Hence, man's vision of the things of God will be great or small, right or wrong, in proportion as he sees them through the thoughts of God or through his own thoughts. This number of the Gospel Advocate is devoted to a greater vision of things, and this implies that man's vision of things is a variable thing, and so it is. Man cannot change the magnitude of the things of God, just as he cannot change the magnitude or greatness of God himself; and yet man is distinctly said to magnify God. "O magnify Jehovah with me, and let us exalt his name together." (Ps. 34: 3.) "Yea, let them say continually, Jehovah be (Ps. 35: 27.) "And Mary said, My soul magnified." doth magnify the Lord." (Luke 1: 46.) "And this became known to all, both Jews and Greeks, that dwelt at Ephesus; and fear fell upon them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified." (Acts 19: 17.) And with a courage and heroism ready to die for the Lord, Paul unhesitatingly declared: "In nothing shall I be put to shame, but . . . with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether by life, or by death." (Phil. 1: 20.)

The term "magnify" means to make great; and while man cannot magnify or make God great absolutely, it is proper, by the figure of speech that puts one thing for another, to say that man magnifies God. He enlarges his own conception of the greatness and majesty of God, and is said to magnify him. In this way man gains a greater vision of God, of Christ, of the word of God, and of man himself and his glorious destiny. But here it should be distinctly borne in mind that the one essential to this correct vision of God and of the things of God is to view them and to view God through God's own thoughts and revelation, and not through the false and perverted thoughts of men. Remember the solemn arraignment of the ancient prophets: "They speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of Jehovah." How significant! No prophet had the right to give his own ideas and thoughts. They must come "out of the mount of Jehovah." Men of God to-day, precisely as then, should be careful lest it be said: "Have ye not spoken a lying divination, in that ye say, Jehovah saith; albeit I have not spoken?"

Finally, with an open Bible, we may soar on the wings of imagination and picture countless millennial triumphs with the world's Redeemer clad in glory as the conquering Hero of all the ages, yet the picture might not be altogether true to the reality. It is better to rest on the positive assurance of God that his word will triumph. What is needed now is what was needed by the ancient prophets-namely, an unfaltering faith in the word or message of God. It is through distrust in, or an unwillingness to risk all on, the simple message of God that often leads men to modify that message. It seems inadequate to the end in view, but it is not inadequate. It has the Almighty and Everlasting God back of it. It cannot ultimately fail. Preach it unmodified and unadorned and rely on it with the unwavering faith that it will accomplish the purpose of God, and it will do it. "As the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, and giveth seed to the sower and bread to the eater; so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." (Isa. 55: 10, 11.) Now, in view of such a promise, where is there room for doubt? There is none. God's word as preached by men, precisely as when preached by the Man of Galilee, may meet with temporary defeat, but it is destined to an ultimate and glorious triumph. Whether it brings visible success at once or not, the man who has this abiding and unfaltering faith in the word of God has the right vision of God and of the things of God.

A Greater Vision. BY F. W. SMITH.

It is not a natural or material vision to be considered in the columns of this journal, but that deeper and more far-reaching vision of the soul aptly styled "a spiritual vision "-a vision that is not hedged about with the desires of the flesh, but one which rises above the sordid selfishness which is the bane and curse of the world; a vision which in its scope and sweep takes in the things of God as they pertain to the souls of men; that vision which lifts the real man to the lofty summit of Mount Hope, far above the mists, fogs, and clouds of the lowlands, where by the soul's eye he can get a glimpse of what is to be. A "greater vision" means a "broader" vision that stretches to the ends of the earth; one that sees, like Paul, not only a man in Macedonia pleading for the Bread of Life, but the teeming millions of earth's unfortunate sons and daughters without hope and without God.

It is said that the eagle which soars above the mountain top and almost dips his wing in the rim of the sun can expand and contract his vision so as to distinguish objects in the far distance and those near by. This should be comparable to our spiritual vision; for the soul must not overlook those who are near, even at our door or under our roof, while at the same time it should expand to the needs of the most distant lands. No doubt there are those who do not focus their vision on the cradle in their own homes, while they see things afar. It is a fine thing to be "nearsighted" in one sense-viz., to see the needs of the souls around our own hearthstones. Let us not forget that the home is the "plant bed" from which material is drawn to fill all the walks of life. The drunkard, gambler, murderer, and thief, as well as the nobler men and women of the land, were once babes on their fathers' knees and nursed at some fond mother's breast. Then let us focus our "spiritual" vision on the young and tender plants growing up under our own shelter and lead these boys and girls into the higher and better life.

But that vision must not be warped and stunted by a spirit of selfishness; it must see unfolded before it the beckoning hands outstretched from the uttermost part of the earth. But how does the matter stand? What do we see? I fear that many of us are like the little girl who, walking under her parasol, discovered the small circle of shade made by the hoisted parasol and was heard to exclaim: "O, what a big world this is in which I am walking!" We see the small field immediately around our homes and seem to think it is a tremendously big world in which we are living.

The average church, in its efforts at soul saving, sees only the immediate community in which it exists, and is quite content to have one protracted meeting a year held in that community, and then rests on its oars until the next annual meeting in the same place. This is a "nearsightedness" ruinous to any church whose vision is so circumscribed as that. In other words, a church whose vision stops short of the great commission, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." is afflicted with spiritual blindness, a very serious and dangerous malady. Every church should set a task for itself that increases in scope each year, planning higher things for the future. Any church with the proper vision could, with a united effort, plant another church each year, in addition to having its annual meeting in the old meetinghouse close to the old members of the church. What is needed all along the line is to wake up, look out and away upon the "fields already white unto the harvest," and, with sickle in hand, shout the harvest song as the golden sheaves are garnered in. How many men are there in nearly every congregation who could go out to some schoolhouse, brush arbor, or into some home every Lord's-day afternoon and teach the word to those who assemble! There are some churches with a half dozen men who could have as many mission points attended every Lord's day and from which would spring up as many churches; but, instead, they wait for some preacher to do such workand that, too, often, at his own charges. In addition to spreading the kingdom, these men would derive a personal benefit in spiritual growth and development far more precious than silver or gold.

A dearth of preachers, eh? No wonder, when the vision of churches overlooks the home congregation and is focused on "Bible schools" to furnish preachers for the great harvest field. What the world needs is not rhetoric, poses, oratory, history, science, and philosophy, but the word of the living God. Let men who know the gospel tell it to all who will pay respectful attention to it. Let every church broaden its vision until it not only sees itself as it really is, but can see the world scope of its mission.

A Great and a Greater Vision.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Recently we—Mrs. Larimore and I—spent a few delightful days in Sequatchie Valley, Tennessee, where I lived all the days of my youth and childhood after the ninth fading and falling of the foliage of the forest following my advent into this beautiful, wonderful world.

Naturally and necessarily my vision, in every sense, was very narrow then, as I lived in a low, deep valley, between two rugged ranges of towering, rock-ribbed mountains, from beyond one of which the morning sun rose and behind the other of which the evening sun set, and my days were devoted to the slavish service of those who hired me to work—to plow, to hoe, and to do whatsoever other work a delicate boy could do on a farm, likewise on a brick-yard, where my hardest work was done.

I never worked for a bad, disreputable man, however. My fond, affectionate, careful little mother always gave proper attention to that. Nor did she ever send me to school to such a man. During those now far-away days I was probably never farther than three miles from Coop's Creek, a post office then, but Dunlap, the capital of Sequatchie County, now. How little, how very little, I then knew of even Sequatchie Valley, not to mention this wide, wide world! But even then I had heard of Kentucky and Arkansas, and I cherished the hope of sometime seeing the former and of living in the latter! What strange and startling visions some of us have, even in childhood! And what wonderful castles in the air we build!

But I am wandering from my way, and I must return to it, lest I get lost in the woods:

While Mrs. Larimore and I were in the Valley we resolved to climb to the top of Cumberland Mountain, behind which I had so often seen the sun set—and we climbed.

As we climbed, the shrubby, scrubby trees that bordered the rocky road hid from our view the valley below and the mountain top that towered above us. But we plodded on our way, seeing none of the beauties of valley or mountain, except, occasionally, when we reached a "bench" of the mountain, where a rocky crag jutted out beyond the trees and gave us a view of the valley below. We viewed the valley from the rocky brow of each "bench" we reached, and each time we could see, and did see, farther than before; and when, at last, we reached the rock at the top of the mountain, from which the final and the fullest view could be enjoyed, our vision was broadened till the whole world seemed to be spread out at our feet. "The ridges," the river (Sequatchie River), the fields, the forests, the hills, the hollows, were, to us, things of beauty in the lap of the valley below.

Then there came a broader vision, a mental vision, which was to our vision of the valley as the Pacific Ocean, with length and breadth and depth unrivaled, to the Golden Gate, one mile wide and five miles long, that connects it with San Francisco Bay. I saw, in that broader vision, the Valley in its primitive, pristine beauty, before the hand of man had plucked its fruits or its flowers, or the foot of man had pressed its bosom.

I saw the red man there with his squaws, his pappooses, his wigwams, his bows, his arrows, his tomahawks. I saw great herds of deer peacefully grazing on grassy fields that had never been fenced. I saw great flocks of geese and ducks that we would call "wild," and other birds of beauty and utility; but they were not wild, for the Indian regarded them as his very own and treated them accordingly. Fruits and flowers abounded, and the Valley was a paradise. Spiritually, the otherwise sunny scene was dark and gloomy, however; for Jesus, the Light of the world, had never been heard of there.

I saw great and good men invade the Valley, bringing the light of civilization. I saw the land divided into farms, the fields planted and harvested, cattle grazing on the meadows, as civilization advanced throughout the Valley. I saw the people hardy and prosperous, devout and religious, but bound by the shackles of superstition and sectarianism.

I saw Madison Love and Washington Bacon come up from the South, and light flooded the land as they preached the gospel of grace, the power of God unto salvation—as they preached "Jesus Christ, and him crucified." I saw my mother and my sister obey the gospel, as Brother Love led them into the light and baptized them into Christ. I saw Christian meetinghouses built where Indian wigwams had stood and where Indian camp fires had blazed. I saw myself and my beautiful little brother, Porendo, toiling together in that land, that we might live. Then I thought of him as he looked the last time I saw him, in new Confederate uniform—a soldier boy—as beautiful a boy as I have ever seen. I'd gladly give the world, if it were mine, to have him here to-day; but we shall meet on earth no more. "O why should the spirit of mortal be proud!"

As Brother Love and Brother Bacon and other great and good men carried the light of love and Christian liberty into the Valley long ago, so have great and good men gone out of the Valley to bless and brighten the benighted world beyond. Prominent among them is my friend, Dr. John R. Stewart, son of my old-time Sequatchie Valley teacher, who, every time we meet, grasps my hand cordially and says. "Sequatchie Valley!" I loved my old-time teacher, and I love his son no less.

Just as we climbed that mountain road recently, seeing little of the beauty of either mountain or valley, till we reached, occasionally, a point of outlook, where we were vouchsafed a view of the valley spread out below and of the mountain heights towering above us, so in life we pled on, day by day, scarcely realizing we are on the upward road. But, occasionally, if we move steadily on, striving to fulfill duty's demands as each duty presents itself, a clearer spiritual vision is granted us—a vision of the low-lands we have left behind us and of the heights toward which we are striving. At such points on our journey we press on with renewed courage and determination, our hearts fixed on the heights above.

Just as our vision broadened and broadened and broadened while we climbed from the valley to the top of the mountain, so, in the love light of Charity Divine, may our spiritual vision broaden and brighten till upon our enraptured gaze shall burst the blissful realization of God's eternal home.

Vision.

Twenty-six centuries ago Solomon wrote: "Where there is no vision, the people perish." (Prov. 29: 18.) History indorses that utterance. A visionless people are a dying people. Upon the church or Bible-school edifices wherein assemble visionless workers one might truthfully paint "Ichabod," for they have allied themselves with a dying race.

Some visions break up, like castles in the air, for they are simply the figments of one's own imagination; but not so the visions of prophets of old, who peered down the vista of time and saw things which were actually to come. Visions also occupy a large place in New Testament history. When the seventy chosen disciples returned with the joyful tidings that the very devils had been subject to them, Jesus saw a vision, and probably thought of that time when Satan and his mighty host shall be utterly vanquished, and he exclaimed: "I beheld Satan fallen as lightning from heaven." (Luke 10: 18.) When John, on Patmos Isle, was spectator of the panoramic view of future triumphs recorded in the book of Revelation, he beheld a countless multitude, clothed in white robes, and with palms in their hands, and heard them singing: "Salvation unto our God which sitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb." (Rev. 7: 9, 10.) So, at the back of each great achievement there must be a vision, and both the world and church owe everything worth while to seers of visions.

But mere visions will do nothing. We must not be unpractical dreamers. Visions are a means to an end, and not the end itself. Our visions must actualize or they are useless. Care should be taken that we be "not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." (Acts 26: 19.) We must see, and then obey. Beholding a glorious vision of regenerated humanity, we should press forward in the divine work till the vision becomes translated into an actuality.

The Journey of Life.

And I, with faltering footsteps, journey on,
Watching the stars that roll the hours away,
Till the faint light that guides me now is gone,
And, like another life, the glorious day
Shall open o'er me from the empyreal height,
With warmth, and certainty, and boundless light.
—William Cullen Bryant.

TEXAS-OKLAHOMA DEPARTMENT

BY C. R. NICHOL.

All articles, reports, orders for Gospel Advocate, and books, Texas and Oklahoma, should be sent to C. R. Nichol. Clifton, Texas.

Commendation.

Dear Brother Nichol: I have just received from the Mc-Quiddy Printing Company a copy of "Adventism and the Bible," by J. Henry Monk, eight years an Adventist, and a graduate of their Southwestern Junior College at Keene, Texas. I have just finished a careful reading of this book, and pronounce it one of the best expositions of Adventism that I ever read. The author is familiar with every phase of this erratic system, having been educated under some of their best teachers, and brings to view very clearly the incorrect positions of their doctrine. I commend it to the reading public wherever Adventism is being taught. It completely demolishes their erratic teaching.

I wish, also, to express my gladness over the addition to the Gospel Advocate of the "Texas-Oklahoma Department." I have been a reader of the Advocate ever since it started. In some things I have not agreed with its editors, but I have always admired its boldness in the defense of what they stand for. It is a most excellent religious periodical, and deserves a good support from the loyal brotherhood, We can all talk and write about our views of Bible teaching with love and respect for each other, notwithstanding the little kinks that may now and then bob up in our imperfeet natures, with the hope and effort to bring about that unity in the faith so much desired. I bespeak for the paper a much wider field of usefulness, and shall do what I can toward its increased reception and support. I welcome our good Brother C. R. Nichol as the head of the "Texas-Oklahoma Department," and feel that he will make good in his increased field of usefulness. JOHN S. DURST.

Commendation of Brother R. D. Smith.

Denton, Texas, August 16, 1921 .- To the Brotherhood in Christ: It is desired to make the following statement on behalf of our minister, Brother R. D. Smith: For more than two years past Brother Smith has served the church in Denton, and during this time he has ever been wide-awake and energetic in the work. He is untiring in his efforts and is a faithful teacher of the word. Brother Smith is prompt and faithful in meeting his obligations, and his conduct among us has never fallen below that of a Christian gentleman. Moreover, his standing in our city is not lower than that of the best citizen. We wish to further state that in the most unhappy controversy through which we have been for several months passing he has upon every occasion conducted himself with a dignity and a bearing becoming the high calling of a Christian minister. And we further say that he is not to be blamed for the divided condition of the church in Denton. It is not claimed that Brother Smith is perfect and that he never makes mistakes, but we do say that he has been found at all times ready to make any corrections and amends that were proper and right. And we further state that in his efforts to adjust differences between brethren and himself he has gone as far as could be asked of a Christian. Your brethren in Christ,

R. A. McCurry, H. H. FOSTER, H. C. TALIAFERBO,

Elders church of Christ, Denton, Texas.

Personal Notes.

C. B. Glasgow closed at Wilson, Okla., with eight baptized.

Coleman D. Nichol closed at Shrewder, Okla., with two added. Lee P. Mansfield closed at Nugent, Texas, with twelve baptized.

A. F. Thurman is in a meeting at Duster, Texas, with Hirteen bantisms.

C. R. Nichol closed a meeting at Quelling, Texas. were added.

Nine were baptized in a meeting at Maud, Okla. Preaching by W. D. Bills.

W. P. Skaggs baptized eight and restored two in a meeting at String, near Temple, Texas.

Liff Sanders was in a meeting with the church at Gorman, Texas, with thirteen baptisms.

Twenty-one were baptized in a meeting at Burnett, Texas, J. M. Childress. Four restorations.

R. F. Whittaker is in a meeting at McLean, Texas. There were thirteen baptized and six restored.

The meeting at Pattonville, Texas, with preaching by W. M. Davis, closed with fifteen additions.

 E. W. McMillian closed at "E. M.," near Hollis, Okla., with twenty-eight baptisms and six restorations.

Harvey Scott, of Floresville, Texas, closed in Maynard. Ark., with six baptisms and thirteen restorations.

Seven were baptized and one was restored in a meeting at Gober, Texas. Warren E. Starnes was the preacher.

Fourteen were baptized at Bloomdale, near McKinney. Texas, by Cled E. Wallace. F. M. Scott directed the song service.

There were six additions to the congregation at Ruth, near Gatesville, Texas, in a recent meeting conducted by T B. Clark

The mission meeting at Middleberg, Okla., conducted by K. C. Moser, resulted in seven baptisms and a congregation now meeting regularly.

J. W. Chism reports six confessions during the progress of his meeting at West Mountain, Texas. This is one of the oldest churches in this section.

O. M. Reynolds closed a meeting in Carter, Okla., with twenty-four added to the congregation. Fourteen baptized: three from the Christian Church.

F. J. Berry closed a good meeting at Swenson, Texas. Ten were baptized and two were restored. He is now in a mission meeting at Brazos Valley.

J. S. Dunn captized twenty-four in a meeting at Rising ar, Texas. Two were restored. The congregation wishes Star, Texas.

to locate a man with them to do evangelistic work.

E. M. Tackett closed a fine meeting at Cottonwood, in Dallas County, Texas. There were thirty-eight additions from all sources and the church was greatly strengthened.

J. H. Lavson closed an interesting meeting at Huckabay. Texas, with twenty-three additions to the congregation. W. M. Mann closed a meeting at Pine Grove, near Camden, Texas, with eight baptisms.

Ben West preached in Cleburne, Texas, on the second Lord's day in this month, morning and night, to large crowds of faithful brethren. They have one of the best churches in Texas. G. C. Brewer is to labor with them.

C. A. Buchanan, who does missionary work under the direction of the church in Cleburne, Texas, has closed a meeting at Parker, Texas, with twenty-three baptized and seven restored. Shall we not have a dozen men in the field all the time, supported by as many churches?

J. W. Ballard, Helena, Okia., was promised for three months' work in California, beginning on October 1. Conditions are such that he will not make the California trip, and will be available in Texas, Oklahoma, or Arkansas for meetings. He will not be idle; men like Brother Ballard never eat "idle bread."

John E. Dunn will soon be located in Waxahachie, Texas. and do work in evangelizing the county of Ellis. The congregations of the county could easily support another man in the county. Johnson County has a county evangelist. Ellis and Johnson join. Hill County will be next to put a man in the county. I trust they will do this at once.

It is a pleasure to report that Sister J. W. Chism, Hillsboro, Texas, who has been for more than a month confined to her bed with fever, is improving, and will, it is hoped. soon be quite well. Brother Chism has just closed a meeting with much interest in Spur, Texas. He promises to be with them next year for a meeting, beginning on August 1.

John M. Rice closed a meeting in Marietta, Okla., with nine baptisms and one restoration. For six days during this meeting Brother Rice debated with a Mr. Peck, materialist. They discussed the nature of man and the duration of punishment. Advocates of false doctrine never succeed in advancing their cause when they meet Brother Rice in debate.

J. W. Dunn closed his second meeting at Charlie, Texas, with large crowds and fine interest. Ten baptisms and one restored. It is a small church in numbers, but composed of fine material and commands a great influence for good. He is in a meeting at Garden Valley, near Gainesville, Texas. He and J. C. Rigney will begin at Irving, Texas, on the fourth Sunday.

Notes From West Tennessee.

BY JOHN B. WILLIAMS.

The meeting at Jones Chapel, in Lake County, closed at the wash-out on Monday, August 22, after continuing for fifteen days. In some re spects this was our very best meeting at that place, even though it was my eleventh meeting in succession had better attendance and better attention than any former meeting; more people heard the gospel than ever before. I did all I could to get the congregation upon a higher plane-"to walk worthily of the calling wherewith ye were called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love." Eight were baptized, among whom was an old man near seventy years of age, and two were restored to fellowship. One woman made the "good confession" whose husband objected to her being baptized; so she obeyed her husband rather than God.

Brother Fred Chunn is preaching for the congregation at Keefe, in Lake County. He began the second Lord's day in this month. I had the happy privilege of hearing him twice. He is a good man, a faithful preacher, and a good mixer. Two or three had been restored when I left Lake County. His preaching will certainly do good.

Last night I went to Mount Zion, in this (Obion) county, to hear Brother Flavil Hall, of Trion, Ga. He is certainly a good man and a faithful preacher. It is hard for me to decide whether he is a better preacher than he is a singer. He is good at both. Nine or ten have been baptized, one from the sects, and one restored to date.

Brother Srygley closed a fifteendays' meeting at Glass last Lord's-day night. One was baptized. I did not hear Brother Srygley preach, but I got to see him eat fish. He is just as good at eating fish as he is at preach-

Brother Dean and Brother Davis, two fine young preachers, are to begin a tent meeting in Trimble next Lord's day. I pray that they may have a good meeting, as they are both worthy young men and full of faith. I am to begin a meeting at Bethel next Lord's day. Brother B. G. Swinney will be with me to lead in the song service. He was with me at Jones Chapel.

A Pleasant Trip.

BY L. T. FARRAR.

On June 29 I left my home in Florence, Ala., for the great State of Colorado, I reached Denver on July 1. and the next day took the famous " Moffat Route," which winds its beautiful way to the top of the "Rockies" and down its western slope. This is said to be the greatest scenic railroad in the world, there being nothing in Switzerland to surpass it. It climbs up beyond the timber line to the realm of perpetual snow, reaching an altitude of 11,660 feet. It sweeps through fifty-five tunnels and under miles of snow beds; it glides by lovely valleys, awe-inspiring canyons, and sky-piercing peaks which speak the unchallenged language of faith. On Lord'sday morning, July 3, I reached my destination, Hayden, a beautiful little city nestling in the peaceful Bear River Valley, guarded by its silent, snow-crowned sentinels.

My mission thither was to assist in a meeting the seven members of the one body who for a few months had been meeting in a nice, new school building near Hayden to engage in the Lord's-day worship and service so clearly revealed on the divine page. The meeting continued nine days, closing on Tuesday evening, July 12. On week days I preached at night only. Thus it was my privilege to deliver eleven sermons to the good, courteous, and attentive people of that splendid community. We had a good hearing, and eleven precious souls put on Christ in Christian baptism. Two others, a man and his wife, claiming scriptural baptism and desiring to be Christians only, took their stand with the truth. Two faithful, godly men. W. L. Hackett and Haskell Gowen, are the elders of this faithful band. We left them twenty strong, well organized, happy and energetic in the Master's service.

This visit gave me the added pleasure of seeing again my only living sister and of being in the pleasant homes of a niece and a nephew living there.

I returned to Denver on July 13 and spent three days and nights in that beautifully appointed city. I found the church there in the midst of a good meeting ably led by that princely man and preacher, Brother N. B. Hardeman. The cause there has been greatly strengthened by the recent arrival of Brother and Sister J. C. Estes from Texas. Brother Estes is a strong and taithful proclaimer of the gospel. I also met here that godly man, John D. Evans, who has sacrificed so much and labored so faithfully for the spread of the kingdom in that region. It was my pleasure also to see again those two noble, consecrated souls, Brother and Sister E. C. Fuqua, who, several years ago, left Alabama to take up the Master's work in that great missionary field. Not until the waves of time are lost in the ocean of eternity will the good work of this great student and teacher of the word be made manifest.

On my return I spent two pleasant days and nights with the loyal brethren at Colorado Springs, preaching for them on Sunday morning and evening, July 17. They have just completed a neat and convenient house of worship, and are pressing onward and upward toward the goal.

I reached home on July 21, and, with renewed vigor, resumed my duties as a postal employee. I am to begin a meeting at Palmersville, Weakley County, Tenn., on the fourth Sunday in August. This will close my protracted-meeting work for the year, but I hope to keep busy every Lord's day preaching the word.

DARLING BABY BRIGHTENS HOME

Children's Laughter a Pleasing Sound

Altoona, Pa.—"I am writing to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. We had six children die almost at birth. From one hour to nineteen days is all they have lived. Before my next one was born I took a dozen bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I can say that it is the greatest medicine on earth, for this baby is now four months old, and a healthier baby you would not want. I am sending you a picture of her. Everybody says 'That is a very healthy looking baby.' You have my consent to show these few lines to anybody."—Mrs. C. W. BENZ, ISI 3rd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Mrs. Janssen's experience of interest to childless wives.

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are fond of children, and for a considerable time after we were married I feared I would not have any. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it strengthened me so I now have a nice, strong, healthy baby girl. I suffered very little at childbirth, and I give all the credit to your medicine, and shall always recommend it highly."—Mrs. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wis.

Mrs. Held of Marinette, Wis., adds her testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She says:

Marinette, Wis.—"I was in a nervous condition and very irregular. My doctor advised an operation. My husband brought me one of your booklets and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It overcame my weakness so that I now have a healthy baby girl after having been married nine years. I am glad to recommend your medicine, and you may use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. H. B. HELD, 330 Jefferson St., Marinette, Wis.

There are many, many such homes that were once childless, and are now blessed with healthy, happy children because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored the mother to a strong and healthy condition, as it acts as a natural restorative for ailments as indicated by backache, irregularities, displacements, weakness and nervousness.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative. It can be taken with perfect safety and often prevents serious troubles.

Therefore if you know of any woman who is suffering and has been unable to secure relief and is regretfully looking forward to a childless old age, ask her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has brought health and happiness into so many homes once darkened by illness and despair.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

FIELD REPORTS

Lavergne, Tenn., August 22.—I recently closed a good meeting at Mount Ararat, in Cannon County, with fourteen additions. I am now at Gilroy, near Lavergne.—C. M. Gleaves.

Alamo, Tenn., August 22.—The Alamo meeting is now six days old, with eighteen baptized and five restored. Large crowds and fine interest. I shall be here for about five more days.—H. M. Phillips.

Clifty, Tenn., August 23.—We had a fine meeting at Newton. Large crowds and some visible results. Many Testaments and tracts were distributed. 1 am on my way to Neverfail. J will then come back here, then home, and then to Dongola, III.—J. C. Mosley.

Louisville, Ky., August 21.—The meeting at Palmyra, Ind., closed last night. Interest was good throughout. Three were baptized. The church near Shepherdsville, Ky., my old home, with my assistance, will begin a meeting next Sunday.—J. E. Thornberry.

Texarkana, Ark., August 22.—Four additions at Cason, Texas. Two prominent gentlemen were baptized, one a banker of excellent reputation. The few members were greatly encouraged, and reported the largest crowds in the history of their efforts there.—J. E. Wainwright.

Berry, Ala., August 23.—I recently held a meeting at Bethel, near Vernon, with nine baptized; one at Kingsville, with eight baptized; and one at New River, with twelve baptized and seven restored. We had large crowds at all these meetings. I am now at Bankston.—Gus Nichols.

Rupertown, Tenn., August 20.—
Brother L. W. Hinson recently closed a week's meeting at the Topsy Schoolhouse, a few miles from here, where he baptized four persons into the one body. Brother Hinson preaches the word with power—a man who has a message and can tell it in a few words,—L. D. Whitehend.

Beacon Tenn., August 22.—Beginning on August 14, I assisted the brethren at Christian Chapel, in Henderson County, in an eight-days' meeting, with six baptisms. I go next to Crooked Creek, in Perry County, to begin on August 27. This is my old home congregation, and I hope to have a good meeting.—C. N. Hudson.

Sedalia, Ky., August 22.—Our meeting here continues with fine interest. Sunday night we had an overflowing crowd. Fifteen have been added to the cause—ten by baptism and five from other churches. Brother A. J. Veteto, of Henderson, Tenn., a most excellent song leader and teacher, has assisted greatly in winning souls to Christ.—R. A. Craig.

Livingston, Tenn., August 22.—I closed a meeting at Flat Creek on Saturday night. The meeting was hindered much by rain, but we had large crowds most of the time. Four were baptized. I began a meeting at Walmut Grove yesterday, with large crowds. I go from here to Andrews Cove to hold a mission meeting.—J. C. Pendergrass

Christiana, Tenn., Route 1, August 22.—The meeting began at New Zion, in Rutherford County, on the second Lord's day in August and closed on the third Lord's day. There were three additions. Much good preaching was done by Brother J. J. Horton. He is afflicted, but I hope the Lord will spare him many years to preach the gospel.-J. S. Westbrooks.

Jacksonburg, Ala., August 22.—On August 19 I closed a very successful meeting at Oliver, near Rogersville. We were hindered some by the rain, but the meeting was well attended most of the time. We baptized nine and had three restorations. Brother Gilbert Shaffer, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., was our song leader. I am now at Jacksonburg in what promises to be a good meeting.—Thornton Crews.

Diana, Tenn., August 22.—I closed my fourth consecutive meeting at New Zion, in Giles County, last Thursday night. There are three churches in the neighborhood, and, in spite of the fact that our meeting had been announced for a year past, meetings at all of them were in progress at the same time. Ten were haptized and two were restored. One young lady who made the confession was forbidden to obey by her father. I began at Diana last night, with a full house.— J. Pettey Ezell.

Tupelo, Miss., August 19 .- I have just closed a meeting near Ackerman. Miss., with two confessions. This is the home of Brother H. D. Jeffcoat. He is doing a good work in this sec-tion of the State. This is my fourth year to cooperate with him in this work, and my second year with his home congregation. This is a needy field, and the work has to be done at a sacrifice. Brother Jeffcoat and I are in a good meeting at Nile, with seven confessions to date. Brethren, pray for this work.-H. C. Harris.

Oakland, Miss., August 16.—My meeting at Jackson's Grove began on the fourth Lord's day in July and continued through the next Lord's day. Two confessions and baptisms, with six others restored to the fellowship of the congregation. Our meeting at Sylvan Knoll began on the first Lord's day in August and continued for six days, Brother Matthew C. Cayce doing the preaching. Brother Cayce's preach-ing was of a high order, instructive, convincing, and persuasive. Sixteen persons made the good confession and were baptized. We are proud of the labors of Brother Cayce as traveling evangelist in Mississippi, and espe-cially are we proud of the fact that in him we have a worker who has the responsible backing of his home con-gregation in Nashville. In the past it has been too often the case that brethren in the destitute fields have encouraged the work of men as preachers who held no responsible relationship to any congregation to which they could refer for indorsement. As a result of this method of procedure, the cause of Christ has often suffered reproach. The scriptural order is that every preacher should hold membership with some local congregation to which reference can be made for indorsement of both his preaching and his conduct. Those who read the Gos-pel Advocate will see that Brother Cayce is doing a splendid work in Mississippi.—Lee Jackson.

The Vital Reason for the Internal Bath

in Chicago recently there was held a gigantic political meeting that attracted a crowd of some 15,000 men and women of varying ages. On the outskirts of the assembly stood a physician with a friend. Turning to his friend, the medical man said: "Til wager that in this vast throng there aren't one hundred persons who are in anything like normal health."

Much as we distike unpleasant truths, there is significance in that physician's remark for all of us. Few of us can honestly say that we are over fifty per cent efficient.

We all want to be free from disease or allment of any kind. We all want to have pure blood, normal heart, and sound nerves. We all want to enjoy restful nights and active, vigorous days. Yet most of us are half the time blue and worried, all the time nervous, and most of the time actually incapacitated by illness.

And why? Largely because we do not follow a few simple rules in the care of our physical condition. How many of us, for instance, practice internal bathing? True it is that this means of improving the physical condition is growing in use every day, but there are thousands of us yet who are strangers to the benefits of the Internal Bath.

The need for internal bathing is due simply to the fact that we have within our bodies such an organ as the large intestine, commonly called the colon. Accumulating waste as it does, the colon is the bane of our health. The waste is toxions, which means poisonous, and as the blood flows through the walls of the colon it absorbs the poisons and carries them through the circulation. That's what causes auto-in-loxication, which in plain English means "self-noisoning," a condition which pulls down our powers of resistance and renders us subject to almost any serious allment that may be prevalent at the time. And the worst feature of it is that few of us know when we are "auto-introducted."

the worst recture of it is that two of us know when we are "auto-intoxicated."

The proper kind of Internal Bath is Nature's own relief and corrector—just warm water, which, used in the correct way, cleaness the colon thoroughly its entire leagth and makes and keeps it sweet and purs.

The offset on your physical condition is little short of marvelous. Your eyes take on a new aparkle, your step a new vigor. Your nerves relax, your appetite improves, and your sleep becomes more restful, more refreshing. You feel remade.

To really understand the Internal Bath and all that it accomplishes, one should read the very interesting booklet by Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell, the inventor of the "J. B. L. Cascade" Dr. Tyrrell's own life was saved and prolonged by internal bathing, and he wrote on the subject like the eminent authority that he was. This beoklet, which is entitled "The What, the Why, and the Way of Internal Bathing," will interest every man and woman. All that is necessary to secure this booklet is to write to Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute, No. 134 West Sixty-Fifth Street, New York City, and mention having read this article in the Gospel Advorate. The booklet will be mailed to you free of all cost or obligation.

There is nothing so important as the kind of health which keeps us fit, confident, and enthusiastic for the day's work; and as the getting of this book involves no expense, why not write for it now, while it is fresh in your mind?

Vinemont, Ala., August 20.—On the night of July 16 I began a meeting near Arkadelphia, in Cullman County, which resulted in one addition and the strengthening of the church. Brother Pride E. Hinton assisted in this meeting. My next meeting was al Corinth, with three additions. I am now in a meeting with the brethren at Beulah, with twelve to be baptized to-day. I go next to Jones Chapel.—M. A. Creei.

Imboden, Ark., August 20.—I have just had a glorious meeting with the church at Pleasant Valley, near Swifton. Very large crowds each night—from three to four hundred people. The best of interest and order prevailed throughout the meeting. There were ten baptized and one reclaimed. Others were "almost persuaded." They engaged a part of my time for next year. There are about sixty members there, all working in harmony. I go next to Sneed, near Alicia, for ten days.—A. H. Porterfield.

Hermitage Springs, Tenn., August 25.—The meeting at Corinth Church. in Monroe County, Ky., began on the second Lord's day in this month and continued ten days, closing on Wednesday morning at the water. There were eleven added—seven baptized and four restored to fellowship. This meeting was suggested to me by Brother Jerry Bean, one of the elders at Clementsville, Tenn. As the little band of disciples had, for want of leadership with sufficient courage, it seems, ceased to meet, they needed help to encourage them to a more determined effort. They were very much strengthened in faith and are now ready to go back to the work with renewed zeal. The meeting was well attended, especially as it was in a strongly sectarian community. The order was good and the attention at every service excel-lent. I left the brethren and sisters rejoicing over the bappy results.-John H. Arms.

Fort Collins, Col., August 15.-My second tent meeting at Fort Collins this summer (the first being held at LaPorte, a few miles out) has just closed. It was a remarkable meeting in all respects. I baptized nine, and a sister, formerly of Pulaski, Tenn., "placed membership" with the congregation here. The nine baptized were all adults and, save one, heads of families, placing within the range of our influence here at least thirty children whom we hope to train "in the way they should go." The meeting was in the extreme northern part of the city. Already the Lord, through my humble instrumentality, has added nineteen souls to the Fort Collins congregation this summer. My third tent meeting in and near this city opened last night in another part of the city; and though it was the first service at the new location, the tent was running over by the time the first song was sung. Never in my life before did I have a full tent the first night in a new location. There is something unusual about the work this summer -larger crowds, more serious attention, and more additions than I ever noted in the West. One more haptism yesterday, and we look for others to-night.—E. C. Fuqua.

OBITUARIES

Wright.

On May 17, twenty-three years ago, a tiny rosebud bloomed in this world of sin and sorrow, to make its short stay on God's great footstool and to make the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wright happy. This r Annie Pauline Wright. This rosebud She grew from a tiny baby to girlhood, on to young ladyhood, and was loved at all stages of life by all she came in contact with. She was of a lovable, gentle, and modest character. About six years ago she was born anew into the kingdom of God. She was a faithful member of the church of Christ. loved to go to Sunday school, and went as long as her health would permit. On June 7, 1921, God, in his infinite wisdom, saw fit to pluck this rosebud to plant in the garden above, where all is love, peace, and joy. She leaves a mother, two brothers, and four sisters, besides a host of friends and relatives and a Sunday school class that loved her. While T. EATHERLY.

Horne.

Mrs. Virginia Horne, widow of Richard Horne, died in her seventy-eighth year on June 10, 1921, at the home of her son-in-law John W. Fry, Columbia, Tenn., where she made her home. Since the death of her only daughter she has been both mother and grandmother to the grandchildren of her deceased daughter and to her orphaned niece. She was left a widow over forty years ago, with three children, all of whom preceded her to the beyoud In both faith and works she was a devout Christian and lived for others. Her husband died of wounds received during the Civil War. She was positive in opposing all wars, and when her grandsons crossed the sea to serve our government in the great war she prayed to live to see them return; but one, her youngest grandson, was killed in training in England. His body was brought back and interred in Rose Hill Cemetery, where she has since been buried by his side. VIRGINIA BOYD.

Sutton.

Lovena Sutton, infant daughter of Ashley and Stacy Sutton, departed this life on July 25, 1921, and was laid to rest at Hopewell, Ga., the next day, after a few words of comfort and warning were spoken by the writer. Three days later—July 28—Sarah J. Maddron, wife of Dr. J. M. L. Maddron and great-grandmother of Lovena Sutton, was called to a better land, After words of consolation and warning were spoken by the writer, her body also was laid to rest at Hopswell, to await the resurrection morn. We have the greatest hopes of meeting both of the departed ones. Lovena never knew sin, hence is at rest. Sister Maddron was a member of the church of Christ for over fifty years, and, according to the fruits of her life as a Christian, we know the tree was good, therefore we have the greatest of hopes. Sister Maddron was the mother of fifteen children, five of whom are living, and all are members of the church. She leaves a husband, who is expected to pass away at any hour. May the Lord sustain and bless the loved ones. VERNON ROZAR.

Romine.

On June 17, 1921, the angel of death, unannounced and unexpected, visited the home of Brother S. F. Romine, at Henderson, Tenn., and gently called from him his beloved wife. Sister Romine, formerly Miss Martha Tan-ner, was born in McNairy County, Tenn., near Stantonville, on July 5, 1866. Here she spent her early days, and was married to Brother Romine at the age of twenty. She became a member of the church in 1896, being baptized by Brother T. A. Smith. She was among the finest of women, and was ever faithful, loyal, and true to her husband, to her friends, and to Him whom she delighted to worship and serve. A number of friends accom-panied the remains from Henderson to old Clear Creek Church, the home of her childhood, and, in the presence of a host of old acquaintances and brethren, the writer conducted a funeral service, after which her body was tenderly committed to the kindly bosom of mother earth to await the coming of the Lord. Her husband, a faithful Christian, and her only child, a son, are left to bear the impress of her pure life the remnant of their N. B. HABDEMAN.

Sealf.

Like a thunderbolt from a clear sky and as a shock to the whole community came the news of the sad death of Ruth Estelle Scalf, which occurred on Wednesday, June 22, 1921, as a result of typhoid fever. Truly death loves a shining mark, and, in taking Ruth from our midst, has claimed a young, useful, and happy life, and darkened her home circle. She was an energetic, moral, faithful girl, with a happy and cheerful word for all. She loved life and appreciated to the fullest all the good things that are given to us. She loved humanity and was in turn loved by all with whom she came in contact, and her death is mourned by a large circle of relatives It seems cruel that a and friends. young life should be taken when it was just on the threshold of a bright and successful career, and yet we know there must be a higher calling for her in the work of her Heavenly Father Let us all strive to so live that when death comes to us and we lay down life's burdens we will again meet Ruth, for she will be waiting with smiling face and beckoning hands.

SISTER MINNIE MAL

Gowen.

On July 20, 1921, Sister Mollie Gowen, wife of L. W. Gowen, of Flat Creek, Tenn., after a pilgrimage of Creek, Tenn., after a pilgrimage or seventy-two years on earth, was relieved from suffering, and, no doubt, has gone to the land of peace and rest. She was the wife of Brother Gowen for forty-four years, and, though deprived of children of her own, she was a true mother of Brother Gowen's two children, and devoted much time in rearing and caring for other motherless and fatherless children. For fifty years she was a faithful child of God and one of the most influential mcm-

bers of the Flat Creek congregation, She was characterized by her modesty and womanly virtues, possessing "a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." She was given to hospitality, forgetting self and striving to make others comforta-ble and happy. She was indeed "a keeper at home." Her husband could truly "trust in her," and "her children rise up and call her blessed."
She let her light shine in good works, and her influence will long be felt by the community in which she lived. While the clouds are dark, by faith we see the silver lining of God's love on the other side. J. R. STUBBLEFIELD.

Hollis.

My father, T. A. Hollis, who was sixty-one years, seven months, and twenty-seven days old, quit the walks of men on July 27, 1921. He had been a member of the church of Christ for about twelve years. He was attending a meeting which was being conducted by Brother S. M. Spears at the time he took sick. His body was laid to rest In the home cemetery, near the Lawrence and Wayne County line, Brother Spears conducted the funeral service in a very consoling manner. Father leaves a wife and nine children and a host of friends and relatives, to whose hearts and lives his death brought sorrow and sadness; but we are trying to say that it was all for the best, knowing that "all things work together for good to them that love Of course we were made to mourn, but not as those who have no hope (1 Thess. 4: 13-18); for we be-lieve that when Jesus Christ makes his second advent into this world the body of our beloved father will be brought forth and shall be fashioned like unto the glorious body of the Son of God (Phil. 3: 20, 21), and then will be permitted to enter into the place which Jesus has gone to prepare (John J. G. Hollis. 14: 1-3)

FIELD REPORTS

Dover, Tenn., August 22.—Our meeting at Philippi, on Dyer's Creek, six Tenn., August 22.-Our meetmiles south of Dover, closed last Sat-ordev night. There were nine additions-eight baptisms and one from the Baptists. Of those baptized, two were Methodists and two were Presbyterians. All were fathers and mothers. I am now in an Interesting meeting at Tharpe. I am arranging for an eight-days' debate with Elder Martin, an Adventist. This debate will be conducted in Diekson County, near Burns, some time next fall,—William P. Walker.

Bay Minette, Ala., August 23.-The church here is doing a good work in our Master's name. We are few in numbers, but we are not discouraged because of that; but, like Paul of old, we realize that we can do all things through Him that strengtheneth us. We have difficulties of no little weight to encounter here; but we mean to meet them in God's own appointed way, and we know that the victory will be ours. On August 21, at the evening service, one noble soul made the good confession. She was buried in baptism the next afternoon.—Ernest D. Shelton.

Pixley, Cal., August 20.—Brother E. C. Love, of Fresno, Cal., preached at Tulare on the first Lord's day in this month. We had three good services during the day. We had what is generally known as a "basket meeting," with plenty of good things to eat spread upon a long table under shady camphor trees on a nice lawn. shady camphor trees on a nice lawn. I have been preaching at Tulare almost regularly every two weeks for about three years. On July 17 two young ladies and two young men made the "good confession." Two were bap-fized that day and three the next Lord's day.—E. M. West.

Decherd. Tenn., August 20 .- I have just closed a twelve-days' meeting at Morrison. Thirty-three were baptized and six confessed their wrongs. The house was packed each night, and many turned away because the brethren could not find seating capacity for them. 'The day crowds were splendid, too. Interest was good to the close of the meeting. An invalid boy, about fourteen years old, was baptized. 1 baptized him in my arms. The father, mother, and older brother were baptized also. The brethren say this was one of the best meetings in the history of the church at this place.-R. E. L. Taylor.

Dickson, Tenn., August 22.—On the first Sunday night in August the Dickson church had the pleasure of hearing Brother T. B. Larlmore again. He gave us a very strong and impressive lesson on steadfastness. On the second Lord's day in this month I had the pleasure of preaching for the brethren at Little River, near Hopkinsville, Ky. This is a splendid congregation in many respects. They set aside one Sunday in each month for mission work, and they have done a good work along mission lines. It would be well for many other churches to follow their example. The Lord willing, we shall begin a mission meeting at Pond Station to-night .- E. P. Watson.

Fayetteville, Tenn., August 22.—On July 24 we began a meeting in a Missionary Baptist meetinghouse at Kelso and preached eight days and nights. This is strictly a mission point. Only a few members live there. We had a good hearing, kind treatment, but no additions. The outlook for the future is good. On August 7 we began a meeting in a schoolhouse at Howell Hill, which continued five days and ulghts. Splendid audiences throughout, good attention, kind treatment, and ten additions. This is a mission point. The congregation at Beech Grove, for which I preach one Sun-day each month, had fellowship in this meeting.-T. C. Little.

Fresno, Cal., August 15.—On Lord's day, August 7, I preached in the morning to a large audience at Tulare. After preaching, dinner was served on a neighbor's lawn. Quite a number made talks at the afternoon service. I preached again in the evening, leaving in the night for Los Angeles and Southern California, where I have been lecturing in the interest of the Home and School, Brother L. D. Davis preached in the morning for the Fresno Street church of Christ on the first and second Lord's days. The house is practically all moved in now, and it surely looks good to us. We still lack some on the $750. While I am away my son-in-law (B. G. Banton), my wife, and the girls are running the office and ranch. They have their hands full,-Earnest C. Love, Macon, Miss., August 19.—Since leaving Ackerman I have preached at Sturgis four times, three times at a private house, and once in a school-The congregation started by Brethren Cayce and Jeffcoat is meeting regularly and growing in power as a body. Several of the members are taking a public part in the services. I stopped with Brother W. M. Ledbetter, who is quite an able hand in teaching and developing the working strength of the members. From there I came to Macon on Monday last, and found a conveyance out some five miles southeast to the home of Brother D. N. Barnett, who used to do a great deal of evangelistic work in Southwest Kentucky and Southern Illinois. He is now devoting most of his time to his farm and dairy, yet he devotes some time to preaching and scattering books and tracts among the We bad a small gathering of people. his father and mother, a brother and his wife, and a few of his neighbors and friends on Wednesday afternoon, at which time I preached a short sermon, and a man of mature years made confession of faith in Jesus Christ and was baptized. I am expecting to hold a few-days' meeting at a point a few miles away, to begin on Lord's day. This seems to be a hard field to get a place to preach and to get people to listen to the word.-Andrew Perry.

I was with the Regina Church for five services, which seemed to do much good. I spent August 6-15 with the Harptree Church, visiting and preaching to the church on Sundays. One man was baptized. I visited Weyburn and Bromhead en route to this place, where I am now in a meeting which began last night.—H. A. Rogers.

Tupelo, Ark., August 15.—The meeting with the Antioch congregation, near Halls. Tenn., continued eleven days and nights. Six were baptized. I began at this place yesterday, and prospects are good. Brother E. R. Harper, of Enola, Ark., is directing the song services. From here I return to Memphis to assist Brother Charley Taylor in a meeting with my home congregation. I plan to give my whole time to the field next year.—F. L. Paisley.

Huntland, Tenn., August 21.—Last Friday night I closed a meeting at Beech Grove, in Coffee County. Brother Jack Meyer led the singing. There were three additions, one of them from the Methodists. Shortly before the Beech Grove meeting I had been at Estill Springs, where one was restored and one took membership with the local congregation. Since the meeting one has been baptized. To-day I began at Huntland. I go next to Silver Point.—R. P. Cuff.

Milan, Tenn., August 22.—I have just closed a fine meeting at Latham. In spite of rain, the crowds and interest grew to the last service, when the couse would nothing like accommodate the people. Eleven were baptized. Brother A. B. Reavis, of Dresden, conducted the song service and baptized the last candidate. I am on my way to my last meeting before the opening of the Freed-Hardeman College, September 14. Prospects for the school are good.—L. L. Brigance, Union, S. C., August 22.-We closed the tent meeting last night, with no We are planmore visible results. I have for another meeting. been here six weeks and have missed but four nights attending services, and am thankful for strength which has enabled me to held up and for the interest of others which has permitted me to give my whole time and thought to the work. Contributions to date have totaled $1,263,30, which is getting nearer the amount of our indebtedness, and we are hoping to pay out and then to finish before winter.-G. F. Gibbs.

Cordell, Okla., August 22.—I closed a good meeting at Tipton, Okla., last night. We had ten additions—eight baptisms—with much good done otherwise. The brethren are wide-awake at Tipton. The contribution the last Sunday of the meeting was one hundred and nineiy-seven dollars—the largest Lord's-day contribution I have ever seen. Brother Frank Grammer, of Mena, Ark., was there conducting a singing normal, and sang in the meeting. He is one of the best singers in the South, an enthusiastic worker, and a good man. I am to preach at Cordell to-night, then on to Weatherford for a meeting.—Will W. Slater.

St. Joseph, Tenn., August 22,-I recently held a meeting near New Market, Ala., at the urgent request of Sister Ella Fenn. Brethren at Florence assisted in this work by paying my traveling expenses, etc. There were no additions, but a great interest was created. Old people attended the services who had not been attending religious services for years. I hope to go there again soon. I was next at Pea Ridge for a week. No confessions at this point, I dealt mainly with the church and its work, and was assured that my teaching would do good. My next meeting was at Crewstown, Tenn. Three were baptized, one was restored, and one came from the Baptists who claimed scriptural baptism. Brother Harrison began a meeting for me yesterday in Colbert County, Ala., which I hope to take up to-night.—William Behel.

Beaumont, Texas, August 20.—The meeting at Silver, Texas, closed on Monday night, with twelve additions and two restored. The meeting was well attended from all over this Western country-some from as far as Georgetown, some from the plains, and two or three cars from Mexico. Some camped near the arbor, on the Cole-rado River. We had a big shout one night when seven made the confession: and just as we were closing we had a stampede when a defective lamp caught the arbor on fire, which was soon in ashes. No damage other than the loss of a few planks and two or three seats. I held the meeting here last year, and they want me again next. year. I go from here to Robert Lee to begin on August 18. I will be at Utica, Miss., the Lord willing, to begin a meeting on the first Lord's day in September. I am open for engage-ments the last half of September. I shall go to Montana to debate with a Mormon the first of October.-W. F. Lammans

Flint, Mich., August 16 .- Our meeting near Standish continued over three Lord's days. There were no additions, but it seems that the brethren were encouraged and some prejudice among the worldly people was moved. The community is almost wholly German Lutheran. Brother E. P. Tarzwell started the work there. and Brethren H. H. Hawley, of Ludington, and E. G. Rockliff, who labors with the Fairview Street Church, in Detroit, have labored in that field. For a while the brethren there met for worship; but some moved away, and the remaining ones soon ceased to carry on the work. Last October the brethren in Detroit sent me there to assist them in a meeting. I found eleven members there, and we went to a schoolhouse and conducted a twoweeks' meeting which resulted in eight baptisms, mostly of the German Lutheran persuasion, and three restorations. This brought the number up to twenty-two. Soon after the meeting they secured a house and converted it into a place of meeting.-Leslie G. Thomas.

Rheumatism

A REMARKABLE HOME TREAT-MENT GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

WHO HAD IT

In the year of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-Acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who are thus afflicted knew for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, but such relief as I obtained was only temporary. Finally I found a treatment that cured me completely, and such a pitiful condition has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, even bedridden, some of them seventy to eighty years old, and the results were the same as in my own case.

"I had sharp pains like lightning flashes shooting through my joints."

I want every sufferer from any form of muscular and sub-acute (swelling at the joints) rheumatism to try the great value of my improved "Home Treatment" for its remarkable healing power. Don't send a cent. Simply mall your name and address, and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of such forms of rheumatism, you may send the price of it, One Dollar; but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer, when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

Calloway County Work.

BY T. B. THOMPSON.

On my three-months' preaching tour this summer it was my pleasure to be among my good friends in and around Murray, Ky. I experience no greater pleasure in revisiting scenes of former labors than in this locality. I was located in Murray for four years, during which time I preached among most of the churches of the county, and I think I am prepared to say that, as a whole, there is no better class of colaborers to be found than among these people. I am reminded when among them that I have no better friends anywhere on earth.

It was my genuine pleasure on this trip to attend five services at Union Grove Church, where the inimitable A. G. Freed was holding a meeting. I have never seen as large audiences at that place, not even in view of the fact that audiences there are always large. Brother Freed's preaching there was strong and of that high type that always characterizes his efforts. People who have heard of Brother Freed for several years, upon meeting him for the first time, always express their surprise at finding him looking, talking, and preaching like a man just arriving at the years of maturity. His hopeful, bouyant spirit will keep him young for years to come. His knowledge of young people and his experience in handling them are so applied during his meetings as to insure the best order and command the highest respect from them. There were several of the "old" schoolboys that visited him during this meeting.

It is from this church that three of our very best young men have gone out to preach the riches of the kingdom of God. I refer to Brethren David Thompson, Coleman Overby, and Garvin Curd. These young men are clean, upright, and possess a knowledge of the truth that commends them to thinking hearers. Of these, Brother Coleman Overby is employed by the churches of the county to preach in the county. The churches have purchased and equipped a tent for this purpose, and it is being pitched at different places in the county, and the people are being offered a chance to accept the gospei. Brother David Thompson is also using the tent at times and places as occasion and opportunity demand. This seems to be a most practical way of doing evangelistic work. If other counties would take up this method of doing home missionary work, they would find that it would strengthen the old churches as well as build up new ones. Nothing has a better spiritual effect upon the churches than the knowledge of accomplishing something in serving the cause along practical lines. Reports of good being done, which is made possible through the cooperation of churches and individuals, always bring to those responsible a real joy. Let some one in each county take the matter to heart and start a campaign for preaching the gospel in every nook and corner of their county, and they will soon see the work as a whole begin to look up. I believe the work is in better shape in Calloway County than I ever saw it, and I am sure this cooperation among the churches to preach the gospel throughout the county is responsible to a great extent for this interest. I think we have every right to expect good reports from the work mentioned as time goes on, for the move and Interest seem to be permanent. Let other counties follow this example and start county missionary campaigns, and then with real interest and joy watch the work pick up along all lines. The church of Christ is at its best when rendering service; and while none have ever worn themselves out, many have rusted and dried out. If we have the truth, the thing of which we boast loud and long, then let us preach it to the other fellow. If you, my brother, cannot personally preach it to others, go into your purse and help buy and equip tents and support preachers while they do it. In effect, by our careless and indifferent attitude we say with the "wicked servant:" "My Lord delayeth his coming."

There are splendid young men entering the ministry who can be obtained to do the work mentioned in this article. If you will only write to some of our schools, they will be glad to render you a service in pointing you to young men of high character and noble aspirations who will gladly negotiate with you to accomplish these ends. May the Lord endow us with a heavenly vision, and may we, like Paul, be not disobedient thereto.

THE BLESSING OF A GOOD HOME

Of all the holy ambitions of a normal man or woman, the purpose to have a home is the highest. A home on earth and a home in heaven constitute the soul's chiefest need. Around that transfigured word gather all that is highest and purest in human thinking and all that is most sacred and heavenly in human feeling.

In the beginning the Almighty created man—"male and female created he them." The first home was in Paradise. The last home will be there.

He who has an income to maintain a house, who has an intelligent, unselfish wife, who can look about his table and see children with clear intellects and loving hearts, is conspicuously foolish if he does not see that he already has the best the world can give.

She who can cast off all anxiety for maintenance and can devote herself to the care and training of her own little ones, and who can respect and deeply love her chosen mate, has God's best gifts already in her possession.

Gratitude to the Heavenly Father will lead such recipients of his richest bounty to forget not to aid those who have less. Nothing on earth of wealth, applause, or mundane wisdom can equal, in the least measure, the temporal and eternal values of a real home. Therefore it is wise and the mark of a godly character to pray earnestly for a husband, or for a wife, or for children.—Russell H. Conwell.

CURRENT THOUGHT

Something For Your Scrapbook.

I do not know how many of our readers keep a scrapbook, but I wish to commend the custom. If you keep your eyes open and read in a thoughtful way, you will be surprised at how much good and expressive prose and poetry may be clipped from current newspapers and periodicals. Sometimes it is like a pearl lying at the bottom of a clear stream—sometimes a jewel sparkling in the yellow sand. For example, Charles Hanson Towne, one of America's sweetest singers, has a searching sermon in a little lyric on "The Blind," It reads thus:

The blind man fumbled down the street,
(How far, for him, the street must wind!)
I heard the click of his wretched stick;
His thin, "Please help the blind!"

I hurried past him, till his voice Was lcst, like gulls' cries far at sea. I had two eyes, but saw him not. If he was blind, O, what of me!

This little poem describes the worst blindness in the universe—that which turns away from a fellow man in distress. How great that God is not blind!

Again, I have found another poem that emphasizes the nobility of work. This is a time when this thought needs to be emphasized; for so many people are clamoring for shorter hours, and others seem to think there is a kind of stigma resting upon manual labor. But note, if you please, an entirely new appreciation of work as seen through the eyes of Charles M. Sheldon in "Jesus, the Carpenter:"

If I could hold within my hand
The hammer Jesus swung,
Not all the gold in all the land,
Nor jewels counfless as the sand,
All in the balance flung,
Could weigh the value of that thing
Round which his fingers once did cling.

If I could have the table he Once made in Nazareth,
Not all the pearls in all the sea,
Nor crowns of kings, or kings to be
As long as men have breath,
Could buy that thing of wood he made—
The Lord of lords who learned a trade,

Yes, but his hammer still is shown
By honest hands that toil,
And round his table men sit down,
And all are equals, with a crown
No gold nor pearls can soil.
The shop of Nazareth was bare,
But Brotherhood was builded there.

In such a light, what a wonderful magic and glory is work! If one imitates the Master, he will bring brotherhood into the world by his work, whatever that work may chance to be.

Let Us Brighten Our Main Street.

Not long ago we read "Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis. We finished the book with a bad taste in the mouth. We felt that on account of its wide circulation and its contents it was the most dangerous book of 1920 among the "best sellers." It purports to give the character-history of a typical small town. It showed up foibles, narrowness, prejdices, and ignorance. Not a pure, sweet character appeared on the canvass. There must have been some fine, heroic character in "Gopher Prairie"—some one in whose sky burned the star of an ennobling ideal. If there was, no mention of it is made in the book. Not long after we read "Main Street" we read a magazine article by Jay House, of the Philadelphia Ledger. The title of the article was "The Biography of a Small Town." Without intending it, perhaps, Mr. House made a few fine strokes which to a certain extent supplied the glaring missing element in "Main Street." He showed that in a small town, as typical as "Gopher Prairie," there are always to be found heroes and heroines winning victories more glorious than those won on the nation's battle fields, saints worthy to be classed with those who have been enshrined in story and song. We find ourselves wishing that there were more searching for the bright, sweet things of life among the hidden places—in the mud and scum of things, if you please—and less burning of incense to the loudly acclaimed and be-pedestaled favorites of men and women. If this course were followed, many of the despised villages and communities would be gold mines, and many a poverty-stricken home would be a palace.—Christian Advocate.

I have never read "Main Street," nor do I care to read any book which shows only the dark side of a picture and provokes distrust of my neighbors. The books worth while have been written by men of faith and vision. They often point out human weakness and error, but invariably they point the way out. Cynics and pessimists are nearly always the products of misspent lives. Right doing follows right believing. If a man's faith is pure and strong, a good character will spring from it.

If there is any lesson at all to be learned by Christians from such books as "Main Street," it is that their light must shine so steadfastly that even so hypercritical a writer as Sinclair Lewis could see the good in their community. The Christ life can penetrate the darkness and ignorance of any community. Let us brighten our "Main Street."

Why Go to College?

Because it will lift you above the great company of mere hewers of word and drawers of water, and liberate you from the bondage of ignorance and the serfdom of inefficiency.

Because it will lift you to the hills of vision, where all life's horizons are expanded and you can see your neighborhood in the panorama of the world, and your life in the perspective of eternity.

Because it will deliver to you, the heir of the ages, the rich heritage of ideas and facts accumulated by the great minds of the past and make these treasures your very possession.

Because it will help you to find yourself, the most valuable discovery you will ever make, and settle you in the divine course for which you were created and endowed.

Because it is a good investment in money, in that the paltry few hundred dollars expended will be capitalized for life in a way to yield large dividends, increasing your earning capacity many fold and enlarging your capacities for any opportunity among the world's opening doors.—
J. M. Dawson, in Christian Index.

If going to college serves to "lift you above the great company of mere hewers of wood and drawers of water" in the sense that you shall feel your superiority, then you had better stay away from college. Most of the people in this world are "mere hewers of wood and drawers of water." God intends that you should help and bless them. You can never do it in an effective way so long as you feel that you are above them or have no part with them. Abraham Lincoln was an unusually tall man, gaunt and homely in appearance. A wag once asked him facetiously: "Mr. Lincoln, how long ought a man's legs be if he were seven feet tall?" Mr. Lincoln smilingly said: "I don't know exactly how long his legs should be, but his feet should touch the ground." That was well spoken, and in a measure it explains the secret of the great commoner's usefulness. His feet always touched the ground of the common people. He knew how to live with them, share their problems, and sympathize with them. Any program of education that takes our feet away from the ground of common brotherhood is to be shunned rather than cultivated. What a monumental failure Jesus Christ would have proved to be if it could not have been said: "The common people heard him gladly!" Education is good when it liberates us from the bondage of ignorance, but not when it liberates us from the debt we owe to suffering humanity.

A Greater Vision of Missions.

BY C. G. VINCENT.

There is a tremendous difference between attempting to convert the world and to evangelize the world. The great commission does not impose the task of converting the world to Christ. It does most certainly impose the task of evangelizing the whole world. Geography, color and class, language and dialect furnish us no excuse or alibi. Never since the day of Pentecost to this good moment was any given community one hundred per cent Christian. It was not so in Jerusalem, the birthplace of our religion. It was not so in Antioch, nor in Rome, nor in any village, nor in any rural community anywhere in the known world of the first century. As it was then, so it has been in each succeeding century and shall always be. But in every city, town, and rural community there were then, and there are now, people having "good and honest hearts," who are longing for "the way, the truth, and the life;" who are asking, seeking knocking; who are "feeling after God;" who are hungering and thirsting for God and his righteousness. Universal evangelism will reach this class of people, whereas a limited evangelism will reach only some of them. In other words, if we limit our evangelistic efforts to our own nation, only those of this class in our country will be reached, and the others beyond our shores, equally as worthy, will be neglected. When Paul said, "Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel "-to evangelize -he meant precisely what he said. Some of us seem to think we are sent to baptize! True, Paul did baptize those who believed and repented; and this generally, though not always, follows a faithful presentation of the claims of Christ. If some obeyed, he rejoiced; if none obeyed, he was happy in the consciousness of having done the will of Christ.

It is remarkable to note how the New Testament evangelists hastened to evangelize their generation. The church at Antioch never thought nor acted as some of us to-day. This church in a city of about five hundred thousand people did not say, "There is so much to be done here we cannot do work in distant fields," but they appointed and sent out two of their five teachers into the regions beyond. Moreover, they sent their ablest workers. What a vision, and what unselfishness! By "so much to do at home" we usually put upon ourselves an impossible task. Detailed, it means this: to convert the Roman Catholic and sectarian world to the truth, to convert the Jews, to convert the sinners of our land, and, above all, to convert all "the brethren" who may differ from "me" or "us" on this or that point! Of course, since this is absolutely impossible, it means that the untold millions who have never heard a syllable about Jesus Christ will never hear of God's love. "The evangelization of this generation by this generation" is the ideal to keep before us constantly. It will compel us to action and lead us to speed up this great work.

On arrival in Japan we had several surprises. The native customs were indeed strange to us; but when we saw a Standard Oil Company's wagon delivering oil, a Singer sewing machine being operated by a native, and Ford cars dodging through traffic in the narrow streets, we were greatly surprised. To see these things made us feel more "at home" in Japan, to be sure, but it set us to thinking. These great business concerns have established agencies everywhere in the world; but they still do business in the United States. Yea, in the very cities where the "home office" is located they are canvassing and selling! This is the purpose and plan of God. He has an article the world needs. He wants to establish agencies everywhere in the world to do business for him. He offers "the Pearl of great price;" churches are his agencies, Christians are his salesmen and saleswomen, the price is the surrender of one's life to God, and the world is the market. We should not do less in the home market. We should and must, to conform to the Sales Manager's program, enter all markets of the world.

Let me here give five reasons why the natural religions have failed.

- 1. The suppression of woman. She is a sort of chattel, useful as a servant to man and his passions. She is not on equality with man in the eyes of moral and civil law. She is not protected and honored as "the weaker vessel," but her weakness is imposed upon. No religion honors, protects, and exalts woman as does Christianity.
- 2. There is no sure foundation upon which a structure of high morality can be built. Morality is a matter of expediency. So honesty for the sake of honesty itself, truthfulness for the sake of truth itself, purity for the sake of purity itself, and so on, is not the ideal. Christ teaches that consciousness of individual responsibility to a living, just, and holy God is the only restraining and compelling force in human conduct.
- 3. They have failed utterly to discover the character of God. Idolatry is a futile effort to picturize deity to man. It results in dissatisfaction and confusion. The cry of Philip, "Lord, show us the Father?" (John 14: 8), is the cry of the heathen world to-day. Shall they cry in vain? Jesus is the revelation, the picture, the "express image" of the divine Father.
- 4. They have failed to solve the greatest of all human problems—namely, the guilt of sin. They are woefully conscious of wrong thought and wrong action; but how to get rid of that guilt is unsolved. A student who had carefully compared his religion with that of the Christian missionary said: "I have found a great difference between your religion and mine." "What is it?" asked the missionary. He solemnly replied: "You have a Savior, whereas I have none." That sums it all up. O what a difference!
- 5. They fail to comfort and sustain in that crisis we call "death." Heathen people are resigned, but to what? They to a blind fatalism; Christians, to a loving Heavenly Father. The heathen are a sad people. There is a forced smile, but there is an inward heaviness of the heart. Their music is written in the minor key, and almost all their novels end with a sad chapter. Christless people are hopeless, and hopeless people are bound to be sad. "Christ in you, the hope of glory," is the "anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast" which sustains us in every hour of need.

In view of the great duty put upon us by the authority of Christ, in view of the appalling needs of the mission fields abroad, in view of the need of cooperation and unity of action, I ask: How can we afford to magnify minor differences among us into tests of fellowship? How can we afford to spend precious time, talent, and money in trying to set each other right regarding the literalization or the spiritualization of a group of passages? How can we afford to allow the discussion of the "order of worship," "Sunday school," "Bible college," "classes," "individual cups," "rebaptism," and other like matters, to so affect our concord as to break up the brotherhood into opposing groups and render cooperation in world-wide missionary effort impossible? It is apparent that many of us are not aware of the strategy of the devil. The brethren who are "pro" or "anti" on any of these questions are in accord on all the major Bible requirements, and upon this basis can and should work together for the salvation of souls overseas. The differences classified as "issues" at home are not issues in the foreign fields at all, thank God.

If the missionary is led off into error, what is the duty of the appointing church? First, to make an earnest effort to save him from his error. Second, failing in this, the church should recall him and set about to appoint and send forth another worker. What should a cooperating church do? Join the appointing church in trying to save the erring brother. If unsuccessful in this, they should indorse the action of the appointing church and join in sending out a newly appointed worker. During the late war there were "replacement troops." The fresh troops took the places of deserters and casualties. It should be so in the army of the Lord. But suppose the appointing church fails to take these proper steps, what is the cooperating congregation to do? First, endeavor to get the appointing church to do its duty in recalling the false teacher. But failing in this, it should take one of two courses: become an appointing church, call upon others to help, and send out a worthy worker, or, if unable to do this, join some appointing church in the support of some worthy missionary on the field.

What should be done in case the missionary makes a mistake in the administration of his work? Of course he is liable to err in judgment in such matters, but he regrets such a mistake more than anybody else. Home enterprises have come to naught, too. So an expression of sympathy and exhortation to caution is in order. Prayers and fellowship can and should be continued; but to abandon the field for any cause whatsoever and thus leave the heathen to remain in and die in darkness is bad logic and worse Christianity.

If you do not have confidence either in the soundness or in the ability of the missionaries on the field, by all means, brethren, select and send out workers in whose doctrinal soundness and ability you do have confidence. I am pleading here and now for the unevangelized millions of people (there are forty odd millions of them in Japan) for whom Christ died and whose blood will be upon us if we remain oblivious to their needs, unmindful of Christ's program and belligerent among ourselves.

To accomplish this, let contributors and editors write, elders and teachers teach, and evangelists and preachers preach, scripturally and constructively on this theme aglow on every page of the New Testament.

With all the seriousness of my soul I ask you, my dear reader.

"Shall we whose souls are lighted by wisdom from on high-Shall we to souls benighted the lamp of life deny?"

Or will you take up the glad refrain and say with the poet:

"Salvation, O salvation! The joyful sound proclaim Till earth's remotest nation has learned Messiah's name?"

Christian Education.

BY H. S LIPSCOMB.

"What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Matt. 16: 26.)

The subject of legitimate profit or gainful occupation has long occupied the minds of thoughtful men and women of this day and time, as well as other ages, and justly so. In Rom. 12: 17 we are admonished to "provide things honest in the sight of all men;" in verse 13, to distribute "to the necessity of saints;" and in 1 Cor. 16: 2, to "let every one of you lay by him in store." These passages all clearly emphasize the need of legitimate profit; and more explicitly in 1 Tim. 5: 8 Paul says that "if any provide not for his own," he is "worse than an infidel."

Among the Jews it was a common proverb that he who did not teach his son a trade taught him to steal. The philosophy of this is apparent, which provokes immediately the consideration of next importance: "What trade shall I teach him?" This important subject has received much attention in later days in the minds of teachers who fix the curricula for modern high schools. How necessary it is for the boy to get started in the work for which he is proficient! What a fearful mistake for a man to realize suddenly in after years that his talent has all been misapplied! How often has a good farm hand been spoiled for a clerk in a store! Or how sad to think, as Goldsmith, that

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark, unfathomed caves of ocean bear;
Many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air!"

This is a vital study for every one to consider. Most educators have answered it by saying: "Give your child the best education possible, and he will then be best able to decide that for himself."

Our forefathers recognized the importance of education to the State, and instituted the public school to develop the future citizens of our great democracy. The progress of State education has been slow, but steady. High schools followed the grammar schools, more rapidly in the East and North than in the South; but everywhere the appreciation for education has grown until there is not a county in Tennessee that has not a creditable high school. Our legislators have advanced a step further and provided a law that no parents can withhold from their offspring, for mercenary reasons or otherwise, the just heritage of an education—compulsory education. Our school boards have devised systems of manual training to gain the interest of the boy or girl through the hand to the heart.

A great system of Normal schools has been provided to insure better and more efficient teachers for our children. Permanent appropriations for our State university have enabled it to enter upon an unprecedented era of progress and expansion. These things show that the public appreciates the needs of education.

George Peabody, the great philanthropist, emphasized the truth that "education is the debt of the present to future generations." He lived across the Mason and Dixon line, and, desiring to do his part to heal the wounds of civil strife, poured his coffers of gold into the channels of Southern education.

If George Peabody could realize that education is the debt of present to future generations, how much more is a Christian education a debt of Christians to future generations? The need for Christian education is overwhelming. Those of us who can look back to the ample hearth of our old homestead, know that such is not the heritage of the modern home. In the rush of business, on the one hand, or pleasure, on the other, no time is afforded for family prayers. Scarcely do all come to the meals at one time so that "thanks" may be said. No relief for the situation can be hoped for in the public schools. The varied patrons of Jews, Catholics, and different Protestant denominations forego even as much as the Scriptures being read, especially from the New Testament. The college and university is worse, for there great numbers of the learned professors either ignore the Scriptures or, even worse, scoff at the inspiration of them.

"Where at night we loved to meet, Where our father's look was always kind, And mother's smile was always sweet,"

The debt of Christian education is due. "The fields are white unto the harvest." The time is here when parents must use discretion in the way they allow their children to be educated. If they drift into infidelity, the parents will be held accountable if they do not provide for their training. If they do not themselves teach daily the word of God, they had better educate them in schools where it is taught.

The Christian education is the logical foundation for every work in life. What are you rearing your boy for? Some ambitious father says: "My boy is going to be a lawyer." A good lawyer is a great man; but there are manifold temptations to bribery, extortion, etc., which must be overcome before he can really be a Christian lawyer, like our great Lawyer, our Advocate with the Father, who ever lives to make intercession for us, the one Mediator between God and man. No man can be really a good lawyer without a Christian training. Another chosen son is to be a physician; and a worthy calling it is, requiring years of patient preparation. Who can gainsay that the firmest foundation for a truly worthy physician is an intimate acquaintance with the great Physician, who healed all manner of sickness and all manner of disease, who opened the eyes of the blind and caused the lame to leap as a hart? Jesus frequently combined his work as Great Physician with that of Gospel Teacher. Having healed the body of pain and suffering, he found the soul more recipient to his truth. And the method is a good one to-day for us to follow. The Catholics have developed the idea wonderfully with their great systems of hospitals, where they cure the sick and suffering and then teach them to embrace their doctrine. Our physicians should take an interest in saving the soul as well as saving the body.

The greatest foundation for a good merchant is the Christian education. In these days of strenuous business rivalry the temptation to take an unfair advantage, to reap a "profiteer's" profit, is best overcome by a thorough grounding in the principles of fair dealing as enunciated by Jesus of Nazareth.

Can you think of a teacher really great who hears the saying of the great Teacher and does not teach men so? So it is in every calling. "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." This is true of Christian education in every field of endeavor.

In the end, whatever one's calling or profession, "what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" I ask you to picture, if you can, the bright smile of the man in the parable of the talents, who comes before his lord with the report: "Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained beside them five talents more." I ask you to picture, if you can, his great joy when, with the welcome plaudit, "Well done," he is bidden to enter the joys of his lord. But you can never picture in this world the ecstatic bliss of him who, having fought a good fight, having kept the faith, comes to the judgment bar of his Maker and, in answer to the question, "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" says: "Lord, thou gavest me one soul. I have kept it-not conformed to this world nor wrapped in a napkin, but I have transformed and educated and enlarged it by renewing of the mind by Christian education, that it may prove what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God. Yea, Lord. I have gained besides it two, five, ten other souls, washed and made pure in the blood of the Lamb." No one can picture here his glory, because eye has not seen, ear has not heard, nor has it entered the heart of man the glories which God has prepared for them that love him. This is the goal of Christian education.

A Visit to Colorado.

BY N. B. HARDEMAN.

On July 10 I began a meeting in the city of Denver, Col., which continued over three Sundays, with seven baptisms and a good interest throughout. The church consists of about seventy-five members, most of whom have moved there from various States. Twelve years ago Brother John D. Evans, of Tennessee, seeking to regain his health, went to this city, and, on finding no church, he and Brother W. R. King, of Tennessee, set to work to bring about the organization of a New Testament congregation. Not long thereafter Brother King passed to his reward, and the church in Denver to-day is due chiefly to the untiring efforts on the part of Brother Evans to have the cause of Christ planted in the "Queen City of the Plains." They have a nice stone building, paid for, and well located at 125 South Sherman Street. The people out of the church, whom I had occasion to observe, seemed not to be prejudiced, but were uninformed and indifferent to the cause of Christianity. There are so many other things to attract attention that they have little time or concern for the Lord. My home while there was in an apartment with Brother Evans, Brother and Sister Estes, and I was well cared for in every way. These last have recently located and opened an office as chiropractors. They are a fine addition to the church. A number of visitors and tourists attended some of our services, among whom were Brother Davis, of Pearl and Bryan Streets Church, Dallas, Texas, and Brother Roush, of Topeka, Kan. Every brother or sister who visits Denver should make it a point to meet and worship with the church. They will find a cordial welcome.

Brother Evans and I visited quite a number of places of interest and made some pleasant trips in the country round about. One day was spent in the Christian home of Brother Hazlet, thirty miles from the city. This family attended some of the meetings and rendered much assistance in the song services. I went to Colorado Springs, where I met Brother W. S. Gray and family, formerly of Martin, Tenn. Some years ago I baptized him, and it was a pleasure to be in his home and to have him show me the sights of his city, of Manitou, Pike's Peak, Seven Falls, and other places of interest.

On Monday after the meeting closed, Brother Evans, Brother Roush, and I drove to Fort Collins, seventy-five miles north, and were entertained in the home of Brother E. C. Fuqua. We found him engaged in a tent meeting, He had arranged for me to preach that night, which I gladly did to a large and appreciative audience. On this trip I first met Brother and Sister Fuqua, who spent the first week with us in Denver and helped much in getting the meeting well under way. He has been truly a missionary in Colorado for a number of years. He has planted the cause in several places and has preached and debated wherever opportunity suggested. He knows how to endure hardships and is adapted to his work. Brother Fuqua deserves the support of the churches and needs more money to further the cause. Any congregation sending him a regular contribution is doing a fine work. He now has a small press which he uses freely in printing sermons, tracts, and various articles for free distribution, and thus is he paving the way for larger results. This important part of his work is an added expense and deserves extra support.

Colorado is a great State. Its fine climate, beautiful scenery, and immense resources make it a very attractive field, and the churches in general could, perhaps, do nothing better than to look to its cultivation. There are many good towns and thousands of people to whom the gospel has never been preached.

On Tuesday morning, July 26, we three preachers drove up to Cheyenne, Wyoming, to witness the annual reproduction of wild West life and frontier days. The cowboys and girls performed feats and stunts that were next to impossible. Brethren Fuqua and Evans certainly did enjoy "watchin' 'em buck." I hope to visit Colorado again, and, if convenient, will return home via Cheyenne.

Napoleon is said to have received his youthful vision on the fateful day that he read Bishop Bossuet's "Discourse on Universal History," with its description of Alexander and Cæsar. When he finished reading they tell us that he sprang to his feet, face flushed, eyes blazing with fire as he cried out: "I, too, shall be a conqueror, and perhaps an emperor." "I came, I saw, I conquered," declared Cæsar.—H. E. Knott.

Salvation by Faith. No. 7.

BY W. L. REEVES.

Salvation by faith, in the light of scriptural teachings on conversion, is what we shall examine in this article.

It is held by many that conversion is a deep mystery, but such is not the case. "Conversion," "remission of sins," "salvation," and such like expressions signify the same thing in the economy of grace. To illustrate: If one is converted, he is saved; if one is saved, he has remission of sins; if he has remission of sins, he is converted. In other words, one cannot have one without being the others. If this conclusion be true, then it follows that whatever is required of man to bring about one of these is the same thing which brings about them all; so, if one is a mystery, they are all mysteries. On the other hand, if it can be proven that one of them is not a mystery, it is then proven that none of them are mysteries.

Query: Is the plan of salvation in Christ, salvation by faith, revealed to mankind? Has Christ revealed the way by which men can come unto him for life? Is what man must do to be saved revealed to man?

"The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death," said Paul. (Rom 8: 2.) Then freedom from sin is brought about by law. Laws operate when obeyed. In this case, who is to obey "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus"—God or man? It is man who needs to be made free from sin, not God. "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness? But ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness." (Rom. 6: 16-18.)

Christ offers "eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (See Heb. 5: 8, 9.) On the other hand, he appointed this for "them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction." (2 Thess. 1: 3, 9.)

For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified." (Rom. 2: 13.) "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." (Heb. 11: 4.) "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house." (Verse 7.) "By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac." (Verse 17.) James asks this about this very case: "Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?" (James 2: 21.) All such passages as the foregoing are invincible proof that God has always required obedience of men, in addition to his faith, before he will bless him. I now ask some vital questions relative to the remission of sins under the teachings of the New Testament. Were not the Pentecostians justified by faith after they had repented and were baptized as commanded by Peter? (Acts 2: 37, 38.) Was not Paul justified by faith after he arose and was baptized to wash away his sins, as told by Ananias? (Acts 22: 16.)

Man is possessed of a free agency relative to whether he will be converted or not. Were this not true, then God, and God alone, is responsible for the damnation of all who are not saved; he is responsible for not exercising his saving power upon such so that they can be saved. Certainly man is responsible; he has free agency relative to choosing as to whether he will or will not accept God's law of conversion. If this were not true, there is no such thing as duty on the part of man; so if there is any duty in the matter, it would all be God's duty. Now I ask: What makes it God's duty to send converting power to some men, and yet it is not his duty to send it to many other men? The truth of the matter is, it is solely man's duty to convert, or turn; for really that is what the word "convert" means, and it is so translated in the Revised Version. So, when studying the subject of conversion from a truly scriptural standpoint, all should view it as active on the part of the one to be converted, or turned unto the Lord.

It is self-evident that everything, when set in motion, will continue to move in the same direction until operated upon by some power sufficient to change its course. So it is with an alien sinner. It requires power to deliver him from the power of darkness and to translate him into the kingdom of Christ, wherein there is remission of sins, as is stated in Col, 1: 13, 14. What is the power unto this end? "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith," (Rom. 1: 16.) Paul was chosen as a preacher of the gospel in order "to turn" (convert) people "from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God." (Acts 26: 18.) He afterwards said: "For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel" (1 Cor. 4: 15.) Faith comes by hearing the word of God. (Rom. 10: 17.) Man is responsible for not believing when he hears, for Christ said: "He that believeth not shall be damned." Peter says: "The Lord is . . not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." (2 Pet. 3: 9.) John says that Christ is the propitiation for the sins of the whole world." (1 John 2: 2.)

These show that man is a free agent to act as he pleases, and that God wants all men to be saved. But he has ordered a plan by which man must be saved. (Acts 4: 11, 12.) He has revealed this way to all men, and does and will reveal it unto all who will accept it while they live here upon this earth; but it is of no use to reveal it unto many, for they will not accept it. (Matt. 5: 6.) "If any man will to do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7: 17.) Men now are to preach the gospel to the public at large; but Christ said: "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine." (Matt. 7: 6.)

The seed, which is the word of God, when it falls into good soil, into honest hearts, produces faith, and faith leads to obedience, and obedience brings unto the reward of remission of sins. (Mark 16: 16; Acts 2: 38.)

Paul teaches that men are aliens from the life of God through their ignorance and by their wicked works. (Eph. 4: 18; Col. 1: 21.) On the other hand, he teaches that we are made new creatures through, or by means of, knowledge. "Ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him." (Col. 3: 9, 10.) So it is clear that teaching is the means by which men are enabled to turn unto Christ. They first must hear the gospel. Faith comes by hearing. The believer must repent. "Repent, and be baptized," said Peter to believers. (Acts 2: 38.) They must confess Christ. This is just as necessary as can be, as was shown in a former article. Salvation is certainly conditioned upon the good confession. "If thou shalt confess, thou shalt be saved." (See Rom. 10: 9, 10; Matt. 10: 32.) Salvation in this verse is just as much dependent upon the confession as it is in Mark 16: 16 upon baptism. If not, why not? When a man has faith, has repented, and has confessed that faith, he must then be baptized into Christ, and he will then be a child of God by faith. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 26, 27.) that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

From the foregoing it is seen that man is a responsible being, a free agent. God sends the power to turn (convert) him. The gospel is this power. Man can believe it if he will. He must repent; he must confess Christ; he must be baptized into Christ and thereby put on Christ. Paul says: "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." (2 Cor. 5: 17.) So, then, when a man has done all the things mentioned above, he is converted. It is all brought about by means of teaching the gospel to him; and so it is not a mystery, after all that men have said about its being such. Let no one forget that salvation is clearly revealed to mankind in the Scriptures.

The One-Idea Fellow.

BY JOHN T. LEWIS.

In the Gospel Advocate of August 18 Brother Lee Jackson gives a wonderful dissertation on "Brother John T. Lewis and Baptism for Remission." He closes his article by saying: "What I have written demands no reply; there is no reply to be made to it. Therefore, no discussion is called for." Of course I shall not stultify myself by trying either.

I will ask a few questions, and Brother Jackson or Brother Kurfees, either one, may answer them. Could the shedding of Christ's blood be "the meritorious cause of remission of sins" and at the same time be shed "in a procurative sense?" If so, can a man discuss the shedding of Christ's blood "in a procurative sense" without doing violence to "the meritorious cause of remission of sins?"

"For this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins." (Matt. 26: 28.) Is "poured out for many unto remission of sins" used here "in a procurative sense?" "And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." (Acts 2: 38.) Is "unto the remission of your sins" used here "in a procurative sense?"

If "unto remission of sins" is used "in the same sense"—that is, "in a procurative sense"—in the above scriptures, why would the saying so be of such "vital bearing against the integrity of our plea for the gospel in its purity?"

Don't you think our teaching would be productive of more good if we would just "preach the word" and not confuse people with "the integrity of our plea" and other hairsplitting questions?

Fishing.

BY FLAVIL HALL.

Over near Reelfoot Lake I've been fishing,
'Mong the big hills of West Tennessee;
Fishing for people in sin's dark waters,
That through Christ they from sin might be free.

Rich reward cheered my soul, for three sevens Gladly came for the life-giving bread, And for fountains of pure living water; Thus to freedom and hope they were led.

Reelfoot Lake in its length measures forty, And its width seven miles, so they say; And its boats many who make the voyage Near the "Fathers of Waters" convey.

We are making with speed life's brief voyage— Crossing o'er to eternity's sea; Let us trust and obey Christ, our Captain, And for glory beyond ready be.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." Therefore we are to see a certain vision which "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, and which hath not entered into the heart of man to conceive"—a vision surpassing all earthly beautifulness of sea and air, the beautifulness of sun and moon and stars—yea, the beautifulness of angels—surpassing all things, because from it are all things beautiful.—Selected.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE--FIFTY CENTS

We call attention to the very best offer we have been able to make for several years. We will send the GOSPEL ADVOCATE to new subscribers for the remainder of the year 1921 for the small sum of fifty cents.

This does not pay for the actual cost of production, but we are glad to make the offer that the usefulness of the paper may be extended.

This is a most unusual trial offer, and our readers should take advantage of it to introduce the paper into the homes of their friends. We are depending upon them to help us increase the circulation by several thousand. By all pulling together, we can accomplish much good in the Master's name.

For your convenience we are printing a coupon to be used in sending in the names of new subscribers.

Vincent, minister, will welcome you and gladly render any service in his power. Take Fountain City or Broadway car and get off one stop beyond Caswell, right at the meetinghouse.

- J. E. Green reports two successful meetings in North Carolina. He spent fifteen days at Haw Pond, teaching a singing school in the afternoon and preaching at night. Seven were baptized and five were reclaimed. He spent eight days at Corinth. Three were baptized and one was restored. Brother Green is now at Abilene, near Statesville.
- T. B. Clark writes from Red Boiling Springs, Tenn., August 29: "My meeting at Roanoke, Texas, resulted in ten baptisms, all grown people, and some of them of the best people in Roanoke. I am now in a fine meeting at Red Boiling Springs. I met Capt. C. B. Massey, a Baptist, here in a five-days' debate in 1916. We cannot furnish room for the crowds."
- C. H. Smithson has been sick for the greater part of the summer, but is now recovered and in a good meeting. His loss of time and sickness have entailed an unusual expense, and he will be glad to receive some financial assistance from congregations who know of his sacrifice. The church at Hatfield, Ark., sent a check for $11.76. Address 844 Dudley Avenue, Texarkana, Ark.

From C. G. Vincent, Knoxville, Tenn., September 2: "I spent six weeks in Middle Tennessee in the interest of the Kamitomizaka lot fund. About thirty-six hundred dollars is needed by December, 1922. I secured cash and pledges to cover about three-fourths of this amount. I must devote a little more time to finish this task. I was kindly received everywhere, for which I am grateful."

More than anything else now do we need to pray.—Rufus W. Weaver.

God will be with us in our sacrices to meet our obligations.—E. Y. Mullins.

Listen! If all the world were following you, where would it go?-F. C. McConnell.

J. C. Mosley had a good meeting at Milltown and Neverfail, with visible results. He has gone to Dongala, Ill., for some work.

W. R. Willcut closed a good meeting near Booneville, Miss. There were twenty-three additions. He was engaged for next year's meeting.

The fourteenth session of Freed-Hardeman College, Henderson, Tenn., will open on September 14. Prospects for a splendid opening are fine. The new girls' dormitory is being made ready for the opening. It is a magnificent building—a great place for girls to stay.

Many brethren and friends will be grieved to learn of the death of Sister William P. Walker. She died at her brother's home, near Burns, Tenn., on August 29, after a lingering illness. Brother Walker has the sympathy of all. A more extended notice will appear later.

From J. H. Morris, Tuscumbia, Ala., September 5: "I closed a meeting at Wheeler, Ala., with thirteen baptisms—all from the world and denominations, except three. I preached two sermons per day for one week, with an average attendance of about two hundred at the night servive. They will now keep house for the Lord.

L. L. Brigance is in a meeting a week old at Bethel Church, Tigrett, Tenn. This is a strong country church, with a beautiful new meetinghouse. Great crowds are attending the services, and five have confessed the Savior thus far. This is his last meeting for the summer, as he takes up his work with Freed-Hardeman College again on September 14.

S. H. Hall writes: "The meeting at Farmersville, Texas, continued thirteen days, with twenty-two baptized into Christ and nine reclaimed. The brethren are remodeling their house and improving it, and I am expecting greater things for the cause in that section. Lowel Teddlie did the song leading, and did it well. C. E. Wooldridge has been doing some fine work for this congregation."

John T. Smithson writes: "I was away from Louisville, Ky., six weeks. I preached most of this time. The visible results were as follows: One came from the Methodists and two from the Baptists, who decided to lay aside their denominational names and worship God in the name of Christ by being only Christian, thirteen confessed their sins and were restored to fellowship, and forty-seven were baptized."

From J. H. Hines, Fort Deposit, Ala., September 1: "I am in a good meeting about ten miles from Fort Deposit. C. A. Buffington labors with this congregation, and is loved by all for his work's sake. He began the meeting last Lord's day, and one obeyed the Christ. I came Monday and found the people ready to hear the pure word. Interest is fine. Three made the good confession last night and will obey the Christ in baptism to-day."

Hal P. McDonald, Oakman, Ala., September 1: "On August 29 I closed my second meeting with the Gold Mine congregation, near Brilliant, Ala., with twenty-one baptisms and one restored. My meeting on San Gabriel River, near Thorndale, Texas, resulted in four baptisms and one restoration. Just as soon as I can dispose of my lumber mill and a tract of land I have here, I plan to enter evangelistic and school work again. We close our Summer School of Business Training at Cordova, Ala., to-morrow."

From Otis J. Haynes, Hensley, Ark.: "On August 6 I came into Hensley to buy some medicine. I started home in the grocery car on a logging road. The car was wrecked and overturned and I was thrown underneath. I sustained a compound fracture of my left leg, and my right leg was very badly bruised. I will not be able to do anything toward supporting my family for six months. Several churches and individuals have sent us small contributions. We need the prayers of all God's people."

From M. S. Mason, Greenway, Ark., September 2: "I closed at Cash, Ark., on August 14, with ten additions and much good done otherwise. Promised to be there the first two weeks in August, 1922. I closed at Rector, Ark., with four additions and the best outside interest they have had there for several years. Will probably work in and about Rector one month in 1922. Am now at Greenway in my third annual meeting. Prospects are very good. I go from here to Cureall, near West Plains, Mo. All goes well."

From A. G. Freed, Henry, Tenn., September 3: "The meeting here is not a week old. The interest is great. There were five confessions and baptisms last night. Many more are interested. The church at Henry does things. Almost every member is a worker. It is good to be here, You will hear more from the church here. Nothing preventing, I will be with the church at Ostella, Tenn., near Lewisburg, commencing the fourth Sunday in September; then with the church at Lavergne, Tenn., the second Sunday in October."

From E. P. Watson, Dickson, Tenn., September 5: "We closed a two-weeks' mission meeting at Pond Station, Tenn., last Saturday night, with two additions. There were good crowds and interest during the entire meeting. Several members from Dickson supported the meeting by their presence and encouragement. We were also assisted by some of the members from Tennessee City. We had only two members there when we began the meeting; and while there were only two additions, the people all were deeply interested, and I believe that another meeting later on will bring many over to the truth."

From Charlie Taylor, Paducah, Ky., September 2: "I have been engaged this year at mission points in Western Kentucky, being supported by the Gobel Avenue church of Christ, of this city; Hebron Church, in Graves County; Lone Oak Church, in McCracken County; and the church at Bandana, in Ballard County. The coöperation of these churches has made this work possible; and though there were only nine additions, yet the seed of the kingdom has been sown that will bring forth fruit in due season. I expect to visit a number of these places next year, the Lord willing. I will enter David Lipscomb College on September 27. Correspondents will please note change of address after that date."

From Fred M. Little: "The meeting at Enterprise, Ala., closed on August 21, with seven added to the church. On August 22 I went to Strata, Ala., where the brethren had started a meeting on the third Lord's day, and continued the meeting till the following Saturday night. Five obeyed the gospel. On August 28 I was at Catoma Street Church, Montgomery, having been away three Lord's days. During my absence J. S. Moores, of Wetumpka, preached twice, with one restored. John Churchwell, Jr., Elder J. L. Fitzpatrick, and E. L. Cullum preached once each. The sisters meet each Tuesday afternoon. One Tuesday they sew or plan social work among the sick or otherwise dependent of whom they may know. They also study the Bible, using C. R. Nichol's outline, 'Sound Doctrine,' which they consider a good work."

Announcement by Earnest C. Love: "I have decided to leave off teaching in the Fresno Home and School and take up some work which will take me to the New England States. Before long, the Lord willing, I will be passing through Arizona. New Mexico, and Texas on my way to Tennessee. I have several friends and relatives whom I wish to visit on my way. Those desiring me to visit them should write me at 925 Thorne Avenue, Fresno, Cal., as soon as possible. The Home will remain open for orphan children, and the school will be maintained only for those in the Home. My son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Banton, and others will have charge. My wife and I will take a rest by doing some other kind of work for a while. I can hold some meetings in Tennessee this fall, if not too far away from my father's place, near Shady Grove, in Hickman County. He is critically ill, and I want to stay reasonably close to him for a while."

From Mrs. L. V. Mitchell, McGregor, Ga., August 31: "J. J. Reynolds, of Tennessee, began a meeting here on the second Lord's day in the month and continued it until the following Thursday night week. On Wednesday after the meeting began J. Bedford Beck, of Savannah, Ga., came, and was with us the remainder of the time. Three were baptized and one came from the Baptists. Three of this number were of the same family. The father and mother were baptized, and the daughter realized she had been wearing the wrong name. The church was wonderfully strengthened. Brother Beck preached a few sermons and assisted greatly in the song service. We have received only four dollars and a half since the last appeal. Our indebtedness is one hundred and thirty-four dollars. Any other help will be appreciated. Send all contributions to me at Higgston, Ga. I will be only three miles from McGregor, and shall go back for worship on Lord's day."

Infant Baptism.

BY J. C. M'O.

K. H. Perdue, of Hoopeston, Ill., has been discussing with some of his neighbors the subject of infant rantism, commonly known as infant baptism. He seems greatly interested in the subject, and sends me the following:

1. I want scriptural information concerning baptizing infants. Some of my religious friends contend that they baptize infants into Christ, and then they say that they bring the child up according to the teaching of the Scriptures, and that when they do this he has no opportunity to leave the kingdom of Christ,

2. Would it be possible to bring a child up in such a manner that it would never need adult baptism? please state how. They contend that there is no reason why a child should go into sin. I contend that the command to be baptized is always given to the penitent sinner. Furthermore, that it is impossible to put a man into a house when he is already in it. I further contend that baptism is for believers and not for infants. If I am teaching the Scriptures, I want to know it; and if I am not, I want to know it.

The subject of infant baptism involves far more than simply sprinkling a little water on the head of an infant. If this were all, and if it did not seek to uproot the entire plan of salvation as ordained by Jehovah, we might pass it by unnoticed. Infant baptism, however, seeks to revive the old Abrahamic covenant, which has been annulled. Under Abraham, in order to be in covenant relationship with God, it was unnecessary for one to know God, unnecessary for one to obey, unnecessary for one to have any penitence or to obey any command of God. Simply flesh and blood, without any volition, knowledge, faith, or obedience, were brought into covenant relationship with God After entering the Abrahamic covenant, it was necessary for men to be taught to know the Lord, for they entered without knowledge; hence, after coming into covenant relationship with him, they would teach other, saying: "Know the Lord." The terms of entrance into the Abrahamic covenant are clearly stated in Gen. 17: 13, which reads: "He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant." Here it is not required that one be a believer or that he be penitent or obedient, but simply that the male who was born in Abraham's house or was bought with his money should be circumcised. But when Christ came and sealed the blood of the new covenant with his own blood, no longer would simply flesh and blood be brought into the kingdom of God. Jeremiah, the prophet, states this very clearly in the following words: "Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith Jehovah. But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith Jehovah: I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people: and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more." (Jer. 31: 31-34.) This applies to the gospel covenant; for Paul quotes this from Jeremiah in Heb. 8, beginning with verse 8, and applies it to the gospel covenant. The great distinction between the Abrahamic covenant and the gospel covenant is this: Under Abraham it was simply flesh and blood, without any volition, faith, or obedience, that was brought into covenant relationship with Abraham. After being in the covenant, it was necessary to teach them to know the Lord. Under the new covenant, which is the gospel covenant, in order that they might enter into covenant relationship with Christ, he puts the law into their inward parts and writes it in their hearts. In the gospel covenant it is necessary for one to know the Lord, necessary for him to have faith in Christ and to humbly bow in meek submission to the authority of Christ. In this new covenant "they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin will I remember no more."

No man can enjoy covenant relationship with Christ without first knowing the Lord and without faith and obedience. It is not possible to go back and resurrect the old Abrahamic covenant and bring simply flesh and blood into the kingdom of God. An attempt is made to do this in infant baptism. If anything is given to the child in infant baptism, it is simply a few drops of water, without any volition, faith, or obedience. If anything is brought into the kingdom of God, it is simply flesh and blood, which the prophet and the Holy Spirit, through the apostle Paul, teach us shall be so no more. Under the gospel covenant it is necessary to believe and obey with the heart; it is necessary for one to make the confession with his own mouth. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." The Holy Spirit, through Paul, says: "But thanks be to God, that, whereas ye were servants of sin, ye became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered; and being made free from sin, ye became servants of righteousness." (Rom. 6: 17, 18.) In infant baptism there is no faith or obedience from the heart and there is no confession with the mouth. The effort is made to simply commit the child to the system of religion—a child that has no faith, no penitence, and no obedience. After the child has thus had water sprinkled upon it, it is necessary to teach it to know the Lord, if it ever knows the Lord; and this the prophet says shall be so no more.

God's order is to baptize believers. Hence, when Christ came, and so soon as all authority in heaven and on earth had been given unto him, he commanded the apostles to go and teach all nations. "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) In the commission as recorded by Mark we learn that believers are to be baptized. We learn from John 3: 5: "Except one be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." justly complain of the Roman Catholics for seeking to bind a system of religion upon uninformed, ignorant people. How much better is it for Protestants to take a helpless infant, which has no faith, no obedience, and knows absolutely nothing of Christ, and seek to commit it to a system of religion? Should not every person have the privilege of exercising faith and obedience for himself? If pedobaptists could succeed in making their doctrine universal, there would be no believers to be baptized. They would rantize all infants, bind them to their system of faith, and thus destroy the great commission which says: "Go . . . make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." There would then be no believers' baptism. Any system that subverts and uproots God's entire order of salvation is unscriptural and should be vigorously opposed.

Questions and Answers. No. 3.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The next item in the list of questions relative to "speaking the same things" is concerning "unfulfilled prophecy." There never has been, and never will be, by any sane person, the slightest objection raised against teaching the prophecies, and there cannot be any hindrance to all "speaking the same thing" on this matter. Wherein, then, does a difference arise relative to unfulfilled prophecy? Simply this, and nothing more: There are those who insist on the right to tell us what God has not revealed to them or any one else-viz., the meaning of unfulfilled prophecy. "Why," says one, "I thought the Gospel Advocate objected to teaching the unfulfilled prophecies." This is a wrong and absolutely false statement of the issue. This journal has never objected to the "teaching" of the prophecies when done in the words of the prophets themselves; but it has opposed, and still opposes, those who undertake to tell what an unfulfilled prophecy means. This matter has been too clearly and definitely stated time and again in these columns for any fair-minded and honest person to get such an idea. Of course men are entitled to their guess as to what this or that unfulfilled prophecy means; but let them keep their guesses to themselves, and not preach and teach their "guesses" as the truth of God. It is nothing short of colossal egotism for one to assume that he knows what an unfulfilled prophecy means. Of course, when the destruction of a city or nation was foretold, we know the prophecy was fulfilled when that city or nation was destroyed; but with no such physical events to guide us, we can only know that a prophecy has been fulfilled by some inspired man revealing the fact. No one could have known that some of the events of Pentecost were the fulfillment of Joel's prophecy had not Peter, an inspired man, explained it by saying: "This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel." (Acts 2: 16.)

There are churches divided over the foolish efforts of would-be wise men in telling what the prophets meant, with nothing more to guide than their delusion of a superior wisdom. I repeat, the word of God does not divide the professed followers of Christ, and whatever division exists among them is due to the opinions and speculations of men. Hence, the situation which Brother Trice describes as existing in many communities may be due to one or both parties insisting on some things as matters of faith when there is no faith at all involved, but simply human opinions.

Our brother speaks of the "factions" in what we call the "loyal" church of Christ. It is to be deplored that factions exist, but I sometimes think we limit the word "loyal" in its application to the church. Often it means nothing more than to be sound on baptism and the establishment of the kingdom without much reference to the whole scope of Christian duties. There are, no doubt, so-called "loyal churches" that are dead, and seemingly wholly oblivious to the fact. Any church that does not put forth an effort to spread the gospel is without the vital principle of life, having a form of godliness without the power thereof.

Brother Trice wishes me to tell him how he can convince the world that he is "a member of the one divine organization, and that it is scriptural in origin, doctrine, and practice, while others are making the same claim and still differ in doctrine and practice." The one divine organization is a very large institution, including all of the children of God on this earth; hence, we must not confuse it with a handful of people who call themselves "the loyal church of Christ." The question presents no difficulty to my mind; for I never try to convince any one of anything in religion, save that which the word of God requires men and women to believe and do in the service and worship of the Lord. I try to present the church as revealed in the New Testament, how people became members of it and what they did as members of it, and then urge men and women to do likewise. I point out the fact that I did exactly what people in New Testament times did to get into the church, and am trying to do exactly as they did in worshiping and serving God; and if this does not convince the world that I "am a member of the one divine organization," then the world will have to remain unconvinced, so far as I am concerned. This way brethren have of debating the proposition, "The church with which I stand identified is scriptural in origin, doctrine, and practice," never appealed to me. To what do they refer by the word church"-some local congregation or those composing the Restoration Movement! Will any one be so bold as to claim that God has no children on this earth save those identified with the Restoration Movement? If not, then the church of God is a bigger thing than the "Restoration Movement." There is not a congregation in all this land that does not have within its membership some who teach things which 1 do not believe are authorized in the New Testament. Taking all of those together that compose the "Restoration Movement," there are many that believe and teach things I believe are unauthorized by the New Testament. Then, with what church am I identified? Easy enough to answer-viz., the body of Christ, which includes all of God's children in the world. What, then, discuss? This, and this only: The word of God teaches this or that, and stop at that. I will meet with and worship and work with the congregation I consider more nearly approximating the New Testament order, but will not undertake to defend anything save the word of God.

The question, "How far can an individual or congregation differ from me (or go wrong), and still be a loyal Christian or congregation?" presents difficulties not easy to answer. Permitting the assumption that Brother Trice is "in the falth" (2 Cor. 13: 5), the individual or congregation that differs from him on any matter of worship and service to God is, of course, to that extent, "disloyal." the question, "How far wrong may a congregation go before ceasing to be a church after the New Testament pattern, and become a human organization?" is, to some degree, of more easy solution. When a church departs in any matter of faith and practice to any extent from the New Testament, it ceases to be an exact pattern of a New Testament church; but just how far it has to go in such departures before God ceases to recognize it as his church is not to be determined by man. Some of the churches of the New Testament departed in many things from the divine pattern, and yet God did not refuse to claim them and seek to restore them.

As to the question, "who is to decide when a departure from the New Testament order takes place?" it is not hard for me to answer for myself. My faith and practice in religion are based upon my understanding of what the word of God teaches; hence, I must decide for myself when an individual or church departs from the truth. I take it that every one must do the same. Of course, if one believes it wrong and in violation of Bible teaching to attend a Bible college or a school in which the Bible is taught, he should stay away; for "whatsoever is not of faith is sin." (Rom. 14: 23.) But that by no means proves it would be wrong or sinful for others to attend such schools, unless it could be shown that some principle of divine teaching is being violated.

I am going to agree with every individual and church that believes and practices what I understand the word of God authorizes, regardless of what the world, the flesh, and the devil says or does. I am not a member of any religious institution larger than a local congregation (and I am a member of that only in the sense that I worship and work with it) nor smaller than the church of Christ, which is the body of Christ, that includes and embraces every child of God on earth. I know nothing of a religious body designated as "us" and "we as a people." I try to build up congregations after the New Testament pattern, but am not spending any time in building up something called "us" or "we as a people." It is true that I am laboring with all those who plead for a return to the New Testament order and who plead for the union of all God's people on the foundation of his word, and this means that God has children not identified with "us" "as a people." This is what I have been preaching and teaching for more than twenty years, and I shall fight it out on this line until my work on earth is done. I can and do fellowship those who oppose the "literature, teaching in classes, separate cups, and teaching the Bible in schools," but will not be bound by their human laws which they have enacted and seek to bind on God's people.

Perverting the Gospel, Wresting the Scriptures. BY E. A. E.

As we have seen, there is such a dishonest, crafty, beguiling, and destructive thing as "corrupting the word" (2 Cor. 2: 17) and "handling" it "deceitfully" (2 Cor. 4: 2). Paul did neither; "but by the manifestation of the truth" he commended himself "to every man's conscience in the sight of God," and he taught the truth and preached the gospel "in Christ" in "sincerity," "as of God" and "in the sight of God."

To teach and preach as in the sight of God and to teach and preach and live so as to commend oneself to every man's conscience are the highest and most holy motives. Does it not appear that not a few teachers and preachers teach and preach with any other motive except "as in the sight of God" and that their lives are everything but such as to commend them "to every man's conscience?" They appear to have no reverence for God or respect for his word, especially when his word crosses their way. "Selfcontrol," "lowliness of mind," "meekness," counting others better than themselves, "condescending to things that are lowly," buffeting their bodies and bringing them into bondage, bridling the tongue, trembling at the word of God, being not wise in their own conceits, etc., seem to make no impression upon them. And it does seem to me that the more egotistic, self-important, self-assertive, and the more some preach themselves and their own work and exploits, the wiser and better preachers many think they

Paul declares that his life of industry and economy and honesty—his working at times with his own hands and his independence—his life of uprightness and integrity, of virtue and purity, of self-sacrifice and abundant service, of righteousness and godliness, is "an ensample" to others; that others should "imitate" him (2 Thess. 3: 7, 9); that "in all things"—"serving the Lord with all lowliness of mind, and with tears, and with trials, which befell" him "by the plots of the Jews," and his whole manner of life—he gave a clean and strong and mighty example (Acts 20: 18, 20, 34, 35); and that all should be imitators of him, even as he was of Christ (1 Cor. 11: 1).

Such are the theories, speculations, contentions, factions, divisions, bitterness, worldliness, and immoral lives—not among the various "religious denominations" of the land, but among those who claim to belong to no denomination, but to be in the church of Christ only—that Paul's "sincerity" "in the sight of God," "good conscience, honest and holy purpose, clean and godly life, determined and grandly successful effort to keep his body in subjection, and to preach not himself, "but Christ Jesus as Lord," and himself a bond servant for Jesus' sake (2 Cor. 4: 5), and to know nothing "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified" (1 Cor. 2: 2), cannot be made too prominent and cannot be too strongly emphasized.

The contrast is appalling. Do common honesty, integrity, righteousness, and godliness—a pure and clean life and holy purpose to preach the word—stand for nothing? Must pure and faithful young preachers be discouraged by seeing the church in places put a premium upon dishonesty, or adultery, or any other sin in preachers? Our venerable, wise, good, and beloved Brother Lipscomb wrote years ago that in places and with some classes weak, dishonest, and otherwise immoral preachers were more popular than the clean, godly, strong, and faithful ones.

All who love God and Christ, the church, and the gospel are, with Paul, grieved to bitter tears over the sad and sinful, unrighteous and ungodly course of not a few preachers and many who are not preachers in the—shall I say family of God?

May "the Father of mercies and God of all comfort" and "Prince of Peace" lead all into the most worthy example of Paul, the most admirable and beautiful life of Christ, and into "the unity of peace," which all are commanded to give diligence to keep! May the Author of our salvation, who prayed that all his disciples for all time may be one, as he and God are one, and who teaches us "with all lowliness and meekness" to forbear one another in love, "with long-suffering," make us instruments in his hands to condemn all strife and bitterness, jeal-ousies and envy, factions and divisions contrary to his teaching, and to restore unity and peace and brotherly love! I would rather be a peacemaker one time in the hands of God than a peace disturber and peacemaker a hundred times in the hands of Satan. I would rather, in the love and peace of the gospel of Christ, unite the factions of one divided church than to divide a hundred over my sins and follies-my vanity and pride, theories and ambitions. Not many to-day seem to be impressed with the enormity of the sin of producing factions in the church and of dividing the body of Christ. With such God's commands to follow peace with all men, to seek peace, to pursue peace, to keep the peace, to make peace, to let peace rule in the heart, to practice great self-denial in order to maintain peace, and to be lowly and meek and forbearing in love, seem to have no weight whatever. Ambition, pride of opinion, vainglory, to carry a point, self-conceit, to have their own way, go a long way further with some than God's commandments. May the mercy of God be extended to all such until they may be brought to see all that is necessary to unity and peace and good will!

But-and this is a great difficulty in the way-all who for any reason and in any way corrupt the word of God or handle it deceitfuly, or "pervert the gospel," or wrest the Scriptures, help to destroy the harmony and peace and love of the church of God. All strife and contention, factions and divisions come from "corrupting the word of God," handling it deceitfully, perverting the gospel, and wresting the Scriptures. At least, those whose hearts are not right before God, whose motives are not pure, whose purposes are not holy, who serve some selfish end, do pervert the gospel and twist the Scriptures in their attempt to prove some theory, do corrupt the word of God in order to make it teach that which it does not teach or to destroy that which it does teach, do make merchandise of the gospel and the church, and do in different ways handle the word of God deceitfully, and in doing so they lead the innocent and unsuspecting ones into strife and factions and divisions, and "by their smooth and fair speech they beguile the hearts of the innocent." (Rom. 16: 17, 18.) They may themselves be deceived into thinking that by their twisting and turning, perverting and "corrupting the word of God," handling it deceitfully, and misapplying it in order to carry a point and maintain some notion, they are teaching the word of the Lord and preaching the gospel of peace.

I marvel that ye are so quickly removing from him that called you in the grace of Christ unto a different gospel; which is not another gospel: only there are some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, should preach unto you any other gospel than that which is preached unto you, let him be anathema. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preacheth unto you any gospel other than that which ye received, let him be anathema. (Gal. 1: 6-9.)

Paul declares in the following verse that he was not seeking the favor of men, but the favor of God; and if he were striving to please men, he could not be a servant of Christ. The preacher who preaches the gospel faithfully cannot have the favor of men or please them. This must be understood to start with. The preacher who seeks the favor of men is of necessity forced to pervert the gospel in order to gain that which he seeks.

Paul marveled that the Galatians were so soon removing from God and Christ "unto a different gospel." Yet there can be no other gospel; there is but one gospel, which is the same always. No man on earth or angel from heaven can preach another gospel; if one should attempt that, he would suffer the anathemas of God. But men can and do "pervert," or change, the gospel and turn it away from its purpose and power to save. They change it so as to please men and to serve their own purposes of selfishness and worldly glory, and do entangle people again in the yoke of bondage, of error and sin. In this way, instead of carrying peace and salvation to their audiences, preachers carry trouble and strife and destruction.

There can be no greater sin against God and men than to seek to change or to pervert the gospel of Christ, to add to or to take from the word of God. To all such will be added the horrors of hell, and from such will be taken all the blessings of heaven. (See again Rev. 22: 18, 19; Deut. 4: 2: 12: 32.)

For a preacher or teacher or any other man to apparently teach one thing, and yet to leave his teaching so that he can claim to teach quite a contrary thing, is, to say the least, "to straddle," and that is insincerity and dishonesty. He who does that cannot be a safe guide and an honest teacher of the truth and sincere preacher of the gospel. The shrewdness and mental abilities of men must not be allowed to overshadow their honesty and sincerity and love of truth and right. The Bible does not teach two different and contrary things on the same subject. Never! The teacher of the truth and the preacher of the gospel, regardless of consequences-ostracism, imprisonment, or death-must do all in his power in perfect honesty, purest sincerity, and deepest piety "in the sight of ' to make the will of God on all subjects and at all times unmistakably plain to his hearers and readers. Nothing must be withheld, nothing must be added, and from nothing must one shrink. This must be done first by example. A teacher or preacher cannot throw his influence to one side of a question and his teaching to the other side. He must live as he teaches and teach on the side on which he lives. His teaching and life must be consistent. If he will teach only the truth plainly and faithfully and live as he teaches, he will always be consistent.

Peter declares that the "some things hard to be understood," which Paul wrote, and "the other scriptures," were wrested by the "ignorant and unsteadfast" "unto their own destruction." Here it is stated that wresting the Scriptures leads to destruction, and that mere ignorance is no excuse. Some are willfully ignorant. (2 Pet. 3: 5.) God commands all to study his will. All teachers and preachers, with Timothy, are commanded to "give diligence" in the study of the truth to present themselves "approved unto God "-not unto men-workmen who will then have nothing of which "to be ashamed," "handling aright"-not deceitfully, not perverting, not corrupting, not twisting-" the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2: 5.) Likewise all teachers and preachers must shun all "profane babblings," "fables," "untaught questions," and all things not revealed. All must prove steadfast and must not allow themselves to be "carried about by every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, in craftiness, after the wiles of error; but speaking truth in love, may grow up in all things into him, who is the head, even Christ; from whom all the body fitly framed and knit together through that which every joint supplieth, according to the working in due measure of each several part, maketh increase of the body unto the building up of itself in love" (Eph. 4: 11-16; read all this reference) -not the tearing down of itself in sin and hate. Amen.

Pray For Preachers.

Jonathan Edwards said: "If some Christians that have been complaining of their ministers had said and acted less before men and had applied themselves with all their might to cry to God for their ministers—had, as it were, risen and stormed heaven with their humble, fervent and incessant prayers for them—they would have been much more in the way of success." The greatest preacher that ever lived besought his brethren to "pray for him and his associates, that the word of the Lord might run and be glorified;" that "utterance might be given him in opening his mouth to make known with boldness the mystery of the gospel," and that God would "open unto him a door for the world." The preacher who knows that his people are praying for him will be a new man and preach with new power.—Selected.

Mrs. J. M. Walling, Creek, Tenn., asks me to give all references on what to do to become a Christian. For answer to this request I refer our sister to a little tract that I have written on "What Must I Do to Be Saved?" I am mailing a copy to her.

Brother McQuiddy: A man approached me the other day with this question: "Where was the church of God from the day of Pentecost up to Campbell?" This man claimed that the church of God was not in existence at that time, and that no one could prove that it was. He claimed that there was no church at that time (from the day of Pentecost up to Campbell) but the Catholic Church. C. M. HAMRICK.

It is evident that there have been Christians in the world from the day of Pentecost until now. Through the Dark Ages there were people who believed and obeyed the gospel of Christ. The kingdom built by Christ shall never come to naught. It shall survive and stand forever. "The gates of Hades shall not prevail against it." While the world was plunged into darkness, superstition, and rebellion, there has always been some followers of Christ on the earth since the day of Pentecost, as is shown by church history.

Brother McQuiddy: In our lesson of August 7, the third chapter of Second Timothy, we differed some on "the last days" spoken of in verse 1. Some said it meant the last days of the Jewish dispensation, some said we are now living in the last days, and others said the days are in the future. Please give your idea of what it means. Also, explain verse 12: "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Does he mean that all who will live godly shall suffer persecution, or would it be better to say "will suffer persecution?" Also verse 13: "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse," etc. Would it not sound better to say "will wax worse and worse," etc.? I know the Bible means exactly what it says, but it seems to me that in using the word "shall" there is a compulsion.

M. G. Curtis.

The "last days" spoken of in the third chapter of Second Timothy refers to the Christian dispensation as the last of God's divine arrangements for the redemption of man. Before the Christian institution was the patriarchal age, which lasted about twenty-five hundred years, and next the Jewish age, which lasted for about fifteen hundred years. The Christian dispensation will last until the end of time. "The last days" began on the day of Pentecost. "But the Spirit saith expressly, that in later times some shall fall away from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons." (1 Tim. 4: 1.) "Shall suffer persecution" conveys the thought that persecution is inseparable from a devoted, Christian life.

Brother McQuiddy: Please give me some light on Rev. 21: 27—"the Lamb's book of life." i understand that this means the Christian, one who holds out faithful to the end. What I want to know is: what are "the books" that we read of in Rev. 20: 12, and how will the record be kept? Will the record of the wicked and the saved be kept till the judgment day? Some say that "the books" mean the different books in the Bible. Is this true? "And books were opened: and arother book was opened, which is the book of life." What books were these? Is there any record kept of the unrighteous?

H. R. Lieb.

"And I saw the dead, the great and the small, standing before the throne; and books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of the things which were written in the books, according to their works." (Rev. 20: 12.) "And there shall in no wise enter into it anything unclean, or he that maketh an abomination and a lie: but only they that are written in the Lamb's book of life." (Rev. 21: 27.) Evidently "the book of life" and "the Lamb's book of life" mean one and the same. The names of the saints are written in the Lamb's book of life. "The books" are the records that contained the deeds of all men. From these books all are judged according to their deeds. It is evident that "the books" do not have reference to the books of the Bible.

Brother McQuiddy: I would like to get all the help I can on the subject of punishment. I heard a preacher say that the souls of the wicked would just be punished for what they had done and then be burned up, and that would be the end of it. Does the word "everlasting" mean that there is no end to it or just as long as anything lasts? I obeyed the gcspel about seven years ago, and would like to get the truth out of God's word, and any help you can give me will be appreciated.

J. E. Beardain.

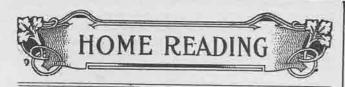

This question has been so well answered by David Lipscomb that I copy his answer in full from "Questions Answered," by Lipscomb and Sewell, pages 522, 523:

The punishment terminates exactly when the rewards spoken of end. "These shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." The same word in Greek is connected with the punishment and the life. In the Revised Testament both are translated by the word "eternal." This is right. The space that measures the life is the same that measures the punishment.

The word translated "everlasting" exhausts the time of the institution or period to which it refers. As examples: When it is said a man should be king forever, or always, it meant he should be a king through the entire period of his life; when it was said certain things should exist forever among the Jews, it meant they should exist to the end of the Jewish state; when it is said an earthly kingdom shall exist forever, it means that it shall exist so long as the earthly state of man continues. It exhausts the period to which reference is made. When anything of the future state is affirmed to be eternal, or everlasting, the duration of that thing must exhaust the future spiritual state. As that state has no end, that which is said to be eternal in that state—whether of joy or sorrow, life or punishment must have no end, must continue so long as the state continues. The eternal years of God alone measure that state. Whatever is eternal in that state must exist as long as the years of God, which measure the state, endure. When punishment in the future state is said to be eternal, it must continue through the years of God.

The idea that punishment purifies anything is not in the Bible. Punishment checks wickedness in its course, makes man stop and think, makes him see the folly of his course; and when he stops to think, then God offers him the love of Christ, his own mercy, and the blessings that pertain to the service of God to induce him to turn and live a pure life. Then God forgives the sin and washes him, makes him clean and pure, accepts him as his child, and clothes him with his own robes of righteousness that he may dwell in the house of God forever.

This world is the scene of probation. Here God presents and inflicts punishment on sin. He offers the rewards that pertain to obedience to God. He brings to bear his own threatenings and promises; he presents the life and truth of the Son of God, the guidance of the Holy Spirit, the work of the church, the influence of the good of earth, the warnings from the spirit land that abounds in his word. Then the providences of this life work to bring men to repentance. If man rejects these, he passes into the future state, where probation ceases, where divine love no longer invites him to repentance, where the Holy Spirit does not dwell, where no church exists, where no good associations are found, where Christ the Savior never goes, where only evil influences surround, where the spirits of evil men and demons, waxing worse and worse, are the only companionship. In a word, he passes into a state where all the good influences and associations are withdrawn and where all the evil influences and spirits of the universe are concentrated to work out their own eternal ruin. If a man will not repent here, how can be repent there?

The Mother's Hour.

When the twilight hour is here, Mother, draw your children near, As your mother, in her day, When she taught your lips to pray,

Sow the seeds of love and truth In each heart in early youth, That their growth in later life Leave no room for doubt or strife.

Though to varied tasks all day Must your hands and thoughts give way, Do not lose the twilight hour, Lest you miss your strongest power.

Little eyes all day will look To the hour for story book, Song, and prayer, at mother's side; Let no care this trust divide.

-Cora A. Matson Dolson.

The Twilight Story Hour.

There is, to my mind, nothing more potent for discipline or for creating confidence between a mother and her child than a "twilight story hour."

A daily story time may sound like romance, but it is very practical and accomplishes more good than a thousand scoldings. There is a story somewhere for every phase of character growth, and any librarian will help a mother to find these stories. If there is no library available, there can be no better investment for the character building of your child than the purchase of a few good storybooks. The child lives in a world of fiction. Do not deprive him of your companionship in that legitimate, fascinating realm.

There come in every day small vexations, irritations, because a child does not comprehend grown-up standards or is mischievous or willful. Never let your boy or girl go to bed with the day's tangle unsmoothed. I have heard mothers say, "I'm too tired when night comes," or, "I'm going out to-night-I can't be bothered." The one who "can't be bothered" perhaps does not realize that a man or a woman with breadth of vision and an imagination to accomplish great things may be in the making during that few minutes of every evening. The mother who is "too tired "-and there are so many of them-perhaps does not know what a blessed restfulness it is to have the children on her lap or about the fire with her, quiet after the day's excitement, listening with wide eyes to the twilight story. It is as soothing to the mother as to the children, and there is an intimacy growing out of that time which never ceases to be a blessing in after years.

You may say you have not the time to learn stories—would reading them do as well? For a score of reasons it would not. If you are really desirous of the best for your children and are looking for some way to make a beautiful harmony out of your lives together, you will find the time. It does not take more than a few minutes to read a story, and you can go over it in your mind while you are washing the dishes or preparing the vegetables for dinner. Perhaps the longest time required is in choosing the right story to tell at the right time.

As you study these stories, you will find that your own character is expanding, too. There is a lesson for grown-ups in all the old fairy tales and in many of the new ones. The story hour will keep your imagination from becoming dulled; it will quicken your sense of humor; it will make you young with your children and better able to enter into every nook and cranny of their child life.

Do not think that this method of disciplining is too indirect, that the moral of the story will be lost in the interest of the story itself. It has been proved repeatedly that this is not true, even when it may seem so at first.

Be consistent in the story-telling if you undertake it. Do not do it one night and neglect it the next night. Make it a part of every day, and it will soon come to be the sweetest, most restful, and most helpful time both to your-self and your children.—Nelia Gardner White.

A Riddle That Solved Itself.

After a hard day's work the boys' raft was at last finished. Of course, grandfather must see it launched, and they rushed pell-mell to the house to bring him down to the creek. Grandfather admired the new raft, even as much as the boys thought it deserved, and that was a very great deal.

"But this isn't the first raft I've seen on the creek this summer," he said.

The boys looked at him in astonishment.

"Why, how can that be, grandfather?" Ted ventured. "We're the only fellows that play here, you know; and we never built a raft before."

"The other raft was made of leaves," grandfather began, with a twinkle in his eye.

"Of leaves! What good would that be?" Hal interrupted.

"But it really was made of leaves," grandfather insisted—"of dried leaves and twigs, all nicely sewed together with silk. It doesn't sound exactly serviceable, I know; but it carried its owner very comfortably. He sat on his raft—"

"Sat on it, grandfather!" Ted's eyes were growing wider and wider. "Why, we have to stand on ours. If we sit down, over it goes in a minute!"

"His doesn't, though," laughed grandfather. "He sits and floats all day long, wherever the wind and water may choose to carry him. His meals are brought to him, too—all he can eat. He's a ravenous fellow, a regular wolf for hunting and devouring."

"Is it a riddle, grandfather?" Hal asked, suspiciously,

"Well, perhaps; see if you can guess it! The raft builder is very beautifully marked and has exceedingly strong jaws; and whenever a water insect floats too near his raft, he is quickly seized in those strong jaws and swallowed before he can even try to get away,"

"Is it a frog, grandfather?"

" No."

"A kingfisher?"

" No."

"Is it-0 what is it, grandfather?"

But just at that moment a tiny floating platform of leaves and twigs came sailing slowly toward them down the creek; and on it, looking round with bright, greedy eyes, sat a large, beautifully marked water spider, eager and alert for food.

"There, there!" cried the boys. "There he comes now-old spider wolf! It is, it is—isn't it, grandfather?"

"Yes, that's the raft builder," said gradfather, "and he's a bloodthirsty fellow, too. See how he watches for every water insect on his way. He's ready for them every minute."

And when the odd little craft sailed out of sight round a bend, the boys' raft was successfully launched, and grandfather stood on the shore clapping his hands and cheering. But nobody thought to cheer Mr. Water Spider, who had built his raft alone.—Presbyterian Banner.

"Little Things."

BY T. W. PHILLIPS.

"These six things doth the Lord hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him: a proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, a heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren." (Prov. 6: 16-19.)

Inasmuch as the Lord hates these seven (little) things, I feel sure he wants us to hate them, too. A proud, arrogant, haughty look is not commendable in a child of God. A lying tongue can create hatred and bring shame and disgrace into the church, and into homes, schools, social circles, business institutions, and every conceivable walk in life. The "little" man who speaks the truth on all occasions and in all things is indeed the "big" man in his community. Hands that shed innocent blood are murderous; while the heart that deviseth mischief and is fertile for wicked imaginations is one of the most dangerous "little" things among men.

A man having these six (little) things well rooted in his heart will find it his wicked pleasure to sow discord among brethren. Such a soul delights in wrecking a congregation and in the downfall of the purest character. These little things mentioned by the proverbialist will caseharden the mind and make reprobates of otherwise good men. They will poison the affections so that there will be no room for pity, mercy, or forgiveness toward the penitent soul though it plead with tears.

No wonder, then, our Father in heaven hates these deadly evils which do so corrupt the hearts of men. Many are they who had better learn to show pity and be merciful and forgiving toward their unfortunate fellows; for we are subjects of temptations while in the flesh. We shall have to appear before the judgment seat of God in the great afterwhile; and I am sure, if we have shown no mercy here, we will not find any in his presence there and then for us.

O, the little things we can do, you and I, that may count in that day! Forgive, that you may be forgiven. Be pitiful and show mercy, that mercy and pity may be shown to you in a time when you may need it. You do not live to yourself.

Evading the Law.

BY CLED E. WALLACE.

"Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." (Matt. 7: 22.)

These are the words of Christ. It is not only necessary for men to do something in order to be saved, but it must be the specified something Jesus Christ calls the "will of my Father." That will is expressed through Christ in the New Testament and includes baptism as one of the conditions of pardon. "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) "And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) "For ye are all sons of God. through faith, in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 26, 27.)

The man who is scripturally baptized enters "into Christ," where remission of sins and other spiritual blessings are to be found. "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name." (Acts 22: 16.)

But people do not want to be baptized. There is a virulent prejudice against the ordinance, born of rebellion against God. But it won't do not to be saved. How can we manage to be saved and not be baptized? Is there no way to evade it? Let's see. What about the thief on the cross? Why not assume that he was saved, and that without baptism? Then we have it. If a thief could be saved without baptism, why surely an honest man can be. But why should an honest man want to be saved without baptism? It is a command of God, and honest men should delight in keeping the commands of God. "Though he was a Son, yet learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and having been made perfect, he became unto all them that obey him the author of eternal salvation." (Heb. 5: 8, 9.)

God has always demanded obedience of men in every age of the world. But obedience in one age is not necessarily obedience in another. Abel obeyed God by offering an animal sacrifice; we cannot. Abraham obeyed God by circumcising his children; we cannot. The Jews obeyed God by observing the passover and keeping the Sabbath; we cannot. We obey a form of doctrine Abraham and the Jews knew nothing about. They did not obey the gospel, but we must or be lost. (1 Cor. 15: 1-4; Rom. 6: 16-18.) Baptism was not a part of the system Abraham and Moses lived under. Neither of them was ever commanded to be baptized. If God had told Abraham to be baptized, he would have done so, and not sought plausible grounds of evasion like some people who claim to follow Christ do

The command to be baptized is a part of the gospel system which went into effect after Christ died on the cross. The thief belonged to the Jewish age. Baptism was no part of the Jewish system. (Heb. 9: 15-17; Luke 24: 46-49.)

Why, then, do people persist in digging the thief up and trying him by a law he never lived under? It is an effort to evade the law of pardon found in the New Testament. It is the spirit of rebellion expressing itself. They go back to the thief to keep out of the water. But Christ and the apostles say go in. "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.)

We Want a Preacher.

We have a total membership of from forty to sixty members, and a total attendance at the Lord's-day services of We feel that we are in the from twelve to fifteen members. middle of a big need for a real preacher of the gospel. We have some members that believe in "hewing straight to the line," and others who believe that there is not so much use ir observing the commandments so closely as to interfere with all earthly pleasure; consequently there is division among us, and the bigger part of our membership stay at home on Sundays, or go car riding into the country, or engage in other pleasures not commanded by the lowly Naza-

We want a preacher who has already learned his lesson We do not want to and will not have to practice on us. adopt some stripling, and then have to train him up as a preacher, so that he may be able to do a great deal of good in the future, but some one who is able to deliver the goods right now,

We want some good man to come on this job (for a job it will be) and stay on the job until the people have been taught that the only way to get to heaven is through the straight and narrow way, and that he who tries to get there otherwise is a thief and a robber and will most certainly awake to find himself everlastingly lost.
If any preacher reads this who thinks himself equal to the occasion, who has confidence in his ability as a preacher, who can handle hard jobs and get the church in good working order, teaching them to be on hand every Lord'sday morning whether the preacher is there or not, he will dc well to communicate with the elders of the church of Christ at Antlers, Okla. Do not answer this if you have a taint of "digressiveness" in your system, for it will soon be discovered, and you would be promptly told that your services would be required no longer. Plain talk is the easiest understood. We must have references.

Address either J. C. Watson, J. M. Johnson, W. R. Surrett, Frank Moyer, or George R. Childers, elders, Antlers, Okla.

I might apply for the "job" awaiting some one in Antlers, but I fear I could not qualify. I had to "register" with the other boys for the late world war. I do not have so much confidence in my "ability as a preacher," but I have an unlimited confidence in the gospel as God's power to save. Too, I am certain there is not a "stripling" among us, who preaches, with sufficient ability to teach the members above, who are spending their time in pleasure seeking. I recall having heard a brother who was well advanced in years preach one time, and mother and father said it was a wonderful sermon, and I guess it was, but little did I understand of the sermon. Some weeks afterwards I heard a young man preach, and I learned much more from him than from the older brother. I recall having heard David Lipscomb say: "We older brethren often lose sight of the simple lessons in the gospel, and in attempting to teach brethren who have been hearing the gospel many years, we fail to teach those who so much need the simple lessons."

If I were advising the congregation in Antlers, Okla., I would suggest that they find some consecrated young man, a young man who above all other things desires to see people become Christians, a young man who is preaching because he cannot help but preach, and invite him to come and labor with them. Of the young man Timothy, Paul said, "I have no man like-minded, who will care truly for your state;" and I am certain we have young preachers who can do the needed work in Antlers, Okla. Of course the congregation in Antlers is just as ready to give "references" as they are determined to have references.

We need more young preachers who are Christians.

Using Books and Tracts.

Dear Brother Nichol: I read what you said about the work other people are doing with tracts and books. I do not understand why it is that our brethren are so far behind in a work of this kind. The Adventists are doing as much to spread their doctrine over the country by their tracts and books as by oral preaching. Let us make a great effort to get our brethren interested in this work as never before. I have a little booklet, entitled "A Great Battle," which exposes the unknown-tongue and divine-healing fads of this age. My idea has been to get our brethren to buy a dozen or more for each community, and not try to sell them to the people, but just lend them out, get them back and lend them out again and again, and thus keep it at work all the time. It sells for twenty-five cents per copy or $2.50 a dozen. My address is Denton, Texas. D. S. LIGON.

Four additions in Rockwall, Texas, in a meeting conducted by J. S. Dunn. Ten baptisms and three restorations in a meeting by A.

M. Lemons at Lipan, Texas.

The meeting in Hollis, Okla., conducted by John E. Dunn, resulted in twenty-five additions.

John M. Rice baptized forty-four in a meeting at Oakland, Okla. There were ten restorations.

The meeting at Cedar Hill, Texas, conducted by Cled E. Wallace, closed with six baptisms and two restorations.

The meeting in Ohio, Texas, resulted in nineteen baptisms and three restorations. U. R. Forest was the evangelist.

H. E. Kelley has closed the most interesting meeting in the history of the church at Brushy Creek, near Goree, Texas.

C. E. Wooldridge baptized five in Cross Plains, Texas, and four in Little Elm, Texas. He has promised to return to each place in 1922.

Harvey Scott, of Floresville, Texas, closed in Stoker, Ark., with forty-seven additions to the congregation thirty-seven baptized.

Lee Warren closed his fifth meeting with the church in Wetumka, Okla., with fifteen baptisms, and will be with them again next year.

In a mission meeting at Midway, near Canadian, Texas, conducted by W. L. Swinney, eight were baptized. One baptism at the regular service in Canadian.

A. O. Colley, minister for the congregation at Pearl and Bryan Streets, Dallas, Texas, reports two additions to the congregation—one by baptism. The work prospers.

R. L. Whiteside is in a most interesting meeting at Corinth, Ark. This is the seventh meeting he has assisted in at that place. A number of additions at last report.

J. S. Daugherty closed a meeting at Newark, Wise County, Texas, at the water, with fourteen baptized and one re-

b. F. Draper, 2709 May Street, Fort Worth, Texas, will be able be in Tennesse: this fall for two meetings, and will be able to assist in other meetings while there. Write him as above.

Fourteen additions in the meeting at Oletha, Texas, with T. H. Etheridge, principal of the Gunter Bible College, doing the preaching. He reports the outlook for the college this year bright.

Foy E. Wallace, Jr., baptized eighteen in a meeting in Bryson, Texas. Several restorations. There were twenty-eight baptized in the meeting in which he assisted at Merkel, Texas.

C. A. Buchanan, who is being supported by the Cleburne church, in Johnson County, Texas, reports fifteen baptized in a meeting he has just closed at Cross Roads, a mission point in the county.

In a mission meeting near Clifton, Texas, J. S. Newman baptized thirteen. In a meeting with the church in Grandview, Texas, he baptized twenty-three, and eleven were reclaimed. The work in Clifton is doing nicely.

J. M. McKinney, in a meeting at Alameda, Texas, baptized eleven. Among this number, some were from the Baptists. Twelve were restored. Brother McKinney may be had for a meeting this fall. Write him at Ranger, Bentley, Newlin, Texas, reports: "Two restored at Newlin; seven baptized in Hamby, Texas. I will be with them again next year. I have some time for meetwith them again next year. I have some time for meetings after September 11." Write Brother Bentley at the above address.

Elvin Bost closed an interesting meeting at a school-house near Braggs, Okla., with twenty-nine baptisms. Among the number were a man seventy-five and a woman seventy-two years of age. This meeting marks the beginning of a new congregation.

I. M. Ussery reports: "I have closed a ten-days' meeting at Callie Church, near Velma, Okla., with sixty-seven additions—fifty-four baptized and thirteen reclaimed. About thirty-five are heads of families; twenty-five of them came from the Baptists and Methodists. This gives the church there a membership of about one hundred and fifty."

L. E. Carpenter has closed an interesting meeting in Breckenridge, Texas. A congregation of forty-five members was gathered. In the congregation are nineteen men, and more than half of the number do public work in the congregation. There are thirty-four families represented in the congregation. Is this not a splendid showing for a in the congregation. Is this not a splendi new congregation? The outlook is bright.

The Pearl and Bryan Streets church of Christ, Dallas, Texas, is supporting Brother A. O. Colley, their minister, in a mission meeting at Lisbon, Texas. At one time there was a congregation at this place, but it has been depleted by removals, death, and some local troubles. The outlook is bright, and there will be a congregation at that place at the close of the present series of meetings by Brother Colley. Brethren Massey and Walker, of the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church, will assist this new congregation.

The Gospel Advocate and the Gospel of Christ.

BY H. J. STAFFORD.

It is my purpose here to say some things in respect to the Gospel Advocate, which I consider the greatest power for good in our Southland. save, of course, the holy Bible. I subscribed for the Advocate on February 1, 1916. Since that date I remember missing but one issue. I have the most of this time read the paper from cover to cover, and the help it has been to me I have no power to describe. I have never considered the paper perfect in every respect, nor do I expect it to ever reach that state (since we have no perfect men, we could hardly expect a perfect paper); but the principles the Advocate stands for, the teachings set forth in every issue, the boldness with which it exalts righteousness and condemns error, should make it desirable to every true Christian. Besides the brave and courageous stand it takes for truth and sound doctrine, it is through its departments that thousands have become acquainted, and it has done much to bring us closer together in real Christian love and tender affection. We are often made to rejoice with them that rejoice and weep with them that weep. Many a sad heart has been comforted and many a soul exhorted and encouraged to fight onward and upward to the goal. Many prayers, no doubt, have ascended from earth to the courts of glory, and the effects have been enjoyed across the continent or even in far-off Japan.

I fear we do not appreciate the Gospel Advocate as we should. Were it not for its weekly visits, perhaps I never would have heard of such men as J. C. McQuiddy, E. A. Elam, David Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, L. S. White, C. R. Nichol, A. B. Lipscomb, S. H. Hall, M. C. Kurfees, W. S. Long, James E. Laird, J. D. Tant, Tice Elkins, E. C. Fuqua, and many, many others, scores of them, whom I have never seen in the flesh; yet the help that such brethren have been to not only me, but thousands of others, eternity alone can tell. I have often thought that one discourse by F. W. Smith, or many other such men, was worth many times the price of this journal. I am sure that many preachers are in the field to-day through the influence of this paper; also, that many mission points have been visited and many houses of worship erected. I seriously doubt that our capital city would have had a house to-day had it not been for the cooperation of the Advocate with Brother Long. Besides all these advantages, we learn so much of the conditions of the Lord's work all over the land, from coast to coast and from Canada to Mexico. We read much that makes us sad, but we also get much encouragement and are often shown our duty when brought face to face with the circumstances existing in many destitute places.

I believe the Advocate should double its subscription list every year, and that would be an easy matter if each of us would do his part. Here is the plan: Let each one of us resolve that we will secure one new subscriber to the paper. If you are making plenty of money and do not care to talk this to others, just send the price of the paper to the publishers and have the paper sent to some good sectarian Who knows but what you would save a soul, make angels rejoice, and win a crown? Now, brethren, there is no telling the good we may do if all will do this. So I shall start this plan by my pledge, and pray that all who read this may join me.

I am young in the cause. I was baptized a few summers ago by Brother A. O. Colley, and, coming from a sectarian faith, I could appreciate from the beginning the glorious truth as I learned it. It has been by earnest desire from the time of my conversion to preach the gospel; but having a family to support, and many other cares, I have been kept back from making the attempt. As I have not had the opportunity to prepare myself, several times I have abandoned the idea, as it seemed that I would never be able to make preparation; but I am now determined, by God's help, to preach the gospel. When I read and hear of the crying need of the gospel in so many places, the dearth of preachers, and the sleeping state of the church in so many places, I cannot refuse to go. It is my desire to go in a humble spirit to the destitute fields. Here is where I believe real Christianity manifests itself with that faith that works by love. I think we should all try to get more young men to preach the gospel. I think it the greatest calling in the world, and also the most needed one. I have two small boys, and I have taught them almost since they could talk that I wish them to make preachers. both promise me they will. May God permit me to see them both rooted, grounded, and settled in the faith and preaching the gospel. If I were asked by any young man who is a Christian what to choose for a life work, I would surely tell him to preach the gospel; and had I the opportunity that that many have, I would be the happiest soul this side of heaven, and would enter one of our Christian colleges at the next opening to make preparations for the work. May I have your prayers that this may be my privilege?

More or less has been written to the religious press and published relative to the Lord's work here. Also, not a few appeals have been made for financial help through the same medium and otherwise; but not much has been heard from the elders or overseers recently, which is manifestly a mistake from the New Testament point of view. We, therefore, feel it due the Lord's people at large that we be heard from.

The appeals that have been made for financial assistance have, in the main, been responded to generously; and had that not been the case, we could not have progressed as we have, for brethren and sisters have made it possible for us to be meeting in a house adapted to the needs of the work here and which seemed almost imperative. It was the intention of the church primarily to build, and we even went so far as to purchase a lot, but later found that it would be more economical to buy the building we now occupy; and while the price may seem to one not familiar with conditions here to be exorbitant, we are reliably informed it could be sold for a profit.

We could have got along with a cheaper building, yet we believe if you could see the location and surroundings that you would conclude that no mistake had been made from the standpoint of a meeting place. The price paid was forty thousand dollars, and we now owe approximately seventeen thousand dollars. We still own the vacant lot, which we are trying to dispose of; and if we could get what it cost us, the indebtedness would be approximately twelve thousand dollars.

The congregation here numbers about one hundred and twenty-five, the greater part of them working for the Government at moderate salaries, and but very few own their homes; however, they support the work quite liberally.

We are quite anxious to do some mission work in and around the city, but are not financially able to do so, and will not be for some time unless we get considerable help, as you can readily see from above. We deeply appreciate the contributions made to this work, together with the confidence imposed in us as God's stewards, and acknowledge our responsibility to him in this particular.

We regret to feel constrained to make this appeal, if we should call it an appeal, and sincerely hope it will not be necessary again. We feel that you will act in this matter as you think God would have you act.

In conclusion, permit us to say that it is and shall be our intention to keep the work and worship here free from speculation and tendencies to depart from the New Testament, adding this that you may know what you would be supporting.

Please send all contributions to E. L. Mills, treasurer, Box 204, Washington, D. C.

FIELD REPORTS

Columbus, Miss., August 30.—Brother David O. Griffith, of Cleveland, Miss., did some good preaching for us, beginning on Wednesday night. August 24, and continuing each night until Sunday night. The congregation was strengthened. The work here is moving along nicely.—J. W. Howell.

Lawrenceburg, Tenn., August 30.—Our meeting at Hebron, near Joppa, Ala., closed on Saturday. The Lord blessed our humble efforts by adding twenty-eight to the church. This is the home of Brother B. F. Moody, preacher, school-teacher, and farmer. I am now at Macedonia in a meeting.—T. C. King.

Columbia, Tenn., Route 9, August 29.—Our meeting began at Berea, in Maury County, on August 14, and closed on the following Friday night. We had rain the first part of our meeting and missed one service on that account. No additions. We had good crowds the last days of the meeting. It was a good meeting. Brother W. S. Morton did the preaching.—T. P. Hardison.

Newport, Ark., August 29.—I closed a meeting at Balch, Ark., last night. We had much opposition, but we succeeded in baptizing nine and reclaiming six. I go to Batesville from here to begin my last meeting for this year. After that I will return to Henderson, Tenn., to attend my third term of school in the Freed-Hardeman College. I have had several calls for meetings this year that I could not fill.—L. R. Wilson.

Tuliahoma, Tenn., August 31.—The meeting at Hoover's Grove closed yesterday evening, after running ten days. Nine people yielded obedience to the gospel and the little church seemed to be greatly strengthened and encouraged for greater work. I am now on my way home for two or three days' rest, of which I am greatly in need, in order to be ready for my meeting at Verona, near Lewisburg, beginning next Lord' day.—George W. Farmer.

Dancy, Miss., August 29.—Since last report I have held two meetings—one in Benton County, with four baptisms, and one in Tippah County, with four baptized. I am now in a meeting in Tate County, preaching under a brush arbor in a shady grove. The attendance and attention are fine. I will be here for a week or ten days more, and will then go to Whiteapple, in South Mississippi, to begin a meeting on the second Lord's day in September.—A. H. Smith.

Nashville, Tenn., August 30.—My meeting with the Zion brethren, in Jackson County, Tenn., continued eleven days and resulted in two baptisms. Then my meeting with the Liberty congregation, in Jackson County, continued one week, with two baptisms. At present I am in a meeting with the Coldwater congregation, near Woodbury, Cannon County. We are having a fine hearing, and hope that much good may be done in the name of the Master.—George W. Graves.

Texarkana, Ark., August 29.—I closed at Atlanta yesterday morning.

Four baptisms and six additions otherwise marked the beginning of a congregation free of innovations. I preached at Eylau, near Texarkana, yesterday evening, and had five baptisms, closing the day's work by preaching to a large and appreciative audience at the local Central congregation. All future communications should be addressed to me at Sinton, Texas, where I shall labor through the winter months.—J. E. Wainwright.

Shelbyville, Ky., August 26.—Our meeting at Cuba, near Mayfield, Ky., closed on Wednesday night, with twenty-eight additions—eighteen baptized, one from the Baptists, six taking membership, and three restored. Brother John B. Hardeman preaches for the church at Cuba and is principal of the high school there. During the meeting we were blessed with the services of Brother A. J. Veteto, who led the songs. Brother I. A. Douthitt and Brother Coleman Overby assisted us much in prayers and works of encouragement.—R. A. Craig.

Boaz, Ky., August 30.—Beginning on the third Lord's day in August, I began a six-days' meeting at Christian Chapel, seven miles from Huntingdon, Tenn., with splendid interest and large crowds from time to time. Seven made the noble confession and rendered further obedience unto their Master in baptism. While these brethren were in a lukewarm condition, they have decided to keep house for the Lord. I will labor with them in another meeting in 1922, the Lord willing. I go next to Holladay, Tenn., for my next meeting.—W. Wilford Heffin.

Nashville, Tenn., August 30.—I closed an eight-days' meeting at Chapel Hill, in Marshall County, Sunday night. It was a good meeting. Ten were baptized. I have been preaching for this congregation monthly for a while and will continue to do so after I finish my meetings. If other congregations would like, they can secure my services monthly after the first Sunday in October. Write me at 1603 Russell Street, Nashville, Tenn. I will begin a meeting with my old home congregation in Jackson County, Tenn., next Sunday.—T. C. Fox.

Ackerman, Miss., August 29.—I am in a good meeting at Deen Schoolhouse, near Cleveland. Large crowds; not more than half of the people could get in the house last night. Why is it that we have not more preachers in the Delta? This is the best country I ever saw. This land makes a bale of cotton or fifty bushels of corn per acre. It sells for from one to two hundred dollars an acre. Will not some congregation get a plain preacher to come to this field and stand by him till the work is established? Brethren, why send missionaries to the foreign fields and let these good people starve for the gospel? I will be here until next Monday, then I go to Holly Ridge.—H. D. Jeffcoat.

Union, S. C., August 29.—Our new meeting began last night with a fine audience and seems to give promise of seed sowing, if not reaping. Our audience was almost altogether new and the tent was full. We, of course, expect this on Sunday nights, but are hoping that not only on Sunday, but on Monday, too, we may witness nice audiences. Pray for this meeting. This week also brought us the British passports for which we have waited for twelve months and more, and now we are privileged to go to Africa. There is yet one hindrance to our freedom, and we will not go until the Lord opens the way, and we are submitting to his will, waiting for him to guide. Should we go, then the call for a worker here will be much more urgent. The work is great.-G. F.

Tuscumbia, Ala., August 30.—I have just closed a splendid meeting at Alamo, with eighty-five additions, 1 was back at home on August 28, with two fine services and three baptisms.

I am to begin a meeting to-night at Salem Springs, Tenn.—H. M. Phillips. Model, Tenn., August 29.—During the week following the third Lord's day in August I visited and preached four sermons for the Liberty congregation, in Henry County, Tenn. One lady from the Primitive Baptists was baptized into Christ. I am now in an interesting meeting with the Azotas congregation, in Stewart County. One restoration to date.-David Thompson.

Berlin, Ga., August 29.-Our meeting which began in the Missionary Baptist house here on August 11 closed last night. The attendance and interest were good throughout. Brother Claus did some fine preaching, and all who heard spoke well of it. of the Baptists said it was the best they had ever heard in their house. We feel that much good was accomplished during this meeting and that the seed sown will bring forth a bountiful harvest. The visible results were ten additions-five by baptism, four from the Baptists, and one restored. Two other brethren whom we had not known before expressed a desire to worship with us. The little congregation we have here, including those who meet at Troy Schoolhouse, near here, makes twenty members. We are planning to build a church house as soon as we can purchase a lot.-Adair P. Chapman.

Sedalia, Mo., August 24.-The few disciples here, augmented by the ones who have been brought into the work during a little more than two months' hard efforts under the tent and in the little mission house, are looking for a hall or other kind of place in a more central part of the city in which to meet upon the first day of the week. Houses that are rentable are very few. Halls that are procurable are not very desirable. If we were able in a financial way, we would buy a small cottage in the proper place and use it. The tent top which we used this summer has about run Its race, and very likely we shall have to buy another; if we do, the cost will be considerable. We bought forty-eight chairs on the easy-payment style. When Brother Lanier was ready to leave, not having enough money, we borrowed more. This burden is a bit heavy on me, but I believe God will bless if I push on. -S. W. Bell.

Holladay, Tenn., August 29.—The meeting at Baldwyn, Miss., closed on Wednesday night, having continued eleven days. The interest was good, six were baptized, and several signified their desire to be known as members of the Baldwyn church and labor with them in the Master's name. der the efficient leadership of Dr. W.

I am now in a meeting at Holladay, which starts off with large crowds and fine interest. I have one more meeting, at Thyatira, Miss., before the opening of school on September 27. After that I shall be glad to labor on Sundays with churches in reach of Nashville. My address will be David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn,-W. H. Owen.

Echoes From East Tennessee.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

Brother Vernon Rozar, one of East Tennessee's evangelists, held a meeting the latter part of July and first of August at Mount Bethel, in Bradley County. He reports a good meeting. This is one of our old, dead places, where we once had a good congregation. We hope to revive the work there. Brother Rozar is now at Commerce, near Watertown. When done there, he will go back to the East Tennessee section for more work, some of which will be in Blount County.

Brother Will J. Cullum will begin a tent meeting at Rockwood, in Roane County, on the fourth Lord's day in August. This will make the ninth meeting held in this division of the State above Chattanooga since spring. There are several other meetings to come this fall and winter.

Brethren and sisters, we need financial assistance in this work, and we need it at once for the Rockwood meeting. Take notice, and send contributions to me at Cleveland, Tenn., at once. I have been working hard and have made great sacrifices for the work in this section, and shall continue to do so; but all the sacrifices that I am able to make will not supply our immediate needs. Brethren, remember us with a contribution at your earliest convenience.

Tribute to John W. Burcham.

BY JOHN T. GLENN.

I want to pay a belated tribute to the memory of Brother John W. Burcham, who passed from this life on February 28, 1919. I knew him for a number of years, but perhaps best through his children, with whom I had the pleasure of years of intimate association.

First of all, Brother Burcham impressed me as a big man. He was big in body, big in soul and character. 1 would not imply that he was a man without fault, but his were faults that appeared greatest to those who misunderstood or misjudged him. Toward the stubborn he was stubborn, maybe overmuch so; toward the proud and those who held themselves "better than the 'common people'" he was unbending in his pride; but toward the man who met him in fairness and frankness and toward his God he had the simplicity and directness of a little child. The weak and the poor had always his sympathy and his help. He was scrupulously honest and took advantage of no man, but with the poor and the weak he went beyond what was required. To these he gave heaping measure, and for less than its value, and to these he paid wages greater than they had a right to ex-now I have a nice strong healthy baby girl. I can honestly say that I did not suffer much more when my baby was born than I used to suffer with my periods before I took Lydia E. How can women who are weak and sickly expect or hope to become mothers of healthy children? Their first duty is to themselves. They should overcome the derangement or debility that is dragging them down, and strengthen the entire system, as did Mrs. Janssen, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and then they will be in a position to give their children the blessing of a good constitution.

pect. He was a man who thought much and spoke little—a man of strong feeling and deep convictions. But his courage was as great as his convictions were deep, and he was unwavering in his loyalty to them. The same loyalty he always showed to God and his word and to his friends. No man was ever more devoted to his family, and he was intensely interested in everything that concerned them. Upon his children he left the ineffaceable stamp of his influence and character, and in them he lives and will live—for good.

Brother Burcham was a few months past sixty-one years of age when he died, and had been a member of the church for about twenty-five years. His mother, by whom he was reared, was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, but he was never a member of any church until he was added to the church of Christ.

Denver (Col.) Notes.

BY JOHN D. EVANS.

Last Lord's day was a red-letter day in the religious history of Boulder, Col. It was "opening day" in our own new house. Three car loads (auto) went over from Denver, besides several on the interurban. Brother Fuqua and others were there from Fort Collins. The following preachers were present: E. C. Fuqua, Bruce Mc-Collum, James H. Bailey, O. N. Hilton, J. C. Estes, and John D. Evans. Brother Fugua delivered the morning discourse. In the afternoon the writer spoke, followed by J. C. Estes, James H. Bailey, and Bruce McCollum. An important feature was the "dinner on the ground," which was plentiful and These brethren were appetizing. greatly encouraged and enthused over their new home and the future prospects of the work. Brother Bailey has been associated with the work there more than a dozen years. He delivers mail each day and preaches between times. Remember, brethren, this is a small congregation, and they will need some help in taking care of a loan which they had to have to finish the building. If just a few congregations will send a small monthly contribution, it will enable them to take care of the obligation easily. You may send it either to James H. Bailey or O. E. Spencer, Boulder, Col., or to the writer at Denver.

Colorado now has two new buildings, completed this year. We are all thankful.

Lemalsamae Church of Christ.

BY JOHN E. M'CORKLE,

Being one of the oldest members of Lemalsamac church of Christ now living, having been a member for sixty-two years, I have concluded to write a laconic history of the organization of the church for the information of the younger members.

Lemalsamae church of Christ was organized in 1847, in Wood's Schoolhouse, one quarter of a mile north of where Churchton now is, by Green Hill, of Concord Church, of Gibson County, Tenn., three miles west of where Milan is, with the following names as charter members: Jehiel McCorkle and wife, Elizabeth McCorkle; R. A. H. McCorkle and wife, Tirzah, and daughter, Sarah E. McCorkle; Jane McCorkle, Margaret Dickey, Lemuel Scott, and J. T. Algea.

J. M. McCorkle was chosen elder; R. A. H. McCorkle, clerk, or deacon.

They met in the schoolhouse for preaching and worship for about nine years. In 1856 they decided to build a church house, and Margaret Dickey deeded them three and one-half acres of land upon which the church house was built in 1856-7. In 1856 the church employed Joe Gray Moore and Jonathan Hall to build the church house. They hewed the sills, sleepers, and corner posts and dressed all of the lumber by hand.

In the fall of 1917 the old house was torn down and the new building begun, Lester Bone and his father, James Bone, being the contractors. The house was completed and lights put in at a cost of about twenty-five hundred dollars. The name, "Lemalsamac," was manufactured by R. A. H. McCorkle out of the names of the nine charter members—viz.: "Lemuel," "Algea," "Sarah," and "McCorkle."

The twelfth day of March, 1918, was set apart as a day of thanksgiving for the blessings we have enjoyed.

Vacation Is Over.

Again the school bell rings at morning and at noon; again with tens of thousands the hardest kind of work has begun, the renewal of which is a mental and physical strain to all except the most rugged.

The little girl that a short time ago had roses in her cheeks and the little boy whose lips were then so red you would have insisted that they had been "kissed by strawberries" have already lost something of the appearance of health.

Now is a time when many children should be given a tonic, which may prevent much serious trouble. No other is so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla, which strengthens the nerves, perfects digestion and assimilation. It aids mental development by building up the whole system.

Equally good as a medicinal preparation are Hood's Pills, which are so well adapted for both children and adults. In small doses they are a gentle laxative, in larger doses an active cathartic.

Sunbeams.

BY J. A. PERRY.

I have before me the Gospel Advocate of August 25, and to say I am delighted with it is to put it mildly.

The poem, "If You Were Busy," on the first page, is fine. I would say to any young brother: Commit it to memory, think of it often, and let it have an influence in your life as you are following the Master.

"Current Thought," on page two, is excellent and worthy of a careful reading. Get down your paper, my brother, and read it again. Then that nice little poem, "A Trustful Heart," on the same page, should find a warm place in our hearts.

