J. C. Hollis, Bonham, Texas, March 16: "Our meeting will begin on the second Sunday in June and will continue three full weeks, including four Sundays. J. E. Thornberry, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., will do the preaching, and B. M. Taylor, of Irving, Texas, will direct the singing. Brother Thornberry is to assist in the meeting at Leonard while he is in this section."

R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, March 16: "On yesterday the Bible classes were well attended. The preacher preached three times—twice at the church in Terrell and once at Peotry, eight miles from Terrell. At the morning hour there were six to identify themselves with the congregation in Terrell. We aim to begin a meeting the last Sunday in the month, to last two weeks."

V. E. Gregory preached for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. There were four hundred and eighty-nine present in the Bible study, and it is expected that the five-hundred-mark will be reached next Lord's day, at which time a review of the lessons 2or the quarter will be given by F. B. Srygley, who will also preach at eleven o'clock and at night.

Jesse P. Sewell, Fort Worth, Texas, March 3: "Our work with the Southside Church is going on very nicely. The audiences are increasing at all services. The interest is good in all of the work. There are some additions to the congregation all along. There are fifteen congregations in the city, and the work as a whole is going forward. The Gospel Advocate is fine. Keep pushing ahead. Only the pure gospel can save the world."

C. W. De Armond, Drakesboro, Ky., March 17: "I preached at Shiloh last Lord's-day morning and at Cane Rock at night. A man sixty-nine years old made the good confession and was baptized. He came from the Baptist Church after having been a member for forty-four years. This brings the number of additions up to forty-nine in that section since I have been working with them, a little over three months. Prospects are good for several more additions during the year."

David Thompson, Mayfield, Ky., March 15: "The work in this part of the Master's vineyard has been hindered somewhat by the 'flu,' but it seems to be on the up grade again. I made my monthly visit to the Spring Creek congregation on March 7, 8. I held two services at the church building, preached once in a private home and once in a schoolhouse in a neighboring community. This congregation not only sends its preacher out to these places, but goes with him and backs him up in the work. Two good services here at home yesterday."

F. O. Howell, Jackson, Tenn.: "Our meeting closed here, after fifteen days' duration, with seven baptized and the church edified and encouraged. Price Billingsley, of McMinnville, Tenn., did the preaching, and it is useless to say he did it well. Brother Billingsley is neither afraid nor ashamed to declare the whole counsel of God to saint and sinner alike, but has the courage of his convictions to tell the truth as it appears to him, regardless of his personal interests. May God give us more men with unselfish hearts to preach the gospel of his Son."

T. C. Little, Fayetteville, Tenn., March 17: "I will celebrate my seventy-seventh birthday by reporting to the Gospel Advocate some of my work. I preached last Sunday at Fayetteville, my home congregation, to a large audience. There was one confession and baptism. My regular appointments are: First Sunday, at Howell Hill; second Sunday, Corder's Crossroads; fourth Sunday, Harms—all in Lincoln County. I will hold protracted meetings at all of these places this year, the Lord willing. Congratulations to the dear old Advocate for the work it is doing for the Master."

J. A. Hudson, Memphis, Tenn., March 10: "The report of the treasurer of the Harbert Avenue Church for the year 1924 revealed that the five hundred members of this church contributed $16,625.24. This amount included missionary work, charity, burial of the indigent dead, church advertisements, and numerous other things. Our budget for 1925 calls for equally as much. The business that is placed on the financial side of the Harbert Avenue Church I have never seen equaled. Its operation is silent, precise, clocklike. It is reduced to methods that are at no point unscriptural. Our new building is nearing completion. Brother Hardeman will conduct a meeting in it as soon as it is ready."

Frank Grammer, Mena, Ark., March 2: "I met with the church at Cave Springs yesterday. Brother Martin, of Rogers, Ark., preached. Two made the good confession and were baptized 'the same hour.' This was my second time to meet with the brethren at Cave Springs. I find some very loyal brethren there. They are planning now for me to teach a vocal-music school for them. I will also teach an eighteen-days' normal music school for the church at Clarita, Okla., beginning on April 13, and one at Paxton, Texas, assisted by Will W. Slater. Ample arrangements will be made for boarding students. Brethren, write me at Mena, Ark., if you want me to sing in your meetings or to teach a school."

W. F. Lemons writes, March 9: "Please announce that my post-office address is changed from Nashville, Tenn., General Delivery, to Pecan Gap, Texas, Box 245. Arrangements have been made by which I am to work with the church here at least half time. We have just closed a meeting of one week's duration. Good interest, but no additions. We shall work hard to build up the cause in this section. Those interested in the Montana mission work will remember this change. About thirty-five dollars of the one hundred dollars necessary to get Brother Sherdee back to Montana from Abilene Christian College has been contributed. Brethren, help us with this fund, so we can get him back to his field to work among his race as soon as he graduates, which is close at hand. Act now. Send your check to me at once."

R. V. Cawthon began a meeting at Fort Pierce, Fla., last Sunday.

C. E. W. Dorris preached at Joe Johnston Avenue, this city, last Sunday.

E. A. Elam preached at Old Union, in Sumner County, Tenn., last Lord's day.

F. W. Smith preached two splendid sermons at Franklin, Tenn., last Lord's day.

George W. Graves preached at Lewisburg, Tenn., last Lord's day, and had a good hearing.

Leslie G. Thomas preached last Lord's day, morning and evening, at Pilcher Avenue, this city.

H. Leo Boles preached at Foster Street, this city, last Sunday. Two were baptized Sunday night.

W. N. Ridge preached last Saturday night at Shroptown and on Sunday morning at Olivet, both near Mc-Ewen, Tenn.

F. B. Srygley preached to two splendid audiences at Smyrna, Tenn., last Lord's day. Brother Srygley is doing some of the best preaching of his life.

Married, at the home of the bride, on the Murfreesboro Road, Tuesday, March 17, 1925, Lawrence Alvin Wright and Ruth Blair, James A. Allen officiating.

John W. Kurfees, Winston-Salem, N. C., March 13, to F. W. Smith: "I enjoy all of your articles in the Gospel Advocate, but especially did I enjoy the one last week on Evolution."

W. A. Record, of Paducah, Ky., is representing the Gospel Advocate among the churches in Union County, Ky. We will appreciate any courtesies the brethren show Brother Record.

J. E. Wainwright. Corpus Christi, Texas, March 16: "Four confessions, four identifications, and four restorations during the Corpus Christi meeting. Foy E. Wallace, Sr., did the preaching."

H. M. Phillips began a meeting last Lord's day with the Lischey Avenue congregation, this city. The meetinghouse is located at 1310 Lischey Avenue. Take a Meridian car. All are cordially invited.

J. C. Mosley, Moore, S. C., March 17: "I am now in a meeting at this place. There is a Baptist church near here claiming nine hundred members, but we are getting some of them to be Christians only."

C. A. Buchanan, Venus, Texas, March 17: "The work here grows continuously. Our attendance now is three times what it was a year ago. We are trying to teach and practice the complete will of God."

A. S. Landis, Macon, Ga., March 16: "Two interesting services yesterday. One addition from the Christian Church. We will begin a tent meeting here, the Lord willing, the third Lord's day in April."

S. H. Biggerstaff, Antlers, Okla., March 17: "Last Lord's day I closed a good meeting at Caddo, Okla., with thirteen additions to the one body—nine by baptism and four restorations. I go next to Darwin, near this place."

W. A. Watson, Hope, New Mexico, March 16: "I have just finished reading F. W. Smith's comment on T. P. Gore. I shall see that several of my neighbors read it. Our country here is full of just such stuff. More of such writings by Brother Smith would do good."

H. N. Rutherford, Jacksonville, Fla., March 20: "N. B. Hardeman preached two weeks, beginning on March 1 and closing on March 15. These were the first services held in our new church building, located at Margaret and Myra Streets, facing Riverside Park. Nine were added during the meeting."

Ben West, Sinton, Texas, March 18: "I have just closed a great meeting in Galveston, with nineteen added—nine baptized. My wife taught large Bible classes of women at day services, and at night we had large crowds. I spoke at the medical college of the State University, John Sealy Hospital, Y. W. C. A., department stores, and offices. The work in Sinton is fine."

R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., March 21: "I closed a nine-days' meeting at Lecanto, Fla., with twenty-two additions. Of this number, twenty-one were baptized. Three had been members of the Baptist Church; one, a member of the Methodist Church. One of the elders, who also is a charter member, told me that this congregation is forty years old and has never had a single word of discord or division since its beginning."

The congregation at Old Hickory, Jacksonville, Tenn., commonly known as the Powder Plant, cordially invites all members of the church who move to Old Hickory to meet and worship with them. The church meets on the main boulevard opposite the Fire Hall. Services every Lord's day, with Bible study at 10 A.M. and preaching at 11 A.M. and 7:30 P.M. For further information, address T. J. Warden, Williams Printing Company, Nashville, Tenn.

C. E. Holt, Florence, Ala., March 17: "The debate at Columbia, Tenn., between J. J. Walker and G. C. Brewer on the use of instrumental music in Christian worship was conducted in a very fine spirit and was greatly enjoyed by the writer, who attended every session. Brother Brewer is a man of power and courage and unbounded faith in the word of God. Brother Walker is a strong man on his side of the question. There should be good results from the debate."

Miss Emma L. Martin, Wilmington, N. C., March 1:
"We are thirteen in number, and all faithful. Three young girls are among our number. But there are four heads of families, and all but one of them are taking the Gospel Advocate. I have read it from childhood, a fact for which I often thank God. I am so glad you publish selections from Brother David Lipscomb's pen. He was a grand man of God, and his influence only eternity can reveal. I pray that all succeeding generations may have as good instruction through the pages of the Advocate as we are getting now."

L. D. Perkins, Armona, Cal., March 18: "On the third Lord's day in February I was at Bakersfield, Cal., and spoke in the morning and afternoon. I was with the congregation at Tulare recently, and a nice audience greeted me. I also had the pleasure of hearing F. H. Stringham at Tulare, He preached two splendid sermons. On the second Lord's day I was with the Nevada Avenue congregation at Fresno. Last Lord's day I was with them and listened to a splendid sermon by J. A. Craig, who lives at Fresno. A letter from E. C. Fuqua, Los Angeles, conveys the sad news of Sister Fuqua's sick condition, and he will appreciate the prayers of all for her recovery."

