "walk becomingly toward them that are without," or exert a good influence over the world. (1 Thess. 4: 11, 12.) It is the Christian life to be quiet, contented, industrious; not to meddle, not to take vengeance, not to punish evildoers; but to seek peace and pursue it, and to live in peace with God and men.

God commands Christians not only to put forth all effort to maintain peace and a quiet life, but to pray to this end:

I exhort therefore, first of all, that supplications, prayers, Intercessions, thanksgivings, be made for all men; for kings and all that are in high place; that we may lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity. This is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior; who would have all men to be saved, and come to the knowledge of the truth. (1 Thm. 2: 14.)

This is the life and this is the prayer which are acceptable and well pleasing to God. All Christians seek always to please God. God cannot be pleased with, and cannot accept, the life which is the opposite of this. This is the life to live in order to be saved. This is the life God would have all men to live. That all men may "come to the knowledge of the truth," live this kind of life, and be saved. Christians both work and pray. All Christians offer this prayer for the rulers of civil governments, from the constable to the President, from the county court to Congress, that in the goodness and overruling power of God such laws may be enacted as will permit them to live this life and that will not require them to sin against their consciences and their God.

Christians are taught to pray that they "may be delivered from unreasonable and evil men; for all men have not faith." (2 Thess. 3: 2.)

In the midst of the unrest, strife, contention, turmoil, upheavals, bloodshed, and pestilences of the world to-day, such as no living person has ever seen, should not Christians cling the closer to Christ? Should they not teach the more zealously that men everywhere should repent of all their ungodly deeds, put all violence out of their hands, and return to God? Should they not pray more devoutly for rulers and all in authority that they may not be disturbed in this quiet and peaceful life? And should they not preach more earnestly that this is the life all should live? Ah, but how is it? How many sermons in the last few years have been heard on war and war work and in justification of Christians going to war, exciting and disturbing the church, and even inciting many to vengeance and bloodshed, to one or to none on studying and praying and endeavoring to "lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity?" Many preachers themselves were not satisfied with this life, but had to rush into the strife in some way. They had to cease preaching peace on earth and good will to men; they could not have held their places and preached this. They should have remained with the church at home to endeavor to quiet fears and allay dreadful forebodings by teaching the overruling wisdom and power of God to make the wrath of men to praise him and to work out all things for the good of his children. Even now they seem not to be endeavoring to bring themselves and the church, in trust and faith and submission, closer to God. Are not their lectures echoes of war? God forbid that they should make an effort to lead any church or churches out of "the old paths" into any modern ways and wisdom of the world.

It is a time to preach repentance; confession of sins; putting violence away; turning away from the immorality and demoralization of war, pleasure seeking, money getting, and turning again to God in humility and contrition of heart, lest worse things come upon us.

"Study the things which make for peace;" "study to be quiet;" "seek peace, and pursue it;" cultivate contentment; pray for this life, and preach it to others.

Help the Fanning Orphan School.

BY E. A. E.

We are glad to report that donations to this worthy school still come in; however, not as rapidly as we can use them. The more the school receives, the more orphans and poor girls it can educate and train for life. Brother Trice reports as follows:

Dear Brother Elam: I beg to report herewith donations received for the Fanning Orphan School since last report published in the Gospel Advocate: From the church at published in the Gospel Advocate: From the church at Nolensville, Tenn., by D. PRICE OF MUSIC BOOKS.

On account of the great advance in materials and la-bor, it becomes absolutely necessary to make an ad-vance in the price of all our music books. The cost of production has advanced much more than we have increased the price of books. The advance will take effect on and after September 15, 1919. Below we give revised price list. Training Little Children

BY MRS. GERTRUDE IL CAMPBELL.

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Seventeen Rules for Mothers—They Will Help Over Many a Hard Place.

Many mothers have asked me: "Do you find that your kindergarten training really helps you when you are dealing with problems in your home?" My answer is invariably: "Yes,"

Two years of thorough and stimulating training in Froebel's wonderful methods for teaching little children, and several years of trying to put those methods into practice, could not fall to give a mother a more intelligent and spiritual grasp of the meaning of her children's activities.

Thinking back over the past years, I have been trying to formulate some of the practices that have helped me over the hard places, and offer the following to the mother who wishes to make of her children's early years a period that they and she will remember with great joy.

- 1. When it is necessary to restrain a child from doing something wrong or harmful, always suggest something else he may do. Never issue a "don't" without proposing a "do."
- 2. In giving a child permission to play, take care that his activities do not develop into license, for he will be happier if some limitations are imposed to test his powers and help him concentrate. For instance, if he is playing with blocks or cutting from paper, giving him permission to do anything he pleases often results in aimless or destructive activity. Some suggestion from the mother to make something—to furnish a house, for instance—stimulates and directs his mind, while leaving him free to express himself.
- 3. Before a command is given, always consider whether it is going to raise an issue. If a child refuses to obey, do not always insist upon implicit obedience: your command may not have been an entirely wise one. Punish for disobedience, if necessary, but do not raise avoidable issues. "Breaking a child's will" is cruel and most harmful.
- 4. When a child is naughty, always be sure that the cause is not a physical one, for fatigue and hunger come easily to little people. Many problems that are unsolvable before a meal are no longer problems afterwards.
- 5. Try to follow your children's activities and to understand the instincts and inner laws from which they proceed. View what they do in the light of your intelligence and of your spirit. Such a habit of watchfulness and care prevents nervous irritation and enables you to enter into and to encourage sympathetically activities which are pleasing.
- 6. Be consistent in what you approve and disapprove. Do not one day, because you are tired, reprove a child for something he has done and the next day ignore the same thing because you are rested.
- 7. Answer questions truthfully. A child's mind does not always crave details. Give him only broad statements. Build a strong foundation of truth, to which details may be added later. As regards the vital question of the origin of life, be careful not to give the child more than he asks for. Do not force your buds to open too early. The life of flowers and birds is analogous to human life and will tell you how to answer this question.
- Avoid useless negations. If there is no real reason why a child should have his requests denied, do not deny them.

- 9. In regard to children's interruptions, consider whether what they want you to do is not more important than the special activity you had planned for that moment. In the last analysis, why do we mothers exist at all, if not to give of our best to our children and to meet their needs as they show themselves?
- 10. The care of a child's body is important, but it should not monopolize the mother's attention at the expense of mind and spirit.
- 11. Cultivate a sense of humor in yourself and in your child. It is wonderful how many trying situations may be relieved through this means.
- 12. Show a child the same respect you would a grown person. What a child resents most in being struck is not the pain, but the insult to his pride.
- 13. Do not leave your children largely to the care of nurses, however conscientions or seemingly intelligent they may be. Nurses minister mostly to the physical needs of little children, and the time soon comes when they are no longer necessary for this purpose. Then it may be too late for the mother to build the bridge of sympathy between her children and herself. Moreover, it is in early years that the child is most impressionable and that a mother's influence may count for most.
- 14. Do not threaten. Make punishments slight, but see that they always follow the offense. Their effectiveness depends upon their inevitability, not on their severity. A child keeps his fingers from the flame because he knows it will always burn him.
- t5. A child that is occupied is always a good and happy child. For outdoors, try to have a sandbox, a swing, a garden and garden tools, and let this be a spot where the children hear the word "don't" as seldom as possible. For Indoors, provide modeling clay, paints, a soap bubble outfit, blocks, crayons, colored paper, blunt scissors, colored wooden beads, shoestrings for stringing, and pegs for peg boards. (Beads, pegs, and peg boards may be procured from Milton Bradley Company, Springfield, Mass, or E. Steiger & Co., 49 Murray Street, New York. Both companies will send a catalogue upon request.)
- 16. Since you are constantly supplying your child with mental and spiritual food, see that your own mind and spirit are kept renewed and inspired by good books, fresh air, poetry, change of scene, stimulating companionship, good pictures, and music.
- 17. And remember, your child came to you with the divine spark. He is for you largely to make or mar.

Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos-listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was premptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a choe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, dura-bility and economy be made known there bility and economy, be made known there, That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last treely months has increased fully twelve months has increased fully three bundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities may have a copy of his more qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

Italian Mission at Shadyside, Ohio.

We write in regard to Brother Dasaro's mission work. We had in attendance to-day (August 3) about forty people. Interest was good, but we are having a fight in order to get the pure gospel before the people.

As the sectarian people of Bellaire saw the work we were doing, they have undertaken to take this mission from Brother Dasaro. They sent to New York and got an Italian sectarian and came in. They teach there at 2:30 P.M., and Brother Dasaro's appointed time is 4 P.M. They tried to get the people not to come to Brother Dasaro's school, but have failed in that plan. Last Lord's day we had only about ten, but we are encouraged at the increase to-day. Brother Dasaro will put his whole time in among his people, and I am confident we will win; for we have the precious gospel of Jesus Christ, and the truth will win out. We have a much brighter man than the sects. If the brethren will just back him up; for we must not let evil be sown in the hearts of these people. What would our Lord and Master do in this case? Would he give up? I say no. He says for us to contend earnestly for the faith.

Shadyside, Wheeling, and St. Joe have taken this cause up, and we are going to give Brother Dasaro all the support we can, and we appeal to brethren elsewhere to aid us in this. It is a shame that this man has not been supported. It makes my heart ache to think that our brethren will be so selfish as not to want to support this brother, who is worthy and true to our Master, who came to this earth and suffered and died for you and me. If we want to gain this home of which we have the promise, we cannot sit down; we must work. Faith without works is dead. We must save ourselves and others. Now, will they know the gospel of Jesus Christ, if we, the people that claim to be the true disciples, will not use part of our means to support it? Suppose we wake up! If the sectarians can pay a salary of three hundred dollars a month, what's the matter with us?

If the brethren don't want to take our word for what is being done here, we ask them to come and visit us. We will gladly welcome them.

[Signed] James Gates, K. R. Garner, elders; Alonzo Ault, Hal Penn, deacons.

Russellville, September 1.--I began a meeting at Gold Mine on the third a meeting at troop white of Lord's day in August, which continued nine days. Sixteen persons were baptized. The meeting closed with fine interest.—John T. Underwood

Brownsboro, September 2:- 1 am at Brownshoro this week. I began Sunday. On Sunday afternoon, at the water, I closed my third annual meeting with the brethren at Garth. This meeting was attended both day and night by larger crowds than we ever had there before. One lady came from the Baptists, one was restored, and one young lady was baptized .-

Coxey, September 4.—The meeting near Coxey came to a close last night. Six persons were baptized and several were restored to fellowship. This was a fine and successful meeting. While the meeting was out in the open, the order was the best. There must have been five bundred people present last night. Brother Oscar Legg got the meeting up and stood by me with his means. I go now to De Queen, Ark, and will go out in the country some ten miles and preach several days. D. S. Ligon.

Rogersville, August 30.-My wife and J. H., Jr., are doing nicely, and I am beginning to hold a few meetings. I have just closed an eight-days' meeting at Oliver, about two miles from Rogersville, with ten baptized, one from the Methodists who claimed scriptural baptism, twelve restored, and much good done otherwise. The church in Rogersville seems to be doing well. Brother W. L. Karnes beld a good meeting for us the last of July Six persons were baptized during this meeting and the church was greatly strengthened -J. H. McBroom.

Stobler's Infirmary, Greenville, September 2.—I have been handlcapped for several years by bad health and kept putting off what ought to have been done years ago, until recently I gave way to the idea of an operation. Two weeks are past and I am soon to be able to arrange to be cared for at home. No one can realize how glad and thankful I am. My mind is al-ready much stronger; my relish of meals and after effects so much immeals and after effects so much improved over the past already. I had just begun on a job at three dollars per day to supply what was needful for my family, and worked only seven or eight days, when I had to give up Having spent all, I was left destitute and wholly dependent. The church and wholly dependent. here at Greenville and the churches at Fort Deposit and at Awin and Her-bert have helped. This, with the help of scattered brethren at Antioch and friends, has about met half of what my expenses will be. A brother friends, has about met haif of what my expenses will be. A brother brought me in a copy of the "Better Ministry" number of the Gospel Advocate. It is fine. Were it not so difficult for me to write, I would say more. Half of each hand is paralyzed or asleep, and the other is so weak I cannot do anything toward helping myself. The doctor says it may be two or three months before my two or three months before my strength is fully recovered. I will be ever so grateful for any remembrance. My address is Pineapple, Ala., Route 1.-A. B. Biazer.

Belgreen, August 30.-Brother I. B. Bradley, of Dickson, Tenn., began a meeting at Bradley's Chapel on the fourth Lord's day in August and closed it on Friday following, with the house full of anxious hearers, many of whom wished that he might stay longer; but Brother Bradley had to go to begin another meeting, and the meeting here had to close too soon. He baptized nine persons, five of whom are heads of families; and he did some of the best preaching that I have ever heard him do, and I have been hearing him for a long time. this first preaching was done here in the year 1896. He baptized thirty-six that year. In 1906 he baptized twen-ty-eight, and in 1907 he baptized thirty-four, preaching about one week each time. He has preached for us very year, except three or four, since his first work here in 1896, and he has baptized about two hundred durhas baptized about two hundred during these meetings. Some of his converts here have removed to other places, and I can now think of three congregations doing regular work, meeting on the first day of the week, which are principally fruit of his labors. The opposition was strong against him when he began work here twentything was strong to the control of the strong transfer the strong that the strong transfer tra here twenty-three years ago, but by Washington, August 30.—During Brother Long's absence in Tennessee, a young man of Alexandria, an employee in a governmental department, was won for Christ by the quiet evangelism. Two of the brethren associated with him in the service taught him the way of the Lord, answering all his questions, and baptized him after office hours. A Baptist preacher is now trying to confuse him over innovations, but we hope to save him from every snare.—James E. Chessor.

Georgia.

Atlanta, September 1.—The meeting at Hall's Valley, near Trion, closed yesterday afternoon. Fine interest all during the meeting. One was baptized. I shall begin a meeting near kingston, Ga., next Thursday.—S. E. Templeton.

Kentucky.

Morganfield, September 2.—I have recently held two meetings—one at Pool, Ky., in Henderson County, with three additions, and one near Vienna, Ill., with no additions.—T. G. Curd.

Hopkinsville, September 1.—Rain hindered greatly at Corinth, Ark., but we had a good meeting. Four were baptized. This was my fifth meeting there. I am now in a meeting at Fruit's Chapel, near Hopkinsville. I go next to Tennessee for some meetings.—R. L. Whiteside.

Hopkinsville, August 30.—I have just closed a good meeting at Cave City, in which much good was accomplished. Three were baptized, three came from the Christian Church and one from the Baptists, twenty were restored, and a church was established and will keep house for the Lord. The Lord willing, I shall go back next year. My next meeting is four miles from Glasgow.—J. H. Hlnes, Mississippi.

Magnolia, August 26.—1 had the pleasure of being with Brother W. J. Johnson at Darlington, La., in a meeting. He is the leader of the church of Christ at Amite, La., and is trying to erect a house there to worship in, I hope all the brethren will do all they can to help him, as he is so faithful in the work and is in a ripe field where the laborers are few.—Joe Chirer.

Oxford, August 29.—We closed our meeting at Marietta on Wednesday night. There were no additions, but we had large crowds and fine interest from start to finish. The church was highly pleased with the meeting, so far as I could learn. We have some good people in the church at that place. Brother A. C. Cox seems to be the main pillar in the church. He is

Sworn Statement of the Composition of the FORMULA of Nuxated Iron

R is conservatively estimated that this remarkable formula is now being used by over three million people annually. Among those who have used and strongly endorse it are many physicians who have been connected with the best hospitals and medical societies, forcer United States Senator and Vice-Presidential nomines, Chas. A. Tewne, of Minnesota; U.S. Commissioner of Immigration, Hon, Anthony Caminetti; Judge Atkinson of the United States Court of Claims at Washington; Wm. L. Chambers, Commissioner of the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation at Washington, and former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago.

Camulasioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago.

Newapapers everywhere are livited to copy this statement for the benefit of their readers it is suggested that physicians make a record of it and keep it in their offices so that they may intelligently answer questions of patients concerning it. Everybody is advised to cut it out and keep it. A copy of the actual aworn statement will be sent to anyone who desires such. It is as follows: Iron Peptomate (Special specific Standard) Quantity given below. Sodium Glycerophosphates: I'. S. P. (Monsanto). Calcium Glycerophosphates: I'. S. P. (Monsanto). P. E. Nux Yomica U. S. P. Cascarine Bitter, Magnesium Carbonate Pn. Ginger U. S. P. Calcium Carbonate Precip, U. S. P. Calcium Carbonate Precip, U. S. P. Calcium Carbonate Precip, U. S. P.

Each dose of two tablets of Nuxated Iron contains one and one-half grains of organic from in the form of Iron peptonate, of a special societic standard, which in our opinion possesses superior qualities to any other known form of Iron. By using other makes of Iron Peptonate we could have put the same quantity of actual from in the tablets at less than one-fourth the cost to us, and by using metalfic from we could have accomplished the same thing at less than one-twelfth the cost; but by so doing we must have most certainly impaired their therapeutic efficacy. Giverophosphates used in Nuxated from is one of the most expensive tonic ingredients known. It is especially recommended to build up the nerve force and thereby increase brain power, as giverophosphates are said is contain phosphorus in that particular state so similar to that in which it is found in the nerve and brain cells of mon.

As will be seen from the above two ten-

As will be seen from the above, two important ingredients of Nuxated from (from Peptonate and Giycerophosphates) are very expensive products as compared with most other tonics.

Under such circumstances the temptation to adulteration and substitution by unscrupulous persons, is very great and the public is hereby warned to be careful and see every bottle is plainly labeled "Nuxated from" by the Dae Health Laboratories, Paris, London and Detroil, U.S. A., as this is the only gonume article. If you have taken other forms of iron without success, this does not prove Nuxated Iron will not help you.

Nuxated fron will not help you.

Manufacturer's Note—Nuxated Iron is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older thorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor quset the stomach. Nuxated from is not recommended for use in cases of acute illness, but only as a tonic, strength and blood builder. (In case of linness always commit your family physician and be guided by his advice.) If in doubt as to whether or not you need a tonic, ask your decore as we do not wish to sell you. M. Keeble writes from Blackton, Ark., August 24:

At the time of my last report I was at Latham, Tenn., and remained there one week, and the results were one baptized and two restored. Several of the white brethren there assisted me in the meeting. This was the secme in the meeting. This was the sec-ond meeting that I have assisted the church in at that place, and I have promised to be with them again next

From Latham I went to Henderson, Tenn., and remained nearly three weeks. At the close of the meeting twelve had obeyed the gospel. Two years ago I went there and found only four members, and now there are over one hundred members. The white brethren and sisters there have greatly cooperated with us in the work, and without their assistance the work would never have been ac-complished. On the last night of the meeting Brother N. B. Hardeman was with us and made an impressive speech, and also told us that the white brethren were waiting to help us build a meetinghouse, and for all this we thank our God. I left the brethren cutting logs to carry to the mill, and soon the building will be under construction. I hope to be there again next year.

Next I went to Christiana, Tenn., and held a meeting. The brethren there endeavored to get a tent, but failed, so we were forced to preach under some cedar trees. We continued the meeting one week, and fifteen persons were baptized into Christ. The brethren were highly elated over the meeting, and requested me to be with them again next year.

I am now at Blackton, Ark., In a meeting. The brethren here called me to assist Brother J. D. Bynum. I am proud to be with this brother, because he is a strong preacher of the gospel. Up to date three have made the confession, and the future looks bright for others. This meeting will be a strong which I bright for others. This meeting will consume four weeks, after which I will leave for Sugar Grove, Ky.

Meetings in Arkansas.

BY ANDY T. RITCHIE.

Our meeting at Little Rock began on the fourth Lord's day in July and continued with growing interest to the close, twelve days later. The visible results were two baptisms and an encouraged brotherhood. The cause of Christ is comparatively young in the capital city, but the brethren are faithful, true, and earnest, and at peace among themselves. I was treated royally in every respect, and I shall be glad when the time comes to labor with them again."

From Little Rock I dropped down to England, Ark., and spent thirteen days with the few members there. This was said to be a destitute place: but before the meeting closed we had located a membership of fifteen (only three males), who promised to keep house for the Lord. We also secured a building lot, and a liberal building fund was subscribed. They plan a brick building and have a mind to work. The people of the town treated us with every courtesy. The Baptists postponed their meeting in favor of ours. Our crowds were satisfactory from the beginning and grew in size to the last. There was only one baptism here, but I feel that the seed were sown for a harvest and a foundation laid for a permanent work. Brother Thomas L. Helm, a friend of twenty years, is located there, and is the main dependence for a leader. He is true and zealous and a competent teacher, so we feel that the work is in safe hands. We hope for a greater work next summer.

On my way from England to the next point, I stopped off in Little Rock and preached two nights. The brethren seemed glad to see me again. and I was loath to bid them a final adieu for this year.

From Little Rock I headed for Augusta, the place that has been named by gospel preachers and others who know, "the hardest place in the State;" and I am not prepared at this time to change the name. However, we have not been here long enough to pass final judgment. Our tent failed to get here, so we obtained permission to use the courthouse; but to-day we were informed that court will sit here both day and night till the docket is cleared, which, however, will not be longer than two or three days. In the meantime we are going out in the country to a so-called "union house" and hold forth till the courthouse is vacant again. Quite a number of the town people say they will come out in the country to hear us. My singer and I put in a half day of hurried walking and nice talking before we could even find a place to "lay our heads." There is not a brother in town; only two sisters, and one of them away on a vacation. But we succeeded in renting a room at one place and getting our meals at another; so we are prepared for anything that may come. I have been preaching for twenty years in different places and under different conditions, but this is the first time I ever had to canvass a town from house to house and beg people to let me stay in their homes for pay. Such, however, is the occasional experience of gospel preachers. We shall remain here as long as the conditions will permit. Our audiences are better than we expected, and we may do some good. Augusta needs at least four or five weeks' preaching. We cannot give it now, but I am ready to try it again, and feel that I could do more next year than this. Brother R. W. Bowman, of Sulphur Rock, Ark., is leading the song service. He is a competent singer, a true gospel preacher, and an all-round helper in a place like this.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness. nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHIII TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHIII TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same to-day, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

Tennessee.

Nashville, Tenn., September 2.—1 closed a ten-days' meeting at Bluff Springs on August 11, with two baptized, and closed an eleven-days' meeting at Diana on August 27, with eight baptized. Both meetings were well attended. I am now in a good meeting with the Twelfth Avenue Church, in Nashville.—H. H. Adamson.

Nashville, September 3.—I have just closed a very interesting meeting at Berea congregation, four miles from Franklin, Tenn, The crowds were large and attentive. There were two baptisms. I have promised to be back next year. The people there treat a preacher as well as a gospel preacher could wish. The "Better Ministry" number of the Gospel Advocate was splendid.—H. M. Phillips.

Columbia, Route 9, Box 25, September 4,—The meeting at Berea, in Murray County, began on the first Lord's day in August and closed on the foliowing Friday at the morning service. We were to have services Friday night, but were rained out. Brother Will Morton did the preaching. We had the best attendance and attention we have ever had at that place. Four persons were baptized and one was reclaimed.—T. P. Hardison, Sr.

Memphis, September 2.—I am at home now in a meeting with the Olive Avenue congregation. My meetings in Texas and Oklahoma were very enjoyable and were in a degree successful. After the meeting here, I go to Fort Smith. Ark., for a meeting, beginning on September 12, and from there I go to Alma, Ark., for my last meeting in the west this season. Much of my time for next season has been arranged for already.—J. A. Cullum.

Chaltanooga, September 3.—Brother T. B. Larimore is in a good meeting with the East Chaltanooga congregation. Interest is fine and there have been some additions. The meeting will continue over next Lord's day. People in the vicinity of the tent and the disciples in and around Chaltanooga consider that they are exceedingly fortunate in having the opportunity to hear that most wonderfully grand minister of the gospel.—Aruna Clark.

Yuma, September 2.—Our meeting at Mount Vernon, near Fulton, Ky, resulted in one addition. The meeting at Charlie, Texas, began on August 6 and closed on August 17, with one added. Our meeting at Estelline, Texas, closed last Wednesday night with five additions. I am now in a meeting at Obion Chapel, in Carroll County, which began yesterday. Two additions to date. I go from here to work with the congregation at Miamil, Fla—Joe L. Netherland.

She was born on March 18, 1918. She was attacked by whoch and force after which she 1918. She was attacked by whooping cough and fever, after which she lived only two weeks. She was such a bright, sweet baby, and was loved by all who knew her. So bright a jewel has been gathered home. May we all so live that we can meet our loved ones around the beautiful throne of God. May the Lord bless the bereaved ones. Funeral services were held at the home of the parents, and the burial was at Whiteside.

Towery.

With sadness I chronicle the death of Brother H. M. Towery, which occurred at Fort Smith, Ark., on April 25, 1919. Brother Towery was born on May 1, 1837, and lacked only six days being eighty-two years of age. He had been a faithful member of the body of Christ for more than the christ for the control of the control of the christ for more than the christ for the body of Christ for more than forty years. He gave liberally to the sup-port of the cause he loved so well. He will be greatly missed by the brethren at home, for he was a great light and an inspiration to the younger ones in the church. He leaves a wife, several children, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his loss. Let us not weep as those who have no hope. Our loss is heaven's gain. WILL W. SLATER.

Brown.

Mrs. Eudora Elizabeth Brown left her earthly abode for her eternal home on April 26, 1919. She was a member of the church of Christ and member of the church of Christ and one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of the community where she had lived for many years, on the head of White Oak Creek, in Humphreys County, Tenn. Her maiden name was "Dotson." According to the information furnished the she was horn on November 25 me, she was born on November 25, 1835, and was married to E. A. Brown on August 31, 1850. To this union were born ten children, five of whom survive her. She also leaves several grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, after which her mortal remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground. To her many relatives and friends I would say: Let us all prepare to meet her in a better world than this, where there will be no pain nor sorrow.

J. H. Murrell.

Mosley.

Another Christian mother has gone Another Christian mother has gone from her earthly home to be at home with the Lord. Lettie Mosley, aged about sixty years, the wife of T. B. Mosley, passed away on June 16, 1919, leaving him to fight the battles of life without her until the Lord calls him from this world to reunite with her in trom this world to reunite with her in the paradise of God, where she awaits his coming. She was baptized by Brother Elisha Sewell several years ago, and lived faithful to her Lord until death. She was conscious until the last and died happily. She was the last and died happily. She was the mother of ten children—nine boys and one girl. Four of the boys had gone on before her, one of them dying in infancy. All of her children obeyed the gospel while young. Sister Mosley was the mother of Brother J. C. Mosley, a preacher and a good singing master, and she always encouraged him in this work. The funeral was attended by a large crowd. The funeral services were conducted by the writer. R. E. L. TAYLOR.

Collins.

Mattie Collins was born on October 15, 1865, and departed this life on May 27, 1919. She was baptized into Christ in 1880, and lived in the faith until death. Dear Mat. suffered great afflictions for eight months; she had cancer for years. She made friends with all kinds of people. She never wanted to see a domestic an-imal mistreated or injured in any way. She would always as he mal mistreated or injured in any way. She would always say, when we were waiting on her in her sickness: "I want so and so, if it's not too much trouble." She never spoke evil of anybody and seemed to think everybody had more good in them than bad. She leaves a husband and two step-children. One is meaning the step-children. children. One is married; the other, a young man who seemed to love her. She bore a good name in her community, which "is rather to be chosen than great riches." It was a misfortune for her to be taken from her home, where she was so badly needed. Her husband, being old, needed her companionship. May he live a more devoted life, that he may be able to see her again. Brother A. C. Williams spoke words of comfort to the bereaved ones at the burial.

HER FOSTER SISTER. children. One is married; the other,

Rogers.

Sister Elizabeth Staton Rogers, wife of A. W. Rogers, was born on February 18, 1890, and departed this life on April 21, 1919. Her life on earth was comparatively short, but it was a life of consecration and devotion to the church. Sister Rogers was formerly a member of the Methodist Church, but, by studying the Bible for herself and learning the way of life, she was led to obey the gospel. It was never my pleasure to know her Church, in life, but those who did know her testified that she was a devoted Chris-tian. What more could be said of any one? She preached her own fuany one? She preached her own in-neral sermon by the godly life which she lived. She will be missed in the home and in the church; but God has decreed that this mortal shall put on immortality and this corruption shall put on incorruption before the faithful can dwell in the home prepared. Besides the husband and two little Besides the husband and two little children, she is survived by a brother and sister. The writer endeavored to speak words of comfort to the bereaved. May they ever strive to emulate her worthy example.

Welch.

Romeo Bryant Welch, son of Albert and Clara Easley Welch, one of the best-known young men of the Pink neighborhood, born in Jessamine County, Ky., where he has resided all his life, was killed in the church yard at Little Hickman on Sunday night, at Little Hickman on Sunday night, August 3, 1919. A young man of splendid physique and in perfect health, the news of his sudden passing away was a great shock to his hundreds of friends and acquaintances. The deceased was twenty years and four months old. The remains were taken to Bud Carter's home, where they remained until the time of the funeral. Tuesday morntime of the funeral, Tuesday morn-ing, August 5, 1919, at ten o'clock. The services were conducted by Elder I. Peel, and interment was in Maple Grove Cemetery. An hour before time of the funeral the church was crowded, and many more were unable to gain admittance. The services to gain admittance. The services were simple, yet impressive. The floral offerings were beautiful, fit tokens of the high esteem in which Mr. Welch was held by those who knew him best. He was a jolly, goodnatured boy, one that was beloved by all that knew him. He is survived by three sisters and three brothers, a father and mother.

Glenn.

Joshua Thompson Glenn died at his home, in Cornersville, Marshall County, Tenn., on May 2, 1919. He was born on September 1, 1834, and, therefore, lived to a ripe old age of nearly eighty-five. With the exception of the last few years, he enjoyed vigorous health all his life. He was a farmer, and had lived in this county all his life. He was married to Martha Vashti McGreggor, a true, Christian companion, who died twenty-six years ago. They reared a family of seven children. Though not a wealthy man, he gave his children a good edyears ago. They read to seven children. Though not a wealthy man, he gave his children a good education and brought them all up in the church of Christ. Four taught school several years, and two are now preaching the gospel. My father read the Gospel Advocate from my earliest remembrance. He was for many ears a school trustee, and was an elder in his home congregation till he became too feeble. His home was al-ways a home for the preachers. He was instrumental in establishing several congregations. Among the num-ber was the "Beech Grove Church" at Yell; the Wilson Hill and Cornersville congregations, where hundreds have heard the gospel in its purity and obeyed it. His life is marked by many long, useful, and fruitful years for his Maker and for his fellow man. May his friends and loved ones behind look forward and be prepared to "meet on that beautiful shore" in the "sweet by and by."

E. N. GLENN.

Delk.

William L. Delk was born on Sep-tember 7, 1855, and died on May 22, 1919. He was baptized when he was twenty-one years old, under the preaching of Brother J. O. Barnes, of Alabama. He was a member of the church at Isom, Tenn., but later moved to Kettle Mills. He was always present at the Lord's-day meetings. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Vestal more than forty years ago, who, with eight children and nine grandchildren, survives him. Our hearts go out in sympathy to these dear ones in their sorrow and loneliness, especially to her who has fought life's battles by his side for so many years. A friend to the poor, to the years. A friend to the poor, to the colored race, and one who was always interested in the welfare of all, has been taken away. "Uncle Billie" was as kind and gentle as a woman, and his love for little children was beautiful to see. I have never known the color of one who was more charitable in his views. Whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report; if there be any virtue or any praise, he thought on these things. He was modest and unassuming, but always a great power for good in the community in which he lived. God spared him to see some of the improvements for which he had labored so faithfully. He was a true and loyal brother, friend, and counselor to our widowed mother, and always showed a father's love and interest for her children. Brother W. S. Morton spoke words of comfort to a great number of friends and relatives, and his body was laid beside that of his first born son, whose memory he had cherished so tenderly for twenty-five years. We thank God for his life, his upright and honorable character, and for the hope that it is well with his soul. Mrs. D. L. Kirk.

Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.

Dear Sir: I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders, and all its frain of horrifying phenomens for several months. I had lived on milk, soft-boiled eggs, shredded wheat—a very insufficient diet for an active working man—and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and gen—all debility. I creared ten gailons of your Mineral —ater, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well, and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice, and it has in every in stance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantity as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

Leeds, S. C.
I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find it has acted nicely in each case; and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

All Need Treatment.

The blood, the nerves, and the liver there are cases in which they all need treatment at the same time, the blood being impure and deficient in iron, the nerves weak and unsteady, and the liver torpid and sluggish. In these cases such a combination of medicines as Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier; Peptiron, a real iron blood and nerve tonic; and Hood's Pills, the gentle, yet thorough, cathartic, is of signal service.

The many effective and highly approved ingredients of these three successful medicines cannot all be included in one medicine because of incompatibility, but they are practically combined by taking the medicines in conjunction-Hood's Sarsaparilla before eating, Peptiron after eating, and Hood's Pills as needed. It was a happy thought of Mr. Hood's to suggest that they be so combined in the treatment of such cases as are referred to here, which nowadays seem to become much more common.

Glad to Try Anything

"Three years ago my system was in a terribly run down condition and I was broken out all over my body. I began to be worried about my condition and I was glad to try anything which would relieve me. Peruna was recommended to me as a fine blood remedy and tonic, and I soon found that it was worthy of praise. A few bottles changed my condition materially and in a snort time I was all ever my rouble. I owe my restoration to health and strength to Peruna. I am glad to endorse it."

The President and the Pope.

The Gospel Advocate is not a political journal and does not deal with political matters, only in so far as they may concern the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. From this viewpoint I deem it wise to call attention to one of the strongest utterances of a politico-religious character that I have read in some time. I refer to an article by R. A. Torrey which originally appeared in "The King's Business" and has since been put in leaflet form. The article deals with President Wilson's visit to the pope during his trip to European soil, "King George of England came to see the President first," observes Mr. Torrey; "King Albert of Belgium welcomed him with great honor; the King of Italy visited him first in Paris and afterwards went a long way to meet him in Italy; but President Wilson went to see the pope instead of the pope coming to see him, and permitted the pope to make the conditions under which alone he would receive him."

But the most startling feature of the article is the quotations it contains from Roman Catholic sources. After affirming that the two great perils of the country at the present day are Bolshevism and Romanism, the writer demonstrates that Rome is not concealing her aims regarding America. Proof is furnished by the following excerpt from the National Catholic Register:

It is God's plan that the Holy Father of Rome should be the spiritual and temporal head of his kingdom on earth. It is the same to-day as in the time of the first pope. The best way to accomplish this is through political power, through religious education and service.

God has doubly blessed the Catholic Church of America by placing one of its most faithful sons at the right hand of President Wilson. Next to the President, Hon. Joseph Tunnity, Knight of Columbus, thirty-third degree, wields the greatest political power of any man in America, and true Catholic he is exercising the great trust which God has given into his hands for the glory of the hely Through his tact and holy zeal he has created a warm friendship between the Catholic Church and President Wilson, together with the Democratic party

Other Presidents have feared the power of the hely church and have courted its support, politically, by granting it childish favors, which deceived no one. But this is the first time in the history of the country when the President and a great political party have openly sought an equal and honest alliance with the Catholic Church.

And before seeking this political alliance, the President and his party have shown their good faith by Through the efforts of Hon, Joseph Tumulty, President Wilson has practically granted that education in the Philippines shall be under control of the Catholic Church, and that religious activity in the great American Army shall be under the direction of the Knights of Columbus. This means the addition to the church of one million of the country's best and bravest young men, or at least their strong preference and sympathy for the Catholic Church.

The Catholics will soon have an opportunity to prove their appreciation of President Wilson's friendship and at the same time increase their political prestige and strength Every Catholic must awake to his duty and stand by his church and President Wilson.

This quotation from one of the largest and most influential Catholic journals in this country gives a fair idea of their political plans and hopes and at the same time reveals their vaunting boastfulness. We print it, not to extend further criticism of the President, but to stir up Christians to greater zeal and watchfulness. Now, as in the beginning, we belong to a holy church of God, of which Jesus Christ is Lord, "the spiritual and temporal head." Let not the "Hon. Joseph Tumulty, Knight of Columbus, thirty-third degree," be more zealous than the humblest Christian. Every Christian must awake to his duty and stand by the church of the living God. "For now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed."

The True Basis of Christian Unity.

In no human religious organization, such as the denominations represent, can Christian unity be practiced; this is possible only in organizations patterned after those revealed in the New Testament and known as "churches of Christ." (Rom. 16: 16.) To form organizations like those demands that every member solemnly agree to be and do neither more nor less than the New Testament churches were taught to be and do; to be guided by the inspired example set by these churches; to refer all matters of religious faith, doctrine, work, and worship to the inspired apostles as the "ambassadors" of Christ (2 Cor. 5: 20); to be willing to have the New Testament actually create and dicinte all religious movements; to wear no mme and belong to no religious organization unnamed and unanproved in the New Testament; and in use one's influence to lead everybody to do as one does. This will form no "new church" in the community, but will serve merely to restore the genuine New estament church where now flourish a multitude of secturian institutions that are not patterned after the "churches of Christ."

Conversion.

BY W. L. REEVES.

Many people are unnecessarily confused on the subject of conversion, while many others are very much deceived in believing they are converted when they are not. Why is it that men who claim to be teachers persist in teaching that conversion is a mysterious work of grace upon the sinner's heart and life, when it is clearly taught in the New Testament that conversion is absolutely necessary to admittance into the kingdom of heaven, and that man must enter into this kingdom, and, further still, when it is plainly written what he is to do in order to entertherein?

Conversion is not a mystery. If it were, it would not be revealed to us what to do to be converted. A mystery is something that is not revealed. That which is revealed is not a mystery.

When a man is saved, he is converted, is he not? Who will deny that the New Testament reveals to us what we are to do to be saved? It is out of the question to say that God will condemn man if not saved, or if not converted, if you please—that is, if he has not told him what to do to be saved. Many are the preachers that teach that conversion is a mystery, and millions are the people who are deceived thereby. This is a lamentable fact.

A lesson from God's word will make this subject plain to those who may chance to read and accept it.

What does the word "convert" mean? Thayer says it means to "turn unto;" "to turn one's self;" "to return, come back." I call attention to the fact that our American scholars translate the Greek word which is commonly found translated "conversion" in the King James Version. "turn " or "turned," as the case may be, instead of "convert" or "converted." For example: "Repent ye there fore, and turn again." (Acts 3: 19.) Again, in Matt. 13; 15 we have: "And should turn again, and I should heal them." "Be converted" is the way we have it in the Common Version. It seems to me that every fair-minded person who may chance to read this can see that for a man to turn from his wickedness and enter into the service of God is not a mystery at all; but any man who does so is a converted man. God requires man to do the turning, and he teaches him how to turn; consequently conversion, or turning to the Lord, is not a mystery.

Acts 3: 19 says "be converted." Theyer renders it "reform," In John 12: 40 he gives it "repent." God "commandeth all men everywhere to repent." (Acts 17: 30.) Then God commands men to be converted. So, from these facts and truths, conversion consists in a man's ceasing to do evil and obeying the Lord Christ.

Now let us see just what the New Testament teaches on the subject just as we have it in our King James Version, which has been in common use so long. When a man is converted, at least four things must be changed,

1. His views must be changed. He will then be a believer. The Scriptures are very plain as to how this is done. "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." (Rom. 10: 17.) Apollos "mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ." (Acts 18: 28.) Peter said: "God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe." (Acts 15: 7.) So we see from God's word that a man turns, or is converted, from a nonbeliever to a believer by hearing and believing; and mark you, he is commanded to believe.

2. His affections must be changed. He must love the Lord God. This change is commanded by the Lord. Proof: "Jesus sald unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment." (Matt. 22: 37, 38.) I now submit that when a man hears and obeys this commandment he has been converted from the love of evil to the love of God; so in his affections he is converted; and it is done by the commandment of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, together with man's obedience to it. It is pertinent just here to say that man's heart is purified by faith. (Acts 15: 9.) Then, of course, a man is led to love God by this faith which he has in him, and which drives all love for evil out, so that he can love God. John says: "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments." (1 John 5: 3.) Man is to do the lov-ing: God cannot do that for him. There is no use to cavil about it; man has control of his heart in this matter, and so can obey Christ's commandment to love God. This has been true from old times. "Keep thy heart with all dilligence, for out of it are the issues of life" (Prov. 4: 23), was given to mankind in the days of Solomon.

3. The state of man must be changed. He is in the state or domain of the devil before he is converted. An important thought is that the preparation of man for entrance into another state—the kingdom of God-must of necessity take place in the kingdom in which he is, which is the kingdom of the devil. When all necessary preparations are made, man is then ready for entrance into this new state. The act which brings him out of the one into the other is a birth. Now hear what Christ said to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5.) Water baptism is one part which constitutes this birth, The Spirit begets, and man obeys the command to be baptized. Proof: "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." (James 1: 18.) By the word of truth man is begotten to faith in Christ; and Christ said: " He that be-Heveth and is haptized shall be saved." (Mark 16: 16.) in the act of baptism man is placed wholly in the waterthat is, he is buried in it—and then he is raised up or brought forth out of it, which constitutes the birth of water; and nothing short of this is the birth, neither is anything else a burial and a resurrection. Man must be buried and raised up to be scripturally baptized: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." (Rom. 6: 3, 4.) Again, we read: "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." (Col. 2: 12.) To the saved in Galatia Paul wrote this: "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 27.) If a person is in Christ, he is born again. But these passages teach that one is baptized into Christ. The Spirit leads man to be baptized. So we see that when one is by baptism translated from without Christ to within Christ, he most certainly has been born again. Thus his state and relationship have been changed by baptism,

4 Man's practices must be changed before he is perfectly converted unto God; for "the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." (Ps. 19: 7.) To be accepted of God, man must be entirely converted in his views, affections, state, and practices. "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new," (2 Cor. 5: 17.) I submit that the man who is thus converted is a new creature in beart, state, and deeds of life. All but his physical structure is changed, and God does not propose to change that till he does so by death and the resurrection. "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." (4 Cor. 15: 44.)

From the foregoing it is evident that man must do his part in order to be saved, and this is equivalent to saying he must do his part in order to be born again. The only thing for man to do is to obey Christ. If he will do so, Christ will certainly do the rest.

Need of the Age.

BY JAMES A. ALLEN.

The present is a unique, a remarkable age. conditions, a general state of unrest, seem to prevail in all countries. It may be that the same conditions, upon a smaller scale and in different ages and nations, have existed before; but so stupendous an unrest, tending toward revolutionary upheaval, seems to be a peculiar distinction of the present time. "Many are running to and fro;" old toundations are crumbling, the fetters and chains of the past are being broken; and, certainly, "knowledge is on the increase." While such a condition is painful, who can say that is is harmful? Feudalism, landed proprietorship, "the divine right of kings," were swept away by a general unrest of the masses, culminating in a general upheaval. Under the oppressive yoke of tyrants the volcano simmered for centuries, and then came the eruption. storm first broke in France-the French revolution. Though the operation was exceedingly painful, though the streets of Paris were crimsoned with rivers of blood, did not the revolution, sweeping away tyranny and oppression, improve the condition of the people? Though it was a "reign of terror," did not the storm clear the atmosphere? Agitation is what purifies the waters of the ocean and prevents stagnation; and if it were not for the storms that rock it, the ocean would have a scum upon it, so filling the breeze with disease as to render life upon the land extinct.

But good and evil are intricately commingled. The same revolution that swept away the tyranny and feudalism of France also deified the "goddess of reason." Extremes beget extremes; and the world, like the pendulum of a clock, swings from one extreme to the other. The ability to preserve an equilibrium, to adhere to the rational mean, is a rare gift and is not the common property of the masses. This may be ascribed as one reason why truth and right are always with a small minority instead of being with the great majority.

No true man, who has at heart the good of the cause of Christ, which is the cause of humanity, can be a disinterested spectator in the crisis toward which things are tending. The two great forces of good and evil are struggling for the mastery. The servants of Christ and the servants of the devil are maneuvering for the vantage ground. The armies of truth are struggling to put to flight the armies of the father of lies, who is endeavoring to fasten the chains of delusion and error, and its consequent misery and sin, upon the mind of an incredulous public. Every man must choose his side and take his place. There are no white feathers, there is no quashing of the indictment. Neutrality does not exist and no one can sit on the fence. "He that is not with me is against me," says the great Captain of our salvation: "and he that gathereth not with me scattereth."

We cannot, in this place, for obvious reasons, enumerate the many errors that are now so enthusiastically advocated. Some of them are so artfully insinuated as to deceive, "if possible, the elect." Most of the colleges are filled with various forms of skepticism; many imaginary reformers are busily circulating numerous heresies; and a very general wave of unrighteousness and crime seems to have visited the entire world. Some, squinting at prophecies that cannot yet be interpreted, imagine that the devil has been let loose; others, viewing the many manifestations of human depravity, think that conditions would not indicate that he had yet been tied.

We can only regret to notice that some of our brethren are now engaged in a very earnest struggle to inculcate a sentiment for denominational federation. The whole offori to so do is monstrously evil. We are very frank to admit that the signs of the times would seem to indicate it as a possibility of the future; but if it ever comes to pass, it will entail indescribable suffering and woe. And while this is not the place for a discussion of the political issues of the day, we may be permitted to say that, although every true American renders honor to our American President, no Intelligent observer of events can but look with suspicion upon anything akin to a league of nations; for, as has already been so generally observed by the metropolitan press, it cannot be a far cry from a league of nations to a league of churches. The confusion of languages upon the plains of Shinar, when the ancient world was leagued to build the infamous tower of Babel, forever stamps God's disapproval upon a united league of the forces of this world. In union there is strength; and a union of organizations not of divine origin would present such a tyranny of evil as could not but result in consequences beyond human power to tell. Besides, no same man can imagine a federation of churches to be Christian union. No similarity could exist between such a league and the union for which the Savier prayed. To establish a central melting pot; to take a skimming of the creeds, Protestant and Catholic, Jewish, Turkish, and Pagan; and to blue pencil such parts of the Bible as would make it more palatable to infidels, would produce such a broth as would create one of the greatest persecutions of all time in an effort to force it to the lips of Christ's true people. As desirable as Christian union is, and without which Christians are disobeying a plain command of God, there can be no Christian union except upon the union grounds that are given in the New Testament.

The church needs men, "faithful men," It needs men who are true to God's word, and who are neither afraid nor ashamed to stand where the apostles stood. It needs men whose ears do not itch and in whose hearts the god of this world can find no place. And that such men may rise and buckle on the armor of light and be valiant in the fight is the fervent prayer of Christ's true people, and the earnest desire of the innumerable hosts in the heavens.

Is Life Worth Living.

BY JARBATT L. SMITH,

"So we thy people and sheep of thy pasture will give thee thanks forever: we will show forth thy praise to all generations," (Ps. 79: 13.)

Since the question is now deliberately discussed, "Is life worth living?" we are not, as Christians, to pass it by without consideration. It is not desirable that we should separate the pulpit from the thoughts of the week-day world or avoid the questions which men who scorn religion discuss among themselves.

Is life worth living—life as regarded by itself, life on this earth, life apart from God, life considered under its purely earthly aspects and relationships—is this life worth living? Let us look at life steadily as a whole. It is not all darkness; it has its crimson glows and its golden sunsets. It is not all clouds; and even when there are clouds, they have their silver lining. It is not all winter; it has its pleasant May as well as its dreary December. Though darkness comes alike to all, yet we all have periods of calm between the storms, interspaces of sunlight between the breaths of gloom, until the night at last sweeps down. Let us acknowledge, let us cherish, let us be grateful for, these natural pleasures, these innocent and simple and holy joys. Let us admit, too, that God is very good to us, and that the lesser evils of our lives are often only in anticipation, or of our own making, and not of God's

Let us grant that childhood, keen as are its little trials, can hardly be otherwise than happy, and that its tears are dried as soon as the dew upon the rose. Let us grant that boyhood is generally happy. But how is it with us when youth merges into manhood, and the golden gates close silently behind us and we step forth Into the thorny wilderness? We will not take the great crimes of life into account, though who of us can say he is quite safe from them? But we will take the common cares of life, its daily fevers, its necessary trials. Our sorrows are quite different sorrows; but who of us, be he rich or poor, be he senator or shopboy, is exempt from them? Take pain: is there one of us who has not known the throbbing head, the aching nerve, the sleepless night? Take health: are there not some who rarely know what perfect health is? Take reputation: have you not been in anguish when cruel and untrue things have been said of you? Take households: is there no household whose "graves are scattered far and wide?" Is there no father who has seen the dust sprinkled over the head of his bright, happy child? A man may bear up bravely against sorrow; he may think it no great matter whether he be happy or unhappy; and if life be bitter, he may find it still to be borne; and if he be a true Christian, he may say: "I have received a cross at His hands, and I will bear it even to death." But when to these sorrows sin is added; when calamity meets an accusing conscience; when a man has a sense of wasted opportunities, the shame of forsaken ideals and the sting of evil memories-is there no sorrow or anguish in thoughts like these, apart from all deeper or darker

If you ask whether life without God in the world and no hope beyond the grave is worth living, I say, no; and all the best and wisest of mankind say as much. Over the volume of human history is written, "Vanity of vanities," and the knell of lamentation, mourning, and wee; and the very Scriptures are the record of human sorrow. There are those who would rob us of our human hopes; who would take our Lord out of the sepulcher and not tell us where they have laid him; who would change our God into a stream of perplexing tendencies. But if they want to take our fine gold from us, we do not want their dross or tinfoil in its place. We, some of us, will cling to duty though it be lost of sanctions, and to virtue though she have lost her oracle; but we do not need sham gods or mock eternities. And as for the world, if atheism reign, it will go on its way picking and stealing till the plt swallow it up. There is a God; there is a heaven; there is an atonement for wrongdoing. Then let us thank God for our creation, preservation, and all the blessings of this life. Ask the Christian, "Is life worth living?" and he will say: "Yes; for 'to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." We pass through death to get to life. Death is the veil which they who live call life; we sleep, and it is lifted. "So we thy people and sheep of thy pasture will give thee thanks forever: we will show forth thy praise to all generations."

O my soul, do thy part with all thy might! Little thou mayest be, insignificant and hidden, and yet God seeks thy praise. He listens for it, and all the music of his great universe is made richer and sweeter because thou givest him thanks. Bless the Lord, O my soul!—M. G. Pearce.

Filipino Proverbs.

BY JORGE BOCOBO.

(Member of Philippine Mission, and Dean, College of Law, University of the Philippines.)

The longing of the Filipino people for independence is nourished by a very deep and earnest desire to develop their own individuality as a nation. When the Spaniards came, the Filipinos already had a culture of their own. Almost every Filipino could read and write. Although Spanish civilization has greatly influenced the Filipinos, and although the young generation is being educated in American ideas, yet Filipino culture remains at bottom indigenous. It is the unfolding of this soul of the Filipino race that justifies the long-standing fight of my people for freedom.

Indicative of the existence of Filipino national genius are the purely Filipino songs, legends, and proverbs which have been handed down by word of mouth from generation to generation. I have picked the following Filipino proverbs at random from my collection of several hundred, which were all obtained from actual conversation with Filipinos, mostly old men. I have translated them from the Philippine languages as closely as possible, thus preserving not only the sense, but also the mode of expression. Lord Bacon said: "The genius, wit, and spirit of a nation are discovered in its proverbs." Knowledge of Filipino proverbs, therefore, gives an insight into the psychology of the Filipino race.

Bravery—(1) A hero is braver for his wounds, (2) It is too late to withdraw when you are already wounded. (2) This is what you wished, my heart, so be brave.

Caution—(1) A fish is caught by the mouth. (2) Repentance never comes first. (3) Courage is of two sorts: one goes forward, the other retires. (4) Haste creates delay.

Character—(1) Whichever side a tree leans, there it falls. (2) 'Tis easy to be born, 'tis hard to be a man. (3) He who is raised in ease is usually destitute.

Choice—He who is hard to suit will choose the worst.

Compensation (law of)—(1) The mushroom always grows with a counterpart. (2) You laugh to-day, I laugh to-morrow.

Counsel—(1) He who despises counsel is on the way to misfortune. (2) Whoever believes everything said has no mind of his own.

Disdain-You may dislike, but never despise.

Faultfinding—The faultfinder has the biggest faults. Fools—(1) A wise man's joke is believed by a fool. (2) Fools earn for the wise. (3) It is foolish to argue with Foresight—(1) Strength yields to plan. (2) Working early is better than working hard.

Forgetfulness—He who is happy is forgetful. Friendship—Let us fight, then be friends.

Good Deeds—(1) Good deeds are more precious than gold and silver. (2) Kindness is a great capital.

Gratitude Kindness is with kindness to be paid, not with gold and silver,

Home (love of) -The pain of a finger is the suffering of the whole body.

Honor-(1) Even the poor love honor. (2) Break your head, but not your word.

Hope—(1) It may be mere mud, but above it is a piece of heaven. (2) I should not grieve over my misfortune, for what muddy water did not become clear?

Hospitality-Though my house is small, my heart is Perseverance, Determination—(1) A thing is near, though far, if you want it. (2) If you want eggs, put up with the caekling of the hen. (3) If you are afraid of every dog bark, you will never reach your destination.

The Filipinos are not a hermit nation. They have taken from the West whatever they thought was good for them and suitable to their conditions. But above these outside influences they want their national genlus to rise and reach higher levels of perfection. It is thus, and only thus, that they can fulfill whatever destiny Providence has set for them and contribute their own culture to the general progress of mankind. A chance to do so is what they wish when they plead for independence.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

F. W. Smith's meeting at Tompkinsville, Ky., was a glorious success. Twenty-eight persons were baptized.

The David Lipscomb College had the largest enrollment in its history on opening day. There were students from seventeen States.

From W. D. Bills, San Antonio, Texas, September 10: "Two good services here Sunday. Crowds large and interest good. One was added."

From C. M. Gleaves, Hermitage, Tenn., September 11: "I am in a meeting with the Philippi congregation, near Hermitage. Seven confessions to date."

J. W. Grant closed a six-days' meeting at Bull Run, in Davidson County, on September 12. Fifteen persons were baptized and two sisters confessed their faults.

The brethren at Reid Avenue Church, this city, were much pleased with the meeting recently conducted by S. M. Jones, of Beamsville, Ontario, Canada. Eight persons were baptized.

Mrs. S. R. Norris, Marrowbone, Ky., writes: "I am now seventy-six years old, and reading the dear old Gospel Advocate is one of the greatest pleasures of my life. I just cannot do without it in the home."

I. C. Hoskins closed a tent meeting on September 7, which began on August 31, at Pea Ridge, about six miles from Manchester, Tenn. There was an ever-increasing interest, large crowds, and one confession."

From J. A. Jenkins, Huntsville, Ala:: "If there is a loyal church near Johnson City, Tenn., let some one in that church please write me, as I have a son there, who wants to find a loyal church with which to meet."

A great many of the Nashville Christians enjoyed H. H. Adamson's sermons in the Twelfth Avenue meeting, which closed on Sunday evening. Three persons were baptized, two were restored, and two were added to the congregation by relation.

V. E. Gregory, of Nashville, Tenn., reports three good meetings during the month of August. At White Bluff three were baptized; at Pleasant View, in Dickson County, there were two restorations; at Old Dunlap, near Duck River, one was restored.

From Seth S. McMahan, Etowah, Tenn.: "There is a very good opening for a blacksmith—a general repair man—in this town. Some such brother would do well to investigate. We have a very small congregation here; but we have a good building, and it is paid for. We owe nothing."

From D. F. Draper, Fort Worth, Texas: "The 'Better Ministry' Number of the Gospel Advocate was the best issue of the paper in many months. Methinks that the time is not far distant when we can really realize those needed ends and aims. Make our hearts glad with another issue like this."

From W. B. Loudon, Cornersville, Tenn., September 10: "C. R. Nichol is assisting the church at Cornersville in a protracted meeting. Six persons have been baptized to date. The meeting will continue till Sunday night. The lessons presented by Brother Nichol are grand and the interest is fine."

From Aruna Clark, Chattanooga, Tenn., September 10: "T. B. Larimore's meeting with the East Chattanooga congregation closed last night with six baptisms and one restoration and the church greatly strengthened spiritually. It is believed that the meeting has done a great deal of good in that section of the city."

From G. E. Claus, Valdosta, Ga.: "I expect to begin a meeting in Savannah, Ga., on September 21. There is no congregation of loyal Christians there. We are trying to gather the scattered disciples. If you know of any one there who is a Christian, kindly write me at 213 West Forty-second Street, Savannah, Ga."

Miss Lena Caskey, who has been in the Tennessee Orphans' Home at Columbia, Tenn., for the past two years, has gone to Santa Ana, Cal., to spend the winter with her brother, E. D. Caskey, who has invested in a fine orange and English-walnut grove in that State. Mr. Caskey went West for his health, and is rapidly improving.

From J. B. Nelson, Dallas, Texas, September 11: "On the first Sunday in September I closed a meeting with the Vallew View Church, near Greenwood, Ark. Nine were haptized. The audiences were all we could have expected. Will W. Slater, of Fort Smith, Ark., preaches for this church during the winter. He has done a good work."

From C. J. Knight, Thrasher, Miss., September 5: "I would like for brethren or congregations who will need a singer for meetings next spring and summer to write me soon, before I contract for other work. I will be able to get plenty of singing-school work, but prefer singing for meetings with my own brethren. I will gladly furnish references."

R. A. Craig writes: "We have moved from Van Buren, Ky., to 1740 Chichester Avenue, Louisville, Ky. The gospel work in Louisville is indeed in a sad plight. I hope that God may use me to bring about a better understanding between our brethren here. I feel that when once our brethren apply the brakes to speculative teaching, we will have unity."

From J. Clifford Murphy, Ethridge, Tenn., September 14: "I closed a ten-days' meeting in Giles County, near Buford, on September 1, with five baptisms. I am at home now, with my wife in Columbia in the hospital with typhoid fever. Brethren, will you please remember us in your prayers? I have canceled two meetings and may have to cancel more if wife does not get better."

From F. P. Tankersley, Lewisburg, Tenn., Route 9: "G. W. Farmer, of Lebanon, Tenn., began a series of meetings at Old Lasea, in Maury County, on the fourth Lord's day in August and continued it ever the fifth Lord's day with fine interest and the best of lessons. Four persons were converted and the faithful ones were much encouraged. Brother Farmer conducted the work with power from start to finish."

From J. E. Wainwright, Texarkana, Ark., September 9: "I closed a two-weeks' meeting at Fenter, Ark., last Lord's day. One was baptized and one was restored. Fourteen who were digressively inclined turned to the true battle for righteonsness. Those desiring my services may address me at 402 East Elm Street, Texarkana, Ark., as I will be laboring with the College Hill congregation here through the winter."

From Andrew Perry, Pikeville, Tenn., Route 1, September 11: "I am now in a meeting at Cold Springs, Tenn., which began on Thursday night of last week. Corn cutting, haymaking, and molasses making are in full swing now, and only part of the time have our audiences been large; however, the attention is good, and I think some of the seed sown will yet yield fruit. I expect to close here next Lord's-day night."

From G. A. Dunn, Berry, Ala., September 12: "I began a meeting here last night. I closed a meeting at Baldwyn, Miss., yesterday, with twenty-two additions to the congregation—seventeen baptisms. It was my fourth meeting there, and I am asked to return next year. One man called me there to begin the work, but now there is a good congregation, a good corner lot and brick house, and the best Sunday school in town, I am told. They are in fine condition. Over one hundred additions so far during my summer's vacation."

From Emmett G. Creacy, Horse Cave, Ky., September 12: "I am just home from a two-weeks' meeting at Reid's Chapel, near Glasgow, Ky., a Presbyterian stronghold. The services were well attended. Many had never heard the pure gospel before. During the meeting ten persons gladly received the word and were baptized. Others were almost persuaded to obey the gospel. Many Presbyterians who had been kept in darkness expressed themselves as seeing the truth. I left them reading the Scriptures. The Lord willing, I shall begin at Mount Vernon next Sunday."

From C. E. Wooldridge, Murfreesboro, Tenn.: "The Middle Tennessee Normal and the Tennessee College, both in Murfreesboro, will begin the year's work the week of September 21-27. The church of Christ in Murfreesboro wishes to be of every good service to the young people who come from their homes and home churches to attend these schools. We will endeavor to make both our church and Sunday-school work what they should be and to give such personal attention as we should. If students and parents will indicate to me their needs or desires for such attention, it will help us greatly. It is important that every boy and girl be regular in church and Bible class attendance and that they should not drift or become careless while in school. If they will write me (Box 239) or telephone (661), I will be glad to render any assistance I can."

WHAT TO PREACH.

Continuing under the heading of the Banner's article which was quoted in this paper last week, let it be said that Christians, children of God, citizens of Christ's kingdom, have pledged themselves and are bound to follow Christ, to observe all things whatsoever he has commanded, and they really desire and purpose to do this. How many are the exhortations and commands in the New Testament to continue steadfastly in the apostles' teaching, to always abound in the work of the Lord, to grow in the grace and the knowledge of Christ, and to be faithful to him in every good word and work!

It cannot be too well understood and too strongly impressed that not only Christians desire to obey God in all things, and must do so, but also that all true and faithful preachers of the gospel and teachers of Christlanity desire to preach, and must preach, the unperverted and full gospel of peace" and teach the whole will of God.

it cannot be said too often or too strongly impressed that preachers and teachers of the will of God have no choice as to what they must preach or teach; God has made that choice, and he charges them in the name of his Son, in his own name, and in view of the judgment, to preach his word. God does not call men to preach different and contradictory things. All must speak the same thing

And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him. (Col. 3: 17.)

Christians must do this or they must not do it; they must teach it or they must not teach it; they must not do "at it" and must not preach "at it." When they do this, what time is left for doing anything else? Or what other things are there they can do? Can they do and teach more or less than Christ teaches or something different from his teaching in his name?

Paul commanded the Inspired Timothy to study in order to show himself approved unto God a workman who would not be put to shame before God, rightly applying the word of truth. What should uninspired preachers and teachers of to-day do along this line? What, above all things, should they study? Whom, of all persons, must they seek to please? A great preacher of ancient times, of great ability, with abundant miraculous endowments, and whom all other preachers delight to quote, if they do not delight to imitate, makes the following declaration:

For am 1 now seeking the favor of men, or of God? or am 1 striving to please men? If I were still pleasing men, I should not be a servant of Christ. (Gal. 1: 10.)

So It is now. Preachers cannot please men and God at the same time; Christ pleased not himself (Rom. 15: 3), but did always the things which pleased God (John 8: 29). He did not speak from himself-that is, his teaching did not originate with him; he was not the author of it; but he taught only that which his Father taught him. He says: "I do nothing of myself, but as the Father taught me, I speak these things." (John 8: 28; see, if you will take the pains to do so, John 7: 16: 12: 49, 50: 17: 8, 14.) Since Jesus came, not to do his own will, but the will of God who sent him (John 5: 30: 6: 38); since he pleased not himself, but always pleased God; since he preached and taught, not his own doctrine, but the teaching or will of God; can preachers and teachers of religion seek to please themselves and the people, preach their own doctrines and theories, and go their own way, and at the same time please God? Certainly not. Then, they must decide for themselves, in view of the judgment, whom they will please and serve and what their eternal destiny shall be.

Brother Srygley and I were recently talking together seriously over these momentous matters, and were perfeetly agreed in regard to the following: (1) That we hardly realize that we are not boys still, or, comparatively speaking, young preachers. We are not as old as some or as young as some. (2) That we have no prejudice whatever against preachers younger than ourselves; that it can be no crime or wrong to be young, to be well educated, and to preach well, but that all are duty bound to do the best in their power for Christ; that we rejoice sincerely in the preaching of the truth-that is, the word of God, the gospel of Christ in its simplicity and beauty and power-by vigorous and godly young men, as Paul rejoiced in Timothy and Titus and others; that preaching the gospel is the all-important thing needed to be done now, whether by young men or old ones, educated ones or ones not educated, ones well supported or others not so well supported; that it grieves us that any young preachers or any old preachers, through love of popularity, money, worldly wisdom and learning, or fear of persecution, should turn away from the simplicity which is in Christ and the truth of God to preach semething else. (3) That we do not object to preaching error and speculation and human wisdom because such preaching is done by young men, but because it is done at all; that it is wrong, or worse and more objectionable, when done by old preachers; that it is unadulterated egotism in any young preacher to presume that older preachers criticize his preaching because he is bright and learned. Nay, verily. There is a great difference between one's thinking "more highly ' of oneself than one should think and thinking soberly and in humility, properly estimating one's ability. (4) That platitudes, moral reflections, literary productions, pedantry, etc., are not preaching the gospel or teaching Christianity-that is, the Christian life. (5) That Paul did not presume to control the faith of Timothy, Titus, and other young preachers when he charged them to "preach the word" and warned them against preaching anything else--all untaught questions, old wives fables, etc. (6) That there are hundreds of young preachers, as well as so many old ones, who love God and the truth, who are true and faithful to the gospel, who have determined not to know anything except Christ crucified, and to preach not themselves, but Christ Jesus as Lord, and themselves "bond servants" for Jesus' sake, (2 Cor. 4: 5.) Such noble and consecrated young preachers to the extent of their responsibilities are the hope of the church. Men may come and men may go, kingdoms and empires arise and flourish and pass away, but the church of Christ will go on forever; it can never be destroyed. "God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." The gnat on the ox's horn is an insignificant thing, but not so insignificant as presumptuous men with their learning and wisdom and self-importance in God's eyes, before whom whole "nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are accounted as the small dust of the balance." (Tsa. 40: 15.)

THE QUIET AND TRANQUIL LIFE.

Then all teachers and preachers of the gospel must teach and preach all the will of God in regard to lives Christians must lead—the "tranquil, quiet, peaceable life in all godliness and gravity." Have all done this? Are all endeavoring to lead this life?

We are wanting only to bring home to all hearts the solemn duty to cling to Christ; to stand by the church; to maintain godliness and good works, which God and not man has ordained for Christians to walk in; and to seek the peace and good of all. We want all to see the wrong which has been done by preachers who turn from these things to any worldly institution, movements, and spirit.

Attention is called to other scriptures teaching the quiet and peaceable, meek and godly life. Study the following passage:

He that would love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile; and let him turn away from evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and pursue it. For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears unto their supplication; but the face of the Lord is upon them that do evil. And who is he that will harm you, if ye be zealous of that which is good? (1 Pet. 3: 10-13.)

The greatest good in life comes to all who do this. Christians love quiet and peace and seek the peace and good of all others. They speak no guile and refrain from speaking evil. Most certainly they desire to turn away from all sin to do good to all men and evil to none. How, then, can Christians kill and destroy others? How can they engage in making widows and orphans of harmless women and helpless and innocent children, and even in rendering them homeless and helpless? Most certainly such work is contrary to every principle of the gospel.

No man who understands the New Testament can teach that Christians should engage in carnal warfare with all its horrible consequences. In nothing be anxious; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus. (Phil. 4: 6, 7.)

This is another command to "lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity." When Christians are "anxious for nothing," when "by prayer and supplications with thanksgiving" they commit their way to God, and when the peace of God which passes all human understanding in its height and depth and boundless extent and full meaning guards their thoughts and hearts in Christ Jesus, they will be contented, tranquil, quiet, and safe in the realization of divine protection in the kingdom which can never be moved. (Heb. 12: 27-29.) No wonder Paul says. "Let us have grace ["thankfulness"—margin] whereby we may offer service well pleasing to God with reverence and awe: for our God is a consuming fire."

O blessed life! How grateful we are to our heavenly Father for it-its serenity, peace, and salvation!

Like as a father pitieth his children, so Jehovah pitieth them that fear him.

But we must lay aside anxiety, all worry and fret, and commit our way to God's guidance, and trust implicitly in him, before we can have this blessedness and peace.

Jesus teaches his disciples not to worry over that which is beyond their control, also, not to borrow trouble, because sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof; and not to be anxious for food and raiment, or even their own lives. Sufficient, too, is the grace and strength which come from God for the burdens and evils of any future day. On the contrary, Christ's disciples must seek first, or place foremost and above all things, God's kingdom and his right-eousness—the interest and advancement and glory of that kingdom and the righteous life of that kingdom.

Study all the reasons Jesus gives for not being anxious and for being contented and submissive to God. (See Matt. 6: 19-34.)

Of course, it is understood that all must comply with the conditions necessary to this quiet and trustful and peaceful life.

In previous articles we have learned that Christians are taught useful employment, industry, economy, contentment, and a meek and quiet spirit. None of these graces can come through idleness. Christians are forbidden to have a restless, striving, vain, ambitious, contending, warring, and worldly spirit. They are taught to escape from the corruption that is in the world through lust and to become partakers of the divine nature. (2 Pet, 1: 4.)

God invites his children to roll their burden upon him and to cast all their care upon him, because he cares for them. (1 Pet, 5: 7.) He is their high tower and refuge, their strength and protector, their bountiful benefactor and salvation.

What then shall we say to these things? If God is for us, who is against us?

On the contrary, God forbids that his children shall fret themselves because of evildoers, or shall be envious of evil and unrighteous men. He commands them to delight themselves in him, to commit their way unto him, and to trust in him. Let us read carefully Ps. 37.

The world is full of evil men, wicked devices, graft and greed, and love of pleasure. With godly exceptions, women have disregarded the will of God on woman's sphere and mission and have laid aside their modesty. The earth groans beneath its burden of strife, unrest, turmoil, upheavals, and bloodshed. In the midst of all this, what must Christians do? Must they plunge headlong into the storm, or be swept down by this flood to destruction without resistance; or must they resist it, keep out of it and apart from it, and remain unspotted from the world? If keeping unspotted from the world does not mean keeping out of all this, then it does not mean anything. The citizenship of Christians is in heaven; "the Prince of Peace" is their King; the New Testament is their law; God is their Father, and they are the children of his care; and the new heavens and new earth, their promised land and eternal home.

Let it be said again that Christians cannot control wicked men, and are forbidden to attempt by physical force, by taking vengeance, and by carnal warfare, to destroy evil. God will do this utterly some day, while now he restrains and overrules all such to his own glory and for the chastisement and good of his people. The armor of Christians is fully set forth in Eph. 6: 10-20 and is in striking contrast with weapons of carnal warfare, which they are forbidden to use. (2 Cor. 10: 3-6.)

The besetting sin of so many professed Christians is unbelief; they seem to have lost faith in God and to desire to take the management of his affairs into their own hands. They are unwilling to leave all to him. Through unbelief the children of Israel fell in the wilderness; through lack of faith and its consequent ungodliness and unrighteousness and gross immoralities the kingdom of Israel and then the kingdom of Judah fell and the people were carried away into captivity; and Jesus asks: "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find falth on the earth?"

Doing the Will of the Lord.

BY J. C. M'Q.

When the Savior was on earth, he spent his time in doing good. He lost no opportunity to comfort the despondent, to relieve the afflictions of the afflicted, and to bid men to look forward to a better day. No man can read the life of Christ as recorded in the New Testament and even imagine that Christ would have his followers spend their time in idleness or simply in finding fault with others who are engaged in the service of the Lord. The time in which we have to work is short. Life is only a moment as compared with the never-ending ages of eternity. The testimony of Jesus is: "My Father worketh even until now, and I work." Realizing the great responsibility that rested upon him and appreciating the value of human souls, the blessed Master says: "We must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." (John 9: 4.)

The great purpose of Christ was not to do his own will, but the will of his Father who had sent him. He says; "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to accomplish his work." With this thought ever before him, we find Christ healing the sick, restoring sight to the blind, and preaching the gospel to the poor. None were too poor, too lowly, or too sinful to arouse the tender compassion of the Christ. Whenever he could see an opportunity to lead any one out of darkness into light and to expel the evil from the hearts of men and women, it filled him with inexpressible delight and joy to do these things. In accomplishing the great mission for which he came into the world, he was not unmindful of children. He says: "Suffer the little children to come unto me; forbid them not: for to such belongeth the kingdom of God." (Mark 10: 14.) Every one who would be saved at last, who would wear a crown of immortal glory, must have the characteristics of a child. He must not be selfish, proud and haughty, but he must be humble, forgiving, not bearing malice, ever seeking to lead men to a purer and nobler life. Men who spend their talents, energies, and means in living for themselves and to satisfy their selfish lusts and vicious desires, llving in sin and wasteful extravagance, really have no true enjoyment in this life. It is the man who finds time to feed the hungry, teach the erring, and lift up the fallen, who really gets the most out of life and who experiences the purest and sweetest joy. How much happier must the good Samaritan have been than the priest and the Levite who "passed by on the other side!" Theirs was a life of selfishness, narrowness, and starvation that dries up all the pure longings and noble aspirations of the soul. The good Samaritan, in binding up the wounds of the wounded man, in feeding, housing, and caring for him, found a satisfaction and a joy which are unspeakable and full of glory.

If all Christians could only lose sight of themselves long enough to catch a vision of the true glory and happiness that Jesus and his true followers enjoyed in doing the will of God, I am sure that we would not have so many lifeless churches and indifferent Christians. The true and only panacea for all of our evils is for us to love and do the will of God as revealed by the Holy Spirit. It is as utterly impossible for the man who lovingly, humbly, and trustingly does the will of God to be really unhappy as it is for him to dry up the ocean or to blot out the sun. God himself, in order to encourage us to do his will, holds up to us as a reward all that is purest and noblest, and even the joys of heaven itself.

If we are weary, sin-sick, and greatly burdened with the heavy burdens of life, he graciously and tenderly says: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." (Matt. 11: 28-30.)

So long as Christians live for this world and for their own selfish indulgences, there is no real happiness for them in this life, nor in the life to come. Jesus with tender compassion warns us against such a life, knowing the fearful consequences that we must suffer for such conduct. In the Sermon on the Mount, with a desire to help and bless us, he says: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust consume, and where thieves break through and steal: but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth consume, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also." (Matt. 6: 19-2L) Before we can enjoy heaven in all its glory at last, we must enjoy it to a certain extent even in this life. We must send our treasures on before us in order that they may receive us into the everlasting habitations. It is the universal experience that money spent for relieving others and as the Master directs brings in a greater revenue of happiness than money spent in any other way. Spending six dollars for silk hose or five dollars for a necktic never yet made any one really happy. Money squandered on needless extravancies, money spent on tobacco and for luxuries that may well be dispensed with for the preservation and improvement of health, never yet dld any good or made any one happy. We should spend our money in a way that will bring satisfaction to our own souls, that will be helpful to others, and that will be for the honor and glory of God.

In the conduct of the Tennessee Christian Orphans' Home, we are making an effort to encourage Christians to maintain and preserve Christian homes throughout the land. It is fully understood and emphasized that no orphan home is as well fitted for rearing, training, and developing a child as is the model Christian home. The object of the Tennessee Orphans' Home is not to take children out of good Christian homes, but to labor to put those who have no homes in model Christian homes where they will be properly cared for and trained. Hence, with this thought before us, we arrange with Christians to take children and give them the training that the Holy Spirit directs. We keep children in the Home just as short a time as possible. But there are many children who have no homes at all, and Christians are so derelict in their duty that it takes time to get them to realize that God demands of them to take these children and train them for heaven. Even the church itself has not reached a state of perfection. The church falls far short of the glory of God, even so much that some are disposed to belittle the blood-bought and blood-washed church of the Lord Jesus Christ by contending that it was never intended for the conversion of many people. Such a position not only belittles the atonement, but it belittles the work of Christ bimself while on earth, the work of his apostles, and the work of the Holy Spirit. But as a continual dropping wears the stone, it is the duty of each and every Christian to urge others to engage in the scriptural work of feeding, clothing, and educating orphans, and the man is in a dangerous condition who will not heed the warnings and admonitions that God gives to encourage him to do good. Solomon declares: "Whose stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall ery, but shall not be heard." (Prov. 21: 13.)

Christians should not neglect children until it is too late. When the pure little ones are surrounded by the wicked and victous, their training and environment being such as would lead them only to destruction, Christians should put agencies to work that will rescue and save them from their surroundings, from misery and sin. Children should be taught the word of God early in life. It is said of the Roman Catholics that they claim that if they can have a child for the first seven years of its life, they can so train it that that training will not be eradicated during the remainder of its life. How often the Christian fathers and mothers become so engrossed in the cares of this world and the riches of this life that they neglect their own children until it is too late! Even as great a man as was King David neglected his son until it was too late to rescue him from the clutches of the devil; so we hear the lamentable cry of David for his son: "O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! would I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!" How many parents realize, as did David, when it is too late, that they have neglected the eternal interest of their children! We would encourage Christians to take orphans into their homes and rear them in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. In this way they can better the conditions of humanity and help fill the world with noble men and women. In the meantime, please do not forget that we have many orphans to take care of in the Tennessee Orphans' Home until such homes are provided. With a view of helping maintain the Home in the work that it is doing, will you not make liberal contributions for it on th first Lord's day in October? Do not let anything make you forget the day and the contribution.

The following quotations from various sections show the Imperative need of continued effort if the survivors are to he saved for a great future in a "New East:"

Alexandropol-"Every day two hundred bodies of starved refugees are picked up."

Igdir- Houses are full of unburied dead; children lying dead in the streets. Orphans gathered into an open courtyard, sleep on the ground with no covering. The next morning they are sorted over and the dead ones put to one side.

"Not a smile in this place—just people crying 'Ajam! Ajam!' (I am hungry). When given food, they break down and weep from sheer weakness.

Erivan—"People dying in the streets of starvation, dysentery, typhus, cholera. The sights around us are heart-rending; staggering, discolored, emaciated, or bloated creatures wander the streets."

"Mothers and dying children lying about the ruins of

One thousand and thirty-one starving, naked children packed closely in temporary refuge without covering, the moans of sick ones heard some distance away."

Marsovan Area—" Sixty-one thousand orphans are diseased and wretched. Their parents were massacred or died of exposure."

Beirut—"Seven thousand orphans in this city alone." Sidon—"In two hundred and thirty villages, one-fifth of houses fallen into ruin and forty per cent of inhabitants have died. Of those living, nearly the same percentage are in need of food, and they are wearing decayed, foulsmelling rags."

Port Said-" Seven thousand Armenian refugees, including large percentages of orphans, assembled in refugee camp, cared for and engaged in various industries until repatriation becomes practical."

Persia—"Conditions desperate throughout Azerbeijan; thousands starving. Hundreds of the villages of Urumia and Salmas devastated.'

INTER NOS

Remember the Tennessee Orphans' Home on the first Lord's day in October. A liberal contribution is needed.

From Ben West, Waxahachie, Texas, September 8: "We had two good services at the College Street Church yester-day, with one addition. Interest is fine in all lines of the church work. J. S. Dunn began a meeting yesterday at Maypearl. Brother Gardner was at Garrett; T. R. Boley preached to good crowds in Ennis; L. C. Reeves was at Midlothian.

From J. Pettey Ezell, Albany, Ala., September 12: "This has been a good year for the work in this section of North Alabama. The church in Albany is in good condition. Realizing the need of a central location, we purchased a nice building site in the heart of the city at a cost of a bit more than three thousand dollars, upon which lot we pitched a tent, and, with Brethren G. C. Brewer and C. H. Woodroof, began a meeting on the second Lord's day in May, which continued over three Lord's days, with good interest in spite of the incessant rains. Three were baptized and four or five from other sources identified them-We shall begin our second selves with the congregation. meeting this year next Lord's day. J. T. Clark, of Pulaski, Tenn., will assist us in this meeting. We are working and praying for great good. Much of my time has been given to other points, as a result of which L. B. Jones has been located in Limestone County and is being supported to labor in and around Athens. There has been no New Testament worship in Athens for some years past. We have found some twenty or twenty-five members who are willing to stand for the simplicity of the gospel of Christ. The Christian Church there is now erecting a large and expensive building, and from them we have purchased the old building at a cost of five thousand dollars; and we, not having yet obtained full possession, worship in the build-ing each Lord's day at 2:30 P.M. At Prospect, Tenn., I held a two-weeks' tent meeting; and while only one was baptized, I consider it one of the best meetings of my summer's work. Prospects at Prospect are good, and we must plant a church of Christ there at the earliest possible date. My other meetings were as follows: At Bell-green, Ala., one week, with thirteen baptized and one re-stored; Cool Springs, Giles County, Tenn., one week, ten added in all (this was my third meeting with this church); New Zion, Giles Connty, one week, with seven baptisms (I was called back there yesterday for another baptism)—my third meeting here; Springfield, Tenn., two weeks, with five baptisms. My work has been very pleasant, and I am truly grateful to the brethern for the splendid support both moral and financial and aspecially to God with port, both moral and financial, and especially to God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy."

Training Little Children

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

How Music Helps in the Life of the Home.

A few instances of what has been done in some homes through the power of music will, I know, tell you more than the mere advancement of theories.

A little girl who was very miserable and managed to make mother or nurse most unhappy all through the process of hairdressing and getting into bothersome clothes would submit most graciously if mother sang,

> My mother bids me bind my hair With knot of fairest hue; Tie up my sleeves with ribbon rare, And lace my bodice blue; "For why," she says, "sit still and weep While others are at play?

an adaptation of Haydn's beautiful air.

Another mother learned to help her little boy work off some of his stormy fits of temper by going to the piano and playing some stormy, impetuous bit, like Schumann's "Wild Rider." The boy did not know why this was done, but he felt the mood of the musle, because it exactly fitted his own, and he would career around the room like a veritable wild pony, until his emotion, which might have worked harm to himself and others, had spent itself in this harmless way.

My sister remembers that even as a child she recognized this power of music to bring sweetness out of temper. She was very angry one day with a sense of some injustice done her and in this mood started to play her beloved piano. As she did this, she realized that if she played she would soon cease to be angry; and not being ready to give up her resentful mood, she rejected the gentle ministry of music and went to her room to nurse her unhappiness.

As an incitement to bravery, music has often been used in the home. A little boy much afraid of the dark would go upstairs to a dark room for mother when she played a strong march for him as he went.

If mothers could realize how many times a bit of music would be of greater service than even the kindest remonstrance, they would have crashing chords ready for the angry boy, nonsense song to drive scowls from the face of little daughter, and jolly jig to set lagging feet and drooping spirits dancing; while a gay little tune improvised or adapted for the occasion would often bring cheerful obedience in response to the request to pick up playthings or perform some other unwelcome task, where a stern command would start an unhappy time for all concerned.

One of my childhood memories is of visiting in a country home where the mother would often get up from the breakfast table, and say: "Come, let us sing a little before we do the work." Bad housekeeping, perhaps, but good homemaking, for I have since learned that this method was always resorted to when the morning atmosphere of the home threatened to be gloomy or quarrelsome; and the singing never failed to drive away the clouds. Of course, this use of music is most effective with a child who is either endowed by nature with the ability to respond to musical influence or has been trained in ear and heart to teel its effects.

A child who has always heard good music and has early learned to love and produce it has great advantage over one to whom it comes as a later and more foreign achievement. Responsiveness to the atmosphere of music is not, however, dependent upon the ability to create it, although of course, made stronger by it. A little four-year-old child who had no natural ability for either singing or playing, being deficient in both rhythmic sense and sense of pitch, nevertheless was so sensitive to musical impressions that she described the tunes which were played to her as being pink and red and blue like the sky, and one which had strong chords with a staccato melody above them as the green tune with red berries. These interpretations of music in terms of color were later explained by the development of an unusual degree of talent with pencil and

Another memory of my childhood is of a visit to a dear auntie who, on Sunday afternoons, took her little visitor to the west pasture and, amid the splendor of the sinking red sun, read from a volume of sacred poems. The cadence of her sweet, low voice will always echo through my memory.

It is truly a part of music's ministry to speak through the charm of a well-modulated, pleasant-toned voice, lending itself freely to the various moods of the fine nature it serves. It is truly one of the duties of the mother and the kindergarten to be a model for her children in this respect as in many others, for children are very sensitive to voice quality.

While the kindergartner's opportunity comes later than that of the mother, she has the same responsibility to see that the children under her care are given the opportunity for "full and all-sided development," to use the words of Froebel, "to enable him to see man in the universality of his nature, and particularly to enable him to understand and appreciate the products of true art." Many children will come to her without having experienced in the home any of the life of music which might have been theirs, and to her will fall the duty of arousing the first idea of awakening the first emotion for sound.

Who that has ever witnessed the delight of a little kindergarten child in this new way of expressing his joy in life can doubt that music should be regarded as a beneficent influence in life, and not as an accomplishment to he cultivated only by those of more than ordinary endowment? When the kindergartner says, "Who will sing our new song for us alone?" how often it is the little fellow who cannot yet carry a tune that eagerly responds, especially if mother is there to hear! If teacher and mother are wise, there will be no expression of surprise or dissent, for the right trueness or untrueness of the tune just now is nothing to the inner urge which makes the child want to express himself in this new and delightful way.

To sing the illting measure when the heart is gay, to give thanks for cherished blessings in the glad hymn of praise, to send upon wings of song a prayer for strength to bear the burden and grief too heavy to be borne alonethis is what God's great gift of music should mean to us. Let us help the little children to enter into their heritage of song.

Christian courtesy in its varied forms of expression is, when uniformly and evenly preserved, the very perfection of self-forgetfulness, the highest practical exhibition of self-restraint and inward recollection.-T. T. Carter

The Man Behind the Smile.

I don't know how he is on creeds, I never heard him say But he's got a smile that fits his face, And he wears it every day.

If things go wrong, he won't complain, Just tries to see the joke; He's always finding little ways Of helping other folk.

He sees the good in every one. Their faults he never mentions; He has a lot of confidence In people's good intentions.

You soon forget what ails you When you happen 'round this man; He can cure a case of hypo-Quicker than the doctor can.

No matter if the sky is gray, You get his point of view, And the clouds begin to scatter And the sun comes breaking through.

You'll know him if you meet him, And you'll find it worth your while To cultivate the friendship of The man behind the smile. -Selected

The True and the False.

The president of a bank, when asked by a young clerk how he could distinguish the counterfeit bills from the good ones, said: "Get familiar with the good bills, and you will recognize the bad bills at sight."

Here is a vast volume of general wisdom summed up in a single sentence. This homely advice applies not only to the detection of counterfeit money, but with equal force to the detection of counterfeits in all departments of life.

The man accustomed to handling only good corn, good potatoes, good diamonds, has no difficulty in detecting the faulty. He does it intuitively. Even without recognized thought he fixes upon the fault. The skillful egg candler passes good eggs before the light with a rhythmic rapidity that is amazing, but an imperfect egg instantly breaks his routine and interrupts his process. To the trained musician, accustomed to high-grade work, a false note comes like a stab of pain.

In any occupation or line of endeavor, any man fully engaged in doing the right thing will have no difficulty in recognizing the wrong. Right and wrong are as far apart, as unlike, as day and night; and he that is most accustomed to the light is quickest to note the shadows.

There is only one way to know the bad, the imperfect, the false, and that is by knowing the good, the perfect, the true. Christian Herald.

It is very easy to pick up a bur and very hard to get rid of it, though it often makes itself very troublesome when you have it. The same is true of slang. There are many excellent words in the English language which are used so seldom that they are in danger of growing rusty. Better use these and leave slang alone.—Girls' Companion.

Book Notices.

Send us $1.25 for a copy of "Instrumental Music in the Worship," by M. C. Kurfees.

We have left a few copies of "Folk-McQuiddy Discussion on the Plan of Salvation." Price, $1.25.

For $1.25 you can buy a copy of "Life and Sermons of Jesse L. Sewell," by David Lipscomb. It is a good book.

Every church should know its membership. In order to keep informed as to the residence and membership of your church, you should have a church record. Our Church Record is the very thing you need. Price, $1.50.

PRICE OF MUSIC BOOKS.

On account of the great advance in materials and la-bor, it becomes absolutely necessary to make an ad-vance in the price of all our music books. The cost of production has advanced much more than we have increased the price of books. The advance will take effect on and after September 15, 1919.

Below we give revised price list.

Florence, September 8 .- On the third Lord's day in August I began a tendays' meeting for the church at Three Forks, near Smith's Grove, Ky., which resulted in obedience to the gospel of two young ladies. Brother Oakley, of the Potter Orphans' Home, was with me part of the time. I am now at New Hope, near Florence.—J. T. Harris.

Millport, September 10 .- Our meeting at College Grove was well attended. Five persons were baptized and one I am now in a fine meetwas restored. ing here at Millport, with one baptism to date. The crowds are large, the weather is fine, God is with us, and we are doing our best to honor the King. 1 go next to New Hope .- A. D. Dies.

Linden, September 8.—Brother John Hayes began a meeting here on the third Lord's day in August and con-tinued it till the fifth Lord's-day night. It rained almost every day the first week and some the second, but we had good crowds at night. There were no visible results, but the people expressed themselves as being delighted with the preaching, and some said they were "almost persuaded" to become Christians. It is a new doctrine here; but if we could get another preacher to hold a meeting soon, I believe we would reap a harvest from Brother Hayes' sowing. The Avenue Church, of Nashville, sent twenty-five dollars, and Brother A. B. Lipscomb sent twenty-five dollars out of the missionary fund, for the meeting. Brother Hayes went from here to hold some more mission meetings. We need a man to locate here, but we need the help of churches and brethren to keep a man in this The Presbyterians gave us the use of their house, and they sald If we wanted to organize we were welcome to meet there.-Mrs. Mattie J. Selby.

Bear Creek, September 6.-Immediately after writing my last report in July, having no work on band, I went to work in a hotel in Franklin, Ky. Then, learning of a vacancy in the public schools in Macon County, Tenn., I went to Lafayette. While waiting for an examination I received a letter from Brother J. R. Phillips, of Bear Creek, asking me to come and hold a meeting; so I gave up the idea of teaching and accepted the call. The brethren here had requested me to be here by August 31. When I arrived, I learned that the Methodists had a meeting scheduled for that date; so I began a meeting at Mountain Home, about three miles from Bear Creek, which is now in progress, with good interest and attendance, but no additions to date. At the close of the meeting here I expect to go to Gravel Hill, about five miles from Phil Campbell, for a few days. I will then be at lelsure, as the brethren at Bear Creek have postponed their meeting indefinitely. I am not a "big preacher," but am willing to do my best for Christ. I hope to attend school somewhere this winter, but do not see my way clear as yet. Lack of finances may force me to go back to secular work for the winter. God rules, however, and his way is best .-Albert L. Stewart.

Arkansas.

Van Buren, September 8.-The meeting at Spaulding, Okla., closed Sunday night. It was a great meeting, with large attendance throughout. additions, fifteen by baptism. All those baptized were from the Meth-odists, Baptists, and the Holiness folks, one a Holiness preacher. country was stirred as never before. God's word is a powerful sword. The brethren paid me two hundred and forty-three dollars. I began a meeting near Van Buren last night.-Will W. Slater.

Remmel, September 7.—Brother O. E. Billingsley has just closed a splendid meeting with the congregation at this place. Brother Billingsley's efforts resulted In twelve baptisms and three restorations, together with the general uplifting of the church. We were greatly pleased with his splendid work. Brother Billingsley went from here to Algoa, where he preached for a week. Algoa is a mission point, and the church here supported him in that work. There were two baptisms at Algoa and much good seed sown which we mean to cultivate.—W. R. Cox.

Kentucky.

Bardwell, September 7.—I closed a nine-days' meeting at Dorris Chapel, near Eaton, Tenn., on September 4. which resulted in eleven additions to the congregation-ten by baptism and one from the Christian Church. Brother Fred Blanchard, of Friendship, Tenn., led the singing. He is a fine leader.-Joe Rateliffe.

Hardin, September 10 .- 1 have just closed a very successful mission meeting at Altonia, on the Tennessee River, in this (Marshall) county. This has been a so-called "sanctified" stronghold, and I am the first to preach the plain gospel of Jesus Christ at that I went and preached there two or three times during the last three years and "broke the ice," so to speak, and then, as results of this meeting of ten sermons, four were haptized, two came out from the Baptists and united with us on the Blble, and one sister of our own faith who lived in the community was restored to her "first love" in the Lord and took fellowship with us. There was but one brother in the community to help at the start.- H. W. Jones.

Paducah, September 6.-The meeting at Rosebud, Ill., closed last Sunday night, with a large audience present. The attendance and attention were good throughout. Two were baptized. and the seed of the kingdom was sown in other hearts for a future harvest, The following contributions were received for the financial support of this meeting: From Stone Church, $20; church at Dixon Springs, $20; Mount Pleasant Church, $10; contributions during the meeting, $25.54; Sister Sophie Golightly, $5; Brother Henry Stucker, $1: Brother J. A. Kerr, of Berry Ferry, Ky., $5. Total, $86.54, May God abundantly bless each of the contributors, and may other churches and brethren follow their example and bear the words of life to those who are dead in trespasses and sins,-W. A. Record.

Sparrow, September 6.-I put in nearly all my time from May to September with the church at Mill Creek, Ark., having held a meeting there the summer before. The only visible results of my labors there were the de-bate between Brother Nichol and Mr. Shelton, the revising of the register, and the removing of an organ that had been placed in the house by a singing The church had been induced to use the organ in one meeting, but a number of the leaders did not desire to use it. My last meeting was at Wardell, Mo., a mission meeting. I found several members there and some splendid material yet unorgan-ized. Seventeen placed their names on the roll to begin keeping house for God and two were baptized, making a membership of nineteen. They have no house, but the Holiness people did an unusual thing in letting us use their house for the meeting. I am extheir house for the meeting. I am expecting to hear good news from the little congregation at Wardell, if they carry out their determination. I am located here to labor two years with four churches,—J. G. Malphurs.

Louisiana.

Amite, September 8.—The Jews who returned from Babylon to rebuild their city and to erect their temple again met with much opposition; but their zeal led them to cooperate in the great work that they were undertaking, and they succeeded. This is true in every enterprise. Even in the work of our Lord It behooves us to unite our efforts to do effective work. Some one has truly said: "The church is just as able to send the gospel to the destitute as any of the denomina-tions." This ability makes the responsibility of the church very great, since several of the denominations are raising several million dollars this year to send their doctrines to those who have not heard of them. How much more should we try to send the gospel to Opportunities are open for all to do something for our Lord. May redemption, which cost Christ his life. Now, in our effort to erect a house in which to meet to worship God as he has instructed, we feel the need of asking the fellowship of the brethren everywhere to hasten the work to completion. We are doing all we can to complete it before winter. It grieves us much because we are hindered on account of a lack of funds to complete the work. If all could spend a while doing work for our Lord in a field like this, they would understand why appeals for help to do work of this kind are made. If every one will help and not wait for the other to give, think-"there may be enough without mine," we shall soon have the required amount. Remember that we are hindered by delay in our work of preaching in other places. We realize that other places are asking for help; but can you think of any place that needs it more than this? Any amount given will be appreciated and acknowledged. -W. J. Johnson.

Vardaman, September 6.—Brother E. L. Whitaker, of Henderson, Tenn., has just closed the second meeting ever held in this town by a preacher of the church of Christ. We were sorry for it to close, as the interest was increasing daily. Six persons were baptized. We used the Methodist Church, and, of course, were restricted to some extent. Brother Whitaker encouraged our little band of about eight families to make a great effort to build a church here. We have Lord's-day meetings in our homes, and often have visitors, and I am sure more would attend if we had a church house. Brethren who feel like encouraging us in our effort to build a meeting-house should send their contributions to our superintendent, Brother Guy Perkins.—Mrs. Jim Edmundson.

Missouri.

Rogersville, September 6.—I closed a meeting at Rogers Chapel on August 17 without any additions, but with fine interest and much good seed sown. I closed at Greenway, Ark., on Sunday, August 31, with two additions and much good done otherwise. I was ably assisted in the song service here by Charles F. Hardin. I met Brethren W. D. Black and C. H. Black while at Greenway. I preached at Jonesboro on Sunday night, August 31. I began a meeting at Edwards Chapel, near Northview, Mo., on Tuesday night last, Interest is growing. I will go from here to Masters, near Fairplay, to begin on September 16. Brethren are treating me nicely.—M. S. Mason.

Tennessee.

Dickson. September 2.—I recently held two meetings near Clarksyille—Allen's Chapel and Oakwood churches. One baptism in the first, with good interest; in the second, splendid interest, but no other "visible" results, except a promise to assist them in another effort in 1921, Jehovah willing. I go to Florida soon, where I will do the preaching in three meetings—Zolfo, Largo, and Jacksonville. This has been a busy year with metwelve meetings to date, with three others promised. The harvest is great and the laborers are indeed few—T. B. Thompson.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

CHILLS, COLDS, FEVERISHNESS

Black-Draught Is Used by Virginia
Lady for Colds, Fever, and Other Troubles with Fine Results.

Rocky Mount, Va.—Miss Mae Chitwood, of this place, recently stated:

"I have used Black-Draught for colds and stomach trouble and certainly have found it very satisfactory.

"When I would feel bad and feverish, as though I was taking a fresh cold, I would make a good cup of Black-Draught tea and it would soon set me all right.

"I can recommend it as a splendid laxative, and gladly do so You may publish my statement."

When you feel chilly, tired, feverish, headachy, and fear that you are taking cold, take a good dose of the old, reliable, liver medicine you have heard so much about—Thedford's Black-Draught. It is made from purely vegetable ingredients, acts in a gentle, natural way, and, by helping to drive out poisonous waste matter from your system, it will often, if taken in time, prevent a chill from developing into a cold.

Thousands of people, during the past seventy years, have found Black-Draught of benefit in such cases.

Try it the next time you chill or sneeze.

HENS MOULT FAST

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First raiser over the entire mounting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you don't take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Romantic Story of Southd's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, case and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a hoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last welve months has increased fully three-hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

Two Cases Similar.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

The passover was to be observed in the night part of passover day. The Jewish Sabbaths and feast days to be observed would begin at sunset on any Roman day; but that Roman day would continue on six hours longer. or until midnight. If Jesus was crucifled on Friday, that Jewish Friday began on the Roman day of Thursday evening at six o'clock and continued until sunset the next day, being six hours ahead of Roman time. Then would follow the Saturday called the seventh-day Sabbath. And as the day following the passover was always a holy Sabbath convocation day of praise, thanksgiving, sacrifice, and prayer, it follows that the seventh-day Sabbath and the yearly Sabbath which follows the passover were upon the same day. Hence, a "double Sabbath," or "an high day," (John 19: 31.) These two Sabbaths began on the Roman Friday evening at sunset. It makes no difference by which calendar you count, Jesus was arrested on the Roman Thursday night and the Jewish Friday night, which night began on the Roman Thursday evening at sunset. The hours of both Roman and Jewish days were numbered just the same counting from 6 A.M. until they counted all of the daylight hours, then all of the twelve night hours were counted the same way. Soon after Jesus ate of the passover he was arrested, and they had three trials for his life, all being illegal, as trials after night were unlawful. The next morning the wicked Jews and rulers made four more efforts, which resulted in wresting Pilate's decision from Jesus. "And It was the third hour, and they crucified him." (Mark 15: 25.) It was what we would call 9 A.M. That was certainly on the morning part of the passover day; Then at twelve came the darkness; that was the sixth hour of the passover daytime. Then at the ninth hour, or three o'clock, Jesus died; then three more hours would end the passover day and usher in the yearly Sabbath. The time of day when Jesus died was the time to begin to prepare for the Sabbath. Then there were only three more hours left of that passover day. Criminals were not allowed to hang after night, nor on the "Thou shall in any Sabbath day. wise bury him that day." (Deut. 21: 32.) So Jesus was taken down and buried in the evening of the Roman Friday and in the last three hours of the Jewish Friday. And God counted the day (see Zech 14: 6-8; Amos 8: 9); Jesus counted the day (Luke 23: 43); and Paul counted it ten different times; so I am inclined to think it is Near fifty years ago I copied this statement from the writings of the greatest reformer of the age: "In the year 140, Justin Martyr, in his apology to Antoninus, said: 'On the day we call Sunday we all meet together, on which day Jesus Christ, our Savior, rose from the dead. He was crucified on the day before the Sabbath, and on the day after the Sabbath, which is Sunday, he appeared to his disciples and apostles and taught them those things which we have set before you and refer to your consideration." The record date of all important events always includes the night part; no dlfference what hour of the day, the first or last hour, it counts as one day. The resurrection of Jesus occurred near the dividing line between the night part and the day part of the first day of the week, called "Sunday," according to the Jewish calendar. But according to the Roman calendar, only about six hours of Sunday can be counted, for the tomb was found to be empty at sunrising, that day having begun at midnight. Yet it is called the "third day," and is spoken of as the third day ten different times. Sunday being the third day, Saturday would be the second, and Friday would be the first day. It is true that Jesus was buried in the evening; and as some contend that Jesus was in the grave seventy-two hours, or three whole days and three whole nights, they have the resurrection of Christ In the evening. Jesus said: "For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." (Matt. 12) 40.) Jesus did not use the word "whole," neither is the word "whole" in the statement given in Jon. 1: 17. But the cases were to be similar, and turns upon two little words, "as" and "so," As it was with Jonah, so was it to be with Christ. The time of the burial of Christ gives us the time when Jonah was thrown overboard and swallowed by the whale. The time of the resurrection of Christ shows us about the time Jonah was placed upon the land. Jesus used the case of Jonah to Illustrate his own burial and resurrection. Rome had nothing to do with the Jewish Sabbaths and feast days and took no part in them. Yet, according to both Jewish and Roman calendars, Jesus rose from the dead on the first day of the week, and divine testimony says that day was the third day.

My friend, do you not know that the day before the first day of the week, called "Sunday, was the seventh-day Sabbath, called "Saturday," and that the day before Saturday was Friday? As Sunday, the first day of the week, was the third day, the seventh-day

Sabhath, called "Saturday," was the second day, and the day before Saturday was Friday, the first day pertaining to the crucifixion and burial of Jesus. This establishes Friday as crucifixion day, and D. Mortimer Bennet's argument about three whole days and three whole nights have never changed the crucifixion day from Friday. The divine count still stands. And the law controlling the two greatest Sabbaths ever known brought those two Sabbaths together upon the same day where Jesus could observe them both at once by resting in the tomb. Then and there the Sabbaths were forever removed, and Christ has become our Passover, and our Sabbath of rest to the soul which Jesus came to give is remission of sins through faith and obedience.

Four Figures in the Christian's Life. No. 3.

BY S. W. BERRYMAN.

The Christian life may be compared to a walk with God. To walk with God is to live in sweet communion with him, having a lively sense of his presence and endeavoring above all things to please him and to be approved and accepted of him. The man who walks with God walks on the higher planes of life.

Both the Old Testament and the New Testament abound in examples of men who have walked with God. Since the Christian's life is a walk, it is an individual duty, and we should not ask others to carry us. Neither should we expect others to walk for us. Every one must walk for himself. The object of the Christian walk is to reach a desired destination.

For a better understanding of what it means to walk with God, it might be well to note the lives of some men who have walked with him.

"And Enoch walked with God after he begat Methuselah three hundred years, and begat sons and daughters: and all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years; and Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him." (Gen. 5: 22-24.) This man lived on earth three hundred and sixty-five years. Three hundred years of his life were spent in walking with God. His life was too pure and good for a sinful world like this; hence, God took him to heaven without his seeing death. The writer of the Hebrew letter tells us that "before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God." (Heb. 11: 5.) Then, to "walk with God" is to please God. How did Enoch please God? By llving the kind of life God commanded him to live. Remember, his life met the approval of Jehovah for three hundred years. Brethren, If Enoch walked with God and pleased God three hundred years, surely we can walk with him a few short years, anyway.

"Noah was a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God." (Gen. 6: 9.) How did Noah walk with God? "Thus did Noah; according to all that God commanded him, so did he." (Verse 22.) It is clear to be seen that Noah walked with God by doing all God commanded him. No doubt Noah was sneered at, ridiculed, and pointed out as an "old silly" by his faithless neighbors. But all this did not move him. He remained faithful and continued to walk with God.

Many times to-day the people of God are ridiculed and made fun of because they do not try to carry the world with them, as many other religious bodies are doing. They say we are "out of style" and "behind the times." But we are satisfied with the system that Christ revealed, for we believe firmly that it is perfect and needs no improvement. We believe. also, that the man or woman who worships God according to its teaching is walking with God. It may seem old and out of date to those who desire the companionship of the world, but It does not seem old to those who desire the companionship of the Lord. To be Christians and gain heaven, we must walk with God; and we cannot carry the world with us, either.

The religion of Jesus demands an unspotted robe. We are commanded to put off the old man, which is corrupt according to the deteitful lust, and to put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true boliness. (See Eph. 4: 22, 23.) By putting off the old man and putting on the new, we prepare ourselves to "walk in newness of life." (Rom. 4: 6.)

Other examples of walking with God are found in the lives of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Daniel, David, Elias, John the Baptist, Paul, and others. To walk with God is to be in agreement with him. "Can two walk together, except they be agreed?" (Amos 3: 3.) Israel could not walk with God because they disagreed with him. It is safer to disagree with any one else than God. It is dangerous to set aside his divine directions or call In question his word. Israel disagreed with God, and they suffered the consequences, too. The only safe course to pursue is to obey God and trust him for his blessings. This alone can bring true happiness to our hearts and give us a promise of a home beyond the grave.

The only happy people in the world are those who walk with God. People cannot be truly happy while diving in sin. Think of a person being happy

Miss Sara Weston, 120 Kishwauace Street, Belvidere, Ill., writes: "I am pleased to state Foley Kidney Pills made a great difference in me. I was in great agony. I could not stoop down, and when I was down I had to crawl up by a chair, I was so lame all over I suffered agony. Now I feel like a new person, stronger and better in every way. My general health is quite improved. I can and do heartily recommend Foley Kidney Pills to all suffering in the way I did."

who is outside of the kingdom of Christ, without God and without bope in the world! Not only are the people who walk with God happy in this life, but they will be happy in the world to come. If we walk with God in this life, we have the promise of a walk with him in the house of many mansions. "Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white: for they are worthy." (Rev. 3: 4.) "I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called." (Eph. 4: 1.) The faithful few at Sardis will be permitted to walk with Christ in white; for they had not "defiled their garments" and they are "worthy."

May the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob bless us to so walk with him in this evil world that we may be permitted to walk with him in a world that shall never end.

FROM THE FIELD

Tennessee.

Donelson, September 9.-1 closed a meeting at Donelson on Sunday night, with twelve additions from every source. This was the most pleasant meeting, I think, I have ever engaged in. The crowds were very large and attentive. I shall long remember the pleasant associations.-C. H. Wood-

Ashland City, September 8.—1 closed an eleven-days' meeting at Sycamore Chapel last Wednesday night. altendance was very good. Two were restored. I began a two-weeks' meeting at Sycamore yesterday, with good at-tendance and interest. On the fourth Lord's day in this month I will begin a meeting at Roleta, near McMinn-ville, the Lord willing.—B. W. Davis.

Murfreesbore, September 10.-The meeting at Brownsboro, Ala., closed last Friday night. We had good andiences, but no additions. We had two good services at West Huntsville last Sunday. In the afternoon I conducted funeral services of Brother Ira F. Collins at the church of Christ in Hunts-At present I am singing at Bethlehem, near Murfreesboro, while L. B. Jones does the preaching.-E. Gaston Collins.

Baxter, September 9.-I closed an eight-days' meeting at Arcot, Clay County, last Lord's day. Three erring members confessed their sins, Brother J. P. Watson was to have held this meeting, but on account of ill health he had to give it up. I am now in a good meeting at Baxter. Brother Bevington is with me in this meeting. One more meeting after this one. and then I sim to take a few weeks of needed rest .- Willie Hunter.

Haydenburg, September 8.-I have just closed two weeks preaching near Haydenburg, resulting in four bap-tisms and one restoration. I was treated as well as any one could wish to be treated. I regretted to part with the brothren there, but parting will come here; but I hope to meet the redeemed in a land where parting will be no more. Brethren, if any congregation wants me for a meeting in October or November, write me,-G, W, Hermitage, September 8.-I closed a meeting at Mount Pleasant on September 3, with three baptisms. I made my home with Brother C. S. Austin, who labors with the congregation there. Brother Austin is an able preacher, a good and humble man, and is held in high esteem wherever he goes. Brother Kennamer, of Wood-ville, Ala., led the song service, and it was well done. He is not only a sweet singer, but a good preacher of the gospel. The Mount Pleasant brethren treated us well. I am now at Philippi, near Hermitage, in a meeting.—C. M. Gieaves.

Pikeville, September 8.-I have just returned home after a few weeks spent In meetings. Our meeting at Craig-field, near Bon Aqua, was well attended and interest fair. At Leoma, near Lawrenceburg, good crowds and open ears awaited the gospel truth. At Nelson, near Leoma, the interest was good and crowds large for the place. In all, twelve were baptized and three were reclaimed. The work, as a whole, proved a joy, and I feel that some little good was done. With wife and a little daughter, I returned to Pikeville, and found the work encouraging.—G. F. Gibbs.

Nashville, September 10 .- On the first Lord's day in August I began a meeting at Westmoreland, which con-tinued a week. This is a mission point, and the faithful few are striving to build a house in which to worship. They are loyal to the cause of Christ, and they are badly in need of a house. Any help given them would be appreciated. On the second Lord's day in August I began a meeting at New Liberty and continued it fourteen days. Two persons were baptized and the church was encouraged to higher work. On Thursday night before the fourth Lord's day in August I was at Mitchellville. This was one of the best meetings I ever held. Five persons were baptized. I shall go there next year for a two-weeks' tent meeting, the Lord willing.- F. J.

Jackson, September 5.-Brother L. S. Lancaster conducted a very profitable meeting at this place, beginning on the second Sunday in July and continuing fifteen days. The church was very much edified and strengthened and thirteen were added to the one bodytwelve by baptism. Brother Lancaster is located here and is held in high esteem by this congregation. The third Sunday in each month is reserved for Brother A. G. Freed, president of the Freed-Hardeman College. The breth-ren here love Brother Freed, and a great work and much good will be accomplished by his coming to Jackson once a month. The church register shows a membership in good standing and fellowship of one hundred and fifty-eight, and there are a few others who meet occasionally with us, but have not placed their membership with the congregation at this place.—John T. Hall.

Gallatin, September 4.-Our meeting at Boston Schoolhouse, McLean County, Ky., twenty miles west of Owensboro, began on August 18 and closed on August 31, with one added to the church. The meeting was held in a community where there are only a few loyal Christians, with no house of worship except the schoolhouse, in which the meeting was held. The "Christian Church" folks and others of the denominations turned out to hear me; so, in all, we had good crowds throughout the meeting. They remunerated me well for my services and expressed a desire to hear me again. I am now in a meeting here at Faithtown, six miles southwest of Calhoun, Ky. The meeting began last Monday and will close next Sunday We are meeting in a Cumberland Presbyterian house. The people are coming out well to hear us .- J. M.

Decherd, September 8.—1 held an eight-days' tent meeting at Center Point, in Biedsoe County, which resulted in three baptisms. Notwithstanding the rainy weather, we had big crowds. Brother Earl Mason, a young preacher, of the Tracy City congregation, assisted in the meeting and did some of the preaching. After closing this meeting I moved the tent two miles to College Station. Brother Balley Brooks, of the Tracy City congregation, assisted me in this meeting, which continued about seven days. Twelve persons were baptized and six confessed their wrongs. The brethren at Center Point are making arrangements to build a new meetinghouse. A lot was given to them, and I had the deed made before I left. Also, the brethren at College Station are building a meetinghouse. A beautiful lot was given to them also. I go next to Liberty, in Sequatchie County.-R. E. L. Taylor.

Centerville, September 8 .- On the second Lord's day in July I began a meeting at Hearn's Chapel, in Henderson County, which continued until the following Saturday night, with one confession and baptism. From there

I went to Holy Hill, in Carroll County, where I began a meeting on the third Sunday in July, which continued until the following Friday night, with one confession and baptism. I have promised to begin another meeting there on the first Sunday in October. I began a meeting at Cedar Dell, in Marshall County, on the fourth Sunday in July and continued it until the following Lord's-day evening. However, at the morning service Brother H. C. Williams filled his regular appointment, while I went to Sharp's Corner and began a meeting. After the morning service at Sharp's, I returned to the water's edge near Cedar Dell to take part in baptizing a few precious souls. Five were added at Cedar Dell-one restored and four baptized. The meeting continued at Sharp's Corner until the following Saturday night, with ten added-four restored and six baptized. I began a meeting at Brown's Chapel on the second Sunday in August and continued it until the following Saturday night. There were no additions, but an aggravated church trouble of long standing was settled. The brethren and sisters met in the spirit of Christ, confessed their sins to each other, and asked each other's forgive-This was a wonderful meeting, ness. and I left a happy congregation there. I also held a meeting at Lanton, be-ginning on the third Lord's day in August and continuing until the fol-lowing Sunday night, with no addibut, after thoroughly teaching tions: the brethren their duty to one another, I succeeded in adjusting another church trouble, as well as some family troubles. I am now at home for a few-days' rest.-W. T. Beasley.

Texas.

Cedar Hill. August 28.-Brother Austin Taylor and I closed our work at Midlothian last Sunday night. I returned Tuesday to baptize some persons, and two more made the confession, making twenty-seven confessions and six restorations. We were well cared for. This was my fifth meeting there, and I promised to return on August 15 next year. The meeting starts well at Cedar Hill.-Horace W.

Crockett, September 1.—Brother Ed. Leidker and I labor together preaching the gospel every summer in the byways and hedges of our county. Last year we baptized fifty-seven souls into Christ. So far this summer we have organized five Sunday schools and baptized about ten persons, and we are not through with our work. We have also received several from the Missionary Baptist Church.—W. B. Worthington

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Frederick S Kolle, M. D., Editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says that weak, hervous people who want increased weight, strength and nerve-force, should take a 5-grain tablet of Bitro-Phosphate just before or during ch meal. This particular phosphate is the discovery of a famous French scientist, and reports of re-markable results from its use have recently appeared in many medical journals.

If you do not feel well: if you tire easily; do not sleep well, or are too thin, go to any good druggist and get enough Bitro-Phosphate for a two weeks' supply—it costs only fifty emits a week.

Eat less; shew your food thoroughly, and if at the end of a few weeks you do not feel stronger and better than you have for months; if your nerves are not steadier; if you do not sleep better and have more vim, endurance and vitality, your money will be returned, and the Bitro-Phosphate will cost you nothing.

"Why Am I a Member of the Church of Christ?"

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

There are so many varied answers given to this question that I believe It is worth while to state a few things regarding it. If viewed from the Bible, I am sure we will not be so varied in our expressions. As I see it, the reason I should be a member of the church of Christ is because God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit want me to, and f must be in it to be saved. But all do not view the matter thus. Some say they belong to the church of Christ because their children do; some, because they like it as well as almost any other church; some, because it is the closest church to them; some, because they have so little to do in it; and a few belong to it because they believe it to be the church of which Christ is the head and the one in which salvation is found. Many other reasons might be stated that people offer, but from these we can see a lack of unity. Possibly there are more in the church (or claim to be) because their people were than those who have studied for self to see God's revealed plan.

Now, if there is no reason why we should be members of the church of Christ rather than of other "churches," as man would call them, I see no special reason for the existence of the church of Christ. But if the church over which Christ is head contains things that no other organization does, and these be essential to our salvation, which, of course, would also be according to God's will, then we need to be members of this church and do not need the so-called "churches" at all. One church is enough for any soul to be a member of; and if the work is followed as faithfully as it should be, no time will be left for other institutions which pose as the church or to do the work of the church. So really I believe a soul is a member of the church of Christ because he feels and is convinced from the heart that no other body will do to risk for eternal good,

If a man expresses himself as being a member of the church just to be with his children, by what authority would we be able to call him a true brother or a part of the body of Christ? Since God is no respecter of persons, he evidently accepts all on the same terms of obedience to the law he has revealed for our salvation. So, if one says he came into the church to be with his children, and another says he came into it because be believed he could not be saved out of It and that it was the only church pleasing to God, all can see there is a vast difference. If another thinks other churches will do as well, but comes into the church of Christ for reasons of convenience, is he really in the church of Christ? These are serious matters that should cause all to think seriously. Study your own case and ask yourself the question, "Why am I a member of the church of Christ?"

Time and Eternity.

BY W. R. RAINS.

Solomon, the wise king of earth, says there is a time for all things; and this, of course, refers only to the things of this world, or the time, period, or date when certain things transpire, or come to pass. Now, when Solomon says there is a time to weep and a time to rejoice, he means that there is as truly and surely a time to cease as there is a time to commence; when applied to this world, and hence cannot be applied to eternity; for there they neither weep nor mourn, neither is there time there, neither beginning nor ending. "Well," you say, what are you going to do with John's language in Revelation where he says, 'And there was silence in heaven for the space of half an hour?" Well, I will tell you as plainly as I can what will do with it. I will believe it with all my heart, as I do all of his word. I believe that one day with God is as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day; and I believe that "the space of half an hour" referred to is the time of the death and crucifixion of the Son of God, when the stars fell from heaven, the moon turned to blood, the sun refused to shine, and darkness was over the earth for three hours; and I believe that if there ever was a time since creation when everything was silent. this was the time. When we rightly divide the word of truth and apply it as God applies it, we cannot apply time to eternity; for it has neither beginning of years nor ending of days. hence no time. Therefore rejoice and be glad, for great is your reward in heaven; and while you are here is the only time you have to prepare for it.

In the long course of my legal profession I have met with several sons who had, in circumstances of difficulty, abandoned their fathers; but never did I meet with a father that would not cheerfully part with his last shilling to save or bless his son. —David Daggett.

Why Not Finish It?

BY C. G. VINCENT.

Now that the great world war is over and peace is about to be ratified riet us hope that it will be in spite of its human detects), let us take up the work interfered with by the war emergency and complete it. Some faithful brethren even during the war period gave to many appeals Others, however, did not feel quite equal to anything outside of their local needs. But surely the time has come for all of us to consider calls for help even from distant fields. The need that lies most deeply upon my heart is the call from the Kamitomizaka Church, Tokyo, Japan. Those worthy workers need our help. They want to make their efforts count more for Christ. They desire to enlarge and to make more permanent the cause of their Master and ours. They do not ask us to do all of it, for they are "laying by in store" as the Lord prospers them. They cannot do as much as we, for the simple reason that they are unable. Their heart is right. We can and ought to help them gladly. I am hopeful of larger results in that part of the work over there. It has been a success-yes, more, it is a success and is growing all the time. Already this year Brother Hiratsuka, our faithful and untiring evangelist. has baptized twenty-three persons. Others are about ready to confess their faith and obey the Lord. These additions are not "by letter," but by obedience, which means teaching and effort. Those who have been supporting this mission have good reason to rejoice over the souls saved. More good could be done if more brethren would have a part in it. Their immediate need, in addition to the regular support, is a lot. The present dilapidated house stands on rented land. This was the best that could be done years ago when the work was first started. The landlord has raised the land rent several times and is likely to raise it several times more before long, or he may take a notion and order us off the lot. In addition to this, the present house is in very bad shape and cannot hold together much longer. So the only way to meet the need is to buy a lot and rebuild. I understand from Brother W. W. Freeman, of Abilene, Texas, who is handling funds for this work, that we are not far from the required amountthat is, for the building site. That is good news. Why not take care of the rest at once? Other calls are before the brethren, but this is just as worthy as any of them. We can by concerted and consecrated action respond to all of them.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and else-where, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national head-quarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine com-fort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution, Redding.

Clementine Josephine Redding was born on January 12, 1842, and departed this life on June 5, 1919. She was married to J. T. Redding on March 3, 1870, and to this union five children were born-three girls and two boys. Two of the girls and one boy preceded her to the grave—Sister Lizzie Mor-row, Sister Mary Murphy, and Brother James Newton Redding. They were faithful Christians and died in the hope of eternal life in the mansions prepared for the redeemed ones. Sister Redding loved the Bible and read it much, and she was well informed in the holy Scriptures. She was a fine student in school in her early life. Her last schooling was at Minerva College, where she proved herself of the finest type of womanhood. She rendered obedience to the Lord in her girlhood days and kept the faith to the end of the Journey. She was loved and honored as one of the best women in the community in which she lived. I was very well acquainted with her life, and I believe she was one of the best women I ever knew. Besides her husband, she leaves one son, one daughter, and many friends to mourn over her departure. Her life has been a benediction to those with whom she came in contact. May the rich bless-ings of Heaven be upon each member of the family who remains upon the F. C. SOWELL. earth

Floyd.

Susan Motlow Floyd was born, near Lynchburg, Tenn., on July 8, 1840. She was married to John D. Floyd on December 28, 1865, and obeyed the gospel in September, 1867. She was a charter member of the congregation at Flat Creek, Tenn., and during all these years she was faithful and regular in her service to God. Brother and Sister Floyd lived on a farm, struggling against the trials and difficulties that belong to the farm life; and in his absence, as was often the case, during his long and arduous ministry, she met the responsibilities of the preacher's wife, and by her good judgment, economy, and faithfulness, she proved a helpmeet indeed to her husband. She was truly a "keeper at home." For more than a half century they lived each for the other and both for God. On June 28, 1919, she passed through the valley of the shadow of death, trusting the promises of God for happiness, and thus entered the rest for the people of God till Jesus comes, leaving her faithful and aged comes, leaving her faithful and aged companion to tread the wine press. companion to tread the wine press alone—and yet not alone, for he walks with God. She was the mother of three daughters, two of whom pre-ceded her in death. The other is a Christian woman, and will care for and serve her father as only a loving daughter can. May God help them all. T. C. Latter.

Westbrook.

Frances Ann Allen was born on April 10, 1850, in Ohio County, Ky. She was married to John C. West-brook on June 25, 1871. To this union were born twelve children, three of whom preceded her to the paradise of God. She became a Christian early in life and continued in the faith until God called her home on May 11, 1919. She lived a life of service and devotion to her husband and children. The hungry were never turned away from her door. Her home was always the home of the preachers who preached at Price's Chapel, near Bowling Green, Ky., where she lived for many years preceding her death. All her children became Christians. Two of her daughters married preachers-W. A. Cameron, of Largo, Fla., and the writer. Mother was always glad to see us. It was sad to us all to give her up, but God In his wisdom knew best, and we gladly say: "Lord, not our will, but thine, be done." The funeral service was conducted by Brother W. A. Warren, after which the body was laid to rest in the famthe body was laid to rest in the imm-ly lot at Barren River. We are lone-ly without our dear wife and mother here, but with new zeal and courage we will try to meet her in the eternal city of God. Laneaster.

