Work on the Arkansas Christian College will begin right away, and the brethren hope to complete the administration building by the beginning of the next school year. Brother Z. D. Barber preaches for the congregation two Lord's days in the month. Brother Barber is loved by the entire congregation.

My time is promised until October 1. After that time I can hold meetings or do regular monthly preaching.

Work at Berry, Ala.

BY J. D. TANT.

Recently I spent fifteen days in preaching the gospel of Christ at Berry, Ala., and in trying to put the school there on a sound basis. As a result of my preaching, one who had wandered from God came home and eleven were baptized. During the meeting Brethren I. B. Bradley, of Birmingham, and T. B. Thompson, of Huntsville, assisted much by their presence and encouragement.

For the benefit of the school I made the following suggestions, which were indorsed by all: (1) That the name "Christian College" be not used, as the name "Christian," when applied to a school, carries the same sectarian meaning that the word "Baptist" or "Methodist" would carry. (2) That the idea of the school as a church school or a religious institution be discarded, as the church of Christ is the only religious institution that God knows anything about. (3) That the brethren make a claim for their part of the free-school money, which they can get when it is known that they are not running a church school, or denominational school. (4) That a room be reserved in which a regular course in Bible study can be given to any boy or girl who may desire to study the Bible, but that they do not make Bible study compulsory. (5) That Brother Shepherd cancel his sixteen-thousand-dollar mortgage against the house and ground, provided the church and people here will build a good dormitory that will care for fifty students. Brother Shepherd seemed anxious to make this gift, and the brethren are going to work to complete the dormitory by September. (6) That the church get some school man who is able to carry all at least two years in college work beyond the high school, and have associated with him three good teachers, so that we can have a four-teacher school who can manage two hundred students in their work here. The school will have State affiliation for all work done. (7) That they get out at least five thousand catalogues stating their work and put them in every church and school community in Alabama. (8) That they put some man in the field to visit every congregation in Alabama and get individual pledges to raise from fifty thousand to one hundred thousand dollars as an endowment to support not only a Bible teacher in the school, but help support first-class teachers, so we can soon give a nine-months' school each year to all who may desire to come.

All these suggestions were readily accepted, and the church at Berry is now looking for a school man who has been a success in the schoolroom and who is able to do the work. Application should be made to J. C. Shepherd or A. B. Tenney, who are now teaching the school.

Los Angeles (Cal.) Notes

BY R. E. WRIGHT.

I left Nashville, Tenn., on the night of February 28, bound for Los Angeles, and reached here at 2:40 P.M. on March 4. Brother Godfrey and his son met me at the depot and brought me out to their home at 263 North Avenue 25, where I am at this writing. I found Sister Godfrey in the bed with the mumps; but the girls are nice housekeepers, and the whole family knows how to make a stranger feel perfectly at home. In fact, I have never felt for one moment that I was in the hands of strangers. I have met only one person here that I knew before I came, and that was Brother James A. Harden, an old Nashville Bible School boy. He is married now, and he and his good wife have four fine boys. I spent one night with them, and it was a delight to be in their home.

On Sunday (March 5) we had a real nice hearing at the Central congregation, 1720 South Flower Street. Every one seemed to enjoy the service. These good people seem to have a mind to work for the Lord in this city. The contribution was seventy-four dollars, and we had one hundred and ninety present. That, to my mind, is extremely good for a congregation but two months old. There is certainly a bright prospect for this work if we will keep our heads together and work.

Sunday afternoon I spent in the home of Brother and Sister Miller. Brother Miller is a sure-enough worker in the church. He doesn't know how to say, "I can't," or, "It can't be done." He drove me over part of the city that afternoon, and carried me to some high points where we could look out over Los Angeles and several of its suburbs, all with a population of over seven hundred and fifty thousand people. I have a new pal to work with out here—Brother Samuel E. Witty. I haven't met him yet; but he is a real pal. I am sure. He is back East on account of his mother's death. We pray God's blessings upon him in these hours of trouble and sorrow. I am praying the Lord that he make Witty and me a blessing to this work. Won't you pray for us also?

Miss Lillie Cypert.

BY NELLIE STRAITON.

A short time ago I reported that I had forwarded $41.25 to apply on Sister Lillie Cypert's traveling expenses home, which was all the money received for that purpose up to that time. Sister Cypert has acknowledged receipt of the money, and states that it covered the advance deposit which she is required to make on the boat fare. Since then I have received and forwarded $151.50, being the total sum of a number of contributions from individuals and churches. This is less than half of the amount necessary—five hundred dollars; and that Sister Cypert be not disappointed or embarrassed, I appeal to each one who reads this message to cooperate with me in raising the balance of the money needed—and it must be done at once. Send whatever you can, even though the gift be small; but if you are able to make a more generous contribution, please do so. Then speak to the members of your home congregation and urge them to make an offering for this purpose. The important thing is to send as much as possible, and send it now.

Contributions to Sister Cypert's personal support are also very much needed; so, if possible, include in your gift something for this fund. We cannot afford to allow her regular support to fall short while we are raising funds for her traveling expenses.

Send contributions for Sister Cypert to Miss Nellie Straiton, 1030 South Lake Street, Fort Worth, Texas.

HOW TWO WOMEN ESCAPED OPERATIONS

Doctor Advised Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Happy Results in Both Cases

St. Joseph, Missouri.—"Both of my sides swelled and hurt me so that I could not move or do any of my work. There was heavy pressure and pains through my lower organs and the doctor told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for these troubles. He said I had this one chance, and if the Vegetable Compound did not help me nothing but an operation would. After taking several bottles I felt it was helping me and now I am able to do my own work. If my testimonial will help others I shall be glad for them to read it and hope your Vegetable Compound will do them as much good as it did me." —Mrs. WM. LOCKMAN, 513 N. 4th St., St. Joseph, Mo.

White Plains, N. Y.—"I had such a pain that I could hardly walk and the doctor said that I needed an operation. I was sick for a year before I started taking your medicine and I could not work. I saw your advertisement in a little book and that is how I came to take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines. I have been taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E.

Pinkham's Blood Medicine, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and the capsules and prescription recommended. I am doing all my work and have gained twenty pounds. I am taking the medicines still, but I feel fine. You have my permission to use this letter for the good of others." —Mrs. MARY MARK, 37 Hamilton Ave., White Plains, N. Y.

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But most of the commoner ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors, or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

When disturbing ailments first appear, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Cleveland (Ohio) as a Mission Field.

BY A. A. BUNNER.

Cleveland is one of the greatest and most inviting mission fields on the globe to-day. All nations are here, and conditions are favorable for reaching the people with the gospel. I am undertaking this great task. I hope to be kept busy all the time. I need to be daily loaded with good tracts and papers for this work. Brother McQuiddy, of Nashville, Tenn., and Brother Rowe, of Cincinnati, Ohio, are willing to furnish me with these at a sacrifice; but they are not able to make all the sacrifice, neither am I able to buy them. Brethren, will you assist me in this work with your fellowship? Now is your time to enter upon and accomplish a great work in the name of Jesus. I ask your fellowship in this work. The church in this place is still weak in numbers and finances and will appreciate your hearty cooperation. Send your donations to me, and every cent will be faithfully and judiciously applied to buying tracts and circulating good papers among all classes who can read English. Send donations to me, at 7808 Hope Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, and see what we can do in advancing the cause of the Master in this great and populous city. If you have any friends located here who would likely become interested in the Christianity of the New Testament, send me their names and addresses and I will look after them.

More About "They Say."

BY M. M. PITTS.

I have just read a little poem by "E. M. A." in the Gospel Advocate of February 23, which strikes the keynote to many of the heartaches which we are heir to to-day. The poem, entitled "They Say," deals with that agency of the devil to which so many of our so-called church members and Christians either consciously or unconsciously belong. It seems to me that he or she who repeats the unscrupulous and malicious lies of the liar "they say" are equally as guilty as he, and are as great a menace to true and honorable society as can be thought of. Those people who indulge in the art of secondhand lying would be very much insulted should one accuse them of being cowards or of committing cowardly acts; but the fact remains that one who would hide behind the common phrase, "they say," to introduce a lie for which he or she does not want to assume responsibility, is nothing more nor less than a liar and a coward. Sad to behold are the creatures often clad in the regalia of a supposedly Christian lady or gentleman, when, in fact, they are not even ladies or gentlemen, because no lady or gentleman will tell things he or she has reason to know are untrue, even if some "they say" did say so. Very often some of the most consecrated Christian characters are the victims of these evil-minded gossipers who introduce their conversation with "they say." Of course no Christian wants to resort to the courts of the land to rid society of these villainous characters, but it does seem that unless it is done they will continue to destroy the reputation, but not the character, of some of the most godly men and women of this age. A noted writer once said: "He who steals my purse steals trash, but he who steals my character steals all that I have." Hence, this character thief is more dangerous than one who breaks into your home and steals your earthly possessions. But one who lives right can pursue the even tenor of his way, assured of the fact that, if he lives right until the end, all that a multitude of liars and hypocrites say against him will be of none effect; and if not living right, a legend of angels praising him would do him no good. As Christians, if we hear things detrimental to the character of any brother or sister, let us go to such a one in a brotherly way and tell him or her, instead of being a party to a malicious lie. One of Hambone's meditations says: "De reason folks talk about you to your back is dat dey don't mind hurtin' yo' reputation; but dey don't want to hurt yo' feelin's." Let us not be guilty of either.

Field Reports

Hatfield, Ark., March 14.—Last Lord's day I was at home. We had three good services and a business meeting. We were not at our best, as some were sick and the weather was bad. If all the churches would stand by their ministers, see that they preach the truth, and then support them, the cause of Christ would grow everywhere.—C. H. Smithson.

Berlin, Ga., March 13.—Brother Hugh E. Garrett, of Atlanta, recently visited us here and preached a fine sermon. Brother Claus, of Valdosta, preached to us a few nights last week. The attendance and interest were good. He promised to come back soon. The people here are showing more interest in Bible study now than they have in the past.—Adair P. Chapman.

Maysville, Okla., March 10.—I preached at Paul's Valley on the third Lord's day in February. The congregation there is moving along nicely. Brother Ira Womack preaches for them on the first Lord's day in each month. I filled my regular appointment at North Walker on the first Lord's day in this month. Services morning and night, with good attendance. These brethren have a mind to work.—J. D. Matthews.

Kelso, Tenn., March 13.—I filled my regular appointment at Corder's Cross Roads yesterday. There was an unusual attendance, with attentive interest. Our school terminates the last of March, and after then I have some spare time for evangelistic duties, should any congregations need my services. Let us work and pray more that we may always abound in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as our work is not in vain in the Lord.—G. H. O'Neal.

Birmingham, Ala., March 15.—I am preaching regularly for the North Birmingham congregation. This congregation is only about eighteen months old, but they have a lot paid for, a temporary house built and paid for, and they are supporting me in the work. In a few years this house will be converted into a bungalow and we will build a nice, modern church building on the corner of the lot. This congregation was established during Brother C. M. Pullias' stay with West End.—H. A. Price.

Kirbyville, Texas, March 13.—Two excellent services at Honey Island yesterday. I was with the faithful at Cravens, La., on the first Sunday in March, with large and attentive audiences. I am keeping busy in the Master's work in Eastern Texas and Western Louisiana. Prospects are much brighter and the brethren's zeal much greater for good now than at any time during my ten years' service here in this much-neglected and needy mission field. I am planning to conduct about four mission meetings here this spring.—J. S. Daugherty.

Altus, Okla., March 13.—On last Thursday I was called home from the meeting in Norman, Okla., on account of two of our children having very severe cases of "flu." They are much better now. Yesterday we had a crowded house at the morning and evening services here, with one confession at the evening service. Baptizing to-night. Yesterday was the beginning of a revival meeting here. Brother Frank L. Cox, of Norman, Okla., will arrive to-day to do the preaching during the meeting. The Norman congregation and the Altus congregation are exchanging meetings.—S. E. Templeton.

Soddy, Tenn., March 13.—I filled my usual appointments in Rhea County on Saturday night and Sunday. I preached on Saturday night in a private house near Evensville. This was my third sermon in that community. There seems to be considerable interest. This is a Baptist community. On Sunday at 11 A.M. I preached at Byrd's Chapel. This is the congregation that we worshiped with before we moved to Hamilton County. They seem to be gaining in interest. May we all do with diligence what comes to hand, preparing for greater work.—H. B. Young.

Oakman, Ala., March 15.—Since last report I have been busy preaching on Lord's days, mostly at mission points. On last Lord's day I visited our colored brethren at Patton. They are doing all they can to convert their race. I wish some of our white brethren in this State had as much zeal and courage as they have. I preached at the Booker Washington school while there, and will visit them again soon. I am at home at present with my wife and son, who have been sick for some time. The shadows hover over us, but the light of God's love shines through, and we try to be submissive to his will.—A. D. Dies.

Shelbyville, Ky., March 15.—Last Sunday I was at the Forks of Elkhorn and Shelbyville. The Elkhorn church is doing good. They contributed sixty dollars to the Shelbyville church. Our hearts were made glad to-day when we received a check from Campbell Street Church, Louisville, Ky., amounting to six hundred and sixty-seven dollars and ninety-one cents. We are very anxious to begin our building this summer, and we will succeed if the brethren will come to our assistance. This is a very important work, and we are very anxious to see it through. Other places are calling for me, and I am anxious to do this work so I can give my attention to building up the church at other places. Brethren, send us a liberal donation at once.—R. A. Craig.

Pori Arthur, Texas, March 14.—Brother Will W. Slater is now in the second week of a meeting with the church here. Crowds have not been large, but they never are large at our meetings here. Brother Slater has given us some very fine lessons, and I am sure the meeting is doing good. The simple gospel is being preached, and that will always do good. I have never been privileged to associate with Brother Slater in a meeting before this. I find him to be a splendid yoke-fellow. Our meeting may close sometime this week, and yet we may continue over next Lord's day. I shall assist Brother Slater and the South Park Church, at Beaumont, in a meeting sometime next month. I preached there last Sunday; and if the meeting continues here over next Sunday, I will preach there again. There is now some possibility of my being in Tennessee in the summer, and I could arrange for another meeting or two, either in that State or any of the adjoining States. I shall be glad to hear from churches interested. I have had about sixteen years' experience in the work of preaching.—C. D. Crouch.

A Clear Brain and healthy body are essential for success. Business men, teachers, students, housewives, and other workers say Hood's Sarsaparilla gives them appetite and strength and makes their work seem easy. It overcomes that tired feeling.

Wonderful Relief is Here Told

Atlanta, Ga.—"About a year ago I was preparing to go to the hospital to die. Had been sick and suffering two years, had dizzy spells, suffered from headache, constipation and a despondent feeling all the time. Had tried many different remedies and got no better. I got to a drug store one day and was talking to the druggist about my condition. He handed me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and said, 'I think that will help you.' Before I had taken all of that one bottle I felt like a new woman. Now I can say, along with thousands of other women, that Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription cured me."—Mrs. G. W. "Thou Shalt Not Covet."

BY J. G. MALPHURS.

Did you ever hear a sermon on covetousness? This sin is classed with the most soul-destroying evils, fornication, idolatry, drunkenness, etc., and yet many of us never heard of a brother's being disciplined on account of it. Is it because no one covets now? Does it not occur sometimes that the elder who is taking the lead in disciplining a poor fallen girl is so covetous that he hurts the church worse than the fornicator?

God has sounded many warnings against this form of evil, and yet it looks as though it were here to stay. "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maldservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's." (Ex. 20: 17.) "Take heed, and keep yourselves from all covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." (Luke 12: 15.) "For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil: which some reaching after have been led astray from the faith, and have pierced themselves through with many sorrows." (1 Tim. 6: 10.) Hence, "let it not even be named among you, as becometh saints" (Eph. 5: 3), and do not "keep company" or even "eat" with a covetous brother (1 Cor. 5: 9-11.)

This lusting after riches, avaricious desire for possessions, comes from the heart (Mark 7: 22), and Paul says it is idolatry (Col. 3: 5). Covetousness made Achan steal the gold wedge and hide it; it causes the rich to "oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage." (Mic. 2: 2.) A covetous man rarely sees a needy brother or true mission field. "He is poor because he won't try," or, "Let his relatives help him," is a ready reply when approached for charity. Covetous members let the meetinghouse rot down and claim that "we are poor in this world's goods." Yes, we have all seen the deadly effect on the church. Covetousness seems to be one of the besetting sins of the church of Christ. This heinous sin, like some plants, thrives well in poor soil as well as rich. A poor man might cover "greedily all the day long," pierce himself through with "with many sorrows," and go to hell a pauper; while another covets riches, gets them, and, like Jeshurun, waxes fat and lightly esteems "the Rock of his salvation." (Deut. 32: 15.)

This lusting after worldly possessions has a threefold effect on the poor victim. (1) There is no end of all his labors. "There is one that is alone, and he hath not a second; yea, he hath neither son nor brother; yet is there no end of all his labor, neither are his eyes satisfied with riches." (Eccles. 4: 8.) (2) It destroys life. "So are the ways of every one that is greedy of gain; it taketh away the life of the owners thereof." (Prov. 1: 19.) (3) It deprives him of a home in heaven. "Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with men, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 6: 10.)

Quiet Talks on Timely Topics

First Principles.

We hear a great deal said about "first principles." Sometimes we find people who object to what they call "first-principle preaching," and we often find others who think we ought to have more preaching on "first principles." But by "first principles" these people mean the conditions of salvation or the terms upon which the pardon of sins is promised—namely, faith, repentance, confession, and baptism. But these are really not first principles at all. They are "first steps"—the first steps that a sinner must take toward God; steps he must take in order to be saved. But something else must be preached to the sinner before he will ever think of taking these steps. Some principles must precede these steps. A missionary to a heathen country has to preach the real first principles. He must preach (1) the existence of the true and living God, Maker of heaven and earth, the Creator of man, the Father of all nations;
(2) Jesus Christ, God's Son, who brought salvation to man, salvation from sin and death; and (3) the Bible as the revelation of God's will, our only source of knowledge of things divine, and as our rule of faith and life. But as the heathen already believes in the existence of gods and as he recognizes his need of help from a being that is higher than himself, the missionary's task is comparatively an easy one. The man who goes to preach to the civilized and educated (?) classes of this country to-day is the man who has the task. Let us consider these first principles in the light of present-day conditions and see if there is not a crying need for some real first-principle preaching in our country to-day.

God Is.

Biology—evolution—has ruled God out of the creation and attempts to explain man and all other living creatures as the product of certain natural forces. And as man was produced by evolution just as the lower animals were—is one with them, only a little more refined, has been evolving a little longer—he cannot claim exemption from the law of dissolution as it affects the earth. Hence, this theory has no use for God. There is no room for him in its operations. It is true that this theory has been taught for many years; but it was formerly taught as a theory, and the teachers themselves did not believe it. But now it is taught in all the colleges and universities as a fact, and anything that conflicts with it is ridiculed and "laughed out of court." But what good would there be in preaching to this class of people? There is, indeed, little hope of reaching the teachers of such a theory; but we can safeguard the students. We can at least keep them reminded that evolution is only a theory; that many scientists never accepted the theory, and that they (the students) will not be fools and idiots if they do not believe the theory. Also, we can point out the many baseless assumptions that the theory rests upon. We can put into the hands of the students the books that have been written against the theory while they are being told in the classroom that all educated people believe it. So far as our own children are concerned, we can and should put them in Christian schools where evolution is not taught.

MAN'S NEED OF SALVATION.

There is no use of preaching a Savior to men who do not believe that they are in need of salvation. They must first be made to see that they are sinners and that there is no remedy for the ruin that sin has wrought except the gospel of the grace of God. There is no need to tell those who are at all acquainted with current conditions and present-day philosophy that many people to-day do not consider themselves sinners, and do not, therefore, feel any need of salvation or ever think of thanking God for his marvelous mercy and abounding grace that brought salvation to a recreant race. Last year a member of the faculty of the University of Texas read a paper before the Faculty Club, entitled, "Wanted—A Substitute for Salvation." The author of the paper, being a teacher of psychology, argued that conversion or salvation had in some instances served to harmonize the divided self, but that the divided self had been occasioned by the belief in sin and the fear of hell, and when the individual believed himself freed from sin and saved from the dangers of hell he was united, harmonized, and found peace. But he said that now hell is obsolete and sin is obsolescent, and therefore there could be no more imagined conversions, and we must have a substitute—something else must be relied upon to harmonize the divided individual; and he recommended psycho-analysis. This idea that "hell is obsolete and sin is obsolescent" is more widespread and general than many church people realize.
There is a great need to-day of a sense of sin. The prodigal son did not think of returning to his father until he "came to himself." He was first forced to recognize his own helpless and pitiable condition, and then, in contrast with his woe, the easy condition of the servants in his father's house appealed to him and he decided to go home and ask his father for a job, not hoping to be a son, but a servant. If we could only cause men to come to themselves, they would be ready to accept the salvation that is so freely offered to all men. And then they would be ready to magnify the name of God and praise him in such hymns as—

Amazing grace—how sweet the sound!—

That saved a wretch like me!

I once was lost, but now I'm found;

Was blind, but now I see.

Many religious people even could not sing that song for the reason that they do not feel that they were ever lost, blind, and wretched, and were "snatched as a brand from the burning." They are smug and complacent. They have their faith by inheritance, and they come into the church by generation and not by regeneration. They know nothing of the "amazing grace" of God, because they were never conscious of their own sinful and helpless state.

But what can we do to make men see their sins and their need of a Savior? We can point to wars, to death, to disease, to insanity, and to asylums, all of which came as a result of sin. We can point to the intrigues of politicians, to the strikes and unrest among the laboring classes, to the greed and oppression of capitalists. We can show that education and philosophy and socialistic theories cannot cope with the situation or bring peace on earth. Then we can show the heinousness of sin by pointing to what God did to save the world from sin and its consequences, and thus preach the love of God and the gospel of grace which is sufficient for the salvation of the whole human race.

THE BIBLE AS GOD'S WORD.

There is no use to try to prove anything by the Bible when those whom you wish to convince do not believe the Bible. You would as well quote from an almanac. We should begin again to exalt the Bible; to tell its history—through what trials it has passed and how it has over-ridden and outlived opposition; tell of the internal evidence of its authenticity; point out its high principles and its sweet and precious promises. We should always speak of it reverently and never cast a reflection upon any Bible story or character.

These are first principles. These are vital and fundamental principles. Let us preach them.

"And He Was a Samaritan."

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

The story of the ten lepers (Luke 17: 11-19) presents a forcible illustration of the ingratitude of men. The little narrative would be dreary reading indeed, if it were not for the action of the one grateful Samaritan who alone of the ten is a character worthy our emulation. As the Savior was entering a certain village on the way from Galilee to Jerusalem, he was met by ten lepers, who pleaded that he would have mercy on them. They were just outside the limits of the village and "stood afar off" because their contagious disease had made it necessary to segregate them. As required by the law of Moses, lepers were compelled to dwell alone, or without the camp. Thus excluded from other society, these ten unfortunates seem to have grouped themselves together for company. Their lot was indeed hard, not only because of the loathsome disease that preyed upon them, but also because of their enforced seclusion and loneliness, and it is but natural that in their tribulation they should seek mutual consolation. They were companions in sorrow, and in unison they implored the Savior's tender pity, crying to him from the distance: "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us." Afflicted with incurable disease, cast off and avoided, pronounced unclean and "quarantined" by law, they were indeed objects of pity, and Jesus would not pass them by. His command to the lepers was: "Go and show yourselves unto the priests." They obeyed in faith, and while on their way they were cleansed. Jesus healed them because of their obedient faith.

It is not an unusual Bible story thus far, but the sequel is a surprise. Singular and not altogether gratifying, yet it is an enlightening commentary upon human action and human character. "And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, with a loud voice glorifying God; and he fell upon his face at his feet, giving him thanks." Here is the high light of the picture. Note that this leper fell upon his face at the feet of Jesus to make known his deep appreciation. This was a spontaneous outburst of unfeigned gratitude, not decorous lip-words, but an outward expression so sincere that it could not be misunderstood. The heart dispenses with formalities when it speaks. But just one leper returned; the nine went on their way. Here is the shadow of the picture. One out of ten was appreciative enough to thank his Benefactor. The one was a Samaritan; the nine ingrates were Jews. "And Jesus answering said, Were not the ten cleansed? but where are the nine? Were there none found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger?" Jesus makes strange at the ingratitude of the nine, and by the same token commends the action of the foreigner. But the Samaritan had profited by turning back, or, rather, by his attitude toward Jesus. It was his privilege to converse with his Benefactor and to hear Jesus bid him arise and go on his way with the assurance that his faith had made him whole. The ingrates had lost infinitely more than they had gained in the first instance; ingratitude had robbed them of a blessing vastly more important than the cleansing of leprosy. They, too, could have had salvation if they had sought it at the feet of Jesus.

Do not forget that the grateful one was a Samaritan. Likewise it was a Samaritan that proved neighbor to the bruised and bleeding traveler on the Jericho road; a priest and a Levite (both Jews, of course) had in turn passed by on the other side. The fact that this grateful man was a Samaritan is not mentioned incidentally; it was set down on purpose and made significant. Omit this statement from the story, and the lesson loses much of its force. Let us look at the language a moment. "He fell upon his face at his feet, giving him thanks; and he was a Samaritan." According to the law of language, the statement is emphatic. Then the language of Jesus following emphasizes its importance. "Were there none found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger?" The word translated "stranger" is rendered "foreigner" in the margin. It would seem that the result is just the reverse of what might reasonably be expected. We should not be greatly surprised if this Samaritan—member of a mongrel race, benighted, superstitious—had gone on his way without expressing gratitude. On the other hand, we should naturally expect the nine Jews—members of God's elect race to whom had been committed the divine oracles—to be eager to praise the God of their fathers for so gracious a favor. But this was not the case: things do not invariably turn out as we anticipate. Those from whom we expect the most often render the least, and vice versa. The Jews as a people in Christ's day had come to be an arrogant lot, impudent, proud of their Hebrew blood, boastful of their unique position as God's nation. Their worship had grown corrupt, ritualistic, traditional, and their religion vain. Not the least among their sins was base ingratitude toward a God who had exalted them for centuries above all other peoples in point of privilege and special care. The ingratitude of these nine lepers exemplifies the general ingratitude of the nation. The religious Jews, for the most part, were bigots, fanatics, ingrates.

Jesus expresses surprise that these Jews should be so ungrateful. "Where are the nine?" Were they not more enlightened than the foreigner? But mercy had been shown to all alike. Why, then, had not the nine turned back to give thanks? We may as well ask why men are so ungrateful to-day: the cases of ingratitude that come under our observation are multitudinous. The nine are accustomed to go their selfish way. Indeed, we would do well if we searched our own hearts to see whether we may not find something of the ingrate there. Ingratitude, as a matter of fact, is one of the commonest, as well as one of the most detestable, human failings. Some philosopher has said that gratitude is thankfulness for favors expected, instead of appreciation of favors received, basing his definition on the assumption that we are not so thankful after we have received the favor. Indeed, where are the nine? But is it not equally fitting and proper that we, as Christians, who once were lepers, should thank Jesus, the Physician that healed us? Had not those ten lepers met Jesus who had pity on them, they would have languished and finally succumbed to loathsome disease and found graves in the potter's field; had not Jesus cleansed us in his own blood, we would die in our sins and go down to perdition. But he recovered us of our leprosy. Shall we not, therefore, be as grateful as the Samaritan leper? Or shall we prove ingrates like the nine? If we act so, we are not yet mindful, at least not appreciative, of the cleansing from our old sins, and we are not now worthy the name "Christian." Christians are grateful to the Giver, for they know that "every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights, with whom can be no variation, neither shadow that is cast by turning." But the swinish ingrate

"Ne'er looks to Heaven amidst his gorgeous feast,
But with besotted base ingratitude
Craves, and blasphemes his Feeder."

Suppose those nine ingrates had a second time fallen victims to leprosy. Would it not have been simply a case of a "worse thing" befalling them? In other words, would not their sin of wanton ingratitude have closed the door of God's mercy to them? Will God continue to bestow his spiritual blessings upon us to-day whether we are grateful or not? I do not think that he will. We must praise Him from whom all blessings flow, or those blessings in full measure will not flow to us. We must turn back to Jesus—not once, or twice, but daily—fall at his feet, and give him thanks. Christians will do this, because they are joyful and grateful. Their cup, both of blessings and of thanks, runneth over. "Rejoice in the Lord always," Paul writes the Philippian Christians: "again, I will say, Rejoice." "In nothing be anxious," continues the apostle: "but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." "Giving thanks unto the Father, who made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." The redeemed host whom John saw in the vision on Patmos were represented as ascribing praise to the Lamb for their salvation. "After these things I saw, and behold, a great multitude, which no man could number, out of every nation and of all tribes and peoples and tongues, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, arrayed in white robes, and palms in their hands; and they cry with a great voice, saying, Salvation unto our God who sitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb." If we expect to be of the number who shall bear the palm of victory and join in the redemption song of eternity, we must praise the Lamb here below. Our rejoicing begins on the earth.

Marvelous indeed is the goodness of God. Wonderful is his grace, and his love past finding out. "And you did he make alive, when ye were dead through your trespasses and sins." "God, being rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead through our trespasses, made us alive altogether with Christ (by grace have ye been saved)." "But when the kindness of God our Savior, and his love toward man, appeared, not by works done in righteousness, which we did ourselves, but according to his mercy he saved us." Lepers we were, but now are we cleansed; blind, but now we see. As did the Samaritan, let us turn back and give glory to God.

A Biblical Criticism.

BY H. W. JONES.

I have been reading with great interest a recent publication, "The Outline of History," by the noted English author, H. G. Wells, who recently visited our shores. This is a most interesting history of the world from the very beginning down to and including the World War. He writes in a plain, easy style, and is fascinating, logical, philosophical, and true to the facts of general history in a convincing way from beginning to end. He leads the careful student gently, though clearly, through the maze of human events, giving cause and effect in a graphic way. This is, in my estimation, the best general history I ever read, and especially so are his vivid accounts of the rise, progress, or decline of the different religions of the world, briefly, but philosophically, told. All this reveals to us more clearly what kind of being man is. But, notwithstanding all these merits in his history of about twelve hundred pages, Mr. Wells misses the true mark widely in the quotations which follow:

1. "The insertion of these genealogies (given by Matthew and Luke) is the more unreasonable, because, according to the legend, Jesus was not the son of Joseph at all, but miraculously conceived." (Page 498.) Now, isn't it strange that a man of great learning, intellectual attainments and ability, like Mr. Wells, would seem to doubt the miraculous part of the New Testament and fail to see the plain teaching of holy writ that Jesus Christ, God's own Son, was "born of the seed of David according to the flesh" (hence the genealogies of Matthew and Luke), and "was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead; even Jesus Christ our Lord?" (See Rom. 1: 1-4.) So the genealogies of Matthew and Luke are very reasonable, Jesus "being the son (as was supposed) of Joseph, the son of Heli," etc., as the record plainly says (see Luke 3: 23); and it was thus given to prove that Jesus was the promised Messiah of the Scriptures. Hence, Jesus was not in reality "the son of Joseph at all," but was "supposed" to be from a human point of view and relationship.

2. He says: "We are told that a great darkness fell upon the earth, and that the veil of the temple was rent in twain; but indeed if these things occurred, they produced not the slightest effect upon the minds of people in Jerusalem at the time. It is difficult to believe nowadays that the order of nature indulged in such meaningless comments. Far more tremendous is it to suppose a world apparently indifferent to those three crosses in the red evening twilight, and to the little group of perplexed and desolated watchers. The darkness closed upon the hill; the distant city set about its preparations for the Passover; scarcely any one but that knot of mourners on the way to their homes troubled whether Jesus of Nazareth was still dying or already dead." (Page 509.) Now, there it is! Human reason exalted above divine revelation! He walks by sight (sense); while "we walk by faith, not by sight" (sense or appearance), as the Scriptures teach. (2 Cor 5: 7.) In the language of our Savior, I would say to Mr. Wells and all his kind: "Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God." Yes, if he really "knew the Scriptures," he would believe what they say; and if he only "knew the power of God," it would be easy to believe the very thing he says "is difficult to believe nowadays." Nay, verily, it is not "difficult to believe nowadays that the order of nature indulged in such meaningless comments" as he calls "darkness over all the land for three hours" and "the veil of the temple being rent in two," etc. It is easy to believe all this (and more) "nowadays" by those faithful ones who accept the fundamental proposition of the Christian religion—viz., that Jesus is the Christ; the long-promised Messiah, the Son of the living God. But "higher critics" and others who reject this bed-rock truth of Christianity will ever find it "difficult to believe the order of nature indulged in such meaningless comments" (to them) at Christ's death on the cross. To us who believe, all such miraculous "comments" are full of meaning, instead of being "meaningless," as Wells says. They mean that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God! All who believe this wholeheartedly can easily believe the miraculous connected with it and all Christ's teaching; but those who reject the miraculous had as well reject the whole New Testament, and thus be left without a ray of hope beyond this vale of tears. It all must stand or fall together. And if "scarcely any one but that knot of mourners troubled whether Jesus of Nazareth was still dying or already dead," as Mr. Wells says, it only shows their cold unbelief and hardness of heart. But many thousands did believe after he rose from the dead. Now, how account for that, except through their believing the miraculous?

3. Mr. Wells says: "Paul had never seen Jesus." (Page 511.) This statement only shows his ignorance of God's word or his unbelief, or both, as the New Testament plainly says Jesus "appeared unto Paul." (See Acts 26: 15, 16; 1 Cor. 15: 1-7.) But that is miraculous, too much for "higher criticism" to believe.

The "Movies"—Are They Harmful?

BY C. E. HOLT.

Why ask this question? How would you answer it? Bear in mind that I am writing to professed Christians, men and women, boys and girls, who, if asked to what church they belong, would answer eagerly and positively thus: "We are members of the church of Christ." That means the church that Jesus built upon the Rock (Matt. 16: 18); the church for which he gave himself, for which he shed his blood. Naturally and reasonably, we would expect people who make such a claim to conduct themselves in such an exemplary and Christlike way that the world could and would see such a marked relation between their profession and general conduct that they would be compelled to acknowledge the genuineness of their claims. The people of the world care but little about "doctrine." They are not, as a rule, capable of appreciating the difference between "doctrine" and "doctrines." The majority of people—and this includes thousands in the different denominations—do not understand the differences between the true New Testament teaching and the various theologies of the schools.

We preach correct "doctrine" to the world, and say: "Why do you not accept it? Can you not see that we preach it just like it is laid down in the New Testament?" Their replies in substance are: "We want to be shown. We want to see results. What do you do more than others? In your general conduct we do not discern any improvement over your former lives. True, you were baptized, and you call your church 'the church of Christ,' and eat the Lord's Supper every Sunday; but we see some of you in the dance halls and other places of amusement just like other folks; and we see some of your preachers at the ball games, and others mixing with people of the world just as if there were no difference between the world and the church. Now, we see all this, and more than this; and pray tell us, do you think baptism and taking the Lord's Supper every Sunday will save you?"

This is the way the people of the world talk. It is the world we are trying to save. Now, I am not given to the habit of making comparisons—comparing sins with each other in order to make some particular sin or sins appear more dangerous and more to be avoided than some other sins. I do not think God makes the distinctions we often make. It is true that some sins are more far-reaching in their effects than others. But I wish in this essay to speak particularly of a great viper that has grown to enormous proportions and is insidiously working its way into the very vitals of the social, religious, and political institutions of our country and of the entire civilized world. I refer to the "movies," as they are commonly called—moving pictures. This is indeed a great invention, as we all admit, and might be advantageously used in teaching many things. The art is not wrong or sinful within itself considered. But, like many other great inventions, it has been prostituted to the lowest levels of sensualism and social corruption. I would not, in this short article, undertake to enumerate the evils that are linked with the moving-picture shows of our towns and cities. When we are confronted with the truth that a silly, clownish young man in the service of a film company is paid more money for his nonsensical performances than is the president of a large university, or than is paid to the President of the United States of America, it should cause us to pause and ask the reason why. Why is a girl with a pretty face and shapely limbs and a vivacious and adventurous disposition to be paid more money to dance and twist and kick and kiss men on the stage than is paid to a refined, modest, and educated girl who teaches school or who works at some useful and honorable business? Why should such be the case? It is the case, as we all know. It is a sad reflection on the intelligence and moral status of the country.

This moving-picture business affects every class of society, from the highest to the lowest. It recently walked into the official family of President Harding and captured his Postmaster General, Mr. Hayes. Mr. Hayes sold himself for the handsome (pitiful) sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year. That almost takes one's breath. I am glad Mr. Hayes was not a preacher. It would be a blow to the "ministry." Just think a moment! How can that great cancer on our national life afford it? From what source or sources do they acquire so much wealth as to enable them to pay one man such an enormous amount of money? My brethren and sisters, this money comes out of the pockets of the people. The deluded public pay the bills. Do you know that millions of professed Christians pour their hard-earned money into the laps of that voluptuous and soul-destroying machine?

The cry of "hard times" is heard on every hand; especially among church members do we hear this complaint. Many brethren will not subscribe for a good, wholesome, religious paper, whose families are regular customers at the picture shows and other places of amusement.

I am not now, and have never been, an extremist in regard to young people having proper diversion and entertainment. I have always tried to be conservative and reasonable along these lines. But the world is on a spree, and is intoxicated on the frivolous things of life. If the church joins in this orgy of indiscriminate and unrestrained indulgence of fleshly appetites and sensualities, then we may expect a swift and complete destruction of the social and religious fabric of our present civilization.

The money spent by the people in the "movies," while a great and inexcusable loss, is a mere bagatelle when compared to the moral and spiritual loss incurred thereby. It is useless to argue that people are not influenced by what they see and hear. In fact, we are a part of what we have seen and heard. Through the eye and the ear the inner self is reached. Not only are we mentally influenced, but our souls are affected likewise. I seriously doubt if men and women ever reach an age, so long as the faculties of their minds are normal, that they are not, in a measure, influenced by what they see and hear. It is still true that

Vice is a monster of such frightful mien,
That to be hated needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

But what can be done to stop the business? Can it be stopped? No, it cannot be stopped by protests from the preachers. So far as the world is concerned, no attention will be given to the protests and warnings from preachers. Even many members of churches will smile at such protests. The world has descended to such a low plane of morality that one, and only one, idea prevails in all lines of business, and that is: "Does it pay? Is there money in it?" If the moving-picture business did not produce great wealth to those who engage therein, it would soon pass out. So it is with baseball and all other nonproductive lines of business. When young people enter such business, they soon become wholly unfitted for any of the useful lines of business. It is appalling to think of the great army of young men and young women engaged in the "movies." But there is money in it. Yes, and there are many other things in it that strongly appeal to the frivolous and sensually inclined. If I could influence even one young man or one young woman to stop the "movie" habit and give himself or herself to more sensible and more useful things, I should be greatly rewarded for this little essay.

The Lordship of Jesus.

BY R. C. GOODPASTURE.

The inspired teachers of the apostolic church clearly recognized and emphasized the absolute and supreme Lordship of Jesus. It was one of the outstanding and vital points of Peter's fearless announcement on Pentecost. Said he: "Let all the house of Israel therefore know assuredly, that God hath made him both Lord and Christ, this Jesus whom ye crucified." (Acts 2: 36.) To be sure, Jesus was called "Lord" (John 11: 3), in a more or less conventional sense, while he was on earth; but he is "Lord" now in a greater sense of the word. "God hath made him both Lord and Christ." "Hath made" implies that he is "Lord" in a sense different from that which was true of him before his ascension. In other words, these very Jews, whose hands were red with the blood of murder, had put Jesus on a cross, but God had put him on a throne. (Acts 2: 30-36.) Peter places his climactic stress upon the Lordship and Messiahship of Jesus. To his hearers it was a fearful revelation that they must acknowledge and submit to the powerful and mighty claims of Jesus, whom they had rejected. The Lordship of Jesus is thundered through the Epistles and echoes to the last verse of the Revelation.

Notwithstanding the fact that the teaching upon the subject is abundant and clear, many fail to understand and respect the righteous claims of Jesus as Lord. Some would give him first place in the manger or in the stable, but they would not allow him lodging in the guest chamber. They would occasionally let him rule in their lives, but they would not enthrone him in their hearts. Divine is the admonition: "Sanctify in your hearts Christ as Lord." (1 Pet. 3: 15.) If we "sanctify"—that is, set apart, acknowledge, or regard—"Christ as Lord" in our hearts, we shall have no trouble in letting him be Master in our lives. In becoming "Lord" in our hearts, Jesus becomes "Lord" over our hearts. This means that he controls the issues of our lives. "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." (Prov. 4: 23.) Jesus, then, must hold in the hand of his dominion the sources of human thought, speech, and action. He must be "Lord of all" or not at all. Everything must be surrendered to his Lordship and employed in his service. There must be, there can be, no reservations. We must accept him as "Lord" upon his own conditions. Those who reject him as "Lord" cannot accept him as Savior. If he is "sanctified as Lord" in the heart, he will be manifested as "Lord" in the life. It is no little matter to commit the hidden springs of our existence to his authority, but it must be done.

There is no one who could be our "Lord" quite so well as Jesus. He alone has the rightful claims of Lordship. Who, besides him, ever received "all authority . . . in heaven and on earth?" To whom, besides, was it ever said: "Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies the footstool of thy feet." (Heb. 1: 13.) Who, besides him, would or could have died on the cross for the sins of all men? There is joy and hope in the fact that he who was slain to be our Savior was also exalted to be our Lord. In view of his vicarious death, we can conclude that only as "Lord" his "yoke is easy" and his "burden is light." (Matt. 11: 30.) Surely he who died for man's salvation will rule for man's well-being.

News Notes.

Hugh E. Garrett is preaching in Columbus, Ga., this week. C. C. McCampbell, the energetic preacher for the congregation in Rome, Ga., was in this city last week in the interest of the big tent the Rome church is having made for mission meetings this summer.

The Messenger at the Door.

"When I opened the door and saw one of those messenger boys with a yellow envelope in his hand, my heart was all a-flutter," said an old lady to her caller. "Actually I was afraid to open it, for I was just sure it was bad news. Well, you can guess how I felt when I finally mustered courage to read it and found it was only from Maxwell, saying he was coming home for a nice long visit." Often when God's messengers come to our doors, they see our pulses quicken and our faces blanch with fear. We are always so sure that we know what they mean. Is it illness that the Father sends? Is it poverty that hovers like an apparition in our path? How sure we are of their messages even before we have read them! Yet how often our fears are turned into faith and our dismal forebodings into rejoicing in the presence of the unexpected blessings these messages contain! —Forward.

Nashville (Tenn.) Notes.

BY S. H. HALL.

Judging from the interest the Nashville Christians have taken in our song drills, the Ryman Auditorium revival will be a great success. On Tuesday night (March 21) we had one of the most enthusiastic gatherings that I have seen in a long time at Russell and Ninth Streets. The house was packed almost to suffocation, and such singing as we had is seldom heard.

By the time this gets to our readers the revival will be under way, and we are expecting the very greatest results. It should be another Pentecost for the churches of Christ.

To those out of the city, let me state that we will have services every day from 12 (noon) to 12:45, and every evening at 7:45. So, when you come to Nashville on business, do not forget this day service. On Lord's days we will have services at 3 o'clock in the afternoon as well as the evening service.

Let every one that reads this remember this effort in his or her prayers.

THE WORK AT SAVANNAH, GA.

I am giving our readers a part of a letter received from Brother O. W. Rawlings, that it may be seen just how matters stand in Savannah:

Brother Hall: Your two letters and check received.

The work is moving on nicely, and we are anxious to get started on repairing the church house. I have prices from several contractors, and it will cost fifteen hundred dollars to make the necessary improvements. We can get the work completed so soon as we get the necessary funds.

I am inclosing an exact duplicate of the deed as recorded in Chatham County, which you may use as you see fit. Note the restrictive clause that we used.

Now, Brother Hall, we are ready for the meeting any time you think best, but would like to be in the new house first, as we feel that you can accomplish greater results.

Brother Ijams is doing a splendid work here, and is well liked by all."

Now, with this bit of information before you from Brother Rawlings, I want to make a few suggestions:

As many of our readers know, sometime ago the Savannah brethren bargained for a house that would have cost them ten thousand dollars. We all felt then that this was more than we could well handle; but it was the best thing in sight, so we decided to take it. But on investigation the title was found defective; hence, we had to let that go.

But those good people were determined to have a home, so continued to look. Finally Brother Rawlings found a house and lot for sale, better located than the first. It is a dwelling, however, whereas the first was a church house; and to make this dwelling meet our needs, we must do about fifteen hundred dollars' repair work on it.

But we are getting this place for forty-five hundred dollars, and fifteen hundred dollars has already been paid, leaving a balance of three thousand dollars, to be paid monthly. The Savannah members are meeting these monthly payments, but sorely need the fifteen hundred dollars to do the repair work, so that they can get into it and have a real church home to which to invite the people. We would like to get this work done before our revival. It will help more than words can tell. If you want strangers, and especially those who know so little about the church of Christ, to give you serious thought, you must get on the ground and do things, that they may see you are there to stay. We have so many new religions to-day—and many of them run into a city and hold forth for a few months, then move elsewhere—that it becomes necessary for us to put forth an effort in a new place to keep the oldest church in the world from being taken as one of these recent adventures. The church of Christ is something new to the Savannah people in spite of its age.

I am glad to say that the Russell Street brethren have sent fifty dollars, and will soon send fifty more, toward this repair work. Besides this, they are to send me there for a revival to continue so long as interest demands. They want to see Savannah put on her feet before this year ends, then turn to another point. I spent a short while with Brother W. W. Gant, of Shelbyville, Tenn., Monday of this week, and after he had heard the deed read he gave me a check for fifty dollars toward this repair work. This makes one hundred and fifty dollars we have in hands. Will not each one who reads this give something, and that now? Make your checks payable to O. W. Rawlings, and address him at 916 West Thirty-seventh Street, Savannah, Ga.

And may I not suggest, before closing, that we should do more than raise the fifteen hundred dollars? We should make it forty-five hundred dollars, so that we can eliminate the debt entirely. We need a minister located in Savannah, giving his whole time to the work. This congregation can take a man and support him if they are relieved from the debt. Brother Ijams is teaching school there now, and is doing his best at his own charges. We appreciate this, but more than this should be done. Brethren, please help. Savannah is one of our largest towns in Georgia, and is well located for a great work.

Field Notes.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

When I left Martin for Rives, Troy, Obion, etc., I did not expect to come back soon, but here I am in Martin again. The debate between Brother John C. Taylor, of Obion, and Jesse Neal, of Paducah, Ky., developed rather faster than we anticipated. It begins this afternoon (March 20) and lasts all the week. Jesse Neal is said to be one of the strongest debaters for the Missionary Baptists in these parts. The Lord willing, I will report this debate later.

During the past week I visited Obion, Glass, Miston, Curve, and Ripley. Brother Taylor assisted me in my work at Obion. There I met several excellent brethren. I enjoyed meeting our aged brother, T. M. Darnall, formerly of Corinth, Miss., who now makes his home with his son, Dr. Darnall. He can remember when Brother David Lipscomb held his debate in Watertown with a Baptist, which resulted in a good congregation being established there, which I understand is still in existence.

Brother D. B. (Brown) Anderson met me in Obion and drove me out to his home near Glass. This visit was enjoyable, as I had worked on the farm adjoining Brother Anderson's home thirty years ago, and his wife, Sister Lizzie Anderson, of Shady Grove, was a former schoolmate of mine. Also, there I met Brother and Sister Woody, "Pamplie" Anderson, and Noah Chimer, all former acquaintances in Hickman County. I also made the acquaintance of several excellent brethren, among them Brother Foster and Dr. Wells.

Miston is a little town on the railroad between Dyersburg and Hickman. This is the home of Brother and Sister J. B. Shelby, formerly of Hickman County. Also Brother J. H. Knox, son-in-law to Brother Shelby, lives at Bogota, near Miston. I preached in the schoolhouse. They have no house, and have had no worship there until recently. They complain about the fewness of their members, as they only have twenty or twenty-five. That would sound big to the brethren on the Pacific Coast. I hope some of the near-by congregations will send a preacher there and hold a few meetings. Brother Knox is a preacher of no mean ability, and could, no doubt, do the work, if they would encourage him and support him.

My card was not addressed properly to the brethren at Curve, and so no appointment was made for me. But I met several of the brethren at Ripley. This is the county seat of Lauderdale County. The congregation there is not very large, but they own a nice brick house. Several of the brethren are holding places of importance about the town. Brother H. L. Copeland is the preacher. He teaches in the public schools and preaches half the Sundays in Ripley and half in Henning. I enjoyed making his acquaintance. He is a young man of much zeal and ability.

On the train from Obion to Fulton I met Brethren Charlie Sweatt and I. A. Douthitt. This was my first meeting with Brother Douthitt; but I had heard of him often, and was glad to see him.

Here let me urge our preachers to speak a good word for the Gospel Advocate. It works this way: Get a family to reading a good religious paper like the Advocate, and that family will do better Christian work. It is very seldom that that will fail. Many preachers realize this. They say: "I wish this or that family would take the Advocate. They need it." Preachers are usually good boosters, but some do not realize the value of the Advocate, to the subscriber, to the preachers, to the local congregation, and to the church at large. Let us all speak a good word for the good old paper everywhere we go.

Backsliding.

BY R. P. CUFF.

Sad to say, not all of life is tranquil and serene. There are inwoven the stormy and the turbulent. The human heart is so constructed as to rebound to deepest joy. The poets are right when they call it "aching joy." It can also vibrate with tragic tunes of sadness and despair. How often the buoyancy and levity of youth are tempered by life's tragedies to the wisdom and prudence, the tranquillity and serenity, and the superb solidity of age! But sometimes the proper lessons of experience pass unlearned. The grouch, the pessimist, the cynic, the snarling coward, and the sarcastic misfit have felt, as they think, the ravages of time, and their chief delight (if it could be called "delight") is to darken the paths of men who are carrying heavy loads. Many of the young of the land become possessed with Byronic bitterness, and sometimes it lasts through middle age and into the senile years. One of the saddest things in the world to see is the man who has become weary in the Master's service, whose heart has grown so cold that it no longer brightens into the glow of earnestness and of victorious, triumphant, joyous work as he studies, sings, prays, or preaches; the man who has lapsed into indifference in the very days when he should be most vigorous and active for Christ. Backsliding is no new sin. Nor is its curse any less blighting to-day than in the days when Israel turned away from God.

In the book of Jeremiah (3: 12, 14, 22) we find that God calls upon backsliding Israel to return. Near the end of the chapter we learn that Israel gave heed to that call. Let us study this case of Israel's backsliding and see what light it sheds on present-day departures from God.

1. In what did Israel's backsliding consist? She had turned away from the mercy, love, and comfort which God alone can give. She was a captive in Assyria, Mesopotamia, and Media. Jehovah was calling her to return to her own land. The first verse of chapter three says of her: "Thou hast played the harlot with many lovers." This is a terrible picture. It tells us that Israel was an adulteress. Yet Jehovah was inviting her back to him. It was no small thing that Israel had done. Her idolatry filled the land. (See verse 2.) Jehovah withheld the showers, chastising Israel that she might cease from the sin; but in obstinacy she continued. Having a harlot's forehead, she refused to be ashamed. (Verse 3.) With tender, persuasive, compassionate words God had exhorted Israel to cry, "My Father," and Israel had spoken, but had continued in her evil. (Verses 4, 5.) The failure to comply with the exhortation was part of the backsliding. Jehovah had retained his anger—a thing he would not do forever; and Israel, taking advantage of his long-suffering, had gone ahead having her own way. (Verse 5.)

Evidently Israel was in revolt against God. Full well may she be branded "backslider," for she "played the harlot," "polluted the land," disregarded Jehovah's chastisement, refused to yield to his persuasion which is couched in the words "wilt thou not," and wantonly abused his mercy.

2. The evil results of backsliding. Backsliding puts a man out of intimate touch with God—that is, he puts himself out of such communion. It places him where he can no longer warn, with kind and influential voice, any one who is drifting toward the rocks of spiritual wreckage. Hence, we see that the backslider is not the only one affected. The church always feels a distinct loss when one of its members turns away from God and truth. The outside world is given a topic for corrupt conversation and an opportunity to make artful and dastardly thrusts at the Savior's blood-bought institution. Some man jumps at the chance to say: "Why should I be a member of the church? Look at So and So. I am better than he." The backslider injures himself, the church, and the world. Not until he returns to God can he have any expectation of a recovery of his influence and power for good. Unless he does return, ultimate doom awaits him.

3. A surprising call. What is the antidote for backsliding? It is expressed in God's word to Israel: "Return." Mercy-laden comes the call loud and clear. Notwithstanding Israel's idolatry, previous resistance of persuasion, and diabolic perversion of his mercy, God still calls upon Israel to return. It makes us wonder. It forces us to see that he is merciful.

4. The backslider's route of return. Israel was told to acknowledge her iniquity. (Verse 13.) Israel entered into weeping and supplications because of her perverseness. (Verse 21.) She felt the sense of shame. (Verse 25.) She came to realize that it was useless to look for help from the hills or mountains, but that "Jehovah our God is the salvation of Israel." She renewed her allegiance to Jehovah, recognizing him again as her God. (Verse 22.) Acknowledgment of iniquity, sorrow for sin, sense of shame, looking to God for help, and renewal of loyalty and allegiance to him are necessary to the restoration of the fallen saint to-day. They mean the same thing as repentance, confession, and prayer. No matter how often, and how openly, and how truly a man says, "I have sinned," it cannot bring satisfaction to his soul nor meet with the approval of God, unless he rightly applies it—that is, unless he acknowledges and puts away the very sin that is giving him trouble. As long as there is a certain sin that a man willingly forgets, allows, and connives at, failing to repent of it, it will kill the effect of his repentance for other sins and render his "I have sinned" of no avail.

5. The blessed results of return. God will remove his anger (verse 12), continue his love as a true husband (verse 14), give healing for the backslidings (verse 22), and give shepherds who will feed the restored one with knowledge and understanding (verse 15).

Let me demand of my own soul an answer to these questions: Do I need this lesson on backsliding? Is it possible that I have been neglectful of duty and have wandered farther away from God than I know?

Wherever injustice is being done; wherever the weak are being oppressed; wherever banded interests, whether financial or political, are allowed to triumph over the exigencies of truth; wherever personal expediency leads a man to set aside what he knows to be just; wherever truth is calumniated and ignored, there Christ is being crucified.—Gore.

Abraham: God's Covenant With Him.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

As has already been seen, the word "covenant" means an agreement, an oath, a binding, a testament, a promise, or a going between. There must always be two parties to a covenant. Our English word "covenant" is derived from the Latin con, together, and venio, to come. This compound signifies a coming together; an agreement, association, or meeting between two or more parties. Sometimes a third party or mediator is found in a covenant, but always two must be involved in the covenant.

In making the covenant, each party must be purified or cleansed. This required sin offerings and adjustments between the parties. Each party must be at its best. Of course, when God becomes one of the parties to a covenant, he is always pure and holy, and then man must be cleansed, purified, at his best in piety, holiness, and purity, before he can enter into the covenant with Jehovah. Every one entering into a covenant with Jehovah must do so in faith and sanctification. Jehovah does not take one into covenant relationship with him when that one is at the same time in covenant relationship with sin. Any one who is a partner with Satan and sin cannot become a party to a covenant with Jehovah; hence, there must be upon the part of man a purification of heart by faith and a turning away from all wickedness upon entering into a covenant with Jehovah. Abraham did this. He accepted the call, separated himself from idolatry and from his people and stood alone in his sanctified condition. In this lonely called-out and sanctified attitude to the world, with an unwavering faith, he is prepared to enter into a covenant with Jehovah. In accepting the call of Jehovah, he breaks friendship with the world and enters into friendship with Jehovah. Truly, "friendship has its crown in the friendship of God."

It seems that Jehovah brings Abraham into an attitude of dependence on him and then bears testimony to him that Jehovah "is almighty," thus able to perform what he agrees to do; that he is able to take care of those who put their trust in him, and wise enough to direct the life that commits itself into his care, and good enough to abundantly bless the heart that follows him. With such an attitude as this on the part of Abraham, Jehovah leads him out into the loneliness of the night, with the twinkling stars above him, and points him to the innumerable hosts of silent witnesses which "declare the glory of God," and with which every Chaldean was familiar, and calls upon him "to number the stars, if thou be able to number them: and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be." As Abraham stood there in the hush of the silent night and beheld the glory of God, the majesty and awe of the presence of Jehovah humbled him, the unimpeachable witnesses convicted him, and the power and wisdom of Jehovah convinced him. As Abraham stands and gazes into the vast expanse of the heaven, there settles upon his soul the purpose of Jehovah in calling him from his native country, and his heart takes hold, by faith, of the promises of God, he begins to understand that all of God's acts spring from the justice of his purpose and are directed by his wisdom. "And he believed in Jehovah: and he reckoned it to him for righteousness." (Gen. 15: 6.) "In that day Jehovah made a covenant with Abraham."

Upon the conditions of faith and obedience on the part of Abraham, Jehovah enters into this covenant with him. By this covenant Abraham and his posterity are bound to God, and Jehovah graciously binds himself to Abraham and his heirs. This covenant includes, on the part of Abraham, all of his fleshly heirs through the promised seed and all his spiritual heirs by faith; and this covenant includes, on the part of Jehovah, the protection and temporal blessings and also the advent of the Christ through the seed of Abraham. The covenant with its blessing belongs to all who will enter into it by faith on one side and includes all the spiritual blessings which come through Christ as a sacrifice and mediator on the other side. It includes the way of salvation through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. What a far-reaching and everlasting covenant it is! This covenant made at this time is renewed and enlarged until it expresses the full purpose and plan of Jehovah in the redemption of the human race. Abraham must begin to see that he is called upon to play a very important part in the far-reaching purpose of Jehovah.

There seems to be a threefold purpose revealed in this covenant with Abraham. The first is that the land of Canaan should belong to Abraham's seed. "Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." (Gen. 15: 18.) When Abraham was first called, he was told to go into "the land that I will show thee." Abraham went, not knowing where he should go; but now he is to understand that that country, inhabited by the seven strong Canaanitish tribes, from the river of Egypt to the great river, should belong to his heirs. What a reward promised unto him in a material way for his prompt, faithful obedience to Jehovah! He should look in every direction, and as far as the full sweep of mortal vision could range, Jehovah is now bequeathing to his heirs while he is yet childless.

The second element included in this covenant was that Jehovah would multiply his seed until they should become as numerous as the stars of the heaven and as numberless as the sands upon the seashore. What a promise this was! Abraham was still childless, and old and well stricken in years, yet his seed shall become so numerous. His faith did not stagger or waver; he believed God. It shall be as he believed and as God promised: "And I will make thee exceedingly fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee." (Gen. 17: 6.) Abraham is to be the father of a multitude, not only in the fleshly sense, but also in a spiritual sense. He is the father of all "who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham." The ever-expanding and all-comprehensive promise of Jehovah to Abraham in this covenant has yet to reach the full purpose of Jehovah, and as the ages come and go and seasons roll on, as many as are brought into the service of God, this promise is being fulfilled.

The third element of this covenant was that Jehovah would be a God unto his seed. It is stated: "I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee throughout their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee." (Gen. 17: 7.) It meant much to the seed of Abraham in a fleshly sense to have such a God as Jehovah for their God. It means more to us as God's people to-day, as the spiritual seed of Abraham, to have the all-wise, all-powerful Father of the Lord Jesus Christ as our God. This is included in the covenant with Abraham.

Have You Sent Us a New Subscriber?

We are pleased to announce that a goodly number of new subscribers are now being received. While this is true, however, many of our readers have not yet sent us a new subscriber. As now is the time to secure new subscribers, let us urge upon each reader to go to work at once to make up a list of subscribers to the Gospel Advocate. Wherever the Advocate is read, its influence is good. It encourages people to stand by the Bible and to be guided in their work and worship by "It is written." While the editors realize that they are weak and fallible, yet they love the truth and have no desire to teach error nor to lead the people away from the word of God.

If you have already sent us a number of subscribers, will you not make an effort to send in others? If you are among the ones who have not sent in a single new subscriber, will you not make an effort to send us at least two new subscribers within the next week?

Who Are Christians? No. 2.

By C. R. N.

Often much discussion is had, valuable space is wasted, and hard feelings are engendered over a war about words, growing out of a failure on the part of the disputants to understand the different shades of meaning each may give to the same word or because they view the subject from different angles. At times it appears to me that disputants strive to see how far apart they can get, rather than how nearly they are agreed. Discussions too often degenerate into personal wrangles, and instead of the issue being discussed the personal feature obscures the issue, and the opponent is regarded as an enemy. Then there are those who are so "thin-rind" that they cannot stand to be criticized, and are so nearsighted in discernment that they think when you question the position they have advanced you have offered them a personal affront.

The question has been asked me: "Are there Christians in the different religious organizations, churches, especially the Missionary Baptist Church?"

It cannot be successfully denied that those who have been born again are children of God; and if children of God, they are in the family of God, the house of God, which is the church. (1 Tim. 3: 15.) Only those who have false conceptions of the church of Christ think of one as having been born again and not being in the church. I think the ground for this false idea is twofold. (1) Sectarianism has been so thoroughly taught over the country, and their view that one must be saved, and subsequent thereto he may become a member of the church, has become so widespread that it has found lodgment in nearly every heart. (2) Most people think of the church of Christ as they do of sectarian churches—as simply local congregations. The church of Christ is the body of Christ. Cornelius, when baptized (Acts 10), became a child of God, saved, and by the same act he became a member of the church—one of the church. The man from Ethiopia (Acts 8), when he was baptized, became a member of the church; but when he reached his home and engaged in his work as treasurer to Candace, though a member of the church, he was not a member of any local congregation. The view that one must be a member of a local congregation, else he is not a member of the church, has been the ground for much false thinking.

It is sad that it is true, and being true it is sadder, that some men, though they have been born again, though they are God's children, have become so engrossed with the affairs of this world that their conduct is such that they must be, and are, withdrawn from by the church. (2 Thess. 3: 6.) Though they have been withdrawn from, the fact is not changed that they are children of God, and, being children, they are in the family, the house, the church of God; but are they Christians?

What meaning do you attach to the word "Christian?" Webster defines the word "Christian:" "One who believes, or professes or is assumed to believe, in Jesus Christ." There are but few of the English-speaking people who are not Christians, if viewed in the light of this definition. The heathens think and speak of all English-speaking people as Christians, and the United States is called a "Christian nation" because we recognize Jehovah as God and Jesus as the Savior, as contrasted with the gods of heathen reverence. To adopt the definition of Webster as yours, then one need not be a member of any church to be a Christian; indeed, even a profession of faith in Christ is not necessary on your part for you to be designated as a Christian. What meaning do you give to the word "Christian?"

At times I hear one referred to as a Christian, and later learn that the speaker merely meant to convey the idea that the man had weighed the different religions of the world and decided that Christianity is of God. Such a man may be called a "Christian" in judgment. There are those who apply the term "Christian" to one who has professed to be converted to Christ, whether he has or has not become a church member.

Thayer, in his Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament, defines "Christian:" "A follower of Christ."

If by the term "Christian" you mean "a follower of Christ," there must needs be raised another question—viz.: What limitations, what latitude, do you allow the "follower of Christ" as respects moral rectitude and religious punctiliousness? Are those from whom the congregation has withdrawn because of moral laxity, indifference, willful sins, or heretical teachings, Christians? Having been born again, they are children of God; and if you interrogate them they will affirm stoutly their belief of the Bible and faith in Christ, but freely admit that they are not living as they should—that they are living in and practicing sin. If you mean by a Christian a "follower of Christ," then these children of God who have apostatized, and because of such defection have been withdrawn from, are not Christians—they do not "follow Christ." This is viewing them as respects their actions, not as respects their faith.

Here another question arises, and it may prove to be a vexing one—namely: Must one follow Christ so perfectly that he never makes a mistake in his purpose, or actions, to be a Christian? Must one attain perfection in the absolute to be a Christian? If no, then how far may one deviate from the truth, how far short of following Christ may one fall, and still be a Christian?

Do you say: "A Christian is one whose heart is filled with love for God, whose purpose is to do the will of the Master?" Such is the purpose of a Christian, certainly; but there are those whose "purpose is to do the will of the Master" who have never been born again, who have never obeyed the gospel. Such people are not Christians, if you mean by the term "a follower of Christ." They may be denominated "Christians at heart," but certainly they are not "Christians in fact," never having obeyed the gospel.

It is eminently correct to declare that all who have been born again are in the church of Christ; but when you mean by Christian "a follower of Christ," it should be remembered that some in the church have ceased to follow Christ and are not Christians for that reason—they have apostatized.

I find no place in my vocabulary for such expressions as "worldly Christians," "dancing Christians," "gambling Christians," "lying Christians." There are worldly church members, church members who dance, and church members who steal from the Lord. To me the term "worldly Christian" is as incongruous as the term "pious devil," "hot ice," "cold fire," or "white black."

I never speak of those from whom the church has withdrawn as "Christians," though they may have been born again; and if they have, they are children of God.

It is possible for one to become a child of God, and for such a one to become a member of a sectarian body. Entrance into the sectarian body does not change the fact that they are children of God. Be it remembered that it is not belief of, nor obedience to, sectarian doctrine which makes one a child of God.

But you ask me: "Are there Christians in the sectarian bodies?"

More next week.

Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Divine Healing.

BY F. B. S.

Mrs. Willie Mae Daniels, of Little Lot, Tenn., asks the following: "Does James 5: 13-15 teach divine healing? Also, the signs in Mark 16: 17, 18. If this does not teach divine healing, what does it teach?"

I think both passages teach divine healing; but that was during the age of miracles. Many of the elders of the churches in that day had the gift of healing. As to the signs spoken of in Mark 16: 17, 18, they did follow the preaching of the apostles. However, the passage does not say how long they would follow. Paul says: "Love never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall be done away; whether there be tongues, they shall cease." (1 Cor. 13: 8.) In dealing with the word of God, we should always remember that it is all true. Since the Savior's statement is true, these signs must have followed the preaching of the apostles; and since Paul's statement is also true, they must have ceased. It is a mistake to place an interpretation on the Savior's language that would make Paul's untrue. Both are true. The only way that I can see for both statements to be true is that the signs followed for a time and then ceased. We can be sure that the signs mentioned by the Savior are the same as the things that Paul was talking about, because both mention tongues as one of the things under consideration. When we know what these signs were for, we can then tell when and why they ceased. The purpose of these signs was clearly stated by the apostle when he said: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great a salvation? which having at the first been spoken through the Lord, was confirmed unto us by them that heard; God also bearing witness with them, both by signs and wonders, and by manifold powers, and by gifts of the Holy Spirit, according to his own will" (Heb. 2: 3, 4.) The purpose of these signs was to confirm the word; and when the word is completely confirmed or established, there is no more need for the signs; and, as Paul says, they ceased. This thought is borne out by that which immediately follows: "For we know in part, and we prophesy in part; but when that which is perfect is come, that which is in part shall be done away." (1 Cor. 13: 9, 10.) The "perfect" thing here referred to, no doubt, is the perfect will of God, completely and perfectly confirmed. This was done by the miracles that followed in that day. We now have the New Testament established by miracle, and we do not need any further signs. The Savior said: "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father." (John 14: 12.) This does not say "greater miracles," but "greater works." The greatest work in the world is to save a soul. These apostles were to preach the gospel, and by it sinners were to be saved. The gospel has been confirmed by the signs and miracles, and now we are instruments in God's hands to teach it and thus do the greatest work in the world.

Calling for More Proof.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Brother C. M. Stubblefield, of Paducah, Ky., writes as follows:

Dear Brother Smith: You started in, a while back, to show that the "digressives" had done precisely what David Lipscomb and Benjamin Franklin said, many years ago, they would do—form a denomination—and now you've quit! "Ye did run well; what hindered you?" Go on with it. The people all over the country need to know precisely what has been done. They need to know it that they may avoid all thoughts of forming such organizations or any other organization. The best people among the "digressives"—the leading preachers among them—will rejoice to see the thing scorched to the core. It would be well, I think, for you to keep the fact before the readers that the work being done by Book and others is the very kind of work pleaded for by the Gospel Advocate all along.

Well, Brother Charley, when one completes a thing, is it not time to "quit" that and go at something else? I thought I did exactly what I started out to do, and that is the reason I quit; but if more evidence is needed to show that the society brethren have crystallized into a denomination, there is plenty of it at hand. They have about all the human machinery necessary to furnish and equip a religious organization to function as one of the "sister denominations," and many of their leading men recognize and call themselves a denomination. It is true that the more conservative element among them repudiate the claim of denominationalism, but they are chided by the "broad(?)-minded" with the facts that they have all the earmarks of a denomination and that it is folly to deny the fact. They affiliate with the denominations, and tabulate themselves just as the rest of the denominations, only they call themselves "the Christian Church" or "the Church of Christ."

A denomination consists in local congregations federated or bound together in a central head which controls and practically manages the affairs of these congregations. Of course, there are differentiating features between all the denominations in Christendom, but in some fundamental principles they are all cast into the same mold. The Presbyterian denomination has as its central head the General Assembly; the Methodist, the General Conference; the Baptist, the General Association; and the "Christian Church," or "Church of Christ," as it is now termed by many, has its Board of the United Societies, and their Annual Convention with its representative delegates from the different congregations tied on to it. These managers of the United Society seem to be supreme in the management of the affairs of the local congregations committed to them, and they have dragged these churches, as their representatives, into the advocacy and practice of what is called "open membership"—that is, receiving into the fellowship and membership of the congregations people who have not been immersed. They have also recognized what is called "church federation"—that is, if one denomination has a missionary at work in a field, all the rest must hands off. Brother W. H. Book, of Columbus, Ind., as published in these columns a few weeks past, tried to get several representatives of this denomination to send a native of India as a missionary into a certain district, but was turned down on the ground that the territory was preoccupied by a "sister denomination." There is, and has been for a long time, war to the hilt between the Christian Standard, representative of the more conservative element, and the Christian Century as well as the Christian-Evangelist, representatives of the United Society and its constituents; over these exceedingly radical departures. The Christian Standard and its following occupy a rather peculiar attitude in this very much disturbed state of affairs. They do not like and very vigorously oppose the denomination, with its open membership and other objectionable features, but seem unwilling to become divorced from this unscriptural thing that has brought upon "the brotherhood" so much trouble in these latter days in the way of bitterness and alienations, calling for church congresses to openly protest against the way things have gone. As one good brother says: "The Christian Standard occupies a position somewhat comparable to the deaf-and-dumb man who was told that his wife was unfaithful to him and that he should leave her. He made signs to the effect that he would not leave her, because he was afraid he could not get another wife. The Standard loves the society and the denomination and will not give them up, although recognizing their unfaithfulness, because it wants a companion of that kind, only she must not be quite so bold and bad."

The Jewish Sabbath.

BY F. B. S.

Brother Rozar, of Watertown, Tenn., asks: "How can one show or prove to an inquirer that Saturday was the Jewish Sabbath?" I answer, it is the easiest thing in the world to do, provided the inquirer has ordinary intelligence. If he has ordinary ability, he knows that Saturday is the seventh day of the week. It would hardly be necessary to offer proof of this fact, because it is unquestioned. With this fact admitted, there is but one thing to show or prove—that is, that the seventh day was the Jewish Sabbath.

The first time any one ever received a law from God to keep the Sabbath was when it was made a part of the Ten Commandments. In giving the Ten Commandments, God said: "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work; but the seventh day is a Sabbath unto Jehovah thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days Jehovah made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore Jehovah blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it." (Ex. 20: 8-11.) This surely is sufficient to show or prove to any inquirer that the Sabbath was the seventh day of the week.

But to show or prove that this was the Jewish Sabbath, it is necessary to prove that this law which contains the Sabbath was a Jewish law, or a law given only to the Jewish people. To prove this, it is only necessary to read the caption or introduction to the law, and this is found in the beginning of the chapter in these words: "And God spake all these words, saying, I am Jehovah thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." (Verses 1, 2.) Since the Jewish nation was the only nation God ever brought out of Egypt, the caption to the law shows that it was a Jewish law; and as this law alone gives the Sabbath to man, it ought to be sufficient proof that the seventh day was the Jewish Sabbath.

Since all intelligent people know that the seventh day is Saturday, it occurs to me that Brother Rozar's inquirer should accept this as final; but for fear this inquirer might have some trouble about a Christian Sabbath, I am inclined to go further and say that there is no such day in the Bible as a Christian Sabbath. The New Testament mentions the Sabbath numbers of times, but never as a Christian institution. The "first day of the week" is referred to in the New Testament as an important day with the Christian, but not the Sabbath or a Sabbath. The Sabbath and the first day of the week are mentioned in the same verse, and any one ought to be able to see that they were different days of the week. "Now late on the Sabbath day, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulcher." (Matt. 28: 1.) This verse also shows that the Sabbath was the seventh day, and that it was a different day from the first day of the week. Christians are required to keep the first day of the week, not as a Sabbath, but as "the Lord's day" (Rev. 1: 10); not as a memorial of their deliverance from Egypt, for we were never in Egypt, but in honor and as a memorial of the resurrection of Christ from the dead. The first day of the week is the memorial day for the Christians.

While the New Testament speaks of the Sabbath often, and of the apostles' going into the synagogues of the Jews on the Sabbath, Christians are nowhere commanded to keep the Sabbath. No apostle gave any penalty for breaking it. The apostles went to the Jewish synagogues on the Sabbath, because they could always find Jews present there on that day to preach to, but there is no proof that they kept it as a Christian duty. The apostle Paul wrote fourteen books of the New Testament, and gives the duties of the Christian on many subjects, but he never one time suggested that keeping the Sabbath was any part of the duty of a Christian. It is true, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy," is one of the Ten Commandments; but the law has been taken out of the way. "Having blotted out the bond written in ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us; and he hath taken it out of the way, nailing it to the cross." (Col. 2: 14.) The Lord's day, the first day of the week, did not come to us in the place of the Sabbath. The Sabbath has no place in the Christian dispensation. The Sabbath was not changed to the first day of the week. To change means to alter, to amend; and the Sabbath was not altered or amended, but it was abolished. (2 Cor. 3: 6-14.)

Let us remember the first day of the week, the resurrection day of our Lord, and, like the brethren of Troas, gather together upon this day to break bread. (Acts 20: 7.) The resurrection day is the greatest day that the Christian has, for the hope of the Christian rests upon that which took place on that day. "And if Christ hath not been raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins." (1 Cor. 15: 17.) Why any one should desire to go back to the old law and thus become a Judaizer is more than I can understand. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a feast day or a new moon or a Sabbath day; which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is Christ's." (Col. 2: 16, 17.) Jesus kept the Sabbath, because he lived and died under the law of Moses. The last Sabbath that he kept was the one in which his body slept in death in Joseph's tomb. This was a bright day for his enemies, for they had his body in the grave, as no doubt they thought, forever; but the next morning, early on the first day of the week, he rose from the dead, and the first day has ever been and will ever be the brightest day to the disciple, because it was the resurrection day. Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together in memory of this great event.

The turning point of life is where we cease trying to get a blessing and begin trying to be a blessing.—Exchange.

At Home and Abroad

F. W. Smith reports a full house at Franklin, Tenn., on last Lord's day, morning and night.

J. S. Ward preached at both services at Lawrence Avenue Church, this city, Sunday, to good audiences.

H. A. Rogers began a short meeting with the church at Harptree, Saskatchewan, Canada, last Lord's day.

H. H. Turner reports a fine meeting at Altus, Okla., with several confessions and baptisms. The meeting is still in progress.

A. B. Lipscomb will begin a tent meeting at Ocala, Fla., next Lord's day. Following this meeting he will hold another at Valdosta, Ga.

Charles E. Fogle will begin a meeting with the church of Christ at Dayton, Ohio, on June 1. Everything is in readiness, and a great meeting is planned.

M. C. Cayce, of Jackson, Miss., paid us a visit recently. He secured a number of new subscribers for the Gospel Advocate. He is a tireless worker in the Master's vineyard.

From J. W. Grant, 607 North Kentucky Avenue, Lakeland, Fla.: "Our work here is progressing nicely. Interest is increasing slowly, but constantly. We seem to be getting on a firm basis."

T. B. Clark writes from Gallatin, Tenn., March 20, as follows: "The first three Sundays in March have been good days for the church here. We have had large crowds and good interest. One took membership with us yesterday."

From J. C. Mosley, Whitwell, Tenn., March 20: "I am still in the hospital. My burden has been hard to bear. I hope to be able to go away soon." We trust Brother Mosley will continue to improve and will soon be able to "preach the word."

O. D. Bearden, of Atlanta, Ga., who is here visiting his mother and brothers, was in this office last Monday. He reports the work in Atlanta as doing very well. Brother Bearden is one of the charter members of our first congregation in Atlanta.

By special request S. H. Hall will preach at Fifth Street, this city, next Sunday morning at eleven o'clock on "Why We Do Not Use Instrumental Music in the Worship." Hugh E. Garrett, of Atlanta, Ga., will speak at S. H. Hall's place, at Ninth and Russell Streets, Sunday morning.

J. C. Mayberry, Los Molinos, Cal., Route 1, sends in the following: "I would like to know if the Brother Sewell (E. W. Sewell, I believe) who was at Dinuba, Cal., a while, is the same E. W. Sewell who was at Colusa, Cal., in 1903. I will appreciate this information." If any one can furnish Brother Mayberry this information, write him as above.

From S. E. Witty, Los Angeles, Cal.: "Sunday, March 19, was a good day for the work of the Central church of Christ, this city. The audiences were large both morning and evening, many visitors being present. There were four additions to the congregation. Robert E. Wright has made a good impression on the brethren here, and also at Ontario."

From A. F. Thurman, March 24: "I am still working full time with the church at Chillicothe, Texas. I am greatly pleased to be with this band of true Christians that are so willing, anxious, and ready at all times to do their part as required of them by their Lord, the Christ. The work is fine and the interest is growing. Let the Lord be praised."

From Ernest D. Shelton, Box 111, Cordell, Okla., March 22: "I have decided to spend the entire summer in the evangelistic field, beginning on May 25 and continuing until school opens in September. I am anxious to arrange for as many meetings during this time as I can hold. I want to keep busy continuously. Brethren, may I serve you? If so, write me at once."

Earnest C. Love, our field man, was in the office Monday from an extended trip to West Tennessee, where he has been working in the interest of the Gospel Advocate and preaching the gospel. He was on his way to visit his father at Duck River, Tenn., where he expects to be for a few days; but he will continue his work for the Advocate, and the readers will hear from him regularly, as heretofore.

E. S. Jelley sends the following news from India: "We are all well, except our eleven-months-old baby, who has sore eyes and typhoid fever. To-day seems to be the crisis. She seems slightly improving. The Indian revolution is a serious thing. Thousands of troops block the roads. I received a letter from a Congregationalist missionary about the matter, and he says that no one can foresee the result. There was one baptism here last week."

From John H. Arms, Hermitage Springs, Tenn.: "I have been at home for more than a month on account of the serious illness of my wife. I have been unable to fill any appointments for some time. Owing to the condition of my wife's health, I shall have to discontinue all evangelistic work indefinitely. I may be able to place an order or two at places near home." Brother Arms is a good and useful man, and we trust his wife's health will soon permit him to be back in the field. His work is greatly needed.

J. O. Barnes and J. M. Cole, of Lake City, Fla., send this cheerful message: "Our hearts are made to rejoice and give glory to God through Jesus Christ when we announce that our meetinghouse in Lake City is paid for and no one can molest us or make us afraid. We now own a property in a central location in the city worth three thousand dollars, with the 'restrictive clause' in the deed. This was made possible by the fellowship of our faithful brethren in Christ who so liberally came to our assistance when we called for funds to help us build. We take this means of telling them this good news. We thank each one who had fellowship with us, and pray that God's blessings may continue on each one and that their lives may be spared many years in which to do good."

J. O. Golphenec, Elmdale, Mont., writing under date of March 14, reports that during January he received for the Montana mission contributions amounting to sixty-six dollars, and in February he received sixty-two dollars. He then says: "I wish to express my sincere thanks to all the donors. The winter here has been very severe, and I and my family have had the 'flu' and other hardships with which to contend. We can have no idea what would have been the result if this love had not been shown. But now the long winter has about gone and spring is almost here. We are now ready to begin the season's work with a stronger determination than ever. We hope that we may be able to say: 'They are his people, which were not his people.' We have tried to strengthen the congregations near home this winter, and now we will expect them to stand without a preacher during most of the summer. So we will expect to go to them that have not heard. We must lay the foundation and another build thereon. May God help us, that we may take heed how we build."

B. H. Murphy, of David Lipscomb College, reports as follows on a visit to the Cookeville church: "Mrs. Murphy and I were invited to spend a few days with the Cookeville brethren during R. V. Cawthon's meeting. We formerly lived at Cookeville, and, having been away three years, we were glad to return for a brief visit. The thing that impressed me most while there was the zeal and earnestness of the church. J. Pettey Ezell moved there last fall, and let me say here with all the emphasis of my being that where J. Pettey Ezell goes something must be done. The church has taken on new life in several ways—(1) the Sunday-school enrollment has increased, (2) the contributions have increased fourfold, and (3) the midweek meetings, four in number, are well attended. As evidence that Brother Ezell and his work are appreciated, the brethren presented him with a new Ford touring car while we were there. Brother Cawthon was doing some splendid preaching to appreciative audiences, being ably assisted by Brethren Ezell, Allen Phy, E. Gaston Collins, Willis H. Allen, and others."

L. R. Wilson, Henderson, Tenn., makes the following report of the Colley-Hopper debate: "Beginning on March 1, R. L. Colley engaged W. H. Hopper (Missionary Baptist) in debate at Hickory Plains, near Huntingdon, continuing for three days. The general church propositions were discussed. Hopper affirmed the first day and a half, and Brother Colley affirmed the last day and a half. Rain fell all the night before and on the first day of the debate and began freezing about noon the first day. By night everything was robed in ice. The weather did not moderate but a very little till the debate was over. The house was so open that the speakers did not remove their rubbers from their feet while speaking. The hearers did not remove their rubbers or heavy coats at any time during the debate. But in spite of all this we had a splendid audience every day. The very best spirit was manifested by the speakers during the entire debate, and we are sure much good will follow. The Baptists have already remarked that they expect to have a ten-days' debate there later, which is evidence that they are dissatisfied."

F. G. Bloodworth, Holtland, Tenn., says: "There is more good news in one Gospel Advocate than in five daily newspapers."

T. M. Carney, who labors with the church in San Angelo, Texas, announces that Foy E. Wallace, to do the preaching, and Tillie S. Tedlie, to direct the song service, will begin with them on the fifth Sunday in April.

Mrs. Ed. A. Woodson, Bethpage, Tenn., renews her subscription to the Gospel Advocate and says: "I cannot think of leaving off the Advocate. It grows better each year. Often one article is worth more to me than a year's subscription."

Brother Cuthbertson reports seven additions to the congregation in Denison, Texas, recently, and that the average attendance in the Bible classes for the month of February was three hundred and two. They are making room for more students in the Bible-study work.

J. W. Bush, M.D., New Britain, Conn., says: "I have received a sample supply of your Quarterlies and Bible lesson helps, and find them a marvel of simplicity and completeness. I know of nothing better as an aid to Bible study at any price. I commend them without reserve."

A. F. Thurman sends the following encouraging words from Chillicothe, Texas: "The Gospel Advocate is indeed a great and good paper. Seems to me it gets better as the days come and go. Thank the Lord for our splendid gospel papers that bring to our poor hearts so many needful things."

P. N. Lavender, Thompson's Station, Tenn., renews his subscription to the Gospel Advocate and sends us a new subscriber. He says: "The Advocate is a welcome visitor in our home; in fact, we would not want to keep house without it. Hope it will always continue to hold out for the truth as it does now."

E. J. Henley, Alf, Ark., in renewing his subscription to the Gospel Advocate, says: "This makes twenty-five years I have been taking the Advocate. When I began, Brethren Lipscomb and Sewell were in their prime as writers. What changes since then, and still the good old Advocate—loyal and contending for the one faith!"

C. J. Roberson, who is supported in missionary work in Hill County, Texas, by the churches in that county, is doing very valuable work. The churches think they have the right man in the right place. Gratifying results have followed his efforts in every place he has visited, and the work is just beginning to get under way.

W. P. Skaggs, who labors with the church in Itasca, Texas, reports the work progressing nicely. The attendance continues to be all that they can expect, weather conditions considered. Brother Skaggs can be had for a meeting beginning on the fifth Sunday in April. The church which secures him is to be congratulated.

From J. W. Howell, 902 South Third Avenue, Columbus, Miss.: "I must say that the Gospel Advocate is a great paper, and is, indeed, a source of much inspiration to me pertaining to things divine. No doubt many precious souls would be saved from Satan and sin and be translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son, if such paper could visit them weekly. Would that I could make this possible, in a small way, at least!"

G. F. Gibbs, Perry Road, Greenville, S. C., addresses the following to the brethren in Christ: "Just to let you know that I am working in Greenville, and want the names of any here who may be interested in the church. Do not wait; it means much. Last Lord's day (March 19) we had fifteen present, mostly children, and we desire your prayers and efforts that we may grow. Each week so far we have found a new one, and we are persuaded that there are more. At present we meet in my home."

From A. O. Colley, Dallas, Texas, March 16: "Four additions to the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church, this city, last Lord's day. We had about all we could comfortably seat to attend the morning service. Good crowds at all services. I preached at Rice, some forty miles out on the Corsicana Inter-urban line, at 3 P.M. Some of our workers go to Woodlawn Hospital every Sunday to worship with our unfortunate brothers and sisters who are there. The work is fine in Dallas. All the churches of Christ are doing well."

From R. L. Whiteside, Denton, Texas, March 13: "On the fourth Sunday in February I preached at Tyler. One young man made the confession at the evening service and was baptized 'the same hour of the night.' On the first Sunday in this month I preached twice to attentive audiences at Weatherford, and on the second Sunday I preached twice at Ethel. There are good churches at all these places, and all seem to be doing fairly well. I can arrange to hold meetings this spring, and have some time for meetings in the summer and fall."

From H. A. Rogers, Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada: "I began a meeting here on the first Sunday in March and preached twenty-one times. The meeting encouraged the members very much, and five were added to the church—four by confession and baptism and one from the Baptists who claimed that she was not scripturally baptized. Many others were 'almost persuaded.' I wish to again remind the brotherhood that if they send money by bank draft or express money order, I have no difficulty in getting the money. Post-office money orders cause trouble at times."

From J. G. Malphurs: "The church in Clarksville, Tenn., is a brave little band. From winter to winter they have met in the courthouse, without fire; and while their hands have been tied so that they could not do much in the city, they have done a splendid part in mission work in Montgomery and Stewart counties. The 'disservatives' are vastly in the majority, yet this need not be the case if the loyal brethren can get a little help to build back that which was lost years ago because a man was not on the job. This faithful little band has bought a splendid lot, paying two thousand dollars cash for it. They propose to build a modest meetinghouse, brick-veneered, at a cost of about six or seven thousand dollars. The restrictive clause is in the deed, and they are trying to get ready to begin actual work by April 1. But they must have some help."

The brethren at Des Moines, New Mexico, owe about three hundred and twenty-five dollars on the house in which they worship, for which the bank holds the note. The note is now about five months past due, and the bank is asking for the money in the thirty days. They say they have taxed themselves to the limit, and they are now asking the brotherhood to help them pay off the debt so that they may be unhampered in their work and worship. Des Moines is located in the northern part of the State and is the only congregation within a radius of sixty-five miles. Many who go there from various parts of the country seeking relief from lung troubles find this a very welcome church home. Any one desiring information concerning the country should address B. F. Nottingham, J. M. Baxley, or C. A. Trevillion. Send contributions to Miss Clementine Ivie."

From W. D. Black, Ozona, Texas, March 16: "The work out here is doing fine. There were two good services at Sonora last Sunday. I went to Mertzon on the first Sunday in this month, and preached at Arden in the afternoon. At the night service in Mertzon we had one confession. Baptizing on Monday morning. Interest is fine here at Ozona. Last Monday a friend of mine, a man eighty-two years old, made the confession, and I had the pleasure of assisting him in obeying his Lord in baptism. The brethren all rejoice over the gradual growth of the cause of our Lord here. I am to preach here next Sunday and Sunday night, and at Barnhart in the afternoon. A. LeRoy Elkins is now located at Del Rio, and we are glad to have him and his family with us in this part of the country. The prospect for the cause of Christ in this part of the State looks brighter than ever before. May the Lord abundantly bless the labor of his faithful followers everywhere."

Mrs. A. F. Warren, Rogers, Ark., writes: "The church of Christ at Bay, Ark., was established about sixteen years ago by J. W. Dunn, and has had a very hard struggle all these years. They have never been able to have a house of their own in which to worship. This year the faithful few decided to build, and now have their house almost completed, but lack one hundred dollars having enough to finish it so they can meet in it. W. A. Hall, who has been their faithful leader for many years, has made it possible for them to have a building by giving them five hundred dollars and a nice lot, one of the best locations in the town. Sister J. A. Oliver has also given liberally of her means and worked faithfully in many ways to help raise the money. Bay is on the Frisco Railroad, fifty-two miles from Memphis, and has a population of three or four hundred. The church has about thirty members—about fifteen faithful ones. Bay was my childhood home, and I obeyed the gospel there under the preaching of J. W. Dunn, who might be glad to know that almost all those who obeyed the gospel under his teaching have remained loyal and faithful. Some of our very best preachers have labored there. Any help that may be given them will be appreciated. Send donations to W. A. Hall or Mrs. J. A. Oliver."

Plans for Meetings.

With the desire to make the best use of the time that God gives me and to consecrate whatever knowledge and experience I may possess to the salvation of souls, I have arranged for an extensive campaign in the evangelistic field. The first meeting will begin, the Lord willing, at Ocala, Fla., on April 2. From all I can learn of the place, Ocala is a most inviting spot with many natural and commercial advantages. Brethren S. W. Colson and M. L. Humphreys, who are taking the lead in preparing for the meeting, believe that the people are ready for the gospel message, and there is hope for the establishment of a strong congregation. Brother J. P. Prevatt, of Gainesville, Fla., has promised to be with the Ocala brethren during the meeting. A large tent has been shipped from Nashville. It cheers my heart to know that I will not only have the coöperation of the brethren in Florida, but many Christians here will offer prayers for the success of the work.

Following the Ocala meeting, I have promised to visit the church at Valdosta, Ga., and be with them for a period of two weeks. The church there, as the readers of the Gospel Advocate know, is one of the strongest and most useful in the far Southern field. It has not only taken care of its own membership and added to its local influence from year to year, but has shown the true missionary spirit in sending the gospel to others. Brother G. E. Claus is their local evangelist.

Plans have been completed for a month's evangelistic campaign in and around Dresden, Tenn., beginning about June 1. With commendable zeal and enthusiasm the wide-awake band of Christians at Dresden has secured a tent with proper equipment and has begun already to advertise the meeting. It will be, indeed, a pleasure to work with them in their earnest effort for the enlargement of the Master's cause. It is always inspiring to find a people with a vision of greater things, and willing to have that vision realized in accord with the New Testament pattern.

Following the strenuous campaign at Dresden, I have planned to begin a meeting at Menlo, Ga. This congregation, too, is not only ready, but eager to increase its usefulness and to bring in sheaves from the harvest of souls. I shall do all I can to encourage them. Other meetings will follow if time can be arranged.

Reports coming in from various sections of the country indicate that the churches generally are determined to make the coming summer and fall memorable in point of self-sacrificing endeavor for the spread of the kingdom. God help us and bless us in doing his will.

Estimating Gypsy Smith's Revival.

Christians in Nashville are practically unanimous in the expression of their opinion concerning the value of the recent Gypsy Smith revival. They agree that he did not set forth plainly the fundamental conditions of the gospel as revealed in the New Testament. While "Jesus" was his favorite theme both in sermon and in song, yet he did not preach Jesus as the apostles preached him. At the same time, it is fair to state that Gypsy Smith taught some splendid practical lessons derived from the Christian religion, and taught them in a pointed way and with most telling effect. Furthermore, his sermons were free from the vulgar and clownish methods that characterize some of the widely known evangelists. His magnetic personality radiates good feeling and compels attention. He caused hundreds to think seriously and soberly of high and holy things who would not have done so otherwise. Personally, I believe that God has used this man, imperfect as his message was, for a new awakening in our city. It should be the earnest effort of Christians in Nashville to teach those who are now in a more thoughtful and receptive mood "the way of the Lord more perfectly." Certainly we ought not to harbor any ill will toward one who has softened the soil into which we propose to sow the seed.

Stripe-Washing.

While it may be granted that Gypsy Smith's messages to alien sinners were singularly lacking in instruction from the New Testament on how to be saved, on the other hand, we must admit that what he said to professed church members contained some very wholesome and convincing teaching. His sermon on "stripe-washing," derived from the action of the Philippian jailer, brought home to many a heart the necessity for restitution that had never been made. Here follows an excerpt from that sermon that deserves repetition:

Your professed faith in Christ and the church and the world of good things is humbug and cant, hypocrisy, blasphemy, if you haven't done your stripe-washing.

You know the person whose back is bleeding and whose heart is smarting, and you have never yet, though you are a professed Christian and a church member, you have never taken the first step to do the stripe-washing. And you are a heathen till you do it. You are a consummate sham till you do. You are a double-dyed hypocrite, if you profess to be a Christian and refuse to do the stripe-washing. "And the jailer took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes."

What about the person that you robbed of a good name through your slanderous, perjured tongue? And you knew when you were saying the dirty thing about them that you were lying. You knew it in your heart. You have got to take back every word before your faith will ever be acceptable to God to the saving of your soul. You have got to take it back. Listen to me. You have torn the reputation of innocent people to shreds, and you have done it flippantly, frivolously, heartlessly, without a soul, without a scrap of conscience. And you call yourself a Christian. No, sir, and you will never be, until you do your stripe-washing.

The Other Side.

Christians should cultivate the habit of seeing the other side of things and persons. Some are living in the attitude of seeing only one side, and that is their side. Such living constitutes a barrier to self-improvement and becomes a limitation to growing knowledge. We could be better informed if we would come out of the shells of our supposed perfection. An ancient proverb said: "Beware of the man with one book." Paul prefaced one of his memorable summaries with the statement: "This one thing I do." This statement of the apostle has suffered from misinterpretation. It does not mean, as some suppose, that Paul read only one book or performed only one task, but it does mean that Christ was the great motive behind every word and act. We should couple it with another passage which reads: "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." With some preachers and in many families certain doctrines have been clung to so tenaciously that they have become religious heirlooms. If those doctrines are true, they should be upheld. We are to "hold fast that which is good." If they are good and true, they will stand investigation. The nobility of the Bereans was found in the fact that they searched the Scriptures daily to see if certain things were true.

There are four chapters of the Bible in which sin is not mentioned—two at the beginning and two at the end. The first two chapters tell of the creation of the earth; the last two speak of the creation of a new earth. After the creation of the earth, sin entered; with the recreation, sin forever will be banished.—Alan Pressley Wilson.

A Queer Call.

Ethel ran down the front steps and peeped under the piazza; she was looking for the thimble that her mother had dropped. There it lay in plain sight. She stooped to get it, but she jumped up again with a little scream; she had nearly put her round nose into the middle of a great cobweb.

"Mother," she called, "I can't get it! There's a big spider's web in the way."

Her mother laughed. "How long has my daughter been afraid of a cobweb?"

"Well," explained Ethel, "I do believe there's a big spider right near it somewhere."

Mrs. Spencer put her sewing aside and came down the steps. "Good!" she said, gayly. "Let's call on him."

"Call on him!" echoed Ethel, who was much puzzled. "How can we? I don't even see him. And besides, if he sees us, he'll run away."

She had never called on a spider, and she could not imagine how she should act.

The web was one of the wonderful great wheels that certain kinds of spiders spin new almost every morning. They are always alike, yet no one has ever found out how their owners learn to build them. The owner of this particular wheel was nowhere to be seen.

"He isn't very polite," said Ethel, thinking of the rime that begins:

"Won't you step into my parlor?" said the spider to the fly,
"It's the prettiest little parlor that ever you did spy."

"He ought to come right down and ask us in."

"Perhaps he's in his own room," answered her mother. "Do you see that little thread that starts from the very middle of the web and runs up and backward to the under side of the piazza?"

Ethel had not seen it before, because, like other little girls and boys, she did not observe carefully. But there it was, and as she followed it up, she saw, at the very end, right under the piazza floor, Mr. Spider himself.

"Why, he's upside down, mother!" she cried. "Don't you suppose it makes his head ache? And he has kept his feet on the line that runs to the web, as if he were coming down."

She shivered, and moved away a little.

"No," said Mrs. Spencer, "he's not coming down. He's waiting for his doorbell to ring."

"His doorbell!" echoed Ethel. "Mother, what do you mean?"

"Well, you see," explained Mrs. Spencer, "a big spider looks so terrifying to the little flies that he must stay out of sight if he wants to catch a dinner. So he spins that telegraph line from the middle of the web to his hiding place, and keeps his foot on it. When a fly gets caught, it shakes the web and signals to Mr. Spider that his dinner has come.

Then he runs down and makes sure of his meal by tying the poor fly all round with his strong, sticky web until he has his prisoner held safe.

"Now, let's ring the bell," Mrs. Spencer continued. She picked up a very light stalk of grass, and gently touched one edge of the web; she took good care not to break it. The spider became alert at once; he felt of his telegraph line two or three times with his foot, as if to make sure of the message; then down he rushed to the middle of his web, and out to the edge where the tip of grass was. He felt of it for a minute, and then, deciding that it was not good to eat, hurried back to his hiding place to wait for a real meal to come along.

"Well," said Ethel, when she had picked up the thimble and was back on the piazza, "that was an interesting call." —Norman B. Cole, in Youth's Companion.

The Roll of Honor.

It was a showery morning. Great puddles shone in the road, and the crossings ran in rivers; while a patter of raindrops pelted merrily on two umbrellas that were bobbing along side by side toward the schoolhouse. Underneath them Marie and Marta chattered away as happily as though the skies were blue and the sun shining, and there was not a trace of a cloud to be seen in the blue of their eyes.

"I just love rainy mornings, don't you? Isn't it fun to hear the drops pattering on our umbrellas?" Marie said, tilting hers a little to see them run off in a crystal shower.

"Yes, and it is such fun to wade the crossings with our rubber boots on. We can just splash right along, and not a drop can get inside," Marta replied.

"Just think! I haven't been late this year, and I'm not going to be, either. I mean to get on the roll of honor this year," Marie said.

"I haven't been late, either. Won't it be lovely if we both get on the roll of honor at the same time?" Marta asked, delightedly.

"Yes, it will! We can do it, I know, if we just don't let anything stand in our way."

Just then a wall of distress broke into the patter of the raindrops, and both girls stopped to listen.

"It's Joey Peters, I guess. He prob'ly sees a toad on the walk and is scared to death. He's always crying about something."

"Don't you think we ought to go back and see?" Marta asked, anxiously. "He might be hurt."

"O, I know he isn't—not much. I'm not going back, anyhow. I'm not going to be late for Joey Peters," Marie said, going on down the street.

Marta hesitated a moment. She did not want to be late, either; but she could not go on until she knew who was in distress, and had done what she could to relieve them. So she ran back around the corner, and there was little Dollie Price, dripping with water where she had fallen in a big puddle, and there was her new first reader and her big red apple she was taking to teacher floating away together down the gutter. Marta rescued them both, and wiped the water off the reader with her nice clean handkerchief till it was almost as good as ever.

"Don't cry, Dollie! I'll take you home, and your mamma can get you some dry things, and you can come to school with me. I'll wait for you," she said, consolingly, taking hold of Dollie's grimy little hand.

School had begun when Marta and Dollie reached the schoolhouse. "I can't get on the roll of honor this year, now, can I, teacher?" Marta asked when she went in; and the teacher said she would start a new roll of honor that very minute for every little girl or boy who did a kind act, and she put Marta's name at the top.—Mary Morrison, in The Child's Gem.

Among the Colored Folks

M. Keeble's Report.

On February 16, 17, I preached at Corinth, Miss., with good attendance at each service. A good many white brethren and sisters were present. The white church is assisting the colored brethren in their work more than ever, and it is encouraging to us. Brother J. Hannon lives here, and he has lived such a life that he is respected by both white and colored. Since leaving Corinth I have learned that their meetinghouse was blown away in a storm. I hope they will soon be able to build.

On the third Lord's day in February I met with the church at Capleville, Tenn. I am glad to say they are still faithfully keeping house for the Master. I have promised to return and hold their meeting.

My next stop was with the little band at Tishomingo, Miss., where I spent two nights. Two made the good confession. I left them rejoicing in the Lord. I have promised to visit them again soon.

On the fourth Lord's day in February I met with the church at Henderson, Tenn. I will hold my seventh meeting at this place in July, the Lord willing. Brother D. J. Bynum is now preaching once a month for this church, and they are pleased with him.

On this trip I also stopped three nights with the little band in Memphis, Tenn. The work in Memphis is looking brighter and more promising than ever. The loyal white churches have secured a nice building once owned by the Baptists, and paid the first payment on the property, and they say they are going to see that the colored church has a permanent place to worship God according to the Scriptures. Brother Bynum is working hard to get the work on a sound and firm foundation. May God bless these white Christians who have turned their attention to my people. If there is any place in the world where the negro needs the gospel, it is Memphis. I hope other white churches will give this line of mission work their serious and wise consideration. I have promised to begin a meeting in Memphis on the fifth Lord's day in April.

On the first Lord's day in March I visited the little band at Murray, Ky. They meet regularly every Lord's-day afternoon, with some of the white brethren present at every service to instruct and guide them in their worship.

Brother Coleman Overby preaches for the colored brethren sometimes when he has opportunity. He is anxious to see the work permanently established among my people. I have promised to hold a month's meeting here this summer under a tent.

From Murray I went to Sugar Grove, Ky., and spent four days teaching the brethren and sisters the word of the Lord, and they seemed to be edified and encouraged. These people gave me a nice box of good things to carry home. I have promised to hold their meeting this year.

I am greatly encouraged with the work now being done for my race, and I am praying continually for greater things to be accomplished in the name of Christ.

California News.

BY L. D. PERKINS.

I have just returned from Payette, Idaho. I was called there by the congregation at Fruitland, Idaho. Here "evangelistic assumption" has done its deadly work of dividing another congregation. A number of years ago a congregation was established there, and a lot was bought and paid for and deeded to the church by Brother L. W. Flock. Years ago he had been converted to the one faith by Brother Don Carlos Janes. When Brother Janes started on his trip to Japan, he wrote Brother Flock that he was coming his way and would preach for them. Two years ago, and three years after the property had been all paid for, eight or ten families moved from Missouri and located at Payette. Brother Flock thought they were all right, and two of them got in as elders, with Brother Flock making the third elder. As soon as Brother Flock announced the coming of Brother Janes, the two elders or some of their crowd wrote the Review office at Indianapolis, Ind., and asked about Brother Janes, and the report came back that he was not sound, because he stood with the apostle Paul in teaching the Bible where other textbooks are taught, Paul having taught the word of God in the school of Tyrannus. Objection was raised, but Brother Flock let Brother Janes use the house; and then a proposition was suggested for all the officers to resign and an evangelist be appointed to rule the congregation. This was done, and Brother G. W. Williams was selected to be the ruling evangelist. Charges were then filed against Brother Flock and others, and they were withdrawn from. Elders out of the Review readers and supporters were appointed, and they took charge of the house, and those who stood with Brother Flock, composing over one-half of the congregation, were driven out of their property. Charges of a criminal nature had been made against some of the people, which were not true, and which they knew were not true, but just to withdraw from them so they could have the property. I went to work and succeeded in winning back the property, and left Brother Flock in charge, and he is in charge to-day, with the other brethren who stood with him. The Review men will have to build them a house or move away, which they will probably do.

I want to say to the brethren everywhere that when there is talk of elders and deacons resigning, which is unscriptural, look out for "evangelistic assumption." At long Beach, Cal., the Review people succeeded in getting the property and are holding it to-day. They made an effort at Riverside, Cal., but made a failure. I do not know of a single place where "evangelistic assumption" has been tried but what it resulted in a division.

This same band at Payette broke up a church in Missouri. Brother G. W. Roberts, I understand, went to try and settle the trouble, but decided against these same people, and they haven't much use for him. One of them stated that he had rather send one of his children to the rankest infidel school in the world than to send them to a school where the Bible is taught in its purity.

If some young man would locate at Payette, he could no doubt build up a fine work there. Payette, five miles from Fruitland, is the county seat, and a nice place; and Ontario, Oregon, three miles distant, is another nice place, and then much work needs to be done in the State. Cannot some young man who would not need much support locate there and build up the cause of the Lord at that place and in that community? Write to Brother L. W. Flock, Payette, Idaho.

Brethren E. C. Fugua and R. E. Wright have both located in Los Angeles, and certainly the churches of the State welcome them. Brother C. R. Nichol is to begin at Bakersfield, a mission point, on October 1. He would like to bring Brother William G. Klingman with him. Our churches are not able to support both of them. Who will support Brother Klingman for five months in this work?

California is almost as much of a missionary field as Japan. What have the churches given to Japan? What have they given to California? Our work in California will grow.

Mission Work in South Africa.

BY FRANK B. SHEPHERD.

The school at Forest Vale Mission, Bulawayo, South Africa, after being closed for almost a year, opened again on February 1, with Brother and Sister Short, the new missionaries from the Harper (Kansas) congregation, in charge. Brother Short says: "We are suffering from lack of corn. We have turned away eight or ten boys already because we could not find the meal for their feed, and still they come. It is a saddening sight to see these boys who want to come to school so badly go away disappointed. And some of them come for miles to get to go—anywhere up to four hundred miles. Help these black boys to learn."

There are to be two classes of students—those who just want to go to school and those who want to become teachers of the Word among their own people. Those who just come for the schooling will have to furnish their own clothing, hut tax, lights, etc.; but for the boys who want to come to learn God's word so they can go among their own people and teach, we are trying to furnish clothing, hut tax, lights, etc. For both, however, there will be work on Brother Sheriff's farm for them to do to pay for their food. Outside of their working for their food, there will be an expense of ten pounds (forty-five dollars) a year per boy. We are going to have a students' fund, and all money sent in for that purpose will be used for the school. How many would like to have part in this noble work? You may send to Brother Short direct—W. N. Short, Bulawayo, South Africa; or, if you prefer, send to me, at 1409-A Jackson, Amarillo, Texas.

I have recently forwarded to Brother Sherriff thirty-four dollars and twenty-five cents. This fund falls behind all the time, and great need exists for funds to carry on this splendid work. The church at Harper has a man on the ground now, but this money is used for native workers and expenses. Who will have a part in the work for the coming month? Send contributions for this work to me, at 1409-A Jackson, Amarillo, Texas. I have the indorsement of the Amarillo and Harper congregations.

Waiting.

I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise,
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies.

And if my heart and flesh are weak
To bear an untried pain,
The bruised reed He will not break,
But strengthen and sustain.

No offering of my own I have,
Nor works my faith to prove;
I can but give the gifts He gave,
And plead His love for love.

And so beside the silent sea
I wait the muffled oar:
No harm from Him can come to me,
On ocean or on shore.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

DOUBLE TRIAL OF FAITH.

Before I began to preach I had bought one acre of land and built a house on it—our first home to own.

For three years I had preached when and where I could find an open door. During the three years that I had preached I had fed and clothed my family on a credit, thinking all the time I would receive enough to pay my indebtedness; but therein was my mistake. Even some of my own brethren were the first to accuse me of being dishonest—would not pay my debts. These bitter accusations pierced my heart, to say nothing of my poor wife, who had done all she could to assist me in preaching the gospel to the lost.

Our first home that we loved so dearly—our first one. Trees and shrubbery my wife planted with her own hands now grow and bloom upon that lot so dear to us. But—alas!—we had to give it up. To pay the debts made while preaching and to stop the mouths of some scrupulously honest brethren (?), I sold that house and lot at a loss of about five hundred dollars and paid all I owed. While holding a mission meeting on Horn Ridge, in Lake County, my poor wife and weeping children moved out of our first home into a rented house. Today as I look back to that trying time in my life, I can hardly understand why my faith did not weaken. Ask my poor wife what she suffered. All poor gospel preachers who have had a similar experience know full well that trial of my faith.

I bought another house and lot; but knowing I could never pay for it by preaching, I began to teach in the public schools to make the money to pay for my second home. Things were moving along very nicely when another trouble arose. A. I. Myhr, State Evangelist (whatever that is), came especially to see me. He learned that I was teaching school for fifty dollars per month, and asked me if I would not rather preach for that amount per month than stay in the schoolroom. He said: "I have come to take you out of the schoolroom and send you forth to preach the gospel." He wanted to engage me to evangelize in Dyer, Lake, and Obion counties, and give me what I was receiving for teaching. That bait looked good. It was enticing and inviting, and how I kept from taking hold of that hook, pulling it under, cork and all, is strange to me; but I did not. But I tell you it was trying on me. The only thing that he required of me that I could not fully accept was to instruct all converts to give to the "State Board." Somehow, I was a little afraid of the "State Board." To accept his offer, I would receive the same amount per month that I was getting for teaching. Here was the double trial. I studied, read, and prayed over the matter; and as I could not find anything in the New Testament that favored a "State Board," I decided to have nothing to do with it. I decided that the church of Christ was the only divine institution for preaching the gospel.

From this decision I have never appealed to this day. I know some good preachers in Tennessee that accepted Mr. Myhr's offer; and when the split in the church in Tennessee came, those preachers went with the splitters. I am so glad I did not split, and more so since I never caused a split in any congregation, but earnestly endeavored to prevent any split.

I taught school until I paid for my second home. I swapped it for my present (third) home, and taught long enough to pay the difference in price; then I quit teaching and have preached regularly ever since.

Wife and I are growing old and will not need a home on earth much longer, but the one we now own is free of debt or any incumbrance. Here we will remain until called to cross the great divide to enter a home prepared for all the faithful by our dear heavenly Father. In Obion County to-day we have twenty congregations that are standing on the old foundation of apostles and prophets, Christ being the chief corner stone. One (Union City) went with the splitters. When I gave up the Methodist Church and began to preach, there were seven congregations in Obion County and not one in Lake County. I have lived to see and assist in establishing thirteen new congregations in Obion County and three in Lake County.

DR. D. E. CAMAK, Founder of Textile Industrial Institute
Saw More. He Saw a Great Educational Life-Saving Station

A half time boarding school where grown, disadvantaged, young men and women from the Southern mountains by way of the cotton mills could earn in adult age that common learning which should have been their childhood heritage. Hundreds of those who toiled in the Southern mills when children are now toiling in this school, honestly earning a living and education at the same time, equipping themselves for leadership of a significant, social sort. They are sane, Christian, 100% American, Anti-bolshevik, Altruistic.

The Institute Owns and Operates a Complete Cotton Mill in which its students, once expert workers in other mills, now make marvelous shirtings, dress goods, romper cloth, etc., called "Character Cloth," (trade mark reg.). They work one week in the mill and go to school a week. The school pays them to work, and they in turn pay the school. The cloth is sold to meet expenses. Experts pronounce the cloth "Incomparable." It is guaranteed superior to the best imported fabrics, and is cheaper in price. Field Reports Mentone, Ind., March 21.—Our meeting with the congregation at Hundred, W. Va., continued for three weeks. Large crowds attended this meeting. It was estimated that as many as one hundred were turned away one evening, who could not get into the meetinghouse. During the meeting fifty-one came out on the Lord's side. The Hundred congregation is a splendid one.—A. J. Bachman.

Rockwood, Tenn., March 20.—Yesterday was a good day for the church here, notwithstanding some sickness in the congregation. There were one hundred and four at the Bible study. At the close of the sermon one lady came from the "digressives" and took her stand for truth and right. In our work of labor and love new opportunities are presented all along, and we expect to accomplish much good during the year.—Will J. Cullum.

Sinton, Texas, March 22.—There have been several additions at Sinton recently. House taxed to full capacity. Harvey Scott, of Floresville, will assist us in a two-weeks' meeting during the first part of May. I will engage in a meeting at Argenta, beginning on March 27, to continue ten days. Brother H. B. Gist will preach at Sinton during my absence. W. R. Swinney is now located at Mercedes. George Searcy, of Oklahoma City, is spending several months in Brownsville. J. W. Hedge, of Bishop, assisted Corpus Christi in a meeting recently. Arthur Slater, of Corpus Christi, will reciprocate with a meeting at Bishop in a few weeks. My work in the evangelistic field will begin on June 1. Sinton is worthy of a good, hard-working man to assist in taking this great work on toward the goal.—J. E. Wainwright.

Beaumont, Texas, March 20.—The meeting at Port Arthur closed without visible results. The brethren said we had a good attendance for that place. If I did any good at all, I couldn't tell it. Brother Crouch is a fine man, well versed in the Scriptures, and will do good wherever he may labor. I enjoyed the meeting with him very much. He will be with us in a meeting next month, the Lord willing. Our services with home forces yesterday were not as good as they have been. The "flu" epidemic hindered our attendance greatly. Spring has come, and we hope for an increase in interest and attendance. Because of some changes in my plans for the summer and because I have had a meeting "called off" on account of "hard times," I have two very choice dates for meetings that I would like to fill soon. I have promised two mission meetings already, and I feel that that will be all I can do in that particular line of work without some assistance. May the Lord bless the faithful everywhere.—Will W. Slater.

Oakland, Miss., March 22.—I have just reached home from a two-weeks' trip into the Mississippi delta country. On my way I stopped in Carroll County and preached twice for the brethren at Old Union. This congregation is in splendid working condition, having a good membership and a good attendance at all of their Lord's-day meetings. Brother W. M. Gammill is their efficient preacher and leader. Brother Gammill has been with these brethren for several years, working with them as preacher, teacher, and farmer, and his influence in the community has had a splendid effect for the cause of Christ. In an unostentatious manner he and his noble wife have done their work well. At Ruleville, where I preached three discourses, I found the congregation in good working condition. While in Ruleville I was entertained in the hospitable home of Brother J. A. Nerron. With the assistance of the brethren of this congregation, Brother Nerron looks well after the interest of the preacher. Brother J. P. Lowrey, of Cardwell, Mo., preaches for them once each month, and their work is moving along smoothly. My purpose in visiting these brethren was to interest them in contributing to my support in the neglected fields of Mississippi for this present year.—Lee Jackson.

Tuscumbia, Ala., March 21.—I am now arranging to preach regularly on Lord's days. I held two services at Iuka, Miss., last Lord's day, with fair attendance at the morning service and the house almost filled at the night service. There is a great work to be done in all the State of Mississippi, and I am glad to note that the Nashville congregations have awakened to the importance of helping to support the work, not only in Mississippi, but in a great many other mission fields. If we were to take the missionary spirit out of the Bible, then we would be compelled to do away with the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ. The whole system of the Christian religion is based on mission work, and every Bible character of note, who worked in harmony with the commands of our Heavenly Father, was sent on a mission. There is a crying need for mission work in Alabama, in many sections, and it is my intention to reach as many good congregations as I can with my limited means and time. I believe with all my heart that the "old Jerusalem gospel" is still the power of God unto salvation, and I am willing to preach that, and that alone, without addition or subtraction, and leave the results with God. The work at Tuscumbia is progressing very nicely, under the leadership of Brother J. H. Horton, with large attendance at nearly all the services.—J. H. Morris.

Union, S. C., March 20.—We are moving steadily on in the good work here, with good attendance at all services. Two confessions and baptisms last Wednesday night. I have received this year contributions to our building fund to the amount of three hundred and thirty-four dollars. One hundred and nine dollars of this was contributed by the congregation here, the balance being contributed by congregations and individuals elsewhere. We are very thankful for this fellowship. Our little band here contributed last year five hundred and thirty-five dollars and two cents; paid out five hundred and fifty-eight dollars and fifteen cents. We are doing better this year. We are planning to hold four mission meetings this year, besides the work to be done in this town. Our first mission work will be in Eastern North Carolina, where one sister lives who is very anxious to establish the cause there. This meeting will be about the first of April, the Lord willing. We are planning to have preaching in our house here for about a week before I leave, as several seem to be interested. I find that the best time to complete a job of conversion in this field is as soon after one becomes interested as possible, as there is so much opposition, and as soon as it becomes known that one is somewhat interested there is brought to bear upon him or her every conceivable objection, either true or false, that can be thought of. This is a place that it takes courage to be only a Christian. Brethren, pray for us.—Thomas H. Burton.

How Should Christians Treat Calls for Help to Build Meeting-houses?

BY J. G. ALLEN.

What I shall say in this article is not intended to apply to any one case in particular, but all cases in general, and is intended to help and not hinder the cause of truth; hence, I humbly pray that all lovers of the truth will ponder carefully the thoughts I present.

I have been a constant reader of the Gospel Advocate for more than twenty-five years, besides other papers published by the brotherhood, and there is one thing that is seen in almost every issue of all the papers published by our brethren—namely, a call from some place to help build a meeting-house to worship God in as required by the Bible. It has been said by some one that there are two sides to every question, and maybe there is; but I shall not try to either affirm or deny that proposition in this article with regard to any other question except the one involved in helping to build church houses in which to conduct the pure worship of the New Testament church.

Yes, there are two sides to this question, which I want to briefly mention.

The first side is the effect such a call has on faithful brethren who make the call for help. Suppose there are just a few in some locality that are struggling hard against great opposition for existence. The call for help goes out, and no one responds; the result is that many become discouraged and quit. And who is responsible? Let no one claim freedom from responsibility without you have responded to their call to the extent of your ability.

The other side of the question is this: What effect does our failure to respond to a worthy call have upon us? This is important for us to know, so that we may escape from the blighting effect that a failure to do our duty has upon us. When a Christian man or woman can let a worthy call for help go by unnoticed, he or she is not very far from the danger line. We ought to be glad every time we see a call for help of this kind, instead of complaining with brethren for asking for help.

The final question is this: Why don't we respond more readily than we do? The shortest, best, and truest way to answer this question is just to speak it right out: "A lack of faith in God's promises." Now listen before you deny it. What does God say about giving, anyway? Well, he says to give cheerfully (2 Cor. 9: 7), to give as we are prospered (1 Cor. 16: 2). What will be the results if we do as God says for us to do? (See 2 Cor. 9: 8-14.)

When God wanted the tabernacle built, he told Moses to place the question before the children of Israel, so that all who desired to help cheerfully would have an opportunity. Read the twenty-fifth chapter of Exodus and see what happened. The people brought so much they had to restrain them. (Ex. 36: 6.) Why did the people give so liberally? Because they believed God and his servant, Moses. Then, ought not we to believe Christ and the apostles?

Now, you brethren with comfortable, up-to-date meetinghouses, open your purse strings and respond liberally to every worthy call, and thank God that you have an opportunity to help the weak to become strong.

Whenever doubts arise as to the right position to take or course to pursue in business dealings, as well as in any other matters of life, banish them with the question: "What would Jesus do?" If the answer comes positively, act accordingly. If the answer is uncertain, give the benefit of the doubt to Christ. In this way you will find that Christian principles do apply in buying and selling, and that their application brings peace of conscience, joy of heart, and success in business.—Methodist Protestant.

Of all the sad failures in life, the saddest is to die without having lived; and the supremest success is to live on after having died.—Exchange.

Ousts Rheumatism.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold, rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system, by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts, which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expels the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial, and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh, of the Nashville Railway and Light Company, says: "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price, 50 cents. Ask your druggist for it, or write WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Mothers in a Like Situation Should Read This Letter from Mrs. Enrico

Chicago, Illinois.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a serious trouble. I had tried doctors and all said the same—an operation. At first I only felt the pain on my left side, but later I seemed to feel it on both sides. I am a power sewing-machine operator and have a little girl to support. I work in a tailor shop and that line of work has been very slack this year and I am home part of the time. I do not like to take any chances, so I consulted my friends, and one lady said, 'Take Lydia Pinkham's medicine,' so I did. I have felt better right along and am in good enough health to go to work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash to all."—Mrs. MARY ENRICO, 459 N. Carpenter St., Chicago, Illinois.

Often the mother is obliged to support her children and good health is necessary. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is just the medicine you can depend upon. It is a medicine for women's ailments and the relief it brought Mrs. Enrico it may bring to you. Keep well by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Tribute to a Worthy Man.

BY ANDY T. RITCHIE.

The subject of this notice, Brother J. B. Sanders, was born on February 9, 1858, and died on December 15, 1921; therefore, he was in this world of sunshine and shadows, joys and sorrows, for a period of sixty-three years, ten months, and six days.

He obeyed the gospel on June 24, 1918, and from then till death called him hence lived a faithful, consistent, Christian life.

Brother Sanders was a man of action, not mere words, in whatever he engaged. He was a mechanic by trade, and was for some years superintendent of the school buildings of Nashville, Tenn. He was for a number of years foreman of construction work for big companies and corporations. Whether employed by individuals or companies, he made their interests his and worked thereto with singleness of heart and oneness of purpose.

After he obeyed the gospel his chief aim was to serve the Lord and extend his cause. Having moved to Clifty, Tenn., where the cause was weak, he called me to assist them in a meeting, and I made his home mine while we labored to strengthen the ranks of the faithful there. In that home, with wife and one bright little girl, he was the idol, and I never saw a husband and father more meritorious of love nor more responsive thereto. It was a home in which each seemed a rival to the other as to which could love and serve most.

His health failing, he removed to his home in Nashville, where he died. He leaves a wife, the worthy daughter of Brother and Sister Harper Eskridge, and a little daughter, Janet, besides a host of brethren and sisters in Christ, as well as other friends, to mourn his demise.

Brother S. P. Pittman and the writer spoke words of comfort over his remains at the Foster Street church of Christ, in the presence of a large and sympathetic crowd, after which his body was laid to rest in beautiful Spring Hill Cemetery.

BY W. EDGAR MILLER.

The Central church of Christ, 1720 South Flower Street, enjoyed a big day, Sunday, March 12. Brother Witty had returned from Illinois, where he had been called by the serious illness of his mother, who passed on to the better land while he was with her, and was present with us, full of energy and enthusiasm for the work. Brother Wright delivered a most excellent sermon on "Preach the Word," bringing out many good lessons, which were

"OLD LIMBER" or THE TALE OF THE TAYLORS by DELONG RICE

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their eloquence, their fiddles, and their fox hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eternal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Rice. In one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two most wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifelong rivalry of the two famous brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that attracted the attention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER," the peerless and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters" extending from a President of the United States to a fox hound, the story touches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of crackling camp fires and the music of the chase. THE BOOK is beautifully printed and bound, appropriately illustrated, and packed in a neat gift box, ready for mailing.

well received by all present. The house was filled almost to its capacity, there being about one hundred and ninety present.

In the evening Brother Wright and Brother Witty went to Ontario, where they are to labor a part of the time each week, Ontario cooperating with us in the support of these brethren. From reports received from Ontario since Sunday, Brother Wright has made as good an impression at that place as he has in Los Angeles; and that is saying considerable, for he has not disappointed us in the least. On the contrary, we are very much pleased with him. Brother E. C. Fuqua had arrived in the city and was due to speak at the Sichel Street Church in the evening; so Central Church dispensed with the evening services and all went over to hear and greet Brother Fuqua, being rewarded with a most excellent sermon from him on "The Vine and the Branches."

Central Church was without a preacher for four Sundays while Brother Witty was gone, but there was no wavering. Brother A. C. Brown preached for us one Sunday, Brother Homer Bartlett one Sunday, and the other two Sundays were filled in by the elders, and the work went right along.

We are rejoicing that we have secured two such men as Wright and Witty to prosecute the work here, and, with their leadership, if we do not get up and do something more than we have ever done before, we ought to be ashamed of ourselves. We can do this if we will; but we will never do the work that ought to be done until we come to realize, to the fullest extent we are capable of, the true value of the human soul. Christ, in talking with his disciples, said: "Herein is my father glorified, that ye bear much fruit: so shall ye be my disciples." (John 15: 8.) The fruit of the harvest is the souls of men; and if we bear no fruit—if we save, or help to have, no souls—we cannot be his disciples, because he declares that it is in bearing fruit that we become his disciples. So shall we be his disciples. How? If we bear much fruit. Let each one of us ask himself this question: "Am I bearing fruit—much fruit? If not, why not?"

Field Reports

Muskogee, Okla., March 20.—A lady made the good confession at the morning services yesterday and was buried with her Lord in baptism at the close of the services last night. Had good audiences at both services. Our spring meeting will begin on April 9 instead of May 21.—C. Maynard.

Athens, Ala., Route 8, March 19.—To-day I met and worshiped with my old home congregation (Old Reunion). A small crowd, but a nice audience. I have two calls for meetings in Tennessee—the third Lord's day in July and August. If I am wanted for a meeting the first of July in Tennessee, write me.—William W. Still.

Port Arthur, Texas, March 22.—We had two splendid services at the church of Christ, this city, last Lord's day. Brother Will W. Slater closed the meeting here last Thursday night, after it had run for twelve nights, without visible results. Only a fair attendance. There was a great deal of "flu" in the city, which probably affected the attendance at the meeting. I shall assist Brother Slater and the South Park Church in Beaumont in a meeting sometime in April.—C. D. Crouch.

Fayette City, Pa., March 24.—My work at present is with the Fayette City church. I have been here since February 17. The congregation here is not large, but interest is being manifested. I hope to preach some for two other churches, Lover and Perryopolis, near here. There are only a few loyal congregations in this part of the country, and they are not as strong as we might wish they were. I think this is a great field where much sound teaching needs to be done. Pray for me and the work here.—James J. Reynolds.

Cordell, Okla., March 22.—I filled my appointment at Mountain View on Saturday night and on Sunday and Sunday night, preaching three sermons to very attentive audiences. The Mountain View church is certainly a praiseworthy one. They have three elders, who are held in profoundest respect by all and who are functioning well. The elders of the churches of Christ everywhere have a grave responsibility. These seem to realize it to a greater degree than any I have seen for a season. Christian people, what is the church coming to if our elders do not awake and perform their God-given duty better? Already souls are going to hell because of slothfulness, in many cases, on their part.—E. D. Shelton.

Plan to Establish an Orphans' Home.

BY JOHN B. PEDEN.

For many years we have thought we should have an orphans' home in Florida, but could not see our way clear to finance such a home. We now have offered to us an excellent tract of land (320 acres) which we can handle for about ten thousand dollars. A few of our home brethren have agreed to take the financial responsibility and offer it to the brotherhood on a cash basis. We are not going to ask the brethren to donate to this home, but will incorporate and sell stock on a five-year payment plan, not selling less than one nor more than twenty shares to one person, value of shares to be one hundred dollars each. Terms of sale: One-fifth cash by March 1, 1922, and four notes of one-fifth value of stock, due March 15, 1923, 1924, 1925, and 1926. The home to be controlled by a board of directors elected or selected by the stockholders. One member of our congregation will take twenty shares. Several others will buy liberally. We invite a careful investigation of the value of this property; and if, after such investigation, you decide the stock is worth more than you are putting into it, we would be indeed glad to have you join us in this great work. It shall be our plan to clear and set to orange trees, one hundred acres of this land, and it will in a few years be self-supporting for a home and school. There is a small orange grove on the land that is producing about fifteen hundred boxes of oranges per year. We have an option on this land to March 15, and we want to know what the brotherhood thinks of this plan and who will take stock with us. If you will put a little money in this, you will own some stock that will increase in value and at the same time help us to establish a home for the homeless, and thus bring a blessing to all. We can do a great work if we will. We would be glad to hear from any one interested in this work. All that will help in a financial way, please let us hear from you at an early date, stating amount of stock you will take. No money will be required before March 1, 1922, and only one-fifth of your stock at that time. Do not delay this matter, as we cannot establish this home without your money and influence. The stock you purchase may be the means of making this a permanent work, and should pay you a nice dividend in years to come. As to the real value of this property, write to the elders of the church of Christ at Avon Park, Zolfo, or Sweetwater, these being the three congregations nearest this property. John B. Peden, of Avon Park, Fla., will answer all inquiries until permanent officials are selected. Any or all of the following brethren will be glad to give you information: L. A. Wolff, J. W. White, H. C. Hinton, A. K. Hinton, Avon Park, Fla.; E. R. Shackelford, Zolfo, Fla.; John H. Coker, W. R. Langford, W. C. Henderson, Sweetwater, Fla.

To whom it may concern: This certifies that I have been in person over this tract of land and surrounding country. To say that I am well pleased puts it mildly. It seems to me to be one of the best propositions for the plans proposed that I ever witnessed. I am sure the brethren who are leading in this enterprise would not, in the least, misrepresent anything. It is a pleasure to me to commend this work to the confidence of the brethren everywhere.

Why Not Enjoy Perfect Health?

Winston-Salem, N. C.—"I suffered for about eight months with nervous indigestion, and had several doctors to see me but found no relief until a friend suggested Dr. Pierce's Medicines. I was not able to sleep at night and could not eat, just lived on sweet milk and bread. I began to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and took one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, with wonderful relief. I am now past 40, but feel just as I did at 19. I also gave the Discovery to my children, and now I am giving it to my grandchildren."

DON'T OVERDRIVE THE FLOCKS.

BY R. E. CUFF.

Jacob's words, spoken, during his return from Haran to the land of his nativity, relative to his children and his flocks, are very significant: "My lord knoweth that the children are tender, and that the flocks and herds with me have their young; and if they overdrive them one day, all the flocks will die. Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant: and I will lead on gently, according to the pace of the cattle that are before me and according to the pace of the children." (Gen. 33: 13, 14.) Jacob and Esau have met; they have become reconciled to each other; and Jacob is explaining to his brother that because of the children and because of the feeble among the flocks, Esau must not expect him to travel as rapidly as Esau himself would go. So far as Jacob was personally concerned, he may have been thoroughly able to keep pace with the man who was soon to remove from the rich lands of Canaan to the crags and ravines of Seir; but he did not forget that the tender children and feeble flocks needed gentle leading. His genuine concern for them is worthy of our admiration and imitation.

Of the Lord Jehovah, Isaiah said: "He will feed his flock like a shepherd, he will gather the lambs in his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and will gently lead those that have their young." (Isa. 40: 11.) The touching thoughtfulness Jacob showed toward the young only represents in a mild degree the Lord's care and anxiety and tender treatment toward his people, especially toward the babes in Christ. Just as Jacob said, "I will lead on gently," so Jesus said to his apostles once: "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." (John 16: 12.) Our Savior knew the danger of overdriving. John reveals him as a good Shepherd who leads the flocks. The Gospels are so filled with a revelation of his meekness and mercy that we cannot fail to know he leads gently.

Jesus is so interested in his "little ones" that he pronounces a great curse upon those who undermine their faith and ruin their lives: "Whoso shall cause one of these little ones that believe on me to stumble, it is profitable for him that a great millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he should be sunk in the depth of the sea." (Matt. 18: 6.) It is a fearful thing to be heartlessly cruel and austere exacting in demands upon those who are young in the Master's service. Jesus did not ruthlessly brush aside the laws of the mind. He did not expect the humanly impossible. There is room in God's gracious plan for repentance and mercy, and there is room in his plan for growth. Who dares supersede God in the method of dealing with the spiritual infant, with the weakling—the one newly added to the church of the Lord Jesus? Every leader of men, whether in the church or out, needs to know that a gentle fanning of a smoldering fire may soon bring forth a steady blaze, when a strong blast of wind would put out utterly the few dimly burning coals; that excessive sunshine may kill the most delightful flower when yet a tender plant; that a "nervous wreck" will tolerate only the lightest footstep in the hall without the cry of pain. Kind treatment of the sensitive often smoothes away their delicate humors, rids them of their surface touchousness, and prepares them for the hard knocks of time.

If it be inquired wherein men of to-day may overdrive the flocks of Christ, the answer is that too much may be required of the feeble at every point where they are weak. The babe in Christ may be weak in faith. His knowledge of the teaching of the Bible may be very limited. Those who have had more advantages may be more learned in the Scriptures. For them to scold, and scold because he did not know the meaning of some passage which they were certain they understood, might be to loose his hold on Christ and to send a lamb to death. "But him that is weak in faith receive ye, yet not for decision of scruples." (Rom. 14: 1.) The babe in Christ may not have the boldness and fortitude for the journey ahead that the mature man possesses. It is a mistake to expect it. To do so is to overdrive the flocks. Perhaps it would not be amiss to call the attention of preachers of the gospel and elders of the churches to the values of commendation and trustfulness and consolation. A few words of commendation are often a great relief to the person whose shortcomings have been held up before him in bold array. A spirit of truthfulness can work wonders. The person who feels that his fellows do not trust him and that they have labeled him as a thief stands in a good way to be a thief. On the very same principle as that "love begets love," trustfulness often begets faithfulness to that trust. Most hearts—I suppose I should say all hearts—need consolation. It is not enough for the preacher to tell a man simply that he must do his duty and to point him to the doom that awaits him if he fails. It is not enough to picture the storms of persecution and the tempests of trial that come to the Christian. Why not tell of the joy of being led by the Master of men? When the threatenings are being thundered to the disobedient, why not shout with equal loudness the promises to the obedient? The Christian life is not altogether a life of hardship and woe. The yoke of Jesus is easy and his burden is light. Tell the feeble ones so. It will give them courage to press onward. O, that we could realize that "man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn!"

Let Us Take Our Spiritual Temperature.

Some writer has suggested that Christians would do well to look frequently at the spiritual thermometer that gauges their service to God. In this respect it is possible for one to take and analyze his own temperature. The highest figure on the ordinary thermometer is 212. This is the boiling point. The apostle Paul exhorts Christians to reach that point. We must be "fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." The Greek word translated "fervent" literally means "boiling over" just as you see water in the kettle at its hottest temperature. The fervent Christian is enthusiastic. He goes to meeting, and he gets others to go. He will work anywhere you put him, and he will do his very best. One reason why the gospel spread with amazing rapidity in the first and second centuries was because nearly all Christians had reached the 212 point in zeal for their Master's cause. It was the victory of divine enthusiasm. The next point below on the thermometer is 98. This stands for "blood heat," and, so far as physical condition is concerned, denotes a normal, healthy condition. It may represent the Christian who stands up to the work reasonably well. He goes to worship, leads the meeting in his turn, and is interested in the welfare of his neighbors. Let us remember, however, that he has room for improvement and can reach a much higher mark if he will. The illustration does not fit in one point, at least. To get over normal on the physician's thermometer usually means that one is feverish and sick, but on the spiritual thermometer the increase spells something different. When we get over 98, it means that we are better than the average. There is room for congratulation instead of fear. It shows that the Great Physician's medicine is doing its work in our lives, and we are "always abounding" in his service. The next point below is 60. This is the "temperate" point. On the spiritual thermometer it stands for mediocrity. It may represent the Christian who takes part occasionally and is usually found on the back seat. His spiritual life is being gradually strangled by the coils of indifference. He is really in a very dangerous condition, but does not know it. Sometimes a whole congregation is made up of this sort of Christians. To such a congregation the message came: "I would thou wert cold or hot. So because thou art lukewarm, and neither hot nor cold, I will spew thee out of my mouth." Our self-complacency is oftentimes the sign of God's displeasure.

The lowest point on the thermometer is zero. It stands for the professed Christian who is spiritually dead. His name may be on some church roll; and when he dies, the preacher may refer to the fact that in such and such a year he was baptized. But that will be no solace to anybody. He is like the man who put his hand to the plow and looked back: he is not fit for the kingdom of God. Brethren, I believe it will pay every church and every individual Christian to take a long introspective look at the spiritual thermometer and see just what the standing is. The secret of the success that came to Nehemiah and his brave associates is found in the fact that "they had a mind to work." If once we are sincerely convinced that there is something radically wrong in our lives, we will go to work to supply that which is needed. Several months ago there fell into my hands a little tract on "The Missing Element," in which the author, Brother David Thompson, says:

The church is, as a rule, reasonably supplied with this world's goods; so the failure of the church to spread the gospel over the world is not due to a lack of money.

The average child of God in any given locality will be found in as good financial condition as the average of any other class of people. They dress, live, build houses, and own real estate to just about the same extent as the people with whom they are surrounded. The denominations are no more wealthy than is the church. If they have enough money to spread error to almost every nook and cranny of the universe, the church has enough to spread truth just as far. Heathens are not dying without the gospel because the church has not enough money to send it to them, but because the individual members of that church are spending money on themselves and for the gratification of the flesh that belongs to God.

If the church has enough men and money to evangelize the world, and yet is doing almost nothing in that direction, it can be due only to a lack of interest.

The church has enough men (we use the term in a general sense, to include all children of God, both male and female) of brains and general ability to spread the gospel all over the world in a very short time, if their energies were only turned in this direction. Christian business men are as keen-minded, Christian teachers as well qualified, Christian doctors as efficient, and Christian farmers as successful as any other class of people. The church not only has men of ability, but they are likewise willing and ready to sacrifice for the good of others. If a neighbor is in distress of any kind, they are generous to help. During the war they produced and conserved food, gave freely to war sufferers, and in many other ways willingly gave their time, substance, and selves for the common good. The denominations around us are not composed of any more able or generous people than is the church of God, yet most of them are making a far greater success of spreading error than the church is making of spreading the truth. The church is not suffering from a lack of men, but she is suffering because the energies of these men are too generally directed into fields of worldly endeavor and not into the Master's service.

If the church has men and money to spend freely in carnal warfare, and yet can muster hardly a score of foreign missionaries, and barely, after much persuasion, give them a very meager support, it looks as if the interest in this part of the Master's work was very small. This lack of interest is largely due to a lack of study and teaching concerning the matter. When men study carefully the commission, the missionary journeyings of Paul, and New Testament teachings in general along this line, they are bound to get very much in earnest about the matter if they value their souls' salvation. The church is usually most zealous in doing those things on which its preachers place the most emphasis, and upon our shoulders rests a good share of the blame in this matter.

A Manly Statement.

The other day I received a letter from one who craves forgiveness and the touch of human sympathy. It bears a spirit of humility and fear of God that is both refreshing and inspiring. The letter reads as follows:

Fairmont, W. Va., March 22, 1922.—Mr. A. B. Lipscomb, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Brother Lipscomb: I was deeply impressed by the following remark of yours in a recent issue of the Gospel Advocate: "Nothing so embitters life as a constant brooding upon one's failures."

Now, the statement is certainly true, and yet it is very difficult for me to keep from brooding upon failures and mistakes, especially when I look back and see where I failed and how I could have avoided the mistakes. I confess that for a few years after leaving Spencer, Tenn., I was not as firm and faithful as I should have been. When I gave up teaching, I began travelling over some of the Southern States where there are no churches of Christ, and being separated from the people of God, whose influence I always need, I wandered away from the church. I sincerely regret this and ask forgiveness. Pray for me, that I may never again wander away from the fold.

Two years ago this past January I assumed family responsibilities. We are now located where we can attend church. I have plenty of opportunities to do church work after my business hours are over.

I always appreciate your articles in the Advocate, as well as those of so many others I know. The Advocate is a great help to me.

Sincerely yours,

H. C. DENSON.

All who know Brother Denson will not doubt for one moment his sincerity, and to those who do not know him the letter in itself will be most convincing. Sometimes we receive letters of this kind that are marked "Private." There is a willingness upon the part of some to confess their failures and shortcomings to some intimate friend, but not to others. But Brother Denson is not that kind of a confessor. In a truly manly spirit he says in a postscript: "I would be glad to have you publish the above letter in the Gospel Advocate, provided you have the space and think it worth while. I am quite sure that many of my acquaintances and friends have been disappointed in me because of my weakness, failures, and mistakes. But I am fully determined to forget the failures and mistakes of the past as best I can and press on to even greater activity in the service of God."

Decidedly, the publication of such a statement and resolution is worth while. False pride prevents many a man from a confession of his sins and failures; I have heard some say they would die before taking such a step. The chances are they will die spiritually if they do not. So far from being an unmanly act, it is the only manly thing left to do in such a case. If Job and David and Peter and Paul can afford to blurt out their weaknesses and failures and leave them written on the undying record of God's holy word, why should we lesser mortals hesitate to do as much?

It takes faith and courage to take a step like Brother Denson has taken. That God has already forgiven the laxity he mentions and stands ready to help and bless him, there cannot be the remotest shadow of a doubt. As to what all who wear the name of Christ will do depends upon the condition of their hearts. The hypocrite who refuses to acknowledge his own sins might demur, but the message of the true Christian will be, "God bless you, brother," and, "You may count on me in the carrying out of your brave resolution."

A Golden Argosy.

BY CLARA COX EPPERSON.

(To Mr. and Mrs. Jere Whitson, Cookeville, Tenn., on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.)

Fate brought their golden Argosy
From out the heavens above;
No argonautic Golden Fleece,
But fifty years of love.

It is a wonderful thing when two persons who love each other are made one in the eyes of God and man, and are then allowed the precious privilege of living fifty beautiful, golden years together! I know of no kinder fate life can offer. Far above riches, rare jewels, lands and earthly possessions may one count this priceless chain of years together with its links of purest gold; and when that golden chain of years has no links broken by the cruel hand of Death, but an unbroken family can stand together to receive the congratulations of friends, how still more wonderful, only those who walk the sunset way alone may know and truly appreciate.

Walt Whitman, the marvelous poet, who wrote "We Two Together," knew how to measure the height of life's good things and to express the measure in the following lines:

Two together!
Winds blow south or winds blow north,
Day come white or day come black,
Home, or rivers and mountains from home,
Singing all the time, minding no time,
While we two keep together.

Thomas Moore, in "Unchanging Love," which begins with the familiar line, "Believe me if all those endearing young charms," ends the poem with the beautiful lines with which I shall end this little tribute to the wedded love of fifty years, with its halo of happy, golden, useful years:

No, the heart that has truly loved never forgets,
But as truly loves on to the close,
As the sunflower turns on her god when he sets,
The same look which she turned when he rose.

The Greatness of John the Baptist.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

"Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist." (Matt. 11: 11.)

This is a wonderful tribute Jesus paid to John the Baptist. If it had been spoken by an uninspired man, we might conclude that it was extravagant and unfair. That John was great, no one will deny; but that of all men that were born before him, not one was greater, is not easy for us to see. The ages before Jesus were not barren of great men, but Jehovah's worthies make up a long list. To say that none of these was greater than the Baptist is passing no ordinary encomium upon the forerunner of Jesus. It looks as if Moses was greater; and even such men as Abraham, Joseph, Joshua, Isaiah, Elijah, Jeremiah, David, Daniel, might appear to surpass him. What great thing did John do that would equal the feats of some of these other celebrities? Wherein was John great—great to the degree that none before him stood higher on God's roll of honor? Of course Jesus knew the man, and his verdict was just. No patriarch, warrior, king, or prophet, whatever his achievement, was greater than John.

It cannot be that John did "greater" deeds (as we are accustomed to judge deeds) than Abraham, or Moses, or Joshua, or Elijah. He left no native land to go out he knew not whither; he led no nation out of slavery; he captured no walled cities; he challenged no false prophets to the fire test. But the reason he did not do such things was that he was not called upon to do them. Great deeds require great opportunities, and God's great men of former times performed exceptional deeds because the exigencies demanded as much. John did little that dazzles the imagination, because it was not a time nor a place to do dazzling things. He was great, then, not so much in what he did as in what he was: he was great in courage, in spirit, in character. A great man would be great in any age, and John would have been great in Abraham's day, in Moses' day, in Daniel's day, in our day. His character would have stood him in good stead in any test or crisis, whatever the sacrifice or loss to himself. He would have done God's bidding if it required crossing a Red Sea, or offering a son upon the altar, or capturing a Jericho. If he had been put in the forefront of battle, neither Joshua nor David would have done more valiantly. This was the mettle of John the Baptist, and Jesus knew it. Carlyle says that Shakespeare, in the planning and completing of his tragedies, has shown an understanding which might have governed States. If I may paraphrase, John the Baptist in his work as reformer manifested a spirit that might have challenged Baal on Carmel, or defied the decree of Nebuchadnezzar, or rebuked covetousness in the twentieth century.

But John's work was differently ordered. It fell to his lot to be a reformer, the forerunner or herald of the Messiah. The work of a reformer is necessarily unostentatious. It makes no such claim upon the attention and no such appeal to the imagination as delivering God's law to the people from Sinai or standing unmoved in a den of lions. He that comes preaching repentance and reformation must exercise great patience and perseverance and humility. He must be content to sow seed and to wait for results, to root up tares by the slow process of digging at the roots. "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation," and it spreads abroad in the hearts of men without dramatic display. Those who advance the kingdom are not noisy; and neither was John, who announced its coming, disposed to make himself conspicuous. While his ministry attracted widespread notice, this result was achieved by a simple and forceful proclamation of simple truth, not by resorting to theatrical methods. Indeed, the life of John was essentially one of self-denial, of hardness, of suffering, and it ended in deep gloom and pathos. John decreased, while Jesus increased, and the people lost sight of the one in their enthusiasm for the other. But at the time John was languishing in prison and his great work was likely to be forgotten, Jesus reminded the multitude of John's real greatness. "Among them that are born of women," Jesus avers, "there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist."

This tribute of Jesus occupies the place of a climax in a series of four laudatory statements, each of which will be mentioned here. "And as these [a deputation of John's disciples] went their way, Jesus began to say unto the multitudes concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness to behold? a reed shaken with the wind?" The inference here is that John was not like the reed, not easily shaken. The reed of Egypt and Palestine was a sort of tall cane, growing twelve feet high, and was readily swayed or bent by the wind. But John never wavered; instead of yielding to every breath of applause or of displeasure, he was firm, unmovable, courageous, even unto death. Herein is the greatness of John the Baptist. But there are many reeds to-day among elders and preachers—many that vacillate, temporize, compromise. Preachers that tickle itching ears of pleasure lovers or satisfy prurient curiosity, and shun to declare all of God's counsel, are nothing more than reeds—reeds shaken with the wind. There are many such. "But what went ye out to see? a man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that wear soft raiment are in kings' houses." John's dress was that of the old prophets, a garment woven of camel's hair, attached to the body by a leather girdle, and his food was such as the desert afforded—locusts and wild honey. His character comported with his outward appearance which betokened ruggedness and stern spirit within. He was far from an effeminate courtier, far from a tenderfoot, but such a reformer as the times demanded. Coming in the spirit and power of Elijah, his life and career in part were like that of the austere Tishbite. Neither would yield the breadth of a hair when truth and right were involved, and both performed the word of the Lord to the letter. Elijah's life was sought, and John's life was taken, because of fidelity to God. Great men have something in common though they may be separated by centuries. "But wherefore went ye out? to see a prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet." John was more than a prophet in that he was a way-preparer, a forerunner, the herald of the Messiah. His position was more honored than that of the prophets; the prophets foretold the coming of Jesus, but John prepared the way for his reception. Then, finally, Jesus, in concluding his climatic encomium, said: "Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist."

It seems necessary to mention some instances in John's career where the mettle of the man was put to the test and where his character shone resplendent. Take the case of the Pharisees and Sadducees, those moral lepers who came with the rest to John's baptism. The great reformer did not hesitate to tell them that they were vipers and bound for hell unless they reformed. "Ye offspring of vipers, who warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruit worthy of repentance: and think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." Here it will be noted that John expresses surprise that these "vipers" should thus flee from the "wrath to come," exhorts them to bring forth fruit worthy of repentance, and warns them against the futility of relying upon their Abrahamic ancestry to save them. But this is by no means all he said. He told them that even then the ax lay at the root of the trees, and that every tree that brought not forth good fruit would be hewn down and cast into the fire. He told them that Jesus would baptize them in the Holy Spirit and in fire—the righteous in the Spirit, the wicked in fire. He told them that Jesus would thoroughly cleanse his threshing floor; that he would gather his wheat into the garner, but the chaff he would burn up with unquenchable fire. All this is plain talk. A man that could thus preach the "wrath to come," "unquenchable fire," and the necessity of reformation, was no ordinary preacher, no ordinary reformer. Herein is the greatness of John the Baptist.

Again, John's fearless devotion to truth and righteousness is exemplified in his rebuking Herod. In flagrant disregard of decency and law, both human and divine, Herod Antipas had married his undeceased brother Philip's wife, Herodias, and was leading a life of shameless licentiousness. This was a case of sin in high places, a court crime; but John did not hesitate to rebuke the king, not only for this sin, but for "all the evil things which he had done." "John said unto him, It is not lawful for thee to have her." Both king and queen were incensed at this rebuke, and the king would have had John murdered had he not feared the people who took John to be a prophet. In order to silence John, Herod had him thrown into a dungeon, where he languished for more than a year. The black, cruel story of his execution at the instigation of the resentful Herodias is familiar and need not be recounted here. But John never wavered; he was not a reed that he need waver. Even death did not shake him. I think he must have counted the cost before he administered this rebuke: he could hardly have been blind to the probable outcome. He could have flattered the king and queen and in all probability been received at court. To rebuke their sin and expose them before their subjects would lead to persecution, imprisonment, death. But John would no more cover this court sin than he would have winked at the wrongdoing of a peasant. He would condemn sin in high places, as well as in low places, despite the hazard. Herein is the greatness of John the Baptist.

Do not forget that it was Jesus who said John was great. The world would not so judge him; for the world thinks that kings, statesmen, generals, financiers, are the greatest men. But God measures differently. It has been said that the world does not know its greatest men, and this is because the world judges according to appearance and immediate results. It is true, as Gray sings, that—

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark, unfathomed caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

But God knows them. And he knew John, wherein he was great. God does not need any dazzling manifestation to know the character, for he looketh on the heart. Neither does he measure deeds as we measure them. What we esteem great, God does not always so judge; and what he calls great, we may pass by as insignificant or as quite beneath our notice. "Whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister; and whosoever would be first among you shall be your servant." This is the Lord's standard of greatness. The humblest service, the most insignificant deeds, count with him; every work of faith, every act of love, is great in his eyes. The way to greatness, then, is through the door of humility; for he that humbleth himself shall be exalted, and vice versa. I think there are many great ones in the earth to-day—those unconscious of their greatness, the uncrowned kings. Those whom the Lord esteems great will be surprised to know how great they are in the day of rewards, because they are little in their own sight. It will be a day of surprises, of utter surprises, when God announces his verdict of who was greatest here in the world. I doubt not that many of the despised ones of earth will be called up higher; for God knows who are worthy.

At Bethany.

BY LOULA MAY ADKISSON.

After the busy wearisome day,
 After the clamor of the multitude thronging,
 How welcome the tranquillity and solitude
 Of the pleasant hamlet of Bethany!
 How restful and peaceful the home
 Where Jesus was wont to go!
 How gladly they must have welcomed him!
 How happily they must have served him!
 And what peace Mary found,
 As she sat at his feet in adoration,
 Learning from his lips the words of life.
 Oft and oft we are told
 He resorted thither
 For rest and quietude,
 Seeking those who could partly discern his words.
 Then one day a sorrow
 Came to the home at Bethany,
 And Mary and Martha cried out in their anguish
 For the Friend they oft had served.
 Then he came to comfort them.
 He dried their tears; he hushed their grief,
 And gave them back their brother.
 O how transcendently great
 Was that Friend divine,
 Who trod the earth in human form;
 Who could heal all sorrow,
 Who could give life again!
 And still to-day every service rendered Jesus.
 Be it great or be it small—
 E'en a cup of water in his name—
 Shall be recompensed.

BY S. H. HALL.

The Ryman Auditorium meeting is on, and three services are numbered with past events, so far as the mere acts of service are concerned, but continue to live in our souls and push us onward.

Brother Hardeman is coming up to our fondest hopes as a speaker and is wielding the sword of the Spirit with a master hand. That you may know assuredly that he has started in the "old paths," I have but to add that his initial address was on "The All-sufficiency of the Bible," the miracle of the ages. His second address was: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?" His third address, delivered last night (March 29), was "Rightly Dividing the Word of Truth." Does this not sound to you that are not here to listen that he has started right? He knows there is no power so great as the power of God's truth, and he is depending on it and its sublime simplicity, and not on things that tickle the ears of those who think the "grand old Book" is rather antiquated and not up-to-date. I say again, we are delighted with Hardeman.

Brother Pullias, with a joyful expression continually illuminating his face, gloriously leads in song the immense crowds that fill and overflow the Ryman Auditorium. How I wish every soul who reads this could hear the singing! It seems that the walls of this large auditorium vibrate as the melodious waves roll out from thousands of voices united in songs of praise.

The first night seven thousand people packed the building and more than two thousand were turned away for lack of room. Even the aisles were filled, contrary to the rules of this city for such gatherings; hence, orders came that, in spite of the regret of the city officials to see people wanting to hear that could not hear, they would have to insist that the aisles be kept clear. Our second service was the first noonday service, and four thousand, at least, greeted the speaker. And last night, in spite of the rain, the house was filled, and three souls made the great surrender at the close of the service.

Time forbids my writing more this time. Please, every soul that reads this, stay with us in your prayers whether you are here or not. It was good to hear read last night the telegram from our dear Brother Larimore in far-away Berkeley, California, assuring us that he is with us in this meeting in spite of the distance. May I close with our singing together those words that burst forth from the heart of the sweet Psalmist of Israel:

O give thanks unto Jehovah, call upon his name;
 Make known among the peoples his doings.
 Sing unto him, sing praises unto him;
 Talk ye of all his marvelous works.
 Glory ye in his holy name;
 Let the heart of them rejoice that seek Jehovah.

Don't forget that you can read these sermons, if you cannot hear them, by sending $1.50 to the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn. And from the way the orders come, you had better order now if you want a book.

BY W. EDGAR MILLER.

We had a most enjoyable service at the Central church of Christ, 1720 South Flower Street, Sunday, March 19, with Brother Witty preaching two of his best sermons. The house was well filled and the interest fine, as it always is. At the close of the morning service our hearts were made to rejoice by four good sisters coming forward and taking membership with us.

Brethren Wright and Witty are on the ground and doing a great and needed work in visiting and encouraging many who are not at present attending church to come out and take their stand with us, and already the good results are beginning to show. We are confident that if the proper efforts are put into the work the results will be sure to follow.

The Sunday-morning Bible study is growing in interest, there now being five classes, all full and still growing. It is a good sign when you see the members of the church interested in studying God's word. It means that when the light of God's word shines into their hearts it will make them shine as lights in the world. Jesus said to his disciples, in the Sermon on the Mount: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Again, he said: "I am the light of the world." (John 8: 12.) The light that the moon gives is only the reflected light of the sun; so also the light that the Christian gives is only the reflected light of the Son of God. If we receive none of that light, we can reflect none of it. The more of it we receive, the more we reflect. Light is positive; it does something. It shines; it drives darkness away. Darkness is negative in character. It is simply the absence of light. Light represents righteousness, and a little thought will enable us to see that righteousness, or doing right, is positive. It is necessary to do something in order to be righteous. On the other hand, we do not have to do anything in order to be unrighteous. Just do nothing. This shows us that unrighteousness, like darkness, is negative in character and is simply the absence of righteousness, or right doing. Christ never preached a negative gospel, and neither did he nor any of the apostles teach us how to be negative Christians; and when we see Christians reading their Bibles and studying them, we may justly look for some positive Christians.

This World a Heaven.

I do not think we have any right to think of a heaven for others, much less of a heaven for ourselves, in the world to come, until we are wholly determined to make this world a heaven for our fellow men, and are hoping, believing, loving, and working for that and its realization, not in a thousand or a million years, but in a nearer and a nearer future.—Stopford A. Brooke.

Getting Things Mixed. No. 2.

BY W. H. CARTER.

We might refer to other examples of baptism in the Scriptures which show the falsity of their claim, but there are some other statements we wish to notice.

Massey says Sloan showed in his wonderfully strong argument "that Christ organized his own church, on the mountain, setting the apostles in first as Paul told Timothy, and not at Pentecost as the Campbellites teach."

All, even Baptists, know that he, by the name "Campbellites," refers to those who claim to be Christians only, and to be members of the body, the church of Christ, and who, if they had to wear a name that dishonored the Christ, would as leave be called a "Campbellite" as a "Baptist." But as Massey and Sloan are unable to meet them on their true name and teaching, they must misrepresent and then fight their man of straw. But where, in which letter, in which chapter and verse, did Paul tell Timothy "that Christ organized his own church, on the mountain?" If Sloan made that statement, Massey should have corrected him. If Massey knew no better, then they both are to be pitied for their lack of knowledge.

He says Sloan showed "that this church was to stand forever, and not fall away as the Campbellites teach." Did not Sloan know that those whom he calls "Campbellites" do not teach that the church will "fall away," but that individual members of it may fall away? If Paul was "a Baptist," as Massey and Sloan claim, he was a different kind to them. He said: "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." (1 Cor. 10: 12) Speaking of the coming of Christ, he said: "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day will not come, except there be a falling away first." (2 Thess. 2: 3.) Do these "Missionary Baptists" not see a difference between an individual and the church? It seems that they do not.

Again, he says Sloan said "that the ordinances were given to the church to keep till Jesus comes again, and not to Peter or some individual as the Campbellites and Catholics and others teach."

As to "Catholics and others," I am not concerned; but as to Christians, whom he out of a corrupt heart calls "Campbellites," I say it is a misrepresentation either willfully or ignorantly made. What is the church? Is it not an assembly, a congregation? What is baptism? Is it not an ordinance? Who is to be baptized—the church or the individual who wishes to be a member of the church? The very fact, sir, that you baptize individuals and not churches, and will not let individuals who have not been baptized eat the Lord's Supper, shows that you know little about the ordinances. Speaking of the Lord's Supper, Paul says: "For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you." (1 Cor. 11: 23.) The Lord's Supper is to be eaten by the church when assembled, but baptism is to be submitted to by those who would become members. Jesus gave the commission to the apostles, and it promises salvation to those who believe and are baptized. (Mark 16: 15, 16.) If Jesus was "a Baptist," he was not like Massey and Sloan, for they have changed it to read: "He that believeth and is saved may be baptized, if the Baptist Church is willing." Surely Jesus never left anything for you to keep. If he did, you show yourselves to be slothful and wicked servants.

Then he says "that this church demanded the fruits of repentance, and not, 'Do you believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God?' as Campbellites teach."

If Philip were here and were to tell one who wanted to be baptized, as he did the eunuch in Acts 8: 27, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest," the Massey-Sloan gang would call him a "Campbellite." Indeed, that is what they do call him, and, by doing so, admit that what they call "Campbellism" existed, was preached and practiced by New Testament evangelists, and is recorded for our learning. That is some of the "strong logic" that was so new to Massey.

Then he says "that they baptize those again who come to them from other sources as Paul taught (Acts 19: 1-4), and not take them in/on alien baptism as the Campbellites do."

Here Sloan's wonderful logic gets Massey into a hobble, as well as himself. Those people said they had been baptized "unto John's baptism." Massey says that John was "a Baptist;" he baptized Christ, and that made him "a Baptist;" and he baptized the apostles, and that made them "Baptists." Now, if John's baptism made Christ, the apostles, and all other Baptists, we are left to wonder why his baptism did not make these Baptists, too. But Massey and Sloan are dangling from the gallows they built for D. H. Knight. John was the first Baptist; his baptism was good enough for the Son of God, to make him "a Baptist," but not good for these Ephesians. But they further show their long teaching that baptism is a nonessential is all a hoax; it is good for something—to make Baptists. John said Christ would increase, but he would decrease. In Acts 19 we find his baptism rejected; and that ended their Baptist dream.

Now, there is another difficulty these Baptists get into. They say Christ organized his church on a mountain before Pentecost; but if Sloan located the mountain, Massey did not show him the courtesy to report it. In the debate with Beasley at Pleasant Shade, Massey took the same position. Now, in Matt. 10 we have the twelve apostles named, commissioned, and sent. Here, according to Massey, we have Christ, "a Baptist," and the apostles, twelve Baptist preachers. Has the church been organized on a mountain? If so, what mountain? What was its foundation, and when and where was it laid? This was A.D. 31. In A.D. 32 Jesus takes Peter, James, and John up into a high mountain and is transfigured before them. Is this the mountain? Was the church organized here with only three in it? In A.D. 32 Jesus said: "I will build my church." (Matt. 16: 18.) In the same year he said to the twelve: "Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 18: 1-3.) Here it has not been organized, for the disciples are not in it. Where is the mountain, and what is its name?