Sarah M. Bennett, Leland, Miss., March 18, to E. A. Elam: "I feel that I should write you, telling you how much we appreciate your Bible Lessons—that is, 'Elam's Notes;' also how much help they are to us in our worship in this place. We meet in the City Hall. I have said numbers of times that we did not appreciate your writing as we should. We now have your third book; and since we have Bible lessons on Sunday nights, I wish to say the references you give are very helpful. I would not part with one of these books. Your 'Notes' and the dear old Gospel Advocate mean so much to me here, where I seldom hear a true gospel sermon. On the first Lord's day in March our little band passed its second anniversary in its efforts to worship God as 'it is written.' We need your assistance in your writing as well as your prayers for our success."

R. E. Griffith, Lott, Texas, March 16: "The churches of Christ in this country are coming to the front in their work. My home congregation (Lott) has just completed its new and commodious place of worship. The congregation at Rosebud, twelve miles south of us, has also increased its usefulness by enlarging its house. The Liberty congregation, seven miles southeast, recently moved to Travis, where there is a good house, built by our brethren years ago, but which, because all the faithful workers moved away, has been standing idle. It will now serve these brethren to good advantage. The church at Marlin, the county seat of Falls County, has also made rapid growth. There are only a few brethren there, but they are faithful and worthy. R. S. Stanley, a faithful man and preacher, is helping the Marlin brethren by preaching for them occasionally."

DENOMINATIONALISM.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

The Florida Baptist Witness takes the Christian Standard to task in a recent issue for making something like the following statement:

A CONTRADICTION IN TERMS.

"Denominationalism is apostasy. Falling away from the purity and unity of the New Testament church is falling away from Christ. Those who are engaged in gathering up on Bible grounds the wanderers of the dis-persion are ministers of reconciliation." Think of it! All this from the Christian Standard, a Campbellite paper. Then the writer of the above statement proceeds to give an illustration. He tells us that a certain business man, a Baptist deacon in a certain city which he names, found out that denominationalism is an enigma and a stumbling-block; that he searched the Scriptures and discovered that sectarianism is not of God, and made up his mind to abandon man-made churches and get back to the church of

It will be noted that the Baptist Witness quotes about four lines from the Standard and proceeds to tell something like what that paper said. Why did not the Baptist Witness allow the Standard to tell it in its own words? It looks like the Baptist Witness was trying to hide something from its readers. "Then the writer of the above statement proceeds to give an illustration." Why was it necessary to say that he proceeds to give an illustration? I judge, if he gave an illustration, we would know he proceeded without his telling us that he did. editor has evidently learned to write to fill space. tells us that a certain business man, a Baptist deacon in a certain city which he names." If the Standard named the city, why did not the Baptist Witness give the name? He certainly was not trying to save space, because he could have given the name of the city with fewer words. As I remember the matter, the Standard gave the name of the Baptist deacon and the city. Why did not the Witness give both? This may be a good Baptist witness, but I like a witness that will tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. I confess I like the Baptist deacon on this point better than I do the Baptist Witness. This deacon "found out that denominationalism is an enigma and a stumblingblock," and by so doing I believe he outstripped both the Baptist Witness and the Christian Standard; for, as a matter of fact, it seems to me that both are using the enigma and the stumblingblock. These two papers remind me of the man who got drunk and decided that he was sober and all the rest were drunk. I know the deacon was right when he decided to give up "man-made churches and get back to the church of Christ." That is exactly what every one should do, and why the Baptist Witness should object to this is more than I can see. But it does object to it in very brisk language. Hear the gentleman on this point:

More fallacies could hardly be perpetrated in the same space than is found in the statement referred to above. We quite agree with the writer that "falling away from the purity and unity of the New Testament church is falling away from Christ." But never to our dying day do we expect to admit that the Campbellites constitute the church of Christ. If so, to say the least, there was a long interim when there was no church of Christ. We all believe that the church of Christ, or rather the churches of Christ, were established now well-nigh two thousand years ago. It is a well-known fact that there was no such sect as Campbellites, or "Christians" as they style themselves, until the days of Alexander Campbell, who was born in 1788 and died in 1866. We haven't the exact date before us of the beginning of his ministry or of his founding of this organization, but it must have been one hundred years ago. Thus it is apparent, if there was no church of Christ until the days of Alexander Campbell, that a long interim intervened. And think of it: "Those who are engaged in gathering back the wanderers of the dispersion are ministers of reconciliation." In other words, the men who enter in and disrupt and drag people out of other churches and into the Campbellite church are "ministers of reconciliation." Be that as it may, it must be said for them that they are adepts at this business. More fallacies could hardly be perpetrated in the same

The brother says: "Never till our dying day do we expect to admit that the Campbellites constitute the church of Christ." This would indicate that he might admit it on his dying day. If not, what does his dying day have to do with it? I judge, though, that "our dying day" was put in purely as a filler and that the gentleman means he never will do it. Well, no one asks him to make any such admission. He says: "We all believe that the church of Christ, or rather the churches of Christ, were established now well-nigh two thousand years ago?" Why say "the church of Christ, or rather the churches of Christ?" Would he try to make people believe that the church of Christ was never used in the singular? Jesus said, "Upon this rock I will build my church;" but he did not say, "Upon this rock I will build my church, or rather my churches." Does he not know that Christ built only one church? "But now they are many members, but one body." (1 Cor. 12: 20.) That one body is the church. "And gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." (Eph. 1: 22, 23.) Christ built only one church; and wherever the plural is used, it means a plurality of places where the church manifests itself rather than a plurality of churches. The seven churches in Asia are the seven localities where the church manifested itself. If the Baptist Church cannot be described by the singular number, it is not the church of the New Testament, for that church has been so described.

The brother says: "It is a well-known fact that there was no such sect as Campbellites, or 'Christians' as they style themselves, until the days of Alexander Campbell." The gentleman surely does not mean that there were no Christians till the days of Alexander Campbell. "And it came to pass, that even for a whole year they were gathered together with the church, and taught much people; and that the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." (Acts 11: 26.) This was long before Alexander Campbell lived, even if the brother has not "the exact date before us." "But if a man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God in this name." (1 Pet. 4: 16.) The brother further says: "Thus it is apparent, if there was no church of Christ until the days of Alexander Campbell, that a long interim intervened." I do not suppose that any well-informed man says that there was no church of Christ till the days of Alexander Campbell. There may have been a few men all along the ages like that Baptist deacon, that the Baptist Witness did not name, who searched the Scriptures and discovered that sectarianism is not of God and abandoned it and got back to the church of Christ. If there were any Christians back there, they were evidently in the church of Christ, because that church is composed of Christians. But if there were no Christians and they had the New Testament, they could have grown some. "Now the parable is this: the seed is the word of God." (Luke 8: 11.) If there were any good and honest hearts, they could have heard the word, which is the seed, and they could have held it fast and brought forth fruit with The result would have been the church of Christ. All this cry about people's having to be in the Baptist Church in order to be in the church of Christ before Alexander Campbell's day can have no influence over one who knows the Scriptures. It was no more necessary for one to be a Baptist in order to be in the church of Christ before Campbell's day than it is now. It is not necessary now to be a Baptist in order to be a Christian, and it never has been. Even if a man could be both a Baptist and a Christian at the same time, it would be unnecessary to be both. No one can be saved unless he is a Christian, but one can be saved and not be a Baptist. Then why be a Baptist? John was called the Baptist, but no one was ever called a Baptist in the New Testament. "Baptist" was not John's name, but only a title given him because he baptized, but now even women are called "Baptists" that never baptized any one.

I hope the Baptist Witness will stop worrying over the deacon that gave up his sectarianism and became only a Christian and go and do likewise. It is bad for people to enter in and disrupt other churches and drag them into the Campbellite church, but it seems to me it would be all right to drag them out of the Baptist Church, or drag the Baptist Church off of them, and allow them to be only Christians and belong to the body of Christ.

The Baptist Witness, still smarting over the loss of the deacon, further says:

In the illustration referred to above, about that Baptist deacon who found denominationalism an enigma and a stumblingblock and discovered that sectarianism is not of God, and made up his mind to abandon man-made churches and get back to the church of Christ, to this brother we extend our profound sympathy. Judging from what he said, we wonder how it happened he was so long in finding out that denominationalism is an enigma and a stumblingblock.

I do not believe that the deacon needs any sympathy for taking the course he has, but it seems to me he deserves encouragement in his laudable undertaking. It is a hard matter to live free from sectarianism, surrounded as the brother is by such sectarians as the Baptist Witness. It does seem strange that the brother was so long in finding out that denominationalism is "an enigma and a stumblingblock," but the Baptist Witness should remember that the deacon found it out before it did. That paper is still trying to use the "enigma and stumblingblock." If the Baptist Witness and the Christian Standard will both give up everything for which they have no scriptural authority and both do like the Baptist deacon claims he has done, it will be better for them, and a lot of enigmas and stumblingblocks will be cast into the dump heap and the world will be better off.

WHAT MUST BE BELIEVED IN ORDER TO BE SCRIPTURALLY BAPTIZED?

BY E. A. ELAM.

Nashville, Tenn., March 9, 1925.—Kind Brother: Please answer, in the Gospel Advocate, giving the scripture for baptizing any one upon the human confession, "God for Christ's sake hath pardoned my sins," as in the Gospel Advocate you said lately you would do this. I am asraid you are drifting, brother, from where you were twenty-five years ago when you and I lived in Wilson County.

Yours for one way,

J. P. LANIER.

In a recent talk to our school I said it is sin to misrepresent Satan, as much so as to misrepresent any one else. The sin is in misrepresenting another, whether a good man or a bad one. I added that Satan is mean enough without any attempt to make him appear worse by misrepresentation. To this I wish to add, that I make enough mistakes, at best, which may be clearly seen by all, without any added misrepresentations by any one. I wish I had never made any mistakes in teaching or in practice. But all I can do now is to regret them, repent of them, repair so far as possible any harm they have done, ask God and man to forgive me, and strive by the Lord's help to do better in the future.