Com June 12, 1919, Brother Henry Lancaster, of Tishomingo, Miss, passed from this life to be present with the Lord. Of all the men of my acquaintance, I have never known one who enjoyed the full confidence of all his neighbors more than he. Even those who did not agree with him in religious matters speak of him in the highest terms of praise, and say: "If Henry Lancaster fails to reach heaven, the rest of us had as well quit trying." In early life he became a member of the Methodist Church, and was a devout worker in that religious body for thirteen or fourteen years, often leading in their meetings, till about twenty-four years ago, havtill about twenty-four years ago, hav-ing learned "the way of the Lord more perfectly," he laid aside all hu-man names and creeds and became a Christian only, being baptized by W. C. Lancaster, his brother, a gospel preacher, of Texas. Brother Lancaster was sick only a short while. He took very ill while at work on his farm on Tuesday morning at ten o'clock, was operated on Wednesday morning about two o'clock, and died on Thursday afternoon about two o'clock. He leaves four childrentwo sons and two daughters—to mourn their loss. The congregation at Tishomingo has lost one of its best and most faithful members. On the last Lord's day before his death he led the worship, and exhorted the brethren to be loyal to God and to duty and not allow themselves to be enticed away on Lord's days to attend all-day singings, children's-day exercises, or to any other place where they would not be permitted to worship God in his own appointed way. Brother R. L. Shook, of Belmont, Miss., and the writer conducted the funeral services in the presence of a large congregation of sorrowing friends and loved ones. a large congrega-friends and loved ones. J. T. Ford

On Wednesday, April 2, 1919, at 11 P.M., the beautiful life of Sister Nellie Ford completed its mission on earth and her spirit returned to God who gave it. She was the youngest child and only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Wirt, and was born at Cedar Mills, Minn., on September 25, 1876. She came to Cookeville, Tenn., with her parents when she was eleven years of age, where she has since resided. She married James Ford on December 25, 1896. She leaves an invalid mother, a husband, two children (Gladys and Charles), and three brothers. The funeral services were conducted by Brother W. L. Karnes, of Portland, Tenn, at the church of Christ, in the presence of many friends and sorrowing relatives. ing relatives. Her body was tenderly laid to rest in the city cemetery, there to await Christ's coming. She obeyed the gospel in early girlhood, and, like Paul, could have said: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteous-ness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day." She was a faithful Sunday-school worker, and she will be sadly missed by her fellow workers in the church at this place. Her life was the environment of all that makes a character lovable, A more patient, gentle, modest woman we have never known. She was a loyal wife, a loving mother, and a devoted daughter. She will be remem-bered with love by her friends for her knowledge of the Scriptures and her loyalty to the word of God, never deviating from "Thus saith the Lord" in any matter of worship or service. She contended earnestly for that faith "once for all delivered unto the saints," seeming to ever remember that whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." We should not sorrow as others that have no hope; "for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep In Jesus will God bring with him. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things God hath prepared for them that love him."

To the Discharged Soldier.

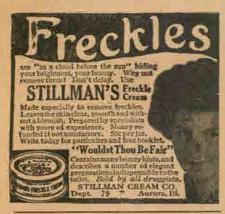

Are you discharged? From what service? From the service of your country? God forbid! From the service of democracy? Never! From the service of righteousness? I hope not. From the service of God? No, no! You have not been discharged, you have been transferred from one branch of the service to another, that is all.

You have been brought from one fighting front to another fighting front, and the battle still rages. The church of the living God goes forth with its battle hymn, "Thy kingdom come, O Lord," following one standard-not the red flag of Bolshevism, not the flag of piracy, not the white flag of the pacifist, but the banner of the cross of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Savior and Redeemer of the race.-George Craig Stewart.

Renwar Relieves Rheumatism.

Renwar Relieves Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Saits. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve, or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious druga. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the elightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 50-cent bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment; and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, feer them to me." A Meeting and a Debate.

BY MRS. MAUTI WALLACE,

Brother R. C. Ledbetter, of Oran, Texas, began a meeting at Aplin, Ark., on Saturday night, August 9, and closed it on Sunday, August 24. Eleven persons were baptized and one was restored. This meeting had been announced since last September.

One week before our meeting started, the Seventh-Day Adventists started a meeting, and during the first week of our meeting the Adventist, preacher challenged our people for a debate. The services of Brother H. D. Jackson, of Waneland, Ark., were secured, and on Monday morning, August 18, the debate began under the Adventists' tent, and closed on Friday afternoon, August 22.

The following propositions were discussed: (1) "The Scriptures teach that the kingdom of Jesus Christ was established on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ from the dead." (2) "The Scriptures teach that the kingdom of God spoken of in-Dan 2: 24-45 will be established at the second coming of Christ." (3) "The Scriptures teach that the Ten-Commandments law (Ex. 20: 2-17), including the Sabbath commandment, should be observed by God's people." (4) "The Scriptures teach that the first day of the week is the 'Lord's day and should be observed by all God's people." H. D. Jackson affirmed the first and fourth propositions; N. R. Hickman affirmed the second and third propositions.

Brother Ledbetter served as moderator for Brother Jackson, and Elder Twig served as moderator for Elder Hickman. The best of feeling prevailed during the entire time between debaters and moderators, and all shook hands at the close of the discussion. In his challenge Elder Hickman proposed to discuss the eternalpunishment proposition; but after talking with Brother Jackson a few minutes, Elder Hickman declined his own proposition. This was the first Seventh-Day Adventist that Brother Jackson had ever met in debate, but he met every argument that Elder Hickman made during the debate. Before the debate started, Elder Hickman wanted three days to affirm the Sabbath proposition, but it was agreed to use only one and one half days. When the time was up, Brother Jackson offered Elder Hickman ten dollars to continue his affirmative one-half day longer, but Elder Hickman declined thus to do. Elder Hickman admitted to Brother Jackson that the old law had been done away with, except the Ten Commandments (that which was written on tables of stone), and Brother Jackson read the third chapter of Second Corinthians, showing that that was done away also. Brother Jackson proposed to give filder Hickman a deed to his home if he would show where any one, either Jew or Gentile, was ever commanded to keep the Sabbath day after the death of Christ. Of course, Elder Hickman could find no such commandment since the death of Christ.

So far as I know, the members of the church of Christ are well pleased with Brother Jackson's defense of the truth.

Notes from Alabama.

BY C. E. HOLT.

The special numbers of the Gospel Advocate are very line. The last, on a more efficient ministry, should be read and studied by every one interested in the extension of Christ's kingdom on earth. In a sense the church in any locality is no stronger than the public representatives of the church, the preachers, or the men who compose the ministry. An educated ministry is needed for the most effectual work, but there is great danger even here, Men who have been put through the theological mills of human construction and who have come to view the Bible through human lenses are, as a rule, partisan and "lopsided" in their teaching. Men of great literary attainments are powerful factors, provided they are properly balanced in regard to New Testament Christianity. About all the hurtful innovations which disturb and hinder the progress of pure New Testament Christianity to-day were conceived and brought forth by men who were educated in the "leading" colleges and universities of the country.

My meetings during the present year have been well attended and a number have obeyed the gospel. Within the past three months I have baptized a number of persons of middle Hre and some considerably beyond middle life. I am now (September 8) in a fine meeting at old Stony Point, seven miles north of Florence. This is a short distance from Mars' Hill. where Brother T. B. Larimore taught for seventeen years. Many young men attended that great school, and many of them became great preachers of the old Jerusalem gospel. Many of them will remember Stony Point.

Brother Gillentine's article in the last issue of the Advocate is good, especially his advice to the brethren regarding the second coming of Christ and the kingdom question, which have received a large amount of attention from a certain school of brethren during the last few years. Brethren, preach the gospel and let the Lord's part of the business alone. He certainly knows how to take care of his own affairs. Let us attend to our part, and everything will turn out all right in regard to the future reign of Christ, whether it be in heaven or on earth.

I want to say one more thing about Brother T. B. Larimore and Mars' Hill. Not one hurtful innovation ever went out from that school. The Bible, and the Bible alone, was held up and reverenced and taught and followed in all things pertaining to salvation. If all had followed the spirit and policy of Brother Larimore, the church would be perfectly united to-day. The greatest and the best thing about his teaching is, he stays with the Book.

Statement from Brethren at Muskogee, Okla.

To Whom it May Concern: At various times appeals have been made through the different papers for funds with which to build a house of worship at this place. A goodly number have responded to these appeals; but we still need assistance, and thought it only fair to give a synopsis of the work here in order that all may thoroughly understand the situation.

Our first meeting was held at the home of W. E. Eckenrode on August 8, 1915, with only his family and C. Maynard and family present. We later located Brother C. L. Hanan and family and Sister H. B. Clement, and we have continued to work for the upbuilding of the cause of Christ here. There is work enough and room for at least four good, live congregations in this city. We are now meeting in Moose Hall, 3181/2 West Okmulgee Avenue. J. G. Allen and W. E. Eckenrode have been appointed elders; W. R. Hatcher and C. Maynard, deacons; and we desire to give the following references:

J. G. Allen came here highly recommended, being well and favorably known in Nashville, Tenn., as well as in other parts of the State, also in Georgia and Kentucky, and is known by the publishers of the Gospel Advocate and part of the editorial staff of the Christian Leader.

W. E. Eckenrode is well and favorably known in Fort Recovery, Ohio; Spokane and Wenatchie, Wash.; and by numerous ministers, among his acquaintances being B. F. Martin, formerly of Winfield, Kan.; D. Sommer, of the Review office; W. G. Roberts; and Orchard B. Hayes.

C. Maynard and W. R. Hatcher brought the necessary letters of recommendation from their home congregations—namely, Old Pearl, Ill., and Glasgow, Ky.

We invite further investigation by any who desire to inquire further as to our standing, both at this place and the places of our former residence.

All funds so far received are in the hands of three trustees, duly appointed, and will be used for no other purpose than building. Any further assistance from the brotherhood will be greatly appreciated and will be acknowledged through the various papers. Kindiy send to J. G. Allen, 1412 Baltimore Street, or to C. Maynard, 635 Park Avenue.

[Signed] J. G. Allen, William E. Eckenrode, elders; C. Maynard, W. R. Hatcher, deacons.

FIELD REPORTS

Alabama.

Tuscumbia, September 15.—On September 14 I closed a very interesting meeting at Brush Creek, Tenn. The crowds were larger than they had been in years. Some prejudice was removed. The people there are noble and very kind to the preacher, I have promised to go back next year. There were no additions, but much good was done for the church and in seed sowing.—H. M. Phillips.

Georgia.

Atlanta, September 11.—1 closed a very interesting meeting last Wednesday evening at Wilson's Mill, out from Kingston, with five baptized into Christ and much interest manifested by several who did not obey the gospel. Wilson's Mill is practically a mission point, since the faithful are few there. Brother Bearden, of Atlanta, visits these disciples once each month. He has been doing this for several years, and has done a good work there. Next Lord's day, the Lord willing, I shall take up local work here in Atlanta with the West End congregation, for three months, while Brother S. H. Hall is away in meetings. There is much work to do here in Atlanta, brethren, and everywhere; so let us be "steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." Let us remember the words of Jesus: "He that abiddeth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much truit."—Silas E. Templeton.

South Carolina.

Charleston, September 12.—I am now in this city in a tent meeting. We began on Tuesday night, with only a few present. Crowds are increasing with each service. We have only one loyal brother here. He gave up "digressivism" about three years ago and has been meeting with Brother and Sister Cayce, who recently moved back to Nashville, Tenn. This is a hard place to get the work started. I have never seen a place like it. Our work in Union and pear Woodruff moves along nicely. Two preachers have offered their services in this State. Now, brethren, shall we withhold the necessary support from these men and still neglect the work in this State, where the gospel in its purity is yet unknown? God forbid. How shall those who have heard and obeyed withhold from this great work their money with which God has so richly blessed them? We are God's stewards. How is your record going to be when you are called to give an account of your stewardship? Is there one congregation that will support a man in this State? Hundreds are able. What do you say, brethren? Write me immediately what your congregation will do in supporting a man for twelve months. My address is Union, S. C.—Thomas H, Burton.

Tennessee.

Memphis, September 11—I closed a short meeting last night with the Olive Avenue congregation. The interest increased with each service. Seven members confessed their faults. Brother Paisley will hold the regular meeting for this congregation under a large tent some weeks later. He is a aplendid preacher and is meeting with success in the work here. I am leaving to-night for Fort Smith, Ark., where I am to begin a meeting to-morrow night, to continue for ten days or two weeks.—J. A. Cullum.

Texas.

Grand Saline, September 6.- I held a meeting at Coble, Tenn., beginning on July 20 and closing on August 1, on July 20 and closing on Hugary, preaching twice a day. There were three additions. This is a good congregation of over a hundred members. This was my fourth meeting with them. I began a meeting at Beardstown, Perry County, Tenn., on August 3 and continued it till August This meeting was hindered some by the death of our dear brother, J. T. Edwards. He had planned much for the success of this meeting, and purposed to have me hold memorial services for his daughter, Mrs. Mabel Blackwell, who died last spring of the influenza. But such is life. Brother Edwards died on August 2, and I conducted funeral services over his remains and in memory of his daughter. They were both kind, gentle, and true. This meeting was a good one. The congregation is small, but active and wide awake. There was one addition, I held an eleven-days' meeting at Hohenwald, Tenn., beginning on August 17. This was a fine meeting, with large crowds day and night. There were six additions. Hohenwald is the county seat of Lewis County. The congregation numbers about two hundred niembers, and they are at work in earnest. They will have Brother Will Morton to hold another meeting in October; besides, they are assisting Brother Speer, who lives with them. In some mission meetings. I landed here in Grand Saline on August 30, In time to eat breakfast with my son, Willis, who lives here, and who, from all reports, is highly esteemed and very busy preaching, with good results. I began a meeting at good results.

SPECIAL "PRAYER" NUMBER

Gospel Advocate

Volume LXI.

NASHVILLE, TENN., SEPTEMBER 25, 1919.

Number 39.

THE MAGNITUDE OF PRAYER

RAY the largest prayers. You cannot think a prayer so large that God, in answering it, will not wish you had made it larger. Pray not for crutches, but for wings! O do not pray just that God will keep you from breaking down and, somehow, anyhow, help you to stagger and stumble through. Pray for his life and light to come and fill you, that you may live like him; that you may tread temptation underfoot, and walk across it into holiness; that you may be enthusiastically good; that you may shine forth with his life in other lives; that, whatever comes—and he alone knows what is to come—whatever comes of trial, doubt, perplexity, failure, as well as of success and faith, and hope and joy, it may all work together to make your soul fit, first to receive, and then to shine forth with the light of God.

THE MIRACLE OF MAN

DO not pray for easy lives. Pray to be stronger men. Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for powers equal to your tasks. Then the doing of your work shall be no miracle. But you shall be a miracle. Every day you shall wonder at yourself, at the richness of life which has come to you by the grace of God.—Phillips Brooks.

Conditions of Acceptable Prayer

F. W. Smith Outlines Effectual Elements.

"Confess therefore your sins one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its workings." (James 5: 16.) Attention is directed to a few brief suggestions based upon the latter part of this passage-viz., "the supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working." There is a vast difference between uttering a combination of words called "prayer" and an effectual prayer. The one may be embellished with the finest rhetoric, wellchosen and sublimely eloquent words, and yet fail to reach God or to have a beneficial reflex influence upon the one praying; the other may be noted for its poverty of language, its bad grammar and lack of book learning in general, and yet it will move God to bless, and its reflex influence is uplifting to the petitioner. Effectual prayer must embody certain elements, and it shall be my purpose to state these without trying to elaborate any one of them 'to any great extent.

MUST BE OFFERED IN FAITH.

Every approach to God must be an expression of faith, no matter what the act may be. Prayer is no exception to this divinely given rule. The following scriptures bring this fact out in all clearness and force: Heb. 11: 6; 1 Tim. 2: 8; James 1: 5-7; Matt. 21: 22; Rom. 14: 23. In the light of these passages, one can but wonder at preachers and religious teachers telling sinners to pray to God for faith, when the prayer itself must be offered in faith.

CONSTANCY IN PRAYER.

Spasmodic efforts at prayer will not conduce to effectual prayer, for the soul will grow cold and be lacking in the fervor necessary to give prayer wings to reach God's throne. Hence, the apostle urges Christians to pray without ceasing. (1 Thess. 5: 17.) It is dangerous to become careless in the matter of our devotions. James (4: 7) tells us to resist the devil and he will flee from us, and there is no better or more effectual way to do this than in earnest prayer. Satan is afraid of a saint on his or her knees wrestling with God.

PERSISTENCY IN PRAYER.

No doubt God sometimes withholds needed blessings for a time in order to test our faith and earnestness. Jacob wrestled all night with the angel, refusing to let him go until the angel blessed him. The lesson of persistence is urged by the Master in Luke 11; 5-8. We must not grow weary nor conclude that God does not want to grant our requests because not immediately bestowed. Our Savior asked the Father for the same thing three times in succession. (Matt. 26: 32.) The old prophet asked for rain seven times in succession before the heavens began to weep. (1 Kings 18: 43.)

IN CHRIST'S NAME.

Jesus Christ is the only mediator between God and man (1 Tim. 2: 5), and no approach can be made toward the mercy seat except in the name of Christ. Every prayer, to be acceptable to God, must be offered in the name of Christ. (John 14: 13.) Christ stands between God and man, and he has declared that no man can come to God but by him. (John 14: 6.) Hence, to offer a prayer to God without the name of Christ cannot be an effectual prayer.

IN HARMONY WITH GOD'S WILL,

All prayers to God must be offered in harmony with his will. (1 John 5: 14; James 4: 3.) These passages show most conclusively that our prayers must not conflict with God's will; and since all we can know of his will is recorded in the Bible, it behooves us to study his will dilligently in order that we may know how to form our prayers so that they may be effectual. It is true that everything for which we may pray is not specified in the Bible, yet there are examples of prayer and principles given to guide us in learning God's will on this subject.

IN SUBMISSION TO GOD'S WILL.

Unless one is willing to be denied anything, no matter how much it may be desired, such a prayer cannot be pleasing to God and is far from being an effectual prayer. Our blessed Savior prayed three times for a thing, but each time he said: "Not my will, but thine, be done." (Luke 22: 42:) We may pray for the lives of our loved ones to be spared, but we must be willing for them to die if it be God's will. God's will must prevail, and it must be our heart's supremest desire for it to prevail. In every prayer there must be the element and deep feeling of submission to God's will. It must always be with us: "Father, not my will, but thine, be done."

C. E. Wooldridge Gives "Boiled Down" Requisites.

First—Acceptable prayer must be supported by the desire of the heart. (Rom, 10: 1.)

Second-It must be in faith. (Matt. 21: 21, 22.)

Third—It must be in a forgiving and unselfish spirit. (Mark 11: 25; James 4: 3.)

Fourth—It must be with the spirit or heart and understandingly. (Ps. 119; 58; 1 Cor. 14; 15.)

Fifth—It must be according to his will. (1 John 4: 15.) Sixth—It must be constant and importunate. (Rom. 12: 12; Luke 11: 18.)

Seventh—It must be in Jesus' name. (John 16: 23, 24.) The following contrasted passages will assist us in studying the helps and hindrances to "acceptable prayer:"

- (1) Helps. (Rom. 8: 26, 27.) (2) Hindrances. (1 Pet. 3: 7.)
- (1) Set your heart right. (Job 11; 13.) (2) Regard iniquity in your heart. (Ps. 66; 18.)
- (1) God hears not sinners. (John 9: 31.) (2) The prayer of the righteous man availeth. (James 5: 16.)
- (1) Ask in faith. (Mark 11: 24.) (2) Double-minded. (James 1: 5-7.)
- (1) Do his commandments. (1 John 3: 22.) (2) Turn away ear from hearing the law. (Prov. 28: 9.)
- (1) In secret. (Matt. 6: 6.) (2) To be seen of men. (Matt. 6: 5.)
- (1) Ask according to God's will. (1 John 5: 14, 15.)(2) Ask amiss and selfishly. (James 4: 3.)
- (1) If we forgive men. (Mark 11: 25.) (2) If we forgive not men. (Matt. 6: 15.)

W. H. Carter Tells When and Why and How.

When to pray, how to pray, and what to pray for, are questions worthy of careful consideration. David prayed morning, noon, and night. David prayed often. In fact, the closer people lived to God, the oftener they seemed to see and feel the necessity of prayer. When they saw the greatness and wisdom, love and mercy of God, felt and realized their own weakness and dependence, and knew the promises God had made to them and believed him to be faithful and true, how natural for them to pray!

When to pray. "Pray without ceasing." "Be instant in prayer." "Watch ye therefore, and pray always." When trials, distress, sickness, sorrow, danger, or persecution comes, and we feel our own weakness and great need of help, then the most of us pray. We ask the God whom we have treated with irreverence and failed to acknowledge, honor, and serve in our days of peace and prosperity, to assist and bless and protect us when reverses come. Every day should be a day of prayer. No day should pass in which we have not humbled ourselves and lifted up our voices and hearts in prayer, praise, and thanksgiving to our God.

How to pray. Jesus taught his disciples a simple, yet wonderful, form of prayer when he told them to say: "Our Father which art in heaven." What a privilege to be a child of God and to address him as "Our Father!" This should lead us to reverence and adore him, and to strive daily to do those things that are pleasing to him and avoid all things in which he can take no pleasure. We should pray in faith, nothing doubting. We should pray for the things we are assured that we have need of, We should pray for each other and for all men; pray for our rulers, that we may live in peace, quietness, godliness, and honesty. We should pray for forgiveness; but remember that, if we would be forgiven, we must forgive those who trespass against us. We should pray for our daily bread. That means daily praying, and recognizes God as the Giver of all that is good. We should pray to be delivered from temptation and evil, and not forget that we are to "abstain from all appearance of evil." We should pray for our preachers, that they may open their mouths boldly and speak as they ought to speak, a thing that some in these perilous times are not doing; that they may study the word, stand approved, rightly divide the word, and not discuss world heroes, repeat poetry, and make lofty rhetorical flights. We should pray for our enemies. We may not have personal enemies; but whosoever is an enemy to God is an enemy to God's children, and we are told that those who are friends of the world are enemies of God.

Who shall pray. To understand the Scripture teaching on the subject of prayer would remove much confusion and lead to obedience and salvation. God instructs his children to pray. Jesus said to his disciples: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." None but the children of God can truthfully say, "Our Father which art in heaven." I know of no instruction given to those who are not God's children as to how to pray, nor to pray at all, as to that. God has a law by which we are born into his family and become his children. "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination." (Prov. 28: 9.) "Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshiper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth." (John 9: 31.) "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." (James 5: 16.) To teach an alien to pray for pardon and expect it without obedience to the "law of faith" is to teach him to turn his ear against the law-away from the law. There is no promise to hear and answer such prayer. We must pray according to his will. Christians may pray, and will be heard if they pray as he directs.

But do we pray? Do we from the depth of our hearts give thanks to God for the blessings we enjoy, or do we, like hogs, gobble them up and squeal for more? O that we could see and feel the necessity of more earnest praying and the great good that would result therefrom! Much of our praying should be to ask our Father to open up ways for us to do good and use us in carrying out his work, and then look for the open doors, enter them, and let God use us for the good of others. Father, may it be even so with all who claim to be thine.

John T. Lewis Tells Precisely What God Sald.

Brother Lipscomb has asked me to write "concisely" on the above subject; and I am sure that if I write at all on the subject, it should not only be "concisely," but precisely what God has said on the subject.

It is only through prayer that we may "draw near with boldness unto the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and may find grace to help us in time of need." (Heb. 4: 16.)

But what are the conditions of acceptable prayer? "Then said he unto me, Fear not, Daniel; for from the first day that thou didst set thy heart to understand, and to humble thyself before thy God, thy words were heard: and I am come for thy words' sake." (Dan. 10: 12.) We understand from this that the first condition of acceptable prayer is to set our hearts to understand and to humble ourselves before God.

Again, since the glorification of Christ, man has access to the throne of grace and mercy only in and through his name. "And in that day ye shall ask me no question. Verily, verily, I say unto you, If ye shall ask anything of the Father, he will give it you in my name. Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." (John 16: 23, 24.)

Another cardinal principle of prayer is that all our petitions must be the desire of our hearts, and always circumscribed by "nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done." "And he was parted from them about a stone's cast; and he kneeled down and prayed, saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done." (Luke 22: 41, 42.)

Again, John says: "And whatsoever we ask we receive of him, because we keep his commandments and do the things that are pleasing in his sight," (1 John 3: 22.) Hence, it is only when we set our hearts to understand, humbling ourselves before God, asking in the name of Christ and according to God's will, while we are keeping his commandments and doing the things that are pleasing in his sight, that we may have the same confidence in prayer that the apostle John had. "And this is the boldness which we have toward him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us: and if we know that he heareth us whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions which we have asked of him." (1 John 5: 14, 15.) Surely with these conditions we can "ask in faith, nothing doubting."

I will now state briefly the conditions of nonacceptable prayer. "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer is an abomination." (Prov. 28: 9.)

Shall our prayers be heard, or shall they be an abomination? It is for us to determine.

Apostolic Christianity.

BY D. P. CRAIG.

"They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine." (Acts 2: 42.) An intimate acquaintance with the history of the early New Testament church and its teachings is very important to all modern Christians. Luke gives us a clear exhibition of it as it existed during the earthly labors of the apostles. He shows us how the early church, the first church, was set in order and how the early disciples proceeded in every item of work and worship. It should be our great object in holding forth the word of life and the church of Christ to present it to the world as it appears upon the sacred pages. It is very necessary and of vital importance for us in this so-called "age of culture and progression" to ascertain what the church of Christ is and upon what principles and manner the primitive Christians felt themselves bound to be governed and what was essential for them to observe. We learn that the first congregations of this divine institution were set in order and guided by the inspired apostles themselves, who spoke and taught diligently the things of the Lord "as the Spirit gave them utterance." If there ever existed a church of Christ in origin, faith, and practice according to the divine pattern, it must have been at this time; and surely as we ponder the gospel narratives we have every reason to believe that then there was a pure, scriptural, and well-disciplined church. It is just as necessary that the present church measure in accordance with the divine standard as then, and the duty for present Christians to contend for New Testament precept and example is just as imperative. That divine scheme and economy of redemption is adapted to all men in all ages and conditions and under every circumstance. To meet God's approval, it must be organized upon the same principles and be governed by the same precepts which set in order and constituted the Pentecost or Jerusalem church. In God's word alone we find the plan and order by which his true followers are to be guided.

The world has gone mad over innovations and human schemes. To establish a true apostolic church during the present order of things is no easy task, for the majority of popular Christians have digressed far from the divine standard. Human systems are filled with speculations and inconsistencies. Our task to reform the sects and parties and to set in order among them the true temple of the Lord as exhibited in divine testimony has not yet been accomplished. We have much need to stir ourselves and realize as never before what is required of us. In many communities over our sunny Southland we have made many inroads upon them; while among many, many others the glorious and marvelous light has not yet shined. We can recall places where once strong, vigorous, influential New Testament churches flourished and sounded forth the word of life to many benighted regions around them, where now not a trace or vestige of Bible doctrine can be found. This is deplorable indeed. Our present advoeates (not all, indeed), I fear, are gradually losing the old-time apostolic zeal. Advocates of New Testament doctrine should never lose sight of the fact that the majority of this present world is yet given to superstition, sectarianism, Catholicism, and many other isms condemned by the word of God. I give it as my honest opinion that not in the history of ages has religion reached such a low ebb. Delusions and the figments of the human brain seem to abound more and more. The words of the apostles on this subject ring most certain and true. When men abandon the word of God and repose in human traditions, this is the legitimate result and what might be expected. Mr. Campbell uttered a profound truth when he said: "The present popular religious systems are a compound of paganism, Judaism, and Christianity. Human nature is the same and sectarianism about the same as when Mr. Campbell lived and boldly attacked the fortifications of sectism.

But a greater than Campbell has said: "The word of God is made of no effect through your traditions." This witness is true. The present popular, sectarianized religious systems are rotten to the core. It is utterly vain and abortive to seek a New Testament church in order, faith, and practice among any human society under the sun: because their worship and order is mockery, worse than mockery, who have trodden underfoot the Son of God and treated with presumption and human legislation that new institution and covenant sealed with his own precious blood. To spurn God's holy institution is a matter of little consequence to these covetous sectarian divines. They are a set of driveling worldly sages who parade their churches with their pet theories and incongruous interpretations in order to receive the praise of men and always be held foremost in the esteem of popular applause. "Verily I say unto you, They have their reward." Notice what great advocates of benevolence and denouncers of sin they are, as if God and his word have not already denounced sin. Yes, and they talk much about a heartfelt religion and a spiritual life. How can it be so with them while they reject God's counsel and march on in their headlong rush in promulgating the tenets of Rome, paganism, and the supercilious dogmas of human reason, or, rather, human folly? Many of the giant opposers of the truth were mere dwarfs in the corruption of the church and the perversion of its doctrines in comparison with these holy, pious, cultured "pastors" and mystic "doctors." have so paganized, corrupted, philosophized, and sectarianized the church and its gospel until the apostles' doctrines is scarcely discernible. It is filled with human contradictions and denies all scriptural warrant for religious work and worship. But in what kind of esteem is the person held who dares to question their so-called sacred, perpetuated tenets and traditions? He is styled a mover of sedition; a heretic; a one-sided, illiberal person.

Shall all the combined opposition of the hosts of sects and their set of leaders stop us for contending for "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints?" Are we going to contend for a "Thus saith the Lord" in all that we teach or do? Brethren, we need to be continually awakened to our duty as real, true, and tried preachers of the old Jerusalem gospel. Let us teach the world to remove the Bible from the willful shelf of negligence, wipe the accumulated dust of ages from its fair and sacred pages, unfold its glorious light as it there shines unto the world, and soon these sects and parties will fade away as the morning mists before the rising sun. Nothing but the apostles' doctrines will ever accomplish this work. This divine document teaches us that the early Christians subscribed to no other formula of teaching as their rule of faith and practice. We have no right to subscribe to anything else. The Holy Spirit revealed the mold and pattern by which every subsequent church must be made conformable. If such is not being done by us, we fail to comply with the apostolic example. In God's holy and sacred word we are not taught the peculiar tenets of any sect or party. There we are not to subscribe to principles deduced from logical inferences; neither did the apostles bind them or command them to vow allegiance to ideas and opinions based upon some abstract or isolated scraps from the word of God. In accordance with the truth alone they moved. It was the only legitimate source of all authority and a standard by which all things were to be tested. How necessary it is for every gospel preacher to continue in the apostles' doctrine only and teach it, the incorruptible seed, the living and effectual word as it is revealed through the living oracles? The world sorely needs the ancient order of things. I repudiate with all my heart all man-made doctrines, no matter under what benevolent auspices they move. If it is not according to the divine word and built upon the one foundation, God shall root it up.

Query Department

A querist wants to know the meaning of the following scripture: "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more a sacrifice for sins." (Heb. 10: 26.) Also, Heb. 6: 1-6: "Wherefore leaving the doctrine of the first principles of Christ, let us press on unto perfection; not laying again a foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the teaching of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment. And this will we do, if God permit. For as touching those who were once enlightened and tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Spirit, and tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the age to come, and then fell away, it is impossible to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." And still another scripture found in 1 Cor. 11: 30-32: "For this cause many among you are weak and sickly, and not a few sleep. But if we discerned ourselves, we should not be judged. But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we may not be condemned with the world." The exact thought of the querist is to know if God will forgive willful sin when one repents, confesses, and forsakes the sin. The querist quotes in support of the view that God will forgive sin, Prov. 28: 13: "He that covereth his transgressions shall not prosper; but whose confesseth and forsaketh them shall obtain mercy?"

In order to learn the meaning of these passages, one should not forget that the Hebrews were disposed to reject Christ, the last sacrifice for sin, and turn to the bloody sacrifices under the law of Moses. Paul warned them that if they turned away from and rejected Christ, there would be no other sacrifice for sin. Jewish sacrifices were abolished, as is plainly declared by the Holy Spirit in Col. 2: 14: "Having blotted out the bond written in ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us: and he hath taken it out of the way, nailing it to the cross." The man who turns away from Christ, the last sacrifice, can have no hope, as there will be no other sacrifice. He becomes a deliberate apostate, one who has utterly rejected Jesus Christ and his atonement and renounced the whole gospel system. It has nothing do with backsliders as we ordinarily use the word. A person may be overtaken in a fault, or he may deliberately go into sin, and yet neither reject Christ nor renounce the gospel. The case of the man who does this is serious and dreary, but is not hopeless; but the man who deliberately turns away from and rejects Christ, the last sacrifice for him, there is no hope for him; no other sacrifice will be offered. I understand this to be the thought contained in both quotations from Hebrews.

Referring to the passage in First Corinthians, the preceding verse speaks of those who eat and drink unworthily as eating and drinking damnation to themselves, not discerning the Lord's body. Some hold the view that the following verse refers to improper observance of the Lord's Supper, stating that such observance made many weak and sickly Christians, and that by it some of them even died spiritually. I rather hold to the view that physical judgments had been sent, and some had sickened and others had died, as is evident from the following verse, which teaches that if we would sit in judgment on our own spiritual condition and would correct ourselves, we would avert the physical judgments of Jehovah. When we fail to do this, God judges and chastens us in order to lead us to repentance and reformation.

A sister who does not wish her name revealed has been asked just how any one repents when he becomes a member of the church of Christ. She also asks for information as to the meaning of Acts 2: 21; Matt. 5: 23, 24; and also wishes to know "what is the altar?"

Repentance is the same the world over. When any man repents, he has a change of will that results in a reformation of his life. We may define repentance to be a change of will produced by godly sorrow, which leads to a turning away from sin. The Ninevites repented, as we learn from Matt. 12: 41: "The men of Nineveh shall stand up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonah; and behold, a greater than Jonah is here." By turning to Jon. 3: 10, we learn that in repenting every man turned from his evil way. No man can do more than turn away from his sins. Men who are truly sorry for their sins will cease to commit them. The motive that leads one to repentance should be the goodness of God. The Holy Spirit declares through Paul: "Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and long-suffering, not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?" (Rom. 2: 4.)

Acts 2: 21 reads: "And it shall be, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved." Calling on the name of the Lord means far more than simple prayer. The man who scripturally calls on the Lord turns to him for salvation in his appointed way. It is not enough for him to say, "Lord, Lord," and do not the things which the Lord commands. He must hear and obey. (Matt. 7: 21.)

Matt. 5: 23, 24 reads: "If therefore thou art offering thy gift at the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way, first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift." During the patriarchal and Jewish ages God met his people at appointed altars. An altar is the place where God meets man. No one can approach God save through an altar. We do not have earthly altars as did the patriarchs and the Jews, which altar typified and pointed forward to Jesus Christ, who is our altar. (Heb. 13: 10-15.) Verse 15 says: "Through him then let us offer a sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of lips which make confession to his name." Thanksgiving and the praise of the lips and all service to God are called "sacrifices." Christians are commanded to present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is a reasonable service. Also, Christians as lively stones are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God through Jesus Christ. All the service we render is sacrifice and must be offered upon our altar, Jesus Christ. In this passage (Matt. 5: 23, 24) the gifts offered upon the altar under the Jewish law are referred to by Christ to impress that the sacred principle is now indorsed by him. It clearly means that you cannot make any acceptable offerings to God when you have sinned against and wronged your brother, until you correct that wrong in so far as you are able to do it. If you have slandered, insulted, or in any way wronged him, you must confess and undo the wrong to the full extent of your ability. You must ask his forgiveness and be reconcued to him. Whatever wrong you have done must be repented You must ask his forgiveness and be reconciled of and undone as far as possible before you can stand justified in the sight of God.

I know that God is the Father of us all, but I feel his paternity in my nature. Mine is hardly a sense of duty; it is a sense of sonship.—Selected.

What We May Take to the Lord in Prayer. BY C. NETTERVILLE.

If I can accomplish the impossible, I shall comply with Brother Lipscomb's request to treat this subject concisely. If failure is the result of my effort, his wastebasket stands with gaping jaws ready to swallow this manuscript. As brevity and clearness combined in a writer constitute a virtue of which I may plead innocence, I shall endeayor to elucidate this subject by quoting from the writings of inspired men to the fullest possible extent, and to confine myself to that process as far as it is practicable.

To treat this subject logically, it is necessary to first ascertain who may go to the Lord in prayer. Then, "to the law and to the testimony." "O thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come. . . . By terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, O God of our salvation; who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the sea." (Ps. 65: 2-5.) "I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting." (2 Tim. 2: 8.) "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth. He will fulfill the desire of them that fear him; he also will hear their cry, and will save them." (Ps. 145: 18, 19.) From these quotations we learn that every man has the privilege of going to the Lord in prayer.

The next thing to be ascertained is, what may be take to the Lord in prayer when he goes? We will let inspired penmen answer this question. "He will regard the prayer of the destitute, and not despise their prayer. This shall be written for the generation to come; and the people which shall be created shall praise the Lord. For he hath looked down from the height of his sanctuary: from heaven did the Lord behold the earth; to hear the groaning of the prisoner; to loose those that are appointed to death." (Ps. 102: 17-20.) "The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry. . . . The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles." (Ps. 34: 15-17.) "He heareth the cry of the afflicted." (Job 38: 28.) "Thou hast enlarged me when in distress." (Ps. 4: 1.) "In the day when I cried thou answeredst me, and strengthenedst me with strength in my soul," (Ps. 138: 3.) Jonah prayed unto the Lord his God [for deliverance] out of the fish's belly." (Jon. 2: 1.) "Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain: and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." (James 5: 17, 18.) "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. . . . If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?" (Matt. 7: 7-11.) "Therefore I say unto you, what things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." (Mark 11: 24.) This seems to me to be enough to convince any one that all men have the privilege of taking anything to the Lord in prayer. But I take it that more is implied in this caption than the simple privilege we may have; so we turn now to the more important phase of the subject and will endeavor to ascertain who may expect to be heard when he goes to the Lord in prayer.

"The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord: but the prayer of the upright is his delight," (Prov. 15: 8.) "We know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshiper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth." (John 9: 31.) "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son." (John 14: 13.) "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." (John 15: 7.) "The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry. . . . The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles." (Ps. 34: 15-17.) "If any man be a worshiper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth." (John 9: 31.) This is enough to show that the wicked are excluded from this expectation, but that the righteous man who worships God and does his whole will may feel assured of being heard and may indulge a hope of having his petitions granted. But as all God's blessings are conditional, we will now endeavor to learn upon what conditions he will hear and answer the prayer of the acceptable worshiper.

"When thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the Lord thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice: . . he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he sware unto them." (Deut. 4: 30, 31.) "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." (2 Chron. 7: 14.) "All things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." (Matt. 21: 22.) "Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." (John 16: 23.) "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God; . . . and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord." (James 1: 5-7.) "Whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight." (1 John 3: 22.) "This is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us; and If we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him." (1 John 5: 14, 15.)

From the above quotations we learn, to state it concisely, that he who expects to have his petitions answered from the throne of mercy must do the whole will of God. This could be tersely stated by slightly paraphrasing the words of Jesus himself when he said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." But what is it to do the will of God? Is it enough to obey those laws which induct one into the kingdom of God, wherein are all spiritual blessings? Yes, to receive only spiritual blessings, that is enough. if, after induction, one lives in strict conformity to the laws governing life in that kingdom. But the same God who made laws for the government of the spiritual kingdom made laws by which the animal kingdom, including man's physical being, is to be controlled; and while obedience to the former will secure to man all spiritual blessings, against which a violation of the latter does not militate, yet a strict observance of the latter is as necessary to secure temporal blessings as such obedience to the former is necessary to secure spiritual blessings. Then, to do the whole will of God, man must obey both sets of laws; and when he has done this, he may rest assured that all his petitions that do not contravene his will nor work to the injury of the petitioner will be granted by the Heavenly Father.

Those things that a man cannot amend in himself or in others, he ought to suffer patiently until God orders otherwise.—Thomas à Kempis.

Our life is one. There is a substantial identity between what we are and what we shall be.—T. T. Carter.

The Praying Church.

BY S. H. HALL.

By the expression, "the praying church," I do not mean simply a church that has two services on Lord's day-one in the forenoon for the regular worship and then an evening service-and, perhaps, a Wednesday-night prayer meeting that very few attend. I know no better way to present this subject than to say that by this expression we must mean, if we mean what we say, a church that praysevery member in it prays, without an exception. We may have but few such churches, but this is what we mean by "the praying church." When we use the expression, "the living God," we certainly mean a God who lives, not a God with some parts living and some parts dead. Just so, a church in which only a few of the members pray is not "the praying church," If we could convert every congregation of the church of Christ into a praying church, it would mean more to the cause of Christ than any other one thing that I can now call to mind.

I am quite sure that in many of our congregations not even the regular leaders are praying members, notwithstanding the fact that they lead the prayers when the church is assembled and preside at the Lord's table. I said "lead the prayers." Well, I fear it is a sad fact that in many cases the prayers are not led, for the simple reason there are no followers in the prayer. Very few really pray when a prayer is being offered by some leader in our churches. Of course, in "the praying church" every soul that is a Christian prays with the leader. But this leader is not a praying member, if all the praying he does is just that of a leader and he falls to live in the very spirit and atmosphere of prayer every day. I would make the following suggestions in reference to "the praying church:"

1. The praying church puts prayer in her every act. The members go to all the meetings of the church praying silently for God's blessings to attend the work and that his name be glorified; that his will, not man's, be done. And real praying is done after they assemble. The leader, being a praying member, knows how to talk to God about the very work that is before them, and will not have a stereotyped prayer that is never changed and in which he wanders to the ends of the earth and back again. The prayers will be specific-that is, you will be praying for the work that is before you, for what you are trying to accomplish; hence, there will a number of prayers, and not just one long-drawn-out prayer. And not only will this be true, but every member will pray with the leader, provided every member is a praying member, which must be, if the church is, indeed, a praying church. They will not only put prayer in their regular meetings, but in these meetings will remember those who want to attend, but are unable. The sick will be remembered and the widows and orphans not forgotten. If elders are to be appointed, they will go about it in prayer. If disorderly members have to be disciplined, much praying will be done.

2. Each member puts prayer in all he does. Here 't would be well to let Paul say: "But in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 4: 6, 7.) I think we are commanded to cast down "imaginations" and bring "every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ." (2 Cor. 10: 5.) Only the praying members can do this. It is a fine thing to let every thought and imagination be brought into captivity to the obedience of Christ. The praying member does this, and the congregation that is composed of such members does this in all her work. Paul also says: "Whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him." (Col. 3: 17.)

If these things we do, we are praying members, and help, therefore, to make praying churches. If these things we do, we will not be caught cheating and swindling our brother out of the things that justly are his. If these things we do, we will not forget that our Father "hath showed thee, O man, what is good," and that Jehovah doth "require of" us "to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with our God." (See Mic. 6: 8.) If these things we do, we will remember that "the end of the charge is love out of a pure heart and a good conscience and faith unfeigned." (1 Tim, 1: 5.) If we are praying members, we will kindly call a brother's attention to some sin he has committed that endangers his soul; and whenever our faults and sins are pointed out to us, we will love the one who does it, and never think of classing him as an enemy. If we were praying members, we would shudder at the idea of whitewashing our own sins and mistakes. or sitting still and seeing others' sins whitewashed instead of really gotten rid of by whole-hearted repentance and prayer. Praying members are those who are dead in earnest about wanting to go to heaven; hence, they want to take no risk and do not want others to take any risk. "Safety first" is their watchword. They dread the thought of their forgetting any wrong in their lives that Jehovah has not forgotten, and they know Jehovah cannot forget without true repentance, a full confession, and prayer. May the Lord give us more praying members, to the end that we may have, indeed, "the praying church." Praying members can relish the words of the Spirit: "Finally, be ye all like-minded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tender-hearted, humble-minded: not rendering evil for evil, or reviling for reviling; but contrariwise blessing." (1 Pet. 3: 8, 9.) The praying member knows that when one carries around "bitter jealousy and faction" in his heart his claim to be a Christian is a lie against the truth; that such is "earthly, sensual, devilish;" but that "the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without variance, without hypocrisy." (See James 3: 14-17.) Give us congregations composed of such members, and we will have "the praying church."

3. The praying church sounds out the word, and each member knows something about individual evangelismthat is, the necessity of each member being a soul winner, and that he dares not go about this work without prayer. "Continue steadfastly in prayer, watching therein with thanksgiving: withal praying for us also, that God may open unto us a door for the word, to speak the mystery of Christ, for which I also am in bonds; that I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak. Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time. Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with sait, that ye may know how ye ought to answer each one." (Col. 4: 2-6.) If a man had fallen over a precipice and were hanging by a mere twig near the top, I would go about the effort to rescue him with carefulness, lest an awkward move of mine break the twig and he be dashed down to destruction. Just so, if I believe the soul is lost and is worth what Christ gave to save it, I will do much praying and with the greatest carefulness approach the souls I try to save, lest some word be said that will spoil the whole thing, rendering my efforts absolutely vain. The Father guide us, is my prayer, to the end that our "speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt," that we may know how we "ought to answer each one."

Our whole peace in this life consisteth rather in humble endurance than in not feeling adversities. He that knows best how to suffer will best keep himself in peace. That man is conqueror of himself and lord of the world, the friend of Christ, and an heir of heaven.—Thomas à Kempis.

The Ten Virgins.

BY S. C. GARNER.

The parables of Jesus either teach a truth or impress some truth that has already been taught. The parable of the good Samaritan teaches what it is to be a neighbor; while the parable of the ten virgins (Matt. 25: 1-13) was spoken to impress the lesson which had already been spoken to the disciples in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew-that is, they should be ready when the Lord comes, as they can make no preparation after he has come. As no one knows either the day or the hour of his coming, all should be ready every day and every hour in each day. Dr. Gordon, of Boston, Mass., made a business trip to the West, and told his children to meet him at the train when he returned. "What day, papa?" asked the children. The Doctor replied that he did not know what day, but for them to meet him at the station when he returned. When he returned, his children were all at the depot ready to meet their father. He asked how it happened that they were there that day, seeing that they did not know what day he would return. They replied that they had been there every day ready to meet him since he went away. Just so the Christian should so live as to be ready every day for the coming of the Lord, for we know not the day when he will come. Also, we should live so as to be ready every hour in the day, as we do not know the hour of the day that Jesus will come.

The parable of the ten virgins was spoken for the purpose of impressing the above truths. This parable was taken from a Jewish marriage. The customs of marriages and the feasts which followed the marriages were something similar to what they are now. The wedding was announced and the guests invited long enough before the time for the wedding, so that the guests who were invited might get ready. At that time they did not have large lamps that would light the whole house; therefore each guest was required to furnish her own lamp. As their lamps were not large enough to retain oil to do throughout the feast, the guests were required to take a vessel with oil in it to replenish the oil in their lamps. The foolish virgins took no oil with them. They all slumbered and slept until the cry was made: "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." The foolish virgins slept until that cry was made, and not until then did they realize that they were not ready to go in to the marriage.

Many brethren will sleep spiritually (1 Cor. 11: 30) until death and the judgment shall awake them, and then, and not until then, will they realize that they are not ready to meet God. As the foolish virgins could get no assistance from the wise when the bridegroom had come, and could not get ready themselves after the bridegroom had come, therefore the door was shut and they were left out. Just so, my brother, if we are not ready to meet the Lord, and wait until death or until the Lord comes to make our preparation, it will then be too late. We can get no assistance then, and it will be too late for us to make our own preparation.

Another thought, brethren. We have opportunities every day to assist and encourage some one to lead a better life; and if during this life we do not point our children and our neighbors to the Lamb for sinners slain, we can do nothing for them in that day. We will have no oil to lend.

Again, dear reader, if you are not ready to meet the Lord when he comes, you can now get all the instruction and encouragement that you need from faithful Christians all around you; but they cannot assist you in that day.

We might note some of the reasons why so many will be unprepared to meet the Lord when he calls. It was their aim to be ready; but they procrastinated from day to day and did not do the simple duties and meet the humble obligations that they owed to themselves, to their fellow man, and to God, until at a time that they thought not the Lord came. In the throes of death or at the judgment, it is then too late to perform the duties and meet the obligations of life that it takes a lifetime to do. This parable shows plainly that if we neglect the duties of life here, we cannot do them at the judgment.

We might note with profit the nature of the foolish virgins' sin. Their sin was the sin of neglect, or omission. "For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him?" (Heb. 2: 2, 3.) They neglected the simple duty of putting oil in their vessels while they were waiting for the bridegroom to come.

Dear reader, are you neglecting to clothe the naked, to feed the hungry, to give drink to the thirsty, to minister to the sick, and to entertain strangers? If so, you are not only neglecting the wants of those who need your assistance, but you are neglecting your own soul of that preparation that is needful for you to be ready to meet death's call and the Lord when he comes again. Carefully read Matt. 25: 31-46.

The foolish virgins' sin was not some outrageous act in transgressing God's law, but it was the omission of the simple duty to put oil in their vessels. him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." (James 4: 17.) My dear brethren, if we omit to go to the house of the Lord and engage in that worship that is so justly due Him who created us, and to contribute of our means to support the cause of Christ, and if we omit a life of soberness, righteousness, and godliness in this present world, we are sinners by omitting the sacred duties and privileges of life, and will be, as the foolish virgins were, unprepared when the Lord comes. Brother, will you please memorize James 4: 17 and Heb. 2: 2, 3 and repeat them before you eat the food with which God has blessed you without giving thanks, and also at nightfall will you repeat these verses before you retire without pouring out your soul in humble prayer to God? Will you repeat them before you decide to not go to service on Lord's day? Will you repeat them before you give more of your money to shows, picnics, reunions, lodges, tobacco, etc., than you give to the cause that cost the blood of Christ? Will you repeat them before you decide to let any earthly thing come before your duties that you owe to God, to yourself, to your loved ones, and to the world? We must let the kingdom of God and his righteousness always be first. (Matt. 6: 33.) Let us keep these verses in our hearts, that we neither neglect nor omit those sacred, humble, and simple duties and privileges of life, and that we be not like the foolish virgins, who were unprepared to meet the bridegroom when he comes.

No individual or institution can retain the confidence of a loyal following while at the same time seeking to ease. the burden of responsibility or to lower the level of the ideal. A man in the trench to-day shrinks from the thought of "going over the top;" but he goes, and promptly, nevertheless. He would despise a military leader who would seek to excuse him from the duty. What men want to-day is a high ideal held continually before them, not only in their military and national life, but in the spiritual and religious life. Men are hungering and thirsting after righteousness in these days a good bit more than we think they are, and sometimes they are surprised that we seem not to know it. Some of them are turning to one thing after another, and not to the church. These are finding no spiritual satisfaction in their quest. May it not be that we of the church are at fault because with us the church's real mission has not become a passion? -Selected.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Brother Elam will begin a meeting next Sunday at Owen's Chapel, on the Franklin road.

The church at Portland, Tenn., has about one hundred "Popular Hymns," No. 2, in good condition, which they will dispose of at one-half price. Write to J. O. Blaine, Portland, Tenn.

From R. N. Moody, Frankewing, Tenn., September 18: "The meeting at McBurg, in Lincoln County, closed last night, with one addition. The Lord willing, I shall hold their meeting next year."

G. C. Brewer sustained an operation for appendicitis on Wednesday, September 17. He is now in the Woman's Hospital, at Nashville, Tenn., and is improving daily. May the Lord bless and sustain him.

From Mary E. Purnell, Rome, Tenn., September 18: "G. W. Farmer, of Lebanon, Tenn., closed a ten-days' meeting here last Tuesday, with three baptisms. The gospel was presented in love and was inspiring and helpful. The church was encouraged and strengthened very much. J. L. Barfield, of Nashville, conducted the song service."

From J. T. Harris, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., September 20: "On last Lord's day I closed an eight-days' meeting with the New Hope congregation, near Florence, Ala. The audiences were large and attentive. As to visible results, twelve were baptized, one was restored, one united from the Methodists and one from the Baptists."

From J. H. Hines, Dover, Tenn., September 18: "I am one and one-half miles from Dover in a good meeting. Meeting three days old. Big crowds, good attention, interest high, and two confessions to date. We expect many more to accept the Christ. There is no church house near. We hope to organize and build a house in the near future."

From Bailey Brooks, Tracy City, Tenn., September 18: "I have just closed a good meeting at Capitol Hill. We had fine crowds all the week. The Center Grove brethren stood by the meeting well. P. S. Chitwood led the singing for us. One lady made the good confession last night at our prayer meeting here at home. I will baptize her this afternoon."

From W. M. B. Cox, Baldwyn, Miss., September 16: "Fine meeting here, G. A. Dunn doing the preaching and interest increasing from beginning. Crowded house. Twenty-two additions. Some came from the sectarians, which includes the 'digressives.' The congregation much strengthened and have a mind to work. About sixty in Bible study. Have just finished our brick house, costing near seven thousand five hundred dollars. Everything looks good for New Testament Christianity."

Thomas E. Milholland writes from Denison, Texas, September 20: "It may be of some interest to Tennessee preachers and saints in general to hear of the work doing so well in Texas. I have closed my protracted-meeting work to take up the work in Denison. Our new church house is well under way. We rejoice to note the progress in the Master's work everywhere. In our meeting at Collinsville we baptized thirty persons and restored ten to their 'first love.' I begin my fourth year in Denison this month."

From Flavil Hall, Trimble, Ohio, September 20: "We are having a fine meeting here. Eight have been baptized—four leading young men, one faithful head of a family, two young ladies of leading homes, and one wife and mother of salutary influence. The attendance and attention are very encouraging. I have been very busy in meetings for several months in Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, and Ohio, but not many have been baptized. I have been 'tailored,' however, as Brother Srygley once said, in only one meeting."

From A. W. Anthony, Guin, Ala., September 17: "The meeting at this place of ten days' duration, with Joe T. Clark, of Pulaski, Tenn., doing the preaching, and Gus Nichols, of Eldridge, Ala., doing the singing, resulted in eleven baptisms and one restoration. Of those baptized, six were from the sects or sectarian families, and five were married persons. This is considered the best meeting we have had in recent years, yet the attendance was below the usual average. Needless to say, both preacher and singer did their work well."

From A. A. Bunner, Waverly, W. Va., September 15: "Concerning the Bible reading that is to begin at Naish Spring congregation on the last Monday evening in October, I wish to say that I received a letter from a young brother in Tennessee by the name of Cagle who purposes attending the reading. I lost the letter, so cannot answer. If the young brother should see this and will write me again, I will answer it and give him the desired information. We expect to have a fine class and a profitable reading. Let me hear from others who are expecting to attend the reading."

From M. C. Cayce, Nashville, Tenn., September 20: "Our meeting at Southside, Tenn., closed last Sunday night. The interest and attendance were good and the seed sown must do good. This is a strong Methodist neighborhood, and we have very few members. I did not preach in the day during the week, but went back and forth to work. I am wanted back next year for another meeting. H. T. King preached at Pegram last Sunday, morning and night. I began on Monday night and will continue until next Sunday night, preaching at night and working during the day. One confession to date. Attendance increasing at each service."

The venerable and well-beloved J. W. Harding, of Winchester, Ky., passed away, at his home, last week. He was ninety-six years old at the time of his death. Brother Harding was truly one of God's noblemen who has served faithfully through three generations. It is needless to say that we grieve for his absence, but rejoice in his accomplishment. We repeat the lines which he himself so dearly loved to quote:

"When we've been there ten thousand years, Bright shining as the sun, We've no less days to sing his praise Than when we first begun."

From J. H. Murrell, Box 24, Tennessee City, Tenn., September 18: "The meeting at Bolivar closed last Lord's day. Two were baptized and several agreed to meet for the worship. I hope they will do so and that they will build up a strong church there. We have a few fine people there. They had not been meeting for the worship in Bolivar, but some had been going to other places. I may have time for one or two more meetings this fall if notified right away. I did think I would move to Colorado some time during this month or next, but we have had so much sickness in our family this summer I do not think we will be able to get ready for a move as early as was expected."

J. C. McQuiddy writes: "The initial number of the Gospel Advance, a new religious monthly 'with constructive aims and a positive message,' has been received at this office. Price Billingsley is the editor, and the publication office is at McMinnville, Tenn. We are pleased with the appearance and articles in this number. The editor makes good in calling attention to some great truths to which the journal is pledged. He begins an important series on the 'Problems of the Young Preacher' and writes two other timely articles along constructive lines. There are newsy notes from the field. We wish for Brother Billingsley great success in his venture. The first number bears the earmarks of a well-edited journal."

From Ed S. Duncan, Mount Pleasant, Texas, September 9: "The annual meeting of the church of Christ at Gunter was one of the most pleasant meetings I have ever been in. There were six baptisms and one restoration. These good people know how to treat a preacher to make him feel at home. This is the home of Gunter Bible College, and that school was never more alive in its history than now. They have a corps of teachers second to none in Texas. They are fully competent and wide awake, and some of the most godly people I have ever met. The spirit manifested is that of the Master. No egotism or self-importance is manifested, but humility and meekness dominate the whole institution. Brethren and sisters will make no mistake in placing their children under the care of these godly men. Write them for a catalogue. I met seven or eight of the preachers in the meeting, but did not get to see the boy preacher, Alfred Elmore, president of the school, as he was away busy at his Master's business. By the time this is read I will have closed my ninth meeting with the church at Durant, Okla. This will also close my work for the year 1919, with the exception of the mission meeting to be held in Bowie County, Texas, which will begin on the third Lord's day in this month. I have received only about ten dollars on this work, but I am trusting the Lord and the good brethren."

Testimonies

My God and the Surgeon.

BY MRS. L C. HOSKINS.

Just as the sun went down behind the tall steeples in the city of Cincinnati, one lingering ray shed its benign influence over a couch where lay a sufferer. A strong young bridegroom, bending in gentle ministration, sought to alleviate the pain. Noting the anxious look, the wife asked: "Am I getting better?" The faithful husband, weary with long watching and knowing the verdict of the doctor (that the end was near), sank down. With bowed head resting on the sufferer's couch, he poured out his anguish in tears and piteous moans. Extending a pale and withered hand and placing it on the head of her loved one, the sufferer offered this simple prayer: "Father in heaven, if it be thy will, restore me to health, that I may help him in his ministry which has just begun," "Arise," she said; "the Lord will answer my prayer."

To the unbeliever, hopeless would have seemed the case when the doctor came in later and said to the husband: "She is gone."

The doctor departed, leaving the husband alone, praying and still applying the remedies he had been using for the paralyzed tongue and lips. For more than an hour he continued the remedies as he prayed and looked into the face of her who was dearer to him than life. At the expiration of that time she opened her eyes and smiled.

Four months were marked by weary days and nights of intense suffering and increasing devotion in nursing. Months and years rolled on, the patient going to Christ's Hospital, at Mount Auburn, suburb to Cincinnati; thence to the old home at Lexington, Ky.; two weeks later, to the Protestant Infirmary, at Lexington. Leaving Lexington for their home in Sellersburg, Ind., the young couple thought health might come from a general building up by most nourishing food, laying aside all medical treatment.

When called to the church at the Highlands, in Louisville, Ky., one of earth's noblest women, through her sweet sympathy and Christlike character, brought the patient to the great surgeon who was, in God's providence, to answer her simple prayer, at eventide. Entering upon a series of operations and surgical dressings at the Gray Street Infirmary and concluding at the Norton Infirmary, the patient passed through (including the Cincinnati work) ten operations and one thousand four hundred and seventy surgical dressings.

One day when the last operation had been finished and the patient was required to remain for some special treatment, she sent this message to her husband, who was conducting a series of meetings in Fayette City, Pa.: "When this reaches you, the doctor says, I will be well." When the message was received, the visiting evangelist and the local preacher and his consecrated wife gathered at the family altar and, with tears of joy, offered prayers of thanksgiving to the great God of the universe, with whom nothing is impossible. Though many years had passed, the gracious Heavenly Father had not forgotten the simple prayer of his humble child.

Bidding farewell to the fumes of the ether, the surgeon's knife, the rolling chair, the white-capped nurses, and surgical dressings, the invalid passed out, breaking, as it were, the chains which had so long bound her. Casting them aside in the strength of the Almighty One, she entered upon the active duties of her happy home. Her faithful husband hung upon the wall of their home this motto: "Kept by the Power of God through Faith."

How God Answered My Prayer.

BY GEORGE A. KLINGMAN.

Two older brothers died in infancy. Mother prayed that the Lord might grant her another son, and promised God that she would dedicate him to the ministry. I came as an answer to mother's prayer, and my earliest impressions were that I should some day preach the gospel. Not only was it the prayer of my childhood days to be a faithful preacher of God's word, but it was the dominant desire of my life. At mother's knee I learned the Bible stories. For six years I attended Bible instruction under the direction of our "paster." In my fourteenth year I was examined and prepared for confirmation and was selected by the congregation to be educated for the ministry. Now, it was mother's prayer, and therefore my prayer, that I should never preach or teach anything I could not find in the Bible, but to be like Timothy of old and "preach the word." When the confirmation class, composed of forty boys and forty girls, was asked to make a solemn vow to be true to that church and her teaching, I could not answer, for my first doubt choked my voice. It occurred to me for the first time that I had not read of infant christening and confirmation in the Bible. As soon as we were dismissed, I asked my good, pious father for the scripture reference; but he told me I was too young to ask such a question, and that I should not doubt the wisdom of my parents and pastor in teaching me the truth. I insisted on seeing it for myself in the Bible; but father kindly, but firmly, told me to speak no more of the matter. Then followed seven years of silent suffering; but I was sustained by the hope that in one of God's days my prayer would be answered. I refused to be sent by the church to the seminary and university, and requested that I might be permitted to work in some factory or store.

When my fightings and fears and doubts were about to reach a climax, mother died. For several hours before she fell asleep I held her hand, and, though not a word was spoken, we understood. Then came the day of decision-I must seek for myself the simple truth of the gospel. I prayed earnestly that I might read the Bible once more and find the "right church." As with thousands of others, so it was with me: God's plan of redemption and his glorious church were so plainly revealed to me in his wonderful Book. The day I finished my reading I was in my office, thinking I was alone. The crucial moment had come. With a heavy sigh, I laid the Book on my desk and wished I had died in infancy; for I did not care to live unless I could preach the gospel, and I knew of no church in which I could preach it as I had read it in the Bible. My chum, W. T. Hilton, unobserved, had been watching me for some time. When he spoke, he frightened me. He locked the door, sat in my lap, put his arms around me, and begged me to tell him my trouble. At first I refused, but finally told him. He took me to a minister who assured me he would "bury" me by baptism into the death of Jesus; that I would join no man's church, subscribe to no man's creed, but would be a member of the body of Christ, the church of the living God. My joy knew no bounds. I could hardly wait for the "holy hour" to come, As I came up out of the water, praying, I thanked God for the "happy day that sealed my vow," and it seemed that somewhere mother said "Amen." When about two years later I preached my first sermon over the pool so sacred to me, the prevailing prayer of my life was answered.

Many a one thinks he has God and an abundance of all things if he has money and goods. He relies on them, and boasts that he cares for no one. Lo, he has indeed a god who is called "mammon"—that is, money and goods, on which he sets all his heart—and this is the commonest idol in the world.—Martin Luther.

Answered and Unanswered Prayer. BY JAMES E. SCOBEY.

In all ages past men have engaged in prayer. If they did not pray to the true God, they addressed their supplications to the gods of their imaginations, whom they supposed had power to bless or curse. Among the Jews, it was customary for them to pray to the God of their fathers.

There are numerous instances mentioned in the Bible of acceptable prayers being made to God, and the consequent bestowal of the blessing sought. There are also numerous instances recorded of prayers being unanswered. It is recorded in Isa. 1: 15: "And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear."

There is scarcely one of God's heroes, whose name and acts are recorded, but what is represented as a man of prayer.

God's people, both those under the Mosaic law and those under Christ, have been taught to pray. Jesus himself said: "Man ought always to pray and not to faint." God's people should at no time become weary in well-doing, and this consists in being engaged in the service of God. Paul said in his first epistle to Timothy: "I will that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting."

Jesus was a man of prayer, and he taught his disciples to pray. At the grave of Lazarus he had prayed to his Father and said: "I thank thee that thou hast heard me. And I knew that thou hearest me always." God's people should be a praying people, and are exhorted by the apostle in his letter to the Philippians in these words: "Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." The children of God, citizens of the kingdom, are at liberty at all times to call upon their Father and King for the blessing he has promised to bestow.

Many of the prayers offered now, as in former days, God does not and will not hear. Many of them are entirely perfunctory, and many are made more for the purpose of being heard by men than to be directed to God. I once was among a vast throng of people on an occasion for celebrating the laying the foundation of a Confederate monument. A distinguished preacher of the city of Nashville had been requested to be present to open the exercises by prayer. The assembled multitude, at a signal from him, rose to their feet. He stood holding a paper before him and read what he had written for the special occasion. It sounded to me more like a eulogy of men than a prayer to God. The morning papers of the next day had laudatory notices of the wonderfully magnificent prayer uttered by the divine (?). I was reminded of what Jesus said: "When thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward."

It is all right to pray. But for prayer to be answered depends upon the attitude toward God by the one who offers the prayer. It is said by the apostle James: "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Sinners need not expect the spiritual comforts and consolations of the gospel of peace to be bestowed on them by prayer.

Our prayers may consist of praise, thanksgiving, and supplication. And when we approach the throne of mercy, for our prayers to be heard and answered, we should manifest an honest purpose, a broken and contrite heart, and in our supplications earnestly beseech the Father to hear our prayer and bestow the blessing; but, as Jesus said in the garden of Gethsemane, when he prayed that the cup he was called to drink might pass from him, "Not my will, but thine, be done," so let us say.

All prayer, praise, and thanksgiving must be in the name of Jesus, the great High Priest. The apostle Paul, in his first Corinthian letter, says: "I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also," Those things which God has promised to bestow in answer to prayer, we can confidently expect to receive. We fail of a favorable answer to our prayers because we ask amiss. The apostle James says: "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lust." We need not, therefore, expect God to bestow on us any blessing which we would use to obtain the friendship of the world, which the apostle says "is enmity with God." No, let us honestly and earnestly approach the throne of grace through Jesus Christ our Lord, and praise him for his mercy and goodness, let our requests be known, and he will answer our prayers, unless we ask amiss. All things work together for good to them who love the Lord.

"Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." Then we may confidently trust God to bless us in answer to our prayers.

The Christian's Prayer.

BY R. E. L. TAYLOR,

God will hear the prayers of the righteous. "The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry. The face of the Lord is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth. The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth and delivereth them out of all their troubles." (Ps. 34: 15-18.)

The Christian's prayer, if he prays in faith, will be heard. "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed." The Christian's prayer will not be heard unless he hears the law. Many a Christian's prayer has never been heard, I fear, because he failed to hear the law. "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination." (Prov. 28: 9.) To hear the law is to keep the commandments. "And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight." (1 John 3: 22.) If we do his will, God will hear us. "Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshiper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth." (John 9: 31.) For God to hear Christians, they must pray with the spirit and with the understanding. "What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also." (1 Cor. 14: 15.) They must believe that God will hear them ask in faith. "Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." (Mark 11: 24.) If Christians have any enemies, they will have to forgive them before God will hear them. "And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses." (Mark 11: 25, 26.) Many a prayer has been unanswered because the Christian asked that he might consume it upon his own lusts. "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." (James 4: 3.)

Christians must have confidence in the Lord. He will do everything he says he will do. They must not doubt him. "And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us: and if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him." (1 John 5: 14, 15.)

Christians should pray for the word of God to have free course and be glorified. "Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you." (2 Thess. 3: 1.)

Christians should watch in order for their prayers to be heard—watch their words, actions, thoughts, conduct, heart. The Savior taught his disciples to watch and pray, that they enter not into temptation. "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." (Matt. 26: 41.) Christians could overcome temptation if they would pray more.

It is the duty of Christians to pray for those who persecute them. "But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven; for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust." (Matt. 5: 44, 45.) God will hear the righteous if they will pray for those who persecute them.

The Christian can and will pray to God, and God will hear his prayer; but the person who is full of conceit and who feels abundantly able to guide and direct his own course in life will not and cannot pray to God. A man must feel his need of the Savior to direct his steps. "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5: 3.) A person must be humble, must realize his own dependence upon God, before he will seek God in the sacred hour of prayer.

Paul, in writing to Timothy, says: "I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting." (1 Tim. 2: 8.) Those who pray should lift up holy hands in every place, calling on the name of the Lord.

Men who pray in faith and in harmony with the will of God are assured that God will hear and answer their petitions. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed." (James 1: 5, 6.)

We have examples in the Bible where God heard and answered prayers. Peter was cast into prison by Herod. The church made prayer for him. God heard and answered the prayer. An angel was sent to the prison and released Peter. This example teaches beyond a doubt that God heard and answered the prayer that was offered up for Peter. Again, we find Paul and Silas in the Philippian jail. Their backs were bleeding and torn. At midnight's quiet hour they "prayed, and sang praises unto God." God heard and answered them. "And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed." (Acts 16: 23.) It was the power of God that did it. God heard and answered their prayers.

The righteous people must humble themselves, their hearts must be humble, for God to hear their prayers. "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." (2 Chron. 7: 14.) "When he maketh inquisition for blood, he remembereth them: he forgetteth not the cry of the humble." (Ps. 9: 12.)

The Christian should pray at least three times a day. David did. "Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud: and he shall hear my voice." (Ps. 55: 17.)

The Lord will hear the prayer of the righteous, "The Lord is far from the wicked: but he heareth the prayer of the righteous," (Prov. 15: 29.) When the righteous pray, they should not pray to be heard for their much speaking. One of the best prayers I ever heard came from the lips of an old brother that had not been a member of the church long. He humbly knelt down and used these words: "O Lord, have mercy on me! Amen." "And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward. But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closest, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly. But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking." (Matt. 6: 5-7.)

Paul says: "Pray without ceasing." (1 Thess. 5: 17.) Again, he says: "In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." (Verse 18.)

Jesus at Prayer.

BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

From the days of Abel, so far as I know, all good men have been praying men. Prayer in some respects might be considered as talking to God. Jesus was a praying man. but by the law of Rome he was deprived of an education. "And the Jews marveled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" When Jesus was baptized, the first thing he did was to pray. Never was a child more obedient to his mother than Jesus, and never was a mother more devoted to God since the days of mother Eve than the mother of Jesus was. Jesus certainly understood the near relationship he sustained to his Father, God, before he left his Father's glory and came down from heaven on a mission of mercy to redeem man from sin and death. His Father had sent him, and Jesus knew that he would be with him as he would walk through the valley of the shadow of death. (Ps. 23.) So they often communicated, so much so that Jesus went one night up into a lonely mountain and in solemn prayer talked to God all night.

Jesus was a praying map, and prayed often. When Lazarus died, after the burial, Jesus stood in front of the tomb and prayed. His Father heard the prayer; then, as if enthused over the thought of conquering him who had the power of death, with a loud voice he said: "Lazarus, come forth!" That voice, hitherto unheard in all that gloomy world of death, opened the gates of death, and Lazarus, as obedient to his Master's call as when he was alive and cared for him, rose and stood before Jesus alive. God had heard and granted the prayer of Jesus.

Jesus was not afraid nor ashamed to go direct to God and make known his desire or ask for aid to do his Father's will. When the burden of the sins of the people seemed to press him to the ground, he prayed to his Father: "Father, if possible—that is, if there are any other means by which the world can be redeemed from sin and death—save me from the awful sacrificial death upon the cross; if not possible, 'thy will be done.' Sin had brought death, so there must be a sacrifice equal to the life of the human race. It appears to have been left to Jesus to act either way; so he prayed for his enemies, commended his spirit into his Father's care, and died.

In one of his prayers, Jesus in deep sorrow mentioned to his Father the endless loss of one man. And we have no account of that man ever praying or performing a good act, except one time after it was too late he did rue his contract and confess that he had betrayed an innocent man (devils do not pray). Jesus taught his disciples to pray.

Finally, he told them about asking of the Father in his name. Under the Jewish worship all prayers were offered in the name of the great high priest. Under our Christian worship all prayers must be offered in the name of Jesus Christ, who is our great High Priest, our Mediator and Advocate, or they will not be heard.

Jesus could have prayed and been granted seventy-two thousand angels, and blotted the earthly powers from the map, and returned back to his Father and left the world without a Redeemer. But no; his great love for man prompted him to suffer and die, to shed his lifeblood for an atonement, that man might be redeemed. And all true Christians rejoice to know that Jesus, our "Elder Brother," and true praying man, offered a prayer for them.

God's Greatest.

Who is among you greatest? Who is he That towers the light of all admiring eyes? Some general, medal-decked with valor's prize? Or emperor ruling lands from sea to sea? A painter or a poet, whose high art Gains laurel garlands and undying fame. Or, greater glory, wins the human heart?

Such, it may be, rank great with earthly fame; Heaven's measurement another greatest calls. God's Son binds tenderly the bruised reed, Without the Father not a sparrow falls; His gentle rain drops on the wayside weed; He watches o'er the growing mustard seed; God's Greatest to his least of things gives heed.

Pleased With Article on "Tithing."

The article on "Tithing" which appeared in the "Better Ministry" Number has elicited much favorable comment. Brother L. S. White, who wrote the article, has received several indorsements of his position. We print two of these as a matter of general interest.

Brother D. F. Draper, of Fort Worth, Texas, writes:

Dear Brother White: Allow me to give you the good right hand with a good many loud "amens" to your article in the recent issue of the Gospel Advocate. I have been thoroughly convinced for some time that we must have a concerted action, a unanimity of speech regarding the things of which you wrote, and I am awfully glad that you broke ice and led out in those lines. Keep a-hitting I would be glad if you would write a more just that way. extended article and send it to the Firm Foundation.

Brother John R. Weathers, of Washington, D. C., writes:

Dear Brother White: I am delighted with your article, entitled "Tithing as a Means Toward a Better Ministry," which appears in the special "Better Ministry" Number of the Gospel Advocate of August 28. I have been advocating the tithe as God's financial standard for quite a while, and striving to show that my plea is not digressive. I believe that the tithe was reënacted for the new dispensation by the ordinance mentioned by Paul in 1 Cor. 14: "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." My appeal along this line is expressed in the special number of the July Gospel Advocate (page 722).

Again, since many claim that the New Testament does teach how much of our income shall go into the Lord's treasury, I can see no divine reason why we should not all come up to the Lord's only standard—the sacred tenth. This would provide bountifully for the Lord's plan of salvation, make us all happy, and please our Heavenly Father. I believe our preaching brethren should urgently press this thought upon the church everywhere.

I say again, Brother White, that I am delighted to see you, one of our influential preachers of the gospel, take the decisive stand manifest by your plea.

Brother Elam Takes the Field in Behalf of David Lipscomb College.

The trustees of David Lipscomb College are deeply appreciative of the many contributions and pledges that have been made to the Building Fund. We are glad to report that the sum of forty thousand dollars has been pledged since the campaign started. About one-fourth of this amount has been paid in cash and in Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps. It was our expectation and earnest hope that the fifty thousand dollars asked for would be enough to make all necessary improvements; but when we received careful estimates we found that it would require at least sixty-five thousand dollars for the girls' dormitory, not to mention other improvements. We have decided for the present to build two units of this building, which, when finished, will accommodate seventy-five girls, and hope to finish the third unit later. To do the work absolutely necessary for the good of the school and to meet our obligations to the various contractors, we urge that churches and individual Christians respond quickly to our call for funds. We hope to have the girls' dormitory ready for occupancy about January 1. It is a pity to turn students away as we have been compelled to do for lack of room. There are now more than two hundred students enrolled, and there would be more if we could accommodate them. In view of the present crisis, we have asked Brother E. A. Elam, one of the trustees, to take the field and visit the churches in behalf of the Building Fund. He has consented to do this and is now perfecting arrangements. Here is a fine opportunity for some of the churches who have longed for a visit from this good brother to have their desire realized. You may hear some good preaching and at the same time have fellowship in a great work. If you desire such a visit, write him at once at A. B. Lipscomb, Lebanon, Tenn.

Just a little reading, just a little music, just a little art, just a little dreaming—and life's just a little comfort here and there-just a little better, decenter chance for those who need it most-just a little understanding on everybody's part-and everything runs smoother, surer, and with greater zeal.

Christ's commandments are not harsh, hard laws, but the revealing to us of Christ's character.-L. K. Smith.

In submitting its annual report and audit, the secretary of the American Committee for New-East relief writes:

A great work has been done. A greater work remains. Tens of thousands of little children, besides men and women, are living to-day who without relief would certainly have perished.

But the need for relief has not passed, and after relief must come reconstruction.

These refugees (seven hundred thousand reported by military authorities in the Caucasus alone, exclusive of other areas) are not yet able to return to their homes which are occupied or controlled by demobilized, but armed, Turkish soldiers and bands of brigands. They must in some way be helped through another winter or until they can be restored to their lands and ruined homes under proper governmental protection.

The able-bodied adults will quickly regain self-support, but a large part, if not the majority of the refugees, are orphans who do not know their own names or the names of their relatives.

These children, who are potentially "The New Near East," must be saved, sheltered, clothed, fed, and educated until they can take their proper places in the service of their new country and the new world.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Family Worship.

BY E. A. E.

This is the subject which has been assigned me for this issue of the Gospel Advocate.

"Worship" and "family," with all that these comprehensive words embrace of duty and service, love and blessings, are in the Bible; but the expression, "family worship," in so many words, is not in the Bible. The happy privilege of worshiping God in the home and the solemn duty to do so are taught in the Bible.

There are different objects of worship-"gods many and lords many "-and these different gods are worshiped and served in the home as much so as in temples of idols. In many homes the creature is worshiped and served rather than the Creator. Some make a god of their belly. (Phil. 3: 18, 19; Rom, 16: 18.) The "god of this world" has blinded the minds of many. (2 Cor. 4: 4.) In thousands of homes vanity and pride and worldliness have full sway and pleasure is loved rather than God. Almost all the perilous and grievous things described in 2 Tim, 3: 1-5 rule numerous homes, and from the homes the world. Note them:

But know this, that in the last days grievous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of self, lovers of money, boastful, haughty, railers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, implacable, slanderers, without self-control, fierce, no lovers of good, traiters, headstrong, puffed up, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God; holding a form of godliness, but having denied the power thereof: from these also turn away.

In the home "natural affection," with all that that term means, is wanting. Many, many so-called homes are not graced and blessed and beautified by the tender and loving, constant and self-sacrificing service of wife and mother, because woman is "man's equal" even in failing to become the mother of children, and such homes are not filled with the care and life, love and light, poetry and music of chil-

In the home and in the cradle children must be taught obedience to their parents, and in the home, of course, "disobedience to parents" begins. There, too, in both parents and children, the meanest and lowest selfishness is frequently displayed. And "unthankful!" Yes, how many in the home, and for the home with all its comforts and blessings, are unthankful-husbands, for the service and devotion, unselfishness and love of self-forgetful and faithful wives; children, for the care and self-denial, work and prayers of parents; and, barely possible, parents, for the attention and honor of children!

Children are commanded to honor father and mother, to requite their parents, and to "learn first to show piety" at home, (1 Tim. 5: 1-4.) Children are to be religiousafter the only pure and true kind of religion, or Christianity-to be godly at home. Piety is not passivity, is not ethereal; it is activity and service. Piety in children and at home and in daily life is repaying parents for unceasing labor and love, prayers and tears for them when babes and helpless, and, when older, careless and wayward.

As a matter of course, "piety toward their own family," Christ, and "the fear of Jehovah" in the home embrace the worship of God in the home.

The home set apart or sanctified to the service of Christ and filled, therefore, with "the fear of Jehovah"-the real Christian home-is the hope and salvation of the race, and the vestibule of heaven. On the other hand, the Christless and godless home, the home destitute of the knowledge of the truth and the service of the Lord, however cultured and refined and beautiful and gilded with worldly glory, or poor and squalid and groveling, is a curse to any country of any age, is the entrance into that life which leads into the outer darkness and gnashing of teeth so graphically described in the New Testament.

Destruction of the home is the destruction of the welfare of the race and of the race itself.

The worship of God embraces respect, deference, honor, reverence, and awe for him (see Heb. 12: 28, 29); homage rendered to him; service paid to him; the performance of "sacred services," offering gifts, the observance "of rites instituted for his worship." The worship of God embraces private and public services commanded by him. All this must be "in spirit and truth." (John 4: 23, 24.)

God may be worshiped in vain.

This people honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. But in vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men. (Mark 7: 6, 7.)

The worship acceptable to God is that only into which faith and obedience to his will lead. All worship of God according to the precepts and commandments and ways of men is vain.

The Bible presents the family to us as an institution of God. There can be no closer and more beautiful relationship of human beings than that of husband and wife-"and they shall be one flesh." The next is that of parents and children, especially that of mother and child. Following these is that of brother and sister. The duties of each one to the other and the boundless blessings which follow the faithful discharge of these duties are clearly set forth in the Bible

But the Bible specifies no special acts of worship which are to be offered by the family as such, and not as individual Christians. Hence, the Bible gives no form of "family worship" and sets no time for such worship.

But the Bible most plainly and clearly teaches parents to nurture their children in the chastening and admonition of the Lord (Eph. 6: 4); to teach them diligently the word of God, talking of it when they sit together in the home, when they lie down, and when they rise up. They are never to forget the word of God and are to so arrange that it will ever be before their eyes. (See Deut. 6: 4-9.) In everything they must give thanks, because this is the will of God in Christ Jesus to them, (1 Thess. 5: 17.) Then they must give thanks for common meals, or daily food, for their food "is sanctified by the word of God and prayer." (1 Tim. 4; 5.) Jesus gave thanks for the five loaves and two fishes before he fed the five thousand (John 6: 9, 11), and again for the seven loaves and "a few small fishes" before he fed the four thousand (Mark 8: 7). Paul, too, gave thanks for common meals. (Acts 27: 35; 1 Cor. 10: 30.) Of course, this is done in the home. Again, Christians are taught to "offer up a sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of lips, which make confession unto his name." (Heb, 13: 15.) This must be done in the home, as well as in other places. And again, they are taught that if any suffer, let them pray; and if any are cheerful, let them sing praises. (James 5: 13.) This, too, is done in the home, as well as elsewhere.

Since Christians are to "pray without ceasing" (1 Thess. 5: 17), to always pray and not to faint (Luke 18: 1), and to continue steadfastly in prayer (Rom. 12: 12), they must pray in their homes, at least, in secret. But since they must train their children in the fear of God, they must pray with their children as well as for them, and teach their children by example as well as by precept.

Now, what have we before us? We have this: While there are no special rites or acts to be performed at stated times in the home, called "family worship," yet the word of God must be studied and taught in the home, and taught diligently; thanks must be offered in the home for food and all the comforts and blessings of home; praise to God must be sung in the home when its inmates are cheerful; prayers must be offered in the home in order to obey God in regard to prayer. Children must obey their parents in the Lord, must show piety toward their own family while in the home and so long as they may live, and must "requite their parents." Let parents and children render all this service to God in the home daily as God requires, and whether it is called "family worship" or not, it is worship acceptable and well pleasing to God.

This work in the family is not only necessary, but happy and beautiful.

Study this passage and rejoice in its blessings:

Then they that feared Jehovah spake one with another; and Jehovah hearkened, and heard, and a book of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared Jehovah, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith Jehovah of hosts, even mine own possession, in the day that I make ["do this."—margin]; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." (Mal. 3: 16-18.)

As the family sit together and think upon the name of God and talk of him—his goodness and mercy, grace and love—he hears and accepts it, and has the names of all who do this truly, as they otherwise obey him, written in his book of remembrance. Amidst the praises and worship of angels he hears this. He will have mercy on all who do this as they render other service to him; he will spare them as a father his own son that serves him. This is one of the distinguishing features between those who serve God and those who do not, the righteous and the wicked.

How many so-called "Christian homes" are destitute of this service?

I could not write this without honestly confessing that, with many others, I have not been as regular and persistent in this most important work and happy service as I should have been. But I may be permitted to say that in all our teaching in the home, in prayers both with and for our children, and in daily example, we have never asked or sought knowingly for them anything contrary to the will of God. We pray for them nothing—worldly station or fortune, peace or glory—which is not God's will for them to have. We doubt no promises of God in the least; all failures have been our failures or the failures of the children—and who is it that has made no failures and possesses no faults?—and not the failures of our Father and his word. We sing in the home sometimes, "Lord, our sins, they are many," etc.

Day by day we pray most devoutly that all homes in the world may become Christian homes indeed, and that in all things God's will may be done on earth as it is in heaven, and that his will, not ours, may be done.

May this number beget in all readers a more devout spirit of prayer, deeper feelings of gratitude to God, a pure spirit of true worship in every place, and stronger resolutions to do only his will.

Do We Say or Pray Our Prayers?

BY A. B. L.

The language of the Lord's Prayer is so plain, its divisions are so simple, and its meaning is so clear that most of us are content to retain it in our minds as a piece of memory work without thinking seriously of the depth, beauty, and richness of this divine pattern. The result is, we do not observe the principles of the Lord's Prayer when we pray our own prayers, and for that reason they go nnanswered. We are just like the school children who stand up, sometimes four or five hundred strong, and mumble the words of this prayer in the same singsong way in which they mumble the alphabet or the multiplication table. Grown people as well as children can make the Lord's Prayer a mere formality, if not a mockery, by simply repeating the words, while utterly oblivious of its spirit and teaching. Of course, the older people are less excusable than the children. They can and should know better.

Jesus did not give this prayer, as some contend, to show us how long or how short our prayers should be, or how they should begin or end. These things are worth noticing. but they are incidental. They do not explain its primary purpose. The great Teacher spoke these beautiful words to impress upon our hearts the principles of prayer. From a close study of this divine pattern we may deduct rules for our guidance in prayer and in other matters as well. The rules of the Lord's Prayer are easy enough to understand, but they are sometimes hard to practice because of our sinful, selfish natures. There is the story of an English judge who refused for many years to forgive a son who had forged his father's name. Exiled to a distant land, the boy wrote, imploring forgiveness and asking that he might come home. But for a long time the stern father refused, his heart obdurate and his face like flint toward these piteous letters. But one night while teaching his little grandchild the Lord's Prayer, the little girl asked: "Grandpa, what does it mean, 'Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors?" The old man took pains to explain in simple language so that the child could understand. Then innocently enough she asked: "Grandpa, have you forgiven all your debtors?" The shot went home. The old man broke down and wept and that night sent a message which read: "Come home, my boy, come home." Now, this judge had been saying the Lord's Prayer for years, and had taught others to say it, but he had never prayed it before that night.

We might bring out other important principles taught in the Lord's Prayer, but this one is enough to emphasize the supremely important lesson that it is not enough to say a prayer; we must pray it.

It is our earnest hope that this number may greatly help in teaching us how to pray our prayers.

The Rational Ground of Prayer.

BY M. C. K.

In any proper and profitable consideration of the subject of prayer, there are two important lines of thought suggested by it that should be kept distinctly separate from each other. These are: (1) What the Bible says on prayer; (2) what is ordinarily meant by the philosophy of prayer. The failure to make this distinction and to constantly observe it always leads to confusion, and sometimes to downright skepticism.

We are glad of the opportunity afforded by this special number of the Gospel Advocate to see different phases of the subject treated by different brethren, and it is to be hoped that not only shall the distinction here alluded to, as well as other phases of the question, be made clear, but that such treatment of it may present the entire subject in such a succinct form that our readers may see it at a glance in all its bearings in the precious and inviting light in which it is placed by inspired penmen.

By the philosophy of prayer we here mean the causes and reasons for what is claimed for it in the Bible. And these, because of our limited horizon in the realm of fact, are often beyond our ken. Our readers are well enough informed to know that, while the Bible nowhere, either on prayer or on any other subject, clashes with the necessary conclusions of philosophy and science, it is, nevertheless, not a philosophical or scientific treatise on any subject. Science and philosophy are found in its pages, yet nowhere is it designed to teach either. It teems with facts, commands, promises, and threatenings; but it does not stop, as do books on science and philosophy, to explain the causes and reasons for things.

Just here, because some things said of prayer must be accepted wholly as a matter of faith, and whose philosophy we cannot explain, some minds become skeptical about prayer and attempt to reduce it to a mere subjective matter. In "University of Chicago Sermons," page 173, Edward Scribner Ames says: "The most important effects of prayer are primarily subjective. There are doubtless objective, material and social effects, but they are often clearly the indirect and secondary results of subjective states." With such a cold, hazy, and apparently godless view of prayer, one can scarcely see the propriety of prayer at all. Assuredly it does not follow that because we do not see the reason for certain things about prayer, or about anything else, for that matter, that therefore there is no reason for it. Hence, it is irrational to affirm the incredibility of prayer or of anything else merely because we cannot give a philosophical reason for it. On the contrary, in the case of prayer or of anything else clearly taught in the word of God, let us be ready at all times to bow to the facts given us by men guided by the Spirit of God, and let us do so with full and implicit faith that their divine Author had a reason for withholding from us their philosophy.

There are six prominent facts plainly stated in the Bible which, in our judgment, constitute a rational basis for prayer, and which, therefore, make it reasonable for men to pray to God. If we shall properly note these facts, they will doubtless help us to "draw near with boldness unto the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy, and may find grace to help us in time of need." (Heb. 4: 16.) These facts are as follows:

- 1. Jesus prayed. Not only did he pray often, but on one occasion—the night before he chose the twelve apostles—"he continued all night in prayer to God." (Luke 6: 12.) What a wonderful example of prayer!
- 2. He taught his disciples to pray. "And he spake a parable unto them to the end that they ought always to pray, and not to faint." (See Luke 18: 1-8.) Again, he says: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you; for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." (Matt. 7: 7, 8.) But he not only taught his disciples to pray in the abstract, but gave them a concrete model of prayer, saying unto them: "After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father who art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one." (Matt, 6: 9-13.) For point, simplicity, and brevity, that prayer cannot be excelled.

- 3. Inspired apostles prayed. "About midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns unto God." (Acts 16: 25.) Compare their instructive and impressive prayer in Acts 4: 24-30.
- 4. They taught all other Christians to pray. "Pray without ceasing." (1 Thess. 5: 17.) "In nothing be anxious; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." (Phil. 4: 6.) Numerous other passages teach the same thing.
- 5. Certain conditions of acceptable prayer are specifically named in the Bible. (1) It must be in the name of Christ. (John 14: 13, 14; 15: 16: 16: 23, 24, 26.) (2) It must be in faith. (See Mark 11: 24; James 1: 5-7.) (3) It must be according to the will of God. (1 John 5: 14.)
- 6. The Bible distinctly declares that God hears and answers prayer. "The eyes of Jehovah are toward the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry." (Ps. 34: 15.) "I waited patiently for Jehovah; and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry." (Ps. 40: 1.) "Jehovah is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth. He will fulfill the desire of them that fear him; he also will hear their cry, and will save them." (Ps. 145: 18, 19.) "Elijah was a man of like passions with us, and he prayed fervently that it might not rain; and it rained not on the earth for three years and six months. And he prayed again; and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." (James 5: 17, 18.)

These facts not only show that it is rational and proper for men to pray, but they are in complete harmony with the fact that men may sometimes pray for things which are withheld from them and which it is not best for them to have. In fact, the divine Father's goodness is sometimes shown in withholding the things for which his children ask. This truth is well stated by the brilliant author of Antony and Cleopatra in the immortal lines:

We, ignorant of ourselves, Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers Deny us for our good; so find we profit By losing of our prayers.

Finally, not only should Christian fathers and mothers pray in the home, but all Christians should pray, and it is most helpful when they follow the habit of frequent private or secret prayer. It will help to keep them in right paths, and to keep the evil one out of their hearts and from their doors. Cowper no doubt expressed the truth when he said:

And Satan trembles when he sees The weakest saint upon his knees.

What a blessed thought that the humble prayer of the humblest child of God can move the arm that upholds the universe! We may not be able to explain its philosophy; but neither can the scientest explain how the smallest particle of matter can exert an influence over the remotest body in the material universe, yet we have no difficulty in accepting and believing the latter fact. O weary and fainting child of God, forget not to pray; and "when thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret, and thy Father who seeth in secret shall recompense thee." (Matt. 6: 6.)

The Length of Prayers.

BY J. C. M'Q.

What I shall say on this subject is intended to apply to public prayer, and not to private or secret prayer. I would like to impress upon our readers the necessity of continuing in secret prayer and of wrestling in prayer all night, as did Jacob. I approve of lengthy prayers in secret and short prayers in public. I have never been able to understand just why people who pray in public will make long prayers when they are neither approved by Jehovah nor pleasing to men. The longest public prayers we find recorded in the Bible would require a very few minutes to repeat them. Most of the prayers that we have recorded are even much briefer than this. As God is the object of our prayers, we should pray in a direct manner to him, which does not require much speaking. David says; "Offer unto God the sacrifice of thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the Most High: and call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me." (Ps. 50: 14, 15.) Our prayers should be sincere and in earnest. Again, David declares: "Hear the right, O Jehovah, attend unto my cry; give ear unto my prayer, that goeth not out of feigned lips." (Ps. 17: 21.)

The Spirit teaches us to be earnest in prayer, following the example of Epaphras: "Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ Jesus, saluteth you, always striving for you in his prayers, that ye may stand perfect and fully assured in all the will of God." (Col. 4: 12.)

The Lord admonishes his people not to use vain repetitions in their prayers. He says: "And in praying use not vain repetitions, as the Gentiles do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking." (Matt. 6: 7.) In prayer we should be brief, thus respecting the example in public prayer that the Lord has revealed to us in his word. We have an account of two prayers in Luke 18: 11-13. "The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as the rest of men, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week; I give tithes of all that I get. But the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote his breast, saying, God, be thou merciful to me a sinner." We are told that "two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican." I would not say that the Pharisee's prayer was condemned for its length, but for its spirit. The Pharisee was not in the spirit of prayer, He was ready to tell the Lord about all the good things that he had done, not realizing how great a sinner he was and how much he needed the Savior. But the publican, appreciating his unworthiness and realizing his lost and ruined condition, "would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote his breast, saying, God, be thou merciful to me a sinner." Brief as was this prayer, the Spirit says of the publican: "This man went down to his house justified rather than the other." The Spirit then proceeds to state and approve the well-known fact: "For every one that exalteth himself shall be humbled; but he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Humility is the virtue most admired by men, and is approved by Jehovah, and yet the least practiced. In praying, men lose sight of humility and appeal to the audience in lengthy prayers by using well-formed and rhythmical sentences.

We learn that the early disciples did not offer long prayers. When Judas by transgression had fallen and another was to be chosen to succeed him as an apostle, then the disciples asked God to guide them in the selection.

"And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, who knowest the hearts of all men, show of these two the one whom thou hast chosen, to take the place in this ministry and apostleship from which Judas fell away, that he might go to his own place." (Acts 1: 24, 25.) Note the directness of this prayer. They prayed for one thing and not everything. The Bible encourages us to be specific in prayer. God heard and answered this prayer, which is noted for brevity. The prayer recorded in Acts 4: 24-31 is also direct and brief in petition, pleading the Lord to grant his servants boldness in speaking his word. The Lord's prayer that we find recorded in the seventeenth chapter of John is not lengthy; neither is the prayer of Solomon which we find recorded in 1 Kings, eighth chapter. The prayer that the Savior gave his disciples as a model for them to pray is noted for its brevity, yet its breadth of comprehension is remarkable and includes all for which any one should pray. With the understanding that the kingdom is here and is to grow, it embraces all for which Christians should pray to-day.

Prayer is said to embrace invocation, adoration, confession, petition, pleading, dedication, thanksgiving, and blessing. A close analysis of this prayer which Christ taught his disciples to pray will reveal to us that it contains all for which any man should pray. After the invocation, the adoration and dedication, we find that the prayer is free from selfishness in that the disciples are taught not to make petitions first for themselves, but first for the things that pertain to the kingdom of God and his will being done on earth. With the earnest request that every reader read and study carefully this prayer which Christ taught his disciples to pray, we insert it in full here as found recorded in Matt. 6: 9-13: "After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father who art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one."

A Plea for the Girls of Japan.

BY J. M. M'CALEB.

The McQuiddy Printing Company has very generously turned over to me, for the benefit of our Girls' Sewing School in Japan, several hundred copies of "Christ the Light of the World," a book of ten lectures on missions. I request the preaching brethren, or any member of the church, man or woman, who can talk about a book, publicly or privately, to write me for five or ten copies to be sold at a dollar a copy, all of which will go to the building fund. The building is already up and in use, and we must raise three thousand dollars to pay for it, fifteen hundred dollars of which is already in hand. No brother or sister will be under any obligation further than to try to sell the books ordered and return the copies unsold, if any. Wherever I have gone, the brethren have readily taken from five to ten copies on seeing the book and learning of the object of its sale. One sister sold ten copies and asked for ten more. The school now numbers seventy, and Miss Lillie Cypert is their English and Bible teacher. My present address is 2625 Montgomery Street, Louisville, Ky.

Saint John reveals the eventful truth that we shall continue to increase in the likeness of our Lord after death, and that our future advancement in his likeness depends on our previous preparation on earth. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it does not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure"—purifieth himself here in order to be perfectly like to our Lord hereafter.—T. T. Carter.

Making a Success of It. BY I. C. HOSKINS.

"These all with one accord continued steadfastly in prayer." "But prayer was made earnestly of the church unto God for him."

Prayer is the common longing of every heart. We long to live beyond this life. When man is hungry, there is food to appease his hunger. When a man is thirsty, there is water to quench his thirst. When man longs for life beyond death, there is eternal life.

These spiritual aspirations are greatly helped by a live prayer meeting. Just as there is much of thought and a plan back of these excellent "special numbers" of the Gospel Advocate, so it requires thought and planning with prayer to have successful prayer meetings. Select and announce on the previous Sunday the topic, subject, or passage of scripture to be studied, and request the people to study it.

When practicable, the appointment of a number of leaders to serve consecutively helps to give variety of thought, meet the various needs of a church, and to develop speakers.

There should be at least three brethren prepared to speak to the edification of the church. It is a waste of time, detracts from the profitableness of a meeting, and calls attention away from the subject in hand when an apology is made for having "nothing to say." If one has nothing to say, let him say nothing. Have others who are not expected to speak to offer prayer, and have young men who are not accustomed to speaking or praying in public to read passages of scripture previously assigned for this purpose. Thus they will become accustomed to looking at the audience, "thinking on their feet," and soon learn to offer a few comments on the lesson, and the way is open for further growth in the grace of utterance.

The writer has provided himself with slips on which were written appropriate verses, so that if others should appear they might be supplied. Always select the songs before beginning.

The writer has had the great pleasure of helping quite a number of men to become very effective speakers who at first were very reluctant to even read a portion of scripture before an assembly. Encourage young men to read, pray, sing, distribute books, ventilate the room, or any proper thing that will accustom them to the ordeal of appearing in a public way before the church.

There should be interspersed with the reading and prayers several songs. Sometimes a talk or prayer will suggest one of the old, familiar hymns, which may be started without announcing, the people quickly taking it up and appreciating all the more its appropriateness because of its spontaneous expression of feeling; while the announcing, then finding it, and then hunting for the key would spoil its spontaneity.

Frequently reading a hymn, calling attention to the sentiment, a thought therein expressed, or relating the circumstances attending its composition, will render the singing more impressive. The writer has seen audiences weep while singing or during the reading of the Scriptures. Here is variety, distribution of work, room for elasticity, for visiting brethren or others to speak, besides those who have prepared themselves for the meeting. Yet there is a plan that insures a live, wide-awake meeting with instruction and development.

When the hour is consumed, speak a word of encouragement to any sad, bereaved, or faint-hearted, and also to those who have helped to conduct a successful prayer meeting.

The New Testament Example.

BY BEN WEST.

An example of one of the best prayer meetings recorded in the Bible is in the first chapter of Acts. That was quite fruitful, because they had "one accord," and they were patient, waiting and praying ten days. The Holy Spirit took charge of them and they were "Spirit filled," The prayer meetings of a church are looked upon as a very unimportant hour of worship. Few attend these meetings. To have a successful prayer meeting, it should be largely attended. Those who attend should breathe a prayer to God to lead and direct. There should be "one accord." The director of the service should prepare his heart as well as his lesson. At Pentecost there was not a dull moment. The director of the prayer meeting should have something doing every minute. Have variety; have a song, a prayer; have one to exhort, another to read a lesson, and every one to have a memory verse bearing on the lesson for the hour. Do not pray "set prayers." Do not ask for a multitude of things that it is not expected God will give. Every prayer should be thanks to God, a request to God for a specific thing, not everything in general. Ask for things needed and wanted.

The conductor and all present "conduct" the prayer meeting. The "conductor" cannot do it alone. Coöperate with him. When the conductor asks one to do a certain part, let him do it now; do not let it drag. Make the meetings brief, not more than fifty or sixty minutes.

Should Alien Sinners Pray?

BY JARRATT L. SMITH.

What is meant by the word "alien" is, one who is not in covenant relationship with God, who has not obeyed the gospel. Almost every one has prayed sometime to God. But the question is, will God count the prayer of the sinner a condition of pardon, or may he, in answer to prayer, receive the remission of his sins? Many people who are sincere and honest believe they will get the pardon of sins in prayer, and their teachers (who frequently know better) tell them to pray on till they get God in the notion to give them the full pardon of sins. The mistake here is, one does not have to get God in the notion, for he is already willing to save man. The individual needs to get himself in the right attitude toward God. The position that God will grant pardon of sins to the alien sinner through prayer is, to say the least of it, a vulnerable position. Should you hear a sinner praying, do not say to him, "Pray on, brother, pray on; God will pardon you;" neither take the other extreme and tell him to stop, but try to lead him on to a higher plane. Tell him of Paul and Cornelius; that they did not trust in prayer as a condition of pardon, but that it was only a stepping-stone leading them up to the light of the gospel. Peter went to the household of Cornelius and told him "what thou oughtest to do." (Acts 10: 6.) There are no better moral men than Paul and Cornelius, and they did not stop until they gave complete surrender to the gospel.

One thing is sure: if the alien sinner is to get remission of past sins in answer to prayer, the following scriptures are not in harmony with his praying:

Should he pray for repentance? (Acts 17: 30.) Should he pray for light? (2 Cor. 4: 4.) Should he pray for Christ to come and save him? (Matt. 11: 28.) Should he pray for faith? (Rom. 10: 17.) Should he pray for reconciliation? (2 Cor. 5: 18.) Should he pray for God's love? (John 3: 16.) Should he pray for conversion? (Ps. 19: 7.) Should he pray for mercy? (Matt. 5: 7.) Should he pray for a pure heart? (Acts 15: 9.) Should he pray for salvation? (Mark 16: 16.) Should he pray for pardon of sins? (Acts 2: 38.) Should he pray for religion?

(James 1: 27.) Should he pray for the Holy Ghost? (Acts 5: 32.) Should he pray to be born again? (1 Pet. 1: 1-23.) Should he pray to be accepted with God? (Acts 10: 35.)

The Bible teaches that prayer is almost exclusively for the Christian and not for the sinner. After one gets into the kingdom, or church, and not before, is the time to engage in prayer. That God hears not those who stop at prayer, or regard prayer as a condition, please read the following scriptures; Ps. 34; 15, 16; Matt. 7; 22; John 9; 31. The ones who are commanded to pray are the ones who can, in faith, lift up hely hands. (1 Tim. 2; 8.) Sinners themselves do not claim to be able to lift up hely hands. The apostle James (5; 16) says: "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." So prayer cannot be a condition of pardon to the alien sinner, but is a means to lead him up to the gospel light.

Old Testament Prayer.

BY H. LEO BOLES,

Prayer is used in the Bible in two senses—in a simple and narrow sense, and then in a wider and more complex meaning. In the first case it is supplication for benefits, either for one's self or for others. The first may be called a petition and the second an intercession. In the wider signification it may mean an act of worship which will include all of the attitudes of the soul in its approach to God. Prayer springs out of a sense of need on the part of man and in a belief that God is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

The history of prayer begins with the history of worship. In the early days "began men to call upon the name of Jehovah." (Gen. 4: 16.) Abram pitched his tent between Ai and Bethel, "and there he builded an altar unto Jehovah, and called upon the name of Jehovah." (Gen. 12: 8.) Old Testament prayer was simple and direct; there was no mediator between the devout worshiper and Jehovah. Prayer is associated with sacrifice. Altars were built for sacrifices, and the calling upon the name of Jehovah was done at the altar. Frequently the sacrifice is used for the prayer and prayer is used for the sacrifice. The worshiper seemed to have the idea that the gift or sacrifice would help to elicit the desired help from Jehovah. Jacob's vow is an example of this principle; he places himself under obligations to do things for Jehovah, if Jehovah would grant his request.

The great gulf between frail, suffering, dependent man and the mighty Master of the Universe, with his goodness, wisdom, and bountifulness, is bridged by prayer. The Old Testament characters, through prayer, overleaped all distances, removed all barriers, and blended the weakness and dependence of man into one great harmony with the power and goodness of Jehovah by prayer. The patriarchs and prophets who are mentioned in the Old Testament as approaching God in prayer and hearing his voice in reply are in a class far above the masses of the people; they seem to have found a deeper spiritual meaning in the sacrifices, when offered in prayer, than did others. It was not the special dress of robes, miters, ephods, and breastplates, with a peculiar diet, that brought them into favor with Jehovah, but the childlike faith in God that he could be induced to come down from the heavenly heights and give help unto his dependent creatures. The patriarchs and prophets grasped the fundamental truth that every genuine prayer lifts man up toward God and satisfies the desire for his hallowing presence. With them, to pray was to look up to God and pour out before him their wishes, thoughts, sorrows, joys, and hopes. They realized deeply the truth of the words: "Cast thy burden upon Jehovah, and he will sustain thee; he will never suffer the righteous to be moved." (Ps. 55: 22.)

After the return of Israel from captivity, the prayers lost many of the primitive features of the patriarchal type. The law of Moses has remarkably little to say on the subject of prayer, but seems to place the emphasis upon the sacrifices. The priests and worshipers under the law did not stress prayer as accompanying the sacrifices. As a result of this, the sacrifices became formal, ritual, and many of the prophets condemned the preverted use of sacrifices. While the children of Israel were in captivity, separated from the altar at Jerusalem, they could not make the sacrifices according to the law; hence, the emphasis was placed by them upon prayer. This brought about a new epoch in the history of prayer. Persecution drove the nation to seek God more earnestly than before; and as the way of approach to him through the external forms of sacrifices and temple worship were denied them, the spiritual path of prayer was more frequently sought. The prayers of Ezra, Nehemiah, and Daniel are interesting at this point in the history of the children of Israel. They show how large a place prayer came to hold in the lives of the leaders. The language shows how prominent a place the confession of sin had in their prayers.

There are many examples of Old Testament prayer. Abraham was a man of prayer; he frequently called upon the name of Jehovah and interceded for others. His prayer for the preservation of the city of Sodom is an unselfish intercession for others. "Abraham planted a tamarisk tree in Beersheba, and called there on the name of Jehovah, the Everlasting God." (Gen. 21: 33.) Isaac was also a man of prayer. We are told that he went out to meditate in the field at eventide. This meditation has been interpreted to mean communicating with Jehovah. He was a pious man, and all pious men are praying men. Jacob was a man of prayer. He blessed his sons and prayed for Pharaoh. Moses lived in direct communication with God for forty years. He received the law and delivered it unto the children of Israel; he heard their cries and presented them before Jehovah; he stood between the hot anger of Jehovah and the destruction of the children of Israel and made intercessions for them. He seems to have forgotten himself in his deep anxiety for the welfare of the people.

Samuel was a man of prayer. He lived a life of intercession for the children of Israel. After Israel had sinned in asking for a king and their sin had been pointed out to them, they feared Jehovah and asked Samuel to pray for them. Samuel said: "Moreover as for me, far be it from me that I should sin against Jehovah in ceasing to pray for you." (1 Sam, 12: 23.) The psalmist, in speaking of the pious men of God, said: "Moses and Aaron among his priests, and Samuel among them that call upon his name; they called upon Jehovah, and he answered them." (Ps. 99: 6.) Jeremiah, in pleading with wicked Israel, and pointing out how exceedingly wicked they had become, said: "Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind would not be toward this people: cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth." (Jer. 15: 1.) Samuel had learned to pray while a child, and his prayers were mighty before Jehovah. The sword of the triumphing Philistines could not destroy Samuel's prayer. His prayers remained even though the altar and the tabernacle were in profane hands. The voice of lamentation from the men and the bewailing of the women did not seem to reach the heart of Jehovah as did the pious voice of praying Samuel, their intercessor. He felt that for him to cease praying for Israel would be a sin.

Elijah was a man of prayer. "He prayed fervently that it might not rain; and it rained not on the earth for three years and six months. And he prayed again; and the earth gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." (James 5: 17, 18.) The drought in Canaan began at the prayer of Elijah and ended at his fervent prayer for rain.

Elijah stood alone in maintaining the cause of Jehovah against the wickedness of Ahab and Jezebel. He did not do this by marshaling an army, but by his prayers. He stood erect and bold before wicked kings because he was clothed with the power of God. He was a man stern and rugged by nature, a prophet molded for heroic work in evil days, yet he had that tenderness that is to be found only in union with strength. "Elijah was a man of like passions with us," yet he had learned the secret of going to God in prayer for wisdom and strength:

The psalms as found in the Old Testament occupy a very large place in the devotion and praise of the children of Israel. In them we see the loftiest flights attained by the spirit of prayer under the old dispensation; in them we find the intensest craving for pardon and purity and the deepest longing for spiritual blessings; and they show a humility and dependence which is worthy of emulation of the people of God to-day. There are so many prayers expressed in the Psalms that we have not space here to enumerate them.

The prayer of Jabez, as recorded in 1 Chron. 4: 10, stands out as a monument among Old Testament prayers. We know nothing about Jabez, except his prayer; he is not mentioned anywhere else in the Old Testament Scriptures; yet this prayer is sufficient to teach us that he was a man of God. His prayer is expressed in these words: "And Jabez called on the God of Israel, saying, O that thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my border, and that thy hand might be with me, and that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it be not to my sorrow." And the record says that God granted that which he requested; he found favor with Jehovah. We are told that Jabez was more honorable than his brethren. Such a prayer would make one more honorable; it would bring him into honorable mention among the servants of God. We are not told anvthing about his achievements, but his prayer distinguishes him from many others. In many respects his prayer is a model, asking for temporal blessings and protection as well as for spiritual blessings and guidance. This prayer is instructive and shows how near these Old Testament characters approached to perfection in their prayers.

Prayer is the expression of man's longing and yearning for God in time of dire need and an overflowing of joy. It springs from the deepest necessity of human weakness, and is felt to be "the proud prerogative of the child of God." The psalmist sang: "O thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come." We rejoice that we have free access to-day to the throne of God through Jesus Christ, our Lord, in prayer.

A Preacher's Vacation.

BY E. ROCKLIFF.

For two summers the writer has gone South for his vacation and enjoyed it, preaching to Tennesseeans.

This year the Georgian Bay district, with its hills and many islands, invited him to come and to bring his wife and family. What a time we had! One does not know how to begin and tell it. It would need to be illustrated with views of the beauty spots, its fish and its people, to do justice, too. Here is an attempt to achieve the impossible,

We left Detroit on July 21 on board the steamship City of Alpena, which carried us to St. Ignace through some delightful country. From there we took train to Cutler, passing through much country that had been devastated with forest fires. At Cutler the little steamship Bon Ami was waiting to convey us to Little Current, Manatoulin Island, a trip the wife, daughter, and George will not soon forget by reason of mal de mer. We got more than value for our money on this part of the trip, as the Bon Ami had to make a side trip to Kagewan to get some cattle and pigs.

Instead of reaching Little Current at 7 P.M., Thursday night, it was nine; and as the boat steamed into the town we could pick out (by reason of his sandy beard, of which he is very proud) Tom Robertson, the only man on that part of the island we knew. He soon made us acquainted with the rest of the brethren, and we at once proceeded, in spite of the lateness of the hour, to the meetinghouse and held a meeting. The church meets in the college building, and the principal of the college, H. L. Richardson, is the leader. This worthy brother and his wife took us right into their home and their hearts, and we will not soon forget their kindness.

Brother Richardson is running the college with a view to making the islanders good, orderly business men, for it is a commercial college; but he combines Bible teaching with the studies (for he knows the value of its teaching to a busness man), and he is not like a man that cannot do it. Any one seeking a good business education and desiring at the same time a congenial climate in which to study might do much worse than go to Little Current, H. L. Richardson is a man the brotherhood will hear from in the future. He is a great man for home missions, and knows and fellowships some of the folks in the regions beyond. The meeting was small at the first (the cause is but young in the town), but grew in interest as the days went by, until the house was well filled. As visible results, three from the Baptist Church learned the way of the Lord more perfectly and were added, two put on the Lord in his own appointed way, and the church was helped and cheered,

From Little Current we went overland, per Henry Ford (much to Mrs. Rockliff's satisfaction) to Ice Lake. Brother Tom Robertson and his wife and family were our hosts here, and they were good to us. We had heard so much of this part of the island and were acquainted with a number of the brethren, so did not feel at all strange. Brother Tom Robertson and Brother Andrew Archibald were "auld freens" and converts of the late James Anderson, evangelist well known and dear to many Scots and English folks, too, and came from Fauldhouse. good brethren at Ice Lake had erected a large tent at Gore Bay and there arranged for the meeting. Some preaching has been done in that place, but as yet no church has been planted there, and from what happened it almost looks as if some one was determined to stop such a proceeding. After two nights of preaching, the tent ropes were all cut and the tent rendered useless by some one whose name and address are not known. The brethren then decided to change the place of meeting to Ice Lake, and the attendance proved the wisdom of this step. There was but one break in the meeting, when we spent one Sunday night at Gordon, preaching to a full schoolhouse, and the interest was fine throughout. Two who had wandered away from the fold were restored and two were baptized at Ice Lake. The folks at neither of the places were soothed or satisfied, for none slept during the sermon, and they all asked us to come back. They treated us so well that we will not be hard to persuade (if we can go overland, Mrs. Rockliff and daughter say). We left Kagewan on the steamship Caribou on August 21, accompanied by Tom Robertson and his son, Andrew, having had the time of our lives. At Little Current, Sister Richardson and her two sisters joined us. It is a long, rough sail in stormy weather from Kagewan to Owen Sound, but In spite of little drawbacks like mal de mer and the stench of so many fish, cattle, sheep, and pigs on board ship, having put our hands to the plow, we turned not back.

At Owen Sound, Dr. O. H. Tallman, chiropractic physician and preacher, met us with his automobile and took us home to dinner. From there we went to Toronto by rail, and next morning on to Niagara to see the Falls, and from the Falls to Buffalo. Here we said good-by to Tom and Andy and boarded the big steamer Detroit III., and it is here on board the scribe found time for this writing. We came back to Detroit refreshed and better fit for the work we left for a spell.

Oakman, September 19 .- Our meeting at Millport was one of the best of the year. Thirty-four erring members made confession of wrongdoing and four were baptized. I shall, the Lord willing, begin another meeting at New Hope, near Oakman, next Lord's day. We have some good brethren here.-A. D. Dies.

Athens, Route 1, September 18.— I closed a mission meeting at the Sardis Springs Schoolhouse last night. Fourteen were baptized, three returned to their "first love," and two came from the Baptists who said they were satisfied that they had met the requirements of the Lord in baptism. The house would not hold the crowd at any service. The people were interested in the study of the Bible, and the seed sown will later bring forth fruit. Last night a Mormon undertook to prove that the man we had selected to debate with them had backed down, but we showed the audience how Mr. Callis had so worded Brother Hall's affirmative proposition that he knew we would not accept it. There are five or six of them here, and we are making it pretty warm for We have had printed a thousand circulars exposing their hypocrisy and deception. I am determined, by the help of God, to trail them until they will have to seek other fields. These are days that try the hearts of men, and one has to keep close to One of the hardest obstacles to overcome is the claim that there are hypocrites in the church. That is true; but it is better to live here with them a while than be cast into outer darkness to live with them through eternity.-John Hayes.

Romantic Story of Southd's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos-listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, nrged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, dura-bility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has surung up in the South for EzWear shoes. sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. MeAlister.

Hugh McAlister, son of J. W. McAlister, departed this life on April 13, 1919, leaving a wife and three children to fight the battles of life without the strong arm of husband and father on which to lean. Hugh was an exceptionally fine young man, a faithful husband, devoted father, and a consecrated member of the church of Christ. He was song leader in the Wells Hill congregation, of Lincoln County, Tenn., and is greatly missed by that church. The death of this young man, at the age of thirty, touches me deeply, not only because of his wife and children and his service to the church, but also because he was the son of J. W. McAlister, my lifelong friend. Billie McAlister and I were boys together, and for many years have been fighting side by side in the ranks of Prince Immanuel. My heart goes out to this man of God and his blessed companion in the loss of their son, of whom they were justly proud. But such are the trials and was an exceptionally fine young man, ly proud. But such are the trials and sorrows of this life, which will fit and train us for better things on the other side, if we accept them in the right spirit. May God's richest blessings rest upon Hugh's sorrowing wife and orphaned children. F. W. SMITH.

Alexander.

James S. Alexander was born on September 10, 1851, and died on July 24, 1919; aged sixty-seven years, ten months, and fourteen days. He obeyed the gospel in 1872; was baptized by Brother William Todd at Burnett's Chapel, in Davidson County. He married three times. Children only by the first wife, two sons and four daughters, together with the last wife, survive his death. He was a good man, devoted to his family and a good man, devoted to his family and a good man, devoted to his family and to the church of God. His home was the preacher's home while conducting meetings in his neighborhood. He and Brother George Smith were the principal factors in establishing the congregation at Berea. While I was holding a meeting at Troy in the old holding a meeting at Troy in the old courthouse, they came for me to go to No. 7 District and hold a meeting. They secured the use of the schoolhouse for that one meeting and no more. Then we began under a brush arbor, and then worshiped in a tent until 1908, when a house was built and the congregation set in order. He quietly sleeps in the Berea Cemetery beside his first wife and mother of his children, where they both wanted to be buried. The writer, assisted by Brother Eph. Smith, conducted the funeral at Berea in the presence of a large, solemn congregation, and then his body was laid in the cold grave to await the resurrection morn, when all shall rise and be tion morn, when all shall rise and be judged by a just and impartial Judge. He was my friend.

Daniel

On the first day of August death entered the home of our beloved Brother H. R. (Rice) Daniel and took therefrom his youngest daughter, Marie. She was taken ill of typhoid fever while attending the Normal at Bowling Green, Ky. She was carried thence to her home, near Elkton, and a hard fight was made to save her life; but she had had the "flu" and had studied hard, and was not able to resist the onslaught of the dread disease. Marie was twenty-two years old, and was a general favorite at home and in every circle of her acquaintance. She was a faithful Christian and an active church worker. She excelled in music and singing, and gladly used these accomplishments for the entertainment of others in the home and elsewhere, and the latter for the maje of field. She ments for the entertainment of others in the home and elsewhere, and the latter for the praise of God. She passed away while a protracted meeting was in progress at her home church, Pleasant Grove, conducted by the writer. He spoke in tribute to her memory at her burial in the beautiful Ellton Camptons. tiful Elkton Cemetery. She leaves to mourn their loss a father and mother, mourn their loss a father and mother, three sisters, and a host of near relatives and friends. These mourn not as those that have no hope. They confidently expect to meet her in the blessed home to which she has preceded them. Cheer up, sad hearts. "It is only a few short years" when you will all be with your loved one where there will be no more death nor sad partings to grieve you.

Clifford Foster Johnson was born in Alabama on February 15, 1885. He was married to Arnette Strickland, in Pensacola, Fla., on April 19, 1908, where he died of influenza on October 11, 1918. He was a member of the church of Christ ten years. In his death the cause of Christ in Pensacola has given up a loyal worker, for Brother Johnson was a teacher of the word both publicly and privately. the word both publicly and privately. He had considerable natural ability in He had considerable natural ability in logic and illustration, by means of which he could indelibly impress Bible truths upon the minds of those who heard him, often more successfully than preachers of more educational acquirements than he had. The writer has often heard him in personal conversation with others, when he would quote a number of passages of scripture from which he would deduct invincible logical conclusions on vital religious subjects. His active service in public with the "East Side" congregation in Pensacola was a great factor in sustaining that church, and I am sure every appreciative member there will miss preciative member there will miss him. When I lived there, he and I were devoted friends and loved each other dearly, and this love did not cease when I moved to Winston-Salem, N. C.; so we communicated by letter till his death, my last letter reaching his home after he had died. I would comfort Sister Johnson, and pray that she may ever live such a life as God requires in order that she may may may be a such a life as God requires in order that she may meet him again in glory.

Roberson.

Roberson.

In the death of Brother John Henry Roberson the church and community at Ostella, Tenn., sustained a very great loss; yet into our sadness there beams a gleam of happy anticipation that we shall again blend our voices with his in praise to Him who "shall wipe all tears away." Brother Roberson was born on August 20, 1852, and died on June 14, 1919. He was married to Hettie Martha Williams on July 5, 1882, to which union were born two sons. He obeyed the gospel in early life and has ever been faithful, "steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." He was one who read the Bible, believed the Bible, and committed his soul to God's keeping in well-doing. The community has indeed lost a great and good citizen; the church, a stanch supporter; his invalid wife, a devoted husband; and his sons, a kind and affectionate father. Brother Berry London and Dr. Hardison spoke words of comfort and encouragement to the bereaved ones. While they could not say he was perfect, they, like all who knew and loved him, classed him with "faithful Abraham." After the services, his remains were laid to rest in Beechwood Cemetery, at Cornersville. Although there is a vacancy in the home, the church, and the community which In the death of Brother John Henry there is a vacancy in the home, the church, and the community which never can be filled, we would not for-get his example of a true Christian life and endeavor to make our lives like his: we would some a the like his; we would sorrow not as those who have no hope, for he leaves a legacy of a life beautifully lived in service to God. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Choate.

While engaged in a meeting at Mount Pleasant, Tenn., last August, I went out in the country to see Elvie Choate, who was very ill with typhoid fever. I had known him since he was a small boy, and was interested in him. I hoped then for his recovery, although the family seemed very despondent. The end came on September 5, and the following day, in the midst of a large gathering of sorrowing relatives and friends, he was buried at the Theta Comptons. ied at the Theta Cemetery. Only a few weeks more would have brought him to the age of twenty—just a young man in the strength and hope and buoyancy of life. He was born on October 11, 1898. His parents do not claim for Elvie perfection, for at his age character is not fully established; but he was growing into the moral stature of Christian manhood. Elvie was baptized into Christ in July, 1916, and rarely failed to attend the Sunday service. His mother testifies as follows: "He was a very obedient child, and mighty thoughtful and anxious about me in my afflictions. I think he was conscious of his condition. Often, when I would go to his bed, he would say: 'God bless you, mamma.' He called his father to him, too, and said: 'God bless you, papa.' When he realized his critical condiied at the Theta Cemetery.