In A.D. 33 we are told: "And as they heard these things, he added and spoke a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear." (Luke 19: 11.) The kingdom has not come yet; the disciples are expecting it.

At the institution of the Supper, A.D. 33, Jesus said: "For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come." (Luke 22: 18.) It has not come yet, but we are a good way from the "mountain."

After Jesus is crucified, while yet on the cross, "Joseph of Arimathea, an honorable counselor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came; and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus." Here they are waiting for the kingdom. It has not yet come.

Just before Jesus ascends, his disciples ask him: "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" (Acts 1: 6.) It is only about seven or eight days now until Pentecost. Jesus goes back to heaven, and between this and Pentecost there is no account of his meeting his disciples on a mountain or anywhere else. But he told them that they should receive power after that the Holy Spirit had come upon them. (Verse 8.) Just before he ascended he told that the preaching of repentance and remission of sins in his name was to begin at Jerusalem, and commanded them to tarry in the city of Jerusalem "until ye be endued with power from on high." (Luke 24: 47-49.)

This power came on the day of Pentecost. (Acts 2: 1-4.) Speaking of the conversion of Cornelius, Peter said: "And as I began to speak, the Holy Spirit fell on them, as on us at the beginning." (Acts 11: 15.) At the beginning of what? Up to Pentecost all expressions about the kingdom pointed to the future; from that time on, all point back. But, for the benefit of Massey and Sloan, I will suggest that the disciples on Pentecost were in the temple, and the temple was on a mountain. So, if you make Isa. 2 mean a literal mountain, then we have it fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. (Acts 2.) Before Pentecost the promise was, "I will build my church" (Matt. 16: 18); on the day of Pentecost and after, "the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved" (Acts 2: 47).

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

March 20-26 I spent near Martin, Tenn., attending a debate between Brother John C. Taylor and Jesse Neal, a Missionary Baptist. This debate grew out of the Taylor Jones debate reported recently in these columns.

Some of the Baptists were not satisfied with Jones' defense of their doctrine, and that is why Neal was called. I do not think they are any better satisfied now, but I venture the assertion that the Baptists will not want another debate there soon.

As usual, I suppose the Baptists will claim a great victory, but I did not see a single person not a Baptist but who thought we won the debate. The Methodists and Primitive Baptists expressed themselves freely that Taylor was more than a match for Neal.

Neal has the reputation of being ugly and abusive, and he began that way the first day. Brother F. L. Paisley, Brother Taylor's moderator, called him down, and he insulted Paisley, and absolutely refused to be corrected. Brother Paisley sat down till the session closed, and then we had it out. I only "butted in" far enough to tell the Baptists that they had no right to insult our moderator and order him to sit down. It looked bad for a little while; but when the debate began next morning, it was with the distinct understanding that our moderator had a right to raise a point of order without being insulted. After that I never saw a debate pass off any nicer. Neal is a fairly good debater, but Taylor and the Bible are too much for him.

In arguing on apostasy, Neal quoted 1 John 3: 9: "He that is born of God doth not commit sin." He affirmed that the verse proved that no sin was imputed to a child of God. But he admitted that he and all the rest of the Baptists sinned and prayed for forgiveness every day. He made no effort to harmonize 1 John 3: 9 and 1 John 2: 8, nor to harmonize his own statements, for that matter.

What would a Baptist church do if one of their prominent preachers and Bible teachers were to be caught in adultery? If they withdrew from him, it would be an admission that "a child of God could fall from grace," or that the preacher and the whole Baptist church had been fooled as to who was "a child of grace." With their present doctrine, they could not do a thing but keep him. But if they did, it would be an admission that an adulterer is as sure of heaven as any of the rest of the Baptists. This case should be treated as a fact, for it could easily happen.

While out from Martin, I spent one night with the Princes. Mrs. Prince is a cousin of our Sister Kate Killebrew, of San Francisco. I spent one night with Brother John Kennedy, who said he was converted to the church of Christ by the Hardeman-Penick debate.

I preached on Sunday morning at new Bethel, near Martin, and at night I preached in Martin, and left at 10:25 for Nashville. On the train I saw Brethren Daniels and Harris and Sister Joslin en route from Dickson to Nashville. They report things going fine at Dickson.

Big preparations are being made for the meeting here, and let us all hope and pray for the success of the truth of God.

As visitors in the Gospel Advocate office this morning (March 27), I met Brethren Oakley, Bearden, Hall, Morrow, Alexander Campbell (colored), and others. I will, the Lord willing, be in Hickman and Maury counties for a short time.

News has just come that the Baptists at Covington, Ind., kept us waiting over two weeks and never did give a definite answer as to whether they wanted a debate or not. Why couldn't they say yes or no? They evidently did not want the debate, but did not want their members to know the real situation. Every preacher would like to make his members believe he is ready at all times to have the doctrine investigated. Before they would come out and say no, they hung fire for two weeks and let their man go on back to Oklahoma.

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY FOR OUR READERS

The greatest preachers of the past two centuries attribute much of their inspiration and usefulness to Matthew Henry's Commentary on the whole Bible. Born in the seventeenth century, his name and his work still live and are household words. Thousands of homes treasure this commentary second only to the Bible, and many a man traces his right start to the loving advice of Matthew Henry.

Charles H. Spurgeon said: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering sparrows around an old gable toward the close of autumn." Dr. Philip Schaff, compiler of Schaff's Bible Dictionary, pronounces it "the best practical and devotional commentary for English readers."

The management of the Gospel Advocate is fortunate in securing twenty-five sets of this unrivaled commentary, which will be sent as a premium to every reader who will send twenty-five new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2 per year. This is undoubtedly the most attractive commentary offer ever made. You will receive six portable volumes of twelve hundred pages each, large, clear, unbroken type, with substantial Roxborough binding. If you wish to pay cash, the price for the six volumes is $17.50, not prepaid. When sent as a premium, we pay all charges.

At Home and Abroad

W. W. Freeman, of New Haven, Conn., will begin a meeting at Westbrook, Maine, on April 13.

F. W. Smith filled his regular appointment at Franklin, Tenn., last Lord's day. He reports a packed house.

J. B. Nelson baptized nine persons in a recent meeting with the church in Bertram, Texas. J. W. Acuff directed the song service.

W. F. Lemmons changes his address from Little Rock, Ark., to Cleveland, Miss. Those wanting meetings should note this change.

W. D. Bills, who labors with the Park Avenue Church, San Antonio, Texas, reports eleven additions to the congregation in a meeting conducted by Brother Busby.

The Freed-Skinner discussion is announced to begin on Tuesday, May 2, 1922, at Benton, Ky., and to continue four days. The design of baptism, the work of the Holy Spirit, and apostasy are the subjects.

From J. W. Brents, Springfield, Mo., March 27: "The work here is doing nicely. Interest along all lines is fine. The attendance has more than doubled since my coming. Our meeting will begin on the first Sunday in May."

From W. E. Morgan, Nashville, Tenn., March 28: "I preached for the church at McMinnville, Tenn., last Lord's day. The church at McMinnville has a membership of about five hundred, and all are wide-awake and active in the Lord's work."

J. S. Daugherty, of Kirbyville, Texas, has been sick with the "flu." He is not yet strong enough to fill appointments. In a recent communication he reports his little daughter as having the "flu" also. He asks the prayers of all the brethren.

A. M. Bibb, Charleston, Mo., says: "I am sorry I can't attend the Hardeman-Pullias meeting. I certainly would enjoy it. I am hungering for some good, loyal preaching. We have no church here. The Gospel Advocate is a great help to me. I have been taking it forty-six years."

From Frank Baker, Berry, Ala., March 26: "It was our pleasure to spend to-day with the home people and worship with them. The congregation has taken on new life since Brother Tant's meeting. We next expect to put the school on its feet, which will be a great uplift to Alabama and the cause of Christ."

D. F. Draper, of Georgetown, Texas, will be in Tennessee during the summer and fall for some meetings. He has time not taken in which he could hold three or four meetings, and would like to arrange so all his time will be occupied. Those interested should address him at 2709 May Street, Fort Worth, Texas.

The following encouraging report comes from T. B. Clark, of Gallatin, Tenn.: "Yesterday (March 26) was the best day for the church here since I came here six months ago. There were twelve additions—seven baptized and five reclaimed. The interest is great. We have had thirteen additions in March, and hope to exceed that for April."

H. M. Phillips, Chattanooga, Tenn., writes under date of March 28: "H. Leo Boles closed a very interesting series of lessons with the church at St. Elmo Avenue and Forty-eighth Street. The weather, sickness, and a union meeting hindered some, but not the splendid preaching. Two were restored and one came from the Christian Church. The church was much benefited by the discourses."

H. R. Daniel has moved from his farm to Elkton, Ky., and is now in a condition to give his entire time to preaching the word. Brother Daniel ought to be kept busy in the country near to Elkton. He can be of great benefit in preaching on Sundays to churches and encouraging them in the work of the Lord, and can, of course, hold meetings in the season for protracted meetings. Address him at Elkton, Ky.

From J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., March 19: "We had two splendid services in our new house, corner of C and Kankakee Streets, to-day. Large audiences and one confession and baptism. If our audiences increase much more, we will have to enlarge our house to accommodate them. We have received from churches and individuals contributions amounting to eighty-three dollars for our new house since last report."

From George Hardin, Little Rock, Ark., March 27: "I filled my regular appointment at Alma, Ark., yesterday at 11 A.M. and 7:30 P.M. Very satisfactory audiences, considering the rains. It is a pleasure to labor with a congregation like the one at Alma, with such men as Charles Adams and J. T. Jones as elders and leaders. Brother Jones has been preaching the word for forty years. He is now actively engaged in regular field service."

Charley Taylor and W. E. Morgan are to begin a tent meeting in Cairo, Ill., on the first Sunday in May. Brother Taylor does not know of but one sister in that city. These brethren must have support outside of Cairo. There are a number of churches in West Tennessee and Western Kentucky that know Charley Taylor, and these ought to see that this meeting is well supported. Send contributions to Charley Taylor, 901 Haley Avenue, Nashville, Tenn. We hope to be able to report a successful meeting in Cairo and that the cause may permanently be established there.

From C. A. Buchanan, Cleburne, Texas, March 30: "The annual protracted meeting of the Central Church of Christ at Cleburne is to begin on April 9. G. C. Brewer is to do the preaching. Brother Brewer has held the meeting here the last two years. It will be remembered that there were one hundred and fifty-nine additions in the one last year. The church has made much preparation for this meeting, having permanently seated the balconies with the best opera chairs and ordered four hundred new song books. The church is also in good working order. We request the prayers of the saints everywhere in behalf of this meeting. The opportunity is great. Pray that we may use it wisely."

The following is from E. S. Jelley, Christ House, Vambori, Ahmednagar District, British India, under date of February 25: "I am in heaviness as I write; for my mother, aged seventy-five years, has left this vale of tears, departing on January 16, so I am informed. She was one of the best of mothers, and brought me up from my infancy in the way of truth and uprightness, and filled my infant mind with a zeal for Christ which has borne fruit all my life. She was baptized at the age of twelve years, and never gave up her faith in God, and never identified herself with any of the denominations during the thirty odd years in which she was deprived by distance of the privilege of worshiping with the church of Christ. People from various denominations sought her fellowship, but she meekly told all: 'I am one of the disciples.' The last thirty-nine years of her life were years of extreme suffering, and it was during some of her greatest sufferings that she taught me about the one body, and also cultivated in me the missionary spirit. Our baby, nearly a year old, is in the American Mission Hospital, in Ahmednagar. Dr. Hume pronounces her a very sick baby. Well, I have so many over on the happy side that I have begun to think of heaven as home. It will be our turn to make the happy change some day."

N. W. Proffitt, Paris, Texas, sends the following commendatory note for publication: "First, I want to commend Brother Hall for his timely remarks in regard to the Bible being taught in schools. I fully concur with him on this subject; and for so expressing myself at Mountain View, Mo., last December, I was turned out of a meeting and disfellowshipped. I also approved of helps to the study of the Bible in our Bible classes; and in this I was opposed, too. I wish to commend John R. Williams for those interesting sketches of his life's work. I hope that he will put them in a more substantial form for the public. Brother Carter comes with a good article, correcting some things that needed correction. I am acquainted with the parties he cites, having debated twice with Massey myself. I know Brother Carter is relating the facts. C. B. Massey knows better and should not call Christians 'Campbellites.' He knows, too, that no one is a Baptist but those who baptize. He knows that Elizabeth's son (who was a cousin to Jesus in the flesh) was called 'John'—not 'John the Baptist'—till after he went to baptizing. But Mr. Massey won't see, poor fellow! 'None are so blind as those who will not see.' I want to commend all the good brethren and sisters of Nashville for their zeal and love for the truth. I opine that the meeting at the Tabernacle will be a grand success, because faithful, loyal, and true Christians will be behind the work. I pray that hundreds of souls will be saved and no one receive the honor but Jesus-Christ our Lord. I would be glad to be there and share in the joys of Christian union, but my health and finance at this time will not permit. I have not been able to do anything all winter. I have work promised in Tennessee and Kentucky. I hope and pray that I may get well enough to do the work."

Foy E. Wallace, Jr., closed a meeting in Italy, Texas, with eleven baptisms. J. H. Antwine directed the song service.

B. C. Goodpasture, of Atlanta, Ga., was in the Gospel Advocate office Monday morning, and will attend the meeting a few days.

W. M. Oakley reports a good service at Reid Avenue on Lord's-day morning. He will preach for this congregation again next Lord's day.

J. Porter Sanders preached for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's-day morning. There was one confession and baptism.

J. R. Bradley, Elora, Tenn., writes: "I think I appreciate the Gospel Advocate now more than at any time during the fifty years I have been taking it."

F. B. Srygley preached on Sunday and Sunday night at Nazareth, near Lascassas, Tenn., to very good audiences. He reports the church in very good condition.

N. B. Hardeman will begin a meeting at Henderson, Tenn., his home town, on the fourth Sunday in April—the Sunday following the close of the Nashville meeting.

G. W. Jarrett has changed his address from New Smyrna, Fla., to Coffeeville, Ala., where he is teaching school. Those wanting him to hold meetings in the summer should write him early.

If any one knows the location of the churches of Christ in the State of Oregon (if there are any), please write Mrs. James Jamieson, Forest, Ontario, Canada. The Gospel Advocate is unable to furnish this information.

From Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, March 28: "We are still doing what we can for the cause of Christ here. We had good crowds at both services last Lord's day. I preached at a mission point in the afternoon to a good hearing."

Just as we go to press a wire from Washington, D. C., brings the sad news that Graham Edgerton, one of the elders of our congregation there, died on Monday morning at three o'clock. Brother Edgerton was a good and useful man and will be greatly missed by the church in Washington. I hereby extend my heartfelt sympathy to his family and to all the church in Washington. Truly a good man has left us.—F. B. S.

Jake Hamilton sends the following report from Alabama City, Ala.: "J. M. Dennis preached two fine sermons to the congregation to-day (March 26). Interest is increasing in the Thursday-night prayer-meeting services which are held in the homes of the members. The church received a ten-dollar check from R. S. King, treasurer of the church of Christ, at David Lipscomb College, of Nashville, Tenn., which is being used to help the cause of Christ."

From Ira Wommack, Sulphur, Okla., March 29: "I preached at Ardmore last Sunday and at night. In the afternoon I preached at the Confederate Soldiers' Home. A number of brethren went with me. We had a fine service with them. The old soldiers seemed to enjoy the services. We promised them we would be with them again next month. I preach for the church there on the third and fourth Sunday in each month. I go to Paul's Valley for my regular date next Sunday."

The meeting at the Ryman Auditorium continues with increasing interest. There had been some sixteen or seventeen confessions up to Sunday night, with several reclaimed. Brother Hardeman is doing a lot of fine gospel preaching, and it is being heard by from four to seven thousand people. It is understood that from three to four thousand people was turned away Sunday night, unable to get in the building. The singing, led by Brother Pullias, is simply fine, and great good will come from the meeting.

F. P. Fanner writes from Buffalo, W. Va., March 28: "I have received forty-seven dollars to help me get well, if such a thing is possible, which seems very doubtful now. I am very thankful for this help; but I need much more, and must have it if I ever do get well. My life is now in the hands of a noble-hearted, generous brotherhood. Surely the brethren will help a man who has given over forty years to mission work among the poor in our own Southern States. Some of you have abundance. Please divide up a little in this emergency. I want to live in order to do good. Address me at Buffalo, W. Va., Box 81. Our meetings are still kept up, but I am not doing all the work."

Mrs. Synthia Key, Town Creek, Ala., pays a tribute to the Gospel Advocate and writes in a way to cheer and help others, as follows: "Brethren and sisters, let us praise the mighty and glorious work of the Gospel Advocate. It is a light to those who will make it a careful study. I love the splendid truths that are revealed by the Advocate. And may it live to help, encourage, and enlighten the lives of the many faithful of God's children. When we have at last been tried and found faithful, may our Father give us a crown of glory and say: 'Thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things.' I am sixty-nine years old, and I enjoy going to Sunday school every Sunday as much as though I were young. Last December I visited my son in Jackson, Miss., and enjoyed the meeting held by M. C. Cayce. I love to hear sermons so full of truths and facts. May he be able to carry on the good work for a long time. I hope the noble work of the church of Christ will last throughout all time, and may our faithful few be crowned with life eternal. Best wishes for all."

J. W. Dunn, Dyersburg, Tenn., writes to commend some articles appearing in the Gospel Advocate recently. Read what he says: "I want to say 'amen' to the article by 'An Elder' in the Gospel Advocate of March 16, in the 'Texas-Oklahoma Department.' This elder's suggestion is timely, and I hope it will bear good fruit. Many times have I heard similar suggestions offered by wise, godly men in private circles. It is so immodest to proclaim such through the papers. No doubt some of the best men on earth, who are doing the most commendable work, receive scarcely no support. Vanity is to be shunned. Let us glory in that Christ was preached faithfully, believed explicitly, and obeyed willingly. Reports and advertising, if done in a modest, humble way, are relished by consecrated Christians, but blowing and bragging is disgusting. Some seem to think that every time they have a large crowd, some restored or some obey the gospel, it must be rushed to the press. I do not object to the news, but the way it is written. Let us be careful, brethren. For sometime I have been reading scathing articles of the eldership in various papers. I wonder how the elder feels after receiving his 'dressing up.' The eldership is about as scriptural as the membership or 'preachership.' The Bible places restriction on rebuking an elder. Let us encourage them, everybody: we are all full of faults. The Bible was written to men for men and not angels. Can we condemn sin and at the same time lift up man? Rebuking and reproving is a particular job; so let us do it kindly, meekly, humbly, and with a prayer. Cled Wallace's recent article on how to deal with the erring ones was fine. Let us remember Gal. 6: 1, 2; 2 Tim. 2: 24-26. I try never to forget to pray for elders, preachers, and the body in general. I love all. You are my brethren, and may we manifest that brotherly spirit one toward another. 'May we strive to excel to the edifying of the saints.'"

A. S. Landis writes of a recent visit to the church at Covington, Ky., as follows: "I arrived at Covington, Ky., on Saturday, March 25, about 5 P.M., and at 7:30 P.M. had my first experience in 'cottage preaching.' On Lord's day we met at 10 A.M. for Bible study and worship. At this service we had to climb three flights of stairs to their rented hall in the Moose Building. One little boy became heavy with sleep, but, unlike the incident where Paul was once preaching, he did not fall three stories—merely fell from his chair to the floor, and was taken up neither dead nor hurt. At 7:30 P.M. we met at Brother Hammond's home, had preaching, and the Supper was continued for the benefit of Sister Hammond, who was sick and unable to be present with us at the eleven-o'clock service. Also, we had some sister's present from Cincinnati, who had not had the opportunity to show their remembrance of the Lord's death in this manner. These people impressed me very favorably as Christians. They are working as best they can, handicapped by many things. They have to pay one hundred dollars per year for a hall on the third floor of the Moose Building and are allowed to have but one service a week there, hence the cottage preaching while I was there. These people have an uphill climb. If I sensed the situation clearly the short time that I was there, it was Catholicism on the one hand and digression on the other. They are planning to buy a more suitable place to worship. Situated as they now are, they cannot expect to make a favorable impression on the thousands of their city that are perishing without the knowledge of God's power to save—the gospel. They are very few in number, but seem to have brotherly love for each other. F. L. Rowe, of Cincinnati, Ohio, favored us with his presence at our Sunday-evening service. I was impressed in many ways by these people, and a more interested or attentive people it has never been my privilege to preach to. From the closest observation possible during my short stay with them, I really think that they deserve something more substantial than our mere spoken good wishes."

Review of O. E. Payne's Book on "Psallo"

BY M. C. K.

CHAPTER X.

THE CASE OF JUSTIN MARTYR, WITH MORE MISREPRESENTATION EXPOSED, AND CONCLUDING REFLECTIONS.

In this concluding chapter, in addition to an examination of the case of Justin Martyr, it is the purpose to present other reflections growing out of the general theme under discussion, and which have a practical bearing on the issue involved. Further examination of original documents has disclosed additional significant facts, and they will assist the reader in forming a final and just estimate of the book here under review. Hence, I now invite attention to the following items:

1. The case of Justin Martyr. This eminent "Church Father" lived the first half of the second century of the Christian era, thus following immediately upon the apostolic age. According to the accepted dates, Justin was born A.D. 100 and died A.D. 165; Lucian was born A.D. 120 and died A.D. 200; and Clement of Alexandria was born A.D. 150 and died A.D. 220. Hence, Justin was twenty years old when Lucian was born and fifty years old when Clement was born, and the latter was fifteen years old when Justin died, all of which shows that the three were contemporaries for fifteen years, and that all lived near the apostolic age.

When I wrote "the general observation" in item 7 of Chapter IX., it was not my intention to present, in this review, the facts concerning any other specific case, for the simple reason that more than enough had already been given to show that the book, as a whole, is utterly unreliable; but it subsequently occurred to me that it would add to the clearness and completeness of the review to present, by transliteration and translation, an ocular demonstration showing how this man manipulates the original of authors to make them appear to support his position. From an examination of the original, we have seen in Chapters VII. and VIII. how he dealt with Lucian and Clement; and I am now prepared to say that a similar examination of the original of Justin discloses an equally gross misrepresentation of their illustrious contemporary, thus verifying, so far as Justin is concerned, the conviction expressed in Chapter IX. that "the language of any other author whom he attempts to use in support of instrumental music in psallo in the New Testament, if critically examined in the light of its context and other facts, could be shown to support no such idea." In this case, as in the others, I shall simply give the facts and let our readers judge for themselves and draw their own conclusion.

On pages 135-138 this man gives three passages which he professes to quote from Justin Martyr, and represents Justin as saying one time "play the harp," five times "play on the harp," and one time "playing on an instrument;" and, hence, his readers who know nothing more about what Justin says than what they get in this book will, of course, conclude that Justin taught in favor of instrumental music in the worship. But, since writing Chapter IX., I have carefully examined every word of all three passages in the original of Justin's work entitled "Dialogue with Trypho, the Jew," and Justin says no such thing. There is not a solitary word in any one of the passages about playing the harp or playing any other such instrument. To make this perfectly plain, I shall give the three passages just as this man gives them, and side by side the same passages in the standard English translation of them in the "Ante-Nicene Fathers" series; and, for the benefit of those who read the original and also to show the English reader the scheme by which Justin and others are made to appear to support the instrumental-music cause, I will transliterate one of the passages which will expose the scheme used in all of them. Here are the passages as he gives them:

"As the Spirit urges those from all the earth who recognize this salutary mystery—i. e., the suffering of Christ, through which he saved them—to sing (adontas) and play the harp (psallontes) continually."

"David sang (these words) while playing [ep-sallon] on an instrument; Isaiah proclaimed them; Zechariah spread them abroad; Moses wrote them."

"God has gone up with a shout; the Lord with the sound of a trumpet. Play on the harp [psalate] to our God; play on the harp [psalate]. Play on the harp [psalate] to our King; play on the harp [psalate]. For God is King of all the earth; play on the harp [psalate] understandingly; for God has ruled over the nations."

Now the following are the same passages taken verbatim from the "Ante-Nicene Fathers," and they show, according to this high authority, what Justin really said:

"He bids the inhabitants of all the earth, who have known the mystery of this salvation, i. e., the suffering of Christ, by which he saved them, sing and give praises to God the Father of all things." (Volume I., page 235.)

"These words have neither been prepared by me, nor embellished by the art of man, but David sung them, Isaiah preached them, Zechariah proclaimed them, and Moses wrote them." (Volume I., page 209.)

"God went up in a shout, the Lord with the sound of a trumpet. Sing ye to our God, sing ye; sing to our King, sing ye; for God is King of all the earth; sing with understanding. God has ruled over the nations." (Volume I., page 213.)

Thus, as our readers can see for themselves, there is not a word in any one of the passages about the harp or any other such instrument. How, then, came such words in the passages as quoted in this book? The author of the book put them there! Justin neither mentioned the harp nor any other such instrument. Justin simply said psalate, which means "sing ye." Now, to expose the scheme adopted to make it appear that Justin supports instrumental music in the worship. I transliterate one of the passages:

"Anebec ho Theos en alalagmooi. Kurios en phooneei salpiggos. Psalate tooi Theooi heemoon; psalate. Psalate tooi basilei heemoon, psalate; hoti basileus tees gees ho Theos; psalate sunetoos."

"Psalate" is a form of psallo. Hence, let our readers look over the transliteration, and wherever "psalate" occurs they will see the place where the author of the book here under review, begging the whole question—assuming as true the very thing he was under obligation to prove to be true—deliberately took upon himself to insert the words "play on the harp," with "psalate" in brackets immediately following, thus leaving his misguided English readers to think that Justin had said that!! Instead of Justin saying it, this man simply assumed it to be the meaning of psallo and deliberately put it there himself!

Now, I propose to show that, in precisely the same way, Justin or any other author who uses the word baptizo can be used to prove that it means to sprinkle, pour, or stain. All that is necessary is just to assume that baptizo means to sprinkle, pour, or stain, just as this man assumed that psallo meant to "play on the harp," and then, quoting a passage with baptizo in it, just as he quoted a passage with psallo in it, deliberately insert "sprinkle, pour, or stain," and follow it immediately with baptizo in brackets, just as he deliberately inserted "play on the harp" and followed it immediately with psallo in brackets, and the work is done! To demonstrate this, I have taken the pains to select a passage with baptizo in it from the same work of Justin, and I will now prove, by this man's scheme, that baptizo in Justin means to sprinkle or stain. I select a passage from Chapter LXXXVI. of the "Dialogue with Trypho the Jew," and in the "Ante-Nicene Fathers" series it is thus rendered into English with baptizo rendered "plunged."

"Even as our Christ, by being crucified on the tree, and by purifying us with water, has redeemed us though plunged in the direst offenses which we have committed, and has made us a house of prayer and adoration." (Volume I., page 242.)

The term "plunged" is baptizo in the original in the participial form (bebaptismenous), and the first nine words of the passage, transliterated, are as follows:

"Hoos kai heemas bebaptismenous tais barutatais hamartiais, has epraxamen."

Now, according to this man's scheme, here it is in English: "Even also us, being sprinkled or stained (bebaptismenous) with the gravest sins, which we have committed," etc. That is an absolutely correct and clear rendering of the whole nine words into English, except that, supposing myself to have a theory that baptizo means to sprinkle or stain, which I wish to use Justin to uphold, I put "sprinkled or stained" just before bebaptismenous, and make it mean what I want it to mean, precisely as the author of this book at each occurrence of psallo placed "play on the harp" immediately before it, and thus proved (?) that psallo means to "play on a harp" precisely as I have proved (?) that baptizo means to "sprinkle or stain."

In order to demonstrate, from contextual as well as philological considerations, what word most likely conveys the original idea, it is not improper, in such cases, to try different words; and in such a case it could easily be shown that "plunge," "whelm," or some such word is demanded and that "sprinkle or stain" is forbidden by the context of the foregoing nine words as the meaning of baptizo in Justin; but it is not true that anything in his passages from Justin with psallo in them demands "play on the harp" and forbids "sing" as its meaning. On the contrary, sing, as seen in the "Ante-Nicene Fathers" rendering, makes complete sense and meets every demand of the context. It is contrary to all principles of correct translation to assume a meaning not demanded by the context or other consideration and to foist it upon a word as both he and I did in the foregoing passages with psallo and baptizo; but the illustration shows that his scheme proves (?) that baptizo in Justin means "sprinkle or stain" precisely as it proves (?) that psallo in Justin means "play on the harp."

2. The apostles and the temple worship. It is claimed that because the apostles and other Christians went into the Jewish temple where instruments were used in the worship, therefore they used the instruments in their worship, and hence Christians to-day may thus use such instruments. On page 235 the author of this book says: "The apostles and the whole church for a time after Pentecost, continued to worship in the temple," and "musical instruments in great variety were employed in temple worship." Well, what if "the apostles and the whole church" did go there to "worship," and what if "instruments in great variety were employed in temple worship?" How does that prove that the apostles and other Christians used the said instruments in their worship? Does it follow that because instruments "were employed in temple worship" and the early Christians went there and worshiped, therefore the early Christians employed those instruments in their worship? If so, then much more than that follows, and the authors of this logic will likely get tired of it themselves; for it is also a fact that the burning of incense was a part, and a very conspicuous part, of the "temple worship," and since it follows, according to this man, that because the Christians went there to worship they worshiped in accordance with the temple worship, therefore they burnt incense in their worship, and therefore Christians now should burn incense in their worship. If not, why not? It is a dictum of logic that whatever proves too much proves nothing, and this, as our readers can see, is a conspicuous example of it. There is simply no escape here. Instruments were no more prominent in temple worship than the burning of incense, and if the mere fact that the Christians went there to worship proves that they did whatever was in the temple worship, then they burnt incense, and the churches must burn incense to-day! So much for the logic of this book.

3. Another important item connected with Justin. Some things are wholly unbelievable until facts force them upon us. Here is a case in point. Our readers have not only seen the eagerness with which the author of this book has attempted to use Justin in support of the instrumental-music cause, but they have seen that he took upon himself to attach to psallo, as used by Justin, the meaning to "play on a harp," thus making the impression that Justin so taught. But, as we shall now see, the case is worse than this. On several pages of his book, to prove different things, and among them that instruments were used in the temple, at the beginning of the Christian era, he quotes and justly magnifies the "Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics," edited by Dr. James Hastings, as a renowned and eminently reliable authority, referring to it as "this great work" and "one of the leading authorities of the world" (page 85), and "the monumental work now issuing from the press under the able editorship of Dr. James Hastings," and that it "furnishes an exhaustive, informing article on Christian music," and he refers to Dr. Hastings himself as one "who no longer needs a string of suffixes to his name to give him standing in the world of letters" (page 249). That is high praise, and I heartily indorse it; but I have a special reason for calling attention to his great pains and conspicuous effort to exalt and magnify the "Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics." Here it is: On page 273 here is the way this man quotes from this world-renowned encyclopedia:

"In the Hebrew temple, at the beginning of the Christian era, the harp, lute, flute, trumpet and drum were used as accompaniment to psalms and canonical hymns; yet, owing to the necessity of avoiding comparison with pagan rites, instrumental music was forbidden in the early Christian church. On the other hand, Clement of Alexandria, in the second century, quoting the psalmist in favor of instrumental music, says," etc.

Now, having copied it with my own hand, I will give verbatim the same passage in the Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, and I will put in Italics the part which this man suppressed from his readers. Here it is:

"In the Hebrew temple, at the beginning of the Christian era the harp, lute, flute, trumpet and drum were used as accompaniment to the psalms and canonical hymns; yet, owing to the necessity of avoiding comparison with pagan rites, instrumental music was forbidden in the early Christian church. Justin Martyr argues against it. On the other hand, Clement of Alexandria, also in the second century, quoting the psalmist in favor of instrumental music, says," etc. (Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, Volume IX, page 31.)

Let the reader carefully compare the two quotations. Why did he suppress from his readers that italicized statement? In the face of the fact that he had not only perverted Justin's own words in order to make him appear to support instrumental music, but had exalted and magnified the Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics as a great authority, our readers can draw their own conclusion as to why he would suppress and thus carefully keep from his readers the important and valuable statement of that great work that "Justin Martyr argues against" instrumental music. And yet, in spite of these significant facts, referring to those who differ from him on the music question, and in immediate connection with one of his quotations from that great authority, he has the face to say: "Pity him who is so filled with a theory that he cannot imbibe truth, and who, from habit, repels everything which contradicts his views." (Page 245.) I know nothing of his ability to "imbibe truth," nor whether he "repels everything which contradicts his views," and I therefore do not presume to say; but I do know that, either "from habit" or for some other reason, he suppresses the truth sometimes and does not let his readers see it. In the case of this "exhaustive, informing article on Christian music" he suppressed one of its most "informing" things. And I do not hesitate to express the judgment that lectures from such a source on prejudice and being "filled with a theory" will likely be estimated at their true value by right-thinking persons.

4. How lexicons say things. In my book, "Instrumental Music in the Worship," page 47, referring to the period B.C. 146 and A.D. 1100, the period covered by the great lexicon of Sophocles, this statement is made:

"As the basis of his monumental work, this profound and tireless scholar examined, as we have found by actual count, 146 secular and 77 ecclesiastical authors of the Roman period, and 109 secular and 262 ecclesiastical, modern Greek, and scholastic authors of the Byzantine period, a grand total of 594 authors and covering a period of more than 1,200 years, and he declares that there is not a single example of psallo throughout this long period involving or implying the use of an instrument, but says that it meant always and everywhere 'to chant, sing religious hymns.'"

The author of the book here under review attempts to make the impression that in that passage I said about Sophocles and his lexicon what is not true. Here is his curt comment on it: "Which statement Sophocles never made, nor any other upon the subject." (Page 253.) Without stopping here to discuss the lack of civility in such a comment in such a connection, I merely raise the question, How do lexicons say things? When I say that Sophocles "declares that there is not a single example of psallo throughout this long period involving or implying the use of an instrument," considerate and thoughtful readers will clearly see that I did not, in that passage, state how Sophocles "declares" that fact; and if he declared it in any way at all, my statement is true. Lexicographers say or declare things both by what they put in their lexicons and by what they leave out. For example, when the first American edition of Liddell and Scott under the editorship of Henry Drisler, of Columbia College, appeared in 1846 with "pour upon" as a definition of baptizo, did they not, by that fact, "declare" that they had found an example of baptizo meaning to "pour upon"? And when their next edition appeared with "pour upon" expunged, did they not, by that fact, declare that they were mistaken in the first case, and did they not then, and do they not now, "declare" that there is not a single example of baptizo throughout? Greek literature meaning to "pour upon"? If they mean what they did, they declare that they find no such example.

Moreover, suppose somebody should say of the definition of baptizo by Liddell and Scott, since they expunged "pour upon," that the remaining definition does not "preclude" or "exclude" pouring and sprinkling, what should we say in reply? Is it not enough to say that the very fact that they do not include pouring and sprinkling in their definitions is a loud declaration on their part that such definitions do not belong there, but are excluded? If not, why not? Yet on page 77 of his book, referring to Sophocles' definition of psallo "to chant, sing religious hymns," this man says: "Even his definition of psallo in no sense excludes accompaniment." Why not? Does it exclude dancing? If so, how? So far as the meaning of the word is concerned, does it not exclude it by not including it?

5. The significant uncertainty of some of his most prominent witnesses. It is a most significant circumstance that a large number of the witnesses introduced in this book to uphold the instrumental music cause show, by their gingerly phraseology, that, as scholars, they are by no means certain about the ground they occupy; that they are decidedly loath to take an out-and-out stand against the opposition in this controversy; and that it is very probably their training and theological bias in favor of instrumental music in the worship that leads them to support the practice at all. For example, just look at the following:

(1) Professor Richard Goettheil, Chief of the Oriental Division, New York Public Library: "I think your contention that psallo, in the New Testament, indicates the instrument, is correct." "I think that the Hebrew zamar means originally 'to play an instrument, to make music.'" (Page 284.) Exactly. "I think"! And such a wary answer makes intelligent readers "think."

(2) Addison Hogue, Washington and Lee University: "I should not say that an instrumental accompaniment is necessarily precluded." (Page 292.)

(3) Dr. Alfred T. Leach, University of Saskatchewan: "All evidence, I think, goes to show that musical accompaniment was a necessary part of the rendering of the psalmos." (Page 293.) He, too, is not certain, but "thinks"! I commend his honesty.

(4) Professor W. A. Macdonell, Presbyterian Theological College, Saskatchewan: "I think I can safely say that it is right to translate psallein in Rom. 15: 9 and 1 Cor. 14: 15 by the word 'sing,' and that it also included the idea of musical accompaniment." (Page 296.)

(5) Dr. Richard T. Elliott, editor of Aristophanes, etc.: "What strikes attention specially in the case of the use in the Septuagint, is that, in the great majority of cases where psallo is used, the translation of the corresponding Hebrew words in the Revised Version and by other leading scholars is 'to sing' or 'sing praises,' a meaning which I think cannot be said to be necessary in any case that I have seen in classical or ordinary Greek." (Page 298.) Just imagine what the great lexicons of Thayer and Sophocles would be, compared with what they are, if they rested on nothing more certain than these half-baked and hesitating statements!

(6) Professor C. F. Smith, Department of Greek in the University of Wisconsin: "I do not think 'sing,' the translation of psallo in Rom. 15: 9 and 1 Cor. 14: 15, necessarily precludes instrumental accompaniment in either passage." (Page 304.)

(7) Professor Campbell Bonner, University of Michigan: "In the New Testament, I think a musical accompaniment is to be supposed." (Page 305.)

Now, in all candor I ask, what do our readers think of a practical theory in religion which, though it involves the solemn matter of obedience to God, stands on no higher ground than "I think," "I should not say," "I think goes to show," "I think I can safely say," "I do not think sing necessarily precludes instrumental accompaniment," and "I think a musical accompaniment is to be supposed?" "To be supposed" indeed! Where is the word of God? Can we not stand on the rock of certainty? With all due deference for all concerned, I respectfully add that, on the basis of such flimsy talk, Christians can "think" into the service and worship of God anything they want, from the playing of instruments to infant baptism, sprinkling and pouring, burning incense, and anything else throughout the whole list of denominational practices. Why not? How vastly and radically different it is from the position that stands on a positive "Thus saith the Lord!"

6. The divine rule for the government of Christians in worship. Here it is in two passages from the Lord himself: "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you." (Matt. 28: 20.) "In vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." (Matt. 15: 9.) Thus, the positive side of the rule says they are to do acts which he has "commanded." As to music in his worship, he commands us in the Greek New Testament to psallo; but psallo in English means to sing. Hence, he commands us to sing. He does not command us to play. The latter is not among the "all things" which he "commanded." "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you." The negative side of the rule distinctly points out that doing anything which he has not "commanded," but is merely "the precept of men," is vain worship. Of course "the precepts of men" are what men say, and not what God says. In the present case, God says "sing," and men say "play."

7. The case for instrumental music in Christian worship not made out. The book which has been reviewed in these chapters is not only an effort to uphold an act of worship not "commanded" by the Lord, but that effort is marked by gross misrepresentation and even by the suppression of vital statements in some of the authorities which it professes to quote. From both the Biblical and logical points of view, I have never read a document which, under the light of critical examination, proved to be more thoroughly inconclusive. It is a massive compilation of heterogeneous quotations, a large per cent of which not only have no relevancy to the point in dispute, but many of which, when critically examined, are found to be either downright misrepresentations or otherwise void of proof; and I hesitate not to say that this feature of the work alone, and especially its suppression of such authorities as Thayer, Sophocles, and the "Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics," no matter what the motive, is enough, in the estimation of all right-thinking people, justly to consign the book to oblivion. Christians, no matter what their differences, should deal honorably with each other and with all questions, and even the advocates of instrumental music, instead of commending and circulating, should spurn such a defense of their cause; and when he says "the impelling purpose in the research that produced" his book "came from a love for truth" (page 8), thoughtful and unprejudiced readers, on both sides of the controversy, will likely feel disposed to reply: "Why, then, did you suppress it when quoting Thayer, Sophocles, and others?" Either because its author himself had some appreciation of this inherent weakness in his ponderous mass of quotations or for some other reason, instead of leaving his book to speak for itself, he seems to feel it necessary to be constantly saying something favorable about it: and hence his pages are marked with such expressions as "my extensive research," what "one of our most loved editors" said "when informed of the results of the present research," or other things that transpired "in the research," "during the research," and how "one of our leading men" said he did "wish Brother McGarvey had lived to see this," and, finally, as mentioned in another connection, he actually tells his readers, as if he expected them to believe it, that he has given them "more information" on psallo than was "ever beheld" by all the combined translators of all past ages!! I do not wonder that one of his own fellow Canadians, referring to his book in a published magazine article, says: "The one thing remarkable about Mr. Payne's effort is the brazen-faced bombast with which he contradicts and exalts himself above the scholarship of two thousand years."

Finally, in taking my leave of this book and its author, I am forcibly reminded of Moses E. Lard's review of Dr. J. B. Jeter's notorious book, entitled "Campbellism Examined," published over a half century ago. Having pointed out what he termed "the insulting spirit of the book," as well as its thoroughly inconclusive character as an argument, the eloquent and scholarly Lard closed his pungent review with these words: "These are a few of the effects to be ascribed to Mr. Jeter's book; and with the simple statement of them, we now take leave of both him and it, feeling that in the one we part from a misguided man, and in the other from a graceless thing." (Review of Campbellism Examined, page 297.) Concerning the book here reviewed and its author, I think I could not close with a more appropriate statement than to express, in the same words, my firm and sincere conviction that "in the one we part from a misguided man, and in the other from a graceless thing."

A Very Serious Contradiction.

BY F. W. SMITH.

In my review of R. H. Boll's "kingdom theory" I had occasion to publish a statement from Brother C. A. Taylor, of Louisville, Ky., relative to the teaching of Brother David L. Cooper, one of Boll's followers. To this statement Brother Cooper protested in the following letter to J. C. McQuiddy:

Abilene Christian College, Abilene, Texas, January 26, 1922.—Mr. J. C. McQuiddy, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Brother McQuiddy: In the Gospel Advocate of November 24, 1921, Brother F. W. Smith in an article gave a little squib from Brother C. A. Taylor, of Louisville, Ky., which note I quote in full: "Brother D. L. Cooper told me that he believed that the Savior would return to this earth to sit on David's literal throne in the city of Jerusalem, and as Ruler over the Jews would lead the hosts of Israel into carnal, bloody warfare, and interpreted some passages of Scripture to mean that while engaged in carnal warfare, as the Leader of the Jews, his (the Savior's) garments would be stained with the blood of his enemies. I do not propose to give his exact words, but this is in substance what he said." (C. A. Taylor, Louisville, Ky.) [The italics are mine.—D. L. C.]

In regard to this quotation, let me say that, if Brother Taylor understood me to take the position which is stated in this quotation, he very greatly misunderstood me; for I have never taken such a position, neither do I now take such a one.

Since you would not knowingly have any one set forth in your paper in a false light, and since this article does set me in a false light, you will most gladly and cheerfully give the readers of the Advocate this letter.

Yours in love of the truth of God,

DAVID L. COOPER.

His protest would have been published as he requested, but for the fact that justice demanded that Brother Taylor should see his letter and be heard from on the situation. Accordingly Brother Cooper's letter was forwarded to Brother Taylor, who wrote to Brother Cooper the following note:

Louisville, Ky., February 15, 1922.—Mr. D. L. Cooper, care Abilene Christian College, Abilene, Texas.—Dear Brother

er Cooper: Your letter of January 26, 1922, written to Brother J. C. McQuiddy, has been forwarded to me. I am certainly surprised—yea, astonished—to learn of the denial you make in your letter to Brother McQuiddy. It is astounding to learn that you deny that you have taught that the Savior would return to sit on David's literal throne, or that you taught that the Savior's garments will be stained with the blood of his enemies when he returns to lead the Jews into carnal, bloody warfare.

After all that has passed between you and me—the many long and earnest discussions we have had concerning the Bible teaching as to what will occur when the Savior returns; the long and earnest night conferences held, at your request, both at your home and at mine, where we argued these questions over and over again—it is extremely difficult for me to believe that you would make such a denial, but here it is in your letter to Brother McQuiddy!

It was in the conferences mentioned above that you advanced the idea that certain passages of Scripture teach that when the Savior returns he will lead the Jews into carnal, bloody warfare and that his garments will be stained with the blood of his enemies.

Not only do I distinctly remember that you took this identical position, but with equal distinctness I remember my reply. I was so astonished at your taking such a position that, in substance, I said to you, "Do you mean to say that you believe that when the Savior returns he will lead the Jews into carnal, bloody warfare and that his garments will be stained with the blood of his enemies?" and you promptly, positively, and distinctly replied that you did most assuredly believe it. I told you that I did not believe anything of the kind, and made the observation that it was impossible for me to harmonize my conception of Jesus as the "Prince of Peace" with your teaching that he would engage in carnal, bloody warfare and stain his garments with the blood of his enemies. This is as clear in my memory as if it had occurred yesterday, and it not only does not misrepresent you, but it represents you exactly as you represented yourself.

Not merely once, but many, many times when we were discussing the so-called Boll theories regarding the Savior's return, you took this position, and took it in clear, dogmatic, and positive terms, and it is truly disappointing and discouraging to see what you have written to Brother McQuiddy. I have in no sense and in no degree either misunderstood or misrepresented what you said to me, and what you distinctly and repeatedly said, and I shall certainly look forward to your reply with a great deal of interest.

Very sincerely,

C. A. TAYLOR.

It was but fair to all parties concerned to await a response from Brother Cooper to Brother Taylor's note; but since Brother Cooper declines to reply and treats the matter with utter silence, I shall give what is in my possession to the public, with such observations as the situation seems to demand. The following note, just received from Brother Taylor, shows Brother Cooper's attitude in the matter:

Louisville, Ky., March 18, 1922.—Mr. J. C. McQuiddy, care Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Brother McQuiddy: Under date January 30, 1922, you sent me a letter you had received from Brother D. L. Cooper. On February 15, 1922, I wrote Brother Cooper the letter of which I sent you a copy; and, although over a month has passed, I have received no reply.

Inasmuch as Brother Cooper wrote his letter for publication in the Gospel Advocate and requested you to publish it there, I write now to suggest that you comply with his request. I suggest, therefore, that you publish his letter at once, which, of course, calls for the simultaneous publication of my letter to him.

Very truly yours,

C. A. TAYLOR.

It is neither my purpose nor desire to do a living soul the slightest injustice, and I published in my review of R. H. Boll the statement regarding Brother Cooper's teaching on what I then and now believe to be the highest and best authority. No man in the State of Kentucky stands higher for truth and veracity than does C. A. Taylor, and he possesses a keen, logical and discriminating intellect, fully capable of understanding and weighing the arguments of Brother Cooper or any other man. The matter under consideration was at that time very much of a live issue, and finally resulted in the disruption of one of the best churches in Louisville, and from whose membership two of the best men in any congregation were shamefully and disgracefully cast out of the church by the element with which Brother Cooper was in sympathy and hearty accord. From these considerations and the very significant fact that Brother Cooper treats with utter silence Brother Taylor's letter, I can see no reason why I should modify in the least the statement made in my review of R. H. Boll regarding Brother Cooper's teaching on certain matters fully set forth in Brother Taylor's letter. It is a well-known fact that D. L. Cooper was not only an ardent, but also a very radical supporter and defender of the peculiar doctrines and theories of R. H. Boll; and he was engaged in that kind of work no later than August, 1921, and that in a very vehement spirit. One characteristic of these speculative teachers is to deny doctrines attributed to them, no matter how clearly and positively they may have taught them, and it seems providential that at last they fully committed themselves to writing in the person of their leader, R. H. Boll, and in his writings I reviewed.

In conclusion, as the matter now stands and will stand, there is absolutely no ground at all to question the fact that he taught exactly as represented by Brother Taylor; but if Brother Cooper has changed—if he has renounced and repudiated in his heart his faith in and support of R. H. Boll's theories, let him be manly enough to say so, and we will gladly publish his renunciation and repudiation. Moreover, if it be a fact that he has changed, he owes it to himself and to the truth to make a public statement to that effect. Will he do it?

Bring Christ the Best.

There is a lad—five loaves hath he,
And fishes twain; but what are they,
Where hungry thousands be?
Nay, Christ will find a way.

In order on the fresh green hill
The mighty Shepherd ranks his sheep
By tens and fifties, still
As clouds when breezes sleep.

O, who can tell the trembling joy,
Who paint the grave, endearing look,
When from that favored boy
The wondrous pledge he took?

Keep thou, dear lad, thine early word;
Bring him thy best. Who knows but he
For his eternal board
May take some gift of thee? —Selected.

Patty's Garden.

The last day of the house party Selma slipped into Aunt Catherine's room. Her small, vivid face was like a wind-beaten flower. Aunt Catherine, from her invalid chair, looked upon it tenderly.

"I never had such a beautiful time in my life!" Selma cried, passionately. "Every day I keep thinking, 'Only five meals more—only four—only three.' O, why do happy times have to end—ever, Aunt Catherine?"

"So that new happy times may come," Aunt Catherine's wise voice responded.

"But they can't be the same!" Selma protested, passionately.

"No more than two skies are ever the same, or two springtimes. You wouldn't want to miss any springtime, would you?"

"But that isn't the same," Selma repeated. "How do I know that there will ever be any more times as happy as this one?"

"Did I ever tell you," Aunt Catherine asked, "about Patty Pemberton's garden?"

Selma shook her head. She was not interested in Patty Pemberton's garden. But Aunt Catherine, smiling a little, went on as if she did not notice:

"We had gardens exactly alike one February—a great armful of pussy willows that a cousin of Patty's brought in from the country. Patty divided them with me. We were both wild over them, and watched the 'pussies' through all their lovely stages. I fairly grieved over each one that fell, and when, at the end of six weeks, I threw away the bare branches, I remember how broken-hearted I was and what a very doleful note I wrote Patty about it.

"Patty was quarantined with tonsillitis at the time, and my mother wouldn't let me go to see her, because I always had a delicate throat. It was three weeks before I could see her, and almost the first thing I said, after I had satisfied myself that she wasn't fading away, was: 'O Patty, if only your willows had stayed while you were sick!' Patty laughed and caught my hand.

"Come and see my private springtime," she said, mysteriously.

"We ran up to her room. At the doorway I stopped short. Patty had not thrown away her willows when the pussies fell; there in her jar they stood, a little forest of eager green leaves, and perched among them—nobody but Patty would have thought of it!—a tiny yellow bird she had picked up at a toy shop for five cents. 'You dear goosey,' Patty cried, 'there are always new things coming, if you watch! You shall have half of these—the bird half.'

"That," Aunt Catherine finished, "was Patty's garden. I never forgot its lesson. After that, when one joy went, instead of mourning for it, I kept on the watch for the next."

"Did it always come?" Selma asked.

Aunt Catherine smiled back at the half-doleful, half-hopeful face.

"It always comes—if you have eyes to see," she answered.—Youth's Companion.

Collections.

Rosalind dropped down into one of Miss Katharine's big piazza chairs, flushed and starry-eyed. "O, I've had the most wonderful time!" she cried.

"Where?" Miss Katharine asked, smiling at the excited girl.

"At Mrs. Novello's, looking at her pottery collection. Just think of a little town like this having one of the finest private collections in existence! Miss Katharine—"

"Yes?" Miss Katharine encouraged her.

"Why are so many people commonplace and uninteresting? Why are they content to do the things that thousands of other people are doing? I—it seems to me I'd rather die than be commonplace! But most people don't seem to care."

Miss Katharine's fingers, busy with her crocheting, became still for a moment.

"Rena Novello is a born collector," she said, slowly. "She always was, even as a girl. Her potteries are wonderful, as you say, but there is a far more valuable collection than hers in this town."

"There is? Where?" Rosalind's voice was full of excitement.

"In your grandmother's upper drawer."

"In grandmother's—Miss Katharine, what in the world do you mean? Grandmother's upper drawer is just full of all sorts of funny things people have given her. Some of them are so funny!"

"I know. That mat that the janitor's wife worked for her, and the funny wobbly pincushion little Sammy Hindslow made when he was getting over typhoid, and cheap cotton handkerchiefs, and sachet bags that long ago lost their perfume, and impossible 'neck fixings.' I know them all, and I say again, it is the most wonderful collection in town. Your grandmother, however, never dreams that it is a collection."

Rosalind waited.

"Every single thing in that drawer means some one's love and gratitude, and more of them than any one will ever know mean discouraged lives that she has loved into courage and strength. A box of those handkerchiefs came from a young fellow who was in prison two years; and your grandmother stood by him when he came out, ashamed and ready to give up everything. Some are from girls to whom she has been a steady friend; many are from mothers, old and young.

"We could live without pottery collections, fascinating though they are, Rosalind, but the time will never come when this old world can get along without men and women to love us into being the best we can. Your grandmother's upper drawer is the finest exhibit of neighborliness I ever saw. I'd like to have it in the library after she dies, each thing with its life story attached. It would be better than volumes of sociology."—Selected.

BY C. R. N.

Obedience to the gospel makes one a Christian; and all who obey the gospel become, by such act, children of God. If one is a child of God, he is in the family of God. God does not have children who are not in his family. Those baptized by Paul in Ephesus (Acts 19) are afterwards declared to be "of the household of God" (Eph. 2: 19). They were members of the church, which is the house of God. "That thou mayest know how men ought to behave themselves in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." (1 Tim. 3: 15.)

Some one inquires: "Can one become a member of the family of God on earth, the church, and a member of a sectarian body by the same act and at the same time? Can one become a member of the family of God and a member of the Baptist Church by the same act and at the same time?" To each of the questions I answer, No.

It requires belief of and obedience to certain truth to make one a child of God; whereas it requires disbelief of truth and obedience to some doctrine to make one a member of the Baptist Church. If the faith of the gospel and obedience growing out of such faith will make one man a Baptist, such faith and obedience will make all men members of the Baptist Church. When it is remembered that there was no such institution in the world till some fifteen hundred years after the death of the last apostle, and that men did obey the gospel and become Christians in the days of the apostles, it need not be argued that obedience to the gospel which makes one a Christian does not make one a Baptist.

Baptists teach that belief of certain things and obedience growing out of certain heart condition and "experience" are necessary to baptism, which baptism is a prerequisite to membership in the Baptist Church. Should a Baptist minister, by the authority of a Baptist church, immerse a man, and subsequent thereto the Baptist church authorizing the baptism extend to the man the hand of "church fellowship," and then it developed that the man who was baptized was only playing apart, that he had never believed in Christ, that he had not enjoyed the "experience of grace" which Baptists declare one must have before baptism, they would declare to you that the man had never, in fact, been a member of the Baptist Church, nor in truth had fellowship with them. Baptists teach that one cannot be baptized unless he believes that he is saved before he is baptized, and too, they insist that one, before he can be baptized, must have an "experience of grace" which brings the personal assurance of salvation, the assurance that he has been pardoned and accepted by the Lord. For one to be baptized without such faith and supposed "experience," he does not, in fact, become a member of the Baptist Church.

For one to be baptized scripturally, believing wholeheartedly in Christ, and that obedience to his command to be baptized is necessary to salvation, as is obedience to the command to repent, is not Baptist baptism, nor will such baptism bring one into the Baptist Church; nor will Baptists knowingly give one with such faith the hand of "church fellowship." Those baptized with such faith and with such motives receive scriptural baptism; and though they may depart from the teaching of the New Testament by having their names enrolled on the register of a Baptist church, they have never, in fact, been members of the Baptist Church, and so soon as they learn that they have sinned by associating religiously and affiliating in a church capacity with such body, they will sever their nominal connection with them.

When you ask if there are children of God among the sectarian bodies, if you mean to ask if obedience to sectarian doctrine makes one a child of God, I answer: No. If you mean to inquire if some people learn enough truth, in spite of sectarian teaching, to obey the gospel, and thereby become children of God, and that it is possible for them to then have their names enrolled in the register of some sectarian church, I answer: Yes, such has been the case. Be it remembered, though, that one who intelligently submits to sectarian doctrine does not by such obedience become a child of God; nor will one who knows the relationship of sectarian doctrine to the truth submit to what is demanded by Baptists in order to baptism. It is only when the Baptists depart from their regular routine in accepting one as a candidate for baptism that scriptural baptism is administered by them.

But that there are some who have become children of God, who have subsequent to becoming children of God united with the Baptists, cannot be successfully denied. The question then is submitted: Are they Christians? In the sectarian body—the sectarian church—they are united with people giving their time, influence, and money to the teaching and practice of some things, claiming to do so in the name of Christ, which Christ has never commanded; more, they refuse to do some of the vital things Jesus commands his children to do. If you mean by "Christian" "a follower of Christ," certainly such folk are not Christians. Can any one who is informed, one who is conversant with the type of Christians Paul and Peter were anxious for men to become, seriously contend that the children of God who may unite with sectarian churches are Christians?

If I thought people in sectarian bodies were Christians, that they were "followers of Christ" to the extent that one must be a follower of Christ to be approved by him—if I thought they were followers of Christ in their efforts to teach false doctrine and practice unauthorized things—I would certainly cease my efforts to induce folk who are in sectarian bodies to cease to wear sectarian names and teach sectarian doctrine.

Can one refuse to do things Christ commanded and be a Christian? Can one lend his influence to the propagation of false doctrine and be a Christian? Can one be a Christian and observe the Lord's Supper only semioccasionally? Can one be a Christian and refuse to wear the name the Lord has given his people? Can one be a Christian and refuse to designate the church of Christ by the name inspiration has revealed?

PERSONAL NOTES.

C. E. Wooldridge manages to keep busy, as is indicated by the following: "On Wednesday at 7:30 P.M. I teach a class at Handley, and reach home at 11 P.M.; on Thursday at 7:30 P.M. I teach a class at Kaufman; on Friday afternoon, one at Terrell; on Saturday afternoon, at Wills Point, then catch early train Sunday morning back to Terrell. I teach a Bible class and preach at the morning service, assist with the young people's meeting and preaching at the evening hour, and frequently go out into the country in the afternoon."

From John Straiton, Fort Worth, Texas, March 25: "Last Sunday morning, by request of the resident evangelist, F. B. Shepherd, I preached at Amarillo. By the courtesy of Brother C. Loving I was taken down to Canyon City, where I preached to a full house on 'Soul Winning.' On Wednesday I was in Canadian. W. L. Swinney took me all over the Orphans' Home. I found the children looking happy and contented. At night I spoke to a fair-sized crowd (adults and children) in the meetinghouse. All three places contributed liberally to the Lillie Cypert travel fund."

Field Reports

Bloomburg, Texas, March 23.—I am in a fine meeting here. It is the first held here by us in a long time, as men more than fifty years old say they have never heard a Christian preacher before. The crowds are large and the interest fine, and I hope to do much good while here. I have time for a meeting the latter part of April and another the first of July. Let any one interested write me at Hatfield, Ark.—C. H. Smithson.

Fort Worth, Texas, March 20.—Yesterday the Southside Church enjoyed a blessed day, with a large crowd, a fine song service, and two additions to the church. There were many visitors, including Brother T. B. Wilkerson (who preached at the evening service), Brother J. D. Burleson, Brother Jesse Maddox, and others. Preparations for our protracted meeting, beginning on May 7, are going forward rapidly. Brother C. R. Nichol will do the preaching, and he is trying to make me think he is going to do the best work he ever did and that we will have the greatest meeting ever; and if he keeps up that sort of spirit, I guess we will. The church is in the best condition for the meeting it has ever been in. Our Bible classes are increasing in attendance every Sunday. Everything growing and everybody happy.—Tice Elkins.

Fort Worth, Texas, March 28.—The Southside Church here enjoyed another fine day last Lord's day, with one addition at the morning service. Brother A. B. Barret preached at the night service. The work is doing well, and many are enthusiastically working for the coming meeting in May, when Brother Nichol is to be with us. This is the third year I have labored with the Southside church of Christ, and there has been much good done and many added to the body. There are many fine people among the membership. But I shall give this work up this summer, and will be available for protracted meetings from June on through the year. I have some work arranged for July and August, but will be glad of any calls for meetings after the first of June. If you need me, address me at Fort Worth, Texas. I shall live here indefinitely, and try to pay out my home and keep it.—Tice Elkins.

Sedalia, Mo., March 28.—I spent March 19-24 visiting and preaching for the Sugar Creek church, in Lewis County, this State. This is one of the oldest congregations in the country, having been built in the early sixties. Many of the older members have passed to their reward. One of old "Father" Shanks' boys, as I learned, was preaching or concluding his sermon when he fell dead. In this church are some of as good people as I ever met; yet, as I see it, they need to do and have done more work in that part of the country. There are only about two small congregations in the county. But few times, if ever before, have I had better attention. Considering the rainy weather and bad roads, our crowds were good. If the weather conditions and other things were favorable, I believe that I or any other good preacher could hold a good meeting there. If I were able, I would spend all of my time in the field. It is needed.—S. W. Bell.

Cookeville, Tenn., March 30.—On last Sunday night Brother R. V. Cawthon, of Mount Juliet, Tenn., closed his second meeting with the church at Cookeville, with two baptisms and one restoration. The meeting was well attended and much good was done. This was my first opportunity to be associated with Brother Cawthon in the work of the Lord. He is a true yokefellow and an able and earnest gospel preacher. He is highly esteemed by the church here, and deservedly so. It has never been mine to meet and labor with a more congenial and unselfish character. The outlook for the work here is very bright. A fine spirit is being more and more manifested, and, with the indisputable good already accomplished, the most of us feel that a better day is dawning upon the church here. No better people can be found than those composing the church at Cookeville, and it is a genuine pleasure to live among them and labor with them. On last Monday night they gave to me and my family the most complete surprise of our lives. It was a new Ford touring car, fully equipped and with many extras, such as shock absorbers, license, insurance, etc. We shall earnestly endeavor to prove, at least in a measure, worthy of such wonderful love.—J. Pettet Ezell.

Altus, Okla., March 27.—On last evening the meeting which began here on March 12 came to a close. There were fourteen souls baptized into Christ, five confessed their sins and were restored to the fellowship, eight identified themselves with us by relation, and one came to us from the "Christian Church." Brother Frank L. Cox, of Norman, Okla., did all the preaching, except the first day and the last two days of the meeting. We greatly appreciate the splendid work of Brother Cox during the meeting. Brother J. A. Cullum, of Elk City, Okla., spoke for us last evening, closing the meeting with a fine lesson on "The Division of the Word." From the last of January up to the beginning of the meeting just closed thirteen persons had been baptized and two restored. We thank God, through the Christ, that we are being used to the building up of the kingdom of God. We are looking forward with pleasure to the coming of Brother S. H. Hall in August for a twenty-days' meeting. With Brother W. R. Hooten, who lives here, doing his excellent work in leading the song service, we are expecting a great meeting. Brother Hooten led the singing during the meeting just closed. If any congregation needs a good singer for a meeting, call Brother Hooten. He will serve you faithfully.—S. E. Templeton.

Shelbyville, Ky., March 27.—I was at Van Buren and Shelbyville yesterday, with good attendance at both places. On the Sunday before I was at the Forks of Elkhorn and Shelbyville. The work at Shelbyville is moving along with good interest, and we are living in hopes that we will be able to begin our building this summer. I am sure we should try to establish the cause in every county seat. The denominations have long since seen the practical side of doing religious work, and, as a result, they are strongly entrenched in the towns where the masses live. In this part of the State, where we have good roads, people will leave the country church to worship in the towns, and I am sure a great work could be done in the towns if the brethren would all put forth their best effort to make it a success. We are right now needing funds badly to build our meetinghouse at Shelbyville. I have spent nearly four years to help establish the cause here; and while I could have gone to fields where the work was not near so hard, I have felt that it was my duty to remain here and see this through. I hope the brethren everywhere will lend us a helping hand. We cannot afford to let this work die, and it will not die if the churches will give us a helping hand right now. Send all donations to R. A. Craig, Shelbyville, Ky.

Worldliness.

BY S. WHITFIELD.

Becoming like the world is one of the great dangers that is before us. We will have to watch very closely if we keep ourselves away from the many great evils that surround us. We need not try to make ourselves peculiar or different from other people just for the sake of peculiarity; for if we make ourselves as peculiar as the Bible teaches us to be, that is enough.

"Nevertheless the people refused to obey the voice of Samuel; and they said, Nay; but we will have a king over us; that we also may be like all the nations." (1 Sam. 8: 19, 20.)

God selected the children of Israel to be a peculiar treasure unto himself, for they must be such that he might work through them and carry out his purpose; and it was to their eternal interest to be just as God desired them to be; but they were not satisfied to walk in such a narrow way. They wanted to be like other people; hence, like the world. Just to the extent that God's people become like others do they lose their influence for good in the world.

"For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." (Matt. 24: 38, 39.)

Wickedness and worldliness were the cause of the flood. The people were thinking all of the world and not of God or of their duty to God. They were going in the broad way that leads to destruction. Jesus tells us that when he comes again the world will be in a similar condition.

"And that which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection." (Luke 8: 14.)

Cares, riches, and worldly pleasures so take the attention of people that there is no time or place for the good seed of the kingdom to influence their lives for good. These are popular evils even among the professed followers of Christ, for the majority of people see no wrong in these things. So there is great danger of our being led away with such things.

"And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully: and he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, You'll feel better as soon as you swallow the first one. Two or three pills usually stop all the pain.

Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God." (Luke 12: 16-21.)

Riches were a curse to this man, for his heart was set on them and not on God. He was trusting in his riches and not in God. There are not many of us that can stand riches. We might rather live and die like Lazarus than to live and die as the rich man did. We should use our means in a way so we will lay up treasures in heaven. It is a good and wise thing to be rich toward God.

"For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." (John 12: 43.)

People who like the praise of men—and the most of people do—must please men to get it, and this leads to worldliness. We should live to please God whether we please men or not.

"And be not conformed to this world." (Rom. 12: 2.)

It is our duty to be much concerned about becoming like God and pleasing him. The world will get along without us, but we cannot get along without God.

"Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth." (Col. 3: 2.)

If we have our mind on things above, and remember that this world is not our abiding place, it will keep us away from much worldliness.

"But she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." (1 Tim. 5: 6.)

Those who live for the pleasures of this world are away from God. Money and worldly pleasure are two of the great things of this world.

"Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." (James 4: 4.)

To have the friendship of this world is to displease God. Then, if the world despises, persecutes, and rejects us, we need not feel bad, for such things must take place when we do the will of God.

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." (1 John 2: 15.)

The more we try to serve the Lord, the less we will think of the things of this world. In doing this we overcome the evil by the good, and this is the Lord's way.

Loss of Appetite is also loss of vitality, vigor, tone. To recover appetite and the rest, take Hood's Sarsaparilla, that strengthens the stomach, perfects digestion, makes eating a pleasure. It also makes the blood rich and pure, and steadies the nerves.

Obituaries

Jenkins.

The death of J. Luther Jenkins, at his home in Nashville, Tenn., on the morning of March 15, 1922, brought profound sorrow to the hearts of many. He was in every sense a man, and numbered his friends by his acquaintances. He was loved dearly by his family, by his neighbors, and especially loved by the church. He was sick for several weeks, but bore his suffering patiently. He obeyed the gospel thirteen years ago, and died faithful to the trust imposed upon him. He leaves a wife and one son to mourn his loss. May God bless them abundantly in their sorrow, and may they strive to that one great end—heaven.

WILL J. CULLUM.

Gawf.

David Laverne Gawf, eldest son of Brother and Sister J. H. Gawf, was born at Emery, Ark., on April 16, 1900, and died at Muskogee, Okla., on March 19, 1922. He was in the government service during the dark days of the recent war, and later taught in the public schools of this county. He was baptized into Christ by Brother John W. Hedge in September, 1919, and continued steadfastly in the faith, living daily a consecrated Christian life. He always loved, honored, and respected his parents, and was patient toward all men. He is survived by his parents and six brothers and sisters. Funeral services were held at the church at this place, conducted by Brother A. M. Foster. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

T. S. BAIN.

McDowell.

Tommie Leon McDowell was born on January 12, 1907. He departed this life on March 11, 1922. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. McDowell, of Gordon, Ga. He was struck by a horrible accident, and after lingering a short while his spirit took its flight back to God who gave it. He was a dear friend to every one that he knew. He always had a pleasant smile on his face and spoke kind words to everybody. He was obedient to his parents and was the light of his home. He is gone, but not forgotten. His stay on earth was short, and his smiles and kind words are missed so much by his friends and relatives. Funeral services were conducted by Brother Dewell in the presence of a large number of sorrowing friends and relatives. His body was laid to rest by the side of his mother in the family cemetery, near his home.

A FRIEND.

McColpin.

Brother Marcellus A. McColpin was born on June 17, 1860. He spent much of his life in preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ, his field of labor being the northern part of the State of Florida. He endured many hardships, his work being where there were few who were of the faith and where opposition to the teaching was strong, also among those who were poor in this world's goods. But his labors were not in vain, and he had the pleasure of knowing that he led many into the "strait and narrow way." His marriage was late in life. He married Rachel Jacob on March 29, 1910. He moved to Lakeland, Fla., early in 1917, and after a long siege of declining health he passed away in an infirmary on January 12, 1922. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

J. W. GRANT.

Erwin.

My grandmother, Virginia C. Gantt, was born on February 20, 1837. She was married to W. T. Erwin on December 21, 1854, and obeyed the gospel the same year. She was the mother of fourteen children—eight boys and six girls. She leaves thirty grandchildren, twenty-three great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild. She was at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Smithson, at Franklin, Tenn., and on the morning of February 20, 1922, as we were planning to celebrate her eighty-fifth birthday, the Lord called her up higher. There was nothing that gave her more pleasure than being the first at the Lord's house to worship him "as it is written." She was willing and anxious to go to be with her Savior. She was laid to rest beside her husband in the Baker Cemetery, near her childhood home. Funeral services were conducted by Brother W. S. Morton.

MRS. CATHEY BAKER.

McCorkle.

Anderson J. McCorkle was born in Dyer County, Tenn., on January 27, 1834, and passed into the "great beyond" on January 17, 1922, lacking ten days of having reached his eighty-eighth milestone on life's journey. Mr. McCorkle obeyed the gospel under the teaching of Elder Holmes, by whom he was baptized on November 11, 1850. He was a faithful and devoted member of the congregation with which he held membership for seventy years. His seat was rarely ever vacant on the Lord's day until the infirmities of age prevented his being present. He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Martha Scott. After her death he was married to Miss Lou Fox, who preceded him many years ago. Funeral services were held at his old home church (Lemassamiae) by Elder Fred Blanchard. He is survived by one brother and a host of relatives, who will greatly miss his genial companionship.

MRS. ORA MCCORKLE HUIE.

Smith.

Sallie Crawford was born on April 1, 1857, and departed this life on January 25, 1922. She was married, on April 5, 1882, to Sanford Smith, to which union one daughter was born. An aged companion, her daughter, and one grandchild survive her. Her death was sudden and came as a great shock to her loved ones. She retired feeling as well as usual, and had made her plans to go to Winchester on the following day. She was talking to her niece, and began to breathe hard, and in a few minutes she was dead. She simply fell asleep on this side to wake in the likeness of Him she loved and tried to obey. In early life she united with the church of Christ, being buried in baptism by Brother C. E. W. Dorris. All children were especially fond of "Aunt Sallie," as they called her. She was never too tired nor busy to do something to please a child. She delighted in visitors and always seemed cheerful, although she was almost helpless for two years with rheumatism. Her husband is left alone, and may this great sorrow draw him nearer to his God, and may he so live that sometime, somewhere, he will understand that God knows best and "hath done all things well." A FRIEND.

Smith.

Mary Speck was born on August 12, 1846, and departed this life on January 27, 1922. She was married to George Smith on December 26, 1867. To this union four children were born. Two daughters preceded her to the spirit world. One son, one daughter, two grandchildren, and her aged husband survive her. She was a member of the Methodist Church for forty years, but, learning the way of the Lord more perfectly, she united with the church of Christ in August, 1908, being baptized by Brother O. H. Tallman. She was always willing to lend a helping hand to those in distress, and fell in the harness, so to speak; for when she heard of the sudden death of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Sanford Smith, she started after night to go to them, and fell by the roadside with a stroke of paralysis. She was carried home by friends, and lived only forty-six hours. Truly her friends were many, for each day and night while she lingered her home was filled with anxious and inquiring friends. A large crowd of relatives and friends gathered at her home on Sunday, January 29, to pay their last respects to a true wife and godly mother and to hear words of sympathy and encouragement from Elder J. J. Reynolds. Our loved ones die and leave our hearts and homes desolate for a time. We cannot prevent it, nor would it be best if we could. Sorrow has its useful lesson when it is legitimate, and death is the gate that opens from earth toward the house "eternal in the heavens." Then, should we not drown our sorrow in the blessed hope that a child of God leaves behind, and cure our loneliness by gathering together our friends and loved ones, and walk life's way, knowing that every step brings us nearer the departed and their sweet, eternal home, which death never enters and where partings never come? T. S.

The Kingdom and Its Laws.

BY J. WELDON MOON.

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: . . . and it shall stand forever." (Dan. 2: 44.)

The soul of man is undying and will live throughout the ceaseless ages of eternity. How precious! Worth more than the cattle of a thousand hills, more than the untold riches of earth. "What shall it profit a man," said the Savior, "if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" In the fulfillment of the above prophecy God sent his only begotten Son into the world, and through his apostles this kingdom, or church, was established on the first Pentecost after his resurrection. The law of induction into this kingdom was clearly and explicitly set forth, and in the Epistles it is clearly taught how the Christian must conduct himself in order to a happy home in the eternal city of God. This kingdom has the stamp of divinity upon it and is imperishable; its principles are founded on the rock of eternal truth. The laws that govern this divine institution are unchangeable. All the resources of immortality, all the power of God and Christ, uphold, sustain, and protect these laws from being changed by presumptuous men. These laws are absolutely adequate for man's need, not always coinciding with what he wants, but always with what he needs. This grand and glorious institution has no creeds of human origin to becloud its sublimity or darken its glory. Methinks time cannot weaken it, revolutions cannot shake it. Kingdoms and empires have been entombed; thrones have crumbled into the dust of ages forever past; but this kingdom to-day stands as a beacon light to the world, intact, undimmed, a golden monument with the imprint of divinity upon it, and the surging billows of time rage against it, but its resplendency is only brightened.

The claim has been made that the Constitution of the United States has been changed eighteen times, and the chances are strong that more revision may become necessary in the future ages. This is a very necessary and valuable document. Being of human origin, it needs revision and amendments to meet the changing vicissitudes of time. The church, or kingdom, of God needs no revision or amendments; the laws that govern it are immutable. Woe unto the man who adds, subtracts, modifies, alters, or tries to change in any way the laws that govern this institution! Better never to have been born.

The individual who comprehends, appreciates, and lives consistently in this kingdom has every reason to be infinitely happy. He has the blessed assurance that God's own hand will tenderly and gently lead him along the pathway of life, and when the shades and shadows of death shall hover around and about him he can lean on the everlasting arms of the dear Savior, and upon that bright, golden shore of immortality he will be filled and thrilled with the joy that is unspeakable amid the fadeless flowers of God's eternal home.

Mrs. Linton Tells How Helpful
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is at This Period

Denver, Colorado.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for seven years and I cannot tell you the good it has done me. It is good for young and old and I always keep a bottle of it in the house, for I am at that time of life when it calls for Lydia E. Pinkham's help. My husband saw your ad. in the papers and said 'You have taken everything you can think of, now I want you to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound!' So I let him get it, and I soon felt better and he told me 'I want you to take about six bottles.' So I did and I keep house and do all my own work and work out by the day and feel fine now. I tell every one about the Vegetable Compound, for so many of my friends thought I would not get well."—Mrs. R. J. LINTON, 1850 West 33d Avenue, Denver, Colorado.

After reading letters like the above, and we are constantly publishing them, why should any woman hesitate to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound if she is in need of help? It brings relief where other medicines fail.

We Do All See Alike.

BY W. L. REEVES.

All men see just what the Bible says alike, if every one sees what it says.

It is foolish for people to claim that we cannot all see alike. When I hear a person say this, I wonder if that very person is aware of being guilty of practicing a lot of things for which there is not one bit of Bible proof.

It is certain that all the divisions about religion are over the opinions of men. There can be no such things as conflicting opinions being correct. One truth never contradicts another truth; consequently, opinions that differ are not all correct.

I do not see why men want to foster religious opinions, anyway. We do not need them. I try to keep my mind free from all opinions. I have no right to them and no need for them. God does not grant any man a right to religious opinions; but I am sure he takes such a right away from every man who would become one of his servants. "Let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me," said Christ.

Now let us examine this a little further. Opinions are of men, not of God, so are not of faith; and "whatsoever is not of faith is sin." (Rom. 14: 23.) Again, listen: "But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." (Matt. 15: 9.) This shows that opinions are all in vain. What are commandments of men but just opinions about what God wants men to do?

Opinions are close kin to the sin of presumption, for which men must give an account in the judgment. Private interpretations of the Scriptures are just opinions. Peter says: "No prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation." (2 Pet. 1: 20.)

The Bible clearly teaches that man does not naturally know there is a God at all. If man could naturally know there is some sort of a God, he would naturally know the true and living God. If not, why not? Christ said: "They shall be all taught of God." (John 6: 45.)

Man does not naturally talk. If he did, what language would he speak?

One one occasion Christ wrote with his finger on the ground. All men see that the Bible says he wrote with his finger. All see it alike. It is not possible for any man to see that it says he wrote with a gold pen. Why? Because the verse tells exactly with what he wrote. There can be no opinions on that. But there can be diversities of opinions about what he wrote, for that is not in the Bible. So it is relative to all opinions. None of them are in God's Book, hence are not of faith; so they are sinful.

If all men will accept just what the Bible says about the church, they will all see but one New Testament church. They will all see that it is called "the church of God," "the church of Christ." In fact, all men do see this alike, if they see just what the Bible says about it.

I care not what verse of scripture we may quote, all men see it alike if they see just what it says.

John 3: 5 says: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." All men see just what this verse says alike. But many differ as to how men are thus born. The verse is metaphorical; so other verses must tell how man is born again, born of water and of the Spirit. Peter teaches that man is born again when he obeys the truth. (1 Pet. 1: 22, 23.) If some other passage had not told us how man is born of water and of the Spirit, we never could have known by reading John 3: 5, and so we would have to just let it alone like we do about the porter in Mark 13: 34. Christ does not tell us who the porter is, neither do any of the writers of the New Testament; so I do not presume to know. I am silent on that. Men differ as to whom he is. If the Bible told who he is, men could not differ about it at all. Thus we can see that the things about which men differ are not in the Bible.

The New Testament, if believed and obeyed just as it is, will unite all religious people, and will also destroy every human name and every human creed and abolish every sectarian church that has such things attached to it. "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God." (1 Pet. 4: 11.) Let us all go back to the decrees ordained by the apostles and elders at Jerusalem. (Acts 16: 4, 5.)

The Work at Lakeland, Fla.

BY LEE WHITLOW.

A few disciples have at various times been meeting in private homes here for a number of years. Last winter (now more than a year ago) Dr. J. H. Moore and wife were here for a short time, and he taught and baptized a few, and aroused an interest which resulted in a tent meeting, conducted here last July, by Brother John Hayes. During this meeting a number of names were enrolled, and these hired a hall and began to meet regularly every first day of the week to keep the ordinances. Brother J. W. Grant, of Nashville, Tenn., was requested to locate here and serve them as evangelist, which he did.

During his preaching on the first day in this year. The work has grown, and now we have preaching every Lord's day, morning and evening, prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, and cottage preaching every Friday evening. We also have class Bible study for an hour every Lord's day before preaching, and a good many of the members and some children take an active part in this. It is hard to determine the exact number of baptized believers here who do not affiliate with some man-made organization or indorse some prominent innovation, as instrumental music in the worship; but, as nearly as may be determined, there are seventy-five or eighty of us. Some of these, however, are not active in the Master's service; and Brother Grant and his wife, together with a few other zealous saints, are kept busy trying to arouse more interest and in teaching the word of the Lord. Our meeting place is in the Woman's Club and Library Building, 210 South Massachusetts Avenue."

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

No congregation will ever be the power for the cause it should be till unity is had, and the only way of unity is on God's word. Paul taught the church at Corinth (1 Cor. 1: 10) to be of the same mind, to speak the same thing, to be of the same judgment, and to have no divisions. Now, is it possible for a congregation to do this? Did you ever read of or know a place of any size and age that did such? The church at Jerusalem and others of apostolic times did not, in the absolute sense. Then, how are we to expect to do better than the early inspired churches? I do not believe it possible for a congregation to always carry such into effect. We will sometimes have different ideas about the cause, and no two minds will see all the same; but when it comes to a settlement of the questions, we have to do away with our ideas and take the word of God for it. Was not this the case of the church in regard to circumcision? (See Acts 15.) Were they all of the same mind, judgment, no divisions, perfectly joined together, or speaking the same thing? The very opposite was the case. But as soon as they appealed to God's way, their way was thrown aside and unity was had. Just so now, when differences arise, we may come to God's word and be united in mind because we adopted the mind of God, in judgment because we accepted God's judgment, etc.

Some congregations say the members are at unity when it only seems to be an agreement to do nothing. But this is not the unity which pleases God. The man with five talents, he with two, and he with one could have united on the do-nothing plan, but no "well done" would have been heard. To unite in God's way is a way of activity—a position taken and fought for, regardless of the opposition that may come. Paul is a splendid example of this, both in word and deed.

Most congregations are cursed or blessed, one or the other, with a few trouble makers. If no discipline is administered, it does not give the elders a chance to work or train for emergencies. But, on the other hand, the sad lack of a real disciplinarian by the eldership often is the cause of a wreck and ruin of many a congregation. The church should plan for work and then work the plan. A mission work is needed as a part of the program; and if a few are on the objective side, it is too often dropped. What ought to be done is to plan a scriptural work and teach the objector to follow the plan and let the work be done. Unity might be had in a man-made way, but not God's, when the work that should be done is dropped to please a few. Why not stop the Lord's Supper or anything else the Bible teaches because a few object?

Too many congregations seem prone to please a favored few rather than the Lord. I know there is a right way to bring about unity, and it ought to be followed. A church wanted to do some mission work; a brother objected, and it was not done; then later the church agreed to go on after patiently considering the brother for some time. The meeting was held, a church was set in order, and souls were saved, all of which could have been done before but for the brother. The souls of all were in danger while listening to him. Shall one soul, wrong in his contention, block the saving of scores of souls? The real scriptural congregation in unity is one working God's will, and not idle just to keep some objector from setting up a howl. If at a difference, settle it by God's word and go to work while it is day. Souls are precious; let us unite to save them in God's way.

AN OPEN DOOR.

BY EARNEST O. LOVE.

Paul prayed for an effectual door of utterance. (Col. 4: 3.) It only takes a casual glance at the work of the gospel to know that preaching the gospel is the most important thing in the world. The word of God is the seed of the kingdom. If no seed is sown, no crop can be raised. The human heart is the soil. The process of sowing consists in placing the seed properly in the soil. Since the heart is the soil, and since every man is master of his own destiny and holds the key to his own heart, it is sometimes no easy matter to get this word into the human heart.

The facts are that enough preaching is being done now to convert the whole world in a few months. If it were only reaching the right place. For some reason, the millions in our own country, at least, have turned a deaf ear to our preaching. The good sermons we prepare with so much care are, for the most part, delivered into the air, to empty seats, or to men and women already saved from their past sins and who are not worrying about the future for themselves or any one else.

Even our traveling preachers are getting very little results, considering the time and energy expended. It means very little to have a preacher go halfway across the continent to "hold a meeting" and his audience be ninety per cent Christians and nine per cent children of Christian parents. Let every evangelist observe his work, and he will see that this is a correct picture for almost any congregation. Many a good sermon is preached with not a single soul in the audience subject to the gospel call. The candidates for baptism are nearly all from Christian families. They should be baptized, it is true; but such work should and could be done by the elders, or some preacher in the congregation, or in some cases by the fathers of the children. By following this system, the preacher rather leaves the impression that it is a great and wonderful work that only a select few with special ability can ever learn to do. The people are seldom urged to become Christians at any time except during protracted meetings. That is deplorable; for Christianity should be worked at with unremitting zeal from one year's end to another, and that by every member of the body.

This system developed is harmful, because it lends no incentive to adequate extent. If a congregation can support a year and have a preacher visit it once a month, it generally pats itself on the back and says, "Well done," etc. Just here I am almost afraid to say what I think, but I must say it. I am afraid there are very few well-to-do members who are giving enough toward the spreading of the gospel and feeding the hungry to please God.

The system of having a preacher preach every Sunday is also open to objection. It does not develop the membership. If it increases the numbers, as is sometimes the case, it only adds more raw material which has no possible way of developing into strong men and women in the Lord. The more of that kind of material gets into the church, the weaker the church is. Besides this, it has a tendency to supplant the eldership with a one-man rule. History shows that this system brought forth the papacy. The pope of to-day, worshiped by Catholics all over the world as a divine being, is the logical outgrowth of the one-man elder or pastor. They began as some of us are beginning, and the centuries have done the rest. However, this is not intended as an adverse criticism of one thing more than another. It is only an admission that I, for one, have not seen the way out yet. The open door lies not there.

There is an open door, or one that can be easily opened. There are two classes of people that may be appealed to with some hope of getting a response. But first let us notice just what we are trying to do. We are making a bid for the rich, or, at least, the respectable class of people. This is well and good, if they were accessible. But nearly all of these are attached more or less closely to some religion. Nearly all those not attached have developed an aversion to all churches. There is absolutely no open door there.

The open door lies here. There are the poor, the maimed, the lame, the halt, the blind, the harlots, libertines, and sinners generally; those who struggle through the long hours of the day and then lie awake nights trying to think of a way to get food and shelter; those who have sinned grievously and have been humbled to the dust by society's harsh sentence. These will be glad to hear our message of salvation from a loving Savior, if we will only convince them that they will be welcome in the church. Do not let any one say this is objectionable. "They that be whole need not a physician. The Son of man came to seek and to save that which is lost." But I seriously fear that our membership will have to undergo a change of heart before we could welcome such people into the church if they came of their own accord, much less go out and "constrain" them to come in.

This may not appeal to some, but I venture the prediction that the church will have to go to feeding the hungry and lifting up the fallen or die. It is the real purpose of God in establishing the church in the world, anyway.

Another open door lies with the children. Much can be done by Christian parents to better conditions by beginning early and inculcating Christian teaching into the very fiber of every child's being. Unfortunately, many Christian parents are unprepared to teach their own children. They were never properly taught themselves. Besides, Christianity is not the most important thing with most church members. The negligence and indifference of the parents are exaggerated in the children, and thus we lose, in many cases, the children of our members.

Suppose, though, we could keep all our children, which we are not doing, what about our neighbors' children? There is every reason to believe that those children will grow up and assume the attitude of their parents toward the church. Then all hope, or nearly all, of reaching them is gone. This makes it necessary to do something for the children before the evil days come, when they shall say: "I have no pleasure in the things of God." This, of course, involves the school question. If schools are maintained where the Bible is taught every day, and where consecrated men and women can touch the lives of the children, some of them, at least, will grow up to be strong Christians.

It has been demonstrated that a regular school, run by Christian teachers, where the Bible is one of the textbooks, will be patronized liberally, if no tuition is charged. It has also been demonstrated that children thus taught will become Christians just as fast as they become old enough.

Now, would it not be better to look toward these open doors, rather than to keep on pounding at the doors that are closed and barred?

Directory for Day's Work.

BY G. W. RIGGS.

"And this, knowing the season, that already it is time for you to awake out of sleep: for now is salvation nearer to us than when we first believed. The night is far spent, and the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light. Let us walk becomingly, as in the day; not in revelling and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and jealousy. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof." (Rom. 13: 11-14.)

This passage teaches four things which have been called the Christian's directory for his day's work: when to awake, how to dress ourselves, how to walk, and what provision to make.

1. When to awake. Now—"already it is time for you to awake out of sleep." Not physical sleep, but spiritual sleep; a state of spiritual stupor, lethargy, indifference, neglect, laziness, and death. "Wherefore he saith, Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall shine upon thee." (Eph. 5: 14.) "So then let us not sleep, as do the rest, but let us watch and be sober." (1 Thess. 5: 6.) Every one should be alert to the welfare of his soul, aroused to the performance of his whole Christian duty, wide-awake to the service of God and the obligations resting upon him as a responsible being. The reason given for this negligence is the fleetness of time and the near approach of eternity. "For now is salvation nearer to us than when we first believed." The salvation here mentioned is the final salvation for which we hope, the glorious reward of eternal life in heaven. The night here is the period of earthly existence; the night of toil, of trial, of trouble, and of sorrow and suffering. The day at hand is the day of eternal blessedness; the bright, endless day of the great beyond, where there is no night and where God shall wipe all tears away. The thought, then, is that the sins and conflicts of this night of life will soon be over and a glorious eternal day is about to dawn. For this reason all should be earnest and watchful; no one has any time to spare, and no one can get ready too soon. We are living in perilous times and beset with temptations and dangers of many kinds; times of distress and anguish and perplexity; times that test the faith and try the souls of men; and this is another reason why we should be vigilant. "Be sober, be watchful; your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: whom withstand steadfast in your faith, knowing that the same sufferings are accomplished in your brethren who are in the world." (1 Pet. 5: 8, 9.)

2. How to dress ourselves. First, cast off the works of darkness—"the works that men do in the cover of darkness and are ashamed to do in the light. The sinful deeds, habits, and practices are to be put off, like one putting off an old, worn-out, worthless suit of clothes. Having thus cast off the works of darkness, we are to clothe ourselves with the armor of light—deeds of righteousness which will bear the light of truth. We are soldiers in the Lord's army, in conflict with powerful forces, and need to be clad in an armor to shield us. "Finally, be strong in the Lord, and in the strength of his might. Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For our wrestling is not against flesh and blood, but against the principalities, against the powers, against the world rulers of this darkness, against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places. Wherefore take up the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and, having done all, to stand. Stand therefore, having girded your loins with truth, and having put on the breastplate of righteousness, and having shod your feet with the preparation of the gospel of peace; withal taking up the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the evil one. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." (Eph. 6: 10-17.) We put on the armor of light, the garments of righteousness, and the armor of a Christian soldier, when we put on Christ. Paul said: "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ." We put on Christ when in faith and penitence we are baptized into him. "For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 27.) Since it is by baptism that one enters into and puts on Christ, it follows that every one who has not been immersed is out of him, and, hence, still in the rusty, moth-eaten garments of sin, or else in the "filthy rags" of his own righteousness.

3. How to walk. Not in darkness, but in the light; not in doubt, but in faith; not in reveling and drunkenness; not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and jealousy, but in truth and honesty and sincerity, as becometh the children of God. Walk in wisdom, in the Spirit, in love, and in newness of life. The Christian life is a forward march. Let us, then, walk earnestly and diligently and press on till we reach the goal of eternal life.

4. What provision to make. We are not to make provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof. It is necessary to provide for the health and needs of the body; but to provide means and spend them in questionable pleasures and in gratifying the unlawful desires and appetites of the flesh is sinful. Yet, much of the provision made by men is evidently for the purpose of fulfilling the lusts of the flesh. Let us not do that, but let us make a right use of our means—use them to the glory of God and the good of our fellow man.

Church Government.

BY W. H. CARTER.

I am glad to note that, in the papers, attention is being given to this subject. Yes, I am glad, because for a number of years I have seen the need of government in the churches. I have been in the work long enough to note the decline. In discussing this question, good, able, and influential brethren have said things about elders that, I fear, have contributed much to bring about present conditions. While some important matters are yet untouched, it is encouraging that good men have begun to approach the question that is being agitated. Hoping to encourage those who have begun the work to continue it, I feel disposed to say a few things.

There are, we might say, six grades in government: the good, better, and best; the bad, worse, and worst. It requires great wisdom to establish a good government. The church, the kingdom of heaven, is God's government on the earth. It is the product of the greatest and wisest of all beings. God himself is its builder. In the New Testament we have the inspired history of its origin, beginning, officers, and laws. In it God proposes to govern and bless his subjects—his children.

It is a well-known fact that a government cannot exist without law; that law is of no force if not executed, and that law will not be enforced without some one whose special duty it is to look after this part of the government. Those who willfully disobey the law are enemies, not friends, to the government. Now, the questions that need to be studied and the lessons that need to be learned are: (1) Whom has God appointed to take the oversight, teach, and rule the church (congregations)? (2) What "must be" their qualifications? (3) Who is to select them? (4) Who is to appoint them? (5) How are they to be appointed? (6) What is the duty of the whole church, or congregation, to them? Do not be content to answer with an opinion, for that teaches nothing, but give a "Thus saith the Lord," either in precept or example.

I will not undertake to answer the questions now. I want you to study them out and give your answers with the chapter and verse from the New Testament. What men say will not count. We used to propose to give a "Thus saith the Lord" for what we teach and practice, or quit it. Shall we say that now? If we do, some things will go out of practice.

This is a most important matter from the fact that, if God has established a government, naming the officials and their qualifications, and given examples of their selection and appointment, can we honor and glorify him in any way except to follow his instruction as given in his word?

The Lord's Supper.

BY W. W. YOUNG.

When waiting on the table at the Lord's Supper, we use the expression, "the Lord's broken body," or "the broken body of Christ." How about that? Who told us Christ's body was broken? Was not the lamb slain by the Israelites in Egypt a type of Christ, and was its body broken? Did not God's prophets say hundreds of years before Christ came to earth that "not a bone of him should be broken, and do not inspired writers tell us that when he was crucified his bones were not broken? His body was pierced, but was it broken? When a man cuts, pierces, or bruises his limbs, do we say he has broken them, if the bones are not broken? Where do we get the evidence that the body of Jesus was broken? It is true the translators of the King James translation, which came out in the year 1611, make Paul say: "The Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread; and when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you." (1 Cor. 11: 23, 24.) But have not scholars said for many years that there was an error in this, from the fact that there is no word in the original Greek, the language in which the New Testament was written, from which to get that word "broken," and that it should not be there? Then, in the translation known as the Revised Version, which came out in 1881, the translators of that work said by their actions that the word "broken" in that verse should not be there, and they left it out. Then when the American Standard Revised came out in 1901 (which is acknowledged to be the best we have ever had), the body of scholars who got out that work said by their actions that there was no authority for that word "broken" in that verse, and they threw it out. Since these scholars threw that word out, has there ever been any criticism from any source against them for doing so? Since that word has been challenged, has there ever come out a translation of any note that had that word in that verse? If all these scholars are right, the King James translators make Paul and Jesus say something fifteen hundred years after they were dead that they never said. If the King James translators are right, then all the others are wrong. Which will we accept as right?

Then, again, in speaking of the bread at the Lord's Supper, we refer to it as "the loaf." Where do we learn it is a loaf? Does not the word "loaf" carry with it the idea of bread that has risen—bread that has leaven in it; and is not the bread we use unleavened bread—bread with nothing in it to make it rise? Is not that we use more like a cake than a loaf? Webster says a loaf is a large mass of bread, and that a cake is a small mass of bread, flat rather than high; but why call it either "cake" or "loaf," when neither is in the record and when inspired men have called it something else? Under the old covenant God's people were required, when serving him at the feasts, to eat unleavened bread. Was it ever called "loaf?" In one of the feasts (the passover) they were to make two pieces of bread and put leaven in them, and with this bread the priests were to make a wave offering unto the Lord, and these pieces of bread were called "loaves," but did they eat them? Then, is the word "loaf" in the New Testament, except where it has reference to the bread that is eaten at everyday meals, and such as Jesus used in feeding the five thousand and four thousand, and such as our bakers make and put on the market now? Matthew, Mark, and Luke give us an account of the supper and crucifixion, and do any of them say "loaf" or "broken body?" Let us read up a little and see how these things are.

I am not in the habit of coming out before the public in this way, and do not want any controversy nor too severe criticism if not right, but simply mention these things for the consideration of any who may be interested and think they are of sufficient importance to be noticed; and if they are not right, they will be retracted and the right accepted if pointed out.

Reading the Bible.

BY MRS. J. DUDLEY TAYLOR.

When asked by his teacher, "What is the Bible?" a little boy I know answered: "It's a letter from God telling us what to do." His teacher thought it a plain, sweet answer.

I wonder if any of us would let a letter lie around unread like we do our Bibles—if we knew, too, that the letter told of a wonderful inheritance, if we would do certain things. Wouldn't we open such a letter in a great hurry and fairly "devour" its contents? Why not read the Bible? It tells of an eternal inheritance; and such a beautiful one, too! "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

So many of us only go to the Bible in times of great trouble or sorrow, like humans go to their storm pit only when a great storm is brewing. And so often we wonder why we have so much trouble. I think it is because we are, like Peter, following "afar off." Had he been near his Master, he would not have denied knowing him. "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." Real close to God, reading his word or obeying his commands, we cannot go far into sin. Sin leads to trouble and so much sorrow. Sin is the dross in us that must be burned out. The great furnace house of the soul is temptation: after resisting a fearful temptation we come out purer and stronger, more fitted to battle for God.

Let thy gold be cast in the furnace,
Thy red gold, precious and bright;
Do not fear the hungry fire,
With its caverns of burning light.
And thy gold shall return more precious,
Free from every spot and stain;
For gold must be tried by fire,
And a heart must be tried by pain.

In the cruel fire of sorrow
Cast thy heart: do not faint or wall.
Let thy heart be firm and steady,
Do not let thy spirit quail.
But wait till the trial is over,
And take thy heart again;
For as gold is tried by fire,
So a heart must be tried by pain.

I shall know by the gleam and glitter
Of the golden chain you wear,
By your heart's strong strength in loving,
Of the fire they have had to bear.
Beat on, true heart, forever;
Shine bright, strong, golden chain;
And bless the cleansing fire,
And the furnace of living pain.

Reading the Bible teaches us sweetness and gentleness, humility and love. People who read the Bible are hopeful and brave, quiet and helpful.

There is no pleasure in reading the Bible at random—here, there, and everywhere. To follow a character, or to read on a certain subject, or to memorize is interesting. God gave Joshua three rules for Scripture study—memorizing, meditating, and doing. Many of us remember reading what David said: "Thy word have I laid up in my heart, that I might not sin against thee."

For instance, in studying on a certain subject. To-day our trials seem worse. Suppose we study about being "tried." Take the concordance, find the word "tried." In Zech. 13: 9 we find: "And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people: and they shall say, The Lord is my God."

Maybe to-day we are so tired working. Look up "work." In 2 Thess. 3: 10 we find: "If any would not work, neither should he eat." In 1 Cor. 3: 13 we find: "Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." So much there is said of work, showing us God wishes us to work. All the apostles were workers. God does not want lazy people in his vineyard; and all the work we do is religious, whether it be cooking a meal, selling goods, building a house, or lecturing on science. "Honest toil is holy service; faithful work is praise and prayer."

All we wish to know can be found in God's great Book. If we dread death, study it in the Bible. We will find that it is only the end of the pilgrim's journey. It is only the finishing up of our earthly work as best we can, then "home, absolute safety, joy, peace, rest."

We wish to know how to treat our neighbor, and so easily we find: "Love thy neighbor as thyself." A neighbor is well cared for when we love him as we love ourselves.

Christ's promises and his commands are interesting to study. The promises are beautiful, the commands are easy. "Blessed is he that readeth," etc. (Rev. 1: 3.) "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls." (James 1: 21.)

The Menace of Sectarianism.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

Of all the giant influences, in my judgment, that menace the religion of Jesus Christ at the present time, greater than that of all others is the curse of sectarianism. Yes, I say "curse." I do not think that term too strong by any means. Sectarianism is the most inexcusable, out-of-place, arrogant, determined, hateful, despicable, and poisonous influence in the way of pure New Testament Christianity of any and all other things together. It saps, blights, withers, and deadens the true spirit and mission of that which was to bless, ennoble, and save the human family, and to really make the world a fit place in which to live. In fact, it is a monster of so frightful mien that no apology need be offered for it, no disposition to tolerate, either palliate, or deny its sinfulness.

But what is sectarianism? Webster: "The quality or character of a sectarian; adherence to a separate religious denomination; devotion to the interest of a party; excess of partisan or denominational zeal." Sectarian: "One of a sect; a member or adherent of a special school, denomination, or religious philosophical party; one of a party in religion which has separated itself from the established church."

Dear reader, please hold these definitions up in the light of the teachings and prayers of inspired men of God and see what a terrible thing it is to be a sectarian. Sectarianism impeaches the wisdom of an all-wise God in that it sets aside God's word, his order of things, the church of Jesus Christ, and seeks to enthrone the wisdom of uninspired men, and to have you walk by the opinions of men instead of walking by faith in Jesus Christ as Paul teaches us. It seeks to soothe and satisfy the longings and earnest, prayerful inquiries of lost and sin-cursed souls by feeding them upon wild caprices, fancied imaginations, silly dreams, and "old wives' fables," handed out to them by their hypocritical and corrupt teachers, who seek their own selfish and ungodly interest rather than the lost souls of men and women. Christ said of some: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is become so, ye make him twofold more a son of hell than yourselves." (Matt. 23: 15.) This certainly does not miss the work of present-day sectarianism.

Again, Paul says: "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." (2 Thess. 5: 21.) Sectarianism says: "Prove nothing; but hold fast what you have, let it be good or bad. It was good enough for your fathers and mothers, and it is good enough for you." John says: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but prove the spirits, whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." (1 John 4: 17.) Sectarianism says: "Believe what your preacher says, and your church doctrine, without proving anything. It will not do to question them." Christ prayed that his disciples might all be one, that the world might believe that God had sent him. Sectarianism says it is impossible for Christians to all see alike and be one; just go ahead and divide up according to your liking. The New Testament teaches that there is one church—one body, which is the church. Sectarianism teaches that there are many churches; go and join the one of your choice. The New Testament teaches that the disciples of Christ were called "Christians" and should be called "Christians." Sectarianism teaches that you may take any name; that the name does not amount to anything. The New Testament teaches that obedience to the gospel saves people, makes Christians of them. Sectarianism teaches that you do not have to obey the gospel to be saved; you can be saved without doing anything.

Now, it does seem to me that this condition of things is just about as the devil would have it. I cannot see where there could be much improvement, so far as his interests are concerned.

Sectarianism is the menace of the religion of Christ to-day. It contains the very essence of all that counteracts and destroys the real and good and strikes the truth with the staggering blows that leave it weakened and shorn of its riches, beauties, and glory.

BY S. E. WITTY AND R. E. WRIGHT.

The work at 1720 South Flower Street continues to grow in interest and numbers also. Four more have been added to our congregation since our last report.

Every one has a mind to work, and as surely as this spirit continues to move the church we are bound to succeed in doing great things for the Lord. On Sunday (March 26) we had a full house at the Central church of Christ. If this congregation continues to grow in the future as it has in the past, the time is near at hand when we will have to have more room. We have a real nice, large hall as it is, but we will need a larger one. The Lord has done great things for us, and we praise him for it.

No two men ever had a more willing and faithful band of Christians to help them in advancing the work of the Lord than Witty and Wright. Neither are they afraid of spoiling us by speaking a word of encouragement and appreciation for the efforts we put forth. With the help of the Lord, we are going to put the work of the Lord across in this city; you need not doubt that. God and failure are two extremes, my brother, and one cancels the other. "God works in you," is the way Paul put it. If we sit down and idle away our time, then God cannot work in us, and so we simply tie the hands of God—then you have failure; but do not charge it up to God—charge it up to our laziness. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling, because it is God who works in you." That is the best reason in the world why God's people should work in his service. "Work," "for God works in you."

Undoubtedly we have some of the best people in the world to help us in the Lord's work here and at Ontario. The church at Ontario is doing well. No finer band of brethren and sisters are to be found anywhere. Both churches have good elders—men with plenty of good "old horse sense" and the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ in their hearts. The two churches work so nicely together.

A Sinner's Debate.

BY LOULA MAY ADKISSON.

"Jesus invites you to-day
Why will you longer delay?"
The strain sweeps through the sinner's mind
The haunting echoes of yesterday.
As alone he sits in reverie,
Another query comes from within:
"O why not accept his salvation,
And throw off thy burden of sin?"

"O to be like thee! O to be like thee!
Blessed Redeemer, pure as thou art!"
The sinner muses on the song he has heard;
He thinks of his own blackened heart,
He thinks of his sin-strewn life,
And wonders would Jesus cleanse such as he.
Swiftly the blessed thought comes winging—
"There's pardon so free for you and for me."

"All to Jesus I surrender, Worldly pleasures all forsaken—"
"Ah, no!" the sinner sighs, as he muses,
For he fain would seek again
The world's alluring pleasures;
He would wait, he'd pay the cost,
But hark! there drifts the strain: "Sad, sad
The bitter wail—almost is lost."

"I am resolved no longer to linger, Charmed by the world's delight."
The stern face of the sinner softens,
His eyes are eager and hopeful and bright,
And the fiercely fought battle is o'er,
Peace and joy to him have come,
For this is the song his soul is singing:
"O Lamb of God, I come, I come!"

SERMON OUTLINES

A Book of One Hundred and Fifty New Sermon Outlines

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has one hundred and fifty sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

Religious Freedom.

BY W. W. FREEMAN.

Jesus came to make men free, whether in body, mind, or heart. Slavery is "inhumanity to man." Infringement of conscience is sin, whether it be my brother's conscience or my own. The spirit of sonship cries, "Abba." It arises within the souls of all "children of the free woman"—those not still enslaved "under law." Any "yoke of bondage," "matter of debt," is to Paul "anathema," because it makes void the freedom of believers bestowed through grace made evident by the cross. "Stand fast in the freedom," "Ye were called for freedom" (but not as an opportunity to indulge the flesh), are proclamations of emancipation urged by Paul.

"But what guiding control?" one asks. Here is honest inquiry. Differences have arisen here ever since Paul's Galatian converts were ensnared by Judaizers. To Paul, failure to achieve individual independence of spirit under the sovereignty of Christ within was to miss the liberty of the gospel. It meant Paul's work had been "in vain," for legalism, even if resting upon a "perfect law," can result in nothing more than man's righteousness. Such a law reveals sin and even incites unto it. Paul is neither legalist nor antinomian; his chief concern is that "Christ be formed in you."

Since Paul's day, as well as before, the tendency is to slavery of mind and soul, if not of body. Due to inaptitude, varied opportunity, or indifference, men continue bigoted or cowardly or foolish in their failure to think for themselves. We hear of child slavery and industrial slavery in the mazes of economic problems; but what is more pitiable than the plight of enfeebled and unfettered minds groping and crying or silent along the byways and high-ways of religion to-day? In morals, more or less adjudicated by the State, there is considerable activity; and in the realm of conscience the fetters of rabbi, emperor, pope, and State have loosened. In the realm of mind, however, freedom has not been generally achieved. Systems of theology are common which run counter to this ideal. Externals afford a determinative environment. Family traditions govern by appeal to natural ties and to the more artificial forces of prejudice and superstition. The leadership is unconsciously held under such bondage. Pride blocks the ways to progress. The lost principle of living faith as a spiritual dynamic insures slavery. Symptoms are weakness, dependence, reaction, schism, and Pharisaic indulgence in legalistic minutiae. Such "Christianity" produces a reaction that often does not stop short of atheism.

Would Paul's clarion call to spiritual liberty fall on dull ears among us to-day? Admittedly, the fervor and the freshness and vigor Paul knew and advocated demand more of the individual than does institutionalism or creedalism. One may accept a perfect creed, boost orthodoxy, and glory as a "loyal" disciple, and yet lack the breath of spiritual life. Terms of the gospel may be so long emphasized as "the plan of salvation," and "the church of Christ" be stressed in contrast with (Shall we say, "other?") denominations, that the result is a trust in an institution immaculately hedged about by negative tests based on silence of the Scriptures. Too few look upon the church in its scriptural sense—the aggregate of God's people engaged in extension of the kingdom without, within, and between. The divine institution cannot be reduced to forms and formulas. It is composed of "living stones." Temple worship and synagogue doctrine please the masses and the theologians, but the spiritual elements of true worshipers must be developed in some way. Enlightenment tends to freedom, but too many of us are amused rather than interested. "Born tired," too few overcome the inertia. How shall it be possible to make religion vital and personal?

Ours is a great day for machinery. From the printing press to the penny slot machine we are accustomed to triggerlike precision. This feeling pervades our religion. We expect it; we may demand it. But just as fashion and false hair, paints and powders, will never make a woman or approach the adornment of "a meek and quiet spirit," so clubs, combines, and resolutions will never satisfy justice and brotherhood. Democracy to an uncultivated populace means a curse of demagogues and attendant declines and excesses. If individual thinking and consequent social and spiritual adjustment are not encouraged in the churches, need we pray, "Thy will be done on earth as in heaven?" The church is made up of individuals. As members in the body of Christ, they are all to grow and keep growing. Thus they come to bear fruit; they have "a righteousness which is not their own." God is working in them "to will and to do his good pleasure." Church overseers are shepherds, husbandmen, brothers, not judges or mechanics. Any effort to preserve the acorn when it should be a growing oak is miserly and antiquarian. What is a small husk with the life crushed out of the kernel?

Here, be it noted, liberty must not be magnified into license. It is true that a "brakeman" is often necessary. Yet, with "the old Ship of Zion," hope is the anchor, and the vessel is for sailing. It is the part of faith to lift anchor and hoist the sails. There are treacherous winds, but life is in the experiences of the voyage. Freedom sets the bark from its moorings out on the sea. The individual is inclined to say, "I am afraid." If the leadership is not aggressive, those who should be strong from exercise will "have need of the A B C's of the gospel," "ever learning and never coming to a knowledge of the truth" that gives freedom.

To-day the churches are oftentimes overconservative. "Afraid they may do something in the wrong way, they do nothing," as some observer recently put it. "Ye were called unto freedom, only use not your freedom for an occasion to the flesh." The majesty of silence is in certain settings overpowering, but, as a rule, silence just keeps on saying nothing. To rest one's loyalty largely on it is absolute folly. Such groundless propaganda paralyzes the life of the body. It clashes with Paul's doctrine of freedom. Is it not wrong to loose where God has bound? Yes. Then is it not sinful to bind where God left room for freedom? Yes, indeed, especially in view of the supremacy of principle over incidental, of edification over formalism, and of "righteousness through faith" over human merit of any sort.

Let us consider also that "freedom" for selfish ambition and intellectual gymnastics is not Christian. The touchstone of freedom is service. Liberty is an achievement. As it is being achieved, it must function in the life given freely to Christ's service. In the array of spiritual gifts Paul set up edification as the test. This is the practical side of spiritual freedom. Liberty is the ideal side.

Will not modern legalists do well to examine Paul's system? Here is a common error: to demand uniformity rather than unity. Variety is absolutely essential. There are "proofs" a plenty to support the wildest errors, and just here a number are commonly invoked. It is important not to be so dogmatically "logical" and mechanistic in handling the Scriptures as to miss the sense and take the sound. What would the body of a man be if all his members were exactly alike? Variety is absolutely essential to afford unity and life. When life and growth depend on variety and freedom, is it not mean to demand uniformity while the ideal is unity? Indeterminable points of doctrine, based often on unrevealed ideas or on human ideas about the Bible and Bible things, too often destroy unity. To fail as brothers to allow the Bible itself to mediate to the human spirit is to dethrone Jesus Christ and impose churchianity, regardless of names and qualifying terms. There is room for restraint, and there are materials and local church officers for it; but we should learn that this restraint must be applied inwardly. This is axiomatic.

Do we seek peace? Do we covet liberty? Is unified co-operation an essential? Yes—O, yes; the world and the church are hungering for such ideals, but they seem like vain illusions. Shall we surrender to churchianity and build a world kingdom or some sort of modernized catholicism? Are we too dogmatic to grant fair play, to let Christ reign, to fellowship a diversified membership? Personally, I think denominationalism is here to stay. It is humanism, and it will naturally abide among us. I expect a modernized Catholicism to sweep less thoroughly organized forces before it in the main in the course of a few hundred years, but minorities and "free thought" will continue the fight. But, regardless of the secularism and the ecclesiasticism, the ideal that should maintain in the minds of Christians should have our best support. Self-reliance and perseverance must be instilled into every member. We must start right in our evangelistic efforts by presenting a strong plea for voluntarism, initiative, surrender, sincerity, and intelligence. The vital personal element in conversion must not be sacrificed in the presentation of a "plan" or in taking undue advantage of mass psychology in counting numbers. Let us enthrone Jesus in the hearts. This attitude on the part of the individual is the essence of faith. Perseverance in this attitude is loyalty and hope. Love here is genuine life "in the Spirit." Only thus can we release men from human measures of divine truth and set the Scriptures above "the doctrines and commandments of men."

This freedom is fundamental in Christianity. Freedom at service exemplifies the Christian dogma: Live to serve, and you die to live! This leads to that selfhood found perfect in the Divine Model. "Ye were called for freedom."

Nashville (Tenn.) Notes.

BY S. H. HALL.

The Ryman Auditorium meeting passed into the second week yesterday (April 4), with thirty-two confessions and baptisms and eight restored to their "first love."

I am glad to say that Brother Hardeman continues to speak to about six thousand at night and between three and four thousand at the midday services.

The secret of this great drive is seen in the fact that the Nashville brethren, to a man, it seems, got ready for it. None here were "pulling back," so far as I know. Every child of God in this city, it seems, has looked the great commission squarely in the face and recognized the fact that it says, Go. Then, connecting this command to go with another, we have run. "Even so run; that ye may attain." (1 Cor. 9: 24.) And, as Brother Hardeman has stated, this command to run does not mean drag or poke along.

I thank God for letting me live to see the day when those who raise the plea for the church of the New Testament and no doctrine except that of our Lord are beginning to do things to a degree commensurate with the greatness of the cause we represent.

The Lord willing, we will let our readers know each week the news from this great effort. Many visiting preachers are here, of whom we shall speak later.

Something was said last week about helping Savannah, Ga., get on her feet, and that as soon as possible. We sorely need fifteen hundred dollars now; and to put the work where we can support a man there for all his time, we must have about forty-five hundred dollars. As stated before, Russell Street Church has sent one hundred dollars and is to support me for a meeting there so soon as we can get the house ready. Send all donations to O. W. Rawlings, 916 West Thirty-seventh Street, Savannah, Ga., and so soon as one thousand dollars is received, he will let the work on the house begin.

I am so glad to report that West End, in Atlanta, is doing the greatest work in her history. That congregation has been supporting, to a large degree, Brother Hugh E. Garrett for field work. He is here getting what help he can out of this revival, and he is doing this by helping us make it a success. He spoke at Russell Street last Lord's day, and the Georgia work was raised in the minds of these brethren when they saw a sample of the men being developed into preachers by the Georgia brethren. Brother Goodpasture's whole soul is being devoted to that field, and we want the brethren everywhere to know that we are building on "the rock," not on the sand. It is our determination that the pure word of God and nothing else shall be taught, that your money in helping us shall be well spent.

Send a check now to Brother Rawlings, and let us report, as soon as possible, that we are ready for another place.

Truth and Error.

BY H. C. FLEMING.

Truth is harmony between thought and fact. Jesus said to the Jews that believed on him: "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 32.)

Truth will bear all tests, but most errors are easily detected. There is no benefit to be gained from anything but the truth of facts.

When we stand before an audience to proclaim facts and the truth thereof, we should know something of the thoughts of those we are addressing, and whether or not their minds are full of error. Foolish objections are the most fruitful of errors, but nothing is to be gained by any of them. Negatives never accomplish anything, but the truth of facts brings a great reward. Note this and remember it. Belief of a falsehood is the same as a negative and causes an evil result.

The proof of a proposition depends on the testimony. The testimony of divine facts is in the revelations of God to man, and is abundant, but some men object to it on false testimony. But why thus act? Is it easier to believe a fact or to reject it? Which brings the best result, faith or unbelief?

No evil can result from the belief of the revelations of God to man, but much evil results from the rejection of it—nothing to lose, but much to be gained.

The evils of the great World War and the present condition of the world are the results of skepticism. The warnings of such in revelations are abundant, but men will not heed them. What, then, can we expect but devastation, wars, and bloodshed? Listen to the following quotations: "Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your hands be made strong: for I have heard from the Lord God of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth." (Isa. 28: 22.) "It shall even be as when a hungry man dreameth, and, behold, he eateth; but he awaketh, and his soul is empty: or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and, behold, he drinketh; but he awaketh, and, behold, he is faint, and his soul hath appetite: so shall the multitude of all the nations be, that fight against mount Zion." (Isa. 29: 8.)

Humbleness.

Who drives the horses of the sun
Shall lord it but a day;
Better the lowly deed were done,
And kept the humble way.

The rust will find the sword of fame,
The dust will hide the crown;
Aye, none shall nail so high his name
Time will not tear it down.

The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet,

There seems to be a new awakening among the churches betokening greater and more consecrated effort along evangelistic lines. Nearly every congregation I have visited recently is planning to support a meeting in some destitute field. Here in Florida, where the churches are few and widely scattered, a spirit of self-sacrifice is manifest. They seem determined to enlarge their borders and to carry the gospel message where it has never been known in its simplicity and purity. The two chief helpers in the meeting here are M. E. Humphries and S. W. Colson. Both are business men, well and favorably known in Ocala and the surrounding country. Every acquaintance knows, too, that the big thing in their lives is the spread of the gospel. They preach at every opportunity and exemplify the Christian life as they travel through the country. With all of our population and vaunted civilization, men and women are still scattered abroad engaged in one pursuit and another. It is always refreshing to find those who preach the word as they move from one place to another. Last night J. P. Prevatt came from Gainesville, Fla., to join the Ocala forces in this meeting. I can see already that his presence and assistance is going to be a wonderful help. He sings with the spirit and the understanding, and I have no doubt but what he preaches in the same way.

Ocala is located in Marion County, which is regarded as the geographical center of the State. Three of the most important geological divisions of Florida meet in Marion County—the Lime Rock and Hard Rock Phosphate Belt, the Middle Florida Hammock Belt, and the Lake Region. In this county is found the greatest group of natural wonders in the State, including what is probably the most remarkable group of springs to be found anywhere in the world. Silver Springs, near Ocala, are the largest, and Blue Springs, at Juliette, the second largest. Three of these springs are the sources of rivers, one navigable to its very head by good-sized steamers and launches, and the others by smaller boats. The vegetation of almost every section of Florida is found in this county, providing a most varied scenery, and the topography varies from fifty to two hundred and ten feet above sea level. The soil is rich and productive.

The Pines and Palm Trees.

A Tennessean coming into Florida for the first time is likely to be thrilled if he has any poetry or the least bit of romance in his make-up. The first strange sight will be the pine trees. In Tennessee we have a song and story about "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Down here the trail is lost. There is no lonesome pine. On the other hand, as you enter the State by rail you are greeted by millions of them. There are in the State large areas of pine lands, most of which are high and rolling. Though most of the pine woods have been cut down by the lumberman, and some have been cleared away that the land might be cultivated, there are virgin pine woods of beautiful, round timber that have been left untouched. And what could be more delightful or restful than to walk through these clean, open, pungent woods, at the feet of trees that lift their heads to the heavens? Not all of the pine woods are open. Over a large portion there is an undergrowth of oaks. Then there are the luxuriant hammocks of many kinds of hardwoods, vines, wild muscadines, shrubs, and flowers; beautiful clear-water lakes, mirrors for the bordering trees and the blue sky; and palm trees, in the hammocks, and along the rivers, and upon the hillsides. As the train passed by a little forest of tall, graceful palms, the tears came into my eyes. I was instantly reminded of how the populace cut the branches from such trees and made a green pathway for our Savior's entry into Jerusalem, and how, later, some of that populace were crying: "Crucify him, crucify him!" Such are the uncertain waves of popular applause. It is never a tangible asset in any man's life, and is, therefore, not worth striving for. I noticed that the farmers, in clearing their fields of timber, had left the palms standing at intervals. I wondered if this was the result of the same sentiment that fills my own heart as I look upon them. Let us spare that tree that it may stand as a silent sentinel of the sacred things of life, and point forward to the beatific scene described by the beloved John when a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, shall stand before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands.

Forgive me, I got off the track while writing of the palms. In addition, there are the red-oak woods, the many variations of the characteristic forest growths, the hickory-nut groves, the sweet gums, the clumps of May haws, the wild persimmons, the magnolias, and the sweet bays. Some of the finest orange and grape fruit groves in Florida, and therefore, in the whole world, are in this county. Most of the groves of the county include tangerines; and about the homes and along driveways, the bushy, decorative kumquat. And by no means the least interesting part of the county is the National Forest, with its sand dunes, spruce pines, vines and evergreen shrubs, some of which are not found out of Florida.

Where Words Fail to Describe.

There are some things about this country that beggar description. It is not possible to reproduce the songs of the mockingbird. One cannot describe the scent of the wild flowers; the exquisite fragrance of the magnolias just now blooming in profusion; the "noisy silence" of the woods; the wonderful hours when the sunshine and the atmosphere seem to be one, and Florida scenes are luminous and quivering with color. Green predominates in every landscape even in the dead of winter. Think of the pleasure of gathering one's own holly and mistletoe at Christmas time! Think, too, of gathering wild violets and yellow jasmine and dogwood blossoms in the early spring when the woods and fields of the North are still white and stark!

Florida nights are enchanting: where the street lights and the lights of automobiles, the lights on front porches and the lights from the windows of homes, dissolve the darkness; where the perfume of flowers discloses the presence of a garden or grove or night-blooming plant; where the night-prowling animal crushes underfoot the dry leaves in the woods; or out where the light of the moon gleams upon the lapping waters of the lakes. The spell of such things cannot be described.

Florida's Great Need.

The one great need of Florida is the saving power of the gospel of the Son of God. In fact, that is the supreme need of every country. But in a land where the beauties of nature are so pronounced, one longs especially to behold the greater beauties of the soul, for that loveliness which is best expressed in the lives of Christian men and women. Churches and individuals who are planning to spend some of the Lord's money should not overlook Florida. It is a pity to speak of such a State as a "mission field" while

There are prosperous congregations in neighboring States. There are many wealthy Christians who come to spend their winters here and give their money without stint in support of pleasure resorts; but what are they doing toward bringing to the people of the State "the unsearchable riches of Christ?" For my part, I am not content to belong to a congregation that is evangelical in doctrine, but not evangelistic in practice. The church that is merely evangelical may be likened unto a reservoir of pure water, but with no pipes to let the water out. Such a pool will soon become stagnant. The evangelistic church is like that same reservoir of pure water with pipes running in every direction. The evangelical church has the truth in its treasury, but the evangelistic church keeps the truth in circulation. The evangelical church may be bombproof so far as doctrines are concerned, but the evangelistic church is like an army on the march where Jesus Christ is the Leader and God himself directs the battle and the march.

I suppose that every writer who ever came to Florida has tried on the occasion of the first visit to convey his impressions to others, and has felt that, after all has been said, his description is most inadequate. This story is no exception. The white-haired Christian lady with whom I am staying told me that it was a proverbial saying among the natives that "when a stranger in these parts gets white sand in his shoes, he may go back to his own country, but he will certainly come back again." When you see the acres and acres of white sand with your own eyes, you will understand. My shoes are low-cut, and the only way I could ever keep the sand out would be to take them off.

Making Every Lick Count.

BY C. D. CROUCH.

Preaching the gospel of Christ to the lost of earth is so manifestly the duty of the disciples of Christ that it would be foolish to argue the matter in the way of showing that it is a duty. The essential thing is to persuade disciples to perform that duty and to teach them how to do it. There are so many theories as to how to do this work best, and such a great indifference upon the part of many Christians, that not near as much is done as should be done.

Economy is as much a duty as anything else in spreading the gospel. "Making every lick count" is a fine slogan. But there is a difference between economy and stinginess. Economy is the wise application of all effort and funds so as to accomplish the greatest possible results thereby. Most of the brethren are careless about the expenditure of funds. If a preacher suits their fancy, they will pay him very liberally, and without regard to the furtherance of the cause of Christ. Just a little good common sense and reflection here would be worth a great deal.

It is also essential that the conditions of the field be thoroughly studied in order that we may wisely occupy the field. To send a preacher alone into a city to preach and sing the gospel may result in some good. But if we will carefully study the sixteenth chapter of Romans, we may find a suggestion of a better plan. It seems that a number of good, substantial characters had gone to Rome from different places to assist in building up the work there by living the gospel in the capital city of the world.

It is a fact, so plainly seen that it would seem impossible that it has escaped the attention of any of us, that the cause of Christ has been built up in most of the cities where it is prospering now on this plan. After the work has been started to going in the cities, it is much easier to get the people there to accept the truth. The church at Washington, for instance, is made up very largely of people who have moved there from other churches. It may be years before they will see any very appreciable results from the seed sowing they are doing; but that will not discourage them from doing their duty. Nearly all the towns and cities have had the same experience in a measure. There has been an influx of population from the country to the towns, and from country towns to the cities. Christians have moved just as other people. This has affected the membership of the churches.

We should get a practical lesson from this. There is some indication that preaching in the country communities is not being done as briskly as it was formerly. There may be a change in the drift of people to the cities some day. It may be a "back-to-the-farm" movement. At any rate, we should continue to preach the gospel in the rural communities just as earnestly as ever. The people need it as much as ever; and if they move to the towns and cities, it will mean an advantage to the churches there to have Christians move in from the country. And if the "back-to-the-farm" movement ever starts, we shall have the churches already established for the people who move out.

We hear a great deal of talk about establishing churches in the cities as radiating centers. All of this sounds very well, and would be very well if they would only "radiate" more. But most of the "radiating" is from the country to the towns. The chief reason the churches of Christ have made such wonderful progress in the cities in recent years, and have made the "progressive" brethren turn green with envy, is that the loyal disciples were strong in the rural communities, while the "progressives" were not even represented in very many country communities; and when the loyal disciples began to move into town, the churches there grew by leaps and bounds.

Then let us continue to build up the churches in the cities and towns; but may we not also labor more earnestly to build up the churches in the rural districts—the one greatest source of the city churches' recruits? Some of the city churches have caught the vision and are supporting evangelists in the rural communities. This is as it should be. When all the churches catch this vision and do likewise, the cause of Christ will then move gloriously onward.

A Question on Acts 2: 38 Answered.

BY F. B. S.

Brother G. C. Mayo, of Milan, Tenn., sends to this office the following request: "Please explain through the paper Acts 2: 38. Some Baptists quote it and say that 'repent' is a verb in the second person, plural number, active voice, and that 'be baptized' is a verb in the third person, singular number, passive voice, and quote the rule that all verbs must agree with their subjects in person and number, and say that since they do not agree, this takes away the idea of repentance and baptism being for the same thing."

Well, what of it? I suppose that every one with ordinary intelligence and a common-school education has known these facts all along. Any one can see that "repent" is active voice and "be baptized" is passive; but how does that show that they do not sustain the same relation to the result, the remission of sins? While "be baptized" is passive in form, it is active in principle. One can be active in demanding baptism or in submitting to it and the form be passive. The form of the command to be baptized is always passive in the New Testament, as far as I know; but does that show that it is not a command at all, or a condition of salvation? In the great commission as recorded by Mark the form of the command to be baptized is passive; but does that fact prove that it is not connected with believing in order to salvation? By no means. The command as given by the Savior is: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16: 16.) Here the statement, "and is baptized," is in the passive voice; but does that fact cut it loose from the other part of the statement, "he that believeth?" By no means.

What is the discovery that these few Baptists of West Tennessee have made, if it is a discovery, and wherein does it effect the case in hand? Why should they limit their claim to Acts 2: 38? Do not the same facts obtain in the great commission? That commission as given by Mark affirms that some one will be saved, but who? "He that believeth?" By no means. "He that is baptized?" No. But "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," even if "is baptized" is passive, while "believeth" is active. "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts 22: 16.) There it is again, two verbs in the same sentence, one active and the other passive; but in this case "arise" is preparatory to being baptized in order that "thy sins" may be washed away. "But," says one, "sins are washed away in the blood of Christ. It is granted; but Saul was commanded to be baptized that it might be done. Every one with reasonable intelligence who has ever read Acts 2: 38 in the Revision knows that the subject of "repent" is different from the subject of "be baptized," but what has that to do with the result, "unto the remission of sins?" In the Revision the verse reads: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." The subject of "repent" is "ye," while the subject of "be baptized" is "every one of you." This is no discovery of those few Baptists of West Tennessee. It has been known by all English-speaking people who have ever read the verse in the Revision. Furthermore, it does not change the fact that repentance and baptism in this verse are both unto the remission of sins.

I suppose that great Baptist scholar, Horatio B. Hackett, of Newton Theological Institute, of Newton Center, Mass., knew that one of these verbs was active, while the other was passive, and yet, in his "Commentary on the Acts," he said: "In order to the forgiveness of sins (Matt. 26: 28; Luke 3: 3) we connect naturally with both the preceding verbs. This clause states the motive or object which should induce them to repent and be baptized. It enforces the entire exhortation, not one part of it to the exclusion of the other." While Brother Hackett tries to break the force of this plain statement of a fact concerning the meaning of what Peter says by saying, "Observe that forgiveness is conditioned on repentance," he does not try to destroy the connection of the two, like these West Tennessee Baptists, on the ground of the difference in voice, number, or person. Brother Hackett, it will be noticed, says "we connect naturally with both the preceding verbs." These West Tennessee Baptists are not only unscriptural in their position, but, according to their Brother Hackett, are unnatural as well. It is a pity they cannot act natural in their interpretation of Acts 2: 38. Alvah Hovey, another great scholar among the Baptists, in his "Preface" to the new edition of Dr. Hackett's "Commentary on the Acts," the volume from which I quote, says: "The editor has the very great pleasure of presenting to the public a new edition of Dr. Hackett's 'Commentary,' a standard work on the Acts of the Apostles—a work which has merited and received the highest commendation from Biblical scholars in Europe and America, and which, for thoroughness of investigation, critical acumen, and beauty of diction, is unsurpassed by any commentary on the same book with which the editor is acquainted." I doubt whether Dr. Hovey knew of these West Tennessee Baptists of which our brother speaks in his query.

Speaking of Dr. Alvah Hovey reminds me that he has also gone to record on this question. In his "Commentary on John," Appendix, page 420, Dr. Hovey says: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in [or upon] the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission [or forgiveness] of your sins." (Acts 2: 38, R. V.) Here repentance and baptism are represented as leading to the forgiveness of sins." So

It seems that the facts concerning the voice, number, and person of the verbs did not change the relation of the two to the result in Dr. Alvah Hovey's estimation. But it seems that great men differ. It is a known fact that only those who repented were commanded to be baptized; and yet when those who had repented were told by Peter to be baptized and they did both, it was in order to obtain the same result—the forgiveness of sins. All the benefit that I can see which can possibly come to these West Tennessee Baptists about the voice, person, and number of these two verbs is that it furnishes them something to talk about and shows, at least, that they know something about an English verb, but otherwise it is of no benefit to their contention. "Repent" and "be baptized" are both for the same end, unto the remission of sins, notwithstanding the voice, number, and person are different.

The Result of "Open Membership."

BY F. W. SMITH.

I deem it proper and in harmony with the request of Brother Stubblefield to keep before our readers the ends to which a departure from the word of God will lead. Hence, under the head of "Back on the Rock and Rebuilding," I submit an article from Brother James Small, in the Christian Standard of April 1:

On December 1, 1913, the Wabash Avenue Christian Church—now Central Christian—of Kansas City, Mo., adopted the open-membership practice. The church at that time had nearly one thousand members. Under this practice the church not only failed to do what the advocates of compromise said it would do, but gradually dwindled in membership until, when J. W. Darby came on the field on December 1, 1921, there were only two hundred and sixty-two names on the roll. In the community surrounding this magnificent church there were people living who were members of the Restoration movement up into the hundreds who refused to unite with the local congregation while the open-membership proposition was being countenanced.

Brother Darby is a gospel preacher and has no use for fancies and fads. He fully believes that "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation" and that the gospel sets the standards of salvation, and in these are the terms of admission into the kingdom of God. He has made this known in the Central Church, and preached the gospel in all plainness of speech, until in ten weeks' time he has had one hundred and ten souls unite with the Central Church.

Monday evening, February 6, the board of officers of this church adopted a resolution rescinding the former action by a vote of twenty-five to one. This action of the board was presented as their recommendation to the congregation Sunday morning, February 12, and was adopted almost unanimously by the body of members assembled.

Preacher advocates say this practice is forced on them because their congregations demand it. It is our experience that it is the preacher who is the instrument in starting the matter, and congregations are led by men who desire this thing themselves. The gospel preached in love wins. This is evidenced by the case now in point. Brother Darby has already baptized some who came in under the open-membership plan who now feel that they were not properly taught or they never would have come in under such a plan. Brother Darby is doing some great constructive work.

In the near future this congregation expects to have hundreds of brethren in their community take membership with them. Many have stated they would. Thus it is evident that our people do not gain in membership by open membership, but actually lose our own members.

This church now realizes that it has lost eight years of service when it should have stood for the union of God's people on his own word. Many even of the officers who voted to adopt this "open-membership" plan now realize their mistake and have regretted the action, but have manfully taken their stand to rescind it, never again to be turned from the word of God as their source of authority.

Brother Darby says: "All the fruits I have ever seen accrue from 'open membership' are discord, inaction, loss of vision of the real work of the church, obscuring of people's faith, doubt of the deity of Christ, doubt of the inspiration of the Scriptures, and a surrender of almost all the great Christ-given program to substitute either social service or some other ignis fatuus in its place.

"Almost all open-membership advocates I have met try to leave you under the impression that they are the leaders of the churches, the scholars, the big men. They impose a burden on others, and, in their practice of this open membership, misrepresent others who do not believe in it at all. For instance, they will accept the unimmersed into the congregation, and then grant this person a letter of full fellowship and good standing. The next preacher takes that letter in all good faith, and is accused by the ones who issued the letter of practicing open membership. They then quote him as being in favor of it. It is plain misrepresentation."

Asked what he thought of Mr. Ewers' proposition to submit the matter to the International Convention, Mr. Darby replied: "That is as far from the mission of the International Convention as the east is from the west." Said he: "I cannot see why a man, knowing the Restoration plea as Mr. Ewers does, should ever think of such a proposition when he knows his policy would be fatally divisive."

"If we are to plead for the unity of God's people upon the basis of the New Testament, why do our people want to surrender the New Testament's teaching and then ask people to unite upon it? We have no reason for a separate existence if we stand for anything than the scriptural teaching. These advocates of open membership say that immersion is the only scriptural baptism, but they want to say in one breath that it is baptism, and then, in the very next, say that people should be accepted who have not submitted to it, as a means of union. All the while, mind you, asking to be supported by people who do not believe this. The only place I know of for the open-membership advocate, if he is to be consistent, is in the churches that practice sprinkling and pouring."

Thus it may be seen that when men begin to vote and legislate on the already prescribed, fixed, and blood-sealed enactments of divine legislation, the ends to which they will go. The principle on which the society itself is founded is responsible for this voting on the part of the Central Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo., regarding membership in the church of Christ, a thing on which God himself had legislated. Brother James Small and all the conservative brethren who are now opposing the "open-membership" business have no one to blame but themselves. They educated the church up to voting and making laws regarding the matter of carrying out the great commission and instrumental music in the worship of God, and now why be so hard on the churches for carrying the principle still further and setting aside other laws of God and instituting their own? If it be right to set aside the divine institution through which missionary work was done through all the apostolic age and vote into existence a human organization to supplant it, why should Brother Small draw back from voting in the "open-membership" business? Again, since Jesus Christ ordained only one kind of music in his worship—viz., vocal—and Brother Small has voted in another kind—viz., instrumental—why should he object to the Central Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo., voting into the membership of this church unimmersed people? That church no more set aside God's law of induction into the church than has Brother Small set aside his law regarding mission work and the order of worship.

Godet on "Born of Water and the Spirit."

BY F. B. S.

It seems that there has been some discussion in the Christian-Evangelist on the subject of "born of water and the Spirit," and Brother J. Mad Williams quotes from Dr. Timothy Dwight, editor of the American edition of "Godet on the Gospel of John," as follows:

The baptism of John was producing at that time an immense sensation in Israel, so that the thought of Nicodemus, on hearing the words, "birth of water," must have turned immediately to that ceremony; as it was celebrated in the form of a total or partial immersion, it quite naturally represented a birth. Jesus, moreover, at the moment when he thus expressed himself, was, in a sense, coming up out of the water of baptism; it was when completing this rite that he had himself received the Holy Spirit. How, in such circumstances, could the expression, "born of water," have possibly designated on his lips anything else than baptism? Thus, also, is explained the negative and almost menacing form, "Except a man." Nicodemus was a Pharisee, and we know that the Pharisees had refused to submit to John's baptism (Luke 7: 30); this saying contained, therefore, a very real admonition addressed to Nicodemus. Nicodemus must learn that the acceptance of the work of the forerunner was the first condition of entering into the new life. This first term, therefore, contained a positive invitation to break with the line of conduct adopted by the Pharisaic party toward John the Baptist. But what is the relation between baptism and the new birth? (Verse 3.) Luecke makes prominent in baptism the subjective element of repentance (metanoia). He thinks that Jesus meant to say: First of all, on the part of man, repentance (of which baptism is the emblem); afterwards, on the part of God, the Spirit. But the two defining words are parallel, depending on one and the same proposition; the one cannot represent something purely subjective and the other something purely objective. The water also contains something objective, divine; this divine element in baptism is expressed in the best way by Strauss. "If baptism is, on the part of man," he says, "the declaration of the renunciation of sin, it is, on the part of God, the declaration of the pardon of sins." The baptism of water, in so far as offered and administered on the part of God and in his name, contains the promise of pardon, of which it is the visible pledge, in favor of the sinner who accepts it. In this sense, Peter says on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2: 38): "Be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the pardon of sins; and (following on this pardon) you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." And it must, indeed, be noticed that he says, "the pardon of sins," and not the pardon of his sins; for it is the idea of baptism in itself, and not that of its individual efficacy, which Peter wishes to indicate.

The foregoing from a pedobaptist is so near the truth that I am disposed to let it go without comment. It is certainly a great improvement over the latter-day claim that birth of water means the natural birth. It is strange how one in commenting on the word of God can give the truth as Godet does in the foregoing quotation, and yet not accept it himself to that extent that he will change his theology to fit his truth. The best scholars do not differ as much on what the Bible says as their church relationship would indicate. It is such a pity that men are bound by human creeds and confessions of faith which keep them in separate schools and denominations. If it were not for these things, it seems to me that we all might accept the plain teaching of Christ and the apostles and be one, as Jesus prayed we should.

Have You Sent Us a New Subscriber?

We are pleased to announce that a goodly number of new subscribers are now being received. While this is true, however, many of our readers have not yet sent us a new subscriber. As now is the time to secure new subscribers, let us urge upon each reader to go to work at once to make up a list of subscribers to the Gospel Advocate. Wherever the Advocate is read, its influence is good. It encourages people to stand by the Bible and to be guided in their work and worship by "It is written." While the editors realize that they are weak and fallible, yet they love the truth and have no desire to teach error nor to lead the people away from the word of God.

If you have already sent us a number of subscribers, will you not make an effort to send in others? If you are among the ones who have not sent in a single new subscriber, will you not make an effort to send us at least two new subscribers within the next week?

Government is not a matter to be left to the study of the few. It is essentially a universal study, for upon the civic activity of every citizen may turn the national fate. —John A. Lapp.

At Home and Abroad

G. A. Dunn's permanent address is 823 West Tenth Street, Dallas, Texas. Correspondents should address him at that place.

R. D. Smith has changed his address from Denton, Texas, to 1310 Monroe Street, Wichita Falls, Texas. Correspondents will please note this change.

Ben West, of Fort Worth, Texas, was in the hospital for an operation on March 30, but his wife reports that he was doing well. It is the hope and prayer of this office that he will soon be out and at work for the Master.

From T. B. Clark, Gallatin, Tenn., April 3: "We had three more confessions at our regular services yesterday. Interest is great in every line of work. We are expecting additions at every service for the next several weeks."

From G. H. O'Neal, Kelso, Tenn.: "R. E. L. Taylor, of Decherd, preached for us the first Saturday night and Lord's day in this month. This was my first time to hear Brother Taylor, but it is a great feast to hear such men proclaim the pure and undefiled word."

Married, at 4 P.M., April 5, at David Lipscomb College, Mr. Frank J. McFee, of Macon, Tenn., and Miss Clara Warner, of Winston-Salem, N. C. E. A. Elam officiating. The faculty, students, and friends wish for them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

From Ulrich R. Beeson, Cordell, Okla., April 4: "The church at Cordell will begin its first meeting of the year on April 16, to continue twelve or fourteen days. E. M. Borden, of Oklahoma City, editor of the Herald of Truth, will do the preaching. Everybody near Cordell is invited to come and enjoy these services."

The first Sunday in April was the day many of the churches have been contributing to the Tennessee Orphans' Home. Heretofore attention has been called to this through the Gospel Advocate, but it was overlooked this time. We trust that all those who have neglected this will attend to it and send their contributions at once.

Joe Ratcliffe, Bardwell, Ky., writes as follows: "On the first Lord's day in April I filled my regular appointment at Glass, Tenn. This is my fifth year with them as a regular preacher. There are many good, faithful people there, and I have enjoyed my work with them very much. I have some time this summer and fall that I can give to protracted-meeting work. Any one desiring my services should address me at Bardwell, Ky."

From J. L. Hines, Branch Hill, Ohio: "This is to inform the brethren everywhere that I have severed my connection with the church at Monticello, Ky., and have decided to do evangelistic work for the remaining part of this year. I am in a position to conduct meetings anywhere. Your meeting can be booked for May, part of June, part of July, part of August, or any time in September and October. Address me at Mount Juliet, Tenn."

From G. B. Lambright, Taft, Fla., April 7: "I am serving the church at Pinecastle each Lord's day at 2:30 P.M. We have our house finished and are proud of it. Good crowds at each service. The brethren are willing to let me off for a time to hold meetings. I am willing to go any place where there is one family to care for me. I believe in mission work on the Bible plan. Any one desiring my services should address me as above. I can refer you to T. S. Craig, of Pinecastle."

Many visiting preaching brethren from different parts of the country have been in attendance at the Hardeman-Pullias meeting, among whom we mention these: R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn.; Claud F. Witty, Detroit, Mich.; H. M. Phillips, Chattanooga, Tenn.; W. Clarence Cook, Tracy City, Tenn.; R. A. Craig, Shelbyville, Ky.; R. R. Brooks, Sparta, Tenn.; John C. Taylor, Obion, Tenn.; D. G. Woody, Rives, Tenn.; J. S. Batey, Lewisburg, Tenn.; J. Pettey Ezell, Cookeville, Tenn.; J. E. Thornberry, Lawrenceburg, Tenn.; W. T. Breedlove, Tillar, Ark.; and Earnest C. Love, of everywhere. These come to our mind as being present at the meetings; but there were many others equally as important, perhaps more so, whose names we do not recall. Our Father will not forget any of them, neither will he overlook their work.

The church in Vernon, Texas, is to be congratulated in securing Thomas E. Milholland to labor with them.

O. C. Lambert preached for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's-day morning. There was one restoration.

J. M. Greer, 506 State Street, Bowling Green, Ky., would like to know the address of a Brother Freeling who preached around Bowling Green sometime ago.

From Fred H. Roberts, Hallsville, Mo.: "I enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate and receive much instruction from a perusal of its pages."

From B. B. Meers, Fall Brook, Cal.: "In these days of departure from God's eternal truth, I appreciate the Gospel Advocate more than ever."

The meeting in Norman, Okla., conducted by S. E. Templeton, of Altus, was interesting; but Brother Templeton was called home on account of sickness in his family, and Brother Brewer concluded the meeting. Two were baptized.

F. B. Srygley preached last Sunday to a very good audience at Olmstead, Ky. Though there have been many changes there, so many of the old ones having gone to the eternal rest, yet he reports the church in very good condition.

W. P. Skaggs, Itasca, Texas, reports that the work with the church there continues to be pleasant. The congregation is doing good work, growing in strength. Brother Skaggs will be open for engagements for all his time or for meetings after August 15.

E. C. Fuqua's present address is 611 Howard Place, Pasadena, Cal. He says: "We have found here a most healthful place, and Mrs. Fuqua and I are already feeling better. As the work opens up in California for us, we seize hold with greater hope than ever."

Frank Cox recently assisted the church in Altus, Okla., in a meeting, which resulted in fourteen baptisms and some restorations. Brother Cox reports the Altus church as one of the most active in the State of Oklahoma. W. R. Hooten, of Altus, is one of the splendid song directors in the church, and may be had for such work.

U. G. Wilkinson writes from Comanche, Okla.: "I recently made a trip, visiting some of the churches and preaching. I was at Healdton, Wirt, Wilson, Ardmore, Oakland, and Madill, Okla. While I am not yet strong, I am sufficiently improved to do some preaching; and as warm weather is coming, I think I will be able to answer some calls. If brethren would like to have me visit them, they can write me. I think I can arrange to hold some summer meetings."

The Ryman Auditorium meeting moves gloriously onward. Seventy-eight confessions and fifteen restorations to date (April 10). Brother Hardeman is speaking to about four thousand each noon and an average of six thousand at night. Several hundred were turned away on Sunday night for lack of room. We are expecting this week to be the greatest in the history of the Nashville congregations. Let every reader stay with us in his or her prayers as we endeavor to bring the work to a glorious ending.

R. V. Cawthon and wife each had a birthday while his meeting was in progress at Cookeville, Tenn., and the church remembered both of them with substantial birthday presents. This secret is being given out in the hope that the brethren will remember that all the preachers and their wives have birthdays every year. Writing about the gifts of the Cookeville church, Brother Cawthon says: "If we did not love and appreciate such people, we would be ingrate. May the Lord ever prosper such servants."

J. W. Grant changes his address from 607 North Kentucky Avenue to 307 North Iowa Avenue, Lakeland, Fla. He sends the following for publication: "I am just in receipt of a letter from Brother Yohannan, of Persia, saying that he received my letter of December 1, 1921, containing twenty dollars, American money, and that he exchanged it for Persian money without difficulty. When his letter was written there had not been sufficient time for him to have received the forty dollars sent later. His address is Alex. Kh. B. Yohannan, Hamadan, Persia, Asia, care of Imperial Bank of Persia."

J. M. Greer asks who were the Philistines. This is a hard question. While the Bible refers to them often, it does not tell who they were or where they originated. The word "Philistine" means, it seems, about the same as our English word "immigrant." "The origin of the Philistines is nowhere found in the Bible; but as the prophets describe them as 'the Philistines from Caphtor' (Amos 9: 7) and 'the remnant of the maritime district of Caphtor' (Jer. 47: 4), it is prima facie probable that they were the 'Caphtorim' which came out of Caphtor' who expelled the Avim from their territory and occupied it in their place (Deut. 2: 23), and that these again were the Caphtorim mentioned in the Mosaic genealogical table among the descendants of Mizraim (Gen. 14)." (Smith's Bible Dictionary.)

From Fred M. Little, Montgomery, Ala., April 3: "In the series of meetings conducted at Catoma Street by C. R. Nichol, of Clifton, Texas, we distributed more than a thousand tracts setting forth the truth concerning some cardinal points in the work and worship of the church. We were accorded every courtesy by the daily papers in giving notices to the meeting and by printing in their columns extracts of the sermons. We had a committee on advertising which did splendid work. They arranged with the traction company to carry bulletins on the street cars; automobiles carried placards; and at different times boys were sent out distributing cards announcing subjects. In fact, every means of publicity was utilized. Our experience is that it pays to advertise. The meeting was well attended all the way through. We will be reaping the results of this meeting for many months to come. Brother Nichol tells the old story in a way that gets attention. We hope to have him return next March and duplicate the meeting just closed, only longer."

From H. W. Wrye, Pikeville, Tenn., April 7: "After attending five services of the great meeting in Nashville, I have returned to Pikeville jubilant over the colossal effort of the church in the old home town. The congregations have stepped out in the limelight of public inspection and are delivering the truth, and the people are astonished. The walls of the Ryman Auditorium are encircling from five to seven thousand people daily; and when Pullias starts a song, the only fellow that doesn't sing is old contrary Pete or deaf-and-dumb Tom. Old 'I can't' is swept off his excuse by the mammoth whitecap waves of human melody and sings, anyhow. Nashville has never been favored with such wonderful music. There are no extravagant, exaggerated, boosting, high-pressure methods used; they just sing with enthusiasm and with the spirit and with a heaven-born understanding. When N. B. Hardeman steps to the front, the silence and attention are overwhelming. His vocabulary consists of choice, simple words. The learned and the unlearned revel in a message that brings conviction and conversion. His sermons are delivered in the heavenly realm of humility, meekness, and enthusiasm. The people are stirred, souls are saved, the church is marvelously encouraged, God is glorified and his word exalted. Great is the church of Christ when aroused to action! Great is the Hardeman-Pullias meeting! All praise to Jehovah for the great blessings bestowed upon his church!"

R. L. Ludlam, Jr., writes from Fort Smith, Ark., as follows: "On Tuesday, March 28, I was at Hanson, Okla., in a service which was well attended. G. W. Allen held a mission meeting there only recently and baptized six. Sister M. Majors, who was taught the gospel under the ministry of H. Leo Boles more than twenty years ago, was the one Christian to begin with. When Brother Allen had baptized four, the doors were closed against him. He then went to an arbor, and when time for service came the torches could not be found. Lanterns were brought and the service was held. Members from the church at Gans prepared the emblems and met with the church at Hanson to keep the Lord's memorial, and people past middle life saw for the first time the table of the Lord spread with the emblems of his body. The church here is looking forward to greater effort. A visit was made to Gans and five subscribers secured for the Gospel Advocate. G. R. Hasting is one of the working force and a type sent out from Tennessee. The church here holds their worship in the homes, except on the fourth Lord's day they have preaching and use a public building. An invitation has been extended me to spend the fourth Lord's day in May with them. A visit to Muldrow found Brother and Sister E. P. Henry standing for the truth and planning for some one to give the message. A building was secured and a service will be conducted on Friday evening, April 7. Brother Henry is the rural mail carrier. Some subscribers were secured at Muldrow. In fifteen days thirteen services were conducted in places where the gospel is not being preached."

Getting Up.

During the year John had been mixed up with all the fun—it seemed as though good times bobbed up before him at every turn. It was very hard for him to turn down a chance for a gay lark.

The teacher had spoken to him several times about his grades; but the fun kept coming his way, and he put off the thought of the final examinations from week to week. Of course he had no intention of failing. In some way he would get through—he always had. Things would come out all right. Meanwhile he was having a jolly time.

The last few weeks of the year he began to realize how things were going. He told the boys he would have to cut out the play and "knuckle down" to study, and he did. But it was too late; he failed!

The professors shook their heads. They were very sorry. John was good-natured, lively, and well-meaning, and they liked him; nevertheless, he had been a great worry to them. Teachers do not object to pupils having good times if their studies do not suffer neglect.

All this was gall to John, but the worst was to come; he must face his father! He suddenly awakened to the fact that he really thought a great deal of his big-hearted, generous, patient father. John had not thought much about it before, but now that he had so disappointed him, his eyes were opened; he knew now that his father's opinion meant something to him.

"I've heard, John," said his father, as John came into the house, "you've failed." His voice held no impatience or reproof.

John was surprised; he had expected reproof. He knew he deserved it. "I—I'm sorry," he said.

"Yes, I'm sorry, too. But there's something worse. I shall be much more sorry if it stays a failure. Once in a while we fall down, but we don't have to stay down. Stay down or get up; you are the one to decide that. I'm not out of patience. I'm not scolding. I'm just sorry. I've failed at different times myself. I have faith in you; I don't believe you are going to let this failure stay a failure. And now we must think of the future. What would you like to do next year?"

John looked straight into his father's eyes. "I'd like to try to get up. I'll take the year over!" he said, squaring himself on both feet.

It was hard; but he did, and at the end of the next year he faced his father with a big smile. He had not stayed a failure!—Anne Porter Johnson.

Tree Holes and Their Tenants.

When you walk along a country road at the edge of a piece of woods, and come to a wild apple tree or a decaying stump from which top and branches have fallen, you will often see a round hole in it halfway up its length, or under a big limb. Any youngster will tell you at once that it is a woodpecker's nest. It is woodpecker work, no doubt; but is it now, or was it ever, the home of a pair of woodpeckers?

Its size will give you a fair hint of whether it was made by the big logcock, by a flicker or a redhead, or by one of the smaller kinds, like the downy or the hairy woodpecker. If it is less than two inches in diameter, it was probably made by the downy woodpecker. He is a little checkered fellow, with a broad white stripe down his back and a red cap, and he is a constant visitor to our orchards. He has been called an "inspector of apple trees," for he cleans the fruit trees of borers and other injurious insect pests.

But a woodpecker's hole is not necessarily a nest. The woodpecker digs holes for other purposes. Sometimes he has to cut so deeply to get at a big grub that the hole looks like a house entry. The downy also carves out shallow holes near his real nest as shelters in which to spend stormy days and cold nights, for he is with us in winter as well as in summer. Then, too, woodpeckers make a new nesting hole each season; so you may have found a nest that was deserted long ago.

Other creatures often occupy these abandoned homes. Sometimes it is a mouse or a flying squirrel, but more often some little bird. Whatever it may be, it finds only an empty tenement, since woodpeckers are content to lay their eggs on the fine, clean chips that are left at the bottom of their burrows.

By the way in which the hole is furnished, you may guess who the new occupant is. A mouse fills the cavity with grass; a flying squirrel, with its cast-off fur and other soft stuff. If the hole is crammed with twigs and bits of spider's web, a wren has lived there; if with fine straw, a few feathers, and so forth, probably a bluebird was the tenant; if it consists mostly of feathers, wool, and cotton stuff, the occupants are no doubt chickadees or nuthatches.

Evangelists. No. 1.

By C. W. SEWELL.

I have several questions from a fellow evangelist, with whom I have labored in the past, and whom I esteem highly in the Lord. On account of the nature of some of the questions, I deem it best to withhold his name. If I answer all of his questions, it will have to be by installment.

Here is the first: "Do you think our great evangelists—such as P., B., B., H., and others—give the church much real strength?"

I feel that it is best to repress the names of the brethren mentioned, and so have represented them by letters. I have not heard all of the four men mentioned by name; but the querist says "and others." Of the "others," I have heard several. There are evangelists good, evangelists better, and evangelists best. But no matter what may be his standing, high or low, if he does not give "the church real strength," he has missed his calling and had better seek some other occupation. But our querist is not asking what they should do, but if I think they actually do "give the church much real strength." I certainly think they do. I have recently heard one of the men mentioned for a week or ten days, and I am sure I do not misstate the case when I say that if any church fails to get "much real strength" out of his labors, there is something wrong with that church, unless perchance it is already perfect. I do not understand how any Christian could listen to any of these men and not be strengthened spiritually and encouraged to more devotion. In the meeting that I recently attended the importance of Christian living and spirituality were stressed as I rarely ever heard them. We have had several evangelists with us in years past, and I feel sure that the church received "much real strength" from each of them.

I would like to emphasize what old Brother G. W. Harvey once said to me. "I don't believe," said he, "that any earnest prayer or sermon in which the truth is preached will ever be lost." These evangelists certainly preach God's word. How, then, can it "fail in that whereto it was sent?" (Isa. 55: 9-11.)

The time has been when our evangelists stressed what we call "first principles" to the neglect of weightier matters of Christian living. But I am glad this is not true any more; that all our preachers now are stressing the importance of the Christian life.

One elder said to me once, and he was also a preacher, that the evangelist should not teach the church; that that was the duty of the elders. I am glad that he was only one and that there is none other like him. Paul certainly instructed Timothy and Titus to teach the churches how to live, and I have always tried to follow his instruction.

Petty Fights.

By FRANK L. COX.

In reading one of our best religious papers recently, it was my delight to find so many pages of sunshine and inspiration. But, on a closer examination, I found something near the middle of the paper which, to a great extent, marred the beauty of that paper. It was an article devoted to a personal fight. That page was black. Then the question came to me: "Why do brethren stoop to such standards?" Is it because they have no loftier message to tell?

Is it because they have mistaken the purpose for which our papers exist? Do they think that the great brotherhood is really interested in their quarrels? Do they think that such fights will help any one to live for Christ? I wonder if it is possible to free our splendid religious journals from petty fights? Yes, but only when we all realize (1) that our papers do not exist in order to give preachers a good opportunity to stage their quarrels, (2) that there is a greater message to tell, and (3) that the brotherhood demands something more elevating.

I am in favor of freeing our good papers from such quarrels for the following reasons:

1. It would relieve our editors of a great deal of embarrassment. The editor realizes that articles dealing with petty fights make against the influence and circulation of the paper. But what is he to do when some of the "leading preachers" send in such articles for publication? To publish them is to lower the standard of the paper; to refuse to publish them is to incur the ill will of those preachers. Hence the embarrassment.

2. It would be better for those who have difficulties of a personal nature to settle. Seldom, if ever, are such difficulties settled in this manner. Usually matters are made worse. Nothing is more hurtful to the influence of a preacher than a personal fight. The brotherhood says: "Don't bore me with that stuff; you make me tired."

3. It would be better for the reading public. When a Christian sits down to read his paper, he doesn't care anything about hearing preachers or any other persons quarrel. People need enlightenment and encouragement along the line of Christian living; petty fights give neither. "Let all things be done unto edifying."

Shipwreck Concerning the Faith.

By K. C. MOSER.

The greatest ship that man ever built was wrecked. The greatest ship that man can ever build in the future can likewise be sunk to the bottom of the sea. It was the boast of her builders that the Titanic could not be sunk, but she went down on her virgin trip. There is more room at the bottom for all the Titanics that man can construct.

But if every ship were a Titanic, and all sunk to the bottom of the sea, that would be a matter of small consequence compared with the shipwreck of the faith of one child of God. The Titanic disaster has been repeated times without number in the spiritual realm. Proud of his strength and boasting of his absolute safety from all dangers hidden or seen, many a man has launched out on life's sea only to go down with the first real test. Had those whose business it was to watch been not so confident of her invincibility and more careful of her future, the Titanic might have been sailing to-day, carrying her precious cargo of passengers from continent to continent. Overconfidence in his ability to overcome temptations and in God's power to keep have resulted in the shipwreck of many a man's faith. To change the figure, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." This advice is especially good for those who think themselves strong.

Have not the last five years of observation taught us that, in proportion to numbers, more Titanics have gone down than any other kind? No one expected the Titanic to sink, especially on her first voyage. This faith in her added greatly to the surprise of the disaster. How true of men! When those who stand head and shoulders above the rest of us, men whom we call "giants"—when they fall, we are left in extreme fear, wondering "who then can be saved?" Many who can nobly defend the truth in theory fall defenseless in practice. Why is this? Is it because they are favorite targets for the devil? Have they placed too much confidence in themselves and neglected to watch? Have they listened too willingly to flattering lips? Have they all the while been teaching others and forgetting self? Has some mote been neglected till it has become a beam? Or has their religion been intellectual and not of the heart?

What would you think of me if I were to spend a score of years and thousands of dollars building a mansion, and as soon as it was finished set fire to it and watch it burn? Do you say no sane man would do such a thing? Then what man is it who, after spending a score of years or more hammering and forging himself a character, in one short hour to undo all that he had done, offering his life as a burnt offering to Satan? Who would build his house on the quicksand? Who would take fire into his bosom? Who would sell his heavenly birthright for one mess of the devil's pottage? Has the old serpent become so subtle as to be able to deceive the very elect?

There is no use to deny what Paul affirms—that men do make shipwreck of their faith. Paul even gives the names of two who did, and any of us could add many more to the list. But if the giants fall, what of the rest? But—alas!—not all that are called "giants" are giants. "For they are not all Israel, that are of Israel." That obscure child of God who feels himself to be the least in the kingdom might be greater than all the giants, so-called. Real strength lies not in reputation, but in character. Let the Titans lead the way, ever watchful of all dangers, always suspicious of their own powers, making a straight course lest they themselves experience shipwreck and the smaller vessels be turned out of the way.

Peter's Denial.

BY LEE P. MANSFIELD.

In Luke 22: 61 we read: "Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice." From this text we learn two lessons—lessons that every Christian should remember. First, the weakness and frailty of men. Paul says: "We all offend in some things." All men make mistakes. Noah got beastly drunk; Abraham lied about his wife; David committed a very shameful and disgraceful sin; and Solomon committed idolatry and folly. Knowing these lessons will enable us to manifest more love toward those who err. Second, the goodness and mercy of God. In studying my Bible, I find that when men sinned and then put themselves in the right attitude toward God, God always forgave them.