But our good brother has made the mistake this time in what he says I wrote. He asks me to give "the scripture for baptizing any one upon the human confession, 'God for Christ's sake hath pardoned my sins;'" then adds, "as in the Gospel Advocate you said lately you would do this." There is no such scripture, and I regret to have to say I never said there is or that I would baptize one upon any such confession. I said: "If one should confess faith in Christ, turning in godly sorrow from sin, and demand baptism at my hand, saying that he believed God for Christ's sake had forgiven his sins, I would make an effort to teach him the truth, but would baptize him and teach him still further the truth. This is far from what our brother thinks and says I wrote. And he asks that his mistake be published to the world. Also, what I said was preceded by about one-half column on "the necessary prerequisites to baptism" and on "scriptural baptism, giving scriptural teaching on these subjects. With these necessary prerequisites to baptism" and what was said on "scriptural baptism" before me and before our readers also, I said what I did in regard to the one who has "confessed faith in Christ," who has repented of all sin, and who demands baptism at my hands, but who has not learned yet just at what point God pardons sins or bestows other blessings in continued obedience to him. I said, too, that before baptizing such a person I would make an effort to teach that one the truth and continue this effort after baptism.

To say the least, it is a misunderstanding of what I did say to take one expression of a sentence out of the sentence, or to take the whole sentence out of the connection in which I used it, and represent me as saying I would baptize one upon a human confession. What did I say? I said "if one should confess faith in Christ," which is to believe and confess all that Christ is in heaven to-day, all that he did on earth for mankind-all the facts, commandments, promises, and hope of the gospel-that he will come again, and all that he requires people to do to be saved. One does not learn all this in a day, and some may never learn it all; and one does not know all this when beginning the Christian life; if so, there would be no reason or room for longing "for the spiritual milk" in order to "grow thereby unto salvation" (1 Pet. 2: 1-3), or for growth "in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2 Pet. 3: 18). If one confesses faith in Jesus as the Christ, the Son of the living God, turns in godly sorrow from sin, realizes that God commands baptism in the name of Christ, is anxious to render this obedience in following Christ-not through any human opinions or confession-and promises to continue to study and obey the word of God as fast as it is learned, at what point in this one's failure to understand just all the teaching of God on any subject, or to understand at what place in this obedience God bestows certain blessings, am I justifiable in refusing to baptize that one? Others may know all this to a hair's breadth; but I cannot decline to baptize such a person or teach such a person more fully the truth, or to continue my study of it and my prayers and effort to learn more and more of it myself. This is no departure from the truth, but the only way to learn it.

About forty years ago, in taking a lady's confession with that of others, Brother T. J. Shaw being present, she said to me, after confessing her faith in Christ, that she believed God had pardoned her sins. I spoke of this to Brother Shaw at the moment, and he made a short explanation in regard to pardon and when it was done, but we both went on with her baptism "the same hour of the night." I was young then, but Brother Shaw was not and was a most faithful, solid, true, and loyal gospel preacher.

Let me add one word more: it is too common now for some brethren to say, when one does not accept their notions or theories, that that one is drifting from the truth or has turned entirely away from it. Some may persuade themselves that they are the only defenders of the truth, when they are simply partisans and are only trying to defend their own notions. Truth is, the word of God requires one to refuse to accept the theories which some preach as the very truth of God.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Yesterday, February 12, we—Mrs. Larimore and I—witnessed the unveiling of a statue of Gen. Joseph Wheeler—"little old fighting Joe," as he has long been affectionately called—in Statuary Hall, in the Capitol, in Washington City.

I have attempted no description of the Capitol yet, that being a larger task than I have cared to undertake in these articles; but in that great building is a large, semicircular room, ninety-five feet at its greatest width, its ceiling a half dome sixty feet in height, which is used as a hall of memorial statuary. Until 1858 this hall was occupied by the House of Representatives, and its walls have echoed with the fiery eloquence of many statesmen whose names are familiar to all students of American history. In that room ex-President John Quincy Adams, then a Representative for Massachusetts, was prostrated at his desk in February, 1848, by paralysis, resulting in his death two days later. A star set in the floor marks the position of his desk.

In 1864, Congress set this hall apart as a National Statuary Hall, somewhat similar to the Hall of Fame in New York City, and requested each State to send marble or bronze statues of two of its distinguished citizens, to be placed therein. Many of the States have responded, and there are now in Statuary Hall more than fifty statues of great men our country has produced, and one statue of a woman, Miss Frances E. Willard, presented by Illinois.

Chairs were placed in the hall, and about five hundred persons gathered to do honor to the memory of the great cavalry leader and noted statesman. About fifty members of Congress were present, including practically the entire delegation from Alabama and Georgia. General Wheeler was born in Georgia, and his son-in-law, William J. Harris, is now a Senator from that State. Miss Julia Wheeler Harris, daughter of the Senator from Georgia and granddaughter of General Wheeler, released the large United States flag that draped the statue. The flag was then drawn up and formed a background for the statue during the services. The bronze statue, representing

General Wheeler in the uniform of a lieutenant-general of the Confederate Army, is a fine piece of work, setting forth very correctly the form and features of "Little Joe." It is the third statue in Confederate uniform placed in Statuary Hall, the others being those of Gen. Robert E. Lee, presented by Virginia, and Gen. Kirby Smith, presented by Florida.

Alabama, in 1906, selected J. L. M. Curry, an educator and at one time Ambassador to Spain, for a place in Statuary Hall; and, as suggested by Representative Edward B. Almon, who presided over the exercises, the State had not hurriedly made selection of a statue to fill the second and last place assigned to her in that historic hall, but had taken time "to consider with justice all her distinguished citizens, many of whom could have stood there as peers among the foremost of the republic." Mr. Almon, who represents in Congress the same district that General Wheeler represented there more than twenty years, presided at the request of Governor Brandon, of Alabama, who could not be present. He paid high tribute to General Wheeler, saying he was trusted, honored, and loved by the people of Alabama for his splendid character and distinguished service as a citizen and a soldier, and cited his military record, first as an officer of the United States Army, then as a cavalry leader in the Confederate Army, and afterwards as a major general in the United States volunteers in the Spanish-American War. His last service being for the Union contributed much, Mr. Almon said, to the healing of the breach between the North and the South. He read tributes to General Wheeler by General Sherman and President Roosevelt.

Representatives Stegall, McDuffie, Oliver, Jeffers, and Allgood, all of Alabama, and Senator Tyson, of Tennessee, a personal friend of General Wheeler, eulogized his services as statesman and soldier, and a poem on that subject was read by its author, Hollis Carlisle.

Of course, I was interested in these exercises. Though scarcely seven years my senior, "Little Joe" was my commander in the Confederate Army, after Zollicoffer and Albert Sidney Johnston fell. After the war—the war that President Roosevelt called "the great war"—General Wheeler and I were friends, and we were neighbors as well as friends, at Mountain Home, Ala., when we lived there. A great warrior—Napoleonic in many respects—I doubt whether a better neighbor or truer friend has ever lived. I was glad to see his granddaughter, bright and pretty, who unveiled the statue, and others of his descendants who revere his memory. So far as I know, I was the only one of his old soldiers present.

The speakers of the occasion portrayed to the limit of their ability the marvelous career of the brave, brilliant, fearless commander of finally all the cavalry of the Confederacy, the audience listened attentively, and the exercises closed without the slightest semblance of formality. Now the last commemorative service has been held, the last word spoken, and General Wheeler's life is an open book—simply history. His body sleeps at the foot of an appropriate monument in Arlington, the National Cemetery here, and his statue will probably be seen by admiring throngs as the years come and go. So mote it be.

Of course, it was not the province of the speakers at the unveiling ceremonies to mention Christianity in that connection, nor am I informed as to General Wheeler's religious convictions; but I know he had a tender, loving heart that sympathized with the sorrows and infirmities of humanity. As I now remember him in private life, his favorite mount was a mule about seventeen hands high. Once I saw him dismount from that mule, help a negro woman with a sick baby into the place he had just vacated, hand her the baby, and then continue his service till he saw both mother and child as comfortably situated as they could conveniently be in their humble home.

A promising son who was especially near and dear to General Wheeler was drowned many years ago. Hearing of that distressing event almost immediately after it occurred, I wrote the bereaved father without delay. Of course, I did not expect a reply, but, by return mail, I received one of the sweetest letters I have ever read.

A somewhat amusing incident concerning "Little Joe" was published when he was a Congressman here from Alabama. As the story goes, one rainy day a lady left the street car in which General Wheeler was riding. Just then he saw an umbrella at the seat she had left. Thinking it was hers, of course, the gallant General snatched it up, stepped off the car, and ran after her, spreading the umbrella as he ran. The owner of the umbrella, knowing neither General Wheeler nor the lady, brought up the rear in the race, to recover his property. Finally, the three faced each other, explanations followed, General Wheeler, with his accustomed suavity, apologizing, claiming to be entirely and alone at fault, and the incident was thus closed. That was "Little Joe."

"And Jesus said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things; but one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." (Luke 10: 41, 42.) All the gold and transient glory of all this wide, wide world fade into insignificance in comparison with "the one thing needful."

THE CHRISTIAN MINISTRY.

BY F. W. SMITH.

While "Christian ministry" is not in the New Testament Scriptures limited to one class of Christians, but includes all service rendered by Christians according to the will of God, yet the world has come to regard only public proclaimers of the gospel as those who constitute "the Christian ministry." Hence, it is in this accommodated sense the matter will here be considered, and special attention will be directed to that class of men called "preachers," or "ministers."

DIVINE DIRECTIONS TO PREACHERS.

1. God has not left men to choose what they shall preach, but has laid upon them the divine obligation to "preach the word." Hence the following solemn charge: "I charge thee in the sight of God, and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the living and the dead, and by his appearing and his kingdom: preach the word; be urgent in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and teaching." (2 Tim. 4: 1, 2.) Thus men who assume to be the ministers of God are absolutely shut up to the proclamation of but one thing-viz., the word of God. Of course, each one is left to exercise his own personality and to use apt illustrations in the unfolding of the truth to the comprehension of mankind. But in all instances and under all circumstances everything must be made subservient to the clearest presentation of the word of God. Neither the personality of the speaker nor the illustrations used must in any way obscure the power and the beauty of God's word, so that whatever lasting impressions that are made may be done by the word of the living God. The hearers should be made to feel that God had spoken to them, and not simply a man. On the point of illustrating God's teaching regarding the unruly member of the body called "the tongue," James says: "Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body. Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth." (James 3: 3, 4.) Now, these are very plain and simple illustrations that bring out the lesson God teaches regarding the tongue, and in no way obscure the main thought.