Opening of a New House of Worship at Naish Spring, W. Va.

BY A. A. BUNNER.

The new church house belonging to the church of Christ at Naish Spring, Pleasant County, W. Va., will, God willing, be dedicated on the fourth Lord's day in September. Naish Spring is located on the waters of Horseneck, three miles from Willow Island. All members of the church of Christ and the public in general are cordially invited to attend these services and on Lord's day bring their baskets well filled with good things to eat to help feed the crowd. Those who attend from the Ohio side of the river, in automobiles, buggies, and on horseback, should cross the Ohio River at Willow Island; and all who come on the trains on the Ohio River Railroad will get off the train at Willow Island, and they will be met at the station with conveyances and conveyed to and from the place of meeting. All trains from Thursday evening until 10 A.M. on Lord's day will be met with automobiles and other public conveyances. Do not forget to bring your pocketbooks with ready cash in them, as cash will be one of the needful things on this occasion.

From Friday until Lord's day there will be three services each day-forenoon, afternoon, and night. These meetings are also special meetings for all of the elders of the church of Christ who can attend, and elders who cannot be in attendance are kindly requested to send us a liberal contribution from their respective congregations to aid us in liquidating the debt on our church house. Our new house will cost somewhere in the neighborhood of twenty-five hundred dollars, the best we can do.

All are invited to come up with us to the help of the Lord against the mighty. Elder T. Q. Martin, of Saint Marys, W. Va., and Fred L. Rowe, of Cincinnati, Ohio, are expected to do the preaching on Lord's day.

All letters and contributions should be sent to Noah Brothers, Willow, W. Va., Route 1, Box 31.

The Time for Sowing.

BY T. F. COLVIN.

The harvest of the year is here. We are selecting the best seed for another year's planting or sowing. Wisdom directs such, and the successful farmer does not fail its heedings. But with a bounteous harvest and a desire for future success, we should not be content with success in a material way only. The feast of the harvest under the Jewish law was as necessary to observe as any other. Their scope of action was among their own race. Ours is the entire world. As we enjoy the fruitage of the year's labors, let us think of a spiritual sowing and reaping. Eternity is to be met, and how happy it will be to gather golden sheaves into the harvest eternal! Human souls everywhere are the sheaves to be brought safe into the judgment. From time to time you have been apprised of the work which has been undertaken here in Washington, D. C. For nearly a year we have been writing and working in every conceivable way to put before the brotherhood the fact that the building of a house in Washington for the church of Christ is being attempted. General contributions at various times have been called for. Many have responded most liberally, but a general contribution in the true sense has not yet been made. We are appealing to every reader and every contributor to join in a grand campaign which we hope will be made final. Every loyal disciple is urged to help make the first Lord's day in October a day when a general contribution will be made for this work. You are praying for this work, and have been most faithful, and to complete the task we are asking you to join us with a common spirit and purpose to not quit until it is done. Your help is needed, wherever you are. Our valiant soldier boys have come home, and we have given them a most royal welcome. Many of them, sooner or later, will be coming to Washington to accept places in the government service. Will you not help provide a place of worship for them? Future generations will need such privileges. Many souls can be saved eternally through your sowing or giving at the present time. There is no greater call before the brotherhood to-day than this. As this city is in closest touch with the entire nation, so would a strong congregation in this city be most widely felt in building up the church of Christ in this nation. Our membership is, and will continue to be, from all the States. A common interest can be felt by all. Again let me urge every reader to engage in this campaign for a general contribution on the day set, and let the task go on to completion. Let 1919 go down in history as being the year when the Washington work was put on its feet permanently. Your efforts and help will be most heartily appreciated by every contributor, for it is a work of all. Will you purpose in your heart to help and thereby sow seed that will yield a harvest to be met at the judgment? We sincerely ask you to cooperate with us to the end.

A Visit to Canada.

BY J. L. HINES.

On the morning of August 23 J boarded the train for Toronto, Ontario, Canada, which is one hundred and fourteen miles south of Meaford, for the purpose of laying before the churches of that city the New Testament plan for missionary work and coöperation. I was met by Brother Harry Jackson, evangelist of Fern Avenue Church, and escorted to his home, where I made my home while in the city; and truly his home is an ideal home. On Lord's-day morning, August 24, Brother Linn Whitelaw called for me and took me to the Bathurst Street church house, where I was expected to preach that morning and evening; also Fern Avenue Church sent a delegation of three to hear me and take anything good that I had to say back to their congregation. The Sunday school assembled at a quarter before ten o'clock and spent about an hour in the study of God's word, after which the writer made a short talk to the school on "Social Responsibility." Their manner of conducting a Sunday school is ideal. The school was well attended. At eleven o'clock, as is the custom of many of the Canadian churches, they came together for reading and communion services, after which the writer was invited to preach. My subject was "God's Missionary Society and Its Operation." I showed from Eph. 3 that the church is God's missionary society, through which he has ordained that the world should know the gospel; that the local church established after the New Testament order has organs sufficient for the life of it, is independent of all other local churches, and has no right to dictate to any other; and that Jesus Christ is the head of every local congregation. The operation of the church or society was shown from such scriptures as the following: Acts 13: 1-3; 1 Cor. 16: 1-5; Acts 14: 21-28; 2 Cor. 9: 1-6; Phil. 4: 8-20. An appeal was made to the church to take the matter up at once and raise the funds, select an evangelist, and send him out to do missionary work in and around Toronto, and if one church could not do this, then cooperate with other churches in the city or elsewhere; but these churches must not bind themselves together into a separate organization and take authority out of the hands of the local church. I preached at seven o'clock in the evening on "The Commission." On Wednesday evening the same plans were laid before the East Toronto Church. Before I left the city all of these churches said they would put the matter before their respective congregations at their next business meeting, and they felt sure that the plans would be pushed through to operation.

I found many bright lights in the Toronto churches. They are sound in essentials, though they are not one in custom. Neither do they all carry on their work alike, which is not expected by any except those who are novices in the Scriptures. The Toronto churches have their faults, and all others have theirs; but we are all children of God, in the same house, and should bear with one another in love, and let love continue in the Christian body. There is too much division, strife, backbiting, "fussing," hairsplitting, arguing about questions to no profit, and contending for customs and orders that are foreign to the spirit of Christianity. Brethren, let us get together, pull together, run together, fight together, bear with one another, be tender and affectionate one to another, and arise in the strength of Jehovah and preach the unsearchable riches of the Christ.

I leave to-morrow (September 13) for Beamsville, where I am expected to preach Sunday; Monday, at Jordan; Tuesday, at Smithville; Wednesday, at Tinturn; and Thursday, at St. Catherine. Returning Friday, I will leave again Saturday for Revanna, where I am to address a Baptist assembly on Sunday. September 21. I hope to do much good there. Brethren, pray for me, and let us all pray for the Lord to send more workers into this field; for the harvest is ripe, but the laborers are few.

BITRO · PHOSPHATE IS GOOD FOR THIN NERVOUS PEOPLE

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Frederick S. Kolle, M. D., Editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says that weak, nervous people who want increased weight, strength and nerve-force, should take a 5-grain tablet of Bitro-Phosphate just before or during each meat.

Rheumatism and Indigestion.

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between indigestion and rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for dyspepsia and indigestion, relieves rheumatism and the rheumatoid diseases, such as gout, sciatica, neuralgia, and nervous headache. All of these diseases are probably related and all are probably due, in whole or in part, to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection:

In this connection:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, it used continuously for a reasonable time, it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, attimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, alding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant, of Savannah, writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consuited a number of our best local physicians; went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there; and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living, when I began to use Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes, of Virginia, writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. I am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam, of South Carolina, writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism, and, after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water, was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter, of Virginia, writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged Joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

"Baptists vs. Campbellites." No. 8. BY M. S. MASON.

Mr. Bandy now makes an effort to answer the arguments which contenders for truth advance to disprove his position. These will now be carefully examined, as were the proofs (?) he offered to sustain it.

Matt. 6: 10. He says this is not the kingdom of our proposition, but the Father's kingdom, that which will come as recorded in 1 Cor. 15: 24. How does he know it is? There is nothing to prove it. It is merely his ipse dixit. While there is nothing to prove his contention, there are several proofs that this kingdom is the kingdom of our proposition. First, Jesus says to his disciples: "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." (Luke 12: 32.) Now. from the expression in Matt. 6: 10, "thy kingdom," it must be so that it belonged to the Father. But as Jesus said he was to give it to the disciples, why is it not reasonable to believe that the kingdom set up on Pentecost was the one transferred and the one that is mentioned in Matt. 6: 10 as belonging to the Father? Second, the prophecy in Dan. 7: 14 tells us that Christ was to receive of the Ancient of Days a kingdom, which was fulfilled at his ascension. (Acts 1: If that were not the kingdom 9.) spoken of in Matt. 6: 10 as "thy kingdom," now given to Christ, why not? Third, in 1 Cor. 15: 24 the kingdom was given back to God. Then, it came from God. When did it come? If it did not come after the prayer of Matt. 6: 10, why? And why is it not reasonable to believe that Jesus had not yet received the Father's kingdom, that in the future he was to receive it (which he did), and at the consummation of all things after his present reign he shall return the kingdom to the Father, from whom he received it?

Matt. 21: 43. The succeeding comment seems to be inapplicable to Mr. Bandy's case; but he does make a good exegesis of the passage, in which he shows that God's reign, or kingdom, was to be taken from the Jews and an economy established which would impartially embrace both Jews and Gentiles, or "should be given to another." We use this passage to show that this had not taken place, or the transfer had not been made, in Matt. 21, while Mr. Bandy and his brethren contend that it had already been established in Matt. 10. Mr. Bandy seems to get "across the fence" and makes nothing of his reference to the passage; but suffice it to say the time when this reign was taken from the Jews and given to another is the point at issue. Jesus said it would be in Matt. 21; Mr.

Bandy says it had already been done in Matt. 10.

Mark 9: 1. Mr. Bandy says this does not mean that the kingdom had not come, but it had not come with power. The coming with power was the future event. Before we call attention to the weakness of his argument, let us repeat that argument in all its connection as contenders for the truth present it and see its pungency. The kingdom was to come with power. (Mark 9: 1.) The power was to come with the Holy Ghost. (Acts 1: 8.) The Holy Ghost came on the first Pentecost after the resurrection. (Acts 2: 4.) Since the kingdom was to come with power, and the power came with the Holy Ghost, and the Holy Ghost came on Pentecost, then the power came on Pentecost. But as the kingdom came with the power, then the kingdom came on Pentecost. That proves to me absolutely the establishment of the kingdom at the place and time of our contention. But to Mr. Bandy's argument. He admits that the kingdom he defends is without power, as he says the kingdom did not come with power until that time. So, if his kingdom has no power, of what account is it? He has admitted that the only kingdom which has power is the one for which we contend. Note that it does not say "with greater power," as Mr. Bandy would infer, but "with power," So the kingdom that preceded the Pentecost kingdom was absolutely powerless.

Mr. Bandy now enters on a line of argument to prove that the church of which Jesus spoke in Matt. 16: 18 is a Missionary Baptist Church. Also, he says that not only did this church start as a Missionary Baptist Church, but has so continued these eighteen hundred years. Now, at the very outset, we must ask Mr. Bandy some questions about this matter. If this dogmatical Baptist ipse dixit is correct, why, in so many references to the church, was it never called "the Missionary Baptist Church?" When Paul said, in Rom. 16: 16, "The churches of Christ salute you," why did he not choose that excellent opportunity to say, "The Missionary Baptist Churches salute you?" By what course of reasoning can we make the name "Missionary Baptist Church" proper from the language of Matt. 16: 18? Jesus calls it "my church." That equals Christ's church. An equivalent expression for "the horse's mane" is "the mane of the horse." So an equivalent expression for "Christ's church" is "the church of Christ." Would not that deduction be more in keeping with the evidence? I certainly think so. Again, if the church so continued a Missionary Baptist Church eighteen hundred years, why do Baptist historians give us evidence absolutely against it? Mr. Benedict says (page 304, "General History"): "The first regularly organized Baptist Church of which we possess any account is dated from 1607, and was formed in London by a Mr. Smyth, who had been a clergyman in the Church of England. It was formed on the principles of General Baptists." Notice, this is almost sixteen hundred years too late for the New Testament church, and was not even the Missionary Baptist Church then. J. M. Brandon, in commenting on Orchard's "History of Baptists." calls attention to the fact that he nowhere calls the church "the Baptist Church" or its members "Baptists." Mr. Vedder, on page 229, tells of the origin of the mission movement among Baptists, and on page 228 says: "From that time the Baptists of the United States became divided into two parties-antimission and missionary Baptists." So Missionary Baptists, instead of dating from the year 30, as Mr. Bandy contends, date from 1832. Therefore, Baptists of the Missionary variety have continued for not quite one hundred years instead of eighteen hundred.

Prayer.

BY C. PETTY,

The subject of prayer is one that is taught all through the patriarchal, Jewish, and Christian dispensations, and has been practiced by men of God all down these ages. See Abraham (Gen. 18: 28), Jacob (Gen. 32; 9), David (2 Sam. 7: 18), Daniel (Dan. 9: 3). David said, "Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray" (Ps. 55: 17); Paul exhorted the Thessalonian Christians to pray without ceasing; and what was addressed to them was addressed to all Christians for all time. Paul says: "I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting." (1 Tim. 2: 8.) Here we learn what spirit we are to have when we pray, for it is to be "without wrath," in love, and without doubt. Then it is in faith.

We are told to "confess our faults one to another, and pray one for another." (James 5: 16.) Thus it is taught that Christians are to pray one for another, and it should console the Christian to know that some one is praying for him in his struggles and trials through life to be faithful till the fight is over and the crown is won. We all feel this great need every day we live-not only to pray ourselves, but the thought that some one is praying for us to be faithful to the end is a great consolation. We are not only to pray for ourselves as Christians, but we are to pray for "them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." (Matt. 5: 44.)

This is the great lesson the Savior taught, and he taught nothing that he did not live up to. (See Luke 23: 34.)

No Christian can live a life of faith, a life of trust, without being prayerful; and while it is true that we must be prayerful, we must also work for our prayers to be answered-that is, when we pray for the gospel to be preached everywhere that souls may be saved, we must give of our means that the prayer may be answered, for there is no use praying for a thing unless we work for its fulfillment.

We have some prayers of great men that were heard, but not answered. For instance, Moses prayed for the Lord to let him go over and "see the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain, and Lebanon. But the Lord was wroth with me for your sakes, and would not hear me: and the Lord said unto me, Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter." (Deut. 3: 25, 26.) In 2 Cor. 12 we have an account of Paul's praying three times that the thorn in the flesh might depart from him; but the Lord told Paul, "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness "-that is, "Paul, you suit me better with that thorn in the flesh than you would if it were out." In 1 Kings 18: 42, 43 we have an account of Elijah's going up to the top of Carmel, where he cast himself down upon the earth and put his face between his knees and prayed until his servant went and looked toward the sea seven times. Then the rain came in answer to Elijah's prayer, when there had been no rain for three years and six months. In 2 Kings 20 we have the prayer of Hezekiah that was answered when Isaiah was sent to tell Hezekiah to "set thine house in order; for thou shalt die. and not live. Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the Lord; " and the Lord said to Isaiah: "Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people, Thus saith the Lord, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears. . . And I will add unto thy days fifteen years."

Thus we see from these examples of prayers that were not answered and some that were answered that it is best sometimes for the prayer not to be answered and sometimes it is best for them to be answered, or it would not be that way. But the Lord has promised to supply all our needs, and he will surely do that if we remain faithful to him; and it is so sweet, before we lie down to rest at night, to read a lesson in our Father's Book and then ask his kind watch care and protection in Christ's name over us while we rest.

Mission Work.

BY W. J. JOHNSON.

Each congregation is a complete organization within itself and can be used by our Lord just to the extent that its members are interested in the salvation of souls. Their concern about souls should not be confined to their own community, but should be extended to other places. As they learn more about the needs in destitute places, their interest will be increased and greater progress will be made in sending messengers to those places with the word unmixed with doctrines and traditions of men. Greater opportunities of giving some excellent lessons do not present themselves to the elders, teachers, and preachers than those now presented. So they should study the conditions more thoroughly and do more systematic work than has been done. An individual of a congregation can do an excellent work for our Lord by insisting that a number of others cooperate with him in some work he has chosen to assist, and collect the promised amount to send to the selected work each month. This will produce in the hearts of the other members a desire to have fellowship, and finally the whole church will be active as God's missionary society.

Some are using tongue and pen in opposing mission work in foreign countries, though the commission is: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." This command should stir every one to act, since it is given by the One who redeemed us. How much do you appreciate your redemption? Are you selfish, or are you cheerfully giving yourself to the service of Him who purchased you with his own blood?

In our own country there are two great mission fields. In one of them I have been laboring for eight years without much assistance from brethren elsewhere. It has become necessary for me to labor with my own hands to support my family. Appeals to the brethren have not been made by me for my support. Though at times everything looks gloomy, yet our Lord provides as he promised in Matt. 6. I have heard some speak of their sacrifice to preach, when they were devoting their time among established churches, and have doubted whether any of us ever touched more than the border of sacrifice when compared with the hardships of the early disciples.

Now, brethren, it becomes necessary for us to make an appeal to you for assistance to erect a meetinghouse at Amite, La., and we feel that you are able to send us a gift for this work. If we could do this work without your help, we would not beg you A Voice From Sioux City, Iowa, says

You cannot mistake the words of Mr. W. W. Northrup, of 908 Fourth Street, Sioux City, Iowa. He is enthusiastic about his present health and the merits of PE-RU-NA and wants everyone to know it. Here is a recent letter from him:—

"PERU-NA is worth its weight in gold and then some. I used to think it only a woman's remedy but have changed my mind. I had a cough, especially in the morning. After using half a bottle of PE-RU-NA was much better. I would cough up chunks of phlegm and mucus, my eyes itched and bothered me. Judging from the symptoms given in your almanac it was catarrh. My stomach is in much better condition since using your medicine."

112 Hens-1800 Eggs

Mrs. Harper writes: "I wouldn't be without 'TWO for ONE' for the world. My 112 hens layed 1,800 eggs in December." Mrs. Calman writes: "Your tonic is just what I needed for my flock; I never got so many eggs." Mrs. Butler writes: "Please send me another box of 'TWO for ONE.' I am now getting 119 eggs instead of 11." All poultry owners can do as well. Now is the time to insure yourself an ample egg supply for the coming winter. Eggs will sell at 75 cents to $1 a dozon. Give your hens "TWO for ONE," the scientific (onic composed of every beneficial ingredient known to poultry experts. It doubles your egg supply and increases your profits. It has produced more eggs and healthier chickens for others than anything known, and it will do the same for you.

Send $1 to the Kinsella Company, 2926 Le Moyne Bullding, Chicago, for a trial box of this wonderful tonic, or $2 for a full season's supply. Make every chicken you own a greater money maker. Your order will entitle you to a free entry in our big $5,000 egg-laying contest which starts September 1. Double your egg supply and win a big cash prize besides. If you have ten hens, you have as good a chance as the owner of one thousand. Order to-day and get full particulars of contest which are inclosed in every box of "TWO for ONE."

"Are There Few That Be Saved?" BY D. S. LIGON.

Jesus journeyed through the country, in cities and villages, teaching the people concerning the kingdom of heaven and the salvation of the world. He taught them that all must repent or perish (Luke 13: 3), and that their hearts must be pure to see God (Matt. 5: 8.) With all of the Master's teaching before them, one asked the Savior this question: "Lord, are there few that be saved?" (Luke 13: 23.) I believe it would be well for all to consider this question at this time, for the multitudes of this day are not giving much thought as to whether they be saved or lost.

"Are there few that be saved?" comes ringing down the ages and falls upon the ears of all of Adam's fallen posterity, and it should cause serious thought as to "who shall be able to stand" in that day when the Lord shall come in the glory of his Father to reward every one according to his works. (Matt. 16: 27.) Death and the judgment are appointments of the Lord Almighty (Heb. 9: 27); the day is set for this judgment to take place (Acts 17: 31); and be it remembered that there is no one who can escape appearing before the judgment seat of Christ (2 Cor. 5: 10) in that great and awful day when the books shall be opened and all men shall be judged out of the things written in the books according to their works (Rev. 20: 12, 13).

Why should it be suspected that "few be saved," when Jesus came and died for all men? While Jesus was sent into the world to save sinners, it is equally true that all sinners are required to hear and believe in Jesus, and without faith in the Christ no one can be saved. Many, perhaps, will be lost because they imagine they will be saved simply by virtue of the fact that Christ came to save, and expect to be saved without an effort upon their part. this is a most woeful mistake. Savior, in answer to the one asking the question, immediately said: "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able." The one who thinks that entering in at the strait gate will be without an effort upon the part of the lost should remember that the Lord said: "Strive to enter in," The word "strive" here is from the Greek "agonizomai," and means here to contend or struggle with difficulties which would hinder one's entering the gate. It carries the idea of a strong endeavor and strenuous effort. But this word is not only used to express the necessity of making an effort to enter and get into the way that leads to life, but it is used in connection with the Christian's life as he battles against the wiles of the devil in order that he may remain in the way that leads to glory. This same word is used by Paul when he says, "I have fought a good fight," and when he exhorts the brethren to "fight the good fight of faith." This same thought is in the word "epagonizomai," found in Jude 3, where the Christian is instructed to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints."

Brethren, if you are deceived on this matter and think that heaven can be gained without an effort upon your part, get this idea out of your minds and walk out in the open arena of life and begin, with much courage, the "good fight of faith." Many good brethren move away from a congregation into a community or town where there is none, but never strive to have the gospel preached and to establish the cause there. If brethren, when they move into a new place. would do as the early disciples did when they were scattered over the land because of persecution-go "everywhere preaching the word "-they would show some disposition to strive to enter into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. But many times brethren seem to think, because they do not live near the meetinghouse or because there is no congregation near them, that they are excused from observing "all things whatsoever the Lord has commanded." Hence, they do not strive much, if any, and never think of contending earnestly for the faith where they live. If brethren who move where there is no congregation of disciples were disposed to "fight the good fight of faith" and "earnestly contend for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints," they would make some effort to have the gospel preached and to establish the cause where they live,

Brethren, hear what the Lord says: "Many will seek to enter in, and shall not be able." I am made to wonder why and when this is. It is when he once has risen up and "shut the door." Solemn thought! The door is closed, and there they stand without, knocking and crying: "Lord, Lord, open unto us." This is when some will seek to enter and shall not be able. Then they that are without the closed door will be greatly surprised that they have been shut out of the kingdom. Yes, they will say: "We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets." Yes, the Master says: "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?" Then will come that awful denunciation: "Depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

It may be, also, that some will come up at that great day and the door will be closed, but they will knock and say: "Lord, let us in. Did not I become a member of the church several years ago? Was not I baptized for the remission of sins? Have I not done many things in thy name?" Then the Lord will answer: "When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die."

This was indeed a very fine meeting. I have promised to hold another meeting for them next August. Arrangements had been made for Brother Pullias to be with the church here in a series of meetings in Novemher, but owing to his recent serious illness the engagement had to be called off. So our plans now are that Brother Larimore will be here and begin a meeting on the first Lord's day in October, which we look forward to with much pleasure and expectation. M

"Teaching Them" in the Sunday School.

It is the plea of the disciples with whom I stand identified that all of our acts of service and worship in the church are authorized by the word of God. We have never forsaken the slogan adopted by the Campbells which has gone around the world: "Where the Scriptures speak, we speak: where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent." To state the matter still more explicitly, it is our purpose to do the things which are taught either by precept or example in the New Testament. Notwithstanding the simplicity of every act and the clearness with which each is taught, there is not a single item of our work and worship but what has been severely criticized at some time or other. The criticism does not always come from the world or from sectarian strongholds; not infrequently it comes from our own membership, and sometimes in words of sharp rebuke. It has been my observation, too, that the criticism is usually aimed at the abuses of the thing rather than at the thing itself. This was just as true in apostolic times as it is to-day.

The New Testament shows that the sacred institution referred to as the Lord's Supper was abused. Paul wrote to the church at Corinth: "When therefore ye assemble yourselves together, it is not possible to eat the Lord's Supper: for in your eating each one taketh before other his own supper; and one is hungry, and another is drunken. What, have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the church of God, and put them to shame that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you? In this I praise you not." (1 Cor. 11: 20-22.) This passage indicates that this memorial feast had been grossly abused. It had been converted into a drunken orgy. Nor was this abuse of the Lord's Supper confined to the apostolic period. History shows that time and again this sacred institution has been wrested from its true position in the church. Its most solemn meanings have been mocked and disregarded. It has been offered as a sacrament at the marriage altar and has even been proposed as a sacrifice for the souls of men after they are dead.

Again, that part of our worship that is designated by the word "fellowship," and which we usually refer to as "taking up the contribution," was abused. Turning to Acts 6: 1, we read: "Now in these days, when the number of the disciples was multiplying, there arose a murmuring of the Grecian Jews against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration." Now this indicates that a very serious mistake was being made in regard to the contribution, which the apostles promptly corrected.

In like manner we find to-day that the part of our worship which the New Testament calls "teaching" and we call the "Sunday school" is often abused and changed from its rightful purpose. Sometimes it is conducted and recognized as a factor separate and apart from the church. bearing all the earmarks of a different organization. Sometimes this part of the work lacks efficiency. It is conducted in a loose, slipshod way or is reduced to a mere formality. What should be done with the Sunday school under such conditions? What did Paul do with the Lord's Supper when it was abused? He did not abolish the Lord's Supper, but he corrected the abuse. What did the apostles do with the contribution when it was abused? They did not abolish the contribution, but they corrected the abuse. Just so, when this institution of the Sunday school (for it is an institution in the same sense in which other items of worship are institutions) is abused, the scriptural thing to do is not to abolish the institution, but to correct the abuse. The true Sunday-school idea is that which always associates it with, and makes it inseparable from, the work of the church. Here the school becomes an agency of the church by which the word of God is taught to children and to grown people as opportunity is afforded. The source of such instruction is God's church; the subject-matter is God's word; the teachers are Christians; the attendants are all who may be induced to come; the arrangement is in groups under several teachers where each group is a component of a unified whole.

Sometimes the Sunday school is presented by those who oppose it as a modern innovation, but the facts do not hear out the contention. Both the Scriptures and secular writings reveal the fact that the Sunday school as I have defined it was a prominent feature of the Jewish religion and an integral factor in the primitive churches of Christ. Really the Sunday school, so far as the work itself is concerned, is clothed with antiquity. Some traditions are valuable. There are traditional writings which refer to the training of Methuselah in such a school in the days before the flood. They tell of the instruction received by Abraham from Meichizedek, of how Jacob and Esau were taught, and speak of educational advantages enjoyed by Dinah and Samuel and Deborah and Barak. They doubtless make a mistake who insist upon calling Robert Raikes the "father" of this method of teaching. The father of the work itself is more ancient than Melchizedek. One of the Talmudic sayings is: "The world continues to exist only by the breath of the school children," and "the true guardians of the city are the teachers."

But the Old Testament record is more valuable than any tradition. And here we may speak with the utmost certainty. It is not necessary to dwell at length upon its testimony. A few good examples will suffice. In Gen. 14: 14 we are told that Abraham had three hundred and eighteen trained servants. Certainly there must have been some effective means of training them. Families who have one trained servant count themselves happy. Abraham had three hundred and eighteen, and Sarah must have been at the head of a big school of domestic science. In enumerating the reforms instituted by Jehoshaphat, the historian of the Old Testament gives us the names of certain teachers, and says: "And they taught in Judah, having the book of the law of Jehovah with them; and they went about throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught among the people." (2 Chron. 17: 9.) We should not fail to mention the great open-air Bible school mentioned in the book of Nehemiah, where it is said of the teachers: "And they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctly; and they gave the sense, so that they understood the reading." (Neh. 8: 8.) Josephus mentions specifically the establishment of such schools and says it was the purpose of the scholars to learn accurately." His testimony is confirmed by Philo:

The rabbis tell us that about 80 B.C. there existed a system of religious schools in which they made attendance obligatory. In these schools children between the ages of six and ten years studied the scripture text. Such schools were recognized not as merely incidental to Jewish life and polity, but they were reckoned a very part of the religious system itself, essential to the stability and perpetuity of the national existence and character. In other words, they were revivifying and putting into practice the words of their greatest prophet, who said: "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." (Deut. 6: 7.)

This, then, was the system in vogue when Jesus came to the earth. Bible teaching was to begin at home, but the teaching was not confined to the home by any means. Between the ages of five and seven little children were taken to the church Bible school. There they were taught to memorize the Scriptures and to come to an understanding of them through the familiar process of questions and answers. Later they entered the school of the synagogue. In the first glimpse that we have of our Savior's childhood days he has shown in attendance in one of these schools, (See Luke 2: 46, 47.) It was not Jesus' presence in the school of the temple that amazed the people; it was nothing unusual for a child to be there; but It was his wonderful knowledge that dumfounded them. They were "amazed at his understanding and his answers." shows again their method of teaching. It was catechetical-asking questions and answering them, just as we do in our schools to-day,

There is an appreciable difference between teaching and preaching. Matthew, who wrote peculiarly from the Jewish standpoint, says: "And Jesus went about in all Galiles, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of disease and all manner of sickness among the people." (Matt. 4: 23.) Mark and Luke also bring out the distinction in their Gospels. (See Mark 1: 14, 21; Luke 20: 1.) John the Baptist is always spoken of as a preacher, but Jesus is set forth both as a teach, and preacher. Teaching was his favorite method. He taught the people in all kinds of piaces in the temple, in private houses, by the wayside, on the seashore. By studying these examples we find, too, that his favorite method of teaching was by asking questions and by bringing out the answers, just as we do in our schools to-day. (See Matt. 21: 23-40.) In Matthew's account of the great commission the Savior savs: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations." "Disciples" means "scholars." It is indeed difficult to understand how men and women can carry out the terms of the great commission and get away from the idea of teaching people in a regular, systematic way. The apostles were not only great preachers, but they were strong teachers as well. The distinction in the two lines of work is brought out in Acts 15: 35: "But Paul and Barnabas tarried in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also." There is every indication that they took advantage of the teaching system that had been in vogue for centuries when they entered the temple and the synagogues. The truth taught was different, but the method was the same. If you will study the history of the New Testament churches, you will find that the first steps necessary for their establishment was the teaching of the Scriptures. This was true of Thessalonica. (Acts 17: 1-3.) This was true of Berea. (Acts 17: 11, 12.) Their chief nobility was found in the fact that they studied the Scriptures. The starting point of the church at Corinth Is found in the teaching of the apostle Paul, assisted by a Christian man and a Christian woman. For two years Paul taught in the school of Tyrannus, in the important city of Ephesus, and for two years at Rome in his own hired house. Nay, more, you will find that this kind of teaching had a great deal to do with the molding and development of the most useful workers in the early churches Paul himself was brought up at the feet of Gamaliel. In Luke's introduction to his Gospel he explains to most excellent Theophilus that one purpose in writing it was "that thou mightest know the certainty concerning the things wherein thou wast instructed." (Luke 1: 4.) Timothy had the faith of his noble mother and grandmother because they had taught it to him. Apollos became a better preacher because, "when Priscilla and Aquila heard him, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more accurately." (Acts 18: 26.)

Sometimes we are asked the question: "Where in the New Testament do you find anything like a Sunday school?" The really difficult thing, it seems to me, is to study the New Testament and not find it. Its work and influence gleam forth from the history of every church and from the analysis of every useful character. Our success in spreading the gospel depends more upon our faithfulness in this work than upon any other line of Christian endeaver. If we fall down on this point, we shall not witness any appreciable growth, and, what is worse, we will displease the Master. Whenever I go to a strange place to preach the gospel and find there a competent and consecrated lot of teachers, I feel happy and have no fear of the results. No wonder Paul, in describing the various gifts with which Christians are endowed, gave prominence to the gift of teaching: "Or ministry, let us give ourselves to our ministry; or he that teacheth, to his teaching." (Rom, 12: 7.)

Where, then, do we receive our authority and inspiration and promise for the Sunday school? We receive it from the terms of the great commission: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.)

Said Theodore Roosevelt: "If it is right, there is no other way."

Three Arguments on the Kingdom.

BY JOHN T. HINDS.

No little has been written the last few years regarding the nature and establishment of the kingdom. There would scarcely be room in one article to refer to all the scriptures and reasonings that have been offered. No such attempt is here made. It is my purpose in this article to give three arguments which, it seems to me, will aid materially in reaching a correct solution of the problem.

While the exact date when the kingdom was established is of vital importance, yet that is not the point that now is worrying many. The question with many now is this: Has it been established at all? Or, if in the future, when will it be? A failure to distinguish between the literal and figurative use of terms has led to much confusion and misunderstanding. That Christ has an institution in this world that is variously described in the Bible will hardly be denied by any one. To call this institution the "church" presents it as an assembly separated from the rest of the world in matters religious. To call it a "body" presents it as an organization. To call it a "temple" or "house" presents it as a place of worship or a home. Then, if called a "kingdom," the idea is a system of government. If the three first representations here given can and do refer to the same institution, why does not the fourth also? There seems no logical reason against it. We may rightly call any object by the name of another where one or more points of similarity exist between the two. Why not the church be called the kingdom, if a reasonable amount of similarity exists between it and an earthly kingdom? We surely can, or else we have no use for figurative speech. If the church can logically be called the kingdom, then the kingdom has been established, and no amount of special pleading will evade this truth. It is immaterial regarding any future state of things to which the word "kingdom" may also apply. The sole issue here is, does the word "kingdom" in any given number of passages legitimately and logically apply to the present state of things religiously? If so, the issue is certainly settled.

ARGUMENT No. 1.

The first argument is to show that there is no logical or scriptural reason against the word "kingdom" referring to the same institution that the word "church" does. If this be true, then nothing short of positive scriptural declarations to the contrary would make it necessary to deny that the kingdom is now in existence. This argument is sustained by the fact that many words in the Bible that refer to the past age and future age in certain passages also refer to the church in other passages. The following simple arrangement exhibits this fact:

PAST	PRESENT	FUTURE
TEMPORAL	SPIRITUAL	ETERNAL
Jerusalem	Gal. 4: 26	Rev. 21: 1, 2, 10
Tabernacle	Heb. 8: 2	Rev. 21: 3
Temple	1 Cor. 3: 16	Rev. 7: 15
Priesthood	1 Pet. 2: 5	Rev. 7: 15
Sons of God	Gal. 3: 26	Rev. 21: 7
Salvation	Mark 16: 16	Phil. 2: 12
Kingdom	Rev. 1: 6, 9	2 Tim. 4: 18

The Jews had a material, temporal Jerusalem; we have a spiritual Jerusalem, and the final state will be an eternal Jerusalem. They had a temporal tabernacle, we have a spiritual one, and the finally saved people will have an eternal one. The same thing is true of all the other words in the diagram, as the references will show. I did not give any references in the first column, for it will be admitted by all that these words all refer to the Jews in their work and worship as the people of God. The second column shows that these same words refer to the church as the people of God now, while the scriptures in the third column show that the same words refer to God's people in the final state. Rev. 7: 15 shows that we will be "priests" in the final state because we will "serve" him day and night "in his temple." Rev. 1: 6-9 shows the same use is made of the word "kingdom" in reference to the church as is made of the other words given. "Made us kings and priests unto our God" requires the present state to be the kingdom. If the Revised Version is followed, it says "kingdom." Either version is final on the point. In verse 9 John says he was "in the kingdom." This also is final. Leaving out all the other passages where the word "kingdgm" refers to the church, these verses fix the point that it_actually does refer to the church. If so, the kingdom undoubtedly does mean the church. The fact that it was used in reference to the Jewish kingdom and the eternal state no more keeps it from referring to the church state now than the fact that the Jews were called "sons of God" and the saved will be called "sons of God" keeps Christians from being called "sons of God" now.

With this argument established, we may as well admit the kingdom to be in existence now, no difference what explanations we wish to make. I may be "dull of hearing," but have never yet been able to see what could be gained for the truth by denying it.

ARGUMENT No. 2.

This argument is based on the combined testimony found in Acts 2: 34, 35; Heb. 10: 12, 13; 1 Cor. 15: 25. These passages all show that Christ was to "sit" at the right hand of God for a given time, and that certain things were to be accomplished during that period. Acts 2: 33, 34 shows that it was after his resurrection and ascension. Naturally, of course, it would be after the latter. Heb. 10: 12 shows that it was after he had made the "one" offering for sins.

The word "till" in all the passages shows that he is to remain there while his enemies are being overcome. 1 Cor. 15: 25 tells us "all enemies" must be put under his feet. Verse 26 says the last enemy to be destroyed is death. As long as people are subject to death, Christ will remain at the right hand of God. If he is to remain there "till" his enemies become the footstool of his feet, then it is implied that he will not remain there after that has been accomplished. If, then, his enemies are not subdued while he sits at the Father's right hand, they will never be. 1 Cor. 15: 25 says: "For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet." Since he is to put his enemies under his feet while he sits at the right hand of God, exactly what he is to do while he reigns, then his reign is precisely coextensive with his sitting at God's right hand. He is there now; hence, he is reigning now or never will. If reigning now, his kingdom must be established.

ARGUMENT No. 3.

This argument is based on the number of things pertaining to a kingdom that the New Testament shows we have. First, we note what is said of Jesus to see if he is now a King in fact. (1) Jesus, on account of the suffering of death, was "crowned with glory and honor." (Heb. 2: 7.) (2) God hath anointed him with the "oil of gladness." (3) Heb. 1: 6-8 shows that he has a "throne" and "scepter." A careful reading of Acts 2: 30-36 will show that Christ is now on his throne." (4) 1 Cor. 15: 25, in connection with Heb. 10: 12, 13, shows that he is now "reigning." Now, if Christ has been anointed, crowned, has a scepter, a throne, sits on that throne, and is reigning, I am curious to know how much he lacks of being a King in fact.

Second, what is said about the kingdom? What do we have? (1) The word of God is the "seed of the kingdom." (Luke 8: 11.) We have that. (2) The good seed sown by the Son of man are the "children of the kingdom." (Matt. 13: 38.) (3) We are a "holy nation." (1 Pet. 2: 9.) If a nation, it must be a republic, empire, or kingdom. (4) We have a "royal priesthood." (1 Pet. 2: 9.) The word "royal" means "kingly." (5) We have a "royal [kingly] law." (James 2: 8.) Again, since we have a crowned King, reigning upon his throne, the seed of the kingdom, the children of the kingdom, a nation, a kingly priesthood, and a kingly law, how much can that lack of being a kingdom? A spiritual kingdom, to be sure, but a real one, nevertheless, and this regardless of what the future state may be or may be called. Our spiritual nation must be a kingdom.

To call the future state a "kingdom" is unquestionably correct. Any number of passages, therefore, where the word "kingdom" clearly refers to the future state can have no bearing upon the fact that the present or church state is a kingdom, and so called correctly. The context and language of each passage must determine how the word should be applied. Four hundred passages where the word refers to the future and only one where it refers to the present would not change the facts in the case. One reference to God's people now as the kingdom is sufficient. We have that and more.

Divorce-New Testament Teaching.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

The teaching of the New Testament upon this subject is clear, unequivocal, and brief; it is very definite and conclusive; it is so plain that "he who runs may read," and "he who reads may run." In the Sermon on the Mount, the constitution of the Christian religion, we have this language: "It was said also, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement: but I say unto you, that every one that putteth away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, maketh her an adulteress: and whosoever shall marry her when she is put away committeth adultery." (Matt. 5: 31, 32.) Jesus, commenting upon this question in answer to the Pharisees, gave a fuller explanation of his teaching: "And there came unto him Pharisees, trying him, and saying, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause? And he answered and said, Have ye not read, that he who made them from the beginning made them male and female, and said, For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother. and shall cleave to his wife; and the two shall become one flesh? So that they are no more two, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. They say unto him, Why then did Moses command to give a bill of divorcement, and to put her away? He saith unto them, Moses for your hardness of heart suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it hath not been so. And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and he that marrieth her when she is put away committeth adultery." (Matt. 19: 3-9.) There are other reports of what Jesus said on this subject found in Mark 10: 2-12; Luke 16: 18. There is nothing found in these scriptures that is not fully treated in Matt. 19.

We have a summary of the New Testament teaching on divorce, stated by Christ himself, in the following: "Whosoever shall put away his wife, except for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery." It may be stated that in Matt. 5: 32 and Matt. 19: 9 Christ puts in the one exception. All versions and translations agree in regard to this exception; it is also found in all of the ancient manuscripts. There is no controversy among biblical scholars about the correct rendering of this passage. This makes the matter satisfactory, so far as human wisdom is concerned.

The one cause for absolute divorce is stated by the Savior in these words, "except for fornication," and this phrase is in harmony with the basic principle of the family. The occasion of this definite phrase was brought about by a question from the Pharisees. They asked: "Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?" This put the matter so that Jesus had to specify the ground of divorce or evade this pointed question. The question was put so that it forced Jesus to enumerate the causes for divorce, and he enumerated one, and but one, in his reply, This puts the matter of exceptions under this rule in logic: "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius"-the expression of the one excludes all others. All other pretenses for divorce were deliberately swept aside by Christ. This fact should be remembered as we further study this question. This teaching is so plain that we can see at first glance that no other ground for absolute divorce can be permitted than the single one of adultery.

Let us examine the reason for this one exception. Afultery is destructive of the monogamic family life; for-any married person, guilty of adultery, has taken another person into family relationship; children may be born to that relationship; and not to allow the innocent party a divorce, in such a case is to force the innocent party in marriage to live in a polygamous state, and this is contrary to the fundamental law of the family life. Adultery destroys the essential physical basis and the ethical integrity of the marriage relation and is universally recognized as a ground of absolute divorce, because it is an act of unfaithfulness to the marriage vow by which the guilty party breaks it asunder. Adultery, with married people, brings a third consenting party into a triple relationship, which, if knowingly continued, would thereby become for all comcerned a guilty partnership in a crime against the fundamental principle of the family, and Jesus goes back to the original principle as stated in Genesis and says: "And the two shall become one flesh. So they are no more two, but

It is the wisdom of heaven as spoken by the Savior of men that has made fornication a ground for divorce from the bond of matrimony and limited absolute separation to that single cause. It matters not which way (through the man or woman) we depart from the strict practice under the Savior's direction, we land in polygamy; and the state or government that allows by its statutes absolute divorce for any other cause than the one that the Savior mentions breaks the monogamic bond and is simply acting in aid of polygamy, consecutive, if not contemporaneous. Adultery is the one sin which immediately and unmistakably breaks the marriage bond, and is the only valid reason on which divorce, according to Christ's teaching, may be legally allowed. There is no other legitimate principle for divorce than that presented by the nature of the sin of adultery.

The question may be asked, Is there any other sin against the marriage bond which has the nature of adultery? Many claim that there are other sins which nullify the sacred bond of nfatrimony, and, hence, other grounds for divorce. Such sins as drunkenness, desertion, conviction of crime, and imprisonment have been urged as just grounds for divorce, but the Savior did not so specify them; neither, as heinous as they are, do they have the nature of the sin of adultery.

Many claim that Paul has modified the teachings of the Savior on this question. The only scripture that we have bearing upon this question, if, indeed, it does bear, is found in the seventh chapter of First Corinthians. A careful reading of this chapter will show that Paul is not discussing the question of divorce or breaking the marriage bond, but is discussing the question of behavior in the relationship. Paul is interpreted as allowing divorce to a believer who has been deserted by an unbeliever, thus adding desertion to the exception that Christ made for divorce. Paul has said: "If the unbelieving departeth, let him depart: the brother or the sister is not under bondage in such cases: but God hath called us in peace." (1 Cor. 7: 15.) What is meant by the apostle here may be easily inferred from the spirit which dominates the whole chapter, The spirit and teaching set forth in this chapter is that every one should accept the situation to which God has called him. "Be quiet" is the instruction given to every one, whether married or unmarried; if unmarried, remain so; if married, remain so; if an unbelieving partner deserts, let him or her desert. Be quiet. "God hath called us in peace." Paul has said that the brother or sister is not under bondage. He uses the Greek word "dedoulotai," which means enslaved. If an unbeliever leaves the believer because of his faith in Christ, and claims that the marriage tie is so strong that the believer should give up Christ in order to maintain the marriage relationship, he is mistaken; the brother or sister is not enslaved even by the marriage tie to forsake Christ in behalf of the marriage relation. This permits the unbeliever to depart; but it is not an absolute divorce, for in the tenth verse Paul has said: "But unto the married I give charge, yea not I, but the Lord, That the wife depart not from her husband (but should she depart, let her remain unmarried. or else be reconciled to her husband); and that the husband leave not his wife." This teaches that the one deserted must hold herself or himself in an attitude to be reconciled. We are sure that Paul does not grant liberty to remarry, for this would have been to nullify the fundamental principle of the family relationship and a direct violation and contradiction of the Savior's plain teaching. Such authority in regard to divorce and remarriage would have brought Paul into conflict with the Roman government, and would have brought about a sharp conflict between Christianity and the Roman government. None of the early Christians understood Paul to grant the privilege of remarrying. There is no record in history of a single case where any one gave such interpretation to Paul's language for four hundred years after Paul's death. The only right and safe course for the church and civilization is to adhere unwaveringly to the simple statement of Christ when he said: "Whosoever shall put away his wife, except for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and he that marrieth her when she is put away committeth adultery."

Help Corpus Christi.

BY C. DALLAS SMITH.

The reader has doubtless read of the awful storm and tidal wave which struck Corpus Christi, Texas, a few days ago, with its fearful toll of life and property. But few, perhaps, know of the needs of our brethren there. Brother C. W. Sewell writes me that their house of worship was completely wrecked—wrecked beyond repair. He says they will have to rebuild. Now this means a great burden on the little band at Corpus Christi, for most of them are poor; in fact, the burden is too great for them without outside help. I am, therefore, appealing to the readers of the Gospel Advocate to assist these worthy brethren in rebuilding their house of worship. I held a meeting for these brethren in June and know that they are worthy of your fellowship. Send contributions to C. W. Sewell, 701 C Street, Corpus Christi, Texas.

I have seen so much good from suffering, so much good from pain, that I believe in the good of both. It is pain and suffering that bring out sympathy, self-sacrifice, and strength of character.—Selected.

The Agreement Brother Boll Made.

In 1915 a number of brethren met in the Gospel Advocate office for the purpose of adjusting the difference that had arisen between Brother R. H. Boll and the managers and some of the editors of the Gospel Advocate. The Gospel Advocate and those connected with it contended that an agreement was reached in that conference. Others held that there was no agreement reached. This disagreement has been the source of alienation and strife and consequent evil, which is always to be deplored. While In Nashville recently, Brother Boll signed a statement which we are glad to publish. We give his statement in his own words as follows:

THE POINT OF MISUNDERSTANDING.

I understand that the word "agreement" is used by Webster in two distinct senses:

1. A concurrence of judgment, coinciding of view, harmony of thought.

2. A compact, covenant, promise, contract.

There was an agreement in the former sense; for without dictation from men, and as free under God and because my judgment approved, I was of the same mind with the other brethren that it was best not to press the doctrines in question. But there was no agreement in the second sense of Webster's definition. [Signed] R. H. Bott.

The above is all that the Gospel Advocate has ever contended for. It has never contended for an agreement in the sense that any one was bound against his will and his conscience not to touch what he believed to be the word of God, and even then, as now, it has always spurned the idea that any man was not to be free in Christ Jesus. Brother Boll's above statement concurs fully in this view.

The fact should not be overlooked that what he says has no reference to the doctrine involved, and is not intended to bind either him or the Gospel Advocate as to the action of either on that line in the future. It is to be hoped, however, that this action will lead to still further agreement and harmony, and that eventually any doctrines that are calculated to disturb the churches and that are not essential will not be promulgated.

We sincerely trust that nothing will be said to revive the unfortunate disagreement and that the brethren will strive to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." "Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ with a love incorruptible." (Eph. 6: 23, 24.)

The Missionaries.

BY J. C. M'Q.

The true Christian is a missionary. The Christian spirit is a missionary spirit. It is a misnomer to call a Christian an "antimissionary." But missionary work should be conducted in a businesslike, systematic way, as well as any other service of the Lord. Christians should not be slipshod and unmethodical in their work. Missionary work has suffered immensely on account of the lack of system and method. As has already been stated by Brother Kurfees in this journal, and as he has clearly shown by the word of God, missionaries should be sent out by the churches and should report their work to the churches. A careful reading of the book of Acts, beginning with the thirteenth chapter, will clearly show this.

We are ready to act as forwarding agents for the churches and ready to encourage the churches to do missionary work; but it is no part of the province of a religious journal to select missionaries and have the missionaries make report to it, and in a general way handle the funds of the missionaries. This is the work strictly of the churches and should not be taken from them. Brethren E. S. Jelley and J. M. McCaleb have been in Nashville during the last week. The Gospel Advocate does not feel called upon to select and send either of these men out as a missionary. We have so informed both, and both approve the suggestion. The churches should select the missionary and have it announced to the world that the missionary is selected by them and that they will take care of his support. It is the province of a religious paper to stimulate the churches in this character of work,

The manner in which missionary funds have been handled in the past has been responsible for a number of missionaries failing to receive a sufficient support. It may be that some have received more than their demands required. When the churches send in a general way to the missionaries, they do not know just what missionary is most in need. This can be avoided by one church becoming responsible for a missionary's support or by a number of churches cooperating in his support. Another church should become responsible for the support of another missionary, and so on until we have many missionaries in the field. If the missionary proves unsatisfactory, or if he does anything not in harmony with the spirit of Christ, the church that sent him should recall him, and not a number of self-constituted men acting as a board, who assume unto themselves authority to recall him.

Christians should not be satisfied with sending out only men of little ability as missionaries. It is hardly fair to the missionary work to select men that have been failures in this country to send them to the foreign field in the hope that they may accomplish great good in winning the heathen to Christ. Men selected for this work should be especially fitted for it, and the churches should look well to their fitness before sending them out. Missionary zeal has been more paralyzed and missionary effort more discouraged by sending out incompetent men as missionaries, perhaps, than by any other one thing. Simply because we are not to consider the conversion of one soul an insignificant work, it does not follow that we should neglect efficlency in our missionary efforts. No man should go as a missionary who is not so in love with the cause of Christ that he is ready to make great sacrifices for it. If a man expects an easy time as a missionary, by all means he should stay at home and do what he can here to the honor and glory of God.

I would suggest that the churches take a survey of the field to see if they cannot find a number of men fitted for missionary work, men of force of character and love of the truth, who are ready to make sacrifices in order to lead the heathen out of darkness into light. It is easier to get the money to support the missionary than it is to get a suitable missionary. I am ready to say that I believe the churches will readily support a missionary who realizes that "woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel," and who is able to declare the gospel of Christ. The great need in the Savior's time was men, and it is even so to-day. Christ said unto the seventy: "The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest." (Luke 10: 2.) With a few missionaries fully imbued with the spirit of the apostle Paul, many thousands would scon be converted to Christ. The missionary, in order to lead sinners to Christ, must be hungering and thirsting for souls. He must have a consuming desire to lead sinners out of darkness into the light of the gospel. How many men can we find who are so in love with the truth and who are so anxious for the conversion of the heathen that they are ready to endure stripes and imprisonments, hunger and thirst, shipwrecks and trials, as did the aspostle Paul, in order that they may be faithful servants of Jehovah. In the light of what the missionary is called upon to endure and do, how many men will rise up as Isaiah and say: "Here am I; send me?" (Isa. 6: 8.)

It would be well, also, for the churches to look out new fields. There are many Japanese, Chinese, and other heathen in this country that need the gospel of Christ. A man does not have to go to Japan in order to preach the gospel to the Japanese. He can preach it to them on the Pacific Coast. Mexico is badly in need of the gospel. The countries in South America also need it. The churches should not pass by these inviting fields, but should see that an effort is made to bring those without the truth to a knowledge of it. The command of Christ is: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.)

What Have Christians to Do With Judging Them That Are Without?

BY E. A. E.

For what have I to do with judging them that are without? Do not ye judge them that are within? But them that are without God judgeth.

Read carefully 1 Cor. 5: 9-13.

God makes a very clear distinction and a very great and grave difference between those "within" the church and those "without."

All know there are two distinct classes of responsible people named in the New Testament-saints and sinners, Christians and those who are not Christians, those who are "within" the church and those who are "without." Those who are "without" are called "the sons of the evil one," etc.; those "within" are called "the sons of the kingdom," "the children of God," "the house of God," "the household of God," "the church of God," "the church," "the flock of God," "disciples" of Christ, "Christians," "saints," "soldiers of Jesus Christ," "fellow citizens" in the kingdom of Christ, whose "citizenship" or "commonwealth" Is "In heaven" (Phil, 3: 17-21), "coworkers" with God, "children of light" and "sons of the day," etc. Those "without" the church "are of the night" and "of darkness," are in "the power of darkness," and are doomed to "the outer darkness" of eternal destruction and to "the weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth."

Sinners in becoming Christians are "delivered . . . from the power of darkness, and translated into the kingdom of the Son" of God's love (Col. 1: 13), or are "born anew"—are "born of water and the Spirit" "into the kingdom of God" (John 3: 3, 5). This very great change and this very great difference are expressed in different ways in the New Testament, but always in such clear and strong terms that the line of demarcation between the two is unmistakably distinct. No one who does not deliberately choose to do so crosses this line permanently one way or the other.

All know that people cannot be in both "the power of darkness" and "the kingdom of God," or in the church and the world, at the same time. Two masters cannot be served at the same time. Sinners are the servants, or slaves, of sin; Christians are servants of righteousness. All must choose, and do choose, what and whom they will serve.

All know that Christians "are not of the world"—that is, they have not the spirit of the world; do not reflect the character of the world; are not governed by the vanity, ambition, pride, greed, wisdom, glory, malice, and vengeance of the world—even as Christ is not of the world. The world hated, rejected, and crucified Christ. It hates and persecutes the church, the body of Christ, to-day, and Christians are forbidden to love the world; so much so that, "if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." (1 John 2: 15, 16.)

Christians must train, develop, correct, encourage, warn, and support, or, in other words, discipline, all "within" the church, withdrawing themselves finally from all who walk disorderly, or who do not yield to discipline. But they have no authority to discipline and judge and no jurisdiction over those "without." Those "without" will God judge. Vengeance belongs to him, not to Christians; and we have seen how he takes vengeance both here and hereafter—through civil powers on earth and eternal punishment hereafter.

If Christians do not both note and observe this great difference and distinction emphasized above, they do not regard the will of God as anything at all.

Christians of necessity come in contact with those "without" the church—the vilest and basest as well as the most cultured and upright and honorable—and must have dealings with them; if not, they will have to get out of this state of existence.

God clearly and fully teaches Christians how to act toward, and in all ways how to treat, those "without" the church, or people of the world: they are to defraud none; to take advantage of none; to corrupt none; to take thought for things honorable in the sight of all; to treat all in justice and mercy, righteousness and love, as they would be treated; to be at peace with all; to keep the peace themselves and also to seek the peace and good of all; to render to none evil for evil, but to overcome the evil in others by the good within themselves; and to seek, above all things, the salvation of all. Jesus came not to destroy men's lives, but to save both their lives and souls-to seek and to save the lost. Christians who have the Spirit of Christ and who follow him cannot seek the destruction of the homes and families and lives of any persons on earth. They cannot engage in the fearful and horrible business of devastation, of making widows and orphans and cripples, and of bloodshed. The New Testament abounds in Instruction to Christians in regard to conduct toward all classes of people "without" the church as well as toward all "within." Christians must follow all the directions which God gives them toward all people or live in disobedience to him and suffer the consequences.

Are civil governments of any and of all kinds "within" or "without" the church? Are they parts of the church, the body of Christ, the kingdom of God, or are they separate from it? God has separated the two-that is, the church and civil government. Man does not necessarily become a citizen of any form of civil government because and when he becomes a Christian, and he can be a citizen of any civil government on earth and never become a Christian. But God teaches Christians how to act or to deport themselves toward any civil government under which they may live, whether republic, kingdom, or autocracy, etc. How? They are commanded "to honor the king" (if they live in a kingdom), the governors appointed by him, and all rulers; they are to "be subject to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake"-that is, all laws of any government (1 Pet. 2: 13-17), or to "be in subjection to the higher powers;" they are to pay all custom and tribute and taxes, and to render to all their dues (Rom. 13: 1-7); they are to pray, make supplications and intercessions, and to offer thanksgivings for all rulers in order that they may "lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity" (1 Tim. 2: 1-4). In the peace of any government will they find peace and tranquillity. (See Jer. 29: 7.) Paul requested Christians to pray that he might "be delivered from unreasonable and evil men; for all have not faith." (2 Thess. 3: 1, 2.) This proves that God overrules such men. So Christians may pray and must pray to this end.

In no case whatever are Christians justifiable before God in refusing to submit to every law of civil governments or in violating any, except only when the civil government forbids their obedience to God in any case or commands them to do that which God forbids. In this case God must be obeyed rather than men. All know this. Peter and John said to the rulers of the Jews, with power to imprison and to put to death, and in the face of threats of greater punishment than imprisonment, which they were then suffering, "We must obey God rather than men;" and: "Whether it is right in the sight of God to hearken unto you rather than unto God, judge ye: for we cannot but speak the things which we saw and heard." (Acts 4: 19: 5: 29.) All know that God requires people to give up all things and to forsake all persons and even life Itself in order to obey him. This one principle of obeying God rather than man has made every martyr on earth for Christ's sake, and led Jesus to the cross. He could have obeyed man rather than God and become the very greatest world ruler that ever lived; but he resisted this mighty temptation. This temptation came to him time and again, but he resisted it, and was crucified by his tempters.

Peter and John, Paul, and hundreds of others, and especially Jesus, are heroic and sublime examples of obeying God rather than the civil authorities in the clash between the will of God and the laws of men. They calmly and in faith received the consequences, even death.

"All that would live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3: 12.) There is no escape. Reader, if you do not believe this, try living godly a while, and you will see. You may "hold a form of godliness," while denying "the power thereof," and please the world and never suffer any persecution, for "the world loves its own." But live truly godly in all that that word embraces, and the persecution will surely follow; and it will come at times from sources unexpected, and which grieves the most for that reason. The persecution furnishes the test as to whether or not you will obey God rather than man.

Christians cannot join mobs and otherwise use violence. In all strikes and upheavals of the present, Christians cannot use violence to force measures; they can destroy neither property nor life. Christians will not do this. This is not the tranquil and quiet life, the peaceable and godly life, which they are commanded in the New Testament to lead. God must be obeyed above all lodges and orders or civil governments. The service of Christ and obedience to God do not depend upon men's convenience, comfort, wealth, poverty, vengeance, or laws; God must be obeyed and the spirit of Christ manifested at all hazards.

THE MODEL CHURCH. By G. C. Brewer. McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn. Pages, 166. Prices: Single copy, prepaid, $1; one dozen copies, prepaid, $9; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $17.

The book contains an introduction by F. W. Smith, and is written in a very lucid, simple, forceful style. The author has the happy faculty of expressing himself well. The subjects treated are all live subjects. The writer manifests a fine spirit in his handling of mooted questions. He hardly hopes to escape the criticism of those who do not accept his views; but, regardless of this, he has endeavored to point out the way that all can work and keep busy in the service of the Lord. I commend the book as worthy of a careful reading, and would be glad to see it have a wide circulation. The book contains twelve chapters on the following themes: Chapter I., "What Constitutes a Congregation;" Chapter II., "The Qualifications of an Elder;" Chapter III., "The Duties of the Elders;" Chapter IV., "The Relation of the Overseen to the Overseer:" Chapter V., "How Elders Are Made;" Chapter VI., "How Elders Are Unmade;" Chapter VII., "The Diaconate:" Chapter VIII., " Dealing with the Disorderly;" Chapter IX., "Figuring on the Finances;" Chapter X., "Church Music;" Chapter XI., "A Model Church;" Chapter XII., "Prayer-Meeting Topics."

Mr. W. O. Gorski, secretary of the Polish Victims' Relief Fund, writes: "Poland needs medical supplies, hospitals, doctors, for typhus is decimating the population. Entire villages have already been wiped out of existence by that plague. In many cities mortality is in excess of the birth rate. Poland also needs clothing and shelter to protect her inhabitants against exposure. Her industries are so far at a standstill, the German invader having destroyed or crippled every factory. The civil population is unable to earn a livelihood."

Just a Little-

Just a little kindness added to what you do makes all the difference in the world.

Just an added smile, a song composed within your heart; just a little lift for some one close at hand; just a little more effort when things begin to lag—these are what bring out the sun and drive the clouds away.

Just a little planning, just a little thinking, just a little resolving hour by hour, and you will find yourself a-growing—just a little all the time.

Just a little knowledge—and then a little more—banked for the day that you need it will keep you fresh and glad and make you a sought-out man.

Just a little waiting when you ill-humored get will save you extra tears and sadness, which to you will mean a lot,

Just a little solid sense, just a little wholesome faith, just a little word well spoken, just a little hope fulfilled in deeds, just a little scattered sunshine—these help to make this world a better place.

Just a little oil on troubled waters, just a little love turned loose, just a little consideration for the "under dog,"

Let us all see what we can do to be just a little better and do just a little more.—Selected.

So many people are largely animal, giving but a paltry remnant to spiritual things. Their immortal nature is atrophled. Their life is in the fleeting possessions that they imagine they have made their own; but a man's life does not consist in the things which he possesses, for he cannot live by bread alone. It is the part of wisdom to foster the imperishable life and the ever-blest life. Then our life is independent of environment; and it is dependent upon the life of Christ in us, one with him through faith and love. So our life partakes of the everlasting life of the everlasting God and Father of our spirit, who is the same "yesterday, to-day, and forever."—A. William Lewis,

AT HOME AND ABROAD

F. W. Smith is in a meeting at Union City, Tenn,

Brother Srygley is holding a meeting near Red Boiling Springs, Tenn.

T. Q. Martin is engaged in a meeting with the Campbell Street Church at Louisville, Ky.

The church at Washington, D. C., has asked the brotherhood to make a special contribution for their building fund.

We are glad to report that G. C. Brewer is much improved. He will resume his labors at Winchester, Tenn., shortly,

- J. H. Lawson, of Sherman, Texas, closed the meeting at Dixon Springs last Sunday evening. There was fine interest throughout."
- J. S. Trotter, of Nashville, Tenn., closed a good meeting at Bending Chestnut Schoolhouse, near Boston, Tenn., with six baptisms and two restorations.
- J. G. Allen writes: "Brother McQuiddy's article on 'A Clean Ministry' is an exceptionally good piece. He hits at a great evil among us, just like Brother David Lipscomb use to."

Brother McQuiddy has gone to Denver, Col., for an extensive stay. His friends hope that he will return much improved in health. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Evelyn McQuiddy.

From Mrs. C. H. Rizer, Franklin, Tenn.: "The Gospel Advocate special 'Prayer' Number is fine. What it contains and what we get from it cannot be bought with money, but can do the Christian a world of good."

- C. M. Pullias writes; "My health has improved some, I am able to preach in moderation. Brother Lewis and I have been doing some work about the city that is bearing fruit. The church is doing well. My new address is 708 Lomb Avenue, Birmingham, Ala."
- A. G. Freed writes: "The opening day of the Freed-Hardeman College, Henderson, Tenn., was great. The largest enrollment since the foundation, eleven years ago. Students are still coming. The work on the Ladies' Home is being pushed. All are elated."

From William P. Walker, Dover, Tenn., September 25: "Last night I began a meeting about nine miles from Dover, on Dyer's Creek. The prospect is bright for a successful meeting. Brethren, we mission workers and our work need your fervent prayers."

G. A. Dunn writes from Oakman, Ala.: "On September 23 I closed a meeting at Berry, Ala., with thirty-eight additions—thirty-five baptisms. After being away four years, it was pleasant to return to see old friends and have a good meeting. I began at Oakman yesterday."

From H. C. Shoulders, Sellersburg, Ind., September 26:
"On September 10 I began a meeting for the Liberty congregation, near Granville, Tenn., which closed on the third Sunday night. The attendance and interest were good. One person was baptized into the one body."

There were visitors from California, Texas, Kentucky, Mississippi, Illinois, and Alabama at Russell Street Church on Sunday. Three persons placed their membership with the congregation, A. B. Lipscomb preached at the morning service and Oscar Parham preached at the evening service.

From J. G. Malphurs, Sinai, Ky., September 24: "On September 18 I closed my first meeting since moving to this State. The people seem to be interested at Loveridge congregation, and there are bright prospects for them in the future. The preaching was principally to the church, yet we had seven baptisms and one restored. I am now in a meeting with the Fairview congregation, to continue as long as interest demands."

From M. C. Cayce, Nashville, Tenn., September 27: "The meeting at Pegram closed on Sunday night. I baptized a man and his wife on Sunday afternoon. She was a member of the United Brethren Church. We think other good was done. I am wanted back for another meeting next year. To-morrow I am to begin a meeting at Shiloh Church, near McEwen, Tenn. The Gospel Advocate is fine. I wish it could go into every Christian home."

From I. A. Douthitt, Henderson, Tenn., September 26:
"I recently held a meeting at Isom, Tenn., near Hampshire. This was a fine meeting in many respects. We had large crowds at each service. The brethren there manifested a splendid interest in church work. I baptized four persons. I went next to Pleasant Hill, near Rives, Tenn., where we had a fine meeting, but no additions. I am new at Henderson, Tenn., teaching in the Freed-Hardeman College. The school opened well, and all things point to a great year in the school."

From W. F. Lemmons, Ruleville, Miss., September 24: "The six-days' meeting near Water Valley was well attended and the interest was fine, but there were no additions; but, as at every other place I go, they want me to come back. A. Y. Howell, of Water Valley, was with me in the meeting, and assisted in song and prayer. He is a good preacher and worker and deserves great credit for his work's sake. I preached three times at Ruleville, including the third Lord's day. I am to begin a meeting near Marietta, Miss., next Saturday night; then to Arkansas, Oklahoma, and back to Texas."

From Van A. Bradley, Mount Hope, Ala.: "My work in South Alabama and North Florida closed on Sunday night, August 31, with the Oakland Church, near Andalusia, Ala. This closed my twelfth year's work in that territory. I held one meeting on the scene of the Bradley-Bogard debate of two years ago. This meeting resulted in three additions to the church, one of which came from a Primitive Baptist family. I am now located at Mount Hope, teaching the town school and preaching for the church here. This is a good congregation, and I am liking the work."

Following is a news item from a Knoxville (Tenn.) paper: "C. G. Vincent, Detroit, Mich., recently returned from overseas in France as Divisional Religious Work Director for the Y. M. C. A., has accepted an invitation from the Broadway church of Christ to serve as minister for that church. Mr. Vincent is a young man, thirty-eight years of age, who, after eight years of school preparation, preached for two years in Detroit, from which place he went as a missionary to Japan and served there five years as a missionary. He then entered the Y. M. C. A. service overseas. Vincent is said to be a preacher of rare ability, and the Broadway church of Christ is congratulating itself upon being able to secure him as minister. He will preach at the church, 1124 Broadway, on Sunday at 11 A.M. and 7:45 P.M., and regularly thereafter."

From J. G. Allen, 1412 Baltimore Avenue, Muskogee, Okla., September 22: "In addition to the statement in the last issue of the Gospel Advocate in regard to the work at Muskogee, I wish to make this statement: Believing that the good brethren and sisters who have contributed to this work should have a statement from me, I will say that we have three trustees to handle all funds for the church building, who will render faithful service and account for every cent contributed and intrusted to them, and I am sure no one will make a mistake in helping us to get a home of our own. We all think the prospects are brighter here now than ever before for New Testament Christianity. I wish it understood by brethren where I have labored in Tennessee, Kentucky, and Georgia that I am how associated with as godly a band of brethren and sisters as was ever my pleasure to preach to. Yes, they are faithful in all things. All money received will be reported through the papers as heretofore."

From F. P. Fonner, Buffalo, W. Va., Box 81, September 22: "This will inform the brethren that I have been sick for the last three weeks, scarcely able to conduct meetings on Lord's days. Last Monday I had a severe attack of bloody flux, and have not been able to sit up much since. This added to another internal trouble makes rather a critical case. To say the least of it, it will take time for me to get on my feet again. I need immediate financial assistance. Please help me now. With your help I hope to recover and at the same time place this work on a permanent basis; but we cannot do that without a house of worship at this point. Additions to our building fund come very slowly now. It is almost two years since wife and I started this fund by laying aside a small contribution of our own as a nucleus. Since then it has increased until we now have nearly five hundred dollars. Five hundred dollars more would enable us to build a house this fall, and I now request my brethren at large to help us to that amount within the next few days. Owing to my present condition, I am distressed about this matter. Please help us to make a short job of this. Address F. P. Fonner, Box S1, Buffalo, W. Va. I am the duly accredited treasurer of the church here."

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

A Burning Question.

By the expression, "burning question," I mean one that I wish to drive home to your heart with such intenseness as to make it warm. Christ says: "All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them: for this is the law and the prophets." (Matt. 7: 12.) Can you think of a better doctrine than this? Could anything be more just and kind? "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?" (Mic. 6: 8.)

But the question that I am putting to those who claimto be Christians is this: Do we do this! Do we, in all things whatsoever we do and say about others, do and say only those things that we would be pleased to have them do and say about us? What a world this would be, if every one would do this! There could be no neighborhood fusses; there could be no church fusses; there could be no wars arising between the nations of the earth. No one would ever be slandered and fied upon; no one would ever be murdered; no one would ever be allowed to go hungry and without sufficient clothing to wear. This one great law of our Father would make this old earth a paradise in which to live.

But let us not cover a field so large as the world. Let us bring the question down, not to all or those who claim to be followers of Christ, but just to those of us who claim to be identified with the church of Christ-just to those who are pleased to call themselves, at times, "loyal Christians, The question will be confined to those of us who say we are pleading for a return to the doctrine of Christ-just this, without addition and without subtraction. Do we do what Christ says for us to do? Not that some do not, but is there as large a per cent living up to this rule as should -such a per cent that we become the controlling factors in the church of our Lord, so that the world can really see what the church is because this class predominates? Recently I learned that a brother, who undoubtedly has made the impression on some that he is almost too good to sin, hurled the expression into the face of one who, to say the least, was as good as he, "How much did you get for selling out?" The latter of these brethren had once stood very close to the former and really had been blinded by the former and led into believing some things about the "kingdom question" that he subsequently learned to be speculation and not the truth; hence, he changed. Is it not wise to change when you see you are wrong? Would it not be the height of folly not to do so? Then why impugn a brother's motive, whose standing wherever he is known is unexcelled, just because he would not remain with you? Is this treating others as you wish to be treated? Is this kindness and justice? Is it a "dead certainty" that all truth and goodness is on your side of the question, so much so that no one could think of leaving without being "bought out?" He could not find a better motive than this. If all of us were as good as we pretend to be and as we would have our associates think we are, the world would be better, would it not? Does not Christ say: "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven?" (Matt. 5; 20.) And does he not say that the righteeusness they had was that of those who "say, and do not?" (Matt. 23: 3.)

Not a great while ago letters continually came to me about a brother and a very close friend of mine. I confess that I am slow to believe everything I hear; and if I kept as busy looking for my own faults as I should, it might he that I would not have time to listen to even as much as I do. Anyway, because I did not at once take hold of the idea that what was being talked was so, I was accused of being "biased." Well, now, how do I want people to treat me, if anything should be said or circulated that would have a tendency to weaken my friends' confidence in me? You know I would want you to be slow to believe it and certainly not discuss it till you know of a certainty that it is so. Let us try to save each other, not destroy each other. If you are ever guilty of wrongdoing and some one does become too free to talk about It, you should not lose sight of your own mistake by having too much to say about the mistake others may have made by saving too much about it to others and not coming to you and talking about it. Their mistake does not make yours cease to be a mistake, but continues to be a mistake till corrected. Along with this, let me remind you of the comfort that having on "the breastplate of righteonsness" ever gives. Doing right is the way to keep it on. Nothing hurts your enemies more than seeing you continually doing right. Do right, if the heavens fall. This brings to my mind the words of Paul: "Sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of us," (Tit. 2: 8.) I know I have had enemies, and presume that I now have them, but certainly I do not have much time to think about them or to devote to anything they might say about me. I try to keep too busy doing right. You cannot do one thing that is bettter than this, that shields you more, that aggravates the devil 0 0 0

What Would Jesus Do?

It matters not in what position you are placed, keep the question before you: What would Jesus do? That is, what would be do if he were circumstanced as I am? What would he do toward the man who is my friend and the man who is my enemy? Go to the secret chamber and pray for your enemies. Remember, if we have not the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his. (Rom. 8: 9.) Do not forget that he said: "All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even do ye also unto them: for this is the law and the prophets."

By J. C. McQUIDDY

W. L. Vandiver, of Francis, Okla., inquires to know to whom the language, "Let a man examine himself," found in 1 Cor. 11, is addressed. It is addressed to Christians and not to the world. Christians are to make examination of themselves, knowing that if they eat and drink unworthily, they eat and drink damnation to themselves. If a man eats and drinks unworthily, no Christian is responsible for his act. We should teach Christians to make self-examination; should teach them that the Lord's Supper is intended for Christians and not for the world, and should hold up to all the fearful consequences of partaking of the Lord's Supper in an unworthy manner. When we have been faithful in teaching the word of God, we have performed our duty, and God will not hold us responsible for the sins and wickedness of others.

A sister, of Atlanta, Ga., quotes Heb. 7: I and requests that I tell her who was Melchizedek. She requests an answer through the "Query Department" of the Gospel Advocate. She also inquires to know if Melchizedec is spoken of in the Old Testament and where she can find it.

In answering the first question, I will also answer the second. Many curious questions have been asked about Melchizedek. I have no doubt about his being a real person, but know nothing further than that which is revealed in the Bible. The first reference to Melchizedek is found in Gen. 14: 18. He is also mentioned in Ps. 110: 4. The other occurrences of the word are found in Heb. 5: 6, 10; 6: 20; 7: 1, 10, 11, 15, 17. He was both a prince and a priest of the most high God. Doubtless he had preserved in his family and among his subjects the worship of the true God and the primitive patriarchal institutions; by these, the father of every family was both king and priest. So, as he was a worshiper of the true God, he was both priest among the people as well as king over them. The general view is that by "Salem" Jerusalem is meant. Salem did bear this name anciently, as is evident from Ps. 76: 1, 2, which reads: "In Judah is God known; his name is great in Israel. In Salem also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion." His name signifies "king of righteousness." He was a type of Christ, as he was a righteous king and priest. He met Abraham and blessed him, B.C. 1917. For the form of this blessing, see Num. 5: 23-26: "And the priest shall write these curses in a book, and he shall blot them out into the water of bitterness: and he shall make the woman drink the water of bitterness that causeth the curse; and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her and become bitter. And the priest shall take the meal offering of jealousy out of the woman's hand, and shall wave the meal offering before Jebovah, and bring it unto the altar: and the priest shall take a handful of the meal offering, as the memorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, and afterwards shall make the woman drink the water." For the meaning of the words "to bless," see Gen. 2: 3; "And God blessed the seventh day, and hallowed it; because that in it he rested from all his work which God had created and made." From Gen. 14: 20 we also learn that he gave tithes to Abraham. If the querist will read these scriptures carefully, she will find all that I know about Melchizedek.

Brother Leo H. Thurston, of Buchanan, Mo., sends a long query concerning the formula of haptism. In order that he may speak for himself, I insert the query in full:

Some few years ago Brother Flavil Loyd preached for us at this place, and in his preaching he advocated "be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of as an exclusive formula to be said by the preacher when baptizing a candidate in order for his baptism to be valid. As a result of this preaching, a few of the breth-ren were baptized and thus divided the congregation. Brother Lannom, of Tennessee, is here in a meeting, and has effected a union of the parties by teaching that God has given no exclusive formula that must be said by the preacher in order to make the candidate's baptism valid, saying that if one is properly taught on the subject of baptism, as well as all other commands in the plan of salvation, that what the preacher says does not affect the validity of the candidate's baptism. Brother Lannom said that the command to baptize into the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost was that which the candidate was commanded to do, and not what the preacher was to say; that the Scriptures do not give any example of what the preacher said, but rather what the candidate did. He says to repeat the formula in Matt. 28: 19, 20 is just as scriptural as Acts 2: 38, and that Acts 10: 48 and Acts 19: 5 are just as scriptural as either of them, so far as what the preacher says in baptizing a candidate is concerned. The church here has accepted this idea, and we would like to have this printed, together with your idea as to whether we did as we should.

While I do not accept as correct all that Brother Lannom is represented to have said, yet I agree most heartfly with him in his conclusion. It is true that the candidate himself must be genuinely in earnest, must have scriptural faith and repentance, in order to be baptized into Christ; but the command given to the apostles by Christ himself was to baptize the candidate "in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." Hence, in the name of Christ, or by the authority of Christ, the administrator of baptism is commanded to baptize into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. One thus baptized is baptized by the combined authority of all the manifestations of God. By the act of baptism one is brought into subjection to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Spirit, and in consequence of this subjection he enters into Christ, receives remission of his sins and the gift of the Holy Spirit. There is as much warrant in the Scriptures for one putting into his formula of baptism that he is baptizing in order that one may enter Christ and in order that he may receive the Holy Spirit as there is to put into the formula that he is baptizing for the remission of sins. When a man, by the authority of Christ, is baptized into the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, God takes care of all the results that follow baptism. The meaning of Acts 2: 38 is that Peter, guided by the Holy Spirit, commanded them in the name of Christthat is, relying upon and trusting Christ, and by his authority-to be baptized into the names of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Peter was acting under the commission; and whenever any one was baptized by the apostles in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, it means by the authority of Christ he was baptized into the name of the Father, the name of the Son, and the name of the Holy Spirit. It should be noted that in Acts 2: 38 the names into which the administrator should baptize are not recorded; but the apostles knew Christ's commission.

By MRS. JEAN N. BARRETT.

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners, Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Music An Elemental Part of Life.

Dear old Mother Goose, the patron saint of children's music! How much the children of our family owe to her jingles! I can very distinctly remember my father playing with us and trotting us to the rhythm of "Ride a trot horse," "To Boston, to Boston, to buy a penny bun," and Little bow-wow to the mill."

No child, thoroughly imbued with these rhymes, will have any trouble in comprehending three and four-part rhythms, with their varied subdivisions and accents. How much more delightful to have all this rhythmic instinct grow up unconsciously from happy playtime than to have it left until a child is old enough to be conscious of his lack in this respect and has to go through exacting and tiresome drills to overcome it!

Happy the child whose lot is cast in a joyous musical atmosphere! There is thus implanted in his inner being a something which will help him to go through many trials with a brave heart and an unconquerable hope and faith that this is, after all, a good world.

We constantly hear mothers say: "No, my children have no talent for music, and I shall not bother to have them learn anything about it."

If I could feel that I had in all my life made a few mothers and a few teachers understand the difference between music as a performance and music as a life element and thereby gained for a few children this power which more than any other stirs the vital forces by which we live, I should feel that my share of life's troubles were a small price to pay.

A like misapprehension in the domain of art would banish from home and school the beautiful pictures and art forms which awaken a love of all that wonderful world of beauty revealed to the seeing eye and the appreciative mind because, perforce, so very, very few children have any talent for drawing, painting, or modeling.

One of the first steps in rousing a feeling for music is to lead a child to listen. How much stress is laid in our scheme of education upon teaching a child to observe, to see! How little upon teaching him to hear! The eye is made dominant in all things, and we lose much enjoyment which a trained sense of hearing might bring us. God made the birds beautiful, but he also gave them songs, so tender, so thrilling, that the very breath stops that we may listen, as we sit at twilight near the home of wood thrush or song sparrow.

To the open ear, is not the gentle, silvery murmur of the brook as it calls through the forest as keen a delight as is its crystal shimmer in a setting of green, when we have followed its call and found its home?

Let us not forget that the morning stars sang together, and that He who created them meant his children to hear their music in the melodies and harmonies of all his great creation.

The child brought up in the city has not the beautiful sounds of nature from which to get his first lessons in listening, but mother and kindergariner can make use of what they have. Even the scissors grinder and ragman help us out here. One of my little pupils, the daughter of musical parents, gained her first idea of imitating sounds correctly from a ragman's call. As we were having our lessons one day we heard this song come in at the window (I was going to say float in, but the ragman's tones are rather too strenuous to be called floating tones): "Rags, rags, rags! Any old rags or bott's!" The tune can be written thus: Do si la sol sol do do; but no words can describe the quality of the tones. At once I imitated the theme, and little Frances, to my great surprise, imitated me exactly, whereas before this she had hardly been able to get one single note correctly. His tune was unique, and it appealed to her.

Lead the children to listen in every way you can think of. Tap on different substances—wood, glass, silver. You may find a lamp shade that gives forth a definite musical pitch. Play tunes on tumblers, tuning them to musical pitches by varying the quantity of water in them and striking lightly with a silver knife or spoon. This device I found most useful in arousing interest in music in a boy who seemed to have no musical instinct whatever.

A writer says; "The greater part of children's time is spent in elaborate impersonation and make-believe, and the entire basis of their education is acquired through this directly assimilative faculty." This applies most forcibly to music and gives to those who have the care of children almost unlimited epportunity for developing musical expression.

A lullaby song at the child's bedside at night is a benediction beyond estimate.

Little Jack's Good Advice.

BY J. B. REDD.

Little Jack Tucker's papa, who had neglected somewhat his reading of the word of God, decided to again make an effort to set the good example of reading daily some portion of the Bible. So he purchased a large-type New Testament and proceeded to carry out the good resolution. His little son, five years old, had noticed it and approved very much of it. But he noticed that his mother was not reading it.

So be said: "Mamma, have you read that new book papa bought?"

"No, son, I haven't."

"Well, mamma, you ought to read it and see what's in it."

"Rough and Brown."

There walked the Son of God to-day,
Along the altar of his shrine;
Men saw him as they stopped to pray,
And felt him through the bread and wine.
The silver cup was shining, bright,
The linen cloth was clean and white;
But as the plate was handed down,
They saw the bread was rough and brown.

There came the Son of God one day
To worship in his Father's shrine;
Men saw him drive the thieves away
Who profited in doves and kine.
His righteous eye was shining, bright,
His scamless robe was clean and white;
But as he cast the tables down,
They saw his hands were rough and brown.

There walks the Son of God to-day,
Along his world's last battle line;
Men see him as they stop to pray,
And find him human though divine.
His saddened eye is shining, bright.
His robe, though torn, is clean and white;
But men thank God that he sent down
A Son whose hands were rough and brown.
—Harry Webb Farrington.

Look out for the unnatural weakness that indicates thinning of the blood and lack of power. It means that your bodily organs are starving for want of good nourishment; that the red corpuscles are fewer, unequal to demands of health. Hood's Sarsaparilla increases strength of the delieate and nervous, restores red corpuscles, makes the blood carry health to every part, creates an appetite.

Making Pictures.

BY E. M. BORDEN.

Possibly Abel did not realize the future meaning of his offering. It was a picture of a greater event. It was the first picture of the offering of Christ. Cain's picture was not true, for it had no blood in it, yet he was offended when God would not accept it. Cain's experience reminds us very much of men who are drawing pictures of the burial and resurrection of Christ. In baptism we are buried in the likeness of his burial and raised in the likeness of his resurrection. There must be a burial in the picture, or it could not be a true picture. The offering of sacrifice continued through the years until the real fulfillment came. In the tabernacle service the Israelites continued to make the picture. Even in the great Solomon's temple the picture did not change. There were other pictures that portrayed other events, such as the holy place, the veil, the most holy place, etc., but they were true pictures as long as the worshipers kept the commands of God. They made pictures of the coming Christ, the church of Christ, and things pertaining to them. It was not necessary for them to understand the future meaning of what they did. They knew it was pertaining to their salvation; but when they had done what God required of them, they were willing to let God do his part in his own way. They did not try to help God do his part. When Jesus was offered, it was "once for all;" and when it took place, the offering of animal sacrifice ceased and a new era began. Christ shed his blood for them and for us. Their offerings and their worship was imperfect without his blood. We also enter by his blood, but "by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh." (Heb. 10; 20.) We make pictures, but not of a coming Christ, but of one who has come and will come the second time to "gather up his jewels." We picture his death, burial, and resurrection in our primary obedience to the gospel. We are buried or "planted together in the likeness of his death," and we are raised in the "likeness of his resurrection." As Christ was buried, so we are buried. As he was raised from the dead, so we are raised to walk in a new life. It would not be a true picture if we "walked in newness of life" before we were baptized (buried). The very fact that we walk in the new life after baptism is proof that baptism is necessary. In the Lord's Supper we also draw pictures. Taking the bread, Jesus said, "This is my body;" and of the cup he said, "This is my blood." So in it we picture his body and his blood. We do it in memory of his body and blood. We are to examine ourselves to see that we cat discerning the Lord's body. Water will not do here. Its place is in baptism. An ordinary meal will not do. The loaf and the cup is what It must be, for Jesus said it. The cup is that of which they drank. It is the wine. Let us not forget that we are to do it In memory of Christ's body and blood. "He's all the world to me."

Living In the Unseen.

BY C. PETTY.

Paul says: "Though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day [growing stronger as the days go by]. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal [are passing away, fading, soon gone]; but the things which are not seen are eternal [no changes, no end]."

Thus Paul states that the Christians at Corinth were living beyond the present; living with their affection in the spirit land, though still in the flesh. Though the outward man was decaying and would soon topple over, or be dissolved, they were waiting and ready for a building that would never decay, a "house not made with hands." Sometimes, in traveling, we pass by a house in which a family lives that is almost ready to give way on account of its pillars decaying. Its doors will hardly shut, and it is all out of plumb and will hardly do to stay in. Again we pass that way, and a new house is built not far away, and the family has moved out of the old, decayed building into the new one, which is painted and polished and fit for them to dwell in happily. So with the Christian. When the body in which he dwells crumbles and falls, he will move into a building that will never decay. Though light afflictions come to him as dark clouds to hide the sun from his view, he does not abide with them; he rises above, just as the eagle, in dark, cloudy weather, spreads her wings and takes her flight above the clouds to be next to the sun. All men of faith are living this way, for "faith is the . . . evidence of things not seen."

Listen: "By falth Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." (Heb. 11: 7.) Thus the patriarch was living beyond the flood which he believed was coming. And "by faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went." (Verse 8.) His heart, his affection, was not on that strange country. He was looking and living beyond them; he was looking " for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." He confessed he was a stranger and a pilgrim and cared not to stay there, as he was seeking a better country, a country that never changed nor faded, neither would he be a stranger there. His faith caused him to forsake all earthly ties and the home of his childhood and live a stranger in a strange land.

John says: "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." (1 John 5: 4.) Thus it is. If our faith will cause us, if need be, to forsake all kindred, to endure persecution, to overcome temptations, to climb the mountains and cross the plains, to never falter at anything, we, like Paul, would live beyond the present world. Think of Paul and Silas in the Philipplan jall! "The magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them. And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they east them into prison, charging the jailer to keep them safely." Now listen: "And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them." (See Acts 16: 20-25.) They were not living in that prison; they were living at the gate of heaven, being swept by their strong faith over all tribulation. At the midnight hour they were praying and singing while fastened so they could not move their feet-living so calmly and sweetly in the unseen.

"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

In simple trust, like them who heard
Beside the Syrian Sea,
The gracious calling of the Lord,
Let us, like them, without a word,
Rise up and follow Thee.

Church News

Georgia.

Atlanta, September 19.—I am now in my third month with the South Pryor Street congregation. We are progressing as well as we can hope for. I am the first regular preacher they have ever had—I mean the first one to give his whole time and this congregation support him. Our attendance is getting better each Lord's day. We have had six additions to the church and many to place their membership with us. We have doubled our attendance, at least. We have some very consecrated people with which to worship. Brother J. A. Harding and family meet with us regularly and are much help to the work here. Brother Harding received news the first of this week that his aged father had passed away. This was not unexpected, as he had been in ill health for some weeks. Brother John Klingman is to soon be with us. He may preach somewhere each Lord's day, but his family will be much help, and he, too, when he can be here.—R. H. Rogers.

Kentucky.

Stop, September 20.—Recently I made a trip to Winchester to see Brother J. D. Walling, and was glad to see him improving so nicely. While there I met Brethren M. P. Lowry, W. M. Harding, Waller Harding, Brother Rutledge, and several others whose names I have forgotten. During my short stay I was mostly with Brother M. P. Lowry and family. While there Brother Lowry was called to preach the funeral of Brother Shepherd, father of J. W. Shepherd, and at the station I met Brother J. W. Shepherd. I was also in the home of Brother J. W. Harding, who is ninety-six years old. He was very feeble, and it looks as though the Lord will call him home soon. [Since this report was written, Brother Harding has gone to his reward.]—W. C. Ramsey.

Gadberry, September 16.—Elder Porter Norris, of Lucy, Tenn., closed a most successful meeting at Smith's Chapel last Sunday night. We had great audiences, great Interest, and great preaching. His gospel messages were kind and loving, yet forceful and compelling. Brother Tom Archy accompanied Brother Norris and assisted greatly by his godly walk and conversation and by his fervent prayers. Eight persons were baptized and the church was greatly revived. Brother Norris was among his own relations in this meeting, this being the home of his early childhood; and his heart was made to rejoice when an old uncle, who had passed his threescore and ten years, made the noble confession and accepted Jesus as his personal Savior. We pray God's richest blessings upon him and trust that he may be with us again.—Leona Hurt.

Fulton, September 18.—Since my last report I have assisted in meetings at Mount Zion and Fremont, in Obion County, Tenn., and at Middleton, in Hardeman County. I have held or assisted in meetings at Mount Zion and Fremont for four or five years. They asked me to come again next year. Both of these places have some excellent members, and they remembered me well in a financial way. There were three additions at each place; large and attentive audiences. MIddleton is a little town at the junction of the G. M. & N. and Southern Railroads. Our brethren have a new house of worship there and are starting off nicely in the Master's work. This was a most enjoyable meeting for us, as so many attended and heard the gospel who in former years would not respect "our plea." I preached twice each day, afternoon and evening, for nine days. Some of our night audiences were so great that the meetinghouse could not furnish them room, and some stood at the windows on the outside until services were concluded. Eleven were baptized and one re-claimed. The brethren asked me to return for a meeting next year. This meeting was also well supported in a financial way.-T. M. Carney.

South Carolina.

Woodruff, Route 3, September 22.—
Brother Thomas H. Burton preached for us last Friday night. We certainly appreciated his visit with us. He will be off for Tennessee this week and will not be with us for something like two months. We have good crowds at our Bible study on Lord's days. There are only thirteen members here now. One has entered the David Lipscomb College, Pray for us.—L. R. Briggs.

Tennessee.

Pulaski, September 22.—I closed a meeting at Providence, in Giles County, on September 14, for Brother T. C. King, who was called to a destitute field in Alabama. The meeting was well attended. Brother King delivered some convincing sermons in his kind, clear, and forceful manner of speaking. Three persons were baptized.—Charles T. Powell.

Yuma, September 22.—Brother Stanley Jones, of Clarksburg, Tenn., began a mission meeting at Shiloh, in Carroll County, on Sunday, September 14, and continued it till the following Friday night. Great interest was manifested throughout the meeting. This was the first gospel preaching ever done at this place. There were six additions, two from the Baptists.—Arnett Hendrix.

Shelbyville, September 22.—Brother S. H. Hall closed a two-weeks' meeting here last night. There were eleven baptisms and one restoration. Brother Hall, as usual, did some very fine preaching, the good results of which cannot now be estimated. Brother L. G. Kennamer conducted the song services well. The meeting was a great success. We all love Brother Hall and Brother Kennamer.—B. C. Goodpasture.

Martin, September 22.—I preached for the brethren at Troy last Saturday evening and on the following Sunday Oklahoma Lady Tells How Her Husband Believes in Black-Draught and Uses it for Many Ailments.

Nowata, Okla.-Mrs. W. B. Dawson, a resident of this place, says:

"My husband is a great believer in Black-Draught, and thinks it cures about everything.

"It is splendid for headache, constipation (which usually causes headache), indigestion, or any kind of stomach trouble, and we just keep it for these troubles. I don't know when we haven't used it, and we always find it satisfactory.

"I know it has done us both a lot of good and saved us many dollars. I use it in teaspoon doses at first and follow with small doses, and it sure does make a person feel like new.

"It cleanses the liver better than any other liver tonic I have ever used, and after taking a thorough course nature asserts itself and you are not left in a constipated condition that follows a lot of other active medicines. This is one thing I like especially about it."

For over seventy years Thedford's Black-Draught has been in use for many simple ailments, and to-day is a recognized standard remedy in thousands of family medicine chests. It will pay you to keep Black-Draught in the house for use when needed.

Four Figures in the Christian's Life. No. 4.

BY S. W. BERRYMAN,

The Christian life is compared to a race. This race is spoken of in many places in the Bible. David said: "I will run the way of thy commandments." (Ps. 119: 32.) To run in this race is to live as the commandments of God direct us to live. To be Christians and gain heaven in the end. we must run in this race. Paul says concerning this race: "Wherefore see-Ing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sinwhich doth so easily beset us [or set us back], and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." (Heb. 12: 1, 2.)

There are several reasons why every responsible person should run in this race. First, we should run in it because we have a great "cloud of witnesses." (Heb. 12; 1.) We should run in it because it is a direct command. (Heb. 12: 2; 1 Cor. 9: 24.) The commandments of the Lord must be obeyed. Our right to "enter in through the gates into the city" depends upon it. (Rev. 22: 14.) We should run in the race because a prize is offered. (1 Cor. 9: 24-26.) We should run in it because the prize offered is "incorruptible." (1 Cor. 9: 24, 25.) We should run in it because all will be crowned if faithful to the end. (2 Tim, 2; 5; 4; 6-8.) There is a vast difference in this race and the ancient Greek races of Paul's day. In those races only one contestant was crowned: but in the Christian race all will be rewarded with the "crown of righteousness," if they run lawfully. (1 Cor. 9; 24-29; 2 Tim. 2; 5; 4: 6-8.)

Having noted the importance of running in this race, we will now notice some things that we must do in order to receive the great prize in the end. Paul says: "And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully." (2 Tim. 2: 5.) God has given us a law telling us where and how to run this race; and if we follow his law, "strive lawfully," we shall be crowned. The law says "lay aside every weight." (Heb. 12: 2.) A and B are engaged to run a foot race. When the appointed hour comes, A "lays aside" all unnecessary weight from his body and removes the heavy shoes from his feet. The hour arrives for the race. B appears on the ground with heavy shoes on his feet, a hundred-pound sack of salt on his shoulder, and some other unnecessary matter in his hands and pockets. The race is run. A wins the prize, but B faints by the wayside. Are you surprised? The successful man in the Christian race Is YOUR BLOOD STARVING

Iron Is Red Blood Food-It Helps to Put Strength and Energy Into the Veins of Men and Roses Into the Cheeks of Women. Why Nuxated Iron so Quickly Builds Up Weak, Nervous, Run-down People.

Thousands of men and women are impairing their constitutions, laying themselves open to illness and literally losing their grip on health, simply because their blood is thinning out and possibly starving through lack of Iron. Eack of Iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weaking, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly robs him of the tirtle force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life. It may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and tritable.

Iron is absolutely essential to enable your blood to transform the food you cat into muscular lisase and brain. It is through iron in the red coloring matter of the body that life-sustaining oxygen enters the body. Without iron there is no strength, vitality and entirance to combat obstacles or withstand severe strains. Contrary to general opinion, lack of iron in the blood does not necessarily mean your blood is not of the right kind. To help make atrong, keen, red-blooded people there is nothing better than organic iron products it is eastly assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. No matter what other tonics or iron remedies you have used without success. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tred. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated from three threeper day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous rundown people who were alling all the while have increased their strength and endurrance in two weeks time while taking from in the proper form. Nuxated from is now being used by over three million people annually, and the manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

the man who "lays aside every weight." A "weight" is anything that hinders us in the Christian life. If we have hatred, envy, malice, and strife in our hearts toward any one, these are weights, and we must lay them aside. Thousands are failing in the Christlan life because they are not willing to "lay aside every weight."

Not only must we "lay aside every weight," but we must lay aside "the sin which doth so easily beset us." The besetting sin of the Hebrew Christians was unbelief, and doubtless this is the besetting sin of many in the church to-day. Let a brother's faith in God's word weaken, and you will see him sit down on the "stool of donothing" and suffer his own soul and the souls of others to be lost. Many stay away from the worship on Lord's day because their faith is weak. They do not give liberally to the support of the truth because they do not believe that it is necessary. Hence, on account of unbelief, many are failing in the Christian life. We should strive to cultivate faith, that It may grow stronger instead of weaker. (2 Thess.

After laying aside "every weight" and "the sin which doth so easily beset us." we are to "run with patience the race that is set before us." Patience is necessary in any vocation of life. Hence, in the Christian race, patience is also necessary. Peter teaches us to add to temperance (self-control) patience. (2 Pet. 1: 6.) Paul tells us that it is through faith and patlence that the promises are inherited. (Heb. 6: 12.) Many people fail in the Christian race because they are lacking in patience. We should be patient in tribulation (Rom. 12: 12), in suffering (1 Pet. 2: 20), in well-doing (Rom. 2: 7), in bearing fruit (Luke 8: 15), in waiting (Rom. 8: 22). If we follow the instructions of our Lord, we will be sure of the victory in the end.

May God help us to be obedient, that heaven may be ours to enjoy when this race is ended. May each of us have the same mind and determination of the apostle Paul. He says: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 3: 13, 14.)

The Hot-Weather Test makes people bet-ter acquainted with their resources of strength and endurance. Many find they need Hood's Sarsaparilla, which invigorates the blood, promotes refreshing sleep, and overcomes that tired feeling.

FIELD REPORTS

Alabama.

Huntsville, September 22.—I conducted the song service for Brother L. B. Jones at New Hope, Cannon County, Tenn, beginning on the sec-ond Sunday in this month, but had to leave him on Friday night to begin a meeting with the Merrimack congregation here in Huntsville. We had good crowds yesterday, and we expect a good meeting.—E. Gaston Collins.

Arkansas.

Morrillton, September 22.- I closed my meeting with the faithful followers of the Lord Jesus Christ at South Seventeenth and Dodson Avenue, Fort Smith, last night, with three baptisms and three by membership. These brethren, though few in number, are strong in faith. All loyal preachers passing that way are invited to visit them.—J. A. Cullum.

Fort Smith, September 21.-1 closed the meeting at Pleasant Valley Church, the meeting at Pieasant Valley Church, near Van Buren, Tuesday night. The meeting resulted in five additions, three by baptism. Large attendance throughout. Nearly all the people in that neighborhood are Baptists. We hope that the seed sown may bring forth fruit later. The brethren paid me ninety dollars for the week's work. I am now engaged in a singing normal on Culpepper Mountain, near Formo-sa. I will begin the meeting to-night. My brother is with me to lead the singing. We hope to do good. I had the pleasure of hearing Brother R. H. Johnson, of Booneville, three times at Brother Johnson is a great Formosa. preacher. He is thinking of changing locations, and desires to take up local work with some congregation for half or full time. Brethren, if you desire a minister, write to Brother Johnson. —Will W. Slater, Colorado.

Fort Collins, September 18.-Last Lord's day I stretched my tent in Loveland and began a meeting from which I hope to permanently plant the cause there. Heavy rains made the first night's effort a failure, but since then the crowds have increased each night until we now have a tent full. No meeting this year started off with brighter prospects than we now face in Loveland. The effort is expensive to us, but this will be forgotten in the good accomplished. For Instance, the bare lot to stretch our tent on costs us one dollar a day, or twenty dollars for a three-weeks' meeting; and this was the only lot to be had in the city at any price. A house or hall for a three-weeks' meeting would cost us between seventy-five and one hundred dollars, which we could not afford; hence the tent meeting. In one place in this State we paid seventy-five dol-lars for a church house for only ten nights, and in a place in Wyoming a house for five nights cost us sixty dollars. Christianity here pays standard prices for all commodities, so far as my experience proves, save in a few instances. This is why we seek to own a house in each community as soon as possible. Sometimes we are favored unexpectedly, as here in Fort Collins last winter, when we secured house for two weeks for nothing. But a congregation in Loveland will mean much in this part of the State. We formed a congregation there a few years ago, which was kept up through the cooperation of Belivue and Denver brethren for about a year; but some having died and others moved away, we now have to do it all over again. There are a few members there now-tour or five-who have been meeting with us here in Fort Collins as regu-larly as possible; but the distance is fifteen miles, which makes it too inconvenient for regular attendance. My tent meeting in Wyoming was a complete failure on account of the winds and rains. I was there one week, but did not get to preach a sermon. Every evening just as I would begin singing or the Scripture reading, a storm would come up and dis-perse the crowd, and finally the tent was blown down. I then shipped it to Loveland for the present meeting. Tent meetings do not pay in windy Wyoming. I was out even thirty dol-lars on that effort, and nothing accom-But I have determined, the plished. Lord willing, to return this fall or winter and try to get a house—the City Hall—which I am told can be some reasonably. I hope to make the coming winter most profitable to the Lord's work on this field,—E. C.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put On Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countiess preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

beauty, there are evalently thousands to mean the women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thimess and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among drugglists as bitro-phosphate known among drugglists as bitro-phosphate which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphatic food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health, Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

EAUTION:—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

"Stop, Study, Look, Listen!"
BY W. R. RAINS.

I am glad to see these warnings on the street cars and sidewalks of our city, "Stop, study, look, and listen;" and I believe that when obeyed they prevent many sad accidents and even deaths. This is plainly verified in the unthoughtful ones who fail to observe and obey these plain and simple warnings, step upon the railroad in front of a passing train or try to cross the street in front of an automobile or street car, and are killed or crippled for life by failing to stop, study, look, listen, and obey these warnings for their guaranteed safety. Now, while this is sad and horrible, it is as nothing compared to the loss sustained by the ones who fail to stop, study, look, Hsten, and obey these warnings as being the voice of God from heaven to all who will hear and obey. Stop living wicked, sinful and ungodly lives; stop oppressing the poor and the needy; stop teaching false doctrines; study the word of God that you may be approved by him; study your duty to him and his promises to you for it; look to him for health, strength, food, and raiment; look to him for all blessings, goodness, and mercy; listen to him say, "Repent, and be baptized . . . for the remission of sins;" listen to him say, "I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved;" listen to him say, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him;" listen to him say, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God;" in fact, listen to and take heed to every word he says, and obey it, and you will walk in safety and not step in danger and meet eternal death,

Premier Clemenceau Accepts Bible.

Some months ago the American Bible Society had a specially bound volume of the Bible prepared and sent by President Wilson to the Peace Conference. It also prepared a memorial addressed to the Peace Conference urging religious freedom for all the nations of the world to be provided for in the peace treaties. Mr. Frank H. Mann, one of the general secretaries of the society, announces that he has just received word from President Wilson's secretary as follows: "The President asks me to say that he did present the Bible to, and it was very cordially accepted by, the president of the Peace Conference, Mr. Clemenceau. Every effort was made by the Peace Conference to secure complete religious freedom throughout the world. Particular attention was paid to the matter in the treaties formulated with the new countries where religious minorities were particularly protected, and also in the provisions for territories which were to be put under mandate,"

On page 12 Mr. Bandy endeavors to prove that John the Baptist was a Missionary Baptist preacher. He tells us that John came on a mission, and, therefore, was a missionary. He tells us that Matthew calls him a "Baptist;" and as he is universally conceded to be a preacher, so a Missionary Baptist preacher. I am confident that if God had ever wanted him called that and it had been important, the record would say so; but in vain do we scan our records for any such expression. This is like the expressions, "Missionary Baptist Church" and "Christian Church." They are formed by the collation of isolated scriptures. They may appear logical, but we wish to ask some questions about them. First, if God did expect the church to be called the "Missionary Baptist Church," with so many opportunities to speak of it that way, why did he never do it, but always used another name? We ask the same thing regarding the term "Christian Church." Second, no matter how logically a name of our own may be formed, is it not presumptuous to do that which God has already done or frame terms of our own to supplant those God has already given us? By selecting a term here and there and making an expression for the nomenclature of Jehovah, we may prove too much. Take the term "Missionary Baptist Church." "Missionary" is coined absolutely; "Baptist" comes from Matt. 2: "church" comes from Eph. 1. That all collated makes "Missionary Baptist Church." Why could not we just as legitimately add something else from an isolated source-"shall be damned," for instance, from Mark 16: 16? Then we read, "Missionary Baptist Church shall be damned." One expression is just as scriptural as the other. Such methods of proof are unsafe. Of course, the only use that this proof could be to Mr. Bandy is that he and John preached the same doctrine; and as he endeavors to establish on page 13 that Jesus preached the same doctrine that John dld, therefore Missionary Baptist preachers are God's preachers because they preach as John and Christ did. Of course, while we admit that both John and Christ were missionaries and Baptist preachers (although only John could be a real Baptist), the term "Missionary Baptist preacher" is a human conception pure and simple and is in nowise of divine origin.

But grant that John was a Missionary Baptist preacher and all God's preachers are Missionary Baptist preachers, Mr. Bandy and his brethren could not take the title, for they and John the Baptist do not agree. Let us note three clear-cut differences between John and modern Baptists. First, from Matt. 3: 11, 12 we find that John so honored the Savior as to minimize himself, saying he was not worthy to "loose his shoe latchets." Can Baptists of to-day say they are honoring Christ that way when they wear the name "Baptist" as Individuals instead of "Christian," and the name "Baptist Church" collectively instead of "church of Christ?" Certainly not Second, from Matt. 3: 6 we learn that John baptized people "confessing their sins," Modern Baptists baptize people confessing their righteousness, as before baptism they must confess "that God for Christ's sake has pardoned their sins." Third, from Luke 3: 7-14 we learn what repentance consisted of according to John. When the people eried out what to do in "bringing forth fruits for repentance," each was told to act honorably and justly in his sphere of activity. Modern Baptists demand agonizing, weeping, and loud crying. They thus disagree with John on the subject of repentance. Therefore, if John was a Missionary Baptist preacher, Mr. Bandy is not; so his defense of John does him no good.

Further, on page 13, in order to prove his connection with Christ, he says John baptized Christ and made him a Baptist. I have intimated previously that Christ was not a Missionary Baptist preacher, even granting Mr. Bandy's argument. Now I wish to prove it. If we believe the scriptural record, Jesus was never a Baptist, when we understand the true meaning of the term. "Baptist-one that baptizes." (Young's Analytical Concordance.) No one is a Baptist who does not baptize. No Baptist can make a Baptist by baptizing, any more than a teacher can make a teacher of those he teaches. No one is truly a teacher unless he teaches.

Mr. Bandy says if Jesus were going through the country now and should be baptized by a Baptist preacher, people would say: "He has joined the Baptists." Yes, and all lovers of the truth would say something else, too. They would say: "He has either apostatized or lost his mind." When Jesus comes again, he will not come to join the Baptists; he will come to punish them for not obeying the gospel.

Mr. Bandy says that if all people would be baptized by an ordained Baptist preacher, division would cease. No, that would not be so. There would be fifteen divisions, because there are that many kinds of Baptists. But granting that Baptists are a unit, it is true that division might cease. The people would all be on one side, but it would be Satan's side. So far as strife is concerned, that would probably continue, because the children of the evil one often strive.

Mr. Bandy contends for the example of Christ-that as he was baptized, we should be baptized. To this I heartly agree. He says the baptism of Christ was an example that led him into the Baptist Church. If the example was perfect, then Christ came into the Baptist Church as an example for Mr. Bandy. Now, I want to ask Mr. Bandy how Christ came into that church, when, according to his own contention, it was not set up at that time and not until he had called the twelve on the mount?

In order to escape the argument that Jesus was not a Baptist because he did not baptize, Mr. Bandy says Jesus did baptize by "proxy"-that is, his disciples did it for him. Now, in harmony with the meaning of the term, that will not do; but suppose it would do, why is it Baptist preachers will not accept the "proxy" argument on the establishment of the kingdom?

If Jesus could truly baptize through the agency of his apostles, why could not Jesus truly set up the church through the agency of his apostles? But no. Mr. Bandy and his brethren say it must be done by "himself." To show that the term "Baptist" signifies an office rather than a name of the subjects of our Lord and that the definition we submit is correct, I call attention to the fact that a few years ago the Baptist people put out a translation in which the term "baptistees" was given its true meaning-"the immerser." They lost their name and called the book in.

Romantic Story of Southd's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, hao suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from EzWear; it the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. bility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has spring up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased folly three hindred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway. Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth while shoe shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

Givens.

Sister Maud Owens Givens, of Mc-Henry, Ky, departed this life on July 10, 1919. She was born on March 27, 1886. She professed faith in Christ at the age of fourteen and united with the Baptists, and she lived a true and faithful Christian. About four years ago she united with the church About four of Christ, and remained a faithful Christian until our Savior called her home to live with him. She said she was ready to die and prepared to meet She leaves a husband, three children, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn their loss.

NANNIE LANEY.

VanHook.

On May 5, 1919, the death angel visited the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. C. VanHook, of Norene, Tenn., and took from that home their daughter, Kathrine Webster VanHook. She was born on May 24, 1900. She was a modest, refined girl, full of Joy and sunshine, and was a pleasure to that home and to all with whom she associated. obeyed the gospel at the age of sixteen at old Hebron, in Wilson County, and lived a clean, pure, and faithful life. It is sad to have to give up those we love; but in this case we "sorrow not as those who have no hope," but re-joice in her hope of eternal life. May God's richest blessings attend Dr. and VanHook and all those who are left behind to mourn the great loss of such a friend and loved one.

Jones.

Roy Cleveland Jones, son of Walter H. and Emma Pruett Jones, was given to his earthly parents on September 19, 1915, and returned to his Father's house in heaven on July 10, 1919, at 2:25 A.M. Little Roy was indeed a blessing to his household and was loved by all who knew him. His dear, sweet, innocent smile won a host of friends who in part realize the loneliness of Brother and Sister Jones, Pruett, and Eva, caused by the absence of the baby prattle and smiles. Weep not, for little Roy has gone to a land where tears and sorrow never come; and although he cannot come to us, we have the glorious consolation that we can go to him. Funeral serv-ices were conducted by the writer at the home of Brother Jones, near Hurricane Mills, Tenn. H. I. COPELAND.

Coker.

On July 25, 1919, the angel of death visited the home of Brother Will Coker, near Burnsville, Miss., and took away his wife, Sister Sallie Coker. She was born on February 9, 1871; was married to Brother Will Coker on January 21, 1887; and obeyed the gos-pel in 1901. She was a loyal Chris-In her home she never tired in her efforts to bring sunshine and happiness. Sister Coker will be greatly missed. Berea Church has lost one of its best members. She was a friend and mother to me in my ministerial work. Brother W. B. Kelly and I were called to speak a few words of comfort at her burial, which was the day before my meeting was to begin near there. Her plans were to attend the meeting. She died with pellagra. She leaves a husband, two daughters, and five sons. Loved ones, live so that you may be as useful as your sainted mother. Her remains were laid to rest in the Burnsville Cemetery

E. L. WHITAKER.

Pruett.

Brother Edward Pruett was born on March 27, 1833. He was married to Myra Long in the year 1856, and to them were born nine children-four boys and five girls. All survive their tather and mother. Sister Pruett died tather and mother. Sister Pruett died in April, 1912. Brother Pruett obeyed the gospel in the year 1860 or 1861. He died on June 23, 1919. Brother Pruett was a good man. I do not mean to say that he made no mis-takes; for to err is human, and not to err is divine. Brother and Sister Pruett were industrious and provided well for the sustenance, happiness, and prosperity of their children; but, for all this, they did not forget the cause of truth. They gave liberally to the support of the gospel, and eight years ago, when made aware of the fact that they needed a better house of worship, they gave one thousand dollars for the building of the house. To the bereaved children I would say; Study your Bible as your source of comfort and consolation, rely upon the rich promises of the same, and live it in your lives; and may the Lord bless you all by helping you to live godly lives in Christ Jesus.

Waters.

On Wednesday, July 30, 1919, at 11:30 A.M., Mrs. Marietta M. Waters, daughter of T. H. Mustain and wife of the late B. H. Waters, died at her home in Horse Cave, Ky., of a cere-bral hemorrhage. Her death is greatly mourned by hundreds of sorrowing relatives and friends here and else-where. Mrs. Waters was, practically all her life, a devout and faithful member of the church of Christ, devoting much of her time and means to its progress. She was especially kind to the poor and needy, and did much in helping to proclaim the gospel in regions beyond, all in the Master's name, Her works were "works of faith;" her labors, labors of love." Of her we may truly say: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." She now rests from her labors and her works follow with her; and the loved ones she leaves behind, though they sorrow, yet they sorrow not as those who have no hope. "We shall meet beyond the river." Mrs. Waters is survived by five brothers and three sisters: George, Henry, Jim, Millard, and W. T. Mustain; Mrs. Frank Maddox, Mrs. Edgar Hill, and Miss Luttle Mustain.

D. H. FRIEND.

Hyde.

Rosa Hyde was born on August 22, 1885, and died on April 10, 1919. Fu-neral services were conducted by Brother J. P. Lowrey, after which her remains were laid to rest in Mount Vernon Cemetery. She was married to Robert Hyde on August 12, 1906, and to this union were born four children, all girls-Marguerite, Nellie, Robble, and Martha-all of which are living. She was reared a Methodist, but in August, 1906, she obeyed the gospel and was baptized by Brother Jasper Dunn, and thus became a member of the congregation at Old Thyatira. By her many good qualities and Christian ner many good qualities and Christian graces she endeared herself to a large circle of friends. She was a good neighbor, a true friend, a faithful wife, a devoted mother, and was loyal to the cause of the Lord. In her death her husband and little girls have sustained a great loss. May the Lord comfort, guard, and direct them. I would refer them to the great room to the would refer them to the great prom-ises made to those who die in the Lord. We weep, but not as those who have no hope. I loved this Christian woman and feel that she was one of my best friends, and it saddens me when I realize I will meet her no more here; but may we all so live that we can say, like Paul of old, when the evening shadows are lengthened: "I have fought a good fight, I have fin-ished my course, I have kept the faith," and be permitted to meet her " just over there.

MRS. R. W. JACKSON.

Robertson.

On April 25, 1894, two little brothers, twins, were born to Brother and Sister J. S. Robertson—"Aaron Ogleton" and "Avery Egleton," which they were named. They slept together, nursed together, played together, ate together, went to school together, labored on the same farm together, and in almost everything they were the same as one. They were the very light and sunshine in their home and a delight to all the community. In August, 1910, they heeded the gospel call together under the preaching of the writer. This step was a source of joy to all. How happy they were in the service of the Master together till they were separated for a time by the many miles between their home and the land of Europe, Avery having heeded his country's call to go! Only a few weeks after his return to be with his twin brother they were again separated till they meet again at the judgment of the great day. Aaron passed away on August 9, 1919, with typhoid fever, having been sick only a week. He was our song leader in the worship. "O what a sweet voice!"

Sunday, August 10, at about eleven o'clock, the funeral service was held by the writer of this sketch, at the church of Christ in Elora, where he so much loved to be with us all in God's holy service. This remark was made in that service: "During all the years that I have known Brother Aaron, I have never heard him use a single word which could have been heard by ladies with a blush." The very large crowd that attended his funeral will all testify to the truthfulness of these words. His young associates will attest these words. He was the clerk in his father's store here. His brother Avery now takes his place as clerk. Many now, entering the store, will say, "Good morning, Aaron," in addressing his brother Avery. The writer does this often. The remark, "If Aaron Robertson is not saved, the rest of us may as well quit," is many times made. His father and mother are just now recovering from the same disease which ended his life here.

Edifying as the Need May Be

The Perplexed David.

The Seventy-third Psalm gives us a picture of a man who was much perplexed by the inconsistencies of this life. The thing that worried David chiefly was the consciousness that God knew about these inconsistencies, but seemingly he was making no effort to correct them. He wellnigh lost faith in God when he saw the prosperity of the wicked. As David viewed the matter, the wicked were healthy and strong. They had everything they craved, and they had no trouble. To make matters worse, they were proud and arrogant. "They are corrupt," says he, "and speak wickedly concerning oppression." They even sneered at God and spoke "loftily," as if they possessed divine authority and owned the earth. In the face of all this wickedness and in spite of it, they were growing more prosperous every day.

The Psalmist says that his own efforts at holiness had gone unrewarded. Though he would make public claim of his integrity, yet he was continually afflicted. Still, he did not parade his doubts to discourage other people, but brooded over them in secret.

The Changed David.

Oftentimes we have seen a medical advertisement which portrays a man "before and after" taking a certain treatment. In the first picture and above the word "before" we see a pale, sickly, thin, emaciated specimen of humanity "with one foot in the grave." In the second and over the word "after" we witness a wonderful transformation. Here is a strong, tobust, cheerful man who is the very picture of health and happiness. I have given you a brief word picture of David before he took the proper treatment. And in this he certainly stands out as an example of hopeless despair. He excites our sympathy and stirs our pity. The psalm is not complete, however, until we find the changed David. A great transformation is indicated when we come to verse 17. "Until" is the luminous word that marks the mental and spiritual metamorphosis. "Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end." He realizes that he has been exceedingly stupid. "So foolish was I," he says, "and ignorant." Now he understands that he is kept and guided by the Almighty and at last will gain honor, while shame and destruction will come upon the wicked. Fellowship with God is the best thing either heaven or earth can give. As his powers fail, God will be his strength. He has no more doubts to brood over; he trusts God and is ready to tell everybody of God's dealings with him. Thus we witness the change from doubt to faith, from despair to exaltation. And it happened when he came into the house of God.

Critics Outside the Sanctuary.

There are thousands of people who need to get a new perspective of life just as David did. It is necessary to go into the house of God and to hear him speak before we count any case closed. A few years ago W. A. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga., said:

It has become quite common with a certain class of codless men to blame the church for the prevalence of all he evils which afflict society. Many of the evils of which ther complain have been fostered by men of their own kind, but by an amazing perverseness they pretend to believe that the source of all the ills of the social system is in the shortcomings of the Christian people and the Christian institutions that stand most positively for good in the community.

Is there conflict between labor and capital? Forthwith these men cry out, "The church is to blame" notwithstanding the fact that the voice of the church has been raised always against the covetousness and greed which are at the bottom of all the troubles between employers and employees in the land.

Do men forsake in their waywardness the house of God, the capitalist pursuing his gains and the laborer attending his union on the Lord's day instead of going to worship in the sanctuary? Instantly the cry is raised, "The church is to blame," although the men who have fled from God's altars have gone away because the church has been faithful in warning them against sin and calling them to repentance.

Do pleasure-loving idlers run to parks and shows rather than attend religious services? Immediately the railing accusation is made, "The church is to blame for not holding these people against the counter attractions of the world," as if the sermons and services of God's house could by any means be as attractive to frivolous and worldly minds as moving pictures and baseball.

And so the godless critics of the church multiply their accusations against the only institution among men which, with all its faults, real or imaginary, does stand and has always stood for the things that make for purity, right-coursess, and peace in the earth, and against the things which defile mankind and destroy civilization.

The point that I wish to make just here is that the accusations of these conceited critics are made by the people out of the church or by merely nominal members. Did you ever hear of a Christian who was faithful in the church bringing such a charge against it? Certainly not. It is only when we get away from God entirely or become remiss in our duty that we take delight in throwing bricks at his people and belittling his church.

Progress Not a Settled Thing.

Leaving out of consideration for the moment the matter of the soul's salvation, I know of no better tonic for the discouraged man than to come into the church and drink of the water of life. For one thing, experiences become a challenge rather than a depressant when they are viewed from the house of God. It is natural for people out of the church to think that everything is going wrong with the world and that the wicked have the upper hand; on the other hand, for the earnest Christian to say with Faul: "And we know that to them that love God all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose." (Rom. 8: 28.)

When you talk of it in a purely abstract way, the defeat of righteousness is always possible. We often speak of progress. But what is progress? That depends entirely upon our perspective. Progress is an enigma until people agree what the goal is and what movements are in that direction. Shortly after prohibition went into effect in the State of Kentucky, I met a man from Louisville, and I asked him how things were going in the metropolis. He said in an abject and disappointed manner: "Things are not what they used to be. Busness is on the bum and the old town is a back number." Shortly afterwards I met another man from Louisville, and I asked him the same question. His face brightened and his eyes shone with sudden eager interest as he said: "I am glad to say that we have a bigger, better, and cleaner city than ever before. Just watch us grow." Write to any city that has tried prohibition for five years and ask for the results, and the answers can be printed in part in liquor journals and in part in prohibition journals to the satisfaction of each, The city is ruined or it is made according to the standards men have of right and wrong.

Adverse Conditions Challenge or Depress.

That is true of life and its events. What Is the meaning of the adverse conditions in the world to-day? Do they depress, or do they challenge? That depends entirely on the point of view. The answer is found in your relationship to God. Easy-going people must admit that conditions are bad; political economists must admit that they are confusing; business men must admit that they are difficuit; profane people tell us glibly enough that "they are hell." But what does the Christian say? What does he think of the spread of Bolshevism? How Is he affected by the innumerable strikes that are breaking out? Has this old world taken the measles, or is it a case of smallnox? I think I can give you the answer of the man who looks from the house of God. He will see that conditions are constraining and also encouraging him to renewed service. He will not lose hope. He will remember that this is God's world in spite of the evil there is in it. He will resolve to be his best and to do his best in the midst of adverse conditions and lay out his life to the best advantage in dealing with stubborn hindrances. He will be reminded of the solemn fact that "we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wicknedness in high places." He will "put on the whole armor of God" and be "strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might."

Finding God's Viewpoint.

Seeing life from the house of God tends to correct moral judgments. In our city we have a jeweler who keeps the standard of time for the railroad men. These men sometimes judge their watches to be right until they go into the testing room. As a matter of fact, they cannot at all know that their timepieces are right until they go there and find out. The great and good men of the Bible are the men who have found God's point of view in reference to themselves. Nor did they succeed until they did find it. I suppose that Job was in many respects the most perfect man of his day, and yet, when he saw himself as he really was, he went down in the dust and said: "I abhor myself." David was a man after God's own heart, and yet he prayed: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow." When the great prophet, Isaiah, stood in the temple and heard the voices of the seraphim cry, "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts," he brought his face to the ground and cried: "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." Paul, the great apostle to the Gentiles, called himself "the chief of sinners," and Peter, who was certainly among the holiest men of his day, was forced to cry before the spotless beauty of his Lord: "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man."