There are just two kinds of sins spoken of in God's book. One is sins of which we repent, and the other is unrepented sins. Peter sinned and repented; Judas sinned and then hanged himself.

Let us analyze Peter's sin and see of just what he was guilty.

1. He was guilty of unfaithfulness to Christ. He had confessed that Jesus was the Son of God, and for three and one-half years he had seen the divine demonstrations that he was the Christ. He had heard the wonderful lessons Christ taught and witnessed the pure and spotless life he lived. Then in the darkest hour of it all he said: "I know not the man."

2. He was also guilty of lying. When he said, "I know not the man," he uttered that which was false, because he had been in his company for three and one-half years. He had been permitted to stand on Hermon's mountain and catch a glimpse of his coming majesty.

When I read about Peter's denial, I am forced to ask: Why did he do it? What was the cause? In seeking for an answer, I find two things that were great factors in causing him to stumble.

1. A failure to heed Christ's warnings. The Lord had warned Peter of what he would do, and, seemingly, Peter gave no heed to this warning. It is a fact that many of our mistakes are made because we do not heed the admonitions of God's word.

2. He was imprudent. I mean by this that he sat among the enemies of Christ and placed himself in the way of the temptation. If he had spent the night in the mountains or boldly stood by the side of Christ, he would not have been asked: "Are you one of them?" He simply got in the wrong crowd. Christians sometimes seek the companionship of those not Christians, and, as a result, they grow careless and many times sin. Often I hear Christians say: "I can go here or there, and I can do this or that, and not fail." But let me say, it is dangerous, it is imprudent, to do such things. You are no wiser than Solomon, and he went astray because of the influence of his wives. You are no better than David, and he saw an unholy scene and committed a shameful sin. Then let us seek the companionship of the saints, lest we, too, deny Christ.

Personal Notes.

W. G. Black reports that the congregation which worships in the tabernacle three miles south of Anson, Texas, is doing good work, and that he expects to do some preaching after the close of school the last of April.

Charles J. Robinson, evangelist in Hill County, Texas, reports eleven baptisms and five restorations in a recent meeting in Blum, Texas. Brother Robinson is being supported in the county by the churches. Great work he is doing.

From A. O. Colley, Dallas, Texas, April 3: "Great services at Pearl and Bryan yesterday. We had two accessions. We are laying plans for a great meeting in June. Horace W. Busby, of Fort Worth, is to be with us for two weeks. We are expecting to reach many with the gospel this year."

From F. L. Young, Paris, Texas, April 4: "The church here is very much alive spiritually. The present building is too small for the congregation. They are planning some improvements. I preach three times on Lord's day and conduct two Bible classes and attend prayer meeting. I have planned for a few summer meetings."

W. H. George, Bonham, Texas, writes under date of April 4: "The work of our Master is moving along very nicely in Bonham, although hindered some by sickness just now. Interest is growing as fast as could be expected. T. W. Phillips, of Fort Worth, and J. H. Antwine, of Mineral Wells—Brother Phillips to do the preaching and Brother Antwine to lead us in song—will help us in the work of the Master. This meeting will embrace the last Lord's day in April and the first two in May. We are looking forward to a great work."

Horace W. Busby, Fort Worth, Texas, writes: "I am now (April 4) in a meeting with the North Side congregation, this city. We began with a large crowd and fine interest. Ben West, who labors with this congregation, is in a local sanitarium, having undergone an operation last Friday, but he is doing well, and we are hoping he may yet be with us before the meeting closes. Last Tuesday night J. W. Acuff and I closed a fine meeting with the church at Burnet, Texas. The interest was fine throughout. Part of the time the crowds were too large for the house. The singing was second to none. Twelve were baptized and seven were restored. Five confessions the last service."

I recently closed a meeting with the Catoma Street church of Christ in Montgomery, Ala. It is one of the best congregations I have been with in years. The lamented J. M. Barnes was one of the strongest factors in the establishment of this congregation, and his memory is treasured by all who knew him, as well as those who know of his faithful work. He has a son who is the head of the Barnes School for Boys in Montgomery, which is one of the very best schools to be found for boys. Brother Barnes is one of the strong men in the church, as well as one of the foremost citizens of his section and one of the best educators in the country. There are a host of men in the church who are ever awake to the church and the church work, as well as leading citizens in Montgomery. I have never labored with a better people. The sisters in the church are active, doing a great work in looking after the people who are in need. They work, not as a society, but as members of the church; and their work is known, not as the work of some one individual or some society, but as the work of the church. I visited more than one person while there who is being assisted by these sisters of the church, and they said to me: "The church where you are preaching is doing much to assist me." Fred M. Little, minister for the church, is an untiring worker, and he and his wife are loved by the congregation and appreciated for their work to advance the cause.

Efficacy of the Blood of Christ.

BY WILLIAM J. MILLER.

Jesus, the Son of God, is "the Lamb of God." At a certain time, when John, the immerger, saw Jesus, he said: "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world." (John 1: 29.) As Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, has been taking away the sins of the people, by what means are the sins taken away? The sins have been taken away by the people having "washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." (Rev. 7: 14.)

There is a time when an alien sinner is cleansed by the blood, by having washed away the sins. When is such an occurrence? What Paul said about his conversion will give some light concerning such an occurrence. Paul said: "And one Ananias, a devout man according to the law, well reported of by all the Jews that dwell there, came unto me, and standing by me said unto me, Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And in that very hour I looked upon him. And he said, The God of our fathers hath appointed thee to know his will, and to see the Righteous One, and to hear a voice from his mouth. For thou shalt be a witness for him unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard. And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name." (Acts 22: 12-16.) Therefore, it is by being baptized that the sins are washed away by the blood of Jesus, as it is according to Rev. 7: 14, that the righteous "washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Jesus is the Lamb that was spoken of.

Being baptized unto the washing away of sins is being baptized unto the remission of sins. Jesus ate with his disciples, "and as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it: and he gave to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body. And he took a cup, and gave thanks, and gave to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins." (Matt. 26: 26-28.)

The remission of sins is obtained at the time of being baptized, according to Peter's teaching in saying: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) It is plain that it is not as some contend, that people receive the remission of sins before being baptized, but that the remis-

Bradshaw.

Eldorado Bay Bradshaw was born on May 17, 1850, and lived in this world nearly seventy-two years. Forty-four years of this time she was a member of the church. She was baptized during a meeting held by the noted blind preacher, Brother Smithson. She was married to D. L. Bradshaw in 1882. She was the mother of five children, three of whom still live in this world. A large crowd of sorrowing relatives, friends, and neighbors were present at the burial in the family graveyard at home. Funeral services were conducted by the writer.

W. DEBBERRY.

Smith.

It became my sad duty to speak words of comfort to the many friends of Elzie Lynn, son of old Brother C. C. Smith, of Berry, Ala. Lynn had been in declining health for the past two years. He went to Mexico last summer, but all to no avail. Another case in which war destroyed a noble young life. It was sad for him to die so far away from home and loved ones, but our hearts rejoiced that he could be brought back and we could look upon him once more. Funeral services were conducted in the church house, which was filled to overflowing, showing the high esteem the people of Berry had for Lynn. The writer conducted the services. FRANK BAKER.

Burt.

A letter recently came announcing the death of Brother Elbert Burt, of Newport, Ark. Like all other human beings, Brother Burt was subject to errors, yet there were many things in his life worthy of imitation. He was the most zealous man for God's truth that I ever knew. It was his delight to preach the old Jerusalem gospel where it had not been preached unmixt with error. And he gave the financial side no consideration. I have known him to go for months working in his shop all during the day and drive from fifteen to thirty miles and preach at night. Many times I have suggested to him that he was going to bring upon himself a premature death if he did not let up, but he was unwilling to allow a single opportunity to pass unused for doing good. May his zeal and tireless efforts be a stimulus to all who knew him to take greater courage to advance Christianity, and may God's richest blessings be upon his wife and children.

L. R. WILSON.

Sister Ruth Parker, daughter of Henry Parker and wife, departed this life on Tuesday, March 28, 1922. She died in New Mexico. Her parents and her sister, Ela, went with her to New Mexico over a year ago, thinking that the change would improve her health, but, in spite of medical aid and all that the family and friends could do, the death angel came and called her away. We feel that our loss is heaven's gain. She was a devoted Christian girl, and all that knew her loved her. She was patient unto death, willing to suffer in the flesh for a short season, then to be at home with the Lord. She had just passed her twenty-ninth birthday. She obeyed the gospel while attending college in Kentucky in 1909. She leaves a father and mother, two sisters and two brothers, to mourn her departure. Her body was laid to rest in the family cemetery at her father's home, in Bedford County, Tenn. Many friends attended the funeral services, which were conducted by the writer of this. To her aged parents and relatives and friends I would say: She cannot come to us, but we can go to her. Let us all prepare to meet the Lord in the great judgment day. R. E. L. TAYLOR.

Matheson.

Brother D. A. Matheson was born on December 14, 1854, and died on October 17, 1921. Brother Matheson was married three times. To the first two unions were born ten children, all of whom are following their father as he followed his Master. Brother Matheson was next married to Miss Jennie Talliaferro, and to this union was born one daughter, Miss Quincy, who lives with her mother at Denton, Texas. Brother Matheson became a Christian in early life and lived a sacrificing life for the Lord. He did not only say he loved the Lord, but he showed this by spending his money for the advancement of the Master's kingdom. It was his delight to hear some faithful man of God tell the "old, old story" of Jesus and his love. His son, W. M. Matheson, of Stroud, Okla., has led the singing for me in several meetings, and it was Brother Matheson's "happy time" to see his children do their best in the service of the Lord. To Sister Matheson and all the children I would say: Grieve not as for one who has no hope in Christ, but live and hope for the joy that awaits all the faithful over in the rest that remains for the people of God. Drive away the clouds of sorrow by the promises found in the blessed Bible, and live a life fashioned after the Son of God, as we feel Brother Matheson did, and meet again in the realms of glory. D. S. LICOX.

The Unity of the Spirit.

BY F. I. PRYOR.

"Giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."
(Eph. 4: 3.) A congregation can be united and in peace and still not be keeping the unity of the Spirit. Because your congregation is united, do not take it for granted that all is well.
Unity is not a guarantee for godliness.
The Pharisees were a unit in faith and practice, and infidels and atheists go hand in hand. There is a unity that is of Satan, and many times he de-ceives us because we do not give diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit.

The exhortation is to keep the unity, showing that the unity of the Spirit has already been established. We cannot keep something that does not exist.
It is well, then, to know what it is, that we may know whether we are keeping it or not. The Lord would not tell us to keep something without telling us what to keep. So he tells us plainly what the unity of the Spirit is: "There is one body, and one Spirit; . . . one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all." (Verses 4-6.) Surely no one will doubt this being the unity of the Spirit, for all can see the oneness here.
This is the unity the apostle exhorts us to give diligence to keep.

It is well, again, to know how to keep this unity; so we will start with "one Lord." To have more than one Lord would not be keeping the unity of the Spirit. It would not be a unit with two Lords. One is enough, for
"no man can serve two masters."
"One faith." Surely there is enough in it for us to learn, do, and teach without introducing another. The anathemas of heaven rest upon the man or angel that would teach another. We cannot keep the unity of the Spirit by following the hypotheses of men. "One baptism." To teach more than one baptism would not be keeping the unity of the Spirit. We have the same authority for two Lords that we have for two baptisms. How the world gets confused here is a mystery to me. Language could not make the above statement any plainer.
"One body." If you are a member of two bodies, you are a member of one body that God did not make. God made this one body big enough to hold all the saved. Therefore, one body is enough. If not, why not? "One Spirit," and it dwells in this one body.
One Spirit is enough for one body.
There is always division when two spirits get into the same body. "One God and Father of all" completes the unity of the Spirit; and if we will give diligence to keep this unity, God will bless and keep us.

A Brand-New Book

"OLD LIMBER" or THE TALE OF THE TAYLORS by DELONG RICE

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their eloquence, their fiddles, and their fox hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eternal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Rice.
Into one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two most wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifelong rivalry of the two famous brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that attracted the attention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER," the peerless and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters" extending from a President of the United States to a fox hound, the story touches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of crackling camp fires and the music of the chase.

THE BOOK is beautifully printed

The greatest preachers of recent ages attribute much of their inspiration to this remarkable work. Unlike most modern commentaries, this work does not profess to be critical—and therein lies its chief charm. What the world lacks to-day is old-fashioned devotion. After the strife of the battle of criticism, it is a relief to find comfort in the calm, helpful interpretation of Matthew Henry. Original and quaint of expression, there is a directness in his utterances which rivets the attention.

Interdenominational in character, this commentary has had highest praise from the leading pulpits of two centuries. Thousands of homes in all lands where English is spoken cherish this work beyond praise. Read the strong, approving words of Wesley and Whitefield, the fathers of Methodism; Spurgeon, the Baptist; Bickersteth, the poet and churchman, whose "Yesterday, To-Day, and Forever" gives him world-wide esteem; Hamilton and Cuyler, Presbyterians; Taylor, the Congregationalist.

James Hamilton: "It has now lasted nearly two hundred years, and is at this moment more popular than ever, gathering strength as it rolls down the stream of time; and it bids fair to be the Comment for all coming time. True to God; true to nature, true to common sense, how can it ever be superseded?"

E. H. Bickersteth: "No subsequent commentary has rendered it less valuable or less desirable in every Christian library."

C. H. Spurgeon: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering swallows around an old gable toward the close of autumn."

Theodore L. Cuyler: "To how many a hard-working minister has this book been a mine of gold! Next to wife and children has lain near his heart the pared-over and prayed-over copy of his Matthew Henry."

George Whitefield, when asked where he studied Theology, replied: "On my knees, reading my Bible and Henry's Commentary." Whitefield read it continuously through four times.

Recently a great Bible student, Ray, J. D. Jones, of Bournemouth, England, a man whose works are read by millions—whose counsel is sought by thousands—was asked to begin the making of a commentary upon the whole Bible as he had done on some of the books of the Bible. His reply was: "That has been done, and satisfactorily done, by Matthew Henry. He cannot be superseded, and the marvel is that he should have been able to do it as completely and well as he has. It cannot be done again."

John Wesley: "It is frequently full, giving a sufficient explication of the passages which require explaining. It is in many parts deep, penetrating farther into the inspired writings than most other commentaries do. It does not usually entertain us with vain speculation, but is practical throughout; and usually spiritual, too, teaching us how to worship God, not in form only, but 'in spirit and in truth.'"

William M. Taylor: "The habitual perusal of Matthew Henry's Comments will do more than most other things to indicate to the preacher how he is to turn the passage that is under his hand to practical account, while at the same time the emotion that it exhales will mellow and fatten the words of his own piety."

Field Reports

Los Angeles, Cal., April 4.—Last Sunday was another great day at the Central church of Christ. Large crowds, interest at white heat almost, and five more souls were added to our ranks. The Ford which the church bought for us has been received and is very much appreciated.—Samuel E. Witty and Robert E. Wright.

Berry, Ala., April 3.—I preached for the faithful little band at Eldridge, Ala., on Saturday night and on Sunday and Sunday night. The Lord has a few faithful children at that place, among whom are Dr. Ashmore and his good wife, old-time friends of mine. I spent the time between services in their home, and they know how to make a gospel preacher feel that his work is appreciated.—Frank Baker.

Muskogee, Okla., March 31.—I preached twice on Sunday for the church at Haskell, Okla., with splendid audiences at both services. I promised to return again on the third Sunday. The church there is in a prosperous condition and pressing forward in a remarkable way. Brother J. N. Armstrong, of Harper, Kan., will begin a meeting with them on the fifth Sunday in April.—T. S. Bain.

Rockwood, Tenn., April 3.—Yesterday was another good day for the church here. One hundred and twenty-eight at Bible study, good attendance at the worship, and one from the Baptists who will be baptized on Wednesday night. The attendance at night was excellent, many standing throughout the entire service. The work at Dayton moves along in the usual way. We hope to hold a meeting there in the near future.—Will J. Cullum.

Sedalia, Mo., April 3.—It was my privilege and pleasure to be with the St. Louis brethren and sisters last Thursday night at their prayer-meeting services. So long as Brother S. R. Cassius (colored) and I were there, the services were turned over to us. After a short talk, I turned the time over to him. He made a very nice, instructive talk. The brethren want to start on their church building at once. Brother and Sister Sevedge are doing a nice work. They are loved by all and are seemingly the right ones in the right place.—S. W. Bell.

Salem, Ark., March 29.—The rain has hindered for two Sundays. I failed to get to Heart last Sunday. On Sunday before I preached at Oxford to small crowds. On my way home I baptized three at Salem. I will begin protracted-meeting work on the first Sunday in July at Springdale, Ark. We will have a two-days' meeting of the churches in this (Fulton) county, beginning on Saturday before the fifth Sunday in April. The program is as follows: Saturday morning, "Witness of the Spirit," W. O. Stroud; Saturday evening, "The Scriptural Church," J. G. Welch; Sunday morning, "The Lord's Day," Joe H. Blue; Sunday evening, "The Church Treasury," S. C. Garner. The fifth-Sunday meeting will be with the Liberty Hill Church.—Norman Cooper.

Greenville, S. C., April 5.—Twelve months ago I was firing a boiler in a furniture factory, but, concluding that

It was not the Lord's will, I resigned and began preaching. The first meeting was held at some coal mines in Eastern Kentucky, and resulted in one baptism. This meeting was supported by the Portland Avenue Church, in Louisville, and the miners. The next meeting was held at New Albany, Ind., and resulted in five baptisms. This meeting was supported by the Sellersburg (Ind.) congregation. Then I came to South Carolina and was supported for five months by the church at Lawrenceburg, Tenn. I held two meetings in Union, which resulted in ten baptisms, and one in Greenville, with no visible results. The first of March found us moving to Greenville. The Lord being our helper, we want to establish a congregation here. There are eight of us at present, and we hope for others. I have preached several times at other places, but mostly here in South Carolina.—G. F. Gibbs.

Columbus, Miss., April 4.—Having planned a ten-days' visit in Nashville, the first two days of which, because of a severe cold, I was unable to go up town, and another one spent in Jackson, Tenn., to be present at the funeral of our sister, Mrs. R. J. Hayes, left me just seven days, which were spent profitably and pleasantly. I specially enjoyed and was enthused over the big Auditorium meeting, which I was loath to leave; but being already announced to begin a meeting in Columbus, I was forced to do so. I believe the big meeting is the greatest move of recent years and will accomplish untold good. I sincerely wish these Mississippi people could have been there for one service at least to hear the soul-thrilling singing and the scriptural sermons which Brother Hardeman so eloquently delivers. Our meeting here began on Sunday morning in the house which we bought from the Presbyterians last year. We have had fair attendance generally and considerable enthusiasm on the part of the faithful few. By the faithful sowing of the seed, we trust that good results will follow. Brother Charles F. Hardin, of Springfield, Mo., is here with his splendid voice, and he adds no little to our meeting. While our brethren here have a good house, so far as the main structure is concerned, the building really needs now at least five hundred dollars spent on it for necessary repairs, the walls being in bad shape on the inside and there being no baptistry in the house. I believe the prospect for a growing congregation here is bright. The most active work is being done by our new members who came in last year, aided by some who have been here, but inactive. We will continue this meeting through April 16. If any one has friends or relatives in or near this city, or any young lady in the Mississippi State College for Women, I would be pleased to have their names and addresses at once, that we may visit and invite them to our meeting. My address is Box 103, Columbus, Miss.—M. C. Cayce.

Christ, the Redeemer.

BY G. F. MILLER.

Though the Christ was born in a stall where the horned cattle were fed and was cradled in a manger, he had the highest honors paid him of any of the babes of the mighty of earth. His coming had been sung in prophecy for centuries. His advent was made known to the shepherds as they watched their flocks by night on the hills of Judea near the little village of Bethlehem. An angel appeared to them and told the shepherds where the Savior babe was born. A light shone round about the shepherds, and they were afraid. "And the angel said unto them: Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy."

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, "singing the anthem of peace on earth and good will to men," and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." The Magi saw his star in the east and followed it until it guided them to the manger where the babe was born; and they worshiped him, pouring out at his feet their gifts, gold and frankincense and myrrh. Nothing like this had ever taken place before, nor since.

The Savior belonged to no caste; he came to no class; he was a free gift to the whole world. Though the place of his birth was lowly, the shepherds could visit him, the wise men of the east could pour their trophies at his feet, and the heavenly host as they hovered over the place of his birth could sing: "Glory to God in the highest: peace on earth and good will to men." The circumstances and surroundings are in keeping with his subsequent teaching and preaching. His call was: "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden; come unto me, all ye nations of the earth." In his preaching he told King Herod that the poor had the gospel preached to them, yet he made his grave with the rich in his death. He was subject to no caste or class.

Mary, the mother of the Babe of Bethlehem, was a woman of low estate. Through her veins flowed the blood of the royal house of David. Her progenitors are the proudest of the proud race of the Jews—God's own people. David, one of her forefathers, was the shepherd boy, the sweet singer of Israel and king, and a man after God's own heart, of whose kingdom it was said there should be no end. When God had fulfilled his purpose in David's earthly kingdom, it was spiritualized in Christ, set up in the hearts of men and women, and was to continue through the ages until time shall cease to be. The name of Mary, the mother of Christ, will be honored wherever man breathes or speaks.

Wherever the life story of her Son is known she will be called "blessed."

About thirty years from the manger Christ began to preach and teach. He mingled and mixed with the people, teaching that it was best to forego all earthly pleasures and possessions and gain a home in heaven. He made some converts in all classes of the people. The poor heard him gladly, the fishermen left their nets and followed him. A few in all of the walks of life became his disciples, from the poor of earth to the Sanhedrin, the high court. Two senators of this court assisted at his burial. Joseph of Arimathea asked Pilate for the body of Jesus, and took it and prepared it for burial; and Nicodemus assisted Joseph in the work.

The life work of Christ was to teach mankind that a home in heaven is worth more than all the pleasures and possessions of earth, and it is so and will continue to be so.

Some Thoughts Suggested by a Recent Article.

BY J. T. J. WATSON.

In the Gospel Advocate of February 2 is an article from A. A. Bunner under the heading, "That He Might Seek a Godly Seed." In the main, I think the article good and timely. But in the course of his reasoning he says: "Hence, when one quotes 2 Cor. 6: 14 and applies it to the marriage relation, he is making a wrong application of the Inspired Paul's language and is doing violence to the word of the Lord." The Scripture referred to is this: "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," etc.

Brother Bunner thinks because 1 Cor. 7: 13, 14 gives instruction as to how a Christian should deal with an unbelieving husband or wife, it is conclusive that Christians may marry unbelievers; but I do not think such conclusion is at all necessary. We often see a man or a woman obey the gospel while his or her companion remains an unbeliever; and as the idea that Christians should not marry unbelievers, as I think, is clearly taught in 1 Cor. 6: 14, as well as many other Scriptures, it seems that this would naturally give rise to the question, should they separate? Seeing that marriages of Christians to unbelievers are forbidden, it seems that a question concerning their remaining together would be natural. Hence the instruction in 1 Cor. 7: 13, 14 to married people when one is converted and the other is not.

Let us look closely at 1 Cor. 6: 14 and see if it does not necessarily apply to the marriage relation. "Yoke" is a word in common use among people where oxen are worked. Primarily it is a piece of timber connecting two draft oxen together for work; but it is sometimes used in an accommodative sense—that is, the word "yoke" is symbolically used to express the idea of joining two together to do a certain work or to accomplish a certain purpose. Hence, as a yoke is never used to connect more than two (we never see three or more oxen working at the same time under the same yoke), we see that it cannot logically apply to Christians joining the fraternal orders, although I think that in principle it would cut out the "orders," but with all good propriety it does apply to marriage and any close union where only two are in the pact.

I have learned to look with a degree of leniency when Christians marry non-Christians, because many Christians do not know any better, and in such cases they should be pitied rather than censured. But if they think it is not wrong, and it is their desire, better let them go "ahead." Although they will have "trouble in the flesh," it might be less than the trouble that would follow an absolute prohibition. If they marry, the unbelieving one might afterwards be converted and both might grow in Scripture knowledge and zeal and become useful Christians and good citizens; while a dictatorial prohibition might result in much evil, even the moral downfall of the weak Christian.

Natchez, Miss., 114 South Canal Street, April 4.—Through the fellowship of some of the best congregations in Nashville, Tenn., it has been made possible for me to come to this field in South Mississippi to labor in the Master's cause. I have decided to locate in Natchez, a town of over twelve thousand people, situated on the Mississippi River. I have found about twenty-two loyal members here, the most of whom seem to be anxious to assist all that they can to establish the cause here. My family will soon join me here, and we purpose to make this our home for an indefinite period of time. I shall work with the little band here and hold meetings at other needy points. I find a few "digressives" here; and they have been making some efforts to establish themselves here, but as yet they have had no marked success. With considerable help from congregations in general, we could buy a lot and build a house and thus establish the cause here and shut off the efforts of the "digressives," and it would be a good point from which to send out the gospel to this needy field. Now, if any individual or congregation feels called upon to assist in the work here, I am sure my family and I, together with the few members here, will greatly appreciate your contribution. You may send your fellowship to me at 114 South Canal Street, Natchez, Miss. Every dollar received will be used toward a meetinghouse.—T. C. Fox.

Wichita Falls, Texas, April 4.—We are moving along nicely in the work in Wichita Falls. All the services are well attended and the interest is generally good. My work with the church here began about a month ago; and though I have been here so short a time, there seems every reason to believe that the church and I are going to work together well and accomplish much good in the Master's cause. From what I have been able to see so far, there are, perhaps, between two hundred and fifty and three hundred members in the congregation; and it is believed that the most of them have "a mind to work." Our Bible classes are well attended each Lord's day. The average attendance at the classes is about two hundred per Sunday. A large number of these are children, which means that the church can look forward to an excellent growth soon. The prayer-meeting service is steadily growing, and has almost doubled since the first meeting of my labors with the church. On last Sunday afternoon the congregation had the regular business meeting to talk over the work and to plan and arrange for better work. At this meeting it was arranged to begin a meeting the last part of the month. This meeting will be held with the home forces—the home congregation, the home singers, and the home preacher doing the work. We look forward to a good meeting. There are several singers in the congregation, among them Brethren Dunaway, Short, and Harvey, and perhaps others; and with these to lead and the congregation to faithfully assist, we expect to have good, wholesome singing and good, old-time gospel preaching. We have found the congregation in Wichita Falls a most excellent band of people to labor with, and one with which it is both a credit and a pleasure to be associated. A great field this, and we desire the prayers of all of the faithful that we may prove ourselves worthy as workers in the Master's great cause.—R. D. Smith.

Much Resin in Hawaiian Tree.

When you pull a piece of bark off the chunky old monkey-pod tree, reports a traveler recently in Hawaii, you smell so much resin that it seems to you that the hot sun alone would be enough to set the bark flaming like a torch. It makes a tall, pointed flame, like the flame on a big candle. Fire lurks in the tree somewhere, that is certain. They say that at one time the old Hawaiians tapped the tree as Americans do a sugar maple.—Selected.

YOUNG GIRLS NEED CARE

Mothers, watch your Daughters' Health

Health Is Happiness

From the time a girl reaches the age of twelve until womanhood is established, she needs all the care a thoughtful mother can give.

The condition that the girl is then passing through is so critical, and may have such far-reaching effects upon her future happiness and health, that it is almost criminal for a mother or guardian to withhold counsel or advice.

Many a woman has suffered years of prolonged pain and misery through having been the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance on the part of those who should have guided her through the dangers and difficulties that beset this period.

Mothers should teach their girls what danger comes from standing around with cold or wet feet, from lifting heavy articles, and from overworking. Do not let them over-study. If they complain of headache, pains in the back and lower limbs, they need a mother's thoughtful care and sympathy.

A Household Word in Mother's House writes Mrs. Lynd, about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was 14 years old for troubles girls often have and for loss of weight. Then after I married I took the Vegetable Compound before each child was born and always when I felt the least run-down. Both my Trying Times.

The reconstruction period after the great war is characterized by what may be called "high-pressure days." The demands of business, the wants of the family, and the requirements of society are more numerous now than ever before.

The first effect of the praiseworthy effort to keep up with all these things is commonly seen in a weakened or debilitated condition of the nervous system, which results in dyspepsia, defective nutrition of both body and brain, and, in extreme cases, in complete nervous prostration.

It is clearly seen that what is needed is what will sustain the system, give vigor and tone to the nerves, and keep the digestive and assimilative functions healthy and active. Many persons from their own experience recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for this purpose. It acts on the vital organs, builds up the system, and fits men and women for these trying times.

In cases where there is biliousness or constipation, it is well to take Hood's Pills. They are a thorough cathartic, a gentle laxative.

sister and sister-in-law take it and have only the highest praise for it. It has been a household word in my mother's house for years."—Mrs. KATHERYN LYND, 2431 Gladys Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Little Book Helped Her to Decide

Milwaukee, Wis.—"My daughter took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she was so weak and did not feel like going to school. She was like that for a whole year before taking your Vegetable Compound. I found a little book of yours in our mail-box and decided to give her your medicine. She is now strong and well and attends school every day. We recommend your Vegetable Compound to all mothers with weak daughters. You may use this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. E. KLUCZNY, 917 20th Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

"I was always feeling tired and sleepy, was losing in weight and would faint at times. I had other troubles too, that made me feel badly. I read your little books and heard friends talk about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done them, so I have taken it too. The results are most satisfactory for I have gained in weight and my bad symptoms are gone. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may make whatever use you like of this letter."—GLORIA RAMIREZ, 1116 9th Ave., Tampa, Florida.

CLEAVING TO THE LORD WITH PURPOSE OF HEART.

BY F. L. PAISLEY.

When the commission of the Lord was being enacted and the gospel being preached to the various nations of earth, the glad news of redemption reached the city of Antioch. There were many honest people in that city, for "a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord." (Acts 11: 21.) Had they not been honest, they would have turned a deaf ear to the truth, as many do in this late "age of learning," and rejected the word of the Lord.

The gospel's reception in Antioch was heard of by the church at Jerusalem. The church there had been converted from its narrow conception of the commission in thinking that the Jews were the only recipients of the gospel of grace. It sent Barnabas to Antioch to strengthen them who were to be first to be "called by a new name." When Barnabas arrived, he saw the effect the truth had had upon the city; he saw the grace of God, and was glad. He saw the grace of God in the same sense that the Savior saw the faith of those who brought the helpless to him. (Luke 5: 18-20.) He saw the expression, the work of faith. Where the grace of God or faith cannot be seen as in these cases, it is safe to question one's having either to any profit. Having "seen the grace of God," Barnabas, as any "good man" "of faith" should do, "exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord." Many more accepted the truth, believed and obeyed it, and were "added unto the Lord." People did not "join the church" in those days, nor would such be done now had men not departed from the faith, but continued to preach the word instead of the doctrines of men. Every Christian is added to the Lord the moment he becomes a Christian—yes, he is added to the church the same moment; for to be added to one is to be added to the other, for the simple reason that the church is the body of Christ. (Eph. 1: 22, 23.)

To be added to the Lord and to cleave to the Lord are two different things. One is active in becoming a Christian and at the same time is passive in being added to the Lord, though the two things occur at the same time. But to cleave unto the Lord, one must be active all the while. To be sure, the idea of one's having to "hold on," to cleave to the Lord, is both ridiculed and blasphemed by unholy lips, but the Bible teaches just the same. We are his house, "if we hold," (Heb. 3: 6, 14.) People are saved because they cleave to the Lord, "hold on," the end." According to modern preachers, Barnabas began at once to exhort those saved by grace to reject grace and try to save themselves by works; for we are gravely told that if a man does not let the Lord do it all, he rejects his grace. Not so, but the cleaving to the Lord was, and is, as much included in the grace of God as the first acceptance of the truth. But the exhortation is not simply to cleave to the Lord, but to do it "with purpose of heart." This embraces whole-hearted action. There is far too much pretended cleaving without real purpose of heart. No kind of service is pleasing to the Lord that is not backed by a purpose of heart.

Israel's failure, from the exodus, seems to be attributable to a lack of purpose of heart. Too easily discouraged, too prone to be pessimistic, they would begin a task, and at sight of opposition they would grow faint-hearted and wish to return to Egypt. Verily, all of Israel is not dead yet! A strong purpose of heart is half the battle won, and the Lord well knows our danger without it.

One of the finest examples in all the Bible of how to cleave to the Lord with purpose of heart is in the book of Daniel. When King Nebuchadnezzar, under whom God's people were in captivity, desired to select the most handsome and well-favored to stand in the king's palace, he appointed that those chosen should be fed on special things that he thought would be most wholesome and nourishing. Daniel and the noted three Hebrews were among the chosen. Then Daniel (and no doubt each of the other three) "purposed in his heart that he would not" eat the king's dainties. It is necessary to be both negative and positive in purpose of heart. Daniel's was a negative purpose this time. God knows every purpose of heart, and upon Daniel's resolve the Lord gave him kindness and favor in the eyes of the king's men. Daniel said: "No, we will not eat those things; we have purposed in our hearts not to do it." It was a brave step, but only one preparatory to a braver one. Daniel was the Lord's, and he had purposed in his heart to cleave unto him and hold fast his hope unto the end. (Heb. 3: 6, 14.) Their determination not to eat the king's food was granted by the king with results that astonished all Babylon in that they were ten times better prepared for the king's service than all those who had not so purposed in heart.

Their next purpose of heart was also a negative one. In the course of time the king made a great image of gold and ordered that all in the empire should, at a certain signal, fall down and worship the image. Multitudes obeyed the orders and bowed to the god of gold. To be sure, Daniel did not worship such a god, but for some reason he is not mentioned as having refused. The three noted Hebrews did refuse and were brought before the king. What an awful thing they have done! Then the king in rage and fury asked them: "Is it of purpose that ye serve not my god?" Before they answered he gave them one more chance to prove that they did not intentionally fail to obey his orders, but with the extended opportunity he assured them of the impending danger if they failed again, adding, "Who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?" One thing sure, there was not a man or god on the earth able to deliver them, and none knew it better than they. What an insult to the God of heaven is such a question! Undaunted and with purpose of heart, they, in the face of death most horrible if depending on some god to deliver, answered the king: "If you do that to us, our God is able to deliver us from the fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thy hand, O king; but, regardless of what happens, be sure of this, we will not serve thy gods nor worship the golden image." (See Dan. 3: 17, 18.) No doubt they meant to say: "If our God should fail to deliver us and we knew he would, we will not serve your god." Thank God for such courage! They were consigned to the fiery furnace, but without a hair of their heads or a thread of their garments being scorched. Such purpose of heart and trust in the Lord who was able to deliver and did deliver converted the wicked king so that he said, "There is no other God able to deliver after this sort!" Inspiration never uttered a greater truth.

The Lord's grace or goodness does not obligate him to hold on to a faithless, disobedient wretch that will not cleave unto him with purpose of heart. Many professed Christians seem to have purposed in heart not to cleave to him; and while the Lord's word is true, what hope can they have of eternity?

The Wiles of the Devil.

BY JAMES E. SCOREY.

Every one of the slightest intelligence would affirm that there are such things as right and wrong, as well as good and evil, in the world; and, if so, these conditions have their sources, or causes. Now, I recognize the fact that there are two great spiritual powers in the universe, and especially in the world. One is the author of all good; the other, the author of all evil. God is the source from whence all good comes to man; while from the devil has proceeded all the evil to which man is and has been subjected for all time in his history on the earth. These two great spiritual powers in purpose are opposed to each other—the one willing to bless man with all good, the other using his powers to cause man to fail of the blessings God would bestow.

Man is a subsidiary spiritual power with ability to harmonize his activities with the purpose of God in his creation and be blessed of him, or, failing through the wiles of the devil, to end his life here by falling into everlasting perdition. God did not create man and leave him without instruction as to how to conduct himself that he might continue to enjoy the blessings which he had bestowed upon him in Eden. God distinctly told him what to do and what not to do, attaching the penalty of death to the infraction of that command forbidding him to eat of the fruit of the tree that stood in the midst of the garden.

Man's first lesson he received of God: it was the true lesson of life, and, observed by man, would have enabled him to have resisted the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the vainglory of becoming like gods.

There was another who would supplant God as a teacher of man. He would teach man that what God had said must be taken with a few grains of salt; that God did not mean just what he had said. Indeed, he said: "I assure you, you will not die; for God knows that in the day you eat the fruit ye shall become as gods, knowing good and evil." No wonder the woman was deceived; for the devil, by his subtle logic and confident protestations concerning the tree, had convinced the woman that she might with impunity eat. She did eat; and she gave to Adam, and he ate, though he was not deceived; and thus, through the influence of the devil, his sin brought death upon himself and all his progeny, with all other evils which shall beset man during his stay on the earth.

The first Adam fell to the wiles of the devil; the second Adam withstood all his wiles, from the temptation in the wilderness to the cross of Calvary. But what are wiles? Sly, beguiling tricks in words or actions. The devil will use any means at hand, or any he can invent, whether the truth or a lie, by which he can cause man to merit the disapprobation of God and lay himself liable to the curse of God. And that God may curse man instead of blessing him is the purpose of the devil, and to accomplish this purpose his powers are engaged. And we may be sure he is diligently on the job all the time.

God has not left himself without witness, through the generations past, that he has continued to give man the lessons of life. He who in times past spoke to the fathers by the prophets has in these last days spoken unto us by his Son. Him should we hear. The devil has also been teaching the people in the past, as well as in the present. All false prophets, false teachers, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ, are and have been the emissaries and ministers of Satan. "And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers be also transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works." (2 Cor. 11: 14, 15.) We may be consciously or unconsciously serving the devil. But when we know we are doing contrary to God's will and word, we may be well assured we are in the devil's service. Jesus said, "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin" (John 8: 34); and Paul says: "To whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness" (Rom. 6: 16). Too many of us are superficial reasoners. We see only the surface of things, and do not dive deep down into the fountain and gather the ever-enduring pearls of truth, which will enable us to perceive the results of our course of conduct in life. Paul, in writing to the church at Corinth on a matter of discipline, said he would act in such a way "that no advantage may be gained over us by Satan: for we are not ignorant of his devices." Now, a "device" may be something valuable and helpful. But the devices of Satan are not valuable or helpful for any good, but are any contrivances he can use to cause man to sin against God. Satan is an unsurpassed schemer; a strategist of the first rank; the head of all deceivers. "When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it," Jesus said. (John 8: 44.) The devil always presents himself in the most favorable light possible. He is a veritable wolf in sheep's clothing. If he were to proclaim himself an enemy to God and man, a teacher of immorality, and a promoter of every species of wickedness, he would have greatly less influence over the hearts and minds of men and women than is manifested by those who are led away by him into the broad way to eternal death.

There are and have been honest, conscientious men in the world who openly declared themselves infidels and atheists, but they have done little damage to Christianity to what is now being done by false teachers professing to be disciples of Christ. From the day in which Cain and Abel made their offerings to God, the devil has been largely engaged in the religious business. Now, we know there are false religions in the world. These religions are not of God, not authorized of him. From whatever source they come, it is a source of evil; and the propagators of these religions were false teachers and were engaged in a work most pleasing to his Satanic Majesty, and all the influence he could exert through his ministers has been thrown to the support and extension of his false religions among men. His emissaries are still sowing the seeds of infidelity in the minds and hearts of men by making void the word of God by their much learning and scientific conclusions. If the devil can by any means cause you to doubt the validity and the authority of God's word, that he does not mean what he says, you then are prepared to be, and will be, a servant of sin and a child of the devil, "and the lusts of your father ye will do," says Jesus.

Even religionists who profess to believe the Bible from Genesis to Revelation have been deceived by religious teachers and have been made to believe that God's word may be modified, changed, substituted for, or neglected, and that if they take Christ as their personal Savior and do good while they live they will die happy and go to heaven. If a man neglect to do what God requires and does something else that he may be blessed of him, the tragedy of Eden will be reenacted in his case, but with more fearful consequences to him than to Adam, for he will lose his own soul. And Jesus says: "What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

Of all Satan's efforts to cause man to fail of heaven, immortality, and eternal life, the strongest and most successful is his being able to deceive him in reference to the plan of salvation perfected by Jesus Christ. This plan is the gospel, which Paul says is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." The devil, through his emissaries, is engaged now, as he has ever been, in the effort to destroy man's faith in God's word. He is debauching the world in immorality and the most heinous criminalities. It is the duty of every soldier of the cross to "put on the whole armor of God, that ye [he] may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil, . . . and having done all, to stand." "Wherefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." (1 Cor. 15: 58.)

So far as I am personally concerned, I am determined to simply take God at his word, and to do nothing in the work or worship of the church, save that I can have his word to lead me. If the professed followers of the Lord would consecrate their lives to the service of God and do away with the additions and subtractions to the work and worship of the church, we could put up a much stronger fight against the wiles of the devil in all their manifestations among men. God's ways are perfect and cannot be improved by any expedients introduced into his worship on the part of the worshiper. That is the way of Cain.

Quiet Talks on Timely Topics.

FIRST STEPS.

The terms of the gospel, or the conditions that the sinner must comply with in order to enjoy the benefits of the gospel, are here called "first steps" instead of "first principles," because we have seen that some principles must precede these steps. The preacher of the gospel cannot be true to his trust and neglect to preach either the first principles or the first steps. People must be convicted of sin and made to cry out for salvation, and then they must be told in no uncertain terms what the Lord requires them to do in order to receive the remission of sins. In the days of the apostles the steps of the gospel were not controverted points, and for that reason we have no discussion of these questions in the New Testament. In the great commission the Lord Jesus Christ sent his apostles to all the world with the good tidings, the message of love, or the gospel, and told them that all who believed this message and would repent and be baptized should be saved. Why any man should feel called upon to go to the lost world with the story of that love which purchased redemption upon the cross and still not be willing to tell sinners how to come into the blessings of this redemption is a mystery. But there are many who not only do not tell the sinner what to do to be saved, but they lead the sinner to believe he is saved without doing anything except to feel like he wants to go to heaven. Great revivals are held and hundreds of people are made to express a desire to be saved, and are thereupon assured that they are converted; and yet not one time does the evangelist name the terms of pardon as our Lord stipulated them in the great commission—the only commission, the only authority, that any man has from the Lord for preaching the gospel. For this reason it has been necessary for the true gospel preacher to put special emphasis upon the fact that men must obey the gospel and upon the specific acts of obedience. And there is now a very special need for that sort of preaching. We seem prone to swing to extremes and to give attention to but one thing at a time. A few years ago the conditions of salvation occupied the whole attention of religious people and preachers of the gospel rarely preached on anything else; but now there is such a desperate need for sermons upon lines of morality, practical Christian living, church government, and social service, that there is a tendency among preachers to let these things eclipse the very fundamentals of the faith. So-called "doctrinal preaching" is becoming rare. "These things ought not so to be." And in the language of Christ to the Pharisees, "these ye ought to have done, and not to have left the other undone."

AVOID EXTREMES.

Any extreme is dangerous. If we preach doctrine without Christ, it matters not if the doctrine be sound, we become sectarians, mere partisan propagandists. We will love our party and our doctrine, and we, like the Pharisees, will tour land and sea to make one proselyte; and when we have made him, he is twofold more the child of hell than we are ourselves. But if we preach Christ without doctrine, we become fanatics, mere emotionalists, and we will mistake feelings for faith, and because of our frenzied and ecstatic condition of mind we will imagine that we are in high favor with God and have no need to obey his word.

We have all seen these two extremes. The Mormons and sometimes the Adventists furnish us examples of the first-mentioned extreme. And even our own "hobby riders" fall into that class. For examples of the second extreme we have only to look at the "Holiness" people; but they are by no means the only people who fall into this hurtful extreme. Let us avoid extremes and try earnestly to declare the whole counsel of God. Let us "preach the word" and be faithful. And let us pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers into his harvest; to send forth men of faith, men of prayer, men of consecration—men who are evenly balanced and who are willing to hazard their lives for the name of Christ. Who is going to take the place of those veterans of the cross who are now being mustered out of service? Reader, let that question weigh upon your heart and impel you to prayer and to action.

Nashville (Tenn.) Notes.

BY S. H. HALL.

When this reaches our readers, the Hardeman-Pullias revival will be history. You will find the final results in Brother Srygley's notes under "At Home and Abroad," as matter for that department takes news items as late as Monday before the Gospel Advocate goes on the press on Tuesday.

To date (April 13) there have been one hundred and sixteen conversions—ninety-nine confessions and baptisms and seventeen restored to their "first love." This clearly indicates that the Nashville Christians had gotten themselves in fine condition for this drive and that but a small per cent here are backsliding Christians. More confessions for reconsecration and return to first love are needed, however.

Much could be said about this revival, and must be said, but I think it best to go into details in the final report next week, after the last sermon has been delivered, the last song sung, and these happy thousands of God's faithful workers shall have returned to their respective local congregations for the purpose of continuing this revival the remainder of the year by working as we have never worked before. How I wish I could give our readers a picture of the happy faces that have been coming and going to the Ryman Auditorium! But expect the final report next week.

I am so glad to report the work at the Russell Street congregation as growing in leaps and bounds. These are lovely people with whom to labor, and I am so glad that I came. The Davidson and Hicks families have just returned after a several-months' stay in Florida, and this makes us feel like greater things will certainly be done. We have missed them so much.

Brother Hugh E. Garrett, of Atlanta, Ga., has taken in the whole of the revival at the Auditorium. The Georgia brethren were good enough to let him leave his work and come and get all the good he could from the strong lessons Brother Hardeman has continually given us. But we put him to work, and he has been one of the most helpful factors in the campaign. He spoke for us one Lord's day at Russell Street, and, without one exception, this church was delighted and wondered how we make people to grow so fast in Georgia. Then Brother R. R. Brooks, of Sparta, Tenn., and who was a regular minister of the Methodist Church in Chattanooga some years ago, when he confessed his faith in Christ and was baptized into him during my revival at St. Elmo, also favored Russell Street with one of his characteristic and stirring sermons. These people were delighted with him also. His and Garrett's work have given this church a larger vision, a brighter hope, and a stronger determination to let this congregation be second to none. May the Lord help us to open our eyes and see that we can do things if we will.

Atlanta (Ga.) Notes.

BY E. C. GOODPASTURE.

Two were baptized at the prayer-meeting service at South Pryor Street last Wednesday evening (April 5). The South Pryor brethren have recently bought a tent to use in mission meetings during the summer.

Hugh E. Garrett will begin a meeting at Rockmart, Ga., next Sunday (April 16). During the last week in March he preached in Columbus, Ga. With the coöperation of a few faithful brethren, he was able to establish a small congregation there. The prospects for the church in Columbus are promising. Brother Price, of Birmingham, Ala., is now in the midst of a meeting in Columbus. Two more meetings are planned for Columbus during this year.

J. B. Beck, who labors with the Summit, McGregor, and Brunswick congregations, sends an encouraging report of his work. The Summit brethren are making arrangements for a meeting in May.

One was restored and one took membership at West End Avenue, in Atlanta, last week.

The West End Avenue congregation will use at least three dozen copies of "Hardeman's Sermons."

Faith in the Word.

BY MRS. J. T. STANFILL.

Let me never lose faith in the word of my Lord,
The word that I love now so dearly;
Let me never lose sight of the light it affords,
That shines on my pathway so clearly.

Lord, I tremble to think how dark it would be,
How dreary and lonely my pathway;
Should I never have hopes thy dear face to see,
Of being welcomed at home in that last day.

But I shall always believe the sweet promises sure
Of a home with our Savior in heaven;
I shall never forget what our Lord did endure
When his life for all mankind was given.

And let me continue to love the sweet songs
That tell of the home over there;
May his Book be my guide and keep me from wrong,
Till I reach those bright mansions so fair.

I thank thee, dear Lord, for those who defend Thy word and uphold it forever.
May they boldly fight on for thy truth to the end,
And thy kingdom be glorified ever.

May those who would hinder the progress thereof
Be constrained thy great glory to see;
And thy word, the glad tidings, shall fill the whole earth
As the waters that cover the sea.

God's Covenant.

"And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth." (Gen. 9: 15.)

Field Notes.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

After spending over a week at my father's, I am back in the field again. My father is no better. I found the brethren I met in Hickman and Maury counties still continuing in the work of the Lord. I spent April 2 with the brethren at Bethel congregation, in Anderson's Bend, Hickman County. A brother of Brother J. M. McCaleb lives there. I ate dinner with Mr. John Bates, one of the old-timers of that neighborhood, and with whom I debated when I was a schoolboy. He said: "Well, Earnest, if you wait as long to come back to see me as you have this time, I'll not be here." That is probably true, and yet I may go first. But how my heart aches for him! For he is not a Christian.

There I found Brother John Matlock taking part in a public way. Some say he can preach a pretty good sermon. It interests me, for he was reclaimed from a life of carelessness and neglect of duty in our meeting at South Point, Maury County, in 1920.

On April 6 I arrived in Nashville to attend the meeting at the Ryman Auditorium. The great building is filled to capacity every night, and about three thousand attend the day services. Brother Hardeman is a very good speaker. Many preaching brethren were in attendance from a distance, as well as many who are not preachers.

I spent April 9 at Newbern, preaching morning and afternoon. At night I heard Brother R. L. Colley at Lemalsamac. Brother Colley is a Henderson boy, and bids fair to do much good in the world.

I will be in Crockett County for several days now.

Positive Preaching.

BY L. T. RIGHTSELL.

"Verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen." The people want to hear men in the pulpit who, having studied and believed the Word, can deliver a message in which there is no uncertain sound. "Perhaps" or "I guess so" is not what we have a right to expect from a preacher. The fact that men differ so much in opinion is only a proof that too many study carelessly or not at all that which is of vital importance to the human race. The man in the pulpit who can say, "I know," and support it by his knowledge of the Book, is the only safe teacher. This positive knowledge comes not from reading about the Bible, but by reading the Bible itself, and reading it as a whole. Jesus told his disciples that they could understand certain things, but others could not. The reason is plain. The intimate association of the disciples with the Master gave them an infallible understanding of him and his word. Others merely heard without hearing and saw without seeing. Those unlettered disciples transmitted to posterity an imperishable record of the Christ and his doings, writing not what they guessed or imagined, but what they of a certainty knew. The preacher has their testimony always before him. If, after a study of forty or fifty years, he says, "I guess," or, "I imagine," he shows that he has not studied with the Holy Spirit to guide him. Yet there are preachers now growing gray who have stopped preaching the simple gospel which they loved and taught in their young manhood. They are not safe guides.

The Pigue-Clark Debate.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

Our readers were promised a report of this debate. It was held in the Oak Grove Baptist Church, three miles from Martin, Tenn., on March 7, 8, 1922, between R. H. Pigue, Southern Methodist, of Fulton, Ky., and J. R. Clark, Southern Missionary Baptist, of Wewoka, Okla. Pigue affirmed: "The church of which I am a member is scriptural in origin, organization, doctrine, and practice." Clark had previously affirmed for two days the same proposition concerning the church of which he is a member. The debate had been halted on account of sickness in Clark's family, and I only heard the last two days.

This is an awkward proposition to affirm. It gives too much room for dodging. As might have been expected, the speakers did not come to close quarters on the Scriptures. The Scriptures did not seem to attract either one very much, except as he could use them to condemn the other fellow. If they had been required to find in the Bible the Baptist Church or the Methodist Church, either North or South, both would have been compelled to go away back and sit down. But they were nice to each other on that point.

It was interesting to note that Clark could only hit Pigue by using the same arguments we use on Pigue; and Pigue used our arguments against Clark. Pigue was right on some things and Clark was right on some; but why could not both drop their errors and come with us? For we hold all the good there is in either or both of them.

Pigue attacked Clark on the Baptist doctrine of "once in grace, always in grace," and "close communion." Against Clark's position he used Ezek. 18; John 15: 1-6; Gen. 3; 2 Sam. 11, and 12; Matt. 5: 13; 1 Cor. 9: 27, etc., to prove one could backslide and be lost after once being saved. Against the Baptist doctrine of "close communion" he used the argument that it was the Lord's table and not man's; therefore, man had neither the right to reject nor to invite concerning the Lord's table. He quoted the scripture, "Let a man examine himself," etc.

Clark attacked Pigue on three things—viz., infant baptism, sprinkling and pouring for baptism, and church organization. Naturally, Pigue could make no adequate defense of these practices, and did not try very much.

Instead of defending his own weak points, each one contented himself with gouging the other fellow in his tender spot.

This point will be interesting to young members. Clark and nearly all the Baptists contend that the church of Christ was established during the personal ministry of Christ; while Pigue and the Methodists claim it was established in the days of Abraham. As a matter of fact, both are wrong, for the church was really set up on the first Pentecost after Christ's resurrection. Pigue uses exactly the same kind of arguments to prove the church existed in the days of David as do the Baptists to prove it existed in the personal ministry of Christ. Our preachers have used Heb. 8: 5-13; Matt. 16: 18; and Heb. 9: 15-17, to prove that the church did not exist prior to the death of Christ, and that we are under a new covenant, and the building of the church was still future from Matt. 16: 18.

Now, when debating with us, the Baptists try to twist around these scriptures. But when Pigue affirmed that the church existed from the days of Abraham, Clark just squelched him with Matt. 16: 18; Heb. 8: 5-13; and Heb. 9: 15-17. The amusing thing was that there were many in the audience who had heard the debate between Brother Taylor and A. A. Jones. They knew that Taylor had used those very verses on Jones, and Jones had tried to evade the force of them. It was a very striking example of Missionary Baptists' inconsistency. Of course, Matt. 16: 18, "Upon this rock I will build my church," proves the church was not established in the days of Abraham; but it just as conclusively proves it was not established in the days of John the Baptist. Heb. 9: 15-17, "A testament is of force after men are dead," proves the Testament of Christ did not go into effect during the days of Abraham, but not any more clearly than it proves that it did not go into effect during the personal ministry of Christ. It looks strange that any one could be so inconsistent and not see it himself.

It is generally known that Baptists believe in church perpetuity—that is, that there have been Baptist churches right along since the days of John the Baptist. They are so proud of themselves over this that they seem arrogant and speak disdainfully of other sects, and even the truth itself. When Pigue tried to establish the Methodist Church in the Old Testament, Clark referred him to John Wesley in 1729, remarking that the Methodist Church was less than two hundred years old. Then Pigue referred him to 1832, and told him the church he belonged to was not one hundred years old yet—"not out of long dresses."

Clark called the Methodist Episcopal Church a grand-daughter of Rome, as Wesley lived and died an Episcopalian, and the Episcopallians split off from Rome. But Pigue showed from Baptist history that the Baptists also split off from Rome. If the Baptists accept the Anabaptists as their ancestors, then they came directly from Rome; if they accept the English Baptists, then they came from the Episcopallians. If they come to Roger Williams or John Clark, it does not help them, for both of these came from the Episcopallians. Clark twitted Pigue because the Methodists divided over slavery in 1844. Then Pigue came back at him and showed that the Baptists divided the same year over the same thing, and, turning to Clark, he said: "So we are twins."

The Baptists are, it seems to me, somewhat nearer the truth than the Methodists, but they actually seem more hostile to the Bible truths on many points than the Methodists. But that seems to be a common failing of humanity. The nearer they get to the truth without accepting it, the harder they fight it.

The Baptists will not likely want any more debates soon; at least, not in that neighborhood. There have been four debates this winter with the Baptists within five or six miles of Martin. Our men met the Baptists every time but one, and even then I think we gained strength from the debate. It was clearly seen by many that each speaker used our arguments against the other. According to Pigue, the Baptist Church is not a safe place; and according to Clark, a Methodist will certainly not land in Klondike when he leaves this mundane sphere. So there is nothing I can see for the people to do but leave both of these churches and come with us and be Christians only and members of the church you read about in the New Testament.

Abraham: The Seal of His Covenant.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

Anciently no covenant was considered complete without its sign or seal. The covenant had to be ratified, and a mark, signal, or sign, was given to keep the parties to the covenant in memory of the terms of the agreement. This sign or seal was to keep the party ever conscious of the covenant; it was to keep the obligations of the covenant fresh on the mind, lest the covenant be disobeyed or ignored. The seal of the covenant was important, and those who did not live faithful to the seal had no share in the blessings of the covenant.

Circumcision had been practiced, probably, before Jehovah gave it as a seal of his covenant with Abraham. It conferred certain political and religious privileges upon those who submitted to it. Its origin and early significance is a matter of conjecture; nothing definite can be said about it. Herodotus, the father of history, is positive about its practice among the Egyptians, Ethiopians, and Colchians. However, it is possible that these nationalities learned the practice from the descendants of Abraham. It is clear that other nations have practiced the rite of circumcision. Even to-day other nations than the Jews practice the rite. The Arabs, or descendants of Ishmael, practiced circumcision, and the Mohammedans put much stress upon the rite of circumcision. They derive much of their authority from the fact that Ishmael was circumcised. However, no nation has practiced it with such rigid discipline as the Jews.

Jehovah enjoined circumcision upon Abraham and his seed when the covenant was made. "This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee: every male among you shall be circumcised. And ye shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of a covenant betwixt me and you. And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every male throughout your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any foreigner, that is not of thy seed. He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant. And the uncircumcised male who is not circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant." (Gen. 17: 10-14.) Jehovah is specific in giving the rite of circumcision as the ratification of the covenant: "It shall be a token of a covenant betwixt me and you;" again, "my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant;" and he who neglects or rejects the rite of circumcision "hath broken my covenant." From this time on Abraham and his seed practiced the rite of circumcision as a religious rite, as "a token of a covenant betwixt" Jehovah and his people.

We are not disposed to inquire why Jehovah selected and enjoined circumcision as a token of his covenant; we know only what the Bible reveals about it. The general custom of sealing the covenant with blood has been observed. "The shedding of blood was necessary to the validity of any covenant." The rite of blood signifies the exchange of blood on the part of the contracting parties. Sometimes this exchange of blood was drunk by each party. It is not quite obvious why the shedding of blood in circumcision was made as the seal of the covenant. Some have thought that since the prosperity of the tribe depended on the successful issue of the marriage bond, that the part of the body which had so much to do with the numerical strength of Abraham's seed should be fixed upon as the seal of the covenant of blood. This is only conjecture.

In the case of Abraham there seems to have been two things connected with the seal of the covenant—the one for Abraham himself, and the other for him and all who shared with him the blessings of the covenant. The first consisted in the change of his name from "Abram," which means "high or exalted father," to that of "Abraham," "a father of a multitude of nations." At the same time that Abraham's name is changed his wife's name is changed also. She was first called "Sarai," which means, by some authorities, "contentious;" her name is now changed to "Sarah," which means "princess" or "queen." As Abraham is to be the father of many nations and as "kings shall come out of thee," his wife, Sarah, must be the mother from whom these kings shall come; so she is "princess," the destined mother of kings. The change of name was special to Abraham and Sarah and belong exclusively to them; yet the part of the seal, the rite of circumcision, belonged to the seed of Abraham. It should determine who were included in the covenant; it should be a mark of encouragement, an assurance of faith, to all of Abraham's descendants.

A seal secures the property as well as distinguishes it. There was a double significance in the rite of circumcision. As a religious act, it shows that the one upon whom it is performed belongs to Jehovah and is entitled to the blessings of the covenant; again, it secures the protection of Jehovah. Those who had the sign of this covenant bore the token of Jehovah's protection and guidance as well as his blessings. The covenant was an expression of a divine purpose which Jehovah was to carry out in and through the seed of Abraham. Abraham's seed could not invalidate this covenant by neglecting or refusing to practice circumcision without forfeiting all the blessings which attended the covenant. Abraham's fleshly seed must be kept within the seal of the covenant or be cut off from God's promises and blessings.

Like many other things in the Old Testament Scriptures, circumcision has its spiritual significance. "And Jehovah thy God will circumcise thy heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live." (Deut. 10: 6.) This shows that circumcision was to have a deeper significance than merely the cutting away of the foreskin. While it is to be a token of the covenant, it is also to reach the hearts of the people: "Thy God will circumcise thy heart, and the heart of thy seed." The circumcision of the heart was a promise that was to be fulfilled sometime in the future. The circumcision of the flesh of Abraham's seed pointed to the circumcision of the heart of all his children by faith. The prophet of Jehovah indicates that the circumcision of heart was not yet realized by Israel. He says: "All the house of Israel are uncircumcised in heart." (Jer. 9: 26.) Paul makes this use of circumcision: "And circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, not in the letter." (Rom. 2: 29.) And again: "Ye were also circumcised with a circumcision not made with hands, in the putting off of the body of the flesh, in the circumcision of Christ." (Col. 2: 11.) As the covenant included the spiritual seed of Abraham, so its sign or token also has its spiritual significance.

Supreme Power.

BY H. C. FLEMING.

All men know that power exists, also that man has power through his intelligence to understand and apply it to some degree in the execution of his plans; and that there is a limit to all his works. This done should prove to the atheist that there is a power somewhere that surpasses that of man, and that that power must be supreme, because nothing less could bring into existence all the worlds and planets of universal matter known to exist.

Through his intelligence man has been able to learn that there are other planets than the earth, and that these have regular orbits and no confusion in their motions. Here man's ability ceases; but through his intelligence he can reason that, in order for these to have been, there is of necessity a Supreme Power, or these worlds could not have been.

This reasoning cannot be successfully denied. If there ever had been a condition in which absolutely nothing existed, there never could have been anything in existence, but we know that man, animals, and matter do exist.

The intelligence of man makes him far above all beasts and creeping things on the earth. He can control and direct earthly affairs by the laws that apply to them; therefore, is it unreasonable that a Supreme Power should control, by the laws he has made, the motions of the worlds, or that he can suspend all laws at his will?

Life on the earth must have come from a superior intelligence to that of man, and the laws that govern it from the same source.

From the above reasoning I conclude that there is of necessity one all-powerful Supreme Power. Nothing else will satisfy the inquiring mind of man.

"As Ye Go, Preach."

Down here in Florida there are few disciples as compared with Tennessee and Texas, and the few are widely scattered. The faithful few must, of necessity, contend against ignorance and prejudice. As an example, some people very well informed on other matters honestly believe that the little group of Christians here at Ocala are in a class somewhat similar to the Mormons or the "Holy Rollers." I am trying to disillusionize the sentiment by preaching the truth in love. You may easily detect the look of agreeable surprise on the faces of some visitors who come to the meeting for the first time. It is plain that they expected to hear and to see something quite different from what they do hear. Perhaps it is because a large tent is usually connected with a circus that they expect some kind of a "demonstration" rather than the simple gospel story. It is good to note that they keep coming back.

One appreciable thing about these Florida brethren is that nearly every one of them will lead in prayer, teach a class in the Bible, or make a talk when called upon. When it becomes necessary, they will visit an infant congregation where a leader is needed and conduct the services for the day. We are reminded of our Savior's instructions under the first commission, which are certainly implied in the last and great commission: "As ye go, preach." The New Testament ideal is embodied in the words, "Every Christian a preacher." This does not mean that every Christian is expected to be a pulpiteer. But if the will is there, he can serve Christ in ways more effective. We can preach in our daily walk. We often hear of a man going somewhere to preach, but let us not forget that there should be preaching in going. It was a custom of Francis of Assisi to say to any acquaintance whom he met, "Brother, let us go to town and preach," just as simply and naturally spoken as if he meant to suggest a pleasant stroll. That was the Master's way. Cut out his wayside ministries, and you cut out the most beautiful and effective part of his earthly life. He wishes his disciples to form the same habit: to preach as we go to business, to shop, to market. In this way we may almost unconsciously disseminate lessons of truth, honesty, and faithfulness.

Whether we think it or not, our very manner of speech contains a lesson for others. For that reason Paul wrote: "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt." It is not enough to speak correctly, although this is to be striven for. Grace means more than grammar. We are saved by God's grace, and there are embodied in this term all the Godlike qualities. The man who seasons his speech with grace and with salt is far more effective than the merely polished speaker. There is a wide difference between saying something and having something to say. The apostle's desire is that we may all have something worth while to talk about and know how "to answer every man." Both in speech and in gestures there is such a thing as the Christian note. The ancient Arab included in his prayer the words: "Pardon us the culpable winking of the eye." Even gesture has a moral implication.

There can be no doubt but what the constant practice of the Savior's rule to preach as we go will bring good results. It often develops that the young man or woman who repeatedly turns a deaf ear to the pulpit is brought to the Master's feet through the efficacy of father's example and mother's prayer.

"I Thank Thee, Father."

Twice during the years of his walk among men does our Savior use the words, "I thank thee, Father." Since he is not only the head of the church, "the fullness of him that filleth all in all," but is also our Model and in a sense must be regarded as the First Christian, it should be interesting and inspiring to his followers to study the New Testament narrative and note the things that Jesus was thankful for. Just before he performed the miracle of raising Lazarus from the dead, he reverently lifted his eyes toward heaven and said: "Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me." As a matter of fact, Jesus spoke these words before the miracle was wrought. But so great is Jesus' trust in God that he speaks as if Lazarus had already come from the dead. With Jesus there was not a shade or a shadow of a doubt but what God would answer his prayer. "And I knew," he adds, "that thou hearest me always." This is our Master's example to us of unfailing trust. One reason why many of our prayers go unanswered is because we lack this spirit of perfect faith in God. We pray, but we pray with mental limitations. We have never grasped in full confidence of heart the blessed truth that "no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." Note the teaching of Jesus: "Again I say unto you, that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." It is really more difficult than we think to find two persons even among Christians who agree perfectly upon some good thing that is needed. To find three of the same mind is harder still. And should the three finally agree upon the thing to be asked for, it often happens that one of the group lacks the perfect trust in God that Jesus exemplified. Brethren, let us strive to emulate the spirit of Him who said, "And I knew that thou hearest me always"—not once in a while, but always. That is the Master's word.

Consider now the other recorded occasion when Jesus said, "I thank thee, Father." That is just after the woes pronounced upon Chorazin and Bethsaida and Capernaum. And what is Jesus thankful for this time? Here are his exact words: "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight." Have you and I ever felt really good over the fact that the majority of God's faithful children are found among the poorer and uneducated classes? Is it not true that the poverty of some of God's people has been a kind of thorn in our flesh when we were discussing relative growth with our religious neighbors? Are we ourselves as poor in spirit as we ought to be? Do we not find ourselves striving sometimes to create the impression that our church is much bigger than the world thinks it is, both in point of wealth and numbers? Is there not a disposition even among the best of us to hanker after those things that make for worldly pride and show? Then we need to read again and again the Savior's prayer until we ourselves come to that point where we, too, can say: "I thank thee, O Father, . . . that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Read it into our very souls until the worldly insignificance of our cause, which many are prone to despise, shall seem good in our sight as it did to Jesus. As Paul put it, we need to see our calling as it is. "For behold your calling, brethren, that not many wise after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God chose the foolish things of the world, that he might put to shame them that are wise; and God chose the weak things of the world, that he might put to shame the things that are strong; and the base things of the world, and the things that are despised, did God choose, yea and the things that are not, that he might bring to naught the things that are: that no flesh should glory before God." (1 Cor. 1: 26-29.)

There are far too many people in this world who are trying to wear the cloak of the penitent publican over the hypocritical heart of the Pharisee. They may not say so in that many words, "God, I thank thee that I am not as other men," but that is the mental reservation their whole conduct portrays. Their attitude of pride and self-conceit speaks louder than words. There is nothing about them that even remotely suggests the heart cry of the humble and the penitent: "God be merciful to me a sinner." And just as it was when Jesus taught this lesson, it is this self-conceited class who cover their sins that presume more than any other class to tell other people how to behave themselves. Without doubt, they grieve the heart of the great Creator and make thoughtful people sick at the stomach.

A Decided Increase.

There is much need for more earnest work in the Master's vineyard. The people should be aroused to a sense of their duties and responsibilities. So many act as though there were no such thing as sin in the world. Christians should be more in earnest and should use every possible means to convict the world of sin.

The press wields a wonderful influence for either good or evil. It is a mistake not to circulate literature which has an elevating and uplifting influence. Those papers which teach the word of God in its simplicity should have a wide circulation. Judging from the increase in the circulation of our literature and the Gospel Advocate, Christians are appreciating this fact. There has been a decided increase in all our publications for the months of January, February, and March of 1922 over the same months of 1921. Many new names have recently been added to the list of subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, and very few old subscribers have discontinued their subscriptions. This is as it should be. But we are anxious to greatly increase the number of new subscribers. The expense of publishing a first-class weekly religious journal is very great; so, of necessity, we must increase our receipts. The main consideration, however, is that Christians really need a first-class paper to help them in the dissemination of the gospel. We are counting on the hearty cooperation of all lovers of the truth in the work of increasing the circulation of the Gospel Advocate.

For the encouragement of our workers we are making the following offers:

- (1) Send us one new subscriber for one year, accompanied by $3, and we will give you a first-class fountain pen.
- (2) Send us two new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2 each, and we will give you the fountain pen.
- (3) Send us twenty-five yearly subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, accompanied by fifty dollars, for which we will send you a set of Matthew Henry's "Commentary on the Bible." Nine of the twenty-five subscribers may be renewals if preferred by the agent.

Go to work at once. People are hungering for good papers. The world needs the gospel of Christ. Let us be active and faithful in giving it to them.

Editorial

The "Movie" World and Spirituality in the Churches.

BY M. O. K.

The sensible and timely article of Brother C. E. Holt on the question, "The 'Movies'—Are They Harmful?" which appeared in our issue of March 30, 1922, discusses matters too vital and far-reaching in their importance to be passed, at this time, without further notice. Personally, I thank Brother Holt for the article, and trust that every reader of the Gospel Advocate has carefully perused it. If any failed to do so, let them turn back and read it yet. I make it the occasion of this editorial, that I may re-emphasize some of its timely teaching and discuss still further the general theme, which, at this particular time, as it seems to me, challenges the most serious consideration of Christians.

I wish to say, first of all, that the serious situation created by the "movie" world and its appalling influence over the people of our time suggests the heading of this article. I use the word "spirituality" advisedly, and I use it in opposition to the word "carnality." These two words represent the irrepressible conflict which is now on. From all the indications in "movie" world activity to-day and the hold which it seems to have upon multitudes of Christians, I have not a doubt that, in the exact ratio of its rapid rise and influence in the modern world, there has been a corresponding decline of spirituality and interest in the churches. Moreover, I have not a doubt that it is one of the most blighting and paralyzing curses that ever fell upon the churches.

Now, while I do not wish to abate one whit from this strong language, yet it is proper that I should explain sufficiently at this point to prevent a hurtful misunderstanding. I do not condemn, as wrong in itself, the principle of pictorial exhibition as a means or method of imparting and teaching truth. On the contrary, I not only regard it as wholly right and proper in itself, but as one of the most efficient methods of teaching truth and imparting information employed in the modern world. Hence, let it be distinctly understood that I am not here concerned with, nor am I now discussing the right or wrong of, the principle involved in picture-show exhibitions; but I am vitally concerned with the "movie" world situation which confronts the churches of to-day. No matter how harmless and right and proper the principle is, that has nothing whatever to do with the fact that the forces of evil have not only captured the method and are now dominating the world with a wrong and hurtful use of it, but they have gained an ascendancy and created a situation which threatens the destruction of spirituality in the churches, and it is this situation with which we have to deal. Let the reader ponder again this significant statement of fact in Brother Holt's article:

When we are confronted with the truth that a silly, clownish young man in the service of a film company is paid more money for his nonsensical performances than is the president of a large university, or than is paid to the President of the United States of America, it should cause us to pause and ask the reason why.

Exactly so, and Christians especially should pause here and think. See also the following equally significant statement from his article:

This moving-picture business affects every class of society, from the highest to the lowest. It recently walked into the official family of President Harding and captured his Postmaster General, Mr. Hayes. Mr. Hayes sold himself for the handsome (pitiful) sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year. That almost takes one's breath. I am glad Mr. Hayes was not a preacher. It would be a blow to the "ministry." Just think a moment! How can that great cancer on our national life afford it? From what source or sources do they acquire so much wealth as to enable them to pay one man such an enormous amount of money? My brethren and sisters, this money comes out of the pockets of the people. The deluded public pay the bills. Do you know that millions of professed Christians pour their hard-earned money into the laps of that voluptuous and soul-destroying machine?

That our readers may the better appreciate such statements, I here present some money statistics and other facts in the "movie" world industry of to-day. As shown in the Literary Digest of June 4, 1921, "there are more than sixteen thousand motion-picture theaters in the United States," with about "seventeen thousand theaters in the rest of the world." Then, look at the following statement:

Theaters in this country have a seating capacity of more than 5,400,000. On the average, this is filled several times daily, and it is estimated that the theater owners take in each week a total of $14,500,000, or an average of over $2,000,000 a day. This makes a total annual motion-picture theater admissions expenditure of $750,000,000.

Just think of that vast sum of money, reaching the startling figures of $2,000,000 every day! No wonder they can pay Mr. Hayes $150,000 a year. They can pay that big yearly salary out of one day's earnings and have $1,850,000 left! Yes, as a matter of fact, they can employ thirteen men, each at a salary of $150,000 a year, and pay for it all out of one day's earnings and have $50,000 left! In fact, what is it the "movie" world cannot do that money will do? And let not our readers think that these figures are either imaginary or exaggerated, for we are reliably informed that "this estimate is supported by the records of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue."

Now, in spite of the fact that unobjectionable things are sometimes placed on the boards which, in and of themselves, it would be entirely proper to see, yet, in view of the gigantic scale on which worldliness and sometimes immorality are upheld in the "movie" world as it is conducted to-day, it is impossible, it seems to me, for Christians to patronize them at all without putting their influence on the wrong side of things. I am aware that, at this particular time, this is an unpopular position to occupy, and I may go to an extreme that is not necessary; but, with no further light on the subject than is now before me, I feel that this course is necessary in order that I may be infallibly safe. I say frankly to our readers that it is this sacred principle and the solemn warnings of God's word against any wrong use of our influence that deters me from seeing some things which, under other circumstances, I would feel at perfect liberty to see. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. . . . For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the vainglory of life, is not of the Father." (1 John 2: 15, 16.) If the despiritualizing and sometimes immoral tendencies of the modern picture-show craze are not a part of the world condemned by such passages, then I say frankly that I do not know what such passages mean, and they are practically a dead letter to me. Before contributing anything to that $2,000,000 a day, Christians would do well to pause and think.

The Review of O. E. Payne's Book.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The advocates of instrumental music in Christian worship have been defeated and driven from every position they have ever taken in their efforts to sustain their practice. The writer has been, to some extent at least, a diligent student of this matter for quite a number of years, and has noted the different positions assumed by such advocates, and the ease and effectiveness with which these positions have been refuted by the truth. Having been compelled to yield ground in every contest with the opposition to such music under the reign of Christ, they at last took refuge behind the Greek verb "psallo," rendered "sing" in the New Testament, and felt themselves secure in their contention based upon the meaning of this Greek word.

O. E. Payne, one of the champions of instrumental music in Christian worship, comes forward with a book written on the subject, which was heralded with great acclaim by such advocates as the end of all controversy on the subject—yea, the final word—and the matter must remain settled in favor of such music for all time to come! The author of this book boasted of his learned research among the eminent scholars of the past and present, claiming to have given to the world more information on the meaning of the word "psallo" than any man living or dead.

But, in the providence of God, and unfortunately for Mr. Payne's wonderful (?) research among the archives of scholastic literature, there happened to be living upon the earth at this time a Christian man, a gentleman of lofty and noble ideals, who under no circumstances could be induced to misrepresent an author living or dead, and whose scholarly attainments coupled with a thorough knowledge of God's word and one of the keenest analytical and logical minds of any age, has reviewed Mr. Payne's book. That man is none other than M. C. Kurfees, one of the esteemed editors of this journal, and from whose trenchant pen multiplied thousands have profited. Mr. Payne most certainly did not stop to consider the manner of man he was dealing with when he undertook to malign the character and belittle and discredit the scholarship of M. C. Kurfees, which he repeatedly does upon the pages of his book. Never, within my knowledge, has there appeared a more thorough and effective exposure of one's lack of information and even candor in handling the writings of others than M. C. Kurfees has done in his review of O. E. Payne's book. He shows Mr. Payne to be wholly incompetent to deal with the lexicographers and classical writers in general, and that he woefully and miserably misrepresents and perverts the lexicons and other writers from whom he quotes.

Payne's book was not reviewed because it possesses either merit or strength, but because of requests coming from over the country, and because of the possible harm it might do in deceiving the thoughtless and unlearned. I am frank to say, if I were the author of Mr. Payne's book, after seeing the overwhelming refutation and exposure of its lack of candor in dealing with the writings of others, I would feel humiliated and regret most deeply that I had offered such a production to the world. By his efforts to sustain an unscriptural and unwarranted practice in the worship of God under Christ he has placed himself before the public in cold type in an exceedingly unenviable light. There is but one safe and manly course for Mr. Payne to adopt—viz., apologize for imposing such a book on the public and beg forgiveness for the way he has misused the writings of others. The man seems absolutely blind to his own gross contradictions and inconsistencies which have been so clearly and forcefully pointed out by M. C. Kurfees. In fact, Kurfees has shown most conclusively that all of Payne's witnesses, when permitted to testify fully and in their own language, are decidedly against Payne's contention.

While M. C. Kurfees has contributed to permanent Christian literature much valuable matter, yet, in the judgment of very many, this review of O. E. Payne's book is one of the most valuable pieces of literary work he has ever done. If I may be permitted to say it, this review is, in my judgment, the final word on the authoritative meaning of the word "psallo," translated "sing" in the New Testament. Every preacher in the land should procure a copy of this review, which is now in book form and sold by the McQuiddy Printing Company.

The Christian who never troubles to be pleasant, and whose temper is uncertain, is not deeply religious, no matter how much he or she may think so.—Exchange.

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY FOR OUR READERS

The greatest preachers of the past two centuries attribute much of their inspiration and usefulness to Matthew Henry's Commentary on the whole Bible. Born in the seventeenth century, his name and his work still live and are household words. Thousands of homes treasure this commentary second only to the Bible, and many a man traces his right start to the loving advice of Matthew Henry.

Charles H. Spurgeon said: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering sparrows around an old gable toward the close of autumn." Dr. Philip Schaff, compiler of Schaff's Bible Dictionary, pronounces it "the best practical and devotional commentary for English readers."

The management of the Gospel Advocate is fortunate in securing twenty-five sets of this unrivaled commentary, which will be sent as a premium to every reader who will send twenty-five new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2 per year. This is undoubtedly the most attractive commentary offer ever made. You will receive six portable volumes of twelve hundred pages each, large, clear, unbroken type, with substantial Roxborough binding. If you wish to pay cash, the price for the six volumes is $17.50, not prepaid. When sent as a premium, we pay all charges.

"God's plan depends upon man."

Our true nationality is mankind.—H. G. Wells.

"Christ is either Lord of all or he is not Lord at all."

There were two restorations at Charlotte Avenue, this city, on Sunday morning.

W. N. Ferguson is in a meeting at Sixth Avenue and Buchanan Street, this city.

Joe L. Netherland reports the work in Miami, Fla., as moving along nicely. He will be in Tennessee about June 20.

C. M. Pullias began a meeting at Lawrence Avenue, this city, last Monday night. We are expecting a fine meeting there.

From Ira Wommack, Sulphur, Okla., April 16: "My audiences at Byars were fine yesterday. One lady from the Baptists made the confession and was baptized."

Leonard Jackson preached on Sunday morning to a good audience at Second and Lindsley Avenues. There was one confession, one restoration, and two by statement.

There was a large audience at Russell and Ninth Streets, this city, on Sunday morning. One confession, one restoration, and two from the Vine Street Christian Church.

Hugh E. Garrett, of Atlanta, Ga., preached at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Sunday morning. There was one confession, one from the Baptists, and two restored.

A. D. Dies, of Oakman, Ala., will begin a meeting at Eighth Avenue, North, this city, on Sunday, April 30. Following this meeting he will conduct a meeting at Twenty-second Avenue, North.

L. S. Thurmond changes his address from Henderson, Tenn., to Steele, Mo., Box 144. He reports the work in Missouri as moving along nicely, with good crowds at each service and much interest manifested.

Brother McQuiddy returned from Texas on last Friday looking much better than when he went away. He expects to continue his rest at home for a time. It is hard, though, for an industrious man to rest when work is piled up all around him.

J. Paul Slayden will not teach in Columbia Military Academy after this term, but expects to devote his entire time to preaching. He will likely evangelize for a time, and should be kept busy in the field. For the present he can be addressed at Columbia, Tenn.

John T. Underwood preached at Russellville, Ala., the first Lord's day in this month. He reports the congregation there as working. On the second Lord's day he preached at Florence, Ala. He will work for the Gospel Advocate wherever he goes, and we trust that the brethren will help him in his work.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Norred, of Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1922, a son, who will wear his father's name—C. Arthur Norred, Jr. It is to be hoped that the Lord is not trying to take Brother Norred out of the ministry by giving him a son to take his place. May there be two C. A. Norreds preaching the gospel some day from the same family.

Man is a free moral agent, and therefore has the right of choice. David said: "I have chosen the way of truth: thy judgments have I laid before me." Truth brings freedom to men and to nations. "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Men may think they are free when they are in bondage. Error binds men, but truth frees them.

David asks the question, "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?" and answers it in the same verse by saying: "By taking heed thereto according to thy word." There is nothing more to be desired in a young man than to have clean ways. Solomon said, "A wise son maketh a glad father;" and it is also true that a good father will rejoice over a clean, manly son.

From Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, April 10: "Our work here is getting along nicely. We had the best congregations at both services yesterday that we have had since I began work here. Our young folks are taking a better interest than ever before, and we feel that the Lord is blessing our efforts. We are also doing some mission work. I preach at Luttie on Saturday night and in the afternoon on the second Lord's day in each month, and at Winulser in the afternoon on the fourth Lord's day. I go to Estelline next Lord's day, and will preach at Carey in the afternoon."

F. B. Srygley preached on Sunday morning and Sunday afternoon at Ashland City, Tenn. The Methodists and Baptists had united in an Easter service which cut the audience down to only the faithful members. It is strange that some people had rather do almost anything in the church than what the Lord commands. The apostles taught that the disciples came together upon the first day of the week to break bread, or to have the Lord's Supper; but their religious neighbors of Ashland City had rather observe Easter Sunday, which came from the heathen through the Catholics, than to do that which came to us through the inspired apostles.

Now that the big meeting is over in Nashville, it is to be hoped that the brethren will go back to work in the little meetings. We need not expect to find the enthusiasm and the loud singing that characterized the big meeting when we get back to our little faithful few. True Christianity is shown in the little meeting rather than in the big one. How will the faithful feel when only a dozen, perhaps, shall gather at the prayer meeting and not men enough present to sing bass? Don't forget the little meeting, brethren. Remember that God will be worshiped in his church every Lord's day whether the big crowd is there singing. "When the roll is called up yonder I'll be there," or not.

From A. B. Lipscomb, Ocala, Fla., April 15: "I am glad to report that after a week of hard work and encountering many obstacles the meeting here took on new life. There have been some confessions and baptisms, and we have located some members who will cast in their lot with the little band who worship in the courthouse. J. P. Prevatt, of Gainesville, Fla., has helped us wonderfully in the conduct of the song service. The brethren here are planning for a more aggressive movement and will arrange for regular preaching on Lord's days. They need and deserve encouragement. Prejudice runs high, but 'speaking the truth in love' always wins. I am to begin next Lord's day at Valdosta, Ga."

J. W. Dunn, Dyersburg, Tenn., writes as follows: "Brother Hardeman's sermons in the Ryman Auditorium, in Nashville, reaches many and effects wonderful good, but publishing them in full in two daily papers carries the message to many more thousands. An Episcopal rector recently commended in very strong language the ones he had read in the Tennesseean. A traveling salesman for the Cable Piano Company out of Cincinnati, a Methodist, who passed through Nashville, praised the work of the churches of Christ in Nashville in strong language and the character of preaching as being far superior to that of Gipsy Smith or Billy Sunday, and he is an admirer of both. This work will do good in a greater scope than any effort before in our day."

After our Savior had washed the disciples' feet, he said: "For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." (John 13: 15.) The way to profit by an example is not to repeat over and over the act, but to get the principle and apply it in everything. If a disciple's face needs washing worse than his feet, and if for any cause he could not wash it himself, the principle taught by the Savior in this example can be applied by washing his face instead of his feet. The teacher that puts an example in addition on the blackboard for his class of beginners does not expect these little ones to continue putting the same figures down and adding them, but he expects them to take the example and apply it in all problems of addition. So in this example, the lesson taught is the lesson of humble service to our fellow man.

The Hardeman-Pullias meeting closed on Sunday night. The immediate results as given out by those who had this matter in charge were one hundred and fifty-eight baptisms and twenty-five restorations at the Auditorium. In addition to these, there have been about fifty added to the churches in Nashville at the Sunday-morning services during the meeting, and there will, no doubt, be many more added as a result of the meeting. It would not be unreasonable to suppose that the ultimate results of the meeting would be one thousand in and around Nashville. Every one who has taken an interest in the meeting is delighted with it. Brother Hardeman has greatly endeared himself to all the brethren and to many others of the city and surrounding country. The audiences were good all the time, but the brethren outside of Nashville did their part in attending and helping to make an audience. It was certainly a great meeting.

The Singing Evangelist. No. 2.

By C. W. SEWELL.

Our querist further asks: "Do you favor singing evangelists, such as do no work, but travel with these noted evangelists and sing in their meetings? Don't you believe that such will have a down pull on the cause in that all churches are being educated to where they think they must have these singers? Don't you believe, and can't you see, that such is retarding and discouraging all home forces? Do you think the cause is as 'soul saving,' being put so much in these hands mentioned? They come and go and then—"

In replying to these questions, I shall deal with them in a general way and not answer each question specifically.

There are two sides to this question, as there is to nearly all others. Much of our customs regarding the song service have grown on us by degrees, almost imperceptibly. I can remember when the song books used in the churches did not contain the music, or tune, but only the words. Such was the case when I began preaching. The books, too, were generally scarce. The people sang mostly from memory. The custom then was for the preacher to select a song and first read it aloud—the entire song. Then he would "give out," or re-read, two lines. Then he or some brother in the audience would "pitch the tune," and the congregation would sing the two lines, then pause till the preacher would "give out" two more lines, when they would again sing. They would proceed in this manner till all of the song was sung. This was one extreme. From this we have evolved to the pipe organ, the choir loft, and professional song leader. The singing evangelist is a sort of middle ground between these two extremes. It would be ludicrous—yea, even wrong—for us to revert to the former method of procedure. It was all right then. They did the best they could; they praised God in song, and I doubt not that God accepted their service.

But the singing evangelist—is there really a need for him? I have thought along this line much as our querist does. For years I have doubted the propriety of developing such a character for much the same reasons given by our querist, with the additional reason of wasted finance. When I say "wasted finance," I mean that the money paid to the professional singer is wasted if we could have done without him. But could we? Well, meetings were held and people were converted before he came into existence. At least two-thirds of my work as an evangelist was done before I came in contact with the hired singer. Yet I am not sure but that in some instances the work would have been better had I had his assistance. Being unable to lead in song myself, I have on some occasions had to preach without any singing. But I am not very favorably impressed with the imported singer; yet I have offered but little opposition, because I feared my opposition might possibly do more harm than the thing I was opposing. Then I knew that my influence could not check the tide, and it is unpleasant to keep up a losing fight.

The only way I know to successfully combat the custom is to have a good singing teacher come and teach the congregation to sing, and thus develop local talent that can lead the singing. Two congregations near here last year imported a man to lead in the song service during their meetings. This year they had men to come and teach them to sing; and this year they did not need outside help, but had home talent that was able to lead the singing, and do it successfully. As good congregational singing obviates the necessity for an organ, so the training of home talent obviates the necessity for the singing evangelist. So I will say, if you have home talent, use it; if you have not, you had better secure a good song leader for your meeting than to let your singing be a failure.

Personal Notes.

T. W. Phillips writes from Alba, Texas: "I am in a meeting at this place, with prospects very good. I go next to Bonham, Texas, for a meeting, and will be busy now until the churches go into 'winter quarters' again. After school is out, my son, Tom Wendell Phillips, will be my helper in the work. He will lead the singing and otherwise aid me."

W. L. Johnson, Burkburnett, Texas, says that the Burkburnett church has been much strengthened during the first quarter of 1922, and that this healthy condition is mainly attributed to the efficient preaching and local work done by D. S. Ligon, who is working regularly with that congregation. Large crowds and good interest are manifested every Lord's day.

J. E. Wainwright writes from Sinton, Texas: "I recently spent ten days with the saints at Argenta, Texas, and baptized eight. Hatton B. Gist lives at Argenta. He is a good man and an able preacher, and should be kept busy all the time. He is free of dangerous hobbies, but very zealous and spiritual-minded. We baptized two here yesterday (April 9). The work grows."

From J. S. Daugherty, Kirbyville, Texas, April 10: "Two good services at Honey Island yesterday. I am to preach in East Jasper next Friday night; in Shelby County, Saturday and Sunday; and at Bronson, Monday night, on my return home. The cause of Christ is taking on new life throughout East Texas and Western Louisiana. Baby and I were very sick with the 'flue' about ten days last month, but are both up and strong again."

From Ira L. Winterrowd, Cordell, Okla., April 11: "The work in the Western Oklahoma Christian College has been progressing steadily and successfully since the beginning of last September. The first day's enrollment was over eighty, and the number has increased to about one hundred and sixty. The daily attendance each day at the present is one hundred and forty-six. We think no student body has ever excelled this one in conduct and interest, considering the fact that so many had never been in a Bible school before and had come from different public schools. The faculty has worked together in an unusually harmonious manner, though they had not all met before the opening. All have sacrificed and tried hard to do good work. All are Christians. We are very much in love with this work. And the city of Cordell is seemingly one hundred per cent behind the school."

The following interesting report comes from O. M. Reynolds, Plainview, Texas, under date of April 10: "The cause of Christ in Plainview and Hale County is moving onward and upward. Wednesday nights are pleasantly and profitably spent in a genuine training service for the older members, and a similar meeting is had on Thursday nights for the young people. If the church of to-morrow has a trained, efficient membership and leadership, the training must be given to-day. We have had some extra fine services in three country communities. One elder and a large number of other members of the home church help me in these services. The Kress church is to cooperate with the Plainview church in supporting a singer and me in holding at least two mission meetings in this ripe field. During the last week in March I preached at Kress, where I preach monthly, with unusual interest, good attendance, and three additions to the church. There is a brighter day near for the Kress saints. I am to preach in their summer meeting. On the last two Lord's days I preached to large audiences at home, with one fine young man restored from the Christian Church. Last week was pleasantly spent at Lubbock in a special meeting with the great Lubbock church and a large number of South Plains Christians. There were three lectures a day, and the most vital subjects were discussed in a satisfactory way. John T. Smith is the efficient evangelist of the Lubbock church, and is held in high esteem by both church and world. He has led the Lubbock forces to certain success. We were cordially entertained by the Lubbock saints. I am to begin a week's meeting at Bledsoe to-night."

God's Healings.

There's healing by the waters,
There's healing in the trees,
There's healing with the blossoms,
There's healing in the breeze,
There's healing on the mountain,
There's healing in the light,
There's healing 'neath the hemlock,
There's healing in the night.

There's healing in the city,
There's healing where 'tis still,
There's healing on the ocean,
There's healing by the rill,
There's healing in the desert,
There's healing in the rain,
There's healing by the fountain,
And in the rustling grain.

There's healing all about us,
In sunshine and in storm;
God heals his weary children,
When they of strength are shorn.
Thank God for all his healings—
For the flutter of the trees!
Thank God for all his healings—
His winds, his flowers, his seas!

Crow Made Ship Its Home.

Many years ago, as the whaling ship Diana was returning from a voyage in the Arctic Ocean, her captain and crew were surprised one day to see a crow, in a state of great exhaustion, flutter into the rigging. The nearest land was more than two hundred miles away, so such a visitor was quite unexpected.

With great care and gentleness the bird was caught; and after receiving as much attention as any storm-tossed traveler would require, it was offered its liberty again. But, though thoroughly restored to health and vigor, it refused to leave the ship. With loud caws of contentment it would hop about the deck as though that were its real home; and when darkness settled down upon the ocean, it retired into the rigging, there to roost as comfortably as any of its stay-at-home relations among their leafy elms.

When the Shetland Islands were reached, the captain of the Diana sent his feathered passenger on shore, naturally thinking that this would be in accordance with its wishes; but the next day, when the ship was forty miles farther on the route to Hull and was quite out of sight, the sailors saw a dark speck in the sky which grew and grew, till, to their astonishment and delight, the passenger they had left behind fluttered joyously on board, cawing its satisfaction at reaching home once more, if not reproving them for giving it the slip.—Exchange.

Foolish Grievances.

A grievance collector is not only gathering in new troubles all the time, but cherishes the old ones as well—gets them out every day or two, pinches and punches them to see how sore they are, and then holds them up for anybody to see who will look, much as a small boy does a sore toe.

A certain grouchy old collector of grievances has told me four times in the last two months about a fellow who killed his dog twenty years ago—and he gets fighting mad every time he tells it. And there is a woman who has been recounting for fifteen years how a certain friend slighted her at a party, and she always adds vindictively: "And I've never spoken to her since—she isn't worth noticing, anyway."

Seems strange, doesn't it, that one should so clutter his life with silly grievances, fill his heart with bitterness, and occupy his mind with wrongs, real or imaginary, long passed? The brain is one's workshop. Thought and emotion are the tools, the will is the motive power. Here we must work out the problems of to-day's work and of future living; here we must consider, judge, resolve; here we must face the truth and grow into its likeness.

Unless this workshop is cleared for action, how can we concentrate our efforts on the things worth while? If thought is busy with silly slights, small grievances, supposed wrongs, how can it be free and strong for the day's work? If the feelings are embittered by a constant array of sour, sore grudges, what chance is there to win that cordial liking, the feeling of kinship necessary both for success and happiness? And if the will is kept busy sharpening retorts, hammering our boluses, and dressing boomerangs to fling at imaginary enemies, what strength is left to do with might the work the hands find to do?

Out with the rubbish! Let not the sun go down on thy wrath. Most of the insults were never meant, few of the slights ever intended; most of even the real wrongs against us do not appear wrong from the other fellow's viewpoint. And whether the grievances are real or imaginary, it is just as hurtful and silly to go on collecting them. Forget them, let them slip from the mind, make little of them, laugh at them—forgive them.

Those who learn to live and work and love, whether the winds blow east or west, whether the sky is fair or stormy, whether the world smiles or frowns, nods or winks, are invincible. A clean, pure heart, and a sweet, poised temper turn grievances into favors—or, at worst, make of them jokes.

There are many things that it is foolish to collect, but the silliest of all is grievances.—Parish Visitor.

Mystery of "Vanishing River."

One of the most remarkable rivers in the world flows through the northern part of Mexico. It borders the great Mexican desert, and to reach it one need travel only one day's journey on horseback from the Rio Grande, which marks the southern boundary of the United States in that region. The extraordinary river in question has its source in the hills bordering the desert. It flows southward for some twenty miles as smoothly as any well-behaved river, but, suddenly, as it flows between high bluffs, it becomes whirling rapids—rapids so strong and so dangerous that no man has ever been brave enough to attempt to cross the rushing waters.

One follows the rapids, as he walks along the bluff on either side, for about two miles, and then that river vanishes utterly. Hence the name, "Vanishing River." It disappears suddenly, mysteriously, completely, into the earth itself, and not into a cave, as one would suppose. Scientists have tried in vain to ascertain where that river goes. All that they have yet announced as the result of their explorations is that the river seems to drop sheer into the earth, as over the brink of a bottomless abyss, and that this Vanishing River is the most amazing body of water known to geographers.—Exchange.

The Will to Do.

We know the path wherein our feet should press;
Across our hearts are written Thy decrees;
Yet now, O Lord, be merciful to bless
With more than these.

Grant us the will to fashion as we feel;
Grant us the strength to labor as we know;
Grant us the purpose ribbed with steel
To strike the blow.

Knowledge we ask not—knowledge Thou has sent;
But, Lord, the will—there lies our bitter need;
Give us to build above the deep intent,
The deed, the deed. —The Spectator.

Romans 12: 1.

BY W. D. BILLS.

In the former chapters of his letter to the Roman Christians, Paul had tried to correct the Jewish idea that salvation or justification was a matter of merit. He endeavored to teach them that it is humanly impossible to merit justification. They were to learn that grace was the important factor in the matter of salvation.

With the eleventh chapter he closes the argumentative portion of the letter, and in this verse tries to impress upon them the great importance of personal and constant consecration. If we are to attribute justification to grace, it would be only natural to expect that our appreciation would be shown by service. Having brought the Jewish mind up to the realization that justification was not a matter of merit, the apostle was in splendid position to show that they were to reciprocate God's grace by constant service.

The splendid and humble character of the apostle is seen in the expression, "I beseech you." With his inspiration and authority, he had every right to say, "I command you;" but he chose the sweeter and more brotherly admonition, "I beseech you." Authority is sweeter when expressed in entreaty. If Christianity is a matter of form, it is also a matter of the heart; if it is a matter of law, it is also a matter of conscience. Paul must have been a great Christian; for in this, with all his wisdom and inspiration, he found no place to display selfish authority.

Yet he would not have them trust too much in their own strength and wisdom, but, instead, to the sum of the great blessings God has revealed to us in the gospel system. This is clearly established by the expression, "by the mercies of God." Not only are we saved by his mercy, but through his mercies all of our feeble sacrifices are accepted. God has made rich and wonderful provisions for his children which the great apostle holds out as inducements to trust and faithful service. It is only through the mercies of God that we are allowed even the right to worship and serve God. In all of our work in his glorious cause, we are not to be unmindful that his mercies and providence are over us. His eyes are constantly over us and his ears ever open to our prayers.

The next thought is to us probably the most important. It is more blessed to give than to receive, and we are here admonished to give ourselves to the service of Christ. Christ has died for us; we are not our own, but have been bought with a price; and Paul does not ask too much when he asks that we present our bodies as living sacrifices. By the term "living" Paul is not trying to contrast our sacrifices with "dead" sacrifices, but to show that our service must be faithful and constant—living. We are not to present them once and no more, nor are we to present them periodically, but continually. Christian service is a constant thing, and its need is ever imperative. There should be no times of rest and relaxation, but, instead, our members should be faithfully and constantly used as instruments in the service of God.

We are told that the Jerusalem church "continued steadfastly." Not only did they continue in the apostles' teaching, but they continued steadfastly. Our great need is for men and women who can be depended upon at all times. Spasmodic religion and New Testament Christianity are not to be confused. Not only was the Philippian church faithful while Paul was present, but more so after he left. "Ye have always obeyed," says he, "not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence." This is the type of Christianity which will be found when Christians present their bodies as living sacrifices.

The Christian life is presented as a great warfare. Between the forces of right and wrong—God and Satan—there are no neutral grounds and no flags of truce. Our enemy never sleeps; he seeks constantly to destroy the souls of men. We cannot successfully combat an enemy who is constantly on duty, unless we are at all times active ourselves. As was Nehemiah, we must be too busy in the service of God to think or talk of rest or compromise. This constant and faithful service is beautifully expressed by the apostle when he said: "Present your bodies a living sacrifice."

From East Tennessee.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

On hearing of a small congregation in a suburban part of Rogersville, the county seat of Hawkins County, I boarded the train on March 27, at noon, and went up there, a distance of more than one hundred and fifty miles, to spy out the land. I arrived there that evening on time, and went directly to the church house, where I found a good audience awaiting me. I preached there for three consecutive evenings, and, notwithstanding the rainy, muddy weather, we had good, attentive, and interested audiences and three additions. While there I heard of three other small congregations in that county. These congregations have suffered and still suffer for the want of preaching. There are great opportunities and possibilities up in this country for a great work. We must locate a man up there who will give the people the old Jerusalem gospel.

Now, of this stretch of country of more than one hundred and fifty miles from Cleveland to Rogersville, along the line of the Southern Railway, after leaving Cleveland, we have a small congregation at Calhoun, one at Riceville, one at Athens, one at Niota, one at Lenoir City, one at Knoxville, and a few brethren at Jefferson City, and then no more till we get to Rogersville. What a field for work, to say nothing of the country on the sides and beyond there!

Brother W. C. Phillips preached to good audiences at Dalton, Ga., last Lord's day, both morning and evening. I preached at Cleveland at 11 A.M. and 7:30 P.M., with good audiences at both services, and one addition at the morning service. I preached to a fine audience at Calhoun in the afternoon. The Lord willing, I will begin a meeting at Rockwood on April 16. Brother Will J. Cullum will begin a tent meeting in some part of Cleveland about the first of May.

Honolulu News.

BY MAX LANGPAAP.

We have almost doubled our landholding. The lot now has a frontage of sixty-three feet and a depth of two hundred and twenty-five feet. This gives us plenty of space for more buildings when the needs for such are urgent. We would like to have a small schoolhouse erected on the rear of the lot, but I suppose we will have to wait some time for this. Our elevation is about two hundred and fifty feet above the main city. Over the hill from us the Salvation Army is erecting a group of buildings for their work among delinquent children, costing about one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. And if we could get five thousand dollars at this writing, we would feel that we had advanced with a vengeance. We need less than that. If we can persuade the brethren to raise for us twenty-one hundred dollars within the next three years, we will feel that a wonderful advancement has been made. We can do this, and let us begin right now. The value of the house and lot is steadily increasing. This is the first unit of our hopes and prayers, but we hope and pray not the last. There are too great prospects ahead of us for us to aim very low. The Lord's work demands the highest aims.

Wheeling, Moundsville, Shadyside, and St. Joe, under the supervision of elders and Brother Pennell, are a splendid example of what unity and coöperation can do. They sent us one hundred dollars in February. Thank God for this splendid help! Forestville, Cal., also sent us sixty-six dollars and fifty-five cents—a splendid offering for one church. A brief financial report will be made when all March returns are in. January and February were splendid, but at this writing March has fallen away behind. But our hearts are full of gratitude to God and the good brethren supporting this great field.

We began using the home for meetings the first Lord's day in March. We find that it is much better and more satisfactory, and we save ten dollars a month hall rent. The Friday-night class is making excellent progress in the Old Testament, and my class in the Mōhili School is making fine progress in the New Testament. On March 26 I had sixteen bright, intelligent young Chinese and Japanese to teach the first and second chapters of Acts. If I only had a school daily where I could teach the Bible as well as other subjects, the results would be wonderful, I believe. The public schools are talking of turning out a number of scholars from the grammar grades who are backward in their work. Just such kind need our attention and help. It is too early yet to know just what will be done. But it looks like a great opportunity ahead of us if we can swing it. Pray for this open door. Takeo, my young Japanese "Timothy," is studying New Testament Greek under me, and is doing fine, too. He has never missed a class since I started teaching it. He seems to be one of those rare and valuable boys we find now and then in our work. He should be a splendid Christian worker as he grows older and wiser. May God richly bless him with wisdom.

Several of those who were supposed to have come out of the Christian Church have been a distinct disappointment to us. It has been my experience that unless one completely separates himself from the influence of the "digressives," he is more of a hindrance to the work than an asset. If there can be found a few who will stick to the old paths, though the struggle be bitter and hard and difficult and discouraging, God will bless them. They will live to see their faithfulness rewarded. It certainly pays to be faithful to God and his word. We have a faithful, loyal little band, and though there are years of hard work ahead of us, with the help of God, we are bound to succeed. "Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may run and be glorified."

SPRING DEBILITY

Loss of Appetite, That Tired Feeling and Sometimes Eruptions.

Thousands take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring medicine for that tired feeling, nervous weakness, impure blood and say it makes them feel better, eat and sleep better, and "makes food taste good."

Spring debility is a condition in which it is especially hard to combat disease germs, which invade the system here, there and everywhere. The white blood corpuscles, sometimes called "the little soldiers in the blood," because it is their duty to fight disease germs, are too weak to do good service.

Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the "little soldiers" and enables them to repel germs of grip, influenza, fevers and other ailments; relieves catarrh and rheumatism. It has given satisfaction to three generations. Get it today, and for a laxative take Hood's Pills.

SPENT HALF HER TIME IN BED

Farmer's Wife Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman

Carter's Creek, Tenn.—"Three years ago I was almost an invalid. I spent half of my time in bed, being afflicted with a trouble which women of a certain age are apt to have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a well woman now and have been for two years. I can work as well as any one who is younger and as I am a farmer's wife I have plenty to do for I cultivate my own garden, raise many chickens and do my own housework. You may publish this letter as I am ready to do anything to help other women as I have been so well and happy since my troubles are past."—Mrs. E. T. GALLOWAY, Carter's Creek, Tenn.

Most women find plenty to do. If they are upset with some female ailment and troubled with such symptoms as Mrs. Galloway had, the smallest duty seems a mountain.

If you find it hard to keep up, if you are nervous and irritable, without ambition and out of sorts generally, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. We believe it will help you greatly, for it has helped others.

God's Converting Power.

BY J. W. ATKINSON.

We know that God has miraculous power, plenty of it, and that he uses it; but the power he uses in quickening or converting the alien sinner is not miraculous power, but moral power—moral suasion. The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation. "For since in the wisdom of God, the world through its wisdom knew not God, God was pleased through the foolishness [simplicity] of preaching to save those who believe." (1 Cor. 1: 21, Bible Union Version. Read Rom. 1: 16; 10: 13-18; Ps. 119: 50-93; Acts 15: 7-9.)

There is power in words. Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote a little book that freed a million slaves. In Iconium Paul and Barnabas went into the synagogue of the Jews and so spoke that a great multitude believed. (See Acts 14: 1.) The apostles, by their preaching, were said to have "turned the world upside down." No wonder that Paul said that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation. No wonder the Savior said: "Preach the gospel to every creature." The gospel of God's love, as manifested in the gift of his Son to die for the sins of the whole world, is what moves the people to forsake sin and follow Christ. Hence the command to teach "all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Is not that plain? (See Matt. 28: 19.)

Life is brought about by the implanting of seed. To produce vegetable life, we plant seed in the ground; to produce animal life, seed must be planted in the womb; to produce spiritual life, seed must be planted in the human heart. And the Savior said: "The seed is the word of God." (Luke 8: 11.) And Peter teaches that we are born again by the word. (See 1 Pet. 1: 23. Read James 1: 18; 1 Cor. 4: 15.) Hence, the apostles were told to "speak [teach] all the words of this life." (Acts 5: 20, 21.)

This is what David said: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." And: "I will never forget thy precepts: for with them thou hast quickened me." This is why Peter said that God "made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe." (Acts 15: 7.) This is why Paul said that "faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." (Rom. 10: 17.) This is why James says of God: "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." (James 1: 18.) It is why Peter speaks of Christians as "being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." (1 Pet. 1: 23.) Is not that plain?

How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent word!

Beasley-Nunnery Debate.

BY W. T. BEASLEY.

My second debate with Elder A. U. Nunnery was held at View Point, near Milan, Tenn., beginning on March 21 and continuing four days. As is customary with the Missionary Baptists, we discussed the general church question. It is almost impossible to get him or them to discuss a specific proposition. Mr. Nunnery never introduced one new argument. In the establishment of his church, he set up his church on the mountains called "Horns of Hattin." (Mark 3; Luke 6.) Later on in his speech he laid the foundation for his church in Zion. (Isa. 28: 16.) After I had showed the impossibility of his church being built on the foundation, as the foundation was some seventy or seventy-five miles away from where he said the church was built, and after I had made an argument showing that the church was to be built in Jerusalem, introducing many scriptures to support the argument, he changed his position and said that sometimes "Jerusalem" means heaven and that Zech. 1: 16 and Isa. 2: 2, 3 mean that the church was built in heaven. He never tried to set up their doctrine and practice. Mr. Nunnery claims that the term "church" "always means a local assembly." I called his attention to a number of passages that teach one universal body, or church, of which Christ is the head. In reply, Mr. Nunnery admitted that the church is one, so far as ownership is concerned.

Brother J. L. Holland, of Greenfield, Tenn., moderated for me. He is a grand and noble man. Mr. Joiner moderated for Mr. Nunnery.

I am sure that this debate will do good. Our brethren were highly pleased with my effort, and a few Methodists expressed themselves the same way; also, the Primitive Baptists were pleased with the way I met him.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

[This article should have appeared before "The Meeting in the Blacksmith Shop," published in our issue of March 16, but was evidently lost in transit, and Brother Williams has furnished us another copy.—Ed.]

MY FIRST MEETING.

Now, being set apart for the work of an evangelist, the question was raised by some of the knowing brethren as to the field of operation. By some it was suggested that I go to Arkansas or Missouri and there try my hand on strangers. "Yes," some of them said, "that is the thing to do; so if Brother Williams is a failure as a preacher, let strangers be the first to find it out."

To this good day I have never learned how some old fellows know so much about preaching.

Brother W. W. Newkirk, long since dead, said: "Brethren, I think you are wrong in your conclusions to send Brother Williams among strangers to prove himself a preacher or a failure. Let us try him out here at home, where he is best known; and if he should prove to be a failure, he would fall only with those who thought he could preach; if he proves to be a success, there is no place that needs him more than here in Obion County."

So the matter was settled and I began here at home. Brother Newkirk and a few others were meeting regularly for worship at Minnick, at that time a sawmill town. I was called to preach for that little congregation once a month, beginning in September, 1885. On October 18, following, the first confession was made, when I had tried to use my pretty exhortation and could not find it. Brother James E. Jones, who now lives (or did when I last heard from him) near Bloomfield, Mo., was the first to make the confession and be baptized after I became a preacher.

In February, 1886, was my first meeting. That meeting reminds me of what Brother Srygley said when some one asked him if he was a Campbellite. He answered: "If I am, I didn't go to do it." I did not go to Minnick that time to hold a meeting, for I only had three little, short sermons—one for Saturday night, one for Sunday, and one for Sunday night. I had to remain over in Minnick on Monday; so Brethren Newkirk and Evans Jackson said: "There will be preaching to-morrow night." It was a rather cold night, but that announcement brought out the perspiration in great big drops. There I stood perfectly blank—had shot my last shell. I slept but little Sunday night, thinking and praying over the matter. I remodeled those three little sermons the best I could and tried it on Monday night, thinking, of course, this would be the last for a month. The invitation given—a confession. After the time and place for the baptizing was announced, Brethren Newkirk and Jackson spoke up: "There will be preaching to-morrow night." I tried to beg off, but—"No, you must preach." After the baptizing next evening, I took to the woods to study and pray. Again those three little sermons had to be ransacked for material enough for one more sermon. On Tuesday night a large crowd had assembled. I delivered the fourth little sermon selected from the three little ones. I started in with, and at the close another confession. "Preaching to-morrow night," said by others. From that night on till now I have never been able to describe my feelings. "I am compelled to go home." "Well, you must come back to-morrow night." The meeting continued at night for two weeks, with confessions at nearly every service. We had baptizing in sunshine, rain, sleet, and snow. Among the number baptized was an old lady, about seventy years of age, who had been a Methodist for about fifty years. When that meeting ended, there was very little of the three little sermons I had on the start. I would not have started in there with the understanding that the meeting was to continue for two weeks for love or money. Some one has said that "necessity is the mother of invention." In no meeting that I have since conducted have I studied harder or prayed more than I did in the first meeting—the one that slipped up on me. Many of those baptized during that meeting have gone to their reward, while many still live. About eighteen were baptized and a few united with the congregation. Thus my first meeting lingers in my memory as I drift down the sunny slope of time, soon to pass under the shadows. Brother T. E. Scott once told me the best preparation one could have for a meeting was to be full of the word of God. That is true. When a preacher is full of the word, it is no trouble to preach. Many things started from that meeting, told that I said, which I did not, and are told to this good day.

Harper (Kan.) College.

BY G. A. O'NEAL.

Harper College is now in its seventh year. It has grown very rapidly during these years, both in numbers and in recognition. Seven years ago the enrollment was forty or fifty students. This year we have enrolled over three hundred students. Not only is our high school accredited, but the State of Kansas has placed its stamp of approval upon us as a Junior College. Our high-school graduates receive the regular Normal Training Certificates. Our college students who take the required education receive the Three-Year State Certificates upon presentation of their credits to the State Board of Education.

Of course, our influence grows as our numbers and recognition grow. Those who have been in the school for several years say that we have the best student body this school has ever had. We rejoice at our growth in this particular, especially when we reflect upon the good these students will do in their home communities. Evidently our Bible schools are beginning to be important influences for good.

Our "aim of education" is to develop boys and girls into efficient Christians—into faithful servants of God. The existence of Harper College cannot be justified if this is not our aim. Why should brethren burden themselves with the support of such a school if this is not our aim? May we ever be faithful in our work toward the realization of this aim.

A Warning. To feel tired before exertion is not laziness—it's a sign that the system lacks vitality and needs the tonic effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sufferers should not delay. Get rid of that tired feeling by beginning to take Hood's Sarsaparilla to-day.

A Brand-New Book

"OLD LIMBER" or THE TALE of THE TAYLORS by DELONG RICE

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their eloquence, their fiddles, and their fox bounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eternal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Rice. Into one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two most wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifelong rivalry of the two famous brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War at the Roosa" that attracted the attention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER," the peerless and now immortal fox bound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters" extending from a President of the United States to a fox bound, the story teaches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of crackling camp fires and the music of the chase.

THE BOOK is beautifully printed and bound, appropriately illustrated, and packed in a neat gift box, ready for mailing.

Field Reports

Athens, Ala., April 9.—Last Lord's day I met and worshiped with my old home congregation, Old Reunion. I have two calls for meetings in Tennessee, one beginning on the third Lord's day in July and one on the third Lord's day in August.—William W. Still.

Pikeville, Tenn., April 11.—I am glad to get back into the field to work again. Brother Billingsley and I are now holding a meeting at Red Hill, near Pikeville. My next meeting will be at Beaver Hill, after which I will do some work for the church at Dunlap, Tenn. My address will still be Whitwell, Tenn.—J. C. Mosley.

Stella, Mo., Route 2, April 15.—I preached last Lord's-day morning at the Johnson and Dale Streets Church, Springfield, Mo., and at night at Broadway and West Madison. I am now in the extreme southwestern county of the State for some mission work, and hope to accomplish much good before leaving this section.—W. Curtis Porter.

Mobile, Ala., April 11.—I am here in a mission meeting. Interest is good for a place like this. Everything, from picture shows to the devil, to oppose; but Christ is leading and success is sure. The meeting will continue over the third Lord's day. I expect to begin a meeting at Eighth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn., the fifth Lord's day in April.—A. D. Dies.

Berry, Ala., April 10.—I preached for the brethren at Friendship, near Steens, Miss., Saturday night and Sunday. In the afternoon I preached in Steens, and at night went to Columbus to be with Brethren Cayce and Hardin, who are doing hard work there for the Master for two weeks. The Columbus brethren were very sociable. If I can suitably locate, I will work with some church during the summer and attend a college or university. I may put in the full year in school.—Arthur B. Tenney.

Clarksville, Tenn., April 15.—The church at this place is happy over the prospects of soon going into their own meetinghouse. The contract for a modern, modest, and inexpensive house has been closed with the contractor and the work is to begin next Monday. The church here has had a long, hard pull with the "digressives," having to worship in the courthouse. We have the best available lot in town, and we hope to soon have the neatest, cheapest, and most serviceable brick-vener building in the city. The churches are helping us in a very substantial way.—J. G. Malphurs.

Forest Hill, La., April 13.—I closed a mission meeting at Alco, La., last Thursday, with five additions—one reclaimed who had drifted from the Lord's house over into the Baptist camp, two restored from the world, and two by primary obedience (one of these from the Baptists). This as a result of one week's effort, made possible by gifts from two beloved sisters in the flesh. I want to return to this point for another effort as soon as I can, as I am persuaded that others are "almost persuaded."—C. C. McQuiddy.

Columbus, Ga., April 10.—We now have a band of about twenty to thirty worshipping Christ "as it is written." Brother Hugh A. Price, of Birmingham, Ala., has been with us since April 3, and is doing a wonderful work. My family and I came here and were unable to find any congregation of disciples, and we met in our own home until we found six or eight others; then I secured the services of Brother Price through the goodness of the North Birmingham congregation, and the results of the meeting to date are as stated above. The Birmingham congregation sent Brother Price here, knowing it was a destitute field. I pray that the churches may wake up and do more of this kind of mission work.—R. W. Stagers.

Henderson, Tenn., April 10.—Though I have not reported my work for some time, I have been very busy preaching and attending school. Last Lord's day I preached in Haywood County, in a place where the people had never heard the gospel as proclaimed by the apostles. We arranged for the use of a country schoolhouse, since the Baptists would not let us use their building. My audience, of course, was sectarian, yet they treated me nicely and are very anxious to hear again the truth that makes us free. Brethren, we ought to be more anxious to enter such fields, for perhaps the Lord has much people in such places. I have some time in June and August for meetings or for conducting song services.—L. H. Knight.

Huntsville, Ala., April 11.—Brother J. D. Jones filed his regular appointment at this place last Lord's day. He will soon be out in the field holding meetings. Brother Jones is a splendid gospel preacher. I was at Liberty Hill, in Moore County, Tenn., last Lord's day. I spoke on Saturday night and Sunday morning to very attentive audiences. This congregation has suffered the loss of some of its members, some by death and some by removal, but there is a faithful band of Christians left there who are able and willing to worship the Lord "as it is written." I was kept at home last year on account of sickness, but will be able to hold some meetings this year. Any church wishing my services should write me at 13 Main Street, West Huntsville, Ala.—J. A. Jenkins.

Estevan, Saskatchewan, Canada, April 10.—I left Regina on March 24 for Harptree, where I began a meeting on the fourth Lord's day in March. Two days later I took the "fue," and the meeting was discontinued until April 2, when the meeting closed on account of my condition and the condition of the roads. On April 5 we began another meeting in Estevan, which still continues. The brethren here have bought a lot in the central part of the town. There is a small building on the lot, which has been fixed up to accommodate the gatherings for the present. The Estevan church is ambitious to push the work of the Lord. This is very encouraging. The church plans to build a meetinghouse on the premises later on. Brother H. E. Foreman baptized a lady in Regina, as a result of the meeting there, the Sunday after I left. The meeting here will continue all this week.—H. A. Rogers.

Why Preach the Gospel?

BY WILLIAM W. STILL.

Christ says: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel." (Mark 16: 15.) Why preach the gospel? Because it is God's power unto salvation. (Rom. 1: 16.) The gospel is God's only remedy for sin. Then there is one God, one Savior, one Spirit, and one scheme of redemption for accountable creatures. Whatever released men from sin in the days of the apostles will release them now. So preach the gospel as Peter did on the day of Pentecost. "Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." (Acts 2: 38.) But some may ask: "What does this phrase, 'for the remission of sins,' mean?" Just take a common-sense view of the entire passage. No one who is considered orthodox doubts for a moment that repentance was a command in order to the remission of sins. Now examine the passage, and you will find that the two commands, "repent" and "be baptized," are inseparably connected, and that they bear the same logical and grammatical relation to the end in view, and harmonize with other passages in which the word "baptize" occurs. Christ, in Matt. 26: 28, says: "For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins."

Baptists and the Lord's Supper.

BY JOHN B. PEDEN.

Baptists openly confess that they do not know when to take the Lord's Supper. Read the following from the Florida Baptist Witness of March 30: "Many of our churches observe it quarterly. The one thought that ought to be stressed here is that a church should have some stipulations in regard to the matter. Let it be discussed among the members, and after prayerful consideration let them decide as to what is expedient for them; and when once the question is decided, there ought not to be any carelessness or indifference about a matter so sacred and impressive."

It is indeed sad to see a great people like the Baptists come out in plain, unmistakable terms and recommend to their people to discuss and decide the Lord's business. True, they have a right to make a law to govern their denomination, but no right to make laws governing the church purchased with the blood of Christ. See Acts 20: 1, and act according to instructions.

The Cause at Clarksville, Tenn.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

Some years ago the church at Clarksville departed from the faith, and, as a result, for some years there was no loyal congregation in the town. Some seven years ago I spent twelve months in the county endeavoring to build up the cause there. As a result, a little band of faithful brethren were collected, and since that time they have kept up the regular worship, meeting in private homes and in the courthouse. They now have a good-working little congregation.

They recently purchased a lot at the cost of two thousand dollars and are now preparing to build a house of worship. The lot is paid for, with the restrictive clause in the deed, and the house will cost something like seven thousand dollars. These brethren need the cooperation of the churches. They need your help, and need it now, and the same will be highly appreciated by them. Send all donations to R. U. Edmondson, Clarksville, Tenn.

One thing is certain, the ship with Christ on board must at last reach the happy shore.—Princess Beatrice.

If good people would but make their goodness agreeable, and smile instead of frowning in their virtue, how many would they win to the good cause!—Selected.

MINERALIZED WATER ROOTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking Fountains Banish Vermin, Make Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of purebred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs or meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to the Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 944, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay the postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your chickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't hesitate to accept this trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

Are You a Weak and Ailing Woman?

Beauty and Health Go Hand in Hand

Fort Thomas, Ky.—Several years ago I had become so poor and weak from trouble of a feminine character that I could not walk around in my room without holding to the furniture or having some one to assist me. I was so nervous at times I could hardly endure any one walking across the floor. Finally I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and in three-months' time I gained twenty pounds. I continued taking the medicine until I was entirely well. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription certainly saved my life.—Mrs. Laura Klepfer, 15 Oak Street.

Unity Among Papers.

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

By this is meant what are called "religious papers." If all religious papers were at unity, it would mean untold blessings for the church. It would have to be as God says to be at unity, for that is the only plan on which all can unite. However, it is too true that the religious papers of the church of Christ are not at unity, or maybe I had better say papers representing the teaching of the church of Christ. There is a cause that is deplorable and a cure that is sufficient. It only remains to remove the cause by using God's remedy, and all will be well.

It seems in some way or other that the brotherhood has the "paperitis," and I fear it is a somewhat dangerous affair. A few times it might be that a man could not get to say what he wanted to say in papers already being printed, and so he starts one in which he may be free to give vent to all his desires; and it might be as well sometimes if it had not been printed. Then, again, one wishes to be noted as an editor, and lest the world never know of his ability as such, he must experiment a little, to be convinced in a short while that something was wrong. Then there are those who want to do good, and for no other motive start a paper. A few good, strong papers might be better than so many weak ones; or, at least, if a host are to be had, unity ought to prevail among them.

In some places it is only necessary to ascertain what paper is read and the person is spotted at once. Then, in others, some will read but one paper, completely ignoring all the others. Then, too, it often happens if a man writes for one paper, he is, to a great extent, excluded from the rest. Now, to my mind, these things ought to be adjusted. Possibly it could be settled if all the editors would unite, then the papers would follow. But that is rather a serious problem, as well as an almost impossible one. If the apostles had had a dozen papers, they would all have been at unity. The articles written by them show this. But the fact that they were guided by the Holy Spirit, while not all editors seem to be so guided, may help to explain matters of our time. Anyway, we all agree that papers ought to be together, but how to get this accomplished is not so easily agreed upon.

Now, I believe that papers do a great deal of good, and it is true that some harm is done, just as we might say of preachers. I would not say to stop the papers because some harm is done, but stop the harm and give us the papers filled with the wonderful

The horrors of Saturday-night calomel-taking are a thing of the past. According to druggists, Calotabs, the denucleated calomel tablet, is a grand success, the triumph of modern pharmacy. Not the slightest danger or unpleasantness attends its use, and yet it exhibits all of the liver-cleansing and system-purifying qualities of the old-style calomel.

There can be no doubt that calomel is the most valuable and universally useful of all medicines; and now that its objectionable qualities have been removed, its popularity will have no bounds. One Calotab on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water—no taste, no nausea or unpleasantness whatever. The next morning you are feeling fine, liver clean, splendid appetite. words of life. Papers are but means of teaching the gospel; and when used as they should be, they are very effective. People may get lessons by reading a paper when they will not go to hear preaching. Then, some who can't go may learn as well. But one may say that he could read his Bible. To be sure; and the same argument, if it might be called such, could be used against hearing preaching. A sermon written is just as true as if it were spoken. Then, too, from the fact that I can have more time to consider it when it is written, may I not get more out of it? No, do not quit the papers, but give us a united set of editors and papers, so that we may feel at home in any paper, and, by a pull together, much more will be done. Unity among the papers will mean much for the one cause. Let us work to that end and hasten the day when such shall be.

"On With the Dance."

BY J. L. HINES.

Monticello (Kentucky) has been caught in the very vortex of the lure of the modern dance. High-school students waste their energies in the all-night revel and come to their classes the next day with ill-gotten lessons. Christians, so called, will even encourage and participate in this damnable, degrading, character-wrecking, Christless, Godless, church-dishonoring, soul-destroying, devil-catching, hellish business. I am not surprised at the world engaging in this kind of worldliness, but how the people who claim to be Christians can indulge is astonishing to me. The Bible holds out for inspection two classes of people—the godly and the ungodly.

THE GODLY LIFE.

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." (1 John 2: 15.) Walk by the Spirit; "for the mind of the flesh is death. . . . the mind of the flesh is enmity against God." (Rom. 8: 1-8.) "Walk by the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. . . . The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, self-control; against such there is no law." (Gal. 5: 16-24.) Therefore, the godly life is a Godlike, Christlike, pure, holy, sanctified, consecrated life.

ANCIENT DANCING BY GOD'S CHILDREN.

"And Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women [Not a man in the crowd.—J. L. H.] went out after her with timbrels and with dances." (Ex. 15: 20.) "The women came out

The greatest preachers of recent ages attribute much of their inspiration to this remarkable work. Unlike most modern commentaries, this work does not profess to be critical—and therein lies its chief charm. What the world lacks to-day is old-fashioned devotion. After the strife of the battle of criticism, it is a relief to find comfort in the calm, helpful interpretation of Matthew Henry. Original and quaint of expression, there is a directness in his utterances which rivets the attention.

Interdenominational in character, this commentary has had highest praise from the leading pulpits of two centuries. Thousands of homes in all lands where English is spoken cherish this work beyond praise. Read the strong, approving words of Wesley and Whitefield, the fathers of Methodism; Spurgeon, the Baptist; Bickersteth, the poet and churchman, whose "Yesterday, To-Day, and Forever" gives him world-wide esteem; Hamilton and Cuyler, Presbyterians; Taylor, the Congregationalist.

James Hamilton: "It has now lasted nearly two hundred years, and is at this moment more popular than ever, gathering strength as it rolls down the stream of time; and it bids fair to be the Comment for all coming time. True to God, true to nature, true to common sense, how can it ever be superseded?"

E. H. Bickersteth: "No subsequent commentary has rendered it less valuable or less desirable in every Christian library."

C. H. Spurgeon: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering swallows around an old gable toward the close of autumn."

Theodore L. Cuyler: "To how many a hard-working minister has this book been a mine of gold! Next to wife and children has lain near his heart the pore-over and prayed-over copy of his Matthew Henry."

George Whitefield, when asked where he studied theology, replied: "On my knees, reading my Bible and Henry's Commentary." Whitefield read it continuously through four times.

Recently a great Bible student, Rev. J. D. Jones, of Bournemouth, England, a man whose works are read by millions—whose counsel is sought by thousands—was asked to begin the making of a commentary upon the whole Bible as he had done on some of the books of the Bible. His reply was: "That has been done, and satisfactorily done, by Matthew Henry. He cannot be superseded, and the marvel is that he should have been able to do it so completely and well as he has. It cannot be done again."

John Wesley: "It is frequently full, giving a sufficient explication of the passages which require explaining. It is in many parts deep, penetrating further into the inspired writings than most other commentaries do. It does not usually entertain us with vain speculation, but is practical throughout; and usually spiritual, too; teaching us how to worship God, not in form only, but 'in spirit and in truth.'"

William M. Taylor: "The habitual perusal of Matthew Henry's Comments will do more than most other things to indicate to the preacher how he is to turn the passage that is under his hand to practical account, while at the same time the unctuous that it exhales will mellow and fatten the roots of his own piety."

singing and dancing." (1 Sam. 18: 6.) "And David danced before the Lord." (2 Sam. 6: 14.) Note that in these dances the women danced by themselves and the men by themselves, outside and in the day; such dances were spontaneous also.

THE UNGODLY LIFE.

Love the world and the things of the world (1 John 2: 15), be a friend of the world, thus making yourself an enemy to God (James 4: 4); "for the whole world lieth in the evil one," and all that is in the world is "the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the vainglory of life" (1 John 2: 16, 17). "The works of the flesh . . . are these: fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, sorcery, enmities, strife, jealousies, wraths, factions, divisions, parties, envyings, drunkenness, revelings, and such like" (Gal. 5: 15-21); "lusts, winebibbings, revelings, carousings" (1 Pet. 4: 3). "Reveling" means "a revel, carousal" (Thayer); "a jovial festivity with music and dancing."

(Liddell and Scott). Lasciviousness also embraces dancing, but it means more.

ANCIENT DANCING OF THE UNGODLY.

Idolatrous worshipers have a dance. (Ex. 32: 19.) The degenerate Amalekites participated in the mixed dance. (1 Sam. 30: 16.) Speaking of the wicked, Job (21: 11-13) has this to say: "They send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance. They sing to the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the sound of the pipe. They spend their days in prosperity, and in a moment they go down to Sheol." The dance of the ungodly was a mixed promiscuous dance, and the condemnation of Heaven rested upon it.

THE MODERN DANCE.

The modern dance had its origin in a Vienna bawdy house, December 20, 1787, and has never lost its primary meaning. Though many dancing masters have tried to reform it, they cannot, for the thing is hereditarily totally depraved. Anything that will damn a soul is wrong. Out of three hundred thousand abandoned women in America, two hundred and twenty-five thousand attribute their fall to the dance. Of two hundred abandoned women in Los Angeles, one hundred and sixty-three attribute their downfall to the dance. The various steps of the modern dance are contrived with devilish ingenuity to excite the instincts of sex. That the modern dance is lascivious in its influence and tendency is beyond doubt true. Its chief attraction arises from the close contact of the sexes and the excitement of the sensual feelings. If this were not true, men would be as fond of dancing with men as with women, and vice versa; yet you could arouse no interest in a dance confined to either sex. The dance custom is fraught with evil tendencies. No Christian can indulge in such soul-destroying amusement. Practices that lead to wrong and imperil virtue in men and women ought not to be encouraged by parents.

I am opposed to the modern dance, first, middle, and last, because it is anti-American and anti-Christian.

"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." With us by his Spirit; with us in the great sacrament of his love; with us amid weaknesses, divisions, failures, disappointments, he is with us still. And it is his presence alone which sustains his envoys and gives to their work whatever it has had, or has, or has to have, of vigor and permanence.—H. P. Liddon.

In the Days of Noah.

BY H. C. FLEMING.

The Bible informs us that Noah was a preacher of righteousness, and that he warned the people of an impending danger that was about to come on the inhabitants of the earth; but they refused to believe it, and, no doubt, laughed him to scorn. Their unbelief did not prevent it, for the rain descended forty days and forty nights and the waters covered the whole earth, even the highest mountains to the depth of fifteen cubits (about twenty-two and one-half feet).

Like the people in the days of Noah, some of the present time refuse to believe, turning from revealed facts to science falsely so called.

There is a tradition among many nations of the great flood. How could this be, unless there has been something to keep it on their minds from father to son (to keep it there) during all the past ages of the world? We are informed that there went up a mist from the earth and watered the whole face of the ground in the beginning. From this some have thought that it never rained on the earth before the flood. Be that as it may, we know that in moist climates the dew does rise in the night, and in many places causes plants to grow without rain. Is this not evidence of the truth of the statement?

Some claim that it is an impossibility for forty days' rain to cover the highest mountains with water fifteen cubits deep. Let us look at this from a scientific and revealed point. Scientists tell us that the earth was once in a greatly heated condition, and that it has been for many centuries gradually growing cooler. If this is true, it helps to confirm the statement in the Bible about the flood.

We are also informed that the whole surface of the earth is three-fourths water, and only one-fourth land. Could not the three-fourths water, under sufficient heat, cause enough rain to fall in forty days to cover all the land even to the depth mentioned? As to its running off, it always falls much faster than it runs off. Note the floods in various parts of the earth at different periods. Why, then, could not enough water be drawn from the oceans to cover the whole face of the land at once? It was done, and no amount of quibbling can change its truth.

Here is a statement that is yet to be, and it is of the highest importance that all should believe it: "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not when they refused him that warned them on earth, much more shall not we escape who turn away from him that warneth from heaven: whose voice then shook the earth; but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more will I make to tremble not the earth only, but also the heaven." (Heb. 12: 25, 26.) When the earth and the heavens shake and tremble at the same time, how great will be the fear?

The gondolier in Venice is as fine to look at as his gondola. He has color, too, in the ruddy dye of his face, the infinite variety of his amber shirts and blue trousers and scarlet sashes; and if you really know him, he is one of the most charming of people.—Arthur Symonds.

DIVISION AND ITS CAUSES.

BY JOHN ALLEN HUDSON.

Open disruption is a fruit. Division, "wrath, strife, seditions, heresies," are called works of the flesh by the apostle Paul. Mutual respect and love does not bring division. There must be a break of amicable relationship before there can be a division. A disregard of filial duty, and enmity, parental bitterness, maternal hardness, fraternal dislike, are causes of division. Two who love and respect one another as Jonathan and David did will not break. Two do not agree, or one who hates as Cain did will separate two brothers. Two who love as father and son as did Hamlet and Hannibal will cherish the same design in life and work.

Division is the result of hatred, envy, malice, and wickedness. Low animal desires and petty jealousies are to blame for discordant relationships.

Riots in heaven are rare. The angels hold together in firm concord. The divine hosts that wait on the desire of Deity and do errands of eternal moment and influence are subservient in love to God. One of the sweetest thoughts about heaven is its peace and loving concord. God is true, angels are true, the Holy Spirit is true. The Lord Jesus Christ is amicable. All heaven is at peace.

The great blind poet, Milton, pictured a united hell. All demons worked for the same end, inspired by the same fiendish purpose:

Devil with devil in firm concord holds;
Men only disagree of creatures rational,
Though under hope of heavenly grace.

Angels are in harmony because loving and obeying. Devils are in harmony because all alike are doomed. So why disagree? To what purpose? Only to make hell more horrible? That would be folly. Therefore, unity, even with the damned, is the only thing to be considered.

But man, under hope of heavenly grace (which grace and redemption demons have no hope of), in his striving toward his eternal home of peace and love, will be at variance with his fellow who is doing the same thing. And who will say that the most bitter divisions are not over things religious and pilgrimatic—those things that pertain to their devotions and their journeys to God? The first far-flung division was over the service that God requires and receives, the offering of sacrifices by Cain and Abel. Religious wars have always been the most bitter, the most aggressive, the most filled with anathemas and counter-anathemas.

Division itself belongs to the human family. Peculiarly so. The history of the family of man is the complete history of division. It started with our first progenitors. It has run with our forbears. On them it hangs, and on us, their sons and daughters, it to-day is settled. I would rather, in view of the sins and follies, be related to another order of beings and forego all consanguinity to the Adamic race. But I cannot away. I am tied to it. And so are you, my brother. So let us make the best we can of it.

After Cain and Abel's day, after the days of the flood, as soon as the earth began to be repeopled, in the days of Peleg, the earth was divided. Nimrod went to the country of the plain, Mesopotamia, and started him a colony. It may have been for conscience' sake, like it was with John Smith and Roger Williams and the Pilgrim Fathers, that he boldly said to his followers was the immediate cause of his separating them from the rest of the race of Adam. At least, men have always made personal pretexts, their own consciences, their feelings about questions, the immediate tests of fellowship of communities and nations, the causes of divisions. It is so to-day. But this nonuniformity is a good thing? Yes, if properly used.

In the days of the apostles there were Hymenæus, Alexander, Philetus, and others, who could not bear the rest of the body religious. But were their reversions, their deviations, good? No, they were ruinous. These men had wills to lead separate bodies. Was it because they knew the church to be corrupt? Doubtless there were some corruptions. But Paul knew this. Why did not he cause division? Because he loved the Lord and his church.

In the days of Luther were there corruptions? Yes. Perhaps they were more flagrant and open than they were in the days of the apostles. But why the reaction? Because Luther personally could not bear the corruption, as his eyes beheld. But the reaction, the result of his labors and the church he started? Did he do good in the world? Most men say yes. He but added to the long list of divisions and to innumerable doctrines one more doctrine. It was good in a way, but mostly not good that he labored for a reform, but ultimately formed a new denomination.

But personal disgust, as with Luther, Huss, Knox, and other reformers, is not a sufficient warrant for the disgusted to start something else that in time will be just as disgusting. Not that the Catholic Church had any right or pre-eminence upon the earth. It had the latter, and was the body that made great claims, but it was not right. But Martin Luther had no right to create something besides. All divisions have come as the result of man's uncongeniality, his inability to get along with the rest of the race; or they have come because of hatred, variance, enmity.

If man had always been related to his fellow man like God and his Son, Christ Jesus, are related, there would have been no divisions. And Jesus wants just such unity among his followers and subjects as there is between him and the Father. He proposes this in the great church of the Bible, but not in any church or churches of men. All churches of men are doomed to destruction. "Every plant, which my Heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up," says Jesus.

Bryan's Faith in the Bible.

The fight that Mr. Bryan is making for the integrity of the Bible story of the creation as opposed to the supporters of the evolution school is one of the bravest and most timely efforts of this great statesman's career. His sayings along this line are being widely copied by the papers over the country, and I note that various editors refer to them as "Mr. Bryan's views," as if there was something particular and unique in his stand for the inspiration of God's holy book. But I prefer to speak of it and think of it as Mr. Bryan's faith, which is not unlike the faith of all who place their trust in the integrity of the Scriptures. One thing I have noticed here in Florida is that the people love him all the more for his adoption of their native State as his place of residence. Just now Bryan is the favorite topic of the editors in this State. They discuss him and criticize him and rebuke him and joke about him for one thing and another, but underneath it all there is always the tender note of appreciation. It is rather significant that this great man preaches on nearly every Sunday and many times between Sundays. His sermons are spoken with vigor and never fail to leave an impression. Following his sermon at Lake Worth the editor of the Leader wrote the following observations:

Mr. Bryan is quite orthodox, the orthodoxy of the fathers. He believes what he believes. He preaches with a smile. His countenance is happy. He leaves the Jew and the Unitarian and the unchristian faiths out on a limb, but he doesn't saw that limb off and consign them to everlasting woes in so much language. He prefers to let his auditors use their heads to that extent.

That he believes explicitly in the Biblical story of creation he did not hesitate to say. He declared that large numbers of scientists, professors, and persons of excessive education disbelieved the creation of Genesis, and deplored the statement. He tellingly dwelt on the point that service is the thing that is worth while, religiously and otherwise. That, perhaps, was the highest note he struck. Henry Ford voiced the same view recently when interviewed about his religious belief. Mr. Ford said he did not have much of a religious belief—something, say, like that of the good Samaritan or the Sermon on the Mount.

Mr. Bryan takes his Bible straight. He prefers to believe what it says. That God took dust and created man literally is his belief, rather than that God created man through a series of evolutions. He will have no stepping-stones to his present self of monkeys and apes or sea urchins. He believes in the miracles of the Bible, in all supernatural things it records. He believes the immaculate conception necessary for a belief in Christianity. And he believes in a personal God and a personal devil.

Withal it is a rather happy religion that Mr. Bryan preaches. It is one that points onward and upward. With technicalities aside, in the main it is one to which almost every one may well subscribe.

Much of what Roosevelt and Cleveland and McKinley said about some of the live political issues of their day has already passed from the public mind, but what they said about the Bible is frequently quoted and will always be appreciated. The same will prove true and in still greater measure of Mr. Bryan; for he has devoted more time and thought and expenditure of energy to the defense of the Bible than all of them collectively have done. When the final summary of his work and influence among men is made, no doubt his fight for the integrity of the Scriptures will be the biggest thing in it, and the service he has rendered humanity in this respect will make his fame imperishable. When we touch God's word with pen or tongue, we touch the infinite.

Last week Mr. Bryan gave to the Associated Press the announcement of his decision not to make the race for Senator, stating as his reason that he must give his time and thought to certain paramount principles that were not confined by any means to the State of Florida. It appears a bit odd for Mr. Bryan to be declining to make a race for office. But when we stop to consider the biggest thing he is contending for, we cannot doubt for one moment the wisdom of his course. Thank God for Bryan!

Is the World Growing Better?

During the meeting at Ocala, Fla., I have been the recipient of courtesies extended by Mr. Frank Harris, veteran editor of the Ocala Banner and looked upon as the dean of the Florida press. Mr. Harris is a gentleman of the old school, firm in his convictions of right and wrong, and hospitably inclined in most of his public utterances. He believes that the present is not so bad as painted, and because of his long and minute observation of the social, religious, and political affairs of this country his opinion on such matters is worth consideration. He writes in part as follows:

Notwithstanding all that is said in denunciation and condemnation of the present time—the laxity in morals, the wave of crime, the impeachment of the moving pictures, the jazz music, the modern dance, woman's dress, and other imprecations and maledictions sounded from pulpit, press, and platform—we still maintain, and feel sure of our ground, that we are living in the golden era of the centuries. Viewed from any direction, there is no other age comparable to it.

There never was an age in which there was so much benevolence shown, so many gifts to public and private charities.

There was never before so much tolerance of thought and good fellowship shown among the different religious denominations, one toward all the others, and full and free expression of one's political opinions.

There was never before such vast sums appropriated for education; for the eradication of disease, for the care and sanitation of those in prison bonds, and for the betterment of humanity in so many uplifting ways.

The pages of the past are stained with fierce and bitter religious wars, and it has not been so very long since one had to maintain his political opinions at the point of sword and pistol.

Not so any longer.

In our time we have seen dueling put under the ban of public opinion; we have seen slavery, after an existence of thousands of years, abolished; we have seen the doors of the "open saloon," which has broken the hearts of so many mothers, forever closed; we have seen woman lifted to her place beside her male companion where she will be in a position to exercise more potentially her influence, like a sweet benediction, for the betterment of the world.

Those of us who were accustomed to the "sideboard and decanter" and the "open saloon" will soon be "gathered to our fathers," and those who are to take our places, not having to contend with these influences, will not have contracted the drink habit, and our nation will be controlled by a sober and intellectual people whose influence will gradually expand and cover the whole world as the waters cover the sea.

Relative to what Editor Harris has to say about "so much tolerance of thought and good fellowship" in the religious world, it is pertinent to observe that it is our Christian duty to encourage all who are looking in the right direction and to be courteous and friendly disposed toward our religious opponents. Some preachers seem to have but one point in view, and that is to deal great sledgehammer blows upon those who differ with them without ever giving their religious opponents credit for having one particle of honesty or sincerity of purpose. We must speak the truth in season and out of season and always be ready to give an answer "for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints," but, to be effective, our work must be done in love. Jesus showed Nicodemus, a man proud of his position as a master in Israel, that he was ignorant of the very first and fundamental condition of salvation. But Jesus spoke in such a way as to impress this professed leader's heart without leaving one trace of bitterness or resentment. We can do as much if we follow the great Teacher's example. It does not require miraculous power to do it, but it does require love; and if we lack love, all our boasted knowledge and logical acumen will never make up for the deficiency.

On the other hand, we should see to it that, in our desire to be kind and tolerant toward all, we do not compromise the truth of God. When convictions are at stake, we can easily compromise too much. The old, false prophets were false in that they cried, "Peace, peace," when there was no peace. Amiability must be guarded against, lest, in being too amiable and peace-loving, convictions and high principles are forfeited. More than likely the good fellowship among the different religious denominations referred to by the veteran editor is largely explained by the fact that the most of them have adopted the "let-alone policy" in religion based upon the theory that they are all going to heaven, anyway, and the many churches are but so many roads, all leading to the same place. But Paul teaches the unity of the one body rather than the unity of denominations. "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." (Rom. 12: 4.) It is our bounden duty to proclaim kindly and courteously, but withal firmly and steadfastly, the unity of the one body, which is the church of the living God. (See Eph. 1: 21-23.)

Thank you, Friend Harris, for the inspiration of these remarks, and may you live long and happily and continue to wield that facile pen in the land of sunshine and flowers.

The Partisan Spirit.

BY G. W. RIGGS.

I suppose that every sect in Christendom, and every faction, dissension, and division in the churches of Christ, has grown out of a partisan spirit. The partisan spirit incites envy, jealousy, contention, strife, backbiting, and oftentimes downright hatred itself. These and such like things are classed as works of the flesh, and Paul warns that they who practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. The partisan spirit caused some at Corinth to say: "I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ." But Paul rebuked them and said: "Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized into the name of Paul?" "What then is Apollos? and what is Paul? Ministers through whom ye believed; and each as the Lord gave to him. I planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase. So then neither is he that planteth anything, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase." It was the partisan spirit that led some to question the apostleship of Paul and otherwise discredit and belittle him. "For, His letters, they say, are weighty and strong; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech of no account. Let such a one reckon this, that, what we are in word by letters when we are absent, such are we also in deed when we are present. For we are not bold to number or compare ourselves with certain of them that commend themselves; but they themselves, measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves with themselves, are without understanding."

When brethren unduly exalt one and unjustly discredit another, they are actuated, not by the Spirit of Christ, but by a partisan spirit, which, if not suppressed, will inevitably lead to dissension and division.

A partisan spirit is easily incited. The love of pre-eminence, and vainglory, self-inflation, self-commendation, cajolery, to fawn upon some and to frown upon others, on the part of a preacher or other leader, will almost invariably stir up a partisan spirit.

Again, differences or difficulties between brethren over personal matters sometimes work up a partisan spirit. Instead of the whole congregation standing together and seeing that the parties who have a difficulty settle it between themselves or else be withdrawn from, the members take sides, and faction or division is the result. For truth and righteousness we may be partisan; because for these we must take a firm stand against all opposition. Here we can make no compromise. And, in my judgment, division in a congregation is justifiable upon no other ground.

Neither favoritism, nor aversion to persons, nor preference for things indifferent is a just cause for dissension among the people of God.

Humility, love for the truth and for one another, without which all things else profit us nothing, and to be filled with the Spirit of Christ, without which we are none of his, will prevent the partisan spirit and avert much trouble arising from it. Whenever and wherever the following scriptures are observed, the partisan spirit and the evils resulting therefrom cannot exist.

"I therefore, the prisoner in the Lord, beseech you to walk worthily of the calling wherewith ye were called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love; giving diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." "Let us not become vainglorious, provoking one another, envying one another." "Doing nothing through faction or through vainglory, but in lowliness of mind each counting other better than himself: not looking each of you to his own things, but each of you also to the things of others." "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and railing, be put away from you, with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you." "Finally, be ye all like-minded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tender-hearted, humble-minded: not rendering evil for evil, or reviling for reviling; but contrariwise blessing; for hereunto were ye called, that ye should inherit a blessing. For, He that would love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: and let him turn away from evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and pursue it. For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears unto their supplication: but the face of the Lord is upon them that do evil."

Christian Duty. No. 1.

BY HARVEY SCOTT.

"For I would that ye knew what great conflict I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh; that their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to the acknowledgment of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ: in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." (Col. 2: 1-3.)

(Verse 1.) Paul said that he wished that those brethren at Colosse knew what conflict, care, struggle, battle, or strife he had for them; and not for them only, but for as many as had not known or seen him personally. In this we have no spirit of selfishness on Paul's part. We must be interested in the others as well as ourselves. When brethren realize the fact that there are others who are interested in them and are praying that they hold out faithful unto the end, that they may receive a crown of life, they will then thank God and take courage. But in the next verse the apostle tells them the reason why he wishes them to know of his care or conflict for them.

(Verse 2.) That their hearts might be comforted, gladdened, cheered, encouraged, or refreshed. Whose heart would not be gladdened or cheered to know that such a one as this great apostle had such great interest in them? We not only have great men who are interested in our welfare, but we have the promise of Jesus that he will never leave us nor forsake us. Brother, is your heart made to rejoice over this fact? The Lord has said: "I know thy works." This being true, ought not our hearts be cheered, that, regardless of how little we may be able to accomplish, so long as we do all that we can, the Lord knows and will reward us in the end? Paul pleaded that the Corinthians be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for they knew that their labor was not in vain in the Lord. This is true to-day. When we labor in the vineyard of the Lord, our labor is not in vain. In doing this, we have done our duty and lifted the responsibility from our shoulders and placed it on those who have been taught the gospel and have rejected it. The gospel is still "the power of God unto salvation," and God's word is not to return to him void, but shall accomplish the thing whereto he shall send it. (Isa. 55: 11.) Brethren, why should we ever become discouraged? True, there are times when it seems that we are not accomplishing very much; but the gospel will do the same work to-day that it did in the days of the apostles, if we only spread it as we ought.

But our hearts are to be "knit together [closely united] in love." When this is done, we will have more interest for each other. Peter tells us that we should "love one another with a pure heart fervently." (1 Pet. 1: 22.) Paul was interested in their spiritual welfare and not so much their physical. Too many times we are interested in the physical welfare of those with whom we come in contact and not interested in their spiritual welfare at all. A fire breaks out; firemen are called to the scene, and they commence the work of saving the house. Upon examination, they find that there are several persons in the house who have been trapped by the flames and are unable to escape. Immediately they stop fighting the flames and try to save those in the house, even to the total loss of the house. Why? Because those in the house are more valuable than the house. Behold Paul's message in 2 Cor. 5: 1: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Is it not a fact that the real person in the house is worth more than the house? Still, we will give more for the saving of the house than the one in the house—interested more in their physical good than their spiritual. "Brethren, these things ought not so to be."

When we have the necessary spiritual interest or care for others, then we shall not be a stumblingblock—stand not in the way of sinners—but will do all that we can to teach them the way of the Lord as opportunity presents itself. We will first demonstrate to them, by our lives, that there is a reality in the religion of Jesus Christ, and then by our words teach them the truth.

But there is that richness of having the full assurance of understanding. Paul tells these brethren in the first division of this letter, in verse 9, that he prayed that they "might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding." This seems to be the understanding referred to here. Hence, to have this spiritual understanding is considered by the apostle something rich. To be able to understand the things written in God's blessed Book is indeed a great blessing. There are a great many people who, on account of their blindness or prejudice, are unable to understand the things given in the Divine Standard for man's good. But Paul prays that they may have this understanding so as to know the mystery of God, even Jesus Christ. It was necessary for them to have this full assurance of understanding in order to understand the gospel: for it is the gospel of Christ that is the "mystery of God" referred to here. No wonder the apostle spoke of this understanding as something rich.

(Verse 3.) All the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid in Christ. The apostle here refers to wisdom and knowledge as treasures—that which is valued very highly. All the wisdom and knowledge that will benefit man hereafter is in Christ. Through Christ, God has revealed this hidden mystery, the gospel, and it is through this gospel that we obtain all the knowledge of our soul's salvation that is to be obtained. It is through Christ as a medium that we obtain wisdom. Not the wisdom of this world. Paul told the brethren at Corinth that he came to them not with enticing words of man's wisdom. In James 3: 15-17 we learn that there is a wisdom that "descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. . . . But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." This is the wisdom that we want, and it is to be obtained only through the gospel.

Putting together the different translations, we have the following: I wish that you knew of the great care or struggle that I have for you, and those in Laodicea, and as many as have not seen me personally; that their hearts might be gladdened or encouraged, and that they may be knit together in love, and may gain in all its richness the full assurance of understanding, in order to a true knowledge of the mystery of God, even Christ, in whom are all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge hidden.

Field Notes.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

On Monday, April 10, my cousin, Lee Paschall, met me in Newbern and took me out to his home near the Nebo congregation, about twelve miles from town. It rained out my appointment that night. The next day he took me to Friendship, where I was supposed to have an appointment; because of some confusion as to whether I was to preach in town or at Bethel, a few miles in the country, no appointment was made.

However, I soon got in touch with the brethren and found great big chunks of friendship all about the town. It is well named. Brother W. C. James, of the merchant firm of Smith & James, entertained me in his home, and drove me in his car out into the country, where I saw many of the brethren. I did fine, too, as I got all but about half a dozen on the paid-ahead list.

My next stop was Alamo, the county seat of Crockett County. There I had an appointment, but the audience made me think of Davy Crockett and his companions just before the fall of the Alamo. But I was royally entertained in the home of Brother R. J. (Bob) Green. Brother Green is a relative of Brother Tom Green, Circuit Court Clerk of Lauderdale County, at Ripley.

Brother V. E. Pinkston took me to the Cross Roads congregation, near Bells, where I was entertained at the home of Brother and Sister L. N. Culp. There was a small crowd at Cross Roads also. But they had a good excuse. I have forgotten what it was, but it doesn't matter. It is the same everywhere. People just don't go to church any more, except on Sunday morning or during the light nights in August. Brother Culp drove me about in his car, so that I got to see most of the brethren. I almost made a clean-up there. Nearly every family is now getting the Gospel Advocate and is paid up. Brother Culp, who is a Freed-Hardeman boy, is a good man, a preacher and teacher of no mean ability, but is farming now. He drove me to Bells, where I took the train for Gadsden.

Dr. F. C. James met me at Gadsden. He took me to his home, and introduced me about town, and showed me every courtesy. But it rained out our appointment. He is a busy practicing physician, and a good one, yet he had time to spend with me; like Brother James, of Friendship, and Brother Culp, of Cross Roads, all of whom were busy. It seems if you want any extra work done, you must get a busy man to do it.

From Gadsden I went to Milan, where I preached at the Fairview congregation, three miles out. There I visited my aunt, Mrs. Alice Martin, and family. She was formerly the wife of my uncle, Frank Paschall, who died several years ago at Cairo, Tenn. I had a splendid visit, with good audiences Sunday morning and night, and did some business.

Here are some notes that may be of interest to some. While at Cross Roads, on Route 5 from Bells, I went into a place and was introduced to a Sister White. She began to ask about Love's Branch and Maury County, and I found out she is a sister to Uncle Henry Ritchey, who died recently at Shady Grove. She has a daughter and son-in-law, Brother and Sister Warren. Her husband is living, and all are members of the church.

There are four digressive churches in Crockett County. They are at Alamo, Bells, Crockett Mills, and Chestnut Bluff. When the organ was put in at Bells, twenty-two years ago, Brother R. J. Green was the first man to pull out and go some place else to worship. He and some others began to worship at the Cross Roads, three or four miles in the country. The "digressives" put a tent out there and tried to hinder them from getting started, but they are going yet. Some of the brethren still drive out from Bells to the country church. I wonder if the "digressives" are proud of their work. We have about fifteen congregations in Crockett County, so I was told.

At Milan the "digressives" have botched things up considerably. The house was bought and paid for when all were in harmony and no one there wanted the instrument. When the innovation spirit struck them, this house was sold and another bought and decided to trustees favorable to "digressivism." Then they put in an instrument and organized their societies, got in touch with the State Board, and were off with a bound; only they were like the "educated" frog—they had swallowed too many shot and could not jump. They had everything their own way for several years.

If "digressivism" can succeed at all in the small towns and country districts of Tennessee, then it should have succeeded in Milan. But they got weaker and weaker, and finally quit, and have given the keys over to our brethren. They are conducting service every Sunday in Milan. A few of the "digressives" are still scattered about the town. Not knowing the circumstances, one would think those few survivors would be worshiping with us. No, that is too good to be true. On April 16 their main supporter joined the U. S. A. Presbyterians. Some of the main teachers and public leaders are attending the Methodist Church. It will be well for our members to remember this when a "digressive" preacher tries to get them to join the digressive church. He tells you there is no important difference between us. The facts are, he is more favorable to almost any other religious body than he is to us.

Here's hoping we succeed at Milan. Brother W. R. Hassell, of Trenton, and Brother J. L. Holland, of Greenfield, both have monthly appointments there. If I am not badly mistaken, we have a conscientious, willing, and efficient leader there in the person of Dr. G. C. Bryant.

When I arrived at Alamo, I found Brother J. L. Holland was there preaching the funeral sermon over the remains of Brother Conley. Brother Conley leaves several children and grandchildren in the neighborhood, all of whom are members of the church, as far as I could learn.

It was my first opportunity to meet Brother Holland. He is a good speaker, and he is well spoken of in all these parts as a good man as well as preacher. He has done much good in Crockett County. May God bless him and all of our faithful brethren.

One man said: "The Gospel Advocate saved me. I didn't realize it then, but I do now." Another said: "My wife was won to Christ by reading the Gospel Advocate." These thoughts by the way.

"Review of O. E. Payne's Book on 'Psallo,'" by M. C. Kurfees.

Payne's book has been advertised extensively and many copies have been given to people to read with a request to return when read. I am advised that a special effort has been made in Tennessee and that many copies of the book have been circulated throughout the State.

The Review by Brother Kurfees is published in a pamphlet of nearly one hundred pages and sells for twenty-five cents a copy. This Review is a complete exposure of misrepresentations contained in Payne's book which were misleading as to the meaning of "psallo" as used in the New Testament.

Brother Kurfees has done his work with much care and thoroughness. He has read pages in the original in order to get the correct meaning of a word. He is thoroughly equipped for such work, and all lovers of the truth are indebted to him for the great service he has rendered the church in his Review of Payne's book.

The Review should be circulated and read. A number of churches have ordered one hundred copies each. Will not others do likewise? Help us give the Review a wide circulation. Send all orders to the McQuiddy Printing Company.

"From Faith Unto Faith." (Rom. 1.)

BY H. W. JONES.

What meaneth the above phrase? From the very little we have heard about this scriptural phrase, it must be considered, by most people, as a meaningless phrase. Some think it means one thing and some another quite different, while most people seem to pass it by as so unimportant as to deserve little or no consideration. But I am one who does not share in such opinions. I consider its meaning so important that I recently preached a sermon on, or to (not "from," I trust), that phrase of scripture as a text. Now, let us see, if we can, what the phrase means; and, in order to understand its full import, we must carefully consider the context, as well as the text. It is inspired scripture, and ours to look into.

1. Paul said: "I am debtor both to Greeks and to Barbarians, both to the wise and to the foolish. So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you also that are in Rome. For I am not ashamed of the gospel." No! Paul was "not ashamed of the gospel"—"not ashamed" to preach the plain gospel in the imperial city of Rome, right among the very elite, the wise, the great, the powerful, the rich and proud of this world! But—alas!—how different with many "preachers" (so-called) to-day! From what little of the pure gospel many of them preach to-day, they are either "ashamed of the gospel" or woefully ignorant of it, one or the other, or both. Just think how much of something else (story, lectures, travel, opinions, feelings, anecdotes, politics, "drives," etc.), and how little of the pure gospel of Christ is preached in the pulpits and through the religious press of our land and country to-day, then how fitting and needful for men now to say, like Paul: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ!" Lord, grant us men of conviction and courage, like Paul, who will "cry aloud, and spare not."

2. Why, Paul, are you "not ashamed of the gospel?" Let Paul answer: "For it is the power of God unto salvation"—yes, "the power" (not a power, some, or part, of the power) "of God unto salvation." The gospel, then, is the God-ordained power to lead mankind unto salvation, and the only direct power God exerts to-day "unto salvation" from sin of a lost and ruined world. No wonder then that Paul was "not ashamed of the gospel!" But "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation" to whom? "To every one that believeth," says Paul. Then down goes, with one stroke of the inspired penman, the two extreme, false theories—Universalism, on the one hand, and Calvinism, on the other. Yes, it (salvation) is "to every one" on the fundamental condition that he "believeth" (which includes faith in, turning toward, and obedience to, the Lord). But why "not ashamed of the gospel?" Let Paul further answer: "For therein [that is, in the gospel] is revealed a righteousness of God from faith unto faith." Yes, God's "righteousness," or rather his justification of ungodly human beings "from faith unto faith," is revealed in the gospel. Keep in mind the fact that this "righteousness," or justification, comes from God and is his work in the scheme of redemption, and that this justification of man is "from faith"—that is, on the ground or condition of man's faith, or belief, in Jesus. And, mark you, Paul has already described this "faith" as "obedience of faith." So the gospel reveals to us God's plan of justifying, or counting as righteous, sinful man on or from man's faith in Jesus. Praise the Lord for such glorious, gracious revelation! Instead of being "ashamed of the gospel," it is enough to make us all ashamed of ourselves. But this justification of imperfect man is not only based or conditioned on or from man's faith, but is also "unto faith"—yes, justification "from faith unto faith."