2. God has not only not left men to choose what they shall preach, but he has not left them to chose how they shall live-that is, what shall be the character of their daily deportment. He has given specific directions regarding the manner of life they shall live. And on this phase of the subject two passages of holy writ will be submitted. "These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly: but if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how men ought to behave themselves in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." (1 Tim. 3: 14, 15.) While this passage is of general application, and, hence, most certainly includes preachers, we cannot but see that in it preachers, as well as other members of the church, are taught to behave themselves as becometh Christians. But again, and more specifically, we have this: "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an ensample to them that believe, in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity," (1 Tim. 4: 12.) It will at once be observed that the above items cover the whole ground of Christian character and living. And since these directions were given to govern one preacher in his course of life, they are, of course, binding upon all preachers alike. What was true of Timothy in this respect must be true of all preachers, both old and young.

A VIVID CONTRAST.

As a very vivid and striking contrast to the teaching of God's word regarding the life and conduct of preachers of the gospel, I submit the following:

I am not an old crank or fanatic, but I am constrained to believe—in fact, I know—the conduct of some of our young preachers is not as it should be.

young preachers is not as it should be.

I have in mind a special case of a young man who is an able preacher, a good mixer, and usually is pretty well thought of; but his conduct is not as it should be many times. I have talked to him some about it, but thought that perhaps an article from an older man would cause him to think more seriously of his course. He is a habitual picture-show attendant. I have known of his saying he did not have time to go to prayer meeting, yet he could always find time to go to the show. Last, but the more noticeable, is his conduct with women. He can scarcely be around a woman but that he must be talking the more noticeable, is his conduct with women. He can scarcely be around a woman but that he must be talking with her, and he often tells "yarns" in the presence of women that ought not to be told in an assembly of men only. Besides, he can hardly keep his hands off of a girl that is with him. He will tell other boys of the more than a score of girls that he has hugged, kissed, and handled in ways of which it is not decent to speak. Furthermore, he tells of the number of girls to whom he has been engaged that he never intended to marry. Even still worse, he has carried things so far that he has asked the parents for their daughters, and later confessed to other boys that he never intended to marry the girls even at the time he asked for them. In these flirtations he has not confined himself to the "flapper" class, but at least some of them were nice, quiet girls before meeting him. were nice, quiet girls before meeting him.

The foregoing was sent to the writer with the request that he write something along the line of conduct that should characterize preachers. When I read the above, I wondered where and what the elders of the church or churches where such a young man preaches could be, or could be doing, to permit such a young man to get into a pulpit. The truth is, instead of permitting him to preach, he should be dealt with as a "disorderly walker," and should be withdrawn from unless he repents and conjesses his sins. I have not the remotest ideas as to the young man's name or his place of residence. But of one thing I am positively certain-namely, if the things charged up to him in the communication here published are true, he is unfit to pose as a preacher of the gospel; and unless he changes his manner of living, he should seek some other calling. Such conduct brings reproach upon the cause of Christ and damns the soul of him who thus acts.

THE "SHOOT" OR "BRANCH." No. 2. BY E. A. ELAM.

Continuing from last week our study of Isa. 11: 1-10, let us first read verses 6-10:

And the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hoo of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the adder's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the root of Jesse, that standeth for an ensign of the peoples, unto him shall the nations seek; and his resting place shall be glorious.

THE REIGN OF PEACE.

It detracts from Christ and helps to destroy the power of his gospel to look beyond his glorious work in the hearts and lives of men on earth now for the fulfillment of these verses, and to teach that they are to be fulfilled in some future reign of Christ which has not yet begun. Let me ask, when did the gospel begin to transform the hearts and lives of men into gentleness and love? When did "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding" (Phil. 4: 6, 7; Col. 3: 15), begin to rule in the hearts of people? What have Christ and the gospel done for people since his ascension? What are they doing now?

The figures of these verses, representing effects of the peace all enjoy who come under the reign of Christ, are strong and beautiful.

The wolf and the leopard will not destroy the lamb and the kid, but all will dwell together; the young lion and calf and fatling will not only dwell together, but "a little child shall lead them;" " the cow and the bear shall feed " together; "their young ones shall lie down together;" and the lion shall become tame and no longer feed upon other animals, but shall eat straw like the ox."

What do the feeding together of all these mean? Under "the gospel of peace" and in the church of Christ, those who were wolves and leopards, bears and lions, preying in selfishness through greed of gain and through fraud and oppression upon the weak and helpless, are mild and gentle, kind and tender, just and righteous, merciful and gracious. All Christians are this at the present time. If not, they are not Christians.

Much is said in the New Testament about being at peace, keeping the peace, making peace, pursuing peace, and being ruled by peace. But more still, in the kingdom of peace one as tender and helpless as "the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp," or one as helpless as "the weaned child shall put his hand on the adder's den," and shall not be hurt. Those who are asps and adders in the world, filled with poison and death, become harmless and helpful in their conversion to Christianity. By Christians no advantage will be taken of, no harm will be done to, no fraud will be practiced upon, the babes and weaklings, the humblest and poorest of widows and orphans.

Further still, the prophet predicts universal peace and that the earth shall be under the dominion of Christ, for he says: "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea." His "holy mountain" represents the dominion of the Lord.

Then, wherever "the knowledge of Jehovah" is and Christ rules, there is peace. To know Jehovah is to submit to him and to be ruled by Christ. Then it must follow that all who engage in carnal strife and carnage or who encourage war do not know God. Also, when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea," then there will be universal peace. When will this be? More and more as nations are brought under the influence of Christianity; but it will be realized and enjoyed to its fullest extent and in unalloyed perfection when "the new heavens and the new earth," predicted by Isaiah (65: 17-25, which see) and Peter (2 Pet. 3: 13), are ushered in.

"THE PRINCE OF PEACE."

Jesus is called "the Prince of Peace" (Isa. 9: 6); he is the author of peace; his gospel is "the gospel of peace;" he enjoins peace; and he rules in his kingdom of peace. Here we recall the song of the angels on the night of Jesus birth: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased." The birth of Jesus redounds to the glory of God on high and to peace among men on earth. It is predicted that under the reign of Christ war itself shall cease and men shall learn it no more. Under the rule of Christ people cannot learn war, because he does not teach it.

And he will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. (Isa. 2: 4.)

It is most certain, then, that all who yield to Christobey him-cannot learn and practice war any more. Just as fast as individuals become Christians, they cease to study war and to shed blood and to kill their fellow men; and just as nations come under the sway of Christ, they cease to learn and to practice war.

This "root of Jesse" will be the ensign or flag or standard of the people—a flag of peace, and not one of war and bloodshed. When this "branch" shall come forth, all nations shall seek it. This is a prophecy of the salvation of the Gentiles. (See Luke 2: 32; Acts 11: 18.)

"His resting place shall be glorious." Jesus now reigns and rests in glory and promises rest and glory to all who serve him.

" Peace! and no longer from its brazen portals The blast of war's great organ shakes the skies! But beautiful as songs of the immortals, The holy melodies of love arise."

OUERY DEPARTMENT

BY E. A. ELAM

Sister G. W. Watkins, in a letter dated January 13, expresses her appreciation of the Gospel Advocate and wishes it continued success. She asks the following question: "Is a man who has repented and feels in his heart that God for Christ's sake has pardoned his sins in a saved condition before being baptized?" No. The promise is: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (See Acts 2: 38; Acts 22: 16; Gal. 3: 26, 27.)

Brother Elam: What about having the Junior Order to come to the church of Christ and preaching a gospel sermon to them? They visit all the denominations here. Last Sunday night they were with us in their regalia and with their flags, and the gospel was taught them in its purity. Only two of the bunch were members of the church of Christ. Some of the members are confused over the matter. Is it in harmony with God's teaching, or should the brother have refused to teach them? There are several in the church that are Juniors also. And on Christmas Eve they had a Christmas tree at the church house, and a program, but had no teaching. Now, which is most approved in the sight of God, or is either right? Wanting to know and do God's service from the whole heart, and for the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom, I request you to answer with all the force and strength you can.

I do not know to what "Junior Order" reference is made; but it can do no harm, but may do some good, to welcome them into the church house for the purpose of hearing the gospel preached. We should rejoice that people desire to hear the gospel. If, however, the church should invite them into its house and the preacher should preach to them in order to encourage any "order" out of harmony with the church of God in its all-sufficiency of work and worship, the wrong would not be in their being in the house, but in receiving such encouragement from the church. But since it is stated that they went to hear the gospel preached, I can see no harm in that. The harm would be in not preaching the gospel while they were there.

Church members, juniors or seniors, should be taught most clearly that the church as an institution and in every other way is all-sufficient for "every good work and word." (2 Thess. 2: 17.) The younger generation in the church, with some of the older ones, stand greatly in need of learning that the church is all-sufficient for every benevolent, moral, and spiritual work.

If the thing itself was not wrong, it was not wrong to allow the use of the church house. A church house may be used for any good purpose. But since the church itself (not the house) is sufficient for "every good work and word," Christians should work through no other organization, moral or religious.

Brother Elam: (1) I read in the Scriptures that the women should "keep silence in the churches." What about it when they ask and answer questions in the Sunday school? (2) What do you understand by the statement that when a man dies his "spirit shall return unto God who gave it?" Then all go to the same place, it seems. (3) Do you think the resurrection the end of the world? Will it be known at the time, and not be going on and people not know it? (4) When will the thousand-years' reign be? (5) I understand the word "unworthily" to be an adverb, referring to the manner of taking the Lord's Supper, and not an adjective describing a person; but the word modifies the verb, and not the person. (6) The Greek word for "supper," I understand, is not a word meaning a meal in the evening, and the Lord's Supper can be taken any suitable hour on the first day of the week.

H. R. MCCULLY.

Read 1 Cor. 14: 26-40. Keeping silence in the churches means not making public speeches. In asking and answering questions in a private class, women do not violate this instruction.

- 2. When a man dies, he goes to his own place. Let us read all the Bible says on the subject, be satisfied with that, and not speculate about anything. If we live as God directs, he will take care of us when we die.
- 3. No. The Bible teaches that all will know when Christ comes, and when the resurrection takes place all will know it. It teaches no such thing as the resurrection going on all the time and no one knowing it.