It is just as true to-day. Some business practices often look like shrewdness in our own opinion until one comes into the house of God; then they look like the evil things they are. Not long since a business man of large interests, hearing his own letters read in court during a trial which affected his methods, declared he had never thought before how these letters sounded until he heard them from the court's point of view. Men see things as they actually are only when they examine them in the light of God's enduring word. It will always pay to do it. It not only means salvation from sin, but it also means a true vision of the world we live in and a wholesome enlightenment concerning God's dealings with man that may lift us from the slough of despond to where we may stand upon the mountain heights of achievement and victory. Surely David was right when he concluded. "It is good for me to draw near to God."

The Coming of Autumn.

I marked the Summer pass:
For days the wind blew angrity.
With now and then a breath of heat.
That sapped the life from men.
Who would, yet could not, flee
The sounds that heat by night and day
On door and window glass,
Till all the land was like a prison pen.
Where, weary as the crew on stormy main,
We prayed for rest, we prayed for rain.
One night twice came a hull.
Then, after flercer blast.
A pattering music sweet.
I fell asleep.
And when the night was past
I woke in calm so deep,
So deep, and yet not dull;
And going forth into the morning clear,
Lo! Autumn whispered: "I am here!"

Brother M. C. Kurfees and the League of Nations.

BY THE JACKSON.

In one of his recent articles our good Brother Kurfees assumes the rôle of an advocate of the League of Nations and mildly rebukes his brethren in the gospel for not speaking out in favor of it. We naturally suppose that his article is intended to assist in creating a sentiment that will force the ratification of the league treaty by the United States Senate. That is the purpose for which President Wilson is making his appeal direct to the people In behalf of the league: he hopes to create a popular sentiment that will demand acceptance of the league without any amendments or reservations. It is rather difficult to understand just why the President is so anxious for a hasty ratification of a peace pact which it took six months. for him and his conferees to agree upon.

It may be considered improper to devote the space of a paper with the mission of the Gospel Advocate to the discussion of questions pertaining to the political affairs of the world; but considering the significance of this league in its bearing upon the future of our own country, it is, perhaps, proper for journals of religion to call attention to its merits and demerits. If those who exploit its merits are allowed the free use of the religious press, those who oppose it because of its demerits should also be allowed the same privilege; and they should be given an impartial hearing. It is contrary to both the spirit and the letter of our governmental Constitution to throw any barrier in the way of free speech when such speech is not treasons-

Brother Kurfees censures his brethren in the gospel for not speaking out in favor of this so-called "league." For Brother Kurfees' consideration, and this without in tending to be harshly critical, I will venture the assertion that, of our ordinary citizens, those who are calling the loudest for adoption of this league are the ones who know the least about its real meaning. They have never read the document, have given no attention to any logical discussion as to the meaning of any clause in any one of its articles, and know nothing about the subject-matters with which it proposes to deal. The only reason that such persens can give for wanting it adopted is that President Wilson favors it and that he went to Paris to assist in the framing of it. These are good people, and in the ordinary affairs of life they act with business intelligence, but with regard to this League of Nations they are laboring under the delusion that it means an era of eternal peace and prosperity, when it may mean the slaughter of thousands of our boys in foreign lands. It has been my privilege to read a number of articles both for and against the league. including those published in such magazines as the North American Review and Christian Work, of New York City, and in the study of these discussions I have observed that those in the opposition are the most sober and logical in their reasoning. These opponents show themselves to be thoroughly acquainted with the principles of our own governmental Constitution, show by their methods of reasoning that they have studied the meaning of the league, and in every respect they show themselves more capable than, and equally as patriotic as, President Wilson shows himself to be. On the other side of the questions involved, those who favor the league deal largely in sentimentalism, basing their arguments upon claims that are not yet substantiated, claiming results to be accomplished by the league which are more than doubtful as future possibilitles. And more than this, the advocates of the league have resorted to all sorts of maneuvering in their appeals to selfish interests and to partisan prejudices. If anything can positively show that some men are more devoted to their own selfish interests than they are to the welfare of their country, the arguments that some are putting forth in favor of the league most certainly make that showing. All of this is significant and is of sufficient weight to cause gospel preachers and other thinking citizens to hold back their support of a measure involved in so much doubt

And it should not be forgotten that some very able and patriotic men who have watched the movements of President Wilson are now asking the question. "What manner of man is President Wilson?" This question is copied verbatim from an ably edited secular journal, edited by one who has long been affiliated with the President's own political party. For instance, it is clearly shown that the President is now giving an altogether different reason for our being in the war to the reason he assigned when he called for a declaration of war. Then he said that a declaration of a state of war was necessary because of Germany's disregard of American rights upon the high seas; now he says that we went into the war to assist England and France. President Wilson called for a selective draft law to raise an army to fight Germany for the maintenance of American rights; after the signing of the armistice he allowed these same drafted soldiers to be used in lighting people with whom our own country was not at war. The lives of American boys were sacrificed in the cold regions of Russia, in Siberia, and even at Smyrna, in Asia Minor. fighting battles in the interest of foreign powers. If this league pact is ratified, it will probably be the signing of a contract to force our boys to fight upon foreign soil in the interest of the claims of these foreign powers for long years to come. Signing of this league compact will give the semblance of legality to what has already been done In violation of our Constitutional rights. There are many other things that have been done to which attention could be profitably called. For instance, a treaty was made with France that promises to send our conscripted boys to fight for France in the event that she again gets into war with Germany. This so-called "league to enforce peace" is so portentous of evil for our own American liberties that gospel preachers cannot afford to lend their influence for its support.

Prosperity of the Soul.

BY R. P. CUFF.

Very commendatory, indeed, are the words of the apostle John-himself a mirror of spiritual light and love, peace, and joy-when in a startling prayer he pays high tribute to the life and character, to the soul prosperity of Galus; "Beloved, I pray that in all things thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth." (3 John 2.) From even a cursory reading of that scripture we would learn that the beloved disciple is solicitous for the good health of Gains. Look again to see what other fact may be obtained. Are you not met at the threshold of investigation by an almost shocking surprise? Why, the apostle makes the spiritual condition of that man who was " walking in the truth " the standard to which his external condition should be brought. Where is the man to-day whose spiritual health could be held a standard for his physical prosperity? Perhaps it would be more befitting now to invert the order and pray that the soul be as sound as the body. No wonder we are astonished when we read that language of John.

Already you have observed that this very earnest wish, this prayer in behalf of Gaius, has a threefold aspect. Three items are mentioned—prosperity in all things, being in health, and spiritual prosperity or health of the soul. These are things that add very materially to man's comfort and happiness in the world. They contsitute a great blessing from Jehovah. Out of the gratitude of his heart, due to the fidelity of Gaius' life and service to God, John prayed that that faithful man might be given such a triple blessing. Each child of God should strive to the attainment of that end.

Can it be right to succeed in business? Can it be doing God's service to prosper in secular affairs? As a matter of course, that depends somewhat on the nature of the business. Whatever kind it is, it must be a pure and holy work in a lawful and proper calling. No amount of mere formal consecration of the life can make anything wrong pleasing to the Lord. Not only must the work be pure and holy, but it should be well done. No effort at sham or deceit is favored by the Master. Again, the man of business should have his mind filled with the motive to serve man and honor God. "Whatsoever ye do, work heartily, as unto the Lord, and not unto men." (Col. 3: 23.) When a man has the right work, and does it well with the aforementioned grand purpose in his heart, then should he prosper? Read the language of Paul: "In diligence not slothful; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord," (Rom. 12: 11.) Well may we pray for the prosperity of that man who spends his substance in the service of God and for the spread of truth and righteousness. Christ, the great example for the world, has given us a solution to the problem of human duty. He was "in diligence not slothful" when it came to being a carpenter. At the same time, he was "fervent in spirit," a man of frequent prayer, bent on doing the will of the Father.

A man "must be in health" in order to enjoy secular prosperity. Health is usually not appreciated as it ought to be till it is lost. Then the loser begins to sigh for its return. The observance of the physical laws of our being is necessary to the maintenance of good health. These are inexorable. A large part of the misery and wretchedness of the world comes from a disregard of these laws.

Greatest of the three particulars mentioned in John's prayer is the prosperity of the soul. There must be an observance of moral and spiritual law. One part of man is earthy; another part is spiritual. It is foolish ever to be remembering the body and caring for it, but always forgetting and neglecting to care for the soul. The treasure in the vessel is even more important than the vessel itself.

When the treasure has been neglected, or when the soul has lost its health, its prosperity, and has become diseased, there are certain things indicative of that disease. One indication of a downward trend is lukewarmness. cause of the lukewarm condition of the church at Laodicea, the Son of God threatened to spew it out of his mouth-to sever relations with it. The lukewarm person will not get anywhere in living the Christian life. That professed Christian who is unwilling to take part in the service of God-who knows how to lead in prayer, for example, yet, when called upon, refuses to act-has a symptom of ill health at soul. Another sure sign of failing health of soul is selfishness, jealousy, a contracted spirit. Something is wrong when brotherly love fails to exist. Yet another had indication is the absence of a desire to know the truth of God.

On the other hand, what are the prerequisites of a prosperous spirituality? Well, what was Gaius doing that John spoke of his soul as prospering? First, he was walking in the truth. (3 John 3, 4.) Christians to-day must do the same thing. They must study the word of God, which is God's great pantry of food for the inner man. Should the question be asked, "And which of you by being anxious can add one cubit unto the measure of his life?"

(Matt. 6: 27), the answer would have to be: None of you. But should the question be asked. "Which of you by taking in the great thoughts of Jehovah and assimilating them can add great treasures, priceless gems, to the jewel of his spiritual life?" The answer would have to be: Many of you. Let us feed on the truth of the grand old Book and live according to its directions. Second, he was doing a faithful work. (3 John 5.) He was working for the truth. (Verse 8.) God's people of the present day must also be exercising themselves unto godliness. They must be at work for Jehovah. Let us pray for health and prosperity both in body and in soul, in secular affairs and in the service of God, not forgetting to seek first the kingdom and his righteousness, and our Heavenly Father will give us what we ask.

How to be Happy Though Deaf and Dumb.

BY OWEN PRYOR.

[Editor's Note.—This article was written by one of the boys in the School for the Deaf and Dumb at Knoxville, Tenn. He is a Christian boy. Sunday-school teachers can use this as an example of gratitude.]

The best way to be happy is by obeying the Lord and by making other people happy through acts of love and kindness.

I am glad that I can read the Bible, and am learning how Jesus loved the deaf and dumb people. I read a story about a deaf and dumb man. One day Jesus touched his ears and tongue. The man's ears and tongue were opened. He was very happy, for he could talk and hear.

We know that Jesus is not here in person, but he is always near us every day. He always helps us when we are in trouble. It makes me happy when I read the Bible and think of God and Jesus. If we are in trouble or something happens to us, we must pray to God about it, and he will hear us praying and will help us and keep us away from any of our troubles. He always makes us feel happy if we are doing right.

You know that there are many deaf and dumb people in the world. Many of them are very happy, because they are having good experiences. They have studied their different books and have been learning how to do right and be kind to one another.

I am feeling satisfied now, for I am having better experience and am improving faster in school than at home.

We (the deaf pupils) are always happy in school, for we have plenty of food, play, and studies.

I never get discouraged because of my deafness, for I know that God made me deaf and dumb. I also know that he always takes care of us every day and night. He loves the deaf and dumb children as well as the hearing children. My ears will be opened in heaven, if I am prepared for the future life.

Brewer's Book on "The Model Church."

The author's chief purpose in writing this book was to create a higher degree of efficiency in the workings of the local congregation. He would awaken many from a lethargic and disorganized condition and bring them to that point where they might conduct the Lord's work in a businesslike way and at the same time be controlled by the mind of Christ in all things. The book is written in pointed style and is conveniently arranged for class study. While it is of special interest to the leaders, at the same time it is of such a wholesome nature as to afford profitable reading for all the members. The book deserves a large circulation. The prices are very reasonable. Single copy, prepaid, $1; one dozen copies, prepaid, $9; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $17. Order to-day from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

- J. W. Grant reports a good meeting in progress at Wysox, Ky.
- J. H. Lawson was well pleased with the outlook at Lebanon, Tenn.
- W. P. Skaggs reports three baptisms and two restorations in the meeting at Noble, Okla.
- John T. Smithson has closed a good meeting at Gassaway, Tenn. He is now at Huntland, Tenn.

Two members were added to the roll of the Russell Street congregation, this city, on last Sunday.

- A. B. Lipscomb will begin a meeting for the Belmont Avenue congregation, in Nashville, Sunday. All are invited.
- F. W. Smith reports a good hearing in the meeting at Union City, Tenn. Spurgeon said: "The art of hearing is more difficult than homiletics."

Eighteen new members were added to the Lawrence Avenue congregation, in Nashville, on last Sunday Brother Scobey preached at both services.

- C. M. Gleaves closed a meeting at Philippi, near Hermitage, Tenn., in which there were nineteen baptisms. He is now at Gilroy, near Lavergne, Tenn.
- C. R. Nichol baptized fifteen persons in the meeting at Winfield, Ala. He is now in a meeting at Smithville, Tenn., and will begin at Hartsville, Tenn., on October 19.

Change of Address: John A. Klingman, from Marietta, Ga., to 299 South Pryor Street, Atlanta, Ga.; C. P. Poole, from Houston, Texas, to Clark University, Worcester, Mass.

From C. A. Buchanan, Floresville, Texas, October 1: "The Gospel Advocate is an excellent journal. The special numbers are most excellent. I am glad you have returned to this policy."

Brother McQuiddy's articles in reference to the Tennessee Orphans' Home have been very fruitful for good. We hope that there will be no cessation of interest in this good work during his absence in the West.

- J. A. Sisco writes: "Our meeting at Leeville, Tenn., resulted in one baptism. On October 2 we closed a meeting in Greenfield Bend, near Kettle Mills, that resulted in three baptisms. Success to the Gospel Advocate."
- From G. A. Klingman, Roswell, N. M., September 12: "I am in a good meeting here, with four additions to date. I am so glad you are having the special numbers. They are fine and very helpful. God bless you."

From William P. Walker, Dover, Tenn., October 2: "Our meeting on Dyer Creek, seven miles from Dover; in Stewart County, continues, with much interest being manifested. Two baptisms to date. Others are expected."

The elders at Denton, Texas, write: "More than twenty more young ladies from the schools gave in their names at the morning hour on Sunday, September 29. These, with the more than twenty before mentioned, will work with us during the school term."

From H. M. Phillips, Tuscumbia, Ala., October 4: "I have just closed a very interesting meeting at East Florence. The crowds were large, attentive, and interested. There were four baptisms and one restoration. Our meeting will begin here to-morrow. C. E. Wooldridge will take charge on Monday. Success to the Gospel Advocate."

From J. A. Cullum, Bartlett, Tenn., October 3: "My protracted-meeting season is now over. I am now at my new home at Bartlett, ready to arrange for regular appointments for fall, winter, and spring with congregations within fifty or one hundred miles of Memphis, as Bartlett is suburb of Memphis. If you desire my services once or twice per month, write me. I can take up the work immediately."

From T. E. Tatum, Hallsville, Texas, October 1: "Our meeting at Cross Roads, near Emerson, Ark., began on July 27 and continued with fine Interest over two Lord's days. One brother was restored to the fellowship, and we hope much good otherwise was accomplished. This church has produced several preachers and presents fine prospects of producing more. I love the Cross Roads Church for its good work."

From E. F. Bigger, Lewisburg, Tenn., Route 3, October 2: "G. W. Farmer has just closed a good meeting with the congregation at Verona. The church was greatly pleased with the splendid preaching of Brother Farmer, for he preaches the whole counsel of God in its ancient simplicity. There were ten baptisms and two restorations. One of these was from the Methodists and two from the Cumberland Presbyterians."

From E. L. Whitaker, Henderson, Tenn., October 2: "On last Lord's day I filled my regular appointment at Arnett's Chapel, near Newbern, Tenn. We adjusted some matters in the congregation that have caused confusion and division for more than five years. One young lady obeyed her Lord at the morning service and was baptized. That evening another lady came forward, and, like the Philippian jailer, was baptized 'the same hour of the night.'"

From A. D. Dies, Oakman, Ala., October 2: "Our meeting at New Hope, which is only about two and one-half miles from Oakman, was well attended, and seventeen were added by baptism and four by restoration. I am working with this church and at Oakman, at which place G. A. Dunn is now in a meeting. Many have been baptized and the work continue. I am now in a meeting at Shiloh. This is a courageous band of Christians. Our work is pressing on and we are hoping for greater things."

Forthcoming Debate — From I. B. Bradley, Dickson, Tenn., October 3: "There will be a six-days' discussion on the general church proposition at Pleasant Grove Baptist Church, about ten miles east of Wildersville, Tenn., beginning on Monday, November 10, at ten o'clock. The Missionary Baptists will be represented by A. U. Nunnery; the church of Christ, by I. B. Bradley. Brethren from a distance who wish to attend this debate may write to Dr. D. W. Bradfield, Route 2, Wildersville, Tenn., who will provide homes for them and arrange for transportation from the railroad."

From M. S. Mason, Rogersville, Mo., September 30: "I closed a meeting at Edwards Chapel, near Northview, on September 14, with one very excellent brother reclaimed; closed at Masters, near Fair Play, with one addition. Much good seed sown at both places. I am now at Sedalia, to begin to-night and continue till October 12. Then I shall go home for a few days, when I shall go to Jerusalem, near Denton, to begin a meeting on October 18. I am arranging my appointment work now for the winter—December to June, inclusive. Let those who are interested write to me not later than November 1."

From James E. Laird, Campbell, Mo., October 2: "I have just closed six weeks' work in the Ozark Mountains of Southwest Missouri. I held meetings at Antioch, Rogersville, and Flint Hill. I had one addition at Antioch, two at Rogersville, and two at Flint Hill. I promised to hold a three-weeks' meeting at Rogersville and the same at Flint Hill in 1920. I believe most of our meetings close too soon. I encouraged the churches in that country to buy a mission tent and to support some mission meetings next year. Brethren, let us endeavor to do more mission work. I go next-for a mission meeting near Blytheville, Ark."

From Mrs. Flavil Hall, Lower Salem, Ohio, October 4: "We are reading with much interest the special 'Prayer' Number of the Gospel Advocate. Any one who reads and meditates upon these articles must be made much better spiritually. Brother Scobey's articles always appeal to us. They remind me of the meeting lie held near Pineapple, Ala., years ago, when he baptized me in a pool near our home. Never can I forget his admonition to always be a light. My husband has just closed a meeting with the Dalzell congregation, with good interest. Our meeting at Trimble closed with the most happy results—splendid attendance, ten baptized, three from the Methodists and one from the 'Christian Church.'"

Preacher Wanted—"The brethren in this section want to locate a man here to preach and labor for four churches—namely, Eagleville, Riggs Cross Roads, Arrington, and Jones Chapel. We have decided to pay him at least one hundred and twenty-five dollars per month, and will pay more if we can get the right man and he doesn't think that is enough. We want a man that will devote his entire time visiting and laboring among the people. So, if there are any preachers who wish to make a change, let them please write me, giving references. I would like to hear from E. P. Watson. I have lost sight of him. The man who takes this work will have to have a car by some means, For further information, address R. P. Thurman, College Grove, Tenn."

The Arrogance of Romanism.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The Christian Leader, in its issue of August 26, reproduces from the Sentinel, Toronto, Canada, the following article:

Rev. J. M. Gillis, one of the Paulist fathers from New York who are conducting a "mission to non-Catholics" in Poronto, is reported to have made "a plea for the sanctity of the marriage vow" and to have "appealed to Protestants to join with the Roman Catholic Church in a stand against divorce."

Father Gillis evidently desired to convey the usual impression that the Roman Church alone stands for the sanctity of the marriage vow and that the Profestant Church approves the reckless divorce court. Nothing could be farther from the truth. No Profestant church ever granted a divorce, or ever attempted to do so. The Roman Catholic Church is the only church in this country that has a divorce court of her own. The Roman Church alone encourages men and women to disregard their solemn vows. On petty technicalities, and because certain fees had not been paid to the bishops for dispensations, the Roman Catholic Church frequently declares marriages "null and void" and gives both parties liberty to marry again. This is proved by the Hebert, Tremblay, and many other such cases in this country. By the operation of the Ne Temere decree many innocent women and children have been turned out on the street. Probably scores of young Profestant women who have married Roman Catholics escape a similar cruel fate each year in this Dominion by submitting to the priest, acknowledging a sin which they have never committed, johning the Roman Church, and undergoing a second marriage ceremony before a cleric of that organization. If, after the marriage, two Roman Catholics discover that they are third or fourth cousins, the church will declare the marriage of no effect, even if performed by a Roman priest, and both parties are free to marry whom they like. If, however, a dispensation is purchased from the bishop, the union at once becomes sanctified. But, should the husband prefer to escape his obligations and disown his wife and children, if any, the Roman Catholic Church and her Ne Temere decree provides him with every opportunity to do so.

The Roman Catholic priests should be ashamed to mention the marriage vow. The Ne Temere degree has broken up more homes and caused more misery than any marriage or divorce law ever enacted in the British empire. The decree could not be expected to serve any other purpose. It was formulated by a body of cellibates at the Council of Trent in the Dark Ages. The same clerics who drafted the Ne Temere decree also discussed the question as to whether or not woman had a soul. Men of that callber could not be expected to produce a decent marriage law, and neither did they. It was evidently drafted for the purpose of permitting the degenerate to go free and turning the innocent out in the cold. It is the most ridiculous, unrighteous, and outrageous so-called marriage law ever adopted by any body of men. The Roman Church did not dare to enforce it in the British Empire until 1968. It should be east back into the medieval darkness of Romanism from which it came. So long as the Roman Church enforces the Ne Temere decree, dissolves marriages, breaks up peaceful homes, and conducts an antiquated divorce court, no Roman priest should presume to appeal to Protestants on behalf of the sanctity of the marriage vow.

The most arrogant, presumptuous, and dictatorial institution on this earth is the Roman Catholic hierarchy, a mixture of Judalsm, Paganism, and Christianity, composing a religion whose spirit filled the world with deeds of horror in bitterly and relentlessly persecuting those who would not bow to the edicts of this "man of sin." It is an institution that has no respect for our public schools and has done everything within its power to suppress the reading of the Holy Scriptures in our schools. It has no respect for our marriage laws, and regards as illegitimate children born to parents one of whom is a Roman Catholic, unless the ceremony was performed by a Roman priest. An institution which at one time sold indulgences to sin, and which now, according to its "Ne Temere decree," breaks up homes, severing the marriage ties on other grounds than those laid down in God's word, has the audacity to send out its priests to lecture on "the sanctity of the marriage vow!" The divorce evil is a terrible thing, making inroads on our civilization that is alarming to an intense degree; but the Roman Catholic Church, with her past and present history, is unfitted to be a reformer in the matter. It is refreshing to see such a rebuke from The Sentinel, and it shows there is at least one secular paper not afraid of losing patronage by telling the truth. The fewest number of Protestant religious jourmais will lift their voices against the false teaching of the Roman Church, for the simple reason they do not wish to appear in the attitude of fighting a sister (?) denomination. As to the designs and avowed purposes of the Roman Catholic Church with reference to this land of liberty and freedom, note the following extract from the National Catholic Register, which Brother A. B. Lipscomb recently reproduced on the first page of the Gospel Advocate with appropriate comment:

It is God's plan that the Holy Father of Rome should be the spiritual and temporal head of his kingdom on earth. It is the same to-day as in the time of the first pape. The best way to accomplish this is through political power, through religious education and service.

best way to accomplish this is through political power, through religious education and service.

God has doubly blessed the Catholic Church of America by placing one of its most faithful sons at the right hand of President Wilson. Next to the President, Hon Joseph Tumulty, Knight of Columbus, thirty-third degree, wields the greatest political power of any man in America, and as a true Catholic he is exercising the great trust which God has given into his hands for the giory of the holy church. Through his tact and holy zeal he has created a warm friendship between the Catholic Church and President Wilson, together with the Democratic party.

Other Presidents have feared the power of the boly church and have courted its support politically, by granting it childish favors, which deceived no one. But this is the first time in the history of the country when the President and a great political party have openly sought an equal and honest alliance with the Catholic Church.

And before seeking this political alliance, the President and his party have shown their more faith by works.

And before seeking this political alliance, the President and his party have shown their good faith by works. Through the efforts of Hon. Joseph Tumulty, President Wilson has practically granted that education in the Philippines shall be under control of the Catholic Church, and that religious activity in the great American Army shall be under the direction of the Knights of Columbus. This means the addition to the church of one million of the country's best and bravest young men, or at least their strong preference and sympathy for the Catholic Church.

The Catholics will soon have an opportunity to prove their appreciation of President Wilson's friendship and at the same time increase their political prestige and strength. Every Catholic must awake to his duty and stand by his church and President Wilson.

The Master.

Into the woods my Master went, Clean forspent, forspent; Into the woods my Master came, Forspent with love and shame; But the olives were not blind to him, The little grey leaves were kind to him, When into the woods he came.

Out of the woods my Master came,
And he was well content;
Out of the woods my Master came,
Content with death and shame.
When death and shame would woo him last,
From under the trees they drew him last;
'Twas on a tree they slew him—last
When out of the woods he came.

The League of Nations and the Peace of the World Further Considered.

On page 987 of this issue of the Gospel Advocate we publish an article from the pen of Brother Lee Jackson kindly criticizing our recent editorial on the League of Nations and the peace of the world. We heartily commend the kind and brotherly spirit in which Brother Jackson has offered his criticism, and in this respect, as well as in some others, it is eminently worthy of praise and imitation. While we do not think it proper to enter into a formal and detailed reply, yet, in deference to his courteous criticism, we take occasion to say;

1. We are entirely willing that he shall be heard in his courteous statement of the case as it appears to him, and, therefore, gladly publish his article; but it would be unwise for the Gospel Advocate to become involved in a political discussion. As we understand matters, such discussions are out of place in a religious journal, and we tried, in the article in question, to avoid anything that even has that appearance. This decision is in harmony with the Advocate's well-known policy,

2. To the extent that we argued in favor of the present particular League of Nations at all, it was from the standpoint of what we assumed to be a common and universal desire for world peace, and the aim was to show that, regardless of all political party lines and leaving politics altogether out of the question, it is worth the effort for the nations to try, as an experiment, the present league on the hypothesis that, if it should prove to be a failure in part or in whole, and should even result in producing war. it could not possibly, with good reason, be supposed to do so any more than the system under which we have been living, which has filled the world with wars for thousands of years, and which resulted in the recent unprecedented World War with its horrible slaughter of millions of men. Hence, it was not our aim to be in "the rôle of an advocate of" this particular "League of Nations" so much as it was to encourage the nations to adopt some such league for the prevention of war; and it is believed that the present league will do that.

3. It may be true, as Brother Jackson suggests, that some "who are calling the loudest for the adoption of this league are the ones who know the least about its real meaning" and that "they have never read the document;" but the author of the article he kindly criticizes is glad to assure him that it was not merely a reading, but a very close and careful study of the document, a copy of which he has carried with him nearly ever since it was printed. which leads him to the earnest desire to see the nations adopt it. We have not only carefully "studied the meaning of the League" and followed closely its discussion on all sides, but our brother may be further assured that if we thought it would "mean the slaughter of thousands of our boys in foreign lands" who would not otherwise be slaughtered, we would, with all our might, oppose its adoption by our government. But, on the contrary, it is because of the very decided conviction that the adoption of the league by the different nations will prevent that very thing that we favor its adoption. We are tired of war and would fain never again see it lift its grim visage on the world. We want "our boys" saved from its horrors and from its slaughters. This will never be till the nations themselves agree to quit war. As long as one nation resorts to war, other nations will fight back in the same way; but when they all agree, as some American, English, and French statesmen in particular are now endeavoring to get them to agree, to stop war, then war will stop. Let us pray and in all legitimate and prudent ways labor for the coming of the glad day. Hence, when the nations of earth, as demanded by this present league, agree never to go to war except under conditions which are not likely to occur, we rejoice even in such a prospect and are glad to encourage them in the effort to bring about that end. Yea, we want to encourage them in the adoption of any measure that opens the clear and cloudless vision of international peace-not the "era of eternal peace," but the bright vision when the nations "shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks;" when "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." We even agree with Brother Jackson that the "claims" for the league are not yet substantiated, and no mortal can ever know absolutely whether it will do what is claimed for it or not until it is tried. But our point, in substance, was this-namely, if it should keep the nations in perpetual warfare, they have even then lost nothing by trying it, for that is exactly what the old system has done for thousands of years until it drenched the earth in blood with the recent horrible and world-wide catastrophe.

4. If Brother Jackson will extend his reading a little, he will also find numerous advocates of the league who "show themselves to be thoroughly acquainted with the principles of our governmental Constitution" and also "show by their methods of reasoning that they have studied the meaning of the league." Such well-informed men are in both the leading political parties, but have laid aside all consideration of party and are, regardless of all party lines, endeavoring to speak as American citizens and for the peace and prosperity of all the nations.

- 5. As to the opinions of certain men regarding President Wilson personally, it would be quite easy to parry our brother's remarks with exactly the opposite opinions of "some very able and patriotic men;" but this would prove nothing to the point either for or against his position or ours, and we decline to do so. Neither do we think it proper to answer in detail his charge that "the President is now giving an altogether different reason for our being in the war" from the one "he assigned when he called for a declaration of war," further than to say that we fall to see any inconsistency in doing a thing "because of Germany's disregard of American rights upon the high seas" and doing the same thing "to assist England and France" and all the rest of the world, for that matter.
- 6. Finally, we devoutly hope and pray that "if this league pact is ratified," or some such league, it will "be the signing of a contract" that will save "our boys" from being forced "to fight upon foreign soil" or upon any other soil in all the world. It is because of the very fact that we believe it will save "our conscripted boys" from being sent "to fight for France," or for anybody else in carnal war, that we believe "gospel preachers" can "afford to lend their influence for its support," just as it seems to us they can afford to encourage the nations in the adoption of any other measure that will lead them to stop resorting to carnal war for the settlement of their differences. Regardless of any and all political parties, some of the leading statesmen of our own country and of others have long contended for the adoption of a league to enforce and preserve peace throughout the world; yet there seems to be the tendency with some men in high places in the different parties to inject politics into such discussions, and this always hinders true progress. May God speed the day when the nations shall live in peace with one another and when carnal war shall be no more.

The Present Great Need of David Lipscomb College, BY E. A. E.

The trustees of this college are forced to continue their appeals for the much-needed funds to complete the girls' dormitory and the other improvements which they have so well begun.

Our readers have doubtless received and read our folders on true education and our letters appealing for help to erect a new home for girls and to make other necessary improvements of the college buildings.

It is best for all to know the present conditions, the further needs of this work, and what the trustees are compelled to do in order to complete it. We are pleased to be able to report commendable progress. We have received in pledges and cash, in round numbers, forty thousand dollars, and the foundation for two sections of this dormitory for girls has been laid and material for erecting it is being put on the ground. But we ask all to consider seriously the following facts:

- Since we began this work labor has been more or less disturbed and is difficult to obtain.
- Also, both labor and material have greatly advanced in price, forcing the trustees to raise a larger amount of money than was first estimated.
- 3. It will require, at least, thirty thousand dollars more to complete the work and to meet present obligations to different contractors. But all understand these conditions and that the trustees could not foresee them and cannot now control them. They will have to be met, and the friends of the school, we feel sure, will cheerfully help us to meet them.

- 4. The trustees-seven of them-have done and are still doing all in their power to carry on this good work and to make the school in every way a success. The whole management of it has been reconstructed and placed on an improved financial basis. The trustees have given their best thought, deep study, valuable time, and hard-carned money to the improvement of the school. They cannot ask others to do that which they have not done. They have led the way in all this work. While they are grateful for the generous responses to their appeals and liberal donations which have been made, do not all friends of true education feel grateful to them also for the management of this school and for all they are doing to improve it and to make it ever a success? They feel their responsibility deeply; but all others are likewise responsible for so great and good a work. LET ALL RALLY TO IT.
- 5. No school of the kind can erect new buildings, enlarge its borders, and increase its usefulness without liberal donations from its friends. It is not a private or individual enterprise and cannot be enlarged by the trustees and faculty. Its charges for board and tuition are no more than are necessary to pay the actual expenses of keeping the pupils and paying a living salary to the teachers.
- 6. Different schools and colleges of the country are calling for hundreds of thousands of dollars, while this one is asking for less than one hundred thousand. Others are receiving what they ask for. And so is this one.
- 7. To the audience at Union, in Sumner County, on the third Lord's day in September, I made a statement of the needs of this college and of the Fanning Orphan School, and that afternoon a brother gave a hundred-dollar Liberty bond to the college, and on the following Thursday I received from a widow a check for a hundred dollars and from her daughter another hundred-dollar check, one for the Fanning Orphan School and the other for David Lipscomb College. In addition to this, this widow gave recently fifty dollars to the college. I would give the names of these parties, but they prefer that I do not. A brother in that community feels sure a thousand dollars or more will be contributed there. So we feel sure, when the need and situation are understood, the money will be forth coming.
- 8. All know the best way to help the young or to help others is to place them where they can help themselves. This these two schools do. Poor worthy girls trained—properly educated—in the Fanning Orphan School fill paying and useful positions now in various business institutions in the land, while they shed a fine religious influence all about them. The good that David Lipscomb College is doing in the way of true education is more greatly felt now than ever before, because of the contrast between true education and infidelity in its incipiency taught in almost all the common schools of the land and in its development and boldness in many colleges and universities.
- 9. There can be no real, true education without some knowledge of the Bible, especially without the basic principles of industry, economy, self-helpfulness, useful employment, honesty, integrity, hatred of iniquity and all evil, and love of righteousness and godliness taught by it. The Bible contains the safest and best business principles of any book in the world; the purest and best and most classic literature of any book in the world; truest and best ancient history of the world; and, above all, the only true and undeflied religion of the world—the knowledge of the true and only God—Jehovah; of Jesus, the only begotten Son of God, full of grace and truth, and the Savior of the world; what men must do to be saved from sin and death and to live eternally. The Bible is used as a textbook in David Lipscomb College and the Fanning Orphan School, which all pupils study as a textbook and from which they recite dally. In these schools the best of all books in the world is used as a textbook,

10. A part of every true man's creed is to help others. Jesus teaches that it is more blessed to give than to receive. No greater help can be given to, and no greater blessing can be bestowed upon, the rising generation than true education; and there never was a time when in all Its phases true education was more sorely needed.

11. In the home first and in school next the foundation of true education must be laid. Here good character begins to form and is built, and without character there can be no true education.

12. It is true that the friends and supporters of these schools have sufficient money to make them everything financially which they ought to be, and let us hope that in a few weeks it will be a fact that they have done so.

Again, let it be said that the need of David Lipscomb College in the present crisis is very urgent; and to save the trustees and school of embarrassment and distress, the friends of the schools are earnestly requested to furnish the necessary means to complete the work so well

Those who cannot send money for the relief of the suffering in the Near East are now afforded an opportunity to send clothing.

Last winter "their weazened skins clung in fear to their rattling bones. Just human remnants, not protected from the elements by even the dignity of rags. The most favored have merely shredded rags. They are rough pencil sketches of humanity."

In response to an urgent appeal from Constantinople just received from Charles V. Vickrey, secretary of the committee, a nation-wide campaign for worn clothing will be put on October 15-22. The cablegram, which is dated September 11, states that vast quantities are needed. This is something that every one can do for the sufferers of the Near East. Ship salls on November 15.

Wanted-Outside clothing, undergarments, miscellaneous wool garments, and footwear.

Note-Shoes must be securely fastened together in pairs. Hats not acceptable, soft caps only Clothing should be packed in bales.

- 2. Bales should be sent to Near East Relief Warehouse, care of Mr. Fred Huseman, 135 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.
- 3. Notice of shipment should be sent to Near East Relief, I Madison Avenue, New York City.
- 4. Express and freight should be prepaid to New York
- 5. Near East Rellef takes charge of boxing for overseas shipment

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

PRICE OF MUSIC BOOKS.

On account of the great advance in materials and labor, it becomes absolutely necessary to make an advance in the price of all our music books. The cost of production has advanced much more than we have increased the price of books. The advance will take effect on and after September 15, 1919.

Below we give revised price list.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

By S. H. Hall

A Worthy Example.

Sister Vina Hooper, of Dickson, Tenn., took a position in the school at McGregor, Ga., in the fall of last year. She found not one member of the church of Christ there. She found some fine people, and they liked her work as teacher and called her back this fall. Her appeal for a meeting remained on my desk for months, because I could not go and could not find any other man to go. All of our workers were as busy as bees answering other calls. Finally we succeeded in arranging for Brother J. P. Prevatt, of Valdosta, to go. I would have been afraid to send just any man to that place. We could not tell beforehand how the people would receive a minister preaching just the simple and unadulterated gospel of Christ. I have known of preachers leaving a field just because things did not go easy at first. I knew that Prevatt had religion, and that if anything could be done, he would do it. Sure enough, he had somewhat of a tough time to begin with. No one offered him anything to eat or a place to sleep. He borrowed two quilts and slept the first night under the tent, and bought canned goods and made out on that. But this did not last long. He soon found his way into the hearts of the people. He baptized five souls, there being among the number a Methodist minister and his wife, and he left them organized for work. They will use the schoolhouse as their regular place of meeting till they grow stronger. Brother Prevatt is to go back soon for another short meeting. How happy our brother and this splendid sister must be over the result of their prayers and sacrifices! How many young ladies-and young men, too, and older men and women in the church, as to that matter-who are members of the church of Christ have gone into communities to teach school or do other work, and have never let it be known what they are!

At this writing I am at Milledgeville, Ga., in a meeting that is similar, in many respects, to the McGregor meeting. We are hoping to have good things to report about the work. It is all the outgrowth of a faithful sister in Christ. Brother C. E. Coleman is helping in the meeting.

Do We Feel As Did Christ?

When I receive the many calls for meetings from the waste places in this and adjoining States where we have one or two disciples, and in some instances not any at all, the call being that of some one who has become interested in the pure word of our Lord and who wants to know more about it, I am constrained to ask myself the question; Do I feel about such as did Christ? The following words are familiar to many of our readers; "But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion for them, because they were distressed and scattered, as sheep not having a shepherd. Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his barvest." (Matt. 9: 36-38.) The Gospel Advocate could not do better than to let one of its special numbers be right along this line. Here is something for which every congregation and every individual disciple should pray. I confess that such conditions worry me; and I certainly think that my condition would be alarming if I could sit unmoved by such conditions.

We need more men in the field preaching the gospel of God's grace to the people. We need more churches that will take a deep and abiding interest in striving to find in their own bosoms, within their own membership, young men who are morally and scripturally fitted for such work. and that will encourage them to take the field for Christ in his great desire to save the world. There is too much thought given to how we may make "the mighty dollar" and "get along in the world," and too little thought given to how we may go to heaven and get others to go there with us. Is not this true? And if true, how sad the thought!

Every congregation should be doing something to send the gospel to those who are calling for it and to call the attention of those to the gospel who know nothing about it. Every individual disciple should do the same thing. This we must do, else be lost ourselves for withholding from the people the very thing God has given us to give to the world. Did Christ give the gospel to the apostles to keep or to give to the people of the earth? The commission reads: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation." Suppose the apostles had kept the gospel to themselves; what would the consequences have been? Would not the apostles themselves have been lost and the world left in darkness? But those men gave the gospel to every creature that lived in their day and generation. In less than thirty years after the church was established in Jerusalem on the first Pentecost after Christ's ascension Paul wrote the church at Colosse, in which letter we find the following words: "If so be that ye continue in the faith, grounded and steadfast, and not moved away from the hope of the gospel which ye heard, which was preached in all creation under heaven; whereof I Paul was made a minister." (Col. 1: 23.)

The apostles are not on the earth now, but the same gospel is, and it was left in the hands of the church, and it is God's will that the members of the church give the gospel to every creature that lives in their respective generations. It is our duty to give all an opportunity now to hear the truth. "To the intent that now unto the principalities and the powers in the heavenly places might be made known through the church the manifold wisdom of God, according to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord." (See Eph. 3: 10, 11.)

Good News From Savannah.

It has already been reported in this paper that Brother Claus, of Valdosta, is now in Savannah in answer to a call of two or three faithful souls in that neglected city. He writes as follows: "The meeting here began last Lord's day (September 21). The interest is very good-better than we had expected. Brother Rawlings is giving us good support. He is a fine man. . . . We are going to leave a congregation here, even if it has but four or five members. They seem devoted and anxious to do all they can." If a congregation can be started there, Brother Claus can do it. He loves the plain, simple gospel of Christ and preaches it in love. This kind of preaching always does good. Our brother is using the tent and equipment that the South Georgia churches paid about four hundred dollars for. They are well equipped for work. The Atlanta brethren, assisted by Rockmart, Macon, and Hardie's Chapel, have put about the same amount in a new tent and equipment for this section of the State. We are under our tent for the first time in the Milledgeville meeting.

o o o More Good News.

We are glad to announce that Brother E. H. Ijams (pronounced lams) has moved to our State from Birmingham and will make his home near Fort Valley. He is now helping with the Macon work. One of our Georgia girls, who is an excellent school-teacher, met him and won him, and thus brought another preacher to our State. He was highly recommended to the Macon brethren by Brother John T. Lewis, and we are glad to tell our good brother that he comes up to his recommendation.

Training Little Children

By MRS. EDITH CLARK COWLES

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergariners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Begin to Form the Habits of Your Child From Its Infancy.

From the instant a mother hears that first significant cry which proclaims to the world the birth of a new life, she is confronted by a problem which increases in complexity with the passing of the years.

If she is a busy mother—and most mothers are busy—she will soon realize that upon the early habits of her baby will depend her ability to fulfill her many duties. She can train the baby to be entirely dependent upon her during his waking hours, and thus let him become the spoiled child who later develops into a family nuisance, or she can begin even when he is in his tiny crib to sow the seed of self-rellance, which will make of him the responsible and desirable citizen. She would not be guilty of pulling up the sprouting plant to see if it was growing; why carry her baby about in her arms or hold him in her lap when he can kick and crow so much more freely in his own bed?

The baby who is bathed, fed, given his nap regularly, allowed freedom in which to grow, and not hampered by too much attention, will develop into a healthy, happy, helpful child, and be a joy to his parents and a pleasure to their friends. The Children's Bureau at Washington furnishes, upon request, bulletins relating to the food, general care, and physical training of the infant.

As baby's mind develops, he will need diversion and amusement. For this purpose toys are useful which do not have sharp edges and which can be washed and kept sterile. A bell or rattle for the baby to kick may be hung from his crib or carriage, but it must be hung at an angle which will not produce eyestrain.

From earliest infancy the child displays a spirit of investigation, which it is well always to gratify. If possible, never leave his questions unanswered. If you lack the information, say that you do not know, but will find out and tell him; and keep your word. Few parents realize that they typify to the child the spirit of omniscience which God typifies to them, and that it behooves them constantly to strengthen such faith. The child who finds that he can depend upon what his parents tell him is less apt in his turn to deceive them, and the seed of mutual understanding and confidence is thus sown, to sprout and bloom for all time.

The spirit of investigation often leads children into the habit of touching every object they see. This is not always naughtiness and should not be so stigmatized. A baby's attention can be diverted from one object to another, while older children will desist from investigation as soon as their curiosity is satisfied. But if they are told unqualifiedly that a certain object must not be touched, they seem impelled by an irresistible force to handle that object in preference to all others. It is well to keep in mind the advantage to be gained by positive suggestion. Divert the child's mind by mentioning something which he may do, rather than strengthen his determination by a peremptory command as to what he may not do.

Your Bearing.

The stamp of what you are stands forth so plainly that your bearing tells about your life in silent facts. And it is the way of your bearing during every emergency of value that measures your ability to face all things bravely and well.

The world is little interested in your personal, inside history, but it is tremendously interested in what shines and radiates from it; and it is largely your bearing that reveals you in this way.

So, then, why not a bearing of smiles and strength-of happy concern-of courage?

Lincoln's bearing at Gettysburg, expressed in the handful of simple words that have long become sacredly classic, is an example of the kind of bearing the world most needs.

Many will remember you from your bearing alone; because mere words are soon forgotten when not backed by a bearing of action.

Here's hoping that your bearing may always be glad and right and that it may lead you where happiness grows.—Selected.

The Resurrection Story.

In the romantic beauty of the narratives of Matthew and Luke, a life, a presence, and a friendship are presented to us under dramatic forms of unequaled simplicity and loveliness, invested with a glamour none could resist. In the dew-drenched garden, at the lakeside, on the mountain, in the still assembly, at the evening meal, in all the sweet and natural circumstances of daily life, the eyes of love are suddenly made clear. A new transcendent life floods His followers; they feel the strong assurance of a strong and creative personality inspiring and upholding them, the release from all confusion and littleness.—Evelyn Underhill.

God In His World.

The Bible is often reminding us of the moral and spiritual significance of nature. The strong, abiding hills speak to us of the divine protection. "The hills stand about Jerusalem, even so standeth the Lord round about his people from this time forth for evermore." The bright clouds, as they pass across the sky, remind of us of Him "who maketh the clouds his charlot, and walketh upon the wings of the wind." The splendor of the sunset declares to us the glory of God, while the firmament, bright with the shining of innumerable worlds, showeth his handiwork.—G. Longridge.

Three Fights That Are Before Us.

Three fights are before us. First, the fight to find the real God. Here will be experienced all the agony of thinking and praying and striving and the effort to bring out into the light all the Godlike qualities of our nature.

Then there will be the second fight. The stern struggle to overcome the evil that is in all of us—the lust, the laziness, the cowardice, the paltry selfishness.

While we wrestle with these internal difficulties which lie in the rear, so to speak, we must press on to the third fight, the great constructive fight—the building of the kingdom.—W. J. Carey. O O

We are born into the possession of riches. The poorest man in the land is an inheritor of all but infinite wealth, in every department of civilization. Men to-day enjoy the liberty for which other men paid their lives. Coming into a civilization so ripe and rich—all these things constitute a temptation, if not rightly received. Moses drew the picture, and then said: "Beware!" In the time of prosperity, and fullness, and overflow, "then beware lest thou forget Jehovah."—Joseph Parker.

BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

Brother Charles L. Talley, of Cookeville, Tenn, writes to me as follows:

I notice an answer you made to a query on page 887, Gospel Advocate of September 11, that I am not entirely satisfied with; and if you will allow me, I wish to set before the readers and the querist an answer that I think will be more nearly according to the Scriptures than the one that you gave.

M. Y. Rickman, of Morristown, Tenn., inquires to know if Judas was present when the Lord's Supper was instituted. Your answer: "He was not." You predicated your answer on John 13: 30: "He then having received the sop went out straightway; and it was night." I fail, however, to see the order as you suggest in Matt. 26, day of unleavened bread (verse 17); the preparation of the passover (verses 17-19); and "when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve" (verse 20); the exposure (verses 21-25). Now, in verses 26-29 the Supper is instituted, and to my mind it is quite clear that the twelve were all present, for there is no account of any one's leav-ing. Luke (22: 1) says: "Now the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the Passover." In verse 3 we find Satan entered Judas, one of the twelve. In verse 8 Peter and John are sent to prepare the passover (passover feast of roast lamb and bitter herbs). ing to instructions, they found the "upper room furnished." "And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him." (Verse 14.) "He took the cup, and gave thanks, and said. Take this, and divide it among yourselves." (Verse 17.) This must have been the cup containing the drink of the passover feast, for we later see that he likewise took "the cup after supper." (Verse Thus I conclude that after the supper (passover) the Master instituted the Lord's Supper, which consisted of the bread for which he gave thanks in verse 19, and the of the bread for which he gave toanks in verse 1d, and the cup, the new testament in his blood (verse 20), and to my mind it is quite clear that the "twelve apostles" were all present up to this time. Yet in the very next verse he tells us "that the hand of the betrayer is with me on the table." The prophecy that went before said: "Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me." (Ps. 41; 9,) Here it was said of the character had in mind by the prophet (David) that he "did eat of my bread." This, without doubt, to my mind, did not apply to the bread of the passover, but to that bread that was to represent his body in the Lord's Supper.

I am glad to have Brother Talley criticize the position I took with reference to Judas' not eating the Lord's Supper. I know there are commentators that take the same position that Brother Talley does. I cannot accept the position that the sop refers to the Lord's Supper. Brother Talley says that Jesus ate the passover before the Lord's Supper; and from the best information I can get, it is probable that he ate it several hours earlier than the Jews did. While he ate it on the same day, it was not the same hour, but earlier in the day. The bread evidently refers to the passover, as the sop does not refer to the Lord's Supper.

To my mind, the evidence favors Judas' baving gone out before the Lord's Supper was observed. Without entering into a discussion with Brother Talley, I insert here the position of Brother McGarvey. The quotation is found on page 227 of "The New Testament Commentary" (Matthew and Mark): "'Drink ye all of it'—all the persons, not all of the wine. Whether Judas was still present, we are unable to determine with certainty. John, the only writer who mentions the departure of Judas, says that he went out immediately after the conversation about the betrayal: "He then having received the sop went immediately out." (John 13: 30.) This would settle the question if we could ascertain whether the supper was instituted before or after this conversation; but John says nothing about the institution of the supper, and while Luke mentions it before the conversation in question, Matthew and Mark both mention it after the conversation, and none of them gives any notes of time by which we can determine the chronological order of the two events. (Comp. Mark 14: 18-25; Luke 22: 19-23.) The probability is, however, that there was no eating done after the institution of the Lord's Supper, that the sop given to Judas was therefore given before the supper, and that he had already gone out when the supper was instituted."

Brother J. F. Neece, of Fort Smith, Ark., inquires to know whether it is unscriptural to divide into two or more classes, having a plurality of teachers, some of them women, and thus teach the Bible. Read his question:

Is it in harmony with the teaching of the New Testament for the church to come together on Lord's day, divide up into two or more classes, with a plurality of teachers, some of whom are women, to teach the Bible? Did Christ and his apostles practice this system of teaching? If so, please give chapter and verse.

There are different methods of teaching. Teaching by questions and answers abound in the Old Testament and also in the New Testament. Men are to teach by the publle proclamation of the gospel. Another method of teaching is to teach by writing, which is usually more accurate than oral teaching. But there is no method of teaching revealed in the New Testament to the exclusion of other methods. We learn from tradition that the rabbis taught children in classes. We learn from the Old Testament that classes were taught in the synagogues, and we learn, also, that the Jews were commanded to teach their children the word of God diligently in their houses, when they walked by the way, and when they lay down, and when they rose up. The class system of teaching was in vogue when Christ came into the world; so we find him commanding his apostles to go and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things that he had commanded. In the one glimpse that is given us of the childhood of Jesus, he is seen in one of the most advanced Bible schools of his day, within the temple limits, at the age of twelve years, having a part in its ordinary exercises in accordance with the customs of that time. (Read Luke 2: 47.) After a three-days' search for him by his parents, we are told that they found him in the temple sitting in the midst of the teachers, both hearing them and asking them questions, We learn that Aquila and Priscilla taught Apollos the word of the Lord "more accurately." Every disciple, including women, is required to teach the word of God to the extent of his or her ability. While I do not say that teaching means a class, I do say that one who teaches must have a class. Hence, I can see nothing in the contention that we should not divide up into classes, provided this is necessary for the most effective teaching. As we have babes and full-grown men and women in Christ, all should not be fed out of the same dish. If the calves and the cows were all fed out of a high rack, the calves would starve to death because they could get nothing to eat. Just so teaching must be adapted to children.

It is an undeniable fact that where the word of God is taught by questions and answers in classes the children are far better informed and obey the gospel earlier in life than those who are not thus taught the truth. I refer our brother to the New Testament for authority for teaching by questions and answers. The gospel abounds in such teaching, and so does Acts of the Apostles. It will be good exercise for our brother to read the New Testament through, if he wishes to find out just how much it abounds in the method of teaching by questions and answers.

ABOUT RHEUMATISM

What Thousands Have Found Gives Relief From This Painful Trouble.

Rheumatism is a constitutional disease, manifesting itself in local aches and pains, inflamed joints and stiff muscles. It cannot be cured by local or external applications. It must have constitutional treatment.

Take a course of the great bloodpurifying and tonic medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acid condition of the blood on which rheumatism depends, and gives permanent relief. This medicine combines, with excellent alteratives and tonics, what is generally conceded to be the most effective agent in the treatment of this disease.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed take Hood's Pills. Purely vegetable.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if Kidneys Feel Like Lead or Bladder Bothers

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness, and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean; and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and is harmless to finsh clogged kidneys and stimulates them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who be lieve in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Among the Colored Folks

From John A. Howland, Murfreesboro, Tenn.;

Brother John T. Ramsey, of Dallas, Texas, is doing some fine preaching at the Spring Street church of Christ, this city, with a fine crowd at each service and the best attention ever had here. He is baptizing daily. An old man was baptized to-day—eighty-two years and some months old. Brother Ramsey knows just how to preach the word in the way that all can understand. He does not fall to declare the whole counsel of God, but he preaches it in the spirit of meekness. It is our aim to keep him here as long as he will stay. He was with us last year, and the work has been growing ever since. The church is in a better condition than ever before, and this is all due to the right teaching. May the Lord bless Brother Ramsey in his work, and may he live long upon the earth to teach and lead many from darkness to light.

It is being reported that there will be a chance to get Brother Ramsey, back to Tennessee to stay. Should Should this be true, I am sure that the faithchurches in Tennessee will take hold with Brother Ramsey and work as never before. Brethren, pray that may do more for the cause of Christ in the future than in the past.

M. Keeble writes from Sparta, Tenn, September 30:

On September 3 I closed a meeting at Postelle, Ark., as a result of which three persons were baptized. The church of Christ at Blackton, Ark., supported this meeting. This church has a spirit to do mission work.

On the first Lord's day in September began a meeting at Sugar Grove, Ky This is a mission point where old Brother Womack has labored for several years, and he is greatly loved by both white and black. We were blessed with his presence throughout the meeting. Brother Womack is growing very feeble. In this meeting four were baptized into Christ and one was restored. The white people attended the meeting in great num-bers, and several of them were convinced and are only waiting for some white preacher to come and baptize them:

On the third Lord's day in September I began a meeting at Sparta, which grew in interest till it closed. One person was baptized into Jesus Christ, and many seemed almost ready to accept the word of the Lord. While here the white brethren began their meeting, which is being conducted by Brother King, I had the pleasure of being present at the beginning of their meeting. When the hour came for the Bible class, I was asked to take an active part. It was in this class that I met Brother King, and he consented to be present with the colored brethren and sisters in the afternoon I certainly did appreciate the Christianlike welcome accorded me by this church. It was my pleas-ure to hear Brother King preach two sermons and also make an encouraging talk at the colored mission. Lord's-day afternoon a large number of white brethren and sisters met with us and encouraged us. On Saturday was in town, and there was a land sale at the courthouse door, and a large crowd of white men were pres-ent. After the sale I preached for one hour, and was given excellent atten-tion from start to finish. In the crowd were several white brethren who were not ashamed to own me as their brother in Christ. Brother J. E. Thompson walked up and gave me a check for five dollars, and several others gave liberally. The white church liberally supported our meeting, although theirs was in progress at the same time.

My next meeting will be at Collierville, Tenn., beginning on next Lord's

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put On Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Norve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, and replacing usly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of bealth and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

boauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves, Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or moore back. By feeding the nerves directly and by suppling the body cells with the necessary phosph the food elements, bitrophesphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astimishing.

Therease in weight also carries with it general improvement in the health. Nervousness, alsopiessiess and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should som disappear, dutl eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfore thealth.

CAUTION—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

Romantic Story of Southd's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe huilt on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its moslistinctive features, case and comfort, had suggester' the name EzWear; it was suggested suggester the name ExWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a thoc would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, he made knows these bility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has proven by the enormous demand that has spring up in the South for ExWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about a shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

The Master's Vineyard

Alabama.

Coffeeville, September 27.-After closing my three meetings in Jackson County, Tenn., 1 came to Bolling, where I preached on the third Lord's day in this month. I have arranged preach at three places near Georgiana, embracing the first, second, and third Lord's days in October. Any congregation in Middle Tennessee or Alabama that wants my services should address me at Georgiana, Ala.

—G. W. Jarrett.

September 24,-1 Phil Campbell, closed an eight-days' meeting at Gravel Hill, in Franklin County, at the water, last Monday. Six persons were baptized. Two of them were from the Baptists. There is no church of any kind here. The Baptists and Methodists had held two meetings this season without any other result than forcing a half-hearted confession from two or three. I got one of them later. There is very little prejudice here, except among one or two preachers. It seems that the truth is readily received. I was in Nashville, Tenn., re-cently, and met Brother E. S. Jelley, who wishes me to return with him to India, and I have promised to give the matter prayerful consideration. anxious to go where I can do the most good.—Albert L. Stewart.

Oakman, September 25.-Our meeting near Maury City, Tenn., resulted in eleven additions. We were in a mission meeting, supported by the Maury City church, in a strong Methodist community, and we were treated nicely by the best and most refined people, but were threatened by others in several ways. Our arbor was cut down at one time, and finally they rushed in a Methodist preacher, a Mr. Bagby, from Halls, Tenn., after a so-licitation of several others had falled, and we signed propositions for a discussion to begin on October 15 at 10 A.M. We ask all the brethren who are in reach to attend, and especially the preachers. The discussion will be held in Crockett County, six miles west of Maury City. I am in an inter-esting meeting now, with one added to date.—J. W. Ballard.

Arkansas.

Texarkana, September 29.-Christian love is prevailing and much good resulting. One baptized, one identi-fied, and three from the "digressives." Brethren passing through are en-couraged to visit with us. Leave your hobbies behind. I am arranging some meetings in Mississippi for the coming year. Let those desiring my services write now in order to eliminate unnecessary correspondence later on .-E. Wainwright, Booneville, September 24.- I closed a good meeting with the brethren at Formosa last Sunday. Five were baptized and one was restored. One of the persons baptized had been bedfast since June 1. We made a large box and baptized him by his bedside. He rejoiced, and so did we. The Formosa church is a good one. This was my second meeting with these brethren. Brother Will W. Slater, of Fort Smith, was with us some during the meeting.

He is a fine singer and one of our best preachers. He is now helping the Culpepper congregation both in a meeting and a singing school, I will begin a ten-days' meeting at Williford on Fri-day night. I think I will leave Boone-ville about November I, so I would like to arrange to preach for some congregation for full or half time for the winter and spring months. I would like to hear from brethren where a preacher is needed .- R. H. Johnson.

Canada.

Regina, Saskatchewan, September 17.—Seeing numerous articles by way of reports from various fields published in the Gospel Advocate, it is my pleasure to report in some measure the work being done at this place. "A field white already to harvest" could well be applied to this city. There is a constant need for the truth as it is in Christ, as it was delivered to the inquiring masses by the apostles-the truth, the whole truth, ungarnished or marred by man. There are the usual number of edifices used for worship in this city as in others of this country, but to get the human tide called to a hait for solemn worship-that is the problem. For nearly three years I have been connected with the church of Christ at this place. Up to a month ago our membership has been small. but hopeful and studious. For the past month we have been blessed by the labors of H. A. Rogers, evangelist, of Carman, Manifoba, whose earnest preaching and teaching have already resulted in good that cannot be estimated. As results of his work among us, two young ladies, one girl, and three men were baptized into Christ, and two faithful mothers who had been baptized some years ago threw off their denominational names and united with the church. Brother Rogers expects to leave for his home in a few days. The brethren extended him an invitation to return to this field soon, and he gave them the cheering promise that he would do so as early as possible. Brethren, pray with us that the kingdom may grow rapidly here. The membership now stands at twenty-five. The Wascana Lake, situated between the Parliament Buildings and the City Park, affords an ideal place for baptizing. We hope in the near future to have a place of our own in which to worship .- H. H. Ward.

Notes from Canada.

BY H. A. BOGERS.

I left MacRorie on August 12. We had several weeks of very profitable meetings there. The church was greatly encouraged and seven persons were baptized. We have many good, earnest brethren there. MacRorie is a fine field for labor. There are many good people there who have not heard the gospel of Christ. The district is settled mostly by English-speaking people, many from Ontario and the States.

I came to Regina, Saskatchewan, on August 14, and expected to be here for only three days when I came; but from the first meeting it was evident that there were prospects for a good series of meetings, and so we kept on. The meeting has been a very decided success and the little band is in a state of rejoicing. Six have been baptized, two have come from the Baptists, and many are under heavy conviction. The writer came here in February, 1917. and held a meeting. This was the first meeting held by the church of Christ in Regina. It was uphill work, but a lasting impression was made and the few faithful ones still hold fast. I held another meeting the following spring, when three more were added to the little flock. I held another meeting during the following winter, when three others were added. One of those added in the spring of 1917 was a railroad engineer, and he still drives his engine. Most people are familiar with the life of the average railroad man; and Brother H. E. Foreman's was down to the average as regards whisky drinking. To-day he stands before the church and exhorts and teaches.

Small things made use of sometimes lead into greater. It dawns upon us now that the greater is coming. We need a house of worship so badly in this city, and a house we must have if we are to succeed. Cannot brethren everywhere help us a little to build a house of worship? Sister C. Seed is treasurer of the church. Her address is 1555 Garrett Street, Regina. All contributions will be very thankfully received and will be duly acknowledged.

Brethren, reading calls for help may have become monotonous, but let us consider more deeply than ever before what we are doing to convert the world to Christ. Of how many things are we denying ourselves that the story may be told? Is God pleased with us altogether, or could we do more than what we are doing? How much ease are we enjoying while the thousands are teeming into eternity not having heard the truth? Will this please God? Is it his will? Is it our will? If every soldier would do his duty, there would be churches all over this land, and on and on the good work would go.

OBITUARIES

Sullivan.

Little Odene Sullivan, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sullivan, was born near Nashville, Ark., on February 2, 1917. She was a sweet child, loved and praised by all who knew her; a real source of pleasure and happiness to her parents, and the idol of their hearts and of their home. "She was a little angel of God in disguise." On August 6, 1919, after lingering about two weeks with congnise." gestion of the brain, her soul de-parted and returned to God who gave There it shall dwell forever with the Father and the hely angels. She can no more come to her parents, but they can go to her. May God bless them in these sad hours of their be-reavement, and may he help them to so live that they may meet their loved one in the happy home above.

R. B. SULLIVAN.

Dunn.

On August 18, 1919, Mrs. F. A. Dunn, wife of the writer, fell asleep in Christ, She was the mother of eight children, all living, all members of the church, and all present at her death—three girls and five boys. Two of the boys, Douglas and Caskey, are preachers of the gospel. For thirty years she has been a faithful member of the church, regularly attending the weekly services, visiting the sick, and admonishing the wayward. A gloom of sadness overshadows our home and the church, where she is missed so much, but the example she has left will live on and on. The church has lost one of its very best members and supporters, and a bright light has gone out in our home. For forty-five years she has been my helper and comforter in time of trouble. She had passed her sixty-third year. She had many cares and She had many cares and burdens to bear, especially while I was away preaching—care of the children, care of the farm, care of everything that falls upon a poor preacher's wife depending upon manual labor for their support; and although I have led many souls to Christ, I believe she has made greater sacrifice for the cause of our Master than I, and in glory will wear the brighter crown. And now, by the grace of God, I shall follow her example, and fight on till death, and when the battle is over we all expect to be reunited and live with Him who loved us and washed us in his own blood. Brother G. W. Largent spoke words of comfort to her sorrowing loved ones and friends.

Ridley.

On the afternoon of July 15, 1919, the death messenger entered the home of Sister Lucy Whitworth Ridley and claimed her spirit. Sister Ridley was born on October 5, 1853. On October 1878, she was married to William B. Ridley, with whom she lived happily till death claimed him, fifteen years age. They both lived faithful to their marriage vows unto the end. To this union six children wers born, four daughters and two sons. Three of them passed over the river of death several years before their dear mother was called. She faithfully and lov-ingly cared for and nursed them and her devoted husband, as only a tender, loving mother can, till death claimed She not only cared for and them. watched over her own dear children. but she took into her own home a poor, homeless little boy, and was to him a mother, and such tender care and love he received from her till her health became so impaired that she was forced to give up her homekeeping. Truly could it have been said of her: "She looketh well to the way of her household, and eateth not bread of idleness." A truer, A truer, more faithful wife and mother could not be found. For more than twenty-five years she served her Lord and Master found. faithfully. She always possessed a meek, humble, and quiet spirit in the discharge of her every duty. Her trust was ever in Christ, and she went to him daily in prayer. If the prayers and tears of her children could have availed, their dear mother would have lived many years; but now they sorrow, but not as those without hope.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

Mankin.

On July 13, 1919, one of the noblest Christian characters of my acquaint-ance passed into the great beyond to give an account of his stewardship of the few years of his physical life. John P. Mankin was born on June 15, 1859, and lived all his life near Rucker and Christiana, Tenn. early training was of a spiritual nature, and his heart was constantly set on doing good for the cause of Christ. He was of a quiet nature and always considerate of every appeal for assist-ance that came to his notice, yet what he did was in such a way that very few knew of it besides the recipient. He was a man whose convictions were known by every one, and it was not necessary to ask on what side of any question he would be found. The church at Christiana especially has lost a stanch supporter and worker; but his work as a member there will be constantly before the minds of his fellow citizens and will not be forgotten for many days to come. Brother Mankin had an especial interest in the preachers, appreciating the efforts that must be made constantly to get people to listen to the appeals of the gospel. He was one of the kindest, most thoughtful, and most deeply interested friends that I have ever had, and his encouragement was manifested in many ways that his modest character never published. On July 15, 1919, his friends gathered with the heart-broken companion and bereaved relatives at his residence to show their appreciation of his life, and then ac-companied them to the Murfreesboro cemetery, where we quietly laid his remains to rest. The services were conducted by Brother George W. Farmer and the writer.

Coleman.

Eva Adelle Coleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Coleman, was born on November 20, 1895, and died on July 11, 1919. She leaves, to mourn her departure, a father, mother, one brother, and three sisters, also a foster sister. Her suffering was great for four months and twenty-four days, she having taken pneumonia, with abscesses of the lung following. Our once happy home is robbed of its brightest jewel. Her sweet voice is hushed, and the vacant place in our home and hearts can never be filled. But we, as Christians, try to look beyond death to the time when we shall meet her again. Eva was a true Christian, and, as expressed by those who knew her best, "Hyed a life worthy of imitation"—"a beautiful life," She possessed all the virtues that make a Christian character, and her community keenly feels the loss of one so much needed as she. She wanted so much to get well, and talked always of the future. She was going to be married to a noble young man who came home from overseas three months before her death. His devotion to her was wonderful, worthy of note, and God only knows the cross that was his to bear. She talked to him sweetly of her departure and urged him to prepare to meet her where they could be together again. On her deathbed she asked for songs to be sung and was so willing and ready to go. The calm, sweet smile on her face when she said good-by will surely comfort us forever. She gave instructions regarding her burial and asked that Brother W. E. Morgan preach her funeral. This he did, and spoke sweet words of comfort to our bleeding hearts. Also the elder of the church which she attended all her Christian life spoke of her faithful-ness to the church, how she was always present and took such an interest in Sunday school, and how she will be missed. The unusually large crowd at her funeral, the many tear-dimmed eyes, and the beautiful flowers showed the esteem in which she was held. HER SORROWING SISTER.

McIntyre.

On July 5, 1919, our beloved sister in Christ, Mrs. Christina McIntyre, closed her eyes to all earthly scenes and bade farewell to all the happiness, as well as the sorrows, of this fleeting as well as the sorrows, of this fleeting life. She was born on October 11, 1844, in Ekfrid township, county of Middlesex. On July 2, 1868, she was married to Archie McIntyre, who preceded her to the glory world about fourteen years. In January, 1881, she was baptized into the church of Christ W. D. Campbell, of Detroit, Mich., and from that day lived an exemplary She loved the church and was faithful to the post of duty as long as she had physical strength. Many times she and her husband would drive twelve miles on Lord's day to worship with God's children, and then, when the time came that she could not meet with the church, she would remember her Master by breaking bread, reading the Scriptures, singing songs of Zion, and praying all alone in her home—and yet not alone, for He who said, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them," will not forsake the one who worships alone. I knew Sister McIntyre for more than twenty years, and have had the pleasure of visiting in her home many ure of visiting in her home many times, which will ever be a stimulus to me along life's rugged way. My spiritual life has been strengthened by her counsel and godly life. On one occasion she said to me that when her end should come she would like it to be "going to sleep on this side and waking up on the other side of the mystic river." And so it was; the last few days she seemed to sleep She was ever ready for gently away. any good work. At one time she took charge of six motherless children (she had no children of her own) until she found homes for each one of them. She leaves one brother-D. S. Black, of Hamilton, Ontario-and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her The funeral was conducted at her home in Glencoe by Brother S. Whitfield, and her body was laid beside her husband in Oakland Cemetery, to await the resurrection morn. I sorrow at the thought of seeing her no more in the flesh, but live in the hope of meeting her again in the bright beyond where sad partings never come. MRS. JAMES JAMIESON.

FIELD REPORTS

Kentucky.

Hopkinsville, September 30.-I have just closed a good meeting near Dover, Tenn. Interest was good throughout. The "Hollness" people had recently held a meeting there and the people were confused. Four persons were baptized and one came from the Methodists who claimed she was baptized for the remission of sins. Quite a number came back to the church and promised to live the Christian life, Twenty-eight were enrolled and things set in order so far as could be. We met Sunday afternoon, and in less than twenty-five minutes we had money and material enough to build a nice church house. The Lord willing, I shall visit them next year. at home on Sunday morning and night. One obeyed the Christ. I am to begin a meeting in Dover, Tenn., the county seat of Stewart County, next Monday. -J. H. Hines.

Wingo, September 29 .- We have just closed one of the most interesting meetings at Pryorsburg that I have ever been permitted to attend. were not so many additions as in some, but the greatest interest. The attendance increased from the beginning. We had the largest crowd last night of any service during the meeting. Eight persons were baptized, in-cluding one Missionary Baptist and one "Holy Roller." One lady made the confession, but her husband would not let her be baptized. We have no house in which to worship, except the school building. We are very thank-ful for the use of that, but hope to have a house within the next year. Brother F. L. Paisley, of Memphis, Tenn., dld the preaching in this meeting, and it was well done. There are only a few members at Pryorsburg, but most of them are loyal and seem to want to do all they can for the cause. Brother Paisley was well supported in this meeting. May the Lord bless us all in our labors for pure Christianity. T. F. Bullock.

Tennessee.

Shelbyville, September 29.—We had two good services in Shelbyville yesterday. There was one confession last night, a lady from the Methodists.— B. C. Goodpasture.

Columbia, September 28.—I am conducting a meeting at the South Columbia church of Christ. We are having large crowds. Three were baptized last night. I go from here to Oklahoma for a debate, and then will hold a meeting near Durant, my home. Those desiring my services will please write me at Durant.—J. W. Brice.

Texas

Waxahatchie, September 22, Sunday was a good day at the College Street Church, with two added by relation. Brother J. S. Dunn began a meeting at Godley: Brother T. B. Wilkerson spoke at Ennis; and Brother Ethridge was at Bardwell. The writer was called to Trumbull on Saturday to preach the funeral of Grandma Epps.—Ben West.

Quanah, September 22.—Brother Austin Taylor and I closed our work at Mangum, Okia., last Thursday, with eleven additions the last night, making twenty-two in all. I was at Desoto, Midiothian, and Cedar Hill, Texas, in August, assisted by Brother Taylor at Desoto and Midiothian and by Brother Ira D. Brister at Cedar Hill. There were eighty-four additions to the three congregations. We will close here Sunday night.—Horace W. Busby.

Fort Worth, September 29.- I have moved my family to Fort Worth in order to keep my wife near the doctors who are trying to restore her health. I am glad to report her condition improved and to say that she has only had one epileptic spell in two months. She is much better, and I am now employed by the Southside-Central church of Christ full time, and will, I hope, soon be able to get along again without so much outside help. Our work is growing and everybody seems full of hope and enthusiasm. We will begin a protracted meeting about the third Sunday in October and make a special effort to revive the work here. We will be glad to have visiting brethren passing through Fort Worth to come to see us, and especially will we be glad to have them worship with us. -Tice Elkins.

Tahoka, September 26.-In order to establish the cause of Christ in Tahoka, the church of Christ is making an effort to secure a house of worship. which is greatly needed. We have no place of meeting except in the auditorium of the school building, which cannot be made comfortable, as there cannot be a stove put in the room. We must move out soon, and we have nowhere to go. Tahoka is the county seat of Lynn County, a town of about seat of Byfil County, a town of about a thousand people, and there is not a church house in the county. It certainly is a mission field. The church is composed of poor people, but they are rich in faith and loyal to the cause of Christ. Now, brethren, we have an opportunity for the next twenty days to secure a house of worship at a bar-We will have to raise about eight hundred dollars, and we ask you to present this before your congregation and send us a contribution within the next twenty days. This is a cause worthy of your fellowship, so please do not pass it by. Forward contribu-tions to R. T. Harris, who will prompt-ly acknowledge same,—G. W. Sanford.

Washington, D. C. (Special.)—Profiteering has no place in the dealing of the Pathfinder with the American reading public. Its red-blooded editor produces a wonderful weekly magazine that already has more than a million readers; and in spite of the increased cost of paper, postage, labor, and the advice of his friends, he refuses to withdraw his amazing offer to send the next thirteen big weekly issues for fifteen cents. He says it pays to invest in new friends.

The Pathfinder is indispensable, because it prints the news of the whole world; and every issue is packed with uplift, inspiration, intimate American interpretations of world events, and entertainment. Fifteen cents mailed to the Pathfinder, 135 Douglass Street, Washington, D. C., will secure the next thirteen big Issues.

Thy Help We Plead.

O Jesus, Lord, thy help we plead, Although thou knowest all our need, Jesus, Savior dear! Remember not our sins of old; Remember not our love grows cold; Hear us, Savior, hear!

The flesh availeth not to save,
Thy heavenly aid we humbly crave,
Jesus, Savior dear!
Unto our cry thine ear incline:
O, take our prayers and make them thine.

Hear us, Savior, hear!

Notes from the Field.

BY C. E. HOLT.

These notes are written from Flat Creek, Tenn., the former home of our venerable and highly-esteemed brother, J. D. Floyd. Our meeting is doing well. We have a natural baptistery near the meetinghouse where we baptize "the same hour of the night." This is apostolic, so far as promptness of obedience is concerned. When men and women decide to become Chrisrians, they should never postpone obedience to Christ in baptism longer than is absolutely necessary. I know of one country congregation-Chestnut Ridge—that has built one of the best concrete baptisteries I have ever seen. They get the water from the heavens. Water falling upon the roof of the meetinghouse is conveyed through a pipe into the baptistery. There is an overflow pipe which takes care of all excess water. Dressing rooms are there for men and women, making it clean and convenient. Other congregations whose meetinghouses are some distance from water and of difficult access could do this. If Christianity is worth anything, it is worth everything. Why is it that we spend our money so freely for everything but Christianity? The answer is easy. It is because our hearts are upon other things to a greater extent than upon our spiritual interests.

The issue of the Gospel Advocate for September 25 is special. The contributors write about "Prayer." We are not a praying people. Many among us pray mechanically. We "say our prayers." Some of us have a little stereotyped speech that we make to the congregation, and call that "praying," Men and women never truly pray when they do not feel what they say. We have to feel our dependence upon God before we can really pray. Prayer is not simply a duty, but is a privilege, a great privilege. It is as easy and as natural for a believer to pray as it is for a hungry and thirsty man to eat and drink. in our efforts to get away from the old-fashioned mourners'-bench system of "getting religion" by prayer, we have almost become a prayerless people. A prayeriess Christian is like a waterless well. A member of a prominent congregation once said to me: Brother Holt, prayer has only a reflex influence. God knows what we need, and it is entirely useless for us to ask him for anything. Everything in nature and in grace is governed by fixed and unchangeable laws. If a sinner will believe and repent and be baptized, he will be saved whether he ever prays or not. Prayer, however, will not hurt any one; so I do not uiscourage it." About two years ago that same man publicly renounced the faith, picked up his hat, and walked out of the church house. Many are Christians simply from environment and custom. This man was such a Christian. How can a person believe, repent, and be baptized and not pray? It cannot be done.

No one can believe-be a true believer-and not pray. No one can repent and not pray. No one can be truly baptized and not be in a seeking, trusting, loving, and prayerful condition of heart and mind, "Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts 22: 16.) "But sinners should not pray," say some; and they quote John 9: 31 and Prov. 28: 9. These scriptures refer to people whose purpose and conduct in life are sinful, When men and women turn to the Lord, forsaking their sins, they are not sinners as contemplated in the passages in John and Proverbs. In "Christian Hymns" we have a song that contains the whole truth in re-

Ground for Confidence.

We sometimes want to know how well a man has done when we are asked for an opinion as to how well he will do.

We almost instinctively judge the future by the past. This is reasoning by induction, a process that generally leads to right conclusions.

Certainly it is reasonable to believe that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has accomplished for others it can and will accomplish for you, provided, of course, you are afflicted in like manner.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has made thousands healthy and strong by purifying and enriching the blood, curing diseases of the stomach, liver, and kidneys, restoring appetite, relieving that tired feeling-in a word, by building up the whole system. Its record of cures of blood diseases, scrofula, salt rheum or eczema, psoriasis, pimples, bolls, and other eruptions, catarrh, dyspepsia, and rheumatism, is in thousands of letters voluntarily and gratefully written and forming a colossal volume of testimony. Surely anybody suffering from any of these diseases is fully justified in giving this medicine a trial.

The Unpardonable Sin.

BY J. H. WOOD.

The doctrine which places the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost prior to Pentecost appears to be gaining favor, judging by answers I see in some religious papers to the question, "What is the unpardonable sin?" (see Matt. 12: 31), and also talks I have had with a few of my preaching brethren. I am sure that those who assume that position have neglected to give both sides of the subject a thorough investigation. Since God first gave a law to a people, he judged those who were under that law strictly by it. Now, while Christ was on earth, he (Christ) was judging the children of Israel by the law of Moses. It covered all crimes against him at that time and was in force to the hour that it was nailed to the cross; but, according to that position. God announces another sin more terrible in its results than all other sins combined, but withholds the information as to the act or acts constituting the crime itself, whether it was in words or by an overt act, or by both. The Book is absolutely silent—that is, provided we confine the possibility of that sin to the time that Christ was on earth. The position absolutely does away with both repentance and pardon, so there is no place found for them. It is the opposite of the purpose of Christ's coming, according to his own statements oft repeated. Tt. of God against himself, for in less than two years after he announced that sin he offered pardon of sins to every individual under heaven who was capable of believing. The Holy Ghost had not yet come to testify of himself by a public display of his miraculous power, establishing his claim according to promise as world leader and guide to the apostles into all truth.

If that sin was possible back of Pentecost only, then what is it? It is not a command; it is not a promise; it is not law; but it could be a threat of vengeance. But if a threat of vengeance, how would it look placed beside Jesus' prayer while dying on the cross: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do?" I am trying to show what the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost cannot be.

Seeking Happiness Futile.

Those who seek happiness never find it-a truism that has been going the rounds since philosophers began getting their words into print or upon graven tablets. But it is well to repeat it occasionally, to keep it ever before the masses of humanity, that it may become so much a part of our creed and faith that the youngest among us and the oldest may realize the full meaning of the expression.

There is no greater unhappiness than that of pursuing happiness, for happiness is never overtaken by those who pursue it. Happiness comes to him who is not thinking of it; to him who is doing something for others, with never a thought of his own happiness. No man has ever yet followed a course of conduct with his own happiness in view and achieved his pur-

Service to others-that is all there is to life that savors of happiness. The service need not be great; it is given to few persons to be of great service. And those who are of great service do not realize it; they do not start out with that in view.

To be kind and courteous and considerate of the comfort of othersthat is the service which brings happiness. The man who helps a crippled old woman upon the street car is happier for doing so. The fellow who stops to wipe away the tear from the eye of a child who bruised its b d; the woman who visits a sick neighbor to see If she can be of any use; the man who puts another in position to help himself-these little services are quite great in the realm of things that go to make for happiness. And they are possible with all of us. Selected.

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever, and the grip is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid, there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's Another Debate With a Methodist.

Beginning on October 27, 1919, Jesse F. Love, evangelist of the church of Christ, and Daniel B. Turney, of the Methodist Protestant Church, will engage in an eight-days' discussion of the following subjects: (1) "Christian baptism is immersion; in it there must be a burial in water." (2) "The baptism of infants is authorized by the word of God." (3) "Christian baptism is for (in order to) the remission of (past) sins." (4) "In the conversion of the sinner the Holy Spirit acts directly upon his heart independently of any preaching that he may hear." Jesse F. Love will affirm the first and third propositions; Daniel B. Turney will affirm the second and fourth.

This discussion will be held at Big Clifty, Ky., which is on the Illinois Central Railroad, about sixty miles south of Louisville. Let every one who can do so attend this discussion. Mr. Turney is said to have had over one hundred debates, and Brother Love has had something near fifty public debates, and those who attend this debate will certainly learn something about the subjects under discussion. Those who come will be looked after by the people of Big Clifty.

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy, and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all read to use, at very little cost, This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied; it is so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft, and beautiful.

Visiting the Churches of Ontario.

BY J. L. HINES.

Continuing my visit among the churches of Ontario, I left Meaford on Saturday, September 20, and arrived in Beamsville about twelve o'clock, midnight. The lights were dim, the most of the people slumbering, but I made my way to the home of Brother Richard Cox and was soon snatching a few hours sleep so I would be "fit" for the next day. Brother Cox is a fine man and his home is a fine home. On Sunday morning at eleven o'clock I spoke to about one hundred people on the theme, "God's Missionary Society in Operation." All seemed to be attentive and to drink in the message. The church in Beamsville is in better condition than it has been in several years, and, under the wise teaching of that humble, wise, God-fearing, and godly man, L. J. Keffer, they are pressing forward, onward, and upward, drinking deeper and deeper into things spiritual. The church there numbers about one hundred and twenty-five, of which about ninety per cent attend the Lord's-day exercises. At 3 P.M. I assisted Brother Keffer in a funeral service, at which service Brother O. E. Tallman, of Jordan, also took part, After the service Brother Tallman took me to Jordan, in his "tin Lizzie," where I spoke to about eighty or ninety people at 7 P.M. I found the church at Jordan in good condition, with a membership of about eighty and with a heart to work for the Master. Brother Tallman Is their evangelist; and from what I could see and from all reports, he is leading the Jordan church forward under the banner of King Jesus. On Monday evening Brother Tallman hitched up "Lizzie," loaded in two or three ladies, some children, some baggage, and "Jake," and set out for what he called a "joy ride" (but I have another name for it) over a very crooked, hilly, narrow road at about twenty-five or thirty miles per hour. I thought a lot of things, but said but little; but without any broken bones we landed at a place called "Tinturn." I never asked why they called it that, for by that time I knew. I spoke to about twenty people here. The membership at this place is about twenty or twenty-five-few, but faithful. Brother Ralph Schell, of Toronto, preaches for them, and I know that they have a good man. From Tinturn I went to Smithsville and preached on Tuesday evening to about fifteen persons. This use to be a strong church, but for some reason it has diminished in the last few years until their membership is about twenty; but a few meet every Lord's day to break bread, and Brother Schell preaches for them once in every month. Next I came to St.

Catherines, where I spoke on Wednesday evening to about twenty persons. This is another church that use to be strong and in good working condition, but now the membership is about eighty-six, and about twenty-five attend to their Christian duties. One man did more harm to the churches of Ontario in one year than ten godly men could straighten up In ten years. I left St. Catherines on Thursday morning and reached my home (Meaford) that night at ten o'clock, tired and worn out.

All the churches that I visited on this trip said: "We are willing and ready to cooperate. We ought to do more work, we want to do more work, and we will do more work." Of all the churches that I have visited in Ontario, so far as I know, none of them have had a protracted meeting in years. This is a mistake; for when such is the case the churches lose interest, begin to lag and drag, some fall away and others will not come to worship, and the devil gets in his work, for Satan never takes a vacation. May God help us all to be filled with the evangelistic and missionary spirit.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHII TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHIII TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drugstore. 60c per bottle.

The Church at Denton, Texas.

BY R. D. SMITH.

The church at Denton is perhaps one of the oldest and best-known churches in the State, and, therefore, needs no advertisement. However, a few notes extending over the time the writer has been acquainted with the congregation will not, it is hoped, be amiss.

The church has been served by a number of men for the last twelve years—men who were both good men and excellent preachers and workers.

The first remembered is Brother F. L. Young, now of Paris, Texas. Brother Young served the church at Denton for quite a while in a very able manner. He is greatly loved by the Denton people, and the influence of his work still is felt in the town.

The next to serve was Brother Foy E. Wallace, whose devotion to the cause of Christ and whose enthusiasm in the service have made him an inspiration to all who have known him. His splendid work yet remains.

Then came Brother C. E. Wooldridge, now of Murfreesboro, Tenn., a man of splendid ability and a tireless worker. Brother Wooldridge contributed greatly to the success of the cause in Denton, and his work still has its influence for good.

Following him, if memory is not at fault, Brother R. L. Whiteside was engaged by the church and served for a number of years with ability. Through his good life and his strong teaching, Brother Whiteside accomplished creat and lasting good in Denton, and he now lives in the hearts and lives of the people.

A few months ago, following Brother Whiteside's engagement with the church, Brother T. B. Clark was called to the work. Brother Clark proved himself a wide-awake and energetic worker. It is said by those who were closest to the work of the church that the work showed great improvement in every way while he served the church. Brother Clark is a fine young fellow; and while he was with the church at Denton only a short time. he not only did a worthy work among the members of the congregation, but left also a good impression upon the people of the town. This good work will live on

The church at Denton having been thus served by these most excellent men and preachers, and having had all these years a number of good elders and deacons, is naturally in good working condition. For what the church is to-day or shill be in the future, let the credit be given to the falthful preachers who have served her in the past, to her loyal elders and deacons, and to the splendid membership. More than twenty young ladies from the schools identified themselves with the congregation last Lord's day.

Will You Help Corpus Christi? BY C. W. SEWELL.

Doubtless all of the readers of the Gospel Advocate have seen the accounts in e papers about the great tropical storm that struck Corpus Christl, Texas, on Sunday, September 14. The main part of the business section of the city and many of the dwellings is (or was) situated on the beach only a few feet above sea level. Just back of this is a table-land known as the "bluff." On this many of the residences and some of the business houses are built. All the beach portion was completely swept by the water. Only the stronger houses were left, and they were gutted of their contents: for the water was from four to twelve feet deep, and the waves swept through with such violence that doors and windows were smashed and the contents washed out. Here is where all the lives were lost and most of the property damage done. The bluff portion of the city, which is about forty feet above sea level, was damaged considerably, but only by the wind. Some houses were unroofed, windows broken, etc.; but it is slight in comparison with that of the beach. Most of the members of our congregation lived on the bluff, and so we have had but one death. Sister Baker, who, with her husband, George Baker, kept the Pavilion Hotel, built out over the water, was lost. Mr. Baker was saved. Several members who lived on the beach heeded the warning and escaped to places of safety, but lost what they had. The city is under military rule, and the destitute are being fed and clothed by our neighboring cities.

Our little church house was on South Bluff, but was badly wrecked, so badly that we do not think it best to try to repair it. And here is where we need your help. Most of our members are cotton farmers. Every lock of cotton that was yet in the fields was destroyed, and this, with other damages sustained by each of us, renders it impossible for us to build without help. We owe about four hundred dollars on the old property. We were expecting to pay this debt this fall and were planning for greater evangelistic work than ever before. The future was looking brighter than ever before the night before the storm struck us, but in twenty-four hours the work was done, and darkness and gloom hovers over the scene now. Yet we are not in despair; we do not propose to give up. "God lives," and his church will stand. But if we do not get your help, our recuperation will be slow. But with substantial aid from abroad, I feel that we will soon be on our feet again and can then help others. Will you help? All offerings will be acknowledged and reported and every cent will be used for the building. Send all contributions to your brother in Christ, C. W. Sewell, 701 C Street, Corpus Christi, Texas.

A HOME CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO RAD IT

In the spring of 1893 J was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years i tried remedy after remedy and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of theumatic trouble to try this maxwelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address, and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has prover itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar; but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly autised to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer, when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

"Baptists vs. Campbellites." No. 10.

BY M. S. MASON,

On page 14 Mr. Bandy offers as his third reason for Christ's being a Baptist preacher, that he preached the same gospel as John the Baptist. Have you ever observed how men minimize Christ and exalt John when they begin to try to establish Baptist doctrine? It is not so much that we and John be like Christ as that Christ be like John and us. It is altogether out of agreement with John's language in Matt. 3: 11, 12. May we ask Mr. Bandy some questions about this statement? Did that statement in Mark 1: 15 apply to both Jews and Gentiles? If not, Christ's full preaching was not like John's. If Christ preached as John did, why did the apostles and disciples working under the great commission repudiate John's baptism? (Acts 18, 19.) If Jesus preached the same gospel as John, why does John the apostle say "he was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light?" (John 1: 8.) In the same paragraph he enumerates several denominational preachers and says we could not even call Jesus a "Christian" preacher. Of course, the practical matter is not what kind of preacher Jesus was, as the real gospel and the one we are preaching to-day was never proclaimed till Jesus ascended to the Father; but what should interest us is, what kind of a preacher should preachers be called to-day? Inasmuch as preachers do not make Baptists by preaching, and no such term as "Baptist" was applied to God's children as such, and inasmuch as gospel preachers, according to the record, were Christians and made Christians by their preaching, what would be the logical name for a mentioned?

preacher in this connection? Certainly not "Baptist," but "Christian."

His fourth argument to prove that the preachers should be called "Bantist" preachers and the churches "Baptist" churches, is that Christ organized his church out of material prepared and baptized by John. He has, on page 15, the "twelve" called, ordained, and sent out by Christ, and, therefore, a Missionary Baptist Church! Now, this may have been a Missionary Baptist Church, but the record is silent on the matter; and there are many reasons why, though it may have been a Missionary Baptist Church, it could not have been the church of the New Testament.

The first two reasons we find in Matt. 10, from which Mr. Bandy dates "the beginning." First, it did not embrace Gentiles. They were to go only to the "lost sheep of the house of Israel." Now, further in his discussion, Mr. Bandy tries to "fix" this by saying that the church first embraced Jesus and then Gentlles were added. But that will not do. Paul tells us in Eph. 2: 15 that he was to make of twain one new man-that is, of two, the Jews and Gentiles, one new body was made, Now, if Mr. Bandy is right, Christ made the new man of the Jews and then enlarged him with the Gentiles. Second, those he sent out were to preach that the kingdom of heaven was "at hand." "At hand" means "approaching." Therefore, if the church was in existence when those men went out and preached, they falsified, for they were told to say that it was only "at hand." But, as Mr. Bandy says that "at hand" means "then present," we shall accept his new definition and see that his own interpretation will ruin him. John came preaching the kingdom of heaven "at hand." Now, if Mr. Bandy is right in his definition of "at hand," then the kingdom, or church, was present there in Matt. 3. But If present in Matt. 3, how did it begin in Matt. 10? Third, If that church were the church of the New Testament, it was a church without blood (Acts 20: 28), without life (James 2: 26; Acts 2: 4), and with no foundation (Isa. 28: 16). The Baptists build the church; they pry it up and put the foundation under it. That is why so many of them fish on Sunday; they can use that pry pole.

Mr. Bandy enumerates the stages of apostolic church history and says the whole program is simply a history of a Baptist church. Well, I just want to say that that is the first institution whose history I ever saw given without mentioning its name. I wonder if Mr. Bandy would like to have his biography written and his name never

He tells us there was a great Baptist revival on Pentecost. Well, if that is so, we do not see any Baptist' revivals to-day. Did the preacher preach as modern Baptists do, or did he, in a calm, dispassioned way, set forth gospel facts, commands, and promises? Did the preacher command seekers to pray, or dld he not give them plain, intelligent commands as we read in Acts 2: 38? Was there a direct operation of the Spirit, or were people convicted and converted through the preached word? If Mr. Bandy says they all received Holy Ghost baptism, we shall turn him over to the Methodists. If he says converts received it, this will demand of him that his people speak in tongues and be Pentecostians. If he tells just who did receive it, we will ask him why he does not preach the whole truth. He says the "twelve" were all Baptist preachers at Pentecost because they had received John's baptism. Well, if we consider the Holy Chost the agent and they were baptized by the Holy Ghost, then why were they not Holy Ghosts? Or if we regard Christ the administrator of the Holy Ghost, why were they not Christs? And if they were all Christs, what need they for Jesus to save them? They are just as good as he. Mr. Bandy clears this phase of the question by saying that if Baptists are right, all others are wrong, which I appreciate.

Environment of Early Christianity.

We cannot estimate aright the history of the Christian religion without knowledge of its antecedents, nor can we appreciate its success if we overlook the difficulties it had to encounter. It would be a very profitable study to survey the ancient world and note the conditions that would favor or retard the spread of the sospel and take a brief account of the genius and achievements of the three great peoples to whom the gospel was first offered.

When through with this resume we would be convinced both of the need and the preparedness of the ancient world. God makes no mistakes in history. Christ came, indeed in "the fullness of the time." The Graco-Roman world was socially, politically, linguistically, morally, and religiously in a wonderful state of preparation.

Sometimes we hear it said of a man's entrée into a certain community or work: "He came just at the right time." Regarding the arrival of the American soldiers in France, we are told that they came, "in the nick of time." Let us take this expression which we use in regard to the affairs of this world, both little and big, and make it applicable to the greatest boen that has ever blessed humanity, and say Jesus came in the nick of time, at the crucial moment, at the apogee of human need and craving.

I wish to present three views as to the conditions that prevailed in the ancient world and their influence upon the Christian religion. Two of these views are incomplete and misleading because they contain only half units. The other is in full accord with the Scriptures.

The Automatie View.

The first view represents the ancient world as producing Christianity automatically. It was merely a result of evolution and human progress, an adroit placing together of elements already as hand. Founders of the new fatth were astute enough to put some good old things together and make a brand-new article. The Jew offered to best he had in his religion; the Greek offered the best he had:

the Roman offered the best he had; and by putting all together they worked out the composite that the world calls "Christianity,"

The trouble with this view is that it ignores God's hand in history. It does away with the supernatural and the miraculous. True enough, the gospel could not come without its antecedents. The Jew did much in preparing for the Christian religion, whether conscious of it or not. The same is true of the Greek and the Roman. But God was behind it all. The gospel could not succeed if men's hearts were not ready to receive it; but the same God who planned the gospel prepared the soil. (Luke 1: 17; Matt. 25: 34.)

It is certainly proper to speak of the process of evolution in connection with the gospel, but it is unjust and untruthful to speak of it as merely the result of evolution, leaving God out of the calculation.

But how does this theory affect the reception of the gospel? Does it promote or does it retard its progress: It is unfavorable. As proof of this, I cite the main a beaucle that must be overcome by missionaries in such countries as Japan and India. The natives are always ready to hear what the missionary has to by They are not so heathen that they will refuse to list at the list it is proposed that the worshiper In Japan put away his religion and substitute Christ and his gospel, he lets the missionary know that it is not to be considered for a moment. Not on your honorable eyebrows!" "But," he says, "suppose we do this: we will take some of your religion and some of mine, and then we will have a new one, and perhaps a better one." He is rarely willing to concede that Christianity is good enough in itself. If you will permit a common everyday bit of slang, "he has to be shown" before he ever gives up his idols. A great part of our business is "showing" the world the Christ. And it is only when we become "living epistles known and read of all men" that we may expect the world to pay any great attention to our message.

The Non-Creative View.

The second extreme view is that which represents the Christian religion as wholly new, an absolute antithesis to the world in which it appeared. The ancient world brought forth nothing. Its only contribution was entirely negative—dire need. God is represented as having given over the ancient peoples to their own carnal hearts. There is the picture of a great multitude of neople having bread thrust upon them unexpectedly, and the water of heaven poured out upon them, who had made no preparation to receive it. The scholars who hold to this view see only the vices and immoralities of the worst masses of pre-Christian society. If you have ever studied the Latin classics, this picture of the ancient world is painted exclusively in dark colors in the plays of Plautus, the sattres of Juvenal, the unworthy verses of Ovid, the inantities of Petronius, and the bitterness of Tacitus. The worst side of antiquity is deliberately compared with the best side of Christianity. Murderers like Caligula and Nero are placed alongside John and Paul.

Some of our readers know of that section in Nashville commonly called "Black Bottom." It has been cleaned up to some extent within recent years, so that it is not the veritable hell-hole it used to be. Suppose a man should show the people a picture of "Black Bottom on Saturday night" as it was twenty years ago and say, "Here is a picture of Nashville as it was in 1900;" and then suppose he should exhibit a picture of Capitol Boulevard to the same audience and say, "This will give you an idea of the Nashville of to-day." Would the comparison be fair? Would it be just? Certainly not. I feel sure you can appreciate the point in the Illustration. The fact must not be overlooked that the same God was working in human history before as after the Christian era, revealing himself as men felt their need of him and were able to comprehend him. We discredit the human race if we teach that all men had been given over to carnal hearts and that the ancient world contributed nothing toward the preparation for the gospel. Paul never would have said it. On the other hand, he writes of those who were seeking after God "if haply they might feel after him, and find him." (Acts 17: 27.) To secure the right perspective, Christianity must be viewed not only in contrast, but in contact, with its environment.

Sometimes we wonder just how we would proceed should we take up the work of a missionary in a heathen land. Of one thing I am certain: I would not proceed by belittling heathenism. I would not begin by saying, "You are ail wicked idolaters, and you are surely going to hell if you do not quit lt." I would try as best I could to imitate the example of the great missionary. Paul, who told the men of Athens of at least one good thing they themselves were teaching and tactfully reveal unto them "the unknown God" which some of them were ignorantly worshiping. I would say, as he and Barnabas said to the people of Lystra, "We are of like passions with you," and by telling them of "rains and truitful seasons" I would gradually lead them up to the good tidings of the gospel. I might fail in my endeavor, but I would have at least the satisfaction that I had not insulted their intelligence nor depreciated any good qualities which they might possess.

The Organic View.

The third view is the organic view (divinely guided), This is the true scriptural view of the environment of early Christianity. The gospel is a glorious consummation of the ages. I am never afraid of the term "evolution" as applied to the gospel, if correctly used. The Bible teaches nothing about man himself being the product of evolution, but it does teach that the Christian religion came through this process and that many generations-not unaided by God-prepared the way of the Lord. The unity of mankind and the unity of history are articles of faith. The student cannot disassociate and dissever Christianity from the fabric of its age. To do so is to read history with a bias and to disregard God's patience in educating humanity and drawing it unto himself. We must not forget that "the law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ." (Gal. 3: 24.) The gospel of Jesus Christ does not ignore the work of pre-Christian ages. It gives them all due credit. Christians cannot afford to be intolerant, because then they have not the Spirit of Christ. "Evolution does not always connote progress." All portions of mankind do not move forward with equal pace. We must make allowance for the degeneration of human nature. In Professor Ramsay's "Cities of St. Paul," he says: "Wherever evidence exists, with the rarest exceptions, the history of religion among men is a history of degeneration."

The gospel of Jesus Christ does not disdain the many evangels which gladdened men and brought joy, consolation, and spiritual support to thousands of the human race before he came to the earth. God has in all ages been listening to the still sad music of humanity; he has been walking among men in their toll, error, and waywardness, stretching out his hand in succor as men have in all ages stretched forth their hands to him.

"Feeble hands and helpless, Groping blindly in the darkness, Touch God's right hand in that darkness And are lifted up and helped."

The apostle Paul, in his letter to the Hebrews, speaks of Christians as being "the heirs of salvation." In this capacity we have entered upon the rich inheritance of the toils and tears, the victories and defeats, the experiments and fears of our predecessors.

"Our fathers watered with their tears The sea of time whereon we sail."

We must, therefore, raise our hearts in gratitude to those who were hewers of wood and drawers of water for a period of enlightenment they never saw and perhaps never dreamed of. God willed "that they without us should not be made perfect." (Heb. 11: 40.)

Let us sum up the lesson in the language of the scripture: "God, having of old time spoken unto the fathers in the prophets by divers portions and in divers manners, hath at the end of these days spoken unto us in his Son, whom he appointed heir of all things." And our supreme duty has been ringing down the ages expressed in the "voice out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom, I am well pleased; hear ye him."

Brewer's Book on the "Model Church."

The author's chief purpose in writing this book was to create a higher degree of efficiency in the workings of the local congregation. He would awaken many from a lethargic and disorganized condition and bring them to that point where they might conduct the Lord's work in a businesslike way and at the same time be controlled by the mind of Christ in all things. The book is written in pointed style and is conveniently arranged for class study. While it is of special interest to the leaders, at the same time it is of such a wholesome nature as to afford profitable reading for all the members. The book deserves a large circulation. The prices are very reasonable. Single copy, prepaid, $1; one dozen copies, prepaid, $9; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $17. Order to-day from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

Jehovah's Commands.

RY PANNIE HURST.

After Jehovah, with many signs and wonders, had brought the children of Israel up out of the land of Egypt, leading them through the Red Sea on dry land, and destroying the Egyptians who attempted to follow them: after he had gone before them in a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night, putting their enemies to flight from before them, and shielding them from every danger; after he had done all this and much more, he brought them to the borders of Canaan, the land of promise, and commanded them to "go in and possess the land" (Deut. 1: 8), and, that they might not fear nor be dismayed, he promised to go with them and fight their battles for them; but when they were told that the cities were surrounded by high walls and inhabited by giants, they forgot, in a moment, the many wonderful things that had been done for them, and their hearts melted within them, and they "rebelled against the commandment of Jehovah," and he, who had cared for them more tenderly than a mother cares for her child, was so grieved at their hardness of heart that he turned them back into that great wilderness. where they wandered forty years, and where every man above twenty-one, except Caleb and Joshua, fell.

When we read this sad story, which was given us for an example, we marvel at the ingratitude and lack of faith here manifested by the children of Israel. We feel that if we had been in their place we would never have hesitated to go into that land, no matter how high the walls about the cities nor how great the giants within them. So Jehovah, knowing every thought of our hearts, has given us an opportunity to prove to him just what we would do when put to a similar test. After doing infinitely more for us than for the Israelites, he has commanded us, saying; "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) In other words, he has teld us to go in and possess the land for Jesus Christ; and, that we might not be afraid of this great undertaking, he has added: "And lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." He does not say, "Go If you are financially able," or, "Go if you want to;" but he says, "Go." Of course, he knows that we cannot all go in person into all the world, but he knows that we who remain at home can hold up the hands of those who can and do go into the field by encouraging and supporting them, and thus have a share in the going and

The question is, What are we doing about it? We all know that there are a few "Calebs" and "Joshuas" who are obeying this commandment; but, according to a missionary report published recently, only a small number of the congregations of Christians in the United States are doing anything toward the support of mission work, and not nearly one-half of that number are contributing to this work regularly. Thus it is that so many of God's children to-day seem to be saying: "The walls of prejudice and darkness are too high and the giants of sacrifice and expense are too great. We cannot take the land."

O, the love and mercy of Jehovah, who continues to give us health and strength and prosperity, when, by refusing to support this work, we are rebelling against a commandment that is not a whit less imperative than the one he gave to the Israelites.

Perhaps you may say that the congregation with which you worship is already so burdened with other work that it is forced to depend on others to care for the missionaries. Suppose you read this commandment over again, and if you find where God has made provisions for the congregations that find other work to do, then you are excused; otherwise, to you, too, he is saying, "Go."

Again, some one may say that a large majority of the members of the body of Christ are poor and that they are giving just about all they have to give to this work. Permit me to make a comparison here, which will probably give you an idea of the magnitude of your mistake. Let us take the amount spent annually by church members alone in the United States for soft drinks, tobacco, picture shows and all other kinds of shows, the various amusements such as are found in parks, baseball, gasoline and tires, etc., used for pleasure rides only, and for clothing that we do not need, and place this beside the amount spent by the same people in the same length of time for carrying the gospel to all the nations. Is it not appalling? How can we say that we have given all that we have to give? Have we lost sight of the lesson taught in the story of Ananias and Sapphira? God knows that it is not because of poverty that we fail to obey his command. He knows that we are keeping back "part of the price" for our own lusts.

Then, again, there are congregations that could easily be supporting one or more missionaries, that seem to feel that they are doing a great work because at irregular intervals they are aroused from their slumbers by an impressive Sunday-school lesson or a stirring sermon on missionary work and send a liberal contribution to some brother somewhere, and then fall asleep again, so far as this work is concerned, for an indefinite period, even though the brother's expenses have a way of running right along all the time just like those of other people. The strange thing about it is that these brethren seem to feel confident that God will gladly accept such spasmodic, haphazard, unsystematic service, when he has said so plainly, "Let all things be done decently and in order" (1 Cor. 14; 40), teaching clearly that, to be well-pleasing to him, we must do all his work in a systematic way; and, to warn ns against the great danger of setting aside his commandments and trying to serve him in some other way that we like better, he tells us of Nadab and Abilus, who, after he had given them full instructions concerning the gifts and offerings, dared to substitute their own methods; "and there came forth fire from before Jehovah, and devoured them, and they died before Jehovah." (Lev. 10: 2.) It is true that we are living under a different dispensation to that under which they lived; but we are serving the same unchangeable God, and It is just as important to obey him to-day as it was then.

It is not enough for a congregation to say that it is ready and willing to support a missionary, if a worthy brother can be found who is willing to go into the field, and then sit down and wait and wait and continue to walt for some one to accept their offer, while those already in the field are woefully handicapped because of a lack of funds, and are sometimes in need of the actual necessities of life, and while with every moment souls that never heard of the blessed Son of God are plunging into eternity.

We can and we must help them. There is not a congregation in existence but that can do its part toward helping in this work; for this commandment is to all Christians, and Jehovah has never commanded us to do anything that we cannot do.

Those congregations that have not decided on some other way to carry on this part of the work systematically might act wisely in following a suggestion offered by a brother some time ago. That is, at the end of each month lay ov a certain per cent of the month's contributions for mission work, both home and foreign. Then let us not continue to harden our hearts and refuse to carry this sweet message to those benighted people, some of whom, it is said, tramp for miles begging some one to tell them the story of Jesus. How can we risk meeting millions and millions of the present generation face to face at the judgment and hear them confess to Jehovah that they had never been told that Jesus Christ had ever existed? We cannot afford to go on in rebellion against this commandment and expose our souls to the danger of being turned back even after we have reached the borders of the land of promise. Then let us repent and confess this our sin, and pray God to forgive us, and then go to work as we have never worked before; for the time is not far distant when the night will come, "when no man can work."

The Dread of Repetition. No. 1.

BY B. C. GOODPASTURE.

In this series of articles I shall call the reader's attention to a few examples of repetition illustrative of the foregoing caption. Some of these instances may be too unusual to be typical, yet they will show the hurtful extremes to which it is possible for men to go.

There are preachers who do not want any one to hear them preach a sermon the second time. I have heard of a preacher who refused to deliver an announced sermon at its appointed time when he learned that one man would be present who had heard him discuss that subject once before. Doubtless many came at the hour designated for the express purpose of hearing a discourse on the theme announced. They had a right to expect it. That preacher disappointed his audience and withheld from them a much-needed lesson in order that one man might not hear a sermon repeated. This is an extreme case. He dreaded the repetition. But why? Even if the unexpected hearer had not forgotten the sermon, it would do him no harm to hear it again; if he had forgotten it, perhaps he needed to hear it the second time. To deepen an old impression, Peter wrote: "I stir up your sincere mind by putting you In remembrance; that ye should remember the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and the commandment of the Lord and Savior through your apostles." (2 Pet. 3: 1, 2.) Again, he preached substantially the same things in Jerusalem on four different occasions. (Acts 2: 22-36; 3: 12-16; 4: 8-12; 5: 29-32.) There were some in that city who heard the great apostle three times, probably four. Was the preacher under consideration atraid that his privileged auditor would think that his supply of sermons was somewhat limited? Would a repetition reflect on his reputation? The very idea! Suppose a physician refused to give his suffering patient the second dose of the only medicine that would cure him, merely to keep people from thinking that the number of his remedies was small. Christ taught the Pharisees a lesson concerning divorce (Matt. 19: 9) which he had formerly taught the multitudes in the Sermon on the Mount (Mati. 5: 31, 32). Some of his disciples heard this teaching twice. The great Preacher did not fail to deliver a timely message even if some were present who had heard it before. "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his," (Rom. 8: 9.)

This abnormal desire to avoid repetition in preaching has been the source of much evil. On the one hand, any one who has taken the time to examine the conditions which prevail in the church of God knows that there are many new members, especially, who have never been taught the rudimentary principles of the Christian life; they have been neglected that the older members might not hear a familiar (7) lesson again. It is wrong to rob these "newborn babes" in Christ of "the spiritual milk which is without guile," for they must "grow thereby unto salvation." (I Pet. 2: 2.) Mereover, the fact that people have been in the church for years and heard many gospel sermons is no conclusive evidence that they have attained " unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ" (Eph. 4: 13); for it was to such a class that Paul wrote: "For when by reason of the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need again that some one teach you the rudiments of the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of solld food." (Heb. 5: 12.) The average man who listens to the average preacher must hear several sermons on a given subject, if he is to understand and remember the whole counsel of God on that subject. Even then be may not do his duty without frequent exhortations. God, through Moses, repeated in Deuteronomy the law which he had given in Exodus. On the other hand, preachers have left "the old paths" in their search for something fresh and new; they have left the word of God to teach the deceitful doctrines and the vain philosophies of men. God never left unrevealed any principle or truth which the church would ever need in order to fulfill the purpose for which it was established. The gospel is world-wide and time-long; it is "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." (Jude 3.) His revelation is complete; for "his divine power hath granted unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that called us by his own glory and virtue." (2 Pet. 1: 3.) There is nothing absolutely new and original in religion, except that which is false. The story of Jesus, as told by the apostles, must be carried again and again to all the nations in all the ages, if "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea." (Isa. 11: 9.)

Finally, why should any man shun to repeat the same phase of the gospel a dozen times, if the welfare of his audience demands it? If people do not understand a principle when it is first presented, what can be done except to present it again? How shall the unmindful and the forgetful be instructed in the knowledge of things forgotten, if not by repetition? Is there a "more excellent way?"

Gospel Trumpet Blasts.

BY A. A. BUNNER.

"He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith anto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." (Rev. 2: 7.)

"He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." (Rev. 2: 11.)

"He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." (Rev. 2: 17.)

"And be that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father. And I will give him the morning star. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." (Rev. 2: 26-29.)

"He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." (Rev. 3: 5, 6.)

"Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." (Rev. 3: 12, 18.)

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." (Rev. 3: 21, 22.)

I was with the brethren in Cleveland, Ohio, on last Lord's day (October 5), and spoke for them on the theme, "The Stumblingstone," from Rom. 9: 30-33. We had a large and attentive audience. I was glad to note that they were still alive to the work of the Lord and preparing to build and planning greater work for the Master in that city. The work is greatly needed, as in all great cities of its size. I assisted them in the work of appointing two more new elders (old men). I hope that they will not prove to be too old for the great work that is before them, but will prove themselves aggressive men in the work of the Master.

I shall. God willing, begin our regular protracted meeting at Naish Spring, Pleasants County, W. Va., next Lord'sday evening (October 12), and we are confidently looking forward to a grand and glorious meeting. The harvest there is both great and fully ripe; and if the devil does not get ahead of us and sow seeds that we are not now aware of great good will be the result. "We are not ignorant of his devices," but we might fall to strike the right blow at the right time and in the right manner. But we shall confidently trust in God for wisdom and guidence in all that we shall say and do in the work of the Lord. On the last Lord's day in September, as was previously announced, the new house of worship at Naish Spring was formally opened for the worship of God. The writer spoke in the forenoon on Lord's day, preaching what some might call the "giving" or "money" sermon, basing his remarks on Elijah's words to the widow: "Make me . . a little cake first." (1 Kings 17: 13.) While we did not get near out of debt on the house, still, the crowd considered, we did very well in raising on that occasion something like five hundred and fifty dollars. Brethren from St. Marys, Bull Creek, Marietta, and Parkersburg were present and gave quite liberally, for which we thank them all. A few near-by congregations were conspicuous for their absence because their little pets did not get in first and start the work there; but we commend all such "to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you [them] up, and to give you [them] an inheritance among all them which are sanctified," and who will also "judge them in the last day." We also need the further fellowship of the saints in paying off our indebtedness on the house. Please send all donations to Noah Brothers, Willow, W. Va., Route 1, Box 31. A more inviting mission field than Naish Spring and surrounding coun try cannot be found. Our opening services at Naish Spring began on Thursday night before. Brother T. Q. Martin preached on Thursday night and Brother Fred L. Rowe on Friday night, and both discourses were good and right to the point, being heart talks to the brethren. On Lord'sday afternoon and night Brother J. M. Rine gave the audiences two strong, logical, and scriptural sermons. Brother Rine is a master workman. God willing, our Bible reading will begin at Naish Spring on the last Monday evening in October. For the information of all who may desire to attend this reading, board and lodging with good familles may be had at five dollars per week. There will also be a tuition fee of one dollar a week, and this will be used to help pay off the church-house debt. The brethren at Nalsh Spring are all doing their best. Do not be afraid to help

The little, fealous-hearted creature, be he preached, not, may "weep with those that weep;" but he is too little, narrow, contracted a being to "rejoice with those that rejoice." On account of his narrowness, littleness, and insignificance, he is a creature to be pitied. We should pray that the hearts of all such might become as soft as their heads.

All of the foregoing quotations from the book of Revelation show that all of the exceeding great and precious promises of the gospel of Christ are made only to the overcomers in Christ Jesus our Lord. Brother or sister mine, are you diligently striving day by day to make all of these promises yours? Is there nothing in you to be overcome? Read and study the special number of the Gospel Advocate on "Prayer." It is worth the entire subscription price of the paper.

The Needs of the People.

BY W. I. REEVES,

The people of earth can do nothing of worth without Christ. (John 15: 4, 5.)

The world is in a lost condition because of the evils which are raging. Many millions are aliens, and it is because of ignorance. Paul says: "Being allenated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them." (Eph. 4: 18.) It is evident that many are willfully ignorant. Peter said so in his day. (2 Pet. 3: 5.) But I am convinced that many are not so; hence, teaching will do them good.

Sin is the trouble, and teaching is the only remedy God offers. The gospel is that which he ordained to be taught. The gospel is "the power of God unto salvation." (Rom. 1: 16.) "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." (1 Cor. 1: 21.) Hence, Christ's commission to earthen vessels (his disciples) was, "Preach the gospel to every creature," with the promise that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (Mark 16: 16.) From the foregoing it is clear that people need the gospel, else they are doomed to continue on in sin and strife.

Politics will not remedy matters. Christians should not spend time and means in support of politics; for if they do, their strength will be wasted, their lives will be a failure, and the gospel will not be preached in many places where it could have been preached had all of this wasted money and labor been used to give the people the only remedy for the evils of the world.

The gospel will put the idle to work. It says to man: "Let him labor, working with his hands." (Eph. 4: 28.) This will drive out so much poverty now extant, and thus stop much suffering which is a direct result of the people's not having the gospel preached among those who so badly need it.

The gospel drives out ignorance, saves people from sin, puts them to work, and stops them from so much begging; and, on the other hand, it makes givers of all who receive, believe, and obey it. Those who are members of the church should make great sacrifices of both time and money in order to have the gospel preached to the people in the many cities, towns, and vicinities in our own nation, as well as in other lands. Many members of the church could individually support from one to three or four meetings in places where needed each year and not suffer need for any necessaries of life. I cannot see why more men do not do so. There is no use whatever to leave a big estate for your children. They are no better than you were, perhaps, and you worked for a living: so why not your children have to work for a living, too? It is better for them to do so. In fact, they cannot be saved without they labor. for Christ commands it. Use the means intrusted to you to do good while you live yourself. Some one else might gain possession of all you have, who cares nothing for the salvation of others,

Let us deny ourselves. Who among us is doing so? Are you?

Brother, call that gospel preacher whom you know is poor and needs to be busy, and send him with the gospel to some place, and pay him well for his time. You can do it; you know you can. God knows you should if you are at all able.

There are many places wanting to hear the word, and no one will send it to them. "Senders" as well as "goers" are needed. Which are you? God demands that you be one or the other.

Impressions of the United States of America.

BY E. S. JELLEY:

I landed in New York City on August 9 and arrived in Dayton (Ohio) in time next day to hear Brother Jackson, of Cincinnati, preach at the home of my mother. It certainly was a joy to meet with the brethren and to hear preaching from some other person than myself. A few days later I was asked to appear before the annual meeting of the brethren at Portsmouth, Ohio, which I did, where I was entertained and assisted on my way. I also enjoyed the preaching of Brethren F. L. Rowe, T. Q. Martin, Joynes, Bankes, and others, including the indefatigable Brother Oliver Johnson, who got up the meeting.

By that time I was about ready to come to Nashville and meet some of the brethren of the "Jerusalem" of America, and I shall certainly always be glad I came here and got personally acquainted with many brethren with whose names I was familiar, but whom I had never beheld face to face. Another thing which I enjoyed very much was the privilege of meeting brethren from all over the South at the Gospel Advocate office. This certainly is a splendid feature, for scarcely a day passes without several brethren from afar walking into the Advocate office, where they have a special part assigned them. Then there are the churches of Nashville. Nashville contains more churches of Christ than I had seen in my life outside of India, and everywhere I have been listened to and encouraged and assisted. My support and that of my family and a considerable amount of my traveling expenses have already been arranged here in Nashville. I was able to attend the opening of the David Lipscomb College and later to speak to them.

I had been absent from North America since June 19, 1911, when I sailed for India, in which country I lost my wife and two children. I now have four children over there and two in Dayton. During the eight years I was in India, I had over two thousand baptisms. The great cry of the Indian brethren is not a request for famine relief (a thing for which I have never appealed), but a heart-piercing cry: "No one ever comes to our village to preach us the gospel!"

The Sin in Speculating.

The Bible is no book of theories. There is not a line of speculation in it. It is a Book of facts, in which everybody's duty, because in the most simple and obvious language, is made perfectly plain. We must prayerfully and continuously study all that God has written, but he touches here and there some vast deeps which the finite mind may never sound. And it is utterly a fault to be overmuch concerned with what God has thus left obscure to us, or to draw on what we suppose he aimed at, building up farfetched inferences of our own. There was reason for what he says to us and, therefore, design in what he withheld or left obscure. But he left out nothing important to our present welfare. We do not have to learn our duty by careful figuring or speculation. Nor will be abide our impertinent meddling in making out the case for ourselves. What he has not yet made plain needs no tinkering upon at our hands. Besides, when we have done all we are plainly told, our hands will be about full. We must beware of building for ourselves on the obscure parts or of closing questions be has left open. Let us stress what he makes plain to us and emphasizes, and learn to stay in our place.

For there are portions of the Bible that are not now plain, because clearly God is not ready to make them known to us. They are the "unlearned" questions (2 Tim, 2: 23), "unrevealed things" (Deut. 29: 29), things which "the Father hath put in his own power," not for us to know (Acts 1; 7). These are chiefly figures and symbols of unfulfilled prophecy. Of their exact meaning no one now can be sure, because their full import is not yet revealed. And certainly we may not construct theories of our own upon their significance. These dark portions can be made to prove anything on earth a man wants them to prove, support any idle proposition he happens to fall under the spell of, or twisted to fit any position. Here is endless room for idle guessing and uncertainty, which is exactly why no two theories upon them get the same answer. For to-day we have almost as many different theeries as to the meaning of these unrevealed things as wehave dreamers and schemers busy thereon. Nor can any living man be certain which one of them is right-all of them may be wrong. I have a great respect for facts, but a grave mistrust of fancies, for we cannot live on conjecture or be saved by guesswork. Anybody can guess. It is facts we are after.

We must beware of the German transcendentalist and of all those who belong to his school, for he is a dangerous dreamer. He displays his weakness and brings the public into peril in his concern about these very obscure references in God's unfulfilled. To get into this field appeals to his vanity. Here he can display his ingenuity and boast husself. The presumption of the fellow who assumes to understand everything in the Bible! He offers to unravel and make perfectly simple all its dark phases. Open and evident to him are all its secrets, and right out of hand with one stroke he would enlighten everybody on such questions as the end of the world and when the Lord will come things no mortal knows or can know, since Jesus declares that neither angels nor he himself knew! (Matt. 24: 36.) But this modern know-it-all pulls back the veil of the future, reveals with perfect assurance Impending crises, and tells us with certainty everything yet to be. "Is it not better not to know so much than to know so much that Is not so?"

But just how much does he know of such things? Not one whit more than the most ignorant among us, even though he be as well informed as any. Precisely because nobody knows! However, it is not so easy to dispute with this visionary for the reason that his vain imaginings can neither be proved nor disproved. It is as hopeless to attempt to confine him to that which is definite and solid as it is to chain a smoke wraith or pack a cloud in a plate! He offers the world a mere conjecture, a sheer invention, an evanescent dream, a theory hanging by nothing more dependable than a thread of pure imagination, formless as a fog, groundless and unsubstantial as a mirage, the end of which is a bog of human theology where, mired down, all may perish.

And—alas!—the world seems full of idle minds, that crave the imaginary and the impractical, which prefer to be engaged with the vague and fantastical, who will always give the speculator a hearing, because they want to bear something new (Acts 17: 21) rather than what they must do. It is the bane of our times that so many are almost wholly concerned with vague, highly imaginative, wholly conjectural theories and visions respecting the abstruse and difficult portions of God's word.

And what shall we say at the sad spectacle of gospel preachers thrusting upon us, to the disruption of some congregations, their theories upon these same unrevealed things, pleading persecution for Christ's sake when opposed, and piously mumbling that we shall all be at peace if only we will let them alone? And this, too, under the plea that they must declare the whole counsel of God, which Paul declared and yet advocated none of their specious creations. God wants us to act, not balloon. All about us men are dying for want of the plain, simple word of Christ which God bids us speak. For shame that some are so in love with themselves and Infatuated with their own idle creations that our supreme business is neglected!