"At Home Again," by J. D. Tant, is apt and timely. It makes me think of a remark I made to a sister in Mississippi in 1885. I said: "When I look at the conditions of many congregations as I see them, and see their sleeping, do-nothing, dead condition, I believe that it would be a good thing if every preacher in our ranks would quit preaching to the world for the next five years and preach full time to the church and get the church awake and at work scripturally, and then devote their time to the world." She replied: "What! Let the world die and go to destruction for five years without preaching to save them?" I replied: "Which would be better-to let them travel the straight road to hell or to take them through a lifeless, sinful church, and in the day of judgment see them bound hand and foot with all the dead church members?" It seems to me it would be a better way to go to hell standing erect than to be bound hand and foot and cast there in the end. Yes, Brother Tant, get the church to see the great need of reflecting the light of Christ, and then we can reach the world.

Next I find Brother Bradley's article on "The Japanese Work." Read it again and again, brethren, and act upon it.

Brother Batsell Baxter's article on "The Increase of Skepticism" is indeed timely and should awaken thought on this important subject. When we pick up a Saturday evening Chicago daily paper and see the number of places in Chicago where spiritualists are having their meetings every Sunday and see that the church of Christ has only two places (Kendall Street and the new mission point just established in that city), it is time to awake.

Brother S. H. Hall has his page filled with splendid reading in regard to his rest trip from Los Angeles, Cal., to Texas. It is certainly good reading for a person who has been at hard work and needs restful thoughts, especially one who has some knowledge of most of the congregations and places of which Brother Hall writes.

Brother McQuiddy's editorial on "Reading the Bible" is simply fine, and, together with Brother Elam's article on "Handling the Word of God Deceitfully," is worth many times more than the price we have to pay for the Gospel Advocate for one month.

But time would fail me to tell how I appreciate the fine articles by F. W. Smith and Brother Larimore, also C. R. Nichol's "Texas-Oklahoma Department."

Then think of it! Over fifteen hundred additions reported to our congregations by obedience and restoration in this one issue of this noble paper!

Brethren, let us get busy and get one of our loyal papers into the home of every family of the church and get them to read, together with an increase in Bible reading, and then watch results.

Progress of the Work at Rome, Ga.

On May 29 Brother C. C. McCampbell began a tent meeting on the west side of Rome and closed it on June 19, with one addition; on June 26 he began another meeting in the Fourth Ward and closed it on July 10, with eleven additions-nine baptized into Christ and two from the Baptists; and on July 17 he began a meeting in the north part of Rome and closed it on August 7, with thirty-seven baptized into Christ, and since the meeting closed nine more have made the good confession and been buried with their Lord in baptism. Fourteen of this number came from the Baptists and seven from the Methodists. This makes a total of fiftyeight additions this summer.

A brother in Rome is going to give the church enough ten-ounce duck to make a tent fifty by seventy feet, and we have to raise one hundred dollars to have it built. Our old tent is a forty-foot tent, and it is too small. We can seat only two hundred and fifty people, while at our last meeting we had from four to five hundred every night; so we must raise the money to have it built. Any and all brethren who are interested in the work at Rome will kindly send us a small donation to help pay for the making of the tent. Any time brethren or sisters are in Rome, we would be very glad for them to come and worship with us. Our church building is located on North Fifth Avenue,

Mission Work in Honolulu.

On August 13 we moved into our new missionary house. We consider this to be one of the most important steps so far taken for the future advancement of the work here. It is the first permanent move. It will take us a number of years to pay for it, but with the help of God we will press courageously onward and upward. Our monthly payments will be fifty dollars. This is cheaper than rent. It is very hard to get houses here. We consider ourselves very much favored of God in being allowed to secure this house, both from the standpoint of the health of family and the easy access to the work. Brother Bowman's class in Moilili Schoolhouse is encouraging. Also our regular Lord's-day meetings are increasing in interest and the attendance is good. Midweek meetings are being held in the new home. Please do not look for big results yet. It will take time to sow the seed. We have tremendous odds to contend with, but with God's help we will fight hard to overcome them. Our support for August to date (23d) has been ten dollars, and this local. We pray for better things for the future along this line. Brethren, pray for the work yourselves, then help answer your prayer. Future prospects are good, and we look forward to greater things for God in the isles of the sea. Our address is Box 1174, care J. H. Bowman.

Contributors Plead For the Old Paths

Their Inspiration and Complacency .- E. C. Fuqua.

I am glad to know that the Gospel Advocate is going to print this "Old Paths" Number; for if there is any one thing seriously wanting in this progressive generation, it is a knowledge of the "old-paths" teaching of God's Book. Every new thing under the sun has perhaps been tried and found wanting, and men need to know that the only thing of value and permanence in the field of religion is "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." (Jude 3.) New faiths may come and they may go, but the old faith goes on forever. It loses none of its power to save on account of the span and ravages of time that have intervened since its original committal to "earthen vessels," nearly twenty centuries ago. It is still "the power of God unto salvation" to every true believer. Like all eternal things, it is not affected by time and changes; so that men to-day, who believe it as it reads in the Book of books, and who obey it as it was obeyed "beginning from Jerusalem," will enjoy to the uttermost every blessing it was originally designed to impart, here and hereafter.

"Thus saith Jehovah, Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way; and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." (Jer. 6: 16.)

Speaking of obeying God's commands, is there a command more binding than this? Has God anywhere offered to give "rest" to our souls apart from our strict conformity to the "old-paths" teaching? Can any other way be truthfully styled "the good way" without taking issue with Jehovah? Since he commands us to "walk therein," has he made any—even the least—provision to give us "rest" if we walk in any other way? Assuredly not. He who refuses to be guided by this pointed instruction and seeks to "climb up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." (John 10: L) This way is the only "strait" and "narrow" way, and is that alone which leadeth unto life. This is "the way which he dedicated for us, a new and living way." (Heb. 10: 20.) Most positively is there no life in any other way. Let all men take knowledge of this supreme fact.

Therefore we seek the wisdom in the loving Father's admonition to "ask for the old paths"—to never let up in our seeking until we know we have found the "old paths." Paul teaches this, in Rom. 2: 5-7; "God . . . will render . . . to them that by patience in well-doing seek for glory and honor and incorruption, eternal life." Patiently doing well implies caution and accuracy in ascertaining what "well-doing" means and involves in all things. In no other way can one truly "seek for "eternal life.

"To number or compare ourselves with certain of them that commend themselves" (2 Cor. 10: 12), and who measare themselves by themselves and compare themselves with themselves, is the veriest folly. Yet this is the great religious standard of this age; but it leads to death. "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death." (Prov. 14: 12.) It is death to any man who patterns his religion, in any matter, after a human standard. Even mother, brother, or neighbor is not to be so followed; but when asked by either to do this or that, we must first "ask for the old-paths" teaching on the subject broached. "Thus shall ye say every one to his neighbor, and every one to his brother, What hath Jehovah answered? and, What hath Jehovah spoken?" (Jer. 23: 35.) The entire Bible urges this as the only course that will lead to life. It is on every page. It is emphasized by every writer in the Bible, and all failures therein pictured to us were due to a neglect of this principle. To "walk by faith" (2 Cor. 5: 7) is the opposite of this neglect, because "belief cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ." (Rom. 10: 17.) Faith is formed by inspired statements only; and these, I understand, constitute the "old paths." Christ "became unto all them that obey him the author of eternal salvation." (Heb. 5; 9.) His teaching forms the "old paths" of Christianity. No new path (in which the religion of this generation abounds) is based upon Christ's teaching, but is a departure from him and an enemy to him, and leads to death.

To my mind, the "old paths" are never old, but always new and fresh and invigorating to the soul; and my experience has been that this is largely true of most men who hear the "old paths" preached. The old Jerusalem gospel has a sort of "ring" that appeals to all men of intelligence. They listen to its Spirit-inspired words as to one who "speaks with authority," and not as their paid teachers. We have all heard outside people remark, after hearing some "old-path" sermon: "That sounds different from anything I ever heard." To be sure it does; for God wrote the Bible, and God made the human soul, and there is an affinity that seems to draw each to the other as to a kindred spirit. Man seems familiarly struck with the idea that he is the "offspring" of God, as well as that the Bible is his product. "His Master's voice" is recognized in the words of the Bible.

A sectarian recently said to me: "When I get hungry for the gospel, I always go to your meetings; but when my spiritual appetite is weak, I find the services at my own church adequate to my needs." What a confession! And what a noble tribute to the Bible! My contention has long been that men love the Bible above the human doctrines forced down their spiritual throats. It is their teachers engaged in making merchandise of them that have come between them and God's word and relegated the latter to a place of insignificance in their religious life. Long have I noted with pleasure the "old flame" struggling in their hearts while they were listening to some "old-paths" subject, and often have I seen "Felix tremble" under that power.

There will always be a delightful fascination about the preaching of the "old paths." It has a natural appeal to men; and yet it calls them so much higher than the world or than any form of religious teaching so cheap and common to this generation. There is a certain wonderful dignity in standing behind the cross of Christ and calling men to it. There is also the feeling of absolute security, and that mental and spiritual complacency that is the great gyroscope in the movements of the "man of God" under all forms of opposition and in the face of every test. He who preaches the word knows no fear. His message is abundantly able to take care of itself under all tests; hence, he can court criticism, he can challenge opposition, he can "chase ten thousand" and feel himself immune from harm. "Who is he that will harm you, if ye be zealous of that which is good?" (1 Pet. 3: 13.)

But contrast with this the preacher of sectarianism. He lives in constant fear for his doctrines. That is why sectarians dote more highly on the personality of the man who preaches than upon the message preached by him. The former must eclipse the latter, so as to attract all attention from the latter and thus prevent studious investigation of the message. This is what the Bible styles "blindness" to the truth; it is the "veil" which separates millions of people from the light of truth divine. It is the foundation of all sectarianism; its one and only security against failure on earth even before the final destruction of spiritual Babylon.

But speaking of possible departures from the "old paths," is it not a fact that we have largely ceased to offer any considerable opposition to the encroachments of sectarianism? This "ism" is radically arrayed against every principle of the "old-paths" teaching; and how can we contend for the "old paths" without contending against everything that thwarts the way therein?

I became acquainted with the Gospel Advocate in the days when it was the fear and dread of every phase of sectarianism. No sectarian blunder appeared from either press or pulpit but that it was promptly challenged by the Advocate and the errorist given a firm, but kind, "dressing down" that made all sectarianism tremble. F. D. Srygley's "First Page" was a sort of "no-man's land," across which few dared to risk any part of their creed, and from which, if any did venture thereon, they were forced to retreat, "naked and wounded." Too little of that necessary work is being done to-day, and we simply cannot fully return to the "old paths" until we revive the hostility that should eternally exist between truth and error. Let our papers and pulpits once more ring out against every form of sectarianism, in and out of the true house of God; and if this does not increase the life and power and faith of the true disciples of Christ, my humble judgment is seriously at fault. Why not again consecrate the first page of the Advocate to the work of sweeping with the gospel guns the entire religious horizon, thus helping to clear the field of the soul-destroying doctrines and precepts of men? This step in the return to the "old paths" will prove its effectualness in a short while, and the cause of truth will grow and spread and triumph; for God will be with us, will go before us, to cause the fear and dread of us to once more till the earth, as in days gone by. For it cannot be denled that this is embraced in our mission on the earth.

An Old Testament Text Explained .- F. W. Smith.

"Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein." (Jer. 6: 16.)

"Old paths" implies "new paths," and God, through the prophet, is here exhorting and pleading with Israel, his people, to abandon the "new paths" wherein they were walking and to return to the paths in which he started them and in the way which God was walking. The name of the "new paths" in religion is legion, for there are almost as many as the wisdom and inventions of men can devise. The vast majority of religionists have each a path of his own, made to order, and all who do not travel in his path is on the road to the bad place. But it shall not be my purpose to attempt a description of all these paths nor to point out what I may consider their defects, but rather to give a brief analysis of the text before us and draw a few practical lessons from it.

ASK FOR THE "OLD PATHS."

1. What were the "old paths" here mentioned? Simply this: The system of worship and service which God, through Moses, had enacted and given to the people he had delivered from Egyptian bondage, with this solemn injunction: "Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish aught from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you." (Deut. 4: 2.) To have deviated from this law in any particular would have been to enter new paths of their own invention, and this they did, wandering far away from God. When Christ came into the world, he found the law of God literally smothered with the doctrines and traditions of men. (Matt. 15: 9; Mark 7: 6-13.) If he were to come to-day, he would find a still worse situation with multiplied thousands who claim to be his followers, for his gospel is woefully perverted and his church shamefully corrupted.

2. What are the "old paths" to us? That religious doctrine and life that runs through all of the fog and mists of centuries without mingling and dissipating itself among the theories, speculations, and doctrines of men; that path that leads in a straight course to Jerusalem, where the gospel in all of its fullness and purity was first proclaimed. Why not simply go back to "the fathers?" Whose fathers, and what kind of fathers? To Campbell and his colaborers? That kind of a path may suit some, but no one who is seriously looking for the "old paths" of God's book will ever stop with what are termed "the fathers," but will seek out Peter, Paul, and all the inspired men of New Testament times.

THE GOOD WAY.

1. The wise man has said: "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." (Prov. 14: 12.) Man, usaided by the hand of God, has never been able to successfully direct his course in this world. Adam and Eve tried the experiment in Eden, and made a most dismal failure—a failure that wrecked a world; and their experience has been the same with every nation, family, and individual from that day to this who has tried to walk without God. "O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." (Jer. 10: 23.)

2. What, then, is the "good way?" Why, God's way—the "old paths," hewn out, blazed out, and marked out through this wilderness of a world by the infinite wisdom of the Almighty.

3. Why is it the "good way?" Because man finds nothing in it in this life that is not for his good; because it sanctifies, regulates, and adjusts every relation of life and finally closes out at the beautiful gates of paradise, flung wide open to all who travel therein.

"YE SHALL FIND REST."

1. "Rest" is one of the sweetest words in our language. The weary toiler on the farm, in the shop, or behind the counter graciously welcomes the hour when he can lay himself down to rest and enjoy the invigorating sleep demanded by the tired and worn body.

2. Just so with the weary toilers in the kingdom and service of the Lord Jesus Christ. While there is soul rest for them in this life, still not until they lay themselves down in the night of death and are folded in the arms of Jesus—"asleep in Jesus, peaceful rest"—do they come to that Sabbath rest which remains for the people of God. (Heb. 4: 9.)

3. This is the promise of Jesus, who walks among the churches and with every individual who travels in the strait and narrow way: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." (Matt. 11: 28.) Were ever sweeter words spoken? Do we not all long for that rest? If so, we must, in order to enjoy it, walk in the "old paths."

A WILLFUL REFUSAL.

1. At the gracious and loving admonition from a Heavenly Father, a sinful and rebellious nation flaunted in the face of their God these words: "We will not walk therein." There it is in clear and unmistakable language—a positive and willful refusal to walk with God.

2. Let us all ask ourselves the question: Is it I? Do I in any way refuse to walk in the path God has called me? Am I negligently refusing, if not willfully, to do it? Can we sing in truth: "I will follow whithersoever God may lead?"

"Return Ye."-W. H. Carter.

"Return ye unto the Lord." Who should return? All who have in them "an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God;" all who make void the wisdom of God by adopting the wisdom of men; all who have dared to insert their notions and opinions in the place of God's word—the gospel of the Lord Jesus; all who have in any way softened, smoothed over, covered up, or set aside the commands of God on any point; all who have in any way allowed themselves to be deceived, misguided, and led off by the cunning craftiness and sleight of men; all who have allowed the god of this world to blind their eyes with gold, or silver, or jewelry, or costly array, the crazy swirl of the dance, or the dizzy whirl of the auto.

Is a return to the old paths needed? If so, by whom? Evidently by those who have departed therefrom. But who has departed, and in what respect or in what things have they departed? Now, this is a field of exceeding length and breadth, and in the allotted space we cannot go very far—only touch on a few of the major points.

It was hard for the prophets of the olden time to get Israel to see and acknowledge their departures and to return to the Lord. Human nature is the same to-day. It seems to be an easy thing for man, when he sets out to please himself or the people, to conclude and say: "I have performed the commandment of the Lord." It is so easy to drop a little out or add a little to and then ask: "Who keeps all the commandments, anyhow?" To such that question is easily and satisfactorily settled, and the conclusion is: "No one does; and, therefore, God will not condemn me if I fail to keep some of his commands." But Saul was condemned, so was Nadab and Abihu; and James says to us: "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." Climb for a little while upon the mountain peak of God's eternal truth and "view the landscape o'er;" look down upon the restless, whirling, seething mass of humanity; see the crime, immorality, profanity, irreverence, infidelity, selfishness, greed, disloyalty, hypocrisy, and downright disregard for justice, love, mercy, truth, and honor, and your heart will grow sick and you will see that some one needs to return to the old paths-to the good old way. While you are looking down upon the scene, take a view of the church house. It is the Lord's day. But few are in them. "Where are the nine?" You see those automobiles running in all directions? They are church mem-They are hunting a good time. They are all headed toward that awful lake of fire. Satan has told them: "There is time enough yet." But you notice they are going faster and faster. Dark is coming on. Many shameful things will take place. You see that home yonder? It was once lovely and happy. But now shame and disgrace hangs over it and fills it. Our Lord once lived with them and blessed them. They quit going with him to the assembly of the saints. It took so much money to pay the pleasure bills that they could not spare any to the church. Well, we must drop the curtain; the scene is too terrible to look upon.

What is the trouble? The people have departed from the faith, from the "old paths"—the "strait and narrow way." There is too great a lack of reverence. God is being ruled out of everything, and the people are trying to live without God. They imagine themselves in a new age, a new era, under new conditions, to have outlived the Bible and its laws, and have become a law unto themselves. They have forgotten that God has said: "He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool," for "it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." No people or nations have ever tried to get along without God that did not go to the bad.

The "old paths" are the best, because they are the only safe paths. "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death," says Solomon. And again he says: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he will direct thy paths." Jesus said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." I do not mean that we should get into the "paths our fathers trod" just because they walked in them, but into the path of faith in God and in Christ and in obedience to his word. Our fathers walked in many different paths. We are taught of God to honor our parents, but in religion we must honor God. Him only are we to serve; and, remember, to serve God is to do his will, obey his commands, and leave off all that he has not told us to do.

Now, when we look over the field and take in the situation, we behold much division and strife where there should be love, peace, and union. Some one has departed, some one has strayed off from the "old paths"—the "good old way;" and, as a matter of course, they are the ones to return. Over forty years ago I started out on the way of ministerial life, and all was peace and love among the brethren except on one thing, and that was in regard to the eldership. Some otherwise good brethren had sowed some seed of discord and confusion, which has borne a crop that is anything but good, and is still doing its evil work. "Thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?" Thou that condemnest another for having departed, hast thou departed? Thou that exhortest another to return, hast thou returned? Are we pharisaically trying to bind burdens on others that we will not carry ourselves? "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." Can we not get "mighty" busy "sweeping in front of our own doors?" Well, to urge this lesson is what we understand the purpose of this issue to be. Who will be a faithful and wise servant?

The Old Paths .- James E. Scobey.

"The old paths!" What is meant by that expression? It suggests the thought of new paths. Now, it is a patent fact that, educationally, civilly, politically, and materially, the world is not moving forward in the paths of centuries ago. There have been vast changes in governments, arts, science, and literature.

In discoveries and inventions the world in the last century has made wonderful progress and has marked out new paths in which man may more successfully pursue the needs of life, and with greatly less labor obtain them, and, with the same effort, in greater abundance. Who now would think of going back to the bull-tongue or the bar-share plow, with its wooden moldboard, to which he would hitch one horse or a yoke of oxen to prepare his land for seeding? With the new mechanical appliances in all farming operations, who wants to beat out his grain with a flail or tread it out with his horses? What boy would now think it necessary for him to gather pine knots or cedar splinters, piling them near the jams of the fireplace ready to be placed in the fire to make light for him to see that he might study his lessons for the morrow, when he can turn a button or light a good coal-oil lamp and flood the room with light? Men used to walk much; then they rode horseback, and then in buggies or carriages. Now they ride on railway trains, in automobiles, and in aeroplanes. Years ago, if one had business with any one in his own town or city, or with one at a distance, he must either go and see him or write a letter. Now he may step to the telephone and in a few minutes accomplish that which in the old way might have taken days. What woman now wants a wide fireplace in the kitchen with a hot fire, plenty of live coals, pots, ovens, skillets, etc., when she can have and use a cook stove or range? Indeed, there is nothing man would accomplish that is necessary to his health, comfort, and well-being, that requires labor and exertion upon his part, but what some genius has invented a method, means, or a machine to lighten the labor or make it more efficient. There are machines that give the results of the mental operations of addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division.

Now, all these discoveries and inventions to which I have referred, and many more to which I might call attention, are new ways in comparison to the ways in which our ferbears walked or did things. Every change man makes in the course of his life is a new way, whether it be for the better or the worse, or whether it be right or wrong. No man at the present time desires to go back and walk in the paths of the past, or the "old paths," so far as his material interests are concerned. He still wants new ways and better ways, and he is eagerly engaged in searching them out.

A path means a way, as well as many other ideas that can be represented by it; as we may say, "The path of the comet crossed the path of the earth in its orbit."

The course of conduct which God had marked out for the Jews to follow in their relations to God and each other was the true path of Hfe, and it had been first given to them. If, therefore, they did not observe God's laws, and walked in rebellion to God, they were walking in new paths, though these paths were ways of wickedness, and not the paths of peace. Because of the wickedness of Israel, the Lord, through Jeremiah, the prophet, said: "Hear, O earth: behold. I will bring evil upon this people, even the fruit of their thoughts, because they have not hearkened unto my words, nor to my law, but rejected it." (Jer. 6: 19.) These Jews were not walking in the "old paths" they first started to walk in, and the prophet said: "Thus saith the Lord. Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find west for your souls." (Verse 16.)

Jesus, our great Prophet, said: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest to your souls." (Matt. 11: 28, 29.) There is no rest nor peace to our souls unless we learn of Jesus; unless we take his yoke, which is his government. "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spoke in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son," (Heb. 1: 1.) Him shall we hear, because God through him bath made known to us all things that pertain to life and godliness. His message to the world was the new pathway of life in comparison to that given by Moses. It is the new covenant and not the old. In no manner can it be regarded as old, except in comparison with the newfangled theories of men propagated by the wiseacres and theological leaders of modern times.

I remember years ago reading a periodical edited by Brother Allen, of Kentucky, called "The Old Path Guide." The purpose of the editor was to check, if possible, the movement of the brethren, or some of them at least, to lead the church into the adoption of instrumental music in the worship and formation of societies to do the work of the church in spreading the gospel over the world.

The misfortune, religiously, of our time is that men have grown wise, in their own estimation, above "that which is written." And we may say to them, as the prophet said of the scribes of his day who rejected the word of the Lord: "How do we say, We are wise, and the law of the Lord is with us?" (Jer. 8: 8.) And wisdom is in them, if that which they teach is not what Jesus and his apostles taught, both as to what was essential to an entrance into the kingdom and the church, as well as that which is necessary and clearly taught to be done in the work and worship of the church.

It may be possible that some have the idea of Rome, that they may with impunity change, modify, or add to the ordinances of the church as originally observed in apostolic days. Of course, they say we have made great progress in all material things, and are making progress in our religious efforts under and by the new methods and things we have adopted. And why not make all the progress we can by any reasonable means?

In material things man must learn God's way by experience and observation. All the great discoveries man has made and the wonderful inventions he has sought out have brought man more and more into harmony with God's thoughts in the material world and to a higher knowledge of natural laws. Man, as it were, in nature, starts at zero and ascends the scale, and goes higher and higher as he learns more and more of nature and its laws; but in the spiritual world he has a perfect revelation, given in the words of God, which he can comprehend, and which teaches him all he may ever hope to know while he lives. There are no experiments he may make that will afford spiritual light.

Let all who have made void God's word and God's way by substituting their own words and ways come back to the new covenant and walk with God as Enoch of old did, that God may be glorified and they be saved.

Jesus Christ gave the great commission to his apostles, which stated the terms of reconciliation as a means of salvation; but some professed preachers of the gospel do not tell persons to do that which Jesus told the apostles to tell them to do. Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." But we are told that to be baptized is nonessential; and, as proof that belief is the only essential, they call Paul to the witness stand and make him contradict the Savior by leaving out a part of his deposition with regard to the conversion of the jailer at Philippi, quoting only the first thing he said: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house," (Acts 16: 31.) "That," said a preacher recently, "is a full, explicit answer to the question, 'What shall I do to be saved?'" If so, then Paul and Jesus do not agree. But it is not so The Word says that Paul preached unto him and to all present Jesus, and to preach Jesus is to preach the gospel; and in consequence of the preaching Paul haptized the jailer and all his, straightway. So the jailer was saved according to the terms of the commission. He believed and was baptized.

Notes From Atlanta, Ga.

BY B. C. GOODPASTURE.

J. J. Reynolds is in the midst of a good meeting in Griffin.
E. H. Hoover is doing some fine preaching in the meeting at South Pryor Street, this city.

B. C. Goodpasture closed a meeting at East Point recently. One was baptized.

While traveling in the interest of the Dasher (Ga.) Bible School, Earl C. Smith recently preached at Lyerly, Rockmart, Rome, and Trion, Ga. One was restored at Rome.

L. H. Reamish is in the second week of a tent meeting near Summerville. Four have been baptized to date.

C. C. McCampbell baptized two at Rome last Sunday (September 4).

The friends and patrons of Dasher Bible School are urgently requested to be present for the opening on October 4.

There was one confession at West End Avenue last Sunday.

Ben Jonson said: "Some people will see more in a short stage coach ride than others will in a trip around the globe. We need the seeing eye." A poet has put it thus:

"Two men looked out from prison bars. One saw mud; the other, stars."

An old lady, says Tennyson Smith, was having a ride in a train for the first time. She was afterwards asked: "What did you see?" "See!" she replied; "I saw nothing at all but a haystack, and that was going the wrong way."

Not in Man to Direct His Steps .- C. D. Crouch.

"The old paths" marked out in the Scriptures for man has been selected as a theme for this number of the Gospel Advocate, and consequently the subject is as broad as God's will to man. "It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps," said the prophet; and God, in infinite love, has given us directions-has pointed out the way of life, after making it possible to forgive sin, through the death of Christ. The "old paths," then, have their origin in divine wisdom, infinite love, and the vicarious suffering of Christ. A departure from the same is a departure from God. Man may not always realize the full import of his acts, and it seems that such has ever been the case in the departures from God. If departures were not so gradual that those departing from God were not unconscious of it, it would be simply a matter of high-handed presumption; but nearly always the departure is so slow and gradual that it is next to impossible to tell where the actual departure took place. Frequently it is impossible to determine that point. This is seen in the recent discussion we have had by some of our ablest preachers of the questions, "When does a church cease to be a church of Christ?" and, "When does a child of God become so involved in error that God rejects him?"

It would be far better, however, for every child of God and every church of God to strive hard to get as far away from that state or condition as possible; then we would not be in danger.

The fact that man departs from God slowly and by degrees makes it all the more difficult to convince him of the fact that he has departed, and consequently the task of persuading him to return to the "old paths" is made the harder. The very first task that must be performed in the conversion of the sinner (either alien or erring Christian) is to convince him of the fact that he is a sinner and is in danger—convict him of sin.

Too often it is the case that "when a brother is overtaken in a fault"—departs from the "old paths"—instead of our obeying God's instruction by "restoring such a one in the spirit of gentleness," looking to ourselves lest we also be tempted, we deliberately ignore that instruction—depart from the "old paths"—and consequently we have two departures instead of one.

Every time human wisdom is substituted for the wisdom of God there is a departure from the "old paths," whether it be one individual, one whole congregation, or hundreds of individuals or churches. And this is true whether it is concerning the element of music in the worship or concerning something else on which God has spoken.

May God help us to realize our weakness and dependence upon him. Then may we keep close to him and in the "old paths."

Divine Integrity.-A. Ellmore.

Man has been informed that there is a wise and great Being who created this universe, with all that it contains; and since no man has ever seen him, and since he does not now speak to man in audible voice nor send messengers through whom he might reveal this knowledge to man, how has he learned of this mighty Being? In the beginning, when there were no earthly creatures to act as agents, he spoke to man through the living voice, and even through the prophetic age he did sometimes speak to man; but since the completion of his revealed will, the Bible, he no more talks with and to man direct. And this wonderful book contains all that man needs to know concerning his origin, his duty, and his destiny; and, like its author, it is perfect. It does not allow man in the smallest degree to add thereto, take from, nor change; and he has pronounced the severest curse, even the taking away his part out of the holy city, upon him who will mutilate or interfere with this perfect law. In giving to Moses the Decalogue, the Ten Commandments, he drew down the positive in each command, and says, "Thou shalt," or, "Thou shalt not." (Ex. 20.) Instead of giving to his people the privilege of obeying his law, he says in the most positive terms: "You must."

Now, in order to be assured that God will in the future keep his part of his covenant, all we have to do is to go back to the beginning and note a few cases in which the people of God became involved in difficulty and see how he dealt with both the obedient and the disobedient. And since we have learned that narrow is the gate and straitened the way which leads unto life, and few are they who find it, let me be as kind in my language as the case demands, and let me be as true to what is written as is the needle to the pole.

1. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," and the crowning product of all creatures was man. When Adam and Eve were put upon earth, they were a sinless, happy pair; and having neither home nor friends nor experience, they must look to their Creator for guidance and support. So God prepared for them a beautiful garden, and supplied it with fruits. He told Adam and Eve that they might eat of all the fruits except that which grew on the one tree, but of that they must not eat, for in the day they ate of that fruit they must die. But the great enemy of man appeared, disputed God's word, deceived the woman, and she ate of the fruit and gave to her husband, and they died. Have we considered as to the further result of that one act of disobedience? From that day until the present people have been weeping and dying, and thus will death prevail until the end of time. See, my friend, what one act of disobedience brought upon man! Did God keep his word? Did he mean what he said?

2. God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and Jehovah said: "I will detroy man whom I have created from the face of the ground; both man, and beast, and creeping things." "But Noah found favor in the eyes of Jehovah." "And God said unto Noah, . . . Make thee an ark. . . . And I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights." It rained forty days and forty nights, so that the highest mountains were covered. But Noah and his wife and his three sons and their wives went into the ark and were saved. Were there not millions among the lost who knew no sin? God had said that he would destroy the wicked unless they repented. Noah continued to warn them about one hundred and twenty years; but the world rejected all his entreaties, and they were lost. Was not God in this case true to his word? Will he not be in the future?

3. In their march from Egypt to Canaan there arose a mighty rebellion in the army—two hundred and fifty princes, led by Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, and followed by a host. Moses went to God for counsel, and God said to the rebellious leaders: To-morrow ye shall know who are the true worshipers. The host met at the tent of meeting; and Moses said: Get you out from those wicked men. And God caused the earth to open, and fourteen thousand and seven hundred went down into the pit alive, and the Lord closed the earth over them. Though God is infinite in love and mercy, yet he will have men to respect his law. (See Num. 16.)

4. At another time the supply of water failed, and Moses cried unto God, and God said: Speak to the rock, and it will bring forth. Instead of speaking to the rock, he struck the rock twice, and the water flowed. But God said to Moses: Because ye sanctified not me before this people, you never shall enter the promised land. And after forty years of toil and sorrow, of hunger and thirst, this great man failed to reach the country promised to Israel. Did God keep his word? (Num. 20.)

5. "And Nadab and Abihu, the sons of Aaron, took each of them his censer, and put fire therein, and laid incense thereon, and offered strange fire before Jehovah, which he had not commanded them. And there came forth fire from before Jehovah, and devoured them, and they died before Jehovah. Then Moses said unto Aaron, This is it that Jehovah spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be glorified. And Aaron held his peace. (Lev. 10: 1-3.) And when we now see unsanctified people offering instrumental music in his worship and singing foolish songs, we almost shudder.

The above cases are sufficient to convince every reasonable person that God means what he says and that he will bless the obedient and punish the disobedient. And now we come to his perfect law under Christ, who says: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." Having died and risen from the dead, he commissioned his apostles to go "into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation," adding: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." And when man shall have run his course and the trumpet shall call to life the nations of the dead, the final decision will be everlasting separation of the children of men.

About one hundred years ago a few great and good men, tired of strife and division, sought to unite all the contending parties into one glorious body, and they adopted the following rule, which is the wisest and most timely rule ever offered by uninspired man: "Where the Bible speaks, we speak; and where the Bible is silent, we are silent." And this rule, followed strictly, will settle every division and difficulty among all the peoples of earth. For about fifty years we succeeded well and united people from all denominations into the one body. But-alas!disloyal men entered our ranks and began to sow discord, and this they did by reversing the terms in our motto-viz., where the Bible speaks, they are silent; and where the Bible is silent, they speak. And if this almost superhuman rule were followed strictly, what would become of instrumental music in the worship, societies to do the work of the church, female preachers, preachers' meetings, royal feasts, etc.? And will there be any who will stand by the law? Yes, a few; but they will be few. Pray for more.

Six Thousand Years Old .- R. V. Cawthon.

Something like six thousand years ago the Lord gave the world a path that was plain, and commanded Adam and Eve to walk therein, with assurance of ever being blessed; but the devil (in a serpent form) turned them from the old, essential path of duty to an up-to-date one of his own. He then discarded the snake, and from that time has employed men and women to turn the Lord's people from the old path of righteousness, which always brings bad results.

The flood, murder, the building of the tower of Babel, the intermarriage of the sons of God and daughters of men, Egyptian bondage, the death of the Israelites in the wilderness, the selection of a king, and the divided kingdom were all the awful results of departing from the old path, of disregarding the word of God and following after the will of man.

The old oral path led to the Mosaic path as given on Sinai; this led to Christ, who pointed out and led the way that Isaiah called "The way of holiness," over which the redeemed only are to pass. And any departure upon our part will cause us to act the part of the fool in God's sight and cause us to wander from the path that leads to glory. The desire to keep abreast with modern movements of to-day will cause a departure from the old path; and since such is the case, we need badly to return.

Let us begin with the gospel preacher, who needs so badly to leave off modern topics and speculative views and preach only the Jerusalem gospel. Why not say with the pioneers, "Come and take your stand with me upon the word of God," and quit scrapping, and preach "Jesus Christ, and him crucified?" Let the elders and deacons return to the old-time love for the flock, not lording it over God's heritage, but taking time to look after the needs and protection of the flock. Fathers and mothers, let us go back to the old path of modesty and virtue, practicing only what we find in the old record. Older women, why not go back to the old path of teaching the younger women "to love their husbands, to love their children, to be sober-minded, workers at home" (not at the polls)? I cherish the memory of old-time Christians who had time and desire to serve God, who did their own singing, praying, giving, sacrificing. In conclusion, let us put forth a great effort to cause the human family to leave off pleasure seeking and the mad rush for the dollar by presenting to them the word of God. To those in Christ let us say, with Joshua: "We will serve the Lord." Let us be apostolic in practice, with the word of God as a lamp unto our feet and a light unto our pathway.

Avoid the First Step of Departure .- C. A. Buchanan.

The first step in departing from the right paths is to set up human authority in place of the divine.

When the papal authority became established, it claimed the power to change customs and laws. In the climax of its power the pope claimed as much authority as Jesus Christ ever claimed as the head of the church. But it did not develop in one generation. Several hundred years were required for its growth into manhood. As with the papacy, any human governing body in religion may appear innocent and harmless at the early stages of its growth. But the possibilities of accumulating power through a long period of development are the same with all ecclesiastical orders. The delegate convention of the "Disciples" is an infant as yet, but its tendency is not concealed. Who would dare to forecast the limits of its power one hundred years hence? And who knows how soon it may write a creed?

Another avenue for departure is opened up when truth is held to be evolutionary and progressive in the present age. There was a time when revelation was progressive. Not all truth was revealed at once. Revelation has been progressive just as creation was. But as Adam was the climax of creation, Christ is the climax of revelation. The Spirit led the apostles into all the truth. This, of course, would leave nothing to be revealed later in time. God made a perfect man and woman in the beginning; and since the fall, all right-thinking people have been struggling back toward that original purity and innocence. Even so God gave us a model church, as nearly perfect as imperfect human beings could constitute. I refer to the Jerusalem church. Now there has been a great falling away from the original model. What we need to do is to struggle back toward Jerusalem. With the open Bible in hand, let us pray, then read and pray.

He Alone Is Great.

I like the man who faces what he must
With step triumphant and a heart of cheer;
Who fights the daily battle without fear;
Sees his hopes fall, yet keeps unfaltering trust
That God is God; that somehow, true and just,
His plans work out for mortals; not a tear
Is shed when fortune, which the world holds dear,
Falls from his grasp; better, with love, a crust
Than living in dishonor; envies not
Nor loses faith in man; but does his best,
Nor even murmurs at his humbler lot,
But with a smile and words of hope gives zest
To every toiler; he alone is great.
Who by a life heroic conquers fate.

Where History Speaks .- J. W. Brents.

One beautiful morning in June I stood on top of Tennessee's famous Lookout Mountain, a place where poets have dreamed, novelists have imagined, and warriors have fought. With the aid of the telescope one may see into seven different States. The beautiful State of Tennessee lies out before you in all its beauty and grandeur, bathing her feet in the "father of waters" and pillowing her head upon the loftiest peaks of the Blue Ridge. The Tennessee River, with her silvery links, winding and bending in almost every direction, is finally lost in the foothills of Northern Alabama. Yonder were the historic battle fields of Missionary Ridge and Chickamauga, over which the boys in gray crossed swords with the boys in blue sixty years ago and whose fields and hillsides are dotted with monuments of every description. Old Lookout is standing like a silent sentinel, keeping watch over the lonely city of the dead. Over all this imposing scene was the arched sky, like a bowl of blue overturned, with purple clouds in the east holding the wealth of a sapphire, gold, and crimson sunrise. Amid such scenes, such facts, history, and nature, one could imagine he could see around the world and beyond it. It is so to-day. He who sees and reads and thinks, both retrospectively and prospectively, must certainly be stirred by the world's panoramic vision.

We who wear the name of Christ, members of his church, with no creed, discipline, or confession of faith but the Bible, can stand, as it were, upon the mountain of faith and can look into the memorable past. Yonder is our blessed Savior, the destined Ruler of heaven and earth, cradled in a manger, and "idolatry upon the throne," We see him moving in the mightiest drama of all time. About him the world's greatest events are happening. His hands and feet have been nailed to the cross, and that cumbersome thing is still stained by his blood. The borrowed tomb has given up its dead, and the last scene before the curtain falls is enacted on old Olivet's brow. The ascension looms up before us with as much force as though it had happened yesterday.

Yonder are his apostles, filled with heavenly wisdom and power, telling the story of Jesus and his resurrection, until Jerusalem believes and obeys. Samaria is invaded. In like manner Judea, Asia Minor, Greece, and Rome "fall beneath the sword of the Spirit." Yonder are Polycarp, Papias, and Irenæus witnessing for Jesus, and Tertullian flinging defiance into the face of Rome: "We are of yesterday: yet we have filled your empire, your cities, your islands, your castles, your towns, your assemblies, your very camps, your tribes, your companies, your palaces, your senate. Your forum and your temples alone are left you." And no wonder! Under the inspiring leadership of King Jesus, fighting under his marching orders-" Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved "they conquered. Strong and aggressive in its unity, "speaking the same things," holding a "common faith." a like precious faith, a "faith once for all delivered," simple in its organization and government, was the church of Christ. Each congregation had its "home rule," with its God-ordained elders and deacons. "In their church capacity alone they moved." Within fifty years the whole world had heard the story of Jesus. Their worship was simple and without worldly display. Meeting upon the first day of the week, or Lord's day, "they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." There was no chasm between the "laity and clergy," and their meetings were marked by a fraternal spirit and equality among all. "The heathen raged," "the people imagined vain things," kings counseled, pagan and Jewish priests incited fierce persecutions, doing their best to drown the new faith in the bloody whirlpool of martyrdom. Still, ever-increasing millions were "marching upward to Zion" and sanctifying the world as they passed through it.

These glorious, halcyon days continued for four hundred years, when Constantine, realizing that God was the ally of the church, and animated by political ambition rather than goodness and love, combined the Christian's cross and the Roman eagle into the new standards of the Roman Empire, from which the church did not recoil, but the "mystery of iniquity" waxed worse and worse. church could survive poverty, misrepresentation, persecution, but not this load of worldliness. It is the water on the inside, and not the outside, that sinks the ship. History records magnificent cathedrals and the splendor of ritualism in those days; but the spirit of true, humble worship had flown. The Bible was discredited because of its condemnation of the ways of those who held the authority. An awful darkness was deepening. The worship became formal; the preacher became a priest, claiming the power of absolutism; the Lord's day lost its meaning and was swallowed up by the observing of a large number of saints' days. And thus the Dark Ages came on. Old pagan Rome ruled and persecuted for one thousand years. Could the adherents of Rome to-day see the bones of her victims and hear the sad wails of those she put to death, it would strike terror to their inmost souls.

It has been well said that there are two twilights—that of evening passing into darkness and that of morning passing into day. Never in the history of the church has there been a night so dark but that a star has glowed somewhere. One of the first magnitude rose in the sixteenth century. The soul of Luther was shocked at the gross immorality of his ecclesiastical superiors. He was grieved at the shameless sale of indulgences, by which men were licensed to the committal of all sins for the consideration of money. He protested; was excommunicated. Soon there was crystallized about him a following. He urged his followers to wear the name of Christ, and not his name. They refused, and helped to identify his name with a "schism" that has lived till this day.

I believe we owe much to Luther, Calvin, and even old wicked Henry VIII., of England, because each made a successful resistance against Rome and curbed the temporal power of the pope. One of the noblest lives enriching church history is that of John Wesley, who lived and died an Episcopalian. When he came to manhood, English clergymen were giving themselves to the chase and other sports and hiring some one to conduct the cold and formal services. He repudiated party names, and urged his followers to call themselves "Christians" rather than "Wesleyans" and "Methodists." This they refused to do, and a new divisive name, a new creed, and another denomination is this good man's heritage to posterity.

Early in the nineteenth century there were thirteen schools of Baptists, thirty of Methodists, and forty of Presbyterians. More energy was neutralized in combating each other than in opposing Satan himself. It was about this time that morning twilight came and burst into glorious day. Noble men of God, profoundly conscious of the church and its failures to do the work committed to it, threw away their creeds and went back beyond Philadelphia, Westminster, Geneva, Augsburg, Rome, Nice, to old Jerusalem for a creed Heaven-authorized and blood-bought: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." They asked for the "old paths, and where was the good way, that they might walk therein, and find rest for their souls." Their motto was: "To the law and to the testimony." Under this banner they fought. Denominationalism trembled from center to circumference. It was a complete restoration of the church in government, ordinances, name, authority, ministry, life, and hope as it was committed to the apostles by the God of heaven. "The progress of the Restoration movement is the most romantie in all church history."

Our pioneer fathers did their work well. The name of Campbell will yet come to its own. It remains for some unborn generation to give this man his place in history which he justly deserves. They bequeathed to their sons a rich legacy. How true they have been, we have only to look. Within the last decade or two a generation of crooked preachers has arisen. They have proven untrue to the plea of our fathers and become traitors to the greatest cause ever committed to mortal beings. That this is true, I quote from none other authority than Brother J. B. Briney: "It is difficult to assign exact dates to departures from the truth; but some thirty or forty years ago some brethren began to hanker after titles, and the prefix 'Rev.' made its appearance among us and preachers began to be titled 'D.D.' These innovations, not so important in themselves, constituted the cloud not larger than a man's hand which betokened the downpour that was to follow. Denominational churches, instead of being regarded as belonging to Babylon, out of which the people of God ought to come, as formerly, began to be regarded as 'sister churches,' and it began to be proclaimed from the housetop that people could serve and please God in them as well as anywhere else. . . . It began to be held that one church is as good as another. . . . In the process of time federation came with its deadening effect upon our plea, and the things that differentiated us from 'sister churches' began to be soft-pedaled, and, indeed, some of the most important ones almost fell into utter neglect. About the same time the Endeavor movement was born. . . . It has confirmed young people in their church relations, whatever they may have been." Brother Briney continues to call attention to some very gross departures, such as "receiving applicants of good character, regardless of the matter of baptism." Well does he depose truthfully when he says: "Those who have adopted it are no longer entitled to be regarded as identified with the Restoration movement."

These few conscience-stricken ones may enter their protests now, but it will be of no avail. They should remember that this departure came when in 1867 an organ was introduced in the worship in St. Louis, and step by step have they retreated in the direction of Rome, and in many places, instead of opposing sectarianism, they are heading the procession.

And what should be our attitude? Play "silence along the lines?" No, a thousand times no! Declare eternal war against these traitors to the church of the living God. Quit being so sweet-spirited that when some one is courageous enough to expose them you are ready to remark that it would be better to preach the gospel and say nothing against any one. Down with such puny, sickly sentimentalism! Let such a compromising spirit, which is gaining a foothold in many places among us, perish from the face of the earth. Wherever departures from the word of God are known and digression begins to do its deadly work, attack it as unmercifully as you would a venomous viper and, like a rattlesnake, cut its head off every time it sticks it up.

The clarion call of the church to-day is for men—manly men; brave, courageous men; men who will not be influenced by the greed for gain, the lust for ecclesiastical power, or a desire for worldly prominence and popularity; but men like Daniel and John the Baptist, Sam Davis and Nathan Hale, who will take their stand for Jesus and make their lives tell for him.

Here is my heart and hand for the "old paths!"

Never divorce yourself from the thought that to worry and yield to feelings of depression when adversity comes, is an admission of a lack of faith. Remember, too, that worry is a prolific breeder of lils and often kills. Trust implicity, do your duty, and He will provide.—W. J. Moore, in Exchange.

Regeneration and the New Birth .- John D. Evans.

"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," (John 3: 5.)

Plain and unequivocal as is this statement of the Savier in his conversation with Nicodemus, it has been the source of almost endless controversy in the religious world. Wise "theologians" have shrouded it in such mystery that the ordinary Bible student has about concluded that the Savier never intended that we should fully understand the process by which men are "translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son." How wonderfully strange that the Savier would announce conditions upon which were suspended the eternal interests of the ones he came to save in language which no one could understand!

It requires no argument to show the Bible reader the necessity of such a change of our relationship to God. No man can be spiritually related to God until by "rebirth" he becomes a member of his family. Unless Christ has made provisions to save those outside of God's family, it follows as a matter of course that there is no hope for the "unregenerate" and "unborn."

If it be true, as many claim, that the subject is so mysterious that we cannot understand it, then no one can ever know whether he is in the kingdom of God or not or whether he is saved or lost. Yet John, in writing to "twice-born" men and women, said: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." And, again: "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God!" God's plan to save men is so plain and simple that we can know when "we have passed from death unto life."

But suppose we admit that this statement of the Savior is among the "doubtful" passages and among the "things hard to be understood." Love for the truth and respect for the laws of language forbid that we should place any construction upon his words that would violate any other teaching, either of Christ or the apostles, upon this subject. Let us, then, carefully examine the New Testament teaching upon the subject, and let the inspired writers settle the question, regardless of any theories we may have.

This question has to do with two states or relationships, two forms of life—physical and spiritual. Therefore the laws that govern both forms of life must be considered. As far as we can understand the laws of the natural or physical world, they are the same in principle as the laws in operation in the spiritual world. Since God is the author of both, all life has its source in God, and he is the author of the laws that have to do with its propagation and development from the seed germ to the full-grown species. The Bible reveals to us the fact that all life began in miracle, whether material, physical, or spiritual. It was perpetuated by well-defined laws—"first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear."

In describing the process by which spiritual life is imparted and developed, the inspired writers use as illustrations the well-known laws that operate in the material and physical world. Thus in the material and physical world God has placed the life germ within the seed, which, when it comes in contact with the proper environment or conditions, germinates and gradually develops into a living form, and is thus made ready to be born into a new state suited to its nature, where conditions necessary to its growth and development are present. This is illustrated in the parable of the sower and other parables. The impartation of life to the material seed is called a "quickening." "That which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die." In the physical world it is called a "begetting" or "generation." In the spiritual realm it is called "regeneration" or a "rebegetting." In each case there must be a deliverance from the old state into a new,

Lessons From the Portrayal of Israel's Fate .- J. O. Barnes.

"Thus saith Jehovah, Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way; and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls: but they said, We will not walk therein." (Jer. 6: 16.)

In reading these words our minds are carried back to the days when Jehovah spoke through the faithful prophet, Jeremiah, concerning his people Israel, whom he had chosen and hedged around with a law to guide them, whose battles he fought and whose victories he won, but who had manifested an alarming degree of ingratitude and rebelled against and broken his sacred law, thus incurring the displeasure of Jehovah. They had wandered so far away from "the old paths" of righteousness into the new way of sin that God called to them through the prophet to stop at the parting of the ways and ask for "the old paths," "the good way," and bade them walk therein, with the sweet promise that they should find rest for their souls. But they said: "We will not walk therein." And this stiffnecked and stubborn nation, Israel, was destroyed after God had offered them a law by which they could return to him and be blessed. Their only hope of peace with God and to become a happy nation again was to forsake their wanderings, return unto Jehovah, and accept his terms of peace; but they refused and went farther away from God, "crying, Peace, peace: when there is no peace." Then, as we read in verse 30, they were called by men "refuse silver," "because Jehovah hath rejected them." O, the sad fate of Israel!

This unpleasant portrayal of Israel's fate opens before us the picture of the church of Christ, which was established on Mount Zion, in the city of Jerusalem, on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ. Guided by the Holy Spirit through God's word—law—the early church walked in "the old paths" and was pleasing to God, speaking the same thing and being of the same mind and of the same judgment, there being no divisions, even as Paul exhorted the church at Corinth. (1 Cor. 1: 10.)

But alas! Ungodly men crept into this blood-bought institution, reading between the lines, substituting their opinions for God's law, and thus broke the union and divided the sacred body of Christ; thus they departed from "the old paths"—God's law—and marked out for themselves a new, man-made way, and traveled in this soctarian, unscriptural way thirteen hundred years, while Jehovah was saying. "Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way; and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls;" but many continued to say, "We will not walk therein," and went on in the "way that seemeth right unto a man," the end of which is death.

But glory to God! A few faithful men heard the loving call of Jehovah, and stood in the ways, and saw, and asked for the "old paths," and found them, saying: "Where the Bible speaks, we will speak; and where the Bible is silent, we will be silent." Thus they laid aside all denominational names and unscriptural practices and returned to "the old paths," and together with their fellows they "walked therein" for fifty years, and did "speak the same thing," and there was no division among them—the church—the body of Christ.

But again, alas! Some became displeased with "the old paths," and said, "We will not walk therein;" and thus many of the members of the body of Christ departed from "the old paths," introducing instrumental music into the true worship of God, contrary to the word of God, which says: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." (Col. 3: 16, 17.) This, together with other unscriptural practices, keeps the church of Christ divided. I ask all who stand thus to read John 17: 20, 21, where our Lord prayed "that they [we] all may be one," and obey this sacred suggestion of our Lord, and thus return unto "the old paths," and speak a. "Thus saith the Lord" in all things pertaining to the true worship of God, and "let love of the brethren continue," thus forsaking man-made ways—"the way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death"—eternal separation from God.

But once more, alas! As we stand in the ways and see, we still hear others who claim to be walking in "the old paths" saying, "We will not walk therein," and saying. "Give us a king, that we may be like the nations [sectarians] around." Thus many who were once faithful children of God are forsaking the assembly of the saints for worship on the Lord's day in violation of the teaching of the Holy Spirit, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together" (Heb. 10: 25), and substituting a "hired man"-a "pastor"-to preach once each month a twentyminute sermonette and pray a one-minute prayer while all the members listen, standing or sitting, instead of lingering in real worship as Paul and the church did at Troas when Paul "continued his speech until midnight" (Acts 20: 7) and as Christ did when he "continued all night in prayer to God" (Luke 6: 12). Thus we see the gloomy trend of the church of Christ to go back into the unscriptural meshes of denominationalism.

O, thou church of the living God, hear Jehovah! "Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way; and walk therein, and ye shall find rest to your souls."

Apostolic Organization .- A. A. Bunner.

"Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein." (Jer. 6: 16.)

What I mean by the term, "Apostolic Organization," is the setting in order of the congregations of the disciples of Christ by the apostles and those directly authorized by them to do this work, such as men like Timothy and Titus. If I shall be able in this brief and feeble effort to identify the apostolic organization, I shall have identified the true tabernacle, "which the Lord pitched, and not man;" I shall have identified the institution, and the only institution, "in which Christians are to glorify God." As I understand it, the gospel regards Christianity as a life (John 10: 10), which, like all life, is manifested in and through a body, and this body is the church (Eph. 1: 21, 23; 1 Cor. 12: 13). This brings me to notice

GOSPEL CHURCH OFFICERS.

The term "church" is from the Greek "ekkleesia," meaning "the called out." The "ekkleesia" of the Greeks was an assembly of persons collected by a cryer. The members of the church are called out from the world. (2 Cor. 6: 17.) In the New Testament the term "ekkleesia" is found one hundred and sixteen times and has several meanings. In Acts 19: 32 it refers to an unlawful assembly; in verse 29, to a lawful assembly. In most cases the word "church" in the New Testament means a local band of believers—sometimes in a private house (Rom. 16: 5; Col. 4: 15; Phile. 3) and sometimes a congregation in a town or city (Acts 2: 47; 13: 1; 14: 26, 27; 1 Cor. 1: 2); and as it is with this manifestation of the church we are now concerned, I shall proceed to notice its permanent officers.

ELDERS, OR BISHOPS.

All scholars are agreed that elders were the same as bishops in the apostolic church. The terms are used interchangeably. (See Acts 20: 17, 28; Tit. 1: 5-7; 1 Pet. 5: 1, 2.) The term is from the title of the rulers of the Jewish synagogue. (See Acts 23: 14; 14: 1; 25: 15.) The Greek of it is "presbuteros"—an old man. The term "bishop" is a Greek term, and literally means an "overseer," and these are said to "have the rule over the church;" but the word "rule" literally means to "lead."

Qualifications of Elders.—Intellectually, the elder must be "apt to teach" (1 Tim. 3: 2), "able to refute the gainsayers" (Tit. 1: 9), and be able to teach "sound doctrine" (Tit. 2: 1). The elder should be able to say: "Be ye imitators of me, even as I also am of Christ." (1 Cor. 11: 1; see also 1 Tim. 4: 12.)

Duties of Elders .- Preaching: The injunction, "Preach the word," implies public preaching, and applies to the elders as a class; and this means that there should at least be one man associated with every board of the elders who is capable to labor in the word and teaching. On this point I shall take the liberty to quote from three versions of the Holy Scriptures: "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine. For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, The laborer is worthy of his reward." (Authorized Version.) "The officers of the church who fill their office well should be held deserving of special consideration, particularly those whose work lies in preaching and teaching. The words of scripture are, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox while treading out the grain. And again, The worker is worth his wages." (Twentieth Century New Testament.) "Let the elders who perform their duties wisely and well be held worthy of double honor, especially those who labor in preaching. For the scripture says, You are not to muzzle the ox while it is treading out the grain (Deut. 25; 4); and, The workman deserves his pay." (Modern Speech New Testament.) Again I repeat that there should be associated with every board of the elders a man who is able and capable of laboring in the great work of teaching and preaching the word, and this is made needful from considerations set forth. (Tit. 1: 10-13; 1 Tim. 6: 3-5.) These men can be found among the faithful evangelists. The elders at Denver, Col., acted both scripturally and wisely when they associated with themselves Brother John D. Evans to labor in the preaching and the teaching, and were only getting back to apostolic organization.

DEACONS.

The office of deacon is distinct from that of elder. (1) In 1 Tim. 3: 8 the Greek connective ("hosautos") indicates a separate class; (2) elders are required to be "apt to teach" (1 Tim. 3: 2) and able to refute gainsayers (Tit. 1: 9)—qualifications which are not required of deacons. Elders and deacons are mentioned as distinct classes of officers in the Epistles. (Phil. 1: 1; 1 Tim. 3: 2, 8.) For the qualifications of deacons, see 1 Tim. 3: 8-12. The word "deacon" (Greek, "diakonos") literally means "a servant"—that the deacons should be helpers in all of the temporal affairs of the church.

DEACONESSES.

The gospel provides for deaconesses as well as deacons. In Rom. 16: 1, Paul speaks of Phœbe as deaconess (Greek, "diakonon;" translated "servant") "of the church which is at Cenchrea." Indeed, I feel sure that the word "office," when used in connection with Christians in the New Testament, is only used in the sense of work, and not in the sense in which it is applied to the officers of civil government. (See Matt. 20: 25-28; 1 Pet. 5: 3, 4.) The office of deaconess is referred to in 1 Tim. 3: 11.

The same connective is used here as in verse 8, and indicates a separate class of persons. The word "woman" does not mean "wives," or the context would reveal the fact, as in verse 12. Deaconesses in the early church were widows and chosen from among the aged. They are referred to under this title in 1 Tim. 5: 9, 10; but for this important office the younger widows were to be rejected for the reasons set forth in verses 11-15. Those aged widows were to be teachers of good things, as set forth in Tit. 2: 3-5. Paul said of aged Phœbe: "For she hath been a succorer of many, and of myself also." In what way, Paul? See 1 Tim. 5: 10, and you have what she has done.

I have now hastily and in as brief a manner as I possibly could tried to identify the divine organization. But there comes rejection of the divine admonition as set forth in Jer. 6: 16: "We will not walk therein." Hence they set about the work of organizing for themselves, thereby setting up their wisdom above the wisdom of God. So in October, 1849, the American Christian Missionary Society was organized, with Alexander Campbell as its first president; the Christian Woman's Board of Missions was organized on October 24, 1874; the Ohio Christian Missionary Society was organized on May 12, 1852. Along with the above has come a great brood of societies of all grades and shades, until the divine society, or organization, has been entirely lost sight of by human society manipulators; and, so far as we can now see, the end is not yet.

Let the cry be: "Back to the apostolic organization—the church!" God is in her, Christ is in her and over her as her head, an innumerable company of angels are in her, all the spirits of the just are in her, and the blood of sprinkling is on her and in her and can be reached by sinners through no other institution. (See Heb. 12: 22-24.) It is a hostile country through which the church is passing; but we should never fear final results, for the God of Jeshurun rides in his excellency on the sky and Judah's Lion guards her way and will lead her to certain victory, and then will all the hosts of heaven rejoice and Jesus will see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied with the work of his church. Again I repeat: "Back to the church!"

I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,
The church our blest Redeemer saved
With his own precious blood.

I love thy church, O God; Her walls before thee stand, Dear as the apple of thine eye, And graven on thy hand.

For her my tears shall fall, For her my prayers ascend; To her my cares and toils be giv'n Till toils and cares shall end.

Beyond my highest joy I prize her heav'nly ways, Her sweet communion, solemn vows, Her hymns of love and praise.

Jesus, thou Friend divine, Our Savior and our King, Thy hand from ev'ry snare and foe Shall great deliverance bring.

Sure as thy truth shall last,
To Zion shall be giv'n
The brightest glories earth can yield,
And brighter bliss in heav'n.

To lay a new path through the unknown way, And leave some heritage e'en though so small No other hand would love or care to leave. Rejoicing ever in my brother's craft, To follow system and the perfect law—Be what I am, and do my very best To lead a life which towers above the hills, And points the way across the plains to God.—R. Regeneration and the New Birth.-John D. Evans. (Continued from page 889.)

which in the physical world is called a "birth;" in the spiritual, a "rebirth" or "new birth" or a "being born again."

Then, if in the material world there must be a "quickening" into life or "generation" and in the physical life a "begetting" or "generation" as antecedent and essential to "birth" or "deliverance," the law of analogy, as well as the plain scriptural precept, would force us to conclude that in the process of conversion or spiritual transformation there must be first a "begetting" and then a birth, or a "rebegetting" and a "rebirth," or "regeneration" and the "new birth," the theme under consideration in Christ's conversation with Nicodemus. This imparted life, then, comes from a seed which contains the germ or life principle. This seed is the word of God, which, when received into the proper soil or a "good and honest heart," is "quickened" into spiritual life. "The seed is the word of God." The soil is the human heart. In perfect accord with this idea, the apostle Paul says, "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is begotten of God;" and, again, "In Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel;" and, "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." Peter, in reference to the same matter, says: "Having been begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, through the word of God, which liveth and abideth." (1 Pet. 1: 23.) By the exercise of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ we are "begotten" by the Spirit. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth," but we are not yet born into the new life thus predicated of the "begotten." "Begotten by the Spirit" is the first part of the process of being "born again." We are not "begotten" into the kingdom, but "born" into it. Thus we find that regeneration and the new birth are not identical, only when viewed as two parts of one whole.

A regenerate man is still unsaved. He must be born again of water after having been begotten by the Spirit before he can enter into the kingdom of God, just as we are " begotten " or " generated " physically before we are born into the world, where conditions suited to our physical being prevail.

But in the material world the seed containing the life germ must come in contact with certain conditions-such as soil, moisture, sunshine, etc.-before it is made alive. Without these it may lie dormant for years and even centuries. That is the law operating in the material world. Just so the "seed of the kingdom, which is the word of God," must fall into the proper soil, which is the human heart. But without faith in the Lord Jesus Christ it may lie dormant forever. Our attention is called in the New Testament to a certain class who heard the word of God, but received no profit from it, because it was "not mixed with faith" upon their part. The Spirit, in exercising his quickening power, respects the law of God which operates in the spiritual realm. God's word is spirit and it is life, but it must be received into a "good and honest heart" before it becomes "the power of God unto salvation." "Without faith it is impossible to please him." "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth."

But what about the "new birth?" How is it related to the question of regeneration and to our conversion and salvation? The Scriptures clearly settle this question, so that the "wayfaring man," even though a fool, "shall not err therein." In the new birth water is the element appointed by the Spirit. "Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Hence the "washing in water" referred to by the apostle is the "washing of regeneration," or the washing which follows regeneration. Paul, in Tit. 3: 5, declares that God saves us "by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." When we are "begotten again by the incorruptible seed," we are "renewed" by the Holy Spirit and are then ready for the "washing of regeneration," or being "born of water," which corresponds to our burial and resurrection in the act of baptism in water. In the Ephesian letter Paul says: "Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." (Eph. 5: 25, 26.) Again, in Heb. 10: 22, the writer says: "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." Peter also, in referring to the salvation of Noah and his family "through water," says: "Which also after a true likeness [in the antitype] doth now save you, even baptism, not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the interrogation of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ." (1 Pet. 3: 21.) Neither in this passage of scripture nor in any other is there the slightest ground for the theory of "baptismal regeneration," or "water salvation," which is sometimes charged to those who believe in the essentiality of water baptism in the divine plan to save. It is through the shed blood of the Son of God that remission of sins is possible. But his blood is efficacious in saving only when it is spiritually applied to the human heart. Since his blood was shed when he was suspended upon the cross of Calvary, or in his death, in some way or other we must, in order to appropriate its cleansing power, come into his death when his blood was shed. In the divine arrangement or plan of salvation, God has made water baptism the connecting link or consummating act of obedience by which we reach his blood. To this agrees the statement of the apostle Paul in Rom. 6: 3-5: "Or are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life. For if we have become united with him in the likeness of his death, we shall be also by the likeness of his resurrection."

The facts of the gospel, which the apostle Paul declared in 1 Cor. 15: 3, 4 to be the keynote of all his preaching, are the death, burial, and resurrection of the Savior. When we yield obedience "from the heart" to that "form of doctrine," we are then "made free from sin" and become the "servants of righteousness." Neither of these facts of the gospel can be obeyed, but in some way or other these facts must be obeyed in form, and the form must correspond with the facts. In the great commission the Savior announced the commands of the gospel, which can and must be obeyed. They are faith, repentance, and baptism. Upon obedience to these commands is predicated the salvation of every responsible soul in the universe. In their relation to our salvation faith comes first, and its office is to "purify the heart." Repentance comes second, and its office is to change the life. Baptism is the third and last act, which changes the state or relationship and enables us to "put on Christ." When by faith we are spiritually "begotten of God," repentance begins its work of "crucifying" the fleshly nature, which, if carried out, results in our "death to sin" and a fixed determination to "live unto God." We are then ready to be "buried with Christ in baptism," that we also may be "raised with him, through faith in the working of God who raised him from the dead," "to walk in newness of life." Repentance and baptism are acts of faith, without obedience to which no man can be "made free from sin." To fail to comply with these commands of the gospel is to fail to obey the "form" or mold of "doctrine" necessary to set forth the fundamental facts. This accounts for the fact that in apostolic times there were no unbaptized Christians. If there were none under the preaching of the apostles, of course there are none now. Have you complied with Heaven's law and thus been "born again of water and the Spirit?"

Perishing For Lack of Knowledge,-A. B. Lipscomb.

The scholarly George Adam Smith, who had a genius for retranslation, rendered Hos. 4: 6 thus: "My people are perishing for lack of knowledge." Israel, at the time this prophecy was uttered, was very much alive, and without exceeding historic bounds I might say she was exceedingly well pleased with herself as a nation. But the Lord, great Master of Paradox, looked down upon the scene and said: "My people are perishing." Alive, alert, vigorous, and successful from the commercial viewpoint, yet perishing! Paul corroborates this Old Testament conception in 1 Cor. 1: 18: "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness." You observe that the perishing process may be going on while people are alive and enjoying themselves to the utmost. People can be spiritually dead while apparently alive. To Sardis the message came: "I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead." Dean Farrar, in one of his fertile books, says: "It is an awful thing to think of a disembodied soul, but it is worse to think of a disensouled body." And yet the world is full of bodies that have lost the spirit of life.

But what is the knowledge that is weefully lacking? The Bible has two distinct lines of treatment concerning knowledge. It speaks of two kinds of knowledge. We should keep the distinction clear, else we will become confused and the Bible will appear to contradict itself where it does not.

(1) The Bible praises true knowledge. You are bound to love knowledge if you love the Bible. It contains knowledge -all kinds of knowledge. Never was there a blacker lie invented than that which teaches that "ignorance is the mother of devotion." Infidels would have the world believe that only the ignorant are religious and devoted to the Lord's work. One may truly say that devotion is the dispeller of ignorance; for wherever the Bible and the Christian religion have gone, light and learning and civilization have followed. Sentence after sentence will recur wherein the Bible praises knowledge. Take the book of Proverbs, for example. The purpose of the whole collection is to encourage the acquisition of true, saving knowledge. They are written "to give subtlety to the simple, to the young man knowledge and discretion." There is no other book that contains the amount of practical knowledge found in Proverbs. Time and again the heads of great business houses have recommended it to their employees. Its basic principles are always timely.

(2) The Bible denounces unsanctified knowledge. Has it ever occurred to you what a terrible instrumentality for evil is unholy knowledge? We hear it said of some people that they are "as smart as the devil." We can say this sometimes and speak the exact truth. They are indeed smart, but it is the smartness of the devil they possess. "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do." Paul denounces science falsely so-called and describes certain wicked people who were "ever learning, but never coming to the knowledge of the truth."

The knowledge that we cannot afford to miss is the knowledge of God. The Hebrew scholars, in translating the passage from Hosea, place the emphasis upon the definite article and make it read: "My people are perished for lack of the knowledge." The only knowledge worth while, as they saw the matter, was the knowledge of the true and living God. This was the knowledge of supreme importance. The nation had gone wrong because they did not know and obey and trust God. Eliphaz said to Job: "Acquaint now thyself with him, and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee." There can be no real or lasting peace without a saving knowledge of God. No good can come to him who neglects to learn of God. Paul exborted the Corinthian church, saying: "Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame." They had the Scriptures; they had the gospel as preached by the apostles themselves; they had the power of thought; they had the opportunity to learn; but to their shame he must say they "have not the knowledge of God." Is it not true to-day? If I mistake not the signs of the times, with all our boasted enlightenment and civilization, the people still perish for the lack of the knowledge of God.

We need to know the terrible workings of sin. Read the fourth chapter of Hosea and you will note how terribly the people had become entangled in sin, with no acknowledgment or repentance. "The Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land." The result of sin is always the same. To eat of the forbidden fruit is to die. When one tells a lie, or cherishes an evil and unforgiving thought, or gives way to passion, it means to perish, unless there is true repentance. And yet what a terrible lack of knowledge there is on this point even among the best of us! When we note the workings of sin, we wonder less and less that the Savior prayed on the cross: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

To know sin means to know ourselves, for "all have sinned and have come short of the glory of God." We should know our weaknesses, for no chain of character can be any stronger than its weakest link. We should know that weak link and strengthen it. God will give us the power lf we only make the proper effort. It may indeed be very embarrassing and humiliating to some of us to discover "the sin that doth so easily beset us," but not to know it and correct it means damnation here and hereafter. An old saint wrote in his diary these words: "I am getting better acquainted with myself every day," Self-examination spells edification if it does not spell destruction.

Multitudes are perishing for the lack of knowledge of the way of salvation. If you will study the fourth chapter of Hosea, you will find that the blame for the fatal lack of knowledge is laid at the door of the priest. "I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children." Whom does the priest stand for in modern times? The preacher, the religious leader, the ministry. We blush to say it, but it is true, nevertheless, that the blame for the lack of the knowledge of the gospel to-day belongs at the same door. When we sing the old refrain, "Rescue the perishing," we usually think of the heathen in darkest Africa, in benighted India or China; but we should think, too, of thousands nearer home. Who can pay a visit to any of the fashionable churches and not be impressed with the fact that people are perishing for lack of the knowledge of the gospel? They are being fed up on poetry, philosophy, history, sociology, politics, anything and everything except the very thing they need-the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation. O the pity of it, if one auditor should say: "I came to church, and I would gladly have learned how I might be saved from my sins, but nothing was said on this subject." But there are thousands who are thus doomed to disappointment.

When Jesus drew near to Jerusalem for the last time before his crucifixion, he wept over the city and said: "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes." Brethren, this is our day, and in love and humility I have written of some things that we need to know, for they belong unto our peace. God forbid that they should be hid from our eyes!

Repentance is not merely a change of conduct, but a change of conduct based upon a change of feeling and mind. It is repudiation of what is now felt to be sinful.—A. J. Mason.

A Restoration Instead of a Reformation. - John S. Durst.

As a basis for this article I will give the words of the prophet: "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." (Jer. 6: 16.)

This suggests a departure from and a return to something. Upon examination of the history of the Israelites, we read of their captivity and of their being finally brought back to Jerusalem and the rebuilding of the temple which had been torn down. While they were in captivity, they, of course, became inactive in the observance of the law and wandered away from its demands. They were finally brought back and caused to rebuild the temple. The book of the law was read and studied as Ezra led in the work of a restoration of its demands. Neh. 8 and 9.) I take this as a type of a restoration of the primitive order of things under the reign of Christ as it now confronts us. Very early in the work of the Lord's inspired apostles we find that one of them foretold that there would come an apostasy, or a falling away from the divine procedure. Only about twenty years after the day of Pentecost, Paul said: "The mystery of iniquity doth already work." (2 Thess. 2: 7.) As much as to say: The seed is now being sown that will bring into existence an apostatized condition of things, or a falling away from the old paths. We find this was consummated or fulfilled in the third century at the Nicene Council of the authorized representatives of the man of sin. What is called the "Dark Ages" in history then followed till what is now called the period of "Reformations," beginning with the sixteenth century. All of these efforts materialized in the formation of the so-called "denominations" of Protestants, resulting in the question: "What denomination of Christians are you a member of?" Note that this question was never asked in the primitive age of the church of Christ, for the reason that none other existed then. We, therefore, ask all to meet us on the divine platform in a restoration of things established by the Lord himself, and to be content with the designations we find in his will representing his body. To distinguish between the denominations, each one has its published creed or articles of faith, by which they are governed and which distinguishes from the others. Nothing of the kind existed primitively. The Lord's will as given in the New Testament was all that was needed then; it is all that is needed now. We ask all to meet us on the New Testament as our rule of faith and practice. It answered the divine requirements before the departures from the old paths. Why should it be otherwise now?

In primitive times all were in the one body-the church we read about in the New Testament. Why should it not be the case now? Aliens were admitted into this body by the law of induction given in the commission to his calledand-sent ambassadors. We ask all to meet us on this divine requirement. What can be the objection? We ask all to meet us on the New Testament plan of the work and worship of the church; and in this we agree that in the event it is found that we are teaching and practicing anything as a religious requirement not found in the New Testament, we will at once cease to continue it. will go still further. In the event it is found that we are failing to teach and to practice anything that is incumbent on us to teach and practice, we will begin at once to do so. The statement that we are in a work of restoration forces us to act thus; and we can freely do it, because the law of the Lord is our only rule of faith and practice, and where it leads we must follow.

It is a matter of fact that the religious world has departed from the Lord's teaching in many respects, and the forsaken paths are covered up with the rubbish of human devices, till it now requires the sword of the Spirit. which is the word of the Lord, to be faithfully and levingly handled to cut away the obstructions, so that the honest pilgrim along life's way may go on his way toward the haven of eternal rest.

This, then, is a "restorative" period, in which the people biblically known as disciples of the Lord, children of God, saints, brethren, members of the household of faith, the church of God or of Christ, followers of Christ, or Christians, are engaged in the call to come back to "the old paths" and "walk therein," that we may find rest to our souls in the union of hearts in the cooperative work of the Lord. The Lord prayed for the union of all who would believe on him through the words of his inspired men, and he did not pray for the accomplishment of an impossibility. Hence we earnestly press the invitation to "ask for the old paths" and to "walk therein" and "find rest for your souls." Faith in the Lord is the authorized moving principle in this great work, and it comes by or through his revealed testimony. If all were guided by it, the pruning knife would cut off all unauthorized teaching and practices and would find us agreed and workers together in the Lord. We learn that the Lord's disciples were built together (not separately) for a "habitation of God through the Spirit." The pruning knife would cut off denominationalism; it would cut off man-made creeds; it would cut off all human appendages that supplement the Lord's work. All of these things convey the idea that the Lord's work is imperfect and that men can supply the deficiency. In fact, the principle adhered to-to take the Bible, and the Bible alone, as our rule of faith and practice-will accomplish the work of placing us in the old paths that lead to the sweet home of the soul. We would then be "fitly joined together" (Eph. 4: 16); we would then be laborers together with God (1 Cor. 8: 9); we would then compose the great family of God (Eph. 3: 15); we would be walking by the same rule (Gal. 6: 16); we would be speaking the same things and be "perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment" (1 Cor. 1: 10). How plain and simple are these potent truths! May the good Lord impress them on our minds and hearts to his honor and glory, is my prayer.

The Old Paths .- D. T. Broadus.

This title may not be a fanciful one for many people, for they are seeking new paths. If the old one had been made by men, we could afford to seek new ones. Inasmuch as Jehovah made the old, and he could see the end from the beginning and know the needs of men and was willing to make preparation for their best interest, it behooves us to walk in the old paths.

In the days of Jeremiah the Lord spoke through him to the Jews who were in idolatry and admonished them to ask for the old paths, etc. (Jer. 6: 16.) To-day many refuse to walk in them when they are admonished. It is because they want something new. They think they must have a new gospel and a church adapted to the times. They forget that the Lord could establish one that would be sufficient for all time.

Those who think they can improve upon the law of induction into the kingdom are not walking in the old paths. If we decide that we can make a better law of worship or plan of mission work, we are seeking the new and rejecting the old.

The Jews had a law to govern them, and they must observe it. We must comply with the one given to us. The true worship of God has been, and is, the old way. The new is idolatry and apostasy.

Any departure from the law of the Lord is wrong. We can test this by comparing the Bible with modern methods. In the days of the apostles they preached Jesus (Acts 8: 35), preached the word of the Lord (Acts 16: 32), preached the gospel (Acts 2: 22-38; 2 Cor. 15: 1-4). Have any departed from this? Some now preach isms, opinions, higher criticism, spiritism, Russellism, etc. Then there is departure.

Has there been a going away in regard to the commands? Men, guided by the Holy Spirit, commanded inquirers to believe in Christ (Acts 8: 36-38; 16: 31), to repent (Acts 3: 19), to be baptized (Acts 2: 38; 22: 16). These things were to obtain remission of sins. Some follow this to-day, but others have fallen short of it. They admonish their hearers to mourn and pray for pardon, etc. In that day many obeyed those commands, and many do to-day; but some fail. They profess to believe, but their faith is too weak to lead them to obey the command of baptism and they substitute something else.

When walking in the old paths, they had elders over a congregation (Acts 20: 17; 1 Tim. 3: 1, 2); they had deacons (1 Tim. 3: 8). Many are satisfied with this now, but there are many departures. Some have a pope, archbishops, priests, "reverends," district superintendents, "D.D.s," etc.

In the apostolic age they appointed men to look after those in need. (Acts 6: 1-8.) If we follow the Lord's way, we will have the same now. They were taught to bear each other's burdens (Gal. 6: 2), to visit the fatherless and widows (James 1: 27). They were to add the Christian graces, etc. (2 Pet. 1: 5-11.) The church, individually and collectively, must do this. We find that some do, but others have new ways to do it, such as Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Y. P. S. C. E., B. Y. P. S., etc. The Lord's way is too slow.

The Lord has a plan of mission work. The church sent men into the field to do the work. It sent means by messengers. The preacher reported his work to the church that sent him. (Acts 11: 22: 15: 1-4; 14: 26, 27; Rom. 15: 18-31.) In thirty-one years they sent the gospel to all the nations. What changes we find with some! They have mite societies, ladies' aid societies, C. W. B. M.'s, foreign societies, home societies, conferences, presbyteries, district, State, and national conventions, etc. The societies, instead of the church, get the glory.

The Lord gave a law of worship—(1) song (Matt. 26: 30; Eph. 5: 19); (2) prayer (Acts 2: 42; 1 Thess. 5: 17); (3) teaching (John 13: 14; Acts 2: 42); (4) Lord's-day meeting (Acts 20: 7; 1 Cor. 11: 23-26; 16: 1, 2). Read these scriptures and compare them with what we find in many places now—white surplice, candles, crucifixes, drums, horns, violins, pianos, organs, worldly choirs, pomp, and show. Do these resemble the instruction of the apostles?

Christians were instructed how to give—(1) with willing minds (2 Cor. 8: 17); (2) in proportion (2 Cor. 8: 12-15); (3) regularly (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2). This is plain and simple. Some practice it; others say it will not work (of course they do not work it), and think they have an improvement in fairs, festivals, bazaars, cantatas, charity balls, raffles, etc. How do these things compare with the old paths? But, remember, we must walk not in the new, but the old, paths.

It is time to wake up. The judgment is coming. "Who then shall be able to stand?"

Reverence For God's Word .- Batsell Baxter.

The word "Bible" means "the book." Surely there are not many greater blessings that God has given to us than this holy book. How clear our duty as revealed there! How sweet the promises contained there! How precious the truths gleaming from its holy pages! With what reverence we ought to read it! With what gratitude we ought to possess this priceless gift of God!

For ages past men have differed about its truths and debated over its commands, but with reverence; and the "Thus saith the Lord" was the final word to the multitude who listened. The time was when men who claimed to love God yearned to know his will. They looked upon the Bible as an infallible guide. The great task of the gospel preacher was to show that he was preaching what the Bible taught. This done, the victory was won.

But now-alas!-is the Bible the inspired word of the eternal God? Great (?) and learned religious teachers say that it is not. It has been put on the dissecting table and part of the great body of truth cut away. There is hardly a shred left. All the miracles have been accounted for by natural law or ignorant credulity; the great historical accounts have been ridiculed and declared myths; the divinity of Christ has been denied; the promise of immortality has been declared a mere exercise of imagination. All this by men who claim to be friends of God! And the critics are still at their work! But how foolish their reasoning! How inconsistent their declaration of belief in God! How wild and far-fetched their conclusions! How empty and hollow their statement of faith in the religion they are vainly attempting to destroy! Samsonlike, if they could, they would grasp the pillars and pull down the house to destroy humanity, and themselves perish in the ruins.

The very efforts of men to discredit the word of God have shown how grand and majestic are its truths. The Bible has not been hurt. It has answered every critic; it has stood every test; it has braved every storm; it has come through ages of bitter efforts of might and money and ignorance and prejudice and ingenuity and cunning to destroy it; it has survived the dagger thrusts of professed friends.

Though the Bible has not been hurt, we have been hurt. The noise and smoke of battle has swept many men from their moorings. Let us who still have faith unshaken in every statement of Holy Writ be careful that our every statement and our every act be such as to show groping, doubting, blinded, shaken men that the old-time faith is not dead. Let our work and worship be such that men may know that we still believe what we teach—that God's word is the divine revelation of an all-wise and loving Heavenly Father. Let us show to men that this holy book is our absolute authority and tribunal of final appeal in all matters religious.

Walking With God .- Will J. Cullum.

This subject is one of vital interest to man, who is a responsible being. It is one that must be understood and observed, if we would meet God's approval and live with him in the home of eternal joy. How, then, can we walk with God? Not by doing what we think is right, or according to our own judgment or our own ways,

"O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." (Jer. 10: 23.) "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." (Prov. 14: 12.) "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts." (Isa. 55: 8, 9.) From these statements we learn that man is wholly dependent upon the direction of some other than himself, if he would walk with God.

To whom shall he look, or upon whom shall he depend? The key to all work and worship of God that is or can be acceptable to him is found in 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17. Noah walked with God by doing just what God commanded him. (Gen. 6: 22.) God told him what to do. He heard; he believed; he obeyed. Hence, he walked by faith. Nothing else would have pleased God. (Heb. 11: 6.) Faith comes only by hearing the word of God. (Rom. 10: 17.) Nothing else is faith, nor can be, seeing there is only one faith. (Eph. 4: 5.)

If all would walk by faith, all would please God, and all would be one, as our Savior prayed. (John 17.)

AT HOME AND ABROAD

J. S. Dunn baptized thirty-three in his meeting at Fargo, Texas.

Thomas E. Milholland closed in Madill, Okla., with thirty baptized.

- E. O. Coffman baptized six persons during a ten-days' meeting at Nolensville, Tenn.
- J. M. Childress baptized twenty-two in a meeting at Megargie, Texas. Two restorations.

George W. Farmer reports a good start in the meeting at Verona, Tenn. Three additions to September 6.

J. P. Prevatt is in an Interesting meeting at Cherry Sink, Fla. Eight baptisms and two restorations to September 5.

Waller A. McMillian has just closed an interesting meeting in New Mexico, with twenty-six baptized and three reclaimed.

Frank Baker is in a meeting at Woodward's Grove, Ky. His meeting at Hickory Grove, near Lecta, Ky., resulted in three baptisms.

- J. Clifford Murphy closed a good meeting near McMinnville, Tenn., on September 4. Eleven were baptized and two were restored.
- B. L. Douthitt reports four additions in the meeting at Walnut Ridge, Ark. He is now at Hearn's Chapel, near Cedar Grove, Tenn.

Brother Srygley is in a meeting at Science Hill, Tenn. He reports fourteen additions at Boston, Tenn. This number includes twelve baptisms.

Tice Elkins reports the work with the Southside congregation, Fort Worth, Texas, interesting and aggressive, with the entire congregation alive to every good work.

Alonzo Williams closed the meeting at Cliff Creek, near Brownsville, Tenn. Three were baptized and one was restored. He is now in an arbor meeting at Poplar Springs.

A note from W. S. Long indicates that he is in the eighth day of a good meeting at Jacksonville, Pa., with three baptisms to September 5. He will return to Washington, D. C., September 15.

Married, on September 8, at the Maxwell House, in Nashville, Mr. J. K. Adams, of Columbia, Tenn., and Miss Mary Frances Quinn, of Russellville, Ala., A. B. Lipscomb officiating. Congratulations.

C. R. Nichol (Christian) and C. H. Cayce (Primitive Baptist) will begin a four-days' debate in or near Lebanon, Mo., on September 27. These who will attend from a distance should write Homer L. King, Lebanon, Mo.

The death of J. M. Joiner at Arkdelphia, Ala., on August 27, removes from this earth a faithful preacher of the gospel who labored for fifty years chiefly in the State of Alabama. A more extended notice will appear later,

C. E. Holt is in a meeting with the Stony Point Church, seven miles north of Florence, Ala. This is the oldest congregation in Lauderdale County. The personnel of this congregation is fine. They have a good Sunday school.

The last report from J. D. Tant indicated tht he was at Palestine, Ark., with six confessions. Brother Tant says he "never met a finer set of women than those who meet there every Lord's day for worship and Bible study."

From R. L. Whiteside, Stevenson, Ala., September 8: "There is an urusual amount of prejudice and indifference at this place. Our crowds are not large, but very attentive. One has been baptized to date. I go next to Kettle Mills, in Maury County, Tenn."

From A. R. Hill, Charleston, Miss., September 5: "The work here is progressing nicely. One came from the Baptists at a recent Sunday-morning service. Good crowds attended both services yesterday. I will be here until school opens at David Lipscomb College."

From M. D. Baumer, Winchester, Ky., September 11: "T. Q. Martin closed a ten-days' meeting at Fairfax, with ten baptisms. Those who know the bitter struggle of the last three years will count this a great meeting. Crowded houses every night proved the great interest shown."

From F. O. Howell, Jackson, Tenn.: "My meeting at Trenton closed with thirteen additions to the congregation; at Nance, four miles west of Alamo, with sixty-four additions, after six days' duration. I began at Maury City on September 4, with a good crowd and fair prospects."

Emmett G. Creacy is in a tent meeting at Eche, Ky. J. M. Isenberg is leading in the song service. This is the home of F. H. Woodward, and he is assisting greatly in the meeting. Five were baptized into Christ during the meeting at Lee's Seminary. Three of this number were baptists and one was a Methodist."

From Mrs. L. V. Mitchell, McGregor, Ga., September 5: "J. Bedford Beck, of Savannah, preached at McGregor on Saturday night, yesterday, and last night. Last night one weman from the Baptists took her stand with us. We feel that so much more good may be done if we can continue having preaching at least once monthly. Jasper Copeland, also of Savannah, has been preaching for us."

- F. P. Fonner, Buffalo, W. Va., says; "I have carefully examined 'Life and Sermons of Jesse E. Sewell,' by David Lipscomb. It is certainly a treasure. Any young preacher who does not own a copy of it is missing something. This book should be in every home, and it should be read, too. Jesse L. Sewell was a noble character, and I love to think of his many virtues."
- T. B. Thompson writes: "I have closed a good meeting (September 6) at Bradford, Tenn., with the Locust Grove Church. We had good audiences during the entire meeting and two baptisms. I have promised the brethren to return for another meeting sometime. This church is having fellowship in several mission meetings this year, and should constitute a worthy example to others along missionary lines."
- J. T. Harris and T. A. Nix assisted the brethren at Charlotte, Tenn., in what proved to be a most interesting and successful meeting. Fourteen precious souls were buried with Christ in baptism, one united from the Methodists and two were restored. Several of those who were baptized had been Methodists for several years, but, learning the way of the Lord more perfectly, they obeyed the gospel. Brother Harris is now at Stayton, Tenn.

From J. M. Dennis, Sulphur Lick, Ky., September 5: "I am here at Philippi, near Sulphur Lick, in a meeting which starts off well. I held two tent meetings in Sumner County, Tenn., in August. Both were well attended, but no additions. I am to begin a meeting at Jones' Chapel, two miles west of Fountain Head, Sumner County, the third Lord's day in this month. The brethren from Portland and neighboring congregations are invited to attend."

The following rote, signed by C. A. Sanders, evangellst, is addressed to "all the readers of the Gospel Advocate:"
"The few brethren near Fish Springs, Carter County, Tenn., now have a house of worship under construction, and are needing help, and they would appreciate financial aid. Will the readers of the Gospel Advocate set apart the fourth Lord's day in September for a special freewill offering for this cause? Send all communications and offerings to W. F. Campbell, Fish Springs, Tenn."

From J. G. Malphurs, Clarksville, Tenn., September 5: "The mission meeting under the tent at Modoc, near here, is eight days old, with overflowing audiences. Eight have been baptized; others almost persuaded. Great preparations for the three-days' debate at Legate, near here, are being made. The discussion is to be between myself and E. H. Greenwell (Missionary Baptist), and will start on Wednesday morning September 21, at ten o'clock. Those who attend from a distance will be taken care of."

From A. L. Dixon, Dellrose, Tenn., September 7: "I am glad to say that this has been one of the busiest years of my work as song leader. I have taught some of the best schools it has ever been my pleasure to teach and have led the song service in three or four very interesting meetings in which there were a number of additions to the one body. I am now engaged in a very successful meeting at Oneonta, Ala., with C. T. Cannon, of Rocky, Okla., doing the preaching. Fourteen precious souls have been born into the family of God."

J. C. Comer, an engineer for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, writes: "I feel so good over it I wish to report a case somewhat like that of Philip and the eunuch. I preached to a large congregation at West Montgomery, Ala., on September 4. A splendid young man and his wife came up and made the good confession, demanding baptism at once. He being a railroad man like myself, and my train leaving at 3 P.M., we turned the water in the pool, went home to dinner, and returned at 1:30 P.M. for the baptism. Then we went to our work rejoicing."

The home is woman's contribution to the world.—George Truett.

The "Old Paths" Number is before you. Give it a careful reading.

We suggest that you preserve the special numbers. You can use them again and again.

Have you sent in that list of trial subscribers? Fifty cents for the remainder of the year.

A. S. Derryberry will preach at Reid Avenue Church, in Nashville, next Sunday, at both services.

Help clothe and feed the orphans by making a liberal contribution on the first Lord's day in October.

C. F. Cannon is now in a meeting at Bankston, Ala. He reports a good meeting at Oneonia, Ala., in which A. I. Dixon led the singing.

Eavid Thompson reports twelve baptisms and five restorations in a meeting at Azotas, in Stewart County, Tenn. He is now at Green Forest, near Poplar Bluff, Mo.

Our readers should bear in mind that the churches are earnestly requested to make a special offering for the Tennessee Orphan Home on the first Lord's day in October.

Flavil Hall, of Trion, Ga., was among our visitors last week. He had closed a meeting for the Petway congregation, near Ashland City, Tenn. Nine were baptized and two responded to the invitation extended to erring Christians.

- T. E. Tatum is engaged in a mission meeting at Malvern, the county seat of Hot Springs County, Ark., a town of five thousand population. There are six members at this place. Brother Tatum would appreciate the fellowship of the brethren at other points.
- H. M. Phillips, of Tuscumbia, Ala., closed a fine meeting at Silver Springs, Tenn. There were nineteen baptisms, one restoration, and one received from the Presbyterians who stated he had been baptized for remission of sins. Brother Phillips is now in a meeting near McEwen, Tenn.
- F. L. Paisley writes from Memphis, Tenn.: "J. L. Holland is being put in condition for an operation. He asks that congregations expecting him for meetings soon cancel present engagements and arrange as best they can. Congregations for which he has so effectively labored should stand by him in these trying days."

From W. M. Oakley, Owens Cross Roads, Ala., September 9: "I am here preaching day and night to large and appreciative audiences under a large tent. I began last Lord's day. There have been eleven baptized since I arrived. I will continue over into next week; then I go to Pond Creek, in Cheatham County, Tenn."

From James E. Laird, Enville, Tenn., September 6: "I closed at Mount Zion, Ark., on September 6, with eight additions. I began at this place last night. Prospects are good here for a good meeting. Enville is about sixteen miles from Henderson. I hope to be present at the opening session of the Freed-Hardeman College."

- W. J. Johnson writes from Amite, La., September 8; "Rejoice with us! Many have become obedient to the faith in this portion of the South, Maston Sitman, of New Orleans, is rendering valuable aid by his personal work. He is fine, and is loved much by the brethren where he goes. Pray for our success in the work of our Lord."
- J. M. Buckley writes: "The meeting at Palmersville, Tenn., began on August 28 and continued until the first Lord's-day night in September. Lewis T. Farrar, of Florence, Ala., did the preaching. Unusually large crowds and intense interest was manifested throughout, resulting in four additions to the one body—two by baptism and two from another congregation."

From Leland H. Knight: "Since leaving Tennessee late in August I have been engaged in the Master's vineyard in the State of Arkansas. On the last Sunday in August I was at Booneville, which has been my home town for many years, and preached there Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night. On Wednesday night we resumed the Biblestudy work, and a very instructive service was enjoyed by all. On the first Lord's day in September I visited the Park Hilf church of Christ, Fort Smith, and preached for them at the morning service. It was a great pleasure to me to meet my brethren once more. They have employed me for as much of my time as will be consistent with my college work.

Appreciations.

- "The Gospel Advocate is just fine. The Texas-Oklahoma Department' is a good move." (L. B. Jones, Athens, Ala.)
- "Your 'Greater Vision' Number is readable, full of thought, and worthy of thorough assimilation." (T. M. Karnes, Trenton, Tenn.)
- "I have read only a few articles in the 'Greater Vision' Number, but that is sufficient to say I am delighted with it." (Charles E. Metcalfe, Lubbock, Texas.)
- "I have just finished reading the 'Greater Vision' Number of the Gospel Advocate. It is worth the whole price of a year's subscription." (Frank Baker.)
- "I think you have the strongest paper among us, and I pray that you will be able to check much of the sinfulness practiced in the church." (Alfred Ellmore, Gunter, Texas.)
- "I am very much pleased with the position I found through your paper. I was elected principal of the Water Valley School, in Maury County, Tenn." (C. H. Harper, Cclumbia, Tenn.)
- "The 'Greater Vision' Number of the Gospel Advocate was excellent. The articles were all so good that I can hardly commend one above the others. Let us pray that the brotherhood may have a greater vision of the work that is before us to do." (Allen Phy, Algood, Tenn.)
- "I have read the paper twenty-one years, and do not want to be without it. One copy is worth the price paid for a whole year. I have two girls twelve years of age who obeyed the gospel this summer, and I want to keep good literature before them. I think the Gospel Advocate is the best paper I know that teaches the word of God 'as it is written.'" (Mrs. J. E. Brady, Cottage Grove, Tenn.)
- "I am much pleased that the Gospel Advocate has opened up to us the 'Texas-Oklahoma Department.' I am also pleased to have C. R. Nichol as the editor over this department. I believe his experience as a gospel preacher and his extended acquaintance over the two States qualify him in a special way for this work. I am your helper in every way I can to make this both interesting and instructive." (A. O. Colley, Dallas, Texas.)
- "I wish to say that the 'Greater Vision' Number of the Gospel Advocate is very fine. We all stand so much in need of 'a greater vision' along all lines of work and worship in the church of the living God. May the day soon come when our vision will be so great in the service of our Heavenly Father and the Christ our Savior that all the 'waste places' will have the gospel preached unto them, and that those who obey the gospel will live, labor, and love just exactly as the Truth of God teaches." (S. E. Templeton, Altus, Okla.)
- To Brother F. W. Smith: "How I wish that I could reach out and give you a hearty handshake and a 'God bless you' for your article in this week's issue of the Gospel Advocate and your recent article in regard to debating. My heart grows sick at all this sweet-spiritedness that is filling the papers and the pulpits. While in Nashville at school, I so well recall your meeting at South College Street; and how I wish for such men to-day to stand boldly and declare the word of truth and expose the doctrines of men! The devil is delighted when he can get those who claim to be Christians to refrain from investigation with error. He well remembers his sore defeat when he tried to debate with the Son of God in the wilderness, and since then has never believed in debating. Is it any wonder, then, that the teachers of false doctrine tell us that they do not believe in debating?" (John Hayes, Bradentown, Fla.)
- "I have enjoyed beyond measure everything in the 'Greater Vision' Number of the Gospel Advocate. It is tiptop from cover to cover. Just how you are to make the next number any better, I am not Yankee enough to guess. The subject you have selected is a good one. We should not only preach and write and pray earnestly for peace and unity to prevail in all the congregations of the saints, but we should be more than anxious to sacrifice our opinions and everything else, except the word of the Lord, to bring these blessings to the church. This, however, does not slighly that I am in sympathy with those brethren who have never learned the difference between a wrangle and a brotherly discussion of some religious topic. An earnest, prayerful investigation of the word of the Lord, with an unfaltering determination to speak where the Lord speaks and to be silent where the Lord is silent, is a sure remedy for much of the strife and division that now disturb the great family of our Father." (J. O. Blaine, Portland, Tenn.)

Preachers, Elders, and Their Work.

BY F. C. SOWELL.

One of the first and important things in a preacher's work is his qualification to be able to accomplish great and lasting good in the vineyard of the Lord.

The Lord qualified the first preachers by giving them the Holy Spirit to guide them into all truth. "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves. But beware of men: for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues; and ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles. But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you." (Matt. 10: 16-20.)

Having the Holy Spirit to guide them in proclaiming the gierious gospel of the Son of God, many souls were brought into the fold and made happy. The prime motive that led these preachers to carry the message to a lost world was to obey God and to win souls to "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." They did not make merchandise of the gospel of Christ. Their love and confidence in Jehovah was too great for that. They believed that when they did the Master's will be would make provisions for them. The Lord will now take care of the preacher who will have the same faith, confidence, and labor of love those preachers had then. A preacher may be a winner of souls to Christ and bear in his heart preacher envy and jealousy and be lost himself. Paul said: "But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." (1 Cor. 9: 27.)

It is improper for a preacher to work hard to make many converts to have a "name" among men. When the preacher has such a motive, he needs a "thorn in the flesh." "For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool: for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me. And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelation, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure." (2 Cor. 12: 6, 7.)

No man has a greater calling than the man who carries the glad tidings to save the souls of poor sinners. After converting sinners to Christ, the preacher should go over the field occasionally and "see how they do."

In order for a preacher to become qualified for his work, he should take the advice Paul gave to Timothy: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2: 15.)

Every preacher should feel the deepest sense of duty to preach the gospel of Christ. This was the spirit of the great apostle Paul. "For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is upon me, if I preach not the gospel! For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me." (1 Cor. 9: 16, 17.) Self must get out of the way and get behind the cross of the crucified Lord. "That no flesh should glory in his presence." "That, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord."

Preachers may do the planting; but we need elders to water the church, and God will give the increase. Paul said: "I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase." (1 Cor. 3: 6.)

The elder must be qualified for his work, as well as the preacher. The qualifications for elders are plainly given in 1 Tim. 3: 1-7; Tit. 1: 6-10. The man who desires these qualifications can have them all; and the Lord means that he should have them, or he would not have given them. And when he desires them, he will qualify himself; and it requires close application and study to be able to feed the flock.

A failure upon the part of the elders is one reason many do not attend the services on the Lord's day-they are not fed. "The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a erown of glory that fadeth not away." (1 Pet. 5: 1-4.) I have fears sometimes when a church employs a preacher to do all the feeding and looking over the flock, the elders will be robbed of their work. We should be careful and not disarrange God's order of doing things. His ways cannot be improved upon.

Paul remained at Ephesus three years, planting the church and developing elders, and at his departure he exhorted them as follows: "Take heed therefore unto rourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." (Acts 20: 28.) When the elder prepares himself and feeds the flock on the good food that will be for the health and prosperity of the church, then there will be a great feast for the members, and they will be glad to go up to the house of God.

In "overseeing" the church, the elders should see to it that every member of the body has something to do; for the Lord never invited an idler into his church. The kingdom is like a man who went out to hire laborers into his vineyard. Indifference, carelessness, and idleness are not recognized as service to God. Every Christian is to be "not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." (Rom. 12: 11.) "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." (Eccles. 9: 10.)

Among the Tombs of the Great.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

I believe that it was Dr. Henry Hunter who said: "Every man who sits down to write, whether of ages past or of the present, of characters near or remote, has a bias upon his mind, and this he naturally endeavors to communicate to his readers." I frankly confess that there is a strong bias upon my mind as I write these lines. However, I trust that it is a pardonable bias.

Recently, while in Louisville, Ky., in a meeting, I found time to make a trip to Lexington, Ky. Brother M. C. Kurfees accompanied me, and through his kindness and familiarity with the scenes of this proud and classic little city my trip was made the more pleasurable and profitable.

The chief purpose of the visit to Lexington was to see the tomb of my grandfather, "Raccoon" John Smith. From my earliest recollection I had heard of his wit and ready repartee, his faith and labor of love in preaching the gospel. This noble man of God was early impressed upon my mind as the highest ideal of true manhood. His name in my father's family was revered; one of my brothers bears his name as a testimony of this reverence and admiration. I cannot say just how much the influence of this great man as a preacher of the primitive gospel has had to do with my humble efforts in publicly proclaiming the gospel as God's power to save, but I am sure that it has had much to do with it. In addition to the weight of responsibility which I have felt that I owed to God, expressed by Paul when he said, "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel," I have also felt some obligation in keeping up the family reputation of preaching. My father, who is very feeble now, has been a preacher of the gospel for nearly fifty years. His labors have been largely among the poor, laboring class of people. I had an uncle who was a Presbyterian preacher, and a cousin is now preaching for the Presbyterians.

The reader must know that a multitude of thoughts, influenced by deep emotions, surged through my mind as I stood, for the first time, at the tomb of John Smith with bared head and reverential heart. As I stood there, I called up in one long review the whole history of the man. I have been very familiar with it from a boy, as it is so interestingly presented in the "Life of Elder John Smith," by John A. Williams, and other family traditions not recorded in that book. There occurred to my mind his own statement, made within a few hours of his death, when he said: "What a great failure, after all, would my long and checkered life have been but for this glorious hope of a hereafter!" Truly, what would any life be worth if not lived in view of eternity? I thought of J. W. McGarvey, Robert Graham, and others who stood on that spot and spoke words of eulogy of the dead and words of encouragement of the living.

A simple shaft of marble about twelve feet high, including the base, marks the resting place of his ashes. I read the impressive epitaph which was inscribed on the shaft. It is as follows: "In memory of John Smith, an elder of the church of Christ. Born, October 15, 1784; died, February 28, 1868. True, genial, and pious, the good loved and all respected him. Strong through affliction and wise by the study of the word, he gave up the creed of his fathers for the sake of that word. By its power he turned many from error, in its light he walked, and in its consolation he triumphantly died." On the same shaft are inscribed the following words in memory of his wife: "In all his sacrifices and service his companion shared, She gave her life to God, and her death was precious in his sight. Nancy Smith was born, November 15, 1792; died, November 4, 1861."

Among the other tombs visited in the Lexington cemetery were those of Robert Milligan, Robert Graham, J. W. McGarvey, I. B. Grubbs, Charles Louis Loos. These were all men of God, with great learning and piety. They were towers of strength for the church, and have made their impress on the hearts of thousands. I doubt if any cemetery can claim the honor of having so great a number of great men for the church as Lexington. Of course, I mean men who were truly great, as God counts greatness. They were great in faith, great in intellectual power, great in labors for God, and triumphant in death.

On this trip I also visited Transylvania University, and had the pleasure of visiting many historic scenes connected with the university. As I stood in the Chapel Hall, I thought of the great men who had championed the claim of the Bible as God's revealed will to man. I stood there and sighed because the present faculty and president were repudiating much of the Bible under the delusive teaching of "the modern viewpoint," or infidelity.

Another interesting point visited while in Lexington was the site of the Reformed Church, where the famous Campbell and Rice debate was held. Possibly no debate has been so consequential as this one. On the morning of November 15, 1843, there assembled "an audience of some two thousand persons" to hear this debate. Henry Clay was chosen as president of the board of moderators. My grandfather, John Smith, with others, were selected by A. Campbell to be present on the part of the Reformation,

GOSPELADVOCATE--FIFTY CENTS

We call attention to the very best offer we have been able to make for several years. We will send the GOSPEL ADVOCATE to new subscribers for the remainder of the year 1921 for the small sum of fifty cents.

This does not pay for the actual cost of production, but we are glad to make the offer that the usefulness of the paper may be extended.

This is a most unusual trial offer, and our readers should take advantage of it to introduce the paper into the homes of their friends. We are depending upon them to help us increase the circulation by several thousand. By all pulling together, we can accomplish much good in the Master's name.

For your convenience we are printing a coupon to be used in sending in the names of new subscribers.

$2.50 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries; $3.06, in advance.

Remittance will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from ear-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

Guarantee of Advertising.

All the advertisements in this paper are, we believe, signed by trustworthy persons. To prove our faith by works, we will make good to actual subscribers any loss sustained in trusting advertisers who prove to be deliberate swindiers. We shall not attempt to adjust triting disputes between subscribers and honorable business men who advertise, nor pay the debts of honest bankrupts. To make this guarantee effective, in all cases say in writing advertisers, "I saw your advertisement in the Gospel Advocate;" and if anything goes wrong, notify us immediately in writing.

Some of God's Oldest Institutions.

BY J. C. M'Q.

It is not my purpose in writing this article to deal with the fundamentals of salvation, such as faith, repentance, and baptism, but to call attention to some of God's oldest institutions pertaining to the practical walks of life, and which are a part and parcel of our lives.

When God had created man, he saw it was not good for him to be alone, so created woman for a helpmeet for him, and ordained marriage and the home for the elevation of society and the happiness of its members. "And the man [Adam] said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh." (Gen. 2: 23, 24.) Christ said: "Have ye not read, that he who made them from the beginning made them male and female, and said, For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife; and the two shall become one flesh? So that they are no more two, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." (Matt. 19: 4-6.) God made one woman for one man and ordained that he should cleave to her. Anything which tends to destroy the marriage relation and break up the home is vicious and should not be tolerated. The most effective way to destroy the church, society, and the State is to pull down the home. As the church is the salt of the earth, so the family is the salt of the church. If we would return to the good old days, we must build anew our homes. Fathers, mothers, and children must live at home. Children should gather around the family hearthstone and spend an enjoyable evening with parents and spend some time in reading the Bible and good books. When the home is gone, our civilization is gone. There is no better way to propagate Bolsh> vism than to neglect and ignore the home, God's oldest in-

How different now from the long ago! Children live in picture shows and in automobiles, and fathers and mothers attend some club in the evenings; so that children are not very well acquainted with their parents. A father once said to me that he had to take a trip with his daughter in order to know her and her real worth. I would encourage our people to live more at home. Do not destroy the sanctity of the marriage relation and the purity of the home. I am pleading for our homes because their destruction means the failure of our people and of our nation. The neglect of our homes is neither conducive of good morals nor of happiness.

Our people should read the Scriptures more. A man must know the truth before he can love and obey it. It would be well for every one to carry a small Testament in his pocket. The Bereans were commended because they read the Scriptures daily. "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, examining the scriptures daily, whether these things were so." (Acts 17: 11.) We need an era of Bible reading. Many people are ignorant of the contents of the Bible. Moses commanded the Jews to keep the statutes and precepts of the Lord in their hearts: "And thou shalt love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might. And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be upon thy heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thy hand, and they shall be for frontlets between thine eyes. And thou shalt write them upon the doorposts of thy house, and upon thy gates." (Deut. 6: 5-9.) We cannot bring up our children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" without teaching them the Bible. We owe it to them to teach them the truth. They may not wish to read the Bible, but we are under obligations to see that they do. In most modern families there is so much irreverence and restlessness that the whole family scarcely comes to the table together so that the father can offer thanks for the meal with all present. It is dangerous for children to be disrespectful to God. "Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right. Honor thy father and mother (which is the first commandment with promise), that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth." (Eph. 6: 1-3.) A great shortcoming is that children lead their parents instead of their parents leading them. Recently I heard a mother tell her child to go back into the house. The child did not. The mother then told it she would wait only five minutes. She waited nearly thirty minutes, and then let him go to town with her. She taught her child to place a low estimate on her word. It is right for parents to command their children after them, as did Abraham.

Christians should pray more. We are admonished: "Pray without ceasing." (1 Thess. 5: 17.) Family altars should be erected in the homes. If we have no family altar, it is good evidence that we are not in close touch with God. We need the consecration that comes from praying. If we would be saved in heaven, we must live in close communion with God. Preachers should go back to the "old paths" and "preach the word." They should boldly and fearlessly declare "all the counsel of God."

How to Remain in the "Old Paths." BY M. C. K.

The tendency to depart from the Lord's ways has marked the history of man's conduct from the very earliest period of which we have any record of God's dealings with man. Even in the days of the ancient prophets this tendency was pronounced and prominent, as may be seen from this note of information from the prophet Jeremiah: "Thus saith Jebovah, Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way; and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls: but they said, We will not walk therein." (Jer. 6: 16.)

That was Jehovah's solemn call upon man in that ancient period to return to "the old paths," and I quote it here at the very beginning of this article because it contains the great principle to which I now call attention and to which I wish to give special emphasis in this "Old Paths" Number of the Gospel Advocate. There need be no dispute as to what "the old paths" are and where they may be found. Among the multifarious and conflicting ways that lead in different directions in this world, they are the paths blazed out by Jehovah himself in the words of his own inspired servants. In the ancient period these paths were indicated by the words of inspired prophets such as Jeremiah and others who were true to the word of the Lord. In the modern period they are indicated by the word of the Son of God, through whom God now speaks, or the combined words of prophets and apostles whom he called and inspired to speak for him.

Moreover, not only has Jehovah made it plain where and what "the old paths" are, but he has made it equally plain how it is that men depart from them. On this very point, speaking of the reckless and wayward course of his own people, he said: "They have been made to stumble in their ways, in the ancient paths, to walk in by paths." (Jer. 18: 15.) There we have it in a nutshell. They left the paths of Jehovah and walked in "by paths." That is, they listened to the deceitful voice of men and followed their words instead of maintaining fidelity to the word of Jehovah exclusively. This has been the danger line in all the ages, and it is the danger line to-day. Men grow weary and discontented with the simple way of the Lord; and, like "all the Athenians and the strangers sojourning" in Athens (Acts 17: 21), they are ever looking out for "some new thing." In modern times they do this under the guise of "keeping abreast of the times." They often overlook the fact that the only right way to keep abreast of the times is to hold up the way of Jehovah, whenever and wherever we have an opportunity, as the only way in which men should walk.

There have been different efforts at religious reformation put forth at different times since the first great apostasy from the simple pathway of apostolic teaching and practice. According to the history of all such efforts, they proceed on right lines for a while until reactionary influences start them, if not in the opposite direction, at least in some direction away from the simple principle on which they inaugurated their reformatory efforts. Nearly all the religious denominations in existence to-day started in some such reformatory effort. That grand and glorious effort along this line a little more than one hundred years ago is no exception to the rule. How inspiring is the chapter that tells of the efforts of Thomas and Alexander Campbell and the great multitude of noble men and women of all denominations who rallied with them to the clarion call for a return to the primitive order of things-a return to "the old paths;" and yet how sad and disheartening is that other chapter that tells of the radical and swift departure of their successors from the position originally assumed! Long before the movement was a century old it resulted in adding another denomination to the long list instead of remaining true to the principles which would have destroyed all denominations and all denominationalism itself. Their departure from the independence of the local church, so clearly taught in the New Testament, but Ignored by the very principle of denominational organization, and their departure from the simple worship of the New Testament churches to the pompous worship more or less recognized in all denominations, constitute two of the most radical apostasies recorded in ecclesiastical history, and the end is not yet!

But how must churches proceed so as to be certain to remain in "the old paths?" An inspired apostle answers the question definitely and tells exactly how they must proceed: "If any man speaketh, speaking as it were oracles of God." (1 Pet. 4; 11.) The reformers of a hundred years ago chose to express the same thought in these words: "Where the Scriptures speak, we speak; and where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent." In substance, these two statements mean the same thing. Any man who "speaks oracles of God" whenever he speaks, nothing more and nothing less, will always "speak where the Scriptures speak, and be silent where the Scriptures are silent;" and churches which remain true to this principle will always remain in "the old paths." But great numbers of the successors of the reformers of a hundred years ago ridicule this idea now and readily conform to the very denominational practices which their illustrious predecessors so strongly condemned. Well may we exclaim in the words of David's immortal dirge over Saul and Jonathan: "How are the mighty fallen!"

Finally, while the present times, considering the condition of the people in general, may not be as ripe for it, yet there is as great a demand for this trumpet call to return to "the old paths" to-day as there was when Thomas Campbell made his immortal "Declaration and Address." Why not sound it anew all along the line? Let the preachers everywhere wake up to the solemn demands of the hour. Let them preach "Christ, and him crucified" for a lost world, with the same vigor and freshness with which the newly converted Saul of Tarsus proclaimed it in the city of Damascus and throughout the remainder of his life. And let them call upon the religious people of every name and creed to return to "the old paths," and thus let the tide of reformation and restoration set in again.

Simply Take God at His Word.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

With the request to contribute to the "Old Paths" Number of the Gospel Advocate comes the request to go back to "ye olden times" and make the contribution concise and brist

This reminds me of the thesis of a wise young medical student. One of the professors had assigned to the class of which he was a member "Microbes" as the subject of a thesis from each member of the class, offering a prize for the best paper on the subject, and advising his students to go back as far as possible in their research and be as brief as possible. This wise young student was the last to read his thesis in the presence of the class; and the class-probably the professor also-having listened to various and varied thoughts on the subject assigned, looked with anxlous interest at the big roll of paper in his hand as he rose to read the result of his research relative to "Microbes." He slowly unrolled the paper, looked at it thoughtfully, and then read: "Adam had 'em." That was all. Just simply "Adam had 'em." It is needless to say he won the prize, for Adam had 'em.

Though requested to go back as far as possible and be as brief as possible, I cannot go back that far or be that brief. I can do as the countryman and his oxen did, however. This countryman, driving his yoke of oxen, saw, when he reached the city limit, the following notice conspicuously displayed: "Speed Limit Twelve Miles an Hour." He read

It very carefully and thoughtfully, and then said to his patient oxen: "Well, boys, I don't believe we can make It, but we'll do the best we can." Then he popped his whip, and they went through the town in a trot.

So I may not go back as far as some, and may not be as brief as others, but I'll do the best I can.

Some of the old paths are somewhat dim, a natural result of disuse, and some of the new paths are unquestionably questionable; but, as more than half a century has come and gone, I have persistently and hopefully exhorted saints and sinners to just simply take God at his word—that is, believe what he says, do what he commands, become and be what he requires, live as he directs, and trust him for what he promises.

That advice embraces, commends, and recommends all the scripturally authorized old paths, if I understand the subject, while condemning and excluding all the questionable paths, both new and old.

Long ago I formed the habit of sometimes talking to my audiences somewhat after the following fashion: "If you cannot conscientiously and consistently cooperate with me in my work and sincerely wish me to succeed, it must be because of one of two things—you think I either teach something I should not teach or do not teach something I should not teach or do not teach something I should teach. If the former, tell me what it is, and I will either cease to teach it or make it perfectly plain to you that it is my duty to teach it. If the latter, tell me what it is and prove to me by the Bible that Divinity even permits me to teach it, and I'll teach it all the remnant of my days."

David says: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." (Ps. 119: 105.) And John says: "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John 1: 7.)

Let us, therefore, walk according to his word. Then, cleansed from all sin, we shall ever be walking in the old paths.

The Dedication of Children.

"A very unusual ceremony at a gathering of Disciples was that of the dedication of three children at one of the sessions of the Great Falls Convention. The adherents of the Restoration Movement understand the place of baptism in Christian teaching, and always refuse to baptize To their minds, such a ceremony of dedication has nothing to do with baptism. It is done, not as an ordinance of the church, nor as a requirement of the Scriptures, but as a simple act of consecration. child Jesus was presented to the Lord in the temple at (Luke 2: 22.) But with us to-day the dedication of children is altogether a matter of expediency, just as the dedication of a church building. who from the beginning have dedicated church buildings, which is not a scriptural requirement, can scarcely do less for the little children who are intrusted to their care and (Christian Worker, training for the kingdom of God." Beseman, Mont.)

The Christian Worker is an exponent of that religious body of people who call themselves "Disciples of Christ," or the "Christian Church," and pride themselves as having within the pale of their membership men who are "higher critics." Among the things which make them distasteful to people who believe the Bible is, their "higher criticism" is of the destructive nature.

To those who have been keeping in touch with their departures from the teaching of the Bible there will be no surprise evinced by the fact that they now "dedicate children"—infants. For some time they have advocated and received into their fellowship people who have not been baptized; and if, indeed, they "understand the place of baptism in Christian teaching," they evidently do not understand what it takes to constitute baptism, for into their fellowship they receive those who have had only a small portion of water sprinkled on them.

It is a matter of regret that the editor of the Christian Worker did not give the method of procedure, in whose name, by what authority, and what the relationship of the children "dedicated" to the church, or to Jehovah, after the "dedication."

The most admirable thing in the article is the frankness of the Christian Worker in admitting that the "dedication of" infants is not required by the Scriptures; that there is neither command nor precedent for such ceremony; but—but—well, why not practice it if it pleases them? What care they for scriptural authority or apostolic example?

The very organization assembled at which the "dedication" was had is unscriptural. A convention of any name or character, any organization larger than a local congregation of Christians, which proposes to do or direct the work of the church, is unwarranted—is unscriptural.

Commenting on "dedicating" infants, the Christian Standard says:

The church-dedication argument falls of its own weight. True, we dedicate church buildings, and true it is that this practice is not a scriptural requirement. However, the practice of dedicating church buildings is not a disturbing factor among us—it is not an issue that divided; it, at least, does no harm.

The Christian Worker editor admits that Infant dedication is not a scriptural requirement; he knows that it is an issue which, if encouraged, will further divide brotherhood sentiment and thus do incalculable harm; yet he hopes to see the practice spread throughout Montana. Like "open membership." Infant dedication is something in which but few will become interested to the extent of practicing it; nevertheless, a few of the "adequate leaders" are determined to make it a divisive issue among us. And, surprising as it is, the "adequate leaders" are crying aloud the falsehood: "The conservative brethren are splitting the brotherhood."

In what is called the great "progressive" movement of the Disciples of Christ, the Christian Standard is pleased to speak of those who are allied with it as "conservative." They are opposed to the destructive "higher criticism." "open membership," "delegate convention," and a number of other of what they think to be radical departures from the Bible.

A few years ago—yea, even now, when those in line with the Standard find it impossible, they insist that an organ be placed in the churches where they are not now used. True, such causes division; true, also, to do such is not a "scriptural requirement;" but—but—well, it makes a wonderful difference, of course. The Standard is in favor of the organ and the societies, but neither of them is a scriptural requirement; and the Standard is opposed to "infant dedication," which rests on the same ground as the instrumental music in the church.

The Standard opposes the "infant dedication" and "open membership" on the ground that such things are not scriptural requirements and divide churches, and then laments the fact that those who practice such things accuse them of dividing churches by their opposition to the unscriptural practices.

Too, when brethren this day oppose the introduction into the church of instrumental music, human societies, things not required by the Scriptures, things the Standard contends for, we are accused of "splitting the brotherhood."

Would it not be refreshing to see an article from the Standard in which there is an effort to apply the same logic to the instrumental-music question that it does to the "infant-dedication" question?

"Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that which he alloweth." (Rom. 14: 22.)

The Holy Spirit and the Blood of Christ.

BY JOHN M. RICE.

The Holy Spirit is a teacher and a leader, but he is not the Savior. No one can be saved unless he is taught and led in every step he takes by the Holy Spirit. It is the Holy Spirit that teaches and leads us to Jesus, the Savior of the world. The Holy Spirit teaches and leads us through the word of God.

God spoke to the fathers by the prophets (Neh. 9: 30); to the people of Nineveh, through Jonah (Jonah 3); to the Jews, through John the Baptist (Matt. 3; Mark 1); to the three thousand on Pentecost, through Peter (Acts 2); to the people of Samaria and to the treasurer from Ethiopia, through Philip (Acts 8); to Cornelius, through Peter Acts 10, 11); to Lydia, the jailer, the people of Corinth, and the Ephesians, through Paul (Acts 16-19). These people were taught and led by the Spirit through the word of God. (See 1 Cor. 1: 21; 15: 1-14; Rom. 1: 16; Eph. 1: 13; 3: 6.)

Though they were led by the Spirit, where did they reach the remission of sins? They reached remission of sins in the blood of Christ. (Matt. 26: 28.) "Without shedding of blood is no remission." (Heb. 9: 22.) We must wash our robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb. (Rev. 7: 13, 14.) We are cleansed from all sin by the blood of Jesus. (Rev. 1: 7; 1 John 1: 7.)

People who pray for the baptism in the Holy Spirit to come and burn up the sin, or cleanse them from sin, are either ignorant of what the Bible teaches or do not believe what the Bible says.

How does the Holy Spirit teach or lead us into the blood of Christ? The answer to this question is found in the teaching of the New Testament. Therein it is taught: "If any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature" (2 Cor. 5; 17); that we are led into Christ by the gospel (Eph. 3: 6); that redemption is in Christ (Eph. 1: 7).

Those who come to God must believe. (Heb. 11: 6.) It is not only true that, to come, you must be a believer, but it is also true that those in Christ were baptized into him. (Gal. 3: 27; Rom. 6: 3.)

The blood of Christ cleanses from sin (1 John 1: 7); this blood was shed in the death of Jesus (John 19: 33, 34); and we are baptized into his death (Rom. 6: 3), where we come in contact with the blood which cleanses. In doing what the Spirit says we are led by the Spirit into the remission of sins.

The Orphan's Home at Canadian, Texas.

We desire to make a few definite and positive statements concerning the Orphans' Home located in Canadian, Texas:

- 1. This Home was started because the conditions in this and adjoining States required it. It is not now, nor has it ever been, a rival of any other Home.
- 2. The unparalleled success of this Home from its very start is proof sufficient that it was and is one of the needs of the church.
- 3. There are now nineteen children in the Home, and there are fifteen other children asking admission. We have laid the foundation for a Home that will care for at least one thousand children.
- 4. This great success can be attained only by the full and hearty cooperation of the faithful people of God throughout this region of country. To that end we most earnestly ask the continuous and generous support of the faithful disciples everywhere.
- 5. This Home is now and shall always be under the control of the church of Christ in Canadian. We assure our brethren that we are behind this Home with all our hearts and souls and mind and strength. As we love God, we love this work.

We stand behind Brother Swinney in every act and word of his in connection with this Home and give him our unqualified indorsement.

What Jacob Saw in His Vision.

BY J. B. NELSON.

In the twenty-eighth chapter of Genesis we have an account of what Jacob saw in the vision that he had while on his way to Padan-aram to get his wife. While on his way for his wife, night came upon him, and he pillowed his head upon some stones to go to sleep. He was soon in dreamland. In his dream he saw a ladder that reached from earth to heaven, and angels of God ascending and descending upon it. The Lord God stood at the top of the ladder, and Jacob heard him say: "The land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed: . . . and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." When Jacob awoke out of sleep, he was afraid, and said: "How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven."

In this dream or vision Jacob saw the house of God (the church of God), and all the families of the earth being blessed in it, and that it was the gate that opens into heaven. Paul tells us that the house of God is the church of God. (1 Tim. 3: 15.) In other words, Jacob was shown the church of God, and the church is the gate that opens up into heaven. We can now appreciate the statement of the prophet Isaiah when, speaking of the kingdom that was to be established in Jerusalem in the last days, he refers to it as "the house of the God of Jacob." (Isa. 2: 3.) Jacob's God had shown him this house, and that is why Isaiah calls it "the house of the God of Jacob." Abraham looked for this city which hath foundations, but died before it was built.

No wonder that Peter said that an abundant entrance would be from the church to the everlasting kingdom. Peter wrote to the church, the house of God. (1 Pet. 4: 17.) The man that is not a member of the church of Christ has no open gate to heaven.

The Outlook in Texas.

BY LEE P. MANSFIELD.

I have just passed the fiftieth milestone on life's road, and thirty-one of those years have been spent preaching the gospel of Christ. Thirty years have been spent in Texas. When I think of the cause of Christ thirty years ago and compare it with the present, I "thank God and take courage," Then the innovators had discouraged the loyal ones so they were not doing much. Besides, the sects decided to debate us out of Texas. When I first came to the State, I felt like Elijah when he said: "Lord, they have dug down thine altars and killed thy prophets, and I alone am left." But I found more than seven thousand loyal, faithful Christians. Now we are filling the land with the doctrine of Christ. You seldom go to a congregation now where they are not making some effort to teach the young and old in a good Bible school. It is true we have a few-very fewwho are fighting Bible study on Lord's day, but about all they do is to stimulate us to greater things. Brethren in Texas are making greater efforts to teach others and inform themselves. I see the Gospel Advocate in more homes than I use to. Our Christian schools are full each year. Many of the congregations are keeping a preacher busy all the year. They are doing much evangelistic work and many people are hearing the truth that never heard before. The field is large, the harvest is ripe, and there is much to do; but the outlook is bright in the Lone Star State.

To Parents of Oklahoma and Elsewhere.

As the time for the opening of the Oklahoma State University is at hand, many parents will be sending their children to Norman for school purposes. If I had my way about it, every child of the land would be attending a Christian college. That is the safest place for the children, especially those who are just entering university life. Let all parents, who are sending their boys and girls to Oklahoma University write me the names of their children and their Norman address, that I may get in touch with them. I want to look them up, get acquainted with them, and help them in whatever way I can, especially in a religious way. Be sure that you cooperate with me in this. It may be vital to the welfare of your child. My telephone is 508-J; P. O. Box 507. If you visit Norman during the school year to see your children, make me a visit also.

A Correction.

BY J. W. CHISM.

In my article in the "Texas-Oklahoma Department" of the Gospel Advocate of August 25 I notice a glaring mistake, making complete nonsense in the concluding part of it. It reads: "But do you say that Peter said it was a covenant in Acts 3: 25? Beg pardon, but the Greek word is 'diatheekee,' 3 pers. sing. aor. 2, indicative Mid. of 'diatithemai,' and means 'to arange, etc.'" I do not know whether I or the printer made the mistake. However, it is a mistake. But to get it right I will put it another way. Peter said: "Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the [diatheekee] covenant which God [dietheto] made with our fathers, saying, etc." Now, the word "dietheto" was the word I had in mind, and is, as stated above, the third person, singular, aor. 2, indicative Mid. of "diatithemal," and it means to "arrange, to pledge," etc. Hence, not the covenant "made with our fathers," as in King James Version. But thus: "Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant [diatheekee] which God pledged [dietheto] to our fathers, saying unto Abraham, and in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed." The point I intended to make was, God did not make the covenant with Abraham, but pledged it to him, and that this pledge was "fulfilled to us their children" in Christ, and that this promise (Gen. 12: 23), pledged with an oath (Gen. 22), became a covenant in Christ.

Personal Notes.

Harvey Scott baptized forty-five in a meeting at Stokes,

Lee P. Mansfield, in a meeting two miles south of Anson, Texas, baptized thirty-two. Five restorations.

 \overline{J} esse T. Lashlee reports a good start in the meeting at Pratt, Mo.

Liff Sanders closed at Silverton, Texas, with four baptized. He will continue another year with the church in Lockney, Texas.

J. I. Reagan baptized fourteen in a meeting at Blanco, Texas. Eight were reclaimed. He will be with them again next year.

W. G. Black closed an eight-days' meeting at Sparenberg, Texas, in which ten persons were baptized. Twenty-one members agreed to meet every Lord's day for worship.

W. P. Skaggs baptized five in the meeting at Marysville, Texas. Small congregation there, and they need a house. Can you assist them? Send contributions to J. W. Reypolds

Lee Starnes, of Bluff City, Ark., preached two inspiring sermons at the church of Christ in Texarkana, Ark. Texas, on Sunday, September 4, which were greatly enjoyed by all present.

J. A. Hudson reports five additions to the Tenth Street and Francis Avenue congregation, in Oklahoma City, Okla. This congregation is meeting in a new house of worship which has a seating capacity of six hundred.

W. T. Kidwill closed an interesting meeting a few miles from Granbury, Texas, with six baptisms and one restoration. This meeting was in a school building where only two families have been meeting for the regular worship.

The meeting at Lisbon, Texas, under the auspices of the Pearl and Bryan Streets church of Christ, Dallas, Texas, resulted in two baptisms. Interest intense. There were four additions to the Pearl and Bryan congregation last Sunday.

Joe W. White, with the church at Diamond Hill, suburb of Fort Worth, Texas, baptized thirteen, and there were nine other additions to the congregation. Brother White announces that he will work with this congregation the coming year.

E. S. Fitzgerald's meeting at Goldthwaite, Texas, was a success. Large crowds heard the pure gospel of Christ day and night. Thirteen were baptized, four were restored, and the congregation was much encouraged. He will be with them in a meeting next year, the first half of June. He is now in a meeting at Redford, Texas.

them in a meeting next year, the first half of June. He is now in a meeting at Bedford, Texas.

From J. W. Ballard, Geary, Okla., September 7: "The meeting at Flomot, Texas, closed with one young woman obeying her Savior. No additions in the meeting at Gascline, Texas, but a fine hearing and the church edified. I am now in a meeting at Eden View Church, near Geary, with two additions to date. I go next Colorado, and thence to Fresno, Cal., for October, November, and December."

From F. S. Vance, Montague, Texas, September 9: "I am now in a good meeting at this place, with two baptisms to date and one by membership. Large crowds, good attention, and much interest. This is my second meeting at this place, and our crowds are a great deal larger this year than they were last year. I have done the preaching in six meetings this year, have one more yet to preach in, and then I will do the preaching in a meeting that the forces at home are going to hold, beginning on the second Lord's day in October. The Lord has blessed my labors very much this year in the way of making believers in Christ by the power of his word. About half of my meetings have been with weak congregations and the other half at mission points."

AT THIS SEASON LOSS OF APPETITE

Is very common. In many cases it is due to impure blood, which cannot give the digestive organs the stimulus necessary for the proper performance of their functions.

Notes From West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

Our meeting at Bethel closed last Sunday night (September 4) after continuing for one week. This was the hardest meeting to hold I ever tried. I had to work with all my power to keep it from dying on my hands. Last year at Bethel was our greatest meeting for the year, with thirty-seven baptized and many restored; but from some cause the congregation began a rapid decline in the close of the meeting and has not checked yet.

When leading members of the church begin to talk against the success of the meeting beforehand, the poor preacher will have a job on his hands when he begins. Such was the case at Bethel, and such is the ease at another place where I am under promise to hold a meeting. But the preacher must be urgent "out of season" as well as "in season," One great hindrance to the spread of the gospel is the entangling alliance with the things of this world-financially, fraternally, and otherwise. Unequally yoked, unequally allied; placed in such condition as to be afraid to speak out what they believe for fear of loss of trade or criticism from some fraternal alliances. Some old members are influenced by their children and go with them instead of the Lord. "He that is not for me is against me." And when we see so many not for him, it is sad. The reason the gospel does not appeal to the people to-day is because the lives of church members do not appeal to the people. This is also sad indeed. Athleties, picture shows, bobbed hair, short dresses and short hose, bathing and auto riding seem to be the rage. Some women who claim to be followers of Christ appear in public so ridiculously clad-yea, so shamefully clad-as to bring a blush to the cheek of decent people. If a preacher condemns these things, some other preacher is ready to say he is a devil. I am told that these conditions are not so bad in the country as they are in the cities; if so, I am truly glad I do not live in a city.

Brethren, the fight is on. Who will stand by their guns, or will desert to the foe? The Lord is watching over the fight, and he well knows who are for him and who are against him. Where do you stand? Where do I stand?

I will begin a meeting at Cloverdale on the second Sunday in September.

The Work in Sedalia, Mo.

BY E. P. WATSON.

It was my pleasure last year to hold two meetings at Sedalla, Mo. During these meetings I became acquainted with the field and the brethren. Sedalia is a city of about thirty thousand, in the center of a large territory well adapted for farming and stock raising; but better still. I believe, it is a field ready for the harvest, if the truth was only sown. Sedalia is so situated that it could be the center of a large mission work. I believe that we are missing a splendid opportunity when we neglect this open door. If we can once get the cause firmly established in this splendid city, then we can easily send it into the surrounding country. This is the home of Brother S. W. Bell, and I know of no preacher that is making a greater sacrifice or working harder to build up the cause. The untiring efforts of Brother Bell and his faithful wife are worthy of better support than they are getting. There is no support from the work there in the city, and Brother Bell works at the railroad shops to make a living and to support himself and family while he preaches the gospel at nights and on Sundays. I notice in Brother Bell's report that he had to borrow the money to help support a young preacher he had helping in the work. This not only means the borrowing of the money, but those who know Brother Bell know that he has put every dollar he could possibly spare into the work. Furthermore, it means that he and his family have done without, sacrificed, and denied themselves to do this. Brethren, these things ought not to be. The Dickson church has given fifty dollars. Now let some others help Brother Bell by sending a check to him at 1824 South Barrett Avenue.

O, turn me, mold me, mellow me for use!

Pervade my being with Thy vital force, That this else inexpressive life of mine May become eloquent and full of power, Impregnated with life and strength Divine. —Horatius Bonar.

FIELD REPORTS

Beacon, Tenn., September 4.—We closed the meeting on Crooked Creek on September 2, with six baptized and two restored. I am at home now, preaching to large and attentive crowds.—C. N. Hudson.

Fosterville, Tenn., September 6.—I held a six-days' meeting at Theta, with fine crowds and good interest, but no additions. I went from there to Tottys and began preaching on Lord's day and continued until the following Thursday night, with seven additions. This meeting had to close too soon.
I am now at Fosterville in a meeting which starts off well .- E. L. Cambron.

Buncombe, Ill., September 5.—I closed a fourteen-days' meeting at Walnut Grove, in Union County, Ky., on September 1, with six baptisms. In my meeting near Trenton, Tenn. I baptized five young ladies. I am in a meeting here two days old. We are holding the meeting in a garage with holding the meeting in a garage with no roof on it. Large crowds and good interest. This is a mission point. I will stay ten days.-Joe Ratcliffe.

Alma, Ark., September 5.-Brother Bert Hamm, of Ozark, Ark., has just closed a most interesting meeting at Dean Springs, on Route 5, with thirty additions. Twenty were baptized, five were restored, and five came from the denominations who had received scriptural baptism. A building will be erected immediately for this promisband of worshipers. Hamm, though young in the work, proclaims the word "as it is written." S. W. Warfield.

Mount Pleasant, Tenn., September 6.—1 began here last Sunday. At night the crowds are more than the house will seat. One confession to date. I closed at Gladewater, Texas, on September 1, with nineteen addi-tions—fifteen baptisms. The meeting hefore that, at Whitewright, Texas, resulted in thirty-nine additions—thirty-three baptisms. The one before Whitewright, at Celeste, Texas, resulted in twenty-one additions—nine-teen baptisms.—G. A. Dunn.

Memphis, Tenn., September 6.—1 closed a meeting at Rogers' Chapel, near Piggott, Ark., on Sunday night, with a full house and many outside. Three were baptized. DODSON WOULD STOP SALE OF CALOMEL Says Calomel is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place. "Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harm-a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no billousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't grine or cause inconvenience all stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

Algood, Tenn., September 6.—Last Sunday night I closed a meeting of eight-days' duration at Hebbertsburg, in Cumberland County. We had good attendance, and the attention was good at all services. Much interest was manifested. Three were baptized. This was my second meeting there. Cumberland is a large county, with only two congregations worshiping "as it is written," so far as I was able to find. There are whole counties in East Tennessee where the true gospel has never been preached. Surely it is time for us to wake up. The Mace-donian call is ringing from so many places, but, sad to say, in many instances it is going unheeded. I am to begin a meeting next Sunday at Tyree's Chapel, in Simpson County. Ky.-Allen Phy.

Haleyville, Ala., September 4.— Brother Charley Nichols, of Parrish, Ala., and I closed an eight-days' meeting at Double Springs, in Winston County, on August 21. The interest was good. Only one baptism. The meeting was held in the courthouse, We had large crowds, especially at night. This is a mission point. 1 am planning to return there and, if possible, establish a congregation. There are only two churches of Christ in Winston County. There are hundreds of people in this county who have not heard the gospel of Christ. I am doing mission work, and my finances are limited. Those that would like to support this work may send their contributions to me or to the elders of the church of Christ at Haleyville, Ala .- Tim Walker.

Columbia, Tenn., September 5 .-Last Lord's-day morning I closed my fourth annual meeting at Isom Church, in Maury County, Tenn. To my mind, this was our best meeting at that place and one of the best meetings of my life. The weather was fine, health in the community was good, crowds large, and the interest as fine as I ever saw. We had eleven additions to the congregation-eight baptized and three restored to their 'first love." The brethren at Isom know how to serve the Lord. Lord willing, I shall return next year for another meeting. I came on Sun-day night to South Point Church, near day night to South round We Columbia, and began a meeting. We have had four additions so far. I go to Arkland, Tenn., for my next meeting, -I. A. Douthitt.

Livingston, Tenn., Route 1, August 30.—1 closed a meeting at Big Bottom last Lord's day, after eight days' duration, with six additions-five baptized and one reclaimed. This was one of the most enjoyable meetings of my life. Our little house was filled at every service both day and night. Brethren Henry Hail and Marion Harris assisted much in this meeting. I went from Big Bottom to Stone to begin their meeting, and preached three discourses. This meeting was set four months ago. Some two or three wanted to put it off, and the rest of the people wanted to have the meeting; so we preached a while and put it off a while. One was restored. All church members should read Brother J. D. Tant's article in the Gospel Advocate of August 25.—Willie Hunter.

Ashland City, Tenn., September 1.—On July 23 I joined Brother George W. Sharpe in a meeting at Brown's Creek, Ky., which continued nine days. Three were baptized and much prejudice was removed. Brother Sharpe has been working there and had baptized several before; so we left them rejoicing and meeting regularly. I went from there to Shinar, about five miles west of Rockhold, and preached for two weeks, but the church was far more interested in the county election than in the meeting. During the second week the Baptists started up a great revival on one side and the "Holy Rollers" on the other. I will begin a meeting at Greenbrier, near Ashland City, on Saturday night, September 3, and at Sycamore on September 17, the Lord willing.—B. W. Davis.

Columbia, Tenn., September 6.—Our meeting at South Harpeth, in Davidson County, Tenn., was one over which we could and did rejoice greatly. people came to the meetings like they were hungering and thirsting for righteousness. This gave inspiration to the preacher, and much life was manifest in every service. The meet-ing continued ten days, and large crowds attended every service. Ten persons were baptized into the Lord. The sick in the neighborhood were visited and everybody "had a mind to work." The church was left with a good feeling to mankind and a determination to serve God better. I have been going to South Harpeth thirtyfive years annually in May, and in the meantime holding a number of meetings, but this was one of the best we have ever had in the way of labor and love. May the Lord bless the church there in its good work .- F. C. Sowell.

Nashville, Tenn., September 7.—1 began my protracted-meeting work on the first Sunday in July, My first meeting was at Mars' Valley, in Wayne County, Tenn. I held four meetings in Wayne and Lawrence counties. One of these meetings closed too soon, which was demonstrated by my being called back to the place. I went back and preached a few sermons, which resulted in ten more additions. I held one meeting in my home county (Lewis), near Hohenwald. I did my first preaching at this place and have gone there every year since, with the exception of the time I was in the West. My last two meetings were in Maury County— one at Spencer Hill and the other at Sandy Hook. They were very suc-cessful. We had fourteen additions of Spencer Hill and eight at Sandy at Spencer Hill and eight at Sandy Hook. I promised to go back to both places next year. My next meeting is at Little Mountain, near Winchester. -S. M. Spears.

Fresno, Cal., August 31.—The work continues to move along nicely at the Nevada Avenue Church. As many who have been away on vacation have returned and two or three families have moved into our midst, our crowds were larger last Sunday than usual. We will resume our Sundaynight services again next Sunday revening. During the hot weather in July and August we dispensed with our evening services. It was my pleasure to attend the camp meeting at Santa Rosa two days last week and to preach on Thursday and Friday evenings. Brother G. W. Riggs, of Los Angeles, was in charge of the meeting and did most of the preaching. The meeting closed on Sunday night, after continuing for two weeks. The crowds and interest were good throughout the meeting and good was accomplished. I certainly enjoyed meeting the good people of Santa Rosa, Graton, and Forestville again.—W. Halliday Trice.

Melber, Ky., September 3.—I have just returned from Casey County, Ky., where I spent the month of August in meetings. My first meeting was at Poplar Hill. This was my third summer with the brethren there. Four were baptized and several were restored. Among those who confessed their sins were six brethren who had been out of duty for twelve or fifteen years. The church there is in much better condition than it has been in for some time. My next meeting was at Mintonville. This is a very old congregation and is badly run down, but there are still a few there who desire to worship God after the New Testament plan. We were hindered much the first week by rain, but we had a good meeting. Ten girls were buried with their Lord in baptism. The Lord willing, I shall conduct a meeting at both of the places again next year. I am now making ready to enter the University of Chattanooga. My address while there will be 4707 Florida Avenue, St. Elmo, Tenn.—L. E. Pryor.

Union, S. C., September 5.—The meeting here is one week old. Three confessions last night. The most satisfactory audiences that have greeted us in Union have been coming the past week. It was necessary for us to add thirty more chairs, and they have been used almost every night. We are hoping for much fruit as a result of the sowing. We rejoice to announce that our debt is paid and that we have about forty dollars toward the finishing of our house. Winter is coming, and we are anxious to have a place sufficient by that time. I am fully persuaded that if the brotherhood could see with eyes trained at looking upon needy fields, they would Immediately send that which is lacking. The people are hungry for the gospel, and in its absence are content to fill up on the husks and other refuse such as ought not to be taught. Many of them, with such encouragement as comes only through the church, would make bright and shining stars in the kingdom above. The work is fine.-G. F. Gibbs.

Imboden, Ark., September 3.closed a meeting at Sneed, near Alicia, on Thursday night, after running over two Lord's days. It was one of the best meetings of my life. I have never seen as large audiences at that place. Brethren from many points visited the meeting and helped with their prayers, encouraging words, and good singing. My brother, with J. N. Porterfield, conducted the song services. We had fifty-one additions in this meeting-thirty-six baptized and fifteen reclaimed—and closed out with a fine interest. All those baptized. save two, were adults. church is very much encouraged with the work there, and plans are being made to build a new house to worship We look for this church to do a great work in the future, under the able leadership of Brethren Otto Milner, M. E. Vail, and A. T. Lemmons. The Lord willing, I shall preach for then another year. I go next to Bono, to be with Brother John L. Fry in a four-days' debate with a Seventh-Day Adventist .- A. H. Porterfield.

Alrus, Okla., August 30.—On the second Sunday in August the church of Christ of this city began a meeting which continued until last Sunday night. Sixteen precious souls were baptized into Christ, two confessed their sins, and seven were added by relation. Our audiences were large and attentive all the way through the meeting. Some said the audiences were larger than any that had ever attended the meetings of the congregation in the past. Brother Perkins Cooper, of Gould, Okla., led the singing, and his work was fine. I did the preaching, and I think I never held a meeting that I enjoyed more. I have been living in Altus since the first of last February, laboring with this congregation. There is no question but gregation. There is no question but that we have a great field in and around Altus in which to labor for Christ. The Lord willing, I shall begin a meeting out in the country five miles, at Plain View, next Sunday night. The congregation here is very the interested in this point, because much interested in this point, because it is a mission point in many ways, and we are expecting to do much good out there by a hearty cooperation of all the members of the congregation here.-S. E. Templeton.

Henry, Tenn., September 5.—My last meeting for this year closed last Lord's day, at Macedonia, in Weakley County, Tenn. I have conducted four meetings here, and I believe this was the most interesting and fruitful of them all. Ten were baptized, most of them all. them being married and heads of families. Moreover, I trust that the church was strengthened and encouraged to a greater degree of faithfulness. This is a fine group of breth-ren, and I shall never forget their loyal and faithful cooperation in the work that I have done there. turned home just in time to hear Brother A. G. Freed preach the two closing discourses of a most interesting meeting here, I perceived the high pitch of interest as soon as I entered the house. People had come for miles around to hear this venerable man preach God's word. While Brother Freed preaches the word with force and emphasis, yet his preaching is characterized by a certain mildness that overcomes every tendency toward antagonism on the part of his hearers. The influence of his week's work here will be seen and felt for a long time to come. Nine became obedient to the faith. Brother Freed has prom-ised to be with us next year.—Fred W. Chunn.

No More Gas in Stomach and Bowels

If you wish to be permanently relieved of gas in the stomach and bowels, take Baalmann's Gas-Tablets. Baalmann's Gas-Tablets are prepared distinctly and especially for stomach gas, and particularly for all the bad effects coming from gas pressure.

That empty, gone, and gnawing feeling at the pit of your stomach will disappear; that anxious and nervous feeling, with heart paloitation, will vanish, and you will once more be able to take a deep breath, so often prevented by gas pressing against your heart and lungs.

Your limbs, arms, and fingers won't feel cold and go to sleep, because Baalmann's Gas-Tablets prevent gas interfering with the circulation; intense drowsiness and sleepy feeling after dinner will soon be replaced by a desire for some form of entertainment. Your distended stomach will reduce by inches, because gas will not form after using Baalmann's Gas-Tablets.

Send for Baalmann's Gas-Tablets, Get the genuine in the yellow package, for only then can you expect the beneficial results many others have experienced.

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their eloquence, their fiddles, and their for hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eternal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Rice. Into one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two mest wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifelong rivalry of the two famous brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and haretofore unpublished incidents that attended the pollitical division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that attracted the strention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER," the peerless and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the pellitical campaign of last fall, from the Mississippl River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters extending from a President of the United States to a fox hound," the story touches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of erackling camp fires and the music of the chase.

Nashville, Tenn., September 2.— After my sîx-weeks' stay în Nashville, where we had seventeen additionstwo reclaimed and fifteen baptized-I went by my old place, Freewill (Emberton, Ky.), and preached on Saturday night before the first Sunday in July. On Sunday morning J. M. Jackson, an old schoolmate of mine, preached, and I preached in the afternoon. On the second Sunday in July I began a meeting at Shady Grove. Ky., and continued it till the fourth Sunday night. Three were baptized and the congregation was greatly strengthened. On Monday night after the fourth Sunday I began a meeting at Pruit's Knob and continued it till the fifth Sunday. One was baptized. Brother J. M. Isenberg assisted me very greatly in these meetings by very greatly in these inframes of singing, praying, and reading. He is a splendid yokefellow in the gospel. On the fifth Sunday night we began at Temple Hill, Ky., and continued till Friday night before the third Sunday Seven were baptized. August. Brother Tollie Phemister assisted me in this meeting. He is another true yokefellow in the gospel. On the third Sunday in August I began a meeting at Eighty-Eight, Ky., and preached ten days. There were no additions. How-ever, the brethren and sisters seemed well pleased with our work and solicited me to hold a two-weeks' meet-ing for them next year.—N. W. Prof-

Hattiesburg, Miss., September 5.-I am new finishing up my trip and work for this time in this State. work for this time in this State. I have been down here since the last of April. I went to Epley on the last Lord's day in August. That day one of Brother J. W. Deese's daughters obeyed the gospel, being immersed by a preacher who lives in Hattiesburg. I began preaching on Monday night and preached three nights in the meetinghouse at Epley and the rest of the time at Brother. and the rest of the time at Brother Deese's residence. I preached twice there yesterday, and we also had the worship at his house. At one time we had a congregation of some seventy members at Epley, but all but about five have moved away; but I think we are leaving some four or five "almost persuaded" Brother Deese has done Brother Deese has done a good deal of preaching in the past. He tells me of several congregations farther west in the State, and I hope this trip will lead to some steps being taken to awaken a greater zeal in the work in this part of the State. need a tent meeting in several places in the southern part of Mississippi, Brother Deese also tells me of scattered members in a number of places. Brother Cayce and the Nashville congregations behind him should look down in this part of the State, as well as that part in which they are doing se much good work. I am ready now to arrange for meetings or Bible readings for the late fall and winter. Address me at home-Route 4, Watseka, III.-Andrew Perry

Duck Hill, Miss., September 7.—The meeting at Crockett closed on Monday night. The attendance and attention were fine. At night the house would not hold all who came. Twenty-five were baptized, ten were restored, and the church was aroused to greater activity. I expected to begin under the tent here last night, but a hard rain and wind storm blew down the tent and rioned a seam in it. We expect to have it up and ready for to-night. So far as can be learned, no one content with New Testament teaching has ever preached at this place, and the people are wondering what new doctrine is to be taught. We do not know what to expect, but will preach "as it is written," get acquainted and make friends as fast as possible, and pray to God for results. We have one brother and his wife and two boys living here, who need to be started to regular meeting. If the peo-ple can be induced to come and listen, I hope to be here two weeks. Then I shall go for a brief visit home, and, returning, will bring my family to Jackson; for we must push with vigor the work we have begun, until it can be put on a firm, self-sustaining basis. Mississippl needs more gospel preachers. The calls are numerous, and many of the people have never heard the gospel preached. The Macedonian cry should be heard and answered by those who have the love of souls and a missionary spirit. Letters from Co-lumbus report the church working nicely and developing home leaders. M. C. Among the Colored Folks

The Power and Influence of God's Word.

BY M. KEEBLE.

When I sent in my last report, I was in a meeting at Henderson, Tenn., and had baptized four. This meeting continued two weeks, and nineteen were baptized. The interest was good throughout the meeting, which was largely attended by the white people. In the spring I went through this section, and fifteen obeyed the gospel, which makes thirty-four added to this church through my preaching this year. I began here about five years ago, and there were only four members, and now there are nearly two hundred. Wherever the white Christians give their presence and fellowship when a colored meeting is in progress, it seems to be more interesting to the colored people, and they will attend and become more interested. This congregation is only five years old, but it is certainly edifying to be in their midst and worship with them, This made my sixth meeting with them, and I have promised to labor with them three weeks next year, the Lord willing.

On the fifth Lord's day in July I began a meeting at Center Star, in Hickman County, Tenn. Interest was good throughout the meeting, and the church seemed much edified. The first meeting I ever held was at this place fourteen years ago, and I was glad to labor with them again. There were no additions. I also visited Centerville one night while in this section and spoke to a packed house. I am to go back in the fall and hold a meeting for them.

I am now (August 9) at Flat Rock, near Fosterville, Tenn., in a tent meeting. This is my third meeting here. Interest is good, with two baptisms to date. It is a pleasure to labor with these people.

I am glad to see the white churches turning their attention toward my race, trying to lift them with the gospel of Jesus Christ. There are thousands of negroes living right around some of our largest white churches who have never heard the gospel of Jesus Christ, and it is a serious condition when we remember that Jesus said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." It does my soul good when I read the Gospel Advocate. The first thing I look for is "At Home and Abroad," because I can see where the brethren are hammering away with the truth and thousands are being brought to Christ; and then I think of how few negroes are given the chance to hear the pure gospel, and I tremble. Jesus said: "Go, . . . teach all nations." We need some more preachers like Joe McPherson, E. G. Sewell, David Lipscomb, and S. W. Womack, who went about preaching "Jesus Christ, and him crucified," to the rich and the poor, black and white. Brother Joe McPherson did more toward teaching me how to preach than any man I ever heard. Brother A. M. Burton supported a meeting once for the Jackson Street church of Christ (colored), in Nashville, and got Brother McPherson to do the preaching. This meeting continued one month, and many souls were brought to Christ. In this meeting I copied every lesson Brother McPherson preached; and though he is dead, I am still preaching his sermons, and these lessons are still bringing men to Christ. Brethren, wherever you go and find an opportunity to preach to my people, please give them God's word, and it will bring forth fruit to the glory and honor of Jesus Christ. M. KEERLE.

The Cause at Savannah, Ga.

BY J. P. SLAYDEN.

I had the pleasure of spending about three weeks in June with the brethren who are establishing the cause of Christ in Savannah, Ga. The work is having results, and eventually there should be a strong congregation to bless an immense area where the gospel is unknown. There have been the hindrances usually encountered in new fields from those who do not understand the aim of the disciples of Christ: besides, there has been some confusion among themselves over opposition to literature in Bible study. The latter, I believe, is practically done away and a load removed that would cripple their efforts.

The brethren are worshiping in a house which they hope to buy and ought to buy, because the location is most desirable. I urge the congregations which have helped them to continue to do so, and other congregations to enjoy fellowship in building up the church of Christ in this old, neglected city, as the members are working people, rich only in faith, and need help.

J. Bedford Beck, Box 1530; O. W. Rawlins, 916 West Thirty-seventh Street; or J. N. Copeland, 2423 Barnard Street, Savannah, Ga., will receive your contribution, use it right, and make you a satisfactory report.

Rheumatism

A REMARKABLE HOME TREATMENT GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the year of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-Acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who are thus afflicted know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, but such relief as I obtained was only temporary. Finally I found a treatment that cured me completely, and such a plifful condition has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terrihly afflicted, even bedridden, some of them seventy to eighty years old, and the results were the same as in my own case.

Some Pleasant Visits.

BY JAMES E. SCOBEY.

It has been my pleasure this spring and summer to visit and preach to several congregations in the surroundlng counties, where I preached when a much younger man than I am now.

On the fourth Sunday in August T was with the congregation at Beech Grove, some sixteen miles south of Franklin. Something over a year ago I was there and preached in a rickety schoolroom, which had been almost demolished by a hurricane which passed through that part of the country and which absolutely destroyed their church house. It was a frame building. The congregation, though not large in numbers, determined to rebuild. On my recent visit I preached in the new house, which is brick, modern in style, and the auditorium furnished elegantly with seats, carpets, etc. I know of no country church where the appointments for beauty and comfort are better, and few, if any, quite so good. Beech Grove is the mother church of that part of the country. Several congregations have developed from the membership of Beech Grove.

I stayed Saturday night with Dr. Tom Hardison and his good wife, and slept under the roof where I had slept while her father lived there-and that was over fifty years ago. Brother David Lipscomb and I were on a preaching tour through Maury and Williamson counties, mainly for the purpose of giving me an opportunity of learning to preach; for I knew but little then to preach—that is, I had prepared but few sermons, and by practice I improved them. As I have said, we spent the time principally at the home of Brother Alexander, the father of Sister Hardison.

On the first Sunday in this month I preached at Newhope, near Readyville. This congregation has a fine church house, and the furnishings are among the best. But another good thing I saw was that they had a well-attended Sunday school, and zeal in the work was manifest. I passed Saturday night under the hospitable roof of Brother and Sister C. O. Barker, as I had often done before.

My appointment for the second Sunday in September is Antioch, fifteen miles east of Murfreesboro. My effort is to stir up the churches to an increased spirituality.

So live to-day that to-morrow thy heart will not quake with fear when the Angel of Death knocks at thy door.—Selected.

Notes From West Virginia.

BY F. P. FONNER.

I am somewhat better than I was when I wrote last. I can do a little more mission work than I could then. I am now conducting one or two meetings each Lord's day, but that is about all that I can do at present: but even that is a very dangerous thing for me to do. Upon the whole, there seems to be some hope for me yet, if my friends will help me to pay for the necessary treatment. Those wishing to help me may address me at Buffalo, W. Va., Box 81. One thing in particular worries me, and that is this: our last lumber note is not yet paid, and three poor men, including myself, are responsible for that note. We cannot pay it unless we can get some outside help. Three poor families have sacrificed in building the house of worship until it hurts. Please do send me an offering now, kindly stating what it is for, and the Lord will surely reward you. We are anxious to pay out on the church house, so we can help others. Kindly help us to make a short job of this now. If each one who reads these notes will send some help at once, we will soon pay out on the meetinghouse.

To Keep Autumn Leaves.

If you are a minister's daughter or a church worker, you will be glad to know how to make your decorating last; in any case, you will want to use some of the gorgeous autumn foliage in your home. You can take whole branches, as large as you like, and for weeks they will look as if just taken from the woods. Paint the under side of each leaf with linseed oil, then iron at once; next, paint and iron the upper side, making the leaves pliable. The branches can be put over the side lights and chandellers in the church, and will be like freshly picked ones when it is time to take them down for Christmas greens. When you use leaves alone, you can press them between layers of newspapers instead of ironing them, after painting.-Septemher Good Housekeeping.

BY LAWRENCE FREDERIC DEUTZMAN.

Is there no debt that thou dost owe To lighten others' care or woe? Is there no comfort thou canst give To help another creature live? Hast thou no peace thou canst bestow And let a sadder being know?

O, fellow pilgrim, stop awhile To give a helpful, loving smile! Thy life is not thine own to live; As thou hast gained, so thou must give. But give not only of thy wealth; Give, too, a little of thyself.

O, do not answer thus to me:
"I've greater cares that first must be!"
Thou canst not live this way; for, friend,
What will confront thee at the end?
Since there is little comfort stored
For those to live who merely hoard!

O soul, so stultified and mean, What bit of love canst thou then glean? With not one voice to intercede And help thee in thy pressing need! Look, then, to it—aye, count the cost Of precious, helpful moments lost!

So much to do! So little done! It is not strange the world's unwon— So little done by you and me, So little love with charity!

CURRENT COMMENT

By A. B. L.

Just across from my home is the Richland Golf Club. On Sunday afternoons I observe that the links are crowded with men and not a few women. Some of these men I recognize as leaders in the fashionable churches. They attend services for an hour or two in the morning and spend the afternoon playing golf. No complaint has been offered, for the assumption is made that the busy business man is tied down to his business all during the week and that Sunday is the only time he has for recreation. It is surprising how many acts sneak into the consecrated time in the disguise of necessity. "Necessity" too often means that it is more convenient to steal some of the Lord's day than to use some of the week-day hours. On the same principle one might plead the necessity for taking another's money because of unwillingness to spare any from one's own purse. The one that tries to rob God always robs himself. More than that, we are mistaken in believing that these men have no time for relaxation except on Sunday. You may observe the same crowd doing other things during the week that appeal to their fancy in the way of pleasure. It all depends on what one wants to do. "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

The length of sermons should be largely determined by the use of good judgment upon the part of the preacher. The matter is usually left with him, the audience reserveing the right to offer suggestion or criticism after he has finished. The important thing is to reach the hearts of the people with the saving message of the gospel. If the sermon is too short, it may be classified as a "sermonette," lacking in many points that should have been presented. If the sermon is too long, the hearers may become disgusted or engulfed in weariness. We should not overlook the fact that the audience has a responsibility no less than that of the preacher. We should take heed as to what we hear and as to how we hear. The art of attention is just as important as the art of speaking. If the sermon appears too long on account of our listless, inattentive attitude, then the preacher is not to blame. We should "shun not to declare the whole counsel of God;" but this does not mean that preachers are expected to tell everything that God teaches in one sermon. If that were true, there would be no occasion for a protracted meeting. Scripture examples vary. Paul preached on one occasion until midnight; but there is no means of finding out just when he began his discourse or how often he was interrupted. His sermons on other occasions are models in point of brevity and succinctness. We may well afford to follow the example of the Savior's Sermon on the Mount. The old idea that sermons are to be taken in full doses by the hearer We are rehas been subjected to some modification. minded of the beginner who stopped in the middle of his sermon with the statement: "Where I am staying they have a litter of puppies. One of them got hold of the rest of my sermon and chewed it up. I must, therefore, stop at this point. Rise and receive the benediction," After the services a stranger offered the young man a ten-dollar bill, saying: "I want one of those pups for our preacher at home." 0 0 0

Arthur Brisbane, the well-known journalist, has been recently stirred by the number of lives lost in daredevil exploits. He had the following to say:

Another human being killed amusing the crowd by dropping in a parachute. The other day it was a young woman turning endless somersaults also to amuse and astonish. Human lives, especially those of the skillful and courageous, have value.