4. I do not know.

 Yes, "unworthily" modifies the manner of partaking of the Lord's Supper. The Revised Version brings this out very clearly.

6. Yes, the word for "supper" means the chief meal of the day, and the Lord's Supper can be eaten at any hour on the first day of the week.

THE GOD OF CONSOLATION.

Long days and nights upon this restless bed Of daily, nightly weariness and pain! Yet Thou art here, my ever-gracious Lord, Thy well-known voice speaks not to me in vain; "In Me ye shall have peace."

The darkness seemeth long, and even the light No respite brings with it, no soothing rest For this worn frame; yet in the midst of all Thy love revives. Father, thy will is best.

"In Me ye shall have peace."

COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

FOOTPRINTS.

Long years ago I stood, in the glad summertime, on a certain street, where a company of workmen were building a cement sidewalk. They were just finishing their task.

A little girl, bare of feet and bright of eyes, was watching them with no little interest. She gazed in wonder at the smooth blocks, stretching far down the street, and protected by a rude barricade from the feet of passers-by. At last, she turned away, walking slowly beside the freshly built track.

She seemed beset with a curiosity to test the hardness of the cement. Finally, slipping cautiously through the barriers, she timidly touched the hardening material with her foot. To her surprise, it seemed to be quite firm; and now she placed her full weight on the cool surface, and was much frightened, on lifting her foot, to find an exact imprint of it on the block. Doubtless fearing detection, and, possibly, punishment, she hurried away.

I gazed at the footprint for a moment, and passed on. Nor did I think of the incident again until a full score of years had been added to the history of things. Again, quite by accident, I was on that same street and walking on that same sidewalk, when, once more, I beheld the impression of the little girl's foot. Yes, there it was, clear and distinct, apparently unchanged by the changing years. Instantly I saw with almost startling vividness the scene of twenty years agone.

It seemed wonderful that this tiny footprint should have outlived so many things! I wondered about the little girl. Ah, she would be a woman now! Perhaps she had little girls of her own, who were trying similar experiments in a world full of mystery and strange untried things. I wondered if she still lived in the neighborhood, and whether she ever laughed as she thought of her childish escapade. Then, possibly, she was no longer living on this earth. Perhaps her dust was resting in one of the many graves which had been dug since she stepped on the yielding cement in life's early morning.

But her footprint was still there!

And, looking at the footprint, I thought of her!

O, these footprints! These reminders of other days!

When your life is over, and mine, there will be nothing left but footprints.

May they always point in the right direction and end at the right place.—E. C. Baird.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

The fortunate boarders in a certain homelike boarding and rooming house were always boasting of their good fortune to their friends and telling of the good times the motherly landlady was always contriving for their leisure hours. The good cooking, the homelike atmosphere, the little social gatherings, the special privileges, and everything else that made their evenings and mornings and Sundays bright and happy were spoken of so much that every other young worker in the establishment who could not be at home longed for a chance to become a boarder in that hospitable house.

Often somebody said a little spitefully, or enviously, that it seemed that certain people were always able to get something for nothing, while the common run of mortals had to pay for whatever they received. Then somebody else hinted that the fortunate beings were merely boasting to arouse other people's envy, while others felt certain that there must be some high price attached to all these privileges, as no woman could provide such food and care for her lodgers, as they declared she did, without extra compensation.

Finally one of the girls who felt most envious was forced to leave her lodging house because an inmate was sick of a contagious disease, and the girl who had the desk near her considerately offered her half of her room until she could return. Now, thought the girl, she would solve the problem and learn the secret. It took her only a few days to discover that the fortunate roomers were paying exactly what she paid, but there the similarity ended. Each and every boarder was on the alert to help the landlady in some way, and that enabled her without extra cost to care for her "family," as she called them, right royally.

One young man shoveled snow, another took care of the furnace in the morning, another banked it at night, one went to market when he could spare time, and so on through the list. Nor were the young women less active. They gave bits of spare time to dishwashing in emergencies, they cooked new and attractive dishes, they had an eye open for bargains for the busy woman, they did errands, they helped her with mending, they gave her children help with their lessons which she could not give, they were painstaking in avoiding dirt and disorder; in short, they acted as if the landlady was a dear relative, sort of second mother, whom they were bound to cheer and help and encourage in her hard life. The law student helped her with her business, the medical student taught the children how to keep from illness, the clerk in the store reminded her of special sales, the bookkeeper helped with refractory accounts, the music teacher guided the ambitious little hands at the piano, free of charge, and all worked and lived as if they felt bound to make the poor widow's life as easy and delightful as lay in their power.

The temporary guest listened and learned. She did not try to induce the landlady to make a corner for her, but she did go back to her dreary, cheerless lodging to spread the gospel of helpfulness among her fellow boarders, and she did, in time, transform the cheerless atmosphere into one of brightness and helpfulness before she left to make a cheery home for the young man of her choice. The leaven worked slowly but surely, and she had to face indifference and open antagonism in her efforts; but step by step flowers brought in by the boarders transformed the rooms, and efforts to keep things clean helped to sweeten the landlady's disposition, and one and all felt the change that had come over the place.—Hilda Richmond.

"The Profitable Word," containing some of the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, is now ready for distribution. It is nicely bound in cloth, and contains about two hundred pages. DAVID LIPSCOMB ON ORGANIZATION.

(Gospel Advocate, March 24, 1910.)

All meetings of churches or officers of churches to combine more power than a single church possesses is wrong. God's power is in God's churches. He is with them to bless and strengthen their work when they are faithful to him. A Christian, one or more, may visit a church with or without an invitation and seek to stir them up to a faithful discharge of their duties. But for one or more to direct what and how all the churches shall work, or to take charge of their men and money and use it, is to assume the authority God has given to each church. Each one needs the work of distributing and using its funds as well as in giving them.

HIGH-MINDED. BY H. C. FLEMING.

Webster defines this word, "proud, arrogant;" also as "honorable pride; magnanimous."

When we have accomplished something which we have been endeavoring to do, and that something is just and right, we may have pride in that matter which is honorable. But there is danger of our overestimating that which we have done and becoming proud or arrogant. This, I think, is what the apostle Paul had in mind when, in speaking of the branches broken off, he said: "Because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not highminded, but fear." (Rom. 11: 20.) This view is confirmed in Rom. 12: 8, which reads: "For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." In verse 16 he says: "Be not wise in your own conceits." In 1 Tim. 6: 17 he says: "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." These teach us not to go to excess in pride for that which we have done. "He that glo-rieth, let him glory in the Lord." (1 Cor. 1: 31.) "Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he will lift you up. (James 4: 10.) Jesus said: "So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do." (Luke 17: 10.)

The above references leave no room for us to become lifted up with pride for anything that we have done.

Paul, in speaking of the qualifications of elders, says: "Not a novice la young manl, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil." (1 Tim. 3: 6.) We learn from this that the young are more liable to become high-minded in their own estimation than the more elderly people; but there is danger of either old or young failing to give the glory to God. We have an example of this in the death of King Herod. "And immediately the angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory: and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost." (Acts 12: 23.)

When the skies are gray, the thrush sings; when the heavens are drab, the lark cheerfully calls; when the rain falls on the grain, the bluebird trills in the tree. Under the eaves the swallow twitters while the rain drips. There is a song always.-Exchange.

Acids in Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Gas, Sourness, and Pain. How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indi-gestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydro-chloric acid in the stomach, and not, as some believe, to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed, and food sours, causing the dis-agreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids, and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid, and there is no sourness, gas, or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take, and is the the stomach, inexpensive to take, and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of Rockwood, Tenn., March 17.—We had two good services last Sunday, and the work presents a splendid outlook. When I think of the many towns and the vast territory in East Tennessee where there is no church of Christ and of the thousands who have never heard a gospel sermon, then think of the readiness of many of them to obey the truth when they learn what it is, seeing the field ripe unto the harvest, I pray the Lord to send more laborers into the harvest. The ministers of the church of Christ in this part of the State can, I presume, be counted upon one's fingers. Seeing an account from Brother Hines, of Montgomery, Ala., that Brother O. H. Tallman had decided to locate in Tennessee to pursue his chiropractic practice and to work in the Lord's vineyard, I immediately wrote him of the need of gospel preachers in this part of the State, and invited him to pay us a visit and let me show him over the country, visit a few of our towns, and to try to locate him here, either at Knoxville or some smaller town. He wrote me about the matter, seying that he has a family of a wife and five children. It will, of course, take time to become established in any profession so as to make it self-sustaining for a family the size of his. Let some of the brethren or churches who want to do some real mission work arrange to support, either in part or for full time, this man of God while he labors with us over here. Address him for the present at 217 Bell Building, Springfield, Tenn.—Thomas J. Wagner.

From the Brethren

Columbia, Tenn., March 17.—I was at Kettle Mills, a splendid rural congregation in the western part of Maury County, recently. I found this to be a large band of interested, loyal Christians. Last Lord's day I preached at Isom, also in this county. This church enjoys the distinction of being the largest country congregation, so the report is, in the world. I understand that there is a membership of about four hundred, and I am convinced after my visit there that most of them attend. Brother A. G. Freed is to hold their meeting, and plans are already being made for it. One good lady told me of how Brethren Sewell and Lipscomb used to preach for them in the years gone by, and that she had witnessed on more than one occasion over a hundred baptisms in the pretty little stream flowing in front of the church house. Maury County has much for which to be thankful concerning the cause of Christ, as well as much to regret and much yet to do. I understand that there are twenty-seven loyal congregations in the county, and I know not how many other kinds. One thing we hope—that the outside brethren will not think of the county at large as some do of Columbia. It is a shame that the very "dimple of the universe" should harbor and foster such discord, division, and strife, while all around her there are so many good, conscientious, Godfearing people who have no more sense than just to believe and accept the Bible! But we are hoping for better conditions in Columbia. Good has already resulted from the debate. One good lady told me yesterday that hitherto she had been very much in doubt and worried concerning whether or not to use the instruments. But she remarked that no longer is she in doubt that such is sinful, and that she is not the only one who has so decided as a result of the debate. It might also be interesting to readers of the Gospel Advocate to know about one school we have in Maury County. There is one splendid little school in the western section having eighty-six pupils. The parents of every one of these, without exception, are members of the church, many of the pupils are, and all three teachers are. Come on, now, and tell us something better or more exceptional if you can! But that is not the only good school we have. Many schools are near this record. As a whole, we have a whole county of prosperous, contented, religious, Bible-reading, God-fearing people, and my wife and I are finding it a splendid place to live and work.—Gordon H. Turner.