3. Now, what meaneth the phrase, "from faith unto faith?" We have already seen, from the context leading up to it, that in the gospel is revealed God's plan of justification, or salvation from sin, upon or "from faith" in the Christ. That much is certain. It is fully taught in the context and briefly, though cogently, stated in the text. That, then, is part of the meaning and import of the phrase; but what is its full meaning and import?

(a) "It means the Jews' faith first, then unto the Gentiles," says one. But as that has no connection with the main or leading thought in the context and no foundation whatever in the text, we dismiss that idea at once as not fitting at this place.

(b) "It means from one degree of faith unto another and higher degree of faith," says another. But as Paul has no such idea under consideration here, so we dismiss that as far-fetched and untenable.

(c) "It means from one person's faith unto another's faith," some one has said. But as I can see no connection whatever with that idea and the central or leading idea of the context, I dismiss that also.

(d) It must mean, then, that in the gospel is revealed God's righteousness or justification by or "from faith eis (in order to) faith." That is in perfect harmony with Paul's arguments in the context, and a brief, though clear, forcible, and logical, meaning of the words in the text. In the gospel, then, is revealed God's plan of righteousness, or justification of man by or "from belief eis (for) belief"—that is, to induce belief. Or, more fully stated, in the gospel is revealed the fact that God will justify the believer in Jesus, and this gracious revelation is given in order to induce man to believe. This is plain, clear, and the very purpose of Christ's sacrifice and the gospel founded thereon. As it is written: "Knowing that a man is not justified [accounted righteous] by the works of the law but through faith in Jesus Christ, even we believed on Christ Jesus, that we might be justified by faith in Christ, and not by the works of the law; because by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." (Gal. 2: 16.) This is but a fuller statement of our text. So, then, God reveals to mankind in the gospel that if they will believe on and obey his Son, he will justify them (though imperfect they be), and this gracious revelation is done as a motive to induce men to believe.

4. The grammatical construction of the language conveys the same exegesis. The phrase, "from faith," modifies righteousness (justification) and not "revealed." Hence, the gospel reveals God's justification from faith eis (unto or in order to) faith, or belief. People were not justified under the Old Covenant; there was "a remembrance of sins year by year." But not so under the New Testament. To know "that Christ died for our sins" and will graciously justify us on or from our active faith in him is enough to induce us all to believe. If such "amazing grace" fails to induce us to believe, then nothing can, and there is no hope for us.

Finally, to prove God's plan of justification by or "from faith unto faith," Paul quotes the prophet Habakkuk (2: 4): "But the righteous [just] shall live by faith." Hence, "no one was justified by the law before God" (Gal. 3: 11). So it is by faith in Christ that we are "justified" and "live" spiritually in him unto the dawn of the perfect day.

Motherhood.

BY THANKFUL BARRY HARSH.

Believing that at least some, if not the most of us, have very perverted views regarding motherhood, as well as many shortcomings as mothers, and since we cannot now begin sooner, it does not seem inopportune to begin trying to induce some reaction by bringing to the attention of the present and future mother God's teachings on his much-abused plan.

I believe, if analyzed, we would find that all of the excuses—so-called "reasons"—for rejecting God's teachings on this important subject are born of one of two sins—viz.: selfishness, exhibited in our lives, in refusing to spend and be spent in the Master's service; and in the lack of faith, shown in not trusting God for his promises.

And here let me digress to suggest that we American women, adjudging ourselves to be the foremost people of the world, had better weigh well the gravity and consequences before sending to other countries, or even permitting them to go without vehement protest, advocates of the "birth-control" doctrine for the avowed purpose of promulgating such ungodly teachings, and that to an "inferior" (?) race. One such person, when applying for a passport very recently, was informed by the ambassador from that country that she would have to leave her "birth-control" ideas behind, as the laws of Japan forbid such practices. Can we not here learn, from this "inferior" people, a lesson of respect and obedience to God's law?

It reminds one of Christ's rebuke to the Jews when he said: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is become so, ye make him twofold more a son of hell than yourselves." "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."

Knowing, then, as we all do, that none of us rise higher than our ideals—if we ever attain them—does it not behoove us to see that our ideals are in harmony with God's teaching and attuned to his divine will? May we hope that we will all be aroused to a realization of God's authority and wisdom; but in any event, even though our sensibilities are blinded to his wisdom, may we be aroused to the absolute necessity of rendering, as much as within each of us lies, strict obedience to his every command, and may we all become willing subjects of his rule. "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith Jehovah. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

We cannot fail to grasp the fact that maternity has its serious side, as well as its joys and pleasures; but what should be the mental prospectus of every woman as she stands upon the threshold of her divinely appointed sphere—motherhood? What an occasion for delight should she see this to be! What a realm for happiness should she see stretching down throughout the coming years! And what a state of joyful anticipation should be hers as she meditates on the blissful moments when she holds her precious babe in her embrace, feeling that it is her very own! How her heart should be filled with exultant pride as she contemplates the exalted and sacred trust that God has bestowed upon her! For it was unto her keeping and into her hands that he intrusted the soul and physical being of every human creature that ever was or ever will be born into the world.

And how, may we ask, did God himself regard this custody, and how should mothers accept this God-given charge?

Listen to the salutation of his angel, Gabriel, to the virgin Mary when she was called to be the mother of his only begotten Son and our Savior, Jesus Christ: "Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women." And again: "Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favor with God."

Truly, Mary alone received this most exalted blessing and highest favor, the mother of God's dear Son. But what was God's blessing to Abraham? First of all, he said to Abraham, "I will make of thee a great nation;" and to Jacob he said: "I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude."

God himself, then, having told us that children are blessings, and, furthermore, having given us a direct command to multiply and replenish the earth, I again ask: How should fathers and mothers accept these blessings, and what should be their attitude toward this command? Have we betrayed this trust or been disobedient to his will and disregarded his all-wise plan? If we mothers are mindful of and faithful to our trust, can we fail to grasp the sacredness of our mission or the gravity of our responsibility? For it is undoubtedly more especially to the mother's care and keeping that God has committed the world's millions; and largely to her has he confided the spiritual, mental, and physical guidance and development of every individual being.

Do we welcome our babes as a heritage from God, realizing that they are the most precious gifts and greatest blessings that even he can bestow?

This would indeed be a grim old world, filled only with grown-ups! And homes not blessed and made happy by the merry ring of childish laughter and the prattle of baby tongues are only abiding places, and have been deprived of the greatest source of true happiness and God's sweetest blessing.

As I now look back on the early childhood of my own children, I regret, with sadness, that I did not have the wisdom to more fully realize the vast importance of making every other duty secondary and subservient to that of their spiritual training; for we all know, "As the twig inclines, so the tree is bent;" and none the less true are the Master's words: "As ye sow, so shall ye reap." How very careful, then, should we be in trying to start them right! And how much easier could we make it for them, if we would prayerfully and wisely train them in the way that they should grow! How many pitfalls and possibly losing fights we could save them! "Train up a child in the way he should go, and even when he is old he will not depart from it." Then, just as surely as we find this departure, we will also find a defect in the training. Doubtless this is anything but soothing to many of us, but it is none the less true, for God said it.

Let us, then, be most diligent and careful of their training, otherwise we are apt to awaken some late morning and, if not positively shocked, at least find cause to wonder at what we behold; for Satan never overlooks an opportunity which we in our negligence permit him to have.

God has, in his wisdom, ordained that every blessing, regardless of its nature, carries with it its own responsibility, and no doubt this is for our own development. What responsibility, then—yea, and what solemn duty—is heralded with the advent of every newborn babe? Is it not that divinely given privilege and that unquestionable obligation of its mother to begin as soon as possible to fill its heart with God's word, his seed, the source on earth of every noble thought and deed; and to teach it from infancy that it is not its own, but has been bought, soul and body, with the price, the blood of Jesus, and that, therefore, some day it will be required to give an account of how it has dealt with this soul which God says must be returned to him, and this body, his temple, which he tells us to present "a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is" our "reasonable service?" It then must answer whether or not it has used this soul and this body to God's glory and honor or its own degradation and shame.

May God give every mother the wisdom and consecration to lovingly and carefully direct each childish step onward and upward, and help her, to the utmost of her possibilities, fashion its threefold nature into the likeness of its blessed Redeemer, so that when the final summons comes God will say to it: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

And now, O God, pray we
Our souls thou wilt win
From out the polluting sea
Of selfishness and sin.
Bid them cease to drift,
And by thy strength, O Lord,
Into the lifeboat of thy word.
We ask thee, thou them lift,
And forbid that they shall fall,
For thou art Lord of all.

Lead us, lest again we stray
From thy life-saving plan.
Cleanse us from our secret sin
And keep us pure within.
Make us anxious to obey
Thy small or great command;
Then, no matter what befall,
Nor asking whence or where it leads,
E'en to the "valley and shadow of death,"
We'll heed thy every call.
And as blessings we'll our children see,
From God's unerring hand;
For 'tis the shaping of their lives
And the good we do for them
That makes the world's best women
And the noblest of her men.

But when these men and women
Have passed well o'er the crest,
And their paths lead down the other side
To where they'll again be blest;
E'en as they near the portal,
Tho' with bodies frail and bent,
But lives filled with noble deeds
And in God's service spent;
Whose now this whole-souled vigil,
And whose this sacred care,
And whose the blessed privilege,
To see to their welfare?
It is these God-given children's
Who stand with them at the brink
And listen as they tell them
(And who doubts it's what they think?)
"Tis in you, our dear children,
God has blessed us to the end;
But he doeth all things well,
And the blessedness of motherhood
Eternity alone can tell."

Los Angeles (Cal.) Notes.

BY W. EDGAR MILLER.

The Central church of Christ, 1720 South Flower Street, is enjoying a steady, vigorous, and rapid growth, there being new faces present each Lord's day. On April 2 we were rejoiced to have five new names added to our number, these being Brother and Sister Peterson, Sister Baird and daughter, and Brother Schnelle. We are delighted to have these splendid workers join our forces.

Last Lord's day (April 9) our hearts were made glad when Virgil, the bright and promising son of Brother and Sister R. L. Smith, made the good confession and was baptized. Brother Virgil has been a regular attendant at services ever since the congregation started and has proved himself a willing worker. We welcome him to the fold, and pray that we may be a help to him, knowing that he will be an encouragement to us. Brother and Sister Kindred, who have just arrived in California from Rockwood, Tenn., also took membership with us. They are the kind of people who look up the church wherever they go, and we welcome them to Los Angeles, and especially to the Central congregation.

Recently our membership list was divided up and from four to six names given to each of a number of sisters who had been selected, with the instruction to keep in touch with those whose names were on their list, and in case any of them missed two Sundays in succession to find out why or report their names to either Brother Witty or Brother Wright, who would investigate. All accepted the task as a pleasant duty and expressed themselves much pleased to be able to do something to help the work along.

The attendance at the ten-o'clock Bible study is increasing and improving. By improving I mean that those who do come are trying to be present and in their seats by ten o'clock sharp, and they are succeeding. It certainly is a great pleasure to be able to begin services promptly at ten o'clock with nearly all who come to the Bible study present and in their seats. It probably was never thought that this could be done, but we are proving that it can be done. We have not reached the one-hundred-per-cent mark yet, but we are reaching for it and are trying to make it a habit.

Concerning Mississippi.

BY C. E. HOLT.

On Sunday, April 16, I preached the commencement sermon for the Tishomingo Agricultural High School at Tishomingo, Miss. There were thirty-five graduates—a fine class of twenty-three young men and twelve young women. The principal of this school, Professor Nettles, is a man of fine attainments. Tishomingo is on the Illinois Central Railroad, and has some most excellent people. There is a church of Christ in the town with a small membership. It has enjoyed the preaching of Brethren N. B. Hardeman, John T. Smith, J. T. Harris, and many other strong men. But Mississippi is away behind some other States in numerical strength in regard to what we teach and practice as the word and will of God. Why is this? Recently I read a very thoughtful article from Brother Lee Jackson in the Gospel Advocate. Brother Jackson's article was of great interest to me. I was surprised to learn that in past years we were much stronger in Mississippi than we are today. Why have we lost ground? The same is true of South Alabama. In South Alabama the distinguished preacher and educator, J. M. Barnes, did a great work. In his palmiest days he was president of Highland Home College, one of the best schools we ever had. That fine school is no more. Its influence, however, is alive and active and will live and spread and bless the world as the ages roll on. Brother Barnes established many congregations in South Alabama after the apostolic order. But the work has not been kept up as it should have been. But back to Mississippi. I just wish I could spend a whole year in that State in real missionary work. Why is it that more preachers do not go to Mississippi? Do you say they are waiting for some of the strong congregations in Middle Tennessee to finance the work? That would be a fine thing for some of the strong churches in Tennessee and Kentucky and in North Alabama to do. Brethren, let us look after the fields nearest our doors.

INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

By M. C. Kurfees

Cloth. 300 pages. Price, postpaid.....$1.50

This is the most comprehensive book on this important subject now before the public. In it the Greek verb "psalle" is philologically and historically examined, together with a full discussion of kindred matters relating to music in Christian worship. The book is the result of a lifetime of critical study and research, and has become the standard of information on the music question. It has been highly recommended by scholarly brethren in the church of Christ and in the religious world.

The Tabernacle Meeting.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The evangelistic campaign in the city of Nashville, beginning on March 28 and participated in by forty or more congregations, came to a triumphant close on Sunday night, April 16, having continued for twenty days.

THE ORIGIN OF THE MOVEMENT.

There has for many years been coöperated efforts on the part of the churches of Christ in and around Nashville in a small way in what are termed both the home and foreign fields, but not until this meeting has there been such an extensive and united effort in this city. The Grandview Heights congregation suggested the idea of this meeting, which was communicated to other congregations, resulting in meetings in many of the churches for consideration, which finally crystallized into a unanimous decision to launch the campaign. At first there were some who were doubtful of the wisdom of trying to fill so large a building as the Ryman Auditorium, or, at least, to maintain such audiences throughout a meeting. But as the earnestness and zeal of the leading spirits urging the work became so manifest, a flame of enthusiasm was kindled among the people and a determination to make the enterprise a success was born in every bosom which swept every obstacle aside, and all the congregations in and around the city were filled with the beacon light of hope. The success of this enterprise to save souls emphasizes what can be done in every city where there are even as few as a half dozen congregations who have a mind to work.

THE ELEMENTS OF SUCCESS.

By this is meant the preparatory work, getting all things ready for the beginning of the meeting. (1) The churches became filled with a desire to get before the people a fuller knowledge of the simple plan of salvation and the plea for Christian unity upon the basis laid down by the restorative movement, whose motto was: "Where the Scriptures speak, we will speak; and where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent." (2) To carry out the principle of New Testament church coöperation without the organization of a society to take control of and manage the affairs of the churches, so that when the meeting should close there would be not a vestige of an organization left other than the local congregations. Hence, when the last benediction was pronounced and the mighty throng filed out of the immense building, there were left only the churches of Christ just as they were before the meeting was conceived. (3) The liberality of the disciples in willingly and freely contributing of their money for the success of the work. Every item of expense, amounting to something less than six thousand dollars, was met by freewill offerings, and not one time was a collection taken at the Tabernacle. The fact of no public collections at any of the services was a revelation to the outside people. (4) The untiring, painstaking, and unselfish efforts of those who had control of the incidental matters connected with the meeting entered very largely into its success.

THE EVANGELISTS.

While the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to all them who believe and obey it, yet God has ordained that it be preached and sung. C. M. Pullias was the leader and director of the song service, concerning which too much cannot be said in praise. Never within the walls of the historic building known as the Ryman Auditorium have there been such vocal praises rendered to God, and neither has the city of Nashville ever witnessed the like before. The songs were spiritual and scriptural and rendered with a heart power and pathos truly sublime. With no instrument save the human voice, that capacious building resounded with the melodies of spiritual songs that lifted the soul to God. With not even a tuning fork to aid in pitching the songs, Pullias never missed the right key. He always gave the right pitch, and like a master of assemblies led the vast throngs whose voices rose and fell in harmony with the notes and sentiments of the songs. Brother Pullias is truly a great leader of song and deserves much credit for the success of the meeting. N. B. Hardeman is a great preacher; and the beauty of it is, he does not seem to know the fact. Nature has done much for Hardeman in bestowing upon him an almost matchless voice, an exceedingly pleasing personality, a kindly disposition, with a good-natured smile that will win its way anywhere. He has all the elements of an orator, and, if he had been so disposed, could have gone to the top in the political world, but chose rather to consecrate his God-given powers to a better cause. Hardeman knows the Bible, and is as true to the gospel as the needle to the pole, and shuns not to declare the whole counsel of God to saint and sinner. He carries in his preaching both sides of the great commission, and is neither afraid nor ashamed to preach, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." He uses the simplest illustrations, and the most ordinary mind can grasp the truth illustrated. This man of God is, beyond any question, a master of assemblies, and sways his audiences with an ease and grace of voice and manners that attracts and holds almost the breathless attention of his auditors.

THE RESULTS OF THE MEETING.

None save God in heaven can estimate this. There were about two hundred baptisms and twenty-five restorations as the immediate results; but, like the current of a mighty river, the influence of the meeting will sweep on through time, bearing upon its bosom the fruitage of redeemed souls. Hardeman and Pullas will be sleeping with the fathers and perhaps their names forgot before the influence of this meeting will have spent its force. Preaching brethren and others from over the State and some from other States were in attendance, and I am sure all will return to their homes happy over the meetings. One of the most pleasing features of the attendance was the presence on two occasions of Brother E. G. Sewell and his faithful wife, who have held aloft the banner of Christ through many storms and tempests. Other aged brethren gave their presence to the meeting, among whom were Brethren James E. Scobey and J. O. Blaine. The lovable, sainted, and prince among evangelists, T. B. Larimore, of California, sent a telegram of encouragement to the meeting, and so did others send words of encouragement, among whom was M. C. Kurfess, of Louisville, Ky., so well known to the readers of this journal. Brethren Elam and McQuiddy both returned from the West in time to be at the meeting. Brother Elam led the opening prayer and was almost constantly in attendance. May God bless and sanctify it all to his glory and honor and to the salvation of immortal souls.

Easter Services.

BY F. B. S.

There was much in the papers about the way in which the fashionable churches observed Easter in this city. Dr. James I. Vance, of the First Presbyterian Church, seemed to have the lead, perhaps, a little, in the display made. Among other things said of the services at the First Presbyterian Church, the Nashville Banner made the following statement:

Easter services at the First Presbyterian Church Sunday morning were marked by floral decorations of lilies and other spring flowers banked about the pulpit and choir loft, by a special program of music, by a sermon appropriate to the occasion, and by the reception of one hundred and forty new members into the church. Preceding the service in the church auditorium the pastor, Dr. James I. Vance, baptized nine Easter babies in the Sunday-school rooms of the church.

This was quite a showing in the way of additions to Dr. Vance's church, but the nine "Easter babies" had no showing at all, for the same paper says they were all under one year old. They could not help themselves; the Doctor had the advantage of them. It is a pity to take the advantage of anything that way.

In the same report of the Easter service the following is found:

Following the first anthem the reception of new members was observed, those professing their faith in Christ coming forward to stand about the pulpit and publicly acknowledge their allegiance to him as their Savior and their God.

There is evidently two ways to get into the First Presbyterian Church, one for adults and another for babies. The adults came forward and stood about the pulpit and publicly acknowledged "their allegiance to him as their Savior and their God;" while the babies were carried back into the Sunday-school room and, of course, made no acknowledgment of anything to any one. I wonder if the Doctor could be made to see that he got his infant baptism from the same source that he did his Easter service! If I understand the matter, both came through Rome. The Savior said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" but he could not have been talking about these Easter babies, for they could not believe. Peter said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." (Acts 2: 38.) He was not talking about these "Easter babies," for they could not repent. But sometimes we are told that the little lambs should be brought into the fold with the sheep; but what did Doctor Vance give these little innocent children more than we give ours? He could not have given them faith, for they were too young to believe. They had no repentance, no prayer, no teaching, no anything but water, and very little of that. When did Christ ever command any one to baptize an infant, or where is there any account of any apostle's ever baptizing one?

But our Vine Street brethren could not afford to be left entirely behind in the March of the religious world toward Rome, and so Dr. Morgan must come with his part of the program. He is not hearty in it and does not want to go all the galts, but he must show some appreciation of these modern ways. I quote from the same paper:

Dr. Carey E. Morgan, pastor of the Vine Street Christian Church, preached to a large congregation Easter morning, his subject being "Conquering Death." The chancel was banked with flowers and palms, and the choir gave a beautiful program of resurrection music.

A number of new members were received into the church, and the service was one of great impressiveness and spiritual significance.

At night the Sunday-school children gave a musical program, and this service also had an unusually large attendance and brought the day's celebration to a fitting close.

Doctor Morgan can no more defend Easter than Doctor Vance can the baptism of his nine "Easter babies." Both came through the Roman Catholic Church. Why will Brother Morgan try to follow Rome, even if he does it in a very poor, weak, half-hearted way? Why not teach people the truth both by precept and example? While it is all right for Brother Morgan to preach on "Conquering Death," still, at this time it perhaps would have been better for him to have told his hearers that the word "Easter" is in the Bible but one time, and then it is a mistranslation. Of course, every one knows it is not in the Revision at all. The heathen first began the observance of Easter, and then the Roman Catholics adopted it, and now it is in Brother Morgan's church.

Remember the Orphan.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Christians are commanded to add to their faith godliness—Godlikeness. No one can read the Bible without being convinced of the fact that God favors the fatherless and widow. If we would be like God, we must do the same thing. God severely punished those who would afflict the fatherless and the widow. Ex. 22: 22-24 declares: "Ye shall not afflict any widow, or fatherless child. If thou afflict them at all, and they cry at all unto me, I will surely hear their cry; and my wrath shall wax hot, and I will kill you with the sword; and your wives shall be widows, and your children fatherless." God also executes justice for the fatherless. Of course he does this through his children. Deut. 10: 18 declares: "He doth execute justice for the fatherless and widow, and loveth the sojourner, in giving him food and raiment." Also we are assured by Holy Writ that God is the helper of the fatherless. God is able to put it into the heart of his people to care for, protect, and help the orphan. The sweet singer of Israel, David, says: "The helpless committeth himself unto thee; thou hast been the helper of the fatherless." (Ps. 10: 14.) Again, David says that God is "a father of the fatherless." (Ps. 68: 5.) How easy it is for God to create within his children a Christlike spirit that will protect, clothe, feed, and educate the orphan child! Every child of God should rejoice at the opportunity of becoming like God by looking after the welfare of the helpless orphan.

Solomon, the wise man, tells us that God pleads the cause of the fatherless. (Prov. 23: 10, 11.)

God holds out to us the promise of good for this life and the promise of life everlasting, if we will be kind and considerate of the orphan. He pleads with us by all that is pure, good, and holy to be considerate of the fatherless, and he warns us by all the horrors of hell not to be neglectful of the fatherless child that needs our love, sympathy, and protection. If we turn a deaf ear to the cry of the orphan,

If we are heedless of their calls for help, we shall not prosper. Those who plead the cause of the fatherless shall prosper in this world, and in the world to come shall enjoy everlasting life. (Jer. 5: 28.) If when God prospers us we are stingy and withhold our help from the real needy, we are sure to cry for help ourselves. Prov. 11: 24 says: "There is that scattereth, and increaseth yet more; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth only to want."

I have given these scriptures to encourage Christians to give cheerfully for the support and maintenance of orphan children.

It has been our custom to ask the churches to make a regular quarterly contribution to the Tennessee Orphans' Home. The last contribution should have been taken up by the churches on the first Lord's day in April, but, on account of my taking a rest, no call was made for this contribution. I judge from a note I have seen in the Gospel Advocate since returning home that many of the churches overlooked the contribution that should have been made on the first Lord's day in April. The Home has not been receiving so much recently, and is, therefore, feeling the need of this contribution.

In order to give the churches an opportunity to bless themselves and to relieve the necessities of orphan children, I am going to ask them to make a special contribution for the Tennessee Orphans' Home on the second Lord's day in May. I do not feel that it is necessary or think that it is wise for me to plead with the churches to do their full duty in making this contribution. The churches have been very considerate, have been very liberal, and many of them have been contributing for a number of years to support the orphans in the Tennessee Orphans' Home. This is a work that needs no commendation, for heaven approves it, and God will bless those who give liberally for the support of the fatherless.

Christ tells us that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20: 35.) I am sure no one has ever given cheerfully and liberally, as God has prospered him, that does not realize the truth of Christ's statement. From actual experience I have learned that I get far more enjoyment out of what I do to help others than I do out of the money that I expend for my own pleasure and gratification. Instead of being urged to contribute to such a noble work, every child of God should rejoice at the opportunity that he has to bless the lives of the helpless orphans. Our giving should not be spasmodic. Our giving should not be to get rid of an obligation, but we should give with a deliberate purpose. It should be our aim, with all of our gifts, to honor and to glorify God.

The inspired apostle, in 2 Cor. 9: 6, 7, says: "But this I say, He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." The man who sows sparingly will reap sparingly, and the man who sows bountifully will reap bountifully, just as Paul tells us. We may not be able to tell just how it is; but it is certain, if we are liberal, making gifts for the betterment of the world, that God will see to it that we are prospered and blessed in so doing.

How sweet it will be when we stand at the judgment bar of God to hear the Savior say: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these least, ye did it unto me!" On the other hand, how indescribably sad will it be if we hear the terrible doom: "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me!"

Send all contributions direct to the Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn. I shall be very glad to learn at our next meeting, which is in June, that on the second Lord's day in May a very generous and hearty response was made to this call.

Wanted—Five Thousand New Subscribers.

BY J. C. M'Q.

It is well understood that the cost of publishing a religious weekly journal is much greater than ever before. It is also true that with a large circulation the cost per paper will be less than it would be with a small circulation. Under the most favorable conditions it is hardly possible to publish a religious journal without loss. Thirty-five years ago this was not true. Then it cost just about half as much to publish a paper as it does now. Religious papers have not doubled the price of their subscription. When I began work with the Gospel Advocate in January of 1885, the subscription price of the Gospel Advocate was two dollars a year, in advance, just the same as it is now. In the intervening years I have seen many papers spring up in the brotherhood, to live a few years and then die for the want of funds to continue them. Of course these drew away support from the Gospel Advocate. The Gospel Advocate filled out the unexpired subscriptions of a number of these papers at a loss.

The Gospel Advocate has never been published for money, but for the purpose of advocating the gospel. If the publishers had not made sacrifices to publish the paper, it could not have continued to exist. Sacrifices have been cheerfully made without the hope of earthly reward.

Our readers, by actively coöperating with us, can put the paper on a basis to pay its own way without loss. The way to do this is to add five thousand new subscribers to our subscription list. This can be done. If every preacher and every reader of this journal would speak a word for it, ten thousand subscribers would be added to the Gospel Advocate in a few months. The Advocate is helpful to the preachers and arouses the churches to more zeal and spirituality. The churches where the Advocate is read do more work for advancing the cause of Christ than where it is not.

Christians should read papers that teach the truth instead of reading the sensational literature of the day. They need to meditate upon that which is pure and uplifting. We appeal to every one who reads this to go to work immediately to help us add at least five thousand new names to our list of subscribers. We want the boys and girls, the young men and young ladies, the middle-aged and the old, one and all, to help us in this campaign. Write at once for sample copies. Go to your friends and ask them to subscribe for the Advocate. You know many people who would be benefited by reading the paper, yet are not doing so. For the cause that we love and for the sake of the person himself, will you not use your influence to get him to fill out the subscription blank below?

At Home and Abroad

M. L. Moore will begin a meeting at the Fanning School on Tuesday evening, May 2, and will continue over the first Sunday.

W. N. Fergusen is in a meeting at Sixth Avenue and Buchanan Streets, this city. Two confessions Sunday. The meeting will continue indefinitely.

F. B. Srygley preached on Sunday morning at Fairfield, Tenn., and at night at Bellbuckle, Tenn. He reports both these congregations as doing very well.

W. E. Morgan preached last Sunday at Foster Street, this city. Two were added to the fellowship of the congregation—one restored and one by statement.

W. M. Oakley will preach next Sunday at Flat Rock, near Lebanon, Tenn. He is expected to begin a meeting at California Avenue, this city, on the first Sunday in May.

Two large crowds at Russell and Ninth Streets last Lord's day, with two confessions, one reclaimed, and two by letter. Two confessions also on Wednesday night before at prayer meeting.

Andy T. Ritchie, of Madison, Tenn., who has been dividing his time between preaching and farming, has arranged to give his entire time to evangelistic work, and may be had for some meetings after September.

From T. B. Clark, Gallatin, Tenn., April 17: "We had a large audience and good interest last Lord's day, with one restoration. We have had seventeen additions at our regular services during the last month."

From Willie Hunter, Livingston, Tenn., Route 1: "I have been kept at home very close for over five weeks on account of my wife being sick. She is better now, able to be up some. If she continues to improve, I can arrange for a meeting or so in June. Any one desiring my services can write me. For reference, consult A. B. Lipscomb, John E. Dunn, or Marion Harris. The cause here is moving along as well as usual."

From J. H. Hines, Montgomery, Ala., April 19: "The soul-winning campaign is on at the Highland Park church of Christ in Montgomery, conducted by H. Leo Boles. The meeting has been well advertised; interest is high; the best of singing; house packed every night. The meeting is only three days old, and three have obeyed the Christ. Brother Boles is sounding out the word; the Christians are working and praying; the victory is sure."

In a letter to W. M. Oakley, dated April 18, 1922, W. H. Carpenter, of New Middleton, Tenn., says: "Friday night we had a severe windstorm, which did a great deal of damage about New Middleton. The wind blew down several barns and homes and literally demolished the Free Church here. I think best not to try to have preaching till some arrangement for a house can be made." While we are sorry that these brethren have no place in which to worship, it may prove a great blessing, as it may compel them to build a house at New Middleton which they can call their own.

Andrew Perry writes from Dugger, Ind., April 20: "After a short stay at Bismarck, Ill., I visited Clinton, Sullivan, and Dugger, Ind., doing some work among the members at each place. I am going to spend the rest of this week with the Union congregation, near Spencer, Ind., where I expect to preach some three or four times. Then I shall go on to Belmont, Ohio, where I intend to spend a few days preaching and in house-to-house work among the members for our Master. I expect to visit several congregations and hold several mission meetings in West Virginia. I ask the prayers of the faithful for the work I am striving to do."

The following subjects will be discussed, one each day, at Benton, Ky., May 2-5, 1922: (1) "The Bible teaches that baptism to a believing penitent is a condition of pardon." A. G. Freed affirms; J. E. Skinner denies. (2) "The Bible teaches that the believer in Jesus Christ has salvation before baptism." J. E. Skinner affirms; A. G. Freed denies. (3) "The Bible teaches that a child of God can so apostatize as to be finally lost." A. G. Freed affirms; J. E. Skinner denies. (4) "The Bible teaches that in conviction and conversion the Holy Spirit operates directly and immediately upon the heart of a sinner in addition to the power resident in the word." J. E. Skinner affirms; A. G. Freed denies.

H. C. Harris writes from Starkville, Miss., April 20: "I have recently preached at Hudsonville and Greenwood Springs, Miss., and at Vernon, Ala. Most of my work has been in a destitute field in several counties south of Tupelo, Miss. I am locating at West Point, that I may be nearer the center of my work. I have promised several meetings, but have time for more. I want to give at least half of my time to destitute and weak places. I desire to give most of my time to Mississippi, but will answer calls in near-by territory. Central Mississippi is a needy field. Address me at 43 West Broad Street, West Point, Miss."

Charley Taylor and W. E. Morgan will begin a mission meeting at Cairo, Ill., on the first Sunday in May. The meeting will be held in a tent, and these brethren expect to go ahead of time and get the tent well located. It is to be hoped that all our brethren who are near enough will encourage the meeting by attending as much as possible, and that the church especially in that part of the country will send a contribution to these brethren to help defray the expenses of the meeting. Brother Morgan has held meetings in Missouri not far from Cairo, and Brother Taylor is well and favorably known in Western Kentucky and West Tennessee. May this be a fine meeting. These brethren will do their part; let all help them who can. They can be addressed while there: General Delivery, Cairo, Ill.

R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., keeps busy in the Master's vineyard. He writes: "It has been some time since I have made a report. I was at Whitwell on Thursday night before the second Lord's day in March; at Daus on Friday night; at College on Saturday night and on the second Lord's day morning, and at Lea's in the afternoon; at At-pontley on Monday night; at Viola, Warren County, on the third Lord's day in March, morning and night, and at Pleasant Knob in the afternoon. I was at Hillsboro, in Coffee County, the fourth Lord's day in March, and at Corder's Cross Roads, in Lincoln County, the first Lord's day in April. I was at Spencer, in Van Buren County, on the second Lord's day in April, and continued one week, preaching at night only. One baptism. Interest was good throughout and the meetinghouse was filled at every service. Burritt College is getting along fine under the management of Professor Scott, assisted by Chessor and Bonner. I am to begin a meeting with the Cowart Street church of Christ, Chattanooga, Tenn., the fourth Lord's day in April."

Concerning the work that is being done in the mountains of East Tennessee, Will J. Cullum, now located at Rockwood, Tenn., writes under date of April 20: "The work in Roane and Rhea counties is progressing nicely. On last Lord's day we had the largest crowds yet at both services at Rockwood—one hundred and forty-two at Bible study and a full house at night. The midweek Bible drill continues to grow in attendance and interest, one hundred and two being present on Wednesday night; a good class also at Dayton on Thursday night; and a ladies' class twice each week that is very interesting. We are planning to do some missionary work in this part of the State and hope to accomplish much good for the cause of Christ. This is purely a mission field. Many have never heard of the church of Christ, hence are not preached to death as in many places. I have just read with sincere regret of the death of M. C. Cayce. Another one of God's noblemen has gone. A true soldier has fallen from the ranks. Who will volunteer to take his place in that much-neglected field? Let some loyal brother go at once and continue this good work."

Our brother, Matthew C. Cayce, who was doing such efficient work in Mississippi, was suddenly called up higher on Wednesday of last week. There was in the office at the time of his death the following report of his work, sent from Columbus, Miss., April 17: "Our meeting here is announced to continue until next Thursday night. Five were baptized yesterday afternoon, making seven baptisms to date; and one has come from the 'digressives' who wants to be content to stand with us on union ground, worshipping 'as it is written' and forsaking all teaching of men. Also, two members heretofore unknown to the church here have come to be a part of our working force. I am striving hard to impress the truth upon all that God wants no drones, but requires of all an active life of real service; that a lukewarm, indifferent Christian cannot please him, and baptism must be followed by a growth that comes only from a study of the Bible and diligent practice of its teaching in our everyday lives. Charles Hardin is rendering invaluable service in song and personal work. Next Sunday we are to begin a meeting in Jackson." Brother Cayce died with the harness on. Truly, in life we are in the midst of death.

Charlie Taylor closed a meeting at Tennessee City, Tenn., on April 21, with two baptisms. Splendid audiences were in attendance throughout.

From Ira Wommack, Sulphur, Okla., April 17: "We had two splendid services with the church at Ardmore yesterday. One young man was baptized at the evening service."

Mrs. T. J. McRae writes from San Francisco, Cal.: "Another good meeting to-day, with a splendid sermon by Brother Larimore. We meet in the Richmond Hall, corner Fourth Avenue and Clement Street."

J. P. Sanders preached to two large audiences at Twelfth Avenue, North, this city, last Sunday. One added to the congregation by statement. There were three hundred and thirty in the Bible study Sunday morning.

From J. D. Derryberry, Dickson, Tenn., Route 3, April 24: "Andy T. Ritchie and I began a meeting at Colesburg, in Dickson County, yesterday, with two fine services; a full house at each service. Prospects very encouraging."

J. E. Beardain, Mountain Park, Okla., in a recent communication, says: "I would be glad if some preacher would come here and hold a meeting and see if we can get a church started. There are three or four members here."

From G. A. Dunn, Dallas, Texas, April 21: "Last night I closed a meeting in Tyler, Texas, with thirty-one additions—twenty-three baptisms—and a lot bought on the best street in the town for a new house. Brethren from several towns, as far as forty and fifty miles distant, attended. The brethren are happy and hopeful."

When John was in prison, he sent two of his disciples to Jesus to ask: "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?" It is frequently true when misfortune overtakes us that doubts arise in our hearts. These are the times, too, when we need our faith. Faith shows itself the brightest when it is seen in the darkness of danger and distress.

From E. Gaston Collins, Algood, Tenn., April 22: "E. H. Hoover and I closed a good meeting of eighteen days' duration at Monterey, Tenn., last Wednesday night. The interest and crowds were good throughout; a large crowd the last night. There were nine baptisms, and the brethren seem to be encouraged to do more. I preach at Livingston to-morrow."

John Hayes writes from Athens, Ala., Route 8, April 23: "On the second Lord's day in April I preached at Ephesus; on the third, at Jennings Chapel. I will preach at Athens on the first Lord's day in May. Just as soon as the public school closes here by me, I will preach each month in the school building, and have been invited to teach a class in the union Sunday school. This is a good chance for me to teach the truth, and I will be glad of every chance open to me to spread the kingdom of Christ."

Lee Jackson writes from Oakland, Miss., April 21: "Our congregation at this place is in sorrow at the news of the death of Matthew C. Cayce, which occurred in Columbus on the evening of April 19 as the result of asphyxiation. Only recently Brother Cayce was with us here in Oakland, and in his frequent visits here he had endeared himself to every one of our membership, as well as to the people of the town. He was doing a great work in this State, and, to say nothing of his splendid ability as an evangelistic preacher, for zeal for the cause of Christ in connection with his untiring energy, Brother Cayce's place cannot be easily filled. His death means a great loss to the cause of Christ in Mississippi."

From F. L. Paisley, Martin, Tenn., April 20: "A few brethren who are in the railway service have launched the idea of putting on a gospel campaign in Hollow Rock Junction. This is a very important center, as the railroad company is moving many of its men there. A number of these men and their families are members of the New Testament church. The company offers to give a lot upon which to build. The denominations are already taking advantage of such offer. Let us preach the gospel there early. I have been asked to do the speaking, and it shall be a pleasure to do so. A good singer is needed. I have also been asked to write this note asking that congregations around this center assist in the meeting. The plan is to get a new tent that is already ordered for this (Weakley) county. The only time the tent is available is the second Lord's day in May, beginning. Quick action is necessary. Those wishing to assist will please to send contributions to E. M. Montgomery, Gardner, Tenn."

The following interesting report comes from J. A. Cullum, Elk City, Okla.: "The cause at this place has grown and prospered steadily during the last several months. We have a splendid congregation of godly, working men and women, with a large attendance of young people. We hold the following services each week: Systematic Bible study on Sunday at 10 A.M.; preaching at 11 A.M.; Lord's Supper at 11:45 A.M.; young people's Bible class at 7 P.M.; preaching again at 8 P.M.; children's Bible-character study class on Monday afternoon; ladies' Bible class at the church house on Tuesday afternoon; midweek Bible study each Thursday night. The congregation has grown until it is capable of carrying on the work in my absence, and the members have agreed to let me off for some meetings during the summer. I have the following places booked: Bloomington, Okla.; Willow, Okla.; Jester, Okla.; Shamrock, Texas; Mountain View, Ark. I am in position to hold two meetings between June 1 and the first Sunday in July. Congregations desiring my services for dates included in this period of time may write me, and I will serve gladly. This being my second year with the church here, I am constrained to believe that it will be to the best interest of all concerned for me to locate elsewhere this fall. Any good, live, working congregation expecting to locate an active local man may write me, if interested, and I will be glad to correspond with such with a view to locating."

W. F. Lemmons writes as follows concerning the church at Cleveland, Miss.: "I was called here to work with the church for a short period. The progressives (?) are in the saddle. The assumed 'official board' has tied the church up with the 'State Board,' and on March 13 J. P. Lowrey, of Memphis, Tenn., was notified by the board that another minister had been secured. This minister was Smith, of Memphis. The loyal members (only a few in number) did not know of the undercurrent working to take over the house, as well as the church, until after I came. But upon my arrival I went to work with a view to holding a meeting. They refused us the house at a prayer meeting last week, and voted that no one claiming to be a Christian preacher, who is not connected with the State Board and who does not indorse their innovations, shall ever preach in the house, and instructed the secretary to make it a matter of record for all time to come. The result is that I am now in a meeting in the courthouse, with only a few loyal members who are unable to support any one for this work. I expect to establish a small congregation. It was my intention, when I came here, to work with those people until the middle of June, but now I will be forced back into the field for a support; but Cleveland will be my headquarters. I am ready to do work anywhere in Mississippi or Tennessee. I can hold one meeting in August and can arrange for September work. My address is Box 117, Cleveland, Miss."

Writing in reference to the recent Hardeman-Pullias meeting at the Ryman Auditorium in this city, J. E. Thompson says: "The origination of the idea of such a gathering of God's people to teach and be taught, to hear the word of God expounded in so sound, so able, and so penetrating manner by the able Hardeman, was a grand and far-reaching conception. The very conception of the idea as developed and manifested in the great gathering of such a multitude of God's people has brought great pleasure and gladness to the hearts of the thousands who had the opportunity to attend. They were built up and confirmed in the highest, and brought closer together in the common cause by the association of such a vast multitude of brethren, probably more than has ever occurred in all the history of the church. It was a history-making meeting. It was splendidly organized, finely advertised, and excellently conducted. Thousands from all the denominations attended and were greatly impressed and edified by the gospel truth as it was dealt out by the eloquent and impressive speaker. Many of them were charmed by the plain Bible stories which they had never heard before. It was my pleasure to attend six of the services, and I will never forget it. I felt like telegraphing all my friends to come on the next train, if not sooner. Many of the Vine Street members attended and appeared to be glad they were there. The meeting was wonderful, was exceedingly great, stands without an equal or a parallel in the history of the church. It demonstrated the wisdom of God in his command for vocal music in congregational worship, and it impressed the all-sufficiency of God's word as an infallible guide from earth to heaven, and has not been so broadly done on any previous occasion. May God bless all who had a hand in the great work and the good it has done in exalting and honoring the Bible and God's excellent wisdom and mercy to man in so great salvation, as was made manifest by each of Brother Hardeman's penetrating sermons, as well as the exalting influence of the splendid song service."

Query Department

Brother Vernon Rozar, of Watertown, Tenn., writes: "Explain 1 Cor. 5: 10, especially the sentence, 'For then must ye needs go out of the world.'"

Reading verses 9 and 10 together, we have these words: "I wrote unto you in my epistle to have no company with fornicators; not at all meaning with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous and extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world." It seems to me that the apostle means that fornicators, covetous ones, idolaters, and extortioners were so common in the world that if these Corinthian brethren interpreted his former language to apply to the world and not the church, that they would have no one to company with, and, therefore, would have practically to get out of the world, or out of its association. But the apostle explains that his language applies only to one that is called "a brother," and with such a sinful brother the true Christian should not eat. At that time, perhaps, it meant more to eat with a man than it does now. The Pharisees complained that Jesus ate with publicans and sinners. To eat with publicans and sinners, in their estimation, put the Savior on an equality with them. It was the common meal and the friendly association that accompanied eating it that the apostle forbids, and his language applies only to those who are called "brethren" that are guilty of these sins. Brother J. H. Womack, of Sulphur, Okla., sends the following: "One of our elders last Sunday asked one of the sisters to give a short lecture on the lesson. Did he do right? She is well informed in the Scriptures."

The question does not state fully how public the affair was. I take it that the lecture was given to the class or to the church assembled. Paul gives this instruction: "As in all the churches of the saints, let the women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but let them be in subjection, as also saith the law. And if they would learn anything, let them ask their own husbands at home: for it is shameful for a woman to speak in the church." (1 Cor. 14: 33-35.) Again, Paul, in writing to Timothy, gives this instruction: "Let a woman learn in quietness with all subjection. But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have dominion over a man, but to be in quietness." (1 Tim. 2: 11, 12.) These scriptures are clear and definite, hence need not be misunderstood.

There are two great classes of work to be done in teaching the will of the Lord—(1) public teaching, (2) private or house-to-house teaching.

The gospel must be preached publicly. The will of the Lord must be proclaimed in a public way. The church must be taught in a public way. The principles and truths of Christianity are to be taught publicly to the church. It seems clear from the teachings of the Bible that God has committed this part of his work to men: "The same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." (2 Tim. 2: 2.) God selected men as his apostles, men as elders, men as evangelists, and men as public teachers of the way of life.

The second class of teaching is the private, house-to-house work. Women are permitted and even instructed by precept and example to do this kind of teaching. Many women are more competent than some men in doing this work. By nature, as well as other training, women are suited to be teachers of children. The child never had a greater or better teacher than a truly consecrated mother. Woman should appreciate this God-given privilege and qualification and use it to the full. Apollos was instructed in "the way of God more accurately" by Priscilla and her husband, Aquila. (See Acts 18: 24-26.) Again, Euodia and Syntyche "labored with me [Paul] in the gospel, with Clement also." (Phil. 4: 3.) Paul mentions other women who had labored with him in the Lord. Again, Paul instructs Titus as follows: "That aged women likewise be reverent in demeanor, not slanderers nor enslaved to much wine, teachers of that which is good; that they may train the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be sober-minded, chaste, workers at home, kind, being in subjection to their own husbands: that the word of God be not blasphemed." (Tit. 2: 3-5.) All this shows that God has placed woman in her proper place and where she can accomplish the greatest possible good.

Woman should be satisfied with her proper place and sphere and be qualified to fill that well. Occasionally there might seem to be a time when some woman could publicly teach better than some men; yet I am persuaded by the force of God's truth that woman can accomplish the greater good in the humble, private sphere of life. God has placed her as queen of the home, taught her to bear and train children and to teach others to do the same. There is something radically wrong with women who are not satisfied with their God-given sphere and seek to enter the realm of man. Each, man and woman, has a noble work to do, and each can do that work best by filling the mission that God has ordained for each. Man cannot fill woman's place and do the work which God has assigned unto her. He would be a miserable failure should he attempt it. He has suffered defeat in every attempt to fill the mission of woman. So woman cannot fill the mission which God has enjoined upon man; she must learn that failure is her portion if she attempts it. In the two great classes of teaching God's will to the children of men, the public teaching and the quiet, private teaching, God has seen fit to instruct woman to confine her efforts to the humble, quiet, modest, and reserved teaching of his will in private life.

In this restless age of ours, when women are breaking from the old customs and restraints in business and political affairs of life, it is a great temptation to exercise more liberty in the church than God has granted unto woman. The spirit of independence and the freedom from restraint on womankind in social life entice her to transcend the God-given limitation for women. Some of the prominent sectarian churches are altering their creeds, changing their regulations, and granting unto women more freedom and privileges in church affairs than ever before. Let these do as they choose, but let it be remembered that no man or set of men, no woman or set of women, can set aside God's law without doing so at the peril of their own souls.

H. LEO BOLES.

A sister who wants her name withheld asks this question: "How and where are the sisters to sell that which they make and wish to dedicate to the service of the Lord in helping to build church houses, etc.?" The sisters have the same marts or markets that the brethren have in disposing of what they may produce. Any legitimate market is open to them, any fair and just price may be received.

She further asks: "Is it scriptural, when the sisters meet in their homes to make garments, to invite sectarians to help them?" Again, the sisters have the same right to employ help in making these things as the brethren do in hiring help to cultivate the farm and care for the stock which is to be put on the market. Whatever is given to the Lord should represent the honest toil and effort of the one who gives it; it should not be the product of a beggar. I mean by this that a church member who produces nothing, but begs from others and then offers it to the Lord in his own name, has not fulfilled the Scriptures. David would not give to the Lord that which cost him nothing. (See 2 Sam. 24: 18-25.)

Waxahachie (Texas) Meeting.

BY JOHN E. DUNN.

This meeting was out of the ordinary. For a year we had announced that we would hold a series of meetings, beginning on March 17, 1922. We engaged Brother Jesse P. Sewell, president of Abilene Christian College, to do the preaching in this meeting. It happened as a coincidence that at the exact time we had set for our meeting all of the churches of the city, both Catholic and Protestant, arranged a simultaneous campaign of revival meetings to continue fifteen days. Each church was to engage her own preacher and conduct her own meeting in her own way. During this campaign there should be a mass meeting each day except Saturdays of all the people of the city and surrounding country who should come, at one of the theaters, for one hour—from ten to eleven o'clock A.M. The purpose of these mass meetings was to close all business for one hour and get everybody turned toward God for the time, and especially reach the business and working men.

A preacher selected by each church was to do the preaching, each in his turn. Through the force of circumstances, and as it seems to me rather through the providence of God, the "Main Street Christian Church" decided not to have a meeting, but, as a congregation, attend and support the meeting conducted by the "College Street church of Christ," in which Brother Sewell was to do the preaching.

The meeting is now a thing of the past. The two congregations assembled together as if they were all one congregation—in fact, they were one in this meeting—twice a day to hear the gospel preached by Brother Sewell in the house of the College Street Church. They all sang, prayed, partook of the Lord's Supper, worked faithfully for the meeting, and associated together as brethren in Christ. The meeting was conducted just as we are accustomed to conduct our meetings.

The writer had not been closely associated with Brother Sewell since we were schoolmates in college. He had, however, closely watched Brother Sewell's work for twenty-five years. We were born and reared in the same country in good old Tennessee, and have known each other all of our lives, and so have our parents and grandparents. I was born and reared in the lap of Christianity. All of my people for three generations have been disciples of Christ. I have been going to church and hearing the gospel preached by the ablest preachers among us ever since I could first walk, and before then my parents carried me. I have been taught the sacred writings from a babe. I hope to abide in them as long as I live.

I heard Brother Jesse P. Sewell for fifteen days, twice and sometimes three times a day, with wonderful clearness, eloquence, and power, preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. I have never heard a more complete and a finer series of sermons in my life. Brother Sewell has a clear and fixed grasp of the fundamental principles of the Christian religion. He knows exactly what he wants to say and has the ability to say it in well-chosen words with earnestness and power. He is a man of fine spirit, wisdom, and influence, and holds his audiences spellbound.

During his stay among us we were able to get before the students and faculties of Trinity University and the city high school, the people at the mass meetings at Dixie Theater, and the large crowds at our church house. Such an opportunity is rarely offered to set before all the people of a city the fundamental principles for which the disciples of Christ have contended during the current restoration movement for more than a century. Brother Sewell covered the ground and did a capital piece of work. I am confidently expecting great good to come from these efforts in behalf of New Testament Christianity.

The relationship between the two congregations of disciples of Christ is fortunate. There is a happy exchange of views and free conversation on unity of God's people, and it seems that a better day is just ahead of us. We ask the prayers of the saints that we act wisely, humbly, and faithfully, and keep away from us outside influences that would hinder and stir up strife, to the end that we may move together along scriptural lines and come into perfect fellowship and become one in Christ.

The Signs of the Times.

BY M. O. DALEY.

"A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign." This may be so construed as to make all "sign readers" wicked, in a religious sense; but if so, it also establishes the fact that signs are a fairly good religious barometer. This fact, no doubt, gave rise to the expression: "Coming events cast their shadows before."

Sometimes signs intrude instead of being sought, and shadows fall unbidden. Such appears to be the case at this time.

There appears to be a better feeling between the "loyal" and the "liberal" bodies—the church of Christ and the Christian Church—than ever in the history of these two bodies. When the division came, it was supposed that there was a reason. The use of instrumental music, working through missionary societies, etc., were held up as divisive wedges, and had about the same effect on the "loyal" brethren as a red rag would on a mad el toro! There came a division in the church of Christ; a separate body was brought into existence which is known as the "Christian Church." The division was complete. Fellowship between these bodies did not exist.

Were the differences real or only imaginary?

Let us see. For a time the battle raged. Debates were frequent, and often bitter. Disputes over church property, and in some cases lawsuits followed. The two bodies were as far apart as it was possible for them to be.

For a time the Christian Church grew rapidly, the church of Christ appeared to make slow progress. Then there came a change, the tables were turned. The church of Christ began to prosper. The prosperity is especially noticeable in the cities and towns. Splendid church houses are being built everywhere. Fine! Praise God! But what became of the war between the church of Christ and the Christian Church? When did it end? Has it really ended?

When have you heard a sermon on "innovations"? Are not debates between the church of Christ and the Christian Church less frequent? In fact, are they not now out of the ordinary? Do you often see an article or note of warning in the religious press touching departures for the simplicity which is in Christ? The Christian Church in most places has ceased to fight us, you say? True; but why? Have they become convinced that they were wrong and we right? Not that, for they practice to-day what they did when the battle was raging. You say we are closer together? True; but who has moved? Not they. We are closer, a more friendly feeling exists. In some places we are coöperating in revival meetings. Sometimes we are invited into their pulpits. They compliment us on our progress and growth. Many of us are flattered. They tell us that we are doing many things that we once condemned them for doing. We are preaching less on "departures from the faith," even less on "first principles." Why? The people say they are tired of strife and want the kind of preaching they are getting.

Is it possible that we were mistaken about the things over which we divided being fundamental? If the things over which we divided were fundamental, are they not still as fundamental? If yes, then why the kindly feeling which now exists? Why the fellowship now, which a few years ago did not exist?

Brother, the "signs" indicate something. The battle has ceased—at least, it has come to a halt, and some are clamoring to sign the armistice, and all signs point to the signing.

The Christian Church learned long ago that there was not one thing gained by them in fighting us. They quit, and now they are about to get without fighting that which they could not get by fighting. They have not surrendered. They have ceased nothing but the fighting us, and are not elated to see us under full steam headed in their direction.

Brother, our preaching is getting too soft. We are sowing for a bitter harvest. Everything points to another period of strife—internal strife in the church of Christ. We have forgot, not the Christian Church. Our effort to smooth out the "rough" places in the gospel is but an effort on our part to gain popularity. We are offering too many apologies. We are, as one popular evangelist said he was doing, "talking more about heaven than about how to get there." In many places the churches—all the churches in the town—dismiss their services to hear him and come in a body, their ministers with them, and thoroughly enjoy the services, and bid him Godspeed in what he teaches! Imagine such condition existing in a meeting conducted by one of the pioneers in the reformation! Think of such condition existing in a meeting conducted by J. A. Harding, T. W. Brents, Ben. Franklin, David Lipscomb, J. M. Kidwill, and others who fearlessly preached the full gospel!

Brother, the signs of the times point to a surrender to the enemy—the Christian Church.

Some "Keeps."

BY J. M. DEVENY.

"He will not suffer thy foot to be moved; he that keepeth thee will not slumber." How watchful the all-seeing eye that never sleeps! May we ever be conscious of His loving watch care. Again: "He will keep the way of the saints." Again: "He preserveth the way of his saints." And again: "The Lord is thy keeper." How beautiful, how helpful, and how comforting are the assurances expressed in the foregoing excerpts from holy writ! Are we worthy of such tender, loving care?

Do we call on the Lord to keep us from harm? "Keep me as the apple of the eye, hide me under the shadow of thy wings"—expressing desire for His tender care and protection. Again: "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips." This beautiful prayer should preface our actions at the beginning of every new day.

Things we are admonished to keep ourselves from. "That disciple whom Jesus loved" says: "Little children, keep yourselves from idols." May we search our hearts carefully, not once nor twice, but daily, and may we heed this admonition. Again: "Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile. Depart from evil, and do good; seek peace, and pursue it." May we heed this admonition and learn to pursue this course; for it is safe, sane, and essential.

Some things we are admonished to keep. The wise man has said: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." And the apostle Paul admonishes a son in the gospel thus: "Keep thyself pure." Will the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls be pleased with less? I think not. Again: "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest . . . I myself should be a cast-away." "Safety first" demands that we follow Paul. He also says: "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." And again: "Keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." And: "Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life." A sweet admonition from Jude.

Hear the Christ: "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." Again: "Blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it." And again: "If a man love me, he will keep my word." And Solomon wrote: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." Then if we "trust in the Lord and do good," all will be well. Then, truly, "the Lord is thy keeper."

The Kingdom at Hand.

BY K. C. MOSER.

Baptists say that "at hand" in Matt. 3: 2 means "has come." They mean by this that the kingdom was then in existence. If the Baptists are right, then Christ did not build his church as he said he would in Matt. 16: 18. Luke has it: "The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." Such language is too plain to need comment. Paul says that Epaphroditus "came nigh unto death." Here we have the same Greek word as in Matt. 3: 2. According to their contention on "at hand" in Matt. 3: 2, the Baptists would have been obliged to have buried Epaphroditus alive—as they do when they baptize folk (according to their doctrine). Again, Paul says: "The night is far spent, and the day is at hand." The same Greek word again. Here is a puzzle according to the construction Baptists place on the expression "at hand." The night was not gone, but it was "far spent." Yet if "at hand" means "has come," it was already day though it was still night. Now, when it is night and day at the same time, Baptists will be right on their interpretation of "at hand."

From Baptist arguments I would conclude that when one of them gets real sick—"nigh unto death"—he should be buried at once. Though his life is only "far spent," yet, if death is "at hand," that should not hinder; he should be buried, anyway. But if his death happens to occur at night, still that would make no difference, "for the night shineth as the day; the darkness and the light are both alike to him." Perhaps we now have a key to the passage, "But she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth."

"And when they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and were come to Bethpage, unto the mount of Olives," etc. Christ and his disciples were "nigh unto Jerusalem," yet were still on the mount of Olives, a distance of one mile from Jerusalem. If "at hand" means "has come," then they were already in Jerusalem though yet a mile away!

"Behold, he is at hand that doth betray me." Though Judas was "at hand," he yet had to come to be in the immediate presence of Jesus. (Matt. 26: 46, 47.)

The kingdom was represented to be "at hand" till Christ died, never afterwards. After Pentecost the church was spoken of as being in existence. Dan. 7: 13, 14 teaches that Christ received his kingdom when he ascended to heaven. Christ said the kingdom would come when power came. (Mark 9: 1.) Power was to come when the Holy Spirit came. (Acts 1: 8.) The Holy Spirit came on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ from the dead. Therefore, Pentecost marks also the beginning of the kingdom. Never again was it said to be "at hand."

Personal Notes.

Thomas E. Milholland writes under date of April 18: "I am now in Vernon, Texas, our future home and field of labor. We will not move, however till the last of May. We had a fine audience at our mission at Guyer on Sunday evening. One reclaimed here. We will have Brother Tedlie with us to lead the songs next Lord's day. The fifth Sunday I will give to missionary work at Tioga, Texas—a worthy, deserving, struggling band. I will begin in McKinney on May 7. May success attend the faithful everywhere."

Good Rich Red Blood

And plenty of it, is essential to health, willing effort, good appetite. Lack of it, or thin, watery blood, means illness, rheumatism, catarrh, humors, headache, wandering pains, cold hands and feet, decline of health-tone.

We recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for all these and other symptoms because it is made from the best ingredients physicians prescribe, combined by pharmacists who have made a life-long study of medicines; and best of all, because it has helped thousands to have good, rich, red blood and all the blessings that come from it.

The worth and great economy of Hood's Sarsaparilla appeal to everyone. A bottle will last a month. War tax removed and price reduced. Get a bottle. For mild cathartic, get Hood's Pills.

California Notes.

By J. H. MOORE.

Since wife and I returned from our two-years' travels and evangelistic work through the United States, as far east as Ohio and south through Florida, we have located here at Sierra Madre, Cal. This little city of twenty-five hundred population is a noted health resort, being situated at the foot of the Sierra Madre range of mountains, a beautiful and one of the most healthful locations in the United States. Doctors bring patients here from Los Angeles, only sixteen miles distant, because of the high altitude and bracing air, being fine for asthma and all lung and throat troubles. Pasadena, one of the most beautiful cities in the State, of over forty thousand, is only six or seven miles to the south and west of us. Brother McCaleb, a relative of the missionary to Japan, left Oklahoma and Texas trying to find relief for his wife's rheumatic trouble, but found none till he came here over one year ago, with little hopes of her recovery. Now she is helping make a garden and can get around quite lively. I write this for the benefit of our brethren who wish to make a change and would like to locate in a mild, healthful climate, with no cyclones or blizzards, but where oranges and lemons grow, and where very little frost and snow are seen only on the mountain peaks above us.

We are starting in to build up a church of Christ here. There are only six members living here at present, but we have meeting at our house each Lord's-day afternoon, and the good brethren of Pasadena are coming over regularly to assist us. Brother D. W. Nay has preached for us several times; Brother E. C. Fuqua, recently from Colorado, preached one Lord's day. The younger brethren of Pasadena have started in making talks for us now, and we are having interesting meetings. We hope to have a good tent meeting a little later. Sierra Madre is building up rapidly, and we would be so glad to have some of our brethren come here to locate and assist us in establishing the cause here.

If any one who is interested and wishes to know more in regard to this place will write me, I will gladly give all the information I can. Address me at 182 West Highland Avenue, Sierra Madre, Cal.

Stomach Trouble?

Columbus, Ga.—"Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is certainly a grand medicine for stomach trouble. I have suffered greatly all my life from a disordered stomach. My food seemed to set so heavy, no matter what I ate. Whenever I have a sluggish liver, with sick-headaches and constipation, I have found Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets a very efficient remedy. "We Want a Few Learned Men and Hosts of 'Minutemen' for the Masses."

BY R. B. NEAL.

John Rogers, in the "Ecclesiastical Reformer," published at Lexington, Ky., in 1852, a copy of which is open before me, hands out my heading as an utterance of Alexander Campbell.

The saying was true then. Seventy years have passed since he said it, and it is true now. As long as this old earth stands as the abode of unredeemed men and women, it will be true. The only amendment I have to offer is to substitute the word "need" for the word "want."

The Campbell slogan is wrenched and twisted by the present leaders. They want hosts of learned men and but few, if any, of the "minutemen."

H. T. Anderson, a real scholar, who could chin most of the present-day leaders without standing on tiptoe, said: "We want men for every station and condition in life; men who can command the respect and attention of the most learned; men who are acquainted with men; men who know how to approach and to deal with men, who can speak to the understanding and heart. We want men for the cities, men for towns and crossroads, who, armed with truth, will go forth, build up churches, take care of them, train them and fit them for their work and destiny." If these are not common-sense views, I will admit I am no judge of common sense.

Brother Rogers waves a red flag that, if not heeded then, should be heeded now: "Need the fact, which is so palpable, be reiterated, that very many men are pushed through colleges and theological schools and engage in preaching, as a trade, who are wanting in almost every element of a true minister of Christ?"

Here is a truth that needs restating just now with all the emphasis possible:

"Don't you see that seven years is too long a period to doom a Christian youth to pagan and Christian theology to qualify him to tell men and women that God so loved the world as to send his only begotten Son to die for mankind, that whosoever believeth in him might be saved?"

"Don't you see a thousand Methodist preachers and a thousand Baptist preachers and thousands of others let go the handles of the plow, drop the shuttle, and become eloquent in a day? They can send out seventy while you are making one ready. Again, these poor, ignorant men that never saw a college wall will in one year cut and slash down more stubborn sinners with the old Jerusalem blade than a score of the nice fencers, who wear only a silver-handled dirk and a pocket pistol. Dr. Ely and General Braddock may draw up their lines in great array, but take care of the fellows behind the trees."

The cause we plead does not depend on colleges of any kind. Colleges, the right kind (and they are few), will aid the right kind of a man to an equipment for work. Jesus, with one exception, called plain men from the common affairs of life to take up and carry on his work. In our pioneer days, John (Raccoon) Smith, William Morton, Aylette Rains, Ben Franklin, and scores of others were known in pulpit and in sanctum, prominently known, who were not college men, and they were the "one-Book men."

I have seen college men of various churches "sit at the feet" of Ben Franklin as a Bible teacher more than once. He filled auditoriums that few college men could half fill.

I venture the statement that not over three out of every ten men now preaching in our ranks are college graduates. Those who are not are the best recruiters we have. When the issues now on are "fought to a finish" in a pitched battle, and they must be—mark the prediction—"the men behind the trees" will win the victory.

We need host upon host of "minute-men," and we should want them so badly that we will take enthusiastic steps to supply the demand. Half the zeal and one-tenth of the expense of a drive for "learned men" will bring the result.

The minutemen and women of Mormonism—and they number thousands—are winning for the "gospel of Nephi" victories that their seers and apostles never could win. Let us profit by their example.

Grace Sufficient.

The other evening I was riding home after a heavy day's work. I felt very wearied and sore depressed, when swiftly, and suddenly as a lightning flash, that text came to me: "My grace is sufficient for thee." I reached home and looked it up in the original, and at last it came to me in this way, "My grace is sufficient for thee;" and I said, "I should think it is, Lord," and burst out laughing. I never fully understood what the holy laughter of Abraham was until then. It seemed to make unbelief so absurd. It was as though some little fish, being very thirsty, was troubled about drinking the river dry, and Father Thames said: "Drink away, little fish; my stream is sufficient for thee." Or it seemed like a little mouse in the granaries of Egypt, after the seven years of plenty, fearing it might die of famine. Joseph might say: "Cheer up, little mouse; my granaries are sufficient for thee." Again, I imagined a man away up yonder, in a lofty mountain, saying to himself, "I breathe so many cubic feet of air every year I fear I shall exhaust the oxygen in the atmosphere;" but the earth might say: "Breathe away, O man; and fill thy lungs every; my atmosphere is sufficient for thee." O, brethren, be great believers! Such faith will bring your souls to heaven and heaven to your souls.—C. H. Spurgeon.

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking Fountains Banish Vermin, Make
Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of purebred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs or meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Brother Yohannan's "Bad Condition."

BY J. W. GRANT.

I have before me the last four letters that I have received from Brother Yohannan, from which I wish to lay some extracts before the readers of the Gospel Advocate, that they may see his own presentation of his "bad condition."

From the letter dated June, 1921,
I quote:

Brethren, remember us in your prayers, as I do the same for you all. While we are in bad condition, with bitter lives, if you could see us with your own eyes, you are not able to refrain yourself from crying. Two loaves of bread we are living on with my family three days; only dry bread. We are not able to buy us anything to wet our bread. Also we are naked, in the wilderness of Mesopotamia, and barefoot. Of course our lives are in bad condition. If every brother would donate half a dollar or a dollar, you will draw me from this torment pit, from the furnace of fire.
Brethren, have mercy toward your brother in Christ. Save my life with my family. Why not, brethren? Now it is time to help while we are in a strange country. If we were in our own country, we were [would be] able to live comfortably; because I used to live from my own crops, with some aid from the brethren and some from my own land; but now I am not able to raise from nowhere. It is very hard on us. If we had enough money or aid from the brethren, I would take my family and come to America. Those people that have money are going to America; those not having it are remaining in the hands of the Mohamudans. . . .
We have a little [baby] girl in our family.

I think the above letter was written in or near Bagdad, in Mesopotamia.
The next one is dated October 10, 1921. After the elaborate greeting with which he always begins his letters, he says:

We went to Bagdad, Mesopotamia,
but we were not able to make a living.
We came back to Kirmansha [Persia].
The people of Kirmansha are a little better; but my family mostly is sick.
I was sick before them. Especially my wife is in bad condition. God have mercy upon her. In our bitter lives it is not falling good things to eat. There will be no strength if God himself will [not] save us from this flaming pit. I can't tell you at this time how needy we are. Winter is coming; no warm clothes; nothing for nourishment of our bodies. There is [a] great famine in Persia. Now, brethren, it is time to help [us]. Do not spare whatsoever you will donate for your own missionary to save the lives of his family. Brethren, do it soon. Our lives are passing bitterly.
We need your encouragement.
We are putting all our hopes upon you. Give my best regards to all brethren and sisters in Christ. Brethren, please remember me in your prayers. While we are in this bad condition, we do the same for you all.

Then in the same letter, after telling

SUFFERING?

Most of the pain we suffer is unnecessary. Why continue to endure it—to sacrifice your youth, beauty, and enjoyment to it?

The combination of simple harmless medicines found in
Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills is especially effective in relieving pain without bad after-effects.

For more than thirty-five years sufferers from headache, neuralgia, backache, toothache, sciatica and pains from other causes have found relief by taking these pills.

Why don't you try them?

ASK YOUR DRUGGIST

more of the illness of his wife and that the little girl baby is coughing and without clothes, he says:

I went to the Tower of Babel. Its height is about two hundred and fifty yards; fifteen yards is the breadth of the wall; length of the stones of the wall, forty-five yards. It is a wonderful sight, the ruins of the old city of Nineveh. The gates of Nineveh are like mountains. I saw the grave of the disciple [apostle] Matthew. . . .
The golden crown of Sargon was discovered [here] by the English; I have seen it myself. These plates are very interesting. The weather there is hot, but there is a breeze. Mostly Mesopotamia is a wilderness, good for nothing.

The third letter is brief and despairing. It is dated January 22, 1922, and I think it was written at Hamadan, Persia. In it he says:

I have not heard from you for a long time [with] contribution. I received from you last year one check for twenty-seven pounds, some shillings. Before that two checks in one envelope, one for four pounds, some shillings, and one for nine pounds, some shillings. The last two were lost;
but I have found them, and sent them to London for collection last June 17.
Since I have not been able to hear from them, this winter has been very hard on us. Especially my family all are sick; on this account we have hard time. Christmas has been very bitter to us. We were expecting some encouragement; now we have lost our hope.

The last of the four letters is dated February 5, 1922, and is evidently from Hamadan, Persia, though he never tells in the heading of his letter where he is writing from. In it he says:

I have received your welcome and kind letter in which was twenty dollars American money. My family and myself are more thankful you have remembered us in this needy time. We are more and more thankful. Only we have put our hopes upon God and you. Without you we will starve to death; because we are in a strange country; we have not much benefit from anywhere. It is not factories in Persia in which to work and make a living. I went to Bagdad, but I was not able to stand the heat there. Our illness we have received from Bagdad. Therefore we left there. We remained for a little time in Kirmansha. The weather did not agree with me there, so I came again to Hamadan. Nearly one month my family and I were sick; now we are under the protection of the Lord, and we are quite well. But we are in great need. Mostly my family are naked. If we have some encouragement for April or May, it will reach us in good time. Everything in Persia is costly now. Our little girl is almost naked. Also during six months I was not able to do anything in the field of the Lord. Now for two months I have been teaching a Bible class in English. They have desired to learn English. They are nearly [about] sixty-five men. I meet them at different hours. Some of them are near Christianity. When I speak to them concerning God, they are accepting it gladly. I am hoping I will accomplish some good work among them. . . . Our necessity is great. I am not able to make a living for myself. I am nearly naked. When I am working among those Hebrews, I am very much ashamed. Our son is going to school. . . . I easily exchanged the twenty dollars of your last letter for Persian money. I also exchanged your last draft of twenty-seven and one-half pounds for Persian money, and we were getting our living with the proceeds. The pupils that I have are mostly Hebrews; about fifteen of them are Mohammedans. While I am writing this letter to you my little girl, eight months old, is very ill, and my son is coughing. I am uneasy about them. Especially in a strange country medicine does not do them good. Here medicine is to soothe, and has not much effect on a man.

I have tried to give the readers his own expressions, and then not all of them. Of course there was a time when it seemed we could not get funds to him in a form he could use them, as he could not realize on the two small drafts sent about February 20 of last year; and he has not realized on them yet. I am writing to the bank that issued them, and hope they may yet be paid. They cost fifty-one dollars, and are all that he has failed to realize on. The last forty dollars that I sent him has not been sent long enough to get a report yet; but as he got the twenty sent him on December 1 last, I am sure he will report the other at the proper time.

So now the way is open for any of us to send him funds any time. Send it in United States currency notes (not bank notes), by registered letter. The address is "Alexander Kh.B. Yohannan, care of Imperial Bank of Persia, Hamadan, Persia, Asia." The postage on sealed letters is five cents per one-half ounce, and the registry fee is ten cents. Put the money between sheets of blotting paper, size to fill envelope, so it cannot be detected through the envelope. Seal carefully.

Again, clothing for him and his family may be sent him by insured parcel post at about twelve cents a pound weight and insurance fee. Ask your postmaster about this. I have seen notices in the post offices telling this.

If any one wishes to send funds by me, I will gladly forward same, as I have done so long in the past, and will receipt to sender by card for all funds sent to me for this purpose. My address is: "J. W. Grant, 307 North Iowa Avenue, Lakeland, Fla."

You have his own presentation of his case. What will you do?

Abundant Health is assured when there is good blood in the veins. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the medicine to make good blood. Begin taking it now. It is just what the system needs at this time, and will do you great good. Sharpens the appetite, steadies the nerves.

Field Reports

Piggott, Ark., April 17.—I filled my regular appointment at Kennett, Mo., yesterday. The cause there is moving along nicely. My first meeting will begin on the third Lord's day in June, at Hayti, Mo. Brother M. S. Mason will assist in this meeting. —James E. Laird.

Floresville, Texas, April 17.—The meeting at this place is progressing with great interest, Brother F. J. Berry doing all the preaching. The special meeting of last week did the cause much good here. We wish to thank all the preachers who were here for what good they did toward this meeting. Brother Berry is preaching the gospel in love and with power. —Harvey Scott.

Bismarck, Ill., April 20.—I came to Bismarck on Saturday, and must say that we had a fine meeting for worship yesterday. Five took part in the teaching service, the lesson being Luke 23; also five or six took a leading part in thanksgiving for the bread and cup and in prayer. Such services are strengthening and uplifting to the inner man. I am now going among congregations and mission points in Ohio and West Virginia, having probably two or three mission meetings to hold on this trip in West Virginia. —Andrew Perry.

Shelbyville, Ky., April 17.—Last Sunday I was at Van Buren and Shelbyville, with good attendance at both places. The work at Shelbyville is in need of support, and we hope the brethren will respond to our appeals that have appeared from time to time in the Gospel Advocate. We are trying to raise thirty-five hundred dollars for our building. We have the lot, and would like to begin the building this summer. We would not think of appealing for help if we were able to finance it alone. Send all donations to R. A. Craig, Shelbyville, Ky. —R. A. Craig.

Trion, Ga., April 14.—I closed an eight-days' mission meeting at Bremen, Ga., with four baptized and much good done otherwise. I hope Brother Garrett or some of the rest of us can go there with a tent sometime in the summer or early fall and hold another meeting. I am sure it would be a success. The Northern Methodist Church building, which we used, is inconvenient. A few have kept up the regular worship there since I was with them a few days last winter. It now seems that more will attend. The East Point (Ga.) congregation had fellowship in the work, and some of the local brethren were also liberal. —Flavius Hall.

Beaumont, Texas, April 17.—Our meeting closed without visible results, yet I am sure much good was accomplished. Evangelist C. D. Crouch, of Port Arthur, did the preaching. He gave us some wonderful lessons indeed. He is well versed in the Scriptures and did some excellent work for us. We certainly appreciated his work very much. Brother Crouch is a fine man, a good preacher, and a fine fellow to work with. All seemed to be encouraged and will go forward with renewed energy in the work of the Lord. Yesterday was a good day with us in all services, with large crowds and splendid interest manifested. My work will close here the latter part of June, at which time I will enter the evangelistic field, the Lord willing, and my family will return to our little home in Fort Smith, Ark. —Will W. Slater.

Wichita Falls, Texas, April 18.—We had excellent meetings Sunday at the church of Christ in Wichita Falls. The subject for the morning sermon was the "Union of Believers," taken from Ps. 133: 1. In this sermon it was sought to emphasize, not so much the union of the denominations, but the union of unity and peace of our own congregation in their work. The subject for the night sermon was "A Revival." (Hab. 3: 2.) In this sermon, as in the morning lesson, the remarks were directed to the congregation, and the effort was to stir the church to a livelier interest and to arouse to greater activity in the work of our Master. The church in Wichita Falls is doing some fine work, but it is sincerely felt that we might do even more. There were five received into the congregation Sunday. These all were by "membership." Our meeting begins on Sunday, April 23, and we cordially invite all brethren who live within reach of us to attend, and those who may be coming our way will be given a hearty welcome in our meetings. The church is close in, being at the corner of Tenth and Austin Streets. —R. D. Smith.

Tuscumbia, Ala., April 19.—On the first Lord's day in April I preached at East Florence, Ala.; on the second Lord's day, at Rock Creek (two services), and at Barton that night. Good crowds at all these services. I was at luka, Miss., on the third Lord's day, both morning and night, with increasing interest since my visit there in March. I will visit luka monthly and try to arouse an interest in the work at that place. I go to North Florence next Lord's day to preach in a storehouse, and hope to do some good by this visit, and, if possible, to get all the members interested so they will either go to Florence regularly or begin keeping house for the Lord in North Florence. I will preach at Lynn, Ala., where I was baptized by Brother L. R. Sewell about thirty years ago, on Friday night before the fifth Lord's day in this month, while on my way to Alabama City for three services on the fifth Lord's day. The Alabama City congregation is worshipping in Dwight Hall, which is owned by the Dwight Manufacturing Company, a cotton-mill corporation, and I hope to see them own their house of worship sometime in the near future. Any brother passing through there should write to Brother Jake Hamilton, and stop and preach for them, if he has time. I hope I can preach from one to three times each Lord's day this year, or, at least, until the winter season is so that the rural districts cannot be very well reached. I shall try to be instrumental in increasing Bible study and in circulating good books and religious papers. When the brethren are taught more, they will be willing to work harder for the upbuilding of the cause of our Lord and Master. Brethren, let us preach the word with power. —J. H. Morris.

Sure Relief

News from India.

BY E. S. JELLEY.

While lying ill in Ahmednagar some months ago, I got acquainted with a little Indian girl, whom I felt to be not far from the kingdom. As the result of a little talk in her presence, she accompanied me to Vambori to be baptized. Not only that, but she boasted to her companions in a gentle way that she was going to be a Christian.

A week ago we reaped some of the fruits, for there were eighteen persons from her community baptized that day, and four more on Lord's day. I am very anxious to have these new Christians (from a hardened idolatrous community) strengthened, and, hence, I entreat that some brother or congregation will give from five to ten dollars per month to Brother Shahurao Y. Salve, Ahmednagar, Gaonkhata, Mangwada, British India, to enable him to watch over the little flock and teach the children to read the Bible.

We need a baptistery in Ahmednagar very badly. It will not cost much. Ahmednagar has a dry river, and we have in the past paid for the privilege of baptizing in a cattle trough. This time we knew of only one available cattle trough; and as it belongs to a Brahman charitable committee, we doubted if the owners would permit us to use it at all. So we walked about two miles to where there had been a pool at noon, only to find that it had dried up, been drunk up or carried away, leaving only a mud spot. So we walked back, arriving at the cattle tank at dusk, and Brother Salve baptized the people in it. On Lord's day we went there again, when there was just enough light to read the Word and sing a hymn; but some "high-caste" heathen hung around, so we spent more time than usual with preaching, waiting for them to go away. Whether they finally went or not, I did not see; but no one interfered, and Brother Sasane baptized four persons.

Baby is still in the Mission Hospital here in Ahmednagar, from which place I write.

Quiet and Deep Life.

The hour will be dark in which we pine for things romantic at the expense of a quiet and deep life. Christianity teaches us that no child is to be despised, no work is to be considered mean, and that suffering may have all the honor of service. Woe to us when we can live only on stimulants! When the house is accounted dull, when only sensational books can be endured, when music and drama and painted show are essential to our happiness, life has gone down to a low ebb, and death is at the door. Let us do our quiet work as if we were preparing to reign as kings, and watch attentively at the door, for the next comer may be the Lord himself.—Dr. Parker.

It Is Not Easy—

To apologize.
To begin over.
To take advice.
To admit error.
To be unselfish.
To face a sneer.
To be charitable.
To be considerate.
To endure success.

A Brand-New Book

"OLD LIMBER" or THE TALE OF THE TAYLORS by DELONG RICE

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their eloquence, their fiddles, and their fox hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eternal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Rice. Into one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two most wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifelong rivalry of the two famous brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that attracted the attention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER," the peerless and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters" extending from a President of the United States to a fox hound, the story touches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of crackling camp fires and the music of the chase.

THE BOOK is beautifully printed and bound, appropriately illustrated, and packed in a neat gift box, ready for mailing.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

Governor "Alf" Taylor spoke to the West Tennessee Educational Association, in the Normal School at Memphis, April 14. A headline in the Commercial-Appeal of April 15 says: "Uncle Alf Preaches Faith to Teachers." Another says: "Christian Education Surest Safeguard to Democracy." It is encouraging to read such words from the chief executive of a great State. The latter statement is absolutely true; and if one did not read the speech, he might be inclined to believe the first one, too. That is, one might think that "Uncle Alf" really did preach faith to the teachers. But a close reading will show that he preached theistic evolution to them.

Alas for America, when our boys and girls are taught infidelity in the schools, when our Governor preaches it to our teachers, and when our reporters are either so ignorant or dishonest as to call it "Christianity!" But we will let the reader judge for himself.

Listen: "Whatever may be the opinions of the cynics to the contrary, I maintain that no argument is needed to establish the fact that by growth, progressive development and expansion during many thousands of years, man has attained to a degree of moral, mental, if not physical superiority immeasurably above his prototype of the stone age—aye, and of many succeeding ages, even within historic times." Again: "The earth, the planets, the suns, and all the solar systems were evolved from nebulous masses of gaseous or vaporized matter, incandescent with primordial fire. Such I believe to be the plan and formula of creative omnipotence, and in such manner sprung the world from chaos. The work days of the Almighty are the nightless cycles whose suns never set." Once again: "It is a far cry from protoplasm to finished man."

It is evident from the above that Governor Taylor is an evolutionist. He is not an atheist. He recognizes the need of a God; but the God he believes in could be carried in your vest pocket. He has God create a protoplasm "many thousands of years" ago, and finally from this protoplasm man is evolved via the monkey route. This seems to be the serious belief of our governor, yet he calls it "Christian."

He is evidently between two fires. He refers to the

"nebular theory" and "protoplasm," and "many thousands of years," all of which are in favor of the demands of the modern universities. This will keep him in favor with them as an "educated" man. Also, the frequent use of the word "Christian" and the following quotations may be supposed to give him favor with the believers in the Bible: "Out of the strife, conflict, and confusion of six thousand years has arisen this splendid civilization of the twentieth century." "It has taken sixty centuries to knock and shoot the savage out of man, and still it is not all out."

Why "sixty centuries" or "six thousand years?" True, according to Bible chronology, it has been nearly six thousand years since man was created, but that has nothing to do with evolution. A million years is only a breakfast spell with an evolutionist. Six thousand years would not give evolution time to pinch the tail off one monkey, apropos to making a man out of him, much less do all the other wonderful things attributed to it by scientists. Unless "Uncle Alf" is trying to talk to please both sides, I don't understand him.

He commits himself to the "nebular cosmology," the "fire-mist theory." This means that our planetary system had its origin in a cloud of "fire mist"—that is, matter so hot it floated in space. It was by this mass beginning to cool that the circular and rotary movements of the planets was produced, according to the nebular theory.

But that theory is about to be replaced, if not already, by the planetesimal theory—that is, that all matter was originally cold, and scattered throughout space in small particles, and was collected by means of gravitation, and that the increased pressure at the center of large bodies produces the heat. It is needless to say that there is neither facts nor reason behind either one, but the "cold" theory is to be preferred above the "hot." The first chapter of Genesis shows the earth coming out of the water. It was all under water till the third day. Also, granite, said by geologists to be the first rocks formed, and therefore the oldest, is said to be of aqueous rather than igneous origin. If this is true, it delivers the death stroke to the nebular theory.

What about God's days being "nightless cycles" instead of twenty-four-hour periods? It seems that some are inclined to adopt a fanciful definition of the word "day" in Genesis merely to pacify the theistic evolutionists. But nothing is gained by it. If God could create the world at all, he could do it in six days as easily as six million years. Also, an unbeliever is quick to observe that such a move on our part is an apology for our Bible. This weakens faith on the part of both the saved and the unsaved.

When Moses wrote Genesis, twenty-five hundred years after creation, every one should know that a day was twenty-four hours long. Moses knew it, and he wrote: "In six days God created the heavens and the earth, and rested the seventh day." That could mean nothing else but twenty-four-hour periods to those Jews; and what it meant to them it should mean to us to-day. Evolutionists have always cited the development of the chicken from the egg as proof of their theory. Governor Taylor does so. He says: "Is not the full-fledged eagle superior to the egg?" The fact that a full-fledged eagle can come from an egg proves nothing for the evolutionists. Their theory is that there is always a development from a lower to a higher order. That is not true. We admit that from the apparently lifeless egg there may come the royal bird that soars above the loftiest mountain peaks and blinks not to look the sun in the face. But what becomes of that eagle that started from the egg? Does she turn into a beautifully plumed bird of paradise, with an angelic nature? No. She sits down and lays another eagle egg, and brings us back to where we started. Now, is not the eagle superior to the egg? Yes; but the eagle produced the egg as truly as the egg produced the eagle. This shows evolutionists going around in a circle. The truth is, God made the first eagle full grown, which eagle laid eggs and hatched more eagles according to God's unalterable law. To this good day there is no proof that it ever happened any other way.

This all goes to show that we are living in perilous times. The "firm foundation" of the "saints of the Lord" is being undermined, and little by little the childlike faith in the Bible, which has made ours the greatest country in the world, is being destroyed. No one can believe the Bible and be an evolutionist. Christianity cannot exist with a mutilated Bible, and that is what evolutionists do to the Bible, if, indeed, they have any use at all for it. It is not Christian education that contradicts the plain words of the Bible and its Christ, governors and reporters to the contrary notwithstanding.

NOTICE RECEIVED TO QUIT.

The man who starts out to serve God from pure motives, whose greatest desire is to do good in this world, is sure to meet with strong opposition and some bitter persecutions. While I was teaching school in the Lake hills to provide another home for wife and children, I was invited to do some preaching in an adjoining neighborhood in a Methodist meetinghouse, not thinking of any objections. An appointment was made to begin a meeting on a certain Lord's day. Time came, and the house was full. At the close of the discourse I received the following notice (I give it just as written):

Cobbs' Chapple Oct 1st 1887 We the 4th quarterly conference now in session do recommend the Trustees of Tates Chapple to notify the ministers of the christian church or the Disciples of Christ. To not preach in their church any more at that place Geo Upton charmin Geo Kendle sec

I read the notice publicly and stated that I was invited there by the people of that community and did not know there was any objections to my preaching there.

Old Uncle John Perry, long since dead, was the bearer of the above notice. I told him publicly that I did not know his people objected to my using the house, and that they had a perfect right to control the house, and that I would step down and out. I told the people we would meet and build a brush arbor and continue the meeting. I requested old father Perry to return to the "fourth quarterly conference" and report that I would use the house no longer, also ask that "fourth quarterly conference" if they had any objections to my living the Christian life and being saved in heaven at last. I wanted to know if they objected to my going to heaven when I die. To this day that "fourth quarterly conference" has not given its consent for me to be saved. So that leaves poor me between the devil and the "fourth quarterly conference" of the Methodist Church.

The tears rolled down the furrowed cheeks of poor old Uncle Perry as he said: "Brother Williams, don't think hard of me. They ordered me to deliver the notice. I have done what they told me to do." The whole congregation arose and said: "The meeting will continue in this house. When we desire orders from the fourth quarterly conference, we will let them know it." I told the people the notice was given to the trustees of Tate's Chapel, and I asked who they were so I could present the notice to them.

There was but one trustee of Tate's Chapel at that time; so I went to him, read the notice, and asked him what to do. He still lives and may read this. I hope so, at least. He said: "We like you as a man, but we heard you said you wanted to tear up the Methodist Church at that place, and we don't like that." I told him somebody had lied, and, as the devil was the father of lies, the one that started that was a child of the devil. I had said no such thing. I told him that I had said no such thing, but said to him: "I will say to you, to your face, if I am permitted to go on and preach in that house, and the people will believe and obey the gospel I preach to them, then farewell to the Methodist Church at Tate's Chapel." He said: "Go on and preach as much as you please." I taught school during the day, then rode several miles and preached at night. Fourteen obeyed the gospel; some were Methodists. Long, long since the house has been torn down and the land upon which it stood is in cultivation. Only a short distance away there stands a good house, with a good and faithful congregation serving God "as it is written" in the New Testament.

At the time of the meeting an old, widowed sister lived in the neighborhood. She gave me a ten-cent cotton handkerchief, it being the whole amount to feed wife and children on. Only one who was a member of the Tate's Chapel congregation at that time lives in that community, and she is the widow of a Methodist preacher and cannot give up the faith of her husband. A daughter, her only child, has been a member of the church of Christ for many years. The devil's lie did not hinder the sowing of "the seed of the kingdom" and establishing a congregation at that place. While I did not say what the devil said I did, I did what he said I would do.

Abraham, the Friend of God.

BY H. LEO RILES.

As has been observed in former articles, Abraham occupies a very important place in the history of Israel; and not only in the history of Israel, but also in the history of religion. No other character occupies so much space in Biblical literature. His personal character is one ground of his lofty position; his influence upon his descendants emphasizes his greatness; his unwavering faith and its impression on the people of God helps to bring him into prominence and to give him a place of preëminence among the patriarchs; but nothing gives more dignity to his character and elevates him in the estimation of the righteous so much as being called "the friend of God."

Three times in the Bible, Abraham is said to be the friend of God; both in the Old and in the New Testament he is given this supreme dignity. No other patriarch or ancient worthy has been given such a title. Jesus said: "Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you." Hence, all may become the friends of the Lord Jesus Christ and also the friend of God by doing his commandments. We are led to believe that Abraham did the commandments of God; and upon the basis of fully, faithfully, and humbly doing God's commandments, he has been exalted and honored with the distinctive title of being "the friend of God." We are also led to believe that by doing the commandments of God we are brought into that relationship of being a friend of God, and that, as no other person has been called "the friend of God," that Abraham was more obedient than any of the other servants of Jehovah. The Bible is not a book of honorary titles or exaggerated encomiums; and since Abraham is called God's friend both in the Old Testament and in the New Testament, we may know that he merited this title.

The first mention of Abraham's being called the friend of God is found in 2 Chron. 20: 7. It is as follows: "Didst not thou, O our God, drive out the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and give it to the seed of Abraham thy friend forever?" In this instance Jehoshaphat is praying to Jehovah for Israel. He is threatened by the host of Moab and Ammon, and in his fear he goes to Jehovah praying in behalf of his kingdom. He appeals to Jehovah through the covenant that Jehovah had made with "Abraham thy friend forever." He refers to Abraham as a friend of Jehovah in a way that shows that the Israelites usually spoke of Abraham as the friend of God; that they reverently regarded Abraham as God's friend. This shows that the life of Abraham had been impressed on the minds of the Israelites early in their history as a kingdom.

The second time that Abraham is called the friend of God is found in Isa. 41: 8: "But thou, Israel, my servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend." In this instance the prophet, Isaiah, is encouraging Israel by assuring Israel that Jehovah will protect and help Israel; and the ground of this assurance is that Israel is "the seed of Abraham my friend." Nothing would seem to appeal so strongly to Israel as the assurance that Israel is the seed of Abraham. The great Messianic prophet stirs Israel to the greatest depth by reminding them that they are the seed of Abraham, the "friend of God"; and that because of God's friendship to Abraham, Israel would be blessed and protected. How often to-day people are blessed because of the influence and close touch of some of God's people!

The New Testament reference is found in James 2: 23: "And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, And Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned unto him for righteousness; and he was called the friend of God." Here James is emphasizing the fact that one is justified by faith when he obeys God; or that "Abraham our father" was "justified by works," and that "faith wrought with his works, and by works was [his] faith made perfect." He was not justified by faith alone; he was not called "the friend of God" by faith alone, but he was called "the friend of God" because of his obedient faith. This is the ground of our friendship to God to-day. It is not by faith only, neither is it "by works of righteousness which we have done," but by "faith wrought with works;" or, as Christ puts it, we are his friend if we do what he commands us. Our friendship to God rests upon the same ground that Abraham's did.

One has seen an argument in this title of Abraham for the divine Personality of God. It requires personality of a being to be on the terms of friendship with a personality. This excludes all ideas of pantheism, or nature, as being a God. Nature is not a diffused god. Nature is the handiwork of a divine Personality. The idea of friendship with Abraham strongly emphasizes the fact that God is a Personality; and if a Personality, he can take his creatures into the hallowed relationship of friends.

To be a friend of God implies that one must have a character that harmonizes with the will of God. Jehovah has taken Abraham into communion with him; he comforts and directs him; he has given him the promise of an heir through whom all the nations of the earth shall be blessed; and he has given him a new name, and now takes him into the sacred and hallowed relationship of being his friend. They cannot be congenial if they are not like in character. What an interpretation of the character of Abraham! We are not surprised to find an altar close by the tent of Abraham. The altar formed his only and frequent sanctuary. It stands hard by his tent under the open sky on hallowed ground because of the presence of Jehovah. Abraham's religious life is a natural life. He becomes a champion of Jehovah in the midst of polytheism. Abraham stands at the head of all defenders of monotheism. Out of his relationship to Jehovah as a friend springs his unwavering faith and prompt obedience. I cannot think of Abraham's going to Jehovah from a sense of mere duty or in a cold, formal way to worship him; but with the keenest interest and deepest reverence he approaches his altar with the joy of true worship.

Another thought based on the relationship of friends. Friends have things in common, especially those things which mutually affect both. When Jehovah took Abraham into the close union of friendship, this was a pledge that he should not want for anything that his soul needed. As Jehovah's blessings are never exhausted and the "bounties of his storehouse" are never depleted, Abraham, his friend, has the assurance that he shall never want. Abraham also has the assurance that he can never go astray so long as he follows the instruction of Jehovah, his friend. He may receive words of tender rebuke, wise counsel, gracious promises, and sweetest assurance; and if he heeds these, he will ever walk in wisdom's ways with sweet fellowship with Jehovah, his God. What a blessing to be called "the friend of God!" What a glorious privilege!

It is a far greater compliment to succeed in captivating a little child than to gain favor with an adult.—William Farkess.

The Works of the Flesh.

(Sermon delivered at Charlotte Avenue Church of Christ, West Nashville, by James E. Scohey.
Read Gal. 5: 16-25.)

The people of the nations of the world are in a fearful state of confusion and unrest, socially, civilly, politically, and religiously. Wickedness abounds everywhere. There is no class of men—or women, either, as for that matter—but is charged with having committed some crime that has caused them to be indicted and made to answer to the courts of the country. These criminals are found among the rich and the poor, the high and the low, the young and the old. There are three governors of States being prosecuted for crime—two for embezzlement of State funds, the other for seduction. Among a class where one would least expect criminality, the preacher class, we find quite a number in the penitentiary at Atlanta, and there are many in prison in other States.

The conditions of our country should challenge our gravest interest, because our own welfare and the welfare of our children and that of the rising generation is to be largely affected either for good or evil by the moral conditions of our people. There was never a time in the history of our country, and certainly not in my memory, when every species of wickedness was as prevalent as it is now. The papers report almost daily murders, killings, assassinations, burglaries, banditry, robbery, thievery, adultery, fornication, and divorce.

There are other things, too, which are having a deleterious effect upon the morals of our people, especially our girls and boys, our young women and young men. There is vanity displayed in the fads, follies, and fashions of dress, to say nothing now of the results of the immodesty and indecency of the modern dance. All young people are not bad, nor are all old people good; but it seems that the bad in both classes are increasing in number. One or two generations ago, as I remember, if any one belonging to a church were guilty of participating in a dance, or even guilty of card playing, he (or she) would be informed that he would be turned out of the church unless he confess his guilt, ask forgiveness, and promise to do so no more. Now most of the churches wink at it, and already it has been proposed by some church leaders to permit members to dance if they want to, and play cards, too. As a matter of discipline, the law is never now enforced against dancing, nor for sixty years past have I known any one turned out of a church for engaging in the pastime.

From what was in the long ago thought the respectable "old Virginia reel," where ladies and gentlemen did not come in close contact, our young people are learning and engaging in all the new fangled steps and positions of the body required by the character of the dance, whether it be the one-step, the cheek dance, the grizzly-bear hug, the kangaroo, or the jazz. I understand that a girl attending these dances must be properly gowned. Now, I confess I do not know how a young woman should be dressed to engage in the dance. I have never seen a girl gowned for the dance, nor have I seen her dance. But I have an idea of both the gown and dance, derived from the statements of one thoroughly posted on the subject of dancing. He was a successful teacher of the Virginia reel, the quadrille, and the cotillion. When the modern dances were introduced, he refused to engage in or to teach them. He said that the dress of the women was exceedingly immodest; and as to the movements of the dancers on the floor, their bodies in close proximity, swaying back and forth, the scene is a stench in the nostrils of common decency.

Sometimes, in such associations, is it wonderful that the young man outrages honest gentility, the young girl lays aside her modesty, and in the end virtue is sacrificed to lust? The man may hold up his head and pass in society as a polished gentleman, while the girl becomes an outcast unless she can hide her shame.

It is said, and statistics show, that no less than seven thousand girls in our country go astray each year, and that from eighty to ninety per cent refer their downfall to the lasciviousness of the ballroom. Archbishop Spaulding, of New York, places the figure at ninety per cent of fallen women of the city as due to their engaging in the modern round dances. He has no special objection to the square dance, and thinks, doubtless, little or no harm could come of it.

A minister of one of the churches in this city said in a sermon he preached recently to his congregation that he had an interview with the matron of the Florence Crittenton Home, where fallen women are received and encouraged to reform their lives. The matron said that some years ago the age of the women received into the institution averaged about twenty-five years. Now the average would not exceed sixteen, and one of the inmates was only a little past twelve. This is a sad report. No one will deny that baneful conditions exist in our city, but worse conditions are found in many other cities of our country. The Chief of Police of New York City said that no less than seven hundred girls and young women had been lost from their homes in the cities of New York and Chicago and the cities immediately between them during the month of January.

But all our women and girls are not bad. I believe the great majority of our women and girls are as pure in mind and conduct as the snowflake as it falls from the clouds, as modest as the violet, and as sweet in temperament as the lily that blooms in the valley. I wish I could say as much for all our young men. There are many virtuous, upright, and considerate young men who can be trusted. Wicked, perverse, unprincipled men are largely responsible for girls going wrong; because they use all kinds of devices of the devil, seeking opportunities to allure young girls from their homes to attend the dance hall and the swimming pool, where the immodesty of dress—or, rather, the undress—is worse than that seen in the dance hall.

But for these sad conditions of the civilization and morality of our people there are many causes.

1. The widespread and growing feeling of irresponsibility to God. Atheism and infidelity are being filtered into the minds and hearts of the rising generation in many of the schools of the country, both public and private. Nearly all the universities are honeycombed with infidel teachers, from whose teaching we must conclude that, if there is a God, he is not the one revealed by the Bible. If one be impressed with the thought that it is all of life to live and all of death to die, then there is no fear of God before his eyes; he is fit for treasons, stratagems, and for spoils. He will embrace the Epicurean doctrine: "Eat, drink, and be merry; for to-morrow you die." There will be no restraining influence to resist his committing any wickedness, save public opinion and the civil law.

2. The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the vain-glory of the world. The religion of Christ, lived out, is the panacea for the ills that proceed from these sources.

3. Want of proper teaching and training in our homes and schools and proper appreciation of our environments. Lot chose Sodom for his residence, and lost most of his family in the destruction of that wicked city.

What is the remedy for the ills that beset our people upon every side? What can we do to better conditions? Civil law cannot cure. The most it can do is to exercise a restraining influence upon those who would commit crime, by the fear of punishment. The city police arrested and brought before the City Judge of Nashville over one hundred men and women charged with unlawful deeds during the month of January.

We shall not be able to purify the foul stream of immorality and grosser wickedness by any of our efforts in great evangelical and popular revivals. Some good may be done by converting a few hundred and have them promise to lead better lives. It is like dipping from the muddy Mississippi a barrel of water and purifying it, while the stream, still filled with silt and slime, slowly falls into the gulf.

We must cleanse the fountain. The home is the source of the stream of life. Let parents lead godly lives, and let them teach their children to reverence God, to obey their parents, to honor their father and their mother, and rear them in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. If all the professed followers of Jesus Christ would thus consecrate themselves to the service of God in the teaching and training of their children, the next generation would show a vast improvement in morals and manners in comparison with what we now see. The Sunday schools have been a source of great good when they have impressed the hearts of the children with the facts of the gospel and crystallized in their minds the scriptural teachings of the home. Let Christians magnify God in their homes, and do as the wise man said: "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." (Prov. 22: 6.)

The Peacemakers.

BY B. C. GOODPASTURE.

The world has eulogized and idolized the war makers, but Christ has pronounced a beatitude upon the peacemakers: "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called sons of God." (Matt. 5: 9.) An impostor could not have said this, if he would; nor would he have said it, if he could. It was contrary to the spirit of the Roman world and opposed to Jewish party hatred. This teaching of Jesus, in its relation to the Jews, is well set forth by Morrison in these impressive words: "This delightful beatitude must have sounded like a clap of thunder over the hearts of some of those who were reveling in the imagination that the time had arrived when war to the bitter end was to be proclaimed against the surrounding principalities of the Gentiles." But Jesus taught men according to their needs rather than according to their desires. The Jews expected a Messiah who would sit on a literal throne, exercising political authority so powerful as to break into pieces the empire of imperial Rome; hence, how disappointing the claims of the Messiah who preached the Sermon on the Mount! An impostor would have fallen in line with the popular expectation and opinion.

When we consider what is said in the Bible concerning peace, we marvel not that a blessing is promised the peacemaker. Isaiah spoke of the Christ as the "Prince of Peace" (Isa. 9: 6); who was the "only begotten Son" of the "God of peace" (1 Thess. 5: 23); who came into the world to publish the "gospel of peace" (Eph. 6: 15). Jesus is the "Prince of Peace," and he is also the Prince of peacemakers. He makes peace between man and man, between man and himself, and between man and God. No one can follow in his steps without at the same time following after the "things which make for peace." (Rom. 14: 19.) Peace is emphasized both at the beginning and the end of his earthly life. At his advent a "multitude of the heavenly host" chanted an anthem of "peace, good will toward men." How this must have soothed the listening shepherds' alarm! And when he was about to leave this world he said: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you." (John 14: 27.) How this rich legacy for his disciples must have stilled their troubled hearts! This voice of peace has echoed the world over and the centuries through.

"Down the dark future, through long generations,
The echoing sounds grow fainter and then cease;
And like a bell, with solemn, sweet vibrations,
I hear once more the voice of Christ say, 'Peace.'"

But what is it to be a peacemaker? Must one be peaceful? Yes; he must abstain from family feuds and brawls, business disputes and quarrels, and religious strifes and broils. He must be not only peaceful, but pacific. He must not only not make strife, but he must make peace. He must set himself to the task of reconciling those who are at variance. The peacemaker has a very difficult, delicate task; yet it is absolutely necessary for him to work for peace. He cannot look on strifes and divisions with indifference. Wherever there is a lack of harmony, there he has an opportunity which he cannot afford to pass without notice, if it be in his power to promote peace. Suppose Christ and God had been merely peaceful in their dealings with men, who of us would or could have been reconciled to God? Do we not read that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself?" (2 Cor. 5: 19.) God was, and is, in Christ making peace. If all of God's professed people were in truth peacemakers, who can doubt that they would hasten the day when the nations would not "learn war any more?"

"When the Hand that sprinkles midnight
With its powdered drifts of suns
Has hushed this tiny tumult
Of sects and swords and guns;
Then hate's last note of discord
In all God's worlds shall cease.
In the conquest which is service,
In the victory which is peace."

"Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called sons of God." They shall not merely be "sons of God;" they shall be called, recognized, "sons of God."

NEWS NOTES.

One was restored at South Pryor Street on Sunday, April 23.

John A. Klingman has just closed an eight-days' meeting at East Point. Four were baptized during the meeting, and two on Sunday before the meeting began.

The work at Columbus, Ga., is growing rapidly. The membership of the little congregation there is now about thirty. It has doubled since our last report. Hugh A. Price, of Birmingham, Ala., closed an eighteen-days' meeting in Columbus on Thursday, April 20. During the meeting one was baptized, and one came from the Baptists and one from the Christian Church. Members who have been scattered over the city are being sought and found. The congregation is only a few weeks old, and it is probable that other members will be found. Hugh E. Garrett began another meeting in Columbus yesterday. We are expecting good results. R. W. Staggers, who recently moved to Columbus, is an untiring worker for the Lord. Already the brethren are planning to buy a lot on which to build a meetinghouse in the near future.

Has the Kingdom of God Been Established on Earth by Jesus Christ, or Will It Be in the Future?

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE BY H. W. JONES.

The Bible teaches that the kingdom of God was established on earth by Jesus Christ eighteen hundred and eighty-nine years ago. Not the ultimate kingdom of glory mentioned in Matt. 25: 31-34; Luke 13: 28, 29; 1 Cor. 15: 50; 2 Pet. 1: 11; etc.

"Kingdom of God" means "kingdom of heaven," "kingdom of Christ," "church of God," "house" or "temple of God," "the body of Christ," "church of Christ," and other expressions that include all "saved" people. The words, "kingdom" and "church," do not mean the same; but subjects of "the kingdom" are, evidently, members of "the church." "Kingdom" means domain of people under kingly rule, government; and respecting law, rule, government, the church is truly "a kingdom"—absolute monarchy. Hence, "Kingdom of God" means government of God; "kingdom of heaven," government of (from) heaven. So the word "kingdom" emphasizes the government feature of Christ's body on earth, "which is the church." (Col. 1.) Jesus said: "My kingdom is not of [from] this world." Not world government; hence, called "kingdom of heaven."

The word "church" means a body of people called out—assembly, congregation. Hence, the word "church" emphasizes the "called out"—assembly—feature of God's people. "Church of God" means the body of God's people called out of the world, spiritually, while "kingdom of God" refers to the God-given government of the same people. "House of God" describes the family feature of the church; "temple of God," the worship feature. The church is called "the body of Christ." This brings out the "fellowship" idea. Christ said "my church" and "kingdom of heaven" in the same context and referring to the same institution. (Matt. 16: 18, 19.)

Heb. 12: 23-29 says "church of the firstborn," and, concluding, says, "Wherefore, receiving a kingdom," showing conclusively that members of Christ's church are the same people "receiving a kingdom"—that is, "receiving" the divine government of our heavenly King. Hence, "kingdom" and "church" (general) include selfsame people. This is plain Bible teaching, and whosoever assails it will experience rough sailing, I opine.

Isaiah (760 B.C.) prophesied: "It shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow into it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." (Isa. 2: 2, 3.) Note: (1) Peter calls Pentecost (A.D. 33) "last days." (Acts 2.) (2) "Mountain" (as scriptural figure) means kingdom—government. Hence, government of God's house (which is the church of God—1 Tim. 3: 15) was established above other governments on Pentecost. (3) "The law" (of the Spirit), God's salvation word, went forth, first, from Zion and Jerusalem on Pentecost. (4) Peoples of "all nations" flowed into Christ's kingdom (government) from Pentecost till now. (5) "Many people" (Christians) "go," saying: "Come to Christ's government"—kingdom—for instruction, salvation, rest!

Daniel (606 B.C.) said: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed." (Dan. 2: 44.) "Days of these kings," of fourth kingdom (verse 40)—Roman Empire, full-grown 30 B.C. Rome fell A.D. 476; Constantinople fell 1453, demolishing Roman rule forever. God "set up" (established) his kingdom—government—on Pentecost A.D. 33, "in the days of these [Roman] kings." It stands to-day, and history attests it "broke in pieces" pagan Rome, the last world power. Hence, prophecies fulfilled!

A.D. 30-33, John, Christ, and apostles proclaimed "the kingdom of God at hand"—"nigh"—"shall see kingdom," etc. After Pentecost the kingdom (church) was referred to as an established institution. Hence, Pentecost, "the beginning."

(1) The kingdom must come with the Holy Spirit and power—all come together. (Mark 9: 1; Acts 1: 8.) (2) Holy Spirit and power came on Pentecost. (Acts 2: 1-4.) (3) Therefore, the kingdom came (established) on Pentecost.

Answer this article, friend Marrs. Readers, "watch."

REPLY BY T. J. MARRS.

As Brother Jones did not number his arguments, I can reply only in a general manner. It seems he affirms a church-kingdom was set up at "Pentecost," eighteen hundred and eighty-nine years ago. He reserves several texts as referring to the ultimate kingdom, but makes use of Dan. 2: 44; also Isa. 2: 2-4. By reading Dan. 2: 40-44, we find he referred to the "fourth beast," or Roman Empire after it became divided; for it says: "It shall be a divided kingdom." Now, that kingdom was not a "divided kingdom" at Pentecost, but was divided A.D. 395; therefore Brother Jones' "Pentecost-kingdom" was three hundred and sixty-two years "too previous." (2) The "stone" was to strike the image (kingdom) when this fourth kingdom was in its divided condition, and tear down these divided kingdoms before "the stone" (God's kingdom) was "set up." Those kingdoms are now being torn down for that very purpose. But Brother Jones' kingdom (?) was in bondage to the Roman government, even Christ himself paying tribute to it. So it came near being torn down by this Roman beast, by its innovations and apostasies. (3) As two things of the same nature cannot occupy the same space at the same time, those "divided" parts of the Roman Empire will have to be removed before God's kingdom can "fill all the earth." (4) These kings were to be mingled with the "seed of man" (blood related) before the "stone" struck. (Tiberius Caesar could not agree to that description, in person, number, gender, nor case; for he was not a "mingled" gender, nor plural in number, nor in the "subjective case.") (5) That kingdom is to fill all the earth. What "church-kingdom" does that? Rome comes nearest. For the last three hundred years the rulers of Europe have been "mingling themselves with the seed of man," at the beginning of the World War more than three-fourths being related to Queen Victoria. So I affirm: The kingdom will be set up "in the days of these kings," not after they are all dead, nor eighteen hundred years before they were born! (6) This kingdom is to "stand forever." So that will be "the ultimate kingdom," for nothing can come later than "forever." (Some church theologians say that the "church-kingdom" apostatized and that the "church-kingdom" was restarted about 1809 A.D. But God's kingdom will "stand forever." So there is loose theology somewhere.) In his reference to Isa. 2: 2, 3; that is the real kingdom. But you may observe that. Brother Jones wishes to change the interpretation thereof; for, instead of "nations," he wants us to think "Christians," etc. Well, Brother Jones, those words were given by inspiration of God; and unless you can improve on that inspiration, you better keep hands off, or somebody might think you were not pleased by the job he did, or else you could not find scripture to suit your theory and were trying to work over some of God's to fit your theory. Better not discount God's word any, or you also discount your faith.

The future of the nation cannot be trusted to the children unless their education includes their spiritual development. —Warren G. Harding.

Kurfees' Review of Payne's Book.

BY S. H. HALL.

Those who use instrumental music in their worship have made many efforts to justify themselves, but it seems hard for them to become satisfied with their efforts. This dissatisfaction, doubtless, caused O. E. Payne to become desperate; so he sailed out into the bookmaking business and undertakes to prove that "psallo" means to "play on a harp;" hence, if his position be true, the New Testament commands the use of the instrument.

It seems that the advocates of instrumental music in the worship are well pleased with Payne's effort, and the book is being handed out here and there for study.

I doubt, seriously, if since the days of the apostles there has ever been a book published that is more foreign to the truth, and one in which it is more apparent that the author of the same must have known he was misrepresenting some of the authors he quotes.

For instance, when Payne took the words of Justin Martyr, who lived in the first half of the second century, and tries to make that man say: "God has gone up with a shout; the Lord with the sound of a trumpet. Play on the harp (psalate) to our God; play on the harp (psalate). Play on the harp (psalate) to our King; play on the harp (psalate). For God is King of all the earth; play on the harp (psalate) understandingly"—he most certainly made Justin Martyr indorse a practice that Payne must know Justin Martyr opposed. For, as Brother Kurfees shows, Payne quoted from Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, and left out of his quotation the declaration, "Justin Martyr argues against it"—viz., the use of instrumental music in the worship. Now, did not Payne know that that encyclopedia had this declaration in it, and in the very paragraph he used? How did it happen that he left it out? Did he not know he was leaving it out? And does not this statement that he left out show, beyond question, that Justin Martyr did not use instrumental music in worship, but rather opposed it? O, it is very true that psalate is in the quotation from Justin Martyr. But is it not a dead certainty that Martyr did not know that it meant to "play on the harp?" And don't you suppose that Justin Martyr, who lived almost in the very day the last apostle died, knew better what the apostles understood that psalate meant than Mr. Payne or any other modern critic?

I have incorporated this one instance of Payne's wrong use of authors to impress upon the mind of those who read this the necessity of scattering far and wide Kurfees' exposé of this book. The Russell Street congregation has taken one hundred for free distribution, and when this supply is out we will order more. It is our duty to give to the people the truth and to stand between them and any effort on the part of any man to make the grand old Book teach something it most assuredly does not teach.

I ask our brethren who use the instruments, in all seriousness: Do you indorse this work that Payne has put out? That some of you do is evident, for you are circulating the book, and say it is a "most wonderful work." But those of you who do this may have not taken the time to see such terrible mistakes in it as the one mentioned above. After seeing these things and knowing them for yourself, will you still indorse the book?

Indeed, the preachers of the church of Christ, to a man, should take Payne's book and put it squarely up to those who use the instruments, and, after considering Kurfees' masterful exposé of the same, demand that they take a position for or against it.

Will it be out of place, in concluding, to call your attention to the fact that, in Prov. 6: 16-19, there are seven things declared to be things that God hates and that are an abomination unto him, two of which things are: "A false witness that uttereth lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren." That Payne does his best to defend a thing that has sown discord among the brethren is a certainty. Whether he has allowed himself to use false testimony in trying to do so or not, you must be your own judge. Send all orders to the McQuiddy Printing Company, 317-319 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn. The price of the book is twenty-five cents per copy. Every minister in the church of our Lord should have a copy. And wherever you find Payne's book has been circulated, order a hundred or more and put it in the homes of the people.

Other Troubles.

Have you ever taken the time to carefully observe how very unlike God we so often allow ourselves to be? "Godliness," which literally means "Godlikeness," is one of the things we must add continually to our character. (See 2 Pet. 1: 7.) One of the characteristics of God is that he always tells the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, about anything or person of which he speaks. Do we stand stamped with this same characteristic? For instance, go to that congregation or place where faction exists and listen to the brethren talk. Are they, as a rule, as careful as they should be to speak the truth? Did not Solomon tell too much truth about us when he said, "All the ways of man are clean in his own eyes?" (See Prov. 16: 2.) Is it not too much of our disposition to show, to prove, to get everybody to believe that the other fellow caused the trouble and I am innocent? When I see some articles in the papers condemning the partisan spirit, I wonder if they are written for the purpose of really teaching the brethren the terrible sin of having the partisan spirit or to keep self hidden as the responsible party for strife that exists.

Well, indeed, would it be for us to look close to home, to sweep around our own doors, to keep our own hearts right with God, then other people would really be better-looking to us. Christ had a reason for propounding the following question: "And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?" Well, why do we do this? Had we better not think a bit seriously here? And more: "Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me cast out the mote out of thine eye; and lo, the beam is in thine own eye?" We had better just come up, like men, and take Christ's prescription for such a miserable disease, without diluting it a bit—viz.: "Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye."

If other people do wrong, and we never get them to see their wrongs, it will not necessarily keep us out of heaven; but if I do wrong, and keep up the habit of trying to keep my wrongs covered and hidden from men, and finally succeed in making myself believe I am as good as I would have others think I am, I am lost, world without end. The Lord help us to see self as he sees and knows us to be, is my prayer.

INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

By M. C. Kurfees

Cloth, 300 pages. Price, postpaid.....$1.50

This is the most comprehensive book on this important subject now before the public. In it the Greek verb "psallo" is philologically and historically examined, together with a full discussion of kindred matters relating to music in Christian worship. The book is the result of a lifetime of critical study and research, and has become the standard of information on the music question. It has been highly recommended by scholarly brethren in the church of Christ and in the religious world.

Field Notes.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

My trip through Crockett County "back-fired." Several places where advertising the preaching had been neglected, and where only a few came out, I was invited back so the whole church would have a chance to hear.

On Monday night, April 17, I was at Bethel, near Friendship. Brother Fred Blanchard lives there and teaches school and preaches on Sundays. The brethren speak well of him. He is a whole-souled fellow and a zealous Christian. He and his wife are former pupils of the Freed-Hardeman College.

At Friendship the next night I found more friendship than before, and brought away a large quantity, but did not diminish their supply any.

My next stop was at Nance. This is a fine country congregation, about four miles from Alamo. I did not meet many of the brethren, as most of them are farmers and were very busy.

On the night of April 20 I thought I had an appointment at Cairo, another country church, about three miles from Nance. Brother D. B. Colvett drove me to the place, and at ten minutes to eight o'clock no one had showed up and the house was all dark; so we went back home. I was a little disappointed at not meeting them; for my uncle, Frank Paschall, died there a few years ago, and through his folks I had heard much of them.

On April 21 I went to Maury City. There I met Brother J. W. Dunn, of Dyersburg, and we spent the day and night together at the home of Brother and Sister Clarence Pittman. Brother Pittman is a first cousin to Brother S. P. Pittman, of the David Lipscomb College. This was just like seeing people from your home town. The Maury City people are fine. I met a number of old men there (no offense intended). Brother H. C. Booth was born in 1836, but still goes about town as he pleases. He at one time published a paper at Alamo, called "The Christian at Work." The shop and mailing list were bought by Brother David Lipscomb and combined with the Gospel Advocate in 1885. Brother Booth said that Brother Lipscomb said that one paper was enough for Tennessee, and that he soon saw the wisdom of that suggestion and sold out. Some others have not seen that point yet, but I feel sure it is the best still for the cause of Christ. Sister Dunn is getting up the twenty-five names to get the Matthew Henry Commentary for Brother Dunn; and as Brother Dunn preaches once a month there, we turned over all we got there to her. I hope the brethren at Dyersburg and Newbern will help her finish out the list now.

Sunday and Sunday night, April 23, I spent at Cross Roads, four miles from Bells. We had two fine meetings, and I met several more of the brethren, among them Brother and Sister Moore, who taught school in Greenfield Bend and Taylorville in Maury County. They both want to go back to the "garden spot," as it is called.

Many of the brethren at Cross Roads drive out from Bells. There is a "digressive" church in Bells. One of the brethren was approached by a "digressive" and asked why he would go away out in the country when there was a church right in town and the only difference was a little organ. The brother said that if it was a "little" organ and that was the only difference, they could surely afford to put away such a "little" thing, if they wanted him in their congregation. The man said they would do that, only they had already put their money in it, and they hated to have it sit there and get nothing out of it. Whereupon the brother said he would buy the organ then and pay them full purchase price for it, so they would not lose anything. There the conversation ended.

In the afternoon I heard I. N. Penick, of the Baptist University at Jackson, lecture. He was trying to show ways and means to advance Baptist doctrine. Incidentally, he referred to the contributions at Alamo, where he preaches a part of the time. One special collection for some Baptist enterprise was over four thousand dollars. Another time, when he was not there and no special appeal made, there was found in the basket over one thousand dollars. Ordinarily, I understood him to say, it was only three or four hundred dollars. This is about as I have suspected. I have believed all along that other religious bodies are giving more than we are. We can beat the Baptists in debates at every turn; but they will outgrow us, if we do not give more freely than at present.

Brother J. W. Dunn began a meeting at Newbern on Sunday night, April 23, and expects to begin one in Dyersburg on Sunday, May 7.

The brethren at Bradford are raising money to buy a tent to be used in preaching the gospel in Gibson and adjoining counties. It will cost two hundred and fifty-four dollars. They have made a good start, but probably lack some yet.

The brethren at Milan are trying to arrange a three-cornered debate with a Christian, a Missionary Baptist, and a Primitive Baptist. Question: Where would the Missionary go? I would like to hear it.

My next move will be to follow the Mobile and Ohio Railroad from Jackson back to Rives.

If brethren who live in the country and who wish to renew will arrange to meet me in town or leave the remittance with some one to hand to me, it will be much appreciated.

Everywhere I go I can see good the Gospel Advocate is doing. That is why I can feel free to urge every one to have it in their homes.

Los Angeles (Cal.) Notes.

BY W. EDGAR MILLER.

The services on Sunday, April 16, were enjoyed by all who attended Central church of Christ, 1720 South Flower Street. Brother Witty gave us a splendid sermon on "The Tragedy of the Ages." The house was well filled, and at the close of the services three young Christians came forward for membership. Every Sunday sees new names added to our roll of members. These constant additions are attributed to the fact that live Christians want to work; and when they find a congregation that is trying to do something, they want to help. This is the right spirit, and the only way any congregation can hold this kind of folks is by working and by giving its members something to do. No Christian with any life or ambition in him wants to belong to a dead congregation.

The work in this great city has brighter prospects than ever before in its history. Six months ago there was one congregation in the city with one house full of people. Today there are two congregations with two houses full and still growing. New men are coming into the field and other congregations are springing into life in the surrounding territory. Brother J. H. Moore has located in Sierra Madre, near here, and is founding a congregation there; Brother E. C. Fuqua has located in Pasadena with his press and is going after the devil with printer's ink, as well as from the pulpit; Brother J. A. Craig has decided to locate at Downey, so we understand, and make an effort to build that place up. Downey is one of the old landmarks of the church in this section, there being at present a building that was erected in 1875 by the church and still occupied by it. There has been some attempt by the Christian Church people to get hold of the property, but so far they have failed. Brother Robert E. Wright came here the first of March from Wartrace, Tenn., and is adding his efforts to those of Brother Witty in building up Central congregation, and the results have far exceeded our expectations. The work is progressing steadily and surely and is on a good, substantial footing. Brethren Wright and Witty are out in the morning before seven o'clock, and often do not get in until after dark, visiting members and calling on new people whose names have been placed in their hands. It is necessary to cover a great deal of ground in this work, and the territory is unlimited.

From reports we have had of the great Nashville meeting, it was one of the greatest events of its kind in the history of the church of Christ on this continent, and was only made possible by the most perfect cooperation and systematic work. May God hasten the day when Los Angeles may have just such a meeting as Nashville has had.

Testimonials on the Review of O. E. Payne's Book.

The hearty and enthusiastic reception accorded this review may be seen from testimonials which have been sent to the author. Among them are the following:

H. Leo Boles, Nashville, Tenn.: "I have read very carefully your 'Review of O. E. Payne's Book on Psalms' in the Gospel Advocate. I had read Mr. Payne's book very critically and discovered many errors, discrepancies, fallacies, and sophistries in it. I realized that his book would confuse and mislead many who did not have the opportunity to examine the different authorities which he quotes. His bombastic style has a tendency to compel the reader to accept his mere statements. Your review has fully and frankly exposed the author and clearly and logically answered the contents of the book. Your familiarity with the lexicographers has enabled you to completely expose the fraudulent use that Mr. Payne makes of them; you have completely shown the fallacies in his premises and the errors in his deductions. In my humble judgment, you have in a masterly and scholarly way laid bare his very weak defense for instrumental music in the worship. I thank you sincerely for the work that you have done."

A. O. Colley, Dallas, Texas: "You have done an excellent work in your review of O. E. Payne's book on the music question. Your logic is clear and, best of all, in harmony with fact, both secular and divine. Your review should be published in tract form and sent out by the hundreds into the places where his book has gone."

E. C. Fuqua, Pasadena, Cal.: "Your exposure of the Payne deception is a veritable landslide covering deeply the last vestige of hope for the devotees of the instrumental-music craze. Your work has turned Payne's book into self-destruction. I believe it is now, since your exposure of its unreliability, the greatest enemy to the cause in behalf of which it was written that exists in the whole world, the Bible excepted. For you will remember that such luminaries as J. B. Briney et al. gave it their unqualified indorsement as 'the last word' on the subject, making it surpass in 'research' and logic and 'scripturalness' the findings of the scholarship of the whole world! With them it was 'the end of the controversy.' On its testimony they serenely 'rested the case' and forthwith heralded to the world that 'instrumental music is scriptural!' Now where are they? They must henceforth indorse Payne's blunders and plain deceptions in dealing with facts that contradict his theory, as you have shown, or they must announce to the world that the instrumental-music controversy is not settled, so far as their contention is concerned, but stands exactly where it stood before Payne undertook to show the world the pitiful limitations of its alleged scholarship. Yea, the cause for which Payne has now suffered is worse off for the suffering; for it would have been far better for it had Payne never uttered one word in its defense. He has now so completely 'spilled the beans' that the devotees of the instrument will never get over this, their greatest and most signal defeat. Their cause is ruined, and that by themselves! Your work, my brother, is a monument that will live to bless the coming generations of the earth. See that it is put in book form while you are able to edit the work. This one request I have to make of you for the sake of the generations yet unborn. Payne's work is the greatest effort that can ever be made in behalf of instrumental music, and you have shown, and that abundantly and undeniably, that that effort is founded in deception and bolstered up through misrepresentation of facts. Therefore, the instrumental-music question lies equally as dead as does the old question of affusion for baptism. It can be sustained only by open disregard of every known truth bearing on the matter. For your monumental work I sincerely thank you, and I daily thank God for giving you to the world at this time."

F. B. Srygley, Nashville, Tenn.: "I consider this some of the best work that you have done. I may not be a very good judge, but I believe that you answered every quibble that O. E. Payne made; not only so, but that you show him up in a very bad light. In your last article you show that Payne is a very unsafe teacher and cannot be entirely honest. I am glad that this review is soon to appear in a more permanent form. It ought to have a wide circulation, and I believe it will do good wherever Payne's book has gone. Your book on instrumental music, in connection with this review of Payne's, ought to be advertised and pushed, and, if possible, get it before every one that has read Payne's book. I want to thank you personally for this review of O. E. Payne."

John T. Smithson, Louisville, Ky.: "Since you have finished your review of O. E. Payne's book on 'psalms,' and since I have read every line you have written in your review, I feel that I should write you an expression of my appreciation and judgment of the work you have done. I had read every word in the Payne book before you began your review of it. Hence, from the very first of your review I was able to appreciate all you said. I looked forward with great interest and delight for each chapter to appear. I read every chapter carefully, and, as I see it, you covered the ground completely in each chapter; hence, I will not attempt to tell which is the best chapter in your review. Your method of reviewing the book and exposing Payne's sophistries is on that high plane on which all honorable controversies should be conducted. No one can help appreciating your review when it is read alongside Payne's book, which abounds in ugly insinuations, gross misrepresentations, and egotistical phrases. Your reasoning on all points throughout the review is clear and convincing. Your logic is faultless, and your conclusions are, therefore, true. The facts which you have exposed and the reckless and untrustworthy manner of his handling of authors are both startling and contemptible in the extreme. They make his book wholly inconclusive and untrustworthy. In the light of the facts as you have given them, no one can believe anything that Payne has written in his book is true, unless he knows it is true from some other source. It is surprising to me that so many learned preachers on Payne's side of the music question have given the book their strong indorsement. Your review of the book is a complete exposure of it, and, I think, if those brethren who have indorsed the book will read your review carefully and seriously, they will reject the book and rebuke Payne for writing such a book. I would like for your review to be put in book form, for it is worth preserving."

C. M. Pullias, Murfreesboro, Tenn.: "Your letter of yesterday just now received. I have watched with interest the Payne book and your reply thereto. In the light of the Bible, reason, logic, and facts, I think your answer irrefutable. I do not think that Payne or any other man can answer you, because you have presented plainly the Bible teaching on the subject."

The Garden of the Heart.

There are many things in this grand old world that make it one of real beauty. I once knew a man who moved into a community where he had purchased a plot of ground on which to erect a magnificent building which was to be his future home. The buildings all having been finished, he began planning to add much beauty to the home by planting suitable shrubbery, etc. This being completed, there seemed yet something lacking. He and his family came together to consider just what remained to be done. They reached the decision that a little to the right from the front of the home was a suitable place for a garden. It was decided that the land should be properly prepared and that certain parts should be planted in vegetables of all kinds suitable for family use. This was done and proved a wonderful success.

There was still something lacking—no roses or flowers of any kind had been planned for. It was arranged to give the finishing touch. The selection of roses was made. They were ordered, planted, cultivated, fertilized, pruned, and, as the year went by, the added beauty was greater than any artist could paint. The home with all of its furnishings both within and without was complete.

The moral: If the garden of the heart be planted with flowers of purity and love, the soul's beloved will come in and abide with us.—H. H. Neeley, in Exchange.

Divisions Among Christians Deplorable.

BY J. C. M'Q.

It will not be denied that there are divisions among Christians which should not exist. Paul tells us that divisions produce carnality, and to be carnal-minded is death. In writing to the church at Corinth, he says: "Now I beseech you, brethren, through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.)

These divisions among Christians do not exist without cause. If Christians were meek and lowly in spirit, as was the Christ, there would not be the divisions among them that now exist. One prolific cause for division among those who are seeking to be guided by the word of God is that too many are seeking leadership instead of in honor preferring one another, and instead of having a spirit of humility they strive to lead the flock of God when they are not fitted for such work. Often men will pull out from the church and start a factional congregation simply because they are not put into positions of leadership. This spirit is clearly condemned by holy writ. Such a spirit will rend and divide the people of God and will unfit one for usefulness in this life. James says: "Be not many of you teachers, my brethren, knowing that ye shall receive heavier judgment. For in many things we all stumble." (James 3: 1, 2.)

When Moses was forty years old, he felt himself thoroughly competent to lead the people of Israel out of Egyptian bondage. He thought his people would understand just how God would use him as their leader. But Moses was not at that time prepared for the work. He was hasty about it. God took forty long years in which to prepare

Moses for the great work of leading his children. He led them into the wilderness, where he communed with God through nature and through nature looked up to God. During these years he learned to regard himself in his true light and learned truly how weak man is. No doubt, like the psalmist David, he often said to himself: "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; what is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him but little lower than God, and crowned him with glory and honor." (Ps. 8: 3-5.)

When Moses was eighty years old, in his humility he felt that he was not the man to lead the children of Israel out of bondage. When God had told him to bring the children of Israel out of Egypt, and after he had enabled him to work wonders and signs in order that the people might believe him, Moses began to plead his inability to do the work that God had told him to do. He said: "I am not eloquent, neither heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant; for I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue." (Ex. 4: 10.)

No man who imagines himself great and who feels that he is superior to all about him is fit to be a leader among people of God. A man must be of a broken, contrite spirit; he must humble himself in order that God may exalt him. While Moses did not realize it, the very humility that he manifested is one of the greatest essentials to any one who would be a leader. God had shown him the greatness of his works in order that Moses might be brought to a realization of the fact that man is weak at best and not capable of doing great things without the guidance and direction of God. How different is the spirit of those who would lead God's people to-day, and yet, because they cannot carry out their own opinions and speculative ideas, pull away a part of the church and thus make a schism in the body of Jesus Christ! Such men will do things so long as they are accorded the position of leaders; but the very moment that the position of leadership is taken away from them they will decide that the thing they have been doing is unscriptural and sinful.

Men have taught classes in the service of God; but when the congregation thought best for others to take the position of leading in the work of teaching classes, these very men decided that to teach a class was unscriptural, vicious, and sinful. They pulled out from the church and started a faction of their own. What a pity that men who claim to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus have such a spirit! Simply because they cannot have their own way, they will destroy the body that Jesus died to establish. It is a pity that some people are so blind that they will be led by the blind, and thus both fall into the ditch.

It is now as it was in the days of the prophet Isaiah. The children of Israel had departed from God; they had gone astray; they had followed blind leaders. Of the condition that then existed among the children of Israel the prophet says: "For they that lead this people cause them to err; and they that are led of them are destroyed." (Isa. 9: 16.)

Would-be leaders who are unfit for the work are destroying the church of God to-day. They lead from the truth the ignorant and those who are not well informed in the Scriptures. Why do they do this? Not because they have any special love for the truth; not because they are loyal to God and his word; but simply because they desire the chief seats in the synagogues and seek the highest places at feasts instead of humbling themselves and taking the lower places as the Spirit of God directs. The sons of Zebedee had very much the same spirit when one sought to sit on the right hand and the other on the left hand of Christ when he came into his kingdom. The apostles had the same spirit when they contended with each other about who should be the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. Such a spirit is not of God, but is of the wicked one. Christ said: "But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your teacher, and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father on the earth: for one is your Father, even he who is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters: for one is our master, even the Christ. But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant. And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be humbled; and whosoever shall humble himself shall be exalted." (Matt. 23: 8-12.)

What a pity all men cannot learn that the road which leads to exaltation passes through humility! The truly great, the truly good, and the truly wise are humble people. I am sure that if all God's people were just as humble as they should be, we would not have so many divisions among the people of God. Men seek to be teachers, men seek to be leaders, who really do not understand the way of life and who have not a single characteristic to teach, lead, and guide the flock of God. Such men do not know enough to know that it is sinful to be self-willed, and hence they pull away from the church and start up a "church of their own." Such a spirit produces discord on earth and would produce discord in heaven, provided it were able to pass through the pearly gates into the city.

I would admonish all that God loves a broken, contrite spirit; to remember that God approves humility and that the people admire it. Let no one forget that so long as he has a spirit of self-superiority and imagines himself able to do more than other men, he is wholly unfit to be a leader and a teacher in the church of God. I would rejoice to see all the followers of Christ put away that ambition which seeks to make them leaders when they are wholly unfit for such a position. To all such I would say, in the language of Christ: "Except ye turn, and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 18: 3.)

Unreasonable and Hurtful Extremes.

BY M. C. K.

Referring to a certain religious paper, a preaching brother sometime ago, in a letter to the editor of the said paper, made the following significant statement:

"I suppose we could say that your paper is fairly good, but I have no further interest in religious papers."

Now, this brother did not accompany his statement with the reason for his loss of interest in religious papers, and, of course, I do not know certainly what his reason may be; but, in the light of its tone as well as on general principles, I take his statement to mean that it is because he has seen things in the papers which, in his judgment, were objectionable and should not have been published, or because, in some other way, such publications are not conducted as he thinks they should be. I make his statement the occasion of an editorial on what seems to me to be a very hurtful as well as a most unreasonable extreme.

However, being an editor myself, I hasten, first of all, to make the cheerful and willing admission that all of the papers, as far as I know them, sometimes contain objectionable things. In fact, it sometimes becomes an editor's unpleasant but solemn duty to publish things which, in the first place, should never have been said at all, but which, nevertheless, and entirely beyond the editor's control, have been said by the writer in the case, and the editor is then placed between two fires—he must either publish the objectionable things and meet them in the way of comment the best he can in the fear of God, or cut the writer out of his paper entirely and thus refuse to let him be heard in its columns at all. If he does the latter, he lays himself open to the charge of being selfish, autocratic, and tyrannical as an editor. It is true, sometimes abusive, discourteous, or disrespectful language justifies an editor in returning an article with the demand that such matter must be eliminated before the article can appear in his columns; but, on the other hand, sometimes very objectionable things are couched in courteous and unobjectionable language, and in such a case an editor has no alternative but either to publish them, with such comment as may seem proper, or put himself in the attitude of appearing autocratic and tyrannical in the conduct of his paper, one or the other.

Yes, there are occasionally objectionable things and sometimes very objectionable things in religious newspapers, and sometimes such things appear even in the very best of religious journals. In fact, when we come to think of it, there are sometimes very objectionable things in churches and even in preachers; but I think I should go to a very unreasonable and hurtful extreme were I to say, for this reason, that "I have no further interest in" churches and preachers. But the principle by no means stops here; for we sometimes see objectionable things in elders of churches, but, again, we would go to an unfortunate extreme and make a very serious mistake if we should say that, for such reason, we "have no further interest in" elders of churches. Moreover, precisely the same defect is sometimes found in all other Christians. The fact is, this radically mistaken principle, carried to its logical and legitimate end, would actually justify our loss of interest in all conceivable classes and conditions of human beings. There are objectionable things in husbands and wives, in fathers and mothers, and in brothers and sisters; but surely we should not, on this account, say we "have no further interest in" such persons. There are, indeed, not only objectionable things in all classes and callings of men who are not Christians, from the king on his throne to the peasant in his cottage, but also in all grades of Christians, from the most perfect saint to the humblest child of God on earth; but, instead of losing interest in them, we should follow the Pauline admonition to "prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

It is so easy to go to extremes. All men are fallible beings, and hence there are objectionable things in all conceivable lines of human activity and in all positions from the highest to the lowest—in presidents, congressmen, senators, legislators, and statesmen of all grades; in lawyers, doctors, preachers, school-teachers, artists, authors, mechanics, merchants, housekeepers, farmers, philanthropists, and all others of every name and class; but surely we should not, for this reason, say we "have no further interest in" these numerous classes and varied lines of human endeavor. Even Jesus himself was much annoyed with objectionable things in men, but he never, for this reason, lost interest in men. In the spirit of gentleness and humility he pointed out and strove to correct such things when they came as merely the result of human weakness; and even when they emanated from perverse and wicked hearts set on evil and determined to do wrong things, he met them with stern rebuke, but still never lost interest in them. Neither should we.

In short, men, as just observed, are fallible beings, and in all lines of activity among them, whether in secular or religious affairs, objectionable things are said and done. As children of God, remembering our own imperfections and liability to make mistakes, it is our duty bravely and cheerfully to meet these things in the spirit of the Master; or, as Paul considerably puts it: "Even if a man be overtaken in any trespass, ye who are spiritual, restore such a one in a spirit of gentleness; looking to thyself, lest thou also be tempted." (Gal. 6: 1.) We should strictly follow this instruction in all our dealings with men, and we should follow it "with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love." (Eph. 4: 2.)

Finally, it is to be sincerely regretted and deplored that sometimes an ugly spirit with cutting and harsh words is manifested in articles written for publication in the papers.

Such things have no proper place either in printed articles or in oral discourse; but when they occur, we should not allow them to drive us to unreasonable and hurtful extremes. Let us not overlook the fact that newspapers, preachers, and churches, in spite of the objectionable things in them, are all good things, and we should not lose interest in them on account of their imperfections. We cannot improve on the position which indorses and commends all the good and condemns all the wrong in all of them. Or, to put the case again in the clear and sensible language of Paul, we should "prove all things; hold fast that which is good." (1 Thess. 5: 21.)

The Departure of Matthew C. Cayce.

BY F. W. SMITH.

It pains my heart more than I can express to pen these words, and yet I am of the firm persuasion that our brother is in a land of bliss. My sorrow is over my loss, for I loved him as if he had been my brother in the flesh, and it grieves me deeply to know that I shall see him no more upon this earth. The news of his death was one of the most distinct shocks I have ever experienced, and even now it is difficult to realize that he has gone away. During the first part of the Auditorium meeting he was in attendance, and I can see him now, face all radiant as his soul was drinking in the uplifting speeches of the speaker. This man of God possessed traits of character that easily placed him in line and company with the truly great of earth in any age of the world. It could all be summed up in a single sentence—viz.: He was a Christian.

But such a character as Matthew C. Cayce possessed is of such value to the living that it demands more than a compressed description. If such a thing were possible, I would say that he was naturally religious; for a love for God and reverence for holy and divine things manifested themselves in him as a child, and these grew with the years. He never assumed a relation that he was not as true to as is the needle to the pole. I feel safe in saying that there lives not a man who will dare say that Matthew Cayce was ever false to any trust. The greater part of his life was spent in the city of Nashville, where he was connected in a business way with different enterprises, and never were his hands stained with even a shadow of wrong dealing. A gentleman with whom he had business transactions said to me: "M. C. Cayce owed me at one time three thousand dollars, and there was not the scratch of pen between us, but I never lost one moment's sleep over it. He paid every dollar of it." He had a kindly disposition, blessed with a good-natured smile that rarely ever faded from his face even during times of deep anxiety. He was clothed with humility, genuinely pious, and possessed an aversion for anything bordering on show or display in religion. No man was truer to the gospel or contended more earnestly than did he for the purity of the church and the worship of God. His ear was ever attuned to the cry of the widow and the orphan and his hand was ever extended to those who needed help. The current of his life flowed steadily through storms as well as through calms, and he always kept his eyes upon the Lord Jesus Christ as his pattern.

One dominant thought seized him early in life, and that was to preach the gospel, which he did as much as possible with the cares and obligations which necessarily fell upon his shoulders. But he was inspired by a dream that some day he would be so situated as to give all of his time to the proclamation of the gospel in some destitute field. In the providence and goodness of God, Brother Cayce realized his dream, and for about two years he had been doing evangelistic work in the State of Mississippi. His efforts were crowned with abundant success, and he was one of the happiest men in his work I have ever seen. At the time of his death he was in a successful meeting in Columbus,

Miss.; and although the worker has ceased his personal labors on earth, his work continues on. The very name of Matthew C. Cayce in the State of Mississippi will be an inspiration to the cause of Christ for years to come. As a rule, when a man dies, the first question is: "What did he leave?" By this is meant, of course, what did he leave in dollars or houses and lands? Well, I am happy to state that this man of God left one of the richest estates ever bequeathed to the living. He left to his children and the world the invaluable example of a clean, consecrated, godly life, a monument to the glory and honor of God that is imperishable.

The following states his family relations: Matthew C. Cayce was born at Franklin, Tenn., on April 1, 1866, son of John M. and Virginia I. Cayce, removing to Nashville when he was a mere boy. He was married to Miss Tommie Smith, of Jackson, Tenn., on October 28, 1891, and is survived by his wife and five children—Dr. John S. Cayce, William Brice Cayce, Eldred A. Cayce, Mrs. W. H. Sewell, Jr., and Mrs. W. D. Hunter, all of Nashville; two brothers—W. B. Cayce and John A. Cayce, of Nashville, Tenn.; and three sisters—Mrs. E. D. Dinkins and Mrs. C. H. Tucker, of Senatobia, Miss., and Mrs. W. T. Marshall, of Nashville, Tenn.

May God's richest blessings attend his faithful wife, children, brothers, sisters, and friends, and Sister Cayce's aged mother. Farewell, Matthew; we shall, by the grace of God, meet again where the shadows never fall.

Hardeman's Sermons.

Before the great Nashville meeting began, the brethren who were in charge of arrangements asked Brother Hardeman for the right to have the sermons published in book form and to use the profits from their sale to help defray the expenses of the meeting. He very generously agreed to this suggestion, and, therefore, surrendered all his rights in the matter.

On the last night of the meeting, to his great surprise and pleasure, they returned his generosity by surrendering to him all the rights connected with the book of sermons, together with about twenty-five hundred orders already taken. They suggested that the profits arising from the sale of this book should be used to create a fund to help poor boys and girls attend Freed-Hardeman College. They made Brother Hardeman sole trustee of this fund, to be used according to his judgment for the purpose mentioned above.

Every year the school has numbers of applications from boys and girls who are not able to pay their way and want assistance. Heretofore it has been unable to help them. It has no farm, no industrial department, and no funds with which to meet such demands. It is now hoped that from the sale of these books a fund of several thousand dollars may be created. It is his idea that this money should be loaned to worthy boys and girls on terms that will enable them to pay it back after they get out of school.

There is no way of estimating how much good may be done in this way. Those boys and girls who are handicapped by poverty and who have to fight their way up from the bottom are the very ones, as a rule, who will make the greatest and the best men and women. He who helps such boys or girls in their struggles to rise in the world will honor himself and bless the world. Every dollar received from the sale of these books above the actual cost of publication and distribution will be devoted to this great purpose.

The book will be neatly bound in cloth, stamped in gold. It will contain pictures of N. B. Hardeman and C. M. Pullas, an inside picture of the Tabernacle and audience, and a history of this great meeting, together with about fifteen sermons.

The sermons are strong and clear presentations of the "old Jerusalem gospel" without fear or favor, in the charming and eloquent style of the author.

The book is well worth the price of $1.50; and, besides, he who buys one contributes to a worthy cause.

Send Us New Subscribers.

BY J. C. M'Q.

One thousand people can accomplish much more than one person. Ten thousand people can do more than one thousand people. If every one who reads this paper would go to work immediately to secure new subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, it would not be over one day until we would have five thousand additional subscribers to the paper. How easy it can be done! All that is necessary is for all to pull together.

Are you not sufficiently interested in the advancement of the gospel of Christ to do the little work necessary to help us add five thousand subscribers to our list?

I am not in the habit of complaining of heavy expenses. The government is forcing the publisher to pay very heavy postage; the publisher must pay double prewar prices for white paper; wages are just about double what they were ten years ago; still the Gospel Advocate is only two dollars a year. Without bringing down the cost of publishing each paper, the publisher must suffer a heavy loss. No publisher is able to do this indefinitely. A decided increase in circulation will cheapen the cost of printing each paper.

Surely every subscriber will help us bring about this result. The paper costs double what it did thirty years ago to publish it. Because at that time it succeeded in running without loss should not lead any one to believe that it can do so now.

Double the list of subscribers if you would have the paper on a firm financial basis. In doubling the circulation, you are not only enabling the paper to run without loss, but you are doing a good work in getting others to read the paper. Thousands have been led to the truth by reading the Gospel Advocate. If you have no interest in the cause of Christ, if you are not concerned about leading sinners to Christ, then you may decide to knock the Gospel Advocate and thus increase the burden of those who have been making heavy sacrifices for years to preach the gospel through its columns. Many people uphold the paper because it is doing good. I do not believe you will be a knocker, for knocking never helps the knocker.

If you will be one of the workers and not a knocker, we would appreciate a note from you to that effect. We would be glad to publish the names and addresses of all our workers. We want a worker in every church and one at every post office. We do not want to stop under ten thousand new names. Our list is steadily increasing, but not so rapidly as it should. Will you not join our workers to-day?

Help Paris, Tenn.

BY F. B. S.

The faithful few at Paris, Tenn., are making a great effort to build a house of worship, and they certainly need help. I held the first meeting for them some eight years ago in the courthouse, and I know something of their struggles and trials. They have secured a nice lot in a good place, near the center of the town. While the lot cost them more than it would farther out, it is well that they have selected a good place. So often efforts of this kind prove a failure because the proper lot is not selected. They have agreed to pay fifteen hundred dollars for the lot, much of which has been paid, and they can and will take care of the balance. The restrictive clause is in the deed and the property will therefore be safe. They are not asking that the brethren shall help them build an expensive house, but a plain, sensible building in which they can worship and have the gospel preached to their neighbors. All these years they have met in the courthouse, but the room is too small and they need a better building. This congregation, with only the courthouse in which to meet, has grown steadily all these years, and they have helped in many good works by sending their contributions, but this is more than they can do alone. They are willing to do all they can themselves, but a lift now would be of great benefit in establishing the cause permanently in the town of Paris. Send these good people a contribution as early as possible and let us put them on their feet so they can do more good. Send contributions to Mrs. James A. Patterson, Paris, Tenn., Box 476.

When courage fails and faith burns low and men are timid grown,

Hold fast thy loyalty and know that Truth still moveth on.

Who follow her, though men deride, in her strength shall be strong;

Shall see their shame become their pride, and share her triumph song.

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY FOR OUR READERS

The greatest preachers of the past two centuries attribute much of their inspiration and usefulness to Matthew Henry's Commentary on the whole Bible. Born in the seventeenth century, his name and his work still live and are household words. Thousands of homes treasure this commentary second only to the Bible, and many a man traces his right start to the loving advice of Matthew Henry.

Charles H. Spurgeon said: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering sparrows around an old gable toward the close of autumn." Dr. Philip Schaff, compiler of Schaff's Bible Dictionary, pronounces it "the best practical and devotional commentary for English readers."

The management of the Gospel Advocate is fortunate in securing twenty-five sets of this unrivaled commentary, which will be sent as a premium to every reader who will send twenty-five new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2 per year. This is undoubtedly the most attractive commentary offer ever made. You will receive six portable volumes of twelve hundred pages each, large, clear, unbroken type, with substantial Roxborough binding. If you wish to pay cash, the price for the six volumes is $17.50, not prepaid. When sent as a premium, we pay all charges.

The Waxahachie (Texas) Union Meeting.

Last week there appeared in the Gospel Advocate, in this department, a report of this meeting from Brother John E. Dunn, the minister of the church of Christ in Waxahachie. With the report which was published Brother Dunn sent me the following letter which he received from Brother Cuthbertson, and his reply, stating that I could publish them if I thought wise. I immediately wrote Brother Cuthbertson, asking his permission to publish his letter to Brother Dunn. Having his permission, I give the two letters below. I wish that you carefully read the letter of Brother Cuthbertson and the partial reply made by Brother Dunn.

Denison, Texas, March 28, 1922.—Mr. John E. Dunn, Waxahachie, Texas.—Dear Brother Dunn: I have heard several things about the union meetings you have in your town, and would like to have some information firsthand. Please pardon me if this letter seems to be nothing but questions.

Is the church of Christ and the First Christian Church holding a joint meeting? Is it the understanding that you are to go to their house for the last part of the meeting? If so, do you propose to let them have charge of the song service while there? If there should be some converts in the meeting, is it the understanding that they are to be permitted to enter into either of the two churches when the meeting is over as per their wish? Does Brother Sewell preach on the differences between us and the First Christian Church during this meeting?

Now, please do not think that I am trying to meddle, for I am not, but we have been asked about a meeting on the same plan as yours. Please give me this information. Best wishes for the cause of Christ there. In the Christ,

M. C. CUTHBERTSON.

Waxahachie, Texas, 305 Ferris Avenue, April 1, 1922.—Mr. M. C. Cuthbertson, Denison, Texas.—Dear Brother: Yours of March 28 asking for information about our meetings came in due time. I shall endeavor to give you full information covering all the facts of this meeting.

This meeting was not planned. Nobody thought of holding a union meeting. It seems to us that it came about through the force of circumstances and, we believe, through the providence of God.

To begin with, there existed a good spirit and a social relationship between the two congregations. One of these congregations is known as the "Main Street Christian Church" and the other as the "College Street church of Christ." We consider that we all are brethren in Christ, but that the family is divided. We are a house divided against itself. There are a number of members on both sides who deplore the division. There have been quite a number of little conversations looking toward bringing about a better state of feeling and removing the things that divide us. Quite a number on both sides would be rejoiced to see the two congregations become one in Christ.

Now to the facts which brought about this meeting. A year ago the "church of Christ" decided to have a meeting at this time, and in the summer of 1921 we engaged Brother Jesse P. Sewell to do the preaching. It so happened as a coincidence that a simultaneous campaign of revival meetings at every church in our city—Catholic and Protestant—was scheduled to begin on the very day we had set to begin our meeting. I had heard that Brother J. W. Stephens, who is the preacher for the "Main Street Christian Church," said he did not want to do the preaching in their meeting and they had not been able to engage a preacher for their meeting. I said to Brother Verne Roberts, who is an active member of the "church of Christ" and who is on good social terms with Brother Stephens: "Suppose you ask Brother Stephens to bring his congregation over and attend our meeting." Brother Stephens took kindly to it and laid the invitation before the "Main Street Church" on the coming Lord's day. It was unanimously accepted. Committees were selected by both churches to meet and talk over a plan to conduct the meeting. When these committees met, it was decided that the meeting should be conducted just as we are accustomed to conduct our meetings and as we should have done had this not come up, but with these added features. Main Street Church has one song leader and College Street Church has two. These three men were to lead the singing, taking it turn about. They were to handle the song service. We should all partake of the Lord's Supper together. One elder from each of the churches and the ushers of both churches acting together should wait on the people. Collections should be taken on each Sunday morning, Sunday, Tuesday, and Friday nights, and go to the support of the meeting. Public announcement of this arrangement was to be made. Brother Sewell was to do the preaching and be absolutely free to preach as he believed God wanted him to do.

The two congregations would come together in a co-operative meeting trusting God to overrule it all for our good and his glory. When Brother Sewell came, he suggested that Brother Stephens and Brother Dunn open and close the meetings, making the announcements, and leave it to him to do the preaching only.

Should you step into our meetings, it should appear that there is one congregation with all mingling together as one people. You should observe no difference in this meeting from other meetings held here and all over the country. This is absolutely all there is to it.

Nothing has ever been said about where persons go who obey the gospel during this meeting. They are free under God to go where they please.

All is going harmoniously, a fine spirit prevails. We all talk freely and mingle together. The leading topic of conversation is, uniting the two congregations into one. Brethren Stephens, Sewell, and Dunn are counseling together fully and freely over unity in Christ.

We beseech our brethren away from here to let us alone and only pray for us, "that we all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among us; but that we be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment; that we all be one, as God and Christ are one; that the world may believe that God sent Christ into the world."

So far all is moving harmoniously and hopefully. God grant that there may be a better day just ahead for us.

Sincerely yours for Christ, JOHN E. DUNN.

Later.—The meeting closed on April 2 very encouragingly. We want to act wisely, faithfully, and humbly, pray much, and work to the end that unity pleasing to God may be brought about among the disciples in this city. J. E. D.

With the report which was published last week of the "union meeting," Brother Dunn requested that the report be published "as written." It was.

I think the report does Brother Dunn an injustice. He says: "The relationship between the two congregations of disciples is fortunate." By the two congregations he has reference to the church of Christ in Waxahachie and the Main Street Christian Church. From my viewpoint, it is a very unfortunate condition, but possibly not so lamentable as is the relationship between the church of Christ and the Christian Church in some other places, for often enmity and strife prevail. If those of the church of Christ are Christians and those of the Christian Church are Christians, there should be full and free fellowship—not for a period of fifteen days only, but for all time and in all the work to be done in the name of Christ. Such fellowship does not prevail. Surely such relationship is unfortunate. The members of the church of Christ cannot go to the Christian Church in Waxahachie and freely and fully join with them in their work and worship as they usually carry it on in their house.

Are we to conclude from the report of the meeting and the foregoing letter that the church of Christ in Waxahachie recognized those of the Christian Church as approved of the Lord—at least, that the things they believe and practice which makes them a separate congregation from the church of Christ in Waxahachie is not a bar to fellowship? Was not fellowship freely accorded them in this union meeting? Among those in the Christian Church are some who separated themselves from the church of Christ; and I presume that in Waxahachie, as in other places where such is done, the church of Christ withdrew fellowship from them. Are we to understand that in this meeting the church of Christ accorded them full fellowship in the meeting? If no, were they led to believe you did? If yes, is it the practice of the church in Waxahachie to fellowship those withdrawn from without any acknowledgment being made on their part for the division caused by the separation?

Are we to understand that there is nothing fundamental in the faith of the Christian Church in Waxahachie which prevents a union of the two congregations?

Is the Christian Church in Waxahachie a church of Christ out of order? If yes, has the church of Christ gone to record before the people of Waxahachie, and before the Lord, as fellowshiping a disorderly church, and welcoming them in the heartiest fellowship throughout the meeting?

Is all this ado and wrangling for years between the church of Christ and the Christian Church no more than a "make-believe?" Have you not placed your stamp of approval on the Christian Church to the extent that you give them your full fellowship?

We are told that this union meeting "was not planned;" that "nobody thought of holding a union meeting." I guess I do not know what is meant by the word "planned." Brother Dunn says he suggested to Brother Roberts that he "ask Brother Stephens to bring his congregation over and attend our meeting." The invitation was presented to the Christian Church, and they "unanimously accepted." Then "committees were selected by both churches to meet and talk over a plan to conduct the meeting." But the meeting was not planned. More: "When these committees met, it was decided that the meeting should be conducted just as we are accustomed to conduct our meetings and as we should have done had this not come up, but with these added features." Then follows the agreement for the details of the meeting as recited in the letter of Brother Dunn—viz.: "Main Street Church has one song leader and College Street Church has two. These three men were to lead the singing, taking it turn about. They were to handle the song service. We should all partake of the Lord's Supper together. One elder from each of the churches and the ushers of both churches acting together should wait on the people." Again: "The two congregations would come together in a coöperative meeting trusting God to overrule it all for our good and his glory." "Overrule" what?

Personally, I have conducted a number of meetings and attended some others, but I have my first meeting to attend, conducted by the church of Christ and the Christian Church, and the minister of the Christian Church and the minister of the church of Christ open and close the services. Be it remembered, though, I have never conducted such a meeting, nor have I attended one.

To me it seems that among the pertinent questions Brother Cuthbertson submitted in his letter, and which was not answered, is whether the evangelist would "preach on the differences between us and the First Christian Church during the meeting?"

Just what is meant by, "We beseech our brethren away from here to let us alone and only pray for us," I do not know. I think, though, since the report was sent me for publication in the Gospel Advocate, I am not "out of order" in the foregoing. I feel that I need, badly, information; for should there come a time when I am to have part in a union meeting between the Christian Church and the church of Christ, I wish to know just how to do my part, and, too, just what relationship they sustain to the church of Christ. Others are calling for information along these lines.

In this union meeting the Christian Church has surrendered not one thing. That the church of Christ and the Christian Church in Waxahachie are nearer together, we are assured by the report of the meeting; but who has moved? If the church of Christ has been holding a false position, she has acted wisely in making the meeting through which she has just passed possible by according full and free fellowship to the Christian Church, without the Christian Church surrendering one thing or changing their faith on any point.

All prayers should be offered in faith.

I think there is more to follow.

Personal Notes.

W. T. Hines is in an interesting meeting in Lamont, Okla.

J. D. Harvey closed a meeting in Stamford, Texas, with fifteen additions to the congregation.

John M. Rice has assisted in meetings recently in Clinton, Okla.; Slaton, Texas; and Oakland, Okla. Five additions reported.

C. R. Nichol closed a short meeting with the church in Cordova, Ala., with six additions. He is now in a meeting in Nashville, Ark.

T. M. Carney recently visited the church in Denton, Texas. He reports a most enjoyable time with the church assembled, as well as in the homes where he was entertained. To him it appears that there is a wonderful work open for the church in Denton.

From T. H. Etheridge, Gunter, Texas, April 24: "I preached for eight nights here and baptized nine, and one was restored. I shall leave here at the end of the school year, and shall give my full time to preaching hereafter, the Lord willing. I will go wherever I am needed, if I can get there."

G. M. Pullas, who labors with the Oak Cliff congregation, Dallas, Texas, reports additions at nearly every service. The continued growth of the congregation has made necessary the enlarging of the building, and the sixteen-thousand-dollar addition will be completed by June 1.

Thomas E. Milholland writes from Vernon, Texas: "I hear quite a lot said of Charles R. Nichol. It seems from what I hear that he has 'took his mouth and used it and said things' here that the folks cannot forget. Brother Nichol did a fine work here. Foy E. Wallace, Jr., will hold our meeting here the last of August. Foy is dearly beloved here."

From Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, April 24: "We are still getting along nicely. On the second Lord's day the house was full at both services. Last Lord's day we had a good crowd and one addition by restoration. I will begin a meeting with home forces on the first Lord's day in May, and hope to do good. I will begin a fifth Lord's-day meeting with the church at Carey next Wednesday night."

From Frank L. Cox: "The church at Norman, Okla., is in a healthy condition. S. E. Templeton's stay with us stimulated the work a great deal. Brother and Sister Ira Y. Rice moved into our midst recently. The church at Norman rejoices to have these additions to the working force. Seven have been baptized during the last two weeks. I have been familiar with the church here for over four years, but never have prospects been brighter."

From S. E. Templeton, Altus, Okla., April 24: "On yesterday morning I was in Duke, Okla., and spoke at ten o'clock to a fine audience at the place of worship of the church there. Following the regular worship we assembled in the High School auditorium, where I preached the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class. The auditorium was crowded. Last evening one precious soul was baptized into Christ after the service here in Altus."

At Home and Abroad

W. E. Morgan preached twice on Sunday at Trinity Lane, this city. He had two good services there.

Joe L. Netherland will be engaged in meetings for the summer in Texas and Tennessee. In the fall he will be in Florida.

From A. J. Veteto: "Inasmuch as my summer's work does not begin until the third Lord's day in June, I could accept some song work between May 18 and that time."

Claud Mason preached at Twelfth Avenue, North, last Sunday. Two large audiences. There were three hundred and fifty-four in the Sunday-morning Bible study.

There were two splendid audiences at Russell and Ninth Streets, this city, last Lord's day, with one confession, one from Vine Street Christian Church, and three by statement.

F. B. Srygley preached at Belmont Avenue, this city, last Sunday, morning and night. Six were added to the congregation—one restored to the fellowship and five by statement.

From J. Leonard Jackson: "There have been twenty-six added to the congregation at Second and Lindsley Avenues, in Nashville, the last three Sundays—two baptisms, one restoration, and the others by statement."

From Charley Taylor: "In announcing the results of the meeting at Tennessee City, Tenn., I failed to say that the meeting was supported in a financial way by the congregation at Twelfth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn."

From W. F. Lemmons, Cleveland, Miss., April 22: "On account of a meeting in Kansas which has fallen down on account of the main supporters selling out to leave, I have some choice time I can give to some place this summer."