Should not the government regulate and control amusements made attractive by the probability of death?

Why not make it a crime to hire or pay anybody for risking life uselessly?

Mr. Brisbane's point is well taken. All pleasures that are costly to human life should be stopped. In the second temptation Satan took Jesus into the holy city and placed him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him; "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is writ ten, H2 shall give his angels charge concerning thee." Even when he had assurances of divine protection, our Lord would not perform a feat merely to make a show of his powers. It is unbelievable to think that he would have done it for any amount of money.

But what shall we say of those Christians who patronize such performances? If the performer is violating a divine principle, and if, as Mr. Brisbane points out, he is doing a thing that should be positively prohibited by the government, then those who pay to see the performance are equally to blame. They are doing nothing less than being overcome by "the lust of the eyes," and God will not hold them guiltless. This is a good point to be borne in mind at this season of the year when the fairs are in full swing and when the circus comes to town.

The disposition to tinker with the Scriptures is so widespread and so calamitous in its results that we welcome anything and everything that is calculated to check this tendency. From an exchange we clip the following observation:

The Bible is not "fool-proof." The way to eternal life is plain enough, and even the most ignorant and dull mind need not err from the path to God and to heaven. But the Bible contains a lot of matter that has led fanatics into strange positions. Slavery has been stoutly defended from Scripture. Guzzling intoxicating liquors has been said to be Biblical by our wet enemies. That all people not observing Saturday as the Sabbath are going straight to hell is the belief of an active sect to-day. Polygamy is countenanced by the Latter-Day Saints, who quote Scripture as well as their "Book of Mormon." Infants have been consigned to the pit without mercy on their dying without baptism, or even with baptism, provided they were not of the elect.

The country is full of people to-day who enjoy tinkering with Scripture. They are able to quote proof texts for every vagary. Christian Science, New Thought, Theosophism, Premillennialism, and Holy Rollerism are samples of this "fooling" with the sacred content of the Bible. Religion can be easily shunted off into blind alleys by people obsessed with a peculiar idea which they support with Scriptural passages. "A little learning is a dangerous thing," and a little tinkering with one's religious faith may wreck the

It is doubtless true that the Bible suffers more abuse from the educated man than it does from the wayfaring traveler over life's rugged way. Those who wrest the Scriptures are usually those who have some pet theories and hobbies to sustain. There is nothing that can so bolster up a weak, untenable position as to create the impression that the Bible teaches it. A few weeks ago I chanced to be standing outside of a tent where a revival was in progress. I had not been listening to the preacher fifteen minutes before I perceived that it was a "sanctified" meeting. He quoted a great many Scriptures, but did not let them explain themselves. On the other hand, he very ingenuously twisted them so as to make them teach his particular doctrines. The tent was full of the poor and illiterate, who had been worked up into a kind of religious fervor and were shouting their "amens." That is the pity of it! Those who tinker with the Scriptures are always bent on having a following. Paul speaks of some who had made shipwreck of their faith. When a ship goes down at sea, it entails the loss of many lives. When a religious leader goes wrong, there is always a multitude to take up with his foolishness. But can the blind lead the blind? Shall not both fall into the ditch?

"Unfeigned Love of the Brethren."

BY H. LEO BOLES.

In these evil days of "bitter Jealousy and faction," amidst the strife, hatred, and confusion, and the grievous times that have come upon us, when men have become "lovers of self, rather than lovers of God," we need to return to the primitive love for one another. "Seeing ye have purified your souls in your obedience to the truth unto unfeigned love of the brethren, love one another from the heart fervently." (1 Pet. 1: 22.) I am not pessimistic. but I am often discouraged; my heart is often made to ache as I see the unholy attitude of brethren to each other and hear of the bitter factions that are destroying the church of our Lord. So many of the Lord's people love the world and its pleasures, honors, and fading glory that they have lost sight of the command to love one another.

There is a story told of an old infidel in the early days of Christianity, when the people of God were burned at the stake and cruelly persecuted in all of the ways of torture known to man at that time. This infidel stood off and watched the tender sympathy and genuine love that the Christians had for each other, and was heard to exclaim: "How these Christians love each other!" He expressed a desire to become a member of the church in order that he might have such friends, who would sorrow and suffer, sympathize and love, pray for and help him as these Christians did each other. What a change has come since that time! If he were here now, he might say: "How these Christians hate each other!" Not long ago one man was heard to say that the only enemies that he had, or ever had, were members of the church, and members of his own congregation. Another one said that he could get favors from men in the world easier and quicker than he could from his own brethren in the Lord. These men might have been largely to blame for such a condition. I know not. Still such things help us to see the deplorable condition of affairs as they now exist in the brotherhood.

Many churches are so filled with selfishness, contentions, jealousy, and malice that they cannot do the work of the Lord, and are so worldly that they are held together only by a cold "form of godliness" and a lukewarm habit of worship. Ungodly quarrels among the churches have destroyed the love, peace, and harmony until many have become discouraged and disgusted with the whole affair and have ceased to attend the public worship. Fraternal strife and discord present an ugly picture. Brethren at variance and in fusses and lawsuits destroy the peace and unity of a church until no good can be done. Thank God, not all the churches are so degenerate!

Many preachers in the church of God are filled with jealousy and faction; and "where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed," (James 3: 16.) Some preachers are more interested in defending their own sullied and tarnished reputation than they are in contending "earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints;" others are trying harder, like politicians, to get and keep popular positions and obtain fat salaries than they are "striving for the faith of the gospel" (Phil. 1: 27); still others are so eager for the plaudits of men and the approbation of the world that they are "walking in craftiness" and "handling the word of God deceitfully" instead of preaching Christ in love; and still others, like "Diotrephes, who loveth to have the preeminence among them," are willing to put themselves for ward as self-appointed leaders, even to the rending asunder the body of Christ. Some preachers have become scandal-mongers and peddle evil gossip on each other and other members of the church, while at the same time they prate about love for each other and cant beautiful sermonettes and eloquent prayers, all the time playing to the galleries for the frothy praise of the populace. Can the church of God fill its holy mission of redemption and salvation when disturbed by such conditions and led by such unrighteous leaders? Thank God that there are many faithful, consecrated preachers of the gospel, who do not engage in the unholy and wicked conditions as described above!

Some editors and publishers of religious papers have plied, and are plying, their work and craft for personal advantages and selfish gains and lucrative profits. The papers are being used as a channel through which they may pour into the receptive hearts of the readers the unlovely spites, ungodly wrangles, and unholy bickerings of a divided, contentious, and jealous brotherhood. Such perversions of the press are made that good people are asking if religious papers should ever be published, or whether any good is accomplished by distributing such papers. Surely, with papers as well as with preachers, godliness should not be made a way of gain. Is there a need for a return to "unfeigned love of the brethren?"

Many church members have never learned their true relationship to God, Christ, the church, and to each other; and not knowing their true relationship to these, they cannot love each other and the church and Christ and God. This relationship is based on love. The fundamental principle of love can be understood only by a true conception of our relationship to each other. The name of "brother" or "sister" carries with it this true relationship of Christians, and these names are themselves an argument for love and peace. "Brotherly kindness" is always a reason for peace and urges all of God's people to avoid the causes from which discords originate. Strife between those who should be friends is very grievous, but discord between brethren is lamentable and nullifies the law of love. All Christians are to strive "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." They are to endeavor at all times, "with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love," "to love the brotherhood." All Christians should abound more and more in "love of the brethren," for they have been "taught of God to love one another."

In returning to "unfeigned love," we must put away "all wickedness, guile, hypocrisies, envies, and all evil speakings," strife, railings, evil surmisings, wranglings, malice, and hatred, and put on, as God's children, "a heart of compassion, kindness, lowliness, meekness, long-suffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving each other, if any man have a complaint against any; even as the Lord forgave you, so also do ye; and above all these things put on love, which is the bond of perfectness." (Col. 3: 12-14.) We have been told that "love is that principle which causes one to seek the greatest ultimate good of the object loved. In view of this, each should be seeking the greatest ultimate good of every brother and sister in the Lord.

Our close relationship to each other, based on this principle of love, emphasizes the oneness of all who love the Lord. We have one faith, one baptism, one hope, one Lord, one Father, one Spirit, in one body, and one future home—heaven; we are one family in Christ Jesus, and must love each other as Christ loved us. If we love each other as we are taught, we can become a truly united people and "all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that we be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.) We must all learn to think of each other as brethren, and speak of each other as the house of God, and act toward each other as the Lord himself acts toward us. Our love for each other becomes the test of our love for the Lord. We cannot hate each other and at the same time love the Lord. It has been said that the way we receive good treatment or evil shows our moral and spiritual standard; to return good for evil is Godlike, good for good is manlike, evil for evil is beastlike, and evil for good is devil-like. "Finally, be ye all like-minded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tender-hearted, humble-minded; not rendering evil for evil, or reviling for reviling; but contrariwise blessing; for hereunto were ye called, that ye should inherit a blessing." (1 Pet. 3: 8, 9.) "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God." (1 John 4: 7.) Back to "unfeigned love of the brethren!"

Communing With the Sects.

BY J. R. BRADLEY.

In closing my article, "Who Are Sectarians?" in the Gospel Advocate of August 4, I stated that I might write another, headed, "Communing With the Sects," making other quotations from the language of the lamented David Lipscomb. Now see "Questions Answered," by Lipscomb and Sewell, page 592. This is either Lipscomb's or Sewell's answer, we cannot tell which, as no name is signed. Note both the questions and the answer:

"Is it right to take the Lord's Supper with the sects? Should those of the Christian Church commune, or take the bread and wine, with the denominations (so called)? Do we not receive members into the Christian Church from the sectarians who have been immersed by those who were only sprinkled, and yet we regard their baptism valid—that is, those whom we receive? Then, if those who immersed them had the right to baptize, have they not the right to set the Lord's table? And if they have the right to set the table, or break bread, have they not the right to commune with us? Or should the Christian Church take the bread and wine only with those that are of the Christian Church?"

These troubles about baptism and communion have all arisen since sects arose. There were no such sects in the days of the apostles; and therefore no directions are given as to how we ought to fraternize with them. There ought to be no sects, and then we would have no trouble on these matters. But then they are here among us, and it is sometimes difficult to determine what ought to be done in reference to them. One thing is evident, and that is that the validity of an ordinance, either baptism or the Lord's Supper, does not depend upon the administrator. If the subject is all right when immersed, his baptism is valid to him, whether the administrator is or not. The same, we think is true of the Lord's Supper. But there are no instructions as to open or close communion in the Bible, and we cannot undertake to give any.

While on the subject of communion, allow me to quote also from the pen of our much-beloved and venerable T. B. Larimore. On the subject of eating and drinking "unworthily" (1 Cor. 11: 20-34) he says:

Would it not be strange conduct for a servant to stand at the door of the dining room and say to one of his master's guests, "Come in! I think you and I agree in our hobbies and fancles;" and say to another: "Stand back! You and I differ in our opinions?" That would be fearful. No servant would do that. God forbid that his servants should do anything remotely resembling that! So he says: "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat." But some one says: "There is a very serious difficulty here. Some one might be mistaken: some earnest, honest man might believe himself entitled to the communion, not being entitled to it—might believe himself a child of God, and not be a child of God; and not being entitled to the communion, but believing himself to be, might commune, and thus eat and drink damnation to himself." Well, what made you think that? "In such a case, would not a man be eating and drinking damnation to himself?" Well, no, not that I know of. If the Bible teaches that, I have not studied it as carefully as I ought to have studied it, and I ought to have studied it more before I tried to teach; and certainly when I have been preaching for one-third of a century, I ought to have known it, if the Bible teaches it. "But didn't you read a little while ago: 'He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself?'" Yes sir, I read that: but you would not be willing, I am sure, for any one to occupy the position of teacher for your children, after they have left the nursery and passed through the kindergarten—and I rather think you would not be willing for any one to be a teacher in the nursery or kindergarten—who did not know that "unworthily" is an adverb, and modifies, restricts, and qualifies the "manner" of doing a thing instead of the condition of the one who does it. It is not an adjective, but an adverb. "He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body." ("Larimore's Letters and Sermons," Volume I., pages 295, 296.)

Then Brother Larimore illustrates by two couples entering the place of worship—one couple not children of God at all, but taking the Supper in a reverential manner, while the other couple, though members of the congregation, take it in a flippant sort of way. Then Brother Larimore says of the second couple, "They would be eating and drinking damnation to their souls," because of the manner in which they eat and drink it. Of the first couple our brother says: "They are not eating and drinking damnation to themselves; they are not cursing themselves or anybody else, and not acting badly in doing that." Please read Brother Larimore's sermon on the communion. I think I never read nor heard a better thing by an uninspired man.

In closing this article, I wish to quote some language used by our dear brother, F. D. Srygley, who was my classmate at Mars' Hill, in 1878.

In the very days of the inspired writers of the New Testament, Christians were continually getting into all sorts of things which the inspired men of God were eternally pulling them out of, and warning them not to go into any more; and if there had been such a thing as a denomination for them to get into then, some of them would have gone into it occasionally, or it would have been the only thing they kept out of, which they had no business to enter. And besides all this, a denomination is the easiest thing to fall into, and the hardest thing to climb out of, that I ever came in contact with, anyhow. In the midst of all the denominations that beset this age and country, it would be absolutely miraculous if some Christians did not get into some of them occasionally. If there are no Christians in any denomination, it is the only place except hell they have kept out of.—"The New Testament Church," pages 67, 68.)

I ask those who read this to get Brother Srygley's book, "The New Testament Church," and read his article on pages 65-68, headed, "Are Christians in All Denominations?" There is no more pointed and ready writer than F. D. Srygley was in his day.

Now, I quote from these able men of God, for the reason that our own "church of Christ" folks, both brethren and sisters, can, and do, at some places, "outstrip" the denominational churches in acting the sect and creating factions among us. Note the "rebaptism" craze; objections to Sunday-school literature; women teachers; fighting the colleges and schools; etc. I know of brethren, and sisters, too, who are creating factions among us by pushing the "rebaptism" hobby. This, I think, is as bad as the society and organ craze. Like the Irishman who found the turtle in the road, kicking and wriggling around, though with its head cut completely off. After studying for a time how the turtle could possibly show signs of life, he exclaimed: "Well, poor thing! Him dead and don't know it!" Just so, we of the church of Christ have strong sectarians among us, and they "don't know it."

Well, I will close and leave this question of sectarianism among "us as a people" with more able writers. You see, Brethren Kurfees, Holt, Paisley, and others have had this job on their hands of late, in their articles in the Gospel Advocate, in a "tilt" with Brother John T. Lewis. If we must know that our baptism is "for the remission of sins" or God will not grant us remission, where was the church on earth during the "Dark Ages?" Who preached "baptism for remission of sins," between the death of the apostles and Campbell? Christ says: "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it," (Matt. 16: 18.) Daniel says: "It shall stand forever." (Dan. 2: 44.) Now, if "baptism for the remission of sins" was neither preached nor practiced then, there was no kingdom nor church then, and, therefore, Daniel and Christ are wrong.

Barton W. Stone on "Reformation."

Reformation may be justly defined a turning from error to truth in heart and practice. It is a poor reformation to turn from errors in doctrine, and not embrace the truth in the love and practice of it; it is a poor reformation to profess the truth, and hold it in unrighteousness. My heart is pained, my soul is distressed, to see so little piety among professors of religion. I mean, professors of religion of every name, ourselves not excepted. O for a real reformation! It appears that the generality of professors have turned their eyes from inspecting their own hearts and conduct, and fixed them on their neighbor to watch for evil, and not for good. Evils imaginary or real they easily and abundantly find, and they seem to take pleasure in publishing them to the injury of their neighbor, and of the society of which he may be a member. Unhallowed practice, proceeding from an unhallowed heart! No one, not willfully blind and deaf, but knows this; and if a Christian, he heartily grieves and deplores the fact.

I wish to deal faithfully with my brethren. Yet none think that when they have publicly confessed the Savior, and have been immersed in his name, they have done all their duty. If there be such, they are miserably mistaken. Our opposers impute this to us all. We do not believe it correct; yet from enemies we should learn wisdom, and correct every error which they may discover in our life; and who are more eagle-eyed than they? By confessing Jesus before men, and by being baptized, we begin a religious course—we enter into the kingdom. Now, says the Savior to the apostles, teach the baptized to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you. True religion consists in heart, word, and deed, and according to the commands of the gospel all these are regulated.

1. "In word." Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Evil speaking, bitterness and clamor, are forbidden. In meekness we are to instruct them that oppose, not rendering railing for railing, nor reviling for reviling; our speech must be seasoned with grace-a soft answer turneth away strife. How full the oracles of God of such wholesome precepts! And if observed by the church of Christ, how glorious would she appear! In other words, a great reformation is needed. In vain can this be expected, till the heart be reformed. Did we love our Lord and Savior supremely, we would think of him often and affectionately; we would delight to walk with him, and enjoy constant communion with him. We could not forget him, nor live without his presence; often would we speak of him, and of all his goodness to the children of men. Did we love his people fervently, could we rashly reproach them, and unnecessarily wound them with unkind words? No; our charity would rather throw a mantle over their sins and cover them from the view of others; yet the same charity would lead us to convince and save them, plucking them out of the fire. Unhappily tempered is that poor young woman, who in order to raise herself in esteem, detracts from the virtues of all the other young women, and labors to expose their imperfections; she but ruins herself with the intelligent. So, unhappily tempered is that religious man or sect, who, to exalt their own superior piety, detract from others' well-deserved virtues, and denounce them as bad men. This, in the view of the intelligent, is the precursor of their fall. Speak evil of no man is the Christian's motto. Did we tenderly love poor sinners, like our Lord, we should weep over them, and endeavor to direct them to the way of life. We would labor to warn, exhort, and reprove the unruly, in our families and among our neighbors; and this exercise flowing from love, must, and does, produce the best effects. All the saints in this respect should be preachers, and would be if the heart were right.

2. In life or practice. If the heart be reformed, it is an easy matter to rule the tongue, and govern our life by the holy precepts of infinite wisdom. If we love God, how easy, how delightful, to keep his commandments! They are not grievous, but pleasant; we delight in his ways, nor is any sacrifice too great to make, in order to please him. How pleasant the work of prayer in secret, in our families. in the congregation of his people! It is esteemed a high privilege, as well as a duty of profit to us. How pleasant the command of thanksgiving! A pure heart, sensibly affected with the goodness, grace, and, mercy of God, naturally vents its affections in those holy exercises; it is heaven within-a paradise on earth-thus to feel, and thus to live. Our love to our brethren leads us to be kind to them, to supply their need, and to relieve their distress. Our love for the ungodly leads us to pray for them, and urge them to obedience.

Alas! where is that weeping, that tender concern for poor sinners? Where is that holy zeal for their salvation? Where is that deep groaning of spirit for Zion's restoration? Are they fled from us? Do we expect to see the world reform in deed and truth, while professors of Christianity are so far from the spirit of truth? To hold the truth in unrighteousness will profit nothing to us or to the world. Men are never so fearful of enthusiasm as when there is no danger of it—when they are cold, dead, worldly-minded; and when they are in most danger, they have least fear of it.

It is now asked, What shall we do? I answer: Reform in heart, word, and deed. Be reformed yourselves before you urge reformation on others. Cease to scrutinize the faults of others, and search out your own. Be more zealous to make Christians than proselytes. Be more careful to live in the truth than to boast of being in it. Converse more on the subject of religion and less on politics and the affairs of this world. Read often the word of God to learn his will that ye may do it. Cease to do evil, learn to do well, relieve the oppressed, and break every yoke condemned by the word. Do justice as well as mercy. Time is short, and eternity—eternity is just ahead. In time the work of eternity must be done, or never. Better to make sacrifices here than to lose the rewards of glory, honor, immortality, and eternal life.

Prosperity.

They tell me thou art rich, my country: gold In glittering flood has poured into thy chest; Thy flocks and herds increase, thy barns are pressed With harvest, and thy stores can hardly hold Their merchandise; unending trains are rolled Along thy network rails East and West; Thy factories and forges never rest; Thou art rich in all things bought and sold.

But dost thou prosper? Better news I crave.
O dearest country, is it well with thee
Indeed, and is thy soul in health?
A nobler people, hearts more wisely brave,
And thoughts that lift men up and make them free—
These are prosperity and vital wealth.

-Henry Van Dyke.

The "Dead" File.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR,

I shall never forget the "dead" file in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. I was a government clerk in the insurance department of the bureau for several months during the war, and worked with a division that had charge of the premium and record cards. There were four million cards on file in our unit, and it was our business to keep the paid-up premiums properly posted on the cards. If a soldier died, his card was placed in the "dead" file. His card was no longer "active," but "dead;" his insurance had not merely "lapsed," but the soldier himself had ceased to be. The poor fellow had died and could not pay other premiums.

I remember that when the cards were first made there was no dead file. There were rows of cabinets extending the length of the Arlington Building, in which the bureau was housed, and not a "dead" file to be seen. Presumably every soldier represented by a card was "active" in his country's service in training camp or in France. And, going forth as they did in the buoyancy of the American spirit and trusting to good fortune, not one expected to meet death, but each hoped to get through the war. Yet the risk was such that they took out insurance with the government. Then came the epidemic of influenza and the active participation of the Americans in the struggle in Northern France. It was at that time that the "dead" file sprang into existence overnight. A black, crapelike steel cabinet was wheeled to a position at the head of an avenue of active files. It reminded me of a coffin set on end; and, indeed, it represented the dead. see it yet as it stood there facing the Washington Monument.

At first only a handful of "dead" cards were thrust into the empty drawers. But this was just an ominous small beginning. The cabinet filled quickly. Clerks came from every quarter of the section bearing the cards that represented the awful toll that death was exacting of the military host. Sometimes they would gather in little knots about the cabinet, each waiting her turn to file her "death" record. The rather monotonous remark could be heard among the premium-accounting clerks: "Well, the poor fellow died; his card goes to the 'dead' file." They were merely keeping record of the grim business of war; and if death triumphed over life, it was theirs to record the fact. Out on the battle field and in the hospitals it was a grimmer job with which the boys had to do. These clerks in Washington, far removed from the unhappy and ghastly scenes of war, were like recording angels whose duty it was to write death records, but not to shed tears for the dead. I saw no tears in the bureau; but if these clerks had been nurses, or could they have witnessed hospital scenes, they were human enough to have wept. Most of them were quite young, and they were availing themselves of an opportunity to spend a giddy vacation in the nation's capital, and were too frivolous to think seriously of life or of war.

This solitary death cabinet could not long contain the fast-accumulating records, and others were added with surprising rapidity. When I left the service, there were several thousand of these cards and scores of cabinets. The war has passed, but not its results. Grass and wheat are now growing on the battle fields of France, but Europe and mankind in general must reap the harvest of war for centuries to come. It was Mars, the enemy of society, who sowed the tares. But since the war has passed, disease, accident, crime, and suicide are constantly adding to the "dead" files at Washington. Perhaps not an hour passes but one of the four million drops out of the ranks forever. I was never more solemnly impressed with the mortality of man—the brevity, insignificance, and uncertainty of human life, the imminence of death—than when watching the steady increase of the "dead" files. I was reminded in my reflections that before a hundred years have elapsed not one of these four million youths will be living, but each will be but a memory and a record on earth. Every one of this vast military host will have taken his "chamber in the silent halls of death." And what is true of the four million is equally true of the other hundred million Americans living to-day. They are all passing to the grave. Death has reigned thus from Adam. Generation after generation has come tripping upon the stage of action, played its little part, and tottered off to give place to succeeding generations. How the files of the death angel of all the earth must have grown through the ages! The earth is, indeed, one vast cemetery; and, as Bryant expresses it,

"All that tread The globe are but a handful to the tribes That slumber in its bosom."

I could not help meditating upon the spiritual condition of these soldiers-how few were actually prepared for the sudden taking off that came to many of them. Sanguine confident, youthful, robust, eager to do battle for their country, they hoped to turn the tide of war and bring the struggle to a speedy termination. Not one could bring himself to believe that he was going forth from home and native land never to return. When summoned to arms, a large per cent were irreligious. Not many had ever thought seriously of death. But war, while it appealed to the adventurous spirit of youth, was calculated to enforce some sober thinking. With war the drafted man had never had to do. War! Was it not the art of destroying human life systematically-a business in which as individuals, one man is pitted against another to slay or be slain? There was, then, the contingency of death to be reckoned with or ignored. The boys in camp and trench were thus forced to think seriously of death and then of religion and eternity. Millions of them took government insurance. Numbers accepted Christ in the camps, and thousands of letters were written home avowing reformation of life if the writers were spared. It looked then as though much good would eventually come out of war experiences on the part of the boys. The drafted men, as a whole, were certainly more religious than an equal number of other young men taken indiscriminately and bodily from the youth of America. They had something to think about, and religious teachers were hopeful for a great revival of religious interest when the war was over.

It was predicted that the soldiers would come home demanding a practical Christianity that would disregard denominational dogmas and creeds and tend to unite Christians upon the broad principles of charity and service. The service men, just out of the focal fire of war, would insist upon the religion of service, a deeper piety. a more genuine spirituality. They would no longer tolerate empty forms and outgrown rituals, but would insist that the keynote of religious activity be the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Hence, the Interchurch World Movement was designed to satisfy this divine discontent on the part of the soldiers and an awakened religious world. But the boys came home demanding none of these things. The effect of the war upon the soldier youth was deleterious. As a whole, they are a worse lot than they were when drafted. On returning home, they have lapsed into indifference, and their latter state is worse than the first. Hundreds of thousands have allowed their war-risk insurance to lapse, now that the "risk" is over; but a still greater number have allowed heaven's "insurance" to "lapse"-that is to say, have ceased to walk in the fear of God and to trust his promises. There is nothing refining and ennobling in soldier life, but much to brutalize and to debase. No, the boys have not demanded any great thing of the church. Religious interest since the war has been at low ebb. It is the period of reaction, a time of almost dead calm, when the Ship of Zion drifts listlessly in the doldrums. The church is none the better for the war.

No, I cannot forget the "dead" file. There are as many graves as there are cards in those crapelike cabinets in Washington, largely the direct result of war. This alone convinced me of the horror and terrible sacrifice of war. What a cemetery those files represent! And I hope we may never have another war. The nations cannot afford such sacrifice. There is a way out of it. If the great powers will not enter into a mutual disarmament agreement, then America, who stands in no just fear of molestation from any quarter, should set the world an example by reducing her navy and army. Be that as it may, let us, as Christians, bestir ourselves as never before in preaching the gospel of peace, that the peoples of earth shall "beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks," that "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." This is a consummation devoutly to be wished, and let us pray for it.

Old Paths.

BY J. W. CHISM.

I desire to call attention to what, to my way of thinking, is a departure from the old paths that should be corrected by all who have made the mistake. Jer. 6: 16 says: "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein." This sets forth, to me, a condition of the present time, especially when we consider the last remark in it.

To get the matter before the readers properly, I will suggest that there are three ways made known in the Bible, yet but one of them is the right way.

1. The Broad Way. The Master says this is the way "that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat." (Matt. 7: 13.) We find some of its conduct revealed in Gal. 5: 14-21: "Works of the flesh; ... adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." This is enough to put the everlasting ban on any and all of these evil acts. Brother, be careful. (See also Rcm. 1: 20-23; 2: 4-20.)

2. The Narrow Way. This way "leadeth unto life." (Matt, 7: 14.) Christ says: "I am the way." (John 14: 6.) Then the way that he commanded is the "right way," "the good way," that we should inquire for, "and walk therein." What, then, did he command? The old paths. Word of "so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord." (See Heb. 2: 1-4.) But when? "After the baptism which John preached." It began, then, after the resurrection. But where? It "began from Galilee." (See Acts 10: 36, 37.) But what was it in its beginning? Remember, please, it was "first spoken by the Lord," and "began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached." Now turn to Matt. 28: 16: "Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them." Note, here are the eleven disciples in Galllee, the right place, and after the resurrection, the right time. "And Jesus came and spake unto them saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." (Verses 18, 19.) But as given by Mark (16: 15, 16): "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." But Luke gives it: "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." (See Luke 24: 45-49.)

Now, to sum this up, we have this: Matthew says teach and baptize; Mark says preach the gospel, and "he that believeth and is baptized," etc.; while Luke says preach repentance and remission of sins "in his name." I would mark it, then, this way:

Matthew: Teach, baptize in name, etc.

Mark: Preach, believe, be baptized, shall be saved.

Luke: Preach, repentance, remission in his name.

Summed up: Preach, believe, repent, be baptized in name, saved, remission.

This is the way Jesus gave it to the eleven in Galilee, and they were to "confirm it to us," and this confirmation was to begin at Jerusalem. So (Acts 2) we have it. Peter preached, commanded them to "know assuredly"—that is, believe. Then, when they gave evidence that they did believe, he commanded: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." In this we note the commission carried out perfectly in every item and in order, and the record says: "They that gladly received his word were baptized, and the same day were added," etc. Now this is the good way, the right way, the old paths.

3. I see a tendency on the part of many of our preachers to leave this off. Some in protracted meetings will fail to preach it thus, and so preach that you cannot tell them from the denominational preachers-and this, too, to be popular with the denominations. I am sure that this soft way of preaching seems right to them, or they would not so avoid the preaching of this good old way. But in so doing they are walking in the third way. Hear: "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." (Prov. 14: 12; 16: 25.) I am sure the easy way of preaching "seemeth right unto" them; for they say it will not offend the sects, and so they will come and hear. But what good will it do them to hear, when the things they hear are not the commands and teaching of Christ, but the soft admonitions originated by man? Jesus says: "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.) Again: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 7: 21.) And again: "In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." (Matt. 15: 9.)

But the good way given by Jesus as set forth above in the commission as it began in Galilee, and the confirmation of it to us, beginning at Jerusalem, Jesus said should go among all nations, and Paul commands us to "preach the word." Then, brother, repent of your digression from the truth, inquire for the good way, the "old paths," and walk in them. If you will not, as the prophet said some would not, then you will be lost: so also those who follow you. But if you will come back to the "old paths," you will both "saye yourself and them that hear you."

Ruskin says: "We are not sent into this world to do anything into which we cannot put our hearts." God's true service is never achieved through a dull, contented routine, which knows nothing of enthusiasm and feels no inspiration. That service demands that the whole nature shall be brought into unity of action—heart, mind, will, and all consenting to the same end. There is a vast deal that calls itself service which is not the outflow of the heart; much that calls itself sacrifice that lacks fire. Let us not rest in less than the best gift to God, even though for the time we be spiritually too poor to give more than the "pair of turtle doves or the two young pigeons."

The Perfect Heart.

BY JAMES E. SCOBEY.

The religion of Jesus Christ understandingly embraced and fully lived out by any one will insure to him the glories of immortality and eternal life. Faithful service of God is the true standard of Christian manhood. No one can render such service if his heart is not perfect with God; and no one can have a perfect heart if he closes his eyes, stops his ears, and hardens his heart against the reception of the truth. He would be in that class of men of whom Jesus said: "This people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them." (Matt, 13: 15.) Man must hear the sayings of Jesus and receive them into his heart, obey them in his life, if he would find rest to his soul.

It is wonderfully significant, as well as surprisingly beautiful, how much the Master makes of simple acceptance and obedience to his teaching. "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.) If we acknowledge him Lord, we are under the most solemn obligations to serve him. The man with a perfect heart will not fail to do his Master's sayings. He will accept all of God's word without addition or subtraction. He will not scrap the Scriptures to support some preconceived theory with reference to what is essential to become a Christian or what is necessary to his continuing to be one.

A minister recently holding a revival meeting was requested to preach on the subject, "What Shall I Do to Be Saved?" In the course of his sermon he said various answers had been given by various preachers, but he preferred to take the answer of the apostle Paul when the jailer at Philippi said to him: "What must I do to be saved?" Paul said: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." "Now." said he, "this is plain, explicit, and full." "True," said he, "there are other things which may be done, but they are not essential to salvation, save repentance." Now, this man's heart may be right with God-that is, he may desire to honor God and serve him; but his heart is not perfect with God, because he has not an understanding heart; he has not learned of Jesus the essential conditions of salvation he laid down when he gave the apostles the commission to go into all the world and preach the gospel.

Cornelius, the Gentile, was a worshiper of God and desired to serve him. His heart was right with God, but he did not know the way, the truth, and the life; so God sent Peter, who, by his instructions, gave him an understanding heart, thus making his heart perfect with God.

The man of God, whose heart is right, will seek to know the whole counsel of God that pertains to life and godliness; for the apostle Peter says that God by "his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue." (2 Pet. 1: 3.) He will not be like the Pharisee, who went up to the temple to pray, thanking God that he was not like other men, and telling God what a good man he was, how he gave aims and paid tithes, etc., and closing by thanking God that he was not like the publican, who would not so much as raise his eyes to heaven, but "smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner." Jesus said to his disciples: "This man went down to his house justified rather than the other." The man of God will search the Scriptures; for in them, and in them alone, can he find the way to immortality and the honor and glories of the world to come.

The man who learns of Jesus will know the truth; for he is "the way, the truth, and the life." The words he spoke were God's words, and his word is truth; and outside of that word there is no spiritual truth. "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 31, 32.) Free from what? The bondage of sin. "Whoso ever committeth sin is the servant of sin." (Verse 34.) Paul emphasizes this statement, saying: "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey: whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" (Rom. 6: 16.) The man of God, the soldier of the cross, knowing these things, having a perfect heart, will not be led into the paths of sin. He will scarcely become subject to the sins arising from the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the vainglery of the world.

True, many know the fearful consequences of sin, and yet they continue in sin. They love the world and worldly pleasures more than they love God. Their hearts are no right with God, much less are they perfect. When Chris tians, professing to be followers of Christ, run with the world, the flesh, and the devil, they are simply walking in the broad way that leads to destruction. Without a genuine repentance they can have no hope of entering the portals of heaven. Hope is the rainbow that lights up the pathway to the tomb. But to him who dies without hope, death draws down the curtain over a scene full enough of woes in this life, only to raise it upon another, to which the trials, misfortunes, and sorrows of this life are as nothing in comparison to those worse ones whose appalling magni tude were sufficient to crush out all desire for an existence which promises nothing but eternal wee and misery.

The Christian, while he maintains a pure and perfec heart, will not debase and degrade himself and dishono God and Christ by getting in line with the devil to do hi diabolical works of the flesh. (Read Gal. 5: 19-21.) Bu I wish to emphasize this fact: There are many men and more women who day by day are striving with full purpos of heart to follow their Lord and Master, walking in hi way, keeping his commandments, doing his will, to th honor and glory of his name. What all of us need to greater or less degree to lead us in the perfect way is th love of God shed abroad in our hearts, giving us a longin desire to honor and glorify his name; so that by a faithful continuance in well-doing we may attain at last the honor and glories of eternal life. Paul said: "Forgetting thos things which are behind, and reaching forth unto thos things which are before, I press toward the mark for th prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phl 3: 13, 14.) And this high calling is a glorious resurrection from the grave and an entrance into eternal life.

An Appeal From Shelbyville, Ky.

On behalf of the church at Shelbyville, Ky., this appeal is made in the hope that it will not be lightly considered, but that churches everywhere will rally to the support of this most worthy cause for which we have so earnestly abored and prayed.

Several months ago we began worship in a theater. Since that time our number has steadily increased until we now have about thirty faithful members. Realizing that we could make much more marked advancement with regular house of worship, we accordingly purchased a lot in the most desirable part of the town preparatory to building a neat, commodious house. Since, without assistance, we cannot finance the building, we appeal to the churches for a liberal contribution. We think that the building will cost approximately eight thousand dollars; but, with the help of the churches everywhere, we hope to take that amount. The deed has been made sure with a lause that prohibits innovations of any kind.

Shelbyville, a town of about six thousand inhabitants, is the seat of Shelby County. This is one of the richest counties in the State, known as the "Jersey Isle of America." There are only two churches worshiping according to the New Testament in this county, and they are very reak numerically and financially. We consider Shelby-ille the one open door of the State for the cause of Christ. With the church on a solid basis here, we can take the county for Christ.

We trust that brethren everywhere will consider this nost worthy appeal and set a day to make a liberal conribution. We earnestly pray that we can begin the building by April 1, 1922. Send all contributions to R. A. Graig, Shelbyville, Ky.

J. M. Craig, Elder.

P. C. CRAIG, Deacon.

R. A. CRAIG, Minister.

[Personally I know the foregoing appeal to be worthy that which should encourage churches to come to their sistance is the bright prospect, not only for establishing he New Testament order in Shelbyville, but the equally right prospect of its becoming a radiating center of gospel affluence over other parts of the State. It is a most orthy Macedonian call, and I devoutly hope such churches as may become acquainted with the facts will respond that liberal contribution. Brother R. A. Craig is a aithful preacher of the gospel, and he and his associates ill see to it that contributions are properly applied. See is a wide-open door for missionary work, and I hope the churches will enter it.—M. C. Kurfees, Editor.]

The Secret of Peace.

The world is a vast field of conflict. Man is divided gainst man. The face of life is like one of those deeply ssured rocks which speak of the work of underground res. The gospel meets the need involved. It reconciles en to each other. Just so far as men are reconciled God in Christ, so they find that the barriers which vide them from each other begin to disappear. A greatspirit has come into being, which makes them one. hrist is the great destroyer of barriers. He breaks down he middle walls of partition. In him is neither race, nor x, nor class. He unifies both the inward and the outard life. He makes peace everywhere. This is his unique ork. There is no one else who can do it. By winning he heart to God, he brings the power of victory in the ward conflict, and the spirit of unity in outward relaonship. "He is our Peace."-S. M. Berry.

The Land of Storybooks.

At evening when the lamp is lit, Around the fire my parents sit; They sit at home and talk and sing, And do not play at anything.

Now, with my little gun, I crawl, All in the dark along the wall, And follow round the forest rack Away behind the sofa back.

There, in the night, where none can spy, All in my hunter's camp I lie, And play at books that I have read Till it is time to go to bed.

These are the hills, these are the woods. These are my starry solitudes; And there the river by whose brink The roaring lions come to drink.

I see the others far away As if in the firelit camp they lay, And I, like to an Indian scout, Around their party prowled about.

So, when my nurse comes in for me,
Home I return across the sea,
And go to bed with backward looks
At my dear land of Storybooks.
—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Impersonation.

Nature commands the normal child to be ceaselessly occupied during waking life in using all the things at his command to reproduce what he sees going on around him. The child who gallops off on his broomstick, imitating his father on a horse, is getting valuable experience of a simple sort in doing what he may need to do later in life. In this simple action, he is using his senses to get information; and then, most important of all, he is making this information his own by actually doing the act. This is the only way he can learn it. He cannot even perceive accurately until he is under the necessity of reproducing the thing be is perceiving, or adapting himself to it in some way. Nature will not develop any faculty unless there is need for it. If the child could get all he wants without becoming sharp in sight, hearing, taste, touch, and smell, he never would acquire any keenness through any of his senses.

The child who has a large sand pile in which he may make pies, build houses, and so on, has a better chance to develop his intelligence than a child who is not so favored. As a rule, the better the child's opportunities for imitation and the wider the range of his imitations, the more rapid and normal progress he will make in the development of Often parents think that doll play is simply amusement, but it may be the means of developing intelligence in a high degree. The child of four or five who cares for her doll, watchful of its needs, nursing it when in trouble, dressing it, putting It to bed, instructing it, is getting forward faster than she ever could without such experience. These activities all require keen observation and intelligence in execution. Doll play brings in most of the factors of intellect which are required in caring for a little child in real life. Of course, the more the child has to do for her doll, the better it will be for her intellectual development. doll which the child does nothing but look at, rock to sleep, or carry in her arms, is of slight value compared with one that must be dressed and undressed, have her hair combed, her nails polished, for whom clothes must be made, and so on.

As the child's range of observation increases, doll play ought to become more varied and educative. A child who is given a suggestion now and again will readily develop a high degree of imaginative feeling with regard to dolls, all of which may be vastly important for intellectual develop ment. Suppose a child has five or six dolls of different sizes and appearance. Each one may be made to personify a member of the family or some person in the neighborhood, or a character in history or in some story which she has heard. Then these characters may be made to act their parts in a little drama. There is no experience in human life which is more absorbing than these play dramatics in early childhood, and it must be impressed that in this play the child is simply taking mental possession of the world around him. If he did not dramatize life, he would not learn it.

An observing parent must have noted his child's passion to play a part. Every living thing he sees furnishes a model for personification. Now he is a cat, now a dog, now one of his playmates, and so on ad libitum. Do you see what this means for development? Suppose, for instance, that a child five years old visits a blacksmith. When he comes home, you may find him shoeing horses all the time. Anything will answer for the horse. All the child is concerned with is the shoeing. In performing this activity he is really learning about it.

What an advantage it would be to your child if he could utilize the objects in his home so far as possible to carry on his imitations! Perhaps you have looked upon these play activities only as an annoyance, and have felt that they should be suppressed. But greater harm could scarcely be done a child than to prevent him from imitating and personifying the people and things about him.—Prof. M. V. O'Shea, University of Wisconsin.

Friendship.

Does the thought come to you at times that you have a few real friends?

You wish that you had more that you could go to in a confidential manner and bare your heart freely.

Then a feeling of loneliness engulfs you, as you see acquaintances around you who might make good friends, but who have hown no desire on their part to take you inside the circle of their friendships.

Then, again, have you thought how really few persons could regard you as more than a mere acquaintance?

Have you ever shown that you might be a true friend to many persons?

Perhaps several persons have shown that they would be glad to come nearer if you so desired, but you have not encouraged them to make advances.

Most of us would like to have different ones profess a strong friendship for us, but back up when it comes to assuming the position of a warm and generous friend.

If you want a friend, you must be a friend.

If you feel that you are alone, you are to blame in nine cases out of ten.

Yet one true and loyal friend is worth waiting a lifetime to find

Adversity discovers the real friend we have least considered in that light.—J. J. Mundy.

Visions are frequently affected by character. A story is told by Helvetius of two individuals who believed the moon to be inhabited, and, telescope in hand, were attempting to discover its inhabitants. One was a parson, and the other was a fine lady. The lady, of course, looked first, and she said: "I see two shadows, and they bend toward each other; they are evidently two happy lovers." The parson looked next, and said: "Fie, madam! for shame! The shadows you saw are the two steeples of a cathedral."—W. Hamilton.

B. L. Canida wishes to know what sins are to be confessed. He quotes 1 John 1: 9, 10: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us." We cannot confess public sins. Evidently the sins to be confessed are secret sins. Instead of affirming that we are perfect, we should confess our sins. Some sins it is better not to confess to the whole church. The confession should be made to those concerned and to those who have been sinned against. While we are to confess our sins to one another, yet it would be difficult to lay down any exact rule as to whom confession should be made further than as stated above.

Brother McQuiddy: Does the Bible anywhere forbid Christians conducting or taking part in ice-cream suppers or anything of that nature, decently conducted, for the purpose of raising money to apply on a public-school building and walks to same?

Christians may engage in the ice-cream business to make a living. In this business, as well as in all others, Christians should deal honorably and uprightly. They should not resort to ice-cream festivals in order to raise money for the Lord. The Lord does not need such help. The thought of appealing to the flesh to raise money for the Lord is grossly violative of his law and insulting to God. Giving should be a deliberate purpose to give. "But this I say, He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver." (2 Cor. 9: 6, 7.)

Brother McQuiddy: We have had some discussion in our Bible class of Rom. 9: 17-23. Some take the position that Pharaoh was helpless in the matter and could not have done otherwise if he had wanted to. Please give your idea of it in the Query Department.

W. R. Cox.

Rom. 9: 17-23 reads as follows: "For the scripture saith unto Pharaoh, For this very purpose did I raise thee up, that I might show in thee my power, and that my name might be published abroad in all the earth. So then he hath mercy on whom he will, and whom he will he hardeneth. Thou wilt say then unto me, Why doth he still find fault? For who withstandeth his will? Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why didst thou make me thus? Or hath not the potter a right over the clay, from the same lump to make one part a vessel unto honor, and another unto dishonor? What if God, willing to show his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much longsuffering vessels of wrath fitted unto destruction: and that he might make known the riches of his glory upon vessels of mercy, which he afore prepared unto glory?" It is not said that Pharaoh was born for that purpose, but God raised him up to be king on the throne for that purpose, because that by resisting God he had fitted himself for a vessel of destruction. "But when Pharaoh saw that there was respite, he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as Jehovah had spoken." (Ex. 8: 15.) God hardened his heart in that he sent the plagues upon him. If, instead of resisting God, he had bowed in submission to God's will, his heart would have been softened. The gospel either hardens or softens the heart of sinners. "For we are a sweet savor of Christ unto God, in them that are saved, and in them that perish; to the one a savor from death unto death; to the other a savor from life unto life." (2 Cor. 2: 15, 16.) God hardens the heart of the disobedient now just as he did the heart of Pharaoh. "Now in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some unto honor, and some unto dishonor. If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified, meet for the master's use, prepared unto every good work." (2 Tim. 2: 20, 21.) Five times it is said of him that he himsell hardened or made heavy his heart (Ex. 7: 13, 22; 8: 15, 32; 9: 7) before it is ever said that God hardened him (Ex. 9: 12). Even after that it is said that he hardened himself. (Ex. 9: 34.) Thus he at first closed his own heart to God's appeals, grew harder by stubborn resistance under God's judgments, until at last, as a punishment for his stubborn rejection of right, God gave him over to his mad folly. God will have mercy on all who love him and keep his commandments.

Brother McQuiddy: Please explain Isa. 65: 23, 24; Mark 9: 43-48; Rev. 14: 10. X.

The passages in Isaiah read: "They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for calamity; for they are the seed of the blessed of Jehovah, and their offspring with them. And it shall come to pass that, before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear." This refers to God's chosen people and what would come to them under a perfect reign of faith and obedience.

The passages in Mark are: "And if thy hand cause thee to stumble, cut it off: it is good for thee to enter into life maimed, rather than having thy two hands to go into hell. into the unquenchable fire. And if thy foot cause thee to stumble, cut it off: it is good for thee to enter into life halt, rather than having thy two feet to be cast into hell. And if thine eye cause thee to stumble, cast it out: it is good for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell; where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." Anything that leads any one to sin, though it be as precious as an eye or as useful as a foot or hand, should be rejected. The state of the righteous is eternal life, while the state of the wicked is eternal death. "Worm dieth not, . . , fire is not quenched." This was taken from the last verse of Isaiah, and was probably in current use among the Jews of our Savior's time, as applied to the state of future punishment. It is indicative of the awful and everlasting retribution of the wicked.

The passage in Revelation says: "He also shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is prepared unmixed in the cup of his anger; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb." Those who worshiped the beast shall be tormented with fire and brimstone. I take it the passage means just what it says—"fire and brimstone."

Brother McQuiddy: Do the Scriptures teach that a person, in order to confess his sins to the church, must itemize the sins committed?

J. L. Newman.

I do not understand that the Bible teaches that a man must go into the shocking details of every sin committed, but, to my mind, the following scripture teaches very clearly that a man should specify the sin committed. If he has been guilty of lying, he should say so; if he has been guilty of adultery, he should say so; if he has been guilty of stealing, he should not hesitate to say that he has been guilty of this sin. If our brother will read the following scripture, he will see that this is true: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." (1 John 1: 8, 9.) We cannot confess a sin without naming the sin; neither can we confess a fault without specifying the fault. For a man to get up and say, "I have sinned," in a general way, is not a confession of a specific sin.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

G. C. Brewer is in a meeting at Pikeville, Tenn.

The "Peace and Unity" Number will appear next week.

Charles F. Hardin is in a promising meeting at Cureall, Mo.

- M. C. Cayce reports a good attendance in a tent meeting at Duck Hill, Miss. One baptism.
- M. D. Baumer reports two additions at a regular service at Fairfax Avenue, Winchester, Ky.
- W. Derryberry, of Lebanon, Tenn., is available for song leader in meetings until December 1.
- D. D. Woody reports three baptisms in a meeting at Alberton, in Henderson County, Tenn. He is now at Kenton.
- J. Leonard Jackson closed a good meeting at Rothchild Avenue, this city, with two baptisms and two restorations.
- M. H. Northcross is engaged in a good meeting near Goodlettsville, Tenn. Five baptisms and five restorations are reported.
- C. E. Holt reports twelve additions in a meeting at Stony Point. This congregation is one of the best in Northern Alabama.
- D. F. Draper, of Fort Worth, Texas, is in a good meeting at Smith Springs, ten miles from Nashville. Large crowds are in attendance.
- H. W. Wrye is in a meeting at Hebron, in Wilson County, Tenn. Four baptisms are reported. He baptized six at Scene's Corner, in the same county.
- S. P. Pittman closed a two-weeks' meeting at Tuscumbia, Ala. Sister W. H. Gambill states that there were several conversions and that the results were very gratifying.
- H. M. Phillips conducted a brief but successful meeting at Shiloh, in Humphreys County, Tenn. Three young ladies were baptized. J. D. Derryberry led the singing.
- X. W. Morgan, of Belton, Texas, suffered the loss of his erop during the recent disastrous flood. He has had much sickness in his family, and needs the help and prayers of God's people.

From Charles P. Poole, Harvard University, 5 Dana Street, Cambridge, Mass.; "Please announce in the Gospel Advocate that the tentative place of worship, church of Christ, is 5 Dana Street."

From W. T. Gunter, Route 1, Centerville, Tenn., September 16: "I would like to hold three or four meetings during the months of October and November at schoolhouses or church houses in the country."

From W. Claude Hall, Mayfield, Ky., September 14: "We are in the midst of an excellent meeting here, with large crowds and eleven additions to the congregation from all sources. Alvin Reavis is leading the singing."

George W. Farmer closed his third meeting with the church at Verona, Tenn. Twelve were baptized and two were restored. One decided to be a Christian only. Brother Farmer is now in a meeting at Calhoun, Tenn.

From John Hayes, Tarpon Springs, Fla., September 12: "I am in the second week of a meeting here. Three who had wandered from duty have confessed their wrongs. The audiences have been small, but the interest is good."

Married, at the Russell Street Church, in Nashville, Wednesday, September 14, at 8 P.M., Mr. M. Cameron Cayce and Miss M. Louise Hester, A. B. Lipscomb officiating. The ceremony was witnessed by a large concourse of relatives and friends. The bride and groom are both earnest Christians.

From J. G. Malphurs, Clarksville, Tenn., September 15: "I preached fifteen sermons at Modoc, a mission near Clarksville, and had twenty additions—sixteen baptized, four from the Freewill Baptist Church. I closed to get ready for the debate between myself and a Baptist preacher, to be held at Legate."

From J. V. Armstrong Traylor: "Alvin Landis and I held a very good meeting at Vesta, Tenn., closing on the second Sunday in September, resulting in three additions. Interest continued through the meeting. I am now conducting a meeting near Unionville, Tenn., with the best of interest, having had two additions to date."

W. M. Oakley closed a good meeting of eleven days' duration at Owen's Cross Roads, Ala. Eighteen persons were baptized and one was restored. Three of the conversions resulted from his recent meeting near Gurley, Ala., when a Methodist family sent for him to come back and baptize them. Brother Oakley is now at Pond Creek, near Ashland City, Tenn.

From Samuel E, Witty, Ontario, Cal., September 15: "One baptism here recently. One of our best workers was laid to rest yesterday. Plans are being drawn for our new building, and we want to begin building soon. We had the two largest crowds last Sunday since our revival the first of the year. The congregation recently presented me with a rew Underwood typewriter."

G. A. Dunn writes: "I closed the meeting at Mount Pleasant, Tenn., on September 16, with thirty-eight additions, including twenty-two baptisms. The congregation seemed happy over the meeting, as the crowds were the largest and the number of additions the greatest of any meeting there. I began a meeting in Sparta, Tenn., on September 18. My home address is Houston, Texas."

There will be an eight-days' debate at New Liberty Church, on Green River, near Asphalt, Ky., beginning on October 3, at 10 A.M., between Jesse F. Love, of the church of Christ, and T. A. H. Laslie, of the General Baptist Church. All are invited to come. This place is seven miles from Brownsville, Ky. The nearest railroad point is Glasgow Junction, on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

William P. Walker writes: "Our meeting at Tharpe was finished last night. I was preaching there when I received the sad announcement of Sister Walker's death. There were eleven additions—seven baptisms, two restorations, and two from the Methodists. The latter had been immersed and understood the design of their baptism. I wish to thank the brethren for many encouraging messages of sympathy."

The little band of disciples at Brunswick, Ga., has secured the use of the city hall for a meeting to begin the first Lord's day in October, with G. E. Claus doing the preaching. There are only four members in this town of lifteen thousand people. They would like for some energetic young man of good report to locate with them and help in mission work. For further information, address Sister R. L. Crowell.

From U. G. Wilkinson, Shell Knob, Mo., September 14: "I am at Shell Knob, in the Ozark Mountains, resting and drinking water for my health. I am still slowly improving, and hope to be better yet. I have been doing some preaching along the route as I am able. I preached at Seminole and Atwood, Okla.; at Garfield, Ark.; and at Cato, Mo. I baptized one at Cato. I preached here at Shell Knob last night, and will preach again to-night. I am not yet able to be active in the field, and will not be for some time to come. I hope the brethren will still remember me. Always address me at Comanche Okla. Pray for me."

dress me at Comanche, Okla. Pray for me."

We are glad to learn of Brother Wilkinson's improvement. He deserves the prayers and support of the brethren.

From J. Pettey Ezell: "On November 15, at the end of seven years of peaceful labors with the church at Albany, Ala., I will sever my connection with the same. The church extended me a unanimous invitation to remain with them during 1922. The church at Albany is second to none of my knowledge. Their work for the past eleven years speaks for itself. We have worked together harmoniously and peacefully, and so do we part. They regret to see me go, and I regret to go. I shall ever have an abiding interest in the people here with whom and for whom I have given the best labors of my life. My plans as yet are not perfected, but will be announced later."

From I B. Bradley, Hurricane Mills, Tenn., September 16: "I am in a good meeting at Pruett's Chapel, near here. The meeting is five days old, with eleven confessions to date. There will be baptizing this afternoon, and the meeting will close to-night. I will begin a meeting at Spruce Pine, Ala., next Tuesday night, the Lord willing; next at Phil Campbell, Ala.; then back to Tennessee, and begin with Charlotte Avenue Church, in Nashville, on the second or third Lord's day in October, depending on the finishing of their new house of worship. The work is showing greater results everywhere in my field of labor than last year. Much yet needs to be done. My time is about all engaged for another year and some for 1923. 'Work while it is called to-day."

F. W. Smith has returned from an interesting meeting at Bismarck, Ill.

The brethren at Grant, in Smith County, Tenn., are planning to build a house of worship.

- J. T. Harris, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., is in a good meeting at Stayton, Tenn. Twelve baptisms reported.
- L. B. Jones is in a good meeting with the Bluff Springs congregation, near Lewisburg, Tenn. He reports five baptisms at Rock Hill, near Murfreesboro.

Charles T. Powell commends the "Greater Vision" Number of the Gospel Advocate, September 1. He says it is worth the price of the paper for a full year.

J. R. Stockard closed a meeting at Pleasant Hill, three miles south of Trenton, Tenn., with four additions. The little band there is growing rapidly. He is now at McKenzie, Tenn.

The meeting conducted by E. H. Hoover at South Pryor Street, Atlanta, Ga., closed on Wednesday night, September 14. Eight were baptized and one came from the Baptists. Two were baptized at West End Avenue last Sunday night, and one confessed her sins.

S. M. Jones, of Beamsville, Ontario, Canada, will begin a series of meetings with the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, next Sunday, to continue indefinitely. All former members are cordially invited to be present at the "homecoming" at the first service.

The meeting conducted by S. E. Templeton at Altus. Okla., continued fifteen days, with sixteen baptized into Christ, two reclaimed, and seven by relation. Perkins Ccoper, of Gould, Okla., did good work in leading the singing. Much interest was manifested.

From R. A. Craig, Shelbyville, Ky.: "I take this occasion to announce to the brethren who answered my recent advertisement in the Gospel Advocate that we are in touch with two brethren, one of whom may locate here. If we cannot make satisfactory arrangements, I shall take the matter up with other brethren who responded."

From D. P. Craig, Walnut, Miss.: "I would like to correspond with brethren in the State of Washington with reference to locating there. I would like to know something generally about the country—farming, climate, lands, and opportunity, including prices of lands and homes; also prospects for preachers in the gospel field. Address D. P. Craig, Walnut, Miss."

From Emmett G. Creacy, Horse Cave, Ky.: "This is to say that H. F. Mustain, of Horse Cave, is dead. He was seventy-three years old, and was one of the best men I ever knew. He was strong in the faith. He was well known to the brotherhood."

Brother Mustain was one of God's most loyal servants. The Gospel Advocate shares the grief occasioned by his death.

From L. S. White. Blytheville, Ark., September 13: "I am in a tent meeting at this place, to continue fifteen days. The meeting is starting well. The few members are working for its success, and were ready for it. I see that D. F. Draper, of Fort Worth, Texas, is to hold some meetings in Tennessee. He is a good man and a good preacher, and others in need of meetings would do well to secure his services while there."

From R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., September 16: "I have just closed a ten-days' meeting at Pleasant Knoll, in Warren County. I preached at night only. The crowds were so large we could not seat more than half of the people. I baptized sixty-two, and seven confessed their wrongs. The Morrison and Viola congregations helped very much in the meeting. Our beloved brother, J. R. Stubblefield, who has almost given his life for the cause, was with me a great deal of the time. I made my home with Tom Ramsey and family—a Christian family."

From Dr. W. Boyd, Donelson, Tenn.. September 19: "C. M. Gleaves closed a very interesting and successful meeting here last Friday night. His preaching was earnest, plain, and pointed, with no shunning to declare 'all the coursel of God.' There were sixteen baptisms, one from the Methodists (who had been baptized), and one restoration. Fourteen more who had recently moved into our neighborhood from other sections cast their lots with us yesterday, making a total of thirty-two added to our number this month. The young men are purposing and starting to organize a Bible class to meet on Friday evenings. We feel much encouraged and strengthened by these results."

From John H. Arms, Hermitage Springs, Tenn., September 15: "More than a year ago I began to visit Eminence, Clay County, Tenn., then a mission point, once a month. Last April a few of the faithful were encouraged to begin keeping house for the Lord, and they have been meeting and studying the Scripiures with their children and their neighbors' children, and attending to the worship. I began a meeting there on the first Lord's day in September and continued it eight days. One was baptized and two restored to fellowship. The meeting was well attended at all services, with as good order and attention as one could wish. I am persuaded that his faithful little band is indeed like leaven hid in meal, and the future will prove it."

From R. L. Colley, Waldo, Ark., September 16: "I closed my seventh meeting last Lord's day at Hambrice Schoolhouse. My meetings this year have resulted in forty-nine baptisms and two restorations. Two of those baptized were the oldest that have ever confessed Christ under my preaching. One was seventy-three years of age; the other, seventy-six. The latter had been a steward in the Methodist Church thirty years. I have been laboring in this part of Arkansas for the past two years, and the work has been pleasant. The churches are trying to do the service of God according to their strength. Waldo and other places near by want some one to take the work in this part. Any one desiring to write me should address me at Henderson. Tenn."

From H. C. Harris, Tupelo, Miss., September 15: "I have just closed an eight-days' meeting ten miles west of Houston, Miss. Only one Christian family live there. We had fine attendance. One addition. More were convinced, but wanted a little time to study and be sure they were right, I am to go back there soon for another short meeting. people are taught and almost persuaded, and the work must be kept up. Mississippi is a great mission field, and the work has to be done at a sacrifice. I have done more mission work this year than ever before. When I am not busy preaching, I work with my hands that I may be able to do more mission work. This part of the country has been neglected. H. D. Jeffcoat and I have worked together for three years. During the summer we have been together in several meetings. We have worked for weak congregations and where there was no congregation. We have gone almost at our own charges most of the time. Can we induce others to come over and share this work with us?

Freed-Hardeman College Opening.

BY N. B. HARDEMAN.

The fourteenth session of Freed-Hardeman College began on September 14. The faculty and friends of the school were highly pieased with the number of students present. We have known for quite a while that this was the most critical year in the history of the school. Financial conditions have been so unfavorable that many who would have come have not been able to do so; and besides, other influences have contributed to keep some away. But in spite of these things the number of students present is up to every reasonable expectation, and we know of quite a number that will enter within a few days. It now appears that the attendance this year will exceed that of last year.

Our new girls' dormitory is not quite finished, but it is near enough so that the girls are occupying it and are delighted with their situation. This is a magnificent building. Those who have seen the dormitories of some of the most famous schools of the South say that this building is the best and most convenient of any they have ever seen. The furnishings and equipment in every way are in keeping with the building. There is no better nor safer place for parents to place their girls than here. There are two teachers on the first floor and one on each of the others to look after their wants and care for them in every way.

The organization of the classes and the beginning of the work has been done with less trouble and delay than ever before; and while only two days have passed, everything is running smoothly and every one seems to be happy.

We are highly pleased with our faculty this year, believing it to be one of the best we have ever had. Each member is enthusiastic in his work and determined to render the best service of which he is capable.

We are expecting many more students to enter within the next few weeks.

Caring For Orphans.

BY J. C. M'Q.

I have never heard any one question the goodness of feeding and clothing the fatherless. James tells us: "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world." (James 1: 27.)

Those who visit the orphans, who hear their merry laugh and look into their bright and happy faces, appreciate the fact that sympathetic and helping hands have lifted them out of places of suffering and poverty and put them in the Home where they are content and on the road that leads to a useful manhood and noble womanhood. To see and engage in the work of educating orphans stimulates one to greater efforts in their behalf and brings an inexpressible joy to the heart of him whose help is enlisted. It is remarkably strange that, when all that is worth gaining is acquired by the devotion of the whole man to the work of God, all Christians do not enter heartily upon the work of feeding fatherless children,

Our gifts to the poor should not be withheld on account of financial depression. The appetite is as keen on a stringent money market as on a flush one, and may be keener. The way to lose all we have is to hoard it. A good cow half milked will dry up. Milk her dry each time, and she will give more and more milk. Give to noble causes until you feel it, then God will prosper you more. Some hearts are so narrow and contracted that God will not pour treasures into them. "There is that scattereth, and increaseth yet more; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth only to want." (Prov. 11: 24.) If you would prosper during financial depression, then give more liberally than ever before. Will Christians deny orphans bread because of a stringent money market? Nay, verily; and perish the thought! "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust consume, and where thieves break through and steal: but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth consume, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also." (Matt. 6: 19-21.) "But this I say, He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." (2 Cor. 9: 6.) The Holy Spirit is here speaking of temporal and not spiritual things. I asked a wealthy, Christian brother if he believed the more a Christian gave to the Lord, the more would the Lord give back to him. He did not think so. But to doubt this is infidelity. The Lord selects servants who use his means wisely and efficiently as instruments through whom he works. He did not use the man who buried his talent. He wants us to use our gifts that they may increase a hundredfold. God cannot use the penurious, stingy soul! He is a stench in his nostrils. The way to wither and die is to be forever criticizing those who are active in the work of the Lord, while you grip with a death grip every dollar which comes into your hands. God hates as only he can a covetous, stingy man! May God in mercy deliver us all from the "holier-than-thou" preacher who teaches much truth, but never practices it himself!

I must not fail to call attention to the blessedness of giving. We cannot give as God intends we shall without our hearts being filled with new and inexpressibly sweet joys. The Shunammite woman was hospitable to Elisha. Elisha in turn blessed her life with a child. The one great earthly longing of her soul was satisfied. She enjoyed more the perfume of the roses, the singing birds and the rippling brooks, than she did before this new joy came into her life. God does far more for us than we can do for others. We would do well to remember "the words of the Lord Jesus, that he himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20: 35.) As pleasant as it is to receive a gift, it is far sweeter to give joy and sunshine to another. How dead the heart that does not overflow with joy when its gifts have made life useful and happy for fatherless children! Is there a heart so deprayed and so debased that it does not find joy through the heavenly joys of others? If we live selfish lives, if we close our pocketbooks and turn a deaf ear to the cries of the hungry for food, we will settle down to misery and despair. But if we would have well-rounded lives patterned after the divine, then we must give of our time, our talents, and our means whenever an opportunity presents itself. We should put ourselves in the position of the fatherless and suffering and then do to them as we would have others do to us. "All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them: for this is the law and the prophets." (Matt. 7: 12.)

Let us pass to life's close and thence up to the judgment, Regardless of our theories and differences, we will want it to be well with us then. If we have done the will of Christ, our destiny will be peaceful beyond understanding. If we have fed or given to drink one of Christ's "little ones." our destiny will be all that could be desired. Christ will say to us: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me." 25: 40.) If we have cared for the orphan, if we have been active in good works, how indescribably precious it will be also to have the Lord say to us: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant!" If this is to be the happy consummation after life's failures and victories are over, we must devote ourselves unreservedly to the service of the Lord. We should hate sin-all sin-and loathe it with all the strength of our being. We should be forever reaching out after a life of purity and godliness. We should not be content until we rise to where the snows of purity forever gleam in the glow of heaven.

On the first Lord's day in October the churches are requested to make a specially liberal contribution for the Tennessee Orphans' Home. If any cannot contribute at this time, we would be glad to have them contribute at some other time. We commend the zeal and liberality of the churches. Send your contribution direct to the Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn.

Refuses to Pay-May I Sue?

BY C. R. N.

I have been requested to give an answer to the following question through the Gospel Advocate: "If a man who is a member of the church owes me a debt, acknowledges that he is able to pay me, but positively refuses to do so, declaring that he never expects to pay the debt, what am I to do? Is there no course open for me by which I may collect the debt?"

The New Testament outlines the ideal life—the life for those who would live on the highest plane, those who seek the highest course.

The religion of Christ is designed to take complete control of men in every avenue of life. Though it does not reveal the detail of conducting your business, it does reveal the principle on which it should be conducted. It does not reveal the particular enactments of what we call our civil and criminal law; it does reveal our attitude toward the law and those who execute the law.

In the case mentioned in the foregoing you should ask brethren to assist you in teaching the man and in persuading him to do the right thing. If he positively refuses to pay the debt—being able to discharge the indebtedness—the church should withdraw from him. "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly." (2 Thess. 3: 6.) If the church is lax in the matter of discipline, if they do not withdraw from the man, or if they do, it matters not, so far as your course may be determined; I think you are at liberty to enter suit against the man in the civil courts, the courts of the land

Does some one suggest that such a course and such advice are contrary to the teaching of the New Testament? The sixth chapter of First Corinthians is possibly in the mind of the one who questions the righteousness of the advice given above. Certainly the matter should be brought to the attention of the church—brethren; but when the man persistently refuses to discharge the debt, the church cannot make him do the right in heart or in act. To teach bim and as the final act withdraw from him severs him from the congregation. There is nothing more that you can do, save give exhortations to him. I insist that you have done your full duty when you bring this to the attention of the brethren and the man refuses to pay.

Is it possible that any one has the idea that Jesus has given to the world—humanity—a system of action, a code of ethics, a religion which will enable a man to claim protection beneath the wing of the church in his dishonesty; and not only to claim such protection, but to actually find it—protection in dishonesty through the religion of Jesus Christ? Nay, nay, my brother. If the man can say: "True, I owe you, and true it is that I can and will not pay you; and more, you cannot sue me, for I am a 'brother,' and you dare not go to law with the brother—you dare not sue me "—if all this is true, then the protection he seeks and secures, if you cannot sue him, is furnished him by the teaching of the Bible. Are you prepared to go forth with such a message to the world as the teaching of the Bible?

Am I told that one should suffer loss rather than do wrong? Certainly. But is it wrong to sue the man?

Punishment, if not corrective in its nature, is vicious, and does not exist on the right principle.

"Know ye not, that to whom ye present yourselves as servants unto obedience, his servants ye are whom ye obey." (Rom. 6: 16.) Surely the man mentioned in the foregoing is a servant of Satan, and should be unto you as "the Gentile and the publican." You are to "admonish him as a brother." (2 Thess. 3: 16.)

Who is a brother in the strict sense as declared by Jesus? "Whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." (Mark 3: 35.)

The man who is able to discharge his debts and refuses to do so is not a brother in the scriptural sense of the word, and the civil law is God's agency for the punishment of the man.

I know a number of instances where brethren have been imposed on, as well as defrauded, on the claim of some one claiming to be a brother. Too many have made their profession of religion and church relationship the cloak for sin. The church has suffered and continues to suffer from those who attempt to cover their evil designs and corrupt characters with the livery of heaven.

o o o Walking by Faith.

BY C. W. SEWELL,

The apostle says to the Corinthians: "For we walk by faith, not by sight," (2 Cor. 5: 7.) We all understand that "walk" here does not mean locomotion; does not have reference to literal walking, but to our manner of living and acting. We live, order our lives, by faith. "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God." (Gal. 2: 20.)

We walk or live by faith where faith controls, shapes our lives. But the apostle tells us that "faith cometh by hearing . . . the word of God." (Rom. 10: 17.) We walk by faith when the thing believed controls our actions. When we do what God's word teaches us to do, we walk by faith. But the apostle says we walk "not by sight." This statement amounts practically to a prohibition against walking by sight. The apostle pleased God, and he says he walked "not by sight." Then, if we are to please God, we must not walk by sight; if we do, we evidently will not be well-pleasing to God, "for without faith it is impossible to please him." What is it, then, to walk by sight? The Revised Version places the word "appearance" in the margin. "For we walk by faith, not by appearance." The Greek word from which we have "sight" is defined: "External appearance; mien, look, aspect." (Donigan.) "A view, i. e. form (lit. or fig.), appearance, fashion, shape, sight." (Strong's Concordance.) It seems to be anything as it appears to be as we look at it with physical or mental vision. "Abstain from all appearance of evil." (1 Thess. 5: 22.) "Appearance" here is from the same word. "The fashion of his countenance was changed." (Luke 9: 29.) "Fashion" in this quotation is from the same word. We are to walk, then, or live, in a certain way, or do things because we believe it to be right, and not because it appears to be right.

We use the word "faith" or "belief" wrongly. We say we believe a thing when it is only an opinion. Nothing but a clear statement of God's word can give us faith. (Rom. 10: 17.) What we do if we walk by faith must rest on the word of God. (2 Pet. 1: 3.) Let me illustrate what I mean. In eating the Lord's Supper, if we are to walk by faith, we must eat bread, for the Word says do that. If I substitute meat for the loaf, I might walk by appearance. And as far as human reason goes, the appearance is better than the faith. Was not Christ's death kept before the world for thousands of years by the slaying of animals instead of the breaking of bread? And did not the priests (typica) of Christians) eat the flesh of animals thus offered? Would not meat more strikingly portray the flesh of Christ than does bread? Judging by appearance, should we not rather eat meat than bread? Or might we not eat both? Why not? You respond that we would not be walking by faith, but by appearance, and the apostle tells us not to so walk.

Again, when I come into the assembly of the saints, I can sing, and in this walk by faith. But maybe our little congregation has not been trained to sing and the singing is not good. It appears to me that an instrument would assist materially. We could keep the key of the music and the time better, and thus it appears it would be better to use the instrument. But if we do so, we will be walking by "appearance;" and does not the apostle forbid us to do that? Shall we walk by faith, or shall we walk by appearance?

Rejecting God.

BY THOMAS E. MILHOLLAND.

The antediluvians rejected God; Israel rejected God; Saul rejected God; Nebuchadnezzar rejected God; Belshazzar rejected God. The result: They were drowned, destroyed by serpents and swords, slain by their enemies, "weighed and found wanting." Their kingdoms were taken from them; they were driven in hopeless desperation to consult witches; and finally they fell, to rise no more.

How awful to reject God and to be rejected by him!

"He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace? For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." (Heb. 10: 28-31.)

"Vengeance is mine." "I will recompense." "It is a fearful thing [a thing to be feared] to fall into the hands of the living [not a dead, lifeless, heathen] God."

Note carefully and weigh well the foregoing words. Notwithstanding all these things, men went on rejecting God and his counsel. Even "the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him." (Luke 7: 30.)

After all the warnings of the Old Testament times, the testimony of John the Baptist, came Jesus to warn and save the people. "He was despised and rejected of men." He was treated as the heir, and they declared: "We will kill him, and receive the inheritance as our own." A murderer they demanded to be released to them, and Jesus was killed. Men continued in their sins, rejecting Jesus.

Then came the last warning, the warning of the Holy Spirit in "reproving the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." Still men grieve him and turn him away. "Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye." (Acts 7: 51.)

Called by the blessed Savior and inspired by the Holy Spirit, the apostles left their homes and loved ones, as well as their business, and followed Jesus even unto death. During their labors the Bible was completed—the Bible, God's message to man, the one book which teaches you how to live to be happy here and hereafter.

Think what it cost to bring the blessed Bible to us! Think what it cost heaven and earth to set us free from sin; to open the way to glory for man, who was lost in sin! How can men reject the Master? How can they resist the Holy Spirit? The history is ever the same with people. When they start in this course of opposition to Jehovah, rejecting him, they are soon "past feeling" (Eph. 4: 19), have their conscience seared (1 Tim. 4: 1, 2), sin willfully (Heb. 10: 26), sin unto death (1 John 5: 16), and come to believe a lie (2 Thess. 2: 11). Such people are lost, forever lost. How sad! It is the result of rejecting God.

Personal Notes.

J. M. Childress closed a meeting at Alex, Okla., with twenty-nine additions—nineteen by confession and baptism, nine by restoration, and one by identification. The interest and attention were good.

John W. Hedge closed a good meeting at Danville, near Kilgore, Texas, the second Lord's day night in September, with thirteen additions—twelve baptisms. He is now in his sixth meeting with the church at Rush Springs, Okla.

From Mrs. Fletcher White, Megargel, Texas: "J. M. Childress, of Bowie, Texas, recently held a meeting resulting in twenty-four additions—twenty-two by baptism. He preached some splendid sermons and earnestly endeavored to instill in us a desire for greater service to God and his cause."

From Ira Wommack, Sulphur, Okla., September 12: "Last Lord's day I filled my regular appointment at Byars. Okla. We had a fine crowd. One was restored and nine were baptized, three of whom were from the denominations. I am glad people are beginning to learn that they can be saved at other times than during protracted meetings. The church at Byars is doing well."

From W. T. Hines, Braman, Okla., September 12: "My symmer's work has been enjoyable. I baptized three at Wynn Chapel and nine at Blackwell, Okla.; also set the work in order at Blackwell, with thirty-one workers. Then I conducted four meetings in Southern Texas, near Palacios. At Bayview there were eight baptisms, and twenty-seven were set to keeping house for the Lord; at Cranquah, no additions; at Oliva, three were added; at Blessing, a good meeting, but no additions. My next meeting was at Mount Hope, Okla.; no additions, but some church strife settled. My next meeting will be at Ripley, Okla."

Appreciations.

- "Your 'Greater Vision' Number is a great success." (M. D. Baumer, Winchester, Ky.)
- "The special issues are worth the price of the paper." (Walter L. Brummett, Route 1, Brownsville, Tenn.)
- "I hope the Gospel Advocate will continue as sound and good as it is, for I do not think it could be improved upon."
 (N. W. Deacon, Henderson, Tenn.)
- 'Find two dollars and fifty cents for my renewal. The issue of September 1 alone is worth it. You may consider me a lifetime subscriber." (M. E. Burnett, Sunset, Texas.)
- "I love the people who publish the Gospel Advocate, because they stand by the truth taught in the Book of books. The special number is excellent." (Mrs. Sarah Parrish, Garrison, Mo.)
- "The special numbers are welcomed by a very large number of readers here; and it seems to me that I have never read more edifying, comforting, and beautiful thoughts than have appeared in the Gospel Advocate during the past four months." (Mrs. I. C. Hoskins, Martin, Tenn.)
- "The 'Greater Vision' Number of the Gospel Advocate is on my desk. It is truly inspiring. So many excellent writers with such a scope of vision is sure to be fruitful of good to a very great extent. They have spoken concerning a 'greater vision.' Let us go forward. May it be expressive of our sentiment to sing: 'Lord, plant my feet on higher ground.'" (Fred M. Little, Montgomery, Ala.)
- "I am always glad to get every Gospel Advocate that comes, and have often wished that it could come daily, or twice a week, anyway; but the 'Greater Vision' Number, September I, is food for the week. Why can we not have a special number each week, and each subscriber loan his paper and talk it for the good of the people and the increase of the subscription list, too? I would love to send you a dozen new subscribers; yes, I would be glad for it to come to every home around me, for we grow so little and selfish when our thoughts rise no higher than the things of this world." Yearly Meeting at Naish Springs, West Virginia.

BY A. A. BUNNER.

One of the best and most interesting old-time yearly meetings of disciples of Christ began on Thursday night, September 1, and continued over the following Lord's day, with the church of Christ at Naish Springs, near Willow, W. Va. So far as I could see, unity, love, and peace prevailed throughout the entire meeting. There were two sessions each week day and three sessions on Lord's day. Several congregations from Ohio, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia were represented in this meeting. It was not a meeting for legislation for King Jesus in ways and means to carry on the work and worship of the church, but it consisted of preaching, teaching, prayers, exhortations, and songs, in order to stir up the pure minds of disciples of Christ to greater activities in the great work of building up the church and saving lost souls, and the brethren and preachers who were in attendance went away feeling that it was good for them to be there. While the concregation there is young in the work of the Lord, their hospitality was unbounded and unstinted. The church at Naish Springs contemplates having a meeting of this kind each year. The next one is to begin on Thursday night before the last Lord's day in August, 1922, to continue over the following Lord's day. The following preachers were in attendance during a part or all of the meeting: Fred L. Rowe, C. E. Fogle, J. F. Ice, A. M. Fellows, J. N. Stevens, Fred E. Dennis, C. W. Edwards, J. M. Rine, E. E. Jovnes, S. R. Cassius (colored), and A. A. Bunner. The following were some of the subjects handled: Address of welcome by C. E. Fogle; "What Is the Faith?" Fred L. Rowe; "The Church as a Holy Institution," J. F. Ice; "Our Love to God and Our Duty toward Each Other," E. E. Joynes; "Building Up the Church," Fred E. Dennis; "The Plan of Salvation," J. M. Rine: "The Lord'sday Worship-Its Object and Importance," A. A. Bunner; "The Scriptural Way of Supporting the Cause," S. R. Cassius: "The Power and Importance of the Word of God," by J. F. Ice. 1 would like to see and hear of more meetings of this kind throughout the brotherhood; and if conducted in the same spirit that this one was, they will do good. O, may the love, zeal, and liberality of the disciples of Christ continue to abound more and more!

Our beloved brother, W. M. Parker, of Gilmer, Texas, was born on September 22, 1852, and died on April 20, 1921, at his home, surrounded by his loved ones and friends. Brother Parker had long been a Christian, and served as elder with efficiency for more than twenty-five years in Gilmer. He loved the Gospel Advocate, and his home was always the preacher's home. Thompson.

Florence N. Stephenson was born in Kaufman County, Texas, on March 4, 1858, and died at her home at Rockwall, Texas, on August 20, 1921. She was married to John Thompson on February 7, 1875. In the fall of that year both husband and wife obeyed the gospel and started to raising a Christian family. Two children were born to this union, Annie and Etta, both of whom were taught the Bible in early girlhood and became Christians. Thompson was one of those Sister good, plain mothers we love to think of: and when this is read by those who knew her they will say, "I never knew a better woman." The Thompson family knew the Bible well, and when (about twenty-five years ago) the wave of departure from the Bible and Christian worship came to Sister Thomp-son's home congregation, she opposed it bitterly, and did so until the day of her death. I firmly believe Sister Thompson held the church in higher esteem than anything else in this world. She had been a great sufferer for many years, but kept going to church all the time when she was able. I am glad I knew her, and I think she was, like Abraham, a "blessing to was, like Abraham, a "blessing to others." Those whom she left behind have nothing to grieve over only the separation and the thoughts of her suffering; for she was truly a Christian, and is far better off than while vexed with suffering and pain of this J. Butler.

Mrs. Libbie Butler (née Carden) was born in Henderson County, Tenn., on April 28, 1901. She never knew a mother's love, but did not lack for parental care and guidance. When eighteen years of age she was baptized into the one body by Brother J. L. Holland, of Greenfield, Tenn., and was enrolled as a member of the church at Williams Chapel. On September 26, 1920, she was married to Mr. Albert Butler, and shortly afterwards moved to Bemis, Tenn., where fortune seemed to smile upon their new home and happiness took up its abode. On the morning of June 30, 1921, a dull headache and an unnatural cast of the eye warned the husband that a physician should be called. Despite the efforts of a skilled nurse and the untiring labors of relatives and friends, early on the morning of July 1 her spirit took its flight to Him who gave it. Her body was brought back to the home burying ground and, with her newborn babe lying in her arms, laid to rest in the presence of a large crowd of sympa-thizing friends. The writer, assisted thizing friends. The writer, assisted by a personal friend of the family, tried to speak words of comfort to the bereaved. Libbie had a cheerful disposition and was a dispenser of happiness to those with whom she associated. She was industrious and painstaking. Walker.

On Monday, August 29, 1921, at 7:30 P.M., while I was conducting a meeting at Tharpe, Tenn., the angel of death silently visited the home of Brother and Sister Young, near Burns, Tenn,, and took from their presence my beloved companion. They found her prepared, waiting and willing to accompany them to that eternal habitation of God where the redeemed rest from all their labors. Sister Walker was a devoted Christian woman, and indeed a coworker with me in my ministry for the Lord. She was ever ready to sacrifice the pleasures of this life that I might "preach the word." She was twenty-eight years, ten months, and six days of age. She was baptized on the fourth Sunday in August, 1915, by Brother Oscar Parham. On the second Sunday in May, 1917, Brother W. N. Ferguson pronounced the ceremony that united us in mar-Funeral services were conriage. ducted by Brethren F. P. Taylor and E. P. She leaves two sisters to weep with me. Our loss is heaven's gain,

FIELD REPORTS

Big Sandy, Tenn., September 12 .-Brother S. Kelley, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn, recently closed a two-weeks' meeting for the Cedar Grove congregation, with thirteen baptized and one restored. Brother Kelley was brought up in the Methodist Church, and knows how to help bring our Methodist friends to the gospel light.— Elvira Dobson.

Fosterville, Tenn., September 15 .-On September 4 Brother E. L. Cambron, of Wartrace, Tenn., began a series of meetings for the Fosterville congregation, which continued until the evening of September 14. One erring brother was restored to his "first love," and his wife, who was a Baptist, gave up a man-made church and a man-given name and wanted to be a Christian only. The church is greatly strengthened. "Let brotherly love continue." Brother W. B. Smotherman, of Oakville, Ky., led the song service.-Jessie Stone Brothers.

Gadberry, Ky., September Prother Porter Norris, whose home is near Memphis, Tenn., closed a week's meeting at Smith's Chapel on the first Sunday night in September, which resulted in two baptisms, with others almost persuaded. This is the third annual meeting Brother Norris has held for us, and we hope to have him come again. The few faithful ones who meet at this place each Lord's day feel greatly strengthened. Brethren, pray for us that we may become a Brethren. shining light to the world-a city set on a hill, that cannot be hid. R. W.

Moss Bluff, Fla., September 12.— The disciples of Christ of Marion County, seeing the great need of mission work in this and adjoining counties, decided to put forth greater effort in the Lord's cause, and at a rally meeting on the fifth Sunday in May, with the church at Oxford, they selected Brother S. W. Colson to start on this work, and we believe much good will be accomplished; but we need more good, zealous preachers. Brother Colson has temporarily had to give up his regular monthly appointments with some weak churches, but these will continue their weekly Lord's-day meetings to break bread and study the word. Brother Colson has held interesting meetings at three mission points, with nine additionsone from the Baptists and eight baptisms-and the people are calling for more gospel preaching. On the fifth Sunday in July the congregations engaged in this work had another meeting at Lacota. Brother J. O. Barnes. of Lake City, preached a fine sermon in the forenoon, and after a bountiful dinner talks were given by brethren from the different congregations, and Brother Colson gave his report, after which the people listened to another good sermon by Brother McMullen, of Largo. The fifth-Sunday meeting in October will be held with the little church at Moss Bluff. Brother Colson will continue this mission work until then, and we are hoping for greater things, and that the weak churches may be edified and new congregations established.—Mrs. M. N. Waters.

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quick-silver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, eramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

Shelbyville, Ky., September 13.—Our meeting at Parksville, Ky., closed last Sunday morning after continuing a week. I was called home on account of the illness of my wife, who has typhoid fever. I am to begin a meeting at Parkland Church, in Louisville, next Sunday.—R. A. Craig.

Arkland, Tenn., September 13.-On the first Sunday in September I began a meeting at South Point Church, in Maury County, Tenn., and continued it till the following Sunday. This meeting was well attended by the people of that community, and we had several visitors during the meeting. Brother B. C. Cathey led the singing, and I believe we had the best singing there of any place I have ever been. We had eighteen additions to the church-We had twelve by baptism and six restored. am now at Arkland, with large crowds and good interest. My next meeting will be at Scott's Hill, Tenn.—I. A. My next meeting Douthitt.

Red Boiling Springs, Tenn., September 12.—Brother T. B. Clark, of Childress, Texas, last night, at the water's edge, closed one of the most interesting meetings of the church's history. The meeting began on August 28. The attendance was good and the best of order prevailed throughout the meeting. There were at least eight hundred people at the closing services. This is the place where Brother Clark met Elder C. B. Massey (Missionary Baptist) in a four-days' debate some four years ago. There were two restorations and six baptisms, and four of this number were baptized "the same hour of the night."—R, R. Clark.

Athens, Ala., September 11.-I am just home from Hollywood, Mo., where I closed my fifth meeting with these faithful brethren. There were twelve baptisms. During these five meetings more than one hundred people have obeyed the gospel. During the last year Hollywood has started two other congregations, with the assistance of Brother J. S. Jones and the church at Senath, Mo. Southeast Missouri is one of the most fertile fields for the gospel I know anywhere, Brother Jones has devoted the entire summer to mission work and has had one hundred and twenty-seven additions. work in Athens is encouraging. Brother J. D. Derryberry recently closed a good meeting at Culleoka, Tenn. There was one restored. This church has recently bought splendid property from the Presbyterians, and has a bright future before it.—J. W. Brents.

Cleveland, Tenn., September 13.closed out our meeting at Nelson, in Blount County, Sunday afternoon, after preaching day and night for weeks, with the exception of four sermons preached at Fogsville, in the same county. Three men, heads of families, were baptized into the body. The brethren have agreed to keep house for the Lord "as it is written." Eleven months ago this congregation had about gone sectarian, but now we have this one loyal congregation in Blount County, and through our efforts one other place is willing to speak with the word, except three men. are expecting great results soon in Blount County. Brethren, cooperate with us in this work with your prayers, if in no other way. I begin next at Harris' Creek, in Bradley

County, a mission point. Pray that much good may be done.—Vernon Rozar

Albany, Ala., September 14.-On September 1 I closed a good meeting with the church at Diana, Tenn., which resulted in twelve baptisms. The interest was good throughout the meeting. The cause is new at Diana, but is in a prosperous condition. The work at Albany is in a healthful condition, and plans are being made for 1922 activi-M. Keeble (colored) was supported by the church in a recent meeting among his people which resulted in eight baptisms, six of whom were originally Holiness preachers. James H. Strong, who is an excellent man and one of M. Keeble's converts, conducted services at the colored church of Christ the next Sunday and baptized two more. The whole colored population was stirred by Keeble's preaching, and many of his people are calling for him to come back at once. I am now in my third consecutive meeting at Mount Pleasant, Franklin County, Ala,-J. Pettey Ezell.

Mulat, Fla., September 10 .- On the return trip from Avon Park, I stopped over with a faithful little band of brethren at Palatka. Brother P. G. Millen is untiring in laboring for the and surrounding community. He is now being aided by Brother Taimes, who, though young in the cause, is upbuilding of the cause in Palatka rapidly developing useful talents in the Lord's work. I have never been more impressed with faithfulness in the Lord's cause than at Palatka. ery member and even little children contributed to the Lord's treasury. We began a meeting there on August 31 and continued it over September 6. There were no baptisms, but I left them strong in faith and rejoicing in They use a rented hall. It is by cooperation of the Jacksonville church and the services of Brother Willis H. Allen that Brother Millen has been enabled to do so much in the face of opposition and other hindrances, but we may look to see a strong congregation of disciples at that place.-A. T. Hamiter.

Esteven, Saskatchewan, Canada, September 6.-Since last annual report 1 have established a new church at Harptree, with thirty-six members, and one has been added by baptism since. We are now establishing a new church here in Estevan. Brother Orr and his family and Sister Peterson, whom I baptized this spring, have been meet-ing privately. This is the first meeting held here publicly. I began here on August 21 and closed last night until Sunday night. One was baptized, and three who had united with the Baptist Church have returned to em-brace the Lord with simple faith and trust. The one baptized came from the "Brethren," and there has been a fighting prejudice thrown against our efforts since the first. While our religious neighbors have been saying mean and spiteful things about me, I have been inviting them to come and take the platform and show the people anything that I have incorrectly taught. They have not yet appeared. Many are seriously impressed, and we look for more additions soon. some one give me the street and number of the meeting place of the Minneapolis Church for a sister that is going there?-H. A. Rogers.

Nashville, Tenn., September 13.—1 began a meeting at Vesta, in Wilson County, on Sunday, September 4, and closed at the water on Monday, September 12. There were four baptized and one restored. Of those baptized, one had been a Methodist; one, a Presbyterian; and one had been an infidel. J. Armstrong Traylor had charge of the song service, but left me on Saturday to begin a meeting near Shelbyville. All those baptized were past middle age, except one young lady.—A. S. Landis.

Washington, D. C., September 12.—I have just returned from Jacksonville, Pa., where I conducted a series of meetings and Bible studies for fifteen days. Nine were baptized, and others who had been neglecting their duty promised to be faithful to God's commands. The church was strengthened, and each heart has set to work to do more for Christ. Some of the best people I ever met live at Jacksonville. I had a delightful home with Brother W. L. Eyster and family. —W. S. Long.

Belleview, Tenn., September 14.—Brother F. C. Sowell's meeting with the congregation at South Harpeth closed on August 24, with ten baptisms. The last service was held at the water, where two men, one aged fifty-two and the other about seventy-five, were baptized. Brother Sowell did some most excellent preaching, which was highly appreciated, and we trust much and lasting good was done. May he be spared yet many years for such usefulness and commendable work.—D. E. McPherson.

Gallatin, Tenn., September 13.—I recently held a meeting at Amory, Miss., at which place six were added to the one body. From there I went to Fairfield, Ala., where eleven were baptized. From there I went to Gallatin, Tenn., preached one night, and then to Old Union, where I heard Brother G. C. Brewer, and met many of God's noble men that I knew more than thirty years ago. It was there I was taught my first lesson in the Bible. I am now in a meeting at Center Chapel, in Wilson County.—A. D. Dies.

Peweee Valley, Ky., September 12.—On last Friday night we closed a short meeting with the Fairfax Street congregation, Winchester, Ky. The meeting, though of short duration, was pronounced by the brethren one of the best in the history of the congregation. We commenced on August 31 and closed on September 9, with two services each day. These services were well attended, the house being almost filled at some of the afternoon services, and at night we sometimes had more than the house would seat. There were ten baptisms and one to take membership with the congregation as visible results.—T. Q. Martin.

Watseka, Ill., September 12.—I arrived home last Wednesday morning, and found all well. On Saturday I went to Bismarck and was with Brother F. W. Smith Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night. Brother Smith preached three fine sermons. As the New Light Christian Church saw fit to start a meeting at the time we had an nounced for over six months we were to hold our meeting, our audiences are not oute as large as they ought to be; but Brother Smith is doing good, and

Des Moines, N. M., September 12.— Brother T. H. Matheson began a meeting here on August 28 and closed it on September 9. The interest was very good. Both Lord's days we had allday services, and the Methodist people dismissed their meetings to attend. Brother Matheson proclaimed the gospel in a fearless manner; and while at times it seemed that he spoke so boldly that if any of them were prone to take offense they would certainly quit attending, yet they came right along. There were no additions, but the brethren were very much strengthened. Brother Matheson is a strong preacher, and does not shun to declare "the whole counsel of God."-C. A. Trevillion.

Nashville, Tenn., September 15.—A few weeks past Brother George W. Farmer wrote me, asking that I hold a mission meeting at Rockwood, Tenn., a town with a population of six thousand, and only twenty loyal disciples in the entire county (Roane). I began this meeting (under a tent) on the fourth Lord's day in August. The first services were held in a schoolhouse, due to the tent being one day late in arriving. The meeting continued seventeen nights, with an average attendance of three hundred. Fourteen were baptized, two were restored, and four came from the "digressives." Of those baptized, five were Baptists and one was a Methodist. The brethren will start building at once. All of this is the result of the untiring zeal and interest of Brother George W. Farmer, of Cleveland, Tenn.. who is making a strong effort in having the gospel preached in East Tennessee.—Will J. Cullum.

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their cloquence, their fiddles, and their fox hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eternal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Ricc. Into one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and remantic story of the two most wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifetong rivalry of the two famous brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that attracted the attention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER," the peerless and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters extending the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters extending from a President of the United States to a fex hound," the story touches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of crackling camp fires and the music of the chase.

Union, S. C., September 12.-The past week proved one of much joy for us all. Four have been baptized, one of whom is Brother Burton's eldest daughter, and our crowds have been exceptional. We were hindered some by the rain, but consider to have done well. Then two of our girls left for the Fanning Orphan School, and we are hoping great things of them. Our morning services yesterday were well attended, and we had some new faces. We rejoice, too, that we are free of debt, and little by little we are being assisted so that we can finish. I believe that if every one could see with our eyes, then the full amount would be forthcoming. It is certainly a needy field, and it is our part to give them the good news whether they receive it or not. We expect to continue the present meeting to the middle of this week .- G. F. Gibbs.

Elk City, Okla., September 12.— Brother J. C. Rigney and I closed the meeting at Irving, Texas, last Friday The crowds were large and interest fine, although a Baptist meeting was in progress all the time. There were thirty-eight additions-twenty-six by baptism, several from various denominations, and one from the Catholic persuasion. I have lived and labored with these people ever since I left the Central Church in Fort Worth. They are fine people, and our labors together have been most pleasant. After November 1 I will be located at Dyersburg, Tenn. Eight ant. years back I left my field of labor in West Tennessee, where I had lived and labored nine years. During these eight years which I have lived in the West for health advantages I have looked to the time when I could return to my old field of labor with anxiety. We think we can live in Tennessee without fears now. I am much averse to roaming and aim to be settled to fight I am now in a meeting at it out now. Taylors, Okla. After my labors here I shall go to Hallsville and Marshall, Texas. My first meeting in Tennessee will be at Memphis, my old home. I went there in 1904, when there were less than two dozen Christians in that city worshiping "as it is written;" now there are six congregations. I have assisted in starting several new congregations in Texas, New Mexico, and one in California during my stay in the West. Western people are aggressive and thoroughgoing in the main; but I think I see one thing badly needed among the churches—more interest in the destitute fields. They generally do things at home, but do not go abroad enough; in fact, we all fall far short here.—J. W. Dunn.

Colorado Tent Season Ended.

BY E. C. FUOUA

The unusual cold of September this year announces the approach of winter one month earlier than we generally expect it. This compelled us to take down our tent and pack it away till next season. We closed the last meeting last Thursday night (September 8), and 1 am now looking for schoolhouses and other buildings in which we shall try to continue the work through the winter.

The tent work in this city resulted in some twenty-five souls being added to the "one body" in Fort Collins. We closed in the midst of a good interest, but the cold was unbearable. However, the good seed sown will continue to grow. Last week I baptized a fine man, a husband and a father. Tonight (September 12) I was called by telephone and asked if I would baptize his wife "the same hour of the night." I was at work in the tract department, but went immediately and arranged for the baptizing, calling together a few brethren, and at half past eight o'clock the earnest woman was buried with the Lord in baptism and raised to walk in newness of life. Both husband and wife are now "rejoicing in the Lord" with the rest of us. They have two fine children who will doubtless follow the noble example of their parents. Thus, in a manner, the meeting which closed last week continues, and I have good cause to believe it will yet continue in this manner.

Recently I baptized a fine lady who was an Episcopalian and the mother of two excellent young ladies. Sunday I baptized the older of the young ladies, and the father is so interested that we expect his obedience at any time. Twice recently, while visiting the afflicted in different parts of the city, I found this sister already admin-Istering as best she could. She is making another "Dorcas." (Acts 9: 36-40.)

"Diamonds in the rough" are constantly being found in mission work, and when polished and shaped by a little teaching of the Master they begin to shine with wonderful luster. Such are several of those found this summer. These, too, had all been lost or wasted in the bogs of sectarianism; but when found by the pure gospel of the Savior of man, they readily responded to his touch, and I know he is justly proud of them.

Full many a gem of purest ray serene The dark, unfathomed caves of ocean

Full many a flower is born to blush unseen

And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

If the barren wastes of sectarianism could be made to give up the "flowers" and "gems" securely hidden within their vain confines, this world would be far more like paradise than it is. Through my humble labors this summer the Savior has successfully robbed sectarianism and the world of a number of most brilliant gems, which now shine, unhindered, to the honor of him alone, and, fixed in his priceless diadem, are being pressed tenderly upon his brow. How thankful I am that he could thus use me! Though unworthy of his use, I am all the more amazed at his wonderful mercy toward me, which uses me in spite of my unworthiness. Truly, the missionary is a "fisher of men." Chrislian missionary work is the most soul-invigorating, heart-enrapturing, satisfying, consoling, and joy-giving of all the labors possible to men. I can readily see why the early Christians were so willing to die for the cause for which they lived. To the true missionary there is no sting in death; there is no death to him, save that consciousness of dying daily, but with each ebb of the life that now is there is a corresponding flow of the life that is to come. Thus both the sting of death and the victory of the grave are annulled in the life of God's true missionary. Men have manifested strong love in various directions, toward various objects, but the love of missionary work in Jesus' name claims the greatest exhibition of human love ever seen. Men may have bravely died for other loves, but for this they have gladly died, "having the desire to depart and be with Christ." The former was accomplished through blind hope; the latter, in the intelligent embrace of hope divine. Taste and see, my brother. You will certainly find it thus.

Cultivate Observation.

Observation is a quality that is easy to cultivate if you make up your mind to do so. Try to notice the birds and beasts, the men and things you see every day. Ask yourself at night what you have seen during the day. At first your answers will be very short, but soon you will find that you are beginning really to see things. It is not difficult, and it is well worth while. Allied with observation is the power of imagination. The first enables us to see things as they are; by means of the second we see things as they might be. Imagination makes use not of the outward eye, but of the mind's eye,-Selected

CAUSES OF DISCORD=

Straight From the Shoulder Articles

A. B. Lipscomb Scores the He-Gossip.

I note a disposition among the contributors to this Special Number to write plainly concerning the underlying causes of unrest and to decry those influences which mar the peace and happiness of the churches. This is just as it should be. Nothing is gained by "beating around the bush." Why indulge in platitudes and generalities, when we can write plainly and leave nothing to guess at? I propose to discuss frankly in this article one of the most disturbing factors with which we have to deal—the hegossip. He is really more than a disturbing factor; he is a menace, a pest, a barnacle in the way of peace and progress. Recently I have been the victim of this insidious mischlef worker, and I know whereof I write. Some things have occurred which lead me to question Kipling's theory that "the female is the more deadly of the species."

It is not difficult to discover the he-gossip's trail. He frequents the barber shop, the restaurant, and hangs around the doors of the house of worship. If he cannot find a listener at his usual haunts, he will buttonhole one on the streets and will often pour scandal into unwilling cars. He never takes the trouble to investigate or authenticate the truth or faisity of what he hears. On the other hand, he makes the matter worse than it really is, reminding us of the lines:

"And all who told it added something new; And all who heard it made enlargements, too."

"They say" is the source from which most of his reputation-destroying rumors flow. It is pretty safe to assume that when an assertion reflecting upon any one is begun by the phrase, "They say," it is not true. No other source is so prolific of the poison that blasts character, undermines good names, and sows the seeds of evil and ruin, It furnishes the food upon which these moral vultures thrive and fatten. Its supply is unlimited and never-failing, and the variety is complete.

The pity of it is that there are those who are always ready to listen. Knowing the wickedness of propagating and promoting scandalous tales, it is strange that many who are otherwise thoughtful and respectable allow themselves to be the depositories of libeious stories. They do not seem to realize that they are promoting the very thing which they would denounce. No doubt the listener to a scandalous rumor is as guilty in God's eyes as he who repeats it, for we are told that "a liar giveth ear to a naughty tongue."

A favorite method the gossiper and scandalmonger uses, and a very effective one, is suggestion or imputation. By intimations, imputations, hints, grimaces, and gestures, he sometimes succeeds in his work, and then swears when cornered that he never thought of such a thing. Another writing on this subject says: "The meanest of slanderers are those shoulder-shrugging envious adders of humanity who curse by insinuation and 'but,' 'but' their neighbor's reputation into the ditch." In the presence of one of these reptiles whose venom is always ready for instant use, the best course is always silence, and he may even try to convert this into assent on the part of the innocent to what he is saying.

. Notwithstanding the activity of the scandalmonger, it is comforting to know that his efforts to destroy the good names of others will sooner or later come back like boomerangs to destroy himself. Recently a preacher sent out an unsigned circular that was calculated to misrepresent and injure a brother-preacher at the very time the latter needed encouragement. The sender thought it was a smooth piece of business, for he did not expect to be known in the matter; but his reputation for doing little things clandestinely was too well known for him to escape suspicion. When the secret leaked out, his infamy was rewarded by hearing himself called "skunk," "contemptible cur," and other inevitable epithets. The sensible public is often imposed upon; but when the truth comes to light, it has little or no sympathy for the sneak, whether he be preacher or layman. The wise man wrote: "The lips of a fool will swellow up himself, . . . and the end of his talk is mischieveous madness."

The main duty is for each one of us to get right with God. The good man stands above and will outlive anything of ill that may be said of him. The traducer will see his poison-tipped shafts of envy and malice and jealousy flatten themselves against the wall of love and truth which surrounds the man who has acknowledged his error and has turned to the Lord for strength and refuge. His batteries will ultimately recoil upon himself. Abbott says: "You cannot dispose of a great man by traducing him; you cannot get rid of a great question by ignoring it; you cannot thwart a great cause by misrepresenting it. The man, the question, the cause, persistently recur, and will not down." But who is the great man in the sight of God? Let Jesus Christ, his Son, answer: "Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be se among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant."

What, then, are the means by which peace and unity may be secured in the brotherhood? I have not attempted in this brief article to discuss the question from all angles or to mention all the remedies, but, for my part, I say to one and all, including preachers, with special emphasis: Quit talebearing!

"Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out; so where there is no talebearer, the strife ceaseth."

S. H. Hall Calls For Lowliness and Forbearance.

Paul, in writing the Ephesian brethren, says: "Giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 3.) To give diligence to a thing means to be industriously active to accomplish its end. It means the greatest promptitude in grasping those things that have a tendency to promote peace and unity. And we are not left in the dark as to the things we are to grasp and industriously exercise ourselves in. If you will read verse 2 of the chapter cited above, you will find lowliness and meekness, long-suffering, and forbearing one another in love enjoined before we are commanded to give "diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." There is a good reason for this, for the latter can never be done without our first doing the former. Only those among us who have and exercise lowliness and meekness, who are long-suffering and forbear others in love, are helping to bring about that unity for which Christ prayed.

And, in connection with verses 2 and 3, it would be well to see what there is in verse 1: "I therefore, the prisoner in the Lord, beseech you to walk worthily of the calling wherewith ye were called." Verses 2 and 3 tell how this is done. There is not a soul in the church that is walking worthily of the calling wherewith he was called, save those who feel their nothingness before God, who have the meek spirit that ever adorned our Lord, and who are longsuffering as he was and forbear in love.

May I not ask here if it is not too true that the meekness of many of us, our long-suffering and forbearance toward others, is not a whit better than that the people of the world possess and exercise one toward the other? How can we "adorn the doctrine" of our Lord and Savior when such is the case? How is it possible for us to walk worthily of our calling when our manner of living is no better than the people of the world? We are commanded to be lights in the world; but how are we to be such when we have no more light in our way of treating each other than the world has? Here is where our weakness is manifest. We make great claims, and we have a right to; for we have the greatest message, the greatest church, the sweetest promises, the most soul-stirring hope to lay before the people that has ever existed. But the trouble is seen in the fact that the people who preach these things treat each other no better than those who make no claims like the ones we present to the people. Hence the people of the world simply cannot see it and feel it as they would if we lived it before them.

My mind has slipped away to one of the most beautiful and true poems that I have ever read, and it will not go further unless I give it. Here it is:

"I'd rather see a sermon than hear one any day; I'd rather one would walk with me than merely tell the

The eye is a better pupil and more willing than the ear; Fine counsel is confusing, but example's always clear; And the best of all the preachers are the men who live their creeds,

For to see good put in action is what everybody needs.

"I can learn how to do it if you let me see it done; I can watch your hands in action, but your tongues too fast may run;

And the lectures you deliver may be very wise and true, But I had rather get my lesson by observing what you do; For I may misunderstand you and the high advice you

But there's no misunderstanding how you act and how you live.

"When I see an act of kindness, I am eager to be kind; When a weaker brother stumbles and a stronger man stays behind

Just to see if he can help him, then the wish grows strong in me

To become as big and thoughtful as I know that friend to be. And all travelers can witness that the best of guides

Is not the one that tells them, but the one that shows the way.

"One good man teaches many, men believe what they behold:

One deed of kindness noticed is worth forty that are told. Who stands with men of honor learns to hold his honor

dear, For right living speaks a language that to every one is

Though an able speaker charms me with his eloquence,

I'd rather see a sermon than hear one any day."

I wish every reader would commit this poem to memory and learn to sing it as he goes along life's way. It is the language of reason and common sense to those of us who profess to be followers of Christ. The world is going blindly down the road to death and ruin, not because the gospel, God's power to save, is not here and is not preached, but because it is not lived by those of us who claim to be Christians before the eyes of the world.

The plea of the church of Christ for the oneness of the church is as invulnerable as the rock of Gibraltar. But the way the preachers and congregations who make this plea live it makes it in their hands as fragile as straw. Webster well said, in speaking of American institutions:

"Our government can stand trial, it can stand assault, it can stand adversity, it can stand persecution; it can stand everything but the weakness of our own strength; it can stand everything but disorganization, disunion, and nullification." The same can be said of the church of Christ. Take it as an organization, take it as to the power and perfection of the teaching of its Builder, and it is as enduring as the ages, and more so, for it is to stand forever. The heaven and earth will pass away, but the church of our Lord and his teaching continue after this and will be the test of endless eternity itself. But the world sees and feels not its enduring power because of the weakness of those who represent it to the people—our weakness.

May God help us to take his teaching and live it. This done, and no body of people can be stronger; this done, and we will not see so clearly how to forgive and teach others to forgive this brother that sins just because we love him, and be as blind as death to real forgiveness when another commits the same kind of sin just because we do not love him. No, we will treat all alike, just as Christ did. Nor will we allow ourselves to hinder a movement for greater things for the cause of our Lord just because we are afraid the movement will take a bit of praise from ourselves and have a tendency to obscure us. No, that spirit of lowliness and meekness will make us glad to be forgotten for Christ's sake. We will gladly forgive and forget, lead or follow, survive or perish, just so the glorious cause we represent goes onward and upward.

May all who write on this question of unity and peace give themselves a heart searching to see if they are promoting or hindering unity and peace, and this I have done for myself while writing this.

F. W. Smith Says, "Better to Begin at Home."

Since this is to be a "peace" number—that is, to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace "-I know of no better text to begin with than the following: "And be at peace among yourselves." (1 Thess. 5: 13.) I wish, however, to apply the text to only one class in the churchviz., preachers. Not that the text does not have a broader application, for it does; but since it evidently includes preachers, I think when preachers write and preach on such a theme, it is both appropriate and consistent to begin the practice of this virtue among themselves. There is more division among the so-called "preachers" of the church of Christ in this country than among any other class known to me. Furthermore, it exists among the old and the young, the learned and the unlearned. Not since I have been a member of the church have I ever known such alienation among preachers; such bickerings, spite, and assigning each other false positions. I verily believe that if the churches knew the true situation they would rise up and demand that all of this unholy, ungodly, and wicked demeanor among the preachers cease, or else close their doors against us.

Now, some one will, perhaps, ask: "About whom is F. W. Smith writing?" That question is easy to answer: Nearly all the preachers in this country, including myself. O, it is true that what many of them say and do does not find its way into print, but they are saying and doing just the same. There are partisans among preachers, some for Paul and some for Apollos, and they do much talking and writing each for his man, and play politics when it becomes necessary. I have been in wrangles with preachers through the press and privately until I am tired and sick of the whole business-ready to quit if they will quit. Some will have articles in this issue on the most beautiful and essential topic in the Bible that should practice what they preach, but what they will have to say on the subject of peace will not weigh one feather's weight with me without a confession on their part and a promise of reformation. Now, if there should be one appearing in this issue not guilty as charged, I have no reference to him and he need not kick. I think the churches are gradually getting on to the situation among preachers, and I do wish from the bottom of my heart they would round us all up and demand that this shameful situation cease.

As a sample of this lovely (?) business, one editor publishes that a brother editor is "a petty boss," refusing to publish anything that does not accord with his ideas. The fact is, the writer has been writing for this "petty boss" paper for thirty years or more, and the "petty boss" does not see one article out of fifty until it appears in the paper. Again, this sweet-spirited editor refers to a brother who is his equal in every respect and his superior in very many as "a hireling" of the "petty boss."

I do not know what some preachers are going to say on peace, but I do know that it will have little weight with me. Now, I stand ready to meet all of these preachers face to face, and whatever can be pointed out in my writings or conversations not in harmony with facts and Scripture, to correct and make amends for it. Who will be the first?

T. W. Phillips Goes After the Hobby Riders.

"United, we stand; divided, we fall," is a true adage. God wants his people to strive together and to stand together in that sweet unity and agreement of Christian love and fellowship in the great work "ordained of God." The burden of the Savior's prayer in the seventeenth chapter of John was for the unity of his people, and the great reason assigned to his Father was that the world might know that he had sent Jesus into the world. Factions and unholy strife have a breeding, not from the Holy Spirit, but from Satan. Hobby riders and the sowers of the seed of discord among brethren make an unholy and unwelcome condition among the people who above all other people ought to be ashamed of such conditions. We are not our own, but have been "bought with a price," and the Master's voice should restrain us more effectively than the dog's master, whose word restrains him and he stops. In a home where there was a pet goat and a shepherd dog, when the master started out for a walk with his guest, he observed the goat starting to follow them as they passed out at the front along where the goat was lariated with a rope. The goat followed until he was restrained by the outward pull of the rope; but the dog was restrained by the word of the master, who said to him, "Go back!" The one was restrained from without and the other from within. Why cannot Christians be more submissive to the Lord and Master than was the dog to his master? Why cannot we feel the restraint from within when Jesus speaks? Are we, indeed, more like goats, and not as good as dogs? Jesus said, "Follow thou me;" and he also said, "Go." But we poor worms of the dust get frightened at so many things all along the way. We scare at Sunday schools, at women teachers, at different classes, at the receptacle when passed around for the contribution on the first day of the week, and-0, that terrible thing!-the individual communion set. We run off frantically, and scream at the top of our voices, and say: "The Lord blessed the cup-the Lord blessed the cupand these 'digressives' have a hundred little cups!" "There is a preacher who uses tobacco, and we cannot have him to preach for us!" "There is a preacher who favors Bible colleges, and we cannot have any fellowship with him!" And, "There is a 'rebaptizer,' and we cannot fellowship him!" Then along comes an advocate of the "unfulfilled-prophecy" theory, and we form a faction and go off after him; and there is the "Gospel Advocate crowd," and the "Firm Foundation gang," and the "Herald of Truth bunch," and the "Christian Leader crowd; " and we will start us a paper of our own, and we will all get into the whirlpool of jealousy and hate and envy and strife! All the while the devil is laughing in his sleeve, and says he: "I'll give them a match and let them start a hell of their own." Then out we go; and of all the bickering and backbiting that you ever heard, you will find it among the people who claim to be the church of Christ.

God's people have been "quickened together," and made to "sit together," and are commanded to "stand together" and to "strive together" and to "walk together;" and the Lord has promised that we shall be "heirs together," and last, but not least, "carried up together," to occupy that place prepared in the mansions above. No wonder the prophet Amos inquired: "Can two walk together, except they be agreed?"

Let us humble ourselves, brethren, under the mighty hand of God, and know no standard bearer but Jesus, and be restrained by no spirit except the Holy Spirit, and seek "first the kingdom of heaven, and his righteousness," walking in the glorious light of the gospel and rendering ourselves as instruments of righteousness unto God. Have a bit of at least horse sense; and if we cannot be as submissive as the dog in the picture above, let us at least be as good as the goat. But in the event that any of us strive to be as good as that goat, let us be sure and not become an old, unruly "billy." Get out the good old Book, that "Book of books," and read it carefully and very prayerfully; repeat this day after day and week after week for a whole year, and let us see if we may not observe Paul's statement to that wonderful church at Philippi when he said: "Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ; that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." Thus we can "rejoice in the Lord always," and as a happy band of humble disciples we can march along in the beauty of holiness; and the onlookers will be made to exclaim: "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?" Then we can reply with glad hearts and say: "We are a band of Christians keeping house for the Lord, and contented and happy, doing the 'all things' commanded by Jesus." Then we can talk about the church of Christ as a church "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing;" then the "churches of Christ in Texas" can send greetings to the "churches of Christ in Tennessee," and the churches of Christ in any section of the land can boast of the unique likeness that makes the individual Christian feel at home anywhere and everywhere he or she may chance to go for worship on the first day of the week. "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.) Paul told the Corinthians to follow him as he followed Christ; and in this way we can today follow any preacher or any paper, and in no other way can we afford to follow anything or anybody. Let Christ be the great Standard Bearer!

If we find in our rank and file a bunch of slackers or I. W. W.'s ("I Won't Work"), whose constant effort seems to be just to hinder the work, let us not be alarmed. but let us go on with the work as long as we find ourselves in keeping with the great and last commission. True, there is an hour (on the Lord's day) for specially ordained worship, exhortation, fellowship, and prayer, at which time we all want to come together-in the oneness of the Spirit-to attend to the things ordained of God for that occasion, and at which time there should be just one speaker, except as we sing and make melody in our hearts to the Lord. On this occasion the work must be under the oversight of the eldership; and the apostles' doctrine should be our doctrine. Then, aside from this specially ordained work and worship, we should every one of us be as busy as the little ant, and as true to our great Leader, and as zealous as the word of truth and the Spirit would require. Just as easily as we preachers can preach the same things to sinners, telling them what to do to be saved, even so we can speak the same things on all other subjects, if we will observe the instruction given in his word, which says: "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." Just "preach the word;" that is all that God requires of us-" preach the word." The harvest fields were never whiter for the harvest than now; and if we would just say, "Get thee behind me, Satan," and ground our war of jealous rebellion one against the other, we could go forth and possess the land for the Master. As it is, it seems that Satan has got in his work and has caught many of us in his snare. "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." Turn to the Lord, and pray for strength to fight on in the good fight of faith until the battle is over. "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

S. P. Pittman Declares "Silence Is Golden."

It is the knave that creates strife. It is a depraved heart that craves it. It is abnormal to prefer a life of discord to one of concord. It were foolish to remain voluntarily in the midst of turnioil when peace is hear by. It is most unfortunate when one is forced to dwell, unavoidably, in constant confusion and contention. As the child grows it is entitled to a pleasant home—congenial parents and harmonious family relations. The citizen is entitled to a peaceful pursuit of health and happiness. The child of God is entitled, while tabernacling here, to a united brotherhood, a spiritual home of peace, harmony, love.

War between two races is barbarous; international war is more repugnant; civil war is most horrible and absurd. Are we willing to pay the price for international, interracial, and civil amity? The price is silence. There is "a time to keep silence, and a time to speak." "A soft answer turneth away wrath; but a grievous word stirreth up anger." "Whose keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from troubles." When will we ever learn that silence tends to allay strife? Brethren would do a humane, sensible, and Christian act to let our mooted questions rest -at least for a while-rest in the pulpit, rest in private conversation, and rest in the religious press. There are old sores on the physical body that cannot be cured by constant irritation. There are old sores on the body politic that cannot be healed by constant agitation. By continuous agitation of the slavery question by both antagonists and protagonists, the War between the States was precipitated Had the North and the South agreed to be silent upon that vital question till the body of American citizens was strong and healthy and harmonious, the sore spot would have been healed, and slavery could peacefully have been abolished from the shores of America forever.

What is true of the physical body and of the federal body is equally true of the spiritual body. Under the hallucination that they must declare "the whole counsel of God," many agitate questions that are nonessential and immaterial, thus irritating the body of Christ. Under the guise of contending earnestly for the faith, they harp upon certain matters to the disrupting of the harmony of the church. If there are old sores on the spiritual body, they must not be irritated. Anoint with the salve of love and sympathy,

During the War between the States two contending armies were encamped on opposite banks of a river in Virginia. As evening came on, and quiet reigned once more, the band on the one side began to play "Yankee Doodle," and the band on the other side played "Dixie." By and by one band changed the tune and began to play

"Home, Sweet Home." The sweet strains were soon caught up by the other band, and together they played, and for the time being they were united in sentiment, and each thought of his own sweet home. Let us, brethren, break away from the "Yankee Doodles" and "Dixies" of partisanism and hobbyism, and in their stead let us sing together the sweet strains of "Home, Sweet Home."

The Only Cure For War.

Force as a means of promoting peace has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Reliance upon armaments gives to diplomacy a threatening tone, breeds conspiracies and intrigues, and inspires hatreds instead of friendships. The age-long attempt of powerful nations, sometimes acting alone and sometimes in groups, to terrorize the world into peace has failed, and failed miserably.

Is it not time to abandon the philosophy of Pilate? The militarists and manufacturers of munitions have been permitted to set up false standards of honor, which increase the reputations of the former and the fortunes of the latter, by the slaughter of masses of men who have no grievance against each other and know not why they are ordered to kill one another. When a war fails to bring peace, the remedy they propose is another war.

The fundamental error lies in the fact that armaments cultivate and breed the spirit of war. Men used to think it was necessary to carry weapons in order to make their neighbors afraid of them, but neighborhood peace has been established by the abandonment of this practice. Men now cultivate friendship instead of trying to excite fear.

Why not test the friendship plan among nations? The world has tried rivalry in battleship building, rivalry in the raising and equipment of battalions, rivalry in the use of bursting shells and suffocating gases. Nations have tried to terrorize other nations by drowning women and children at sea and by starving women and children on land, and with what result? War has grown more expensive and more bloody, and enmittees have become more implacable. Alternative retaliations and competitive cruelties have only added fuel to the flame until the world is maddened by misery and blinded by hate,

And to-day we see plans on foot in our own nation to imitate European nations in the multiplying of armaments. We are building more battleships in the United States right now than any other nation on the earth. We are planning to spend more money this year on our navy than even Great Britain. Where do we expect to land? Are we not adopting the logic of the convivial man who, when a boon companion in the gutter appealed to him for assistance, replied; "I can't help you, but I will lie down with you?" Mars is a jealous god; he insists upon an undivided allegiance.

Is not our religion involved? However belligerent one may become in hours of excitement, he cannot, in his calmer moments, fail to understand the difference in the teachings of Christ and the threatenings of a system of armaments whose vital principle is force. When appeals are made for the application of Christian principles to government, the usual answer is that we cannot afford to adjust our governmental methods to the teachings of the New Testament until other nations are ready to do so; but this rejoinder entirely overlooks the basic principle of Christianity—namely, that its truths are to be propagated by example. Nations have not hesitated to make war alone. Why should they hesitate to act alone in putting God's truth to the test?—W. J. Bryan.

The Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace

= A Round Table Discussion =

Flavil Hall Shows How Peace Must Come.

"Peace" in the "Peace and Unity" special number of the Gospel Advocate means freedom from factions, strife, and contention. Disciples may have minor differences, but no factious contention should grow out of it.

"Unity" is defined: "The state of being one; oneness; concord." Bancroft wrote: "A spiritual unity binds together every member of the human family." How much more true should be the following: "A spiritual unity binds together every member" of "the house [family] of God, which is the church of the living God," (1 Tim. 3: 14, 15.) Such "unity" is "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph. 4: 3), and is, therefore, truly a "spiritual unity."

Isaiah prophesied: "They shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion." (Isa. 52: 8.) This was the happy state of Zion (the church) until she was corrupted by the "mystery of lawlessness" and many of the communicants ceased to love the truth, "but had pleasure in unrighteousness"—ways not divinely appointed.

The prayer of Christ for the oneness of believers was answered when the glorious light of the message of redemption burst forth in all its brightness in the first century of the Christian era. Had Christians then gone to pieces, dividing into multitudes of denominations, with party names and various distinctions, such as we now have, Christianity could never have commanded the respect of the world, have grown in power over the nations, and marched triumphantly through the ages as she has done.

Only love for the Lord and his word above everything else, an earnest endeavor to obey and honor him in all things, hearts beating with anxious solicitude for the salvation of dying men and women, and unceasing work and prayer for the conversion of the world can effect and promote "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." The truth must be received by all in the love of the truth, and they must be deeply interested in the eternal well-being of each other, else the anthithesis of peace and unity will prevail.

But with all the earnest efforts possible to be faithful to the truth and to the interests of others, Christians will make mistakes and be inconsistent in some things; and when these mistakes and inconsistencies are seen, Christians should be "compassionate, loving as brethren, tender-hearted, humble-minded." Humans, all must admit, cannot steer clear of all mistakes in their efforts; and if Christians permit their relations to be strained because of almost every error they see in one another, there can be no peace and but little fellowship among them.

It is right for Christians to point out one another's errors for their mutual help and that they may come as near as possible to the full measure of truth and duty; but when they oppose one another in a factious and partisan spirit and disfellowship one another because of their differences about matters on which they must admit nobody's salvation and eternal happiness depend and which could not destroy anybody's soul—when they do this, the admonition to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" is a stranger to them, Zion's onward march is retarded, and the demons exult.

Some hold the untenable position that the kingdom of Christ has not yet been established. I can see no excuse for such an idea, and it should be avoided by every lover of the truth. But I cannot see that any one's soul could be lost by falling into this error, if he did not contend for it to the neglect of obedience to the gospel and of Christian duty. Others have advocated that Christians should hold civil offices at all times and should bear the sword when their country is at war, doing their part in spreading death and desolation. In this I believe the loss of souls is involved; and should war come again, those who once taught this error and have not corrected it would teach it again and would reproach those who uncompromisingly opposed it. Such should be taught better, borne with with long-suffering, and should be fellowshiped. But must they be thus dealt with, kept in the limelight, and upheld as brilliant stars in the kingdom, but those holding the fermer error (and opposing the latter) be ostracized, avoided, and set forth as heretics? Can such lines of demarcation against a people holding one error and such full fellowship for others holding a worse error be productive of peace and unity?

If these things had to do only with the present life, I would feel very little concern about them; but they reach beyond the confines of mortal vision and will come up for judicial consideration in the great day of accounts. "How careful, then, ought we to be!"

An aged brother writes me as follows: "You and I have made our mistakes and done wrong; others have done the same; and the only way that I see to bridge the cavern is through the pardoning power that is vested in Jesus Christ, our Lord." The "pardoning power" is not promised unless men seek to know and obey the truth, but we are not to be the judge of other men's hearts when they do not come to the full measure of the truth as we understand it; and if their desire is to obey the truth instead of error, do not the words of Heb. 5: 3 apply in their mistakes: "Who can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way?"

Lee Jackson on the "Bond of Unity."

"For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith working through love." (Gal. 5: 6.)

No treatise on the subject of that unity for which Jesus prayed can consistently ignore the fundamental principle set forth in the passage which is quoted above. Jesus prayed for the oneness of all those who believe on him through the word of testimony concerning him which his apostles have given. This message of testimony not only establishes the facts of his life, death, burial, resurrection, and coronation, but it also establishes the truth as to what he taught. He says: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." Again he says: "Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you." And again: "These things I command you, that ye may love one another." (John 15: 10-17.) The same apostle (John) has again repeated the same testimony, which we are to believe, if our faith is so rooted and grounded in Christ that we are partakers of his promises: "We know that we have passed out of death into life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not abideth in death." (1 John 3: 14.) Again: "That which we had from the beginning, that we love one another. And this is love, that we should walk after his commandments." (2 John 5, 6.)

The bond of oneness in Christ is not love as the world knows love, or as the world thinks of love as emotional sentiment or enthusiasm in behalf of those who are in partisan or family affiliation one with another, but it is the faith in Christ that works through love. For the true believer this faith working through love is such a potent law of the heart that when the will of the Master is known it never willingly deviates from that will. This is the meaning of the apostle's expressed prayer when he beseeches that the Father may grant "according to the riches of his glory, that ye may be strengthened with power through his Spirit in the inward man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; to the end that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be strong to apprehend with all the saints what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled unto all the fullness of God." (Eph. 3: 16-19.) Without this rule of the Christ in the heart, whereby he becomes manifest in the outward and visible conduct of his people, there can be no completeness in that unity that leads the world to believe that the Father hath sent his Son into the world to save the world, and that the Father's saving power for the world is made manifest in this Christ whom he hath ordained as man's only Savior.

Some three hundred years ago Sir Frances Bacon wrote an essay on "Unity in Religion." His essay was in keeping with the time in which he lived and in keeping with the manner in which men were trained to think under the long reign of ignorance which prevailed under the domination of the Roman Catholic Church; and during this long period of ignorance, superstition, and intolerance this was the only sort of church that men were trained to think about. The dominant notion was that religious unity could be secured by bringing men and women into a world-embracing church, with authority to legally bind its ritualism upon religious worshipers everywhere alike. And the Roman Catholicism of the age of darkness is the true mother of the "church" notions which so generally prevail at this present time. Sometimes when I go into a congregation of Christians and find them wrangling over such questions as to which should have the precedence, the breaking of the loaf or the giving of thanks, or over the question as to whether the wine should be contained in one cup or distributed into several individual cups, or whether or not the contribution should be placed in baskets that are passed through the congregation while a song is being sung instead of having each one go forward and place the money upon a table in front of the stand for the speaker, I am caused to think of Lord Bacon's misconceived ideas of unity in religion and of Rome's puerile notions about unity and her miserable failure to bind the consciences of men to her ritualistic worship by means of legal authority. Unity in the form of a universal church, with authority to bind upon men a formal compliance with a uniform procedure in the order of worship, however desirable such a uniform order may be thought to be, is not the unity for which Jesus prayed. Whether enforced by the legal authority of a written creed or enforced through sentiment or customs, no formal obedience, or obedience simply in an outward observance, can ever result in bringing to pass the "unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 3.) In all congregations where a uniformity in procedure is looked upon as meeting the demands of unity, and where faith working through love does not rule in the hearts of the worshipers, contentions, strifes, ungodly rivalries, and divisions are certain to come.

There is a sense in which essential oneness in Christ is the boon of all Christians—for all those who are in Christ Jesus as his people. This essential unity is oneness in fellowship with the Father, oneness in fellowship with Christ, oneness in fellowship in the Spirit, and oneness in fellowship with one another. But to maintain this essential unity, it is necessary that the faith that works through love be made the supreme law of the heart, that the heart be directed into the love of God and into the patience of Christ, that we let the peace of Christ rule in the heart, and that, above all things, we put on love as the bond of perfectness. In the words of Robert Richardson, "peace is here very beautifully represented as 'the bond' or ligature by which this sacred unity is to be preserved, and so essential is it to this end that it is frequently and earnestly enjoined in the Scriptures." (Millennial Harbinger, May, 1959.) To the Corinthians, Paul says: "Be perfected; be comforted; be of the same mind; live in peace: and the God of love and peace shall be with you." (2 Cor. 13: 11.) To the Thessalonians he says: "Now the Lord of peace himself give you peace at all times in all ways." (2 Thess. 3: 16.)

Finally, my word of exhortation is that if unity is not maintained in the local congregations it is useless to expect to find it in the existence of something as a general "church." Christ is the ark of safety, into which we enter when we are baptized into him; he is the true tabernacle, in whom we can offer to God an acceptable worship, and this worship must be maintained in the local assemblies of Christians. "Christ in you [as individual members of his body], the hope of glory." (Col. 1: 27.)

John T. Hinds Discusses Vitals and Incidentals.

The absolute necessity for peace and unity among the Lord's people is touchingly expressed in the Savior's farewell prayer. The great purpose of this unity, as declared in this prayer, is "that the world may believe that thou didst send me." A matter so momentous in its consequences cannot be ignored or lightly considered by those who seriously regard the Lord's words. Whatever may be necessary on our part to help bring about and maintain this condition should be cheerfully done.

"Peace at any price," however, is neither scriptural nor desirable. Paul said he heard there were divisions in the Corinthian congregation. This led him to say: "There must be also factions among you, that they that are approved may be made manifest among you." (1 Cor. 11: 19.) When divisions come because of the distinction between truth and error, then divisions are not only right, but scriptural. This feature of the case is presented by the Lord in these words: "I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I came to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law: and a man's foes shall be they of his own household." (Matt. 10: 34-36.)

Notwithstanding the division that must exist between those who accept the truth and those who do not, it is imperatively necessary that those who have the truth be of "the same mind and the same judgment" and that "there be no divisions among you." Of the many things involved in this question, there is none, I think, that will contribute more to this desired end than a clear understanding of the difference between vitals and incidentals. Anything the Lord requires as necessary to becoming a Christian or . living the Christian life is clearly vital. No change can be made in the acts of obedience upon which our salvation depends. The incidentals are indifferent things used in enabling us to obey the commands. The changing of incidentals does not affect the commands. If the command be baptism, it cannot be obeyed without "much water"enough, at least, to allow burying the person. Where this water may be found is purely incidental. Whether in a river, pond, tank, or baptistery, cannot by any kind of logic be made to invalidate the act. To worry about where the water is found is a useless waste of energy. The vital thing is to be scripturally baptized when you get to the water. That means to be a proper subject, perform a proper act, and have a proper design. I am sure there have been many who were very particular about being baptized in running water who were never of much account to the church after being baptized.

It is of vital consequence to the success of the church that "each one" lay by in store upon the first day of the week. The reasons need not be given here why this is vital. But how we "take up the collection" is another matter entirely. If it suits every one to lay the offering on the table, there is no law or principle violated in doing so. But it will be just as well to pass a basket or plate. Even the hat, though an antiquated plan, could be used in emergencies. The particular place you drop your penny, dollar, or check when it leaves your hand cannot affect the vital matter of giving. The money is immediately taken by some one and deposited, as a rule, till needed. Hence the place you lay or drop it can be only a very insignificant incidental.

Meeting together at some place for worship is one of the vital things in church life. Where or what that place is depends on circumstances and is purely incidental. congregations could meet as well and more cheaply without owning a house, then it would be foolish to own one. The worship is the vital thing, not the place where we worship. Since the house, lights, seats, and stoves are only for bodily comfort and convenience while we worship God, to change them cannot change the worship. They have nothing whatever to do with the worship. change the worship by adding to it or taking from it is to change God's own appointments. To change from oil lamps to electric lights is only incidental, and God has not legislated on these things. They are left for our choice. We can afford to yield on anything not vital to our worship of God.

We must sing. This is a demand from God. We must sing psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs—sing them with the Spirit and the understanding; for all this is required by the divine record. We must not change it. But we cannot sing unless we have the songs. We must either have them written or printed or in our mind. Whether we sing from memory or the printed page is only incidental. We may do either or both. No difference which way we sing, we fulfill all that is vital in singing if we sing the right songs in the proper spirit. To change to other kinds of songs or add some other music to the song service is changing vital things, but putting the proper kind of songs in books or singing from memory does not change the song service.

File your strongest objection to any changing of the vital things in the law of pardon or the worship of the church, but be ready, if best, to yield on anything that is only an incidental. Such things do not have any effect on vital things.

Dr. J. J. Horton Defines the Text.

"Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 3.) What does the "unity of the Spirit" mean? (See Webster.) "Unity" means (1) oneness, (2) agreement, (3) harmony. "Unity," from "unite," to make one. Also see "union." Webster defines: (1) A uniting; (2) that which is made one. Hence, we can have no union without the unity of the Spirit; and both are clearly taught and required of all of God's children as set forth in the gospel.

Hear the apostle Paul to the Corinthians: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." Many men say this cannot literally be done—that we cannot all see alike. It all depends on our being willing to be led by the Holy Spirit's teachings. Our Savior certainly has not required an impossibility of his followers. See his prayer for our oneness. (John 17: 26-23.) Can any one, in the face of this prayer and all the teaching of our Savior in his revealed will to us, still say "impos sible?" God forbid.

Let us have our Savior's solution to the question: "I any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God. (1 Pet. 4: 11.) So we find we are to speak God's wor and not be led by the wisdom of men. Now hear Paul to the Colossians: "And let the peace of God rule in you hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one an other in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoeve ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Je sus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." (Co. 3: 15-17.)

Again, in order to keep the unity of the Spirit, ever one must obey the gospel in order to come into this unit in the one body over which Christ is head, which is hi church. (See Eph. 4: 4; Rom. 12: 4, 5; 1 Cor. 10: 17 Col. 1: 18; Eph. 1: 22.) How keep the unity of the Spiri in this "one body?" By taking the Holy Spirit's teach ings through Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles: "Now beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause division and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye hav learned; and avoid them." (Rom. 16: 17, 18.) Hea Paul again: "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto anothe gospel: which is not another; but there be some tha trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. Bu though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any othe gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Gal. 1: 6-8.) Hence, if w would turn away from teachers and teachings of men who fail to teach the whole counsel of God and those who per vert the gospel of Christ, we can keep the Spirit's unity Paul says in Rom. 8: 14: "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." But sup pose we turn away from the Spirit's teachings unto the precepts and teachings of men, then what? "For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos are ye not carnal?" (1 Cor. 3: 5.) The answer, or course, is, "Yes;" and such characters are walking after men and not the Spirit of unity.

Then, to conclude the subject of "unity and peace," we will affirm that, to please God and Christ Jesus our Lord we must, as individuals and as churches collectively, lay aside all man-made names and creeds and take the word of God as our infallible guide in all things that pertain unto life and godliness. Then we can help bring to pass the answer to our Savior's prayer for oneness through the words of the apostles. (See John 17: 21.) Then we can see eye to eye and be of the same mind, if we are sons of God and led by the Spirit. "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for smuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

The Sepulcher in the Garden.

What though the flowers in Joseph's garden grew, Of rarest perfume and of fairest hue, That morn when Magdalene hastened through Its fragrant, silent paths.

She caught no scent of budding almond tree; Her eyes, tear-blinded still from Calvary, Saw neither lily nor anemone— Naught save the sepulcher.

But when the Master whispered, "Mary"—lo!— The tomb was hid, the garden all ablow, And burst in bloom the rose of Jericho— From that day "Mary's flower."

-John Finley.

The Spirit of the Reign of Christ.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

Isaiah, the noblest prophet in Israel, looking down through the vista of ages seven hundred and fifty years, describes the reign of Christ thus: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." (Isa. 9: 6, 7; see, also, Luke 1: 31-33.)

Let us note the expressions, "Prince of Peace," and, "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end."

What a wonderful prophetic atterance! What a precious word is the little word "peace!" It means so much to us all, and we should be in position to appreciate it more today because of the furious storms of war that have been raging in recent years, and that have caused hearts to throb and ache, homes to be made sad and lonely, and squalor, starvation, nakedness, and death, because of them, to fall like a pall over what were once prosperous, peaceful, and happy homes.

But hear me, all ye humankind! Let us lift up our eyes and look and listen. A glad message comes. It is borne from the courts of glory, upon angels' tongues, to the sons and daughters of earth. Shepherds are herding their flocks in the still hours of "silent night." "And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." A multitude of the heavenly host take up this joyous acclaim: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." (Luke 2: 10-14.) This is heaven's announcement of the birth of the Savior and "Prince of Peace."

Note that it is to be "to all people," and "on earth peace, good will to men." A discordant world, out of harmony with God and with warring and contending factions, out of barmony with each other and clashing with each other! To be at peace, there must be harmony. To be at peace with each other, harmony must prevail among us. To be at peace with God, harmony must prevail between us and Gcd. Let us note this also: there is no harmony nor peace with God without we do God's will. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5: 1.) The faith by which we are justified is the faith that works, and it works by love. "For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by (Gal. 5: 6.) love."

In all the realms of the physical and material world, leaving man out, there is harmony, unity, and peace. God causes it to be that way. It must be that way, for these things are all subject to law. We call these laws "laws of nature;" but they are God's laws, put in force by him to control the material universe. How necessary they are! Without these laws there would be a crush of worlds and a wreck of ages. Let us study the beauty and harmony of these things, and we will get a wonderful lesson. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork." (Ps. 19: 1.)

In order that there be peace and harmony, there must be unity. It is an utter impossibility to have peace and harmony without unity. There must be unity of purpose, unity of plan, and unity of effort. We are taught that in this God and Christ are one-one in purpose, one in plan, and one in effort.

Jesus teaches us what will be the awful results of division. "Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand." (Matt. 12: 25.)

David, the sweet psalmist of Israel, is led to say by the Spirit of God: "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" (Ps. 133: 1.)

Jesus, looking adown the ages and knowing so well the blighting, withering, and deadly effects of division among his followers, prayed so earnestly and fervently that his disciples might all be one, as he and the Father were one, and assigned as the reason for this oneness, "that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." (John 17: 21.) And we note that his prayer was not in vain. It was not an impossibility that there be the oneness for which Jesus prayed, for there was a time when this prayer was literally answered. Let us read Acts 4: 32: "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common." In and under these conditions there was perfect oneness.

But how is it now, dear reader? We look out upon the religious world and see professed believers in Christ divided into denominations, sects, parties, teaching and practicing different things in the name of the religion of Christ, and these teachers and preachers, both from the pulpit and also from the public press, teaching and encouraging the people that these things are all right. Instead of trying to bring the people to a oneness in Christ, they are doing all they can to prevent this oneness, to hinder the prayers of our blessed Savior, and to thwart the purpose and plan of God to save the world. Such is a travesty upon the holy religion of Christ; and these teachers and preachers, and all others that encourage such a state of things, are the emissaries of the devil, if they but knew it.

But let us come closer home. The people who claim so stoutly to be the exponents of the doctrine, "Speak where the Bible speaks, and be silent where it is silent," and to be Christians only, and members of the New Testament church only—no nobler plea committed to mortal man—how is it at home? Have we all done all we could at all times and in all places to foster the spirit of Christ's kingdom—"peace and unity?" If I am not very much mistaken, shameful and ungodly breaches have been made upon it at times and in places, and the cause has been made to bleed and suffer immeasurably because of them.

To my mind, the conditions have been so grave and so serious in some instances that it would have justly demanded a clothing in sackcloth and a sitting in ashes and a "crying mightily unto God." Let us love God supremely, and love one another as ourselves and pray and work to promote "peace and unity" among the children of God by "endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 3.)

A Home Song.

I turned an ancient poet's book, And found upon the page: "Stone walls do not a prison make, Nor iron bars a cage."

Yes, that is true, and something more, You'll find wher'er you roam— That marble doors and gilded walls Can never make a home.

But every home where love abides,
And friendship is a guest,
Is surely home, and home, sweet home,
For there the heart can rest.

-Henry Van Dyke.

"How Good and How Pleasant . . . to Dwell Together in Unity." (Ps. 133: 1.)

James E. Scobey Pleads For Harmony.

"How good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" (Ps. 133: 1.)

Unity consists in harmony. When our thoughts, sentiments, feelings, words, and actions harmonize, that may be called "unity," Persons who hold the same views upon any subject will be agreed, whether it be social, civil, political, or religious. In such a circumstance there will be no discussion, no controversy. They are at peace.

Where differences arise and controversy ensues, it is possible that amicable feelings upon the part of the disputants may be weakened or destroyed. In religious controversies this sometimes happens. And those who have interested themselves in the matters of difference become partisans, supporting either the one or the other of the parties engaged in the controversy. As the discussion proceeds, it sometimes becomes more heated, personalities are resorted to, alienation results, friendship is destroyed, and trouble instead of peace and good will is the heritage. Religiously, such discussions are a source of discord in the churches, resulting in the formation of parties in the church who are envious of each other.

This was the condition of the church at Corinth when Paul sent them his first letter. There was strife, envying, and divisions among them. Their course of conduct was much like that of the man of the world, the average politician. Paul, in his letter, in view of what he had learned about them, said: "Are ye not carnal, and walk as men?" (1 Cor. 3: 3.) They were contending with one another about preachers. "Every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ." (1 Cor. 1; 12.)

Now, I might make a suggestion or offer an opinion in reference to the cause of these preferences; but should I do so, it might happen that some brother would call in question my opinion and substitute his own. Some members of the church would agree with him and others would agree with me, and still others would not agree with either of us. And for the want of spiritual-mindedness we would all magnify our opinions to the degree of a vital matter of faith, and one or both of us say to all others, "If you do not agree with me, you are heretical and are not worthy of being recognized as a Christian;" and thus a schism is produced in the church, unity is destroyed, and peace has been rendered impossible without a return to the plain teaching of the word.

It may be profitable for the Bible student to study some things hard to be understood which we all find in the Scriptures, and he may thus imbibe some ideas and thoughts that he had not had before, but he should be somewhat chary of setting them forth as sound doctrine unless he can demonstrate their truth so clearly that ordinary minds would be satisfied as to their value and truthfulness.

There is much in the Scriptures that most of us have never learned, and perhaps we shall never be able fully to understand. We may have our opinions about them, and may be fully satisfied ourselves, but at the same time they may have little or no bearing in reference to our present or eternal well-being.

The want of unity in what is regarded as the Christian world may be referred to the theories, speculations, and opinions of theologians and ecclesiastics, who have undertaken to formulate doctrines in harmony with their philesophies, which they believe fully express the principles according to which God would, or will, save and bless man. Now we know that they differ widely in their teaching. They do not speak or teach the same things either with reference to what is necessary to become a Christian or the duty of Christians in their work and worship. Their whole course of teaching is destructive of unity, and there is no peace among the would-be worshipers of God and the followers of the Christ. Peter says: "Let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it." (1 Pet. 3: 11.) Peace is most desirable in every relationship of life—in the family, in society, in the world. Jesus said: "Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay: but rather division." (Luke 12: 51.)

If Christians will be ted of the Spirit, they will be of the same mind, they will keep, or endeavor to keep, "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 3.) They are exhorted to be at peace among themselves. But, on the other hand, they are not to be at peace with the world, the flesh, and the devil. The Christian should know he must contend for the truth and oppose error. The teaching of Jesus has caused the great spiritual battle of the ages. He did not send peace on the earth. But he says: "I came not to send peace, but a sword." (Matt. 10: 34.) His word is that sword, and it is "mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds; casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God." (2 Cor. 10: 4, 5.)

Christians are soldiers of the cross; and while they are exhorted to be at peace among themselves, they must put on the whole armer of God, that they may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. Let the Christian fight the good fight, let him keep the faith, then at his departure he can say with the apostle Paul: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteeusness, which the Lord, the righteeus judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that have loved his appearing."

Lee Garrett Says, "In Unity There Is Strength."

In the announcement of this special number, "Peace and Unity," I am reminded of travelers who travel among the mountains of Switzerland, where difficulties and dangers are great. They have a way of binding a group of travelers together. Before they commence the slippery and perilous ascent, a strong cord is bound around the waist of each, and all are then bound together; so that every one helps the other; and if a brother slips, they help him again.

Among that group of travelers there existed a spirit of peace and unity. There were the strong, the stronger, and the strongest, each doing his part in their upward climb. No one had any desire to impede the progress, for to hinder oneself was to hinder all; and if perchance one fell on that perilous ascent, he was rescued by the cord which bound all together. The difficulty of the ascent emphasized the importance of peace and harmony.

From the city of Jerusalem a group of travelers began their journey to the upper and better land. In number they were few; in equipment they were strong and well supplied. Their message was a message of peace, and in unity of purpose they traveled in the faith and hope of the gospel. They well knew their progress would be checked and some traveler lost if they failed to possess peace and unity, which their Leader had labored so abundantly to implant within them.

It is fitting to remark that when the Savior was born his advent was announced by an angel, with a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." And near the close of his work among men he prayed: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." And so the Savior's life began with a message of peace and closed with a prayer for unity. "He is our peace, who hath made both one." The prophet Isaiah saw in him the "Prince of Peace." His was a message of peace, and burst from his soul easier and with more freedom than the spring bursts from the mountain side. And, too, he had no cause for regret for anything ever said or done. Man simply stands in amazement at his character and his message, and is dissatisfied with any attempt to describe the moral effect such have had upon the world. Who, may we ask with Lavater, "can paint the glory of the rising sun with a charcoal?"

The church of Christ has to-day her influential papers, strongly edited by God-fearing and sacrificing men; her schools, where the Bible is taught in its fullness and simplicity; her array of Christian men, giving their time and using their talents in preaching the gospel to the lost; and many Christian mothers, who are keepers at home—these all conspiring together in enunciating to her religious neighbors and every one everywhere "the peace which passeth all understanding;" and "in unity there is strength." With these agents and agencies at her command, there can be an onward movement in the work of the Lord which will bind us all together in a more consecrated and loving service to God.

O. C. Lambert Emphasizes Scriptural Teaching.

Is peace commanded? Here are a few scriptures bearing on that subject:

"But the meck shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." (Ps. 37: 11.)

"Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace." (Ps. 37: 37.)

"Her [wisdom's] ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." (Prov. 3: 17.) =

"As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one: there is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one. Their throat is an open sepulcher; with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips: whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness: their feet are swift to shed blood: destruction and misery are in their ways: and the way of peace have they not known: there is no fear of God before their eyes." (Rom. 3: 10-18.)

"Salt is good: but if salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another." (Mark 9: 50.)

"For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." (Rom. 8: 6.)

"And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envyings, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?" (1 Cor. 3: 1-3.)

"For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men. Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another." (Rom. 14: 17-19.)

"For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints." (1 Cor. 14: 33.)

"I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 1-3.)

"Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." (Eph. 4: 31, 32.)

"And be at peace among yourselves." (1 Thess. 5: 13.)

"Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you." (2 Cor. 13: 11.)

"Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him show out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom. But if you have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth. This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace." (James 3: 13-18.)

"If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men." (Rom, 12: 18.)

"Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." (Matt. 5: 9.)

"Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.)

Fulfill ye my joy, that ye be like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind." (Phil. 2: 2.)

"That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it." (1 Cor. 12: 25, 26.)

"And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body." (Col. 3: 15.)

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" (Ps. 133: 1.)

"Can two walk together, except they be agreed?" (Amos 3: 3.)

"Be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren." (1 Pet. 3: 8.)

"Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." (Phil. 1: 27.)

We are almost bewildered with the number of times which this command is repeated. God never does anything without a purpose. Judging from the emphasis laid upon this in the Bible, I conclude that this is one of the most essential things in the world. Is there any other evidence besides the repetition as to its importance in God's eye?

On the other hand, sowing discord is one of the greatest of sins, as shown by numerous passages of scripture.

"But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain. A man that is an heretic after the first and second admonition reject; knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned of himself." (Tit. 3: 9-11.)

"Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them." (Rom. 16: 17.)

Had you ever thought that sowing discord is worse than pride, or lying, or murder? "These six things doth the Lord hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him: a proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, a heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among the brethren." (Prov. 6: 16-19.)

Had it ever occurred to you that God must have had a design when he used as many synonymous terms to describe this sin as he used in describing all other sins put together? Notice this particularly in the following passage: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like." (Gal. 5: 19-21.)

Also, when summing up the virtues of a Christian, we find that there were more synonyms of the word "peace" than all other virtues combined. "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." (Gal. 5: 22, 23.)

Does it not give it an added importance when we realize that the Son of God, during his last hours, in his last prayer, toward the end of that prayer, uttered the following language? "Neither pray I for these [apostles] alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." (John 17: 20, 21.)

Do we desire the same things the Savior desired? Are we trying to bring about an answer to that prayer? As great a sin as it is in God's sight, I know some brethren who would divide the body of Christ, the congregation of the Lord, if they did not get the song book they wanted, or if the church house was not built according to their plan or on the side of the road they desired. I know of one community where there was at one time three locks on the church house, these having been put there by the different factions in the church in an endeavor to keep the other factions out. All this came about, primarily, over the question, "Who made the devil?" I held a meeting for one congregation once which was torn to pieces over the way they should clean up the cemetery, and several of the members had gone to law with each other over it.

"If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness; he is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strife of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself," (1 Tim. 6: 3-5.)

"Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to ne profit, but to the subverting of the hearers. Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. But shun profane and vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness. And their word will eat as doth a canker: of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus; who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is passed already; and overthrow the faith of some." (2 Tim. 2: 14-18.)

"But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes. And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach patient, in mackness instructing those that oppose them selves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth; and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will." (2 Tim. 2: 23-26.)

It is very noticeable that more wrangling will result over questions that should not concern us, questions that can be of no value to us whether true or untrue, than over some question absolutely vital to our salvation. We ge more easily wrought up over "Will we know each other there?" than over "What must I do to be saved?" and can provoke more people to read their dusty Bibles over "What killed Methuselah?" or "Will the heathen be given a chance after death?" or "What kind of a body will we have?" than over "Bear ye one another's burdens." More churches and individuals are disturbed over God's par than their own. Some discouse loud and long upon the highly poetic figures concerning heaven, the millennium, the second coming of Christ, the state of the dead, when this is God's part and should not worry us in any way. Let us no worry our time away about the stars in our crown and forget to have a crown. If Jesus could weep over the thought of his people being divided, should it not make us weep also? Should we not do all in our power to keep the body of Christ from being torn to pieces?

I have observed that it is impossible to keep a congregation peaceable and harmonious unless it is busy. Let us become busy with the things worth while. So many millions need a kindly word, so many orphans and widows to be helped, so many are dying without the gospel, let us be about our Father's business. Let us cease to be children.

Salvation Based on Uniform Conditions Throughou the Christian Era.

BY R. P. CUFF.

Dating the Christian era as beginning at the time wher Jesus, as the testator of the new covenant, had sealed and confirmed this new will with the blood of his death and had taken the old will out of the way, "nailing it to his cross," and remembering that people began to enter directly into the church of Christ on the first Pentecost after Jesus had ascended on high and had been enthroned in the universal metropolis as "King of kings," it is perfectly safe to say that "throughout the Christian era" the conditions that must be met in order to obtain salvation are uniform to every responsible human being—to every one to whom the gospel messages were designed to appeal and apply.

But what is the meaning of "salvation" as here used? Defining "salvation," Webster says: "Theol. Deliverance from sin and its consequences." It goes without saying that one is delivered from the consequences of his sindelivered from punishment or retribution at the hands of God-when he is delivered from that sin. When Jehovah delivers from sin, he forgives that sin-blots it out forever. "Salvation" has this same signification when it appears in the great commission, the final commission, which Jesus gave just before he went away from earth with the clouds, when he committed to the apostles the preaching of the gospel to every creature in all the world. Does not "saved" as found in Mark 16: 16 correspond to "remission of sins" in Luke 24: 47? That means, then, that when Peter was preaching to the Jews on Pentecost by the authority of that final commission, when he was setting forth to those guilty people the terms which that commission had imposed, he was telling them what to do to be saved-saved in the sense of having the sins of which they were guilty remitted. (Acts 2: 38.) In the same sense evidently "saved" appears in Acts 16: 30, 31. The jailer desired to know what to do that he might be "delivered from sin and its consequences," that he might have what Mark records as salvation, what Luke records as remission of sins. The jailer was not asking immediately what he might do to enter the portals of glory. Jesus did not give in the last commission all the terms that must be met for entrance into heaven—that is, there must be other conditions complied with, provided the man continues to live in this world after he has been baptized. There is no premium placed upon "deadhead" Christianity (?). People should quit playing at this matter of serving God.

Now that we have before us definitions of "salvation" as used in the caption of this article and of the phrase "throughout the Christian era," let us see if the Scriptures validate the thought that that salvation is based on uniform conditions for the period of time suggested. What are the conditions of salvation set forth in the last commission? Matt. 28: 19, 20; Mark 16: 15, 16; and Luke 24: 47 bear corroborative and supplementary evidences. When one inspired man goes to record as saying that Jesus taught that a man must do one thing to be saved, and another records that Jesus taught that some other thing is necessary to salvation, it can be depended upon that the one thing does not displace the other, but that the man must do both these things. This reasoning in regard to two things will apply to whatever be the number of things pertaining to which Jesus may specify that they are essential to salvation. As with the different records of the commission, so it is with the various cases of conversion that are carried out under that commission. There is in each case a uniform compliance with terms. When in one record of the commission faith is represented as essential to salvation, it cannot but be regarded as essential in the other two records. So it is of the other conditions. When in one case of conversion the person had to comply with some condition in order to be saved, it can be depended upon that in any other case that same condition is either expressed or implied.

From Matthew we learn that in discipling the nations those who are discipled must be baptized. From Mark we learn that when the gospel is preached it must be believed and the believer must be baptized. From Luke it may be gathered that repentance is necessary. Letting the accounts supplement each other, the complete list of conditions appears—(1) faith, (2) repentance, (3) baptism.

To illustrate with cases of conversion:

- 1. The Pentecostians. They were told to "know assuredly," "repent," and "be baptized." The term "faith" is not used in this connection, but the Pentecostians could not know assuredly that God had made Jesus Lord and Christ except by believing it. So the evidence shows they believed. Therefore it appears that they believed, repented, and were baptized.
- 2. The jailer. (Acts 16.) The jailer was told to believe and he should be saved. True enough. It was well that he received that answer to his question, but the answer did not exhaust the conditions. The record continues, adding that the word of the Lord was preached to him and that he was baptized. It is not stated that he repented, but the evidence shows that he did. His attitude toward Paul and Silas had changed. After he inquired what to do to be saved, he washed their stripes. Who would dare say that the jailer did not repent? Now, God commands all men everywhere to repent. (Acts 17: 30, 31.) So it appears that the jailer believed, repented, and was baptized.
- 3. Saul of Tarsus. (Acts 9, 22, 26.) Ananias told Saul to arise and be baptized and wash away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord. It is not specifically stated that he believed or repented. The evidence, however, shows he did both. He had been a persecutor of Jesus. After he saw Jesus and heard his words, he had faith enough to go on to Damascus and not bind the Christians there to commit them to prison. He was penitent enough to spend his time in prayer and not to eat nor drink for the space of three days. Who would doubt that Saul believed and repented? (See Heb. 11: 6; Acts 17: 30.) So it appears that Saul believed, repented, and was baptized.

This examination might be extended to cover every case of conversion under the great commission relative to which the record gives details, and it would be found that in each instance there was faith, repentance, and baptism. Uniform conditions—conditions essential to salvation—were met. The same uniform conditions must be met to-day and to the end of the Christian era. God has not promised to make any other covenant. Man is not authorized to preach any other conditions.

The Lord's Legacy, BY B. C. GOODPASTURE.

"Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you." (John 14: 27.)

The "last supper" had been eaten, the traitor had been pointed out, the betrayal was at hand, and the cross was approaching, when Jesus left to his heart-troubled disciples the priceless bequest of his abiding peace. It has been singularly suggested that when Jesus was about to leave the world he made his will. His soul he committed to his Father; his body he bequeathed to Joseph, to be decently interred; his clothes fell to the soldiers who crucified him; his mother he left to the care of John; but what should he leave to his poor disciples, who had left all to follow him? Homes and lands, silver and gold, he had none; but he left them that which was infinitely better—his peace. In this instance Christ was the executor of his own testament; and what he left, he gave. It is secure.

This peace which the Lord gives to his disciples is not a mere salutation or benediction after the manner of Oriental customs and formalities. It has been the practice of the Orientals from times almost immemorial (Judg. 18: 6; 1 Sam. 1: 17) to express their conventional wish for peace to be with those from whom they were taking leave, and the disciples themselves, doubtless, conformed to the practice (Matt. 10: 13); but this saying of Jesus was much more than the expression of a farewell greeting. "Not as the world giveth, give I unto you," said he. The world gives from interested and selfish motives, because it has received or hopes to receive as much again; it gives to friends and withholds from enemies; it gives what costs it nothing or that which it cannot keep, as houses, land, and gold; it pretends to give that which is not its own, especially when it cries: "Peace, peace; when there is no peace." (Jer. 6: 14.) The manner of Christ's giving is the very opposite of this. He gives what is his own, what he might have kept, what costs him a life of suffering and a cruel death to bestow, what is open to friend and foe alike, who have nothing of their own to give in return. He gives in reality rather than in formality. He gives his people a peace of such a nature that the smiles of the world cannot give it, nor the frowns of the world take it away. It is an internal peace of spirit rather than an external freedom from hostility and suffering. This peace lies deeper than all trials and sufferings, for it comes through reconciliation to God and agreement in thought and heart and life with his will. Some one has said that it is a peace like that of a water lilytossed to and fro by the surface waves of the lake, but unshaken from its place, because its roots are buried deep in the soil beneath. It gives calm in the midst of storm-a peace "which passeth all understanding." (Phil. 4: 7.) Wonderful legacy of the Lord!