The faithful teacher never occupies questionable ground or takes a doubtful stand. All the abler church fathers have sounded a grave warning against the snares and pitfalls of speculation. The curse in this to the gospel preacher is that he will become visionary and theoretical on even the plainest questions, will see figures or shadows or material for finespun theorizing in everything, and his feet will refuse to come back to terra firma and solid facts again. What is more, he will bring disruption into the body of Christ and invariably cripple himself. Is it possible, therefore, for some modern fellow, no matter how good and brilliant he is reported to be, to disregard this multitude of counsellors, in whom Jehovah declares there is safety, and not involve us all in trouble!-Price Billingsley, in Gospel Advance.

The Church in Washington, D. C.

BY W. S. LONG.

The Washington church is faithfully working to save souls and to establish permanently the church of the New Testament, and we are praying for the cooperation of the brotherhood everywhere. Our building fund is growing. At this writing it is as follows: Cash, $6,500; pledges, $2,500; total, $9,000. By having a donation from all the churches, we can begin the building in a few weeks. To erect what is required in the city of Washington, we must have at least sixteen thousand dollars more. Can I find one hundred brethren who will pledge one hundred dollars each, to be paid in twelve months? Let us hear from you at once.

I know the brotherhood is auxious to see the work reach a glorious success, so each week I will give the figures as to how the bullding fund is growing. Come with us and help it grow, and you will have every reason to rejoice when we have a good house of worship in the nation's capital. A good church in Washington will serve as a light to the surrounding country. There are millions of people between here and New York, and we ought to make an effort to save them. We sincerely thank those who have helped us, and earnestly pray that they may soon see a good house of worship here.

Not Lost, But Given.

It is said of a returned English soldier that, when he was being commiserated on the loss of his arm in the trenches, he replied, proudly: "I didn't lose it; I gave it." Glorious reply! What a transformation of our stewardship if we could think of our tithe not as the payment of a debt, but as the offering of a gift! What a transfiguration of our service if we could list it as a heart impulse instead of a conscience pull! What an ennoblement of life if we could live it as a gift to the world! When a man gives his health or his time or his money-or his life-you cannot talk to him about being robbed. He has forestalled the comment. Jesus said: "No man taketh my life from me; I lay it down." Such ought to be the spirit of his disciples.- George Clarke Peck.

PRICE OF MUSIC BOOKS.

On account of the great advance in materials and la-bor, it becomes absolutely necessary to make an ad-vance in the price of all our music books. The cost of production has advanced much more than we have increased the price of books. The advance will take effect an and after September 15, 1919.

Below we give revised price list.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

Brother Srygley is conducting a meeting for the church at Franklin, Tenn.

- G. A. Dunn writes: "On September 5 I closed an elevendays' meeting at Oakman, Ala., with thirty-eight additions—thirty-three baptisms."
- J. M. McCaleb writes: "Friends who wish to reach me while in the home land can do so at any time by writing me at 2625 Montgomery Street, Louisville, Ky."
- A. B. Lipscomb reports a fine start in the Belmont Avenue meeting. The downpour of rain did not dampen the arder of the saints. One took membership at the initial service.
- From W. D. Bills, 405 Porter Street, San Antonio, Texas, October 7: "Splendid services here Sunday, with two additions. Have had additions every Sunday since my return from Okiahoma in August. Our work progresses nicely." T. B. Thompson writes: "Miss Helen Ward Thompson
- T. B. Thompson writes: "Miss Helen Ward Thompson came on October 3. Mother doing well: baby not so well. We are at wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Andrews, Colesburg, Tenn., and will leave for Avon Park, Fla., as soon as possible."
- J. L. Holland writes: "I am just out of meetings at Cane Creek, Dellna, and Ostella. No additions at Cane Creek; eight baptized at Delina; twelve baptized and one reclaimed at Ostella. Delina and Ostella have asked me to be with them again next summer."

The series of meetings closed at Grissim Corner, in Wilson County, last Saturday evening, with eight added to the Lord by confession and baptism. These meetings were conducted by T. H. Burton, of South Carolina, Wonderful Interest was manifested during the entire week and the little band was greatly strengthened."

W. H. Book, the well-known evangelist and minister for the Tabernacle church of Christ at Columbus, Ind., has the following note in The Publisher, his church paper: "The 'Prayer' issue of the Gospel Advocate is simply fine. We do not remember having seen anything like it before in any of our papers. It will prove a wonderful help in generating spirituality. The paper is well edited and comes to us in an attractive form."

Wanted—A Dentist.—William H. Beasley writes: "The church at Waldo, Ark., would welcome a first-class dentist who is a Christian. There are several good churches near here, and we think plenty of room for a good man. First-class church and high school here in town. Waldo is a live town, fine people, healthy location, etc., located forty-five miles east of Texarkana on the Cotton Belt Railway, I will be glad to answer correspondence."

From George A. Klingman, Abilene, Texas, October 6: "Congratulations on the subject-matter and the make-up of your last special number. It is a credit to any publishing house to send out such a neat, classy-looking paper. We had such good meetings yesterday. There was one confession. J. S. Dunn is in a meeting at South Side and will preach to our students every morning in chapel. Good meetings also at North Side. Our enrollment has reached three hundred and twenty and they are still coming."

From Porter Norris, Lucy, Tenn., October 9: "I held a meeting at Giltage, in Tipton County, beginning on the fourth Lord's day in August, with twenty-two additions. I was called back to the same place to hold another meeting, beginning on the fourth Lord's day in September, which resulted in ten additions. This is a mission point. The brethren say they are going to build them a house to worship in. My next meeting will be at Poplar Grove, in a meetinghouse just built, where I have been laboring for two years."

From C. G. Vincent. Knoxville, Tenn., October 6; "I began work with the North Broadway Church on September 28. Already the church is taking on added interest. The prospects are encouraging. If you know of any students at the University of Tennessee or any person not now identified with our church, I shall be glad to have their addresses. Any brethren spending the Lord's day in Knoxville can find the church by taking either the North Broadway or Fountain City car and getting off at Haynes Stop. The car stops in front of the meetinghouse. Our address is 1366 North Broadway."

From A. F. Warren, Rogers, Ark., October 8: "The prospects for our little church here are bright. The church is in a good working condition, and several substantial brethren are coming here from Texas and Oklahoma and other parts of Arkansas. We hope to be able to support some good man here in the near future. We have a fine climate here and are in the heart of one of the largest fruit countries in the United States. We had a very large crop of apples this year. Almost every one is prosperous. It seems to me that it is time the cause of Christ was prospering, and we hope that in the near future it will be at this place. We are working and praying to this end."

From O. E. Billingsley, Newport, Ark., October 9: "I have had part in two splendid gospel meetings since last report. The first was held by the church at Lynn, Ark. The attendance was encouraging. Five souls were born of water and the Spirit (if we can tell) and a number of brethren were converted from the error of their ways. The second was conducted by the church at Charlotte. They told me that the attendance was the best so far. Six persons were baptized and five brethren promised to go to work. The brethren at each of these places are in earnest. They are doing much good. The churches of Christ are growing. The brethren stood by me nobly. May God bless the faithful churches."

From R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., October 9: "I closed a week's meeting at Liberty, in Sequatchie County, with three baptized. I went from Liberty to Lee Station, in Bledsee County. I preached ten days and baptized eight persons. One confessed his wrongs. Among the number baptized were three Baptists. I had a large andience every night. The brethren are getting along nicely. The elders seem to be looking after the flock very well. I go next to Smyrna, in Bledsee County, for a few days. The brethren at Lee Station supported me well. They are willing to pay a laborer that is worthy of his hire. On my way to Lee I stopped over at Whitwell and preached one night. Three young ladles made the good confession, and I baptized them the next day."

From Sister Vina Hooper, McGregor, Ga., October 8: "J. P. Prevatt, of Valdosta, recently closed a splendid tent meeting here of sixteen days' duration. It resulted in five noble souls being brought to Christ—three men and two women. We have no house, but we meet in private homes on the first day of the week. This is a great field for much good to be done for the cause of Christ. The church of Christ seemed almost unknown in this section, and I was the only member until this meeting. I am happy now since I have a few brethren and sisters here with whom to meet. We hope to be able, with the help of some other good people, to build a house here soon. Brother Prevatt is to come back in November, if we are successful in getting a place to preach."

- F. B. Srygley says: "I saw in the Gospel Advocate of last week that you said I was holding a meeting near Red Bolling Springs. Tenn. As a matter of fact, I closed a meeting at Willette, Tenn., on the night of October 5; but perhaps some at Willette feel that Red Springs is near Willette instead of Willette being near Red Springs. We had large audiences at night, and very good in the day meetings. There were four baptized. But the rain began Saturday and the meeting closed on Sunday night in the rain, and it was not what it might have been. The church did all they could under the circumstances to make the meeting a success. I also closed a good meeting at Science Hill, in Rutherford County, on September 21. There were nine added there—six baptized and three reclaimed. It was a pleasure to me to be with these good brethren."
- J. D. Derryberry writes from Clarksville, Tenn., October 9: "On the fourth Sunday in September M. C. Cayce began a meeting at Shiloh, near McEwen, Tenn., and continued it day and night until the following Sunday afternoon. The day audiences were small and composed mostly of women, as is usually the case. The men were too busy filling silos, saving hay, feeding cattle, etc., to attend the day services. Brother Cayce did some good preaching, presenting the word of the Lord in a very plain and forceful manner. There were no visible results, but the good seed was sown and will bring forth fruit in due season. Every one seemed to be well pleased with the preaching and gave us a pressing invitation to hold another meeting for them next summer. The writer conducted the song service during this meeting. I am now conducting a song drill at New Providence, a suburb of Clarksville, and will conduct the song service in a meeting to be held by William P. Walker at this place, beginning next Lord's day. After this meeting closes I will have some spare time. Any one wishing my services can write me at 756 Olympic Street, Nashville, Tenn."

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

The Work at Rome, Ga.

The following report comes from Brother W. F. Duncan, of Rome, Ga., and we are glad to get the good news of the improvement in conditions and of the bright prospects for the work there in the future:

I want to publish in your valuable paper what the Lord has done for his children at Rome, Ga. It has been whis-pered among some of our preaching brethren that the church at Rome would have to die and then let some one come and start the work again, but I am thankful to say that this will not have to be. Brother C. C. McCampbell has moved to Rome to help us in the work. He is a fine has moved to Rome to help us in the work. He is a fine man and a fine preacher. The work here has been on a drag for some time; but God has seen how a few have held the work up, and has sent this good brother to us, and the work is doing well. Brother Henry Geer has just closed a ten-days' meeting. He did some fine preaching. There were no additions, but the work was greatly strengthened.

We are very much pleased with the good news from Rome. Nothing has meant more to the work than the way Brother and Sister Duncan have tenaciously stood by the work. The Lord bless them and Brother McCampbell in their efforts to make the work prosper there as never 0 0 0

Burying Our Talents.

If the Bible teaches anything, it certainly teaches that burying our talents is a dangerous thing to do. You remember the one-talent man in Matt. 25: 14-30. He buried his talent and was glad to return it to his master when the day of reckoning came. Our Lord has but one message for people who so act-namely: "Cast ye out the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be the weeping and gnashing of teeth."

My brother, are you burying your talent? Do you not know that people are lost, not merely for the evil they do, but for the good they could have done and refused to do? We must put to good use the talents Jehovah has given to us. Every member of the body of Christ should be a worker. Paul says: "Bearing fruit in every good work." (Col. 1: 10.) There is no good work in which we can afford not to be interested.

Winning souls to Christ is a good work. Each member should be a soul winner. We have members in the church who give this no concern, and they will be lost if not led to see their condition. Why should not each member of the church save at least one more in one year? This would double the number of saved each year. This is not being done, Is It? Why not? But it looks like it is entirely too little to expect me to save just one soul a year. Why not make it two a year? This would treble the membership in one year's time. And we are forced to say that saving just two souls a year does not look like it is enough. Let us, therefore, make it one soul saved a month. This would increase the number saved each year twelvefold. And when we put this as a reasonable and possible thing to accomplish, we have not made it too high. If you will go back and study carefully the efforts of the early Christians, you will come to believe that they did this. Anyway, beginning with a handful, so to speak, they in about thirty years' time could declare that the gospel had been preached to every creature that then lived under the heaven. (See Col. 1: 23.) Will we not, as Christians, heed the injunction: "Take heed to thyself, and to thy teaching. Continue in these things; for in doing this thou shalt save both thyself and them that hear thee." Tim. 4: 16.)

But is it not true that, instead of every preacher and congregation encouraging this idea of teaching the Bible to others, of winning souls to Christ, we have a number of preachers who actually preach the soul-destroying doctrine that makes people bury their talents? Paul's idea was for all the members to develop into teachers, into soul winners. (See Heb. 5: 11-14.) The developing of teachers and putting all the members to work is one of the greatest works before the elders of the local congregations. Let us arise and do this, that God may hear us when we pray for more laborers to be sent into the harvest where the thousands are daily dying for want of the gospel of his grace. 0 0 0

Good News from McGregor.

All who are helping us in our efforts to evangelize this neglected State will be glad to read the following from Sister Vina Hooper:

Dear Brother Hall: I am certainly surprised to see how interested are our members here. It is just wonderful. Two of the men are very good leaders. They seem to want Two of the men are very good leaders. to go strictly by the Bible. We are meeting in private homes now, as we can do no better at present. bulld a house soon. These men are talking of going at it at least, build enough on one to be comfortable. We would have a much larger crowd if we had more room. Almost all our friends who are not influenced by a Presbyterian preacher seem so interested. One of our brethrea said yesterday that he had had expressions from as many as nine persons who want to obey the gospel when Brother Prevatt returns in November. We do not know what we are to do for a place to preach, as they have refused us the church and schoolhouse. We are trying to buy some land on which to put a tent in case the weather is suitable. must do something, since so many people will be disappointed if Brother Prevatt does not come back for a week's meeting in November. These are the most interested members I have ever seen. I hope we may keep the work

We certainly rejoice with our sister in the good that has been done and that we hope to see done at McGregor. The church at Dickson, Tenn., the home of this sister, helped to support Brother Prevatt. They can do no better work than to stand with us in our efforts at McGregor till the work there is fully established. This, I believe, they will do. We have so many such places in this State. Let us continue to work until not one soul can be found here but that has had an opportunity to obey Christ.

Just a word more about burying our talents. Sister Hooper is not burying hers. She could have continued to teach school at this place, and other places like it, and said nothing and done nothing toward having the gospel preached. As a rule, this is the way our young people do when they go from home to some place for work where there is no church. But the question is, will such be saved? You could not call them "the light of the world" and "the salt of the earth," could you? May every one who reads this pender well this question: If every member of the church would be as wide awake and work as this sister, how long would it take us to give every soul an opportunity to obey the gospel? To this end let us pray. We have more good news to follow.

What Have Christians To Do With Judging Them That Are Without?

BY E. A. E.

In the last article we saw (1) that there is an impassable gulf between those "within" the church and those "without;" (2) that those "within" the church have no jurisdiction over the conduct or lives of those "without;" (3) that God judges those who are "without" the church and takes vengeance now through civil governments, and will do so in the end through eternal punishment: (4) that those "without" persecuted in the early days of the church those "within;" and (5) that now all that would live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution."

Let us note the following:

Earthly or human governments are more or less oppressive. When Israel rejected God as their King and asked for a human king to govern them "like all the nations," God "protested solemnly unto them" and showed "the manner of king" that would reign over them; that he would take -conscript - their sons to be his soldiers and officers to sustain his standing armics and to wage his wars; that he would take their daughters to be his perfumers and bakers: that he would appropriate to his own service their servants or workmen; that he would burden them with heavy taxes to maintain all this; and that he would confiscate their property. (See 1 Sam. 8.) God in this foretold the history of all human governments, whether autocracies, kingdoms, or democracies. This is true of them to-day. A democracy may become an autocracy.

Furthermore, even human nature when in power becomes dogmatic, overbearing, intolerant, oppressive, and disposed to force others to think and act as it thinks and acts. Examples: During the world war a few brethren in some places, backed up, as they thought, by a little authority, were inclined to override the conscientious convictions of other brethren, threatened to report and did report some to the officers, became meddlesome and officlous. No duty to God or man required this of them. God requires "brotherly love;" says Christians must show "unfelgned love," must "love one another from the heart fervently," must "let brotherly love continue," must "abound more and more" in love, must "study to be quiet," must attend to their own business, must have useful employment (1 Thess. 4: 10-12), and must treat all men as they would be treated. Such brethren appeared to many devout men and godly women as self-constituted critics and censors of the conduct of others. They were not noted before the war for any great knowledge of the Bible, deep plety, abundant liberality, and regular and prompt attendance upon the services of God; and since the war they study the Bible no more and in other ways are no better. They were not as considerate, as tolerant, and as just as the government. The government itself was considerate of all. Its chief corner stone is civil and religious liberty. It is a great government. The man who preached his conscientious convictions of "the gospel of peace" in the name and spirit of "the Prince of Peace," and, therefore, in a respectful, courteous, considerate manner, was not questioned by the government. I never feared the government, because I never violated the laws or flaunted any defiance in the government's face. On the contrary, I advised all to submit to "the powers that be," bonor the rulers, fear the governors, and "lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity." Through false reports of brethren some were questioned. Now, what caused brethren to act so? Nothing in the gospel of Christ, There is nothing in the gospel of Christ to fill brethren with such a spirit and to prompt them to act so toward other brethren. The spirit of the world and of war did this. War is demoralizing, making men worse, not better, and filling church members with hatred, bitterness, and vengeance.

All this demonstrates what human nature not "the divine nature," which all Christians are commanded to cultivate and to manifest (2 Pet, 1; 4)-will do when it has a little power and when not under the sway of the gospel of Christ.

It would have been consistent and courageous in such brethren to so to the front and, therefore, into the They should not have taken advantage of the age limit or dodged behind the fact of being a preacher, or the Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. on good salaries. All able-bodied brethren, and especially preachers, who urged the tender boys to go, ridiculed the conscientious convictions of these boys, and called them "slackers" and "unpatriotic," etc., should have volunteered to lead the way to the trenches, even if they were past thirty-one years of age. Truly brave and really patriotic men will not attempt to force boys to do that which they themselves will not do. or from which they shrink from doing. Boys, in their conscientions convictions against taking human life, accepted noncombatant service in the Red Cross and elsewhere. The government offered this, and none can blame them. It will do much good to study and learn and teach that which God foretold of universal peace under Christ and that which Christ teaches in regard to it since he has come.

In the midst of wars before the downfall of the kingdom of Judah and the Babylonian captivity, God foretold that his law should go forth from Zion and his word from Jerusalem, that he would "judge between nations" and would "decide concerning many peoples," and that "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." (See Isa. 2: 1-4; Mic. 4: 1-4.)

The law has gone forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. Christ has been enthroned, and this glad time has begun.

Isa. 9: 6 tells of the coming birth of the Child, whose name "shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace," and says: "Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with right-coussess from henceforth even forever. The prophet declares that Jehovah of hosts in his zeal will perform all this.

This Child was born. Over his birth the angels sang: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men." This means that the birth of this Child and his life and influence would redound to the glory of God in the highest and to the peace and good will of men on earth. With the birth of this Child began the fulfillment of the prediction of universal peace. With his reign his kingdom and peace began, have been on the increase, and of their continued increase, as the word of God declares, there will be no end. This kingdom and peace must fill the earth. The war-weary world cries for peace, the demand for it is strong and is increasing; but this glorious consummation can be reached in the goodness and mercy of God only as all come under the influence of the gospel of Christ.

isa. 11: 6.9 tells of the peaceful reign of "the Branch" out of the stock of Jesse, which is Christ. Then,

The wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kld; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ex. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the adder's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea.

What does this mean? These figures are strong and beautiful. Under "the gospel of peace," the reign of "the Prince of Peace," and in the church, those who were once wolves and leopards, bears and lions, preying, in selfishness and through greed of gain and fraud and oppression, upon the weak and helpless, have become mild and gentle, kind and tender, just and righteous, gracious and merciful. Those who were asps and adders in the world, filled with poison and death, have become harmless and helpful in their conversion to Christ. No advantage is taken of, no harm is done to, no fraud is practiced upon, the babes and weaklings, the humblest and poorest, the widows and orphans.

When did this glorious reign and time begin? When "the Prince of Peace" was exalted to the right hand of the majesty on high and was made both Lord and Christ. When will it be consummated? When the knowledge of Jehovah fills the earth as the waters cover the sea.

Then none can fall to see that all who have the knowledge of Jehovah and are controlled by, or are under the government of, Christ, cease at once to study war and begin at once to turn their weapons of war into useful agricultural implements. Their school is not a military one, but the very opposite; it is a school of peace. They study the things which make for peace; they keep the peace and are at peace among themselves; they become at once peacemakers and followers of peace with all mcm. In the spirit of Christ and under his rule, they cannot place their children in schools where war is taught and all are trained for it. All this is of the world and has ceased with them. The weapons of their warfare are not "after the flesh, but mighty before God to the pulling down of strongholds." (2 Cor. 10; 4.) This armor is described in Eph, 6: 10-20. Behold the contrast!

Christians do not learn war, do not teach war, do not preach war, do not engage in war, and do not encourage war. God says that under Christ they shall learn war no more. Christians cannot favor compulsory military training in school.

Whether the proposed "League of Nations" will bring universal peace or "entangling alliances" which will endanger or destroy peace, Christians must leave to politicians, statesmen, and diplomats to decide, granting to ever; one the right to an honest opinion. Certain it is, however, that so grave a question, involving so much, is far above partisan politics. In this "politics stand adjourned." The soul cry for peace is far above all political parties of all nations. Any man who would oppose it—or even favor it, as to that matter—as a partisan only, to serve some political and selfish end, is as far removed from patriotism as the two-by-four ward politician is from the big-hearted and great statesman, as war is from peace, or as Satan is from Christ.

All statesmen and patriots of all civilized nations, with all war-weary and war-stricken inhabitants, want a peace league. In our own nation such men as Taft, Roosevelt. Lodge, and Wilson want it. The difference is in matters of detail. As Mr. Wilson says, one cannot think that when George Washington warned against "entangling alliances" he meant the United States should never join other civilized nations in some proper league to prevent future wars. But, to be just, may not a peace league embrace also, aside from the peace league, some sort of "en-(angling alliances?" True patriots and real statesmennot selfish politicians-must settle this. The only point I am making is, all say they want universal peace. Any true and sensible man would be ashamed to say he does not favor universal peace. Most certainly Christians want it and pray for it, praying and making intercession and supplications and offering thanksgivings for all rulers, "that they may lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity." (1 Tim. 2: 1-4.) They encourage every rightful effort to bring it about. They obey God in learning war no more, in keeping peace among themselves, and in seeking it among all others. They rejoice in every prospect of it. Politicians may call it "idealism;" but it is a glorious ideal. With Christians it matters not how God binds the nations together in a league of peace, whether through this political party or that; they know he will do it whenever the world is ready for it. They trust God and in their humility and peaceful service commit all to him, resting contented in his guidance. They know that when "the gospel of peace" in its benign and merciful influence, as leaven in three measures of meal, has sufficiently permeated the governments of earth to cause them to seek the good of all and not their own selfish ends at the destruction of all, then will dawn that glorious day when nation will no longer lift up sword against nation or learn war any more. Then no longer will professional warriors be honored above all men of earth. No longer will the tender sons-children-of millions of mothers be offered against their wills as human sacrifices to that most cruel and horrible of all idols, the bloody war god-and all this to gratify the greed and ambition of deceitful and wicked rulers.

The President of the United States, in his tender, earnest, and most eloquent appeals in behalf of "the League of Nations," speaks of war as "a death warrant of children" and the "sending of mothers' sons to death." This is true. Millions of young and tender sons, who were in no way whatever responsible for the war and who could give no intelligent reason for it, were sent to death and unprepared to the judgment. This is the hardest and most cruel thing of war. The helpless and the innocent suffer with the guilty, and frequently more than the guilty and instead of the guilty. But this was true when the nations wanted war as much so as it is now when all seem to want peace. War is no more horrible and terrible and sinful now than it was then. If peace is right now, it was then; if war is wrong now, it was then. Christians are always the same. God does not teach them to be for peace when the nations want peace and to be for war when the nations want war; they are for peace all the time because peace is right and God teaches them to keep it. They are for peace when it costs them something to be for it and when they suffer persecution on account of being for it. They are not for peace because their political party favors it; they are not against it because their political party is against it; they are not for it because their nation wants it; but they are for it, and they themselves always keep it, because, under Christ, God teaches it.

The Immediate Need of Funds to Carry on the Well-Begun Work of Erecting the Dormitory for Girls and Making Other Repairs at David Lipscomb College.

BY E. A. E.

Private letters and public appeals show how well this work is progressing, what funds are needed, and what responses have been made.

These letters and appeals state also the necessity for more funds—namely, the advance in the cost of both material and labor since this good work was undertaken.

Every school, every benevolent institution, and every religious movement (and movements not religious) which calls for any given amount of money receives it. Should not this school, whose principles and teaching, with schools like it, are the best in the world, receive the small amount it needs? Friends, you cannot give too much. The school is growing and will continue to grow, and needs all the financial help which can be bestowed upon it. You cannot leave a better inheritance to the rising generation.

Note what others are doing. The Methodists are calling for thirty-five millions, and will get it; the Episcopalians, for no small sum, and will get it; and the Baptists, for seventy-five millions, and are raising it right along. Note this from the Atlanta Constitution:

Jackson Barnett Henrietta, a full-blooded Creek Indian, of Oklahoma, has set the Baptists of the South in a whirl by announcing that he would give two hundred thousand dollars to the Baptist seventy-five-million-dollar campaign. This is the largest amount thus far subscribed, with the exception of E. H. Jennings, of Memphis, who has made a subscription of the same amount. There have been several one-hundred-thousand-dollar subscriptions. Among them is the gift of M. H. Wolfe, of Texas.

Then the Nashville Banner, October 5, makes mention of a million-dollar gift to this Baptist fund. This gift comes through the will of M. J. Thomas, of Dallas, Texas, who died recently.

This Baptist campaign is succeeding remarkably well, not only because of these few large donations, but because every Baptist is giving something,

Everybody, almost, bought war savings stamps and Liberty bonds, and almost every one gave to the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A., and yet the Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists, and all other institutions are raising large amounts for their work. Will we not with our money seek first the greatest good, above all things, of the youth of our land? It is a great pity to have boys and girls turned away from this school for lack of room, when there is more than enough money in the country to build many schools like it.

We cannot expect any one person to give to the school a million dollars, or even as much as a hundred thousand; but are there not some who can give several thousand? A few ten-thousand-dollar donations, or five-thousand-dollar ones, or more or less, would lift this school and the Fanning Orphan School upon a level where they belong and could accomplish so much more.

Let us hear from you. Let every one do somethingmuch or little,

Send all donations or promises to H. Leo Boles, David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn.

We should mark and know of a very truth that all manner of virtue and goodness, and even that Eternal Good which is God himself, can never make a man virtuous, good, or happy, so long as it is outside the soul. Therefore, although it be good and profitable that we should ask and learn and know what good and holy men have wrought and suffered, and how God hath dealt with them, and what he hath wrought in and through them, yet it were a thousand times better that we should in ourselves learn and perceive and understand who we are, how and what our own life is, what God is and is doing in us, what he will have from us, and to what ends he will or will not make use of us.—Selected.

By massacre, deportation, confiscation, and other methods of persecution, the Turks have tried to annihilate the non-Turkish population of Western Asia. It is estimated that of the survivors, 4,000,000 Armenians, Syrians, Jews, Greeks, and Persians are destitute. Of this number, 400,000 are orphans.

To say merely that they are destitute is not enough. Except where help from the outside has reached them, they are dying by hundreds every day of starvation and disease. They have no homes and no clothing. They exist in hovels and caves. They have to fight for single grains of wheat; they scramble for refuse to eat. They have been so tortured and they are so desperate—some of them—that they have dug human bodies from their graves and eaten them. Nowhere in history is there a record of human suffering on such a scale.

More than four hundred relief workers were sent out between January and June of this year. Included in this number were medical units of doctors and nurses, with full equipment for fifteen hospitals of one hundred beds each; agricultural experts, orphanage workers, reconstruction aids, kindergarten workers, and other skilled helpers.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Training Little Children

BY ELIZABETH HARRISON

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

A Much Neglected Instinct of Childhood.

I was present one day in one of our large city training schools for teachers when a lecture was being delivered upon the value of agriculture as a national asset. The speaker suddenly asked all those members of the class of six hundred students who had ever been on a farm to hold up their right hands. Not more than fifty were raised. He then asked all those who had never seen a farm to do the same, and about two hundred hands were raised.

Is it any wonder that there has had to be such a persistent drive to awaken the right interest in our agricultural problem of producing enough food for the civilized world? And yet, every unspoiled child loves to dig in the ground, to plant seed; and when there is a wise sharing in his interest, he gladly waters and tends his little garden plot with real pleasure. The recent success in our school gardens proves this. In 1918 the war gardeners of the country planted more than five million plots.

Those of us who have had much to do with young children know how eager and interested they are in watching the mysterious unfoldment of the leaf buds in the early spring, and in talking about and waiting for the appearance of the seeds which they have planted in plots or window boxes. I have seen children as enthusiastic over the first bursting from the ground of the cotyledon of a bean which they have planted as if it were the first miracle of creation. If they are given an opportunity to continue their observations of peas, beans, or other seeds on to the mature seed-bearing plants, so much the better. Appreciation of the mystery of nature and the control of her resources are as old as recorded time, and probably many thousand years older. On the walls of the Egyptian temples are to be found harvest songs, and in the tombs of Egypt are painted agricultural scenes; and yet we starve our children's desires in this direction and furnish them with filmsy toys which break to pieces in a few days, when the personal possession of a plot of ground, or even of a flowerpot with seeds, would give them more pleasurable and lasting interest.

Why are we so stupid? It would take less time and less nervous force to share a child's interest in nature than it does to scold him for the destruction of toys or the abuse of furniture, both of which are the result of the unnatural curbing of his instinctive desire to express his ideas by changing, transforming, and creating new forms.

I happen to have two little girl friends, aged seven and nine, who are children of a wealthy family and are in consequence overloaded with toys and other gifts. I was in their playroom one morning a few weeks after Christmas and noticed a flowerpot in which still stood the remains of a Christmas poinsettia. The flower had disappeared and the stalk had withered, but the pot still stood In the sunshiny window. On my return home I selected six nasturtium seeds and six morning-glory seeds and carefully folded three of a kind in two bits of tissue paper. These I inclosed in a note, suggesting that they each plant them in one of their flowerpots and see that the flowerpot was placed in a sunny window and that the earth was kept moistened, and I added: "If you do this, by and by you will see something wonderful happen. I am not going to tell you what it is, but it is a very, very wonderful thing,"

Several weeks later I had occasion to visit their home again. The two children ran to meet me with open arms, exclaiming: "We know now; we know now! They've grown up."

The mother had told me that of all the gifts they had ever received, she had never known any that had given them so much pleasure; for although there had always been a garden on their grounds, it had never occurred to her that they would be in the least interested in the processes of gardening. The children had carefully followed my directions as to the depth at which the seeds should be planted and the conditions under which they should be kept; and when the plants appeared above the ground, she said they were as delighted as if it were man's first discovery of the laws of nature's propagation. She added: 'I realized then how deficient my training had been." When their grandmother, who lives in another suburb, invited them to spend the week-end with her, they only consented to go on the condition that one of the maids in their own home would take care of these plants while they were away.

This may seem like an extreme case of the isolation of children from nature, but I can assure you there are many children in our cities who know nothing whatever of the marvelous miracle of the phenomena of the springtime. There are many more who are taken every summer to some resort who pay no more attention to nature and her miracles than the greedy gathering of all the wild flowers they can hold, which they often throw away before they reach their hotel because of the withering of the imprisoned little blossoms.

To-Day and To-Morrow.

Part of to-day belongs to to-morrow, as the seed belongs to the shoot, as the foundation belongs to the building. So to-day owes its best to to-morrow, for not to do right to-day may ruin to-morrow; but the reverse is not true. To-morrow cannot ruin to-day. Time's wheel does not ruin backward. Banish, then, foreboding and anxious forecast, and fill to-day with faithful work, with kindness and courage and hope; and so you will keep to-morrow from becoming a marpiot, and make it a good, honest to-day when it comes.—Maitbie D. Babcock.

Starward.

I wonder where your house is, dear?
Is it near the pearly gate,
Or round by the jasper wall so clear,
Where you think of me and wait?
You loved the glorious summer day,
You longed for foreign lands;
And now you dwell at home for aye
In the "house not made with hands."

O, yours to watch the molten sea,
As it laps the heavenly shore;
To join in rapturous melody,
All joyous evermore;
And yours to see the blessed face
Of Him who understands,
Whose love made ready, by his grace,
Your "house not made with hands!"

I, too, shall have my house one day,
When earthly things are past,
When, by His name who leads the way,
I enter home at last.
And may I find it sweetly nigh
To where your dwelling stands,
When on the morning wings I fly
To my "house not made with hands!"

Okitsu.

BY SARAH SHEPHEED ANDREWS.

Since first coming to Japan I have had an earnest desire to take up work in one of the many untouched towns scattered over this land where idolatry and superstition prevail. Work has been carried on in Tokyo for more than twenty-five years, and work has been started in a few other places, but there are yet millions of people who have not had even one opportunity to hear. My desire is to reach as many people as possible in the more remote places, and I have worked and planned and prayed to this end for the past three years. With the usbering in of this year it seemed evident that the time had come when the Lord would have us enter a new field of labor. Previous to making a prospective trip to the country we wrote letters to the chiefs of several towns and villages. praying all the while that the Lord would lead us to the very place where he would have us go. I believe he did lead us.

After visiting several of these places, it was apparent that Okitsu, a town of more than eighty-six hundred people, located on the Suruga Bay about one hundred miles from Tokyo, was the place for us. We got off the train in this strange town on that April evening, and two men representing two different hotels seemed to vie with each other to see which could make the better appeal for his respective hotel. We could not very well patronize both places, so decided to leave our baggage at the station and walk up the long street to find another place. We found a place cheaper than either of the other two. Not until the second trip to this town did I learn that the proprietor of this hotel is one of the leading officers of the town, and he and his son have been very helpful in getting arrangements made to start work here. The town chief was very kind and gave us the privilege of using the "kokaido," or city hall, for the work. This man later died of a brain trouble, which is so common in Japan among both young and old. The man's wife, being so grieved, committed suicide by throwing herself on the railroad in front of a fast-going train. The death of these two made us very sad, since they were just about to have, perhaps, their first opportunity to hear the truth:

Through the influence of the hotel keeper the privilege of using the publie hall for the work has been maintained, and all the other officers and people of the town are very kindly toward us and seem glad to have us cast our lot among them. My native helper and I made the change from Tokyo to Okiisu on July 10, and we feel encouraged already at the prospects for work here. We hope to get into the homes of the people through the children of the Sunday school and a small kindergarten which we expect to have. In a place like this, where idolatry reigns, we must have some way of getting acquainted with the people before we can teach them. It is not an easy thing to be welcomed in a home where the members fail down before stocks and stones, when the purpose in going into that home is to teach a religion entirely new to every one of them; so in this country through the children is one of the best and quickest ways of getting acquainted with the greatest number of people. The people here seem devout in their idolatrous beliefs and the work will likely be hard, but, the Lord being with us, we can but expect some harvest. We will sow the seed in the homes and then have some of the native brethren from Tokyo or elsewhere come and do some public preaching, and perhaps there will be some who will wish to be baptized. There being only the two of us here now to meet around the Lord's table, we are longing and praying for the time when others may enjoy the happy privilege with us. Our earnest prayer is that a strong, wide-awake, self-supporting church may be the result of labor spent here. Please, won't you pray with us to this end?

HENS MOULT FAST.

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using "More Eggs" I get forty to fifty eggs a day, Instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you do not take any risk. Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day, Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, fourth floor, Reefer Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book, free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

Bishop-Vincent Japan Mission.

BY W. W. FREEMAN.

On July 22 report was made of $315.80 on hand for the lot. I have received since then the following contributions for the lot and building fund: By C. G. Vincent, now of Knoxville, Tenn., and who will receive funds for the work as well as I. $157; May Cole, Missouri, $3; Mrs. Laura V. Odom, Texas, $2. Total to date, $477 .-80. On advice of brethren from Japan and local church officers, check was given for $350 toward $800 refund made to a brother who had bequeathed it, but recovered and was in need of it; but this is to be made up in full by those who locally and generally were interested in the refunding. Not only so, but we hope more will be given for this long-waiting call.

Since last report I have for the regular work; Cummings, Pa., $6; La Mine church, Missouri, $25.57; Dayton Ohio ($30, less $7 erroneously eredited), $23; "A Brother," Oklahoma, by Gospel Herald, $5; church, by R. E. Spears, Missouri, $25; May Cole, Missouri, $3; Parkland Church, Louisville, Ky., $14; Earl Hodson, Alabama, $15; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Farris, Texas, $3; Rich Pond, Ky., $5.54. Total, $125.11; plus old balance of $120.56; minus checks for last three months to Bixler of $75, $75, and $70; present balance, $25.67.

This regular fund a year ago had nearly two hundred dellars reserve. left from the unused Gleun mission fund. We see that the regular needs have not been met this year. work has grown more rapidly than ever before. Some forty have been baptized in the regular work of the church there. All are giving every day to real gospel work. Expenses have about doubled there. I hope a few churches or individuals will be found for the coming year who will give monthly to this expense fund. Churches and individuals will be strengthened by doing so. Give for the Lord's sake. Two dollars each for Sarah Andrews and Lillie Cypert was sent to Brother Bradley and Miss Straiton.

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT

Take a Class of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up, and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or the kidneys are not acting right, or if the bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure any one. makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and wemen take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

419 EGGS FROM 20 HENS IN 30 DAYS

Mr. Dougherty Got This Result in October-Plan is Easily Tried.

"I tried Don Sung, and the results were far past any expectations. I got 412 eggs in 38 days from 20 hens while moulting. I think this is wonderful, as they hardly laid at all before while moulting."—Frank Bougherty, 5940 Sais Eleventh Street, Indianapolis.

Mr. Dougherty bought $1 worth of Don Sung tablets in October and wrote the above letter in November. Figure his profit on 35 dozen eggs from hens that formerly laid little or nothing.

This may sound too good to be true, but it costs nothing to find out, We'll make you the same offer we made him.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us, and your money will be promatily refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg laying) works directly one the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for thirty days, and if it desen't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry-remody dealer, or send 50 cents for a package by mail, prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Company, 477. Columbia Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

Romantic Story of South. d's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos-listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, dura-lities and economy be made known there. cluding not offly comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for ExWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hindred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shee that combines all worth-while shoe shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

"Baptists vs. Campbellites." No. 11. BY M. S. MASON.

I wish now to put the Baptist contention from the Bible and the statements of their historians together, and see that their theory on the time of the establishment of the church annihilates itself.

Mr. Bandy's contention is that the New Testament church was established during the first century. Baptist historians make different statements about the Baptist Church, Mr. Vedder says that we cannot set foot on solid Baptist ground until the opening of the seventeenth century. Mr. Benedlet says that the first Baptist Church of which we have any account was established in London, England, in 1607, by a man named "Smythe." Now, if the New Testament church was established in the first century and the Baptist Church was not established till the opening of the seventeenth century, then the Baptist Church and the New Testament church are not identical institutions.

In answering the contention made by Mr. Bandy for the Baptist name, "Baptists" and "Baptist Church." etc., I believe I cannot use anything better than the subject-matter of a sermon which I preached on "John the Baptist."

I do not wish to minimize John the Baptist in this discussion. He was truly a great character, but this does not warrant us in assigning to him a greater place than he occupied. Inasmuch as his work is a subject of controversy, we shall first discuss what he was not.

John was not a church builder. This is true for three reasons. First, John the Baptist dies in Matt. 14; and in Matt. 16, which is later, Jesus places the church in the future by saying, "I will build." If the church was still in the future after John was dead, certainly he did not build it. But Mr. Bandy might say the expression "will build" does not mean to establish from the foundation; It means to edify that which is already built. The expression from which "will build" comes may mean "to edify" or "establish from the foundation." There are two words, however, from which this expression comes; ardificao, to edify; oikodomeso, to build from the foundation. The expression "will build," in Matt. 16: 18, comes from oikodomeso, which means to build from the foundation, or beginning. So that settles the matter as to whether the church was in existence during John's day. Second. John was not in the kingdom. In Matt. 11: 11, 12 we read: "Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist:

vet he that is but little in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." Now, if John were as great as any one and the kingdom were present, it would have been impossible for any in that kingdom to have been greater than he; and the only solution of the problem is that the kingdom was not then present, but it was a so much greater state that when it did come even the least of its occupants would be greater than John. So it did not exist in his day. Third, John was to decrease, (John 3: 30.) Now, if John was the founder of the kingdom, or church, and a fountain cannot rise higher than its source, and the source was on the decrease, how could the church, or kingdom, grow and in-Would it not, instead, decrease? crease and gradually vanish away? Evidently John was not the founder or builder of the church, or kingdom.

Hollis, October 6.—At Corley, Ark., was once a small congregation, with a small house, but there had been no services for two or three years. I closed a twelve-days' meeting there on October 1, with twenty-three restored and thirteen baptized, one of whom was a strong Baptist. There was great rejoicing. Enough money was subscribed to build a splendid meetinghouse. I am to return there next year. I began regular work here yesterday, preaching at the schoolhouse at 3 P.M.—O. M. Reynolds.

Tennessee.

Livingston, October 8.—Our meeting at Samaria closed at the water's edge last Monday after eight days' duration. Five were added (three by baptism) and two erring ones confessed their sins. I am needing some rest, but have promised to hold one more meeting. May the Lord give me strength to continue on.—Willie Hunter.

Bethel, October 6.—I preached here yesterday and will preach to-night. The new church at College Grove is going up nicely. Brother Andrew Perry, of Illinels, and I will begin a Bible school at the new College Grove Church, beginning on December 15 and continuing three months. All invited, Will arrange to keep all visitors who will come from afar. We are going to try to go through the whole Bible, and sacred music will be taught. Tuition will be free.—J. C. Mosley.

Nashville, October 6.-On August 31 an arbor meeting was begun at Vine. Tenn., on the Lebanon pike, midway between Murfreesboro and Lebanon. Brother W. S. Peebles, of Smyrns, preached, on Sunday and Sunday night, two very strong sermons to large and appreciative audiences Brother H. W. Wrye, of Dallas, Texas, began on Monday and continued, day and night, until Wednesday night of the following week. The crowds were large at all the services, especially at night, there being five or six hundred present. On the second Sunday there were two services, with dinner on the ground. The crowd was estimated at from twelve to fifteen hundred. good people of Vine and surrounding communities manifested their interest in the work by the bountiful din-ner spread. The interest was good throughout the meeting. Eight persons were baptized and three were reclaimed. About forty-eight men and women agreed to keep house for the Lord "as it is written." They will meet in the schoolhouse each Lord's day until their new house of worship is completed, for which purpose a subscription of a little more than two thousand dollars was raised during the meeting. Dr. W. H. Garrett was a live wire in this meeting. Brother Lannom gave a beautiful one-acre lot, fronting on the pike, on which to build the house. The writer conducted the song service during this meeting. Every one seemed to enjoy the meeting, and we trust that much and lasting good was accomplished for the cause. Brethren needing my help in singing can write me at 756 Olympic Street, this city.—J. D. Derryberry, College Grove, October 5.-I will now report three good meetings the Eagleville church has held by the help of a few others. The first one was held by R. A. Largen under a tent at College Grove. There were five addi-tions, four being heads of families. One came from the Methodists. This was the fourth meeting that has been held here since moving into this section four years and nine months ago, We have but two or three brethren here; but if we will do our part and the interest continues to grow, I do not see why we cannot have a church here before a great while. As I stated once before in the Gospel Advocate, it had been twenty years since there had been any preaching done here by our brethren. Brother Largen is a strong. forcible preacher, and he has a way of reaching the people that not many preachers are gifted with. We hope to have him back again next year. Our next meeting was a colored meeting, held by Alexander Campbell on my front lawn under a tent. I must my front lawn under a tent. I must say that he can lay a great many of our white preachers in the shade when it comes to preaching the old Jerusalem gospel, he makes it so plain and pointed. From what I can learn, this was the first colored meeting ever held in this section. There were no additions. The truth preached was a new doctrine to those who heard it; but a great many were convinced that he preached the Bible, and the Bible only, and several went so far as to say that other preachers had been preaching lies to them. There is a good pros-pect of their having a church here some day. Our next meeting was held by Brother Charlie Taylor at the Eagleville church. There were two additions. One was an old man, sixty-nine years old; the other was a fine, intelligent lady from the Methodists. This was the fourth meeting Brother Tay-lor has held in our midst. All three of the meetings closed too soon, considering the interest that was manifested.-R. P. Thurman.

Texas.

San Antonio, September 22.—We had two good services at Denver Heights congregation, this city, yesterday. Two came forward on invitation last night—one to place membership, the other to be baptized. Brother T. B. Clark preached for us last Wednesday night, and one was added, a man who has preached for a number of years for the "digressives." Our work is fine.—W. D. Bills.

Fort Worth, October 6.—We were almost rained out yesterday at South-side, but several were brave enough to worship God in spite of a down-pour. A business meeting of elders and deacons showed the church to be in fine shape for work. We will begin a revival meeting soon and try to put new life into the work. The work along all lines is showing new energy. A few brethren and sisters here and Denton, October t.—After closing the meeting near Coxey, Ala., I began a meeting out near De Queen, Ark., on September 7, which continued for eight days. The brethren out there are few in number and poor in this world's goods, and because of the hard times they had not had a meeting in some time. Old Brother Kays lives in that community and preaches all he can, and has done much in holding the few together. This was a timely meeting and much good was the result. The dancing and party craze had struck this community, and the influence of these worldly pleasures had begun to throw a shadow over the church; but, thanks be to the Lord, we were able to win several from the allurements of the world and the pleasures of sin. Three persons were baptized, among these being two of the leading dancers of the community. These two (a man and his wife) are capable and talented people, and we pray that they may use their talents to the glory of God. On the last Sunday of the meeting we had an old-time

Arkansas dinner "on the ground," and after a short service after noon 1 bade them good-by and boarded the train for Texarkana on my way home. rain for Texarkana on my way home. As I could not get a train out of the city that night, I preached for the College Hill brethren on Sunday night. Here we have a fine lot of brethren and sisters. When I got home, I found a letter awaiting me with an urgent call to come to Guymon, Okla. I was there on the third mon, Okla. I was there on the third Sunday in September, I am now at home helping about things here.— D. S. Ligon.

Moore.

Stephen Hubbard Moore was born on March 28, 1856; died on September 21, 1919; and was buried on Tuesday afternoon, September 23, in Fairview Tenn. at Dyersburg. Brother Moore obeyed the gospel early In life. For the last few years of his life he had been interested in the Christ life and had been faithful in his relations to the church. He was prominent in business circles, a ploneer in the selling of planes and organs in West Tennessee. He was widely known in this section of the State and leaves a host of friends to mourn his death. He is survived by his wife; a daughter-Mrs. Laura Neal, of Bonicord, Tenn.; and two sons-Carl, of Houston, Miss., and Olin, of Dyersburg, Tenn., who was associated with him in business. The funeral services were conducted by the writer.

L. K. HARDING.

Glenn.

John Daniel Glenn was born, in Amherst County, Va., on December 22, 1845, and died on October 31, 1918. He was the last of seven children. In youth, with his parents, Nathan and Katherine Glenn, he moved to Tennes-see. He was reared in the Presbyte-rian faith, but learned "the way of the Lord more perfectly" and put on Christ in baptism when a young man. He spent several years in Terre Haute, Ind., first attending and then teaching school. There he married his first wife, Miss Melissa Hedges, in 1884 school. She lived a short time, and after her death he returned to Lebanon, Tenn., where he spent the remainder of his life. On February 6, 1900, he was married to Mrs. M. C. Waters, who survives him. He was noble by nature and kind to every being in touch with him. By his cheery, optimistic disposition he carried sunshine with him. He loved God and his fellow man. He loved to live in the beautiful world, created for man, and appreciated ev-erything in it. Nothing was unno-ticed, from the modest flower at his feet to the glorious sun. When told his critical condition, he met it brave-ty and cheerfully. He said: "I have ly and cheerfully. He said: "I have been trying to be ready for this. God has been good to me given me a long life with many blessings. I cannot ask more." He was a comprehensive reader and kept a live interest in current events to the end. He was a Bi-ble reader and had great faith in the love, mercy, providence, and overruling power of God. Funeral services were conducted by Brethren E. A. Elam and George W. Farmer.

MRS. MATTIE C. GLENN.

Mann.

John L. Mann departed this life on August 22, 1919, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Felix Ray, after a painful and protracted Illness, borne with the patience and resignation in-spired by the Christian hope. He was of the sturdy Frankiin County pioneer stock—the Manns, the Millers, and the Lipscombs. Lipscombs. He is survived by two brothers-Matt Mann, of Knoxville, Tenn, and Horace Mann, of Riverside,

THIN PEOPL SHOULD TAKE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put On Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advartised for the purpose of making thin people floshy, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved these of heath, and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feet their excessive thinness.

and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is cominined in modern foods.
Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitrophosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sheeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive lithmess,

Observations.

BY W. W. FREEMAN.

The "Prayer" Number of the Gospel Advocate was especially good, but no better than the "Better Ministry" Number. This is the sort of journalism the cause of Christ is needing everywhere to-day. I certainly hope your support will justify such special plans for future numbers.

To my mind, we need to emphasize the great doctrines of grace that count so much for that deeply spiritual life and that breadth of vision that are so fundamental in avoiding tangents and schisms. Attention to efficiency in church plans and work will help well. I think there is room for important improvement in the way of enrolling members and seeing that they are faithfully cared for and directed to useful labors in the kingdom of God. Another feature in the local churches is that the young people be taught well and as many enlisted in active work in meetings for them as can be so induced. The social feature should not be forgotten, leaving "movies" to fill up the gap. Women should meet and do work the church needs to have done by them. Definite percentages of the regular contribution or, else, regular special contributions should be set for mission work in definite places each year. Better, one or more could be sent out and supported by their home church alone. Personal work and circulation and reading of good, Christian literature are very important. All these are important constructive features that soon will eliminate old discords. They will also tend to avoid troubles in the future.

Most important for all is to get the feeling of dependence and gratitude

We regard Brother Bowser as one of the ablest preachers who has worked here, and think that no church who anticipates work among the negroes will make a mistake in calling him.

Lillard S. White, elder of the congregation at Lebanon Tenn., writes:

In response to our appeal to the white congregations of Christ in Wilson County to aid the colored people in building a house of worship near Centerville, in the Sixth District of the county, I have received from the congregation at Greenwood benlars and from the church at Bethany five dollars. Several other congrega-tions have assured us of their willing-ness and intention of helping in this cause. Our house is up, and only needs to be celled, seated, and painted, which will require not less than two hundred dollars. We sincerely hope and trust that we may be able to com-plete this work before severe weather sets in. From Palmer I went to Summerfield, in the same county, where I began a meeting on September 7 and preached fifteen discourses. Four persons were baptized and one was reclaimed. This was my fourth meeting at this place, and, the Lord willing, I am to hold another next year.

From Summerfield I went to Coalmont, Tenn., for one week, with no visible results as to converts, but a promise of more zeal in the church.

Next I went to Tracy City and preached six discourses, resulting in nine baptisms-eight of them heads of families and one the daughter of our dearly beloved brother, J. D. Northcut. This was (including a brush-arbor meeting held near Tracy last year) my fifth meeting at Tracy City, and, the Lord willing, I am to go back again in 1920.

A Summer's Work.

BY J. J. HORTON,

I wish now to submit for publication a brief report of meetings held by me during the past three months.

My first meeting was at New Zion, Route No. 2, Christiana, Tenn., an eight-days' meeting, with fifteen discourses to large, appreciative audiences, with no visible results. New Zion is a band of faithful workers, keeping "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." The Lord willing, I will hold their meeting in 1920.

I began a meeting at Bean's Creek, in Coffee County, Tenn., on the first Lord's day in August, holding over eight days, with one baptized into Christ and a number restored to fellowship. This meeting resulted in a closer union of the church, and we hope that they will do better work for the Master's cause.

I began a tent meeting at Maysville, Ala, on the third Lord's day in August, closing on the fourth Lord's-day evening. Seven persons were baptized into Christ and one came out of Babyion. This was a mission point, and there was much good accomplished in breaking down sectarian prejudice. The audiences were large and appreciative all the time. This good meeting was the result largely of the combined efforts of the three surrounding churches of Christ-at Hurricane, Brownsboro, and Bell Factory, Ala-

Beginning on the fifth Lord's day in August, I assisted the Bell Factory church in a meeting of four days' duration, with good attendance. There were no additions, but a good fellowship and building up of the cause there.

From thence I went for a meeting in the historic Honeycomb Valley, ten miles north of Guntersville, Ala,, where I joined a faithful little band of workers for Christ, whom I assisted in an eight-days' meeting. Ten souls were added to the Lord by obedience to the gospel and seven came out of sectarianism. This was a great meeting for the weak little band at Honeycomb.

I began my last meeting at Owens Cross Roads, Ala., on the third Lord's day in September. It was such a busy time that I preached only at night during the week. The meeting continued eight days, with thirteen baptisms and one restored to fellowship.

I bespeak for these bands of worshipers a very useful career in the Master's vineyard.

I am now ready to take up the work of visiting and strengthening as many churches as I can, as my custom is during the winter months.

I am enjoying the Gospel Advocate as never before. Long live its editors and staff!

Old Age.

What is more beautiful than old age? There is something gold cannot buy. It will not buy the radiant afterglow that lingers in the path of the pilgrim who is finishing a well-spent life. It will not buy that far out reaching vision of him who from some transfigured Nebo views the landscape o'er. It will not buy the sound of music that comes from distant shores to him who sits in life's gloaming, waiting for the dawn of an eternal day. It will not buy the twilight hour when to the aged the very all is populous with their disembodied dend, when hope sees the fadeless star and their listening love can hear the noise of wings.—Selected.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Color, Gloss, and Attractiveness

Almost every one knows that Sage Tes and Sulphur, properly com-pounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked, or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sul-phur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, and attractive.

HENS MOULT FAST.

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs' I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine." writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. Edifying as the Need May Be

Be What You Contend For.

It is right to insist on being called a "Christian" in preference to all other religious names. But before we can consistently contend for this scriptural name, we must be what we contend for. The converts at Antioch were sure-enough Christians; for when Barnabas arrived, he quickly saw that the grace of God was upon them. That grace was manifested in their changed lives. We might well say that they were called "Christians" in derision, had we learned that they were unworthy of the name. But such is not the record of their lives. Too many make a fuss over the name to-day who care little or nothing of its precious meaning to themselves.

A poor boy came to a certain jeweler's shop and asked for work. The foreman asked him if he had ever worked in a jeweler's shop. "No, sir," the boy replied, "but I have worked next door to one." Working next door to a jeweler's shop does not make one a jeweler. Nor does merely going to church or contending for the name make one a Christian. For the sake of your influence upon others and for the salvation of your own soul, be what you contend for. "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

Bring Out Your Scholars.

When Barnabas felt the need of an earnest worker at Antioch, he hunted up Saul. We might say that Barnabas "brought him out," in the way of introducing him to people and to opportunities for larger service. We often hear of mothers "bringing their daughters out" into society, but too rarely hear of Christians recognizing the talents of young converts and bringing them out for Christ. Everywhere there are people whose talents are lost to God's kingdom because no Barnabas has taken an interest in them. The teacher of a Bible class has an unusual opportunity for being a Barnabas, a friend to the friendless and the novice, a bringer into light of great workers in the Master's vineyard. Have you a singer among your pupils whose gifts may be used in the congregation? Bring that singer out. Have you a thoughtful boy who should be trained for leadership? Bring him out. After Saul had been introduced, he became a more preëminent leader than Barnabas; but I believe the introducer will share in the apostle's glory.

In J. R. Miller's book about Paul he tells that one of the most distinguished scientific men of the latter part of the eighteenth century was Sir Humphrey Davy. He made many great discoveries and added many valuable contributions to science. Among those who worked with him was a journeyman named Michael Faraday. He was employed at first only at weekly wages in unimportant positions. But soon it became apparent that Faraday was himself possessed of a great genius for scientific researches. It is said that when Sir Humphrey Davy was asked what had been his greatest discovery, he said: "Michael Faraday."

In the same sense we may say that Barnabas, more than any other man, recognized and brought into play Saul's capabilities. He was wise enough to discover what Jesus Christ had called a "chosen vessel."

Running Risks for Christ.

It was a magnificent tribute to Paul and Barnabas to describe them as "men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." We can better appreciate this tribute if we will read Paul's own statement of his sufferings, recorded in 2 Cor. 11: 23-28. Most of the apostles met death in some violent manner. History and tradition tell us that Matthew was slain with a sword in Ethiopa; Mark died in Alexandria as the result of a severe beating; Luke was hanged in Greece; John was exiled to Patmos; Peter was crucified at Rome, head downward; James was beheaded at Jerusalem; James the Less was beaten to death with clubs; Philip was hanged in Phrygia; Bartholomew was flayed alive; Andrew was crucified: Thomas was thrust through with a lance; Jude was shot to death with arrows; Matthias was beheaded; Barnabas was stoned to death; and Paul was beheaded at Rome. It is estimated that fifty millions of persons have suffered martyrdom for the religion of Christ. What have you suffered or risked for his sake?

* * *

Disputes and Rightful Contentions.

On the above subject Peloubet writes: "There are five classes of disputes in our day: (1) disputes between nations, leading still to terrible wars; (2) disputes between political parties and over questions of public policy; (3) disputes among the denominations of Christians, of which there are nearly two hundred in the United States; (4) disputes between capital and labor, leading to fierce and injurious strikes and lockouts: (5) disputes between individuals—neighbors, friends, relatives, business associates—over an endless variety of matters, important and trivial." His classification is timely and comprehensive, with one exception. He mentions "disputes among the denominations of Christians." The New Testament does not authorize "denominations of Christians," but, on the other hand, deplores them. And what this brilliant writer classifies as a dispute may stand for an earnest contention for the "faith once for all delivered unto the saints," which every true Christian should stand ready to make. Highminded, open-handed discussion is not a dispute, although the majority of the two hundred or more denominations he mentions are fond of this classification.

The Fruits of Jealousy.

Its fruits are always hurtful and disappointing. Preachers who are envious of the success of their brethren, churches that are envious of their sister churches, give evidence of a lack of saving grace. In this, if in nothing else, they judge themselves unworthy of eternal life. Mr. Moody used to tell with good effect the fable of an eagle which could outfly another, and the other didn't like it. The latter saw an archer one day, and said to him: "I wish you would bring down that eagle." The sportsman replied that he would if he only had some feathers to put into the arrow. So the eagle pulled one out of his wing. The arrow was shot, but didn't quite reach the rival eagle; it was flying too high. The envious eagle pulled out more feathers, and kept pulling them out until he lost so many that he couldn't fly, and then the sportsman turned round and killed him. The moral to this fable is that the jealous party receives the worst hurt, and usually the only one. Let all put away, therefore, "all wickedness, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings."

The Fickle Goddess.

By "the fickle goddess" I mean popularity. She is the biggest and most popular flirt in the world, and she has been leading its people on for a long, long time. Neither Christ nor his apostles sought popularity, but she sought to tempt them. The high-minded conduct quickly restrained her advances. It was but a short distance from the garlands of Christ's triumphal entry to the thorns and nails of his crucifixion. It was but a short distance from the shout, "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men," to the stone pile outside the city walls. But the word has two senses. "Popularity, in the lowest and most common sense, is not worth the having. Do your duty to the best of your power, win the approbation of your own conscience, and popularity, in its best and highest sense, is sure to follow."

Dress-Its History.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

The history of dress is the history of civilization; however, this article will treat the subject from a biblical point of view. The importance of dress is seen in the number of times it is referred to in the Bible and the law that Jehovah has given to regulate it with reference to his people. Dress is mentioned in the Scriptures in various ways by such terms as apparel, attire, clothes, raiment, garments, costumes, and dress. These terms do not always indicate the material of which garments are made, yet much may be learned from these terms about the material. Nearly all of the biblical references in the Old Testament are to the costumes of the male; this is in harmony with the trend of Old Testament history; the male occupies the leading part in history. The biblical references are to public dress. The dress of male and female in the home or in private were very similar. In ancient times the women did not appear in public; hence, they did not need a dress for the public. But man, appearing in public, needed a public dress; this was regulated by law and custom.

The history of dress starts with the history of sin in the garden of Eden, when "the eyes of them were both opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons." (Gen. 3: 7.) It seems that Adam and Eve made a vain effort to cover their exposed and shameful condition by platting together fig leaves. These were unable to conceal them, and "Jehovah God made for Adam and for his wife coats of skin, and clothed them." (Gen. 3: 21.) Probably the skins of animals that had been offered as sacrifices for their sin furnished the skin with which Adam and Eve were clothed. They keenly felt the need of clothing, but were unable to provide the kind of clothing that was needed; so Jehovah, in mercy and pity, clothed them with the skins of animals. We are glad that they so keenly felt the need of clothing, and regret that many of the children of men to-day do not feel the need of clothing. Thus, the first clothing mentioned in the Bible was made of skin: and we learn that later in the history of God's people "they went about in sheepskins, in goatskins." (Heb. 11: 37.)

The next step in the progress or development of the idea of clothing is reached when the people began to manufacture the hair of animals into clothing. Goat's hair and camel's hair were made into coarse fabrics and worn. by the poorer classes of people, while the richer or more wealthy class wore garments made of wool and flax. John the Baptist "had his raiment of camel's hair." His dress seemed to attract attention; he was peculiar, not "in style," as the populace did not wear such clothing. It seems that all of God's consecrated servants, especially the prophets, were the coarse, simple garments of the poor. The prophets are spoken of as wearing hairy garments. "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the prophets shall be ashamed every one of his vision, when he prophesieth; neither shall they wear a hairy mantle to deceive." (Zech. 13: 4.) Elijah was said to be a hairy man; he is described as wearing a leather girdle about his loins and a hairy mantle. (See 2 Kings 1: 8.) Jesus, in speaking of John the Baptist, said: "What went ye out to see? a man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that wear soft ralment are in kings' houses." (Matt. 11: 8.) "Soft raiment" is put in contrast with camel's hair. This emphasizes the fact that while some wore garments made of hair, others were soft raiment, fine linen, and costly apparel.

The manufacture of wool into garments is among the early inventions of God's people; at least, it belongs to the middle of the Jewish dispensation. The writer of the Proverbs, in describing the blessing of the industrious and diligent, says: "The lambs are for thy clothing." (Prov. 27: 26.) The ideal woman described by King Lemuel provided her own clothing. "She seeketh wool and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands." Again: "She maketh for herself carpets of tapestry; her clothing is fine linen and purple." And again: "She maketh linen garments and selleth them, and delivereth girdles unto the merchant," (See Prov. 31: 13, 22, 24.) This shows that one of the chief duties and occupations of the women was to make articles of clothing.

The chief ornamentations in clothing were different colors, texture of fabric, and jewels. Blue, purple and scarlet, red and white were the principal colors used as ornamentation. Gold was used to supply the yellow color. However, all of the primary colors are found among the ancient people. Jacob made Joseph a coat of many colors. The high priest was clothed with garments of ornamentation. His vesture was to be of holy garments, with gold and blue and purple and scarlet and fine linen. The breast-plate of the high priest was to have settings of stones or jewels of twelve kinds. These all represented different colors.

The influence of dress has so affected the lives and character of God's people that he has deemed it necessary to regulate it with his people. The law of Moses contains some specific commands concerning the dress of the children of Israel. Certain kinds of dress was forbidden. "Neither shall there come upon thee a garment of two kinds of stuff mingled together." (Lev. 19: 19.) It is expressed again: "Thou shalt not wear a mingled stuff, wool and linen together." (Deut. 22: 11.) Some have thought that a mixture of colors and material in dress had a tendency to gender pride and vanity, and that Jehovah has forbidden those things which would encourage the vanity of the human heart. It is probable that the patriarch, Jacob, made a mistake when he made his son, Joseph, a coat of many colors. He encouraged arrogance and conceit on the part of Joseph and furnished the occasion for envy and hatred on the part of his other sons. This coat of many colors represented Jacob's partial love to Joseph and became the means of bringing about Joseph's separation from his father. In this is seen the proof of the old fable of the ape and her favorite cub, which she hugged to death through kindness. Jehovah has forbidden improper and heterogeneous mixtures of seed, animals, and dress. We may not see the reason for this in every case; nevertheless, it was wise and good, because Jehovah directed it.

Jehovah has also regulated the dress of the man and woman. He specifically states that "a woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment; for whosoever doeth these things is an abomination unto Jehovah thy God." (Deut. 22: 5.) Some have thought that this has reference not so much to daily dress as to the armor or costume in which they appeared before the altar to worship. Others have been inclined to take it literal and insist that all who do it are an abomination unto the Lord, and that this places the command among the literal injunctions of Jehovah for the guidance of his people. A man disgraces his sex when he dresses to appear effeminate; so also a woman casts a reflection upon her sex when she appears masculine in behavior and dress. God has ordained that there should be a distinction in the habits and dress of the sexes; but the evils of this will be mentioned in another article.

Where Can We Get Them?

BY C. M. STUBBLEFIELD.

A statement in the Gospel Advocate from brethren at College Grove, Tenn., concerning their needs, moves me to say a few words under the above caption. If there is a brother anywhere who does not have all he can do, surely he will take advantage of that opportunity. How I should like to live somewhere in that country, visit its historic scenes, view its beautiful landscape, breathe its pure air, drink its good water, and enjoy the fellowship of its fine, Christian people! But will those brethren find the man they want? We wait to see.

And just here allow me to say a few things about our own needs.

Brother John T. Smithson, who was my "true yokefel-low" here for some months, has moved away. Brother Guy Renfro, another good preacher, has moved to Nashville to teach in the David Lipscomb College and preach in that community. Brother Charley Landers lives thirty miles away at Highland Home. He has done good preaching in and around Montgomery, but is now in such a state of health that it is feared it will be many months before he will be able to do much more. Brother Samuel Jordan, of Highland Home, has passed far down into the evening of life, and is, therefore, physically unable to do much more in the Master's vineyard. Brother Haynes lives some distance away and labors, for the most part, in other sections. Brother Garrett lives some distance in the country from here, and I am not apprised of the extent of his labors. Barring the ones named, I am the only man in or near Montgomery devoting his entire time to preaching the "ancient order of things."

There are in Montgomery three full-grown churches, and only one of them has a preacher. The Highland Avenue Church is willing and able to support a man for his entire time. The West End brethren want a preacher for a part of his time. Reasonably near here there are congregations in the rural districts which need preaching and are willing to assist in the support of him who does it. The Catoma Street Church and the Highland Home Church would like to cooperate in supporting a man to evangelize anywhere and everywhere in adjacent territories. I am reliably informed that there are a number of strong congregations further south which have no preaching, simply and only because they cannot get the man. Now, will the College Grove brethren, when they have found their man, kindly inform us where to find men to do the work in this section? I have written a number of letters of inquiry, to which I invariably receive the reply: "I know of no one at present whom I can recommend."

We have just as good roads, air, water, and people as Tennessee or any other place. True, the roads sometimes become muddy, the water polluted, the air chilly, and the people—well, they do just exactly like they do in other places. Since coming here from West Kentucky three years ago, I have been shown every kindness and consideration a preacher should seek. There are three congregations in Montgomery and one at Highland Home, which are better congregations, on the whole, than the one Paul called "the church of God which is at Corinth." None of our brethren are at law with each other; not a man among us has taken his father's wife away from him; and none have so little faith as did those of whom Paul inquired, "How say some among you that there is no resurrection?"

Where, now, we again inquire, are the men to come from to supply the need of churches long since established, to say nothing of the fields white unto harvest into which men should be sent? Is there a dearth of preachers? It seems so. Why, then, do not more men begin preaching?

Is it because there are none sufficiently educated? There are plenty of them. It does not take much education to preach the gospel, for the simple reason that there are but few educated people to preach to. The men who did things worth while among disciples in days past were men who, for the most part, were what the world calls "uneducated." And they are doing the same this very day. The ability to mispronounce two or three dozen Greek words is a wholly unnecessary attainment.

Is it because they would not be supported? I think not. What will a man of mediocre ability do to earn more than the College Grove brethren propose to give? But, if a fellow is going to preach merely because he can command a better salary than at something else, no church needs him. He who fears God, keeps his commandments, declares the "whole counsel of God" on the matter of giving and on all other topics, and who keeps himself out of other people's business and attends to his own, need have no fears about support. "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." If one is going to preach to get rich, that is another question altogether. Of course some congregations do not give as they should, but they are the ones that should be taught "the way of the Lord more perfectly "taught to give. Paul did not quit preaching when "no church had fellowship with" him "in the matter of giving and receiving but" the Philippians only; he taught them to give, to "lay by in store" in accordance with their prosperity. And that is what all preachers should do. Wherever there are people who have not been baptized, preachers should teach them to be baptized, should do it candidly and fearlessly, and should preface their remarks with no apology, for it is a plain, simple command of the Lord Jesus. And wherever there are Christians who do not give in accordance with their prosperity, preachers should candidly and fearlessly teach them their duty; and there should be no apology or half-heartedness about it. It has been my experience that most Christians want to know their duty, and when they are taught to give more liberally they generally do it.

But why do not more young men go to preaching? I do not know. But I do not believe that it is because of the lack of education, nor the fear of not receiving a support. If any brother has an idea, let him advance it. Whatever the cause is, we should labor earnestly to remove it; for we certainly need the men.

Some Practical Tests of Tithing.

BY L. S. WHITE,

The most convincing thing in the world is example. A beautiful theory may be pleasant to listen to, but it cannot stand in the face of example. God knew this long before the human family found it out, and he devoted much of the Bible to teaching by example. And at the present time, when we see the teaching of God's word manifested in the lives of men and women we know, it becomes an irresistible argument.

Much is being said on the subject of "giving," and correctly so, for it is both a scriptural and great question. It has to do with the welfare of all God's people. The publishers of the Gospel Advocate deem it of such vast importance that they recently used almost an entire issue on that question. For the next "special" number of the Advocate, I was asked to write a short article on "tithing as a means toward a better ministry," and now I am glad to comply with the request to write on the above subject. I only have space for a few examples.

In 1918 a preacher conducted a meeting for a church of Christ in a large city. This meeting continued a month. No preaching had been done for that congregation on the question of tithing. At the close of a sermon on tithing, preached on the third Sunday of the meeting, the regular minister told the congregation he would like to see that question of tithing tried, and asked the members to try it out the next Sunday and see how it worked. The next Sunday the contribution increased about seven hundred per cent over the preceding Sunday. I have no later report from this place.

In the spring of this year I conducted a meeting in the city of Houston, Texas. The Bible teaching on tithing was presented both by myself and Brother G. A. Dunn, the home preacher. On the first Sunday after the close of the meeting quite a number of the members publicly agreed to give back to the Lord one-tenth of their income, and to begin practicing it the following Sunday, which was carried out, and the contribution increased about four hundred per cent over what the entire church gave the preceding Sunday. I have no later report from this church.

I got this information from a letter from one of the brethren at Houston, and he wrote: "I just wanted to tell you the good news." Brother Dunn has been away from home holding meetings ever since.

In the recent meeting in Lebanon, Tenn., a sermon was preached on tithing. This was done the second Sunday of the meeting. I was told the next day that the contribution on that Sunday was the largest ever given in the history of that church. Some more was taught on that question during the week, and I was anxious to see how the interest in that part of the work held up. Next Sunday morning the rain was pouring down and many were kept away from church, but the record of the preceding Sunday was broken by the larger contribution of that day. That night, which was the last service of the meeting, I asked permission of some of the elders to present the claims of the church in Washington, D. C., and the contribution that night for the new meetinghouse in Washington was more than eighty dollars. I never saw any church do a better work, or more of it, in a two-weeks' meeting than the Lebanon church, and I am sure that the teaching on tithing added some to this interest.

Take my home congregation here in Sherman. Last year was the first time this church has ever been taught that it is the duty of Christians to give at least one-tenth of their income to the Lord, and that they ought to do even more than this. Several times during the year different scriptures were read and taught to this church on tithing. Result: In 1918 this church gave during the entire year above four hundred per cent more than in 1917. This year the church has been taught more and more on tithing, and that we are all stewards in the hands of God, and what we have is not really ours, but the Lord's. As the result, during the first nine months of this year, under the teaching of tithing, the church in Sherman has given above one thousand per cent more than in 1917, when the church had not been taught on this question. At none of these places are all the members tithing. If they were to all give a tenth of their income, the results would be far larger.

Universal Military Training.

BY JOHN E. DUNN.

It is an admitted fact that public sentiment is a powerful factor in shaping the policy of the United States government. We are just emerging from the terrible world war, and fortunate it is for our people that it ended so soon after the Americans got into it. Do we realize the horrible experience of the two millions of our sons who were sent to Europe to fight the Central Powers, and a million more in training camps? Do we realize the effect it has had upon our churches, our homes, our schools; the effect upon these three millions of boys (many thousands of them are dead or maimed for life); the effect this military experience has had upon society and the life of the country in general? I do not mean that I did not indorse the course of the government. I do not see how the government could have done otherwise. I believe the government did the only thing it could for the sake of honor and in the interest of humanity.

I am not writing from the standpoint of a politician. I have no political aspirations. I have never taken a bit of political interest in politics. There is now a bill for universal military training before the United States Congress, introduced in the Senate by Senator Sutherland, a leading Democrat, and introduced in the House by Representative Kahn, a leading Republican. There is already strong sentiment in Congress and in the military of the country in favor of universal military training. There is a shrewd propaganda, nation-wide, in favor of universal military training and advocating "every citizen a soldier." The military department is asking for a standing army of half a million soldiers. The navy is talking the biggest navy program in the history of the world. Such a policy, if adopted by our country, would strike at the very foundation of society, of our homes, our churches, and everything else that is nearest and dearest to the best interest of the American people. Such a policy would most assuredly start us on the downward road to where Germany, Austria, France, and all of continental Europe were at the outbreak of the war. All of us who went to Europe in this war beheld with amazement the awfully wretched moral and spiritual depravity of the European peoples. I believe militarism has done more than any other one thing to stifle Christianity and bring this wretched condition upon the people of continental Europe. We do not yet know what the nature of such a law shall be if enacted. It now appears that it shall be to take every American boy who is physically fit, at a young and tender age, into army life and give him a period of military training-make soldiers of all our boys. War can be justified by civilized people only on the ground of last resort, of absolute emergency.

I spent almost two years in the hardest efforts of my life in Christian welfare work, under the auspices of the National War Work Council, in the armies. I hardly lived. I merely existed in camps, on troop trains, on ocean transports, at seaports, on marches and hikes in the United States and in France. I had every opportunity by bitter experience to know the life of the soldier and the effects of such a life upon his character. I do not regret what I did. I thank God that I was permitted to render the service. If I had it to do over, I would do as I did.

I want to utter a word of warning to my people. Army life is the most demoralizing of any life in the world. In my experience I have had opportunity to know every phase of human existence, and I here say that there is no more soul-destroying place on earth. The whole tendency of army life is to break down every moral and spiritual fiber in a boy. Only those of decided convictions and strong will power can stand the strain. A very unfortunate feature is that it takes the boys at the formative and critical period of their lives. I know by bitter experience that war is hell here on earth. The only good thing I can say about it is that the physical exercise and the simple life of hardship and outdoor life tend to develop one's powers of physical endurance, if he can endure the training. constant cry of the boys was, "Nobody can be a Christian in such a life as this," although some did. The private soldier in the camps and on the battlefields of Europe had my sympathy. None but those who had the experience will ever know the horrible life of the doughboy. My heart went out for him, and I did all I could for him.

Speaking from the standpoint of the American citizen, the United States does not need universal military training. The American soldiers-I include the Canadianswere the finest soldiers in Europe. Man for man, they would always beat the Germans. The Americans were not brought up on military training, and every German was a trained soldier. Every private I ever talked with on the subject-and I talked with many of them-is opposed to universal military training. Speaking as a Christian father to the fathers, mothers, sisters, sweethearts, and wives of our boys, and to the boys themselves also, I would say that I should like to see a crusade waged all over America to crystallize public opinion against making every citizen a soldier. Training to fight breeds war. I believe the very day our country adopts such a policy she starts on the downward road to ruin. If such is to be the policy, I could almost wish God had never given me any boys. An overwhelming influence was brought to bear on the legislators of our country in behalf of prohibition. Nearly all of the Christian people are glad the government has adopted prohibition. This military policy more seriously concerns the highest and best interests of our country than even prohibition. I pray God that we may all pray and use our influence against militarism and in behalf of a world-wide peace. The world is passing through a crisis in her history. God grant that the change may be for the better and not for the worse. I am rather optimistic of the outcome. May it be that we are entering an era of world-wide opportunity to give a genuine Christian civilization to all peoples. I pray God to hasten the day.

The Souls of Them That Were Slain.

BY J. PERRY HODGE.

"And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held: and they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled." (Rev. 6: 9-11.)

John here tells us what he saw, the things that are, and the things that shall be hereafter. That which he saw was not "them that were slain," but "the souls of them that were slain." The souls or lives of them that were slain were kindred souls to his own; for would he not have been slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which he held? Had he not seen his Lord slain upon the cruel cross, and was he not ready also to die for his dear sake? Did he not know that his fellow apostles had been slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held? Was he not at this very moment an exile in the isle of Patmos for the word of God, and for the testimony which he held? (See Rev. 1: 9.) Did he not know that his brethren were being slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held, even while he wrote to them to be faithful unto death and they should receive the crown of life? (See Rev. 2: 10.) Did he not hear his Lord say: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell?" (Matt. 10: 28.) Did he not also hear him say: "He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it?" (Matt. 10: 39.) Did not John understand this to mean that "he that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal?" (John 12: 25.) Were not those who were being slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held, losing their lives for his sake, and would they not, therefore, find it again; and would not the life which they thus found be life eternal? (See Matt. 10: 39; John 12: 25.) Why should they object to having their bodies slain by them that could kill the body, but not the soul, when by so doing they were saving their souls, or lives, eternally? Did not their souls cry out with a loud voice against them that put their bodies to death, and did not their blood cry out for vengeance?

Paul said, "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable" (1 Cor. 15: 19), seeing that "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" (2 Tim. 3: 12). John was familiar with the persecutions, suffering, and death that was in store for all that would live godly in Christ Jesus, and he was aware of the great amount of encouragement that was needed to keep his brethren faithful unto death in order that a crown of life might be theirs in that day. (2 Tim. 4: 6-8; Rev. 2: 10.) John, therefore, had personal knowledge of the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held, so far as the present life was concerned. Therefore, since all who would live godly in Christ Jesus were such as must sooner or later give up their lives for his sake, this character was one of "the things which are," or one of the things which was present in John's day. He was such a character himself. His brethren were such characters as might at any time be called upon to lay down their bodies in death as a trial of their faith in Christ Jesus. Their souls might cry out with a loud voice at the injustice of being slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held, and their blood might cry out for vengeance against them who were killing their bodies, but were not able to kill their souls; but for this vengeance they must wait. Their souls were approved, for white robes were given unto every one of them; but for vengeance they must wait. They must rest yet for a little season. Their blood would be avenged on them that dwell on the earth, but not just yet. Their fellow servants and their brethren must be killed as they had been-that is, they must be slain for the word of God, and for the testimony they held, and they must rest a little season, until this should be fulfilled.

The immediate hereafter that John tells us about in the text at the beginning of this article is that although white robes were given to every one of the souls whose bodies had been slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held, they must wait for a little season before the Lord, holy and true, would judge and avenge their blood on them that dwell on the earth. The blood of others must be avenged at the same time that their blood would be avenged. The "little season" during which these souls were to rest is an indefinite period of time. When their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled, then the time would come for vengeance on them that dwell on the earth, and then would their blood be avenged. So long as these souls have fellow servants and brethren that must be killed as they were killed, just that long must they wait for their blood to be avenged, for the blood of all must be avenged at the same time. Praise God, they are safe; for "when Christ, who is" their "life, shall appear, then shall" they "also appear with him in glory." (Col. 3: 4.) The apostle Paul, one of those whose body was slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which he held, wrote Timothy as follows: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." (2 Tim. 4: 6-8.) O to be a fellow servant and a brother to such as he! The soul of this noble old apostle, who was slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which he held, cried with a loud voice at the injustice of having to die without having committed anything worthy of death. Hear his cry: "For if I be an offender, or have committed anything worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal unto Cæsar." (Acts 25: 11.) The souls of all who were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held, no doubt, were appalled at the thought of having to give up their lives without having committed anything worthy of death; but, rather than deny their Lord, they held fast to the faith, and were slain. It is not strange that they cried with a loud voice before death, however, saying: "How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?" White robes were given to every one of them; but they are still resting, and will rest until their fellow servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, shall be fulfilled.

The beautiful thing about these souls is that they were faithful unto death, and that they gave their bodies to be slain, believing that they would receive the crown of life (Rev. 2: 10), and that this life would be eternal (John 12: 25.) "These" and such as they "are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." (Rev. 7: 13-17.) Of their fellow servants also, and their brethren, John says: "And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire: and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having the harps of God. And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints. Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy: for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest." (Rev. 15: 2-4.)

John says of that time: "And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshiped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." (Rev. 20: 4-6.)

This resurrection, which is the first, and in which none but the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and those who had not worshiped the beast, his image, nor had received the mark of the beast in their foreheads or in their hands, will have part (Rev. 20: 4), does not take place until after the beast and the false prophet are both taken and cast into the lake of fire and brimstone (Rev. 19: 20); the remnant of those who were gathered together to make war against the rider of the white horse and his army are slain with the sword that proceedeth out of the mouth of him that sat upon the horse, and all the fowls are filled with their flesh (Rev. 19: 19-21); and the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, is bound, cast into the bottomless pit, shut up, and a seal set upon him, that he shall deceive the nations no more till the thousand years are fulfilled (Rev. 20: 1-3), and judgment given to them that sat upon the thrones which John saw (Rev. 20: 4). When all these things have come to pass, the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and the souls of them who had not worshiped the beast. his image, nor had received his mark, will live and reign with Christ a thousand years (Rev. 19: 19-21; 20: 1-4), and this resurrection will be the first resurrection (Rev. 20: 5).

The rest of the dead will not be resurrected or live again until the thousand years are finished. (Rev. 20: 5.) "And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them. And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever." (Rev. 20: 7-10.)

Judging from the expressions with reference to Satan being loosed and the resurrection of the rest of the dead after the thousand years are expired, I am inclined to think that Satan will be loosed, accomplish his work of deception, and be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone before the resurrection of the "rest of the dead." I think this because it says Satan "shall be loosed" at that time; while of the resurrection of "the rest of the dead" it says they "lived not again until the thousand years were finished," which, while it does not say they shall live again at the end of the thousand years, does say that they shall not live again until the thousand years are finished. "The rest of the dead" includes all, both just and unjust, who are not included in verse 4. John says of them: "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and [hell] Hades gave up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and [hell] Hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." (Rev. 20: 12-15.)

Note this expression: "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming." (1 Cor. 15: 22, 23.) If this means anything, it means that every man will be made alive "in his own order;" and if "the dead in Christ shall rise first" (1 Thess. 4: 16), it means that, although many died before Christ, and died in faith, they were not "the dead in Christ." Daniel was promised resurrection (Dan. 12: 13), but Daniel was not of "the dead in Christ." Daniel spoke of a general resurrection. He says: "And at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." (Dan. 12: 1, 2.) Those who were already dead at the time Daniel wrote this, although they would awake to everlasting life. were not of "the dead in Christ." John wrote of a general resurrection. He says: "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." (John 5: 28, 29.) It is this same John that tells us that the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and the souls of them who had not worshiped the beast, nor his image, nor had received his mark in their foreheads or in their hands, lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years (Rev. 20: 4), and that "the rest of the dead" "lived not again until the thousand years were finished" (Rev. 20; 5).

We are told by some of our friends that this first resurrection in which the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held, lived and reigned with Christ for a thousand years, is a spiritual or symbolic resurrection, and that during that time, instead of Paul, Peter, and James, and all others who were slain for the word of God, and the testimony which they held, living and reigning with Christ, lives such as these saints lived, will be lived again. In that case, who would "the rest of the dead" be? Our friends fail to tell us this. "The rest of the dead" undoubtedly means all the dead that are not mentioned in verse 4 of the twentieth chapter of Revelation, and includes all, both righteous and unrighteous, of the patriarchal and Jewish dispensations, and all of the gospel age except the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and the souls of them that did not worship the beast, his image, nor receive his mark. These lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

Paul, in writing to Timothy, said: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him." (2 Tim, 2: 12.) These had undoubtedly suffered. If you say that Paul meant that they would live in heaven and reign with him, the statement would lack proof. And besides, the camp of the saints that were living and reigning with Christ during that thousand years was compassed about, or surrounded, by the nations Satan gathered together to battle after the thousand years were expired. (Rev. 20: 8, 9.) Then again, when the beast and the false prophet and the Devil and death and all whose names were not written in the Lamb's book of life shall be cast into the lake that burns with fire and brimstone, the reign of Christ will be ended; for he only reigns till the last enemy is destroyed, and the last enemy to be destroyed is death. Listen to what Paul has to say about this: "Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all." (1 Cor. 15: 24-28.) Therefore, from what we have seen, it is evident that during the last thousand years of the reign of Christ in the kingdom of heaven the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and the souls of them who worshiped not the beast, nor his image, nor received his mark in their foreheads, or in their hands, lived and reigned with Christ (Rev. 20: 4), and that when every enemy shall be destroyed, death being the last one, Christ will deliver up the kingdom to the Father, and will himself become subject to the Father, that the Father may be all in all (1 Cor. 15: 24-26).

In the opening of the first four seals the great character spirits that are engaged in the warfare of life are given. The first character is the Spirit of Christ as he goes forth in the heart and lives of his people conquering and to conquer; the second, the false prophet, in whose heart and life the devil as an angel of light operates to seduce by false doctrines and turn away from the truth such as give heed thereto, building up of them who are thus led astray a great substitute or counterfeit church composed of the tare element in the church; the third, the beast, in whose heart and life the devil rules through the lusts of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, the gratification of which is offered as enticement to tempt and lure into sin such as may be thus drawn away and enticed, through which means the tare element in the church, being entired through a lust for dominion and power, grew into the great ecclesiastical machine that became in time the great papal empire, and by which also the same ecclesiastical powers of the present day seek to control the affairs of state; and fourth, "the dragon, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan" (Rev. 12: 9; 20: 1, 2), through whose agencies of destruction both in and out of the church the elements of death, with hell following, are sweeping the earth, by which indifference to the principles of truth, corruption and fraud in politics, false systems of religion outside of Christianity, intemperance, war, and other destructive agencies operate in the hearts and lives of men and women, hastening them into early graves, with nothing in prospect for the future except hell, that follows such lives.

In the opening of the fifth seal the character shown is that of a martyr for the word of God and the testimony held by him. This character has played a great part in the history of the church. John saw and knew the lives of such. It may be that he wondered that God would allow men and women to suffer death for no cause except that of holding lovally to the word of God and giving testimony for Jesus Christ, without avenging their blood. He in all probability knew of the protest against having to die for such a cause. He may have heard them that were being slain cry out against the injustice. He and they knew that Christ had died such a death, and that the disciple was not above his Master and that a servant was not greater than his Lord. It may be that this was the answer that came to them who thus cried with a loud voice to their God. Such of them as gave up their lives for the word of God and the testimony which they held were such as were faithful unto death and were promised the crown of life. The fact of their faithfulness unto death proved their righteousness, for their faith was counted unto them for righteousness. With this robe of righteousness, every other defect of theirs was covered, and to every one of them without exception this robe was given. The same thing that was true of such martyrs then has been true of them from then till now, and will continue to be true of them as long as there are to be martyrs. The life of a martyr for the word of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ is safe and secure against the second death, for on such the second death will have no power.

Pacific Christian Academy (Incorporated), Graton, Cal.

The Pacific Christian Academy, which was started in Santa Rosa in the fall of 1918, began its second year's work on September 8, 1919, at Graton, a small town near Santa Rosa, and in one of California's best fruit sections.

On the opening day twenty-two pupils were enrolled, which number was soon increased to over thirty. Others are expected to enroll soon. This is a much better showing than we had hoped for under the circumstances. A school of this kind was a new enterprise on the Pacific Coast. But after the first year's work there was much enthusiasm. During the past summer several mass meetings of the teachers, friends, and patrons of the school were held. The subject of a permanent location was discussed and support was promised. At Graton we secured a very good property of four acres of land and a large, fiveroom house, originally built for a schoolhouse. The necessary funds were raised and the property bought and paid for in full.

The school is incorporated under the laws of the State of California. The articles of incorporation provide that the Bible be one of the regular textbooks, to be taught as self-explanatory and undenominational; that a good moral and Christian atmosphere surround the school; and that the directors, the faculty, and all in any way connected with the management of the school be Christian in the strict loyal sense, and that their faith and works show that they stand for a New Testament church without addition or subtraction.

Literary work in the branches and grades of the California public grammar and high schools is being done. The school is moving along nicely and doing much good. We have reason to hope for it a great success.

ABMENIA REPATRIATE.

Into the desert they drove us forth, Of all but life bereft; Out of the desert we're creeping back, Bare life, itself, now left.

The roads are flecked with blood and rags, The sands are strewn with bones, And in the air forever there Reëcho moans and groans.

We dare not hope to live; we starve; A thousand deaths we die; And, born of ancient misery, New horrors 'round us lie.

O God! O God! Look down on us! We cry with gasping breath. A nation's soul goes out to Thee! A people done to death!

Into the desert they drove us forth,
We're creeping back again;
Armenia repatriate!
God! Stir the hearts of men!

AT HOME AND ABROAD

- A. B. Lipscomb continues the meeting at Belmont Avenue, this city, this week. The interest increases.
- C. R. Nichol, of Clifton, Texas, came to see us last week. He has held some very successful meetings in Tennessee.
- S. H. Hall, of Atlanta, Ga., will begin a series of sermons at David Lipscomb College next Sunday. The public is invited.

Morgan H. Carter preached at Russell Street Church, this city, Sunday. Four persons took membership with the congregation.

L. F. Mason closed the meeting at Red Hill, near Woodbury, Tenn., on October 6, with eight additions. He is now at Whitewright, Texas.

Married, in the church house at Morrison, Tenn., on Sunday, October 12, at 12 o'clock, noon, Brother L. Frank Mason to Sister Maude Gentry, J. R. Stubblefield, of Viola, Tenn., officiating.

Friends will be grieved to learn of the death of Sister Feb Hill, wife of J. L. Hill, at 34 Academy Place, this city, last Sunday. She was a most excellent Christian woman. The Gospel Advocate extends deepest sympathy.

W. M. Oakley has given up his place as superintendent of the Potter Orphan Home at Bowling Green, Ky., and will engage in evangelistic work. Business interests compelled the change. Brother Oakley's new address is 326 Grace Street, Nashville, Tenn. He is now in a meeting at Commerce, in Wilson County, Tenn.

John E. Dunn writes from Terrell, Texas: "I am in Texas and very busy, but do not yet have my plans fully developed. I have just closed a couple of good meetings, one at Garden Valley and the other at Midway. Somehow, Texas has by far given me the warmest reception and the most calls for my labors since I came home. It has about turned my face Westward."

R. A. Craig writes from Louisville, Ky.: "Work at King's Hall and Cedar Springs is moving along nicely. One was added at Cedar Springs last Sunday, and one took membership at King's Hall. The meeting at Campbell Street has borne much fruit. Attendance has been good at each service. T. Q. Martin is doing the preaching, and he is strong for the old paths."

From W. C. Ramsey, Stop, Ky., October 15: "O. F. Shearer continued Eugene Person's meeting another week at Rankin, Ky., with good success, baptizing four. Brother Person had to leave for his term in school at Nashville, but on account of the interest that had been aroused in the meeting the brethren thought best to continue it longer. We wish Brother Person a happy term in school."

A. B. Lipscomb said the marriage ceremony three times on Wednesday, October 14. The following were united in holy bonds: At 7 P.M., at the bride's residence, on Sweetbrier Avenue, Mr. Edwin D. Turner and Miss Frances Lee Noel; 9 P.M., at Belmont Church, Mr. William W. Kerr, Jr., and Miss Edna E. Richardson; 9:15 P.M., at Belmont Church, Mr. Robin Barrick and Miss Tina Mae Ott. We wish for them all unalloyed happiness.

From H. A. Rogers, Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada, October 13: "I left Regina on September 24 for my home, and found my family well. After helping with some work at home, I returned to Regina. We had two good meetings yesterday. Interest is very keen and our prospects are still bright. Brethren, give us a place in your prayers for the great work we are endeavoring to do in this city. I expect to leave for home again next Monday for a week or more, then to return and continue the work for the winter, with the exception of a meeting I am expected to hold at Mac Rorie."

From G. C. Brewer, Winchester, Tenn., October 17:

"After a four-weeks' sojourn of suffering in the Woman's Hospital, at Nashville, I have been permitted to come home. I am not yet allowed to do any work, but I am able to walk around, and I am rapidly gaining strength. I have passed through quite an ordeal, and yet I have been so wonderfully blessed that I shall always remember it with a feeling of tenderness and unworthiness. My friends remembered me in their prayers and expressed their interest and sympathy to me in letters and with flowers, fruit, and money. I hope to thank each one in a personal letter, but until I am able for that task I take this method of expressing my sincere appreciation. I pray that I may be worthy of such friendship."

From M. C. Kurfees, Louisville, Ky., October 20: "Our meeting at Campbell Street closed last night with the house packed with people from the pulpit to the door. Brother Martin delivered a most excellent and in every way helpful series of sermons. There were twelve additions to the congregation, nine of them by baptism. While the additions were not numerous, it was, nevertheless, one of the best meetings we have ever had. The sermons gave no uncertain sound on the matter of thorough loyalty to the Bible as the word of God, and also made a timely exposure of the heinous crime of dividing churches over speculations on unfulfilled prophecy. The church is tenderly endeared to Brother Martin and his good wife, and it holds them both in the highest esteem."

From J. Will Henley, Coleman, Okla., October 17: "We have here about a dozen members who are as loyal and faithful as can be found anywhere. The work in their hands is absolutely safe and sure of success. With my family, I arrived here on Friday, October 10, from the droughtstricken, storm-swept region of South Texas. After the heartless hurricane had taken its toll of our earthly possessions, we found that we still had enough of this world's goods to pay our fares to this town. We have no home and not money enough to buy one, but we are being comfortably cared for in the splendid home of Brother and Sister John D. Baldwin, and have the assurance that we will not have to 'camp in the streets' as long as they are able to rent a house. Now, I have never lived where my family could not have a place to worship and contribute their mites to the interest and upbuilding of the cause I have loved and pleaded all these years. We are building a house of worship here. The restrictive clause is in the deed. We are doing it now. Last night we raised six hundred and seventy-five dollars and two beautiful lot on which to build. A wicked man gave us the lots. Not a member here owns the house in which he lives, but all of them have come here to stay. This is a fine country. The three cotton gins here will put up over three thousand bales. Twenty cars of grain have been shipped from Coleman this year. About twenty cars of live stock have been loaded out here. There is a good bank with two hundred thousand dollars deposits. The Methodists and Baptists have good houses and fair memberships. A high school adorns our village. Land can be bought for from fifty to seventy-five dollars per acre. We want good, live, wideawake, loyal, faithful men to come here with their families. They are coming. We are here to stay. We are not 'going to build'-we are building now. If you want to help a people who believe in helping themselves before asking others to help them, then send us a liberal contribution at once. Send to Mrs. Ada Baldwin, Coleman, Okla., and receive receipt for same, with the heartfelt thanks of every saint here. Pray for us, and then help us."

The Passing of Elder James W. Harding.

BY M. C. K.

The death of this aged and eminent man of God, in Winchester, Ky., on the evening of September 15, 1919, marks the close of a long and eventful life. It would be difficult to compress within the narrow limits of a single article of suitable length for this journal even an epitome of the facts which enter into that remarkable and splendid life. We shall be content to notice briefly some of the prominent facts which reveal him both as a citizen of the community and as a Christian as eminently worthy of the confidence and imitation of his fellow man.

The Harding name figures in English history as far back as the twelfth century; but Thomas Harding of the sixteenth century, a native of Devon, England, but dying in Louvain, Belgium, is the first one of the name who appears with prominence in the world of letters. When only twelve years of age he obtained a scholarship at Barnstaple School, Devon, England, became a Fellow at New College, Oxford, at the age of eighteen, and took his Master's degree in 1542, when he was only twenty-six years of age, being at once appointed professor of Hebrew by Henry VIII. This was a brilliant and remarkable achievement. Among the first of the name appearing in this country, of whom there is any available record, is Chester Harding, who was born in Conway, Mass., and was no doubt a descendant from the same English stock from which Elder James W. Harding came. He began his career in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

Amos Harding, the father of the subject of our sketch, was born near Boston, Mass. He emigrated to Clark County, Ky., in 1820, three years after which, on May 6, 1823, Elder James W. Harding was born, being from May, 1919, to the time of his death in the ninety-seventh year of his age. At the tender age of three, James W. was left a half orphan, his father, Amos Harding, having died in 1826. Immediately when he was old enough to work, he was thrown upon his own resources. Although his mother married a second time, he managed, by dint of genuine industry and manly independence, to earn his own living, and when quite young he was hired to a gentleman to learn the tailor's trade. His success enabled him in a few years to conduct the business for himself.

He obeyed the gospel at the early age of sixteen and began at once to take public part in the services of the church. In other words, he practically became a preacher immediately on becoming a member of the church, and at the time of his death he had been a preacher of the gospel for nearly eighty-one years. For the benefit of the younger preachers of the day, let it be observed here that through all this long and steady ministry he never swerved from the strictest loyalty to the word of God. Some of his first efforts at preaching were in the way of filling appointments at the country churches near Winchester, one of which was the Ruckerville church, in Clark County. He did not devote himself exclusively to the gospel ministry, but continued his business career, and for a number of years was engaged in the mercantile business in Winchester. During this part of his career a destructive fire laid waste the block of which his store was a part and he lost everything he had. He never lacked for friends, and it was not long until his mercantile business was reestablished. In addition to his career as a merchant, he engaged to some extent in farming and was a large cattle

At twenty-one years of age he was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth McDonald. To them were born fourteen children, five of whom survive him. These are: J. A. Harding, of Atlanta, Ga.; W. M. Harding, Walker K. Harding, Mrs. William Woolcott, and Mrs. J. A. Rash, all of Winchester, Ky. After their long married life of about sixtyfive years, his wife died in 1908. He is also survived by numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren,

Although his educational advantages were few, having gone to school, in all, a little less than one year, yet, owing to his native strength of mind, a good knowledge of the Bible, and the refining influences of Christianity, he was a man of more than average polish and refinement, and never failed to make a favorable impression even upon the most highly educated minds.

Summoned by long-distance telephone on the night of September 15, 1919, the writer of this sketch went to Winchester, Ky., where, on the morning of September 17, 1919, with the assistance of Brother M. P. Lowry, he conducted the funeral services in memory of this distinguished man of God. As a kind of background for the picture of his life, a few of the marvelous achievements of man's inventive genius during his long career was noted. He was a little boy three years old when George Stephenson built the first steam locomotive and the first railroad in the world, and he was a boy ten years old when the first railroad was built in the United States. What a world of inventive genius and glorious achievement is spanned by his splendid and well-rounded life! The railroad, steam navigation, the telegraph, the telephone, wireless telegraphy, and that modern wizard of the ethereal world, the airship, have all come into existence during his lifetime. His career began when the red man of the West still held sway over a large part of the American continent and the United States, with its small population, was isolated from the rest of the world, but it ends when the world is ablaze with electricity and has almost become one great whispering gallery. He was born the very year when the Campbell and McCalla debate was held, and was a young man about twenty-one years of age when the great Campbell and Rice debate was held in Lexington, Ky.

The text of the occasion was the following: "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of grain cometh in in its season." (Job 5: 26.) "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day, and not to me only, but also to all them that have loved his appearing." (2 Tim. 4: 7, 8.) The sermon was a brief review of his life and character, his devotion and fidelity to the word of God, and the triumphant manner in which he left this world. During his last days on earth he delivered a number of hortatory discourses to members of his family and friends gathered in the sick chamber. These talks not only exhibited the profoundest faith in God, in the word of God, and in the future life, but they were marked by the tenderest solicitude for all who heard him and with the most earnest and solemn exhortations to faithfulness. It was a most impressive scene, and his family and friends will ever associate it with his triumphant passage to the world beyond. Surely "the angel of Jehovah," who, God's word assures us, "encampeth round about them that fear him" (Ps. 34: 7), was near by strengthening and illuminating the faith of this dying hero in the glorious reality that "the path of the righteous is as the dawning light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day" (Prov. 4: 18).

A vast concourse of people, regardless of creed or color, gathered in and around the Fairfax Church building, in Winchester, where the services were held. Such an outpouring of the people from all sections of the country was simply an indication of the high esteem in which Brother Harding was universally held by his fellow citizens in his home community. He was a gray-haired veteran of the cross when the writer of these lines was a boy preacher, but the tie of friendship between us was strong and enduring, and I sustain a personal loss in his going. His lifetime levalty to the word of God is an inspiring example for all preachers.

Servant of God, well done, Rest from thy loved employ; The battle fought, the victory won, Enter thy Master's joy.

The pains of death are past;
Labor and sorrow cease;
And, life's long warfare closed at last,
His soul is found in peace.

Annual Meeting at the Tennessee Orphans' Home.

The annual meeting of the directors of the Tennessee Orphans' Home will be held in the Home building, in Columbia, on Saturday, November 8, 1919, at 11 A.M., and all business connected with the Home will be transacted at this meeting. The auditor will make an audit of the books, so that the directors may have full knowledge of the condition and business of the Home. Others interested in the Home are invited to attend. The churches of Christ in Columbia and neighboring churches have been requested to prepare luncheon for the occasion.

Back at Henderson.

BY L. L. BRIGANCE.

After spending ten of the most pleasant months of life at Murray, Ky., my family and I are back at Henderson, Tenn., for an indefinite period. We did not leave Murray because we were dissatisfied in any way whatsoever. It is a delightful town in which to live. We have never had better neighbors nor more loyal friends. The brethren at Murray, Hardin, Hazel, and Green Plains, where I preached, treated us royally. We have no cause of complaint nor unpleasant feeling against them. It was with genuine regret that we took our departure. Murray will always be a green spot in our memory, and the brethren and friends there and at the other places mentioned will always have a warm place in our hearts.

We are now back at Henderson among friends, brethren, and relatives, to engage again in what has been the principal work of life—teaching the "young idea how to shoot." From the standpoint of money and ease, it has been a sacrifice to come; but, considering the interests of the cause of Christ throughout the whole territory of the school, I believed I could do a greater work here than anywhere else. There is a greater need and a greater demand to-day for young men of ability who are loyal and true to the "old paths" to preach the gospel than I have ever seen before. I hope to have an important part in the preparation of such young preachers.

The school has opened with the largest enrollment it has had for six or eight years. A fine body of students from several different States are here to get the training and inspiration of the school. The various departments are well organized and running smoothly. Four or five daily classes in the Bible are being taught, besides others in church history and Bible geography. Eighty-five or ninety per cent of the students are in these classes—several splendid young preachers among them. We all feel that the greatest opportunity the school has ever had is before it now, and we hope to make the most of it. I will continue to preach for the churches above mentioned the remainder of the year, after which time I will be at liberty to preach elsewhere. They are arranging with one of the best preachers in the State to take my place.

The school at Henderson desires to render the greatest possible service in the matter of Christian education, and, therefore, invites suggestions and criticisms from its friends elsewhere. Do not hesitate to write us at any time about matters you think would be for its betterment.

"The Model Church" Commended.

Brother G. C. Brewer has received several letters commending his book, "The Model Church." Brother J. Pettey Ezeil, of Albany, Ala., says: "Every member of the church of Christ, both old and young, ought to have a copy of this book and read and re-read it. It will do them good." He finds one or two points upon which he does not agree with the author. After mentioning these, he says: "And to my mind, with these changes, it is the best and most needed book I have yet read from men." The book deserves a large circulation. The prices are very reasonable. Single copy, prepaid, $1; one dozen copies, prepaid, $9; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $17. Order to-day from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

Notice to Sunday-School Workers.

We regret to announce that our supply of the Advanced Quarterlies has been completely exhausted. We are supplying Intermediate Quarterlies in the place of the Advanced Quarterlies. We ask the indulgence of our patrons until the next quarter. You will find, however, that the Intermediate Quarterlies are very full and instructive.

Training Little Children

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Country Mothers Can Teach at First Hand the Lessons That the Seasons Bring.

I have thought a great deal about what I might say if I could talk with mothers who live far away from any center of population, and this fact stands out most clearly in my mind: the remarkable opportunities a mother in the country has to teach her children at firsthand what the seasons bring.

Let them have a garden of their own, in which to grow very simple flowers and vegetables that are hardy and easily grown.

Let them have pets to take care of. This will teach kindness and service for those dependent upon them.

Every child should have daily duties; and if you begin early and make play of these tasks, most children will love to do them and feel the importance of being a real help in the home. It seems to me that the three largest factors all through life are self-control, independence, and ebedience, and we cannot begin too early in any child's life to teach these virtues.

Another thing the far-away mother may obtain for her child is books. Develop early a fondness for books in your children, and a great battle is won. All children love fairy tales, nature stories, and poetry, such as Grimm's and Andersen's Fairy Tales. Wise selections of the best of these "time-tested stories" are now published by many publishing houses. Some of the Grimm stories are too gruesome to tell to children. Kipling's "Just So Stories," and poems by Robert Louis Stevenson, Eugene Field, James Whitcomb Riley, and Jessie Wilcox Smith, are all excellent for children to know.

Six years of age is not too early to begin to build a library for a child; and the books should be in his own room, where they can be easily reached and become constant companions. The books my daughter enjoyed most at the age of seven were: "In Story Land," Elizabeth Harrison; "Kindergarten Story Book," Jane Hoxie; "Pinocchio," C. Colledi; "Tale of Peter Rabbit," Beatrix Potter; "Tale of Tom Kitten," Beatrix Potter; "Seem-So's," L. J. Bridgman; "Story of Noah's Ark," E. B. Smith; "Pied Piper of Hamelin," Robert Browning; "Little Lame Prince," Dinah M. Mulock; "Among the Farmyard People," Clara D. Pierson; "Among the Night People," Clara D. Pierson; "Among the Meadow People," Clara D. Pierson; "Among the Pond People," Clara D. Pierson; "Among the Forest People," Clara D. Pierson; Poems of Stevenson; Poems of Field; Poems of Riley; Poems of Jessie Wilcox Smith: "The Hollow Tree and Deep Woods Book," Albert Biglow Paine; "The Hollow Tree Snowed-In Book," Albert Biglow Paine; "The Book of Clever Beasts," M. Reed.

Two other subjects loom up in my mind for the faraway mother, and they are music and pictures.

The phonograph as an educational factor has tremendous value. Through this means the children can become familiar with all that is best in music, either vocal or instrumental; they can learn not only the music, but about the composers and the great men and women who sing and play various instruments.

A child's taste in pictures can be cultivated by having in his room pictures which are good both as to color and subject. Pictures dealing with nature in any form are always attractive to a child; and if they are hung in the room so that the child can easily study them, and even handle them if he wants to, this adds much to his enjoyment.

There are many book and picture firms that are only too glad to send catalogues upon request. The far-away mother can obtain anything of this kind she may want by mail; and if, besides a garden and pets, a child can have books, music, and pictures, it seems there is real education of the right kind going on.

Your Book Friends.

Are you ever ashamed of your book friends? You know there are many people who choose their real friends with the greatest care; but when it comes to those in books, they are not so particular.

Some day when you are very much interested in a story. try to imagine introducing the characters to your father and mother and see if they stand the test. Maybe they will, and maybe they will not.

Of course, if you are reading a book by a good writer, it is quite permissible to have a villain or a pirate or something like that in it; but we are talking about books of everyday life and the principal characters, too.

If you are a true lover of books, the people in them will be just as real to you as those who live down the street or next door to you; so why not be a little particular about associating with them?

Have you ever seen a person reading in a train or any other public place without having a great desire to look over his shoulder to see the name of the book? Most people do it, too; and if you are that boy or girl, be sure that you are proud as well as perfectly willing that they should see the title. Do not have them thinking: "Dear, dear! That boy is in bad company, I'm afraid."

Be fastidious in your reading. Read books that you can go back to over and over again. Do not think that the best books are the dullest by any means. Find out from persons who know who are the best writers and stick to their books. You may be sure that you will be in good company with their men and women and children.

We know of a little girl who was brought up on Dickens. Her mother started to read his books aloud to her as soon as she was old enough to understand them, and she grew up with his characters. She loves them all, and they are so real to her that she has the same desire to be with them that you have to be with certain favorite playmates.

Instead of thinking, "I will go down to Mary's house this afternoon," she thinks, "I will play with David Copperfield a while," and she picks up the book and in a minute she is with him just so surely as if he were in the same room with her.

You know one of the best ways to test a book is to decide whether or not you care to read it again. If it is really good, it will be to you as Dickens' books are to the little girl. You will read it over and over again, and you will love the characters in it just as you love the persons you really know. You will be anxious for your brothers and sisters to know them, too, and in time they will be to you as real friends.

So be careful in what you read. If you start a book and find you are in poor company, put it down at once. You may be forced occasionally to be with real persons you do not care for, but it is never necessary to linger in such company in the pages of a book.-Selected.

RESTORES VITALITY

Gives Strength to the Nervously Weak and Run-Down.

Peptiron is both medicine and food for the blood and nerves. It is in full accord with advanced science as to the proper treatment of anemic and neurasthenic conditions, in which the need of more and better nourishment is so apparent. It combines iron and manganese with nux, celery, pepsin and other tonics and digestives. It supplies the deficiency of red blood corpuscles in anemia, repairs the waste of nerve tissue in nervousness, gives color and stamina, and restores vitality.

FROM THE FIELD

Tennessee.

Huntingdon, October 13 .- On the fifth Lord's day in August I began a meeting at Brushy, Hickman County, which continued until the following Lord's day. I was called to this place to try and adjust a serious church trouble which had been on hand for about four years. After some four or five days' hard work, I succeeded in getting all concerned to meet, shake hands, confess their faults, and ask forgiveness. I went from here to Defeated Creek, in Hickman County, and took charge of the meeting which had been started by Brother Gunter and continued it until the following Friday night, with one baptism. From here I went to Paint Rock, Ala., where I began a meeting on the second Sunday in September, closing on the fol-lowing Sunday with one baptism. This is the home of Brother L. B. Jones. From here I went by way of home to Salem, in Lewis County, to serve in a meeting and try to settle another church and neighborhood trouble. One brother had brought suit against another brother for ten thousand dollars for slander, and the people had lined up on both sides for the fight. I taught them their Christian duty, citing 1 Cor. 6 and many other passages, and rode from house to house, and succeeded in getting the lawsuit stopped. The brethren and sisters met, confessed their faults, and asked forgiveness. Other troubles also were settled during this meeting. This was my fourth bad church trouble to settle this season. From here I came to Holy Hill, in this (Carroll) From here I county, where I began a meeting on Wednesday night, which continued until the following Sunday, with no visible results. I go from here to Wilson's Chapel, which will be my last series of meetings this season. Then series of meetings this season. I will return home and take up my work on the farm. My time is all filled for next year.—W. T. Beasley.

Pulaski, October 15.—Since my last report I have held some good meetings. On July 27 I began a meeting with the New Lasea congregation, of Maury County, and continued it six days. We had large crowds and good The song service was ably conducted by Brother Amos Derry-berry. There were five baptisms and three restorations. My next meeting was with the Mooresville congregation, in Marshall County, embracing the first and second Lord's days in The song service was led by Brother Irvin Pinkston, of Bryant Station. Two persons of mature years were baptized. On the third Lord's day in August I began a meeting with Two persons of mature years the brethren at Bunker Hill, Giles County, and continued it till the night of the fourth Lord's day. Brother Ross Derryberry had charge of the of the song service. One man was baptized, From the fifth Sunday in August to the night of the first Sunday in September, I was at Elkmont, Ala. Here faithfully assisted by I was very faithfully assisted by Brother J. J. Logue, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn. I found him to be a splendid young brother to have in charge of the song service. The Elkmont meet-ing resulted in two baptisms. On Tuesday, September 2, I reached Guin, Ala., where Brother Gus Nichols had begun a meeting on Sunday before. We continued there till Tuesday night of the following week, he having charge of the song service and I doing the preaching. In Brother Nichols I found one of the most faithful coworkers I have ever met. If he lives long, he is destined to become one of our ablest preachers. The Lord blessed our efforts in Guin with eleven baptisms and one restoration. Recent news from there says there is more life and interest in the congregation than for years past.—J. T. Clark.

St. Joseph, October 15 .- On the third Lord's day in July I began a meeting with the congregation at Mountain Spring, Ala., and continued it one week, with two added. On August 2, in company with Brother Thornton Crews, who stayed with me until August 5, I began a meeting which continued eight days, with four confessions. On August 13 I began a meeting at a point a few miles east of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., and continued it several days, with no visible results. On August 24 the meeting began at Long Branch, which resulted in four confessions. Here some colored brethren (about seven) requested the privilege of attending the meeting, only asked for a back seat, which request was at first granted; but when one or two objected, the colored brethren would not come, lest they cause a division of the congregation. This I regret. However, at the request of these colored people, I preached once at an arbor where they had been meeting. A goodly number of white people were present at this service. On September 6 I began eight days' work with a new congregation at Pleasant Valley, a few miles east of Ethridge. There was one addition. After this I preached a few sermons for my home people, at Lone Cedar, Ala., with no visible results. I then went to Hillsboro, Ala., for about eight days. This was where Brother Dies held a meeting a few weeks before, with several additions. Four were baptized and several were restored. Then I came home, spoke once for Brother Crews at Kilburn Schoolhouse, and went to Giles County, Tenn., where I held a mission meeting, being supported by the Cool Springs congregation. There were no visible results, save that much

Bible reading is being done by the people who attended the meeting, most of whom were Baptists and "Holiness" people. I am now at home for a few days. I am due at Hatton, Ala., on October 18, and possibly at Wheeler, Ala., the last of October.—William Babel

Romantic Story of Southd's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, arged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. I. R. Simon, of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., says that all who wish to know about ushoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money saving shoe book for the asking.

Letters From Rheumatics.

Possibly you have imagined that you could never get your own consent to write a testimonial letter; but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of rheumatism, you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring. This water overcomes many diseases, including indigestion, gout, uric-acid poisoning, and liver and kidney diseases; but no patrons of the Spring are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water than those who have been relieved of their rheumatism.

Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the manageing have been received by the management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, if used continuously for a reasonable time, it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys, and bladder, atding them in throwing off all polsonous matter."

Dr. Avant, of Savannah, writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians; went to Baltmore and consulted specialists there; and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living, when I began to use Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes, of Virginia, writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Waterquickly. I want it for rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. I am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam, of South Carolina, writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism, and, after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water, was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter, of Virginia, writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

"Baptists vs. Campbellites." No. 12.

BY M. S. MASON.

I wish now to resume the discussion of "John the Baptist"-what he was and what he was not.

John the Baptist was not a name foundation. It matters not what logic we may summon to show that God expected his people to be called "Missionary Baptists" and members of the Missionary Baptist Church, the fact remains that they are nowhere called by these names, when so many excellent opportunities are given. The churches as congregations were called "churches of Christ" (Rom, 16: 16) and individual members were called "Christians" (Acts 11: 26). John was never called a "Baptist" because of his church affiliation or his being a church member. That was his official title because of his work. Properly, no one could be called a "Baptist" today who would not do the same work. No Baptist Church to-day can boast of the name "Baptist" in history, as that only means people who contend for immersion of believers and may include acceptable or unacceptable Baptist material of to-day.

John was not a modern Baptist. He honored the Savior (Matt. 3: 11, 12); and how modern Baptists can say they honor him to-day when they call their churches "Baptist" churches and not "churches of Christ," and their individual members "Baptists" and not "Christians," I cannot see. John would never have done this, I am sure.

John was not a modern Baptist in the design of baptism. Modern Baptists baptize people who confess that they are already saved on their righteousness. John, according to Matt. 3: 6, baptized people who were confessing their sins.

John was not a modern Baptist on repentance. Mr. Moody, the author of a tract that fell into my hands a few years ago, has this to say in substance: "There is a people who, when they accept church membership, require no evidences of repentance, but we do. We require crying, mourning, and weeping. We do not allow them to come in dry-eyed." Now, Mr. Moody certainly should be satisfied with John's teaching on this subject. So let us see what he has to say on the subject. (Read Luke 3: 7-14.) Here, when asked by the people, publicans. and soldiers what to do, he nowhere tells them to cry, but for each in his vocation to do right. Mr. Moody then shows by his contention that John was not a modern Baptist.

We now come to discuss what he was. First, he was a forerunner of Christ. Malachi (3: 1) calls him a "messenger." The ancient kings had a herald go before to announce their coming. John was this herald to Christ

John, the apostle, calls him a "friend of the bridegroom." The friend of the bridegroom, like the groomsman of to-day, passes off the scene when the marriage is consummated. The bride remains with the groom and wears his name. The trouble with our good Baptist friends is that they have eloped with the best man:

He was a prophet. (Acts 19: 1-5.) John told those whom he baptized to believe on one who should come after that is, on the Lord Jesus. Thus he prophesied of the real Savior who should come.

Second, he was the bridge of the covenants. By that I mean that his work formed a connecting dispensation by which we were brought out of the law into the gospel. This was done by his dispensation being characterized by ordinances common to the law and gospel. He lived and died under the law and preached it, but much of his teaching introduced principles of the new covenant. For example, according to Acts 19: 5, people were to believe in a Christ that should come as we believe that a Christ has come. He directed their minds from the sufficiency which they entertained of their fleshly birth and taught that "every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is [to be] hewn down, and cast into the fire." Thus it was to be in the new kingdom. (Matt. 3: 10-12.) His baptism, so far as form is concerned, is the same as ours, but not the same in design. Thus, because of the foregoing, I call him a "bridge of the covenants." He lived and died under one, and he introduced principles of the other, thus forming a bridge for the transition period which marked the change from the old to the new.

Third, he was a restorer-not an originator, a founder, a builder of something new, but a restorer of things from which men had departed. Thus, Malachi (4: 5, 6) calls him "Elijah"-that is to say, as Elijah at an earlier period preceding the captivity had called the apostates back to the law, even so John was to do the same work immediately preceding the coming of Christ.

He was a way maker, and straightener. (Luke 3: 4, 5; John 1: 23.) As a way of travel is made smooth by having depressions filled and eminences reduced, crooked places straightened and rough places made smooth, even so John, to prepare the way of the Lord, preached to adjust the irregularities of the lives of the people so as to have receptive hearts when Christ should come on his mission of establishing the new era of things.

Festival of Lanterns.

BY SABAH SHEPHERD ANDREWS.

About dusk on the evening of July 13, as Oiki San and I walked down the long street which forms the main part of the town of Okitsu, we saw a lighted lantern hanging in almost all the entrances and a tiny fire kindled on the ground in front of the doors where the lanterns were hung. I asked the meaning, and this is what I learned: The spirits of dead ancestors were supposed to visit the altars sacred to them in each household, and the lantern at the entrance was for a sign of welcome. The spirit was supposed to come in the fire. A feast of the newest, choicest vegetables was prepared and placed on the god shelf where the spirits are supposed to tarry while visiting in the homes. Spirits are believed not to relish meats of any kind, since they have pale, thin forms; so only vegetables are presented. At this time, in so far as possible, families come together and have a happy time. A friend told us that their household sat up until two o'clock entertaining the spirits.

Late in the afternoon of July 16 we were walking on the beach and saw scattered along the water's edge great quantities of nice cucumbers, eggplants, beans, and corn. What seemed so very strange was that the cucumbers and eggplants had legs made of tiny sticks resembling the cornstalk horses we children used to make. The cucumbers were supposed to be horses and the eggplants were supposed to be cows on which the spirits were to ride, being carried by the waves back to their abode. The beans were for saddles, and the corn was simply a gift to the spirits. As I saw all this, I had a feeling of the great waste, together with the feeling of its being so much like children's play, yet I knew that those who had taken part in this were not children in age. As I came back home my heart was filled with pity for the people in their ignorance.

On August 10 a festival was held in the evening for all who had died at sea, and the dull-finished woodenframed lanterns were used exclusively on this occasion. Hundreds of these lanterns were lighted and set afloat on the water, and it was quite interesting to see these tiny lights being tossed upon the waves and carried out, out upon the water until they almost faded from sight and looked like the lights from a distant village.

I will speak of one other thing that might be of interest. We went to Shimidzu, a town about four miles up the bay, one day last week, to see a shark that some fishermen had caught in a net not far from Okitsu. The shark was a huge one, being fortythree feet and nine inches long. This being an unusual production from the sea, there was a Shinto slab erected on the body of the fish near the head with the usual offering of a rice cake beside it.

It will be noted from the above examples that the Japanese are of a very religious nature. Their religious nature only needs training in the right direction. May the truth spread, not only in Japan, but in all nations,

Letter from S. W. Womack.

There will be a boosters' meeting at the Christian College at Silver Point, Tenn., the last week in November. Monday (November 24) will be gathering day. Preachers and all friends are invited to come, and bring or send an offering for the school. Thursday (Thanksgiving Day) will be offering day for the school. Money, bed cloth-ing, or any kind of produce will be accepted. Let us hear from you.

Now I wish to thank my friends (both white and colored) and a few of the churches for their attention. Beech Grove, Lebanon, and Jackson Street (Nashville) churches are giving monthly. Cheering words from Brethren A. B. Lipscomb, F. W. Smith. A. M. Burton, S. P. Pittman, Joe Hasty, W. T. Selley, T. B. Larimore and wife, and others, are so encouragand uplifting. All have our

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

For those who are anxious to hear of our work during the summer, I will give an epitome of the same.