Don't turn a deaf ear on the second Lord's day in May to the appeal of the Tennessee Orphans' Home. A liberal contribution on that day will be very helpful. Mail your contribution to the Tennessee Orphans' Home, Columbia, Tenn.

From John T. Underwood, Spruce Pine, Ala., April 26: "I preached at Florence, Ala., twice on the second Lord's day in this month, and twice at Beech Grove, below Ripley, Miss., on the third Lord's day. I will be at Born Creek, Ala., on the fifth Lord's day."

The meeting at Charlotte Avenue, West Nashville, conducted by C. M. Pullias, began last Sunday. While they have good audiences there, let the brethren from other parts of the city remember that they now have a large house and can accommodate all who attend, especially during the week.

F. C. Sowell, Columbia, Tenn.: "I would be glad to locate some mission point in Middle Tennessee, to hold a meeting, where they are not able to support a preacher. I will preach at South Harpeth on the second Lord's day in May, which will be our thirty-eighth annual meeting at that place."

H. H. Adamson writes from Lewisburg, Tenn., April 24: "I closed a good meeting last night with the Fairfax Street Church, Winchester, Ky. The meeting continued over three Lord's days and resulted in seven additions to the congregation. This was our fourth meeting there. M. D. Baumer is the faithful minister and is held in high esteem."

From J. H. Murrell, Hazel, Ky., April 26: "I have not done much writing lately. On account of sickness in my family, I have not done much preaching for the past seven months. Mrs. Murrell's condition is some better now, and I am at work, trying to make some money to pay bills and take care of my family. My home address now is Route 2, McEwen, Tenn."

From J. G. Malphurs, Clarksville, Tenn., April 24: "There were two baptisms following regular preaching last Lord's day night at Legate, the new congregation. I am now at Big Rock helping another new congregation to build their house. I preach to them at night. Work on the new house in Clarksville is going on, and the contractor agrees to have it ready for us by August 1."

Miss Bessie Page and Mr. Emmet Travis were quietly married on Sunday morning, April 23, at nine o'clock, at the Page home, on White's Creek. W. N. Ferguson said the simple but impressive ring ceremony in the presence of only the immediate families. Miss Mary Leiper, of Bohenwald, Tenn., rendered the wedding music. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Page and was formerly a student at David Lipscomb College. Both are earnest Christians.

In San Antonio, Texas, I recently met the following preachers: Foy E. Wallace, Sr., preacher for the Denver Heights Church, of San Antonio; J. E. Mullins, preacher for the South Flores Street Church, of San Antonio; Early Arcenaux, who was holding a meeting at South Flores Church; and Leroy Elkins, who preaches at Del Rio, Texas. I had a talk over the telephone with W. D. Bills, who reports the church on Grove Avenue, San Antonio, for which he preaches, as doing well.

From John Wolfe, Dayton, Ohio: "The small but faithful congregation here will be obliged to vacate the Y. M. C. A. classroom in which it has been meeting for over a year on June 1. Having no other adequate place to go, we are getting ready to build a modest house of worship. Twenty-five hundred dollars is needed for this work. Small gifts as well as large ones from any of the brethren will be appreciated and gratefully acknowledged. May God bless you in giving. Send to John Wolfe, 402 Edgewood Avenue, Dayton, Ohio."

From A. B. Lipscomb, Valdosta, Ga., April 29: "The meeting began here with fine interest on Monday afternoon. Two services daily, and am greeted with a large audience at every service. Five baptisms to date. The church is praying and working in dead earnest. G. E. Claus, the faithful evangelist, knows how to get ready for a meeting and to help you from the moment of arrival. Willis H. Allen, an old Valdosta boy, leads the songs, and does it wonderfully well. Flavil Hall is in a good meeting at Remerton, three miles away. F. L. Rowe, of Cincinnati, Ohio, will visit our meeting on Monday next. The Valdosta Times prints the sermons in its daily issues."

From Frank Baker, Berry, Ala., April 26: "I am just home from Old Bethel, in Marion County, Ala., where I preached on Saturday night and twice on Lord's day. It was a treat indeed to meet with these old-time friends and worship with them. I have been preaching for them as occasion would allow for about eleven years. Their song service is second to none. Much has been said in the past year about the dearth of preachers. My observation of the cause is to-day very much as it was in the days of old. 'And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one to his field.' (Neh. 13: 10.) I know of at least four gospel preachers of no mean ability, all within a short distance of Berry, who have had to pattern after the Levites, some to work on the railroad as section hands and other like public work. If we are the church of the New Testament, this is not as it should be."

In the cases given Brother Baker is no doubt correct, but there are two sides to this question. There are many men capable of doing good preaching the gospel, but are unwilling to deny themselves and their families and live in the bounds of Christian economy in order to do it. They lust for the "fleshpots" of Egypt.

In renewing his subscription to the Gospel Advocate, J. O. Blaine, Portland, Tenn., writes under date of April 24: "Here is my two dollars for the Gospel Advocate for another year. I have been a constant reader of the dear old paper ever since the publication of the first number by T. Fanning and W. Lipscomb in 1855. I am glad to see its pages still filled with articles from strong brethren who love the truth and who have the courage to maintain it. I read each number 'from end to end,' like old man Harper ran his horses on the track, and I always feel amply paid for my trouble before I get in sight of the last page. We had a full house at church yesterday, and everybody was rejoicing over the success of the Nashville meeting. Too much cannot be said in praise of those who so successfully managed it. Especially am I pleased to note that out of scores of preachers of the gospel present during the meeting, not one of them manifested the least desire to make himself conspicuous. How different from the Gipsy Smith meeting, when the 'Rev.'s, the 'D.D.'s, and the W. X. Y. Z.'s all seemed anxious to be seen of men! If they could only see themselves as others see them, and act accordingly, I am sure a lot of charity could be saved for use on other mistakes not altogether so reprehensible."

It was worth the expense of the meeting to see "Uncle Jim" drink it in. Few men enjoy hearing the word preached as does J. O. Blaine. He will be at the meeting "over there."

A. D. Dies began a protracted meeting at Eighth Avenue, North, this city, last Sunday. The meeting started off well, with two large audiences on Sunday.

We save ourselves in trying to save others. We condemn ourselves in trying to condemn others. "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

From Andrew Perry, Belmont, Ohio, May 1: "I have been preaching here since last Wednesday night. We have had attentive and growing audiences. I find some excellent members here. We closed last night with a fine audience and the assurance of much good done. I go on to West Virginia for the last of this week."

T. S. Bain writes from Muskogee, Okla., April 29: "I have just returned from a few days' vacation in Madison County, Ark. I preached several times for the church at Wesley, Ark. We were hindered some by the extremely rainy weather, but the good people there were attentive while I endeavored to 'speak the truth in love.'"

The best way to keep boys satisfied and out of trouble is to keep them at work. The best way to keep Christians satisfied is to keep them busy. When all the members of the church are busy with the Lord's work, they have no time to find fault with the preacher or criticize the elders. Faithful work alone will save us. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling."

From Porter Hogan, Route 2, Hornbeak, Tenn., April 27: "Harry Hayes just recently closed a meeting at Bethel, a few miles from Hornbeak. One made the good confession, four were restored, and the church was benefited much in general. Brother Hayes was a schoolboy here in his boyhood days, but his work has in recent years taken him to other places; so it was a great pleasure to have him with us again. His preaching is wonderful. The learned and unlearned delight in the message he brings—so simple and plain and delivered in humility, yet powerful and convincing."

Will J. Cullum writes from Rockwood, Tenn., April 27: "This has been a busy week at Rockwood and Dayton. Last Lord's day there was one service at Graysville and two at Dayton; ladies' Bible class Tuesday and Bible drill Wednesday night; another class in Bible at Rockwood on Thursday night. I will preach here on Sunday, morning and night, and will leave for Cleveland, Tenn., on Monday to continue a meeting which will begin there on Sunday morning. This is with the home congregation of George W. Farmer, who will come to be with us in a meeting at Rockwood, beginning on the third Lord's day in May. We hope for good results from the work of Brother Farmer."

W. S. Long, Washington, D. C., makes the following correction: "In giving the photo of the church building in Washington, D. C., on page 365 of the Gospel Advocate of April 20, the list of elders should have read as follows: A. B. Comer, Tennessee; William M. Locke, Tennessee; Clyde Shacklett, Tennessee; and Charles G. Truax, Ohio. By mistake Brother Shacklett's name was omitted. Brother Graham Egerton, who was one of our elders, departed this life on April 3. One reason I gave the readers of the Advocate this likeness of the building was that brethren in many parts of the country have assisted in the purchase of the property, and some of them may visit here in the future, and they desired to have some idea of the place and the location, which would help them to find us when they come. I am pleased with the splendid work the Advocate gave."

From C. H. Smithson, Hatfield, Ark., April 29: "I have been asked to come to Pittsburg, Kan., and call the few saints together, as we have no congregation there and only a very few members that we know of. The meeting will begin on May 25 and run for fifteen days. Pittsburg is a city of several thousand, and it needs the gospel of Christ in its purity. They need help in several ways. First, let every one who reads this send me the names of the members you know and friends you are interested in, with their street number, so I can find them; second, pray for us, that the meeting may be a success; and, third, send a small donation to J. H. Ping, 1021 East Fifteenth Street, Pittsburg, Kan., or to me, at Hatfield, Ark. Any advice and assistance will be appreciated and will show your faith in the work for which Christ died. So please respond at once with your advice and assistance to help save that wicked city."

A sister writes: "There are some in our congregation who are trying to cause trouble because in our Sunday-school literature the text is given in the American Revised Version instead of the Authorized or King James Version." These brethren should know there is just as much authority for the Revised Version as there is for the King James Version. They are both but translations of the Bible. While I use the Authorized or King James Version in my preaching, I do it, not because I think it better, but because I memorized some of it before the Revised Version was made. If the King James Version was correct when it was made, it would not be correct now, because our language has changed since it was made. All living languages change. This shows the wisdom of God in giving the world his will in the Hebrew and Greek languages, both of which soon after became dead languages. Now any competent scholar can translate the Old Testament from the Hebrew and the New Testament from the Greek.

E. E. Joynes, 730 North Forty-first Street, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "The brethren in New York City kindly allowed E. E. Shoulders to go to the help of the church of Christ at Tabernacle, N. J., for a protracted meeting, April 3-16, in which the writer assisted part of the time. Although both preachers and the members worked hard, yet there was only one confession and baptism, showing how difficult the work is in the East. There was, of course, much good accomplished in other ways, and the church was helped considerably. On Lord's day, April 9, I exchanged with Brother Shoulders and visited the church in New York City and spoke words of encouragement to these faithful brethren who have an almost superhuman task before them in the noble effort to establish primitive Christianity in that great city. George M. McKee and William Johnson are the leaders in the church. Brother Shoulders is worthy of the support of the brotherhood in taking up the work in such a hard field. Brethren having copies of 'Seventy-seven Sweet Songs' not being used will confer a favor by sending them to me to be used in mission work."

H. R. Daniel writes from Elkton, Ky., April 28: "I am here in Elkton among sectarians and 'digressives.' They are good, honest people and good friends of mine. I sympathize with them because they cannot see the word of God in its true light. There are five churches of Christ in Todd County. Three are self-sustaining. The other two, Sharon Grove and Philippi, are very weak, but they are loyal and zealous. They meet every Lord's day to break bread. I preached at Sharon Grove last Saturday night and on Sunday and Sunday night, with good audiences. I promised to go back on the fourth Lord's day in May. I go to Philippi to-morrow to preach a few nights for them. With a little work, these congregations could be built up. There are only two preachers located in the county—C. H. Baker and myself. We are willing to do all we can to build them up. I hope I can get to do some protracted-meeting work this summer and fall. The harvest in Todd County is great, but the laborers are few. I pray that the Lord will send more laborers into this field. I have done a great deal of preaching in different parts of the country, but this is my first year in the field as a regular worker. I hope to be given plenty of work to do for the salvation of souls and the cause of Christ."

From S. W. Colson, Ocala, Fla., April 20: "On the first Sunday in July, 1921, nine members of the body of Christ at Ocala met and agreed to meet regularly upon the first day of the week for work and worship, and to be governed in all things by the word of God. There were about twenty persons in regular attendance. Last fall two other women identified themselves with the congregation. On the first Lord's day in April we began a series of meetings in a tent, with A. B. Lipscomb doing the preaching. At the beginning sectarian opposition was very strong; but that was greatly overcome by Brother Lipscomb's affability and the kind, humble way in which he presented the truth. The interest and attention were all that could be desired. If any one was offended, we feel sure that it was the truth that did it, and not the manner in which it was presented; for the truth was preached in its purity and simplicity, and in a strong, clear, and convincing way. At times the speaker expressed himself with considerable pathos. To date there have been eight baptisms and several added by relation. The little congregation is greatly encouraged to press on in its work and hope for greater things in the future. A number of Florida congregations have sent contributions to help us finance the meeting. Several brethren and sisters from a distance attended and helped in the services. Among the preachers attending were J. O. Barnes, Lake City; David Martin, Oxford; J. P. Prevatt, Gainesville. Brother Prevatt helped us much in the song service. The tent was furnished by brethren of Nashville, Tenn., even paying all freight charges. We thank all for their fellowship."

Church at Ocala, Fla., Gains Ground.

A very happy culmination of our three-weeks' meeting at Ocala, Fla., was witnessed when on the last day about twenty-five enthused brethren got together in a business meeting and completed arrangements for the purchase of the house and lot formerly occupied by the Catholics. The latter have just moved into a very costly edifice, but the building they left, with some changes, will be admirably adapted to the needs of the Ocala Christians. It is centrally located in the business district, and, in my judgment, was secured at a bargain price. It is fair to state that the gentlemen from the Catholic Church were both friendly and just in making the trade. They seemed very glad to let the brethren have the house, with pews included, at an exceedingly low figure. Heretofore the brethren have been meeting in the courthouse. Now that they are in their own house with better facilities for worship, and especially for teaching the Bible in classes, I shall not be surprised to hear of an appreciable growth and increase. In addition to those who were baptized during the meeting, the congregation will be strengthened by scattered disciples who will come in from the country districts.

I shall never forget the experiences of this Ocala meeting and shall always retain a precious memory of those who worked with me to make it a success. There were many obstacles to contend with at the start, the greatest being sectarian prejudice. But this we tried to overcome by "speaking the truth in love," and God blessed the effort. Among those who obeyed the gospel were some from the Methodists and the Baptists. In order to attend to the baptisms during the meeting, it was necessary to make trips to a lake fifteen miles distant. But this only added zest to the work and afforded a splendid opportunity to see the country.

When I began the meeting, many of the townspeople, seeing the tent pitched near the Public Square, jumped at the conclusion that the meeting was to be conducted by a crowd of people "something like the Holy Rollers and the Mormons," with which Florida is infested. Out of curiosity they came to see for themselves, rather expecting to be amused, if not disgusted. But now, God be praised, they have a different conception. Brethren M. L. Humphries, S. W. Colson, and David Martin have arranged to give one Sunday a month in preaching and teaching for the newly established congregation, which makes the prospects brighter still.

The "Movie" and the Saloon.

Brother J. O. Barnes, of Lake City, Fla., has lifted his lance against the widespread and ever-increasing evil that results from indecent moving-picture shows. It is an uphill fight anyway you take it, and is calculated to make our brother exceedingly unpopular with worldly-minded people both in and out of the church. Because our brother has counted the cost and has bravely taken up the fight with the human odds against him, he deserves both encouragement and assistance. Some great man was once asked the secret of success. He said: "To be successful in the truest sense, a man must join himself to some good but unpopular cause." It seems to me that Brother Barnes has done that very thing. But why should he wage this fight alone? Is it not every Christian's duty to stand out against every corrupting influence that threatens the life and usefulness of God's people? Each one is exhorted to "abhor that which is evil" and to "cleave to that which is good." Are the "movies" exerting a good influence, and would Christ approve them? If so, then Christians should encourage and support them? If not, Christians should not only stay away from them, but should point out the evil and degrading influence to others. In the minds of thoughtful and observant people, the evil influence of the moving-picture show, as the term is generally understood and advertised, is no longer a debatable question. Those who arrange the reels usually manage to sandwich some travel pictures or current events in between the highly suggestive or indecent plots in order to give the program some educational flavor. But this is only part of the devil's ruse. No one ever gets up and leaves the theater just before the vulgar reel is shown. They sit through the whole show, and in that show the evil usually far outbalances the good. Brother Barnes thinks they are doing more harm to public morals than the saloons were ever capable of doing. He says:

National prohibition will soon rid the land of the saloon, and thereby remove from the path of our sons a cesspool of crime and iniquity; but the devil has built up in its stead a far more dangerous trap than the saloon.

Mothers and fathers could watch over and protect their little darlings from the saloon until they were at least old enough to see and understand the danger, and by wise and prayerful training make them strong enough to resist the great temptation that the bright lights of the saloon held before their eyes.

But not so with the moving-picture show; it goes into the cradle, and sometimes even further than that, and like a leech fastens its baneful influence on the mind of the babe after it has charmed the mother, father, older brothers and sisters; and when it once gets a grip on the mind, it seems to rob the man, woman, or child of sense of right and wrong. They seem to lose sight of every other thing but the fact that they want to see the end of a certain feature.

In the girls it breeds immodesty. They become familiar with the sight of things that can only lower the standard of thought and self-respect. Girls get interested in a certain play, and on the night or day that set of reels is to be put on they are ready to sell their future happiness rather than miss that part of the play. Even old women are tarred with the same stick.

The moving-picture show is not content with corrupting the morals of the girls; it is dragging our boys to hell along another line. All kinds of impossible Wild-West scenes are put on, and all manner of robbery and murder scenes are thrown on the screen, until the young mind is fired with a desire to become great along the same lines, and the reform schools, jails, and other places of detention are being filled with the fathers of the next generation. At this rate, can you guess what the harvest will be?

The churches, too, are reaping what they have sown. Not many years ago ministers who were "good mixers" had picture shows in their churches so as to draw the young people. It is true, most of the pictures were religious; but there would be just enough funny pictures to tickle the young, and old, too. What has been the result? The devil has set up a larger and better picture show, and the church of the living God is almost deserted. And now that preacher who was a "good mixer" doesn't know what to do to get things unmixed.

One thing is sure, the moving-picture shows must not be allowed to keep open on the Lord's day, or the church will have to close its doors. The disease has gone so far that nothing but the law can control it.

In my judgment, the saloon did less harm to the morals of the nation than the moving-picture shows are doing to the religion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Brother Barnes' observations are worthy of careful consideration. Until a better and more conscientious censorship is exercised over the moving pictures, they are nothing short of a menace to public morals. And that censorship will never come so long as professed Christians wink at and support them.

Here, too, as in regard to our recognition of all questionable things, comes in Paul's principle of having respect for the conscience of a weaker brother whether we see the harm in it for ourselves or not. Destroy not with thy love for the moving pictures the brother for whom Christ died.

"If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer Thee."

Gammill.

It is with a sad heart that I write of the death of little James Weldon Gammill, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Gammill. He was born on March 28, 1921, and died on April 6, 1922. He was a sweet little baby and was loved by all who knew him. After the discovery that little Weldon had drowned, all was done that loving hands could do. We can brush back the tears and look by faith to the glory portals and see little Weldon at rest, where there is no pain, no heartaches, no tear-dimmed eyes, no sad partings from those we love. Funeral services were conducted by little Weldon's grandfather. I would say to the bereaved ones that they can comfort their hearts with the consolation that little Weldon is waiting for the rest of the family to come. The remains were laid to rest in the Union Cemetery.

A FRIEND.

Jones.

Mrs. Irene Viola Jones, daughter of O. A. Jones and wife of S. M. Jones, of Little Lot, Hickman County, Tenn., was born on July 23, 1872, and died on March 11, 1922. She obeyed the gospel when about thirteen years old and was faithful to the end. In her home life as wife and mother she illustrated to a high degree her devotion to the welfare and happiness of those nearest and dearest to her. She was generous and kind to all with whom she came in contact and was peculiarly devoted to her husband and children. She personified in a marked degree the Christian graces in her frank and unaffected friendship for people of all classes and conditions, and had a ready sympathy for the needy and suffering. She leaves a devoted husband and two sons, James Austin and Paul Madison, as well as a host of relatives and friends, to mourn their loss. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, and her body was laid to rest in the little cemetery near the home she loved so well.

W. S. MORTON.

Wallace.

On January 5, 1900, Clarence Wallace was born, and was called to rest on March 11, 1922. He was born in Tennessee, where he lived until a few years before his death. His parents then moved to Wardell, Mo. From infancy he was afflicted, not enjoying all the pleasures of this life as those who are not. Yet he bore his cross patiently. Owing to his afflictions he was taken from school at an early age. He was very quick to learn and possessed a fine memory. He possessed many good traits of character that few boys have. He was tender-hearted and kind and always had pleasant words for all. At the age of thirteen he obeyed the gospel. Brother John R. Williams buried him with our Lord in baptism. In the new life he lived faithful. He seemed to enjoy the Lord's work, never begged to be excused, as some who profess to follow Christ for years. He has left fa-

MRS. J. R. WELCH.

McMillan.

Mrs. Elizabeth McMillan, wife of E. W. McMillan, Christian minister at Waco, Texas, died in that city on Monday morning, April 3, 1922. Her death resulted from blood poisoning which she first suffered several months ago. Both lower limbs were amputated in an effort to save her life, and for a time the case seemed hopeful; but after weeks of patient suffering the body returns to dust as it was, and the spirit to God who gave it. She was the daughter of W. H. Baxter, and was reared near Howe, in Grayson County, Texas, and was buried near her childhood's home. The funeral sermon was preached by L. S. White, of Sherman, Texas, followed by John R. Freeman, principal of the Gunter Bible College, with a few closing remarks by the writer. She was chiefly educated at the Gunter Bible College under the tutelage of N. L. Clark, later spending a year or two in the Nashville Bible School. It was at the Gunter school that she met E. W. McMillan, whom she married. This writer knew Elizabeth Baxter as a prattling infant, a romping schoolgirl, a blushing bride, a weeping daughter at the grave of her sainted father, and saw her as with swimming eyes she stood at the open grave of her firstborn son. Calm and patient alike in every ordeal, she was a living example of Christian faith and fortitude. Being a classmate, roommate, and boon companion of our own daughter, and thus being often in our home, we had a chance to know of the purity and sweetness of her life as few could know, except her own immediate family. She leaves a little girl three years of age, too young to realize the great loss she has sustained. Concerning her, we can breathe no more fitting prayer than that she grow up to be a counterpart of the mother who loved her so much. Among those who survive, besides her husband, perhaps there are none who feel her loss more keenly than her aged mother and her devoted brothers and sisters, whose devotion to the end was beautiful.

C. J. HOWARD.

M. C. Cayce's Work in Mississippi.

BY H. D. JEFFCOAT.

Words fail me when I so much want to express my appreciation of the noble work of our departed brother, M. C. Cayce. He has done more good for the cause of Christ here in Mississippi for the short time he was here than any man I know. To me he was an inspiration. I always felt like doing more for the Lord's cause after being with him. Many souls were saved by his coming to Mississippi; and many that were just struggling along, almost discouraged, were made to take on new life, and became active, loyal laborers in the Lord's vineyard. But Brother Cayce wanted the Lord Jesus Christ to have the honor. To us he appeared to be a very modest, humble, and consecrated Christian. We thank our dear Heavenly Father for sending him to this needy field, and also thank the faithful brethren in Nashville, Tenn., for holding up his hands while here. And just a word to those who stood so nobly behind him with their money and their prayers. Please do not neglect the work he loved, but try to find some one to take his place. I think that will be hard to do, but God will provide a man.

Brother Cayce was in our humble home several times and seemed delighted to meet God's children, and always had something good to tell us. He seemed to always be looking for the good points in his friends, and could show a real interest in the weak ones. We loved him for his work's sake.

May his loved ones find consolation in the sweet promises of God, and may they follow in his steps as he followed Christ Jesus our Lord, and may they realize that every step brings them nearer their departed loved one and their sweet, eternal home, which death never enters and where partings never come.

We want to urge the faithful ones here in Mississippi to continue to press onward and upward. We realize that just now the future looks gloomy; but if Brother Cayce could speak to us, he would say: "Do not become discouraged, but fight on, and some sweet day you will be rewarded. 'I tell you, my brethren, it is fine to be a Christian.'"

We should feel that now we have more to do than ever. We must push the work he so nobly began. May God help us all to do our part. The sun shines as bright and the birds sing just as sweetly this morning as yesterday, but we are sad and heavy-hearted; the tears fall thick and fast. Please remember us in your prayers.

Is Instrumental Music Scriptural?

BY A. O. COLLEY.

The following is taken from the Courier, published at Dallas, Texas: "The appearance of 'Instrumental Music is Scriptural,' by O. E. Payne, marks the beginning of a new epoch in a controversy that has levied toll in divided churches for the past half century. If, at the beginning of that period, a tithe of the proof it uncovers had been known to exist, there would have been no controversy, just as the proving by the Campbells a century ago that 'baptizo' meant to immerse prevented a controversy within the ranks over baptism. As Brother Payne's new work makes out a stronger case for music than any author ever did for immersion, dignified controversy must now cease or degenerate into discreditable wrangle."

I love to feel like men who claim to be Christian preachers are honest; but when men like the editor of the Courier give out such statements as the above, it greatly taxes my patience and feeling toward them. I will venture the assertion here that the Courier editor has never carefully read this book through that he is so highly commending. If he is just advertising to sell his goods as he would patent medicine, where a man is not expected to confine himself to the truth, it would not look so bad. The Courier is agent for the book. Mr. Payne wrote me to take the agency, not knowing that I was not one of his kind of preachers, but found his mistake later when I sent him a challenge to defend his book with me in oral debate. He has had the propositions for some weeks, and maybe he will sign and return them; if so, the Courier can bring its great discoverer to Dallas for the defense of the book.

If, at the beginning of that period, a tithe of the proof it uncovers had been known to exist, there would have been no controversy, just as the proving by the Campbells a century ago that 'baptizo' meant to immerse prevented a controversy within the ranks over baptism." To what "ranks" does the Courier refer in this paragraph? If to religious ranks, they still sprinkle and pour as much as they ever did. If he means the New Testament church ranks, they reach this conclusion from the New Testament on how we are baptized—"buried with him by baptism" (Rom. 6: 4; Col. 2: 12); "born of water and the Spirit" (John 3: 5); "went down into the water;" "came up out of the water" (Acts 8: 38, 39)—and not from the Campbells.

As Brother Payne's new work makes out a stronger case for music than any author ever did for immersion, dignified controversy must now cease or degenerate into discreditable wrangle." I am sorry for any man or set of men who found their faith upon "authors" either for baptism or music. I can take the writings of uninspired men and use them as Mr. Payne has in this book, so highly commended by the Courier, and prove that the Lord Jesus was not divinely begotten; that he was a natural child, no more divine than other children; that the Bible is a myth, and that man descended from a monkey. I can then assert that "dignified controversy must now cease or degenerate into discreditable wrangle." If Jesus Christ as the founder of the church, "sang a hymn" in connection with the Lord's Supper (Matt. 26: 30), the apostle Paul and his companion in prison "sang praises to God" (Acts 16: 25), and the apostles under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit commanded singing in numerous places of the New Testament, we are satisfied for him to call it "discreditable wrangle" or anything he finds it in his heart to name it, but we are ready to contend for the New Testament teaching upon this or any other question that the Lord has spoken upon.

To any one who may be interested in an exposé of the sophistry of Mr. Payne's book, write the Gospel Advocate for Brother Kurfees' tract exposing it.

Our Quitman Meeting.

BY J. D. TANT.

On account of bad roads and a failure to get a song leader, we have decided to defer our mission meeting at Quitman, Ark., until the first, second, and third Sundays in July.

Many brethren have written me, asking about this country. I would be glad if they would arrange to come and look at this country during our meeting, as I can be of help to them in finding a home.

In buying my farm here, I had to take one hundred and twenty acres of improved land more than I needed, which cost me six thousand dollars. As I still owe three thousand dollars on my home, I will gladly sell the one hundred and twenty acres for three thousand dollars to any brother who can be of help in building up the church. This will take the mortgage off my home and give me more time to preach the gospel.

It was a very pleasant and a very sad stronger in the faith; sad because of the very tragic passing of our beloved brother and tireless worker, Matthew there is no more substantial way to

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking
Founts Banish Vermin, Make
Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled.

Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of purebred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs or meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to the Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 944, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay the postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your chickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't hesitate to accept this trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

band of disciples in Bay Minette, Ala. The meeting continued nine days, closing on Monday night, April 17. There were six baptisms, and one came from the Baptists who expressed himself as being satisfied with his baptism. All were heads of families, except one. I was suffering with a severe cold practically all the time I was there and had to have the attention of a physician. Brother Sanders came over from Pensacola and preached for me one night. I greatly enjoyed meeting Brother Sanders and hearing his splendid discourse. I made my home with Brother H. R. Kirby and family, who treated me with the utmost kindness. Brother Kirby's daughter, Miss Ferrell, and Miss Camilla Yarbrough, both graduates of David Lipscomb College, are teaching there. Their influence contributed largely toward the success of the meeting. Brother J. Ridley Stroop is expected to take up the work soon with the congregations of Bay Minette and Canoe, Ala.—J. T. Clark.

Etowah, Tenn., April 25.—Brother Charles Holder, of Bridgeport, Ala., has just closed a fifteen-days' meeting for the congregation here. The interest, attendance, and attention were fine. There were six baptized. Our congregation here is in good condition. We are indebted to Brethren Burton, Little, and Farmer, the church at Pikeville, and some others, for help here. Brother Holder should be kept in McMinn County. There is no better field than this. Since he has been preaching in the county he has baptized (in the last year) about fifty. There is no preacher that I know who can do more here than Brother Holder. After staying at Athens five Lord's days, he left, with a lot bought and paid for with the "restrictive clause" in the deed. Athens has a house of worship that is a credit to the county. Brethren Farmer, Rozar, Little, White, and Phillips (W. C.), all have had a part in this work at Athens. We need a man in McMinn County for full time, but we are not financially able to take care of him this year. I feel sure we can after this. We do not want him to minister to any one congregation, but to preach not less than thirty times a month. We have seven places now where we can start a meeting, and a good field, too—members at all of them. Who will be first to manifest an interest in this work here? I am told that there are old and strong congregations that have had a local minister for from fifteen to eighteen years that cannot hold prayer meeting without the minister. This ought not to be. Brother, how is it with you? Why not go to work yourself and send the minister out into the byways and hedges to work? If all did this who have a local preacher, our number would be increased a thousandfold in the next ten years. We have no preacher here, but we have two services on Sunday and two during the week; and we are growing, too. Brethren, help evangelize McMinn County. If you are interested, communicate with Brother Charles Holder, Bridgeport, Ala.—S. S. McMahon.

Hornell, N. Y. — "I was in bad health but there didn't seem to be any one thing the matter with me. I was tired out all over and it was an effort for me to move. I was irritable and could not sleep nights and had trouble with my bowels and at my periods. It seemed that nearly every one around me knew of your medicine and wanted me to try it, so at last I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine and improved every day. I do all my own work now except the washing and do it with ease. I can accomplish as much in a day now as it would have taken me a week to do last winter and I try to get every one I know to take your medicine to build them up. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial if you like."—Mrs. CHAS. BAKER, 21 Spencer Ave., Hornell, N. Y.

"IN REGARD OF HIMSELF ALONE."

BY JAMES E. CRESSOR.

"But let each man prove his own work, and then shall he have his glorying in regard of himself alone, and not of his neighbor. For each man shall bear his own burden." (Gal. 6: 4, 5.)

These verses emphasize individual responsibility. I think this is a most needful lesson for Christians to-day. If each Christian had a proper realization of his individual duty under God, if he appreciated in what particular sense he must "bear his own burden," there would be more workers and fewer drones in the Lord's vineyard. Sinners, too, if it could be brought to bear upon their consciences that they are guilty before God and under sentence of death, would repent and turn to God for mercy, for no sinner deliberately purposes to be lost. It would help us all, saints and sinners alike, to know that subterfuge, artifice, or shirking, can never relieve us of bounden duty. We need to realize this profoundly. We need to tremble at the thought that there are burdens that we, as individuals, must bear alone or be lost. I wish to speak briefly of this duty of individual burden-bearing.

John the Baptist (Matt. 3: 7-10) emphasized personal responsibility when he taught the Pharisees and Sadducees—"offspring of vipers"—to "bring forth fruit worthy of repentance." He warns his hearers on the brink of the Jordan lest they put a false reliance upon their relation to Abraham and their prerogative as God's nation. "Think not," said John, "to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father." He tells them emphatically that their Abrahamic ancestry, their Hebrew blood, their unique position as God's select people among the nations, would avail them nothing if they did not repent and bear fruit worthy of repentance—unless, indeed, their reformation was genuine. The Jews in Christ's day were an arrogant lot, especially those of Jerusalem. Once, when Jesus was teaching that sin enslaves, they boasted: "We are Abraham's seed, and have never yet been in bondage to any man." Whereupon the Savior told them plainly that they were servants of sin and doomed because of their iniquity and hardness of heart. As individuals, they must reform or perish. As for children to perpetuate Abraham's family, John avers that God is "able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." The Jews could not bring themselves to realize that the Hebrew nation as such could so apostatize as to be rejected of God, or that a descendant of "Father Abraham" would be permitted to perish. Pride of race and personal arrogance proved their undoing. John, as well as Jesus, warned against this refuge of sin. Each tree, said John, will be tested by its own fruit. "And even now the ax lieth at the root of the trees: every tree therefore that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire." The ax lies with sharp, glittering blade at the root of the trees ready to cut down the tree that bears evil fruit. The whole question turns upon the kind of fruit, for the fruit is the test of the nature of the tree. The ax still lies at the root of the trees. It seems to me that each person ought to know what sort of tree he is.

This principle enunciated by John in the wilderness of Judea applies, of course, with equal emphasis to church members. Christians, as well as aliens, are to be judged according to their personal attitude and work. But men in the church not infrequently are prone to hide themselves behind an institution, a name, a claim, or a privileged position, or their orthodoxy, or what not. Sometimes they seek to excuse their delinquency in the matter of giving by attributing the obligation to the congregation. The local church should have assumed a certain charity; the church failed here, and the church failed there. You know how they talk. The Widow Walker was allowed to go to the county poorhouse because the church wouldn't assume the charge. Of course a pittance would suffice to support the aged saint—a little quantity of meal now and then, some bacon, and some coffee. But the church had no treasury and would not do anything, and of course one man could not maintain her. The unfortunate old lady went away from her cottage and her church with a broken heart, and it was sad—but the church was to blame. Yes, the church simply fell down on an important duty. There are other Christians who are ever ready to shift their responsibility to some other person or persons—to some leader, teacher, preacher, friend, associate. If they fail or fall short, they blame some one else for it; if they sin by transgression, they attribute it to the influence of others. It is the preacher's business to visit the sick and disressed, to exhort the careless, to rebuke the wayward. "Certain friends and associates dance and play cards and led me into such indiscretions." So we blame our troubles upon perverse circumstances and bad influences. You have heard men say that if they were more favorably circumstanced they would do more for the Lord, when, as a matter of fact, they are making poor effort to serve him with what they have, whether of talent or means. Again, if such and such a condition had not existed, they had not sinned. Brother Unlucky's downfall was brought about by "a perfidy of circumstances." Miss Misfortune was "a victim of bad environment." None of these things will stand before the Lord.

This teaching with reference to personal responsibility appears further in Christ's message to the seven churches in Asia. While speaking of the church, the Lord has the individual in mind throughout. The warning each time is to him that hath an ear to hear; and it is always "he that overcometh" to whom the Lord makes his promise. In the last analysis, the individual must hew out his own destiny—work out his own salvation. Every man shall give account of himself to God. (Rom. 14: 12.) While we all stand in certain relationship to others, there is a sense in which we stand alone before God; and though God deals with men collectively, each man is at last singled out for the part he had in this life. Take the case of the slothful servant who hid the one talent intrusted to him in the earth. He was not permitted to screen his individual unfaithfulness by exhibiting the sum total of all that had been done. He made no attempt, of course, to claim a share of the increase; but if he had done so, he would have acted very much like some folks are accustomed to act to-day. The three servants, taken as a unit, had done well; they had made a net gain of eighty-seven and one-half per cent; but the servant to whom the one talent was given had contributed nothing to this gain. He could not, therefore, claim twenty-nine per cent of this gain, or any part of it, because he had been unfaithful, wicked, slothful. The Lord wanted to know what he had done with his talent. Each of the other two servants had been called upon for a report, and each had rendered it. In the end, then, every servant must report, render an account of his stewardship. To his own Lord, the Judge of all the earth, each man, finally, must stand or fall.

Salvation is an individual matter. It is "he that doeth the will of the Father" that shall be permitted to enter into the kingdom of heaven. Only one's own personal sins can debar him from the paradise of God. "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire." "For we must all be made manifest before the judgment seat of Christ; that each one may receive the things done in the body, according to what he hath done, whether it be good or bad." Congregations may digress, decay, fall away; but if the individual Christian does his duty—his full duty—he shall be saved. The mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

The individual seems insignificant in the swirl of millions, but he looms large in the matter of duty. Here "each man must bear his own burden." Here he "must prove his own work," that he "shall have his glorying in regard of himself alone, and not of his neighbor." Jesus bore the tremendous burden of his ministry and, finally, his own cross. He had his Gethsemane and his Calvary, burdens no mortal could help him bear. Every Christian has his Gethsemane and his cross. There are some things left to the individual and his God. In the judgment of the last day, every man must stand upon his own separate record. Jesus will say to individuals, "Come, ye blessed," or, "Depart from me, ye cursed." "Who shall be able to stand?"

SERMON OUTLINES

A Book of One Hundred and Fifty New Sermon Outlines

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has one hundred and fifty sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

The Christian and His Daily Bread.

BY S. V. McCASLAND.

"And because he was of the same trade, he abode with them, and they wrought; for by their trade they were tent-makers." (Acts 18: 3.)

The question of daily bread is a live issue. It is the question of sustaining life. Wherever man is found it must be faced, and it takes more of his time than any other problem with which he has to deal. All men do not live upon the same diet or have a taste for the same foods, but that does not alter the case. In the savage land, where the uncivilized man eats the products of nature in their original raw state as he finds them, the same need is felt that the man must satisfy who dines in the most sumptuous café of modern luxury. And when a man is regenerated, he finds that still he must have physical bread to sustain the "outward man." The experience has given a decided change to the appetite of his spirit, but still the spirit lives in a body that must be fed. So that consideration brings the Christian face to face with the situation which compels him to enter the struggle for a livelihood. It makes him face a threefold question in concrete economics: How is a livelihood to be earned, is the pursuit lawful and honorable, and are there any restrictions? For an answer to these questions, which, by all means, are legitimate, we turn to the Scriptures; and although the Bible is not primarily a treatise on economics, we find that the question has received adequate treatment at the hands of the inspired writers.

In the first place, we discover that God's law ordains that a man shall earn his means of subsistence. We do not read far in Genesis until we find the subject mentioned in a striking way; for, after the sin in the garden had ruptured the fellowship which existed between God and man, God placed the penalty of toil upon Adam: "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground." (Gen. 3: 17-19.) In this passage we have the plain command and ordination of God that man shall labor for his living. The thistles and thorns were made to grow for the express purpose that the fruits of the earth could not be enjoyed except as the result of toil; and the toil was to be burdensome, for man must eat through briny perspiration. And the experiences of the human race since that time are on record to bear testimony to the truth of the principle which is here for the first time enunciated; to say that all the generations of men have paid the same price for the products of the soil. Again, in the New Testament we have the same law incorporated: "If any will not work, neither let him eat." (2 Thess. 3: 10.) When this was written by Paul, the churches were so liberal in their contributions of money for the propagation of the gospel that their organizations were communistic. The funds were shared in common and no one lacked. This made it possible for the shiftless and idle to be a burden; so the apostle forbids this very thing by his injunction to this church. To be sure, this was equivalent to a positive command to work; for when the dilemma to either work or starve is thus placed before a man, he will most likely go to work. This requirement of Paul extends even to the women, for he instructs Timothy to refuse assistance to a woman unless she be a "widow indeed." So we hesitate not to say that physical labor to supply the necessities of life is not only pleasing to God, but is ordained by him as an everlasting law.

Again, the Scriptures teach that physical labor to supply the necessities of life is noble and honorable. The plainest teaching on this point is by example. The laborer is keeping good company when he goes out to earn his bread, because all of the great men of the Bible have had the same experience. It is hardly necessary to call attention to the records of the Old Testament—of Abraham with his herds and flocks, of Moses in the land of Midian with the flocks of Jethro for forty years, of David before the prophet of God called him to the throne of his beloved nation, and of so many others (too numerous to mention. And in the New Testament the records are more wonderful still, for the child Jesus was reared in the carpenter shop of Joseph, and no doubt he worked at the trade himself, otherwise his neighbors would not have referred to him as "the carpenter." (Mark 6: 3.) No man should ever feel that his work is unhonored, since the Son of man has ennobled physical labor with his own hands. When the Lord chose messengers to carry the gospel to the ends of the earth, he went to the places where men's hands are horny with toil to pick his men. The hands that had mended nets by the seaside and had labored against the raging winds of Galilee were selected to distribute the royal bread of life. But the best illustration of this theme from the disciples of Jesus is the one who considered himself "the chief of sinners," but was appointed by a vision from heaven to bear the name of Christ before the Gentiles and kings. Paul was a giant in intellect, the most finished and profound scholar of his time, and capable of ascending to the supreme heights of the third heaven in the glory of Christian experience and revelation; but, with it all, he labored with his hands both for the support of himself and his helpers. At Corinth, in the face of the most baffling problem of his missionary journey, he abode with Priscilla and Aquila, and they wrought at their trade of making tents, and so industriously that in later years he could write to this church and be proud of the fact that he had not taken what was due him as a preacher of the gospel, but had made the gospel to be without charge to them. (1 Cor. 9: 18.) Likewise we have mention of the same occurrences at Thessalonica and Ephesus; for he had refused assistance while at both places and had worked "night and day" in order to be above the base charge of any that he had desired their gold. (Acts 20: 34; 2 Thess. 3: 8.) In the case of Paul it was not required that he should provide his own living and go at his own charges, but he had accepted this added burden in order that his ministry might be more effective. (1 Cor. 9.) These examples from the lives of the men of God and of Jesus himself should, by all means, take any sense of shame from the hardest toil of life; and the toiler should feel that his is the noblest task that God has committed to the hands of men.

In the third place, many benefits and blessings come as a direct result of the Christian's labor which earns his daily bread. One of the most far-reaching results of each one minding his own business and working with his own hands is the impression made upon those who are not of the household of faith. Paul gave his instruction to the Thessalonians with this point directly in view; for he says, "that ye may walk becomingly toward them that are without." And certainly this is a commendable thing to bear in mind; for practical men of the world often have definite moral convictions as to this matter which causes them to look with scorn on any person who pretends to be religious, but is unwilling to engage in the mental tasks which are the foundation of the basic processes of industrial and business life.

Another desirable end to be achieved by every man earning his own living is the alleviation of suffering and the abolition of poverty. No one who is acquainted with modern life will deny that one of the most ominous problems with which our nation must grapple is the struggle between capital and labor, which is essentially a question of food and raiment. A few individuals and private corporations have amassed vast fortunes and have all of the luxuries that the genius of science has been able to devise, while the great body of those who do the drudgery of the work which makes the rich man rich are living in hovels, and many times without proper medical attention and sufficient wholesome food. More than this, there is an ever-increasing number of people who are partially or wholly dependent on the alms of the nation for the sustenance of life. The solution of this problem would be one of the most noble achievements of this generation or of any other. It would be a wonderful world in which to live if all men had the necessities of life and no man had more than his personal labor entitled him to. However, this question is not new, because when the apostles walked the streets of the cities of Palestine they came upon those begging alms just as one does in any modern city. So it is with this condition in mind that Paul says, "that so laboring ye ought to help the weak" "and may have need of nothing." (Acts 20: 35; 1 Thess. 4: 12.) It must have been a wonderful little community that could say, "For neither was there any among them that lacked" (Acts 4: 34), in view of the fact that the gospel appeal must have drawn many of the poor of Jerusalem to the Lord. This is the ideal solution of the problem of poverty; but, of course, before it can take place in any community, the people must be led to Christ. And the same principle would hold for a nation; so the prerequisites to such a condition is nation-wide evangelization which will produce a nation of regenerate people under the reign of Christ. While such an ideal may not be attained for a whole nation, at least by our generation, it should by all means be the condition in every church of Christ in all the land. When this is the case, and the world can see the religion of Christ in a practical demonstration, doing what we claim it will do, then the question of evangelization will be solved.

The last blessing to be mentioned as a result of each man working with his own hands to earn his daily bread is that which comes to the individual. What blessing is so great as the happiness that comes from the conscience of the man who knows that he is entitled to all that comes to him in the way of food and raiment because his hands have worked for it? The independence of such a man is what the king on the throne is striving for, but what he fails to find. It is the sleep and rest of such a man that the tired millionaire and giant of industry would give all his money for; but—alas!—it cannot be bought. And to have the privilege of feeding hungry bodies and revitalizing pinched, pale faces and clothing shivering forms that are the wasted tabernacles of hopeless spirits is enough to make the man who does it feel that he has not labored in vain.

We come now to the activity in which one may engage to earn a living, and to the question of legitimate business or trade, and to the restrictions which are placed around the work of the Christian man. The Bible is clear on this question. It lays emphasis on certain fundamentals which must be observed.

In the first place, above all things else, a man must be honest with his fellow men. God's plan has no place for the thief. It can never be right to take what belongs to another without paying for it, and no man can lawfully appropriate the products of another's toil for his own benefit; for the man who robs another of his labor must be placed in the same class with the thief who steals his goods. Concerning this very thing, Paul taught long ago: "Let him that stole steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing that is good." (Eph. 4: 28.) This passage suggests, furthermore, that an occupation or trade must be good. This places a ban on every business that does not contribute to the ultimate welfare of humanity. No person is at liberty to live from a business which, like a parasite, sucks the blood from its patrons and gives nothing in return. How many institutions and corporations exist solely for the purpose of enriching themselves upon the frailties of men! The brothel, the saloon, the moving pictures, which capitalize the fleshly appetites, with many other things of a like destructive nature, are illegal in the sight of God and should never be permitted in a Christian community or be patronized by Christian people.

The Bible also emphasizes the simple virtues of industry and frugality in the business life. One has only to read the Proverbs to see these homely ideals taught again and again. The classic passage on this topic is: "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise: which having no chief, overseer, or ruler, provideth her bread in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest." (Prov. 6: 6-8.) This teaching applies to women as well as to men. No more beautiful passage was ever written in any literature than Solomon's tribute to the worthy woman. And the outstanding virtue of those ascribed to her is industry: "She seeketh wool and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands." (Prov. 31: 13.)

As a concluding thought, the Bible always places the physical life subordinate to the spiritual. It is legitimate that the body be carefully nurtured and clothed, but only that the spirit may more perfectly feed upon the divine Bread of Life. Money is good for a purpose which is noble and while it is used only as an instrument for worthy ends; but, at the same time, it may easily become a temptation which leads man into hurtful lusts that drown them in destruction and send them to perdition. The ideal life is one that has enough of the good things of life to escape the pangs of poverty, and yet does not have the temptation of the rich to be haughty and unmindful of the goodness of God. (Prov. 30: 8, 9.) It is not wrong of itself to be rich, but the dangers are great; and the Bible does not desire abject poverty for the saints of God. To be godly and at the same time to have enough to be contented is the Christian ideal. "But godliness with contentment is great gain; for we brought nothing into the world, for neither can we carry anything out; but having food and covering we shall be therewith content." (1 Tim. 6: 6-8.)

Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

OBJECTED TO AS A TEACHER.

It matters not how honest, sincere, and conscientious we may be in what we say or do, there are those who will impugn our motives and raise objections. In this I was not the exception. While teaching, I earnestly and honestly tried to do my duty. The pupils all liked me, and I liked them. Finally an objection was born and assisted in growth. "What are we going to do? Our children don't want any one to teach for them except Mr. Williams, and just as sure as he keeps on a while longer all of our children will be Campbellites." This was talked quite a while before I heard of it.

In addition to this, a good old lady that heard me preach a few times became greatly alarmed and said: "Brother Williams reads things from his Bible that are not in mine." Her daughter told her she was mistaken, but she would not believe it. She said to her daughter: "If I only had Brother Williams' Bible, I could show you in a few minutes that it is not like mine." The daughter came to me and told me she wanted my Bible for a while, and told me why. I was only glad of the chance for a comparison. She took it, and she and her mother spent some time in comparing them. No difference could be found—both just alike.

After searching in vain for a difference and none could be found, she finally exclaimed: "Well, I can find no difference, but he reads it different!" The poor old soul was perfectly honest in what she thought; but that objection still lingers in the minds of many.

Across the hollow from where the old Commons School-house stood we have a nice building and a good working congregation—Gladly Hill. On July 21, 1912, I pitched tent and began a meeting. One of my old pupils who had been reared in the Baptist faith put in the first question—to wit: "Brother Williams, will you baptize a person upon a confession of faith in Christ unless he joins your church?" In answering this question, I told him I had no church; that Christ built his own church, and that we had no right to belong to anything else, and that we could nowhere read in the Bible where people joined the church; that, when one confessed Christ as the Son of God, no preacher has the right to ask any further questions; and, furthermore, I would not baptize a person if he told me he intended to join some church. When the question was answered, he made the confession and was baptized forthwith—the first one during the meeting. The beginning of the Gladly Hill congregation was one of my old pupils—not a "Campbellite," however, but a Christian only and only a Christian—all that the Bible makes one and all God wants one to be. Twenty-two were baptized, a congregation started, and a nice house built and paid for. This is my last new congregation to start and last meetinghouse to build. During that meeting, especially after answering that question, the opposition became intensely bitter. Many ugly things were said and done. When the invitation was extended, on many occasions, when some would start, some one would take hold of them and try to keep them from going forward. A request was made to say something. I granted it. The people were told that I was preaching a water salvation—a dangerous doctrine—a doctrine that would send souls to hell, etc. I managed to keep cool, and would read to the people what God said, and told them they had to decide which was true. Men quit their work and canvassed the neighborhood in opposition to the meeting and told some "whoppers."

Gladly Hill is my baby congregation. At my age I can hardly expect to go into a new field with tent and build another. I still preach there monthly and hold a camp meeting each year, beginning on the third Lord's day in July. It makes my heart sad when I think of the days of tent work in new fields being ended with me. I shall spend the balance of my days trying to strengthen and build up the congregations in Lake and Obion counties.

Field Notes.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

I spent the week beginning April 24 at Brownsville, Jackson, Humboldt, Trenton, and Bethany, a country congregation near Trenton.

Brownsville is the county seat of Haywood County, and, like nearly all county seats, it, as a town, is not very enthusiastic over the gospel of Christ. But we have some fine brethren there. They did some advertising and had a better crowd than is usual at such meetings. They have a nice house, and will soon have it seated. The best workers are enthusiastic readers of the Gospel Advocate, as I find in many places.

My next stop was at Jackson, the largest city in West Tennessee, save Memphis. The population is about twenty thousand. Brother F. O. Howell lives in Jackson, and is the preacher, and, judging from what I saw and heard, he is doing a good work. He met me at the train and kept me in his home the two days I was there. Also, he drove me about town in his car in the rain to help me in my work. We had better audiences than I expected for a large town.

Leaving Jackson, I next went to Humboldt. No one there received any communication from me, so there was no appointment. But I met a few of the brethren. Brother A. B. Gunter, a good man and a good preacher, lives there. He was away at work, but I called at his home. Brother L. E. Humphreys showed me about town. Brother Gunter is well spoken of by the brethren there. Sister Gunter said Brother Gunter was going to hold several meetings this summer, but not all of his time has been taken yet. Those who need some help in meetings this summer should write A. B. Gunter, Humboldt, Tenn.

From Humboldt I went to Trenton, county seat of Gibson County. There I was met at the train by Brethren W. R. Hassell and G. A. King, brethren I used to know in Hickman and Lewis counties. The brethren there had advertised the meeting, and there we had the first real audience in midweek I have seen since I left Hickman and Lewis counties.

Brother Hassell lives a little over a mile from Trenton, and Brother King lives in town and runs a grocery store and gristmill. Brother Hassell has preached in Middle and West Tennessee for twenty-five years, and is still busy, and is well spoken of wherever I go. He makes it a practice to hold a few mission meetings every year and has time for one or two this year, late in the season. Write him at Trenton.

Brother G. A. King is the father of Brother Henry T. King, who is well known to many of our Advocate readers. At Brother King's I saw Grandma King, his mother. She is a faithful servant of the Lord. I enjoyed my visit with her. She can remember all about the fight between the Mormons and the natives on Cane Creek, Hickman County, in 1884, in which four men were killed. Of those killed, three were Mormons, two of them preachers. The non-Mormon who was killed was Grandma King's brother-in-law. It is claimed that the Mormons were teaching and practicing their doctrine of "spiritual marriages," otherwise polygamy, which seemed so monstrous to the Cane Creek people that they rose up in arms.

Sunday, April 30, I spent with the Bethany congregation, four miles west of Trenton. Here I found Campbells from Hohenwald, Bateses and Grimeses from Aetna, Ragdsdales and Bradleys from Little Lot and Duck River, and we had a regular reunion. The house was nearly full of people morning and night; a good crowd was at the meetinghouse and sang for about three hours. Brother Willie Campbell leads the singing. They have some fine talent and sing well.

Besides meeting old friends, I meet other good brethren at each place. All the time I am urging brethren to give a wider circulation to the books and papers that teach the gospel of Christ in its purity.

We Should Have a Good Paper.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Those who love the truth in its simplicity should avail themselves of every means of teaching the word of God. As the press is a great power for good, Christians should use it for teaching the truth. It is inconsistent in Christians to spend much money for the dissemination of reports of crime while they decline to spend two dollars a year for a religious journal to teach the truth. It is not possible for the loyal, conservative members of the church of Christ to enjoy reading a first-class religious journal without giving such a journal their support and encouragement. A few men cannot do the work by themselves. The few may make sacrifices; but unless many others cooperate with them, the paper they publish will not be as good as the best. If conservative disciples want a first-class paper, they must pay the price. All that is good costs something. I would like to make improvements in the Gospel Advocate, but my funds are limited. I can sacrifice only a certain amount.

In our issue of April 27, 1922, Brother E. C. Love published this: "One man said: 'The Gospel Advocate saved me. I didn't realize it then, but I do now.' Another said: 'My wife was won to Christ by reading the Gospel Advocate.'" Many people do not hesitate to say that they were led to a knowledge of the truth by reading the Gospel Advocate. A brother says: "I pay ten dollars a year for my daily paper, but I cannot afford to pay two dollars a year for the Gospel Advocate." This is very inconsistent for a man who loves the Lord Jesus Christ with all his heart.

The brethren can have a first-class religious journal if they want it. A first-class religious paper should be in every home. Encourage your unconverted neighbors to read good papers—papers that preach the gospel without addition or subtraction.

We are receiving a number of new subscribers, but not as many as we can handle. Let us add ten thousand new names to the list of subscribers to the Advocate. It can and should be done. Brother S. F. Morrow says the brethren are pleased with the Gospel Advocate and that five thousand new subscribers should be added in a very short time. Will not the churches lend Brother Love a helping hand in the work? Of course we would not send a man to you if we did not seek your cooperation in the work. Brother Love is doing well, but he would be delighted to send in ten times as many names as he has sent in the past. In helping him, you are helping yourself.

We appeal to you to make a canvass of your community for subscribers to the Gospel Advocate. You will be surprised to find so many members of the church who are not taking any religious paper. In fact, you will be disappointed when you learn how little they are doing for the conversion of sinners. In making the canvass, you will observe that those who read a good religious paper have more spiritual life than those who do not. Some will tell you they have their Bibles to read, but my experience has taught me that those who read a good paper are the most constant and consistent Bible readers. A first-class paper stimulates people to study the Bible.

Speak to the members of your church in behalf of the Gospel Advocate. Ask the elders of the church to help you. You will be delighted to find how many subscribers you can secure with a little consistent effort. Will not every one who reads this either fill out the blank below or get some one else to fill it out?

Are We Faithful?

BY S. H. HALL.

There is a thought on my heart that it seems I must "talk off" in this article. It is this: Are we faithful? In Rev. 2: 10 Christ says: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." If you, my brother, were called away right now, could it be said by Him who knows: "He was faithful unto death?" If you are a child of God, but one thing remains for you to do that the crown may be yours—viz., be faithful unto death. Do this, and the crown is forever yours. But if you do not, then what? Well, it is not for me to say. It is mine to tell God's children that Christ declares that those who are faithful unto death will receive a crown. You know that all such will be eternally saved. As for me, I shall not try out the course of the unfaithful to see how it will turn out. I have but little time to stay here, and may be called away at any moment. Since coming to Russell and Ninth, I have tried to do my part, I have tried to be faithful, and my conscience is clear. There is but one safe way to be faithful unto death—viz., become faithful, and let each of your days from then to the end of your journey be a day of faithful service to God. But you ask: "May I not allow myself to be unfaithful just one day?" No, for that may be the day you are called away.

Let us listen to Christ for a few moments. "Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing." (Matt. 24: 45, 46.) The faithful servant has his treasure in the right place and his heart set continually on pleasing the One that died that he might live. Take this statement of our Lord: "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately." (Luke 12: 34-36.) This opening unto him "immediately" suggests the idea of perfect readiness. The only way thus to be is to do right, treat your fellow man right, do all you know God says do, and leave nothing undone. It will be too late when the end comes to try to correct the wrongs that evil tongue has done to others. It will be too late then to try to obey commands you have known for years. How exceedingly foolish we are to live otherwise than in a state of readiness for the journey to end! It is the only way we can possibly have the "peace that passeth all understanding" and that "joyful hope" that holds us up and sustains us.

You say: "Brother Hall, I hardly think I am so living just yet, but I intend to so live sometime in the future?" Now, if you say this, may I ask if you are not the kind of disciple Christ was talking about in the following words: "But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the menservants and maidens [for his wife, and continually treat others as he would not have them treat him]; and to eat and drink, and be drunken; the Lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware." (See Luke 12: 45, 46.) Thousands have let death slip up on them in just such a condition. Can you imagine their regrets? Could anything be more dreadful? How timely the following admonition of our Lord: "Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh!" (Matt. 24: 44.)

BURIED TALENTS MAKE US UNFAITHFUL.

We cannot truthfully say, "We have not the talent." To say and believe this is to put ourselves with the unfaithful servant who buried his talent. (See Matt. 25: 18, 24-30.) The man who thinks he cannot do certain things, when the fact is he can, has his talent well buried. God has not a child on earth to whom he has given no talents at all. We all have them, and none of us can have less than one talent. The use we make of the talents the Lord has given us will determine our destiny.

We have members whose talents are used effectively along other lines. For instance, some are members of secret orders or labor organizations, and they usually succeed in getting others to join. How many souls have you led to Christ? Some can get out and induce hundreds to take a policy in some insurance company. How many have you induced to take a policy with a company that cannot break and that guarantees eternal life? Some want certain men elected to office, and they can induce dozens to vote their way. How many have you led to decide for Christ? He is on trial before the world. "What think ye of Christ? whose son is he?" is a question our Lord propounds to the unbeliever. Is it not our duty to help the world decide this question correctly?

Now, I have not said that the things mentioned above in which we do show we have talents, that we have ability, that we can do things, that we do exert an influence over our fellows, are right or wrong. I have merely named them that you may see that talents we have. The question is: Are we using them for the salvation of the souls of the lost?

At the very beginning of our fourteen-years' drive in Atlanta, Ga., I noticed in some paper the following statement: "If there were only one Christian on earth, and this Christian should convert one other to Christ the first year, then these two convert one each the second year, then these four convert one each the third year, and so on, each making it the rule to convert one more each year, it would take but thirty-two years to convert every man and woman, boy and girl, on earth to Christ." This thought startled me at first; but when I figured it out for myself, I found that at the end of thirty-two years we would have 2,150,043,648 children of God on earth.

Now, it does seem that each one of us should convert at least one soul to Christ in three hundred and sixty-five days. The question is: Are we really trying to do so? Christ said: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." (John 15: 8.) And do not forget that bearing fruit is winning souls to Christ. To lead just one soul a year to Christ seems too little for us to do; yet if we do this, every congregation would be doubled this year. Will it not be done? Let each member look the truth squarely in the face and say: It can be done; hence, it must be done. Each of us should set our hearts, at the close of each Lord's-day's service, to gain at least one more to our attendance by the next Lord's day. It is easy to be done. You have a friend that is not coming. All you need to do is to kindly insist that that friend be with you next Lord's day. Tell him or her, as the case may be, something of interest about the services. And be certain to pray that every service may be so brimful of God's presence that your friend will come back.

Has the Kingdom of God Been Established on Earth by Jesus Christ, or Will It Be in the Future?

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE BY H. W. JONES.

Yes, God's kingdom "established"—"settled, fixed, finished"—A.D. 33. It was in course of construction many "days" (years)—from John's birth to Pentecost; and "these kings"—Augustus, Tiberius, Herod, et al.—reigned during "establishment."

Marrs thinks Roman Empire not divided till A.D. 395. Learn history and Scripture. Roman Empire (in its make-up) was divided, internally (1 Sam. 16: 7), before Pentecost, as "image" indicates; Romans did "mingle themselves with seed of men"—they "mixed," under one government, with different temperamental races, nationalities, etc., that would "not cleave together, as iron doth not mingle with clay." So Dan. 2: 40-44 describes Roman Empire when stone struck it A.D. 33, finally breaking pagan Rome in pieces, as history attests. But Marrs thinks Roman Empire still exists, when every vestige, semblance, even name, was "consumed" centuries ago! He distorts history "to fit" visionary "theory!" God's kingdom was established "in days of these [Roman] kings," not "after divided parts removed," as Marrs says. So it is Marrs against Daniel, history, reason! Daniel does not say, "these kings shall mingle with seed of men"—Marrs said that. If "mingle with seed of men" means "blood-related kings" (as Marrs says), then they reigned during "Roman Empire," not centuries after its complete destruction! Broken thread, then, for vague kingdom-come theory!

Daniel's vision: "Son of man came with clouds of heaven to Ancient of days. . . . Dominion, glory, and kingdom given him, that all peoples, nations, languages, should serve him." (Dan. 7: 13, 14.) "Dominion"—"all authority" given Christ, A.D. 33, after resurrection. (Matt. 28: 18.) Christ went to heaven to receive kingdom. (Luke 19: 11-15.) This citation shows Christ's kingdom would not "immediately appear" (as "they supposed"), but when Christ went into far country. Christ went into far country (heaven) A.D. 33. (Acts 1: 9-11.) Hence, kingdom established then, with Christ, King, ruling, spiritually, "unto end of world." (Matt. 28: 20.)

Christ inherited David's throne. (Luke 1: 26-33, 69.) David's throne called Lord's throne. (1 Chron. 29: 23-26.) Hence, David's throne to be eternal, in heaven. (Ps. 89: 3-37.) Christ raised to occupy, forever, David's throne, and "establish and uphold" his kingdom "forever," when seated on throne. (Isa. 9: 6, 7; Acts 2: 24-36; Rev. 3: 21.) Therefore, Christ, on David's throne, sent the Holy Spirit, finished his kingdom (on earth), "added three thousand souls that day" (Acts 2: 32-47); and those "saved," in spiritual kingdom constituted "the church" (verse 47). Not "Jones' kingdom," but Christ's, which Marrs may appreciate sometime!

James, John, and their mother believed Christ would be in his kingdom when he entered into glory. (Matt. 20: 21; Mark 10: 35-37.) Christ encouraged this belief, as contexts show. Hence, Christ entered into his kingdom when he entered into glory, and he entered into glory after ascending—A.D. 33. (Luke 24: 26.) So, Christ's kingdom established 1889 years ago!

Paul said: God "translated us into kingdom of his Son." (Col. 1: 13.) How "translate us into Christ's kingdom" and it not established? Let Marrs answer. Watch "twisting and turning done here."

Yes, "saints" were to "receive and possess the kingdom forever" (Dan. 7: 18), and they have since Pentecost. Christ promised them the kingdom before Pentecost (Luke 12: 32; 22: 28-30); and, afterwards, "church of Christ" identified as ones "receiving a kingdom" (Heb. 12: 23, 28); and Christ commands these very people—"disciples, Christians"—to "go" and say, "Come," etc. (Matt. 28: 16-20; Mark 16: 15, 16; Luke 24: 44-49; Acts 2: Rev. 22: 17). This fulfills Isa. 2: 2, 3; but Marrs says, "Jones wishes [wants] to change" Isa. 2: 2, 3. Never! Better read text and my arguments thereon again. Marrs "slipped" here. Look out! You are not debating with "some church theologians." Answer my arguments; readers can discern "loose theology," etc.

1. A King necessarily implies "kingdom." (John 18: 36, 37.)

2. Christ, "King of kings," since Pentecost, as shown.

3. Therefore, Christ's kingdom established then.

1. "Kingdom of God is . . . in power." (1 Cor. 4: 20.) Yes, "is," not "will be."

2. Gospel power first came on Pentecost. (Acts 2: Rom. 1: 16.)

3. Therefore, kingdom established then.

Undeniable premises, logical conclusions!

REPLY BY T. J. MARRS.

In his closing first affirmative, Brother Jones numbers three items which assert: "The kingdom came on day of Pentecost with power, Spirit, all came together, and the kingdom was established on that day." (Also asked: "Readers, watch.") Now, in the beginning of his second he says "finished," and: "It was in course of construction many 'days' (years)," etc. So it seems he has changed his position substantially.

Referring to "these kings" (toe-kings), he mentions "Augustus, Tiberius, Herod, et al." Were these three reigning on Pentecost day, Brother Jones? Did that "image" have only three toes? (O, my!) Whose history is "mixed?" (My history is correct, and your theology at fault.) He further says: "The Roman Empire was divided internally." Then, for a kingdom to be "divided," it must have as many kings as there are divisions; then, these "internal kings" were those that were "mingled with seed of men!" Then, this "image" should have had the feet and toes in the bowels of it; and instead of the "stone" being thrown at its feet, it should have hit him in his stomach! (O, my, my, what an argument Brother Jones can make!) To be sure, the head of that "image" was to represent the first part of the Gentile empires, and the "toes" the last part, when the saints take over the kingdom. Further down he says: "But Marrs thinks the Roman Empire still exists." Not guilty. God said: "It shall be a divided kingdom." Then it could no longer be an "empire." He later refers to "one coming in clouds of heaven, like the Son of man, and there was given him a kingdom," etc. (Dan. 7: 13.) As the context shows, this was after the great judgment, and the kingdom an everlasting one. So, if Brother Jones' "Pentecost kingdom" is "everlasting," then Christ will have two "everlasting kingdoms." Then, he thinks Christ is sitting on David's throne in heaven. "David hath not ascended into heaven." And A.D. 96 Christ said: "I will grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I overcame, and am seated with my Father on his throne." (Rev. 3: 21.) Maybe he didn't like David's old stool. He again refers to "we receiving a kingdom," etc.; but this refers to a futurity. (Were Paul and the Hebrews still "receiving" the Pentecost kingdom?) Of course, he must refer to Col. 1: 13, "translated us into the kingdom." But this is a mistranslation; for "translate" means to change the condition, as shown in many places; but to change a thing locally is not "translating," but "transferring." (Ask some drayman.) Paul was carried to heaven, but had to die; but Enoch was changed, so he never saw death. The word "into," in this notation, is from "eis," same as in Acts 2: 38, and means "for." (Wilson's Diaglott correctly renders this passage: "And changed us for the kingdom," etc.) This passage, as rendered in the Common Version, contradicts thirty-three others which show "the kingdom" was to come after the judgment, etc. But Isaiah 9: 7 shows when Christ takes "the throne of David" there will be no end of peace. Is that the condition since Pentecost, Brother Jones?

INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

By M. C. Kurfess

Cloth. 300 pages. Price, postpaid. . . . $1.50

This is the most comprehensive book on this important subject now before the public. In it the Greek verb "psallo" is philologically and historically examined, together with a full discussion of kindred matters relating to music in Christian worship. The book is the result of a lifetime of critical study and research, and has become the standard of information on the music question. It has been highly recommended by scholarly brethren in the church of Christ and in the religious world.

The Eldership. No. 3.

BY C. W. SEWELL.

Our querist asks some questions on the elders as follows: "Do you or any preacher, even these evangelists, have a scriptural right to select men and put them over the work, when we have congregations with at least some of the elders and deacons? Or, is it not the work of the church to select her leaders? Where men have been selected and put over the work by the preacher or evangelist, what course is the church to take in case those selected do not do the work? Where a congregation wants and puts a preacher in the work as an elder, can he be, or is he, one, although his work calls him away much of his time? Where one has been selected as above, what course is the church or evangelist to take to put him out when no charge is made, only called off to other fields to preach?"

I am constrained to believe and teach that the Holy Spirit taught the churches a uniform law; that what he taught the church at Jerusalem to do, he taught also at Philippi, Corinth, and all others; that it was not necessary for the Spirit, in writing the New Testament, to continually repeat his instructions. When God says a thing one time, it is just as true as if repeated a score of times. When it is said that the church at Troas "came together upon the first day of the week to break bread," we understand that all other churches did the same. So when the Holy Spirit tells the church at Jerusalem how to select deacons, we are to understand that he taught all other churches to do the same way. Otherwise, there was no uniformity in the Spirit's teaching nor in the practice of the churches. "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." (Acts 6: 3.) Such was the instruction given by the apostles to the church at Jerusalem as to the selection of deacons. If all other churches did not select their elders and deacons in this way, there was no uniform manner of procedure among the apostolic churches. There may be some question as to the evangelist's work in appointing them to the work, but the selecting of the men was the work of the brethren. But when men have been selected and appointed to the work of elders and deacons and do not do the work, I think the first and most effective remedy is to teach them their duty. (See Acts 20: 17-35; 1 Pet. 5: 1-4.) If that is not effective, the Bible, so far as I know, points out no other procedure, except that Paul says to Timothy: "Against an elder receive not an accusation, except at the mouth of two or three witnesses." (1 Tim. 5: 19.) From this we may reason that if two or three witnesses testify that an elder does not perform his duty, that the church could proceed as against any other member for failure in duty. (2 Thess. 3: 6, 14; Rom. 16: 17; 1 Cor. 5: 1-5.)

Paul, in 1 Tim. 5: 17, recognizes the preaching elder, and I see no reason why he should not remain in the eldership though he travel abroad. If he should be gone so much of his time that he can be of no service to the congregation as elder, then I think the church might proceed to appoint some one else to the work, but I see no reason for putting the preacher out. If being away in his work as a preacher necessitates putting him out of the eldership, would it not also justify putting him out of the fellowship?

Who Are Christians? No. 4.

BY C. R. N.

The articles which appeared recently in the Gospel Advocate from me, under the above caption, have been the occasion for a number of letters, which I have read with interest. The following from Brother J. W. Dunn I give in full, with some comments:

Dyersburg, Tenn., April 4, 1922.—Dear Brother Nichol: I have read and thought of your article in the Gospel Advocate, and am glad to see you discuss pertinent and important questions. Some expressions you use prompt me to ask a question. I notice you say: "I find no place in my vocabulary for such expressions as 'worldly Christians,' 'dancing Christians,' 'gambling Christians,' 'lying Christians,' though some such may have been born again and children of God." Yet, you employ the expression, "Christians at heart, but not in fact, never having obeyed the gospel." When Thayer speaks of who is a Christian, is he defining their "relationship" or "manner" of life, or both? Is the expression, "child of God," "member of the church—the Lord's church," the same as a Christian or different? If different, what makes the difference? What scripture makes them such? When are these expressions used scripturally and when unscripturally? So often do we hear people remark: "He was once a member of the church, but not now." Is it correct to thus speak of one who has "turned back?" Do some of these expressions refer to one's relationship and others to manner of life, or to the same thing? You can see what I wish to draw out. Long have I felt or seen the need for clear, pointed teaching here, and am sure there are many who will say, with me, thank you for an essay on this matter. Sincerely,

J. W. DUNN.

I am glad to have the foregoing from Brother Dunn, or any other question that may be submitted; not that I court criticism or controversy, but solely for the purpose of eliciting truth. The Gospel Advocate is always open for the investigation of any vital truth touching the Bible.

In discussing the word "Christian," I made mention of the fact that heathens regard all English-speaking people as Christians, because as a people they teach that Jesus is the Christ and the Savior of the world. Such is not the scriptural use of the word, for among English-speaking people there are some who declare Jesus was an impostor. Too, I made reference to the fact that at times I found people referred to as Christians, when, on investigation, I learned that the ones thus designated had made a study of the religions of the world and decided that the religion as taught by Jesus is the true religion, and that he who employs the term "Christian" in reference to such folk can mean no more than that they are "Christians at heart, but not in fact, never having obeyed the gospel." They can mean no more than that such people are Christians in judgment. Such is not the scriptural use of the word. For one to have decided that he should be a Christian, and though he may be spoken of as a "Christian at heart," he is not a Christian in fact. In short, one who has not obeyed the gospel, one who is not following Christ, is not a "Christian at heart," when the term "heart" is used in the scriptural sense. The heart does more than simply decide the correctness or incorrectness of matters. The heart thinks (Matt. 9: 4), understands (Isa. 32: 4), believes (Rom. 10: 10), purposes (2 Cor. 9: 7), desires (Rom. 10: 1), and loves (Matt. 22: 37). To speak correctly, one cannot be a "Christian at heart" and stop short of following Christ.

I think Agrippa was fully convinced that Jesus was Christ from what he learned from Paul and others. His judgment evidently was that Jesus was all he claimed; but he realized that such conviction was not sufficient to make him a Christian, for he said: "With but little persuasion thou wouldest fain make me a Christian." (Acts 26: 28.) Paul's reply revealed just what he would have Agrippa become—that is, "such as I am, except these bonds"—a Christian. Paul had not only decided that Jesus was Christ and that what he taught was true, but that, to serve God in the Christian dispensation, he could not remain in the old Jewish church in which he had been reared; that it was necessary for one to be in the church of Christ, giving the full weight of his influence in opposition to all false doctrine and unauthorized divisive teaching and practices in religion. "Be ye imitators of me, even as I also am of Christ." (1 Cor. 11: 1.) This was what Paul was persuading Agrippa to become—a Christian! Such is the scriptural use of the term. Because one has decided that Christianity is true, such person is not a Christian in the correct use of the word. One is not a Christian when he refuses to oppose false doctrine or to teach the truth as did Paul.

The word is also used by Peter: "Let none of you suffer as a murderer, or a thief, or an evildoer, or as a meddler in other men's matters; but if a man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God in this name. (1 Pet. 4: 15, 16.) Peter was a Christian, and he exhorted his brethren to suffer as Christians, and to glorify God in that name. Surely no one can be what Peter was—a Christian—and refuse to wear the name, or refuse to give the answer Peter did to conscience-stricken sinners when they cried to know what to do to be saved. (Acts 2: 38, 39.)

Thayer defines the word: "Christianos—A Christian, a follower of Christ." Brother Dunn inquires: "When Thayer speaks of who is a Christian, is he defining their 'relationship' or 'manner' of life, or both?" I think he contemplates their manner of life, which grows out of their relationship.

We should strive not to be sectarian in our views or the use of terms. Too, we should not convey false impressions by the use of words. Does the Lord teach that we should be more than Christians? Is one a Christian because he believes the fact about Jesus as revealed in the Bible—simply believes the fact? Were the chief rulers who believed on Christ, but refused to confess him, Christians? (John 12: 42, 43.)

"Know ye not, that to whom ye present yourselves as servants unto obedience, his servants ye are whom ye obey?" (Rom. 6: 16.) I cannot entertain the thought that one can be a Christian—"a follower of Christ," "imitators of me [Paul], even as I also am of Christ"—and a servant of the devil. I find no place in my vocabulary for such expressions as "worldly Christians," "dancing Christians," "gambling Christians," "lying Christians." Nor do I find it in keeping with my conception of what a Christian is for one to teach false doctrine and use his influence, moral and religious, to tear down the church of Christ. If one man can be a Christian and teach that immersion is not baptism; that baptism is not a condition of salvation in the Christian dispensation; that one can be saved and never be a member of the church of the Lord, never observe the Lord's Supper when the opportunities to do so are many times multiplied, practice unauthorized things in religious services, divide the church of God, and engage in all manner of sin—if one can do all this and still be a Christian, may not all men live such lives and give their influence to such practices and be Christians?

Field Notes.

C. R. Nichol closed a meeting in Nashville, Ark., with five baptisms.

Foy E. Wallace, Jr., with J. H. Antwine directing the song service, closed a meeting in Weatherford, Texas, with fourteen baptisms.

The church in Burkburnett, Texas, where D. S. Ligon labors, is doing good work. In the midweek service there is an interesting class in the study of the book of Acts.

T. M. Carney, who labors with the church in San Angelo, Texas, reports that the work advances nicely there, with the young men taking active part in public work. It is the effort of the congregation to develop all parts of the body.

From Harvey Scott, Floresville, Texas, May 1: "Brother Berry closed his meeting here last Sunday week. He had a good meeting, but no visible results. I was at Nixon yesterday, and had a good time. I leave for a meeting at Sinton this morning."

Tice Elkins recently held a meeting at Hillsboro, Texas, which closed with twelve additions to the church and the entire membership greatly edified and ready for better work. He says: "The church at Hillsboro is in peace, working hard, and holds the respect and admiration of the town. J. C. Foster is laboring with them, and the church is standing by him solidly, and he has their love and confidence. Also, Brother Foster is highly esteemed and loved by the business men and women of the city, and has as many friends among the outsiders as any preacher I know. On the last Sunday of the meeting thirty members of Southside Church, of Fort Worth, motored down and enjoyed the noon service with the Hillsboro folks, after which I united in marriage Tom J. Davis and my daughter, Miss Garnett Elkins, at the meetinghouse. The party came home in the afternoon, and the meeting closed that night with an overflow crowd."

Of the work at Southside Church, in Fort Worth, Texas, Tice Elkins says: "The work with the Southside church of Christ is still good, and we are expecting a good meeting, with Brother Nichol doing the preaching, beginning on the first Sunday in May. We invite all visitors to the city to attend the meeting. Take university car on Houston Street and get off at the corner of College and Leuna Streets; church house at car stop. We had fine services last Lord's day (April 30), with three additions." He further says: "Since my announcement appeared a few weeks ago that I would resign from the work here, and take up the protracted-meeting work entirely again, there has been such a strong protest from so many that, after a lengthy consultation with the elders of the congregation, it has been decided that I shall remain with the work until my contract expires. After the first of September I will be in position to consider any work that offers, whether local or otherwise, but will do nothing away from here until that time, except during my vacation in August. Any congregation wanting my services in any way next fall and winter will please write me early, for I will need the work. If I get no 'calls,' I will preach the gospel where they do not call me, for I will not lose a day waiting for a call."

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY FOR OUR READERS

The greatest preachers of the past two centuries attribute much of their inspiration and usefulness to Matthew Henry's Commentary on the whole Bible. Born in the seventeenth century, his name and his work still live and are household words. Thousands of homes treasure this commentary second only to the Bible, and many a man traces his right start to the loving advice of Matthew Henry.

Charles H. Spurgeon said: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering sparrows around an old gable toward the close of autumn." Dr. Philip Schaff, compiler of Schaff's Bible Dictionary, pronounces it "the best practical and devotional commentary for English readers."

The management of the Gospel Advocate is fortunate in securing twenty-five sets of this unrivaled commentary, which will be sent as a premium to every reader who will send twenty-five new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2 per year. This is undoubtedly the most attractive commentary offer ever made. You will receive six portable volumes of twelve hundred pages each, large, clear, unbroken type, with substantial Roxborough binding. If you wish to pay cash, the price for the six volumes is $17.50, not prepaid. When sent as a premium, we pay all charges.

It Pays to Pray

Our meeting at Valdosta, Ga., starts off with unusual vim and promise. It began on a Monday afternoon at four o'clock. That might have been a handicap at some other place, but not here. A large audience was present at this first session and a larger one at night. Three nights have passed and five have already made the good confession. Everything points to an overflow of audience and a continuous spiritual feast. How much better is this than to start off in a dull, listless way and work a week to get the members ready for the meeting! Sometimes this is the visiting preachers' first business, but not here. They were ready before I came. Brother Claus, the faithful evangelist here, told me the members believed very strongly in prayer and that they had been praying intensely for the success of the meeting. Now that the meeting is started, the prayers go on daily in the meetinghouse and in the homes. For my own part, I never begin the day nor enter the pulpit without asking God to make it a big day for the salvation of souls. I ask him to guide me in the selection of the themes for that afternoon and night. Then I ask God to help me hide myself behind the cross so that the hearers will think only of Jesus. Does it pay to pray? I have not the shadow of a doubt but what it always pays to pray. If we pray aright.

Christianity courts investigation. Jesus' challenge to every doubter is what he said to the two disciples who asked him where he lived. "Come and see." The things that he did were not done in a corner. Our faith is like the precious ore; men are invited to bring their acids and test its metal. It is like a perfect structure; men are asked to bring plummet and level and try out its foundation.

But let us remember that there are some things that do not admit of cool, calculating analysis. There are some things that God never intended to be chemically dissected. One of these is prayer. Some years ago Professor Tyndall submitted what he claimed was a practical test of prayer. He suggested that two men sick of the same disease and in the same ward at the same hospital be selected and that prayers be offered for one and not for the other. "Then we shall see," he dogmatically exclaimed, "which man recovers first." This suggestion was wickedly absurd; it was wickedly preposterous and impractical. Tyndall may have been a great scientist, but in matters of Christian faith he was a veritable ignoramus. Jesus had such characters in mind when he said: "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou didst hide these things from the wise and understanding, and didst reveal them unto babes." I would rather have a poor Christian washer-woman's testimony about prayer than that of the most noted skeptic who ever lived.

But there are two ways in which the honest seeker after truth may test the efficiency of prayer. The first we may call the "outside test." He may call the roll of the saints from Abraham down to New Testament times and ask them if prayer was a profitable thing in their lives. The answers will be overwhelmingly in the affirmative. Abraham's servant prays, Rebekah appears; Jacob prays, and a great ladder is seen stretching from heaven to earth, with angels ascending and descending; Moses prays, his enemies are discomfited; Joshua prays, Jordan is divided; Hannah prays, Samuel is born; David prays, Abithophel hangs himself; Mordecai prays, Haman is hanged on the gallows he built for Mordecai; Daniel prays, he is delivered from the lions' den; Elijah prays, and it rains not for the space of three years; Elijah prays again, and it rains; Jesus prays, and angels minister to him; the disciples pray, and Peter is delivered from prison. Truly said one of the greatest poets: "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

But there is also the "inside test" of prayer. Each one may learn for himself what it means to commune with the great prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God. The very foundation of successful prayer must be laid in the suppliant himself. His relation to God must be such as to assure successful prayer. During the darkest days of the Civil War some of Abraham Lincoln's friends said: "Mr. Lincoln, if we could only get God on our side, we would win the victory and end this terrible strife." The great man replied: "Never mind about getting God on our side; what we need to do is to get on God's side, and all will be well." Practical James put this truth in a nutshell when he wrote: "The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working." If you would ask a favor of President Harding and did not know him, you would not go to see him alone, but would approach him through your congressman or some mutual friend. Just so, if there is sickness or trouble in your home and you wish a prayer to be offered, you do not look for a merely nominal Christian, but seek the most consecrated man or woman of your acquaintance to carry your petitions to the throne of grace. But we should not rely wholly upon others to do our praying for us. We ourselves should be living in such close harmony with God that our prayers will be effectual. The main conditions and New Testament requisites for successful prayer are faith, a pure heart, accordance with God's will, a spirit of obedience, and asking all in Jesus' name.

If we expect a letter to reach its destination, we must put a stamp upon it, otherwise it will eventually go to the dead-letter office unless a return address is given. In like manner there is a dead-prayer office, and thousands of well-worded petitions lie buried there. Stamp your prayer with faith and love and seal it with submission and self-sacrifice, and it will reach its heavenly destination."

What It Means to Preach Jesus.

Whatever we may say or think about the recent fight made by the good citizens of Kentucky in behalf of the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures and the divinity of Jesus Christ, it is good to note that they received a sympathetic response from all parts of the country which more than out-balanced the objections that were voiced by the leaders of destructive higher criticism. The discussion, pro and con, emphasizes, more than ever before, the dangers besetting the immature minds of our youth and the great necessity of setting forth the simple, fundamental truths of the gospel. Sometimes the preacher holds back from preaching on old-fashioned themes because he thinks that everybody in the audience knows the truths he would present and some might be bored. This is not the situation. The recent widespread discussion of evolutionistic theories reveals the appalling fact that many do not rest in the belief that God is the Creator of the universe and that Jesus Christ was divinely begotten. He must remember, too, that Satan has his agents to-day clothed in the garb of learned college professors who would take away what faith our children may possess. Under such conditions, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel of Christ!

It will never suffice for men to preach a Jesus of their own conception. They must preach the Jesus of the New Testament. As Paul tersely puts it, they must set forth with all the powers of their being "the word of the truth of the gospel."

To preach Jesus in the scriptural sense is to make known the whole gospel plan of salvation as foreshadowed in the Old Testament and revealed in the New Testament. We are to set him forth in type and in fact. In preaching Jesus, the example of the apostles must be our supreme guide. Like the early disciples, we must continue steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine. They preached Jesus as they were guided by the Holy Spirit. To preach Jesus, then, as they preached him is to preach Jesus profitably. To preach Jesus in any other way not only spells failure, but invites the displeasure of high Heaven. Paul said: "Though we, or an angel from heaven, should preach unto you any gospel other than that which we preached unto you, let him be anathema."

If we follow the apostolic pattern in our preaching, we will take care to declare that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, and will set him forth in the peerless rank and dignity of his divine nature. As a notable figure in history, Jesus has been before the world for two thousand years. More has been written and said concerning him than concerning any other personage, and by this time it would seem that all would know just who Jesus is. Yet, I dare say, if you would assemble one hundred professors from that many of the leading colleges and universities and ask them the point-blank question, "Who is Jesus?" there would be a score or more of answers, and very little agreement and unity among them.

One would say he was the world's greatest philosopher; another would say he was the world's greatest teacher; another would claim Jesus to be a new starting point in the human race; another would declare that he was a myth and that no such character ever lived. It might be interesting after a fashion to follow the line of argument presented by these men in making their claims, but it is of far more importance to learn what the word of God has to say on this important subject.

When Jesus appealed from the hasty and unsatisfactory conclusions of the multitudes concerning himself and asked his disciples the direct question, "Who do ye say that I am?" Simon Peter answered and said: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus accepted this divinely revealed and divinely attested statement as the truth concerning himself and declared that he would build his church upon it. Peter repeats his declaration at Pentecost in the temple and still later in the house of Cornelius. Philip preaches the same truth to the Samaritans, and Paul at Damascus.

The preacher who does not preach Jesus Christ as the Son of God has no business preaching. He does more harm than good. The teacher who places Jesus Christ in the same class with Confucius or Mohammed or who denies his divinity is a dangerous factor in a community. I thoroughly agree and sympathize with many of the good citizens of Kentucky who are demanding that the State's money shall not be used to support public-school teachers who are featuring the evolutionistic theory and denying the divinity of the Son of God.

The divinity of Jesus Christ is the chief corner stone of the Christian temple. It is the rock upon which the church was built. It is the great vital truth and vitalizing power of the gospel. Rob the Christian religion of this great fundamental truth, and it is not worth while.

What of the Morrow?

BY H. C. FLEMING.

Sometimes in the distant horizon we see a dark cloud obscuring the sky. We notice it as it accumulates, covering the whole canopy of heaven. The sun is invisible, made so dim that no bright ray is reflected through the cloud, but we know from the light we have that the sun is yet shining beyond the clouds. When they begin to disperse, we see the sun again in all his splendor, shining the brighter because of the dim light that has been overcome by his power. We no longer fear destruction by a tornado.

There is a powerful, glorious light, given to man, that shines beyond the tomb, and often attempts are made by some to obscure it; but it still shines, because man has no more power to blot it out than he has to obliterate the sun. No man is so foolish as to wish to destroy the light of the sun, because he knows that would be death to him. Why, then, should any desire to darken the light of the future life? But men, through folly, commit many foolish errors. But such was foretold nearly two thousand years ago.

Listen to this: "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." (2 Pet. 3: 3, 4.)

To-day we have such as these, and their actions prove the truth of what was foretold. Then what of the morrow?

Jesus said, when contemplating the destruction of Jerusalem: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate." (Matt. 23: 37, 38.) Jerusalem is desolate and has been a bone of contention among the Gentile nations since the year 70 A.D.

The Jews now scattered among all nations are a living monument to the truth of the whole Bible. In many places in the Bible they were told what would be the results of their disobedience to God. The scattering of them among all nations was one of the penalties.

Since some nowadays are trying to discredit the Bible, do they not constitute a cloud that is darkening the vision of many people? Then what of the morrow? Will we, like the Israelites of old, turn in repentance to God, or will we still be stiff-necked and rebellious until we bring upon ourselves swift destruction?

"But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction." (2 Pet. 2: 1.)

"But let all those that put their trust in thee [the Lord] rejoice; let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them: let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee." (Ps. 5: 11.)

What of the morrow?

Redeeming the Time.

Time cannot be recalled, but it can be redeemed. One may not live over the days that are gone, but it is possible for him to gather out of the past the materials which can enter into the structure of a more profitable future career. Nothing is lost if it serves as a lesson in life, even though it be the fragment of a wreck. Time is redeemable when it brings serious thought concerning its content and importance, even though it seems otherwise to have been lived to no profit. Let us not bemoan the lost opportunities, the failures, the mistakes of the past, further than to regard them as inverted signboards, the index finger of which points out the way not to go. They serve us well if they have supplied information of a negative sort. Many a life failure is due to a lack of sufficient knowledge of what not to do, notwithstanding the life was characterized by a good degree of positive culture and information. Redeem the time; let the errors and waste and shortcomings of the past be harnessed to the future with the links of an abiding faith in Christ and a careful discernment of the duties which lie at hand.—Selected.

Christian courtesy in its varied forms of expression is, when uniformly and evenly preserved, the very perfection of self-forgetfulness, the highest practical exhibition of self-restraint and inward recollection.—T. T. Carter.

At Home and Abroad

J. L. Jackson reports three additions at Lindsley Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

Carl G. Smith, 1721 Cobb Avenue, Anniston, Ala., has time for meetings in June and July. All gospel preachers should be kept busy.

There have been thirteen names added to the Russell Street list, this city, the last two Lord's days—three baptisms, one from Vine Street Christian Church, and nine by statement.

From George W. Grayson, Dunmore, Ky.: "R. N. Gardner, of Nashville, Tenn., preached for us on the fourth Lord's day in April; Roy C. Hyde, of Drakesboro, Ky., on the first Lord's day in May."

S. H. Hall will preach at Russell and Ninth Streets, this city, next Sunday morning, and at night will join the Green Street forces in a revival. Services each evening through the week, beginning at 7:45 o'clock.

The following announcement was sent in by Charles P. Poole, 5 Dana Street, Cambridge, Mass.: "The church of Christ meets each Lord's day at 2:15 P.M., in Phillips Brooks House, Harvard Campus. Take tunnel trains for Cambridge and get off at Harvard Square. Brother Morris, of Birkenhead, England, was a visitor to-day (April 30)."

W. M. Oakley began a meeting at California Avenue, this city, yesterday, with a full house and good interest both morning and evening. Services announced for each night throughout the week at half past seven o'clock. No day services. Brother Oakley has time for a meeting anywhere he may be needed in June. Call him out and keep him busy.

From J. Paul Slayden, Columbia, Tenn.: "A. B. Barret closed a meeting of two-weeks' duration, April 23. There were twenty-three baptisms. Brother Barret did some fine preaching and we had a great meeting. An effort was made to get the brethren to do bigger things than they have dreamed hitherto, and we shall send a fuller report of our labors when some of the unfinished work is done."

From J. Clifford Murphy, Ackerman, Miss., May 2: "I am at this writing in Mississippi in the mission field that has recently been spoken of by M. C. Cayce, who was doing a grand work here. I also notice C. E. Holt speaks of this field. Brother Holt knows me well. My home is in Pulaski, Tenn. If any one wants to help me in this work, it will be highly appreciated. Send it to my home address—Pulaski, Tenn."

In a note received from J. D. Miller, whose address is Heber Springs, Ark., Box 423, he says: "The church at this place is young and weak financially, so we request you to ask the brethren in Nashville and elsewhere to help us out. We are in a rented house, and we are making arrangements for a meeting to begin on the fourth Sunday in this month. L. R. Wilson, of Henderson, Tenn., will preach for us. We are all laboring people and have small income. So we appeal to our brethren for help."

R. P. Cuff, 120 Magnolia Street, Macon, Ga., sends in the following cheerful message: "Quite a number of the Macon church members gave me a birthday surprise party on the evening of May 2 at the home of W. L. Foshee. It would seem that, knowing I was soon to leave the Georgia field, they put forth an extra effort to make everything agreeable and delightful. The shower they gave is long to be appreciated. They have long since endeared themselves to their minister, and this remembrance of his birthday did by no means detract. May Heaven's blessing be upon them every one."

From Allen Phy, Algood, Tenn., May 1: "I preached at Neverfail, in Cumberland County, from Friday night till Sunday night (fifth Sunday in April). Crowds were large and interest good. Willie Hunter is to hold a meeting for them in August. I have preached monthly this year at the following places: Smyrna, in Putnam County; Sykes, in Smith County; Bethel and Tyree's Chapel, in Simpson County, Ky. George W. Graves is to hold the meeting at Smyrna. I am to hold meetings at Sykes and Tyree's Chapel. I do not know who will hold the meeting at Bethel."

From J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., writing under date of May 1, says: "We have just closed our first protracted meeting in the new house at the corner of C and Kankakee Streets. W. H. Whaley, of Parsons, Kan., did the preaching, and it was well done. There were twenty additions to the congregation, with the best hearing we have ever had in this city. To compare this meeting with the Pardenman-Pullias meeting in the Tabernacle at Nashville, Tenn., it would appear quite insignificant; but when you consider that we have so few brethren here, and not all of them as zealous as they should be, we had a wonderful meeting, and are better prepared for work now than ever before. I want to thank again every one who has so nobly assisted us in this work and to ask their prayers that greater results may be seen among us."

From R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., May 4: "I have just closed a good meeting with the Cowart Street church of Christ, Chattanooga, Tenn. The meeting continued eleven days, with preaching at night only. Interest was good throughout, the meetinghouse being full at almost every service in spite of the rainy weather. Twenty-one were baptized. E. D. Martin is located with the Cowart Street congregation. He is doing a good work, and all are well pleased with his work. The following preaching brethren were present during the meeting: H. M. Phillips, A. C. Clark, Leslie Boyd, E. H. Hoover, and Brethren Pryor, Lowery, and Price. We enjoyed having them with us very much. The brethren invited me back; so I will return to them again next year, the Lord willing. While there I suffered very much with a wounded side, also a deep cold set up, and we had to close the meeting too soon. My physical condition is not good yet, but I am improving slowly. I need the prayers of all the faithful. My wife also is in very poor health yet. The harvest is ripe, but the laborers are few."

E. S. Jelley, missionary in India, sends for publication in the Gospel Advocate the following note which he received from Manaji A. Selar: "I would like to tell you about some fifty or seventy-five Bhils in the region of Vangi who are asking baptism. They continually ask for baptism. But I am afraid to baptize them without being able to look after them myself; for surely such an ignorant lot of heathen ought to have gospel instruction and Christian care after becoming Christians. Shall I baptize them? Besides the Bhils, the people of two villages near Vangi, both high caste and low, are asking me to arrange for a schoolmaster for them. It is a fine opening for the gospel. What shall I tell them?" Brother Jelley says: "Brethren, being unable to answer the above, I pass it on to you. If any of you think that tribe of criminals called 'Bhils' is worth saving, and think so to the extent of ten dollars per month, I will put a preacher among them and give you his address and direct him to report to you. It is tantalizing for a loyal missionary to see as many as sixteen Indian workers employed to assist one or two Methodist missionaries, while the church of Christ is only able (or willing) to support one missionary family and two or three Indian workers among one-fifth of the world's population. What answer shall I give Brother Selar? Shall he baptize those Bhils and introduce Christ and the word of life to them and their little ones?"

H. D. Jeffcoat writes from Ackerman, Miss., May 2: "I am glad to announce to the readers of the Gospel Advocate that J. Clifford Murphy, of Pulaski, Tenn., is here at my home. Seeing the reports from this State, he was filled with a desire to 'come over and help us.' He will stay in this field three Lord's days out of each month, if he can get a support. We surely need all the workers that can come and help us. We hope some of the ones that are interested in this work will help him. If you want to know more about the man, write the elders of the church at Pulaski, Tenn., or the minister there, J. T. Clark. No doubt many of the Tennessee churches know Brother Murphy. Brethren, will you help us keep him in this needy field? His family are at their home in Pulaski. All help will reach him if sent to his home address; or, if you wish, send direct to me, at Ackerman, Miss., and I will see that it is used as you direct. Brother Cayce's death was a great shock to us Mississippi workers. We miss him so much, but must realize that it means more work for each worker in this State. The great work he had started must not be neglected. We pray that our Heavenly Father will send some one to take up the work that he was doing. I was with him at Columbus the week before he was called up higher. He had twelve meetings booked besides the Jackson meeting. Some one else will be needed to hold them. I am busy preaching every Lord's day and working on the farm when at home."

Do not forget to make a liberal contribution on next Lord's day for the Tennessee Orphans' Home.

All orders for "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons" should be mailed to N. B. Hardeman, Henderson, Tenn.

J. W. Dunn writes from Newbern, Tenn.: "Our crowds are large in our mission meeting here. I am to begin at Dyersburg, Tenn., on Sunday, May 6."

L. L. Yeagley will begin a meeting at the New Shops Church, West Nashville, next Sunday. Brother Yeagley preached for the Pilcher Avenue congregation last Sunday.

C. D. Crouch has located with the church in Ashland City, Tenn. One of the faithful preachers of Texas has returned to his native State. The churches in Tennessee will find in Brother Crouch a preacher of no mean ability. Congratulations to the places where he may labor!

A. D. Dies' meeting with the brethren at Eighth Avenue, North, this city, started into the second week last Sunday, with two added up to and including Sunday night—one confession and baptism and one restoration. Good audiences and splendid interest. The meeting will continue over next Sunday.

F. B. Srygley preached the commencement sermon at the high school in Lynchburg, Tenn., last Sunday, and preached for the brethren at night. The Lynchburg church appears to be doing very well. While many of the old members have passed away, others have taken their places and the work moves on as of old.

P. G. Potter writes from Dibrell, Tenn., under date of May 1: "Our regular weekly meeting and Bible study was well attended at the church here on last Lord's day. We had a very fine talk by Elder I. G. Gribble. F. C. Sowell, of Columbia, Tenn., has promised to assist us in a meeting to begin on the fourth Lord's day in July."

From Willie Hunter, Livingston, Tenn., Route 1: "I preached three times last Lord's day in Jackson County—at Sugar Creek in the forenoon, Big Bottom in the afternoon, and at Hurricane at night. Very good crowds at all places, and the cause seemed to be in very good condition. I met many old friends and acquaintances."

Subscribers will please note that we are not making a reduction to widows or preachers this year. We reduced the price of the Gospel Advocate to two dollars per year so it would be in the reach of all. Widows and preachers paid two dollars last year without a murmur, and we are sure they will cooperate with us and pay the full price this year.

C. M. Pollas is starting into the second week of the meeting on Charlotte Avenue, this city, with twenty-one added up to and including Sunday night. Eighteen of these were by confession and baptism and three by statement. If this congregation continues to grow, as it doubtless will, it will need the large house which it has recently built. The gospel is yet God's power to save.

From John Hayes, Athens, Ala., Route 8, May 1: "I have moved back to my native county and traded for a small tract of land where I am now living. There is one more family of the church of Christ in this community, and we want to begin to break bread every Lord's day in the school-house near us instead of going four miles to worship. These people have known me from my boyhood, and I want to help them."

J. C. Foster, Hillsboro, Texas, writes: "The church here is fine—an active, faithful, membership, with a welcome for all who come into our midst. I trust my third year with this church will result in greater good than the two preceding years of pleasant labor. The Gospel Advocate comes to a number of homes in this congregation. During July and August I will be in protracted meetings, with other congregations. August I will spend in Tennessee."

From R. E. Wright, Los Angeles, Cal., May 2: "Sunday, April 30, was a most glorious day at the Central church of Christ, 1720 South Flower Street. Our auditorium was filled, and more chairs had to be secured to seat the people. The largest crowd in our history. At the close of the morning service four came forward to cast their lot with us. This congregation was four months old last Sunday, and we have just about doubled our strength in that time. There is not a drone in the hive. When in our city, come and see."

E. D. Martin writes from Chattanooga, Tenn., May 6: "The church here is moving gloriously onward, with increased interest. The Lord's-day services have doubled and tripled in attendance in the last six months. R. E. L. Taylor closed a ten-days' meeting with us last Wednesday evening. The church experienced a spiritual awakening, with twenty additions and the membership materially strengthened. Brother Taylor is a humble, practical, and forceful speaker; moreover, Christianity is exemplified in his earnest, consecrated life."

A. K. Ramsey writes from Forest Hill, La., May 5: "I would like to say a word in behalf of C. C. McQuiddy, of this place, who is now devoting all his time to gospel work. He was reared at Wartrace, Tenn., but has lived in Louisiana for a number of years, and has done considerable mission work at his own charges, and has helped otherwise. He is now giving all his time to mission work and has several points under his care; but as these cannot support him, he must either have assistance or give up a promising work. The churches in Tennessee might be glad to help a native son do mission work in Louisiana."

From J. W. Atkisson, St. Louis, Mo.: "Moses E. Lard's 'Commentary on Romans' is an excellent work; but when he reaches the fourteenth chapter of Romans, in the summary he says: 'A brother who is weak in belief, and consequently narrow in his views, we are nevertheless to accept; but, in receiving him, we must let alone those thoughts of his which arise out of his weakness. Their correctness or incorrectness is not for our decision.' Now, does that have reference to those brethren who are moving heaven and earth—and all Hades, too—to prevent the Bible being taught in the schools and colleges, or any other way, except as they dictate?"

A sister asks: "Is it scriptural to use words of our own in praying, or should we pray the prayer Jesus taught in Matt. 6: 9-13?" We should use our own words and express our desires in harmony with the will of God. The Savior said in the text referred to: "After this manner therefore pray ye." We should study carefully the manner of the prayer and make it our model in our petitions. As evidence that the apostles did not understand that they were to use only the words of this prayer, there are instances in which they prayed, and their prayer was heard, and yet they did not use these words. (See Acts 4: 23-31.) Let us study it, not to repeat the exact words, but to get the manner of the prayer.

T. A. Phillips, of Lewiston Orchards, Lewiston, Idaho, desires to make a statement through the Gospel Advocate to the brethren of the churches of Christ. He says: "I obeyed the gospel in Oklahoma in 1909, and preached for several years among the 'loyal' disciples. In the latter part of 1917 I began preaching for the 'progressives.' But I have come to find myself more and more out of harmony with their spirit and methods. Many of their leading men admit that they have become a denomination and have ceased to stand for the principles of the Restoration movement. Therefore, I have decided to turn away from them entirely and to work with the free churches of Christ. I will labor with the congregation at Lewiston Orchards. I closed a week's meeting with this congregation on Sunday, April 23, resulting in five additions to the congregation—three baptized and two coming from the Christian Church. The congregation is small, having only fourteen members when the meeting began, but I never saw a more faithful band of Christians than they. They are going to build a house for the preacher's family soon."

W. S. Long, minister of the church of Christ at Washington, D. C., writes as follows: "It is a pleasure for me to say that the church in Washington is going forward peacefully and faithfully in the work of the Lord. Our loss in membership was caused by quite a number losing positions in the government service and by the death of Graham Egerton. In a religious paper of March 28 there appeared a very unkind statement regarding the church here. I have worked daily with this congregation for nearly four years, and it gives me pleasure to say that it stands, as always, true to the New Testament. We do not make the use of helps in the study and teaching of the Bible a test of fellowship, but that in no sense makes the church unscriptural. People should not condemn faithful brethren because they use maps, charts, blackboards, outlines, commentaries, quarterlies, or dictionaries, or if they read the Gospel Advocate. A. Campbell, Moses E. Lard, Ben Franklin, Tolbert Fanning, T. B. Larimore, J. A. Harding, David Lipscomb, and other of the nobles of our pioneer brethren approved of their use, and we know these brethren were true to the Bible. Neither did these brethren condemn men for having a school to help young people to get a good education, and we should not condemn such good work. Let us not fall out with our beloved brethren because they have a good school, or build an orphan home to care for the poor and helpless, or publish good lessons on the Bible, or publish a paper. 'Let all things be done in love.'"

The Little Boy Jenks.

BY JOSIE KITTRELL KIRK.

Mother sat the sewing-room window, work in hand, humming an air that carried with it a little bit of loneliness. The girls, of course, were at school, and daddy was in town for the day. The September sun shone warm and bright and the glad tinkle of cowbells came from the distant pasture hills, and under the swaying hollyhock that adorned the back fence could be heard the contented chirp of old mother Biddy and her thrifty flock.

"No, I don't wish Jenks stayed in the house more," mother mused. "It's better for him to be out stirring around, learning what he can."

At that moment a step sounded on the porch and his little bare feet could be heard pattering down the hall to the sewing room.

"Mother," he called, in eager excitement, "I've got me a nest of little pet lizards in that old pile of lumber by the woodshed."

"How came them pets, dearie?" she asked.

"'Cause I've caught the old mammy lizard," he explained, at the same time pulling from his pocket a writhing, wriggling lizard.

Mother could scarcely refrain from an expression of horror at the sight, but the eager innocence in the little face restrained her.

"See here, I've made a little house out of this match box—see the little windows in it, how nice I've fixed it for her; and I'll feed her good and take her back to the little ones every now and then, and they'll get to thinking I'm their mammy and she's their sister."

Mother enjoyed to the fullest a genteel laugh, and loneliness for the afternoon had entirely vanished.

This mother was the mother of three. Marjorie was sixteen and Sylvia was a bit past seventeen. They went into the city on Monday and stayed until school for the week was over, and the cares of home were left to daddy, mother, Jenks, and Joe, the hired boy. Jenks was seven years old, and wore blue overalls which blended well with his little brown face and hands and feet. His emphatic manner of standing was very erect with quite a prominent abdomen, and from a side button dangled a tobacco sack rattling with dimes, pennies, etc., and little slips of paper on which were written the amounts different members of the family had borrowed from him. Lending money was quite distasteful to him, and he abhorred the thought of letter mailing, and withal possessed many peculiarities of his very own. However, he was a great lover and student of nature, and chose at all times to enlighten some one along the line of birds, trees, flowers, and so on. And from a standpoint of wisdom it is agreed that the nature lover is the happiest creature God has upon the earth.

One afternoon the Butler car was speeding down the white country highway that led from the city to the sunny farm on the river. Besides the Butlers were Jenks' sisters coming from school for their few-nights' vacation. As they neared the boundary of the meadow field they beheld, perched on the fence, a little boy with a string of speckled trout that he had caught in the clear, gurgling water of the meadow brook.

"O!" exclaimed Sylvia, "there's our little nature-loving, money-loving—"

"Sister-loving boy!" chimed in Majorie.

Jenks made it a rule to have some kind of surprise for his sisters every time they came home; and after he had presented each with her individual bouquet, he felt called upon to help entertain the Butlers, who were regarded as people a little high up. After no little effort to procure his victim, he came into the parlor with a huge bulldog on which to demonstrate in regard to its characteristics. But Sylvia, who admired and was admired by Ray Butler, whispered to the little man to take the frog out and talk about something else for a while, whereupon he decided that he, too, admired Ray Butler and proceeded to flatter him thus:

"I'm going to grow a pomp just like yours, for I think yours is pretty. You know how I'm growing it? I just get one of the girls' old wore-out or nearly wore-out stockings and cut it off close to the top and tie a string around one end, and then I go to the old mill pond that is behind the sheep barn and dive and dive till my hair all lays back straight, and then I pull my stocking cap on and let it stay. I sleep in it, too."

Sylvia moved a little restlessly and gently hinted that the little boy go and see if mother hadn't an errand for him.

"All right, Sylvia; but, Sylvia"—he spoke in half-whispered, confidential tones just loud enough for Ray to catch—"if you want to borrow any money this time, daddy's got a whole lot. I saw him put three or four bills in his pocket-book to-day."

With an affectionate slap on the little boy's shoulder, Ray to some extent relieved Sylvia of a little embarrassment, for he had heard of Jenks and his views on the money question before.

So, with a self-satisfied air Jenks emphatically stepped out on the lawn where Marjorie and James Dayton were in the usual seriousness of a usual make-up after a usual difficulty.

"Marjorie, had you ever heard that bullfrogs' eggs got a whole lot bigger just before they hatch? And I'll bet you don't even know what kind of frogs tadpoles make."

"No, sonny; run along."

"Well, I am—I'm going now down to my little frog house in the sand. I put my little frog to sleep in there every night."

"And does he sleep there all night, little pal?" asked James, quite interested.

"Yes, he does, but he gets up awful soon every morning. Frogs sure do get up soon. He's gone every morning when I get there. Marjorie, you wake me up soon in the morning."

And cherishing this promise, the light-hearted little boy sped down the lawn to the sand frog-house.

When he returned, the pretty farmhouse was brilliantly lighted and the guests were enjoying Mr. and Mrs. Grant's hospitality at a delicious country supper in which Jenks' trout were prominent.

As he entered the dining room all eyes were turned upon him in amazement, for from his little brown hand were dangling six little water-moccasin snakes, wriggling in confused twistedness. A look of disappointment overshadowed his face as mother cold-heartedly ushered him to the kitchen with the promise that a piece of trout and a glass of tea would soon follow.

Those visitors were so hard to entertain, nothing he did seemed to entirely suit; so he purposed in his heart to leave the fancy visitors and go to Mrs. Grigsby's in the morning to trade some. The oldest little white "bantie" had lost his tail, and he knew Joe had knocked it out by the roots with a stick, for he had told Jenks a few nights before that if it didn't quit eating out of the cow trough he would knock his tail off, and that was too much for Jenks.

After his prayer had been said and the good-night kisses been given, he confided to mother that he was going over to Mrs. Grigsby's in the morning to swap Jack Sprat for one of the goslings she was raising. It might be well to say that Mrs. Grigsby and Jenks were fast friends and had many things in common along the line of domestic affairs. Mrs. Grigsby was a low, stout woman who always smiled, and wore some very large, coarse shoes. She had worlds of fowls of every color, and a bread box that was never without molasses cookies.

It might be well, too, to describe the little rooster Jenks had in mind to trade Mrs. Grigsby. He was a little white bantam that had ruled the barnyard and imposed on the cow trough for nigh on to ten years. Besides losing his tail, he had lost nearly all of his wing feathers, and his comb that had stood the severity of many winters had changed from red to brownish white-edged color, and owing to the gout that he had nursed so long he hadn't a toe or toenail that touched the ground, but he crippled on large knots that were on the bottoms of his feet. At the preposterous idea of trading Jack Sprat to any one for anything, mother gave her little boy a hard squeeze and asked if he were beside himself.

Marjorie's promise to wake him early in the morning served a twofold accommodation to Jenks. He went to the spot where Jack Sprat was securely imprisoned and got him and went on by the sand frog house, only to find that, as usual, he had arisen too late for "Sir Froggie."

On his return the visitors were again seated at the table, echoes of merriment ringing therefrom. Jenks entered the room with the little rooster tucked snugly under his arm and his head bowed in bitter disappointment. His trouser legs were wet with the morning dew and beads of perspiration stood on his little brown forehead.

"Where is the man going, or where has he been?" asked daddy.

"I've been to Mrs. Grigsby's to trade Jack Sprat for one of the goslin's, but she didn't want to sell any of the goslin's," he almost sobbed.

Even the slice of buttered toast and brown chicken leg along with the molasses cookie couldn't atone for the injury Mrs. Grigsby had done Jenks in suggesting that he carry Jack Sprat back to see what mother thought of the trade.

"And son," said mother, "you didn't know what mother thought—"

"Yess-um, you told me to decide for myself, and I decided I believed I'd just carry him on." Such an outburst of laughter was a puzzle to Jenks. He couldn't for the life of him see the center of amusement.

He was really relieved when the guests were on their way back to town, even if his heart was brimming with love and admiration for Ray Butler.

And when he and mother were alone in the house, he ventured—

"Mother, I believe I'll just keep Jack Sprat a while longer and give him to Sylvia and Ray for a marryin' present."

"O," said mother, "Sylvia has no such foolish idea in her head. She is not through school yet."

"Yes, but you know the new green seat under the magnolia tree? I was up in the tree when it was moonshiny, and they was sittin' there. He told her how pretty and nice it would be to go to California and live. His aunt lives there, and oranges and everything grows out there. And, anyway, I'd rather Sylvia'd marry him than for Marjorie to marry James Dayton; for old Mr. Butler's rich, and Sylvia never would want to borrow any more money then."

"But I don't want either one of them to marry," said mother, "and you and mother will just have to put our wits together and make it so pleasant for them at home that they won't want to marry."

"All right," returned Jenks, keenly feeling his responsibility.

But Jenks was right about the conversation he heard; for ere long, despite their protest, Sylvia and Ray let the foolish idea mature into action and went to California without old Mr. Butler's cash. They went, just they, with hearts full of love and heads full of dreams and left a missing link in the chain at home.

But even the dreamland of gentle sunshine, balmy breeze, and luscious fruit held its disappointments for inexperienced youth, and cares were more numerous and money less plentiful than nearer the Atlantic Coast.

Mother thought she could read between the lines of Sylvia's letters a little homesick feeling and a realization of hardships, and one day she cried over one of her letters.

This softened Jenks' already soft little heart until he got up all of the little soiled, worn, oft-looked-at pieces of paper on which were written the numbers of pennies that Sylvia had in time borrowed from him. "Send these to her; they will help some," he said.

When the letter containing the papers reached Sylvia, she read it all, and laughed and cried and looked at the papers over and over again with bitter remorse that she had kept the darling's little possessions so long.

When Ray came in the evening, she met him with the letter in her hand.

They sat down on the steps and read and laughed and talked of home. Suddenly Sylvia raised her eyes and looked at Ray with a conquered, satisfied look.

"This prodigal son is going to arise and go to his father."

"Go to your Jenks, you mean."

"I guess I do. I can't live without my little inspiration."

"And I think I need him, too," said Ray. They clasped their hands in dreamy silence—they were going home—going home.

All the home folks met them at the train but Jenks.

"It'll be sweeter to find him at home, anyway," suggested Sylvia.

Sure enough, standing at the gate was the little boy. A bunch of meadow daisies was in his hand and a little story of how he caught some little rabbits was on his lips.

As Sylvia gave him another gentle squeeze, she said: "I don't know what my ambition may be some day, Jenksie darling, but now it's to stay on this beautiful farm with you and the rest."

I have a green cage ready for thee.
Beauty-bright flowers I'll bring thee anew,
And fresh, ripe cherries, all wet with dew."

"Thanks, little maiden, for all thy care,

But I love dearly the clear, cool air.

And my snug little nest in the old oak tree."

"Little bird! little bird! stay with me."

"Nay, little damsel! I'd rather fly

To greener fields and warmer sky;
When spring returns with pattering rain,
You'll hear my merry song again."

"Little bird! little bird! who'll guide thee
Over the hills, and over the sea?"

Foolish one! Come in the house to stay,
For I'm very sure you'll lose your way."

"Ah, no, little maiden! God guides me

Over the hills and over the sea;
I will be free as the rushing air,
And sing of sunshine everywhere."

Advertisements.

BY J. C. M'Q.

The producer must sell his products or make a failure. By means of advertising he makes known his products to the public. The manufacturer, the dealer, and the producer should be truthful in advertising their goods. A dishonest advertiser is a curse to the business. He hurts every honest advertiser. The same is true of the merchant. The dealer who lies about his wares leads the customer to think that all merchants are extortioners. Merchants should co-operate with each other in exposing and driving the dishonest dealer from the business. Honesty in business should be practiced by both merchant and customer. Honesty and truthfulness in business would be helpful to all concerned. A dishonest preacher influences the world to regard the true, faithful preacher with suspicion.

The dishonest advertiser is a detriment to the business. Every time he misrepresents his goods, he hurts the honest advertiser whose advertisement appears in the same journal. Untruthful, dishonest advertisers also destroy the value of the journals in which they advertise as advertising mediums.

Dependable, truthful, and honest advertising is necessary to the successful transaction of business. Legitimate advertising should be encouraged and fostered by all. Every journal should, through its advertising columns, inform its readers of reliable merchants, dealers, and manufacturers. The readers of a paper would appreciate a paper very much if from actual experience they learned that every advertisement appearing in its columns was reliable. The readers, in turn, could confer a favor upon the paper in which the advertisement appeared by informing the advertiser in what paper he read the advertisement. Honesty is needed in the advertiser, in the customer—in fact, in all our business relations.

It is hardly fair to single out one line of business and charge that those engaging in it are frauds, while those in other lines of business are entirely reliable. The Medical Association singles out patent medicines and condemns them in toto. The association thinks they are all harmful and that the dealers in patent medicines are robbing the afflicted of their living. We nowhere read in the Bible of any one spending all his living on a "patent-medicine vender," but we do read of a woman "who had spent all her living upon physicians, and could not be healed of any." The experience of thousands is the same as that of the woman of whom we read in Luke 8: 43. I have spent comparatively little for patent medicines, but I have spent much on physicians, and without any very great relief. I do not fall out with the physicians on this account. Many of my best friends are physicians, and I regard them as most excellent gentlemen. Often have I experienced temporary relief by the use of patent medicines. Many have done this rather than take morphine. Many patent medicines are good, but no medicine should be advertised as a "cure-all." Mistakes have been made in advertising patent medicines, but it is not just to condemn all patent medicine on this account. All advertising should stand on its own merit.

I have decided so soon as our present advertising contract has expired to discontinue all medical advertisement. The advertisements that do appear in the Gospel Advocate will be closely censored in the hope of increasing the value of the advertising in the Advocate.

For many years the advertising in religious papers has been light, so the publishers of such papers have derived very little revenue from the advertising in their journals. Cutting off all medical advertising will decrease our already small receipts from advertising. Our subscribers can help us overcome this deficit by increasing the circulation of the paper.

We are counting on our readers doing all they can to help us make the Gospel Advocate a first-class religious journal. We want the hearty coöperation of every one who loves the truth and is opposed to all innovations. Our aim and ambition is to teach the truth without addition or subtraction.

"The Cole Lectures," at Vanderbilt.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The annual lectures at Vanderbilt University, entitled "The Cole Lectures," were delivered this year by Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of New York City. The statement that Mr. Fosdick is a representative of the destructive higher critics will hardly be called in question by those who with any degree of intelligence read his lectures. This most destructive species of infidelity is sometimes paraded under the name of "the new thought," for the purpose, no doubt, of giving it a gloss of respectability. It assumes great learning, and mocks at the Bible account of creation and the government of the world.

This man closed one of his lectures with these words:

There must be some fundamental reconstruction in the Christian church to meet the changed attitude of the world.

This very radical and revolutionary method suggested by this man of letters has for its taproot the poison of unbelief. No man can believe the Bible to be a revelation from God to man, inspired by his Spirit, and make such a statement as Mr. Fosdick is reported to have made. The man has a very inadequate conception of the God of the Bible, or else he does not believe in him at all. His statement strips God of his infinite attributes and puts him on a level with finite man. He says in substance that God was neither wise enough nor powerful enough to give to the world a system and institution sufficiently adequate to meet the demands of the ages through which the world should pass, but ignorant man must change, modify, and adapt Christianity "to meet the changed attitude of the world!" He assumes, without offering one iota of valid proof, that Christianity as a system was incomplete at its birth, and that it must grow with the ages, subject to the changes and amendments according to the wisdom and will of man.

A few quotations from this learned (?) man will give the reader his conception of God and the Bible. Note this:

In a progressive world no truth is more certain than that change is vital to the life of every institution having its being within it.

Thus, with a sweep that includes the institution of Christianity, this man dogmatically asserts that "change is vital to the life" of the system Christ founded. Again, he says:

The test of knowledge in modern life is the capacity to cause change. Controlled change has become the first desire of modern life; and when Christianity in this new world of thought tries to maintain changelessness, it will fall behind. A Christianity which tries to remain static in a progressive world would prove an anachronism.

According to this man, the system of which Christ is the Author was suitable only for the first age of its birth, and it must be revamped as the ages come and go to meet the demands of a changing world! The entire six lectures were composed of just such evidences of a lack of faith in God and in his word. These are the only kind of lecturers Vanderbilt University invites to talk on the exalted theme of religion, hence the atmosphere of skepticism which pervades the institution.

W. J. Bryan is doing one of the greatest services to the world in lecturing in defense of the Bible against such attacks as Harry Emerson Fosdick and thousands of others are making. But he is sometimes turned down by professed believers in God's word. I say professed believers, because that is all they are. Please note the following from the Christian Standard:

SHALL BRYAN SPEAK AT KANSAS CITY?

[Editorial in The Lookout of April 30.]

William Jennings Bryan has been denied the privilege of speaking before the International Sunday-school Convention at Kansas City.

The Christian Register (Boston) says:

"Mr. Bryan was chosen by the Program Committee; but when his name was submitted to the Executive Committee, the latter would not approve his appearing. The reason given is his hostility to the modern interpretation of the Bible, to which a considerable part of the constituency on the International Sunday-school Council of Religious Education adheres."

The Kansas City Times reiterates the statement.

The Kansas City Journal reports an indignation meeting at the Bales Avenue Baptist Church of that city in which three hundred people protested against Mr. Bryan's treatment.

Myron C. Settle, general secretary of the Kansas City Sunday-school Association, and prominent in arranging for the convention, says (quoting the Journal):

"The smaller committee decided the 'Commoner's' views were not in entire accord with those of the association, and asked him to withdraw his acceptance. A gracious acceptance was received from Mr. Bryan, in which he stated he would gladly resign his place."

The Lookout was so aroused by such high-handed dealings that we immediately sent out three telegrams of inquiry to Mr. Settle, Mr. Bryan, and Robert M. Hopkins, chairman of the Executive Committee of the International Sunday-school Council of Religious Education. The telegram to Mr. Hopkins is typical of all:

"Kansas City newspapers report the Executive Committee of the International Association will not allow Mr. Bryan to speak at coming convention because of his views on the Bible and evolution. Is this true? Wire reply by 10 A.M., April 19. If true, Lookout will start nation-wide campaign demanding retraction of committee's decision."

Mr. Settle replied as follows:

"It is not true that International Sunday-school Association Executive Committee denied Bryan privilege of speaking on grounds mentioned in your telegram. Subcommittee of eight, responsible to convention committee of forty-five, did do so."

Mr. Bryan's reply was:

"Invitation withdrawn. Reason given, only technical speeches from Sunday-school officials expected."

Mr. Hopkins has not yet replied.

The situation seems to be that Mr. Bryan was asked to speak at one of the sessions of the convention by a local committee on arrangements; Mr. Bryan accepted. A subcommittee of eight, responsible to a committee of forty-five, asked Mr. Bryan to withdraw his acceptance; Mr. Bryan has withdrawn. The general impression is that Mr. Bryan was refused the platform because of his pronounced and courageous views on the Bible and evolution. The technical reason given by the subcommittee is that "only technical speeches from Sunday-school officials are expected."

The Lookout does not agree with everything Mr. Bryan believes or says, but we do honor him as a fearless, loyal, and courageous defender of God's word and evangelical Christianity. He has no peer in this field. He is a distinct and distinguished addition to any program. We believe that Mr. Bryan, the man, deserves better treatment at the hands of a Christian convention than he has thus far received from the "subcommittee of eight."

If there are to be "only technical speeches from Sunday-school officials" (or specialists—Ed.) at the Kansas City gathering, it will be the first International Sunday-school convention run on that basis. We sincerely doubt that this one will be. Anyway, Mr. Bryan is a Sunday-school man and teaches one of the largest Bible classes in the world at Miami, Fla. Even from this standpoint he is eligible to a place on the program.

The real issue, however, seems to be the pronounced loyalty of Mr. Bryan to the word of God. His courageous defense of the old Book against the onslaughts of the higher critics is not wanted at Kansas City. His smashing blows at the evolutionary hypothesis are not wanted at Kansas City. His loyal plea for a return to the Christianity of the apostles is not wanted at Kansas City. It is a well-known fact that there are men of pronounced "liberal" tendencies in the councils of the International Association, and it is entirely within reason to attribute the action of the "subcommittee of eight" to their antipathy to Mr. Bryan's views. In fact, Mr. Settle says this is true, in his telegram and his published interview in the Journal.

We are pursuing further our investigation of the facts in this case. We will give our readers the whole truth as we are able to get it.

If it is true that Mr. Bryan was asked to withdraw his acceptance on account of his views on the Bible and evolution, The Lookout will start a nation-wide campaign to demand a retraction of the subcommittee's decision or appeal to the overhead committee of forty-five for fair play. Things have come to a strange pass when a man is barred from a Christian Sunday-school convention because he believes that the word of God is inspired and that God created man out of the dust of the earth.

From an exchange we have the following estimate of this Cole lecturer:

The Federal Council has put out a Lenten program and booklet, entitled "The Fellowship of Prayer." Of this the Lutheran says: "The very fact that a quotation from Harry Emerson Fosdick appears as a seed thought in every day's devotion is evidence that the booklet is made to voice the salvation-by-works doctrine of the new theology."

No wonder the land is filled with skepticism; and yet parents will send their children into its very hotbed of skepticism. This so-called "new theology" with which the world is afflicted is only another name for German rationalism that has spread its slime across the face of the earth.

"Each small duty is a tiny, steady lamp which the Christian must fill with the oil of steadfast obedience." You will find a lot of satisfaction in looking cheerfully on the dark side of life.—Exchange.

The New Baptist Confession of Faith.

BY F. B. S.

Often in debating with the Baptists have I heard them deny that the Baptists had a "Confession of Faith." These debating Baptists have been stout in their denial of this well known fact. They have been claiming that the Baptists take the Bible, and the Bible alone, as their guide, their creed, and their "Confession of Faith." All well-informed people knew they were either mistaken or that they were trying to hide something which they were unwilling to undertake to defend. But to show that they have a "Confession of Faith," I quote from the Western Recorder of April 27, 1922, the following:

We have received from Dr. W. P. Throgmorton, the venerated editor of the Illinois Baptist, Marion, Ill., an article on "Confessions of Faith and the Like." We greatly regret that the article came too late for publication, wholly or in part, in the present issue. This will appear next week.

Dr. Throgmorton has been more actively and intimately related to the center of theological differences between elements of the Northern and Southern Baptist Convention than any man of whom we know. He is qualified to speak as few are.

Inasmuch as the question of the wisdom of appointing a committee from the Southern Baptist Convention to co-operate with a similar committee of the Northern Convention in getting out a new Baptist "Confession of Faith" is sure to come up at Jacksonville, we wish that every Baptist in the South might peruse the article by Dr. Throgmorton before we go to the convention.

Notice, the Western Recorder says: "The wisdom of appointing a committee from the Southern Baptist Convention to co-operate with a similar committee of the Northern Convention in getting out a new Baptist 'Confession of Faith' is sure to come up." Now, I want to ask: if the statement, "a new 'Confession of Faith'" does not imply an old one; and if there is an old one, what becomes of the denial of these one-time great debaters that the Baptists had a "Confession of Faith?" The only charitable conclusion is that these debaters did not know themselves what they had. I wonder how this committee of Southern Baptists in co-operation with a like committee of Northern Baptists can get out a "Confession of Faith" for the Baptists. Are the Baptists of this country willing for these committees to say what they shall believe? Must they wait till the convention at Jacksonville meets and these committees empowered to make a "Confession of Faith" for them, and will all the Baptists have to swallow it whole, after it is made for them, whether they believe it or not? While these "confessions" claim to be only an expression of what Baptists believe the Bible teaches, will the rank and file of the Baptists have any voice in the making of the "confession," or will not these two committees say what this "confession" shall be, and will the "confession," when made, express even the faith of the two committees? Likely it will be a compromise between the two elements and may not express the faith of either. Creeds and "Confessions of Faith" are usually made that way, and really express the faith of no one on some points. Most "Disciplines" and "Confessions of Faith" commit suicide in the first article by saying: "We believe that the Old and New Testament is a sufficient guide for man." If that is true, then why make the "Confession of Faith?" Cannot all see that this is suicide—that the thing kills itself in its first item? If these committees do get up this new "Confession of Faith" and the Baptists accept it, what will become of their boasted freedom? And if they reject it, what will become of the new "Confession of Faith?" Will not this be an effort on the part of the convention at Jacksonville, through these committees, to legislate for the Baptists of the country? Would it not be well for my Baptist friends to call a halt here? When will the people learn that the Bible is the only guide God has given for man?

But the Western Recorder says: "Dr. Throgmorton is qualified to speak as few men are." If that is true, why not let the Doctor make the new "Confession of Faith?" If these committees make it, they are only men, and there are few as well qualified men as Dr. Throgmorton. No, beloved, I do not believe that the Doctor and both the committees are qualified to make a "Confession of Faith" for God's people. They may make something that will be satisfactory for the Baptists, and these same Baptists may be pleased with it after it is made; but, if so, then I must say that the Baptists are easily pleased. The Bible is good enough for Christians.

Notes from South Carolina.

BY THOMAS H. HURTON.

On April 8, 1922, the death angel visited our little band at Union and claimed for his victim Miss Flora Greer (Mrs. Burton's sister), who has been with us in this work from the beginning. She was truly a missionary, and, as such, her influence in this community will continue indefinitely. She was one of the greatest collaborators I have ever seen. It was her delight to be busy in the work for her Master. She was a good leader in the song service, a competent teacher in the Sunday-school class, and an efficient personal worker, and a more liberal contributor I have never known. Truly our loss is great, but her gain is greater. She was laid to rest in a little churchyard near Pikeville, Tenn. (her girlhood home), to await the resurrection of the just.

Our work here moves along nicely. Two fine crowds yesterday. Brother Gibbs reports his work moving along nicely in Greenville. Any one knowing of any members or interested parties living in that city or community should write him—G. F. Gibbs, Perry Road, Greenville, S. C. We are expecting Brother A. C. Traylor to arrive within a few days to take up the work with us for a while. He is the one who was with us three years ago in our first labors in this field, and it would be hard to find a better collaborator.

By the time this reaches the readers I will be in a meeting in Newport, N. C., the Lord willing. We have only one sister there, but she is anxious for her neighbors to hear the gospel story. Brethren, if you cannot do more for this mission field, pray for us. I believe the best thing that could happen to the church to-day would be for every member to be a missionary for at least one year, for I believe this would make them appreciate the existing conditions, and then all would be willing to do more. We are handicapped in many ways, as I suppose all other workers in similar fields are, at least to some extent; but, by the help of God, we will use to the best of our ability our opportunities to spread the gospel over this neglected field. Remember us in your petitions.

Expression of Thanks.

BY JOHN HAYES.

I hereby express my gratitude and thanks to each one who helped us to buy the horse and buggy. I have moved on a forty-acre tract of land that has a very good house and barn. We have bought the horse and buggy, and every Lord's day I shall go somewhere to preach the gospel and in the summer hold some meetings in weak places.

The only reason I bought here in Alabama (Athens, Route 8) instead of Florida was to be near my wife's mother and brother and sister. Should I be called to the eternal rest first, she will be near them, and they can help her to finish paying for the little home.

I have been asked the question over and over: "Do you intend to quit preaching now that you are on the farm?" No, not as long as life shall last do I purpose to ever lay aside the armor. There is a great field here for preaching, and my only motive in moving to the farm was to have a home for my family where they may make a support after my death.

The two years (lacking one month) spent in Florida was a period full of pleasure to me. I never labored with nobler Christians in my life than those at Bradentown and Cortez and Manatee. They cared for us and helped us to preach the gospel in many places. Oneco also held up our hands in the mission work. There are in these congregations many brave men and noble women whom I shall miss as the days go by. Pray for us and accept our thanks for your fellowship.

Among the Colored Folks

On the second Lord's day in April I was at Thyatira, Miss., preaching morning and night. The work is doing fine at this place.

As I go to my appointments I tell the brethren all about the storm that struck Corinth on March 14, which blew away our house of worship, and I ask every one, both white and colored, to help us in the work of rebuilding, we being few in number in Corinth. I have them meeting from house to house till we can build again. We want to be able to start to build the first of June, the Lord willing. A number of the white brethren have made contributions for this purpose, and we thank them and pray that the blessings of God may continue with them. It will cost us thirteen hundred dollars to build our house, and we have raised among ourselves four hundred dollars. So, brethren, you can see what we need. We ask all who can to help us in the work. Address me at Corinth, Miss., P. O. Box 329. J. HANNOX.

I am glad to say that I was blessed with the privilege of being at nearly all of the services during the Hardeman-Pullias meeting. I am personally acquainted with both of these brethren, and they are both interested in my work.

The first thing I will say about this meeting is, I believe the Spirit of Christ was in it from start to finish. I am glad to say that I baptized the two colored girls that made the good confession at this meeting. In this meeting the colored people were given a fine opportunity to hear the pure gospel; we were given a nice place to sit, where we could hear. While we all know that Brother Hardeman's sermons could not be excelled, and neither could Brother Pullias' singing, I will never forget the fine management of Brother Acuff and Brother Hall. These are two fine men. This meeting was a source of great strength to me, and I feel better prepared to tell the old story of the cross. Brother Pullias has influenced the white brethren at Murfreesboro to use me a few weeks to preach to my people. When he was at Birmingham, Ala., he encouraged me there in my work. I am so thankful for the aid and encouragement from such men.

I am now at Detroit, Mich., in a two-weeks' meeting, and my time is out to-night (May 2). Interest has been good throughout the meeting; and while there have been no additions, the seed has been sown. This meeting is being held in Highland Park. On Lord's day, April 30, in the afternoon, I preached over on East Side, and we had a splendid service. Brother T. York preaches for this congregation, and he is doing a great work in Detroit. I am pleading for unity here, because as long as they divide up, a few here and a few there, they cannot make much headway.

My next meeting will be at Murfreesboro, Tenn. M. KEEBLE.

Tribute to Graham Egerton.

BY W. S. LONG.

On Monday, April 3, 1922, at 3:10 A.M., the angel of death knocked at the door of Brother Graham Egerton's home and bore his noble and righteous spirit to the home of unspeakable joy and peace to dwell with God forever.

Brother Egerton was born in Bombay, India, May 6, 1861, his father being there in the service of the English government at the time. He spent his first college days at Edinburgh, and later studied medicine and surgery in one of England's largest colleges. At the age of nineteen he came with an English colony to Rugby, Tenn. Surgery was the profession he had chosen for his life service to humanity, but just as he was about ready to enter into this work he lost his right hand, making it impossible for him to follow this profession. Courageously he turned to the profession of teaching, and while filling the principalship of a school in Middle Tennessee he met Miss Julia Easley, who became his faithful wife till his death. He studied law in Cumberland University, at Lebanon, Tenn., and was admitted to the State bar.

DISCOVERY THAT REVOLUTIONIZES HOME MEDICATION

Pharmaceutical Chemists Rob Calomel of Nauseating and Dangerous Qualities. New Tablets Named "Calotabs."

Calomel, the most popular and by far the most useful of all home medicines, has at last been purified of its objectionable qualities. The new calomel tablets, bearing the name "Calotabs," are available at drug stores, and, according to druggists, are rapidly taking the place of the old-style calomel tablets. For biliousness, constipation, and indigestion, and for all other conditions where calomel is essential, Calotabs is considered a practically perfect remedy.

One Calotab on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water, that's all—no taste, no griping, no nausea, no danger. Next morning you are feeling fine. Your liver is clean, your appetite splendid. Eat what you please.

Beware of imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checkerboard" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trademark, "Calotabs." The large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest-pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

where he practiced for thirty years. In 1913 President Wilson called him to Washington to accept the office of Solicitor of the Navy, in which capacity he served eight years.

He is served by his wife, Mrs. Julia D. Egerton; two sons, William Graham and Philip Marjoribanks; two daughters, Gertrude and Allis; and two brothers and sisters. From the preaching of Brother Larimore some years ago he learned the word of God "more perfectly" and became a faithful member of the church of Christ. He served the church in Washington, D. C. faithfully, both as a Christian and as chairman of the board of elders. The church has suffered an incalculable loss. He was the leading spirit in the church here, and, with love and honor, every boy and girl, as well as the older ones, felt that they had in him a personal, sympathizing friend. The spirit of Christ filled his very life, making him noble, brave, kind, tender, lovable, sympathetic, reverential, liberal, and long-suffering. His fervent prayers at the Lord's-day services brought us all closer to the throne of God.

Death draws aside the veil which life hangs over our eyes and reveals to us what we have lost. But we thank God that we had with us for a time such a life. In a noble sense he is still with us; his spirit still moves in this church and his influence will draw us closer to Christ. Never has there been an elder more kind, long-suffering, and considerate. He weighed carefully every matter before expressing his views.

During the funeral services his body rested where he had often stood and counseled the church. Addresses were made by the remaining elders and others who had known him and loved him. Many gathered to cover his casket with beautiful flowers and pay to his memory the highest compliments the nobles of earth deserve.

"None knew him but to love him, None named him but to praise."

What joy and comfort the thought of his splendid life must be to his family and friends! It means more to them than earth's millions can buy.

In our sorrow we have unspeakable joy because he has gained heaven's eternal peace, and it was well for him to have the crown of life. Thus we yield him up, committing him, in peace and assurance and hope, to our dear Lord, who by his death destroyed death and by his resurrection restored everlasting life. We know that the love of the Father enfolds and embraces him. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Watch for us; we are coming

"An Ounce of Prevention Is Worth a Pound of Cure."

A disturbance of the even balance of health, which often occurs in these trying days of reconstruction, may cause serious trouble. Nobody can be too careful to keep this balance up.

When people begin to lose appetite or to get tired easily, the least imprudence brings on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it, and should not be denied it; and the best tonic that many people recommend is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping up the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventive that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that "a stitch in time saves nine."

Preventive treatment now and then calls for the use of a good cathartic or laxative, like Hood's Pills, which are purely vegetable and act quickly and thoroughly.

PAINS SO BAD WOULD GO TO BED

Two Women Tell How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Stopped Their Suffering

Iron Mountain, Mich.—"I had terrible pains every month and at times had to go to bed on account of them. I saw your advertisement and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with very good results. I can work all day long now at my sick time. You may use these facts as a testimonial and I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends."

—Mrs. A. H. GARLAND, 213 E. Brown St., Iron Mountain, Michigan.

Xenia, Ohio.—"Every month I had such pains in my back and lower part of my abdomen that I could not lie quietly in bed. I suffered for about five years that way and I was not regular either. I read an advertisement of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women, so I decided to try it. It surely has helped me a lot, as I have no pains now and am regular and feeling fine."—Mrs. MARY DALE, Route 7, Xenia, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for women's ailments. It is especially adapted to relieve women. If you suffer as did Mrs. Garland or Mrs. Dale, you should give this well-known medicine a thorough trial.

Field Reports

Springfield, Mo., May 2.—We began our meeting last Lord's day at the Broadway and Madison Church, with unusually large crowds. This effort bids fair to be one of the best meetings this congregation has ever had. I am doing the preaching and A. N. Phipps is leading the songs.—J. W. Brents.

Mountain View, Mo., May 2.—I closed a meeting at Mount Pleasant, near Bloomfield, Mo., without any additions, but good outside interest. I may be there in September again. I closed at Poplar Bluff, with four additions and the brethren much stimulated. I am now in a good meeting at Mountain View. The cause is prospering here.—M. S. Mason.

Muskogee, Okla., May 1.—I preached for the church at Haskell, Okla., at both services Sunday. Brother J. N. Armstrong was to have begun a meeting there, but, on account of serious illness among the faculty of Harper College, he was unable to be there. The church at Haskell is in a prosperous condition, and we had splendid attendance and interest at both services Sunday.—T. S. Bain.

Kirbyville, Texas, May 1.—Yesterday I preached twice at Bronson, Texas. One was baptized—a fine young man—in the afternoon. No congregation there, but I am to return and lead the few scattered disciples in a meeting there in September, in an effort to establish one. I am devoting my whole time to the ministry of the word, and the brethren are keeping me busy.—J. S. Daugherty.

Livingston, Tenn., May 2.—I am back in this county ready to begin my third summer's work. I preached at Flat Creek on the fourth Lord's day in April and at Hilham on the fifth Lord's day and night. I found the congregation in good working order. Most of my work will be at mission points. I have calls for more meetings than I will have time to hold. My first meeting will be at Elm Grove, to run through the month of June.—J. C. Pendergrass.

Shelbyville, Ky., May 2.—Last Sunday I was at Monticello and Old Valley. I found a good, live congregation at Monticello. The brethren there are better prepared in the Scriptures than many brethren whom I have met at other places. O. F. Shearer is laboring in that field, and the brethren speak in high terms of his faithful efforts. I had a good report from the Shelbyville work when I reached home. We are now meeting in the courthouse, and expect to arrange to have a meeting this fall. Brethren, do not forget our appeal for help.—R. A. Craig.

Fort Smith, Ark., May 1.—I spent the fourth Lord's day in April at Pocola, Okla. There are some thirty members there, but only about fifteen active in the Christian life. The Lord's-day worship is held at the home of Brother Dearing. They have a building planned. Brother J. W. Laudermilk, of Bonanza, Ark., preaches for them. Brother J. C. White, of Bonanza, preaches for the church at Bear Hollow, some miles east of Bonanza. The week and the fifth Lord's day in April was spent with the church at Cameron, Okla. There are a few faithful workers there who are holding forth the word. The house of worship is not completed, but funds are pledged to that end. I am to return for a Lord's-day service. In company with Brother J. H. Evans, a visit was made to Shady Point, Okla. The church there has not been meeting. I will preach for them on the third Lord's day in May. I am sending in the names of quite a number who are to be readers of the Gospel Advocate from all the above places.—R. L. Ludlam, Jr.

Tusculum, Ala., May 2.—I preached at Lynn, Ala., last Friday night. The weather was bad and not many were out. I arrived at Alabama City at half past seven o'clock Saturday night and went direct to Dwight Hall, where about one hundred were assembled for a get-together social meeting. This included both children and grown people, some members of the church of Christ and some not. After a few short talks by Mr. Lener, superintendent of the cotton mill, and myself, a few recitations and songs by the children, sandwiches were served by the ladies. These were prepared in the homes and were served free, and it was not a church supper in any sense of the word. After the Sunday-morning Bible study we had preaching, with about one hundred present, mostly children from the Bible study. I preached to about sixty in the afternoon and to about one hundred at night, at which time two persons, a young man and a young lady, made the good confession. They are to be baptized on Wednesday night by Brother J. H. Harden, of Gadsden. We trust and pray that they may be a power in the work. This is encouraging to the little congregation in Alabama City and gives us hope and inspiration to press on in the good work and thus increase our ability for service in the Master's vineyard.—J. H. Morris.

Natchez, Miss., May 2.—I preached at Carpenter, Miss., about fifty-five miles from Natchez, on Saturday night and on Sunday and Sunday night, to splendid audiences. Brother R. L. Sweeney and family live in this community and work faithfully in the interest of the cause. The few there meet for worship every Sunday. Some came seven and some nine miles in buggies to the services. One sister came to the meeting from Hazlehurst, twenty-nine miles away. I am to begin a meeting in this community on the fourth Sunday in July. The prospects seem good for a fine meeting. After our meeting in July, I shall arrange to visit them as often as possible. Brother and Sister Sweeney are not only faithful in their attendance on Lord's days, but they have put seats in a vacant house on their farm where they call together their friends and neighbors on each Sunday afternoon for Bible study. I preached for them Sunday afternoon, and we had a fine meeting. Brethren M. C. Cayce, Andy T. Ritchie, and W. F. Lemmons have held meetings at this place since Brother Sweeney has been living there. Brother Sweeney's present wife was a Sister Morton, of Cayce Springs, and grew up with Brother Cayce and went to school with him, and she, like almost all who knew him, dearly loved him. The deep regret caused by his very sudden death is affecting many hearts in this much-neglected field, and the work so faithfully performed by him here will long bear fruit to the glory of God. I do trust and pray that the churches will at once send a devoted minister to take up the work where he left it off. No one here, I am sure, feels the loss sustained in his death more keenly than I do. We were planning to do much work together in this field, and I was looking to him as the leader. In my absence thirty-eight were present at the service in Natchez on Sunday morning, and a splendid service is reported. Some came from twenty miles in the country. Our meeting is to begin here on the first Sunday in June. Let the brethren everywhere pray that the name of God may be glorified through our work in this meeting. So far I have heard from no one in response to the appeal for a little assistance in building up the cause here in Natchez. I know it to be a worthy call.—T. C. Fox.

In Memory of Matthew C. Cayce.

BY CHARLES F. HARDIN.

On April 19, 1922, at 8:40 P.M., the immortal spirit of Matthew C. Cayce quietly passed to the great beyond. The death angel made a very hurried visit and shielded him from great suffering. Brother Cayce was preparing for his afternoon bath, at which time he was overcome by gas, never regaining consciousness. He lived something like three hours. Brother Cayce was indeed a hero in the kingdom's fight, a brave soldier in the fray. He died as he had always lived—busy. His conception of the duty he owed to the cause and to his fellow man was of such proportion that he seemed never to have one minute to spend in anything not connected with it. As Jesus called Peter and Andrew from an active life into the life of greater ministry, so also did our Master call this faithful servant to a greater and better life. He seemed not to know what the word "quit" meant; he had no time to get discouraged. It can be truthfully said that he was one of the busiest men in the Master's work. He had a marvelous influence over all he came in contact with. He pressed the work of the Lord with a whole-hearted earnestness, inflexible faithfulness, sleepless energy, and patience that knew no tiring. He had a simplicity of manner and accent of speech that twined the hearts of his hearers around the cross of Jesus and his redeeming love, all the time remaining transparent and invisible as a man. He thoroughly "sunk himself in the gospel scenery." People very seldom complimented him as a preacher, but frequently have I heard people say: "To hear that man preach is to love God more and want to live a better life." If I ever met a man who had more of the real spirit of the Master and who preached because his heart was full of the gospel story and the love of his Lord, I do not remember him. To be with him was but to resolve deeply that you would live a better life, give more, pray more, sing more, visit more sick, comfort more sad and lonely, and to preach with more zeal and love to those who are going astray, heaven's sweetest story. His every sermon was preached as though it would be the last he would ever preach, and was preached with such completeness and comprehensiveness that one would conclude it was the last one he would be permitted to hear and that tomorrow would be the great day of accounts. A person could not hear him preach without feeling his responsibility to his Maker. For him to know a soul was in a lost condition called forth a pity and concern that would cause him to spend sleepless nights. Personally, he was a man that possessed the sweetest spirit, the strongest faith, the most active zeal, the kindest manners, purest life, and the firmest convictions of any man that it has been my good fortune to meet. If he had a weakness or a fault, I did not discover it. I was too busily engaged admiring his manliness and strong Christian character to find it. Truly it can be said of him: "The world is a better place because of his life and work." He sweetly rests from his labors, and, if we live a godly life in Christ Jesus, we shall join him "over there."

Lined Up for Work in California.

BY E. C. FUQUA.

While getting settled in our new home in California and while waiting for the "tent season" to open, I am preaching at the Sichel Street church of Christ, Los Angeles. I love the brethren of this congregation, and I rejoice that, in the providence of God, I was thrown among them on arriving in this State. They are proving "true yokefellows" in every righteous movement, and the future seems to hold the brightest prospects ever visioned by me, which gives me an encouragement and inspiration that is one of the richest blessings allotted to any zealous worker in the Lord's vineyard. Through the cooperation of these brethren—and, I trust, others—I anticipate a splendidly successful campaign with the tent work and in other attempts to reach the people with the word of God. I have never felt like work more in my life than I am here made to feel among these brethren. And to worship with them is a joy. This morning (April 23) the large house was filled and the worship was indeed impressive. I invariably go away from such a worship with a renewed energy and a broader vision and a clearer grasp of the "field work." I have implicit confidence that in whatever good work I may engage I will have the cooperation of these good brethren. The inspiration of this feeling is indescribable; it is "better felt than told." Its effects in all my humble efforts will be seen and realized in the greater good done, too.

I am permanently located at 611 Howard Place, Pasadena, but it is close enough to Los Angeles for me to keep in close touch with the work in that city and at the same time to reach out into the adjacent territory with the message as God opens the way. At Pasadena I have opened again my literature work—printing tracts for general distribution, as I did in Colorado, but on a larger scale. This, with the regular evangelistic work, will be the means of scattering much "seed" over the country generally. Brethren who have been in touch with my tract work in Colorado will please note the change in location and, when in need of tracts, remember to address me accordingly. A greater work than ever will be attempted here—and will succeed, by the help of God.

PALMS OF VICTORY

BY JAMES E. CHESOR.

John, in his vision on Patmos, saw the redeemed, "a great multitude, which no man could number, out of every nation and of all tribes and peoples and tongues, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, arrayed in white robes, and palms in their hands." (Rev. 7: 9.) The reader will note, by examining the entire chapter, that John first saw the throng that were of the blood of Abraham; then he beheld this uncounted multitude referred to above. These two hosts together represent the entire number of the saved, both Jews and Gentiles. Arrayed in white robes and with palms in their hands, they stand before the throne and ascribe praise to the Lamb for their redemption. "And they cry with a loud voice, saying, Salvation unto our God who sitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb." One of the elders inquired of John as to the identity of this great company, presumably with the intention of teaching some important lesson or lessons—why they were there, their character, the reward reserved for them. "These that are arrayed in the white robes," said the elder, "who are they, and whence came they?" When John replied, "My lord, thou knowest," the elder proceeded to answer his own question: "These are they that come out of the great tribulation, and they washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

I shall consume no time in a fruitless discussion of the significance of the four destructive winds that were held pent up at the four corners of the earth until the redeemed should be sealed, nor shall I try to identify the "great tribulation" through which this multitude are represented as having passed. I know that I do not understand many of the symbols of Revelation, and I am convinced that its mysteries are as yet past finding out. Forbearing, therefore, to hazard comment upon the "winds" and the "tribulation," I wish to see what practical and unmistakable lessons may be drawn from the vision—what emphasis of duty, what principle of salvation, what hope of reward, what incentives to service, are set out in the language or may be inferred therefrom. This is as far as I care to go—as far, indeed, as I need to go—in the study of this passage. Wherever commandments, or exhortations, or invitations, or promises, or principles of righteousness, are found, whether in Revelation or in any other book of the Bible, they can be understood and appropriated. They were addressed to man that he might understand them, were written for his benefit, and hence are couched invariably in the simplest terms. Some of the obvious truths and lessons to be learned from the passage under consideration shall receive some attention in this article.

Let us survey this uncounted multitude of saved souls that John beheld. We are amazed at the immensity of the throng. The saved certainly are not "few" in the aggregate, for John saw a tremendously large company of people. The redeemed were, indeed, as the host promised to Abraham, as numberless as the stars of heaven and the sands on the seashore. This host stands before the throne arrayed in white robes, bearing palms in their hands, and they join in a song of praise to the Lamb. It is stated that "they washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb," and that as a consequence they are "before the throne of God; and they serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne shall spread his tabernacle over them." Then follows a wonderful description of their happy state! "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun strike upon them, nor any heat: for the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne shall be their shepherd, and shall guide them unto fountains of waters of life: and God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes."

If we stop to inquire how this vast throng were saved, we shall find the principle taught, not expressly, but impliedly. The Lamb is justly praised for their redemption, but the redeemed themselves had a part in it—a part so important that, if they had refused or failed to perform it, they could not have been saved. They are arrayed in white robes, and those robes they themselves are represented as having washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. Each one had been engaged in robe washing, had washed his own robe, or he would not have been found in the blood-washed company. White robes were symbols of purity and triumph, and those whom John saw had lived lives of purity and holiness and triumphed gloriously. Moreover, they had palms in their hands, which were tokens of peace and victory. Both taken together—robes of purity and palms of victory—are indicative of signal success. Triumphant, exultant, joyous, these saints present an entrancing picture of supernal bliss and felicity—a picture that shows us what heaven is like. And what of special benefit do we learn from this beatific picture? Chiefly this: If we endure unto the end, we shall be saved. But we must fight to win. Robes and palms are for victors.

Let us go a step further. How did the redeemed wash their robes in the blood of the Lamb? How was this robe washing accomplished? Of course, the blood, and not water, was the cleansing element; it made those robes as white as snow; and only the blood could have done this. Water cannot remove the stain of sin. Pilate "took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this righteous man;" but the symbolic act of washing his hands in water was no proof of his innocence. Lady Macbeth, joint conspirator with her husband in the murder of Duncan, with hands reeking in blood, declared, "A little water clears us of this deed;" but her guilty conscience found out later that continual washing could not remove the spots. Only the blood of Jesus Christ can remove the stain of murder or any other sin. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." But how this multitude came into cleansing contact, figuratively speaking, with the precious blood of the Son of God, is an important question. I do not think it a mysterious question, although sectarian teaching has muddled it in the minds of the people. I shall let Jesus and John tell us just what we must do to benefit by the sacrifice of Jesus—how we may wash our robes in the blood of the Lamb. "Blessed are they that wash their robes, that they may have the right to come to the tree of life, and may enter in by the gates into the city." This is Jesus' language as it reads in the Revised Version in Rev. 22: 14. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." This is the same quotation as it occurs in the Authorized Version. I insist that the import of the two renderings is identical, that washing robes and keeping the commandments are exactly one and the same thing. In other words, we wash our robes when we keep the commandments; we wash our robes by keeping the commandments. "Blessed are they that wash their robes;" "Blessed are they that keep the commandments." Keeping the commandments, if both versions are true, is robe washing. I shall now introduce the testimony of John as recorded in his first Epistle. "If we walk in the light as he [God] is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus his Son cleanseth us from all sin." Walking in the light is keeping the commandments of God, and this, according to John, results in cleansing from sin. Hence, by walking in the light of God's revealed will, by keeping his commandments, we come to the efficacy of the blood shed for our redemption and are cleansed in the crimson flow. There are specific commandments for the alien and many additional commandments adapted to the Christian, all blood-sealed, and implicit obedience to them is our only way of reaching the merits of the blood of the Son of God. This blood-bought and blood-washed throng that John saw in his vision had kept the commandments. Hence, they had been permitted to enter in through the gates into the city.

The vast multitude that John saw are represented as having fought a decisive battle; they had been awarded palms of victory. The military imagery in this connection is most happily put, for certainly no other figure would better enforce the intense nature of our Christian struggle or more pleasingly illustrate its final glorious success. It seems to be a favorite figure with the apostle Paul. He pictures the Christian soldier with armor corresponding to that of the Roman legionary—girdle, breastplate, shoes, shield, helmet—and the sword as an offensive weapon, and encourages him to "take up the whole armor of God," that he may be "able to withstand in the evil day, and, having done all, to stand." Likewise he urges Timothy to "fight the good fight of faith." The aged apostle himself had fought many battles for the Lord. "I have fought a good fight," writes the venerable veteran, "I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." He gives all the honor for the triumph, however, to Jesus Christ, "the Captain of our salvation." He exults that "in all things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." He rejoices exceedingly in the victory over the grave and looks forward to a glorious immortality as a triumph of Jesus Christ. "Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? . . . Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Let those of us who have washed our robes also rejoice with joy unspeakable in the triumph of our blessed Redeemer over Satan, the world, death, and the grave, and let us with renewed courage and uplifted eyes fight as did Paul and the early Christians, as did the martyrs, as did the reformers of the last century, as becometh true soldiers of the cross. "The fight is on."

Palms of victory! Christian soldier, do not lose sight of your reward; it is sure. "Henceforth there is laid up for me," Paul declared, "the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give to me at that day; and not to me only, but also to all them that have loved his appearing." Note the happy state of the throng that John saw. Singing psalms of victory, serving God day and night, suffering no sorrow, thirst, or hunger—this was their reward. God, even their God, wiped all tears from their eyes. The heartache, the intense suffering of conflict, the tribulation through which they had passed—all forgot in the exultation of victory. Here are incentives to consecration, devotion, loyalty, activity, in the Lord's cause. Know, Christian soldier, that the irrepressible conflict is on. Stand and fight valiantly in the Lord's army. Let the enemy know that in you, even you, he has a foeman worthy his steel. You cannot fail. Your Captain will lead you to certain victory.

Moodyism.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

Dwight L. Moody was one of the leading religious characters during the last quarter of the past century. I have not access to a library and will not attempt to give accurate data of his early life. He was just an ordinary preacher until the Chicago fire in 1871. At that time he was holding a meeting in Chicago. The night before the fire he had several men at the "anxious seat," and because they did not "come through" as rapidly as he thought they should he became impatient and dismissed the meeting and told them to think it over and come back the next night. But before time for the next meeting Chicago was ablaze, and several of those very men lost their lives in the fire.

He always blamed himself for that, and it is said he never failed to break down when he thought of those men. He was emotional to a considerable degree, and the great fire, which wiped out twenty-one hundred acres of Chicago's finest buildings, rendered a million people homeless, and hurled thousands into eternity, made an impression upon him that never left him. He was chosen and sent to Cincinnati, Philadelphia, New York, and various other large cities to raise money for Chicago's fire sufferers.

He was well fitted by nature and experience for this work and succeeded well. My opinion is that his gathering all denominations together to talk to them about the destitute people of Chicago gave large impetus to the modern "union meeting." He saw what could be done by combining for a certain purpose, and soon after this "union meetings" became numerous. He never forgot how to raise the coin, either. He claimed his work was interdenominational, and so maintained affiliation with no denomination. But I have heard that he was a Congregationalist at first. He believed in and accepted sprinkling and recognized immersion, too.

The world knows he was not an educated man, nor even a brainy man, but he swayed his vast audiences by his emotional nature; he set them on fire with the zeal that blazed in his own soul. Associating with him Ira D. Sankey, a powerful singer of much the same type as himself, he held "union meetings" in all the large cities of America, and then toured the British Empire, including Australia.

Some preachers among us receive a hundred, two hundred, and sometimes three hundred dollars for a meeting; but if one should be offered a thousand, he might die of heart failure or the "bighead." But on many occasions Moody was handed ten-thousand-dollar checks, and told that if he needed more to call for it.

It was in these Moody meetings that the system of "getting religion" was discarded. Perhaps Moody thought it took too long to get them "through" to where they could "feel" something and get up and tell it. Or maybe he was afraid of another fire—who knows? At any rate, it soon became the custom in Moody meetings for the sinner to just stand up or sign a card at the suggestion of the preacher and say he was saved. They caught many who had been partially taught the truth, by taking our position, that "feelings" were no evidence of pardon. Moody believed in salvation by "faith only," and he taught the sinner that if he had faith in Christ and would confess it, he was saved then and there, and that the Scripture that said a sinner was saved by faith the moment he believes is sufficient evidence of pardon. That would be all right if there were any such scripture, but neither Moody nor any one else can find such teaching in the Bible.

This is why there is no "mourners' bench" in the big churches nowadays. Moody's teaching is having its effect. There is no authority for the "bench" and the "agonizing" to "get religion;" but the old system, in my judgment, is much to be preferred above Moody's plan. The old way, at least, did not treat the "great transaction" of becoming a Christian so lightly.

The chief good that came out of the Moody movement is the fight against "higher criticism." Moody, Sankey, Alexander, Torrey, and every one connected with the movement have uncompromisingly fought "higher criticism." Out of Moody's work there grew up the "Moody Bible Institute," of Institute Place, Chicago, and the Los Angeles Bible Institute, and perhaps others.

In Chicago to-day the "higher critics" rally around the University of Chicago, while the Moody Bible Institute is the citadel of the other side. Their work, of course, does not rank with the great university in thoroughness, but they have, no doubt, saved many from higher criticism—otherwise, infidelity.