David Lipseomb, Jr., Makes a Plea For Peace.

"Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace to silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not. Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's, God's, and truth's." This quotation occurs not in our Bible, but in the writings of the greatest English poet.

To a casual reader some contradictory statements about peace appear in the Gospels. The angelic host sang at the Savior's birth: "Peace on earth, good will toward men." Thirty years later the Savior said: "I came not to send peace, but a sword." He even went into details about the dissension and strife that would arise in nations and in families. His utterance-which was a sad prophecv. not a threat-has had bitter fulfillment in wars over differences in religion and in persecutions since the time "it pleased Herod to vex certain of the church" to the branding of Quakers in New England. Yet the Prince of Peace earnestly prayed that his disciples might be one, even as he and his Father were one. But it was not a peace at any price. They were to fight mightily against sin, against iniquity, against spiritual wickedness in high places.

But with each other we should put forth our best efforts to live in peace. Poor, uncontrolled human nature pulls us apart or sets us to quarreling, and very frequently over most trivial matters. Just a little rift in the lute leads to the greatest discord. It is said the first great split in the church arose as to which was the correct expression, "Father, Son, and Holy Ghost," or, "Father and Son." And later there arose a mighty dissension over the proper time to observe Easter, a festivity that appertaineth not to our religion at all. Even at this day we hear of heated words over fermented and unfermented wine, over the correct hour at which to celebrate the Lord's Supper; and other matters less weighty become bones over which to contend. Brethren, such things ought not so to be. Where no word or example is given, why fuss? Let us seek peace, for the things that make for peace in the congregations and in the country. Let us work and pray for disarmament, not preparedness. Let us sink our pet theories and private opinions, but not one "Thus saith the Lord "-sink them " where fathom line will ne'er touch the ground." Work and pray and fight (ourselves) for peace under "one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all."

John R. Williams Calls It An Irresistable Influence.

Peace and unity, when combined, set before the world an irresistible influence, an influence without which no one can be saved. "Follow after peace with all men, and the sanctification without which no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. 12: 14.) "These things have I spoken unto you, that in me ye may have peace." (John 16: 33.) As long, therefore, as we are not in him, we do not have the peace. "Being therefore justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5: 1.) The faith that justifies is the faith that brings peace—peace with God, unity with God.

Paul certainly understood the doctrine of justification by faith and when the faith brings peace. When on his way to Damascus, Christ appeared to him, and Paul believed on him and asked: "What shall I do, Lord?" For three days and nights he had no peace—"without sight, and did neither eat nor drink." Then Ananias came to him and said: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name." After he was baptized, "he took food, and was strengthened." Paul's obedience is his interpretation of justification by faith—the faith that brings peace.

Paul also furnishes us with a divine interpretation of unity. "Giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body, and one Spirit, even as also ye were called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is over all, and through all, and in all." (Eph. 4: 3-6.) In apostolic days all of God's people were one. "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and one soul." So it should be to-day.

"Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you." (John 14: 27.) The gospel of Christ is a gospel of peace, a gospel of unity. "And let the peace [gospel] of Christ rule in your hearts, to the which also ye were called in one body [church]; and be ye thankful." (Col. 3: 15.) When this peace of Christ rules in the heart, there can be nothing but unity. "And he gave some to be apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, unto the work of ministering, unto the building up of the body [church] of Christ: till we all attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." (Eph. 4: 11-13.)

Peace and unity make happy homes and loving, working congregations, all striving for the same object, the same purpose—the salvation of the lost. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" (Ps. 133: 1.) In heaven peace and unity prevail, and all who desire to dwell in heaven forever, after death, should dwell together here in peace and unity. "If it be possible, as much as in you lieth, be at peace with all men." (Rom. 12: 18.)

What the religious world calls "peace" and "unity" can be obtained only at the sacrifice of truth—God's word. Then let us cleave to his word, and his word only. "And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 4: 7.)

D. F. Draper Calls It the "Angelie Melody."

Words and melody make song. That angelic choir that came singing to this old earth started a theme for thousands of our most beautiful expressions in song. We have the words of that celestial hymn, but lost forever is the melody.

Who can search the records of the past and bring to us again that angelic melody? No echoes, no reverberations. That song is lost—lost; but in the hearts of the sons and daughters of Jehovah there springs forth in fitting tribute this sweet and ever-living sentiment: Peace and good will. This is only another way of saying "peace and unity."

Had the nations of earth only known and observed this sentiment, what a change, what a difference! All this bloodshed, all this sorrow, all this misery, all this grief, all this vast expenditure of money would have been averted. Had this money been expended in the cause of the Master, who could measure, who could tell, the result?

"Peace and unity" is the motto in each and every heart which has been touched by the gospel; also in every home, community, State, and nation. Failure to recognize this divine principle has estranged brothers, friends, neighbors, nations. The Savior's prayer in John 17 is but an enlargement, an amplification, of this heaven-born expression.

"Seek peace, and pursue it," was the advice of Solomon. This leaves the matter open to us to do something, an effort on our part. "Peace and unity" should be the motto of our lives; and when this is lived out day by day, then, and not until then, can we measure our full efficiency.

If Christ is the wisdom of God and the power of God, in the experience of those who trust and love him, there needs no further argument of his deity.—Henry Ward Beecher.

A. O. Colley Describes the Peace We Need.

The subject of "peace and unity" is very dear to all Christians. We may or may not have passed through unpleasant experiences, some of which cause continued regrets; but on this subject we have some fond hope that "some sweet day" we shall see a God-loving people who shall see eye to eye and all speak the same thing.

Nations are now, and should ever be, agitated over peace—that is, to reach a state in national affairs where the great vessels of destruction may be used for something that will protect and promote happiness, instead of being deadlily armed, with awful dread in our hearts lest we shall live to see the time when our sons, husbands, and brothers shall be taken from the home to face the awful engines of destruction that we are now being taxed to the limit, it seems, to build and maintain. We long to see our great nation become a champion of "peace on earth, and good will toward men." When this is done, then, aside from the awful waste in human life and power, there will be bread enough, and to spare, where many, under our "preparedness," with our heavy expenditures to keep up these vessels of destruction, are now begging for bread.

Peace and unity in the home is truly the great power that God ordained for the purifying of society, the building of a nation, and the carrying forward the moral principles of his word. We love the home that is united, each working to the best interest of the others, each considering "other better than themselves." "Peace"-"freedom from war," "calm." The home or state or church, in war, will soon be helpless. No one knows how to help, for the very one you may decide to help may turn against you and help others destroy you. The husband that "rules well" his own house-not he who is a good boss, but one who puts himself before his family as a leader, having the interest of every child in that home at heart, and having so conducted himself as father and husband that all are willing to listen to him and to express confidence in his leadership-is promoting "peace and unity" in that home and making a great contribution to society in that he is sending children into the world prepared to carry ideals into the lives of others.

The peace and unity that I am most interested in is "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding," the kind that Paul says "shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." (Phil. 4: 7.) We can be at peace with the world and not have this peace, and we would be great losers in that great day. We must have "the peace of God" with us or all is lost. This peace can only come through the Lord. Since we cannot now see him in person and hear him speak and see him work, how can we know just how to keep ourselves in this peace? It must be upon the principle of faith. No humanly devised scheme or agreement will bring lasting peace. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ," (Rom. 5: 1.) "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 26, 27.) No one was ever said to be justified by faith until that faith had led him to obey Christ; then, keeping that faith, he is at peace with all such believers in the world. He should "endeavor to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

Mrs. I. C. Hoskins Says, "Our Savior Knew."

Christ knew the yearning of the human heart for peace when he said in his last talk with his disciples: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be fearful." His little band of disciples were troubled at the thought of his leaving them, disturbed at the hatred of their enemies, and anxious as to the future, which they must face without his personal presence. Tenderly and lovingly he comforts them, promising them that tranquillity of soul which comes through communion with him and obedience to his commands.

The Savior, in his matchless words about peace, expresses a thought which Paul reëchoes in his letter to the Philippians: "In nothing be anxious; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus. (Phil. 4: 6, 7.) This peace, which is the "gift of God's love," is not only a safe refuge in which the Christian can rest, but it reacts upon the spirits of those about him, inspiring them with a desire for this peace which the world cannot give. It is important not only for the individual Christian, but it helps him to maintain that peace so essential in the church, where his brethren in Christ meet and associate with him.

No sadder sight can be witnessed than a congregation where strife and hatred prevail. That congregation where the golden tie that binds is love—love for God and love from every member to every other member—will manifest in a high degree that peace so essential to the happiness and spiritual growth of any congregation. Like the soft radiance of the silver harvest moon, which sheds its benign light down upon the sad, dark world, so will the peace which emanates from a congregation rest in its influence upon a darker world of sin.

The only sure way to bring peace to any individual or congregation is through implicit obedience to the commands of the great Head of the church.

"If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments," is as true to-day as when it was spoken on the eventful and momentous occasion just preceding Christ's great atonement. If we keep his commandments, we will introduce nothing into the worship unauthorized by the Scriptures. We will refrain from "going beyond what is written." Surrendering the truth for a so-called "peace" can only bring confusion, desolation, and finally eternal death.

That congregation which adheres most closely to the teaching of the Scriptures is following most nearly the divine model. It will not only receive the approbation of God and manifest that peace which comes only through obedience to God, but it will convert the world.

Incomprehensible the love of our divine, yet human, Savior, who poured out his heart in intercession for his disciples: "Neither for these only do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word; that they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us: that the world may believe that thou didst send me." (John 17: 20, 21.)

"Come Unto Me."

We labor and are heavy laden. Where Shall we find rest unto our souls? We bleed On thorn and flint, and rove in pilgrim weed From shrine to shrine, but comfort is not there.

What went we out into thy desert bare,
O human life, to see? Thy greenest reed
Is love, unmighty for our utmost need,
And shaken with the wind of our despair.

A voice from heaven like dew on Hermon falleth,
That Voice whose passion paled the olive leaf
In the dusky aisles, Gethsemane, thou blest
Of gardens. 'Tis the Man of Sorrows calleth,
The Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief:
"Come unto me, and I will give you rest."
—Katherine Lee Bates.

Service.

All cannot climb to heights of fame,
And write upon the sky their name;
All cannot speak in tones so loud
That they shall sway the passing crowd;
All cannot sing with angel voice
And bid the broken heart rejoice.
All can faithful be; all can love,
And all can serve the One above;
And he who loves will serve the King—
Rich jewels for his crown will bring.

Regeneration and the New Birth. No. 2.

BY JOHN D. EVANS.

Man is regarded by the inspired writers of the Old and New Testaments as a threefold being, composed of body, soul, and spirit. The apostle Paul, in 1 Thess. 5: 23, recognizes that trinity in the make-up of man in these words: "And may your spirit and soul and body be preserved entire, without blame at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Each of these units is involved in the Savior's redemptive scheme. Each must be acted upon in the conversion of every human being. There is no such thing as becoming a child of God out of the body. In Christ's resurrection and the general resurrection there is the pledge of personal immortality. In the resurrection God shall give us a "body as it pleases him." The inhabitants of the "land beyond" will not be disembodied spirits.

But the body, or fleshly man, here is not subject to spiritual impressions. The soul and spirit are. Thus two agencies, differing in nature, but coöperating toward one end, are necessary in the process of "regeneration" and the "new birth." The great purifying agent in the spiritual world is the Holy Spirit. It must, therefore, operate upon our soul and spirit and change and purify them. The Spirit does not operate upon the body. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit."

The great purifying agency in the material world is water. When applied to the body, or the body is "buried" in it according to the divine plan, it affects, not literally, but symbolically, the soul and spirit. In baptism our bodies are said to be "washed with pure water;" yet it is "not the putting away of the filth of the flesh." When the Savier instituted the memorial feast, he selected a loaf of bread as a fit emblem, doubtless, because it was universally regarded as the "staff of life." Likewise the wine, or "fruit of the vine," the emblem of blood, which was regarded as the very essence of life. In the use of water, in which in Christian baptism the body is bathed, there is, doubtless, a looking forward to the cleansing power of the blood of Christ, of which water is a fit symbol or emblem.

I am aware of the fact that most of our brethren maintain that water baptism has no significance aside from the fact that it is a command of God; but in view of the part water has played in every age of the world as a cleansing agency, I do not think such a conclusion is warranted. But a word more on this thought. John says: "For there are three who bear witness, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood: and the three agree in one." In the salvation of every human being there must be perfeet agreement as to the essentials upon the part of these three witnesses. At the Savior's crucifixion there "came forth from his side blood and water "-one, the symbol of atonement; the other, of cleansing. At the Jordan, when the Savior emerged from the waters of baptism, the Spirit testified that Jesus was the Son of God, and, therefore, the Messiah of promise. So John, in his first Epistle, declares: "This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not with the water only, but with the water and with the blood." (1 John 5: 6.) He came by the water of baptism at the beginning of his public ministry and by the blood of the cross at its close, by which "he entered into the holy place" to make atonement for our sins. These two witnesses continue with us by virtue of their atoning and cleansing power. The Spirit, the water, and the blood unite as the threefold witnesses to the Messiahship of Jesus and the guarantee of salvation through faith in his name. If it were possible to impeach or discredit the testimony of either of these witnesses, one of the very foundation stones of the temple of God would be removed; but as long as there remains in the world one soul to save, there will remain the testimony of these three witnesses that Jesus has met all the demands of heaven necessary to make him the world's Savior.

We could, therefore, no more get into the kingdom without water than we could without blood; for God has joined the two together in one birth. It is the blood that gives baptism its real significance, because it is the blood that actually cleanses. But we reach that blood when we are "baptized into his death." It is dangerous to separate what "God has joined together." Let us not forget that the Spirit, the water, and the blood are so related that no birth into the kingdom of God can be possibly effected without the joint agency of these three. Then there is not one child in God's family that has not been "born of water and the Spirit."

But a word here as to the Spirit's agency in bringing about this changed condition and spiritual relationship. The Spirit of God, John declares, "breatheth where it will." (John 3: 8-marginal reading.) He goes wherever the gospel is preached. The New Testament itself, "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," is the result of the Spirit's breathing, or speaking. Those who hear his voice (the preaching of the word) and obey his instructions are "begotten of the Spirit" and "born of water." When the Savior sent the apostles forth during his personal ministry, he said to them: "It is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you." (Matt. 10: 20.) After the great commission had been given and, according to the Savior's instructions, the apostles had tarried "at Jerusalem" until they were "endued with power from on high," Luke says: "And began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." (Acts 2: 4.) Peter declares that the announcement of the gospel itself was the result of the work of the "Holy Spirit sent forth from heaven." Since, then, the gospel was originally preached by the Holy Spirit through the Spirit-guided apostles and evangelists, it follows that the New Testament, which contains the gospel, was written by the Spirit and is the "law of the Spirit of life." This accords with the statement of the Savior, who said: "It is the Spirit that giveth life; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I have spoken unto you are spirit, and are life." The apostle also adds this testimony: "The word of God is living, and active, and sharper than any two-edged sword, and piercing even to the dividing of soul and spirit, of both joints and marrow, and quick to discern the thoughts and intents of the heart." All, therefore, who are influenced, moved, or changed by the gospel of Christ contained in the New Testament are operated upon by the Holy Spirit; and since the gospel is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (Rom. 1: 16), it follows that all the power the Spirit has in convicting or converting men is limited to the gospel of Christ. We are not disposed for one moment to place any limitation upon the power of God; but if he sees proper to do so himself, we have no right to question the exercise of such a preroga-

With this view of the matter, we can readily understand why the Savior commanded the apostles to go into "all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," and why in every case of New Testament conversion the gospel was first preached. Without its proclamation there could be no faith, for "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Thus it "pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." Since "without faith it is impossible to please God," we can understand the apostle Paul's statement when he said: "For if I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of; for necessity is laid upon me; for woe is me, if I preach not the gospel." (1 Cor. 9: 16.)

The scriptures to which our attention has been directed in these two articles unquestionably warrant the following conclusions: In every case of conversion one must hear the gospel, believe the gospel, earnestly and sincerely repent of his sins, be baptized into the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, and thus receive the remission of sins. The gospel is the "seed of the kingdom;" and when it falls into the proper soil, which is a "good and honest heart," and is appropriated by faith, we are then "begotten by the Spirit; " for "he that believeth that Jesus is the Christ is begotten of God." As Paul puts it: "In Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel." Having been "quickened" or "begotten by the Spirit," we must then be "born of water" in order to enter into the kingdom of God and become members of his family. This completes the process of regeneration and the new birth as set forth in the New Testament. Each step taken by the sinner in his approach to Christ is prompted by the Spirit of God, and is, therefore, a spiritual act. This is just as true of baptism as any other item. In New Testament times every convert was led into the waters of baptism at the Spirit's behest. Then, as now, "as many as were led by the Spirit of God became the sons of God." In the cases of conversion recorded by the writer of Acts of Apostles faith and repentance are not always specifically mentioned, though implied; but baptism is mentioned in every case. There is no record of any apostolic preacher's leaving a convert unbaptized. No gospel preacher will do it to-day. The gospel which falls short of that now is "another gospel," concerning which Paul says: "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Gal. 1: 8.) A fearful responsibility rests upon the man who would "pervert the gospel of Christ," as well as upon the one who refuses to obey it. To be "pure from the blood of all men," the man of God must "shun not to declare the whole counsel of God." To enter the kingdom of God, or the family of God, the sinner must be "born anew"-"born of water and of the Spirit." Having thus obeyed from the heart the form of teaching delivered unto him, he is then made free from sin and becomes the servant of righteousness; and if faithful until death, he shall receive the crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give. "Will there be any stars in your crown?"

The Menace of Skepticism.

BY E. H. SMITH.

Beware of the leaven of the skeptic! In Matt. 16: 6 Jesus warns his disciples against the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees, referring to the teachings of these people. The dictionary defines "leaven" as "any influence working silently and strongly that changes things or opinions." Jesus gives the word that meaning in Matt. 13: 33. By "skeptic" we mean "one who doubts or denies the truth of revelation."

The doctrine of skepticism has worked so silently among us that it has crept into thousands of hearts unsuspected. It has worked so strongly that it has almost secured control of our educational system.

I am a public-school teacher, principal of a large high school, and a firm believer in public education; but the public, and not a few self-appointed bigots, should decide what education is to be. The curriculum should consist of the organized body of knowledge, ideals, and traditions worthy of perpetuation. Surely the Bible has a place in that body.

For several years I have been seeing young people finish high school and enter college strong in their faith in the Bible as the inspired word of God, only to return in a few years critics, doubters, skeptics. Some of these have come to me sad because, in spite of their struggle, their faith had been shaken. One young man boasted that three of his professors were infidels, and expressed a wish that some of his young preacher friends might be under the instruction of these men long enough to have the "fanaticism knocked out of them."

I have before me several popular college textbooks that abound in such statements as: "Man is not the work of a supernatural Creator; " "Man is the descendant of a variety of apes." A college professor recently told his class that the Bible is not an inspired book and that its writers are not in harmony. He said Paul preaches salvation by faith and James salvation by works. These colleges cannot exist without the support of the church people. The only reason the church people support and patronize such schools is that they do not understand the danger. The people must be warned. The preachers and religious papers must warn them. This is a common ground on which all the churches can unite without sacrificing any principle.

It seems to me that those who hold the Bible as God's word might appoint a censor committee to pass on the work and faculty of the colleges and recommend only those that are absolutely safe. Let some of these high and mighty institutions seek recognition at the hands of the public.

I believe in higher education, and I know that we can give such education to our children without undermining their faith in the Bible and in God as its author. But immediate, intelligent, concerted action is necessary.

Parents, do you know the school into which you are about to send your boy or girl?

The Lesson of the Palm Tree.

The Arabs have a saying about the palm tree, that it stands with its feet in salt water and its head in the sun. They often cannot drink of the brackish water found in the oasis where the palm grows; but they tap the tree and drink the sweet palm wine. The paim tree, by the magic of its inner life, can so change the elements found in the unkindly soil around it that they minister to its growth and strength and fruit bearing. So you and I, in our earthly life, must often have our feet in the mire and bitterness of sin around us; and upon our heads will often beat the fierce heat of temptation. But in spite of these things we shall be able to grow and grow strong, rejecting the evil and assimilating the good, if within us there is the making of a new life through Jesus Christ.-Christian Work.

His Mistake.

He longed to find the road to fame. But not a highway bore that name. He thought to glory there must be A level path that he should see, But every road to which he came Possessed a terrifying name. He never thought that fame might lurk Along the dreary path called "Work." He never thought to go and see What marked the road called "Industry." Because it seemed so rough and high He passed the road to Service by; Yet had he taken either way, He might have come to fame some day.

Apropos of America's Disarmament Conference

War

They tremble, the sustaining crags;
The spires of ice are toppled down,
And molten up, and roar in flood;
The fortress crashes from on high,
The brute earth lightens to the sky,
And the great Æon sinks in blood,
And compassed by the fires of hell.

Dr. G. N. Murphey Says Eliminate "White Mule."

The following news dispatch from Washington, D. C., appeared in a recent issue of the Paducah (Ky.) Evening Sun:

Adoption of a passive attitude toward the possible arrival in Washington of beverages of rare vintage along with the delegates to the disarmament conference in November was indicated recently by treasury officials. Delegates to the conference, officials asserted, would probably be accorded the same diplomatic privileges extended duly accredited foreign representatives, and in such case there would be no question of their right to import intoxicants.

Many delicate prohibition questions may arise during the conference, it was said, such as the service of wines at functions at places other than on the properties of embassies and legations. But the government, it was added, could be expected to refrain from embarrassing the conference on this question.

Will it be impossible for the Peace Conference to function without "booze?" We are informed by the Associated Press that Washington will wink at the violations of the Elighteenth Amendment during the Peace Conference to be held in that city in November. This open door to booze is said to be meant as a courtesy to the foreign delegates to the convention. If it is necessary to disregard the enforcement of the prohibition laws of this government to be courteous, it would be better for all concerned not to place so much stress on good manners. If there ever was a time and an occasion when men will need clear heads and sober minds and when they should invoke the aid and blessing of Almighty God, this world-wide effort to secure peace and good will among all men is one. You cannot serve God and mammon at the same time. Does any one believe that God would not aid and bless a conference whose goal is to secure such a boon to all humanity as this one is intended to be? The trouble with all the warring nations of the earth at this time is because they have ceased to look to God for divine guidance. Nebuchadnezzar, the proudest and most powerful king that ever reigned on this earth, thought that he could defy the living God and still have things his own way, but God debased him to the level of the beasts of the fields until he was made to know that the Most High rules in the kingdom of men. Let not the great Peace Conference be made a drunken revel. God's ways and booze do rot harmonize; there is nothing in common between them. Think of England coming to the conference with a full cargo of whisky, rum, and wine; France, Italy, and Spain, with well-filled baskets of Mum's Extra Dry and Piper Sec; Germany, with kegs of Budweiser; Mexico, with bottles made of animal skins filled with Mexican mescal; China, with his pipe loaded with opium; Japan, with the joker up his sleeve; soviet Russia, if allowed representation, with plenty of his vile vodka; Uncle Sam, with a five-ton truck and a trailer loaded to the guards with " white mule!" What a carnival of dissipation wight and probably would follow! Just think what a stigma and disgrace all this would be on this great American government! It is the moral duty of every loyal citizen of this country to raise his voice in protest at all times against any violations of prohibition laws, but more especially during the great world Peace Conference in November.

Disarmament-The People's Fight.

It would seem that we have really reached a crisis in our economic affairs. When one contemplates the public debt of the United States, commencing with the twenty-three billions of national indebtedness and tracing it down through the State, county, and municipal indebtedness, the escape from our burden seems almost impossible. And yet if human energy can be devoted to productive enterprises and the world can be left in peace, we may hope to achieve our release at no very distant date. If we are to continue, however, to expend millions each year for war purposes in the maintenance of a big army and navy, I challenge any man to show how we can ever escape economic ruin. In other words, disarmament is essential, not only to the peace of the world, but it is essential to the economic sanity and stability of the world.

A step has now been taken looking to the calling of a conference relative to disarmament. That step has been taken because of the tremendous public sentiment, not only throughout this country, but throughout the world. Public opinion has achieved one of its greatest triumphs. If the movement now initiated is to be successful, it will be so by reason of the exertion of the same force of public opinion exerted upon every phase and feature of the movement. It is the people's fight. The diplomats and the so-called "leaders" of the world will never disarm. They have trifled and halted and fumbled with it for two hundred and fifty years, and instead of disarming they have armed. They have led the world practically to bankruptcy and to the greatest war of all history. If the cause is to succeed, therefore, it must be through the wellorganized, well-sustained, and well-directed public opinion of the country.

Secret diplomacy and naval competition were the great contributing causes to the World War. Secret diplomacy and naval competition will accomplish again what they accomplished from 1898 to 1914. The people dare not turn away from this issue to leave it to be solved by their leaders. The driving power must still be found in the homes, among those upon whom the terrific burden will fall in case the great cause fails.—William E. Borah, United States Senator from Idaho.

"A Little Child Shall Lead Them."

"A little child shall lead them." Long ago
An ancient seer, on whom Thy spirit fell,
Foretold this gracious truth. And yet how slow
We've been to let Thee lead, Thou knowest well.

But now, at last, with wounded hearts and sore,
With spirits riven as with blades of steel,
We pray Thee, in our need, to go before
And lead—to where our grievous wounds may heal.

Be then our Captain, Child of Bethlehem; Grant us Thy meekness, clothe us with Thy grace; May strife and greed, or aught Thine eyes condemn, No longer in our being find a place.

The Unity of the Spirit. BY C. A. NORRED.

The first thing to do in studying the unity of the Spirit is to get the exact meaning of the phrase. The word translated "unity" is defined as meaning "unanimity, agreement." The word does not convey the idea of organic oneness, but refers to the inner sentiment of agreement. The English equivalent is also so defined. Hence, the unity spoken of is simply agreement, harmony, concord. But it must be observed that this unity is "of the Spirit." The phrase, "of the Spirit," is expressed in the original in one word which is used as the genitive of source, the exact thought being that the unity spoken of is one of which the Spirit is the source. The unity of the Spirit is simply that agreement and harmony of which the Holy Spirit is the source. This careful study of the expression, "unity of the Spirit," makes the meaning clear. The unity of the Spirit is not the oneness of the body. Many understand the expression to mean that all God's people should compose one body. That is not the meaning. All God's people do compose one body. (Eph. 4: 4.) Paul's meaning is that all those who compose the "one body" should be in agreement. But it must be observed that this agreement is not just any agreement desired or convenient. The unity authorized is that of which the Spirit can truly be called the source. The unity of the Spirit is that agreement and harmony among God's people of which the Spirit is the source.

I shall now mention four necessary elements of the unity of the Spirit.

- 1. The supreme Lordship of Jesus. The first element in the unity of the Spirit is agreement upon the supreme Lordship of Jesus. Paul says: "There is one Lord." (Eph. 4: 5.) That the Lord here referred to is Jesus is clear from Matt. 28: 18; Phil. 2: 5-11. The vital truth which comes to me as I read and meditate upon these passages is that Jesus is Lord of my own heart. The rule of Jesus is not merely theoretical, but is actual and real. That which should govern me is not my will, but the will of Jesus, who is my rightful ruler. The people of God are not left to be the victims of that confusion and discord which would necessarily result from a multiplicity of rulers. "There is one Lord." The first element in the unity of the Spirit is the supreme Lordship of Jesus.
- 2. The authority of the New Testament Scriptures. The Lordship of Jesus makes necessary a knowledge of the will of Jesus. Now, this will of Jesus is set forth in the New Testament Scriptures. (Jer. 31: 31-34; Heb. 8: 6-12; 2 Tim, 3: 16, 17; 2 Pet. 1: 3.) The people of God must go as far as the New Testament Scriptures go. God's people must go no further than the New Testament Scriptures. (1 Cor. 4: 6; 2 John 9.) The authority of the New Testament Scriptures must be accepted by the people of God if unity is to prevail. If the New Testament Scriptures are not accepted in their entirety, the unity of the Spirit is impossible; if the doctrines and commandments of men are exalted to a place of authority, the unity of the Spirit is impossible. Agreement upon the authority of the New Testament as a full and sufficient revelation of the will of the Lord is absolutely essential to the unity of the Spirit.
- 3. The constitution of the church of the New Testament. The church, as the term is used in the New Testament, is composed of all the Christians in the territory to which reference is made. This constitution of the church must be constantly kept in mind. Taking a part of the church and considering it the church, to the exclusion of any other part of the church, makes the unity of the Spirit an impossibility.

4. Union of God's people upon Christ and his church as they are set forth in the New Testament Scriptures.

I wish now to speak as to the practical means for attaining the unity of the Spirit. Careful thought upon the word of God will show that the means of attaining the unity of the Spirit is a strict conformity with the New Testament Scriptures as the authoritative standard of faith and practice among Christians. When the people of God strictly adhere to the New Testament in all their work and worship, the unity of the Spirit will necessarily follow. Here is a place, probably, for particular warning. A strict conformity to the New Testament Scriptures will mean that some persons involved will dissent. When some object to strict adherence to the New Testament, some may fear that a strict adherence to the New Testament will make unity impossible. How subtle are the designs of Satan! Any unity coming from any source other than the Spirit is a unity of the flesh, and not the unity of the Spirit. Further, this unity of the flesh is the deadly enemy of the unity of the Spirit. The practical means for attaining the unity of the Spirit is a strict conformity to the New Testament Scriptures.

The unity of the Spirit is simply that agreement and harmony among Christians of which the Spirit is the source. The practical means of attaining that unity is a strict conformity with the New Testament through which the Spirit speaks. How necessary, then, that God's people, in all their work and worship, adhere to the New Testament Scriptures! When Christians earnestly endeavor to follow the New Testament Scriptures in all things, they are "giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

Born in the Objective Case.

BY E. E. JOYNES.

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" (Ps. 133: 1.)

There are some things that are good that are not pleasant and some that are pleasant that are not good, but unity among brethren is both good and pleasant. Hence it should be the earnest desire of every Christian to do all in his power to retain this happy condition. This is in harmony with the exhortation to endeavor to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 3.) Here is something that every Christian, both young and old, should pledge himself to do. The greatest hindrance to the building up of the church is in division and strife; and, on the other hand, the greatest good can be accomplished when all are working together for the advancement of the cause. But there are some people who seem to have been born in the objective case-of the kind the apostle had in mind when he prayed to be delivered from unreasonable men. (2 Thess. 3: 2.) The Savior stated that offenses are bound to come; but woe unto the man by whom they come! (Matt. 18: 7.) Therefore, let the reader live so as not to be the one through whom the offense arises.

We can help considerably in maintaining peace and unity by not being oversensitive, and this would be in harmony with Paul's teaching in Rom. 12: 18—that if it is at all possible we should live peaceably with all men. As God is not the author of confusion, this implies that it is his will that unity and peace should abound. Inasmuch as the burden of the Savior's prayer was for unity (John 17: 21), let us pray and work for it, too. Then the inspired writer commanded that we should with one mind glorify or worship God. (Rom. 15: 5.) Let us strive to be of the same mind and judgment, so that there will be no divisions among us. (1 Cor. 1: 10.)

The Challenge.

Wert capable of war—its tugs and trials? Be capable of peace—its trials; For the tug and moral strain of nations Come at last in peace—not war.

The Relation of Faith and Obedience. No. 1.

BY K. C. MOSER.

That there is any kind of relation between faith and obedience, many seem never to have learned. Those who teach that salvation is by faith alone, and not by obedience, imply, if they do not also plainly assert, that there is no connection between faith and obedience. Since salvation is by faith, many incorrectly conclude that works are not necessary to salvation. Now, I am sure that salvation is by faith, but without the least inconsistency I also believe that works are essential to salvation. I shall try to explain.

I think I can conceive of three ways by which God could have attempted the salvation of the world. First, God could have saved the world unconditionally. I do not believe, however, that this is his method of salvation, but shall not here stop to give my reasons for not so believing. Second, man could have been subjected to law that would have called for perfection. At least we know that this is not now God's plan to save the world. Third, the only remaining method is "by grace through faith." All are now saved by the "law [principle] of faith."

Whatever might be the merits of good works as such, man is not thereby counted righteous. "For what saith the scripture? And Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned unto him for righteousness. Now to him that worketh, the reward is not reckoned as of grace, but as of debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is reckoned for righteousness." (Rom. 4: 3-6.) Of course the works here spoken of are works of law, and must not be confused with works of faith. There is a vast difference between works that would merit salvation and works which are the fruits of faith. But that faith, and not works as such, is counted for righteousness is a present truth, "Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was reckoned unto him; but for our sake also, unto whom it shall be reckoned, who believe on him that raised Jesus our Lord from the dead." (Rom. 4: 23, 24.)

Abraham's case rightly understood would relieve the world of much theological error. While Paul asserts that Abraham was saved by faith, James says that he was justified by works. Now, if there be no necessary connection between faith and works, Paul and James are not agreed. But they are agreed. Therefore, there is a necessary connection between faith and works. Indeed, faith that saves must "work by love." (Gal. 5: 6.) Paul said that he was made an apostle "unto obedience of faith." (Rom. 1: 5.) Certainly the Holy Spirit would not have directed James to give so much value to works and at the same time inspired Paul to speak disparagingly of the same kind of works. "Is Christ divided?"

Works stand in the same relation to faith as the spirit to the body, (James 2: 26.) This is true whether works of saint or sinner are contemplated. The spirit quickens the body; works quicken (make valid) faith. Saving faith must manifest itself. James denies the right of one to the claim of faith apart from its manifestations. "Yea, a man will say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: show me thy faith apart from thy works, and I by my works will show thee my faith." (James 2: 17, 18.) Put in the form of a syllogism, it stands thus: Faith saves, but faith apart from works does not save; therefore faith apart from works is not faith.

Scriptural faith includes both faith and its manifestations. Indeed, the manifestations of faith are a part of faith. A barren tree is worthless. Christ cursed the barren fig tree. On the same hypothesis, he would curse the barren faith. Saving faith is not barren. "In your faith supply virtue; and in your virtue knowledge; and in your knowledge self-control; and in your self-control patience; and in your patience godliness; and in your godliness brotherly kindness; and in your brotherly kindness love. For if these things are yours and abound, they make you to be not idle nor unfruitful unto the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Pet, 1: 5-9.) Whatever is said in a commendable way of a fruit tree is said not of a barren tree, but of one that bears fruit. The wise husbandman cuts down the barren tree. So does the divine husbandman. "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh it away." (John 15: 2,)

There are but two classes, so far as reward and punishment are concerned—namely, the believer and the unbeliever; and just as unbelief comprehends every sin, so does faith include every virtue.

Later I hope to give several examples from the Bible to prove that faith, to save, must include its fruits—works. I give only one example here. Commending the church at Rome, Paul says: "Your faith is proclaimed throughout the whole world," (Rom. 1: 8.) In concluding the book, Paul, again commending the church, says: "Your obedience is come abroad unto all men." (Rom. 16: 19.) In the last passage the word "obedience" is used instead of faith in the first passage. Paul could not separate faith and obedience. "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." (Mark 10; 9.) But man puts asunder what God has joined when he separates faith from its manifestations.

Baptists and Miracles.

BY C. R. N.

Some weeks ago while in a meeting in Houston, Texas, I saw, in the Houston Post, a daily paper of that city, the following:

MAN IS HEALED BY MIRACLE, BAPTIST PREACHER REPORTS.

One of the most remarkable cases of present-day miracles was reported by Rev. D. L. Griffith, pastor of the Trinity Baptist Church, Wednesday night. The story as fold by Rev. Mr. Griffith is that a Mr. Feary, residing at 2218 Whitty Street, who had been bedridden for more than four weeks, called him over the telephone Monday and asked him to come and see him.

Mr. Griffith reports that he visited the sick man Monday and Tuesday, talked with and prayed for him. On Wednesday the sick man called for the minister again, and on his arrival was asked if he believed James 5: 14, 15. On being assured that he did, and that the ministers were the elders reference was had to in the passage, it was requested that he have the elders come and carry out the directions of the passage, which reads: "Is any among you sick? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save him that is sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, it shall be forgiven him."

Mr. Griffith says: "I called Dr. Leavell, of the First Baptist Church, and Rev. W. M. Harrell, of the Calvary Baptist Church, and asked them to accompany me to see Mr. Feary. We went to his home and prayed together and separately, and then we anointed the afflicted man with oil. We left him shortly afterwards and went to our homes."

The report continues, and relates that the man was cured and attended prayer meeting at the church that night.

The doctors reported that Mr. Feary, who was suffering from tuberculosis, would not live more than thirty days.

I thought I understood the doctrine of the Southern Baptists, and I still think I do; but I called Mr. Griffith and was assured by him that Baptists believe the people are cured by the anointing with oil and prayer. They used olive oil.

Some days later the following appeared in the Houston Post: "C. T. Feary, aged forty-five, who was reported to have been miraculously healed on June 1, died at his home, 2218 Whitty Street, at 12:10 Saturday morning."

Many of our readers will be surprised to learn that the Southern Baptists believe in and practice the foregoing, but the account as given can leave no doubt as touching the matter of the three city pastors named. Fact: The anointing and prayers of the three Baptist preachers no more cured the tubercular patient than Baptist doctrine will save a soul! There is not one thing taught by Baptists, peculiar to them, that is true-not one!

From time to time there arises some fanatic who announces that he can cure. Uusually such people are ignorant, and the unlearned are the ones who flock to them. In these latter days there has not been one cure where there was an organic lesion. I was not prepared to find the Southern Baptists in line with the Mormons, "Holy Rollers," Apostolics, and such folk, in the effort to make believe that they were working miracles; and it would not be right to make this charge against the Baptists as a whole. Many of them know better. How often do you find some man who is anxious to get in the "Ilmelight!"

Is James 5: 14, 15 applicable to-day? Was it ever possible for those possessing miraculous power to cure any and all kinds of sickness-to cure all who were sick? If yes, why did any one die in the apostolic age? If they could cure every one, no matter why he was sick, why not the sick man in the days of the apostles call for the elders, let them anoint him, pray, and the prayer of faith "shall save the sick?" If later he has a recurrence, or is sick from some other disease, let the elders again be called, anoint, and pray, and again he will be made well; and on and on ad infinitum.

Paul left Trophimus at Miletus sick (2 Tim. 4: 20), though he had the power to work miracles. Why did he leave Trophimus sick? Why did he not cure him? Why were not the elders called for and the sick brother cured? It is a fact that members of the church sickened and died then. Why were they not cured in keeping with the interpretation placed on this passage in James, if, indeed, every one who was sick could have been cured?

Suppose I should enter some country where they do not believe the Bible and announce to them that I have power to work miracles, to cure the sick, etc. With me is a companion. One morning I tell the folk that my companion is sick abed, and invite them to come with me and see me cure him. They follow, and I anoint the sick brother with oil, and pray, and immediately he arises and announces himself cured. What would be the verdict of the people? Should you see such, what would you say? When you remember that miracles were for the purpose of confirming the word (Mark 16: 16-20; Heb. 2: 1-4), you will know that for Paul to have cured Trophimus would have militated against him and his work, rather than have confirmed his word among the people.

Relative to the man who was born blind, Jesus was asked: "Who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind? Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: but that the works of God should be made manifest in him." The inability of the man to appropriate light was not due to anything the man or his parents had done. Jesus declared that his blindness was that the power of God might be manifested. Jehovah caused the blindness. Then, as now, there were those who were blind from disease or accident. Why not their eyes opened? Only when the miracle could be a means of confirming the word was it wrought; and the miracle was never intended to cure the oft-repeated cases of sickness which flesh is heir to in this lansed state.

We must believe the apostles; and the ones having power to work miracles in the days of the apostles were as solicitous for the physical welfare of the people as we of this day. Surely there are not those now who would be so destitute of the milk of human kindness that they would let a person suffer and die, if they could cure them from any and all sickness from which they suffered. But the fact stands forth that in the days of the apostles and the days of miracles people did sicken and die, even when the elders were to be found. So to-day. Why? Why not saved in keeping with James 5: 14, 15? Miracles were to confirm the word. The sick cured were only those who were sick by, or as a result of, the necessity of opportunity to confirm the wordthat the power of God might be manifested.

The word having been confirmed, miracles passed away with the other things which are "in part"-speaking with tongues, apostles, etc. Read carefully 1 Cer. 12, 13.

A Righteous Peace.

BY J. C. M'Q.

We have had so many and terrible wars that it should take no argument to induce the nations to disarm. There has been and is so much strife and division in the religious world, and so much evil has been the result of this strife and division, that all Christians should devote their talents to the ushering in of the peace and unity that would please God. All will readily concede that the peace and unity enjoyed in him are to be coveted, but there is danger of concluding that all peace is desirable. This is not so. Peace in sin is wicked and vicious. The unity and peace of murderers, thieves, and adulterers should be condemned. The sinless, spotless Babe of Bethlehem never came to this world to bring such a peace. It was not an unholy peace that caused a multitude of the heavenly host to praise God and say, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased," when Christ was cradled in a manger. Christ came to bring "peace on earth" by leading his subjects to deny themselves for harmony and to live "soberly, righteously, and godly." He came to bring his disciples peace by influencing them "in honor" to prefer "one another" and to love not "in word, neither with the tongue; but in deed and truth."

The peace that Christ brings teaches us to present our bedies living sacrifices, to lead lives of self-denial, to correct the erring, and to help the fallen to rise. In seeking and pursuing this peace, a conflict between truth and error, right and wrong, virtue and vice, will arise. If we are not cowards, we must fight. We cannot enjoy the peace that is from above and tamely submit to sin. Christ triumphed over sin in all its forms. He tells us: "Think not that I came to send peace on the earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law: and a man's foes shall be they of his own household." (Matt. 10: 34-36.) The father may love the truth, the son may hate it. There can be no real peace between them. The daughter may love and obey the truth, the mother may be dishonest and worldly. There can be no real fellowship between them. One preacher is full of humility, loves the truth, and teaches it to the very best of his ability. Another preacher knows the truth and presents it in the "holier-than-thou" fashion; he sees much to criticize and little to commend in his brother preachers, and leads his audiences to believe that he thinks no one is really preaching the word but himself. All preachers should lose sight of themselves in the delivery of their messages and should know nothing but Christ, and him erucified. We cannot bring to the church, weary and tired of division and strife, that peace Christ intends until we are willing to deny ourselves the gratification of our personal ambition in order to promote peace among God's children. He that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

The peace of the world and the peace of God are very different. In the world there is no perfect peace. In this world no man enjoys perfect rest. Christ says: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you." (John 14: 27.) Again, Christ says to his disciples: "These things have I spoken unto you, that in me ye may have peace. In the world ye have tribulation: but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world." (John 16: 33.) God's children have tribulations in this world as do other people. There is change and unrest on every hand. The boy sighs to be a man, and the man sighs to be a boy again. Like David, we long for the wings of a dove, that we may fiy away to God and be at rest. Knocks, slander, and persecution come to the innocent. Joseph's virtue did not save him from slander and cruel treatment. "In the world ye have tribulation." It is God's way, and there is no escape from it. When we are called on to suffer, when the clouds hang heavily over us, we should not rebel against God. It is the common lot of man. "Man, that is born of a woman, is of few days, and full of trouble." (Job 14: 1.) This world is the school in which we are trained for perfect peace and rest. It is the scene of our conflict, in which, if we conquer, we inherit, when the victory is won, eternal life. In the fight that we must make to overcome sin and selfishness, we should be encouraged by the thought that we may have "the peace of God" to abide with us. I have been impressed with the fact how Paul would have "peace from God" to abide with all Christians. Without It, there is not a possibility of victory. In writing to the Romans, the Corinthians, the Galatians, the Ephesians, the Philippians, the Colossians, and the Thessalonians, the Holy Spirit, through Paul, says: "Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ." What a wonderful prayer for these churches! Living in close union and communion with God and enjoying his peace, they must expect tribulations and not peace in the world. Still, abiding in the peace of God, there would come to them a joy and satisfaction that is unknown to the man of the world. These churches could not abide in the "peace of God" by lusting for power and money or by compromising with the world to gain its popularity. They were not expected to live in peace with all manner of sin. Paul would have them so live "that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith; to the end that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be strong to apprehend with all the saints what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled unto all the fullness of God," (Eph. 3: 17-19.)

Peace at the expense of truth would be unrighteous. Men must so love the truth as to teach it, but to them Paul says: "Let your forbearance ["gentleness"—margin] be known unto all men." (Phil. 4: 6.) Severity, roughness, and harshness are no parts of the truth. We should seek to lead the world to a righteous peace, then God will bless our efforts. "And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 4: 7.)

How Peace and Unity May Be Preserved in a Church of God.

BY M. C. K.

When we consider the surpassing spirit of self-sacrifice, love, gentleness, meekness, long-suffering, and forbearance so eminently characteristic of the Lord Jesus Christ, and hence what a Christian—a follower of him—may also be justly supposed to be, it seems strange in the extreme that there would ever be any question at all about preserving peace and unity among such persons; and yet this has been one of the most difficult and vexatious problems throughout the whole history of the church. Such a fact, however, only gives solemn emphasis to the awful reality of sin in this world and the havoc it works wherever it is allowed to flourish.

Sin from the very beginning has been no respecter of persons. It aims at any one and every one whom it can devour. It invades the most sacred places and sows the seeds of anarchy and ruin wherever it is permitted to have a hand. It disturbed the primitive peace and quiet of Eden; sowed the seed of death in all mankind, filling a happy world with grief, sorrow, and sadness; and turned the earth into a vast charnel house of the dead. It can and often does fill the friends of the Lord with jealousy and arrays them in the most deadly conflict against each other. It entered the sacred precincts of the chosen twelve and turned one of them into a demon, led him to betray his Master for sordid gain, and sent his soul to perdition. It even sought to destroy the Babe of Bethlehem as soon as he was born into the world. It introduced strife, alienation, and division into the church of God before the apostles were dead who established it, and from that day to this it has been diligently and unceasingly carrying on its deadly work of dividing churches and sowing discord among brethren.

So widespread and relentless is sin's grip upon men and so destructive is it to all peace and harmony even among Christians that the management of the Gospel Advocate has specially set apart the present issue of the paper as the "Peace and Unity" number, and it is the purpose of the present article to try to indicate how peace and unity may be preserved in a church of God. Let it be carefully noted, first of all, that the only radical and successful way to cure a disease is to remove its cause. But departures from the word of the Lord and walking in the "bypaths" of men instead of remaining in "the old paths" is, as we clearly saw in the "Old Paths" number, the primary and radical cause of division and disunity among the people of God; and hence it must follow most logically and conclusively that the cessation of all such departures and preaching and practicing simply the word of the Lord will restore and preserve peace and unity in any church of God on earth. This is the one great and crying need to-day. Even when Jesus was here on earth he said of the people: "In vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." (Matt. 15: 9.) There the whole story of how to preserve peace and unity and worship God acceptably is told in a nutshell; and that is, to turn away from "the doctrines and precepts of men" and preach and practice nothing but the doctrines and precepts of God. It may be possible that all men will never be brought to do this most desirable thing, but surely all thoughtful persons can see that this is the only divine way to preserve peace and unity in a church of Christ. Let it be further observed also that even peace and unity themselves on any other basis, dear as they are, would not be acceptable to God.

But let us here ask the solemn question: Since the way to preserve peace and unity seems so simple, why is it so difficult ordinarily to get churches to adopt and follow that way? Possibly no one but God himself could answer this question accurately and in all its details; but any intelligent student of the word of God can know that, in general terms, the reason is found in man's perverseness and stubborn persistence in foisting his own opinions or the opinions of others upon men instead of faithfully and reverently pointing them to the word and will of the Lord. Why should any man, when occupying the function of trying to lead men to obey the Lord, ever preach or teach his opinions to them at all or on any subject? He cannot possibly know that his opinion is right, but he ought to know, as all well-informed persons know, that his opinions and the opinions of all other men on such matters may be wrong. Hence, let man's opinions in teaching religion be forever withheld. "I charge thee in the sight of God, and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the living and the dead, and by his appearing and his kingdom: preach the word." (2 Tim. 4: 1, 2.) Not our opinions about "the word," but "the word" itself. "Preach the word." Say what God says; say all that God says; and stop where God stops. That is the infallibly safe way, and it will preserve peace and unity in the church of God over all the earth. Yea, where strife and division now hold sway it will stop them and restore peace and unity, establish the members of the body of Christ in harmonious cooperation, and start them anew upon a career of success and prosperity. No wonder the inspired apostle said: "I therefore, the prisoner in the Lord, beseech you to walk worthily of the calling wherewith ye were called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." (Eph. 4: 1-3.) Surely such a high end is worthy of the adoption of such a beautiful and praiseworthy course. May the Lord lead the churches everywhere to adopt it, and thus may peace and unity be preserved and prevail.

The Woman Who Learned at Jesus' Feet.

BY F. E. EXUM.

Her light is shining always,
'Tis seen in every place;
The light of love is in her eyes,
A smile is on her face.

Her affections are set on things above; She is laying up treasures there; Things that are good are the things she loves, Things that are noble and fair.

The footprints of Jesus she follows; Her life she is losing to save; And saving, she helps to save others, Ere they go down to the grave.

As she higher goes toward God's throne, She beckons to those behind, And reaches down to help them up To planes that are more sublime.

When she passes through the portals of pearl Into the heavenly fold, Bright jewels will forever shine There in her crown of gold.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

W

The "Peace and Unity" Number makes its prettiest bow.

Brother McQuiddy has returned from a month's stay in Petoskey, Mich.

James A. Allen is in a meeting with the Pilcher Avenue congregation, in West Nashville.

C. M. Pullias will begin the annual protracted meeting for the church at Franklin, Tenn., next Sunday.

David Thompson closed a meeting at Green Forest, near Poplar Bluff, Mo., on September 20. There were six baptisms.

An extract from the Times Journal, of Bowling Green, Ky., tells of a good meeting being conducted by E. E. Shoulders.

- G. A. Dunn is in a fine meeting with the church at Sparta, Tenn. Elighteen persons had been baptized up to September 24.
- T. B. Thompson will be located for a year at Huntsville, Ala. He is now in a meeting with the West Huntsville congregation.
- J. T. Harris closed the meeting at Friendship, Tenn., on September 20, at the water's edge. There were eighteen baptisms, and two were restored to fellowship.
- R. P. Cuff closed a meeting near Silver Point, Tenn., with eleven additions. He is now back at Macon, Ga., for another year's work with the congregation there.
- M. D. Baumer reports one baptism at Fairfax Avenue, Winchester, Ky., at a prayer-meeting service. He also reports two baptisms by M. P. Lowrey in Estill County.

William P. Walker writes: "I wish to thank my brethren and friends for the many comforting letters that I have received. They are being answered as opportunity affords."

J. C. Mosley reports a good meeting in progress at Dongola, III. Among others, he had baptized a Baptist preacher's wife. She had been a member of that denomination for forty-four years.

A note from R. W. Officer, of Turkey, Texas, informs us of the death of his estimable wife on September 21. The Gospel Advocate extends a message of sympathy to Brother Officer on account of his great sorrow.

From Mitchell Pullias, Dallas, Texas, September 19: "I began work with the Oak Cliff congregation yesterday. Large audiences attended both services. Two were baptized and four placed their membership with the congregation."

From R. L. Whiteside, Hampshire, Tenn., September 22: "I began a series of meetings at Kettle Mills last Sunday. Three have been baptized to date. I have some time in October for meetings. Address me at Ætna, Tenn., care of A. J. Sisco."

From C. B. Thomas, Flint, Mich., 1337 Richfield Road, September 20: "Our meeting at this place lasted over three Lord's days. Six members that have moved into our city took membership with us, and one young lady obeyed her Lord and Master and was baptized the same hour."

From R. L. Colley, Braxton, Tenn., September 24: "I began a meeting here last Lord's day and will close it tonight. There have been six added to the one body—two baptized and two restored to their 'first love.' I will hold two other meetings here, then return to school at Henderson."

Recommendation.—"We, the undersigned, members of the church of Christ, do hereby certify that G. W. Jarrett came to New Smyrna, Fla., last spring well recommended, and has preached for us, and we can recommend him to be a sound gospel preacher in good standing in the church of Christ, [Signed] D. W. Clifton, J. S. Roberts; T. H. Roberts, Elder."

Farms for Sale.—Near Tyner, Tenn., on the best of roads out from Chattanooga, there are some splendid farms for sale, and the "faithful few" at Tyner are exceedingly anxious for those farms to be secured by wide-awake and true disciples of Christ. A beautiful house of worship just finished. Good schools. If interested, write to Mrs. Daisy Chambers Major, Tyner, Tenn.

From E. L. Whitaker, Corinth, Miss., September 22: "I began a tent meeting in Vardaman, Miss., the first Lord's day in this month and continued it for twelve days, with seven additions. We have only a few brethren here, but they are as loyal and true as any I have ever met. They are struggling hard to build. It can truly be said that the harvest in Mississippi is ripe, but laborers are few."

From I. A. Douthitt, Scott's Hill, Tenn., September 22: "I have just closed a meeting at Arkland, in Maury County, Tenn. This is a new congregation and is made up mostly of women, but they are trying to do things for the Lord. We had large crowds at night and reasonably good crowds in the day. The interest grew to the end. There were three additions to the church—two by baptism. I will begin a meeting at Scott's Hill on Saturday night,"

From J. V. Armstrong Traylor: "I held a mission meeting at the Moultrie Schoolhouse, several miles from Shelbyville, Tenn., beginning on the second Sunday in September and closing on the third Sunday. There are only two families of loyal disciples there; but the people as a whole are very attentive, and I had the best of interest. The meeting continued eight days and resulted in four additions. They have asked me to come back next year for two weeks."

From C. A. Norred, Memphis, Tenn.: "Recently a Baptist gentleman with extensive interests at the village of Olyphant, Ark., invited me to visit him and preach some to the people of his community. I spent eight days visiting and preaching there. The Baptist gentleman was baptized along with four other mature people. Twelve Christians were found who promised to meet regularly. Conditions there are exceedingly favorable. I am expecting good work to be done there."

Morgan H. Carter writes: "The meeting recently held in West New York was blessed by our Father. We deeply appreciate the prayers and cooperation of all who have given time or money that Christ might be preached and men saved. Further prayer and financial cooperation are urgently needed. Please also send the names and addresses of all members and friends whom you know to be living in New York City or the Jerseys to the treasurer, Brother G. M. McKee, 105 West Sixty-fourth Street, New York, N. Y."

From W. S. Long, Washington, D. C., September 21. "A, G. Freed and his daughter, of Henderson, Tenn., made the church in Washington a pleasant visit last week, which was highly appreciated by every one who met them. His excellent sermon on the Twenty-third Psalm was as a refreshing shower to all his appreciative hearers. Professor Freed has been a teacher for forty years and has former students in all parts of the nation. His old students here rallied to him with a warm grasp of the hand of love and with words of appreciation of what he had done for them. We hope he may come back to be with us longer sometime. May God give him many years to preach the 'unsearchable riches of Christ."

From J. G. Malphurs, Clarksville, Tenn., September 26: "The cause of Christ at this place is picking up. Efforts are now being put forth to build a modest church house, unless we can buy one at a bargain. One lady was baptized without waiting on the big meeting. Large crowds attended the debate at Legate. Mr. Greenwell, the Baptist preacher, seemed anxious to debate the questions at other places before we had the discussion, but now his brethren refuse to let him discuss further with me, saying that I was unfair. I and my brethren are willing for the audience to say who was fair. We feel that the young church at Legate has profited by the debate, and the work there will soon be one of the most interesting in the county. We shall be glad to get Mr. Greenwell another man."

From J. F. Boyd, Shelbyville, Tenn., September 20: "At our Lord's-day services on August 28, J. H. McBroom handed in his resignation, to take effect on December 25. It was very unexpected to most of us, and many regrets were expressed by a large number of those present. He has been located with us and preaching regularly for the Main Street congregation about eighteen months. During this time his life among us has been that of a consecrated Christian, and he has been a faithful worker in the Master's vinevard. His preaching has been systematic and constructive to an unusual degree, and he has at all times been loyal to what is written, not shunning to declare 'the whole counsel of God' whether preaching to the world or the church. We have greatly admired and heartily commend his bold and uncompromising defense of the truth as it is given to us by the inspired writers, and the high standard of Christian living he has continuously held up before the church-unusually high, we admit, but no higher than that given us by Paul and Peter and James and John."

D. S. Ligon baptized seven in Mansfield, Ark.

The far country is forgetfulness of God .- Augustine.

David Livingstone said: "Fear God and work hard."

In self-denial we will find happiness.-F. C. McConnell.

Henry Ford is the greatest business man of the generation.—Thomas Edison.

War is not a solution; it is an aggravation.—Benjamin Disraeli.

The brain is an organ of filtration for spiritual life.-

"The Gospel Advocate gets better all the time. Why not make more special numbers?" (Harvey Scott, Floresville, Texas.)

I wish men had not been taught to dam up natural currents, to the overflowing and damage of their neighbor's grounds.—Franklin.

W. W. Freeman requests that any disciples who may be at New Haven, Conn., communicate with him. He resides at Yale Divinity Hall.

"The Gospel Advocate seems to be getting better all the time. The last two issues are wonderful." (Mrs. M. N. Waters, Oklawaha, Fla.)

Great preaching calls for great thinking—not for big words, but for big ideas that touch the depths of the human soul and rise to the throne of God.—A, T. Robertson.

H. A. Rogers, who is doing the work of an evangelist in Canada, has baptized fifty-two persons during the past year. In addition, four came over from the Baptists.

M. H. Northeross closed his meeting near Goodlettsville, Tenn., with fifteen confessions. He also closed a meeting of eight days' duration last Sunday, with five baptized.

"The Gospel Advocate is better now than for a long time. I believe most of the writers feel the importance of constructive work." (W. W. Freeman, New Haven, Conn.)

J. L. Daniel, 616 Georgia Avenue, Chattanooga, Tenn., commends the special numbers of the Gospel Advocate. He recently renewed his subscription for the thirty-seventh year.

From H. M. Phillips, Tuscumbia, Ala., September 20: "Two splerdid services at Tuscumbia on Sunday. Two baptisms. I begin a meeting at Brush Creek, Tenn., tonight."

From N. W. Profflit, Etna, Tenn., Route 1, September 21: "The Nunnelly meeting closed with twenty-two additions. We are now at Sunrise in an oak grove, preaching to good crowds, with a growing interest."

From W. B. London, Cornersville, Tenn., September 24: "Price Billingsley began our meeting on September 4 and closed it at the water on September 19. Thirty-nine were baptized and thirteen were reclaimed."

The meeting at the Twelfth Avenue Church, in Nashville, starts off with the vim and energy that are characteristic of the congregation. S. M. Jones is doing some very effective preaching, and good results are anticipated.

In the report of G. A. Dunn's recent meeting at Mount Pleasant, Tenn. in our last issue, the number of additions by baptism should have been "thirty-two," as stated by Brother Dunn, Instead of "twenty-two," as printed,

From A. R. Hill, Charleston, Miss., September 20: "I was at Oakland last Sunday. Large crowds attended both services. One was baptized. We have a very good congregation at Oakland, and the outlook for the future is encorraging."

From Emmett G. Creacy, Echo, Ky., September 19: "The meeting here continues, with good interest. Five have been baptized, and others are almost persuaded to obey the gospel. The Lord willing, I will begin a meeting at Willow Shade on the first Lord's day in October."

The Gospel Advocate is the recipient of the following wedding announcement: "Mr. and Mrs. Thacker Quisenberry Martin announce the marriage of their daughter, Nancy Sue, to Dr. Russell Wilson Lavengood, on Saturday, the seventeenth of September, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one, Louisville, Ky. At home, 3020 Cherokee Drive."

From Mrs. A. C. Walker, Huntsville, Ala.; "The members of the Randolph Street church of Christ, of Huntsville, feel very fortunate indeed in baying T. B. Thompson and family reunited with us again. During their three-months' stay with us in the spring much spiritual interest and enthusiasm were aroused, and we feel sure that much and lasting good will be accomplished at this place."

From I. B. Bradley, Spruce Pine, Ala., September 24: "On the fourth day of a good meeting here. Five baptized to date. Interest fine. Three sermons to-morrow. Next at Phil Campbell. Then to Charlotte Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., which closes my engagements for 1921. I am open now for work for 1922 as local evangelist for some church needing a preacher. Who wants a preacher for 1922? Write me at Dickson, Tenn."

From Emmeti G. Creacy, Horse Cave, Ky.: "Herbert E. Winkler will meet Thomas Joyner (Cumberland Presbyterian) in debate at Reid's Chapel, four miles north of Glasgow, Ky. The debate will begin at ten o'clock Tuesday, October 18, and continue for two days. Proposition: "An alien sinner can become saved in answer to his own prayer before and without submitting to the ordinance of water baptism." Joyner will affirm; Winkler will deny. Brethren from a distance will be taken care of during the discussion. Write Luther McGuire, Glasgow, Ky., Route 6."

From Fred M. Little, Montgomery, Ala., September 26: "Our services at Catoma Street are improving in attendance since vacation time for so many of those who attend church there. One man who said he had been scripturally baptized placed his membership with us last night. I am preaching each evening this week at Strata, Ala., twenty-five miles from Montgomery. The attendance and interest are good, which causes us to expect immediate visible results. I shall spend a few days preaching at Selma, Ala., the first week of October. I have no time to attend picture shows and lodges. The church needs all my time."

From W. C. Philips, Cleveland, Tenn.: "I began a meeting at Liberty, in McMinn County, on August 8 and closed it on August 15. The church was revived and two were restored. I began at Georgetown on August 17 and closed on Argust 31. Good interest and good crowds, but no additions. This was the first preaching ever done there by a Christian minister. The prospects are fine for a good congregation to be established there in the near future, if the work is kept up. I began in Dalton, Ga., on the night of September 2 and ran over the second Lord's day. Nine were added by statement and thirteen by confession and baptism. Three came from the Baptists. After I left, the meeting was continued for about two more weeks, Brethren McCampbell and Wright doing the preaching."

From J. R. Stubblefield, Route 6, Morrison, Tenn., September 21: "The ten-days' meeting at Pleasant Knoll resulted in sixty-two baptisms and seven restorations, and the meeting at Morrison a short time before resulted in thirty-three baptisms and ten restorations. Morrison and Pleasant Knoll are about three miles apart, and Pleasant Knoll is about three miles from Viola, so the Morrison and Viola people helped in the Pleasant Knoll meeting. This is the greatest ingathering in the history of the church at these two places. R. E. L. Taylor did the preaching. Brother Taylor is a plain, humble, untiring worker. With a meager education, without going to college, he has devoted himself to the study of the Word, and knows nothing but the simple truth, for which the people are hungering. Brother Taylor was to have begun a meeting at Hillsboro last Lord's day, but is now at home sick. I understand that William Willis has begun the meeting. T. B. Thompson did a good work at Chestnut Grove, closing with six baptized and one restored"

From Will J. Cullum, Rockwood, Tenn., September 22; "On the fourth Lord's day in August I began a mission meeting at this place, closing, after continuing seventeen to go to Hallsville, Mo., to begin a meeting on the third Lord's day of this month. I returned to my home in Nashville and was ready to make this trip. While at the office of the Gospel Advocate, I met Hugh H. Miller, who kindly consented to go to Hallsville for me, that I might return to Rockwood and resume the meeting, which, after two nights' rest, we did. The crowds are large and in-terest good, with two more additions from the 'digressives,' who are about the strongest to oppose our work of any of the sects. One Leland Cooke (pastor) preached on last Lord's day, condemning debates, as he had refused to hear The Missionary Baptists have sent for one Mr. me at all. The Missionary Baptists have sent for one Mr. Bogart, of Arkansas, to represent them in a discussion of our differences with any of our brethren whom we may select. The brethren have left it to me to arrange things for them. I begin at Reid Avenue, in Nashville, my next neeting, on the second Lord's day in October."

FIELD REPORTS

Columbus, Ohio, September 19.—On leaving Naish Springs, W. Va., I spoke on Lord's day, September 11, morning and evening, for the breth-ren at Pursley, W. Va., where we have a splendid congregation of faithful Christlans. Leaving Williamstown on Friday morning, I came directly to this city. I spoke yesterday morning for the brethren at Reynoldsburg, and In the evening for the brethren in Columbus. I expect to continue in Columbus over next Lord's day at least. -A. A. Bunner.

Ashland City, Tenn., September 19.

The meeting at Greenbrier (Route 5) closed at the water last Saturday morning. Four were baptized, and the members were greatly strengthened and renewed in their determination to do more work for the Lord. I will preach for them monthly, beginning on the third Lord's day in November. I began a series of meetings at Sycamore on Saturday night. We had two fine services yesterday, with large crowds and good interest. One confession last night and one restored to the fellowship. My next meeting will be at Scottsville, Ky., to begin on the first Lord's day in October. I have time for one or two meetings in Noyember.-B. W. Davis.

Union, S. C., September 19.-Last night was the first since I have been in this State that I have preached in a church house; the other nights I have been in a tent. We have given each part of town an opportunity to hear the gospel, and have tried to hear the gospel, and have tried to make the best of the opportunity. The last meeting closed on Wednesday night with a fair crowd, but no more confessions. We would rejoice were it possible to finish the house free of debt, which can be done if the Lord so wills. Brethren everywhere should walke with fields as well have been designed. wake up to such fields as we have here, and there are a number of them in the United States. Brother Fuqua helps us here by sending tracts, but he him-self needs help. The Lord grant that we may all see the great importance in spreading the gospel in every right way.—G. F. Gibbs.

Wetumpka, Ala., September 19.-I Wetumpka, Ala, September 19.—I was in a meeting with the church at Providence (Fort Deposit, Ala.) eight days, beginning on July 24, and baptized five; and with the church at Industry (Georgiana, Ala.) eight days, beginning on August 6. I was called back to Industry on September 4, and was with them nine days more. This meeting resulted in twenty-seven bap-tisms. One was a man sixty-eight years old. Eight of the number were Baptists. There were also fourteen restorations. There had been a divi-sion in the congregation for several years. They were happily reunited in love, and I left them all rejoicing, preached on Lord's day-afternoon and night at Wild Fork (Chapman, Ala.). September 11. I am to return to Wild Fork to begin a meeting on the third Lord's day in November. I was with my old home congregation at New Zion (Christiana, Tenn.) three days, beginning on August 28, and have egreed to work with them at Link, Tenn., in a tent meeting, beginning on October 9.—L. L. Jones.

"ALF and EOB TAYLOR, with their eloquence, their fiddles, and their fox hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eformal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of fielding Rice, into one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two most wonderful political cummings of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifelong rivalry of the two fannons brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that affracted the stention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER." the pecriess and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Mississippi River to the Unstan Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters extending from a President of the United States to a fox hound;" the story touches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of crackling camp fires and the most of the chase.

Kilmichael, Miss., September 19.—I closed a meeting at Holly Ridge on Sunday night. Eight were added and the brethren promised to go to work. We have no preacher for that part of Mississippi. We need a man that knows the truth and how to live and teach it. Will not some congregation send a man to help us? He can get almost enough to support him. But we want a man who can come recommended and backed up by his home church. Brethren, the barvest is ready and the laborers are few. I also closed a meeting at the water, near Cleveland, on September 7, with twelve added to the one body.—H. D. Jeffcoat.

Thomas, N. M., September 16.—The meeting at Des Moines, N. M., was a good one. Though I was nearly blind while there, I was well cared for in the home of Dr. Ivie. Sister Clementine Ivie was my nurse, and I never shall forget her. Perhaps to Sister Clemmie more than any one else the promising congregation at Des Moines is due. Too, they are fortunate in having one of the "livest wires" as a young preacher that I have ever met-Brother C. A. Trevillion. He is agent for the Santa Fe Railroad there now, as he has been for several years. predict that interesting reports will be heard from him in the evangelistic field before many years. Those interested in a change of location, one especially adapted to "tuberculars," would do well to consider Des Moines. There is some of the best mountain scenery about there. The city blacksmith and poet, Brother Hicks, piloted me over Sierra Grande's heights. I am now at Thomas, holding forth in the Baptist meetinghouse, which I hope the brethren will arrange to buy before I leave. -T. H. Matheson.

Chicago, Ill., September 18.-I worshiped to-day with our mission congregation at 5491 Blackstone Avenue. met a number of brethren that I had met before at Kendall Street. It seems good to know that we have now two points where we have New Testament work and worship in this large and wicked city. These two points are working together as one congregation, although quite a number of miles apart. All disciples who may be in Chicago over Lord's day or may locate here will have a warm welcome and the privilege of New Testameni worship. If you have friends in Chicago who are members of the one body, write to them and get them in touch with one of these points. There have been four haptisms since I was here last winter. Two were added by letter day for worship. We think this is doing well, as the work at this mission point was begun on August 14. Brother R. S. Walker, who was in the Nash-ville Bible School in 1907 and 1908, now lives in this city, and he and Brother E. E. Beck are doing good work in building up this mission point. We hope to have more mission points opened up in the not far distant future,-Andrew Perry.

Oakland, Miss., September 15.—At the morning service on September 11 I closed an eight-days' meeting with the Maud congregation, near Bishop, in Colbert County, Ala., with four confessions and baptisms. The meeting-house in which the brethren of Maud worship is situated in a beautiful grove of poplar, pine, oak, and gum, which line the banks of a stream of sparkling spring water that flows out from under the surrounding hills-a splendid place to spend time between services studying nature's work and in enjoying the scenery while resting. Just prior to my Alabama visit I held an eight-days' meeting for the breth-ren at Sardis, Tenn. During this meeting three persons made the good con-fession and was baptized. The brethren of Sardis are earnest and zealous, but prejudice against our plea there is said to have been strong in the past, and the complaint has been that it was difficult for our preachers to get the people to hear. I have no complaint to make, for my audiences were all that one could reasonably desire. The people of Sardis treated me royally, and the brethren there have requested me to hold another meeting for them. This last was my second meeting at Sardis. From the third Sunday in October to the end of the month I will have time for a meeting somewhere, and would like to engage this time for a meeting at some point in Mississippi, my home State. I can be addressed at Cakland, Miss. I am now getting ready for my next meeting at Enld.—Lee Jackson.

Formosa, Ark., September 19.—1 am now at Formosa in my fourth meeting with these brethren. Since last report I have assisted the brethren at Center Ridge and at Star Schoolhouse, near Greenwood, in meetings. Eighteen additions at Center Ridge and seven at Star Schoolhouse. My next meeting will be at a destitute place-Okay, Ark .- R. H. Johnson, Englewood, Tenn., Route 1, September 20.—Brother Charles Holder is in a meeting at Etowah, Tenn. The meeting began on September 6 and will continue till next Sunday, the Lord willing. He is having good attendance. One confession to date. Brother Holder is a good preacher, and we are trusting that he will preach for us at Liberty Hill in the near future.-Mrs. G. H. Dve.

Nashville, Tenn., September 20.-I closed a good meeting with the Antioch congregation, in Jackson County, Tenn., on September 11. The meeting continued eight days, with two serv-lees each day. Three were haptized and two were restored to fellowship. I began a meeting the same night with the New Salem congregation and closed it on the following Sunday. Three were baptized. I am sure much good was accomplished during this meeting. I will begin a meeting at Forks of Creek, in Jackson County, next Sunday.—T. C. Fox.

Palatka, Fla., September 20,-We enjoyed a short visit from Brother A. T. Hamiter on September 1. He came to us by surprise, and it was a very pleasant one indeed. We like his preaching, because he does not fail to declare "the whole counsel of God." We are glad that he is making plans to move closer to us. Our meeting that was planned for the middle of August was postponed on account of the condition of health of Brother W. A. Cameron, who was to have done the preaching. We are now looking forpreaching. We are now looking forward to November 1, the time set by Brother Cameron for this meeting. This is a new field, and this meeting will be the first effort (in Palatka proper) to present the gospel in its purity and simplicity to this people. We ask the prayers of all interested in the Master's cause. - Paul G. Millen.

Newton, Ala., September 15.-I was in a meeting at Esto, Fla, embracing the second and third Lord's days in July, with Brother Hamiter. No additions. We went from there to Samson, Ala., and began on Thursday night before the fourth Lord's day. Brother Hamiter left me on the following Thursday for Florida. I continued the meeting over the first Lord's day in September. Six were baptized. We September. Six were baptized. had the best attendance we have ever had there. Brother Cottle, of Texas, and I then went to Jellico, in Houston County, and held a two-weeks' meeting. Eight were baptized there. I have received but little remuneration for my work here in this field. people are in bad shape financially. There are only a few scattered brethren here, and they do not seem con-cerned about those in darkness. I wish the brethren knew the great needs of this country. I will stay with the work if I can live. Any church or churches needing my services for 1922 can address me at Newton, Ala., Route 1. I want to keep busy in the Master's work .- A. S. Reynolds.

WHO HAD IT
In the year of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-Acute Rhoumatism. I suffered as only those who are thus affilicted know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, but such relief as I obtained was only temporary. Finally I found a treatment that cured me completely, and such a pitiful condition has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, even bedridden, some of them seventy to eighty years old, and the results were the same as in my own case.

"I had sharp pains like lightning flashes shooting through my joints."

I want every sufferer from any form of muscular and sub-acute (swelling at the joints) rheumatism to try the great value of my improved "Home Treatment" for its remarkable healing power. Don't send a cent. Simply mail your name and address, and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of such forms of rheumatism, you may send the price of it, One Bollar; but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it fant that fair? Livingston, Tenn. September 16.— Our meeting began at Baxter on September 4 and continued till September 15. Large crowds and good interest. Ten were added—eight baptized and two reclaimed. During this meeting was called to Bethlehem, six miles from Baxter, and baptized a very old lady. I go next to Big Branch, in Jackson County.—Willie Hunter.

McMinnville, Tenn., September 19.— I closed a seven-days' meeting at St. Marys on Saturday night, with twelve additions and four reclaimed. I have conducted seven protracted meetings in this part of the State since I arrived from Florida in June, and have other appointments yet to meet. The interest has been encouraging through-I realize as never before that "the harvest is plenteous and the la-borers are few." I am determined to devote my life to God and my fellow man .- E. D. Martin.

Nashville, Tenn., September 12.— We had a big day at Tennessee City yesterday. There were three confessions at the morning service, making five recently added to the small band at that point. The Lord willing, I am to be with them in a meeting, beginning next Lord's day night. I recently closed a meeting in Cherokee County. Ala., with twelve restorations and five baptisms; also a meeting in Cleburne. County, Ala., with three restorations. I am to be with the brethren at Greenbrier, Tenn., in a meeting, beginning the first Lord's day in October. The interest seems to be getting back to a prewar basis.-J. Porter Sanders.

Corinth, Miss., September 17 .- I began a meeting near Wheeler, Miss., on the fourth Lord's day in August and continued it until the following Friday night. There were no additions. This place is a Primitive Baptist stronghold. They refused us the use of their building, so we had to preach in the grove; and it rained almost every day that week. We have three brethren Dalton, Ga., September 19.—On reaching here Saturday to begin a meeting on Sunday, I found everything going well. Brother Philips, of Cleve-land, Tenn., closed a good meeting a week ago, with thirteen baptized and some reclaimed. Brother C. C. Mc-Campbell, of Rome, Ga., took up the meeting and kept it going until I reached here, and there were three more confessions during the week. So I am here now, and will be here this week and most of next. The interest is good. Since I was here last, the fourth Sunday in June, twenty-nine have been added to the congregation. My next meeting will be at Griffin, Ga., and I hear good news from the church there.-R. E. Wright.

Where the Fish Swarm.

There are rich fishing banks of huge extent around Iceland, but the greatest are around Newfoundland, and are so rich that fishing vessels congregate there from America and France, as well as Great Britain.

These banks are very interesting, for they are shallows which overhang the abysmal depths which fall quite close by to as much as four thousand fathoms, or more than four miles sheer depth.

There are fine banks all along the Greenland coast, and plenty of fish on them. But here trawling is impossible, for the icebergs have covered the bottom with enormous boulders .- Exchange.

The Way of Escape.

GOSPEL ADVOCATE.

BY G. H. O'NEAL.

Having read so many good articles from different ones who contribute to the Gospel Advocate, I desire to write a brief article on the above subject. The reports from different preachers in various sections of the country prove to our minds that people have a great zeal to escape the punishment that is to come. I am confident of one thing-that if the whole human race had an intrinsic love for Jehovah, they would be more alert as to their duty while they exist in this present world in order to escape the eternal destruction that awaits those "that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Jesus said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14: 6.) The Scriptures emphatically assert that, if after the escape from the pollutions of the world has been made through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. (2 Pet. 2: 20, 21.)

It is an evident fact that Christ has prepared a way of escape from temptation (1 Cor. 10: 13), sin (2 Tim. 4: 18), the defilement of the word (2 Pet. 2: 20), error (2 Pet. 2: 18), and eternal destruction (Matt. 23: 33).

Since Christ has done his part in the salvation of souls, there are yet many things on our part to be done before we can ever enjoy the freedom from the things I have mentioned. We can make a way of escape by having knowledge, by obeying the Lord, by using the means at hand, by watching, and by prayer. Now that these things come to us by obtaining a knowledge of God's word, no one should hesitate to search and rightly divide his blessed truths, that we may have access to all the blessings of this life and enjoy the comforts of that heavenly home being prepared for the elect of God and those that continue in well-doing.

I have been teaching school for the past five years and preaching with about all the power that was in me during the past three years, but have concluded to give my entire time to the ministry. I shall be pleased to have letters from some of the churches who have not employed a preacher to hold their protracted meetings next year, and who really desire to make some definite arrangements for the meetings. Address me at Kelso, Tenn.

OBITUARIES

Young.

On August 1, 1921, Brother W. P. Young departed to go hence. In his death the church of Christ at Horse Cave, Ky., lost one of its best members. He was faithful in attendance, and on Lord's day before his death he officiated at the Lord's table. He was one of my best friends, one who stood by me in my humble efforts at preaching the word of God. Brother Young was past sixty-two years of age. He is survived by his wife, one daughter, and many relatives and friends. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved in the loss of a devoted husband, a kind father, and a true Christian.

EMMETT G. CREACY.

Brummett.

One by one we are crossing over to the other side. On September 2, 1921, the gentle spirit of Mrs. Jennie Brummett winged its way to realms unknown. Mrs. Brummett, whose maiden name was Reeves, was born near Gadsden, Tenn., on April 8, 1864; was bap-tized into Christ by Brother E. A. Elam, in 1880; was married to W. A. Brummett, who survives her, on October 22, 1889. She had since made her home in and near Brownsville, Tenn. Funeral services were held by Brother L. L. Brigance. To her credit is the rearing of four stepchildren and four daughters of her own. All except one are members of the one body. was always self-sacrificing, devoting her life to her family and to the church. The sacred influence of such a life of service will be felt for many years to come. ANNIE R. CASEY.

Swor.

Brother D. D. Swor, of Hazel, Ky., departed this life in August, 1921. Brother Swor was a gospel preacher and was loyal to the old Book. He and I spent three years in the Freed-Hardeman College, during which time we roomed together. I think I have never seen any one who tried to do the will of God better than Brother Swor; and if I am not deceived in the life he lived, he will have an entrance into that home where no pain or sorrow ever comes. He leaves a young wife. father, mother, one brother, and one sister, together with many friends and brethren and sisters in Christ, mourn his death. He will be missed at home and abroad, especially in the pulpits where he declared the love of God to a ruined world. May the Lord help us to live in such a way that we can meet him again, never to say good-by, R. L. COLLEY.

Smith.

On June 26, 1921, the town of Fayetteville, Tenn., lost an enterprising and honorable citizen in the death of Brother Hugh D. Smith. He had the confidence of those with whom he associated. When he spoke, his words were the exact reflection of himself; there was no doubt of their sincerity. For years he had been an active member of the church of Christ at this place, and, as an elder, he supplied financial and spiritual strength without measure. His death leaves an aching void in many hearts. In his going away, we realize that the way in this world is labor and sorrow, but all the journey of the life to come is reward and joy. This is the sowing time, painful and barren; that is the reaping time, joyful and rich in reward. Let this fact be remembered daily and wait for God's harvest home. Brother Smith leaves a widow and son, to whem he has entailed the inestimable legacy of Christianity, an inheritance that is not defiled and that fadeth not away. An impressive prayer service was held at the home by Brethren Little and Gainer. The city, with closed doors and suspended business, did reverence to this noble Christian.

Jones.

The church at Lewisburg, Tenn., has lost a valiant soldier of the cross and heaven has gained a precious soul in the death of Brother James Henry Jones. He was born on January 26, 1864; was married in 1884; and obeyed the gospel at the age of eighteen under the preaching of Brother F. C. Sowell. For a number of years he was a member and an elder of the church at Lynchburg. He came to Lewisburg six or eight years ago, was selected as an elder here, and was such when he died. He died at his home in Lewisburg on May 11, 1921, after a linger-ing illness of four months. His life was a sample for one to follow. He had the full love of his family and the complete confidence of all his breth-ren. He knew for some time that he could not get well, and said he was just waiting for the time to come. hated to die and leave his family, but was ready to answer the summons. With an abiding faith and confident hope, he quietly passed away. He left a wife and four children and a host of friends to mourn their loss.

J. S. BATEV.

Hogan.

On the morning of July 13, 1921, the death angel visited the home of my brother-in-law, Eddie Hogan, and claimed his dear and devoted wife. Willie Mae Tankersley was baptized of the age of fourteen or fifteen years. at the age of fourteen or fifteen years, and was always a sweet and kind girl. She was marrried to Eddie Hogan on December 23, 1917, and was a true helpmate, devoted to home and home She was truly a mother to duties. four children who had been made orphans by the death of her father and mother in 1918, and was kind to all who came into her home. She had a lovable disposition and a smile for every one. Brother John R. Williams spoke words of comfort to the sorrowing ones at the Hornbeak cemetery. Willie Mae leaves her husband, six brothers, and one sister, besides a host of relatives and friends, to mourn her departure. But we should not weep as those that have no hope; for we can all go and live with her again in heaven, if we live a faithful and devoted Christian life such as she lived. May the Lord help us all to live faithfully unto the end.

ONIA MAE HOGAN,

What will our insufficiency matter when we are yoked to His all-sufficiency?—J. East Harrison.

Light.

BY S. WHITFIELD.

"And God said, Let there be light: and there was light," (Gen. 1: 3.)

The first thing that God created was light, and this fact should show us the importance of this subject. God spoke light into existence.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." (Ps. 119: 105.) "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple." (Verse 130.)

God's word is our spiritual light, and it is all the spiritual light we have. It is a perfect and complete light from earth to heaven. Just as the sun is a perfect light by day to this world, so the Bible is a perfect light for our spiritual needs; and just as it would be foolishness for a person to light a lamp to assist the sun in giving light on a clear day, so it is foolishness for men to think that they can assist the Bible in giving light to this dark world of sin. The doctrines, commandments, traditions, and speculations of men hinder the light of God's truth instead of helping it. All we have to do is to walk in the light of God's truth; and if we walk in the light as it shines before us, the way will always be clear and safe. We will always see a step ahead.

Where the Bible has gone, there is light; but where it has not gone, there is darkness. Civilization, advancement, and improvement always follow the light of God's word. Darkness, uncivilization, and superstition are found where the Bible has not gone. The word of God has had a wonderful and marvelous influence over the nations where it is read, studied, and obeyed the most; but what would it do for a nation where it was read. studied, and obeyed as it should be! Just to the extent that a people or nation study and obey the Bible, just to that extent they have spiritual light; and just to the extent that the word of God is neglected, darkness and sin are found. The Dark Ages were days when the Roman Catholic Church held the simplicity and light of God's truth from the minds of men.

"In him was life; and the life was the light of men." (John 1; 4.)

In Jesus Christ was life, and that life was the light of the world. Without that life the world would be in darkness and sin. Light comes through the life of Jesus, because he gave up his life that we might live. All men had sinned, and the law taught that the soul that sinned would die. The blood of animals could not blot out or atone for sin. Jesus came into this world of sin, suffered and died for the sins of the world that the world might be saved through his blood, by faith and obedience to his will. Jesus said that he came that we might have life, and that we might have it more abundantly; hence the light of men through the life of Jesus, given for man:

Jesus came into the world as the light of the world; and we, as Christians, are to declare or make known that light by preaching the gospel, and also by our lives. In our lives we should reflect the life of Jesus. Each child of God should be an epistle of Christ to the world.

"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." (James 1: 17.)

God is a God of light, and all light comes from him. He is the fountain or great source of all light. There is no darkness in God. Jesus, coming from the Father, came into this world as the light of the world. "This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all." (1 John 1: 5.)

"To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me." (Acts 26: 18.)

Just as the sinner receives the truth of God and allows it to have the effect on him that it should have, are his eyes opened, or, as the prodigal, he comes to himself, or out of darkness into light. Those that are living in darkness are living under the power of Satan, but those that are living and walking in the light are living under the power of God; and as we walk in the light of God's word we have the remission of our sins; and continuing to walk in the light of the truth to the end, we receive everlasting life.

"And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." (Rev. 21: 23.)

The heavenly Jerusalem, or the city of God, will be lighted by the glory of God and of the Lamb.

"WE SHALL BE LIKE HIM"

She was a little, bent woman, stooping low over her washtub; and she was always singing. Her life seemed barren of everything pleasant or desirable. She had no income except the poor wage she received for her daily grind of toil. Her husband was a hopeless invalid and a constant care. She never took a vacation. She was getting old. She had no one to care for her when she could no longer toil. And yet she was always singing! And such a song! It was "Count Your Blessings!"

People, passing by the humble home, would pause and listen to the lone singer, and then walk, thoughtfully and softly, away. And in some way the good cheer of the poor washerwoman spread as a beautiful contagion throughout the neighborhood. They were ashamed to murmur.

"But, auntie," said one who was rich in the things of this world, "what blessings have you to count? I see no pleasant thing in your life. Where are your blessings?"

"Well, you know, most of them are on the inside. Maybe I don't get much out of life; but I try to put all that I can into it, and this makes me happy. I am going into the presence of my Taskmaster, and I do not want to go with empty hands. These things that are on the outside are just rough places in the road, and soon they will be behind me. Every feature of my life which resembles the life of Jesus, I regard as a blessing. I am poor; so was he. I am humble; he was 'meek and lowly in heart.' I work; he said, 'I must work.' I am a washerwoman; he was a carpenter. I bear a cross; he was crucified on a cross. These are my blessings. I am trying to be like him here, because I hope to be like him over there."

"O," said the rich one, "how poor am I, and how blind!"

"But how rich you might be!" said the little washerwoman.

Can any one doubt that this obscure woman will be "perfectly at home" in heaven?—E. C. Baird.

CURRENT COMMENT

By A. B. L.

I suppose the average man keeps in his mind a sharp distinction between the respective purposes of a daily newspaper and a religious weekly. The office of the daily paper, as usually stated, is to give the news of the world just as it happens without any moral preachment, while the office of the religious weekly is to present those things that relate to the Christian life and the dissemination of the pospel. The editor of the Christian-Evangelist makes the following vivid comparison:

The press is supposed to be a mirror of the daily doings of the world. But it has become entirely too much a gazetteer of crime Some of the city dailies devote so much space to the orgies of the underworld that they emit stiffing gloom and depressing pessimism. That, too, in the face of the fact that the vast majority of people are doing good and The kingdom of God is growing in the earth, and with its march banners of beauty float in seas of light above the happy people. The bright side of life is published in the religious press. There we may read of the real progress of the world and of movements that matter. There we find the facts that feed optimism and make us believe in life and love it. Every one ought to read the religious press because of its good cheer. By its news and discussions we see that righteous men and women are still at work in the earth and that God is in his heaven-yes, and in his earth also.

The criticism that the daily press has become a "gazetteer of crime" is timely, and the proof of it is easily found by those who read the dailies and note how the crimes of the world are featured on the front page. There are only a few notable exceptions. But the managers of these dailies will likely place the blame at the public's door, "We give the people what they want" is the only explanation offered. It the public demands the full story of movie scandals, divorces, and prize fights, then the enterprising manager feeds it to them. The leading idea is to pander to the public taste.

On the other hand, the leading idea with the religious Journal should be to give the readers what they need. But is this being done? The editor of the Christian-Evangelist gives us an optimistic affirmative. He tells us that "the bright side of life is published in the religious press," and vevery one ought to read the religious press because of its good cheer." He loses sight of the fact that much is being taught by the religious press that is contrary to the will of God. He falls to see the sectarianisms, the unholy bickerings, the lack of love, the self-glorification, and the play of petty politics that are too often interwoven with the written expression of otherwise righteous sentiments. The "holierthan-thou" attitude of some writers is patent to everybody except themselves. These things cannot "make us believe in life and love it." We should not rest in the complacent belief that the daily papers are a menace and the religious Journals are all right. Improvement should follow in both. There is room for acknowledgment of error and for rising to higher ground. The editors and writers on religious journals are fallible like the rest of the folks. Any attempt to camouflage their mistakes will do more harm than good.

The question of establishing a Home for the aged has been discussed from time to time in our papers, but, so far as I know, no definite steps have been taken looking toward this end; certainly not in this part of the country. So long as there is argent need for such a Home the question will continue to bob up. Here, for example, is a letter from our good brother, T. H. Roberson, of Russellville, Ala., bearing upon the subject of superannuated preachers:

What shall we do with the preachers who have preached and baptized people until they are too old to serve in this work? This question should have the prayerful consideration of every professed Christian. There should be some definite and permanent arrangements made for "worn-out" preachers. Some preachers outlive all their people, and when too old to preach or earn a living otherwise they apply to civil government for a support and are given a place in the "poorhouse."

Recently a preacher, who will be ninety-nine years old if he lives until next November, came to Russellville to apply to the County Court of Revenue for a support. This man gave his rame as John Dale, and said he was baptized by Barton W. Stone in 1858, and that since then he has baptized more than eight thousand people. Think of it! A man ninety-nine years old, simply a Christian, who has spent his life in teaching men and women the plan of salvation, now in his last days appealing to civil authorities for a support! Thank the Lord, the Christians at Russellville would not permit this disciple to make this appeal, but arranged to care for him the rest of his lifetime. What arrangements shall we make for earing for the superannuated preachers? I would like to see an article on this subject in the Gospel Advocate.

It is, Indeed, a pity that all Christians cannot be as thoughtful as those at Russellville; for, in that event, there would be no need for the establishment of such a Home. But all are not thus thoughtful, and so the problem confronts us. There is really but one side to the question, and that is: Duty demands that our aged must not be neglected It is a shame and a disgrace and a reproach upon the church that permits them to be neglected. How can any church profess to have the mind of Christ and be guilty of such neglect? I would not limit the obligation to taking care of aged preachers. The aged of both sexes should be provided for. God respects the hoary head without respect of persons, and so should we. We cannot excuse ourselves by saying," Let their families attend to it," or by blaming the sufferer for the improvidence of earlier years. David said: "I have not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." Had he lived in our day, he would likely have seen it. It is a fact that the Jews have always been more thoughtful of their poor and aged than other races. Personally, I have never seen a Jew begging. The Christian covenant is the better covenant in this respect, if we do our duty and make it so. James tells us in no uncertain language where the trouble lies: "What doth it profit, my brethren, if a man say he hath faith, but have not works? can that faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked and in lack of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Go in peace, be ye warmed and filled; and yet ye give them not the things needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it have not works, is dead in itself." (James 2: 14-17.)

Martin Luther sized up his cotemporary, Erasmus, in one laconic sentence by saying, "Verba sine re"—or "Words without a single deed." Perhaps enough has been said and written already about the great need of a Home for the aged who have no means to take care of themselves. What we need to do now is to get busy and do something. Personally, I will subscribe and do all I can to get others interested. And this, Brother Roberson, is the best short article I know how to write upon this subject.

It is said that a certain man who had owed his neighbor a sum of money for some time finally became so disturbed over his lnability to pay that one night he went to his neighbor's house about two o'clock. After arousing him, he said: "I have been so worried over the debt that I can't sleep at night. I don't see how I can ever pay it." "Well," his creditor is said to have replied, "what did you come and tell me for? Now I cannot sleep, either."

There is a natural craving in the human soul for sympathy; yet, unless we are very careful, that sympathy is to be spent all for self. We should remember that our neighbors need sympathy, too.

Shall We Hold Our Schools to the Original Grounds? BY X.

I head my article with a grave question. It implies the need of effort. No great and good work, of itself, abides its proper bound; it must be held. Like a "fast express" freighted with a cargo of human lives sometimes "leaves the track" and plunges over the precipice a heap of ruins, many a great movement fraught with all kinds of possibilities for good has "left the track" only to join some train of evil which it was intended to counteract.

In my judgment, no greater movement for the betterment of humanity was begun in the nineteenth century than this Bible-School effort. That the evil and wicked condition of society necessitated a special legislation against the Bible was an alarming signal to every wide-awake Christian in the world. It pointed out an appalling need that could only be supplied by Christians. State schools are in the grasp of society and must take orders from it. They can, therefore, be no better than the society that gives the orders. The denominational schools are rightly under the thumb of denominationalism and can be no better in influence and make no better environment than denominationalism can make. Hence, there was no relief ahead, save for Christians to build a safe school. *It was theirs to do.

Some far-seeing Christians were brave enough to take up the rôle. They did their part well. While they made mistakes, none of us are worthy to criticize them, and we are too thankful for the results of their effort to find fault. We are just grateful. O, the magnitude of the work of those few! Who can measure it? God only knows its length and breadth and depth and height. He only knows, too, the sacrifice, the self-denial, and the heavy burdens those brave hearts gladly shouldered for this work and without which it never could have been. Why were they willing to do so noble a part? No doubt it was the pressing need of the day that brought out of them such heroic service. It was like rescuing children from a burning building; it had to be done, and there was no other way to do it. These few saw that the school environment of their day was fast becoming unsafe, not only to simple Christianity, but even to the morals of the children. At the same time they saw there was no way to control the present school and to fight out of it the evils that the society that gave it life indorsed and even embraced. Therefore, there was no remedy but a "new school."

This conviction gave birth to that new school. The cost was not counted; the need was pressing, and it had to be supplied. This new school was to hang at its front door, at its back door, over its windows, and at the stairway leading to its basement, an urgent invitation to Christianity. Christians, just as Christians, were to come in unhampered with this most precious thing ever born. It was to be so free that even in the very midst of a lesson in mathematics the teacher could stop everything and teach Christianity. It was the one thing to be at home in this new school in every room, on every desk, in every chair, and on every playground. In short, the environment was to be Christian.

Every game, every social function, every class organization, all literary society life, all school spirit, all rivalry, all tricks, and all hazing that could not be subjected to Christian principles were to be eliminated from the life and environment of this new school. Because one happened to be a "freshman" he was not to be discriminated against, or treated in any way contrary to the great principle: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do younto them." Or, if one chanced to be a "senior," he was not to be honored or exalted contrary to the principle: "Ye know that the rulers of the Gentiles lord it over them, and their great ones exercise authority over them. Not so shall it be among you: but whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister; and whosoever would be first among you shall be your servant." "In honor preferring one another" and "in lowliness of mind each counting the other better than himself."

The athletics of the new school was to be trimmed till it would fit these great principles, and until it would not mar or endanger the environment. No "suits" were to be worn in athletics by boys or girls that did not comply with the principle, "modest apparel," and the girls "outdoor sports were to be in harmony with the womanly life depicted in the Bible. All readings and plays used by the expression department were also to be put to the acid test. Any reading or play that referred to God, Christ, or hely things irreverently was to be clipped. Any familiarity of boys with girls called for in a play that would not be nice and unquestionable on the streets and in parlors was to be clipped. In the art department no picture as a model was to be used that was not a modest picture. The music department was to be tried out by the same test. This was the goal set for the new school; this was its field of occupancy. This is the meaning of "Christian School;" no other school is Christian.

"Shall we hold our schools to the original grounds." is the question I am asking. If so, there is a place in the world for them. They supply a great need. But II not, there is no reason for our separate existence; all our money, efforts, and burden-bearing for them is in vain. The world has enough of the other kind; and if it has not, it is abundantly able to build more. Let it do it.

Explanation and Apology.

BY J. D. TANT.

A letter comes from Bear Creek, Ala., complaining greatly of my write-up of their congregation and asking for an apology. I beg to state:

- 1. I did not mean to convey the idea that all of the members were committing adultery, drinking whisky, and not speaking to each other. This applied only to the guilty
- 2. I did not mean to convey the idea that none of them neet for worship or contributed of their means. This item applied only to those who were guilty; for it is true that from fifteen to twenty, so I heard, met each Lord's day for worship, while a great number would not meet.
- 3. I did not mean that they made no contribution, for I heard they had been contributing from fifty cents to three deliars each Lord's day; yet it is a fact that they had fallen so far below Paul's instruction in 1 Cor. 16: 2 that they had to go around and work up most of my support while I was there.
- 4. I do not believe those brethren will meet the approval of God at the last day by pleading poverty and keeping disorderly members in reliowship, for God tells them to give as they have been prospered and to withdraw from disorderly members. This they have not done.
- 5. While I became their enemy by telling them the truth while there, yet I trust my meeting will bring good results and that those members will see themselves as others see them, and pull out of the old channel and go to work. If what I said caused offense to any who are trying to do right and worship, I ask their forgiveness, and tell them plaint that my letter did not apply to any who were doing their duty, but only to those who I heard were guilty of the charges I made.

The Shadow of Christianity-Pentecost Feast.

BY E. J. BERBY.

Like the many sacrifices which were necessary to foreshadow the Savior's sacrificial work, one feast day could not present all the good things in store for the Lord's day. As soon as they had finished the ceremonies of the sheaf offering, they were given commandment concerning another teast which came on the first day of the week. "And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the Sabbath. from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering, seven Sabbaths shall be complete; even unto the morrow after the seventh Sabbath shall ye number fifty days. (Lev. 23 15, 16.) As is here stated, they were to begin with the first day of the week, "the morrow after the Sabbath," the day they offered the single sheaf, and number seven Sabbaths complete. Then "the morrow after the seventh Sabbath" would be the fiftieth day, and would always come on the first day of the week. I read an argument some where from an Adventist, trying to prove that Pentecos! came on the Sabbath. A man has considerable nerve to try to place a certain event on a certain day, when God plainly says that it will come the day after. The Adventists evidently consider this argument in some way damaging to their theory, or they would not be combating it. I submit that any man who can learn that the Sabbath is the seventh day of the week and then multiply 7×7=49, and then read "the morrow after the seventh Sabbath, "will know that Pentecost came on the first day of the week, "the morrow after the Sabbath." Hence, we see in the shadow a picture of the great and notable day of the Lord Indeed. this is the birthday of the church of Christ.

The day of Pentecost was the fiftieth day after the offering of the single sheaf. As there was to be so important a feature of Christianity that one of the three great Jewish teasts occurred on the first day of the week to foreshadow the importance of the day in the body of Christ, we are assured that God determined, planned, and established the day.

On this day was offered the new meat offering. offering which had never been offered since the dawn of ereation was to be offered on this day. "And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the Sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering; seven Sabbaths shall be complete; even unto the morrow after the seventh Sabbath shall ye number fifty days; and ye shall offer a new meat offering unto the Lord. Ye shall bring out of your habitations two wave loaves of two tenth deals: they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baken with leaven; they are the firstfruits unto the Lord. And ye shall offer with the bread seven lambs without blemish of the first year, and one young bullock, and two rams; they shall be for a burnt offering unto the Lord, with their meat offering, and their drink offerings, even an offering made by fire, of sweet savor unto the Lord. Then ye shall sacrifice one kid of the goats for a sin offering, and two lambs of the first year for a sacrifice of peace offerings. And the priest shall wave them with the bread of the first fruits for a wave offering before the Lord, with the two lambs: they shall be holy to the Lord for the priest. And ye shall proclaim on the selfsame day, that it may be a holy convocation unto you. to shall do no servile work therein; it shall be a statutforever in all your dwellings throughout your generations." (Lev. 23: 15-2L)

In this shadow it is evident that fifty days after the resurrection of Christ the meat offering, the bread offering combined with the seven lambs without blemish, was to be offered before the Lord. Now go to the resurrection of Christ to begin and count seven Sabbaths complete. During this time Jesus had shown himself alive by many infallible proofs, and had ascended up into the heaven. What creat thing could be in store for the fiftieth day after the resurrection? All his disciples were anxiously waiting. "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from beaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Chost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spiril gave them utterance." (Acts 2: 14.)

The foreknowledge of God arranged the day for the fitteeth-day feast for the Jews some fifteen hundred years before the eventful day when a new meat offering was offered. Jesus had been preached by the prophets, and Jesus and his disciples had preached that he would ascend to God, and would send them back the Holy Spirit as a Comforter, an evidence that he was accepted of his Father in heaven; but this is the fulfillment of the promise, and the first time that the fact that he hath done this could be preached.

R. G. Ingersoll's "Sillygisms."

BY PLAVIL HALL.

In a pamphlet titled "Orthodoxy," by R. G. Ingersoll, the author has some silly things to say, which I trust the editor and reader will allow me to call "sillygisms."

On page 3 he says: "Recollect that everything except the demonstrated truth is liable to die," And yet in the same lecture he accepts as truth the oft-exploded and ridiculous theory of Darwinism, that man awes his origin to "a group of marine animals resembling the (minute tadpole-like) larve of existing ascidlans." (Universal Dictionary of the English Language), for he says (page 15): "His [Darwin's] dectrine of evolution, his dectrine of the survival of the fittest, his dectrine of the origin of species, has removed the last vestige of orthodox Christianity."

One is reminded that it seems that Ingersoll had shed the tadpole's tale, but that from his wise looks and croaking noise his evolution stopped with the frog. Has that monstrous theory of the origin of man been demonstrated? If so, when, where, and how? He could believe in an undemonstrated theory that degrades man and makes the ape and the most insignificant animal below it his ancestors, but could not believe the truths of Christianity, verified by the blood of the witnesses, and which exalt man as a being made in the image of the omnipotent One, the infinite and benevolent Creator.

There would be as much sense in demanding a demonstration of the historic fact of Napoleon and his empire as there is in demanding a demonstration of the historic fact of Christ and his religion.

On page 4 he says, "How do they know about the infinite Being? . . . What good is it to believe something that you don't understand?"

Did Ingersell understand nature in all things? No. Did he say there was no good in nature? No, but he honors "Nature" by capitalizing her name and calling her "the mother of us all." Could he have depled the words of Solomon, that one "knoweth not how the bones do grow in the womb of her that is with child?" Never, but he talked feelingly about loying his wife and child.

On page 6 he says: "I don't believe that anybody ever did love God, because nobody ever knew anything about him."

God revealed himself to men, and his children do know something about him. He did not let his creatures grope in cheerless darkness to the tomb for six thousand years, knowing nothing of him, of their origin, or of their destiny. To say that nobody loves God is one of the most reckless assertions that ever fell from the lips of a soul wrecker and an artful perverter.

Napoleon uttered rock-ribbed facts and truths when he sald in his exile at St, Helena: "Jesus Christ alone founded his empire upon love, and at this hour millions of men would die for him. Christ speaks, and at once generations become his by stricter, closer ties than those of blood, by the most sacred, the most dissoluble of all unions. He lights up the flame of love, which consumes self-love and which prevails over every other love. The founders of other religions never conceived of this mystical love, which is the essence of Christianity, and is beautifully called 'charity.' In every attempt to effect this thing—namely, to make himself beloved—man deeply feels his own impotence. So that Christ's greatest miracle undoubtedly is the reign of charity.

"I have so inspired multitudes that they would die for me. . . . But, after all, my presence was necessary, the lightning of my eye, my voice, a word from me, then the sacred fire was kindled in their hearts. I do indeed possess the secret of this magical power which lifts the soul, but I could never impart it to any one. None of my generals ever learned it from me. Nor have I the means of perpetuating my name and love for me in the hearts of men, and to effect these things without physical means. . . Behold the destiny, near at hand, of him who has been called the great Napoleon! What an abyss between my deep misery and the eternal reign of Christ, which is proclaimed, loved, adored, and which is extending over all the earth!"

Providence.

BY A. ELLMORE.

God permits two characters to live to old age—the bad man and the good man. In case of the former, he gives him many gracious opportunities, and he throws many hindrances in his way and gives him many timely warnings. After David's great sins, God turned his pathway and showed him the way of righteousness, and finally David became penitent, and by his life of humility and penitence he has caused the flowing of more penitential tears than any other man in the world.

As to good men who have lived long and blessed the earth, I would mention Moses, Abraham. Job, Simeon, Zaehariah, and the apostles, John and Paul. For the benefit of the good man and his posterity, God often closes one door and opens another which leads to greater usefulness. Many aged, good men have rejoiced in the providence of God which turned them into fields more fruitful and strengthened their influence for good. This is often shown in the lives of the apostles, especially in the life of Paul.

God once needed a good man to go and preach to the people of a great city, who were very wicked, whereby he might save the lives of thousands; but this preacher, like many of our time, was not disposed to go. He did not like the message he was required to proclaim, and he made effort to evade the call by fleeling to another city; but on his way, while on the great deep, God brought upon them a terrific storm, and the seamen rowed and prayed for help. They did not know the cause of their threatened destruction; but, after investigation, they learned it was laid upon this unfaithful preacher, and they said to the preacher: "What shall we do unto thee?" He said: "Take me up and cast me into the sea; so shall the sea be calm unto you." So they took up the preacher and cast him into the sea.

But the Lord was not yet done with this preacher, and he prepared a great fish, which swallowed up the preacher; and after lying in that unconfortable inclosure for three days and three nights, weeping and praying, the Lord heard him, and he commanded the fish to deliver up the preacher, and the fish threw him upon dry land, and, behold, the preacher was converted! And the Lord opened the door and gave him the same message a second time. Talk of the second chance; here is one who had one offered, and he accepted it: and he was now ready to go. He did not stop to argue the case; he did not ask if some other way would not do as well; he did not even ask a salary and specify the amount; but he went and delivered the message, and there followed a great revival, and the city was saved from destruction.

In the course of time God's people were found in Egypt. where they remained four hundred and thirty years; and toward the close of their sojourn their treatment under Pharaoh, the wicked king, became so severe that they cried for mercy, and God determined to relieve them of their burdens. He did not choose to destroy their enemies by sword, nor by famine, nor by pestifence, but by a more merciful plan-that of preaching, which should be attended with miracles. So he called Moses and Aaron, and through these messengers delivered to Pharaoh God's message; but he was not disposed to let the people go. So God manifested his power through his messengers, and they caused ten severe plagues to fall upon the Egyptians, and after each plague Moses and Aaron renewed their request; but God hardened Pharaoh's heart, that he would not let God's people go. I suppose the cause of this was to show to the two nations the great power of God, and that Moses and Aaron were his true servants.

The route which God chose for his people was through the Red Sea, and he opened a channel, and caused a cloud to fall upon the opening, and Moses commanded his people to go forward; and after being baptized in the cloud and in the sea, they saug the song of deliverance. And were God's people delivered before they were baptized? No, they were yet in bondage and under the power of their enemy.

And then the people started toward the land of Canaan, and for forty years God's presence and blessing accompanied them. And does some one ask what became of their adversary? Well, being a type of the devil, he still pursued God's people, following them into the sea, and God closed the waters upon them and they were drowned. So much for disobedience.

God often extends his providence to men in earthly blassings. Hezekiah fell sick and was nigh unto death, and be turned his face to the wall and wept sore and prayed, and God extended his life lifteen years. (See 2 Kings 20.) He sayed Daniel in the den of lions. He preserved the three Hebrews in the flery furnace. The steps of the good man are ordered of the Lord.

Now, prove to me that my upright living and my prayers have nothing to do in calling down God's blessings upon my life, and I am no more a praying man. Why should I pray?

Appreciations.

"There are some splendid articles in the 'Old Paths' Number." (H. W. Jones, Hardin, Ky.)

"I desire to express our gratitude for the great spiritual teast given us in the last issue of the Gospel Advocate, dealing with the great theme of 'the old paths,' which is so much needing discussing at the present time. Many of us preachers are too busy at various times to always express our feelings in the great fight you are making for truth and righteousness, yet I am sure I am voicing the feelings of other brethren when I say that you are doing a great and mighty work. How our hearts sicken at the wave of digressionism, worldlyism, crime, and sectarianism, and how deeply we feel the great need of bold and courageous men in contending for the great and eternal principles revealed in the Living Oracles! Therefore, your last issue as well as others, gave us a rich feast and is calculated to stir us into a greater zeal as we contend for the great truths of the Bible. May the Lord continue to bless you in the great work you are now doing." (D. P. Craig, Walnut, Miss.)

LOS ANGELES NOTES

By S. H. HALL, 2669 North Sichel Street,

House of worship, corner Altura and North Sichel Streets. Take North Broadway car to Sichel, then one block to left.

Which Is It?

There are two things that we should keep our hearts fixed on continually-viz., the cause of Christ and self. Now, some may question our right to keep our minds on self at all, but this I deny. It is just as necessary to give self some consideration as it is the cause of our Lord; for self has a place, and God wants us to keep him in it, just as certainly as the cause of Christ has a place, and we dare not push the cause of Christ out and put ourselves in it. So let me ask this question: In everything we do, which should be firstthe cause of our Lord or self? Is it not true that we must put ourselves in the background and forget self for the cause, and not forget the cause for self? Most certainly this is true, and it requires some thought on our part, devoted both to self and the cause of Christ, to determine which we are making lirst. Let us give ourselves, therefore, enough thought to see to it that our own selfish interest and desires are not forcing us to push the greatest cause in the world aside for selfish interest.

Paul says, in 1 Cor. 9; 12: "Nevertheless we the and Barnabas] . . . suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ." They gave self enough thought not to allow their own selfish interest to cause them to busy themselves in trying to obtain their every right while the cause went neglected and suffered. How I wish I could make every preacher and elder in the church to-day ask himself the question: What have I suffered for the cause of Christ? Is it not true that the cause is made to bleed at every pore too often by some preacher or elder's tearing things asunder trying to defend self? I mean by this that in your defense the cause is lost sight of and your whole soul is filled with love, not for the cause, but for yourself. And is it not only true that we sometimes allow ourselves to forget the welfare of the cause in trying to defend our man-viz., some sider or preacher that we have set ourselves to defend? And defend him we will, if the cause is torn asunder! What about these things? Which is taking the lead in our lives? Does the cause of our Lord have the first place in our hearts and lives? My brother, for Christ's sake, settle this question now! 0 0 0

Motive.

I am sure that no sane being ever says a word or engages in any act without being prompted by some motive to do so. The quickest and easiest and absolutely certain way to find out which we are making first, the cause of Christ or self, is to examine the motive for our every act; for motive ever has an object in view. Do not tell me that you are incapable of knowing your motives and their objects! "For what toan knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him?" (1 Cor. 2: 11.) And are we not commanded to know ourselves? (See 2 Cor. 13: 5.) But there is such a thing as being self-deceived; hence the necessity of making the examination rigid and thorough. (See Gal. 6: 3.)

If our motives are ever what they should be, I have my serious doubts about our defending ourselves or any one else continuously. By this I mean that we will never be found lining up with any one man and forever defending him, not even ourselves; for certain it is that we all make mistakes, and we are forced, at times, to freely confess that we were wrong in some of our positions. When, therefore, I see some forever and eternally defending any man, at all times and on every question that comes up, I have my fears about their motives being what they should be. They have set their hearts on a person and taken their hearts from the Lord Jesus Christ. And it seems that some men love to be followed. Did you ever hear of a Russellite finding a flaw in Russell, or an Adventist finding any mistakes in Mrs. White, or a Christian Selentist finding fault with Mrs. Eddy? Does not reason teach you that such are following men and not Christ? Well, may it not be so among us? Little troubles come up in congregations and among the editors of our papers, and we pick our man and defend him or die, and the cause of Christ is lost sight of by its pretended friends. Have you ever studied what Christ says about the peacemaker? (See Matt. 5: 9.) O, you say you have made peace in a number of congregations where trouble existed? Very good. But have you settled the trouble between yourself and that brother over there? Is it not true that we are good fellows to settle troubles between our brethren, but that when trouble arises between us and some one else it is almost impossible for it ever to be settled? The greatest peacemakers we have and the only true peacemakers are those who can settle troubles between themselves and others. Not that they can always do this; but, so far as they are concerned, peace will be established at any cost to themselves. "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you. live peaceably with all men." (Rom. 12: 18.)

Preachers and elders should be the strongest peacemakers. Who will deny it? But is it not true that the most difficult troubles to settle to-day are those troubles that arise between elders and preachers? Why is this? If you will let me answer as I honestly believe the truth demands an auswer, I would say that it is because too many of our preachers and elders are just hypocrites and not preachers and elders in the true sense. It is unthinkable for two men who have in them the Spirit of Christ not settling their differences. Hence, when I see such, I just know that some one is wrong at heart and not merely in judgment. Misunderstandings can arise; in fact, it is almost impossible for them not to arise. But real brethren settle their differences; but hypocrites, never! Am I too strong? Most certainly there is such a thing as being on the right side of a difference; hence, in defending the cause of Christ, you defend yourself. But this is done unconsciously by the true Christian. That is, the benefits you derive from the defense is not thought of in your defense. It is the eause of our Lord and Savior, first, last, and all the time, you are thinking of May the "God of peace" abide with us.

A Man's Enemies.

BY FRED W. CHUNN.

Our Lord said: "A man's foes shall be they of his own household." (Matt. 10: 36.) A knowledge of this fact, viewed from different angles, should greatly aid us to deal scripturally with our enemies.

We cannot live long in this world of varied experiences without making enemies. If we do wrong, we are sure to make them. On the other hand, if we do right, living up in every respect to God's great standard, they will rise up against us, and employ subterfuges and diabolical schemes to overthrow us. God foresaw these conditions and made provision for them. In no wise are we left untaught concerning the attitude that we should take toward those who would harm us. (See Matt. 5: 44, 45; Rom. 12: 17-21.)

But if our enemies will keep their distance, we should have no fear. If their minds do devise against us, their arms cannot reach us. "They of his [our] own household" are the ones that have opportunity to do us the greatest injury. If we are associated or entangled in any way with spiritual enemies, we should keep our eyes open and our minds clear, lest all too soon we feel, to our sorrow and disappointment, their unholy influence. This principle applies to a nation, a church, a home, or even to an individual.

1. A Nation's Enemics. History is an attesting witness that many nations have suffered more from internal enmity than from foreign fees. When Rome had reached her greatest height and so surely and certainly began to decline, the trouble lay not in the nations that had fallen before her hand, nor in those yet unconquered, but in Rome herself. She was decaying from within.

When the people of our own United States worked and fought in harmony, they were strong. Our greatest enemy during the Revolution was of our "own household," being none other than Benedict Arnold, the traitor. But, happily for us, his tribe was limited. We have been successful in conquering all who invaded our rights, but we came near consuming ourselves when civil strife broke out among us and we became enemies of each other. The Civil War shook the very foundations of our great nation, and even to-day reconstruction has not completely finished its work.

Who was the fateful enemy when Israel would have conquered Ai, but failed so miserably? (Josh. 7: 5.) Why this shameful defeat of God's people? Was it because of the strength of Ai? Certainly not, but rather because of Israel's weakness. The enemy was lurking within the tents of Israel, and must be gotten rid of before Israel could regain her strength. Achan, the enemy, had stolen from the speils of Jericho "a goodly Babylonish mantle, and two hundred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold of fifty shekels weight," notwithstanding a positive injunction of God to the contrary.

2. The Enemies of a Church. If any difference, a congregation of Christians has more to fear from its enemies within than from those without. The skeptic and the infidel without hinder its progress no more than the hypocrite within. And denominationalism with all of its battering rams is no greater stumblingblock in its way than worldliness on the part of its own members. This was true with many of the early churches, and it is equally true to-day. The condition of "the church of God which is at Corinth," when disclosed to the apostle Paul, was simply appalling She was found torn and bleeding and "writhing in pain" because of the work of very harmful enemies who, strange to say, were a part of Corinth's "own household." In the first place, they had not learned how to dwell together in unity. There were serious divisions among them. (1 Cor. 1: 11, 12; 3: 1-4.) This unhappy condition existed among the people of God over such an insignificant question as preference for preachers. Each of the four preachers in question-Paul, Apollos, Cephas, and Christ-was as true as steel, and beyond doubt looked with disfavor upon such division, which Paul proceeded to stamp as carnal. Shame on those divided Christians at Corinth! But, brethren, are we so free from this preference for preachers to-day? In many congregations of the present day you will find different elements preferring different preachers even to the point of division, and to the extent that a faithful, loyal preacher of Christ's gospel may be received with coolness and treated with discourtesy because he cannot preach as well as some other preacher This is very wrong, and should be discouraged by all. All preachers who are true to God's word and are using the best talent that God gave them need every possible encouragement.

And still there were others at Corinth who indulged in sins more unclean and more destructive of Christian character than division. "It is actually reported that there is fornication among you, and such fornication as is not even among the Gentiles." (1 Cor. 5: 1.) The church of God at Corinth had members in it who corrupted themselves with the degrading sin of fornication. It is almost impossible to believe, yet sadly true. These members weakened the power of this church to do good, just as such members will weaken any church in which they pretend to worship.

But all has not yet been told. In addition to the abovementioned sins of which the members (household enemies) of the church at Corinth were guilty, we find others of almost equal magnitude. Brethren went to law with each other and defrauded each other, and that before unbelievers (1 Cor. 6: 6-8); and some were making a gluttonous feast of the Lord's Supper (1 Cor. 11: 20-30), and, as a result, were weak, sickly, or asleep. The sins of idolatry and covetousness had also crept in. So it is plain to be seen that the spiritual status of Corinth was lamentably low.

A church cumbered with such Christians as these cannot presper and extend its influence as it should. These household enemies forever handleap its development. They are too close by.

3. The Enemies of a Home. "A house divided against itself cannot stand," says Christ. It is true, therefore, that the worst enemies of a home are too often its own members. It was Cain, the murderer, who disturbed the domestic tranquillity of the first home. Jacob was weighted down with grief by the envy and jealousy of his own boys. Elli came to a premature grave because of the terrible sins of Hophni and Phinehas, his two sons. David's home was shrouded in sorrow when the rebellion of Absalom ended in Absalom's death. A disloyal husband, a virtueless wife, or wayward boys and girls may bring a home down to wreck and ruin from which it can never again rise; but if father, mother, son, and daughter can stand together in righteousness and peace, the home should be supremely happy and safe against any approach of enemies from without.

4. An Individual's Enemics. If we as individual children of God would buffet our bodies and control our passions, lusts, and appetites, we would be much stronger, and could with less difficulty resist temptations from without. If we would keep ourselves pure and clean, cutting off some offending right hands or plucking out some offending eyes, then we would be in a fair way to development and should not fear so much from those round about us.

Word From Honolulu.

BY MAX LANGPAAP.

Our work here for the Master moves along nicely. The weather is rather hot and trying now, this (September) being considered one of the warmest months of the year In-Honolulu. But for all this, I have seen it much hotter in Santa Rosa than we have so far experienced here. There is a difference in the heat, though. It feels oppressive to us, because we have not been here long enough to get acclimated. The nights are pleasantly cool. Right now we are having mocnlight nights, and they are really enchanting; especially from where we live the view is magnificent. Brother Bowman is off to the "big island" on a vacation. Our audience on Lord's day (September 11) was fine, and the attention and interest were excellent. School opens here to-day (September 12). We expect our class of young people in the Mollili Schoolhouse to materially increase, One of our boys returned to the "big island." We feel that we have done him some good in our teaching. I found Brother Herbert Buchanan in Fort Shafter. If any one reading this has any one over here in the army or navy. let me know. I will do my best. I am studying Japanese at home, and, Ged willing, expect to begin the study of Chinese and Hawaiian in the University of Hawaii in a few days. I want to be very busy in the service of the Master, and I feel that the future has that in store for me. God grant M. Pray for the work and help all you can. address is Box 1174, care of J. H. Bowman, Honolula, Hawaii.

By all means use some time to be alone; Salute thyself; see what thy soul doth wear; Dare to look in thy chest, for 'tis thine own, And tumble up and down what thou find'st there.

Who Are the "Loyal" Brethren?

BY C. A. GARDNER.

The expression, "loyal to the faith," has been worn threadbare by some of our people. I have often wondered if those who are so addicted to using this expression sense its meaning. Those who use it intend to say, as a rule, that the parties so designated are opposed to human societies' usurping the function of the church and to instrumental music in the worship. This is well enough, so far as it goes; but usually those who are so conspicuously against these are just as conspleuous in their failure to be positively and aggressively for the truth. To oppose sinful acts without sponsoring with equal emphasis and zeal all that is true is like the man who burned his barn in order to kill the rats-matters were made worse. Loyalty demands that the Christian think, act, and talk positively, as well as negatively.

In the last command of the Savier, known as the "great commission," as recorded by Matthew, the positive looms large, while the negative is conspicuously absent. Let us look at the divisions of that part of the great commission in Matt. 28: 19, 20: (1) Go and make disciples; (2) "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded;" (3) "I am with you always."

To make a disciple is not merely to baptize for the remission of sins. A disciple is one that learns. Every Christian is a learner. Many church members make me think of the boy who thought that matriculation was about all there is to one's college career. Possibly many preachers and elders spend most of their time on the first division of the great commission and leave the young member as a were matriculant.

But there is another step, and just here is where the church is suffering most to-day. "Teaching them to observe all things." The young Christian must be constantly taught until all of the Lord's commands are mastered. This is the mightlest responsibility resting on the preacher, the elder, and the Christian teacher. "The things that thou hast learned of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." No doubt Timothy had heard much more than the "first principles," for he had heard that which, when transmitted to others, would qualify them to teach. Any one who reads the New Testament can easily learn what the "all things" include. And it is the observance of the things" which entitles one to the appellation "loyal." To thus label one who falls short of this is a sham, is a misnomer. The loyalty marks are studying and teaching the Scriptures, giving of one's means to the furtherance of the kingdom, praying, observing the Lord's Supper, and singing spiritual songs. But it is more. It is doing all of this in the right way, the most effective and efficient way

And right here is where the church is lamest. We fail to apply the principles of business and common sense to the execution of the Lord's commands. Please understand me. Of course we must not step beyond the laws of God. But are we not falling far short of our possibilities and opportunities within the range of God's appointed way? Occasionally we hear of two or more congregations cooperating for advancing the kingdom, but usually each congregation prides itself in its isolation and detached activities. We could and would do ten times more if there was cooperation among the local churches. Three congregations can place a strong preacher in a neglected field, when one of the three would not think of doing this alone. In matters of sending missionaries abroad, we could have a dozen or more where we have only one, if the "loyal" brethren could be brought to see the value of system and order in all of the Lord's work. Let the preachers run the risk of having their support curtailed, and teach the congregations this pressing need. [The preacher who does his duty, teaching the whole truth, will see his support increased,—C. R. N.]

The average congregation which claims to be "loyal" is more retrogressive than some of the congregations they onpose are digressive and progressive. In the sight of the Lord which is the greater sin, to be retrogressive or to be progressive? It is my conviction that the only way we shall lead others from Jericho to Jerusalem is for those of us who are so "loyal" to be certain that we have Jerusalem located, and to make the activities so interesting and helpful and the opportunities so rich that all those who are in actual and sincere search for the ways of the Lord will find them. There are some congregations that are a hindrance to the Master's work. Everything comes before the Lord with them. They have no constructive program, no social spirit, no willingness to risk as much in financing the work of the Lord as in buying automobiles, farms, homes, To build a church house on a credit would be awful, but they must have money at any cost to provide luxuries and homes. With them, the Lord's work comes last,

Let the preachers and teachers was bold in proclaiming against such detestable ways of transacting the Lord's business, and point out the ways which will bring the best results. The masses are willing to be taught if it is done in the right way. An enlightened brotherhood is essential to an intelligent dissemination of the word of God and to the progress of the kingdom. The preachers and teachers are pledged to help Illuminate the Christian's pathway.

Little Things.

BY T. W. PHILLIPS.

"I do not know, neither do you, what the purpose in the heart was when one was baptized." I believe I have, perhaps, baptized as many as the average preacher during the years of my ministry. I have baptized several thousand; and among this great multitude, I know that I did not know "what the purpose in the heart was" of any one of the number. Yet I do believe that I knew what the purpose in the heart should have been-that it should have been to obey God. But I do not know how any person can purpose, in his heart, obcdience to God, except as faith directs! And since "faith cometh by hearing . . . the word of God." it follows that, since the word of God nowhere says for a person to be baptized because he is already saved, but does say, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," promising that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," I am not prepared to offer encouragement to a person that his or her baptism is accepted by the Lord, when such a one was baptized believing at the time that he was already saved. It seems to me that the purpose in the heart of all such was not what it should have been, according to the word of God, but a purpose more like King Saul's when he was sent to Amalek to slay or annihilate everything and everybody. Neither do 1 un derstand how an immersion of the body of such a person would be valid any more than sprinkling water on the head, when the true purpose of the heart was not fitting to the word. It does seem to me that the word of God must form the purpose of a man's heart or the purpose would be vain. And since the word of God does not command Christians to be baptized, it seems to me that if a person is made to believe that he is a Christian before baptism, the purpose of the heart could not be to obey God, as commanded, any more than it would have been if the same heart preparation had led to sprinkling for baptism. That some have obeyed and do obey the Lord at the hands of denominational preachers by being baptized by them, I have no doubt; but it is where the subject believes what the Lord says in spite of what the preachers says. I am, also, sure that men and women are the servants of him whom they obey. (Rom, 6: 16.) I am confident that when men and women obey from the heart the form of a doctrine which they believed at the time of their obedience, they become servants of him who is the author of the doctrine. If the doctrine is God's, then they are his servants; if the doctrine is man's, then they are his servants. Again I say, "I do not know, neither do you, what the purpose in the heart was when one was baptized," but I do know the purpose or reason the Lord has named-remission of sins, pardon, forgiveness. Neither apology nor excuse will be accepted in that great and final day, and we had better be safe now and just preach and practice it as the Lord has revealed it.

"Preach the Word."

BY OSCAR SMITH.

When the apostle Paul stood on the edge of the grave, he gave to Timothy one of the most solemn charges that was ever penned by inspiration, a part of which reads as follows: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine." (2 Tim. 4: 1, 2.) Then, following this charge, a sad picture is drawn of what men will be in their ingratitude, treachery, and reckless love of pleasure. But Timothy is instructed to be brave and faithful. Indeed, the evangelist who is not brave cannot expect to accomplish much in the vineyard of Christ. Timothy was not only to be brave, but he was to make his life a contrast to that of the deceivers.

Why preach "the word?" The word of God, when preached, makes believers. "And it came to pass in Iconium, that they [Paul and Barnabas] went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed." (Acts 14: 1.) Paul and Barnabas were both upright, godly men. It might have been said of them that they by their good works influenced many to become Christians; but the point here emphasized is that they "so spake" that "a great multitude" believed. Peter, in referring to the conversion of the Gentiles, says: "Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while age God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe." (Acts 15: 7.)

The "word" is the gospel. "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise." (Eph. 1: 13.) Then, when Paul charged Timothy to "preach the word," it was equivalent to a command to preach the gospel. When Paul wrote his letter to the church at Rome, that city was the very citadel of heathen power and pride. If there was a place on earth where men would be ashamed of a crucified Savior, it was in Rome during the reign of the ungodly Nero. Yet, in the very shadow of the capitol of that great empire a church had been established, Paul says: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." (Rom. 1: 16.)

The faithful evangelist goes forth armed with the "sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God," realizing that, from the time this sword was unsheathed on the day of Pentecost, it swept on its dazzling way from glory to glory, from triumph to triumph, until it was said: "Have they not heard? Yes verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the end of the world." (Rom. 10: 18.) The preacher of to-day may spend and be spent for the cause of Christ; but if he runs and works and fights until the end, he will receive a crown of dazzling beauty and of fadeless glory.

Personal Notes.

From O. E. Phillips, Hobart, Okla.; "I am having a good meeting at this place. Five confessions to date. Will close Sunday."

- C. D. Record, of Arlington, Texas, has just closed a week's meeting at Pride, Texas, with five added and five restored. Brother Eulys McKenzie, of Chillicothe, Texas, conducted the singing.
- J. W. Dunn closed an interesting meeting at Taylors. Okla., on Thursday, September 22, and began in Hallsville on the following Sunday. He is to be at Marshall, Texas, on October 6, and at Memphis, Tenn., on the fourth Sunday is October.
- J. H. Whisnant held a mission meeting at Broken Arrow, Okla., at the call of Sister H. A. Blank, and succeeded in getting a sufficient membership together, including those who were added during the meeting—ten baptized and three restored—to have worship.

From J. D. Matthews, Maysville, Okla., September 28: "I closed my meeting of eleven days' duration at North Walver, nine miles east of Paul's Valley, on September 20, with eight additions to the congregation—seven baptized and one restored. I filled my regular appointment at Alex on the fourth Sunday. I will begin a meeting to-night at the Byford Schoolhouse, near Stratford, the Lord willing."

From T. S. Bain, Muskogee, Okla., September 28: "Work here with the East Okmulgee Avenue congregation is progressing in a satisfactory manner. One young lady made the good confession Sunday morning. Brother A. M. Foster has been employed by this congregation for full time. His address is 338 East Okmulgee Avenue. We have preaching twice each Lord's day. Brother Fester is taking hold of the work with energy, and we expect great results."

Horace W. Busby writes from Mineral Wells, Texas, Sep. mber 26: "The meeting at Plainview, Texas, was a great tember 26: Large crowds throughout. Brother J. W. Acuff success. led the singing, which was an attraction. Forty-two were added to the congregation as a result. All were grown people, with the exception of two. I am now in Mineral Wells in the midst of a great meeting. The brethren have made great preparations for the meeting, having arranged to seat twelve or fifteen hundred people. Large crowds are attending, and about twenty have been added to date. The coning, and about twenty have been added to date. gregation has secured Brother Tom Walker to labor with them another year. They have a nice house on a prominent street. Some of the best people I have ever met make up the church in Mineral Wells. I am to begin at the Central Church, Fort Worth, Texas, on the first Sunday in October. to continue three Sundays. We are expecting a great meet ing there.

O. M. Reynolds writes from Madill, Okla., September 24: "The meetings at Madill and Oakland, one and one-half miles apart, held the latter part of August, were really what 'double-header,' as they ran at we would modernly term a the same time; and though there had never been a spirit of cooperation between the two congregations, yet they cooperated beautifully during these meetings. Great audiences heard Brother John M. Rice at Oakland; and although Brother Milholland had lived at Madill several years and held five protracted meetings, great throngs of people heard him gladly. I have lived here for a year, and had charge of the song services, and preached three times at Oakland, with two restorations, and twice the last day at Madill, with nine at the last service. In all, at the two places there were one hundred added—lifty-six at Oakland (forty-four bap-tisms) and forty-four at Madill (thirty-two baptisms). The two congregations are enjoying the great aftermath of the meetings in a manner unprecedented, with fine audiences and inspirational services. I and my family regret to have to leave this fine field and great work, being brought about by Mrs. Reynolds' decline in health. We are to move to the thriving little city of Plainview, Texas, next week, to take work for and with the enthusiastic and faithful band of saints at that place. A great open door is before us, and we are happy to enter."

Concerning Scriptural Elders.

BY J. C. M'O.

There has always been a live interest in the qualifications and duties of elders, bishops, or presbyters. As God holds up a perfect pattern for the Christian, just so he gives us a perfect model for an elder. There are only a few qualifications which an elder must have that every other Christian is not also required to possess. All Christians are admonished to be blameless. It is also said to them: "Ye therefore shall be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect. (Matt. 5: 48.) While no Christian can be as perfect as God, yet in striving to be perfect as God he will not partake of any evil, but will be reaching up to a nobler and purer life.

We have the printed copy book. The copy is perfect. In imitating such a copy we learn to write much more accurately than we would to follow an imperfect copy. Just so in taking a perfect model for a Christian and an elder.

If we never have a church of Christ until Christians are absolutely perfect, we will have none. Christians may be relatively perfect, but not absolutely perfect. If we expect Christians to be absolutely perfect, we shall be disappointed, just as we shall be if we expect elders to fill to absolute perfection all the qualifications prescribed for the Christian bishop. No infallible men live in this world. So long as men are in the flesh and are subject to appetites and passions, they will make mistales. Some write and talk of a Christian as though he must be so perfect as never to sin The Bible pictures no human being as sinless. Noah, Abraham, Moses, and Peter were not sinless. They were good men, filled with pure aspirations, and doubtless there are many such in the world to-day. While we should admonish all to live godly lives, yet we should not expect sinless men in the flesh. There is a constant warfare between the flesh and the Spirit.

In the light of the above teaching I answer the following questions sent in by one who is interested along this line;

- 1. "Who is a scriptural cider?" One who relatively possesses the qualifications of the Christian bishop as recorded in Acts 20; 1 Tim. 3; Tit. 1; 1 Pet. 5.
- 2. "Must be have all the qualifications mentioned in the Bible?" I would say in some measure, but not to absolute perfection.
- 3. "If not, which ones must be have?" In answering question No. 2, I have answered this one,
- 4. "If an elder does no teaching, but appoints others to do the teaching, he not being able to hear what is taught. is he exercising the oversight?" One may teach and not take the oversight. An elder might appoint one to teach whom he knows to be competent as a teacher and thus in a way be taking the oversight. An elder should be apt to teach.
- 5. "In what way should the 'younger' be subject to such an elder?" In every scriptural way.
- 6. " Rebuke not an elder.' (1 Tim. 5: L) Does this mean that an elder is above reproach?" The "elder" here referred to is simply an old man and not necessarily a Christian bishop. His age entitles him to consideration, so he should be exhorted as a father and not rebuked.
- 7. "Explain Acts 20; 28. How did the Holy Spirit appoint elders, and are they appointed in like manner to-day? What is meant by 'feed the church?'" Acts 20: 28 reads: "Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, in which the Holy Spirit hath made you bishops, to feed the church of the Lord which he purchased with his own blood." Elders should first take heed to themselves. They must watch and pray, lest Satan beguile them. They must subdue their own wicked passions before they can feed the church of God. They are to feed the church on "the sincere milk of the word," that it "may grow thereby." They should lead the church by precept and example. Just how the Holy Spirit appoints elders is a much-mooted question and is difficult to determine. On this subject David Lipscomb says: "The only work, so far as the Scriptures show, done by the church was to choose those described by the Holy Spirit. In the case of the seven, hands were laid on them by the apostles. Whether this was to be done by others than inspired men has always been a question a little difficult for me to decide. Hands were laid upon persons occasionally during the ministry of the apostles. In all cases except two, this one and Barnabas and Saul (Acts 13), it is specifically stated that it was done to impart the Holy Spirit. or that the Holy Spirit was imparted in doing it. This is not stated in these two cases. Yet the parties in both cases on whom hands were laid did manifest a power to work miracles, of which no account is given previous to the imposition of hands. This truth, together with the consideration that all the other cases were intended to impart spiritual gifts, raises the doubt in my mind if this was not the object in these cases also, inasmuch as almost every one called to do special duty before the New Testament was given was endowed with a spiritual gift to guide him in that work. If so, laying on of hands was confined to the age and persons possessed of spiritual gifts. It is very certain, at any rate, that men did discharge all the duties pertaining to the work of the church of God without having hands imposed on them." The church will observe those who possess the qualifications for the work, those who are full of faith and the Spirit, and will designate them for the work. Others teach that elders are now appointed by the imposition of hands with fasting and prayer.

8. "When there are none qualified to be elders in a congregation, what must be done?" I do not think the Bible tells us how long a church should exist before elders should be appointed. In the Jerusalem church, it seems, the neglect of a proper work was the occasion of their appointment. A daily ministration to the widows and the poor was going on before these persons were set apart to attend to the work, fivery member of the church should faithfully serve the Lord in the church until suitable men are developed to be the elders. Those who are fit to be elders will be found doing the work, and thus it will be seen that they possess the qualifications.

A Most Remarkable Sermon.

BY F. W. SMITH.

I herewith submit a brief synopsis of a sermon delivered in Nashville recently on "The Second Coming of Christ:"

This dectrine is to me the most comforting teaching of the Bible. When I first saw it in the Word, I didn't know what to do with it. I had no place, apparently, for it in my religious teaching, but I soon learned that I would be compelled to teach it if I desired to "declare the whole counsel of God," I don't care what men say, I must teach this doctrine if Lam true to my convictions and my God.

The theology that has no room in it for the second-coming-of-Christ doctrine has something woefully lacking. It was the one great hope of the early church, and it has been the one great promise that Christ has been holding out to his followers throughout all these eighteen hundred years. "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." This was spoken by the two men in white who stood beside the disciples on the day of Christ's ascension. Is it not preposterous to deny that Christ will never return to this earth again? All the prophets sang of his coming again, and there are more than three hundred passages in the New Testament alone bearing on this doctrine.

No one knows the day nor the hour when he will return. He left at uncertain. That makes it all the more interesting, because if we all knew just when he was coming, we would all set our stakes toward that end, and the sweetness of the hope would be lost.

Now, this sermen is not altogether remarkable for what its author said, but for some things he did not say. The sermon itself conveyed a wrong impression-not because it contains no truth, but because it was calculated to mislead and convey a wrong impression to those who heard it. The author of this sermon denies that the kingdom prophesied in Dan. 2: 44 has ever been set up or established, and he denies that Christ is now, or ever has been, on David's throne. His doctrine is, that when Christ comes again he will establish a kingdom and take his seat on David's throne. He is an editor, and in a recent issue of his paper, under the head of "The Kingdom in Acts and Epistles," this doctrine of Christ's future kingdom and reign is clearly set forth. If any one doubts the statements here made, see me, and you shall see from the hand of the author of the sermon the facts here stated. Commenting on Peter's sermon to the Jews (Acts 3: 19-21), the author of this sermon, in his paper, says:

"Repent ye therefore, and turn again, that your sins may be blotted out, that so there may come seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord; and that he may send the Christ who hath been appointed for you, even Jesus: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restoration of all things, whereof God spoke by the mouth of his holy prophets that have been from of old." (Acts 3: 19-21.)

The urgent scasons, then, why Israel should repent and turn again are three:

L That their sins may be blotted out.

2. That so (that is, on the ground of this cleansing) there may come seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

3. And that (in consequence) God might send them their God-appointed Christ, who in the meanwhile resides in heaven and will remain there until the times of the restoration of all things predicted from of old by the mouth of God's holy prophets.

If, therefore, they repented, these three things would come to pass: their sins would be forgiven; seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord would ensue; and their Christ—their Messlah of David's seed for whom they had looked and longed—would be sent to them. Christ's return from beaven would usher in those long-predicted times of restoution, the reparation and restitution of what was married and ruined and lost according to promise. This accords perfectly with all we have thus far learned both from the Old and New Testament concerning the things predicted.

It will be observed that one of the three things which would result to the Jews is: "Their Christ-their Messiah of David's seed for whom they had looked and longedwould be sent to them." Now you have it. According to this doctrine, the "Messiah of David's seed" has never come to the Jews, but will do so in the future. This is the reason the author of this sermon has Christ coming back to this earth in a body of "flesh and bones" to sit on David's Eteral throne as the "seed of David. That is the kind of a Messiah for which the Jews "looked and longed," and for which they are still looking and longing, and this editor says they shall not be disappointed. Now, these are some of the things the author of this sermon believes and teaches will take place when Christ comes, and these are the things against which objections have been raised, and not against any one's believing and preaching on the second coming of Christ. It is not about Christ's coming again, but about what the author of the sermon believes and teaches Christ will do when he comes, that objections are filed, and no one knows this better than the author of this sermon. Why, then, did he not preach these things in his sermon on the second coming of Christ? Simply because he wished to make the impression that somebody had objected to his preaching on the second coming of Christ-that's all.

But look at this synopsis a little. "When I first saw it in the Word, I didn't know what to do with it." Is is possible that he sat at the Lord's table not knowing the design of the institution? He certainly read in the Bible the Savior's promise to come again; and why could be not find a place for that in his preaching, as well as anything else Christ taught? Any one who is but a babe in Christ would be ashamed to make such a statement as that. But what is sought to be conveyed by this: "But I soon learned that I would be compelled to teach it if I desired to 'declare the whole connsel of God.' I don't care what men say, I must teach this doctrine if I am true to my convictions and my God." What "doctrine?" let me ask. The simple doctrine that Christ will come again? The man who preached this sermon knew when he uttered those words that no mortal ever objected to what he was saying. Did he not preach all over this country for years on the second coming of Christ, without a single word of protest from any one? 11 was only when he began to preach and teach that Christ had not done certain things, but would on his return-viz. come in a body of flesh and boncs and sit on David's throne as the seed of David. If he is satisfied with his effort 61 deception, I shall not envy him.

It Does Pay.

The codfish lays a million eggs,
While the helpful hen lays one;
But the codfish does not cackle
To inform us what she's done;
And so we scorn the codfish coy,
But the helpful hen we prize—
Which indicates to thoughtful minds
That it pays to advertise.—Selected.

Statement of Position.

FY J. C. M'Q.

I have repeatedly stated to our readers that this paper would not publish objectionable and bitter personalities. Bitterness, strife, and evil speakings are no part of the gospel. This admonition of the Spirit should be observed by all our writers and contributors: "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and railing, be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you." (Eph. 4: 31, 32.) Christians will erucify a tit-for-tat spirit. It is better to suffer wrong than to do wrong. It does not really hurt our standing with God for men to misrepresent us, but we lower ourselves with God every time we wrongfully accuse another and seek to bring about his downfall. God will not bless any one who is filled with a spirit of revenge and retaliation. If one is goaded and nagged into saving ugly and spiteful things, Christians filled with love and forbearance will make proper allowance. Christians, however, should be strong enough not to be tantalized into wrongdoing, and upon a subdued nature should rise out of the mire and fifth of the world into the sunlight of God's approval.

It should be emphasized that while "bitter wrangling" will not be tolerated in this journal, that there is no hought of not presenting the gospel. We have no idea of publishing a spineless journal. The man who fears to teach the truth in the love of the truth is not brave enough to be a Christian. What I say to one, I say to all, "Preach the word," even if the preaching of the word brings about division. Christ brought division. Christians must be separate from the world.

The "Peace and Unity" Number of last week was a most splendid paper, but was marred by a few things which should not have been published and which were published during my absence. Without any thought of editing the individuality out of any article, let it be distinctly understood that preachers will not be permitted to vent their spicen on each other through the columns of this paper. The blue pencil will be used freely to cut out everything that is calculated to produce strife without the accomplishment of good. "Finally, be ye all like-minded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tender-hearted, humbleminded: not rendering evil for evil, or reviling for reviling; but contrariwise blessing; for hereunto were ye called, that ye should inherit a blessing. For, he that would love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: and let him turn away from evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and pursue it." (1 Pet. 3; 8-11.) While "bitter personalities" shall be cut out, I know that I am fallible and human and that I myself will make mistakes; but when I do, I shall in humility confess them.

David Lipseomb uttered a great truth when he said:
"I have noticed it in men, I have noticed it in papers.
When one starts out to be over-sweet-tempered, to keep out all humanity, he or it becomes one-sided, unfair, and the bitterest and-most intolerant of men and papers. They do not show goodness in an honest, open, human, brave way. A paper that starts out to have no controversies, to be overly peaceable, is as sure to be filled with unjust insinuations and innucendoes as that to-morrow's sun will rise. You cannot crush the humanity out of men. Do not look for perfection in human beings nor dispense with the work of God while pretending to be Christians."

Let the dead past bury its dead. Let us reach out after the best, purest, and noblest. May we, with the courage and zeal of Paul, say: "Brethren, I count not myself yet to have laid hold; but one thing I do, forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 3: 13, 14.)

Change of Editors.

BY SIL CL M'Q.

F. W. Smith has been chosen, beginning with 1922, to edit our Bible Lesson Helps. While it has always been our effort from year to year to improve the literature, and while we shall continue this effort, for self-satisfaction with our accomplishments means death to all progress, yet 1 judge from a few letters received that some have hastily drawn the conclusion that I am dissatisfied with Brother Elam's work. It is due Brother Elam as well as myself to say that this is a mistake. Brother Elam's work on the Quarterlies was scriptural and satisfactory. It is not to be expected that some will not complain at the very best efforts that any man can put forth, but, as a rule, I believe that his work gave satisfaction to the churches. I am confident. too, that Brother Smith's work will be equally as good and give the same satisfaction, and I feel sure that all will be glad to accord him the same hearty support that has been accorded to all former editors of the literature. While it is not customary, I cheerfully state to our readers that the business reasons for the change do not in any sense reflect upon Brother Elam's good work. We appreciate very much the good will that has been shown us by the users of our Lesson Helps, and believe that this same good will will be accorded us in the future. It is our purpose to use more men in the future in the editing of the literature than we have used in the past. One man may be suited to edit one grade, another suited to edit another grade. We are doing all in our power to improve the series and are planning mechanical improvements on the Quarterlies and "Little Jewels." It shall be our constant effort to adapt the literature more and more to all.

M at home and abroad

O. M. Reynolds has taken up regular work with the church at Plainview, Texas.

"I certainly enjoyed the 'Old Paths' Number." (Mrs P. M. Drane, Bakersfield, Cal.)

L. B. Jones reports four baptisms at Biuff Springs, Tenn He is now at New Hope, near Readyville, Tenn.

D. D. Woody reports three baptisms at Kenton, Tenn. "The church was built up in the most holy faith."

H. M. Gyans changes his address from Wyoming to Selkirk, Ontario, Canada. He will take up work with the church there,

"The Gospel Advocate is a paper we cannot do without. It is full of irstruction and interest." (Mrs. Marian G. Hoskins, Martin, Tenn.)

Will J. Cullum will begin a meeting at Reid Avenue Church, this city, next Lord's day. The song service will be led by J. L. Barfield.

"I am very much pleased with the Gospel Advocate, I would feel at a loss without it in my home." (Mrs. Bettle C. Brown, Gallatin, Tenn.)

W. M. Oakley reports two restorations during a meeting at Pond Creek, in Cheatham County, Tenn. He is now at Auburn, in Carnon County.

Mrs. Cora Williamson, Greenfield, Tenn., writes: "Pray for our brother, J. L. Holland, who is now in Memphis in the Baptist Memorial Hospital," Married, on September 30, at the Maxwell House, in Nashville, Tenn., Mr. W. M. Givens and Miss Flora Bell Essex, A. B. Lipscomb officiating.

"The Gospel Advocate grows better as the years go by I cannot begin to tell you the good it is doing for all who read it." (M. W. Barbour, Collinsville, Ala.)

W. F. Lemmons met a Mormon in debate at Mona, Mont., and will remain over next Sunday. He will return to Minneapolis, Minn., to preach on October 16.

From A. H. Lannom, Rutherford, Tenn.; "The work here is in fine shape. J. S. Dunn closed a fine meeting, with nine additions. His lessons were soul-stirring."

One of the greatest heresies is lack of belief in our prethren,-J. F. Purser.

Christian education is one of the bright stars of hope for our nation.—Thomas R. Marshall.

Paul was the greatest interpreter of Jesus Christ that the world has ever known—L. R. Scarborough.

J. Porter Sarders is engaged in a meeting for the California Avenue congregation, in West Nashville, James A. Allen continues the meeting at Pilcher Avenue.

From Leslie G. Thomas, Flint, Mich.: "I was with the brethren at Speaker on September 25. We have some very fine people there. It is always a pleasure to be with them."

- "I appreciate the Gospel Advocate. I read it closely every week, and rejoice in what it teaches. It is one of the best papers in the world." (Claude E. Love, Bolding, Ark.)
- H. M. Phillips closed an interesting meeting at Brush Creek, Tenn. Two were baptized and two placed their membership with the congregation. J. V. A. Traylor led the song service.
- J. Clifford Murphy reports a very successful meeting near Lineville, in Clay County, Ala. Twenty-two persons were baptized, five gave up sectarianism, and three confessed their wrongdoing.

William P, Walker writes: "Last night I closed a sixdays' meeting at Model, sixteen miles from Dover, Tenn. One was baptized and much prejudice was eradicated from the hearts of our Baptist friends."

- J. W. Grant closed a meeting at Lyles, Tenn., on September 28. He reports the sentiment at this meeting as the finest he had ever had shown at any meeting in his life. There were twenty-seven baptisms.
- F. B. Shepherd reports contributions totaling thirty-five dollars received by him for the Forest Vale Mission, in Africa, from August 28 to September 18. This amount has been forwarded to Brother Sherriff.

Fine interest was manifested during the first week of the meeting at Twelfth Avenue, North, this city. S. M. Jones, of Beamsville, Ontario, Canada, is conducting the meeting. There were twelve additions during the first week.

From Jesse T. Lashlee, Dalton, Ark., September 29: "My meeting at Pratt, Mo., closed on September 16, with three additions. They are going to build them a house. I came from there to Dalton, and have been here ever since. No additions. We will close to-night. My next meeting will be at Caraway, Ark., beginning on October 1."

"I have just read the special 'Peace and Unity' Number, and hesitate not to say, first, that it is the best special number of all, and also extremely timely. Undoubtedly it will be a great and powerful influence in composing the sad and burtful differences so widespread just now among our preachers especially." (C. A. Taylor, Louisville, Ky.)

From Mrs. S. W. Beil, Sedalia, Mo., September 22: "We are pleading for a good, Christian man, who does not have to depend on the church here for support, to move here to help us in our efforts for good at this place. Mr. Bell can be in only one place at a time, and he needs a helper hadly. Will not some one answer this call and come to our assistance?"

From J. R. Tubb, Sparta, Tenn., September 29: "The meeting closed last night with seven confessions, making thirty-seven in all—thirty-three baptisms. The meeting closed too soon. Many people from the other churches were attentive listeners. Brother Dunn has stolen the hearts of the Spartans, and we have arranged with him to return next year for a longer siege."

From J. C. Hollis, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., September 30: "I have conducted four meetings since my last report. In the four meetings I had thirty-four confessions. Three of the places were mission points, and I think we shall be able to do a good work in each place. They are counting on building houses in two of the places this fall. I have ended my summer's work and have entered school for another term."

"Cheerful Messages" is published every Friday by Felix G. Owen in the interest of the church in Santa Rosa, Cal., and wherever it may be read and appreciated. Mailed free to those who desire it. There is no subscription price now, but sometime in the future there may be if the interest be sufficient. The editor of the Gospel Advocate receives this little paper each week, and finds it to be cheerful and inspiring indeed.

B. F. Hart writes: "T. C. Little and I held an eight-days' meeting at Cane Creek, including the second and third Sundays in September, which resulted in nine additions, with two restored. Brother Little and I have been with this church a good deal ever since we have been preaching. The church did her part well in the meeting, which shows that a church can have a good meeting with home forces. Home forces led the singing. Will somebody take notice?"

The brethren at Georgiaville, three miles east of Brooklyn, Ala., are trying to build a house of worship. They are few in number and poor in this world's goods, and are pleading for help to build. Brother Grider preached for them in a schoolhouse. They have a lot on which to build, and the deed contains the restrictive clause. They are asking all readers of the Gospel Advocate for help on their house. Send denations to S. L. Boyett or J. A. Hoomes, Brooklyn, Ala.

Married, at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Womack, on Belmont Boulevard, this city, on September 28, at 8:30 P.M., Miss Mildred Womack and James E. Scobey, Jr., the father of the bridegroom, Elder J. E. Scobey, performing the ceremony. The contracting parties have been united in the cause of Christ for some time, and we trust they will strengthen each other in growing in grace and the knowledge of the truth. Their future gives promise of useful and happy lives.

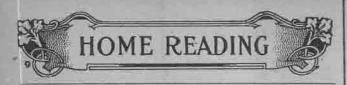

From Joe L. Netherland, Miami, Fla., September 27: "The church here, while by no means perfect, is still trying to do greater things for the Master. Our new building is about ready for plastering and finish work; but we will not be able to complete it at the present, but will meet in it at an early date. This will give us more floor space and better ventilation. We are also doing some mission work all the time. Brethren who are intending to be in Miami during the winter will find the place of worship at Northwest Fourth Street and Fourth Avenue."

J. D. Tant makes announcement of some debates as follows: "I have just closed a four-days' debate with J. N. Cowan, who represents one of the six branches of the anti-Srnday-school faction, of Texas. I am now called upon and have propositions signed up to meet L. R. Rilev. Baptist, out three miles from Milan, Tenn., in a four-days debate, beginning on November 1. Then I am to meet Ben Bogard, Baptist, in a four-days' debate at Guin, Ala., beginning on November 8. I am to meet Mr. Dugger, Adventist, at Bear Creek, Ala., in a six-days' debate, beginning on November 14; but I rather think the Adventists will back down, as I will not agree to waste each day and debate at night only for fourteen nights to please Dugger. Too much time wasted for so little good."

From A. H. Porterfield, Imboden, Ark., September 29.

The meeting closed at Wiseman, Izard County, Ark., on Tuesday night of this week. The attendance and attention were fine. The house (a large one) would not hold all the people who came. Six were baptized, three were restored and the church was aroused to greater activity. W. O. Smith is doing a good work at Wiseman; also Major O. Cozart is doing a great work there, and says he intends to be preaching the gospel soon. Wiseman is my old home, but I had not preached there before. The Lord willing, I shall go back there for a meeting the first two weeks in September, 1922. Our meeting will begin here at Imboden on October 1. Then I shall go to Pleasant Valley, near Swifton, for a twenty-days' singing school."

From Mrs. P. M. Drane, Bakersfield, Cal.; "I have been able to find a few members of the church in and near They met at my home and organized. How Big Is a House?

The lecturer was describing and advocating modern, humane, and intelligent methods of dealing with young children. As he paused for an instant, a grim-faced woman rose up. "Will you answer me one plain question?" she challenged him. "This shilly-shallying with children is all right at times, but there are times when nothing but a good spanking will do. What do you do when a child stamps his foot and says, 'I won't do it?'"

The lecturer waited. The questioner added nothing to her question. "Do you call that a plain question?" he asked, in an incredulous tone, as though he could not believe his ears.

"I certainly do," she said, with satisfaction.

"Well, madam," said the lecturer, "I will answer that plain question if you will answer one of mine. How big is a house?"

The woman stared. "That's not a plain question. What sort of a house?"

"Aha!" said the lecturer. "You can't answer me till I have told you what sort of a house? Well, I can't answer you till you tell me what sort of a child."

"I don't see what that's got to do with it," said the woman, but somewhat taken aback.

"Well, here's a case. A little child of three, very nervous, sensitive, recently over an illness, has been on a long, hot, railway journey. At the end, exhausted from lack of sleep, excited to the point of distraction by the noise and a thousand fears he cannot explain, with a beginning of stomach trouble from the irregular meals, he is told by some one who does not understand little children to carry a satchel much too heavy for him. Perhaps you would expect a three-year-old to say under such circumstances: 'I'm sorry, but I'm not feeling very well, and it is really quite beyond my strength.' But I don't blame him a bit for stamping his foot and screaming. And certainly he does not deserve the same treatment as a loutish boy of fourteen who refuses to obey a reasonable request. And yet you expect some answer that will be the same for both those cases."

Every child is different from every other child, and only his mother is in a position to know how to take him. All sets of circumstances are different from all others, and only those who know all about the case have any chance of guessing what is the right thing to do. You must do that most difficult of all things. think, and think hard, before you know what is the right thing to do. But before you begin to think, just remember that if a child stamps his foot and says, "I won't," it is because you have brought him up wrong. When you see a dog that habitually snarls and shows his teeth, you do not say: "What a disagreeable nature that dog has!" You say: "Heavens! What a brutal master the poor creature must have had!" -Dorothy Canfield Fisher.

A Substitute For Worry.

It is easy to worry. It is easy to worry when there seems to be something to worry over, and it is just about as easy when there is nothing to worry over. It is so easy that most of us "get the habit" while we are young and keep it up until we reach the haven of rest; and if there is any possible way of doing it, some of us will proceed to worry the very first day we are in our longed-for heaven. It is true that worry carves many deep lines upon our foreheads, makes us spend many hours of greatest uneasiness, drains our vitality, destroys our cheerfulness, puts an extinguisher upon our joys, makes us less fit for life and an enemy to social good cheer, and, so far as it can, it robs heaven of the sun and earth of its song. And yet we cling to it as one of our most cherished possessions.

Why do we do it? Probably the principal reason is that we look upon worry as a safeguard against trouble. If we don't worry over things, we are sure something dreadful will happen to us. It is worry that protects us from evil, and it is worry that acts as an angel of the Lord encamping round about us. If we didn't worry, we couldn't expect to live in peace, and things would surely go wrong. Of course this all sounds very foolish, and it is even more foolish than it sounds; but it is, nevertheless, true.

One of the most striking characteristics of our soldiers during the war was the cheerful spirit which they exhibited. They had difficulties enough and hardships without number, but they steadfastly refused to worry about them. Even in the darkest hours they sang, "Pack your troubles in your old kit bag," and faced the future hopefully. One of the doctors who had charge of a hospital train says that scarcely ever did he hear a groan or a complaint from the men who were suffering the most excruciating agony. When compared with what these brave men endured, how trivial do our little troubles seem!

Why not try a substitute for worry? Why not trust? Trust does not remove the possibilities of trouble; but reading and believing that God cares for us, it decides to let God do the worrying. But some one says that is irreverent, as God never worries. Well, then, if God never worries, why should we? He is looking after things, and we certainly are not; and if he never worries, it does seem foolish for us to do so. Long ago a man of God wrote: "I will trust, and not be afraid." We say, "I will trust; " but we seem strangely loath to say, "I will not be afraid." To learn this lesson well is to enter a new life, a life of marvelous peace and rest; and the gateway is open always .- Christian Guardian.

The Divine Exchange.

He called for my life, and I offered it at his footstool; but he gave it me as a prey, with unspeakable addition.

He called for my will, and I resigned it at his call; but he returned me his own in token of his love.

He called for the world, and I laid it at his feet, with the crowns thereof. I withheld them not at the beckening of his hand. But mark the benefit of exchange! For he gave me, instead of earth a kingdom of eternal peace, and In lieu of the crowns of victory a crown of glory. - Thomas Story.