I began a meeting at Glady Hill, in Obion County, on July 13, and continued it till July 27. Late crops, weeds, grass, and much work needed to be done made it rather difficult to hold a meeting; in fact, at one time it seemed that the meeting would close in spite of all that could be done. Finally interest revived, and some were baptized, some came from the Baptists, and one was restored. The meeting closed with a packed house and good attention. I hope much good was done.

I began a meeting at Jones Chapel, in Lake County, on August 3, which closed, with a small crowd and waning interest, on August 17. A few were baptized, some came from the Methodists, and several were restored This was my ninth meeting in succession at Jones Chapel, which, perhaps, accounts for waning of the interest. A new man can hold interest where the old one fails, sometimes, and for this reason many changes are made, When the old one does his best, that is all he can do; and if the congrega tion wants to make a change, he should not grumble.

I began at Bethel, in Obion County, on August 24, and closed on September 2, with a full house and good attention. A few were baptized, some were restored, and one came from the Baptists. Bethel is where I did some of my first preaching, over thirty years ago; therefore, I was no stranger there.

I began a meeting at Cloverdale, in Obion County, on September 7, and continued it till September 21, closing with a small crowd and very good attention. A few were baptized and two were restored. Some little trouble existed in the congregation, which I tried to adjust, but failed; but I am rejoiced to hear that everything has been satisfactorily and happily settled, and now love, peace, and happiness fill each and every heart, for which I thank God and take courage.

I began a meeting at Hornbeak (my home congregation) on September 28 and closed it on October 13. This is where I preached my first sermon in July, 1885-thirty-four years ago. This was the fight of my life. Hindrances were many-preachers' influence, opposition meetings, picture shows, basketball games, sin, wickedness, indifference, unbelief, and skepticism. Notwithstanding all these things, I baptized more during this meeting than in any other during the summer. Again I thank God and take courage.

I have more calls for 1920 than I can accept, and have not fully decided yet where it is best for me to work. I want to work where wanted and needed, and especially where I can put the most into the cause of Christ, and not where I can get the most out of it.

Brother B. G. Swinny, of Greenfield, led the song service at Cloverdale and Hornbeak. He is a fine young man and a most excellent singer. I hope I can have him with me next year.

When I said "some" were baptized at each place, it means less than one hundred and more than one. To God be all the praise. I am grateful and thankful for the opportunity to work for him.

Yes, the brethren paid what they wanted to or felt like. Modesty forbids saying how much I received at each place.

Certainly in our own little sphere it is not the most active people to whom we owe the most. It is the lives like the stars, which simply pour down on us the calm light of their bright and faithful being, up to which we look, and out of which we gather the deepest calm and courage.-Phillips Brooks.

Baldwyn, October 9.—I closed a meeting at Ozark, fifteen miles from here, on Tuesday night. Two married ladies, from the Methodists, were baptized, and the church, which had been taking a rest for some years, agreed to meet regularly in the future. It is admitted that much good was done in the community, and they called me for a meeting next year. I am now at Baldwyn, where I have been stopped for a few sermons. Brother Gus Dunn held the summer meeting, and there were several additions. The lit-tle band have built a seven-thousand-dollar brick church house, and it is paid for. They seem to all be workers. Dr. Cox keeps the enthusiasm at welding heat, which accounts for the good work. I am billed for Cloverport, Tenn., Sunday.—W. F. Lemmons.

Cleveland, October 11.-On coming out of the hospital on April 20, where I had spent seven weeks, undergoing two operations, I felt that the next twelve months would necessarily be a total loss, so far as being able to do anything in the advancement of the cause of Christ was concerned; nevertheless, I have held some good meetings during the summer in spite of my physical condition. On the third Sunday in June I filled my appoint-ment at Ooltewah, at which one lady came to us from the Baptists. On June 16 I went to Athens, the county seat of McMinn County, to hold a meeting. Failing to get a building in which to hold services, I got permission to build a brush arbor at the edge of town, and practically built it myself. The meeting began on the night of June 20. The crowds were large, constituted largely of people who had never before heard the gospel in its purity. The meeting continued three weeks. There were three additions by The meeting continued three primary obedience, and twenty-five members were enrolled and put to work keeping house for the Lord in a private home. Five were restored and twenty were baptized into Christ. On the night of September 5 I began with the congregation at Spring Creek, Mc-Minn County, and continued over two Lord's days, with three added by statement and three by obedience. Smithson.

Notes from Clay County, Tenn. BY TURNER H. HOLT.

During my five years' preaching in the mountains I have found more or iess dead formula among this people. There is a smothering evil going on in these mountains, if it should be called an evil. The preachers raised up here generally leave as soon as they are worth anything as preachers, and the only way of stopping this evil is to keep the preachers here. Likely this is too limited a field for ambitious men to stay in; but these people need defenders of the truth to stand by them and establish them in the faith once delivered to the saints. Then there will be fewer congregations falling apart and going to the bad.

In my preaching I have filled pulpits which the Sewells as pioneers filled years ago. I have preached regularly for some months at Saint John, in Clay County. Saint John is on the very outskirts of the old homestead of William Sewell, brother to the four preachers. I had preached there one Saturday night and Sunday morning and was staying over to preach again at night, when a young man and I visited the Sewell cemetery. It was interesting to note three mounds where three of the Sewells were buried. I am sure two of these were Caleb and Isaac, and I think the other was their brother William. It was not like standing by the tomb of some hero of many battles fought with carnal weapons; rather, it was the tomb of those who had fought one battle to the bitter end, whose weapons were not carnal, but were "mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." We doubt not that they fought with the sword of the Spirit and wore the shield of faith.

There have been many and great changes in their old home section since their boyhood days. The forests have been cleared; the hollows and bottoms have been made into fertile fields; the rivers wind in and out through rich pastures; and where the wild hog once roamed is now the quiet home of the farmer. This section was once a part of Overton County, but even the county lines have changed. We hope to see this country developed in faith and Christian brotherhood.

SHOULD TAKE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put On Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it ageneral improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thimness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

A HOME CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mall your name and address, and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar; but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer, when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

Evans.

Mrs. Eliza Evans was born on October 10, 1843, and died on December 18, 1918. She was married to George Evans in 1876, and to this union were born two children, a boy and a girl, both still living. She obeyed the gospel on October 11, 1910, under the preaching of Brother H. C. Denson, and lived a true, faithful, Christian life until the end. Sister Evens was life until the end. Sister Evans was always kind, humble, and patient. To the children I would say: Mourn not as those that have no hope. God rejoices in the death of his saints. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.'

Mrs. Mary Josephine Nicks was born, in Williamson County, Tenn., in February, 1843, and died, at her home, near Dickson, Tenn., on June 9, 1919. Her maiden name was "Mary Gooch." She was first married to William Beasley, and to this union one son was born. Her second marriage was to W. A. Rogers. To this union four children were born. She was last married to T. F. Nicks, Sr. She obeyed the gospel in early childhood and lived a devoted Christian life. By her many good qualities and Christian graces she endeared herself to a large circle of friends. She was a good neighbor, a true friend, a faithful wife, a devoted mother, and loyal to the cause of the Lord. I loved this good I loved this good woman, and it was always a treat to go to see "Grandma," and it makes me so sad when I realize I will meet her no more here; but may we all so live that we can say, like Paul, when the evening shadows are lengthened, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith," and be permitted to meet her "just over there." She is survived by a husband; eight stepchildren, two of whom are Rogerses-Mrs. Ida Ward and Mr. Lee Rogers, of Jackson, Miss.; one own child-Mrs. M. C. Chambers, Fulton, Ky.; three grandchildren and a number of step-grandchildren. She was loved by her stepchildren as an own mother. Her remains were laid to rest in Rock Church Cemetery after funeral services conducted by John T. Smith, of Dickson.

VINA HOOPER.

Cabe.

On August 26, 1919, our beloved brother, J. H. Cabe, of Vernon, Texas, answered the summons to come up higher, when death stilled his body and bade the real man come to the mansion prepared for him above. This is a sad message to many, for he was known and loved by many in Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas, and Texas. He spent the most active part of his life near Fulton, Ky., and was an elder of the Oak Grove church of Christ from the time it was organized until he left that community for Texas. He was one of the many friends who gave me real Christian encouragement when I was a young Christian, and was the first man that asked me to offer public service in the church. The deceased leaves behind and aged companion and three sons. The oldest son, J. T. Cabe, of Vernon, Texas, is a gospel preacher, and the others are faithful members of the church. Brother Cabe lacked only one month being seventy-four years of age. and was very useful up to the last. Like Moses, he died as he had lived. He officiated at the Lord's table on Sunday and took part in the worship on Sunday night before his death the following Monday morning. His death came suddenly; and that, as he had often expressed to his family and friends, was the way he wanted to go without suffering. The family sent for me to hold the burial services; and it was very much like holding burial services over my own father or some near relative, because I have known him ever since I can remem-ber. I believe he went home to God to await the coming of his wife and other loved ones. A. O. COLLEY.

Cornwell.

Brother T. J. Cornwell was born on January 10, 1834. He was married to Elizabeth Spears on October 23, 1854, and to this union were born five children-two boys and three girls. was married a second time, to Mrs. Jane Knight, on February 27, 1869, to which union were born five children two boys and three girls. He was married a third time, to Miss Martha West, on November 4, 1883, and to this union were born four children all girls. He was married a fourth time, to Mrs. Sarah Ann Temple, on June 15, 1908. No children were born to this marriage. To Brother Corn-well were born fourteen children, forty-three grandchildren, and thirtyone great-grandchildren. Nine of his children are now living, thirty-seven grandchildren, and twenty-five greatgrandchildren. Surely he was made to believe the truth as expressed by David: "Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord: and the fruit of the womb is his reward." (Ps. 127: 3.) Brother Cornwell was baptized on August 17, 1871, by Brother J. T. Reneau, and lived a consistent Christian life to the day of his death, which oc-curred on October 10, 1918. Like other men, Brother Cornwell possessed weak points, as well as strong ones. He was blessed with a strong physical body and strong mental powers; an ardent lover of his wives, children, brethren in Christ, and friends; and, best of all, he was, like Abraham of old, strong in faith, giving glory to God. Brother Cornwell's home was the preachers' home, day or night, when they so desired, and the most humble Christian always found a welcome in his home. No Lazarus will rise up in the judgment and say to him: "You drove me from your gate hungry." He loved gospel preachers and the gospel, enjoyed hearing the "old-time" songs of praise to God, "old-time" songs of praise to God, and often rejoiced in the belief that he was aboard "the old ship of Zion" and was sailing homeward. We believe that Brother Cornwell is entitled to the blessing pronounced in Rev. 14: 13: "Blessed are the dead which die the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." Booneville, October 13.-The meeting at Williford closed on October 5, with only one added to the congregation. A brother who had dropped out of the work was restored to the fellowship of the church. This was my third meeting at Williford.—R. H. Johnson.

Kentucky.

Hardin, October 15 .- I recently closed a good meeting at Gum Spring, in Livingston County. I preached fifteen discourses publicly and "from house to house" some. In all, nine got right with the Lord and with the faithful few. Four backsliders were restored to their "first love" and to the fellowship of the saints in light. Three came out from the Babylon of sectarianism (Baptists) and united with us on the Bible as our only creed, and two were immersed into Christ in the Tennessee River. As a result of this meeting, the faithful few (about fifteen) agreed to meet regularly on Lord's days to worship "as it is writ-ten." They will meet in a schoolhouse for the present. There is strong talk of building a house in the near future. There is some good material in this little band, and they have "a mind to I was treated well in every way by the people generally, while prejudice ran high with some. They paid me about sixty-five dollars for my work in this meeting. I held two other tent meetings two or three miles above Gum Spring three and four years ago and baptized most of the material in this little band. The Lord bless them .- H. W. Jones.

Fort Worth, October 14.—The Southside-Central Church is growing and the work is prospering along all lines. We will Every service gets better. We begin a protracted meeting next Lord's day, and we invite all brethren visiting the city to attend. My wife is growing stronger all the time, and I believe she will be out of danger inside of a year. We have received about twenty-five dollars from all sources since last report, and I have written all donors, personally acknowledging same. God bless them. I mean to start a campaign within the next thirty days to put gospel papers in every Christian home in town that I can get to. On with the work!—Tice Elkins.

Run Down?

Kidney and bladder troubles are not limited to men. Housework, or work in office or factory, causes women to suffer from weak, overworked or diseased kidneys. The symptoms are puffiness under the eyes, sallow skin, constant tired feeling, lack of ambition, nervous condition, backache, rheumatic pains, sore muscles, stiff joints.

Foley Kidney Pills

get right at the cause of suffering and misery, regulate the kidneys and bladder and restore the diseased organs to sound and healthy condition.

Mrs. Wm. Fischer, 2009 Woodbourne Ave., Louisville, Ky., writes: "I am just getting along fine. I am taking Foley Kidney Fills every other night. You should have seen me before I started I was yellow as fold, now my eyes and skin are all cleared up. My kidneys do not bother me at night any more. If it will help some other poor soul who is suffering you may use n., hame wherever your medicine is advertised."

SALTS IF BACKACHY AND KIDNEYS HURT

Stop Eating Meat for a While if Your Bladder is Troubling You

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region, it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you must relieve them -like you relieve your bowels-re-moving all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

"Remission of Sins."

BY H. W. JONES.

The above heading is scriptural phraseology, but who understands all of it thoroughly?

1. Take the word "sins"-what does it mean in this connection? Sin is any transgression of the law of God: moral deficiency; iniquity-yes, sins of omission as well as sins of commission. But note the word "sin" is used here in the plural number-"remission of sins," not remission of some certain or specific sin. Hence, the phrase, "remission of sins," refers to all the alien or past sins each one is guilty of up to the time one comes into covenant relationship with Christ. Yes, it is the "remission" of "the body of the sins of the flesh" when we are "buried with Christ in baptism." (Col. 2: 11, 12.) So the word "sins" refers to all the sins of the whole life from the time of our accountability up to the time one becomes a Christian, a child of God, a babe in Christ. This much seems clear.

2. What does the word "remission" mean? To understand the full meaning and import of this word is not so easy. We dare say but few of us understand fully what the word "remission" means. Hence this essay. Let us see: The word "remission" literally means the act of sending back, sending off or away-yes, clear off, far away, all the way back, and thus completely separated from us; a discharge from that which is due; release from forfeiture, penalty, debt, or guilt. To apply and make plain this meaning, let us look at the type of "remission of sins" in the old covenant, which was the goat for Azazel, or removal of all the sins of the children of Israel-"the scapegoat," as commonly called. (See Lev. 16.) Two goats were set before Jehovah at the door of the tent of meeting. (Verse 7.) Aaron "cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for Jehovah, and the other lot for Azazel [the scapegoat]." (Verse 8.) Then Aaron presented the goat for Jehovah, and offered him for a sin offering. (Verse 9.) "But the goat, on which the lot fell for Azazel, shall be set alive before Jehovah, to make atonement for him, to send him away for Azazel [removal] into the wilderness." (Verse 10.) Yes, "Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat [scapegoat], and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions, even all their sins; and he shall put them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a man that is in readiness into the wilderness; and the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a solitary

Wonderful Egg Producer

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs; so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J Reefer, poultry expert, $257 Reefer Building, Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" tonic for $1 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million-dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar to-day. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

land: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness." (Verses 21, 22.)

In this we see that all the sins of the people were, figuratively, sent back or away off into the wilderness and there turned loose and lost, and thus separated from the people. So is it literally in the "remission" of all our past or alien sins in Christ. The idea is this: When penitent believers in the Christ come to the place of adoption and pardon, then all past or alien sins are, by the Lord Jesus Christ, sent back and removed far away from us into the wilderness or solitary place of forgetfulness, where they are entirely lost; never to be remembered against us any more forever. And right here is one important difference between the old covenant and the new covenant. Under the old covenant, there was, in those animal sacrifices, "a remembrance made of sins year by year" (Heb. 10:

3, 4); but under the new covenant, "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more," saith the Lord (Heb. 8: 12: 10: 17). In the old covenant, the sins of the people were sent away, typically, by the scapegoat, into the wilderness (Lev. 16); but in the new covenant, our sins are literally remitted, sent away, completely separated from us, and entirely removed from the memory of our blessed Savior. Happy thought that our sins are never remembered again when once "remission" takes place!

But when does "remission of sins" take place? Some say it takes place before baptism, others say it takes after baptism (immersion). Now let us see: (1) Our hearts are cleansed by faith (Acts 15: 9)-yes, by wholehearted faith in the Christ (Acts 8: 37); but this act of the creature cannot possibly do away with the past or allen sins we are guilty of. (2) We truly repent of all our sins, with godly sorrow, and actually turn away from them in life and conduct; yet none of this that we must do can remove our alien sins (the Lord only can do that). In the very nature of the case, we cannot remove the stain or guilt of our sins when we believe in Christ with all the heart and truly repent of all our sins. The Lord remits, sends away our sins; but he has not promised to give us "remission of sins" when we believe and repent. If he did, he would certainly do it, for he is faithful who has promised. (3) "Remission of sins" (alien sins) is promised after, not before, baptism. Proof: (a) On the day of Pentecost believers in Jesus as both Lord and Christ (Acts 2: 36) were told by the inspired apostle Peter: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto [or, "into"] the remission of your sins." (Verse 38.) So here "remission of sins" takes place after baptism. (b) Again, Peter says: "To him [Christ] bear all the prophets witness, that through his name every one that believeth on him shall receive remission of sins." (Acts 10: 43.) The promise here of "remission of sins" is to every one who believeth on Jesus; but, note, it is "through his name" that the promise is to be made effective. How, then, does the believer in Christ get "through his name?" A few moments later these very persons were commanded by the apostle Peter "to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ." (Verse 48.) So believers get "through his name," and then "remission of sins," when they, by faith, go through the place or requirement where his name is recorded (see Ex. 20: 24); and his name is recorded in baptism (Matt. 28: 19). Then "remission of sins" was promised to the

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFIES AND DARKENS HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! It Darkens So Naturally that Nobody Can Tell

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you will get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions pound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks are not wanted around; so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night, and you will be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Gentiles when they were baptized in. or through, the name of Jesus Christ, just as to the Jews on Pentecost day. (Acts 2: 38.) In the new covenant the faith that saves is the faith that obeys. (Heb. 5: 9.) (c) The jailer was told to "believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved," but his "having believed in God" was said of him after, and not before, he "was baptized." (Acts 16: 30-34.) So faith, or belief, is used in a comprehensive sense, in some places, to include the acts of faith belonging to the faith or belief. (d) A truly penitent believer in the Christ, Saul of Tarsus, was told to "arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts 22: 16.) So here "remission of sins" is expressed in the phrase, "wash away thy sins," which the Lord does for us when baptized. (See Mark 16: 16.) This case (Acts 22: 16) shows another Bible truth-viz., that in being baptized we thus "call upon the name of the Lord;" and it is written that "whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Acts 2: 21; Rom. 10: 12). Since "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," and "whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved," therefore, in being baptized, we "call upon the name of the Lord," which is quite different from calling on the Lord and not doing his will. (Matt. 7: 21.)

So we conclude, from all this array of divine testimony, that baptism (immersion in water), on the authority of Jesus Christ, is one of the conditions upon which our Lord and Savior remits, sends away, all our alien sins into the solitary place of his eternal forgetfulness. Praise the Lord for his wonderful mercy!

No doubt many of us, in faith and with true repentance, are immersed on Christ's authority, and our sins are remitted, sent away, by the Lord, without our understanding the true meaning of the word "remission." "Why, then, write to explain the meaning of the word?" some one may ask. I answer: These things we write, that our joy may be made full, and that we may induce sinners to obey the Lord, and not delay, that their sins may be remitted and their souls saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. There are many scriptural motives to induce men and women to obey the Lord in baptism, and any scriptural motive that induces obedience is acceptable to him. If not, why not?

Any scriptural "design" of baptism leads penitent believers to obey,

Sure leads us to the very place Where our Savior puts our sins away.

"To thine own self be true, . . . and thou canst not be false to any man."

The Scriptural Significance of Loyalty

Brother Larimore Gives a Veteran's Conception.

Webster's Collegiate Dictionary gives only one definition of loyalty: "State or quality of being loyal." The same authority gives "faithful to a cause or principle" as the definition of "loyal."

According to our standard English lexicographer, then, to be faithful to a cause or principle is to be loyal so far as that cause or principle is concerned.

Christians are in Christ Jesus, our Lord—in his spiritual body, the church—"in whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins." (Col. 1: 14.) Christ is the head of his spiritual body, the church; for God "bath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." (Eph. 1: 22, 23.)

To be loyal to Christ and his cause, therefore, is to be true to Christ and his church. To be true to Christ and his church is to live and labor, walk and work and worship, in the light of his word, according to the spirit and letter of his revealed will.

Because I thus believe and because I wish to encourage Christians thus to live, I exhort, God's children to just simply take God at his word—that is, believe what he says; do what he commands; become and be what he requires; live as he directs; and trust him for what he promises: believe what he says because he says it; do what he commands because he commands it; become and be what he requires because he requires it; live as he directs because he directs; and trust him for what he promises because he promises—and man hath never trusted the Lord Almighty in vain.

Deeming it my duty, and desiring, to always be loyal to the Lord and to never displease him, I have always been careful to not teach anything that might tend to produce discord or strife or division among brethren: for among the seven things that Solomon says are an abomination unto the Lord is "he that soweth discord among brethren" (Prov. 6: 16-19), and our Savior prayed earnestly that there might be no discord or division among his followers.

Sometimes, when preaching, I submit the following suggestions: "If I preach anything to which you object—which you cannot accept—please tell me so, and I will either quit preaching it or prove, by the New Testament, that Divinity, hence duty, demands that I preach it; and if I do not preach something, anything, you think I ought to preach, prove to me, by the same book, that Divinity even authorizes me to preach it, and I will preach it all the remnant of my days." To me, that seems to be in harmony with the spirit of loyalty to the Lord.

I am growing old now, and have not the vim, vigor, and vitality of either body or mind I once had, notwithstanding I never had these to an alarming extent; and I want my friends to watch me, and, if I begin to wobble, correct me, and not let me disgrace, divide, or disturb the church. I want to be loyal and reliable as long as I live.

The word "loyalty" embraces in its meaning fidelity to our friends, fidelity to our loved ones, fidelity to our country, fidelity to the brotherhood of man; but in this article I have considered especially fidelity to Christ and his cause.

To be truly loyal as Christians, we must be satisfied with the will, the word, and the way of Him whose servants we claim to be. To be loyal gospet preachers, we must preach the word, he examples of the believers, in word, in conversation, in love, in spirit, in faith, in purity, as Paul admonished Timothy, and avoid anything and everything that, if preached, might cause confusion, discord, or division among God's people. We may know a tree by its fruit, a fountain by the stream that flows from it. Preaching the word never produces discord, strife, or division—never. Let us be loyal as long as we live.

W. W. Freeman Explains Its Essence.

"Loyal" is a term we use to describe a person worthy of our fellowship. The congregations thus maintain a standard in religion by which preachers and others are measured. It is evident that the test thus applied determines the character of the membership of the churches. Hence, it is supremely important that this term be guarded, lest the essence of loyalty be lost and only a form remain, or lest human standards be set up and allowed to usurp the authority of Jesus and to rob the soul of freedom to develop under divine guidance as natural endowment and environment permit. Thus we see the age-long difficulty of exercising discipline successfully so as to maintain a clean church, and yet not throttle conscience in divine process of growth.

"Loyal" is but another word for the quality denoted by the Bible term "faithful." It is a good word and indicative of one's attitude of fealty toward the Lord. It should be contemplated more. Loyalty denotes not the measure of the Christian's learning, even in Bible history and in doctrines on various matters, but is less theological or creedal, and denotes the soul's sincerity, earnestness, and responsiveness to the authority of Jesus. The loyal heart is attentive to know his desire in any matter and is uncompromisingly intent on pleasing him at any cost. It is this constancy of purpose that permits us to hope for eventful approval and salvation. (Rev. 2: 10,) Not perfection in works or merit of character is our hope, but grace. Grace, however, comes only to the loyal souls.

But loyalty does not argue with God and does not design to plead ignorance. Loyalty searches the Scriptures; it prays for and hungers after God's way. Though limited by environment and providence, it can hope for continuously dawning light. (Matt. 5: 6.) In growth or attainment, the loyal heart is, circumstances considered, normal. It never boasts of stature or makes excuses for halting: it but meekly pleads its own integrity and shows its inclination to do the Lord's will. (Phil. 3: 13-16.) Perfection is held as the divine ideal and the goal of the Christian; so, holding this ideal and striving for it distinguish the heart as loyal. Life is thus a growth, one continual triumph. (2 Cor. 2: 14.) The babe in Christ, dying so, shall have a reward, and the "full-grown" also, if they "stand fast in the faith" of Christ.

Loyalty means liberty. It means freedom of the individual as to conscience, both subjectively and objectively, but it does not mean anarchy and schism. Loyalty cannot, as some human theories suggest, divorce teaching and practice in life from its source—the heart, where Jesus is kept enthroned. (Col. 3: 17.) True religion requires this vital sovereignty and this integral loyalty.

But loyalty is not exclusive of social relationships or of Christian brotherhood. These are parts of its substance. (1 John 3: 21; Matt. 5: 44; Matt. 22: 39.) In this communal state the church arises. The loyal heart insists that others be loyal and presumes to point out any seeming deviations from divine will; but this loyal heart is loyal enough, not only to allow others this privilege in turn, but he can but urge it. Knowing from his experience the uneven, but progressive, tenor of the loyal heart led by divine light, and knowing God's ways are not arbitrary, but are spiritual and fair to the faithful hearts, he is not intolerant of his fellows, but rather is prayerful, docile, patient, and kind, but firm, with them. He demands loyalty and all the while continues in brotherly helpfulness and loyal earnestness. He does not set at naught his brother. (Rom. 14: 4.) However much this principle of loyalty may conflict with human standards or with individual or group measures in doctrine and dogma, it cannot be forsaken, save at the infringement of loyalty and encroachment on conscience, or, at any rate, assumption of divine prerogatives which may God forbid.

But such liberal process seems radical to those married to traditional standards. It is so, and well enough, too. We who have more or less stature can but be loyal in our stage of development, and we should be perverse not so to stand; however, we must not forget others have failen heirs to human attainments as well as we, and it remains for every soul and each generation to be loyal to truth, as God gives it to them, in solving their own problems. No wonder Paul says: "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Love is the color test of loyalty. Loyalty without love is dogmatism. The prejudiced heart cannot be thoroughly loyal. (Rom. 1: 21-27.) Loyalty is a great principle on which even the heathen may fall, (Rom. 2: 11-15, 29.) Rid of churchianity, we could see how well this principle of loyalty permits variety; how it is the only chance for vital religion; how brotherly love is encouraged; and yet could see the people loyal to Jesus as the great divine family, the body of Christ, the kingdom of God as revealed in the Scriptures. (1 Cor. 12: 12-27.)

O, how far men drift from the way of loyalty! Scriptural discipline is long-suffering so as not to usurp divine sovereignty in the loyal heart. To-day baptism and the Lord's Supper seem to us evidently bound on all, but even these cannot be thrust on one. To impose them is to destroy their divine significance. But we may teach loyally on such matters without imposing them. In time the loyal heart responds, but some time is required for development of antecedent heart changes. Catechumens vary In natural ability and individual surroundings, we should not forget. For one having learned the will of Jesus on baptism or any other matter, there is the responsibility of the divine imperative. A debater once said that such a character "could not be killed with a Gatling gun;" but it is better to say. "God does not require the impossible, but honors loyalty even among heathen." He may providentially enable one to perform an act, or he, knowing the heart, may exercise his grace to include that one. (2 Pet. 3: 9: 2 Cor. 8: 12; 9: 8.) Loyalty is man's extremity, and it is God's opportunity. It does not fall, even in emergency of human limitation.

But loyalty is stern; it is exacting; it demands sacrifice at any cost. (Matt. 10: 37.) The rule, not the exception conjured up by the disloyal heart, is contemplated in the commands of the gospel. (Acts 2: 38: John 3: 5.) These are plain and are clearly revealed as the will of Jesus for the penitent believer. To debate with him is a certain mark of disloyalty; such persons need repentance, not dipping, and then they can obey from the heart. Often the essential matter of accepting Jesus' sovereignty in this act of faith—not reason, though it is, of course, a reasonable acceptance—is lost by confusion of theological conceptions as to consequences or the divine side of it. This should not be; ignorance of when, how, or why God acts does not prevent his response in accepting the soul that in penitence does for Jesus' sake what he has commanded. Such truths help to move men, and, like all truth, must be coveted, but they should not be imposed so as to shut off the loyal penitent from responding to Jesus. (Acts 8: 37, 38; Rom. 10: 9, 10; Acts 19: 3-6.) The preacher must not exact fealty to himself, but must let loyalty be to the Lord. (1 Cor. 1: 16-13; Acts 4: 12.)

So we see loyalty not simply as a collection of theological doctrines about Bible matters, but as heart responsiveness to Jesus in all things. (2 Pet. 3: 18; 2 Cor. 12; 9.) Immorality has no place. The preacher who preaches straight and practices crooked is not a "loyal" preacher. Debates on "first principles" at times do good, but skill in this field does not license him to immorality. Bad character is too generally reported among preachers. Such things and acknowledged and unquestionably erroneous and dangerous attitudes should be disciplined, not debatable points of doctrine honestly held by able inquirers. May we strive to be loyal in heart and right in life.

F. W. Smith on the Different Relations.

The word "loyalty," when applied to right conduct, is but another word for true manhood and womanhood. It simply means that the individual is true to whatever trust or confidence may have been imposed in him or her. Thereare many duties growing out of the different relationships of life, and loyalty expresses the fidelity with which one meets and discharges these duties. The purpose of the writer shall be to note some of these relations and give Bible examples and teaching of loyalty in discharging the duties growing out of them. We should not forget that there is but one Book in all of this world that regulates, adjusts, and sanctifies all of the legitimate relations of life -viz., the Bible, the Book of God. Hence, every relation and every duty must be viewed from a scriptural viewpoint. Any other vision will be warped and perverted by the ignorance and prejudice of man.

LOYALTY TO GOD.

The Bible abounds with examples of both men and women who were true to God under the most difficult and trying circumstances, but space forbids the mention of only a few. Take Daniel, who was forbidden by a kingly decree to ask a petition of God or man for thirty days, save of the king of Babylon, (Dan. 6; 7.) This prohibition had for its violation the penalty of being thrown into a lions' den, and yet the brave, loyal, and fearless Daniel went to his window looking toward Jerusalem three times a day and prayed to his God. The same spirit of loyalty is found in the three Hebrew children who were thrown into the flery furnace rather than worship an idol. To be true to God and worship him as it is written in his Book even in the face of death requires a courage inconceivable by many. Hence, when the word "loyal" is applied to a preacher or to a church, many religionists smile contemptuously and stigmatize them as "antis," "old fogies," "mossbacks," etc.

LOYALTY BETWEEN HUSBAND AND WIFE.

The most sacred relation of this life is that of husband and wife. God has made "the twain one flesh," and they should most sacredly keep themselves to each other, and, if need be, suffer death rather than defile themselves in the sinful and soul-destroying crimes of adultery. The marriage yow should be held inviolate, as made to God and not to man. Laban and Jacob made a heap of stones as a witness of a covenant between them, and Laban said: "The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, judge betwixt us." (Gen. 31: 53.) The marriage yow is the "heap" between husband and wife, and each should realize that God is watching and will judge between them in their absence one from the other. God has made the husband the head of the wife (Eph. 5: 23), and the wife should be loyal to her head so long as he leads and guides according to God's word.

LOYALTY OF CHILDREN TO PARENTS.

The word of God binds children to obey their parents in all things that are right. "Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right." (Eph. 6: 1.) What is more beautiful and Christlike than a respectful, reverential, and obedient son or daughter? A child loyal to father and mother, desirous of doing the things that please them, is one of the finest things in this world, and contributes largely to making home a heaven on earth. Christ was subject to his parents, thus setting children for all time an example. Parents should not forget the duty they owe to their children—viz.: "Provoke not your children to wrath; but nurture them in the chastening and admonition of the Lord." (Eph. 6: 4.) Parents cannot be true and loyal to their own children without a faithful effort to discharge this duty.

LOYALTY BETWEEN MAN AND MAN,

The interests of humanity are so interwoven that no man can live unto himself. There is an interdependence that no one can avoid and live a normal life. One may become a recluse, a hermit, and dwell in a cave or in the wilderness, but that is an unnatural life. In the social and business affairs of life we are dependent one upon the other, and there are solemn duties growing out of these relations that should be met and discharged with the greatest fidelity. For the regulation of our loyalty one to another, God has given us this rule: "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." (Luke 6: 31.) This rule strictly adhered to and practiced in all of our social and business relations would beget the strongest degree of loyalty between man and man. It would destroy selfishness, causing each man to look not only "to his own things" (interest), but "also to the things of others." (Phil. 2: 4.) Abraham magnanimously gave Lot the choice of the land, and God blessed him, (Gen. 13: 7-9.)

Loyalty Implies Freedom.

BY LEE JACKSON

Both in origin and relationship the word "loyal" is akin to the word "legal." The latter word conveys the idea of being in conformity to the rule of law, while the word "loyal" conveys the idea of living in willing allegiance to the demands of authorized law. Loyalty to Christ means allegiance to his authority in all that he requires of us as subjects of his kingdom. Without the existence of properly constituted authority, there can exist no law as a rule of conduct; and without law, there can be no government. It is useless to make any claim to loyalty while authorized law is being ignored.

There is a principle so essentially associated with the idea of loyalty that it must not be overlooked: It is that subjects under any form of government, whether human or divine, must be possessed of freedom of choice in order to be loyal. Honor for authority and obedience to its demands must be willingly rendered; otherwise it is not loyalty. The subject must possess the freedom of will to elther obey or to disobey, according to his own determining choice. Man is created a free moral agent, and under government it is possible for him to be either loyal or disloyal, as determined by the inclinations of his own heart. If he yields himself in willing obedience to the governing authority, he is loyal; if he is disobedient, he is disloyal

As man is created and as he lives in this present life, he sustains a twofold relationship—a relationship to God as his Creator, Preserver, and Benefactor, and an associate relationship to his fellow man. The divine government seeks to bring man into a state of allegiance that will fulfill the demands of his responsible obligation on both sides of this twofold relationship. To be loyal under this government, man must perform the duties that he owes to God, and he must discharge his obligations to his fellow man. As man's Creator, Preserver, and Benefactor, God alone holds the primary and absolute right to rule in the hearts and lives of men. God alone is the source of all rightful governing authority, whether as exercised by parents over their children, as by civil rulers in the State, as by teachers and guardians in the discipline of students, or as exercised by presbyters as overseers in a Christian congregation. This is very adequately set forth by the apostle in the thirteenth chapter of Romans, where he says: "There is no power but of God; and the powers that be are ordained of God." And this statement of Paul is substantiated by the whole burden of Old Testament teaching. It was in view of the truth that God holds the place of primary authority and that all functions of rightful authority are derived from him that the apostle Peter said: "We must obey God rather than men." (Acts 5: 29.) The word "power" as used by Paul in the passage from Romans means "authority." It was used in the same sense when Jesus said to Pilate, "Thou wouldest have no power against me, except it were given thee from above " (John 19: 11), meaning that Pilate's authority against him was from above. It means the same in the passage which says: "Where the word of a king is, there is power." (Eccles. 8: 4.)

Under the gospel dispensation of grace and truth, God has vested his Son, Christ Jesus, with all authority n heaven and on earth; and "he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet." (I Cor. 15: 25.) Jesus says of himself: "For as the Father hath life in himself, even so gave he to the Son also to have life in himself: and he gave him authority to execute judgment, because he is a son of man." (John 5: 26, 27.) In the same connection he says: "For neither doth the Father judge any man, but he hath given all judgment unto the Son; that all may honor the Son, even as they honor the Father." The reason assigned for this committal of authority to the Son of God is because he is the Son of man. Because he took upon himself the nature of man, suffered as man suffered, was tempted as man is tempted, and died the death that man dies, Jesus now reigns in supreme authority over his kingdom. This investiture of Christ Jesus with all authority gives him the scepter of universal sovereignty. His kingdom is over all. His right to rule with an absolute authority is based upon a twofold claim upon our faith and loyalty. First, as with the Father in the beginning and as coequal with the Father, in some mysterious way, not made known, he had to do with man's creation. He made us. (See John 1: 14; Col. 1: 16, 17.) And second, after man became ruined by sin he came to earth, "taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men," in order to redeem man. As equal with the Father he holds his primary right of authority, and because of his sublime work as man's Redeemer he holds his heaven-given and blood-sealed right to demand man's allegiance. (Phil. 2: 6-8.)

In the final analysis of its meaning, the loyalty of the Christian can mean nothing more nor less than unfeigned loyalty to the reigning Christ. The believer who is baptized into Christ is brought into the enjoyment of the blessings and privileges of Messiah's reign; and when his life is loyally consecrated to the worship and service of his King, he fills up the measure of his responsibility to God and man. True loyalty to Christ looks both Godward and manward. The worship which is enjoined upon the Christian by the authority of Christ should prepare him for an exalted service in behalf of his fellow man. The truly loyal

Christian is not derelict in his attendance upon the Lord'sday worship, and he is diligent in doing good where opportunity offers; and all that he does, in word or deed, is done in the name of the Lord Jesus, and he gives thanks to God through him. (Col. 3; 17.) When a Christian shows himself truly loyal to Christ in filling up the scriptural measure of his obligation to God and man, any apparent boast that he is identified with the "loyal brethren" becomes unnecessary. "By their fruits ye shall know them;" and true loyalty to Christ finds no difficulty in making itself known to those who are acquainted with New Testament teaching. Much has been said and written about loyalty to "our plea," and much of this has been under mistaken conceptions. No class of preachers or other Christians have any right to make any plea for anything not in harmony with the will of Christ. No perfunctory observance of the Lord's-day worship, no verbal contention for the truth, while the heart is absorbed in the affairs of this present world, can ever fill up the measure of loyalty to Christ.

Some Types of Loyalty.

BY H. E. SPECK.

It is one thing to be a disciple; it is another thing to be a loyal one. There are two kinds of loyalty. One is to our Leader, the other is to each other. The first includes the second. Loyalty to Christ as his disciple means a constant and a faithful performance of duty—a "be-thou-faithful-unto-death" matter. A loyal disciple is one who translates the gospel into a life. Our Leader needs, as much as ever, people who are loyal to his teaching; he needs also people who are loyal to his life.

Jesus needs men who understand the hour and its solemn call. Half-hearted disciples, followers who have a mere sentimental liking for him, but who give the "first" place to any other interest, are of very little or no use to him. He must have men who, for weal or woe, without reserve or hesitation, yet with knowledge and intelligence, will follow in his ways. Decision firm and irrevocable must be made.

In Luke 9: 57-62 we meet three men. The first brings Christ an unconditional offer of allegiance, and is repelled. The second is called by Christ to a great work, and the reluctance shown by the man is rebuked. The third is a volunteer, but a double-minded man, who has to be sharply reminded that thoroughness is an essential requisite for service in the kingdom. And we see here three permanent types of human character—the impulsive, the diffident, and the irresolute.

The impulsive one said: "Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." It was a fine offer. There was no reserve or limit to it. This is one feature, at least, of the heavenly life—the Lamb's servants follow "whithersoever he leadeth." This man seemingly was ready to begin with a perfect surrender. He makes a full offer of loyalty, so far as we can see. Yet the volunteer is met with the chilling rejoinder: "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the heaven have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head."

There is not a trace of insincerity, nor is there a sign of self-complacency. All seems genuine and modest enough. But Christ's answer reveals a man who was easily swayed by the feelings of the moment, who would be the victim of any sudden impulse, easily moved to words whose implications he had never realized. He was the sort of man who would begin to build without first counting the cost. He would fain follow him and listen every day to the flow of golden speech. Christ knew the shallowness of the man's heart and that his ways would not always be among the flower-clad hills nor by the quiet lakeside, but oftentimes in the wilderness and amidst the stormy paths, even to meet a cruel doom. Would the volunteer follow him there and share his cup of pain?

Fair-weather disciples are out of place in a kingdom where patient endurance is an exorable necessity. The failure of this sort of character is graphically depicted in the parable of the sower. These are they who hear the word and immediately with joy receive it. Yet they do not have root in themselves, but are only temporary; and when tribulation or persecution arises, declension is as swift as profession. There can be no true loyalty where there is no depth of conviction. Where the tide of enthusiasm subsides and he is left to carry on single-handed the struggle with temptation, he has no heart for the work. His loyalty turns to disloyalty.

The diffident man is another type of character. He does not proffer his allegiance. He is timid and shy in the presence of great demands. Jesus looks into his soul and sees the stuff of which aposties, missionaries, confessors, and martyrs are made, and he summons him to preach the gospel. The retiring man pleads home duties. "Suffer me first to go and bury my father." The loyal disciple will meet crises in life when the duty of burying one's father must be subordinated to a more imperious call. When in the recent hours of peril the summons came to the soldier to fight his country's battle, his oath must be preferred before piety to parents. Christ always claims to stand first. Whoever loves father or mother more is not worthy of him. Christ claims the rights of absolute ownership over every disciple.

The irresolute man is he who said: "I will follow thee, Lord; but first suffer me to bid farewell to them that are at my house." Jesus saw here a man easily led away, a man to whom the farewell visit would be fatal. Once in the family circle, all kinds of obstacles would be put in his way. Tender repreaches and tearful pleadings would be leveled against his resolve. Heart-moving pictures would be put before him of the perils which must attend the man who is wild enough to cast his lot with Jesus of Nazareth. And under the warmth of home influence his courage would melt away. Jesus knew that for him to go home meant a farewell to the kingdom. He, therefore, reminds this volunteer in a very graphic way that halfhearted men are useless in the service of God. He who puts his hand to the plow must give his eye and his mind to it. Let us lay to heart the truth that the half-hearted are not lit for the kingdom of God. They are not fit for any kingdom that is worth having. No young man will be successful in business who keeps his eye on the clock. Nothing less than personal devotion to Him will carry us through

Has the world been gaining too much influence over us? Has its spell weakened our hold on the plow? Are we present day Demasses who have forsaken Christ, having loved this present world? Let us consider him, lest we grow weary in well-doing. Let us pray to Him who giveth power to the faint. Then let us grip the plow more earnestly and press on. Let us be not of those who draw back unto perdition, but let us devote ourselves loyally to the discipleship of Jesus Christ.

"Salvation from Sin." This book is composed of the editorials of David Lipscomb, collated by J. W. Shepherd, and contains many of the best and most profound thoughts of its author. It contains an index to subjects and an index to scriptures. Contains 440 large pages; printed in large, clear type. The book is substantially bound in cloth. Price, $1.50.

Paul's Loyalty.

BY CHARLES R. BREWER.

By "loyalty" we mean unswerving fidelity to any esponsed cause. One may be loyal to a cause that is in itself unworthy. Many a loving, tender, unselfish wife has served and sacrificed for a drunken libertine of a husband who was not worthy of the least token of her love. It is a sadder sight than that, however, to see one, in religious matters, adhering to and advocating principles that are not rooted and grounded in the truth of God's word, Still, there is hope for the man whose loyalty is a result, not of prejudice, but of deep conviction; for when shown the error of his way, he will transfer his loyalty to that which he has learned to be right. Such a man was Saul of Tarsus.

Prior to his conversion he thought to do God's service in persecuting the followers of Christ. On one occasion, standing before his enemies and Christ's, he exclaimed: "I have lived before God in all good conscience until this day!" (Acts 23: 1) And again; "Herein I also exercise myself to have a conscience vold of offense toward God and men always." (Acts 24: 16.) The sincerity of his faith is demonstrated in the length to which he went to show his zeal. In Acts 7: 59 we are told that, in the murder of Stephen, the "witnesses laid down their garments at the feet of a young man named Saul;" and a little later (Acts 8: 1) we learn that "Saul was consenting unto his death." Such an action as this could have been the result of one or more of several motives; that of a deprayed, crime-loving nature; that of a heart fired by passion and fanned by hatred; or that of a conscientious nature convinced, Brutuslike, of the necessity and justice of the deed. The first we may eliminate without argument. The second does not fit the case, as is shown in the evidence that Saul did not, in the frenzy of passion, rush upon Stephen as dld some, but was an onlooker at whose feet "the witnesses laid their garments." By nature humane and tender-hearted, he, nevertheless, could look upon the cruel butchery of Stephen and give his consent "unto his death." A nature of such earnestness and zeal is certain to make itself felt in whatever field it may labor. God, knowing Saul, as he knows all men, looked upon him as a "chosen vessel" and called him to his work.

Having once seen the error of his way, he selzed with avidity the new, the true, religion, and his characteristic zeal and loyalty soon marked him as a man of power in the cause of Christ. In a short time he ceased to be known as "Saul of Tarsus" and became "Paul an apostle." The expression "Barnabas and Saul" in a little while gave place to that of "Paul and Barnabas." His conversion was no half-hearted, meaningless affair. It was the complete consecration of a noble soul to a noble cause. Wherever he went, he made known "with boldness the mystery of the gospel;" he "shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God." In Athens "his spirit was provoked within him as he beheld the city full of idols. So he reasoned in the synagogue with the Jews and the devout persons, and in the market place every day with them that met him." (Acts 17: 16, 17.) His intolerance of faint-heartedness is shown in his aversion to taking John Mark with him on his second missionary journey. (Acts 15; 38.) Even Peter, when he seemed to waver at one time, was "resisted to his face" by this intrepid apostle. (Gal. 2: 11.) Not for fear or favor would he deviate from the way.

Paul had absolutely no selfish motives in his loyalty to Christ. He had laid all on the altar. He presented himself "a living sacrifice, holy [and wholly], acceptable to God." There were times when he could have had the praise of men (see Acts 14: 11-19: 1 Cor. 1: 12), but each time he refused. "Howbeit," he says, "what things were gain to me, these have I counted loss for Christ. You verily, and I count all things to be loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord." (Phil. 3: 7, 8.) He had died, and his life was "hid with Christ in God." (Col. 3: 3.)

Although he aroused a great deal of opposition and persecution, as such activity as his would naturally do, he was not daunted by it. Rather, he found in it occasion for rejoicing. (Col. 1: 24; Rom. 5: 3: 2 Cor. 11: 30.) In Christ was his strength and victory. What though "tribulation, or anguish, or persecution, or familie, or nakedness, or peril, or sword," be his lot? "In all these things," he exclaims, "we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." (Rom. 8: 35-38.) And though he was stoned (Acts 14: 19), though he was cast down (2 Cor. 4: 9), though he was beaten with rods (2 Cor. 11: 25), though he bore branded on his body the marks of Jesus (Gal. 6: 17), yet, as he drew near the ond of his pilgrimage, he could look back with satisfaction on a life that had ever rung true to the gospel of Christ. No wonder he could say: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kent the faith!" (2 Tim. 4: 7.) No wonder he could confidently affirm: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness. which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day!" (2 Tim, 4: 8.)

O Paul, O brother soldier, O incomparable captain of a matchless cause, may we be followers of thee as thou wert a follower of Christ! May thy spirit still animate our hearts; may thy zeal spur us on to greater and yet greater activity for God; may thy consecration cause us to forget self and do all that we "do, in word or deed, in the name of the Lord Jesus."

May we be able truly to sing:

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime."

The Exalted Position of God's People.

BY S. E. TEMPLETON.

"Ye are the light of the world." (Matt. 5: 14.) Jesus was talking to his disciples when he used these words, "His disciples came unto him: and he opened his mouth, and taught them." (Matt. 5: 1, 2.) In being "the light of the world," they evidently occupied an exalted position. Now, how were they put into this exalted position? They came into this position by accepting Christ as Lord, which means they were his servants, and true servants always obey each and every command of the Lord. As they accepted Christ, so must we, which will evidently put us into an exalted position also. That is, the disciples of Christ to-day can truthfully be called "the light of the world:" hence "the exalted position of God's people" now.

Let us consider some of the work of "the light of the world " in the beginning of the church. Luke says (Acts 2: 41) that about three thousand souls were added on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ, Again, in Acts 4: 4, we notice that five thousand believed. During those times the Holy Spirit was more vitally present with them than with us now-that is, the Holy Spirit was with them in a miraculous measure then, whereas he is not so present with disciples of to-day. In Acts 8: 4 we read: "They therefore that were scattered abroad went about preaching the word." This they naturally did by virtue of their position-" the light of the world." Are we doing as they did-that is, taking advantage of our opportunities as they did? If not, Paul says: "Look therefore carefully how ye walk, not as unwise, but as wise; redeeming the time ["buying up the opportunity"-margin], because the days are evil. Wherefore be ye not foolish, but understand what the will of the Lord is." (Eph. 5: 15-17.) The disciples at Philippi received instruction concerning the exalted position they occupied. "Do all things without murmurings and questionings; that ye may become blameless and harmless, children of God without blemish in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye are seen as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life." (Phil. 2: 14-16.) From this we learn that people who truly are a part of "the light of the world" hold "forth the word of life." If we do not as the Christians at Philippi did, what is the result? Paul says in answer: "And even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled in them that perish." (2 Cor. 4: 3.) And Jesus answers by saying: "Even so let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven," (Matt. 5: 16.) If we do not realize our position as "the light of the world," and discharge our duty as these Christians did, "our gospel is velled in them that perish "-" hid to them that are lost" (Authorized Version)—and we keep others from glorifying God. My brother, my sister, in Christ, let us consider our position and act according to these examples. Let us remember that Jesus Christ is our example (1 Pet. 2: 21; 1 John 2: 26), and that he came to a world in the darkness of sin (Eph. 2: 1-5), as "the light of the world" (John 8: 12). So, then, we must follow our Example and be "holding forth the word of life" to drive the darkness of sin away from our fellow beings. Jesus said he glorified his Father by accomplishing the work the Father gave him to do. (John 17: 4.) If we expect to glorify God, we must not forget that we are "the light of the world," for there is no other way to giorify God other than by doing his commandments; and, seriously, member of the body of Christ, If we expect to be saved, we must have this same spirit of Christ (John 17: 4) in us; for the word says: " If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8: 9). Therefore, let us "walk worthily of the calling wherewith we have been called" (Eph. 4: 1), which "calling" is none other than "ye are the light of the world." Let us glorify God in the exalted position of God's people, and by so doing win "the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give . . . to all them that have loved his appearing." (2 Tim, 4: 8.)

Loyalty in Little Things.

BY MRS. FRED M. LITTLE.

When I was requested to write on this subject, I readily agreed; but when I began to think about it, I was forced somewhat concernedly to ask myself, or any one else who would listen: "What are the little things?" They all seem big to me in point of importance. But, anyway, we will plunge in and talk of some of the fhings that some people call "little things."

A man once sent his son to build a house and all the necessary outbulldings somewhere in the West. The son was to follow minute instructions laid down by the father, who gave him all the plans. When it was all complete, the rest of the family were to be notified, and then they would go to the new home. On his way out, the son, in studying the plans, noticed several little places where he thought he could have done better had he been consulted. The more he studied about the matter, the more he wanted to make the changes. Finally he said to himself: "O, well, it is a little thing, and I'll just change this one little place." And he did. Having begun, it was easy to make other changes, especially since this one seemed so much better; so when the buildings and grounds were all completed, the best architect would have had trouble to imagine it was anything like the original plans. Son, however, was very much pleased with his work and himself. What did father say? He said: "Son, you have disobeyed me in everything. I am very sad." The son answered: "Why, no, father; can't you see it is so much better? Besides, a number of things are just like you planned. Then why do you say I have disobeyed in all?" "You have disobeyed in all, because these other things happened to suit you. If they had not, you would have changed them, too. So you have not obeyed me in any part." And the father was right.

We hear so much talk of the "nonessentials" and our liberty to change or leave off certain things or add certain things. Is it safe? Is it loyal? I think not. The other day, on the street, I heard one man say to another: "You're a Campbellite, aren't you?" The second man answered: "Yes!" Maybe he is. But I have asked Christians why they answered to that name, and they answer me: "O, well, it is a little thing, and it is so much trouble to explain!" Is it? Then why? Because of disloyalty? Do we mean that?

Another person is asked: "Why don't you help in the song service?" The answer is: "It is a small matter whether I sing or not. What is the difference, if I am indisposed?" Wonder If that person would consider it a small matter whether the gospel is taught? We are commanded to sing, Isn't it a part of the worship?

Another doesn't go to prayer meeting because it seems to him a small matter. Seems to me some people say by their actions that they will do the absolutely essential things, as they call it—have faith, repent, be baptized, go to church on Sunday, sing a little, pray a little, drop a little offering in the plate, eat the Supper—and go back to the things they are most concerned about, things of the world, until the next Lord's day rolls around again. Shame on such service! I wish my little class had a chance to tell everybody what it is to "seek first the kingdom" and to "love God with all the mind, soul, strength, and body."

So don't you see that the little things become big ones, and that if we are not loyal in all we are not loyal and obedient in any?

Loyalty to Christ.

RY W. F. LEDLOW.

"Loyalty" is a rather comprehensive term, and may include one's relation to himself, his wife, parents, children, friends, school, country, religion, and God. The word, as I understand it, conveys the idea of a true relation to the person or institution involved.

One who is loyal to another must sustain certain relations and hold certain matters as confidential and sacred. To "break faith" with a friend is regarded as a very base sin, and to "betray one's confidence" is a crime of great magnitude. The reason that Judas has always been held in contempt is due to the fact that he had so fully and freely shared the life of Christ and had so often claimed to be his friend.

Loyalty does not associate with suspicion and jealousy, but gives its life for another's good. Loyalty and love are closely related; both represent strong and true heart relations.

When I am away from home, I am constantly reminded that I owe it to my family to return as pure as I left; and no man has the right to commit a deed that he would condemn in his wife. The duty that I owe to my home in this respect is expressed in the word "loyalty."

I sustain two relations to Christ, and, as such, I feel that my loyalty to him may relate to two fields. Christ is my superior; he is my King. If I am loyal to him as a ruler, I must respect his authority and must keep his laws. Granted that he is greater than I and knows better than I what I should do and should not do, my relation to him in this regard demands that I observe the instructions he gives me. To fail in this may be due to my ignorance of what his will is, or it may be due to a disregard of his commands. In this case, I disrespect his authority, rebel against his government, and can no longer claim to be loyal to him. The question of loyalty, then, involves not only one's esteem for Christ, but also his respect for the laws that Christ has made.

Christ Is my friend, companion, and associate. From this viewpoint, I must be loyal to him as I am to my home. By virtue of the relation I sustain to him, I owe it to him to live worthy of his love, respect, and confidence. The man who shares his life with other women is not loyal to his wife, and he who shares the lives of men whose character is at variance with Christ's is not loyal to him. To be loyal to Jesus, our lives must as nearly as we can make them correspond to his life.

Loyalty as regards authority deserves more than a passing notice. Authority is both positive and negative. You must do, and you must not do, if you are really loyal. In the great commission Jesus requires that men "observe all that he commanded." This clearly implies that it was not his purpose for men to do more or less. To extend the commission into fields that he did not command means disregard for his authority, and to stop short of what we know he meant is the same. If the act be willful, it is equal in both cases.

If Christ were present with me and I wished to do some act in his name, I would consult him as to whether or not it would please him. If he should tell me that the deed would meet his approval, I could proceed with all due regard for him and his authority; but should he refuse to speak at all, give me no indication whatever as to what he really wanted me to do, then, should I act for him, my act would be pure assumption—I have assumed that it would suit him. No man can know that Christ wills a thing unless he says that he does, and no man can act with certainty in the absence of an expressed statement.

The only way to be loyal to Christ is to act at all times as one ought to act in company with his best friend and do nothing in his name that he has not commanded. At all times, as far as possible, preach and live a complete gospel.

The Loyalty of Jesus' Disciples.

BY B. C. GOODPASTURE.

Loyalty is a relative term-that is, it cannot be exercised by any one except in relation to some person or thing. For example, the term "master" is relative, because there could be no master in the absence of a servant. The master is such by reason of his authority to designate and control the relationship between himself and his servants. But relationship necessitates the existence of at least two persons or objects. Hence, if there were no servants, there could be no designated and controlled relationship, and consequently no master. Loyalty is a relationship. Every positive has its negative. There can be no loyalty without the possibility of disloyalty. If it were impossible for men to serve the devil, they could not be loyal to Christ. In order to be loyal, they must have freedom of choice and action. "Loyalists" are defined as "those who adhere to their sovereign, especially in times of revolt and revolution," when it is possible, and sometimes easier, to be disloyal

The loyalty of Jesus' disciples was primarily that of pupil to teacher. Disciples are learners or pupils. "The prophet, Jesus, from Nazareth of Galliee" (Matt. 21: 11), was the greatest of all teachers; for "he taught them as one having authority" (Matt. 7: 29). "Never man so spake." (John 7: 46.) His message came from God, for said he: "My teaching is not mine, but his that sent me." (John 7: 16.) His wonderful teaching, his mighty power, his sinless life, his divine nature—all these demanded the true devotion and the unwavering fidelity of those who sat at his feet to learn. The disciples, in accepting Christ as their teacher, pledged their loyalty to him in more respects than one; they obligated themselves to learn, to do, and to teach as they were instructed by him.

It was made clear in the great invitation that those who came to Jesus should be ready and willing-endeavor-to learn of him. He told men in the world what he would require and expect of them after they had become his disciples; they understood that they were to accept him on his terms. Hear him: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me." (Matt. 11: 28, 29.) If they would be filled with righteousness, fhey must hunger and thirst after it (Matt. 5: 6); If they would be loyal to him, they must lend listening ears and receptive hearts to his teaching. When they failed or refused to be taught, they defeated his mission as a teacher in so far as they were concerned, since there could be no teaching when there were none to be taught. Only those who desired to learn the hard lessons, as well as the easy, were really loyal. Those who had no relish for the more difficult things failed when the trial came: "Upon this many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him." (John 6: 86.) They complained: "This is a hard saying: who can hear it?" (John 6: 60.)

Jesus gave his disciples to understand that they were taught that they might do; that knowledge without obedience would not avail. He compared those who heard and did not "unto a foolish man, who built his house upon the sand." (Mait, 7: 26.) In fact, he taught them that the best preparation to learn was a willingness to do. "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching." (John 7: 17.) Whenever they failed to do anything that he taught them, to that extent they limited his power to bless them. "If ye know these things, blessed are ye if ye do thom." (John 13: 17.) He could not consistently bless them in the things wherein they disobeyed him. It was not the mere hearing or learning of God's will, but the doing of it, that saved. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 7: 21.) The disciples who did not as they were taught had no right to call Christ their teacher; they were not living up to the obligations of their profession; they were untrue to their trust. "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 0: 46.1

The disciples were not schooled and trained simply and only for their own good; they were blessed, and, like Abraham (Gen. 12: 2), they must be "a blessing"-they had been taught, and they must communicate the teaching. They had been illuminated by "the Sun of righteonsness," and they must shine that others might see. Christ instructed Andrew, and he, in turn, taught Peter. True disciples are givers as well as receivers. On an unnamed mountain in Galliee, in the presence of some of his disciples, Jesus said: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) If they had not obeyed this command, they would have broken faith with Christ and foiled his plan to save the world. Some were unfaithful, to be sure; but others were loyal to the great Teacher, and carried his message to those who sat in darkness, even in the remote corners and distant ends of the earth. (Rom. 10: 18.)

In conclusion, let it be remembered that the essential characteristics of "the loyalty of Jesus' disciples" nineteen centuries ago should characterize our loyalty now.

Absolute self-surrender is the condition of the highest influence.—Westcott.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

S. H. Hall is preaching this week for the David Lipscomb College.

We are greatly indebted to our contributors for the splendid articles in this number.

From O. H. Tallman, Owen Sound, Ontario, Canada, October 15: "Two were baptized here to-day."

Brother Sewell celebrated his eighty-ninth anniversary on October 25. He has the love and good wishes of friends everywhere.

J. C. Estes writes that eight disciples are worshiping in a rented hall at Davenport, Iowa. Five of this number are attending the Chiropractic School.

One of the best articles in this number was written by a modest brother who asked that his name be withheld; but many of our readers will recognize the earmarks.

From Fred Cowin: "We are getting along quietly at Plum Street, but making headway. Nine received during the past two weeks, six of them from Tennessee."

"Jehovah bless thee, and keep thee: Jehovah make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: Jehovah lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace."

Brother Srygley closed the meeting at Franklin, Tenn., Sunday evening. Eight persons were baptized and three took membership. The church was highly delighted with his work.

From G. W. Jarrett: "I want to do some evangelistic work in Tennessee this fall and winter. Who wants my services, either to evangelize or to locate? Address me at Greenville, Ala."

Notwithstanding the inclement weather, A. B. Lipscomb's meeting at Belmont Avenue, this city, was well attended from start to finish. Twelve were added to the congregation, including four baptisms.

From J. H. Hines, Hopkinsville, Ky., October 18: "The meeting at Dover, Tenn., closed on account of the heavy rains. No additions, but good hearing and interest high throughout the meeting. I found a number there who are loyal to Christ and his word. The church is in bad condition. Sam Leonard will labor with them after October. I shall return next June to hold another meeting. I am now at Joiner's Chapel, in Trigg County."

From H. C. Shoulders, Sellersburg, Ind., October 23:

"On Monday night after the fourth Sunday in September I began a meeting for the church of Christ at Mackville, Ky., which continued for eleven days. The interest and attendance were good. During the meeting one person was baptized into the one body. Mackville is the home of Thomas D. Rose. He preaches for this congregation one Lord's day in each month. He also preaches one Sunday each month at Glenn's Creek, Mount Zion, and Bohon. He is esteemed very highly by the brethren and is doing a fine work at each place."

From T. M. Carney, Fulton, Ky., October 23: "Some correspondent who was not rightly informed as to my work has reported to more than one of our daily papers that I have accepted work with 'the First Christian Church' at San Angelo, Texas. In justice to the cause I represent and to myself, also for the benefit of my friends who may have seen such article, I wish to state that I have not accepted work with 'the First Christian Church' at San Angelo, but with the church of Christ at that place. The church of Christ at San Angelo is one religious body, and 'the First Christian Church' there is a different body."

F. O. Howell writes: "A. H. Lannom has been preaching at Minach, west of Obion, Tenn., monthly, for the past year. Our people and the Methodists use the schoolhouse. The Methodist preacher challenged Brother Lannom for a debate, and they signed propositions. This week the Methodist people have asked that our people have the writer represent them, and proposed to have R. H. Pigue represent the Methodists. I signed four propositions upon their suggestion. So, unless the Methodists fall down on their own proposition, we will have a debate at Minach. Watch the pages of the Gospel Advocate to see the results."

From Warren E. Starnes, Dalias, Texas, October 16:
"The work at Llewellyn and Center Streets Church, this city, is encouraging. There is a baptism occasionally and more taking membership often. The congregation can make some improvements along certain lines, and we shall endeavor to do so. It is right to say, though, that these are as good working people as can generally be found, and they love the work of the Master. If any reader of the Gospel Advocate has a friend, brother or sister, in the city, who needs the encouragement of the brethren here, write me at 308 Sunset Avenue, Station A, and I shall be giad to see such a one and give all the help I can."

A. K. Ramsey writes from Forest Hill, La., October 25: "Crops in this State have been greatly damaged by rains, meetings hindered and some indefinitely postponed, but our trust is in Him. (See Rom. 8: 28.) I recently spent a few days at Vienna, where I met some good brethren who are planning 'greater things for God.' Louisiana is a mission field. All work is done at a sacrifice of some one. All the loyal brethren in the State (French excepted) would make only about two good-sized congregations, and these financially weak. Would you like to invest in soul saving in this State? A splendid place to spend some money is on the building so badly needed at Amite. Send contributions to W. J. Johnson. If help does not come soon, some faithful souls will be without a meeting place; and think of the danger of drifting!"

Wanted-A Ford Car,-The Potter Orphan Home, of Bowling Green, Ky., needs a conveyance very much. The horse and surrey being used at the present are old and worn out. The Home is two miles in the country on the Nashville pike. The Ford car is decidedly the most convenient and best timesaver. I have undertaken to solicit the money with which to purchase the car. I feel sure there will be no delay when once the brethren and sisters know the needs of the Home. Now, brethren and sisters and friends of the Home, let us put our contributions together and buy this car at once. Please send your contribution to me, Box 194, Sellersburg, Ind., and let's make the superintendent and the orphans happy. "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world." (James 1: 27.) -H. C. Shoulders.

From E. D. Shelton, Bowling Green, Ky., October 24: "I am now located in Bowling Green. I am attending the Western Kentucky State Normal School. One thing that induced me to cast my lot here was the fact that this town and county and surrounding counties are very badly in need of the gospel of Christ. I had planned on coming here to cooperate with at least three different churches and preach every Lord's day somewhere, and thus help to extend the church of God. So far I have only one monthly appointment. Brethren, I take this means of asking you. to command me freely in any way I can serve you or help you to serve humanity at large. The churches in other communities are waking up to their duty; why not you? I need your support to help curtail my expenses in school. The people need the gospel. Let's unite our efforts and energies and carry it to them. What do you say? Address me at P. O. Box 406, Bowling Green, Ky."

No Discharge in War.

BY A. B. L.

Solomon said: "There is no man that hath power over the spirit to retain the spirit: neither hath he power over the day of death; and there is no discharge in war." (Eccles. 8: 8.) The terms "discharge" and "deferred classification" became household words during the great European Everybody learned their meaning in the military sense. For that reason we should more clearly understand and appreciate certain scriptural metaphors. One of the commonest metaphors for life in the Bible is that of a battle, of a warfare. No one can live long in this world and fail to see its appropriateness. Surely all of one's life is a warfare. It is a struggle against enemies, physical, mental, and moral; and nobody can be slacker enough to entirely escape this struggle.

In the Mosaic law there were several causes of exemption from military service, or rather of deferred classification. A man who had just built a new house-a greater event in the Orient than here-was exempt. A man who had planted a new vineyard or married a new wife was sent home to wait for later and more urgent service. (See Deut. 20: 5-8.) Now, the Preacher, remembering these Mosaic ordinances, says that in this battle of life and death there is no exemption, no furlough, no discharge. This contest must be fought through to the bitter end. In this respect the soldier who goes forth to battle is one with all humanity. Henry Drummond defined life as the sum total of the forces that resist death. Our bodies have to encounter the frost of winter, the heat of summer, the attacks of disease, and the inevitable approach of death. The most of humanity is engaged in a struggle to keep the wolf of want from the door. In industry there is uncertainty of employment and the constant danger of accident, while in business and professional life there are everpresent problems that call for constant struggle. I saw in the Literary Digest a picture of Theodore Rooseveir's

The cemetery keepers had built a tall iron fence about It to keep at a distance the thousands of men and women who came daily to pay homage. I do not wonder that the people love him, because he knew so much about the struggle of human life. It was this man who said: "The law of worthy life is fundamentally the law of strife. It is only through labor and painful effort, by grim energy and resolute courage, that we move on to better things."

There is no discharge in the war of nature. The primeval bush has to be conquered ere the fertile field can take its place, and the field must be cultivated or it will soon be overgrown with weeds. The United States government has spent millions in its efforts to eradicate the boll weevil. Disease breaks out among the cattle and the blight comes upon the fruit trees, demanding scientific and strenuous counter offensives. In the western part of our State thousands of dollars are being spent in constructing irrigation canals. Some day our arid lands will blossom as the rose.

There is no discharge in the war of education. The fight against ignorance is lifelong, and there is always more to learn in order that new problems may be faced intelligently and the old ones handled better. To neglect mental discipline and drill is to court defeat. Truly Is graduation spoken of as commencement. In the mountains of Kentucky there have been established night schools that are attended by gray-haired men and women, many of whom walk barefooted for miles in order to learn the alphabet. A pathetic sight, you say; but it is good for the mountain people. God only knows how much of extra happiness it has brought into their lives. We never grow too old to learn. Of all the fine things that Alvin York might have done for his own people, he has elected to do the finest, and that is to give them an education The truth wins through conflict with error, though sometimes the victory is delayed for generations. Who can recall the days when bloodletting was the most popular prescription for certain ailments? Who can remember the time when men pleaded eloquently and persuasively for the institution of slavery? Thank God we have learned better! All are cognizant of the time when great editors and great statesmen and even a great President wrote in behalf of a "temperate use" of spirituous liquors. Thank God we are learning better!

I am no politician, but I must add that there is no discharge in the war of public duty. True, the great war is over, but the forces of reaction are on the alert to take advantage of the ignorance and indifference of the multitude. Even reform may be betrayed in the house of its friends. The peace treaty which the President and his supporters are holding up as the panacea for the world's troubles may prove our undoing. Eternal vigilance is the price of safety,

There is no discharge in the war of the church. One may become a deserter, but he cannot get a discharge even if his name be deleted from the roll. Jesus Christ said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The commission is not completed so long as there is even one soul in all the world who has not received the gospel of the grace of God. He said again: No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." (Luke 9: 62.) Paul exhorts us to "put on the whole armor of God;" and in describing the various pieces of that armor, no provision is made for the back. There is a piece for the head and the hand, for the breast and loins, and even for the feet, but Paul had no panoply for the deserter.

There is no discharge in the war of the moral life. Every day we must "war a good warfare," we must "fight the good fight." Every day we must "endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," remembering Paul's advice to Timothy: "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier." (2 Tim, 2: 4) The fires of passion may grow with less fervent heat, but they do not go out. In a sudden outburst it may be found that the old sin has reasserted itself, while there are new temptations springing up or the old ones camouflaged. The need for the building of good habits is never entirely ended. I have in my library a book on "Old Age, Its Cause and Prevention," written by Sanford Bennett, "the man who grew young at seventy." Just so there is a moral fitness to the old proverb: "It is never too late to mend."

No man ever became a saint in his sleep. The Christian can never declare an armistice. Whether in the sunny uplands of victory or down in the valley of the shadow, the battle for God and truth must go on and on till Jesus comes.

We often hear people talk about superannuated Christians, meaning those who have finished their active course as servants of God and now have nothing to do except to be waited on. It is almost distinctly a religious category. But in the common vernacular of our day let me say, "there is no such animal" provided for in the Guidebook from earth to heaven. 'The Bible never speaks of a superannuated Christian. It defines the duties of the aged, but never at any place does it intimate that a Christian's work is finished until it is really finished and he can say with Paul: "The time of my departure is at hand."

A skilled workman in a bronze factory, laboring upon the panels of a massive door, carefully cleansed the surfaces, trimmed the rough edges, filled in the porous cavities, touched and retouched the outlines, shaped and smoothed and polished one portion after another, and then went back to do the same thing over again, each time to seeming advantage. "I shouldn't think you would know when you were through with this work," said a visitor. "We are never through," was the workman's answer, "so long as they will let us keep at it. We stop when they take the panels away."

I think all may see the spiritual application. So we "keep at" our character building year after year until our work is taken away from us and we are "complete in him."

"Sure I must fight if I would reign; Increase my courage, Lord; I'll bear the toil, endure the pain, Supported by thy word."

Conscience, "Thine Own" and "The Other's."

Not now attempting to call attention to all the Bible teaches on conscience, and, therefore, to all that all people should know about it, let us consider one or two very serious features of this most essential thing.

Conscience, like faith, is of different degrees. There is dead faith, weak faith, little faith, much faith, great faith. So the conscience of some is seared, or branded, "as with a hot iron" (1 Tim. 4: 2), and is dead; the conscience of others is weak (Rom. 14: 1, 2; 15: 1, 2; 1 Cor. 8: 8-13; 10: 29-33); the conscience of others is defiled, and to such "nothing is pure" (Tit. 1: 15); and the conscience of still others is good and pure and undefiled (1 Tim. 1: 5; 3: 9: 1 Pet, 3: 16, 21).

While Paul was not always a Christian, but persecuted the church, he "lived before God in all good conscience." (Acts 23: 1.) In all this and in all his life he "exercised" himself "to have a conscience void of offense toward God and men." (Acts 24: 16.) He "verily believed" that he "ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus" (Acts 26: 9); and, while he was "a blasphemer and persecutor, and injurious," he obtained mercy because he did it all "ignorantly in unbelief" (1 Tim. 1: 13). God regarded his conscience.

Conscience is not a correct moral and spiritual guide, but must be instructed in the truth and enlighted by the gospel of Christ. If so, Paul would have been as good a Christian while persecuting the church and killing the children of God as when he labored more abundantly than all the apostles to build up the faith of which he once made havoc.

Yet, while one is ignorant of the truth, conscience must not be violated, and that which one believes to be wrong must not be willfully done. This is very clearly set forth in the New Testament. "To him who accounteth anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean. . . . All things [food] indeed are clean; howbeit it is evil for that man who eateth with offense. . . . But he that doubteth is condemned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith; and whatsoever is not of faith is sin." (Read Rom. 14.)

God respects the weak man's conscience. Paul states that he obtained mercy from God because he did what he did "ignorantly in unbelief" and in good conscience, verily believing he ought to do it. Just so, God teaches all Christians, especially the ones who are strong, "to bear the infirmities of the weak" and not to please themselves, but to receive the weak; however, to receive the weak, not for disputation over the scruples of the weak, but to edify and save the weak. (See Rom. 14: 1; 15: 1, 2.) The strong through their knowledge must not cause the weak to sin against their conscience, to defile themselves by doing that which they believe to be wrong and to be sin against God. and thus cause the destruction of the weak. In this way the strong sin against the weak, "wounding their conscience when it is weak," and in so doing "sin against Christ." (1 Cor. 8: 9-13.)

"Knowledge puffeth up, but love edifieth." The strong, who think they know so much, Ignoring and ridiculing the conscientious convictions of others, intimating that others are not acting upon conscientious convictions and thus impugning motives, do not know, as Paul declares, anything yet as they ought to know. There is a great difference between knowledge which puffs up and love which edifies.

More than thirty years ago I came in contact in a flourishing city in Tennessee with some brethren bent on using instrumental music in the worship of God and doing much of the work of the church through human religious organizations. Of course, I pleaded for the all-sufficiency of the church and the purity of the worship. One of these brethren said to me that it was not conscience, but cussedness, which caused some to oppose instrumental music in worship. We think he said a very ugly thing, impugned the motives of the purest and best, and manifested anything but the spirit of Christ.

This matter of conscientious objection to instrumental music in the worship has been discussed and kept before the churches for fifty years. Our readers understand and appreciate it all.

But verily much depends upon whose ox is gored. There can be no doubt in the world that there are thousands of Christians who are really and truly and sincerely and every other honest and faithful way conscientiously opposed to taking human life in carnal warfare and to all carnage and devastation. I think they are the strong ones, who understand the will of God on this subject. But let us suppose that they are weak, that their conscience is weak, and that they are ignorant of the will of God; then what? They must not be ridiculed. Their conscientious convictions must be respected, and they must not be forced to violate their conscience and thus be made to do that which they believe is disobedience to God in killing people, making widows and orphans, and destroying the peace and homes of the innocent and helpless. The government that wages war respects the consciences of such. God does, individuals must, and all Christians will. Motives must not be impugned.

"Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock in his brother's way, or an occasion of falling." (Rom. 14: 13.)

One is not to be "judged by another conscience" and is not to be "evil spoken of" for conscientious submission to God. (1 Cor. 10: 29, 30.) God Is the Judge, and I am happy that he is. " Each one of us shall give account of himself to God." To our own Lord we stand or fall. (Rom. 14: 4, 12.) I am glad I am no man's judge, and just as glad no man is my judge. Paul declared that it was a very small thing that he should be judged "of man's judgment;" that he was not his own judge and could not be saved on his own judgment; that he knew nothing against himself, yet for that reason he was not justified; that it is the Lord who judges and must save; and that we should "judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who will both bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and make manifest the counsels of the hearts; and then shall each man have his praise from God," (1 Cor. 4: 1-5.)

Love edifies and seeks to save.

Loyalty to the Lord Defined.

With this issue in the line of special numbers of the Gospel Advocate, our readers are greeted with what the management of the paper has chosen to designate as our "Loyal" Number. There will no doubt be much teaching presented on the occasion by different writers that is both true and timely, but surely such a presentation would be materially and sadly defective without a clear and full definition of what it is to be loyal to the Lord and to his revealed will. Hence, the purpose of this article is to make at least a partial contribution to what thoughful men regard as a much-needed discussion of this phase of the subject.

Let it be observed, first of all, that, in our judgment, there is no subject which finds a place in present-day religious parlance on which there is greater confusion, and on which, consequently, there is a greater need of enlightenment, than on this very theme. In the eyes of the well-informed and truly thoughtful, there are many brethren, as the facts will show, who not only seem not to comprehend the meaning of the term, but who practically stultify themselves in the use they make of it. To make this point perfectly clear to the reader, and to present, at least to some extent, the much-needed lesson, we call attention both to the correct definition of "loyalty" and to the misleading sense in which this term and others are often used.

1. Loyally defined. What are we to understand by loyalty to the Lord? What do brethren mean when they use the term? Do they all mean the same thing? It is not only important to have a correct definition of the term, but it is important, if we would avoid confusion, that all use it in the correct sense only. What, then, does the term comprehend when used in the correct sense? Surely no one will differ when we say, in reply to this question, that to be loyal to the Lord means that men are to do and to be, in all things and under all circumstances, whatever the Lord requires them to do and to be, without addition, subtraction, or modification. Whoever does this and is this is loyal to the Lord, and whoever deviates from it to any extent whatever is, to that extent, lacking in loyalty. If we cannot have universal agreement on such facts as these, then it is practically useless to talk about agreement on anything. Of course, to strictly obey God in all things is to be loyal to God, and to refuse or to fall to do so in anything and for any reason is, to that extent, to be disloyal to him. No one capable of right thinking over such matters will call in question this definition.

2. Its meaning in current usage. This will be clearly disclosed by considering certain expressions in current usage. For example, we frequently meet with such expressions as "loyal churches," "loyal brethren," and "loyal preachers" nowadays. What is meant by these expressions? We reply by stating the fact that, in the mouths of many persons, they mean nothing more nor less than that such churches, and such brethren, and such preachers, to whom the term is applied, do not use instrumental music in the worship and do not work through the missionary society. Exactly this and nothing more is what they mean by these expressions. With them, any church that does not use instrumental music and does not work through the missionary society is "a loyal church!"

But are such churches necessarily loyal churches? In other words, are all churches which do not use instrumental music in the worship and do not work through the missionary society loyal churches? Of course they are not. Some of them are notoriously disloyal churches. The fact that they are loyal to the New Testament order in refraining from worshiping and working in a wrong way is certainly no proof that they are loyal churches unless it be also true that they are worshiping and working in the right way; and yet, in popular parlance with this class of brethren, a church that does not meet regularly on the Lord's day to worship God, as the New Testament directs, and does no missionary or benevolent work at all, but refrains from using instrumental music and working through the society, is listed as a "loyal church!" Such a narrow and sectarian use of the term is simply preposterous and disgusting. Why persist in the use of phraseclogy which is not only contrary to the New Testament, but is otherwise distinctly absurd and misleading?

3. In precisely the same way and among the same class of people there is growing up a popular misuse of certain biblical names in attempting to distinguish the church of the New Testament from denominations. They are in the habit of designating as "the church of Christ" exclusively that same part of the church which refrains from the use of instrumental music and working through missionary societies. They speak glibly of "the church of Christ," "the Christian Church," "the Baptist Church," etc., overlooking the fact that a part of "the church of Christ," in the New Testament sense of the term "church," is in what they mean by "the Christian Church," "the Baptist Church," etc., and that the term "church," as used in the New Testament, always and everywhere includes all the children of God in the territory to which it is applied; and, hence, that such an application of the term "church of Christ" is just as sectarian and denominational as are the other terms from which they attempt to distinguish it.

In civil affairs, the same misuse of language in principle would occur if some one should attempt to distinguish the people in the Mississippi Valley from the rest of the people of the United States by designating the former as the United States. Such a use of language would be no proper distinction at all, because the term "United States," when properly used, includes the former as well as much else. Precisely so with the term "church of Christ." This designation, according to New Testament usage, includes all the people of God in all the world when used in the general sense, and when used in the local sense it includes all the people of God in the locality to which it is applied. Hence, to speak of "the church of Christ" and of "the Christian Church" and of "the Baptist Church," in the manner just described, is the same, in principle, as to speak of "the Mississippi Valley" and the United States. Such usage overlooks the fact that the Mississippi Valley is a part of the United States, though it is not the whole thing. The church of Christ, as it exists to-day and has existed for centuries, is a badly divided institution, one part of it, in most cases, having departed from the New Testament In one thing and another part of it having departed in another thing, and so on throughout the whole round of its denominational divisions. In fact, departures from the New Testament are so vital and fundamental in some instances that some of those in some of the denominations are not yet in the church of the New Testament because of having failed to take the steps which the New Testament prescribes for entrance into that church. And hence, speaking in accordance with New Testament usage, when we speak of "the church of Christ" in a given city, or State, or the whole world, we should mean, and should include in the term, all the people of every division who have complied with the terms of induction into that church; and we should plead with them to discard the unscriptural things which divide them into sects and to stand simply on the original ground on which the same church in primitive times stood.

Hence, finally, we hope it is clear to the reader that loyalty to the New Testament in a few things on the part of certain brethren, when they are not loyal in other things, certainly does not entitle them to be called "the loyal brethren," "the loyal churches," etc. Let us simply say what we mean in such cases—namely, that such brethren and such churches are loyal in certain things—and not be guilty of referring to them as "the loyal brethren" and "the loyal churches!"

Loyalty to God.

BY J. C. M'Q.

It goes without saying that when one is loyal to God he is loyal to his neighbor and also to himself. The man who is true to God is true in all the walks of life. It is also true that loyalty to God is a scarce article. There is evidence of this on every hand. When we consider the life and example of the meek and lowly Jesus, when we reflect on his deeds of self-denial and sacrifice, and then contrast these with the needless extravagance and the costly display made by religious people, the conclusion irresistibly comes to us that even the church is far from the standard erected by Jesus Christ.

While Christ devoted his life to healing the sick, casting out demons, and lifting up the fallen, we do not find those who profess to be his followers walking in his steps when it comes to feeding the hungry, warming the cold, and teaching the erring the way of life. One may be impressed with the magnificence of costly church architecture, the grandeur of the splendid organ, and the great display that the professed followers of Christ are manifesting to-day, but such costly display and extravagance do not remind one of the life of the meek and lowly Jesus. His mission of mercy and love was one of the marks of his divinity. During his ministry of love it was truly said: "The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, and the dead are raised up, and the poor have good tidings preached to them." (Matt. 11: 5.)

Those who are truly loyal to God in practice as well as in doctrine devote their lives to teaching the erring the way of life, to lifting up the fallen, to feeding the hungry, to visiting the sick, and to warming the cold. It is not enough to be theoretical Christians; but loyalty to God demands that we shall give our best talent, our most earnest service, and our heart's warmest devotion in order to lead the world up to Jesus Christ.

The world is sadly in need of men who are faithful to God in all his appointments, who walk in his ways, who magnify his authority, and who have little respect for the wisdom and righteousness of men where they contravene God's law. All men need to learn their own weakness and fallibility and need to be able to say, as did the publican: "God, be thou merciful to me a sinner." They should constantly pray, as did David: "Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominton over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be clear from great transgression." (Ps. 19: 13.) All men should realize that "it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps," and, realizing this, should pray in the language of the Spirit: "And the Lord direct your [our] heart into the love of God, and into the patience of Christ." (2 Thess. 3: 5.)

When men appreciate the perfection of God and their own imperiections, they will be far from substituting their own opinions for the word of Jehovah. I call to mind a professor who once said to me that those who claim to be simply Christians certainly are correct, if there is anything in going by a "Thus saith the Lord;" but he spoiled all of his beautiful speech by adding: "This is not necessary. There is no need for being so particular about what God says and in doing his will just in the way he points out." This professor must have gotten his idea from Jeroboam, who reasoned in his heart and said it would not be best for the people to go to Jerusalem to worship. He imagined that if they went to Jerusalem, God's appointed place to worship, they would kill him and turn again to Rehoboam. He appreciated the fact that if the people assembled in one place and exchanged ideas, it would tend to unify them, bind them together, and make them one. So he said to the people: "It is too far for you to go up to Jerusalem to worship." He erected an altar in Dan and one in Bethel, made two golden calves, and said to the people; "These be your gods; come here to worship." He had changed the place of worship, and then he changed the object of worship. But as he had started out to substitute his wisdom for the wisdom of Jehovah, it was so easy for him to make other changes; so he changed the manner of the worship, telling the lowest of the people to come and make the offerings, while God had appointed that only those of the tribe of Levi and of the family of Aaron should be priests. He next changed the time of the worship to the eighth month and the fifteenth

When a man ignores the authority of God in one thing, it is so easy for him to ignore it in everything. He soon imagines that his own wisdom will do far better than the wisdom of God. How rapidly one travels the downward road when he sets aside the wisdom of God for his own! God has clearly revealed to man what he requires man to do. There is enough of what God has plainly and clearly revealed to keep the brightest mind busy until Gabriel blows his trumpet. The greatest pleasure and the highest development come to men by devoting their talents to the things that God clearly reveals in his word. The Holy Spirit says: "Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work," (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.)

Again, God's servants are admonished to speak as do the oracles of God: "If any man speaketh, speaking as It were oracles of God; If any man ministereth, ministering as of the strength which God supplieth: that in all things God may be glorified through Jesus Christ, whose is the glory and the dominion forever and ever. Amen." (1 Pet. 4: 11.) They are not only admonished to speak as do the oracles of God, but to hold fast even the form of sound words: "Hold the pattern of sound words which thou hast heard from me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." (2 Tim. 1: 13.) No matter what may be the feelings of men, no matter what may be the motive that prompts them to turn away from the word of God and substitute their own opinions for God's word, in making such substitution and bringing their opinions into the worship they become guilty sinners in the sight of Jehovah. The Holy Spirit says: "But In vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." (Matt. 15: 9.) Whenever men substitute their opinions for the will of God, they are lacking in humility and think more highly of themselves than they should. Whenever a man has the proper respect for God and his word, like David of old, he is ready to confess his sins by saying: "I have sinned." Men decline to confess their sins because they think more of their own ways, of their own ability, and of their own goodness than they do of God's will. When man realizes fully the superiority of God and appreciates his own weakness as he should, without hesitancy he confesses his own shortcomings and magnifies the perfection of his Maker.

Men should appreciate the fact that they have no right to alter or to change any appointment or command of Almighty God. God's works and appointments are all perfect, and whoever undertakes to change them does so at his own peril. There are many people like the professor referred to, and like Jeroboam, who act as though it does not matter how a man worships, just so he means to worship. They seem to think that if a man has a religious intention he can change or modify the commands of God to suit himself. This lack of loyalty to God has cursed the world and is perhaps cursing it to-day as nothing else has ever done. So long as the New Testament plainly teaches that when men are baptized they come unto the water, where there is much water, go down into the water, and are buried in baptism, are born of water, and come up out of the water, men have no right to substitute sprinkling for Christian baptism. If pedobaptists have the proper respect for the consciences of those who understand the Bible to so teach, they will do nothing to influence them not to be loyal to God in thus teaching. Those who are loyal to God will not change or modify any command of Almighty God. When men begin to change, it is so easy for them to change all the appointments of Jehovah.

I have known people, out of respect to a Jewish rabbi, to ignore Christ entirely in the worship of God, and yet we are told to do all in the name of Christ, "And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him." (Col. 3: 17.) I remember that a Jew on one occasion requested a Christian minister who was marrying a Gentile to a Jewess to leave out the name of Christ when he prayed. This the minister did not and could not do. I give this to show how easy it is for men, when they are not loyal to God, to sacrifice all the appointments of Jehovah. The only thing that Christians should consider is that they have no right, and, therefore, should have no desire, to yield anything that God has commanded to be There are professed ministers in the church of Christ to-day who are ready to leave out Christ in order to work harmoniously with the Jews. This is a lack of loyalty to God and will always bring a curse instead of bringing a blessing.

What To-Day?

We shall do so much in the years to come,
But what have we done to-day?
We shall give pure gold in a princely sum.
But what did we give to-day?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
We shall plant a hope in the place of a fear,
We shall speak the words of love and cheer;
But what did we speak to-day?

We shall reap such joys in the by and by,
But what have we sown to-day?
We shall build us mansions in the sky.
But what have we built to-day?
But here and now do we our task?
Yes, this is the thing our souls must ask:
"What have we done to-day?" —Selected.

Loyalty in the Home

Mrs. Fannie Hurst Gives Woman's View.

When we think of the hardships that our loved ones have suffered for our sakes and the sacrifices they have made and are still so willing to make for us, we wonder how we could ever falter in our love for them and our fidelity to them; but our Heavenly Father sees that there is great danger of our doing this very thing, for he has never ceased to plead with us to be faithful and true to those who love us best. We find that he begins with the very beginning of every family to impress this lesson of loyalty, for we hear him speaking to the bride and groom at the altar the moment the two become one, saying: "What therefore God bath joined together, let not man plut asunder." (Mark 10: 9.) Again, we hear him saying: "Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her: and if she herself shall put away her husband, and marry another, she committeell adultery." (Mark 10; 11, 12.) And again: "Whosoever shall put away his wife, except for fornication, and shall marry another, committteth adultery; and he that marrieth her when she is put away committeth adultery." (Matt. 19: 9.)

Could anything be plainer than this? And yet we have but to look about us to see the terrible grip that this legalized adultery, called "divorce," has upon our nation, and how that, hand in hand with its sister sin, " race suicide," upon which God stamped his utter disapproval in Onan's day (Gen. 38), and which we have no reason to believe he is overlooking in the least to-day, it is sweeping over the land, leaving in its wake blasted hopes, broken hearts, and ruined homes. O that the church, instead of actually tolerating it, would, in the strength of Jehovah, and as one man, hurl its mighty influence against this unspeakable evil and crush it out of existence! However, to file suit for divorce is not the only way to give evidence of disloyalty. On every hand we see men and women willfully neglecting their families, which is but a manifestation of a lack of devotion, or loyalty; and God, foreseeing this, and wishing to emphasize still more forcibly our duty to our own household, was careful to instruct each member of the family along this line. And now, as a few famillar characters pass in review before us, we will find that every time we fail in our duty to our loved ones we violate the laws of God and thus fall in our duty to him.

First, there is the man who spends his time telling of the wonderful things he has done and is going to do, while his wife washes or sews to provide for her family, her husband included. We are told that that man is "worse than an unbeliever." (1 Tim. 5: 8.)

Then there is the man who, though he provides well for his own, seems to regard his home as nothing more than a service station, and his wife, who is starving for companionship and love, merely as a necessary article about the place. To him God says: "Even so ought husbands also to love their own wives as their own bodies." (Eph-5: 28.)

Next comes the man who can deliberately walk out in the morning and leave his wife, who has sacrificed so much for him, lying sick in bed, and if it were not for her neighbors she would suffer from neglect; and this is the same man who, with the excuse that he is tired, can enjoy the sweetest rest, while his frail wife, more tired than he, watches all night long over a feverish child. No man can act thus without ignoring these words: "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself up for it." (Eph. 5: 25.) It is impossible to picture Christ going away or falling asleep and leaving the church to suffer and bear the burdens alone. Why? Because his love for the church was in no way a pretense.

Then we see the father who enters the home with a growl and finds fault with everything with which he comes in contact, and who seems to look more kindly upon the dog and cat than upon his children. "Ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but nurture them in the chastening and admonition of the Lord." (Eph. 6; 4.)

And now comes the sharp-tongued wife, her husband's subdued, frightened look bearing testimony to the fact that she has him completely in subjection, although to do so she has reversed God's order of things. He says: "Wives, be in subjection unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord." (Eph. 5: 22.)

Then there is the woman who seems to feel it her duty to look after all the affairs of the neighborhood, except her own, and who is very little concerned about where her children are or what they are doing. With her is the woman the interior of whose home always has a storm-swept appearance, because she spends her time on the streets displaying clothing that she has no use for, except to satisfy her vanity, and because of which it is impossible for her hard-working husband to remain free from debt. To them this will apply: "That they may train the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be sober-minded, chaste, workers at home," etc. (Tit. 2: 4,5.) And now comes the boy in whose vocabulary the word "obedience" is not found. "Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right." (Eph. 6: 1.)

And next we see the up-to-date girl who has grown ashamed of her old-fashioned parents, though they have practically given their lives for her. "Honor thy father and mother (which is the first commandment with promise), that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth." (Eph. 6: 2, 3.)

There is no need to go further to show that the man or woman who is not loyal to his or her family is not loyal to Jahoveh.

Then how much happier we would be, both here and hereafter, if we would simply follow God's instructions! It is not impossible. For occasionally we find a home where the father is not afraid for his wife and children to know that he loves them, where fidelity and devotion are written on every line of the mother's face; and where the children, refined and obedient, having been nurtured "in the chastening and admonition of the Lord," do indeed honor their father and mother; and when we see such a home as this, we feel that God must have lifted the curtain just a little and permitted us to catch the faintest glimpse of what it will be after a while,

A Modest Brother's Essay.

This is a large subject, involving as it does the loyalty of husband to wife; of wife to husband; of parents to children; of children to parents and to each other.

But first let us consider the

a very vital, pressing subject in this great country where one marriage in every nine is dissolved—and in one State, one in every four.

What tragedies there are in many homes! In many cases due largely to the fact that marriage is made too easy. A couple may meet for the first time and be married within an hour. I am not recommending long engagements: But I do say that hasty marriages are responsible for much unhappiness in the home—prospects blighted, lives soured, life a bondage—a living death.

In the Isle of Man, long ago, when a man committed a crime against an unmarried woman, the judge gave her the choice of three things with which to punish him—a sword, a rope, and a ring. With the sword she could cut off his head, with the rope she could hang him, with the ring she could marry him; and it is said that the last most terrible form of punishment was that most often inflicted. I do not know of anything so hearthreaking as to be forced to live with one who is not congenial, for whom love is dead, with no prospect of a release except by death.

Jacob was engaged to Rachel for fourteen years. But what an affection was there! "They seemed unto him but a few days for the love he bore her." And when he was dying, many years after her death, muttering no doubt in delirium, it was to his beloved Rachel that his thoughts turned back with undying affection. "As for me, Rachel died by me: and I buried her in the way to Ephrath."

I have just finished reading a recent publication, a wife's loving tribute to her dead husband, revealing one of the tenderest, sweetest love stories ever told. The poets say that "home is the last relic of Paradise;" and however questionable that may be, there is unquestionably a breath as of Paradise in "An American Idyll." No need to speak of loyalty where conditions were so ideal:

"One in sickness and in health, One in poverty and wealth; And as year rolled after year, Each to other still more dear."

The picture in Genesis of the first marriage, the singular plan pursued in providing man with a mate, of making her out of Adam, and from the part of his body nearest to the heart, while he lay in mysterious sleep, was intended to give peculiar emphasis and power to the statement. "They twain shall be one flesh"—one in sympathy, in mind, in affection, and in interests—nothing but death afterwards to divide them.

"To have and to hold for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish till death do them part."

There is no scriptural permission for divorce except for infidelity, unfaithfulness. We have known cases where the wife has continued faithful and loyal to an unfaithful husband because her love would not let him go and because of the children. While we do not advise that, where it is, we cannot but admire it. If only—if only—the husband will love the wife and the wife reverence her husband!

"O happy home where two are one in heart,
In holy faith and hope are one;
Whom death can only for a little part,
Nor end the union here begun;
Who share together one salvation,
Who would be with thee, Lord, always—
In gladness or in tribulation,
In happy or in evil days."

Then there is

LOYALTY OF PARENTS TO CHILDREN.

"To mak' a happy fireside clime For weans and wife— That's the true pathos and sublime Of human life."

The plowman bard has in his "Cotter's Saturday Night" given us one of the grandest pictures of the family and the loyalty that should be in the family:

"Wi joy unfeigned brothers and sisters meet,
And each for other's welfare kindly spiers.
The mother wi' her needle and her shears
Gars anid claes book amaist as weel's the new;
The father mixes a' wi' admonition due,
Their masters' and their mistresses' command.
The youngsters all are warn'd to obey,
And mind their labors wi' an eydent hand,
And ne'er though out of sight to joke and play.
And O! be sure to fear the Lord alway,
And mind your duty morn and night.
Lest in temptation's path ye gang astray,
Implore his counsel and assisting might.
They never sought in vain that sought the Lord aright.

The Psalmist said: "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that built it." Those parents are not loyal to the family, to the nation, to God, who only attend to the physical and educational wants of their children, who fail to enforce moral integrity and plety in the home.

Said a returned chaplain recently in Canada: "There are any amount of weak men in the Canadian forces. I have found one thing: that there is no opposition to religion among the men; but they know little about it, because they have never been taught religion in their homes. There is no religion in the average home in Canada." After being in many homes in Canada and in this country, I can say that the average home in Canada will compare with the average home in the United States.

Is it true? Is there no religion in the average homes in this country?

Martin Luther said that household government or matrimony was the fountain and source of civil government. For the children whom we bring up and instruct at home, these will in time to come be the governors of the State. For of families are made cities; of cities, provinces; of provinces, kingdoms. And as water never rises above its source, so the life of the city, of the country, cannot rise above the character of it as realized and lived in the home.

O Christian fathers and mothers! What are you doing? Have your children to go to church to discover that you are a Christian? Or are you manifesting your loyalty to your God and Savior and family by your religion in the home?

There is an old Scotch song which refers to heaven as the "Land o' the Leal." So it is. But let us work to make this earth the "Land o' the Leal."

"The Model Church" the Very Thing for Your Winter Bible Class.

"The Model Church," by G. C. Brewer, was written for a textbook, and there is a list of questions at the end of each chapter. It will supply an eleven-weeks' course of study. In addition, there are a number of prayer-meeting topics outlined and skeletons for talks given as aid to teachers, elders, and preachers. Why not start a class and use this book? All the lessons are exceedingly practical and are intended to develop greater efficiency in the church. Your singing, your giving, your teaching in Sunday school, etc., will all be discussed and helpful suggestions given. All this in addition to the thorough discussion of the eldership.

You need this book. Order it to-day. Single copy, prepaid, $1; one dozen, prepaid, $9; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $17. Address the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

My Guide.

There is no path in this desert waste
For the winds of the shifting sands;
The trail is blind where the storms have raced,
And a stranger, I, in these fearsome lands,
But I journey on with a lightsome tread;
I do not falter nor turn aside,
For I see his figure just ahead.
He knows the way—my Guide.

There is no path in this trackless sea;
No map is lined on the restless waves.
The ocean snares are strange to me
Where the unseen wind in its fury raves.
But it matters naught; my sails are set,
And my swift prow tosses the seas aside.
For changeless stars are steadfast yet,
And I sail by his star-blazed trail—my Guide.

There is no way in this starless night;
There is naught but cloud in the inky skies;
The black night smothers me. Left and right
I stare with a blind man's eyes.
But my steps are firm, for I cannot stray;
The path of my feet seems light and wide.
For I hear his voice, "I am the way,"
And I sing as I follow him on—my Guide.

S. H. Hall Magnifles the Church.

That the Bible teaches that Jehovah tests or proves his people, I presume, will be admitted by every one conversant with our Father's dealings with his children. We are familiar with the statement: "And it came to pass after these things, that God did prove Abraham," (Gen. 22: 1,) This was a severe test. No one who did not have undoubting faith in God and who was not loyal to the core would have taken one step toward offering his son as a sacrifice upon an altar. Abraham believed in God and was loyal to him in the highest sense.

It would be hard to name the many tests of lovalty by which the disciples of our Lord are confronted. It is well to remember that it is God's purpose to have every soul converted to Christ tested or tried. Paul has nothing else in mind when he says: "Each man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it is revealed in fire, and the fire itself shall prove each man's work of what sort it is." (1 Cor. 3: 13.) Here the writer has in mind the same thing that Peter speaks of in the following words: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial among you, which cometh upon you to prove you, as though some strange thing happened unto (1 Pet. 4: 12.) Every soul we win to Christ must be tried, must be tested. The same fire that purifies. strengthens, and saves us, destroys some of those we lead to Christ. They are the ones represented by the seed that fell in "rocky places, who, when they have heard the word. straightway receive it with joy; and they have no root in themselves, but endure for a while; then, when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, straightway they stumble." (Mark 4: 16, 17.) Every worker, every sower of the seed, the word of God, has observed some of his material destroyed by this test. All of those whom we lead to Christ should be taught that "all those who would live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3: 12.) They should be started out in this great life with the determination to endure every test and be faithful till the end. James (1: 2-4) says: "Count it all joy. my brethren, when ye fall into manifold temptations; knowing that the proving of your faith worketh patience. And let patience have its perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, lacking in nothing."

And here it would be well to say that we too often lose sight of the fact that fire is one of the essentials of sacrifice. Our bodies must be presented as living sacrifices unto God; we must place our all upon Christ, our altar, But who ever heard of a sacrifice and an altar without fire? The fire must consume the offering, not destroying it. but purifying and purging it of all that is unclean. Whatever God has asked us to do that it is hard for the fiesh to submit to is a part of the fire. Do these things to the end that the fiesh may die, that it may be mortified and put to death. Too many get off the altar so soon as they feel the fire. "Suffer hardships with me, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," says Paul. Again, he says: "If we died with him, we shall also live with him: if we endure, we shall also reign with him: If we deny him, he also will deny us." (2 Tim. 2: 3, 11, 12.)

There is nothing, however, that I know better to say than that "the church of Christ" itself, as an organization of our Lord, is the test of our loyalty to him: It includes all tests. At its very threshold we are tested, and no one can enter without submitting to it—namely, going where there is much water, going down into the water, being burled with Christ in baptism, and being raised with him to walk the new life. (See Rom. 6: 3, 4; Col. 2: 12.) The newness of life is to be lived and walked on this side of baptism. Paul affirms this in the strongest way when he declares that he knew the Galatian brothren were sons of God by faith because they had submitted to this test. "For ye are all the sons of God, through faith, in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ," (Gal. 3: 26, 27.)

Since Christ has come and died that we might live, our Father hath exalted him, and given him a name above every name that is named, and decreed that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord. (See Phil. 2: 9-11.) To confess that he is Lord is to acknowledge that he is our only rightful ruler. The Father hath "put all things in subjection under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body," (See Eph. 1: 22, 23.) Our loyalty is tested every time there is a movement made to take the supreme government of the church out of the bands of Christ and place it in the hands of uninspired men. This effort has been repeatedly made, and has brought into existence the multiplicity of human organizations; but those who are loyal to Christ go not into such movements, but are contented with letting Christ ever be crowned in their hearts as their only ruler, and to continue to enjoy rest by walking in the "old paths," the "good and right way," where our Lord can ever be honored. (Jer. 6: 16.) If all were loval to Christ, the one church would stand to-day as in the beginning, and we would all be "of one heart and one soul," as were the early Christians. If not, why not? (See Acts 4: 32.) Have you yielded, my brother, to the innovations of modern times? If so, will you not repent and return to Christ and let him be "head over all things to the church," and not head over just a few things to the church, as is the case where departures from the truth have been made? The Lord help us in every desire and effort to let "the Prince of Peace" reign in our every thought, word, and act, is my prayer.

John Straiton Reveals the Badge.

Although the word "loyalty" is not found in the New Testament, the idea is there. "Loyalty" is defined as the quality or state of being loyal; faithful adherence to alleglance; faithfulnesss, devotion, constancy; while "loyal" is defined as true or faithful to one's sovereign. This idea of faithfulness is very common in the Scriptures.

Paul's letter to the Colossians was addressed to "the saints and faithful [loyal] brethren in Christ," and the church at Smyrna was exhorted to be "faithful [loyal] unto death."

What, then, are the tests of loyalty or faithfulness?

In 1563 the English Parliament passed an Act by which an oath of allegiance to Queen Elizabeth and of adjuration of the temporal authority of the pope was exacted from all holders of office. Later, under Charles II., another law was made by which all officeholders, in addition to taking the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, had to sign a declaration against the doctrine of transubstantiation and to receive the sacrament of the Lord's Supper according to the usage of the State Episcopal Church. These were the tests of loyalty to an earthly sovereign used in by gone centuries.

What are the tests of loyalty as applied to the disciples of Jesus Christ? How shall we know who is the loyal and wise servant in the Lord's house?

Sometimes the question is asked: "Is So and So a loyal brother?" And if he is identified with a congregation in which the Gospel Advocate and papers of like conviction circulate, he is pronounced loyal; if he is outside that circle, he is not considered loyal. This seems to me to be a very imperfect and unsatisfactory test at the best.

The various fraternal orders have their signs, passwords, and badges, by which they are known to each other and to the world. Christ has not left us to devise or invent such a badge or test for his disciples, but has distinctly told us what such a test is. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." We place as a test of loyalty love one to another.

The Colossian Christians were condemned because they did not hold fast "the head, from whom all the body increaseth with the increase of God." As a second test of loyalty, I would give unswerving personal devotion to the man Christ Jesus. When we become disciples, we take allegiance to Jesus, our King. To be loyal to him requires that we love him with all the powers of our heart, mind, and soul.

"Who then is the faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall set over his household? . . . Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing [watching.]" When the Thessalonians became Christians, they turned unto God from idols, to serve a living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven. This waiting, watchful attitude will move a disciple to the full discharge of all his Christian duties. The proper obedience to Christ in all things is another test of our loyalty.

These three, then, are our tests: (1) Love one to another: (2) personal devotion to Jesus; (3) a complete obedience to his laws.

Dr. Main, on his return from the Caucasus, recently, emphasized the tremendous need of orphanages there. He says: "In making the recommendation before I left to extend the orphanage work, I fully realized that it mortgages our future. We will have anywhere from twenty-five thousand to forty-five thousand orphans in our care from now on. It is hard to keep asking people for funds for such an extended period of time, and yet, when you find twenty thousand babies on your doorstep, what are you going to do?"

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

A strong worker was sawing wood, when suddenly his saw collapsed. The wooden frame fell to the ground in three pieces, together with the steel crosspiece and the saw blade. The sawyer wasted no time, but began peering about on the ground amid the sawdust. His search was at last rewarded by finding a steel pin about an inch long. This, when passed through holes in the saw blade and the wooden frame, held the whole together, and the work proceeded briskly. The saw and the sawyer depended for efficiency upon that inch of metal. Indeed, efficiency in any task is likely to depend upon some little, unneticed factor, like politeness or promptness or neatness or health.—Selected.

The Problems of Christian Citizenship

H. Leo Boles Defines Scriptural Patriotism.

This subject could have been stated, "What Is Scriptural Patriotism?" Scriptural loyalty or scriptural patriotism to a nation means the same thing. Again, it could have been stated, "What Is Christian Citizenship?" These questions all imply that there is a loyalty which God demands to a nation. Such loyalty expresses the Christian's relation to earthly or human government.

The example of the Jew's love for Palestine and his devotion for his country are instructive examples to God's people to-day. The law of Moses with its rigid requirements and the hallowed places and sanctuaries with the altars are inspiring examples to the citizens of our country to-day. It is true that the kingdom of Israel was a theocracy, which would require great devotion on the part of its citizens; yet, aside from this feature of that nation, there is to be seen an undercurrent of true loyalty to the land of the fathers.

It seems to be an inborn principle for people to love their native land, and this is clearly emphasized in the history of the Jews; however, it is true of all civilized people. Scott has expressed this universal sentiment in these lines:

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
"This is my own, my native land!"
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wandering on a foreign strand?

Christianity not only prepares men for citizenship in heaven; but it prepares them for living upon earth; it makes its adherents interested citizens upon earth. The example of Jesus of Nazareth is the solution of the Christian's relationship and loyalty to human government. He avoided conflict with the Roman authority, yet he proclaimed the fundamental principles of his kingdom on earth. He was obedient unto the Roman authority, rendering unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's, but at the same time he rendered unto God the things which are God's. His relation to the ruling powers of Judea was one of passive acquiescence rather than of active participation. in the petty politics of Judea. The principle drawn from the example of Christ is fully developed in the Epistles as passive in relation to civil powers rather than on the active side. Obedience to the powers that he is enjoined upon the followers of Christ. These powers are declared to be ordained of God, and the obedience to them is always passive. The duty of contending for human rights, or of seeing that justice is done, is left to others, and suffering, submitting, and enduring patiently as passive agents are clearly taught in the New Testament Scriptures. Civil obligations and laws vary in form and differ in extent in different countries. Specific regulations are made by governments in times of emergency, yet the general principle of submission and passivity as taught in the New Testament to the powers that be as a universal principle and must be obeyed by every faithful child of God:

The fruits of Christlanity for these hundreds of years fully attest the fact that those who live in harmony with the example of Christ make good citizens in any government. A Christian is the best citizen that any government can have. The better the citizenship, the more ideal becomes the State and the greater blessing it becomes to its citizens. It follows, then, that loyalty to God and the Christian religion is loyalty to the nation. When one has become a Christian, true and faithful, humble and devoted to God, he has reached the acme of patriotism. The ultimate aim and end of all human governments is to promote the general welfare, provide for the common defense, establish justice, and advance the common weal of its citizens. We are told that the best form of government is that one which is most capable of producing the greatest degree of happiness and safety and is most effectually secured against the danger of maladministration. There is nothing in Christianity that hinders or retards these laudable alms of human government.

One's loyalty to the government is expressed in a meek and quiet life as taught in the Scriptures. My patriotism and loyalty to this nation are expressed in the life that I live humbly in the sight of God. It does not necessarily consist in participating in the parades, rallies, and processions, frantically waving flags and joining in the shouts of the rabble. He who quietly lives the life of a Christian, with a meek and quiet spirit, in all godliness and gravity, is a better citizen and is more loyal to the true ideals of his nation than the one who noisily parades the street and helps to swell the tumult of the populace. Industry and economy with an honest occupation are far better assets to a nation than the idle loitering of the dissatisfied rabble.

The Scriptures do not warrant the popular sentiment: I am for my country, right or wrong." It is not patriotism nor loyalty to one's country or nation to uphoid it in the wrong. All human governments and laws bear the impress of man's imperfections, foibles, deformities, and defects; hence, we need not expect that all of the regulations, requirements, and demands be in strict harmony with human rights as set forth in the word of God. Not only do human laws and governments have these imperfections, but they are also administered by erring man; hence, we have the two sources of defects and injustices which must be patiently endured by the Christian until a remedy is found. The Scriptures nowhere call upon the Christian to indorse and encourage the wrong which may be done by human government. God never calls upon his people to do wrong. It is never right to do wrong. We are told that a State is a personality, and as such it is bound by the same natural and moral obligations as a person. If this statement is true, to encourage the State in wrong would be as sinful as to encourage an individual in the wrong: to uphold the State in any act of injustice and revenge would be as wicked as to uphold and encourage am individual in injustice and revenge. It is not loyalty to the nation to help or encourage it in the wrong. Such a false conception of patriotism caused Dr. Johnson to exclaim: "Patriotism! the last refuge of a scoundrel!" Oliver Cromwell said to the corrupt politicians of England: You glory in the ditch which guards your shore; but I tell you that your ditch will not save you, if you do not reform yourselves." A reformation on the part of the citizens and living as God directs is the surest safeguard of a nation and is true loyally to the nation,

God's people must live a conscientious life; they must keep a conscience void of offense. Of course, the conscience must be enlightened by the truth of God and must be kept tender by an earnest, prayerful heart to live as God instructs. Loyalty to God implies that one must be true to his conscience. The moment one becomes untrue to his earnest, honest convictions, he becomes untrue and unfaithful to himself and to his God. The earnest, honest, conscientious citizen who has had his conscience enlightened by the word of God and has trained his life to honor and reverence the will of God, and has the moral courage to live true to his conscience, will be a loyal citizen under any government. It does not follow that when one's conscience forbids his doing anything that he conceives to be wrong and he has the courage of his moral convictions, that he is unpatriotic and disloyal to his country. The Christian who suffers ill treatment and imprisonment from the government for conscience's sake is as patriotic and loyal to his nation as the man who promptly does the bidding of the powers that be; he is more patriotic and loyal to his nation, if the one who does the bidding of the nation has scruples as to what he is doing.

James E. Scobey Gives a Divergent Vlew.

Neither the word "loyal" nor its derivative, "loyalty," is found in all the Bible. Therefore, I cannot illustrate its meaning or force by scriptural illustrations mentioning the word. However, it is a significant word and has its legitimate uses.

Sometimes in its use the meaning is almost, if not quite, synonymous with the idea expressed by the two words faithful devotion." A loyal husband is one who is faithfully discharging all the duties and obligations imposed upon him in consequence of his relationship to his wife.

The word may be properly used in any case where by voluntary action any one is brought to a faithful performance of a duty or the full discharge of a responsibility. All the duties and responsibilities of life have their origin in relationship. No one can have the responsibility of a husband, if he have no wife, nor can a man be charged with the responsibilities and duties of a father, if he have no child or children. True, he may assume these duties voluntarily and become a foster father; and then, if he did all that he could do for the benefit of the child or children in their growth, physically, mentally, and religiously, he would be a loyal father.

For the last few years we have heard and read much upon the subject of loyalty. Many have been praised for their loyalty to the government of the United States in its great conflict over seas. Every one who supported the government and put in his effort to maintain its purpose to bring success to its arms would be classed as a loyal American. He who failed to obey the powers that be, or used speech disrespectful or harmful to the government, or in any manner by his acts interfered with the plans and purposes of the government, was classed as disloyal; and many such were haled to the courts and were heavily fined or imprisoned. When the tocsin of war was sounded and it was announced that a haughty nation, insolent in its military strength, was violating international law, sinking our merchant marine and sending our citizens, men, women, and children, to the bottom of the ocean, thus trampling on our rights, challenging our strength to resist their depredations, the government blew the bugle, calling on its sons to shoulder arms to avenge the damage and insults offered. The loyal youth responded and formed an army which was the material ald in bringing that proud, haughty, self-important nation to its knees begging for peace.

The soldier in the army, if he be loyal, will always be ready to obey the commands or orders of his superior officers. His relationship to his government and to those who represent it, to whom its power has been given, makes it his duty to give faithful, devoted service to the cause for which he became a soldier. He has dedicated his time and his power and energy to the service of his country. When his commander says "Forward!" he does not go backward, but, without a question as to the reason for the command, he instantly obeys, though the movement may bring him wounds or death. Such a soldier is a loyal soldier. He is no slacker, shirker, or bushwhacker. He makes no plans for the campaign; this is the business of the chief officers. His business is to carry out to a successful issue, if possible, the plan which has been prepared by general headquarters.

But the government would fail, if the home citizenship did not furnish supplies—arms, ammunition, food, clothing, etc.—at the call of the government. A loyal people will generously and gladly divide with the soldier in the field who is sacrificing his all for the safety, henor, and happiness of the people of his country.

We sometimes hear these expressions: "Is he loyal?"
"Is that church loyal?"

Jesus, the Son of God, has a kingdom, and there are cittzens of that kingdom in the world. Its constitution, laws, and ordinances have all been established. No man has the right to annul, alter, or amend them. He should not, under any circumstances, attempt to do so; for, if he did, he would manifest the spirit of disloyalty to his Lord and Master. Those who are members of the church and kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ are soldiers of the cross and followers of the Lamb. The great Captain of our salvation has declared war upon the kingdom of darkness, and would lead those in the army of sin away from its service and joyfully give them welcome as members of his loyal army. The soldier of the cross should simply stand ready to obey the orders of his Captain as they have been transmitted to him by those to whom he has committed them. The whole campaign against sin and wickedness has been formulated. The objective has been plainly pointed out, the means and weapons of warfare clearly stated, and each soldier can have, if he will, a full copy of all necessary knowledge of the positions and movements of the enemy, together with all commands. orders, and exhortations necessary to successful combat. Paul says: "For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh; (for the weapons of our warfare are not earnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds;) casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." (2 Cor. 10: 3-5.) In the orders furnished, the uniform of the soldier is mentioned; for the direction of Peter says all should be clothed with humility. And then, the whole armor is mentioned: "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. . . . Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith. . . . the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God."

I think now we can appreciate more fully what loyalty to Jesus Christ means. To him be glory and honor, majesty, dominion, and power, forever. Amen.

I. B. Bradley Contrasts Two Views.

The question of loyalty to the nation—to one's country—is both an interesting and profitable one to the child of God. It is one that demands more than the simple consideration of his duty to his country. In the limited space allowed for this article I can scarcely do more than, as it were, "touch the hem of the garment."

From the standpoint of the world, there can be no question as to what loyalty demands from every citizen. It demands the devotion of all his powers of body and mind and property; yea, he must be spent, if need be, in the support and defense of his country. The word "loyal" carries with it that idea. Webster says that the word "loyal" means "faithful to law; faithful and true to the lawful government, or to the prince or sovereign to whom one is subject; unswerving in allegiance." Hence, loyalty to the nation demands firm, steadfast allegiance to the nation; faithfulness to the government in obedience and support.

To be loyal to the nation, from a scriptural point of view, requires a consideration from two standpointsthat of his duty to country and that to his God. He must be faithful to the government in that he submits to all its laws and obligations, meets his duties in the payment of all tribute or taxes, and is to be in subjection to "the higher powers." This with the higher duty, or loyalty, always in the forefront, in the ascendancy. There is a loyalty to a higher Power that demands attention first, above every other consideration, and this higher loyalty must regulate and control his loyalty to the nation and to its laws. Wherever loyalty to God requires a child of God to go, he must go, or whatever it requires him to do, he must do, regardless of results. What God forbids him to do, he must refuse, or be disloyal to God. He must obey God; there is no alternative. True loyalty to the country in which one lives demands that he, as a Christian, be faithful to God, for God is always right. There may be, and often are, measures and acquirements of the nation that conflict with the teaching of God's word. These the Christian cannot indorse. His loyalty to God must always regulate his duty to the nation. He will be a law keeper and law advocate. He will be a man of peace and an advocate of peace, and will promote the best interests of the country by lending his influence to that which tends toward peace.

Joseph, while a slave, was lifted to the second place in the kingdom of Egypt, but in his loyalty to Pharach he did not go contrary to the will of God. He was loyal to God, even at the risk of his own personal safety. Danlel, though a slave to a tyrant, a cruel ruler, a worshiper of idols, was later promoted to the high office of chief of the presidents; but he did not allow his duty and loyalty to the nation (Babylon) to cause him to be disloyal to God. His accusers said if they found fault with him, it would be concerning his religion, not his loyalty to his king; and when Daniel refused to obey the law that would have made him disobey God, the king did not count Daniel's action as disloyalty to him or to country, but rather as loyalty to his conscience and to God.

To conclude, we quote the Holy Spirit in his instruction to Christians: "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God. . . . Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake. For for this cause pay ye tribute also; for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor." (Rom. 13: 1-7.) "Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Casar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things which are God's." (Matt. 22: 21.) "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme; or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well." (1 Pet. 2: 13, 14.)

The conclusion must be, then, that loyalty to the nation requires one to follow the above scriptures in letter and spirit, so far as these duties do not require that he do nothing that God does not forbid. Then his conduct must be regulated by the principle stated by Peter before the Jewish council: "We must obey God rather than men."

L. G. Kennamer Cites New Testament Examples.

The civil government is ordained of God. The apostle to the Gentlies, in speaking of the civil government, said: "Let every soul be in subjection to the higher powers: for there is no power but of God; and the powers that be are ordained of God. Therefore he that resisteth the power, withstandeth the ordinance of God: and they that withstand shall receive to themselves judgment." (Rom. 13: 1, 2.) Every civil government receives its power from God, since he is the source of all power; consequently God is a higher authority than civil government. Pilste, once boasting of his power as a representative of Cæsar's government, received a very truthful answer from Jesus when he said: "Thou wouldest have no power against me, except it were given thee from above." (John 19: 11.)

There were individuals in Paul's day who antagonized the civil authorities, and even members of the church at Rome who refused to pay tribute to the government. It was far from being a good government. Nero, one of the most wicked rulers of any people in any age, another "Ahab," stood at its head, and in the catalogue of crime there was no evil too wicked for him to commit. Yet the great apostle to the Gentiles instructed the people of his time to pay their tribute to Nero's government, for it had a claim upon all men in its realm. (Rom. 13: 6, 7.) I am very sure Paul never had any idea that this scripture meant to be a part of the power. We find that the gover ament is a "minister of God," "an avenger for wrath to him that doeth evil." (Rom. 13: 4.) Now, can we for a moment think that God means for you and me to take vengeance on "him that doeth evil?" Paul foreknew such hideous things would be taught and practiced even by Christ's followers in this day, and he gave us an answer in the nineteenth verse of the preceding chapter: "Avenge not yourselves, beloved, but give place unto the wrath of God: for it is written, Vengeance belongeth unto me; I will recompense, saith the Lord." From this passage we learn undoubtedly that God does the avenging and that he has a certain minister to do his work of vengeance. (Rom. 13: 3, 4.) God, speaking through Paul, warns his followers from having any part in punishing evildoers.

Since we see that we should not avenge, by taking part in the government which punishes evildoers, the question naturally arises: "Should we pay taxes?" Paul foreknew that this problem would arise: so he gave the answer to meet the occasion. (Rom. 13: 6, 7.) When the willy Pharisee came to the Savior and asked him if they should pay tribute to Cæsar, he gave an emphatic answer. (See Matt. 22: 15-22.) From this it is plainly seen the Savior recognized that the civil government has certain claims upon every citizen. None has a higher claim than God, however. Hence, the civil government should be recognized in everything, unless it interferes with God's government; even then respect should be shown to the civil authorities.

When the three worthies were commanded to fall down and worship the golden image under penalty of being cast into the burning fiery furnace, they answered the king with decision, and still with respect, when they said: "If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning flery furnace; and he will deliver us out of thy hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up." (Dan. 3: 17, 18.)

Daniel was the prime minister of one of the mightlest kingdoms that ever ruled the earth when he was thrown into the den of lions because he would pray to the God of heaven. When the king came to the den the next morning, Daniel spoke with great respect to him, and said: "O king, live forever." (Dan. 6: 18-22.)

Joseph was cast into prison because he would not break the commandments of God; yet the Lord gave him favor in the sight of the keeper while he was in prison, and he was made overseer of all the prisoners. (See Gen. 39: 21-23.)

Faithfulness in whatever position a Christian may be placed, God himself will make fruitful of good. Consequently, in whatever kingdom we are placed, we are exhorted, "first of all, that supplications, prayers, intercessions, thanksgivings, be made for all men, for kings and all that are in high place; that we may lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity." (1 Tim. 2; 1-4.) There are good men in the very vilest of kingdoms of earth, and oftentimes the people of God are brought into contact with them, to suffer, that the wicked may see what grace can do; and by the power of the salt in their lives these wicked souls may be reached.