Moody pretended he believed in Christianity, and preached it strongly from the pulpit, but did not use the Bible as a basis for that union. He only succeeded in starting another sect, very much like the others. He and all of his followers, I have heard, preach against human societies for doing the work of the church. One of their favorite expressions is that the "churches are organized to death." But they organize at least one more before they leave town. "They say, and do not," or say not, and do.

They use very sensible methods in holding meetings, conducting Bible classes, etc. Their methods have been used to some extent by nearly everybody. The advertising of our great meeting in Nashville was exactly in line with the Moody idea of doing such things. They contend for "doctrinal" as well as "evangelical" teaching.

There has been trouble in the Moody camp. Paul Rader, a member of the Christian and Missionary Alliance sect, run principally by German-Americans, captured the Moody church on La Salle Street. Rader does not measure up to the Moody idea on one point, Moodyism divides Christian teaching into two classes; one they call "evangelical" and the other "doctrinal." Moodyism says a preacher should spend something near half his time teaching the doctrines of the Bible on various subjects. But Rader's idea is to spend all the time urging men to get up and say they are saved.

When the crisis came, the Moody Institute bought the old Moody church building, and Rader went out about a mile further and built the Moody Tabernacle. He held a protracted meeting every night for over two years. He has lately been requested to resign, so I was told. This tabernacle seats six thousand. I was there one Sunday night. About four thousand were present. A Mr. Imrie, from Toronto, preached. He was just passing through and they used him. There were over forty—"somethings." They called them "conversions," but they were more like "perversions." This was just a common Sunday-night service. At the Bible Institute I saw over five hundred people in Dr. Fitzwater's Bible class. The pity of it is, he was perverting them, too. He does not understand the Scriptures on anything that I heard him discuss.

They give special attention to "teacher training." The series of such helps printed by the Christian Standard are modeled along Moody lines. They depend a great deal upon personal, individual work. The institution has a small endowment—not enough to run on. Over three hundred thousand dollars must be raised every year by freewill offerings. We have brethren who say that money cannot be raised that way; but the Moody people are going right on with their work, and the money makes its appearance on time.

Some may ask, "Why all this?" Answer: This movement is one of the biggest things in our midst to-day, and is affecting every religious body in America, not excluding the church of God. Note the following quotation from their bulletin, "Catalogue Number," for 1921-1922, page 65: "We believe in the second, visible, and imminent coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ to establish his world-wide kingdom upon the earth." This is article nine of their creed—there are ten. Article four teaches salvation by "faith only;" article six teaches "total depravity" and "direct operation of the Holy Spirit." But we are more interested in article nine. Take the word "imminent." It means "threatening to happen." They maintain this along with their other doctrines, that the "second coming of Christ is threatening to happen." It may be so, but it is pure speculation on their part, for no one knows whether he will come to-day or a thousand years from now. Another point is that he is yet "to establish his world-wide kingdom." According to that, he is not King now, and has no "world-wide kingdom" over which to rule.

Now I think our readers can easily see that the church of Christ has been hit by Moodyism. This may not help much, but we can form some idea as to who hit us. "Beware of false prophets."

Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN E. WILLIAMS.

THE GOOD OF BEING A LITTLE PREACHER.

Preachers, like other things, are classified—some good, some better, and some best. Several years ago Brother J. A. Carter (now dead), of Curve, Tenn., went to Tiptonville to hold a meeting. He warmed up the town. Some got mad and said they would hear him no more. Some had to let down their windows, as they said they could hear him better at home than they could in the meetinghouse.

He baptized a few. Among the number was Dr. M. Donaldson, one of the foremost citizens and physicians of Lake County. Sometime after his obedience to the gospel he sold out in Lake County and moved to Rector, Ark., where he bought land and began the practice of his profession. He found only a few Christians only, and they went about the erection of a house in which to preach the pure, simple gospel and worship God "as it is written." As they were all poor in the things of this world, it required some time and great sacrifice to build. But by "faithful continuance in well-doing" they finished it up ready for a meeting.

"Now for a meeting!" For a man to do the work, they began at the top. Brother Larimore and others of his class were called, but all were busy—had no time. They tried several, with the same result; no one could be found for the time they wanted a meeting. They became discouraged. Finally some one said to Brother Donaldson: "Why don't you get John R. Williams, of Hornbeak, Tenn.?" "Who is Williams? I never heard of him." The man said: "He is a good preacher, a good man, and will do you some good work." Thank God for that man with that recommendation. At that time I was not known as a preacher in Rector, Ark. Upon what that man said of me I was called and could go, and did.

I was directed how to go, and at what time the train would get to Rector. I crossed Reelfoot Lake in a skiff, thence to Tiptonville in a wagon. From Tiptonville to New Madrid, Mo., in a boat. I spent the night in New Madrid. When the time came to leave New Madrid, I learned that the train was from six to eight hours late. Bad news for a little preacher away from home among strangers. Instead of getting to Rector at six o'clock P.M., I got there at 11:30 P.M. Brother Donaldson, knowing the train to be late, went to sleep, depending upon the whistle and noise of the train to wake him. When once asleep, the noise of the train and thought of the arrival of a little preacher had no effect on his sleep. When the train stopped, I got off in the dark, in a strange town; but, stranger still, there was no one to meet me. Nearly midnight, a stranger in a strange place. If another train had come in then on its way back to Cairo, my stay in Rector would have been short. Some preachers know how I felt. After some little time I saw a man coming by. I asked him if he knew where Dr. Donaldson lived. He said: "I am going by his gate, and will show you the way." In a strange place, on a dark night, I followed a stranger. Some faith, I think. He showed me where the Doctor lived and slept. When he was awakened from his sleep, he jumped up, offering many apologies for not meeting me at the depot.

As he was wide-awake and had a little preacher in his home, he began to question me about many things, and preaching especially. From his looks and by the way he questioned me, I thought I could see disappointment in his face, and doubtless he thought the man had lied that told him I was a good preacher. From some angle, it seemed, I did not fill his expectation. Another jolt for a little preacher on his first trip away from home to do service for God! My heart was sad. On Lord's-day morning when I arose, I longed for home in good old Tennessee, and was perfectly willing for the Doctor to try again for a preacher.

Time for meeting. The people began to come, some walking, some on horseback, some in buggies, and some in wagons. One old brother came in a wagon drawn by two yoke of oxen, but the wagon was filled. The meeting started. The singing was not good at all, and song books were very scarce. After the first sermon I could see a little change in the countenance of the Doctor for the better. In a few days he decided the man who recommended me had not lied about it.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

On Monday night, May 1, I preached at Dorris Chapel, ten miles west of Trenton. This is named for Brother C. E. W. Dorris, who preached the first sermon in the house. Brother Fred Blanchard and wife drove me in their car to the place, and we planned to spend the whole week together, but a rain on Tuesday made the roads impassable for his car. Brother Fred is a preacher, singer, and school-teacher, and does fine at all of them, and everybody loves him in these parts.

At Dorris we had a good meeting. I stayed at the home of Brother and Sister J. W. Criswell. Brother Criswell asked me if I knew Gid Riggs. I told him I scarcely knew any one better or more favorably. He is a former neighbor of Brother Riggs.

On Tuesday night I should have been at Yorkville, but was completely rained out. I regret this very much, as I have heard much of the good brethren at that place, and I am sorry I could not see them.

On Wednesday night I had an appointment at Nebo, and Brother Chriswell drove me over. There was a good audience and fine interest. It was one of the best midweek meetings I have had. I did not do much business, as nearly every one already gets the Gospel Advocate. Brother Neeley seems to be expected to take the lead in church affairs. He impressed me as a zealous, godly man. I noticed that he called all the members "Brother" or "Sister." That is something new for this section. Usually it is only the preacher that is called "Brother." But Brother Neely is right.

On Thursday night my cousin, Lee Paschall, brought me to Dyer. I found that the brethren had not given out any meeting. They said they were afraid there would be only a small crowd out. I visited several of the brethren, but did no business to speak of. Nearly all seemed discouraged. One brother told me he had lost four thousand dollars in a land swindle. Some fellow came through this country and took ten men, or maybe more, out to Chowchilla, Cal., to sell them some land. This swindler had them all to make him checks of four thousand dollars each, promising to give the checks back if they did not like the land. They did not like it; and when they wanted their checks, they found he had cashed them and disappeared. I mention this that other brethren may not be caught. The Chowchilla land is good, at least some of it. But the next time a man comes along and asks for four thousand dollars, I just would not give it to him.

From Dyer I went to Kenton and was met at the train by Dr. J. M. Capps, who went right to work helping me get subscribers. I did fine there. We had a good meeting at night. There I met Brethren Rountree and McKee, from Maury County. Sister McKee was formerly Sister Shaw, of Boston, Williamson County, where her father and mother still live.

On Saturday I went to Rives and called on Sisters Cora Coates and Clemmie Hickman, daughters of Mr. John Bates, of Hickman County. I did not see Brother Hickman, but had a nice visit with the others.

Sunday, May 7, I spent with the brethren at Rutherford. It was an enjoyable day for me. Brother B. F. Edmundson seems to be depended upon a great deal. He can lead a song, lead in prayer, teach a class, or wait on the table, and seems kind and sympathetic, and is no doubt a valuable man in the church.

This morning (May 8) I called on Brother and Sister Sullivan. They have both passed the threescore and ten, and both crippled somewhat by rheumatism. But they are strong in the faith of the Lord. They say now they are getting great comfort from the Advocate. I gained strength from talking with them.

I start to-day down the Illinois Central road from Martin to Jackson. The week beginning May 15 I want to spend with Brother John R. Williams going over his old fields of labor.

Brother Henry Sisco, brother to our late Jake Sisco, is now living near Dyer and worshiping at Nebo. I met him seventeen years ago in Perry County.

Twenty-three years ago to-day (May 8) I passed through Nashville on my way to California. The Nashville Bible School was then on South Spruce Street, now Eighth Avenue, South, and Brother F. W. Smith was then holding a tent meeting on the Bible School grounds, and Brother John T. Glenn had just been baptized. Brother Riggs and Brother R. C. Bell were still in school there.

Many New Subscribers.

BY J. C. M'Q.

The list clerk of the Gospel Advocate says last week was the best week the paper has had in a long time. More new subscribers were added to the subscription list. This is encouraging.

Those who love the truth in its simplicity should avail themselves of every means of teaching the word of God. As the press is a great power for good, Christians should use it for teaching the truth. It is inconsistent in Christians to spend much money for the dissemination of reports of crime while they decline to spend two dollars a year for a religious journal to teach the truth. It is not possible for the loyal, conservative members of the church of Christ to enjoy reading a first-class religious journal without giving such a journal their support and encouragement. A few men cannot do the work by themselves. The few may make sacrifices; but unless many others coöperate with them, the paper they publish will not be as good as the best. If conservative disciples want a first-class paper, they must pay the price. All that is good costs something. I would like to make improvements in the Gospel Advocate, but my funds are limited. I can sacrifice only a certain amount.

In our issue of April 27, 1922, Brother E. C. Love published this: "One man said: 'The Gospel Advocate saved me. I didn't realize it then, but I do now.' Another said: 'My wife was won to Christ by reading the Gospel Advocate.'" Many people do not hesitate to say that they were led to a knowledge of the truth by reading the Gospel Advocate. A brother says: "I pay ten dollars a year for my daily paper, but I cannot afford to pay two dollars a year for the Gospel Advocate." This is very inconsistent for a man who loves the Lord Jesus Christ with all his heart.

The brethren can have a first-class religious journal if they want it. A first-class religious paper should be in every home. Encourage your unconverted neighbors to read good papers—papers that preach the gospel without addition or subtraction.

We are receiving a number of new subscribers, but not as many as we can handle. Let us add ten thousand new names to the list of subscribers to the Advocate. It can and should be done. Brother S. F. Morrow says the brethren are pleased with the Gospel Advocate and that five thousand new subscribers should be added in a very short time. Will not the churches lend Brother Love a helping hand in the work? Of course we would not send a man to you if we did not seek your coöperation in the work. Brother Love is doing well, but he would be delighted to send in ten times as many names as he has sent in the past. In helping him, you are helping yourself.

We appeal to you to make a canvass of your community for subscribers to the Gospel Advocate. You will be surprised to find so many members of the church who are not taking any religious paper. In fact, you will be disappointed when you learn how little they are doing for the conversion of sinners. In making the canvass, you will observe that those who read a good religious paper have more spiritual life than those who do not. Some will tell you they have their Bibles to read, but my experience has taught me that those who read a good paper are the most constant and consistent Bible readers. A first-class paper stimulates people to study the Bible.

Speak to the members of your church in behalf of the Gospel Advocate. Ask the elders of the church to help you. You will be delighted to find how many subscribers you can secure with a little consistent effort. Will not every one who reads this either fill out the blank below or get some one else to fill it out?

Valuable People.

The value of a single man or woman of open mind, independent judgment, and moral courage, who requires to be convinced and refuses to be cajoled, is only concerned to be right and not afraid to be singular, deferring to reason but not to rank, true to his or her own self, and, therefore, not false to any man—the value of such a man or woman, I say, is priceless; a nation of such would leaven and regenerate the world.—Prof. James Ward.

Has the Kingdom of God Been Established on Earth by Jesus Christ, or Will It Be in the Future?

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE BY H. W. JONES.

Yes, the Scriptures show God's kingdom "established." Marrs' quibbles prevail not. Jones hasn't "changed position substantially," nor otherwise; it is Marrs' wriggling to escape shameful predicament people get into by espousing false theories, contradicting plain truth. I defined "established"—Marrs needed it. Nothing is "established" without preparatory work—"construction." Every element of "kingdom" existed on Pentecost day: Foundation (Matt. 16: 16-19; Acts 2: 36); Kingship—Jesus exalted King (Acts 2: 1 Tim. 6: 15, 16); territory—world-wide (Acts 2: 39); subjects—those "taught" to "know," love, obey (Acts 2: 37-42); law—Holy Spirit in apostles (Rom. 8: 2; cf. Jer. 31: 31-34; Heb. 8).

Many Roman "kings" reigned, with Tiberius, over conquered nations on Pentecost day! Marrs, not Daniel, said "toes of image represent last part of Gentile empires." Speculative imagination! Daniel nowhere says "kings shall mingle with seed of men." Marrs' imagination again! "Iron and clay" (strength—brittleness) "in it" (fourth kingdom). (Dan. 2: 40-42.) Therefore, divided internally—no escape here! His "O my's" are "S. O. S." distress calls; his references to "stomach" and "bowels," groveling evasions! Debate, don't dodge; don't show worse than weak theory!

But "divided Roman kingdom exists"—eh? Show us; your ipse dixit "cannot pass." Children know Roman kingdom perished centuries ago.

Marrs says: "Context shows Dan. 7: 13, 14 is after the great judgment." Vain assertion! Jones denies.

No, "David not ascended into heaven;" but Christ did, to occupy David's throne forever. (Acts 2: 29-36; Ps. 89: 3-7; Isa. 9: 6, 7.) Shame, his saying, "David's old stool!" (Read Matt. 12: 36, 37.) Heb. 1: 8 shows Christ's "throne," "kingdom" and "scepter of kingdom," existing.

Marrs says "receiving a kingdom" (Heb. 12: 28) "refers to futurity." Present participle, "receiving," future tense, eh? Nonsense! Marrs against grammar, language, Scripture! Heb. 12: 28 evidently means "the saints"—Christians—have received and do "possess the kingdom," as promised. (Dan. 7: 13-18; Luke 22: 28-30; Acts 2: 38-47.)

Standard translations, noted commentaries, sound exegesis (aggregating thousands ripe scholars), render Col. 1: 13, "translated into kingdom;" but Marrs accepts one B. Wilson (with "Advent" leanings) against all, saying, presumptuously, "mistranslation." Discreditable "twisting"—dangerous! Truth is: "God translated" (changed, transformed) "us" (spiritually, not physically nor "locally") "into Christ's kingdom." Paul, "unto the church" (1 Thess. 2: 12), said: "God hath called you into his kingdom." (Another mistranslation—eh?) How were they "called into God's kingdom" and it not established? Answer, Marrs; Jones cannot.

Rev. 1: 9: How could John and brethren be "in the kingdom of Christ" and it not established? Explain, Marrs!

Mark 12: 28-30: Why tell that "scribe" (A.D. 32), "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God," if he wasn't near, the kingdom? Fix that, Marrs! Why instruct people how to "receive God's kingdom," if not near? Please explain!

How could people be "entering in kingdom" (Matt. 23: 13), and it not being constructed? Answer, Marrs!

Jesus said (A.D. 32): "I will build my church. . . . I will give the keys of the kingdom of heaven unto thee [Peter]: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound and loosed in heaven." (Matt. 16: 18, 19.) Observe: (1) "Church" and "kingdom" used synonymously. (2) Peter had "keys of kingdom" to "bind" and "loose" on earth; hence kingdom established during his lifetime. (3) Source of government to be "in heaven;" hence, heavenly King and throne. (4) Pentecost day, Peter did "bind" faith, repentance, and baptism as conditions of being "loosed" from sins (Acts 2); therefore, kingdom of heaven established—"ratified, finished"—Pentecost day. Jesus said: "Some standing here shall in no wise taste of death, till they see kingdom of God come with power." (Mark 9: 1.) Apostles "standing" there. Power came on Pentecost day. (Acts 2: 1-4.) Therefore, kingdom came then. Grapple here, Marrs!

1. Lord's table to be in Christ's kingdom. (Luke 22: 29, 30.)

2. Church of God at Corinth had Lord's table by divine authority. (1 Cor. 10: 16-20; 11: 23-30.)

3. Therefore, Christ's kingdom actually existed A.D. 62.

"No end of peace" in Christ's kingdom since Pentecost!

1. Paul said: "Kingdom of God is righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit." (Rom. 14: 17.)

2. These inward characteristics in Christ's church since Pentecost. (2 Cor. 5: 21; Acts 9: 31; 15: 5; 1 Pet. 8; etc.)

3. Therefore God's kingdom existed A.D. 58.

Marrs has not noticed half my arguments. Getting behind, Marrs! "Gid-up!"

REPLY BY T. J. MARRS.

As Brother Jones asks me to answer all his "arguments" (?), will say: I don't think he has made but one (Col. 1: 13), and that was a bum mistranslation, as I showed. Moreover, by reading Acts 14: 22, the reader can see that Paul and Barnabas testified to the members of three churches that "through great tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of God." Now, if Paul taught the Colossians they were in, and these three other churches that they were out, of the kingdom, then Brother Jones should release Ananias and go give the "leather badge" to Paul. Yes, your 1 Thess. 2: 12 is "another mistranslation." The King James says, "who called you unto," etc. Brother Jones gave it "into," showing he goes beyond inspiration. But the Oxford and the American Standard give it, "who calleth you into his own kingdom." Would it not be strange that God was still calling them into it, after they had been in it several years already? I am not surprised that Brother Jones seeks every bum rendering, for they match his affirmation.

Yes, Brother Jones, Wilson was so well read in Scripture, that he had strong "Advent leaning." He reasons that as "church" and "kingdom" both occur in the same verse, that they are the same thing, therefore came at same time, on Pentecost. Well, let us try that idea: "On this rock I will build my kingdom, and I will (sometime) give you the keys of the church!" Be careful, Brother Jones, the disciples are the "church."

I deny Christ being "King" on Pentecost. Acts 5: 31 says God gave him to be a "Prince" and "Savior." A "prince" inherits the throne, and when the time comes he will be "king." (Acts 1: 6-8 shows Christ would not even tell them the time of his kingdom, but gave them "power" as his "witnesses.") Rev. 1: 5 says he is a "prince of the kings of the earth," showing when he takes David's (earthly) throne he will rule over all their territory. (Now, if church and kingdom is the same thing, will he improve the church by turning these political governments into it?) If he is King now, who is our Mediator—the Pope? You would fix things!

He quotes: "The kingdom of God is peace;" and again: "John was in 'tribulation' and 'in the kingdom and patience,'" Is peace and tribulation the same? No, Brother Jones, it was the Roman kingdom that was giving him "tribulation."

Dan. 2: 44 says God's kingdom will fill all the earth, and 1 Cor. 5: 10 says: "The unrighteous hath no inheritance in the kingdom of God." Have the unrighteous had no inheritance on earth since Pentecost? (Quibbling, eh?) Again, he says he was translated, "not physically nor locally," into the kingdom. Then, he must have "physically" and "locally" left the earth and climbed a tree. Yes, Dan. 7: 10-13 does show Christ's kingdom comes after the judgment. (It may not look that way to "a man up a tree.") More "quibbling," eh? If the kingdom fills all the earth, and he is not locally nor physically in the kingdom, then he is not "locally nor physically" on the earth; and he introduced this text himself.

As he has offered no sound evidence, I conclude that he has not proved his affirmative.

"May the Lord bless and preserve you unto his heavenly kingdom."

Beat Your Own Record.

BY R. P. CUFF.

No man ever left a valuable life behind him as a heritage to the world but that he had noble ideals. Like the apostle Paul, who pressed on toward a mark—toward the prize that is to be given to all that have been faithful to the Christian calling—every man must have a definite goal in view, with a well-defined and all-absorbing desire to reach that goal. Through thick and thin, through fog and smoke and focal fire, he must follow the lead of a lofty ideal to a glorious destiny. It follows as the night the day that a spirit of rivalry against all that opposes his purpose will develop in the heart of the man who is determined to win in the fight to which his ideals call. Emulation has its rightful place in the life of a Christian. It is wholly legitimate that he should consciously strive to equal or excel. But in what phases of human endeavor should he so strive, and against whom, primarily—the other fellow or himself?

Long ago our Savior taught the lesson of service. The greatest man in the world to-day is the man who, as a Christian, is rendering the largest and the most efficient service to the people of the earth. Little or no mention of his name may be made by the daily newspapers or by the periodicals. No marble shaft may mark his final resting place. But God, our Father, whose all-seeing eye never fails to note even the smallest deed and whose memory is never-failing, knows well the worth of the man, will cherish his memory, and will guard the influence of his life until the day that rewards are given according to merit and not according to the fuss made in the world.

Do you need a cordial, my brother? Try larger doses of service. Almost before you are aware you will find yourself encouraged as much as you need. The heavy cares will disappear. Black skies that have frowned overhead will become serenely blue and will lighten with the smile of peace. Doleful prospects will suddenly become more promising. Springs of gladness will revive. Service will replenish them. Service will enlarge your heart, my brother; and it will set your life to a new key and make you rejoice in the love of Christ.

Service is life duty. Christ demands it. The world needs it. We must serve Christ by doing the things that will benefit humanity; also, by following his teaching, which leads us to wear his name as members of the divine family on earth—the church of Christ—and to do everything which his law enjoins upon the Christian. Without doubt, service is a field for emulation—a place where previous records should be surpassed.

May the same thing be said of humility? Does it deserve to remain on the list of virtues, or should it be regarded as having fallen into disrepute and as no longer worth striving for? Humility means an attitude of subordination; it means self-repression rather than self-assertion. Why should a man acknowledge himself as subordinate to anybody? Why should he not attempt to make all activity within reach of the arm of his power bend to his will? It is well that there are some men who do not fight bitterly to accomplish their own ends and to put into operation their own designs. Intolerable would be this world minus humility. Civilization, not to say Christianity, could not exist if society were an arena where conciliation could not enter, but where every combatant was a scheming scoundrel who was determined that every man should yield to his wishes and designs. Humility demands the absence of self-assertiveness and the presence of self-repression. Every one should desire to be humble, and to that end should study and pray.

In the matter of service, of humility, and of any virtue, the Christian will endeavor primarily to surpass himself. To pick out some other to defeat is, in strong probability, to select an unworthy aim. The farmer whose harvest is only a little larger than that of some special neighbor may be falling far short of his own abilities as a farmer. The merchant who outsells, by a small margin, his rival in the same town may have been able to do much greater good by selling more wares and benefiting more people, if he had made more popular prices to the consumer. Never be satisfied with equaling some certain person in any activity. Never be satisfied with what you yourself have previously done. Do not select as a rival some one whose potentialities may be less than yours. Whatever experience may come to you, if in an earlier similar experience you met with a degree of success, or if you failed, this time beat that. Do not beat the other fellow's record; beat your own.

Los Angeles (Cal.) Notes.

BY W. EDGAR MILLER.

There has not been a more enjoyable day at the Central church of Christ, 1720 South Flower Street, since the inception of the work there, than Sunday, April 30. The house was filled so that extra chairs had to be brought in, and the interest was fine. Brother Wright preached a most excellent sermon on "Love—What It Does, and What It Does Not Do." A number of out-of-town visitors were present, among them being Brother James Sewell, of San Francisco, who is an untiring worker for the cause of Christ. He believes in doing things, and the harder they are to do, the more he believes in doing them. Also, a number of new faces were present, and at the close of the morning services Brother and Sister Kennett Ham and Brother and Sister Ennis Roberts came forward for membership. Brother and Sister Roberts just recently arrived from Fort Worth, Texas, and we commend their promptness in hunting the church up and placing their membership. Brother J. F. Lilly was with us at the morning service and led the song service, and Brother Sewell led the evening songs. The singing was excellent at both services, and we appreciate the assistance of these good brethren. Brother James Morgan, our regular song leader, is having trouble with his throat and will not be able to lead for a while, which we regret very much.

After the morning services a number went from Central to join the Pasadena brethren in a basket dinner in Pasadena. A bountiful dinner was spread and enjoyed by all, and the afternoon was spent in visiting and getting better acquainted with these good brethren. In the evening Brother Wright gave us another good lesson on "Repent or Perish."

There was one point in Brother Wright's morning sermon that he brought out good and strong, and that was the fact that we may have the truth on our side, but that is not enough. We may speak it in such a way that we will draw people to the church, or we may use it so that it will drive them away. The secret of its right use is found in Eph. 4: 15, where the apostle says to "speak the truth in love." If a brother or sister has erred, and we go to them to show them their error and persuade them to return to the fold, do we speak the truth to them in a threatening way and demand that they obey it, or do we speak it to them in such a way that they can see and know that we love them and want to help them to do better? It makes all the difference in the world how we go about these things, and we would do well to meditate on them. Paul, after giving Timothy certain instructions, said: "Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear to all." (1 Tim. 4: 15.)

Atlanta (Ga.) Notes.

BY B. C. GOODPASTURE.

One was restored at West End Avenue yesterday (May 7). A meeting conducted by home forces will begin at West End Avenue next Lord's day.

Hugh E. Garrett will start a meeting at the Southern Shops to-day (May 8).

Don Hockaday will conduct a tent meeting in Lakewood Heights, beginning on the third Sunday in this month.

A. B. Lipscomb closed a fine meeting at Valdosta, Ga., last night (May 7). A goodly number were baptized. The interest and attendance were splendid throughout the meeting.

F. L. Rowe, the publisher of the Christian Leader, called to see us between trains one day last week. Brother Rowe was en route home from Lacota, Fla., where he preached on Sunday, April 30.

Flavil Hall is in the midst of a meeting at Pineapple, Ala.

It is with sorrow that I make mention of the death of Sister Eaton, wife of Dr. R. L. Eaton, of this city. She passed to her reward on Saturday, May 6, at 7:30 P.M. Funeral services were conducted at the residence by the writer, after which the remains were carried to Smithville, Tenn., for the concluding services and interment. The West End Avenue congregation sustains a great loss in the passing of this good woman. Our hearts go out in sympathy to her bereft loved ones. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

SOMEWHAT LIBERAL.

The following is a clipping from The Expositor of March, 1922: "The Seventh-Day Adventists report a great year of giving. There are 185,540 members in the whole world. The largest group is in California. During the year they raised $11,854,400, or about sixty-four dollars per capita. Last year they gave forty-eight dollars per capita. Seventy per cent of the receipts come in the form of tithes."

This report indicates that most of the money was raised by tithe offerings, at least seventy per cent. We do not know how the remaining part was raised. Perhaps some of it was secured by means we would not indorse in church work and worship; but, be that as it may, the fact remains that the Adventists have progressed far beyond many professed Christians in the matter of giving. Pause long enough to consider what your home congregation could do, if all its members gave, annually, on an average, sixty-four dollars per capita. I am not saying that would be enough (many of the early Christians gave all they had); I am sure it would not be too much for most of our congregations. The New Testament does not stipulate that we shall give a tenth, but that we shall give as we "may prosper." (1 Cor. 16: 2.) This may be even more than a tenth. Evidently we live far below our possibilities in religion, especially in giving. God holds men responsible for the good they could have done and failed to do. (Matt. 25: 27-29; James 4: 17.)

APPRECIATION.

Doubtless but few people live who do not treasure in their hearts some kind words of approval and appreciation, spoken thoughtfully and kindly by a worthy friend. We store these as rose leaves in the book of memory, and by and by when the book is opened they give forth a new-found and wondrous fragrance. The pensive Ruth beautifully expressed her appreciation of Naomi (Ruth 1: 16, 17); and she did this within the lifetime of Naomi. Is it not true that we oftentimes put off a word of commendation or of love until it is too late? An anonymous poem, found on a desolate battle field of Europe during the recent great war, expresses a sentiment appropriate at this point. Perhaps it records the yearnings and last, sad reflections of one stricken in battle. The poem follows:

If with pleasure you are viewing
Any work a man is doing;
If you like him or you love him,
Tell him now!

Don't withhold your approbation
Till the preacher makes oration
And he lies with snowy lilies
O'er his brow.

For no matter how you shout it,
He won't really care about it,
He won't know how many teardrops
You have shed.
If you think some praise is due him,
Now's the time to slip it to him,
For he cannot read his tombstone
When he's dead.

More than praise and more than money
Is the comment kind and sunny,
And the hearty, warm approval
Of a friend;
For it gives to life a savor,
Makes a fellow stronger, braver,
And it gives him hope and courage
To the end.

If you love him, let him know it;
If he merits praise, bestow it;
Let the words of true encouragement
Be said.
Do not wait till life is over
And he's underneath the clover,
For he cannot read his tombstone
When he's dead!

"Withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thy hand to do it." (Solomon.)

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.—Matt. 6: 19-21.

SERMON OUTLINES

A Book of One Hundred and Fifty New Sermon Outlines

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has one hundred and fifty sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

Who Are Christians? No. 5.

BY C. R. N.

The reader should re-read the letter of Brother J. W. Dunn, which appeared in the Gospel Advocate last week, under the above heading; and I will be glad if you will re-read what I had to say in that connection.

In my work of preaching the gospel, as is true with other gospel preachers and workers in the church of Christ, I endeavor to get men to cease their sins. I try to get them to be Christians. I find myself saying: "Be a Christian," "Become a Christian." I do not intend for those who hear me to get the idea from anything I may say that I think there are some Christians who dance, others who curse, others who get drunk, others who lie. I try to convey to the people the thought that I wish them to be "followers of Christ," and that one cannot follow Christ and lie, steal, gamble, or engage in other forms of sin. I tell them that it is possible for one to become a child of God, and even then go far off into sin, and because of such sin be disinherited by the Lord; but that they are not Christians while practicing sin. I teach that all Christians are children of God, but that one can be a child of God and, because of sinful practices, not be a Christian.

Brother Dunn inquires: "Is the expression, 'child of God,' member of the church—the Lord's church—the same as a Christian, or different? If different, what makes the difference?"

If one has been born again, he is a child of God; and if a child of God, he is in the house of God—household of God—the church. In becoming a child of God, one becomes a Christian. That one can become a follower of Christ and then cease to follow him is declared by inspiration: "Many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him." (John 6: 66.) Ananias and Sapphira were children of God, members of the Lord's church; but surely no one thinks of them as being Christians in the attempted deception of the church in the lie they told. They were killed by the Lord for their hypocrisy. Can you think of these two characters as "followers of Christ" in this course? Were they what Paul was persuading men to be—that is, "such as I [Paul] am, except these bonds?"

Of those in the church who are indigent, Paul instructs that a certain class of them are to become the permanent charge of the church, whereas some others are to be rejected. "But younger widows refuse; for when they have waxed wanton against Christ, they desire to marry; having condemnation, because they have rejected their first pledge"—cast off their first faith. (1 Tim. 5: 11, 12.) Can you think of such folk as Christians? Is one a Christian who has cast off his first faith?

To the young preacher, Timothy, Paul said: "The Spirit saith expressly, that in later times some shall fall away from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons, through the hypocrisy of men that speak lies." (1 Tim. 4: 1, 2.) Those who depart from the faith are not Christians, even though they have been born of God, though they are in the house of God. They have ceased to follow Christ; they are in neither faith nor character what the Lord demands. It does not follow that because one has been born again, and by such birth becomes a member of the Lord's church, that such a man forever remains a Christian.

Brother Dunn further inquires: "So often do we hear people remark: 'He was once a member of the church, but not now.' Is it correct to thus speak of one who has 'turned back?'"

Those who are born again are in the kingdom. (John 3: 1-5.) But those born again are children of God. (John 1: 12, 13.) It follows, then, that all in the kingdom have been born again. Again, those who are converted to Christ enter into the kingdom. (Matt. 18: 3.) But those who are converted have their sins blotted out. (Acts 3: 19.) From this it follows that those in the kingdom have their sins blotted out—are saved from their past sins. But salvation is in Christ. (1 Tim. 2: 10; Col. 1: 13, 14.) To be in Christ is to be in his body, which is the church. (Col. 1: 23.) The kingdom on earth and the church are coextensive, and he who is in the church is in the kingdom—the church and the kingdom are the same institutions.

Those who believed and were baptized in Ephesus as a result of Paul's having preached to them (Acts 19) are said to have become citizens. "Ye are no more strangers and sojourners, but ye are fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." (Eph. 2: 19.) They became members of the "household of God" by becoming children of God, by being born again, which birth brought them into the kingdom, where they are citizens with the other saints. Should one who is in the kingdom sin, it does not change the fact that he has been born again, that he is a child of God, a citizen in the kingdom, a member of the church; nor can we thrust such a one out of the kingdom; nor does he have to be born again to be reinstated as a faithful citizen. Such people are disobedient citizens, unfaithful members of the church. They are not "sinning Christians." In sinning they ceased to be Christians. If your child acts wickedly, his wicked acts do not change the fact that he is your child; but surely you understand he is not "following" as you have directed. So the child of God, the member of his "household," the church (1 Tim. 3: 15), does not cease to be a child of God when he sins, and find it necessary to be baptized again into Christ (Gal. 3: 25-27). He is a disobedient child, an unfaithful member, a rebellious citizen. As it was the law of God that made him a child, the Lord who added him to the church, and Jesus who is King of the kingdom, it is his province to sever the man's relationship with the church, deal with him as a rebel in the kingdom. In this paragraph, as is evident to each one, I am using the word "church" as coextensive with the kingdom, and it is not within the province of men to sever the man's relationship with the church when used in this sense. Even though he should become ever so wicked, we cannot expel him from the church, when we use the word "church" in this sense.

But sometimes the church is used to mean no more than a local congregation—the congregation of God's children in a particular community, as the church in Ephesus, the church in Corinth, the church in Sardis. I am a member of the church of Christ in Clifton, Texas. By this expression I have reference to the children of God who meet for worship in Clifton, Texas, each Sunday. This congregation has her bishops and deacons. If I should "turn back" and this congregation should withdraw their fellowship from me as God directs (2 Thess. 3: 6), "turn me out," I would no longer be a member of the church of Christ in Clifton, Texas. So far as that local congregation is to be counted, I am not a member; I have no fellowship with them, nor they with me. The relationship I sustained to this congregation has been severed as a result of my manner of life. The bishops would correctly say, if I stood withdrawn from: "He is not a member of the church in Clifton, even though he continues to reside in the town; he has been 'turned out.'"

The best argument for Christianity is a Christian. That is a fact which men cannot get over.—Henry Drummond.

A Baleful Tendency Hoary With Age.

BY M. O. K.

It has occurred to me that, following the recent review of the Payne book on the Greek word "psallo," it will be helpful to consider, directly and upon its own merits, the age-long tendency which not only lies at the foundation of the instrumental-music innovation, but which has been the characteristic mark of all departures from the word of God in all history. The close observer and diligent student of history, who is also familiar with the Bible, cannot fail to see that this tendency, whether manifesting itself in the doings of ancient Israel or in those of the modern church, has always been one and the same thing. While it sometimes boldly manifests itself in an open and conspicuous defiance of divine authority, yet it more frequently appears in the guise of a quiet, insidious, and almost imperceptible modification of the divine word, and hence it is exceedingly deceptive and misleading. It does not take the diligent student of the word of God long to learn that it is in this latter way that the erroneous principle in question does its greatest mischief.

In order that we may be able to detect and appreciate this principle whenever and wherever it begins its work, let us note the Lord's own directions to those who assume to be teachers or preachers of his word. For example, listen to this: "He that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the straw to the wheat? saith Jehovah. Is not my word like fire? saith Jehovah; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces? Therefore, behold, I am against the prophets, saith Jehovah, that steal my words every one from his neighbor." (Jer. 23: 28-30.) This passage discloses a most serious situation and imposes upon the preacher of God's word a most solemn obligation.

1. It shows what it is to preach the word of God. "Let him speak my word faithfully." What does this mean? No properly thoughtful person can fail to see that it means that men, in attempting to deliver God's message to the people, must say what God says and not something else. They are not to say something that is merely like what God says, but they are to say what God says.

2. It positively excludes the presentation of any and all views of men. When a religious teacher stops to give his view of something that God has said, that is not delivering God's message. It is delivering the teacher's own message. Jehovah says: "He that hath my word, let him speak my word"—yes, "let him speak my word faithfully." He does not say, "He that hath my word, let him present his view of it," but he must present the word of God itself. "Let him speak my word"—not his view of my word.

3. This passage also makes it perfectly plain that, when religious teachers foist upon God's word any views which God himself does not express, God calls it stealing his word from men. They "steal my words every one from his neighbor." Instead of stopping to make something plainer than God has made it, religious teachers would better leave it just as God left it. Never mind whether the way the Lord put it is plain or not. It is precisely as the Lord wanted it said, or he would not have said it that way. It may not be said in a way to teach what the religious teacher wants it to teach, but this is the strongest possible proof that the Lord did not want it that way. "He that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully."

The New Testament is equally plain in teaching the same principle. "In vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." (Matt. 15: 9.) "The precepts of men" are, of course, what men say—men's views of things and not what God says. Furthermore, the inspired apostle says: "I charge thee in the sight of God, and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the living and the dead, and by his appearing and his kingdom, preach the word." (2 Tim. 4: 1, 2.) There it is in a nutshell. Preachers are commanded not to explain the word, but to "preach the word." It is no part of their business to explain any part of God's word, except by giving what is in the passage that may be under consideration at the time, or in some other passage of God's word. It is not only true that God can say things that he wants to say, but it is equally true that he can say them in the way he wants them said. "Preach the word" is the divine requirement. This means to preach what the word says, no more and no less, and nothing otherwise. Preach what it says on faith, on repentance, on the good confession, on baptism, on prayer, on the Lord's Supper, on music in the worship, on the contribution, on visiting the sick, on preaching the gospel to all the world, and on everything else found in the word. "Preach the word" on all that the word says and stop with that. He who does otherwise in the least degree has already entered on dangerous ground. With him, the baleful tendency has already set in, and it is only a question of time or circumstances where it will end or to what it will lead. This is not only the very principle which lies at the foundation of all denominationalism, but it is the principle on which denominationalism thrives and without which it could not exist. It is both a pity and a standing shame that some of those who profess to be opposed to denominations and to all denominationalism adopt the same misleading principle themselves, and thus, while professing to oppose such a condition of things, are themselves sowing the very seed which continues to produce the same harvest. "O, consistency, thou art a jewel!"

There are many things mentioned in the word of God which the Lord himself has not seen fit to explain in detail or to tell what all they may mean. It is usually in the treatment of this class of passages where the dangerous tendency in question appears. Men are sometimes not satisfied with what they thus find in the divine Book, and so they proceed to give their views of the matter, and then trouble begins. Their views are not in the Bible, and are no part of the word of God, and very naturally the next teacher, who acts on the same unsafe principle, offers a different and conflicting view. Then division is the result. Such speculation, with its unsafe handling of the word of God, has been the bane of the church in all ages. Why should anybody care for any such views of men, anyhow? Even the authors of them do not themselves know whether such views are true or false. Why not, therefore, withhold them and never teach them? And when religious teachers themselves have not the grace and wisdom to observe this safe principle, then let others repudiate all such views and all such teaching and demand of them nothing less than a "Thus saith the Lord."

Finally, "I think" is a dangerous ingredient in the gospel preacher's program. He should always substitute for it what God says; and if God says nothing, then let the preacher say nothing. This position is safe, infallibly safe, universally safe—safe everywhere, at all times and under all circumstances. The baleful tendency has always been and is now to do otherwise; but let it be promptly resisted in its very beginnings whenever and wherever it appears. Let the gospel preacher be ready at all times to give a "Thus saith the Lord" for all he preaches, and let him be equally prepared to turn to the sacred record and show to the humblest mind that what he has thus preached is exactly what God says. In this way the preacher is ever standing on the solid rock of truth.

Why Are People Confused?

BY F. W. SMITH.

There is more confusion on the subject of religion than on anything else in this world, and, of course, there must be a cause for this unhappy and deplorable situation. Shall we charge it upon the Bible, the word of the living God? Has God given to the world a system of redemption and revealed the matter in such mystifying terms or language as to create all of this confusion on the subject? Believe it if you wish, but, as for myself, I will not charge God with thus dealing with his creatures. To my mind, the cause or source of all of this confusion and division in the religious world arises from religious teachers, and not from the word of God. As a sample of such teaching, I submit a few extracts from a sermon delivered in Nashville, April 24, by one of the city's pastors. His subject was "Salvation," and in the development of his theme he said:

Our contention is that salvation is wholly of grace, and is a free gift bestowed upon the believer in response to his faith in Jesus Christ. There is no meritorious thing that a sinner can do which will procure for him the forgiveness of sins, unless one should choose to think of the exercise of faith, which is simply acceptance of the gift, as something which a sinner can do. While this does secure the gift of justification and peace, it in no way does more than accept it. And whoever exercises faith in Jesus Christ, having repented of his sins, receives forgiveness, which brings peace, and is justified before God. And this means that God holds him as set free from his penalty for sin.

It is most freely admitted that sinners are saved by the grace of God, and it is also as freely admitted that there is no merit in anything that man does in the matter. But when the author of the sermon under review states that "salvation is wholly of grace," does he intend to be understood as teaching directly or by implication that a sinner has nothing to do in the salvation of his soul? No, not by any means, for in the same sentence he says this salvation is "bestowed upon the believer in response to his faith in Jesus Christ." He then further tells us that "the exercise of faith is simply the acceptance of the gift"—that is, the gift of salvation. Very well. But now this question arises: Since faith is a thing exercised by the sinner—a thing that the sinner does before he can have this gift of salvation bestowed upon him—why exclude another act of the sinner as a condition of his acceptance of salvation—viz., baptism? Now, it is freely granted that if God or Christ has anywhere said that "faith alone" is the only condition of the acceptance of salvation, that would settle the matter. But has God said any such thing? If so, where? Most certainly he has not said it in the passage quoted by the author of the sermon—namely: "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5: 1.) The word "only" or "alone" is not in the passage, and neither are such words connected with faith and salvation anywhere else in the Bible. Since the author of the sermon leaves baptism out of justification by faith, by what authority does he include repentance in the passage? He said in the course of his remarks, "We come to God, as Paul says, with repentance toward God, and faith," which shows conclusively that he places repentance in being "justified by faith." Again I ask, by what right or principle of interpretation of God's word does he do this and exclude baptism? Are not both faith and repentance acts of the creature as much as is baptism? Is not a sinner obeying commands when he believes and repents, as much so as when he is baptized? And if neither faith nor repentance has any virtue, then why think he who insists on baptism, another act of obedience, is claiming virtue in the act? The author of the sermon further said:

Much as it is to be regretted, there has not been complete agreement between those who have sought to explain God's word on the subject. And naturally those who are interested can but feel a sense of discomfort when they soberly think about this matter. For religion is the chief concern of mortals here below. To make a mistake in preparing for the world to come would be the most dreadful thing that could happen to any one.

Any one who undertakes to tell people about God and salvation is under the highest obligation to get it right. It must be a very reckless man, indeed, or a very courageous man, who can be negligent about so serious a matter. For preacher and people must all stand before the judgment seat of Christ, and give an account for their course and conduct while living in this world. I feel called on to give what I conceive to be the teaching of God's word on the subject. But I wish it distinctly understood, my word is to have weight only insofar as they agree with the Bible.

I heartily indorse the sentiment that this lack of agreement is a thing to be very much regretted, and also agree that he who undertakes "to tell people about God and salvation is under the highest obligation to get it right," and for this reason am wondering why this religious teacher excludes baptism, a command of the Lord Jesus Christ, from the conditions of acceptance of the gift of salvation. Especially am I concerned over this matter when it is right before this teacher's eyes in the great commission: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (Mark 16: 16.) Again, he reads instructions like this to a man who believed and repented: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name." (Acts 22: 16.) Others with faith were told: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) Once more: "Except one be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5.) When men, like the author of the sermon under review, discard from their teaching sinners on the subject of salvation these plain passages which as clearly bind baptism as a condition of salvation as they do faith or repentance, need they be surprised at disagreement between themselves and others who have respect for what God says?

The Commission on Unity.

BY F. E. S.

Recently I received the following communication:

West Nashville, Tenn., May 1, 1922.—Dear Sir and Brother: We sent you last year a copy of O. E. Payne's book on the church-music question for your consideration and to be returned after reading. We have not yet received the copy sent you, so we are writing to request the return of the same. Fraternally,
THE COMMISSION ON UNITY.

I wonder who appointed this Commission on Unity or who has any right to make suggestions as to how unity can be brought about or maintained. If this commission has been appointed by any one or by any church, I would like to know who or which, because that individual or church should know what this commission is doing to promote unity. But if it is a self-appointed commission, as I believe it is, I have as much right to offer suggestions as any one. If this commission is calling in O. E. Payne's book on the church-music question in order to destroy it, it is working on the right line, and I want to commend them; but if it is calling in these books in order to give them to others and thus continue their circulation, I suggest a change of name for the commission. It should be called "The Commission on Division" instead of "The Commission on Unity." I doubt whether one church in fifty in this country uses the instrument in their worship. If this book is circulated and read and changes no one, it could not assist in bringing about unity, because we already have unity on that question in most of the churches in these parts; but if it changes some one and makes him believe that he ought to have the instrument in worship, cannot this commission see that this would bring about division? The instrument would be forced into the worship by these new converts made by Payne's book, which would drive out those it did not convert, and thus we would have division instead of unity as a result of this work. Surely this commission could not hope to change every one on this question with this book and thus get every one wrong; but if it did not change all, but changed any, it would cause division instead of unity. Why is it necessary to have a commission in order to circulate O. E. Payne's book on the church-music question? Is it possible that those who are doing this work are ashamed to come out in the open and do it as individuals, or are they trying to make the impression that some church or association of men and women are behind them in their divisive work? We know it is not necessary in this city to have the instrument in order to have unity on the music question, for it was demonstrated in the recent meeting at the Ryman Auditorium that even those brethren who use the instrument can unite with those that do not and sing without the instrument, for they did it in that meeting. The only way to have unity on this question is to stop circulating such literature as O. E. Payne's book and cease to encourage such a commission as the one that has sprung up in West Nashville.

I cannot comply with the request herein made to return the copy of the book claimed to have been sent to me, as I have no recollection of having seen it, and no member of my family remembers anything about it, but I will agree to send a copy of M. C. Kurfess' reply to O. E. Payne's book. If the commission will agree to use it as an antidote to the Payne poison. If this commission is true to its name and is really a commission on unity, it will accept this proposition and will circulate this reply to Payne's book by Brother Kurfess as extensively as it circulates the Payne book; but if this commission is not true to its name, then the church where the individuals composing the commission hold membership should promptly withdraw from them, in harmony with the plain command of the apostle where he says: "Mark them that are causing the divisions and occasions of stumbling, contrary to the doctrine which ye learned: and turn away from them." (Rom. 16: 17.)

"The Creed in the Deed."

BY J. C. M'Q.

This subject is a living issue and demands our attention. The idea of putting "the creed in the deed" is ridiculed by some; but it is a fact, nevertheless, that no deed has ever been made to church property without inserting in the deed a measure of the faith of those to whom the property is deeded to identify them as the owners of the property. Without such identification, a legal deed cannot be made. Without proper, accurate, definite identification, a safe deed cannot be made.

The word "creed" is from the Latin "credo"—"I believe." What a man believes is his creed. This being true, it is evident that it is impossible to deed a piece of property to any religious denomination without expressing in the deed enough of the faith of that denomination to identify it. Any piece of property deeded to "the Methodist Episcopal Church" would be owned by any Methodist Episcopal church. This would identify a people that practices infant baptism and affusion for baptism. This would have been sufficient to identify the Methodist Episcopal Church before the division of that church into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, North. Since the division the people owning the property will not be identified unless the property is deeded either to "the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," or to "the Methodist Episcopal Church, North," as the particular case may be.

We may apply the same reasoning to the Baptist Church. A deed made to a Baptist church conveys the thought that those to whom the property is deeded immerse believers. The name "Baptist" also identifies the people. But there are divisions among the Baptists. Property deeded to "the Baptist Church" would not be sufficient to convey it to the Primitive Baptist Church or to the Missionary Baptist Church. An item of faith must be conveyed by the word "Primitive" in order to deed the property to the people known as "Primitive Baptists." The word "Missionary" must be added in the deed, which reveals something believed, in order to deed property to Missionary Baptists. The same is true of all Baptists. I am looking only at the religious items necessary to describe the faith of any people, and not at the boundaries, etc., necessary to locate the property.

Let us apply the same reasoning to the church of Christ; the Christian Church, or the Disciples of Christ, for all these names are worn by the same people. Fifty years ago property deeded to "the church of Christ" was sufficient to show the religious people to which the property was deeded. At that time the disciples of Christ were not only fully agreed as to the steps necessary for the alien sinner to take to become a Christian, but they "walked by faith" after becoming Christians and declined to build on the silence of the Bible. No one held that the motto of the Campbells, "To speak where the Bible speaks and to be silent where the Bible is silent," meant that we would be justified in introducing into the worship something which the apostles never authorized nor practiced as Christians. At that time property deeded to "the church of Christ" was sufficient identification, because the people known as "Christians" were one in faith and practice. But—alas!—some grew dissatisfied with the simple worship of the New Testament church, and missionary societies were organized for managing and directing the mission work of the church and instruments of music were brought into the worship. It was stoutly contended by opponents of societies that a principle had been accepted which paved the way for other departures from the simple worship as prescribed by the Spirit. We realize how well this contention has been fulfilled when we read of "destructive higher criticism," "open membership," etc. The society and the organ in the worship are only symptoms of the disease. All should reflect seriously on the disease before indorsing the symptoms. Soon Christians who conscientiously opposed missionary societies and the use of instruments in the worship found that to deed their property to them as "the church of Christ" was not sufficient, for those who use instruments of music and missionary societies in the worship were taking their property away from them, claiming that they were the church of Christ. Unfortunate and sad as is the division, the churches of Christ found it necessary, in order to hold their property, to introduce a clause into the deed that shows wherein their faith is different from others wearing the name, "the church of Christ," "the Christian Church," or "the Disciples of Christ." Here is the clause which has been inserted in deeds to property and has held the property for its owners:

The following clause is inserted at the request of the purchasers of the lot: It is the object of those building this house to encourage and build up churches that will in all work and worship use only what is ordered and required in the New Testament, rejecting all the inventions and devices of men, such as the use of the organ and other instruments of music in connection with the worship and of any societies other than the church of Christ in carrying out the work of God. In the event of any division arising over these or other questions that may come up, the title of this property inheres to those, whether a majority or minority, who most rigidly adhere to the requirements of the New Testament.

A vigorous effort should be made to convince all who oppose the restrictive clause in the deed that such clause is necessary for identification. The objector to such a course indicates by his objection that he favors societies and organs in the worship. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

It is vain to say a deed without the clause was good enough for our fathers forty years ago. Things are taught and done now that were not taught and done forty years ago. It is also true that forty years ago some of our fathers were fearful that some things would occur just as they have come to pass.

Some Good Men in Need.

BY F. R. S.

Andy T. Ritchie is now giving his entire time to evangelizing. Heretofore he has been farming some and preaching during the summer and fall, but now he expects to hold meetings all the time and leave the farming to those who cannot or will not preach the gospel. This is right. While Brother Ritchie may be a good farmer, and I know he is willing to work with his hands, still there is too great need of gospel preachers for a man like Andy T. Ritchie to follow the plow when so many are perishing for the bread of life. He began a meeting at Goodlettsville on the first Sunday in this month, and had to come to Nashville on May 9, and left his Ford in a garage to have a little work done on it; and when he got back to the garage, it had burned to the ground, and his car was completely destroyed, with no insurance on it. He was compelled to buy another, as he has an afflicted boy that must be brought in to the doctor some three times a week. It would be a great help to Brother Ritchie if some of his friends and brethren would assist him in paying for this new car which he had to buy to take the place of the one burned. The brethren who are able should come to his rescue and pay this debt off and relieve him of this burden. God will overrule this loss for good in some way, and it may be by giving those who know Brother Ritchie a chance to help him in this great need. "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel shall live of the gospel." (1 Cor. 9: 14.) It would be nice if some of the churches in Arkansas where Brother Ritchie was reared and where he spent some of the days of his youth preaching the gospel, perhaps with little remuneration, would remember him in this loss. It would not only be a helpful gift to this worthy brother, but it would be to him, as the gift of the Philipplians was to Paul, "an odor of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to God." (Phil. 4: 18.)

Brethren Charley Taylor and W. E. Morgan began a mission meeting in Cairo, Ill., on the first Sunday in this month. There are very few there that will stand with these brethren in their effort to plant primitive Christianity in that city, and they are dependent on outside help for support while there. In a letter to this office Brother Taylor says: "We are on the ground, with good prospects for the meeting, but our friends are very few, and it now looks like we will be compelled to stay at the hotel; but it will never do for us to let this opportunity for establishing the cause in this city get away from us, and, by the grace of God, we are going to do what we can in his name." Some few have sent these brethren contributions, but not enough for their need if they have to pay hotel bills for themselves while there. One dear, good, old preacher sent these brethren his personal check for a small amount, and in the letter in which the check was inclosed, among other things, he said: "I have no income but from my preaching, and places that once called for me call no more; still, out of my small income I just must have a little fellowship in the meeting in that wicked city." This brother knows what it is to go where others have not been and to spend and be spent for the establishment of the pure worship of God. If all our members had some similar experience and great sacrifice of this dear old war horse, it would be easy for these brethren to find help in their effort to plant the truth in Cairo and leave there a people that will faithfully represent the truth "as it is written." Let us not forget these brethren, but assist them in this sacrifice.

O my soul, do thy part with all thy might! Little thou mayest be, insignificant and hidden, and yet God seeks thy praise. He listens for it, and all the music of his great universe is made richer and sweeter because thou givest him thanks. Bless the Lord, O my soul!—M. G. Pearce.

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY FOR OUR READERS

The greatest preachers of the past two centuries attribute much of their inspiration and usefulness to Matthew Henry's Commentary on the whole Bible. Born in the seventeenth century, his name and his work still live and are household words. Thousands of homes treasure this commentary second only to the Bible, and many a man traces his right start to the loving advice of Matthew Henry.

Charles H. Spurgeon said: "Every minister ought to read Matthew Henry entirely and carefully through once at least. He will acquire a vast store of sermons; and as for thoughts, they will swarm around him like twittering sparrows around an old gable toward the close of autumn." Dr. Philip Schaff, compiler of Schaff's Bible Dictionary, pronounces it "the best practical and devotional commentary for English readers."

The management of the Gospel Advocate is fortunate in securing twenty-five sets of this unrivaled commentary, which will be sent as a premium to every reader who will send twenty-five new subscribers at the regular subscription price of $2 per year. This is undoubtedly the most attractive commentary offer ever made. You will receive six portable volumes of twelve hundred pages each, large, clear, unbroken type, with substantial Roxborough binding. If you wish to pay cash, the price for the six volumes is $17.50, not prepaid. When sent as a premium, we pay all charges.

Mirrors of Washington.

A writer who keeps in close touch with affairs at the national capital has issued a book bearing the caption, "Mirrors of Washington," in which he gives a cool, clear, calculating analysis of our greatest statesmen. The book is written anonymously and in a spirit of candid fearlessness. Without any restraint he delves into the inner lives of the national leaders and reveals in one pen picture after another their weaknesses and idiosyncrasies. Wilson is given full credit for his idealism in the management of world affairs, but the author portrays him to be an intellectual fanatic devoid of practical ideas. Harding was elected, he declares, not because he was supremely fitted for the Presidency, but because he was the "best of the second-raters." Lodge is set forth as an aristocratic snob. Herbert Hoover is pictured as a piece of machinery doing big things simply for the sake of doing them, a man without deep sympathy who likes to figure out just how many calories it takes to keep the hungry world from starving. Perhaps this brilliant writer's portrayal is overdrawn, but the fact that all our great men have their weaknesses cannot be denied. If there is greatness, it is too often marred by littleness; if there is wisdom, it is too often discounted by vaunting pride; if there is wealth, it is too often the foundation of selfishness. Of only one Being who ever walked upon the face of the earth can we say his greatness was absolutely unsullied. Jesus Christ is the only one of whom we may say, without exaggeration or flattery, he was "altogether lovely."

The Human Side of Jesus.

With all of his greatness, Jesus was very human when he lived among us. In everything but our evil natures he was one with us. He was tempted in all points as we are tempted, yet without sin. With Thomas we call him "Lord," and we laud and adore him. But if Jesus Christ comes into our lives as he should, there is no one who establishes such intimacy. There is no one of whom we feel so little afraid. He enters simply and naturally into our lives, as if he were reared on the same street.

Some years ago there came from across the waters a Hindu. His friends and followers claimed that this man was divine. He was an austere personage who affected the dress and manners of the Orient. The social "Four Hundred" in New York City made much ado over this widely heralded "divinity." He was not easy to approach; aloofness was his middle name; he moved only in fashionable and exclusive circles. Jesus Christ was not a bit like that. He was always approachable. If you could not reach him, it was not because of his aloofness, but because so many poor, suffering human beings were ahead of you. His disciples were never afraid of him. Martha scolds him; John makes a pillow of his breast; Peter "kicks" when Jesus would wash his feet; they ask him foolish questions and love him and adore him and rebuke him almost in the same breath. For his part, Jesus calls them by their given name, tells them to "fear not," and assures them of his love and friendship.

When you think of the Jesus who walked among men, do not think of a cold marble statue placed high in a niche in the wall, but think of the Son of God, who is also the Son of man, with his hands outstretched to little children and taking them with their dirty hands and faces into his loving arms. Do not think of some wonderful flower like John Fox's rhododendron growing upon the cliffs and almost impossible to reach, but think of a rose in an old-fashioned garden shedding its fragrance in every direction. There you will have the true picture of the Jesus of the New Testament.

His Humility and Sympathy.

Jesus was altogether lovely in his humility. He was born in a manger and buried in a borrowed tomb. He was the only person who was ever given the choice of how he should be born into the world, whether he should be born into a rich family or into a poor family. He did not come into the world with a silver spoon in his mouth, but entered as one of the masses. He elected to be a carpenter and a carpenter's son. What surpassing meekness and lowliness in the Master's choice! In him the prophecies are fulfilled, "He shall grow up like a tender plant," and, "As a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth." Peter once had the habit of striking back, but he admired the One who, "when he was reviled, reviled not again." Jesus himself said: "I am among you as he that serveth." Now and then the Catholic Federation passes resolutions demanding that the rights of the "Supreme Pontiff" be respected. But can you imagine the lowly Jesus harping upon his rights?

Jesus was altogether lovely in his sympathy. He was always being "touched with compassion." He saw the hungry multitudes, and it reminded him of sheep scattered abroad without a shepherd. As he and his disciples entered the little city of Nain, a funeral procession wound its way out. The dead boy was the only son of a widow. Jesus stopped the bier and restored the boy to his mother. We may safely infer that he broke up every funeral he attended. In the home of Jairus, the ruler, he gives us a figure that dissipates the dread of death: "She is not dead, but sleepeth." In the wild Gadarene country he casts out an evil spirit from a boy who had been living among the tombs. He not only brought his message of sympathy to the homes of the people, but carried it into the darkest places of the earth. In Mark's account of one of the miracles he tells us that Jesus reached forth his hand and touched a leper. Why did he touch him? He could have spoken one word and healed him. He did this because there was grace in his sympathy. That leper was a social outcast. He had been taught to cry, "Unclean, unclean," whenever approached by others, and doubtless the poor fellow had reached a point where he felt that he was no longer a human being. The touch of Jesus made him human again.

Jesus' Way With Sinners.

But the supreme loveliness of Jesus is shown in his way with sinners. He deals with all kinds. Nicodemus may be taken as an example of the aristocratic type. He is candid and sincere, but proud of his place as a master in Israel. In one interview Jesus shows this man that he is ignorant of the very first step in salvation. He knocks the underpinning from the house of his pride; yet there is no harsh utterance, no trace of resentment. Zaccheus may be taken as an example of another class of sinners, the publicans. This man's business as a taxgatherer made him odious with the Jews. He was despised and hated. All the circumstances were such as to make Zaccheus a pessimist and to embitter his heart so as to think little of salvation. But Jesus crosses his pathway. There was something in the Master's bearing and tone of his voice that instantly won the heart of the publican. When he spoke to the silent, despairing woman taken in sin, he uses the same word (in the Greek) that he used in addressing his mother,

In unfolding the deepest truths to the Samaritan woman at the well, he is just as respectful and considerate and courteous as when he talked to Mary and Martha in their home at Bethany.

Jesus is altogether lovely in his suffering. In Gethsemane he prays that the cup of anguish may pass away, but the prayer ends with the world's greatest lesson of resignation: "Nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done." Upon the cross there is humanity's cry of despairing faith, but in the end there is the quiet yielding of his spirit unto God. When ancient warriors returned from the field of battle, they sometimes came with the chiefest men, kings or princes, lashed to their chariot wheels. But it was enough for Jesus to carry with him into paradise the soul of a thief.

Follow him to the end, through all the scenes of outrage and insult and perfidy, and the lesson of his greatness is always the same and is never disappointing. All the elements of his character are in perfect poise. His gentleness is never weak, his courage is never brutal. Stand with the crowd that wagged their heads and jeered him with the words, "He saved others, let him save himself," or stand with the little group of women who were last at the cross and first at the tomb, and you will reach but one conclusion. The centurion expressed it well: "Truly this man was the Son of God."

When but a boy like Timothy, I stood up in the presence of many witnesses and confessed my faith in this wonderful Being. I have not always been true and faithful to him, but he has never forsaken me. He has proved to be "a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." When I do right, he leads me on to higher ground. When I stumble and fall, he lifts me up. He never fails to help and comfort and guide. If some one should come with the proposition, "You give up Jesus for one day only, and we will elect you to the Presidency," I would answer quickly enough: "You keep the Presidency and let me keep Jesus." For I need him every hour. "I want that Jesus shall be near me, whatever comes, whatever comes." And—

"He walks with me and he talks with me,
And he tells me I am his own;
And the joy we share as we tarry there,
None other has ever known."

Faith and Service.

"The popular impression that nothing important can happen in human life without the human will being at the bottom of it is an illusion as complete as the old view that the universe revolved about our planet."

So says a professor of social sciences. Christian Work, commenting on his utterance, says that "the newer humanism which reduces religion to sociology and loses the transcendent in the immanent God is folly."

This is true and timely. Social service is the fruit of the tree of life. Apart from the tree it may keep its qualities for a little time. Many zealous reformers are buoyed up by the faith and instruction of their fathers and mothers. They are running on the fuel of past generations.

So long as the religion of the Bible has its hold on men they will show their faith by their works; but when they give up their faith and substitute humanistic reforms for regeneration, their works will dwindle to the vanishing point.

There is no contrast between faith and service. The church has always sought human betterment. Converted men and women have been the backbone of every social reform. Heathenism is not concerned as to the rights and comfort or happiness of mankind, and the attempt to contrast faith and humanistic reform is a reversion to heathenism.—Herald and Prebyter.

Gospel Meetings at Valdosta, Ga.

BY T. M. SMITH.

The church of Christ here has just closed a series of meetings that continued about two weeks. We were fortunate enough to have Brother A. B. Lipscomb, of Nashville, Tenn., stop with us on his way back from a meeting at Ocala, Fla., and do the preaching. He is one of the most polished, logical, and clear speakers it has ever been my privilege to hear; and notwithstanding he does not "shun to declare the whole counsel of God," his earnestness, sincerity, and kindly manner was such as to win his hearers at every service. The audiences were fine all the way through, at times overflowing the house. We are truly grateful to God for the splendid opportunity we have had of discussing with so many of our friends and neighbors and fellow citizens this most important of all themes—the salvation of their souls. We feel that it has been a great seed-sowing time and that eternity alone will reveal the munificent harvest. Eleven persons were baptized during the meeting.

True Religion.

BY ROY ROBINSON.

Not when we turn from death to life
Is all our duty done;
Through years and tears of sacrifice
The goal of life is won.

Not in one moment we attain,
Or know our certain fate,
For stumblingstones bestrew the road
That leads to Heaven's gate.

And contrite tears must flow the while
We righten every wrong;
For we must weep ere we shall sing
The hallelujah song.

The King of Light bestows no crown
Until we bear the cross;
Until we crucify the world,
And count it all but dross.

The house where we shall dwell on high,
We build it day by day;
Its stones are deeds of kindness wrought
Along the narrow way.

Not with a single bound we grasp
The prize, eternal life;
We must with patience run the race
Till death shall end the strife.

We rise and fall; our high resolves
Lie shattered in the dust.
We gather up the broken hopes,
For carry on we must.

As ships that lie at anchor feel
Their cables strain and shake,
Our lives, though hid with Christ in God,
May from their moorings break.

Then gird thy armor on and stand,
A sinner saved by grace;
Say not that thou hast conquered, till
Thou stand before His face.

INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

By M. C. Kurfes

Cloth. 300 pages. Price, postpaid.....$1.50

This is the most comprehensive book on this important subject now before the public. In it the Greek verb "psallo" is philologically and historically examined, together with a full discussion of kindred matters relating to music in Christian worship. The book is the result of a lifetime of critical study and research, and has become the standard of information on the music question. It has been highly recommended by scholarly brethren in the church of Christ and in the religious world.

From Harvey Scott, Sinton, Texas, May 8: "The meeting at this place is doing fine. Six baptisms to date. Best prospects I ever saw."

The meeting at Charlotte Avenue, this city, conducted by C. M. Pullias, closed on Sunday night, with fifty-three baptisms and six reclaimed.

Joe L. Netherland has time for one or two meetings in September. Address him until June 15 at 1250 N. W. Second Street, Miami, Fla.

S. H. Hall reports two fine audiences at Russell and Ninth Streets, this city, Sunday, with one added to the congregation from the Christian Church.

W. F. Ledlow, of Austin, Texas, will begin a tent meeting for the Foster Street church of Christ, this city, next Lord's day. The tent will be located at the corner of Grace Avenue and Third Street.

The proposition, "The Bible authorizes instrumental music in the worship in the church of Christ," will be affirmed by J. M. Pace and denied by A. G. Freed in a debate at Benton, Ky., on May 21.

From Mrs. John W. Nelms, Shelbyville, Tenn.: "I think the Gospel Advocate is the purest and best paper that is published, and I never expect to be without it as long as I live and have the money to pay for it."

T. H. Etheridge, Gunter, Texas, writes to know if there is a church of Christ in or near Des Moines, Iowa. If any of our readers can give Brother Etheridge the desired information, it will be greatly appreciated.

R. V. Cawthon began a protracted meeting at Grandview Heights, this city, last Sunday. Brother Cawthon will have good audiences there, but the brethren from other parts of the city should give the church their encouragement.

J. V. A. Traylor says: "R. V. Cawthon and I held a very interesting meeting the latter part of April with the Parkland church of Christ, Louisville, Ky. There were no additions, but the interest was good throughout the meeting."

W. M. Oakley's meeting at California Avenue, this city, will continue up to and including Friday night. The interest is growing. Two had been reclaimed up to Sunday night. He will preach next Sunday at Twelfth Avenue, North.

W. Silas Moody preached at Twelfth Avenue, North, last Sunday, to two large audiences, with two added—one by confession and baptism and one reclaimed. There were three hundred and sixty-seven in the Bible study Sunday morning.

Married, at Jacksonville, Fla., May 11, at 6 P.M., Mr. Willis H. Allen and Miss Lillian Johnson. The ceremony was performed by H. N. Rutherford. Brother Allen was the evangelist for the church at Jacksonville for several years, but is now located at Franklin, Ky. He and his wife are receiving congratulations from a large circle of friends and relatives.

From R. E. Wright, 263 North Avenue 25, Los Angeles, Cal., May 8: "The work at the Central church of Christ, in this city, continues to grow. Six more souls were added yesterday. We are having additions to the congregation almost every Lord's day. Brethren, if you have any friends here, send us their names and addresses, and Brother Witty and I will look them up."

From A. D. Dies: "The meeting at Eighth Avenue, North, in Nashville, closed last Sunday night. There were eight added to the congregation—two by restoration and six by baptism. I leave these brethren at peace, and hope that they may continue in the great work they are planning to do. I began at Twenty-second Avenue, North, on Monday. Take the Buena Vista car to Twenty-second Avenue. Come, and let us rejoice together in the Lord."

From L. R. Wilson, Henderson, Tenn., May 12: "I filled my last appointment at Nance, in Crockett County, last Sunday, till October. We had a fine day. The work is improving greatly there. I will fill my appointments on the second and third Sundays, after which I shall return to Arkansas for what I hope to be the greatest summer's work I have ever had. I hope to be able to assist in bringing many souls into the kingdom, and return to my work in the fall to find it in good condition."

From Coleman Overby, Murray, Ky.: "It is a great pleasure to announce to the readers of the Gospel Advocate that the churches of Christ in Calloway County are to have a co-operative meeting at Murray, beginning on June 16 and continuing over June 25. The churches are fortunate in being able to secure the services of A. B. Barret, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., to do the preaching. God being for us, we are expecting to launch the greatest work in the history of the churches of Christ in Western Kentucky. Pray and rejoice with us."

F. P. Taylor writes: "In the Gospel Advocate of April 16 there was an appeal for funds to finish the church house near Somerville, Tenn. I wish to say that the people there are worthy, and they have done a noble work there. Let us help them to hold up the banner in that needy field. I am to go there for my third meeting in July, and they hope to have the house completed for the meeting. There is a great work before us there. Who will help? Who will be first to send? Send to J. P. Montague, Somerville, Tenn., Route 5."

Andrew Perry writes from Philippi, W. Va., May 12: "I came to Union church house, some four miles out from Philippi, on Friday, May 5, and began a meeting that night. To date I have preached nine times, with one baptism, and we are looking for a number more before the meeting closes, as we have a crowded house and a number of good listeners on the outside. There is a good congregation here; but as this mine has been closed down for over a year, and with the coal miners' strike on all over the coal field, times are very close and hard here now; but the word is being studied closely."

From J. W. Grant, Lakeland, Fla., May 18: "The contributions for Brother Yohannan have been liberal and numerous. I have received in the two weeks about one hundred and forty dollars for him, and know of one church sending him ten dollars direct. Also, some have taken steps to send them clothing, goods, etc. I sent him forty dollars on May 1, and think best to wait to hear from the February 6 remittance before sending more. I hope he will soon get the money on the two drafts of February, 1920, too, as I learn that one of them has been collected by the bank he gave them to for collection."

M. S. Mason makes an earnest appeal for help for the brethren at Poplar Bluff, Mo. He says: "These brethren are worthy and doing their best. They have a well-located house which needs repair, and its improved appearance will aid the cause. They must have two meetings a year, and, as the congregation is not large, they cannot repair the house immediately and pay other expenses. They will finally do all this work; but while time drags, souls are dying. I am asking each congregation who reads this to give them a Lord's-day's contribution in June to repair their house. There is great promise for the cause at Poplar Bluff, and I believe that great results will be seen from the brethren's aid. Brethren, you can do this with ease. Why not do it? Send contributions to L. M. Ward, Poplar Bluff, Mo."

The following note from a brother in Alabama comes to this office: "Will you give me a place to preach the gospel of Christ and try to save some poor sinner before it is too late?" I am sorry, but we have no place to give the brother. All the places in the world have already been given out by the Savior when he said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) Since "all the world" has already been given out by the Savior to his people as places in which to preach, and as there is no other territory over which we have any control, we take this opportunity to tell the brother we cannot comply with his request. Possibly the brother might find a few sinners close to him who need the gospel and might be saved by it. At any rate, it is his duty to try it.

From R. N. Moody, Albertville, Ala., May 15: "I preached yesterday morning and evening for the church in Childersburg. I go from here to Anniston to begin on Wednesday night, to continue over next Sunday. I shall soon be in protracted meetings for the summer and fall."

J. W. Atkisson, St. Louis, Mo., says: "The 'Dalton-Burnett Debate' on propositions involving the question as to whether salvation is conditional or unconditional, also the work of the Holy Spirit in conversion, is one of the best and most interesting tracts that I have read in a long time. It is worth its weight in gold to the young preachers out in the field where they have to fight for the ground they stand upon."

W. T. Hines, of Braman, Okla., writes: "I have just closed a meeting at Wynn Chapel, near Lamont, Okla. This was my second meeting with these brethren. The interest was not very good; too much rain. The preachers' meeting at Blackwell, Okla., has been postponed till fall. Preachers too busy now. I need some one to help me locate more places to spend my time this summer and fall. Who will help? Address me at Braman, Okla."

H. V. Hood makes the following statement and appeal to the churches of Christ: "Brethren, I am trying to be instrumental in building up or organizing a new congregation in a destitute place. To do this, we need a preacher, some money to support him, and some song books. W. L. Reeves, of Winston-Salem, N. C., has promised to hold this meeting. I am teaching a Bible class to prepare the minds of the people to receive the gospel when the preacher comes. Brethren, if you have money for mission work, it is needed nowhere worse than here. Any congregation or individual who will contribute to this work will be supporting a worthy cause. Send all contributions to H. V. Hood, Brownsville, Tenn., Route 5."

J. Clifford Murphy writes from Ackerman, Miss., May 9: "At this time I am out from Ackerman about nine miles, preaching every night. We have just a few brethren and sisters here. The people of this little town are mostly Baptists of the most ignorant and prejudiced kind, and, of course, they are hard to reach; but I am glad to say that they are not all of this kind in Mississippi. Some of them hear gladly and are coming out of religious error. I came to this field in April, and can see that it is a most deserving field—that it is ripe and ready to harvest. My family is in Pulaski, Tenn. I hope to go see them in a few days and then return to this field. My Tennessee brethren, will you help us harvest this grain? We sing, 'Bringing In the Sheaves.' Let us bring them in or quit singing. What say you?"

William P. Walker, Dinuba, Cal., sends the following note for publication in the Gospel Advocate: "Owing to recent developments, I have decided to leave California for Tennessee about the first of June instead of the first of August, as I had intended. This being true, I will be in a position to conduct four more revivals, two in June and two in July. Congregations desiring my services should address me at Burns, Tenn. The Dinuba work is doing fine. There has been one more addition since last report. In fact, all the work in California is doing exceedingly well, considering certain conditions confronting us. We all welcome brethren Fuqua and Wright to the 'Golden State.' May God bless their efforts to sow the seed of the kingdom in this neglected field. Brethren, on with the cross of Christ and the gospel plan of salvation!"

A. B. Lipscomb writes: "During the meeting at Valdosta, Ga., I visited the Dasher Bible School, located eight miles from Valdosta, in company with F. L. Rowe, G. E. Claus, Flavil Hall, and Willis H. Allen. We were favorably impressed with the earnestness of both faculty and students, and were specially pleased to note the emphasis that is laid upon Bible study. J. P. Prevatt, of Gainesville, Fla., is the president of the institution. Earl C. Smith and J. E. Boyd are located on the grounds and are consecrating their lives to the upbuilding of the school. The brethren have started a campaign for securing funds for a new dormitory. By special invitation I stopped over at Macon, Ga., on the return trip and preached twice for the congregation in this beautiful city. R. P. Cuff has done a good work at this place while completing his course at Mercer College."

From E. W. Moon, Holland, Ga., May 11: "Recently I addressed a Baptist Sunday school at Raymond, Ga., on the division of the word. They invited me to take part with them, not being mindful that a stranger might choose to be a Christian only as distinguished from a Baptist. Sometimes ignorance is profitable as well as bliss. There is a small congregation meeting on Lord's day at Bremen, Ga., which is a splendid mission point. Flavil Hall spoke the word of the Lord there not long since and baptized several, among whom were two noble young ladies, daughters of Brother and Sister T. J. Berrier, of Waco, Ga. Let Brother Garrett take note of this and visit them with 'the sincere milk of the word.' W. U. Benton, of Coosa, Ga., Route 1, wishes some colored evangelist to visit his community this summer and hold a tent-meeting. Who will answer this call?"

James E. Chessor, Spencer, Tenn., writes: "Burritt College has closed what teachers and patrons believe to be one of the most uniformly successful sessions within recent years. The enrollment for the spring term was one hundred and seventy-two, or almost normal, and for the entire year slightly below the average enrollment. It seems that the enrollment does not fluctuate very much with hard or prosperous times. The health of the school was never better, and there were no epidemics and no serious illness. There was more of the genuine school spirit, less of friction, and more coöperation than usual, and every department, especially the expression department and the teachers' training course, did splendid work. The three Bible classes enrolled about ninety pupils, or slightly more than one-half the student body. I believe Burritt College is doing valiantly for the cause of the Master, and I know that this school of the Cumberlands should be fostered by the churches of Christ."

Charles L. Talley, Hopkinsville, Ky., writing under date of May 9, says: "I feel that a brief report of the work at this place may be of interest to many that know the situation here. Hopkinsville is one of the strongest points in the whole Southland for those that have digressed from the truths and principles that at one time were held so dear to those that sought and practiced New Testament Christianity. My experience is that they are the most bitter 'sectarians' that the true disciple has to contend with. Ever on the alert to catch and capture, their means not always very honorable. Yesterday the contractors began removing dirt for the erection of a nice brick and brick-veneer church building, located at a very much better location than the old building, which we hope to have completed by early fall. The building will be a modern one, affording better facilities for taking care of the Sunday school and other needed additions. I have an open date of two weeks for a meeting in the month of August. I can arrange to go anywhere wanted. If needed, write me as above."

The church of Christ is being blessed of God in a deeper interest in teaching his word. An example of that can be seen in the following program of work in the congregation at Lebanon, Tenn.: Bible school, Sunday, 10 A.M.; Bible history, Wednesday, 7:30 P.M. (a course in the historical books of the Bible); mothers' meeting, Friday, 3 P.M. (for discussing the problems of the child); cradle roll and beginners' day school for all children under ten, Friday, 3 P.M. (Bible stories, handwork, and games); advanced Bible class, Friday, 7:30 P.M. (Hebrews and Romans); Saturday Bible school, 3 P.M. (classes for boys and girls in grades and then second year of high school). These classes are under the personal supervision of Morgan H. Carter, assisted by Mrs. Mollie Webb, Miss Janie Cook, Miss Willard Robertson, Mrs. A. O. Eskew, and Mrs. Morgan Carter. Lord's-day meetings as follows: Worship, 11 A.M.; young people's meeting, 7 P.M.; evening service, 7:30 P.M. Community prayer meetings are held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7:30 P.M. The elders of the congregation are: Robert L. White, Jack Bradshaw, Dr. B. S. Rhea, L. F. McFarland. Deacons: A. W. McCartney and Ben Bradshaw. Morgan H. Carter is the minister.

W. H. Carter, Lafayette, Tenn., sends the following interesting account of the White Oak meeting: "On the second Lord's day in May the church at White Oak, in this county, celebrated its anniversary by an all-day service, with a splendid dinner on the ground. Over thirty years ago this church, with twenty members, began work for the Lord. There have been few, if any, of these anniversaries that I have not been with them. Under the influences of the enemy of the cause of Christ, they have had their trials, temptations, and discouragements, but, by the grace of God, they have held forth and to-day are doing a good work. The morning service was devoted to a discourse on the coöperation of churches and preachers in sounding out the word and the regular service. The afternoon was taken up by brethren from different congregations in talks about the work proposed and soon to begin, which is this: The churches of this county (some of them) have arranged with W. W. Freeman to devote three months of his time, beginning the first of July, to preaching the gospel in destitute places. The talks made by the brethren were encouraging and to the point. It was a delightful day, full of good things to all and was happily spent by us all, and we are sure much good was done."

SPRING DEBILITY

Loss of Appetite, That Tired Feeling and Sometimes Eruptions.

Thousands take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring medicine for that tired feeling, nervous weakness, impure blood and say it makes them feel better, eat and sleep better, and "makes food taste good."

Spring debility is a condition in which it is especially hard to combat disease germs, which invade the system here, there and everywhere. The white blood corpuscles, sometimes called "the little soldiers in the blood," because it is their duty to fight disease germs, are too weak to do good service.

Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the "little soldiers" and enables them to repel germs of grip, influenza fevers and other ailments; relieves catarrh and rheumatism. It has given satisfaction to three generations. Get it today, and for a laxative take Hood's Pills.

An Appeal for Missions.

BY EARL M. HODSON.

This is an earnest appeal to churches everywhere, each and all, not only to support the work in the homeland more, but to increase the support in foreign lands. Here at home there are none but that may hear the truth or read it in the Book. There are tens of millions in foreign lands who do not even know there is a Book that tells them of Christ and who have never heard of him. Why cannot every local congregation give the contribution of one Lord's day each month to missions? It might be but a small amount, but that from all would do much. The denominations are giving their millions and sending their men and the Bible to foreign lands, as well as throughout the homeland. There will be untold numbers of converts to the various faiths that send their men, and possibly many who hear may be led to read the Bible in their own language and become simply Christians only.

The Bible given to any man by any source whatsoever is still God's Book and would produce the right results were its truths not warped by denominational teaching. But we are not getting the Book to the heathen nor sending the men there to teach. Are we waiting until the Bible has been carried to all and misapplied and then send our men—after the greatest hardships have been borne by others—to make straight the perverted teaching?

Brothers, let us unite with Brother I. B. Bradley, 906 Princeton Avenue, West End, Birmingham, Ala., in assisting with funds for the return of Sister Sarah Andrews to her great work so nobly begun in Japan, and all that are working faithfully there, or with Sister Nellie Straiton, who endeavors to assist Sister Cyperi and others in that same country. I know there will be critics, even preachers who never told a congregation anywhere that there is such a thing as millions of people who never heard of Christ and never will unless through denominations, preachers who will charge those who are endeavoring to assist with having delegated themselves to send funds and look after the matter. Or let us help the work in Africa as assisted by Brother F. B. Shepherd, Amarillo, Texas, and the work in India, done by Brother E. S. Jelley. And the work in China—who is laboring there? Who is in Central Africa? Who is in Roman Catholic and heathen South America?

Are there not young men who could be trained for the work? Trained? Yes, sent by some congregation to school until they know enough of our own language to study that of other lands and translate, if need be, the Book for foreign tongues. That would call for an organization? It surely would; but not a man-made one, but the greatest organization now in existence or that ever will exist—the church of Christ. We have all the organization needed. Put it into operation. The Head of it has been calling for laborers since the day that he walked through the fields of Palestine and lamented the need. Have we not the congregations and the elders and the members to do these things? Let us do something, brethren, for home and foreign missions, and do it now.

Contentment.

BY S. WHITFIELD.

We are taught by the word of God to be contented. God wants us to be happy, but we cannot be happy unless we are contented.

There is a great deal of discontentment in the world among all classes. I suppose there never was an age of the world when there was more discontentment than there is now. This is not a good condition for the world to be in. It does not lead to anything good. This condition has not come from actual want. To have an abundance of the things of this world is not the secret of contentment. Poor people or those in ordinary circumstances are more contented than the rich are. It is said that the more that people get, the more they want. This does not make people happy and contented. It is said that this generation is spending what two generations have made, and close observers know that there is some truth in this. It is a desire for pleasure and worldly things; being afraid that some person will get something that we do not have, or will get ahead of us; not being satisfied to go ahead, put up with hardships, and make the best of what we have—these are some of the things that have brought about this condition of discontentment.

It is true that people do not have equal rights, privileges, and opportunities. Some classes are oppressed. But there has always been more or less of this, and always will be. There are some things that we cannot help, but we must learn to put up with them and exercise patience.

As Christians, we should learn some of the lessons that are taught in the Bible along these lines.

"Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound; everywhere and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need." (Phil. 4: 11, 12.)

If we would all look at these things as Paul did, there would be no trouble. It was not wealth that gave him this contentment of mind, but a determination to be contented with what he had. As far as circumstances are concerned, all could be as happy as he was. So this great blessing is within our reach; let us grasp it while we have the chance.

"Godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment let us be therewith content." (1 Tim. 6: 6-8.)

Here are two things—godliness, food and raiment. Paul admonishes those that have these two things to be contented. Now, these things are not so hard to get. Contentment, then, is within our reach.

"Be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." (Heb. 13: 5.)

If we do what this verse teaches, we will be free from the love of money.

These verses that I have called attention to give us the secret of contentment.

"But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." (1 Tim. 6: 9, 10.)

This gives the other side of the question, and it gives the sad story of those that set their heart on worldly riches.

"The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage." (Ps. 16: 6.)

David realized that he enjoyed many good things in this life, and we should all feel that the same is true of us. We have all enjoyed many beautiful and pleasant surroundings.

"Give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me." (Prov. 30: 8.)

Happy are those that are satisfied with ordinary circumstances! Their lives are not made miserable by grasping after worldly riches. Giving to the poor and for the spread of the gospel will help much in making us happy and contented.

"Let us not be desirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another." (Gal. 5: 26.)

Envy and strife will cause piles of trouble. Contentment is the remedy. Let us apply it.

"There is nothing better for a man, than that he should eat and drink, and that he should make his soul enjoy good in his labor." (Eccles. 2: 24.)

Strength comes from well digested and thoroughly assimilated food. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the digestive organs, and thus builds up the strength. If you are getting "run down," begin taking Hood's at once. It gives nerve, mental and digestive strength.

Field Reports

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 7.—Two splendid services here to-day and one out at Tyner in the afternoon. One came from the Christian Church and one was baptized. Three mission meetings are planned by the church here, and we hope to add to the house soon. —H. M. Phillips.

Athens, Tenn., May 8.—I am in a meeting here at Athens. Fine attendance, attention, and interest. Three baptized and others "almost persuaded." Only a few disciples here, but they are at work. They have a fine little house of worship, not yet paid for, but I think they can and will finish paying. This is a great mission field. Pray for me. See Gal. 6: 2-6. —Charles Holder.

Denver, Col., May 8.—On Sunday, April 30, Brother Evans preached at Pueblo in the forenoon and at Colorado Springs in the afternoon. He reports good interest at both places. I did what I could here. Yesterday Brother Evans preached a fine sermon here in the forenoon and took one confession. I preached at the evening service and baptized that one. Interest and audiences good. Attendance at nearly all services increasing. We are beginning now to get matters in good shape for our June meeting, when Brother S. P. Pittman shall be with us to do the preaching. —J. C. Estes.

Sedalia, Mo., May 10.—We had a very nice service last Sunday at the church near Hallsville, in Boone County. The church impressed me as one anxious to accomplish good throughout the county. We had one or more representatives from Kansas City, Columbia, Centralia, and Union, and a very good-sized audience of the members. If we had a few more like these good people at Hallsville, as well as these representatives, we could start an evangelistic campaign, not only in Boone County, but throughout the central part of the State. It is a great pleasure to preach for people of this sort. I was asked to return to be with them on the first Lord's day in June. I am due to be with the church near Slater next Sunday. I have been visiting them almost two years. It is very encouraging to note that we have at least a few who are so loving and true. I pray that the Lord may bless us. —S. W. Bell.

Fayetteville, Tenn., May 8.—Brother A. B. Barret, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., has just closed a twelve-days' meeting with the church here, resulting in eighteen baptisms. His forceful, yet tender and kind, presentation of the gospel both to the world and to the congregation has been of inestimable value to the church and is very highly appreciated by the membership. We are very glad to have had with us such a noble servant of God who stands foursquare for the word of Jehovah, and who brings conviction to his audience because of his clear, comprehensible, and unmistakable delivery of the Lord's truth. The song service was led by Brother W. Clarence Cooke, of Tracy City, Tenn., and was a demonstration of efficient working of God's desires in musical praise.

CALOMEL ROBBED OF NAUSEATING QUALITIES

Medicinal Virtues Retained and Improved—Unpleasant and Dangerous Qualities Removed—New Tablet Named "Calotabs."

A recent triumph of modern pharmacy is the "denauseated" calomel tablet known to the drug trade as "Calotabs." Calomel, the most generally useful of all medicines, thus enters upon a wider field of popularity—purified and refined from those objectionable qualities which have heretofore limited its use.

In biliousness, constipation, and indigestion, and in a great variety of liver, stomach, and kidney troubles, calomel was the one successful remedy, but its use was often neglected on account of its sickening qualities. Now it is the easiest and most pleasant of medicines to take. One tablet on the tongue at bedtime, with a swallow of water—that's all. No taste, no griping, no nausea, no danger. A good night's sleep, and the next morning you are feeling fine, with a clean liver and a big appetite. Eat what you please.

Beware of imitations! Genuine Calotabs are sold only in "checkerboard" (black and white) packages bearing the copyrighted trade-mark, "Calotabs." The large, family size sells for thirty-five cents; vest-pocket size, ten cents. All dealers are authorized to refund the price if you are not delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

Every worshiper of Christ must in his measure make disciples, and proclaim the undying commands and truths of Christ; and then with him too there shall tarry the presence of the Most Holy, as the sanction and warrant of his work.—Liddon.

West Point, Miss., May 11.—On Saturday before the second Lord's day in April, in answer to an urgent appeal "to come over and help us," I went to Hudsonville, Miss. Out in the country a few miles I found a few faithful Christians. I preached three times, and promised to be with them the first week in September for a several-days' meeting. This was my first time to be with them. On the fourth Lord's day in April I was with the brethren at the Cork Schoolhouse, near Ackerman, Miss. This is the home of Brother H. D. Jeffcoat, a faithful preacher of the gospel. Also the home of Brother Jeffcoat's father-in-law, Brother J. W. Swofford, also a faithful preacher of the gospel. Brother Swofford has done a great deal to build up the Master's cause in that country. He is held in very high esteem by both saint and sinner in his community, and so is Brother Jeffcoat. I preached on Saturday night and three times on Lord's day to good audiences. Last year and year before I held their annual meeting. They engaged me for a two-weeks' meeting for this summer; but I was requested to give up some of my meetings to a young brother who is just starting out, and I gave up this one. I feel that this is a good place for a young brother to begin. On April 26 and 27 I was with the brethren at Mount Pleasant, near Millport, Ala. I preached two nights for them. Although they are farmers and had plenty to keep them busy, they attended well. They have a Wednesday-night prayer meeting, and attend in almost full force. I think I have never met a more faithful band of Christians. On the fifth Lord's day in April I was with the brethren at Antioch, near Vernon, Ala. I preached three sermons and promised to be with them a week in July. I held my first meeting there five years ago. In a short meeting of three days I baptized nine of the best boys and girls in the community. I was reared in Lamar County, north of Vernon, and, though I have been in Mississippi fifteen years, I have done almost as much preaching in that and other counties in Alabama as I have in Mississippi while living here.—H. C. Harris.

The Meeting at Tabernacle, N. J.

BY E. E. SHOULDERS.

Recently (April 3-16) I was in a good meeting at Tabernacle, N. J., in the central part of the State. This is the only white congregation in the State. There are between twenty-five and thirty members, and in fairly good working condition. Considering that the community is harassed on every side by an element in sympathy with evangelistic assumption, the meeting was a success. Though only one confession and baptism, this man was for several years the bitterest enemy the church had in that locality.

Brother E. E. Joyner, of Philadelphia, through his untiring efforts, has preached and labored under most adverse circumstances, and, as a result, has established the cause of Christ in that part of the State. Regardless of his business in Philadelphia, he was present at a number of services and rendered valuable assistance. Also, John Edwin Cutts and Francis Allen were great helpers in the meeting. They figure very prominently in the work and leadership of their home congregation.

After the meeting I returned to my regular work and found everything moving along in very good order. Here in this great mass of five million people there is much to do and much to contend with, and at times it almost makes one feel like playing the part of Elijah when he went away and sat down under the juniper tree and said, "It is enough."

I am advocating the free-literature idea here, and contend that it will be our first means of reaching more people in this great city than any other way at this time; and since the church here is not able to bear so much expense, may I ask, who will be the first of our readers to make a donation of the very best free literature you can find? Address me at 145 West One Hundred and Eighteenth Street.

We now have a splendid recognition in the hotel church directories of the ten leading hotels in New York City. Thus onward we go, and feel that there is a better day ahead. We feel like our friends and visitors coming to New York cannot miss us now, and we shall look forward to their coming.

At Home Once More.

BY J. D. TANT.

I have just returned from Texas with my little boy who was operated on in December for tuberculosis of the bone. Our last X-ray examination shows a small particle of dead bone, which will, perhaps, require a second operation in six or eight months; but at the present he can walk on crutches and is doing well. A number of my brethren have been exceedingly kind to me and have sent me between fifty and one hundred dollars to help in time of need, for which I am indeed thankful. I greatly appreciate their love and kindness.

I have asked a number of congregations to help me to support Brother P. J. Taylor in a mission meeting at Quitman, Ark. The help I received was not sufficient to justify Brother Taylor to come, and, as I live here, I have decided to use the contributions in supporting Brother Vernon Phillips to lead songs for me, and do the preaching myself. If any of those who have contributed are unwilling for their contributions to go into this meeting because we did not get Brother Taylor, I will return it to them. Our meeting began on the fourth Sunday in April and will continue three Sundays. I will then go to Memphis, Tenn., for a tent meeting. I will be glad for all who have relatives or friends in Memphis who have quit going to church to write me, and I will do all I can to get them interested while there.

On account of two meetings being called off, I will have time during June and the first half of July for two more meetings while in that section. If any congregations or brethren in that part would desire the same, let them please write me.

My preaching and debating last year forced me to run over ten different States and to spend over two hundred dollars railroad fare. I would rather localize my work this year, if brethren will write me in time.

Unity Among Congregations.

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

It is but reasonable to think that if all of the congregations were patterned after the same Book there would be unity among them, just as if a number of pales are sawed by the same pattern they will present a unit or likeness. It is true that congregations were not at unity in the days of apostles, yet they settled the matter in a spiritual way and all was as God ordered. The church at Jerusalem had one idea of circumcision and the church at Antioch had another, yet they did not stay that way, but went in the way of the Lord and settled all for unity. It is not such a sin to be divided as it is to stay so. No doubt there will be many who will miss the heavenly home, not because a connection could not be made, but for the lack of a real settlement. The promise is to him that turns to the Lord; and they that are sick need the physician, but the remedy must be used.

It is said that there is a lack of unity between the congregations of the North and South, of the East and West. Neither climate nor location ought to make a difference; all ought to be so closely connected and so much alike that one would feel at home wherever he should meet. Sectionalism may in a short time develop sects. It is possible to have sectarianism among those who refuse to be called "sects" or work with them. Care must be exercised here. The church is spoken of as a "congregation" in one place (1 Cor. 1: 2), and referred to as a whole in other places (Matt. 16: 18; Heb. 12: 23). Then, as such is clearly taught, the whole is made up of all its parts, and each part is a unit of the whole, and the whole a unity of the parts. It follows, therefore, that any unit that is not at unity with the whole could not be at unity with the parts. So every congregation that is scriptural is at unity with every other one that is such. This ought to be seen and practiced more.

It is also possible for several to saw by the same pattern and no two pieces be alike. The fault might not be with the pattern, but with the one who saws. It takes skill to saw to the line. Just so it is possible for many to use the word of God and not practice the same way, because one is better able to get all the truth than the other. It would not be the fault of the word, but a lack of skill in the use of it. (Heb. 5: 12-14.) Here we have babes and full-grown men represented; and who would really expect a babe to be as true to hew to the line as one full-grown? Nor would you expect the full-grown to divide, reject, and cast aside the babe because of a mistake. Rather, you would expect him to bear with, teach, and show how to do all in the right way. Those congregations that consider themselves to be full-grown generally leave the babes to starve by themselves.

There is a spirit of selfishness that says, "We will be united;" but they mean it must be as "we" say, regardless of others, and especially of God's word. The only way is to let the Book be the guide, and all fall in line and march on, keeping step with the word of the Lord. Do not read in nor out what suits you, but let it speak for all, and make a plea for every one to bow to it.

It is said that papers are the cause of divisions; but if it were not for the congregations taking the papers, the division would be small. "But it is the man or men who edit the papers," another says. Yes, but if congregations would not stand for those men, the papers would soon fall. So in reality congregations are to bring about the unity among the congregations. What a blessing if such could be, and what a curse if it is not done!

The Fellowship.

BY F. P. FONNER.

The meaning of the word "fellowship" is joint participation, or partnership in business. It seems to be a question with some as to whether the early churches of Christ had a treasury or not. This matter is very easily settled. In the very beginning of the church, "they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." (See Acts 2: 42.) Now, since there can be no partnership in business without a treasury, the mother church in Jerusalem had one; and if that church is to be our model in practice, then every church of Christ must have a treasury. This is imperative. Furthermore, any partner who refuses to put into the treasury a portion of his earnings for the general good is guilty before God. He thus violates an important New Testament principle, and he also thus lays the whole burden of expense upon the other partners. Sometimes some partners are financially ruined because these false partners do not do their duty. This is worse than robbing a partner in any secular business, because it is also robbing God of his just dues. Men must not trifle with God. It is so very dangerous. No person can maintain a Christian character who thus robs God.

Robbing God was one of Israel's most heinous sins. It brought upon the nation almost endless trouble. "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." (See Mal. 3: 8-10.) Fleshly Israel is a type of spiritual Israel; and if the nation of Israel brought upon herself a curse by withholding that which justly belonged to God, then there is some danger for us now. Each person must contribute to the general fund according to his prosperity.

Some so-called "churches of Christ" are now resting under a curse; and the curse will never be removed until they attend to the contribution, as the Lord directs. But when must it be attended to? "On the first day of every week." The "Living Oracles" puts it thus: "On the first day of every week, let each of you lay somewhat by itself, according as he may have prospered, putting it into the treasury; that when I come, there may then be no collections." (See 1 Cor. 16: 2.) This is evidently correct. The portion of our earnings separated at home must be carried to the place of meeting and deposited in the Lord's treasury. This is a most sacred obligation. There is no evading its force. There is every reason for attending to the fellowship. It must never be neglected.

From East Tennessee.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

Brother Will J. Cullum is now in the second week of a tent meeting at Big Springs, a suburb of Cleveland. While the incessant rains have hindered much, yet the interest is fine and still growing. Four have been added by commendation and one made the confession last night. We look for several others.

Brother Charles Holder is in a good meeting at Athens, Tenn. He recently held a good meeting at Etowah, Tenn.

Prof. E. C. Coffman was with the little church at Rogersville, Tenn., last Lord's day and preached two able discourses to interested and appreciative audiences. He is to go back there on the first Lord's day in June and hold a several-days' meeting.

Brother R. C. White is to begin a meeting at Lenior City, Tenn., on the third Lord's day in this month.

We have been having some very pleasant and instructive rural cottage prayer meetings and Bible studies in the neighborhood of Cleveland this spring. People who were not members of the church have welcomed us into their homes with these meetings.

On the fifth Lord's day in April, at 11 A.M. and 3 P.M., I preached to good audiences in the school auditorium at Niota, Tenn. The work there is starting off very nicely. We are doing our best to raise funds to build a house there. We must have it. The town is putting up a new school building. The old building is to be sold and the proceeds are to go into the new building. When the old one is sold, then we will be out. Certainly we will not let the work there drag or be put out entirely for want of a house. We believe and almost know that when brethren and sisters everywhere realize the conditions there they will respond liberally with their means and help us build a house.

I am to begin a meeting at Rockwood, Tenn., on the third Lord's day in this month.

We are busily planning and arranging for our summer and fall campaign of protracted meetings in East Tennessee.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

A Trying Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Phila., Pa.—“When I was going through the Change of Life I was weak, nervous, dizzy and had headaches. I was troubled in this way for two years and was hardly able to do my work. My friends advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am very sorry that I did not take it sooner. But I have got good results from it and am now able to do my housework most of the time. I recommend your medicine to those who have similar troubles. I do not like publicity, but if it will help other women I will be glad for you to use my letter.”—Mrs. FANNIE ROSENSTEIN, 882 N. Holly St., Phila., Pa.

Detroit, Michigan—“During the Change of Life I had a lot of stomach trouble and was bothered a great deal with hot flashes. Sometimes I was not able to do any work at all. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your little books and took it with very good results. I keep house and am able now to do all my own work. I recommend your medicine and am willing for you to publish my testimonial.”—Mrs. J. S. LIVERNOIS, 2051 Junction Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon “Ailments Peculiar to Women” will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

The critical time of a woman's life usually comes between the years of 45 and 50, and is often beset with annoying symptoms such as nervousness, irritability, melancholia. Heat flashes or waves of heat appear to pass over the body, cause the face to be very red and often bring on headache, dizziness and a sense of suffocation.

Another annoying symptom which comes at this time is an inability to recall names, dates or other small facts. This is liable to make a woman lose confidence in herself. She becomes nervous, avoids meeting strangers and dreads to go out alone.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted to help women at this time. It exercises a restorative influence, tones and strengthens the system, and assists nature in the long weeks and months covering this period. Let it help carry you through this time of life. It is a splendid medicine for the middle-aged woman. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

“Pe-ru-na has been a Godsend to me. I feel safe in saying that it saved my life. I was all run down and miserable when I commenced taking Pe-ru-na, but am on the road to recovery now. I cannot thank you too much.”

A letter like this brings hope and the promise of health to every sick and suffering woman. Perhaps you know what it means to have your daily duties a misery, every movement an effort, stomach deranged, pains in the head, back and loins most of the time, nerves raw and quivering—not a moment day or night free from suffering.

Do as Mrs. Anspaugh did. Take Pe-ru-na. Don't wait but start right away.

INSPIRATION OF THE SCRIPTURES.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

In this age of doubt, skepticism, and atheism, when writers and speakers are attacking the Bible, it is important and even necessary for the devout defender of the faith to study anew the inspiration of the Scriptures. It becomes necessary for those who have previously studied the question to make a thorough review of the question for one's own confirmation; it is also necessary to teach the young, that they may have firm ground upon which to rest their faith in the Scriptures. Every age has produced its critics and enemies of the Bible. These critics have not always assailed the Bible from the same angle; hence, those who would "contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints" must necessarily change the method of defense to meet successfully the different methods of attack. However, the fundamental principle of the Scripture, included in its inspiration, has been the general point of attack.

Since the days of Celsus, the first of the early opponents of the Bible, to the present time, the question of inspiration has been discussed. Celsus tried to undermine the faith of Christians by attempting to show that the Scriptures were not from God. There have been many classes of opponents to the inspiration of the Scriptures. They have gone under different names as best suited their manner of attack. Sometimes they have appeared under the title of "Ebionites," "Gnostics," "Valentinians"—higher critics, textual critics, and modern "viewpointers." It does not matter under what name they have fought or attack the Christian's hope. The inspiration of the Scripture has been involved. The opponent of inspiration to-day is very courteous in manner, serious in spirit, learned in profession, but deadly in his intentions to destroy faith in the Bible. They have shifted the ground and are not so much concerned about who wrote the different books of the Bible, nor so dogmatic about the impossibility of miracles, but are much concerned about whether the Scriptures are inspired.

The word "inspiration," I believe, is found only twice in the Bible, and this use of the word is given only in the Authorized Version. The Revision does not use the word "inspiration;" the word "inspired" is used instead, and it is used in the Revision only one time. Philology teaches us that the word "inspire" came into the English language from the French about the fourteenth century, and had nothing but a theological meaning until the sixteenth century. When we speak of the books of the Bible being inspired, we mean that they are the products of inspired men—that is, men "breathed into by God," or the Holy Spirit. Inspiration is usually defined as a supernatural influence "exerted on the sacred writers by the Spirit of God, by virtue of which their writings are given divine trustworthiness." It may be closer in keeping with the true thought to say that the Scriptures are "God-breathed"—that is, the product of God—or that God hath spoken, instead of saying that God breathed into men who have spoken. The truth seems to be that God hath spoken by his Spirit through man, rather than that God by his Spirit breathed into man and man spoke. "But men spake from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit." (2 Pet. 1: 21.) The men who spoke from God are here declared to have been taken up by the Holy Spirit and used as an expression of God's will. The Holy Spirit uses man and his organs of speech in expressing God's will. It is God by his Holy Spirit humanizing divine thought so that man may comprehend.

There are three divine-human agencies which have been used by Jehovah. There is a divine-human person—Christ Jesus; there is a divine-human institution—the church of the living God; there is a divine-human Book—the Bible. I use the term "divine-human," putting the divine part first, because God has put first his divine personality, his divine efforts, and divine wisdom; but he has used human instrumentality in revealing his own personality, his own institution, and his revealed will, and for this reason I speak of these as "divine-human."

The inspiration of the Scriptures is another way of speaking of the Bible as a divine-human book. There are many difficult questions that arise in the study of inspiration. I shall not attempt to settle, explain, or satisfy the mind of the reader concerning these questions. I mention them only to call attention to the difficulties, that all may be on their guard in studying the question. Are the Scriptures inspired in word and in thought, or are they inspired in thought only? Are all the Scriptures inspired, or only a part? What is the proof of inspiration? Are the Scriptures free from error, if inspired? These and many other questions have been raised in studying this subject.

The Bible is either inspired in toto, or it is inspired only in part, or none of it is inspired. I do not know of any other disjunction in regard to the proposition. In considering the last disjunction, we may state that if none of the Scriptures are inspired, then the Bible sinks to the low level of human production. If it is not what it claims to be, a message from God to his intelligent creatures, it is a human production which falsifies. It must, therefore, fall below the very best of human productions, if it is not inspired; it is self-contradictory, because it claims to come from God and reveal his will unto man, it claims to point men from the pathway of earth to immortal glory. If it is not inspired, it did not come from God and cannot lead men unto God; it is then a bundle of contradictions and falsifies the proposition that it purports to maintain. Any work, any book, or any combination of books or volumes which makes such exalted claims, claims so far-reaching, and yet cannot fulfill these claims, cannot verify the premises therein made, must be an illusion that deceives the human heart and falls beneath the level of even a good human production. If none of the Bible is inspired, it is not worthy our study and should be dismissed at once.

Our Contributors

Mission Work.

BY D. P. CRAIG.

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

The purpose of this article is to call the attention of the brethren to a subject in which every loyal Christian should be interested. We have often observed that in our opposition to all human schemes for missionary work and co-operation in the churches we have about quenched the true scriptural spirit of evangelization and missions with many. Some of us have overlooked a very important lesson—viz., that it is just as easy to go to extremes on one subject as another or one way as another. If I were called upon to indicate the greatest obstacle to New Testament Christianity for the past fifty years, I would say that it is the lack of co-operation of the churches in the work of sustaining our weak fields and mission work generally. Had we been as diligent in the proper scriptural methods of mission work as in other matters, I verily believe we would have taken the world for Christ.

I would like to call especial attention to the great need of mission work in Mississippi, and especially North Mississippi. Much has been said about our missions in Africa, Canada, Colorado, and even South Mississippi, but I do not remember that I have seen any lengthy article from any of the brethren respecting the work in North Mississippi. I know of a number of earnest efforts in the spread of New Testament Christianity in this part of the South which proved to be miserable failures, as far as visible results are concerned. This calls to mind a famous saying among us—viz.: When we start a work in a hard field and are unwilling to fight it to a completion, we say that no visible results were evident, but that a great work was accomplished. I doubt not that in some cases this is true. But the truth of the matter is that just as we were about ready to root and ground that district in the gospel of Christ we abandoned the work, and so we left it to perish miserably like a root out of dry ground. One evangelist after another comes here fired with the zeal and spirit of primitive Christianity to accomplish much. But—lo!—it is a failure. Now, I do not say that they are failures in every sense of the word; but as far as accomplishing what ought to have been accomplished, it is in that sense a woeful failure. I have not yet despaired, and something must be done about the work of the Lord here in Mississippi. Wake up, ye sluggards and sleepers! For souls are crying and yearning for that bread of life which alone can satisfy all the longings of the hungry and thirsty souls.

If ever the church of Christ needed to fire itself with more zeal, it seems to me that this is the time. Has the old-time spirit of evangelization become a thing of the past with us? Are we going to be contented with what we have done, as though there is nothing to be done in the future?

A few of us are planning for some big things, for the planting of the old Jerusalem gospel, and this is the clarion call to every true disciple to consider seriously our great need. We are tired of sectarianism, soothsayers, and "Doctors of Divinity," and want to see more congregations in this great State instead of so many doctrines which establish "some branch of the church."

I know of but three preachers in this part of the State. Brother W. E. Crum labored with us for some time, but is now in the central part of the State. Owing to my secular work, being a railroad man, I am unable to devote full time to evangelistic work. We have one zealous and hard-working preacher. Brother W. F. Etheridge is devoting most of his time in mission work and sustaining the things that remain. We have a few good congregations and many weak ones. But many of our towns and communities have no working congregations and many have no disciples at all. Brother Etheridge must be supported, and we must have help if we are to make any new conquests for the Lord.

This reminds us of an evil—if it be proper to call it "an evil"—which has wasted the strength and zeal of our mission work. It is that custom of discarding the faithful evangelists of a certain field and securing noted preachers from distant States, paying them large sums for one single meeting; and that, generally speaking, is about the end and sum of our evangelistic efforts. We need men here who will come to stay, to preach and labor and do thorough mission work until all the people have heard the word of the Lord Jesus and our towns have growing New Testament churches. We feel the need of more "settled ministers," so called, and less unsystematic and poorly directed efforts. If it becomes our imperative duty to coöperate as individual disciples with our immediate congregations, it is also as scriptural and necessary that we coöperate as the churches of Christ in pushing forward the word of the Lord Jesus.

I have spent a number of years in this part of the State and am in position to observe our weakness, needs, and opportunities. Now is one of the most opportune times for the reception of the gospel that I have ever seen, and it only calls for some better coöperation than we have exhibited in the past to build the cause of the Lord.

Our plans now are mission campaigns. In one of our recent phrases, it is a "drive" for more extensive gospel preaching and more and better working congregations. We want congregations to work, as well as preachers, and, therefore, develop more elders and preachers. Too little regard has been paid to training elders for our weak congregations and in encouraging young men for the ministry of the gospel. We want men and women who will volunteer to help us, who will lend us their prayers, support, and money. We want the help of all the brethren in Mississippi and adjoining States. We still say that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation and will translate men and women from the power of darkness to the light of God's dear Son if once shed forth into their hearts.

Our first need is a good tent. We are open for suggestions and funds from the brethren far and near. Do not be afraid to help us; the people here are dying for the gospel, hungering and willing to hear his blessed word. Help us to carry the gospel to every town and village in North Mississippi this year. I shall be pleased to hear from the brethren in connection with this work. Any contribution to assist us in supporting one or two able evangelists and in securing a tent will be gratefully received and promptly acknowledged.

Conscience.

BY C. A. NORRIS.

I. WHAT IS CONSCIENCE?

Conscience is not a faculty which gives an intuitive knowledge of right. It is sometimes thought man possesses an inner faculty which will always reveal that which is right. According to this idea, the person who heeded his conscience would always be right. But the Scriptures teach that any one can be conscientious and at the same time wrong. (Acts 23: 1; 1 Tim. 1: 13.)

Conscience is not moral judgment. Many who avoid the error of supposing conscience to be a faculty affording an intuitive knowledge of right fall into the error of supposing it to be an acquired knowledge of right. Conscience is not moral judgment. In 1 Cor. 8: 7 we read of a Christian who thought it wrong to eat meat which had been sacrificed to an idol. This person is also called a person of weak conscience. In 1 Cor. 10: 29 it is pointed out that the Christian of weak conscience was right in his moral judgment. Certainly conscience is not moral judgment.

Conscience is the moral sense; it is moral consciousness. The original word used by Paul is defined by Thayer: "The soul as distinguishing between what is morally good and bad, prompting to do the former and to shun the latter, commending the one and condemning the other." The human being can approach a problem inquiring the right involved; and as he thus approaches the problem he is conscious of obligation to accept what is found to be right. This moral sense which enables him so to approach the problem is conscience. Conscience is the moral sense. Just as the sense of sight enables one to see material objects, conscience enables one to see the moral element involved in any problem. Conscience is the moral sense. This is the sense in which the Scriptures and a sound philosophy use the term.

II. WHAT IS THE OFFICE OF CONSCIENCE?

The office of conscience is that of prompting persons to be obedient unto God. Obedience to God is the end toward which conscience functions. Conscience provides a sense of moral obligation which leads to obedience. Conscience as possessed by the human being enables God to address to man a moral message and enables the human being to perceive the obligation imposed. Without conscience man would be on the plane with the brute. The brute has no morals and cannot be taught any because he has no conscience or moral sense. But man possesses a moral sense which makes possible a realization of moral obligation which leads to obedience.

Conscience does not cease when it provides a sense of moral obligation. Conscience rewards according to respect shown moral obligation. The man who disregards moral obligation is smitten with the stripes of remorse. O, the stripes of remorse! But conscience does not always chide him to whom she speaks. Conscience confers the blessings of an inner peace upon him who respects moral obligation. (Acts 24: 16; 2 Tim. 4: 6-8.)

WHAT SHOULD BE OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD CONSCIENCE?

We should respect conscience. The person who violates his conscience sins. (Rom. 14: 14, 21.) A person should never violate his conscience by doing that which his moral judgment tells him is wrong.

We must put at the service of conscience a moral judgment formed by the word of God. Conscience impels us to do that which our moral judgment tells us is right. It becomes perfectly clear, then, that, if our moral judgment is wrong, our conscience impels us into sin. We should make our moral judgment accurate and trustworthy by shaping it according to the word of God. (2 Tim. 3: 16; 2 Pet. 1: 3.)

CONCLUDING THOUGHTS.

In the light of the Scriptures the troublesome question of conscience becomes clear. Conscience is simply the moral sense which enables a person to view a question from the moral point of view and which prompts him to do that which his moral judgment tells him is right. Conscience, then, is one of the crowning perfections of personality. In order that conscience may accomplish her work, there should be put at its service a moral judgment shaped by the word of God. Further, the promptings of conscience should be respected.

This study in conscience enables us to see the fallacy of supposing a person is certainly right if he only satisfies his conscience. It becomes abundantly evident that a person may satisfy his conscience and still be lost. Satisfying the conscience is necessary, but it is also necessary to be right. When a person does that which his moral judgment, guided by the word of God, points out as right, he satisfies his conscience and also pleases the Lord.

"There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." (Prov. 14: 12.)
 "The simple believeth every word; but the prudent man looketh well to his going." (Verse 15.)

I dreamed I sat with Conscience
 In a place where time had ceased,
 And we talked of my former living
 In the land where the years increased;
 And I felt I should have to answer
 The questions put to me,
 And to face the answers and questions
 Throughout an eternity.
 The ghosts of forgotten actions
 Came floating before my sight,
 And things that I dreamed were dead things
 Were alive with a terrible might.
 And I know of the future judgment
 How dreadful soe'er it be,
 That to sit alone with Conscience
 Will be judgment enough for me.

Christians Obey Civil Laws.

BY ARTHUR B. TENNEY.

President Harding made an address in Washington not long ago in which he said that "the church can render no higher service than to exert its utmost influence in behalf of 'frank and willing obedience to the law of the land.'" (Quotation taken from Literary Digest.)

The President had all churches in mind when he used the term "church;" hence, we may take our part of the admonition. We may also take it in good grace; for we, as children of God, find it our duty to "do that which is good" (Rom. 13: 3), and to "be subject to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake" (1 Pet. 2: 13).

The Cincinnati Commercial-Appeal comments as follows on Mr. Harding's appeal: "This message is both a compliment and a challenge. The purport of it is that the province of the church—all churches—is to create such atmosphere of reverence for the eternal laws of righteousness as will inspire uniform wholesome respect for upright government."

The very spirit of Christ, the very law of Christ, is to the effect of subjection to civil law. We must recognize the necessity for government, for there are many people who will not respect the rights and property of others unless they fear to do otherwise. The officers are to provide this fear, are to institute punishment on the evildoer. (Rom. 13: 2-4.) As for us, we are to respect the property and rights of others; hence, there will be no clash between us and the officers. There may be a question, and is one, as to whether a Christian should take part in this officer work, but that need not enter in here. I am discussing the attitude a Christian should take in respect to his own personal subjection to civil law.

There are some people who will blame an officer for poor work, when those people are doing all they can to hinder him in his work. I know a case in which a city policeman arrested a negro for selling liquor to a white man, caught the man in the act, and some of the townspeople censured the officer for making the arrest. But such is not the attitude of Christians. Put no stumblingblock in the way of one who is performing his official duty. No one likes to live where there are no civil officers or where the civil officers are negligent of their work. To live in such a community may be similar to a statement of a doctor which was made to me. He said he belonged to no church, but would not live where there were no churches. While he is not a member of any church, he in no wise obstructs the churches in their work. While we are not officers, we in no wise should obstruct their work, for their work is for our safety and protection.

The comment made by the Appeal is worthy of study: "Create such atmosphere of reverence for the eternal laws of righteousness as will inspire uniform wholesome respect for upright government." One who has not developed in the scale of righteousness to the point of respect for upright government has need for more spiritual development.

A person who is a lover of God will live such a life that no officer will have cause for suspicion that he does wrong in the terms of civil law. In fact, if all persons were Christians in the developed sense of the term, there would be no need for civil officers. A corollary to this statement is, that lawbreaking diminishes as people become Christianized. Another is, desire to do wrong diminishes as love for God expands.

Let us, as a church, as God's people, make such a decided stand in conduct and in teaching in favor of respect for upright law that God will be pleased with our efforts. As a by-product we will win the respect and admiration of those in official authority, which will be worth much to us. Keep the church pure in the matter; let each individual child of God respect and obey law whether watched by an officer or not; and our spiritual value to our respective communities will be such as will have a great influence for God.

Let me illustrate. In Mississippi lives a man who belongs to a denomination. He likes whisky. As long as the law allowed a man to keep liquor in his house, he kept it for his own moderate use. When the law was passed forbidding even the keeping of liquor, he ceased to keep it—not that he was afraid he would be caught, but because of his respect for law. Let all of us strive toward a type of citizenship as true as that of the man mentioned.

Please Help the Work in New York.

BY S. H. HALL.

The following letter from Brother McKee, of New York City, is self-explanatory. The Russell Street brethren sorely regret that we could not start them a donation so soon as this was received, but we will get on the regular list as soon as possible.

May I not insist that those who have made pledges please get busy and pay up unpaid promises? No man can work anywhere without some kind of support, and this is especially true of such a place as New York. It is a shame that the church of Christ does not have one of her strongest churches there now, well equipped to preach the gospel to every nationality in that city of millions. The only reason we have it not is because we did not try years ago to establish one. We let the devil have the field. I am so glad there are souls in that city who have banded themselves together to, as far as possible, redeem the time. Let us help them till they are fully on their feet.

Will not you, my brother, do something, and do it now? Call the attention of your local church to it and see that they help. Send all donations to Brother McKee, whose correct address you will find below.

Brother Hall: I am writing you that you may know what the situation is here. We have promises from several churches to have regular monthly fellowship in the Lord's work here; but some of them are behind, and unless they pay up and others join in, we will not be able to keep an evangelist here. Brother and Sister Shoulders have entered heart and soul into the work, and all seem pleased with them; but this is a very hard field to work on account of the people being so indifferent and careless concerning the salvation of their souls, and on account of the lack of finances we are unable to secure a place of worship where we can have a morning service, and people do not like to go to church on Sunday afternoon.

Now, Brother Hall, if the church at Ninth and Russell Streets would like to have fellowship in establishing primitive Christianity in this great city, your work will be appreciated by the church here; and as "it is more blessed to give than to receive," the greater blessing will be yours. Pray for us, and, if possible, send something each month to help keep Brother and Sister Shoulders here.

Most sincerely and fraternally, GEORGE M. MCKEE.

Field Notes.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

My first stop during the past week was Sharon, on the Illinois Central Railroad, between Martin and Jackson. There I found a good congregation. Brother J. A. Wilson keeps the post office and is a leader in church affairs. He took me to his home and helped me in my work. Brother Bondurant is a Confederate veteran, and his reminiscences are very interesting.

The next appointment was at Greenfield. I was met at the train by Brother J. L. Holland, and he introduced me to the brethren and helped me to find the people I wanted to see. Brother Holland is a splendid preacher. I heard him preach a funeral sermon. He lived at one time in Texas, and was well acquainted with Brethren J. W. Jackson, A. McGary, and Hansbrough. He has preached at many places in West Tennessee and a few places in Middle Tennessee. He is spoken of where I have been as one of the best of men—one that lives what he preaches. Brother Holland has a son, Leonidas. He is a musician of considerable ability, and teaches piano and vocal music in the Greenfield Training School, also he sings for the brethren during the protracted-meeting season.

From Greenfield I went to Bradford. Brother W. F. Bryant met me at the train. There is no church in Bradford, but appointments had been made at Locust Grove and Skull Bone. Brother Bryant took me to these places in his car. He is the father of Brother David F. Bryant, of the David Lipscomb College. Also, he has a daughter who teaches music in the public schools of Bradford. This town is named for our Brother Bradford, who still lives there. He is now eighty-eight years old, having been born in 1834. He is a descendant of Governor Bradford, of Massachusetts, who sent the Indians the rattlesnake skin filled with powder and bullets as a token of what they might expect if they attacked the whites. Our aged brother still prays before retiring as his mother taught him when a child.

After preaching on Wednesday night at Locust Grove and on Thursday night at Skull Bone, I went to Milan. There I preached in the "digressives" house which they have lately turned over to us. The organ is still there, but it never says a word. Now, if everybody will let it alone, I don't think it will ever squeal out in meeting again.

From Milan I took the Louisville and Nashville Railroad to Humboldt, where I was met by our worthy brother, A. B. Gunter, who is a song leader, singing teacher, an able preacher, and last, but not least, a good man. I found that he had made an appointment for Saturday night, as well as for Sunday and Sunday night. He is the first man since I have been out here to suggest a Saturday-night meeting. He is my idea of a live-wire preacher. I was not rained out this last week at any place; so I got in full time—eight sermons.

Sharon, Greenfield, Locust Grove, Skull Bone! From the "Plain of Sharon," through the beautiful green field, through the locust thicket, to the skull bone! It sounds bad, but the trip was not unpleasant. The facts are, I had my best meeting at Skull Bone, and next best at Locust Grove. There was almost a houseful of people at these country places, and they showed interest in what was being said. That Skull Bone has something inside of it.

At Milan I heard the notable Martin quartet—the only family I know of with a good quartet all its own. It is a mixed quartet—three boys and a girl. However, one of the boys was away, and really I only heard a trio; but it does well as a spike team.

I don't know whether to call it "Humboldt," or a "Bumholdt." It did not impress me as a very religious town. No wonder, for it was named after a German infidel. Our brethren have a small congregation there. Some of them are zealous. Brother Gunter hopes they may get able to buy a lot and build in a more suitable location. They own their house and lot, but it could be located better. The "digressives" have a large house started. They have it up a few feet above the ground, and are using the basement. It will cost thirty-five thousand dollars to finish it. It is reported that they have the five thousand, and all they need now is the other thirty.

PLATES CONCERNING MORMONISM.

By a regrettable oversight, the above heading was omitted when the following plates were recently given a place in the Gospel Advocate. As the heading makes the purpose of their publication more intelligible in connection with R. B. Neal's exposure of Mormonism, we give them another insertion in our columns.

These plates were dug up near Kinderhook, Ill. We publish with request to the scholars, the Orientals especially, to tell us what language they are written in. A partial translation has been made by a writer. He needs confirmation by others before it can be accepted. We ask readers to show a copy of these cuts to any Chinaman, educated or uneducated, they may know, also to any Egyptian or Egyptian scholar. Send answers to R. B. Neal, Grayson, Ky.

While at Brother Gunter's, a neighbor came in and told of the arrival of the Gunters. She said they came in Saturday night, with only their trunks and grips. Yet, when the time came, they all went to church. She said: "I told my husband they were Catholics or Campbellites, one or the other." I am glad that we have established a reputation for going to church on Sunday morning. I wish we were as careful to attend every other meeting where prayer is wont to be made.

Twenty-three years ago to-day (May 15) I arrived in California.

On Sunday, May 14, the church at Obion, Tenn., held its annual reunion. Over a thousand people attended. Our meetinghouse was full, and the Methodists let us have their house, and it was filled. Brother John R. Williams, of Hornbeak, preached at our place, and Brother Joe Ratcliffe, of Bardwell, Ky., preached to the overflow crowd at the Methodist house. Dinner was served under a large tent, and then another sermon by Brother Williams in the afternoon. It was a great day.

This week I will spend in Obion County with Brother Williams, and then I am done in West Tennessee.

Those desiring the services of Brother Gunter in meetings or singings should write him at Humboldt, Tenn. He should be kept busy.

Words to Be Avoided.

There are two simple words in our language that have caused more misery than all the plagues of history. They have broken lifelong friendships, set brother against brother, separated lovers, and caused children to weep. These poisoned words have sent innocent persons to the gallows and have turned the debutante into a demimondaine. Think well before you let them pass your lips. They are: "They say."—Exchange.

True Civilization.

Lord Chief Justice Russell, before the American Bar Association at Saratoga, in 1896, said: "What, indeed, is true civilization? By its fruits you shall know it. It is not dominion, wealth, material luxury—nay, not even a great literature and education widespread, good though these may be. Civilization is not a veneer; it must penetrate to the heart and core of society. Its true signs are thought for the poor and suffering, chivalrous regard and respect for woman, the frank recognition of human brotherhood irrespective of race or color or nation or religion, the narrowing of the domain of mere force as a governing factor in the world, abhorrence of what is mean and cruel and vile, ceaseless devotion to the claims of justice." This, it seems to me, is not only a good definition of civilization, but of Christianity; it draws a distinct line between the kingdom of Christ and the kingdom of this world.—Selected.

SERMON OUTLINES

A Book of One Hundred and Fifty New Sermon Outlines

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has one hundred and fifty sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

The Conqueror.

BY ROY ROBINSON.

Conquer thyself, and all the world
That lies before is thine;
Conquer thyself, and thou shalt walk
In daily touch with the Divine.

Greater thy wealth than rubies rare,
Than gold or gain or pelf,
Or treasures from the Spanish Main,
When thou shalt conquer self.

Thy feet shall tread the highest plane;
Touch Fortune's topmost round,
And in the halls of lords and kings
Their echoes shall resound.

Yea, thou shalt walk in Beulah land
And by the waters calm;
Shalt quench thy thirst at Elim's wells,
And gather Gilead's balm.

Thy soul shall stand when others fall,
Shall watch when others sleep;
And when the state in peril stands,
Shall men thy counsel keep.

Thou wert not born a slave to serve
The things that pass away;
A goodly heritage is thine;
Thou art no lump of clay.

Thou art a king. The royal blood
Of manhood fills thy veins.
Wouldst be the slave of lust and vice,
And sell thy crown for chains?

Mightier who rules himself than he who takes
The forts of Verdun or Sedan!
Conquer thyself, and thou shalt be
The noblest work of God—a man!

How Satan Works.

BY S. H. HALL.

It is well that we give enough thought to the devil to know something of his way of going about things. In 2 Cor. 2: 11 Paul says: "That no advantage may be gained over us by Satan: for we are not ignorant of his devices." One of the things that is hurting us most to-day is that we seem to be as blind as death to the tricks or "wiles of the devil." (See Eph. 6: 11.) Would it not be wise for us to study well the Christian's armor as described in Eph. 6: 10-18, that our feet may ever rest on sure ground, being shod "with the preparation of the gospel of peace," and the "shield of faith" ever in use, that can ward off every fiery dart of the evil one, and the "sword of the Spirit," God's eternal truth, in hand, that is able to deal out death to any foe? If the Bible teaches one thing at all, it is the fact that the devil is on the job continually and that we are ever in danger, if not wide-awake, of being deceived by him.

Please carefully read what R. C. Foster, a prominent preacher in the Christian Church, says he heard in the classrooms at Harvard and Yale universities, as quoted from W. H. Book's Columbus Tabernacle leaflets:

What is Radicalism? In order that the uninformed may know just what I mean by "radicalism," I cite the following example: In the classroom at Harvard University, I heard an instructor offer the following explanation to a class of preachers: "The Christian world does not generally realize why Jesus cleansed the temple, driving out the traders and money changers. The real reason is that Jesus was a poor ignoramus—a poor ignorant country yocum who had been raised up in the sticks up in Galilee. He had never been to the city before, and did not understand that these money changers and traders were necessary for the temple worship," etc. There are all shades and degrees of radicalism. I have cited an extreme example.

Amazing as such an attack on Christianity is, even more abhorrent to the man who is ordinarily and commonly decent are the subtle, underhanded and unscrupulous methods by which such destructive teaching is propagated. I sat in the classroom at Yale and heard a young Congregational preacher ask the question as to how they were ever to get a church and get started to preaching when no church wanted a preacher who did not believe the Bible. The professor unblushingly responded: "Why, don't let them find it out. Don't be a fool and preach that the Bible is full of lies the first time you get into a pulpit. Preach exactly the same kind of sermons they have been accustomed to hear. Preach sound doctrine for a year or eighteen months until you get their confidence and they think you are the greatest person in the world. Then you can start in and preach anything you please, and they will follow you." But the student questioned further: "Yes, but, Professor, suppose some elder or deacon of the congregation insists on a quiet conference before you are called, and asks what you believe about this and that Old Testament miracle, etc., what can you do?" Hear the answer of the professor: "Dodge their questions. Refuse to answer them. Don't let them find out what you believe." Again, the student said: "But suppose a faction arises in the church over your teaching." The professor said: "Don't resign. Keep your job. Rally the young people about you, and you can shut the mouths of the older people through their sons and daughters."

Now I hereby charge that such radical teachings as threaten the future of all Christendom, and such unspeakable duplicity as I have described above, lurk in a hundred places in our brotherhood. Outstanding examples are the radical faculty of the College of the Bible (Transylvania College) at Lexington, and some of those who hide under the skirts of the United Christian Missionary Society of St. Louis. I can furnish a stack of proof mountain high to any one who desires it.

And I further charge that Dr. E. L. Powell, by his bold and untiring support and defense of this radical, underground group among us, has made himself a party to their whole propaganda. Years ago we would have rescued Transylvania College from their hands, if it had not been for the fact that Dr. Powell ever and anon came to their rescue. He could do this because he has a tremendous, driving personality; he is a born leader of men; and he is one of the most astute politicians the State of Kentucky has ever known.

On the above, I submit the following comments:

1. Is not the above statement of facts exactly in harmony with what Paul says about the devil and his agencies in the following words: "For such men are false apostles, deceitful workers, fashioning themselves into apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for even Satan fashioneth himself into an angel of light. It is no great thing therefore if his ministers also fashion themselves as ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works." (2 Cor. 11: 13-15.) Please to observe that it declares that these false teachers fashion themselves "into apostles of Christ"—that is, they teach that Christ is God's Son and proclaim their loyalty to him. They, doubtless, allow themselves at first to be one hundred per cent sound in their teaching. And note also that "Satan fashioneth himself into an angel of light." He comes one hundred per cent sound in his statements about Christ. But after rocking you to sleep in the arms of his loyalty (?), his deep consecration (?), his kindness (?), his goodness (?), to such a degree that you can hardly believe he would teach anything wrong, then it is he begins to digress from the truth by degrees, and you follow him, because he is your man, and you can hardly realize it is possible for you to be deceived. What Foster says he saw and heard hardly seem credible, but certain it is that such work the devil has ever done. Certain it is the "evil days" are upon us when teachers have the audacity to thus lecture their students who expect to enter the ministry, and the latter the stupidity to sit and take such advice.

2. But Brother Foster should know that never, in the history of the church, has there been a soul who loved self better than he does the peace and unity of the church that would not lie to get in his work. Let me ask you again to note the juxtaposition of "a false witness that uttereth lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren." (See Prov. 6: 16-19.) Let me say again that any man that loves not the oneness for which our Lord prayed will lie in order to have his way pushed upon the people. I doubt, seriously, if ever a church has been split over the introduction of the organ and the societies that the one who introduced these things did not first teach that, while he thought there was nothing wrong in using them, it was a matter of indifference whether they had them or not, and thus keeping the congregation wholly in the dark as to his intentions, he would quietly and deceitfully work his plans till he had his way in the matter. Most certainly I would not say that all who use these innovations are deceitful. The point I am making is, this is the way these divisive things came in, and, to a very large degree, it has been the history of their growth. And while I do not say men who have done this are as bad as the professor to whom Foster refers, yet I will say that such professors were not developed in a day, that such had their days of infancy in just such deception as preachers in the Christian Church have in many places practiced in their divisive work. When was that "radical faculty of the College of the Bible (Transylvania College) at Lexington" made? When did they start their growth that developed them into "such unspeakable" acts of "duplicitous"? Were they not born the day they ceased to love "the peace of Zion" and began to introduce things the New Testament does not teach, to the disruption of the church?

The Cleburne (Texas) Meeting.

BY C. A. BUCHANAN.

I feel justified in asking for space for a lengthy report of the annual meeting of the Central church of Christ, Cleburne, Texas, which began on April 9 and continued twenty-five days, closing on the night of May 3. The visible results of the meeting were one hundred and one additions to the congregation. Of this number, sixty-six were baptized, twenty-two were restored, and thirteen took membership. Of the number baptized, several were from the denominations. The attendance was great from the beginning. The first Sunday night our preacher was greeted by a capacity audience, really an overflow audience, as some were turned away for lack of room, and this despite the fact that there were five or six other revivals in progress in our city. Our building comfortably seats more than a thousand people, and during this meeting we took all the chairs from the classrooms and put them in the auditorium and then rented one hundred extra chairs. Even then we could not take care of the crowds.

We did not have so many additions as we had in the 1921 meeting, but in many respects this meeting was even better than last year's meeting. This meeting was extraordinary in many respects. It would be difficult to see how any meeting could have more hindrances. Besides the revivals in progress among the denominations, there were two plays at the high school during the time and hundreds of our children participated in these, and that, of course, took many of the parents and others away from the meeting on those nights. Then the last week of the meeting an almost constant downpour of rain, at times amounting to a flood, greatly hindered us. Another unusual feature is seen in the fact that practically all the additions were people of full-grown age, and the majority of them were men; and these were all well taught and came in with full understanding of what they were doing. There was nothing that even resembled sensationalism, sentimentalism, or excitement in the meeting, unless it was the size of the crowds. Some of us urged Brother Brewer to use more persuasion or to exhort more. He does very little of this, contrary to the impression that some people seem to get from the reports of the meetings he holds.

We all give God the glory for this meeting and attribute the success to the fact that the church began to plan and pray for this meeting long before it began and that the hand of the Lord was with us in the effort. Every service in the meeting was of a devotional character, being solemnized by much prayer on the part of the entire church. Much of the time we had sentence prayers in which many petitions were uttered for the meeting, which showed that the members had the meeting upon their hearts and that they were looking to God, from whom all our help cometh. Not only in the services, but all times of the day, prayers ascended from sincere and anxious hearts for God's blessings upon the meeting—prayers for the preacher, for the workers, and for the lost—that his providence might be linked with the preaching and with all our lawful efforts for the greatest possible good.

G. C. Brewer preached with earnestness and power, as he always does; but he confesses that many times at other places he has preached and prayed just as earnestly and had small results, because the church was not in the proper attitude toward God for God to give it an increase. A church with a membership that is filled with bitterness and internal strife, or a membership that is cold, indifferent, or worldly, cannot expect to be prospered of the Lord, for it is not in a position to nurture babes in Christ and give them that spiritual development which they must have to keep them in God's fellowship.

No doubt one reason God has prospered this church is that the peace of Christ rules in the hearts of its members. James says: "Where jealousy and faction are, there is confusion and every vile deed." And God, not being the author of these things, will not bless and prosper a congregation while it fosters a spirit which gives place to such things.

Paul admonishes us to look carefully, "lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby the many be defiled." One of our constant prayers is that nothing of the kind will ever arise to defile and disrupt the Cleburne church, and that God may continue his mercies upon us to keep us in that sweet harmony and fellowship which we now enjoy in the service of our God.

Though this is the third meeting Brother Brewer has held here in succession, and though he has been the local preacher for over six months, his sermons were fresh and stirring. Every sermon was brimful of scripture quotations. Nothing light and nothing compromising was in evidence. In the day services he read and commented on the book of Hebrews. As this epistle stresses the preëminence of Christ over the angels, over Moses and the prophets, it came in good connection with the series of night sermons on Christ the first part of the meeting. No one can charge that Christ was not preached in this meeting. He was exalted in every sermon and in every prayer, and the great audiences praised him in the songs. In practically every service the steps leading into Christ were stressed. Undenominational Christianity was set forth with such clearness that many people of the denominations saw it to be possible and practical. It was explained over and over again that people were not asked to join a denomination or to subscribe to anybody's views, but to obey Christ in simple faith; that what we were asking sinners to accept was not denominational doctrine, but the doctrine of Christ.

The meeting not only made an impression on the town, but had an influence on all the congregations in the county. The Cleburne church has a wonderful opportunity, and it desires the prayers of the saints everywhere that it may not fall short of God's demands upon it.

An instance of momentary success in the collection has been noted when the minister published the following soliloquy in the congregational calendar: "I am twenty-five cents. I'm too small to buy a quart of oil; I'm too small to buy one-half pound of candy; I'm too small to buy a ticket to a good 'movie' show; I'm even too small to buy a box of undetectable rouge. But most people think I'm 'some money' when I come to church."—The Christian Register.

At Home and Abroad

From M. S. Mason, Springfield, Mo., May 18: "I have the first two weeks in June which I can place somewhere if called. I will accept mission work. Write at earliest convenience."

F. B. Shepherd, 1409-A Jackson, Amarillo, Texas, forwarded to the Forest Vale Mission, in Africa, on May 15, contributions sent in by churches and individuals amounting to thirty-eight dollars.

From J. W. Brents, Springfield, Mo., May 17: "Our meeting continued two weeks. There were eleven additions. Interest good throughout. A. N. Phipps, of Rogersville, led the song service. I begin at Rogersville next Lord's day."

H. W. Busby, evangelist, and Austin Taylor, song director, closed a meeting with the church in Wewoka, Okla., with twelve baptisms and nine otherwise added to the congregation. K. C. Moser is the much-loved minister with this congregation.

From Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas: "John Sanders and I recently held a meeting at Carey, without visible results. However, we had good crowds most of the time, and I am sure good was done. I will preach at Estelline, Texas, on the third Lord's day."

The Fanning Orphan School closes on Thursday, May 25. S. H. Hall will deliver the commencement address. The closing session has been very satisfactory. This is a most excellent school, is well managed by Brother and Sister David Lipscomb, and should be liberally supported by all lovers of the truth.

Thomas H. Burton writes from Newport, N. C., May 16: "Able assisted by A. C. Traylor, I am at this date in a very interesting meeting five miles from Newport. Only two families in this county, so far as I have been able to find out, are members of the church. Our crowds are good. Seven have been baptized to date. We need preachers in this field. Pray for us."

The manuscript for the Clarendon debate, between John W. Tyndall and A. O. Colley, on instrumental music, is now in the hands of the printer, and will be ready for delivery soon. Orders received now should reach you from the first to the middle of June. This is a synopsis of the arguments just as they were made on both sides. Send orders to A. O. Colley, 5728 Junius Street, Dallas, Texas. Price, 25 cents single copy; $2 per dozen.

From W. S. Long, Washington, D. C., May 15: "Yesterday was a very happy day for the church here. There was a good attendance at all of the services, and one was added by confession and baptism. We are striving to do more for the Lord and to do as he requires. Those who have relatives or friends here, or who may be coming this way and desire to meet with the church, will please write for any help desired. My address is 1219 Kenyon Street, N. W."

The directors of the Tennessee Orphans' Home will hold their annual meeting on Thursday, June 8, 1922. All interested in the Home are invited to attend the meeting, visit the children, and make suggestions to the directors as to the most efficient method of caring for the orphans. Churches and individuals responded liberally to the last call of the president of the Board of Directors for funds to meet the running expenses of the Home. All will be welcome who attend the meeting.

J. H. Hines writes from Montgomery, Ala., May 18: "The work at the Highland Park church of Christ is progressing nicely. We had two great services last Sunday. A young lady made the good confession and was baptized at the close of the evening service. At the morning service a special collection was taken for the suffering in Armenia. During the week old clothing was carried to the church house. Two hundred and twenty-six dollars was collected, in all. I am preaching at West End this week."

From C. H. Smithson, Hatfield, Ark.: "This is the second and last call for help in the meeting at Pittsburg, Kan. Donations or advice as to friends should be addressed to J. H. Ping, 1021 East Fifteenth Street, Pittsburg, Kan., or to me, at Hatfield, Ark. The meeting is to begin on May 25 and continue fifteen days. If you have a friend or know of a member there, send name and address at once and we will get in touch with them. I also have time for one more summer meeting. Who wants it?"

We have received a note from James O. Rail, Pine Heights Sanitarium, 707 Georgia Avenue, North Augusta, S. C., in which he inquires if there is a loyal church of Christ in August, Ga., or in North Augusta, on the South Carolina side. He desires to worship with a loyal congregation, if there is one there; if not, he hopes that in the near future arrangements can be made to have the gospel preached there. He says: "I am a disabled soldier of the World War and a soldier for Christ since last July. I hope to get a course in the David Lipscomb College soon. The government is to give me training, and I have put in that school for my course." Can any of our readers help Brother Rail to find a place where he can meet and worship God "as it is written?"

W. H. George, Bonham, Texas, May 16: "The meeting at the Central church of Christ in Bonham, conducted by T. W. Phillips is a thing of the past. It was a great meeting in many ways. Brother Phillips has so many times come to my rescue and helped me to fight the battles of faith. The church was well pleased with Brother Phillips' labor with us. His messages were simple and plain, full of the rich and great things of God that feed the hungry souls of men. J. H. Antwine, of Mineral Wells, Texas, led us in song, and did it well. Fourteen noble souls responded to the gospel call and were buried with the Lord in baptism, and three wandering ones came back home. The meeting was hindered some by rain, yet we had good crowds all along. The house would not hold them the last night."

From Will W. Slater, Beaumont, Texas, May 16: "J. H. Lawson, of Houston, exchanged appointments with me Sunday. Brother Lawson has a fine work in Houston, a live congregation, wide-awake in the Lord's work, and it was a treat to be with them. The church is located on the corner of Johnson and Summer Streets. I met Oscar Smith while in Houston. He is minister for the Houston Heights Church. Houston is a beautiful city of one hundred and fifty thousand people. We have four congregations in Houston, and all are at peace and work in harmony with each other. Brother Lawson is to be congratulated and commended for the great work he is doing there. This leaves me in a meeting at Cove, Texas, which began last night, with good prospects. I will be here about twelve days. I will begin a meeting with home forces on the fourth Sunday in May, which will close my work in Beaumont for the present."

The following commendatory note comes from James E. Chessor: "I am not personally acquainted with the venerable John R. Williams, of Obion County, Tenn., but I have read for several years his interesting 'Notes from West Tennessee,' and have come to know something of the spirit of the man. Now that he is contributing a series of quaint personal reminiscences, I feel sure that the Gospel Advocate readers will learn to know and love the man for his work's sake. I appreciate hugely these unaffected, modest, gripping bits of biography. Brother Williams' style is unique in its simplicity, pithy, concise, and his selection of incidents of true human interest betokens the discrimination of the literary artist. These charming little stories of a life of hardness, sacrifice, and unwavering devotion to the cause of Christ add flavor and diversity to the contents of the Advocate. If Brother Williams will keep strictly in the path of biography, he will have many eager readers of his productions."

From R. D. Smith, Wichita Falls, Texas, May 15: "Our meeting was completely rained out. Scarcely a service for a whole week but it rained on us before we could get to church and back. This constant rain kept the streets in such condition that the attendance could not be what it should, and as on the second Sunday weather conditions appeared no better, it was decided to call the meeting off till a later date when we could hope to have better weather. Our meetings yesterday were good. More than two hundred assembled for the Bible classes, and at the hour of worship the crowd was large. The night meeting was also good, and two were added to the congregation 'by membership.' The outlook in this field is something wonderful; and while the church has accomplished a great deal here within the last few years, there is still more, as a consequence, to be done. The membership is already large; and with the large number of children attending the Bible classes each Lord's day, as well as those easily within reach of the church through close relation by either blood or friendship, the church has, according to our view, one of the most wonderful opportunities known of by me. It is our constant desire that we may be able to accomplish much in the work in Wichita Falls, and to this end we request the earnest prayers of God's people everywhere."

William P. Walker changes his address from Dinuba, Cal., to Dover, Tenn.

James E. Scobey preached at both services at Lawrence Avenue, this city, last Sunday.

W. M. Oakley closed the meeting on California Avenue, this city, last Friday night. There were two baptized and three restored.

Four congregations in Crockett County, Tenn.—Alamo, Nance, Cairo, and Cross Roads—are planning to keep a man in the evangelistic field next year.

John C. Taylor, of Obion, Tenn., and D. D. Woody, of Rives, Tenn., are in a mission meeting at Trimble, on the Illinois Central Railroad, about three miles from Obion.

Lytton Alley preached at Eighth Avenue, North, this city, twice last Sunday. There were two good audiences. This congregation has nearly doubled its membership within the last six months.

The church at Jones' Chapel, in Lake County, Tenn., four miles north of Tiptonville, is to have an all-day singing on June 4. Several congregations in Obion County plan on going en masse.

Mrs. Maggie Shaver, of Watertown, Tenn., renews her subscription to the Gospel Advocate and says: "I have been taking the paper for about twenty-five years and cannot think of doing without it."

Dr. J. S. Ward preached on Sunday and Sunday night at Second and Lindsley Avenues. Leonard Jackson was not very well and Dr. Ward preached for him. The church was well pleased with Dr. Ward's teaching.

Just as we go to press news comes that Dr. Cleo Boles died at Hohenwald, Tenn. Dr. Boles is a son of our brother, H. Leo Boles. The Gospel Advocate extends sympathy to the young wife, to Brother Boles, and to all the family.

F. B. Srygley is in receipt of a letter from E. S. Jelley, Vambori, British India, dated April 13, in which he reports twenty-nine baptisms in March and four in April. We are glad to hear of the success of the truth in that foreign land.

A. D. Dies continues the protracted meeting at Twenty-second Avenue, North, this city. Three baptisms up to last Sunday night. The meeting will continue indefinitely. It is to be hoped that the interest will continue good and even grow better.

W. M. Oakley preached last Sunday and Sunday night at Twelfth Avenue, North, this city, to large audiences. This church always furnishes a fine audience. It is a pity that all our city churches cannot furnish a better attendance for Sunday evening.

From C. D. Crouch, Fountain Head, Tenn., May 22: "I had a little tussle with a contrary Ford yesterday, and, as a result, I am carrying a broken arm in a sling. I will be at home at Ashland City after this week. I have some time open yet for engagements."

There will be an all-day meeting at Bluff Springs Church, in Warren County, Tenn., on the first Sunday in June. The day is to be spent in singing, preaching, and worshipping God. Lee Daugherty and D. L. Robinson will do the preaching, and there will be dinner on the ground.

From J. C. Mosley, Whiteville, Tenn., May 19: "I held a short Bible reading at Dunlap, Tenn. Two were baptized. I was at Newton last Lord's day. Had a packed house and some over. Baptized one good man there. Say, when you read the Gospel Advocate, pass it on to some one else; it may lead him to do right."

A. L. McCorkle, Fort Steilacoom, Wash., in renewing his subscription to the Gospel Advocate, says: "I have been reading the paper since early childhood, and have learned many valuable truths from it." He also commends Brother Kurtees' review of O. E. Payne's book. He says: "It simply is a gem. What can they say next?"

W. E. Morgan writes from Cairo, Ill., May 20: "Our tent meeting here goes grandly and encouragingly on. One confession to date, and we look for others to respond before the meeting closes. We expect to establish a loyal congregation here before we leave. Quite a number of the 'digressives' say they are going to line up with us. Pray for us."

From Mrs. Edna Warren Gray, Fort Henry, Tenn., May 21: "Brother Taylor, of Clarksville, Tenn., will hold a week's meeting in July in our schoolhouse. We have no church house, and there are only four members of the church of Christ in our neighborhood." It is to be hoped that the truth may be permanently established in Sister Gray's community.

From Mrs. G. B. Hoover, Tampa, Fla.: "Can you give me directions how to find the church of Christ in New York City; also the name of the preacher or one of the elders and on what street he lives? Also give me the address of J. E. Dunn." E. E. Shoulders is the preacher in New York, and can be addressed at 145 West One Hundred and Eightieth Street, New York. John E. Dunn's address is Waxahachie, Texas.

R. P. Cuff writes from Macon, Ga., May 20: "Recently A. B. Lipscomb passed through our city and preached two sermons for us. We appreciated his visit very much. J. Bedford Beck was in Macon the first of the week. He preaches for us on Wednesday evening. Brother Beck reports the work at Summit, McGregor, and Brunswick as doing well. I am to begin a meeting at Gordon, Ga., on the second Sunday in June."

From T. S. Craig, Adel, Ga., May 17: "Our meeting at Cross Roads Schoolhouse continued fifteen days, with no visible results, but good has been done by seed sowing. There are only three members there, but they know how to treat a preacher. Any preaching brother that has time to stop there and preach some for these people will find a hearty welcome. W. J. McClellan will gladly answer all correspondence. I go to Cecil to begin a meeting next Sunday."

From Thomas E. Milholland, Clarendon, Texas: "Our meeting in McKinney, Texas, was a splendid success. Fifteen were added to the little band that has for four years been trying to locate itself and do some permanent work—five baptized, five from the 'unwise' brethren, and five restored. They have secured the Colosseum for a place of worship till other arrangements can be made. A lot will be selected soon and a building erected—that is the plan. There are some fine workers in McKinney. May the Lord bless them all."

From R. E. Wright, Los Angeles, Cal., May 18: "The work at the Central church of Christ continues to grow every week. Last Sunday was another good day at Central. Three came forward to unite their efforts for Christ with the Central congregation. There have been additions to our congregation every Lord's day since January 1, except two. The work here is growing by leaps and bounds. More than sixty of these had never been identified with any work in this city, and many of them coming from the Christian Church. The prospects were never brighter for a great work here."

W. N. Harrell, Smyrna, Tenn., Box 8, writes as follows: "I am awake to the fact that I must get busy in the Master's vineyard, so will begin at once to arrange for more to do in the work of preaching the gospel to as many as will hear it, as I have opportunity. Moreover, brethren, let us get busy and do what we can to send a preacher to every place to preach; but let us be careful to send men who have the Spirit of Christ and a determination to preach, not for the sake of gain, but for the salvation of souls and to honor and glorify God. I would be pleased to hear from any who can use me to the glory of God in doing his work."

From B. W. Davis, Thomaston, Ga., May 15: "I am glad to report that, after some delay, the work at this place has started out with very encouraging features, even in the face of obstacles and difficulties. First, the illness of my wife prevented me from being on hand at the appointed time to begin the work. Second, our tent had the appearance of a miniature merry-go-round to the people here, as compared to the tents used upon the same ground by the denominations heretofore. However, the tent will seat about one hundred and fifty, with room outside for several hundred, for all of which we are very thankful. Third, we erected the tent, and the same afternoon it was blown down by a severe storm which swept through the town. The next day was spent in repair work, which was completed in time to erect the tent again before dark. This time we provided some new ropes to replace the old ones, which were well worn and weak. The next day seats were arranged and the tent wired for light. The mill company is furnishing our light free of charge, also the lumber used in providing the seats. That night another storm came up and we were rained out. All of this seemed to furnish ground for various reports. However, we were greeted on Friday night with a large audience. The doctrine of Christ is entirely new to a large per cent of the people here, and they appear to be anxious to hear; therefore, the order and attention are the very best. Six met with me to break bread on Lord's-day morning, and I feel confident in saying that the work will result in establishing another congregation to meet and worship regularly after the New Testament order."

God Created the Heavens and the Earth.

BY J. C. McQ.

The following letter denies that Christ is divine and that God and the Creator are one. It also asserts the gullibility of Christians and intimates that the Bible is not the complete and final textbook for the world:

Nashville, Tenn., May 6, 1922.—Mr. J. C. McQuiddy, editor Gospel Advocate.—Dear Sir: I will propound and also try to answer what most people seem to regard as a very important question: Why am I not a Christian? Simply because I do not accept the divinity of Christ as per the Bible narrative, and which can be neither proved nor disproved. Furthermore, when I note the partial number of one hundred and sixty-five different religious sects who seemingly manifest no desire for union on a common and right basis, my contempt and distrust seem well justified. In theory, I think Hardeman was absolutely right, as has been the case with me since the time of Lipscomb, twenty-five or thirty years ago. I also think Hardeman is due much credit for reviving and encouraging a cause that has all the argument and common sense in its favor. Now, could I say with all my heart, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God," I think I know exactly how to proceed thereafter. But it seems I have left only the Golden Rule and a final and full resting place in the dust from which man was made. Made by whom? Is God and the Creator one and the same? Prove this and I am converted. This is doubtless a new phase to you; but I have asked the question, "Why may not the God of the Bible be an impostor, as was another 'angel' who was cast out of heaven?" I am not striving for effect in asking these things, but I am amazed at the fools who swallow without thought the many different religions offered them. Is this God's Bible the final and complete textbook for all the world? Then why the "Koran" and other pagan guides? Truly we are in the dark, and I will not risk being called a liar, a fool, and a hypocrite by swallowing what any other common man says. Now, Mr. McQuiddy, I do not expect you to furnish any new and convincing proof, but I would like for you to notice in your paper the status of a man who is lost if you are right. "Be ready with a reason for your faith."

Yours very truly,

D. B. CHENAULT.

It is evident that this critic of the God of the Bible and of Christianity seeks to destroy the hopes of Christians without offering them anything in their stead. His conduct is like this: We are all aboard a great ship, homeward bound. A man begins to cry aloud, "Get off the ship!" He argues that the ship will soon spring a leak and sink. Still he offers nothing for the ship. He would have us abandon the ship that has carried all its passengers over in safety and jump out into the ocean. If I should be unable to give any reason for my action, what has my critic given me to accept? Absolutely nothing. I now have a hope that cheers me in the midst of sickness, disappointment, and disaster. It points me onward and upward to the celestial port where sickness and death are not known. He would destroy that hope and leave me to flounder in the great ocean of life without chart or compass! For all the joy and hope of Christianity he offers absolutely nothing in this life nor anything in the hereafter. How terrible the darkness into which he would plunge us!

But he would have us believe that the God of the Bible is an impostor. If we were foolish enough to concede that he is, what would we gain by such admission? Nothing. We cannot deny the fact that we live. That we live at all is more wonderful than that we shall continue to live beyond death and the grave. If we deny the story of creation as recorded in the Bible, we cannot deny the creation of the universe. The creation of the universe includes all miracles. The transforming of the egg into the bird is as wonderful as any miracle recorded in the Bible. The changing of water into wine at Cana is no greater miracle than when done by natural processes. The miracle of creation implies the miracles of providence and revelation.

God's interference with the laws of nature is the same in kind with man's. According to the law of gravitation, water runs downhill. See that pumping station in the valley. With it man is pumping water uphill, which is a supernatural result. In doing this, man does not suspend and thwart natural law; he works through law. Man works through natural law and produces a supernatural result. Has God less power over nature than man? If man can, may not God also work a miracle in harmony with the laws of nature? Our critic, while denying the God of the Bible, will not deny that creation is a miracle. If the earth evolved from a germ, however small, this germ could not have been evolved. The germ was more wonderful than all that developed from it. By a miracle it began to be. We may go back through an almost infinite regression, and yet we come to this at last.

Man is the result of a miracle. While the learned professor would not admit that he was developed from an ape when pressed to answer by William Jennings Bryan, still the evolutionist who teaches that man is evolved from a lower being must freely concede that the lower being was the result of a miracle. But it is in the last degree improbable that a being who can build and fly an airship and who can chain the lightning and make it subservient to his will descended from an ape. We grope our way in confusion and impenetrable darkness unless we accept the Bible narrative, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," and that God created man "but a little lower than the angels."

"If weak thy faith, why accept the harder side?" We are accepting scientific facts more difficult of belief than miracles, and yet we do not hesitate to receive them. On this subject Everest says: "We are required to believe that we live on a globe of fire, with only a thin crust between us and the fire; that the stratified rocks have been deposited, in some places, to the depth of eighty thousand feet; that the great Colorado canon has worn for itself a channel, through the hard rock, three hundred miles long and six thousand feet deep; that the sun is equal to one million four hundred thousand worlds like ours, and that all the fixed stars are similar suns; and all this, and a thousandfold more, on testimony and reasonings, often conflicting and changing every decade. We are required to believe in the existence of chemical atoms, though an atom is what no man has seen nor can see. Some easily believe that man has been evolved from a monad, or from a lifeless protoplasmic cell; others, that all the power, thought, beauty, mathematical exactness, and far-reaching plan of the universe are the results of blind chance, or remorseless fate, though even the existence of such 'chimeras dire' as chance and fate is more than doubtful."

"When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; what is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? For thou hast made him but little lower than God, and crownest him with glory and honor." In view of the wondrous exactness, beauty, and wisdom manifest in God's creation, we may the better understand why the spirit by David declared: "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God."

Strangers Among the Jews.

BY E. W. SMITH.

During the period of the sojourn of the Israelites in the land of Canaan, and also during the personal ministry of Christ and his apostles, there were among the Jews those who were termed "strangers." There were different elements classed as "strangers" by the Jews, and Smith's Bible Dictionary says: "The existence of such a class of persons among the Israelites is easily accounted for: the 'mixed multitude' that accompanied them out of Egypt (Ex. 12: 38) formed one element; the Canaanitish population, which was never wholly extirpated from their native soil, formed another, and a still more important one; captives taken in war formed a third; fugitives, hired servants, merchants, etc., formed a fourth." Many of the Gentiles became converts to the Jewish religion, and these constituted "strangers" that were entitled to many privileges of the Jewish worship. Among those on the day of Pentecost who had assembled from distant lands to observe the passover feast were proselyte Gentiles. (See Acts 2: 10.) To that class of "strangers" among the Jews, God required the kindest treatment. This was the law: "Love ye therefore the stranger: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt" (Deut. 10: 19.) Again: "But the stranger that dwelleth with you shall be unto you as one born among you, and thou shalt love him as thyself: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt: I am the Lord your God." (Lev. 19: 34.) When a Gentile embraced the Jewish religion, he was to be loved and treated as a brother, and, of course, had the same right to contribute of his substance to maintain the system of Judaism as one born of Abraham's blood. Hence, when they visited Jerusalem in the times of feasts, they could bring their offerings. "And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the Lord, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof." (Ex. 12: 48.) I have said this much on the subject to prepare the way for the following:

Please give me a clear and full explanation of the following questions. In the Advanced Gospel Quarterly, Lesson III, April 16, 1922, under the third section, "Repairing the Temple," it gives three sources from which the money came to repair the temple. In source two, "the freewill offerings of strangers who had visited Jerusalem." Will you explain fully what the word "stranger" means as used here? Was the money contributed for the repair of the temple, and for which "Jehoiada the priest took a chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it," to receive the money—was any of it from the idolatrous nations? Can the word "stranger" be construed to mean an idolatrous person. Were the "strangers" Jews from the distant parts of Palestine or from the idolatrous nations? I will appreciate an extended answer from you in the Gospel Advocate.