MISSIONARY NOTES.

BY NELLIE STRAITON.

Miss Clara E. Kennedy is the latest addition to the force in Japan, having gone out during the summer of 1924. She is now studying the Japanese language, without a knowledge of which she cannot do work direct with the Japanese-speaking people. In fact, she took her first lesson while crossing the Pacific Ocean en route from San Francisco to Tokyo. While studying the language and the people, she is also helping Brother McCaleb with his writing and assisting the other missionaries as opportunity presents.

Many of the comforts of life which we enjoy are denied to our missionaries, and one of the most important of these is suitable houses. Japanese houses are not conducive to the good health of American missionaries; and so, through the efforts of Brother McCaleb and others who cooperated with him, three ready-made houses were shipped from America during 1924. One of these was erected in Shizuoka for Sister Sarah Andrews and her helpers; one, for Brother Herman Fox and family, at Daigo; and one, for Brother Harry Fox and family, at another mission point.

Brother Bixler and family and Brother Rhodes and family are located at other mission points some distance from Tokyo, and thus the story of Jesus is spreading from place to place in Japan. Brother McCaleb, in addition to his work in Tokyo, makes occasional visits among the brethren in the country, strengthening and encouraging them. Sister Miller, one of our first missionaries, has not been well since the earthquake, but the native girl whom she has had with her for years is taking care of her.

While I am always glad to give any information I can relative to any of our missionaries anywhere and to advise those wishing to contribute where they may forward their funds for each of the missionaries, or to forward gifts myself when desired, at the same time I am particularly interested in receiving and forwarding funds for Sister Lillie Cypert.

During the year 1924 I received and forwarded funds as follows: Miss Lillie Cypert, Japan, $1,190; Miss Sarah Andrews, Japan, $91.75; J. M. McCaleb, Japan, $56.50; D. C. Janes, for building fund, $20; Miss Clara E. Kennedy, Japan, $12.50; O. D. Bixler, Japan, $12.50; E. A. Rhodes, Japan, $7.50; Herman Fox, Japan, $7.50; Harry Fox, Japan, $7.50; Y. Hiratsuka, Japan, $2.50; Max Langpaap, Honolulu, $10; R. L. Schug, for India, $10.

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book -merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

Recovery From Influenza Hastened by

PE-RU-NA

Mr. C. A. Allen, R. R. No. 2, Bondurant, Iowa, gives testimony to the healing power of Pe-ru-na. Influenza left him much run down in health with catarrh of the nose, throat and bronichal tubes punctuated with attacks of asthma. He writes:

"While recovering from the Influenza I was so weak I could not gain any strength for two months. The latter part of the winter, I bought six bottles of Pe-ru-na and began taking it. My weight increased to 175 pounds, the most I ever weighed.

My usual winter weight is 155. If you can use this letter for any good, you are perfectly welcome."

Such evidence cannot fail to convince the rankest unbeliever of the merits of Pe-ru-na.

Insist upon having the old and original remedy for catarrhal conditions.

Sister Cypert wrote: "Thanks fall so far short of expressing my gratitude. Earth has no pleasures to begin to compare with service for the One who is able to overrule all things and make them work together for good to them whom he has called into his service. He sees the need over here, and then moves upon the hearts of those whom he knows will heed the call."

SALARY, WAGES, AND HIRE. BY W: HALLIDAY TRICE.

"I robb d other churches, taking wages of them that I might minister unto you." (2 Cor. 11: 8.) The Standard Dictionary gives the following meaning of the word "wage." "Payment for service rendered, especially the pay of artisans or laborers receiving a fixed sum per day, week, or month." "The laborer is worthy of his hire." (Luke 10: 7.) "Hire' is defined thus: "The price or compensation for labor and service." This same dictionary defines "salary" this way: "A periodical allowance made as compensation to a person for his official or professional services or for his regular work." With these scriptures and definitions staring us in the face, I am puzzled to know why it is that some preachers are always harping on the sin of accepting a salary. "Salary," "wage," and "hire" are three terms meaning practically the same thing; and if Jesus thought the "laborer worthy of his hire" and Paul actually took "wages" from certain ones, why is it considered such a sin for a preacher to accept a salary? Some amusing things are sometimes seen in print. One writer accused another of accepting a salary for religious work, and the other one denies the accusation. If I were receiving a salary for services rendered, I would certainly admit it; and if I were criticized, I would kindly ask the critic to give some scripture to prove such a thing wrong before he assumed it to be a sin. Personally, I think it much more businesslike and scriptural to receive "wages" from some church than it is to beg all the congregations for a support and then complain all the time about the sacrifices one is making. Is "the laborer worthy of his hire?" Did Paul sin when he took " wages?"

THE CLOSING OF THE DOORS. BY J. A.

At the conclusion of the Brewer-Walker discussion on instrumental music at Columbia, Tenn., the "State Evangelist" of Tennessee, whose main business seems to be to persuade churches to contribute to the support of the society, instead of really doing "the work of an evangelist," arose and declared that the digressive church was very greatly satisfied and elated over the great debating of Brother Walker, and that they were very heartily in favor of carrying the discussion "into every county in Tennessee." And while, of course, those who have had dealings with "State evangelists" instantly recognized this as an artfully designed piece of stage play, as the meaningless clanging of an empty cymbal, intended only for the galleries, Brother H. Leo Boles arose and kindly reminded the audience that several very important places are already anxiously awaiting the discussion, and that it would not seem exactly proper to make new engagements for discussion until those already on file were attended to.

The "State Evangelist" is, no doubt, aware of the fact that an agreement was reached that the discussion was to be carried to every part of the State where there are brethren on both sides and where both sides invite it. But, under this agreement, the series of discussions seems to be almost suspended, notwithstanding the pretty stage play of the "State Evangelist," as the invitations seem to be all coming now from only one side. Every discussion means a loss of members to the "digressives;" and, such being the case, the doors of digressive churches are closed as tight against such discussions as ever were the doors of the "mother" church against the remonstrances of Luther and Calvin.

The "State Evangelist" is hereby kindly referred to the following article, written by Brother Thomas J. Wagner, of Rockwood, Tenn .:

The efforts which we have made to get the digressive church here to agree to have a discussion of the music ques-tion have proven thus far to be fruit-

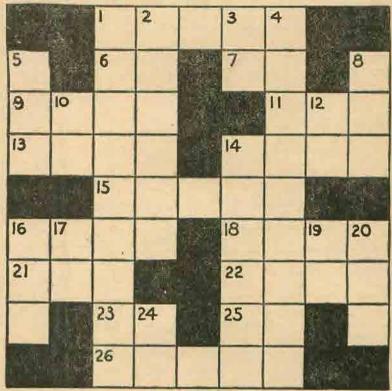

I wrote their minister three letters urging the matter upon them, and he didn't show me courtesy enough to answer either one of them. Brother Walker and Brother Hall each agreed to come, provided they would indorse the debate; and Brother Walker agreed to come, anyway, provided we would furnish him a place to sleep and something to eat while here and defray his expenses. I sent these letters to them and wrote the board of urging the matter upon them, and he defray his expenses. I sent these letters to them and wrote the board of elders, again urging the debate upon them, and they very briefly replied: "We have no interest whatever in the matter."

I wrote Brother Welker to the effect

I wrote Brother Walker to the effect that if the digressive church did not

THERE are two very long words which go the full length of this puzzle, but even so, it is one which a beginner need not fear. They are both words that the youngest Sunday school scholar should know. All the others may be found with the help of a Bible.

How to Soive a Cross Word Puzzl:

How to Soive a Cross Word Puzzi.

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

have enough interest in the matter to indorse its defender and care for him, they would not attend the debate. they would not attend the debate. As badly as we and our brethren want the debate here, I fear it would not be productive of the greatest amount of good; besides, that would be out of harmony with the agreement made some three years ago between the Christian Church, represented by the "Commission on Unity," so called, and representatives of the church of Christ—viz., that the debate was to be carried to every part of the State where both sides invite it. We still beg them to come on and defend their practice.

Clarksville, Tenn., is anxiously awaiting, and so is Livington, to say nothing of others. Will the "State Evangelist" kindly endeavor to induce his brethren in error to be courteous enough to extend an invitation?

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

- "I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)
- "We have been using the Leason Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)
- "I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pro-nounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)
- "We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criti-cism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)
- "I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Holps issued by the Cospel Advocate Com-pany. They cannot fall of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)
- "The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuft.)
- "Your Quarterites received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)
- "I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)
- "The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartly recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)
- "A complete assortment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly com-mend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)
- "As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brathren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)
- "It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

 "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, scriptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pullias.)
- "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Blum's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Blam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years.
- "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptural citations and references—Scriptural that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Feloubet's Select Notes. I compare them weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.) "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years.

TIPTON ORPHAN HOME.

BY A. S. REYNOLDS.

I am now connected with the Tipton Orphan Home. There are one hundred and eleven children in the Home now and others wanting to come. We need money to finish the Home so more room can be made. Brother Price Bankhead and wife are giving good service as superintendents. Brother Lawson is in the field soliciting funds for the Home, and he is doing a good work. Any brother or sister who would like to see what is being done in the Home should subscribe for the Orphan Home paper. Send one dollar to Price Bankhead, Tipton, Okla. Brother Dennis, of Erick, Okla., will teach a music school for the church and Home this week. The Gospel Advocate is giving some much-needed instruction. Keep up the fight; the enemy has invaded our camp. The old soldiers are falling on the battle field, but there are a few faithful young soldiers to take up the armor.

BOLES ORPHAN HOME.

Whereas it has been deemed best by those in charge that Brother A. O. Colley should have the management of the Boles Orphan Home, and since this management demands his removal to Greenville, Texas, where he will also labor for the Greenville church, whose elders are now the trustees of the Home, it has seemed a privilege as well as a duty that those of us with whom he has been closely associated should commend him to his new field of labor.