The church was greatly troubled because Paul was in prison when in Rome; so he wrote to them as follows: "Now I would have you know, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the progress of the gospel; so that my bonds became manifest in Christ throughout the whole prætorian guard, and to all the rest." (Phil. I: 12, 13.) Paul's imprisonment caused seme in the palace of Nero to embrace the gospel of Jesus Christ. It also encourages the brethren everywhere to preach Christ more boldly than ever before. None but God can tell where the honest, conscientious people are, and oftentimes God's people are brought into very difficult places that through their faithfulness they may give the light of the glorious gospel of Christ to those who otherwise might not accept it.

There is no nation on the earth that was established on nobler principles than the United States. Our country has done a great work in scattering Bibles and civilization in other lands, and now, in the days of reconstruction, every Christian should pray that God's name may be glorified on earth and that we may lead quiet and peaceful lives here on earth.

The Power of the Cross.

We never get past the cross. It grows more precious every day and every step of the Christian's way. It is heaven's trade-mark on everything that expects to pass the gates of heaven. The principle of death and resurrection is the profoundest principle connected with our Christian life. Abraham's Isaac had to be laid down in death and taken back in resurrection as God's Isaac before the promse could have right of way. Not only must our evil things be given up to be crucified, but our best things must go through the cross and come forth with the stamp of the resurrection. Our natural graces and virtues must be exchanged for supernatural gifts and enduements. Our very prayers must first often seem to fall, then come back to us as from the grave. Our service must be buried seed and bear upon it the stamp of the cross. Yes, and even this earth itself must pass through its great and final catastrophe and come forth as the new heavens and the new earth with the sign manual of the cross as the mark of its divinity and immortality.-Selected.

Light on Farther Hills.

The clouds upon the mountain rest,
A gloom is on the autumn day;
But down the valley, in the west,
The hidden sunlight breaks its way—
A light lies on the farther hills.
Forget thy sorrow, heart of mine!
Though shadows fall and fades the leaf.
Somewhere is joy, though 'tis not thine.
The Power that sent can heal thy grief—
A light lies on the farther hills.
Thou wouldst not with the world be one,
If ne'er thou knewest hurt and wrong;
Take comfort, though the darkened sun
Never again bring gleam or song—
The light lies on the farther hills.
—Richard Watson Gilder.

Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn.

The Farm Committee of the Home met at J. W. Fry's office to consider leasing the farm to a Mr. Johnson and sons for a term of five years, provided all are satisfied at the close of any year. By the assistance of Brethren Fry and Salmon said contract was entered into.

The committee is glad to state that the silage put up by the kindness of Brother Fry and the hay and corn new on the farm are valued at seven hundred dollars. All will remember we got possession of the farm very late. In addition, we have about forty acres now in clover. We find in the Home about seventy sweet, little, dependent, orphanchildren, who are looking to the brotherhood for a support. You see we have the feed. It costs one hundred dollars per month to furnish the Home with milk and butter. To reduce this expense, we are going to ask the good brethren and sisters to give to the Home twelve good milch cows and twenty hogs. If any one has not a cow, you can give the money to buy one or a part of one. Send all checks to John W. Fry, Columbia, Tenn., stating that it is for the cow fund. Let any one in any congregation who will give a cow or hogs write any one of said committee. We wish to say, from what we saw about the Home and the children, that the sisters who have it in charge are doing well with it. We will be glad to hear from all who will give a cow or money to help buy one by November 8, the day of our annual meeting. Let every one come to this annual meeting and hear a full report of all money given to the Home. There will be no collections on that day. "The righteous take knowledge of the cause of the poor; the wicked hath not understanding to know it." (Prov. 29: 7.) Dear brother, which side are you on? Send much or little as the Lord has prospered you. Let us all see that the dear little ones have plenty of milk and butter.

Farm Committee: F. C. Sowell, Columbia, Tenn.; George Johnson, Franklin, Tenn.; S. F. Morrow, Nashville, Tenn.

In a commercial age the world is not quick to ask for, or respond to, spiritual leadership; but when great crises come, and men are shaken from the material foundations upon which they have built their lives and are made to realize the instability of mere things, they not only respond to spiritual leadership, but they demand that the leaders in the religious world show them the way to "the heights that purge and make wise." We must realize that such a transition is taking place to-day, and we must be ready to lead men out of the tettering ruins of their false security up to the fundamental things of God, those things without which there can be no safety or peace or growth for the soul. We cannot lead to those heights unless we are led. We cannot lift unless we are lifted. At the foot of a blood-stained Cross that for all the ages has spelled self-sacrificing love, we must empty ourselves of self, and renew our strength and go on up the way that leads to complete self-surrender to the will of God. The world, in its agony, is not asking for pious phrases or smooth sayings, or the old cry of peace, peace, when there is no peace, but it is asking in a thousand tongues and in a thousand ways to be shown the Christ.-Selected.

There will be new heroism; there still will be room for noble deeds as we envisage humanity in a great commonwealth, for we shall find that it requires as much courage to live for peace and right fellowship as to die for the liberties of mankind. There is but one aristocracy, the aristocracy of him who serves, and but one democracy, the frank friendship of the human race.—Selected.

Beginning to see duty from above instead of seeing it from below—surrounding it with God—this is knowing what duty is, the opportunity that he and we have together.—G. Stanley Lee.

Now Said to Be as Often Acquired

It is generally and chiefly indicated by cruptions and sores, but in many cases it enlarges the glands of the neck, affects the internal organs, especially the lungs, and if neglected may develop into consumption.

It causes many troubles, and is aggravated by impure air, unwholesome food, bad water, too much heat or cold, and want of proper exercise.

In answering advertisements, please mention this paper. The Loyalty of Jesus.

BY S. HOUSTON PROFFITT.

Every true disciple concedes that Jesus was loyal in every particular to the purposes of his life and work among the children of men. Hence, the purpose of this article is not to seek by arguments to establish the loyalty of Jesus, but to call attention to some of the things in which his loyalty appears.

Man fell into sin from the pure state in which he had been placed upon the earth, and Jehovah nurposed that he should be redeemed from sin by the shedding of blood. " For the life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you upon the altar to make atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of the life." (Lev. 17: 11.) "And according to the law, I may almost say, all things are cleansed with blood, and apart from shedding of blood there is no remission." (Heb. 9: 22,) According to the eternal purposes, it was not possible for the blood of sacrificial offerings under the law to take away sins (Heb. 10: 4), but that this great sacrifice should be made by the offering of the body of the Son of God once for all (Heb. 10: 10). The eternal purpose was that the Son of God should become the Son of man, and that through the shedding of his blood the sons and daughters of men should become the sons and daughters of God. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3: 16.)

Loyal to the Eternal Purpose .-Jesus was loyal to the eternal purpose. "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Heb. 5: 8, 9.) "And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." (Phil. 2: 8.) On that awful night in Gethsemane, under the very shadow of Calvary's cruel cross, we hear him say: "Thy will be done," After his glorious resurrection we hear him say to his disciples: "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." (Luke 24: 46, 47.)

Loyal to His Father.—When Jesus was only twelve years old, he was found at Jerusalem in the midst of an assembly of teachers; and when he was reproached for lingering behind, he said: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" At Jacob's well he said to his disciples: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me." Again, he said: "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 6: 38.) Again: "But that the world may know that I love the Father; and as the Father gave me commandment, even so I do." (John 14: 31.) Just before his betrayal, in praying to the Father, he said: "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." (John 17: 4.)

Loyal to His Disciples.—"Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having leved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." (John 13: 1.) In John 14: 1, 2 he assured his disciples that he was going away to prepare a place for them and that he would return again and take them to be with him, and in Matt. 28: 30 he consoled them with these words: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

Loyal to the Scriptures .- How much the religious world could learn from the attitude of Jesus toward the Holy Scriptures! To know that "it is written" was enough for him. When the devil held out attractive inducements for Jesus to worship him, Jesus promptly ended the matter with these words: "It is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." He backed his authority for cleansing the temple by this statement: "It is written, My Father's house shall be called a house of prayer." After his resurrection, he assured his disciples that his death was necessary, saying: "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer.'

Loyal to Humanity.-His whole life shows that he loved and sympathized with suffering, sorrowing sons and daughters of men. When John the Baptist, in prison, sent two of his disciples to Jesus with the inquiry, "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" Jesus did not say, "Go and tell John that I am the Messiah," but he sent a more convincing reply: "Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see: the blind receive their sight. and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them." 11: 4, 5.) Jesus came into the world, "not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many" (Matt. 20: 28); and Peter declared at the house of Cornelius that Jesus "went about doing good." The very fact that Jesus left the glories of heaven and came to earth and suffered and died to redeem fallen man shows that his loyalty to humanity is supreme.

Many other things could be said of the loyalty of Jesus. In all his actions there was never shown the slightest shade of a suspicion of disloyalty. The writer hopes that those who read this brief article will be prompted to a closer study of the Master's loyalty. If we would be just such disciples of Jesus as he would have us to be, we will be just as loyal to God, to God's word, and to Jesus, as Jesus was loyal to all that was true, pure, good, and right when he was here in the flesh—"a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief."

Old Testament Examples of Loyalty.

BY G. W. RIGGS.

A spirit of loyalty to God is necessary in order to render unto him true, acceptable service; because "no man can serve two masters," and God requires a whole-hearted service. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind."

The test of loyalty is submission to the divine will. A loyal Christian adheres strictly to the word of God. He will not urge his opinions or speculations; nor will he propose any substitute, nor in any manner compromise the truth. But he is content with God's will and way, devoted to the cause of Christ, and always ready to support that cause with all the strength he possesses.

The Old Testament examples of

The Old Testament examples of loyalty are too numerous to mention. Time would fail me to tell of Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Joseph, Moses, Job, Joshua, Caleb, and the judges of Israel; "of Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah; of David and Samuel and the prophets;" all of whom through faith and courage accomplished much work for Jehovah, and because of their loyalty made themselves heroes in his sight.

The example of Noah is impressive and encouraging. He lived in a corrupt, wicked age; the land was filled with violence; and God said: "I will destrey man whom I have created from the face of the earth. . . . But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord. . . . Noah was a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God." He was a preacher of righteousness; but he must have been a very unpopular preacher, for he made no converts outside of his own family. The people rejected his message, no doubt, with scorn and ridicule, if not with actual persecution. But Noah faltered not; and when the Lord told him to build an ark, he did so, just as he was commanded. Thus Noah saved himself from the destruction of the flood and became the progenitor of the human race. The encouraging lesson from this example of loyalty is: Though all the world forsake us, be true and loyal to God and his word, and it will be well with us in the end.

When Ahab's messenger went to call Micalah, the prophet, he said to him: "Behold, the words of the prophets declare good unto the king with one assent; let thy word therefore, I pray thee, be like one of theirs, and speak thou good." (2 Chron. 18: 12.) Here Micaiah evidently had the chance to gain the favor of two kings and make himself popular with four hundred prophets. Besides, he could have avoided the embarrassment of displeasing the kings and telling four hundred distinguished prophets that they were liars. I have no doubt that many preachers have proved disloyal to the gospel for less than the favor and praise of kings. But Micaiah said: "As the Lord liveth, even what my God saith, that will I speak." He delivered God's message, which was not acceptable to that convention of kings and prophets, any more than the pure gospel is acceptable to a union meeting or a convention of preachers now. Micaiah had to suffer for his loyalty to God's word; but the Lord was pleased with him, and that is enough for any true servant of God. His example is commendable; and what the world has always needed are true, loyal men who will speak only what God has said or revealed.

Many helpful lessons may be learned from a study of the examples of loyalty found in the Old Testament. Paul said of the loyal heroes, that "through faith" they "subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the power of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, from weakness were made strong, waxed mighty in war, turned to flight armies of aliens."

"To Christ be loyal and be true, His banner be unfurled, And borne aloft till is secured The conquest of the world."

The Test of Time

When an article is without merit, public sentiment condemns it. It immediately dies a natural death. When an article has merit, it will be everlastingly in demand. Gray's Cintment has now been used for a full round century. No greater proof can be offered of its effectiveness. One hundred years of honest, good, old-fashloned value for money received has made it a family word in every household. Grandma Used Sage Tea to Darken Hair

She Mixed Sulphur With it to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked, and faded hair beautifully dark and luxurfant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked, or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft, and luxuriant.

Help for Corpus Christl, Texas.

BY C. W. SEWELL,

I shall herein give a statement of what we have in hand and what we need. We have a nice corner lot in a fine location. It is on South Bluff and is perfectly safe from flood waters from the bay. The streets on both sides are paved, and the paving is of the best. We have the restrictive clause in the deed. One reason our house was wrecked by the winds is that we at one time moved it quite a distance from North Bluff to its present location. The moving injured it considerably and it was not put down in good shape. We can use much of the lumber in it in constructing the new house. At a conference of the brethren it was decided that it costs so much to build that we will need about five thousand dollars to enable us to build such a house as we need. We have been so torn up since the storm, and the brethren so busy straightening up their own affairs, that we have not made an effort to see what we can raise among ourselves. We can raise something, but I am sure not very much; but we mean to do all we possibly can.

I have in hand, that has been contributed by churches and brethren from without, $1,428.71. Some of the other brethren have received donations, but I do not know just how much.

Now, brethren, you see what our needs are, and I trust you will assist us to get on our feet again.

We are thankful for the help we have received. Many brethren and sisters whom I knew in the long ago, and many brethren and churches that I have never known, have responded generously to our needs. I praise God for such genuine Christian sympathy. Several Individuals and churches have sent two donations. Now, if a few of those who have not sent will help us, we will soon be able to build. Will you help? It will be "fruit that will abound to your account."

Later we will give a list of all who have sent us an offering.

My address is 701 C Street, Corpus Christi, Texas.

BLACK-DRAUGHT A FAMILY MEDICINE

Some Kind of Stomach Trouble With Cramps and Terrible Pains Made This Oklahoma Man's Life Miserable Until Black-Draught Relieved Him.

Chickasha, Okla.-Mrs. J. W. Walker recently said this; "We use Black-Draught as a family medicine, and think it is the only liver medicine made. My husband makes it up and uses it as a tonic as well as a laxative. I use it for headache, sour stomach, a full, heavy feeling after meals, which I suppose is indigestion, and it certainly does me a lot of good.

" My husband had some kind of stomach trouble-we don't know just what. It would strike him just any time in the day and cramp or pain him just terribly bad. Some one told him how to make a tea of the Black-Draught. which he did. It did him so much good, it removed the cause and cured him. Since then we have praised the Black-Draught to our friends, and gladly do so."

Seventy years of successful use has made Thedford's Black-Draught a standard household remedy. Every member of the family at times needs the help that Black-Draught can give in cleansing the system and preventing or relieving the troubles that come from constipation, indigestion, lazy liver, etc.

Some Observations on a Trip Out West.

BY T. M. CARNEY.

The writer recently spent a few days on a trip to West Texas. I stopped over at Fort Worth and Abilene, thence to El Paso, and returned by way of San Angelo. I met with many of my friends and former acquaintances at Fort Worth and also at Abilene.

One of the most noticeable things at Fort Worth is the difference in a wet city and a dry one. It had been nearly two years since I left Fort Worth, and the liquor traffic was fast decaying when I left; and yet there is a great contrast in the conditions now and then. During the time I lived in Fort Worth one could see scores of drunken men any day. Let it be said to the credit of the city and of the State of Texas, that I did not see one drunken man while on this trip through Texas. Another thing about Fort Worth is that she has grown in business, wealth, and population almost beyond one's realization. No fair-minded person can see the Fort Worth of to day and want the sale of liquor as she once had it.

I visited Abitene Christian College while at Abilene, and they were having a grand opening. Students were coming in every day, keeping the faculty very busy arranging for them.

I was at Abilene only one day, and went from there to El Paso. I arrived at El Paso on Saturday, and preached on Sunday, morning and evening, also Monday and Tuesday evenings. El Paso is a great town to be located in almost a desert. It is peculiar in its make-up, and yet very clean and beautiful. I want to make mention of the loyal little band of Christians that worship at Raynor and Montana Streets. The church at El Paso is not large in numbers. However, they have built a nice brick meetinghouse on a paved street in one of the best residence sections of the city. When I saw what these few, not rich in this world's goods, had accomplished, i was reminded of Paul's declaration in Rom, 1: 15. Brethren, there are some individuals in El Paso who have done more for primitive Christianity than some whole churches have; One of the brethren there told me of how much one good woman had done in establishing the cause of Christ in El Paso. Is she wealthy? No, just a school-teacher; nevertheless, she has been one of the main factors in build-Ing up and maintaining the cause there in every way. These people at Ell Paso are worthy of the brotherhood's prayers and consideration. J. W. Dunn did a wonderful work at El Paso the three years he labored there. It was during his ministry there that the present splendid church house was erected. Those good people have not forgotten Brother Dunn and his labors among them.

On my return I came by San Angelo. and preached on Sunday, morning and evening. By request, I met with the ciders and deacons on Monday evening, and an agreement was reached for me to live and labor among them as an evangelist for the church of Christ at that place. It is our plan to take up the work there at an early date. I shall have more to say of this work later.

WHAT 15 CENTS WILL DO It Brings You 13 Big Issues of Leading Illustrated Weekly Magazine of Nation's Capital

Washington, D. C. (Special.)—Prof-lteering has no place in the dealing of the Pathfinder with the American reading public. Its red-blooded editor produces a wonderful weekly magazine that already has more than a million readers; and in spite of the increased cost of paper, postage, labor, and the advice of his friends, he refuses to withdraw his amazing offer to send the next thirteen big weekly issues for fifteen cents. He says it pays to invest in new friends.

The Pathfinder is indispensable, because it prints the news of the whole world; and every issue is packed with uplift, inspiration, intimate American interpretations of world events, and entertainment. Fifteen cents mailed to the Pathfinder, 135 Douglass Street, Washington, D. C., will secure the next thirteen big issues.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid, which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from over work, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog, and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness, and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimeny of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn. N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building baving for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's establishment has become national headquarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the in ventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution.

Loyalty to the Great Commission.

BY E. S. JELLEY.

This is not some new test. Loyalty, if it means anything acceptable to God, means loyalty to the whole New Testament. For instance, if a man says, "I accept faith and baptism, but not repentance," his religion is vain, is it not? So with faith, repentance, baptism, and missionary efforts. Whether we take the commission from Matt. 28 or from the Acts and Epistles, it is there; and it is there to be obeyed, if we would get inside the pearly gates.

The commission was fulfilled and the gospel preached to every creature under heaven in Paul's day. (See Col. 1: 6, 23.) To-day, nearly nineteen centuries after Christ's ascension, Brother Cunningham says there are forty million Japanese who have never heard the name of the Lord Jesus. This means that ten or more millions in that land have heard of him. I doubt if so many out of India's more than three hundred millions have heard of him. Something must be done.

The "River Brethren," a sort of Dunkards, number about five thousand in America and have twentyone foreign missionaries.

The principal argument for boards is that they accomplish something, while we accomplish nothing. This is a superficial argument. would reject a board of several members and accept one man to do the work of a whole society. If the board is wrong, this is worse. Again, our missionaries depend upon irregular donations for support, and the papers are full of appeals from undersupported (and sometimes oversupported) foreign missionaries. This is slothfulness in the Lord's business, and of a most reprehensible nature. Brethren, do you carry on your business in that manner?

I wish now to make some suggestions looking toward a reformation in missionary methods:

1. Let every missionary (unless he is capable of self-support) be definitely supported by certain definite congregations. If he is worth sending out, he is worth supporting.

Let no appeals be sent out over the signature of the missionary, in the unlikely case of an appeal being necessary, but let it be signed by the churches supporting him.

3. Let no more random contributions to foreign work be made. It is the hit-or-miss plan and does little good. No one can make any definite plans based on random contributions. If any missionary should insist on the random plan, you may be sure he is after more than his share and thinks his eloquence or that of the one-man board will win it for him. If you are contributing to the support of a missionary having no definite support, find out if he will consent to regular support without appeals and random contributions, suggest that he write to congregations with a view to such support, and offer to see or correspond with such congregations as he can suggest with the same object in view. If he refuses or demands an unreasonable amount of support, then look up a more reasonable man.

4. Resolve to do something for foreign evangelization as a congregation. Fifty dollars a month will support a missionary family in India, or almost any other Oriental country. If your congregation can do that, let it send out a family; if not, let it interest several neighboring congregations. At any rate, be sure to send out a new missionary instead of sending out random checks to men already supported. This is the way to set the leaven to spreading till the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the glory of God as the waters cover the sea, and it is the best answer to the board argument.

Just here I am reminded of an incident which serves as a horrible example of how not to do it, which I shall relate.

Some years ago a certain person whose name can be given went out as a missionary-he went out several times, in fact-once for the "Revivalist" sect of Cincinnati and once for the "Gospel Trumpet's" board. He took out with him on his last trip an old lady, some seventy-six years old. He made her think she could work miracles, and he induced her to give him seven thousand dollars which she had in the bank, He went about borrowing to the limit of his ability; rode a blooded horse, followed by great Danes (expensive dogs); and cut quite a swell. When his money was gone, he left the old lady and several others to starve. leaving an indebtedness of some twenty thousand dollars on property worth about five thousand dollars, and went to England and put his wife in an insane asylum, and proceeded to California, where he married a Later his wife got millionairess. free and came to America to accuse him, and the second wife got him a sentence of three years for misappropriating her funds. These are the facts as stated to me by reliable English authority.

From the Indians I heard that this same man was indebted to the whole countryside; that he had brought over a ship load of grain and a large sum of money for famine relief, and that he sold the grain and pocketed the price with all of the relief money; also, that he had for a time had some famine waifs whom he treated as slaves and used to assault with a knife until they all ran away from him.

Such a man does an immense amount of harm to the cause and to the name of the body sending him out; and yet, with our haphazard missionary plan, what security have we that we will not be imposed upon by a similar character? Paul speaks of being "in perils among false brethren," and every missionary in foreign lands has had unpleasant experiences with bright, intelligent, and apparently very innocent native scoundrels. I have even heard that the brethren in a certain American city fell in with a scoundrel of the deepest dye (possibly this might apply to several cities and several scoundrels).

The remedy is to not send out young, untried men (except in the company and under the authority of older and experienced men); and even in the case of men of good report, insist upon honorable business methods. If you limit the missionary to a reasonable support without appeals, deficits, and rake-offs, no scoundrel will be likely to go or stay over there. A good man will be willing to endure a little hardness as a good soldier of Christ once in a while.

If charges are preferred against a missionary, do not starve his family on suspicion, but by all means investigate the charges, if they are presented by a brother of good repute; and if the charges are fully sustained and he remains unrepentant, send Thomas Cook & Son money to pay for his return passage home. To keep an unrepentant wrongdoer in the field is to be partaker in his sins.

Finally, above all things, be careful whom you send out. A quack doctor or a corrupt statesman will not do nearly as much harm as even a well-meaning missionary who is untaught. When we send out our representatives, we should send our best. An aged couple with no knowledge of the languages and no acquaintance with even first principles was once sent out over the protest of responsible brethren, and the results were expensive and sad. A word in this line to the wise ought to be sufficient.

Thorp Spring College.

BY W. F. LEDLOW.

We have just completed one month of the most pleasant year and one of the best years of the work at Thorp Spring Christian College. Both teachers and students are busy and happy. A fine spirit exists in every department of the work. Our new dormitory is about completed, and we are so glad that our boys will now have a good place to stay.

Brother J. S. Newman is our preacher this year. He is one of the finest men in our ranks. Brother Newman is a very pleasant fellow, and everybody loves him. He preaches for the church here and assists in the Bible work in the college. It is a pleasure to have him associated with the work.

I am glad to say that our enrollment this year is much better than it was last year. We have almost double the number of boarding students. Several new families have moved here and others plan to come.

With times normal again, I see no reason why all our schools should not grow rapidly, and I feel sure they will. They are great factors for good and deserve the full support of our people.

HENS MOULT FAST.

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, has discovered a scientific product that hastens the moult and revitalizes the organs of the hen and puts her in fine laying condition. The tonic is called "More Eggs," and a package of it is enough to carry the ordinary chicken raiser over the entire moulting season. First to lay is first to pay. "Since using 'More Eggs," I get forty to fifty eggs a day, instead of eight or nine," writes A. P. Woodward, of St. Cloud, Fla. A million-dollar bank guarantees that you can have your money back if you want it. So you do not take any risk, Send $1 for a season's supply of "More Eggs," Tonic. If you want to hurry the moult and get more eggs, act at once; it means more profit for you. Don't wait, but order to-day. Send $1 to-day to E. J. Reefer, fourth floor, Reefer Building, Kansas City, Mo. Or ask Mr. Reefer for his valuable poultry book, free, that tells the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

The Church at Williams Chapel.

BY W. N. ABERNATHY.

This congregation of about one hundred and fifty members, including some thirty or forty true and faithful workers, quite a number of lukewarm brethren and sisters, and a few apostates, is located in Carroll County, Tenn., about four miles west of the little town of Westport. The records of the congregation have been very imperfectly kept, but from them a few items may be reproduced that may serve a useful purpose to those who are now striving to keep the faith.

Williams Chapel is an offspring of old Roan's Creek, and was established on July 13, 1879. All of the original elders and deacons and nearly all the original members have passed away. The writer has been connected with the congregation about twenty Though Brother L. F. Williams, one of the original elders, did some local preaching in connection with his secular business, the church has never developed a regular preacher. The present curriculum of study and worship is designed to develop the talent of the young for local work, but, somehow, it is falling short of the aims of the promoters. The execution of the plans is not sufficiently in accord with true educational principles. The church has always stood strictly loyal, so far as instrumental music and man-made societies are concerned; but naturally there is a conservatism among the members that hinders true scriptural progress.

Financially, this is not a wealthy congregation by any means, though quite a number of the members are in good living circumstances. As a rule, they are liberal in their donations to charity when called upon, and even some will insist on giving in accord with their ability. Yet, beyond liberally supporting the preachers who have labored for them, they have not done much in the way of mission work. I do not know that any preacher has complained at the support he has received from this congregation. During the last three or four years several appeals for charity have been responded to in a liberal way, such as the War Sufferers, Red Cross, French Orphans, Christian Education, etc. So many appeals have come from places and persons not known to any one in the congregation, asking for help to build church houses, that the church has become very indifferent to them, and no doubt some worthy apneals have been disregarded

So long as I have known anything of the customs of this church, there have been two annual meetings-one on the second Lord's day in May, during which there are two sermons; the other beginning on the second Lord's day in August and continuing about one week, during which there are two services each day. It has never been the custom to have any night meetings. I can scarcely remember a single Lord's day that the church has falled to meet and worship. There are members who live several miles away who are seldom absent in the severest weather. Some of the young members seldom allow the attractions of other gatherings to keep them away.

During the war several of our young men were called into military service. Fortunately, none failed to return without injuries or with their loyalty to the cause of Christ unshaken. The church made a strenuous effort to have them excused from going into a service of such doubtful character, but the government was firm in its demands and they were submissive. One brother manifested such importunity that he was never required to cross overseas, but was held in noncombatant (1) service.

The church now has a corps of elders and deacons that will compare favorably with the average congregations of the country in efficiency. One of the elders has moved away and worships with another congregation, but returns occasionally and assists in shepherding the flock. Other members who have moved away visit us when we call for help to do some special work. Perhaps it would be difficult to find a band of disciples anywhere who work together more harmoniously and with better feeling than this one. No one ever seems to be contentious to the point of creating any division or III feeling.

In regard to menthly preaching, we try to be able to get along without it, and sometimes do so for a year or two, which causes us to be more self-reliant; but we find that we are usually more active when we have some one to stir a little enthusiasm into us occasionally. Brother J. L. Holland, of Greenfield, Tenn., who has served us more than any other preacher since the death of Brother John W. Johnson, is preaching for us now.

While we feel that we should be thankful for some of the present conditions, we realize that we are falling far short of the divine standard and are much behind some other congregations in power exerted for usefulness

When you visit this place, you will see a small, frame structure, very plain, but reasonably neat, which accommodates the small gatherings during the winter, and a large shed where the large crowds assemble during the annual meetings. Though many people attend here from a distance, good order has always prevailed.

Though "our people" are considerably in the majority in this neighborhood, we have enough "Hardshells" and Missionary Baptists among us to keep us awake. Our relations with them are pleasant.

Let me say, in conclusion, that I should like to see the church look more closely after the spiritual and financial welfare of its individual members. Discipline is sadly neglected, as in most of the churches throughout our country.

If any one should wish to correspond with this congregation, simply address: Church at Williams Chapel, Westport, Tenn.

Rogersville, October 23 .- On September 7 I began a meeting at Willow Grove, Tenn. The meeting continued eleven days and was a great success in every way. There were thirteen in every way. There were thirteen baptisms and thirteen restorations. The brethren decided to build a new church house and go to work in ear-nest for the Lord. From here I went to Turkey Neck Bend, Ky., and joined Brother J. W. Reneau in a good meet-ing. He preached from the second Sunday till I arrived on Thursday. The meeting continued eleven days without any visible results, but the church was greatly strengthened and encouraged. Brother Renau is an old, faithful soldier of the cross and min-ister of the gospel. It was a great pleasure to me to be associated with I preached two years monthly for this congregation when I lived in Tompkinsville, and it gave me great delight to be with these good people again. Glasgow, Route 1, October 21.—I closed a good meeting with the church of Christ at Center on October 9. In many respects it was the best meeting I ever held. During the meeting ten were added to the one body. Some of them were from the denominations. Many years ago Brother James A. Harding had a debate there with one Mr. Sheffer, and much good was done. Many of the people were led to see the truth. The brethren seemed to appreciate my efforts. They supported the meeting well. Large crowds from the very beginning attended the meeting. The congregation is at peace, with a bright future. I promised to preach for them next year. I am now in a meeting with the Beckton church of Christ, with large crowds and good interest —Emmett G. Loyalty in Little Things.

BY M. S. MASON.

Little things! We read in Zech. 4: 10: "Who hath despised the day of small things?" Again, we read in Luke 16: 10: " He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." Also, we read in James 3: 5: "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!"

Thus the Bible impresses the value of small things. Little things intrinsically considered are large things measured by final results. The whole is made up of small parts. Each part, however small, if defective, mars the beauty and strength of the whole. A chain is no stronger than its weakest To illustrate: The shoe is made by parts, each employee making a certain part. What each does is a small item comparatively, but its character determines whether the shoe is poorly or well made. Each part poorly made makes a poor shoe; each part well made makes a good shoe. Take for an example the construction of a building. The laying of a brick is a small thing, but only a few laid out of place puts the building out of plumb. One mistake in the calculation of the architect will ruin the entire plan. I know a building lately erected by the church of Christ in which a small mistake was made, and in repairing it the building was marred as long as it stands.

A few moments of time is a small thing compared with the space of centuries, but the disposition of those few moments has determined the course of great events in history. Napoleon lost the battle of Waterloo because his reënforcements were only a few moments late. A certain great wreck occurred on a great railway because the engineer's watch was only a minute slow.

Let us notice a few things which appeal to us on the surface as little things, but which, nevertheless, demand our loyalty.

1. Promptness in attendance. Brethren think nothing of being half an hour late at service on Lord's-day morning, perhaps not realizing that it gains for the church the reputation of being a tardy, shiftless institution. Those who practice churchgoing in that manner, too, realize that it is not permissible in the secular work which they follow through the week. The soldier or sailor who was one minute late at the mess hall or drill "broke ranks" or was disloyal, Brother, sister, what did you do when you were late?

2. The care of our church property. On the surface, in most places, that is counted a small thing. No soldier is counted loyal who cannot pass the inspection of his quarters as to order and cleanliness. Paul tells us in 1 Cor. 14: 40: "Let all things be done decently and in order." We, perhaps, do not realize how much greater our influence would be were our church buildings always clean, lamps bright and shining, and comfortable in cold weather, and the yard free from weeds. Brethren, can we pass inspection on the "quarters" of our worship?

3. The treatment of the visiting alien, the weak brother, and the one withdrawn from who is seeking a door of opportunity for his reclaim. On the surface, we consider it a small thing whether we greet these people kindly, indifferently, or not at all. But there is much in the smile, the handclasp, the welcome greeting, to determine whether the alien is converted, the weak is made strong, or the wanderer reclaimed. In these things we are loyal or disloyal to our Captain, who wishes us to increase enlistment and preserve the morale of the army.

4. In giving. Too many consider that if they cannot give but little, they had best not give at all. This is a mistake. The widow's mite was a very small sum, but there was the very greatest loyalty in her act. She gave all she had. The greatest contribution I ever received from a single individual was twenty-five cents. The circumstances under which it was given made it the heart's rich sacrifice on an altar of gold. Give what you can, be it ever so little. The loyalty will be perfect.

5. Trivial incidents in our lives in which we deny or confess our Lord. (Matt. 10: 32, 33.) Twenty years ago I remember being with a company of young people, and a young man was going to say a "mock grace," when the young lady whom he was escorting rebuked him and told him he could not blaspheme against her Lord. That would seem a small thing to some of us, but it proved her loyalty. The test often comes to us. Don't pass it up as trivial. Our loyalty is involved.

Space forbids our continuance. Let this suffice. Let us be loyal in the small things, and we are sure to be loyal in the great things. Then perhaps in the final roll call the insignia of our rank shall have a delicate beauty by the marks of the Lord's remembrance of the small things in which we proved ourselves loyal soldiers of the cross.

Orlando, October 18 .- I am here to try to build the cause of the Master. There is a small body at Pine Castle, five miles from here. I am preaching for them and at one other place under the direction of the church at Pine Castle. I find the people here do not understand what the church of Christ is as I talk to them in their Christ is as I talk to them in their homes and on the streets. I am often asked: "Is that the Church of God or Holy Rollers?" Then when I explain what the church is and what we teach, often they say: "I never heard of that before. When you preach, I will come and hear you." Brethren, there are three members here, and we want to hold a meeting. We need a tent. Can you tell us We need a tent. Can you tell us where to get one? Lebanon, October 18.—Some time ago our good friend and brother, C. A. Couch, one of the most prosperous merchants of Boon's Hill, began to lay his plans to have the gospel preached to the people of his community. The writer was called upon to do this preaching. The time was set and a tent was gotten from the church at Fayetteville, and the meeting began on the first Lord's day in October, which was a very rainy day October, which was a very rainy day there; and, on account of the tent not being intact, the first day's services were held in the Cumberland Presby-terian meetinghouse. The attendance was good at the beginning, but both attendance and interest continued to grow till both were fine, when the in-cessant rains began and made it too disagreeable for the tent. Then we went to the high-school building for the last three services, and we decided to close the meeting on account of continued rains. As results of the meeting, three were baptized, twenty or more brethren resolved to secure a place to meet and to go keeping house for the Lord, and a nice sum was promised as a beginning for a meetinghouse fund.—G. W. Farmer.

Livingston, October 19.—I began a meeting at the "New Home Church," in Cumberland County, last Sunday night. On account of the rain we could not begin Sunday morning, as was arranged. It rained seven days while I was there, that being the number of days I was there. Our meeting was rained out a number of times. Notwithstanding this, we had a few services, with one baptism. On Thursday, after much labor and being somewhat worn out, I had to close the meeting. I reached home on Friday night, and have been confined pretty close to my room since arriving, and I am advised to remain close for some time. On this trip I met a number of realous Christian. for some time. On this trip I met a number of zealous Christians. Among them was Brother R. R. The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it! When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home. Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, hronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½, ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The

Romantic Story of Southd's Favorite Shoe, EzWear.

Some five years ago, a prominent citizen of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a hoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for ExWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last sprung up in the South for LaWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The "Sweet By and By" and To-Day.

Paul teaches that, "denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly and righteously and godly in this present world." It would be a great gain for us if we could come to realize how largely the religion of Christ has to do with the present. It is important that every man understand his relation to his own time. Some years ago it was a popular everyday question to ask. "Have you got religion?" Changing the grammar, let us give the question a somewhat different turn by asking: "Is the religion you have in the present tense? Are you living it now? Are you getting results to-day?" A Chinese laundryman haled a young man into court who had made many promises to pay his bill. When the magistrate, looking over his spectacles, said, "Well, Sing Lee, what is your charge against this young man?" the complainant replied: "He too muchee by and by." There is too much of this by-andby spirit in the religion of some people. They are counting on doing everything and enjoying everything spiritual at some later time. They are singing the "sweet by and by " song to the tune of Perdition. They spend much of their time talking about the "blessed hope and the glorious appearing," but neglect to look for it by Hving "soberly and righteously and godly in this present world." The Bible is in many respects a present-day book. Its exhortations and promises, its commands and consolations, are largely for to-day. The beloved John, in the Apocalypse, heard a thrilling message: "And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunders, saying, Hallelujah: for the Lord our God, the Almighty, reigneth." (Rev. 19: 6.) Here the emphasis is not on the past or the future, but on the present: " For the Lord our God, the Almighty, reigneth." Note the tense. Glorious is the fact that God. has reigned in ages past and will reign in years to come. but still more glorious the fact that he is reigning now. During a period of frenzied excitement in our political history. Abraham Lincoln calmly and dispassionately said:

God religion, and the covernment at Washington stands secure." He used this at the utterance to allay the fears and anxiety of the people. It should serve the same purpose now. The world is suffering a mighty upheaval. Thousands of its people are in a state of unrest, fainthearted and discouraged. Let not any man forget that in the midst of all these terrible events God reigneth, and even now "all things work together for good" for his people. Note the tense-not "have worked," not "will work," but are working together now toward this end. Jesus said in the great commission: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28; 19, 20.) Let us note the tense of 'I am with you" and take courage. "Is It possible," one asks, "for a man to be quiet and unperturbed while all of these things are coming to pass?" Hear the Savior's answer: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be fearful." (John 14: 27.) Note the tense of "my peace I give unto you" and believe. 0 0

The Bible Class at Johnstown.

Duty is always in the present tense. The Master Workman put it there. "We must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." (John 9: 4.) Some years ago a Bible class met in Johnstown, Pa., one fine Sunday morning, sixty persons being present. The same class met the following Sunday with only eighteen persons present, Forty-two had learned their last lesson, had improved or neglected their last opportunity. How earnestly would that teacher have taught, and how earnestly would those scholars have listened, had they known that it was for two out of every three of them the last time! No man ever did or can do to-day's duties to-morrow. What you do for yourself, or for your neighbors, or for the world, must be done to-day. "What thou doest, do quickly," Is a better motto for a Christian than for Judas.

Eternal Life in the Present Tense.

There is a sense in which eternal life and heaven are in the present tense. We usually make a sharp distinction between life here and life eternal, as if they were two separate lives. The Bible does not make this distinction so sharply or definitely. In describing the awful consequences of speaking against the Holy Ghost, the Savior inveighs against a sin that "shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world nor in that which is to come," Here there is a sharp distinction, but it is between two worlds, not between two lives. The promise is not that if you obey the Lord Jesus Christ and put him on in baptism you will at some time later begin an eternal life. You begin it here and now. Jesus said: "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life." Note the tense-not "will have," but hath eternal life. To the Samaritan woman at the well he said: "Whoseever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up unto eternal life," The well springs within us when we drink-that is, when we obey. The heartbroken Martha had faith in the idea of two separate lives, for she said: "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." But Jesus reveals one unbroken life when he answers: "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die." In his wonderful prayer he gives us a vital truth: "And this is life eternal, that they should know thee the only true Ged, and him whom thou didst send, even Jesus Christ." We begin eternal life when we know God and his Son in obedience. Paul exhorts Timothy to "lay hold on the life eternal." The laying hold was a present duty and the life eternal was a present asset indissolubly connected with the "good confession" he had made in the sight of many witnesses. 0 0 0

"All the Way to Heaven Is Heaven."

We do not have to wait until after death to enjoy a heavenly experience. An old saint once said: "All the way to heaven is heaven." It was said of a pious Puritan that "heaven was in him before he was in heaven." A Scotchman being asked if he expected to go to heaven, quaintly replied: "Why, mon, I live there." There is undoubtedly a heaven of spiritual joy that we begin here. The language of the New Testament confirms this happy thought. Our God has "blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ." If the church is not a heavenly place, this passage is empty. Moreover, we are "partakers of a heavenly calling" and have "tasted of the heavenly gift." When we think of heaven, we think of a crown. Some think in this connection that there will be no crown until we reach heaven. "No heaven, no crown," is the substance of their faith. Let us not be too sure of this conclusion. "Let no man rob thee" of any crown. Paul calls the church at Philippi his "joy and Hear his question addressed to the Thessalonians: "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of glorying?" And the answer: "Are not even ye, before our Lord Jesus at his coming? For ye are our glory and our joy." This is heaven's language, but it relates to an earthly possession. Paul undoubtedly wore a crown before he reached heaven. So may every one of us, if we are faithful. And thus It may develop that heaven will not be such a strange place to us, after all.

What, then, is the difference between the heaven of spiritual blessedness we enjoy here and now before the Lord's coming and that we shall enjoy thereafter? It is a difference of degrees. Here the everlasting life that begins when we put on Christ is hindered and hampered by the limitations of earth, but then there shall be no hindrance nor cessation of joy. The crowns we wear here are subject to change or disillusionment or to actual loss, but there we shall wear the kind that "fadeth not away." They are dependent upon our own faithfulness and the faithfulness of our brethren. Paul's was dependent upon the behavior of his children in the gospel. It was a bright crown he wore, but he knew a brighter one was due him, for he exclaims at his departure: "Henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day; and not to me only, but also to all them that have loved his appearing."

Two Ways That Never Meet.

But this lesson would lack completion did we not impress the fact that the day of salvation is in the present tense. God puts it there both in prophecy and in revelation. "Seek ye Jehovah while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near." And again: "Behold, now is the acceptable time; behold, now is the day of salvation." There is no salvation in the future tense. It is worse than foily for man to seek to change God's law in this respect. It is an awful thing to say "to-morrow" when God says "to-day," for "man's to-morrow and God's to-day never meet." The word that comes from the eternal throne is now. "And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And he that heareth, let him say, Come." And the church will continue to say, "Come," until the invitation is closed by the coming of the Lord himself.

"The Model Church" the Very Thing for Your Winter Bible Class.

"The Model Church," by G. C. Brewer, was written for a textbook, and there is a list of questions at the end of each chapter. It will supply an eleven-weeks' course of study. In addition, there are a number of prayer-meeting topics outlined and skeletons for talks given as aid to teachers, elders, and preachers. Why not start a class and use this book? All the lessons are exceedingly practical and are intended to develop greater efficiency in the church. Your singing, your giving, your teaching in Sunday school, etc., will all be discussed and helpful suggestions given. All this in addition to the thorough discussion of the eldership.

You need this book. Order it to-day. Single copy, prepald, $1; one dozen, prepaid, $9; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $17. Address the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

Why Is There a Dearth of Preachers?

BY CHARLES L. TALLEY.

I have just read an article from the pen of Brother C. M. Stubblefield, of Montgomery, Ala., that brings up some things and thoughts that might be looked into further. Now, since he has suggested that others give some views and expressions concerning the supply of available preachers. I shall give a bit of my experience and observation along that line. I will say, however, that I shall be forced to present the matter from a different angle to the one suggested in the last of his article—namely: "But I do not believe that it is because of the lack of education, nor the fear of not receiving a support."

While I realize that it is taking a very precursory position, yet I am going to do so. Now, I believe that all subjects that come up for consideration, study, and disposition should be fully considered pro and con.

I really think after due deliberation-and I weigh my words well-that at least one cause of a dearth of preachers is the lack of substantial support. This observation covers a period of more than twenty-five years in the field, located in the very best part of Tennessee, a State blessed with so many splendid advantages and opportunities-a State with the very best citizenship, churches, schools, roads, climate, productive soils, and natural resources. It is verily a land flowing with milk and honey. Out of all this, it becomes our unpleasant duty to have to remind the people that, with all of this superabundance, nearly all of our preachers have lived-rather, have existed-and died, and their families, or at least a part of them, have suffered, rather than turn to the charities of the public. The young men, our schoolmates and classmates, have taken up other callings, as lawyers, doctors, bankers, merchants, and have made their mark or fortunes in the grand rush of events and are among the mighty and wealthy of the land. Just here let me say that I am not crying out for mark or wealth; but, in answer to this question, these things enter in, and we shall notice them at another point.

Quite a number of articles have appeared from time to time in the various religious journals that have had a very retarding effect on those that had made some little advancement in the way that would develop more preachers. Hopes and fires that were scarcely alive were smothered in this way, and many an inspiration was dimmed that would have grown under more favorable environments. The encouragements that were often given were: "Go out in the highways and byways, hide yourself behind the cross, and preach; and if the brethren don't support you, have a trade or work the farm until you develop into a big preacher that some rich church will want, and then you will be all right; for the big, rich churches are all looking for good, strong men, and they are able and will pay you for your services." I know of an elder that said by way of encouraging a young preacher; "We are letting Brother - practice on us." Poor encouragement for a young fellow who was borrowing money to better educate himself, and thus better equip himself for the noble calling he felt that he was called upon to do. I verily believe that there will be no greater sin that the churches will be called upon to account for at the judgment than that of covetousness. And I think, if the question were settled before the judgment seat of God, that this has had more to do with the dearth of pre_ners than all other things combined. The hard stories told about "rich in faith, but poor in this world's goods," have grown threadbare, are wrinkled with time and gray-headed with age. The widow's mite has been the poor young preacher's support and encouragement.

These are but poor encouragements to the already poor, sacrificing young man that has to hear the cry of hungry children, while the pride and inspiration of a beautiful and talented wife that he, no doubt, secured in a home that afforded its luxuries must give place to a poorly furnished home and fireside. If the preacher is not neat and tidy, he is not wanted. A brother said to me once: "If a preacher wants to stand well with a church, he must always dress up; for dress will win the ladies, and the ladies will control their husbands." While this may be somewhat strained, it has some shades of truth about it Preachers should not be conspicuous or slovenly, but clean and neat, which, by the way, is now quite a proposition (for just to-day I see advertised in our daily papers suits from thirty to sixty dollars, hats from five to twenty-five dollars, and shoes from seven to seventeen dollars.) In the same paper I see that a number of Methodist preachers have given up work with their conferences and have gone to the farm. I see by the press that one of the leading denominations has about passed a resolution that no preacher shall be paid a salary of less than one thousand dollars. I have an idea that this will cause preachers in that class to pick up some.

How is this matter to be remedled? Well, let us turn to another way and see if we cannot find a way to supply the deficit. God calls some people "robbers." And why so? Because they had withheld their "tithes and offerings." Does not God, who made the worlds and the inhabitants thereof, have a system or law by which these matters may be perpetuated? I verily think so. The thing of the greatest value in the world is the soul. So great is It that Jesus says that you are loser if you should gain the whole world and lose your soul. (Matt. 16: 26.) How is a lost soul to be saved? "By the foolishness of preaching." (I Cor. 1: 21.) Who is to do this preaching? A preacher. Who obligates him to do that? "O," says one, "he is fired with a zeal to save the lost world, and he is self-appointed, arises to the emergency, and just goes at it!" Ah, do you think that He who notes the fall of the sparrow made no wiser provision for that which was created in his own image than that? You do not believe it, neither do I. What, then, is his arrangement? "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" (Rom. 10: 14, 15.) "Some one ought to be behind every preacher that preaches I have little faith or confidence in these self-appointed and self-sent preachers and evangelists. The cause suffers in many ways because of them. Where they go, there is usually a very good crop of strife and contention following. Now, did God ordain that man should preach (be sent out), and yet let the matter go in the loose, haphazard way that we often see? In our great zeal to combat some things that the denominations around us have done and are doing, I fear that we have allowed the pendulum to swing to the other extreme. The idea of a salary has so shocked some of the "straitest sect" that they are ready to oppose everything that the denominations are doing, for fear they will do something like them. But suppose that we do find that God ordered some things that they are doing, will our ignorance of that fact excuse us at the last day? Would it not be the course of wisdom to study and find out what he has planned, and then do it with all of our might?

How are preachers to be made, and what encouragement are they to get in God's word? God ordained that men should preach; that they should be sent of men or churches. (Rom. 10: 14, 15.) We will look to both the Old Testament and the New Testament for a solution of this question; for what is recorded in the Old Testament is for our wisdom and learning. (Rom. 15: 3; 1 Cor. 10: 6.) God's ministers, the priests and Levites, the porters and the singers, were all provided for, and were well paid for their services; neither did they have another trade or profession to sustain them if the covetousness of the people did not supply it. God's law was this: "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn." (Deut. 25: 4; see, also, I Cor. 9: 9; 1 Tim, 5: 18.) Paul applies this to those that sow spiritual things and says that they are entitled to carnal things-food and raiment. (1 Cor. 9: 11.) When Nehemiah restored God's order after the captivity, he found the house of the Lord forsaken-that is, no porters, no priests, no Levites, no singers; every man gone to his field (trade or profession) -a general lack of preachers. (Neh. 13: 10, 11.) How did he remedy this? He put in order God's plan. He had tithes and offerings brought in, and then the portions (pay) of Levites, singers, and porters were restored to their places (Neh. 12: 47; 13: 4, 5); and this was an amount sufficient for every day (Neh, 11; 22-25). Now, when God's order shall be restored, we have faith that young men will be encouraged to enter the ministry without the fear that the things pointed out in this article will be their bitter regret.

Some are so afraid that the word "salary" will render one antiscriptural and that he is a "money lover" if he uses same. What did Christ say about this? Let us see. He says: "The laborer is worthy of his hire." (Luke 10: 7.) Pray, tell me what is the difference between "salary" and "hire," but a form of words or way of expression, Eating and drinking and things that they give were called "hire" by the Master. I am not ashamed to call them "salary," either. Paul said that the Lord "ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." (1 Cor. 9: 14.) Now, while I verily believe that all who preach the gospel should love the Lord and his kingdom so well that they would feel that "woe Is unto me, if I preach not the gospel," yet I believe that the Lord will not held the struggling young preacher to a very severe punishment for falling to preach, if, after he did the best he could, the covetousness of the church members caused him to seek more remunerative fields. What an awful picture is before us! A negro who cannot read nor write, but who can use a trowel, is getting one dollar an hour-ten dollars per day-to build our houses. Another that has but little, if any, qualifications for anything is sweeping floors and washing out spittoons for the fancy hire of six dollars a day-one hundred and seventy-five dollars per month-to porter at the railroad station. Thus we see that the most menial servant is better paid than he who has the oversight of most churches and the care of souls. The doctors, the lawyers, and the teachers are all clamoring for more salary or hire, and are getting it, too. What can we expect to call young men into the ministry when these conditions are before them?

The great war which we have all had a slight taste of, no doubt, had something to do with present-day difficulties. For many preachers seemed to forget the admonitions of the lowly Nazarene and plunged blindly into the great carnage and bloodshed, thus causing the faith of some to waver; but out of all this we hope to gather lessons that will be of great worth to us in the days that are to come. The many auxiliaries of the war that were entered into as aids to succor humanity in the trying hours claimed their proportion of those that might have done service in a more acceptable way unto the Lord and the glory of his kingdom. The only hope I can see for the situation is for the watchman to cry aloud and spare not, lift up our voices as a trumpet, and show the people their sins, the church her transgressions, and by seasons of fasting and prayer return unto the Lord, that he may have mercy and humble us in our unworthiness.

Brother J. B. Nelson's Distressing Condition.

BY JOHN E. DUNN.

The many friends of Brother J. B. Nelson, of Dallas, Texas, will regret to learn that his health has falled and he will be confined to his home for an indefinite length of time. He is suffering with gastritis and nervous complications. Brother Nelson has labored without ceasing for about twenty-five years, preaching the gospel of Christ. He has lived a blameless life, and has sacrificed all of his strength, time, and money to build up the kingdom of Christ. Brother Nelson has been one of the best and most useful preachers in the brotherhood. I have visited Brother Nelson several times in the last few days at his home in Dallas. I have had conversations with his doctors. They tell me he must have absolute rest, cease from his labors in the gospel for an indefinite length of time. Overwork is the main cause of his breakdown. Surely the churches and brethren generally who know Brother Nelson and for whom he has labored will fellowship him in his suffering. If the brethren will contribute to his support and write him encouraging letters, this will help him get well. His mind needs rest and freedom from care and worry. The doctors tell me that if the treatment is faithfully carried out Brother Nelson will get well, but it will take time. From what I can learn, his collapse is very much like the collapse of our President. "If we sowed unto you spiritual things, is it a great matter if we shall reap your carnal things?" (1 Cor. 9: 11.) I hope the brethren will prove the sincerity of their love toward Brother Nelson. I shall keep the readers of the Gospel Advocate informed as to Brother Nelson's condition. I am writing this on my own motion. I am free to say I have very great respect and love for Brother Nelson. I have associated with him intimately from his birth, and I love lilm like I do my own brothers in the flesh.

The following cablegram from the president of Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, now serving as commissioner to the Caucasus of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, will give an idea of the distressing conditions still prevalent:

The Armenian Republic on the Russian side of the line and our relief committee working together are not able adequately to feed the refugees. Meanwhile seeding time is here and passing. Another season of famine is inevitable unless there is immediate action by some compelling power. The world appears to be unconscious of the overwhelming human tragedy that is being enacted in the Caucasus. The Turk and his racial confederates are carrying forward with growing efficiency the policy of extermination developed during the war by the method of starvation. Starvation is aided by typhus; and already, as if in anticipation of the hot season, cholera is developing. These people look to America. Our government is under moral obligations to respond.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armenian and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Q

Brother Srygley is conducting a meeting at Woodsfield, Ohio.

Brother McQuiddy made a business trip to Alabama this week.

Brother and Sister Larimore have gone to California, where they will spend the winter.

Matthew Cayce has closed a good meeting with the Rothchild Avenue congregation, in Nashville,

I. C. Hoskins spent the week end with A. B. Lipscomb and preached at Russell Street Church, this city, Sunday.

From J. T. Harris, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., October 31: "On the first Lord's day in October I began a meeting for the church at Dennis, Miss., which continued ten days, with eleven baptized and two restored."

From Mrs. A. E. Gale, Ralls, Texas: "My husband took the Gospel Advocate since the sixtles, and I have continued reading it since I have been alone. I am deaf, therefore get my sermons from the Advocate. I could not do without it. The special numbers are fine."

From E. C. Fuqua, Fort Collins, Col.: "I baptized two persons here last Lord's day, and I know of others whom I believe are 'almost persuaded.' Let us all thank God and take courage. God yet has 'much people' in the world, who must be found by us and brought to him for salvation."

From J. H. Hines, Hopkinsville, Ky., November 1: "I closed a meeting at Joiner's Chapel, in Trigg County, recently. One person was baptized into Christ. Rain hindered much. J. Dunn was with us and assisted us last Lord's day. The work is moving along nicely in Hopkinsville. The brethren have a mind to work."

From H. W. Martin, Route 5, Sparta, Tenn., October 31: "George W. Farmer closed a successful meeting with the church at Corinth, this county, last night, having continued over two Lord's days. There were five additions, four of them by baptism. We believe that lasting good will come as a result of his labors with us, Brother Farmer is a most untiring worker, loved and esteemed by all."

From W. M. Oakley, Watertown, Tenn., October 30: "I closed a very interesting meeting at Commerce, Tenn., last night. The meeting was greatly hindered by the continued rains, but was well attended and much interest was shown. One noble young lady made the good confession and was baptized. Any congregations desiring my help in meetings next year may address me at 326 Grace Avenue, Nashville, Tenn."

From W. F. Lemmons, Tyler, Texas, October 28: "I had closed my summer's work in Tennessee and Mississippi and was about to begin a meeting at Swifton, Ark., when I received a telegram to come home—that W. F. Lemmons, Jr., was dangerously sick. I left on the next train. I found him in the King's Daughters' Sanitarium with typhoid fever. He is a little better and the doctors are hopeful, Brethren, pray for us."

From Joe L. Netherland, Miami, Fla., October 30: "Our work here is still doing nicely: One was baptized last night. The congregation is small, but the members have a mind to work. We have just purchased a large tent and will keep it busy all the winter in different parts of the city. We are also planning to have S. H. Hall with us in a series of meetings about January 1. Tourists are always welcome at our place of worship."

J. M. McCaleb writes: "The Lord willing, I shall speak at the Belmont Avenue Church, Nashville, Tenn., on November 9. During November I hope to visit Murfreesboro, Shelbyville, Sparta, Knoxville, Chattanooga, and Dayton, including some intervening points. Later I plan to proceed south by way of Lawrenceburg and Atlanta. Friends wishing to communicate with me should always write me at 2625 Montgomery Street, Louisville, Ky."

From I. B. Bradley, Dickson, Tenn., November 1: "The Bradley-Nunnery debate will begin at Pleasant Grove Baptist Church, ten miles east of Wildersville, Tenn., on November 10, at 10 o'clock, and continue six days. Dr. Bradfield will arrange for conveyance for visitors and for their entertainment. I have just closed a two-weeks' meeting at Westpoint, Miss. I am now at home for a few days. The last special number is very fine, indeed. These numbers are each worth the price of a year's subscription. 'Keep on keeping on.'"

Wanted—A Wife.—If a good home, well furnished by a widower who has no children, who is a doctor and a druggist and a loyal gospel preacher, appeals to a Christian lady from twenty-five to forty-five, who does not dip snuff, does not belong to any lodge, does not go to shows or theaters, who has never been married and has no children, and who never rode a horse astride, address Box 107, Bagwell, Texas.

There is one thing this brother did not mention-snoring.

From J. P. Lowrey, Senatobia, Miss., October 30: "Last Sunday was a great day with the church at Senatobia. We had N. B. Hardeman, of Henderson, Tenn., with us, and he preached three most splendid discourses. At the close of the services on Sunday night nine persons were baptized. There are a number of others that we hope to see obey the gospel soon. There is a wonderful work for the church at Senatobia to do, and what has been done in the past few years in Tate County should be done all over this great State."

J. M. Hart and R. Billingsley, elders of the church of Christ at Spaulding, Okla., send this: "The meeting conducted by Brother Will W. Slater at the church of Christ at Spaulding closed on Sunday night, October 5, after running over three Sundays. The church was much benefited and strengthened. Fifteen noble souls (all but two heads of families) were buried with their Lord in baptism. Brother Slater shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God, and the folks here think that he has no superior as a preacher of the true gospel. God's word did not return to him empty-handed at this place."

The following note to the managing editor, from W. H. Kerr, Great Bend, Kan., has a curious interest: "Having had the good fortune to discover the truths that the universe contains no real god, that man has no soul, and that life ends forever at death, and believing this knowledge to be of greatest importance to all people, I write to offer my services free to the readers of your publication to inform them of these truths being discovered, if you will kindly furnish me space for a series of articles or lessons explaining and proving them. Please answer and oblige."

them of these truths being discovered, it you will kindly furnish me space for a series of articles or lessons explaining and proving them. Please answer and oblige."

Mr. Kerr had best keep his "good fortune" to bimself. Schopenhauer once discovered that nothing in this world really existed. A facetious friend observed that on the same premise Schopenhauer's baneful philosophy did not exist.

F. B. Srygley writes: "We closed our meeting at Franklin, Tenn. on Sunday night, October 26. It continued fifteen days, and it must have rained ten days of the lifteen.
Notwithstanding the rains, the audiences were good at almost every service. F. W. Smith, the preacher for these good people, was present at every meeting, and he is a true rokefellow. Though Brother Smith has preached at Franklin over eighteen years all together, he is still held in high esteem by all the members and also by the best people of the town. He has not won and held the esteem and admiration of the church by compromising the truth, but by preaching it in a loving, tender way. He certainly has followed the teaching of Paul, who taught us to speak the truth in love. Brother Smith is deservingly popular with a very deserving church. May they continue to grow as they have in the past."

From W. S. Long, Washington, D. C., October 31: "The church here is moving along smoothly with the work. Besides the work here in Washington, we do some mission work at a distance and send some help to the orphan homes, though we do not do as much as we should. Brother and Sister W. S. Moedy and Brother A. B. Comer made us a pleasant visit lately. Brother Moody preached a good sermon. Whenever members come this way, we urge that they look us up and meet with us. Remember, the meeting place is Eighth and F Streets, N. E., Masonic Temple, second floor. Take Eighth and F car, N. E., or Navy Yard car. We are making preparation to begin the new house of worship soon, and hope the workmen may not have to stop till the last nall is driven. To do this, we need your support from now on. This is your time to help; so do not delay. A brother in Florence, Ala., has volunteered to give one hundred dollars. Will not others join him? Can we not find ninety-nine other brethren to give eight dollars a month for twelve months, or two dollars a week for fifty weeks? If so, the house can be completed in ten months. Write me what you will do. Address W. S. Long, 1424 B Street, S. E., Washington, D. C.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite, orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the ilst takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily recitited if prompt notice is given.

An Evangelist for Denver.

BY J. C. M'Q.

By the advice of my physician, I left home on September 24 for Denver, Col. I was satisfied that a rest from office work would prove beneficial, and also my physician thought that the climate of Denver would be helpful to bronchitis, of which I have suffered for a number of

I made the trip by way of St. Louis and reached Denver without accident or special incident. As is generally known, Denver is a beautiful city of something near three hundred thousand population. It is just one mile above the sea level. The air is dry, crisp, and invigorating.

Reaching Denver on the evening of the 26th, Brother John D. Evans and sister met me and my daughter, who accompanied me, at the Union Station. After resting Saturday, we met with the disciples on Lord's day, who worship at Eighth Street and Ogden Avenue. The church is small, having a membership of perhaps from sixty to seventy-five. I had the pleasure of talking to them at the eleven-o'clock service. The church met in the afternoon at three o'clock for the purpose of effecting an organization. Elders and deacons were appointed. This work has been in process of building for about eleven years. Brother John D. Evans, of Tennessee, who went to Denver for his health, has been largely instrumental in bringing together this number of disciples and in feeding and developing the church. While he had not previously been appointed an elder, he was chosen as one of the elders when the church was organized, in recognition of the fact that he had been earnest, hearty, and active in the work.

While Brother Evans is far from a well man, he has done much work, being deeply in earnest and pious. He is not only loyal to the truth, but also stands firm and immovable for what he conceives to be right. During the past eleven years, being hindered much by poor health, he has never ceased to do what he could in order to lead men and women to Christ. His labor has not been in valn. He was also active in bringing about the organization of the church, as he felt that the time had come when it was necessary for the church to do its most effective work. During his eleven-years' effort in the work of saving souls he has made his own living and has done the work for Christ at his own charges. Not only has he preached, worked, and prayed, but, if I am not very much mistaken, he has given liberally of his means in order to advance the kingdom of God in Denver. It does seem that the time has now come when the church in Denver should make an active, vigorous effort to evangelize the city and the surrounding country. It is scriptural, it is just, and it is right that the church should minister to the preachers who labor to build up the cause of Christ in that field. The Holy Spirit declares: "Even so did the Lord ordain that they that proclaim the gospel should live of the gospel." (1 Cor. 9: 14.) Again, the Holy Spirit commands: "But let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things." (Gal. 6: 6.)

Churches should be active in upholding the hands of those who minister to them in spiritual things. After a faithful minister of the gospel has made sacrifices, after he has tolled and labored for the salvation of souls, as little as the church should expect to do is to communicate unto him in temporal things. It requires a high degree of talent and much strength of character to go from place to place, and from house to house, bearing the precious news of salvation to a lost and ruined race. The Founder of the New Testament church is the greatest evangelist the world has ever known. After John was cast into prison, Christ went into Galllee preaching the gospel. He never lost an opportunity to lift up the fallen, to heal diseases, and to show sinners the way of life. When John sent to know if he were the Prophet that should come, he sent word back by the messengers; "The blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, and the dead are raised up, and the poor have good tidings preached to them."

The great need of the hour is not money, but consecrated lives. With more consecration and devotion to the cause of Christ, it will not be difficult to secure the money that is necessary to evangelize the world. Just think of it! A city with a population of nearly three hundred thousand people, and yet not a single evangelist of the church of Christ devoting all his time to preaching the gospel in it! Not one who is going from house to house and telling the glad story, as did the early Christians, who "went everywhere preaching the word." Every congregation of disciples should be not only evangelical, but also evangelistic. Every congregation of disciples that is loyal to the Head of the church must make sacrifices in order to obey the command to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. As was the great Evangelist, so every evangelist must go and preach the gospel to the poor, to the rich, to the high, to the low, to the cultured, and to the Ignorant. As did the great Evangelist, so must the evangelists of to-day be ready to suffer trials and to endure the scoffs and frowns of the world. He must not be afraid of criticism. The salvation of the world will never come so long as churches sit with folded hands and do nothing, Churches must save themselves by saving others. It is not possible for any one to be Christlike who does not tell others the story of the cross and who does not endure the heat and the burden of the day in order to bring people into the church of Christ. Until the church is fired with zeal, until it is moved with a holy determination to bring others to Christ, it will never do the work for which God intended it. As small as the church is in Denver, fire it with the holy zeal which should characterize every local church of Christ, and the kingdom of God in Denver will go forward by leaps and bounds.

If the truth in its simplicity is to be brought to the people of Denver in order that they may be saved by it, it is necessary for the church in Denver to make sacrifices in order to preach the gospel to them. They cannot be saved without the gospel, since God has ordained that men shall be saved through the preaching of the gospel of Christ. I believe that the few scattered disciples in Denver are ready to make a more vigorous effort in the future than has been made in the past for the conversion of the world. With this in view, it would be well for the churches throughout the country to help support a first-class evangelist in Denver. I have confidence to believe that the churches will do this, provided we can find the evangelist to do the work. But as it was in the days of Christ, even so it is now. It is very difficult to find the man who is ready to practice the self-denial that this field requires, and who is well qualified by the knowledge and love of the truth and the ability to tell the truth that is required in this field in order to perfect an efficient evangelization in Denver and the surrounding territory.

Christ is still saying to his disciples, as he did of old:
"The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his barvest." (Matt. 9: 37, 38,) Who is ready to undertake this field? The call is not for the man who does not believe in the power of prayer, who is seeking to make a record for himself, and who is always ready for a scrap instead of preaching the gospel of Christ in its simple purity. The call is for the man who loves the truth, who believes in its power and efficiency, and who believes that the fervent prayer of a righteous man is heard and answered. Denver is a great field for such an evangelist.

As most of the people in Colorado live in cities, it is necessary to labor especially in the cities rather than in the rural districts. In many of the older States, as the cities were built up from the rural districts, it was very important and essential to preach in the rural districts. People who were converted in the country moved to the cities and built up the churches there. The order seems to be reversed in Colorado. People move from the cities into the country—at least, some of them do—and build up the churches in the rural districts.

I shall have more to say on the work in Colorado in my next article.

True Education.

BY E. A. E.

The Russellville Messenger, Russellville, Ky., in the issue of October 9, current year, asks to be allowed to express its opinion "as to the high schools of our land." In doing this it says things worthy of the consideration of other schools. Note the following:

That there has been much progress made in methods of education during the past decade or two, no observing and thinking person will deny; but it is also an incontrovertible fact that many innovations have crept into modern educational institutions which tend toward the mental and moral deterioration of the youth of the country.

In some respects it were better, perhaps, to go back to some of the customs of the "old field school;" to the days when the schoolmaster ruled with a firm hand and applied the birch when it was needed.

Nowadays discipline in schools is not sufficiently looked after, and too little stress is put on systematic study.

Baseball, football, and basketball and glee clubs occupy the minds of our young men in school, and mental attainments seem to be of secondary consideration.

We have drifted away from the time "when mind, not muscle, was the boast of Yale," and intellectual pigmies instead of intellectual giants are in the main being turned out by our educational institutions.

The young man who goes off to college or university and gets into the "popular swim;" who gets to running around with the ball clubs; who gets into the habit of parting his hair in the middle and pasting his foretops down on his forehead; of smoking cigarettes and "inhaling in strong smoke, doncher know;" of wearing ultra fashlonable clothes, and using villainous slang and "cuss" words of modern schooldom, is almost sure to turn out to be a mental nonentity and a moral monstrosity, or land in an insane asylum or a reformatory.

There are at least a few first principles to which we should go back in matters of education,

The worthy editor of the Messenger will find that many thoughtful men and women throughout the whole land deprecate the evils in schools, which he mentions, and long for improvements. The most serious charge is that many things in schools "tend toward mental and moral deterioration of the youth of the country." The trouble and sin of all this is that the youth of the country will never learn the difference. They will be brought up to think that the chief end of their existence is to become football players. baseball players, acrobats, trained soldiers; to make money; to gratify fleshly justs and worldly ambitions. Many parents are to blame, because they seek such things for their children. To have a graceful body and to dance well is with many mothers and girls far more than a welltrained mind and cultured intellect, the beautiful graces of the Christian life, and the "meek and quiet spirit. which is in the sight of God of great price." The sphere and mission of woman, as set forth by her Creator, are ignored, if not mocked, and the education of many boys is to make them refined and cultured and intellectual

The same is true of religious education and training in the churches. The real self-denial, mortification of animal lusts and passions, the crucifixion of the flesh, and living soberly and righteously and godly in this present world, serving others, obeying the gospel of Christ, and worshiping God in spirit and truth "as it is written" in the New Testament, are not heard from many pulpits now. Something modern, something popular, something to please the asthetic taste of refined ungodliness, something to suit the conceptions of the worldlywise, some new religion of worldliness, some benevolent schemes and religious organizations of men, the glory of man instead of the glory of God and his Son and his church, are themes of the pulpit of to-day. From such preaching how long will it take people to learn the will of God? It is the will of God that "all men be saved and come to the knowledge of the truth;" from such preaching how long will all men be in coming to the knowledge of the truth? The word of God is truth-"thy word is truth." (John 17: 17.) All faithful preachers heed Paul's charge to "preach the word" and determine with him in the midst of all the wisdom and learning of the world to "know nothing, Jesus Christ, and him crucified." (1 Cor. 2: 3.) All know that for the last few years many preachers many, too, who claim to take the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice and to speak where it speaks and to be slient where it is silent-have preached almost everything except "Christ, and him crucified," "the gospel of Christ," "the word of God." It is distressing to think that unless the youth of the country, in independence and in their own interest in their soul's salvation, read the Bible thoughtfully for themselves and learn therefrom the will of God, they can never come to the knowledge of the truth, and never know what the truth is. They are not, as a rule, taught the Bible in the home; they are not taught it in school; they are not taught or urged to read it from the pulpits. Much they learn in some schools is undermining of the faith of the Bible. The Bible is the standard. Why theorize, philosophize, deduct conclusions, and decide in the wisdom of the world that some federation or union of religious denominations is best, when Jesus declared almost two thousand years ago that all who believe on him through the gospel should be one, even as he and God are one? Is man wiser than God? The question of "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" was settled by the Lord from the beginning. Man's wisdom has always been in opposition to God's wisdom. In the wisdom of God, the world by its wisdom cannot know God. And when the wisdom of the world forms some huge, organic religious union, it will be contrary to the wisdom and church of God. Why reason and moralize and speculate and conclude that it is best not to lie, to steal, to kill, to commit adultery, etc., when God directly says, "Thou shalt not kill," "Thou shalt not commit adultery," "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor," and all through the New Testament condemns lying, dishonesty, worldliness, and wickedness?

Let the order be reversed. Teach the Bible in homes, in schools, from the pulpits, and every way in churches. Let the Bible, with all its God-ordained principles of honesty, truthfulness, industry, economy, self-control, morality, righteousness, and submission in all things to God, be taught in all schools as the chief textbook and the greatest book in the world.

Will Christian parents and right-thinking parents who are not Christians continue to build up and maintain schools in which their children are daily trained in the wrong principles of life?

Some good people are trying to build up schools in which the Bible, with all correct views and principles and work of life, is taught daily as a textbook. It is strange that many thoughtful and Christian people will give more to almost anything else than to such schools. Yet, some are seeing this and rallying to such schools.

A QUESTION I CANNOT ANSWER.

Brother Elam: Our teacher in to-day's lesson, taken from the Advanced Quarterly, set forth the idea that, when a Christian dies, he ascends immediately to Jesus and will not have to await the judgment; also, that there is no such place as Paradise since Jesus came. Please give a thorough explanation of Luke 16: 19-31, and the lesson taught from the story of the rich man and Lazarus.

What difference does it make? "It is appointed unto men once to die, and after this cometh judgment." (Heb. 9: 27.) None will escape "the righteous judgment of God." The New Testament clearly and abundantly teaches that all-saints and sinners-must appear " before the judgment seat of Christ; that each one may receive the things done in the body, according to what he hath done, whether it be good or bad." (1 Cor. 5: 10.) The deeds according to which all will be judged are acceptance of Christ and a patient continuance in well-doing in him, seeking for honor and glory and Immortality, or rejection of Christ, disobedience to the truth, and a life of unrighteousness. (Rom. 2: 1-11.) It is enough to know the righteous will be rightcous still and happy forever, while the wicked will remain unrighteous still and in everlasting torment. Death ends the state of probation; next come judgment and destiny, Why contend over the state of the dead between death and the judgment? Were I to take either position, I would have a controversy on my hands, the end of which would bring no satisfaction. Whatever God does with both the righteous and the wicked after death is perfectly right and just, and a contention over that cannot change God's course. Besides, to decide the question either way cannot change man's eternal destiny.

Brethren, of course, can express themselves in regard to what they think the Scriptures teach on this subject, but contentions over it can do no good. From some things Paul says, were there nothing else on the subject, we might conclude that the righteous now, when they die, go into the immediate presence of God. (See 2 Cor. 4: 16 to 5; 10.) He places Paradise in heaven. (2 Cor. 12: 4.) But we read of Hades, into which the rich man went and where Jesus' soul was not left. (Acts 2: 27, 31.) Jesus' soul was not in torment and the rich man was not in Paradise. Lazarus was in Abraham's bosom, or Paradise, and the rich man in torment. Lazarus was in conscious happiness and the rich man in conscious torment. Lazarus is happy still, and the rich man is in torment still. Thus they will continue forever. There is no passing from one place to the other-no chance after death to get out of "the hell of fire." Moses and Elljah came to Jesus on the mount of transfiguration and were recognized and talked with Jesus. The angel said to John on Patmos, "I am a fellow servant with thee and with thy brethren that hold the testimony of Jesus" (Rev. 19: 10), "and with them that keep the words of this book" (Rev. 22: 8). Under the Old Testament or the New Testament there was this state of conscious existence and happiness and glory, or conscious existence of misery and woe, whether in Hades then or heaven now (if Paradise has been removed to heaven). with the coming fact of the judgment before all. So what is the difference?

The main point in the case of the rich man and Lazarus is Christ's teaching against the love of money. He spoke this against the Pharisees, "who were lovers of money." (Luke 16: 14-17.) "The love of money is a root of all kinds of evil," grasping after which and coveting which will drown men in destruction and perdition. (1 Tim. 6: 9, 10.) Covetousness is idolatry. (Col. 3: 5; Eph. 5: 5.) The Pharisees would split hairs in theory, but neglect the weightier matters of the law, and were lost. We may do the same and suffer the same consequences.

CONTINUE TO CONTRIBUTE TO THE DAVID LIPSCOMB COLLEGE.

In a statement not long since I mentioned the fact that a widow and her daughter in the Union congregation, Sumner County, Tenn., gave, one, a hundred dollars to the Fanning Orphan School, and, the other, a hundred dollars to David Lipscomb College, and that the widow had given sometime previous to this fifty dollars to David Lipscomb College. I am glad to say I was mistaken in this last amount, which, too, was a hundred instead of fifty dollars.

Several in this congregation have given to these schools, and others intend to do so.

Brethren and friends are giving cheerfully to these schools. I am pleased to say that none complain or raise objection; but all who are able—and almost all are able to give something—gladly contribute more or less.

This work needs help now. Read the letter we send you.

Send all contributions to H. Leo Boles, David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn.

If you habitually permit evil things to have their right of way through you or lodging with you, remember that in God's sight you are here equally guilty with those that indulge in evil acts, because you are withheld, not by your fear of Him, but by your desire to maintain your position among men.—F. B. Meyer.

A Christless Thanksgiving.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

The Ryman Auditorium was packed with people. The audience was estimated at seven thousand. The day being national Thanksgiving Day, the service was Nashville's Thanksgiving service

A Christian minister, pastor of one of the Christian churches of the town, presided with appropriate impartiality, dignity, and modesty.

Various interesting addresses were delivered-every one of them a good one, likewise a brief one, as every address on all such occasions should be. Prayers were offered, and gratitude to God, the gracious Giver of all good, was repeatedly expressed-a repetition to which none had right or reason to object.

Jews and Gentiles, believers and unbelievers, saints and sinners, participated in the exercises. Not one objectionable word was uttered.

Do you say God was certainly glorified in that Thanksgiving service? Nay, verily, he was neither glorified, gratifled, nor honored; for Christ, his only begotten Son, was absolutely ignored, notwithstanding the Bible teaches us to giorify God in the name "Christian," and the Spirit says to Christians: "Whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through bim." (Col. 3: 17.)

Why was Christ so carefully and completely ignored then and there? I do not know; but, presumably, because a Jewish rabbi was on the rostrum and many Jews were in the audience.

Do you say that justified the ignoring of Christ? Unquestionably not by Christians. If there had been an atheist on the rostrum and atheists in the audience, would that have justified believers in ignoring God?

I am a friend of the Jews, and am neither afraid nor ashamed to be their champion before any audience. I preach about the Jews sometimes, but no mortal has ever heard me speak unkindly or disrespectfully of them. They are a marvelous people, providentially preserved and perpetuated for a purpose, notwithstanding no mortal may know what that purpose is.

But, if there were a billion Jews on earth, every one of them a worthy member of the universal brotherhood-the brotherhood of man-that could not justify Christians in ignoring Christ.

Some of us used to sing:

"Ashamed of Jesus! Rather, far, Let evening blush to own a star."

"Whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him."

Am I to thank God for everything? Am I to thank him for bereavement, for pain, for poverty, for toil? Be still, my soul; thou hast misread the message. It is not to give thanks for everything, but to give thanks in everything. -Matheson.

Be Strong.

Be strong! We are not here to play, to dream, to drift. We have hard work to do, and loads to lift. Shun not the struggle, face it, 'tis God's gift.

Be strong! Say not the days are evil-who's to blame? And fold thy hands and acquiesce—O, shame! Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong! It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong, How hard the battle goes, the day how long; Faint not, fight on!-to-morrow comes the song

PRICE OF MUSIC BOOKS.

On account of the great advance in materials and labor, it becomes absolutely necessary to make an advance in the price of all our music books. The cost of production has advanced much more than we have increased the price of books. The advance will take effect on and after September 15, 1919,

Below we give revised price list.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

Another Worthy Example.

Something was said on this page, recently, about the good work accomplished by Sister Vina Hooper at Mc-Gregor, Ga. We have another example worthy of emulation. The following words have just been received from Sister Evelyn Long, in which she clearly shows the yearning of her soul for the extension of the cause of Christ and her deep appreciation for answering her appeal for an effort to be made at Milledgeville, Ga.:

Brother Hall: Dr. Parks could not officially excuse me from my English recitation, consequently I did not get to see you and Mrs. Walton. It hurts me very, very much because I cannot begin to express my appreciation and thanks to you for your untiring labor in this meeting. You surely have built a wonderful foundation here. If the apparent achievements are accomplished, do you think arrangements can possibly be made for us to meet each Lord's day? Undoubtedly this is essential in order to live the highest and richest type of life. Remember me kindly to the Macon congregation, and thank them eyer so much for their assistance.

In the same letter there was inclosed a note to Brother Coleman and his nephew, Brother Roland Sockwell, who helped the meeting. I give the following from this note:

From the depths of a poor, little, rich soul, I thank you, Brother Coleman, and your nephew, for the efforts you have put forth here in behalf of the establishment of a congregation. I sincerely trust that some day each one of us shall see the desired results of these honest en-I thank each of you again and again for a debt

I have taken the liberty to give these brief statements from our sister's letter without her consent, but to which she cannot object because of the purpose for which I am

The Milledgeville meeting, in many respects, was unlike any that I have ever before conducted. We won the wellwishes, love, and esteem of all who attended, so far as we were able to learn. Doubtless there are prejudiced people in Milledgeville, many of them, but they did not attend our meeting. A Methodist revival was soon started, but, in spite of this, our crowds increased till the last service. The first week was hard on us because of the difficulty in getting people to realize that the church of Christ, as represented by us, is not "a Holy Roller affair" or something close akin to it. But the people soon got their eyes open, and such appreciation of what we teach, after they did begin to listen, I have never seen before. A very fine old man lived in ten feet of the spot on which our tent was stretched. He was somewhat perturbed at first for fear we would bother his sleeping habits; so, too, felt his wife and daughter; but we only bothered in that he got so interested that he could not stay away or else sit on the back steps and listen. We left him a grateful friend of ours. I would be glad to tell of the many interesting incidents that came up, showing the people's appreciation of a plea free of sectarian prejudice and bigotry, and in which it was shown that we to-day, if we will, can be as the early Christians were.

The one mistake in this meeting was our inability to stay longer. In the first place, we were so overwhelmed with calls that it looked like we could not get there this year, but the fact that the appeal had been before me for nearly a year made me determined to try. The meeting was begun too late in the fall for tent work. Nothing short of a month should ever be given to an effort in a new place like Milledgeville; and here we were strained to get in even two weeks at this place, and this made possible by pushing forward the time for other promises. But, as our sister says, a foundation has been laid, and there is but one thing that remains, and that is to follow it up. The meeting was by far better than my first three-weeks' meeting in Atlanta and my first two-weeks' work in Macon. The Hardie's Chapel and Macon congregations must continue this work so well begun. Atlanta promises to stand with them and see it through.

It is a thing that should cause the men to stop and think when we speak of the many congregations started by some worthy sister. The Hardie's Chapel congregation was started by the faithfulness of Sister Mollie Hardie. That congregation helped much in establishing the cause in Macon; and when the work here was begun, the one soul that took the leading part was our Sister Lyde Walton, in whose home I am now stopping during this short revival. The work here has grown by leaps and bounds. It has been just five years since my first meeting was conducted in Macon, which then seemed to me practically a failure. But now we have a house and lot of our own paid for, and a membership unexcelled in loyalty. They have pledged twelve hundred dollars a year toward the support of a man in this field, and more if necessary. They are strongly assisted by Brethren C. E. Coleman and E. H. tjams on Lord's days, but a man giving his whole time to this section is needed. This we must have as soon as a sultable man can be found.

The meeting here is just six days old, and we have baptized two and one has taken a stand with us from the Baptists. Last night (October 19) we had the largest crowd that we have ever had at this place. The meeting started without even an announcement in the paper. The members were told that we expected them to let it be known, and practically every member is at work. This meeting must also close too soon. May the Lord give us more laborers in this field. 0 0 0

Thoughts for Meditation.

The question was raised on this page, recently, why every soul will not feel and work as Sister Vina Hooper and Sister Evelyn Long are working. Christ said to his disciples: "Ye are the salt of the earth." Can this be said of you, my brother, my sister? It can be said of all who act as these two sisters are doing, and many more whose names I could call; but why not all who claim to be Christians so show forth their love for souls and their Interest in the cause Christ died to establish? If you want to be really happy, this you must do. There is a joy and peace that is indescribable that comes to the soul who so loves that it has to work, has to pray, has to be ever interested in his or her efforts to extend the cause of Christ by giving dying souls the bread of life. Paul says we are joined to Christ "that we might bring forth fruit unto God." (Rom. 7: 4.) Are we bringing forth this fruit? Where is the promise to that man or woman who claims to be a Christian, but who is not in the soul-winning business?

We cannot conceive of a heaven in which Christ would be content to dwell unless there was to be found in it the counterpart of other things he loved on earth-the wild flowers and the birds, the children playing, friends gathered round the common board, the fellowship of labor and of love, and the quiet hour on the mountain side at dawn. -B. H. Streeter.

No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, gentle, pure, and good, without the world being better for it, without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness .- Phillips

Mrs. H. L. Byrd, Route 1, Patterson, Ark., wishes an explanation of Rom. 7: 9, which is: "And I was alive apart from the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died."

Paul was alive without the law—that is, he was unconscious of condemnation. His conscience did not trouble him. As touching the right which is of the law, he was blameless. (Phil, 3: 6.) But when the commandment came, he was made to realize that a heart service was required, as well as outward service. Then the dormant sin was brought to life. That is what he means when he says "sin revived." With the restraints of the law came the realization that he was a sinner. Being convicted of sin, he died. With the coming of the law, he found that instead of keeping the commandments, which had a promise of life, he had broken them, and hence he realized that he was under condemnation.

Brother D. F. Bell, of Neosho, Mo., inquires for light on Matt. 16: 19. He asks: "Did Peter use more than one key? If so, when? Did not the other apostles use the keys?" The passage reads: "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

There is no special significance to be attached to the fact that we have "keys" in the plural number. The word here in the original is in both singular and plural form, The same word is elsewhere translated "key," as in Rev. 9: 1, which says: "To whom was given the key of the bottomless pit." Keys are figurative and are used in the New Testament to denote power and authority of various kinds. Peter was given the power to make known the terms of admission into the kingdom of God. This he did on Pentecost and also at the household of Cornelius. Other apostles were also given the same authority and power. All that is here said to Peter is said to the other apostles, as is clear from Matt. 18: 18: "Verily I say unto you, What things seever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and what things soever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Authority is given the apostles also in John 20; 22, 23; "And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them. Receive ye the Holy Spirit: whoseever sins ye forgive, they are forgiven unto them; whosesoever sins ye retain, they are retained." Hence, the other apostles, as well as Peter. used the key or keys to the kingdom of heaven. They did this during their lives. o o o

After very heartily commending the Gospel Advocate as a religious journal, Brother W. S. Brown, of Paris, Tenn., inquires to know the meaning of (1) Rom. 4; 17; (2) 1 Cor. 1: 28. The first passage reads: "(As it is written, A father of many nations have I made thee) before him whom he believed, even God, who giveth life to the dead, and calleth the things that are not, as though they were." The latter passage reads: "And the base things of the world, and the things that are despised, did God choose, yea and the things that are not, that he might bring to naught the things that are." (1 Cor. 1: 28.)

(1) The promise to which reference is made is found in Gen. 17: 5. The name of Abram, which means "a father," was changed to Abraham, which means "father of a multitude." Abraham believed that God had the power to give life to the dead and that he would give new life to his aged body and that of his wife, Sarah. Isaac, the seed of promise, was born to them after they were past age. The connection, reading especially verses 18-21, shows this to be clearly the meaning.

(2) By "base things of the world" the Holy Spirit means those of lowly birth; and "the things that are despised" refers to those that people of the world would consider of no value, things and persons which count for nothing in their estimation. God chooses the weak things of the world to bring to nothing the pagan religions, governments, and civilization. These were all overthrown through the influence of the gospel. The apostles, who were not worldly-wise men and who were regarded as illiterate and unlearned fishermen, did a wonderful work, the most marvelous that has ever been performed by men, and a work which brought to naught the then existing state of things.

Brother George W. Graves, Route 12, Nashville, Tenn., presents the following: "A brother in the church, about seventy years old, who had lost his wife and son by death, obtains a license and marries his son's wife. The church withdrew fellowship from him. Is he lawfully and scripturally married? Did this church do right? Does this case come under 1 Cor. 5?"

The facts presented are very unusual and the course pursued by the old man is unnatural and shocking, If there were nothing in the Bible condemning such a course, a sense of decency and propriety should have prevented the father from marrying the widow of his son. Any one who has proper respect for decency will not be guilty of such conduct. It is clear that neither the law of Moses nor the law of Christ permits such a marriage. Deut. 22: 30 reads: "A man shall not take his father's wife, and shall not uncover his father's skirt." It is clear that if a son would not be allowed to take his father's wife, a father would not be permitted to take his son's wife. It would be far more probable that a son would desire to marry his stepmother than that a father would wish to marry his daughter-in-law. A man in his old age may have married a young wife, and on his dying his son by a former wife may desire to espouse his stepmother. This the law prohibits, and, as I understand, the same law prohibits a father from marrying his son's widow. The law of Moses condemns in unmistakable terms the father who cohabits with his daughter-in-law. It says: "And if a man lie with his daughter-in-law, both of them shall surely be put to death: they have wrought confusion, their blood shall be upon them." (Lev. 20: 12.) The law of Christ requires a greater degree of purity than Moses' law, and the Holy Spirit condemns such vicious conduct under the new dispensation in forceful language, as is evident from the fifth chapter of First Corinthians. In this chapter we learn that a son had married his father's wife. The Holy Spirit commanded the Corinthian church, when gathered together in the name of the Lord Jesus, "to deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." It is natural to conclude that the son had married the wife of his deceased father-not his own mother, but his stepmotherbeing a widow; and such a crime, the text says, was not so much as named among the Gentiles-that is, it was not permitted or accredited by them, for it certainly did often occur. The best writers among the Gentiles branded such an act as superlatively infamous. If it were vicious and Infamous then, it is equally so now. The law of the land prohibits such marriages, so the parties are not legally married. The church did right in withdrawing fellowship

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindergartners, issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

The Story of the Clock.

"Come, Betty," sald mother, "put away your dolls. It Is time for bed."

"O, mamma," pleaded Betty, "I don't want to go to bed vet. I'm not a bit sleepy."

"But, Betty, look at the clock. The hands are pointing to seven, and you know that is bedtime."

"Horrid old clocks! I wish they'd all stop and never ge again," muttered Betty, as she tucked Matilda Jane and Josephine into the carriage in which they slept.

"Tick-tock, tick-tock," sounded the diningroom clock in the night, and in the quietness its voice seemed to grow louder and louder.

"What's the matter?" inquired the kitchen clock from its shelf. "You seem to be angry."

Didn't you hear what Betty said before she went to bed? I think I'll stop and see how she likes it."

"Well, if you stop, I'll stop," answered the kitchen

The tall grandfather's clock in the hall paused to listen to the conversation. "If they are both going to stop, I'll stop, too. I am quite tired ticking day and night and would like a rest."

Betty opened her eyes. How quiet the house was! But it was quite light and must be time to get up. She tiptoed into mother's room. Mother was wide awake, but still in bed. "Isn't it time to get up?" asked Betty.

"I don't know, dear; the clocks have all stopped."

Betty dressed and ran downstairs. No breakfast ready. "You see I didn't know what time it was. All the clocks have stopped," explained Hannah.

When Betty had finished her breakfast, she put on her hat and ran down the street to call for her little chum, Pearl, to go to kindergarten.

"Why, Betty, you are very late," said Pearl's mother. "Pearl has been gone some time."

Betty hurried down the street. Not a child in sight. No one on the playground. She crept up under the window and listened, then turned and ran home, the tears trickling down her cheeks.

"I'm sorry, little daughter," said mother; "but I had no way of telling the time."

"Do you think it's anywhere near one o'clock?" asked Betty, a few hours later. "You know, Uncle James premised me a ride if I came at one."

"You'd better run over and see," said mother,

But alas for poor Betty! She ran around the corner just in time to see Uncle James disappear in the distance.

"Betty, Betty, wake up!" and Betty opened her eyes to find mother standing by her bedside.

She sat up and listened intently, then threw her arms around mother's neck, exclaiming: "O, I'm so glad it was only a dream!"

And before she ate her breakfast, Betty crept over to the clock and whispered: "I'm sorry I called you names. I'll never do it again." 0 0 0

"Be Not Afraid."

Some things cannot be put to writing by ordinary men. It takes the hand of genius to draw word pictures of the choicest things in life. So the shortcomings in the following story are those of the writer and not of the story

It was at a Western camp. The captain of a certain detachment, he might be called the "Beloved Captain," was always first in the hearts of his men. They looked to him as a father and his slightest wish was command. It was a habit of his to go over to the barracks at the close of each day and ask the men if there was anything they wanted. The things asked for usually were forthcoming.

Shortly after returning from one of these calls a private in the company came in to see the captain. He wanted something, and he knew the captain could fix it for him. His story has been heard before. At home it was his custom to kneel in prayer each night before retiring. The change of life to the barracks did not alter the custom. His act of kneeling was the signal for cat calls and boots. But he was not to be denied and kept up his custom despite them. So it occurred to him to ask the captain if he could not put a stop to the boots and the cat calls. There was some right way in which it could be done, the private thought.

The captain dismissed him and told him to return in an hour. When the private had gone, the captain prayed a while in quiet. He was ready when the private returned.

"You say your prayers to-night as usual, Just after taps has blown," said the captain. "Everything will be all right."

The private saluted and was gone, When taps came, he was doubtful, but slipped out of his clothes resolved to ablde by his captain's decision. He was ready to kneel for the evening prayer when the door of the barracks opened and the captain entered. Chatter ceased and some of the men came to attention. The captain walked over to the private's bunk.

"Kneel," he said, softly.

And as the private knelt the captain knelt beside him. There was a strange quiet in the barracks as these two offered up sllent thanks to the living God .- Selected.

A New Leaf.

He came to my desk with a quivering lip. The lesson was done—
"Dear teacher, I want a new leaf," he said,
"I have spoiled this one."

In place of the leaf, so stained and blotted, gave him a new one, all unspotted, And into his sad eyes smiled: De better new, my child.

I went to the throne with a quivering soul, The old year was gone; "Dear Father, hast thou a new leaf for me?

have spolled this one.

He look the old leaf, stained and blotted. And gave me a new one, all unspotted, And into my sad heart smiled; Do better now, my child."

CHURCH NEWS

Missourl.

Monett, October 27.—We closed a good meeting at Starr, near Neosho, last night. There were good crowds despite the wheat sowing and the rain. There was one addition—a noble young man who teaches. The church there man who teaches. The church there has some splendid characters, Breth-ren Sears and Capps are wise and careful overseers of the flock. The church did me much good. I hope they can say so much for me.—O. E. Billingsley.

Oklahoma.

Francis, October 24.—The meeting at Saint Paul closed at the water last Monday. It was a great meeting in many respects. We were rained out the first week, but had a good hearing the last week. Thirteen were baptized the last week. Thirteen were baptized and three were restored to fellowship. The brethren remembered the "high cost of living" and gave me a good support. I have been asked to return next year. There are some fine brethren at Saint Paul. May God bless them in their efforts for good. I am now in a meeting at Francis. I go now in a meeting at Francis. I go from here to a place near Sallisaw for a mission meeting.—Will W. Slater.

Tennessee.

Columbia, October 28.—Since last report have had two mission meetings with five additions. Giving some special attention to the Tennessee Orphans' Home farm for a while now. F. C. Sowell, Cookeville, October 25.—I began a meeting at Lynchburg on September 20 and continued it for one week. Nine were baptized and three were reclaimed. We had good attendance night and day. I went from there to Boomville and preached for five days, and one was reclaimed. I began a meeting at McMinhville on the first Lord's day in October and continued it for two weeks and a half. The people there seem to be anxious for the gospel. We had a crowded house every night. Pourteen were baptized and two were reclaimed.—G. H. Johnson.

Texas.

Fort Worth, October 24,-The meeting at Southside-Central Church is doing very well, considering the hin-drance of lots of rain and the fact that my wife is very sick. She has had a return of epileptic fits and has had several hard ones since the meeting began, and it keeps me from preaching much, besides the time it takes to care for her. There has been one con-fession of faults, and we are hoping for a good meeting yet. Several preachers are helping with their pres-ence and prayers. The meeting will continue till Sunday week.—Tice Elkins.

West Virginia.

Waverly, October 20 .- Our meeting with the new congregation at Naish Spring was one week old last Lord's-day evening; and notwithstanding the fact that it rained almost constantly last week, we had meeting every night, with reasonably good attendance each night, and the meeting continues with increasing Interest. Yesterday we had three confessions and baptisms. At night the house was filled to overflowing, and three took membership with us by statement. The field there is ripe for the harvest. A more inviting field for mission work cannot be found anywhere, and the church is fully alive to the work of the Lord and the needs of the people. A bright future is before the church there, and we confidently expect it to become one of the foremost congregations in all of the work and worship of the church of God in all this region of country. The Legitimate Limits of Religious Discussion.

Is the Christian faith an inquiry or a declaration, a human philosophy or a divine revelation? We may be properly modest and hesitant as to our own apprehension or attainments in the truth, but as to the truth Itself, explicitly stated in the Word, we have no right to speak with anything else than boldness and assurance. I remember, in my earlier ministry, in the presence of my elders, to have spoken somewhat tentatively, perhaps tactfully, regarding certain established principles of the Christian religion; and Miss Anna Kenwood, then a parishiener, remembering well her father's strong and fruitful ministry, said to me (I shall never forget it: it had its abiding effect): "Pastor, pronounce the word." Since that day, whenever I find a clear declaration of God's word, I do not question it nor even discuss it. I pronounce it, "Thus saith the Lord," Am I right?"

It is a popular tiding, in certain circles, and in some men's Bible classes, for example, to start out on the idea that there is nothing settled, all things are open for debate, and we can legitimately question the very foundations of our faith. We are, so to speak, to begin de novo, and. like the class in the German gymnasium, listen calmly while the astute professor profoundly announces, "We will now proceed to construct God!"

I will admit that for the purpose of getting at the false arguments of our opponents we may well go aside for a season to acquaint ourselves with false religions and false philosophies; but this is the dominion of the seminary and the clinic and should be entered upon with exceeding carefulness, and by those well established in the faith, But I do not believe it belongs to the ordinary Bible class. For one thing, there is not time for it, and this is not the place for it.

I have been abroad a bit, among men's classes, which are growing more popular daily, and happily so, and I have heard much said about the province and program of such a wholesome annex to the church and Sunday school, and I note two tendencies manifest here and there to which I beg leave to enter a conscientious demurrer.

One is the broad discussion of evcrything under the sun except the Sunday-school lesson. Civic improvement, social ethics, industrial economics, street cleaning, and domestic hygiene -all good; but how can we find time and place for them in the short half hour of a Sunday morning or afternoon? And then, all the time, is the imperative call of the Scripture lesson. The notion has gone abroad that men are not interested in the Biblethey are opposed to it; and weakly, unwisely, we yield to this gratuitous idea, and substitute some primer of ethics or treatise on sociology. Nay, we do not well. Men attend at first when the announcement of some such new experiment is made, and they take their assigned parts in the discussion, but, at the same time, the one thing they want and that awakes and strikes them as nothing else will is the virile truth of that old Book for which the Sunday school is called together, the everlasting word of God. I have seen them return to it from long wanderings, with a sigh of relief and with a glow of soul satisfaction that clearly evidences that the train is back on its own through track and now it is going to get somewhere; and one of its holy destinations is the salvation of an Immertal soul, which never comes apart from a devout acceptance and application of the sacred

But there is another ill tendency observable abroad-it is the critical disparagement or questioning of the established doctrines of the Bible. If the former tendency is to irrelevancy. this is to irreverence; for doubt of God is always irreverent.

I have heard, under supposedly Christian auspices, the authenticity of the text questioned, the trustworthiness of the author disparaged, and, indeed, an Interrogation point put to the Book itself, and the inspiration of the sacred Scriptures. I have heard the delty and virgin birth of Jesus aspersed, the miraculous and the supernatural in the word set aside, and the personality and power of the Holy Chost belittled. And all this in the name of "broadness" and "openmindedness." But does broadness always mean vagueness, and open-mindedness uncertainty? There surely are some things we may know and count upon. Twice two is four, and the periphery of a circle is everywhere equidistant from the center; this is established truth and basis of reckoning in mathematics; and that Christ is God, and his word and works divine, is no less indubitably and lastingly true in religion. We have some stakes driven home to stay, and Hebrews tells us we are to leave the principles of the doctrine of Christ (leave them fixed), and "go on to perfection" (Heb. 6: 1), which is maturity of faith.

"Perfection." Paul deprecates that kind of religion that is " ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth" (2 Tim. 3: 7), and in the same connection says to Tiniothy: "Continue thou [press forward] in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of " (2 Tim. 3: 14). This is what makes one "wlse unto salvation," not sprigs and saplings driven and bent by every wind of doctrine, but strong, mature trees of the forest-men like unto Paul when he says to the Corinthians; "I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand." (1 Cor. 15: 1.) If we are to have men for the pattern who will stand, there must be a clear, positive, declarative note in the prevalent preaching and teaching of to-day.-J. W. Weddell, in Journal and Messenger.

The Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear

Some five years ago, a prominent citizer of South Carolina, visiting New York or important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mor-listinctive features, ease and comfort, had suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from the South, knowing how welcome such a shoe would be in his part of the country, urged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, dura-hility and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has surung up in the South for EzWear shoes. sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three rundered per cent. The distributor, Mr. T. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn N. Brooks.

William Harrison Brooks was born on February 7, 1841, and died on the afternoon of July 12, 1919. Brooks obeyed the gespel many years ago. He was a charter member of the Fairview church of Christ. He was strong in "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." Brother Brooks was twice married, both of his companions having gone on before. He is survived by six children, two brothers, and three sisters. The writer conducted funeral services at the home place in the presence of many relatives and friends. The remains were lald to rest in the community burying ground to await the resurrection morn. Emmert G. Creacy.

Greer.

Little Menry, baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Greer, spent only a few days with us and then went away to be with Jesus. He was too young to even dream of the toils of life and the consequences of sin; too young to realize the happiness awaiting such innocence and purity as his; too young to know and appreciate his place in the home; too young to know how hard it would be for father and mother, brother and sister, to see him go, and yet old enough to be loved while here and be missed while he is away. It was our earth'y task to give him up and his eternal blessing to be given up. Lord, help us to be as little children and enter with him into the eternal city. He was born on April 28, 1917, and departed this life on July 18, 1919. Funeral services were held by the writer in the presence of a host of sympathizing friends: G. F. Grans.

Anderson.

Amanda H. Anderson, wife of Dr. J. M. Anderson, of Fayetteville, Tenn., was born in South Carolina on April 25, 1842; put on Christ at the age of fifteen years, and continued stead-fastly in the apostles' doctrine, in fellowship, in breaking of bread, and in prayers; was married to Dr. Anderson in June, 1861, to which union seven children were born, five of whom are still living; and died on July 29, 1919, in the triumphs of Christian faith, hope, and charity. What a volume is written by this life of faithfulness in every station she filled! As wife she every station she filled! As wife, she was devoted and true, walking hand in hand and heart to heart with her husband for fifty-eight years, sharing the joys and shadows of a sweet and blessed companionship of a life of congenial soul union. As mother, she consecrated herself to her children, and no adverse wind could chill her mother love. As a result of her abiding faith and trustful service to God. her husband and children followed her husband and children followed her into the church. What a blessing and joy it will be, "when the roll is called up yonder," to be able to say, "Here, Lord, am I, and here are the ones thou gavest me," and then to hear the Savior say: "Well done, good and faithful over servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things." a few things; . . . enter thou into the joys of thy Lord!" She was a keeper at home, a helpmeet for her husband, and a proper example and guide for her household, and her home was an Eden of love. Thus she ful-filled the royal law for Christian womanhood. To God be all praise for his goodness to men. T. C. LITTLE.

The Koishikawa (Tokyo) Lot Fund.

Readers of the Gospel Advocate will recall a short article recently published explaining why eight hundred dollars of this fund had to be returned to the donor. They will also recall that it was recommended that this amount be immediately reimbursed. We take it that no loyal disciple of the Lord is willing that the cause in Japan should suffer disappointment or a serious setback. Too much good is being done by our faithful native workers over there. We cannot, we must not, fail them. During the period of the war this appeal was allowed to rest, but we should double our efforts now to take care of that need and avail ourselves of this God-given opportunity of doing good and helping to advance his kingdom in this promising field beyond the Pacific. So far pledges and gifts are: From three brothers, Detroit, Mich., $50 each-$150; J. M. McCaleb, $50; C. G. I am now in a good meeting near Ames.-J. W. Ballard.

Tennessee.

Decherd, October 30 -- I closed good meeting at Smyrna Church, in Bledsoe County, with one baptized. The rainy weather kept us from hav-ing meeting every night. I stayed eight days, preached three nights and two Lord's days, and closed with a large crowd. I am at home this week on account of illness of my wife. Smallpox being in the town where I was to have begun a meeting, I thought it best to postpone the meeting for the present. My protractedmeeting work is nearing a close for this year. This has been a very successful year with me. I have assisted one hundred and seventy-seven persons in their obedience to the Master's commands. One new meetinghouse is being built and will soon be ready to have services in. -R. E. L. Taylor, Priestly, $2. We are very thankful for this help. But our church building fund is not growing very rapidly; and yet this is a worthy work, according to the testimony of our very best men. There is no foolishess connected with this work. It is solid. Of course, all are not growing now as rapidly as we should on account of not having a house of worship; but positively we cannot begin our church building until we can collect five hundred dollars more money from outside sources. The Lark's Wonderful Song.

You who have heard a skylark sing may not realize what a wonderful songster that small bird is. The voiume of sound produced by the skylark is most wonderful. The lark ascends until it looks no larger than a midge, and can with difficulty be seen by the unaided eye, and yet every note will be clearly audible to persons who are fully half a mile from the nest over which the bird utters its song. Moreover, it never ceases to sing for a moment, a feat which seems wonderful to us human beings, who find that a song of six or seven minutes in length, though interspersed with rests and pauses, is more than trying. Even a practiced public speaker, though he can pause at the end of each sentence, finds the applause of the audience a very welcome relief. Moreover, the singer and speaker need to use no exertion save exercising their voices. Yet the bird will pour out a continuous song of nearly twenty minutes in length, and all the time has to support itself in the air by the constant use of its wings.- Exchange.

Mormonism Unveiled.

BY R. B. NEAL.

"Mormonism Unveiled; or a faithful account of that singular imposition and delusion, from its rise to the present time; with sketches of the characters of the propagators and a full detail of the manner in which the Golden Bible was brought before the world. To which are added inquiries into the probability that the historical part of the said Bible was written by one Solomon Spaiding, more than twenty years ago, and by him intended to have been published as a romance. By E. D. Howe. Painesville, Ohio. Printed and published by the author. 1834."

We feel authorized to say, from the perusal which we have bestowed upon this work, that the title-page is no false flag or deceiful label, but that it is as honest a face as is generally to be met before a preface in any of the publications of the present day. Great labor, and care, and solicitude have been bestowed by its author upon the question of the "Golden Bible," and the facts involved in the history of this most impudent and atheistical affair.

No man, not already duped, who has the half of five grains of common sense, can read this narrative of Mormonism without being converted to the belief that Joseph Smith and his colleagues in the plot are a band of the most unprincipled deceivers that ever disgraced any age or nation, and that his followers are a set of superlative fanatics. This book furnishes demonstration not to be questioned of two singular problems in the history of man. (1) That fanaticism is a mental distemper, more incurable than the leprosy; and (2) that the more glaring and shameless the absurdity, the more determined and irreclaims.

ble its dupes,

Perhaps we were too sanguine when we thought that the fable was so barefaced that it could not stand upon its legs or palms in the face of day and the American people; but it appears that there are some as great knaves, some as great simpletons, and some as dark spots in the United States as in any land on earth; and therefore it is necessary that this book of facts and good arguments should be thrown in the way of this deceived and deceiving band of impostors. I wish it could pioneer the way of the Mormons; for it once the delusion is tasted, there is little or no hope. The waters of Lethe, in their fabled powers of superfaction, were not half so efficient as the infatuations of Mormonism. The humane part of the community are, and I doubt not will feel, themselves indebted to Mr. Howe for the labor and expense incurred by him in the detection of this fraud.—Alexander Campbell, Bethany, Va., 1835. (Millennial Harbinger, page 44.)

The italics are Alexander Campbell's. Incidentally, this notice retutes the claim that some "elders" make that Mr. Campbell was in sympathy with their doctrine.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless saits which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In twenty-four hours they strain from it five hundred grains of acid and waste; so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water; you can't drink too much. Also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespeonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which every one should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Progress of the Work at St. Louis, Mo.

Our lot has been purchased and the first payment of two hundred dollars made on it. We also have in the treasury for the building fund about two hundred dollars at this time. These funds were provided by the contributions of our own congregation of fifty dollars per month and cash contributions received from others outside of St. Louis.

Of the two hundred and thirty monthly contributors of one dollar each for thirty-six months that have been asked for outside of St. Louis, thirty-one have been secured; therefore, we yet lack one hundred and ninety-nine having the required number. This is a good start, however, and we are very grateful to all those who have contributed. The result is very encouraging, and it would be most gratifying to see sufficient responses at this time to enable us to report that this part of the work is completed. There is no doubt but that this will be done if only those interested in seeing the cause well established in St. Louis, who read this report, will respond promptly. "Baptists vs. Campbellites." No. 13. BY M. S. MASON.

On page 16 Mr. Bandy says he is glad he belongs to a church over eightcen hundred years old, a church named "Baptist," and that can trace successsion back to the days of Christ's personal ministry. Instead, Mr. Bandy ought to both be sorry and ashamed that he belongs to a church that the Bible nowhere mentions, the succession of which is repudiated by its leading historians, and whose own historians place it as originating no earlier than 1607-fifteen hundred and seventy-four years too late to be the church that Christ established.

Mr. Bandy begins his defense of the Baptist Church by quoting Dan. 2: 44; Luke 1: 23, 33; Isa. 9: 6, 7; Matt. 16: 18; 28: 20. He then assumes that God is talking about modern Baptists and the Missionary Baptist Church, and even quotes Alexander Campbell to the effect that Baptists "have existed from the apostolic age to the present time." Baptist historians say a Baptist in history is one who contends for immersion as baptism and baptism of adults or believers only. This would include us and many others who advocate doctrines that Mr. Bandy in nowise believes; and none of these represent modern Baptists. What Mr. Bandy must show is a continuation of that institution known as the Missionary Baptist Church from the days of Christ and the apostles down to the present time. Anything else is futile to his cause.

He quotes J. Newton Brown as saying: "The origin of the Baptists is hid." Mr. Bandy said in the beginning of his little tract that the Baptist Church and Baptists originated at a certain delinite place. Now he says it was hid. We shall pass with only a casual mention of the fact that Mr. Vedder and Mr. Armitage and Mr. Benedict do not say their origin is hid, but tell just when the Baptists started. Mr. Bandy refers to Rev. 12, where the church went into the wilderness; Mr. Brown was talking about the "origin" being hid. Mr. Bandy is talking from this reference, If it means anything at all, about the Baptists being hid, not the origin. But, after all, what does it all prove for modern Baptists? Nothing; for that is not what Is considered in church history.

Mr. Bandy, however, in his referonce to J. Newton Brown, rulned himself in quoting Rev. 12, for that shows the origin of Baptistism is in the Protestant Reformation and not in the beginning. The true church is not a product of the Reformation. It existed from the days of Christ and the apostles. It was simply restored in the Reformation. But, in order to appropriate some Catholic testimony, he places Baptist origin in 355 A.D. It would be really funny to list all the Baptist claims on the establishment of the Baptist Church and see how they vary.

AVOID INFLUENZA AND PNEUMONIA By Using THE ORIGINAL by good for Inflammation and Congo-Reduces Fover Helps the Heart. Send-able. Satisfaction guarantees! Gowan GOWANS Rub-91-On

Mr. Bandy, on page 19, offers one hundred dollars to the man who will show the origin of Baptists this side of Christ and his apostles. If Mr. Bandy will say "Baptist Church" or state it in such a way as to denote religious individuals like the modern Baptists and an organization like the present Missionary Baptist Church, and make his offer, I will take him up, because I know I could get it, and in these days of high cost of living I need the money. But with him and his crowd. I will give him or them a hundred dollars to show where they existed prior to the seventeenth century. So far as his proposition is concerned with the real meaning of "Baptist," I could make the same offer on our claims. It all hangs on what a Baptist in history is. He defines the church of Christ as a visible organization of baptized believers. This would put the church back in the days of John the Baptist, when Jesus said, after John was dead, "I will balld my church." I am glad, however, that Mr. Bandy does preach the truth on the visible and invisible church, and shows they are a unit. He also speaks of some other characteristics that the real church should have, I am only sorry that he does not belong to that church.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Keep Her Locks Dark, Clossy, Beautiful

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streamed, and faded hair is grand-mother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a vouthful appearance is of the greatest advan-

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, Improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popuiar, because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten you've out or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

Is Satan a Personal Being?

SY J. J. VANHOUTEN.

Words spring forth from an intellectual power. Where there is no intellect, there can be no words. Words denote intellect, and intellect demonstrates a personality. God said to Moses: "I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob" (Ex. 3: 6.) Back of the words uttered to Moses was Intelligence, and back of the intelligence was personality; hence, a real, personal God. David said: "He made known his ways unto Moses, his acts unto the children of men." (Ps. 103; 7.) And we have the testimony; therefore, we believe in a God. The same man gave an account of a certain person whom John calls "the dovil," (Rev. 20: 2.) That old Serpent, called "Satan," the Devil, talked to Eve, and said: "Ye shall not surely die." (Gen. 3: 4.) Back of the words spoken to Eve was intelligence, and back of the intelligence was personulity; hence, a personal devit;

About the year 1871 a big preacher said that his fleshly body was all the soul that he had, and it weighed two hundred and forty pounds, and that the devil was dead. I wanted to know if he was his administrator; if not, what right he had to carry out his will. That man made much fun about a big snake in the garden of Eden. I asked why he did not make run of the idea of a God who talked to Moses from the burning bash. No writer of the Bible ever tried to prove by argument that there was a God; nelther did any one try to prove that there was a devil. All of the writers wrote as though every man on earth knew that there was a God and also a devil. Yet men have said to me! "If there is a devil, show him to me, and then I will believe." No. my friend; that would be knowledge and not faith. We have the testimony; but do you believe that restimony? Then another question arises: "If there is a devil, who created him? God, it is said, created all things. As angels are spiritual, intelligent beings. it is no more unreasonable for one of God's angels to rebel against him, and thus make himself a devil, than it is for a child to rebel against its earthly parent or for a Christian to violate God's law and become a staner. Once, Jesus, in speaking of the davil, said that "he abode not in the truth" and that he was "a murderer from the beginning." (John 8: 44.) Yes, he sought the life of the human race and became the author of death when, by lying, he deceived Eve. The statement of Jesus implies that he was once in the truth, but would not abide there, so made himself a devil (a rebellious one) by rebellion!

Isalah, in describing the wickedness of the king of Babylon, drops the subject, then rises in the most sublime prophetic oratory and personates the devil in his effort to supersede the Almighty and secure his place and the honor, (See Isa, 14: 12-14.) Please read it. It is a fearful thing to undertake to be as great as the "Most High" and try to rule the universe. Lucifer tried it and falled.

Incompleteness.

How universal is the sense of incompleteness in human experience! Youth, maturity, and even old age are ever reaching for the something else which they crave for the hour, which seems to be the essential need of the year, while we occasionally meet natures who are bending every force of their working years to the end of attaining some great ambition, failing in which, life to them is but a fraction.-Robert Carroll.

The Noblest Duties.

The noblest use to which we can devote our energies is to labor for the benefit of others. The world soon forgets those who have lived for themselves alone, but remembers with affection and veneration all who have endeavored to benefit mankind. Albert Pike, the Mason, has truly said: "The dead govern." This truly great man devoted a life to the cause of the Scottish Rite, knowing that the efforts of his labors would in due time unify the thoughts of men, that their united action would produce great results for the freeing of mankind from superstitious fears and servile subserviency, and result in universal liberty, equality, and fraternity - Exchange.

Report for July, August, and September.

BY LILLIE CYPERT.

I wish to express my sincere gratitude to the faithful ones who have so very liberally given to my support during the last three months; but most of all do I thank the dear Heavenly Father for these friends and his wonderful goodness to us unworthy creatures.

I realize more and more the reality of the infallible promise found in Matt. 6: 33. Since July I have had to bear all the expenses of the home alone, which made my expenses much heavier. Too, since expecting others to be here during the winter, I have spent more than I would have for my own individual use in laying up provisions for the winter. But the Lord, seeing these things, has moved upon the hearts of his people to supply the extra and more. But since the household things have been ordered to be sold and it has become necessary to redeem them, if possible, in order to keep the home, I can see why the extra was given. It is so good to serve a God who knows. Besides the above-mentioned expenses, I support the Zoshigaya Sunday-school work still and give six yen (three dollars) per month to the Otsuka work.

Receipts for the last quarter were as follows: From Miss Straiton, (July 23) $90, (September 10) $90, (September 26) $90; David Lipscomb College, through Brother King, (July 24) $22.50. Total, $292.50. In hand, about $75. May the Lord abundantly bless and prosper every contributor according to his wisdom and bounty.

Perhaps a little concerning my present program might be of interest. I am still in the Bishop-Vincent mission home, and since July 10 have been alone; so home responsibilities take a good lot of my time. I have thought many times to give up the home in order to save time and expense; but since others are expecting to come soon and will need the home, I have been advised by all to hold the fort a little longer. I continue my work with the Zoshigaya Sunday school. Since I was too busy last year, and had other hindrances, too. I did not take the second year's language course. This year the way is just a little open and I am in school again trying to take advantage of the opportunity, as a knowledge of the language is indispensable when it comes to one's efficiency and usefulness. These are the main points in my program at present. There are others I hope to mention later.

Pray for me that I may be found faithful. Of course, we always expect your prayers for the Lord's work in this part of his vineyard.

Acknowledgment.

The Great Commission.

BY TICE ELKINS.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." How shall we go? God never did say how, and Jesus could not say how without saying more than he was authorized to say (John 12: 49); but we are at liberty to walk, or to ride horseback, train, boat, aëroplane, or automobile. And there is not a man on earth who has a right to tell us to "go" one way in preference to another way. The main thing is to get there-to go-to carry the life-saving message to every creature. But who should go? Apostles, evangelists, teachers, Christians, and every one who has found the truth should help another to find it

How shall we teach? Well, if God has said to teach in any certain way, then that is the way, and the only way, to do it. There are several ways -by your life, tongue, pen, printed page. But since the divine Lawgiver never gave any specific way to teach, then we have a right to teach any way we can. If he did give any certain way, then no other way will please God, and the one who knows what that way is should tell it.

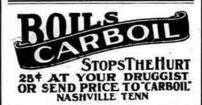

How far should we go? Has God a foreign field and a domestic field? I have never read of it in the Bible. Some do not believe in foreign mis-They are not in agreement with the apostles, for they believed in such to the extent that they started mission work that resulted in the people of America (even those who do not believe in missions) having the gospel. But what will God do with the heathen who never hears the gospel? I know not, nor am I so concerned about that question as I am about this one: "What will he do with the church which has the gospel and will not do all in their power to spread it afar?" And this one: "What will he do with me, if I have the truth and withhold it from those who have it not?"

There is no promise in the Bible for one who does not obey, but the word is plain on the subject that those who hear and obey shall be saved. Do we love the Lord and the souls of men enough to tell them the glad news that saved us?

God's word is like leaven in meal, but it must be placed in the meal. Did you ever know a can of baking powder to jump in the meal barrel and stir itself up ready for use? O, no! Well, then, did you ever know the gospel to go and hunt up a sinner and convert him without human agency? Jesus said, "leaven which a woman took and put in meal;" and in the parable of the mustard seed he said, "a man took it, and sowed it in his garden." Thus showing that in the spreading forth of his gospel there was work for both men and women to do in order that the world might learn of the Savior. Brethren, awake! The day is far spent, and the night is at hand; whatsoever your hand finds to do, do with your might, for there will be no further opportunity after you have gone to the grave.

Give us a man, young or old, high or low, on whom we know we can thoroughly depend, who will stand firm when others fall; in such a one there is a fragment of the Rock of Ages.-Dean Stanley.

Edifying as the Need May Be

Be old, the Sower Went Forth to Sow."

There is a certain analogy, the Savior caches, between the vegetable and the spiritual kingdom. There is, and there ought to be, a bond of sympathy between the real sower and the one who sows in shadow and in spirit. There is a likeness of the real grain which the real sower scatters to the hidden grain of truth and goodness which shall be disclosed hereafter. There is a similarity in the ascending growth of the one to the spiritual development of the other. "First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear." Let us watch the sower as he moves across the field and hurls the grain far and wide; and, to make the Savior's lesson both practical and timely, let us ask a few childlike questions, with the prayer that God may treat us as his children and give us a helpful understanding of the Savior's kingdom.

The sower, we observe, has a banket. What is in that basket? The seed. And in the spiritual analogy, what, pray, does the seed represent? The great Teacher makes haste to reply: "The seed is the word of God." Here is a vital principle which, if we will only recognize and appropriate, will save us a great deal of confusion in our religious bellef. The seed of all salvation and Christian living, the seed of all righteousness and acceptable worship in the church of the living God, is his word. We should not close our eyes to this vital principle. It matters not how great a value men may set upon good conduct outside of the church; it matters not what encombums of praise the world may bestow upon the infidels who make a display of their goodness. God's law is that "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." The man who walks by faith is the only one who does God's will and pleases him. That man may make mistakes; he may sometimes yield to temptation; he may stumble and fall; but II he keeps before him the high ideal he has chosen, his faith will increase, his courage will grow stronger, his burdens will grow less, and his hope will become brighter and brighter.

The seed, when hurled from the sower's hand, falls into the ground. This means the Savior would teach us that the word of God cannot do its work, cannot fulfill its mission, cannot bring forth its harvest of souls, unless it falls into the soil of the human heart, and that soil is prepared for its reception. A preacher who is a glose observer can usually tell just where the seed is falling, and the great pity of it is that many times, just for the looks of the thing and for the sake of a sermon, he must sow the seed when he knows it is falling into barren ground.

Again, the hearer's heart is not in the best condition unless it is ready to receive all of the seed. To that extent he is prejudiced, and no prejudiced heart is wholly receptive. Arnot says: "The botanist splits the seed and discourses on its curious characteristics, while the simple husbandman cats and sows and sows and cats." Just so there are two ways of treating the gospel. The critic dissects it and raises the question about the structure of the whole and the relation of its parts; and when he is done with his argument, he is done with the gospel. He neither eats nor sows. He neither lives on it himself nor spreads it for the good of others. The true disciple of Jesus, hungering for rightcousness, takes the seed whole. To him it is bread for to-day and seed for to-morrow's supply. To him "every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness." (2 Tim. 2: 16.)

How is it that the Bible is read for weeks and months with so little profit? How is it that this word is often preached with great ability and with great earnestness. and yet it never gets beyond the outward ear of some who sit and listen to it? The answer is simple enough. Bread and meat are of no use to us unless inwardly received. There may be abundance of corn in our country and ample provisions in our larders; but if we do not feed upon them, we will starve. So it is with the word of God. We may have the Bible on our shelves; we may see it every day; we may even read it with our eyes; and yet our souls may not be nourished. We may starve in the midst of plenty. We cannot afford to be optimistic of our religious status merely because there are more Bibles printed and distributed this year than ever before or because those Indefatigable workers, the Gideons, have succeeded in placing them in nearly every hotel in this country. God's word must sink below the surface. It must not only come into our homes and into our hetels, but must be received into our hearts. David says: "The entrance of thy word giveth light," He mays again; "Thy word have I hid in my heart." Paul says: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly." Such words as "entrance," "hid," and "dwell" are not dubious terms. Their meaning is unmistakable. They show that the best thing in the world is to dwell in the best place in the world for the best purpose in the world.