From all I can learn on the subject, the "strangers" mentioned in the Advanced Quarterly to which the querist refers were evidently proselytes to the Jewish faith who visited Jerusalem. They were not idolatrous Gentiles, for such were forbidden to participate in the Jewish worship, and there is no evidence that such idolaters desired to do so. There is most certainly no ground here for the practice in some places of appealing to people out of the church for money to carry on the Lord's work. If there are those out of the church who feel kindly toward it and offer voluntarily to give to the church, I can see the violation of no principle or teaching of divine revelation in accepting such gifts. But even in this care should be exercised to keep from making the impression on such people that their gifts can be accepted of God as an atonement for not obeying the gospel. To accept from people out of the church, in the way of accommodations for the interests of the church, that which would cost the church or an individual Christian money and then refuse money from the same people is an inconsistency that cannot be explained away. If a preacher of the gospel should accept the hospitality of a man of the world by being cared for in his home and then refuse to accept money from the same man, he would greatly lessen his influence with and chance of leading that man to Christ. While there is no doubt certain sources from which the church and individual Christians should not accept money, yet there is danger of going to an extreme in not accepting some gifts that will defeat the very end sought to be accomplished. All money or its equivalent that is offered to God must be so offered as a freewill or voluntary thing, and for people in the church to offer in any other spirit is a sin before God. The quotation to which the querist refers was taken from Adam Clarke's "Commentary," and, of course, like all human comments, is to be taken as such. But Clarke gives this as biblical history, and I am sure the "strangers" mentioned were those who had become converts or proselytes to the Jewish faith.

Our First Duty Is to Our Own.

BY F. B. S.

"But the man from whom the demons had gone out prayed him that he might be with him." (Luke 8: 38.) It was natural for this man who had been so greatly blessed to desire to remain with Jesus. His gratitude would cause him to want to stay near the one who had so greatly blessed him. But Jesus sent him away, saying: "Return to thy house, and declare how great things God hath done for thee." Sometimes it is very pleasant for the Christian to go to meeting, sit up and listen to a nice speech on the gospel, meet friends, criticize the preacher, and do no more. But Jesus says: "Declare how great things God hath done for thee." Be a worker in the vineyard of the Lord. We should not seek our own peace and quietude, but obtain our happiness from the consciousness of having done our duty. But this man was to go home and use his influence on his own people. We ought all to have greater influence over those that love us, our own kin, than over any one else. "One of the two that heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. He findeth first his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messiah (which is, being interpreted, Christ). He brought him unto Jesus." We should all have a greater interest in our own families than any one else. Go bring your brother to Christ; and when all your own have been brought to Christ, then bring others to him.

The Remedy for War.

BY F. B. S.

If there is a remedy for war, it ought to be known and applied. It costs more money, more property, and more human life than anything in the world. The great World War was so destructive that it appears that, from an economical standpoint, there ought never to be another. It has been said that the money spent in that war would feed and clothe all of the poor for a hundred years, build a railroad in every county and a highway through every community, and build a school in every neighborhood, a high school in every town, and a college in every city on the earth. I believe it was stated that there were over seven million killed and above sixteen million wounded, besides all the property that was destroyed and the money that was spent. Surely if there is a remedy for this wholesale destruction of money, property, and human life, it should be understood and applied.

The only cure for war is the gospel of Christ properly understood and obeyed. I have no hope that the League of Nations or the Disarmament Conference or anything of that kind will put an end to war. Some of these things may sometimes postpone war, and no Christian is opposed to anything that will do that much; but the only complete cure for war is the teaching of the New Testament.

When Isaiah prophesied of the establishment of the kingdom of Christ, he said: "And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." (Isa. 2: 4.) Sometimes we are told that this language cannot refer to the present age, because no nation has ever done this; that nations are still fighting each other; therefore the passage is not applicable to the present. This kind of reasoning would prove that no language of the Bible has ever been applicable to any age. God said, "Thou shalt not kill;" but men have killed in every age of the world's history, but have disobeyed God when they did it. "Thou shalt not steal;" but men have stolen in every dispensation. The argument is this: No nation has obeyed this command; therefore, the command is not applicable to the age. But no command that God ever gave has been obeyed by all men; therefore, no command is applicable to any age. The first command that God ever gave to man was broken. Does this prove that the command was not applicable to that age? "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it;" "Nation shall not lift up sword against shaft surely die." (Gen. 2: 16, 17.) Soon the law was broken, and broken by all on the earth at the time. If because all nations disobey God in ceasing to lift up sword against nation proves the law belongs to another age, can we not prove by this logic that this law of God to Adam and Eve was for another age? It will be noticed that both commands were given in the same language: "Thou shalt not eat of it;" "nation shall not lift up sword against nation." God said "shall not" in both cases. The truth is, the fact that man breaks a law is not proof that the law is not applicable to him. There are no Christian nations in the sense that there are any nations that are in obedience to God.

Every Christian that follows the teaching of his King will beat his sword into a plowshare or some other useful implement and cease to kill his fellow man in the name of civilized warfare. If every professed Christian in the world had done his duty, the terrible World War never could have been. If all the preachers had preached the truth on the subject, it could not have happened. But preachers are as easily swept off their feet when war arises as any one else. During the World War some of the most intemperate, unreasonable things that were said at all were said by preachers. In the excitement some even claimed they were ready to take a gun and go to the front. Most of us thought, though, at the time, that this was excitement; that these enthusiastic preachers were hardly ready to put their bodies up as a target to stop bullets. Will Christians never learn the spirit and teaching of Christ? The kingdom of Christ is the kingdom whose King teaches that it is wrong to go to war. Now is the time, brethren, for us to learn and teach the truth on this subject. If Christians take part in war at all, there might be some on both sides of the battle line, and one on each side might be facing another waiting an opportunity to kill a Christian or be killed by one! How any believer in the teaching of Christ can reconcile such a scene with his language when he said, "But I say unto you, that ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other," is more than I can understand.

The Example of a Faithful Christian Man.

BY M. C. K.

About eleven years ago Brother S. H. Young and his wife worshiped for a time with the Campbell Street Church, Louisville, Ky., but sometime ago they located in Covington, Ky., and became identified with the faithful little church in that city. He was a traveling man, and on May 8, 1922, he was stricken with paralysis in Newcastle, Ind. He was removed at once to his home in Covington, where, comforted by a devoted wife's tender affection and in the bosom of friends who loved him, he died on Friday evening, May 12, 1922. In response to a telegram, I went to Covington on Monday, May 15, where, assisted by Brother F. L. Rowe and Brother R. C. Hammons, it was my melancholy privilege to conduct the funeral services. The body was buried the same day in the Highland Cemetery, Covington, Ky.

The example of this devoted man of God should inspire others to more noble and unselfish living, and for this reason we mention it in our columns. Brother Young was born near Cookeville, Tenn., and was only forty-eight years old at the time of his death. When he was only seventeen years of age, his father died; and he then took charge of a younger brother and two sisters and raised them; and later, when he was married, he took charge of a brother and two sisters of his wife and raised them to Christian manhood and womanhood. Having no children of their own, he also took an orphan boy from an orphanage in Covington, Ky., and raised him to Christian manhood. This is certainly a remarkable record. Then, about seven months ago, after he and his faithful wife had been married twenty-one years, their first-born child, a little girl, came into this world. This frail little member of the human family, unconscious of its father's taking off, survives to bless and brighten and sweeten its mother's life, now apparently so desolate without her faithful companion.

Here is another fact which shows Brother Young's high Christian character. Although his business kept him away from home much of the time, yet he managed so to arrange and time his route as to be where he could meet with a faithful church of God and worship on the Lord's day. This fine example is worthy of imitation by other traveling men. Our brother did not leave his family much of this world's goods, and yet what a rich heritage he left them! Seven orphan children adopted and brought up to Christian manhood and womanhood under his fostering care; and now that he is gone, a half-orphan little daughter of his own is left behind! Surely our Heavenly Father will richly bless this faithful woman of God and her precious little charge. She will continue to reside in Covington. The faithful little church there, of which she is a part and which loves her so devotedly, worships on the third floor in Moose Temple, Madison Avenue and Fifth Street. The little band is working devotedly and unselfishly, laying up in store as God prospers them, and planning, as soon as they are able, to build a house of worship where they will have more conveniences to carry on the work of the Lord. They are worthy of the fellowship of the saints. Brother Hammons and Brother Morton are leaders in the work, and both of them are zealous and making a commendable record. In fact, as far as I could observe, the entire little church seems to be thoroughly devoted to the cause of Christianity, and, like the early disciples in Jerusalem, all of them seem to be "of one heart and soul." May the Lord bless and prosper them in their work.

More Testimonials on the Review of the Payne Book.

Here is another installment of testimonials received by the author of the Review:

From T. Q. Martin, St. Marys, W. Va.: "I have just finished reading, in the current issue of the Gospel Advocate, the tenth and last chapter of your review of O. E. Payne's book on 'Instrumental Music.' I read very carefully the book, and I have also very carefully read each chapter of the review. In the light of facts and logic, I regard your review of the book a veritable Gibraltar. I am eager to see this review in book form and will take pleasure in assisting in its circulation. When I read your tract on 'Walking by Faith,' I said within myself: 'He will never excel that tract.' Then, when I read your book on 'Instrumental Music in the Worship,' I thought: 'Kurfees will never do a greater piece of work than that.' I still believe that the above-mentioned tract and book are both great productions, but in my humble judgment, this review is, if possible, greater than the other productions. For showing logically the force of facts and for rescuing facts from misleading settings, this review is not excelled by any uninspired literature that I have ever read. This is a sincere estimate of the review."

From J. Paul Slayden, Columbia, Tenn.: "I have been thinking of writing to you ever since O. E. Payne's book came from the press. I thought it needed your attention, and I was glad when I learned you had undertaken to review it. Payne's book was widely advertised as the last word on the subject of instrumental music in worship; it was freely distributed; and the 'Commission on Unity,' Nashville, Tenn., said the author had searched out and brought to light all the facts on the subject. Your review of the book is such a complete refutation of the arguments and such a glowing exposure of the author's method that the advocates of instrumental music in the worship must try again, as their boasted last word doesn't stand the light of truth."

From W. L. Reeves, Winston-Salem, N. C.: "I write to let you know how much I have enjoyed reading your review in the Gospel Advocate of O. E. Payne's book, in which he makes a pretense at proving that instrumental music in worship is authorized in the New Testament. The work you have done in exposing it has gone far beyond my most sanguine expectations in furnishing facts which militate against the use of musical instruments in Christian worship as strongly as they prove to every fair-minded reader that Payne's book is not only untrue in many places, but wholly unreliable in every sense. I regard your presentation of the many facts in contrast with Brother Payne's garbled extracts simply invincible. In the face of such, I cannot see how Brother Payne can 'in all good conscience' continue to circulate such a book. I consider the work you have done in this review one of the most logical efforts in every sense that I have ever read from an uninspired man. I am sure that much good has been done by your review as given through the Gospel Advocate, and I think much more good can be done if you will print it in book form, provided many of the brethren will see that it is circulated where Payne's book is mostly read. May God bless you and spare you many years, that you may continue to accomplish the great good you now are doing for the kingdom of righteousness."

From Prof. N. B. Hardeman, Henderson, Tenn.: "It seems to me that our brethren in error are trying to strengthen their contention, and I think your review should be published at an early date."

The Interest Is Growing.

BY J. C. M'Q.

The receipts for this month are larger than they were for the month of May in 1921. We are glad to make this announcement, but would be glad if the receipts were much greater.

Only those who publish a religious journal know anything of the increased expenses of the religious publisher. Paper is now over double what it was before the war, labor is double what it was thirty years ago, and postage is more than double what it was ten years ago.

Without a decided increase in the circulation of the paper, the expenses will continue heavier than the receipts. We are sure our readers do not want this condition to exist. It will not continue if our readers will each send us a number of new subscribers. When the character of the Gospel Advocate and the quality of paper and the work are considered, it does seem that Christians would wish a copy in their homes.

If you have no interest in the growth and development of the church, if you are not concerned about the character of your reading and of the papers your children read, we could hardly expect you to be interested in the circulation of the Gospel Advocate.

We do not think we have many readers of that kind. We are firm in the conviction that the great majority of our readers appreciate a good paper and are ready to coöperate with us in maintaining it.

We appeal to you to make a canvass of your community for subscribers to the Gospel Advocate. You will be surprised to find so many members of the church who are not taking any religious paper. In fact, you will be disappointed when you learn how little they are doing for the conversion of sinners. In making the canvass, you will observe that those who read a good religious paper have more spiritual life than those who do not. Some will tell you they have their Bibles to read, but my experience has taught me that those who read a good paper are the most constant and consistent Bible readers. A first-class paper stimulates people to study the Bible.

Speak to the members of your church in behalf of the Gospel Advocate. Ask the elders of the church to help you. You will be delighted to find how many subscribers you can secure with a little consistent effort. Will not every one who reads this either fill out the blank below or get some one else to fill it out?

"Marse Henry's" Wife.

In a recent issue of the Christian-Evangelist there appeared a touching and eloquent discourse delivered in memory of the late Henry Watterson by E. L. Powell, who was his close, personal friend. In closing his address he said:

Into the inner circle of his home we may not enter in public speech, save as we tender, on this funeral occasion, our admiration and deepest sympathy to the elect lady who was the source of his inspiration, and whose faith, courage, and beautiful consecration the strong man himself would have been quickest to recognize as his light and leading in the long and beautiful journey of wedded life and public service. To her—the wife and mother of his children, the joy-bringing companion of his youth and age—we bring our sincerest tribute of affection as we leave him safe in the keeping of that love whose gracious and protecting will makes no mistakes, bidding her only remember while she waits the words of the Lord Jesus, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter," and those other words of tenderest comfort, "Yet a little while and you shall see me again."

The writer of this page was connected with the Courier-Journal and the Times for several years and as one of the "boys" had the opportunity to observe closely his manner of life. The greatness of his brain and genius stands unquestioned. No one will hardly dissent from Brother Powell's view that in the field of journalism he was "the most picturesque and flaming figure of the age in which he wrought." I never saw any man who resembled Mr. Watterson or who behaved like him. Several tried to "understudy" him on the editorial page, but failed. The great reading public appreciated in full measure the unusual gifts of this wonderful man, and there will always be somebody to remind us of them; but few, comparatively speaking, were in a position to appreciate how much the world is indebted to Mrs. Watterson. The great editor's closest friends must acknowledge that he had his faults and weaknesses. They understood best of all just how much of pathos and humiliation were occasioned by the carrying out of the resolution: "No Puritan shall rob me of my cakes and ale." It was when "Marse Henry" was weakest that the qualities of the elect lady shone the brightest. She nursed him and cared for him tenderly in such crises and never became impatient with him. No woman ever had a better opportunity to shine as a social leader in Washington and New York and in foreign capitals, and no woman ever seemed to care so little about being fussed over. Her greatness was that which God most heartily approves—"the ornament of a meek and great spirit." It makes us feel sad to know that the last of the old school of editorial writers has laid down his pen forever, but it is good to believe that there are many wives and mothers whose greatness is akin to that of Marse Henry's wife. His biggest task was writing editorials that electrified the thinking world. Her biggest task was looking after Mr. Watterson and the children. Of such women Frank L. Stanton wrote:

Thou shalt have grace where glory is forgot;
The love all luminous in the world's last night;
Thy children's arms shall be thy necklace bright,
And all love's roses clamber to thy cot.
And if a storm one steadfast star should blot
From thy pure heaven, God's angels shall relight
The lamps for thee, and make the darkness white;
The lilies of His love shall be thy lot!

He shall give all His angels charge of thee;
Thy coming and thy going shall be known.
Their steps shall shine before thee radiantly,
Lest thou shouldst dash thy foot against a stone.
The Cross still stands. Who shall that love condemn Whose mother-lips kissed Christ at Bethlehem?

Fostering the Militant Spirit.

We do not wonder that the militant spirit of carnal warfare possesses our boys and girls when we reflect that some of the most noted and widely quoted preachers are constantly praising to the skies the boys who were quickest to enlist. At one time we hear them preaching and pleading in behalf of universal peace, and at another time they are saying the very thing that will encourage boys to believe that they never can be manly and heroic while opposed to carnal warfare. For example, the noted J. H. Jowett, in his new book, "The Eagle Life," would have us believe that the boy who hesitates to fight "in the service of his country" is the "sparrow," while the boy who goes forth to war is the "eagle." Here follows his argument:

I have been reading a recently published life of Roosevelt, and I think that the outstanding sentence in it is one spoken by Mrs. Roosevelt when the last of her four boys had enlisted in the service of his country. Mr. Roosevelt was just a little daunted when the last, and youngest, left for the front; but Mrs. Roosevelt said to him: "You must not bring up your children like eagles, and expect them to act like sparrows." It is a royal word; it links itself with some of the great sayings of the Roman mothers, which are still ringing through the years. Her boys had been created for great ventures, and when the call came they went forth as naturally as eagles when they leave their aerle for hazardous flights.

And Mrs. Roosevelt's word unveils the true ideal of discipline and training. We are to rear our boys and girls in such largeness and quality of being that they will instinctively do the big thing because they are made and molded in big ways. They are not to turn to the path of venture with trembling and reluctant choice, but because it is their nature to do it. They are eagle in spirit, and they are to take to the vast ways as naturally as they breathe.

And this, too, is the teaching of our Lord. In all his teaching the primary emphasis is on the state of being, and only secondarily upon the issues in conduct. Create an eagle, and you may look for eagle flights. Make the tree good, and good fruit will appear in sure sequence. The teaching is expressed in many different ways. "Ye are of your father the devil." Christ lays his finger upon the very substance of their souls, the fibers of their nature, "the works of your father are absolutely sure." What is in will come out. We cannot weave fine robes from rotten fiber. We cannot have pure streams from foul springs. We cannot have exploits from cowards. The sparrow will not take the path of the eagle.

Mr. Jowett is a bit unfortunate in trying to make Jesus back up his high-sounding sophistry. For the "big thing" which the writer sees in carnal warfare is diametrically opposed both to the spirit and teachings of the meek and lowly Nazarene. The latter gives no place for physical combat, but encourages us to fight the good fight of faith and to lay hold on eternal life. It takes infinitely more of faith and courage to suppress the fiery spirit of the eagle and to show forth the spirit of the lamb at the risk of being called a coward than to exercise the venturesome spirit of Mr. Roosevelt's boys. And this is one point which Mr. Jowett and other popular preachers and writers either utterly fail to see or are afraid to emphasize. Why not unite all of our energies toward getting the boys' names on the service flag of the Lord Jesus Christ? I would rather be a sparrow in man's estimation and right in God's eyes than to "spread-eagle" my name all over the universe. And it was not a Roman mother, but a godly, Christian woman, who taught me the more excellent way.

Greatness in Every One's Make Up.

You were made to master unfavorable conditions—made to rise above what others regard as misfortunes, handicaps, and stumblingblocks. There is something in you that is bigger than any fate or destiny—anything which is trying to do you; something in you that is mightier than the influence of others which is trying to keep you back. There is something in you that can laugh at fate.—Orison Swett Marden.

Christian Duties. No. 2.

BY HARVEY SCOTT.

"And this I say, lest any man should beguile you with enticing words. For though I be absent in the flesh, yet I am with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order and the steadfastness of your faith in Christ. As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him: rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving." (Col. 2: 4-7.)

In verse 4 the apostle gives his reason for saying what he had just said—that no one might lead them astray by any deceitfulness or false reasoning—reasoning sound in appearance only. There are many people to-day misleading thousands by just such means. But how are we going to be able to tell whether the reasoning is sound or not, unless we have this "full assurance of understanding" spoken of in verse 2? This understanding is absolutely necessary, not only to understand the gospel, but to tell whether the man is giving sound reasoning or not. Hence, we see the importance of each individual studying the Bible for himself. If we do not have this understanding, we are liable to take the reasoning of the other fellow, thinking that he has studied it and knows whereof he speaks, while he may not have this understanding and does not know the mystery of God at all. We can now see the beauty of the statement when the apostle says that this understanding was filled with richness. The only way to tell whether the preacher is giving us sound reasoning or not is to "search the Scriptures daily to see whether the things be so." We must not accept it just because he said it. That is not enough. To-day we are in danger of being led astray by men using false reasoning, trying to prove their special theories. We should accept no man's reasoning that will not stand the test of God's word. We should make his word our reason for everything we do from a religious point of view.

If the apostle, though absent in body, could be present in spirit, surely our Savior is present with us to-day. John, on the isle of Patmos and in the Spirit on the Lord's day, said that he saw one like the Son of man walking in the midst of seven golden candlesticks. Christ then tells him that the seven golden candlesticks are the seven churches. Hence, he was walking in the midst of the seven churches. So it is to-day. Jesus is walking in the midst of his churches, noticing everything that we do, for he says that he knows our works. (Rev. 1: 10-20.) Christ told his apostles in the commission that he would be with them unto the end of the world. They soon died, and the world is yet still standing. He meant that he would be with their teaching, and to-day he is with those who teach the things that he told his apostles to teach. "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there I am in the midst of them." (Matt. 18: 20.) So Christ is rejoicing and witnessing our good order—that is, if we have it; he is witnessing our actions, and is a witness to the fact as to whether we have the firmness of faith that we ought to have. We should then be steadfast, unmovable. Why? It is backed by divine testimony. Is this not enough for us to be faithful to all our precious Savior has asked us to do?

We must continue to live with that enthusiasm and interest that we had when we accepted Christ. As we have accepted Christ as the only Leader and Lawgiver that God has for man to-day, so we must continue to obey him as we did when we first obeyed the gospel. If all the true wisdom and knowledge are in him, then we can afford to continue to live in him as we started. The apostle finishes this thought in the next verse. If we have that full understanding which the apostle speaks of in verse 2, then we will continue to live in him as we ought.

The only safe way to withstand the trials that are to come at the end of the journey of life is to be rooted and built up in Him. We should have our foundation in Christ, as a tree has its roots placed in the ground in order to make it steady and to be able to stand when the storms come. Paul says that we will be saved, if we "continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel." (Col. 1: 23.) We must not only have our foundation fixed in Christ, but all our building must be on this sure foundation. Jesus tells us how this building may be done, in Matt. 7: 24-27. We do this by doing the will of the Father, as well as hearing it. It will do us no good to just hear what he says, but we must do what he tells us to do. Paul refers to himself as a wise master builder and says for us to take heed how we build. (1 Cor. 3: 10.) We must make our practice conform to our principles, as suggested in verse 6. The closer we walk with Him, the more we are rooted and established in the faith. Being established in the faith, we must abound therein, and this must be with thanksgiving. We must join thanksgiving to all our improvements.

In these two last verses we have the thought that is expressed in Rev. 2: 4, 5, where Jesus says that unless those to whom he was writing did their first works he would remove their candlestick. Jesus also tells us that if we will be faithful unto death, he will give us a crown of life. (Rev. 2: 10.)

So Paul wanted all Christians to have that full assurance of understanding, that they might be able to understand the gospel of Jesus Christ, for by so doing no one could palm any unreasonable thing off on them. They would be able to detect the unreasonableness of it. But for us to be in a position to tell when the gospel is being preached, we must know what the gospel is; and for us to know this, we must study it very closely. It is given plain enough in the New Testament, and in language that we can understand.

Putting together the different translations, we have the following: "I say this, in order that no one may mislead you with false teaching. For though I am absent in body, yet I am present in spirit, rejoicing and witnessing your good order and the firmness of your faith in Christ. As, therefore, you first received Christ Jesus, as your Lord, so continue to live in him, rooted and built up in him; persevering steadfastly in your faith, even as you have been taught, surpassing in thanksgiving."

Enemies of Christianity.

BY C. D. CROUCH.

In any sort of a combat it gives the combatant an advantage to know his opponent—his method of attack and his manner of fighting. This is especially true with reference to "the good fight of faith." It is hard to fight an enemy from ambush. If one has an enemy who is fighting him from behind and does not suspect that he is his enemy, he is at a considerable disadvantage. Sometimes we are made to see that a great many people have the vain notion that all the enemies of Christianity are those who are outspoken infidels. The great enemy of souls, Satan, is the instigator of all opposition to the cause of Christ. But not all of his agents are infidels of the Tom Payne and Bob Ingersoll type. Of course he would rather man would not be religious; but in the event man will be religious, the devil will transform himself "into an angel of light," and have "ministers" who also fashion themselves "as ministers of righteousness." (See 2 Cor. 11: 14, 15.) It makes not so much difference with the devil how he captures men. If one's religious nature is very strong and he will be religious in spite of the devil, then the only way Satan can gain control of the person is by perverting pure religion and inaugurating a false system.

The devil is in this way the author of all the various false religions of the world. He will even quote Scripture and preach a part of the truth, if he can thereby get people to accept enough of his falsehood to make them his.

The Interchurch World Movement was but the appropriation of a truth that Christ taught, slightly perverted. And the devil is yet behind that movement. It will come to the front again. The devil will, perhaps, eventually unite in some way the most of all the big denominations into one big body. That will be a powerful leverage in his hands for gaining multitudes of dupes.

Are such people, who are sacrificing and laboring so zealously really enemies of Christianity? Are they not living in "all good conscience before God?" Perhaps they are as sincere as Paul was when he was persecuting Christ, but not more so; and he was at that time one of the most practical enemies Christianity has ever had. Yes, such people are enemies of Christianity. They are the most dangerous enemies it has. They are its professed friends. All who are "ministers" of Satan are enemies of Christ. And if they have fashioned themselves "as ministers of righteousness," they are none the less servants of the devil.

I know it does not sound "sweet-spirited" to express this teaching, to some people, but that is only one evidence of the fact that it needs to be spoken. Those who clamor for smooth and fair speech are all the more in danger, if not in the actual service of Satan.

Training for Service. No. 1.

BY AN ELDER.

Some may object to the above caption, yet I beg your consideration and patience while I endeavor to make plain a few things that some congregations have to put up with almost every Lord's day.

In this article I desire to speak of the song service; and I want to say, to begin with, that, if singing is a part of the worship, we, as worshipers, ought not to be satisfied until we have made it the very best possible; while, on the other hand, if it is not a part of the worship, we should quit it at once. Presuming, however, that no one holds to the latter view, I proceed.

I now call attention to the local song leader and the usual course pursued—not to embarrass nor to discourage him, but, if possible, to help him. It is common to hear expressions from the leader like these: "Let's try number —; it's a pretty good old song." "We will have to sing something easy, as there are only a few of us here." "I suppose this will do about as well as any I can think of; they are all put in here to sing, and I don't suppose it makes much difference which one we sing." Then he must needs pitch it with a "do-me-sol-do." And after running this much of the scale a few times he raises the tune, which is more often than otherwise either too high or too low. He beats the air and pats his foot, keeping time to the music about like a square-dance promenade at a country frolic. Thus the song service continues, and from all appearance wholly devoid of any reverence whatever, and more often than otherwise without a thought as to the propriety or impropriety of the song selected.

Having mentioned a few of the most glaring improprieties practiced, I desist from further criticism and beg to submit a few thoughts and suggestions for better song service.

One of the most essential things, as I see it, in all of our acts of worship is to think; and the thinking should be done, at least to a great extent, before reaching the church on Lord's day. Let the song leader understand beforehand that he will be depended upon to lead the songs the following Lord's day. Then let him select, study, practice, and prepare, during the week, appropriate hymns to be used. If he will do this, by the time he reaches the Lord's house he will be more sure of himself and better prepared for the work. Then, as occasion demands, let him call out his numbers, making no apology or excuse; for why make excuse or apology for any song to be sung in honor and praise of our God? Let earnestness, reverence, and devotion characterize our every act of worship, for in this way only can the soul receive its proper food. If we are not lifted nearer to God by our songs of praise to him, if we are not brought closer together by such service, we have failed to do what he wants us to do, and we have failed to get the benefit, as worshipers, that he wants us to get.

Another suggestion I would like to make, and that is for the song leader to procure a pitch pipe and keep it in a case, in his "Sunday-go-to-meeting" clothes, so it may always be on hand, in good condition, for the proper key is very essential to good singing.

I beg to emphasize one more thought. Let each congregation, by using a good vocal teacher, keep the church well taught and trained in singing.

Having asked your consideration and patience, I now leave the foregoing thoughts with you. My next will deal with other leaders in the worship.

Among the Churches.

L. E. Carpenter closed a meeting near Gage, Okla., with four baptized and three restored.

Three additions to the congregation in Waco, Texas, last Sunday (May 14)—two baptized.

T. W. Phillips closed a meeting in Bonham, Texas, with sixteen additions to the congregation—fourteen baptisms.

Brother Cuthbertson, who labors with the church in Denison, Texas, reports seven baptized in the midweek service.

From J. A. Hudson, Oklahoma, Okla.: "Yesterday (May 14) was a wonderful day with us at the Tenth Street and Francis Avenue Church. The audience was immense. Four were added. G. A. Dunn will be with us for a meeting in August. We expect a great meeting."

C. H. Robinson recently closed a mission meeting near Itasca, Texas, in which three were baptized. They will worship with the congregation in Itasca. The churches in Hill County are doing a great work through the labors of Brother Robinson. A faithful, consecrated man is he.

W. P. Skaggs will close his third year with the church in Itasca, Texas, this summer, and will be available to locate with a congregation at some other place for all or part of his time. The attendance in the services in Itasca has more than doubled since Brother Skaggs went to them. The church securing Brother Skaggs will be fortunate.

J. E. Wainwright, Sinton, Texas, sends the following report: "The local congregation, assisted by Harvey Scott, of Floresville, Texas, has just closed a wonderful meeting, resulting in nineteen baptisms, six redeemed, and two identified. The church was greatly edified. Brother Scott is an excellent speaker, preaching the truth in love, knowing nothing 'save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.' We hope to labor more with him in the days to come. When I entered the work at Sinton last September, we could depend on possibly fifty; we now have one hundred and fifty regulars, and the greatest influence of any congregation in these parts. Each member is a worker. All wish to be wise by saving souls for Jesus."

From Tice Elkins, Fort Worth, Texas, May 8: "The protracted meeting at Southside Church began yesterday (May 7), with Brother Nichol preaching and the writer leading the song service. Overflowing crowds at each service. Three took membership in the morning, and one was restored at night. Some of the members are working hard to make it a great meeting, and we expect it. I want to arrange steady protracted-meeting work for all of next fall and winter, from September on, or will consider a local work. My contract will expire here with August. This makes three years with the Southside Church, and I shall leave it, when I do leave it, as good a place for my successor as he will be able to find anywhere."

Good Rich Red Blood

And plenty of it, is essential to health, willing effort, good appetite.

Lack of it, or thin, watery blood, means illness, rheumatism, catarrh, humors, headache, wandering pains, cold hands and feet, decline of health-tone.

We recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for all these and other symptoms because it is made from the best ingredients physicians prescribe, combined by pharmacists who have made a life-long study of medicines; and best of all, because it has helped thousands to have good, rich, red blood and all the blessings that come from it.

The worth and great economy of Hood's Sarsaparilla appeal to everyone. A bottle will last a month. War tax removed and price reduced. Get a bottle. For mild cathartic, get Hood's Pills.

Field Reports

Columbus, Miss., May 16.—We listened to two splendid sermons on Sunday and Sunday night by Brother J. C. Murphy, of Pulaski, Tenn. He preaches the gospel with force and power. I am sure a deep impression was made on those who heard him. We owe much every way to the Tennessee brethren who have fellowshiped the great work under way in Mississippi. The Lord will reward them. We give thanks to God through Jesus Christ our Lord.—J. W. Howell.

Philippi, W. Va., May 15.—I began a meeting at Union Church, about four miles out from this place, on Friday night before the first Lord's day in this month. On the first Lord's day of the meeting I baptized one, and yesterday I baptized eighteen, and one came from the Methodists who had been scripturally baptized. One more confession last night. Our house is now overflowing at each service. I have awakened an interest in enlarging the house. The meeting will continue till Thursday night.—Andrew Perry.

Springfield, Mo., May 15.—We closed the meeting at Jackson, Miss., on May 7. We had good attendance throughout the entire meeting. Brother J. Roy Vaughan rendered valuable service in the meeting by directing the singing and otherwise. One was baptized, and we discovered eight members in the city who had not been meeting with us. It was my pleasure and good fortune to be asked to move to Mississippi and continue the work left by Brother Cayce. So I shall be located in Jackson by the first of June. To those living in Mississippi who had thought to have a meeting held, please command me freely, and we shall do our best to establish the cause where there is a chance. Please feel free to write me.—Charles F. Hardin.

Summit, Ga., May 13.—Our work is growing in this section of the State, and the results of our sowing the seed of the gospel are beginning to show now. We had a very encouraging service last Lord's-day evening. Five came forward and made the good confession and were buried with Christ in baptism. We are planning on securing a tent and having a meeting here in the near future. We have not secured a man to help us yet, but think we shall soon. We believe this meeting will result in several additions to the congregation here. I am to be in Brunswick next Lord's day; and there, too, the work is very pleasing. The Sunday-morning classes are growing, and we are gradually getting in touch with new people. If the brethren will help us with the financial side of this work until we get them on their feet, the church is sure to become strong in this section of the country before many years.—J. Bedford Beck.

Humboldt, Tenn., May 17.—Brother Earnest C. Love preached for us on Saturday night, May 13, and on Sunday morning and Sunday night following. He is a mighty power in the cause of the Lord and is an untiring, enthusiastic worker, and his efforts were enjoyed and appreciated very much. While we did not prove it to him so well, we hope to soon. We are few and weak here, but are doing better now, and I hope the day will speedily come when we will be upon our feet and able to run with patience the race that is before us. This is a town of about four thousand, in a trucking section, and has many plants of industry within its limits. It is simply a little city of great opportunities. The Lord willing, Brother Reeves will begin our meeting on the first Sunday in August, and we are praying that the peace and piety of the Prince above may crown our efforts with success. We pray God's richest blessings upon Brother Love as he goes on in this very worthy work.—A. B. Gunter.

Dallas, Texas, May 16.—On last Sunday evening I baptized the first Jew that I have ever baptized. The preparation for this baptism was due to our Jewish missionary, Stephen D. Eckstein. He found him, taught him, and brought him to hear both Dr. Wood and myself preach. The Jew openly confessed Jesus the Christ as his Savior and was baptized by me at the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church. The churches of Christ in Dallas have united their efforts to keep Brother Eckstein as missionary to his people. There is much to do to convert these people. We need much literature, published in their language. This comes high. Other brethren wishing to help this mission may address the elders of Pearl and Bryan Streets Church. We are much encouraged by additional help of some other churches. Ferris has helped, and all the churches of Christ in Dallas are helping in this work. Pray that the Lord may further bless this mission. We believe our Brother Eckstein is faithful to the Lord's word. He has been in the "one body" only a little more than one year. He is willing and ready to learn all the details of the work, and we shall delight in assisting him. Any church near us desiring to hear him speak may write any of the preachers or churches of Christ in Dallas and it can be arranged. While Pearl and Bryan has direct oversight of the work, all are equally interested.—A. O. Colley.

SURE TO HELP SICK WOMEN

Mrs. Baker, So Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Anxious to Help Others

Lebanon, Indiana.—"I was completely run down from women's troubles and stomach trouble and for a long time was hardly able to do my work. I had some friends who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they told me about it. I know what it has done for me and I recommend it to others, as I am sure it will be a great help to all sick women. It is a wonderful medicine, and I give you permission to use my testimonial and my photograph."—Mrs. EMMA BAKER, 310 S. East St., Lebanon, Indiana.

These letters recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound ought to convince women of the great worth of this medicine in the treatment of ailments to which they are often subject.

Mrs. Baker calls it "a wonderful medicine." If you are suffering from troubles women often have, or feel all run down, without any ambition or energy for your regular work, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a natural restorative and should help you as it has Mrs. Baker and many, many other women.

Murdock.

J. J. Murdock was born on November 10, 1860, and departed this life on March 26, 1922. He was a member of the church of Christ. He leaves his wife and eight children (four girls and four boys) and his father to mourn his departure. He was a friend to everybody. All who knew Brother Murdock thought well of him. We all miss him at our worship; but he was deprived of going to church for eighteen months before he died. Funeral services were conducted by Brother T. H. Williams. His body was laid to rest in the Trion cemetery. A large number of friends and neighbors attended his burial. May God bless his family.

G. W. TIBBS.

Kitchens.

Sister Mattie Lewis was born into this world twenty years ago. She obeyed the gospel at the age of fifteen and remained faithful until death. Two years ago she was married to Brother Frank Kitchens. She departed this life on December 18, 1921. After five weeks' illness, she died of typhoid fever. She leaves a husband, mother, two brothers, two sisters, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her departure. None knew her but to love her, and her friends were numbered by her acquaintances. She was laid to rest at Hardie's Chapel, where she enjoyed so much to go to worship. We miss that face which carried so much sunshine. Our loss is her gain.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

Pinchley.

The writer was called to Denton, Texas, on May 9, 1922, to conduct the funeral of Sister W. H. Pinchley. She was born on May 10, 1847, in Tennessee. Her maiden name was Agnes Dodson. She was married to W. H. Pinchley near old Alton, Texas, on October 15, 1872. The husband and two children, Tommy Pinchley and Mrs. Oliver, have passed to the great beyond, and eight children survive their mother. They are: Mrs. E. R. Lester, J. M. Pinchley, J. F. Pinchley, Mrs. J. A. Gribble, Miss Artie Pinchley, Mrs. T. W. Fry, all of Denton; J. S. Pinchley, of Merkel, Texas; and Mrs. A. A. Abbott, Cisco, Texas. Besides these, there are twenty-nine grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren. Our sister was a member of the church for about fifty years, and was one of the most beautiful and altogether lovable characters the writer has ever known. In her the children find an example fully worthy of emulation. May her pure, sweet life ever be to each of them a source of inspiration.

R. D. SMITH.

Blackman.

It is with a sad heart that I write of the death of Mary Caroline Blackman, widow of the late James Kennard Blackman, who was a minister of the gospel and who wrote for the Gospel Advocate forty years ago. She was born on March 20, 1835, and died on April 15, 1922, aged eighty-seven years and twenty-six days. She was a devout member of the church of Christ for more than sixty years, and was always ready to do the Master's will. She was a great reader of the New Testament, and as she grew older she read more, reading it through several times each year. So we have hope that our loss is her gain. We can brush back the tears and look by faith to the far-away home of the soul and see her at rest, where there is no sickness, no heartaches, no tear-dimmed eyes, no sad partings from those we love so dearly. I would say to the bereaved ones: Let us comfort our hearts with the consolation that she is one more waiting on the other shore for us to come. Let us follow her, as she followed Christ, and all will be well.

A DAUGHTER.

Johnson.

On October 29, 1921, the death angel came and took from us our dear old grandfather, George W. Johnson, who was born on March 25, 1845. He was married to Mary Anne Chambers in 1870, to which union were born eight children. Grandmother preceded him to the grave thirty-three years ago. He leaves six children, twenty-six grandchildren, and one great-grandchild, besides the many friends, to mourn his departure. He had been a loyal member of the church of Christ for more than fifty years. No one ever enjoyed the worship of the Savior more than he. One of his most prominent Christian graces was the bridling of his tongue. He never spoke harshly of any one. For the past eight years he had made his home with us, and we were all happy together. We miss him so much. He has left a vacant place that never can be filled. Though we feel sad, yet we feel glad, for we know he lived a life that will be rewarded in heaven. He never missed his Lord's-day worship, and was always on time. May the Lord help us all to follow in his footsteps.

LORA WILSON.

Coleman.

My mother, Mrs. R. C. Coleman, fell asleep in Jesus on August 24, 1921. She was born on April 24, 1857. She was married to James R. Coleman, to which union were born seven children—six boys and one girl—all of whom are still living except the oldest boy.

who preceded her about two years in death. She was also the mother of three stepchildren, whom she seemed to love as her own. She obeyed the gospel under the preaching of W. D. Craig between twenty-five and thirty years ago, and was buried with her Lord in baptism, after which she lived a devoted Christian; and if not providentially hindered, she was always found at the Lord's house on the first day of the week, where she seemed to spend the happiest hours of her life. She was loved by all who knew her. She always found time to read her Bible. She also loved the Gospel Advocate and had been a subscriber quite a while. We realize that what is our loss is heaven's gain. Her remains were laid to rest in the Toccoola cemetery to await the coming of the Lord. The funeral was conducted by A. Y. Howell, of Water Valley, Miss. J. L. COLEMAN.

New York City Notes.

BY E. E. SHOULDERS.

With a large audience in attendance yesterday (May 14), we had a delightful service, and all seemed to feel that it was well for us to have come together.

In our business meeting on Friday night of last week different phases of the work were discussed. Among the important items was the propriety of having open-air services in some part or different parts of the city. This idea met with a unanimous approval of the church, and a committee was appointed to make all arrangements for these meetings. Also, we are trying to work out some plans by which we can most successfully use the free-tract literature. In a short time we hope to be able to use thousands of tracts, and, realizing that there will be an expense attached to even this feature of the work, we want to make every piece of literature count. We believe that we are progressing in this work, though possibly not at such rapid speed as a few other churches we read about every week.

We are working and praying daily, and we believe there are others who are praying for the success of this work. If not, why not? Are you interested to see the church of our Lord well established in this neglected field? If not, why not? Pray that the Lord may send us more laborers into this field. Just think of the numerous cities and towns, both large and small, here in the East, that do not have a single congregation of the church of Christ! It seems to me that the situation is rather an alarming one. Think what James (5: 16) says: "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." If you are not able to do anything else but pray, will you not lift up a voice in behalf of this work? Yes, I make my plea even stronger. My brother, my sister, which is most important—to give your tens, or your fifties, or your hundreds, or possibly your thousands of dollars, to the gods of pleasure to satisfy the lust of your pleasure-seeking heart, or to give the same amount toward sending or helping to send men—not one man—to preach the "good tidings" of our blessed Lord to the thousands of souls that are perishing for the want of the gospel right here in this field? Do not put this matter off and say, "I'll think about that at a later date." Now is the time while it is fresh before you. "Procrastination is the thief of time." Will you be guilty of letting old Satan overpersuade you to procrastinate? What are you willing to do, and who will rally to the call?

A Great Opportunity.

BY CHARLES F. HARDIN.

One lone woman at Columbus, Miss., last year called upon Brother M. C. Cayce to "come over and help us." She was at that time without a place to worship God "as it is written." I was called to assist Brother Cayce in that meeting. The meeting resulted in establishing the scriptural worship in that city. We also baptized the husband of this woman, and he is now one of the main members there. Another one of the four baptized during that meeting is official court reporter for the Circuit Court, and he has already begun to preach. We discovered and baptized enough people to leave a congregation of about thirty-four members. We also purchased the good brick house of the Cumberland Presbyterians at a very low cost. Brother Cayce and I went again this year to hold another meeting for them. We had a good meeting, seven obeying their Lord in baptism and one coming from the Christian Church to worship with us "as it is written." We found them busy and zealous, doing all they could for the work. They have kept up their payments promptly and have done some needed repairs on the house. They are able, with a sacrifice, to keep up all payments; but the house now needs plastering, and the property is damaging for the want of this. I know they are not able to do this much-needed work. I also know of, and know personally, many individuals and congregations who are able to do this for them; and it occurs to me as being right, fair, honest, and Christlike to ask them to do it. Brethren, why not share with others the bounty and blessings God has given you? Have you any moral right to keep, greedily, that God has blessed you with, when others need it, and when he has plainly commanded you to communicate? You had better answer this question now as you will wish you had answered it in the great day of accounts. This request becomes more persistent than ever when we remember that Brother Cayce fell from the fight while in a meeting at this very place, doing all in his power to build up the cause there. The most complacent heart should be stirred to a free and generous gift by the noble and sacrificing life of this godly man. The longer I live and preach the good news, the more confidence I have in it and in my good brethren to do such good work as this. Send all gifts to B. E. Seal, Columbus, Miss., Box 193, or Frank D. Ellis, Columbus, Miss., Box 25.

A Brand-New Book

"OLD LIMBER" or THE TALE OF THE TAYLORS by DELONG RICE

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their eloquence, their fiddles, and their fox hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eternal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Rice. Into one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two most wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifelong rivalry of the two famous brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that attracted the attention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER," the peerless and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters" extending from a President of the United States to a fox hound, the story teaches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of crackling camp fires and the music of the chase. THE BOOK is beautifully illustrated, and bound, appropriately illustrated, and packed in a neat gift box, ready for mailing.

"Who Hath Saved Us, and Called Us With a Holy Calling"

BY C. PETTY.

When a boy, I used to hear the Old Baptists use this language often in their preaching to show that man could do nothing to save himself, but just wait until the Lord called him in his own way; and when the call came, it was a dream, or a light, or some strange feeling. This, to them, was the definition of Paul's language; and to obey a command was to do something to save one's self, and that they did not believe nor accept. If one would come before them and relate some kind of an experience, they would receive him as one the Lord had called and saved; but just a simple confession of faith in Christ would not be acceptable. Now, they were right about the Lord calling and saving them; and it is not because of our works, or according to our works, that he saves us.

Paul uses a similar expression in Tit. 3: 5, when he says: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us." Here is the same expression ("he saved us") as in 2 Tim. 1: 9. But in Tit. 3: 5 Paul tells how the Lord saves us—"by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost."

In Eph. 5: 25, 26 Paul says that "Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." To cleanse it is to save it. Now, it is through the word, or gospel, that the Holy Spirit renews the human spirit, or cleanses it, for the word is the only means used in saving or cleansing men.

In Heb. 10: 22 we have the same idea: "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." That is, it is by faith in the great sacrifice that our Savior made that our hearts are sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our burial with our Lord in baptism is the pure water our bodies are washed in, is what Paul meant. He also meant that Jewish Christians could draw closer to the Lord under the Christian age than under the Jewish age; for, under the former, all except the priest worshiped in the outer court, and the priest made his offering at the altar, then washed in the laver, before he went into the sanctuary to worship. (Ex. 30: 19, 20.) Now all are priests (Rev. 1: 6) and are living in the sanctuary or tabernacle which the Lord pitched and not man, where we can put forth our prayers and praise continually. Under the first, the priest made the offering, then washed before entering the sanctuary; and now when men bow in humble, trusting faith in Christ and have their bodies washed in pure water, to make them Christians, it is analogous to what the priest did under the former age.

Now let us sum up these things and see if they are not all the same. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." (Tit. 3: 5.) "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." (Eph. 5: 25, 26.) "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." (Heb. 10: 22.) "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) Are not all these the same? They must be, for the Savior gave the gospel as the thing by which we can be saved.

Paul says that he and Timothy were saved and called "with a holy calling" (2 Tim. 1: 9); saved "by the washing of regeneration" (Tit. 3: 5); cleansed "with the washing of water by the word" (Eph. 5: 25, 26); their hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and their "bodies washed with pure water" (Heb. 10: 22). Now, since the gospel was the only thing that was allowed to be preached to save men, all the persons referred to by Paul in the different places did the same thing, and there is no dream, or strange light, or anything else; just the gospel believed and obeyed—that is all.

Restlessness a Universal Trait.

Life in the sea is so much easier than on land, and yet all creatures seem to want to invade the earth. Through millions, and millions of years animals have been trying to get out of the sea in order to lead more interesting lives ashore. Our general aquatic ancestry is indicated by the fact that our blood has almost the same degree of saltiness as the sea; and the human ear, with its delicate chain of bones, corresponds with the organs of the fish.—Selected.

Among the Colored Folks

I am glad to state that I have been working with the church of Christ ever since Brother Keeble's meeting in Decatur, Ala., last August. Brother Keeble baptized eight persons. Seven of the eight went back to the church of God, but one of the seven has been reclaimed and the interest now looks better.

I held a meeting at Nebo, in Lawrence County, Ala., with one confession. I also held a meeting in Madison County, with one baptized. I am teaching a Bible class at Madison each Friday night. The people seem much interested. Also, I teach a Bible class at Huntsville each Saturday night and one at Athens each Monday night. I preached at Moulton, in Lawrence County, on April 15, having been invited by a sinner to preach at his house that night. There was much interest, and an invitation was given me to come back. On April 16 I enjoyed a splendid sermon by Brother Claud Woodroof (white), in Albany, showing the difference between the law and the gospel.

Some of our folks in Decatur have been disturbed over foot washing. I invited Brother H. L. Kirby (white) to meet with them and speak on that subject. Brother Kirby preached a powerful sermon and made it very plain. All enjoyed it, and they invited him to come again and speak on the new birth. After Brother Kirby got about through, he asked if any one wanted to ask any questions. A Holiness preacher called in question his view on foot washing. It took Brother Kirby but a few minutes to get rid of him. Then he asked a question on baptism, and Brother Kirby gave a brief lesson on the conditions of pardon, with great satisfaction to all present.

I thank the white brethren in Albany for showing me so much on the gospel plan of salvation. We now have three members in Decatur that have kept the faith. I ask all the brethren everywhere, both white and black, to pray that the Lord will bless me in my work.

command of language was perfect. He did not try to tell new things or to put himself before the people; but he told the old story of the cross and Christ Jesus, the Savior of sinners. I never heard a man more completely put self in the background than did N. B. Hardeman. In this I am sure he did some of our preaching brethren good. Brother Pullias, leading the song service, struck a deathblow to the instrument as a leader. To hear so many voices singing the good old songs was inspiring and spiritual indeed. It seemed like New Testament times to hear the same things inspired men preached and see sinners obey the gospel "the same hour of the night." The churches of Christ in Nashville have a great and glorious work to do in teaching all who have obeyed the gospel and reaping where the seed of the kingdom has been sown. Beloved, be sure you look after those babes in Christ. Feed them the spiritual food, lest they starve. It is said that Antioch in Syria had one hundred thousand Christians at one time —half its population. It was the gospel of Christ that did the work there. No doubt the gospel has been preached in Nashville more and with equal power as at Antioch. Its power was God's power then and is now. I am not able to see why anybody that wants to preach and be saved is not willing to take the New Testament as it is and thus be of the one common faith.

It was pleasant for me to be in the homes of Brethren C. E. W. Dorris and F. B. Srygley. Both of them have held meetings for us and made their home with me. I met Brother John Shaw. Thirty years ago I was called to Lynchburg, Tenn., where Brother Shaw lived. I was in his home. His only child was a daughter five years old. Now that daughter has a faithful Christian husband and is the mother of four children. Both families live together in a splendid home in West Nashville. Brother Shaw remembered my coming to Lynchburg to preach two sermons, Sunday and Sunday night, and, as I thought, the meeting would close. Brother R. B. Parks said the meeting would continue until the next Sunday night, and so it did. It was no trouble to preach to those people. They knew the gospel, and it gave perfect satisfaction. This was the first time I ever baptized "the same hour of the night." I had never seen a more beautiful sight. It was Bible, as were the services at the Ryman Auditorium. While Hardeman and Pullias preached and sang the truth and Christians rejoiced in the truth, sinners purified their souls in obeying the truth. I trust others will follow the example of the churches in Nashville in putting the truth before the people. It will do the work. It is God's word.

On Saturday morning I started to Bell Factory, Ala., where Brother G. W. Moore's daughter met me with a conveyance and carried me to their home. I preached on Sunday and at night and on Tuesday night (rained out Monday night). The church at Bell Factory has had a good membership and the best of teaching; but there are only a few there now, and some of them are not interested. Brother T. B. Thompson wanted me to be in Huntsville on Wednesday night. Brother Moore took me in his automobile. It was pleasant to spend the day with Brother and Sister Thompson. They are both strong and healthy, full of vigor and life; strong in intellect and, best of all, strong in the faith of the Christ. We had a small crowd, but all seemed to enjoy the service. We all enjoyed a hand-shaking. Brother Daniel Jones was out; also his son, Joe. Brother Dan is nearing his fourscore, and Brother Joe is called "the walking Bible." I was truly glad to meet them. I find Brother Thompson to be very much interested in the Master's business. He is capable and willing, and, in my candid judgment, is worthy. My prayer for him and the faithful saints in Huntsville is that they may labor as children of one Father in peace and love and that great good may be done.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve, or your money refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says: "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatments; and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." Some Past Facts, Some Yet to Be.

BY H. C. FLEMING.

There are many facts in past history of the results of sin, because sin is not in harmony with righteousness. Righteous actions are much better than those done wrongfully. But man does not like to submit to obedience in righteousness. He loves to act as he pleases, regardless of the effect upon others; but all such actions will return upon him afterwards. This is evident from the fact that he cannot live to himself alone.

Many men had nothing personally to do in starting the great World War, but the results of it came upon them, whereby a great many lost their lives. Some would say this is not justice; but they forget that all evil results come by the lack of obedience of all mankind to the laws of the Creator of the heavens and the earth. All have sinned.

That war was, perhaps, the greatest evil event upon the whole world that has been since the great flood of waters in Noah's day. It could easily have been prevented by righteous actions. The effects of it are not over yet.

As far as known, there never has been such a condition all over the whole earth among all nations as exists at the present time. Unrest, hardships, and suffering among all nations, worse in some places than in others, and the end is not in sight.

Look around you at the evil works of your own vicinity, and extend your vision farther by reports published of other portions of the earth. Who is responsible for such a condition of affairs? No doubt but that all of us must bear some of the blame, because we have been negligent in the service of our great Redeemer. The watchmen on the towers of Zion must awake and "cry aloud, spare not." If we, one and all, do not do all in our power to remedy all such evils, how long will God spare the world?

"The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." (Ps. 9: 17.)

"For the mystery of lawlessness doth already work: only there is one that restraineth now, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall be revealed the lawless one, whom the Lord Jesus shall slay with the breath of his mouth, and bring to naught by the manifestation of his coming." (2 Thess. 2: 7, 8, R. V.)

This lawless one has long since been revealed. His lawlessness is in rejecting the word of God and making substitutes therefor, deceiving people and seeking control of "the powers that be" in order to subdue all the nations to himself. His agents are everywhere in all places wherever there is a chance to deceive. But all his deceptions must come to naught.

Our duty, then, is to show his false teachings whenever and wherever there is an opportunity to do so; thereby we will be able to "at least save some" from being caught in his snares and brought to naught.

As the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night, and the wicked shall not escape, let not the righteous sleep, but let them watch and be sober. (See 1 Thess. 5: 1-11.)

May the Lord help us to save some from the power of that lawless one.

The education that is really worth while is the kind that develops the whole being in such a way that, from the standpoint of practical life, the world will be made better.—Selected.

Twin Gifts in Christ.

I gave you joy without compare,
With joy I filled your very soul;
I gave you all My wealth to share—
My wealth of love entire and whole.

I gave you all My joy to share,
And yet a gift remained for you
A thousand times more rich and rare—
I gave you all My sorrows, too.

I gave you grief beyond compare,
For you I filled the bitter cup;
With hope deceived and fierce despair
You took it, and you drank it up.

Now one in joy, in sorrow one,
I am your Master and your Friend;
And what we have to-day begun
A million ages shall not end.

RIGHTEOUSNESS.

BY W. P. SIMS.

I desire to say some things pertaining to righteousness as taught in the Scriptures. It is associated with the dearest thoughts and most precious things as regards this life and the life to come. Doing right is righteousness; doing wrong is unrighteousness. Man is dependent upon divine help for teaching in order that he may know what is right. "It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." God has always given man a guide or a teaching which was right for those to whom it was given. The Psalmist said: "Let my tongue sing of thy word; for all thy commandments are righteousness." (Ps. 119: 172.) This statement is clear enough that we may regard it as definite and always correct. No one is capable of leading a people who does not know more than those led by him. In fact, it is expected of them to inform themselves. This is their prerogative. Jehovah has always given commandments, and they have always been his righteousness. All who obeyed him were righteous; all who disobeyed were unrighteous. There is not a single case in the Bible where God punished people because they obeyed his commandments. It would be out of harmony with his character for such. We read of the righteousness of the saints in the Old Testament, where they were persecuted even unto death on account of their faithfulness. Heb. 11 abounds with such, and they serve as a great cloud of witnesses. The Heavenly Father tried them, and their lives are recorded for our learning.

While we have so many recorded who were faithful, we have, on the other hand, those that set aside the commandments of God and thus disobeyed God and obeyed man. Isaiah (64: 6) says: "For we are all become as one that is unclean, and all our righteousnesses are as a polluted garment [filthy rags]." So now we have it. All God's commandments are righteousness, and all of man's commandments are as filthy rags. Saul, son of Kish, who was Israel's first king, serves us as an example. God sends Samuel to him and anoints him king, and sends him with specific instructions to "go and smite Amalek, and to utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass." Saul said to Samuel: "Blessed be thou of Jehovah: I have performed the commandment [righteousness] of Jehovah." Samuel said: "What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?" Saul put the blame on the people and insisted that he had obeyed the voice of Jehovah and that he had brought Agag, the king, and intended to make sacrifice at Gilgal. Samuel said: "Hath Jehovah as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of Jehovah? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." Saul rejected the word of God, and God rejected him from being king. (See 1 Sam. 15: 3-23.) Saul presumed to do what he did by disobeying the commandments of God. Such service is as filthy rags before the throne of Jehovah.

Now, it should be remembered that Saul was God's anointed. He had been turned into another man; God had given him another heart; and the Spirit of God came mightily upon him, and he prophesied with God's prophets. (See 1 Sam. 10, 11.) Notwithstanding all this, his righteousness was as filthy rags, because he offered sacrifice knowing that God commanded him not to do so. It was righteousness to offer burnt sacrifice; but Samuel was the man to do it, and not Saul. Now, where in all the Bible can there be found a more genuine conversion than Saul's? Even that of Saul of Tarsus does not surpass it, and yet he went from bad to worse until he fell on his sword and ended his own life. His sin in the beginning of his work followed him to his tragical death. He failed to do what God commanded. Take warning, dear brother in Christ!

Peter says Noah was a preacher of righteousness. He preached what God told him to preach. Only seven were obedient to his preaching. Lot was righteous, although his surroundings were of the vilest sort. Jonah preached righteousness to the Ninevites, and they were saved. Time would fail me to show through the Old Testament where all who obeyed God received blessings, and all who failed to obey him were punished. It is plain that when people do what Jehovah commands, it is God's righteousness and not man's.

In New Testament times John came in the way of righteousness to prepare the way for the Lord. Jesus is baptized in the river Jordan to fulfill all righteousness. It was pleasing to his Father who proclaimed from heaven: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Again, when in the mount of transfiguration Moses and Elias appeared with Jesus, while Peter, James, and John were looking on, God said: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." From this we are to understand that all former teachers are done away. "This is my Son; hear him; he is the one for you to obey." He was the Sun of righteousness with healing in his wings. During his personal stay on the earth he taught as one having authority from his Father in heaven. His teaching was not his, but it was his Father's. Everything he taught was righteousness, and every one who obeyed him was righteous. He selected his apostles and committed his teaching to them, promising them the Holy Spirit to guide them into all the truth. He dies on the cross, is buried in Joseph's new tomb, and in three days conquers death and the grave and brings life and immortality to light through his resurrection. Thus he gave a solution to the problems that had never been solved. In his last interview with his apostles he said: "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth." This had never been said before. None of God's prophets or teachers had ever had such authority given them. After forty days' training with his apostles he goes back to heaven, where he is seated at his Father's right hand—King, Priest, and Lord—as the only mediator between God and man; the only name given in heaven or on earth by which man can be saved. His apostles go into all the world and proclaim his gospel to every creature. All who believed on him, repented of their sins, and were baptized for the remission of their sins, were saved. Then they became servants of righteousness by obeying the gospel. In their obedience to the gospel, they had no righteousness of their own to boast of. Their question was to know what they must do to be saved. This answer must come from Jehovah through his Son by the Holy Spirit dwelling in the apostles.

Now let us study whose work the people did when they obeyed the gospel. Was it their work? Was it the commands of men that they obeyed? If so, it was their righteousness and is as filthy rags in the sight of Jehovah. It seems to me that no candid man or woman can read the second chapter of Acts and believe that the three thousand did anything other than what the Lord Jesus Christ commanded them to do. So it is settled that all of God's commandments are righteousness. All who hunger and thirst after righteousness (God's commandments) shall be filled with the fruit of righteousness, which is reckoned, or imputed, unto them through faith—the faith that moves to obedience, as in the case of Abraham. (Rom. 4; James 2.) To claim to have the righteousness reckoned unto us before we obey the gospel of Christ is to pervert the teaching of the New Testament. "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey the lusts thereof: neither present your members unto sin as instruments of unrighteousness; but present yourselves unto God, as alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God. For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under law, but under grace." (Rom. 6: 12-14.) Here Paul was speaking of the law of Moses, not the law of faith. Then he says: "Know ye not, that to whom ye present yourselves as servants unto obedience, his servants ye are whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness? But thanks be to God, that, whereas ye were servants of sin, ye became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered; and being made free from sin, ye became servants of righteousness." (Verses 16-18.) This "form of teaching" was the gospel of Christ, which was God's power to save all who obeyed it. It consisted of commands to be obeyed, which were God's righteousness. In Paul's day he found his own nation whom he loved indisposed to obey the gospel. He says: "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved. For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge. For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God." (Rom. 10: 1-3.) It is conclusive that Christians have no time to give to the service of sin. So let us work "while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work."

Trine Immersion.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

Brother J. F. Berkey, of Altoona, Penn., asks the following question: "What reasons or arguments are offered in behalf of trine immersion? Please answer fully in the Gospel Advocate."

Trine immersion is practiced by the German Baptists and Greek Catholics in general. They usually offer but two main arguments in behalf of this practice. Whatever may be presented by them usually is based upon these two chief points.

The first is based upon the testimony of the ancient fathers or upon a few statements found in church history. Tertullian gives this testimony: "After his resurrection, he promises in a pledge to his disciples that he will send them the promise of the Father; and lastly he commands them to be baptized into the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost, not into a unipersonal God. And, indeed, it is not once only, but three times, that we are immersed into the three Persons, at each several mention of their names." (Ter., Volume II., page 395.) Again he says: "Hereupon we are thrice immersed, making a somewhat ampler pledge than the Lord has appointed in the gospel." (Ter., Volume I., page 336.) Much weight is given by trine immersionists to these statements found in Tertullian.

What weight should be given to the testimony of this early writer? If, indeed, people of his age practiced trine immersion, by what authority did they do it? Tertullian was born about A.D. 204. Many errors had been brought into the worship at this time; even in the days of Paul the early Christians had taken up many erroneous practices. If we should practice trine immersion to-day because worshippers of Tertullian's day did, why should we not practice everything that they did at that time? Surely, if there is no stronger reason for the practice of trine immersion than is given by Tertullian, the practice rests upon a sandy foundation.

Other historians equally as scholarly and as accurate as Tertullian do not mention the practice of trine immersion. It is possible that a few in Tertullian's day practiced it, but the great mass of people who were baptized even in his day did not practice it. Eusebius, who is called the "Father of Church History," does not mention trine immersion. Eusebius was born in Palestine, A.D. 260; his Ecclesiastical History, written in ten books, was completed in 325 A.D. It is significant that he does not mention trine immersion. Mosheim's Church History, considered one of the best now extant, does not mention trine immersion. In describing baptism as practiced during the first century, he says: "The sacrament of baptism was administered in this century without the public assemblies, in places appointed and prepared for that purpose, and was performed by an immersion of the whole body in the baptismal font." (Page 28.) In describing the practice in the second century, he says: "The persons that were to be baptized after they had repeated the creed, confessed and renounced their sins, and particularly the devil and his pompous allurements, were immersed under water, and received into Christ's kingdom by a solemn invocation of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost." (Page 49.) It is to be seen that this great historian does not bear witness to the practice of trine immersion. Neander, another very reliable church historian, covering the early history of the church, does not bear witness in favor of the practice of trine immersion. Again the question is asked: Why should one rely upon the uncertain evidence of the practice of the ancient fathers?

The second argument offered is based on the commission as given by Matthew: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." (Matt. 28: 19.) It is claimed by trine immersionists that Jesus here gave the formula for immersion and that the three names—the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit—being given in the formula, that baptism must be performed three times—first, in the name of the Father; second, in the name of the Son; third, in the name of the Holy Spirit. There is a triune Godhead, and there must be a triune baptism, so they say.

It is claimed, because there is a distinction in the members of the Godhead, that there must be a threefold act in immersion. However, the reasoning is not good. It is stated: "And I say unto you, that many shall come from the east and the west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 8: 11.) Here Jesus mentions three distinct persons, and those who come from the east and from the west are to sit down with these three persons—Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. According to the logic of the trine immersionists, they must sit down three times—must first sit down with Abraham, then rise up and sit down a second time with Isaac, then rise again and sit down the third time with Jacob. Again, Jesus is said to have spoken to the multitudes and to his disciples. "Then spake Jesus to the multitudes and to his disciples." (Matt. 23: 1.) Jesus did not on this occasion deliver two discourses, one to the multitude and one to his disciples; neither did he deliver the same discourse twice, first to the multitude and then to his disciples; but he delivered one discourse to both at the same time. Another parallel statement: "For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in his own glory, and the glory of the Father, and of the holy angels." (Luke 9: 26.) The Savior does not mean here three distinct actions or comings. He does not mean that he will come three times—first come in his own glory, then at another time come in the Father's glory, and then a third time come in the glory of the holy angels. These are three distinct Persons, yet one coming is done in the glory of the three here mentioned.

So with the act of baptism. There is one act of baptism, and that is performed in the name or into the names of the three—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Sometimes the statement is made that "baptizo" means "to dip repeatedly," and hence trine immersion. This argument is not sound. John the Baptist baptized; John's baptism, so far as the action is concerned, does not vary from other baptisms. Did he immerse three times? Was Christ immersed three times? Was he baptized first in the name of the Father, then in his own name, and in the name of the Holy Spirit? He was baptized. There is no distinction in the act of his baptism and the action of baptism with believers. Again, there was the baptism of suffering. (See Mark 10: 38, 39; Luke 12: 50.) This baptism did not mean an overwhelming or submersion in suffering and death three times, yet it is called a "baptism." Scriptural baptism, as given in the commission, does not differ in the action from the action in John's baptism, in Christ's baptism, or the baptism of suffering.

"Lest We Forget."

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

Our big meeting is over, and we have demonstrated a few things without the aid of any denomination. We filled the largest auditorium in Nashville every night for twenty nights and turned away thousands who were unable to get seats. Our sermons were printed in the daily papers, thereby reaching from fifty thousand to one hundred thousand every day. Also, we showed the world that good singing can be done without "aids" of any kind. Brother Pullias did not use even a tuning fork, yet no song was started too high or too low.

Both the preaching and the singing ranked up with any the city is used to hearing. The day meeting began at 12:10 P.M. This was dinner time, but from three thousand to four thousand people forgot that and went to hear Brother Hardeman every day. Good, was it not?

He preached "first principles" altogether, and yet held his crowd. The outsider who came heard the plan of salvation explained. It went into the papers, and was doubtless read by thousands who never heard one of our preachers preach. Eternity alone can tell just what was done.

Brethren came from distant cities and States, and went away cheered by the inspiration of the great meeting. Many realized for the first time something of the strength and zeal of those in this community who refuse to be anything in religion except Christians. Preachers met each other, in many cases for the first time, and were benefited by new associations and acquaintances.

However, like everything else, it had to end. The last prayer has been uttered, the last song has been sung, and the last "good-byes" are said. The brethren and sisters have departed to their homes, and most of them to small assemblies of the church. Brother Srygley has suggested that some may be discouraged with the little home preacher and the little home church after seeing the big meeting. It is to be hoped that the inspiration and enthusiasm caught at the big meeting will serve to stir all to more zeal wherever they may go. Yet, it is well to consider his wise admonition.

On the other hand, I had been afraid of the pride—denominational pride—it might engender in our hearts. Will it make us feel "like the other [denomi]nations?" Will any take pride in mere numbers? One of the greatest calamities that ever befell national Israel was for "numbering Israel." The inference is that pride in their numerical strength led David to make the mistake.

Just here I am reminded of Kipling's "Recessional," one of the masterpieces of that great poet. He wrote it just after England had held a great military demonstration, in which she had paraded her battleships and soldiers from all over her wide domains. The people of London and their visitors from far and near had laughed and shouted their merriment and had been thrilled by the display of that monster military machine of the "mistress of the seas." After all had settled back to routine, Kipling wrote the poem quoted below. I leave the reader to make his own application.

God of our Fathers, known of old—
Lord of our far-flung battle line—
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Let us forget—lest we forget!

The tumult and the shouting dies—
The captains and the kings depart—
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
A humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

Far-called, our navies melt away—
On dune and headland sinks the fire—
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!
Judge of the nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

If, drunk with sight of power, we loose
Wild tongues that have not thee in awe—
Such boasting as the Gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the law—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

It is sometimes harder to stop than to begin; so guard well the tongue, and keep the reins tight.—Selected.

Field Notes.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

To-day (Monday, May 22) finds me back in the office. It looks good to see the office folks again. Brother McQuiddy is back at work, but does not look very "husky." Several preachers have been in to-day—Brethren W. M. Oakley, E. Gaston Collins, Dan Robinson, A. D. Dies, S. H. Hall, F. W. Smith, A. B. Lipscomb, and others whose names I cannot recall.

According to previous announcement, I spent last week in Obion County, with Brother John R. Williams, of Horn-beak, Tenn. I had long anticipated great pleasure in this visit, and was not disappointed. I preached every night but one in country churches he has built up in his county. He "Henryed" me to the appointments in his runabout, and brought me back to his home at night.

Brother Williams has been known to me since I began reading the Gospel Advocate. He has been where he is since 1869, and has been preaching in that field for thirty-five years. He is still loved by the brethren wherever we went. I studied him and his work as Delilah did Samson, to find wherein his great strength lies, for it goes without my saying it that he is a "Samson."

Here are a few mental notes I took. He is not conceited; he has no pets and is reasonably sociable with everybody, but especially so with none; his tastes are simple, not stylish; he is very firm in his religious convictions; he reads a daily paper and a magazine; he reads two religious papers; he has a fine library containing all the best books of the brotherhood of this and the past generation, and his books are thumb-worn and frequently pencil-marked; his work has been principally among the poor; and last, but by no means least, he has a faithful and uncomplaining wife. She deserves at least half the credit for all the good work he has done.

He made a talk at Rehoboth, a country congregation, fourteen miles from Obion, on Sunday afternoon, and gave a brief history of the growth and development of that congregation. It was begun nearly twenty years ago, and had to meet great opposition from the start. After the house was built, a man representing the popular sects offered twenty-five dollars for the privilege of having just one Methodist sermon preached in the house. Brother Williams took the twenty-five dollars and told him to go ahead. It was thought one "good" sermon would destroy Brother Williams' work and scatter the church. But after the sermon they took the twenty-five dollars and put it into a bell which calls the people from far and near to the church that would not down.

The congregation at Glass, three miles west of Obion, has stood by Brother Williams more faithfully than any other. They guaranteed him a living; and when his receipts fell below what they considered a living, they made it up. Dr. Wells, a prominent member of the congregation, deserves more credit than any one else for keeping Brother Williams in the field for the last sixteen years. At one time, it is said, Dr. Wells said he would assume the whole responsibility himself, rather than have the support withdrawn from Brother Williams and cripple the work he was doing. I strongly suspect that there are a thousand congregations in Tennessee who could do just what Glass did if they only would get busy.

I have spent most of the time since February 1 in West Tennessee, but now my work is done there and I must go elsewhere. I knew scarcely any one beyond the Tennessee River, but have certainly made the acquaintance of many noble servants of God. We met for just a moment, as it were, upon life's highway, and after a smile and a handshake, and a few kind words, we said good-by. For most of us it will be a long good-by. The next time we all meet again, it will be "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest." But there will ever hang in memory's gallery some beautiful pictures—masterpieces of kindness and brotherly love from beyond the "River with the Big Bend."

Brethren, let us remember the lessons I tried to emphasize—that our books and papers should be more widely circulated. How many will join me in an effort to get the Advocate into every Christian home, and as many others as possible?

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

The meeting in Rector continued for about two weeks. There were about twenty-five additions—eighteen baptized. A congregation was set in order, with Dr. M. Donaldson as one of the elders, in which capacity he is serving still. The next year I was called for another meeting, which resulted in a challenge from the Baptists for a debate.

Just as soon as the congregation begins to grow, then comes a challenge for a debate that the Baptists hoped would utterly destroy the "little bunch of Campbellites." For six days the battle waxed warm without any let-up. J. H. Peay, now dead, was the "champion Campbellite killer" in those days, and was chosen as the one to demolish the little congregation and send the little preacher back to good old Tennessee. I shall not say anything of the results, only that both the congregation and the little preacher still live.

The congregation grew in numbers and in influence for good for quite a while. As the congregation grew, it outgrew the little preacher and bigger ones were called, and for quite a while I was called no more. Big preachers must undertake big things; so a Bible school must be established, and two or three big preachers took the initiative. The congregation was influenced to sell the meetinghouse and put the proceeds in the building of a Bible school. Not long after the school was started a bad feeling arose between two of those big preachers. This feeling grew to be so bitter that these big preachers made a personal canvass of the congregation in an effort to divide it. "Are you for me, or are you for the other fellow?" I am glad to say I am not a "big preacher," if such conduct is characteristic of big preachers. But it made my heart sad to see the congregation in this condition. Finally the school fell into other hands and after a short time went down and left several preachers with big debts unpaid. So passed away Monea Bible College. Finally the debts were paid, but the bad feeling between two big preachers was not settled at that time, and I have no account of their ever settling the trouble, and they both still live. If they have settled it and see this and will write me, I will take pleasure in making the statement in my "Notes." The brethren are now planning to erect a new meetinghouse; and when completed and paid for, I hope they will not turn it over to some "big preachers" who want to do "some big things."

In the Rector congregation there was an old brother who lived on his farm a few miles from town. From some cause he and his wife, like these big preachers, permitted a bad feeling to spring up. To settle the matter, the old brother took a limb and whipped his wife. The elders took the matter in hand and talked to the old brother, trying to get him to confess his wrong. "I can't do it, brethren," he said. "Are you not sorry that you whipped your wife?" "Brethren, I am sorry I had it to do, but not sorry I did it, for she needed it." "But, Brother W—, it looks so bad for an old man—and one who claims to be a Christian—to whip his wife." "Yes, brethren, it looks bad, but I tell you she needed it." As they could not prevail on him to confess the wrong, they withdrew from him. Next Lord's day he was on hand; but, as he was withdrawn from, the emblems were not given to him. After all were through, he walked up to the table, and, facing the audience, said:

"Brethren, you can and have withdrawn from me for doing what was needed, but, thank God, you can't keep me out of heaven." So he helped himself to the emblems. He was always present and always ready to give, and, after so long a time, I think the congregation just about decided "she needed it," and so the matter ended.

He was a very polite old brother, and always ended his answers with, "I thank you." Time went on. His wife became sick. "How is your wife, Brother W——?" "I believe she is a little better, I thank you." Sometime after that he was in town. "How is your wife to-day, Brother W——?" "She is dead, I thank you." The poor old soul himself has crossed the great divide after passing life's eightieth milestone. When I held the first meeting there, he offered to deed me fifty acres of land if I would settle in Rector and evangelize in Clay County, Ark.

I dearly love the congregation at Rector, as it was started by me, all because a "big preacher" could not be secured and a little one was called, and I was that little one.

Los Angeles (Cal.) Notes.
BY W. EDGAR MILLER.

The Central church of Christ, 1720 South Flower Street, grows larger and stronger from week to week. The audiences are running very uniformly, with new faces constantly coming in. Sunday, May 14, was a glorious day and was enjoyed by all. Brother Samuel E. Witty gave us two good lessons on "Speaking as the Oracles of God." A number of visiting brethren were present, and at the close of the morning service three of the Lord's children came forward to place their membership with us. Allowing for those who have moved away, this makes our membership now one hundred and fifty, giving us a net gain of sixty-six since the beginning of the congregation, January 1.

Every day it is being demonstrated that the proper efforts will bring results in the Lord's work, as well as in other business, and it does not make much difference whether it is winter or summer. The one thing that has to do with it is our own individual effort. New people are continually coming to this part of the country from all over the United States, and this influx has its percentage of Christians. To locate these and get them in touch with the church and its work is our Christian duty. Some will find the church themselves, but others need to be hunted up and encouraged to come. Two good men, such as Witty and Wright, can well spend a large share of their time in this kind of work, which they are doing, putting in from ten to fourteen hours a day. The newspapers, too, constitute a medium through which good results may be obtained, and by using them judiciously we have enabled a number of Christians to locate the church who did not know of it before.

Central congregation is greatly encouraged over the results of the past four months and is determined to push forward in the endeavor to accomplish a greater work than ever before. The opportunity is before us, and now is the time to take advantage of it. Christ said: "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." (John 9: 4.) The great sin of Christians to-day is the sin of procrastination; and it is such a convenient sin—that of putting off until to-morrow what should be done to-day, that which we have opportunity to do now. If there are sick to be visited, it is so easy to put it off until to-morrow. If some brother needs a word of encouragement, how convenient to wait until we have a better chance! If a poor brother needs a little aid, it seems as though we just could not spare a cent at this time; but if he could only wait until next week, and so on. We are not trying to evade any duties, but we would rather these things could come up when it is more convenient for us to attend to them. That is the way Felix felt about it when Paul reasoned about righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come. It may be that Felix intended, some day or sometime later on, to heed Paul's admonitions, or to give them consideration, but there is no record that he ever did so. Instead, he said: "Go thy way for this time; when I have a more convenient season, I will call for thee." But let us emulate the Savior, who went about doing good at every opportunity.

Atlanta (Ga.) Notes.
BY B. C. GOODPASTURE.

Hugh E. Garrett closed an eight-days' meeting at Griffin, Ga., last Sunday night (May 21). There were six confessions, and one came from the Baptists. Brother Garrett will begin a meeting at Chickamauga, Ga., on the first Sunday in June.

O. W. Rawlings sends an encouraging report of the work in Savannah, Ga. Brethren Ijams and Copeland are doing a great work with the faithful brethren in Savannah. On Sunday night, May 14, four from the Baptists were added to the congregation. P. S. Macey, one of our best members at West End Avenue, has moved to Savannah, and cast his lot with the brethren there.

Although it rains almost daily, the meeting at West End Avenue moves along with increasing interest. To date there have been twenty additions from all sources. This is my second meeting with this congregation.

The meeting at South Pryor Street will begin on the second Lord's day in June. S. H. Hall, of Nashville, will do the preaching.

John A. Klingman, who labors with the congregation at East Point, Ga., is in the midst of his best year's work so far. The outlook is promising. We are expecting greater things of the East Point brethren.

Upon the Heights.

BY E. F. M. SOURS.

I stood upon the mountain height
And saw the mists below;
I saw the hamlets in the vale,
I saw the waters flow.

I stand upon the mountain heights,
I see the paths of sin;
And, lo, how many thoughtless ones
Are seeking life therein!

I stand, I gaze, the holy light
About my vision plays;
And—O!—my happy spirit bows,
And, in its joy, it prays.

I stand upon the mountain heights
And gaze to heaven above,
The while I thrill with holy awe,
Rejoicing in His love.

Has the Kingdom of God Been Established on Earth by Jesus Christ, or Will It Be in the Future?

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE BY T. J. MARRS.

THE "KINGDOM" COMES AT CHRIST'S SECOND ADVENT.

1. In Matt. 24: 3 the disciples asked Christ the signs of the end of the "world." He shows, in answer, that Jerusalem was to be destroyed, gospel preached everywhere, world war, and signs of his "coming in the clouds of heaven," and that it (the end of the world) is nigh, and would come in the same generation (verses 33, 34); and in John 18: 36 he said: "My kingdom is not of this world." Therefore, if Christ's testimony is final, it will come at his second advent.

2. Paul said that Christ would judge the quick and the dead "at his appearing and his kingdom." (2 Tim. 4: 1.) As he did not judge the dead on Pentecost, we reason, the "kingdom" does not come till his second advent.

3. Paul taught the disciples of several churches that "through much tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of God." (Acts 14: 22.) Shows: If there was a "kingdom" set up on Pentecost, they had not yet "got in," or had not learned about it, or did not think it worth mentioning.

4. Christ said some should not die till they saw the kingdom come with power; in Rev. 4: 1 he says, "Come up hither, and I will show thee the things that are to come to pass hereafter;" and in Rev. 11: 15 shows him "the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdom of our Lord," etc., and the time to judge the dead, etc. So, the kingdom will come at the "last trump," when the dead are raised "incorruptible." (1 Cor. 15: 52.)

5. Because the disciples thought the kingdom should immediately appear, Christ told them it would be like unto a nobleman who went into a far country to receive a kingdom, and return; but certain of his citizens said: "We will not have him rule over us." So, when he returned, having received the kingdom, he called these men and had them killed. This "returning" was to earth, at his second advent, or that "killing" was in heaven, for the "killing" follows the "returning."

6. Dan. 7 shows he comes with the clouds of heaven when this kingdom is given him, that this follows the "great judgment, and that "all nations shall serve and obey him!" It looks to me like the "nations" were serving old Satan. (Brother Jones introduced this text, in his affirmative. Now, have "all nations" been "serving" and "obeying him" since Pentecost? Not to any alarming extent.)

7. Isa. 66: 15-24 shows that the Jews shall be gathered back to Palestine, and in the "new world" "all flesh shall worship God on the Sabbaths and new moons;" but now the Mohammedans worship on Friday, Jews and Advents on the Sabbaths, and Rome and a lot others "break bread on the first day of the week." Are these "flesh?" If so, you had better stop "transgressing" the Sabbath, for the trans-gressors will be burned. (Verse 24.) Better take God at his word, keep his Sabbaths, if you wish him to bring you to his holy mountain. (Isa. 56: 6, 7.)

As Brother Jones did not offer a single citation that says the kingdom came on Pentecost, I think that intelligent readers can see he has failed in his affirmative, so I close this at this: "May the Lord bless and preserve you unto his heavenly kingdom."

REPLY BY H. W. JONES.

Yes, "the heavenly kingdom comes at Christ's second advent"—"the end" (1 Cor. 15: 20-28); but when God's kingdom on earth? is the question. Debate that! Marrs away off; debates (?) "Sabbaths," "heavenly kingdom," etc., instead affirming when God's kingdom comes on this old earth. Meet the issue! Say, Marrs, any flesh-blood bodies in second-advent kingdom?

Marrs perverted Isa. 66: 15-24. It says, "from one new moon, . . . from one Sabbath to another" (verse 23); hence continual worship, "not in Jerusalem," but "in spirit and truth" (John 4: 21-24), beginning Pentecost day! "All flesh" means "people of all nations" (Jews, Gentiles), not everybody. Fulfillment began on Pentecost. (Acts 2: 17, 39.) Jews brought "from all nations to God's holy mountain [government], Jerusalem" (verse 20)—fulfilled Pentecost. (Acts 2: 5-11.) God took "priests" (verse 21)—Christians—"from them." (Acts 2: 36-42; 1 Pet. 2: 5-9.) "New heavens," "new earth" (verse 22), after "these dissolved." (Isa. 65: 17; Heb. 12: 26-28; 2 Pet. 3: 10-13; Rev. 21: 1-8.) So Isa. 66: 15-24 my text. Thanks, Marrs!

Dan. 7: 13, 14 shows dominion, kingdom, given Christ when "brought to God." Fulfillment—Matt. 28: 18; Acts 1: 6-11; Acts 2; Eph. 1: 15-23; 1 Pet. 3: 22. Final judgment follows this; but Marrs says, "This follows great judgment." So Marrs marred Dan. 7: 13, 14, getting "cart before horse." "People" of all dominions shall (do—will) serve him. (Phil. 2: 9-11.)

Luke 19: 11-27 shows Christ "went into far country"—heaven—"to receive kingdom" (fulfilled A.D. 33), "and return" (long after) to execute judgment, rewarding "faithful servants" in heaven—"slaying" (punishing) "enemies in hell" (not on earth). (Matt. 10: 28; 25: 14-46; 2 Thess. 1: 3-10; Rev. 20: 11-15; 21: 8.) Notice, Christ had "citizens" to "reign over" from time he entered heaven till "return." Hence, kingdom existed during interim. "Twisting" here, "cannot pass."

Marrs jumbled Mark 9: 1 with Rev. 4: 1; 11: 15—no connection whatever! As well quote: "Judas hanged himself: . . . do thou likewise!" Mark 9: 1 fulfilled Pentecost day when "they" (plural, more than John) actually saw God's kingdom come with power and Holy Spirit. (Acts 1: 6-8; 2: 14.) Sure, "the heavenly kingdom" comes "at last trump," but not on this old earth. (1 Cor. 15: 50-55; 1 Thess. 4: 13-18.) Yes, "through much tribulation" (in Christ's kingdom on earth—2 Tim. 3: 11, 12) "we enter God's kingdom" (in heaven—Acts 14: 22). So they "got in" kingdom on earth—"learned it"—"worth mentioning." (Rom. 6; Col. 1: 12-14; 1 Thess. 2: 11, 12; Rev. 1: 9.) Certainly, "Christ will judge living and dead at his appearing and kingdom" (2 Tim. 4: 1)—"the heavenly kingdom" (verse 18)—not kingdom on earth!

Matt. 24—Marrs suppressed two questions (verse 3), jumbled answers, erroneously makes pronoun "it" (verse 33) mean "end of world" (verse 3) to prove (?) Advent theory by John 18: 36! Wonderful logic! Jesus didn't say, "my kingdom not in this world," but "not from hence." (John 18: 36.) So Christ's kingdom (government) emanates from heaven. See? Matt. 24: 14 confutes Adventism—"gospel" and "kingdom" coexistent. "Twist" that!

In third reply Marrs calls standard translations (that demolish Adventism) "bum mistranslations"—ignominious shame, blasphemy; but such desperation follows holding unscriptural theories when exposed. Christians, while "in" God's kingdom on earth, are "out" of God's kingdom in heaven, "Paul taught." Col. 1: 13; Acts 14: 22.) Give Marrs "leather badge" for cheap quibbles! "Called into kingdom"—1 Thess. 2: 12, R. V., marginal rendering. Marrs' ignorance here "shows Jones goes beyond inspiration"—eh? Not "strange" that "calleth" (present tense) occurs, because God's "call" continues. (Acts 2: 39, 47.) Jones never said: "Church and kingdom are same thing." Marrs' misrepresentation again! "Disciples"—Christians—constitute "the church;" their divine government, "the kingdom." So his puerile "trying" Matt. 16: 18, 19 fails! Christ was Prince and Savior when "exalted." (Acts 5: 31.) Thanks, Marrs! Christ is King and Mediator, says Bible. (1 Tim. 6: 15; Heb. 9: 15.)

Marrs says: "Christ takes David's earthly throne"—then, "heavenly kingdom," etc. "What meanest thou?"

Certainly, "unrighteous shall not inherit God's kingdom (in heaven). Marrs manufactured "1 Cor. 5: 10" quotation (?), then quibbled. Christians are, spiritually, in God's kingdom (government) on earth. (Col. 1: 13; 1 Thess. 2: 12; Rev. 1: 9.) Marrs' weak evasions, petit quibbles, show weakness of Adventism. My affirmative stands intact. Everything answered!

Matt. 12: 28. Therefore kingdom came A.D. 33!

Sister Mollie (Smith) Eaton.

BY S. H. HALL.

Sister Mollie (Smith) Eaton was born on March 17, 1871, and died at her home, in Atlanta, Ga., on May 6, 1922. She is survived by her husband, Dr. Robert L. Eaton, and two sons, J. Robert and Bennett, of Atlanta, Ga.; her mother, Mrs. Rebecca Smith; one brother, T. C. Smith; three sisters, Mrs. F. Z. Webb, Mrs. M. T. Martin, and Mrs. J. W. Lee, of Smithville, Tenn.; also by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. J. Robert Eaton, and grandson, J. Robert, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga.

After funeral services in her home, conducted by Brother Goodpasture, the body was accompanied by her husband, two sons, and the daughter-in-law and son-in-law to Nashville, where the writer joined the party, with a number of other Nashville friends, and the body was conveyed to Smithville, Tenn., the place of her girlhood, and, after appropriate services in the chapel of the church of Christ, was given its final resting place in the family lot in ——— cemetery.

Death is one of the most common things known to man. We see it every day, almost, and we have never become reconciled to it, and never will. One of the natural desires of a normal soul is to live on without interruption; and we should be glad God respects this desire and has provided to give it eternal satisfaction by meeting it with eternal life.

There are pleasant and unpleasant deaths. Of course, every death has more or less unpleasantness, but there are some that are joyful indeed in comparison with others.

It is sad to see a mother taken from her little ones untrained and untutored. Think of the joy that comes in the consciousness that Sister Eaton saw her two noble sons grow into manhood, both identified with the church of Christ! In our sorrow over the loss this husband now carries, can we not rejoice that she lived to see her boys grow to that age where it is so much easier to leave them than in the bud of youth?

Sudden deaths are sad in spite of the character of the one who goes. We are just not ready for it, and it brings a shock that hurts. It is different when one suffers for weeks and months, and by degrees we have been made to know that the loved one must go. Yes, we can see them suffer until we are almost glad when the end comes. The following words of Paul become so real to us: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven: if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. . . . Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord. . . . We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." (2 Cor. 5: 1-8.)

I say, when we see our loved ones suffer so long, we can see the beauty of this scripture as never before, and we come to be reconciled to the idea of their going. We take hold of another statement of Paul—viz.: "Having a desire to depart, and be with Christ; which is far better." (Phil. 1: 23.) And we can get additional consolation from David, who declared: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." (Ps. 116: 15.) Sister Eaton had suffered long and intensely, and we know that death was a blessing to her.

There is nothing that brings deeper sorrow than for a loved one to go and leave doubts about their being alive to God, saved and sanctified in the blood of our Lord. Sister Eaton left no doubt here. She was baptized into Christ at the early age of fourteen under the preaching of Brother E. A. Elam. I can never forget her days with us in the Atlanta work. She had the class of young men and women, and loved them. It was a sad day to her when failing health forced her to have to surrender the class into the hands of another. Then, the "South College Street church of Christ," as it was then known, can testify to her undying devotion to the cause of our Lord. She labored with them for years. Though she has gone, yet she continues to live in our hearts and pushes us onward and upward with that noble life she lived before us. Brother Eaton, you and the boys have suffered a great loss. But do not forget how rich you are. To have a loved one with Christ should make the desire to live for that which is worth while the stronger. It is great for your sons to say with Cowper, the English poet, whose sorrowing heart had been comforted with the hope of a better day:

My boast is not deduced from birth,
From loins enthroned and rulers of the earth;
But higher far my proud pretensions rise:
I am a son of a mother passed into the skies.

The Lord bless you and yours, and that sweet mother of Sister Eaton's who has lived to such a ripe old age, the sisters and brother, and every sorrowing friend, is the prayer of one who firmly believes that if Sister Eaton could me a message give for you, she would say:

"Tell them how filled and thrilled I am,
Tell them how wrapped in boundless calm;
Tell them I soar, I sing, I shine—
Tell them the heaven of heavens is mine."

Training for Service. No. 2.

BY AN ELDER.

It is the Lord's day; the people have met to worship; the leaders are present, and there is, plainly, a tendency for one leader to shift to another the responsibility and burden of the work. After a more or less painful pause, by and by Brother Somebody "breaks the ice" by calling on Brother Somebody Else to read a chapter, which is usually passed on to the next, until finally some one agrees to take up the task, and, opening the Book, reads a chapter that he may not have read over before for many moons; hence, not having studied the passage, he blunders, stammers, and ventures a comment clearly out of harmony with the context, and finally lands, with the result that no one appears to have been the least bit helped by his effort. Well, the compliment is passed on to some one else to lead the prayer and another to preside at the Lord's table, and quite often this beautiful memorial service is marred by bungling awkwardness, the result of a lack of preparation beforehand; for who has not heard the stereotyped phrase, "We now come to the most important part of the worship," and, again, "Jesus on the night of his betrayal 'taken' bread." After the giving of thanks and the loaf has been distributed, the congregation's attention is called to the fact that "he 'taken' the cup," etc. Now, while said leader may think that he has been very nice and precise in his choice of words expressive of this beautiful service, he has, nevertheless, missed the mark. Try using plain speech and say, "Jesus took bread," "Jesus took the cup." It may sound more common to you, but, mind you, it will be correct and scriptural, too.

Now, a preacher does not like to criticize an elder or other leader about matters like this; but your humble servant, being only a local elder, feels that he can afford to be plain and call a spade a spade—not to embarrass or discourage; but to hear this improper, ritualistic group of expressions every Lord's day "is a weariness of the flesh." Faultfinding is discouraging, but friendly criticism from the heart should be helpful.

Can we find a remedy, a better course of procedure? I pray your indulgence and patience. In every congregation there should be a ruling elder, not a boss or pope, but ruling in the sense of directing the worship from time to time, so that system, order, and harmony may prevail. He should be a praying, thinking man, ever looking ahead and planning for the best interest of all. Each Lord's day let him give out a program for the following Lord's day. Let him name the brother who will lead the songs, if there be more than one song leader in the congregation, and then appoint some one to read a lesson from the word of the Lord and another to preside at the table, impressing upon each one so named the importance of preparing themselves during the week so as to give the very best service possible. If you have been called upon to read a lesson, do not preface with remarks like this: "I have not prepared anything to read; in fact, I had forgotten that I was to take the lead this morning; but I just happened to open the Book at this passage, and I suppose this is about as good as any." And so he proceeds, finally finishing up after reading—in a half-hearted way—sixty-seven verses, more or less. Result: No one lifted up, strengthened, or helped. What is the matter? The poor brother just did not think. It would appear that, after leaving the church last Lord's day, he had forgotten that God is his Father and that Jesus Christ is his Savior. Shame on such indifference, such infidelity. Wake up! Now, if some one will think, who will try and do better, all is well.

Among the Churches.

C. R. Nichol is in an interesting meeting in Magnolia, Ark. He is to begin in Bishop, Texas, on June 7.

M. C. Cuthbertson, who labors with the church in Denison, Texas, reports eleven baptisms within the past two weeks.

D. S. Ligon, who labors with the congregation in Burnett, Texas, will begin a series of meetings there the last of June.

W. T. Hines writes that the congregation in Blanchard, Okla., began a year ago with only four members, and that now they have in attendance one hundred. A house is needed.

From Harvey Scott, Floresville, Texas, May 22: "J. E. Wainwright and I are now at Stockdale trying to win souls for Jesus. Good interest. Wainwright is doing the preaching. I shall begin here next Sunday."

C. R. Nichol closed a meeting with the Southside-Central Church, in Fort Worth, Texas, on May 21. He reports that he has not found a more active congregation in any place than this one. Tice Elkins has been with them for three years.

From G. M. Pullias, Dallas, Texas: "The new building for the Oak Cliff Church will be ready for occupancy on the fourth Sunday in this month. We shall begin a meeting the following Sunday, with Horace W. Busby, of Fort Worth, Texas, preaching. A fine meeting is expected."

From F. L. Young, Paris, Texas, May 18: "Two men were baptized here last night. My first meeting for the summer is to begin on June 14, at Texarkana. Our home meeting, with home forces, will begin on July 1. My time for the summer has been engaged. While I am away, Brethren Garrett and Cook do most of the teaching. They are good preachers."

Cled E. Wallace assisted with the meeting in San Antonio, Texas, Denver Heights congregation. There were three baptisms, three restorations, and three to place membership with the congregation. Foy E. Wallace, Sr., has been laboring with this congregation for nearly a year, and the enrollment in the Bible classes has increased nearly one hundred per cent.

Foy E. Wallace, minister, and Tillett S. Tedlie, song director, closed a meeting in San Angelo, Texas, with twenty-six baptisms. T. M. Carney, who labors with that congregation, writes that Brother Wallace is neither afraid nor ashamed to preach the full gospel, and that sectarians cannot fail to know that he does not court their favor by withholding vital truths in his preaching.

L. S. White writes from Sherman, Texas, May 27: "Our protracted meeting in Sherman began on Sunday morning, April 30, and closed on Sunday night, May 21. There were two services daily. G. A. Dunn did the preaching, and I never saw better work done. Large audiences attended all the services. Seventy were added to the congregation. Fifty-five were baptized, twelve who had moved here took membership, and three were restored. Most of the conversions were grown people, and many of them heads of families. Last Sunday we had five hundred and forty-three in the Bible classes, and nearly as many the Sunday before. The church is happy and at work."

W. D. Black reports a meeting which he and Austin Taylor conducted in Alpine, Texas, with one baptism. There are a few sisters there who meet for worship and study of the Bible. Success will attend the efforts of any body of disciples of Christ who faithfully follow as the Lord directs. The work in Alpine was contributed to by the churches in Ozona, Uvalde, Sabinal, Del Rio, Sonora, and Vernon, Texas. Brother Black will be in the evangelistic field—protracted meetings in different parts of the State—from now till the last of August, when he will return to Ozona for another year of work under the direction of that congregation. The Ozona church has recently built a splendid house of worship. The church there is to be commended for their liberality.

Christ Is Divine.

BY J. C. M'Q.

That Jesus lived, died, and was buried is freely admitted even by those who deny that he is divine. His friends claim that he arose from the tomb; his enemies contend that his disciples stole his body from the tomb while the Roman guard slept. If Jesus rose, then he is the Son of God, is divine, and the Bible is true; if he did not rise, then he is an impostor, the Bible is false, and all our hopes are vain.

The witnesses who declare that Christ rose from the dead are numerous and had the opportunity to know the truth of their statements. The Spirit speaks through Paul concerning the number of witnesses: "For I delivered unto you first of all that which also I received: that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; and that he was buried; and that he hath been raised on the third day according to the scriptures; and that he appeared to Cephas; then to the twelve; then he appeared to above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain until now, but some are fallen asleep; then he appeared to James; then to all the apostles; and last of all, as to the child untimely born, he appeared to me also." (1 Cor. 15: 3-8.) From the following scripture it is evident that they could not be mistaken about seeing Christ after his resurrection: "The former treatise I made, O Theophilus, concerning all that Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day in which he was received up, after that he had given commandment through the Holy Spirit unto the apostles whom he had chosen: to whom he also showed himself alive after his passion by many proofs, appearing unto them by the space of forty days, and speaking the things concerning the kingdom of God." (Acts 1: 1-3.) During that forty days they walked and talked with Christ; they ate with and handled him; so beyond all doubt they knew him. If these witnesses knew, were honest, competent, agreed in the main points, and stated facts which cost them their lives, we cannot question their credibility.

Under the bitterest persecution and in the very presence of death they testified to what they knew and not to what they believed—that Jesus died "according to the scriptures, and that he was buried; and that he hath been raised on the third day according to the scriptures." If this is false, they knew it. What motive led them to tell such a falsehood? By telling it they lost all—lost their lives and gained nothing.

The apostles were telling the same story in all parts of the habitable globe. Not one of them recanted and said it is not true that Christ rose from the dead. In the dungeon chained as a felon to a post, in shipwrecks, in prison chained to soldiers, wherever they were, and separated from each other and not knowing what others had said and done, still they all preached that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God. Marvelous agreement in the preaching of the apostles as they proclaim to the whole world that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God! Are these impostors palming off on the world the blackest lie that has ever been told? Did they give their lives to propagating a lie which has done more for the world than any truth the infidel world has ever discovered?

The infidel replies that the martyr dies for his faith, but he should remember that the martyr expects to get his reward in heaven. But if the apostles were impostors, they had no reward in view. The infidel ascribes to them at the same time the truest and vilest character. So true and faithful to an impostor, and yet so false to the whole world! Credulous indeed is the man who believes that they died with a lie on their lips without any hope of reward! He is the last man that should talk about the credulity of the Christians. The man who can believe that the apostles did what they did knowing that Christ was an impostor believes in a greater miracle than that Jesus rose from the dead by the power of God.

Over five hundred witnesses testifying to the same fact, witnesses who were honest and competent and witnesses who narrated an unpopular truth, certainly furnish us testimony which it should not be hard for us to believe. It is easier to believe the truth they told than not to believe it. No fact of history is better attested than that Jesus rose from the dead.

The story told by the enemies of Christ is inconsistent and incredible. The Roman guard did not know what happened while they slept. It was death according to the Roman law for the guard on duty to go to sleep. The disciples of Christ had given up all as lost, and to be found with his dead body would only betray them and add to their confusion. The statement of the disbeliever bears the stamp of falsehood on its face.

If Christ is not divine and is not the Son of God, he certainly knew it. If an impostor, he knew it better than any one else. He said he was the Son of God; he came down from heaven and was the equal of God. His nativity was in heaven. No other man has ever made such a claim. The world would laugh the man to scorn who would dare claim that he was God. Yet Christ made the claim, and built around the claim the most intelligent and powerful following the world has ever known. Not only so, but if he be an impostor, he laid down his life without any thought of lifting men up or without any hope of reward. He was born in a manger, became a homeless wanderer, and died the cruel death of the cross—all for naught. To believe this is to believe a greater miracle than to believe that Jesus rose from the dead by the power of God. The infidel declares that Christ was an impostor and at the same time ascribes to him a supernatural character, for no man ever thought and acted as did Christ. Skeptics charge that he told a blacker lie than any philosopher or infidel has ever done, and yet he has so manipulated that lie for the uplifting and purification of the race as no truth discovered by infidel philosopher has ever done. To believe that an impostor could do this and more is to believe a greater miracle than that Jesus rose from the dead.

Jesus and his religion are without a rival. Heathen religions vanish with the night shadows. Mohammedanism, spiritualism, Mormonism, and every other modern ism are transparent frauds.

The Bible speaks as does no other book. Its Author is God. No one can prove that there is no God. A man must become God before he can prove there is no God. He must be omnipresent, or where he is not God may be; and omniscient, or the one thing which he does not know may be that there is a God. The belief in the existence of God has characterized man in all countries, times, and stages of civilization. This shows that the evidence is patent and convincing to the common mind.

From the Shoulder Out.

BY F. W. SMITH.

S. S. Lappin, a former editor of the Christian Standard, under the heading, "On What Pretext?" delivers some strong blows to the managers of the societies:

And now we are hearing that, when one of the offending missionaries returns from China on furlough, he will not go back again. It is averred that the condition of his health or his wife's health, or some other such good reason, exists.

Now, if our missionary management has an idea that any such subterfuge can adjust the "China situation," there is somewhat yet for them to learn.

That sort of move would mean that a concession had to be made to prevent further withdrawal of support, but that by no means would any word be spoken or any admission given that might indicate a break with the forces that are responsible for conditions in China. It is camouflage pure and simple, and camouflage that is too thin and cheap to deceive even the most susceptible.

In the first place, the "China situation" itself is but the surface manifestation of what ails us. If the China mission were closed and every member brought home, that would not straighten things. How much less likely will it assist in that direction merely to retire one man when he is at home on regular furlough, and to do that on other than the real grounds! Any one could see that at the moment Mr. Morrison read correspondence from China in the meeting at St. Louis at least one missionary was doomed, but not necessarily because he had proved unsound in faith or practice—not that so much as that he had betrayed the Board. Now, the Board will not recall any one; they will merely fail to return one man to the field, and that on other than the actual grounds. This is dishonest.

For a long time I believed in the sincerity of the Chicago group of three stars and their varying collection of satellites. But when Mr. Ames withdrew the support of his church from Guy Sarvis publicly at Louisville to stage a sensational tearfest, and then went back to Chicago and baldly asserted to a newspaper man that his church was supporting Mr. and Mrs. Guy Sarvis in China, I had a revelation. That revelation amounted to this, that is to me an axiom: When a man of intelligence examines the credentials of Jesus and concludes that he is not the Christ, the Son of God, in a sense that no other man is, that man will have to be watched on any statement he makes. His conception of intellectual integrity is unique.

Now, if George Baird is kept at home on any pretext other than the known facts, and Guy Sarvis and Frank Garrett left on the field with no sort of clearing declaration from the management and no break with the Chicago crowd, it will be a revelation to many. It will be clear that there has been no change of heart, and that there is no disposition to right existing wrongs, but that the sole intention is to harvest the offerings of the orthodox without having any sort of break with the radicals who are responsible for all this muss.

Thus it is seen that Brother Lappin does not mince words, but charges the managers with downright dishonesty, deception, hypocrisy, and gives them to understand that "any such subterfuge" cannot "adjust the 'China situation.'" It seems to me that the protesting brethren are going entirely too far away from the seat of the disease to remedy the matter. The very core of the malady exists in the society itself, and "the China mission," as Brother Lappin intimates, is but a symptom of the troubles afflicting the society brethren. Many who made no pretensions to great learning and who laid no claims regarding the future, only in the light of the past, predicted the troublous times which have overtaken those who imagined they could improve on God's way. History is but repeating itself in the ranks of those with whom Brother Lappin is associated, and it is exceedingly strange that he and others who are protesting against the way things are going in the societies cannot see that the very root of their difficulties lies buried within the organization itself. No matter who should manage the thing, in process of time the same results would follow that are troubling Brother Lappin and others now. Centralization of money brings centralization of power, and centralization of power, as a rule, brings corruption, whether in commerce, politics, or religion, and the mistake has been made in piling up money from the churches and placing it in the hands of a few men to manage ostensibly for the spread of the gospel. Such an arrangement takes both money and power from the individual congregations and places it in the hands of a board to manage for them. Thus these churches surrender not only their money and the management of their own affairs into the hands of an organization absolutely unknown to the word of God, but actually lose their identity. Not a missionary on either what is called the home or foreign field could write a letter, as Paul did to the church at Philippi (Phil. 4: 15), and thank a church for its contribution, for the missionary could not tell whether or not one cent he or she received came from a certain church. The glory, honor, and power are all lodged within the seat of government—viz., the board, a creature born of the wisdom of man for the express purpose of supplanting the wisdom of God and the institution he put in the world to spread the truth and save man. The societies are simply political organizations founded upon human wisdom, governed and controlled by human laws and manipulated by political wireworkers. Taking what Brother Lappin says as facts, I ask, was there ever played in any political organization dirtier politics than that with which he charges the managers of the society? And yet there are churches, or, at least, individuals who hold membership in churches, that do not affiliate with the societies, who seem almost crazy to become identified with the thing that Brother Lappin so strongly arraigns for its corruption! Those who refuse to ally themselves with the societies are often taunted for not having a number of missions on the foreign fields. Well, since leaders in society work are deploring the condition of these missions under the control of the board, it would seem, the fewer they have, the less trouble they will be in.

The Correction of a Gross Misrepresentation.

BY M. C. K.

All names and places connected with the matter of this article, except those connected with the Gospel Advocate, are here omitted, but they will be cheerfully given at any time if there should be any proper reason for giving them.

At the opening of the unprecedented World War—the beginning of a period like which had never before dawned on the world—the Gospel Advocate management wisely decided to suspend, for the time being, all agitation and discussion of the war question in its columns. Of course, with properly thoughtful persons, this decision in no sense meant nor even remotely implied any change in principle in the Advocate's position on war. On the contrary, that position remained then and remains now unchanged. Not only did the management have the grace and good sense to desire, as far as it might be able consistently to do so, to show manifest respect for any wish of the government that its citizens refrain from any agitation which might render more complicated and difficult the conduct of the war, but it clearly saw that, even independent of any such wish on the part of the government, discussion of the war question at such a time of confusion and excitement, with the passions of men running high, could not possibly do good, but in most cases would be absolutely certain to do harm. As an editor of the paper, I fully and heartily concurred in the propriety and wisdom of the decision and, as far as in me lay, coöperated with the management in the difficult effort to conduct the paper with proper Christian discretion and prudence during the critical and trying period.

On account of this decision, and to the deep regret of right-thinking persons, some antiwar fanatics, with whom rashness seemed to be largely in excess of good judgment and prudence, unnecessarily and illogically jumped at the conclusion that the Gospel Advocate as a religious journal and myself in particular as an editor of it had changed our position on the war question. These rumors not only continued till after the war had ended, but a leader in their circulation wrote to the Advocate office actually charging the management, in the person of Brother J. C. McQuiddy, with permitting me "to teach it was the duty of Christians to take up arms and kill each other in war." When the rumors assumed this ugly and groundless form, Brother F. W. Smith not only sent the charge to me, but himself promptly entered, in the columns of the Gospel Advocate, an emphatic denial of it and called for the proof that Brother McQuiddy, at any time or anywhere, had ever said or done anything to justify such a charge. Not only was no proof ever given, but, so far as these columns are concerned, the authors of the charge never withdrew it. Moreover, if they ever withdrew it anywhere, no information to that effect has ever reached us.

In consequence of these rumors and the misleading impression they have made in some localities, a prominent preacher of the gospel, who is not only not a carping critic nor a captious faultfinder, but who is a faithful man of God and actuated by no motive except to serve the highest interests of the truth, recently wrote me a letter containing, among other things, the following request: "I should be very glad to have you drop me a note, at your convenience, saying whether you favor Christians' going into carnal war or not. I have been told that you do; I have been told that you do not; and I should like to know the exact truth about it." Cheerfully responding to this brotherly request, I decided that it was proper and timely to give its author an explanation of the origin of these false rumors and of the situation created by them; hence, I took pains to place before him the same facts with which I had confronted, in private letters, the authors of these rumors; and it has occurred to me that the publication of a paragraph or two from my letters to this prominent preacher may reach and enlighten others similarly confused and misled by the same false rumors. Among other things, I made to him the following statement of facts:

Because, in my public utterances and elsewhere during the World War, I prudently refrained from parading on the street corners and on the housetops an antiwar attitude, which ill-advised course got some of them into trouble that could easily have been avoided without any compromise of truth, a small coterie of brethren, whose logical wisdom and theological soundness appear to be a little overrated by themselves, rashly jumped at certain conclusions not warranted by any premises furnished by me, and charged me with teaching that "it was the duty of Christians to take up arms and kill each other in war if opposing governments ordered it." I promptly challenged the statement and called for the proof, asking when and where I had ever, at any time or under any circumstances, taught any such thing. The leader of the unbrotherly onslaught, with a signal lack of appreciation of the logical attitude into which his own act had placed him, replied that he would "be glad to have" my "disavowal of the teaching." I politely informed him that, in this particular case, I had no "avowals or 'disavowals' to make;" that he had made "a specific charge which I distinctly" denied, and that I called upon him "to either bring proof of it or promptly retract it with proper apologies." In response, in order to make it appear that I had so taught, he actually added words to and otherwise perverted an article of mine, to which act, in reply, I called his attention and respectfully declined to have any further exchange with him about it. He neither brought the proof nor withdrew his charge.

Then, when my large book, "Queries Answered," by Lipscomb and Sewell, appeared, the brother to whom you refer, apparently to spread still further the same damaging impression which the little coterie has seemed to want to create about me, and, according to his own confession, when he had taken only a "little time" to look at my book and could not possibly know his charge was true, rushed before the public charging that I had even "suppressed" the antiwar writings of David Lipscomb and wrote me a private letter challenging me to prove in debate with him that "Christians at the call of the government can slay their fellow men." I replied, as you know, that it would "be time enough to talk about" such an engagement between him and me when he furnished the proof that I ever taught such a thing. This call for the proof was first sent to him in a private letter which he never answered and even the receipt of which he never acknowledged, and it was published in the Gospel Advocate of January 12, 1922; but even after its publication, when he came back in the paper February 16, 1922, he was mum on the matter, not even referring to it, and went at once into hiding.

I distinctly deny that their damaging charge against me is warranted by anything I have ever said or done; but I did not and do not propose to be coerced by them and to take the witness stand at their beck and call and thus lift the onus probandi from their shoulders, which, by their own choice and rashness, is on them and not on me.

At this point, calling his attention to the inconsistency of the brother who "came back in our paper February 16, 1922," and "was mum on the matter" of my call for proof, but who subsequently took it up in his own paper where I could not reply, I said:

Breaking his silence where he has protection from exposure in perverting my article after failing, in response to my call for proof, to say a word on it in his effort in the Gospel Advocate of February 16, 1922, where he knew his perversion would be exposed, is certainly a piece of glaring inconsistency. And he perverts the same article, Gospel Advocate, February 21, 1918, to which the other critic added words not used by me. I distinctly said other things, in that same article, which show that what he says is not correct. Even in the part he quotes and perverts I was merely showing, from the awkward way in which the querist had put his question, that his point reflected upon the New Testament and not upon the Gospel Advocate. For prudential reasons entirely satisfactory to me, which I then thought and think now both justified and demanded my course, I purposely avoided saying, at that time, any specific things which Christians should or should not do, and hence did not attempt to decide the point beyond which, in my judgment, it would be the duty of Christians to "resist the power" if they would be true to God. My specific words were that I did "not undertake to dogmatically settle for men specific points where God has spoken to them in general terms only," and even said this: "No matter whether Christians are in Germany, the United States, or anywhere else, the only consistent course that is open to them is to adjust themselves to whatever situation may be thrust upon them and to go their full length in doing all that they believe this and other commands of God require of them or permit them to do, and leave the result with him."

Observe, I did not say all ought to do as they might "believe." I said that would be "the only consistent course that is open to them." Observe, too, that I also said "this and other commands of God."

Even if I had said that Christians who live under opposing governments in time of war and "believe" it their "duty to kill each other in war" would be acting consistently to do so, I would not thereby have been teaching that such a thing is their "duty," but merely that it would be on that point "the only consistent course that is open to them." I would be far from telling men that doing what they "believe" is necessarily their "duty," but I could properly say it is "consistent" on their part to do it. Then, in a subsequent letter to the preacher, referring to the reason which I had assigned for positively refusing to discuss my position on war at the call of unfair critics, and further emphasizing certain points in my first letter, I said:

I not only specified a certain "charge" positively stating that it was "damaging" to me and flatly denied it, but I distinctly assured you that I had "no other reason" for not discussing my position now than the one assigned, all of which, if I meant what I said, was enough to show that I stand exactly where the Gospel Advocate has always stood throughout its history, unless pursuing a course of prudence during active hostilities, such as I pursued in the late war, could be properly called a modification of that position. I do not admit that in my own case it was any such modification, which reminds me that good and sensible Sister Lipscomb, defending the course of prudence pursued by the Gospel Advocate in general and by myself in particular during the late war, when some of the antiwar "Solomons" were getting themselves into unnecessary trouble with the government by attacking that position and lamenting that "Brother Lipscomb was not here to show us how to act," replied in substance: "Mr. Lipscomb himself did not know just how he would have acted in a situation like this, for he was never in such a situation." Of course this did not mean that he would have changed his position in principle, but it did mean that Christians occupying this position may properly act differently in different situations, and, hence, that they may sometimes differ on the extent to which and the particular things in which they may support their governments at such times, and that, therefore, he could not know without knowing the situation what specific course he might deem it his duty, as a Christian, to pursue. I am sure that I did not know the specific course which I would pursue in the recent war till the time came, for I had never dreamed that such a horrible time would ever come, nor do I know now—only the wiseacres know such things—just what course I might pursue if some similar situation should arise; but I think I would then be, as I am sure I was in the recent war, true to the position and principle here declared.

Now, not only was the charge against the Gospel Advocate management and myself absolutely groundless without even the support of a single statement rightly construed from either of us, but, in order to carry his point, one of those making the charge added to an article of mine words not used by me; and another one of them, attempting to represent my teaching in the article, omitted some vital things which I had said and made the article appear to teach what it positively did not teach. For example, because I said "this command"—the command about submitting to "the powers that be" (Rom. 13: 1)—"is from the Lord and is recorded in the New Testament," and that "an inspired apostle himself gave the advice," one of these carping critics represents me as teaching, and has published it to the world, that, because the Lord says, "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husband," therefore, if, in the case of two husbands, each should command his wife to kill the wife of the other, I teach "that the two women could kill one another in harmony with the New Testament"! Was there ever a more flagrant, gross, and inexcusable misrepresentation? Now, side by side with this unbrotherly perversion of my language, I state the following facts:

1. That command about submitting to "the powers that be" is in the New Testament, and it is from the Lord. Of course it must in some way and to some extent be obeyed.
2. I carefully avoided saying or even intimating, in that article, how far or to what extent Christians should "submit," but I clearly and distinctly taught in the very same sentence that their course might have to be regulated by "other commands of God."
3. Trying to show and to teach deference for all the divine commands and speaking of the duty of Christians in time of war, I specifically mentioned the fact of what "this and other commands of God require of them or permit them to do." Those are my exact words.

Finally, no matter how little the article taught on the Christian's relation to war, nor how imperfectly it may have taught that little, it did not teach the hideous thing charged. On the contrary, while, for good reasons growing out of the exciting situation at the time, I purposely avoided any attempt to decide, in that article, precisely what Christians may or may not do at such times, yet its teaching was a clear and distinct affirmation that not only must Christians "submit" to "the powers that be," but they must also obey all "other commands of God." I did not specify any of the latter, for the simple reason that, in harmony with the Advocate's decision at the beginning of the war, I was purposely refraining from any discussion of the question at all, not even specifying a single command except the one the querist had introduced; but no properly thoughtful person can fail to see that the article distinctly taught in principle that if "the powers that be" or anybody else should command Christians to do something in conflict with what "other commands of God require of them," it would, of course, be their duty to obey the latter, even if called upon to suffer death as the result of it, precisely as, in addition to the command to "wives" to "submit" to their husbands, "other commands of God" would not allow them to "kill one another." All of this was clearly and distinctly provided for in principle in that article, but unfair critics have ignored it, and thus, by either adding to or taking from some of my words and omitting others, have represented me as teaching what I never taught.

That Commission on Unity, Again.

BY F. B. S.

My former article on the above subject, two weeks back, drew from Brother John B. Cowden the following letter:

West Nashville, Tenn., May 18, 1922.—Dear Brother Srygley: I notice what you have to say in this week's Gospel Advocate in regard to the Commission on Unity, and I write to give you some information that I thought was generally known. There is so little contact between those that use and those that do not use instrumental music in the church that we often misunderstand each other for this reason. There is no shame nor secrecy about the Commission on Unity. It has been at work here in Tennessee for four or five years, and nothing has been done "in a corner." The original personnel of the same was Carey E. Morgan, E. J. Barnett, A. Preston Gray, W. J. Shelburne, John B. Cowden; and others since have identified themselves with us. I can furnish their names, if you wish them. It is not an organization at all, but a mere association of the friends of unity. It was not appointed by any church or organization and does not represent any. It is open to all Christians; the only requirement for membership is to believe in and work for the unity of the church. We would be glad to have you or any other friend of unity associated with us in the work.

Now in regard to O. E. Payne's book, we proceed on the hypothesis that there can be no unity until our divisive differences are settled, and settled right. Accordingly, we send out all the light we can get on these matters. If you will furnish us the books, as others have O. E. Payne's, we will be glad to send out a copy of M. C. Kurfees' reply with every copy of Payne's book that we send out. We have no desire to suppress or destroy this reply, as you appear to have toward O. E. Payne's book. We want the whole truth on this subject (all that can be said on both sides) known, and we are willing to leave conclusions with the people. With all thinking, truth-loving people, Payne's book stands or falls on its own merits, and so does Kurfees' reply.

If you care to know anything about my individual work in the interest of unity, you can ask any one that has attended one of my meetings in the interest of Christian unity; or, better still, you can attend one yourself and get the information first-hand. I expect to hold such meetings all this summer near Nashville; and, if you think it worth while, I would be glad for you to attend one, if you find it convenient and desirable.

The book intended for you must have gone astray or was not sent at all. The fact is, we did not expect to have to request the return of these books, so a rather loose record was kept of the books sent out. We beg your pardon for bothering you with the request to return.

Of course, you will publish this letter in the Advocate, since the lack of this information places us in a false light before your readers. Yours fraternally, JOHN B. COWDEN.

Brother Cowden is correct when he says there is little contact between those who use the instrument in worship and those who do not use it. What, I ask, is the cause of this division, misunderstanding, and lack of contact between those who use the instrument and those who do not? Is it not the use of the instrument in the worship? Then why does the Commission on Unity not strike at the cause and remove it? Why continue to circulate O. E. Payne's book? The commission cannot hope to remove the instrument by circulating a book that advocates its use in the worship.

I am glad to learn the personnel of the commission. I felt at the time that the main leaders of the commission were members of the Vine Street Christian Church, but I did not know that one of the charter members was their preacher, Brother Carey E. Morgan; but in Brother Cowden's letter to me, Brother Morgan heads the list. Brother Cowden says this commission "is not an organization at all, but a mere association of the friends of unity. It was not appointed by any church or organization and does not represent any." Perhaps not, but it is true that any church ought to have some jurisdiction over its members. If the elders have no rule or right to counsel and control the members of their congregation, they ought to have. In my former article I advised the church where the individuals composing this commission hold membership to withdraw from them on the ground that they are causing division and not unity in circulating O. E. Payne's book. The church should first admonish these brethren to cease their divisive work, and, after proper admonition, if they will not stop the work that is causing division, they should be made to feel the enormity of their sin. Suppose the church has not authorized this commission. As a matter of fact, the most active members of the commission are members of the Vine Street Christian Church; and unless this church condemns the course of these men in some way, they will be partakers of their sin.

I cannot understand how Brother Carey E. Morgan can consistently circulate O. E. Payne's book, because, if I remember correctly, O. E. Payne takes the position in this same book that the Greek word "psallo," from which we sometimes have the word "sing" in our English Bible, means to sing accompanied with an instrument as certainly as the word "baptizo" means to immerse. If this is true, then no man can "psallo" without an instrument. But Brother Morgan did sing in the Auditorium meeting without an instrument, for I sat by him and heard him; but, if O. E. Payne is correct, he no more obeyed God in that singing than one would to be sprinkled instead of immersed. The very fact that those brethren sang with us in that meeting without the instrument is proof that they do not believe O. E. Payne's book as a whole. This is another reason why they should cease circulating the worthless thing. It cannot be true if they are right in their practice; and since it is causing division, it ought to be prohibited.

But Brother Cowden says if I will furnish M. C. Kurfees' reply to O. E. Payne's book as others have the book itself, this commission will send out the reply with every book. That seems to be a fair proposition on its face; but why place such a financial burden on me, when by stopping the circulation of the book the reply to it would be unnecessary? Others are furnishing these books, are they? Who is furnishing this cause of division to these brethren? Surely the preacher is not appropriating any of the funds of the church for such a purpose. The brother says: "We have no desire to suppress or destroy M. C. Kurfees' reply to the Payne book." Of course, you ought not to desire to destroy the antidote to the poison, when you are circulating it; but if you would destroy the poison, the antidote would be useless, as it would not be needed.

Brother Cowden says if I care to know more of his individual work in the interest of unity, I can inquire or attend his meeting myself. No, I was not inquiring about his individual work, but I was inquiring about the Commission on Unity. Brother Cowden says it has been at work here in Tennessee four or five years, but what has it accomplished on that subject? Where has it brought about union? Surely it is about time to disband this commission on the ground of a failure to function. What a pity that Brother Cowden will not give himself to the work of preaching the gospel and establishing churches instead of going from place to place and disturbing our churches over the use of the instrument in the worship, when he himself admits the instrument is unnecessary to acceptable worship! No wonder, Brother Cowden, I had not heard of your work, because it is of no benefit to any one; for it consists mainly in circulating a worthless book, to the neglect of the things that make for peace.

Since writing the foregoing a good brother has agreed to furnish a copy of Kurfees' reply to the Payne book to every one to whom this commission sends the Payne book, provided a list of the names are sent to this office. Since Brother Cowden says the light on the subject is what he wants the people to have, this brother further agrees to furnish a good man to discuss the question with any good man the commission may name that will affirm their practice on the use of the instrument of music in the worship. This would give all seekers after the truth on this question the opportunity of hearing both sides of the subject; and then, to make all this information permanent, this brother further agrees to bear half the expense of printing this discussion in book form, and then both sides can be circulated together. What say you, Brother Cowden? Please send the list to me at this office, and your decision on the discussion, and I will see that the proper man gets it. We will see what we shall see.

Determinism robs art of its fundamental right to exist—of its autonomous expression. It sweeps individual into the crowd and makes the crowd subservient to inflexible forces; it overlooks man's consciousness of his place in the universe; it ignores his temperamental preference and reduces him to a mechanism through which blind life operates as best it can do to no conclusion; it takes no heed of the teleology which gives art its glorious significance, its imperishable beauty.—Exchange.

SERMON OUTLINES

A Book of One Hundred and Fifty New Sermon Outlines

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has one hundred and fifty sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

The Gardener.

My garden stretches to the sun,
But, O how faint and pale to see!
I love to think, when winter's done,
How gay my plot will be;
For though I cannot see them thrive,
The Gardener keeps my flowers alive.

In spring, when lily beds are white
With little bells that ring and sing,
And all green things that love the light
Have come, their joys to bring,
I half forget how still and deep
The Gardener puts them all to sleep.

And when the summer time is come,
And I am happy all day long,
The linnets, that to-day are dumb,
Bear up my happy song
To where the snow-white angels are.

When I kneel down to make my prayer,
Before I in my bed am curled,
I thank the Gardener for his care
Of this his tired world.
Though I sow seeds and till the sod,
The real, true Gardener is God.

How Ruth Loved Her Neighbor.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," read Ruth, in a puzzled voice. "I don't see how I can do that, mamma. Miss Martha is my neighbor," said Ruth, glancing across to the next porch, where a lady sat reading, "and I don't love her at all."

Mamma smiled and explained that the word "neighbor" had a wider meaning than the literal one. Still, it might apply literally, too, on the principle that charity begins at home, but does not end there.

"But I still don't understand," persisted Ruthie. "What does 'as thyself' mean?"

"Why, how do you like people to treat you?" asked mamma.

Ruth thought a minute. "I like them to be kind and thoughtful and—"

"Exactly," said mamma. "You love your little self and want it treated kindly and considerately. Now, you are to love your neighbor 'as yourself.' The Golden Rule comes in there. Do you see?"

Ruth's blue eyes opened wide. "O, I see!" she said, thoughtfully. "I must treat Miss Martha and everybody else as I would like them to treat me. I can love Miss Martha that way."

The very next day she had an opportunity to put the rule into practice. Miss Martha stopped in on her way home, very hot and tired, after a morning of shopping.

"Dear me," she said, dropping into a porch chair, "I am just too worn out to go even those few steps farther to get home! Please let me rest here a few minutes, Mrs. Woodleigh."

Mamma smiled and welcomed her cordially, and Ruth, suddenly remembering her text, thought: "What would I like Miss Martha to do to me if I were hot and tired?" She brought a big palmetto fan, which Miss Martha took with a grateful "Thank you, my dear," and went on talking to mamma of her shopping.

Ruth slipped away and presently returned with a tray containing a tall glass of iced tea, a saucer of delicious berries, and a little plate of delicate crackers, just the lunch for a hot day.

Miss Martha seemed very glad of it, and as she finished she said with a smile: "That has done me a world of good. I felt too tired to go home and get myself a cup of tea, and now I feel quite refreshed and cool. You are a thoughtful little girl. Thank you, dear."

Ruth smiled as she carried away the tray. "'As thyself,'" she murmured. "I understand now, and I like Miss Martha a lot better, too."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

The Position of Woman.

1. Under Mohammedanism she is unwelcome at birth, untaught in youth, unloved in marriage, uncared for in old age, unmourned in death. She is told that she has no soul, no relationship to God, and cannot pray; no future after death.

2. Under Buddhism she holds a degraded life because of some sin in a previous existence. Her only hope is to be reborn as a man.

3. Under Hinduism she is affianced in early age without her consent or choice. If her affianced husband dies before the actual marriage (the same is true after marriage), she is a widow without hope of remarriage. She is accused of causing her affianced husband's death by some sinfulness in a previous life. At one time her only hope of immortality was to immolate herself on her husband's funeral pyre, called the "hot suttee." Now she is despised, ignored, starved, refused the joys of life, and suffers a lifelong "cold suttee."

4. Under Confucianism and other Chinese religions she is allowed to worship false gods and to give offerings to demons, but is not taught any religious responsibilities. Her religious outlook is one of ignorance and mystery.

5. Under Paganism she is only an animal—a poor, weak brute to serve man.

6. Under Judaism of to-day she is untaught, though she has many religious privileges. She has often no place in synagogue worship, and her only hope—one for six million women—is to be the mother of the coming Messiah.

7. Under Roman Catholicism (in most countries) she is priest-ridden and all too often is satisfied with formal meditation of the paid priest to fulfill all her religious responsibilities.

8. Under evangelical Protestantism she enjoys a full and equal share with man in every privilege of an open Bible, an open church, and in religious service, under the manifesto of the Lord Jesus Christ that there is "neither male nor female" in him.—Australian Baptist.

Your Mother.

Do not forget:

To manifest an interest in whatever interests or amuses her.

To remember that she is still a girl at heart, so far as delicate little attentions are concerned.

To give her your full confidence and never do anything which you think she would disapprove.

To make her a partaker, so far as your different ages will permit, in all your pleasures and recreations.

To lift all the burdens you can from the shoulders that have grown stooped in waiting upon and working for you.

To treat her with the unvarying courtesy and deference you accord to those who are above you in rank or position.

To study her tastes and habits, her likes and dislikes, as far as possible in an unobstructive way.

To remember that her life is monotonous compared with yours and to take her to some suitable place of amusement or for a little trip to the country—or to the city if your home is in the country—as frequently as possible.—Selected.

The Lure of Brotherhood.

"Brotherhood" is a most appealing word. I dare say there are more organizations called "brotherhood," and they are more popular, than any other kind in the world. This is not strange when we reflect how the word "brother" stirs and softens the deepest emotions of the human heart. It is a family word, and in its first and literal application speaks of the tender affection which children of the same father and mother normally have for each other. Of course, there are some exceptional cases. There are some disappointing relationships in which the milk of human kindness is soured, and where we should naturally expect brotherly love there is unnatural hatred. Yet the normal feeling is so usually found that it has become figurative for any relationship where it seems natural to expect a brotherly affection. It is in common use among many societies and organizations, even when the society has no object in view beyond the attainment of some temporal advantage. For instance, the members of a cooperative or insurance society quite frequently address each other as brothers. There is a lure about the term "brotherhood" which is contagious and irresistible. Men of every rank and social distinction are attracted to it. The great philosophers and explorers have their various societies. Even the hoboes of the country, which represent our most floating population, can boast of a brotherhood.

Things That Make the World a Neighborhood.

Doubtless more is said and written to-day about the "brotherhood of man" than ever before. Modern business methods are such as call attention to this great relationship. When the prices of stocks and bonds on the New York Exchange show a violent fluctuation, it not only means that Wall Street is agitated, but it means also that the fortunes of people all over the country are enhanced or imperiled. When a man or a syndicate corners the grain market, he endangers the living welfare of thousands. The great war taught the lesson of the brotherhood of man. It brought the prince down to the level of the poor man, and it taught the poor man how to become a prince. It seems bewildering to be told, yet it is true, that boarding schools in Bolivia and Chili were forced to close part of their work, and their very existence was imperiled by the war. Such crises call attention to the interlocking of interests which has gone on since steam and electricity "made the world a neighborhood." It is the twentieth century's comment on the words of the Scriptures, "No man liveth unto himself."

An Aspiration for Ages.

The notion of men and women not of the same parentage forming a brotherhood is not a new idea by any means. For hundreds of years it has been the aspiration of the wisest and best of our race that men may truly become brothers throughout the wide world. It is true that all the forms of brotherhood referred to in modern speech are in the Bible. The idea of men being brothers because they have the same Creator is there. In his memorable address at Mars' Hill, Paul told his hearers that God "made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth," and he further reminded them of what one of their own poets had said along the same line: "For we are also his offspring." The notion of national brotherhood is found in the Bible. The Jews addressed each other as brother in this sense. Stephen, speaking before the council at Jerusalem, called its members "brethren," thus appealing to their affections as men of the same race. Furthermore, the type or literal form of brotherhood is found in the Bible. We read of "James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother." The idea of the brotherhood of man has inspired some of the best things ever written by our poets. It is quaintly expressed by the Scotch bard in the well-known lines:

For a' that and a' that,
It's coming yet, for a' that,
That man to man, the world o'er,
Shall brothers be for a' that.

We think, too, in this connection of James Russell Lowell's description:

Where'er a single slave doth pine,
Where'er one man may help another,
Thank God for such a birthright, brother.
That spot of earth is thine and mine.
There is the true man's birthplace grand,
His is a world-wide fatherland.

The Christian Brotherhood.

But there is a brotherhood more endearing and more important in its scope and significance to the followers of Christ than any of these I have mentioned. It is a brotherhood concerning which we hear very little, comparatively, speaking; and, strangely enough, when we do hear or read something to-day, it is too often by way of disparagement. We hear some one say that "the brotherhood is lax," or "the brotherhood is asleep," or "I am ashamed of the brotherhood," instead of speaking words of encouragement and praise.

I have known of a few misguided souls who claimed to be Christians, yet who objected to being called "brother" or "sister," and who never used these terms in addressing others. I am immediately reminded of those who are ashamed to acknowledge their brothers and sisters in the flesh. Said Bolton Hall: "I looked at my brother with the microscope of criticism, and I said: 'How coarse my brother is!' I looked at him with the telescope of scorn, and I said: 'How small my brother is!' Then I looked in the mirror of truth, and I said: 'How like me my brother is!'" Our attitude toward the brotherhood, which is just another way of saying our attitude toward ourselves, should not be one of carping criticism, but one of sympathetic and hopeful endeavor. Whatever we may think or say about the Christian brotherhood, the fact remains that Jesus intended that this should be the most important of all earthly relationships; and to the extent that we "throw cold water" upon it and belittle its meaning, to that extent do we displease the Master. The Christian brotherhood transcends every other brotherhood in importance because of its supernatural foundation called the "new birth." This thought is clearly contained in 1 John 5: 1: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is begotten of God: and whosoever loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him." This passage means that every one who is thus born of God loves God as his Father, and loves all those who have also been born of God. These are in the New Testament called "the brethren" or "the brotherhood." As a matter of fact, the term "the brotherhood" appears just once in the New Testament—in 1 Pet. 2: 17, where we read: "Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king." But wherever we find in the New Testament the term "brother" or "sister" or "brethren" used to designate the relation to Christ, there the "Christian brotherhood" is implied.

On one occasion the mother of Jesus and his brethren, including both sexes, brothers and sisters, sought him. With a sweep of his hand toward his disciples, Jesus indicated that henceforth his disciples, those who believed on him and were seeking to do the will of his Father, whether male or female, should be considered as his brother or sister or even his mother. Thus did Jesus Christ not only sanction, but glorify, the Christian brotherhood.

From Lucas North, Ethridge, Tenn., May 29: "We had the pleasure of a visit from Earnest C. Love and of hearing him preach four excellent discourses. Also, on Sunday, the gentle, lovable Horace Mann came and preached two excellent sermons. Brother Love preached at night. These brethren are earnest, able ministers of the word of God. Sunday was one of our golden days."

R. A. Craig writes from Shelbyville, Ky., May 26: "Last Sunday I was at Van Buren and Shelbyville. Work at both of these places continues with good interest. My protracted-meeting work begins at Monticello, Ky., on the second Sunday in June. We are looking for many souls to be won to Christ. The Gospel Advocate is a welcome visitor to our home, and we expect to put it in other homes this summer."

John E. Dunn has just closed a fifteen-days' meeting with the church at Lockney, Texas. He reports a fine meeting. Nine new members were added to the local congregation. On his return home from Lockney, Brother Dunn stopped off and made a two-days' visit to Abilene Christian College. He reports the school in a flourishing condition and everything moving along nicely. He gives an enthusiastic endorsement of Abilene Christian College.

From Porter Hogan, Hornbeak, Tenn., Route 2, May 22: "The congregation at Bethel had the pleasure of hearing Earnest C. Love deliver a powerful discourse last Thursday night. It is indeed worth much to any one to meet a man with the personality of Brother Love. I think that all who came in contact with him while he was here were benefited thereby. May the day soon come when we shall have the privilege of hearing him again."

Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, writes: "I have a sister living near Corinth, Miss., and she and her family are Baptists. I am very anxious to visit her and hold a meeting in her community; so, if there is any church near there that would like to have a meeting, I would like to get in touch with them. Any one seeing this who might be interested will please write me at once. I was born in Tennessee, and lived in Mississippi when a child."

From E. D. Martin, Chattanooga, Tenn., May 29: "We had two excellent services at Cowart Street, this city, last Lord's day. One was added to the church by baptism at the evening service. Charles Holder has recently closed a very successful series of meetings with the East Chattanooga congregation. H. M. Phillips is in the midst of a good meeting with the Ridgedale congregation. They have moved into their meetinghouse, which reached completion only a few days ago."

From C. H. Smithson, Hatfield, Ark., May 23: "Last Lord's day was my regular time at Stephens, Ark.; but as there was a special school rally, the church sent me a check and set me free for that day, and I went to Broken Bow, Okla., and met some of my long-loved friends. I start to-night for a meeting at Pittsburg, Kan. As we have a large territory to work, I hope to do much good while there. This is my third meeting this year, and I have time for one in July. Write me at Hatfield, Ark."

William P. Walker writes: "I have located in Stewart County, Tenn. At the present I am visiting the different congregations in the county in the interest of mission work. I find all willing to cooperate in the work and also ready to support it. We expect to have our new tent within two or three weeks. With this we can reach hundreds with the gospel during the summer and fall. I wish every county in the State would support a county evangelist. I am sure this is the Bible plan for doing 'home missionary work.'"

U. G. Wilkinson, Comanche, Okla., May 20, says: "I have been doing some preaching at some places near home, and have received enough for my work to buy needed medicine, for which I am very thankful; but I need more than this, and do not see how I can get along without some to live on. I have meetings arranged for all the month of August. I would like to hold some meetings in June or July. I have been out of the work a long time on account of bad health, but can now hold some meetings. Brethren, if you need some preaching, write me, and I will do my best to serve you. Address me at Box 592, Comanche, Okla."

J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., writes: "I have frequently asked the brethren for a contribution when help was needed, but, in my judgment, I have never made an appeal for help where it was needed more than it is here in Muskogee. We have managed to build a nice house, but our means are exhausted, and we need better and more permanent seats. We are not able to furnish the seats without the help of others. Will the brethren lend us a helping hand? Send money to C. L. Hanan, 1617 East Broadway, Muskogee, Okla." Brother Allen is a worthy man and would not call for help unless he was sure it was needed.

From J. V. Armstrong Traylor: "On the first Lord's day in May I preached to a large and appreciative audience at Philippi, on the Couchville pike. On the second Lord's-day morning and at night I preached at Jefferson, near Smyrna, Tenn., to a very attentive audience. The church at both places is moving along very nicely and growing. I expect to begin a meeting at Hugo, Okla., on the first Sunday in June, to continue two weeks. In my travels I am glad to see the Gospel Advocate being read in so many homes, and I hope more will realize the fact that it should be in every home—not only be in the home, but also be carefully read."

The following telegram was received at this office on Monday morning:

"Atlanta, Ga., May 28, 9:45 P.M.—J. C. McQuiddy, care Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.: Brother Harding died five o'clock. Will be buried at Bowling Green, Ky., Wednesday.—Charles Paine."

J. A. Harding was well and favorably known to our readers. He was one of the editors of the Gospel Advocate for a number of years, and was associated with David Lipscomb in founding the Nashville Bible School, now the David Lipscomb College. He was a great worker in the cause of Christ. He was an able evangelist and debater. He held many successful meetings, some of which were in this city. He was a faithful preacher of ability and marked enthusiasm. We shall expect some one to prepare a more extended notice for our columns.

From W. S. Long, Washington, D. C.: "Will all the readers of the Gospel Advocate who have friends or relatives living in or near Richmond, Va., who are members of the church of Christ, please send me their names and addresses? And those who expect to be in Richmond on Lord's day during the old soldiers' reunion, will you please let me have yours also? If there is not a congregation there to worship God 'as it is written,' there should be, and this is a good time to begin. Be sure to write if you can assist in the least in this. T. B. Larimore will begin a series of sermons at the church of Christ in Washington on the first Lord's day in July. If you have relatives here whom you would like for us to give a special invitation by letter or by visit, please send us names and addresses. The church building is located at Fourteenth and Meridian Place, N. W., on the Fourteenth Street car line. Address W. S. Long, 1219 Kenyon Street, N. W., Washington, D. C."

Thomas H. Burton, Union, S. C., sends the following report: "Beginning on May 4 and continuing for fifteen days, A. C. Traylor and I conducted a very interesting meeting near Newport, N. C. Upon our arrival there we found six faithful members who were very anxious to have the gospel preached in their community. We were not long in discovering that about all the people there had ever heard preach were Freewill and Primitive Baptists. The only gospel preacher that had ever been in the county, so far as I was able to learn, was Brother Cambron, of Florida, who preached there a few times about three years ago. The house was well filled at almost every service, and better attention I have never had. Some said it was the first time that they had ever heard the gospel. Seven were baptized, and two came forward at the last service and said that they had been baptized and would not submit to it again. Many were thoroughly convinced and many more almost changed. I set in order a congregation of fifteen. They plan to buy the schoolhouse in which we had the meeting without calling for outside help. I believe that much good was done. Brother Traylor certainly was a great help. It is impossible to place too high a value on a good coworker in a place like this. It seems to me that I need one this summer worse than any time since I have been in this field. Upon my arrival home I found the congregation moving along nicely. We had one confession at the prayer-meeting service to-night (May 24)."

We Should Work Together.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Those who believe that the Bible is complete and efficient in thoroughly furnishing unto every good work should pull together and should lose no opportunity for advancing the cause of Christ. There should be no envy, jealousy, or division among them. Those who devote themselves to evil surmisings and to ugly accusations against their brethren have not the Spirit of Christ. I have made it a rule to ignore evil insinuations and vicious misrepresentations. They harm the accuser more than the accused. I wish all our editors and writers would do likewise. We are all weak human beings, frail and fallible. I realize I make mistakes, but they are mistakes of the judgment and not of the heart. Too often we find fault with the virtues of others instead of their defects. We should not deal in bitter, personal wrangles, but should faithfully and vigorously teach the whole counsel of God. We should give our very best to teaching the whole truth.

It is to be regretted that those known as loyal, conservative Christians do not have in circulation a first-class religious paper that is well supported. I think I am safe in saying there is not a paper published by conservative Christians that is not published at a loss, and yet there are many religious papers springing up among them to live a little while and then die. These draw away support from the older papers which have weathered the storm for many years. One first-class religious journal, well and ably edited, would better serve the brotherhood than a hundred small papers, poorly edited and not halfway supported. There is strength in union. Christians should not be content with second-rate publications, but should heartily co-operate to publish a first-class religious journal.

The "Gospel Advocate Company" has just been organized, which takes over all the religious publications of the McQuiddy Printing Company. This new company begins to function July 1, 1922. The "Gospel Advocate Company" has bought the hymn books, copyrights and plates, religious books and plates, Bibles, Bible Lesson Helps, tracts, and Gospel Advocate—in fact, the entire religious line heretofore owned by the McQuiddy Printing Company.

Some of the stockholders of the new corporation are: David Lipscomb, W. V. Davidson, W. S. Dennison, R. W. Comer, A. B. Lipscomb, G. W. Johnson, L. B. McQuiddy, Mrs. Lillian Stephens, Norman Davidson, Dr. J. P. Curlee, J. C. McQuiddy, and W. S. Wherry. It is the wish of the directors and stockholders of the company to have the stock distributed among loyal Christians throughout the whole country. With this in view, a share of stock will be sold to any faithful Christian for one hundred dollars. Ten shares sell for one thousand dollars. We want brethren all over the country to be more closely identified with the work, and for this reason we are urging them to buy stock. All should want fellowship in this good work. Mail your check to J. C. McQuiddy, 317 Fifth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn., for as many shares as you will take. Stock certificates will be mailed promptly for amount of stock taken.

By putting all the religious business together, it is believed that a dividend can be declared. The business is now showing a slight profit. If the business were to fail, each stockholder would lose only his stock. I will look after the management of the business until some one is trained for the work, but it is my purpose to give up the active management of the paper so soon as it is prudent and wise to relieve me.

We want your coöperation. Let us work together. If you cannot take any stock, send us a number of new subscribers to the Gospel Advocate.

When we make nearer approaches to God, we have more use of ourselves.—Benjamin Whichcote.

White.

On February 19, 1922, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee White and took from them their darling baby girl, Aldena. She was five years and six months old. She was only a bud on earth to bloom in heaven. She died of diphtheria and bronchial pneumonia. She leaves papa, mamma, and one little brother, Leon, besides a host of relatives and friends, to mourn her loss. Dear ones, do not weep as those who have no hope. Little Aldena is not dead, only sleeping. Her body was laid to rest in the Concord cemetery to await the resurrection morning.

Loftis.

Sallie E. Loftis, wife of G. R. Loftis, who was born in Jackson County, Tenn., died on May 8, 1922. She lived to be seventy-five years, four months, and twelve days old. She had been living in Holdenville, Okla., since 1903. In 1864 she was married, and became the mother of eleven children, seven of whom are yet living. Sister Loftis obeyed the gospel when she was fifteen years of age. She was described by those who knew her best to be a most lovable character. She was a devoted Christian. What more need be said to comfort her aged companion and to afford her children and many friends consolation? For three years she was an invalid and unable to attend worship with the church; but the brethren and sisters would go to her home and read the Bible and worship with her. She enjoyed hearing read passages concerning Christ, the resurrection, and heaven. It was the opinion of all that she was well prepared to go. Wonderful thing! Better than all the riches and glory of this world. Let us all be prepared to meet our God.

Anna Witte was born at McGregor, McClellan County, Texas, in 1882. Her mother and father, natives of Texas, were reared in the same vicinity. She was the youngest child of Brother and Sister J. A. Witte, the latter preceding her in departing this life by several years. Anna Witte attended the college at Thorp Spring in 1902. At the age of eleven she was baptized by Brother J. D. Tant at McGregor. Several years ago she married Dr. C. W. Billings, now practicing in Dallas. She was overtaken by poor health sometime ago. She passed away at Ferris, Texas, on May 15, 1922, at the home of her mother, after suffering for weeks with what doctors thought was autointoxication. She passed quietly and beautifully over the river, leaving behind her mother, husband, three brothers, and two sisters, all of whom are faithful Christians. Her body was laid to rest in Oakland Cemetery, Dallas, Texas, on May 23, services being conducted by Brethren

Kirby.

On April 6, 1922, the angel of death wafted to the paradise of God the spirit of Sister Kirby. She was born on May 4, 1841, in Clay County, Tenn., where she resided nearly all of her life. She was married to Brother Claiborne Kirby on January 25, 1865. Her husband preceded her to the glory land several years ago. She was the mother of seven children, six of whom are still living. She became a member of the church of Christ in early life and was faithful until death. "Aunt Fannie" (as she was familiarly known) was one of the best of women. She was a loving and considerate mother, friend, and neighbor, loved and respected by all who knew her. She was ever ready to help and administer to the needs of any one who needed her assistance. To the bereaved children I would say: Your mother is not dead, but is sweetly resting in that place God has prepared for those who faithfully serve him in this life. Let us not grieve for her, nor wish her back in this sin-polluted world, but let us all try to imitate the life that she lived, so that when the summons shall come for us we may be prepared to meet her on the eternal shore of sweet deliverance, where there will be no more sad partings and heartaches, but all will be joy and peace and happiness for evermore. After funeral services, conducted by Brother Bill Bean, her mortal remains were laid to rest in the Whitley Cemetery at Red Boiling Springs, Tenn.

J. E. JACKSON.

Stone.

On May 7, 1922, the angel of death claimed the spirit of Mary Green Stone, daughter of Brother and Sister A. D. Stone. Brother Stone, the father, departed this life on December 19, 1907, leaving Sister Stone with two sons and three daughters. She has been a loving, dutiful, Christian mother, and has taught her children to love and fear God. Mary Green Stone was born on November 14, 1901. She was born into the kingdom of Christ when she was about fourteen years old, and she lived a Christian life until death. She was a true member of the church of Christ at Cave Springs. Her position with the business world was filled well, and she ever manifested the Spirit of Christ. Kindness, cheerfulness, and faithfulness were prominent traits in her life. To the mother, sisters, and brothers, and all who loved her, let me say: If we would meet Sister Mary Green in heaven, let us place our hand confidently in the hand of Jesus, take the New Testament as our guide, and do whatsoever Christ commands us, and we shall meet her in that eternal home where there shall be perfect peace and perfect joy. She was buried at the Tynsley graveyard by the side of her father. She leaves a mother, two sisters, two brothers, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her death. In the presence of a large audience, the writer spoke words of comfort at the cemetery.

MINERALIZED WATER ROUTS CHICKEN LICE

Tablets Dropped into Drinking
Founts Banish Vermin, Make
Fowls Grow Faster and Increase Egg Yield.

Any poultry raiser can easily rid his flock of lice and mites, make chickens grow faster and increase their egg yield by simply adding minerals to the fowls' drinking water. This does away with all bother, such as dusting, greasing, dipping and spraying. The necessary minerals can now be obtained in convenient tablets, known as Paratabs. Soon after the fowls drink the mineralized water, all lice and mites leave them. The tablets also act as a tonic conditioner. The health of the fowls quickly improves, they grow faster and the egg yield frequently is doubled. Little chicks that drink freely of the water never will be bothered by mites or lice.

The method is especially recommended for raisers of purebred stock, as there is no risk of soiling the plumage. The tablets are warranted to impart no flavor or odor to the eggs or meat. This remarkable conditioner, egg tonic and lice remedy costs only a trifle and is sold under an absolute guarantee. The tablets are scientifically prepared, perfectly safe, and dissolve readily in water.

Any reader of this paper may try them without risk. The laboratories producing Paratabs are so confident of good results that to introduce them to every poultry raiser they offer two big $1 packages for only $1. Send no money, just your name and address—a card will do—to the Paratab Laboratories, Dept. 944, 1100 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City Mo., and the two $1 packages, enough for 100 gallons of water, will be mailed. Pay the postman $1 and postage on delivery, and if you are not delighted with results in 10 days—if your chickens are not healthier, laying more eggs and entirely free from lice and mites—your money will be promptly refunded. Don't hesitate to accept this trial offer as you are fully protected by this guarantee.

Endure Hardness.

BY S. WHITFIELD.

Things that grow where the sun, wind, storm, heat, and cold do not have much effect on them are not of any great value. Such growth is not strong and does not develop into anything that is rugged. Things that grow in the sun and where they come in contact with the wind, storm, cold, and heat are stronger and of more value. The growth is not so fast, but it results in something that is good. Things that grow the slowest are usually the best. The large and hard oak that is worth so much has been a long time growing. It has had many a storm to come against it.

"Thou therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. . . . Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." (2 Tim. 2: 1-3.)

Paul was strong in the Lord, and he knew what it meant to endure hardness in the cause of Jesus Christ, and he wanted Timothy to endure similar things. He knew that such a course would be best for him, for it would draw out the best qualities that could be developed in him, and it would prepare him for the greatest possible usefulness in the work of the Master. Paul also knew that luxury and ease would prevent such development.

"Be not thou therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner: but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God." (2 Tim. 1: 8.)

Timothy was not to be ashamed of Paul because he was in prison. Paul wished Timothy to realize that such things must be endured by the children of God, and, with others, it was good for him to have a part in the suffering that was sure to come to all the true followers of God. We can best sympathize with others when we have similar troubles. Afflictions of the gospel are good for us, for they help to keep us just where the Lord sees it is good for us to be, and where he can best use us for the furtherance of the truth. The gospel will succeed best in the midst of afflictions, trials, persecutions, and even poverty. Where there is luxury and ease the gospel does not spread very fast.

"For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." (2 Cor. 4: 17, 18.)

Since Paul could look upon his afflictions as light, surely we should not complain. Suffering in this life as a Christian was only a moment in comparison with the glory and honor with God and Christ for all eternity.

“Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it.” (Matt. 16: 24, 25.)

Every child of God will have a cross to bear, and we should not be surprised, discouraged, or even complain when it comes, but we should bear it patiently. We must remember that those that have no cross, no suffering or afflictions in the gospel, but have “flowery beds of ease,” are gaining this life, but losing the life beyond. We can afford to lose this life, which is only a moment in comparison with eternity.

“By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward.” (Heb. 11: 24-26.)

There were two courses before Moses. To remain the son of Pharaoh's daughter, there was worldly honor, glory, and riches; but he left all this to do the Lord's will. He chose rather to endure hardness with the people of God. He made no mistake in all this. His life was a success in doing the Lord's will; and, although dead, his life and example is still speaking to us. Had he selected the other course, he would have been forgotten many generations ago.

We have a great cloud of heroes and heroines who fought the battles of God and were true even in the midst of hardships, trials, and persecutions. Let us lay aside all that would hinder, and follow on in the same course to eternal life.

“But thou hast fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, persecutions, afflictions, which came unto me at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra; what persecutions I endured: but out of them all the Lord delivered me. Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.” (2 Tim. 3: 10-12.)

“And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.” (Rev. 7: 13-17.)

Field Reports

Philippi, W. Va., May 22.—The meeting here at Union continues with a growing interest. There have been several baptisms since last report. Two more confessions last night, and we look for more to-night.—Andrew Perry.

Berry, Ala., May 24.—I am just home from the Liberty Hill congregation, where I preached on Lord's-day morning and at night to large and appreciative audiences. It was among these good people that I did my first work when I came to Alabama some twelve years ago. This is now the home congregation of Brother Hal P. McDonald, a splendid man and a good gospel preacher.—Frank Baker.

East Chattanooga, Tenn., May 24.—The meeting at Athens began on May 3 and continued ten days, with six baptized, two restored, and the church built up and encouraged. I began in East Chattanooga on May 14 and am still preaching here. We are having a very successful meeting. The church is in fine shape and is working faithfully with me. Twelve baptized and four restored. Attendance, attention, and interest fine and growing. We are doing great good in the Lord's name. Pray for us.—Charles Holder.

Nocona, Texas, May 22.—We had a good day yesterday. Three persons made the confession at the eleven-o'clock service and another at the evening service, and the four were baptized after the evening service. We all were made to rejoice and take courage. Brother F. S. Vance has just returned home from a trip into Oklahoma, where he has been holding some meetings and doing some good work. He has been laboring with us at this place for two years and seven months, and his work is greatly appreciated by the church here. He preached for us yesterday.—T. H. Field.

Wichita Falls, Texas, May 22.—Yesterday was a most splendid day for the church in Wichita Falls. There was a liver interest in the Bible-school work than usual, and evidence of improved conditions in this part of the service. The meeting at eleven o'clock was well attended, and there was a fine interest. At the close of the sermon one came forward for baptism and nine for membership. In spite of the unfavorable weather, there was a good attendance at the evening hour for the preaching and the baptismal service. With the effort now being made on the part of the congregation continued, we expect to see great things accomplished in the work in Wichita Falls. But we need your prayers.—R. D. Smith.

Sedalia, Mo., May 23.—Sunday, May 21, was the third time that I have visited the good brethren and sisters and their neighbors and friends in Lewis County, this State. This being a beautiful day, we had the largest crowds that we have ever had at this place. There is an opening for a great work to be accomplished in this section, and I am glad to say that some are awakened to the situation. The brethren told me that some of our denominational neighbors were interested and said that they would hear "at a more convenient time." I was asked if I could not visit them regularly once a month the rest of this year, as well as next. This I may be able to do. Brethren, pray that these people in Missouri may wake up.—S. W. Bell.

Black Oak, Ark., May 22.—Yesterday was a great day at Beech Grove, about six miles northwest of this place. I have taught school in the Beech Grove community, and have been well acquainted there since I was a small boy. It has always maintained a good reputation, but its prevailing religious activities have been strictly of the Methodist persuasion. Near two years ago Brother Luke Yates and his good wife began school work there, and have been held in high esteem by the entire community. Mainly through their influence the services of Brother F. M. Eldridge, of this place, were secured for a singing school last year, which was followed in the summer by a meeting of two or three weeks' duration. Brother Eldridge is a preacher of no mean ability and ranks far above the average as a singer, and he did a great work there. The congregation now numbers about one hundred, and they have lately erected a good house upon a good spot provided by Brother Jim Cullens from one corner of his farm, and nearly all indebtedness has been paid. Brother John L. Fry, of Walnut Ridge, preached at Beech Grove Saturday night and yesterday. It was estimated that one thousand people were in attendance, far more than could get into the house. Brother Fry is a man who labors with his own hands, but he can "deliver the goods" from the pulpit. After services there was dinner on the ground. After dinner the audience reassembled and engaged in singing for about two hours. Here is asking the Lord's blessings on all who have labored for the upbuilding of this splendid little congregation.—W. T. Buffalo.

Etowah, Tenn., May 21.—Brother Charles Holder's meeting at Athens resulted in eight additions, the congregation edified and strengthened for better and greater things for God. One confession and baptism at Etowah to-day. The work here is still growing. One confession at Liberty on the first Lord's day in this month. Brother Flavil Hall is to hold a meeting at Etowah in July. Brother Holder is to hold a mission meeting in the county in July, and we hope to have plans perfected to keep him in the county. In numerical strength, the church of Christ stands at third place in this county.—S. S. McMahon.

McMinnville, Tenn., May 22.—I preached my farewell sermon to the good people of Corder's Cross Roads on the second Lord's day in April, and then wife and I returned to Warren County, our former home, for permanent location. We had labored with the people at Corder's Cross Roads for about nine months, and it was hard to leave such fine people. They had shown us every kindness. Since our arrival I have preached for several churches in this county. I was at Smyrna on the third Lord's day in April. I began a meeting at Mount Leo on the fourth Sunday in April and continued it eleven days. We had fine interest, and one young woman was baptized. This was my second meeting with these people. The next two visits were at Forrest and the monthly appointment at Smyrna again. The Lord willing, I will preach for the church at Bonner next Sunday.—G. H. O'Neal.

Thomaston, Ga., May 23.—The meeting here closed last night with good attendance and interest, which had characterized the meeting from the start. We hope, the Lord willing, to resume the work again about the first of October. I will remain over a few days to strengthen the brethren who have been banded together as a result of the work. They will now meet regularly to worship the Lord as directed in his word. We will meet to-morrow night for a prayer service. We are thankful that the work has been received so favorably upon the part of the people in general, to whom the "doctrine of Christ" was entirely new, and believe that the foundation has been laid for a great work in the future. A prominent Methodist boldly remarked: "I have always heard that you were a bunch of fighters, but I see now that you are not, and all the others are fighting you because you are standing on the Book." Such expressions as, "He preaches nothing but the Bible;" "He preaches the truth, and we can't deny it;" "I never heard such preaching in my life—nothing but the Bible;" "He stays closer to the Book than any preacher I ever heard"—these and many more just as favorable were heard daily as the meeting proceeded. Brethren who have never been out in "regions beyond" have very little idea of the great need of sending men out into these fields. Let us awake to the needs of these desolate places where the gospel has never been preached.

To this end, and trusting in the Lord to "provide," I herewith make an appeal to the brotherhood for funds to purchase a tent that I may use in this work. I want to have it ready for use at this place by October 1. Address me at Ashland City, Tenn., Route 3.—B. W. Davis.

Make-Up of the Human Body.

One reason why milk is so excellent a food is that it contains much calcium, which is the principal mineral of the human body, contributing to the make-up of the bones and teeth. A grown person carries in his skeleton about four pounds of it. The body contains about three ounces of sodium, combined with chlorine to form common salt. There are also about two ounces of magnesium, which is a silvery-white metal. Another highly inflammable metal contained in the body is potassium—about two and one-half ounces of it. The body contains about fifty-five ounces of phosphorus. Seven-eighths of the phosphorus is in the bones (going to form phosphate of lime); half an ounce is in the brain tissues; the rest is in the red corpuscles of the blood. Of sulphur there are about four ounces. The body is three-fifths water and one-fifth carbon.—Exchange.

FAITH IN JESUS.

BY W. F. LEDLOW.

What does it mean to believe in Jesus? When he was on earth, what did the people do who believed in him? Recently I read Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, that I might learn clearly the answer to these questions. Faith in Jesus then was the same as it is to-day.

1. The People Believed in the Power of Jesus. They believed that he could do whatever they desired or needed. His power was unlimited. He was divine.

(1) The leper came to him and said: “Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.” (Matt. 8: 2.) Jesus said: “I will; be thou clean.” Leprosy was a disease that man could not cure. Luke says that the man was “full of leprosy”—a medical term that shows that he had the disease in the last stage. With man, there was no hope; but with Jesus, there was a cure. He believed in Jesus—believed in his wonderful power.

(2) Two blind men asked Jesus to open their eyes, and he asked them: “Do you believe that I am able to do this?” They said unto him: “Yes, Lord.” And he said: “According to your faith be it done unto you.” (See Matt. 9: 28, 29.) The blind men could find no relief in the physicians of Palestine, and, so far as man was concerned, were doomed for life; but when they heard of what Jesus had done for others and had heard him preach, they believed in him to the extent that they felt that he “was able” to heal them. They received as they believed, and their eyes were opened.