Brother McQuiddy: Please explain 1 Cor. 15: 29, which reads: "Else what shall they do that are baptized for the dead? If the dead are not raised at all, why then are they baptized for them?" Mrs. W. J. Hogas.

I quote the answer given by David Lipscomb to the same query, which appears on pages 49 and 50 of "Queries and Answers," compiled by J. W. Shepherd: "To determine the meaning of a sentence, we must look at its connection, purpose, and scope. This is one of a number of arguments to prove the resurrection from the dead. After giving other arguments, he asks: 'Else [if the dead rise not] what shall they do which are baptized for [in view of their resurrection from] the dead, if the dead rise not? He was giving reasons why they should believe in the resurrection. We are baptized and enter into Christ because we must die, and in order that we may be fitted to be raised in him and live with him forever. Why are we baptized in order to death, if the dead rise not? If the dead rise not, what shall they do who are baptized in view of the resurrection from the dead? In view of their dying, they are baptized; so are baptized in order to their well-being after death. If they are not to be raised, why are they baptized to fit them for the resurrection? This is Paul's argument. Verse 30 is similar. Why do we stand in jeopardy of life every hour, if there be no resurrection and future judgment?"

A disciple, of Davidson, Tenn., sends the following query: "For the benefit of members of the one body at Davidson, please answer through the "Query Department" these questions: (1) Can a Christian father and leader in the church give a dance in his own home and yet be a Christian? (2) Can a Christian father who is a miner join the miners' union and yet love the Lord with all his strength, mind, and soul?"

1. The Christian father and leader who gives a dance in his own home is not working much for Christianity, to say the least of it. The dance belongs to the world; and the Christian is not to be conformed to this world, but should be transformed by the renewing of his mind, that he may prove what is the good, acceptable, and perfect will of God. The Bible does not tell us just how far a man can go into sin or how many mistakes he can make before God will disinherit and disown him. As the Bible does not tell, I am not able to say. The Bible teaches clearly, however, that every Christian should shun the very appearance of evil. Unless a Christian does this, he has entirely too much confidence in his own strength and is liable to be overtaken in a fault. "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." (1 Cor. 10: 12.) It is always the part of wisdom to keep just as far from sin and temptation as possi-

2. I would not say that a man cannot join the miners' union and be a child of God. However, no sort of union is essential or necessary in order to live the Christian life, excepting union with Christ. If all men would live up to the Golden Rule and would every day grow more and more like Jesus, there would be no miners' unions and no Christian would desire to become a member of such union. The more nearly we all approach to the divine standard, the more devoted we are to the service of the Lord Jesus Christ, the less will we care about becoming a member of any sort of union and the fewer human organizations will we enter. The child of God who is really working out the Christian religion and who loves God with all of his heart has no desire and finds no time to devote to such organizations.

While this is true, I would not say that a man cannot be a Christian and cannot love God and yet be a member of a human organization. This would be far from correct. Men may make mistakes—yea, grievous mistakes—and still remain members of the body of the Lord Jesus Christ; but it is the part of wisdom for all who confess the name of the Lord Jesus Christ to be active, to be diligent, and to devote their talents, time, and means to his service.

A brother, who signs his name "S." wants to know whether God forgave the publican's prayer as recorded in Luke 18: 10:14. He also wishes light on verses 38-43.

1. Luke 18: 10-14 reads as follows: "Two men went up: into the temple to pray: the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as the rest of men. extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week; I give tithes of all that I get. But the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote his breast, saying, God, be thou merciful to me a sinner. I say unto you, This man went down to his house justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be humbled; but he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." The language is clear that the Lord justified the publican rather than the Phari see. All men are sinners. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrightcousness." (1 John 1: 9.) Men, in order to have their prayers answered, in order to be exalted as was the publican, must humble themselves as did he "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted." All who call upon the name of the Lord Jesus Christ must come realizing their own inability to save themselves and must come saying, "Lord, thy will be done." It is impossible for a believing penitent to come forward and obey the gospel of Jesus Christ without breathing a prayer of penitence and humility.

2. The second scripture on which our brother asks for information is as follows: "And he cried, saying, Jesus, thouson of David, have mercy on me. And they that went be fore rebuked him, that he should hold his peace; but he cried out the more a great deal, Thou son of David, have mercy on me. And Jesus stood, and commanded him to be brought unto him; and when he was come near, he asked him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? And be said, Lord, that I may receive my sight. And Jesus said unto him, Receive thy sight: thy faith hath made ther whole. And immediately he received his sight, and fetlowed him, glorifying God: and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God." There is no one on whom the sinner can call to save him but the Lord. The Lord is the only one who has the power to save. The man who does not come believing the gospel, calling upon the Lord to save him, is not in the spirit of obedience, and, hence, the Lord himself cannot save him. Men must be humble, must realize their inability to save themselves, before they will seek the Lord. The man who realizes that he is a lost and guilty sinner will carnestly call upon the Lord to save him.

It is recorded of a certain man that his powers of vision were so extraordinary that he could distinctly see the fleet of the Carthaginians enter the harbor of Carthage while he stood himself at Lilybeum, in Sicily. A man seeing across the ocean, and able to tell of objects so far off! He could feast his vision on what others saw not. Whether this story be true or not, it serves as an illustration of the fact that faith now stands at its Lilybeum, and sees the long-tossed feet entering safely the desired haven, enjoying the bliss of that still distant day, as if it were already comes.—Andrew A. Bonar.

FIELD REPORTS

Glasgow, Ky., September 26.—I am with the few faithful ones at Union. with a house full of earnest listeners from all classes of sects, some coming as far as five miles when the downpour of rain will allow. We have been rained out as much as half the time, but still they come.-Frank Baker.

Nashville, Tenn., Route 12, September 27.-On the second Lord's day in September I began a meeting with the Rock House congregation, near Woodbury, Tenn. This meeting continued nine days, with good interest. Thir-teen were baptized and seven were reclaimed. At present I am in a good meeting with the Millersburg congregation, in Rutherford County.-George W. Graves.

Bardwell, Ky., September 29.—On September 13 I closed an eleven-days' meeting at Buncombe, Ill., with two baptisms. I will return for another meeting in 1922. I also closed a twelve-days' meeting at Wysox, Ky., on September 27, with eight additions. I will return next year for a fourteen-days' meeting, the Lord willing. My next meeting will be near Senatobia, Miss.-Joe Ratcliffe.

Livingston, Tenn., September 26. I closed a three-weeks' mission meet ing yesterday at Elm Grove. We had large crowds to the close. Nine baptisms and much good done otherwise. The house would hold but a small part of the crowds, so the meeting was held out in a grove. Those baptized will meet with the Livingston and Walnut Grove congregations. This was my fifth mission meeting this summer, J. C. Pendergrass.

Ætna, Tenn., September 28.—The meeting at Sunrise closed without visible results. The interest was good throughout, and some were "almost persuaded" to be Christians. This meeting was held under three large white oak trees near Swan Creek. They insisted on my coming back. Good crowds greeted us all the while, except the rainy days. Then we would preach in the mill or storehouse near by, N. W. Proffitt.

Union, S. C., September 26 .- Yesterday our services were somewhat out of the usual order, partly for the sake of variety, partly for breaking of or to hinder the growth of hard-bound customs, and partly to make the review lesson more interesting. We had more singing, and then I made effort to cover the lesson before the whole assembly, asking questions here and there. Then, omitting the usual serthere. Then, omitting the usual ser-mon, we had songs, prayer, a short talk, and then communion. I mention this for a suggestion to any one who might wish for it.-G. F. Gibbs.

Paducah, Ky., September 27.-Brother Charlie Taylor recently closed the most successful meeting in the history of the McKellar Avenue Church, in Memphis, Tenn. Finney, Ky., September 21.-I began my third annual meeting here last Lord's day. Interest and attendance good so far. I closed a short meeting at Florence, Tenn., with no visible results for good. The congregation there is small, and part of them are very I am due at Salmons, Ky., inactive. I am due at Salmons, Ky., for my fourth meeting the night of first Lord's day in October. The congregation at Portland, Tenn., furnishes the tent, and the congregation at Bethel, Ky., near, principally supports me here. We hope to establish a con-gregation soon. We need more gospel teaching, less sermonizing and lecturing, and more godly living on the part of both teachers and members. Brethren, let us arise and do the work so hadly needed to be done .- R. C. White.

Sparta, Tenn., September 29.—Brother G. A. Dunn, of Houston, Texas, has just closed a series of meetings here. He preached the best series of gospel sermons that it has been my pleasure to hear during the last twenty years. He is one of our biggest and most forceful preachers. He baptized thir ty-four, and three other came forward and confessed the errors of their ways and expressed a determination to live closer to God in the future. He preached twenty-two splendid sermons and closed the meeting with eight baptisms the last night. He greatly en-deared himself to the whole congregation, and he has agreed to hold another meeting for us next year. Taking the meeting as a whole, it is probably the best held here for fifteen years, so I am informed. The house was full every night, packed to its utmost, and the crowds were good each afternoon —J. E. Thompson.

Moulton, Ala., September 26.-Brother Thomas H. Burton, of Union, S. C., closed a meeting last night at Aldridge Grove a few miles southeast of Moulton, that has resulted, apparently. in more good than any other held in Lawrence County this summer, In all, there were fifty-seven baptisms and restorations that ran the number to above seventy-five. The meeting began on September 11, to continue one week, but at the end of the time the interest was so great that services went on to the evening of September 24. All feel as never before the need of more leaders than Lawrence County now has. Brethren Emmett Byars, Archie McKay, and Van A. Bradley are about the only preachers in the county, and they are forced to give most of their time to other work for a support. A man willing to endure the hardships and make the sacrifices required here is needed. It will be remembered that it was at Aldridge Grove that Brother J. P. Ezell held a meeting a few years ago in which the number of additions went above one hundred Why should not there be such numbers at every local church? The sinners are there, and the truth ought to win them.—Earl M. Hodson.

Nashville, Tenn., September 26.— Recently I have been preaching in Rutherford County at some places where I had preached while a citizen of Murfreesboro, For I was principal of Murfreesboro Female Institute, and taught there from January, 1872, to June, 1884. During that time I visited several churches occasionally trying to preach for them. They always professed themselves as being quite satisfied with my efforts, and would invite me to come again. I thought then, as I know now, they were easily satisfied. On the second Sunday in September 1 was at Antioch church, where I had preached over forty years ago. Few in that congregation whom I met then do I meet now when For the last seven years, at there. their solicitation, I have been preaching twice a year, once in the spring and once in the fall. On my last visit I left an appointment for next spring. If life, health, and strength remain with me, the Lord willing, I shall be there to fill that appointment. Brother L B, Bradley, a short time ago, held them a meeting having several additions to the church. I understood they were much pleased with his preaching, and that he did much good for them. The third Sunday I was with my home congregation, Lawrence Avenue. The fourth Sunday I preached at the Seminary Church, in Rutherford County, to a good-sized and apparently a very interested congregation. Over forty years ago I heid meetings for them in a small schoolhouse, when the membership was small. They now have a large, good, church house, and a good-sized con-gregation. The younger brethren seem devoted, and can and do attend to the public worship. This is an indication of growth in grace, and a promise of much good. I left an appointment for the fourth Sunday next May, I may fill it. God knows. I hope to do so. I preach the first Sunday in October at Antioch, in Maury County, Tenn.-James E. Scobey.

Whole Truth About Genius.

A great idea grows like a flower. It changes. In its evolution it leaves crudity and imperfection behind. It assumes a new form, more pleasing in its outline and more striking in its beauty, as it is molded into a thing of deathless energy. An idea which is different to all else is a thing of wonder—if it is true. It is original thought, and this is all that genius is,—Selected.

Notes From West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS

The meeting at Cloverdale closed last Tuesday night (September 20), after continuing for ten days. We had very good attendance and very good attention, but no visible results. Another failure on my part, so far as visible results are concerned.

The meeting at Hornbeak (my home congregation) began yesterday (September 25). To the great surprise of one of the elders, who said before the meeting began, "They won't come out," there was a large audience both yesterday and last night. Rain has now set in, which may hinder the attendance. I shall trust in God and try to do my duty.

Brother W. T. Beasley, of Belleview, Tenn., has been in West Tennessee this year. Were it not for fogs and mosquitoes, he might locate in West Tennessee; but he doesn't like them, He preached one week at Oak Ridge. Two or three were restored to fellowship. I had the happy privilege of hearing him three times. He is a true, loval preacher of the gospel. He went from Oak Ridge to Refuge for one week, and baptized five. While at Refuge he gave perfect satisfaction to some of his old-time brethren. They quit him. He then went to Burris Chapel, in Lake County, for one week, and baptized one there. Of the six baptized, one was a Baptist and one was a Methodist. Come again, Brother Beasley, when the fogs and misunitoes pass away.

Brother Joe Ratcliffe is to be at Bessie, in Lake County, in October. Brethren, if you can't endure the sound doctrine, you had better stay at home: for Brother Ratcliffe preaches no other kind. I hope they may have a good meeting.

Brother Claude Hall has just closed a meeting in Union City, but I have not heard whether there were any additions or not.

After the meeting at Hornbeak, I am under promise to hold a meeting at Turnage Schoolhouse, about six miles southwest of Hornbeak. This is where Brother Harry Hayes held a fine meeting last year and baptized quite a number. As he is engaged in teaching, he could not get to them this year for a meeting; so they called me, and, the Lord willing, I will go.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE LIFE

A Dangerous Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Afton, Tenn.—"I want other suffering women to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. During the Change of Life I was in bed for eight months and had two good doctors treating me but they did me no good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and in a short time I felt better. I had all kinds of bad spells, but they all left me. Now when I feel weak and nervous I take the Vegetable Compound and it always does me good. I wish all women would try it during the Change of Life for I know it will do them good. If you think it will induce some one to try the Vegetable Compound you may publish this letter."—Mrs. A. Keller, Afton, Tenn.

Mrs. Mary Lister of Adrian, Mich., adds her testimony to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to carry women safely through the Change of Life. She says:

"It is with pleasure that I write to you thanking you for what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was passing through the Change of Life and had a displacement and weakness so that I could not stand on my feet and other annoying symptoms. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the first bottle helped me, so I got more. It cured me and I am now doing my housework. Your medicine is certainly woman's friend and you may use this testimonial as you choose."—Mrs. MARY LISTER, 608 Frank Street, Adrian, Mich.

It is said that middle age is the most trying period in a woman's life, and owing to modern methods of living not one woman in a thousand passes through this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying symptoms.

The semothering spells, the dreadful hot flashes that send the blood rushing to the head until it seems as though it would burst, and the faint feeling that follows, as if the heart were going to stop, those sinking or dizzy spells are all symptoms of a nervous condition, and indicate the need for a special medicine.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a root and herb medicine especially adapted to act upon the feminine system. It acts in such a manner as to build up the weakened nervous system and enables a woman to pass this trying period with the least possible annoying symptoms.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative and often prevents serious troubles.

With the Work at Macon, Ga.,

BY R. P. CUFF.

On Sunday, September 18, my second year's work with the congregation at Macon opened in a very encouraging way. For about two months I had been pleasantly engaged in meetings in Tennessee. It was a great delight to me to see the two large audiences that assembled for worship and to observe the fervor with which they sang, After both services the members manifested a splendid social spirit. It is enough to convince one that in the hearts of some of the members of this band of worshipers surely the spirit of the Master must reign, the real love of truth must dwell. It is one of the greatest features in my joy to know that during my absence many of the members were firm as the Rock of Gibraltar, solid for the Lord Jesus Christ, unfaltering in his cause, unfailing in their keeping of his appointments.

The work here is in fairly substantial shape, seemingly. During the last few months there have been several additions to the local forces from various sources. Brother W. L. Foshee and his wife have moved to our city from Chattanooga and are working with us. Recently the W. T. Grant department store imported a bookkeeper from Chattanooga. She, too, is a mem-ber of the church. The work of Brother C. B. Mason, formerly of the Twelfth Avenue Church, of Nashville, Tenn., has brought him to Macon. He is quite an addition to our strength. I consider that the psychological mood of the congregation is splendid.

The elders of the Macon church are G. W. Jones, J. A. Matthew, J. W. Hightower, and L. M. Delk. These men, each in his own way, are "pure gold;" in fact, I think most of the members have a mind to work. The main thing is to study the word of God more and to find duty clearly defined, and then to put speedily into practice what we have learned.

May the blessings of Jehovah rest upon the work in Macon and throughout the State of Georgia. Let the brethren in regions more fully developed for the cause of Christ pray for the efforts being put forth in Georgia.

Among the Colored Folks

Report of Meetings in Three States.

BY W. REERIE

On the second Lord's day in August I began a meeting under a tent at Decatur, Ala. The white church at Albany called me to hold this meeting for my people. Eleven made the good confession, seven of these being what is called "sanctified" preachers. We had baptizing several nights in the Tennessee River. While there I met Brother J. Pettey Ezell, who treated me as a brother. I went to hear him preach and also to take the Lord's Supper. He preached an excellent sermon. All made me feel that they were my brethren and sisters, not only in word, but in deed and in truth, This church paid for my board and lodging in a Baptist home. This is a fine mission field. The brethren regretted that the meeting did not run long enough, and they asked me back to spend a month next year. Brother A. B. Lipscomb recommended me to these brethren, and I am thankful to him for such a blessing that came from God through him.

On the fourth Lord's day in August I began a two-weeks' meeting at Capleville, Tenn. This was an interesting meeting. Three precious souls obeyed the gospel of Jesus Christ, This was my fifth meeting with them. I am always proud to go to Capleville, This church is in a strong sectarian community, but they are struggling and contending to hold up Jesus. It is a pleasure to stop in the homes of these brethren. I have promised to labor with them next year in some mission work.

I am now at Center Point, Ark., in a meeting. This is my first time to labor with these brethren. This is a strong church, and they want the pure gospel preached. The white brethren and sisters are attending each night. No additions yet, but prospects good. I have been here only four days. meeting will continue two weeks.

This has been a busy season with me to date. I have baptized one hundred and six precious souls.

BY J. E. OREEN

Since my last report I have held two successful meetings near Statesvilleone at Abilene and the other at Corinth. Brother Reeves began the meeting at Abilene and baptized one. I continued it two weeks and baptized four. Three of these were Methodists and one a Baptist. At Corinth I spent twelve days, teaching a singing school in the afternoon and preaching at night to as large crowds as I ever saw at one place for preaching. Some attended regularly who lived five miles away and had not been to preaching at any place in fourteen years. Fifteen persons were baptized into the one body. The brothren at each of these places have just completed and seated a nice house of worship.

Brother J. D. Tani held a good meeting at both of these places last May. but the brethren were not satisfied with doing a little good when they thought they could do still more. Many congregations should tollow that example, because there are so many that think if they can accomplish a little by a short meeting once each year, that is enough, when they know another one very soon afterwards would accomplish still more. May God hasten the day when the brethren will wake up and see the necessity of continually "helding forth the word of life" (Phil. 2, 16), because out on the great sea of destruction are not a few. not hundreds, not thousands, but millions of precious souls drifting with the tide and anxiously looking for the light that will guide them to the shore of safety. Why not send them the glittering light of God's ever-shining truth to direct them to that land where life is eternal and a treasure sublime?

I am now (September 26) with the congregation at Winston-Salem conducting a singing school. Other brethren have called me for meetings, but I must bring the work to a close in a few days and return to Henderson, Tenn., and begin again the life of a student in the Freed-Hardeman College.

I came here and began the work on June 19 under the plans of Brother W. L. Reeves. Since then I have conducted three singing schools, rendered what assistance I could in Brother M. C. Kurfees' meeting, and held six meetings, in which thirty-eight were buried with Christ in baptism and six restored to fellowship. I had to do all the song leading in each of these meetings.

This has been a very pleasant work, and I believe that the Lord has greatly blessed the efforts that have been put forth in this worthy field. Loyal congregations and true gospel preachers are few in this State. Several tents and earnest, consecrated, hard-working men are needed—men who are willing to make some sacrifice to hold up the crucified Christ, and who dare not preach anything but "the word," and are prepared to teach singing schools along with the meetings.

Brother W. L. Reeves lives on Urban Street, Winston-Salem, and is working hard for the spread of the kingdom of God among men. He is an able preacher and shuns not to declare "the whole counsel of God." May the Lord continue to bless his efforts and help him to be a "fisher of men."

I am a subscriber to the Gospel Advocate, and would not do without it. Long may it live! Especially do I enjoy the special numbers. May God's people get a greater vision of the duties and responsibilities of life, seek the "old paths" and "walk therein." that all may enjoy the eternal rest for which we all sigh.

Any congregation wanting monthly preaching will please write me at Henderson, Tenn., in care of Freed-Hardeman College.

Report of Recent Debate.

BY J. L. HINES.

A debate took place at the Cherry Grove church of Christ, in Mubicuberg County, Ky., between T. A. H. Laslie (General Baptist) and T. D. Willis (church of Christ), beginning on September 13 and continuing four days.

Willis affirmed the following proposition; "The churches of Christ, of one of which I, T. D. Willis, am a member, are identical in origin, name, doctrine, and practice with the churches of the New Testament." Laslie affirmed this proposition: "The General Baptist Churches, of one of which 4, T. A. H. Laslie, am a member, are identical in origin, name, doctrine, and practice with the churches of the New Testament."

In affirming his proposition, Brother Willis made the usual arguments that our brethren make, stressing and forcefully emphasizing Isa, 28: 16 and 11ch, 9: 16, 17. Elder Lastie did not object to Brother Willis' definitions, but said that Willis' failed to show that the church at Shrewsbury, Ky, where he holds his membership, is the 'same, identical' church that existed on Pentecost." But as the speeches will soon be printed in book form, I will not attempt to give the arguments. The crowds were very large and the attention the very best.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Beally better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

. Sacrassassassassassas

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as middle real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plaim granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-male for three times the money. Tastes plausant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the races of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the soru, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hourseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind

Is Conversion Effected by Miraeulous or Moral Power?

BY J. W. ADKISSON.

We know that God has miraculous power, plenty of it; but the power he uses in quickening and converting the alten sinner is not miraculous power, but moral power-moral sussion. For man's mind consists of intellect, sensibilities, and will, and all these are involved in conversion. The intellect must be instructed, the sensibilities aroused, and the will induced to act. Hence, it is moral power by which man is converted and that moral power is the gospel of Christ, which is contained in the New Testament, the spoken or written word of God. (See Rom. 1: 16; 1 Cor. 1: 21; 15; 1-4; read Rom, 10: 13-17; Ps. 19: 7: 119: 50, 93, Acts 15: 7-9; 14: 1; 16: 32, 33.) This is why Jesus commanded the apostles to "go Into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature;" to "go . . . teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." This is why the apostles never did pray God to send down converting power to save the people; but instead of that they prayed God to "grant unto thy servants [apostles]. that with all boldness they may speak thy word," (Acts 4: 29.) Is not that plain?

It has been very truly said that to become a Christian (a converted man) | Christ; and no one is a follower of is to become a follower of Christ: and to become a follower of Christ, one must accept his teaching and walk in the way he directs in the gospel. If one follows the teaching of Masonry and complies with its laws and rituals, he becomes a Mason; if he follows the teachings of Methodism, he will become a Methodist; if he follows the teaching of Baptists, he will become a Eaptist: and so on, of all denominations. But if he follows the teaching of Christ and nothing else, he will become a Christian and nothing else, because the teaching of Christ makes nothing but Christians. We believe we can safely say that it is conceded by all that if one will follow the (eaching (gospel) of Christ he will become a Christian. To be anything is to follow the teaching of that thing, But the teaching of Christ was not intended to make Mormons, Romanists, Campbellites, Methodists, Baptists, or any other kind of "ists" or "tists," but to make Christians. Hence, to become anything else than a Christian, you must receive and comply with other teaching than that found in the gospel of Christ. Since, then, it is a fact that to become a Christian one must follow the gospel or New Testament teaching, the teaching of Christ and his apostles, it is a matter of the greatest importance that we see for ourselves that we are following Christ, obeying his commands; for only those who hear and do the sayings of Jesus build on the rock. (See Matt. 7: 21-29.)

Then Paul teaches that everlasting punishment awaits those who reject the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ (2 Thess. 1: 7, 8); and Jesus says we must do the Father's will if we would enter the kingdom of heaven, and all agree that it is God's will that we be baptized. Then it follows that no one enters the kingdom until he is baptized. Is not that plain? Paul says of God. "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son: in whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins." (Col. 1: 13, 14; see, also, Eph. 1: 7.) Out of the kingdom, then, we are subject to the power of darkness, under the dominion of Satan; in the kingdom, we are freed from this evil power, have redemption through his blood, the remission of sins, according to the riches of his grace. Then it follows that no one reaches forgiveness of sins according to his grace until he is baptized. Jesus said: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," (John 3: 5; see, also, Luke 7: 30.)

A Christian is one who follows

Christ who is not baptized, for Christ was baptized. Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (Mark 16: 16.) And Ananias said to Saul of Tarsus: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling, on the name of the Lord." (Acts 22: 16.) We are made free from sin when we obey, and not before. (See Ron-6: 17, 18; Heb. 5; 9; J Pet. 1: 22,) " For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ," (Gal. 3; 26, 27.) Peter told the trembling murderers of Jesus to "repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Chost." (Acts 2: 38.) They did as they were told and were added unto them, and no one denies that they were Christians. If every one would do as these people did, would not every one become a Christian? Do not the above passages of Scripture tell how sinners became Christians in the days of the apostles?

"Why do you wait, dear brother? O, why do you longer delay? There's no one to save you but Jesus; There's no other way but his way."

VIGOR OF YOUTH IN A NEW DISCOVERY

Science Produces a Vitalizer Superior to Famous Gland Treatment-Magic Power of a Bark From Africa.

Have you lost your youth, vigor, sep?" Does life seem dull and wo "pep:9" crind? Don't worry. Science has discovered a new vitalizer superior even to the much-discussed "goat-gland" and "monkey-gland" treatment.

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their cloquence, their fiddles, and their fox hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of circual melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Rice. Into one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two most wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy commadeship and the lifelong rivulry of the two famous brothers—a diaclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that attracted the attention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER," the pecries and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Missadoph River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters extending from a President of the United States to a fox hound," the story touches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the around of crackling camp fires and the music of the chase.

Giving.

BY L. D. PERKINS.

" For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life." (John 3: 16.) This is a literal statement and fact

" Honor Jehovah with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase: so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy vats shall overflow with new wine." (Prov. 3: 9, 10.) This is a figurative expression, but shows what God will do for those who honor God with what they have. A rich promise!

"The liberal soul shall be made fat; and be that watereth shall be watered also himself." (Prov. 11; 25.) Another figurative expression to teach what God will do for him who is liberal toward the work of the Lord. Rich, indeed!

"Will a man rob God? vet ve rob me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In titles and offerings. Ye are cursed with the curse; for ye rob me, even this whole nation. Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." (Mal. 3; 8-10.) This is also a figurative expression, but the promises are great. To the Christian who falls to give as he should, God calls him a "robber." It is bad enough to rob any one, even an enemy; but when one robs the One that has created and given him everything, he is about the meanest person that lives. Of course I do not know whether you are a robber or not, but God certainly knows. Did you give more to the picture show last week than you did to God? If so, then you are an awful robber. When you put your contribution in an envelope or write a check, that the one who looks after the financial interest of the church may know what you are doing and have a chance to help you out in the proper knowledge of your account with the Lord, write on the envelope or pin a tag to the check showing how much you gave to the picture show, and what you spent for ice cream, soda water, chewing gum, tobacco, cigars, and all such foolishness that you would be better off without. Balance that against what you are giving to the Lord, and see what kind of an account balance you have with the Lord. Give as you should give, and give Jehovah a chance to open the windows

The reason why lots of people who claim to be children of God are poor in this world's goods is because they treat Jehovah in such a way that he withholds his blessings. It is then their fault, not God's fault.

"Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over, shall they give into your bosom. For with what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again." (Luke 6: 38.) This is a promise of Christ, and is just as sure and steadfast as the state ment, " He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

"The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." (2 Cor. 9: 7.) If we want the Lord to love us, then let us give, and give liberally, and as we are prospered; not grudgingly, but of a ready mind.

Let us give God a chance to bless us.

The Work in New York City.

BY G. W. M'KEE.

The New York church of Christ held its first meeting on the third Lord's day in July, 1920, in the home of Sister J. Johnson, 614 Fisher Avenue. North Bergen, N. J., with ten members present, not including Brother Morgan H. Carter. Since then we have been meeting at 239 West Sixty-ninth Street, New York City, except the month of August. Our membership has been as high as forty, but some have moved away. We encourage all members coming to this city to become members of our congregation. We now have about thirty loyal members. We have not lost any by backsliding, though one (a young lady) left us and weni with the "digressives." We have had two additions by baptism. We have been handicapped by not having an evangelist with us that could stay on the job. Brother Carter was with us five weeks last year; Brother W. S. Long, ten days. This year Brother Long was with us ten days in February; Brother Pearson, from May 22 to August 9; Brother Carter, from June 27 to August 23. These brethren are all good men and splendid workers. Either of them could accomplish something if he could stay on the job; but short stays are almost like wasted time and money. Brother Long has been asked to consider coming and working with the church here, but so far has not given us a definite answer. In case he cannot come, we will want some other good evangelist who is acenstomed to wonking in a large city. one who has faith in God, one who can " walk by faith." Too many of our preachers want to see something before they will move. We need men like J. A. Harding, who, when a young man, with nothing save a wife and two children, went up into the mountains to preach, not knowing or earing what the situation was financially: and being warned that he would not be supported, he pressed forward. trusting in God, and preached two years, not lacking for anything: "for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward."

Opportunity at Ackerman, Miss.

BY H. D. JEFFCOAT.

I have been laboring in this mission field three years. I have been assisted by H. C. Harris, M. C. Cayce, I. B. Bradley, and Andrew Perry. I have never called on the churches for help. But we have one small congregation of thirty members of the best people In a good neighborhood that is ready for help. They need and are going to build a house of worship, and it will be the only house belonging to our brethren within fifty miles of them.

Love For the Truth.

BY W. T. BEASLEY.

Jesus says: "Ye shall know the ruth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 32.) Again: "Thy word is truth." (John 17: 17.)

The Book divine is our only rule of faith and practice. All who believe the Scriptures to be divinely inspired consider them the fountain of religious truth. The Bible contains the revelation of God to man. It is the only true standard of faith and practice. Whatever conforms to this standard is right; any and all deviations from it are wrong. Therefore, a serious, solemn thought should enter the minds of all who occupy places as meachers of the gospel of Christ, remembering that they must give an account of their stewardship in the day of accounts. (2 Cor. 5: 10.) God warns the people under the covenant written on tables of stone (Deut, 4: (3) not to "add unto the words which I command you, neither shall ye diminish aught from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you" (Deut, 1: 2). Paul says: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Gal. 1: 8, 9.) John teaches us what will be the result if we add to or take from the word of God: "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." (Rev. 22: 18, 19.) Paul says that the Scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God unto every good work. (See 2

Tim. 3: 16, 17.) Peter says: "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness." (2 Pet. 1: 3.) The gospel is "the power of God unto salvation." (Rom. 1: 16.)

If all preachers were as careful and particular not to add to nor take from the word of God, or the plan of salvation put forth by Jesus and the apostles, as they are about temporal dealings being gone into and carried out according to law, human figuring and speculating on the plan of salvation and the word of God would soon come to an end; but as long as we are more careful about temporal things, the religious world will be no nearer together. God has magnified his word above all of his name. (Ps. 138: 2.) Balaam said unto the servants of Balak: "If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold. I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God, to do less or more," (Num. 22: 18.)

Our ways are cleansed by the word (Ps. 119; 9); we are quickened by it (verse 50); it is a lamp unto our feet and a light unto our pathway (verses 105, 130); it converts the soul (Ps. 19: 7); we are sanctified by it (John 17: 17); we are drawn to Christ by hearing and learning it (John 6: (4, 45); the truth makes us free (John 8: 32); we are eleansed by it (John 15; 3); we are made believers by it (John 20: 30, 31); faith comes by hearing it (Rom. 10: 17); we are begotten through it (1 Cor. 4: 15); it is able to save our souls (James 1: 21); we are born by it (1 Pet, 1: 23); we are saved by It (1 Cor. 15; 1, 2); our souls are purified by obeying it (1 Pet. 1: 22); it is the gospel of our salvation (Eph. 1: 13); we are called by it (2 Thess, 2: 13-15).

Those that accept the word (the gospel) will be saved; those that reject It will be lost. "For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God; and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God? And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" (1 Pet, 4: 17, 18.) Answer: "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Thess, 1: 7, 8.) Therefore, let us teach or preach nothing but the plain, unvarnished truth-

The Eternal Goodness

I dimly guess from blessings known
Of greater out of sight,
And, with the chastened Psalmist, own
His judgments too are right.

I long for household voices gone,
For vanished smiles I long;
But God hath led my dear ones on,
And he can do no wrong.

I know not what the future hath Of marvel or surprise, Assured alone that life and death His mercy underlies.

And if my heart and flesh are weak
To bear an untried pain,
The bruised reed he will not break,
But strengthen and sustain.

No offering of my own I have, Nor works my faith to prove; I can but give the gifts he gave, And plead his love for love.

And so beside the Silent Sea I wait the muffled oar; No harm from him can come to me On ocean or on shore.

I know not where his islands lift Their fronded palms in air; I only know I cannot drift Beyond his love and care.

O brothers! if my faith is vain, If hopes like these betray, Pray for me that my feet may gain The sure and safer way.

And thou, O Lord, by whom are seen
Thy creatures as they be,
Forgive me if too close I lean
My human heart on thee!

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

CURRENT COMMENT

By A. B. L.

According to their own statement, some people go to church "to hear the pastor preach;" some, "to hear the music;" and some, "to worship God." Since elaborate musical programs have been introduced the number of those who go to hear the music is constantly increasing. It has become a popular fad to the extent that in some quarters the problem of increasing the efficiency is largely a problem of securing more attractive music. The editor of the Christian-Evangelist comments thus upon this tendency:

One of the greatest powers of the Roman Catholic Church to-day is the beautiful music that may be heard at some of its services. It is proposed to follow this up and make it Archbishop Hanna, of San Francisco, has just even better. sent one of his priests to Europe for three years to study church music with the view of improving Catholic churches in that respect on the Pacific Coast. This priest will visit all the great centers in Europe in prosecuting his work. The special object in view is the establishment of a training school for boy choristers. There can be no doubt that music will be much more appreciated in America in the future than it is to-day. It is both deeply religious and highly cultural. There is one power stronger than trained choirs or boy choristers, and that is genuinely fine popular music. Did not Luther largely establish the Reformation by teaching popular hymn singing? A hymn may be greater than a battle. In all our modern church programs music of the right kind should hold a major place.

It seems to me that the place music should occupy in our modern church programs is the same place it occupied in the primitive New Testament church. There we find it was not given a major place, but it held its own place of relative importance. It was neither overemphasized nor depreciated. The writer of the above paragraph is wise in insisting upon music "of the right kind." But what is music of the right kind for the church of the living God? Are we to believe that it is the kind that shall be studied for three years in Europe by a Catholic priest acting upon orders from his archbishop? Here, again, I must insist that the right kind of music is that enjoined upon us in the New Testament, consisting of "psalms and hymns and spiritual songs," and that there be "singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." Certainly Luther did largely establish the Reformation by teaching popular singing; and if I have read church history aright, it was the simple song service after the New Testament pattern that he encouraged. One thing is certain, and that is, he did not ape the Catholics. 5 5 5

B. S. Winchester, a writer in one of our exchanges, gives his impressions of Jesus as a teacher in the following striking paragraph:

Jesus anticipated very nearly all that has since been advocated in educational method and illustrated it in his own teaching; the importance of personality, the grading of pupils, the appeal to interest, the use of the story, the stimulation of observation by the laboratory method, the study and interpretation of facts, the use of questions, the organization of ideas, the development of the power of discrimination toward different values, the enlistment of self-activity, the encouragement of initiative, and the providing of opportunity for motor expression—all these may be found, together with an earnest admonition not to neglect the child, in the teaching of Jesus.

I am especially glad to print this paragraph as an apt answer to those who are disposed to criticize what they term the "old-fogy" and "antiquated" methods of those who advocate the simple New Testament plan of work and worship. In the matter of teaching we have all the latitude that Jesus gives us, and, according to this writer's view (and his points are well taken), this is all the latitude we need to cope with modern conditions and to keep up with modern needs. Those who pronounce the Sunday school an innovation should be made aware of the fact that the catechetical form of teaching and the grouping of classes were employed in Jewish synagogues long before Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea. When he came, he improved these methods in his own way and made them more efficient still. We will never make a mistake by walking in his footsteps to-day.

It may be painful for us to acknowledge the defect, but very few people are capable of writing worth-while poetry. Here it is true, perhaps, more than in any other department of human endeavor, that they are "born, not made." But the fact that we cannot write poetry ourselves should not keep us from enjoying what others have written to the fullest extent. And yet so few people comparatively ever read or pass on to others certain poems that deserve to live and to become warp and woof of our lives. Why should the heart throbs of our gifted brother or sister be wasted? This little preamble leads me to say that I appreciate very much a splendid poem by an unnamed author which was sent to me by Mrs. M. J. Ewin, of Waverly, Tenn., and I pass it on to you:

You ask what is faith? I would answer.
"Tis the proof of the unseen, the far;
And needs not the spell of the starlight
To measure the scope of the star.

It can sense the sweet blush of the morning From the shadowy gloom of the night; It can sweep back the curtains of heaven And bathe in its radiant light.

From the desert of grieving it reaches
To drink from Eternity's spring;
While despair in perplexity's beating
The air with its desolate wing.

'Tis the image that's locked in the marble Before 'tis waked by the hand; 'Tis a temple that gleams in its beauty Before the foundation is planned.

'Tis a prayer entering heaven at twilight,
For it holds in its keeping the key;
'Tis the anchor that holds when the tempest
Drives the soul through a furious sea.

'Tis the trust of a child in a promise
From lips never framed to deceive;
'Tis the feel of the weak for the stronger.
As a vine to a turret will cleave.

'Tis the test of all earthly endeavor,
The surrender of substance to skill;
'Tis the marvel of all that surrounds us,
The truth of Omnipotent Will.

Tis the fullness of Hope: 'tis the spirit
That rises o'er sorrow or loss;
'Tis a dream that comes true in the dreaming.
'Tis a world looking back at a cross.

A correspondent of the Bible Study Record, Mr. Vicente Mendoza, in charge of the Latin-American Mission in Los Angeles, Cal., tells of the answers he received from a Mexican congregation to the question, "Why do I love the Bible?" Some of the answers follow:

1. Because it is the word of God.

2. Recause it helps us to know our Lord Jesus.

3. Because it is a witness to the existence of God.

Because we reached salvation when we believed it.
 Because it is the light of God to take us out of darkness.

Because it brings to us the knowledge of light and truth.

7. Because it teaches us to love each other.

8. Because it makes us know the divinity of Christ.

9. Because the Bible brings to us the hope of heaven.

It is significant that all these answers were given by men and women of the common people who have very little education. It is a striking example of the fact that we have taken a long step toward the enlightenment and salvation of the unenlightened when we give them the Bible and encourage them to read it for themselves. "The wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein."

Is There Room for Compromise?

SY W. T. STERLING.

So much has been written during the last fifty years about instrumental music in worship that it would seem that nothing remains to be said upon the subject; and if it were my purpose to argue the matter either pro or con, I should have a poor excuse for taking up your valuable space.

A new situation, however, has arisen among the churches in Ontario, Canada, which is referred to in Brother Elam's article in the Gospel Advocate of July 14. An attempt is being made to restore unity by means of compromise. Certain resolutions have been submitted to a representative gathering of each group of churches, and a joint committee has been appointed to consider them and to make recommendations to the congregations, which it is hoped may lead to a better understanding and closer fellowship.

Of course it is easy to dismiss the matter by saying that there can be no compromise between truth and error. But which is truth, and which is error? Is the error all on one side? And, if so, does it justify division? These are the vital questions, and we must not waste our time in platitudes.

The dispute over instrumental music has lasted in America for two generations and has done incalculable harm. It is now the opinion of many loyal, conservative disciples that the question is not vital to true Christianity and should never have divided the church. If such is a true statement of the case, it is evident that both sides were wrong and that both should make concessions toward neace.

The path has been blazed for us by the brethren in England along the line of congregational independence. Some of the churches there use the organ, others do not. Some use it in gospel meetings, but not at the breaking of bread, and I am informed that its use or nonuse to any extent is held to be no barrier to brotherly intercourse and cooperation. The "progressive" party, I understand, have given up their missionary society and the use of the title "Reverend." All congregations are represented in one annual meeting which appoints committees to look after home and foreign missions, publications, and other cooperative work. By this method the necessary business is transacted in a simple, orderly, and successful way, and the church stands with a united front to the world.

While division, under some circumstances, undoubtedly is justifiable and necessary, all will agree that any group of Christians who cause or perpetuate it must have some important principle at stake. Otherwise the crime of division may be worse in the sight of God and men than the error over which the division was made.

It is held by one party that the organ is an aid to congregational singing; by the other, that it is a hindrance; by one, that it is a means and aid to worship, improving the beauty and impressiveness of the service; and by the other, that it leads to worldliness and extravagance and tends to make the church a place of entertainment. It is held, one the one hand, that the silence of the New Testament signifies approval, and, on the other, that it means condemnation.

These are all, obviously, questions about which there can be no unanimous, definite decision. They are matters of opinion, which have been and always will be settled by the individual according to his disposition, training, and experence, and should be settled by each congregation in what it believes to be in accordance with the principles of the gospel.

And if the decisions differ, what then? Can the church of Christ ever conquer the earth from pole to pole and expect complete uniformity in worship? Must Eskimos, Hindus, Englishmen, Chinamen, and all varieties of men throughout the ages be brought exactly to our way of understanding the New Testament before they can be saved? If so, and only we "loyal disciples" are right, what a ghastly failure is Christianity! Nineteen centuries have passed, and not more than the hundredth part of one per cent of the human race believe and worship according to our standard.

Many of us on either side appear to have misconceived the religion of Jesus. We have failed to recognize that its virtue consists, not in bare doctrinal correctness, nor in scrupulous observance of ceremonial forms, but in universal and soul-stirring principles of goodness and love. We have striven about words to no profit. Split into factions over petty questions of ways and means and men and methods, we should cover under the lash of the apostle-Paul with the men of Corinth.

"No creed but the Bible! No leader but Jesus! No name but his!" What a clarion call to sects! What an unassailable faith! Shall we continue to make this vantage ground of Christian union a battle field of partles? Shall we continue to preach unity and practice division? We claim to have discovered the common ground upon which all denominations may unite. Can we find no common ground for ourselves?

In the sincere belief that we can, the movement in Ontario has begun. From State to State may it spread until this repreach against disciples of Christ is done away, and having removed the beam from our own eye, may we see clearly to cast out the mote which is in our brother's eye.

The Mormon-Christian War.

[The following is the first of two articles on Mormonism by R. B. Neal, of Grayson, Ky. This one on "The Mormon-Christian War" will be followed by another next week on the question, "Was Sidney Rigdon the Original 'Author and Proprietor' of the Whole Mormon Conspiracy?" Brother Neal is specially and eminently qualified to speak on Mormonism. For about a quarter of a century he has made the most thorough study of the system of any man known to me. I not only ask our readers to give his articles a careful perusal, but I remark for their benefit, and especially for the benefit of the preachers, that the fight against Mormonism, like that against Catholicism, is, in the judgment of well-informed and thoughtful people, a much more serious matter than some suppose it to be. Brother Neal says "Almost daily appeals come to me for aid to battle the ism." These two articles will help to arm one for the fight. Brother Neal has not asked me to solicit contributions to his work against this deceptive system, but of my own accord I gladly state here, from my personal knowledge of the man and his work, that if any of our readers will send a contribution to R. B. Neal, Grayson, Ky., it will be worthily appropriated and used by him in one of the greatest and most important fights of modern times. I hope many will see their way to send a contribution. But read this article and the one next week.—M. C. Kurfees, Editor.]

In front of some of the best polemics Mormondom has, I established the fact that Oliver Cowdery renounced Mormonism, denounced Joseph Smith, and joined the M. P. Church at Tiffin, Ohio. Bear in mind that Cowdery was the very first Latter-Day Saint on earth, Joseph Smith baptized him. He then baptized Joseph. He was the first Saint and Joseph was the second.

The presidency of the Utah wing admitted as facts my contention and offered as a rebuttal that "Oliver Cowdery returned to the church at Council Bluffs, at a convention in 1848." At the time all I could say was: "His return was further proof of his unreliability as a witness to any proposition."

If he saw and heard one-tenth of what he claimed as a Mormon, he could never have joined any other church, especially one that warred against every claim he had made. Again, to return to it after his renunciation and denunciation of it was far worse than a "dog returning to his yomit."

The value of the following document will be appreciated by every anti-Mormon polemic and "clear Cowdery's name from a foul charge." Read it carefully:

CONFESSION OF OLIVER OVERSTREET—THE OVERSTREET LETTER,

I personated Oliver Cowdery at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on the twenty-first day of October, 1848, in a conference at which Brother Orson Hyde presided.

The circumstances need not all be detailed, as the very memory of them has become bitter to me.

The facts are these: Brother R. Miller came to me with an offer from Brother Brigham Young of five hundred dollars, cash in hand, to pose as Oliver Cowdery, the first of the "Three Witnesses" to the "Book of Mormon." He told me there were many Saints who set much store on his (Cowdery's) testimony, who, owing to his apostasy, had become disaffected themselves, and that nothing would reassure these like the conviction that Cowdery had come back and reaffirmed his calling as a Witness to the Holy Priesthood and the "Book of Mormon."

He insisted that I resemble Cowdery so much in form and features, notwithstanding our differences in tone of voice, that I could easily personate him without danger of being caught and exposed, and told me that Brother Brigham regarded such a piece of strategy as exceedingly well warranted as a plan for "milking the Gentiles," who had so wrongfully slain the Prophet Joseph and driven his people from Nauvoo, III. The presence of this money, five hurdred dollars, helped to quell my scruples.

To enable me to know what to say and do, Brother Miller had me read some articles written by Cowdery, and also gave me some voice drill, assuring me that he would make a verbatim record of my remarks, while personating Mr. Cowdery, to be preserved for future use under Brother Brigham Young's direction; and that my part in the matter he was confident would never be known or suspected.

I received the money and carried out the device and allowed my conscience to be fulled to sleep until I found that Brother Brigham Young and the elders were handing out as Mr. Cowdery's words, since his death, what I was bribed to say, in his name, at Council Bluffs, and then my conscience began to trouble me.

This is true. It is a pitiful confession to make. I hope for forgiveness from One higher than man. But my inability to silence my conscience, after years of trial, shows that duty is plain.

I confess the fraud and that I received five hundred dollars for it.

Brother Miller told me that Brother Brigham Young furnished the money. I have no doubt he did. You are at liberty to use this confession in whatever way seems best to you, taking care to not so implicate yourself as to put yourself in any peril of Brother Brigham's vengeance, which I think will never be able to reach me.

OLIVER OVERSTREET.

CERTIFICATE OF CHIROGRAPHY.

We, the undersigned, who are familiar with the handwriting of Oliver Overstreet, from having corresponded with him, state that the above confession (shown to us by its recipient in strict confidence that we will not disclose his identity without first obtaining his permission) is in Mr. Overstreet's own handwriting.

Mr. Overstreet's own handwriting.

Having heard of Mr. Overstreet's death, a few days after he penned the confession given above, we certify to his chirography as well known to us.

Territory of Utah, County of Great Salt Lake.

I, E. S. Smith, Judge of the Probate Court for the county aforesaid, certify that the signers of the above certificate, all three are personally known to me, appeared before me this seventh (7) day of April, A.D. 1857, and severally acknowledged their respective signatures as attached by themselves to the same.

The above documents have been used in debate, both with the tongue and pen, with Mormon polemics.

They know not what to say, and hence say nothing, when compelled to front this charge of unequaled duplicity on the part of their leaders to propagate a system "conceived in sin and born of iniquity" by Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, and Sidney Rigdon.

There is an urgent need for this document. Anti-Mormon polemics need it and will hall it gladly. Let every reader help put it on the wings of the wind by republishing it in every county paper they can.

Two Men-Dives and Lazarus.

BY LOULA M. ADKISSON.

Close by the gate the beggar sits;
His pleading eyes scan each face.
His starved heart craves one tender look,
One kindly word, one deed of grace.

In his eyes come the struggling tears,
As he doth watch the passers-by—
So few are kind—so many Carelessly view him with sorrowful eye.

Approaches one of lordly mien, Unmindful of the beggar there. "Unworthy he one look of mine," Doth the lordly one declare.

No thought of pity stirs the heart On self's own pleasure bent; No chord of sympathy awakes— His mind's on earthly things intent.

"The beggar seeks the crumbs that fall From my table," mutters he. "I've no time nor thought to waste, No place for useless sympathy."

Changes the scene to other spheres. One clad in kingly robes we see; Reclining on the patriarch's breast Rests the King's child happily.

But hark! the patriarch's ear is bent, A cry comes o'er the chasm far: "O let him come to me, I pray, Or send him where my brothers are."

Surely a wave of pity surged
Through that new-made angel's heart
As the patriarch answered back:
"He can to you no aid impart."

Sometime, somewhere—O, this we know—Shall the righteous find his own.

Meted to the sinner, mercy.

As the mercy he hath shown.

In Gold We Trust.

In the early fifties a most unusual thing happened in San Francisco. A large issue of gold coins came from the United States mint with the legend, "In gold we trust," rather than with the conventional one, "In God we trust." The introduction of the letter "1" raised such consternation that the issue had to be remelted and restamped, There are a few sticklers who believe that the cause of religion would break up into small fragments if we did not have the name of God on our coins, whereas in the present state of the world it is more of an insult to God to have the holy name there than it is an honor. We are glad to admit that some coins are used to honor God, but it is one coin in about twenty. A generous estimate that, The truth is, the man who was responsible for the typographical error on the gold coins in San Francisco was a great deal nearer the truth than the man who put the conventional inscription on them. As a nation, we are trusting in gold rather than God. We are spending our money for that which is not bread.-Pacific Methodist Advocate.

Observations.
BY "A SCHOOL-TEACHER."

It is an evident fact that among our preaching brethren ve have many excellent preachers of the gospel, yet it is Iso a lamentable fact that too few of them have proven hemselves to be good teachers. Recently I had a peculiar xperience that made me think more seriously about the ubject of teaching. As a young man, I was fortunate in aving the opportunity of studying the Bible under an exellent teacher, and I learned many of the more simple hings of the gospel. A few weeks ago I met with a conregation, and the Bible class asked me to take charge. I rst asked about the lesson; and when one of the brethren old me a certain chapter, I asked how many had read the esson. One brother seemed to think he had. We found ome Testaments and read the chapter, each one reading a erse. When the chapter had been read, that seemed to be ll that was expected. The people were strangers to me; ut I expected to meet with them regularly, so I asked hem to take the same chapter and read only the first half or the next lesson, since it was a long chapter.

When we met again, I took my Bible and asked them to ead with me in their books as I read the lesson. Then I sked them to close their books and tell me something we ad read in those seventeen verses. I asked each one separately, and not a one of those grown men, most of them eads of families, could tell me a single thing we had read. I seventh-grade or eighth-grade class in school could take selection about something of which they had never heard and make a better recitation. But I made some inquiries, and learned that they were not in the habit of reading their Bibles, and few, If any, of them owned a concordance Bible. Tet this congregation has an excellent preacher.

Brethren, preaching brethren, if I were a preacher of the cospel, I would be ashamed for any one to find the condiions just described in one of my congregations. Chrisian men and women need more teaching and less preachng. If you teach a man properly, he will be inspired to o some of the things he is taught; but if you preach to im, he says he is paying you for it, and you ought to give he other fellow the skinning-and too often you do it. We ced more teachers, men who will take their congregation s a teacher does his school and teach them systematically nd thoroughly. "For whatsoever things were written foretime were written for our learning, that we through atience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope." gain: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workgan that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." In that oft-told story of Philip and the unuch one passage usually only lightly touched might be onsidered with profit: "And Philip said, Understandest hou what thou readest? And he said, How can I, except ome man should guide me?"

Christmas Stories and Legends.

The above is the title of a new book for children, which was compiled by Phebe A. Curtiss, author of "White Gifts or the King." No greater teaching force has ever been discovered than the story, and no one has ever lived who used that force so skillfully as did our Great Teacher. It is not strange, then, that among all the stories that have ver been written or told, none are so dear to us as those which center around his birth. Young and old alike desight in them and never tire of hearing them. Each story in the new book has its own sweet lesson. It makes an acceptionally pleasing gift for the children. The price is 1.25, postpaid. Order from the McQuiddy Printing Comany, Nashville, Tenn.

The Home of the Soul.

BY R. G. VAUGHAN.

While treading up this earthly plain, Engrossed in cares of a life below, Mysteries we find hard to explain, Of realms unseen where the soul may go.

Beyond this life's setting sun we may not go, Tho' at times we deeply feel That something is there hid in its glow Which to our souls it could reveal.

So I sometimes dream of a happier lot, Far removed from this life's care, Where the struggles for wealth are soon forgot In sunny realms more bright and fair;

And visions bright of a heavenly clime, Where fragrance sweet perfumes the air; Where the friends I knew in Auld Lang Syne Stand robed in white to meet me there.

Then my soul in dreams—moving to and fro, Up and down the stream of time— Wonders much if even this life below Will become a heavenly clime,

As it was in the days of Eden old,
Before Adam fell from grace,
When the Spirit of God did man control,
And reflected from his face.

In the garden of Eden we dimly trace, In the shadows that about it glow. A glimpse of heaven, a happy place, Where the river of life did smoothly flow.

Here nature's beauties did once unfold, And the tenor of life went its even way; Here God communed with the human soul, And the human soul did him obey.

You will say I dream—as dream I may— But dreams often facts to us disclose. For life is a dream from childhood's day, Till round us Age his mantle throws.

Yes, we dream while here and build castles of air, And lay up our treasures of gold; And at church we sing of a home over there, Where all of life's beauties unfold.

But if we would live as Enoch did,
And walk with God along life's way.
The home of the soul would not be hid,
But about us shed its brightest ray.

As above the fiesh rise noble souls,
To heights above our earth and sky,
And as the spirit in them unfolds
They feel God's presence ever nigh.

But this we know, if we cannot see, Beyond the borders of the soul A happy home awaits all that be Members of our Savior's fold.

To a life like his let us all aspire,
And from fleshly sins our souls set free.
Let's climb to the hilltops and never tire,
Until that bright home we plainly see.

Consistency.

BY W. L. OLIPHANT.

"Consistency, thou art a jewel!" Consistency is, indeed, a jewel of great worth. If we could all think and act consistently in religious matters, a great deal of trouble could be avoided and the cause of our blessed Master would progress more rapidly. Inconsistency upon the part of the thinkers in the religious world is one of the greatest causes of the divided state of so-called "Christendom." Inconsistency is the cause of infidelity. Infidels refuse to believe the Bible because there are some things about it they are unable to understand; yet there are thousands of things in nature which they believe, and yet are forced to admit that they do not understand. On the other hand, infidels believe hundreds of things which are dependent for substantiation upon the very same kind of evidence that Christianity rests upon. Then, is their position consistent?

Why not try Christianity by the same rules they use to measure other things? Is it consistent to refuse to do so?

When we come to the denominational world, we find the marks of inconsistency very much in evidence. The Baptists are willing to freely admit that Methodists are saved people, that they are in the kingdom of Christ and will finally go to heaven; yet when they go to eat the Lord's Supper, the Methodists are forbidden to eat with them. Is this consistency? If a man is good enough to go to heaven, is he not good enough to eat with me at the Lord's table? Again, Baptists say that baptism is a nonessential, and that folks can go to heaven without it; yet you cannot get into the Baptist Church without being baptized. They say that folks cannot be saved without believing the word of the Lord; but we can be saved without believing Baptist doctrine. After making these admissions, they still contend that Baptist doctrine is the word of the Lord. "Consistency, thou art a jewel!"

The Methodists contend tenaciously for their doctrine of "salvation by faith only" in the face of a plain statement of inspiration which says salvation is "not by faith only." (James 2: 24.) Yet, after making the contention that salvation is by faith only, they, still admonish the sinner to pray, repent of his sins, confess his sins, etc., so that the Lord will save him. Is this consistent?

The Lutherans claim to be the oldest and strongest opponents of Catholicism, and still they hold to some of the very principles upon which the Catholic Church rests. In the catechism of the Danish Lutheran Church, under the heading "Confession," I find this language: "Confession embraces two parts: one, that we confess our faults to God; the other, that we receive absolution or forgiveness from the pastor as from God himself, and in no wise doubt, but firmly believe that through him our sins are forgiven in heaven." (Page 32.) And yet Lutherans condemn Catholics for believing in the infallibility of the pope. Where is the consistency of such a procedure? Again, Lutherans practice sprinkling and pouring for baptism, and also infant sprinkling, which have no higher authority than the pope of Rome. The fifteenth and sixteenth years of my life were spent in a Lutheran high school. Although just a boy and very much limited in Bible knowledge, I repeatedly challenged their strongest preachers to defend these unscriptural practices, but all to no avail. I was even forced to quit attacking their doctrines in class or quit school. When a debate was mentioned, they were quick to inform me that it is very wrong to debate. At the same time, they continually held up before us Martin Luther as a man whose life was worthy of imitation. But Luther was a man who contended earnestly for what he believed to be the truth, even against the pope himself.

I might go on and mention the inconsistencies of practically every denomination in Christendom. But suffice it to say that at one point, at least, they are all inconsistent. They all claim to believe in Christian unity, and they say they are willing to sacrifice opinions for the sake of unity, They all admit that the name "Christian" is a suitable title for God's children. All say it is a scriptural title. No religious person will object to being called a Christian. All admit that their human titles are not essential to salvation. But after making all these admissions, they will still hold to their unscriptural, human titles, and thus prevent the very thing they say they want-unity. Inconsistency! Martin Luther said: "Cease, my dear friends, to call yourselves 'Lutherans,' and call yourselves 'Christians,' after Christ, from whom our doctrine comes." ("Life of Luther," by Michaelat, page 272.) Yet those who claim to be following him will persist in doing the very thing he asked them to not do. John Wesley said: "I would to God that all party names and unscriptural phrases that are dividing God's people were forgotten," And still his followers hold to their "party name."

Why will the religious world not accept the "safetyfirst" plan, lay down all human names, accept the divine name, "Christian," and thus show that their practice is consistent with their contention for unity?

Brethren, it is easy enough to see these inconsistencies in other folks; but do we find any of them among our own folks? Yea, "of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." It seems to me that many of our folks are inconsistent in their positions. I myself may be inconsistent. I would to God that I could judge as to the reasonableness or unreasonableness of a position which I hold as accurately as I can with the other fellow's position. There is only one way to keep away from inconsistency, and that is to study a question from every angle before reaching a conclusion about the matter.

There was a time when I would have contended bitterly against the use of what is known as the "individual communion set." My sole argument was that the Savior said "cup" (in the singular); hence, the communion set is unscriptural. At the same time I worshiped with congregations which used two or three cups or glasses to pass the "fruit of the vine," and saw nothing unscriptural about it Was I consistent? At that time I would have strenuously opposed passing a hat or basket to take up the Lord's-day contribution. We walked to the front of the house and laid our money on the table. But the same passage of scripture that tells brethren to lay their contributions on the table also tells them to pass the basket. The fact is, we are told to contribute of our means; but as to whether one shall put his contribution into a basket, lay it on the table, hand it directly to the treasurer, or use any other specific method, the Bible is as silent as the grave. I used to think the term "Sunday school" very much "un sound." At the same time, I used frequently such expres sions as "Sunday service" and "Sunday worship." One of these expressions can be found in the Book just as easily

Some brethren oppose the use of "literature" in teaching God's word; and yet those same brethren will print hundreds of pieces of "literature" to oppose "literature" with Brethren, is it not a fact that the truth makes men free! (See John 8: 32.) Will the truth not make men free whether written or spoken? Then why not oppose literature because its teaching is not truth (if such be the case) and quit fighting literature because it is "literature?" Is it consistent for me to fight a piece of literature which teaches the very principles which I believe and practice simply because it is "literature?"

Some brethren oppose establishing schools for the pur pose of teaching the Bible and other legitimate studies yet these same brethren will establish papers for exactly the same purpose. O, Consistency, where art thou? No long since I was with a congregation that is opposed to Bible schools and systematic methods of studying God's word on Lord's day. Should I have attempted to teach the simple story of Jesus to these brethren's children by means of little cards with pictures on them, I would have been branded as "disloyal." But quite a number of these chil dren attended the Baptist and Methodist Sunday schools and were taught their doctrines by means of cards and other literature. Then these parents wondered why their children failed to become Christians, and why some of then even joined the Methodist Church or the Baptist Church Inconsistency!

It is so easy to be inconsistent. So often do we see breth ren condemning other brethren for practicing things which are exactly like the things they themselves are practicing. But remember, brethren, when we hinder the progress of New Testament Christianity by being inconsistent over even the smallest question, it becomes a serious matter and one we shall have to face in the great judgment day.

Heaven.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

Heaven is spacious. Just how spacious I do not know, but I cannot think of the New Jerusalem as having metes and bounds as we conceive limitation. Jesus said: "In my Father's house are many mansions." John, in Revelation, employs terms that convey the idea that the holy city is of immense dimensions. The temple had many courts and corridors and porches and apartments to accommodate the multitudes of worshipers. Besides those who came with sacrifices, there were troops of children and the halt and blind that thronged the temple and its courts. It was a commodious structure. The redeemed of all the ages—"as the stars of heaven for multitude and the sand on the seashore innumerable"—will throng heaven, and yet it will not be crowded.

Heaven is full of variety. "Many mansions" indicate variety as well as spaciousness. Heaven must needs be a place of infinite variety to afford perfect joy and bliss to souls of various capacities. There will be throngs of children in heaven and multitudes of saints grown into the likeness of Jesus through long service on earth. There will be those whose opportunities for studying God's word were limited, and those, like the lamented Lipscomb, who meditated upon the divine revelation through a long life. But heaven is adapted to souls of small capacity and to souls of great capacity. It lacks in nothing. Think of a tree that bears twelve manner of fruits, a different variety for each of the twelve months! The tree of life is represented to be such. This tree, yielding its fruit every month and whose leaves are for the healing of the nations, conveys to our physical senses but a faint idea of the marvelous variety of the paradise of God.

Heaven is home. One of the distinctive characteristics of the Anglo-Saxon race is love for home. They have ever been home builders. The English might not have established their supremacy in America over the French, Spanish, and Dutch had they not possessed this dominant trait. And Americans to-day, after three centuries of settled abode on this continent, love their homes as no other people on earth. It is this love of home that makes America great. I cannot explain the magic power of the mere word upon the American heart. An incident in our Civil War illustrates it perhaps but feebly. I give the narrative here.

In the spring of 1863 the Army of the Potomac and the Army of Northern Virginia were encamped upon either side of the Rappahannock River. As twilight fell the bands on the Union side began to play "The Star-spangled Banner" and "Rally Round the Flag." The challenge was taken up on the Confederate side, the Southern bands responding with "The Bonny Blue Flag" and "Away Down South in Dixie." It was born in the soul of a single soldier in one of these bands of music to begin a sweeter, more tender air, and slowly, as he played it, all the instruments upon the Union side joined in, until finally a great and mighty chorus swelled up and down the army-"Home, Sweet Home!" When they had finished, there was no challenge from the Confederate side; for every band upon that shore also had taken up the lovely air, and one chorus of the two great hosts paid tribute to the American home. Then, before the sweet echoes of music had died among the Virginia hills, blue and gray joined in applauding with long-continued theers, thus showing that, though enemies in war, they were one in love of home.

But Americans, as such, cannot love home as Christians love heaven. Heaven means vastly more to the Christian pligrim than an earthly home can mean to merely an earth dweller, or a human being that cherishes no Christian hope. The Christian is peculiarly a "man without a country" From his call in Ur of the Chaldees, Abraham was a pligrim, a man without a country; and when he pitched his tent in Canaan, it was as a foreigner, for God "gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on." So with the patriarchs after Abraham. Christians are children of Abraham by faith, and, like Abraham, they look for the "city which hath the foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Like the patriarchs, "we have here no abiding city, but we seek one which is to come." Our citizenship is in heaven, and our hope enters into that which is within the veil. The Christian's sweetest dream is of heaven, and he wakes with a longing for the realization of his dream, "For verily in this [tabernacle] we groan, longing to be clothed upon with our habitation which is from heaven." (2 Cor. 5: 2.)

The charm of home does not consist merely in building and location. There are greater factors than these, "Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home." The poor fisherman on the Maine coast braves the dangers of the ocean for his home on the ledge. The mean fish cabin of weather-beaten boards and thatch is home, and, as such, calls for sacrifice, toil, and hazard. The fisherman's life associates are there in that shanty-all that are nearest and dearest to his heart-wife and child. Home consists in the companiorship of kindred spirits. So with heaven. Its society consists of the spirits of just men made perfectthe redeemed of every age, the kindred spirits of earth, the children of God. But its peculiar charm will be the Lord's presence. The redeemed host shall long to meet their Savior first of all. "That where I am, there ye may be also." Even so. On earth the beloved John, the bosom friend of Jesus, found a charm in him that is lacking in mankind. In the departure of Jesus of Nazareth the earth lost its greatest Personality, and heaven regained its chief charm, the Lamb of God, whose mission to earth was to redeem the lost. "When he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." It is enough for us to know that heaven will be in accord with the nature and character of Jesus.

Heaven is inherited. "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." "I go to prepare a place for you." Heaven is prepared for those who prepare for heaven. The wicked and incorrigible do not prepare for heaven and would be out of place in its society. They would prefer annihilation to heaven. Like Judas Iscariot, every one must go to his own place—to the place he has prepared himself for. Dives went to Hades and torments because he had pursued such a course in his lifetime that made it impossible for him to go to "Abraham's bosom," as did Lazarus. Dives realized also that his five brothers were coming to his evil lot because they were preparing themselves, as he had done, for this place. Every man is the architect of his own destiny. It was not by chance that Enoch was translated; he had walked with God. We must get acquainted with God here to be admitted into his presence in heaven. Death ends our period of preparation; for as death finds us, so must the judgment.

"As a tree falls, so must it lie;
As a man lives, so must he die;
As a man dies, so must he be
All through the ages of eternity."

"Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to render to each man according as his work shall be." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

Fruitage of Secret Prayer.

But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly. For your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.—Matt. 6: 6-8.

The Relation of Faith and Obedience.

BY K. C. MOSER.

The two words in the Greek from which we generally have the word "obey," are "peithoo" and "hupakouoo." The Greek for "faith" is "pistis" and for "believe" is "pisteuoo"—the former, the noun form; the latter, the verb form. Let us now study these groups of words to see whether they are related.

Before giving the meaning of "pelthoo," which he says means "to obey," Thayer says: "From a root meaning 'to bind;' allied with 'pistis,'"—which, you remember, is the word for faith. So, according to Thayer, the highest lexical authority, the word translated "to obey" and "faith" are allied. When, therefore, eternal life is said to be the result of faith, obedience also is implied.

Thayer further defines "peithoo" "to persuade—that is, to induce one by words to believe." He gives Acts 19: 26 as an example. Demetrius, a maker of images, and whose trade was endangered by Paul's contention that there was but one God, accused Paul thus: "And ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods, that are made with hands." The word "persuaded" is from "peithoo," translated in other places "to obey." Demetrius understood the connection between persuading the people to believe that there were no gods but one and their rejection of idols and the acceptance of the true God. To be persuaded of the true God is both to believe and obey him.

Further along Thayer defines "peitheo" "to listen to. obey, yield to, comply with." I give only two passages as illustrations. "But unto them that are factious, and obey not the truth, but obey unrighteousness, shall be wrath and indignation." (Rom. 2: 8.) "O foolish Galatians, who bath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?" (Gal. 3: 1.) In each passage the word translated "obey" is "peithoo." Now, it is seen from these definitions that the word "peithoo" is sometimes translated "to believe" and sometimes "to obey." I conclude, therefore, that either definition implies the other. If so, then one cannot scripturally believe without obedience, any more than he can obey without faith. "Thou seest that faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect."

Now, the Greek word for "believe" is "pisteuoo." After giving such definitions as "to think to be true, to be persuaded of," etc., Thayer says: "Used especially of the faith by which a man embraces Jesus; a conviction full of joyful trust that Jesus is the Messiah, the divinely appointed author of eternal salvation in the kingdom of God, conjoined with obedience." What could be plainer than that faith and obedience are conjoined, and, therefore, not to be separated? Since faith that saves is conjoined with obedience, what becomes of the doctrine of faith-alone salvation? Faith alone is no faith at all, scripturally. Thayer's definition is in perfect harmony with Paul's statement in Gal. 5: 6: "For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith working through love."

Thayer defines the phrase "believeth on him," found in John 3: 16 and other places, and upon which belief eternal life is predicated: "In faith to give one's self up to Jesus." But "giving one's self up to Jesus." implies obedience.

I shall now let Thayer define "pistis," the word for "faith:" "In the New Testament, a conviction or belief respecting man's relationship to God and divine things, generally with the included idea of trust and holy fervor, born of faith and conjoined with it." Note that faith is here said to be conjoined with "holy fervor." This lacks everything of being faith alone. Again, Thayer says: "Since faith is a power that seizes upon the soul, one who yields to it is said to obey the falth." In Acts 6: 7 it is said: "A great company of priests became obedient to the faith." And in Rom. 1: 5 Paul asserts that he received grace and apostleship "unto obedience of faith." God has certainly joined faith and obedience, and who dares to separate what God has joined?

I have only one more word to consider—"hupakouoo," the other word translated "to obey," Now, is it, like "peithoo," the other word translated "to obey," also related in an essential way to the word for "faith?" That it is, is seen from Rom. 10: 16: "But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report?" How was it known that the gospel had not been obeyed? The answer: "Lord, who hath believed?" Therefore, to believe implies obedience.

To set the matier at rest, so far as the meaning of these words is concerned, let us study their use in the Bible Space forbids but one example. "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life; but he that believeth not the Son shall not see life." (John 3: 36.) Now, the word translated "believeth" is "pisteucon," and the word translated "obeyeth not" is "apeithoon." These are the words I have been examining. It is seen that the words "obeyeth not are the exact opposite of "believeth." Leaving off the negative "not," I have "believeth" and "obeyeth" meaning the same thing. Therefore, to believe is to obey. By comparison of the Authorized Version with the Revised Version, it is seen that where the Authorized Version has "be lieveth not." This shows that the translators regarded the expressions identical.

From these sources it is seen that saving faith include obedience, and that, therefore, the doctrine of salvation by "faith alone" is without foundation, and, hence, not so "full of comfort," after all.

Berries From My Bush.

BY F. J. BERRY.

The subject of preachers and preaching has been as thoroughly discussed that it seems unlikely that more can be said which will benefit the people, unless it may be to discuss it from a different angle than that usually considered.

Preaching is necessary to the salvation of the people The Lord has so ordained. (1 Cor. 1: 21.)

God has always called and sent his preachers; and more he invariably qualifies those sent. Moses and Aaron wer qualified for the work Jehovah assigned to them. They con firmed their words by miracles. The apostles preached th gospel, and confirmed their words with signs. (Mark 16 16-20.)

I can remember when the sectarians criticized our folk adversely, for not believing in "called-and-sent" preachers. Their idea of a "called-and-sent" preacher was: An illiter ate man "came through" at the "mourners' bench," and while moping around he related that he heard some won derful sound or saw some strange sight, and was thereby called to preach. I heard of the man who related that he saw one night the letters "G. P. C." in the heaven, which under his interpretation, meant "go preach Christ." Som one suggested to him that possibly it meant for him t "go plow cotton."

It is not necessary to discuss these so-called "calls" to the ministry, for those who are sufficiently educated to read this do not believe in such "calls."

The demand at present by churches in many places is for preachers who are not strong as preachers of the gospel. Not long since I received an advertisement for a preacher, as follows: "He must be not less than thirty-seven years of age, married, a good singer, and a good mixer." Not one word was said about his ability to preach the gospel.

It seems that the time is not far distant when the preacher most in demand will be the one who can baptize the greatest number of people, regardless of his ability to teach the truth or defend the truth against the teaching and charges of sectarian preachers. Brethren, if you want little flowery talks of about twenty minutes, with the necessary elements of the gospel lacking, do not send for me. I must preach the gospel. The Lord so commands.

One Loar.

BY HARVEY SCOTT.

Brother Nichol: I think the following from the Millennial Harbinger is worthy of a reading by many this day, and for that reason I ask that you publish it in the Gospel Advocate:

ON THE LORD'S TABLE THERE IS OF NECESSITY BUT ONE LOAF.

The necessity is not that of a positive law enjoining one loaf, and only one, as the ritual of Moses enjoined twelve loaves; but it is a necessity arising from the meaning of the institution as explained by the apostle. As there is but one literal body and but one mystical or figurative body, having many members, so there must be but one loaf. The apostle insists upon this. (1 Cor. 10: 17.) "Because there is one loaf, we, the many, are one body; for we are all par-takers of that one loaf." The Greek word "artos," especially when joined with words of number, says Dr. Macknight, always signifies a loaf, and is so translated in our Bible. (Matt. 16: 9.) "Do you not remember the five loaves?" There are many instances of the same sort. Dr. loaves?" There are many instances of the same sort. Dr. Campbell says "that in the plural number it ought always to be rendered loaves;" but when there is a numeral before it, it indispensably must be rendered loaf or loaves. we say one loaf, seven loaves; not one bread, seven breads. "Because there is one loaf," says Paul, we must consider the whole congregation as one body. Here the apostle reasons from what is more plain to what is less plain; from what was established to what was not so fully established in the minds of the Corinthians. There was no dispute about the one loaf; therefore, there ought to be none about This mode of reasoning makes it as certain the one body. This mode of reasoning makes it as certain as a positive law; because that which an apostle reasons from must be an established fact, or an established princi-To have argued from an assumption or a contingency to establish the unity of the body of Christ would have been ridiculous in a logician, and how unworthy of an apostle! It was, then, an established institution that there is but one loaf, inasmuch as the apostle establishes his argument by a reference to it as an established fact. Then, brethren, on the Lord's table there is of necessity but one loaf.

Personal Notes.

- D. S. Ligon baptized seven in a meeting in Booneville, Ark.
- J. S. Daugherty baptized four in a meeting in Cravens, Louisiana.
- J. T. Bentley baptized eleven in a meeting in Lorenzo, Texas; five restorations.
- Lee Warren has changed his address from Wills Point, Texas, to Wetumka, Okla.
- C. J. Roberson had baptized seven at last report in a meeting in Telephone, Texas.
- M. H. Moore closed in Riverside addition to Fort Worth, Texas, with twenty additions.
- John M. Rice baptized fifteen in a meeting in Ragtown, Texas. Five were reclaimed.
- C. B. Glasgow reports the work prosperous in and around Anson, Texas, where he labors.
- The meeting in Wewoka, Okla., conducted by Foy E. Wallace, Jr., resulted in six baptisms.

- W. E. Morgan baptized pine in a meeting at Lone Pine, and five in a meeting near Rule, Texas.
- J. E. Wainwright baptized a number in his work in Sinton, Texas, and the outlook for the work there is bright.
- J. T. Bentley baptized three in a meeting in Indiahoma, Okla. There is much opposition in that place to the truth, but it gains.
- T. W. Phillips closed in Nashville, Ark., with twenty-three baptisms and two additions by commendation to the congregation there.
- Ira Wommack closed a week's meeting at Oak Grove Schoolhouse, north of Sulphur, Okla., with three baptisms, one from the Baptists. Rural Hartsell was with him.
- R. F. Whitaker, of Tipton, Okla., recently held a meeting at Nickell Schoolhouse, four and one-half miles northwest from Alvord, Wise County, Texas. Ten were baptized and one was restored.

The congregation in North Side, Fort Worth, Texas, for which Ben West ministers, continues to grow. In the past week there were two additions to the congregation, one baptism. In the Bible classes there are two hundred and twenty-six.

J. Kearby Bentley has recently conducted a meeting in Doans, Texas, which was supported by the church at Fargo, Texas. In the meeting there were six baptisms. The meeting near Lubbock, conducted by Brother Bentley, resulted in fourteen bartisms.

The church in Fargo, Texas, has supported two mission meetings this year in addition to the meeting at home. Other congregations should take notice. I have a call for four mission meetings next spring. Am I to hold each of them at my own expense?

C. A. Buchanan, evangelist under direction of the church in Cleburne, Texas, closed a meeting in Saginaw, Texas, with three baptisms and a congregation meeting there regularly. The North Fort Worth congregation will assist this new congregation in its development.

C. M. McClung reports that the work with the Glenwood congregation, Fort Worth, continues to be filled with zeal and good works. Soon they will have to build a larger house or "swarm." As I recall, they "swarmed" not more than two years ago. Workers are they.

W. P. Skaggs baptized three in a meeting with the church in Chalk, Texas. One restored. Of those baptized, one was from the Methodists and one from the Presbyterians. Brother Alphin directed the song service and assisted in the meeting, and is commended by Brother Skaggs.

C. R. Nichol was recently in a debate near Lebanon, Mo. The debate was to have been with Mr. C. H. Cayce, Primitive Baptist; but for some reason Mr. Cayce did not come, and the Baptists substituted a Mr. Coons. The debate lasted one day only, the Baptists being unwilling to continue the debate with Mr. Coons to represent them.

J. W. Chism reports Sister Chism so improved that they feel that she is well. We rejoice with him. The meeting in Colorado, Texas, in which Brother Chism was the preacher, resulted in fourteen additions to the congregation, eleven of the number by baptism. Brother Chism will be with the church there in another meeting next year. In the meeting at West Mountain, near Gladewater, Brother Chism baptized fourteen.

From C. L. Dryden, Tahlequah, Okla.: "J. B. Nelson, of Dallas, Texas, recently closed a ten-days' tent meeting at this place, with a large attendance and very good attention. There was one addition, and four from other places put in their membership. A congregation of forty loyal members was established. Brother Nelson and his singer, Brother Hall, from Ada, Okla., have promised to return here another year for another meeting."

From J. S. Daugherty, Kirbyville, Texas, October 3: "I set in order a small congregation and a Bible school at Wiergate, in Newton County, yesterday. I preached three nights at Vanpelt's Schoolhouse, three miles west of Kirbyville, baptizing a splendid husband and wife and setting in order a corgregation of five to keep house for the Lord. I am to begin a debate with a 'Postolic at Honey Island, Hardin County, on October 4, and follow the debate immediately with a meeting."

From Horace W. Busby, Fort Worth, Texas, October 3: "The Mineral Wells meeting closed last Friday night, with ten additions at the last service, making more than fifty during the meeting. The church is growing, and all have a mind to do greater things in the future. Tom Walker will probably labor with the congregation another year, J. B. Nelson has done a good work in Mineral Wells, and all love him for his work's sake. I began with the Central Church, this city, yesterday, with bright prospects for a fine meeting."

Echoes From the Peace and Unity Number

Everybody seems pleased with the special-number idea. I believe it would be well at some future time to have a committee select articles that would cover a wide range of practical subjects and publish them in a book. I am persuaded that our brethren are falling far behind the religious world in the publication and circulation of religious literature. Few among our best writers are leaving upon record books for the edification of those who shall live after us. The list of good books edited by our brethren is exceedingly small. I have hoped for some time that the Gospel Advocate would take the matter up with our abler brethren and urge upon them the importance of leaving a heritage in the way of good books to the generations who shall follow.—John D. Evans, Denver, Col.

I have been reading the Gospel Advocate for a number of years, also personally acquainted with all the editors since I came into the church about thirty years ago, and would not say one thing that would detract from their splendid work; but I must confess that, as I see it, the last number of the Advocate (September 29) had more timely articles in it than I remember of ever seeing before. The articles of A. B. Lipscomb, F. W. Smith, and T. W. Phillips were especially fine. I hope and pray that the preaching brethren or would-be leaders in the church will follow Brother Smith's advice and begin the work on themselves of cleaning up at home before they try it on some one else. With my experience in the West the past five years, I could tell that Brother Phillips is a Western man, by the tone of his article. At some places in the West they measure a man's orthodoxy by the paper he takes and not by the Bible at all. By all means, let us have some more "peace" numbers. Yes, I agree with Brother Lipscomb that a man that will encourage a scandalmonger by listening to him is as guilty of sin before God as the man that peddles the scandal. The divided condition of the church to-day is the direct result of this evil. I believe, as good Brother David Lipscomb expressed it, that it is a slander on the brute creation to say they are lower in the scale of degradation than some men I have met, who claim to be members of the church. The meat and drink of some is to see which one among them can find the most flaws in the other fellow. Solomon says there are six things the Lord hates, and the seventh is an abomination to him; and the seventh is the man that sows discord among brethren. In my humble opinion, the greatest crime a man can commit to-day against God is to divide the church; still, men do that every day without their consciences troubling them at all. The soldier that pierced the Master's side is an amateur, or Judas Iscariot, who betrayed the Master with a kiss, is a gentleman, compared with such a character .- J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla.

I have just read Brother F. W. Smith's article in the special "Peace and Unity" Number of the Gospel Advocate. He draws an exceedingly dark picture in reference to the conduct of himself and other preachers. I have known for a long time that preachers, generally, were little better, if any, than other people. They are all human beings, and, perhaps, as liable to do wrong as any to whom said: "I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air: but I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." (1 Cor. 9: 26, 27.) Certainly preachers, as well as all others, should learn to bridle their tongues and control their pens, and not permit themselves to engage in saying and writing things that produce allenation, strife, and contention. We know that James (4: 11, 12) says: "Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but If thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge. There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another?" Jesus said: "Judge not, that ye be not judged." (Matt. 7: 1.) Now, I understand that this statement does not preclude passing a judgment. For Jesus said: "Judge not according to appearance, but judge righteous judgment." (John 7: 24.) It is true that sometimes preachers have formulated in their minds certain ideas and thoughts upon untaught questions, or upon the acts of others, apparently to them out of harmony with what they regard as being right, and pass judgment without law, except the law is formulated in their own minds. They thus become judges of the law instead of doers of the law. They have failed to pass righteous judgment, and they will be judged; and hence crimination and recrimination ensues, which grows from bad to worse. If Brother Smith's statements are true, the preaching fraternity is in a woeful condition. I now think we should have a special number on "Repentance," in which it should be the purpose to convince those who have been guilty of saying and writing the things which Brother Smith calls "unholy, ungodly, and wicked," causing strifes, envylngs, and contentions, that they are on the road that leads to perdition. Paul says: "I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple." (Rom. 16: 17, 18.) Had we all not better clean up the slate, forget the things already past which cannot now be changed, and, with Paul, "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus?" Now, if all of us would become as sick of the existing conditions as set forth by Brother Smith as he professes himself to be, it certainly would lead to a genuine repentance and a renewal of brotherly love upon the part of those who have become estranged in consequence of hard speeches and unnecessary and Ill-advised criticisms some have used toward each other.-James E. Scobey, Nashville, Tenn.

they preach. As good and as self-sacrificing a man as Paul

The Inner Chamber.

I cannot choose my surroundings, but I can choose my thoughts. I cannot hinder evil entering my mind, but I need not, unless I like, bid it welcome and ask it to stay. I can get rid of it best, not by direct attack, but by what soldiers call a flank movement. To face the evil thoughts in your own mind, and try to think them away, is, in most cases, to make the trouble worse by concentrating attention upon it. The better way is Paul's—whatsoever things are true, pure, lovely, and of good report, think on these things. The good will expel the evil. Beyond our speech, our secret cherished thoughts speak for us. Beyond our profession, they declare what we are. If beyond our poor speech and imperfect discipleship we want our lives to speak for Christ, we must love him and worship him, and cleave to him, just in our inmost hearts.—Archibald Alexander.

History indicates that the few always lead the many.— James Bryce.

Mother.

A host of friends and kindred, too,
We have to love each other;
But on this earth God gives to each
Of us just one dear mother.
She It is who first must hear
Of unexpected pleasure,
Rejoicing with us, and her joy
Makes full the heaping measure.

The first to comfort in distress,

The one to whom our sorrow
Brings keenest pain, and then again
Reminds us of "to-morrow."
We learn to lean upon her work,
Her wisdom guides and strengthens
Our character in youth and brings
Reward as time is lengthened.

And then the time to us must come
When mother's hands are folded—
To us the dearest, fairest hands
The Master Sculptor molded.
The angels kiss the loving eyes
And close the white-fringed keeper;
The pulseless breast is now at rest—
God keep the silent sleeper.

But let's not think of her as dead;
Just waiting over yonder
In that fair land, with loving hand,
That "sunshine land" of wonder,
We'll see her smile again some day.
His promise still rings true;
I'll go, and stay a little while,
Then I'll come back for you.

The Gray Kitten That Lived in a Tree.

Laura and her mother were visiting Cousin Edith. Cousin Edith is not a little girl, but a grown lady who lives in a large, beautiful house in the country.

There are acres of lovely green grass and flowers and trees and bushes all about the house, and Laura thought at first that there couldn't be a finer place in the world to visit. But after the first few days she was sometimes lonely for another child to play with. No boys or girls lived within a mile of Cousin Edith's, and there wasn't even a cat or dog to frolic with.

"Don't you have even one kitty, Cousin Edith?" asked Laura.

"No; it would kill or frighten away my birds. Don't you know that cats kill birds, child?"

"O, I'm sure my Malta doesn't!" said Laura. "But then there aren't many birds where we live. I never saw so many sweet-singing birds as you have here."

Laura loved Cousin Edith's birds. She would sit for hours by the little pool where they drank and bathed. She had learned not to laugh aloud when the little creatures dipped and dived and then fluttered up again to shake their feathers on the low limbs of the little tree that they all used for a dressing room. Laura was sure that no vain little girl ever took longer to dress than some of these dainty singers spent in getting each glossy feather to lie just so.

One afternoon Laura was watching half a dozen tiny warblers having a bath at once. They were such fearless little things that she crept almost near enough to touch one of them before it got into the water.

"I'm sure I can catch it when its feathers are wet," she said. "How lovely it would be to hold a little live bird in my hands! I don't think the bird will be much frightened if I let it go right away."

At that minute she heard a loud, cross sound-"MI-ew, mi-awl"

"Dear me, there's a kitty! I wonder if Cousin Edith would mind if I try to find it and play with it a while," thought Laura. "Why, I must find it! It doesn't sound one bit like good-natured Malta. Perhaps it is a cat somebody has lost, and the poor thing is so hungry that it will try to catch a bird. It could catch one of these little warblers in half a second. I must get it right away."

Laura ran toward the bushes where the sound came from, but when she got close she went as slyly and carefully as if she were a cat after a mouse. Even so she was afraid pussy had heard her, for the mi-aws stopped and she could not see the cat. But at last she caught a glimpse of a gray back or side almost in the middle of the bush.

"O, I'm afraid it's caught tight! How could a cat have got in there?" she cried. Laura sidled slowly around the bush, calling, "Kitty, kitty, kitty!" in her very softest tone, "O—O, my!" she cried, suddenly; and then she ran straight away to the house, where mother and Cousin Edith sat on the blg porch.

"O, Cousin Edith!" she called. "I heard a kitty in the bushes; and when I went to find it, it was a pretty gray bird. It truly was!"

"That is one of my best bird friends. He is a very sweet singer, but he will mew just like a cat, so we call him the cathird," said Cousin Edith.—Mary S. Stover.

Cheats Himself.

If we look at a snowflake through a microscope, we discover that, instead of being a shapeless speck, it has a regular geometric form and is fashioned as perfectly and as beautifully as if it were to last as long as the hills. If we study a flower in the same way, we find that the parts so tiny that the unaided eye cannot distinguish them are shaped as perfectly and colored as richly as if they were the most striking features of the flower.

"O, well, it won't be noticed!" we heard some one say regarding a clumsy piece of work. How many of us have taken comfort to ourselves because our mistakes would not show! Sometimes we have gone even farther, and come to the conclusion that it was a waste of time to take pains with anything, unless the effort expended would be plain to the most casual observer.

This is not the principle upon which the Master Builder has made the world. The snowflake is fashioned as carefully as the star. The great oak is no more perfect than the tiniest flower that grows. And those whose achievements have brought them honor have not been the ones who thought that trifles were beneath their notice. The one who slights whenever he can do so without attracting notice cheats himself, for conscientious and careful work is its own reward,—Selected.

Why Can You Blow Out a Candle?

When you light a candle it burns, because the lighted wick heats the wax sufficiently to turn it into gases, which mix with the oxygen in the air and produce fire in the form of light. You know it is not easy to light a candle quickly. You must hold the lighted match to the wick until the wax begins to melt and change to gases. As long as the wax cortinues hot enough to melt and turn to gas, the candle will burn until all burned up; but if there is a break in the continuous process of changing the wax to gas, the light will go out. Now, when you blow at the lighted candle, you blow the gases which feed the flame away from the lighted wick, and this makes a break in the continuous flow of gas from the wax to taper, and the light goes out.—From "The Book of Wonders."

Columbia (S. C.) Record.

- L. B. Jones closed a good meeting at New Hope, near Readyville, Tenn., with eleven baptisms and two restorations.
- O. C. Lambert preached at Russell Street church of Christ, this city, on last Sunday and Sunday night. There was one confession and baptism.

Will J. Cullum is now in a meeting at Reid Avenue Church, this city. The meeting began with a good hearing at both services last Lord's day.

Apart from Christ, to-day the world still lies in darkness and despair. . . . It is Christ or chaos, Christ or catastrophe.—Hubert L. Simpson.

- T. B. Thompson advises that there is a good opening for a Christian brother who is a chiropractor at Huntsville, Ala. If you are interested, write Brother Thompson.
- T. B. Clark has moved from Childress, Texas, to Gallatin, Tenn., and will preach regularly for this congregation. C. M. Pullias will begin a meeting at Gallatin on October 30.
- T. Q. Martin writes from Louisville, Ky., October 7: "We are in the midst of a good meeting at Campbell Street Church. Eleven added to date. Brother Kurfees is a noble yokefellow."

The meeting at Twelfth Avenue, North, this city, being conducted by S. M. Jones, has been very fruitful in many respects. At the time we went to press there had been twenty additions.

- C. A. Norred is conducting a meeting for the Harbert Avenue Church, in Memphis, Tenn., his home congregation. The first report told of eight persons received by membership and one restoration.
- C. M. Gleaves closed a meeting at Mars' Hill, near Rucker, Tenn. There were six baptisms, three of whom were heads of families. Brother Gleaves is now in a meeting at Rome, in Smith County.

Sister Jimmie Taylor has arranged for a mission meeting at Walters, Okla., and would appreciate contributions toward defraying the expenses of the meeting. Her address is Box 54, Route 1, Comanche, Okla.

From G. M. Pullias, Dallas, Texas, October 3: "There have been two additions by baptism to the Oak Cliff Church since last report—one from the Catholics, the other from the Baptists. Much interest is being manifested, and we hope to accomplish a great work for the Master."

From A. B. Barret, Murfreesboro, Tenn., October 10: "I resigned here yesterday, to take effect immediately. I go to Columbia, Tenn., October 16, for a meeting; thence to David Lipscomb College, and on and on in the evangelistic field. I expect to keep busy in the Master's vineyard."

From Allen Phy, Aigood, Tenn., October 7: "Our meeting at Mount Maria, Muhlenberg County, Ky., closed last night. One was baptized. The brethren here had not been meeting on Lord's day regularly. They promised to begin the Lord's-day worship. The crowds were large all through the meeting and the people listened well. I expect to go there again next year"

To the Churches Everywhere: Brethren, please remember our appeal which appeared in a late issue of the Gospel Advocate. We are trying hard to establish the cause at Shelbyville, Ky. No one has answered our appeal up to this time. If brethren everywhere would rally to this worthy call, we could easily have our building by the fall of 1922.—R. A. Craig.

Marriage Announcement: Dr. and Mrs. Richard Franklin Crabtree announce the marriage of their daughter, Iva Myrtle, to Mr. Harry Randolph Pierce, on Saturday the first of October, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one, Nashville, Tenn. At home, after the tenth of October, Konton Apartments, in Nashville. The Gospel Advocate extends congratulations.

On next Sunday the Lindsley Avenue Church, this city, will have its annual "home-coming" day. This is also the first anniversary of the Lindsley Avenue Church. The church is expecting many visitors on this day, and especially is the presence of all former members of the old College Street Church desired. A joyous occasion is anticipated in the reunion of friends of bygone days. Preaching by J. Leonard Jackson.

From W. W. Slater, Mena, Ark., October 4: "The meeting with the Scuth Park Church, Beaumont, Texas, closed on Sunday night. It was a good meeting, all things considered. The Northside Church assisted much with their presence and or couragement. I preached for them on Sunday afternoon. Brother Fruzea is their minister. I am at Mena at this writing, attending the meeting of the Eureka Normal School of Music. Brother Hayes, of Ada, Okla., is here in a meeting, and I was with him last evening. I will preach at home next Sunday; then to Harveyville, Kan., for a meeting."

William P. Walker writes: "In a recent issue of the Gospel Advocate appeared a brief report from Brother A. S. Landis. I am personally acquainted with him, his family, and his home congregation—Allen's Chapel, Montgomery County, Tenn. Brother Landis is a devoted Christian and a worthy gospel preacher. He is now working in Nashville. Congregations in and around that city will make no mistake in engaging Brother Landis for monthly preaching. I often feat the average congregation in Middle Tennessee spends more money for tobacco, snuff, gasoline, drinks, etc., than for gospel preaching. Better look out, brethren. Danger ahead."

From Carl A. Gardner, Ferris, Texas, October 3: "I am busy each Lord's day in the Master's vineyard. As super. intendent of the school here. I am kept close at home, except on Lord's days; but it is refreshing to meet with the brethren at surrounding points each Sunday and speak to them about the kingdom of the Lord. For several Sundays I have been with the church at Corsicana, which is a noble band, ready to learn and do the will of God. For many years Dr. T. A. Miller and Dr. Trim Houston and his father, who is also a doctor, have stood faithfully at their post in that city. Many others have stood loyally with them. They appreciate the great work for Christ, and seem to be ahead of the average congregation in spiritual development. For years R. L. Whiteside labored with them, and recently M. C. Cuthbertson, now of Denison, did some very effective work among these people. He is loved by all the members there."

Readers of the Gospel Advocate can further the cause of Christ and greatly assist the church at Washington, D. C., by promptly furnishing the names of friends or relatives who move to the capital. On this point W. S. Long writes as follows: "This government calls people to its service year by year from all parts of the Union, and from time to time I learn of members who are here, but I do not know their addresses and cannot find them. Will every one who has friends or relatives here send me their addresses? Such a kindness would be a great help to the church here in finding the members as they come from time to time, and we might find people here who have been here for a long time and yet have not been enough interested to let us know where they were. In this way a number of new members might be enrolled, and it would not cost you more than Are your loved ones worth two cents? two cents. My address is 1319 Harvard Street, N. Parable of the Ten Virgins.

BY J. T. J. WATSON.

In Matt. 24 the disciples asked the Lord when the destruction of the temple would be and what should be the sign of his coming and of the end of the world.

One thing that makes these questions difficult to understand, and consequently the answers difficult, is the evident fact that the disciples did not at that time understand that the Lord was to be put to death and then rise from the dead, ascend to heaven, be coronated at God's right hand, and after that descend to earth the second time. Since they understood none of these things, it is not reasonable to suppose they would be asking questions about when they would be, nor what would be the sign when they would be. To say the least of it, what they meant by his coming is somewhat doubtful; but the answer Jesus gave, if properly understood, might be helpful to us.

I think it is generally understood that about all of chapter 24 is taken up in telling the events prior to and during the destruction of Jerusalem. And by some, at least, it is understood that with the parable of the ten virgins (Matt. 25) he begins to answer the last question. "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"

With this thought before us, it may be well to call to mind that the Lord says: "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins." There are two things worthy of note in this short sentence. One is the "then." It seems to me that the word "then" implies that the time represented by the ten virgins was to follow somewhat in succession with what is stated just preceding the "then," and if the events narrated in chapter 24 have reference to the destruction of Jerusalem, then the things represented by the ten virgins, it seems to me, should begin to take place at no distant period after the destruction of Jerusalem, although they might occupy the time until now and even until the end of the world. Therefore, they could not refer exclusively to the end of the world, the final judgment.

Another thing that it might be well to notice is the fact that all of the ten were represented as being "virgins," a term that carries with it the idea of purity. It is applied to the foolish as well as the wise. Another striking similarity is that all slumbered and slept alike until the cry was made, "The bridegroom cometh;" then they all arose and trimmed their lamps. In this we see no difference; they all had lamps, and all arose and trimmed them.

Now we will have to go back to find the difference. The wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps, but the foolish took no oil.

We all know that the use of oil in connection with lamps is to make light when ignited. Now, if the "virgins" in the parable represent people in the church, what is it these people in the church can have that would in any sense be similar to a lighted lamp?

The Psalmist tells us: "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding to the simple." (Ps. 119: 130.) Jesus says: "Ye are the light of the world." "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." The light (word) enables us to see the works, that they are wrought in God. (John 3: 21.) It is not the works that we are to be so careful to show to others; but we are to let our light (our knowledge of God's word) so shine that others may see the works, that they are in harmony with the word, and thus be influenced to glorify God.

But is this the lesson taught in the parable? Can we make this idea fit the parable?

First, let us remember that this is a parable and not what we would term a "simile." I know that in some scriptures the term "bridegroom" is used to express the relationship of Christ to the church, but this fact is not proof that it is so used in this parable. But let us suppose the term "bridegroom" means Christ, and his coming means the end of the world, then we would make it teach exactly the opposite of what is taught where it is said the Lord's coming will be as a thief in the night, for this says they will be notified of the bridegroom's approach.

But I again ask why the term "bridegroom" in a parable should necessarily mean Jesus. Since in the parable the stress is put on the thing called "oil," the thing with which to make a light, and, as we have already seen, the Psalmist says "the entrance of thy words giveth light," does it not seem much more reasonable to say that the thing which is called "bridegroom" in the parable is an opportunity to use to God's glory the light that we ought to get from his word? If we fail to enlighten our minds with the word, do we not prove to be unfaithful stewards and forfeit the grace and peace that are to be multiplied to us through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord? (2 Pet. 1: 2.)

Yet who has not failed to know, at times, on the spur of the moment, just what scripture to cite to some person in order to settle him in the right way, but have to study the question with Bible and concordance in order to determine just how to answer the inquirer after truth—an inquirer, too, who would gladly be led out of superstition and error into the way of truth and righteousness? But while we are getting the oil (the knowledge of God's word needed in that particular case) the door of opportunity is closed, probably never again to be opened to us, and we have lost an opportunity to win one to righteousness. "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever." (Dan. 12: 3.) In such case, will the Lord consider us unprofitable servants? (Matt. 25: 30.)

Now bear in mind that nothing is said against the morals of these foolish virgins. They lived pure lives; they were all virgins; they simply failed to prepare themselves with oil, a knowledge of God's word. Therefore, they could not de service when an opportunity was presented to them; they needed more light, more knowledge of the word; hence, the door of opportunity was closed against them.

Let us watch and be ready, for we know not the day nor the hour when our Lord will come offering us an opportunity to serve him,

After studying this parable, then study the parable of the ten talents to see how strictly we will be held to account for failure to render faithful service to the Lord during the time of our stewardship. Also, notice the great blessings we may receive for faithful stewardship.

Preach the Word.

BY J. C. M'Q.

The following, clipped from the Manufacturers' Record, is so true and timely that it is with pleasure I give it to our readers. "The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America" is nothing but a human organization to usurp the work and functions of the church. Preachers of the gospel should ignore absolutely any suggestions from it as to what to preach. The Record says:

The so-called "Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America," an organization which does not by any means at all represent all the churches in America, is constantly undertaking to suggest to ministers of the gospel the sub jects about which they must preach. It is now proposing that there shall be a "Labor-Sunday message" from the pulpit, and it outlines the ideas which it is supposed the preachers should advance.

The ministers of the gospel as they stand in their pulpits are there for the purpose of preaching the gospel of Christ Jesus. They are not there to preach Labor-Day messages, nor tubercular-Sunday messages, nor any other messages, except the message of the gospel.

A leading minister recently said that if he were to comply with all the requests received for preaching special sermons, he would have but little time left out of the flitytwo Sundays in the year in which to preach the gospel.

There is no more reason why a minister of the gospel should preach a Labor-Day sermon than why he should preach an agricultural-day sermon, or a railroad-day sermon, or a banking-day sermon, or a sermon in behalf of the nonunion or free man, or a clerks'-day sermon, or a sermon on any other phase of human employment. think the farmers of the country, as a class, are intelligent erough and are sufficiently versed in Bible teachings realize that to preach a sermon on agriculture and its needs, or what the preacher might think are its needs, would be an insult to their common sense and their reli-There is no justification for the preaching of a gion. sermon on capital, or on labor, or on agriculture, or on banking, or on world commerce, or on railroads. The preacher's job is to preach the gospel with such all-com-pelling power as to so shape the hearts and the lives of his hearers that they will do the things which are right in all their relations with their fellow men.

The attempt to develop class consciousness among so-called "labor people," when all the people who live by brain or brawn are labor people, is one of the fundamental mistakes of the organization of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, though that organization makes so many mistakes and claims so much more than it possesses that it is difficult to say which is its greatest mistake. If it, like the Interchurch Movement, reeking with blunders, if not with rottenness, should pass out of existence, the cause of true religion, we think, would be greatly advanced.

Christ told the apostles what to preach, and through them he tells us what to preach: "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." (Mark 16: 15.) Matthew gives the commission as follows: "Go ye therefore and disciple all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) The command is to preach the gospel to "every creature," to disciple "all the nations," and not to preach it to any union or organization to the exclusion of somebody else. The thing to be preached is the gospel, and it is to be preached to everybody. It is not for the rich to the neglect of the poor, but it is for all alike.

With power and earnestness ministers should preach the gospel, for nothing else has any power to save. Paul realized that he was not a debtor to any class to the exclusion of other classes, for he says: "I am debtor both to Greeks and to Barbarians, both to the wise and to the foolish. Se, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you also that are in Rome. For I am not ashamed of the gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." (Rom. 1: 14-16.) Paul was ready to preach the gospel everywhere and to everybody because it is God's power to save. 'Think of Paul's taking orders from a "Federal Council of the Churches of Asia" as to what to preach and to whom to preach! Such a thought is inconceivable. He never would have heeded such dictation; neither should preachers consider the suggestions of such bodies now. If a preacher does not know what to preach, he should quit the pulpit.

There is but one thing to preach-viz., the gospel. The learned, gifted, and talented Paul wrote to the Corinthians: "And I, brethren, when I came unto you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, proclaiming to you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling. And my speech and my preaching were not in persussive words of wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power: that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." (1 Cor. 2: 1-5.) Preachers of Paul's type know what to preach, and preach it without orders from men. Paul did not shrink from declaring anything unto his hearers that was profitable unto them. In writing to the Ephesian elders, he says: "Wherefore I testify unto you this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I shrank not from declaring unto you the whole counsel of God." (Acts 20: 26, 27.)

The ministers who lead men to Christ and edify the churches are those who "preach the word" in the Spirit and in the love of the truth. The heart filled with the knowledge of the truth and with the love of souls will surely bear a live message to the world. Preachers should devote their time to the proclamation of the gospel and should not be active in anything or any organization which might influence some to refuse to hear the truth as presented by them.

Making Compromise Where Principle Is Involved.

We publish on page 995 of this issue of the Gospel Advecate a communication from Brother W. T. Stirling, of Toronto, Canada, on the question: "Is there room for compromise?" With numerous things ahead of it and demanding our attention, this is as early as we could well find a place for it in our columns. Our brother's question relates to the use or nonuse of instrumental music in the worship of God under Christ; and the only charitable view to take of his proposition is that he has not made a thorough study of the real question at issue at all, and therefore does not understand the ground occupied by the opposition and its reasons for standing on that ground. Of course, if the opposition is honest and sincere in declaring its belief that the practice in question is wrong, and therefore displeasing to God, it can make no sort of compromise at all, but must respectfully, but resolutely, maintain its ground or be in conscious rebellion against God. If they have such convictions-and they most solemnly say they have-how can Brother Stirling or anybody else consistently ask them to do what they believe to be wrong? Never mind now about whether they are or are not correct in believing the practice to be wrong, for that has nothing whatever to do with the fact that they do so believe; and as long as they so believe, no man who knows the fact can consistently ask them to do such a thing. I, therefore, in charity conclude that Brother Stirling does not know the fact of their convictions, and hence that he has not thoroughly studied the issue. Let us here note some facts which should receive his very serious attention, as well as that of all others who stand with him.

1. Justly deploring division among Christians, he says: "A new situation has arisen among the churches in Canada" in the way of an attempt "to restore unity by means of compromise." The brother is radically mistaken here, This Canadian situation is by no means "a new situation," but it is at least as old as the days of Nehemiah, when Sanballat and Tobiah and Geshem came forward with a proposition for compromise and blandly said to him, "Come, let us meet together in one of the villages in the plain of Ono, . . . and let us take counsel together;" but the brave and loyal Nehemiah politely, but firmly, replied: "1 am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down." (Neh. 6: 1-9.) When those who have departed from God's way see their mistake and want to take counsel with those who still eling to it, with the view of coming back to that way themselves, then mutual counsel will be in order; but when it becomes a compromise proposition which asks men to turn from God's way and compromise on man's way, it should be respectfully and resolutely declined.

2. Brother Stirling says, "It is easy to dismiss the matter by saying that there can be no compromise between truth and error," and then asks: "Which is truth, and which is error?" Of course Brother Stirling would not ask such a question if, like thousands of his brethren, he Believed it wrong to use instrumental music in the worship of God; but he believes no such thing. On the contrary, he thinks it is all right to use it or not to use it, as churches may like, and, of course, from his point of view, he and all others who feel the same way can consistently compromise and either have such music in the worship or not have it, as they may see proper under one circumstance or another. But, taking him and others to mean exactly what they say here—that is, that they believe it is acceptable to God to have such music in the worship or not have it, as men may like-then it is exceedingly strange that they do not come at once to the side of the opposition for the sake of union and harmony. The opposition is consistent in refusing to go to the other side, for they believe it is wrong and displeasing to God; but Brother Sterling and others believe that they could yield and stand where the opposition stands and do no wrong, yet they refuse to yield. There is something very seriously wrong here. How can he feel consistent and ask people to do what they believe to be wrong? If Brother Stirling still believes that immersion is essential to baptism, and that, therefore, persons are not baptized until they are immersed (some of his brethren have ceased to believe this), then suppose his alleged "new situation" that "has arisen among the churches in Canada" should be extended far enough to attempt "to restore unity" on baptism also "by means of compromise." If his Methodist and Presbyterian friends should approach him with the compromise proposition for the churches to unite on the basis of sprinkling or immersion as the individual or church may see proper, what would he say and what would he do? "The dispute over" sprinkling and pouring "has lasted in America" not only "for two generations," but for many generations, both in America and practically all over the civilized world, and it "has done incalculable harm;" but is that any reason for stopping the "dispute" and accepting sprinkling and pouring? But that is exactly what he is asking his brethren to do on this other matter, and for identically the same reason. Of course immersion and sprinkling are not the same acts; but neither are singing and playing, which are different acts and make different kinds of music; and it is no more true in the one case that God commanded the one and not the other than it is in the other case. If it be said that God does not tell us not to play, I reply, neither does he tell us not to sprinkle; and if it be said that the command to immerse excludes sprinkling, I deny H, except in the identically same sense that the command to sing excludes playing. You are no more departing from God's command to immerse when you sprinkle than you are departing from God's command to sing when you play. In either case you add to God's command and have what he does not command, and this is the only way you can have either sprinkling or playing.

3. Brother Stirling further says, "The path has been blazed for us by the brethren in England," and that "some of the churches there use the organ, others do not." Now, that would be fine and lovely indeed, and to walk in peace and harmony in that path would be a most desirable thing to do were it not for the fact that another "path has been blazed for us," not "by the brethren in England," but by inspired men in the New Testament, and they say nothing at all about "some of the churches there" using "the organ," while "others do not." With all due respect to "the brethren in England" and their well-meaning defender in Canada, some of us feel solemnly bound to walk in this earlier "path" which "has been blazed for us by "inspired men.

4. Our brother says that "division under some circumstances undoubtedly is justifiable and necessary." Exactly; but what made it so? He would be compelled to answer that it was made so by introducing some practice not authorized by the New Testament. And this is precisely what is done when God tells men to make one kind of music in his worship and they deliberately make another kind. Brother Stirling and others are trying to make us believe that it makes no difference which we have, and that we can have both if we want to have them. That is, if God should tell his children to offer a certain kind of animal in sacrifice—a sheep, for example—I suppose Brother Stirling would feel at liberty to offer a cow or to offer both a sheep and a cow, if he chose to do so. If not, why not?

5. He says "one party" says "the organ is an aid to congregational singing," and another party says "it is a hindrance." No, no, that is not the issue in any sense whatever. No matter if one party did think "it is a hindrance," that would be no reason for not having it if God says have It; and no matter if "the organ is an aid to congregational singing," that is no reason for having it if God for any reason left it out of his worship. Brother Stirling does not even touch the issue. He is all the time putting the practice in question in a class of things to which in principle it does not belong. If it did nothing more than aid the singing-that is, ald in doing the thing which God says do-nobody could properly object to it; but that is the width of the poles from the fact. It is another kind of music, and not the kind which God says make in his worship. There are two kinds of music, vocal and instrumental. God commanded the use of both kinds in the Jewish worship, and his children used both kinds. He also commanded the burning of incense in the Jewish worship, and his children used it also. But in the worship under Christ, he leaves out both the incense and the instrumental music; yet, in spite of this fact, the Catholics introduce both, and many Protestants follow their example on the music. God has not seen proper to tell us why he omitted these two practices from Christian worship, but I am simple enough to want to respect what he has said and done whether I know his reason for it or not, and to obey his precept not to add to it nor to take from it. How does that strike Brother Stirling?

6. Yes, let it here be said once for all and with all possible emphasis that the Gospel Advocate believes and is earnestly trying to teach both the church and the world that "Eskimos, Hindus, Englishmen, Chinamen, and all varieties of men throughout the ages," are divinely taught and required to obey the same gospel, perform the same acts of worship, and to please the same Lord; and we do not hesitate to say, in reply to the strange plea for compromise, that God does not have one way of worship for Eskimos, another for Hindus, another for Englishmen, and another for Chinamen. With all due respect for Brother Stirling and for his motives, which we do not call in question, we have no respect for such a doctrine, and we devoutly hope that he himself will come to see that it is the very quintessence of impiousness in the sight of God. "Our way of understanding the New Testament" indeed! Was any one ever more sectarian in speech? The Methodists taught me that sprinkling was only one "way of understanding the New Testament" on baptism, and when they sprinkled water on me I thought they baptized me, and I never knew any better till the sophism that men may properly go different and contradictory ways under the plea that they are merely different "ways of understanding the New Testament" was exposed. I wonder how many "ways of understanding the New Testament" Brother Stirling has Jearned?

7. We are making no effort to get even "the hundredth part of one per cent of the human race" to "worship according to our standard." We have no standard, but God has one, and we are trying to get one hundred per cent of all the people everywhere to conform to that standard. Of course we make slow progress, owing to the fact that the great majority of the people now, precisely as in all the ages past, like Brother Stirling, are not satisfied to follow God's way unmodified, but prefer to make compromises and go some other way. Talk about making progress after "nineteen centuries" or any other length of time! Brother Stirling has just now reached the point where the different denominations were when Campbell and his coadjutors began their "clarion call to sects," and his "compromise" article would have the rest of us join him in the unfortunate view which he takes of "doctrinal correctness" and the "scrupulous observance of ceremonial forms." We are quite as much in favor of "soul-stirring principles of goodness and love" as he is, but we also most solemnly believe in contending for "doctrinal correctness" and the "scrupulous observance of ceremonial forms" wherever God ordains such forms.

Finally, I join Brother Stirling most heartily in the plea: "No creed but the Bible! No leader but Jesus! No name but his!" And I join him with equal heartiness in the exclamation: "What a clarion call to sects!" Exactly so; and with all my might I would help to press his question: "Shall we continue to preach unity and practice division?" But I turn the whole thing back on him with all its tremendous weight by respectfully informing him that the only way to keep from making "this vantage ground of Christian union a battle field of parties" is to quit introducing things outside of the Bible which create "parties." There was not a single instance of party arrayed against party in the whole Restoration movement till somebody introduced something not taught in the New Testament; and with all due respect to Brother Stirling and those standing with him, I say shame on them to introduce a practice unknown to the New Testament, with the division of Christians into "warring parties" as the baleful result, and then, because of the said parties which they themselves have created. come decrying against the rest of us because we do not join in the same practice for the sake of union! We had union once on the simple and unmodified word of Godyea, we had "no creed but the Bible! No leader but Jesus! No name but his!" And we can easily have it again whenever we are all willing to have it on the same divine basis. If he has read history to good purpose, he should be ashamed to ask the question: "Can we find no common ground for ourselves?" I reply, yes, God made it for us. and Alexander Campbell and hundreds of others discovered it over a hundred years ago, and the Gospel Advocate is still contending for it precisely as God gave it and as Campbell himself contended for it, and as his successors continued to contend for it for nearly a half century with unbroken union and harmony throughout their ranks. No. no, dear brother, there is no "room for compromise" any basis that requires us to turn from the simple New Testament order to an order founded on "the precepts of men," for the simple reason that our Lord himself would then say of us, as he says of others who do that way: "In vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." (Matt, 15: 9; Mark 7: 7.)

Chalk Talks for Teachers.

There has been a long-felt need of a book which would enable any person who can speak to a class or an audience to give a helpful, inspiring, illustrated talk. We are glad to announce that we have secured such a work. It is entitled "Crayon and Character," and is the work of B. J. Griswold. With this book in their hands, parents can teach the children a simple, fascinating method of drawing, and at the same time make the great truths of life a part of their everyday learning. It is especially adapted to speakers who earnestly want to give illustrated talks, but who feel that they "can't draw a straight line." Practically all subjects are covered, and full instructions are given as to how to make the talks effective. The price of the book is $1.25, postpaid. The Adoption. BY PAUL I. PRYOR

Having read in the Scriptures of children's being adopted and also being born into God's family, and believing also that the only way people get into God's family to-day is by being born into it, I have found the Scriptures hard to understand in regard to these two great subjects. Therefore, I have studied and searched the Scriptures the more diligently, that I might know the truth about the matter.

It is generally understood that there are two ways to become a member of a family; one is by being born into it. and the other is by adoption. Just so by our Heavenly Father's family. There are children in it that were adopted, and others that were born into it. But people to-day are not adopted, but are born into God's family. (John 3: 5.)

Now let us see who is adopted. Paul, in Eph. 1: 5, 6, says: "Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved." Now, who is the "us" in this passage of scripture? If we can show who the "us" is, we can see who is adopted. You will doubtless say it was the Christians at Ephesus, but it is not. Let us follow the pronouns "us" and "we" carefully to verse 12, and there he tells who the "us" is: "That we should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted in Christ." Now we know the Ephesians were not the first to trust in Christ. That is evident. The Amer ican Revised Version has a better rendering of this verse. It reads: "We who had before hoped in Christ." Who had before hoped in Christ? Without doubt it was the Israelites. Did not they look for the coming of Christ as their only hope? Of course they hoped in Christ. (Acts 26: 7.) So it must have been the Israelites that were adopted. "For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh: who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption and the glory, and the covenants," etc. (Rom. 9: 3, 4.) This scripture shows plainly that the Israelites were the adopted children.

But do you say they were born into the family by the natural birth? That is true, and that is necessary to adoption, as a child must be born before it can be adopted. But why adopt a child that has been born into the family? Because they could never obtain the inheritance unless God adopt them, which will be shown as we proceed. In Gal. 4: 22-31 we have an allegory. Let us notice it. "For it is written, that Abraham had two sons." notice carefully; Abraham had two sons. They were both his children, and both were born into his family. But one was born after the flesh, and the other by promise. Now, in the allegory Abraham represents God; Agar, the law; Ishmael, the Israelites; etc. So we will notice Ishmael, as he represents the Israelites; and in the allegory, what is true of Ishmael is also true of the Israelites, otherwise it would not be an allegory. Ishmael was the son of the bond servant, Agar. The Israelites were also children of the bond servant, the law. Ishmael had no inheritance. "Abraham gave all that he had to Isaac." (Gen. 25: 5.) The Israelites had no inheritance. " For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise." (Gal. 3: 18.) Why didn't thy have any inheritance? Because they were born an illegitimate birth. We all know a child of Hlegitimate birth has no inheritance. Now, it seems to me that adoption is their only hope for the inheritance. If there is any other hope for them, I would be glad if some one would point it out. "Well," says one, "the blood of Christ flowed both ways from the cross." Of course it did, but the blood only cleansed from sin. It was not enough within itself. If it was, everybody would receive an inheritance, because it flowed for all. But Christ being the legal heir, they could not inherit until after his death. So by the death of Christ, the legal heir, they were adopted and made heirs, which gives them a right to the inheritance.

Neutralizes Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism, it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless, but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a Godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief. Too much cannot espoken in behalf of Renwar for rheumatism." Sold by druggists (price, 50 cents) or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN,

Tribute to J. M. Joiner. BY J. PETTEY EZELL

On August 27, 1921, at his home, near Arkadelphia, in Jefferson County, Ala., the long, useful, and eventful life of Brother J. M. Joiner came to an end. For more than fifty years he preached the gospel throughout the State of Alabama, where he was instrumental in the hands of God in saving thousands of souls. He was greatly loved by all for his unshaken faith in the word of God and his sunny and congenial disposition. Thousands will be grieved to hear of his death. For several years past, as the result of a stroke of paralysis, he has been inactive; but as the outward perished, the inward man was renewed day by day as he drew nearer the goal. He bore his pains without complaint even unto the end, and was laid away at Pleasant Hill, in Jefferson County, on Sunday, August 28.

He was a stickler for the old paths. and often expressed grief over the departures of our brethren from the simplicity of the New Testament worship. It was his counsel and encouragement that emboldened his son, with only a few others, eleven years ago, to separate themselves from all the innovations, inventions, doctrines, and teachings of men, and thus to restore the New Testament worship in Albany-Decatur, which has resulted in the splendid congregation in our city. We have often thought and spoken of him as one of the fathers of the congregation.

In compliance with his request of five years past, I conducted his burial service. He was one of my very best friends, and I loved him as a father,

He is survived by his wife, an estimable Christian lady, and to him a devoted and faithful companion; five sons—D. M. Joiner, A. C. Joiner, W. C. Joiner, Judson Joiner, and Justice Joiner; and six daughters—Mrs. Milligan Earnest, Mrs. John Stanley, Mrs. R. M. Yates, Mrs. Theodore Duke, and Misses Orlean and Birdie Joiner.

Brother D. M. Joiner, who is himself a preacher of no mean ability. made a very brief but touching talk over the remains of his father, admon-Ishing all the children and friends to imitate the godly example of his father's life; and I pray, realizing that simply hearing and doing what our Lord says is the safe and infallible way, and more so a way of peace and unity and a common ground of union for all, that each one may walk, as did he, in the old paths, and with him at last be reunited in the city that has foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

Our doubts are traitors, and make us lose the good we oft might win by fearing to attempt.—Shakespeare.

Impressions of New York City. BY E. L. PEARSON.

For some time I have intended to give an account of my work in New York this summer. I had a threefold purpose in going East. The first was to preach the gospel; the second, to visit my mother in Washington; and the third, to do some graduate work in Columbia University. Brother Morgan H. Carter had been engaged by the New York brethren to take up the work there. As he was unable to go before June 20, he asked me to go in May. I reached there on Sunday, May 22. My labors with the disciples there were only pleasant continually

Their membership is rather cosmopolitan. There are a number from the Southern States, some from the West, a number from the North, and a splendid group from England. Their occupations range from plumbers, carpenters, and ship mechanics to artists and grand-opera singers. Their good fellowship is most inspiring.

After Brother Carter came, we conducted a meeting over on the New Jersey side of the Hudson. We also tried to make a thorough search for members in Greater New York. We received a few names and addresses of people from the States. We could usually locate them easily. I found one young man from Kentucky who had lived there three months and had searched every way he knew to find the church of God, but had been unable to do so. Those who have relatives and friends in New York do not realize how much they could facilitate the work of the minister there if they would only send him their names and correct addresses.

While there I sent out about seventy-five letters to different congregations, asking them to contribute to that great cause. So far as I have been informed, the only response to any of them was from the church at St. Marys, W. Va., which promised five dollars a month. That is rather discouraging. If it were not for the unusual faithfulness and liberality of the brethren there, I hardly see how the work could continue. A few individuals and congregations are sending ten dollars a month, but there are far too few to pay a minister a Hving wage in that city. I cannot understand why the churches ignore so great an opportunity

My remuneration was only about one-third of my expenses, but I feel that I gained in many other ways. As I said in the outset, I had a threefold purpose in going.

Mrs. Pearson and I have agreed to contribute regularly to the New York work this winter. Who else will join us?

Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the Lord our God.—Ps. 20: 7.

FIELD REPORTS

Pikeville, Tenn., October 4.—The meeting at this place, which began on September 18 and closed on September 28, was successful in more ways than one. One was reclaimed and one was baptized. The preaching was done by Brother G. C. Brewer, who did his part well. May the God of heaven bless him, so that he may go on preaching "the unsearchable riches of Christ," and may lead men and women, boys and girls, to "the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world." -A. C. Traylor.

Union, S. C., October 5 .- On my trip to Tennessee and Alabama I held several meetings, with good results-namely: At Grissim's Corner, with ten baptisms and two restored; Bethle-hem, twenty baptized; Green Hill, twelve baptized (these congregations are near Lebanon, Tenn.); Grant, Smith County, three baptized and a congregation organized to begin regufar work, and the prospect good for a new house soon, as the brethren there are wide-awake; Aldridge Grove, near Moulton, Ala., fifty-five baptized, twenty-three restored, and two claimed that they had been scripturally baptized. Upon my return home I found the work moving along nicely under the supervision of Brother Gibbs, who baptized eight during my absence. Brother Gibbs and I, assisted by Brother and Sister Finnell, who live in Greenville, are planning to begin a meeting there the last of this week, provided we can get a lot for our tent. Any one knowing of any loyal breth-ren in or around Greenville would do well to drop me a card immediately. Brethren, continue to pray for us,-Thomas H. Burton.

Halevville, Ala., October 5.-1 began a meeting with the church at Center Point, Tenn., on July 17, and continued It eight days, with one baptism and one restoration. I then began work with the church at Leoma, Tenn., and continued till August 3, resulting in one restoration. My next meeting was at Hanceville, Ala., beginning on Au-gust 7 and continuing till August 17. Twelve were baptized, and the church planned to do some real mission work I began with the church at in 1922 Haleyville, Ala., on August 21, and continued two weeks. One was bap-tized, and the church decided to do some more effective work in 1922. next helped Brother John T. Und T Underwood at Isbell, Ala., one week. Six were baptized. Brother Wylie and I were baptized. Brother Wylie and I then worked at Thorn Hill, Ala., one week. The "Holy Rollers" have so excited the people of this community that nothing was to be done save to "preach the word" and hope for future results. Brother Wylie and I then went to Golden, Miss., and worked for one and one-half weeks. Two were baptized. Golden is a mission field which promises to be a good place in the future. I am now in a meeting at Ethridge, Tenn., with good interest. shall begin a Bible reading with the church at Haleyville, Ala., the last week in October .- J. H. Horton.

A Cry From Athens, Tenn.

BY W. C. PHILLIPS.

The dog that barks only where there is game is believed; the baby that cries only when it is hurt gets sympathy; the person that takes his bed before he grunts needs a doctor; the party that goes on a hunger strike before he begs for bread is worthy of it. But the dog that will not bark when treed, so that the hunter may find him, is not worthy of feeding; the baby that does not cry at all when it is being hurt, so that it may get the attention of the nurse, does not need very much sympathy; the person that dies before he takes his bed or grunts ought not to have treatment; and the party that would starve before asking for bread, when it can be had for the asking, ought not to have anything.

Now, as we are not to be heard for our much speaking or loud crying, I am making this appeal short. The Athens church is meeting in a combination barber shop, pressing shop, and shoe shop; but they have a church building in progress-have the rafters up and the storm sheathing on. They are out of finances, and the work must stop unless folks who are able to do so come to their assistance.

Now the ball season is over, and those dollars you have been spending

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever, and the grip is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid, there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended, as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.

once, twice, and three times a week, and have been living without, can be sent to assist in the completion of this church building. Now, come on, good people, and help make it possible for these poor people who have been suffering for the want of the gospel and for the want of a place to meet for so long to have a comfortable place in which to meet, and which they can call their "home." Do not throw this aside and neglect the matter, as the had weather is going to be upon us soon. I have such faith in God and in the uprightness of the good brethren that I have made the announcement that I will preach in the new church building on the first Lord's day in November; but the work must be done, and about one thousand dollars is needed to do it. Will you not give the matter your immediate thoughts and cares? Send all donations to B. B. Posey, Athens, Tenn. They will be acknowledged.

VIGOR OF YOUTH IN A NEW DISCOVERY

Science Produces a Vitalizer Superior to Famous Gland Treatment-Magic Power of a Bark From Africa.

Have you lost your youth, vigor, and "pep?" Does life seem dull and work a grind? Don't worry. Science has discovered a new vitalizer superior even to the much-discussed "goat-gland" and "monkey-gland" treatment.

The principal ingredient is an extract from the bark of an African tree. It is said to be the most amazing invigorator ever dis-covered. Combined with it are other tonic and vitalizing elements of proved merit. In most cases, the compound produces marked improvement in a day or two, and in a short time the vitality is raised, the circulation improved, and the glow of health is felt in every part.

The new vitalizer contains expensive chemicals, but manufacturing in enormous quan-tities has brought the cost within the reach of all. Furthermore, the laboratories producing this new vitalizer, which is called Re-Nu-Tabs, are so confident of its power that they offer it on the basis of "no results, no pay."

Any reader of this paper may test the new discovery without risk. Send no money, but just your name and address, to the Re-Nu Laboratories, 232 C Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and a full treatment of Re-Nu Tabs will be mailed. Deposit $2.00 and postage with the postman on delivery. If not delighted by the results at the end of a week, notify the laboratories, and your money will be refunded in full. Do not hesitate about accepting this test offer, as it is fully guaranteed.

Rheumatism

A REMARKABLE HOME TREAT-MENT GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

WHO HAD IT

In the year of 1833 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-Acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who are thus afflicted know for ever three years. I tried remedy after remedy, but such relief as I obtained was only temporary. Finally I found a treatment that cured me completely, and such a plitful condition has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, even bedridden, some of them seventy to eighty years old, and the results were the same as in my own case.

"I had sharp pains like lightning flashes shooting through my joints."

I want every sufferer from any form of muscular and sub-acute (swelling at the joints) rheumatism to try the great value of my improved "Home Treatment" for its remarkable healing power. Don't send a cent. Simply mail your name and address, and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of such forms of rheumatism, you may send the price of it, One Dollar; but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer, when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

How Do Men Speak of You? BY C. PETTY.

"Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets." (Luke

This woe is right the opposite of what we like. It is so natural for us to like to hear all men speak well of us, commend us, and even to brag on us for what we say and do, that we love to return the favor; but let some one criticize or speak adversely of us or our ways, and what we will say about them will be a plenty. It seems so natural for us to want to get even with them, no matter how we live. But that is not the way we should do; we should not criticize nor speak harsh things of those who speak evil of us, but say no harm of them, and treat them kindly, then we will "overcome evil with good." I have felt like going home when I would be locked out of houses and all manner of evil was being spoken against me, for I did not think I could do any good; but I would think of what the Bible says about the man that all men speak well of. I know that there is some thing wrong with him, and badly, too, or the Savior would not have pronounced a woe upon him; and I know this, that if a man pleases the Lord he will have enemies, and plenty of them, as shown by examples in the Old Testament and in the New Testament.

In 1 Kings 22 we learn that the king of Judah came down to the king of Israel, and while there Israel's king asked him if he would go with him up against the Syrians and take Ramothgilead, and he agreed; and they asked all of Ahab's prophets if they must go. and all of them (four hundred) said, "Go." But the king of Judah said: "Is there not here a prophet of the Lord besides, that we might inquire of him?" And the king of Israel said: "There is yet one man, Micaiah the son of Imlah, by whom we may inquire of the Lord: but I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil." Here we have four hundred prophets that the king of Israel spoke well of because they would prophesy anything he wanted them to prophesy, and only one that would prophesy only the things the Lord told him, and he was hated by the king. So only one pleased God. And it is so to-day; when a man pleases God, he will have enemies.

Take Paul as an example, who was not spoken well of. From the time of his conversion every evil word and deed was spoken and done against him. Even in Damascus the Jews aimed to kill him for his first preaching, but the disciples "let Paul down by the wall in a basket" and he escaped. And at Jerusalem, while making his defense, the Jews listened to the story of his life until he related his conversion and call to the apostleship, "and then lifted up their voices, and said, Away with such a fellow from the earth: for it is not fit that (Acts 22: 22.) The he should live." next day when the chief captain loosed Paul, and he, "earnestly beholding the council, said, Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day." "the high priest Ananias commanded them that stood by him to smite him on the mouth." (Acts 23: 1, 2.) Furthemore, we learn that more than forty Jews made a conspiracy "that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul." (See verses 12, 13.) But the conspiracy was made known to the chief captain, and he sent Paul away that night to Cæsarea, and turned him over to Felix: but soon the Jews were on his trail with Tertullus, a certain orator, who informed the governor against Paul. Tertullus said to the governor: "We have found this man a pestilent fellow, and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes." (Acts 24: 5.) when Paul was doing his last preaching, he said: "All men forsook me: I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge." (2 Tim. 4: 16.) The great apostle Paul came as near imitating the Savior in living a perfect life as any man that ever lived, and yet from the beginning of his Christian life to its close he was spoken against. But what a glorious ending of that life! For the gates of that shining city were open to him, and that fadeless crown awaited his entrance into that glittering home.

So do not be discouraged, brother or sister, if you are spoken evil of; but pass on softly and humbly through life, looking for the crown that shall be yours when toils shall end.

Scrofula Most Progressive Now.

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none more so than to the scrofulous and consumptive.

The progress of scrofula during a normal autumn is commonly great.

It is probable that few people ever think of scrofula—its bunches, eruptions, and wasting of the body—without thinking of the benefit many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose success in the treatment of this one disease alone would be enough to make it what it is —one of the most famous medicines in the world.

There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative—consumption.

Hood's Pills, the cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla, in cases where one is necessary, are gentle in action and thorough in effect.

ing we were hindered much because of heavy rains. In this meeting five were baptized and five were restored to fellowship. I suppose I will now take up some kind of clerical work, in connection with my regular Sunday work, until time for meetings next year. Altogether my protracted-meeting work this year has been a source of great joy to me.-T. C. Fox.

Beaumont, Texas, October 3.- Our meeting, which was conducted by Brother Will W. Siater, of Fort Smith. Ark., closed last night. We were hindered greatly by rain. We had no additions, but some visible results, as Brother Slater succeeded in putting a lot of enthusiasm into the members. He is certainly a great preacher and a power in the pulpit. He kindly con-sented to come and labor with us. We employed him for six months, begin-ning in January. He would not agree to stay longer. We feel that we have to stay longer. MR. DODSON WARNS USERS OF CALOMEL Says Drug Acts Like Dynamite on Liver and You Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone in stead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts bet-expect a good meeting. I shall begin at Oldfield, Mo., on October 19. Brother Charles F. Hardin rendered me invaluable service as song leader and otherwise at Cureall.—M. S. Mason.

Scott's Hill, Tenn., October 5.—Our protracted meeting at this place began on Saturday night, September 24, and closed on Sunday, October 2. Brother I. A. Douthitt, of Sedalia, Ky., did the preaching. We consider the meeting a success. Rain hindered some, but the attendance both day and night was the attendance both day and night was good. Brother Douthitt's familiarity with the Word, together with his great earnestness, attracted the attention and interest of his audience. The church was built up and strengthened. Some of the most influential citizens of the town and surrounding community were interested as never before. One obeyed the gospel .--W. A. Austin.

Belleview, Tenn., October 7.—My meeting on the Ozark Trail, near Granite, Okla., closed on August 21, with two baptisms, one from the Presbyterians. I began a meeting at Oak Ridge, Obion County, Tenn., on the first Lord's day in September, which closed on the following Saturday night, with five restored. I went from there to Refuge and began a meeting on the second Lord's day, which closed at the water's edge at 8 A.M., the following Lord's day, with five baptized. Brother Dave Guinn, of Cloverdale, led the song service. From here I hurried across the country to Keefe, near Wynnburg, Lake County, and began a meeting at 11 A.M. on the same day, which closed on the following Satur-day morning at the water, with one baptized (from the Methodists). From there I went to Sharp's Corner, Maury County, and began a meeting on the third Sunday In September, which closed at the water on the following Sunday, with four baptized and two restored, one from the Presbyterians. That morning I began a meeting at Brown's Chapel, which continued until the following Thursday night, with two baptized and two restored. I left two baptized and two restored. every one rejoicing over the meeting. This closes my summer's work. I go from here to the farm.—W. T. Beasley.

Taylor-Scott Debate.

BY B. L. DOUTHITT.

On September 19 Brother John C. Taylor (Christian) and J. R. Scott (Primitive Baptist) met in a fourdays' discussion near Waverly, Tenn. This debate was carried on in such a way that all were well pleased. Many old people said this was one of the best debates they had ever attended, and that such debates would do good. The church at Waverly and a small congregation where it was conducted supported it. This discussion was held at the close of Brother Taylor's work at Waverly. The brethren speak well of his work while there. Brother Tayior is familiar with the teaching of our Lord, and by his logical reasoning assures his adversary that he cannot pervert the gospel of Christ while he is around. No church will make a mistake in securing Brother Taylor to defend the cause we represent.

SHRINKING FROM EXPOSURE

"I hid myself." (Gen. 3: 10.)

Why did he hide himself? Because he could not face the exposure of his sin. He had rebelled against the Lord and done that which was evil in his sight. And the evil thing worked to this dark issue—it perverted his nature and inclined him against the Lord whom he had resisted. He had no delight in God. He feared him, and he had a growing distaste of him. He had no desire to meet him; nay, indeed, he fled from him. He sought to seclude himself and find peace in forgetfulness. At any rate, and at any price, he must not meet God! "I hid myself."

We have all shared this man's quest of a hiding place from God. We may have sought along another road, but we have shared his flight from God. We have entered into his sin, and the poisonous thing has worked in us as it worked in him, and our palate has been perverted, and the sweet things have become bitter, and we have lost our delight in God. We have no lover's desire to walk and talk with him. Let us rouse our sleeping memories, and demand how it has been with us when we have wandered in ways of trespass and turned our backs upon God. How was it at the close of the day, at the hour of our devotions, the time of the evening sacrifice? Did we hasten into the secret place like children going home from school, jubilant and glad? Were we almost breathless in our eager speech with the Lord? Nay, nay, it was quite other than this. That night we missed our devotions. The prayers were left unsaid; or if we prayed, we prayed without looking. We hid ourselves in blind words, empty words; we gabbled a medley of words in which there was no communion. We did not want any communion. We had no desire to gaze on him whom we had pierced. And so we ran away from open and vital fellowship. We prayed prayerless prayers-prayers which had no windows, no outlook, no aspirations. Or, more probably still, we never even appeared to pray at all. We just left them out of the day. That night the altar fire was not burning. There was no going into the holy place. We just scuttled into bed and sank into an unbeliever's sleep. And what was all this but a childish attempt to hide ourselves from the Lord? We kept away from the Lord, lest we should suffer a divine exposure of our shame.

For that is the real secret of the matter. Our sins troop out when we come into the presence of the Lord. The light disturbs them. The psalmist was relating just such an experience in the words: "Thou hast set our secret sins in the light of thy countenance." They are no longer secrets when we pass into the light. The hidden things are all revealed. It is like as when a beam of sunlight falls across a room. All the motes, all the myriads of impure particles which have been hiding invisibly in the atmosphere, show up in the sunlight, dancing in their unclean revels. The sun sets them in the light of his countenance, and they stand exposed.

And how can I, whose native sphere is dark, before the Imeffable appear, and on my naked spirit bear the uncreated beam? Who can bear the revealing light of the Lord? Who can bear even the clear beams of a commandment? Or still less, who can bear the lucent beam of a beatitude? Or still less, far less, who can bear the vivid, illuminating sense of the Lord's presence? And so we fear the light. And so we come to hate the light, lest our deeds should be reproved. We hide ourselves from God.—J. H. Jowett, in British Weekly.

____ By A, B, L, ___

One of the hardest things for a Christian to do is to "wait and murmur not." If he is well acquainted with the teachings of his Master, he naturally expects to be mistreated and even persecuted by the world. There is nothing surprising in this, for we are told plainly that "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." There are times when we can do naught but wait upon Jehovah, as did the Psalmist, to settle our accounts and to see that the wrongs done us are righted. From an English journal I quote the following illustration:

An American unheliever, a farmer, thought he would vex a Christian editor. So he wrote him a letter as follows: "Dear Sir: I have been trying an experiment. I have a field of corn which I plowed on Sunday. I planted it on Sunday. I cut it and hauled it to the barn on Sunday. And I find I have therefrom more corn to the acre than has been gathered by any of my neighbors this October." The farmer reckoned on the sneer implied in his letter coming as "a poser" to the editor. What was the man's surprise, however, when, in the next issue of the paper, reply was given in one sentence: "God does not make full settlement in October." This is an observation of wide-ranging application. God keeps a book; and both in regard to judgment and recompense he bides his time.

We too easily forget that our God, "who doeth all things well," bides his time. As one great writer put it, "God is never in a hurry." Even so great a character as David grew impatient. He said, "I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked," and exclaimed: "O let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end!" But David had no misgivings about the final outcome. His defense is of God, "which saveth the upright in heart." Before the day of his death David saw most of his enemies discomfited and put to shame, and learned that "the way of the wicked he turns upside down." I have the faith that God will protect and finally vindicate all of his servants as he protected and vindicated David. We may depend upon it that what God does not make right here and now, he will set right in the day of judgment. And it is upon this very promise that the apostle Peter bases his solemn adjuration for patience and holiness: "Finally, be ye all like-minded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tenderhearted, humble-minded: not rendering evil for evil, or reviling for reviling; but contrariwise blessing; for hereunto were ye called, that ye should inherit a blessing. For, he that would love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile; and let him turn away from evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and pursue it. For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears unto their supplication: but the face of the Lord is upon them that do evil. And who is he that will harm you, if ye be zealous of that which is good? But even if ye should suffer for righteousness' sake, blessed are ye: and fear not their fear, neither be troubled." (1 Pet. 3: 8-14.)

There recently appeared in the Baptist and Reflector a paragraph so full of pungent truth that it deserves more than a passing notice. It bears the caption, "Silence of Scriptures," and reads as follows:

"Where the word of God fails to speak, let us be silent," says our corresponding secretary in a timely message to our people. We cannot afford to parley and haggle over things which are not clearly and definitely stated in the Bible. There must be more than room for inferences or deductions on our part; it is not enough that we base our testimony on language into which it is possible for us to read our own meaning. If a doctrine is not of God's word, it will come to naught when the full truth of revelation is turned on it. If infant baptism, for example, is not authorized by the Holy Scriptures, and God's word does not speak of it positively one way or another, let no human voice be raised in support of it; and likewise let all tongues be silent against it, except to declare the whole truth of the Bible utterances cencerning the ordinance of which infant baptism is said to be a part by some who presume to speak where the word itself is silent. That will be sufficient.

I do not know the name of the corresponding secretary specifically referred to, but, whoever he is, he deserves a loud "amen" from all who are contending "for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." While, indeed, he gives only one-half of the slogan uttered by the Campbells and used with tremendous effect during the days of the Restoration movement, it is true that half a loaf is better than no loaf at all. If our religious neighbors, the Baptists, would only adopt the slogan suggested by the corresponding secretary, it would do much toward promoting religious unity and a better understanding.

But coming down to brass tacks, let me ask in all seriousness, if the Baptists really make up their minds to keep silent where the word of God fails to speak, what is to become of the Baptist name, the doctrines of close communion, justification by faith only, and other unscriptural tenets? Briefly put, will not all the denominational machinery, including the "corresponding secretary," fade away just like infant baptism? Somebody once said something about a man "being in the right church, but in the wrong pew." It is to be hoped that our esteemed cotemporary will persevere in the application of his well-chosen motto and make the job complete.

People usually talk about the things that fill their minds. "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." If we could ever reach that point where our thoughts are under perfect control, "casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ," then our language would be free from slander, profanity, false accusation, and all evil speaking. As between the choice of being like a rayen or a dove, one would prefer the dove. Another writer explains why:

When the flood began to recede, Noah sent out a raven from the ark, which returned not to him again, because she feund food and freedom on the carcasses which floated on the surface of the water. He later sent out a dove, which came back with a twig in her mouth, but which, after being sent forth a second time, came not back to him, because she had found food and liberty in the boughs of the trees. How many people there are who feed their imaginations on the rottenness there is in the world! They look for that which is corrupt; its existence they "roll as a sweet morsel under their tongues." They seem to be moral scavengers. Others look for that which is clean and beautiful and dwell in an atmosphere that is fragrant with their own purity of thought and nature. Both find what they look for, and enough of it to satisfy their demands,

It may be that all of us cannot be doves. But why should any one be a rayen?

In stating the qualifications of an elder Paul uses the expression, "not soon angry." To the Ephesians he wrote: "Be ye angry, and sin not: let not the sun go down upon your wrath." It thus appears that one may be angry and have a righteous indignation for a while without detriment to his soul. But the harm comes when one stays angry, for it is thus that anger becomes bitterness and wrath. The angry man has lost the battle before it begins. Anger is the fort on fire and the forces fleeing. It lends aid and comfort to the opposition by furnishing fuel for scorn and contempt. Of all passions which grip the souls of men, none is so easily checked at the start, but none more disastrously suicidal if not extinguished.

Was Sidney Rigdon the Original "Author and Proprietor" of the Whole Mormon Conspiracy?

BY R. B. NEAL.

I unhesitatingly answer, "He was," and am willing to affirm it before any pen Mormondom may select.

Query: When was "Mormonism" planted on the earth? Bear in mind that "Latter-Day Saintism" is an alias of "Mormonism." They are two labels for one and the same Answer: May 15, 1829.

Proof: "Words of the angel John (the Baptist) spoken to Joseph Smith, Jr., and Oliver Cowdery, as he laid his hands upon their heads and ordained them to the Aaronic Priesthood in Harmony, Susquehann County, Pa., May 15. 1829."

"Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the Friesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord of righteousness."

Joseph Smith was the first Baptist, and Oliver Cowdery was the first person to enter the Latter-Day Saint kingdom or church. Joseph Laptized Oliver, then Oliver

Joseph, and he was the second Mormon or Latter-Day Saint. They then "ordained" each other, no doubt at the same time, by the "laying on of hands" each on the head of the other. There and then was "Mormonism," alias Latter-Day Saintism, planted.

This Cowdery-Smith commission is the one under which every "Elder" labors and baptizes. No one on earth who cannot trace the hands "laid on his head" back to the hands of either Joseph Smith or Oliver Cowdery has any authority to baptize. The Mormons, both seers and both churches, repudiate the commission given by Jesus in the New Testament and rebaptize all who come to them who have been baptized under it.

Sidney Rigdon's name is not mentioned in this transaction, the "infancy," or birth of the church. Was he there? He must have been, for he said, on April 6, 1844, at Nauvoo, Ill., before the largest assembly the Mormons ever had: "I have known the history of this church from its infancy."

That is a positive statement, made at that Conference before Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, Brigham Young, Wilford Woodruff, with the Presidency, the Apostles, the High Council, and an immense number of Elders. No one contradicted it.

He also said: "I recollect in the year 1830, I met the whole Church of Christ (Mormon Church) in a little old log house about twenty feet square, near Waterloo, N. Y." No one contradicted that. Now every Elder would brand it a lie if he could. He said: "All the Elders, all the members met in conference in a room twenty feet square."

Proof: "Times and Seasons," Volume 5, pages 522-524. Their own paper and "Conference minutes."

This makes a corpse of the claim that Smith never saw Rigdon until after he was baptized in November, 1830. As further proof, Oliver Cowdery, in his "Renunciation of Mormonism and Denunciation of Joseph Smith, Jr.," published in 1839, pages 5-6, said, when he realized that Smith had "made a tool" of him: "And what served to render the reflections past expression in its bitterness to me, was, that from his hands I received baptism, by the direction of his angel of God, whose voice, as it has since struck me, did most mysteriously resemble the voice of Elder Sidney Rigdon, who, I am sure, had no part in the transactions of that day, as the angel was John the Baptist, which I doubt not and deny not. When I afterwards first heard Elder Sidney Rigdon, whose voice is so strikingly similar, I felt that this dead brother was to be in some sense, to me unknown, the herald of this church as the great John the Baptist was of Christ." Smith knew at the time the "angel" was Rigdon. They were trying to deceive Oliver. The above shows that Oliver "smelt a rat," and he gives us "a tip," is afraid to declare what he then knew would upset the whole Mormon scheme and advertise himself as both a tool and a fool. Was Rigdon there? He declares he was before tens of thousands of Mormons, with the Seer, the Presidency, and the Apostles on the front seat, and not a contradiction then or afterwards.

I have before me a copy of that rare and valuable book by E. D. Howe, "History of Mormonism," the first book published exposing the Mormon fraud. It ought to be republished. It would be helpful to the cause of truth. He gathered farts known facts, sworn facts, in the early days of the Latter-Day conspiracy. Here is the concluding sentence of this wenderful work: "We therefore must hold out Sidney Rigdon to the world as being the original 'Author and Proprietor' of the whole Mormon conspiracy until further light is elicited upon the lost writings of Solomon Spaulding"

Significant that the first men who seriously and industriously gathered facts of this fraud while they were fresh would reach such a conclusion.

The "further light" has come to light, and confirms and sinches the conclusion. Cowdery knew that John the Baptist was not an angel and never could be. He knew that an angel could never be a man. He identified "the voice" of that man-angel, and declared that Rigdon was "the John the Baptist of Mormonism." Rigdon says he was there. Was he? He was?

Buddhism's Marvelous Advance in America.

I am no alarmist. Years spent in the work of a newspaper man on the leading dailies of this country accustomed me to observe incidents without emotional bias. When a man has seen murders, riots, wars, court crises, and such things as happen in the grind of a newspaper career, he does not easily become excited.

But there is a crisis confronting the Christian church compared with which all our so-called "problems" pale into insignificance.

That crisis is the inroad of Buddhism under its various guises and aliases in this country.

The churches, denominations as well as our brotherhood, are being insidously undermined by a well-financed Buddhist propaganda, the extent and influence of which is almost unbelievable.

The whole scheme is so ingenious, so artistically planned, that were I not familiar with the aims of the Jesuits, I should believe them the fathers of the whole plan.

I am speaking sober truth—truth ascertained through the chastened confession of a man who himself was absorbed by the stupendous trickery, until he found himself ruined spiritually; a man once high in the Established Church of England, but now a spiritual bankrupt, according to his own confession.

Here is the whole device, outlined as briefly as I can

The Buddhists long for converts, as do advocates of all religions. They realized that, to the alert, chaste Western world, open missionary effort to convert men and women away from the Christian faith to Buddhism would be futile, even repulsive.

So they fell on this regimen:

First, wean susceptible Christian persons away from the Christian church. To do this, lecturers were engaged (and, in frank fairness to many of these lecturers themselves, I must admit that they are not aware that they are being thus used) to appeal to the psychological side of Christians, Meditation, self-examination, appeals to better healthfuless as a result of psychic study, etc., form the first step. Any one at all observant must have noticed the amazing number of psychological experts making their appearance in our cities during the days following the war. My own attention was first attracted by the elaborate programs of these men and women; they spent hundreds of thousands of dollars for billboard advertising, for newspaper space, often as much as whole pages, yet their lectures, given in the most expensive halls and auditoriums, were invariably free of charge. Investigation startled me when I discovered that Buddhist propagandists were financing these enterprising persons-of course, often through devious ways, so as not to reveal to the lecturers themselves the source of their revenue for expense; the thought being that, with Christianity decadent, patriotism would be lessened, and the doctrine of self set up supreme.

That this initial step proved successful every minister in the city churches knows well. Who of us has not seen some of his best members drop out of their accustomed place in the congregation, to attend "courses of lectures" on psychology, at first set for the evening Lord's-day hour, and eventually for the regular morning hour of service? Just a few days ago a woman, once the most faithful member of my own congregation, one of its most zealous supporters, apologized to me because she would not be able to make her usual subscription for improvements on the church building, for the reason that she did not have the spare money. Later in the day, unconscious of the fact she was revealing the reason, she asked to be excused from attendance on the evening services in the church, because, as she admitted, she had paid twenty-five dollars for a course of lectures on "Applied Psychology;" "and I cannot afford to miss one of these lectures after having paid for them all." This particular lecturer, a woman, following her public series, opened a class for her six hundred dupes.

The second step is more open.

Once weaned away from active Christian church influence, by an artistic arrangement the new member is copiously dosed with mystic suggestions, Oriental philosophy, appeals to optimism (which is but Buddhism's Western name for Kismet or Fatalism), etc.

Now the ground is fallow for injection of New Thought.

This is done with skill worthy of a better cause. Appeals to the physical nature, promises of improved health, etc., arouse the deluded individual, and New Thought opens its doors with a more advanced lesson in Orientalism. Even at this stage the New Thought convert would shudder at Buddhism; New Thought, he or she avers, is but an aid to a better comprehension of the Christ teaching.

It is but a step into Theosophy from New Thought. Their teaching is so similar that the difference is merely in definitiors. With Theosophy, Jesus Christ is the Son of God, just as we are all sons of God, by individual development. The deity of Jesus Christ is undermined in the conception of the new convert.

It is easy to see the next step.

Buddha, too, was in like manner the son of God. He becomes equal with Jesus Christ.

The once devout Christian is now an avowed Orientalist, Buddha has added a new recruit, and the Christian church has lost its hold on that once noble spirit forever.

This is no idle outline. These are facts I have ascertained against my own wish, in the cold investigation of affairs as they are in our midst,

And unless the churches of Christ, all the churches that name Jesus Christ as the Son of God, united and with differences laid aside, make a stand against this Jesuitical intrigue, another generation will behold America, God's second Land of Promise, lapsed into idolatry far more degrading than that which sent the ten tribes of Israel into oblivion.

There is but one remedy; a mighty evangelism with the fervid spirit of Christian enthusiasm, a voice crying in the wilderness with all the zeal of Jeremiah or John the Baptist.

Frankly, I am alarmed for the future of the nation that submits to this intrigue. God will not discriminate in our favor. As all empires have fallen when they forgot God, so America must perish from the face of the earth unless we check this new idolatry.

Our schools are already in the hands of these enemies of the living God. "Modern viewpoint" is the shibboleth of liberal education. We were too dull to see all this in time to check it in our schools; now we must meet it on the very threshold of God's house, the Christian church.

I appeal to the Christian press of America to investigate, and to cry aloud against this thing.—Arthur Talmage Abernethy, in Christian Standard.

Westward Bound.

BY S. H. HALL.

After more than two months' absence from Los Angeles, we are now on our journey back, and by the time this is seen by our readers we hope to be in Los Angeles.

Space forbids as full a report as I would like to make, but, briefly stated, I submit the following:

First, at Farmersville, Texas. Here I remained with the church for thirteen days, which resulted in twenty-one baptisms and eleven restorations and about five hundred dollars pledged for some needed work on their house of worship, on which they had already begun improvement. Brother Teddlie, student of Thorp Spring Christian College, led the singing, and did it well. He closed the meeting for me on Sunday following my departure on Friday night. I love the people at Farmersville, and hope to be with them again, and see no reason why they should not build up one of the greatest churches in Texas at that place. I heard many good things of Brother Wooldridge's work at that place, also of Brother Denton's visit and of Dr. Wood, of Dallas.

From Farmersville I hurried to Ada to be with Mrs, Hall's people a short while, and made a short visit to Shawnee, Okla., and spoke twice. I found a most excellent congregation, full of life and a burning desire to do greater things for the cause in that beautiful town. I had received a very urgent invitation to move there and work with them, and their zeal made me very much desire to do so.

My next stop was in Nashville, Tenn. And after visiting the Gospel Advocate office, I hurried out to mother's and had a pleasant stay with her, and then hurried on to Chattanooga, where I began a revival with the Cowart Street congregation. Words cannot express how very, very enjoyable the days were to me while in that town. My home was with Brethren Reuben Lee and Leslie Boyd and their splendid wives, with whom Sister Thomas, the widow of the lamented Jim Thomas, and her two daughters live. Every moment of the time was enjoyed, and the last night I was with them we sat up till after twelve o'clock at night talking about the welfare of the cause in Chattanooga. There were twelve additions, all told, before I left, and one was reclaimed and one confessed his faith in Christ the Sunday following. We hope to hear of others as a result of Brother Hugh E. Garrett's visit to that place on Sunday, October 9, Time forbids my saying all that I wish to say about the good people in Chattanooga and of the many old friends I met while there. We have six congregations, and they are locking forward to the establishment of more congregations.

Closing my work at Chattanooga on Friday night, September 30, I took the sleeper for Macon, Ga., where I spoke on Saturday night, October 1. I was glad to find the work doing well in the hands of Brother R. P. Cuff, who has agreed to remain with them another year.

At the close of the service at Macon, I took the sleeper for Atlanta, arriving there early in the morning of October 2, and went to the home of Brother N. A. Hunter for breakfast. It turned out to be a rainy, bad day, but never have I seen a day in California so bright as this rainy day turned out to be for me. Our house was filled, and all had to come through the rain. At night, though it continued to rain, our house was packed, due to visiting brethren from the South Pryor and East Point congregations. The collections for the day went above one hundred and thirty dollars, and three souls reconsecrated themselves to God.

So far as I could learn, the Atlanta work moves gloriously onward. Brother Goodpasture was away in a meeting, a thing I very much regretted. The work goes well in his hands. I hated to leave, but I left them Monday for mother's, where I spent a part of three days, then took the train for Amarillo, Texas, where I now am.

It was my intention to visit Savannah, Ga., before turning my face Westward, but I succeeded in getting the business matters there that needed attention attended to through the mails. We have some important announcements to make about this work soon. The work goes well at that place. Brother Ijams and wife have gone there to teach school, and he will do the most of the preaching there for the next twelve months. He is a strong, godly man, and I am so glad he is there. Brother J. B. Beck, who has been with them for more than a year, has been released to work elsewhere. Brother Jasper Copeland will remain there and help with the work. We have sixteen hundred dollars secured for the building fund, and definite announcements will soon be made of a better proposition than the one formerly announced for a house of worship in that city. Let it be remembered that we need more money, and I trust that every one who reads this will send a donation for that work to Brother J. N. Copeland, 2423 Barnard Street, Savannah, Ga., and it will be duly receipted and properly used. Don't forget this. We soon will have one of the best churches in Georgia in Savannah. Let us put her on her feet now, then hasten to another city or town that needs the gospel of Christ.

The services at Amarillo to-day (October 9) were very enjoyable both morning and evening, with one confession and baptism. Brother Frank Shepherd, who labors with this congregation, is at Albuquerque, New Mexico, in a mission meeting.

David Lipscomb College.

BY S. P. PITTMAN.

It is gratifying to know that so many all over the country are deeply interested in the progress of David Lipscomb College. There may be a few persons with an imaginary grievance or a fancied scrupulous objection who oppose the college out and out and wish to see its downfall. There are many, no doubt, who look upon this school with supreme indifference, caring neither for its success nor for its failure; but there are thousands of good men and women scattered over a large area eagerly solicitous about the welfare of the institution they have attended, or have patronized, or have seen patronized by some friend and companion.

When our friends are expecting great things of us, it stimulates us to do great things.

To feel that the school should undergo no changes in policy or in methods is a mistake. While the world moves rapidly on and changes are constantly being made in the business world; while society is undergoing such radical changes; while governmental methods are frequently changing, is it any wonder that there should be an occasional change in educational and institutional policies and methods?

There are certain fundamental principles, however, upon which the old Nashville Bible School was founded that are retained with more or less loyalty and rigidity by the institution that now bears the name "David Lipscomb College." The spirit of devotion to the Bible as the most important book and the development of the moral and spiritual sensibilities of the students are still in evidence, and it is to be hoped always will be, as long as this institution of learning remains in the educational field.

The session of 1921-22 has fairly well begun, and, without speaking in the least disparagingly of former years, this session bids fair to be one of the most interesting, as well as one of the smoothest, in the history of the school. The attendance is not so large as it has been during some years, but a spirit of harmony and coöperation prevails. Under the supervision of Brother Horace S. Lipscomb there is manifest a spirit of enthusiasm and studiousness that will bring results in the future, and the students of the present session will be an advertisement for the school. The presence of Brother Elam in the Bible department betokens stability and loyalty to the word of God. There are other additions to the faculty that add strength to the teaching force. It is hoped that the year will pass without the necessity of strict measures of discipline, so unpleasant to both teacher and pupil.

If brethren could only realize the importance of putting their boys and girls under the right kind of influence, the David Lipscomb College and similar institutions would be taxed beyond their capacity, and there would be a demand for more and more such schools.

A young man in one of the State normal schools who formerly was a student in David Lipscomb College writes as follows: "I hope for David Lipscomb College a prosperous year. As I mix with students and teachers of worldly institutions of learning, I realize more and more the greatness of the work done in David Lipscomb College." This is but a sample of the sentiment cherished by hundreds of men and women who are now ex-students of this school.