First, we desire to express our regrets at losing Brother Colley as a colaborer and preacher of the gospel in Dallas. Brother Colley has been with the Pearl and Bryan Streets church of Christ, this city, for about cight years, during which time he has accomplished much for the cause of Christ both in and out of Dallas. He has clearly demonstrated that he is able both to live and defend the cause for which Christ died. feel that we have had occasion to know him both as a Christian and a faithful preacher of the gospel.

Brother Colley and his wife now accept the general management of the Boles Orphan Home, a thing that seems but natural and just, because it is largely due to his untiring efforts that the Home has succeeded thus far. We have no hesitancy in saying to the brotherhood that he is worthy of the trust imposed in him, and is able to handle wisely any support that may be given the Home.

He leaves the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church with a splendid building and a good, active, working NDISPENSABLE TO ALL CHRISTIAN WORKERS -

JOYS OF MOTHERHOOD

Often Prevented by Female Trouble

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brings Joy to Homes by Removing Cause of Trouble

Brooklyn, N.Y.,—"I was working after I got married and the young lady who worked next to me asked me if I had any intentions of having a child. I told her I would be the happiest woman on earth if I could become a mother, but I always had terrible cramps, backaches and headaches. She then told me of a woman she knows who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the same troubles and it helped her greatly. took about a half bottle and found that the following month I did not suffer any pain, so I kept on taking it. I have a wonderful baby boy six months old and he is as strong and fat as any one could wish a baby to be. I still take the Vegetable Compound regularly because I have looked fine all the time and felt fine and my fine all the time and felt fine and my mother told me that was the reason. I will be glad to have you publish my testimonial with my name and ad-dress." — Mrs. Edward Werbeck, 1824 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Free From Old Trouble

Auburn, Maine.—"I suffered with inward weakness for ten years and had doctored all this long time but never got any help. One day I saw my sister and she told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I went and got me a bottle of it. I took two bottles and a half and I was just as free from my old troubles a I could be. I had only one child and I was afraid that I could never have any more, for I had been told that I never could have a living child for I was not strong enough to carry one. But they were mistaken and I had a nice haby boy and now I have five children. I can't praise your medicine enough. My youngest sister has taken it, too, and praises it." — Mrs. G. L. WISWELL, 43 Mechanics Row, Auburn, Maine. Auburn, Maine.

THE SIMPLICITY OF ITS MECHANISM

These cases are similar to many others reported to us. It is well for women to carefully consider such statements and to give Lydia E. Pink-ham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. It may bring great joy to your

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a medicine for women.

THE HEART OF HOME .

O, home is a wonderful thing! In all the world so wide There's never a place With half the grace With half the grace
Of the spot where our own abide!
And always we see it clear,
Wherever we may roam;
For home is the heart
Of the world's great mart—
And love is the heart of home!

O, hard may the struggle be Against the wind and tide;
The waves may dash,
And the thunders crash,
As the world's rough sea we ride;
But ever we gain toward shore
Where a light shines over the foam,
And love's own strength
Shall win at length,
For love is the heart of home!

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

Before reading the following article, kindly read the "Reply to the Gospel Advocate," by Rev. J. G. Bow, of Louisville, Ky., on page 318.

As we are publishing Mr. Bow's "Reply" in the Gospel Advocate, we kindly request that he publish these remarks in the Western Recorder. We candidly avow that the propagation of truth is the object for which we publish the Gospel Advocate. Such, we presume, is the desideratum sought by the Western Recorder. We honestly endeavor to avoid misrepresentation of any kind. Truth can gain nothing by misrepresentation. And as all truth-seeking preachers and papers are willing to hear and publish both sides of every great question, that all may judge for themselves, we kindly request of Mr. Bow publication of this notice of his "Reply to the Gospel Advocate" in the Western Recorder.

First, then, as to the Gospel Advocate "still ringing true to Campbell's doctrine that immersion for the remission of sins is the 'gospel in water,'" we beg to submit that the Gospel Advocate does not "ring true" to anything that could rightfully be called "Campbell's doctrine," and that the Gospel Advocate does not accept Campbell, or any other uninspired man, as of any authority whatever in sacred matters. We admire Mr. Campbell, and cherish his memory, as a great and good man, and as our Christian brother; and we recognize that, on account of his stupendous talents and consummate abilities, he accomplished more toward the restoration of New Testament Christianity than any of his contemporaries. But we stop there. While we think Mr. Campbell's judgment on the teaching of the Scriptures to have been as good as, or better than, that of any other man since the days of inspired men, still, because he was an uninspired man, we would not follow him an inch in the dark on any sacred matter. Mr. Bow knows this, or ought to know it; and yet he misrepresents us as "ringing true to Campbell's doctrine." It devolves upon him to specify and point out things we teach that started with Mr. Campbell; and if he will specify and point out anything taught in the Gospel Advocate for which we cannot produce a plain "Thus saith the Lord," written by an inspired man eighteen centuries before Mr. Campbell was born, we hereby pledge ourselves to retract it and to cease to teach it. Will Mr. Bow and the Western Recorder pursue the same course?

We do not know anything about the "gospel in water." We find no such expression in the New Testament.

But Mr. Bow says: "Baptism has nothing to do with the salvation of the soul." He also allows himself to be influenced enough by prejudice and bias to cast a slur upon certain passages of scripture. He says: "The Advocate quotes the standard passages of all Campbell's disciples," What does Mr. Bow mean? Are some passages of holy writ intended to be classical among "Campbell's disciples," while other passages are to be regarded as "standard classics" by the Baptists? We beg to dissent from such a view of the Bible. "Men spoke from God, being moved by the Holy Spirit," or "as the Spirit gave them utterance," many centuries before either the birth of Campbell or the establishment of the Baptist Church. How could any part of the Bible be regarded as "standard classics" peculiarly suited to either Campbell or the Baptists.

But Mr. Bow minimizes the language of Jesus and his apostles as "standard passages of all Campbell's disciples." Jesus said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) Why should Mr. Bow slur this passage as a "Campbellite classic?" Is it not the language of Jesus? If the Bible does not mean what it says, then it is n t a revelation from God to man. Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." We simply accept the language of the Savior. If language has any meaning, a man must believe and be baptized to be saved. We are wholly unbiased and have no prejudice in the matter. If Jesus had said, "He that believeth and is saved should be baptized," as Mr. Bow is teaching, the Gospel Advocate would promptly accept it. We do not allow ourselves to have a preference in such a matter. Our preference is simply to learn what Jesus said.

The Holy Spirit, through Peter, preaching the first gespel sermon, said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." (Acts 2: 38.) Through Ananias, the Holy Spirit said to Saul of Tarsus: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name." (Acts 22: 16.) Any unprejudiced and unbiased person can readily see that, if language has any meaning, forgiveness of sins is granted when a believing penitent is baptized.

As much as Mr. Bow abhors what he stigmatizes as "the Romish dogma of baptismal regeneration," I wish to remind him that the best, greatest, and most learned men in the Baptist Church have testified that the language of the Scriptures can only mean that baptism is in order to the remission of sins. Alvah Hovey, president of Newton Theological Institute and one of the most learned Baptists in America, commenting on Acts 2: 38, above quoted, says that Peter enjoins repentance and baptism upon the name of Jesus Christ "in order to the forgiveness of sins." (Commentary on Luke, page 62, footnote.) In his Commentary on John (appendix, page 420), referring to the same scripture, he says: "Here repentance and baptism are represented as leading to the forgiveness of sins." On page 421 he says: "Baptism, therefore, saves, because it stands for and means genuine reliance, for the first time, upon the mercy of God in Christ, and, indeed, an earnest request for pardon; it expresses the act of the soul in turning to God, committing itself to God, and seeking his grace." Horatio B. Hackett, in his Commentary on Acts, confessedly one of the finest commentaries ever published by a Baptist, on Acts 2: 38, says: "Eis aphesin hamartion, in order to the forgiveness of sins (Matt. 26: 28; Luke 3: 3), we connect naturally with both the preceding verbs. This clause states the motive or object which should induce them to repent and be baptized. It enforces the entire exhortation, not one part of it to the exclusion of the other." Commenting on Acts 22: 16, he says: "And wash [bathe] away thy sins. This clause states a result of the baptism in language derived from the nature of the ordinance. It answers to cis aphesin hamartion in 2: 38; that is, submit to the rite in order to be forgiven." If space permitted, we could give the testimony of many of the greatest and best men the Baptist Church has ever known, all of which concurs with that of Hovey and Hackett in testifying that people must "submit to the rite in order to be forgiven."

Among the great reformers, Martin Luther, John Calvin, and John Wesley all testified that baptism is not only immersion, but that baptism precedes the remission of sins. Wesley said: "Baptism administered to real penitents is both a means and seal of pardon. Nor did God ordinarily in the primitive church bestow this on any unless through this means." (Wesley's Notes, Acts 22: 16.)

through this means." (Wesley's Notes, Acts 22: 16.)
Mr. Bow quotes: "Every one that believeth on him shall receive remission of sins" (see Acts 10: 43); "cleansing their hearts by faith" (Acts 15: 9); "he shall justify the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith" (Rom. 3: 30); "every one that believeth is justified" (Acts 13: 39); "saved through the grace of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 15: 11); "believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16: 31); "even the righteousness of God through faith in Jesus Christ unto all them that believe" (Rom. 3: 22); "but for our sake also, unto whom it shall be reckoned, who believe on him that raised Jesus our Lord from the dead" (Rom. 4: 24); "to save them that believe" (1 Cor. 1: 21); "that the promise by faith in Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe" (Gal. 3: 22); "sons of God, through faith" (verse 26); "even so must the Son of man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth may in him have eternal life" (John 3: 14, 15); "not by works done in righteousness, which we did ourselves, but according to his mercy he saved us, through the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit" (Tit. 3: 5).

I remind Mr. Bow that passages of scripture that say we are saved by faith are just as standard and classical among us as are all others. Christian preachers frequently and repeatedly quote them. Baptist preachers, such as Mr. Bow, rarely, if ever, quote the passages commanding baptism, unless driven to it; and then they quote them with a slur as "Campbellite classics."