The seed the sower casts is the product of seed. Whether corn or oats or wheat, any kind and every kind of seed unmixed will produce the same barvest in any and in every clime. The necessary and logical inference is that the word of God will teach the same thing to every people in every land. There is, then, absolutely no excuse for the various religious denominations existing in the world, which are teaching radically different doctrines. There may be a difference in quantity on account of climatic and other conditions, but there should never be a difference in quality. The gospel of Jesus Christ preached in China should make the same sort of a convert that it makes when preached in America. Conditions of salvation are the same for town and country that they are for the great metropolis. Why, then, should we make a distinction between a city preacher and a country preacher? Why should one be esteemed above the other? It is our observation that the preachers who are doing the best work in the cities are those who were faithful in their work in the country.

The great majority of the readers of the Gospel Advocate live in the country and in villages and towns. Without belittling the efforts of our friends in the large cities, we are constrained to say that without the moral and financial support of the country people we could not be able to conduct the paper along its present useful lines. We'are proud of our country friends. We doff our cap to the Christian farmer, to the busy husbandman who "waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth."

"See him, the Sower, the giant of the fields:
The lease of all the kingdoms is from him;
Before him kings and princes shall give way;
The tree he plants shall spread and bloom and bear
When all the empires shall be in their graves.
Behold the earth-stained demigod of toil,
Bearing the ungarnered harvest in his arms,
The eternal herald, the Sower of the Seed."

The Price of Your Child.

BY MORGAN H. CARTER.

A LETTER TO BELMONT CHURCH AND COMMENTS TO PARENTS EVERYWHERE.

In the dedication of a college building Horace Mann once said: "If this building, costing one hundred thousand dollars, results in saving one boy, it is thoroughly worth while." After the address a friend asked the great educator if he did not think his statement somewhat extravagant. Mr. Mann replied: "No, not if it is my boy that is saved."

Your boy or your girl is worth the best training, the best environment, and the best education that you can possibly provide.

The most valuable asset of a country is its children and its youth. They are the joy of the present and the hope of the future.

To save the whole life is our problem. Education—real, true education—is the leading out; the harmonious development of all the good and noble power of the physical, intellectual, and spiritual life. No training is complete that does not bring Christ Into the mind and heart of the student and help him to develop a Christlike character, loyal to God and serviceable to humanity. The only life worth while is one of sacrifice, service, and suffering in His name for the Father's glory and man's salvation—a life which shall in some measure make the world better and deliver some from hatred, darkness, and death into the perfect love, light, and life of fellowship with Christ as sons of God.

To make this type of training efficient and helpful is our purpose in undertaking to improve the Bible classes of Belmont Church and the whole program of activities. We must have the best possible teachers who live the Christ life, have an excellent knowledge of God's word, and are able to teach efficiently. We want interested, enthusiastic, achieving classes. (Ps. 119.) We shall see that the lessons are helpful, adapted, and scriptural. (Deut, 6: 4-10.)

We have an excellent new brick building, well located, splendidly heated and lighted. We greatly need partitions, maps, charts, blackboards, and necessary class-room equipment. (None too good.) It will increase the efficiency of our boys and girls. Who can mention a better investment? We expect your cooperation in getting these immediately, for it will make the work count for far more in the life of your child and the lives of every boy and girl, man and woman, who comes to Belmont, and eventually, quicker than many think, its influence will be effectively felt in other churches in Nashville, outside of Nashville, and even in distant lands.

· Teachers filled with the spirit of Christ, a church living the Christ life, and graded, helpful, interesting, scriptural lessons cannot be other than a blessing to all who will receive the saving message.

Separate rooms will greatly reduce the noise, increase the attention, make possible the excellent use of well-adapted songs, provide convenient blackboards and charts on the walls, add to the attendance, augment the interest, and multiply the efficiency and usefulness of the work.

Sunday is our day to raise the necessary funds. It is a hard drive. Each of us should do our best, giving till we feel good, for it is worth while.

The program for Bible study and morning worship is full of good things. Bring your friends, and come early.

This letter went out to all Belmont members. The drive was made. More than enough money to cover the bids for the partitions at that time was raised. Additional funds will be forthcoming as needed, because we believe in God and love our boys and girls and want them taught God's word. Christ must be brought into their lives. He alone can save. He is the best Friend of us all, and he knows the struggles of childhood, youth, and manhood. For there was a time when he grew "in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men." This is a wonderful history of a perfect development.

To-day our public schools are aiming at good citizenship, and that is good as far as it goes, but we cannot afford to stop there. If our boys and girls are to be genuine, whole-souled Christians, they must have training which they are not getting in the public schools. The Christian homes and the church must supply this teaching in example and systematic, continuous instruction. If we neglect this matter, we have failed in one of the most pressing, urgent duties of our life, and may lose our life eternally as a consequence of our neglecting that of those intrusted to our care. Then, consider the wonderful joy of helping to train and save those who have not been reared in Christian homes. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

Your child is precious in your sight; but oftentimes parents seem to forget that their own child is also the child of society and the child of God. In training boys and girls, these facts must be kept in mind, for children must live their own lives. They are all different. No two people in the whole world are exactly alike. God gave them life; he made them different; they are his children, and responsible to him for the way they live. Your teaching will largely determine whether or not God will have the privilege of saving his child in heaven or be forced to condemn that one whom you have spoiled to a place of eternal punishment.

Therefore, our training should be of such a type that our children will learn to respect laws and have a character within our homes which will not make it necessary for society to lay its heavy hand of law upon them after they leave their homes, nor for God to finally exclude them from the joy and blessedness of his presence because of your failure to prepare them to meet their God.

The immorality and infidelity in schools with which I am personally acquainted cause me to plead with parents, teachers, elders, deacons, and evangelists everywhere to make a renewed effort to stimulate a greatly increased interest in Bible study, prayer, Christlike living, and a passion for saving souls.

I am profoundly convinced that every Christian home must train its children more thoroughly in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and that every church must awake to its urgent duty and splendid privilege of becoming a light in its community and a wide-awake, enthusiastic center for the religious life of all its young people, lest the truth perish in the hearts of our people and our children be lost in darkness and sin. I am not a pessimist; I am an optimist of the deepest stripe. I believe many are doing great things by God's grace. But we are not yet touching millions whom we should reach, and we are not touching the touched hard enough. "What profit is it to us, if we gain the whole world and lose our own souls?"

The barvest indeed is white, but the laborers are far too few. Let us pray the Lord of the harvest to send laborers, and then set about to train our own boys and girls and those of our neighbors to go forth into all the world for Christ, "Hear, O Israel: Jehovah our God is one Jehovah: and thou shalt love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might." "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." "On these two commandments the whole law hangeth, and the prophets." "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be upon thy heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thy hand, and they shalt be for frontlets between thine eyes. And thou shalt write them upon the doorposts of thy house, and upon thy gates." "This do, and thou shalt live." (See Deut. 6: 4-9; Matt. 22: 37-40; Mark 12: 28-31; Luke 10: 26-37.)

The Missing Link.

BY C. M. STUBBLEFIELD.

"I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool." (John 5: 7:)

Why I have ventured to entitle this essay "The Missing Link" is, I think, sufficiently obvious from a mere reading of the text. The Incident from which it is taken is familiar to all Bible readers. The scene is laid near the sheep market in the city of Jerusalem. The outstanding feature is a pool, arched over in such a way as to make five porches. In the porches, packing them to the limit, lies a multitude of impotent folk. Among them are to be found the blind, the halt, and the withered. The purpose of this concourse of derelicts is made quite clear from the record. They seek healing. Battered, bruised, broken they may be, but the passion of life is not dead in any of them. Men of many trials and many fallures, the hope has not yet left them that they may be healed. The instinct for life dies hard, and there was just a chance that they might be healed; for, once in a while, the erstwhile placid pool was "trobuled," and in that troubling there was healing. Some may not be prepared to give full acceptance to the miraculous element of this healing, but to me it is a matter of history. Some may look upon it as an allegory; the picture, for our purpose, remains the same. On the one hand, you have a man who lies helpless in his need; on the other, a divine providence to meet that need; still the man remains unhealed because there is "the missing link"—some one to put him into the pool when the water is "troubled."

Such is the picture in the story. I want to lift that picture up. I would have the reader see behind this man with his need the deep soul need of all men everywhere; and behind the pool of healing the divine provision of the gospel of Christ to meet that need, available, not at stated times, but at all times and for all men. Moreover, I would have you see in the absence of the man to bring the one into touch with the other a link missing to-day to a much larger extent than many realize. The first proposition, then, to which attention is directed is:

In the healing of the soul, God uses a human link. Should one seek proof of the proposition, it lies thick on the ground. Herein lies the reason for the call of Moses and all the prophets. Take, for instance, the great commission with which the gospel according to Matthew closes: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." Surely the deductions to be drawn from such a statement are obvious. He has all power, but he proposes to exercise it through them. The gospel of Christ is to be made known unto all men through men. "I am not ashamed of the gospel," said Paul: "for it is the power of God unto salvation." It is the power that God exerts for the salvation of men. But this gospel is to be preached by men. "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?" This shows that the human link is a part of God's plan for the saving of men.

But if we pass from the general to particular incidents, the proof is more striking still. Take the story of the conversion of Cornelius. He was "a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always." The time has come for his prayers to be answered. And how does God supply the need for this man's soul? By sending Peter from Joppa to Cesarea. He uses a human link. Could God have supplied that need in some other way? could. Why, then, did he not do it? The facts, not whys, are what concern us. He used a human link in this man's salvation. Or take the story of how the gospel first passed into Africa, recorded in the eighth chapter of Acts. The eunuch of Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, has been up to Jerusalem to worship God in accordance with the law of Moses, not knowing that that law had come to an end. He is returning in his chariot, and is reading his Bible That he has reached the limit of his powers to understand what he reads we gather from the conversation between him and Philip. He would know more, but cannot. What steps does God take to further enlighten him? He sends Philip "toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza." When Philip came to the road, he found the man whom God would have him instruct; and once more the link between the need of the soul and the divine provision for that need is found, and that link is the human link. Finally, on this point, take the manner in which the gospel was introduced into Europe, as recorded in the sixteenth chapter of Acts. Here is a small prayer meeting, composed of women meeting outside the wall of the city of Philippi. God has heard their prayer and the time to answer it has come. But how does he proceed to grant their request? By a series of incidents the great apostle Paul is brought into their midst. Ged directed his journey both by land and sea, as he had directed the flight of the angel from heaven and timed the steps of Phillip with reference to the movements of the eunuch's chariot.

Nothing seems clearer, from these things, than that God uses the human link when he supplies the need of those who are helpless. Hence we look to our second proposi-

Humanity needs just such a link as God supplies. And to begin with, it is the very essence of the story that the man was so very much in need of healing that he was wholly unable to obtain it for himself. I do not mean apart from the pool. I mean, even granted the pool, he was so very needy that all the pool stood for could not be his apart from help from his fellow man. Said he: "I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool." Just as there was healing for the man who was a paralytic, if only he could get into the house where Jesus was teaching, and for the man who was lame from his mother's womb, if only he was put in the way as the disciples passed, so there was healing for this man, if only he could get into the pool first after the water was "troubled" by the angel. But in each case the need was so great that they could not help themselves. The paralytic needed some one to break up the roof and let him down into the room where Jesus was teaching; the man lame from his mother's womb needed some one to carry him daily to the temple gate; and this man needed some one to help him down into the pool. However adequate the divine provision for their need, their need was so great that they could not avail themselves of it without this human link.

Now, to my mind, that thing is paralleled to-day. There are men and women everywhere who so much need all that is provided them in Christ that they will not seek it unless aided to do so by their fellows. They are as flabby in will as he was helpless in body. They are so much in need of the church that they never darken its door. They need the gospel so very much that they never go where it is preached.

From whatever source we got the idea that all we had to do to meet the spiritual needs of a community was to erect houses for worship and maintain public worship in them, it certainly did not come out of the New Testament. In this book the stitiude of the people toward the gospel and toward Christ has been clearly defined from the first. To the appeal of both, men are nonresponsive. The light may shine, but the darkness comprehends it not. Or they are indifferent, as was the city of Jerusalem when Christ, weeping over it, said: "How often would I have gathered thy children together, . . . and ye would not!" Or they are definitely hostile, as is foreshadowed in his words." In the world ye shall have tribulation."

Today, as ever, the hedges and the ditches may be full of the lame and the halt and the withered and the blind; yet they will not come in until they are importuned to do so by men who have been practiced in the art of loving compulsion. This nonresponsive indifference, this defiant hostility, has been observed by every thoughtful Christian. And what is the meaning of it? Not that these people do not need the gospel, but that their need is so great that they will not turn to it unless there comes the living link to bring them into touch with each other.

In the situation brought before us in the words of the text we have a problem set before the church, and its most direct solution. If it be asked, "How can the church deal best with the indifference, the prejudice that characterizes so many people?" the answer is simple. Let it be granted that such may be done by preaching, by literature, etc., it remains that these can be ignored—the former by a direct refusal to hear, and the latter by a refusal to read. But the man who refuses to go to church, who refuses to read what you give him in the way of tracts, cannot, if he would, ignore the man who hammers at the same anvil or works at the same bench or serves behind the same counter. How better can you break down the hopelessness of those who tell you that you cannot be a Christian, living where they live, and in the same age in which they live.

and in the same business and in the same community and under the same circumstances, than by showing them the Christian life? That the individual Christian should feel the value of the life he lives to-day is one of the greatest needs of the times. "Ye are an epistle of Christ, . . . read of all men." Men may refuse to read your tracts and books, but they cannot refuse to read you. As for the prejudice against religion, built up by those who have named the name of Christ, but do not depart from inliquity, surely the best way to undo that which has been done by the false is to show them the true. Therefore, let me, in conclusion, make this appeal to each one who reads;

Be such links. Do not the darkness and ignorance, the wretchedness and degredation of so many people make their appeal to you to, as far as in your power lies, be a link between them and their need and the God who can redeem them? They are in the dark; will you not let in the light? They wander aimlessly; will you not, by the grace of God, blaze a pathway through the jungles for their feet? They are weak and faint, "ready to die;" will you not, with something like divine compassion, bend over them and give them to drink of the wells of salvation? What we need is fighting men who ask no quarter and who give none, as they fight the unworthy and the untrue; during men who are prepared to enter the haunts of sin that they may break the bands which bind: compassional: men, willing to spend their lives if only some other may see the light and be free to follow it; Christian men who know Christ and all the riches that are in him, and who wish to bring all he is to their fellows who sit in the poverty of sin.

> Make me strong to smite, and gentle to heal, And quick to comfort and to bless, With lips that can harden into a "no" Or soften into a "yes."

> This be the word when I come to die:
> "He scorned the false, the mean;
> His strength to serve God's world was great,
> Because his soul was clean."

Causes for Man's Rejecting God. BY J. W. BRENTS.

Whatever else may be our ideas upon the sacred significance of life, there is at least one thing upon which all serious-minded people will agree; and that is, there is nothing more important in the moral order of things than man's acceptance or rejection of God. Were this all the life we have to live, or death be all the death to die, this fact would not be of such transcendent importance. But this life does not end all. Every living thing is crying out its evidence of a future life. Even the flowers of the field breathe upon the autumnal air their incense of thanksgiving because their Creator has given them the blessed assurance of another summer. If God Aimighty pleases to use his magic wand upon every tiny seed and causes them to break forth into another existence, surely he will not refuse this blessed hope from his offspring who are so much nearer and dearer and of more value to him. There is another life, because holy writ, the word of God, so teaches. Hear an inspired writer saying: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

There are, perhaps, many reasons why man has rejected and is still rejecting God, but we shall mention only a few. Forgetfulness was one of the causes which led Israel into apostasy. Hear the Psalmist: "Then believed they his words; they sang his praise. They soon forgot his works; they waited not for his counsel: but lusted exceedingly in the wilderness." "They soon forgot his works." The soul of man must feed upon something, and Satan is aware of this fact. He places before us food different to "the sincere milk of the word." We crave it; and inevitably there is created an unnatural and unsatisfied appetite, and so man forgets God and the very thought of him becomes to him distasteful. We are inclined to censure those Jews for their forgetfulness and for their "thinking scorn of that pleasant land," when so many times God flashed out the evidence of his divinity before them. See him right before their eyes plaguing Egypt. Go with them to the Red Sea and see another stupendous miracle performed. and hear them sing the song of Moses as though they were upon the very mountain top of faith: "Thy right hand, O Lord, is become glorious in power: thy right hand, O Lord, hath dashed in pieces the enemy." See them gathering manna sent from heaven and drinking from a stream that followed. Go to smoking, burning, trembling Sinal, so terrible that Moses said, "I exceedingly fear and quake;" and even before the last act of that marvelous scene has ended, see them forget the very One who had done so much for them and go away and dance around a golden calf. Let us not deceive ourselves by saying we could have done better than Israel. We might ask ourselves, "Are we doing better?" Our opportunities are in no sense to be compared with theirs. With opportunities come responsibilities. All these things happened as ensamplesyea, as lessons of warning. Do we not look into "the perfect law of liberty and become forgetful hearers, and not doers of the work? The prayer of Kipling should be the prayer of every soul to-day:

> "Lord God of hosts, be with as yet, Lest we forget, lest we forget."

Perhaps there is no greater reason, if it be a reason, than his becoming dissatisfied with the invisible. Man is inclined to doubt that which he cannot see. The invisible la dubious. It does not seem to satisfy him. The great mass of men act as though they believed that the things which are visible are all there is and that this present life is all there is to it. Paul's conception of this was just the reverse. He makes the invisible the real life. "For our light affliction, which is for the moment, worketh for us more and more exceedingly an eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." With Paul the invisible life was an entity, a reality. The invisible seems not to satisfy man, and he looks about him for some object which he can see, deify, and worship, Upon this principle Israel made the golden calf, and upon this same principle are all the myriads of millions of earth bowing themselves down before stocks and stones to-day, worshiping created things, which they can see, rather than the great Creator. "For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse; because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the uncorruptible God Into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things.

Another cause which allenates man from his Maker is evil associations. "The rotten apple truly spoils its companions." The world was destroyed once because "the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose." "And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth," and his decision was to destroy him because of this abominable practice. We may pass down the stream of Israelitish history; we may pass through the period of the judges to the golden age of Hebrew monarchy—to Solomon "in all his glory." He had been warned of Jehovah that if they should go back and cleave unto those wicked nations they would be snares and traps, and scourges in their sides, and thorns in their eyes, and that they should perish off this good land which God had given them. But, notwithstanding this fearful warning, the Bible tells us that he "loved many strange women, together with the daughter of Pharaoh, women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zidonians, and Hittites, of the nations concerning which God said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall not go in to them." And the fearful result was: "Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, and went not fully after the Lord, as did David his father." It is a fearful thing to think of Solomon doing these things; yet it is an awful lesson to us to-day. His associates were evil, and his heart strayed from God, who made him what he was. Better have no associates than evil ones. The evil influence which will be produced upon our lives will come between us and God and unfit us for doing service to him.

And, finally, "they thought scorn of that pleasant land." Thinking scorn of Christianity separates man from God. All false, vain, and ignorant religions should be scorned; but the true, never. The ignorant may scoff, the skeptic may ridicule, but the wise will never do this. The thinking minds of the world have trembled at the word of God. Daniel Webster said; "From the time that at my mother's feet, or on my mother's knee, I first learned to lisp verses from the sacred writings, they have been my daily study and vigilant contemplation. If there be anything in my style or thoughts to be commended, the credit is due to my kind parents in instilling into my mind an early love of the Scriptures." Mr. Gladstone, for many years Prime Minister of England, said: "Talk about the questions of the day; there is but one question, and that is the gospel. It can and will correct everything needing correction. All men at the head of great movements are Christian men. During the many years I was in the cabinet I was brought into association with sixty master minds, and all but five of them were Christians. My only hope for the world is in bringing the human mind into contact with Divine Revelation." It is, indeed, serious to "think scorn of that pleasant land" and to give no credence to the word of God. And yet there are multitudes who make light of Christlanity and of the Bible by which we are to live and without which we dare not die. We may do these things now, but there must come a day of reckoning. We may search the world around, and search out and follow Satan in all his wicked ways and multitudinous devices and schemes, but we will never find anything better for us than Christ and his scheme of redemption.

Shall We Forget?

Shall we forget, now victory has come, How frugally we gathered up each crumb In days of war-time need, with anxious care, That all our armies overseas should share The harvests of the land? Shall we make haste To take again the senseless ways of waste? When peace brings back the plenty which we crave, Shall we forget to save?

Shall we forget, now war is at an end, How lavishly and well we learned to spend in days of constant patriotic call. To use our treasure for the good of all? Shall we return to selfishness and greed, Regardless of humanity's great need? When peace has made it good to live, Shall we forget to give?

Shall we forget, now peace has been restored, How fervently we used to seek the Lord Through all the days of danger and distress, Implering him to succor and to bless? Shall we fall back to careless ways of old, Unmindful of the Love which doth enfold? When peace, sweet peace, has come to stay, Shall we forget to pray?

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. This paper is malled regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Gur rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The Restoration Congress and Missionary Convention at Cincinnati.

THE STORY OF SEVENTY YEARS.

BY M. C. K.

The week following October 13, 1919, in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, was a history-making week for the Restoration movement inaugurated by the Campbells in the early part of the nineteenth century. Moreover, the interesting history that was then and there made constitutes a significant and instructive coincidence with another period in the history of the same movement. This will become apparent in the light of facts now to be noted. We have not the space for details of the proceedings, but shall give some of the leading facts in connection with both the Congress and the Convention.

First of all, for the information of our readers, it is proper to state what the said Congress was and the purpose for which it was called together, which we give in the words of its friends and promoters: "This Congress is an assembly of Disciples of Christ called together to consider certain matters that are of special interest to the Restoration movement at the present time. It is a voluntary assembly met for a single session and having no desire or intention that looks to more permanent organization." The "certain matters that are of special interest" are the fact that some men in high official position in the missionary societies, with seemingly hosts of others in sympathy with them, have so far departed from the Restoration movement as to adopt practices completely subversive of its most vital principles and objects. Hence, among the resolutions passed by the Congress are the following:

Be it Resolved, That since certain among us are advo-cating and practicing "open membership" [the admission of persons to membership in churches on sprinkling for baptism.-Advocate Editorl, this Congress would express the conviction that such persons and churches have anostatized from the Restoration movement, and should be so regarded by the agencies that serve us, and by the brethren and sisters at large. That we pledge ourselves and our best abilities not only to loyalty to the clearly defined principles of the Restoration plea, but that we also pledge ourselves individually and collectively to an aggressive and united program which shall include: (a) Renewal on the widest possible scale of the New Testament evangelism, which is the crowning glory of the Restoration. (b) The repudiation of the materialistic philosophy which discredits the Scriptures. (c) The repudiation of methods of compromise which would substitute a variety of human creeds for the simple creed of the New Testament. That we beseech our various missionary agencies to employ n.en as their directing agents who are committed to an aggressive program in forwarding the Restoration plea and planting and fostering New Testament churches, rather than a program of compromise and experiment. earnestly beseech our Foreign Christian Missionary Society and Christian Woman's Board of Missions to heed the earnest and persistent plea of hosts of brethren and churches that they choose as our representatives on the foreign and home fields only those of unquestioned loyalty to the welldefined plea and principles of Disciples of Christ, including whole-hearted belief in the diety of Christ and the Scriptures as God's revealed word.

From these very significant resolutions we select three facts which will show our readers, as the Congress itself clearly pointed out, that the American Christian Missionary Society and the Foreign Christian Missionary Society have not only completely apostatized from the word of God, and have thus abandoned the fundamental principles and most cherished aims of the Restoration movement, but they have apostatized along three of the most vital and fundamental lines, any one of which is a complete subversion of the New Testament. These lines are as follows: (1) They have actually adopted the practice of "open membership," which means the admission of persons to membership in the churches on sprinkling for baptism, Shades of Campbell, Stone, Scott, Johnson, Franklin, Lard, McGarvey, Peter, and Paul! (2) They are loose in the employment of men as missionaries, not even refusing those who deny the deity of the Lord Jesus Christ. (3) Some of their leading men have embraced the principles of destructive criticism and deny the divine inspiration of the Scriptures. When we think of the united stand and unquestioned loyalty of the pioneers, and then think of the radical and far-reaching steps thus taken by their pretended successors, well may we adopt the exclamation over the fall of Cæsar: "O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!" How swift, how radical, how complete, and how far-reaching is this apostasy!

We are glad to record the fact that the Congress, composed of about two thousand persons, entered a loud and most vigorous protest against these departures; but when Its resolutions came before the Convention for indorsement by the latter body, it balked and there was great confusion. Though a sad one, this was a most significant indication. From the incomplete reports thus far made, it appears that the Convention was decidedly against the Congress resolutions; and, to make it appear that it had a valid reason for refusing to indorse the resolutions, it attempted to take shelter under the fact "that the several congregations of the church of Christ are subject to no superior authority," there being "no tribunal superior to the local congregation," as if any number of brethren anywhere could not indorse the resolutions if they wanted to, and so it merely "commended to the respectful consideration of" the local churches the said resolutions; but a motion is said to have prevailed to the effect that "in so far as the" Congress "resolutions do not require a definite creedal statement on the part of this Convention," it "heartily indorses and approves the resolutions in question." Even in this mild action, the Convention evidently saw a loophole through which it could escape from any positive commitment to the course pointed out by the resolutions. It is quite evident that the officials of the societies have no intention of changing their

We rejoice in the ringing resolutions adopted by the Congress; but, in so far as we may be able to reach its friends and promoters, we respectfully remind them that the germ out of which these radical and troublesome departures inevitably grow is the fatal mistake made in 1849 in the same city of Cincinnati when the American Christian Missionary Society was adopted and the brethren first entered on the dangerous pathway of centralization in religion. This principle is not only utterly foreign to the New Testament, but it is completely subversive of New Testament order. In the management and control of any and all ecclesiastical affairs, there is indeed, as the Convention very properly contended, "no tribunal superior to the local congregation," and therefore this Convention itself, not merely in the radical departures in question, but in its very constitution and essential being, is wrong in that there is vested in its central board of supervisors and managers the authority and control which, according to the New Testament, has been placed by the Lord himself in the divinely appointed board of supervisors and managers in each local church. The very moment a general society is formed with its central board of managers in which authority and control are vested, which God has distinetly placed in each local church, that moment the way is opened for the very evils which have now befallen the churches working through the American and Foreign societies.

Another matter before the Convention was the question of merging all the societies into one United Christian Missionary Society; and "when the time came for the American Christian Missionary Society to vote on whether or not it would enter the proposed United Christian Missionary Society," the speakers showed plainly that they were the hapless and helpless victims of the system of centralization which had brought upon them evils of which they had never dreamed. In the midst of much confusion, speeches for and against the merger were made, the latter expressing a willingness to vote for it if proper guarantees were made as to the future course of the United Society concerning the radical departures from the Bible and the Restoration plea now causing division. They were fairly represented by Brother John T. Brown, of Louisville, who said: "I am in favor of this United Society, provided we can be assured that the churches are to govern the society, and not the society the churches." Exactly; but "there's the rub." This guarantee will not only not be made, but it would be useless to make it, because, under the system of general organization and centralization to which both sides in this controversy are committed, authority and control in mission work have been transferred from the divinely appointed board in each local church, where God placed them, to the man-appointed board in the general organization, and, of course, if it sees fit at any time to exercise the authority and power with which it has been clothed, it will do so. We most confidently affirm, without the fear of successful contradiction, that in any system of general organization, such as the American Christian Missionary Society or the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, in which, as in these societies, authority and control in all matters of missionary work are transferred from the local church, where God placed them, to a central board of managers, the churches are powerless in the matter of government and control, and the central board is supreme. It controls the missionary funds of the churches, selects and passes upon the fitness or unfitness of missionaries, sends them out, fixes and pays their salaries, and can recall them or not recall them at its own bidding, and every church in the world is powerless to prevent it. We repeat and again remind the conservative wing of our brethren of the society that here is exactly where the mistake was made in 1849. Seventy years have come and gone, but behold the dire and ruinous extremes to which centralization of authority and control has gone! And the end is not yet.

But some one may ask: "Would not the same evil be possible under any other system?" Never, under the New Testament system of local church independence. It is true, this system—God's own system—is not free from all possible evil, but the advantage is that it reduces the possibility of evil to a minimum, whereas the general-organization principle opens the way for evil on the largest scale. In this divine system a single church can, and sometimes does, go wrong. But the wrong is confined to a single local church, whereas in the general organization, when the central board of authority and control goes wrong, It takes with it all the churches tied together in a cooperation under it. In such a situation, the churches are forced to the alternative of either joining in the evil done or withdrawing from such a system.

Finally, we appeal to the conservative brethren of the seciety to pause at this critical juncture and reflect over the mighty strides of success in evangelism and the planting of churches-true New Testament missionary workwhich marked the first forty years of the Restoration movement. It is probably unprecedented in all religious history. Moreover, the society arrangement as now constituted will always go wrong, as in the present case, whenever the occasion arises for it. Hence, instead of forming another society on the same mistaken and dangerous principle, which some are talking of doing if they cannot check the radicals in the present society, why not make a complete return to the invulnerable New Testament ground originally occupied by the Restoration movement, and let the Christian Standard, the Gospel Advocate, and all other papers and preachers and churches, unite for "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together" for the primitive order? May the Lord lead them and all of us to wise conclusions.

Shall We Preach the Gospel in Colorado?

BY J. C. M'Q.

In my last article I called attention briefly to some of the work that is being done in Denver. For the encouragement of the brotherhood, I am glad to announce to our readers that the brethren have secured a good house in a thriving and growing part of the city, located on Sherman Street. This house was bought from the Congregationalists and is built of Colcrado brown stone. Comfortably filled, it will seat four hundred people; when its capacity is taxed, it will doubtless take care of five hundred people. This is located just two short blocks from Broadway, in a thickly settled community and among a people who will likely receive the truth readily. The house on Ogden Avenue where the disciples formerly met is situated among a rich, aristocratic people who are not inclined to receive the truth in its simplicity. When Christ was among men, the highly cultured Pharisee and those rich in this world's goods did not receive him as readily as did the common people. The scribes and Pharisees found fault with him, criticized him, and were ready to crucify him, while we are told that "the common people heard him gladiy." The common people, of whom there are many, and of whom Abraham Lincoln says, "God must have loved them dearly, because he made so many," always appealed to Christ, and they should appeal to us in our work. Christ in his teaching said: "Beware of the scribes, who desire to walk in long robes, and to have salutations in the market places. and chief seats in the synagogues, and chief places at feasts: they that devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayers; these shall receive greater condemnation." (Mark 12: 38-40.) Those who are cumbered with the affairs of this life do not make the best Christians. "The cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches choke out the truth."

A brighter day is dawning for the church of Christ in Denver, provided the disciples there will cultivate the field right at their own door. For the present it is not necessary for them to look far away. When their light burns brightly at home, it will then reach to far-distant lands. I would encourage the brethren in Denver to show their zeal, their consecration, and their devotion to the truth by giving liberally of the means with which God has blessed them. While the brethren in Denver are not rich in this world's goods, yet, if each one would give one-tenth of his income, a large fund could be raised for evangelizing in Denver. All who value their souls more highly than they do the things of this world will readily give in order to convert sinners. I am not in sympathy with the doctrine that preachers should pay for the privilege of preaching the gospel. "Even so did the Lord ordain that they that proclaim the gospel should live of the gospel."

I have learned from experience that those who support the gospel appreciate it more than those who do not. In years gone by I devoted much time to a church without charge, and at the same time I labored with another church that liberally supported me in the work. I could not but notice how much more the church that supported me appreciated the efforts that I put forth to teach sinners the way of life than did the church that accepted my work without any remuneration. People can get no more out of the gospel than they put into H. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Stockholders who invest their funds in a bank are deeply concerned about its success. Even so is the man who invests much in the church of Christ. His heart is there, his interests are there, and he will work and pray for its growth and development. If we would not have the churches lukewarm, we must, as individual Christians, put the very best that we have into the church of Jesus Christ.

I am satisfied that there are some churches throughout the country that are ready to fellowship the church in Denver, but before doing this they would like to see the disciples in Denver put forth the effort and manifest the liberality that will encourage such fellowship. I would suggest that Brother Evans stir the church up, encourage it to get busy, and publish to the world just what is to be expected from the church in Denver. Let the church undertake to raise so much, and then, when the right evangelist is found, other churches will supplement the amount raised in Denver until it is sufficient to enable the faithful evangelist to devote all of his time and talent to evangelizing in Denver and other near-by cities and contiguous territory.

Brother E. E. Shoulders, a young preacher of no mean ability and a splendid singer, could be utilized in helping such an evangelist. He could act as Timothy for the evangelist and thus be greatly benefited himself, and also be developed into an efficient evangelist. By the exercise of good judgment, and with a knowledge and love of the truth and with a consuming zeal that will take no denial, much more can be accomplished for Christ in Denver during the next few years than has been accomplished in the eleven years that have passed since Brother Evans began work there. We shall wait to see just what the brethren in Denver will do with these suggestions.

A VISIT TO BOULDER.

I had the pleasure of visiting Boulder. This is about thirty miles from Denver, and is located just at the foot of the mountains on the Colorado and Southern Railroad. This is a beautiful city of about twenty thousand inhabitants. The State University of Colorado is located here. It is here that Brother E. C. Fugua did his first work in Colorado. I spent only a few hours in this place, but those hours passed very rapidly and very pleasantly. 1 had the pleasure of dining in the home of Brother H. J. Hilgers and wife, and met a number of brethren there. Brother and Sister Hillgers impressed me as being deeply in earnest in the work of saving souls. Their hospitality was most cordial and very much appreciated. I met there Brother J. H. Balley, who preaches for the church. He is one of Uncle Sam's employees and delivers the mail. As I talked to him, I could not help calling to mind the lamented Joe McPherson, who occupied the same position in Nashville, and who preached so faithfully and effectively the gospel of Christ. It was his daily meat to carry the mail and then go many miles at the close of the day and deliver the gospel message to a crowd of waiting people. He did this for weeks at a time, and such work nearly always resulted in the conversion of many people. The life of such a man lives after him and cannot be in vain. The man who loves the truth and who realizes that the gospel is God's power unto salvation will preach it whenever an opportunity presents itself, regardless of financial support. Like Paul, he will labor with his own hands, making his own fiving, and then give of his own means in order that he may proclaim the gospel to the perishing. Brother Bailey loves to talk of the truth, and appeared to be deeply interested in the work of winning souls and teaching the truth. While there are only a few disciples at Boulder, let us hope and pray that the truth may grow and that many others may be led into the light of the

FORT COLLINS.

During my stay in Colorado I had the pleasure of spending one night in the home of Brother E. C. Fuqua and wife, at Fort Collins. I learned much from Brother Fuqua of the work and of the methods employed in Colorado. It was Indeed a pleasure to be with Brother Fuqua, his wife and adopted danguter. Their earnestness and zeal are so manifest that they stimulate in others an interest in the cause of Christ.

Fort Collins is a city of about twenty thousand inhabitants, and is located in the best farming country of the State. I saw them getting the sugar beet ready for the market. I saw large apple orchards, the trees all heavily loaded with fine, luscious fruit. While our readers know that I am not in the habit of preaching, yet the brethren of Fort Collins Insisted that I talk to them, and I finally yielded and made a short talk to the church. On very short notice the majority of the membership were assembled. The church at Fort Collins owns a very next house, which has a small indebtedness upon it. The membership here is something near forty or fifty. This church was established through the efforts of Brother Fuqua; also a church at Bellvue, about nine miles away, and another at Olathe. Recently Brother Fuqua held a meeting at Loveland, some fifteen miles from Fort Collins, which resulted in the establishment of a church. There are some sixteen or twenty members there.

From the best estimate I could get, I presume there are some three hundred members in Denver and the other places that I have mentioned who contend earnestly for the falth once for all delivered to the saints. I am sure this will not appear as a great number to our readers who live where there are many churches, few of whom know little of the obstacles that must be overcome in the West before a church can be planted. Throughout the South, and in many other sections of our country where the churches of Christ are numerous, a preacher goes into a field, lives in the homes of the brethren, and is not expected to board himself while doing the work. It is not so in the West. I learned from Brother Fugua, and also from Brother Evans, that the preacher was expected to take care of his own expenses while in the field holding meetings. Brother Fuqua acts very wisely in keeping his wife and adopted daughter with him. They go into a town or a city and preach the gospel. While doing this, the cheapest way they can live is to rent an apartment with an oil or gas stove, as the case may be, and thus take care of their own living expenses. Sister Fuqua is a great help to Brother Fuqua in the work. She is a splendid singer and can take care of the singing during the meeting. I wish to commend most heartily this course pursued by Brother Fuqua and to commend it to other preachers. I do not believe that the Lord wants a preacher and his wife to live in separation for many, many long years in order that he may preach the gospel in destitute fields. The Bible does not say that the Lord has so ordained. On the other hand, Jesus said; "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife." By no process of reasoning can separation become cleavage. "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." I have no disposition to belittle earnestness and sacrifice, but I am firm in the conviction that God does not demand of any preacher that he shall live in separation from his wife in order to preach the gospel. Better live with his wife and preach the gospel whenever he can.

While I am writing of Brother Fuqua's work, I must not neglect to speak of his support. As Is known, Brother Fuqua has been criticized severely for his management of money matters. I am not so sure there is such a great difference in managers, after all. As I see it, the difference is in what some undertake to manage. Some undertake an impossible task which others decline. I think perhaps Brother Fuqua has undertaken to finance himself and keep out of debt on an amount of money that is not adequate for such a job. I learned from him that he was receiving a support of about seventy-five dollars per month. From what I could see in Colorado and from the high cost of living, I am constrained to believe that no evangelist can do work successfully in that field without receiving at least one hundred and fifty dollars per month. I mean an evangelist who has a wife and daughter to support. Whenever Brother Fuqua undertakes the work on seventy-five dollars per month, and then is expected to finance his own meetings in a new territory, it is impossible for him to get through on this amount. He is forced to make debts, and cannot meet these obligations promptly.

I think Brother Fuqua should be furnished from all sources at least one hundred and fifty dollars per month in order that he may run his meetings and take care of his wife and daughter. He should be able to get at least fifty dollars or more of this amount out of his own territory. I believe there are churches that would cheerfully give to him one hundred dollars per month in order that he may be free to preach the gospel. It is necessary for Brother Fuqua to have a car in order to do his work successfully. He is in debt on his home where he lives, and is trying to pay twenty-five dollars per month on this indebtedness.

I have written thus plainly in order that churches may see and know the exact condition. Brother Fuqua is a splendid gospel preacher and one of the best evangelists I know, and I would be glad to see him placed in a condition that his influence will not be crippled by debts that he is compelled to make.

Series on Church History.

The first-page editor of the Gospel Advocate is giving considerable thought and research in the preparation of a series of articles dealing with church history. The purpose is not only to give the main historical facts, but to point out in so far as possible the modern application of the principles involved. The series will begin in our next issue. By saving your copy from week to week and pasting the articles in a scrapbook, you may have a brief, but very convenient, church history. By all means you should send in the subscription of your friend in order that no one may miss the splendid special numbers that appear each month. The next will be the "Sermon" Number. It will prove to be very inspiring, both to the preacher and to the audience. Among the many important features will be: "The Study of Effective Sermons," "Preparation and Delivery," "Selection of Texts and Illustrative Matter." It will contain the very things that many of our readers are asking for. Send us those two dollars to-day with the name and address of a new subscriber. You can at least do that much to encourage and benefit some struggling PUBLISHERS GOSPEL ADVOCATE.

Perhaps the most unique and the most beautiful contribution ever made to this fund is acknowledged below. It comes from the inmates of an insane asylum at Terrell, Texas, and was the result of a talk made by Brother John E. Dunn. Here is his self-explanatory letter:

Dear Brother Lipscomb: On Sunday afternoon I have been making a series of talks to the patients of the insane asylum at Terrell, Texas. Yesterday afternoon I described the suffering and wretchedness as I have seen it among the peasants and the poor laborers of France. I said that, instead of us Americans wasting our money in riotous liv-ing, we should save every cent we can to relieve the sufferings of the starving millions, and especially the helpless women and children. A poor, afflicted woman came to me and said: "Here is a dollar; send it to save the lives of the starving bables" Then others came forward and handed money till these afflicted patients of an insane asylum had handed me eight dollars and seventy-five cents, which they had made picking cotton. They request that it be sent to the suffering Armenians, and their prayers go with the offering. Every cent of this money was given by the poor and afflicted patients of an insane asylum. It was one of the most touching services I ever conducted. JOHN E. DUNN.

In sending contributions, be sure and state whether they are intended for the Home Orphans' Fund, the Armentan and Syrian Fund, or the Poland Fund. Make all checks and money orders payable to A. B. Lipscomb, who will forward them to the proper commissioners.

Training Little Children

(Suggestions by mothers who have been kindargartners. Issued by The United States Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., and The National Kindergarten Association, New York, N. Y.)

Cultivate Your Child's Confidence.

A little child begins by "telling mother" everything, Bumps or bruises, joys or sorrows, all are brought to her as naturally as the child draws breath, and this continues as long as he is totally unconscious of himself as an individual.

The time for special care is when he becomes aware of himself as a separate entity. From this time on, a cold look, an indifferent air, an uninterested attitude, a word of ridicule or sarcasm may wound the child's sense of confidence or justice so deeply that he will shrink within himself and never again show his inmost thoughts or most sacred feelings to his mother or to any one else. Incalculable harm is done through thoughtlessness, even by the most devoted parents, in failing to recognize this stage of the child's development and to reverence his individuality and his right to it. The mother loses the greatest power for good she possesses, and misses the greatest joy and recompense she can have, by not sharing her child's hopes and fears, his troubles and triumphs. The bitter experience will come to her sooner or later of realizing that her child is sharing these with another person who must, therefore, be spiritually nearer to him than she is.

There are a few absolutely certain ways of avoiding this catastrophe, which have been used over and over again by wise and devoted mothers. One is: never fail to listen attentively and sympathetically, no matter at what inconvenience, giving your best wisdom to help your child see his problem clearly for himself.

Another is: respect your child as a spiritual being, an individual as different from all other individuals as God meant him to be. Meet him on his own ground, and do not try to make him conform to a pattern of your own.

Respect your child's confidence absolutely. Once betrayed, it may never be given again.

A young lad of twelve, I once knew, told his mother something that greatly interested him, and asked her not to tell any one about it. Later in the day he passed under the bay window in which she and a friend were sitting with their sewing, and he heard her telling what he had told her in confidence. He was a rather quiet lad, but very determined, and after the visitor left he went to his mother and said: "Mother, I passed under the window and heard you telling Mrs. Blank what I asked you not to mention to any one. I just want to let you know that as long as I live I will never again tell you anything that concerns myself until I am ready for everybody to know it." And he kept his word, although he was always a most devoted and dutiful son. Never meet a situation which appears absurd to you with ridicule or sarcasm; this is fatal.

Perhaps the most important rule of all Is; do not be afraid to discuss any subject, to meet truth with truth, frankness with frankness, confidence with confidence. Long ago I told my children I would always give bonest answers to their questions in as far as they could understand them, and would explain more as they grew older. Give them scientific truths when they ask for them, reverently and simply, and know the joy of seeing their minds open to the facts of life with appreciation of their beauty and holiness and of watching their love and respect grow for their father and mother and for all life!

Never be afraid of confessing ignorance. A child thoroughly respects the answer: "I don't know accurately enough to tell you correctly; let us look it up together."

This is where father can be brought in with effect, even if he is much away and very busy; for a child can soon learn in confidential talks with mother that father would be just as much interested, just as anxious to help, and just as good an adviser, perhaps a better one, if only he were there. Then, whenever his advice is especially needed, the matter can be referred to him at a convenient

To be a parent is a vocation, not a pastime. God has given Into our keeping an individual, not a replica of ourselves for a plaything, and it is not enough to give only our love, which is a natural gift; we must give spiritual insight and understanding, joy in the child's growing and developing powers, and true companionship.

The Workers.

For all who toil thy grace we ask, In field or workshop, task by task, Jesus, Savior dear! O, knit in bends of brotherhood The hands that save our brother's blood! Hear us, Savior, hear!

O, help us selfishness to spurn, To bear the common burden learn, Jesus, Savior dear! The wage, the skill, the strength to lay At thy dear feet the while we pray, Hear us, Savior, hear!

Brother A. A. Bunner. Cleveland, Ohio, after commending an answer that was given to a query presented by J. E. Rowlett in the Gospel Advocate of September 4, 1919, relative to women's duty and privileges in the church, wishes to know if it be right for a woman to lead the public prayers in the assembly of the saints.

I am sure we have no such example in the New Testament, neither do I understand why we should have one law relative to public prayer and another for public teaching. The same scriptures that do not permit a woman to teach in public would not permit her to lead in public prayers. I will ask those who are interested to read 1 Tim. 2: 8-15, also 1 Cor. 14: 34.

Sister Ollie M. Johnson, of Cookeville, Tenn., seems to be in trouble because she cannot get to church in the morning and then is denied the privilege of partaking of the Lord's Supper in the evening at the house of one of the members, with one man and three women present. She wants to know if it is right to refuse a sister the Lord's Supper on such an occasion, who had come eighteen miles in order to break bread.

This question is so simple and the course that should have been pursued is so clear that it seems almost wholly unnecessary to answer. Granting that the facts are properly stated, all will cheerful!—concede that she should have been given the privilege of partaking of the Lord's Supper. There must be some mistake about such privilege having been denied her.

Brother S. A. Hicks, of Avinger, Texas, inquires to know the difference between the ungodly and the sinner. The passage that seems to be giving trouble is 1 Pet. 4: 18, which reads: "And if the righteous is scarcely saved, where shall the ungodly and sinner appear?"

I understand that "ungodly" and "sinner" are used simply as a matter of emphasis. All sinners are ungodly and all ungodly persons are sinners. The Bible speaks of "ungodly sinners" in Jude 15. We also have the same manner of expression in 1 Tim. 1: 9, 10, which reads: "As knowing this, that law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and unruly, for the ungodly and sinners, for the unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers, for fornicators, for abusers of themselves with men, for menstealers, for liars, for false swearers, and if there be any other thing contrary to the sound doctrine." This shows clearly that "ungodly" and "sinners" are broad enough to include all classes of the wicked. The language then means: If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the wicked of all classes appear?

Sister E. Nash, of Lamar, Okla., inquires to know to whom "the dead" of 1 Cor. 15: 29 refers. The passage reads: "its what shall they do which are baptized for the dead? If the dead are not raised at all, why then are they baptized for them?"

Paul is making an argument for the resurrection. As we learn from Acts 18: 8, many of the Corinthians were baptized. Their baptism was a planting in the likeness of the burial of Christ and in the likeness of his resurrection.

(Rom 6: 4, 5.) Were they not raised from a watery tomb? Their baptism was in the likeness of the death and resurrection of Christ, which was in the hope of their own resurrection from the dead through Christ's resurrection. They were baptized for, or on account of, the dead, with the expectation of a resurrection from the dead; but if there be no resurrection from the dead, and if Christ is not risen, this memorial and emblematic burial has no meaning. Paul was giving reasons why they should be lieve in the resurrection, as his argument is: "Else [II the dead rise not] what shall they do which are baptized for [in view of their resurrection from] the dead, if the dead rise not?"

- J. F. Milby, of Lynnville, Ky., wishes an explanation of Acts 11: 16: "And I remembered the word of the Lord, how he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized in the Holy Spirit." Also, Acts 10: 45: "And they of the circumcision that believed were amazed, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentlles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Spirit." The special explanation that is desired is as to how the apostles were immersed in the Holy Spirit, as when they were baptized in the Spirit, the Spirit was poured out. He also wishes an explanation of Eph. 2: 1; Col. 2: 13; Rom. 6: 4, 5.
- (1) If the querist had referred to Acts 2: 4, he would have seen that when the apostles were baptized in the Holy Spirit they were completely filled with it. Acts 2: 4 declares: "And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit." This clearly shows that the inner man was overwhelmed or covered up with the Spirit. It does not matter if the Holy Spirit were poured out, for it was poured out on the apostles until their spirits were immersed in the Spirit of God.
- (2) Eph. 2: 1 reads: "And you did he make alive, when ye were dead through your trespasses and sins." Col. 2: 13 reads: "And you, being dead through your trespasses and the uncircumcision of your flesh, you, I say, did he make alive together with him, having forgiven us all our trespasses." If the querist will turn back and read the nineteenth chapter of Acts of Apostles, he will see just how the Ephesians were quickened, made allve, in Jesus Christ. Paul spoke boldly in the synagogue at Ephesus for the space of three months, reasoning and persuading as to the things concerning the kingdom of God. He then reasoned daily in the school of Tyrannus for the space of two years. As a result, all they that dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord; so their faith came by hearing the preaching of the word of God. In this way they were made alive in Christ Jesus. The Colossians were made alive in precisely the same way. Having repented of their sins of trespasses, they were forgiven and accepted as the children of God.
- (3) Rom. 6: 4, 5 reads: "We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life. For if we have become united with him in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." This is a reference to the baptism of the Roman Christians. When they were baptized, they were buried with Christ in baptism, and were raised up like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father; and having been raised from the waters of baptism, they were expected to walk in newness of life. The Christian is required to put off the old man and to put on the new man. He is required to shun the very appearance of evil, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. If the querist will read Col. 3: 12-14, he will find some things that a Christian is required to put on.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field

By S. H. Hall

Here Is An Idea, Brother Stubblefield.

In the Gospel Advocate of October 23, Brother C. M. Stubblefield, of Montgomery, Ala., favors us with a splendid article under the heading, "Where Can We Get Them?" Brother R. P. Thurman, of College Grove, Tenn., made an appeal in the issue of October 9 for a man to locate in his section, promising one hundred and twenty-five dollars a month, and more if needed. Brother Stubblefield wants to know where Brother Thurman will get the man for his field and where he himself can find more men for the Montgomery field. Our good brother, at the time he wrote, thought that Brother Thurman would have a hard time finding a man, and wants to know if there is a dearth of preachers, and why more young men do not enter the ministry. He says: "If any brother has an idea, let him advance it." I submit a few for the careful consideration of all who are interested in seeing conditions bettered.

1. There is a dearth of preachers. There can be no question about this. We do not have half as many preachers as the churches could support, and that well, if they would: we do not have more than half as many preachers as are needed to answer the calls that are continually being heard; and if we look at the question from the standpoint of what actually needs to be done, I doubt that we have a fourth as many as we should have; and, further, if the whole truth were known as to what the churches are able to do financially, if they would give as the Spirit of Christ would lead them to give, we could support four times as many as we are supporting. But, if we are to look at the matter from the standpoint of the number of letters Brother Thurman received in answer to his appeal, it seems that there is not a dearth of preachers, provided, of course, the news came to me correctly. I was told that Brother Thurman received something like twenty-six answers to his appeal. This certainly looks like we have preachers and to spare, but it does not change my mind about a dearth of preachers.

2. What is the trouble? First, preachers are not supported as they should be. Not that some are not; but, as a rule, they are not. I am guite sure that among the number who wrote Brother Thurman are some of our best preachers; men who, doubtless, would be glad to remain where they are, but who are not receiving one hundred and twenty-five dollars, with the promise of more if needed. But they need more, sorely; and the only way they can get it is to quietly move to where they pay more, else ask for a raise. As a rule, preachers had rather move, if they can get more by moving, than to ask fer a better support where they are. Just as certain as I am now writing, this is one of the troubles. Where are the congregations that raise a preacher's support of their own accord? Some do, but they are few. Where are the congregations that have increased the preacher's support in keeping with the ever-increasing high cost of living? Some have, but they are few. The curse of the churches is to be found in the fact that, as a rule, they are governed by a lot of deadhead elders or leaders that would bankrupt and ruin every business concern on earth if the little sense they use in governing the church should be used in the business world. If men are, indeed, qualified to be elders, they have sense enough to know when a man is being supported as he should be, and they see to it that he is so supported. But is this the rule in our churches? No, it is not, and some of our best men have quit giving their whole time to the work and are "making tents" and preaching as opportunity permits. Not that it is wrong to "make tents" and preach when circumstances demand it, as in the case of Paul; but it is wrong for this to be so when the preacher is forced to do so just because members of the church do not give as they should. This very thing has much to do with the fact that more young men-and old men, too, as to that matter-are not entering the ministry. "But if any provideth not for his own, and specially his own household, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an unbeliever," applies to preachers as well as others. If not, why not? The few preachers who are well supported are the men who are working for old, established congregations. But where is the preacher who is going out into the "highways and byways" and preaching to the poor who are not saved that is being supported as he should be? Such preachers never have been supported as they should. It is hard to do such work and "make tents," for the simple reason that a man cannot pick his job up and carry it along with him. We have hundreds of good men who would be glad to get into the field and preach continually in the waste places; but where is their support coming from? Brother Stubblefield, if you do not believe I am telling the truth, get a man and tell him to get busy in the waste fields in your State, and tell him you will raise his support, and you will soon find how slow the churches are in giving to such work. 1 know, for I have been doing such work for the past twenty years. The churches that give most, and that give most willingly, are those churches that give to the man who preaches directly to them in their home congregations, the man that makes them feel like giving because of his personal contact with them. Such men, as a rule, are our best-supported men. But when it comes to supporting that man off yonder who is preaching in schoolhouses and the waste places where he is not seen and heard by the ones you are trying to get to support him, it is an uphill pullall the while to get the churches interested in him and to support him as he should be. If one man is to be better supported than another, this man should get the best support, for he is less able to take some work on the side to supply what is lacking in his support.

3. What is needed? I know nothing better to say than to get the local congregations to be just what Christ wants them to be. Every local church should be "sounding out the word" of God. (See I Thess. 1: 8.) It is the duty of the leaders in the local church to look for the young men who have in them the making of good preachers. These young men should be encouraged to preach. They should be taught in the local church as far as they can be taught. If it is necessary, the local church should send them to some good school or college and give them more than the local church, for lack of teachers sufficiently able to teach, can give them. How many local churches are doing this? I ask again, how many? Name them, please. But this is not enough. Each local church should consider the support of men who are giving their whole time to preaching the word. They should consider it in a businesslike way. The members should be taught to give, and that freely. This teaching should be done by the elders, as a rule. Much is sald about preachers teaching the churches. It is all right for preachers to preach on any subject the Bible talks about, but I contend that Christ intended that the elders should teach the local church these Important lessons.

I could say more, but time forbids. Will not others write along the same line? Something is wrong. Have I found any of the trouble? Are there other troubles that need to be considered? Sometimes preachers leave for other fields simply for a lack of support. The elders can say: "We paid him all we promised him when he came." But the question is, how much did you promise? Did you promise enough? What you promised before the war would not be enough now. May every local congregation awake to a full sense of duty along these lines.

Worldly business is to be made hely unto the Lord, by being done as a service to him, and in conformity to his divine will.—William Law.

A. B. Lipscomb is delivering a series of lectures on "Church History" for the Russell Street Church, this city, on Sunday evenings. Much interest is being manifested.

From C. M. Stubblefield, Montgomery, Ala.: "O, yes, everybody enjoys the Gospel Advocate now. You are doing good work. Stay right with the Book, and nothing can keep you from success."

From C. W. Sewell, Corpus Christi, Texas, November 1: "Yours containing check for two dollars for our work here received. Many thanks to you and to the unknown donor. God's blessings upon you all."

Foy E. Wallace, Jr., of Temple, Texas, reports twentyone baptisms and fifteen reclamations as the visible results of his meeting at Coalgate, Okla. James W. Acuff, of Waco, Texas, conducted the song service,

From G. W. Jarrett, Coffeeville, Ala., November 4: "I preached last Lord's day at Industry, and am now at home (Coffeeville). I am ready to answer calls where they want sound, gospel preaching. I never sugar-coat to please any. I preach to serve Christ,"

From D. L. Robinson, Smithville, Tenn., November 4: "I notice in the Gospel Advocate of October 9 that C. R. Nichol had held a meeting at Smithville. I beg to say it was a mistake. The meeting was held at Keltonburg, seven miles southeast of Smithville."

From I. B. Bradley, Dickson, Tenn., November 5: "My debate with A. H. Autry, Baptist, announced to begin at Greenway, Ark., on November 24, has been postponed indefinitely by Mr. Autry. Announcement will be made later, when date has been settled again."

From Fred M. Little, Yuma, Tenn., November 6: "I will be in position to arrange to hold meetings after April 15, 1920. Any church desiring my services may address me concerning the matter by December 25. I can hold meetings during May, June, July, and August."

From C. G. Vincent, 1366 North Broadway, Knoxville, Tenn., November 3: "According to arrangement with the church here, I can conduct meetings during two months next summer. Any church that can use me at that time should write soon so satisfactory dates can be made. The work here is improving and encouraging."

From J. W. Fenner, Arlington, Texas, November 4: "I thank you very much for sending me your paper free. It is a great pleasure to read it; and, as I am too old to work, reading is my chief employment. It is, indeed, a cup of cold water to the thirsty, and you will receive your reward. I especially enjoyed the number that had the Savior's prayer for unity in it. God speed the day when his people at least will be united. May God bless you for your kindness to me."

From J. H. Lawson, Kenedy, Texas, November 6: "The meeting at Pawnee, twenty miles out from Kenedy, is increasing in interest. Three confessions last night. This country is sparsely settled and people come for twenty miles and more. The gulf storm greatly injured this country. One hundred evangelists are needed in South Texas, Laborers are tew. I go next to Zion, near Weatherford, Okla., to begin a meeting on November 15. Churches should arouse to the great opportunities now open. Let us do our best."

From Miss Mattie Holder, Bridgeport, Ala., November 1: "I am glad you are sending out special numbers of the Gospel Advocate again. These specials are so full of good things. I am glad, too, that you put an article in. Your pieces are always too short for me. Brother Elam never fails to do me good. Dear, good Brother Larimore's articles I must always read first. Mrs. Fannie Hurst said things that ought to be said more often in a lot of places. But that 'modest brother's essay' was best of all. It was practical, sweet, sensible, and sentimental. I falled to discover the 'earmarks,' but the head and heart marks were very impressively drawn."

From W. S. Long, Washington, D. C., November 7: "The readers of the Gospel Advocate will be glad to know that the work on the house of worship is soon to begin and that the time is not far distant when the church of Christ shall own a nice house of worship in the capital of this great nation. We hope that many brethren in the States have us in mind and will pray for the work, and also give us the fellowship needed so that the builders will not have to stop till the last nail is driven. Write us about the work. Address J. W. Gibson, 2500 Pennsylvania Avenue, S. E., T. F. Colvin, Box 51, U Street Station, N. W.; or W. S. Long, 1424 B Street, S. E."

The American Bible Society announces that its program for the world-wide distribution of the Bible will call for a budget of $982,000 for 1920. The officers of the society have been in session for two days with representatives from the leading denominations who contribute to the society's funds in laying out this extensive program. Urgent appeals have come from all parts of the world. One of the interesting features of the society's plan is the contemplated work in France, Russia, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, and other European countries which have been devastated by the war. The society has reason to believe from reports that come in from its agents throughout the world that there was never a time when so great an interest was manifested in the reading of the Christian Scriptures. A nation-wide appeal will be made for funds to carry out the extensive program of the society.

From J. A. Hudson, Oklahoma City, Okla., November 3: "At the Tenth and Francis Streets Church, this city, we had two soul-inspiring services yesterday. Our hearts were made to rejoice at the morning service because four persons were added. One young man who was reared in the Catholic faith, and who, I am informed, had never been inside of a church of Christ building before, made the good confession. He is to be baptized next Lord's day, I received a card from Ada, Okla., to-day, announcing a Christmas-week meeting the brethren there have planned They have an extensive program outlined. Saturday night my wife and I went for a visit with Sister Schrimshire, who is sick, and while we were out a hundred or more of the members here came for a surprise shower. They awaited our return. I appreciate the gifts, but I appreclate the spirit of the gifts more. With such good will and such cooperation, I feel that success is sure."

The Poison Apple.

(Printed by request of the Tennessee Antituberculosis Association.)

Our grandparents thought that the tomato was polsonous and called it "poison apple." They also were under the impression that tuberculosis was incurable and called it "consumption" from the fact that it consumed those who contracted it.

To-day we know that the tomato is an extremely succulent vegetable; but everybody does not know that tuberculosis is not only preventable and controllable, but that it is also curable. And this latter truth is the message that the Tennessee Antituberculosis Association is bringing home to thousands of people in this State.

Already, as a direct result of the efforts of this society, hospitals have been erected that contain three hundred beds for the care of tubercular patients, and institutions containing two hundred more beds are under construction. Cities and towns are boosting for fresh-air camps and open-air schools and the way is being opened to make Tennessee the healthiest State in the Union.

When one realizes that all this work has been accomplished through the sale of those little Red Cross Christmas seals which we attach to our letters and packages each Christmas, the fact is brought home that this work must continue. This year the campaign to sell the seals and urge subscriptions will be held from December 1 to December 10.

Seeing the need of more health work and continuance of work now being accomplished, the campaign has been indorsed by Gov. A. H. Roberts. Col. Alvin C. York, and a host of other prominent Tennesseeans. This health work must go on; so enlist in the local antituberculosis movement.

A Century of Service

In 1820 a good, old-fashioned doctor in North Carolina prepared an cintment for skin eruptions. It met the needs of his patients, and has likewise met the needs of millions of other doctors' patients. Gray's Ointment, the compound he prepared, is now rounding its hundredth year of honest, good, old-fashioned service and value. It is very effective for sores, boils, cuts, bruises, burns, stings, eczema, and the many similar forms of skin eruption. It soothes the pain, cleanses the wound, kills the germs, and begins healing. Northern Colorado Work.

BY E. C. FUQUA.

Last February, in a borrowed Methodist Episcopal house of worship, our first Fort Collins meeting was held; since then two others one a tent meeting-have been held. Now we have a congregation numbering thirtyfive or so, some of whom moved here from other sections, and all of whom are zealous workers. We now own our house, have built a nice baptistery therein, and are truly at work. Yesterday (October 26) I baptized twoa young lady at Bellvue, nine miles out, and a young man in Fort Collins. The young lady wanted to be baptized in the river, notwithstanding the snow-covered ground and the lcy water; so we met in the snow on the river bank, and she was baptized. She will make a faithful Christian. The young man baptized in Fort Collins is from a "Holiness" family, who opposed his becoming a Christian, but I feel sure he will make a splendid

The tent meeting at Loveland, Col., which extended into this month, resulted in the rounding up of a little band of some fifteen members, some of whom came over from the Christian Church. They meet in a private residence, and I go down (fifteen miles) and meet with them each Lord's day. A good work is now started in Loveland, but some one is badly needed to keep it going, as my time is more than needed to keep the work at Bellvue and Fort Collins going. I have these three congregations to look after every Lord's day; and while there are some young brethren who gladly make talks in my absence and thus fill vacancies, it is not as interesting to the outside world as a regular preacher would be able to make it. My "schedule," therefore, is, meeting with the Loveland congregation every Sunday morning, and alternating on Sunday nights at Bellvue and Fort Collins. This is the work of three men, but we can do no better now. What we need is a good man at Loveiand to live there and have two meetings every Lord's day. In a short time there would develop a fine congregation at Loveland. It is impossible for me to do much at Loveland under the circumstances.

I know where I can plant two other congregations within twelve miles from Fort Collins; but how can I care for them, with the present pressure of duties upon me? Must these two congregations to be (for I am sure they will be some day) remain without being, merely because no man can be found to help hold them to the word of God and develop them?

Another thing: While in other sections of the State a certain Indianapolis agency is "causing divisions and occasions of stumbling contrary to the doctrine which we have learned" from the word of God, the work at Fort Collins and Bellvue is at peace, and means to remain so. One of said factionists is living in Fort Collins, and has been for some time, but has never met with the church here, and never will, unless a division can be accomplished. Said party came to see me and carefully asked for such information as assured her that we were what we ought to be in everything, which was sufficient to convince her that she could not worship with us without offending her faction. She is here for mischief, but her movements are known and will be met with stubborn resistance. The "smooth words and fair speeches" of these and other church disturbers are not able to deceive the brethren here. We "serve the Lord Christ," and demand as much from all who would be one of us. No other Master will be countenanced among us.

The Lord is blessing our efforts here, and he will bless all who live in peace, and labor in love, and are patient in hope

KILLS CATARRH GERMS

Famous Hyomei—Mr. Booth's Wonderful Discovery.

Some years ago, the noted Birhard T Booth, founder of the bine ribbon movement and temperance orator and leader of international fame who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble. Seeking to regain beauth, he went to intend Australia where he breathed day and night the antisoptic balsants as given off by the Encalyptus forests.

This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment known to medical science Hyomet, which is formed from the purest off of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antisoptic lugredients. Hyomet is a germ killing vapor, absolutely barnless but wonderfully effective in the treatment of Catarrh and colds of the head, Catarrhal Caughs, Bronchial Catarrh, Spasmodic Croup, Catarrhal Laryugitis or flay Fever.

The treatment is simple but most scientific. You breathe Hyomet. It is promounced the only method of treatment that sends by direct inhistation to the most remote part of the air passages, a balsamie air that destroys germs and bacill of bronchial catarrh in the breathing organs, sooths and allays irritation and enriches and purifies the blood. Sister Feb. Hill.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY,

Sister Hill, the daughter of J. C. and Sallie Hubbard, was born in Wilson County, Tenn., about forty-five years ago. She obeyed the gospel at Bellwood, Tenn., when she was but a small girl, and she lived true to her faith till about 8 P.M., Sunday, October 19, 1919, when she was called up higher to live with that Savier whom she had served the greater part of her life. She leaves a husband and four children, an aged mother, two sisters and one brother, to mourn their loss. Sister Hill was true to her husband and children, tender and kind to her mother and relatives, and faithful to the Savior and the church.

While she had been in declining health for a number of years, she never complained at anything. She was nearly always present at the meetings at Carroll Street Church, and the last Sunday she spent on the earth, which was the last day of life, she was present at the meeting of the saints. The little band that worships on Carroll Street will miss her, for she did not forsake the assembly on the Lord's day. If our members everywhere were as faithful even in health to meet together as she was in her frail, feeble condition, our Lord'sday meetings would be much larger.

Sister Hill was kind to the poor and the helpless. Some years ago, when a poor sister of her congregation died and left three little children, the youngest a helpless infant and the other two not much older, though her health was declining then, she took these little ones into her home and heart and gave them a mother's care and protection till they could be provided for. The Savior took little children into his arms and said: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." It was touching and tender to hear these motherless little ones call her "Sister Hill." and they were never afraid to call on her for favors. Not only the belpless little children found a home with her, but she also divided her home and its comforts with the aged and infirm. She certainly followed the teaching of Christ in helping the helpless.

But now her life, her sufferings are over, and her good works follow her. She has gone into the sweet beyond, where her father, her sister, her brother, and two little children who had gone before were waiting for her. Her husband has the consolation that he did all that he could to keep her. She had all the help that medical science could give, but nothing could arrest the fatal disease. The children are left the heritage of a faithful example; and while they need the advise and association of their mother, her example of faithfulness will abide with them. The long-suffering, patient mother is left again. Well, it no doubt is for some righteous purpose. She has yet something to do on this side of the great divide. Half ber family now are over on the other side. Let us hope that some day they may be a reunited family. May God in his mercy deal gently with all.

Good of Company Manners.

There is no trouble in the home when there is company in the house. Everything runs smoothly, as a rule. The children are better behaved, regardless of what mother says about it; father is more patient. There is no quarreling among the children when there is company. Everything is cleaner and more orderly, and voices are lowered, and correct language is used.

Which is to say, would it not be a blessed good thing to have "company manners" in the home all the time? To have the breakfast pass off as quietly; to have as little harsh language; to do away with the usual tamily criticisms—would it not be glorious if we used "company manners" whether there is company present or not?

It would be an awful strain for a while, to be sure. The whole family is under a strain when there is company in the house; but the general effect would justify the strain. There would come a time when it would not be any strain at all: it would become a habit. Table manners would be improved, conversation would be more rational, criticism would be less bitter, dispositions would mature with the sweetness of ripened fruit that has grown in the sunlight.—Exchange,

You Can Do It. By J. G. MALPHURS.

Of course you are willing for the Potter Orphan Home and School to have a child's library, and the call is not for money. The plan is simple. Just go to your bookease, select at least one volume that is suitable for a child from six to fourteen years of age, send it to Brother Hugh Potter, Route 4, Bowling Green, Ky., or to me, at Sinai, Ky. These books will be of much good to the Home; and if you will attend to your part, we can have a splendid collection of books. I expect to see that the Home has a good bookcase and a selection of choice literature that is not supplied by the brotherhood. Send in your book as soon as possible so that we shall know what to buy. Nothing but the very best of clean literature is wanted, Especially should there be a good supply of Christian books. It is easy to send a book. If you do not happen to have a suitable one on hand, just purchase one. Let the people in Kentucky, especially, rise up as one man and do this little favor for the Home.

Feet Drag?

When it is an effort to drag one foot after the other, when you are always tired and seem lacking in strength and endurance, when aches and pains rack the body, it is well to look for symptoms of kidney trouble.

Foley Kidney Pills

banish effects of kidney and bladder trouble by removing the cause. They are healing and curative. They tone up and strenghten the weakened or diseased organs. They relieve backache, rheumatic pains, stiff joints, sore muscles.

W. W. Wells, Tonquin, Mich., writes: "I get great relief from taking Foley Kidney Fills, I am on my feet most of the time and get tired out. After taking Foley Kidney Fills, they make me feel like a new man. I recommend them to my customers and never have heard of any case where they did not give satisfaction."

Brother Talley's Article on the Dearth of Preachers.

BY J. T. J.

I have just read the above-named article, and, to me, it is like an "oasis in a desert." It is one of the most timely articles I have read in a long time. I will ask that all who deplore the scarcity of preachers and long to see the gospel preached more generally read Brother Talley's article, which appeared in the Gospel Advocate of November 6.

It is quite common for Christians and churches to laud the preachers who have "reached the top." 'They are very anxious to have such preachers to hold a meeting for them, and will write and make arrangements, in some cases a year ahead, to secure some such preacher to hold a meeting for them, and will pay him well for the meeting; while in many cases there are men of equal mental ability, and often more zeal, who, for lack of financial ability, are kept at home, following some secular calling for a livelihood and doing the home preaching on Sundays without many encouraging words and never a cent of money to show appreciation of their efforts. They never say to them: "There are good people in some adjoining neighborhoods who have never heard the gospel; go and preach to them, and we will pay the taxi hire and a little more to pay you for a little loss of time from your business while you make some preparation for these occasions." The consequence is, those good people are neglected and die without ever hearing the pure gospel, while the church makes but little effort or sacrifice, never offering any encouragement to home talent; therefore, the church just about holds its own with an "imported" preacher once a year, who gets the little pittance of contributions made by the church during the year, and the brother who bears the burden and heat of the day at home goes without remuneration or encouragement.

How can young men under such conditions ever develop into gospel preachers? How can they expect to have a decent living if they neglect their business to preach? These are serious questions, and they suggest that It is time for the churches to call a halt and take their bearings. It may be necessary to change our course a little. Money spent on the home preacher encourages him, gives him more confidence in himself and the church, and will do ten times as much in spreading the gospel in the home field as if paid out to preachers from a distance. Besides, it gives the home preacher more prestige and brings the church more into notice in the community. Then, besides, with this course of procedure, this dearth of preachers would soon cease.

Brings the Best Into Co-Operation.

It is no wonder that many are finding the new medicinal combination, Hood's Sarsaparilla before eating, Peptiron (a real iron tonic) after eating, and Hood's Pills as needed, remarkably effective as a course of treatment for giving vitality, vigor, and vim, and increasing strength and endurance.

Among the medicinal substances that the combination brings into cooperation are such cleansers, tonics, and digestives as sarsaparilla, nux, iron, and pepsin, whose great merit has been fully established.

Good results from such a combination in cases amenable to treatment seem to be among the "inevitables." The combination is especially recommended for those who are run down, whose blood is poor because of impurity or lack of iron, whose nerves are weak or unstrung, livers torpid or sluggish. Try it.

DON'T OVERDO OR OVEREAT

But If You Do, a Few Doses of Black-Draught May Prevent Serious Trouble

Nowata, Okla.—Mr. W. B. Dawson, of this place, says:

"I have known of Black-Draught ever since I can remember; and of all the liver medicines I ever used, Black-Draught is without doubt the best. We would not be without it in the house.

"I used to take pills and different things, but after taking a course of strong medicine I would be left in a constipated condition, and would need then to use a laxative. But after I began to take Black-Draught I did not have any trouble of this kind.

"I take a big dose at night and follow a few nights with lighter doses, and I am like a new man until I overdo or overeat and neglect to take care of myself until the liver gets out of fix, when I have to go to Black-Draught again.

"Black-Draught, I have found, is all that is necessary for the bloated feeling in the stomach, sour stomach, or bad taste in the mouth so common in spring in the swampy country."

One Reason.

BY G. F. GIBBS.

Brother C. M. Stubblefield, in the Gospel Advocate of October 23, asks the question, "Why, then, do not more men begin preaching?" to which I offer the following suggestion as one answer. This suggestion I recently received in a brotherly conversation.

In considering the suggestion, I waive the possibilities of insufficient training in the home and the examples of ungodly parents, the tendency of the age in bending every energy to make money and then spending it in the gratification of the flesh, which are not only probable and possible, but are real hindrances to many in the spiritual life. I confine it to the various congregations of our fair land.

Humbly I would say there is a lack of encouragement upon the part of most congregations. Encouragement is fundamental to the making of preachers. A combined, concentrated effort toward encouragement will cause more men to begin preaching. By encouragement I do not mean flattery nor an habitual cut-and-dried compliment; not sympathy which is from the teeth outward; not a greater support in finances, though it may be needed; but a genuine sympathy creating a feeling of confidence and love which tend to encourage.

For instance, let each congregation wisely select one or more of its young men and deal with them in a godly manner. Encourage them to take publie part in the Lord's-day services and in the prayer meetings; in studying, in preaching, in growing up in the work. Having selected such a one, see to it that he is advised, criticized, and corrected in a way to build him up. If he makes mistakes, do not sneer, but pray; if he is awkward and embarrassed, shut your eyes and refuse to see it; If he needs education, help him in school, but do not send

The various churches know the kind of a preacher they want, and by following this plan they not only can have a man of their choice, but will promote Christianity throughout the world. If they choose, they can send their man or men out to preach in other places and invite other such men to be with them in their stead. In this way preachers will everywhere be available. More men will begin to preach.

Is this not in accordance with holy writ? Did not Paul use such a plan when he selected Timothy and Silas and other coworkers?

It is not my intention to make a preacher factory in the evil sense of the term, but according to a divine plan grow preachers, which are needed now, and, if the world stands, will be more needed, if such could be, as time rolls on.

Another suggestion of encouragement would be for the older preaching brethren to eliminate what is known as preacher jealousy. What is so disheartening as for a man of God, so recognized, to underrate the efforts of a young hopeful, refuse to attend his meetings, fail to lend a helping hand, give no exhortation to continue, and, in addition, is envious of the least success attained? Away with such!

This plan is being used to some extent in some few places. Will not others try it or make other suggestions?

Among the Colored Folks

M. Keeble writes of his work as follows:

On the first Lord's day in October, with the assistance of the Neshoba brethren and sisters, I began a meeting at Collierville, Tenn. This was an interesting meeting in many respects. The meeting was conducted under a tent, and the attendance was good. These people had never heard the pure gospel before, and it so enraged them that they reported to the leading white people that I was trying to create a riot between the white people and the colored people; and one night some white gentlemen came out to see what I was teaching, and they reported back to the town that my in-structions were good. When this falled to work, they began to put threatening letters on the table warning me to leave the country at once. Finally they got the man to whom the place belonged to make us move the tent, which we did; but I am sure we left the truth planted in their hearts, and some day it will come up and bring forth fruit to the glory of God. This meeting was liberally supported and attended by the Neshoba brethren and sisters. They had to come each night about twenty-eight miles, round trip; but it seemed to be a pleasure to them, because their hearts were in the work. Neshoba is a mission point itself, but it is do-ing more mission work than a great many of our older congregations. After having to close this meeting earlier than we expected, I spent the balance of the time preaching at Neshoba under the tent; and although it rained all the time, interest was good. I have agreed to spend a month with these faithful Christians next year.

On the third Lord's day in October I met with the church at Capleville, and we enjoyed two fine services. One was added by baptism. These brethren requested me to remain over with them and hold a tent meeting near White Haven. The tent was put up in a hotbed of sectarianism, and I, in the name of the Lord, sowed the seed of the kingdom of Christ. It made some awfully angry, but some seemed to enjoy listening to the gospel. I hope to go there again. There are some very faithful members in this congregation. The Neshoba mission was begun by this church. While in this section Sister Mira Allen, wife of Brother Mose Allen, died. She was taken suddenly ill while I was in their home on Lord's-day morning, and died in two or three days. She formerly lived in Lebanon, Tenn. She was faithful to Christ wherever she went, and she will be greatly missed.

On the fourth Lord's day in October I met with the brethren and sisters at Henderson, Tenn., and we worshiped for the first time in their new house, and it was a joyful time in Christ. Nearly three years ago I preached there in Brother Bose Croom's house. He and his wife and two daughters were the only members then; now the membership is over one hundred. Brother J. Hannon preaches for them once a month, and he is loved by all for his work's sake. The white brethren here have assisted us in every effort we have made and are still willing to aid us. When this meetinghouse is completed and seated, it will be equal to any we have. It will be known as the "Oak Grove church of Christ."

Oak Grove is the first church of Christ that I as an evangelist began in a destitute field. At Bellbuckle, Tenn., we are expecting to build soon. We now have a neat little building at Tullahoma, Tenn., that was put up by the white church of Christ at that place. All of this inspires and encourages me to press on. During the protracted-meeting season this year I have baptized fifty-nine, and eleven have been restored.

I am now en route home to be in a two-weeks' meeting there and also have the privilege of being with my family.

Causes of Juvenile Crime.

I think it would be fair to give as causes of the increase in Europe's boyhood crime the absence of parental authority (the father often being at war and the mother in the factory); decrease of schooling; evil shop influences; long hours and hard conditions of child labor; increase of wages without instruction in the proper use of money; employment in agriculture without wise supervision; decrease in activities of constructive social agencies and in right opportunity for helpful leisure; decrease of police protection; increase of all kinds of temptation: high costs; the bad example of soldiers on leave; increase of exciting motion pictures, "literature," etc.; and general war stimulation of an abnormal character. Some of these influences were to a small degree making themselves felt in the life of the newsboy who insisted that the kaiser was dead when he knew better.-Christian Herald.

The Romantic Story of Southland's Favorite Shoe, EzWear

Some five years ago, a prominent citizer of South Carolina, visiting New York on important business, chanced to meet the maker of a shoe built on new and unusual lines; an enthusiastic admirer of its mos listinctive features, ease and comfort, hao suggested the name EzWear; it was promptly adopted. The business man from EzWear; it the South, knowing how welcome such a thoe would be in his part of the country, arged that its remarkable qualities, in cluding not only comfort, but style, durability and economy, be made known there. That this has been effectively done is proven by the enormous demand that has sprung up in the South for EzWear shoes. It is said that its sale there during the last twelve months has increased fully three hundred per cent. The distributor, Mr. J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn. N. Y., says that all who wish to know about shoe that combines all worth-while shoe qualities, may have a copy of his money-saving shoe book for the asking.

The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too-children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes fight to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

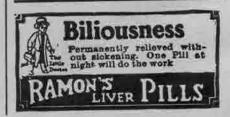

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "21% ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

11 HENS IDLE; NOW LAY 221 EGGS A MONTH

Mrs. Young Almost Gave Up Raising Chickens. Then She Tried This Plan

"When I accepted your offer and tried Don Sung, I had been getting I or 2 eggs every other day. The next month, using 50 cents' worth of Don Sung, my 11 hens laid 221 eggs. I almost gave up raising chick-ens, but now I have decided to raise as many as I can."—Mrs. F. C. Young, Belle-fonte, Pa.

221 eggs. I almost gave up raising chickens, but now I have decided to ruise as many as I can."—Mrs. F. C. Young, Bellefonte, Pa.

Feed is too expensive to waste on idle heus. You can easily start your hems laying and keep them laying, even in coldest winter. To prove it, all you need do is accept our offer, as Mrs. Young did.

Give your hems Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself, and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us, and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starits her laying.

Try Don Sung for thirty days, and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry-remedy dealer, or send 50 cents for a package by mall, prepaid. Burreil-Dugger Company, 477 Columbia Bailding, Indianapolis, Ind.

Jesus Christ, Our Great High Priest.

BY J. PERRY HODGE.

"And when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour. And I saw the seven angels which stood before God; and to them were given seven trumpets. And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne. And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand, And the angel took the censer, and filled it. with fire of the altar, and cast it into the earth: and there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake. And the seven angels which had the seven trumpets prepared themselves to sound." (Rev. 8: 1-6.)

Under the seventh seal John was shown the greater and better tabernacle, the high priest ministering at the golden or incense altar, the character of the service, and such incidentals as necessarily belong to a changed service, law, and priesthood. "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." (Heb. 7: 12.) Christ as our High Priest exercises his office in heaven itself. "For Christ is not entered into the holy place made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us." (Heb. 9: 24.) Nelther did he enter upon the duties of his office as high priest until first he had made one sacrifice for sins. "But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God." (Heb. 10: "But Christ being come a high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood be entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." (Heb. 9: 11, 12.)

"There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour," Since a change in the priesthood produced a change in the law (Heb. 7: 11, 12), the old Mosaic law had to be abolished before the new law under Christ went into effect. Speaking of the Messiah, Daniel (9: 27) said: "In the midst of the week [which, if Sunday is the first day of the week, was Wednesday] he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease." The sacrifice and oblation were ordinances of the law of Moses; for the law of Moses "stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation." (Heb. 9: 10.) Therefore, they were abolished by the cross of Christ (Eph. 2: 15; Col. 2% 14), he "having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances" (Eph. 2: 15), "and took it out of the way, nailing It to his cross" (Col. 2: 14). From his death, therefore, on the cross to the going into effect of the law under Christ there was silence in heaven. During forty days of this time that there was no law in force, the old having been nailed to the cross and the new not yet having been proclaimed to the world, Jesus was present with his chosen witnesses; but ten days of the time was spent by the apostles in waiting for the promised Holy Ghost (Luke 24: 49; Acts 1: 4). which, when Jesus was exalted to the right hand of God, and had received himself, he shed forth that outpouring of the Spirit that occurred on Pentecost (Acts 2: 1-4, 32, 33).

"I saw the seven angels which stood before God," (Rev. 8: 2,) Paul says all angels are ministering spirits sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation. (Heb. 1: 13, 14.) John speaks of "the seven Spirits which are before his throne," (Rev. 1: 4.) It may be that the seven angels and the seven Spirits just mentioned are all the same. The seven Spirits of God are represented under the symbol of seven lamps of fire burning before the throne. (Rev. 4: 5.) The seven Spirits are also spoken of as sent forth into all the earth, and are represented under the symbol of seven horns and seven eyes of the slain Lamb. (Rev. 5: 6.) Matthew records the sayings of Jesus. Speaking of himself and his angels, he says: "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." (Matt. 34: 31.) Paul, speaking of those who heard the sound (Rom. 10: 14-17), said: "But I say, Have they not heard? Yes verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world." (Rom. 10: 18.) Also, speaking of the work of the church of Thessalonica, he said: "For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to Godward is spread abroad," (1 Thess. 8.) From scriptures which we have used here it seems that the preaching of the word of the Lord is spoken of in the sense of the sounding of a trumpet; and when we take into consideration the fact that the great sound of a trumpet of the Lord's angels (Matt. 24: 31) was the means by which his elect were to be gathered together, we are still more inclined to believe that preaching the word of the Lord is the great sound of trumpet he had reference to, since the elect are those who have accepted Christ through the preaching of the gospel. and that we make that calling and election sure through continued faithfulness to his word (2 Pet. 1: 1-11).

Turning the Clock Hands Backward.

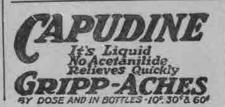

We have obeyed an executive mandate and turned back the hands of our timepieces. Every clock has come under the law, from the beau monde in the clock tribe in its trimmings of marble and bronze to the Big Ben to which some of the humbler folk look for the direction of our domestic activities. There was a time in the history of Judah when the clock was turned back by the power of God, and every student of the Book readily recalls the strange incident. Hezekiah was at death's door. The court physician was troubled and the members of the royal family were distressed. Isaiah, the prophet, came and told him to "set his house in order," for the summons was at hand, and left the palace in great sorrow, for he knew the good life of the good king; and Hezekiah, coveting life and the opportunities of his regal post and the assoclation of home and friendly circles. turned to God in earnest, fervent prayer While he prayed, the servant announced Isalah's return to the palace, and it was good tidings that the prophet brought, and good cheer was stamped upon his countenance, for he said that God had heard the prayer and the king would live. When the king asked for a sign that he might know that God had spoken through the prophet, Isalah was not offended, for he knew that false prophets had stood before Judah's throne. Looking through the palace window, he saw the sundial that Ahaz had added to the convenience of the palace, and suggested it as the test of truth. So the shadow was moved back on the sundial to prove that God had spoken through the prophet. Moving the shadow backward on the dial did not lessen the dark hours for Hezekiah, but his earnest prayer released forces that did decrease the dark hours and dark days. When it comes to the theme of divine intervention in response to human prayer, we are at the rim of a fathomless sea of mystery. Prayers of this kind may have greater power in one age than in another, as a certain type of miracles may be the product of one period rather than another. It is unquestionably true, however, in human experience, that forces are released through prayer that can lesser sorrow-laden hours. Moving the hands backward on the American clock will not lessen the hours of shadow and suffering, but there are forces that can diminish the darkness of our days and be brought into effective operation through prayer. Do you think Bolshevism was born in a prayer meeting? Do you think that the red flag of anarchy came from the loom of prayerful men's thinking? Perhans our conferences would be more successful if there should be more real praying in the sessions where men meet to adjust differences. Can men pray for their employees in all sincerity and fail to do their uttermost to reduce to the minimum unsanitary and hazardous environment for their employees? Can men pray earnestly for peace and sharpen the sword on a hidden grindstone? Can men pray fervently for their country's welfare and seek willfully to loosen its underpinning? Can men pray fervently for the relief of the distressed and refuse for selfish reasons to devote energy and time and skill for the production of life's necessities? Prayer can change the night to day, even though moving the hands of the clock back does not change the number of hours of daylight and darkness. Human lips may have a thousand dialects in the speech of man to man, but there is one language in the speech of man to God, and that Is the language of prayer. We can stand all the dialects of the world in this country, if we can make this one language of prayer the prevailing tongue in our American life. Men have to learn to say together, "Our Father," before they can say to each other, "My brother." . .

Let our churches these times have more time for prayer on the schedule of public services, and let our homes keep the altar flame aglow. Never in our history as a nation have we needed more a praying church.-Robert N. Simpson, in Alabama Christian.

If the manifestation of the Savior had done nothing else, would not this be much-this eternal reassertion of the essential dignity and capacity of human life?-Phillips Brooks.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-Time Recipe that Anybody Can Apply

The use of sage and sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy, and attrac-Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Comyou will get this famous old pound," preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Aplin, November 1.-On Saturday night before the third Sunday in October I was at Ravia, Okla., and gave a special lecture for the High School, preached Sunday, and remained there for several nights, giving a lecture course which was appreciated by the town. I then went over to Tishomingo to lecture a few nights; but two nights gave me enough of that town, as the people there, both saints (?) and sinners, as for the greater part, are given over to the lust of the flesh. Perhaps I could have worked up some interest if I could have remained there for a month; but as my time was arranged so I could not do this, I "kicked" the dirt off my feet and went on my way. I stopped off at Coalgate, where Brother Foy Wallace Brother Acuff were in a good meeting. I enjoyed myself with them and the church there. Brother lace can preach, and I tell you Brother Acuff knows how to sing. He does not have to "tunehist" for thirty minutes before he can start the song, either; he just opens his mouth and lets the "song wave roll," to the delight of all. I am now at this place giving a course of my lectures and will preach here Sunday. Then I am to give two lectures at Casa, then at Danville, then at Havana. Brethren, If you need me in this part or anywhere, write me for the next ten days at Havana, Ark., in care of L. O. White; but any mall addressed to me at Denton, Texas, will reach me.-D. S. Ligon.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILI TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. FOOT TROUBLES

No Need of Them, Says Brooklyn Man, Who Has Evidently Solved a Big Problem.

According to the testimony of hundreds of people living in the southland and elsewhere, J. R. Simon of 1589 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. Y., has successfully developed a system of shoe building having for its prime object the conquering of foot and shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Simon's shoe troubles. It appears that Mr. Smon's establishment has become national head-quarters for people whose feet require his remarkable comfort shoe, known as the EzWear, but obtainable only of the inventor. Mr. Simon's new catalogue shows several hundred shoes that combine comfort with style at amazingly low prices and is now ready for free distribution,

A Leader of Men.

You can tell a leader of men because he is attacked. He draws upon himself a concentrated fire of venom and virulence that the lesser breed escapes. Like towering hills that he remembers he stands above the dreary, fogbound pessimism of the vale. His feet are planted surely, upon a mount of vision and the horizon he commands is wide, with the openness of all the sky there is and the rejoicing freedom of the sun.

To assert oneself is to be challenged. If you are assailed, it is a sign that you count for something. Some one has found it worth his while to attempt to bawl you down or to drag you out. You seem to deserve abuse. You are large enough to prove a tempting target. Consider yourself complimented when you are the object of attack; it is a tribute to your eminence, whether you sought that eminence or tot.

No man becomes a leader who is ultrasensitive, who gets bitter and sullen under censure, who lashes frantically back when he is lightly stung, who has a tart rejoinder for every trifling provocation.

The strong men endure a great deal in silence. They open not their mouths to the "assassins of character." They let the fruit of their own bands in its own time provide the denial of all cruel innuendoes. "What say they? Let them say!" They have their work to do; they must move on; they have not time to put an ear to the ground and alter their course for a vibration or a reverberation.

Courage is a quality loved of all men, even those who have none of it. Many errors and fantastic performances are foreign to a man who hits out, speaks out, and definitely ranges himself on one clear side or the other of an issue while many trim and dge and tergiversate. The crowd is ways looking for a dominating our, even as a girl seeks a lover tho (though he do so gently and considerately) takes command. He must be sure of himself ere he can be sure of her. Even so, the American public takes to its heart a certain robust and sturdy assertiveness that is often neighborly to vanity. In such inspiring moral earnestness it condones the faults that are due to an excessive militancy in the disposition. It welcomes the virile relief from the twilight zone of thought and feeling, to which a timid habit on the part of so many men condemns them. Mistakes of commission are the more pardonable. Those who do nothing never do anything wrong. But no man ever led other men on a platform of inanition and negation.-Philadelphia Public Ledger

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a Class of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back, or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive. It cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

A Survey from the Corner Stone. BY J. J. VANHOUTIN.

Among the different violations of God's law to the children of Israel for which death was the penalty was the removal of the ancient landmarks or corner stones of the original survey in the division of the land and lots made by Joshua. Old landmarks and corner stones should never be maliclously removed. The man who does so may gain a few feet of dirt, but it is a violation of both human and divine law. Christ is the chief corner stone of God's great spiritual kingdom, or church. It was first laid in Zion, and the apostles appeared to be the surveyors and used the prophecies as field notes and surveyed the gospel line throughout the world, so much so that there was "no speech nor language where their voice was not heard," as David had prophesied in the nineteenth Psalm. Now preachers in surveying the gospel line must follow the apostolic line back to Jerusalem, and then follow the old survey according to the law and the prophets. If some corner stones on a farm have been removed and the farmer wants them replaced, how would it do for a surveyor to start from some uncertain corner and make new lines and new corners for every man that owned ten or twenty acres in the section? Only those who would profit by the removal of the corners and designated the place from which to start would be satisfied. So, in the proclamation of the gospel, if men have lost sight of Christ, the chief corner stone, they want something else and start out on uncertain theories which profit no man except the surveying preacher, who may secure a few dollars by building upon a sandy foundation. The field to be surveyed is the world, and whatever line or corner was established by the apostles must stand unmolested. The line of preaching to all the nations must stand. The gospel in its purity must be preached, then the faith would be pure. That pure faith leads to a reformation, and that reformation leads to obedience, and that obedience leads through the institution of baptism, and that baptism leads a man through the ceremony where the word "into" conveys the man "Into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." That word "into" in the ceremony is the only word which conveys the man into the names mentioned; and no man ever baptized any one Into Christ's name when he left the "into" out of the ceremony, Keep in the straight and narrow way surveyed by Christ and his apostles with prophetic field notes.

His face always wore the same expression-the look of the stoker who comes to the deck for a breath of fresh air. His business was, once every second, to give a certain machine a twist in order that a piece of wire might bend into a circle. He had done this sort of thing so long that two fingers had acquired a peculiar hardened curvature. One shoulder was lower than' the other. He knew no other business.

It seems that the man had had an unusual boyhood. While others were at their sport, his hours were spent in passionate reverie. The literature of romantic chivalry, the story of followers of the Cross, the fine heroism of scul-starving deeds for others claimed him and made him tremulous with aspiration. He knew of nothing larger, more captivating for him than a life eked out in some remote field of self-sacrifice for the redemption of the human race; and to this he pledged himself. But then his father died. Ruin was the specter at the funeral feast. An unnamed Namesis pursued him, try as he might to keep faith with himself and the call of mortal hunger. Self-sacrifice.

Studies in Church History

By A. B. L.

I shall endeavor to give to our readers in a series of articles a resume of the social, moral, and religious conditions that prevailed in the Græco-Roman world at the time when Jesus was born. If you follow the story closely, you will appreciate more than ever Paul's declaration that he came "in the fullness of the time." Our approach to the lesson is by no means agreeable. It is an unpleasant task to draw aside the veil which covers the vice and sin of the ancient world. But this is necessary if we would have a complete picture. It is still more unpleasant to call attention to the sins of our own generation. But no one will gainsay the positive duty of the gospel preacher along this line. The need of a modern Elijah was never more apparent. Sin in high places and in low places needs to be uncovered. It must be uncovered before the remedy can be applied. Even the sociologist, who studies society from the purely scientific viewpoint, chooses as his motto, "Nil admirori." Let things appear as they are, it matters not how ugly they may seem to be. The mistake which some critics make is in relating only the bad side. They portray society in terms almost exclusively lurid. I have heard some persons speak of Nashville in such awful terms that one's first impulse would be to move to Africa. Of course, this is the pessimistic view. It is like Byron's description of an outcast:

With pleasure drugged, he almost longed for woe, And e'en for change of scene would seek the shades below.

The honest critic never overlooks the brighter side. This, too, must be considered, if we would have an adequate, balanced, and truthful picture.

Paul, who knew the Hellenistic age better than any modern writer, outlines a dark and lurid aspect in the first chapter of the letter to the Romans. (Verses 21-32.) By grouping the information obtained from other sources, we may study in detail the picture of which Paul gives the forbidding background.

Why Rome Fell.

First we should note the economic and social effects produced by war just prior to Christ that find expression in the peace that reigned. That peace was the aftermath of four hundred years of unintermittent warfare. Alexander's world conquests were followed by the struggles of the Diadochi until the Romans made a universal conquest. The Romans had carried on a long warfare to extend their rule over Italy; they had also fought the Carthaginians to convert the Mediterranean into a Roman sea. Finally the Roman civil wars deluged the whole world in blood.

The economic results of many wars were very disheartening. Conditions were very similar to those now prevalent in Belgium and the devastated portions of France. The lands which furnished the battle grounds were exhansted. Colossal armies had been billeted upon the helpless populations. Bread earners had been pressed into service. Crops over large areas were destroyed lest they should feed an enemy. The very means of their agriculture had been removed-horses and all draft animals and farming implements. Furthermore, there was a disdisposition not to work. Tens of thousands of soldiers never returned. Those who did return were unaccustomed to the useful monotony of daily labor. Having been in the pay of the state, they looked to the state still to provide for them. They also looked for some substitute for excitement and bloodshedding. Militarism, never the nurse of social virtues, became increasingly influential. The country was open to the exploitation of foreign capitalists. "Trusts" were formed, and small proprietors became fewer as the oligarchy encroached. Profiteering was the rule rather than the exception. Matters grew worse as Rome entered upon the conquest of the rich East. Immense sums poured into the treasury to be disgorged into private pockets. There was a constant drift to the cities, partly because of the decline of agriculture and partly because the cities afforded ample means of amusement and excitement. The cost of living rose, and was met by a decreasing marriage and birth rate. The sturdy character of the Roman soon deteriorated amid self-indulgence. Her sudden and unnatural wealth ruined her. She had not the education to handle it aright. And so Rome fell.

Why America May Fall.

It does not take an alarmist to see that similar conditions prevail in our country to-day. The high cost of living and the disposition to do as little work as possible with the highest pay that can possibly be squeezed out of the employer are the two great causes of social unrest, It is an evil sign when one has to be begged or forced to work. Paul wrote: "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, if any will not work, neither let him eat." Profiteering is unmercifully condemned both in the Old Testament and in the New Testament. Yet the profiteer is a menace in every city of our land to-day. Our government machinery is diverted from its normal functions to check him. The President and the Congress must cease their deliberations upon affairs of state to protect the nation's coal pile. When was there ever such a drift to the cities as at the present time? It is practically impossible to secure farm help, and kitchen help has become a luxury. The very art that we formerly contended led to the folly of the German emperor and the disintegration of the German people, we ourselves have adopted. The militaristic spirit is being fostered and encouraged in our leading schools. While the cost of living soars, the rich are becoming richer, the self-indulgent are becoming more self-indulgent. What shall the end of these things be? Is God a respecter of nations? Do not the same causes produce the same effects? We must put on the brakes, we must scotch the wheels of superficial civilization, we must get right with God, or some hundreds of years from now the teacher may be explaining to the children "why America fell." 0 0 0

Three Test Questions of Civilization.

There are three test questions that may be rightfully asked of any civilization. First: Does it treat persons as things? Second: What constitutes its amusements? Third: What are the characteristics of its sex life? A corollary of the third question is: What is its treatment of women and children? Upon the answers to these three leading questions depends the social status of the civilization in question. In each of these three points the Græco-Roman world was at fault.

Ancient society rested upon the foundation of slavery. History has shown that slavery exerts a deteriorating effect upon the character of owners. It fosters the cruel spirit and indifference to suffering. It encourages idleness and dissipation. Why work, when there are slaves to do one's bidding? Thus work became distasteful to the Greeks and later to the Romans. The very Greek word that means manual labor also means contempt. The plunder of conquest inoculated the Roman with an aversion to hard work. The Jew alone gave to toll an honorable place.

The student of the New Testament will not fail to notice the many exhortations addressed to slaves and to their masters. This is explained by the fact that slaves constituted a large part of human society. Le Maistre estimates that there were sixty millions in the empire. In Pergamum there was one slave to every two freemen. In Athens during the time of Demertius Phalereus there were four hundred thousand slaves to twenty thousand freemen. In Corinth four hundred and sixty thousand were found. The most fruitful source of slavery was war: next to that were piracy, kidnaping, slave breeding, and debt.

The Slave Was a Thing.

The slave was a thing, not a person. He had no rights and enjoyed no protection from the brutality of his master. The master could inflict any punishment he pleased, could torture and maim and crucify. For a paltry offense the masters would cut off their hands or throw them as food to the fishes. If a master was murdered, the whole family of slaves was executed. Augustus is said to have crucified Eros, his steward, for eating a quall. Roman ladies tore their maids' faces or drove pins into their flesh if a curl was out of place. It was no unusual thing for a master to have a sort of harem among his younger female slaves, for the slave girl had no protection against his lust. It is no wonder slaves sometimes took vengeance, and there arose the saying: "So many slaves, so many enemies."

Degrading Amusements.

The amusements of this period were not elevating. The stage was a degrading factor. Low comedy was the favorite kind of play. Terence in his urbane style set before his audience a refined, good-mannered society in which the motto is: "To step aside is human." Audiences applauded scheming vice and laughed when the virtuous girl was ensared by the clever lover. Do we not find almost a modern counterpart to this low ideal in the ever-increasing popularity of frivolous comedies? Are not the favorite plays those that suggest disloyalty, if not open adultery, upon the part of husband or wife? Do not we, too, need to be reminded of the solemn truth that when we laugh at sacred things we say good-by to social order?

Brewer's Book on the "Model Church."

The author's chief purpose in writing this book was to create a higher degree of efficiency in the workings of the local congregation. He would awaken many from a lethargic and disorganized condition and bring them to that point where they might conduct the Lord's work in a businesslike way and at the same time be controlled by the mind of Christ in all things. The book is written in pointed style and is conveniently arranged for class study. While it is of special interest to the leaders, at the same time it is of such a wholesome nature as to afford profitable reading for all the members. The book deserves a large circulation. The prices are very reasonable. Single copy, prepaid, $1; one dozen copies, prepaid, $9; twenty-five copies, not prepaid, $17. Order to-day from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

Dress-Its Evils.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

Dress has been a subject of deep concern with all nations, and God's people have not escaped its influence. The character and the degree of civilization are Indicated by the babits of dress. The different nationalities to-day may often be recognized by the different costumes and dress, and even traits of character may be indicated by the kind of dress or lack of dress. We are familiar with the old adage that "dress does not make the man." This is true; it does not make the man, but is a prominent indication of the character of the man. All things being equal, I think that we can learn the habits of thought and traits of character by observing the dress of people to-day.

There are two primary ideas connected with dress. The first is the preservation of health or comfort; the second is the prevention of immodest exposure. The first idea of dress has to do with our physical comfort; the second. with our moral influence. Character is displayed in the taste and selection of suitable materials, as well as the adaptation of proper selection of colors and style to the age. complexion, and form of the wearer. I am mindful of the tyranny of Dame Fashion. I know the rigid law of style and how keenly one feels the demands of fashlon. Many conform to the style of the present day who in heart do not approve of it. Many mothers select patterns in style and make or have made the clothing of their daughters, who do not, in the depth of their heart, approve of the lunmodest clothing which their daughters wear, and many daughters wear clothing which conforms to the modern style who do not approve in their heart of the style. They are all forced, as they feel, to conform to the prevailing style or be ostracized from society. Such is the galling bendage of fashion to many of its unwilling slaves. What shall be done? What can be done? What ought God's neople to do?

One of the first questions that a Christian should ask in regard to a style is: "Is it modest?" Good taste and sound judgment should be used by Christian fathers and mothers; tact and rare skill must be used by those who have the oversight and training of young people in the service of God. God requires "that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefastness and sobriety; not with braided hair, and gold or pearls or costly raiment." (1 Tim. 2: 9.) This means that no style of dress should be used which suggests ideas of indelicacy, coarseness, or indecency. Women and girls who are pure and modest in thought seek rather to escape than to attract observation of the opposite sex, and must be taught to reject any style or costume which violates any rule of modesty. Any style which shocks the modesty of purity or innocence cannot be justified by any rule of decent society and must be rejected and spurned by God's people.

No woman or girl who violates the simple law of modesty in dress should complain of being the object of lustful admiration or the subject of unfavorable remarks. Sometime ago a girl dressed (or undressed) in the extreme fashion asked a young man: "What makes you so bad?" He answered: "You and those who dress like you." We regret to think that there was much truth in his answer. No Christian can tempt or become a temptation of evil thoughts to any one. Christian mothers and daughters all over the land are violating the letter and spirit of God's law which says: "Whose adorning let it not be the outward adorning of braiding the hair, and of wearing jewels of gold, or of putting on apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in the incorruptible apparel of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." (I Pet. 3: 3, 4.) The proper ornament of a woman is that which best becomes her, which is a meek and quiet spirit, with a trained heart and hand to help and sympathize with all in the true mission of life.

All honor should be given to the boys and girls who have the independence of character and moral courage to reject any style or fashion which is contrary to the spirit of Christ, who will follow the dictates of the Scriptures rather than the folly of an immodest and immoral style. Teachers of young people should take advantage of their opportunity and impress upon all the will of God in regard to dress. True gospel preachers should cry aloud and spare not against the wicked and indecent fashions of the present-day civilization. All should be taught that a character in harmony with God's will is more to be admired than a body dressed in the height of fashion. God's people are to set the standard of what is honorable and truthful, what is fair and just in the busy affairs of life, what are the noble traits of true manhood and true womanhood. Why should they not set the standard of modest dress? It is as important to set the standard of dress as It is to set the standard of right and duty. God's Book teaches and regulates the subject of dress as clearly as it does truthfulness. Surely there is a happy medium between the extreme of style and tashion which God's people can choose. They can choose a dress which is "cheap enough for the poorest and good enough for the best," This would exclude such peculiar material as to attract attention by the gaudiness of its colors, the extravagance of its trimmings, or the oddity and immodesty of its style. No true. modest Christian woman can afford to become the gazingstock of a crowd of culgar idlers.

People should go to the meetinghouse or place of worship to adore and praise God and not to show their dress. It seems that many attend church merely to show their dress: and this may be true of men as well as of women. Easter Sunday has become show day for many churchgoing people. This is exceedingly foolish as well as downright wicked. All worshipers should have a decent respect for the place of worship and should attend this place clothed in suitable apparel; but it is not in harmony with the teaching and the spirit of Christ to go bedecked in extravagant dress and fewelry. When Christians attend a place of worship, they should appear in plain, simple, modest clothing that will not disturb the thoughts of others, nor detract their own thoughts from the Items of worship. Oftentimes people are so anxiously concerned about their apparel that they cannot set their minds " on the things that are above."

The wearing of jewelry merely as ornamentation has been condemned in the Scriptures, especially when the emphasis has been put upon the wearing of jewelry. A profusion of rings, chains, pins, charms, and bracelets is not in good taste with a meek and quiet spirit in the service of the Lord. Such things as go along with the tinsel show of the present age is a reversion to the savage state. Profusion of jewelry and scantiness of dress do not belong to truly cultured people. Much of the so-called "up-to-date styles" belongs to coarse, vulgar minds and carries one back to the savage state. No one following the spirit of Christ and using the material blessings that he placed in his hands will pervert them in such a way.

Besides the indecency and lewdness which many styles suggest, there is another sin involved: it is the pride and vanity on the part of the wearer. Much of the dress of the present age fosters pride in the hearts of the people A proud heart and haughty life have been condemned in all ages. Humility of heart is one essential element of character which commends one to God. No one should follow a habit of dress which would cause one to violate the very spirit of humility. "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." Modern dress in the height of fashion, with its attendant ornamentation of jewelry, hinders one from humbling himself before God and living in the spirit of humility. One who is so dressed unfits himself for humble service unto God. May the Lord bless us all in conforming our lives to the simple life of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Education and Christianity.

BY E. L. CONWELL.

As a school-teacher, I want to say a few words about education and Christianity,

Every Christian who studies the Bible knows he must obey God's law and the civil law so long as it does not conflict with the divine. These civil laws make education compulsory, and the State usually forms our curricula. Really, politics runs the entire system. There is much that is admirable in our system of education, which may be briefly stated as follows: "To provide moral instruction, stress truthfulness, temperance, patriotism, respect for work, purity, and obedience to parents and law." This should certainly mold a fine type of character in the child; but spiritual direction is lacking.

There are two general points of view in America on the use of the Bible in the schools. An extract from the laws of North Dakota will explain one: "The Bible shall not be excluded from schools as a sectarian book, but may, at the option of the teacher, be read without sectarian comment, for not more than ten minutes daily. Pupils whose parents object need not read or be present at the reading." In many other States, like Illinois and Wisconsin, the Bible is not permitted to be read at all, because the Supreme Courts held "that reading the Bible in public schools made the schoolhouse for the time being a place of worship; that it was also in a sense sectarian instruction, and that no taxpayer could be compelled to support a place of worship."

Next let us consider briefly a few of the things the child comes into contact with in the schoolroom. With his plastic mentalliy and responsive, warm heart, he gets, indeed, much that is beautiful and wholesome in literature. Science and mathematics train him to think. He learns to prove things. But among our textbooks are some that are compiled by men "carried away with their own wisdom." Ancient history will tell him of prehistoric man of "autocathonous creation," or man springing from the dust without God's creating him. The biological theories will deal with evolution, and geographies present theories that. with his lack of biblical teaching, will tend to make him skeptical. He will get only the virtues of great men as he studies their biographies. Just a little later and research will show him that these characters were human and often had many ugly traits. He will begin to ask himself whether anything be true. Here is where he needs a good foundation of biblical learning. But what has he? A dim recollection of a few characters studied in Sunday school and some faint idea of sermons heard in the annual protracted meeting. Perhaps at this period he leaves home attracted to the city, or perhaps death may suddenly claim him. Will his school training alone prepare him to meet death or temptation?

What must we do to provide for the child's spiritual instruction? God told the Israelites that his commandments should be taught in their homes: "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." (Dout. 6: 7.) This teaching should begin at the cradle. Obedience should be taught. If parents through careful study and prayer would but teach their children obedience. Our Heavenly Father chastises us, and we profit and love him the more for it. The same principle will apply with children. Love should be the guide here, just as love, not fear, should make us desire to do God's will.

The home should be made attractive so the child will love it beyond the street or "movie" or worse places. Let the parents really study making the home beautiful and attractive, and happiness will lodge therein.

Give the Bible a chance in the home. I said the child learned to prove things. The Bible can stand all the searchlights of the savants, and its teachings will stand out in more perfection by the revelations of true science. Teach the child to memorize passages. Help him to a system of study that will clearly reveal the plan of salvation. Here he will find the faults of great men given along with the virtues, and they will warn him. He will, he must, feel the word working its power in his soul; and when the preacher interprets, the child's own wisdom responds, and he knows how to obey the "come unto me." So the parent should bring up the child "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

Have you considered how small the percentage of Christians is? Take Buddhism and Mohammedanism and our other paganisms with their millions. Come closer home, consider the number of Catholics, then the various branches of Protestants. Sift from these the true followers. How very small! And millions with no creed at all. How fearfully great the harvest is, and how small the number of laborers! We all want to do something for the Master, The first opportunity is at home. Paul must have directed many souls to Christ. What might be the result if the children were brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord! How full our churches would be! How we would "visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction," and keep ourselves "unspotted from the world!"

"Preach the Word."

BY S. WHITFIELD.

"I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and dectrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound dectrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." (2 Tim. 4: 14.)

This was a very solemn and important charge that Paul gave to Timothy. When Paul told him to "preach the word," that limited him in his preaching to the word of God, and it forbade him to preach anything else. This is what the church and the world needs; this is what it has always needed and always will need. We do not need so much explaining or interpreting as we do the word itself. It is plain enough, and it is its own best interpreter.

In the last of the previous chapter Paul has taught us that the scripture "is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." This is all that man needs. It will save him from his past sins and will save us forever. Therefore, preach it.

Paul said that the time would come when people would not endure sound doctrine, and it certainly has come. It is here right now. It is not all in the world, either. It is in the church. It is right among those who profess to be the real and true followers of Christ.

The word of God is the seed of the kingdom. We are taught that whatever we sow we will reap. So if we sow the word of God in the hearts of the people, we may expect to reap something good; but if we sow our opinions, theories, speculations, and doctrines of men, we may be sure that the results will be evil. We cannot be too careful.

Through the word of God we bear heaven's message to us. It quickens the sinner, saves and purifies him. By it we are sanctified and sealed as the children of God. We should, therefore, preach it without addition, subtraction, or perversion; preach it in its purity and in its simplicity.

Man's duty from the word of God can be easily learned. It is much easier to learn it than it is to do it. It is our duty to learn and preach the simple and plain things that are taught in the Bible. If we look for trouble in the Bible, we will find it, especially if we are very anxious to see it; but to the honest person who desires to do God's will there is no trouble.

"Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?" (1 Cor. 15; 29.) It would be easy to find trouble in this passage and speculate about it if we were disposed to do it. The most likely meaning a person would put on it is baptism by proxy. This passage will admit of this meaning, but the general teaching on baptism is opposed to such a meaning. "Baptism" is for the remission of sins, to be saved, or to get ready for death and the judgment. So it will not always do to put an interpretation on a passage that it will admit of. Interpretations must not be put on difficult passages that are out of harmony with the plain teaching of God's truth. We should let the plain passages interpret the dark ones. We know that God cannot lie. What the Bible plainly teaches is true. Putting an interpretation on prophecies that contradicts the plain and evident teaching of the word of God is charging God with falsehood; but the real trouble is with man, and not with the Scriptures. It is much easier to imagine the fault is in another rather than in us. Endless trouble has been brought into the religious world through preaching opinions, theories, and speculations, and the end is not yet. A great many false and very dangerous doctrines have been introduced through speculating on difficult passages and prophecies, and preaching these speculations instead of God's truth; and when people do this, they are sure to make their speculations more important than the plainest lessons in God's truth.

Secret things belong to God, but revealed things belong to us. We should stay on our own side, and not wish to make ourselves appear smart in trying to get on God's side and help him out. We will find enough to keep us busy all our lives on our own side, if we do our duty to God, ourselves, and to our fellow creatures. Let us "preach the word," and leave the rest with God.

An Important Meeting.

BY L. L. BRIGANCE.

Nearly every one takes a day off and enjoys a holiday on Thanksgiving. Many go hunting or visiting or spend the day in some other form of recreation. Possibly some are planning now how or where they will spend the day this year. The Board of Trustees and friends of Freed-Hardeman College have decided to have a meeting at Henderson on the coming Thanksgiving Day. This is an invitation to you to visit the town and school on this occasion. The homes of Henderson will be open to you and a hearty welcome will be given. The school is the largest for several years, and exceptionally fine work is being done in all departments. The Bible classes, of which there are several, are large and enthusiastic.

An interesting program is being prepared for the entertainment and instruction of all. This program will be given during the forenoon. It will not be in the form of the usual Thanksgiving program, but will consist of songs, readings, etc., culminating in a sermon by Brother E. A. Elam, editor of the Gospel Advocate. The afternoon will be spent in the discussion of the school and its interests. We hope to have present most of our preachers in this territory, whose presence will add greatly to the interest of the occasion.

We feel certain that you cannot spend the day more pleasantly or profitably than to attend this meeting. It will be worth all of your time and expenses to meet your brethren from other parts of the country, get acquainted with the preachers about whom you have heard or read, and especially to hear Brother Elam preach.

 We want you to see the school and become personally acquainted with the great work it is trying to do.

Remember the day—Thanksgiving Day, November 27, 1919; and the place—Henderson, Tenn.

THE CHILD AT THE DOOR.

"Four hundred thousand of these suffering Armenians and Syrians are little children."

A child is crying beyond our door, In the cold and the wind and the wild downpour. (How can we sit at ease within?) A child is calling beyond our gate, Starving and stark and desolate.

The doors of the world are heavy and tall, But the cry of a child can pierce them all (The cry of a child in angulsh sore); And though it sounds from a land apart,

(How can we bid the feast begin?)

And though it sounds from a land apart
"Tis at our threshold and at our heart.

(A child is crying beyond our door.)

How may we sit content and warm,
When a child is lost in the night and storm?
(The night of famine, the storm of war.)
How can we break our bread in ease,
Hearing the voice of the least of these?
(A child is crying beyond our door.)

Series on Church History.

The first-page editor of the Gospel Advocate is giving considerable thought and research in the preparation of a series of articles dealing with church history. The purpose is not only to give the main historical facts, but to point out in so far as possible the modern application of the principles involved. The series will begin in our next issue. By saving your copy from week to week and pasting the articles in a scrapbook, you may have a brief, but very convenient, church history. By all means you should send in the subscription of your friend in order that no one may miss the splendid special numbers that appear each month. 'The next will be the "Sermon" Number. It will prove to be very inspiring, both to the preacher and to the audience. Among the many important features will be: "The Study of Effective Sermons," "Preparation and Delivery," "Selection of Texts and Illustrative Matter." It will contain the very things that many of our readers are asking for. Send us those two dollars to-day with the name and address of a new subscriber. You can at least do that much to encourage and benefit some struggling PUBLISHERS GOSPEL ADVOCATE.

Mission Work in Colorado.

BY J. C. M'Q.

During my stay with Brother Fugua I talked freely with him about his indebtedness and management of his affairs. We agreed that it would be well for him to make a statement of all his indebtedness. When this is done, as he thinks the amount will not be very large, I think the indebtedness should be lifted and that the work should be put on a basis that will remove the necessity of his going in debt. Brother Fuqua has a job press, with some type and cases, which he uses in printing tracts on the plan of salvation. I think he does no commercial printing. He is now writing a brief commentary on First Corinthians, which he expects to print and bind in book form. He hopes to derive sufficient funds from the sale of this commentary to help him pay his debts and also to help maintain evangelistic work in which he is engaged. This is commendable in him, for self-help is the best help. I shall be gratified to learn that his hopes have been realized and to know that he has had a large sale of the commentary.

While Brother Fuqua has not asked the brethren to send in advanced orders for the commentary, it would be well for brethren to send him one dollar and fifty cents, with the understanding that he will send them a copy of the book as soon as it is printed, and with the assurance that if the book is never published they will be glad for him to use the money for the preaching of the gospel in Colorado. I am suggesting this because I know that an evangelist cannot do the work that he should do so long as his influence is neutralized by debt and so long as he is harassed and worried by collectors. An evangelist, in order to do his best work for Christ, must be free to devote his abilities to the work. It would be well for a church or churches to undertake to furnish Brother Fugua sufficient support for the work. This support should be furnished in a systematic, businesslike way, and other churches should be given to understand that these churches are taking care of his support. The haphazard method of contribution leads to some receiving nothing, while others receive more than is necessary for their support. System and business methods are as essential in religion as anywhere else. Mission work has been badly crippled by the lack of common sense and by failure to employ business methods in the work.

Summing up what I have said on the subject of evangelizing in this part of Colorado, it seems to me it would be well for the churches to support a good evangelist for the work in Denver and surrounding territory, with the understanding that Brother E. E. Shoulders, who is now in Denver, will be utilized to cooperate and work with this evangelist. In addition to this, Brother Fuqua should be furnished fifty dollars more per month, so that he can be free to devote all of his time to the work of preaching the gospel. Our columns are open to suggestions from brethren on this subject.

I discovered a character of opposition in Colorado that is calculated to retard the work of preaching the gospel. I found some ready to make opinions a test of fellowship. and some who were ready to reject as unworthy of support and fellowship all preachers who were classed as "college preachers" and who favored teaching the Bible in schools. A good brother in Colorado Springs informed me that fellowship had been withdrawn from him because he favored teaching the Bible in schools and because he would not uphold evangelists in exercising what is called "evangelistie authority." It seems that such evangelists are ready to cast out and boycott all whom they call "college preachers," even though there is no charge against their moral character and nothing against their Christian conduct. I learned from Brother John D. Evans, of Denver, that he had not been permitted to preach in the church at Colorado Springs simply because he sometimes wrote for the Gospel Advocate and was regarded as favoring "Bible schools." I also found especially one preacher in Denver and a few members who were obsessed with the idea that the schools were actually levying a tax on the churches and collecting it for their support. It was something new to me that any Christian would object to teaching the Bible anywhere. The Bible should be taught in the home, in the church, and in the school. I may say that I do not know any place where I would not be anxious and ready to teach the Bible. I would teach it in a saloen, if granted the privilege. I have known for some time that Roman Catholies had practically shut the Bible out of our public schools. but it is something new to me that even Christian people would drive it from schools taught by Christians. I have never had anything to do with deeding any kind of schools to churches and do not know of any school that is owned by churches. I am firm in the conviction that Christians are bound by Jehovah to teach the word of God on all occasions, and to teach it anywhere and everywhere opportunity presents itself.

Concerning teaching the commands of God it was said to the Jews: "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thy hand, and they shall be for frontlets between thine eyes. And thou shalt write them upon the doorposts of thy house, and upon thy gates." By good authority we are told that "to live in a community where there was no Bible school was forbidden to the godly Jews." A Talmudic authority said: "A village without a school for children ought to be destroyed." And it was even said after the destruction of Jerusalem that the disaster came because the schools there (which were said to be something near five hundred) were neglected.

The evidence is so overwhelming that the Jews had Rible schools that it is wholly unnecessary to multiply authorities. Obviously it is in the light of well-known Jewish customs that we are to interpret the terms "teach" and "teaching" in the narrative of our Savior's life work. It is in the same light, also, that we must read the great commission as it stands in this one undisputed, authentic form in Matt. 28; 19, 20; "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." It should be noted that the Savior does not specify any method of going: neither does he prescribe any method of teaching. He does, however, limit them in what they are to teach. He authorizes them to teach what he has commanded them. In making disciples, no evangelist has the right to alter or change the conditions given by Christ. As no manner of going is mentioned and as no method of teaching is named, of necessity the eleven disciples or aposties were left to exercise their own judgment as to the best manner of going and as to the best or most efficient method of teaching. However, when God leaves it to the common sense of man as to method, he demands that the man shall use that method that is the most efficient and which will best serve the purposes of Jehovah. As the apostles were Jews and were trained in the synagogue schools, it is but natural and reasonable to suppose that Christ in the commission gave them authority to organize Bible schools everywhere as the very basis or foundation of the church. Whatever else is added, the feature of teaching the word of God to children and the childlike in classes under skilled teachers must not be lacking.

Frequently, however, people who are not accustomed to reasoning imagine that there is no authority for teaching the word of God in classes in a Bible school unless the Savior had specifically said "teach in classes." But, if such people would only reflect a little, they would see at once that, if Christ had said this, no man would be allowed to teach the word of God except in classes. This would reduce such a position to an absurdity. When the Savior commands us to teach and leaves the method of teaching open to our judgment, he leaves us free to use any method that does not contravene his law. This commission is certainly authority for teaching the Bible in classes, in schools, or anywhere else. But while it gives this authority, it does not tie the man to any specific method of teaching to the exclusion of other methods, This of Itself should show the critics of teaching the Bible in school and in classes that they have no right to bind Christians where God has not bound them. This is to be condemned just the same as is adding to or taking from the word of God. As an individual Christian, I reserve the right to teach the Bible on all occasions and in the most efficient way, and shall vigorously protest against any man binding my conscience where the Holy Spirit has not spoken.

Some Questions and Answers.