Notice From State Department of Public Instruction.

Nashville, Tenn., October 11, 1921.—To the Ministers of Tennessee: The week beginning October 30 has been designated "Education Week." During this week it is desired that the patrons of each school in the State assemble at the school buildings for the purpose of conferring together on the condition and needs of the schools. All of the ministers in the State are invited and urged to start this campaign off by delivering a sermon on the subject of education at one service on Sunday, October 20. The State Department of Education will appreciate your cooperation in this campaign. Upon request, we shall be glad to furnish you information concerning school conditions in Tennessee.

For All the Days of All the Years.

To keep my health!
To do my work!
To live!
To see to it I grow and gain and give!
Never to look behind me for an hour!
To wait in weakness and to walk in power,
But always fronting forward to the light,
Always, and always facing toward the right,
Robbed, starved, defeated, fallen, wide astray—
On, with what strength I have!
Back to the way!

The True and Living God. No. 1. BY JOHN D. EVANS.

It is told of a poor peasant in the mountains of Wales that month after month, year after year, through a long period of declining life, every morning as soon as he awoke, he opened his window toward the east to see if Christ was coming to take him home. But the Christ for whose appearing he waited so long could have been found each day as an "unseen guest" in his own humble cottage. The Lord he sought in the skies might have been found by his side—yea, in his very soul.

The same is true of Jehovah, our God. The apostle Paul declared that "he is not far from each one of us," that "we are his offspring," and that "in him we live and move and have our being." Yet for ages the world has been groping its way in darkness in the ceaseless effort to find himscientists, philosophers, theologians, each in his own way. The astronomer seeks to find him in the stars; the geologist, in the earth formations; the botanist, in the flowers and plants. The pantheist makes him identical with the universe. He sees him in the flower, in the stone, in the tree, in the light, in the heat and cold, in earth or in heaven. The aggregate of these material things makes the God of pantheism, a view shared in a large measure by modern so-called "Christian Scientists." Such a God is without thought, without emotion, tenderness, mercy, or love, and is not, therefore, the God revealed in the Bible.

Neither art, nor science, nor philosophy, nor geology, nor botany, nor pantheism, can create the God of the Bible. He is more than the sum of them all. God is not nature, and nature is not God.

It is true his wisdom and power are revealed to us in the book of nature. He is the God of nature and the author of all its laws. He guides the planets and gives instinct to the birds and to the souls of men. He created the material heavens and the material earth. "He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing." He giveth all physical life and breath, and hast "made of one blood all the nations to dwell on the face of the earth." "He hath made everything beautiful in its time."

It is true that "the heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge." But the Bible only reveals him to us in all his attributes, our relation to him and his relation to us as our Creator and Father.

Notwithstanding the fact that the idea of God is the "center of the spiritual universe, the focal point of human thought" and of all history and experience, it has been regarded by thousands as an improper subject for investigation. Centuries ago the question was raised: "Canst thou by searching find out God?" And one of the world's greatest poets said:

"Know then thyself, presume not God to sean; The proper study of mankind is man."

But there is within the heart of the being whom God created in his own image a burning desire to know more of his Creator. Like the patient man of Uz, he is continually saying; "O that I knew where I might find him, that I might come unto his seat!" With Philip, the evangelist, we are crying cut: "Show us the Father, and it sufficeth us."

In the wenderful book called "The Bible" God has revealed unto us all that is necessary for us to know about him. In it we come "face to face" with him. We meet upon common ground. He is Spirit; so are we. Our spirits came from him. They are God-breathed. Our spirit, soul, and body are declared to be his. The worship that we render him must be "in spirit and in truth." It is with our spiritual eye that we are able to behold him. Only the "pure in heart" can see him.

All that he has seen fit to reveal concerning himself, his plans and his purposes, it is not only our privilege, but our duty, to know. As we open the inspired volume the first great fact that confronts us is: "In the beginning God!" That idea permeates every page from Genesis to Revelation. God, the creator and designer; Christ, the executor; and the Holy Spirit, the revealer—these constitute the subject-matter of the world's greatest library.

In the development of God's plans and purposes from creation until now, each of these divine beings has had his distinctive work; yet, in all that has to do with the happiness and well-being of the race of man, "these three are one." With becoming reverence, in the spirit of humility, let us trace the course of events in the sacred volume that have to do with God's revelation of himself and the gradual unfolding of his plans and purposes. The writer of the Hebrew letter announces that "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spoke in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son."

In the patriarchal age God revealed himself to the patriarchs directly; in the Mosaic dispensation, through Moses and the prophets; in these last days he "hath spoken unto us by his Son." Now "no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him."

As we turn the pages of the sacred record we find the name of Jehovah inseparably interwoven with the destinies of men and nations. He was in the world in its creation, in its preservation, in its history, and in its redemption. In nature he ruled by great forces; in history, by great principles; in governments, by just laws; and in human hearts, by love. He established Israel among the peoples of the earth, and kept her in the midst of warlike nations, and made her a saving power, a blessing to "all the nations of the earth." It was a part of the divine plan that this nation should preserve the worship of the true and living God. He revealed himself to the Jew, not simply as their Gcd, Lawgiver, and King, but as a merciful and loving Father. He took them, as it were, by the hand and led them over the rough and dangerous places, and ever in their journeyings he was to them a loving and tender Shepherd. Like David, they could lie down at night in perfect security, believing confidently that he who "never slumbers nor sleeps" would suffer no ill to befall them. With him they could say: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters," etc. How fortunate were the chosen leaders among the patriarchs and prophets whom he honored by a direct revelation of his will.

Abraham, living quietly among his kindred and friends, heard his voice, commanding him to sever his home ties and go into a land which he would show him, and immediately heeded the call and "went out, not knowing" what the future held in store for him. His obedience to the divine call changed the history of the human race. Leaving a pagan land and a pagan ancestry, in the providence of God he became the ancestor of the Hebrew race, the "friend of God," the spiritual father of all who believe.

Enoch lived so close to God that the death sentence promounced upon the fallen race at Eden was suspended in his case, "and he was not; for God took him." Thus in that ancient day was the world given the pledge of immortality.

Isaac at different intervals had his way cheered by the voice of Jehovah, saying: "I am the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, thy God, and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Jacob, tired and weary in his journey, could lie down at night with a stone for his pillow and in his dreams see a ladder erected from earth to heaven, on which "the angels of God were ascending and descending;" and after the vision had passed away he could feel and realize that this was "none other than the house of God."

Moses sees him in the burning bush in Midian and hides his face. He was made to realize that the place upon which he stood was "holy ground," for God was there. Again, amidst Sinai's thunderings he cries out: "I pray thee, show me thy glory."

Job, after expressing the fervent desire that he "might find God and come even to his seat," says: "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee."

The sweet singer of Israel while tending his flocks at night could look up to the starry firmament and, "beholding the glory thereof, exclaim: "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; what is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?" Indeed, so fully did he realize the presence of his God that he raised the question which carries with it the answer: "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me." No wonder he could say: "How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them! If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand: when I awake, I am still with thee." Truly all Israel could confidently say: "Great is our God above all gods!" And again: "Jehovah is our God, and beside him there is no other." The objects of his continual watch care and tender love, they could say with the poet:

Beyond the dim unknown Stands God, within the shadows, Keeping watch above his own.

In every dispensation God has provided and designated meeting places, where his people could commune with him and he with them, and where he would record his name and manifest his glory. In the patriarchal age an altar was erected in the home, in which the head of the family was the offic ating priest. This period has been aptly called the "starlight dispensation" of God's grace and mercy.

Later, under the explicit direction of Jehovah, tabernacle worship was instituted, where sacrificial offerings were made, and where, by priestly mediation, the sins of the people were rolled forward "year by year continually" until the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" should by "one offering" in the end of the ages "put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." In this movable tent, or tabernacle, his people assembled and communed with him. Here he recorded his name and filled the house with his giory.

After a few hundred years of tabernacle worship it came into the heart of David, king of Israel, to "build a house for the Lord." But God said to him: "Thou shalt not build a house for my name, because thou hast been a man of war, and hast shed blood . . . Solomon thy son, he shall build my house and my courts: for I have chosen him to be my son, and I will be his father." This "palace" which Solomon is to build, declared David, is "not for man, but for the Lord God." Then "Solomon determined to build a house for the name of the Lord, and a house for his kingdom." "The house which I build," says Solomon, "is great: for great is our God above all gods." When he had completed the building according to divine specifications and had placed therein the ark of the covenant, containing the two tables of stone which Moses put therein at Horeb, when the Lord made a covenant with Israel when they came out of Egypt, he stood before the altar of the Lord in the presence of all the congregation of Israel and spread forth his hands. Later he knelt upon the rostrum, or "scaffold," which had been erected, and said: "O Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth; which keepest covenant and showest mercy unto thy servants, that walk before thee with all their hearts." "Now when Solomon had made an end of praying, the fire came down from heaven and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and the glory of the Lord filled the house." "And the Lord appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him, I have heard thy prayer, and have chosen this place to myself a house of sacrifice. . . . For now I have chosen and sanctified this house, that my name may be there forever: and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually." In this and the succeeding temple the devout Jews met and communed with their God for a thousand years or more until the temple worship was abrogated at the cross of the true Messiah and New Testament worship was instituted in the city of David on the first Pentecost after our Lord's resurrection. The Mohammedans had their "Kabah," or national shrine, in Arabia, upon the walls of which was written: "Within the Kabah it matters not whither men turn. God is everywhere." To the devout few every spot in the temple was hallowed ground. Like the Psalmist, they were continually chanting: "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go unto the house of the Lord." It was there that they were permitted to commune with the true and living God.

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY.

Best Premium Offer to Preachers.

The greatest preachers of the past two centuries attribute much of their inspiration and usefulness to Matthew Henry's Commentary on the whole Bible. Born in the seventeenth century, his name and his work still live and are household words. Thousands of homes treasure this commentary second only to the Bible, and many a man traces his right start to the loving advice and homely counsel of Matthew Henry.

Charles H. Spurgeon said: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering sparrows around an old gable toward the close of autumn." Dr. Philip Schaff, compiler of Schaff's Bible Dictionary, pronounces it "the best practical and devotional commentary for English readers." Here you will find a mine of expository knowledge and a complete preachers' commentary.

The management of the Gospel Advocate is fortunate in securing twenty-five sets of this unrivaled commentary, which will be sent as a premium to every preacher who will send twenty-five new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2.50 per year. This is undoubtedly the most attractive premium offer ever made to preachers. You will receive six portable volumes of twelve hundred pages each, large, clear, unbroken type, with substantial Roxborough binding, and will have the satisfaction of knowing that the work of the prince of commentators is in your library. If you wish to pay cash, the price for the six volumes is $17.50, not prepaid. When sent as a premium, we pay all charges.

Suggestion to Churches. If you wish to give your preacher a gift that he would prize always and at the same time get the best religious weekly in the homes of your members, get busy and send us the twenty-five subscribers. Your effort will help the church, please the preacher, and encourage the Gospel Advocate. Sample copies of the Gospel Advocate and subscription blanks furnished upon request. Let us hear from you promptly.

Jealousy.

BY C. R. N.

You have heard of the man who placed over the mantel in his sitting room the placard: "We will speak no evil here." If visitors began to make evil reports or say evil things about any one, he would point to the placard. In my father's office I saw the placard: "Jehovah sees and knows what we say and do."

For a number of years I have been trying to preach, and though I have not accomplished all I have desired in the work of the Master, some success has attended my efforts; and I know some brethren who have labored, I am certain, as faithfully as I have, whose efforts have not been crowned with the visible success that has attended mine.

Is there one who thinks I am bragging on my work? If you do, you do me an injustice. Each sermon I preach I realize that I am unable to do all I would; and when I engage in retrospection, it seems to me I have accomplished so little in my life work. I am not ashamed of what I have accomplished, but I am far from the feeling that I can boast of having done a great work in comparison with what I should have accomplished.

Though I have met with some success in the work of preaching the gospel, and though my brethren have called me to defend the truth in a great many debates—possibly in more debates have I engaged than any other brother among us—who, who in all the brotherhood is jealous of me? I insist that there is not a preacher in the entire brotherhood who is envious of me or the work I have done—not one—nor of the work I am able to do now; and I think I have never had a greater capacity for work than just now, and was never so well prepared for work. Instead of being jealous of me, I have ever found, and I find now, my preaching brethren not only willing, but ever ready—yea, anxious—to lend me any assistance they possibly can, even to their own personal discomfort.

Yesterday I had a letter from a young preacher, in which he said: "I regard you as a great man; but if there is ever a time when I can assist you, please command me fully." From another only last week I had a letter, in which he said: "I will never be able to defend the truth in debate like you have and can, but let me serve you in any way possible." Another writes me: "I know you are busy—you are always busy, they tell me—but I want you to assist me some; and I know you can and will, for you are a friend of the young preachers, as well as the older ones." Who has ever entertained the idea that a preacher of the gospel is jealous of me?

I wonder what, when, and where can be found the basis for the charge which is so often seen in our papers about preacher jealousy? I confess to you I am unable to see the ground for this oft-repeated charge, and I have an idea I know as many preachers as any man among us.

Foy E. Wallace, Jr., one of our most successful evangelists in Texas, was with the church in Lometa, Texas, for a meeting—a place where I have engaged in two debates and assisted in many meetings. In the meeting Foy Wallace assisted in there were about one hundred and fifty additions. That is a larger number than I baptized in three meetings I assisted in there. Who thinks I am jealous of Foy, or that there is a preacher in Texas jealous of Foy E. Wallace, Jr.? We rejoice in his work, and the preachers tell of the great meeting.

G. C. Brewer has recently moved to Texas, and this summer he assisted in a meeting in Cleburne, Texas, with one hundred and fifty additions. Thinkest thou there is in Texas a man jealous of G. C. Brewer? Ask Brewer what has been his reception at the hands of the preachers in Texas.

Recently I was in a meeting in Nashville, Tenn. It was reasonably successful. One night I counted in the audience twenty-one preachers, and every night of the meeting there were preachers to hear me. Who thinks there is in Nashville a preacher jealous of me?

Possibly if I regarded myself as some great one, if I feared some one would receive some of the honor which I think should be mine, if I was suspicious, I might see something which would lead me to say some one was jealous.

It is a serious charge to make that preachers are jealous, and I rise at this juncture to resent the wholesale charge which is being made. I propose to take the task of defending C. M. Pullias against this charge that he is jealous. No, Brother Pullias has not retained me as his counsel, but I am self-appointed, and rather court the opportunity to see the specific charges against him. But do you say that the charge of jealousy has not been made against Brother Pullias? He is a preacher, is he not? The charge is jealousy among preachers. If it is not Pullias, you should not bring him under the charge by the wholesale charge. Is it F. B. Srygley, or T. Q. Martin, or W. P. Skaggs, or J. W. Chism, or is it some young preacher-J. W. Brents, Foy E. Wallace, or Kearby Bentley? do I know to whom you make reference when you make the charge of preacher jealousy? There are many brethren who do not know me, and some of them may think this preacher-jealousy charge is against me. Some one may think it is H. Leo Boles who is envious. Cease this injustice you do us by this charge.

In all the world there is not to be found such a self-sacrificing body of men as are the preachers of the church of Christ, and their love for each other is so great that it seems to me that they are almost clannish.

Bitter speaking against your brethren should not be indulged.

Charity is not necessarily the giving of alms; it may be bestowed in a word, look, or smile. Sometimes a gentle rebuke may be the truest form of charity.

The Soldier of the Cross.

BY OSCAR SMITH

This is an age of superstition and fanaticism. One can find any kind of religion in the world that he desires. But there are only two roads that can be traveled. One leads to eternal death and despair, and is called the "broad road." The other leads upward, and is sometimes steep and rugged, and the traveler is often exposed to dangers; but by pressing onward his feet at last press the golden circle of the infinite, and he will be supremely happy throughout eternity.

The Christian life is a warfare. It is a conflict between righteousness and unrighteousness, between Christ and Satan. The soldier of Christ, having vowed eternal fidelity to his Leader and Captain, marches onward and upward with his banner ablaze, singing as he goes:

"I have lifted up the banner
That has never known defeat;
I have burned the bridge behind me,
And I never shall retreat."

As he thus marches, his feet are "shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." His weapon is the "sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." From the time that this sword was unsheathed on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ, it swept on its dazzling way, until it was said: "Have they not heard? Yes verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world." (Rom. 10: 18.) The soldier of the cross does not sulk in his tent when he hears the call to conflict. His feet are resting upon the Rock of Ages, which defies the tremor of earthquakes and the corrosion of time. His eyes are fixed on the Son of God, whose blood was shed on Calvary; and by an earnest, persistent effort he succeeds in gaining admission to that incomparable city not made with hands, "eternal, in the heavens."

Permanent Work.

BY J. K. BENTLEY.

During the few years of my ministry I have preached and held meetings in thirty-eight counties of Texas, and have preached some in Oklahoma and Arkansas. I have baptized three hundred and fifteen persons. Making a rough guess, I would say that perhaps one hundred of these are faithful members of the church. I have sometimes felt that some of my work was practically wasted. Why? Because I was only able to stay long enough to see them become members of the family of God, and then had to leave these "babes" in Christ without any care or food, either to starve or become victims of Satan's "fiery darts." I now realize that some of my efforts were just about as sensible as for a father to wait for his child to be born and then leave the helpless mother and child to get along the best they could.

When the apostles went into a new field, they either stayed with the new converts or left some other competent person to care for them, teach, encourage, and strengthen them till they became strong enough to stand alone and feed themselves. We cannot establish the cause on a permanent basis in a ten-days' meeting. It is my opinion that an evangelist can accomplish more by remaining in one county and staying at one place until the new converts become "rooted and grounded" in the faith, cemented and compacted together in love. It is my heart's desire to spend my time next spring, summer, and fall in one county, holding meetings, baptizing people, and then to feed them, "teaching them to observe all things" Jesus commanded. until they become "strong in the Lord," lest my work should be burned. May God help us to see the white harvest fields, and give us a desire to send laborers into the harvest to gather the precious sheaves.

Personal Notes.

Lee P. Mansfield closed at Hickory, Okla., with twelve baptisms.

- A. M. Lemmons baptized eight in a meeting in Ravenden, Ark. Two restorations.
- T. W. Phillips closed in Osceola, Texas, with four baptized and two restored.
- J. M. Childress baptized three in a meeting at Healdton, Okla. He reports a great field for workers to be found wherever he goes.

John M. Rice baptized fifteen in a meeting in Dill, Okla. He is now, with Ira Y. Rice directing the song service, in a meeting in Guthrie, Okla.

J. S. Dunn baptized eight in a meeting in Rutherford, Tenn., and the congregation aroused to greater efforts. Jim Dunn never fails to make the church rejoice and do greater things.

Elvin Bost closed near Fort Gibson, Okla., with thirty baptisms and three restorations. In the past nine weeks Brother Bost has baptized some seventy-five in Muskogee County, Okla.

From Tice Elkins, Fort Worth, Texas, October 4: "The meeting at Rosen Heights, this city, is one week old, with twenty-two added—sixteen by baptism. Three were baptized at South Side Church and one took membership last Sunday."

- T. W. Phillips is in his second meeting with the church in Osceola, Ark., this year. The outlook is promising for a successful meeting. Brother Phillips is available for some work after November 15. Write him at 1014 College Avenue, Fort Worth, Texas.
- J. B. Nelson closed a meeting in Tahlequah, Okla, where for a few weeks about eighteen members had been meeting for the regular services appointed by the Master. There was only one baptized, but a congregation of thirty-seven members now in the place as the immediate result of the meeting.

From F. L. Young, Paris, Texas, October 10: "After continuing twelve nights, the West Paris meeting closed last night. There were two baptized and three restored. I begin to-night at Tioga, Texas, and expect to continue ten or twelve days. Our congregation is doing well. Peace and good will prevail."

W. H. George changes his address from Wewoka, Okla., to Bonham, Texas, where he will labor with the church. Brother George reports: Meeting in Marlow, Okla., closed with six baptisms; at Delight, Ark., with three baptisms; Billtown, Ark., five baptisms; Nathan, Ark., six baptisms; near Bonham, Texas, with six baptisms.

D. S. Ligon, of Denton, Texas, is in a meeting at Ola, Ark. The meeting is moving along very well, considering the conditions. He says: "The church here is having a hard fight with the organ question. In the first place, the town is not religiously disposed; but picture shows, the pool hall, and other worldly things go well here."

Cled E. Wallace baptized three in Winfield, Ala., and seven in Hamilton, Ala. This was the first visit of Brother Wallace to Alabama, and he reports a most delightful stay with the brethren in the places named, and trusts to assist in the work there as well as other places again. Brother Wallace is one of our great men of Texas.

John E. Dunn changes his address from Irving, Texas, to 905 Ferris Avenue, Waxahachie, Texas. Correspondents should note the change. Brother Dunn wishes to have letters at once from the places expecting or wishing him for meetings another year. He has made some partial promises, and desires to hear from all such, that he may have his work outlined by January 1. If you wish him for next year, write him

From J. A. Hudson, Oklahoma City, Okla., October 10: "Yesterday was a beautiful fall day. It was also a good day with us at the Tenth Street and Francis Avenue Church. There were five additions—one baptized (a fine young man), one reclaimed, and three identified with us locally who had been members elsewhere. This brings our membership to three hundred and eighty-six. We want more strength yet, but we want, above all, to get closer to God."

From T. E. Tatum, Hallsville, Texas, October 12: "The neeting at Malvern, Ark., began on the night of September 8 and certinued twenty days. We found six members of the church of Christ upon my arrival. We 'set in order' a congregation and enrolled ten more names of members whom we found while there. We restored one to the fellowship. The meeting was held on a beautiful lawn on the courthouse grounds. I preached four sermons on Baker Hill, a suburb of Malvern. Many people listened attentively, and I believe the seed of the kingdom was sown in good and honest hearts and that a harvest of souls will be reaped at Malvern. Some good preacher should be located there for full time in the city and its suburbs, all of which contain about seven thousand people. A committee was appointed to look after a lot and the erection of a church house."

D. S. Ligon writes: "The meeting at Booneville, Ark., closed with seven baptisms, and the church seemed greatly There is much work needed encouraged in the Lord's work. in that part of Arkansas, and I hope the brethren will do more as the days come and go. One lady made the confession and set the time for the baptizing, but I understand the Baptist preacher waited on her and it was all off. I now at home looking after home affairs for a few days. am to begin a meeting at Ola, Ark., on October 10 to continue for several days. The church at Ola is divided over the organ, and this is bad, but I hardly think it is as bad as where the church is divided over a preacher. of some people, the interest of the preacher is greater in them than the cause of Christ, and some few preachers in this fair land of ours seem to think they must preach at a certain town even if it does divide the church. Brethren, the world is too big for a preacher to stay at a place as a hired servant when it will divide the brethren. Think more of the cause of Christ."

QUERY DEPARTMENT BY J. C. McQUIDDY.

J. W. Wyatt, of Dresden, Tenn., wishes to know if there is any scripture to justify a member's being withdrawn from for saying there are contradictions in the Bible, when he proposes to prove his statement and the churches refuse to hear him. He refers to the last chapter of First Samuel and the first chapter of Second Samuel, which he claims is a contradiction. In the last chapter of Samuel it is stated that Saul took his sword and fell upon it; and when his armor-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise upon his sword and died with him. This is evidently the true account. The language of the Amalekite in claiming that he himself slew Saul is evidently a fabrication. In many of the particulars it is grossly self-contradictory. There is no fact in the case but the bringing of the crown, or diadem, and bracelets of Saul, which, as he appears to have been a plunderer of the dead, he must have found on the field of battle. These he brought to David, telling him that he had dispatched Saul simply to ingratiate himself with David. When we put the proper interpretation on the two accounts, there is no contradiction at all.

G. C. Mayo, of Milan, Tenn., says: "(1) Please explain through the Gospel Advocate Mark 1: 15 and Acts 20: 21, as some contend that repentance comes before faith and cite these passages for proof. (2) Please explain Rom. 8: 26, as that is cited for proof of direct operation of the Holy Spirit. (3) Is this found in the Bible: 'Cursed be the dead if it rains in their face?'"

1. Mark 1: 15 reads as follows: "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe in the gospel." The Jews referred to in this passage had been brought up to believe in the true God. Their practical failure in life was the need to repent, that they might be the better prepared to believe the gospel. They were to repent of their sins against God and to believe in the coming Messiah. The facts of the gospel are that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, was buried, and upon the third day rose according to the Scriptures, as we learn from 1 Cor. 15: 1-4. These Jews could not be expected to repent of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ before it occurred. Hence, the correct position is that they were to repent of having sinned against God and believe the gospel of good news, or glad tidings. Acts 20: 21 reads: "Testifying both to Jews and to Greeks repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." The "Greeks" referred to in this passage are not Gentiles, as some think, but they were Jews either outside of Judea or those who had been proselyted from the Gentiles. The translation would have been clearer by the word "Hellenist." The same is to be found in Acts 6: 1, where we know that it does not refer to the Gentiles. The "Helleeni" of Acts 20: 21 and "Helleeniston" of Acts 6: 1 have a different meaning entirely from the "Ethnesans" (Gentiles) of Acts 11: 18. As these believed in God, they were requested to repent toward God. They were not taught to repent toward Christ before they believed in him, for such a thing would have been an impossibility. No man can repent of a sin until he believes that he has been guilty of that sin. A man could not repent toward Christ unless he first believed in Christ. These men believed in God; hence, they were asked to adjust their lives in harmony with their faith, that they might be better prepared to accept the truth concerning the Messiah.

2. Rom. 8: 26 is as follows: "And in like manner the Spirit also helpeth our infirmity: for we know not how to pray as we ought; but the Spirit himself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." The Spirit helps us to bear our trials. God gives the Spirit to those who obey him. "And we are witnesses of these things; and so is the Holy Spirit, whom God hath given to them that obey him." (Acts 5: 32.) "And because ye are sons, God sent forth the Spirit of his Son Into our hearts, crying, Abba, Father." (Gal. 4: 6.) We receive the Spirit through the word of God. The seed of the kingdom is the word of God. In the seed there dwells the germ of life. The Spirit operates and works through the word. John 6: 63 declares: "It is the spirit that giveth life; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I have spoken unto you are spirit, and are life."

3. Our brother has quoted a homemade scripture to suit the occasion, and, so far as my knowledge goes, this is nowhere found in the Bible. This is a kind of superstition of which Christians should not be guilty. The thing for Christians to do is to read the Bible, study it, and then love and appropriate the truths that it teaches.

G. H. O'Neal, of Kelso, Tenn., asks this question: "What do you think is the character and teaching of the Bible about taking the collection before or after the Lord's Sup-We have discussed this, and some of the brethren think it is right to take the collection before the Supper, of which I approve, and some advocate taking it after the Supper." This is clear proof that some brethren are prone to discuss things that are of no importance. They are like the class of which the Savior said: "Ye blind guides, that strain out the gnat, and swallow the camel!" (Matt. 23: 24.) "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I gave order to the churches of Galatia, so also do ye. Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper, that no collections be made when I come." (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.) While this tells us upon the first day of the week to lay by in store as prospered, it does not state whether the contribution shall be before or after the Lord's Supper. It is true Acts 2; 42 says: "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the prayers." Simply because a thing is mentioned first, it does not follow that it must be first. Luke also speaks of a man building a house, and digging deep and laying a foundation. This does not mean that the house must be built before the foundation is laid. Also, we learn that the God of our fathers has raised up Jesus, whom he slew and hanged on a tree. If because a thing is mentioned first it must be done first, then Jesus was raised up, slain, and afterwards hanged on a tree. Every one knows that exactly the opposite is true. Jesus was hanged on a tree, slain, and afterwards raised up. There are some things left to our common sense and judgment. Everything should be done decently and in order. It does not make any difference whether the contribution is taken before or after the Supper. Our concern should be to see that we contribute, and that we contribute liberally as God has prospered us upon each first day of the week. By neglecting this we are guilty of violating the law of God.

Christmas Stories and Legends.

The above is the title of a new book for children, which was compiled by Phebe A. Curtiss, author of "White Gifts for the King." No greater teaching force has ever been discovered than the story, and no one has ever lived who used that force so skillfully as did our Great Teacher. It is not strange, then, that among all the stories that have ever been written or told, none are so dear to us as those which center around his birth. Young and old alike delight in them and never tire of hearing them. Each story in the new book has its own sweet lesson. It makes an exceptionally pleasing gift for the children. The price is $1.25, postpaid. Order from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

Carrying Things to Carrie.

Belle Norton rushed into the house like a brisk west wind, ran upstairs to her room, and soon came stumbling down again, counting over some pieces. "O, mother," she exclaimed, "isn't it lovely? I can do it just as well as not. Here is seventy-five cents, all from my own 'reserve.'"

Mrs. Norton, being used to Belle's sudden enthusiasms, kept steadily knitting while she asked: "What is it that you can do, Belle?"

"Carry something to Carrie Stanley. You know she has been dreadfully sick, and now she is beginning to get better, and the girls are all thinking up things to take her; and I have thought of something just perfectly beautiful. My, but wouldn't I like it myself! Carnations are high, but seventy-five cents will buy half a dozen, and I have decided to get two dark-red, two white, and two of the lovely day-breaks. I shall arrange them for her myself; and then, mamma, I thought I would take a large tumblerful of currant jelly that you taught me how to make last summer. It came out so well, you know, and I want to tell Carrie that I made it myself. Don't you think that's a nice plan, Mrs. Knitley?"

Mrs. Norton hesitated a moment before she answered. "I don't know, Belle. Perhaps it is; but if I were in your place, I would go over to Mrs. Stanley's and inquire what will be the best for Carrie."

"O, dear! I wanted it to be a sort of surprise. I just love surprises!"

"You wouldn't want it to be a disappointing surprise, would you?"

"No-o," said Belle, reluctantly.

"You see," Mrs. Norton went on, "they don't have any too much money to use at Mrs. Stanley's. I'm afraid they depend a good deal on old Mr. Norcross' pension. Of course, there has been a good deal of extra expense while Carrie has been ill; it may be that she needs some things that they don't feel able to buy."

"All right, mother." Belle's high spirits had all come back again. "I'll run right over to Carrie's, and perhaps I shall be the one to get a surprise."

And she certainly did get a surprise—several surprises. When Mrs. Stanley came to the door, there was a worried look on her face, and she seemed sort of relieved when she saw Belle standing there with nothing in her hands.

"We heard that Carrie was beginning to get better," Belle began quickly, "and I thought perhaps there might be something I could bring her."

"Y-yes," Mrs. Stanley spoke nervously, "the girls are very thoughtful—very kind; some of them have brought in things to Carrie already."

"O, have they? What have they brought?"

Mrs. Stanley hesitated a moment. Then, as if it were an effort to speak each word, she said: "Step in and see."

Wondering what the mystery could mean, Belle followed Mrs. Stanley into the house. "Don't speak very loud," she said; "Carrie is not strong enough to see much company yet, and she would surely want to see you if she knew you were here. Right in this way."

"O," cried Belle. "what beautiful lilies! And the room is full of their sweet perfume! Doesn't Carrie just love them? Who brought them?"

"Sh-h!" warned Mrs. Stanley, closing the door. "Lily Pembroke brought them. 'They will speak my name to Carrie,' she said, with her sweet smile, and they must have cost ever so much. But do you know"—Mrs. Stanley lowered her voice as if she were afraid some one was listening —"Carrie is so weak and sensitive that she can't bear to have the lilies in her room. The perfume makes her faint."

"Dear me," said Belle, "I never knew sickness could affect anybody like that."

"Of course, Lily didn't understand it. And it was the same way with the girls that have brought these things for Carrie to eat. Here are three tumblers of nice jelly. But Carrie can't eat anything so acid as that yet. Nor these salads, nor this rich spiced cake; and—O, dear me!—here is a thick mince pie that fairly makes your mouth water. That—well, I guess I won't mention any names. Father and I eat these good things, of course; but father says that every mouthful chokes him when he thinks of what Carrie ought to have, and his pension isn't due for two weeks, and—"

"What are the things that Carrie ought to have, Mrs. Stanley?" asked Belle, quickly.

"Fresh eggs, the doctor says, and nourishing beef broth. And he did speak of lamb chop, broiled; but, of course, everything is so high."

"If you will excuse me—I have an errand down the street
—I will be back later, and just say 'Hello!' to Carrie."
Belle started down the steps and then ran back. "Mrs.
Stanley, what—what would you ask for if you were going to get a piece of beef to make broth?"

"What they call a shin piece, just where they stop cutting the steak," Mrs. Stanley answered so quickly that it was evident she was thinking of that very piece of meat. "But, Belle, you mustn't."

But Belle was flying down the street and never stopped till she ran up the steps into Ryland's New Market. "Mr. Ryland," she began between her quick breaths, "how much are fresh eggs?"

"Maplewood Farm eggs are seventy-two cents a dozen."
Belle did a bit of mental arithmetic. "I'll take three."
"Three dozen?" stared Mr. Ryland.

"No; three eggs. They are for a girl that is just getting over a sickness, and she needs nourishing food. And now"—Belle was remembering carefully—"a shin piece, just where you stop cutting the steak—how much would that be a pound?"

"Twenty cents."

"Belle opened her hand and considered her money. "I'll take two pounds."

"Who is this girl?" asked the market man as he laid the meat on the cutting block.

"Carrie Stanley. She's been very sick. She and her mother live with Carrie's grandfather, old Sergeant Norcross."

"H'm." Mr. Ryland moved the knife farther along on the meat before he cut into it. He didn't put it on the scales, either, but he lifted it in his hand. "I guess there's two pounds," he said.

"My! it's a good, big piece and will make a lot of nice broth! And "—Belle looked at her money again—" could I get a lamb chop for twelve cents?"

"Two lamb chops go for twelve cents for this sale only," declared Mr. Ryland, promptly.

"O, goody! That leaves five cents for an orange; perhaps Carrie could take a little of the juice. O, yes, Mr. Ryland, I can carry the bundle all right. Good-by!"

Belle ran up the street faster than ever. "Here they are," she cried; "just the things you spoke of, Mrs. Stanley. Hello!" she called gently to Carrie as Mrs. Stanley opened the door of her room. "Just a wave and a word. I'll come again when you are stronger."

Carrie's thin, pale face brightened into a faint smile as she "waved" to Belle, and as Belle started homeward she said to herself: "And to think that I was going to carry Carrie some carnations! My, my! But isn't my mother a sensible woman!"—Girls' World.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

R. E. L. Taylor, of Decherd, Tenn., is in a meeting at Trimble, Ohio.

John Hayes, of Bradentown, Fla., reports two baptisms in a meeting at Antioch.

Change of address: W. M. Oakley, from 326 Grace Avenue, to 7308 Pine Street, Nashville, Tenn.

D. F. Draper is in an interesting meeting at Dixon Springs, Tenn. Two baptisms are reported.

W. L. Karnes, of Portland, Tenn., is now engaged in a meeting with the little band at Goodlettsville, Tenn.

J. A. Hardison reports a good start in the meeting at Greenville, S. C. G. F. Gibbs and Thomas H. Burton are doing the preaching.

C. M. Pullias is preaching this week for the Chapel Avenue congregation, in Nashville. S. P. Pittman continues with fine interest at Grandview Heights.

There were many visitors present at the home-coming services at the Lindsley Avenue Church on last Sunday, J. Leonard Jackson reports two confessions.

J. T. Clark, of Pulaski, Tenn., closed a good meeting at Hayes Mill, Ala. There were thirteen baptisms and five restorations. A new congregation was established.

From Pleasant J. Taylor, Pomona, Cal., October 10: "Our work here is steadily growing. Our crowds are increasing at every service. Fourteen have been added to the membership since last report."

T. G. Curd closed a good meeting in the new house at Dixon, Ky., with eighteen additions. He also reports five additions at Kennerly, in Union County. He is now in a fine meeting near Morganfield, Ky.

William P. Walker writes: "Our Dover meeting closed Monday evening. Two precious souls were immersed into Christ during the meeting, and much good otherwise was accomplished for our Master's cause here."

Will J. Cullum continues in the meeting at Reid Avenue Church this week. He reports one restoration. Brother Cullum will begin a mission meeting next Lord's day at Jefferson City, where there are only two members.

From C. A. Norred, Memphis, Tenn., October 11: "The second week of the Harbert Avenue meeting begins with good prospects. Fifteen additions to date, and one to be baptized to-night. The meeting is being held by home forces."

From W. T. Beasley, Belleview, Tenn., October 10: "The Beasley (Christian) and Nunnery (Missionary Baptist) debate will begin on November 1 at 10 A.M. and continue four days. All parties wishing to attend the debate will leave the railroad at Huntingdon, Tenn. The general church question will be discussed."

From W. A. Sevedge, St. Louis, Mo., October 17: "Good services both morning and evening at Eagle's Home Hall, corner Jefferson and Lafayette, yesterday. Two placed membership at the morning service and two more at the evening service. There were several new faces in the audience at both morning and evening services."

From E. L. Whitaker, Corinth, Miss., October 14: "I began a meeting at Arnett's Chapel, near Newbern, Tenn., on the third Lord's day in September and continued it for six days, with five additions. The meeting was hindered by some of the brethren being more interested in their own affairs than they were in the work of the Lord."

S. M. Jones closed a very successful meeting with the Twelfth Avenue congregation, in Nashville. There were twenty-five additions, the most of them being baptisms. The members of this live congregation gave to Brother Jones their united and sympathetic support from start to finish. Brother Jones is now in a meeting with the Waverly-Belmont congregation.

From H. M. Phillips, Decherd, Tenn., October 14: "I have just closed an interesting meeting about six miles from Decherd, with one restored and one baptized. I shall begin my work with the St. Elmo church of Christ, Chattanooga, with a protracted meeting, beginning on October 16. I will be located there at least a year, the Lord willing. I hopefor much work to be done."

J. V. Armstrong Traylor writes: "While I was conducting a meeting near Shelbyville, Tenn., several weeks ago, J. H. McBroom, who is the minister of the Main Street church of Christ at Shelbyville, told me that he intended to go into the evangelistic field next year. I wish to say that I have been with him in several meetings, and congregations will not make a mistake in engaging him for meetings next year."

Carl A. Gardner writes: "The church at Ferris, Texas, has some fine people. When the economic depression becomes less acute, I feel certain they will build a house of worship. At present we worship in a rented hall. Ferris is on the interurban, eighteen miles south of Dallas. Last Lord's day Brother Morris Gano spoke to us, and it was refreshing to have this excellent man and scholar with us."

From W. M. Oakley, Nashville, Tenn., October 13: "The meeting at Auburntown resulted in one baptized and five restored. I shall begin at New Middleton, Smith County, next Lord's day, with J. D. Derryberry in charge of the son service. This meeting will close our engagements for meetings so far as promised. If others need my services, I could begin on the fifth Sunday in this month. Let us keep busy."

From Joe L. Netherland, Miami, Fla.: "It was my pleasure to be present at the opening of the Dasher Bible School, at Dasher, Ga., on October 4. The school has an ideal location, about six miles from Valdosta, in a splendid farming country. The Bible is one of the leading texts taught. All that are interested in Christian education would do well to investigate. Information will be given by Earl C. Smith, Valdosta, Ga."

Miss Dora Exum and Mr. Ezra Philpot were united in marriage on October 9, at the home of the bride's brother, F. E. Exum, Houston, Texas. Miss Exum was formerly of Nashville and Mr. Philpot of Mount Juliet. The wedding was solemnized by Oscar Smith, of Houston. The bride and groom will spend a month or two traveling in Texas and then make a visit to Nashville. Both are good Christians, which should insure for them happy lives together.

From Lucas North, Ethridge, Tenn., October 13: "Our ten-days' meeting, conducted by J. H. Horton, of Haleyville, Ala., closed last night, with seven baptisms and the congregation greatly benefited besides. Brother Horton is one of our very able preachers, and cuts to the line that separates the word of God from the doctrines of men. Indeed, men claiming to preach the gospel plan of salvation and substituting a human system in its stead seem to him so presumptuous and awful that he cannot refrain from using pretty plain talk. We all love him for his faithfulness to the inspired Word, as well as for his fine personal excellence."

From A. G. Freed, Lavergne, Tenn., October 12: "The meeting at Lavergne continues with great interest. The hearing is fine. Eight added to date. Many more are expected before the series closes. The church here is composed of splendid material. From here I go to Hazel, Ky., for a meeting with the church there; then to Obion, Tenn.; after this, to Clarksburg, Tenn., for a series of lectures before the school in the day and preaching for the church at night. The summer has been a busy one with me. I have preached to more people and have witnessed a greater interest and more additions to the one body than any other year in all my work."

The all-day home-coming services at the Charlotte Avenue Church, in West Nashville, were attended by a large audience. The splendid new meetinghouse was taxed to its capacity. There were visitors from all the other local congregations, and an old-fashioned basket dinner was spread. I. B. Bradley, of Dickson, Tenn., preached in the morning and evening, and C. M. Pullias, of Birmingham, Ala., preached at the afternoon service. Brother Bradley continues in the revival services with increasing interest. The Gospel Advocate congratulates these brethren upon the acquisition of their new house and wishes for them still greater success in doing the Master's work.

From E. D. Shelton, Box 61, Cordell, Okla., October 13: "I am now located in Cordell, where I am attending the Western Oklahoma Christian College and laboring with the church here every Lord's day, which numbers something over two hundred members. I am well satisfied with my situation here. The school is doing splendidly. We have an enrollment of over two hundred. A very enthusiastic bunch of students. The church is progressing with its work nicely. Last Sunday all previous records were broken in the Sunday-school attendance, when it numbered two hundred and eight. We rejoice in this and are planning to do greater things for God."

The meeting at Franklin, Tenn., was very successful. Large crowds heard C. M. Pullias through the series. There were sixteen additions.

To the Churches of Christ in Arkansas: The church of Christ worshiping at Twelfth and Thayer Streets, Little Rock, Ark., is hereby appealing to you to coöperate with us in a mission meeting at Hot Springs, Ark., and would greatly appreciate one Lord's-day's contribution to help defray the expense of same. The meeting is to begin on Lord's day, October 16, and to continue for three weeks, or longer if the interest demands. Z. D. Barber, of Morrillton, Ark., will do the preaching. This is a great field in view of the fact that thousands of our fellow beings go there to be treated for the many ills of life, many of whom are our own brethren and who are deprived of worship owing to the fact that we have no church there. Send contributions to Brother Perry P. Evans, 1115 Thayer Street, Little Rock, Ark., and he will see that it is placed in the proper hands. Brethren, we must plant the seed of the kingdom in this great field.—[Signed] R. F. Ellis, Deacon.

The Gospel Not in Chains.

BY R. P. CUFF.

According to my gospel, said Paul, Jesus is risen from the dead. The fact of Christ's resurrection was, as Paul saw it, the strong substance of the gospel. The fact was and is the essence, the glory, the fullness, and the power of the gospel. In the resurrection of Jesus there was a promise and a prophecy of the resurrection of all the dead "tribes that slumber" in the bosom of the earth we now inhabit. On Christ's resurrection Paul based the hope of our own. Whatever else men might preach-howsoever many doctrines were at that time existent which repudiated the work of Jesus and the faith in his resurrection-Paul was ready to declare that Jesus had risen. Even though it brought to him the reproaches of men, and though they regarded him as a malefactor, and, therefore, a fit subject for the shackles of prison life, he was still fearless and diligent in proclaiming the fact of Christ's resurrection. As a prisoner, he wrote epistles to the churches. As a prisoner, he continued to preach the sweetest of sweet stories-the story of the cross. Putting Paul in chains failed to bind the gospel. See him rise to the heights of grandiloquence, and hear him, a prisoner bearing hardship, sing it out in lofty tones: "But the word of God is not bound." (2 Tim. 2: 9.)

The apostle did not err when he said that to bind the preacher was not to harness and harass the Iruth intrusted to his care. The man who enters the pulpit may stutter and may blush the blushes of the morning daffodil. Impediment in speech may mar the beauty of his words. Awkwardness of gesture may deaden the effectiveness of his expression. A mouth drawn by lines of hardness, harshness, and sarcasm may help his message to come with grating sound to the door of the hearer's heart and to find unwelcome and unpleasant lodgment there. A slow working of the speaker's mind may mean one long round of monotony and may render him a veritable bore to the congregation. Never should ugliness and weakness in the speaker, or in his style, be permitted to smother from our view the beauty and the strength, the intrinsic grandeur and power, of his message. The stuttering, blushing, impediment, awkwardness, hardness, harshness, sarcasm, and slowness belong to the speaker, not to the gospel. Backsliders, hypocrites, spiritual slackers, may seem to belie the values of virtue and to upholster the virulence of vice. We should never permit ourselves to believe for a moment that falsity on the part of the man is falsity inherent in the gospel. Those who prove untrue to the gospel have come in touch with another influence. They have been molded according to a different model.

Truly the word of God is not bound. It is the voice of God to the soul. Well is it designed and adapted to meet the soul's cravings. Hungering and thirsting after God; hungering and thirsting after truth—that is the attitude of the soul with a sound spiritual appetite. No more can the soul prosper and thrive when the truth is far removed than can the physical man survive when bread is denied. Could the word of God be bound, the souls of men would starve. The germ of life—an everlasting germ—is in that word. God sees to it that his word shall never die. It cannot be so bound but that when it is believed and obeyed it will establish peace between the soul and God. Free course it must have to meet the soul's demands. Free course it must have to conquer in the combat with sin, to bring comfort to the despondent soul and salvation to the lost, and to lift the obedient higher and higher to serenest plains of purity, and at last to place their feet in the paths of Paradise, to walk "in white" with the blessed Lord while the eons of eternity's cycles glide happily past.

Quarterly Meeting of Fanning School Trustees.

The Board of Trustees of Fanning Orphan School held its regular quarterly meeting at the school on Thursday, October 13. The regular routine of business was transacted. David Lipscomb, superintendent of the school, was unanimously elected as a member to fill a vacancy that had recently occurred. The installation of a new heating apparatus for heating the building by steam is about finished—a very important and gratifying improvement. The school is full almost to its capacity. There is under consideration some other little changes which will enable the school to take care of more pupils.

Upon request of the girls (about seventy in number) the trustees went into the schoolroom to be seen and to see. After a cheerful song by the school, accompanied by the music teacher, Miss Seitz, several of the trustees made excellent and encouraging talks to the school. Everybody seemed glad and happy. A more promising prospect for a successful year has not been.

Appreciations.

"The Gospel Advocate is unexcelled as to mechanism and wholesome, strong teaching." (O. M. Reynolds, Plainview, Texas.)

"The Gospel Advocate certainly is fine. May it ever stand firm for the cause its founders loved so well." (R. F. Ellis, Little Rock, Ark.)

"I have enjoyed reading the special numbers of the Gospel Advocate recently. They are edificing I hope we will read more of them in the future. Keep the good work moving." (J. V. Armstrong Traylor.)

"I think the Gospel Advocate is just fine. I can see improvement every year. I wish some of the good preachers of Christ would stray up this way." (Mrs. George Irving, Croswell, Mich.

Chalk Talks For Teachers.

There has been a long-felt need of a book which would enable any person who can speak to a class or an audience to give a helpful, inspiring, illustrated talk. We are glad to announce that we have secured such a work. It is entitled "Crayon and Character," and is the work of B. J. Griswold. With this book in their hands, parents can teach the children a simple, fascinating method of drawing, and at the same time make the great truths of life a part of their everyday learning. It is especially adapted to speakers who earnestly want to give illustrated talks, but who feel that they "can't draw a straight line." Practically all subjects are covered, and full instructions are given as to how to make the talks effective. The price of the book is $1.25, postpaid. Order from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.50 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries; $3.00, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be charged, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect, but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may net appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notics is given

Love.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Paul, in writing to the Corinthians, says, "A most excellent way show I unto you," and then proceeds to point out the way of love as recorded in the thirteenth chapter of First Corintbians. For moral elevation, strength, and greatness, there is nothing in literature equal to this chapter. No Seneca or Plato ever uttered a sentiment of such transcendent grandeur and beauty. This, the greatest and strongest chapter he ever wrote, closes with: "But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love." A greater than Paul says: "I say unto you, that every one who is angry with his brother shall be in danger of the judgment." (Matt. 5: 22.) It is dangerous to be angry with a brother, for it may soon grow into hatred. The beloved John tells us: "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him. Hereby know we love, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3: 15, 16.) God gave the greatest exhibition of his love for the world in the gift of his own Son. God himself could make no greater offering. John admonishes: "Let us not love in word, neither with the tongue; but in deed and truth." (1 John 3: 18.) It is vain for men to talk and write about their love for the brethren so long as the fires of hatred are smothered in their hearts, ready to break out in the destruction of all that comes in their way. No Christian will harbor malice, for it will eventually destroy his usefulness and lead him down to hell.

It is so evident that Christians should love one another that all must know it. The Thessalonians understood this, for Paul declares: "But concerning love of the brethren ye have no need that one write unto you: for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another; for indeed ye do it toward all the brethren that are in all Macedonia." (1 Thess. 4: 9, 10.) How our hearts would rejoice if we could all truly say that every Christian loves every other Christian in Nashville, in Tennessee, in Texas, and in the wide, wide world! But to say this would be far from the truth. Behold the suffering and hunger among Christians! "But whose hath the world's goods, and beholdeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion from him, how doth the love of God abide in him?" (1 John 3: 17.) In the midst of all the jealousies, envies, and backbitings, it is easy to conclude that love of the brethren is foreign to many who call themselves "Christians." While love thinks no evil, Christians bear false witness against their brethren and then refuse to correct the misrepresentation. The humble, consecrated child of God will not be guilty of such conduct. But love suffers long; so it is better to endure the wrong than to strike back in the same spirit. Yea, the rather, with our hearts filled with love and in a spirit of meekness, "let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works," and "in love of the brethren be tenderly affectioned one to another; in honor prefering one another." "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is begotten of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." (1 John 4: 7, 8.) John, the beloved disciple, continues the same thought: "Beloved, if God so loved us, we also ought to love one another. No man hath beheld God at any time: if we love one another, God abideth in us, and his love is perfected in us." (1 John 4: 11, 12.)

Henry Drummond has well said: "Love is the greatest thing in the world." He has also told us "how in the heart of Africa, among the great lakes, he came across black men and women who remembered the only white man they ever saw before-David Livingstone; and as you cross his footsteps in that dark continent men's faces light up as they speak of the kind doctor who passed there years ago. They could not understand him, but they felt the love that beat in his heart." Love will melt stones of difficulty out of the way. One of the last, slowly murmured sayings of Whittier, the poet, as he lay dying, was this: "Give-my loveto the world." I would emphasize this, the supreme need of the world; more than our wisdom, our knowledge, our eloquence, or our wealth, or all else besides, it needs our love. Just here I call to mind the lines of Spenser:

With all thy heart, with all thy soul and mind, Thou must Him love and His behests embrace; All other loves, with which the world doth blind Weak fancies, and stir up affections base, Thou must renounce and utterly displace, And give thyself unto Him full and free, That full and freely gave himself to thee.

LIFE WITHOUT LOVE.

Without love, how dark and disappointing is all here below! What the sun is to the solar system, so is love to our happiness and usefulness. Without love, all light goes out. We might have all wisdom so that we could speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but without love we are become "sounding brass, or a clanging cymbal." If we had the gift of prophecy and all knowledge, yet without love we would be nothing. If we had all faith to remove mountains, and if we bestowed all our goods to feed the poor and had the heroism to give our bodies to be burned, without love it would profit us nothing. Instead of backbiting and devouring one another, let us not forget that all our faith, our charity, and our attainments are worthless without love. "The gift without the giver is bare."

LIFE WITH LOVE.

Wonderful things may be done for Christ and the uplifting of humanity with love. Love is patience, kindness, generosity, humility; is well behaved, unselfish, and thinks no evil. All of us should read the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians from the fourth to the seventh verse. fear some will not turn to the Bible and read the passages, I quote them in full: "Love suffereth long, and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not its own, is not provoked, taketh not account of evil; rejoiceth not in unrighteousness, but rejoiceth with the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." Thus matchlessly does the apostle tell us what love does. If we do these things, we are not without love; but if we fail to do them, we are without it; and if without it, we are lost. The spirit of the world thinks of itself and helps itself, but Love thinks of other people and helps other people. Love keeps no ledger of slights and wrongs; it forgives as well as forgets; it does not harbor malice, for it has no room for it in its heart. Love does not get mad and pitch into folks; it asks nothing for itself and is temperate. It is the selfish man that flies into passions. Love is not provoked, because it can do something that nothing else can do-bless and pray for its enemies.

LOVE'S SUPREMACY.

All things earthly fail. In this world we shall have tribulations. All our earthly treasures and joys shall fail. Soon the things that know us now shall know us no more forever. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust consume, and where thieves break through and steal: but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth consume, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where thy treasure is, there will thy heart be also." (Matt. 6: 19-21.) Prophecies shall be done away, tongues shall cease, knowledge shall vanish away; but "love never faileth." When we get to heaven, we shall see Christ as he is, and shall be like him. We shall enjoy the fruition of our hopes. But love is greater than faith and hope, because God is love. The essence of love is eternal. Through all eternity we will not cease to love. "But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love."

R. H. Boll's Kingdom Theory.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Attention has been called to a sermon preached in Nashville recently by R. H. Boll on the "Second Coming of Christ," which was evidently intended to make the impression that his teaching had been misrepresented. He has sent to my address the "Special Kingdom Number" of his paper, Word and Work, and I propose now to show from his own writings that he is teaching the doctrine with which he is charged on the kingdom question.

"KINGDOM HERE AND TO COME."

Under this head the author says:

In regard to the kingdom, all, or most of us, so far as I know, agree that those who are in the church of Jesus Christ have been translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son (Col. 1: 13); that they are in 'a holy nation' (1 Pet. 2: 9); that they have been made 'a kingdom' (Rev. 1: 6.) I take it that God would not have told us such things as these, except to give us the impression that Christians now are in the kingdom and are a kingdom.

Nor is there any difference among us as to the fact that there is a sense in which the kingdom is yet to come. It does not matter what we may think is the nature of the "eternal kingdom" referred to in 2 Pet. 1: 11—we will hardly dissent that it is to us so distinct and defined a future phase of the kingdom of God that it must be "entered" into even by us who are now in the kingdom (Acts 14: 22). This, I think, admits of no real controversy. It is the outright statement of God's word. The one and only issue on which a dissent may hinge is not whether there is to be any future manifestation of the kingdom; but, rather, what will be the nature of it—whether we may look for the inauguration of a reign of Christ with his saints on the earth in a coming age, or whether the present dispensation closes with the destruction of the earth, and the kingdom to come will be a condition of eternal glory in heaven.

This is an adroit receding from his first position-viz.: the church is only a phase of the kingdom; that we are now in the vestibule of the kingdom, and when Christ comes we will enter the main building. D. H. Friend, one of his supporters, drew a diagram on the wall of a building illustrating to F. B. Srygley how Boll taught it. This diagram had a vestibule and a main building, and, according to one of Boll's pupils, the vestibule was the church and the main building the kingdom to come. Brother David Lipscomb, who knew Boll's theory, said, "Brethren, he will recede from it when he is pressed;" and this "kingdom series" put out in Word and Work has been an effort to do exactly what our venerable brother said he would attempt. But he committed himself too stoutly to Charles T. Russell's theory to get away from it, and, instead of fortifying himself against the charges made, he has actually verified them by his own pen. Note, first, he now admits that those "in the church of Jesus Christ have been translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son." Very well, then, Christ has a "kingdom" on this earth now, and all of his followers are in that kingdom.

But what about the "kingdom to come," which he here in his paper affirms is to come? He says: "Nor is there any difference among us as to the fact that there is a sense in which the kingdom is yet to come." It is well for the reader to ask, "Which kingdom?" He has already told us that Christ now has a kingdom, and that all who are in the church are in that kingdom. What does he mean by "a sense in which the kingdom is yet to come?" He tries to save himself by referring to the "eternal kingdom" referred to by Peter (2 Pet. 1: 11), as if that kingdom were not already in existence, and has been from all eternity, from the moment God became King. He says: "The one and only issue on which a dissent may hinge is not whether there is to be any future manifestation of the kingdom; but, rather, what will be the nature of it-whether we may look for the inauguration of a reign of Christ with his saints on the earth in a coming age, or whether the present dispensation closes with the destruction of the earth, and the kingdom to come will be a condition of eternal glory in heaven." Well, he has intimated that the "sense in which the kingdom is yet to come" is an "eternal" sense, and refers to 2 Pet. 2: 1-11 to prove it; but now he has another "inauguration of a reign of Christ with his saints on the earth," and this, of course, is another kingdom in addition to the kingdom which he says is here and in which are all who are in the church. Gentle reader, do you wish to know what kingdom it will be over which Christ will be "inaugurated when he comes? If so, let R. H. Boll tell you. Speaking of the Jews, he said in that "remarkable sermon:"

If, therefore, they repented, these three things would come to pass: their sins would be forgiven; seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord would ensue; and their Christ—their Messiah of David's seed for whom they had looked and longed—would be sent to them. Christ's return from heaven would usher in those long-predicted times of restoration, the reparation and restitution of what was marred and ruined and lost according to promise. This accords perfectly with all we have thus far learned both from the Old and New Testaments concerning the things predicted.

The Messiah for which the Jews looked and longed was not Jesus of Nazareth, and they rejected him. They were looking for an earthly king and the restoration of an earthly kingdom, and this is what R. H. Boll means in this extract by the word "restoration" and their "Messiah of David's seed." How do I know? We have on file in this office the following from his pen:

"Resolved, That the second coming of Christ is premillennial and imminent." I affirm,

"Resolved, That Dan 2: 35 and 44 was fulfilled on Pentecost." I denv.

"Resolved, That Christ is now sitting on David's throne." I deny.

Thus he denies that Christ is on David's throne, or that Dan. 2: 35, 44 has been fulfilled.

Now, since Christ is King over a kingdom in which are all who are in the church, and he will be "inaugurated" over another kingdom to be set up on this earth, will he not be a double King, reigning over two kingdoms at one and the same time? R. H. Boll claims that the kingdom prophesied by Dan. 2: 44 has never been established, but will be when Christ returns, and that he will then take his seat on David's throne, and the "restoration" for which the Jews "looked and longed" will take place. If that be true, then Peter's prediction that this earth shall pass away (2 Pet. 3: 10) can never be fulfilled. Why? Because Daniel says the kingdom which Boll says has never been established "shall stand forever." (Dan. 2: 44.) How can an earthly kingdom for which the Jews look and long "stand forever" if the earth is to be destroyed?

Who counts his brother's welfare
As sacred as his own;
And loves, forgives, and pities,
He serveth Christ alone. —Whittier.

Nothing can bring you peace but yourself.-Emerson.

Personal Evangelism.

"Let him that heareth say, Come." This is the last command in the Bible. The verses which follow it were simply the affixing of the seal. It is an honor which God places upon believers in making them his agents in evangelizing the world, calling them his "coworkers." "Workers together with him." There is honor in the company into which believers are called in this work, as well as the work itself. "The Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come."

The first impulse of the regenerate heart is to bring somebody else to Christ. Moses sought Hobab, Andrew brought Simon, Philip brought Nathanael. "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good." Giving, in this instance, never impoverishes. The more one seeks to give to others of the blessings of redemption, the more one gets for oneself. The multiplication reacts most happily upon himself as well as upon his neighbor.

The word "Come" which Christ utters so tenderly to us when we need him and are out of the way is converted into an imperative "Go" the moment we believe. Christ saves us to a life of activity, not to a dream of heaven. "Go, preach." "Go ye into all the world." "Return to thine own house." "Go work to-day in my vineyard." These are specimens of the direct commands of Christ. And Christ's commands always imply his constant help and blessed reward. There is no failure in such work. "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." God always takes care of the results.—Presbyterian Journal.

Love is an awakening, an inspiration, dulling the edge of resentment, sharpening the eloquence of wit, impoverishing distinction, guaranteeing equality, and proclaiming the omnipotence of God.—Willis George Emerson.

SIX MONTHS TO TRIAL SUBSCRIBERS

ONE DOLLAR

In response to numerous requests from our readers for a trial order longer than three months, we have decided to make this extraordinary offer to send the Gospel Advocate to new subscribers for six months for One Dollar. It means a loss to the publishers, but a great gain to your friends who have not been getting the paper.

We are receiving daily expressions of commendation and praise for the Gospel Advocate. Many are saying that the paper was never better than right now. Where could you find a more appropriate gift for your friends who need a religious journal in their homes? Better take advantage of this offer to-day.

Gospel Trumpet Blasts.

BY A. A. BUNNER

If the Savior knew anything of a second chance for sinners, he was as silent as the grave on the entire subject, for he wholly and unreservedly let no opportunity pass to secure all of the benefits of the first chance; and he taught men and women to so do. 'I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." (John 9: 4.) "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." (2 Cor. 6: 2.)

"Thus did Noah; according to all that God commanded him, so did he." (Gen. 6: 22.) Are we of to-day receiving the same commendation from the Lord? If not, why not?

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." (Mark 16: 15.) Are the congregations of the body of Christ everywhere carrying out this last and most important of all commissions, or are they flagrantly betraying the trust imposed upon them by their great Head? If they are not carrying out to its fullest extent this great commission, it is not for a lack of either men or means. The dearth of preachers that we have heard so much about is idle talk; but there is a great dearth with respect to a liberal use of the means with which God has blessed his people. Covetousness is still idolatry, and there will be more covetous people in hell, both professors and nonprofessors, than any other class of men and women. Wake up, then, to the great responsibility resting upon you.

"For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad." (1 Thess. 1: 8.) I want to ask the board of elders of every church of Christ: "Can the foregoing apostolic commendation be truthfully applied to the congregation over which you have the oversight? If not, why not?" Brother, sister, are you rich in this world's goods? If so, here is a solemn charge to you: "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God. who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." (1 Tim, 6: 17-19.) "Against the time to come!" Yes, the time will come when you will certainly want and need a good foundation. But you will be minus this unless you have been careful to lay it up. Be diligent, then, in every good word and work.

But I hear some well-to-do brother say: "I have my lands, and have them well cultivated and stocked; I have my money in banks: I have conveyances. such as fine horses, carriages, and automobiles; and I and my family propose to have a good time in this Then you and your family world." live wholly to yourselves, and have forgotten or wholly ignored the apostolic teaching: "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." (Col. 3: 3.) "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord: and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's." (Rom. 14: 7, 8.) Some congregations of the Lord thus excuse themselves in not having the gospel preached to the world: "We have no church house of our own. When we get a good meetinghouse in which to work, we are going to do great things in mission work." Jesus did not thus excuse himself from his obligation to preach the gospel to lost sinners. He was so poor that he could say: "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." (Matt. 8: 20.) But in the face of all of his dire poverty I hear him say: "Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see: the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them." (Matt. 11: 4, 5.) Thus did Jesus in his poverty; but some of the elders of the churches say, "Let us husband our resources."

The Friend of Sinners.

Their scribes and Pharisees murmured against his disciples, saying, Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners? And Jesus answering said unto them, They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick. I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." -Luke 5: 30-32.

Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a won-der for quick results. Easily and cheaply made, .

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hearseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pincz Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Things That Should Not Be Taught BY S. WHITFIELD.

We are restricted in the things that we teach as servants of God. We are told by the word of God the things that we should teach and the things that we are not to teach. If we teach all that God wants us to teach, we will not have any time to teach things that we should not teach. Those that teach things that should not be taught are sure to neglect and fail to teach things that should be taught, and often those that teach things that should not be taught attach more importance to such untaught questions than they do to things that are clearly taught. Jesus said that we were to teach all things he has commanded.

"The secret things belong to the Lord our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law." (Deut. 29: 29.)

All that God has not revealed should not be taught, for it is yet a secret and will be until he reveals it. Prophecies that are not fulfilled yet may be read and taught; but the meaning of these cannot be taught, for the meaning is not yet revealed by God. We might guess at the meaning, but we cannot afford to teach such guesswork. Such is no part of our work, and we have no time for it; then we would do well to leave it alone. This belongs to God's side, and we should just leave it where it belongs. When God makes things necessary to our salvation, such things are plain, so we can easily understand them. We do not need to be much concerned about things that are not plain.

"I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed. How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart; which think to cause my people to forget my name by their dreams which they tell every man to his neighbor, as their fathers have forgotten my name for Baal. The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord. Is not my word like as a fire? saith the Lord; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces? Therefore, behold, I am against the prophets, saith the Lord, that steal my words every one from his neighbor." (Jer. 23: 25-30.)

Dreams, guesses, opinions, theories, and speculations are all only chaff in contrast with the ever-living word of God. These things should not be taught, for they will all be burned up; but the word of the Lord will endure forever.

"I marvel that we are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." (Gal. 1: 6-9.)

The gospel, just as it was taught by the apostles, is the gospel that we must preach. Anything else is not the gospel of Christ, and should not be taught by the servants of the Lord.

"But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter." (Gal. 2: 7.)

Some teach from this that there were two gospels-one for the Jews and the other for the Gentiles. They say that baptism for the remission of sins was preached to the Jews, but the Gentiles are saved by faith only. But Jesus said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned," (Mark 16: 15, 16.)

Jesus gave one gospel for both Jew and Gentile, and baptism for the remission of sins was a part of it.

"For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake." (2 Cor. 4: 5.)

It is wrong to preach men, for this causes division. We should preach Jesus Christ, and him crucified. Salvation is in Christ and not in men, but to just keep on preaching this gets old and unpopular for some people. Some people (and even some preachers) want something new. We should not desire anything newer than the old Jerusalem gospel of Christ. Anything older, newer, or different from this will not save men.

"Neither give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: so do." (1 Tim. 1: 4.)

Endless, divisive, and destructive disputes may be raised over foolish and untaught questions,

"But refuse profane and old wives" fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness." (1 Tim. 4: 7.)

All such things and all doctrines of men should not be taught, for they are no part of the doctrine of Christ.

Many things are taught to-day about the second coming of Christ that should not be taught. Some claim that millions who are now living will not see death. This is all speculative teaching. Such people are not ready for him to come.

See to it continually that, whatever remorse may possess you at the close of any day, it shall not be this: They made me the keeper of the vineyards. but mine own vineyard have I not kept .- J. Stuart Holden,

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their eloquence, their fiddles, and their fox hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eternal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Ricc. Into one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two most wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifetiong rivalry of the two famous brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that attracted the attention of the world—and the iruth about "OLD LIMBER," the peerless and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.

the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.
With a "Cast of Characters extending from a President of the United States to a fox hound," the story touches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of crackling camp fires and the music of the chase.

FIELD REPORTS

Kirksey, Ky., October 11 .- I closed a week's meeting at Union Grove Schoolhouse on the first Lord's day in this month, with two baptisms, one from the Methodists and one from the Baptists. Good interest was shown throughout the meeting, and I think much good was done.-Coy Chester.

Bardwell, Ky., October 12.-I closed an eight-days' meeting at Cross Roads. near Senatobia, Miss., last Lord's day, with seven baptisms. The meeting was hindered much by sickness and rain, but we closed with a large crowd. They treated me well in every way. My next meeting will be at Bessie, Tenn.-Joe Ratcliffe.

Salem, Ark., October 11.-I am now located at this place, and preaching for the churches at Harmony, Oxford, and Liberty Hill. I have also promised to preach some for the church at Morriston. This is Brother Joe H. Blue's home. I can find time to hold some winter meetings, but prefer working close to home. I am tired of making long trips.-Norman Cooper.

Hanceville, Ala., October 10.-Since my last report I have held meetings as follows: At Jones Chapel, with ten additions; at Blessing, Marshall County, with nineteen baptisms; at Eva, Morgan County, under the tent, with five baptisms; at Arkadelphia, under the tent, with five baptisms; at Garden City, no additions. I am now at West Point with the tent, and a good hearing so far .- M. A. Creel.

Shelbyville, Ky., October 13.—Last Sunday I was at the Forks of Elkhorn in the morning and at Shelbyville in the afternoon. At night I preached at Parkland Church in Louisville. Much interest is shown in the work at Parkland. I shall go there until we can arrange for a man to take the work permanently. The work at Shelbyville is very encouraging. Brethren, send us a donation to help build our house. To date no one has responded to our appeal.-R. A. Craig.

Dover, Tenn., October 8.—Our meeting at Dover is still in progress. We hope to accomplish much good here for Master. I have just read this week's issue of the Gospel Advocate. As usual, the articles are excellent: but I wish to commend especially what Brother C. A. Gardner writes on "Who Are the Loyal Brethren?" also the article on "Giving," by Brother L. D. Perkins. Brethren, these articles are worthy of our study and meditation. For a lack of such instruction our congregations are perishing.-William P. Walker.

Albany, Ala., October 12.—On last Friday, at the water, I closed my second meeting with the church at Schochoh, Ky. Nineteen were baptized, and the church seemed encouraged in its work of faith. This is one of the oldest and best congregations in this section of the State. Brother Elam Derryberry, of Portland, Tenn., led in the song service. He is a splendid young man and has a good influence over men. I am now at home for the last month of my seventh and last year with the church at Albany. We had fine crowds Sunday and Sunday night. Sixteen have responded to the invitation at our regular services in the last month. Others are interested. Pray for us .- J. Pettey Ezell.

Pulaski, Tenn., October 5.—Brother N. B. Hardeman, of Henderson, Tenn., recently closed a splendid meeting of eleven days' duration at this place. While he was here we had the largest crowds and greatest interest we have ever had during the eight years I have been associated with this congregation. There were fourteen additions, including twelve baptisms. The interest was at its greatest when Brother Hardeman had to close and return to Henderson to be present at the opening of the Freed-Hardeman College. We are very anxious to have Brother Hardeman with us in another meeting. Brother A. J. Veteto led the song service.—J. T. Clark.

Decherd, Tenn., October 10.—Brother W. P. Willis and I held a twelvedays' meeting at Hillsboro, in Coffee County. Brother Willis began the meeting for me and preached until I was able to fill my place, and I continued the meeting from Friday night till the following Thursday night. Brother Willis stayed with me until the close. Eleven persons were baptized. The attendance was large, and we feel that it was a great meeting. Brother Willis is a good, Christian man and a fine preacher. No congregation will make a mistake to call him. His address is Hillsboro, Tenn. Breth-ren B. S. Jenkins and Robert Collier are the leaders at Hillsboro, and they are untiring workers.-R. E. L. Taylor.

St. Louis, Mo., October 10.-The meeting at the hall, corner of Lafayette and Jefferson Streets, yesterday, was well attended. The congregation here has had about one hundred per cent increase since last June. Prospects are encouraging. Brother C. C. Merritt has just closed a tent meeting which resulted in much good. Two men were baptized and four others placed membership. We have new people in our congregation at almost every service. Brethren, if any know of members of the church who live in St. Louis that it would be good for us to call upon, we would appreciate hearing from you. Several have sent in names in this way, and in quite a number of cases we have been able to interest them. My address is 6006a Virginia Avenue.—W. A. Sevedge.

Lewisburg, Tenn., October 10.—Our meeting here closed last night. It continued over three Lord's days. Prof. J. S. Batev preached five nights for me the first week. He is a master workman. At no time in the meeting did we have "from two to three thousand present," nor an "overflow meeting" where an "extra preacher was used;" nor did we have the "greatest meeting in the history of the church;" nor did we "steal the hearts of the people" (and no other stealing was reported); nor did any one say that "such preaching was never heard in this section," nor that "the city was stirred as never before;" but we had an ordinary meet-ing, and used our "home forces" in singing and preaching, and both singing and preaching were quite common, Two were restored and thirty-one were baptized,-H. H. Adamson.

Cleveland, Tenn., October 3.-Harris Creek meeting closed out last We believe this was Saturday night. a successful meeting in every way. It was the first regular work place in a number of years. The sects have had no opposition in their work. but now we are sure that some are convinced of the fact that the gospel was not being preached in its purity. Here are some of the evidences of the success of the meeting: large crowds, close attention, queries asked, talking, and two baptisms. Brother J. M. Harrison assisted us in this also, the brethren and sisters work: from Cleveland rendered much needed help by their presence and assistance in the song service. This closes out my protracted-meeting work for this year unless other calls come. I am now booking work for next year. Brethren, let us watch and pray.— Vernon Rozar.

Fresno, Cal., October 4.-Our hearts were made to rejoice at the morning service on September 25, when a man in feeble health made the confession and was baptized. A young lady was reclaimed the Sunday before. Hence, the good work goes on at the Nevada Avenue Church. Brother J. W. Ballard, of Helena, Okla., will begin a meeting with us next Sunday. We are hoping to have a great meeting. I am pleased to announce that the am pleased to announce that the Fresno Street congregation and the Nevada Avenue congregation have adjusted their differences. The Fresno Street brethren will continue to worship where they are, but friendship will be restored and all will feel free to visit each other. We owe much to Brethren J. A. Craig, T. C. Hawley, and Charley Sewell, brethren from the Madera congregation, for bringing about this adjustment, and we thank them for their noble work.-W. Halliday Trice.

Hallsville, Mo., October 10.—I take this opportunity to express our appreciation of Brother Hugh Miller's work in conducting a two-weeks' meeting. The weather was very bad most of the time; however, he had a very good hearing nearly every service. We had four additions. Brother Miller is an able proclaimer of the truth, and the only fears that I have for him is that of his nerves getting the best of his physical strength before he has fully accomplished his noble purpose in this life. His work has been of the same spirit as that I read each week through the Gospel Advocate, and the kind that I most heartily indorse. His work was highly satisfactory with the eldership and with almost all of the members. Sorry that we are not close enough to have the preachers of the South visit us. The work here in the way of support falls on a very few members, and they are the ones least able of the congregation.—Fred H. Roberts.

Bakersfield has about twenty thousand people, and I believe a conpregation of near fifty members can be formed there. We are going to press the work there, and feel sure of suc-cess. We plan to get Brother S. H. Hall there in a tent meeting in a very short time, and Brother C. R. Nichol will conduct a month's meeting next fall while in California. Let every Christian feel that it is his or her special duty to help in this work of building up the cause in Bakersfield. Bak-ersfield is a railroad city, with large railroad shops there, and is one of the largest oil districts in the world. It is located in Kern County, San Joaquin Valley, one hundred and twenty miles from Los Angeles, and has a fine farming district around it. It will be a fine place for a number of good Eastern families to locate. Sister P. M. Drane, 2425 H Street, will answer any questions. She is from the Russell Street congregation, Nashville, Tenn. Brother J. W. Ballard, of Helena, is now in a meeting at Fresno, with a crowded house. He will hold meetings at Dinuba, Tulare, Hanford, and other points while in California. Brother Hall should be back in Los Angeles by now, Brother Walker is expected in Dinuba; and Brother Daily, of Arizona, is expected to locate in Bakersfield. With the noble band of preachers now in California and with the assistance of others who are always glad to come, victory is sure in California.—L. D. Perkins.

Guard Your Thoughts.

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.—Phil. 4: 8.

OBITUARIES

Ring.

On the morning of August 20, 1921, the death angel visited our home, three miles west of Hall's Mill, in Bedford County, Tenn., and bore the spirit of our oldest child and daughter, Maggie Lucile Ring, back to God who gave it. She was sixteen years, eight months, and seven days of age. Maggie obeyed the gospel at the age of thirteen, and these tender years of service in the Master's vineyard were developing a Christian character in this strong young life. She visited the sick, and had no desire to forsake the assembly for worldly pleasure. Maggie was of a kind and cheerful disposition, and after this "flower of the grass" began to wither she ceased not to pray. left home desolate, but we pray God to help us to so live that we may meet her in the sweet beyond. Morner.

Smith.

On the evening of October 1, 1921, in Mount Carmel Cemetery, three miles south of Finger, Tenn., there was committed to the dust the body of little Wilmar Frances Smith, who departed this life after a sweet existence of nine months and twelve days. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Smith, of Henderson, Tenn., and doubtless promised to be the shining light reflecting the good traits of mother and father and bringing unto them the utmost happiness. Such dispensations would always bring a shadow of sor row were it not for the promises through Christ. The truth of God's word reveals unto us that infants are Therefore, they may feel assured that when the anthem of God's glory is song around his throne, where tongues of many nations shall praise and extol. her voice will mingle in sweet harmony with the angelic chorus that shall sound for evermore.

LELAND H. KNIGHT.

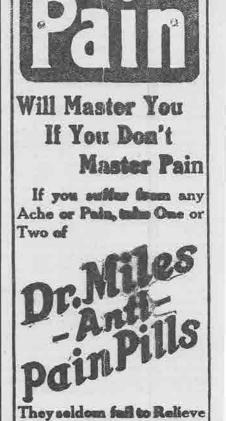

Smith.

On September 18, 1921, the spirit of Mrs. Lizzie Smith, wife of Talmage Smith and daughter of W. R. Henderson, took its flight to the realms of the blest. She was found prepared, willing and waiting to go redeemed are at rest. S Sister Smith was a true, devoted, Christian woman. always ready to work and serve her Master. She enjoyed meeting with the disciples on the first day of the week. When she knew that the end was near, she said she was ready for the Lord to take her home. She had that dreadful disease, tuberculosis, and suffered greatly; but her last moments were calm and peaceful. was twenty-two years, seven months, and seven days old. She leaves a husband, a little boy, a father, three sisters, three brothers, a stepmother, besides a host of friends, to mourn her death. Her sweet little baby passed away only a few weeks before. obeyed the gospel early in life and was faithful to the end. Brother B. F. Heathman, of Ashland City, Tenn.. conducted the funeral services, and her remains were laid to rest in the A FRIEND.

Martin.

On Saturday, October 8, 1921, the angel of death claimed a beloved woman, Mrs. Amanda Martin, whose life here had been so consistently spent in following in the footsteps of Jesus as to prove a blessing to all with whom she associated. Mrs. Martin was born in Georgia, December 11, 1859, and, together with her parents and two sisters, came to Decherd, Tenn., when she was quite young. For forty years she was a consistent member of the church of Christ, having obeyed the gospel during a meet-ing held by Elder Smithson. On Thursday, with some friends, she drove out to Oak Grove to hear Elder H. M. Phillips in his meeting there, Friday she was out in town, and even on Saturday she was up and able to be about her household duties. Near ten o'clock she complained of feeling weak and went into her room, where she lay down, and at twelve passed into the great beyond. In all her earthly sorrows she found solace only in doing the will of Jesus. She is survived by her husband, John Martin, and one sister, Mrs. Will Wright. Funeral services were conducted at the church of Christ by Elder H. M. Phillips, of Tuscumbia, Ala., and interment was made at the old cemetery.

An Explanation.

W. G. Roberts, of Mattoon, Ill., says he was misrepresented by Floyd M. Edwards in the Gospel Advocate of September 30, 1920. Here is what he says: "The main part of the letter Edwards published in your paper, in which I was misrepresented, was where he referred to papers being served on me for libel and slander while I was in Springfield, Mo., debating with the Mormons. The papers were given me, all right, but were ignored. I paid no attention to them, and Edwards and his crowd paid no attention to me." We are glad to give our readers the benefit of Brother Roberts' explanation, and leave it to them to draw their own conclusion. We have no desire to misrepresent or wrong any one, and would not know-J. C. McQUIDDY. ingly do so.

Passing of a Good Woman.

BY J. PETTEY EZELL,

At 9:30 P.M., July 29, 1921, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bayles, aged seventy-five and seventy-three, respectively, of Springfield, Tenn., were buried with Christ by baptism, wherein they were raised with him by faith in the working of God, who raised him from the dead. (Col. 2: 12; Rom, 6: 4, 5.) The eunuch (Acts 8) or the jailer (Acts 16) could not have been more sincerely happy in the promises of God than were they.

On the following Monday "Grandmother Bayles," as she was affectionately known by all, was stricken with a final stroke of paralysis from which she could not recover. In her sickness she was exceedingly happy, and after lingering patiently and uncomplainingly for six weeks she peacefully and quietly fell asleep in Jesus, September 12, at 11 A.M.

For more than fifty years she had been a devout member of the Methedist Episcopal Church, South; but at last she was struck with the force of the fact that she had never read of such an institution in the New Testament, but of the church of Christ (Matt. 16: 18; Rom. 16: 16), "church of God" (1 Cor. 1: 2; Gal. 1: 13), the church, the body (Col. 1: 18), etc., and that simply to hear, believe, and obey the gospel would make her a Christian and a member of the New Testament church. She at once became obedient, and for the little while that she lived she was insistent that all her children, grandchildren, and friends should likewise become obedient to the gospel.

May her example and last words of admonition, with the wholesome influence of other Christians and the diligent reading of the word of God, serve to bring her posterity, with many others, to see the beauty and sublimity of simply hearing and doing what Jesus says.

She is survived by her husband, four children, and a number of grandchildren. May the Father of mercies make his grace to be sufficient for their need in these sad hours and help each one so to live that we may meet her in ' the city which hath the foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

She was a faithful and true wife, a devoted mother, a friend of all, and a happy and conscientious Christian.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer and interment made in the Springfield Cemetery.

Among the Colored Folks

At the time of my last report I was at Center Point, Ark., in a meeting just four days old. I remained there two weeks. Ten precious souls obeyed the gospel of Jesus Christ, and two were restored. Both white and colored people were pleased with my labors and insisted that I come back for a longer period next year. I have never been treated any better than I was by these good people. They did some of the best singing I ever heard.

On the fourth Lord's day in September I began a meeting in Obion, Tenn., and remained a week. Interest was good throughout the meeting. Three obeyed the gospel, one was restored. The white people attended in large numbers and did much to encourage me in my work. I have consented to labor with them next year. My home while here was with Brother Brown Standfield, and it is a blessing to be in such a home good at each service. There were four additions and the church was much edified. This was my fifth meeting with them. These brethren and sisters certainly know how to entertain visitors. Old Brother Womack established this congregation years ago.

On the first Lord's day in October I began a meeting at Bellwood, Wilson County, Tenn. The attendance was the sun shone out.

On the second Lord's day in October I had the privilege of being at home (Nashville) with the Jackson Street Church, and it was a great treat. I was asked to speak day and night. There was much rejoicing in the Lord. This was my first time to be with them in over six months.

I am now (October 11) at Murray, Ky. This is a mission field. The white church of Christ called me here to preach to my people. When I arrived, I found that they had sent out circulars telling of the meeting, and a tent lighted with electricity, all ready, and nothing to do but preach the gospel. May God bless the white churches that have turned their attention to my race, because we have been misled by false teachers for years. I am glad to say that the negro will come and listen to the gospel wherever it is preached if given an opportunity; so I pray that other white churches will give the negro a chance to hear the pure gospel of Jesus Christ. God Knows Best.

There was once an aged hermit in the Egyptian desert, we are told, who thought it would be well with him if he had an olive tree near his cave. So he planted a little tree, and, thinking it might want water, he prayed to God for rain; so rain came and watered his olive tree. Then he thought that some warm sun to swell its buds would be advisable; so he prayed, and

Now the nursling looked feeble, and the old man deemed it would be well for the tree if frost were to come and brace it. He prayed for frost, and hoarfrost settled that night on bar and beam. Next he believed a hot southerly wind would suit his tree, and, after prayer, the south wind blew his olive tree, and-it died.

Some little while after, the hermit visited a brother hermit, and-lo!-by his cell door stood a flourishing olive

" How came that goodly plant there, brother?" asked the unsuccessful hermit.

"I planted it, and God blessed it, and it grew."

"Ah, brother, I, too, planted an olive; and when I thought it wanted water, I asked God to give it rain, and the rain came; and when I thought it wanted sun, I asked, and the sun shone; and when I deemed it needed strengthening, I prayed, and the frost came. God gave me all I demanded for my tree as I saw fit, and yet it is dead."

"And I, brother," replied the other hermit-"I left my tree in God's hands, for he knew what it wanted better than I."-American Messenger.

Love is the highest gift of grace on account of its inward worth, its blessing, and its influence upon eternal life. It puts the crown upon all excellencies; it exhibits the power of Christian faith; it sets us in connection with eternity and God. In all true Christians it is one and the same in principle. Love alone has unconditional worth. It carries in itself its own contents. Everything else, even the highest spiritual advantages, obtain their worth through it. All speech, without it, is lifeless. The most beautiful orator, devoid of heart love, is but as a beautiful instrument—unconscious of what is played on it. The simplest words spoken in love are of more worth than the most charming speeches void of heart. It is better to appear foolish and weak before men than to speak without the spirit of Christ; better to lack speech than to lack love. In comparison with love everything else is small. As the lifeblood of the body is poured from the heart into all the members, and as every heartbeat pulsates in all the veins, so is love the heart of the body of Christ. God has love without measure. His essence is love. The twice-seven graces of love here shine like the seven colors of the rainbow. As the rainbow is the token of the triumph of the sun over the rain, so love shows itself triumphant over all hostile obstructions in manifold ways. The heavenly daughter of the Spirit triumphs over that which is carnal and earthly. Love ennobles the whole conduct of him who has it. As in a crown there are many precious stones, so in the single virtue of love there are imbedded many virtues. O, how sadly is the name "love" abused! That which is called "love" and "friendship" is oftentimes nothing but a trade—with one hand it gives, but with both hands it is ready to take again. Behold, how rare true love has become! Love is so far from making unrighteous demands that it rather yields its rights and imparts itself, with all it has and can, unto others. Because love wishes all good to every one, it can surmise evil of none, but ever hopes well of a neighbor. Although often deceived in its good opinion, yet does it fill out the measure of its goodness by enduring everything, and labors still to set him right, with all mildness and meekness. It does not readily despair of any sinner, however bad, and keeps hoping that God will still preserve him and that he will yet acknowledge and reform from his unrighteousness. Love is able to endure the keenest sufferings, and it is this that makes it strong. It shows itself in those who have Jesus dwelling in them, by the manifestation of good, and partly by endurance of evil, and in both meekness and long-suffering, as exhibited in the life of Jesus.

By A. B. L.

Sometimes a preacher is heard to lament the fact that he does not have time to study. He feels that he is too pressed with other matters and has no time to spend in the companionship of helpful books. This indicates that he does not consider reading such books an important part of the preacher's work. He rather regards it as a pleasing and healthful pastime, but not a prerequisite to success. But we may seriously inquire if this is the New Testament view. The apostle Paul placed considerable emphasis upon the necessity of studious preparation for one's work as an evangelist of Jesus Christ. Waiving just here the mooted question as to what the reading consisted of, it is certainly true that he urges Timothy to "give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine." We do not know just which bcoks and parchments are referred to in the Second Letter to Timothy, but Paul is exceedingly anxious that he himself during his last days shall not neglect to study. Surely if men like Paul and Timothy needed this exercise, we cannot afford to neglect it. As has been stated time and again, the Bible should be given the place of supreme importance in all our study and reading. It will never do to make the excuse that we are too busy. A contributor in the Christian Index relates the following experience:

Scmetime ago, after I had spoken to a company of Baptist preachers on the importance of having regular hours for study, one of the number came to me and complained that it was impossible for him to study with any system, because he was pastor of four country churches and had to go from one to the other. He thought the city preacher had plenty of time, but the country preacher did not. I was surprised at this statement, for the best studying I ever did in the ministry was done while helping country brethren in revival services. It has always been my custom in these revival services to put the mornings in, or at least a part of the mornings, in study, and I have found that I had n ore time than when I was at home. I have before me now a list of eight of the greatest preachers the world has produced. I am familiar with their life stories. These men rank among the greatest of scholars and the most effective soul winners. Three of them have had long pasterates and have built up great churches, but not one of the eight was blessed with the opportunity of securing a higher education in his youth. One of this number learned to read after he was grown. Another one was a boiler maker with only a grammar-school education before he felt the call to preach. Another was a baseball player, Two were mountain boys with only meager educations: and yet, every one of these men, feeling the importance, religiously observed the morning hours for study. One of them told me that for twenty years he had spent ten hours a day in study. All of these men became famous, not only for their pulpit power, but for their wide and varied and profound learning. There is not one of the eight but had many more calls upon his time than the average county or city preacher. My contention is that if these men could make good, we can do it also. There is little excuse for a preacher's not being a student.

Roosevelt said: "I pity no man because he has to work. If he is worth his salt, he will work. I envy the man who has a work worth doing and does it well. There never has been devised, and there never will be devised, any law which will enable a man to succeed, save by the exercise of those qualities which have always been the prerequisites of success—the qualities of hard work, of keen intellect, of unflinching will."

One of the lessons learned during the Great War was the nobility of work. But we did not need to learn the lesson at such a fearful cost. It is abundantly taught in God's word both by precept and example. "My Father worketh hitherto," said Jesus, "and I work." We cannot be God-like or Christlike and idle at the same time. The temporal blessings that we receive from the gracious Giver are to a large extent dependent upon our own energies. "He becometh poor who dealeth with a slack hand." How can we consistently expect and pray for the Lord's blessing so long as we shirk and postpone our duties? Read an old colored man's philosophy quaintly expressed in verse:

De Lawd he hed a job fo' me.
And Ah'd so much to do,
Ah ast him git somebody e'se,
Aw wait till Ah git froo.
Ah don't know how de Lawd come out,
But he seemed to git along;
But Ah feel kind o' sneakin' like,
'Kaze Ah knowed I'd done him wrong,

One day Ah need de Lawd myse'f,
An' need him right away;
He revuh answe'ed me at all,
But Ah could heah him say,
Way down in mah accusin' heaht;
"Ah's got too much to do;
Yo' bettah git somebody e'se,
Aw wait till Ah gits froo."

Now when de Lawd he hav' a job, Ah nevah tries to shu'k; Ah draps whatevah Ah's on han' An' does de good Lawd's wuk. Mah own affairs can run along, Aw wait till Ah gits froo; Nobody e'se kin do de job De Lawd lays out fo' me.

Dr. Paul Moore Straver says: "In an engine room it is impossible to look into the great boiler and see how much water it contains. But running up beside it is a tiny glass tube which serves as a gauge. As the water stands in the little tube, so it stands in the huge boiler. When the tube is half full, the boiler is half full; when the tube is empty, the boiler is empty."

I think we may find here a good suggestion as to how we may measure our love for God. Do you ask: "How can I know I love God? I believe I love him, but I want to know." Look at the gauge. Your love for your brother is the measure of your love for God. Do you love men? You can estimate that. You can read what is registered in the tube. By this you can know your relation to God. There is not one love with which you love God and another with which you love men. "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, cannot love God whom he hath not seen. And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also." (1 John 4: 20, 21.)

The distinction between "clergy" and "laity" is a human invention that works harm. There is no foundation for it in the New Testament. In the book of Acts we find all believers witnessing for Christ and working for souls. We read that, after the persecution which arose concerning Stephen, the church was all scattered abroad except the apostles, and "they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word." The fact that the apostles remained in Jerusalem shows that those preaching the word were ordinary disciples. Along this line Arthur T. Pierson says:

We shall never win this world for Christ until disciples, as a whole, again take up the work. It can never be done by any class. It has got to be recognized as the individual duty of believers. "If thou shalt believe with thine heart and confess with thy mouth, thou shalt be saved." And further on, in Rom. 10, we read that men, by hearing, come to believe. Here, then, are the three factors in God's apostolic succession—a heart that believes, a mouth that witnesses, and an ear that hears—and that is all that is needful; because, if the heart that believes causes the mouth to speak, the speaking mouth will find a listening ear, and the hearing ear will prepare the way for another heart to believe, and another mouth to witness; and that is God's apostolic succession.

"Bible Schools" and "Other Things."
BY LEE JACKSON.

[We are publishing the following sensible article with the statement that we do not feel the need of any discussion on the subject at present. We ask those for or against "Bible schools" to please govern themselves accordingly.— Editor.]

"And beginning from Moses and from all the prophets, he interpreted to them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself." (Luke 24: 27.)

"School" is primarily defined; "To instruct in or as in a school; educate; teach." Hence, a school is an institution where systematic instruction is given or imparted. In a very important sense the disciples of Jesus, whom he gathered together under his personal tutorship during his earthly ministry, were a school. In the Old Testament we learn that there were schools of the prophets, and in these schools the Scriptures contained in the writings of Moses were taught. In addition to the instruction imparted to the young in the synagogue buildings, in which schools were conducted, there were higher schools, like the one presided over by Gamaliel, under whom the apostle Paul was educated and trained in the knowledge of the Old Testament Scriptures. An eminent authority, Alfred Edersheim, refers to these higher schools as academies, and, after enumerating the ordinary studies in these schools, he makes the following statement: "Besides, a school for Bible study was attached to every academy, in which copies of the Holy Scriptures were kept." (" Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah," page 233, Volume I.) It is thus seen that schools for instruction in the knowledge of the Scriptures are older than the time of our Savior upon earth; and it is true that he not only did not raise an objecting voice against them, but he openly encouraged this custom of teaching the Scriptures by going into the synagogues and taking part in these studies, making them an aid to his personal teaching.

In the city of Rome, Paul stayed two whole years in his own hired dwelling, spending his time as a teacher of the Scriptures. Of his abode in Rome it is said: "And when they had appointed him a day, they came to him into his lodging in great number; to whom he expounded the matter, testifying the kingdom of God, and persuading them concerning Jesus, both from the law of Moses and from the prophets, from morning till evening. And some believed the things which were spoken, and some disbelieved." (Acts 28: 23, 24.) And in Antioch, where the disciples were called Christians first, it is said of Paul and Barnabas: "And it came to pass, that even for a whole year they were gathered together with the church, and taught much people." (Acts 11: 26.) Here we find Paul doing that to which objection has been raised by some of our modern disciples who are bold in their claims for a strict adherence to apostolic teaching and practice. These brethren tell us that it is unscriptural to teach the Bible to a mixed assembly of Christians and unconverted persons in the congregation of worshiping Christians. In raising their objections to Bible schools and the teaching of the Scriptures to unbelievers who assemble with the believers, they are objecting to the very things that were done by the aposiles themselves. While it is true that at Rome Paul was in his "own hired dwelling," and while it is also true that there is no positive statement that believers met for worship in this dwelling, yet it is true that the apostle was conducting a school of Bible teaching, in the strict meaning of the term

"school," for he taught and persuaded all that went in unto him, "both from the law of Moses and from the prophets." This continued for the space of two years, and the strong presumptive evidence is that in giving these Bible lessons concerning the Christ, Paul received the believers together with the unbelievers. Considering the case at Antioch (for the one at Rome must be studied in its (orresponding relation to that), there can be but little doubt about there being a mixed gathering, for the statement is: "Even for a whole year they were gathered together with the church, and taught much people." The meaning is that Paul and Barnabas met with the church as an assembly, and the "much people" taught, in part, at least, received their instruction in these meetings of this assembly. If the claim is made that this Bible teaching was concerning the Christ, and, therefore, really means that they were taught the things of the gospel, this is freely admitted as true; yet it militates nothing against the fact that the teaching was done in the assembly of the brethren, unbelievers participating in the benefits of this teaching. In 1 Cor. 14: 23-25 Paul brings out the fact that unbelievers did come into the assemblies of the saints. In truth, every congregation of Christians is a school in the midst of which a knowledge of the Christ is to be gained, and, under the dispensation of grace and truth, all proper Bible teaching looks toward a knowledge of the Christ as its object. Sincerely, there can be no more efficient method of reaching the unconverted than that of engaging with them in the study of the Scriptures.

In a recent issue of the Apostolic Review, a brother, of Gainesville, Texas, enters a protest against the teaching of the Bible in our colleges. I quote only one statement from his article, and this is done, not for the purpose of discussion, but only to emphasize the great need for the very thing which this good, Christian brother condemns. He says: "Bible colleges do exactly the same that theological schools of the denominations [do], except that theories they teach differ. Bible colleges teach a truer theory than do theological schools of the various religious denominations." The word "do" in brackets is added to the brother's first sentence in an effort to give it the appearance of completeness. In the conclusion of his article he tells us that he has never been inside of a "Bible college," and so the question arises, how does the brother happen to know the things whereof he affirms? Again, what does the brother mean by saying that Bible colleges teach a truer theory than the theological schools teach? Where does he get his standard of comparison? For instance, grammar schools exist for the purpose of teaching grammar, and not for the purpose of teaching theories about grammar; schools of mathematics teach mathematics, not theories of mathematics; Bible schools are supposed to teach the Bible, and not theories about the Bible. If theological schools teach theories of the Bible, and Bible schools teach a theory of the Bible, by what rule does the brother determine that "Bible colleges teach a 'truer' theory" of the Bible than is taught in theological schools? How can two theories of the Bible "differ" and both be true? They may differ and both be wrong, but they cannot differ and both be true It is proper to suggest in this connection that if Bible schools are teaching theories instead of teaching the Bible, the thing to do is to protest against this teaching of theories and not enter an unwarranted objection to the Bible school and its purpose as an institution. There is a broad distinction between teaching the Bible and teaching a theory of the Bible, just as there is a very broad line of distinction between preaching the gospel and preaching theories of the gospel. Preaching the gospel in its plain facts, commands, and promises makes for unity among God's people; while preaching theories about these facts, commands, and promises creates divisions. But it is just as probable that theories will be taught in the congregations by men who have never been to college as it is that they are being taught in the Bible schools—yea, vastly more probable. The young man who reads and studies the Bible under a competent teacher while in school is not in as much danger of being led astray by theories as is the young man with but little education who is left to the haphazard methods that prevail in so many churches. Unfortunately, many of us have never enjoyed many advantages in the way of studying the Bible under the personal guidance of competent teachers, but that is no reason why we should object to others' having these advantages. We should not be like the fox that wanted the other foxes to have their tails cut off simply because he had unfortunately lost his own tail.

We Can't Afford It.

The peasants, farmers laborers, mechanics, tradesmen, merchants, manufacturers, and bankers of the whole world want peace. Those who are not inspired by humanitarian motives want it for business reasons. The idea that any one can make a profit out of war and keep it has been exploded. The theory that the world can continue its armament expenditures and keep out of bankruptcy has gone the way of the ZR 2.

Who is it, then, that wants war? Who, then, stands in the way of disarmament and world peace? When an overwhelming majority of the people everywhere want something that will above all else make for their happiness and prosperity, why can't they get it? Is it because the world's leaders are fumblers, unfitted for the responsibilities that they have assumed?

We are going to find out. We are going to have a show-down in November. We shall know then whether these leaders are sincerely for peace, secretly for war, or just incompetent trimmers; whether they are really statesmen or merely politicians with the vision and ideals of ward heelers, dressed up in broadcloth. In many of its aspects the Versailles fiasco was like a partisan convention where every petty politician of the dominant faction got his. We can't afford another like it.

The purpose of the conference has been carefully limited, but so far as the people are concerned there is no limit to what they can see, hear, and learn about the wishes and qualifications of their leaders; and the limits have been imposed by the will of the leaders and not by the will of the people. The conference cannot go too far in the direction of disarmament and peace to suit the world.

Closed sessions, barred doors, and stuffed keyholes will not keep the secrets of the conference. Platitudes, buckpassing, postponements until a more convenient season will not avail to excuse a failure to arrive at a clear-cut decision. This is the convenient season; this is the appointed hour in the history of the world; this is the leaders' big chance to prove up; for this is not only a conference, but it is a trial. The world will not stand for another Versailles. Peace or a sword? is the fundamental question before the conference. Works, not words, must be the answer.

The names of the conferees are being announced. Some inspire confidence. Some were figures in the Versailles fiasco. Too many represent politics; too few represent commerce. One wonders why a Hoover with his experience and his passion for peace was not chosen. One wonders, too, why the farmers who furnish the bread and the boys, the laborers whose brawn and whose sons are conscripted, and the manufacturers who give over their plants and their children to fight wars are not able to make their voices heard when their future and their very lives are at stake

Among the representatives of the nations there should be none who has gained honors, preferment, and political advantage as the result of wars, though there are in this class many men who are sincere and patriotic according to their lights. But even if some of the delegates are chosen from among them, their presence will not be so important as it might be under different circumstances, because other delegates, though uninvited, will sit with them in the conference, watch their every action, weigh their every word, and then, unasked, render final judgment on them and their work.

These uninvited delegates are those millions with nothing left to them but the memory of their dead—dumb peasants toiling in the fields on which their husbands died—for what? Mothers in France, in Britain, in Belgium, in Italy, and in America, whose sons were shot down in the trenches—to what end? They were told that their mendied to end war. Will this conference try to redeem that promise?

These wives and mothers of the world will listen, weigh, judge, brushing aside sophistries, impatient of political juggling. With them the maimed and the blind, terrible in their futile mutilation, will sit in the conference, and beside them those legions of our youth who came home physically unhurt, but spiritually maimed and bereft of their rightful inheritance; and those other millions who planned, sacrificed, and toiled, buoyed up in their labor of waste and ruin by the promise that this was a holy war to end war. There will be present, too, a multitude who thought that they were bystanders during the great conflict and who believed the old nonsense that war made nations physically and spiritually strong; that prosperity for some could be built up from the wreckage of others; that we could waste and maim and kill to the strengthening of the nation and the glory of God-in short, all the believers in perpetual motion and the boot-strap theory of lifting oneself up to prosperity. They, too, will attend, bringing nothing more valuable to show for their war profits than a bunch of cigar-store ccupons or a roll of Russian rubles. All these uninvited guests will strengthen the arms of those who believe that the thing must be done, and done now, even if somebody's feelings must be hurt, even if recalcitrant nations must be forced to behave.

We hear on every side that the world has already forgotten the war. We doubt it. A man who has lost his place in the world or the results of a lifetime's work does not easily forget. A woman who has lost her husband or her son does not forget at all.

The world has not forgotten the war, but it has lost faith in its war leaders and in those who bungled the peace. Limitation of armament is a first step toward restoring that faith. But even should this conference shirk its full duty and so discredit itself, it will not have stayed the inevitable end of war—at least of war as we have known it. There will finally be a decision against war, if not by agreement, then by force—the force of bankruptcy, famine, and world chaos. After that a new civilization will toil up from the depths; but first a new barbarism, for civilizations are centuries in the making.

Russia to-day is not only a thorough demonstration of the chaos that is communism, but it exemplies step by step the collapse of a civilization whose leaders hold to war after the people have decided against it. That during the Great War whole armies, despite threats, pleadings, and promises, melted away to the farms and factories should furnish food for reflection to even the most bullet-headed war maker. The time is coming, if it is not already here, when the cannon fodder of all nations will ask themselves why they are standing in a filthy trench, and, failing a satisfactory answer—for there is no satisfactory answer except defense against wanton aggression and invasion—will proceed to step out of it and fade away in the general direction of home.

The truth is that war must go because we can't afford it. We can't afford it physically, in spite of the amusing little pieces that are written by apologists for war, telling us how it improves the health of a nation. Setting-up exercises and hygienic instruction are their major and minor premises, the weeding out of the unfit their conclusion. It is hardly necessary to start a war to give youth the blessing of setting-up exercises. They might be taught in the schools. We might even have compulsory setting-up exercises for all males under forty and compulsory golf for all over that age. But perfect physical condition and faultless hygienic habits are hardly worth while if, as soon as a man has acquired them, he is sent into a filthy trench to be killed by a germ or a bullet. It is hard to take much interest in the study of hygiene when one is covered with lice; hard to care much about adding an inch to one's stature when all it will gain for one is a longer coffin.

As for the argument that war strengthens a nation and weeds out the unfit, one needs only a brief glance at Europe to find the arswer. The strong young men have been killed; the weak old men survive. That is the war. The children in whole nations are undernourished; in others, young and old alike are dying of starvation, of typhus, and of cholera. That is the aftermath of war.

We can't afford it spiritually. The apologists for this fine old fashion of death and destruction tell us that it is good for the scul. Yet never were the pavements of the world so thronged with poor, pitiful streetwalkers—women who have lost their husbands, their sons, their all; never was contempt for law so rampant; never were lawbreakers so brazen; never was morality so lightly regarded; never has religion had so slight a hold on the people. And why not? When men disregard the teachings of religion; when they license destruction and the taking of life in the sacred name of war; when they throw common sense and reason in the discard and decree force as the arbiter and death as the portion of the world—just why should they expect in the sequence a sweet, camp-meeting spirit of holiness to possess mankind?

We can't afford it economically. We can't afford to have the mark at a cent, the lira at four, the franc at seven, and the pound sterling at three-seventy. There can be no comeback in world trade while that condition lasts, and it will continue as long as France keeps eight hundred thousand men in the field, and Great Britain, Japan, and the United States maintain their great navies. We can't afford to rob American business of billions every year to be sunk and shot up and wasted in wars and their aftermath. Even less can other nations afford their gigantic tax bills for armaments. We can't afford these forty-five-million-dollar battleships that are built out of the pennies of the poor; these three-million-dollar dirigibles that go up in flames; these great armies of unproductive men, endlessly consuming and wasting, that must be carried on the bent backs of the producers. We can't afford any or all of it, and least of all can we afford the propagandists of hate; the fat-headed politicians who build up artificial economic barriers between the nations; the pompous rulers who scheme for personal power and aggrandizement, no matter what the cost to the world.

We can't afford to have these bordes of the unemployed; to have our farmers work from sunup to sundown for a bare subsistence; to have our manufacturers shutting down and going bankrupt. But we cannot cure these conditions until the world stops wasting its stored, as well as its surplus, wealth in wars; until we make our leaders understand that we will no longer stand this indefensible confiscation by taxation, this damnable squandering of our substance and our lives in war.

Every nation must be prepared to sacrifice something, to abate a little of its demands, for the sake of world peace. Even partial disarmament will prove an impossible task for petty politicians, but a few men of vision and decision can initiate a program at this conference that will finally lead to peace. The world is going to attend the conference and back up these men.

We do not underestimate the practical difficulties that work against the limitation of armaments, but there are even more practical necessities that will force it. Pride, prejudice, passion—all yield finally at the approach of hunger and of death.—Saturday Evening Post.

William J. Kirkpatrick Falls Asleep.

BY J. C. M'Q.

William J. Kirkpatrick, who edited three music books for us—"The New Christian Hymn Book," "Seventy-Seven Sweet Songs," and "Praise Him"—is dead. A letter from his wife, written October 12, announces his death: "Your letter of October 6 was received, but your friend was not here; he quietly fell asleep on September 29. I found him as I thought asleep, but he had passed on to join the heavenly choir." He was an honest and upright gentleman in all his dealings with us. He was considerate and kind, and his last letter to me suggested a compiler of music well equipped to bring out a new book for us. I rejoice that I was permitted to associate and work with him, for he was truly a great man. Mrs. Kirkpatrick sends me his last prayer:

Just as thou wilt, Lord! That is my cry— Just as thou wilt, to live or to die. I am thy servant, thou knowest best; Just as thou wilt, Lord, labor or rest.

Just as theu wilt, Lord! Which shall it be, Life everlasting waiting for me, Or shall I tarry here at thy feet? Just as thou wilt, Lord, whate'er is meet.

Faith.

Faith transforms a way of thinking into a mode of living. Faith transforms a range of dogmas into an assembly of virtues. Faith changes creed into character and transforms theory into life. But we have not yet carried the matter deep enough if we are to come into communion with ultimate reality. I must again declare that we are dealing with the most vital distinctions, and it depends on how we regard these distinctions as to whether our Christian life is to be like a weedy waste or like a harvest field which is sweet and musical with the waving corn. Let me put the difference in another way which will bring us still nearer to our goal. Belief is engaged with truth; faith is concerned with life. Belief is the acceptance of propositions; faith is the acceptance of Christ. But, mark you, faith is not movement divorced from mind. Faith does not make the judgment blind. In faith the mind and the will are both awake. Indeed, faith begins in the courtship of the mind and the will, and then the wedded pair move together to the acceptance of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. But what is meant by accepting the Lord Jesus Christ? Now we are getting into the holy place, and we are nearing the sublime goal of our quest. What is that movement of the soul which implies the acceptance of Christ? Let me try to say just what I think Christian faith really is, and I will express it in a sentence, every word of which has been carefully weighed. I am speaking of personal faith in Christ, and, of course, I know that personal faith in Christ will operate in all sorts of social and corporate issues; but I am speaking now of the primary, individual relationship to Christ in which all these larger issues have their birth. Those larger issues are the consequent rivers, but this is the original spring. Well, then, I say that so far as I know it, faith in Christ is the personal acceptance of the Lord Jesus Christ as the revealer of God the Father, and as the Savior and Renewer and Governor of my life. -J. H. Jowett.

The School Idea in Christianity.

The school has played an important part in the world's program and has contributed much to man's civilization. In some form schools have existed from the earliest times, and have dealt with physical, political, mental, and moral problems.

The first school of which we have any account was small. It had one teacher and two pupils—God, and Adam and Eve. In the garden the Father taught his children their physical and moral duty. God was not a preacher, but was a teacher; he "talked" with man. The teacher is more personal than the preacher and adapts his instruction to individual needs.

Shortly after the establishment of this primitive school "an enemy came and sowed tares in the field," and from that day till this error and truth have struggled, each for supremacy. Two classes of teachers and two kinds of seeds claim a right to exist in the world.

Noah, although called a "preacher of righteousness," was essentially a teacher, and so was Moses and Ezra and the prophets. The school idea is dominant in the Old Testament.

In all ancient nations the teacher was the most important person in the community. He was the center of interest, and from him emanated inspiration, courage, hope; and from him came instruction in medicine, law, economics, and religion. His person was often considered sacred, and his word was accepted as the "voice of God." He enjoyed a sacred trust and shared a love and sympathy that few men could claim.

Jesus was preëminently a teacher. In the four Gospels he is often called a "teacher," but is never called a "preacher." He taught the people. Jesus spent more than thirty years in school that he might prepare himself to be the "Great Teacher" that he was; he studied his environment, his people, and his subject, and entered his work the best prepared man in the world.

Jesus had as his teachers his mother, nature, and God. He was in daily touch with them all, and from them he drew his wisdom, inspiration, and love. His life was a reflection of his education. In his early life he doubtless attended the Jewish schools at Nazareth, and was instructed in the higher ideals of Hebrew life.

When the time came for Jesus to enter his chosen field as a teacher, he called twelve men, and appointed them to places as assistants in his school; but before he allowed them to teach he instructed them and taught them as regarded his mission and purpose in education. The first part of his public ministry is almost wholly given to the preparation of the twelve. He gave them limited permission to teach, but was careful as to when and to whom he Mistakes made by young teachers are often sent them. fatal. Jesus carefully guarded these men, gave what practice in teaching they needed, and trained them daily. For more than three years-almost the normal college course-Jesus gave the twelve his personal attention and discussed with them almost every phase of religious life. "When they were fully prepared, he sent them into the world to "teach all nations."

The religious teacher is not so much concerned with the physical and the mental as with the moral and spiritual side of life. He stresses the "other world," and feels that the temporal in comparison with the eternal is negligible. Jesus ranked religious life as primary. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness," was his command to the twelve. Food and clothes, houses and lands, and all other material goods, however important, are not to be compared with the eternal. All material things perish; the soul endures.

The words "teach" and "teacher" occur hundreds of times in the Bible, but the words "preach" and "preacher" occur but few times. This is certainly significant. The preacher is important and his work is essential, but the teacher is primary. The real, substantial work is done by the "teacher."

The preacher has an audience for two hours per week at hest; the teacher has an audience for six hours five days in the week. The preacher's hearers come and go—they are not the same all the time; the teacher has the same students every day. The teacher has the opportunity to mold the life of his pupils; the preacher can only now and then impress his audience. The teacher's work is the more permanent.

The Mormon-Christian War.

BY R. B. NEAL.

The "trick" that Brigham Young and Orson Hyde carried out with the help of Oliver Overstreet was deemed necessary to recover the church from the shock of Cowdery's apostasy. It cost Brigham five hundred dollars, but he regarded it as a good investment for his church. Soon after Cowdery's death they began publishing the statement. No one dreamed that Overstreet, when he was brought face to face with death and eternity, would "confess the fake," defend Cowdery's name, and give the Mormon Church a greater-shock.

Now read what Oliver Overstreet said at Council Bluffs, Iowa, October 21, 1848, at a special Mormon Conference. The historian thus introduces the incident:

Brother Oliver Cowdery, one of the three important "witnesses" to the truth of the Book of Mormon, and who had been absent from the church, through disaffection, for a number of years, and had been engaged in the practice of law, was present and made the remarks here annexed:

Friends and brethren, my name is Cowdery—Oliver wdery. In the early history of this church I stood identi-Cowdery. fied with her, and one in her councils. True it is that the gifts and callings of God are without repentance. Not because I was better than the rest of mankind was I called; but, to fulfill the purposes of God, he called me to a high and holy calling. I wrote, with my own pen, the entire Book of Mormon save a few pages) as it fell from the lips of the Prophet Joseph Smith as he translated it by the gift and power of God, by the means of the Urim and Thummim, or, as it is called by that Book, Holy Interpreters. I beheld with my eyes and handled with my hands the gold plates from which it was translated. I also saw with my eyes and handled with my hands the Holy Interpreters. That book is true. Sidney Rigdon did not write it. Mr. Spalding did not write I wrote it myself as It fell from the lips of the Prophet."

The above is from "History of the Church," Volume I., page 50, printed by the Reorganized Church, at Lamoni, Iewa, 1908.

If our readers wish it and the editors will publish a few more articles from my pen, I will gladly prepare them. Cowdery's "size-up" of Joseph Smith after an acquaintance with him such as no other man ever had, except Rigdon, would bear good fruit.

Cowdery tells what Jesus said to him about Joseph. Nero was never painted in blacker colors.

Alexander Campbell "sized up" Joseph Smith when his pen preached one of (no doubt the truest) the "funeral sermons" of Smith when he was killed. That is interesting and instructive. I have it.

Peter Cartwright had a personal interview with Joseph Smith. It bordered on a debate. It is rich in lessons on the Prophet and his deluded followers. He sized Smith up in a vigorous characteristic way.

Do you want these things, readers? If so, write me. My address is Grayson, Ky.

Let the church be true to her charter—true to the ideals set forth by her divine Lord; let her lay aside the pretense of virtue and practice courageously that which she exists to show forth; and as it was with the Lord's teaching in ancient days, the common people will hear her gladly—Shirley C. Hughson.

Abraham.

BY H. LEO BOLES,

Some subjects are too massive for the human mind to handle with ease. Such is the theme of Abraham. The subject of love is an infinite subject and cannot be fully comprehended by a finite mind. Its greatness is found in its divine origin, infinite comprehension, and fundamental attribute of Jehovah. The theme of Abraham is great in the amount of revelation that we find on this subject in the Bible. The history of Abraham occupies more space in the Bible than the whole human race from the creation down to the days of Abraham.

The Bible gives us only short sketches of the character and life of Adam, Eve, Cain, Abel, Enoch, and Noah, but it gives us a very full detail of Abraham's life from the time that he was called of God to leave Ur of the Chaldees to the day of his death, including the space of one hundred years. Sixteen books of the Old Testament make reference to Abraham. There are two hundred and sixty-two passages of Scripture referring to Abraham in the Old Testament; one hundred and thirty of these references are found in the book of Genesis. There are seventyfour references to Abraham in the New Testament. Seven of the eight writers of the New Testament refer to Abraham. Jude is the only writer of the New Testament that does not mention Abraham. The New Testament begins with Abraham; he is mentioned in the first verse of the first chapter of the first book of the New Testament. More of the sacred scripture narration clusters around Abraham than any other character except Christ.

Moses, the accredited author of Genesis, narrates with precision the important events which are connected with Abraham's life. He is exact in delineating the traits of his character which are unfolded on a variety of occasions. He depicts the character of Abraham through a long life under very trying ordeals, adorning it with many excellent traits and virtues, still he does not exempt it from the blemishes and imperfections of the human flesh. The Sacred Volume records splendid actions and heroic virtues which belong to the father of the faithful. We see him practicing moderation, mercy, justice, and generosity. Moses reveals him administering to the needs of others, showing kindness, melting with pity, and glowing with affection. What an example of inspiration be becomes to us when we realize that we, like Abraham, are men of human passions and are placed in situations similar to his, with the opportunity of practicing the virtues which adorn his character' We do not study with profit the example of Abraham if we do not desire to cultivate the same traits of character and attain to the same exalted station which God has given him.

The name "Abram" was first given to this Old Testament patriarch, and is used sixty times in the Bible with reference to him. It means "father of height," or "exalted father," or "father of elevation." He wore this name until Jehovah honored him with renewal of the promise of a numerous progeny. He was ninety-nine years old when his name was changed. "Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be called Abraham; for the father of a multitude of nations have I made thee." (Gen. 17: 5.) Abraham means "father of a multitude" or "father of a multitude of nations." The history of the future life of this character reveals him as being true to his name. He is, indeed, the father of many people.

He was the youngest son of Terah, and was born, according to one chronology, in 1996 B.C. He died at the age of one hundred and seventy-five, 1821 B.C. From Noah to Abraham there are nine generations. He descended through Shem, the oldest son of Noah. The genealogy from Noah is as follows: Shem, Arpachshad, Shelah, Eber, Peleg. Reu, Serug, Nahor, Terah. From Adam to Noah there are ten generations. Hence, Abraham was the twentieth generation from Adam through the line of Seth. According to some chronologists, he was born two years after Noah's death. Young's Analytical Concordance makes Abraham contemporary with Noah for about fifty years. The chronology as given by different authorities is somewhat confusing, because of the different dates given.

Matthew, in giving the genealogy of Christ, begins with Abraham. Abraham was the starting point of Jewish history. The Jews looked on Abraham as their father and founder of their race and nation. They did not trace their genalogy back to Terah or Nahor or any of the other patriarchs; however, they were descendants from these patriarchs, as well as they were from Abraham. Everything began with Abraham. He is so prominent and looms up so high that all the others are overlooked and he is made the beginning. The imposing and forcible character of Abraham plays such an important part in the early history of the human family and redemption and salvation of the Jews that he seems to the Jews to be the beginning of all things. Luke, in tracing the genealogy of Christ, begins with Joseph and Mary and traces the genealogy back through David, Abraham, and on to Adam, thus making Adam the beginning of the genealogy. He does not stop with Abraham as Matthew does. There is a reason for this. Luke was writing probably for Gentiles, and views the genealogy from the Gentiles' point of view. Abraham was not the beginning of the history of the Gentiles. Hence, Luke passes on through Abraham to Adam as the origin of the human family and the first father in the flesh of the Son of man, who is the Son of God. Matthew, a Jew, and writing for Jews and from a Jewish standpoint, naturally begins with the beginning of the Jews, which was Abraham. Every Jewish historian, both inspired and uninspired, that has written concerning the history of the Jews makes Abraham the beginning. Stephen's speech, as recorded in the seventh chapter of Acts, begins with Abraham and narrates in order the events connected with the history of the Jewish people. Abraham is not only given as the beginning of God's people in the fiesh, but is also given as the father of all who walk in the steps of his faith. "For this cause it is of faith, that it may be according to grace; to the end that the promise may be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all." (Rom. 4: 16.)

Appreciations.

"I have been a reader of the Gospel Advocate for forty years, ever since I was a boy at home, and I cannot do without the paper now. It gets better every issue. I like the special issues: they are grand." (C. C. Stonestreet, Concord, N. C.)

"Your issues for September were great, and I believe the 'Peace' Number was the best of all. O, what a glorious thing it could be if we could attain to that peace! Let us all work and pray for peace among ourselves first, then to all others, even to enemies, or just as far as the Bible allows." (C. Petty.)

The Secret of a Happy Life.

"How can you look so pleasant to-night?" a man asked his friend. "You have had a score of interruptions this afternoon, when you had hoped to do a lot of work."

"That's all right," was the answer. "Every morning I give my day to Christ, then I take what he sends. These interruptions come in the way of duty. Why should I complain about the service he has appointed?"

It was a very wise saying. Many of us offer a partial consecration, and, therefore, the interruptions are regarded as breaking the purpose of the day. The only way is to dedicate all our time, and then to take every action as prompted by the Lord. It is amazing how the moments are sanctified when they are thus accepted.—Advocate and Guardian.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order. When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask you now you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from acar-by places may not appear the first week. Encouragement.

BY J. C. M'Q.

In this day when everything appears to be upside down Christians should be especially active in good works. They should lose no opportunity to encourage people to read and study the Bible. There is a dearth of preachers in all denominations and even among those claiming to be simply disciples of Christ. There are many churches without preachers and many preachers who are not preaching to any church. It seems hard to get the churches and the preachers together. We should not be surprised, however, that there is a dearth of preachers when we observe how little people read the Bible in the home. The Bible should be studied in the home, in business-in fact, everywhere. "Ye search the scriptures, because ye think that in them ye have eternal life; and these are they which bear witness of me; and ye will not come to me, that ye may have life." (John 5: 39.) God, through Moses, commanded the Jews to teach the word of God to their children: "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be upon thy heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thy hand, and they shall be for frontlets between thine eyes. And thou shalt write them upon the doorposts of thy house, and upon thy gates." (Deut. 6: 6-9.) We also learn that Timothy was taught the Bible from lisping infancy: "Having been reminded of the unfeigned faith that is in thee; which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded, in thee also." (2 Tim. 1: 5.) The dearth of Bible study leads to a dearth of preachers and a dearth of spirituality among the churches. The home is the salt of the church as the church is the light of the world. With poor homes and with homes in which the Bible is not studied, we will find poor churches and little spirituality among the members of these churches. Unless we are willing for the fountains of spirituality to dry up in the churches and in our homes, we must teach the religion of Jesus Christ more and more to the people. It is a taught religion, and unless we teach it to our children they will not learn it. "No man can come to me, except the Father that sent me draw him: and I will raise him up in the last day. It is written in the prophets, And they shall all be taught of God. Every one that hath heard from the Father, and hath learned, cometh unto me." (John 6: 44, 45.) When all authority and all power in heaven and in earth had been given unto Christ, he commanded his disciples: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) "Our boys and girls cannot grow to be useful men and women unless they are taught the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. If we would have eur sons to grow up to be proclaimers of the gospel of Jesus Christ, we must teach them from early infancy to know God and to learn of the Lord Jesus Christ. "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." (Matt. 11: 29, 30.)

When our sons begin to proclaim the gospel of Christ, we should encourage them in the noble work. Many young men start out to preach the gospel who become discouraged even with the proper support and encouragement. It is the purpose of this journal to encourage every young preacher to contend vigorously for the faith and to lend him a helping hand while doing so. It is true that young men should learn to endure hardness as good soldiers, should be able to sleep in poor beds and to eat rough diet. This is more essential than a knowledge of Hebrew and Greek. While I do not disparage an educated ministry, and feel that it is better for preachers to be educated, yet their education is not complete unless they know how to endure hardness. Every young preacher finds it difficult to get an introduction to the churches. I remember well when I was a young preacher that my father furnished me a horse to ride, kept it shod, and I preached in schoolhouses and such places as I could find where the people would hear me. Very few churches sought my services: and even when they did, they accepted them and gave me no remuneration. I did not complain at this, but labored faithfully in the hope that I might learn to preach the word of God more acceptably and thereby be instrumental in leading sinners to Christ. I presume every young minister has very much the same experience. I fear sometimes that old ministers do not encourage the young ministers just as much as they

No one can read Paul's letters to Timothy and Titus without being impressed with the consideration, kindness, and tenderness shown young preachers. In writing to Timothy, he says: "Unto Timothy, my true child in faith: Grace, mercy, peace, from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord," (1 Tim. 1: 2.) He also says to Titus: "To Titus, my true child after a common faith: Grace and peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Savior." (Tit 1: 4.) While thus solicitous for their welfare, he was not negligent in teaching them to take heed to the doctrine and to themselves. So we should encourage our young preachers to-day to preach the word, to be true Christians, holding out to them the promise that if they do so their reward will be great.

Our young preachers should learn to write. No one is a gifted writer until he learns how to write, and he learns only with much thought and practice. If you never give the young preachers an opportunity to write, they will never be gifted with the pen. We want our young preachers to write for the Gospel Advocate, believing that if they will put forth their best efforts they will not only write acceptably, but that they will write something that will be helpful to our readers. Don't wait in the expectation of being able to write as do the most talented and gifted writers, but do your best, seeking to grow better as the days come and go. It is our purpose to help and encourage young preachers all we can. Soon the old preachers will cease their labors, and the young men must assume the responsibilities that now rest upon their shoulders. rapidly we all pass away! In just a moment, in comparison with the never-ceasing ages of eternity, our work is done. As we have always done, we shall continue to encourage our schools and colleges. It shall be our aim to treat all alike. It is not the purpose of this journal to tie on to one college to the exclusion of others, but to endeavor to encourage all to teach the word of God. We shall give legitimate news items from all the institutions of learning, but cannot conduct campaigns of special advertising for different institutions. We are not able to do this for all, and to do it for one to the exclusion of others is not best. Colleges will be expected to pay for advertising.

The Genius and Growth of Catholicism.

BY M. C. K.

There are two important facts connected with Catholicism with which all the people of the whole civilized world, and especially those of the United States, ought to be made acquainted: (1) The vast and marvelous growth of the system; (2) its real genius and character. If every citizen of the United States were in possession of full and accurate knowledge on these two facts, it might bring about a wholesome tendency in both civil and religious affairs. Catholicism has been marked by more or less rapid growth in numbers and power almost throughout its whole history; but in recent centuries, and especially in our own country, that growth has been still more marvelous. Furthermore, it is probably true that not one person in one hundred of our population, including even a large number of Catholics themselves, understands the real genius and character of Catholicism with its politico-ecclesiastical policy whenever and wherever it comes into power

Let us, first of all, carefully note the vital and important distinction between the system itself and vast multitudes of its adherents. Viewing them in their individual lives and characters, thousands of Catholics are among the very best, most benevolent, most charitable, and in every way most worthy of the people. They feed the poor, visit the widows and orphans in their affliction, minister to the sick, and in all lines of practical religion do their utmost to alleviate and better the condition of suffering humanity. This much is here cheerfully conceded, because truth and justice require it.

But the system of Catholicism is a radically different thing. There is no other such gigantic ecclesiastical and religious organization on earth. Neither Buddhism nor Mohammedanism, with their teeming millions of adherents, is anything in comparison with it. It is a vast politicoecclesiastical institution whose ultimate aim is to dominate the whole earth. Its prelates talk much about teaching religion in the schools, and yet it has always favored excluding the Bible from the public schools. But why so? When we see what they mean by teaching religion in the schools, we will have the correct and very significant answer to this question. The system of religion which they want taught in the schools and elsewhere is largely a political system, From the June (1921) number of "The Protestant," a new magazine under the editorship of Judge Gilbert O. Nations, of Washington City, and published from there, I take the following:

In 1917 John Joseph McVey, a Roman Catholic, published the twenty-seventh edition of his textbook known as a Manual of Christian Doctrine, written by a seminary professor in the Church of Rome. The book is published with the imprimatur of the Roman Archbishop of Philadelphia and is therefor official and authoritative. The preface contains this information:

'This book is intended as a manual of religious instruction not only in the Novitiates and Scholasticates of teaching Congregations, but also in the classes of High Schools, Academies, and Colleges."

It is therefore designed to impart the kind of religious instruction that popery favors and demands. it has run to the twenty-seventh edition indicates the wide use made of it in schools under Roman Catholic control. It will be edifying, therefore, to look into its pages and ascertain what mouthpieces of Rome mean by religious instruction in our schools and what the hierarchy is having taught in schools chartered and controlled by the papal throne, but operating in the United States.

A course of lessons on the Constitution of the Church in the form of questions and answers begins on page 122. On the following page this matter appears: "Why is the Pope called the vicar of Christ?

"Because he holds Christ's place and represents him upon

That is the starting point of the religion and morals that Rome instills into several hundreds of thousands of boys and girls in this country year after year. But that is perfectly orthodox Roman doctrine. Pope Leo XIII, said of himself: "We hold upon this earth the place of God Almighty."—Great Encyclical Letters, page 304.

But on page 28 of the Manual of Christian Doctrine this illuminating declaration appears:

'Does the Pope posses none but spiritual power?

"He also possesses temporal power in the States of the Church."

On pages 131 and 132 this appears:

Why is the Church superior to the State?

"Because the end to which the Church tends is the noblest of all ends.

"In what order or respect is the State subordinate to the Church?

"In the spiritual order and in all things referring to that

"What right has the Pope in virtue of this supremacy? "The right to annul those laws or acts of government that would injure the salvation of souls or attack the natural rights of citizens."

rule of Christ.

In order to get the full force and significance of the foregoing, it is necessary to bear in mind that the Pope claims to stand in the place of God Almighty and to be the sole judge of what does injure the salvation of souls or attack the natural rights of citizens. The teaching, therefore, clothes him with irresponsible power to annul any law that meets his personal disapproval.

On page 133 the Manual of Christian Doctrine says:

"May the State separate itself from the Church" "No, because it may not withdraw from the supreme

Thus the separation of Church and State, which, in the language of Judge Nations, is "one of the corner stones of our government," is declared by this Catholic school textbook to be wrong, and the children and youth in all Catholic schools are so taught. Behold the impression under which Catholic children grow up! The union of Church and State is one of their prime principles wherever they can bring it about. When they succeed in accomplishing this end, then the Church can decide who is a heretic deserving punishment and can execute its edicts against all such persons through the functions of State. And why should they not do this? It is the logical and inevitable outcome of their doctrine. Their subjects are not only taught that the Pope is "the vicar of Jesus Christ"-that "he holds Christ's place and represents him on earth "-but that he is in " the place of God Almighty," and, therefore, has "the right to annul those laws or acts of government that would," in his estimation, "injure the salvation of souls or attack the natural rights of citizens." Of course, if he is in God's place and his acts are therefore the acts of God, they are right, and the people have nothing to do but to obey. But the doctrine is false, and therefore such conclusions about what Rome has the right to do are radically wrong and vicious. The people of both Church and State need to be awakened on this vital issue. Let them open their eyes to the situation and avert the coming conflict. In point of interest and activity in striving to propagate what they believe to be right, let them imitate the vigilance and activity of this mighty system itself. Rome has always been and still is most vigilant and wide-awake. She takes no chances on sending her children to Protestant schools, but furnishes her own schools, and sees to it that, as far as in her lies, they shall come under no counter influence. In principle this is right, and Protestants are inconsistent as well as notorious in their flagrant violation of it. The friends of truth and righteousness in both Church and State need to study the situation.

Later I hope to give some figures on the growth of Catholicism.

R. H. Boll's Kingdom Theory.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The editor of Word and Work has plainly and unconditionally told us that the kingdom prophesied by Daniel (2: 35-44) has never been fulfilled, and is, of course, yet future, according to the editor. I hardly think he or any one else will claim that Daniel is talking about "a sense in which the kingdom is yet to come," but is saying plainly: "And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever," (Verse 44.) He speaks with no qualifying terms about the matter, but simply says "a kingdom," which means a kingdom in its entirety, without different "phases" or "senses." And, mark you, it is to be set up on this earth in the days of certain kings reigning on this earth.

Now, I am persuaded that the reader is anxious to know what kind of a kingdom this will be that God is yet to set up on this earth. Evidently it is not the kingdom which R. H. Boll has told us is already here, and in which "are all who are in the church of Jesus Christ." Jesus Christ said of his kingdom, which the editor says is here now, this: "My kingdom is not of this world," etc. (John 18: 36.) That is, his kingdom is a spiritual institution and wholly unlike the kingdoms of this world. To be in Christ is to be in his church, since the body of Christ and the church of Christ are one and the same (Col. 1: 18), and the editor tells us that to be in the church of Christ is to be in the kingdom of Christ. Very well. Now let us see what one receives by being in the kingdom of Christ: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ." (Eph. 1: 3.) Here it is distinctly stated that every spiritual blessing is in Christ. Hence, according to R. H. Boll, who tells us that all who are in Christ are in his kingdom, it follows most conclusively that the kingdom yet to be set up on this earth has no spiritual blessings in it. Again, since Christ declared that his kingdom, which R. H. Boll admits is here now. "Is not of this world," it follows that the kingdom yet to be set up is of this world; hence, a worldly government. But what is that kingdom that Daniel said the God of heaven would set up? According to R. H. Boll, it is the old Jewish institution which was born in rebellion against God (see 1 Sam. 8: 1-22), and which God destroyed and about which he derided Israel (see Hos. 13: 10, 11). Why do I say this? First, because Boll says of the Jews: "Their Christ-their Messiah of David's seed for whom they had looked and longed-would be sent to them. Christ's return from heaven would usher in those long-predicted times of restoration, the restoration and restitution of what was marred and ruined and lost according to promise." That the Jews' conception of the Messiah then was, and even now is, an earthly ruler like Solomon, David, and all the kings of Israel, and their conception of the kingdom Christ was to establish was the restoration of the Jewish kingdom, can admit of no doubt at all. Witness the following: "They therefore, when they were come together, asked him, saying, Lord, dost thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" (Acts 1: 6.) This was the Jews' conception of the kingdom Christ came to rule over, and to them it was not to be a new kingdom different from the one over which David ruled, but a restoration of the one over which David ruled. This was "their Christ-their Messiah of David's seed for whom they had looked and longed," and whom R. H. Boll says "would be sent to them." I asked him once in the presence of others these questions: (1) What will be the difference between that kingdom you say Christ will set up when he returns and the kingdom we already have? (2) What blessings will be in that kingdom that are not in the one we have? (3) What will be the conditions of admittance into that king-He said the terms of admittance had not yet been dom? revealed, and I am wondering if he has any new light on . that point.

But how is R H. Boll going to have the kingdom prophesied by Daniel set up when Christ comes? He knows that "in the days of those kings" (Dan. 2: 44) refers to the Roman empire with its divisions, for he says on page 296 of Word and Work: "For the stone was to smite and to crush the jeet of the image; and the feet, concededly, were the Roman world power." Well, he has a way of making things fit, regardless of the provision of God's word and the gross inconsistencies into which it may place him. He asks the question: "Since Rome has vanished, how can the prophecy be at all fulfilled? (Page 296, Word and Work.) Now let him answer his own question: "The Roman world power, then, though now it does not exist, is to return." Inventive genius! Who can surpass it? What a prophet is R. H. Boll! This, gentle reader, is the reason he has Christ coming back to this earth in "a body of flesh and bones" to "sit on David's literal throne," for he avows Christ is not yet on David's throne.

No one in this world knows any better than R. H. Boll himself that the Gospel Advocate never objected to his or any one else's preaching on the second coming of Christ or studying the prophecies, but that the objection was to his telling what unfulfilled prophecies meant and what Christ would do when he returns—viz., restore the Jewish kingdom. He started a discussion of these matters with me through the Advocate, and when he saw he could not sustain himself he abandoned the contest under the pretense that we had no definite proposition. Strange he did not think of that before writing two replies to my articles trying to sustain his position!

Opposed to War.

BY J. C. M'Q.

On page 1044 appears an article from the Saturday Evening Post under the title, "We Can't Afford It." This article is worthy of a very careful reading, and should elicit the sympathy of every one against war. From an economical standpoint, to say nothing of Christianity, the country cannot afford war. Our people are now groaning under the heavy tax rate which is for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the war. So long as France maintains an army of eight hundred thousand men in the field, and Great Britain, Japan, and the United States maintain their great navies, the people of these countries will be taxed heavily for the purpose of supporting the armies and navies. We cannot possibly afford to spend a billion dollars every year to be wasted in war.

As we cannot afford a war economically, neither can we afford it morally or spiritually. War means death to all morality and spirituality. The morals of our people are lower to-day than they have been for years. The spirituality of the churches is at a low ebb. Men mock at religion and preach Bolshevism instead of preaching the religion of the meek and lowly Nazarene. No man can take the New Testament and defend cruel wars. Christians should suffer wrong rather than do wrong. They should realize that "vengeance belongeth to the Lord," They are not to render evil for evil, but to return good for evil. As a result of the great world war, we to-day have more people suffering from hunger, unemployment, robbery, and criminality than ever before. This condition of affairs will continue until we cease to waste our wealth on wars. Neither can we expect our sons to be spiritual-minded, upright, and to refrain from doing wrong, so long as we support and encourage great armaments for the destruction of mankind. We should devote our energies to leading the people into paths of peace and righteousness instead of arming our sons to destroy life and to deluge the world with blood and tears. How much better it would be to give liberally of cur means and to give our thousands for the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ, rather than to give it for the maintenance of great armies and navies! The religion of Jesus Christ will elevate and lift up fallen humanity, rather than drag it down to suffering in this life and eternal death in the world to come. Now is the time for our scribes to write against war. It is argued by some who are interested in diplomacy that the United States is pursuing the very course that will eventually result in war with Japan. Japan is needing territory to expand. The people of that country are very much crowded and are very much in need of more land. Japan is infringing on China and is taking over very largely control of that country. China is looking to the United States to maintain the open door which was introduced by John Hay years ago. It is contended that unless the United States deserts China, which it has done twice before, and leaves it to its fate, war will eventually result with Japan. Those who love peace and righteousness and who are unalterably opposed to all wars should vigorously teach "peace on earth, good will toward men." They should not be slow to teach the nations that they should learn war no more. "And he will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." (Isa. 2: 4.)

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.—Matt. 6: 19-21.

SIX MONTHS TO TRIAL SUBSCRIBERS

ONE DOLLAR

In response to numerous requests from our readers for a trial order longer than three months, we have decided to make this extraordinary offer to send the Gospel Advocate to new subscribers for six months for One Dollar. It means a loss to the publishers, but a great gain to your friends who have not been getting the paper.

We are receiving daily expressions of commendation and praise for the Gospel Advocate. Many are saying that the paper was never better than right now. Where could you find a more appropriate gift for your friends who need a religious journal in their homes? Better take advantage of this offer to-day.

Write names and addresses plainly.

PUBLISHERS GOSPEL ADVOCATE NASHVILLE, TENN.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

贝

Change of address: G. W. Jarrett, from New Smyrna Pla., to Ocala, Fla.

S. P. Pittman closed a very successful meeting at Grandview Heights, this city.

"The special numbers on 'Unity' and the 'Old Paths' were indeed gents." (Mrs. E. A. Woodruff, Montgomery, Ala.)

A. G. Freed had a very successful meeting at Lavergue. Tenn., resulting in fourteen additions. He is now at Hazel, Ky.

Charles F. Hardin closed a meeting near Seneca, Mo, with fourteen additions to the congregation. He is now at Dexter, Mo.

A. N. Kennedy, of McKinney, Texas, is ready to arrange for fall and winter meetings. He has had twelve years' experience.

C. A. Norred reports twenty-five additions in the Harbert Avenue meeting at Memphis, Tenn. It was conducted by home forces.

"The special numbers have been exceptionally fine, and I look forward with pleasure for others." (John L. Rainey, Louisville, Ky.)

Charles Holder closed a meeting at Inman, Tenn., with eighteen additions. A congregation of twenty-three members was established.

M. S. Mason plans to hold meetings during the winter. If he can serve your congregation, address him at 740 Normal Street, Springfield, Mo.

A. B. Barret is in a good meeting at Columbia, Tenn. He will preach a series of sermons at David Lipscomb College, beginning on November 6.

Earnest C. Love came to see us last week. He is now in a meeting at Walling, Tenn. Brother Love's father is critically ill, having sustained a paralytic stroke.

"I don't feel that I can do without the Gospel Advocate. It has strengthened me more than anything else, save the Bible, in the cause of primitive Christianity." (C. J. Knight, Baldywn, Miss.)

The church at Murfreesboro, Tenn., is fortunate in securing the services of C. M. Pullias as their regular preacher. He is to begin work there on January 1, 1922. We congratulate both church and preacher.

Our beloved brother, E. G. Sewell, passed his ninety-first milestone on October 25. He is enjoying remarkably good health for one of his advanced age. Brother Sewell has the best wishes of all our readers.

The meeting at Reid Avenue, this city, conducted by Will J. Cullum, continues with increased interest and attendance. There have been sixteen baptisms, three restorations to fellowship, and two to take membership.

J. V. Armstrong Traylor writes: "I preached last Sunday morning and night for the F Street church of Christ of Louisville, Ky. John T. Smithson, their regular minister, was away, conducting a meeting near Murfreesboro, Tenn.

The meeting at Charlotte Avenue proceeds with fine interest. Brother Bradley reports sixteen additions for the first week. C. M. Pullias is having good crowds at Chapel Avenue, and S. M. Jones reports a favorable interest at Waverly-Belmont.

· From Mrs. R. L. Crowell, Brunswick, Ga., October 20: "G. E. Claus has just closed a ten-days' meeting here, with J. B. Beck, of Savannah, Ga., leading the singing. We feel greatly encouraged. The interest is growing. This is the first meeting the church of Christ ever conducted in Brunswick. We hope to have a tent meeting in the spring. Pray for us."

From N. W. Proffitt, Bushong, Ky., October 18: "The meeting at Mount Gilead, in Kentucky, closed on October 17, with eight baptisms. This was in some respects one of cur best meetings. More from the denominations heard us than common. I am now at Ebenezer in a meeting. The crowd last night was small. There is much opposition at this place. I shall go to Freewill next."

From J. H. Hines, Ozark, Ala., October 13: "I am at Ozark, the county seal of Dale County, in a mission meeting. I have found nine members. I began the meeting last night in the courthouse, with fifteen present. The people here know but little about the Bible and nothing about the church of the Bible. Few are coming out to hear one who is setting forth a strange teaching to them. There was one added at Highland Park last week."

From J. F. Davis, Box 12, Lookout Mountain, Tenn., October 23: "Since I asked the kindness of the brethren to help me over the present distress I have received contributions amounting to twenty-four dollars from all sources. We are so thankful for this help. May God reward the contributors accordingly. I am not well yet, and want to continue the treatment for pellagra, as I want to be at the work of preaching the gospel of Christ."

From M. F. Chenault, Jr., West Columbia, Texas, October 21: "C. H. Crain, of Houston, Texas, closed a mission meeting at this place on October 9, with one baptism and one restoration. The first week of the meeting was badly handicapped because of rain, but the next week we had good weather and much larger crowds. No previous attempt had ever been made to establish the church here. Brother Crain left a congregation of more than twenty members who will meet each Lord's day to worship God 'as it is written.'"

Many queries are forwarded to the editor of the "Query Department" without the name of the querist. Hereafter such questions will not be answered. It is necessary for every one to sign the query and give his name at least to the editor of the "Query Department." It is preferred also that people who ask questions allow their names to be signed to them. There may be some instances when this is not best, but ordinarily it is best for one to sign his or her name. The editor of the "Query Department" requests all to observe this and to sign their names unless harm would be done by revealing the name of the one who asks the question.

John T. Smithson writes: "On Wednesday night, October 19, I closed a ten-days' tent meeting on the Woodbury pike, about four miles from Murfreesboro, Tenn. Despite the cool weather at night and the busy season for the farmers, the services were well attended both day and night. There were two young men baptized. They are said to be the best young men in that community. One lady who had formerly been a member of the church, but had gone into the Methodist Church, returned to her 'first love' and promises to live the life of a Christian only. It is the opinion of the people there, though it is a place where no preaching has been done heretofore, that much good will result from the meeting."

Forthcoming Debate.—F. O. Howell and Ben M. Bogard will engage in a four-days' debate on the subject, "The Origin, Teaching, and Practice of the Church," at Hurley's Schoolhouse, about one and one-half miles from Chewalla and about three miles from Ramer, Tenn., beginning on November 15. Chewalla is on the Southern Railway, and Ramer is on the Mobile and Ohio. Mr. Bogard is a well-known debater among the Missionary Baptists, and this debate promises to be one of much interest. Those expecting to attend should write Thomas McLaughlin, Ramer. Tenn., or A. H. Lannom, Rutherford, Tenn. If you come over the Southern Railway, you will come to Chewalla: and if you come over the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, you should come to Ramer."

O. Barnes sends us a very interesting report of work in Florida. He writes as follows: "John B, Peden, of Avon Park, Fla., began a meeting with the church here on October 2 and closed it on October 11, with two sonls added to the congregation as visible results. The meeting should have continued longer, as interest was increasing, results. The meeting but owing to the fact that Brother Peden had to meet other engagements he closed rather suddenly. Brother Peden is a good, plain, gospel preacher and a clean gentleman, who loves the cause of Christ and has made much sacrifice to establish New Testament Christianity in South Florida, where h∈ has been living quite a number of years We fixed more self-sacrifleing men like Brother Peden in Florida, I will leave on October 28 for points near Ocala, where I will assist in the work of a fifth-Sunday meeting among the brethren of several counties who are cooperating in the work there and reviving the interest among the churches. They are also employing an evangelist to do mission work in that section, thus setting an example worthy of the notice of all churches. I am also to preach in several meetings during the month of November, will keep me in the field the greater part of the month. Brethren, pray for us and the work,"

Change of address: A. B. Blazer, from Pineapple, Ala., to Graysville, Tenn.

From Z. D. Barber, Hot Springs, Ark., October 19: "J. O. Yingling and I are in a meeting at Hot Springs, which starts off with fairly good interest. We are very anxious to permanently establish the cause here. We are collecting together the members here and in the surrounding community, and hope to be able to leave them in good working condition. If you know of any members here or have some friends here, please give us their names and addresses that we may look them up. This is a mission meeting, and we need your prayers and cooperation."

From Will W. Slater, Harveyville, Kan., October 17: "I will teach a seventeen-days' normal singing school at Blakemore Church, five miles southeast of England, beginning on December 19 and closing on January 6. This is a splendid opportunity for those interested in sacred song to improve their knowledge of the subject. Special attention will be given to leading and directing. Write to L. L. Bell, Route 2, England, Ark., and he will prepare a place for you. Joe H. Blue will conduct a four-days' debate with a Christadelphian at this same place, beginning on December 13. I am to 'keep time' while Brother Blue makes the 'fur fly.' We expect a great time. This leaves me in a good meeting at Harveyville. Pray for me."

From R. C. White, Adairville, Ky., Route 1, Box 37, October 22: "1 am here with the Bethany congregation in my last engagement for 1921. I began last night with an encouraging audience. For nearly two years, I am told, no services have been held here even on Lord's day. I hope to be able to get them to meet regularly again. M. L. Moore is expected to begin a meeting at Glasgow, Ky., next Monday night; W. A. Cameron, Largo, Fla., at Bethel, near Franklin, Ky., next Thursday night. This will take Brother Moore from Bowling Green and me from Bethel; hence, the plan is for me to go to Bowling Green. I labored there twice monthly in 1914 and 1915. I shall be glad to be there again on the first Lord's day in November."

Call for Assistance from A. B. Blazer, Graysville, Tenn.—
"Brethren in Christ: Lack of support and no school advantages have forced me to look for a more suitable location. I have found enough work here for the last three months to support my family and prospect promising for time to come. Wife has disposed of horse, cow, hogs, farm implements, and crop during this time to apply on rent and bills. She is ready and begging to leave there at once. Distance is four hundred and fifty miles. Three full fares and freight on household goods and library, fifty dollars or more. I need some assistance. I will appreciate it much. Children are not in school. Good schools here. I am now in a neeting at Soddy, Tenn. One addition here on previous visit. Brethren are hopeful of good results. Mining companies are all closed down. Many on extremity. This congregation has a good representation of manhood, and they are up in the front rank."

F. M. Little, the busy preacher at Montgomery, Ala., sends us this interesting report under date of October 22: "The West End Church, this city, has had a six-days' meeting this week, the preaching being done by W. J. Haynes, of Grady, Ala. Brother Haynes is an able gospel preacher. Four were baptized and the church was edified. The West End Church is improving steadily, having recently set in order the things wanting. Brother Haynes will do some preaching at Selma, Ala., beginning at the evening service to-morrow. John Churchwell, Jr., will preach at Selma at eleven o'clock. Brother Churchwell is a gifted and eloquent young preacher being encouraged to preach by the Catoma Street Church of Montgomery. All churches should develop the talent in their young men. We should enccurage young preachers. Brother Hamiter, of Mulat, Fla., has done some good work at different points in South Alabama during the last few months. I regret to hear that he has not been supported as he should have been. I am hoping that Christians will yet come to his rescue that he may be permitted to stay on the field. I came from East Tennessee to Alabama. I know by observation that the appeal of W. C. Philips, of Athens, Tenn., is a worthy one. Churches and individuals will make no mistake to help Athens, Niota, and Rockwood. Through the untiring efforts of G. W. Farmer, of Cleveland, Tenn., congregations Farmer, of Cleveland, Tenn., congregations are being established in East Tennessee, and they should be helped to get upon their feet. As John Pitts, of Montgomery, says: 'You never lose what you give to the church.' Help all the men and missions you can, and get others to We will be rewarded 'in the sweet by and by.'

Let us all make an earnest effort to put the work at Union, S. C., on a better financial basis. Some have already contributed liberally to this work and a good start has been made, but the house of worship needs to be completed before it can be used this winter. Brethren Burton and who have given much time and labor to this field. are filled with anxiety, and a liberal response at this time will encourage them. Read Brother Burton's statement, which follows: "Brethren, I hope and trust that this will be the last appeal that I will have to make to finish our first house in this State. A few congregations and individuals gave a contribution the fifth Lord's day in July for our building fund, and I am glad to announce that it amounted to $1,336.30, which was sufficient to pay us out of debt and leave us about fifty dollars in the bank. This appeal was made by Brethren A. M. Burton, Fletcher Williams, and S. F. Morrow. We appreciate the liberality of the brotherhood toward this work and believe that it is sufficiently interested to give us a liberal contribution the fifth Lord's day in this month and help us raise the remainder needed to complete our house, which is about We will con-$1,200. This does not include the seating. tinue to use our tent chairs for a while. As the building now stands, we cannot possibly use it this winter. I have tried to borrow the necessary amount to complete it, but failed. Brethren, please come to our rescue and help us to have a place to meet this winter, or shall we be without a place and let what we have done be wasted? It seems to me that we cannot afford to look back or quit at this time So please send for the lack of only a few hundred dollars. your fifth Lord's-day's contribution and help us put the cause of Christ on a firm basis in this community. Send all contributions and make all checks payable to Thomas H. Burton, Union, S. C."

Brethren J. P. Sewell, George A. Klingman, James I. Cox, and H. E. Speck, of Abilene, Texas, send us a circular letter which calls attention to the fact that before the Savior was born he was heralded by the prophets as the "Prince of Peace" and to the language of the prophet which says: "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any (Isa. 2: 4.) These brethren make the following suggestions in the belief that they will be helpful in bringing about the limitation of the armament of nations: " Let every preacher of the gespel write a letter to President Harding, one to each of the Senators of his State, and one to the Representative of his district, urging that he stand unflinchingly and unyieldingly for disarmament. (2) Present the matter everywhere you preach, and do your very best to have every member write such letters as suggested above. (3) Circulate a petition in favor of disarmament and have as many persons as possible sign the same. Call for volunteers to circulate these petitions around in the homes of the people. Then send the signed petitions to Washington, a copy to the President, one to your Senators, and one to your Congressman. (4) Have at least one man in your State go to Washington City and stay there at the conference from its opening session to its close and use his influence in every way possible for disarmament. There is no time to be wasted; November 11 will soon be here; and this is our opportunity to let the world know hew we stand on the war question. Don't quit this work when conference begins, but push it on until it closes. If we are for peace and against war, we have no right to be silent and idle while an effort is being made to disarm the nations and then complain if our nation is forced into war. Above all else, get every Christian possible on his knees praying for the success of this conference. Let no service close until the conference is over without special prayer for its success."

Another Editor.

BY J. C. M'O.

I am glad to announce to our readers that F, B. Srygley has been selected to assist in the work of editing the literature. For the present he will write the Intermediate and Primary Quarterlies. He has an analytical mind, is a good Bible student, and is well-fitted for this work. It is the purpose of the management of the literature to improve the series and to adapt it more and more to the necessities of all classes. I feel that our constituency is to be congratulated on the acquisition of Brother Srygley to congratulated on the acquisition of Brother Srygley to congratulated. We bespeak for him the same hearty support and encouragement which has been given to all former editors of the literature. With F. W. Smith editing the Advanced Quarterly and Little Jewels and Brother Srygley editing the other two quarterlies, we should have a series of helps that will could the very best and that will be very helpful and instructive to all.

A Real Man.

Men are of two kinds, and he
Was of the kind I'd like to be.
Some preach their virtues, and a few
Express their lives by what they do.
That sort was he. No flowery phrase
Or glibly spoken words of praise
Won friends for him. He wasn't cheap
Or shallow, but his course ran deep,
And it was pure. You know the kind.
Not many in a life you find,
Whose deeds outrun their words so far
That more than what they seem they are.

There are two kinds of lives as well—
The ones you live, the ones you tell.
Back through his years from age to youth,
He never acted one untruth.
Out in the open light he fought,
And didn't care what others thought
Nor what they said about his fight
If he believed that he was right.
The only deeds he ever hid
Were acts of kindness that he did.

What speech he had was plain and blunt. He had an unattractive front.
Yet children loved him; babe and boy Played with the strength he could employ, Without one fear, and they are fleet
To sense injustice and deceit.
No back-door gossip linked his name With any shady tale of shame.
He did not have to compromise With evildoers, shrewd and wise, And let them ply their vicious trade Because of some past escapade.

Men are of two kinds, and he
Was of the kind I'd like to be.
No door at which he ever knocked
Against his manly form was locked.
If ever man on earth was free
And independent, it was he.
No broken pledge lost him respect;
He met all men with head erect;
And when he passed. I think there went
A soul to yonder firmament,
So white, so splendid, and so fine,
It came almost to God's design.

The Little Soldier.

There were once two little boys, and each wished—0, so very, very much—to be a soldier. It was Soldiers' Day, the sun was up, and from every house a red-white-and-blue flag was flying. Soon the soldiers would march by in their gay-colored uniforms, with the fifes playing pretty tunes and the drums beating time for the soldiers' feet.

The two little boys sat upon their doorsteps and talked together across the fence about it all, for they were both very much excited.

"I shall be as fine a soldier as any of them," said the first little boy, whose name was Bobby.

"I shall put on my soldier's cap with the gold cockade and my fringed epaulets and my new red drum," he went on. "As soon as I hear the parade I shall follow at the end, and every one will see me."

"O, there it comes!"

There was the sound of music at the end of the street.

"We must hurry, Tommy," said Bobby. "You put on your cap and your epaulets and your drum, too."

So the two little boys put on their soldier caps, their fringed epaulets and their little red drums, and they hurried off to join the parade.

Bobby could run the faster; so he soon outstripped Tommy, whose feet were short and fat and got in his way a good deal. Soon Bobby had reached the end of the parade; but Tommy, left behind, nearly tumbled over a silky-eared dog which lay crying in the road.

"Pretty little dog! What's the matter?" asked Tommy, stepping and lifting the silky-eared dog up in his arms.

Then he saw. 'The dog's poor little paw had been broken and quite crushed by some heavy cart wheel. Tommy sat down on the curbing and bound the hurt paw with his own handkerchief and stroked the silky ears and whispered comforting words in them. Presently he got up, still holding the dog in his arms, and he started home, for it was quite too late now for him to follow the parade. Even the drums sounded far away.

"I can't be a soldier to-day, I can't be a soldier at all," said Tommy to himself; and one big, salt tear splashed down to the sidewalk.

"Why not?"

Tommy stopped suddenly and looked up right into the eyes of a real soldier in a long blue cape. The soldier had dropped out of the parade and was going home.

"You are a soldier," the real soldier said. "Look!"

He opened his cape and showed Tommy a shining gold star that he wore upon his coat.

"That is my decoration," he said. "They gave it to me because once I carried a wounded friend just as you are now. It was harder than fighting, my lad."

"And do you really think I can be a soldier?" Tommy asked again.

"You are a soldier," answered the real soldier again, stroking the dog's soft, brown head.—The Mayflower,

The Common Fault.

A professor in a Western college has been making tests in connection with his classes in psychology to find out what is the most general fault among his students—that is, a habit which could not be classed as a sin or a crime or a misdemeanor, but a failure in the sum total of characteristics that mark a successful man or woman.

What do you think he found? Thoughtlessness. His tests were very simple, and even childish.

He left a book lying on the floor where every student saw it as he came into the classroom. Seven students stepped over the book without trying to pick it up. The eighth kicked it a little farther along the aisle. Four students stepped on the book, evidently not even seeing it. The twentieth student picked up the book and put it on the professor's table.

There were three pictures on the walls of the classroom. The professor hung these askew, and a week went by before any one appeared to notice it, and then no one straightened out the picture, but one of the students asked the teacher if they ought not to be hung even.

One of the commonest excuses that men make after some harm has been done to some one or something is: "I'm sorry; I didn't think." A man runs into another car with his, and causes a smash-up or perhaps a tragedy. He is sorry. He did not think he was in any danger. The man fails to be on time for his appointment, wasting valuable time for the man waiting. "So sorry! I did not think it was so late!"

And so it goes all along the line of thoughtlessness. Perhaps the professor was right in his final conclusions.

"Thoughtlessness is not a fault of habit. It is a sin and a crime combined, for it leads almost always to both."—Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, in Christian Herald.

Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me.—Ps. 51: 10.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

Jerome Myers, of Oakman, Ala., asks this question: "Should a brother or individual who refuses to recognize himself as a member of his home congregation be recognized by any other congregation?" I do not know the peculiar circumstances connected with this question. If the home congregation of the individual or brother is not living in harmony with the word of God and he has tried to correct the evils, it may be that another congregation should recognize him as a member in good standing. If, on the other hand, the congregation is living in harmony with God's will and the brother is out of harmony with the truth, then another congregation should not recognize such an individual.

A person who does not wish his name given to the public, but signs himself "An Interested Reader," says: "In studying the lesson in the Advanced Quarterly for September 18, I find this statement: 'Admitting that instrumental music in connection with the worship of God is not wrong within itself, it is no part of the worship and is not essential to it, and he who introduces it against the conscience of those who esteem it to be wrong sins against them and against Christ.' It is my understanding that instrumental music has no connection whatever with the worship of God and Christ. What does that part of the sentence mean, 'admitting that instrumental music in connection with the worship of God is not wrong within itself?"" Things that are not ordained of Gcd should not be mixed with things that are appointed by him. God has fixed the items of worship, and left out instrumental music; therefore, we have no right to mix profane things with sacred things. As we walk by faith and not by sight, and as every item of worship must be one of faith, the man who introduces something which is not of faith sins against the consciences of those who esteem it to be wrong.