(3) There was in that country a woman who had been sick for twelve years; she “was diseased with an issue of blood.” (Matt. 9: 20.) Luke (8: 43) says that she “had spent all her living upon physicians, and that none could heal her.” This woman felt in her heart that if she “but touch his garment” she would be well. (Matt. 9: 21.) No physician could do for her what Jesus did. The results corresponded to her faith. She believed in his power.

(4) Lazarus was sick and died. Jesus and his disciples were not in Jerusalem at the time, but returned to the city four days later. Mary and Martha, the sisters of Lazarus, ran to meet him and said: “Lord, if thou hadst been here, our brother had not died.” (John 11: 21.) Each made the statement separately. They believed that Jesus could not only control life, but could prevent death. It seems that their faith was limited to this life; they did not believe in his power to raise the dead. Jesus spoke of the resurrection, and indicated that he would restore Lazarus to life; but Mary and Martha understood that this would be at the “last day.” He encouraged them, strengthened their faith, and prepared them for the deed. When they came to believe that he could restore Lazarus to them, he asked: “Where have ye laid him?” They led the way to the tomb, and at the proper moment Jesus said, “Lazarus, come forth,” and he arose. Here is faith. They believed in his power, his divine power.

2. The People Believed in His Word. All that he ever spoke was true, was accepted and trusted. Whether they understood it or not, people who believed in Jesus accepted what he said. If Christ be divine and his wisdom and power unlimited, finite minds will not be able to grasp all he says. We cannot understand it all. Some one has said that his parables are miracles and his miracles are parables. His life was a wonder; his speech was marvelous.

(1) The centurion came to Jesus and said: “Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented.” Jesus offered to go and heal him, but the centurion said: “I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.” Jesus said to his disciples: “I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.” (Matt. 8: 6-10.) It is worthy of note that the Jews, for the most part, when Jesus healed them, either touched him or expected him to touch them; but the Gentiles were “unclean” and by Jewish custom were barred. It would have shocked the Jewish sense if Jesus had touched a Gentile. If the Jewish idea had been incorporated in the gospel as the basis for the world’s salvation, and Jesus must “touch” every man that he saves, how difficult the task! But the centurion expressed the idea inherent in the New Testament plan: “Speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.” He simply meant that the “word,” without the personal presence of Christ, would heal, if Christ so ordered. The word has power when Christ so commands. The promise in spoken speech carries the power necessary to its accomplishment. This man had faith in what Jesus said. Christ calls it “great faith.” He not only believed that Jesus had power, but believed that he could embody that power in his word. This is essentially the New Testament plan for the world’s evangelization.

(2) Jesus healed a blind man. He mixed spittle and clay and anointed the man’s eyes, and told him to “Go, wash in the pool of Siloam.” The man went, washed, and came seeing. (John 9: 6, 7.) “Faith” in this case required action. The man was instructed what to do, and his reward was conditioned on his obedience. The man walked from where he stood when Jesus spoke to him to the pool, and washed his eyes. He believed what Jesus said, and his faith expressed itself in conduct. Jesus led him to feel that his eyes would be opened when he had washed in the pool. Like the centurion, he believed that Jesus could embody his power in his word, and that his word when obeyed revealed his power.

(3) The disciples were in a ship in the midst of the Sea of Galilee. It was a stormy night, and the wind was “contrary." "In the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea." Peter saw him and said, "Bid me come unto thee on the water;" and Jesus said, "Come." The man "walked on the water." When he started, he did not remove his coat or shoes; he did not ask for help to test the water to see whether he could walk; he did not tie a rope about his body as a means for rescue in case he sank; but he "believed" what Jesus said, leaped from the boat into the sea, and walked. The water was one hundred and sixty-five feet deep and was three miles in extent to the land. It was a dark night. It required faith to cause this man to risk his life in this experiment. He not only believed in Jesus as a Person, but he believed in his word. He risked his life on what Christ had said. (Matt. 14: 24-31.)

(4) The disciples had "toiled all night" on the Sea of Galilee and had caught no fish. Jesus came at dawn of day, and told them to cast the net into the deep. The apostle Peter told him that they had toiled in vain all the night, but added: "Nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net." (Luke 5: 5.) Here is a case where human reason and divine revelation seem to clash. Experience had taught the disciples that there were no fish in that part of the lake, yet Jesus commanded them to "cast the net" again. Peter shows his faith by what he said and did. He cast the net, not prompted by his own judgment, but at Christ's command.

From these examples it is clear that two things are essential to faith in Jesus—(1) we must believe that he has power greater than man, must believe that he is the Son of God, and (2) we must believe what he says and act when he commands. A refusal to act when Christ commands shows a lack of faith or a lack of desire to do his will.

God Is a Jealous God. No. 1.

BY F. L. PAISLEY.

There is some truth in the saying that jealousy is one of the most detestable traits of character that a person can possess. Who has not observed that a jealous man or woman is more or less unhappy and suspicious of his or her own rights being trampled upon? Many lovers have broken promise with each other, and many otherwise well-mated companions have divorced themselves on account of that monster called "jealousy." This is often caused by the wrong kind of jealousy. To say a "wrong kind" is to imply that there is a right kind of jealousy. Verily, that is correct; for God himself is a jealous God, and he declares it of himself.

There are three classes or kinds of jealousy. Two of them are of God and one is of Satan. Webster defines the word as having two distinct meanings, and the Bible so uses the word. Its first use is, "demanding exclusive devotion." The second meaning is, "suspecting rivalry in interest or devotion" when there is a just reason for such suspicion. The third kind of jealousy is, suspecting rivalry in devotion without a just cause; and this kind is of Satan, and is the cause of many unhappy souls. Now, as God does not have this kind of jealousy, but an abundant measure of the other two, this essay shall deal wholly with those two kinds.

Just after the exodus from bondage the Lord gathered Israel at the foot of Sinai and took Moses to its summit to give to them, through him, a law to guide them and keep them in all God's way. He first gave them the Ten Commandments for a basis of all other laws. The second of these commandments was twofold. The first part forbade their making any graven image, and the second part prohibited their bowing to, or worshiping, any of the things material of heaven or earth. One reason for such restriction was given, and one was sufficient for all time—past, present, and future. This reason was stated in these words: "For I Jehovah thy God am a jealous God." (Ex. 20: 5.) Say not within yourselves that that was of the law, for the New Testament shows clearly that jealousy is yet a leading characteristic of the Lord and his Christ.

Now, God is by divine nature a jealous God, and has always been jealous; yet he is never jealous till made so to be by his creatures. This statement seems a paradox; but with the two meanings of the word, it is clearly seen to be true. Every husband and wife worthy of the name is jealous—exceedingly jealous of each other. That is, they demand, and have right to expect, exclusive devotion. That trusting, confiding, virgin girl that left her parents' home and gave her soul to another has a divine attribute and is like God in that she is jealous of her husband, demanding exclusive devotion of him; and sad is the heart whose divine rights are trampled underfoot. Likewise her husband is due from her all her love, devotion, and interest in that realm so peculiar to companionship. Did you say you knew all that? Strange to say that so many thousands know this law regarding earthly relationships and then overlook that law and its demands in our relation to its Author!

That we might see why God is so jealous in the first meaning of the word, let us read Ex. 23: 32, 33. Concerning the inhabitants of the land of promise, whither Israel was bound, the Lord said to Israel: "Thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor with their gods. They [the people or their gods] shall not dwell in thy land, lest they make thee sin against me; for if thou serve their gods, it will surely be a snare unto thee." Again: "Take heed to thyself, lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land whither thou goest, lest it be for a snare in the midst of thee: but ye shall break down their altars, and dash in pieces their pillars, and ye shall cut down their Asherim; for thou shalt worship no other god: for Jehovah, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God." (Ex. 34: 12-14.) Let us study these two statements of the Lord. He forbade Israel's going into agreement with any of the people of the land of promise and warned them not to worship, in any way, their gods. The Lord said: "If you do, it will prove a snare in which you will be caught." How true they found that to be! Moreover, Israel was not to allow the worshipers or their gods to remain in the land, for their very presence would cause them to sin against God. It is a common failing of humanity to yield to whatsoever influence to which it shows favors or with which it flirts. And we are prone to flirt with a religious evil in order to be courteous to those who hold it. History proves over and over again the statement, "It will surely be a snare unto thee."

Not only were God's people to be negative regarding making agreements with false worshipers in that they were to take no part in their ways, but they were to be very positive and active in destroying the acts and altars of worship and all things connected therewith. They were to actually, literally break to pieces and cut down the places of false worship. No doubt many a broad-minded, pious Israelite, who wanted to stay on good terms with his "religious neighbor," said to himself: "Now, these folks are honest and sincere in what they do, and it will be narrow-mindedness of me to insinuate that they are all wrong and that I am right; so, while they are at peace among themselves, we should let them alone to worship as they think right. Not only so, but, to keep from hurting their feelings, I think we ought to worship with them some and show that we believe in liberty in worship and broad-mindedness." If they did not say that, they acted it, and it "surely" proved a snare to their feet which finally held them in a Babylonian trap of captivity. The world has not yet learned the lesson, and many professed Christians do not yet know the certainty of God's "surely."

But why did Jehovah place such a strict prohibition around them? Why not allow more religious liberty? Did he expect all Israel to "see alike" respecting the way of true worship and the destruction of foreign altars? The answer is found in the last part of the citation: "For Jehovah, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God." So demanding and exacting of exclusive devotion is the Lord that he says his "name is Jealous." All this deals with the word "jealous" in its first meaning—demanding exclusive devotion. In a following essay we shall study how God is made jealous in a sense that he is not until he is given a cause for "suspecting rivalry in interest and devotion." The New Testament will be consulted and present-day conditions will be investigated.

Notes from West Tennessee.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

THE MEETING THAT STARTED IN THE COTTON GIN.

Brother Evans Jackson, who lived in Minnick and assisted in pushing me into my first meeting, had moved to Ridgely, in Lake County, and put up a stock of goods. As no preaching had ever been done there by our brethren, he was very anxious for a meeting. He wrote me to go and hold a meeting. I promised to begin on a certain Lord's day, but, on account of the great interest in a meeting in Obion County, I would not quit and go to Lake County in the time promised. So there was great disappointment. Brother Jackson was all torn up and said some pretty hard things about a preacher who would not do what he promised to do.

On Tuesday I mounted my horse and started to Lake County for my first meeting "over there." When I got to Ridgely, the sun was about two hours high. The word was sent out that there would be preaching in the cotton gin, as there was no other place to preach. The congregation at Ridgely now that worship God "as it is written" in a beautiful meetinghouse do not know that the work began in a cotton gin. Brethren, think of the contrast; also, please do not forget that a cotton-gin preacher in an old cotton gin was the beginning of your existence. All the congregations in Lake County and many in Obion County owe their existence to a Lakeite preacher and a meeting under a brush arbor, a blacksmith shop, cotton gin, tent, schoolhouse, or an old shack that had been occupied by negro cotton pickers. I thought it was my duty to God (and yet think so) to preach the gospel at any place the people would hear.

The old cotton gin was not well seated; so the meeting was moved to Horn Ridge Schoolhouse, about two miles south from Ridgely. About two weeks before my meeting the Methodists had held a meeting at Horn Ridge, and quite a number "professed religion and joined the church." When my meeting began, the Methodist preacher, who lived in Ridgely, got very busy visiting his flock to warn them of the dangerous doctrine that would be preached and their safety in staying away. But they would not stay away; they came, perhaps through curiosity, or like the dogs go—just for the trip.

On the second night of the meeting two men and four young ladies confessed faith in Christ and desired to be baptized next evening. We met at Sandy ford on the lake—and such a crowd! Four young ladies to be baptized, and not a sister on the ground! Sister Jackson and Crafton both sick and could not attend the baptizing. I asked Brother Crafton if there were any Baptist ladies on the ground, and, if so, to request them to assist the young ladies in preparation. They very stubbornly refused by saying: "We are not here to assist in making Campbellites." Some Baptist preacher had also given warning. As one of the young ladies was a niece of Brother Crafton, I told him to tell her how to prepare their clothing. So they went out into the high weeds and made preparation as I had instructed, and returned. I then publicly called attention to the refusal to assist and told the people I was not there making "Campbellites," but Christians only—only Christians and nothing more. I said to them: "We will be back here to-morrow evening, and I want you all to attend and see how the Lord's children will lend assistance at a baptizing. The ones you refused to assist will be here then to assist others." Many were the criticisms over these remarks, especially that "we will be here again to-morrow evening." All six were baptized. Brother Bill Crafton, now dead, acted in the capacity of a woman as far as discretion would admit. I shall never forget the slurs, the ugly remarks, and the hateful things said at that, my first baptizing in Lake County.

Sure enough, next evening four or five men were there to be baptized, and about the same crowd. The four young ladies were there also and took hold, assisting in every way possible. I called attention to this and told the people we now had plenty of help of our own. It had its effect. Just as soon as one was baptized, he or she was ready to assist some one else. So my helpers became many before the meeting closed.

The interesting part of the Horn Ridge meeting remains to be told in another article, "The Methodist Preacher in the Horn Ridge Meeting." I believe you will enjoy it. Better subscribe for the Gospel Advocate and get it all.

Prehistoric Harp.

No other musical instrument has persisted through the ages like the harp. Prehistoric of origin, it was popular at the court of King Solomon the Wise, and long before his day was played before the Pharaohs of ancient Egypt.—Selected.

Our Shepherd Leads Gently.

MRS. J. T. STANFILL.

Man's inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn;
But God, our Father, tempers the wind
To the tender lamb that is shorn.

He will feed his flock like a shepherd,
He will gather the lambs in His arm;
Gently, so gently, He leads them
To pastures where nothing can harm.

To the feeble, that need consolation,
Sweetest words of assurance he'll speak;
"Follow me, little lambs, follow onward;
I'm thy Shepherd so lowly and meek."

Follow close, little lambs, to thy Shepherd,
There are those who would lead thee astray;
Many who so blindly would lead thee,
Knowing not themselves the true way.

Many who would cruelly drive thee;
Unjust, but not meaning to be.
Fear not when near the Good Shepherd—
"Fear not; I am ever near thee."

Follow on, little lambs, up the mountain;
Thou'lt soon reach the plain where the fold,
High above all the world and its follies,
Safely shelters the lambs from the cold.

Field Notes.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

I spent Monday night, May 22, in the home of Brother and Sister Mat Puckett, in South Nashville. Sister Puckett was formerly Miss Minnie Dean, of Shady Grove, Hickman County. Also, I saw her mother and sister and brother and his family. On Tuesday I was at the chapel service of the David Lipscomb College and addressed the school. As Brother Elam had been called away to preach a funeral, by invitation from Brethren Lipscomb and Pittman, I taught two of his Bible classes. There are some promising girls and boys there.

I also had a fine visit with Sister Lipscomb, the widow of Brother David Lipscomb. Sister Lipscomb is a remarkable woman in many ways. I do not see how she has done it, but she has kept up with almost every one of the old pupils of the Bible School. She knows where nearly all of them are and what they are doing and what they have done. Nothing but a deep heart interest in the work of the Lord could enable her to do that. Brother Lipscomb was a great man, but he also had a great helper. It is interesting to hear her talk of the work of the Lord in the earlier days.

Late on Tuesday I slipped into Ethridge to visit my father, who is now with my brother, M. C. Love. I stayed there two nights before the brethren found out I was there, and then I was put to work and preached the rest of the week. There are certainly some fine people in Ethridge.

Brother H. N. Mann, of Riverside, Tenn., had an appointment there for Sunday, May 28. I availed myself of the opportunity of hearing him deliver two discourses. I had long wanted to hear him. He is certainly a fine preacher.

Saturday, May 27, I spent in Columbia in the interest of the Gospel Advocate. With the help of Brethren F. C. Sowell and W. C. Salmon, I saw several of the brethren and did some business; but I will have to visit Columbia again.

My brother was with me, and we had dinner with Brother Sowell, and we sure had a pleasant visit. Sister Sowell is a sister to Brother John D. Evans, of Denver, Col. Brother Sowell needs no commendation from me, but it won't do any harm to tell the truth. I think he has probably baptized more people than any man in Maury County. He seems to be well loved and much respected by all who know him. Brother and Sister Sowell have one of the nicest families I ever saw.

I did not get to see Brother Morton or Brother Slayden. In fact, a day in Columbia is altogether too short. I found too many old friends.

My observation is that one of the best safeguards against trouble in the churches is to get every family to read the Gospel Advocate. I could say a great deal here, but it would be personal, and not best to print it; but it is a fact that live church workers realize the value of the Advocate in the homes of the members.

Is Your Faith Fickle?

BY R. P. CUFF.

It sounds very like a paradox to speak of fickleness in connection with faith. That strong faith and fickleness are incompatible there can be no doubt. Please note the strong metaphor Paul uses to show a weak, unsteady, irresolute, vacillating faith: "That we may be no longer children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, in craftiness, after the wiles of error." (Eph. 4: 14.) In the preceding verse the apostle mentions "a full-grown man," one who has attained "unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." Broad is the contrast between the man of health and strength and the child of weakness and ignorance. Broad is the contrast oftentimes between the fullness of Christ and the emptiness of our own lives. How many there are who have been Christians long enough in name to be well informed in the gospel, to be far advanced in brotherly love and fellowship, and to be God-loving, God-fearing people, that yet need to be taught the rudiments of the gospel and to learn the first lessons in sustained fidelity to their Master! There may be some men who regard fickleness in Christian faith as a qualification for some cultural coterie, but it is certain that lack of faithfulness does not specially qualify one for heaven and for the coterie of Christians that will gather around the throne of God. Instead of trying to learn how far we may be imperfect and yet inherit a home eternally happy; instead of desiring to know how much we may sin in our inward thoughts and yet be accepted by the "Judge of all the earth," we should let the word of God have full sway in our lives that the fullness of Christ may in us dwell. It is true that people live with false ideals who have no scruples against deceiving the ignorant and the weak. In fact, they employ their cunning to mislead by artful devices. Too often the devices succeed and the weakling is cleverly deceived. Just as the sailor may be tossed to and fro on waves lashed to fury by stormy winds, so the nominal Christian, who has been a laggard in the study of the gospel and in doing the works which Christ commands, is liable to be driven from his moorings by every wind of doctrine that blows his way. Why not be indoctrinated with the teachings of Jesus as a safeguard against typhoons of dangerous doctrines?

"That we may be no longer children" is no complaint at the innocence of the child, nor at the trustfulness with which he clings to his father's hand for protection, nor at the simplicity of his love. In these respects we must all be children in the eyes of our Father. To the Infinite Mind we can be nothing more than little children. The complaint is raised against the man of fifty years, say, who still has to be rocked in his cradle and sung to sleep. Shame on the weak, childish, foolish monster! Get out of the cradle and be a man! The complaint is against the person who forgets the instruction he has received as soon as it has been given. There is great danger that he will be "a reed shaken with the wind." The mind of man is of such nature that it receives and believes whatever teaching comes to it unless there is instruction already present to contradict the incoming information and cause it to be rejected. A received erroneous teaching may later be dismissed when the truth is heard; but it is much easier to get the mind to accept truth first-hand than it is to induce an acceptance of truth where error has already lodged. How sad when a mind hears the truth, but fails to take firm hold of it, and later lets error enter! That is indeed fickleness. May we "be no longer children."

Loose morals indicate weakness of faith. Indeed, one need not be surprised should he find that the reason for some man's skepticism was that man's love of sin. The sin-loving heart must change decidedly before it can be in harmony with the teachings of Christ. Pride does not welcome the Master's lessons on humility. No form of sin can retain a firm hold in the presence of strong faith.

Another symptom of fickle faith is needless irregularity in attending to religious duties. Irregularity in eating, in sleeping, and in physical habits in general, destroys the health of the body. Even so irregularity in the ministrations which God has enjoined is highly injurious to the health of the soul. That is why the author of the Hebrew letter said: "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works; not forsaking our own assembling together, as the custom of some is, but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day drawing nigh." (Heb. 10: 24, 25.) Scattered disciples—Christians that have located in some section of the country where they stand almost alone in what they believe—sometimes become discouraged and weary and fall in line with some sectarian organization. "O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?" Why not say:

"Discouragements and trials we meet along the way,
The bitter often mingled with the sweet;
But we'll try to bear them bravely, with the hope that some glad day
We shall lay our burdens down at Jesus' feet?"

The weak brother has a place to fill in the church. There is work for him. He must not imagine that he is inferior or that the members of the church with which he worships have not shown him the courtesy, encouragement, and recognition that he deserved, and that, therefore, he will end his work. Paul compares the church to the human body. Every member has its function. "If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; it is not therefore not of the body. And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; it is not therefore not of the body." (1 Cor. 12: 15, 16.) Foot as well as hand, ear as well as eye, are necessary to the complete functioning of the human body. Even so the weak member in the church must do his bit, or there is incompleteness in the work of the church. Your fellow churchmen may judge you to be the foot of the church and less honorable than some other who is the hand. It does not follow that the Lord's judgment agrees with theirs, however. The Lord wants every man to do what he can, no matter how small. By doing what he can, man will grow. Remaining a child through inertia is the thing the Lord condemns.

Mother a Servant.

How many mothers are like Sister Sue? They enter matrimony with a delight, charmed by the romance of it. Life will be a voyage over golden seas with love at the helm. Their cheeks are ruddy and their eyes on fire with anticipation. Then comes the reality. The home means nothing but sacrifice. The lord only boards at the house. She is cook and seamstress. She is servant to a man's caprice. The lodge to him is much more important than the home. When the children come, they sense the condition, and mother is to them a slave to wait upon them. They never think she needs a change, she needs petting. It is a matter of course that she is in the world to remove responsibility from them. It is quite provoking to see grown-up children in a home never realizing that the sacrifice of mother in her youth for them demands that when the years have piled up they should remove some of the burden and give joy to her declining years. God bless the Sister Sues, and God pity those who have such slight appreciation of their divine sacrifice and self-suppression. We are very generous with flowers for their coffins, but a little common humanity and appreciation while they are living would be a much better recognition of their marvelous self-denial.—Protestant Methodist.

Give Them the Flowers Now.

Closed eyes can't see the white roses;
Cold hands can't hold them, you know;
Breath that is still cannot gather
The odors that sweet from them blow.
Death, with a peace beyond dreaming,
Its children of earth doth endow;
Life is the time we can help them,
So give them the flowers now!

Here are the struggles and striving,
Here are the cares and the tears;
Now is the time to be smoothing -
The frowns and the furrows and fears.
What to closed eyes are kind sayings?
What to hushed heart is deep vow?
Naught can avail after parting,
So give them the flowers now!

Just a kind word or a greeting,
Just a warm grasp or a smile—
These are the flowers that will lighten
The burdens for many a mile.
After the journey is over,
What is the use of them? How Can they carry them who must be carried?
O, give them the flowers now!

Blooms from the happy heart's garden,
Plucked in the spirit of love;
Blooms that are earthly reflections
Of flowers that blossom above.
Words cannot tell what a measure
Of blessing such gifts will allow
To dwell in the lives of many,
So give them the flowers now!

"What Manner of Man Is This?"

BY H. C. FLEMING.

In Matt. 8: 23-27 we have an account of Jesus rebuking the winds and the sea; and his disciples "marveled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!" They were astonished at the result of his command, because they had never seen in nature any such obedience to the word of man; therefore their exclamation, "What manner of man is this!" The great calm that followed proved to them that Jesus was more than a man. Such testimony should quench the doubting and quibbling of any one. There can be no dodging of the issue; nothing in the natural laws can explain it.

Again, in Matt. 11: 3-5 we have Jesus' answer to those sent to him by John, that "the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up." All men know that such works as the above are beyond the power of man.

The feeding of the five thousand men, besides women and children, from five loaves and two fishes (Matt. 14: 16-21), also the feeding of four thousand men, besides women and children, from seven loaves and a few little fishes (Matt. 15: 32-38), are both works beyond man's power.

The above alone should be sufficient to convince any one of the Messiahship of Jesus; and yet there are many more signs recorded that people may believe, and that believing they may have life through his name. (John 20: 30, 31.)

When I view the sun by day and the moon and stars by night, I think of Ps. 19: 1-3: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge. There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard." Paul, in his defense before Agrippa, said: "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" (Acts 26: 8.) And why should we think anything incredible to the same power that created the heavens and the earth and all things therein? Can God not overrule the natural laws which he has created for the benefit of man in order to convince him that there is another life for him after this life, either one of happiness or one of eternal misery and woe?

As "one day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (2 Pet. 3: 8), is it unreasonable that he should manifest his power to man in any manner he might choose, even to performing such works as are attributed to the Lord Jesus, in the twinkling of an eye?

When two of the disciples who had been, after the crucifixion of Jesus, to the village of Emmaus, were talking about his death as they communed and reasoned together, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them, but they knew him not. Jesus said unto them, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken!" and called to their minds what had been spoken by them concerning himself. Since all these things have been made plain to the world, may not the same language be applied to all those who still refuse to believe them? (See Luke 24: 13-29.)

Has the Kingdom of God Been Established on Earth by Jesus Christ, or Will It Be in the Future?

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE BY T. J. MARRS.

As Brother Jones is not willing to let the readers decide who is "quibbling," dodging, perverting, blaspheming, etc., I will offer God's testimony, which Brother Jones himself introduced, to show you that you can put no trust in the testimony of a man up a tree.

Dan. 7: 10: "A fiery stream issued and came forth before him: thousands of thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the judgment was set, and the books were opened." (11) "The beast was destroyed and given to be burned with fire." (13) "And I saw in the night-visions, and one like the son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and (14) there was given unto him a kingdom, everlasting," etc. By following a sequence is given, showing this beast ruled over the saints, etc. (26) "But the judgment shall be set, and they shall take away the dominion from the beast [kingdom] and give it to the saints," etc.; and this kingdom is not in heaven, but "under the whole heaven." Showing in two different verses that this kingdom comes after the "judgment."

In Rev. 13: 12, the angel, speaking of the same "beast" kingdom, says: "The ten horns are ten kings that have received no kingdom as yet." (But Brother Jones would have us think all had occurred on Pentecost.)

In the sequence of the "image" (Dan. 2) and also of the four "beasts," God shows this God kingdom will end all other earthly kingdoms. I know of no law that compels a man to believe God's testimony; but every prophecy about these four kingdoms has come to pass down to—"It" (the fourth) is a "divided kingdom," and they are "mingled with the seed of men." (Dan. 2: 41-43.)

For more than three hundred years the sovereigns of Europe have been marrying into other royal families. At the beginning of the late war more than three-fourths of the kings and queens of Europe were grandchildren of Victoria; besides, they were mingled with many more sovereign families; but in the war they bitterly fought each other, showing God's word holds true: "They shall not cohere one to another." (Dan. 2: 43.)

Just so truly as the above has come true, just so truly will the following come true: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall break and consume all these kingdoms" and fill all the earth. Something struck these kingdoms in 1914, and "struck" pretty hard, and God, or something, is taking away its dominion. Since the war, England has lost the dominion of Ireland and Egypt, and India and South Africa are both in rebellion.

God's word again holds true. "He shall take away the dominion of (this divided kingdom), to consume, and to destroy unto the end." "And the kingdom and the dominion under the whole heaven shall be given [not "was given" on Pentecost] to the saints of the Most High." (Can you believe it, Brother Jones?)

By referring to my first numbered affirmative, the readers will see several clear-cut arguments that have not been met, nor ever will be answered; while every quotation Brother Jones uses, except Col. 1: 13, he must give the text some loony "slant," that none but his brethren will admit, and in his last reply is still introducing affirmative arguments. There are so many scriptures used (or misused) by him that I will not consume space to refer to them, as the readers can do that, and see that there is "nothing in them." May the Lord preserve you unto kingdom come.

REPLY BY H. W. JONES.

Yes, I'm "still introducing affirmative arguments," disproving Adventism! I've squarely "met" and exposed every argument (?), perversion, quibble, Marrs made; but he hasn't noticed half my scriptural arguments. No "loony slant" given any my proof texts; but adage says: "To those drunk, everybody looks drunk." So, maybe common-sense, scriptural arguments look "loony" to one holding "loony-slant" theories. Marrs' saying "nothing in them" (scriptures Jones used) shows his "slant" from truth!

Figurative prophecy more susceptible of twisting into speculative theories; hence Marrs' reliance. Dan. 7: 10-26 doesn't show "kingdom comes after great judgment." "The judgment" (verses 10, 26) to be upon "fourth beast" and "little boasting horn." That's not final judgment against "all." Marrs "adds unto" verse 26 to make it suit his fancy. "Shall take away his (boasting horn's) dominion"—not "dominion of divided kingdom." See? "The beast destroyed," etc. (verse 11), is boasting "horn"—"rest of beasts" . . . "their lives prolonged" (verse 12). But Marrs skipped verse 12; it ruins his theory by showing "beasts" (kingdoms) after "judgment," when Marrs himself said: "This God kingdom ends all other earthly kingdoms." Marrs badly tangled! Verses 13, 14 says: "Kingdom given Christ when he came to God"—not to earth (Marrs' twist). Palpable misrepresentation there! Note: "Fourth beast" (Roman kingdom) alive when "saints receive kingdom." (Verses 15-27.) Roman kingdom extinguished centuries ago. Therefore, God's kingdom established "in days Roman kings," and existing while "they consume and destroy" boasting horn "unto end." (Verses 25, 26). "Greatness of kingdoms given saints" (verse 27)—not kingdoms themselves. See? Yes, "the kingdom, etc., shall be given saints." (Verse 27.) Doesn't Marrs know Daniel prophesied B.C. 550? He applies prophecy as if written to-day, to prop false theory—shameful garbbling!

Marrs confusedly cited "Rev. 13: 12," but quoted Rev. 17: 12, then misrepresented "Brother Jones," who never said, "all had occurred Pentecost." Certainly, "the ten kings received no kingdom yet" (when John wrote Revelation, A.D. 96!) Does Marrs think "yet" means now, 1922? Preposterous!

"Kindred sovereigns intermarrying, late war, Ireland, Egypt, India rebelling"—therefore kingdom coming (15 ch., Marrs' imagination). "They" (in Roman kingdom) "not cohere" (Dan. 2: 43), instead Victoria's grandchildren! Marrs thinks England "divided Roman kingdom," eh?

John, Jesus, apostles, said (A.D. 30-33) "kingdom at hand, nigh;" but Marrs (eighteen hundred and ninety years after) says kingdom yet future. Far-fetched (stretched) theory! Luke 17: 20, 21: How was God's kingdom (government) within (among) people eighteen hundred and ninety years ago and in future to-day? "The church," God's assembly called out of world spiritually, is necessarily in the kingdom, rule, government, of God and Christ. Hence, kingdom as surely established as church exists. "Every spiritual blessing in Christ." (Eph. 1: 3.) "In Christ" means in his spiritual body, "the church" (Col. 1: 24), "God's fullness" (Eph. 1: 22, 23). The church is, of course, in Christ's divine government, kingdom. Then why another kingdom (government) on earth? Answer, Marrs!

Christ is King (1 Tim. 6: 15); "baptized into Christ" (Rom. 6); therefore baptized into Christ's kingship, government, kingdom!

Sure, "in days those (Romans) kings" God established his kingdom. (1) Those born of water and Spirit (doing God's will) enter into his kingdom. (John 3: 5; Matt. 7: 21.) (2) Millions thus born since Pentecost. (Acts 2.) (3) Therefore, kingdom established then.

Kingdom and second advent don't come together. (1) Christ said (A.D. 30-33) kingdom at hand. (Mark 1: 14, 15.) (2) Twenty-five years afterwards Paul declared second coming not at hand. (2 Thess. 2.) (3) Therefore, kingdom doesn't come second advent. (2 Pet. 3: 10.) No escape here!

Eighteen parables: Sower, tares, mustard seed, leaven, treasure, pearl, net (Matt. 13); unmerciful servant (Matt. 18); vineyard (Matt. 20); two sons, householder (Matt. 21); king's son (Matt. 22); ten virgins, talents, sheep and goats (Matt. 25); seed's growth (Mark 4); unjust steward (Luke 16); pounds (Luke 19)—all show kingdom established, second coming "end." Yes, "Christ's coming. Then the end, when Christ (instead establishing kingdom) delivers up the kingdom (now existing) to God, abolishing all rule, authority, power," on this old earth. (1 Cor. 15: 21-28.) This completely disproves Adventism.

BY J. C. M'Q.

I request that each one who reads this will consider it as personal. We are encouraged that the Gospel Advocate made decided gains in receipts in the last month over the corresponding month of 1921. For this gain we are indebted largely to the active coöperation of our readers. For their assistance in calling attention to the merits of the paper, I will state some things which we have recently done.

1. We have reduced the price of the paper from $2.50 to $2 a year, in advance.

2. We have discarded the use of a light-weight, cheap paper and are printing the Gospel Advocate on a very high-grade paper.

3. We have already canceled our contract calling for the insertion of medical advertisements in the Gospel Advocate. We are under contract to run those appearing in the paper now until the completion of the order. No more patent-medicine advertisements will be taken after expiration of contract, which is subject to three months' notice. We expect to see that only first-class advertisements appear in the Gospel Advocate.

This course may incur considerable loss, and doubtless will, but we believe that every honest advertiser has a right to demand that his advertisement be not inserted by the side of a dishonest advertisement. On this subject, H. W. Jones says: "I'm so glad, Brother McQuiddy, that you are to discontinue medical advertisements in the Gospel Advocate soon. And that article you wrote on 'Advertisements' is superfine. Everybody ought to read and re-read it again and again. As regards the 'Medical Association,' patent medicines, physicians, etc., it is so true, exactly as I see it. Patent medicines have not killed half as many people as physicians, quacks, etc."

As so many decided improvements have been made, our workers can be much more effective in their work. Do the conservative, loyal brethren want a first-class religious journal? If so, let us pull together, let us practice the Golden Rule, and the desired result will be attained. When you have received the paper and have not paid for it, apply the Golden Rule. It is a well-known fact that publishing a religious paper is not a money-making business. A man should pay for his religious paper as cheerfully as he pays his grocery bill.

With the hearty coöperation of our friends and readers, we should easily increase the circulation of the Gospel Advocate over a hundredfold. Will you not be one to help us accomplish this?

At Home and Abroad

Thomas E. Milholland's new address is 412 South Fannin Street, Vernon, Texas.

O. C. Lambert preached to two good audiences at Belmont Avenue, this city, last Sunday.

Change of address: J. O. Barnes, from Lake City, Fla., to 402 N. E. Thirty-fourth Street, Miami, Fla.

W. S. Brown says: "I think the Gospel Advocate has done more for the cause of Christ than any religious paper published."

F. B. Srygley preached twice at Charlotte Avenue, this city, on Sunday. They always have large audiences and good singing.

From Leslie G. Thomas, Melvin, Mich., Route 1, May 29: "Yesterday was a great day for the brethren in Speaker. Good crowds at both services. One made the confession at the morning service and was baptized in the afternoon. Our meeting is to begin on June 11."

From Mrs. T. J. Durham, Flintville, Tenn.: "The Gospel Advocate is growing better every week. I hope the managers of this good paper will live long, that it may do the younger people as much good as it has done me. I enjoy the paper better every number I get."

From C. E. Holt, Florence Ala., May 31: "On the fourth Lord's day in this month J. T. Harris and I 'exchanged pulpits.' Brother Harris preached at Stony Point and I preached at New Hope. He baptized six and I baptized two. Three were added at Killen on the third Lord's day."

Owen E. Pryor has changed his address from Knoxville to Bethpage, Tenn. He says: "I certainly enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate. It is very interesting and helpful to me, next to the Bible. I hope it will circulate throughout the United States. It should be placed in each of our homes."

Mrs. Molly Rees, Madisonville, Ky., writes: "I have to use a large reading glass to read the Gospel Advocate, but I intend to read it as long as I can see at all. I have been reading the paper nearly thirty-five years. To read it is, to me, like going to preaching, and it means a great comfort to me."

From M. S. Mason, Springfield, Mo., June 2: "I closed a meeting at Mountain View, Mo., with eight additions and very much good done. I was at Turner and Ramsay Streets, this city, last Lord's day. I will be at Rogersville next Lord's day. I will begin at Hoyte, Mo., with James E. Laird on June 17."

From S. W. Colson, Ocala, Fla., June 1: "The little congregation here seems to be doing very well. We have our midweek prayer meeting on Wednesday night. Last night A. T. Hamiter met with us and made a splendid talk. He is to assist the brethren at Palatka in a series of meetings, beginning on Sunday, June 4."

From W. L. McClellan, Adel, Ga., May 29: "I would like to say to the brotherhood that Adel is in Cook County, and one of the best farming sections of South Georgia. Brethren contemplating a move would do well to investigate this country. I will gladly answer all correspondence, for I am anxious to establish a congregation here."

From C. H. Smithson, Pittsburg, Kan., May 30: "The meeting here is just fine, and I hope to do much good while here. I will be here several days yet, and feel sure that the meeting is the beginning of a fine work here. I want the Kansas preachers to get in touch with this work, as I am too far away. Write me at Hatfield, Ark., if interested."

From Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, May 29: "I filled my appointment at Estelline on the third Lord's day, and had one addition at the morning service. We are now in a good meeting with home forces. Brother Morrison is leading the song service, and is doing his part well. We are having good crowds, and the interest is fine. One restored to date, and others are expected to obey."

The following note was sent by J. B. Nelson, Dallas, Texas, May 30: "G. Mitchell Pullias, the minister for the Oak Cliff church of Christ in Dallas, was seized with an acute attack of appendicitis last Saturday and on yesterday was carried to the St. Paul Sanitarium and operated upon.

This is to inform his many friends and brethren that, while very sick, he will make it through if no complications set up."

George W. Farmer, Cleveland, Tenn., sends the following for publication: "A nice home and a good business in general merchandising at Niota, Tenn., can be bought. The owner's health has failed him. We are looking for a good man who is a member of the church and who will take an interest in working to build up the church there to buy this property. I shall be glad to answer any inquiries and give full information."

A. B. Gunter writes from Humboldt, Tenn., May 28: "We had a very pleasant service here to-day. I drove out to a schoolhouse this afternoon and preached to a fine, large crowd. All seemed to enjoy it. I would be glad to do more of this kind of work from house to house and from community to community. I suggest that every preacher try this, talk with the people, read to them, pray for them, and great good will be accomplished."

From J. L. Hines, Mount Juliet, Tenn.: "I am to meet J. E. Wooldridge (Methodist), of Russell Springs, Ky., at Stop, Ky., in a four-days' discussion, beginning on July 4. Propositions: 'The sinner is saved by Holy Spirit baptism.' 'The church to which I, J. L. Hines, belong is the church of Jesus Christ, and is apostolic in origin, doctrine, and practice.' All who desire to attend this discussion should address W. C. Ramsey, Stop, Ky., and he will give you directions as to how to reach Stop."

W. M. Oakley preached three times at Rothchild Avenue, this city, last Sunday, with one baptism. This is as it should be. The early church likely spent the entire day on Sunday in the worship of God. This is so much better than hurrying through the worship in order that the members may get out early and seek pleasure and entertainment in things that are at least doubtful. While teaching the word of God and worshipping him is not entertainment, all true Christians will be entertained and happy in the service of God.

From C. E. Plank, Minneapolis, Minn.: "It would please me very much if you would allow me to place this great mission field before the readers of the Gospel Advocate. This is undoubtedly the largest mission field in the United States. There are four States in a group without an established church. There are seven hundred thousand people in the 'Twin Cities,' and we are trying to establish the work of our Lord here. We have about twenty members, and most of them are consecrated workers with no hobbies that we know of. We would like to hear from any who know of members who live here and are not meeting with us." Brother Plank must be located in a destitute field, as he is the only subscriber the Gospel Advocate has in the State of Minnesota.

Alonzo Williams, of David Lipscomb College, writing of the conditions in Shelbyville, Ky., says: "A few days ago I visited in Central Kentucky some of the congregations with which Thomas D. Rose, of Louisville, and R. A. Craig, of Shelbyville, have been working. The church at both places is having to put up a strong fight in order to survive. The brethren at Shelbyville are very weak in finance and few in number. They have no house in which to meet, but are worshipping in the courthouse. Brother Craig is using every available means to build a house on a beautiful lot, located in the central part of town, which makes it convenient for all. The 'dissidents' are very strong, and are, indeed, a dangerous foe for them to fight. We have many churches that are more than self-supporting. It would do them good to send a liberal contribution to these struggling brethren. Why not take this to heart and act promptly, brethren?"

Mrs. W. G. Perkins, Vardaman, Miss., "after reading in the Gospel Advocate an article from C. E. Holt concerning the neglect of work for Christ in Mississippi," makes an appeal for help for Vardaman and the surrounding community. She says: "This county (Calhoun) is almost destitute of the gospel. There are only a few members of the church here, and we have not been financially able to build a house in which to worship. We meet each Lord's day in a schoolhouse and have Sunday school and take the Lord's Supper. We have many discouragements, but we remember that the promise is to the faithful. E. L. Whitaker has held three meetings for us in the last three years, which proved a great benefit to the church members, also the good seed was sown among the sectarians. We are so much in need of spiritual food now. Will some one come to our rescue? This is a great field. Work cannot be needed worse anywhere."

J. Leonard Jackson reports two good services at Lindsley Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day, with two additions—one restoration and one confession.

Jack Meyer will be available for work, both singing and preaching, from June 8 to the middle of September. Address him at David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn.

L. E. Carpenter, Abilene, Texas, writes, under date of June 3: "I have just closed a meeting at Junction, Texas, which resulted in six additions, though we were greatly hindered in many ways."

From Frank Baker, Berry, Ala., May 30: "I preached at Macedonia on Lord's day and night to large and attentive audiences. I promised them I would return some time during the year, if possible, for a meeting."

From H. M. Phillips, Chattanooga, Tenn., June 5: "The meeting continues with interest at Ridgedale, with a splendid prospect for a good work and a number of additions. One baptism at St. Elmo since last report."

From W. T. Hines, Box 23, Braman, Okla.: "I am looking for a congregation who is willing to support me while I evangelize that community. Who wants such a preacher? If interested, write me at once, so I can take the matter up with you."

From E. Gaston Collins, Algood, Tenn., June 2: "I have two weeks, beginning on July 9, in which I could sing in a meeting or hold one, or I could use the two weeks beginning on June 25. Either of these two-week periods, but not both of them; would prefer the former."

From G. B. Lambright, Adel, Ga., June 1: "G. B. Lambright held the meeting at Cross Roads, five miles from Adel, Ga., instead of T. S. Craig. My meeting near Cecil closed after fifteen days, with three added. Rain hindered. I go to Pinetta, Fla., on the first Lord's day in June for two weeks."

From J. O. Golphene, Elmdale, Mont., June 1: "I will be out of the missionary field for several days on account of the sickness of my only boy, who is now in the hospital for an operation. The expenses will be about two hundred dollars, and as I write this I am blessed with but forty cents of the amount."

F. B. Srygley will begin a meeting in Chicago next Sunday. The hall where the meeting will be held is upstairs, 5491 Blackstone Avenue, near the corner of Fifty-fifth and Blackstone. Let all who can attend the meeting. If any of the brethren have friends in Chicago, please notify F. B. Srygley, 6625 Ingleside, Chicago, Ill., care of S. A. Billingsley.

From J. J. Sessions, Jay, Fla., May 27: "W. D. Grider, of Dozier, Ala., preached at Jay from May 19 to May 25. No additions, but fine audiences. The good seed was sown, and it will bear fruit some day. Brother Grider made a good impression on the public mind. I think Brother Grider is as uncompromising as a gospel preacher as our aged brother, E. G. Sewell, ever was."

From William P. Walker: "Recently I stated in the Gospel Advocate that I had time in June and July for some meetings, but since my return to Tennessee all my time for the summer has been engaged. I could arrange for two revivals next fall. The Stewart County work is doing exceedingly well. I find that the churches in the county will do more when they are taught and asked to do more."

In a private letter to a friend in this city, T. B. Larimore writes: "We expect to start to Richmond, Washington City, and Gettysburg, Pa., May 30. I am to preach the entire month of July in Washington City; then a few days at the Old Stone Church, near the Gettysburg battle ground; then a month at Cookeville, Tenn.; then two weeks at Bellbuckle, Tenn.; and then at other places till about the first of November, when we expect to return to California."

W. F. Ledlow, of Austin, Texas, closed a fifteen-days' meeting under a large tent in Northeast Nashville last Sunday. The meeting was supported by the Foster Street Church. The attendance was fine and the interest good throughout the meeting, though perhaps the meeting was hindered by the rains. Brother Ledlow made a lecture while here to the students of David Lipscomb College, which was well received and highly complimented. The meeting resulted in something near twenty additions:

C. D. Crouch writes from Ashland City, Tenn., June 5: "We are now in our new home here, and are very favorably impressed with the way the good people of Ashland City have received us. We had two splendid services here yesterday, and I preached in the afternoon to a splendid audience at Marrowbone. I will visit them again on the afternoon of the first Sunday in July. I hope to visit all the congregations in Cheatham County as soon as possible. I have the fourth Sunday in June and the second Sunday in July open for engagement somewhere."

From E. P. Watson, Dickson, Tenn., June 4: "The work moves on nicely in this section. Four additions to the Dickson church during May. Three hundred and twenty-six on roll in Bible study. We are looking forward to our revival with great interest. N. B. Hardeman is to do the preaching. He needs no word of commendation to the brotherhood in this section. We extend to all a cordial invitation to be with us in this meeting from June 18 to June 29. Several churches in this section, together with the Twelfth Avenue Church, in Nashville, have just purchased a tent outfit, consisting of tent, seats, lights, and song books. We can seat three hundred and fifty people. The tent and equipment cost four hundred dollars."

From H. W. Wrye, Pikeville, Tenn.: "I taught a class in the Bible in the County High School the past year here at Pikeville. This was made possible by the recommendation of the Board of Education of Bledsoe County, led by its efficient superintendent, Prof. Samuel Hixson. This is the first time known to me in which such a thing has occurred. The editor of the county paper at Pikeville said of this work: 'One of the most interesting features of the graduating exercises at the Bledsoe County High School on last Thursday evening was the address of H. W. Wrye, minister of the church of Christ of this city, in delivering the Bible certificates to the large class of students who have excelled in the study of the Scriptures. This is the first time in the history of America that certificates signed by a County Board of Education have been awarded students for the study of God's word, and it is considered one of the greatest movements for good for the student body ever introduced in a public school in the world.'"

J. Clifford Murphy writes from Kosciusko, Miss., June 4: "Last week I was at Sturgis preaching for a few days. This week I will be here for a few days, and then to Aberdeen, and from there to Columbus. This truly is a mission field. Brother preacher, if you really want to do some mission work, you don't have to go to Japan or China; all you have to do is to come to Mississippi, where the field is wide open. I notice in the Gospel Advocate sometimes that brethren are wanting to do mission work. If you do, just come on; it is here for some one to do. Don't act the part of Jonah (1: 3) and go to Tarshish, the smooth boat route, but over the hills to Nineveh and do the things that are pleasing to the Lord. I want to say to some of the churches in Tennessee, I believe you are acting the part of Jonah. Why do I say this? Because you are not taking part in this work. Some one is going to say: 'Now, that Brother Murphy is going to begging.' Call it what you may, but old Brother Peter says to stir up your minds by way of remembrance, and I want to stir you up until your soul is filled with love for dying men and women, and then the manifold wisdom will be made known by the church. (Eph. 3: 10.) So please remember the men on the firing line; we need your help and prayers."

J. O. Barnes, a faithful worker in the Master's vineyard, writes: "On May 27 wife and I left our home in Lake City, Fla., for Miami, the 'Magic City' on the east coast of Florida, where we are seeking the invigorating effect of the salt breezes which play so greatly across the famous Biscayne Bay, in hope of bettering wife's physical condition, her health being very much impaired. We are in the home of our only daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Hamilton, who are active members of the church of Christ in Miami. On our way we stopped at Port Orange over Lord's day, and I preached once for the church there. They fellowshiped us in an encouraging way. We left on Monday and made a short visit to our friends and brethren at Mims. I spoke twice to the church there, and all seemed to enjoy it. We expect to remain in Miami several months, and while here I shall do mission work in the suburbs and destitute places in Miami. This work will be wholly missionary. I have no promise of financial support from either church or individual. But there is a great door open unto me here, and I must enter in and do all I can for these lost souls for whom Christ died. 'The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few.' If any of God's children whose ears are open to the cry of lost souls for the gospel of Christ want to have fellowship with me in this work of saving souls, their contributions for this purpose will be gladly accepted. Address me at 402 N. E. Thirty-fourth Street, Miami, Fla."

Obedience of Faith.

BY J. C. M'Q.

Obedience, to be acceptable to God, must not be the obedience of opinion, the obedience of feeling or of sensation, but the obedience that is prompted by faith. Where there is no testimony, there can be no faith. As sound precedes hearing, as light precedes seeing, as one cannot slake thirst without water, so no one can believe without evidence or testimony. "Many other signs therefore did Jesus in the presence of the disciples, which are not written in this book: but these are written, that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life in his name." (John 20: 30, 31.) The gospel—Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John—was written to produce faith in Christ. The gospel honestly read will lead to faith in Christ. If the skeptic wants faith, he should read the gospel as recorded by the four evangelists. The gospel furnishes the most convincing testimony that Jesus is the Christ. An unbiased reading of the gospel will carry conviction to the heart that Jesus is divine. "So belief cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ." (Rom. 10: 17.) Faith comes by hearing the preaching of the word of God. So when all authority in heaven and on earth had been given to Christ, he said: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) Mark records the commission: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) To please God, we must have faith in Christ as the Son of God. So, in order that men might believe, the apostles preached the gospel to every creature under heaven. Men are required to believe in Christ that they may have life through his name. The believing Samaritans were baptized: "But when they believed Philip preaching good tidings concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." (Acts 8: 12.)

There is much evidence requiring all who would obey God to believe in Christ with all the heart. All acts of obedience to God must be of faith. "But he that doubteth is condemned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith; and whatsoever is not of faith is sin." (Rom. 14: 23.) Again, it is declared by the Spirit: "And without faith it is impossible to be well-pleasing unto him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him." (Heb. 11: 6.) As we must believe the gospel or be condemned, and as we cannot believe without testimony, it behooves us to be guided by "it is written" in all acts of obedience to God. "For we walk by faith, not by sight." (2 Cor. 5: 7.) If we are led by our opinions and the commandments of men in our worship, we are not walking by faith; and whatsoever is not of faith is sin." To all who are thus led, the Spirit, through Isaiah, prophesied: "But in vain do they worship me, teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men." (Matt. 15: 9.)

To prevent our being led off after the commandments and opinions of men, the Holy Spirit admonishes us: "Hold the pattern of sound words which thou hast heard from me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." (2 Tim. 1: 13.) We are exhorted to hold fast not only sound words, but also the pattern of sound words. Again, Paul admonishes Timothy: "Take heed to thyself, and to thy teaching. Continue in these things; for in doing this thou shalt save both thyself and them that hear thee." (1 Tim. 4: 16.) He should be careful to teach nothing for which he did not have a "Thus saith the Lord." We should speak where the Bible speaks and be silent where it is silent. In harmony with this, we read: "If any man speaketh, speaking as it were oracles of God." (1 Pet. 4: 11.) The Holy Spirit stresses the fact that no one should teach his own speculative theories.

It is encouraging and really rejoices the heart to note the unity that exists among the people known simply as Christians on the fundamentals of salvation. Why this unity? Because in what is required to make a Christian all teach simply what is written and nothing more. They teach the conditions of salvation to the alien sinner just as these conditions are taught in the Bible. On the obedience of the alien sinner there are no divisions among them and they are perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment, because in what it takes to constitute one a member of the body of Christ they are all guided by the Bible. This accounts for the perfect unity.

But—alas!—so soon as people enter the kingdom of God, some depart from the principle of being guided by "it is written" in the worship. They build on the silence of the Bible and introduce things into the worship for which there is no command in the Bible. Because the New Testament does not say, "You shall not play an instrument in the worship," they are of the opinion that it is permissible to play the instrument in the worship. They force their opinion on the church by playing an instrument. Many who believe that we should have a "Thus saith the Lord" for acts of worship as well as for becoming a Christian decline to accept their opinion. They can sing in faith, but they cannot play in faith. "Speaking one to another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." (Eph. 5: 19.) We read also: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly; in all wisdom teaching and admonishing one another with psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts unto God." (Col. 3: 16.) Inspired men taught Christians to sing the praises of God, for they did not use instruments of music in the worship. If "sing" means to play with an instrument of music, then the apostles were willfully disobedient. Others seek to bind a method of teaching to the exclusion of other methods, an order of worship and a method of contributing upon the churches, when God has revealed neither. To bind a method or an order upon the churches when and where God has revealed none is rebellion against God and means the confusion and destruction of the churches. Men should not force their opinions and preferences upon the churches. Christians should never cease to be guided by the word of God in their worship; "for we walk by faith, and not by sight." Keep your opinions to yourselves and cease to disturb the churches with them.

Will the Storm Come?

BY F. R. S.

There appeared in the Literary Digest of May 13 the following prediction concerning the trouble that is likely to come to the Baptists and some other denominations over what is known as "fundamentalism," which consists largely in the false theories that have been agitated concerning the imminent coming of Christ and the establishment of his kingdom on the earth as a world power. The Literary Digest refers to this trouble as "the coming doctrinal storm," and says:

A tremendous hubbub in religious circles is threatened by the so-called "Fundamentalists," whose cardinal doctrines, we are told, are the inerrancy of the Bible and the second coming of Christ, and, according to some newspaper articles, a doctrinal storm is to be expected when the Fundamentalists and the more liberal of the Baptist body come together in the convention of that denomination in Indianapolis in June. Steps to forestall possible schism were taken recently by an informal conference in New York of Baptist liberals and "Fundamentalists," who agreed that it "is within the right of all Baptists to give expression to their own views," and urged "upon all of our brethren that we avoid the censorious spirit."

The tocsin of alarm was first sounded by the Christian Register (Unitarian), whose editor, Dr. Albert C. Dieffenbach, confessing himself terrified by the "religious Ku-Klux," warns us against the frenzy he believes will seize on the world should the doctrine become widely accepted. The central dogma of the movement, says the Unitarian editor, is the second coming of Christ. "Believe that or die. It is a long, involved system of doctrine on the subject that they have fabricated out of a benighted literalism, and its awfulness, its bloody sweep over the world, surpasses the most gruesome pictures in the book of Revelation. The other three 'fundamentals' are the supernatural birth of Christ, the vicarious atonement of Christ, and the bodily resurrection of Christ." To support his fear that the "second coming" as preached by the Fundamentalists will stir the world into religious fanaticism, Dr. Dieffenbach quotes from press reports a declaration by Dr. I. M. Haldeman, a prominent New York Baptist minister and a reputed leader of the Fundamentalists:

"Christ is coming with the eye of one who is aroused and indignant, in whose being beats the pulse of a hot anger. . . . He comes forth as one who no longer seeks either friendship or love. . . . His garments are dipped in blood, the blood of others. He descends that he may shed the blood of men. . . . He will enunciate his claim by terror and might. He will write it in the blood of his foes. He comes like the treader of the wine press, and the grapes are the bodies of men. He will tread and trample in his fury till the blood of men shall fill the earth. . . . He will tread and trample them beneath his accusing feet till their upspurting blood shall make them crimson. He comes to his glory, not as the Savior meek and lowly, not through the suffrage of willing hearts and the plaudits of a welcoming world, but as a king, an autocrat, a despot, through the gushing blood of a trampled world. And those who follow this emergent, wrathful King of Heaven . . . are represented as armies. They come forth as a body of fighters. They come to assist the Warrior to make war on the earth. In this way the kingdom is to come, not by the preaching of the gospel and the all-persuasive power of the Spirit of God."

Every thoughtful reader of the foregoing quotation will recognize this as the same wild theories advocated by some of our would-be interpreters of prophecy in the city of Louisville, Ky., and through a paper published in the same city. While these brethren have not, so far as I know, expressed themselves in such strong language as is here used by Dr. Haldeman, they have circulated his tract, in which there are about as intemperate things said as the above quotation contains. A friend has just handed me one of these Haldeman tracts, which was given him by a member of the church at Portland Avenue, Louisville, where the leader of these interpreters of prophecy lives and preaches. This gives the indorsement of these false interpreters to these intemperate remarks of Dr. Haldeman; and the leader has said that when Christ comes again he will rule with a rod of iron, and one of them made the statement that Christ would stain his garments in the blood of his enemies.

The Doctor says: "He descends that he may shed the blood of men." Certainly this represents the meek and lowly Christ as extremely bloodthirsty. These brethren are literalists—that is, they say that even the book of Revelation should be interpreted literally. I suppose, then, we are to take the Doctor literally when he says: "He will tread and trample in his fury till the blood of men shall fill the earth." I suppose he means till every atom of the earth is soaked in human gore. This will take a lot of blood-letting, and their upspurting blood shall make them crimson. The Doctor refers to those who follow this "wrathful King." I suppose he means Christians, but he says they are "represented as armies." Some of us have been trying to train ourselves away from bloody warfare. We have been trying to learn the lesson of nonresistance. "But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil." But all training of this character will be of no benefit if we have to go into this bloody work as here described. Some of us have been making the study of the gospel our chief work, but this will not fit us for this bloody work, for the Doctor says the kingdom is not to come through "the preaching of the gospel and the all-persuasive power of the Spirit of God."

No wonder the Baptists are looking for a "doctrinal storm," with the kind of thunder and lightning the great Doctor Haldeman is getting off beforehand. We might have been like the Baptists and others awaiting such a storm if the Gospel Advocate or some of its editors and contributors had not called the hand of these speculators. The brethren who made this bold stand against these speculators and interpreters of prophecy relieved us of the storm. These brave men have been criticized and abused by some, when they should have had their help and praise. Some good men could see nothing dangerous in the wild theories of these speculators and interpreters of prophecy. Others claimed it was only jealousy in those who saw the danger and pointed it out. I shall never forget to take off my hat to the Gospel Advocate and the men who were willing to take the criticism in order to stand by the truth. This same Dr. I. M. Haldeman, in the tract herein referred to, says: "To the apostolic church this coming was imminent. The church of the first century expected it in their day; they expected Christ to come at any moment, overthrow all evil, and bring in his own kingdom." If the Doctor includes the apostles and writers of the New Testament in what he calls the apostolic church, then I am prepared to say the apostles and writers of the New Testament were not infallible, but were mistaken, if Dr. Haldeman's position is true, for Christ did not come in their day. While there may have been some uninspired men in that day who had interpreted some of the statements that Christ and the apostles made with reference to the destruction of Jerusalem to refer to the final coming of Christ, certainly it is unreasonable to think that the inspired men of the apostolic church missed their predictions as far as they have if this is what they meant. But the apostle Paul corrects this false interpretation when he says: "Now we beseech you, brethren, touching the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto him; to the end that ye be not quickly shaken from your mind, nor yet be troubled, either by spirit, or by word, or by epistle as from us, as that the day of the Lord is just at hand; let no man beguile you in any wise; for it will not be, except the falling away come first, and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition." (2 Thess. 2: 1-3.) This erroneous idea that Dr. Haldeman and these brethren of ours have adopted did not come from the spirit or the words or writing of the apostles; for here the apostle says we are not to be troubled, "either by spirit, or by word, or by epistle." If any spirit taught this doctrine of the immediate coming of the Lord in the apostles' day, it was a false spirit; and if by word, it was an untrue word; and if by an epistle, it was not from the apostles. Notwithstanding this very plain denial by Paul, these brethren are still claiming that this doctrine of the imminency of the coming of Christ was taught by the apostolic church. It was false when taught then, and it is foolish when taught now.

Religious Revivals.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The Psalmist said: "Wilt thou not revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee?" (Ps. 85: 6.) The word "revive" is a compound—re, again, and vivere, to live; hence, meaning to live again, or the restoration of that which once existed. The word "revival" is applied to business as well as to religion, and it is common to hear business men speaking of the revival of business. In fact, there is much more talk of the revival of business than of religion. Observation and experience both teach us that the standard of religious life is not uniform, that Christians are not always up to their full measure; but this is not as it should be. The law of spiritual life is one of development, constant growth, and an endless unfoldment.

THE NEED OF RELIGIOUS REVIVALS.

This is no new thing, for God's people have in all ages of the world stood in need of spiritual awakening. Religious reformations were born of this need, and at times the world has need of an Elijah to call the people to repentance; an Isaiah to "cry aloud" and "show the people their transgressions" (Isa. 58: 1); an Amos to arouse the sleeping souls (Amos 6: 1); a Paul to say, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light" (Eph. 5: 14); or a John to write: "So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth" (Rev. 3: 16).

This need of a spiritual renewal grows out of the inconsistency of humanity. Our religious lives are too much like the ocean with its ebbs and flows. We have our high tide of religious fervor, which is all too quickly followed by a low tide of spiritual apathy. "Ye were running well; who did hinder you that ye should not obey the truth?" (Gal. 5: 7.) "Let us not be weary in well-doing." (Gal. 6: 9.) Now, let it be distinctly understood that this fluctuation in religious life is not best. It is not at all conducive to the development of that stalwart Christianity that molds the highest type of manhood and womanhood and which stands foursquare to every wind that blows.

THE CAUSES OF SPIRITUAL DECLINE.

In seeking these causes, they will be found to vary, for what may prove a stumblingblock to one may be a stepping-stone to another. Death in a family, loss of property, and ill health are things in the dispensation of divine providence that affect people differently. It all depends on the view one takes of such things as to the effect they will have on him or her. If, through a misconception of God's goodness and the changing world in which we live, one is led to the conclusion that such seeming misfortunes are unjust and come as an arbitrary punishment, then that soul has come upon a stumblingblock; but if such things are received as our common heritage and are no evidence of God's displeasure with his children, the effect will be otherwise. But perhaps the greatest hindrances to a steady growth in grace may be found in the following:

1. A partial conversion. The change was too superficial and not radical enough to give to the soul that degree of poise and strength so essential to permanent growth.

2. Sometimes a wave of prosperity uproots and lays prostrate Christian virtues like the storm levels the giant oak. "And the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful." (Matt. 13: 22.) Very few Christians can maintain a close standing with God amid worldly prosperity, and there are many exhortations against the danger of riches in the Bible.

3. Worldly pleasures are a deadly foe to spiritual life. "And are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection." (Luke 8: 14.) To minister to the flesh means to starve the soul, for the soul must have spiritual food. (1 Pet. 2: 1, 2.)

4. A cold indifference sometimes steals upon the soul like a thief in the night, and chills the soul to death. It is harder to arouse this class of church members and bring them back to their "first love" than it is to enlist a man of the world. It is like trying to awake one from a literal tomb, because the latter end with such has become worse than the former. (1 Pet. 2: 20.)

5. Malice plays its part in driving the souls of many from God. Hatred and envy become deeply rooted in the heart, and it seems impossible to cure the evil.

THE BENEFITS OF SUCH REVIVALS.

These will be in proportion to our fitness for reception.

1. Our memories are refreshed with our duties and obligations in the different relations of life. (2 Pet. 1: 13.)

2. Such seasons of revivalistic work will cause serious reflections and lead Christians to examine themselves and see if they be in the faith. (2 Cor. 13: 5.)

3. It is, if properly utilized, a great time for the conversion and salvation of sinners. But the most lamentable situation confronts nearly every evangelist called to hold a meeting—viz., unpreparedness upon the part of the church. The church makes no effort to arouse an interest in the coming meeting before the evangelist gets on the ground, but expects the preacher to warm up and put life into the church. As a rule, about all the time the preacher has for a meeting is consumed in warming up the church. It ought not so to be.

A Memorial Service.

BY F. B. S.

On May 31, at 2:30 P.M., while the funeral of Brother J. A. Harding was being conducted at Bowling Green, Ky., there was a memorial service held at David Lipscomb College. The principal speech was made by Brother Pittman, who had known Brother Harding longer than any of the other teachers. Brother Pittman spoke of Brother Harding as a man, as an evangelist, as a teacher, and as a debater. Short talks were made by Dr. Ward and the writer, each speaker emphasizing some strong point in the life of this good man.

J. A. Harding had many admirable qualities. In the days of his strength he was a fine specimen of physical manhood with a very pleasing personality. He was exceedingly polite, and always showed good manners with a very obliging disposition. He would always be noticed among strangers as a man who had been properly trained in childhood and youth to be a Christian gentleman. As an evangelist, he was full of enthusiasm, with a knowledge of the Bible as a whole, and very sympathetic in his appeals to sinners; and these qualities, added to his zeal and his strong faith in God and his word, made him one of the great evangelists of his day. He was full of energy and never knew when he had worked enough. Many brethren thought that he carried his theory of special providence to an extreme, but there was nothing in his last days that proved his theory wrong. Though he had saved nothing and had nothing of this world's goods in his own right and title, still "all these things" were added unto him. He had as good a home at Dr. Payne's (his son-in-law) as there is in the country. While his theory may not be true, nothing happened to him that proved it false, for he had every good until God called him up higher.

It is sad to see the old guard so swiftly passing away. One by one they are falling, and it is hoped that others will take their places and stand as bravely for the truth as they did.

J. A. Harding did much for the truth in the city of Nashville. Faith, conviction, and courage, made him the man that he was. We should love and cherish his memory for the work that he did for us. May the Lord comfort Sister Harding and the children in their bereavement, and keep them safe for a reunion in that heavenly home that he so often wished to enter. Brother Harding never lost his mind; he only lost the ability to work it. His mind will all be straightened out in the glory world.

Some Correspondence.

Benton, Ky., May 12, 1922.—Mr. A. G. Freed, Henderson, Tenn.—Dear Brother Freed: I preach at Benton once a month—first Sundays—and I learned you were coming back soon to preach on instrumental music. Believing, as I do, that the church of Christ has a right to use music in connection with its worship, I feel it my duty to defend that right for the church at Benton. So far as I know, the members of that church are at peace, and satisfied on that subject; but if you think it best to come back and start the agitation of the subject again, I would be glad for you to come on a first Sunday—any first Sunday that would suit your convenience—and permit me to divide the time with you, so the brethren can hear both sides. We could take four hours—two each—in thirty-minute talks. I do not mean this as a challenge or desire for controversy, but in the interest of the cause of Christ. If the subject is a cause of division, it is worthy the attention of all who love the cause. If you come, I would be glad to hear you. I have been in the ministry more than forty years, and want to be right. If this should meet your approval, we would, of course, go into the discussion in the spirit of Christ and as brethren in Christ.

Hoping to hear from you soon, I am,

Your brother in Christ,

J. M. PACE.

Henderson, Tenn., May 13, 1922.—Mr. J. M. Pace, Benton, Ky.—My Dear Brother: Yours of the 12th inst., now mine. I have promised to be at Benton the third Sunday in this month. It will be a pleasure to meet you there in a brotherly discussion of the subject in question, you affirming that the Bible authorizes the use of instrumental music in the worship in the church of Christ. Faithfully,

A. G. FREED.

Benton, Ky., May 20, 1922.—Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.—It is stated in your issue of the 18th inst. that there will be a debate between J. M. Pace and A. G. Freed, at Benton, Ky., on May 21. The statement is absolutely false. Brother Freed having announced he would preach at Benton on the subject of instrumental music, I wrote asking him to come on a first Sunday—my preaching day there—and permit me to divide time with him, that the people might hear both sides of the question. He replied that he would be there on the third Sunday, and would be pleased to have a brotherly discussion with me on the proposition stated by your misinformant. I could not be there on the third Sunday, and supposed the matter was ended, and did not reply to his letter. I am sure you have been misinformed. Please publish this that I may have justice. Believing I have a right to know who sent this statement, I send stamped envelope, asking you to give me the name.

Your brother in Christ,

J. M. PACE.

A statement of a few facts will give light on this correspondence. Not long since Brother Pace preached on the subject of instrumental music in the worship to his people at Benton, Ky., claiming that the Bible authorized it. Many of the members asked me to come and preach on the same subject, including other points of difference. They expressed a desire to hear both sides. I canceled a previous engagement to meet this expressed desire and sent the appointment for the third Lord's day in May. After the announcement of my coming, I received the letter above from J. M. Pace. Since he considered it his "duty to defend that right," and it being his home, I concluded, erroneously I see now, that he would make arrangements to be there. But he did not. I am sure he could have been there had he worked at it.

It is hard to believe that a preacher will make statements that Mr. Pace has in this letter. He says: "So far as I know, the members of that church are at peace and satisfied on that subject." The truth is that many of the members were not "at peace" nor "satisfied on that subject," neither had been for some time; and the worst of all is, Mr. Pace knew it. It is startling to hear a minister of "more than forty years" use the sentence, "If the subject is a cause of division." Mr. Pace knows too well that instrumental music in the worship has caused division and heartaches in the church of Christ from its introduction. But he seems anxious that "the brethren can hear both sides." "The brethren" had heard his "side." But he did not want any one "to start the agitation" of the side of truth. Mr. Pace "agitated the subject" recently. Some of his kind had "agitated the subject" before him—enough that the instruments are "agitated" in the worship at Benton, Ky. Suppose no one had ever "agitated the subject" and the members would not "agitate" the horn and the fiddle, assisted by the Methodists, as they do at Benton, where Mr. Pace preaches? The thing could not "agitate" itself.

Now, Mr. Pace, if you want both sides "agitated" at once before "the brethren" and all interested, it shall be my pleasure to make the time mutual.

A. G. FREED.

SERMON OUTLINES

A Book of One Hundred and Fifty New Sermon Outlines

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has one hundred and fifty sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

Boy Wanted.

Wanted—a boy that is manly,
A boy that is kind and polite,
A boy you can always depend on
To do what he knows is right;

A boy that is truthful and honest
And faithful and willing to work;
But we have not a place that we care to disgrace
With a boy that is ready to shirk.

Wanted—a boy you can tie to,
A boy that is trusty and true,
A boy that is good to old people
And kind to the little ones, too;

A boy that is nice to the home folk
And pleasant to sister and brother,
A boy who will try when things go awry
To be helpful to father and mother.

These are the boys we depend on—
Our hope for the future, and then Grave problems of State and the world's work await Such boys when they grow to be men.

The Teaching Force.

Most people look upon the teaching force of our land as embracing only those who instruct pupils and students in schools and colleges. Of course, in a way the minister of the gospel is looked upon as a teacher or instructor. But aside from that, few persons ever stop to estimate the vast army of public instructors available to men, women, and children in our land. We call it free instruction, our free-school system; but, as a matter of fact, the taxpayers have to provide money for buildings, equipment, and teachers, and so in a way all instruction is free though indirectly paid for. Any young person choosing a life vocation should be careful to select, if possible, a task that carries with it a direct benefit to the public in the way of information and help.

Take, for example, the great and wonderful work among trees that has come to notice during the past few years. Any young man who takes up that work can be sure he is not only making his living by an honorable, profitable, helpful task, but he is helping instruct an unthinking public as to the value of trees. He is a part of the great teaching force of our land; and though he may never lecture to a band of students or hear classes recite, he is, nevertheless, a part of our free-school system. The same may be said of the young man who takes up farm-bureau work in any county. Through lectures, pamphlets, and demonstrations he teaches the farmers how to improve the soil, to increase the yield of their fields, to raise the standard of live stock, and to get the most out of farming possible, rather than eke out a bare existence. What a world of possibilities open before the eyes of intelligent farmers as they assimilate the knowledge the United States government and farm organizations freely give out!

In the physical life agencies are at work to teach people how to get well and keep well. Many firms reject the persons unable to pass rigid tests, because it is a waste of time and money to train workers not likely to repay the training by years of good service. The young woman who aspires to be a trained nurse must not only have a love for the work and the intelligence that warrants accepting her for a course of study, but she must have health and endurance. Young men and young women who have disregarded parental pleas to be careful of their health have had the knowledge forced upon them that only the physically fit get the best places the world has to offer workers. Even the hundreds of patent-medicine almanacs and pamphlets advertising remedies for every disease under the sun urge people to use all the knowledge at their command to avoid illness. Everything possible is done by physicians and surgeons to teach the masses how to avoid hospitals and sanitariums as well as to cure those who come to them. Every new discovery in medical science is proclaimed broadcast, without thought of profit to the discoverer, for the benefit of all mankind. There never was a time when so much knowledge was available in the physical realm as at the present time, and the same may be said of the world of books and finance and arts.

But, sad to relate, there are other teaching forces in the world that are at work tearing down health and fortune and success and even the spiritual existence. Just as there are hundreds of thousands of eager, enthusiastic, broad-minded men and women at work on constructive teaching, so are there multitudes of persons engaged in putting wrong ideas into the minds of young and old. "A cigarette in every mouth" is the educational aim of certain firms engaged in turning out that which will destroy health and usefulness. There are subtle forces at work teaching the drug habit even to children in the grades at school. There are men engaged in propagating the false and fatal idea that one may get rich without work by simply preying on the earnings of others, and that under the guise of legitimate business. There are writers and publishers of books that are guilty before God of teaching those doctrines that will not only undermine our free government, but destroy the chances of individuals for happiness in this world and the world to come. There are teaching organizations with the avowed aim of destroying the constitution of the most beneficent nation the sun ever shone upon. There are superficial and dangerous persons proclaiming the doctrine that idleness is not only honorable, but that it is impossible to be a gentleman or a lady and do certain honorable tasks. There are other forces at work in financial and political circles that teach by deed, if not by word, that the poor have no rights that the rich and powerful are bound to respect.

So it makes a vast difference what calling or profession or task the young person enters into. A certain writer, calling attention to the false doctrine that all work is honorable and equal so long as it is productive, compared the production of bread or meat with the production of dog collars. Now, there is nothing specially wrong with manufacturing dog collars, but surely making bread or producing meat for a hungry world is far superior to turning out things the world could get along without. It is true that the elaborate dog collar may represent more skill than a loaf of bread, but the one ministers to a real need and the other not. And even worse than making dog collars is the making of things that destroy mind, soul, and body. So it is with the teaching force. Consciously or unconsciously many people are teaching, and by the grace of God they must teach things that are pure and lovely and of good report, if they expect to have their work stand in that day when the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If worthy, it shall win eternal reward; but if unworthy, it will drag down not only the teacher, but those who have followed the false ideas, and the blood of the lost shall be upon the head of the one who willfully taught what was wrong and destructive. May every young person think soberly, righteously, and carefully in taking up a life calling, and may it be one that will bring happiness and profit to him all his days and help others to make the right choice in the fear of God!—Hilda Richmond, in Christian Advocate.

Shall We Criticize.

BY C. R. N.

Some weeks since I was in Nashville, Tenn., and heard a brother declare that the religious papers among us were far from his ideal. He was lamenting the fact that there was to be found in them so much war between brethren. To conform to his plan, there would be no criticism offered; and if, indeed, there should appear a criticism, it should appear with no name signed to it; nor should any man be criticized.

It is lamentable that some people cannot distinguish between a criticism and a wrangle. Preachers are not infallible. Indeed, they are, it seems to me, so very humanly human that they need to be criticized. I have profited more by criticism—adverse criticism—than I have by compliments. I never think of one of my brethren who criticizes me as an enemy, but as a friend; and I think every friend I have knows that I would have him watchful for the cause of Christ, and that his regard for me should not deter him when I need to be criticized for my good or for the good of the cause of Christ.

I fear that we preachers are disposed to think of ourselves as a body rather separate from other church members.

The following from W. F. Ledlow, which appeared in the Firm Foundation under the heading, "Professional Ethics," and the comments by R. L. Whiteside, will be interesting. Let me commend the comments as timely.

In the business world men have come to recognize standards of conduct and have adopted rules that control their relations to one another. A merchant who criticizes, undermines, underbids, and in any way takes advantage of a fellow merchant, violates the merchants' code. Physicians who respect their profession do not comment with disfavor on another physician's work.

School-teachers are strongly advised never to discuss the demerits of another teacher and never to place their work on a competitive basis. Stand square for the profession. Every time a teacher lowers another teacher in the eyes of a school board, he does the profession harm.

There ought to be professional ethics among the preachers. They need help rather than criticism; the profession needs to be elevated, and not lowered; the work needs to have its confidence in preachers strengthened, and not weakened. If every preacher will speak well of all other preachers and criticize none, the cause of Christ will greatly improve.

Professional Preachers—Professional Ethics.

BY R. L. WHITESIDE.

It is painful to see a gospel preacher refer to preaching as a "profession," as Brother Ledlow recently did in these columns. In many respects professional preachers have been a curse to the world. Against the professional preacher, "the kingdom of the clergy," Alexander Campbell wrote some of his most effective essays. It is a strange thing to hear a gospel preacher refer to the "profession." However, of late we hear much of "entering the ministry," and now we have as a logical result "the preaching profession." Preachers are thus separated from plain Christians into a distinct profession. If this prevails, we will have the old denominational terms, "the clergy" and "the laity."

This profession now calls for a code of ethics—a special code for preachers, mind you. Well, the medical profession has a well-defined code of ethics. Some rules in this code seem rather strange to the laity; but a physician accepts these rules when he enters the profession. It is then a graceless thing for him to disregard them. The preacher profession must, of course, have its code. Every profession has, even baseball. Like other professions, it will take time for the preacher profession to develop a suitable code; but it will come in time, for Brother Ledlow has suggested the first rule. But this code, when developed, may, like other professional codes, have some rules that seem strange to a layman. Ethics, after all, may be defined as "a particular system of principles and rules concerning duty, whether true or false."

The first rule suggested for this new code of ethics for this new profession is that preachers should not criticize preachers. That would be good professional ethics. Then, if a layman undertakes to criticize the professional preacher, the professional preacher can serenely point out to him that, since he is not in the profession, he is not competent to criticize the profession. This would be a logical development, would it not? At least, as a layman, I would feel out of place to try to show a skilled surgeon how he could have improved on the work he did in a difficult operation. With preachers too ethical to criticize one another and too far above the laity to be criticized by them, couldn't we turn on the steam?

But I am still a plain Christian with no desire to encourage this professional-preacher business; and when the "profession" and the "laity" are clearly defined and a code of ethics fully developed for the "profession," I propose to remain with the "laity." The "profession" might need criticizing. And I will have good company; for the following quotation shows that Paul had adopted no such rule as that suggested by Brother Ledlow: "But when Cephas came to Antioch, I resisted him to the face, because he stood condemned. For before that certain came from James, he ate with the Gentiles: but when they came, he drew back and separated himself, fearing them that were of the circumcision." (Gal. 2: 11, 12.)

Training for Service. No. 3.

BY AN ELDER.

It is the first day of the week, and the hour previously appointed for meeting. A few have arrived, and the services could proceed but for the reason that others are slow in coming, and the admonition is, "Tarry one for another;" so they drop in from time to time until enough are present to start. As the crowd gathers, one may observe the number who are visiting, laughing and talking and having a general good time. The men talk about the weather, crop or business conditions, and swap jokes; while the women visit, along a different line, usually feasting on a sweet morsel of gossip that is just too good to keep any longer. By and by some one must "make a beginning;" so a hymn is announced, the number being repeated several times before all understand and get ready for the singing. But while the first song is being sung two dear old sisters who have not yet finished their visit are very busy talking, and as the singers are making plenty of noise, they talk out, and when a pause comes in the music you hear a shrill, piping voice telling just how it happened, etc. Did you ever see or hear anything like this? If you have not, you have missed an experience. As the singing continues some are watching the entrance to see who is coming in, while others sing, smile, and peekaboo at the cute tots and babies, wholly oblivious of the sentiment of the song he or she is singing in praise and honor of God and for his glory. Surely such actions are not commendable, but rather deplorable in the house of God, the assembly of the saints, who have met, presumably, to encourage each other and to worship and adore the one true God, who "so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life." In the assembly the saints should refresh their memory of the Savior's love as by faith they view him dying upon the cross, suffering—yea, suffering as they may never, in this life, fully understand and realize—for the sins of the world. Why should man, the highest production of God's creative power, who is the Father of his spirit, who has done and is doing so much for his comfort and happiness, appear so thoughtless, so indifferent? Brethren, think—yes, think; and do your thinking, at least a good portion of it, before you reach the Lord's house. It is not best that one wear a long face with "sanctimonious seeming," trying to impress upon others the thought that he is loaded with an oversupply of piety; at the same time, would it not be best, while in the assembly, to engage one's self whole-heartedly in the worship? "Rejoice in the Lord." May we all so walk, so talk, and so act, that those with whom we come in contact—with whom we associate—may know, may realize, that we have been with Jesus!

Lot.

BY E. W. M'MILLAN.

Lot was Abraham's nephew. Heir to his father Haran's estate, Lot left Ur of the Chaldees with Abram when God called the latter to follow him. Though a nephew of the great and good man, Abraham, Lot was a different type of man from his uncle. Lot was much concerned about temporal matters. So far as we know, Lot was never dishonest in his dealings; but whenever a choice was to be made between a more or less advantageous position, Lot usually chose the former. This fact is illustrated in his selection of the rich valley of the Jordan as a dwelling place. Disregardful of all duties of courtesy and respect, and unmindful of his debt of gratitude to Abraham for bringing him out of a heathen land into a place where he was under the guidance of Jehovah, Lot selected the rich Jordan valley and left the less desirable tract of land of Abraham. What Abraham got was good, but what Lot chose was better.

Yet we are not to regard Lot as a wicked man, nor even an irreligious man; for the Bible refers to him as a righteous man. He was rescued from destruction in the downfall of Sodom partly because he was a righteous man, and Peter speaks of him as vexing his righteous soul because of the wickedness in Sodom. (2 Pet. 2: 7, 8.) On the other hand, when he was rescued from Chedorlaomer, his captor, and, again, from the destruction of Sodom, Lot seemingly forgot the meaning of gratitude; he never stopped to give praise unto the Lord nor to erect an altar of worship to him. Lot seems to have been desirous of living right personally, but he was of that type of men who are willing to live in a wicked community and rear families under such environment in order to make sure of temporal provisions.

The consequence of such chance taking is seen in the succeeding history of Lot's family. Lot witnessed the marriage of a number of his daughters to men of Sodom; and when the warning came from God to leave the city, these married daughters refused to go and were destroyed with the others. These girls possibly were religious while they remained at home, and maybe would have been positively religious after marriage had their home environment not been so much against them. Lovers of our own age would do well to receive a lesson at this point. Lot's wife, also, had become so much attached to their possessions in Sodom that she must disobey the Lord's voice and look back, thus effecting her own death. After one trusts in the Lord, there is no place for turning back. All bridges are to be burned behind us, and, with steady gaze upon the Lord's paths, we are to march forward and upward. The apostle Paul taught against returning to the weak and beggarly rudiments where there is bondage, and Jesus taught that no one who puts his hands to the plow and looks back is worthy of him.

But these are not the worst of Lot's troubles. When he and his two daughters had reached Zoar from Sodom, these girls made him drunk and developed the shame of illegal relations with their father. From the sons of these girls came the Ammonites and the Moabites, who were later hostile to their Hebrew relatives. To preserve the purity of his family, Abraham sent to his homeland for a wife for Isaac. The contrast between the method of preserving this godly family and the method employed in Lot's family is as striking as is the difference between Lot's grief and Abraham's happiness in his old age. It never pays to neglect the soul's interest for temporal advantages.

Some More Russellite Foolishness.

BY J. B. NELSON.

The Dallas (Texas) Journal recently carried the following news item:

In 1925 the world will come to an end and the kingdom under the Messiah of the Jew and of the Christian will begin, Judge J. F. Rutherford, president of the International Bible Students' Association, told two thousand persons at the Coliseum Sunday afternoon. Bible students predicted the World War in 1914, which was the beginning of the end of the world or of the kingdom of Satan, he declared. "Life is to take on immortality," he said, "for it will be of a character that man will wish to have forever. Earth shall abide forever, and Texas shall never cease to exist. But its desert places will become gardens. Gradually hair will return to the bald head and teeth to the toothless, beauty to the ugly and purity to the sinner."

If the above assertions were only true, there would be much elation for many of us bald-headed fellows, and the toothless could gum it with more reservation of mind, knowing that they will soon have their teeth; and the greatest elation of all, that C. R. N. (of Texas), J. D. T. (of Arkansas), H. N. M. and F. B. S. (of Tennessee) are all to get good-looking. According to Rutherford, our bodies will be immortalized and remain on this old earth, and that without a resurrection. Rutherford makes out the teachings of the apostle Paul in 1 Cor. 15 false and foolish. But I prefer Paul to the assertions of the ex-Federal prisoner and disloyal citizen to both the United States and God.

Texas is to get rid of her sinners, according to Mr. Rutherford. No more bootleggers, no more "hijackers," gamblers, fake oil stock sellers. Won't we have a great State?

These false prophets, Russellites, have been predicting the end of the world and the restoring of all things back to the pristine age for years. To them the end of the world does not mean the passing away of this mundane sphere, the heavens, and other things that the Bible teaches. In the Russellite rejuvenating time the cows will quit horning, the snakes will quit biting, the bee will cease to sting, and all sinners will quit sinning, and the old will be so rejuvenated they can jump up like a schoolboy and pop their heels together, and the old maids and old bachelors will be very pacific in their demeanor, and C. R. Nichol and I will never have stomach trouble any more. A. O. Colley and C. E. Wooldridge will get pretty, and J. W. Dunn will have a full head of black hair—O, happy day!

I trust the readers will contrast the following with perversions of Judge Rutherford and note the difference: "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind." (Isa. 65: 17.) "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." (2 Pet. 3: 10.) As to the end of time, read Mark 13: 32: "But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father." According to Mark, Mr. Rutherford and his cohorts claim to know more than any man, angels, or even Jesus Christ while on earth.

Do Not Neglect Your Blood

If it is in abnormal condition, the longer you delay taking a good blood medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, the longer it will take and the more difficult it will be for you to get back to "normalcy."

Not only boils, pimples, eruptions, but headaches, nervous spells, "all-gone" feelings, indigestion and loss of appetite are readily traced to impure blood. Thousands date getting on the right road to health from the day they began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Why not try it?

Field Reports

Belington, W. Va., May 29.—I began at Liberty on Friday night. So far there have been three baptisms and four restorations. I delivered four sermons yesterday. I will be here all this week.—Andrew Perry.

Black Oak, Ark., May 30.—My mission meeting in Southwestern Missouri is history. Ten were baptized, five were restored, a congregation of about thirty-five members was started, and money raised to erect a church house. I have the first half of July open for a meeting.—W. Curtis Porter.

Fort Smith, Ark., May 29.—On Lord's day I preached for the brethren at the Park Hill church of Christ. The largest audience greeted me that has assembled for some time. I am very optimistic concerning the cause of Jesus here. The brethren, I trust, will all aid in proclaiming the gospel which needs to go abroad in this city. I shall likely spend the summer with this congregation, and ask the prayers of all the brethren for the efforts we put forth in his vineyard.—Leland H. Knight.

Tuscumbia, Ala., May 30.—Brother Horton and I held a mission meeting at Government Hill, about halfway between Sheffield and Florence, which resulted in seven baptisms. These and the three or four members already there give us a little band capable of keeping house for the Lord. They will meet regularly for worship as the Lord directs. The church at Tuscumbia is doing all the mission work it is able to do. I hope to see an interest among all the churches in mission work. Let us do all we can to lead people out of error into the light.—J. H. Morris.

Heber Springs, Ark., May 30.—The meeting here began on Sunday with fine interest. The house has been filled to overflowing both nights, with a large attendance from other churches. Two were baptized yesterday. We are having two services daily. I shall deliver a memorial address to the American Legion to-day, I shall speak to the Normal to-morrow morning, and shall address the union labor men here next Sunday at 9:30 A.M. One of the great factors in the meeting here is the very fine singing done by the church, with Brother E. R. Harper leading.—L. R. Wilson.

Memphis, Tenn., May 30.—I preached at Ford's Well on the third Lord's day in this month to good crowds, and we had dinner on the ground, and good interest was manifested morning and evening. Last Lord's day I was at Huntingdon, and preached twice to people who seemed to appreciate it. I stayed several days with Brother Ivey and family, who were old friends in Texas, and we enjoyed the occasion very much. Brother Ivey is a good man. Next Lord's day I am to be at Alicia, Ark., and the middle of June I am to be in Texas for a meeting. I expect to be back in Tennessee for a meeting in the summer.—W. F. Lemmons.

Eloquent Tribute to Trees.

Trees are the arms of Mother Earth lifted up in worship of her makers; where they are, beauty dwells. Trees are the shelter of man, beast, and bird; they furnish the roof above us, the shade about us, and the nesting places of love and song. They call children out to play; they entice sweethearts into leafy coverts to seal their vows with fond caresses; they console and gratefully reward old age. They are the fittest ornaments of wealth and the inalienable possession of the poor, who can enjoy them without having title to them. They are the masts that fly the flags of all nations and the sails of all seas; they are the timbers that bridge forbidding streams; they bear the wires of the world's intelligence; they hold the rails that carry the traffic of the continents; they are the carved and polished furnishings of the home; they cradle the young and coffin the dead. Trees herald the spring with glorious banners of leaf and bloom; they clothe the autumn in garments of gold and royal purple; bared to the winter's cold, they are the harp of the winds, and they whisper the music of the infinite spaces.—Clarence Ousley.

Among the Colored Folks

On the second Lord's day in May I began a meeting at Murfreesboro, Tenn. This meeting was supported by the white church, and I must say they cared for me nicely and gave me a liberal contribution, for which I am very thankful. This church desired to do some mission work among my people and give them a chance to hear the pure gospel of Christ. Interest was good throughout the meeting, although we had some opposition and many hindrances. We were rained out twice and the wind blew our tent down once, and we had to close the meeting in the meetinghouse. There were no additions, but we tried to sow the seed, and we expect to reap at some later date. The brethren and sisters seemed to be greatly encouraged and edified. I shall never forget the kindness shown me by my colored brethren and sisters, who did everything to make my work among them pleasant. It is a pleasure to labor with such people.

On May 11-13 I had the pleasure of meeting with the brethren at Capleville, Tenn., in what was called a "get-together meeting." A number of preaching brethren were present from several States. Unity, mission work, and school work were discussed, and I believe great good will result, because we cannot do what we want to do with division among those who claim to be loyal to the truth. It will not be hard to build a school and do effective mission work when we unite on the scriptural way of settling our troubles that are sure to arise among God's people; and when we are united we can appeal to the brethren, white and colored, and they will respond, but no one feels like helping those who have division among them. So I am praying and working for the time when everything that serves to keep God's children divided will be removed. We need a school in which our young men can be better prepared for the ministry, so they can go about doing effective mission work; but before we can have this, we must have unity first.

I am now (May 29) in Birmingham, Ala., laboring in a fine mission field, and prospects are good. I was called here last year by the West End Church (white) to do mission work among my people, and I remained one month, and they were present each night to see that the work was conducted right and to render any assistance needed. These people had a mind to work, for they proved it. I shall never forget Brother Graves, who did so much to encourage me in my work. He was baptized by Brother S. H. Hall. About forty-five were baptized here last year, and I am told by Brother Graves that none of them have given any trouble since obeying the gospel. I preached three times on Lord's day, and in the afternoon service one man walked out boldly and confessed his Savior, and we are looking for more. Thousands of my people here are ignorant of the pure gospel of Christ. The harvest is great, but the laborers are few.

M. KEEBLE.

I am glad to report that the congregations that I have visited since Christmas are doing fine. I preached two nights for the congregation in McMinnville, Tenn., March 7, 8. The attendance was fine. They seem to be putting on new life. I am to hold a ten-days' meeting for them this fall. On the first Lord's day in April I was with the Pleasant Union congregation, in Maury County. There was one confession. This congregation is pulling together. On the second Lord's day in April I preached for the congregation at Goodrich, Tenn., with one confession. On Sunday night we had a crowded house, with both white and colored people in attendance. All seemed to enjoy the service greatly. On April 18 I began a meeting in Parrish, Ala., one of the hardest places I ever was in. I could not rent a meetinghouse, but succeeded in getting a poolroom to use for one hour, with the understanding that I would not move the pool tables out of the room. With my Bible and song book lying upon one of the pool tables, I began telling the old, old story of the cross. The next day I succeeded in getting the Masonic Hall, and used it for eight nights. On the sixth night of the meeting six persons made the good confession, among them being two preachers. Brother Frank Baker (white), of Berry, Ala., was present one night. He seemed to be well pleased with the preaching. Brother Hal P. McDonald, who for five years was principal of the Christian college at Berry, was with us one night, and spoke words of encouragement. Brethren Baker and McDonald have been a wonderful help to me since I have been in the ministry. Berry was my home for three years. The white congregation at Parrish attended the meeting well and took an active part in the song service, which was led by Brother J. T. Nall, of Patton, Ala. I received, through Brother J. R. Davidson (white), from the white congregation at America, Ala., ten dollars, and through Brother Jerome Myers, from the Oakman congregation, five dollars. The Parrish congregation did well under the present condition. All have my hearty thanks. We now have a membership of six. I have other meetings in destitute places. I ask the prayers of all the faithful.

Proposed Solution of All Difficulties.

BY F. P. FONNER.

That serious difficulties exist in the political and religious worlds, no one can deny. Even the churches of Christ are being affected thereby. Many solutions for these troubles have been proposed, and not one of them can ever bring peace and happiness to the whole human race. Why? Because they are proposed in the interests of some human organization without taking into the account the rights of the rest of the world. Even a miner's union injures more persons than it benefits, because when a strike occurs it prevents many from getting coal and entails suffering upon the poor of our land. How a Christian miner can thus consent to injure a brother who follows some other occupation is a mystery. Surely he does not intend this, but it has that effect. This will surely react upon himself and cause his own family to suffer in the end, because men in other occupations will show no mercy when the supreme test comes. Please mark it well, any Christian coal operator who refuses to pay his men a living wage contributes to the same results and brings suffering upon many of his own brethren elsewhere. If our manufacturers cannot obtain fuel, then they must cease to operate. This affects many workers everywhere. No Christian coal operator can afford to thus treat his own brethren in other callings. It must not be done, because such things affect the interests of men in every other occupation.

But is there no remedy for these ills? Yes, if all men will forsake their sins and return to gospel principles. It is, therefore, the duty of every Christian laborer to endeavor to make Christians of all his associates. "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets." (Matt. 7: 12.) This key, if rightly used, would unlock many a stubborn heart and bring peace in almost every case. If all men were real Christians and would observe this rule, it would settle all difficulties and bring about an era of good will never known before. Every man of ordinary ability could make a living for his family, because he would have the help of men in every other calling. This help would be mutual and would benefit the entire human family. The idea of Christians curing the ills of humanity by working through some human society is preposterous and absurd. It is an invention of the devil designed to lead them away from the blood-bought church of God. Even political parties can affect no reforms aside from gospel principles. The only hope of reform, politically, is in the conversion of our rulers, and to this end we must work and pray. It is apparent to all that civic righteousness is very much underrated in these times of distress. The remedy for every ill and the solution of every difficulty may be found only in the word of God. When men love the race and each other as they should, they will use the key as already indicated. "But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust." (Matt. 5: 44, 45.) Then let all Christians seek to do good to all persons, as God does, and thus promote peace on earth.

A series of evangelistic sermons preached by N. B. Harde- man during the Great Nashville Meeting, held in the Ryman Auditorium, March 28-April 16. These sermons ring true to the Old Book, and have a charm of style and freshness of illustration that put them in a class by themselves.

Field Reports

Decherd, Tenn., June 1.—I have just returned home from a ten-days' tour in Bledsoe and Marion counties. I preached a few nights at Lees Station, and one was baptized and one took membership. I preached one night at Red Hill, and two made the good confession and were baptized. I preached one night at Whitwell, and three made the good confession and were baptized. For the lack of time and the many calls, I cannot give the time I ought to give. I am trying to get to as many places as I can; so I have cut my meetings too short. If the brethren would do their whole duty, they would have the material ready when we arrive; but it seems that it takes more of my time preaching to the church than to the world.—R. E. L. Taylor.

Lenoir City, Tenn., May 30.—Brother J. D. Derryberry and I began a meeting here on May 23. The audiences and attention are good. The little band of seventeen we put to meeting in a rented hall last year has done well. They are gaining slowly. Brother Holden and wife have been a great encouragement during the school year. Two brethren from Fayetteville, Tenn., are here, whom we hope to get into the work. Brother Derryberry is due next to join Brother Andy T. Ritchie at McEwen, Tenn., in a mission meeting, one of a series supported by the Twelfth Avenue congregation, Nashville, Tenn. Let others support preachers and singers in a like manner. I am due at Jones Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., third Lord's day in June. We expect to have a tent near the end of the Meridian car line.—R. C. White.

Sedalia, Mo., June 1.—I made a hurried trip last week and the first of this week through Southern Missouri, Northern Arkansas, and Eastern Oklahoma. I was in Joplin, Mo., for a few hours, but, not having learned of any Christians only in this city, did not leave the business section. This city of from twenty-five to fifty thousand surely has at least a few; if so, I should like to learn of it. On Thursday night I heard Brother W. G. Tucker preach in Fort Smith, and met and visited with Brother R. L. Ludlam, Jr., Brother Etheridge, and Brother W. W. Slater's mother's folks, as well as many others. I visited Cameron, Shady Point, and Spiro, Okla. At these two last-named places I preached. The crowds were small, but seemed very much interested. This is as needy a field as I ever saw, I think. The church should send men there and support them.—S. W. Bell.

Cleveland, Tenn., May 25.—The tent meeting at Big Springs, Cleveland, closed on the evening of May 19, after running nineteen days. There were ten baptized, one restored, and five by commendation. Others almost persuaded. Rainy weather hindered the meeting at times, cutting us out of some of the services; notwithstanding all of that, the interest was fine. We believe that a vastly great amount of good was accomplished. Brother Cullum proved himself "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." The lessons were simple, strong, and convincing. On account of the condition of my throat, I had to turn the Rockwood meeting over to Brother Cullum. He closed here to go on to the meeting there, which began last Lord's day. I am doctoring and resting up my throat so as to be in condition to go ahead with my meetings just as early as possible. I preached here on Lord's day, both morning and evening. There was one addition at the forenoon services, and two valuable members took membership at the evening services.—George W. Farmer.

California News.

BY L. D. PERKINS.

I was with the Nevada Avenue congregation, in Fresno, on the fifth Lord's day in April. The house was well filled, and we had a fine service. This congregation is ministered to by Brother W. Halliday Trice, and he has done a splendid work there. In the afternoon of the same day I was at the Fresno Street Church, where I heard a fine sermon by W. W. Pace. Brother Pace lives in Madera.

On the second Lord's day in May I was with the mission church at Bakersfield, with the largest number to speak to we have had there. The work is gradually growing, and we plan to locate some good man there in the near future. Brother C. R. Nichol will begin a siege there on the first Lord's day in October.

On the third Lord's day I went to Chowchilla and heard Brother John I. Reagan, of Dallas, Texas, deliver two fine sermons. He is there in a meeting, and is having a fine time. After this meeting he will hold a meeting in Fresno.

On the fourth Lord's day I was in Hanford, where I addressed a fine audience. Brother Nichol will begin a month's work in Hanford on the first Lord's day in November; then two weeks at Nevada Avenue, Fresno, and then two weeks at Madera. Then we will turn him over to Southern California. He will preach at Altura and Sichel Streets, in Los Angeles, during the month of January, and the month of February he will give to the establishment of a congregation in Long Beach.

Brethren, we need a good congregation in Long Beach more than at any point in the State. There is a Review congregation there that is strong in its opposition to teaching the Bible in schools. I will pay twenty dollars per month to any preacher who will go there and give his time to the work for twelve consecutive months. Who will join me in this work? Remember that I work through the week for a support and give my time free to the work in this missionary field. I am a tentmaker. Help me in the Long Beach work. Let us support a man there.

An Urgent Need.

BY G. W. FARMER.

A church house is needed at Niota, Tenn. This is a town of six or seven hundred people. We have a lot bought and paid for, with restrictive clause in the deed, and between three hundred and fifty and four hundred dollars on the building fund. The cause is very weak here. Only a few members, and most of them sisters. The worship is started up here. They meet in the auditorium of the school building. The town is now putting up a new school building. The old building is to be sold soon. Then we will be thrown out of a place to meet. Opposition to the truth is very strong. We do not want the cause hindered here for want of a place to meet. Please help us to get a meetinghouse. We appeal to individuals and to congregations to send us a contribution for this purpose. Let churches appoint a day in which to make this contribution. Send all contributions to G. W. Farmer, Cleveland, Tenn., and they will be gratefully received.

From personal knowledge gained from being at Niota together in two meetings, we are glad to indorse all Brother Farmer has said. This is one of the few calls entirely demanding help. The situation is urgent. The people generally give us a good hearing and listen attentively. Soon additions should follow. A few are very bitter. Brethren, could you know the conditions and sacrifices made to get this lot and building fund, we believe you would help freely. Please do so now. We know of no more needy place. Save the cause here.

Religious Interest at Florence, Ala.

BY B. F. HARDING.

The church at Florence is prospering. During the last six weeks we have had added to the congregation seventy-eight. Sixty-nine of these made the good confession and were buried with their Lord in baptism, others were restored, and some came out of the denominations. On April 2 the Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians began a tent meeting here, conducted by Ham and Ramsey. We were the only religious body in town, with the exception of the Catholics, that did not take part in the meeting. Mr. Ham stirred the whole town, and thousands flocked to hear him. He came nearer preaching the truth than any denominational preacher I have ever heard, but still was far from preaching as Peter and other inspired men did to alien sinners. We were very severely criticized for not taking part in the meeting. This criticism was led by the "digressives." During this entire meeting it was necessary for me, at our regular services, to preach on the differences and to show why we could not coöperate; and, as a result, more have been added to the "one body" than to any one denomination, so far as I have been able to learn. Our Bible school is the largest that it has ever been. For some time we have averaged over three hundred. Our Lord's-day-morning audiences fill the house, which is the largest church house in town. The gospel is the power of God to save. May we be loyal and true to Him and never compromise his blessed truth.

A Prominent Nurse Tells Her Experience

Something Worth Reading

Athens, Tenn.—"I suffered from chronic bronchitis for six years and when I had the 'flu' in 1919, my cough grew worse. I soon developed asthma. I suffered terribly and was sure I had consumption. I had a very bad color, could not sleep at night and had pains in my breast and shoulders. Also my arms would be numb. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and was cured of my cough. I worked all last winter—was up at night with my patients and did not have a cold all winter. Would ask all who suffer from weak lungs or throat trouble to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."—Mrs. W. C. Carter, Route 2.

Commencement at Thorp Spring, Texas.

The friends of Thorp Spring Christian College will long remember May 14-18. Several hundred invitations were sent out to former students and friends of the school. These invitations were well received, and great crowds thronged the buildings and grounds for the four days of commencement.

The real exercises began on Sunday morning with the commencement sermon by Brother A. O. Colley, of Dallas, Texas. Brother Colley is at home in the country schoolhouse as well as in a city church, or in a university or college. We feel sure that Brother Colley's sermon did good.

The commencement address was given on May 18, at ten o'clock, by Brother G. C. Brewer, of Cleburne, Texas. Many expressions were heard commending the good things that were said.

In addition to the addresses and sermons of the week, several excellent programs were given by the Fine Arts Department. Mrs. Chambers had one night for her pupils in Piano. Miss Hammond had one night for her pupils in Expression. Miss Hooper assisted Mrs. Chambers with her pupils in the Voice Department. Each of the literary societies had programs.

The crowning event of the occasion, however, was Monday, May 15—ex-students' day and the ex-students' banquet at eight o'clock. Eighty-three plates were spoken for at the banquet. The Ex-Student Association took permanent form. Bob Chiles, Celeste, Texas, was made president; Mrs. A. R. Holton, Thorp Spring, Texas, secretary. The purpose of this organization will be to work for the interest of Thorp Spring Christian College and to urge that each succeeding year more and more shall attend these class reunions.

The work this year has been successful. The moral and religious influence has been the very best. With our excellent environments and active constructive program for work, we can weed out much of the undesirable in the lives of boys and girls.

After the last farewell was said, students departed for different sections of the State to their homes. Many questions were asked during the last days about what each would do this summer. Some eight or ten will be preaching and singing. Brother Garfield McCord is now at Longview with Brother T. H. Etheridge in a meeting. Brother J. C. Rigney is with Brother G. A. Dunn at Gainesville. Brother Robert McDougald begins his work at his home, near Kemp, Texas. Brethren Lowell and Horace Teddlie will visit their father for a few days at Shamrock. Others of the boys and girls will be in school at different places doing extra work during vacation.

Deficient Vitality a Great Misfortune.

Persons that can rarely or never say that they feel full of life are really among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but merely exist, for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins.

A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings. Such a medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. It is simple justice to say these words in its favor.

Hood's Pills very effectively supplement it in cases where a cathartic or laxative is needed.

A Brand-New Book

"OLD LIMBER" or THE TALE OF THE TAYLORS by DELONG RICE

"ALF and BOB TAYLOR, with their eloquence, their fiddles, and their fox hounds, have wrought for themselves a niche of eternal melody in the hearts of their country."

So states the author of this little book, which we present as the best product of the pen of DeLong Rice. In one hour of reading he has gathered the strange and romantic story of the two most wonderful political campaigns of Tennessee—the thrilling tale of the happy comradeship and the lifelong rivalry of the two famous brothers—a disclosure of the remarkable and heretofore unpublished incidents that attended the political division of the Taylor family—the wonder of "The War of the Roses" that attracted the attention of the world—and the truth about "OLD LIMBER," the peerless and now immortal fox hound that played the leading role of sentiment in the political campaign of last fall, from the Mississippi River to the Unaka Mountains.

With a "Cast of Characters extending from a President of the United States to a fox hound," the story teaches a wide range of human sentiment; and through it all is the aroma of crackling camp fires and the music of the chase. THE BOOK is beautifully printed and bound, appropriately illustrated, and packed in a neat gift box, ready for mailing.

Obituaries

Boley.

On Saturday, January 15, 1921, the death angel closed the eyes of my little brother, J. W. Boley, Jr. He was only eleven months and twenty-eight days old. Death to him was not a long illness and suffering. He passed away seemingly at perfect ease. J. W. is with God, and he will keep him. He is far from this world, and it is for us to meet our little brother in the bright celestial city of God. We should console ourselves with the words of Jesus when he said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."

MAE BOLEY.

Cleere.

On May 20, 1922, Mrs. Velma Moore Cleere passed into the great beyond. She was born at Mars' Hill, Ala., and became a Christian at an early age. She was married to Dr. W. W. Cleere, of Russellville, Ala., about eight years ago. To this union two sons were born, who, with her husband, five sisters, and two brothers, survive. She was a devoted Christian, wife, and mother; loving, thoughtful, kind, and generous. Her life was a benediction, not only to her immediate family, but to all who knew her. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; for their works follow with them."

B. F. HARDING.

Holloway.

On February 25, 1921, my brother, L. P. Holloway, of Glass, Tenn., answered the last earthly call of his great Creator and passed from a life of pain and sorrow to one of peace and rest, where sickness and sorrow are unknown. He was born on March 14, 1853, in Mississippi, and moved from there when a small boy, with his mother, to Obion County, Tenn., where he lived until the day of his death. He was married to Miss Frances E. Aldridge in June, 1875. Seven children—four girls and three boys—were born to this union. All are members of the church of Christ but the oldest son. He obeyed the gospel on August 23 1917. He earnestly contended for the faith delivered to the saints. He looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. We hope to meet him where the gates are of pearl and the streets are of gold.

S. W. HOLLOWAY.

Lawrence.

On the afternoon of May 22, 1922, all that was mortal of Eugene Lawrence was committed to the earth to await the resurrection. His existence on the earth of forty-five years was characterized by thirty years spent in the service of his Master. Remembering his Creator at the age of fifteen, he was baptized by Brother F. W. Smith, and afterwards lived faithfully the Christian life. Because of an affliction in infancy Eugene was never strong physically, but mentally his mind was alert, and spiritually he was a pillar of strength in the church. Hence he always took a delight in ministering in any way he felt his talent would permit. Appropriate and comforting words of condolence were made at his funeral by Prof. Warmoth Peebles, a lifelong friend, teacher, and coworker in the church. He is survived by a mother, one brother, and three sisters, who mourn their irreparable loss. But in some fairer day, if faithful to God, there will be a family reunion.

J. LEONARD JACKSON.

Kindness.

Kindness is a most winsome thing. It speaks a language even a dog understands and creates an atmosphere in which the most beautiful virtues come to blossom. It reaches into the heart of a friend and brings forth treasures new and old displaying the best capabilities in the best light. It diffuses an aroma of sweetness and a radiance of light that afford more joy than any other virtue. The word defined means "kinnedness," which is to say that it carries the home relation out into the world and, with Jesus, thinks of those we meet as "brother and sister and mother." It is a long reach of effort to meet Christ's kindness in this ideal that we stand ready to do for any what we would do for brother, sister, or mother. Yet no one is ever sorry for the effort, and those who have influenced us most are those who have given this sort of homemade kindness. No one claiming to be a Christian will intentionally hurt another in mind, body, or estate; but we must never thoughtlessly or carelessly give pain. "Be ye kind one to another" is apostolic urgency. "Love suffers long and is kind" is the fine blossoming of Christianity rooted and grounded in the human heart.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Finger Nail's History.

The rapidity of the growth of the nails is indicative of the health. The growth of the nails on the right hand is in most people more rapid than of those on the left hand. Another curious point is that the rate of growth of the nail depends directly on the length of the finger. Thus the nails on the two middle fingers of men grow more rapidly than those on the first and third fingers, respectively, and these, in turn, are more speedy in their growth than those on the little fingers.—Selected.

THE POTENCY OF A LOOK.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

THE DANGEROUS LOOK.

There are some directions in which we ought never to look. We cannot do it safely. On the streets of our cities one sometimes sees men at work repairing the trolley tracks, and on a small box inclosing a brilliant flame used in their work are seen the words, prominently displayed: "Danger—Do Not Look!" In some cases the notice explains that a look at this flame or ray will injure the eyesight. Even after reading such a notice there is a subtle temptation to steal a look at that dangerous light, just for an instant, and then quickly look away. It is a striking illustration of God's warning to us repeated many times throughout his word: "Danger—Do Not Look!" We are not to look at temptation. We are not to look at sin. Every time we look in any of these directions we run the risk of injuring more than our eyesight. There is danger in a look. There is disaster in a look.

"LOOK NOT UPON THE WINE."

"Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it sparkleth in the cup, when it goeth down smoothly: at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

This is God's warning to all who may be tempted by wine or strong drink. The psalmist knew the potency of a look. He warns against the deception of color and brilliant sparkle in the glass, and points out the bitter, deadly effect, how "at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder." Men who have been addicted to drink for many years have said to me repeatedly that it is almost impossible for them to refuse to drink when liquor is set before them. They deny that nonusers can appreciate their situation, how utterly helpless they are. They say that the temptation is too much for them, and almost invariably they succumb. Their sole way of escape, then, is not to look, to avoid it, to turn from it, and to pass on. If they look, if they dally with temptation, being weak to effeminacy, they will yield. I am glad that the barroom is no longer in their way. With its inviting neatness, its display of color, its marble floors and bars, its great variety of sparkling liquors, the saloon was an attractive place for youth to loiter, a subtle solicitation to drinkers, and I earnestly hope that its day is gone forever. The bootlegger with his muddy wares affords no such temptation to look, nor does the wildcat still; and I only wish that the lawless vender of poison were tenfold more repulsive than he is and that the nefarious business of the moonshiner were as detestable in the public eye as it is in God's sight. But certainly we are fallen upon better times when those that "go to seek out mixed wine" must traffic with outlawed blockade runner and bootlegger, or search for still in gulch or cove or tangled backwoods. I certainly am glad that the masses have little opportunity to look upon intoxicating liquor, for I hate the traffic for the crimes it has done.

What is said of the danger of looking upon wine is true of every other evil thing. We are not to look indulgently upon any of them. There are many flagrant evils of the present day that transcend the menace of wine. If we "abstain from all appearance [every form] of evil" (1 Thess. 5: 22), we must not look. To look is to court temptation, and temptation may lead to sin. Now, all temptations fall into three classes—those that appeal to the flesh, those that appeal to the eye, and those that appeal to human pride. "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the vainglory of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." (1 John 2: 16.) The purpose of this article is to warn especially against the "lust of the eyes." Men are tempted in many ways. Oftentimes it may be that their own sinful nature is the most important factor in leading them into sin, for thus we read that "each man is tempted, when he is drawn away by his own lust, and enticed." (James 1: 14.) Yet who shall say that the incautious look may not be a most potent means of stirring up the wicked passion or lust? The devil is not foolish enough to disregard the look, for "even Satan fashioneth himself into an angel of light" that he may be attractive rather than repulsive. Indeed, Satan is industrious in affording weak Christians ample opportunity to behold the most attractive forms of sin, and to accomplish his death-dealing ends he will employ the deft agency of the friends and associates of those whom he wishes to ensnare. The only safe course is not to look. We must conquer by running away. The whole catalogue of evils must, as far as possible, be avoided, for concerning every sinful thing God has said: "Danger—Do Not Look!" Do not look indulgently upon card playing. Do not look upon the ballroom. Do not look upon obscenity, unchastity, the vulgar picture. Heed God's warning with reference to temptation and evil: "Danger—Do Not Look!" There is danger and disaster in a look.

"LOOK NOT BEHIND THEE."

The angels' warning to Lot and his family was: "Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the Plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed." (Gen. 19: 17.) The temptation on the part of Lot's wife to look back surely was great, for we read that she "looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt." I think that this was more than a physical look—that it was an intense longing on the part of Lot's wife for the things left behind, Sodom and its sinful life; but it most likely found expression in the physical act of turning and looking at the burning city. Jesus is the best commentary on the destruction of Sodom and the case of Lot's wife. "Likewise even as it came to pass in the days of Lot; they ate, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but in the day that Lot went out from Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all: after the same manner shall it be in the day that the Son of man is revealed. In that day, he that shall be on the housetop, and his goods in the house, let him not go down to take them away: and let him that is in the field likewise not return back. Remember Lot's wife." (Luke 17: 28-32.) The flight of Lot must be precipitate; goods and earthly considerations must not cause delay. To look back for any cause would spell disaster. Even so is it with reference to temptation and worldliness. We must escape for our lives or be engulfed in destruction. We must not turn back to Sodom and its sinful pleasures. We must flee from the wrath to come. No doubt the temptation to look back was subtle and impelling. Mrs. Lot had friends and the Misses Lot had betrothed husbands in Sodom, and they were suddenly cutting loose from wonted practices and pleasures, but it appears from the judgment that overlooked her that the former was leaving the doomed city with more poignant regret. How much the phenomenon of supernatural fire and conflagration—the lurid flames, the horrid smoke, the confused noise—had to do with her attraction I do not know, nor can I say whether or not the foible of curiosity to look back under such circumstances is more peculiar to her sex. Whatever the cause, Mrs. Lot alone of the four did look back; and her case is a solemn warning to every Christian beset with the evils of a perverse generation. Jesus says: "Remember Lot's wife." God's warning, unheeded, was: "Look not behind thee." His warning to us is: "Abstain from every form of evil."

God's warning to Israel on the farther shore of the Red Sea was to not look back to Egypt, but to keep the prospect of Canaan before them. Notwithstanding, time and again they turned back in their hearts to the land of slavery. "And the mixed multitude that was among them lusted exceedingly: and the children of Israel also wept again, and said, Who shall give us flesh to eat? We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt for naught; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlic: but now our soul is dried away; there is nothing at all save this manna to look upon." (Num. 11: 4, 5.) The discouraging report of the ten spies precipitated a clamor for actual return into Egypt. "Our wives and our little ones will be a prey: were it not better for us to return into Egypt? And they said one to another, Let us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt." (Num. 14: 2, 4.) Every trial and discouragement brought a remembrance of Egypt and an unfair comparison of their former lot with their present condition. There was Canaan before them and Egypt behind them, the one flowing with milk and honey, the other the house of cruel servitude. Moses, viewing from Nebo the sweet fields of Canaan, would fain have entered that goodly land. But discouraged Israel looked back. But the case of Israel is very human, very much like us that have been loosed from our sins and granted freedom in Christ, for often we are found despising our liberty and longing for the husks of the sinful life. Very much like discouraged Christians, indeed.

But the Christian who thus looks back to Sodom, to Egypt, to the world, is not fit for the kingdom of God. So said Jesus to the disciple that would first turn back and bid farewell to those at his house, then come again and follow the Master. "No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." The Christian life does not admit of pause, delay, vacillation. No time is allotted for mere earthly concern—bidding farewell, burying the dead—when souls are perishing. Farewells are trivial, the dead must bury their own dead; the great and tremendous duty incumbent upon us is to follow Jesus. But God will not prevent our looking back. It is our privilege as it was the privilege of Lot's wife. He will lead us by the hand, as it were, and he will warn us. But we may look back if we will. It is our privilege and likewise our peril. Like the patriarchs of old—Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—we may return to that land whence we were called if we are minded to return. God will not prevent us. Abraham and his family could have gone back to the ancestral home in Ur of the Chaldees, to their kindred, their gods, and their former life. "And if indeed they had been mindful of that country from which they went out, they would have had opportunity to return." But it is to their fame that they looked not back. "But now they desire a better country, that is a heavenly"—a country better than Chaldea, better even than Canaan. They "looked for the city which hath the foundations, whose builder and maker is God." And are we not children of Abraham by faith? Why, then, not leave Chaldea and its idolatry behind? Why not account ourselves as pilgrims on the earth? Why not look for that better land, that heavenly, the city which hath the foundations whose builder and maker is God?

"LOOKING UNTO JESUS."

We are told in what direction to look. We must look unto God for salvation. "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else." (Isa. 45: 22.) We must look unto Jesus his Son. "Therefore let us also, seeing we are compassed about by so great a cloud of witnesses, lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race set before us, looking [away from all else] unto Jesus the author and perfecter of our faith." It is to be a lifetime look. We need Jesus every hour, every moment: his mercy, his strength, his guidance. With eyes "purer than to behold evil, and that canst not look on perverseness" (Hab. 1: 13), let us look unto holiness, purity, sanctity; unto God, unto Jesus. In such a look is salvation.

"A Mann as Is a Man."

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

On Buffalo River, near the border between Lewis and Wayne counties, at a little sidetrack on the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway, called "Riverside, Tenn.," lives the subject of this sketch, Brother H. N. Mann. He is well known to some of our readers. It is customary to say a lot of nice things about men after they are dead, but I prefer to say mine while they are alive. Brother Mann is a real man. The world knows little of him and probably cares less; but he is one of God's noble men.

He lives down where the white suckers and red horse splash on the shallow shoals of the clear waters of Buffalo; where the gray squirrels bark from the tree tops all around; where "Bob, Bob White" asks, "Is your wheat 'most ripe?" where the wild gobbler struts on the rocky point; where cattle live in a paradise of tender buds, sedge grass, and beggar lice; and where hogs grow fat on acorns, hickory nuts, and beech "mast." The "mast" is, or was, an important thing down there. A man fresh from Wayne County met a former resident away out in Texas. The old-timer said: "And so you are just from Wayne County? The finest people on earth. Say how is the mast this year?" But the people don't really eat the mast.

Brother Mann runs a general merchandise store, a farm, keeps the post office, and preaches every Sunday, and holds several meetings every year. He reads the Gospel Advocate and several other papers, donates the Advocate to several others, and when he has read his own paper he gives it to some one else. I mention this that our city preachers may copy his program. Some of them are afraid they will get nervous prostration preaching twice a week and attending prayer meeting once a week. Such inactivity is dangerous.

It is nothing strange for Brother Mann to milk the cows, "slop" the hogs, feed the mules, ride one of them after the milch cows, etc. On one occasion his mule became unruly, like Absalom's, and ran under some blackjacks and scratched his face up in bad shape. He got back in time for his appointment and got right up to preach. The congregation looked at his face and then their faces became big question marks. He said, "Well, I am like Pat—slightly disfigured, but still in the ring," and went on with his sermon.

He is well liked by all who know him. This is literally true as far as my knowledge goes, for I have never heard an ugly word said of him. My brother, M. C. Love, who is now doing some good preaching, owes much of his spiritual strength to Brother Mann and the congregation at Riverside.

Brother Mann goes to the schoolhouses back off the railroad where the gospel is not known in its purity. After he has followed this for a year or two, a "big" preacher goes there, holds a meeting, and baptizes several people, and some people give him all the credit, but the Lord does not.

Men who need a friend, faint-hearted Christians, and discouraged preachers go to Brother Mann for help and encouragement. When he sees a specially good article in the Advocate, he sits down and writes the author and tells him how much he enjoyed the article. Do you think that does good? It does. Encouragement like that from all the readers would keep every writer doing his best.

He does not know I am writing this. He would not give his consent, probably; but I hope he won't get very mad at me. I have before me some old letters written to him, which I wish to quote from.

"Dear Brother Mann: Brother ———'s little grandson is very sick. Brother ——— preached for us yesterday. When are you going to visit us? We would certainly enjoy an appointment from you any time you can come."

"Dear Brother in Christ: It was with great pleasure to me that I filled my appointment on the first Sunday at ——— congregation. The third Sunday I was with the brethren at ———. My home place of worship needs all the time I can possibly give them. I promised both places a call next month. I have some good reports from Wayne County. I am looking forward to a good year in the Lord's work. We will try to lend a helping hand to as many needy places as we can. I hope to pass your way soon and talk with you face to face."

"Dear Brother Mann: By request I am writing you. Sister ———, who lives at ———, has ———. She wrote her mother for money to take treatment. Her mother can't help her. I am writing to say they are worthy people, and anything you can do for her will be appreciated. This congregation will help some." [I found she got the help.]

These letters show something of the regard in which he is held and how the people look to him. It is better to have this love and respect from one's neighbors and brethren and be able to thus fill a place of usefulness in the community than to hold some world-famed political position. May God give us more Manns.

Denver (Col.) Notes.

BY JOHN D. EVANS.

I have recently visited most of the congregations within one hundred and twenty-five miles of Denver to see how they are faring. While they have had some discouragements during the winter months, they are not cast down.

At Pueblo I found Brother E. F. Rizer a very busy man seven days in the week. They meet regularly on Lord's day at the G. A. R. Hall. Brother Rizer's office is in the Central Block. Do not fail to look him up when going there. I spoke at the morning service to a small but very attentive audience, and met several brethren and sisters from Tennessee and Texas.

Brother A. W. Von Boskirk and Brother Crews, from Colorado Springs, drove over for me in the afternoon, a distance of forty-five miles. I preached there in the evening. The Perrys and Woodwards, formerly of Nashville, are there. The members of this congregation have a mind to work, and the leaders do not shirk the responsibilities that fall upon them. Their place of worship is 1915 East Pike's Peak Avenue. Brother Von Boskirk's address is 1908 East Pike's Peak Avenue.

On a recent visit to Boulder, I found the brethren fairly active. I preached at the morning service and attended a business session in the afternoon. Brother James H. Bailey, the "postman preacher," is always on the job. As stated in a previous letter, the Boulder brethren and the Colorado Springs brethren have quite a little financial burden to carry on their new buildings, and it would mean much to them to have the older congregations share with them this burden. Brother Bailey's address is 2339 Pine Street.

Just a week ago I visited the brethren at Fort Collins and Bellvue, Col. This was the home of Brother E. C. Fuqua before his departure to California. I preached for the brethren at the morning service at the G. A. R. Hall in Fort Collins, where they now meet regularly. Brethren Jesse E. Brittell and Clarence Wharton are the elders. At this service Brother Thomas was also selected and appointed an elder. Quite a number from Bellvue attended the morning service. We had a business session at the home of Brother Thomas in the afternoon, at which much enthusiasm was manifested in regard to the outlook for future work. Visitors to Fort Collins should remember the meeting place is the G. A. R. Hall in the central part of the city.

In the latter part of the afternoon I was driven out to the home of Brother Little, near Bellvue, for dinner, after which I preached at the evening service. This is the home of our aged brother, W. W. Parminter, who has been a gospel preacher for many years. We had a splendid audience and a good old-fashioned song service. It was an inspiration to the preacher. Most of the Fort Collins brethren attended the evening service. Both of these congregations feel very greatly the loss of Brother Fuqua from the field, having been so long and so pleasantly associated with him. I exhorted them all to greater activity, enthusiasm, and faithfulness in the Master's service. Brother Bailey, of Boulder, and Brother J. C. Estes, of Denver, and I will make frequent visits to all the churches, doing what we can to encourage, strengthen, and build them up as opportunity presents.

Brother Sam P. Pittman, of Nashville, Tenn., is expected to spend several weeks in this field, beginning at Denver about June 18. He will visit as many of the churches as his time will permit. We are looking forward with pleasure to his coming in the hope that much good may be accomplished.

At Denver we are keeping fairly busy. On each Lord's day we have an hour's Bible study in classes and a discourse both morning and evening by Dr. Estes and myself. On Wednesday evening we have a miscellaneous program of song, prayer, and talks by the younger brethren on selected topics. The sisters meet in private homes on Thursday for Bible study. So there is work for all—"to every one his work." Our meeting place is 125 South Sherman Street. Do not fail to visit us when in Denver.

Field Notes.

BY EARNEST C. LOVE.

During the week from May 29 to June 5 I visited Lawrenceburg and Iron City, Tenn., and Florence, Sheffield, and Tuscumbia, Ala.

Lawrenceburg has a strong church and is the home of several preachers. I have met Brethren Thomas C. King, J. C. Hollis, E. O. Coffman, James T. Harris, J. C. Coffman, and Sherman Kelley. Brother J. E. Thornberry lives there, but is away for the summer.

There is a unique situation in Lawrenceburg. Our worthy brother, J. H. Stribling, built a large high-school building, costing about forty thousand dollars, and presented it to the county on certain conditions. One condition is that they allow him to furnish and pay a teacher to teach the Bible to all the pupils who wish to study it. Also, the commercial department of the high school must give free scholarships to ten of the pupils making the best record in Bible study. The most remarkable feature I see in it is that the State Legislature passed a special Act authorizing the County Board of Education to give the pupils credit for work done in the Bible. Each pupil may have two credits toward a diploma for Bible study. I do not think there is anything else just like this. Of course, all must rejoice at this good work, for over two hundred pupils studied the Bible there last year. Brother Boll taught the Bible there the first year, and Brother Thornberry has taught ever since. I do not know that Brother Thornberry shares the views of Brother Boll on the future setting up of the kingdom and the "imminence" of Christ's coming, but it is presumable that he does.

The town had just finished a union meeting by Ham and Ramsey. They are of the Moody type mentioned in my recent article on "Moodyism." These fellows teach the future flesh-and-blood reign of Christ on the earth in Jerusalem after the Jews are gathered back there. They know how to get backing and money support. They preach against instrumental music, but go on and use it. They preach baptism in order to remission of sins in one sermon and "faith alone" at another time. That keeps people guessing who they are and what they believe.

Several people who are favorably disposed to the church of Christ "go up" or "sign a card" in such meetings. Three came forward the night I was there, who had evidently "gone up" in Ham's meeting. I turned them over to Brother Harris, and he made one of the most appropriate talks I have heard. Then Brother E. O. Coffman did the baptizing. I was glad to meet Brother Harris, especially, as he is the man who started the South Point congregation in Maury County.

At Iron City I found a nice band of brethren, who treated me kindly. Brother C. A. Myers assisted me in my work.

When I arrived in Florence, I found a letter from Brother C. M. Southall, asking me to change my appointment from Wednesday to Thursday night. Of course I could not do this, and so had no appointment there. But I did some work there, and will return, the Lord willing, and finish up later, and will then have more to say about the work there. Brother B. F. Harding is the preacher at Florence. I met Brother C. E. Holt, whom I have long wished to see.

From Florence I went to Sheffield, which is just across the Tennessee River, southward. Brother J. C. Graham, a former pupil of the Nashville Bible School, is the preacher. I preached at night and canvassed a few of the brethren, all I could find, and went to Tuscumbia next day.

Brother J. H. Horton is the preacher there. Also, Brother Vestal Walker, a Freed-Hardeman boy, lives there. I enjoyed my stay at Tuscumbia. I got there Saturday, and found they had made an appointment for me to preach on Saturday night. That always sounds good to me. It shows that the people want to work and get in all the time they can.

There I saw Brother J. W. Moss, a former schoolmate of my wife at Hillsboro, in Williamson County. He still has the picture, "From the Cradle to the Grave," which she painted and gave to him and Sister Moss as a wedding present. Sister Moss was away.

There is much more I want to say, but these "Notes" are long enough. I will write more when I go back.

I am back in Lawrenceburg now, where I am to preach till June 11.

A prominent church worker said: "I quit the Gospel Advocate once, but I never could find anything else to take its place. Nothing else seemed to touch the right spot." Let us learn a lesson here.

Los Angeles (Cal.) Notes.

BY W. EDGAR MILLER.

The work at the Central church of Christ, 1720 South Flower Street, is now entering its sixth month; and if there ever existed in our minds any doubt as to the wisdom of attempting to start a new congregation, that doubt has been dispelled. The work is receiving encouragement and support from all sides, and the results of our efforts have far exceeded our expectations. The Lord is surely blessing our efforts.

On Sunday, May 28, we had an excellent service, with preaching by Brother Samuel E. Witty; and at the close of the morning service four came forward for membership, these being Brother and Sister Kindred and Sister Young, all of Rockwood, Tenn., and Sister Kerley, of Peck, Kan. At the same time Brother Phillips made the good confession, and was buried with his Lord in baptism in the afternoon at the Sichel Street church house. It rejoices our souls to have these good souls join with us in the Lord's work.

The brethren at Pomona began a tent meeting about a week ago, and reports indicate that they are having a good meeting. Alhambra is also having a good meeting, this being held by Brother E. C. Fuqua. Central Church is contemplating holding a meeting as soon as these two meetings are over. Our tents ought to be kept busy every day of the year they can be. They do no good lying around. Wear them out in the Lord's work.

"He that gathereth in summer is a wise son: but he that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame." (Prov. 10: 5.) "Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." (Matt. 9: 37, 38.) That harvest is still on, and the cry is to us. If we need it, we are wise; but if we are asleep while the harvest time is on, we will cause shame both to ourselves and to our Father; for when the harvest time is ended, we will have to say, in the words of Jeremiah: "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." (Jer. 8: 20.) "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels." (Mark 8: 38.)

A Statement.

Nashville, Tenn., June 6, 1922.—Mr. McQuiddy: Feeling that justice to myself demands it, I ask you to grant me a little space.

On May 6 I contributed an article to the Gospel Advocate and asked you to reply, which you did on May 25. On the night of May 22, three days prior to this, I returned to the church. Now, as I did not read your answer until several days later, my step could not have been influenced thereby. And even had I read your article in advance, I am sure it would not have influenced me, as I have for years been familiar with the old and rather hackneyed reasons advanced. In strong contrast to your reply is a letter received from a total stranger, who excepts from your conclusions, and whose expressions of charity and forbearance convince me they were prompted by true Christian experience. In every particular he summed up my case better than I could have done; and this intuition, ability to read between the lines, or whatever it may be called, caused me to almost regard him as a prophet. So I am anxiously awaiting his reply to my letter—a letter that will be much more pleasing to him than that of May 6.

You had simply sized me up as hopeless, without due or even any thought.

The stranger wrote me from Mayfield, Ky.
Yours very truly, D. B. CHENAULT.
143 Fifth Avenue, North.

I am glad to publish the above statement. I did not think my article, which was not published until May 25, had any influence in leading Mr. Chenault to return to the church on May 22. When I heard of his action, I stated to a number of brethren that my article had nothing to do with his restoration to the church. I am sorry he concludes I sized him up as a hopeless case, for I did not. I rejoice that he has been influenced to accept the truth, and hope his faith in Christ may grow stronger from day to day.

J. C. McQUIDDY.

The "Gospel Advocate Company."

BY J. C. M'Q.

Words of encouragement are received almost daily concerning the new company. Brethren are interested, and quite a number have taken stock and many have given assurance that they will do so in the near future. One hundred dollars a share. We are ready to furnish certificates of stock.

Oscar Smith, 301 East Sixteenth Street, Houston Heights, Texas, writes: "I see in the current issue of the Gospel Advocate that the 'Gospel Advocate Company' has just been organized. I feel that you are doing a wise thing, and I wish the new company success in its undertaking. I am sure that we are too slow to encourage the circulation of good literature which teaches the gospel of Christ."

John E. Dunn, 905 Ferris Avenue, Waxahachie, Texas, says: "I am very much interested in the new move to form the 'Gospel Advocate Company.' I should like to have at least one share of the stock, but do not see my way just now. I should like to see the Christian Leader, the Firm Foundation, and the Gospel Advocate merged into one great paper with subscribers not by the thousand, but by the hundreds of thousands, and then a great army of evangelists, with all the disciples of Christ in one solid phalanx, preach the gospel of Christ in every nation under heaven and their sound go to the ends of the earth, do a real constructive work. We could evangelize the world in a generation if we would get together in one united body and catch the spirit of the disciples of the Lord Jesus of the first century."

I like the ring of the above. Disciples should pull together, pray together, and work together. They should put away all evil surmisings, evil accusations, and jealousies. The true Christian has a generous soul. A prominent brother, whose name I withhold, says: "I think one of the worst things that ever has occurred in our papers is the impugning of the motives of brethren and assigning to them positions they never even thought of until they were in print." We should always be fair and just enough to accept a brother's disavowal of a position and his interpretation of his language. We should not make a charge against any one when no good will be accomplished thereby, but, to the contrary, strife and an evil spirit will be engendered. If brethren do not stop their evil surmisings and charging on one another things of which they are as innocent as an angel in heaven, they are as sure to go to torment as there is such a place. Such conduct is not good, but evil and only evil. Let us love as brethren; let us be kind and gentle one to the other; let us pull together. There is work enough for us all. How the circulation of the Gospel Advocate would grow if every preacher would help us! Do you believe we should have a first-class paper? If so, prove your faith by your works. If you want our paper to die, if you want our churches not to live, then knock them, surmise evil of them, devote your time and talents to knifing them, and soon you may see the result of your diabolical work.

Let us work; let us be constructive. Encourage the churches, papers, and individual Christians to greater activity and effort. Do not look for absolute perfection in this life. As long as we are in the flesh we will be weak, frail, and fallible.

We rejoice to report the interest is growing and that many are sending in subscribers. Will you not enlist as a worker?

Night and Morning.

BY ADELIA S. MARTIN.

The night is here, darkness broods o'er the land,
While weary nature sinks in slumber sweet;
We lay all burdens down at Jesus' feet,
Trusting our little life in His strong hand.
O, give us strength and courage, is our prayer.
A strong unwavering faith, the living power
To bear us safely through life's darkest hour, Whate'er the danger, knowing God is there.

'Tis morning now, the living world has stirred.
My waking spirit leaps on joyful wings.
Blessed the holy morn that always brings
Our heart's deep thought in worship to the Lord!
We praise Him for His grace and righteousness,
For loving-kindness—all things good and true;
For tender mercy, deep and fathomless
As that mysterious, pathless, endless blue.

Has the Kingdom of God Been Established on Earth by Jesus Christ, or Will It Be in the Future?

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE BY T. J. MARRS.

In reply to my second, Brother Jones says the "beast" referred to in Dan. 7: 11, etc., was the "little horn." Well, this "little horn" rose among the ten, and, A.D. 96, the angel told John: "The ten horns are ten kings that have received no kingdom, as yet." (Rev. 17: 12.) Thus, this "little horn" had to rise and be destroyed later than A.D. 96; and as the kingdom comes after the "beast" is destroyed, then the kingdom comes after A.D. 96. (Seekers for truth should examine the above notations.)

"Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field [Josephus said this prophecy was fulfilled by Tarnius Ruphus, A.D. 70], and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house [temple] as the high places in the forest. But in the latter days the mountain of Jehovah's house shall be established," etc. (Mic. 3: 12; 4: 1). Mic. 4: 6: "In that day, saith Jehovah, will I assemble that which is lame, and I will gather that which is driven away, and that which I have afflicted [Jews]; . . . I will make that which was cast off a strong nation, and Jehovah will reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth even forever." God scattered them A.D. 70, but since 1918 he is "assembling them," and will till one hundred and forty-four thousand are redeemed. (See Rev. 14.) Verse 8: "And thou, O tower of the flock [Mount Zion], the hill of the daughter of Zion, to thee it shall come, yea, the former dominion shall come, the kingdom of the daughter of Jerusalem." (Old Jerusalem destroyed A.D. 70, and this is to be "the daughter," or a new Jerusalem.)

"When the Lord shall build up Zion, then shall he return in glory." (Ps. 102: 16.)

"When the Son of man comes in the glory of the Father, . . . then shall he sit on the throne of his glory." (Matt. 25: 32.) Take an analysis of the word "then" in the above.

In Mic. 4: 8 he promises the Israelites their "former dominion," which was an independent government, protected by God; but from B.C. 606 till 1918 they were tributary to Babylon, Grecia, Medo-Persia, Rome till A.D. 70, then "among all nations," and hated of all nations till 1918 their "redemption draweth nigh." "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, know that the kingdom of God is nigh. . . . The same generation will not pass till all be fulfilled." (Luke 21: 24-33, Greek.)

It seems that Israel was blinded in part, but a "redeemer shall come to Zion, after God causes them to return, and build the waste places, and he shall turn ungodliness from Jacob." And he will plant them in the land of Israel, and they shall no more be plucked up." There is no use for Protestants to fuss about who will be "the bride-church," for Isa. 52: 8, etc., shows God will return to Jerusalem and will "redeem Jerusalem;" and chapter 54 shows those redeemed Israelites will be the "bride."

There are thirty-three prophesies that show God will "cause the ransomed to return to Zion," etc.; but Ezek. 37 and 38 chapters show that Bolshevich army will go and try to rob those "returned Jews;" then God will make himself known to "many nations," and miraculously destroy that robber army; and this is to occur while these same "returned" are living. So, brethren of both Advocates, watch your dallies, and when that army starts, then watch and see God "work his strange work."

I thank the editors of the Advocates for their space and courage of the truth, and ask: If both editors will open their columns for an investigation of the "Sunday-Sabbath question," for each to place an X in this (). (Gospel Advocate to select their own champion; Greek scholar preferred.)

T. J. MARRS, Dale, Okla.

REPLY BY H. W. JONES.

For vagueness, obscurity, and sheer imagination, Marrs' last caps climax! Hard telling what he means. He wouldn't say whether flesh-blood bodies compose second-advent kingdom or not. To answer "yes" or "no" would ruin his theory.

Marrs says "kingdom comes after beast is destroyed;" but Dan. 2 with Dan. 7 shows God's kingdom existed before "the ten horns" and boasting "little horn." Christ was "King of kings" A.D. 96 (Rev. 17: 14); hence, kingdom existed then! Thus Marrs against Daniel, reason, Revelation! Too bad!

Micah prophesied 750-710 B.C. Nebuchadnezzar first destroyed Jerusalem 588 B.C. Titus destroyed Jerusalem A.D. 70, but that nowise proves God's kingdom yet future. Micah prophesied against Jerusalem (chapter 3: 12); and chapter 4 begins another line of prophecy, showing the mountain (government) of Jehovah's house (church) established in Jerusalem above other governments—completely fulfilled Pentecost day (Acts 2). Peter identifies Pentecost as "last days," and "peoples" did "flow into it"—Christ's kingdom—established then! Thanks, Marrs, for those references. Ps. 102: 16 (R. V.) against Marrs. Thanks again!

Matt. 25: 31-46 shows final judgment takes place when Christ comes again, also resurrection. (Luke 11: 31, 32; John 5: 28, 29.) Marrs cannot twist Matt. 25 into earthly throne and reign at Jerusalem. Never!

Luke 21: 24-33 doesn't even say what Marrs pretends to quote. He tries to justify his pretended quotation behind "Greek." That's too thin, Marrs; you're no "Greek scholar" capable of making translations; your English betrays you!

Isa. 52: 7-10 ruins Marrs' theory. Paul shows Christ fulfilled that (A.D. 33) by actually quoting verse 7 in Rom. 10: 12-15. So Jehovah "returned to Jerusalem"—"redeemed Jerusalem," spiritually eighteen hundred and eighty-nine years ago when God's kingdom was established there! And, worse for Marrs, Paul actually quotes from Isa. 54 and explains its fulfillment in Christ at first advent. (Gal. 4: 23-29.) Christians are married to Christ. (Rom. 7: 4.) The church is "bride." (John 3: 28, 29; Rev. 22: 16, 17.) So Marrs vs. Scripture again!

"But Ezek. 37 and 38 chapters show Bolshevich army," etc. That's absurdity's limit—such visionary perverting, amazing imagination! May he turn from such before everlastingly too late! The few scriptures Marrs introduced are no semblance of proof that a kingdom will be established "soon" (or late) on this old earth! I showed Christians now in God's kingdom, and no interim between present kingdom and "heavenly kingdom." (1 Cor. 15: 23, 24.)

Also showed: (1) God's kingdom came A.D. 33, "if Christ by Spirit of God cast out demons" (Matt. 12: 28), which (2) he certainly did. (3) Therefore, God's kingdom surely came eighteen hundred and eighty-nine years ago! Marrs didn't notice that, nor scarcely any other scriptural argument I made. Why? He couldn't overthrow them, of course!

"The kingdom of God"—Christ's spiritual government over his church, on earth (Mark 1: 14, 15; Rom. 14: 17), prepares us for "the heavenly kingdom," with glorified, spiritual bodies, after resurrection. (1 Cor. 15; 2 Pet. 1; Rev. 21.) Marrs jumbled into confusion these clearly distinguished realms.

I have shown Christ will come "with holy angels in flaming fire" (Matt. 25: 30-46; 2 Thess. 1: 7, 8)—"with voice of archangel and trump of God" (1 Thess. 4: 16)—"dead raised" (1 Cor. 15: 20-24)—"living and dead judged" (2 Tim. 4: 1)—"saints gathered and glorified" (2 Thess. 2: 1; 1 Cor. 15: 50-53; Phil. 3: 20, 21)—"saints caught up with Lord in air" (1 Thess. 4: 17)—"wicked punished" (2 Thess. 1: 7-10; Matt. 25: 41-46)—"earth and its works burned up" (Heb. 1: 10-12; 2 Pet. 3: 10)—"new heavens, new earth" (2 Pet. 3: 10-13; Rev. 21)—"death destroyed" (1 Cor. 15: 25, 26)—then "heavenly kingdom"—Christ delivers up his reign. Hence, no place for another kingdom on this old earth, and vain to expect it! Second advent and resurrection last events before judgment day. (Heb. 9: 27, 28.)

I have called thoughts, things, and expressions by their right names without any malice toward Marrs; but "I hate every false way." (Ps. 119: 104; 2 Cor. 2: 17; 4: 2; 10: 5.)

As to another debate in both Advocates will say: Marrs proposed to "open Bible Advocate to discuss Sunday-Sabbath question" with me without our paper publishing it. But "Greek scholar preferred"—eh? Well, Jones has plenty "Greek" (though little) for Marrs, and many English arguments he cannot meet, as he failed to do in this debate.

Whence Our Sorrows?

BY H. C. FLEMING.

God made the earth for the abode of man. All was pure, good, and very good; but man, not being satisfied with it, tried to improve it by his own notions. But behold the result! Robberies, murders, blasphemies, lying, drunkenness, adulteries, fornications, wars, devastations, famines, pestilences, and great heaps of ruins throughout the whole earth!

All men desire joy, peace, and happiness. Then why not seek for such where it is to be found? Any injury done by one to another is the beginning of destruction of joy, peace, and happiness. The greater the injury, the greater the sorrow; and it multiplies continually, extending from one to another in supreme sorrows; its influence increases faster than the swiftest current of a raging stream of unfounded waters turned loose down an inclined plane. "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!" (James 3: 5.)

If we could trace the influence of one single sin to the end of its course, what a mountain of evils we would find! It is beyond our power to so trace it, but it exists all the same, and its evil work continues.

If we have been guilty of starting such an avalanche of compounded evils, what an accountability we will have to face when we stand before the great white throne!

As all have sinned, what a great mountain of sorrows is in store for all the finally impenitent! Is it not time to heed the warning of the prophet Hosea to Ephraim: "Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy; break up your fallow ground: for it is time to seek the Lord, till he come and rain righteousness upon you?" (Hos. 10: 12.)

We all have need to pray to God to keep us from the results of our own follies, and this he will do if we turn to him in obedience and righteousness. O, thank God time and again for his promises by which we can escape final condemnation for sin!

"The End of the Charge."

BY S. H. HALL.

Let us listen to Paul as he tells us one of the greatest truths in God's revelation to man: "But the end of the charge is love out of a pure heart and a good conscience and faith unfeigned." (1 Tim. 1: 5.) This scripture can mean nothing except that the whole aim and end of all the matchless apostle had said to Timothy was to impress upon him the fact that the one purpose of the religion of our Lord is to establish in man love, this love coming from a pure heart and a good conscience and a faith that is unfeigned. Of course there is love even when the heart is not pure and the conscience is not good, but it is love for the wrong things in life. The love our Lord would have us lay hold on is begotten in the heart. "We love, because he first loved us." Have you looked this scripture squarely in the face? (See 1 John 4: 19.) The reason some of us do not love more is because we have never taken the time to consider God's love for us. It is our nature to love those who love us. The love that others have for us begets in us love for them. "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is begotten of God, and knoweth God." (1 John 4: 7.) You can never force yourself to love God. You must study him and come to know him in his love for you. "He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." (Verse 8.) When you know God, you will love him, for to see God in Christ striving to save us begets love in our hearts for him. Christ said much when he declared: "And this is life eternal, that they should know thee the only true God, and him whom thou didst send, even Jesus Christ." (John 17: 3.)

Let us look at each thought carefully:

1. Love out of a pure heart—a heart purified by obedience to the truth. "Seeing ye have purified your souls in your obedience to the truth unto unfeigned love of the brethren." (1 Pet. 1: 22.) The heart has a love that compels obedience. "And hereby we know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." (1 John 2: 3, 4.)

2. A good conscience. This we can have only when we are conscious of having done nothing knowingly against God or man. You can look every man squarely in the face, with no confusion in your own eyes, just because you know there is nothing in your heart that would cause you or has caused you to say one word or do one thing to hurt or harm the man into whose eyes you are now looking.

3. Faith unfeigned. This is just faith, sure enough, and not that make-believe faith that many have. The love we claim we have for the brethren must be unfeigned. "Let love be without hypocrisy," says Paul. Let the faith that we claim we have in God, Christ, and the Bible be just what we claim for it and not a pretense. I cannot have much confidence in the claims of some that they believe that God is, for the simple reason, if they did, they would not be so careless in the way they live. It is hard for me to believe that even some fathers and mothers really believe their children have souls to be saved, because if they did really believe what the Bible says about life and death, they would be more concerned about their children.

May God help us, is my prayer, in letting the end and aim of our Lord be established in our souls—viz., a heart that loves both God and man; a heart that has a conscience void of offense toward God and man, that knows you act as you should toward both; and a heart that is free from pretence, that lets the outside of your life show what is really on the inside. Such a heart gives you joy and hope, and it makes of us men and women of strength and grace.

To win and hold men, the church must lift high the standard of what it means to be a Christian.—Exchange.

At Home and Abroad

G. R. Bethurum preached at Belmont Church, this city, last Sunday, morning and evening.

Armstrong Traylor is in a meeting at Hugo, Okla. Crowds are large and the interest is growing. No additions to date.

O. M. Reynolds, Plainview, Texas, says: "The Gospel Advocate is filled with edifying matter these days. Long may it live."

W. M. Oakley preached for the Foster Street congregation, this city, on Sunday, and reports two fine services. He goes next Lord's day to Twelfth Avenue.

Jarratt L. Smith preached at Eighth Avenue, North, this city, last Lord's day, both morning and evening, with good attendance. He preaches at Greenbrier, Tenn., next Lord's day.

W. N. Carter writes from Durant, Okla., June 7: "I am at this writing in a very fine meeting at Durant. The meeting is ten days old, with thirty additions, and still they come."

From A. A. Bunner, 7808 Pope Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, June 5: "I preached yesterday, morning and night, at Marietta, Ohio. Large and appreciative audiences at both services."

From W. F. Lemmons, Little Rock, Ark., June 5: "I preached to good crowds at Alicia yesterday. I shall begin a meeting on Wednesday at Sweet Home, four miles from Little Rock, and at Blox, Texas, on June 17."

From J. C. Mosley, Whitwell, Tenn., June 6: "I am at Glade Creek; baptized a lady—a Baptist. I am going home for a few days and do some teaching in my own county. I baptized four at Beaver Hill and one at Newton."

O. C. Lambert preached at the Tennessee State Prison, where he goes each Sunday morning at 9 A.M. This gives him time to preach at other places at the regular time. He was with the Russell Street congregation Sunday night.

From Will J. Cullum, Rockwood, Tenn., June 12: "I recently closed a twelve-days' meeting at this place, with six added to the congregation—five by primary obedience and one from the Christian Church. I began at Dayton yesterday."

From Charles F. Hardin, 1268 Northwest Street, Jackson, Miss.: "Brethren, please notify me of any members living anywhere in this State that you know of, and I will see them if opportunity permits. I am doing my best to follow Brother Cayce's plan of work."

Through an oversight it was announced last week in the "At Home and Abroad" Department that H. W. Wrye taught a class in the Bible in the County High School at Pikeville, Tenn., the past year. This is a mistake. The class was taught by a regular teacher in the school.

From Harvey W. Riggs, Tompkinsville, Ky., June 5: "I am preaching twice each month at Tompkinsville and giving the remainder of my time to the county. The church at Tompkinsville is in very good condition, and we hope to be able to give a good report of work done this year."

Frank D. Ellis, Columbus, Miss., says: "I am handing you herewith my check for two dollars to cover subscription for another year for the best religious paper that has come under my observation. I do not understand why it is necessary to urge members of the church to subscribe for the paper."

From R. E. Wright, Los Angeles, Cal., June 3: "I am glad to report that the work at Central church of Christ, 1720 South Flower Street, continues to grow week after week. Five more were added to our congregation last Sunday. The future was never brighter for a great meeting in this city."

From J. W. Brents, Springfield, Mo., June 5: "I recently held a good meeting with home forces at Broadway and Madison Church. There were eleven additions. Since the meeting closed there have been five more added. I have just closed a meeting at Rogersville. No additions. Had a good hearing, however."

From Charles F. Hardin, Laurel, Miss., June 5: "I am now in a good meeting here in Laurel, a city of eighteen thousand population wherein a Christian preacher has never preached. I am doing real good, as the people hear the gospel with gladness. I am sure to leave a congregation here of about thirty or more members."

From Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, June 5: "We have just closed a meeting with home forces. While we were hindered in many ways, yet we had good crowds most of the time. Two were baptized, two were restored, and the church was strengthened. We expect more results later."

Ben West, North Fort Worth, Texas, writes: "Sunday (June 4) was a fine day at the Northside Church, with two additions, one a Baptist. The church is in fine condition. After more than two years' service with this congregation, I have resigned the work here, to take effect on September 1. I will go to a new field or labor with one or more congregations in reach of Fort Worth."

Andrew Perry writes from Belington, W. Va., June 7: "My meeting at Mount Liberty closed night before last, having continued over two Lord's days, with seven baptized and four restored. I began here last night with a good audience and will continue indefinitely. The total result of my trip in West Virginia is forty-seven baptized, six restored, and one by membership, making fifty-four. I have several more meetings before me."

W. T. Hines, Braman, Okla., writes as follows: "Another great man has quit the fight in this world to go to his reward. What I am, though it be little, I owe to J. A. Harding for not allowing me to leave Potter Bible College when I begged him to. I am sure others will write through the columns about him, but I am bound to express this. I had two additions at Wynn Chapel, Okla., last Lord's day (June 4), and one at Blackwell, Okla."

We have the following communication from C. C. McQuiddy, Forest Hill, La.: "I closed an eight-days' meeting at Alco, La., on June 3, with two additions to the one body. This is my second effort at this place. We now have twelve there who worship 'as it is written,' and I will visit them once a month for a while. Louisiana is a great mission field. Would you like to have fellowship in extending the kingdom in this needy State?"

From G. W. Riggs, Los Angeles, Cal.: "E. C. Fuqua is preaching for the Sichel Street Church, of Los Angeles. The brethren are well pleased with his work and the congregation is growing. He and I are holding a tent meeting at Alhambra, a suburb of Los Angeles, with good attendance and interest. Any who may desire information about the church or other things of this field may address me at 3319 Barbee Street, Los Angeles, Cal."

From Thomas E. Milholland, Vernon, Texas, June 5: "The outlook here is most pleasing and hopeful. 'A great door and effectual is opened to us.' I am praying for wisdom and grace sufficient for the task. Foy E. Wallace, Jr., who has been here for some two or three years, is loved and esteemed by the church here for his work's sake. So is Brother Teddie (the singer). He is a great worker. They are out in the evangelistic field now."

Notice of the thirty-first commencement of David Lipscomb College appears elsewhere in this issue. The Gospel Advocate extends congratulations and wishes to commend the excellent work being done at this institution. Under the administration of Horace S. Lipscomb it has forged to the front and occupies a place among the foremost of educational institutions. The catalogue for 1922-23 is just off the press and will be sent upon request to those who are interested. The next session begins on Tuesday, September 26.

From A. D. Dies, Oakman, Ala., June 7: "The meeting at Twenty-second Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn., closed on Sunday night. There were sixteen additions to the congregation—fourteen by baptism and two by restoration. On arriving home I found my boy very weak, he having been sick so long. Wife is some better. We ask the prayers of all God's people that we may be able to bear the great burden now on us. The Lord willing, I will begin a mission meeting at Quinton, Ala., next Lord's day. From there I go to Speigners, another mission point."

From C. M. Stubblefield, Paducah, Ky., June 9: "N. B. Hardeman, of Henderson, Tenn., is with us in a meeting which began last Sunday and which is to continue another week. From the beginning all have been present who could be accommodated with seats. According to a long-established custom, the meeting is being conducted under a tent on a lot far removed from the church building. Here many who could not be induced to go to the church house attend regularly. There have been only five additions, but we are confident of many others before the close."

From Willie Hunter, Livingston, Tenn., Route 1, June 6: "John Pendergrass preached two fine discourses for us at Holly Springs on the fourth Sunday in May to very good-sized crowds. I preached three times at Willow Grove, in Clay County, on last Saturday night and Sunday. These were the first services in their new meetinghouse. We had large crowds, and one aged man was baptized. They have a splendid house that will seat some five hundred people. Marion Harris was under promise to be with me in the dedication service, but feeble health prevented. I promised to visit them again in July."

From S. W. Bell, Sedalia, Mo., June 7: "It certainly does my heart good to associate with and preach for people like the good brethren and sisters of the Hallsville church, in Boone County. But to hear some of the visitors from some of the adjoining counties talk, as well as some from other congregations, it makes one feel as if he should like to be many instead of one. One man living in Howard County said that he lived many miles from any church house, and had been living there for some six years. The church which I am visiting is one that 'swarmed' from the 'progressives' some six years ago."

J. W. Wescoat, Amarillo, Texas, Route 1, writes under date of June 5: "Please find check for two dollars for the Gospel Advocate one year. It is a great help to me when I am able to sit up and read. I have been confined to the bed for three years; cannot walk or stand on my feet. I am not expecting to live long enough to read the paper for the year, but my little granddaughter, Frances, who was baptized last night, will take a delight in reading it. I kindly ask all the readers of the Advocate to pray for me that I may have the great privilege of dying in Christ." We sympathize with Brother Wescoat in his illness and trust his last days may be pleasant.

From J. R. Bradley, Elora, Tenn., June 7: "Our little congregation worshipping at Elora seems to be holding its own under the ministry of J. D. Jones, of Huntsville, Ala., assisted by our elders. Brother Jones is certainly an able man. He rarely ever reads the Scriptures he uses while preaching, but quotes them correctly. He preaches for us monthly, also at Taft monthly. Merrimac and West Huntsville are two of his monthly appointments. Brother Jones tells me that he would like to be engaged in meetings all the summer and fall, but does not have the time all taken. Write J. D. Jones, Wells Avenue, Huntsville, Ala., if you need a man for your meeting."

From Leland H. Knight, Fort Smith, Ark., June 5: "Our prayer meeting at the Park Hill Church has taken on new life. Last Wednesday night our subject was 'Christian Duty.' Several of the brethren made short talks, after which we sang and engaged in prayer. Brethren, I am sure we do not pray enough. All were strengthened by the prayer service, which is our nearest communion with God. We should ask of God his care and protection as we journey through this life. At the morning service on Lord's day a young woman made the good confession, and in the presence of a large crowd after the evening service was buried with her Lord by baptism. Let us not be weary in well-doing."

J. G. Malphurs writes from Clarksville, Tenn., June 8: "I desire to commend the articles by Brother Srygley on 'The Commission on Unity,' which is in truth a commission on division. In this undermining way the Payne book is scattered in the hopes of putting the organ in churches which are worshipping in the New Testament way. I also hope Brother Smith will keep before us the seed of digression. We need the light on the subject. The work on the meetinghouse in Clarksville is progressing quite well. The church at Big Rock is to dedicate their new house on June 18. J. P. Prevatt and I will start a meeting at Indian Mound next Lord's day. This is a mission, and we expect to get good results at this place."

From Tice Elkins, Fort Worth, Texas, June 5: "The work moves along at Southside Church in spite of all opposition. One baptized last night, two took membership last Sunday. I was called to Greenville two weeks ago to look after the digressive pastor there, Graham McMurray, who had declared his intention to pay some attention to the claims of the church of Christ regarding music and societies, but he never showed up after I reached the city. I preached for them a week after R. D. Henley was compelled to go home from the meeting he was in at the time, and we had a profitable and pleasant time. Brother Henley is a young man, but he is a fine preacher and not afraid. There were some twenty additions to the church during the meeting."

S. W. Colson writes from the Florida field: "On Friday night, June 2, D. A. Martin went to Flemington for four sermons, and was very much appreciated by his hearers. On Lord's day, June 4, Leon Humphries preached morning and evening. On the first Sunday in June I preached in Ocala. I intend to preach here the first Sunday in each month. J. O. Barnes has changed his field of labor. For a season he will work in and around Miami. There will be a 'get-together' meeting in Umatilla, beginning on Saturday morning, July 29, including the fifth Sunday. It will do you good to attend and get acquainted with the brethren. Those from a distance should write J. E. Beasley, Umatilla, Fla., and they will be met by some one who will give them a home while here."

From B. C. Goodpasture, Atlanta, Ga., June 6: "Hugh E. Garrett began a tent meeting at Chickamauga, Ga., last Sunday (June 4). At the evening service one made the good confession, and was baptized 'the same hour of the night.' The prospects for the meeting are fine. The meeting at West End Avenue closed on Sunday night. It rained almost daily during the entire three weeks of the meeting. There were, from all sources, thirty-four additions. Twenty-three were baptized, five were restored, two took membership, two came from the Baptists and two from the Christian Church. The brethren at West End Avenue are true yokefellows. Everything is being put in readiness for the revival at South Pryor Street. S. H. Hall, now of Nashville, Tenn., but formerly of this city, will do the preaching. His many friends in Atlanta will be glad to hear his inspiring and powerful sermons. The meeting starts on June 11."

David Lipscomb College Commencement.

The commencement exercises of David Lipscomb College, which occurred last week, were marked by some very excellent entertainments. The first was a musical number given by the members of the Senior Class. The excellence of so many beautiful voices gave evidence of splendid training. One of the largest crowds ever assembled in Harding Hall was present on this occasion. The next evening a certificate recital in Expression drew very favorable comment from the audience. This department has grown by very rapid strides in the last few years. Brother C. M. Pullias, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., delivered the commencement sermon on Sunday, and in the evening a special song service was held. Monday was Alumni Day, at which time Brother Ben Harding, son of the beloved J. A. Harding, one of the founders, was alumni orator. He made a very strong address. Miss Mary Frizzell was the poet, and responded in a very pleasing manner. At 6 P.M. ninety-seven of the loyal alumni sat down to a sumptuous banquet. Good will and fellowship pervaded the entire proceedings and a splendid menu was enjoyed. Music was interspersed between the courses by the Schumann Quartet, composed of Charles R. Brewer, Truman Ward, Byron Hughes, and Ralph Sowell. Readings were given by Miss Laurine Proffitt and Miss Minnie Jordan. Brother J. E. Acuff presided as toastmaster in a most pleasing manner. Many friends and former students from a distance were present. Eighteen of last year's graduating class of twenty-three were present.

The school year has been a very successful one. While the enrollment was not as high as in former years, being one hundred and fifty-three, yet the quality was much superior and a better spirit of unity and coöperation was evidenced.