The same interested reader asks: "Can Revelation be explained by taking a chapter at a time for a discourse, or a part of a chapter? I mean, can it be read and explained, as the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, Acts of Apostles, and Paul's letters?" There are some things in Revelation that are perfectly plain and which may be explained. There are many things that I am not able to explain, as I do not understand them. There are enough plain, simple things in the Bible to occupy the brightest minds until Gabriel blows his trumpet. There are even things in the Epistles which men may wrest to their own destruction. Things in the Epistles, Acts of the Apostles, or any part of the Bible that are not clearly revealed should not be agitated to the destruction of Christians. We should devote our time to the fundamental things that are clearly revealed and thus go forward in the Christian life.

It is to be regretted that Christians can find so many little things over which to raise a disturbance. If the protesting Christians had the spirit of Christ, these differences would never occur. T. W. Wallace, of Fort Worth, Texas, states that a brother objects to carrying the emblems on the first day of the week to the sick, and demands the chapter and verse that authorizes them to do so. same scripture that authorizes him to go to the meetinghouse on the first day of the week and partake of the emblems authorizes him to take the emblems to the sick. Christ has said that where two or three have met together in his name, he will be in their midst to own and to bless. The Bible simply tells us that Christians met on the first day of the week (Acts 20: 7) to break bread. It does not tell us just where they met. From the connection, however, it would seem that they were gathered in some private place, for it says: "And there were many lights in the upper chamber where they were gathered together." Individuals professing to be Christians should cease to contend over such matters. God has left to our common sense and judgment to select the place where we should meet. If one place suits better than another, we should meet there. Let us strive more and more to manifest the spirit of Christ, and let us cease to allow such quibbles to disturb the church of Christ.

Shelly Crump, of Chicago, Ill., says that a man believes the teaching of the church of Christ, except he believes in trine immersion instead of single immersion. He asks for scriptural proof concerning single immersion. Paul states in the fourth chapter of Ephesians that "there is one Lord, one faith, one baptism." From this we could as easily prove that there are three Lord's as prove that there are three baptisms. Baptism typifies the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. Christ did not die three times, neither was he buried nor raised three times; yet, according to the reasoning of those who favor trine immersion, Christ should have died three times, should have been buried and resurrected three times. All know that the Bible does not teach anything of the kind. Again, we learn from the nineteenth chapter of Acts that twelve persons had been baptized unto John's baptism. Paul taught them that they should be baptized in the name of Jesus; and when they learned of the mistake that had been made, they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. This shows that when a man is baptized into the name of Christ (and there is but one person named here), that at the same time he is baptized into the name of the Father and of the Holy Spirit; for in Christ "dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." (Col. 2: 9.) This shows that in order to be baptized into the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, it does not require one to be immersed one time in the name of the Father, one time into the name of Christ, and one time into the name of the Holy Spirit. They were baptized into the name of Christ, and in being baptized into him they were baptized also into the names of the Father and Holy Spirit. * * *

Charles Nichols, of Parrish, Ala., inquires to know: "(1) Is a man's baptism valid that has not believed in Jesus Christ with ali his heart? (2) To baptize a man that has not repented of all his sins, is his baptism valid? (3) Is a man's baptism valid that has not confessed Christ? (4) What should one say when he confesses Christ? (5) Must a man make the confession of Rom. 10: 8-10; Matt. 10: 32, 33; and Acts 8: 36, 37, before he is baptized, for his baptism to be valid? (6) Does the administrator have to be a Christian for one's baptism to be valid?"

- 1. Baptism without faith in Jesus Christ is worthless.
- The administrator of baptism cannot tell whether the man's baptism is genuine or not. For a man to be baptized who has not repeated would be mockery in the sight of God.
- 3. There is no special form of confession given in the New Testament. The very fact that a man presents himself for baptism is in a sense a confession of Christ.
 - 4. In answering question 3, I have answered question 4.
- 5. Those who have obeyed Christ must believe in their hearts and must be ready to confess the Lord Jesus Christ with their mouths so long as they live. Verse 37 of Acts 8 is not in the Revised Version. However, as given in the Kings James Version, it only shows that Philip inquired to know whether the cunuch had faith. He was acting under the commission, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." If the cunuch had faith, he was ready to baptize him.
- 6. Of course no one would prefer to be baptized by a bad man instead of a Christian. No one can know, however, whether the administrator of baptism is good or bad, since no man knows what is in a man, save the spirit of man which is in him.

Nichol and Cayce Debate.

BY D. S. LIGON.

The above-named debate was to have begun on September 27, out some fourteen miles from Lebanon, Mo., at the New Hope Primitive Baptist meetinghouse, but from some unknown cause Mr. Cayce failed to appear. Mr. Cayce sent a telegram bearing date of September 24, stating that be was unavoidably delayed and could not get there for the 27th, and asking if he should come on if he could get there by Mr. Cayce did not say one word about putthe next day. ting the debate off in this telegram, neither did the Baptists present say a word about putting it off. There were several Primitive Baptist preachers on the ground, and all seemed to be full of self-confidence; and feeling that they were called and sent of God, they seemed to feel sure that the truth would not suffer in any of their hands. So they got together and "cast lots" to see which one of the "called and sent" should fight their battle. The lot fell upon one Mr. Coones, in whom all seemed to confide, and they started into the debate as confident of victory as they could well show by word and action, and feeling in their hearts that the Lord's cause would not suffer in his hands. Brother Nichol accepted Mr. Coones as a substitute for Mr. With this arrangement and agreement, Mr. Coones, in full assurance of his faith and ability, stepped out upon the arena in the defense of the following proposition: "The Scriptures teach that God gives spiritual or eternal life to dead (alien) sinners without conditions on their part."

It is not my purpose to give the arguments pro and con, but there were some things Mr. Coones said in defining his proposition that were very strange indeed. In defining what he meant by spiritual or eternal life, he said that it was a life given that the sinner did not possess, and this life is without end. Brother Nichol insisted that Mr. Coones give a clearer definition of eternal life. This Mr. Coones did not attempt to do. Brother Nichol then showed him, as he himself believed, that the devil, false prophets, together with all the wicked, at the end will be cast alive into hell, and there will have an eternal existence-a life without end-and, therefore, if spiritual or eternal life is no more than to live on and on, the devil and all the wicked will possess eternal life. On the word "dead," Mr. Coones argued that the sinner was so dead, lifeless, that he could not think or act, could not seek after righteousness. "Yes," said he, "the sinner is so dead that he cannot even wiggle till God gives him eternal life." In defense of this he gave Eph. 2: 8, 9: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast." Brother Nichol called the attention of Mr. Coones to this text and asked him if he thought the word "that" refers to "faith," He said that we are certainly saved by grace, and that (grace) not of ourselves; it is the gift of God; but we are not saved without faith, but through faith. Brother Nichol showed that "the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men" (Tit. 2: 11), and that we are justified by this grace (Tit. 3: 9); but we are justified by this grace through faith, for it is by faith that we have access "into this grace wherein we stand," and rejoice in hope of the glory of God (Rom. 5: 1, 2).

At the close of Mr. Coones' second speech I told his moderator that they had better wire for Mr. Cayce to come on, for Mr. Coones could not debate with Brother Nichol. To this I received no reply, but they went right on after noon, thinking, perhaps, that Mr. Coones would do some better; but by his last speech he was so dead he could hardly " wiggle," and his brethren could both see and feel his weakness. The Baptists, no doubt, began to think just how they could stop the debate; and luckily, to save Mr. Coones from further embarrassment, they received another telegram next morning requesting that the debate be put off till some future time. So they came to us showing the telegram and requesting that the debate be put off, with the plea that it would make Mr. Cayce feel as though they had turned him down and that it would be an injustice to him to go on with the debate. Brother Nichol's moderator told them that the debate was the result of a contract between the Baptists and the Christians and that no one party could or should jump up and close the debate without an agreement between the parties concerned. The Baptists closed the debate, but promised to secure Mr. Cayce for the debate at some future time, he and Brother Nichol to set the date for July or August, 1922.

While it was quite a disappointment to all the people to learn on the morning the debate was to begin that Mr. Cayce was not there, yet it was an enjoyable occasion. Several Primitive Baptist preachers were there. There were present from among our preaching brethren, as I remember, Brethren Gay, Harrell, Walker, and King. Brother King lives in the community and is a good man, full of love and zeal in the Lord's work. Brother Gay lives in Texas, and was there in a good meeting. Also, Brother Clayton Gall, from Wichita, Kan., was there, and preached one night, as we had a joint meeting that night. We have but few brethren there, but they are good brethren.

The Way of Holiness.

BY J. M. DEVENY.

Jesus informs us that "the way" is narrow that leads to life. (Matt. 7: 14.) "Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." It is, indeed, narrow in comparison with the broad way that leads to destruction, yet broad enough for all the redeemed to walk therein.

Isaiah speaks prophetically of "the way." (See Isa. 35: 8-10.) He calls it "The way of holiness," and shows how plainly it is marked out. "Wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err therein." And again: "No lion shall be there, nor shall any ravenous beast go up thereon." "The unclean shall not pass over it." Blessed thought! "The way" is holy, plain, and safe. All are invited to enter, yet none save "the redeemed shall walk there." What have we to inspire hope as we walk this highway? "Exceeding great and precious promises." (2 Pet. 1: 4.)

Are there any dangers in "the way?" No, but there are dangers when we deviate from "the way." Think you that we can walk in this way while engaged in the sin of fornication, adultery, lying, defrauding, and kindred evils? I think not; for it is evident that we have fallen, not in "the way," but by "the way," having strayed from "the way" and stumbled into one of the pitfalls that on either side infest "the way." For pitfalls, quagmires, and dangerous sands, figures of evil, are all along "the way;" yea, lions and ravenous beasts inhabit the gulches, tangles, and jungles that border the many bypaths leading from "The highway of holiness."

But one may say: "Wayfaring men, yea fools, shall not err therein." Beloved, God's "shalls," in dealing with men, are conditional. "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown." But the people repented, sitting in sackcloth, and it was not overthrown. God has not built exceeding high walls along "the way" so that his children cannot climb over, exposing and subjecting themselves to the dangers lurking on the outside. O, no. "God will not protect us against ourselves in spite of ourselves;" for though we have such a highway, in which we can walk and be safe, yet we are still free to choose a bypath and go astray, exposing curselves to the great dangers incident thereto.

Yes, we all make mistakes, and in an unguarded moment we stumble, and some fall, not in "the way," but rather by or from "the way;" but when we do, by God's grace and help we should at once seek to reëstablish our feet in "the looking to Jesus, "the author and finisher of our faith," realizing that he is our High Priest, Intercessor, and Advocate with the Father. He knows our weaknesses; and if we sincerely and obediently trust him, praying to the Father through him, our prayers will be heard and all will be well. Then may we, like David, hide his word in our hearts, and may we heed the admonition of Paul to let the words of Christ dwell in us richly, that we be found, not out of ' the way," should he call; for by and by, if we have proven faithful, we will be called up higher, and shall enter "with songs and everlasting joy upon our heads," and "shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall fiee away," and "a crown of life" shall be ours forevermore.

Duty.

BY J. M. HARREL.

The knowledge of having lived righteously through the day makes melody for our souls during the night. (Read 2 Pet. 3: 13; Eph. 4: 26.)

We who fall to do our duty have broken the thread that binds us to that perfect day and will be made to say: "The harvest is past, the summer's is ended, and I am not saved." (Jer. 8: 20.)

Should faith and hope fall, trust in charity. Let us speculate no more on our duty, but simply do it. Though we may not quite understand, perhaps Heaven will show us the reason why. (Read 2 Tim. 2: 22: 1 Cor. 13: 8-13.)

Knowledge, as a hill, finds but few who ever climb. Duty. as a path, leads to the city sublime. (Read Matt. 7: 13; Gal. 4: 26.)

Man not only owes his service, but himself, to God. (Read

Let us fear nothing, except that we may not know all our duty or that we may fail to do all we know. (Read 1 Pet. 4: 17; 1 Cov. 10; 12.)

Happy is he who loves to perform a duty; but if you do not feel like it, that is no reason for not doing it. (Read 1 Sam. 15: 22; 2 Thess. 1: 8.)

He who performs one duty has greater strength for the next. (Read 2 Pet. 3: 18.)

The doing of things from duty is but a carriage on the strait and narrow way over which we are passing to life eternal, and but few are riding thereon. (Read Matt. 7: 13.)

Personal Notes.

Tice Elkins closed with the Rosen Heights congregation, Fort Worth, with twenty-five additions. This is a new congregation.

- T. M. Carney reports one baptism and two restorations in the congregation at San Angelo, Texas, recently. Interest is increasing in the work.
- J. M. Deveny writes: "W. M. Davis has been with us for a series of meetings, which resulted in one restoration. The preaching was fine."
- J. Kearby Bentley closed at Sadler Mountain, Okla., with twenty-four baptized and one restored. Of the number baptized, seven had been Baptists and one had been a Methodist.

Ben West, minister for the congregation in North Fort Worth, Texas, reports a crowded house, with two baptisms and one restoration, at last service on Sunday, and one baptism in the midweek service. At Saginaw, a mission work eight miles from the city, two more baptisms.

Oscar Smith, who labors with the church in Houston Heights, Texas, recently conducted a meeting in a mission point in the city, with one baptism. Last Sunday there was one addition to the Heights congregation. Brother Smith is now in a meeting in Tenaha, Texas.

J. E. Wainwright has just closed the most successful meeting in the history of the church in Sinton, Texas. Since Brother Wainwright began work with the church in Sinton four weeks ago there have been thirty additions, and the regular attendance on Sunday has increased seventy-five per cent.

From Ira Wommack, Sulphur, Okla., October 16: "I preached at Oakland over last Lord's day. There is a goodly number of Christians at work for the Master there. In the afternoon I baptized two young ladies at McMillan. I go to Maud to-day to be with Will M. Thompson in debate with a Primitive Baptist."

- From J. S. Daugherty, Kirbyville, Texas: "The Honey Island meeting was another victory for the truth. About fifteen members agreed to begin Bible-school work and to keep house for the Lord. The debate there with the Apostolics failed to materialize. When I arrived on the ground, I found the nest truly warm, but the bird had flown."
- J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., writes that the new house which is being erected by the church in that place is near enough completion that they met for worship in it on October 9. Elvin Bost, who for the past three months has been doing mission work in Muskogee County, Okla., preached for the church in Muskogee on that night.
- W. H. Crain writes: "I have just closed an interesting meeting in West Columbia, Texas, with one baptism and a congregation of some twenty-five members assembling for regular worship as an immediate result of the meeting." Brother Crain has assisted in two mission meetings this year, and a congregation was established at each place. He is to hold another such meeting in League City, Texas, before the close of the year. How many congregations have assisted in a mission meeting this year?
- C. R. Nichol has just closed a meeting with the church in Monticello, Ky. Interest was good throughout the meeting. In the afternoon of each of the three Sundays of the meeting he was with some congregation near Monticello. In this county (Wayne) the few congregations are working with each other, and support an evangelist for full time, who is busy constantly in the work of the Master. J. L. Hines is the evangelist. O. F. Shearer, who lives in Monticello, does much work for the Master, being a consecrated minister. Only a few years ago this was a destitute field. J. D. Walling has done much and valuable work in opening up this field. Brother Nichol is now in a meeting in Shelbyville, Tenn.
- O. M. Reynolds is happily located with the saints in Plainview, Texas. The church there supports him for all his time, but will use him for a number of meetings and work in the section in reach of that place. He has just closed an interesting meeting in Hale Center, Texas, which resulted in an increase in the congregation of three members. He is now in a meeting at Abernathy, Texas. There are a number of congregations in Texas supporting a man for all his time, and sending him for much of the time to places where congregations do not exist or where they are too weak financially to have the preaching needed. It is gratifying to see the activity of the congregations. There are a few reactionaries and a few Bolshevists, but congregations worth while are doing advance work.
- K. C. Moser writes from Wewoka, Okla.: "W. M. Thompson has just closed a debate with L. L. Pickett (Methodist), The church of Kentucky. The debate was held at Stuart. is rejoicing over another victory. This was one debate in which there was no mud slinging. I moderated for Brother Thompson, and followed the debate with a week's meeting. Five were baptized and two were restored. One of those baptized was a man nearly seventy-eight years old. The debate helped him to see the truth. The church at Stuart has a bright future. We are not going to be satisfied with anything but success. The church at Wewoka There was almost a hundred-per-cent attendance at our Bible study last night. You may object if you wish, but the church at Wewoka is going to be heard from. We have no stackers. Our boys from fifteen years of age up lead the prayers or do anything else that they are called Not one time have I heard one say, 'Excuse me, on to do. I will preach at Calvin, Okla,, on the fifth Sunday in this ronth.

BY C. V. EVANS.

The falling away of mankind from obedience and service to God through disobedience and transgression is plainly and vividly told throughout the Bible; and in every instance the transgressors brought destruction upon themselves by turning away from God and forsaking his commandments. Among the examples of those who fell by disobedience and transgression, we may mention that of the human family, in its infancy, by the sin of Adam; almost the entire human race, after it had grown immense, and was exterminated by the great deluge on account of its wickedness; thousands of Israel in the wilderness; the peoples of Sodom and Gomorrah, the peoples destroyed by fire from heaven, and which the New Testament mentions as being "an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly." (2 Pet. 2: 6.) Among individuals who have fallen away are King Saul, Judas Iscariot, Ananias and Sapphira, and numerous others.

The New Covenant admonishes, "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall" (1 Cor. 10: 12); and, "Give diligence to make your calling and election sure" (2 Pet. 1: 10); and again, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling" (Phil. 2: 12). The above convincingly shows that salvation is conditioned upon our constant obedience and service to God; and that, unless we are careful about our salvation, there is a possibility of our falling from the blessings of God's promises. His promises are only to the faithful.

But, regardless of the plain teaching of the word of God showing the possibility and danger of people's turning away from him and becoming entangled in the snares of the devil after the ways of the world, there are religious teachers who claim that when one becomes converted, it is then utterly impossible for that one to ever drift away from God and be lost. The devil could wish for no better device to deceive and bring human souls to destruction than such rebellious and inconsistent doctrine, which, by its very nature, is disposed to cause pecple to become heedless about worshiping God and obeying his teachings.

Not only does the Bible present examples of many who have fallen and admonish us to be careful lest we fall, but it teaches us that some shall do so. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the falth, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils, speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron, forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth." (1 Tim. 4: 1-3.) One must first have faith before he can depart from it. Also, when he departs from the faith, he is then without faith and is an unbeliever. "Without faith it is impossible to please him [God]." (Heb. 21: 6.) Again: "He that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16: 16.)

So, then, people, through disobedience and sin, have fallen away; in latter times they will continue to do so, and be condemned for their iniquities. How much, then, it devolves upon us to give the study of God's word first place among all things, and abide in his teachings, thus giving diligence to make our calling and election sure!

FIELD REPORTS

Kilgore, Texas, October 15 .- I had a good meeting at Petrolia, Texas. Six were added by baptism. Brother C. L. were added by baptism. Brother C. L. Taylor lives there, and the church is fertunate in having him as one of its members and promoters. I go next to Bremond, Texas. This will be my second meeting there for the year. - John W. Hedge.

Lueders, Texas, October 17.--I have finished my protracted-meeting work for the summer and am now at home again doing regular work for the church. I have arranged to remain here next year, which will be my fifth year at this place. We have a splendid little congregation, and they have mind to work." We have had eighteen additions to the church this year, have held meetings as follows: At Centerline, with three additions; Mount Olive, ten additions; Swan's Chapel, twenty-eight additions; Lindsey Chapel, thirteen additions; Wilsonville, one addition; Post Oak, seven additions. My work was all done in and around Lueders.-J. D. Harvey.

Rogers, Ark., October 18 .- Brother John Taylor has just closed a fine meeting for us. There were only three baptisms. However, it was the best meeting we have had here for years. By Brother Taylor's zeal and great efficiency in presenting the gospel we were put in a better light before the town than we have ever been before. Every one who heard Brother Taylor pronounced him a power. Many members of the Christian Church attended the meeting and became very much interested in the preaching, so that they dismissed their services last Sunday night and came to hear him. We very much appreciate Brother Taylor, and we expect to have him with us again. -A. F. Warren.

It is a little town just across the river from Carthage, the county seat of Smith County, I preached in the Union meetinghouse. There were no addibut the interest and crowds tions, grew till the close. It is a sectarian stronghold. I believe good will be accomplished there in the near future. While there I heard that Brother E. A. Elam would labor for the church in Carthage monthly. This church seems to be very weak in numbers. I go next to Jackson County for a meeting. -Willie Hunter.

Fort Worth, October 17 .- At the business meeting last evening the Southside church of Christ declared their intention of keeping me for another year, as my second year here was at an end. My third year begins with encouraging prospects. There was no dissenting voice, and I have There the promise of all the workers in the church that they will give me their co-operation. OBITUARIES

Draper.

Eldon P. Draper was born, near Bagdad, Smith County, Tenn., December 10, 1885, and died on October 4, 1921. He obeyed the gospel in 1902, at Spencer, Tenn., while attending school. Eldon was a good man. one who never heard the cry for help but what he responded. He was on an errand of mercy when his car turned over, and the fall caused his death two days later. His wife was Miss Zora Cherry, who, with one girl and two boys, survives him. Eldon was the son of the beloved James T. Draper, one of Tennessee's good, solid, gospel preachers. His home was in Granville, Tenn., from which place the remains were carried to Smyrna, four miles north of Cookeville, and interred in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives. The writer spoke words of condolence.

D. FRANK DRAFER.

Sister Elsie Lowry Robinson is no more upon earth. She passed over into the great beyond on October 11, receive to that reward that awaiteth the children of God. She was in the true sense a kind neighbor, a noble wife, one of the best of mothers, and, above all, a good Christian. On account of her husband's business keeping him away from home a great deal of the time, the responsibility of looking after the home fell upon her, which duties she did not shirk, but stayed with and builded and guarded that home, and it was largely through her efforts and influence that her home and children were made what they were, and she was proud of them, and had much cause to be, and her husband and children reverenced and honored her. Her life is ended, her work well done, her battles have been fought and the victory won.

UNCLE BILLIE.

Phillips.

On the night of October 5, 1921, the angel of death visited the home of Brother Charlie Phillips, of Franklin. Tenn., and claimed his dear com-panion, Mrs. Maud Talley Phillips. She was born in 1875. She obeyed the gospel about thirty years ago, being baptized by Brother Will Anderson. She leaves a husband, two little sons, two sisters, one brother, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her death; but they should not weep as those who have no hope, realizing that she tried to be obedient to the commandments of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Reagan.

Brother B. B. Reagan, of Bryant, Ark., was born on February 2, 1857 He was married to Miss Jeanettic Jordan on December 24, 1890. He obeyed the gospel in September, 1887, and became an active member of the family of God. I had known Erother Reagan many years. During two protracted meetings I made my home with him. He was kind and hospitable in his home, making all visitors feel welcome. He loved to hear the gospel of Christ preached, and he did not hesitate to encourage the preacher in sounding out the word among destitute. He was faithful until paralysis rendered him unable to go to church. He departed this life on Scutember 14, 1921. He is survived by his wife, one daughter, four sons, and a number of relatives and friends. May we all be as faithful to God as Brother Reagan was and dwell with him forever in beaven. I conducted the funeral services in the presence of a large and appreciative audience which attested the high esteem in which Brother Reagan was held. T. E. TATUM.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pairs of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Saits. Rheumatism is caused by uric scid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve, or your money refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmersays: "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatments; and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Worldliness.

This is a beautiful world in which we live. Who cannot admire the majestic mountains, the verdant woodlands, the fertile plains, and the rolling sea? When God, the Creator, looked upon all these things which he had made, he pronounced them all "good" and loved them. In what consists the love of the world? In this: that one standardizes his life according to this present age; he conforms to the pattern of things, of time and sense, rather than the things of eternity and of the Spirit. The world passes away and the desires to which it gives rise in the heart of man; to fashion one's life by it, therefore, is to cut it by a pattern which will itself change and ere long cease entirely. "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds."-Selected.

Aches and Pains of rheumatism are not permanently, but only temporarily, relieved by external remedies. Why not use an internal remedy—Hood's Sarsaparilla—which corrects the acidity of the blood, on which rheumatism depends, and cures the disease?

Hear Ye Him.

BY G. H. O'NEAL.

In English we are taught that pronouns are used to avoid the repetition While Jesus was on the of nouns. mountain with Peter, James, and John his brother, "there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him. Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles: one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias." As the bright cloud overshadowed them. behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." So with acute conception we perceive that the pronoun "him" represents the Son of God, and every one who has a desire to dwell with him in the mansion on high should hear him with avidity.

We learn that since the very earliest existence of mankind there has been a great necessity of hearing and obeying God. It is an evident fact that merely hearing and disobeying will not clothe us with an incorruptible crown in the world that is to come. To verify this statement, read Gen. 2: 17, where God, in speaking of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, said: "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." It is true the man heard what God said. but disobedience to the same caused him to die. "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15: 21, 22.)

In the days when the eyes of Eli had begun to wax dim that he could not see, the Lord called Samuel, and he ran unto Eli and said, "Here am I." Eli answered by saying: "I called not; lie down again," This was repeated until the Lord had called Samuel three times, and he, in response to his father's instructions, said: "Speak; for thy servant heareth." This is a lamentable time for the ones who are followers of God as dear children, to see so great a multitude in an impenitent attitude.

The wise and the foolish man heard; but the wise obeyed and stood the test, while the foolish disobeyed and could not stand when the storm came. (Matt. 7: 24-27.)

Ezekiel was set as a watchman unto the house of Israel, and received the promise of hearing the word and warning them, "Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul." (Ezek. 23: 7-9.)

Since Christ's command is to warn the wicked to turn from his evil way and live, the minister of the vineyard ought to have an intense desire to work while it is day; for the night cometh, when no man can work.

I close my subject by quoting James 1: 22: "But be ye doers of the word and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves."

An Opportunity to Do Good in Your Winter Bible Class.

BY R. D. SMITH.

To those who expect to organize winter Bible classes or are in need of good books otherwise in the study of the Bible it is desired to make the following suggestions. You can certainly do no better in the selection of a book to assist or guide your pupils than to purchase "Outlines of Bible Study," by G. Dallas Smith. I have made use of this system for a long time, and have found the work the very best for its purpose. The book contains one hundred and twenty pages, with an introduction on the Bible, its origin, its versions and translations. This is followed by a diagram or "Chart of Historical Periods of the Bible," after which the whole Bible is set forth and divided into epochs or historical periods very much as we see in our school histories. The work closes with a set of splendid maps for the benefit of the student, so that he may acquaint himself with the geography of the Bible, The book is not only good for class work, but is a splendid table book for ready reference on Bible matters. You will be pleased with this work. Another splendid work by the same author is "Lectures on the Bible and What Is Man;" and another still, "Is Instrumental Music in 'Psallo?'" The last two works, like the first, treat of their subjects in that clear and forceful manner characteristic of the author, and will be found very helpful to all who may desire to make studies in these lines.

"Outlines of Bible Study" sells at seventy-five cents per copy: "Lectures on the Bible and What Is Man" is sixty cents; and the pamphlet, "Is Instrumental Music in 'Psallo?'" is ten cents per copy

These books should be ordered direct, for the present, from Mrs. Katherine Smith, 405 West Wilson Street, Cleburne, Texas. Mrs. Smith had the great misfortune to lose her husband and our brother, G. Dallas Smith, the author of the books, about a year ago. She was left without support, However, the Cleburne congregation has been unusually nice, and has done all for them that could be asked, and more; and besides this, great kindness has been shown by many others toward them; but the burden is very heavy on her, as she is trying to rear her children and to give them an education. It would be certainly a great help to her in her struggle to maintain the family, and would be greatly appreciated by the Cleburne church and by all of the friends, and especially her own people and herself, if, when you are in need of such books, you would order them from her.

It is seldom that more than one nunce is needed to completely clear the skin had gain a beautiful clear completion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as his is sold under guarantee of money back if it falls to remove freekles.

Preachers and Preaching.

BY WILLIE HUNTER,

From what I can observe, it seems that something timely could and should be said along the line of the above heading, that has not yet been said. As to whether I will say the things most needed is yet to be judged.

My little experience as a preacher in preaching has proven to me that it is no small task to so arrange my work during the protracted-meeting season as to stay arranged to the satisfaction of both the preacher and the brethren. It is often the case that when the time and the place for the meeting have been decided and settled on, and the preacher has his work all booked and planned, just before the meeting is to begin the preacher will get word that so and so does not want the meeting at the time set for it, as another meeting will be in progress near by and there would be a conflict, or we would not have moonlight nights, too hot or too cool, and numerous other things that they had not considered likely when the meeting was decided on maybe eight months or one year before this, not knowing but what the preacher could just conform to any change on a very short notice without disappointing him or breaking into his promises at other places. And sometimes if the preacher is not on the spot at the time appointed, it matters not what the reason may be, let it be interest in another meeting that is holding the preacher, or sickness in his home, or what not, some will fly up, get angry, and call another preacher, or decide not to have any meeting at all, and blame the preacher for it all, regardless of the circumstances. Brethren, these things ought not so to be. I believe that the preacher should have some say-so in the matter as to when it will meet his convenience in travel, time, etc., as all cannot have their meetings at the same time or in moonlight nights.

And a number of churches should strip themselves of so much style and choice, I know of one church in a certain town where a preacher went and delivered three discourses. There were no additions. The church gave him twenty dollars, which, of course, was all right. Sometime after this another preacher was called, and he preached three or four sermons, and there were one or two baptisms, and the church gave him not a penny. Both preached from the same Bookthe same gospel. But one was from the city and the other from the rural district: one, a common, plain man; the other, as the church thought, a fine city preacher. See? I have no kick with either of the preachers. Both. I think, are good men. But did the church do right and act justly? Another case came under my observation where a preacher went out in his car and held a few-days' meeting, and the church paid him upward of sixty dollars. The next year another brother held a meeting at the same place for the same people, and preached the same gospel, and the same church gave the latter brother the sum of twenty dollars. "Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts? . . . But if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors." (James 2: 4-9.)

I am raising no howl on my individual part, but it does seem that we could beat the way we are now doing along some lines.

If at first you do succeed,
Try, try again.
Life is more than just one deed;
Try, try again.
Never stop with what you've done;
More remains than you have won;
Full content's youchsafed to none;

Full content's vouchsafed to none;
Try, try again.

If you've won a bit of fame,
Try, try again.

If you've won a bit of fame,
Try, try again.
Seek a still more honored name;
Try, try again.
Sit not down with folded hands,
Cramp not hope with narrow bands;
Think what prowess life demands!
Try, try again.

If you've won on lower plane,
Try, try again.
Life is more than one campaign;
Try, try again.
Send your guidons to the fore,
Strive to seize one standard more;
Still ungained are palms galore;
Try, try again.

If at first you do succeed,
 Try, try again.
For future harvests sow thy seed;
 Try, try again.
Rise with sacred discontent,
Realize that life is lent
On highest searches to be spent;
 Try, try again.

CURRENT COMMENT

⇒ By A. B. L. :

Men who have reached the top in America's business world started at the bottom and came up the road to success by saving a good part of what they earned. We offer the following examples:

Edward H. Harriman was a poor minister's son; George Eastman, millionaire president of a camera company, worked for three dollars a week; F. D. Underwood, president of the Erie Railroad, was a railroad brakeman; General Coleman du Pont, United States Senator from Delaware, worked in a coal mine; F. W. Woolworth, of the tencent stores, was a grocery clerk; Thomas A. Edison was a newsboy; John D. Rockefeller and John Wanamaker started in life as clerks; Henry P. Davison, partner of J. P. Morgan, was a farm hand; G. D. Swift, founder of the meatpacking house, worked in a butcher shop; Henry C. Frick, the coke king, worked in a flour mill; Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, was a day laborer.

In view of such conspicuous examples we might well afford to ponder Zechariah's question, "Who hath despised the day of small things?" Certainly, from the business viewpoint, it is folly to despise them, when we know that they lead to the highest round on the ladder of success. We may find the same principle working for success in the Christian life. Jesus taught in the parable of the talents that the only way to become ruler over many things is to prove one's faithfulness in little things. "I used to think," writes F. B. Meyer, "that God's gifts were on shelves one above the other, and that the taller we grew in Christian character, the more easily we could reach them. I find now that God's gifts are on shelves one beneath the other, and that it is not a question of growing taller, but of stooping lower, and that we have to go down, always down, to get his best gifts."

Most people believe that it is rather difficult to make good, true friends. But the real problem is not to make them, but to keep them. Emerson said: "He who would have friends must show himself friendly." Once we show kindness and friendliness to others, we may feel sure of making friends. But if we would keep them, there are certain things that we cannot suffer ourselves to do. The following explanation of why a woman lost her friends, adapted from Success Magazine, is well worth keeping:

She was not loval to them.

She measured them by their ability to advance her.

She did not know the value of thoughtfulness in little things.

She was always saying mean things about them in their absence.

She was cold and reserved in her manner, cranky, gloomy, pessimistic.

She never thought it worth while to spend time in keeping up her friendships.

She regarded friendship as a luxury to be enjoyed, instead of an opportunity for service.

She never learned that implicit, generous trust is the very foundation stone of friendship.

She never threw the doors of her heart wide open to people or took them into her confidence.

She was always wounding their feelings, making sarcastic or funny remarks at their expense.

She was always ready to receive assistance from her friends, but always too busy or too stingy to assist them in their time of need.

In the matter of friendship, we must not only be ready to receive, but also ready to give of our very best. "To give is to live" and to have friends. This priceless commodity can only become ours by observing the Master's rule: "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over, shall they give into your bosom. For with what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again." (Luke 6: 38.)

Nashville has a large per cent of negro population. It has what is generally conceded to be the largest and most influential negro university in the world. Some of the most substantial business men in the city are members of the colored race. It is, therefore, not out of place to consider what the negro needs and how we may help him. On this point, George Stoves, pastor of the West End Methodist Church, in this city, gives the following summary:

He does not want the social mingling of the races. The last thing he wants is amalgamation. The amalgamation we have had thus far does not come from the negro man.

He does want the same treatment at the hands of our courts that any other man receives.

He believes that when he qualifies himself, he should have a voice in the affairs of the nation.

He claims that the state should afford him the same privilege to educate his children that it gives to the white man

When he pays the same railroad fare as does the white man, he thinks he should have equal accommodations. That is, the car which has been set apart for his own use ought to be as clean and comfortable as any other.

I am stating what the negro has said to me, and I wish to put myself on record as saying that I think his claims are just. You may not agree with me, but I beg you to go away from here to think of these things dispassionately. Lay aside your prejudices and the traditions of the South as you study this question.

You may be inclined to throw this off by saying: "If the negro doesn't like the way he is being treated, let him help himself."

No, no! He can't help himself. He does not know how. If he tries, he will make it bad for you and worse for himself. He is the weaker race.

In the name of God and humanity, I ask you, ought not the strong to help the weak?

I do not believe that there is a single unjust demand in the above list. Perhaps, from the civic viewpoint, it is not as full as it should be. The white Christians in Nashville never have been fully awake to the opportunity they have of preaching the gospel to the thousands of negroes here. It is much easier to get them interested in benighted classes thousands of miles away. But God is no respecter of persons. Certainly we should not neglect the distant field, but here is the point as the Savior would put it: "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone."

Sir Humphrey Davy, at the end of his brilliant career, wrote these words: "I envy no quality of mind or intellect in others, not genius, power, wit, or fancy But if I could choose what would be most delightful, and I believe most useful to me, I should prefer a firm religious belief to every other blessing; because it makes life a discipline of goodness, creates new hopes when all earthly hopes vanish, and throws over the decay of existence the most gorgeous of all lights."

From this we may learn that the humblest child of God possesses in his "firm religious belief" something that has been craved by the greatest minds in the world. If we could only believe this, we would never envy anybody, but would want others to share earth's greatest blessing with us. This is doubtless what James had in mind when he said: "Hearken, my beloved brethren; did not God choose them that are poor as to the world to be rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he promised to them that love him?"

The True and Living God. BY JOHN D. EVANS.

Every man of normal faculties has a god, either true or false. Religion is a universal instinct. All worship at some shrine. From time immemorial the nations, tribes, and tongues of the world have had their deities and some form of worship. Under the Jewish theocracy, while devout Jews were erecting altars here and there to their God, Jehovah, multiplied thousands of idolaters were bowing the knee to Baal, their god. While the finger of God was writing upon tablets of imperishable stone the words, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," the multitude in the valley were converting their jewels into a "golden calf" before which they were ready to bow in adoration in preference to the true and living God, who by his mighty hand had delivered them from Egyptian bondage. In that age of the world, as well as in apostolic times, there were "gods many and lords many." Images were carved of wood and stone, gold and other precious metals. Sun, moon, and stars were objects of worship. Oftentimes great men were deified and became the idols of men. Carlisle, in his "Heroes and Hero Worship," suggests that such deification of mortals was the result of souls in darkness struggling for light. In ignorance of the true God, their desire to worship something led them to accept as objects of worship the human beings that approached nearest their conception of what their gcd should be. In fact, all gods that men's hands have fashioned are invested with powers and attributes and feelings in harmony with their conception of what a god should be.

In apostolic times Paul and Barnabas were supposed to be "gods in the likeness of men." Paul was called "Mercury" (Greek, "Hermes") "because he was the chief speaker," and Barnabas was called "Jupiter" (Greek, "Zeus"), each setting forth some supposed characteristic of these Roman deities.

In the classical city of Athens it was said to be "easier to find a god than a man." No wonder the apostle Paul found there an inscription to the "unknown god." Their gods were so numerous that their vocabulary of names was exhausted. Taking advantage of what seemed to be a sincere desire to worship at some shrine, the apostle Paul lost no time in declaring unto them the true and living God as the only being worthy of their praise and adoration.

It is said that Alexander the Great at one time called to himself in Babylon a priest from every country he had conquered and asked of each one these questions: "Who is God? Who is the supreme, invisible being you worship?" The priest from India answered, "Brahma;" the priest from Persia, "Ormus;" the priest from Judea, "Jehovah;" while Alexander himself insisted that Zeus was the only God.

If we were to visit all the nations of the earth and propound the same question, we should receive about the same varieties of answers. Egypt would tell of Osiris, preserved by miracle from all enemies. The Norseman would tell of Odin, the "Alfather" with power to create the mountains, seas, and heavens; of Thor, the thunderer, with his ponderous hammer, destroying giants, etc. Rome would tell of Jupiter, king over all things, ruler over all the gods, his codeities, hurling them down from high heaven at will or lifting men up to the skies. The Greeks would insist that Zeus was the father of gods and men, the protector of kings, the avenger of broken oaths, etc. They would tell us that his hand guided the stars and regulated the whole course of nations. The North American Indian communes with the "Great Spirit," "Manitou," and religiously buries his dead with their tomahawk and bow and arrow, that they may be ready for use in the "happy hunting ground." Only "the fool hath said in his heart, There is no God."

But all gods except Jehovah, the only true and living God, originated in the minds of men. They were fashioned by human hands, of material substance, and are good, bad, or indifferent according to the character of their makers. The characters of men make all gods except Jehovah. He makes men and inspires character. The gods of all nations are at best but magnified human beings, and "subject to like passions" as men, many of them mythical monsters, full of treachery, evil, and lust. In tracing the history of the nations and races, we find that the ones which have the loftiest conception of God have a religion that best answers the needs of man. "As a man thinks about God, so is he." The strongest argument against atheism is India. The strongest argument in favor of Christianity is America. No wonder the Psalmist said: "Blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord!" It is a precious privilege to live in a land where Jehovah reigns.

The great need of humanity to-day is not only to know more about the God of the Bible, but to really know him. It does not necessarily follow that we have to know all about God in order to know him. In fact, if we knew all about him, we would "want another king to adore." If we could see him, we would want to see beyond him. There are many secret things that we shall never know, but the "things which have been revealed belong to us."

The inspired writers of the New Testament acquaint us with the fact that the only way now to find God and enjoy him is through his Son and our Savior. He is "Immanuel" (God with us). He came to reveal the Father. It was he who taught us to say, "Our Father." To his inquiring disciples he said: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Again: "No man can come to the Father except by me." "I am the door: by me if any man enter, he shall go in and out, and find pasture." Through him we enjoy sonship and joint-heirship. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." His boundless love and mercy flow to us through Christ. Through him he bears our burdens, carries our sorrows. Through him he provides cleansing and pardon for all the sons of men.

The masses of humanity are without God, not because he cannot be found, but because they seek him in the wrong way. "Ye will not come to me," says the Savior, "that ye might have life." The world by its own wisdom cannot find God; nor can it find him as long as it maintains the wrong attitude of mind and disposition of heart. "He that doeth evil hath not seen God." "The carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." He does not propose to dwell in a Christless heart or a heart of unbelief. 'pure in heart" can see him. So the heart must be "purified by faith" before the soul can find God. When John announces that "no man hath seen God at any time," he immediately adds: "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us."

But the right attitude of mind and disposition of heart is not all that is necessary. There must be a righteous life and a willingness to serve. He only finds God who devotes his life to service divinely marked out. "The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry. The face of the Lord is against them that do evil." "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed." "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." "The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous: but the way of the ungodly shall perish." "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way." "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

It has been truly said that to "glorify God and enjoy him is the chief end of man." When we accept the wonderful salvation provided for us through his Son and our Savior, we give honor and glory to him as the only true and living God and have our hearts filled with a joy that this world cannot take away.

In the midst of earth's cares and disappointments, its blasted hopes, its shattered idols, its changing systems, how consoling is it to know there is One "who changeth not," who is the "same yesterday and to-day and forever," and who "never slumbers nor sleeps!"

How calmly may we commit ourselves to the hands of Him who bears up the world, "who suffers not even a sparrow to fall to the ground without his notice," and who provides for the enjoyment and happiness of every living thing, having every confidence that "no good thing will he withhold from those who put their trust in him."

Yea, "I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor power, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor death, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

The Greatest Victory.

"He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city." The hardest fought battles take place within the domain of the human heart. The greatest conquests are not these on battle fields, where armies clash and where one army conquers the other, but within the spirit of man, for he that controlleth his spirit is greater and mightier than he that captures a city. Invisible foes are the most relentless, and invisible battles are the severest, and unseen victories are the grandest. The capture of a city may be by strategy and by superior forces or better equipment. The powers of one's being must be brought into harmony, must be balanced and properly controlled. We cannot rule our spirit by suppression or by humiliation, but by proper setting and balancing of all our essential faculties. All our faculties must be in accord, like a well-tuned instrument, which gives no discordant note.

Self-conquest is the greatest and grandest victory that can be achieved, because it is achieved in the grandest domain known to man. A civil war within is far more devastating than any other; to prevent riot and discord within is indeed a great achievement; there can be nothing nobler than harmony within the spirit when tempests roar without. It is the soul's fireside, the quiet domain where the music of harmony is heard and recognized—music, the symphony of which regales the tired spirit.

But to rule the spirit, to keep all its powers harmonious when tempted to panic and riot, to maintain chivalry in all our warfare, to keep the holy lights burning on the most tempestuous night, demands great resources of strength. And the need has been anticipated, and we can find our resources in Christ. "Be strengthened in the grace which is in Christ Jesus." That initial strength is not a human achievement, it is a divine equipment. It is not the creation of a will, it is the gift of grace. It is an endowment, the endowment of the Holy Ghost. A man is able to rule his spirit when he himself is kept by God.—The Evangelical Messenger.

LOS ANGELES NOTES

By S. H. HALL, 2669 North Sichel Street,

House of worship, corner Altura and North Sichel Streets. Take North Broadway car to Sichel, then one block to left.

The Sin Easily Committed.

In Heb. 12: 1, 2, Paul says: "Therefore let us also, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and perfecter of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and bath sat down at the right hand of the throne of God." For a while, at least, let us study this wonderful statement of the inspired penman. Isalah says: "Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation." Most certainly this we are doing when we drink fully and freely of the thoughts so clearly revealed to us in God's word. We should learn well and sing well the song Jehovah gave Moses to teach Israel: "And Moses spake in the ears of all the assembly of Israel the words of this song, until they were finished. Give ear, ye heavens, and I will speak; and let the earth hear the words of my mouth. My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distill as the dew; as the small rain upon the tender grass, and as the showers upon the earth." (Deut. 31: 30; 32: 1, 2.)

In spite of this teaching, Israel, like many to-day, wandered from the pure teaching of their God and made doctrines of their own. Hence, Jehovah says of them: "For my people have committed two evils: they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." (Jer. 2: 13.) This very thing Christ had in mind when he said of them: "But in vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." (Matt. 15: 9.) And Jehovah had the same thing in mind when he said: "I have spread out my hand all the day unto a rebellious people, that walk in a way that is not good, after their own thoughts." (Isa. 65: 2.)

With all this before us, how beautiful the harmony we see in the following statement: "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith Jehovah. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, and giveth seed to the sower and bread to the eater; so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." (Isa, 55: 8-11.)

The doctrine of our Heavenly Father has been sent to us as the food for our souls. For our Lord hath said: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." (Matt. 4: 4.) If we will take this pure teaching and daily live as it directs us, it will establish in us the very nature of our Lord and Savior. We will daily become more and more like him. It will keep us from the pitfalls of life, steer us clear of being governed by the carnal nature, and make us a blessing to our day and generation. Let us, therefore, get every thought in the words you see at the heading of this article.

1. "Seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses," and "looking unto Jesus, . . . at the right hand of the throne of God." Read all of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews for the great cloud of witnesses. The word "cloud" is applied to a great host of people. Speaking of Israel, God said: "Thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land." (Ezek. 38: 9.) Think of Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephtha, David, Samuel, and the countless thousands who in the past have run the race and finished their course! Think of them as surrounding you and watching you now as you run! Study their lives. See how they overcame difficulties by their undoubting faith and confidence in the promises of God! Then, above them, don't forget to look continually at our living Lord, the very one who shed his blood for us and who in the end is to be the Judge. Think of him at the right hand of God, with his eyes continually upon us and wanting us to succeed even more than we can comprehend or imagine!

These are some of the things that we must see right in the beginning of the race. But, my brother, do you see them? Don't we often run as though Christ were dead or a nonenity and the faithful heroes of the past mere fables? Get from under this spell of unbelief and believe. For this writer of the book of Hebrews had just said in the eleventh chapter: "But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Don't forget the timely statement of John: "And this is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith." (1 John 5: 4.)

These heroes of faith that we must by faith see surrounding us as a great cloud of witnesses did not love the world. nor the things that are in the world. Listen! They were not even tormented with the fear that some one of their fellows would be considered more successful than themselves. They knew not that devilish spirit, born in the very heart of the carnal nature, and named "envy" and "jealousy." O, no! They were free from such little things and walked and lived above the flesh and the world. They really believed there is a better country than this and continually looked forward to it. They were not continually burdening their minds about "my rights" in this old world, for here they considered themselves strangers and pilgrims. They knew not how to be forever seeking personal advantage over their brethren. The success of any saint, to them, was a part of their own success. These were brethren indeed. Let us study their lives of faith and trust and absolute surrender to God. This we must do in the very beginning if we run the race successfully.

2. "Lay aside every weight." This is the second thing enjoined upon us. We must lay aside, not some of the weights, but "every weight." But some one will ask: "How can I lay them aside?" Here your attention is again called to faith-undoubting faith in our Lord's promise that he not only continually sees us, but is on the ground to help us the very moment we stumble and give us every needed help. Will we not believe: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble?" (Ps. 46: 1.) It is good to have God as a present help. Try to imagine what the Spirit means when he says he is a "very present help." "Be ye free from the love of money; content with such things as ye have: for himself hath said, I will in no wise fail thee, neither will I in any wise forsake thee. So that with good courage we say, The Lord is my helper; I will not fear."

It may be that the love of money that we are here commanded to be free from is the besetting sin of some of us. Anyway, it is a bad thing, a dangerous thing, to be in love with anything that pertains merely to this life. "But god-liness with contentment is great gain: for we brought nothing into the world, for neither can we carry anything out; but having food and covering we shall be therewith content." (1 Tim. 6: 6-8.) Will we not, then, throw off, because Christ begs us to do so, this anxiety about food and raiment? Here study Matt. 6: 24-34. Do you remember Peter's admonition: "Casting all your anxiety upon him, because he careth for you?" (1 Pet. 5: 7.) You say: "I don't know how to cast my anxiety upon him." If you do not, the whole trouble is to be found in the fact that you believe not the statement: "He careth for you." If He careth for us, this is the next question we should consider: Is he able to care for us! Truly did David exclaim: "Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee!" 5.) "God hath spoken once, twice have I heard this; that power belongeth unto Gcd." (Ps. 62: 11.) No other one has power, only as the Lord permits it to be exercised. And remember, it is He who promises to bear our burdens for us. "Cast thy burden upon Jehovah, and he will sustain thee: he will never suffer the righteous to be moved," (Ps. 55: 22.) Is it not said, "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly;" and: "O Jehovah of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee?" (Ps. 84: 11, 12.)

If any one should be able to lay aside every weight, it is that one who has no doubt about the promises of our God. No one else can lay aside the weights except the wholehearted believer. Not one good thing under the sun will be withheld if I walk uprightly. Walking uprightly is my part of the covenant. May God help me, then, is my prayer, to let every thought about every man and woman and every word and every act be an upright thought, word, and act. Certainly we know right! Yes, and those who know it and are not doing it are not fooling their neighbors and not often themselves. There is a joy that comes to the soul that hungers for Christ and his righteousness. "I will bless Jehovah at all times: my soul shall make her boast in Jehovah." And why not? For the same writer declares: "But they that seek Jehovah shall not want any good thing." (Ps. 34: 1, 2, 10.)

Study the above feeble effort to clear the way for a whole-hearted study of our "besetting sins," or "the sins easily committed."

Bits of News.

Our whole trip back West was a glorious success. We left Amarillo on Monday morning, October 10, and drove into the driveway to our garage at home at 9 P.M., October 15. We made three hundred miles the last day.

At Sichel and Altura I found a full house on Sunday morning following, and a hearty welcome back. Brother Sam Witty, of Ontario, was with us and did the preaching, and it was well done. We also had visitors from the Pomona congregation. After the services, we went to Sycamore Grove for basket dinner.

Brother Riggs closed a meeting at Alhambra on Sunday night, October 16. It continued three weeks, with two confessions and baptisms. Some six or seven of our very best families who live in that beautiful town have banded themselves together, and we have another congregation started.

Chalk Talks For Teachers.

There has been a long-felt need of a book which would enable any person who can speak to a class or an audience to give a helpful, inspiring, illustrated talk. We are glad to announce that we have secured such a work. It is entitled "Crayon and Character," and is the work of B. J. Griswold. With this book in their hands, parents can teach the children a simple, fascinating method of drawing, and at the same time make the great truths of life a part of their everyday learning. It is especially adapted to speakers who earnestly want to give illustrated talks, but who feel that they "can't draw a straight line." Practically all subjects are covered, and full instructions are given as to how to make the talks effective. The price of the book is $1.25, postpaid. Order from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

The Growth of Sin.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

Left free to run its course in a human life, sin develops steadily and insidiously. Like a forest fire, the conflagration of sin may start with an ominous blaze, only to spread with terrific swiftness, waxing flercer and flercer, until finally titanic efforts are required to arrest its progress. Like a fire, too, the flame of sin is wont to break out afresh at unguarded moments. Danger lurks in smoldering embers, for a vagrant wind may fan away the ashes and kindle a spark into a consuming fire. Temptation is such a wind calculated to fan a smoldering passion into a flare-up of wickedness. Danger is never quite past and temptation must not be dallied with. The temple of the heart must not be swept and garnished for the return of the unclean spirit. We must walk circumspectly.

In its steady development, sin is like the growth of a thrifty plant in good soil. It reminds me of Johnson grass. Farmers, especially those of the South, know something of that noxious growth. It cannot be curbed, and herein lies its danger. The penetration of its roots is surprisingly rapid. Within a very short time the grass from a bit of rootstock will have covered several square rods of surface and the roots themselves will have gone even farther. The farmer finds it passing under his cross fences to adjoining fields and encroaching upon the premises of his neighbors. Alarmed at the rapid and unexpected spread of the grass, he would confine it within bounds or stamp it out. But when he attempts to arrest its progress, he finds it exceedingly difficult to kill the growth. The roots lie deep and everywhere. The struggle against the pest is long drawn out and tests the perseverance of the farmer. Indeed, the farmer who thoughtlessly sows Johnson grass can never certainly know whether he shall ever be able to free his soil of this baneful plant. It is almost impossible to eradicate it, and the farmer learns to rue the day he sowed the seed.

How like Johnson grass is the growth of sin! Its tentaclelike roots ramify the heart in swift and orderly growth. The evil plant flowers in the life in deeds of lawlessness; and as the harvest doubles and trebles, the roots sink deeper and deeper in the heart. The works of the flesh are indicative of the silent inner working of iniquity going on within the heart. There lies the fountain of polluted waters, the source of evil thoughts and of sinful desires. Ordinarily, sin becomes deeply seated in the heart before the sinner is really aware of his peril. He comes to himself only to realize with a shudder that the odds are against him. He finds himself at once in a life-anddeath struggle, with first the spirit and then the flesh triumphant. He has sown something worse than Johnson grass-he has sown the seeds of sin; and Johnson grass was never more stubborn than sin, nor harder to eradicate. There is such a thing as sowing to the flesh and reaping corruption, sowing to the wind and reaping the whirlwind. The sinner learns this at last when his sin finds him out. And when he is willing to face his sin, when he arises to go to his Father in penitence and tears, he must then, with God's assisting grace, dig at the roots of sin. He must dig with the patient perseverance of the farmer, in season and out of season. He must bring his every thought and imagination into captivity to the obedience of Christ, otherwise sin will abound.

The case of Cain affords an impressive example of the steady and climactic growth of sin. Not to speak of the unbelief and the presumption that led him to substitute an offering of the "fruit of the ground" for the bloody sacrifice God evidently had commanded him to offer, let us note, one by one, the orderly steps or stages in the development of his crime against Abel. First is the sin of envy. "Jehovah had respect unto Abel and to his offering:

but unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect." This attitude of Jehovah engendered envy in Cain's heart because his heart was not right. Sin was even then crouching at his door-sin in its incipiency-and its subsequent development was steady and swift. Instead of eradicating envy from his heart, Cain cherished it. This led inevitably to hatred. "Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell." He was a very angry man, and ugly hate shone in his face. It was at this point that Jehovah remonstrated with Cain, but in vain. He admonished him to master and control this passion into which he had fallen-"do thou rule over it." (Gen. 4: 7.) Jehovah gave this advice in great mercy, and if Cain had heeded it-if he had ruled his spirit-he would have been spared the disgrace and suffering into which crime precipitated him. But he brooded over his unenviable reputation and cultivated and nursed his hatred for Abel until it grew into malice. Cain had added fuel to fire from the first until at last he had reached an exceedingly aggravated and abnormal state of mind. He was now harboring malice for his brother-malice aforethought. Envy, hatred, malice-these separate and distinct passions were hidden away in a wicked heart. They could be detected in the countenance, but as yet there had been no outward deed. The overt act and the climax of Cain's sin was murder,

Of course, Cain lied about this crime. He denied it. In answer to the question, "Where is Abel thy brother?" Cain declared with mock sincerity: "I know not: am I my brother's keeper?" We are not surprised that Cain lied. but we would have been greatly surprised if he had not lied. It was natural that he should have contrived to cloak his deed. Lying was convenient and in the nature of the case seemed to Cain to be inevitable. But murder was the peak of Cain's crime against Abel. In the shedding of innocent blood, the blood of his brother and companion in the flesh, Cain's sin became full-grown. That diabolical deed filled his cup of iniquity to the brim. Blindly, yet willfully, had Cain pursued his wicked course. He would learn in no other school than that of experience; and thus spurning the counsel of Jehovah, he came to his evil lot. He had sown envy, cultivated hatred, nursed malice, and done murder, and sought to conceal his deed. This is the plant that grew up in his heart and bore the bitter fruit of crime in his life. This is the way sin grows! James tells us how sin is conceived in the heart, develops in the life, and produces death. "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted with evil, and he himself tempteth no man: but each man is tempted, when he is drawn away by his own lust, and enticed. Then the lust, when it hath conceived, beareth sin: and the sin, when it is full-grown, bringeth forth death." (James 1: 13-15.) If we would but remember that "the wages of sin is death!"

But sin is insidious as well as steady in its growth. In this respect it is like some stealthy disease. Sometimes sin is called a disease of the soul or of the heart, and as such is typified by leprosy. I like to think of Christ, the great and good Physician, prescribing the remedy for the leprosy of sin. Sometimes I think of erysipelas when I see an aggravated case of sin. But more often sin reminds me particularly of the scourge of pulmonary tuberculosis, the "great white plague" which steals upon its countless victims with the cunning of designing intelligence. There is no disease in the catalogue so insidious in its attack. The patient is scarcely aware of the encroachment of tuberculosis, so gradually does it pass from stage to stage. At first he finds some trivial excuse for his condition and believes that he will soon be well. Later, when there cannot be any doubt as to the unmistakable and dangerous inroads of the disease upon the constitution of the patient, he is further deluded by the reassuring anticipations that tuberculosis arouses. Hope is a characteristic of the disease and a sure token of its deadly work. Bright, illusory hope remains active until the last, flattering the patient into expectation of recovery. He talks of life, and not of death. But perfidious disease goes onward and onward, gradually gaining ground, carrying the victim ever downward until finally he enters the valley of the shadows and succumbs to the inevitable.

Sin is like that. It is an insidious disease. It slips upon us with the noiseless footstep of a cautious beast of prey, with the insidious approach of disease. We are free to admit that we sin, but deny that we are great sinners. We have lost much of our sensitiveness to the terrible enormity of sin. We have forgotten that sin is an abominable thing which Jehovah hates (Jer. 44: 4), and is so loathsome in his eyes that he resolutely refuses to look upon it. (Hab. 1: 13.) Perhaps it is because we all sin that we do not abominate iniquity as does God. "The whole world lieth in wickedness" (1 John 5: 19), and the universality of the scourge has served to blind us to the "exceeding sinfulness of sin." The god of this world, or Satan, is represented as blinding the minds of the unbclieving that "the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, . . should not dawn upon them." (2 Cor. 4: 3, 4.) Hence, we are frequently led to think that we are standing when-lo!-we are in imminent danger of falling. We are not aware that the disease of sin is eating away within the heart. We learn to sin habitually and in a measure unmindful of what we are doing. You remember the stery of the old horse which, after a long service at the sweep, was turned loose to lie for his remaining days on a pasture. This horse could not forget the years he had spent at the sweep. So day after day he would shamble out into the open pasture, involuntarily describe a circle with radius corresponding to the length of the sweep, and keep to his path whole hours together. He was grinding away as he had been accustomed to do for years. It came from force of habit. Men are not unlike the horse. They grind at the devil's mill habitually and unconsciously. They tread the beaten path day after day. Sin has stolen upon them like a disease and their consciences are seared as with a hot iron.

You remember David the king and his unspeakable sin. He was a man after God's own heart, but he was a greater sinner than he thought he was. We may not be able to understand how it was that David was so blind to the terrible enormity of his crime. He was not unlike the prodigal son in departing from God's favor and plunging headlong into sin, and he seems to have been slow in coming to himself. Indeed, it was not until the prophet of God had thundered into his ears, "Thou art the man!" that he awoke to a realization of his lost condition. He had been taken by surprise. I am sure we are not unlike David. We are all in some measure suffering from the inroads of the disease of sin. We have our besetting sins and our hereditary weaknesses; and the sooner we face the facts, the better it will be for us. Every intermittent symptom-every outbreak of sin-is proof of the unintermittent disease within. It is the part of wisdom to watch those symptoms and imperative that we cure the disease back of them. Indifference to sin will cause us an awful surprise at the judgment: "I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

Remember that sin is a growth—a steady, insidious growth. Remember that it grows steadily like a noxious plant, and insidiously like a loathsome disease. Remember, too, that anything that grows ought to be watched. Be advised—danger and death lurk in sin. Be on guard. Shun temptation. Resist the devil. Draw nigh to God. Live the prayer life. Anchor your hope in Jesus, and let his blood be upon your soul.

Pleasing Ourselves. BY PHEEE.

It is not a mark of egotism for a Christian to say that he is strong, because it only takes a childlike act of submission to God's way to transform a rebellious heart into a beautiful, Christlike character. The simplicity of it is what makes it so confusing to men of complex minds. In 2 Cor. 12: 10 Paul gives us the secret of strength: "Wherefore, I take pleasure in weaknesses, in injuries, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong." And in these things only, he tells us, we are allowed to glory. So, then, when we have learned, in some measure at least, to suffer with Christ, we are not left in ignorance of how to treat those who are weak. In Rom. 15: 1-3 we find: "Now we that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. Let each one of us please his neighbor for that which is good, unto edifying. For Christ also pleased not himself; but, as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell upon me." Also, in Rom. 14: 10: "But thou, why dost thou judge thy brother? or thou again, why dost thou set at naught thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of God." And again, in Matt. 18: 10: "See that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father who is in heaven."

No words of my own can describe so well what I think about the matter of "pleasing ourselves" as these words by an unknown poet:

I cannot say,
Beneath the pressure of life's cares to-day.
I joy in these;
But I can say
That I would rather walk this rugged way,
If Him it please.

I cannot feel
That all is well, when darkening clouds conceal
The shining sun;
But, then, I know
God lives and loves; and say, since it is so,
"Thy will be done."

I do not see
Why God should e'en permit some things to be,
When he is love.
But I can see,
Tho' often dimly, through the mystery,
His hand above.

I do not know
Where falls the seed that I have tried to sow
With greatest care;
But I shall know
The meaning of each waiting hour below,
Sometime, somewhere!

I do not look
Upon the present, nor in nature's book,
To read my fate;
But I do look
For promised blessings in God's Holy Book;
And I can wait.

Christmas Stories and Legends.

The above is the title of a new book for children, which was compiled by Phebe A. Curtiss, author of "White Gifts for the King." No greater teaching force has ever been discovered than the story, and no one has ever lived who used that force so skillfully as did our Great Teacher. It is not strange, then, that among all the stories that have ever been written or told, none are so dear to us as those which center around his birth. Young and old alike delight in them and never tire of hearing them. Each story in the new book has its own sweet lesson. It makes an exceptionally pleasing gift for the children. The price is $1.25, postpaid. Order from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

Will There Be a Reaction?

BY C. R. N.

In the Christian Courier (Dallas, Texas), Cephas Shelburne, a minister in the Christian Church, says:

Some of our own preachers and churches and papers are advocating and practicing "open membership," as if the denominations were knocking at our doors for entrance and clamoring like thieves and robbers to climb up some other way. One of the Chicago churches, with several millions of people around it, has proclaimed "open membership" for sixteen years, and has received one hundred of all sorts, including Jews, Catholics, Scientists, and what not: while in a town of a few thousand people, one of our gospel preachers, in the same sixteen years, has baptized and received into the membership four thousand people. The world and the denominations, if they know it, want the Bible way, and the business of our preachers is to preach it to them; and they will gladly hear it and respond to its message. Our old preachers were busy preaching the gospel. They had a definite Bible message; they knew what our people stood for, and they proclaimed it; they felt with Paul: "Woe is me, if I preach not the gospel!"

But now that we have brought the denominations to an appreciation of our position and their preachers to preaching it, we are surrendering it—at least, failing to proclaim it. We are afraid of our own position. Let one of our preachers, churches, colleges, papers, conventions, state their position, put it down on paper in black and white, immediately there is a protest and cry of "creed," "binding it upon the brotherhood," "ecclesiasticism," and all that! We need the positive note in our preaching and journalism—to let the world and the divided church know where we stand and what we stand for; to get back to the gospel plan of salvation, and the Bible basis for the union of the divided bodies of Christ who no longer "thank God for the divisions of the church," but whose ministers, many of them, are preaching the position and plea that the Christian Church has held for a hundred years, but in which its ministry is sadly weakening or cowardly leaving others to proclaim.

It is rather refreshing to hear such a plea from a "progressive" preacher. There is such a crying need for the simple, plain, forceful presentation of the gospel that I pass the cry on to our readers.

A few years ago there was a great "union meeting" in Denton, Texas. The minister in charge was a preacher of the Christian Church. The opportunity to preach the gespel to great crowds was his, but he declined to do that. The preachers on the platform with him were of the sectarian churches; the money to pay him for his work was to come from the people who tabooed "doctrinal sermons;" and this "Christian" minister knew full well that if he should tell sinners in plain New Testament terms what to do to be saved, his meeting would come to the ground with a dull thud. I talked with him while the meeting was in progress, and asked him why he did not preach the full gospel. His reply was: "I am in a union meeting, and you know I cannot." It is impossible for me to conceive how it is possible for a faithful man of God to be so circumstanced that he cannot, or will not, preach the whole

It appears to me that the Christian Church will be put to the necessity of revising their practice before they can get far in convincing the thinking folk that they are sincere, even should they return to the plain preaching of the gospel. View this as an instance of contradiction in preaching and practice: The Christian Church—that is, some of them (and Brother Shelburne is of that number)—contends that baptism is a condition of salvation, and that it requires an immersion in water to constitute baptism. Though many teach thus, they do not hesitate to ask a Methedist or a Presbyterian minister to join them in their services, calling on them to lead prayers, deliver exhortations, etc. If immersion is necessary to salvation, then these unimmersed ministers are not saved. On what ground can the Christian Church use such men in their services? Do you not by such use of them convey the idea to the people that you think they are saved?

If the refusal of the unimmersed minister to be immersed and his teaching that immersion is not necessary to salvation do not number him with false teachers nor jeopardize his salvation, why attempt to convince any one that immersion is necessary to salvation?

I am told that there are some "loyal" ministers who do not hesitate to use sectarian ministers in the prayer service of their meetings. I will be glad to give one of them space for an article setting forth the ground on which he does such.

A number of years ago the Christian Church ceased to contend for New Testament command or precept for their practice in the church and introduced instrumental music in the worship, human societies to do the work the church should do, then followed (in many places) the practice of receiving into their fellowship the "pieus unimmersed" and the plea for "open membership." They threw wide the floodgate. I am not surprised to find some of them now striving to stem the tide which is sweeping them from their former mooring and bringing on them the ridicule of the other sects. It is not infrequent now to hear some one say: "The Christian Church does not stand for anything."

Recently I was in a meeting in Vernon, Texas. Within a few doors of the tabernacle in which I was conducting the meeting there was a dance given in the home of one of the officers of the Christian Church of that town.

I am anxious to join hands with Brother Shelburne in his effort to recall his wandering colaborers to New Testament teaching; but, my brother, let us not condemn ourselves in that which we allow.

Not of Works.

BY CLED E. WALLACE.

"For by grace have ye been saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, that no man should glory." (Eph. 2: 8, 9.)

Salvation is of grace. The Lord has never been under obligation to any sinful human being because of any merit that human might possess by reason of any act. The doctrine of human merit is absurd. A man could not, in the nature of the case, live long enough to do enough to merit the forgiveness of a single sin against God.

It is, therefore, the more remarkable that some contend that obedience to the gospel is unnecessary; that men are saved without obedience. When Paul says "not of works," does he exclude obedience? If so, the Bible contains contradictions that cannot be harmonized. Christ says: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven.' (Matt. 7: 21.) When Paul says "not of works," he has no reference to the doing of "the will of my Father" that Jesus says is essential to entering the kingdom.

Again, Paul himself declares that Christ is the author of salvation to those that "obey him" (Heb. 5: 9); that men are made free from sin when they obey the gospel "from the heart" (Rom. 6: 17, 18); and that Christ will take vengeance on all who "obey not the gospel" (2 Thess. 1: 7, 8.)

If saved by works of human merit, man could boast. But that very boasting is made impossible by the "law of faith," a law which contains commands that must be obeyed. (Rom. 3: 27, 28.) When Paul says "not of works," he does not refer to any command of the gospel. His main reference is to the legal system—the law of Moses—which could save no one. (Gal. 2: 16; Acts 13: 38, 39.)

Paul says Abraham was not justified by works. (Rom. 4: 1-4.) James says Abraham was justified by works. (James 2: 21, 22.) Paul speaks of one kind of works; James, of another. A man cannot be saved by the kind Paul speaks of; but he cannot be saved without the kind James mentions. Paul's argument is that if Abraham could be saved by faith four hundred years before the law of works was given, we can be saved by faith "apart from the law" after it has been abolished. James reminds us that Abraham obeyed, and that "faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect." The works that Abraham did were not such as to merit all that God did for him and promised him, but such as "made perfect" his faith.

A man hears the gospel, knows himself to be a sinner, void of merit in God's eyes. He can only be saved by grace. His individual faith gives him access into grace. (Rom. 5: 1, 2.) Salvation is conditional. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (Mark 16: 16.) "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." (Acts 2: 38.) Does any one seriously believe that a man is trying to buy his salvation and boast about it when he obeys such commands "from the heart?" No, as a matter of course. When a man believes in Christ, repents of his sins, confesses Christ, and is baptized, he thereby confesses his inability to save himself by accepting God's conditions of remission. The haughty, rebellious spirit belongs to those who decline for various reasons to do what God's word clearly requires. "But to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my word." (Isa, 66: 2.)

Short Cuts.

BY COLUMAN D. NICHOL.

The New Birth.—The natural kingdom arose from the exercise of creative law and is perpetuated by birth law; the spiritual kingdom had its rise in the exercise of spiritual creative law and secures its perpetuation by spiritual birth law. Hence, Jesus said: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." (John 3: 3.)

In the study of this subject it may be well to examine a few passages upon which some minds seem to be confused. In John 3: 8 we have: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." A close inspection discloses a comparison between Nicodemus and those born of the Spirit. As a "master in Israel" and Jewish philosopher, while possessing a goodly share of the wisdom of the world, he does not understand the origin, direction, and destiny of wind currents. Evidently he thought the birth of the Spirit would perfect such knowledge. Jesus, to disabuse him and correct the unexpressed error, said: "So [or, likewise] is every one that is born of the Spirit." There is no comparison of the action of the wind upon the body and the action of the Holy Spirit upon the soul. Neither does Jesus compare Nicodemus' hearing the "breathings" or "speakings" of the Holy Spirit with sinners' hearing them, but he does inform Nicodemus that to be born of God does not impart worldly or philosophical knowledge.

In 1 John 3: 9 we have this passage: "Whosoeyer is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." In this passage John labors to show that a man violates no law in becoming a Christian or in being born of God, and, therefore, does not commit sin. He is dicussing the results of the new birth, and his conclusion is: Since the seed (word) is sown in the heart and remains, is not devoured by fowls nor choked out by worldly cares, neither snatched out by the devil, it germinates and produces obedience to faith, repentance, and baptism, and therefore the doer, in belleving, repenting, and submitting to baptism, does God's will, and hence does not commit sin, and is not thereby constituted a sinner.

Paul said: "For the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." (Rom. 8: 1.) But to be born again will make men free; therefore, "the law of the Spirit of life" equals the new birth. Hence, Paul was born by "the law of the Spirit of life." Then we are born by law into the spiritual family of God.

Jesus said: "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 18: 3.) But the new birth will put you into the kingdom of God. (John 3: 3-5.) Therefore, conversion equals the new birth. Again, Jesus said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of God; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Doing the will of the Father will put you into the kingdom of God; but the new birth, or conversion, will put you into the kingdom of God; therefore, to do the will of the Father is to be born of God, or to be converted. Hence, the new birth, conversion, and doing the will of the Father are equal to each other, and are, therefore, equal to the same thing.

[Some of the views expressed in the foregoing may not be what was in the mind of the Holy Spirit, yet the view as expressed by Brother Nichols does no violence to the clearly revealed truths.—C. R. N.]

Personal Notes.

C. D. Crouch reports that the work in Port Arthur, Texas, as well as in the surrounding country, is progressing.

A. M. Lemmons closed a meeting in Williford, Ark., with nine baptisms and one restoration.

J. B. Nelson was called from his meeting in Marlin, Texas, to the bedside of his brother in Beaumont, Texas.

T. S. Bain reports the work in Muskogee, Okla., as prospering. One was baptized recently who made the confession under Brother McGlasson's preaching.

F. L. Young is to remain another year with the church in Paris, Texas. His meeting with the church in Tioga, Texas, was interesting and productive of much good. Among those added was a man seventy years of age.

C. R. Nichol is in a meeting in Shelbyville, Tenn., to continue over November 6. The meeting starts with interest. One addition at the first service. J. H. McBroom is the preacher with the congregation and is alert to every good work.

Mrs. C. R. Nichol announces that "Sound Doctrine," Volume II., is ready now to be delivered. Those who have Volume I. will want Volume II. of this series. The price is one dollar per copy. It should be ordered from Mrs. C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas.

Nichol, Clifton, Texas.

D. S. Ligon closed in Ola, Ark., with one reclaimed. Brother Ligon reports that soon he will close his protracted-meeting work for the year and will be glad to arrange to preach for some congregation or congregations for the winter. He should be addressed in Denton, Texas. Brother Ligon presents the truth with much force.

From Horace W. Busby, Fort Worth, Texas, October 17: "My meeting with the Central Church closed last night, with forty-seven added from all sources. The largest crowds in the history of the congregation attended. All the congregations with the preachers helped much in many ways. This was my sixteenth meeting with the Fort Worth churches, and I greatly enjoyed it."

Tice Elkins, minister with the South Side church of Christ, Fort Worth, Texas, reports four additions at a recent service and wonderful zeal and optimism on the part of the entire congregation. In every congregation there is work for each member to do; and when each member does his or her part of the work, the congregation will be a positive factor for the good of the community. In Fort Worth there are nine congregations striving to serve the Master as he has ordered, and each of them prospers.

A Present For Ann.

The parcel-post wagon came rattling along the street and stopped in front of Grace Holmes' house. Grace ran to the door and held out her hands for the package the postman brought. Then she flew back to the kitchen, where mother was shelling peas.

"O mother, mother," she cried; "I know it's a present!"

"Let me see," said Mrs. Holmes, as she looked at the address. "Why, it has Ann's name on it."

"Ann's name?" said Grace, in surprise. "Why, Ann is too little to have packages."

"Well, Ann would like to have you open it, Grace," said mother.

Hurriedly Grace cut the string and opened the box. There was a lovely blue sweater of the softest wool.

"A slip-on," cried Grace. "It's just like Harriet's. She has to pull hers on over her head."

Mother read the card which was tucked in it: "For Little Ann, who is six months old to-day, from Aunt Alice."

My, how Grace did wish for that sweater! It was just the kind she had wanted for a long, long time. It was blue, trimmed with narrow gray stripes—the very colors she wanted, too. If only Aunt Alice had made it too big for the baby, perhaps it would fit her.

She watched as mother slipped the sweater over Ann's head and put her little hands through the sleeves. How pretty she looked! The blue in the sweater just matched her blue eyes. Then she smiled at mother and laughed right out loud for Grace.

But Grace did not smile back. She kept saying to herself: "If Aunt Alice only had known how much I wanted that sweater, she would have made it for me. She could have sent Ann something else. Ann's too little to know the difference, anyway."

All morning long she kept saying it over and over to herself. Her lips were drawn down at the corners and her forehead was puckered up. At last she took a pad and pencil and sat down on the porch steps. She was there a long time, and this is what she wrote:

"Dear Aunt Alice: Next time you have a sweater to give away, I wish you would send it to me. A rattle would do just as well for Ann. She is too little to know the difference. Your loving niece, GRACE."

She folded the letter and put it in her pocket. Then mother brought Ann out in her carriage.

"Grace," she said, "I would like you to wheel Ann up and down on the walk in front of the house until she goes to sleep."

Grace did not look pleased, as she generally did when she had Ann in her care. Back and forth she wheeled the carriage. A lady passing said: "What a pretty baby!" But Grace did not pay any attention.

Then Harriet came along. "O, look at Ann's new sweater! Grace, let me wheel her—just once!"

Grace willingly surrendered the carriage and went and sat down on the steps. She watched Harriet, who was having such a good time with the baby. Ann smiled and smiled. Soon her eyes began to droop and in a moment she was asleep.

"Grace, come look at her," whispered Harriet. "Isn't she just lovely? If I had a little sister, I'd want her to have a blue sweater just like Ann's."

Grace looked, and she couldn't help but be proud of Ann. Then she thought of the letter in her pocket. She took it out and tore it into very small pieces.

"Why, what's that?" asked Harriet.

"It's a horrid old letter I wrote," answered Grace. "If Ann belonged to you, wouldn't you rather have her get a new sweater than for you to have one?"

Harriet said of course she would.

"So would I," said Grace. Then the puckers left her forehead and the corners of her lips turned the right way once more.—Lurana R. Wilson, in Child's Gem.

Playing the Game.

There are certain things no self-respecting man can do, because they are not compatible with his ideas of clean sportsmanship.

Sportsmanship is by no means a matter of the athletic field merely.

The presence of that quality makes and its absence mars the performance of men and women in every sphere of human activity.

A wife does not play the game if she does not help her husband to bring true a dream whose accomplishment is for the lasting good of others. She is not playing the game if she does aught to dishearten or demoralize him in the midst of a great task.

A man is not playing the game if he fails to keep faith with a woman's trust and hope and prayer. He is the foe of society if he is the foe to her spiritual sensibilities, which are finer and more finely attuned than his own.

"For their sakes I sanctify myself." These words are among the biggest in the Book that utters them.

The reason a man cannot go on the rampage to suit his own sweet will is that there are always others to be thought about. There are others whom his weakness will weaken, because they lean upon his strength.

There are millions not merely in the valley of decision, but in the valley of dependence. He may be a hero, though he knows it not; and when he topples and falls, he brings calamity and grief to some unknown to him.

Therefore a man girds himself to report for duty when he does not feel able. A driving power within him refuses to let him quit. He knows that he is badly needed, and he must obey the call.

Never was morale more necessary or team work so important. Individualism and the solo performance, however brilliant, cannot carry the social burden that must rest on the shoulders of an army headed the same way under one flag. In the crisis we cannot afford to have broken ranks and insubordination or even sullenness of spirit.

Wherever there is a group or even a pair of human beings, there must be the general deference, the mutual sacrifice. Where there is love there will be delight in service. He who has lived for his own selfish self has never tasted the supreme pleasure that giving and doing for somebody else are sure to bring.

We are not playing the game while we do as we please. We are not playing the game while we repudiate our orders. The large man submits to discipline most easily and speedily. It is the small, mean fellow who is always boasting of his independence and his importance.—Parish Leaflet.

Unity.

BY JULIA WORTHINGTON.

I am one with the stars and the night winds, And the deep, slow-moving sea; I am one with the sweet birds singing— I am one, dear God, with thee.

I am one with the crags of the mountain, And the storm-tossed forest tree, I am one with the sun-kissed meadow— I am one, dear God, with thee.

I am one with the striving worker, With children laughing in glee; I am one with the soul-sick sinner— I am one, dear God, with thee.

For the ebb and flow of thy life breath Is what maketh all things to be. In the Heart of the Infinite Silence I am one, dear God, with thee.

Our Beloved.

BY CLARA CON EPPERSON.

The silent, strong, encircling hills In purple and red, in gold and brown, Have donned a gorgeous robe and crown Of vivid, autumn coloring.

Upon the wide, sun-kissed hill crest Our loved ones are asleep, at rest, In peace and quietude so blessed, Until God calls them, slumbering.

The clustering hills soon brown and sear Will in another, happier year
Put on their robes of verdant green
In earth's lovely, budding spring.

And our beloved who have lain Asleep beneath God's sun and rain, In celestial robes shall live again In heaven's eternal spring.

Companioned.

BY MARGARET LYLE.

Across the world your voice is calling me; I feel the throbbing cadence through the cloud Of deeply cherished memories that thrill The very depths of me, and soft enshroud Each grief in peace, a happiness so full My joyous heart would cry it all aloud.

Across the weary miles your face stands clear In sharp relief against the weary waste Of separation and of joy deferred. My heart cries to the laggard time: "Make haste!"

Across the world yourself is calling me—Your voice, your face, the very heart of you. You call in dreams and fill my waking thoughts. I can but wait, but wait the long hours through, Until that sometime when we may Love's springtime in our deeper joy renew.

Across the world your voice is calling me, In every heartbeat draws your presence near; The days are lonely, love, and yet so full Of you that I am sweet-companioned here.

Everyday Faith.

BY JUDITH FOX.

You do not worry when the bright day fades, And in the twilight earth grows dark and chill; You do not worry when the midnight shades Hide in their gloom each pleasant glade and hill; You close in sleep your tired eyes and say; "To-morrow God will send another day."

You do not worry when your garden fair Beneath the winter snowdrifts lies entombed; You do not worry when the icy air Stirs but bare twigs where once the roses bloomed; You only say, content as one who knows: "God sends again the summer and the rose,"

If you trust Him in darkness for the light,
If you trust Him in frost-time for the rose,
Then why not trust Him with a faith as bright
In all your daily frets and fears and woes,
And say to every anxious thought and pain:
"Life's shadows pass, God sends the sun again?"

He that withholdeth corn, the people shall curse him; but blessing shall be upon the head of him that selleth it.—Prov. 11: 26.

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY.

Best Premium Offer to Preachers.

The greatest preachers of the past two centuries attribute much of their inspiration and usefulness to Matthew Henry's Commentary on the whole Bible. Born in the seventeenth century, his name and his work still live and are household words. Thousands of homes treasure this commentary second only to the Bible, and many a man traces his right start to the loving advice and homely counsel of Matthew Henry.

Charles H. Spurgeon said: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering sparrows around an old gable toward the close of autumn." Dr. Philip Schaff, compiler of Schaff's Bible Dictionary, pronounces it "the best practical and devotional commentary for English readers." Here you will find a mine of expository knowledge and a complete preachers' commentary.

The management of the Gospel Advocate is fortunate in securing twenty-five sets of this unrivaled commentary, which will be sent as a premium to every preacher who will send twenty-five new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2.50 per year. This is undoubtedly the most attractive premium offer ever made to preachers. You will receive six portable volumes of twelve hundred pages each, large, clear, unbroken type, with substantial Roxborough binding, and will have the satisfaction of knowing that the work of the prince of commentators is in your library. If you wish to pay eash, the price for the six volumes is $17.50, not prepaid. When sent as a premium, we pay all charges.

Suggestion to Churches. If you wish to give your preacher a gift that he would prize always and at the same time get the best religious weekly in the homes of your members, get busy and send us the twenty-five subscribers. Your effort will help the church, please the preacher, and encourage the Gospel Advocate. Sample copies of the Gospel Advocate and subscription blanks furnished upon request. Let us hear from you promptly.

- C. M. Pullias is preaching this week for the congregation at Gallatin, Tenn. His meeting at Chapel Avenue, in Nashville, was finely attended. One was baptized.
- A subscriber, Mrs. Maud Wallace, of Aplin, Ark., wishes to know if there is a church of Christ at or near Hugo, Okla. Kindly furnish this information if you have it.
- N. W. Proffitt reports good prospects at Emberton, Ky., where he is in a meeting. He further reports eight baptisms at Mount Gilead and four additions at Ebenezer.
- J. D. Gunn, of Sparta, Tenn., preached for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, on Sunday morning, and L. G. Kennamer at night, to large and appreciative audiences.

We were honored with a call from H. H. Adamson and wife on Monday. Brother Adamson was returning to Lewisburg from a good meeting at Franklin, Ky. Four were baptized.

The meeting at Charlotte Avenue, in Nashville, closed on Sunday evening. Sixteen persons were baptized and one was restored. This was I, B. Bradley's last meeting for the present season.

J. T. Harris closed an eight-days' meeting for the Mount Hebron congregation, in Dickson County, Tenn., which was well attended. Five were baptized, one united from the Methodists, and one was restored.

From E. L. Whitaker, Corinth, Miss., October 29: "I began a meeting at Winter's Chapel, near Wynn, Ark., last Lord's day and continued it for twelve nights, with ten additions. We have some fine brethren there."

Sister Addle Henderson, well known and well beloved by the Nashville churches, was struck by an automobile Sunday evening and seriously injured. As we go to press her recovery is doubtful, but we are all hoping and praying for the best.

From J. W. Dunn, Dyersburg, Tenn.: "I began with the Parkway Church, in Memphis, yesterday, under very bright circumstances. It is pleasant to be back among former friends. The meeting closed at Marshall, Texas, on October 25. It was good. I am to return in 1922 for three or four weeks."

County Line Bible School opens on November 21, 1921. Term sixteen weeks. Bible-reading course one term. Ministerial training course in connection with Bible-reading course, sixty lectures on the preacher's life, and forty-eight sermon outlines. Two terms, Address S. C. Garner, Principal, Bakersfield, Mo.

W. M. Oakley preached ten days for the New Middleton church, in Smith County, Tenn. While there was only one baptism, the church was well pleased with the meeting. Brother Oakley is now arranging monthly appointments for the winter and spring. Address him at 1308 Pine Street, Nashville, Tenn.

The West Side church of Christ at Cleveland, Ohio, meets at 7808 Hope Avenue, corner of West Seventy-ninth Street, every Lord's day at 2 o'clock P.M. for the worship of God. Take a Lorain Avenue street car at the Public Square and get off at West Seventy-ninth Street and walk out Seventy-ninth Street south two short blocks.

The marriage of Mr. Paul S. Pullias and Miss Ewell Beasley was quietly solemnized at the Maxwell House, in Nashville, on Tuesday, October 25. Brother Paul, one of the sons of C. M. Pullias, is a song leader of recognized ability. His wife is a Christian with many fine attainments. The Gospel Advocate extends congratulations.

Harvey Scott, Floresville, Texas, writes a small tract, "Some Statements for the Baptists," in review of a tract by Mr. Renfro, a Baptist minister. Brother Scott says many good things and presents difficulties for the Baptists, which they cannot meet. The tract is twenty-five cents per copy; three dollars per dozen. Order from Brother Scott.

A debate will be held at the meetinghouse of the church of Christ at Cypert, Ark., about five and one-half miles out from Marvell. Ark., beginning on November 20 or 21 and lasting four days. on the general church proposition—origin, doctrine, and practice. J. W. Chism, of Childress, Texas, will represent the church of Christ; Ben M. Bogard, of Little Rock, Ark., the Missionary Baptist Church.

Many friends were grieved to learn of the death of Sister L. M. Martin, of Martin, Tenn. She passed away at a Nashville hospital following a very serious operation. Sister Martin was one of the finest Christian characters who ever lived, and the editor of this page feels a distinct personal loss on account of her departure. May God bless and sustain her noble husband and all who mourn her loss.

A. A. Bunner writes: "God willing, I shall leave home on Saturday, October 29, for Columbus, Ohio, where I go to hold a protracted meeting. I leave behind me a sick wife, but she and my daughter say go; and I must work while I can, when I see the work is so much needed. My wife is some better now, and should she get worse they will wire me. We hope for the better. Any mail sent to me at 1800 West Fifty-fourth Street, Cleveland, Ohio, will be promptly forwarded to me. Pray for me and mine."

We are glad to note that the work is prospering at St. Louis, Mo. W. A. Sevedge, who lives at 6006a Virginia Avenue, sends us the following report: "Good services at Eagles' Home Hall, No. 3, corner Lafayette and Jefferson Streets, Sunday, October 23. Two were added to the membership. We have over seventy members here now, We received several names this week. Some of these have already been visited, and expressed themselves to the effect that they would meet with us. I will be glad to receive names from any one who knows of members of the church that are not meeting with us."

From W. F. Cox, Beamsville, Ontario, Canada: "During the last six months I have been busily engaged keeping up my monthly appointments at Collingwood, Tintern, and Selkirk, Ontario. In addition to my regular work, I have preached for the brethren at Bathurst Street, Toronto, and East Toronto. At the above places, where I visit monthly, I see a decided change in attendance and interest. Mv visits to Selkirk are very pleasant and profitable. the brethren have withdrawn from a few members who were walking disorderly they have taken on new spiritual life and are determined to boost the cause of Christ in their locality. May God bless them in their efforts in carrying on the work of the Master.

We can but admire the faith and zeal of a brother who reports that he is "picking cotton through the week and preaching the gospel on Lord's days." Here is such a report from William W. Still. of Athens, Ala.: "I am here in my old home in Northern Alabama, picking cotton through the week and preaching the gospel on Lord's days. On the third Lord's day in this month I preached in Brother Biggerstaff's home. We have ten brethren near Holland's Gin. Just four of these brethren meet on Lord's day. These four brethren meet in each other's homes to break break. On the first Lord's day in November I will preach in my old home church—Reunion. I will do evangelistic work here in January, and will then return to the Burritt Bible College in Spencer, Tenn."

W. J. Cullum writes: "The meeting at Reid Avenue Church, this city, closed on Wednesday night, October 26, after continuing eighteen nights. At first conditions did not appear favorable for a good meeting, due to some internal troubles, but we trust that everything was adjusted that would in any way hinder the work. I am expecting greater things to be done at that place. There are some of the very best brethren and sisters at Reid Avenue, and they will always hold a warm place in my heart. I am now in a mission meeting at Jefferson City, Tenn., with Thomas T. Pack as my colaborer. He is in every way a great help—earnest and zealous, a good singer and preacher, and a splendid mixer with the people. As results of the meeting at Reid Avenue, there were nineteen baptisms, three were restored to fellowship, and two took membership."

Notice to Western Contributors.

For the convenience of our readers we are endeavoring to place all articles and reports from Texas and Oklahoma in the "Texas-Oklahoma Department." We request that all matter from this section intended for publication be sent to C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas. He, too, will appreciate this service and will give your reports prompt attention.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

T. H. Meredith, of Thyatira, Miss., wishes to know the meaning of Heb. 6: 6. I give the full passage, beginning with verse 4: "For as touching those who were once enlightened and tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the age to come, and then fell away, it is impossible to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame."

The Hebrew letter is largely devoted to showing the converted Hebrews that if they should turn away from and reject Christ, who is the only and last sacrifice for sin, there would be no other sacrifice offered for sin. If after they had tasted the good word of God and had accepted Christ, if then they should reject him and turn away from him, it would be impossible to renew them again unto repentance, seeing that they would thus crucify unto themselves the Son of God afresh and put him to an open shame. Christ is the last and living way. He is the only atonement that will ever be made for the sins of the world. To reject and turn away from him is to turn away from the one hope of salvation. Rejecting Christ, there would be no other way, and there could be no faith or repentance. Christ is the only hope for a lost and ruined race.

Mrs. W. W. Laster, of Flint, Mich., asks concerning an important matter. She says: "The church here wants elders and deacons. At a recent business meeting two brethren were appointed for elders, who desired the work and were willing to do their best in the service of God in the capacity of elders. An evangelist, after these men had been appointed, said that they did not come up to the standard, and raised so many objections that the brethren became discouraged and declined to act as elders. Under such conditions, will you please tell us just what should be done?"

It seems to me that the evangelist exceeded his authority in this case. It is not the work of an evangelist to select elders and deacons, but it is the work of the church. When the seven deacons were selected to serve, it was said to the church: "Look ye out, therefore, brethren, from among you seven men of good report, full of the Spirit and of wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." It is the work of the church to make the selection, and not the work of the evangelist. If the church is satisfied with the qualifications of these men, then I cannot see just why the evangelist had a right to overrule the wishes of the church. It is hardly to be expected that any man will fill perfectly the qualifications of an elder. There is no perfect Christian, yet Christians are admonished to be perfect. Christians may be relatively perfect, but not absolutely perfect. Just so, we have a perfect model given us for elders, but it is not to be expected that men will perfectly fill the divine model. Perfection in angels and perfection in men are different things. We have no men as perfect as angels. Angels are not as perfect as God. So, when we come to select elders, we should be governed by the fact that there is no absolute perfection among men, there are no perfect Christians, there are no perfect elders, there are no perfect evangelists and no perfect preachers. All alike make mistakes. The evangelist should be slow to discourage men who are looking in the right direction and who show a disposition to serve God to the very best of their ability. "And whose shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me: but whoso shall cause one of these little ones that believe on me to stumble, it is profitable for him that a great millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he should be sunk in the depth of the sea." (Matt. 18: 6.) When elders are doing the very best that they can and are true to the word of God in its teachings, members of the church should respect and honor them for the work they do. The sentiment that is often manifest to have no respect for those whom God has made the overseers of the congregation is thoroughly out of harmony with the truth. The elder who does his duty lives closer to the word of God than those who reject his authority. The Holy Spirit, through Paul, admonishes: "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit to them: for they watch in behalf of your souls, as they that shall give account; that they may do this with joy, and not with grief: for this were unprofitable for you." (Heb. 13: 17.) It is wrong for Christians to expect perfection of elders, and it is wrong for them to rebel against elders who are true to God's word. So long as we are in the flesh, so long may we expect imperfection on the part of all human beings. The pharisaism that demands perfection of men or perfection of elders cannot be too severely condemned.

R. G. Buchanan, of Lavergne, Tenn., sends the following questions which he wishes answered through the "Query Department" of the Gospel Advocate: "(1) Is it an act of righteousness or an act of unrighteousness for the members of the church of Christ to arrange their protracted meeting so it will not be at the same time of the State Fair? (2) Is it an act of righteousness for its members to take their exhibits to the fair grounds on Sunday and make arrangements for same? (3) Is it an act of righteousness or unrighteousness for Christians to play tennis ball in public places?"

1. It depends entirely upon the reason for not having the meeting at the time of the State Fair. If those arranging for the meeting decided that they could not get a crowd to attend the meeting during the State Fair, it would be folly to arrange the meeting for that time. If, however, a good attendance could be secured for the meeting during the State Fair, I can see no reason for not having the meeting at that time. People should arrange the time of the meetings so as to accomplish the greatest good for Christ. Proper judgment and wisdom should be exercised in the selection of the time for a meeting.

2. Christians are to submit to "the powers that be," and "the powers that be" have made it unlawful to work on Sunday. If Christians had proper respect for constituted authority and had the proper concern for doing the things that will make a good impression upon the world, they certainly would not work on Sundays. Sunday, or the first day of the week, should be devoted to the worship of God, and not to the arrangement of exhibits for the State Fair.

3. Christians could hardly play tennis in a secret place. If they play at all, they must play in a public place. There is no wrong in playing tennis, and I do not see why any one should object to it. Christians need exercise, need recreation, and should consider their physical requirements. God expects us to take care of our bodies, and in doing so we are rendering him service. I am sure that many people sin in not giving proper attention to the needs of their bodies. Men who own machines have the machinery repaired, but neglect their bodies until it is too late. The physical organism is the most delicate of all, and should have proper care and attention. This does not mean, however, that Christians should engage in things that are vicious and wicked.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given

Rending the Body of Christ.

BY J. C. M'Q.

It is a lamentable fact that many people do not hold the spiritual body of Christ in that high esteem that they should. It would be difficult to place too high an estimate on this body, remembering that Christ gave up the glories of heaven in order to establish his church on earth. Not only did he give up the glories of heaven in order to do this, but he freely gave himself to a lowly birth, to a life of poverty, and then died the shameful death of the cross and went down into the cold grave, and came forth on the third and appointed morn a victorious conqueror over death, hell, and the grave, in order that he might redeem a lost and ruined race through his church. The Holy Spirit matchlessly portrays how Christ gave himself in order that he might give to the world a church without spot or wrinkle and without blemish. "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself up for it, that he might sanctify it, having cleansed it by the washing of water with the word, that he might present the church to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." (Eph. 5: 25-27.)

In order that the body may not be rent in twain, Christians are taught to be free from envyings and strife, to be of the same mind, of the same judgment, and to love as brethren. Contentions, backbitings, evil speakings, are forbidden by the Holy Spirit. The apostle Paul, inspired by the Holy Spirit, gave the following teaching to the church at Corinth on the subject of factionalism in the church: "Now I beseech you, brethren, through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment. For it hath been signified unto me concerning you, my brethren, by them that are of the household of Chloe, that there are contentions among you. Now this I mean, that each one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ. Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized into the name of Paul? I thank God that I baptized none of you, save Crispus and Gaius; lest any man should say that ye were baptized into my name. And I baptized also the household of Stephanas; besides, I know not whether I baptized any other." (1 Cor. 1: 10-16.) Paul very clearly shows here that Christians are not permitted to divide up into factions over their preachers. He shows them that one should not be for Paul, another for Apollos, another for Cephas, and still another for Christ. Christians should spurn the very thought of dividing up into factions over any man. Christians meet in the public assembly of the saints to worship God, and not to be entertained by preachers. Every member of the body of Christ should have a work to do in the public assembly, and should take part in the singing, in the reading, in the prayers, and in the instruction of God's holy word. The preacher who realizes how terrible and how sinful it is to make a schism in the body of Christ will not permit a congregation to wrangle over him. No man who loves God with all his heart will place his own personal ambitions and interests above the church. As the church at Corinth was dividing into factions over their preachers, Paul thanked God that he had not baptized any of them but Crispus and Gaius, and also the household of Stephanas, lest any should say that he had baptized into his own name. Such strife and factionalism are of the flesh. "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, sorcery, enmities, strife, jealousies, wraths, factions, divisions, parties, envyings, drunkenness, revelings, and such like; of which I forewarn you, even as I did forewarn you, that they who practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." (Gal. 5: 19-21.) Language could not be clearer than this. Jealousies, factions, divisions, parties, envyings, and enmities are foreign to those who love the Lord Jesus Christ with all their soul, with all their mind, and with all their strength.

The Holy Spirit gives instruction as to the treatment of those who put their personal ambitions and interests above the body of the Lord Jesus Christ. Men who would make a party and would make a sect simply for the purpose of furthering their personal ambitions are schismatics and should be so treated. "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them that are causing the divisions and occasions of stumbling, contrary to the doctrine which ye learned: and turn away from them." (Rom. 16: 17.) It should be noted that those from whom we are to turn away are those who are causing divisions and occasions of stumbling contrary to the doctrine of Christ. Christ teaches his followers to be humble, to be meek and long-suffering, and to be free from the love of money and selfish interests. Those who put themselves above the body of Jesus Christ are entirely out of harmony with the religion of Jesus; hence, we are admonished to turn away from them. Instead of seeking to gratify our personal ambitions, we should listen to the voice of the Spirit as he speaks through Paul: "Doing nothing through faction or through vainglory, but in lowliness of mind each counting other better than himself: not looking each of you to his own things, but each of you also to the things of others. Have this mind in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, existing in the form of God, counted not the being on an equality with God a thing to be grasped, but emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death, yea, the death of the cross. Wherefore also God highly exalted him, and gave unto him the name which is above every name; that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things on earth and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." (Phil. 2: 3-11.) The man who is not willing in meekness and humility to hold fast the form of sound words is not in the mind of Christ. "If any man teacheth a different doctrine, and consenteth not to sound words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness; he is puffed up, knowing nothing, but doting about questionings and disputes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, wranglings of men corrupted in mind and bereft of the truth, supposing that godliness is a way of gain." (1 Tim. 6: 3-5.)

Christ's true followers will ever be kind and tenderhearted, will be ready to yield their own preferences and in honor prefer one another, rather than contend over incidentals that are not fundamental to salvation. If we would follow the example of the meek and lowly Jesus, we would ever be ready to humble ourselves in order that Christ might exalt us. Humility goes before exaltation; we must first go down before we can go up. We should all be ready to acknowledge our sins and, like the publican, pray: "God, be thou merciful to me a sinner." At best we are very fallible, shortsighted beings. While we preach humility and preach that we should be godly and upright, how few of us practice the Golden Rule! The spirit of the Wicked One gets into the professed followers of Christ, and we find them refusing to be guided by the plain teaching of the word of God and to be advised and admonished by the elders of the church. They do this in spite of the plain declaration of the word of God: "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit to them: for they watch in behalf of your souls, as they that shall give account; that they may do this with joy, and not with grief: for this were unprofitable for you." (Heb. 13: 17.) How often do we hear members of the church criticizing their elders, speaking of their shortcomings and of their frailties, instead of examining themselves to see how weak, how frail, and how fallible they are! We would all do well to heed the language of the Holy Spirit as given by James: "Who is wise and understanding among you? let him show by his good life his works in meekness of wisdom. But if ye have bitter jealousy and faction in your heart, glory not and lie not against the truth. This wisdom is not a wisdom that cometh down from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without variance, without hypocrisy." (James 3: 13-17.)

Christians, before striving and contending with each other and before dividing up into parties and factions, should remember just what the church of Christ has cost God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. They should remember how great the sacrifices of a dying Savior to establish his church. They should not overlook the fact that Christ gave his body and shed his blood for his church. It is a greater sin for a man to rend the spiritual body of Jesus Christ than the man committed who pierced the side and drove the nails through the hands and feet of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the church is wrapped up the wisdom and love and power of God Almighty. What a fearful thing it is to destroy the unity of the Spirit, to rend the body of Christ, which the divine wisdom conceived, the divine love prompted, and the divine power executed!

R. H. Boll's Kingdom Theory. BY F. W. SMITH.

Under the head, "The Great Son of David," page 305, Word and Work, "Special Kingdom Number," the editor says of Christ, "He is the heir of all the glorious promises God made and swore to his father David," and among these promises he places the following: "And the Lord shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." (Luke 1: 32, 33.) Of course, no one doubts that this promise made in the passage quoted was to be fulfilled to Christ, but it by no means can be made to apply to or harmonize with R. H. Boll's interpretation and application of Dan. 2: 35-44.

I now proceed to verify this statement by first calling attention to the fact that Boll denies that Christ is or ever has been on David's throne, while at the same time admitting that Christ is now a King, has a kingdom, and all who "are in the church of Jesus Christ have been translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son (Col. 1: 13)." Unless the throne Christ now occupies is the "throne of his father David," of what promise in the Old Testament is the throne he now occupies as King a fulfillment?

In the second place, the limits of Christ's reign-viz., "over the house of Jacob," in the passage quoted (Luke 1: 32, 33)—is entirely too small for Boll's interpretation of Dan. 2: 35-44. Hear him: "Moreover, it was fully understood that this great Son of David would rule, not only in his specific realm, over the nation of Israel, but over the whole world." (Word and Work, page 304.) I know that "the house of Jacob," in Old Testament history, sometimes applies to the nation of Israel, and I know also that the term "Israel" in the New Testament sometimes applies to the spiritual seed of Abraham, or Christians. (See Rom. 9: 6-8; Gal. 3: 26-29.) Hence, there is no difficulty in applying the fulfillment of the promise in Luke 1: 32, 33 to the reign of Christ now over spiritual Israel, but it will not apply to a world power such as Boll describes-viz., "over all the world."

In the third place, the duration of the kingdom mentioned in Luke 1: 32, 32-viz., "and of his kingdom there shall be no end "-cannot be made to fit Boll's interpretation of the kingdom mentioned in Dan. 2: 35-44; for he makes that kingdom a "world power," composed of "all the nations of the world," and all world powers shall have an end. This kingdom "over all the world," which he tells us "the great Son of David" will rule, is quite different from the description Christ gave of his kingdom-viz., "My kingdom is not of this world." (John 18: 36.) World powers will all come to an end; but the kingdom connected with the throne of David in Luke 1: 32, 33 "shall have no end," and embraced only "the house of Jacob," and, hence, cannot be made to fit R. H. Boll's interpretation of Dan. 2: 35-44, which he says has not been fulfilled, but will be when Christ returns to this earth.

Moreover, he says (page 296, Word and Work), "Special Kingdom Number:" "The stone's effect upon the image [Dan. 2: 35] is due to violent impact, not to 'peaceful penetration." Then Christ, the Prince of Peace, is, with his saints, to head an army of a "violent impact," and make a carnal war on the nations of earth! R. H. Boll's literalistic interpretation of the Bible has gotten him into all sorts of contradictions and inconsistencies from which he seems powerless to extricate himself. He seems wholly incapable of seeing that "David's throne" can mean anything else than a literal throne and a literal reign. No living man can understand or even make any sense out of Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost in the light of R. H. Boll's interpretation of "David's throne." Hear Peter: "Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God unto you by mighty works and wonders and signs which God did by him in the midst of you, even as ye yourselves know; him, being delivered up by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye by the hand of lawless men did crucify and slay: whom God raised up, having loosed the pangs of death; because it was not possible that he should be holden of it. For David saith concerning him, I beheld the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved: therefore my heart was glad, and my tongue rejoiced; moreover my flesh also shall dwell in hope: because thou wilt not leave my soul unto Hades, neither wilt thou give thy Holy One to see corruption. Thou madest known unto me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of gladness with thy countenance. Brethren, I may say unto you freely of the patriarch David, that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us unto this day. Being therefore a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins he would set one upon his throne; he foreseeing this spoke of the resurrection of the Christ, that neither was he left unto Hades, nor did his flesh see corruption. This Jesus did God raise up, whereof we all are witnesses. Being therefore by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he hath poured forth this, which ye see and hear. For David ascended not into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies the footstool of thy feet. Let all the house of Israel therefore know assuredly, that God hath made him both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom ye crucified." (Acts 2: 22-36.)

Unless the inspired apostle meant that the promise God made to David, "that of the fruit of his loins he would set one upon his throne," had been fulfilled in the resurrection, ascension, and coronation of Jesus at the right hand of the Father, then who, in all this wide world, can tell what he did mean? R. H. Boll says Christ is not now and never has been on David's throne. He can see nothing but a literal throne and a literal Son of David with flesh and bones in God's promise to David. Suppose we ask, The word what was the throne of David, anyhow? "throne" simply means rule or authority, and David never had any inherent authority; he derived all the authority he possessed from God; hence, the very throne he occupied is called "the throne of God." Solomon, who was David's successor, sat upon the same throne, or had the same authority David had, and yet it is said of him: "Then Solomon sat on the throne of Jehovah as king instead of David his father, and prospered; and all Israel obeyed (1 Chron. 29: 23.) Again, the queen of Sheba said to Solomon: "Blessed be Jehovah thy God, who delighted in thee, to set thee on his throne, to be king for Jehovah thy God." (2 Chron. 9: 8.) These scriptures show that the throne, or rule, was God's, and that when Christ became King, or Lord, he was to sit on David's throne only in the sense of being a Ruler by God's authority. God reserved the right to choose the kings to sit on Israel's throne. (Deut. 17: 14, 15.) That kingdom with its fleshly subjects was destroyed, never to be restored, notwithstanding R. H. Boll to the contrary. David's reign was only typical of the reign of Christ in the one single feature of reigning by God's authority. (Matt. 28: 18.) He reigns over spiritual Israel; and when this reign ceases, he himself will be subject to the Father. (1 Cor. 15: 24-28.)

Statement.

BY E. A. ELAM.

When it was learned that I would no longer be expected to write, as fermerly, the lessons on the Scripture selections of the International System of Bible Study, which I had done for twenty-two years, many individuals and not a few congregations wrote me immediately, urging me in a most substantial manner to continue in some way to furnish these lessons. The only question with me is to discharge, as best I can, my duty to God and men. I want neither to do wrong nor to fall short of doing right. Therefore, after much consideration, in view of accomplishing the greatest good in the most harmonious way, I have decided to continue them in the form of an annual. The four Advanced Quarterlies for the entire year which I formerly wrote will be embraced in one volume, bound, some in paper and some in cloth. Besides the lessons, with the usual questions, this book will contain some additional short articles which it is hoped will prove helpful, especially to teachers. These lessons for the whole year will be ready in this form for distribution by the last of December next and for use by the first Lord's day of 1922. Congregations or individuals can order any number of them and distribute them for use to all classes who have formerly studied my Quarterlies. These books can be preserved through the years and for all future study. It is believed that to place these lessons in this permanent form will prove more beneficial in the end. From year to year many have asked how to obtain bound volumes of my Quarterlies. I am pleased that they will be thus offered and that all who desire can obtain them. This will be a new form of presenting the literature to the churches. These or any lessons I write are mine, and all rights, title. copyright, and ownership of this annual are reserved by and vested in me.

All orders should be addressed to the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

The Literature Situation.

BY J. C. M'Q.

As suggested in Brother Elam's statement, some dissatisfaction was expressed after he and Brother R. V. Cawthon made known to a number of brethren and churches that I had selected another editor for the literature. It is to be regretted that these brethren agitated the matter before any public announcement was made and before I had given my reasons for making the change. This agitation also called forth many expressions of approval for what I had done. The statement of Brother Earnest C. Love which appears below is characteristic of the sentiment of many others. As I am responsible to God for my action and as I did what I considered best for all concerned, I must insist that there be no agitation of this matter in the Gospel Advocate.

With a desire to do good, the McQuiddy Printing Company will bear the expense of bringing out Elam's Notes on the International Lessons for 1922. We bespeak for the annual a liberal patronage, and take this occasion to request all our readers to buy and circulate the book to the best advantage. Let us work to the end that the experiment of printing the lessons a year in advance may not prove a failure.

I am glad to give Brother Elam the copyright and ownership of the annual, and have also agreed to give him the benefit of the sales after 1922. Heretofore, when I have paid the expense of manufacture and royalty on sales, I have always owned the copyright. This is true of all our hymn books and other religious publications. However, in this case we are glad to make an exception in favor of Brother Elam. But after 1922, in my judgment, the copyright and ownership of the book will be practically worthless. As to the ownership of other lessons he may write, that will depend upon the agreement made with the publisher.

We will regard it as a distinct favor if our readers will order at once, as this will give us definite knowledge of the number of copies required.

The book will be bound in paper and in cloth. Prices: Cloth binding, $2 per copy, postpaid; paper binding, $1.25 per copy, postpaid.

STATEMENT BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

Just now there is some little stir over the above subject. For many years the McQuiddy Printing Company has published comments on the International Sunday-school Lessons for those who care to use them. For twenty-two years Brother E. A. Elam has written these comments for the McQuiddy Printing Company for a stipulated amount. Just recently Brother McQuiddy has decided to have these lessons got up by some one else. Brethren F. W. Smith and F. B. Srygley have been selected, and another may be added later.

There has been some protest against this. But I cannot see any legitimate ground for complaint from the brother-hood. No one calls in question Brother Elam's ability to continue the work. But why should one man have a lifetime job? Surely Smith and Srygley can do as well as Elam. Twenty-two years is long enough for one man, anyway. It is a reflection on the brotherhood to intimate that we have but one man who can write suitable comments for the Bible lessons.

I certainly cannot see why any one should blame Brother McQuiddy. So the thing to do is to order your literature as usual, and not get alarmed about a little business deal of the publisher.

Some Sad, Sweet Days.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

We—Mrs. Larimore and I—spent September 16-20 with friends and loved ones at Henderson, Tenn. Our visit to that pleasant place was delightful to us; but sad, sweet memories of my mother made me almost melancholy while there, where the latter days and years of her life were spent.

Of course we visited the Freed-Hardeman College, and I preached to the school, the church, and the community.

Among the many friends who so cordially welcomed us to Henderson, we missed Brother Freed and his daughter Martha, he having, a few days before, taken her to Boston to put her into an educational institution there.

While the school is called the "Freed-Hardeman College," Brother Freed is not now connected with it as teacher. We have long regarded Freed and Hardeman as educators second to none. If Brother Freed has not resolutely resolved to be a school-teacher no more, I hope brethren of the truest type may secure his services and build up a great school somewhere while he is yet in his prime. We need many schools of the Freed-Hardeman type.

A handsome dormitory for girls is nearly completed on the grounds of the Freed-Hardeman College—sufficiently near completion to be occupied by the fortunate girls who are in school there. We have never seen in connection with any school a more comfortable, convenient, attractive dormitory, and Brother Hardeman is evidently taking every possible precaution to make the dormitory and the school absolutely safe for all, especially for girls. On each floor of the dormitory a teacher or teachers will always be ready to fill the place of mother, if it is possible for any mortal to ever fill a mother's place.

The present session opened September 14, with satisfactory enrollment, and many names were added to the list while we were there. We believe the present session will be a great one in every desirable sense. So mote it be,

OBITUARIES

Puckett.

Sister Barbara Puckett, of Williamsport, Tenn., was born on August 4, 1870, and departed this life on October 18, 1921, for a better and brighter world. She lived fifty-one years in this beautiful world, and thirty-six years were spent in living the Chris-She was indeed a good tian life. woman. She was never strong in body, but possessed a strong will power. She leaves ten children to mourn her loss. Her busband preceded her thirteen months. To the children I would say: "Sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." "I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." The funeral was con-ducted by Brother Cathey Baker at the Wilson cemetery, near Jones Valley. A FRIEND.

Fathera.

On October 10, 1921, Brother J. R. Fathera answered the call of death. was eighty-eight years, eight months, and one day old when he died. At the age of thirty years he obeyed the gospel, which caused the star of hope to arise and to shine brighter unto the perfect day. For fifty-eight years he lived in the church to praise his God. Of course he had the trials to face that every child of God has to face. He made mistakes, but they were such as are common to man He leaves six children to mourn their loss as they follow his godly example and walk in his wise counsel. The writer conducted the funeral services at his home near Sharpsville, Tenn., and his body was laid to rest in the cemetery near his home to wait that great day when the dead in Christ shall rise.

JOHN T. SMITHSON.

Kellum.

On Thursday, October 20, 1921, Brother A. E. Kellum was called suddenly to the land beyond. Having spent most of the morning in town, apparently in perfect health, genial and joyful with everybody, he returned home about eleven o'clock, fed his pigs, went into the family room, took up his paper, and without a word passed "over the river." He was about sixty-six years of age. He was one of the He was one of the best and most trustworthy citizens of the town and community. He was an efficient and faithful elder of the small band disciples, superintendent of the Bible school, and had charity for all men. The little church is indeed orphaned by his departure, and the community will miss him. The stores and public school closed in honor of his memory and respect to his loved ones during the funeral hour. Services were conducted by the writer, assisted by G. T. Howerton, of Starkvin, M. H. Johnson.

C. G. Johnson was born on July 20, 1850. On January 5, 1871, he was married to Susan E. Cline, who preceded him to the grave twelve years.

To this union were born sixteen children. Fourteen lived to be grown. He had sixty grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. In 1911 he was married to Miss Docia Guin, who ad-ministered tenderly and faithfully to him to the last moment. He realized her worth, and his children hold her in high esteem. For nearly fifty years he was a member of the church of Christ. He rejoiced at the success of the church, and contributed of his time and means for its advancement. A good man has laid down his armor and gone to his reward. He will be missed in his community. tributed to the joys of his fellow men. Their success was his delight. door was open to the wayfarer without question as to his worthiness. He was a friend of the oppressed, easily approached by those in need. His nature was genial, and he was jovial to friends in his last sickness. Brother Tipton (in his eighty-fifth year) and Brother Hartsfield spoke words of consolation and admonition at the grave. X.

Catarrh is an excessive secretion, accompanied with chronic inflammation, from the mucous membrane. Hood's Sarsaparilla acts on the mucous membrane through the blood, reduces inflammation, establishes healthy action, and radically cures all cases of catarrh.

Try This For Sore Throat

On retiring fill your nostrils with Eucapine Salve. Sniff the salve back into the air passages of the head and throat until it reaches the tonsils and uvula and you taste the salve. This is best done lying down, pallow under back, head thrown back that the melting salve may reach the head cavities. Also turn the head down and forward and to right and left; to flow the salve over the inflamed surfaces in the cavities of the head, in the morning the pain and soreness will be gone. To make sure place Eucapine Salve on the back of the tongue with your finger. Same treatment for colds, nose sores, catarrhal headaches, catarrh of the head, nose and throat. Among the Colored Folks

Meeting at Murray, Ky.

The white church of Christ at Murray, Ky., decided over six months ago to do some mission work among my people at Murray, and arranged with me to come and do the preaching, and I must say that they never left a stone unturned in preparing for the meeting. Interest was good from start to finish. Both white and colored attended well, some coming from ten to fifteen miles every night, Some nights the larger part of the congregation was white; and many of these white people had never obeyed the gospel, but were impressed with the truth. Brother Overby, the white preacher of the church of Christ, rendered all the assistance he could. He led the song service most of the time, and I want to say it was well done. A good many of the colored people had known him all of his life, and they say he has always been willing to assist the colored people in every way that would serve to help them. When I began preaching, they said I had a new doctrine; but I got them to reading, and, to their surprise, they found what I was teaching in their Bibles. Some of them confessed that they read the Bible more while I was there than ever before. Fifteen precious souls obeyed the gospel in this meeting and two were restored. One old man, eighty years old, and an old woman, eighty-five years old, obeyed the gospel. When these two old persons came forward, there was great rejoicing among both white and colored. While the meeting was in progress we found about twenty-four brethren and sisters scattered around Murray, and we got them to consent to meet regularly on Lord's days to keep house for the Lord. This made a total of thir-The white brethren sucty-nine ceeded in getting the schoolhouse for them to worship in, and some of them have agreed to meet with them in the afternoon and teach them how to keep house for God. Brother Overby says he will preach for them when he is in town. With such an opportunity as this, these brethren and sisters can soon become self-supporting. There was one confession at the close of the meeting on Lord's-day night, and we had baptizing in the river "the same hour," with a large crowd present. encouraging and comforting things that Brother Overby said at the close of this meeting will never be forgotten. The white brethren asked me to return next year and spend three or four weeks there, and I gladly consented.

I am now at Utica, Miss. Brother

R. L. Sweeny, a white brother who lives here, wanted me to come and preach for my people, and arranged for a nice place for me to stop, and also arranged with the sanctified people here to let me use their house. I have preached but one sermon, but they have already seen that they are not sanctified and are anxious to be taught. The outlook is good for the truth. Brother A. M. Burton is supporting me in this meeting. May God give us more men like this good man! M. KEEBLE.

Texas Valley (Ga.) Mission.

I am enjoying Brother Keeble's articles. I would to God that we had such a missionary in these parts. I crave to know more of the Lord's will and wish to get some good colored brother to visit this community and assist me in my study and to preach the gospel to my neighbors, some of whom seem interested.

Prother Perdue, of Athens, Ga., baptized me last July in the presence of a large audience of white and colored people. Of course it provoked comment and criticism for a white man to baptize a negro. Some of them were glad, others were mad. Some of them accused me of "joining the white folks' church." But verily I heard the gospel and "gladly received the word." I was formerly a Methodist minister. I now wish to do all I can in a faithful Christian way to undo so far as possible what I have taught that was misleading and harmful. I want to become a gospel torchbearer to those of my neglected race who sit in midnight darkness relative to the gospel. I wish to state, humbly, that I bore a good reputation and character while with the Methodists. No man can say aught against me, truthfully. Some tracts on "First Principles" and "The Church" (by Brother Fuqua), copies of the Gospel Advocate and Christian Leader, the unusual and untiring interest of Brother Moon, and the matchless preaching of Brother Perdue led me into the kingdom of Christ. My heart goes out in gratitude to all these causes, and I praise God for the gift of his Son, and to him I ascribe all honor and glory. Brother Perdue held a brush arbor meeting of one week's duration near my home after my baptism, and much good was accomplished.

Through the favor of Brother Moon, I have a shoe shop in Holland, Ga., and shall make and repair shoes this winter. I walk to my home, three miles away in the mountains, each day, and thank the Lord for this opportunity to earn a few needed dimes these hard times. If you have any discarded shoes with good uppers, I can use them to advantage.

I have some calls for meetings in November that I am hoping to be able to hold; but unless I gain considerably, I will have to cancel all work again. I rejoice that the brethren are having such glorious meetings everywhere, but I myself have practically lost the summer, not having been able to hold a single meeting and to preach but little. This has been especially hard on me, for I have had to forego the pleasure which such work affords me and the remuneration as well; and every one knows that to one who has had no other income for years except from his work as a preacher, and in many instances that very inadequate, this means much. Now the winter is coming, and I am yet unable to do anything, with finances at a very low ebb; but I thank God that the Lord and his people have not forsaken me, and I still believe that I will be provided for. May the Lord bless all his faithful children.—U. G. Wilkinson.

New Haven, Conn., October 24.-For the last three Sundays I have attended the Bridgeport congregation, about wenty mile away. A few members live here, but on inquiry I learned that some have gone in with the Pantists and others have left the city. The excuse was that the brethren at Bridgeport were too conservative. This view gives occasion to say that this congrecation has no preaching on Sunday mornings, the only time some can or will attend. They have a single speaker from their own membership for an evening lesson; but only a moderate per cent of the membership come then, not to mention the need for attendance from outsiders. But some members go from house to house in prayer meetings and Bible study, and an occasional conversion results. latter practice seems very essential in view of the absence of evangelistic methods at regular services. I am glad to say the younger men of the church are given a chapter to read in their turn, and that about all male members who attend take some part from time to time. I enjoy the morning services myself, but I can easily understand why outsiders prefer one enthusiastic and instructive speech to half a dozen talks and chapters read. Perhaps it would be better to utilize the morning occasion in a warm gospel service, and use Wednesday or Sunday evening for the exhortations and mutual edification. Really it is a problem that each church must settle for itself, of course; but all should use some variety, it seems to me, if thus they can get more interest.—W. W. Freeman.

Contributions received during September for the support of the Honolulu mission work were as follows: For personal use, $164.35; for the Mission Home Building Fund, $150. Brethren, this is a splendid showing. We thank God for his liberality through you.

Expenditures for September, $148.24. Brother Pennell informed us that it would take at least $150 a month. You see he did not miss it very far.

We are very anxious to reduce the debt on the house. This is the chief source of our expenditures now. I had to borrow eighteen hundred dollars to swing the deal. In the meantime I am hoping for assistance to meet another payment of eleven hundred and twenty-five dollars by the first of February. Just a little here and there will do wonders for us May the Lord bless you. We intend, with God's help, to fight it out here, if it takes years and years of hard, disappointing work-and it will take that. This is a promising field, and we will sow the seed for a future harvest. Pray for us and assist all

Love.

BY J. V. ARMSTRONG TRAYLOR,

The supreme work to which we need to address ourselves in this world is to learn love. It is a wellknown fact that life is full of opportunities for learning love. It has been said that the world is not a playground, but a schoolroom, and life is not a holiday, but an education; therefore, the one great lesson for us all is, "how better we can love."

It seems that people would hunger and thirst for the "greatest thing in the world" more than they do, but the reason, I suppose, is, they do not want to pay the price for it, and the price is obedience to God. Christ says: "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments. He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." (John 14: 21.)

The absence of obedience is the evidence of the absence of love, because love invariably produces obedience; love influences action. "Love never faileth." How superabundantly it pays itself back! For there is no debtor in the world so honorable as love. Right. here I use a quotation from Browning: "For life, with all its yields of joy or woe and hope and fear, is just our chance o' the prize of learning love-how love might be, hath been indeed, and now is."

Paul gives some very forceful lessons on love in his letter to the Corinthian brethren, and in this letter we find the analysis of love. Let us observe what its elements are; and they are things which can be practiced by every man in every place in life. Notice the nine ingredients:

"Love suffereth long"-Patience.

"And is kind "-Kindness.

"Love envieth not "-Generosity.

"Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up "-Humility.

"Doth not behave itself unseemly" -Courtesy.

"Seeketh not her own"-Unselfishness

"Is not easily provoked "-Good temper.

"Thinketh no evil"-Guilelessness.

"Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth "-Sincerity.

In this letter love is contrasted with things that people esteemed very highly in those days, which were many, namely-eloquence, with prophecy, with mysteries, and faith and hope; but it is very vividly pictured that love is superior to all of those things, because the end is greater than the means.

Love "thinketh no evil"-imputes no motive, sees the bright side, puts the best construction on every ac-

It was Carlyle who said of Robert Burns that "there was no truer gentleman in Europe than the plowman poet. It was because he loved everything—the mouse, and the daisy, and all things great and small that God had made."

It is grand that we have "the perfect law of liberty" to look into to see if we have the love dwelling within us that God wants his people to have. That great law Book will tell us how to treat our enemies: "Love your enemies, and pray for them that perse-(Matt. 5: 44.) Not only cute you." does it tell us how to treat our enemies, but it tells us how we should treat the brethren: "Let that mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." Therefore, remember that is a matter of life or death; for "we know that we have passed out of death into life, because we love the brethren." (1 John 3: 14.)

This motto is very frequently used: "If we could only see ourselves as others see us." But it should read this way: "If we could only see ourselves as God sees us." Hence, if we will look into the soul's mirror, then we will see ourselves as God sees us, and that great mirror will very quickly show us whether we have passed from death to life. "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, cannot love God whom he hath not seen. And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also." (1 John 4: 20, 21.)

The reason Paul was singling out love to the Corinthian brethren was because it lasts. "Love never faileth." He runs over a few things that men thought would last and shows that they all are fleeting, temporary, passing away. "Whether there be prophecies, they shall fail." It was the mother's ambition for her boy in those days that he should become a prophet, and at that special time a prophet was greater than a king. Whether there be tongues, they shall cease." "Whether there be knowledge, it shall be done away." All these things are great, but "the greatest of these is love."

I believe any person who can look back upon his life can see that the moments when he has really lived are the moments when he has done things in the spirit of love. There are many who desire to live this way:

"I lived for myself, I thought for myself—

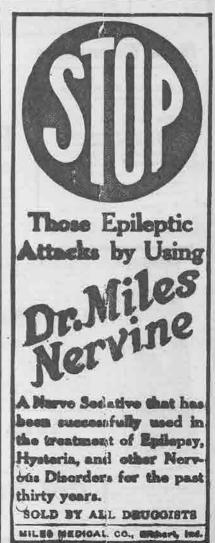

For myself, and none beside; Just as if Jesus had never lived, As if he had never died."

"Do you know the world is dying for a little bit of love?"

NASHVILLE, TENN., NOVEMBER 10, 1921.

$2.50 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

Gen. John J. Pershing's Message.

As we contemplate the causes of war and realize its horrors, every right-thinking man and woman must feel like demanding that some steps be taken to prevent its recurrence. An important step would be to curtail expenditures for the maintenance of navies and armies.

The estimates recently presented to our Congress for the naval and military services contemplate an appropriation for the next fiscal year of more than five million dollars for every working day in the year.

It is a gloomy commentary upon world conditions that expenditures several times greater than ever before in peace times should be considered necessary, especially when the most rigid economy in governmental administration is essential if we would avoid national bankruptcy.

The world does not seem to learn from experience. It would appear that the lessons of the last six years should be enough to convince everybody of the danger of nations striding up and down the earth armed to the teeth. But no one nation can reduce armaments unless all do.

Is it not, then, time for an awakening among enlightened peoples to the end that the leading powers may reach some rational agreement which would not only relieve the world of this terrible financial load, but which in itself would be a long step toward the prevention of war?

Ours is not an aggressive nation. We want no territory and we have no designs on other people. If other nations have the same attitude, it seems unreasonable not to believe that all will be willing to prove it by consenting to limit armaments. Unless some such move be made, we may well ask ourselves whether civilization does not really reach a point where it begins to destroy itself and whether we are thus doomed to go headlong down through destructive war and darkness to barbarism.—Address at New York, December 29, 1920.

CURRENT COMMENT

____ By A. B. L. ___

It seems to be the popular thing in the literary world nowadays to flaunt the weaknesses of public leaders into the face of the public and at the same time to make scant mention of their strong points. Some anonymous writer published recently "Mirrors of Washington," a book which unmercifully flayed every noted statesman from President Harding down. Each subject was coolly analyzed and dissected. Men who occupy the highest places in public life were made out to be selfish, narrow-minded weaklings hardly worthy of respect and confidence. One wonders, after reading the book, just what is to keep the old Ship of State from going on the rocks with such statesmen at the helm. The book was widely circulated and its contents greedily devoured by those who take delight in destructive literature. The lesson comes nearer home when we reflect that not only the President and members of the cabinet, but those who occupy much humbler positions, are likely to suffer the same fate. The editor of the Christian-Evangelist points out both the disposition and the remedy as applied to preachers in the following paragraph:

A tribe of North American Indians remembered a weak moment of a would-be chief by naming him "Young-Man-He was always hobbled by the re-Afraid-of-His-Horse," proachful name. There are ministers who might be fittingly called "Rev. Afraid-of-His-Audience." It would be a cruel tag to attach, and Christian charity would not allow it. But we may be sure that the people quickly find it out, when it is so-and, to put it mildly, they do not like it A minister must have courage, because he is a leader. he will have it while he keeps himself conscious of God and the fact that he is God's messenger. God said to Ezekiel when about to send him forth on his message to Israel: "Thou, son of man, . . . be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks." With such courage, the people would know a prophet was in their midst. whatever may seem to happen at the time, the prophet is the salvation of society. He will not let people forget God.

The true minister of God does not pose as a prophet of God and is averse to the title "Reverend." He is content to be servant of all for Christ's sake. But he will "shun not to declare the whole counsel of God" at any privation or cost. He is deeply conscious of his imperfections and tries to profit by his own mistakes. He is comforted by the belief that, however the public or his brethren may size him up, God is merciful and good and will help him him to overcome. Like Paul, he is enabled to say, "When I am weak, then am I strong," and, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me."

Just now the leading topic for editorial discussion both in the secular and religious journals is the International Disarmament Conference called by the President and to be held in Washington, beginning on November 11. Literally volumes have been written already, and if the distinguished representatives of the nations take the time to consider all the plans that have been suggested from one source and another, its sessions will extend far over the time when the snow flies into next summer. More than likely they will attempt to settle this great world problem themselves, acting upon the theory that "the worst vice of all is advice." There are those, however, who insist upon being heard, as, for example, read the following exhortation clipped from one of our leading exchanges:

Disarmament, even of the limited kind, will not last long unless accompanied by some rational, practical, and mutually-agreed upon plan for settling international disputes. That the world's wisest statesmen have not long before this devised something better than the life-destroying, bankrupting, demoralizing, barbaric method of physical violence is emazing. Thirk of civilized nations shooting one another and blowing up each other's cities—to decide what is right and just! Of course only that is permanent which is right in a world over which God reigns. That truth apprehended would make war impossible. International tribunals would then be provided to decide what is just and equitable in case of disputes between nations as to territorial rights and other causes of misunderstandings. The nations have yet to learn that the Golden Rule of the Master is applicable to their dealings with each other. Which of the world's statesmen will be bold enough and Christian enough to state that truth at the coming world conference in Washington?

This editor is not alone in contending that Christian men and women everywhere should take the lead by setting themselves against "this dangerous and harmful heresy of preparedness." Cephas Shelburne, in the Christian Courier, asks: "Can the church afford to stand uncertain, silent, and in the background at a time like this, when civilization itself is in the balance ready for the scales to tip either way? Is it rather not a time of trumpet call, a time when every church and pastor, congregation and member in America should be at the forefront, encouraging and aiding with their prayers to bring to earth again the angels' song of peace on earth?" In the same vein Charles F. Aked said recently in a sermon: "The time has come when the nations must choose between disarmament and destruction. They must choose to obey the last command which Jesus gave before he was led to the cross, 'Put up the sword into the sheath,' or they must witness the flaming death of our civilization and our hopes." All of this sounds very fine. but the question may be seriously asked if the majority of the people really want disarmament and world peace. There are some signs that do not point that way. During the recent convention of the American Legion at Kansas City, when Generals Foch and Pershing were present, the highest encomiums of praise and adoration were passed upon our soldier boys and they were made to feel that in going to battle they had done the greatest deed of their lives. Only yesterday we read how Sergeant Woodfill, of Indiana, had been summoned to Washington to receive the most coveted medals within the gift of the military authorities. And why? Because it had been officially determined that the Sergeant had killed nineteen Germans in bloody combat. This week Nashville is all agog over the reunion of the Thirtieth Division. The society girls are excited and thrilled with the prespect of dancing with the heroes of the hour. Socially, the young man who did not cross the seas is for the moment forgotten and, perhaps, ostracized. These signs. I repeat, do not betoken a passion for conditions of universal peace. Our civilization has not reached this ideal point. The teachings of Jesus and his apostles on the war question have been woefully neglected. Even Christian ministers failed to catch the Master's meaning or else his teachings failed to soak in. A prominent preacher of the North recently boasted that it was the Christian pastor who took the lead in "the late war and the many drives." Can you imagine Paul boasting of such a thing?

But despite the inconsistencies of some of those who now plead for disarmament and the mistakes of the past, it is certainly true that we should do what we can to bring about a successful meeting at Washington. Every one of us should set himself against this beastly business of war and for the principles and ideals of Jesus as proclaimed in the gospel of peace and good will. So many petitions and warnings will be addressed to the Conference that the chances are that our humble petition, should we be emboldened to send it, would be ignored or cast into the discard. But there is One Great Ruler whose ears are always attentive to the cry of his obedient children. In such a crisis Paul's admonition is especially needed: "I exhort therefore, first of all, that supplications, prayers, intercessions, thanksgivings, be made for all men; for kings and all that are in high place; that we may lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity. This is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior; who would have all men to be saved, and come to the knowledge of the truth." (1 Tim. 2: 1-4.)

Observations Along the Way.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

On September 4 I left Fresno, Cal., and started on a trip across the continent. I spent over six weeks on the trip, and preached or attended meeting almost every night, with three services on most of the Sundays. I came through Southern California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and a part of Tennessee, and arrived at my father's home, near Columbia, on October 20.

A preacher could hardly be expected to make this trip without learning something of the condition of the churches with which he came in contact. In fact, I made the trip, stopping along the way as I did, partly for the purpose of making observations. The following will set forth a few things as they impressed me.

In one sense there is no difference between the East and the West and the North and the South. A Christian is the same, no matter where born, no matter where his dwelling place. Yet there is a difference in habits and customs which is noticeable. For instance, in most towns of the West the streets are wider and are kept cleaner than in the South. Also, one does not see so many ramshackle, dilapidated buildings in the West. This is, perhaps, partly due to the fact that the Western country is newer.

But there is a friendliness in the Southern people which I never fail to notice. In El Paso, Texas, I asked a man how to find the meeting place of the church of Christ. I knew the street, but did not know what part of the city it was in. He said: "Yes, I know about where it is. Get into my car and I will carry you there. It is over a mile from here." I got in with him. He didn't belong to any church, but was doing this just to accommodate a stranger. In Fort Smith, Ark., I went into a hardware store and made inquiry for the meetinghouse. The merchant did not know, But he took the telephone and soon had the place located. It was over thirty blocks away. He said: "Just wait till I get my car out and I will take you out there." Then I knew I was in the South. For scarcely could that happen in the North or West.

There is more religion in the atmosphere on this side the Rocky Mountains. In a little town in Eastern New Mexico. called "Taiban," I had to stay overnight. I knew not a soul in the place, and not one knew me. About 4:30 P.M. I went out and made it known that I was a preacher and would preach that night if I had an opportunity. In a few minutes several people were going from house to house inviting people out to church, and we had a good crowd and a good meeting. No living man can do a thing like that beyond the Rockies.

The schoolbooks begin to show improvement in Eastern New Mexico. Not so many fairy tales and Greek, Roman, and Arabian myths, but more stories with sense in them and morals to them.

The women do not wear such ridiculously short skirts in the South. That is, fewer of them are seen on the streets with skirts up around their knees. But I have noticed a few that are short enough. While in Dallas, on Commerce Street, a woman went along in a short skirt. A man stopped in the middle of the street to gaze at her, and was nearly run down by an automobile. The car had touched him before he noticed it. The driver apologized; but the pedestrian said it was his fault, as he was looking at something else instead of watching where he was going. The man in the car said: "I was looking at the same thing myself, and I could not find my button to blow my horn." Then I knew this was something new to them. Such sights are far too common on the Pacific Coast to cause an automobile wreck. I sincerely hope our Southern women, especially those claiming to be Christians, will never be led to wear "immodest apparel."

Taking everything into consideration, I believe New Mexico is the best place for a poor man to go to get a home to-day. Land can be had there in a climate as good as Tennessee for from five dollars to thirty dollars an acre, that will grow beans or wheat or Indian corn in sufficient quantities to pay for itself in two or three years.

As to the condition of the churches, I found many things not satisfactory. The influence of the different papers is easily discernible in traveling from one place to another. Those who stay at one place do not realize this. Some know of no paper but the one they read. But there are many papers in the brotherhood. The following list may be imperfect, but I know of these: The Gospel Advocate, the Christian Leader, the Firm Foundation, the Christian Worker, the Gospel Advance, the Gospel Herald, the Herald of Truth, the Apostolic Review, the Apostolic Way, the Harvest Worker, Truth and Grace, Word and Work, the Pacific Christian, the Gospel Guide, and perhaps others. The Advocate is the oldest, and some of the others were started as a sort of protest against the Advocate because it would not readily lend itself to the propagation of somebody's favorite "idea" (we will not call it "hobby"). However, the Apostolic Review is nearly as old as the Advocate, but its present policy is very new. The Christian Leader more correctly represents the American Christian Review, from which both papers came. There is rivalry among the promoters of these different papers. Some are sure their particular paper is doing more good than any other. Each paper has its field of influence, and on this trip I had opportunity to note the influence of several of them. But my opinion is not changed. I believe the Advocate fits its readers for more efficient and practical work and begets in them zeal and earnestness and soundness of belief to a greater extent than any other paper.

Over twenty years ago a strong fight raged between the Advocate and the Firm Foundation over "sect baptism." So bitter was this fight that admirers of the separate papers discredited many things suggested by the other, merely because of prejudice. At least it would seem so. Now the Advocate people printed some lesson leaves and quarterlies to be used in connection with the Bible study on Sunday. The Firm Foundation admirers opposed that right from the start. Then there was but a little step to opposition to classes of any kind on Sunday. In time the Foundation changed its attitude on that point, and another paper, the Apostolic Way, was born. It is here to-day among us, doing all it can to prevent the study of the Bible in classes on Sunday whether with or without literature. If it is right, it is doing good; but if it is wrong (and I believe it is), it is doing harm instead of good. What I saw of its influence does not lead me to encourage its circulation.

The Apostolic Review has already accomplished real division over Bible schools and colleges (schools where the Bible is one of the textbooks). Of course, that which brings open division or even discord among faithful brethren is wrong. That is the influence of the Apostolic Review. In a few places in California they have gained a foothold. When they get control, none but a Review man is allowed to preach. When brethren found out that was the intention and universal practice, they refused to allow a Review man to preach for them. But what else could they do? But the Apostolic Review is to blame for all that.

But some of the Firm Foundation admirers are scarcely less exclusive. I was told that a certain preacher said of the money in the treasury of his home congregation: "Not one cent of this shall go to a man who receives sect baptism, not even if it were my own father." It is these things that have made our work on the Pacific Coast very hard indeed.

One thing I rejoice over is that I found the Pacific Christian in nearly all the homes I visited; and wherever I found a goodly part of the congregation reading it, I found the church alive, responsive, and some of the young folks preparing to give their lives to the cause of Christ. This is just the influence we have desired most of all to have.

Also, I note a "school spirit" all over the country. I delivered my school lecture in nearly every place I preached. In this I urged that Christians sooner or later would have to educate their own children. This lecture, so far as I know, met with universal approval.

While claiming the Advocate readers as the best equipped and prepared to do the greatest work, I do not wish to convey the impression that we should not try to improve or that we do not need to improve. There is great need just now of a forward movement. Every Christian must begin to do more. We have been satisfied with too little in the past. The harvest is great and sheaves must be gathered now. To-morrow it will be too late. However, if I have diagnosed the case properly, the greatest need of the church is a scripturally qualified eldership. Have I missed it, brethren? Let us hear from others.

Georgia and the Far Southern Field By B. C. GOODPASTURE

David and the New Ox Cart.

Jehovah called David from the sheepfolds of Bethlehem to the throne of Israel. One of his first cares, on becoming king, was to obtain possession of the stronghold of Zion; and this very thing he did. "And David dwelt in the stronghold, and called it the city of David. And David built round about from Millo and inward. And David waxed greater and greater." (2 Sam. 5: 9, 10.) It is worthy of remark here that David in the midst of prosperity and victory "perceived that Jehovah had established him king over Israel, and that he had exalted his kingdom for his people Israel's sake." (Verse 12.) In receiving the blessings of God, he recognized the God of the blessings. Next, after Zion had been occupied. David desired to bring up the ark of the covenant from Kirjath-jearim, where it had been left after being restored by the Philistines in the early days of Samuel, (1 Sam, 7: 1.) Elaborate preparations were made to bring up this sacred treasure.

THE GATHERING OF THOUSANDS.

"David again gathered together all the chosen men of Israel, thirty thousand." (2 Sam. 6: 11.) Some one has well said: "In bringing up the ark to Jerusalem, the king showed a commendable desire to interest the whole nation, as far as possible, in the solemn service. The people, numerous as they were, grudged neither the time, the trouble, nor the expenses. A handful might have sufficed for all the actual labor that was required; but thousands of the chief people were summoned to be present, and that on the principle both of rendering due honor to God and of conferring a benefit on the people." It is not a few preachers and elders and deacons only that should be called to take a part in the service of religion; Christians generally should have an interest in the ark of God. It does not take a large audience to "break bread," conduct a Sunday-night service or prayer meeting; yet it is infinitely better for all who can to attend all these services.

DOING THE RIGHT THING IN THE WRONG WAY.

No one can daubt that it was right to move the ark under proper conditions; for God told his people how it should be moved (Num. 4: 1-16)—that is, it should be carried by the Levites. Also, it was all right to bring it to Jerusalem.

But the great trouble came through a "modern method" of transportation that was employed by David. The Philistines, in bringing up the ark from Ekron to Kirjath-jearim, had used a new cart (1 Sam. 6: 7), and used it successfully; and, instead of following the directions given through Moses, it seems that David copied the example of the Philistines. The "new cart" scemed to work well for a while. The procession was nearing Jerusalem when the "oxen stumbled," and Uzzah, putting forth his hand to stay the ark, was smitten dead. (2 Sam. 6: 6, 7.) The ark was left in the house of Obed-edom, and the thousands disbanded. Why all this trouble? Had Uzzah sinned, in that he touched the ark? Yes; but some one had sinned in this matter before Uzzah. Speaking to the Levites, David said: "For because ye bare it not at the first, Jehovah our God made a breach upon us, for that we sought him not according to the ordinance." (1 Chron, 15; 13.) Thus David located the trouble at the right place. The king and his people were trying to do a good work in a bad way. It is frequently said that the end justifies the means, but it did not in this case. What matter is it, some of this day say, if the money has been obtained in ways that are not commendable, just so it is for the poor or the ministry of the word? Does it matter how or by whom the gospel is preached, if the evangelization of the nations is the purpose? Does it make any difference what is done in worship, if it is all intended for the glory of God? All who speak after this fashion should remember that David could have asked. "What difference does it make how we move the ark, just so we bring it to Jerusalem?" with as good grace as they. It is never right to set aside God's way of doing things for man's way.

One great hindrance to primitive Christianity to-day is the use of Philistine carts in the service of the Lord. They may make some show of success for a time, but they will fail. The modern missionary society is very like a Philistine cart, introduced to bear the ark of the gospel of salvation. It, too, has had its Uzzahs, and some of its leaders have stumbled over the miracles, while others are laboring in the mire of "open membership," and the like. The church is the "pillar and ground of the truth." (1 Tim. 3; 15.)

Doing the Right Thing in the Right Way.

David could never have been a man after God's "own heart" (1 Sam. 13: 14), if he had been unwilling to confess his sins and make amends for them. The ark remained in the house of Obed-edom three months. In the meantime David grew in knowledge or respect—or in both—for the word of God; for he said: "None ought to carry the ark of God but the Levites: for them hath Jehovah chosen to carry the ark of God." (1 Chron. 15: 2.) God's way worked gloriously. "The Levites bare the ark of God upon their shoulders with the staves thereon" to Jerusalem in triumph and joy. How different the result from that of the first effort! How different the means employed! "As for God, his way is perfect." (Ps. 18: 30.)

Cancellation of Elam's Notes.

The agreement for the publication of Elam's Notes on the International Lessons for 1922, in book form, has been cancelled. This was done upon Brother Elam's suggestion after we had set up in type thirteen lessons. So our patrons will not expect the annual, but the quarterlies and other helps will be ready for distribution as heretofore.

Why We Need and Must Have Christian Schools.

"All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." (2 Tim. 3: 16.) "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge." (Prov. 1: 7.) "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." (Prov. 22: 6.) Paul said: "Bring them [children] up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." (Eph. 6: 4.) These two inspired men are in harmony with Christ, who also said: "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me." (Matt. 19: 14.) But he also said: "No man [generic sense] can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." (John 6: 45.) Children in their infancy are safe, being like heaven itself; but if they ever become men (or women), they must come to Christ only by teaching. "I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also." (2 Tim. 1: 5.) If all children were taught to-day as was Timothy, the great need of a special school for this work would not be so imperative. But alas! Fathers and mothers in Israel have failed in their duty.

The home was God's first institution to establish; the church was the second and last; and in either the home or church, or both, God wishes to reveal himself through his word. These must use every means of "making known the wisdom of God," as Paul says he wished to do. (2 Cor. 9: 22.) We find him "disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God" "daily in the school of one Tyrannus." (Acts 19: 8, 9.) And no doubt the same things were committed "to faithful men," who should "be able to teach others also." (2 Tim. 2: 2.)

But both the family and the church have largely failed. Churches represent Christianity in America and throughout the world, because they are supposed to emphasize Bibly teaching. Therefore, they are depended upon for Christian education. About all the religion people have, they learn it in the churches.

Sometime ago there appeared in the Gospel Advocate a statement concerning the report of the Japanese commission, a group of intelligent men, authorized by the Japanese government to investigate the influence of Christianity on American life. These men were favorable toward the supplanting of Buddhism for Christianity. They reported to their government: "Education, commerce, and industry have been developed to a wonderful degree; but there is little evidence that the Christian religion is regarded as important by the most of the people." Their report was consistent with what they saw, no doubt. Why? Because the churches have taught that it does not save; that there are people out of the church as good as those in it; and they have "a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof."

The University of California, in fifty years of its history, graduated over eleven thousand students, and only forty-seven of these entered the ministry. One preacher for every fifty thousand of California's population! The University of Illinois, up to 1917, had graduated more than twenty-seven thousand students, and only eighty-seven entered the ministry, only four entered the mission fields.

It is said that a common thing in the Mississippi Valley is to hear parents whose children have returned home from the State college having turned their backs upon the church of their fathers and forgotten the Christ of their mothers, ask: "What is wrong with our State university?" Well, they have received just what they could expect and what they have paid for.

We must either Christianize the State schools or build Christian schools to counteract their baleful influence. If all other things were favorable to the former proposition, the expense to the church would be too great to contemplate. And the modern plan of Bible chairs at the University does but little, because the atmosphere on the campus is too dense with atheism, infidelity, rationalism, and materialism to develop spiritual leadership. But Christian colleges do not require as great amounts of money as are used by the State schools; yet they can and must standardize, or they will not be patronized. The trend of American education demands recognized scholarship.

Alexander Campbell, as president of Bethany College, sought to root the restoration movement in education. The Lord has used learned men as repositories of his wisdom, and they have always been depended upon for guides in exact knowledge. With the exception of Christ and the twelve apostles, who were led wholly by the Spirit, beginning even with Paul, we find that scholarly men have given the world the true Bible. Wycliffe, Calvin, Luther, Wesley, Campbell, and others are examples. King James' appreciation of learning led him to gather about himself the scholars who gave us the present Common Version of the Bible. All these great men were produced by colleges.

Recently Mr. Brumbaugh visited the University of Oklahoma and made an address to the students and faculty. As the War Governor of Pennsylvania, the former superintendent of the city schools of Philadelphia, and now working in the interest of the universities, he is a national figure. He told in graphic words the story of Germany's all but successful attempt to dominate the world through her schools. But his central theme was, "Back to the Bible." He realizes that there are some dangerous evils lurking within the State institutions.

Also, Dr. Sherwood Eddy, of international reputation, in a series of lectures, lately said: "Christ is the touchstone of destiny. His principles alone will save America—will save the world from imminent, universal ruin, in the change which must come, either by evolution, transformation, or revolution, the way of blood. Pointing out the tendency of American education as it has been going, he challenged both teachers and students to read the Bible fifteen minutes each. He said that a young man in the university that morning had come to him and said: "I am not so sure that there is a God."

Even the military leader, General Wood, late candidate for the Presidency, says: "No nation can endure without religion. One of the first signs of decadence is the falling away from religion. There can be no divergence of opinion as to the importance of our people being well grounded in religious belief." And General Medill McCormack concurs with this thought when he says: "God grant that the young men and women of this country may live to see literacy universal within its borders, to bear witness, all of them, to the true importance of liberal and technical education to our order of peace, to witness the common acceptance of Christian philosophy as fundamental to our life."

But while teachers continue to say to these young people such things as, "Evolution is a fact," and "The Old Testament is no more to us now than the Greek and Roman mythology," as they have been saying in the University of Oklahoma only recently, we may not expect the above ideals, as voiced by our leading (hinkers, ever to be made real. We need a new system and new molds.

If the above theories and facts mean anything, it is plain that we must have many schools of all grades, to enable the student, young or more mature, to "meditate day and night" in his law. Students do what is given them to do. Without the occasion for thought on the higher ways of God, there will be little. As they strive for and attain the wisdom of man that they may succeed in this world, they must also be taught to "search diligently" for the truths that will make them free for the next world. Therefore, we must have Christian schools.

"The Sin Which Doth So Easily Beset Us."

We often speak of "our besetting sin," and it is due, doubtless, to the fact that we are commanded to lay aside "the sin which doth so easily beset us." Certainly we may know what this sin is, else we would not be commanded to lay it aside. We cannot lay aside something of which we are not conscious. It is very evident that our giving some thought to what our "besetting sin" is and laying it aside will greatly aid us in running "the race that is set before us." Read again Heb. 12: 1 and see if this is not correct. In the study of this, as well as any other scripture, there are two thoughts that we should seek to satisfy: (1) The unmistakable application of the statement to those to whom the writer is addressing himself; (2) its application to us, provided it can be applied to us. We are oftentimes saved from a misapplication of a scripture to our own time by first seeing its application to the parties addressed. With this in view, I wish to consider three questions:

1. What is "the sin which doth so easily beset us!" Both in the Common Version and the American Revised Version we are forced to say that it is the sin which down so easily beset us. We have other sins, of course, but they do not so easily beset us as this sin does. I judge, therefore, that it is an easy sin to commit. Here it would be well to call other translations to our assistance. Macknight (and he is one of our best) translates this "the sin easily committed." In his comments he speaks of it as "the sin which stands conveniently around one," "the well-circumstanced sin." Adam Clarke well says: "What we term the easily besetting sin is the sin of our constitution, the sin of our trade, that in which our worldly honor, secular profit, and sensual gratification are most frequently felt and consulted." Now, it does seem that we should soon learn what this sin is. To me, it is that thing Satan tempts me to do that is easier done than other things that are wrong; and the same is true of every one else. To know this weakness and ever gward ourselves at this point certainly means much to our growth in grace and effectiveness as soul winners.

2. The sin easily committed by the Hebrew brethren. To take the Hebrew letter as a whole, there can be no doubt that "unbelief" in the teaching of the new covenant and going back to the old law was the sin that stood "conveniently around them. Space forbids quoting here, but I suggest that you take your Bibles and read the following: Heb. 3: 12-14; 4: 1, 11; 6: 11, 12; 10: 19-31, 36. The better thing to do is to read the whole epistle. There was a strong temptation then surrounding the Hebrew Christians to go back to the old Levitical priesthood. The one thing that made it easy and so convenient was that it was costing them much to be faithful. Persecution was reigning, and to go back to the old law and renounce Christianity would give them ease and freedom from such. Read what Paul says immediately following our text in the twelfth chapter about persecution. And if persecution were waged to-day against Christianity as it was then, it would make apostasy an easy thing for us to fall into. To the Hebrews it was the course of least resistance. Macknight, therefore, speaks of "the besetting sin" of the Hebrews as "the sin of apostasy which is so easily committed."

3. But what is your and my besetting sin! It is the sin that stands most conveniently around you and the one that stands most conveniently around me. I hardly think it is apostasy. Men are not persecuted for believing in Christ in our country. Our circumstances, to a large degree, determine the sin that is easily committed; and since our circumstances differ, we should expect our besetting sins to differ.

The evil heart of unbelief needs more attention before we leave it. If the Hebrew brethren had possessed that undoubting confidence in God's promises that they should, the tendency to go back to the old law to escape persecution would not have been so great. Paul called their attention to the unbelief of Israel as Jehovah was endeavoring to lead them from Egypt to Canaan. Said he: "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief." (See Heb. 4: 11.) If we will study the conduct of Israel, we will find that they were faithful to a degree so long as things went well; but the first time they reached a place and could not see the way out, they at once doubted Jehovah's assurance to see them through all troubles. Now, is it not true that many of us have this as a "besetting sin?" It is easy to doubt when things go not well with us, and to fancy that we believe that our hearts are right with God when all things go well. Of all people on the earth, the real Christian is the most blessed. "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." (Ps. 84: 11.) "But they that seek Jehovah shall not want any good thing." (Ps. 34: 10.) "And we know that to them that love God all things work together for good." (Rom. 8: 28.) Walking uprightly and continually seeking Jehovale is ours to do. It is God's part to see that no good thing is withheld from us. And remember, too, that he must be the judge as to what is a good thing for us. It may be persecution; it may be sickness; but whatever it is, it brings good to our souls. Here let us have a faith that never doubts.

The love of money makes it easy for some to be dishonest and selfish. Listen to the timely words of Paul: "But godliness with contentment is great gain: for we brought nothing into the world, for neither can we carry anything out; but having food and covering we shall be therewith content. But they that are minded to be rich [have their hearts set and bent on being rich] fall into a temptation and a snare and many foolish and hurtful lusts, such as drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil: which some reaching after have been led astray from the faith, and have pierced themselves through with many sorrows." (1 Tim. 6: 6-10.) The very fact that Paul says, "For the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil," should make every one of us study ourselves at this point. There are many ways in which we can watch ourselves to determine whether we love money too well. Whenever we allow ourselves to act, in the smallest way, unjustly toward a soul because of financial advantage, we should know that we love money too well. Whenever we lose sight of the interest of others because of that inordinate desire to take care of self when it comes to money, we should know that we are loving money too well. A man, in cashing a check for one hundred dollars, notices that the cashier made the mistake of giving him nine ten-dollar bills and one one-hundred-dollar bill, thus giving him one hundred and ninety dollars for the check when he was due but one hundred dollars. He has the opportunity of saying to himself, "Well, it is the cashier's mistake and not mine," and walk away with ninety dollars that does not belong to him; and such a thing stands "conveniently around him," provided he loves money too well. Those who have established the habit until it has crystalized itself into character of ever doing unto others as they would have others do to them would not find this a convenient sin. They would find it perfectly convenient and easy to make the correction, and that gladly, for that cashier would have to put up the ninety dollars to cover his shortage. I say again, it should be easy for us to discover our weakness here, if this is our point of weakness. Preachers can so arrange their work as to keep their hearts set continually on financial advantage. They can hang on with the sole desire of financial advantage, or they can leave a place for financial advantage. They can compromise the truth for financial advantage. Certainly they can make merchandise of the gospel of our Lord and Savior.

The one point that I wish to emphasize in closing is the necessity of our settling the question as to whether we allow ourselves to do wrong for money. While I have stated that we should have no trouble in learning what sin it is that we can easily do, I must also insist that quite often a man's besetting sin is the very weakness of which he seems to be as ignorant as death, and it sometimes seems almost impossible to get him to see himself at this point. Find out what this besetting sin is, brother; for it is a deadly adder that is sticking to you and will destroy your soul and body if not laid aside.

Abraham in Ur of the Chaldees. BY H. LEO BOLES.

As we enter upon the study of Abraham, it is well to give some attention to his native city or country. It is not so important to locate the exact place of Ur; neither is it of so great importance to know the boundaries of the Chaldeans, nor the limitation of Mesopotamia, nor the extent of Nimrod's kingdom, which gave rise to ancient Babylon. Because of the antiquity of these cities and countries, nothing very definite can be ascertained concerning them. The historicity is indefinite and fragmentary; hence, a brief study will be made of Abraham in his native city, only to get a view of the background of his early life.

Authorities differ widely as to the locality of Ur and its surrounding countries. At present there are four localities which have been designated as the birthplace of Abraham. Two of these locations are said to be situated in upper Mesopotamia; the other two are located near four hundred miles further south, locating Ur on the Persian gulf. The two southern points are not far apart. The nearest biblical location is given as follows: "Now these are the generations of Terah. Terah begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran begat Lot. And Haran died before his father Terah in the land of his nativity, in Ur of the Chaldees. . . . And Terah took Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran, his son's son, and Sarai his daughter-in-law, his son Abram's wife; and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto Haran, and dwelt there." (Gen. 11: 27-31.) Stephen, rehearsing the history of the Jews, says: "The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran. . . . Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt In Haran." (Acts 7: 2-4.) These are the most definite locations which the Scriptures furnish us, and they are not sufficient to enable one to locate accurately the ancient site of Ur. The many legends concerning the birthplace of Abraham have not sufficient authority to receive much credence.

The name "Ur" signifies "light." It is thought that the city took its name from the light which came from the fire which was worshiped by the natives. All indications are that the natives were idolatrous people; they are called "ignicolists," or "worshipers of fire." From the worship of fire, they easily became worshipers of light, especially bright light; hence, they worshiped the sun, and then the moon and the stars. They became so interested in their worship of the stars that they made a special study of the stars. This gave rise to their system of astronomy, and from their astronomy comes their astrology. The Chaldeans were so interested in astrology that all astrologers were in process of time called "Chaldeans." (See Dan. 2: 2-5.) In the New Testament they are referred to as "wise men."

Abraham's ancestors as they dwelt among the Chaldeans were worshipers of idols. It seems that they worshiped the same class of idols that the natives did. We have a plain declaration in the Bible which informs us as follows: "Now therefore fear Jehovah, and serve him in sincerity and in truth; and put away the gods which your fathers served beyond the River, and in Egypt; and serve ye Jehovah. And if it seem evil unto you to serve Jehovah, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your father served that were beyond the River, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as far me and my house, we will serve Jehovah." (Josh. 24: 14, 15.) "The gods which your fathers served that were beyond the River" were the gods of the Chaldeans, and the fathers were the ancestors of Abraham. The King James Version translates it, "the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood." The Revision seems to be the correct translation, and the "River" spoken of here has reference to the Euphrates River. But there is another scripture which states specifically who the fathers were that served other gods. "And Joshua said unto all the people, Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, Your fathers dwelf of old time beyond the River, even Terah, the father of Abraham, and the father of Nahor: and they served other gods." (Josh, 24: 2.) Abraham lived until he was seventyfive years old in Ur among the Chaldeans; and as his father was an idolater, it is probable that Abraham also worshiped idols.

There is no doubt but that Abraham was influenced by the idolatrous worship of his father. Terah, if he was not influenced by his countrymen. He had opportunity to see his father bowing down to the sun god, the moon god, and participating in the fire worship; he saw all around him worshipers of their favorite idols; he saw the people with his father engaging in the ceremonies and infamies which accompanied idolatrous worship among the Babylonians. Just how much of the true knowledge of Jehovah had been reserved, we are not told. Noah and his family were true worshipers of Jehovah. Abraham is the tenth generation from Noah. Some chronologists say that Shem was contemporary with Abraham, and that Melechizedek was Shem. However, this is mere conjecture. The knowledge of the true God may have been meager; it may have been corrupted by tradition; yet surely there was enough to keep alive a spark of faith in Jehovah. Even Terah, Abraham's father, may have worshiped Jehovah as well as idols; and his son, Abraham, may have showed preference for the worship of Jehovah.

There is a story of a legend that has been preserved in the Koran which shows Abraham's inclination to worship Jehovah; it is only a legend, and is given here as such. It is as follows: "When night overshadowed Abraham, he saw a star, and said: 'This is my Lord.' But when the star set, he said: 'I like not those that set.' And when he saw the moon rising, he said: 'This is my Lord.' But when the moon set, he answered: 'Verily, if my Lord direct me in the right way, I shall not be as one who errs.' And when he saw the sun rising, he said: 'This is my Lord. This is greater than the star or moon.' But when the sun went down, he said: 'O, my people, I am clear of these things. I turn my face to Him who hath made the heaven and the earth.'"

Remember the Poor.

If I have withheld the poor from their desire, or have caused the eyes of the widow to fail; or have eaten my morsel myself alone, and the fatherless hath not eaten thereof; . . . if I have seen any perish for want of clothing, or any poor without covering; . . . then let mine arm fail from my shoulder blade, and mine arm be broken from the bone.—Job 31: 16-22.

Just Like You.

BY C. R. N.

"Comparisons are cdious"-at times.

The church is a body, composed of many members. "He is the head of the body, the church." (Col. 1: 18.) "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of the body, being many, are one body." (1 Cor. 12: 12.) "But now they are many members, but one body." (1 Cor. 12: 20.)

In any given community the church of Christ is the aggregate of the children of God in that community, and the complexion of the congregation is determined by the character of the individual members.

Perfection is an attribute of Jehovah and man. Perfection in the absolute is an attribute of Jehovah only; it is not possessed by man in this lapsed state. Depravity is an attribute of Satan and man, but total depravity is an attribute of Satan only. "Perfection" and "depravity" are relative terms.

Since the church is an aggregation of men, the standard of perfection to which the congregation has attained is determined by the character and activity of the individual members—each supplying his part by functioning as a member of the body, "according to the working in due measure of each several part, maketh the increase of the body unto the building up of itself in love." (Eph. 4: 16.)

If every member of the church were "just like you," in zeal, activity, attendance at the services of the church, praying, singing, teaching, paying, etc., what kind of a congregation would we have?

By what method of reasoning have you reached the conclusion that Brother X should attend each service of the church and that you discharge the full measure of your duty by attending church semioccasionally? What if every member should do "just like you?"

This past summer a young man who was attending a meeting I was conducting was busy in seeing that lights were in order, books distributed, seats arranged, the audience supplied with fans, and he found a seat at the front and assisted in the song service. This was unusual for this young man, brethren said. He was heard to say before the close of the meeting: "I am enjoying this meeting more than any meeting I have ever attended." Do you have any idea why? He was investing more in the meeting than he had ever in his life. He was uniting his efforts with those of others. Do you often get out of a meeting more than you put into it?

Was the service last Sunday uninteresting? What did you contribute to make it a joy to be at the house of the Lord? Quit thinking and talking of yourself in a detached way when the congregation is considered. Remember, you are a part of the church, and as such you must supply your part. See that you do it well.

Industry was born in the garden of Eden. Nature is a most wonderful storehouse, and her supply seems to be inexhaustible, but you must labor for your sake and the sake of others before Nature will yield to you her blessings for long. Indolence and barbarianism go hand in hand. Activity is a law of life, and is necessary to development. Work is a saving grace, and it only can prevent your retrogression. You cannot be happy in the church if you do not work. Inactivity results in stagnation, and those who stagnate cannot be happy. Be more than an auditor at the church next Sunday.

If every member of the congregation of which you are a member were "just like you," what kind of a congregation would it be?

Personal Notes.

Cled E. Wallace baptized nineteen in Coalgate, Okla.

B. U. Baldwin is working with the church in Comanche, Okla. See the work there advance.

D. S. Ligon baptized three in Waveland, Ark. A congregation now meets regularly each Sunday in Waveland.

C. E. Wooldridge had an interesting meeting in Gilmer, Texas. He is now laboring with the church in Terrell, Texas, for the winter and spring months.

T. W. Phillips baptized twelve and five were restored in the meeting in Allen, Okla. With his son, O. E. Phillips, to assist him, Brother Phillips will begin a meeting in Mexia, Texas, November 6.

The nine congregations in Fort Worth, Texas, cooperated with the Central congregation in a recent meeting conducted by Brother Busby. There were about twenty baptisms and some twenty-seven other additions to the congregation.

From Ira Wommack, Sulphur, Okla., November 1: "I preached at Ardmore last Sunday. I have arranged to preach for them on the third Sunday in each month for a while. I go to Paul's Valley next Sunday for my regular appointment there."

T. M. Carney is entering his third year with the congregation in San Angelo, Texas. This is good news. It reveals the fact that the congregation and preacher are working for the advancement of the cause. The report from preacher and congregation is that the work has a brighter outlook than eyer.

J. B. Smith, one of the elders in the church in Vernon, Texas, reports that the work is growing. The largest attendance in Sunday school last Sunday ever. Great congregation. I was with them a month this summer in a meeting. Foy E. Wallace, Jr., has labored with them through two years.

Oscar Smith, who has been for several years with the church in Houston Heights, Texas, reports the congregation alive to the work. Brother Smith has just closed a meeting in Tenaha, Texas, with six baptisms. The Houston Heights congregation does mission work with Brother Smith to do the preaching, as well as through others.

W. H. George, who is now located in Bonham, Texas, has just closed a short meeting there, which resulted in five baptisms. The congregation in Bonham has some fine workers and the outlook is bright. I do not know of a place where there is not a general forward movement with the congregations, save the places where they allow some man to bind on the congregation his opinion.

J. K. Bentley is now in the winter work—teaching in public school five days in the week and reaching some point to preach on Sunday. Such men as Brother Bentley should be in the field all the while preaching the gespel. I do not intend to underestimate the necessity of teaching in the literary schools, but there are men who can do that work who are not qualified to preach the gospel. In the meeting in Mountain View, Okla., Brother Bentley baptized seven; and at Saddle Mountain twenty-five were baptized.

W. P. Skaggs, the consecrated minister with the church in Itasca, Texas, reports three baptisms in the work there. Too, he says the attendance in the Sunday-school work is larger than the church membership. How many congregations can make such a report? They are seeking the opportunity to teach the people the Bible. Recently Brother Skaggs drove out on Sunday afternoon to a schoolhouse a few miles from town and preached. This is a work preachers are doing in so many places—reaching some point in the afternoon for a service. W. P. Skaggs will ever be found in the front rank of aggressive work for the Master.

Sister Jennie Wilkinson, wife of U. G. Wilkinson, writes that Brother Wilkinson is confined to his home, being unable to answer calls for work. Brother Wilkinson has been a most useful man in the work of the Master, not only as a preacher in protracted meetings, but he has met much opposition in the field of polemics, having debated with infidels, socialists, as well as many false teachers who profess to believe the Bible. For the past three years Brother Wilkinson has been unable to be active in the work. It seems that he cannot recuperate from the "flu." Let us not forget to remember him in a substantial way. His address is Comanche, Okla.

W AT HOME AND ABROAD

C. R. Nichol is in a meeting at Cleveland, Tenn.

F. B. Srygley has returned from a good meeting at Celina, Tenn.

A. B. Lipscomb will fill a regular appointment at Olmstead, Ky., next Sunday.

Two persons were baptized at Twelfth Avenue, North, last Sunday. W. Silas Moody preached at both services.

Married, on Saturday, November 5, 1921, Mr. C. Hensley and Miss Lucy Rains, J. C. McQuiddy officiating. Congratulations.

Change of address: W. M. Mann, from Red Rock, Texas, to Lockhart, Texas, Box 413; P. D. Copeland, from Antioch, Fla., to 2219 Seventeenth Avenue, Tampa, Fla.; William P. Walker, from Burns, Tenn., to 320 Sierra Way, Dinuba, Cal.

A card from Mrs. E. S. Jelley informs us that Brother Jelley, our missionary to India, is critically ill with typhoid fever. She asks the prayers and support of God's children in this crisis. The address is Vambori, Christ House, District Ahmednagar, British India.

W. W. Freeman advises us that the church of Christ meets each Lord's day in Phillips Brooks House, Harvard Campus, Cambridge, Mass. If you should have a relative or friend in that city or near by who should be interested, write Brother Freeman at 5 Dana Street.

From J. C. Mosley, Dongola, Ill., November 3: "Our neeting is still going on at Wetaug. We had baptizing yesterday. The interest is good. Five were baptized at Christian Chapel. Many others are talking of being baptized. I do not know when I will get through here."

County Line Bible School opens on November 21, 1921. Term sixteen weeks. Bible-reading course one term. Ministerial training course in connection with Bible-reading course, sixty lectures on the preacher's life, and forty-eight sermon outlines. Two terms. Address S. C. Garner, Principal, Bakersfield, Mo.

Hugh H. Miller writes: "I have just closed continuous meetings with the Bear Wallow and Sycamore Chapel congregations, near Ashiand City, Tenn., the two meetings continuing ten and eleven days, respectively. Three were baptized and one reclaimed at the first place, five baptized and two reclaimed at the latter."

From M. S. Mason, Springfield, Mo., November 3: "I closed at Oldfield, Mo., with one addition, from the 'digresives.' I did much good in organization, appointment of officers, and strengthening brethren. I am now at Hutton Valley until November 13. I go from here to Mountain View, Mo., November 14-27. I can answer calls for any time during the winter."

From J. V. Armstrong Traylor: "On the last Sunday afternoon in October I preached to the small band of disciples at Shelbyville, Ky.; thence back to my appointment at West Parkland, in Louisville, Sunday night. They worship at the Strand Theater at Shelbyville and are striving hard to build a house, but they need help. Let each church send them a centribution. Send it to R. A. Craig, Shelbyville, Ky."

Brother McQuiddy officiated at two weddings recently. In the first the contracting parties were Mr. J. R. Bernard and Miss Cecil Hewitt. This wedding occurred on October 26, and the bride told Brother McQuiddy that he had performed the same service for her mother twenty-one years before. On October 27 Mr. James R. Wilkinson and Miss Nell F. Teasley were married. The Gospel Advocate extends heartiest congratulations to both couples.

From A. B. Blazer, Graysville, Tenn., November 3: "The meeting at Soddy, Tenn., continues, with increasing interest. An Armageddon meeting was begun a week ahead of ours. Two confessions last night and one the night previous. We are hoping for more. The meeting is to continue indefinitely," Some of our readers may ask: "What is an Armageddon meeting?" The editor does not know, but feels sure that Brother Blazer can explain, if necessary.

An Appeal from Bates, Ark.—Brethren, will you please send us a donation in time to reach here by November 27? We are putting Thanksgiving week on as a drive week to raise funds to build a house of worship. We have a nice lot paid for and a good little sum started for building purposes, but we need some assistance. If you are thankful for the Master's cause, manifest it by sending a donation to help us build a house. Maybe sometime we can help you. Send all contributions for this work to me or to C. T. Goforth, and you will be cheerfully receipted for it.—James L. Neal.

From R. A. Craig, Shelbyville, Ky.: "The work in Shelbyville is moving along, with good interest. J. V. A. Traylor spoke for the church last Sunday. Brother Traylor will labor some with the Parkland Church, in Louisville. Last Sunday I was at Parksville, morning and evening. We will begin a meeting at Van Buren next Sunday (November 6). We would like to get in touch with a good Christian doctor for Parksville. Write to Mr. George Hocker or W. C. White, Parksville, Ky. This is a fine field for a physician."

From A. B. Barret, Murfreesboro, Tenn.: "I closed at Columbia, after three Lord's days. Packed house, with a hundred or more turned away the first service and at several others. Large audiences at every service, and full house at closing. Three added at the last service; twenty-five all tcld—twenty-one baptisms. I shall return on April 9, 1922, for another meeting. Royal treatment from every one. Slayden is a great yokefellow. I am to begin at David Lipscomb College on November 6. I go to Fayetteville the first three Sundays in June, 1922. I am filling up my time for the year."

From E. D. Shelton, Cordell, Okla.: "In my last report there was an error made in regard to the number of students enrolled at the Western Oklahoma Christian College. It was stated that there were two hundred, when it should have been one hundred and thirty. This was my mistake. The work in both church and college is moving along splendidly. We are planning to have a wonderful time on Thanksgiving Day. A big dinner will be served at the college, to which all the friends and patrons of the college are invited. Also, there will be a program rendered which will consist of some numbers by the glee club and a number of speeches."

Under the leadership of Howard L. Schug, professor of modern languages in Abilene Christian College, a mission has been established for some time among the Mexicans of Abilene, Texas. A church has been organized, there being several converts among the Mexicans here. A building is soon to be erected. The Mexicans and the mission workers have raised about seventy dollars and the local churches' contribution amounts to about seven hundred dollars. Part of the labor of erection will be done by students of Abilene Cl. ristian College. Work is also to be started among the negro brethren of the city. Ben Holland, a senior in Abilene Christian College, is taking the lead in this work.

From J. Arch Houston, Ramer, Tenn.: "Charles A. Wheeler, of Jasper, Ala., and I began a meeting at Ramer on the third Sunday in September. Brother Wheeler did most of the preaching. The interest was great from the beginning and grew from the first service. The largest audiences that ever attended any meeting here. The visible results were eighteen baptisms. Brother Wheeler is now past seventy years old, and, having heard most of our great preachers, I am glad to say that I have never heard one that could get more scripture in a sermon than he can. This good old man cannot preach much longer and has not the means to carry him over old age. What are we going to do, brethren, with these worthy brethren who have proclaimed the gospel for more than one-half century? Shall we let them want in their old age? We cannot and 'speak where the Scriptures speak, and be silent where the Scriptures are silent."

R. T. Thompson, secretary of the McKellar Avenue congregation, at Memphis, Tenn., sends the following announcement: "F. L. Paisley, who has been laboring with the Mc-Kellar Avenue congregation for the past two years in the capacity of minister, has decided to leave the local work and enter the evangelistic field. He is leaving of his own ac cord, and every member regrets to see him leave. McKellar Avenue congregation has made a most wonderful record in the past two years, and the progress the church has made can be largely attributed to the work of Brother He will be in college at Henderson this winter and Paisley. in the field next summer. Any congregation who may secure his services on Sundays during the winter months or for a meeting next summer will be most fortunate, and we heartily recommend him. While the McKellar Avenue congregation has been unfortunate in losing the services of Brother Paisley, they have been most fortunate in securing the services of E. L. Whitaker. Brother Paisley will be with us until the middle of November, and Brother Whitaker will immediately take up the work."

Review of O. E. Payne's Book on "Psallo." BY M. C. K.

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY CONSIDERATIONS.

In consenting to make a public notice of this book, it is proper, under the peculiar circumstances attending its publication, that I should offer a word of explanation. This is made necessary, as the reader will see, by the author's disrespectful and discourteous use of my name in its pages and his wanton reflection upon my veracity, on account of which, all things else being equal, I should pay no attention whatever either to his book or to anything else he might have to say.

Before its appearance in print, Brother J. B. Briney and I were selected to examine the manuscript of his book and to submit to its author, if we would, a joint statement of our judgment of its argument. Brother Briney occupies the same doctrinal position with the author of the book; but, in conducting an argument, he knows how to be courteous and respectful toward those who differ from him; and, although on the question of instrumental music in Christian worship, it is a case of "war to the knife and no quarters" between him and me, yet we are on the most friendly and cordial terms, and I esteem him very highly, not only for his character as a Christian gentleman, but also for his attainments in the world of letters. When he finished his examination of the manuscript and turned it over to me, we agreed that, when I should complete my examination of it, we would meet and compare notes

But here a very unexpected as well as unpleasant situation soon came to light. I had not proceeded far with my examination of the manuscript until I was shocked as well as surprised that the author deliberately condescended not only to the use of positively discourteous and disrespectful reference to brethren differing from him on the subject of his argument, but that he would actually charge them with downright insincerity and willful misrepresentation! His style descended so far below the plane of common courtesy among Christians, charging me in particular with stating in my book on music what I knew was not true when I stated it, that I saw clearly before completing my examination of it that I could not, consistently with proper selfrespect, make any statement to such an author about such a production. Why should I make any statement at all to a man who says I state what I know is not true when I make statements? On page 201, referring to a statement of mine in my book, he says: "Then follows a statement which knowingly misrepresents." That is, according to this man, I deliberately made a statement to the public which I knew to be false when I made it!! If what he says were true, I would not be fit to be a member of the church of God. much less to be writing books attempting to instruct Christians in divine worship; and ordinarily when I discover such uncivil statements in a publication, I lay it down without reading another line of it; but, in deference to my arrangement with Brother Briney, I read it all and then invited him to dine with me at the Watterson Hotel, where we might have our proposed conference. We spent a pleasant day together, but I promptly informed him that I must respectfully decline to join in a statement to an author who, in the same breath in which he calls on us for a statement about his book, charges me with stating what I know to be false when I make statements. I suggested to Brother Briney that he, or some other friend in sympathy with the author's doctrinal position, ought to advise him to omit from the published volume the ugly things in question. Whether he ever so advised or not, I do not know; but as far as I can recall, practically all the ugly insinuations which marred the manuscript appear in the printed volume. In addition to those already noted, on page 71, those differing from him are "pettifoggers," they "employ chicanery," and do not believe what they say about psallo, but are only "feigning that the meaning of psallo changed"! On page 82 he says they have "pretended that the meaning had changed"! On page 142 he says if I had not already" said of record that the horse is seventeen feet high," I would now admit that "it is impossible to psallein without" instrumental music! That is, according to him, I have become convinced that the New Testament authorizes instrumental music in the worship, but because I have "said of record that" it does not authorize it, I belie myself by continuing to say that it does not! On page 189 he questions "the motive" of those differing from him and charges that their claim about psallo is a "fabrication"!

Now, when I clearly saw, as all who have made a thorough study of the field of evidence can see, not only that the argument of the book is wholly inconclusive, but that it is also marked by such incivility in style, I reached the settled conviction that it needed no review or reply whatever, but carried with it its own ultimate defeat, and hence decided to pay no further attention to it at all. But numerous letters and requests have reached me from intelligent men and women in several of the States and from Canada, asking me to review it; and hence, not because they think the argument is conclusive, for they make no such claim as the basis of their request, but because of the possible harm which such persons, whose judgment in such a matter I do not feel at liberty to ignore, think such a book may do among the uninformed, is my only reason for giving it any public notice at all.

Moreover, since consenting to notice the book publicly, I have gathered other significant facts in the light of which I will leave our readers to decide whether its author is reliable in his dealing with the language of other authors either living or dead. For example, on page 281, to give the appearance of dignity and force to his contention, this man professes to be giving a quotation from Dr. A. T. Robertson, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, of Louisville, Ky. He first gives the high standing of Dr. Robertson, his learning as a Greek scholar, his authorship of Greek grammars and numerous other books, and then puts in quotation marks and attributes to Dr. Robertson the following statement about me:

"We have a preacher by the name of Kurfees, here in Louisville, who is so much opposed to instrumental music that he stands aloof from, and will have nothing to do with, his own brethren who use instruments.'

Dr. Robertson and myself have both lived here in Louisville at the same time for more than thirty years, and 1 not only know him to be a scholar, but a Christian gentleman; and when I saw this alleged quotation, I felt morally certain that he had never made any such reckless statement about me; yet there it stood in quotation marks (!!) and attributed to him in this book! Hence, a few weeks ago, I addressed to Dr. Robertson the following letter:

> " Hotel Watterson, "Louisville, Ky., October 3, 1921.

"Dr. A. T. Robertson,

"Southern Baptist Theological Seminary,

"Louisville, Ky.

"My Dear Dr. Robertson:

"In a recent book by O. E. Payne, you are represented as aking the following statement about me: 'We have a making the following statement about me: preacher by the name of Kurfees, here in Louisville, who is so much opposed to instrumental music that he stands aloof from, and will have nothing to do with, his own brethren who use instruments.' Now, even if the statement with other remarks attributed to you did not have the appearance of a careless attempt to reproduce something from memory, still I could not, for a moment, believe that one in your station would make such a statement about me, and I would not even call your attention to it were it not in quotation marks and represented as your own deliberate statement. For this reason alone, I merely ask, did you ever make such a statement about me? Kindly let me hear from you, and oblige. Yours most fraternally, "M. C. Kurfees."

Without any delay, I received the following prompt reply:

"Southern Baptist Theological Seminary "Louisville, Ky., October 3, 1921.

" My Dear Brother Kurfees:

"I have your favor of October 3 relative to the book by O. E. Payne, which I have not seen. I only recall that some years ago a brother by that name came here from Canada to work in the library. I do not recall what position he took about instrumental music. I gave him data about some books that could help him and probably my own idea of some passages of which he asked me. The remark about you I do not recall at all, and certainly he took a lot of liberty to inject a personal remark into a book whether I said it or not. Certainly I have always had only the kindliest feelings toward you, and respect your right to your views about instrumental music as about anything else. judge Brother Payne to be a decided controversialist in the light of his use of me. Cordially yours,
"A. T. Robertson."

Exactly so. "A lot of liberty" indeed! Dr. Robertson no doubt stated, as was his unquestionable right, his dissent from the position occupied by myself and others on the music question, but never made any such statement about me as is attributed to him in this book; and our readers will see, before we are through, that this is a fair sample of the "liberty" which this author takes in dealing with the language of others besides Dr. Robertson. He may not belong to the class sung in the eighteenth century by Edward Young,

"Some for renown, on scraps of learning dote, And think they grow immortal as they quote, but he will likely gain some notoriety from his manner of quoting.

It is no part of my purpose, nor have I so promised, to make a detailed review of this book; but I shall call attention to enough of its contents and its method of argumentation to show that it is thoroughly inconclusive, not only failing to establish the author's conclusion, but that from its own premises, if they be true, it establishes a conclusion as repulsive to him and those standing with him as it is to his opponents-a conclusion which they, in common with the rest of us, heartily reject.

I begin my criticism of the doctrinal position of this book by calling attention to its title-page. Following the title of the book, "Instrumental Music Is Scriptural," the author places conspicuously on the title-page the following language of Lucian: "It is impossible to 'psallein' without a lyre." I am not wholly ignorant of Lucian's writings and his place in Grecian literature. In fact, as I write these lines, a copy of his works in the original, including the passage in question, is open before my eyes, and at the proper time, in the course of my criticism, I shall call attention to his remark and to its bearing and value in the present controversy. Suffice it to say just now that the author of this book has hit wide of the mark on Lucian, but my only purpose at this point is to examine the use which he makes of Lucian's remark. That he himself does not understand Lucian to restrict his words to a "lyre" exclusively, although Lucian uses the word "lyre," but that it merely means some kind of musical instrument, may be clearly seen by his own rendering of the same passage on page 140: "Paul tells us to 'psallo.' Lucian rejoins: 'That is impossible without a musical instrument.'" Exactly so; and later on we shall have further use for this important fact.

We thus far see that, according to this author's construction of Lucian's language, some kind of musical instrument is indispensable in obeying the New Testament command to psallein-that "it is impossible to psallein without a musical instrument." I heartily indorse this construction of Lucian's language; but to the position that it is restricted to the lyre, harp, piano, organ, or some other instrument made by human hands, which is the position of the book here under review, I respectfully demur. More of this at the proper time.

Then, in addition to this title-page display of Lucian and his passing remark about certain arts, the author parades Lucian and his little squib on eighteen other pages of his book, and on page 135, seemingly infatuated with the Grecian satirist's remark, he speaks of it as "that gem by Lucian." Well, before we are through with Lucian, we shall find that this "gem" adorns quite a different idea from that set forth by this badly misguided instructor in philology and Christian doctrine.

[EDITORIAL NOTE.—Another article will appear in two weeks, and subsequently, if not interrupted, an article every two weeks until our review is finished.]

Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.-Isa. 55: 6, 7.

Reading the Bible.

BY J. C. M'Q.

There is diversity of opinion as to the advisibility of reading the Bible in the public schools. If public schools are so bad that they will not tolerate the Bible, then the people should be good enough to discard them. For teachers in public schools to teach their peculiar views of the Bible would be one of the greatest calamities that could befall the religion of Christ, but to stop the reading of the Bible in the public school is also a great misfortune. Those who love the simple truth would look with no favor upon spiritualists, Jews, and Roman Catholics teaching their peculiar doctrines to their children, but the same parents will not stand for the Bible being outlawed and held as unfit to be read in the public schools. In the State of Washington the Attorney-General and the Supreme Court have rendered an opinion in which the Bible, in effect, is adjudged "a sectarian book" and in which it is decreed to be unconstitutional to read or teach it in the State schools. The New York Tribune reports that the Presbyterian Synod of Washington State is appealing from this decision. Here is a part of the published report:

The Presbyterians declare this ruling erroneous and that the State constitutional provisions so construed are void as in conflict with and repugnant to the principles of the Declaration of Independence.

"This ruling," it is added, "makes it impossible to obtain such knowledge in the school system of the State as all citizens are equally entitled to—instruction in the laws of nature and also of nature's God, which latter are spiritual and obtainable from the Bible."

Extensive arguments are presented to show that no State has a right to exclude from its system of education "instruction in the science of religion as set forth in the Bible—the only book which sets forth the existence, laws, and other attributes of the Divine Providence to which the Declaration of Independence is committed—without this exclusion being repugnant to the Declaration, and therefore void."

The presentment declares that within a few years after prohibiting the Bible from Washington schools it became necessary to create juvenile courts, jails, and correctional institutions, and so great was the demand for their use that people of the town and city began to make efforts to supply Bible teaching and moral training of youth attending State schools and colleges and were knocking at the back doors of their schools to which the law required their children to be committed for education, seeking recognition of Bible instruction.

It is declared that "the course of the State toward religion and the Bible will overcome all others. It took less than twenty-two years during the reign of Ahab, by favoring the teaching of Baal over that of Jehovah, to reduce the well-established Jehovah system to one prophet, while Baal's teaching had increased to over four hundred and fifty prophets."

It should not be overlooked that the one prophet of Jehovah was mightier than the four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal. The truth is mighty and will prevail. The Bible will live when the Supreme Judges in the State of Washington are dead.

The Literary Digest of October 29 contains the following:

But "it is hard to imagine that a worse calamity could befall religion than to have it interpreted to the youth of the nation by our public schools as now conducted," declares the Christian Century (undenominational). While the church will never rest easy under a judicial decree which calls the Bible "a sectarian book," the remedy is certainly not that being sought by the Washington Presbyterians, it says, and argues that though it is alleged that since the Bible has been outlawed in the public schools invented delinquency has increased—

"There has not been enough Bible in the public schools anywhere in fifty years to make very much difference to the child. It would be more sensible, though not yet wholly fair, to lay the increase of juvenile delinquency at the doors of the church. The church's slipshod method of teaching religion a half hour a week instead of devoting much larger portions of the time to this task is as notorious as it is farcical. The lack of conscience among church people on religious education is a failure of church teaching. What the church does have a right to ask the State is that the time of a child shall not be so monopolized by secular studies that he cannot pursue those fundamental studies which are the foundation of all ethical and spiritual attitudes. It requires in most States no new legislation to secure this fundamental right, since it is already conceded to Catholics, Lutherans, and Jews, and may be secured by evangelicals on demand."

The Christian Century is correct in criticizing the church for devoting so little time to the study of the Bible. It, however, does not go to the root of the evil, which is the home. How few homes have regular hours for Bible reading and Bible study! The Bible should be studied at least an hour every day, and the home is the best place for this study. Both the home and the church have been derelict and neglectful of duty in depending on unscriptural organizations to do the work of the Lord. Parents not only fail to teach the word of God to their children, but are guilty of sending them to universities where rationalism is taught, The decline of religion in the home and so many organizations such as the Interchurch World Movement are largely responsible for so little Bible study and so great a depletion of the Christian ministry. The Presbyterian agrees that the lack of freedom of speech in the pulpit, changes in religious emphasis, the decline of religious interest in the home, and the Interchurch World Movement have had an effect in bringing about a dearth of preachers. It says these four reasons have one root and really constitute one and the same cause:

The rationalistic semiraries have destroyed the faith of their students in Christ and the Bible, and they have left them without a divine message and turned them over to every wind of the doctrines of men. They have wrong thoughts of God, and some of them have become atheists. When they enter the evangelical pulpits, they find themselves in conflict with the people in faith, and they call this conflict the lack of freedom in the pulpit, when, indeed, it is the lack of faith in the preacher and his intruding upon the people teaching which they have intelligently repudi-A rationalistic congregation would not allow such ated. intrusion a second time. The change of emphasis in religion is the same thing: it simply means a change from the authority of the Bible to that of philosophy and religious consciousness. The Interchurch Movement was due to the same intrusive, presumptive, and reckless spirit, without the authority and without principle. It diverted attention from the power of the gospel to the power of organization. The decline of religion from the home marks the appalling ignorance of the Bible and the carelessness of parents and their prayerless indifference to the ministry. These, indeed, are the things which have depleted the evangelical ministry and disturbed and injured the evangelical church. have destroyed religion in the home and withered the coming crop of young preachers. They have robbed the present preachers of their message and sent them for occupation into the field of worldliness. The real evangelical ministry can be obtained only from the God of the church, who hurls them forth in answer to the prayer of his people. when through teaching the people fail to believe in the Bible and its promise upon prayer and in the God of prayer, they will not pray for a ministry or anything ele.

R. H. Boll's Kingdom Theory.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The editor, in speaking of the fulfillment of Dan. 2: 44, says, "The kingdom of God comes with destructive impact upon the fourth [kingdom represented by the image] and supersedes it," and then adds: "No such thing has happened, yet Rome has gone. Has God's word failed?" O, no, God's word never fails, but the foolish interpretations men put upon the word of God fail; and that is the exact truth in the case before us. His literalistic vision has so beclouded his brain that he emphatically asserts, "No such thing has happened." Of course no such thing has happened in the way he interprets it; and that is not all—no such thing ever will happen as he predicts. He is compelled to admit that the Roman Empire constituted the fourth kingdom represented by the image, and he is also compelled to admit that the Roman Empire is gone; hence, he says, "Rome is gone," Very well, if, as he says, "Rome is gone," does not that disprove his contention that the kingdom foretold by Daniel has not been fulfilled?

Now, if he is going to hteralize the language of Daniel, let him be fair and stick to his work all the way through. He must have a literal mountain and a literal stone cut out of the mountain, if he is going to contend for a literal power in the destruction of the fourth kingdom. He should know that the entire image is but a figure, and that God used the strongest figurative language in describing its destruction. Christ said: "Think not that I came to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword." (Matt. 10: 34.) Does any one claim that "sword" here means a literal sword? There was a power exerted by Christ so powerful that it had to be illustrated by a carnal weapon, and yet it was a spiritual or moral power. This is shown by his next words: "For I came to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law: and a man's foes shall be they of his own household." Was this done by physical or literal power? If not, why should it be contended that "no such thing has happened" as the destruction of the Roman Empire as foretold by Daniel? If God can destroy the union of families without using literal power, can he not destroy the union of a nation in like manner? Note the following regarding the reign of Christ: "And there shall come forth a shoot out of the stock of Jesse, and a branch out of his roots shall bear fruit. And the Spirit of Jehovah shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of Jehovah. And his delight shall be in the fear of Jehovah; and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither decide after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and decide with equity for the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth; and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his waist, and faithfulness the girdle of his loins." This is strong language, but who will dare say that physical or carnal power is meant by the word "sword?" If not, why conclude that such power is meant in the destruction of the Roman power by the kingdom represented by the stone?

But it matters not what means God used in the destruction of the Roman Empire in so far as the editor's doctrine is concerned, for he admits that it is gone. But he is a resurrectionist, and resurrects the Roman Empire reincarnated in "the beast of Revelation," for he says (page 299): "The beast of Revelation is identical with Daniel's fourth beast, for according to Daniel the divine program is, four world powers-then the kingdom of God." He becomes more emphatic in his reincarnation of the Roman Empire in these words: "The Roman world power, then, though now it does not exist, is to return." (Page 300.) It is, according to Boll, to exist again in "the beast of Revelation." (Rev. 13 and 17.) Was there ever in the history of this world wilder or more complete speculation about the Bible than this? The Gospel Advocate has charged that R. H. Boll was a speculator; and if there is one person of sound mind and unbiased judgment that cannot see from his own writings that these charges are absolutely true, then I am badly mistaken. See how he entangles himself with his reincarnation of the Roman Empire! "When it returns, the Roman power will be in the form of a ten-kingdom confederacy under one dominant head, which fact is indicated by the toes of the image." He found "ten toes" on the image, and he must find in his reincarnation process ten things to correspond with the ten toes; hence his beast of Revelation. But the Roman power was divided, and in the division there were only four heads, and the beast (Rev. 13) has seven heads and ten horns. A wonderful lack of fitness in the editor's reincarnation process! Furthermore, the beast had ten crowns, altogether too many to fit the Roman power. But the editor tries to fix the matter by having these ten kings a "ten-kingdom confederacy under one dominant head;" but the Roman power had no such arrangement.

I submit that any doctrine concerning the kingdom of God or anything that pertains to man's salvation dependent upon such patchwork and wild speculation as indulged in by R. H. Boll in an effort to have Christ come back to this earth in a body of flesh and bones to sit on David's throne and rule the world with a rod of iron is not worthy of respect, and I only notice what he says on the subject because of the false reports that he has been misrepresented and the division he has brought about among the children of God by his false and foolish doctrine. No fair-minded person will charge those who oppose false teaching with being responsible for whatever division may result from such opposition.

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY.

Best Premium Offer to Preachers.

The greatest preachers of the past two centuries attribute much of their inspiration and usefulness to Matthew Henry's Commentary on the whole Bible. Born in the seventeenth century, his name and his work still live and are household words. Thousands of homes treasure this commentary second only to the Bible, and many a man traces his right start to the loving advice and homely counsel of Matthew Henry.

Charles H. Spurgeon said: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering sparrows around an old gable toward the close of autumn." Dr. Philip Schaff, compiler of Schaff's Bible Dictionary, pronounces it "the best practical and devotional commentary for English readers." Here you will find a mine of expository knowledge and a complete preachers' commentary.

The management of the Gospel Advocate is fortunate in securing twenty-five sets of this unrivaled commentary, which will be sent as a premium to every preacher who will send twenty-five new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2.50 per year. This is undoubtedly the most attractive premium offer ever made to preachers. You will receive six portable volumes of twelve hundred pages each, large, clear, unbroken type, with substantial Roxborough binding, and will have the satisfaction of knowing that the work of the prince of commentators is in your library. If you wish to pay cash, the price for the six volumes is $17.50, not prepaid. When sent as a premium, we pay all charges.

Suggestion to Churches. If you wish to give your preacher a gift that he would prize always and at the same time get the best religious weekly in the homes of your members, get busy and send us the twenty-five subscribers. Your effort will help the church, please the preacher, and encourage the Gospel Advocate. Sample copies of the Gospel Advocate and subscription blanks furnished upon request. Let us hear from you promptly.

PUBLISHERS GOSPEL ADVOCATE.

The Smallest Soldier of Them All.

Mignon was her name. She was a small, fuzzy-haired dog with round, black eyes and restless tail. She could walk on her hind legs and shake hands and do other cunning tricks. And now she was a soldier of France.

She had left a very pleasant home in the country, where she was the pet of the whole kousehold, to come to this training camp for dogs, behind the fighting line. Her new master was a kind soldier in blue, who spent much of his time patiently teaching her new tricks.

First, she had to get used to the noise of the big guns. Then she must learn to crouch close to the ground or hide in a deep hole when a shell screamed. Most important of all, she had to be taught to go swiftly from one place to another with a message in a little pouch which was tied around her neck.

One morning, before daybreak, as little Mignon was dreaming pleasantly, she heard her master's voice calling: "Come, Mignon. You and I must fight this day for France."

With a glad little cry, she sprang up and followed him as his regiment marched to the firing line. The battle was terrible, but she never left her master's side.

At last word came that the German guns had destroyed the French telephone wires. Unless the French commander could get a message to his men on the other side of the field, the battle would be lost.

"That is easy," said Mignon's master, as he patted her head. "Here is a brave little messenger."

When the pouch with the message was securely fastened at her neck, Mignon's master whispered in her ear: "Go, little Mignon. I know you will not fail. Have I not taught you myself? Go! You fight for France!"

Off she darted. The soldiers watched her run swiftly for a few yards and then crouch as a shell exploded overhead. Once they thought she had been killed by a German gun, but when the smoke lifted they saw her far in the distance, dedging and running forward. At last she arrived safely with the precious message. The day was won for France.

Later, Mignon's regiment was paraded before the great general to be honored for bravery. And Mignon was there. She, too, received a "Cross of War." "For," said the soldiers, "if it had not been for Mignon, we could not have won."—Selected.

Cleanliness of Animals.

Some people believe that animals prefer uncleanness—at least, that they do not care. Most people have seen the house cat "doll up" by the use of her tongue and paws, but they would be surprised to learn that most other animals, too, prefer to keep clean. I have heard more than one stockman say that cows would stand all night rather than lie down on badly solled bedding. Sometimes horses all but speak their gratitude to the keeper who curries them. Dogs, too, especially among the house pets, generally show aversion to filth. I have known a fox terrier and a cocker spaniel who would invariably wipe muddy paws on the doormat before entering the house. Of course, they had been trained, but they learned with significant ease. The terrier once worried himself nearly sick over a smear of green paint on his pretty coat.

All animals of the cat family use the tongue for toilet purposes, washing the face by moistening the paws and rubbing fhem over the eyes and nose. The prickles on the tongue make a good comb, and enable puss to polish her coat very satisfactorily. These prickles (or papillæ) on the lion's tongue are nearly a quarter of an inch long and can be used with the severity of a blacksmith's rasp when the animal so desires. The rabbit washes its face just as the cat does, and mice and bats also rely greatly on licking.

The honeybee carries its comb in the foreleg and uses it to clean the antennæ. Some beetles are similarly equipped with a comb, which forms a deep notch protected by a spine at the lower end of the front tibia. Flies of all sorts use the fine fur on their legs as a comb for their wings and bodies.

Owls, herons, cormorants, and other birds use the foot for a comb, the claw of the middle toe. Larks and some ducks have a sawlike blade running along the inner side of the claw.

Snakes soak themselves; elephants dust themselves and enjoy their bath. Buffaloes, tigers, and some bears like to wallow; the polar bear likes his frigid dive, and spends half his time in the icy arctic waters. Monkeys scratch themselves continually, and this is more an effort at self-currying than a search for parasites. The horse, both wild and domesticated, likes his roll. That wild beasts attach considerable importance to ablutions and drinking is evidenced by their behavior toward each other at the "water hole" when they are seldom attacked by others not of their own kind.

Nearly all birds believe in personal neatness; some take great pains to pluck out with their bills all frayed or ill-shaped feathers. They separate their feathers and carefully pick out all particles of refuse. Pigeons, cockatoos, and larks like their bath in the form of a copious rain; game birds and poultry prefer the dust bath; but the sparrow loves to combine these styles—he takes a dry dust shampeo, then plunges into the water.

Close observation will show that practically all insects and animals have some way of preserving cleanliness. The observer will be struck by the pride that most of our dumb friends manifest. From the prancing race horse and strutting peacock down to the humble bat, each has some degree of pride. Watch the care with which the butterfly folds its beautiful wings before going to sleep. Some of us are not nearly so careful of our clothes on retiring.—Our Dumb Animals.

Raven: "Croak! Croak!"

Robin: "Good morning to you, Sir Raven. I said, 'Good morning.'"

Raven: "You seem very merry this morning about nothing."

Robin: "Why should I not be merry? Spring has come now, at last, and everybody should be so happy."

Raven: "I am not happy. Don't you see those black clouds above us? It is going to snow one of these days."

Robin: "Very well! I shall keep on singing till it comes, at any rate. A merry song will not make it any colder."

Raven: "You are very silly. The wind is so cold. It always blows the wrong way for me. It is always too warm or too cold. To be sure, it is pleasant now, but I know that the sun will soon shine hot enough to burn one up. Then to-morrow it will be colder than ever before. I do not see how any one can be so silly as to sing at such a time as this. How can you?"

Robin: "Well, my friend, where is your snow?"

Raven: "Don't say anything; it will snow all the harder for this sunshine."

Robin: "And snow or sunshine, you will keep on croaking. For my part, I shall look on the bright side of everything and have a song for every day in the year."—Adapted.

Church Notices in the Daily Papers.

BY FRED M. LITTLE.

Since it is so common for the denominations to publish programs announcing their efforts to entertain the public, I thought it would be a good idea to let the public know that the Lord had made a program for the entertainment, instruction, and edification of his church. Both the daily papers of the city published it just as submitted. I am sending the same herewith. If you desire to give it to the readers of the Gospel Advocate, you may do so. I think it is helpful to give as much publicity as possible to the work and location of the places of worship. Also, get the public to understand that the "Christian Church" is one religious body and the church of Christ another. Here is the announcement:

Church of Christ-Catoma Street. Fred M. Little, minis-Residence, 33 South Goldthwaite Street; telephone Bible school convenes at 9:45 A.M.; patrick, supervisor. Morning worship at 11 A.M. The fol-Vocal music. (See Col. 3: 16.) Warren Allen win un-Vocal music. (See Col. 3: 16.) Prayer is next in order. this feature of the worship. (1 Thess, 5: 17.) A discourse will be delivered as per Acts 20: 7. The subject of said discourse is, "The Bride, the Lamb's Wife." An exhortation will be given at the conclusion of the sermon as directed in 1 Tim. 4: 13. We next will eat the Lord's Supper according to the instructions of 1 Cor. 11: 23-29. Then we contribute of our means to obey the command given to the church. (1 Cor Preaching at 7:30 P.M. Subject: "Heaven, and Who Will Be There." Chalk Talks for Teachers.

There has been a long-felt need of a book which would enable any person who can speak to a class or an audience to give a helpful, inspiring, illustrated talk. We are glad to announce that we have secured such a work. It is entitled "Crayon and Character," and is the work of B. J. Griswold. With this book in their hands, parents can teach the children a simple, fascinating method of drawing, and at the same time make the great truths of life a part of their everyday learning. It is especially adapted to speakers who earnestly want to give illustrated talks, but who feel that they "can't draw a straight line." Practically all subjects are covered, and full instructions are given as to how to make the talks effective. The price of the book is $1.25, postpaid. Order from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

Christmas Stories and Legends.

The above is the title of a new book for children, which was compiled by Phebe A. Curtiss, author of "White Gifts for the King." No greater teaching force has ever been discovered than the story, and no one has ever lived who used that force so skillfully as did our Great Teacher. It is not strange, then, that among all the stories that have ever been written or told, none are so dear to us as those which center around his birth. Young and old alike delight in them and never tire of hearing them. Each story in the new book has its own sweet lesson. It makes an exceptionally pleasing gift for the children. The price is $1.25, postpaid. Order from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

FIELD REPORTS

Tuscumbia, Ala., November 6.-The meeting in Tuscumbia seems to be doing fine. Six grown persons were baptized this afternoon, and the house was not large enough to accommodate the crowds to-night, though the aisles and rostrum were crowded full. Many were turned away.-G. A. Dunn.

Montgomery, Ala., November 2.am now in a meeting in Montgomery, preaching for the Highland Park congregation. The meeting starts off fairly well. Brother J. H. Hines labors with this congregation. I find them to be loyal and true, and it seems that brotherly love exists among them. Brother Hines is alive to his duty and is loved by every member of the congregation.—R. E. L. Taylor.

Fresno, Cal., November 3.-The meeting at the Nevada Avenue church of Christ was a success in every way. Brother J. W. Ballard, of Oklahoma, did the preaching, and did it well. Brother Charley Sewell, of Madera, Cal., led the singing to the satisfaction of all. The crowds were large, the interest was good, and six persons were baptized. Brother Ballard is now at Dinuba. He goes from there to Tulare; thence to Hanford, where he is to begin on November 20.-W. Halliday Trice.

Hardin, Ky., November 2.-I was recently called back to Altonia, this county, where I held a mission meeting last July, to baptize another believer in Christ at that place. preached four gospel sermons and baptized an intelligent man who is the head of a large family. Others are expected to yield obedience to our Master soon. There is talk of building a church house there, but I suggested that we build up the church in the community first, then the house.— H. W. Jones.

Ruppertown, Tenn., R 2, November 8.—Brother Will Morton, of Columbia, Tenn., has just closed a six-days' meeting at Topsy. Ten persons were baptized and one returned to duty. Brother Morton did some able preaching and aroused the people as they have never been aroused before, though we have had some very able preaching, most of which was only one or two sermons at a time, except the meeting of Brother Lark Hinson in the summer, who first started the ball rolling. There are thirty-four members here, but no church.—L. D. Whitehead.

Athens, Ala,, October 30 .- I am still here in Northern Alabama preaching the gospel. Last Lord's day I preached south of Holland's Gin, three miles, in Brother Hezzie Hodge's home. We Brother Hezzie Hodge's home. We had a small crowd, but a nice one. The song service was fine. Muskogee, Okla., October 31.—In August, 1917, I made an appeal for funds to build a church house in Muskogee. Many churches responded with ready mind. Reports were made through the papers of all funds received. Such conditions arose that I deemed it unwise to make further efforts to raise money at that time, and returned some of the funds that I had received, with the explanation above. The funds I had on hand were safely guarded until an opportune time arrived to build. The time came this summer, when we added to the on hand and purchased a with the restrictive clause in the deed. good sister advanced the money to build the house. We purchased the lumber and used all the economy we could in building the house. We are able now to meet in the house, and yesterday we had an all-day service, with dinner and supper on the ground. Many visitors from other congregations met with us, and a happier congregation never met than C Street Church. Brother J. C. Hamilton, of Haskell, favored us with his presence Brother J. C. FIELD REPORTS

Dolores, Col., October 27.—I am now in a series of meetings at Lebanon, seven miles west of this place. We believe it will be a success. This is the third meeting I have held at this place since living in Colorado. On last Sunday I united Brother A. W. Arnold, of Dolores, and Sister Mittle Burnett in marriage. Brother Arnold has accomplished more for the cause than any other man I know of in the State of Colorado.—Willis G. Jernigan.

Columbus, Ohio, October 31.—The meeting with the congregation in this city started in a promising way yesterday. All things working together, we look for a profitable meeting. The one seemingly real handicap is a lack of room to hold the audiences; but the brethren here hope to build soon, and then we look for real and the results in the way of additions of the church. This is a great to store that We now have a noble band of disciples of the Lord here, as I think.—A. A. Bunner.

Walling, Tenn., October 31.—I have been here a week. This is within sixty miles of the home of Alvin C. York. The summer home of Fielding H. Yost, the famous football coach, is in sight the famous football coach, is in sight of here. Since I have been here a Ford ran over a goose and killed it, I married a run-away couple; several young men have been drunk on "moonshine" whisky; a still has been captured near here; I find three men carrying bullets as a result of former fights; somebody robbed the post office; last night three men were shot—one accidentally by stray bullet—no fatalities; one baptism. It looks discouraging, but I am holding on.— Earnest C. Love.

Nashville, Tenn., November 7.-Last Sunday I was with the church at Donelson. The members of the church seem to be alive and energetically engaged in work and worship, interesting Sunday quite an school. Dr. Boyd leads the advanced class, and does it well. Brother Alex Perry is of great assistance in the and worship. He is always ready and willing to do his part in the service, and more. Buffalo, W. Va., November 3.—We are having some fine meetings here now; but I am not able to conduct than two or three successful meetings each week. I am, however, doing a good deal of real mission work in other ways. I am some better now; and if my friends will stand by me, I may continue to improve in health: if they do not, I cannot foretell results, as I am not well by any means. My trouble is of a dangerous character. Those wishing to help me will please act now. Do not wait for me to write you, as writing reduces my strength. Address Box 81, Buffalo, W. Va. We have succeeded in paying part of our last lumber note. I think that one hundred and fifty dollars would let us out on everything, so far as the church house is concerned. Please send your offering now, stating what it is for. We cannot pay the balance of that note without help, as we have exhausted our resources in building.—F. P. Fonner.

Franklin, Ky., October 31.-Last night closed our series of meetings at this place, with Brother H. H. Adamson, of Lewisburg, Tenn., doing the preaching. Truly did we have a gospel feast worthy of report. Brother Adamson preached with the power and force that can be accorded those only preach the word" without fear. New Lamp Has No Wick, No Chimney, No Odor. Most Brilliant Light Known.

A new lamp, which experts agree gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. H. Hoffstot, 466 Factory Building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity; gives more light than three hundred candles, eighteen ordinary lamps, or ten brilliant electric lights, and costs only one cent a night-a blessing to every home on the farm or in a small town. It is absolutely safe and gives universal satisfaction. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Hoffstot to have every home, store, hall, or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant, white light; and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of the Gospel Advocate who writes him. This Month and Catarrh.

Many people find that during this month catarrh is so aggravated by sudden changes of weather, indiscretions in the matter of clothing and other things that it becomes constantly troublesome.

There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula also relieves catarrh and aids in the prevention of consumption.

It is not easy to see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its remarkable successes. It is called by its proprietors "America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease"—Catarrh.

In some cases there is occasionally need of a thorough cathartic or gentle laxative, and in these cases Hood's Pills are taken with very satisfactory results.

The Montana Mission.

BY W. F. LEMMONS.

The debate with W. P. Bootman, Mormon, at Mona, Mont., is a matter of history. It is safe to say that the debate, which lasted six days, was a success, for it served to settle the matter with those who were about to accept Mormonism and confirmed the brethren in the faith. The church is not more than a year old, having been planted as a result of the mission work which is being done by Brother J. O. Golphenee. The first gospel sermon was preached there a year ago, and over twenty obeyed the gospel, and the church has had a steady growth ever since and now numbers more than thirty members. Some of those who are members were Lutherans, Catholics, Methodists, and Baptists. They Scandinavians, Germans, and Americans

All this goes to show the result of the Montana mission to which I have called attention before. In 1919, my first visit to this field, we had one church in the State, and Brother Golphenee was the only preacher. In the early part of last year Brother Janes undertook the job of raising funds to keep Brother Golphenee in the field. and succeeded until he left for Japan. Since that time I have had the principal part of the effort in my hands, and we have kept the fires burning on the altar ever since, through the liberality of the brethren whom we could reach through the papers. Five congregations are now meeting on the first day of the week in a radius of one hundred miles from Elmdale, the home of Brother Golphenee and the original congregation. The growth and interest among the people is surprising, and one cannot get on that field without hearing the Macedonian cry from different parts for the gospel. I had several calls while I was there, but I could not go, as I had engagements that I had to reach.

There is no mission work that is accomplishing so much, considering the time and investment. It is paying one hundred per cent on the dollar. Shall we keep it going? This depends upon the liberality of the church all over the country. More men need to be sent into the field, as it has grown until one man cannot do all the work that is needed to be done-cannot reach all the places that are calling for the gospel. This is doing foreign missionary work at home, because many of the people are foreigners who speak broken English.

Another thing, the Mormons are doing their best now. Since we have commenced the work, they have awakened to the fact that the people are not Bible readers and that they can make more converts in a section like that than where they know more of Mormonism. Hence, they have three or four men now on the field at work. Shall we sit idly by and watch the Mormons take the field from us? Surely not. We are going to depend upon the church to help in this work until we can put more men in the field, which we must do not later than next spring. It is a hard field to work, as it is a new country. People live in crude houses, most of which are made of sod and are poorly arranged. One has to wade through real hardships to do the work. There is no such thing as ease. One cannot take a soft seat in the parlor and enjoy the modern conveniences we enjoy in preaching in the South. The real situation can only be expressed in actual experience on the field. This was my third trip to that field. I understand the situation and know the needs. So I am calling on the brethren to continue to contribute to the work. Send your donations direct to J. O. Golphenee, Elmdale, Montana.

Let it be remembered that this work does not belong to any of the factions -neither Somner, Boll, nor anti-Sunday school. It represents the church of Christ-the body. I have no patience with factions, and would not give my influence nor work to build up any of them. Neither will I aid nor abet in their destructive work. I am opposed to the common method and attitude that is displayed toward such factionists. I believe that they ought to be exposed; that the brethren everywhere ought to be furnished with a list of their names, that they may be 'marked and avoided." A heretic after the first and second admonition is to be avoided, if the apostle Paul is to be accepted as reliable. Their work is the work of destruction.

May the good Lord bless the Gospel Advocate in the fine work it has done and is still doing in educating the church to loyalty to God's word.

God's Plan for Unity.

BY H. M. PHILLIPS

There seems to be a plea on the part of many that discussions be kept out of our religious papers in order to have unity, while some plead that friendly discussion is a means of bringing unity. It is likely that extreme positions are taken and that a happy medium can be occupied in keeping with truth and grace. All are agreed that to speak as the oracles of God means unity, but it is a little hard to thus do till we know what the truth is as stated in the words used. To merely repeat the words without knowing the meaning would not be the plan of God, but it is necessary to both use the exact words as written and the meaning of the words used. Scholars tell us that some words have different meanings in different passages; so we must all be able to discern that, lest we be divided. It is very likely that a fair discussion will make such clear,

Since Christ and the anostles were free to discuss certain questions and teach directly to the people who needed to make the change, it is but natural for man to think it is right to do so now. In Paul's writings it is easy to see that he believed it good to present the truth directly, so as to do away with error, as he did to the churches at Corinth and Galatia.

There is a kind of discussion that deals more in personalities than with the subject in hand, which often causes one to be prejudiced against the real argument presented. This, of course, should be inhibited, and must be, if God's plan for unity is worked or ever reached. The sweet-spirited theory, to say nothing that will contradict what has been said by another, very likely will mean to say nothing at all. We might all keep quiet, and thus, at least, we would not be divided in words; but that is not God's plan. He says for all to speak the same thing. But as all interpret what is said in the light of the knowledge possessed, it is necessary that our knowledge be at unity. As an example, if we all say that Cornellus was "of the Italian band," we are at unity so far; but if one preacher insists that he was a great musician (for the Italians are such), and another says it does not refer to a band of musicians, but to soldiers, it is easy to see how unity is had in reading or pronouncing the words, but division as to the meaning of the words. So it surely follows that for unity to be is not only to speak as the oracles of God. but to clearly know the meaning of what is spoken.

Christ prayed for all to be one who believe on him through the words of the apostles, and there is no other way for unity to be had in Christ. If it is a help for me in understanding the words of the apostles for a friendly discussion to be heard or read, may I not be glad of such and think it is good, even if many discussions are failures?

I really think people are not so much opposed to arguing or discussing Bible subjects as they are to the manner in which it is done. Each one should define clearly that to which he objects. Christ and the apostles were very firm and a little rough in some statements, but I feel sure it was all to promote unity. Very likely we should not call one another what Christ called the people in Matt. 23 or what Paul called the man in Acts 13: 10: but there are times when the sweet, sugar-coated talk is not fitting to the case. Do you think that Christ and Paul failed to show the spirit of God in either case? To condemn a thing that is not according to the Book is but to follow the word in reproving and rebuking. To do such in the strongest terms in keeping with the word of God, in the height of a real discussion, is but to put into practice God's plan for unity. All backbone and no flesh is but a skeleton; all flesh and no backbone is a freak; but with a fully developed body is as God made human beings. To be as God wants us to be is to look sin squarely in the face and rest on God's words used by us to condemn it, and then teach the ways of righteousness in soberness and truth, and follow it though it means tribulations and even death. Unity may mean division in one's own home, in a congregation, in a paper, but never a division in Christ. The man who cannot talk religion without getting mad surely needs to become religious. We need more men who will contend earnestly for the faith Be sure to speak as God speaks; know what he means and practice it faithfully, and real unity will be the result.

THE TRIALS OF A HOUSEWIFE

How They Have Been Endured and How Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Experience of a Providence Woman

Providence, R. I.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a female trouble and backache. It began just after my baby was born, and I did the best I could about getand I did the best I could about getting my work done, but I had awful bearing-down pains so I could not stand on my feet. I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the good it was doing other women, and I have got dandy results from it and will always recommend it. You can use these facts as a testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. HERRERT L. CASSEN. 18 Meni Court. HERBERT L. CASSEN, 18 Meni Court, Providence, R. I.

Ohio woman for three years could hardly keep about and do her housework she was so ill. Made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound: Fayette, O.—"For about three years I was very nervous and had backache, sideache, dragging-down pains, could not clean at right, and had no sone.

not sleep at night, and had no appetite. At times I could hardly do my housework. I got medicine from the doctor but it did not help me. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in a newspaper and took it with good results, and am now able to do my housework. I recommend your medicine to my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. CHESTER A. BALL, R. 15, Fayette, Ohio.

An Illinois woman relates her experience:

Bloomington, Ill.—"I was never very strong and female trouble kept me so weak I had no interest in my housework. I had such a backache I could not cook a meal or sweep a room without raging with pain. Rubbing my back with alcohol sometimes eased the pain for a few hours, but did not stop it. I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and six bottles of it have made me as strong and healthy as any woman; and I give my thanks to it for my health."—Mrs. J. A. McQuittry, 610 W. Walnut St., Bloomington, Ill.

The conditions described by Mrs. Cassen, Mrs. Ball, and Mrs. McQuitty will appeal to many women who struggle on with their daily tasks in just such conditions—in fact, it is said that the tragedy in the lives of some women is almost beyond belief. Dayin and day out they slave in their homes for their families—and beside the daily routine of housework, often make clothes for themselves and for their children, or work in their gardens, all the while suffering from those awful bearing-down pains, backache, headaches, nervousness, the blues, and troubles which sap the very foundation of life until there comes a time when nature gives out and an operation seems inevitable. If such women would only profit by the experience of these three women, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the natural restorative for such conditions it may save them years of suffering and unhappiness.

Berlin, Ga., October 31.-Brethren Claus and Boyd, of Valdosta, were recently with us in a short meeting at Troy Schoolhouse. There were five additions-four baptized and one from the Baptists. The work here is progressing nicely, the attendance and interest on Lord's days being good. spoke at Troy yesterday on making our calling and election sure,-Adair P. Chapman.

Forest Hill, La., November 3.—A few weeks ago I held a ten-days' meeting at a schoolhouse six miles from Forest Hill, the results being three from the Missionary Baptists and a man seventy years old from the Primitive Baptists. It was at this place last January we had the pleasure of taking by the hand an old minister of the Bap-tist Church and hearing him say: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. I want to be a Christian only, and to own him Lord of lords."— C. C. McQuiddy.

Howell, Tenn., November 2.—I am now at Howell. Unfavorable weather has been a great hindrance. The congregation at this place was established several years ago by our "automobile" brethren, but that element has long since become "nil," and the old "landmarkers," though few in number, are holding together. We have some fine people here, but they are somewhat discouraged. This congregation is about midway between We Fayetteville and Petersburg, approxi-mately six miles from either place. Both of these congregations could, if they were so disposed, render consid-erable help to the faithful few at Howell.—C. E. Holt.

Tompkinsville, Ky., October 28.—1 am at this place for the night, to preach, as I suppose, a trial sermon. I have just closed one of the best meetings of the year with the faithful at Dry Fork, Ky. This is the home of our good brother, J. D. Smith, who was with us the last half of the meeting, and who rendered much help in his efficient way by prayer, reading, songs, and sunshine of life that he put into the work. He has done a great work in his home country and is counted as pure gold tried in the fire. It is worth much to me to be associated with such a godly man and learn lessons at his feet. I found many noble Christians at Dry Fork, and they treated me royally. I go from here to Green's Chapel, in Ken-tucky: then to Cloverport, Tenn.; then home.-Frank Baker.

Rives, Tenn., November 1.-It was my pleasure to meet with the brethren at Dyersburg last Lord's day. When I lived there four years ago, there were only about ten faithful members that met in the courthouse. Everything seemed to go against them. But about two years ago they managed to purchase the Methodist meetinghouse, which is a beautiful building, located right in the heart of the town. This was right in the heart of the town. a great help to strengthen the congregation, and now they number about fifty. Brother J. W. Dunn has moved there and will begin his work for them on the first Sunday in November. Bright prospects are in view for the cause of Christ there now. The "diFREE TO Morrillton, Ark., October 31.-I here give a brief report of meetings I have held during the summer at Formosa, I preached nine days, with no visible results, but had large, attentive crowds throughout the meeting. This was my fourth meeting at Formosa. I was with the brethren near Dabney for five days. Five were restored to their "first love." I was at a mission point near Caglesville, where the gospel had not been preached until I preached three sermons in June of this year. One lady was baptized then, and five were baptized during this meeting. One was a Freewill Baptist. The Baptists challenged me for a discussion. I suppose the debate will come off in January. I was with the Gravel Hill congregation, near Gumlog, nine days, and had one bap-I am now at Healing Springs. in Benton County, to be here over two Lord's days. This is another mission point. The church at Cave Springs will assist in supporting me in this meeting. We have a fine congregation at Cave Springs. I will preach a few nights for the congregations at Rogers and Cave Springs after we close out here.-R. H. Johnson.

Why My Family Takes Internal Baths

When I was a boy, I was full of health, strength, vigor, and ambition. Strenuous play and activity kept me in good shape most of the time; but once in a while, in spite of my exercise, my stomach or liver got out of kilter, and then mother stepped in and dosed me back to normal.

You see, the combination of continuous activity and simple remedies was all that was needed.

But, when I arrived at manhood and entered business, there was a different story

Instead of getting sick quickly and over it the same way, I would be away below par for some time before I knew what was the matter with me.

And when the liver dld assert itself and I was really incapacitated, I found that the old favorite remedies did not work as well as of old.

They would be partially successful for the moment, but headaches, constipation, and biliousness, with all their attendant ills, became more and more frequent-

Until one day, praise be, I heard of the Internal Bath, tried it, and have been entirely free from those universal ills ever

On discussing this with a physician friend, he told me that accumulated waste in the large intestine is by far the greatest foe to good health, fully ninety per cent of all illnesses being attributable to that cause

That it is impossible for the vast majority of people to eliminate this naturally because of our present mode of living-

And the reason that a scientifically correct Internal Bath, used with proper regularity, is by far the best means of elimination, is because it thoroughly cleanses the lower intestine its entire length and keeps it as sweet and free from poisons as nature demands it to be for perfect health.

After I proved what it would do for me, I decided that my family would have a remedy in childhood that would be just as resultful in old age.

That's the reason my wife and children take Internal Baths, and none of the children dread the ordeal as I did medicine when I was a boy, either.

The common sense of this treatment is particularly interesting, and all its details are contained in a little book called "The What, The Why, The Way of Internal Bathing," written by Chas, A. Tyrrell, M.D., who, I am informed, made this method his life study and practice.

Tyrrell's Hygienic Inst., 134 West 65th St., New York City, makes it a practice to send this book, entirely free of cost, to any interested person who will mention having read this in the Gospel Advocate.

Personally, I am so enthusiastic on the subject that I think it a duty every one owes himself, or herself, to at least be informed on this subject, when it costs nothing to do so.

The Joyner-Winkler Debate.

BY R. C. WHITE.

Thomas Joyner (Cumberland Presbyterian) and Herbert E. Winkler (Christian) debated for two days the following proposition: "An alien sinner may become saved in answer to his own prayer before and without submitting to the ordinance of water baptism." Joyner affirmed; Winkler denied. J. W. Wheeler (Baptist) moderated for Joyner; I moderated for Brother Winkler.

There were two sessions each day of two speeches each. The audiences were good all the time, but larger the second day. The people were very attentive. I believe good was accomplished. Reid's Chapel, some four miles north of Glasgow, Ky., was the place of the debate. The best of feeling seemed to prevail. With only a very slight exception on the part of both speakers, they followed the rules as laid down in "Hedge's Logic," save in Mr. Joyner's third speech. In this he freely violated rules and was promptly called to answer.

There were several Presbyterian preachers in attendance. The following brethren who were present gave great encouragement: Emmett Creacy, F. H. Woodward, W. D. Emberton, Tolly Phemister, J. E. Speakman, W. T. Dunagan, and J. W. Dennis. Brother Dennis began a meeting the night the debate closed (October 19).

Mr. Joyner really debated the "faith only" theory all the way through. Brother Winkler fully met his arguments, and the brethren were fully satisfied, so far as I know. He was at some inconvenience, as his house and some valuable notes and books were burned the week before.

The brethren at Canmer and Green's Chapel asked for the debate to be re peated at each place. This was agreed upon and November was set for the time at Green's Chapel.

Mr. Joyner and moderator challenged us to a debate next summer on four propositions, but Brother Winkler thought not enough importance to the one pertaining to forgiveness complete prior to the cross. They refused the whole unless this was included. They may come to agreement later. This grew out of the statement that all sins before the death of Christ were not absolutely forgiven, but only rolled forward.

Mr. Joyner's position on "bind" (Matt. 16: 19) was amusing and ridiculous when Brother Winkler made it clearly to be seen from 1 Cor. 7: 39 that it does not mean stop, but ratified, required, in these passages. Mr. Joyner used John as great proof, but Brother Winkler made it clear that Christ's will as applied to us is since his death, and used Heb. 9: 15-17 to great advantage. This is a very important scripture. One great stronghold of Mr. Joyner was that Mark 16: 16 is spurious. Brother Winkler gave good authority on its genuineness, and with diagram on the board made a forceful argument on obedience.

Ousts Rheumatism.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system, by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expels the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way lujure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar falls to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial, and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after nsing Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price, 50 cents. Paying the Last Debt.

BY A. ELLMORE.

We have heard it said of persons who had just died that they had "paid the last debt!" But, so far as I am concerned, I never contracted such debt. I have nothing to do with this death but to suffer it. This chilling ordeal was passed upon our first parents as a result of sin, and, being of their offspring, I must suffer the consequence. It was but just for Adam and Eve, who did the first sinning, to suffer this death, since this was the penalty for the transgression. But millions have suffered death who had never sinned, but were as pure as angels-viz., infants. And do infants pay debts? If so, who contracted them? No: Adam's sin takes his posterity into the grave. Hence, two things come upon man unconditionally: (1) As by Adam all die. (2) even so by Christ shall all be made alive. These are forced upon us. We have nothing to do with them but suffer them.

Many people say that Christ paid this debt! Then why force man to pay it again? But death is not a debt, but a consequence. In order for man to be forgiven, Christ had to shed his blood and die. Why this plan I do not know; but after his resurrection it is easy to see the terms of remission of sins. Physical death was forced upon man by the sin of his parents, but Christ will have made good this loss when he raises all mankind from the dead.

Now, when we have carried these frail bodies until they have become useless and burdensome, we will take them to the Cashier of heaven's bank, who takes them on deposit and gives us a check for a new body, indorsed by the President of the Universe, and payable at the resurrection in a new body like unto his glorious body; then the Spirit enters this new body, and man becomes glorified, and enters that rest which remains for the people of God.

What a blessing that a Christian can die! For in no other way can he put off this corruptible body, and through no other avenue can he enter that blissful state, except through the gate of death.

The Biggest Bargain in the History of Poultry Raising

Introductory offer-we want the whole world to know the wonderful properties of this famous egg tonic.

Send No Money

Two regular dollar sized packages of TWO-FOR-ONE sent C. O. D., postage paid, for $1.00. Or, so that larger poultry yards may thoroughly test and prove the correctness of our claims, we will send six full dollar-size packages of TWO-FOR-ONE C. O. D. for $2.00; you save $4.00. Two for one dollar or six for two. Take your choice. Offer good only until present stock is exhausted.

Giving Away Our Profit

Those who have used TWO-FOR-ONE, those who have had actual experience in their own poultry yard, know what a money maker it is, know it tones up the flock, keeps hens in good condition, makes them lay, day after day, even during the molting season. We do not have to spend any of our money to sell them: they are only too glad they can still obtain TWO-FOR-CNE. They order it from us regularly and we do not have to offer them any inducement except the sterling value of this marvelous poultry tonic.

To Convince You

This advertisement is to convince those who do not know about TWO-FOR-ONE to give it a thorough trial and therefore we are willing to give up our profit; yes, even a part of the actual cost to us in order to make you one of our regular customers.

Make no mistake about it, TWO-FOR-ONE is one of the wonderful discoveries of the twentieth century, and if you will once use it long enough to see the real effects on your flock of hens, you will never be without it.

A Genuine Egg Producer

TWO-FOR-ONE is not a medicine or a drug in any sense of the word. It is positively guaranteed to be harmless in every way. It will not injure your flock; in fact, it is just what we claim it to be, a good tonic. It keeps your hens in per-feet health, makes them lay larger eggs, better eggs and more of them. It helps to make every chicken yard a profit produser. It takes a lot of the doubt and risk out of poultry raising. Those who kept hens for profit were eager to find a genuine article that would do away with their losses during cold weather and the molting season. They secured just what they wanted in TWO-FOR-ONE and are constant users of this great discovery of modern times. All predictions point to a cold, snowy winter and you know your hens need help in cold weather if you want eggs.

Here's the Proof

You need not take our word for it, you need not rely on this advertisement, you need not take any risk whatever. Our files are full of bonn fide unsolicited letters from those who have used TWO-FOR-ONF, and these letters are open to your inspection at any time.

Undeniable Evidence

Doubled egg yield

Since using your TWO-FOR-ONE our amount of eggs daily has doubled. We have 8 chickens and within one month we received 210 eggs. Frank Uecke, Mich.

100 hens average 93 eggs daily

Here is the result for February of 100 hens after using TWO-FOR-ONE-93 eggs a day or a total of 2,697 eggs and they are still shelling them out at that rate.

Observe These Rules:

- 1. Any man, woman, girl, or boy living in America but re-siding outside of Philadelphia, who is not an employe or relative of an employe of E. J. Reefer may submit an answer. It costs nothing to try.
- 2. All answers must be mailed by post office closing time, Dec. 10, 1921.
- 16. 1921.

 3. All lists of names should be written on one side of the paper only and numbered numerically, such as 1, 2, 3. Write your full name and address on each page in the upper right hand corner, If you desire to write anything else, use a separate sheet.
- 4. Only such words as appear in the English dictionary will be counted. Do not use obselve twords. Where the plural is used the singular cannot be counted and vice-versa.
- 5. Words of the same spelling can be used only once, even though used to designate differ-sent objects or articles, or parts of objects or articles. An object or article can be named only once.
- 5 Do not use compound words, nor any words formed by the combination of two or more com-plete English words, where each word in itself is an object.

- 7. The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of names of visible objects and articles shown in the picture that begin with the letter "L" will be awarded first prize etc. Neatness, style, or handwriting have no bearing upon deciding the winner.
- Candidates may co-operate in answering the puzzle, but only one prize will be swarded to any one household; nor will prizes be swarded to more than one of any group outside of the family where two or more have been working together.
- 9. There will be three independent indges, having no connection with E. J. Reefer, who will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the contest, and participants agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.
- 10. All answers will receive the same consideration regardless of whether or not an order for Reefer's "More Eggs" is sent.
- 11. The announcement of the prize winners and the list of words will be printed at the close of the contest and a copy mailed to every person sending an order for "More Eggs".

William Jennings Bryan on "The Sin of Suppose"

It was charged that Paul brought Greeks into the temple. In our text we learn that the Greek referred to was Trophimus, "whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple."

What an indictment will be found upon the books against Dame Rumor in the last day! Property has been destroyed, hopes wrecked, and even lives taken because rumor led people to suppose.

I was once asked to give, for a symposium on the subject, an answer to the question: "What would happen if, for one day, every person told what he knew about other persons?" My answer was that nothing could be of less advantage to the public or of greater harm.

In the first place, half of the evil that we think we know about other people is not true. It comes to us upon the authority "they say," and we have no time to verify the statement even if we have inclination to do so.

Of the half that is true, most of it ought not to be told. "To err is human," and there is enough wrongdoing in every life to make all charitable. What excuse can there be for dragging forth from their hiding place the sins that have been repented of? Or the mistakes that have brought those who committed them in agony to high resolve? Gossip is uncharitable.

And it is probable that those who were so quick to make false accusations against Paul were actuated by reasons entirely different from those which they proclaimed.

Even a little experience in life is sufficient to convince any one that the indictments made by clamorous tongues do not always state the real cause of offense. As Demetrius, the silversmith of Ephesus, when he feared Paul's success in preaching the gospel to the Ephesians would rob him of his business of making shrines for the city's goddess, concealed a selfish reason in his praise of Diana, so to-day we find mercenary motives cloaked in righteous indignation.

CURRENT COMMENT

By A. B. L.

The ever-increasing number of suicides is a matter of frequent comment, and with some it is causing serious concern. We should have more than a morbid or curious interest in such a problem. If we seek an explanation at all, it should not be purely from the viewpoint of the student of human nature, but we should be actuated by a desire to help the unfortunate and the discouraged ones of earth. The editor of the Baptist and Reflector thinks it highly probable that the real cause of suicide may never be known. He writes as follows:

Various causes are alleged, and perhaps there are not two cases which have exactly the same explanation. Ill health, resulting in a nervous collapse, is doubtless the most common cause. But self-preservation is the first law of physical nature. One who destroys himself is either temporarily or permanently beside himself. But the extent of moral responsibility, we believe, depends on how far the victim is personally responsible for the cause of his trouble. The strain of business or professional life is not the only explanation for suicides, since self-destruction takes place among farmers with whom the stressful life is not so common, although it is far more frequent than in former days.

There may be an element in the cause of it which obtains also in that of the crime wave, and that is the cheapness with which human life is regarded. The man who does not, for any cause either moral or nervous, place a proper valuation upon his own life does not hold the lives of others dear to himself. But, at the most, this is only a part of the cause in any instance of suicide, and, we take it, is not the case at all in most instances. Whatever the cause may be, we think it is time the alienists and nerve specialists give the matter scientific and serious attention.

Perhaps the best thing to offer along this line is not to call attention to the suicides, but the hundreds and thousands of people who pass through fiery ordeals, bear the strain of business or professional life, endure calumny and vituperation, and fight their way through years of untold suffering, and do not commit suicide. This is the brighter side of the picture that should be brought to the fore. There were times, no doubt, when they became terribly discouraged; there were black moments of darkest despair when even they contemplated the awful step of taking one's own life. There are passages from Job and in David's Psalms which can only be explained by a consideration of the moods that come to a man who is swept by the waves of adversity. But how glorious the thought that the better nature prevailed! They were led to the very brink of despair, but did not fail over. They almost failed, but not Something saved them in the terrible crisis. What was it? Surely it was their unfailing trust in God. was the only thing that could possibly have saved them in such an hour. David cries in a time of great distress: "Truly my soul waiteth upon God: from him cometh my salvation. He only is my rock and my salvation; he is my defense." David's best friends might turn a deaf ear to his cries; even his father and mother might forsake him; but God stood ready to lift him up.

One way that God sustains and rescues people from self-destruction is by sending them the very message they need in the darkest hour. We sometimes say that he "moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." But there is nothing mysterious in the way he intends to help the downhearted. That is where Christians come in. It is heaven's plan that we should speak words of comfort and good cheer to all who are in distress. It is no poetic fancy that a "word fitly spoken" may often save a human being from suicide, or that the refusal to do our duty along this line may lead to fearful results. Time and again has the power of an encouraging speech to tide one over a rough place been demonstrated. And would it not be a fearful thought to know that we had not spoken the word that would have saved another's life! Or, what is equally as culpable, that we did something or said something that helped to drive another mortal to an untimely end! There is a world of meaning and responsibility couched in the expression, "my brother's keeper." Christians need to learn the important lesson that their everyday speech may be "a savor of life unto life or of death unto death." Paul exhorts that we do good as "ye have opportunity." Surely at a time when the whole country is deluged by a crime wave and suicides seem hardly less than epidemic, the Christian will find the golden opportunity for doing good.

None of God's children are immune from unworthy thoughts. They may crowd into the hearts of the purest and best. If one of God's greatest prophets reached a point so tense with disappointment that he prayed for death as a relief, we need not be surprised if others reach the same point. The best way to keep our hearts free from evil is to fill them with good. The mind, like nature, abhors a vacuum. It is not enough to cast out the evil from our minds; we must also fill them with the good. I have been comforted by the words of Archibald Alexander. He said: "I cannot choose my surroundings, but I can choose my thoughts. I cannot hinder evil entering my mind; but I need not, unless I like, bid it welcome and ask it to stay.

It is strange to note how the advocates of a big religious denomination can sometimes find scripture for its existence and practices, and rest in the complacent belief that they are doing things just like Paul. For example, read the following from the Baptist and Reflector:

When the distress of the Jerusalem Christians became so acute that it was necessary for believers elsewhere to contribute to their necessities, the apostle Paul put on a campaign for funds among the churches of Galatia with splendid success; and in writing to the church at Corinth (1 Cor. 16: 1-4) he says: "As I gave orders to the churches of Galatia, so also do ye." The Corinthian Christians were The Corinthian Christians were urged to cooperate with the churches of Galatia in the campaign for the relief of the need which existed at Jerusalem. Funds contributed for this purpose were placed in the hands of responsible parties who transmitted them to the object to which they were given. This is exactly the principle and the plan of organized cooperative work among Baptists to-The money given by the churches is distributed to the causes to which it was given by reliable agents authorized by the churches to make such a distribution. Here is a splendid New Testament precedent for the way and manner in which we are doing the Lord's work. Let us see to it that the results are as great as the methods are scrip-

No complaint is made against our good friends, the Baptists, for raising money and distributing it through responsible agents for worthy objects. The complaint is rather against the unscriptural organization they have built up and the human devices they employ in conducting their various "campaigns." They have taken Paul's command concerning the collection for the saints to be made upon the first day of the week (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2) and the liberal action of the Antioch Christians in sending relief to their stricken Judean brethren by the hands of Barnabas and Saul (Acts 11: 30) as an excuse for a vast human organization, not sanctioned anywhere in the New Testament. The fact that many of the Baptist churches fail to meet on the first day of the week, save when they have preaching, shows clearly enough how far away they are from Paul's methods. Brother, you suggested a good patch, but it is too small for the sore. By the way, we hear much of "campaigns" nowadays, but where do we ever find the word in the New Testament? When Christians everywhere do their duty, the campaign is always on.

The Stranger and the Song.

BY SALLIE WILKINSON.

A little maid was singing at her play The song her mother sang to her at the close of day, Her childish voice rose sweet and clear upon the sum-

And o'er and o'er these words she sang:

"Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber, Holy angels guard thy bed.

A stranger was passing that way. He was alone, and his heart was sad, For he had traveled the downward road. "O, how unlike the long ago! I used to hear that song when but a lad." Then like a flash there came to him The memories of the past:

" Jesus, lover of my soul, Let me to thy bosom fly; While the nearer waters roll, While the tempest still is high."

The stranger's life had sinful been. His eyes were running o'er with tears, for the song had reached his heart. He heard again the childish voice:

"Just as I am without one plea, But that thy blood was shed for me!"

The stranger knelt, and as he prayed He fixed his eyes on heaven. O God," he eried, "to thee I come, poor, wretched, blind; Helpless I am, and full of guilt; But-O!-thy promise I believe O Lamb of God, I come! I come!"

The stranger rose with sins forgiven, And joined in with the song:

'Just as I am thou wilt receive: Wilt welcome, pardon, cleanse, relieve; Because thy promise I believe-O Lamb of God, I come! I come!"

Abraham-His Call.

CY H. LEO BOLES.

The human family had become corrupted again in ten generations after the flood; it had forgotten Jehovah, the Creator. It was not Jehovah's purpose to desiroy the people again with a flood, nor yet to baptize the earth with fire, nor visit the earth with any universal judgment. It was his purpose to select a man, and through this one to form a nation to be his witness upon earth, and make of this nation a channel for his blessings to flow through and cover the whole earth. This nation must be trained for this mission; and in order to train it, it must be separated from the other nations of earth and from social and religious contact with idolatrous people. It must be placed under special and peculiar instruction and intrusted to the guardianship of Jehovah's will. There must be implanted in the heart of this nation a hope which shall inspire it and keep it encouraged until the fullness of time, until the promise of the Savior shall have been fulfilled.

Abraham was the man chosen. He is one of "the world's gray fathers" and the beginning of the patriarchs. In the calling of Abraham we have the beginning of that race of people which is still figuring in the world's history. With Abraham begins the streamlet, solitary and bleak, in an idolatrous country. As the history is unfolded we see this streamlet spreading into a broad river in the Israelitish nation, and this broad river is augmented by many tributary streams until its swelling and deepening channel covers much of the earth as the knowledge of Jehovah is increased and the fulfillment of the promise of the Christ is realized. One man, a family, a nomadic tribe, many tribes, a growing and powerful nation, and then mingling and commingling with all the nations of earth-this is the outline in brief of the fleshly descendants of Abraham. In external aspect this people did not vary much from other peoples of the world; there was nothing outwardly to distinguish them definitely from the other descendants of Shem. However, there was another aspect which the surrounding peoples and tribes saw not. This was the purpose of God being unfolded in this chosen people.

The will and purpose of Jehovah began to take definite aim in the selection of Abraham. It is expressed as follows: "Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto the land that I will show thee: and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and be thou a blessing; and I will bless them that bless thee, and him that curseth thee will I curse: and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 12: 1-3.) Some scholars have thought and contended that Abraham did not receive the call until he and his father had migrated to Haran; others have maintained that he received this call while at Ur. Stephen says: "The God of giory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran, and said unto him. Get thee out of thy land, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall show thee. Then came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Haran." (Acts 7: 2-4.) This seems to make it clear that Jehovah called him while he was in Ur of the Chaldees and "before he dwelt in Haran." The call as expressed in Genesis (12: 4) says: "So Abram went, as Jehovah had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him; and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran." Critics have tried to find a contradition in the accounts given in Genesis and the Acts. There is no contradiction. The facts indicate that Jehovah called Abram while in Ur, and Abram, in response to the call, migrated to Haran, and then, after remaining in Haran for a few years, Jehovah repeated more specifically the call at Haran. These facts are in perfect harmony with both records.

There are several things of interest and importance as we study more closely this call. Jehovah said unto him: "Get thee out of thy country." He is to go out from Urget out of that country. It seems that this part of the call is definite in this respect—he is to get out of that country; but it is indefinite as to where he is to go. The second item of the call states that he is not only to get out from that country, but that he is to go out "from thy kindred." He is to separate himself from Mahor's family and the different branches of it. There must be a complete separation from his kindred. The call is still more specific and a separation still more definite and complete. He is not only to go out from that country and from his kindred, but also "from thy father's house." This call expresses a clear and definite separation from everything and everybody that seemed to be polluted with idolatry. There was to be an outward separation from his country, his kindred, and his father's house; there was to be an inward separation from the thoughts of idolatry, the worship of idols, and the pollution of the same.

Abraham's call illustrates the first clear conception that God gives us of sanctification or separation. The primary meaning of separation is sanctification. Abraham must change his environment, and then Jehovah gradually begins to separate him from the idea of idolatry or many gods and to impress upon him the idea of one God. The call of Abraham was a call of sanctification. It is symbolical of our call to-day. All who are trained in the service of the Lord must separate themselves from the world. As God's people to-day, we are his called out and must walk worthily of our calling, keeping ourselves unspotted from the world. One must separate oneself from all evil companions and associates; one must separate oneself from all wickedness and sin and walk as did Abraham, by faith. There must be an outward separation with God's people to-day; there must also be an inward separation; the heart must be purified, the life cleansed. It seems that Jehovah was giving the fundamental teachings of the Christian life in Abraham's call.

How did Jehovah call Abraham? Did he speak to him directly from heaven as he afterwards spoke to Moses, or did he speak in a vision? Did he speak to him with an audible voice, or did Abraham have a premonition? Did Jehovah speak to Abraham through Abraham's conscience, or was Jehovah developing in Abraham "the categorical imperative?" Was there a blind urging in Abraham's feeling to leave that country, or did Jehovah send his spirit into Abraham's soul and through it guide him away from that country? The record does not state how this call to Abraham further than Jehovah's speaking unto him. We are not told how Jehovah spoke. It is enough for us to know that he did speak and that Abraham understood.

The Disarmament Conference at Washington.

BY PRED M. LITTLE.

The world is looking to the international conference for the Ilmitation of armaments for relief from pestilence, destruction, and carnage caused by war. The wives, the mothers, and the children of the millions of the dead beseech these national representatives to do something to end war. They are to decide the sort of world we are to have in the future—whether it is to be a world of strife and confusion and hunger and death, or a world of peace and prosperity and happiness. The result of their deliberations will be the answer

In 1914 the world's military forces were mobilized for death and destruction. In 1921 emaciated hands, weary eyes, faltering voices, and cries of the dying plead for the same unerring judgment and the same unswerving loyalty to be applied to mobilize the entire nations of earth for constructive work of peace.

For four hundred years the leaders of men have been saying with their tongues that right-thinking nations should arbitrate their differences just as right-thinking individuals should. The time has now come to do so, in order that the barbarism of war shall forever be relegated into the limbo of forgotten things. An era of international peace can be established throughout the earth now, if race prejudice and false patriotism and blind passion and national arrogance are left at the door of the conference chamber, and if in their stead a spirit of good will, mutual respect, and tolerance is admitted.

May the God of heaven give the representatives in the conference at Washington the courage to carry out fair and just decisions, the power to withstand pressure from all reactionary interests, and the vision to perceive the world's great_need.

With these ideas in view, the church at Catoma Street adopted the resolutions herewith and sent copies to the President, to the Senators from Alabama, and one to the Representative of the Second Congressional District of Alabama:

We, the church of Christ at Catoma Street, Montgomery, Ala., assembled for worship this sixth day of November, 1921, realizing that—

Whereas the spirit and teaching of Christianity is, "On earth peace and good will toward men;" and,

Whereas it is our prayer and the prayer of all Christians that nations "shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning books; and nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more;" and,

Whereas war and preparation for war are contrary to these principles and do not make for the nation's peace, prosperity, and happiness:

Therefore, we do invoke the blessings of God upon the representatives of the nations in conference at Washington on November 12 to consider the disarmament of all nations, and do hereby pledge our support to our President, and do urgently request him, together with the Senators from Alabama and the Representative of the Second Congressional District of Alabama, to exert all the influence at their command to consummate ways and means whereby disarmament may be effected.

A Generation of Butterflies.

In a recent address Dr. Henry van Dyke made the remark that nobody charges that the present generation of young people is a generation of vipers, but that there is cumulative evidence that it is a "generation of butterflies." And the smiles and approving nods which went about the audience indicated that he had done something more than make a clever-sounding phrase.

A butterfly is a pleasant feature in the landscape. Its light body and gay, shimmering wings give pleasure to the onlooker. Something would be missing if all at once it disappeared to return no more. But its contribution to the life of the word can hardly be counted as valuable as that of many less gaudy creatures who take life more seriously and who go about their work without advertising themselves by brilliant colors or airy graces.

Young people who are gay, both in manner and costume, are interesting objects as they appear on the horizon, and possibly the days would be somewhat more drab if they had no place in them. But one remembers occasionally that if they are nothing more, they are drones, living on the fruit of the industry of others, and wonders whether they return value for what they receive. The world became tired of kings because they were expensive and oftentimes trouble-some ornaments. It also becomes tired of people who assume that they have a claim on the world's support, whether or not they are doing anything to forward the work of the world. The slacker was execrated in war time; peace will not forever tolerate him.

General charges are always dangerous and seldem true. But it will be found that they have some background. And the current charge that large numbers of young people are irresponsible, living merely for the delight of the moment and with no due sense of obligation toward the world and its work, will be found, even if it must be qualified a good deal, to have some truth back of it. One has only to walk the streets of a great city like Chicago or New York and to observe carefully the people whom he meets to discover the situation which prevails, only a lesser scale, in all parts of the country. Eating, playing, and dressing are the serious business of life to multitudes; while praying and giving and working are side issues, if, indeed, they have any place at all. Butterfly life is in the ascendant and everywhere conspicuous.

But butterfly life, if brilliant, is short and the ending dark. And the generation of butterflies is living a life which leads nowhere; the future has no promise for such. Moreover, unless life means more than this, it is not worth living. To fly about a light until the wings are scorched and one falls helpless to the ground is not to win anything either for eneself or for others.

Life is more than a chance to play and to drift. There is hard work to do, there are loads to lift; only as one does the work and lifts the loads does one bring to light the hidden powers and joys of his own life. There are fellowships to be known and spiritual powers to be realized; only as one discovers this does one become of moment and does life become of real value. In him is the outlook on immortality; he must see this and live as an immortal if the days are to be really good. America is a great country to-day because we had forefathers who lived lives founded upon the word of God, who took righteousness seriously, and who confidently counted themselves heirs of immortality. If America to-morrow is to be good, it will be because the people of this generation do more than live on the surface.

We make here no general charges against the younger generation. The thing Dr. van Dyke said of them might be said against large numbers of people, old and young. But according to the measure of truth there is in it, it is commended to the serious thought of our people. Is this a generation of butterflies? If so, what of the morrow?—The Baptist.

Notes on Modern Science.

BY U. G. WILKINSON.

The modern scientist, which generally means the smattering speculator in the realms of physical nature, who never ventured to read the Bible any or study the relationship of creatures to an infinite Creator and their accountability as such as revealed in the higher realms of faith, hope, and love, while boasting of his great scholarship, is usually the least learned of men. He ignores the highest realms of human existence, the intellectual and moral. Faith, which soars like the eagle, is unseen by him; while reason, that creeps like the frog, is his god. He spends his time studying antiquated bone piles, and, with him, men and women can no more help being wicked than a dead horse can keep from stinking. Merit no more attaches to righteous living than that an orange deserves it for smelling and tasting good. With him, there are no rights and wrongs. He leaves this to preachers and women and children. Men are above such common things. With him, there is only a brutal struggle for existence everywhere in nature, as is found in physical nature, at the expense of the slaughter of millions and survival of the fittest.

Jehovah Elohim, the Lord God of Jew and Christian, If such there be, did not create the world as taught by the Bible. Too big a job for him. According to his astute ideas, physical nature disproves it a la geology and evolution. While it is indeed true that about all that is taught by these "sciences" (falsely so-called) is discredited, most of it is pure speculation, unproved and unprovable, constantly being abandoned and renewed, hundreds of theories living and dying, at least an average of one each year. These theories fly in the very face of the accumulated wisdom of the ages, deriding faith, denying revelation, denouncing our holy religion of exultant hope and trembling fear. But this does not discourage him. He still insists that truths which have withstood the storms of raging centuries are overthrown and made nil by his chimeric theory. Verily, for an example of genuine credulity that would be scorned by children, commend me to the modern scientist. His ability to believe is certainly well developed for a skeptic.

But if Jehovah could not create the world, and Jove and the Olympian gods have been by modern progress relegated to the dusky shades of Nowhere, something did, for we are here. Something is responsible for our being here, as we have not always been here. Who or what, then, is to blaze for our existence? Perhaps "the great god Pan is the fellow—the irrational, insensate fetish called "nature."

But does nature originate? Not so far as we have ever been able to determine. But maybe it is so because we don't know it. Surely even science agrees that there is much that we don't know, and why not this be one of the things? Never, so far as we know, since nature has operated under the present system of laws which prescribes her bounds and says to her, "Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther," has she ever been able to originate one single cell of organic matter and life force without preëxistent, active, parental generation and birth. And each and all after its kind. Science never has nor ever can account for the genesis, the origin, of anything. It knows even little enough about things as they exist. What it doesn't know would easily fill the universe with books if written. And yet it speaks with the assurance of Omnipotence about things of which it knows nothing and cannot know anything, disposes of questions of infinity, dismisses the idea of divine revelation and all the learning of the ages with a sweep of the hand and a guess, unworthy of consideration by the astute wisdom assumed to be possessed by the so-called "natural scientist." Such science may be right because we don't know it; but no other thing ever known has relied on a "don't know" for its highest proof. Surely we have yet to thank our Father in heaven that the proposition still stands, "By faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God" (Heb. 11: 3), though science knows it not.

But should it be granted that only the fittest survive in nature, which is undoubtedly true when properly considered, then the right must in all cases finally prevail, since it is most surely the fittest. It was for this very reason that God destroyed the ancient wicked nations who forgot him and "did not like to retain God in their knowledge" (Rom 1: 28), that he might make way for his chosen people, and fulfill through them his oath-bound promise to Abraham to "bless all the families of earth" through his chosen seed (Gen. 22: 15-18; Gal. 3), which he is to-day accomplishing through Christ, before our very eyes, with such wonderful precision. Will he not destroy us as the unfit, as he did nations of old, if we forget him and his word, for the same reason? And had we not better restore his word, speedily and reverently, to its proper place in our literature and education before we perish?

This survival of the fittest stretches into eternity itself; for at the judgment seat of Christ must we stand or fall according to our fitness. (Rev. 20: 10-15.) There the unfit, those who transgress the laws of nature and of nature's God, will be speedily and finally disposed of. And here again is so wonderfully manifest that striking analogy that exists between God's revelation of himself in nature and in the Bible—an analogy that is everywhere so manifest to the careful, reverent, and prayerful student of the wonderful works of God, both in nature and the Bible, both in the natural and the spiritual world—thereby proving with unmistakable certainty that the Bible is divine.

Brother, let us teach it to our children and our children's children, morning, noon, and night, upon rising up and lying down, walking in the fields or sitting in the shades, in the home, in the schools—university, academy, high school, low school. Let us write it upon their memory and "in their minds and hearts." (Heb. 8: 8-12.) Let us not be content to cease with our own, but with that love which "seeketh not her own" (1 Cor. 13: 5), let us teach it to our neighbors and their children, to saint and sinner. It will be the richest heritage that we can bequeath to them. Gold and earthly treasures must soon perish, but this is meat that will endure and forever satisfy the hungering and thirsting soul, and finally obtain the "inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you." (1 Pet. 1: 4.)

Christmas Stories and Legends.

The above is the title of a new book for children, which was compiled by Phebe A. Curtiss, author of "White Gifts for the King." No greater teaching force has ever been discovered than the story, and no one has ever lived who used that force so skillfully as did our Great Teacher. It is not strange, then, that among all the stories that have ever been written or told, none are so dear to us as those which center around his birth. Young and old alike delight in them and never tire of hearing them. Each story in the new book has its own sweet lesson. It makes an exceptionally pleasing gift for the children. The price is $1.25, postpaid. Order from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

"The Sin That Stands Conveniently Around Us."

As has been stated in the articles gone before, the sin known as "the sin which doth so easily beset us" is the sin we can most 'easily" and most "conveniently" commit; and it is easy because it is, as some have called it, "the sin of our constitution," "the sin of our trade." When Paul stood before Felix and "reasoned of righteousness, and of self-control, and the judgment to come, Felix was terrified [trembled], and answered, Go thy way for this time; and when I have a convenient season, I will call (Acts 24: 25.) The inconvenience of thee unto me." Felix's yielding to Paul's teaching on "righteeusness" should not be hard for us to see; for it meant that he had to turn absolutely around and go against his whole carnal nature, because he had been living for years a most proffigate life. The inconvenience he would encounter to yield to Paul's teaching on "self-control" should not be difficult for us to see; for self-control he had never practiced; he had simply let self have his own way, had endeavored to satisfy his every fleshly lust, and was then living with a woman lawfully not his own.

But Felix is not the only one who puts duties off for "a convenient season," and who, when his life has the glorious light of the gospel turned upon it, should tremble and would tremble. Is it not possible for many of us who claim to be Christians to be as completely turned over to the flesh along other lines contrary to the Spirit of our Lord as was Felix in his profligate life? Let us name a few conditions that even Christians may be in.

1. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." (1 John 2: 15.) "Ye adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore would be a friend with the world maketh himself an enemy of God." (James 4: 4.) "Adulteresses" means those who break their marriage vow to God; hence, it applies to men and women alike. We are the bride of Christ; and whenever we allow the world to come between us and him, we are guilty of spiritual adultery. Now, how many of us would tremble were the matchless Paul here to look us straight in the face and preach to us all the will of God on this subject in view of the judgment to come?

2. "Whosoever bateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." (1 John 3: 15.) May I ask each one who reads this if there would be danger of any of us trembling were one of the apostles here to declare all the counsel of God on brotherly love to us and keep his eyes steadily fixed on ours, with the consciousness on our part that the speaker knows us as fully as God knows us? And not only would we feel like trembling, but, due to the fact that we have carried hatred around in our hearts against some brother so long that it is just as much a part of our character as adultery was of Felix's, would we not like to run away from the speaker? Would it not be just about as hard to yield to the teaching of the speaker as it was for Felix to yield to what Paul was teaching? And don't you reckon there are about as many people in the church, all things considered, who are sending the apostles away for a more convenient season as there are people in the world? Let me here say to one and all, whenever you allow hatred to find an abiding place in your heart against a soul, the sin that "lies conveniently around you ' is to mistreat that soul, to say something about him that you should not. Here is a sin easily committed. How vitally necessary, then, that we obey the injunction of Peter. "Putting away therefore all malice!" If this is the sin that easily besets you—that is, speaking evil of your brethren-the only way you can lay it aside is to put the malice away. Who among us has not learned that it is easy to treat people right that treat us kindly, but hard to do good to those who are our enemies and who maliciously mistreat us? Will you here read Luke 6: 31-35? Do not even sinners love those who love them? Yes, indeed! And do not even sinners always, without exception, hate those who hate them? The "besetting sin " is called the sin of our "constitution." It is that tendency on our part to walk after the "old man" that governed us before our conversion and seeks continually to do so after our conversion. And here, brethren, let me say that I consider our eternally examining ourselves right here one of the absolute essentials to growth. The one way I endeavor to determine whether I am making progress toward Christ is by watching, not the way I treat those who love and esteem me, but the way I feel and conduct myself toward those who do not love me. I believe I said on this page, sometime back, that we find Christians doing their best to lift up and encourage those who have fallen into sin if they are "our friends," but having no mercy, no pity, and giving not one word of encouragement to others who have committed identically the same sin. Why is this? You say the answer is difficult? There is no difficulty here. If my own son should fall into sin, I would do my best to get him out; and for this I would deserve no credit, for it would be one of the virtues of my nature. But if you should notice that in my handling his sin I am just as careful not to try to whitewash, excuse, and condone his sins, but allowing myself to be as firm with him as I would be with one who sustains no blood relation to me, then you would begin to see what true religion has done for me. Why should not a real Christian treat his bitterest enemy just like he would his own child? I say, why not? Indeed, he will, when he lets the religion of our Lord lift him above and out of the flesh. We are not getting very far toward the divine nature of our Lord when "my preacher" never makes any mistakes, all he says is just right, but "that preacher over there" who calls in question some of "my preacher's" teaching is a hypocrite and has no love of God in his soul!

3. "He that covereth his sin shall not prosper." (Prov. 28: 13.) Who will say that the covering of our sins, seeking excuses for having gone into sin, is not a sin that lies conveniently around us? And this is due also to our nature. And is not such evidence of a lack of true, genuine, and whole-hearted repentance that makes you revolt at the thing you have done? "Godly sorrow" is the only sorrow that worketh repentance. "The sorrow of the world" worketh death. If you want to know the difference in the two, I will say that the first is a sorrow produced because we know God knows it, and the second is sorrow produced because we are caught and we are conscious of the fact that the world knows it. But it is a very easy matter to determine which we have. For let it be whom you may, the man or the woman who has only the sorrow of the world will knowingly lie to whitewash, condone, and minify his or her sins; but never when the sorrow is produced because of his or her consciousness that God knows It.

4. "Respect of persons." I think this is fully covered in what has been said about brotherly love. I mean the principle that governs there governs also here. But in Jude 16 we find these words: "Showing respect of persons for the sake of advantage." When it is to our advantage to show "respect of persons," this very fact makes it a sin easily committed. But this is true of any other sin. "Convenience" and "advantage" are powerful forces in the hands of Satan to lead us into sin. I have known of some whom I considered the strongest church members to fail into line with the evils of others just because the new community into which they had moved had a strong, active church teaching and practicing error, and no loyal church was there; hence, the most convenient thing to do was to fall in with them and be relieved of the sacrifice of mind, body, and money to establish one that handles not God's word deceitfully and makes not laws that God has not made.

But I have said enough this time. I do pray that the feeble effort I have made will do some good. Let others do as they may; but as for me, let me ever watch self and see to it that I treat others as I want them to treat me, and never forget the timely words of Micah (6: 8): "And what doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?" We had better look the true teaching of our Lord squarely in the face now and be made to tremble while there is hope than to put it off till the judgment, when trembling will avail us nothing because of the door of hope being forever closed against us.

Our Duty to Encourage Others.

BY R. P. CUFF.

Why do some people fail in the struggle of life? Without staying for the complete answer, it can be seen readily that a prolific cause of failure is discouragement. To many persons life is an unbending and dusty road stretching out for miles and miles ahead. There is a disheatening sameness about it, to them, that fills the heart with dull thuds Others are on the verge of saying: "All that I do seems useless. Look at those who apparently do not put forth nearly so much effort as I, yet they are gloriously successful. There is clouded thought and cold, spiritless distrust in every deeply discouraged heart. Stern and severe duties, heavy burdens, unceasing struggle, fierce battle, and bitter disappointment have cooled the ardor of many an enthusiast. As we move about in the busy world and catch a glimpse of some smiling face, we may not know that there lies behind it a sore heart. We may be slow to recognize that the hope of that heart is about to fade as though it were a summer rose. It is said that before travelers come to some places on the Alps their guides warn them that they must not utter a sound, lest the echoings of their voice send an avalanche of snow and ice crashing down from its perfect poise. A single melancholic word might send crashing down to suffering or utter destruction some heart now poised perfectly on the edge of despair. Would I be loyal to my fellow man, I will not speak that word.

1. Scatterers of Gloom .- An old story says that one day two men were discussing another. This third man was one who exceedingly enjoyed eating pie. As the two men stood speaking of the pie eater, he appeared in the distance, coming toward them with a broad-ax on his shoulder. The first staked a wager with the second that the latter could not talk three minutes with the pie eater on any subject but that he would mention pie. When he approached, the man who had taken the wager said: "That seems to be a good broadax you have." The reply came: "Yes, I wish I had all the pie I could cut with it in a day." This story serves to illustrate the thoroughness with which some people are imbued with gloomy views. In every relationship of life pecple are to be found who are ever saying things that dishearten. No matter when you meet them nor on what subject you choose to converse with them, they leave you with somewhat of a depressed feeling. Doubtless the reader has some one in mind who, whatever plan you propose, with a negative shake of his head, sets himself at once to see its difficulties and to point to its every unfavorable aspect. Have you seen those who are ever ready to remind you that these are the most corrupt days that have ever come to the world; that people generally were never so near a depravity that is total; that those who pose as Christians were never so worldly as now; that the church, in consequence, was never so shorn of power; and that piety has simply flown away on wings of disgust and left this dread world to degradation and detriment? It is true that the warning voice must sometimes be raised against dangers ahead and that those in danger must listen or perish, but that does not provide the soil in which perpetual gloom spreaders may grow. There is something miserably wrong with the man who seems to live to discourage others. That one who pours into bright lives the darkness of discouragement and who disseminates panics and demoralization wherever he goes-his life is a dismal failure. How fatal for leaders of men to be sparing in brave, heroic, hopeful speech! "One of the essential qualifications of leadership is large hopefulness."

2. Speakers of Encouragement.-There are many who communicate cheer through word and life wherever they move. They seem to live for that. After one has been in their presence a while, he feels that "the earth, and every common sight to me did seem appareled in celestial light; or: "The rainbow comes and goes, and lovely is the rose; the moon doth with delight look round her when the heavens are bare; waters on a starry night are beautiful and fair; the sunshine is a glorious birth." To pass that kind of a man on the street is to gather an inspiration that tingles in the veins throughout the day. The hearty and sincere greeting he gives, whether bow of the head or grip of the hand, leaves to the life that sort of bright, inspiring influence as would remain lingering from the refrain of a sweet song. A walk and a talk with a person of that type makes one's face brighter, his step lighter, his joy deeper, and fills his heart through with unsullied assurance of victory.

One day a fireman climbed a ladder to rescue a child. The almost unbearable heat made him stagger. He was about to come away. A voice below cried: "Cheer him!" The throng sent up the cheer. In another moment the man had snatched the child, imperiled by the flames, from the very jaws of death. It is not surprising that the apostle says: "Encourage the faint-hearted." (1 Thess. 5: 14.)

Kindness.

BY LOULA M. ADKISSON.

Since kindness is an essential quality of "the greatest thing in the world," it behooves each child of God to cultivate this Christian attribute. There is a pleasant sound to the word—kindness—the very thought of it soothes us like a healing balm. The human heart requires no dictionary definition to define this sweet amenity; instantly it recognizes a kindly word or deed. Not only is kindness a great asset to the Christian character, but is requisite to it as well. "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?" Solomon says, in enumerating the virtues of the model woman: "In her tongue is the law of kindness."

It is one thing to fail to be kind, and another to be really unkind. Some people thoughtlessly, others intentionally, do and say unkind things needlessly. Once a little darky had a fight with a white boy because he called him a "nigger." "Course," he said, in discussing the affair, "I is a 'nigger,' but it sho' do make me mad to be called dat." The same underlying principle may be applied to many people about many things. It is unkind to remind people of things they are already painfully aware of—things that are inevitable. It is unkind to say or do needless things that will darken "the sunshine of another's day." It is both unkind and unjust to judge and censure others when we know little or nothing of the facts in the case. "The greatest assassin is the mental assassin," whose work is subtle, cruel, swift, and whose direful effects are far-reaching and sometimes everlasting. If, as some say, you cannot love everybody, we can usually be kind to all.

Once two girls were donning their wraps preparatory to leaving the home of a friend. One was wearing a coat she disliked. "Your coat," said the lady of the house, "is pretty; but yours," turning to the other girl," is so ugly, Why did you buy it?" The girl mumbled a few words and fled from the room and the house, while the angry tears filled her eyes. It was such a trivial thing she valiantly tried to overlook it, but she never felt quite as comfortable in that lady's presence again. We are extremely uncomfortable when in company with those whose open words or veiled sarcasm is likely at any moment to sting us as a serpent's tongue. But how pleasant and delightful it is to be in the presence of those whose hearts are governed by the "law of kindness!" One of the most appealing and impressive things about the picture of Christ is the look of ineffable kindness on his face. Surely he was the kindest being who ever trod the earth. One would imagine that kindness fairly radiated from his face; that it kindled in his eyes, expressed itself in the gentle touch of his hand and in the tender accents of his words. Since he was so kind, we must be kind; for, "if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

If we desire to be kind, we must learn to think kindly thoughts. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If kindness is dominant in the heart, this lovely flower of the soul shall grow and blossom in our lives, our deeds and words, and the hearts of many shall be gladdened by its rare fragrance and unwented beauty.

"Speak 'in His name' a loving word;
Do 'in His name' a kindly deed;
Be unto others, as was your Lord,
A friend in time of need."

Commendation.

Brother Nichol: I have just read your article in the Gospel Advocate on "Jealousy," and I want to thank you for writing it. I have for a long time regarded you as one of my good friends; and while you are "a big preacher" in the estimation of a great many people, I regard you as a humble, God-fearing man and a preacher of rare ability, and I am not in the least jealous of you. I am sure you made the point well against the wholesale charge of preacher jealousy; but I am of the opinion that very little of it exists, if any. I sometimes doubt if there is such a thing in existence as "preacher jealousy." I am sure I have never seen any manifestation of it. We have many different types of preachers, and we need all of them who are Godfearing men. If all the preachers were just like me, or just like you, or just like some other preacher, perhaps only one type of men would be reached with the gospel. But Foy Wallace can reach people whom you could perhaps never reach, and possibly J. D. Tant can reach many whom no one else could reach. I think nearly all men who have sense enough to preach the gospel realize the truth of this and have no inclination to be jealous of others. At any time I can be of any assistance to you in any way, do not hesitate to call on me. C. D. CROUCH.

Appreciations.

"Long live the Gospel Advocate, and may God ever bless its editors!" (C. D. Brummett, Gasoline, exas.)

"I always enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate, and especially the special numbers. May the Lord bless you in contending for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints." (Mrs. Maggie Nisbett, Murfreesboro, Tenn.)

"We think the paper is very good, and the special numbers are extremely fine. I have been a subscriber twenty years. May the Lord bless the editors and every one of the readers." (D. P. Butler, Kenton, Tenn.)

Chalk Talks for Teachers.

There has been a long-felt need of a book which would enable any person who can speak to a class or an audience to give a helpful, inspiring, illustrated talk. We are glad to announce that we have secured such a work. It is entitled "Crayon and Character," and is the work of B. J. Griswold. With this book in their hands, parents can teach the children a simple, fascinating method of drawing, and at the same time make the great truths of life a part of their everyday learning. It is especially adapted to speakers who earnestly want to give illustrated talks, but who feel that they "can't draw a straight line." Practically all subjects are covered, and full instructions are given as to how to make the talks effective. The price of the book is $1.25, postpaid. Order from the McQuiddy Printing Company, Nashyille, Tenn.

Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another; recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.—Rom. 12: 10, 17, 21.

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY.

Best Premium Offer to Preachers.

The greatest preachers of the past two centuries attribute much of their inspiration and usefulness to Matthew Henry's Commentary on the whole Bible. Born in the seventeenth century, his name and his work still live and are household words. Thousands of homes treasure this commentary second only to the Bible, and many a man traces his right start to the loving advice and homely counsel of Matthew Henry.

Charles H. Spurgeon said: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering sparrows around an old gable toward the close of autumn." Dr. Philip Schaff, compiler of Schaff's Bible Dictionary, pronounces it "the best practical and devotional commentary for English readers." Here you will find a mine of expository knowledge and a complete preachers' commentary.

The management of the Gospel Advocate is fortunate in securing twenty-five sets of this unrivaled commentary, which will be sent as a premium to every preacher who will send twenty-five new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2.50 per year. This is undoubtedly the most attractive premium offer ever made to preachers. You will receive six portable volumes of twelve hundred pages each, large, clear, unbroken type, with substantial Roxborough binding, and will have the satisfaction of knowing that the work of the prince of commentators is in your library. If you wish to pay cash, the price for the six volumes is $17.50, not prepaid. When sent as a premium, we pay all charges.

Suggestion to Churches. If you wish to give your preacher a gift that he would prize always and at the same time get the best religious weekly in the homes of your members, get busy and send us the twenty-five subscribers. Your effort will help the church, please the preacher, and encourage the Gospel Advocate. Sample copies of the Gospel Advocate and subscription blanks furnished upon request. Let us hear from you promptly.

AT HOME AND ABROAD

H. H. Turner has recently baptized thirty-four persons.

Earnest C. Love has been with his sick father at Little Lot, Tenn.

W. J. Cullum reports one restoration at Reid Avenue Church, in Nashville, last Sunday.

A. A. Bunner is in a good meeting at Columbus, Ohio There were two baptisms at the start.

L. L. Jones conducted a two-weeks' meeting at Link, in Rutherford County, Tenn. There were eight additions.

C. M. Pullias closed a two-weeks' meeting at Gallatin, Tenn. Good audiences prevailed, and there were two baptisms.

R. C. White preached at Grandview Heights, this city, last Sunday. Two persons were baptized. This is Brother White's home congregation.

Help is needed to save the church house at Mount Zion, in Maury County. Send your contribution to H. M. Brumit, Route 1. Mcunt Pleasant, Tenn.

If you would make deserving orphans happy on Thanksgiving Day, send a contribution to the Tennessee Orphans' Home. It will be gratefully acknowledged, and the Savior will honor the gift.

N. W. Proffitt closed a good meeting at Old Freewill, Ky., during which there were six baptisms and two restorations. He is now in a meeting at Flippin, Ky., and will begin next Sunday at White Oak.

W. J. Haynes, of Grady, Ala., is entering his forty-first year as a preacher of the gospel, and informs us that he is "still satisfied with what is written in the Book." He reports good meetings at Enterprise and Dublin.

The brethren at Palmer, Tenn., will soon be in their new house of worship. Three thousand dollars was raised by the people of Palmer for the building and cleven hundred for equipment. They will need two thousand dollars to finish the house.

From D. S. Nelms, Box 107, Ola, Ark.: "I am seventy-six years old and almost a 'shut-in." I have been reading the Gospel Advocate since 1872, and I feel that I cannot be without it in my old days. You may consider me a lifetime subscriber."

A church of Christ has been established at Pueblo, Col. Any one knowing of any person there who is a member of the church is requested to send his or her name and address to Edward F. Rizer, Central Block, Pueblo, Col., and he will try and interest all such in the work.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Barnes, of Lake City, Fla., announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Mollie Grace, to Mr. George Edgar Hamilton, of Miami, Fla., the wedding to be solemnized at their home, on West Duval Street, on Thursday, December 1, at 5 P.M. At home in Miami after December 10.

Mrs. James Newman, of Flint, Mich., writes us that Mrs. W. W. Laster did not correctly represent the facts concerning the church at Flint. She says there were only nine out of sixty-five members that desired elders. This in no wise interferes with what was said on the subject in the "Query Department."

We have exhausted our Sinking Fund which is used for sending the Gospel Advocate to poor but deserving people, many of whom are invalids. Contributions for this purpose will be appreciated and used as to make others rejoice. Simply state that your remittance is for the Sinking Fund; we will do the rest.

From H. I. Copeland, Ripley, Tenn., November 6: "On Sunday afternoon, October 30, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Evans, I united in marriage Sister Columbia Evans to Brother Thomas Smith, of Bean's Creek. We will miss Sister Columbia much from church and in our home, too, for she was a near neighbor. We believe she will be happy in her new home, and the church there will have a new worker."

Dr. and Mrs. M. M. Chandler have returned to their home in Greenville, Texas, after attending the Confederate Reunion at Chattanooga, Tenn., and visiting Judge and Mrs. W. S. Noble. Dr. Chandler is the father of Mrs. Ida Chandler Noble, who has been for the past several years in charge of the Art Department of David Lipscomb College. He is a prominent physician and surgeon of Greenville, and he and his wife are identified with the church of Christ at that place.

From J. G. Malphurs, Clarksville, Tenn., November 9: "I am now at Legate, with the new congregation, where I debated with a Baptist in September. While working on the building during the day, I preach to the people at night. Splendid interest and three additions to date. Quite a number of brethren in this infant church will now lead in the worship. The good work at Big Rock has also gone beyond all expectations, and a splendid building for the church is assured, work having been started."

Will J. Cullum writes: "The tent (mission) meeting at Jefferson City, Tenn., closed at the water on Monday morning, November 7, with three baptized and one restored. This was my fifth meeting since July 15, with one hundred and thirty additions as to visible results, two congregations set in order, and one house of worship completed and now in use. This closes my engagements for meetings this year. I expect to devote my entire time to preaching, and could accept one or two monthly appointments during the winter. Address me at West Station, Nashville, Tenn."

From M. C. Cayce, Natchez, Miss., November 10: "Last Sunday I began a meeting here, which is being well attended. Seven baptisms to date. We hope for others. This place, like so many places in Mississippi, needs the gospel. Why cannot more churches send more preachers into this field? Mississippi needs them. The gospel is God's power to save. Let us live it and preach it, that more people may be saved. My home address is now 143 Wacaster Street, Jackson, Miss. Any one knowing of persons in or near Jackson whom I might interest will please to furnish me their names and addresses."

From R. L. Ludlam, Jr., Fort Smith, Ark.: "Sometime since there was a request to write as to the needs of a home for the aged and dependent. There is such a need, and to that end wife and I have it in our hearts to offer our home here in Fort Smith, now in course of construction, to any dependent member of the body of Christ. We do this in the name of the church of Christ here in Fort Smith. The building is being built modern in every respect, and is twenty-six by forty feet, with ten rooms and full basement. It is located on the corner of Bluff and V Streets, two blocks from the Park Hill car line. We are near the place of worship of the Dodson Avenue Church, to the elders of which we are in obedience and full accord. The building is now inclosed and ready for wiring and plumbing. When completed, we will receive any one approved by the elders of the church, young or old."

J. D. Tant writes: "I have traded our home at Rogers for a larger farm at Quitman, Ark., as my boys are getting large enough to be of help on the farm. I hope this farm will enable me to meet some old debts and let me do more preaching. Quitman is in Cleburne County at the foot of the Ozark Mountains. Fine water, fine health, and fine farming. Lands are not one-tenth so high there as in the Rogers country. I do not know of a single congregation of Christians in Cleburne County. I would be glad to hear from them if we have any. Quitman is a live inland town of one thousand people, with a good high school, and I shall strive to build up the church of Christ as soon as we move there. I shall be glad to hear from ten to twenty brethren who want homes in Arkansas. Write me at Quitman, and I will be glad to tell you of that country and to have you settle there and help build up the Master's cause."

From John D. Evans, Denver, Col.: "On last Lord's day (November 6) I visited Pueblo, Col., at the invitation of E. F. Rizer, formerly of Franklin, Tenn. The brethren have rented a hall (Labor Temple), and we began keeping house for the Lord with a nucleus of a dozen souls. Among the number were Frother and Sister Vaughan, of Nashville, Tenn.; Brother and Sister Hix; and Brother McCorkle, of Tennessee. Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

This paper is mailed regularly to all subscribers until definite orders in writing are received and all arrearages paid in full. If you wish us to stop your paper, write us to that effect; but do not ask it unless you have paid all arrears, if there are any. Do not ask your postmaster to attend to it for you, but do it yourself.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may net appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

Partyism.

BY J. C. M'Q;

There is no room for partyism in the church of the Lord Jesus Christ; yet it is a sad truth that there is much partyism among the followers of Christ. This partyism is respensible for much of the backbiting, evil surmisings, and misrepresentation that are being perpetrated by professed Christians. The wise man, Solomon, places a very high estimate on truth when he says: "Buy the truth, and sell it not; yea, wisdom, and instruction, and understanding." (Prov. 23: 23.) Paul condemns theorizing, speculation, and hobby riding both by his example and precept. Concerning his going to the church at Corinth, he says: "And I, brethren, when I came unto you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, proclaiming to you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling. And my speech and my preaching were not in persuasive words of wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power."

(1 Cor. 2: 1-4.) Every preacher and teacher of the Christian religion should know nothing but Christ, and him crucified. There is no authority in the word of God for contending over theories, speculative opinions, and untaught questions. No man can be a faithful servant of Christ without placing Christ above all else and without glorying only in the cross of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Unfortunately, many Christians have more respect for their theories than they do for the simple teaching of Christ. They become such partisans that they do not correctly represent those who do not accept their peculiar views. They are ready to make any sacrifice to build up their party; they will even fail to teach the simple truth, provided it is unpopular. They are ready to go with the "liberal" element of the church and will not stand for the plain truth when thereby they bring down the frowns of the populace upon themselves. No man can serve God with . such a spirit. The apostle Paul plainly condemns such partisans in the church at Corinth and emphasizes the fact that divisions produce carnality. To be carnal-minded is death.

As it was in the days of Christ, so is it now. Many are contending over the order of worship and over things that are not fundamental to salvation, to the neglect of the things that are essential to salvation. To such the language of Jesus is applicable: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye tithe mint and anise and cummin, and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice, and mercy, and faith: but these ye ought to have done, and not to have left the other undone. Ye blind guides, that strain out the gnat, and swallow the camel!" (Matt. 23: 23, 24.) Not only is it as it was in the days of Christ, but we have many failing to speak the truth and loving iniquity instead of righteousness, as in the days of the prophets. "None sueth in righteousness, and none pleadeth in truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies: they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity." (Isa. 59: 4.) We find to-day brethren going to law with brethren, and brethren insinuating evil of their brethren instead of being kind and censiderate of each other. A few days ago I heard a gentleman remark that there was more kindness and courtesy among actors and actresses than among the ministers of the gospel of Jesus Christ. This remark was not applied to any particular denomination, but to all denominations, and even embraced the people calling themselves "simply Christians." It has often been stated that of the three professions, the ministry, medicine, and law, the ministers were the most jealous of their brother ministers and the lawyers were the least jealous. If this be true, it is a sad commentary on the spiritual life that should exist among the people of God. It is an undeniable fact that a preacher of the gospel dislikes to take work in a field where a preacher is residing who has previously labored for the church. Whether correct or incorrect, the preacher feels that he will not have the hearty cooperation and support of his brother preacher. Is it not true that many of the troubles of churches are traceable to envy and jealousy among the brethren? It seems the higher up the brother, the more partyism he creates and the more strife he makes among the people of God. With such a partisan spirit, no man can serve the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ said to the devil: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." (Matt. 4: 10.) It would be hard to find a partisan who is seeking the truth and will buy it and sell it not. The partisan places the applause of men and the things of the world above the truth. As the weeping prophet said to the disobedient in his day: "This is the nation that hath not hearkened to the voice of Jehovah their God, nor received instruction: truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth." (Jer. 7: 28.) So is it with the partisan. Of all such partisans Jeremiah truly says: "And they will deceive every one his neighbor, and will not speak the truth: they have taught their tongues to speak lies; they weary themselves to commit iniquity. Thy habitation is in the midst of deceit; through deceit they refuse to know me, saith Jehovah." (Jer. 9: 5, 6.)

I would not say that every partisan means to be wicked and that he really believes he is misstating the truth. But partyism is so blind and so obscures the truth that men do not see clearly. Men who are filled with the spirit of Christ and are led and guided by the Spirit will not be guilty of lying, misrepresentation, or speaking evil of their brethren. They will the rather heed the admonition of Paul to the church at Ephesus: " Wherefore, putting away falsehood, speak ye truth each one with his neighbor: for we are members one of another." (Eph. 4: 25.) The Bible speaks of "loving as brethren." This means something; it does not mean that we are to surmise evil. "Love thinketh no evil." Again, Paul admonishes the church at Ephesus: "And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you." (Eph. 4: 32.) If we love as brethren, if we are courteous and considerate of each other and forgive each other as God also in Christ hath forgiven us, we will be very slow to pervert and misrepresent the teachings of others. While the misrepresentation or perversion will not really harm those misrepresented, yet it will harm and injure us. In order that we may not bring such injury upon ourselves, the apostle James writes: "Speak not one against another, brethren. He that speaketh against a brother, or judgeth his brother, speaketh against the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judgest the law, thou art not a doer of the law. but a judge." (James 4: 11.)

I am writing this in the hope of encouraging all to contend more earnestly for the essentials of salvation and to cease to ride hobbies and their peculiar views, which only brings strife and contention to the churches of God. "But now do ye also put them all away: anger, wrath, malice, railing, shameful speaking out of your mouth: lie not one to another; seeing that ye have put off the old man with his doings, and have put on the new man, that is being re-rewed unto knowledge after the image of him that created him: where there cannot be Greek and Jew, circumcision and uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bondman, free-man; but Christ is all, and in all." (Col. 3: 8-11.)

R. H. Boll's Kingdom Theory. BY F. W. SMITH.

R. H. Boll, in stating his position (page 293), disclaims indulging in any "speculation;" and yet, when he comes to the attempt of justifying his "position" on the kingdom prophesied by Daniel (2: 44) as not having been established, he leaps headlong into a sea of wildest speculationviz., by linking the kingdoms represented by the image Nebuchadnezzar saw to the beast of Revelation. He says: "All four world powers that were to be, find their reëmbediment in the final form which the fourth one will assume in the time of the end." How does he know any such thing! He says, in approaching his effort at paralleling the "image" and the "beast," this: "But there is a divine explanation, clear and satisfying." To an imaginative mind, what he gives as a solution of the difficulties into which his literalistic views have plunged him may be "clear and satisfying;" but to one who wishes to "walk by faith," to be guided by a "Thus saith the Lord," what he says is anything else but "clear and satisfying." Let us see how "clear and satisfying" all this is. He says, as heretofore mentioned: "Moreover, it was fully understood that this great Son of David would rule, not only in his specific realm, over the nation of Israel, but over all the world." 304, Word and Work, "Special Kingdom Number.") New, bear in mind that this rule "over all the world," according to the editor, is in and by that kingdom prophesied by Dan.

2: 44, which is to be set up when Christ comes. And he further says of that kingdom: "We have seen, then, that in the fair meaning of the prophecies of Daniel, the kingdom of God, in that phase of it which is viewed by Daniel, has not yet come." But Deniel said not one word about "a phase" of the kingdom; he said God would set up a kingdom. Now the "specific realm" in which Christ rules is not of this world. "My kingdom is not of this world." (John 18: 36.) Hence, if, according to R. H. Boll, the kingdom Daniel talks about is "a phase" of the kingdom, then, indeed, will there be a union of the world and the church, or an amalgamation of the spiritual and the carnal. This may be "clear and satisfying" to R. H. Boll and those who have imbibed this doctrine he adopted from Charles T. Russell, but it is neither clear nor satisfying to me. He confessed years ago in substance, this: "When I read Russell's works, it nearly swept me off of my feet, and 1 thought I would have to go with him." And any one at all familiar with Russell's writings can now see that Boll did go with him to a considerable extent. This solution he gives of Daniel's prorhecy begins to favor very much the original ground he occupied-viz., "the church is a phase of the kingdom, we are now in the vestibule, and when Christ comes we will enter the main building;" for, mark you, according to Boll, Daniel's prophecy is only "a phase" of the kingdom, and, of course, what we now have is another phase of it. If the editor be correct, and instead of being in the kingdom, we are only in a "phase" of it. Why did he not tell us which "phase," so we might know where we are?

What a great pity that in all of this writing on the kingdom question he did not at some point throw some light on this phase of the subject: How will the saints which he says are in the kingdom he says we now have get into the kingdom to be set up which will bear "rule over all the earth?" They will evidently be in that kingdom, if what he says is true-viz .: "In this catastrophe not the last only, but, by representation, all four of the Gentile world powers meet their judgment. Then the saints receive the kingdom." (Page 300.) Again: "Moreover, this destruction of this beast is (like that of Dan. 7) followed by the world-wide reign of Christ and his saints (Rev. 19: 11 to 20: 6)." Once more: "'And he [saint] shall rule them [the nations] with a rod of iron, as I also have received of my Father.' (Rev. 2: 26, 27.)" Now, it would be difficult indeed to comprehend just how the saints are going to rule the nations with a rod of iron, or with anything else, as to that matter, through the kingdom to be set up when Christ comes, without being citizens of that kingdom. Again, how can they maintain the character and spirit they are taught to maintain in the kingdom the editor says they are now in, and at the same time take part in the kingdom of "violence" which he says the kingdom to be set up is to be? He quotes in support of his position: "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" (1 Cor. 6: 2.) Well, they most certainly will not judge the world outside the kingdom Boll says they will receive. "Then the saints receive the kingdom." Certainly one outside of a kingdom can have no authority in the kingdom, and I am wondering how they are to get in that kingdom that is to be set up on this earth when Christ comes? The editor has said the terms of admittance have not yet been revealed, and that may account for his not giving some light on this most important point.

But has he made a correct application of 1 Cor. 6: 2? Does not the apostle mean to teach that the saints shall "condemn" the world in his use of the word "judge?" "Judge not, that ye be not judged" (Matt. 7: 1), evidently means to condemn not; but the saints by living lives of righteousness will judge or condemn the world. It is said that Noah's faith in building the ark "condemned the world" (Heb. 11: 7); and the obedience of faith upon the part of the saints will judge or condemn the world, in the last day, just as Noah's faith condemned the world at the end of the first dispensation.

But the editor must literalize every passage he touches to make out his kingdom-come theory. Note this: "In Acts 14: 22 the kingdom, without qualifying phrase or explanation, is clearly and distinctly spoken of as yet future. On their homeward journey Paul and Barnabas visited the young churches they had established along the way, confirming the souls of the disciples, exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that through many tribulations we must enter into the kingdom of God.' This is evidently the kingdom of promise and prophecy, as it is yet to be realized, which the saints shall inherit, and in which they shall execute rule and judgment over all the world with the Lord Jesus. (James 2: 5; 1 Cor. 6: 2; Rev. 2: 26, 27.)" Is it not strange that this great Bible student could not see that he was wresting (2 Pet. 3: 16) the holy Scriptures in trying to sustain a false position? Of what kingdom is Paul here speaking? The same exactly of which Peter speaks: "For thus shall be richly supplied unto you the entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. 1: 11.) But since he makes it the kingdom to be set up when Christ comes and foretold by Dan. 2: 44, and since the passage from Acts 14: 22 says the saints "enter into it," the reader will, no doubt, be anxious to know how they will get in. He even "literalizes" Heb. 12; 28; "Wherefore, receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken, let us have grace, whereby we may offer service well pleasing to God with reverence and awe." Hear him: " It is also to be noted that not until our testing time is over, and our full adoption ('to wit, the redemption of our bodies') can we inherit the kingdom. For 'flesh and blood' that is, humanity in its corruptible estate—cannot inherit the kingdom of God; and corruption cannot inherit incorruption. (1 Cer. 15: 50.) This conception of inheriting the kingdom has reference to our exaltation and glorification with the Lord Jesus, and the sharing with him of his rule and authority. This is the kingdom which cannot be shaken, which we have not received as yet, but are in process of receiving (Heb. 12: 28)—just as we are said to be 'receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls' (1 Pet. 1: 9)," Christ's rule and authority ends or ceases when this world comes to an end. "Then cometh the end, when he shall deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father." (1 Cor. 15: 24.) Again: "Then shall the Son also himself be subject to him that did subject all things unto him, that God may be all in all." (1 Cor. 15: 28)

Now, since Christ will have no rule or authority after the end of the world, it follows that Boll's application of Heb. 12: 28 is to a world power over which he says Christ and the saints will rule. But as all world powers will be shaken or destroyed, the kingdom mentioned in Heb. 12: 28 is not a world power, for it is distinctly stated that it "cannot be shaken" or moved. Thus it can be seen how this man perverts the word of God.

Greater Works.

BY C. B. N.

Of Christ it was said that he "went about doing good." This does not convey the idea that he occasionally engaged in a good work, but that the great object of his life was to do good. Let there come a holy hush in your heart, hold communion with self for a few moments, go on a tour of retrospection, and determine if your life has been measurably given to the work of "doing good."

Have you contemplated the works Christ performed?

See the man whose eyes had never appropriated light, who had no adequate conception of the beauties of nature, for he was born blind. Christ opened this man's eyes: enabled him to behold the granduer of earth; to look on the face and into the eye of the mother who bore him and see there the love-light and joy of a mother's heart.

This miracle belonged to time and pertained to flesh. It was the man's literal eyes—his physical eyes—that were opened; earthly objects he was enabled to behold.

Peter's mother-in-law was suffering from fever. This was a physical malady. Jesus restored her to a normal condition: he cured her. But this, like every other miracle performed by Christ, belonged to time and pertained to flesh. It belonged to time in that in the eternal age people are not subject to these maladies which bring us pain and death in this state. Fever is not a malady of the spirit.

In the home of Mary, Martha, and Lazarus, Jesus was a guest on more than one occasion. Returning to the home after an absence of some days, he found Lazarus dead, and the sisters bowed beneath the weight of sorrow occasioned by the death of the brother. Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead. This was a physical resurrection and pertained to time. Lazarus dies again. Every miracle Jesus performed during his personal ministry was of this nature—temporal.

To his disciples Jesus said; "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father." (John 14: 12.)

The miracles Jesus performed, the apostles performed also, even to raising the dead. Peter raised the seamstress, Dorcas, from the dead. (Acts 9: 36-63.) In this department some weeks ago I discussed the subject of miracles—their purpose and the time when they ceased. Man cannot now perform miracles. The age of miracles has passed.

Jesus said to his disciples that they would perform the works that he was doing, and more—that they would do "greater" works than he was doing. He raised Lazarus from the dead; Peter raised Dorcas from the dead. I submit that raising Dorcas from the dead by Peter was not a greater work than raising Lazarus from the dead by Jesus. But the disciples were to do "greater" works than Christ performed. What were these "greater" works?

It should not be overlooked that Jesus said the disciples would do the "greater works" "because I go to the Father."

The death of Jesus on the cross marks the time of the sacrifice for the human family. He "bore our sins in his body upon the tree." (1 Pet. 2: 24.) He put away our sins by the sacrifice of himself. (Heb. 9: 26.)

You should not be confused: the sacrifice is one thing, the atonement is another.

In the old covenant they had only the blood of bulls and goats, which could not take away sins: (Heb. 10: 1-4.)

In God's economy it was necessary for Jesus to die for the sins of the world. (Heb. 9: 18.) After his death the atonement was made. Jesus by his own blood entered "heaven itself, now to appear before the face of God for us." (Heb. 9.)

The sacrifice having been offered and the atonement made—Christ having returned to the Father—the disciples on the day of Pentecost were baptized in the Holy Spirit, and immediately began performing greater works than Jesus performed during his personal ministry—that is, teaching people what to do to be saved—saved from sin, cleansed from their sins by the blood of the Master. This salvation which Jesus died to make possible is for the spirit, and pertains not to time only, but to eternity as well. As the spirit is greater than the flesh, as eternity is greater than time, so spiritual blessings are greater than temporal blessings. To save a soul is the greatest work in which one can possibly engage.

"I am become all things to all men, that I may by all means save some." (1 Cor. 9: 22.) "My brethren, if any among you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know, that he who converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death." (James 5: 19, 20.) In the hands of God you are a servant and can teach, lead your fellows to Jesus, who saves.

The work of teaching men what to do to be saved is in the hands of the disciples of Jesus.

The greatest work one can do is to lead a soul to Christ. Brother, have you in the busy duties incident to your avocation found time to teach some soul what to do to be saved? Such would be the greatest work possible for man to engage in ever. By your own words, by your life, and through your means—money—see that men are taught the way of life. Make a definite program for this work of teaching people what to do to be saved.

O O O Personal Notes.

Hugh Clark is now located with the church in Winters. Texas. It is expected that he will not only do a great work with the church in Winters, but in the county as well.

From Charles L. Speir, Checotah, Okla.: "The meeting at Browning, Mo., closed on October 30. There were seven baptized, three took membership, and one who made the confession to be baptized later. I preached four nights at Purdin, with no visible results."

From R. D. Smith, Denton, Texas, November 7: "There were two splerdid services at the Pearl Street Church, in Denton, yesterday. The Sunday school, or Bible study, was also well attended, and the interest was good in every way. Two made the good confession at the morning hour and were baptized after the sermon at night. A financial report was made to the church at the morning hour. This report showed total receipts from the first of January to November 2, inclusive, $2,599.02; total expenditures, $2,570.92."

Fishing With a Short Line.

"When I first began trout fishing," said Mr. Beecher, "I used to have a great deal of trouble with my line. Do what I would, take what pains and care I might, it would get tangled or caught on the bushes along the stream. One day an older and more experienced fisherman was with me and saw my difficulty. 'You've got too much line out, Mr. Beecher,' said he; 'reel in a little, man, and you'll have less trouble.' I followed his advice and found it good. I have had occasion to remember it, too, in more things than trout fishing. Many a time when I have found myself worrying about things beyond me, I have just said to myself: 'Reel in a little, man; you've got too much line out.' It's easier fishing with a short line."

There's a bit of wisdom here for all of us. Long linesand tangles; that's a common combination. Most of us know it by sad experience. We are prone to bring into today the things that belong to the morrows yet to come, We say in our praying, "Give us this day our daily bread; but unless we see a week's supply ahead, we begin to feel the gripping of starvation. We quote in prayer meetings, "As thy day, so shall thy strength be;" but we are morally certain that the exigency that looms a week or a month away will be too much for our endurance. We persist in crossing bridges before we come to them, and we trouble trouble long before trouble troubles us. "Fishing with too much line out "-that's the secret of much of the disquietude that many of us know so well. "Tangled lines"that's the result of unduly and fearfully forecasting the future. A tangled line catches no fish; a fearful soul accomplishes little worth the doing. "Reel in-fish with a short line;" that's the remedy. Try it. It is reasonable and it is scriptural. Between a clear provision of and a wise provision for the day to come and the worry and fear that some of us feel because we are bringing the possible troubles and tasks of to-morrow to swell the evils of to-day there is a world of difference. "The thing of a day in its day." We have learned a great and blessed lesson when we have learned that.-Watchman-Examiner.

An Ant Funeral.

A lady gives this account of some ants which she saw in Sydney. Having killed a number of soldier ants, she returned in half an hour to the spot where she had left their dead bodies, and in reference to what she then observed she says: "I saw a large number of ants surrounding the dead ones, and I determined to watch their proceedings closely. I followed four or five that started off from the rest toward a hillock a short distance away in which was an ants' nest. This they entered, and in about five minutes they reappeared, followed by others. All fell into rank, walking regularly and slowly two by two until they arrived at the spot where lay the dead bodies of the soldier ants. In a few minutes two of the ants advanced and took up the dead body of one of their comrades; then two others, and so on until all were ready to march. First walked two ants bearing a body, then two without a burden, then two others with another dead ant, and so on until the line extended to about forty pairs, and the procession now moved slowly onward, followed by an irregular body of about two hundred ants. Occasionally the two laden ants stopped, and laying down the dead ant, it was taken up by the two walking unburdened behind them, and thus by occasionally relieving each other they arrived at a sandy spot near the sea. The body of ants now commenced digging with their jaws a number of holes in the ground, into each of which a dead ant was laid. They now labored on until they filled up the ants' graves. This did not quite finish the remarkable circumstances attending their funeral. Some six or seven of the ants had attempted to run on without performing their share of the task of digging. These were caught and brought back, when they were at once attacked by the body of the ants and killed upon the spot. A single grave was quickly dug, and they were all dropped into it."

Many more instances might be adduced of the intelligence of these little insects, but enough has already been given to show that if they do not really exercise reasoning powers, they at least come to conclusions and act exactly as men do under similar circumstances. This certainly shows intelligence, if not reason.—Exchange.

Wonderful Beavers.

When the Grand Trunk Railway ran a line across a swamp in a game preserve in the Alberta Rockies, there was a fine beaver dam holding the water back to flood the

The game warden ordered the engineers to disturb the beavers as little as possible. They could have blown out the dam with dynamite and killed most of the animals, but that would have been cruel.

So they cut an opening in the dam. The mud of the dam was almost as hard as concrete, and it took the men three days to get the water to run out properly. Then they started work on the railroad through the swamp.

Soon the water began to rise, and the work was stopped by water in a few hours. The engineers went down to the beaver dam, and found that the animals had repaired the cut and made it tight.

A new cut was made; but when the men were gone, the beavers were busy and the damage repaired. Work on the railroad was stopped in a few hours.

Then a hole was made in the earth deep under the dam. That puzzled the beavers. They had never before seen water go down into the ground and come up far away. But they studied the problem, and the work on the railroad was soon stopped by the water, and half the tools were covered.

The road was finally built by working a few hours at a time, and the loss to the contractors was about five thousand dollars. The beavers lost their time. Our Dumb Animals

QUERY DEPARTMENT BY J. C. MCQUIDDY

H. W. Smith, of Horse Cave, Ky., asks this question: "Is it wrong to hold a debate or discussion of the Scriptures or Sunday?" It is no more wrong to study or discuss the Scriptures on Sunday than any other day. In fact, people should discuss and study the Scriptures in order to bring out their meaning on every day in the week. If we had more discussion of the Scriptures on the first day of the week and on every other day in the week, we would be better informed and would be better Christians. Men must know the truth and love the truth in order to make faithful servants of the Lord Jesus Christ. Men should not contend and strive over the Scriptures on Sunday or any other day in the week; but an honest investigation in order to arrive at the truth is commendable whether it be on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, or any other day in the week.

A brother who wishes his name withheld sends the following query: "Is it right for a Christian to attend the State Fair or the like? Of course I know there is no scripture specifying it, but I would like for it to be answered."

As to whether it is right or wrong to attend the State Fair depends very largely upon the motive with which one attends. There are many good things connected with the State Fair, and there are a number of bad things. Christians who attend fairs should go with the right motive and should take no part in that which is evil. There is much evil in a city. If men are not allowed to attend places where there is evil, then one would not be allowed to visit a city. It is perfectly proper and right for one to visit the city, but not proper and right for one to partake of the evils that exist in the city. When a person goes to the city, he should visit places that are not evil, and should serve and worship God just as he does in the country. Christians should be circumspect and righteous wherever they may be. They should do nothing in any place that they visit that is not scriptural or that would bring reproach on the cause of Christ. Christians should not enter the State Fair to gamble or to be guilty of anything that is unscriptural or criminal.

W. C. Litton, of Lone Wolf, Okia., asks for an explanation of the difference between faith and belief, if there is any. I have never been able to make any satisfactory distinction between faith and belief. In fact, I have not tried to make any, because the Bible teaches that they are one and the same thing. Both "faith" and "belief" are in the noun form, "Believed" is in the verb form. So when it is stated that one believed God, we understand that he had belief in God. Rom. 4: 3 states that Abraham believed God. "For what saith the scripture? And Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned unto him for righteousness." In verse 9 of the same chapter it is said: "To Abraham his faith was reckoned for righteousness." Thus we see that Abraham's faith is the same as Abraham's belief. Of the centurion's faith Jesus said: "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." Jesus ealls the great faith of the centurion "belief." "And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And the servant was healed in that hour." (Matt. 8: 10, 13.) We are told as the reason why we cannot believe God without faith that we must believe that God is. "And without faith it is impossible to be well-pleasing unto him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him." (Heb. 11:

6.) Of the doubting Thomas, Jesus said: "Reach hither thy finger, and see my hands, and reach hither thy hand, and put it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing." (John 20: 27.) Many other reasons could be given showing that faith and belief mean the same thing. It is a waste of time to attempt to make a distinction between them, especially since the word of God has spoken so clearly upon the subject.

Jane Thomas, of Kanima, Okla., says: "Please explain, through the Gospel Advocate, 1 John 3: 6; Matt. 24: 41."

(1) 1 John 3: 6 reads: "Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither knoweth him." When one sins, he ceases to abide in Christ. So long as one continues to abide in Christ, he will not practice sin. This does not mean, however, that he may not be overtaken in sin. There is a great difference in an apple tree that bears nearly all good fruit with a little bad fruit and one that bears all bad fruit. The same apostle says in 1 John 1: 8-16: "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us." The child of God in the main does good, but is occasionally overtaken in wrongdoing. The child of the devil works evil and does little good, and his life is given up to sin. This is the man who hath neither seen nor known Christ.

(2) Matt. 24: 41 reads: "Two women shall be grinding at the mill; one is taken, and the other is left." This passage refers to what will happen at the second coming of Christ. As it was in the days of Noah and as the Deluge surprised the world, so will it be when the Lord comes again. Hand mills are still used in the East. The grinding is done by the women, and usually by two, as the work is hard for one. This refers to the time when the good and the evil will be separated. Christ will accept the good and reject the evil. The good shall be taken and the evil left.

A brother wishes an explanation of Heb. 10: 25. The point on which he desires special information is where Paul speaks of the first day of the week. The passage reads: " Not forsaking our own assembling together, as the custom of some is, but exhorting one another; and so much the mere, as ye see the day drawing nigh." As to the exact meaning of the expression, "the day drawing nigh," there is great diversity of opinion. Many commentators refer to it as the day of the destruction of the Jewish nation. Others refer to it as the day of death, and still others as the day of judgment. Both of these are approaching to every human being. I have always regarded it as referring to the first day of the week. The Hebrew Christians could see this day approaching much more clearly than they could either the destruction of the Jewish nation or the day of death, the second coming of Christ or the day of judgment. This evidently applies to public and not private worship. On account of the state of persecution at that time, some Christians were neglecting the public assembly or to meet upon the first day of the week. For fear of persecution they had deserted their meetings. desertion of such meetings they had given up the strengthening and comforting which comes through the partaking of the Lord's Supper. Those who neglect Christian communion are in danger of backsliding; those who backslide are in danger of apestasy. The apostle, therefore, warns against neglecting the assembly upon the first day of the week, which is calculated to strengthen, instruct, and build up the human family.

Lamb

Sister Lessie (Epps) Lamb departed this life on November 3, 1921, at Murfreesboro, Tenn. She was the wife of Otis Lamb. She leaves a husband and two children. She was born on August 20, 1887, and was married on May 26, 1912. She had been a member of the church about twenty-three years. She was buried at the West-brooks graveyard, near Link, Tenn. Funeral services were conducted by the writer. J. S. Westerooks.

Horton.

Brother L. F. Horton was born on April 25, 1883, and died on October 16, 1921. He was a brother in the flesh to Elder J. Henry Horton, who is well known and loved by many Christians. Brother Horton obeyed the gospel when he was quite young, and was a devoted, Christian husband and father. He leaves a widowed mother and wife, seven children, two brothers, one sister, and a host of friends. To the bereaved ones I would say, in the language of Paul: "We would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them that fall asleep; that ye sorrow not, even as the rest, who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that are fallen asleep in Jesus will God bring with him." (1 Thess. 4: God bring with him.' M. A. CREEL. 13, 14.)

Blitch.

On Tuesday, October 18, the angel of death took from the home of Brother and Sister J. C. Blitch their little daughter, Ernestine. Little Ernestine was about seven years of age and the youngest child of the family. Her sweet and sunny smile won the hearts of all who knew her. She leaves a father, mother, three sisters, one brother, besides a host of little friends and playmates, to mourn for her. May the bereaved family look to the Heavenly Father for comfort in this sad hour, and rest in the blessed assurance that the sweet spirit of their little one has only gone before. Funeral services were conducted by Brother R. B. Sanders in the presence of many sorrowing friends and relatives, and the little body was tenderly laid to rest in the Jennings Lake Cem-MRS. Barron.

Sister Susan D. Barron was born near Henderson, Pike County, Ala., on May 7, 1844. She obeyed the gospel under the teaching of Brother Robert W. Turner in the year 1861. She was married to Brother Samford P. Barron on November 1, 1866. She was a loyal disciple of Christ for sixty years; always cheerful, and loved by all who knew her, especially by chil-dren. Her counsel and advice have helped many to a higher and better life. Her kind and loving words often encouraged me in my early life as a preacher. Sister Barron fell asleep in Jesus, at her home in Andalusia, Ala., on September 8, 1921. leaves a husband, three sons, and two We daughters to mourn her death. sorrow not, even as others who have no hope. No more sickness nor sighing nor death in the sweet home over W. J. HAYNES.

Williams.

Charles N. Williams was born on December 18, 1890; obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Jasper Dunn, at Clarksburg, Tenn., at about the age of fifteen years; and died on-July 6, 1921, at Dickson Hospital, Paragould, Ark., where he was car-ried on June 27 for an operation for appendicitis. Dear Charles is gone, and dark is the cloud that hangs over our home now-over the hearts of his loved ones; yet we sorrow not as those who have no hope. We know the steps he took; we know the life he lived; we know he heard the gospel. believed the gospel, and obeyed the gospel, and thus became a Christian. He was truthful and honest, pure and patient, and faithful until death. Funeral services were conducted at the church of Christ at Campbell, Mo., by Elder J. P. Lowrey, after which we laid his body to rest by the side of his brother in Woodland Cemetery. May God help and comfort us, and may we live such lives that there may be a happy reunion in that beautiful land. Mrs. W. Syd Williams.

Allbritten.

Ethel Haneline Allbritten was a daughter of William and Martha Haneline. She was born near Vienna, Ill., on May 5, 1887. She was married to Brother B. M. Allbritten, now one of the elders of the church of Christ at Berea, III. Unto them were born two sons and three daughters. She was baptized by me on July 8, 1902, when she was little past fifteen years of age. She had the reputation of being a good Christian. After a brief illness, on November 4, 1921, she fell asleep in Christ, aged thirty-four years, five months, and twenty-nine days. Her father, mother, one sister, and one daughter preceded her to the land of spirits. She leaves her husband, four shildren the leaves her husband, four children, two brothers, four sisters, and other relatives and friends to mourn her departure, but to be consoled by her glorious hope of eternal life in Christ. FIELD REPORTS

Graysville, Tenn., November 7.—The meeting at Soddy continues, with increasing interest. Soddy is located eighteen miles from Dayton, thirteen miles from Graysville, and twenty miles from Chattanooga on the south. It is situated on the Southern Railway out of Chattanooga to Cincinnati. Three were baptized yesterday, one of them coming from the Baptists. There was one confession last night.-A. B. Blazer.

Van Buren, Ky., November 8.-I am conducting a meeting at Van Buren. The interest is good. The work at Shelbyville is moving along, with good attendance at every service. We hope the brethren everywhere will rally to our support and help us build our new house. Brother Traylor is preaching at Parkland, in Louisville. Brother Thomas Rose will probably move to Louisville to assist in the work at different points. Brother F. W. Smith is in a stirring revival at the Bardstown Road Church .- R. A. Craig.

St. Louis, November 7.—Good services at the church of Christ, Lafayette and Jefferson Avenues, on Sunday. We had approximately one hundred out at the morning service and about seventy-five at the evening meeting. Brother Julius R. Clark, a young preacher, spent the day with us, and gave us a good lesson on "Manifesta-tions of Faith." He was on his way to attend school this winter. Brethren who know of members of the church who are not meeting with us will help the work here much, as well as the unattending members, by sending in their names and addresses, so we can look them up and interest them in the work here.-W. A. Sevedge.

Cave Spring, Ark., November 7.— The mission meeting at Healing Springs, in Benton County, closed at the water last night. We had splen-did crowds from the beginning. Six were baptized. One young lady who made the confession was sick and will be baptized later. Many people who had never heard the gospel attended the meeting. I will try to visit Healing Springs again in 1922. I am now at Cave Springs. I preached to a houseful of people here last night and will preach this forenoon and to-night. I will preach on Tuesday night at Rogers, Ark. I would like to visit Baldwin and Fayetteville while in this part of the State, but must go home on Wednesday. Brother W. H. Sears lives at Cave Springs. Brother Sears used to preach regularly, but is now getting advanced in years, so acts as one of the elders of the Cave Springs congregation. I held a thir-teen-days' meeting at Cave Springs the latter part of July and first of August. Twenty-four were baptized and two were reclaimed. I will be in this county next year for meetings at Cave Springs, Centerton, and Healing Springs. I will have time for other meetings in this part of the State. Brother John T. Hinds has done much to establish the cause in this part of the State and is held in high esteem by all the brethren. I have held four mission meetings this year. My next meeting will be near Prescott, Ark.

My time is promised until January 1. I can fill appointments beginning with year or hold meetings. Write me at Morrillton, Ark., Box 314. R. H. Johnson.

Tribute to James Oliver Young.

BY JOHN T. SMITH.

Brother James Oliver Young was born on February 16, 1873, in White County, Tenn., in old Bethlehem community-the community of the mother congregation of Christians in White County. Early in his teens he heard the gospel of Christ and became obedient to it, being baptized at the hands of Brother E. A. Elam. Later he moved to Sparta and identified himself with the band of Christians worshiping there, where he worked and worshiped until the end of his life. At the age of twenty-four he was married to Miss Ella Ramsey, to which union two children were born. He died on June 24, 1921, after an illness of only a few weeks. In his death the local church lost one of its best, most loyal and dependable members-a member not only in name, but in the life he lived. Verily, he lived up to his conceptions of what God demands, even if he had to stand alone and have the disfavor of his fellow men. During the years that I have known the Sparta church, he was one of the few men who never missed a meeting of the church. Always on time; always at the front; always anxious for the church do greater and better work, and willing to do or pay his part. Truly, he will be missed by the church. In his home life he was next to a model. He could do more for his frail companion, and do it with greater cheerfulness, than most men I have ever known. Brother Young loved his Bible above all other books, and found time every day to read its blessed pages. A good man has been called from labor to rest. He leaves a wife and one son, three brothers and three sisters, to mourn his loss; but let us not mourn as those who have no hope. Funeral services were conducted by Brother E. A. Elam in the presence of a large audience of relatives and friends.

Weak, nervous women make unhappy homes, their condition irritates both husband and children. It has been said that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, "the blues," irritability and backache arise from some displacement or derangement of a woman's system. Mrs. Phillips' letter clearly shows that no other remedy is so successful in overcoming this condition as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Among the Colored Folks

I have just returned from the field, where I have been preaching the word of God. On August 14 I began a meeting at Beard's Mill and preached for two weeks. Brother H. Clay was with us the first week, and Brother Tom Harris came and preached the last Lord's day of the meeting. I baptized two persons in that meeting. The interest was fine. On the first Lord's day in September I began a meeting at Algood and continued it one week. No additions. My next meeting was at Celina, Tenn., where I preached about two weeks; and I went from there over to Martinsburg, Ky., and spent four days preaching the word, with a full house every night and baptizing almost every day. At Celina there were fifty-four souls added to the one body, and six at Martinsburg. There are many places in the vineyard to work for the Master, so I desire the prayers of all who are interested. I get but little heip along this line in a financial way, but I go just the same, as I am working for the Lord. I had the opportunity of meeting with Dr. D. F. Draper, of Texas, while he was here in my home town-Cookeville, Tenn. I went to hear him preach two nights, and I certainly did enjoy his discourses.

GILBERT A. JOHNSON.

On the second Lord's day in August I began a meeting at Thyatira, Miss., and continued it eight days and nights. Fifteen made the confession and were baptized. I came by Hernando, Miss., and preached two nights, and then came through to Memphis, where I stayed with Brother Bynum one night. I found that he had arranged for and bought a house and lot. The white brethren made the first payment on the lot for them. I left Memphis for home and stayed over one night with my family, and then went to Tuscumbia, Ala., and began a meeting eight miles in the country. The meeting continued eight nights, and four persons obeyed the gospel. 1 then came back to Corinth and began a meeting with my home congregation at their request. This meeting continued five nights, and was the best meeting we have ever had in Corinth among our people. We were all glad to see our white brethren and sisters turn out to our services. It caused others to stop and come in that had never been in our house before. Much good was done and two were baptized. On the third Lord's day in October I began a meeting east of Senatobia, Miss., at New Zion Church, which continued eight nights. One young man obeyed To abort a cold and prevent complications take Work Accomplished.

BY JAMES E. SCOBEY.

In the providence of God, I have accomplished what I purposed to do during the past spring and summer. I have visited and preached for twentyone different congregations where I had preached when a much younger man. It was a matter of much pleasure to me to visit them and to be able to give them lessons of truth from the word of God. My object in all my preaching was their edification; to build them up in their faith, that they might become "strong in the Lord and the power of his might." I taught that God is the author of all truth, both as regards the physical universe and the spiritual universe. I warned them not to be influenced and led away from the plain, simple teachings of Jesus, his apostles and prophets, to follow the atheistic and infidel philosophy of men who deny that the Bible is a revelation of God to man, and written by men inspired of God to write what they did write, that man might know God, whom to know aright is life eternal.

In the last ten years I have failed to preach only nine Sundays. I shall not attempt to go very far from home during the winter to preach. I have for years past preached for my home congregation (Lawrence Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.) once a month. During the winter I shall be glad if some of the city churches may wish me to serve them.

It is my purpose and plan, if God will, to revisit next spring and summer the churches that I visited this year. I shall be gratified if I am able to do so; and if I shall be with them again, I trust I may be of such service as shall result in their hope of immortality and eternal life becoming the one thing they seek with all their heart.

The Biggest Bargain in the History of Poultry Raising

Introductory offer—we want the whole world to know the wonderful properties of this famous egg tonic.

Send No Money

Two regular dollar sized packages of TWO-FOR-ONE sent C. O. D., postage paid, for $1.00. Or, so that larger poultry yards may thoroughly test and prove the correctness of our claims, we will send six full dollar-size packages of TWO-FOR-ONE C. O. D. for $2.00; you save $4.00. Two for one dollar or six for two. Take your choice. Offer good only until present stock is exhausted.

Giving Away Our Profit

Those who have used TWO-FOR-ONE, those who have had actual experience in their own poultry yard, know what a money maker it is, know it tones up the flock, keeps hens in good condition, makes them lay, day after day, even during the moiting season. We do not have to spend any of our money to sell them: they are only too glad they can still obtain TWO-FOR-ONE. They order it from us regularly and we do not have to offer them any inducement except the sterling value of this marvelous poultry tonic.

To Convince You

This advertisement is to convince those who do not know about TWO-FOR-ONE to give it a thorough trial and therefore we are willing to give up our profit; yes, even a part of the actual cost to us in order to make you one of our regular customers.

Make no mistake about it, TWO-FOR-ONE is one of the wonderful discoveries of the twentieth century, and if you will once use it long enough to see the real effects on your flock of hens, you will never be without it.

A Genuine Egg Producer

TWO-FOR-ONE is not a medicine or a drug in any sense of the word. It is positively guaranteed to be harmless in every way. It will not injure your flock; in fact, it is just what we claim it to be, a good tonic. It keeps your hens in perfect health, makes them lay larger eggs, better eggs and more of them. It helps to make every chicken yard a profit producer. It takes a lot of the doubt and risk out of poultry raising. Those who kept hens for profit were eager to find a genuine article that would do away with their losses during cold weather and the molting season. They secured just what they wanted in TWO-FOR-ONE and are constant users of this great discovery of modern times. All predictions point to a cold, snowy winter and you know your hens need help in cold weather if you want eggs.

Here's the Proof

You need not take our word for it, you need not rely on this advertisement, you need not take any risk whatever. Our files are full of bona fide unsolicited letters from those who have used TWO-FOR-ONF and these letters are open to your inspection at any time.