Certainly men and women are saved by faith, by believing on the Lord Jesus Christ. But to quote these passages that so state in an effort to prove that we are saved by a mere assent of the mind is to wrest them from their meaning and to do violence to the word of God. Mr. Bow asserts that if man is saved by baptism, he is saved by something he himself does. He ought to see that the same thing would be true if man is saved by a mere assent of the mind. He come does the saving, if a man is saved by baptism, God would have to do the baptizing. I repeat that, on the same principle, he ought to see that if a man is saved by believing, God would have to do the believing. With all due respect to our friend, such contentions are silly and absurd and indicate a twist in reasoning. There is a sense in which man saves himself. He saves himself by laying hold of the things that God, in infinite mercy and grace, has provided for his redemption. Peter preached the gospel, commanded them to repent and be baptized, and said: "Save yourselves from this crooked generation." (Acts 2: 40.) The gospel, "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (Rom. 1: 16), is given through God's infinite mercy and grace in giving his only begotten Son to suffer and die and to shed his blood for the sins of the world; and those who hear the gospel, while saved by the blood of Jesus and by the mercy and grace of God, also "save themselves" by believing what God says and doing as he commands.

It seems that Mr. Bow does not know what faith is. The way he perverts the passages quoted shows it. Faith is expressed in baptism. To refuse to be baptized is to disbelieve. An assent of the mind, just a little wagging of the tongue, is not the faith that saves. Faith'is not alive and cannot save until it expresses itself in obedience. "Ye see that by works a man is justified, and not only by faith." (James 2: 24.) "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 6: 46.) "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." (John 14: 15.) "Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you." (John 15: 14.) Until faith is alive and manifests itself in obedience, it is not the faith that saves. "Nevertheless even of the rulers many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess it, lest they should be put out of the synagogue: for they loved the glory that is of men more than the glory that is of God." (John 12: 42, 43.) They believed, but they were lost, as their faith was dead. "But the Pharisees and the lawyers rejected for themselves the counsel of God, being not baptized of him." (Luke 7: 30.) The command was to be baptized; but as their faith did not manifest itself in obedience, they rejected God.

We wish to impress it upon the mird of Mr. Bow that only those who do what Jesus commands believe in him. With all due deference and respect to Mr. Bow, but as an illustration, we kindly submit that Mr. Bow himself does not fully believe in Jesus. If he had the faith that pleases God, he would humbly bow his head to the authority of Jesus and tell the people what Peter said.

Our friend is right in saying that a man cannot be saved by his own works or by his own righteousness. When by faith he obeys God, the works are not his own, but are God's, and the righteousness is not his own, but is "a righteousness of God." (Rom. 3: 21.) When a man does "whatsoever is right in his own eyes," and rejects certain passages of scripture, calling them "Campbellite classics," he is doing his own works and his own righteousness. They cannot save him.

The gospel, "the power of God unto salvation," is in fact, command, and promise. The facts are to be believed. the commands obeyed, and the promises received. We ask no man to believe in baptism. When he believes in Him who commands baptism, he will obey the command. The facts of the gospel are the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. (1 Cor. 15: 1-8.) In obeying the commands based on these facts, a person complies with a form of the facts. "But thanks be to God, that, whereas ye were servants of sin, ye became obedient from the heart to that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered; and being made free from sin, ye became servants of righteousness." (Rom. 6: 17, 18.) Jesus shed his blood in his death; and when the penitent believer is "buried therefore with him through baptism into death" (verse 4), he comes in contact with the atoning blood and receives forgiveness of sins. The blood of Christ is not something that may be held or carried around in a bowl. If it were such, it could not be applied to an immaterial scul. Mr. Bow speaks of "the Romish idea of baptismal regeneration" as though he imagined I think that when sins are washed away in baptism they float in the water as wood or stubble. What do our Baptist friends think remission of sins is? No saving virtue resides in water. Material water cannot touch an immaterial soul. Remission of sins is something that takes place in heaven.

God has never blessed or saved men, in any age or dispensation, before testing their faith. Commands of a moral nature have never served as such a test. The laws commanding good morals and forbidding idolatry, fornication, adultery, stealing, lying, etc., are preached and indorsed by men who reject Christ and repudiate his claims. All can see the good in, and the reason for, commandments of such a nature; and, for this very reason, such commandments cannot serve as a test to show whether or not a man has faith in God and will take God at his word. The only commandment that can prove man's faith in God is a commandment of a positive nature; and such a commandment, as contradistinguished from a moral commandment, is a commandment that no man can see any reason in, any good resulting from obedience to it, or any connection between the thing commanded and the blessing to be received, but that the only motive that can lead him to obey it is simply that God commanded it. The command to look at the brazen serpent was an example of a positive command. No man could see any connection between looking and being healed. The only thing that could induce a man to look was simply that God commanded it, not that he himself could see any good in it. No man could see any connection between marching around the walls of Jericho and the falling of the walls. It served as a test of their faith and showed whether or not they would take God at his word.

Baptism, in this, the Christian dispensation, is a supreme test. No man can see any connection between being dipped in water and remission of sins, which takes place in heaven. Confessedly, there is no virtue in water. No man will go through with it until he is willing to have no will of his own, but to submit himself to the will of God. It prevents men from getting into the church who do not have the faith to take God at his word. It sifts the wheat from the chaff.

Our Baptist friends are strangely confused when they talk of baptizing a Christian to make him a member of the church. In the nature of things, the same thing that makes a man a Christian makes him a member of the church. All Christians are children of God; and all of God's children are in God's family, or church. The same thing that makes a man a child of God makes him a member of the church, or family of God. It is as reasonable to talk of a child's joining the family as it is to talk of a Christian's joining the church. The marginal reading on Matt. 28: 18-20, to which Mr. Bow refers, is in some of the Holman Bibles and is a very gross error. "Make Christians" is the comment of an uninspired man, and not, in any sense, a translation of the words that were used by Jesus.

We agree with Mr. Bow that all roads do not lead to heaven. Certainly, "there is no truth in it." A man can be a Christian, a member of the church of Christ, without being a member of either the Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Methodist, or Baptist churches, as there were Christians, members of the church of Christ, many centuries before either of these human denominations was established. In New Testament times God added "day by day those that were saved" to the church (Acts 2: 47), ad all of us who are willing to simply take the Bible for what it says are firm in the conviction that God does that way yet, and that he will continue to so do "even unto the end of the world."

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

TENDING TOWARD DENOMINATIONALISM.

BY J. L. HINES.

In the Firm Foundation of March 10, on page 8, appears an advertisement by "Prof. A. R. Holton, President" of Thorp Spring Christian College. This advertisement is headed, "An Appeal to Our Christian Hosts."

In the outset the "Professor" says: "Thorp Spring, for the past half century and more, has been used as a great educational center for the Christian Church of Texas." Does "Professor" Holton mean to call the disciples of Christ in Texas "the Christian Church of Texas?" If not, that is the impression it makes on his readers, anyway.

First, "Christian Church" is an unscriptural name, and is in the same class with such titles as "Disciples Church," "Nazarene Church," "Baptist Church," etc. It seems to me that the greatest blunderers are those who pose as educators. "Professor," why not speak as the oracles of God and say "the church," "church of God," "churches of Christ," etc., unless you think "the church" is one among the denominations?

Second, "educational center for the Christian Church." I wonder if the "Professor" means that Thorp Spring Christian College is owned and operated by "the church?" If so, it is an unscriptural institution, just as much so as the United Christian Missionary Society. If not, why not? The United Christian Missionary Society receives money from the churches for the purpose of supporting missionaries, building houses, etc. Thorp Spring Christian College, if owned by "the church," receives money from the churches for the purpose of supporting a faculty, building houses, etc. If Thorp Spring Christian College is not owned by "the church," why beg money from the churches and thus burden the brethren to pay the debts of a private enterprise, drain the treasury of the local church, and retard missionary activities?

Christians have a legal and scriptural right to own and operate schools, as private institutions, just as farmers, business men, or printers; but just a little common Bible judgment teaches us the impropriety of farmers, business men, or printers' begging the churches for money to run their private business. Yet a Christian farmer has the same right to beg the churches for funds to run a Christian farm as a Christian teacher has to beg the churches for funds to run a Christian school. There is no authority for either in the Scriptures. Even if Christian business men should start such a "drive," scarcely a cent would they get unless they tacked "Bible" or "Christian" to the name of their enterprise. The same is true of the colleges. If brethren cannot run schools on a solid financial basis, they had better quit. But after securing thousands of dollars from the brethren at large, I find that board and tuition in said colleges are no cheaper than others. So much for that.

The "Professor" makes another blunder in that he uses some more denominational thunder. Hear him: "You read our letter to the preachers of our churches," "Our churches," "my church," "your church," "the Christian Church," "Disciples Church," and all like expressions are denominationalism. Such expressions by a denominationalist could be expected, but from one who claims to speak as the oracles of God it comes as a shock, especially when such a one poses before the brethren as "president" of a "Christian College," Who wants to assist in raising fifteen thousand dollars to help a school and then send their children to such an institution to have them taught denominationalism?

I see a dark cloud rising above the horizon. It is being driven forward by the cold puffs of ambitious educators and degree-hunting preachers, and by not a few women. But, thanks be to God, I see a host of men and women, clothed in spiritual uniform, with sword drawn, set for the defense of the truth.

ONE OF THE SWEETEST MOTHERS THAT EVER LIVED.

BY S. H. HALL.

Loved ones have died in our home and I have seen them die in other homes; I have stood by aching, sorrowing hearts when loved ones and even mothers were being buried and done my best to speak comfort and consolation to their bleeding hearts; but when the news came that my own mother had slipped out of this world into that one seen only by faith, I must confess that it brought a sadness never before known to me. Our papers are published for the good they can do; or, to say the least, this should be the one controlling purpose for saying anything, either by tongue or pen. "Let all things be done unto edifying" is the way the Spirit instructs us, and is the way we should try to live; hence, in what I shall say in this article about mother, I want to say it so as to help some soul to live more for God and the heavenly state.

Mother was one of the sweetest spirits that it has ever been my pleasure to know. I would not say that she was the sweetest; for Mrs. Hall has a mother still living that is so much like my own mother, in every way, that I cannot now see wherein either excelled the other. And besides this, I have been blessed in knowing quite a number of wonderful mothers the little time I have lived here to know people. No, mother was not the sweetest and best, but one of them. About this there can be no doubt.

I never heard mother say an unkind thing about a soul as far back as memory will let me go with her. If there is anything about my nature that is kind, it came from her; and it is the right kind of kindness, too, for she had none except that which she got from the Spirit divine. I remember that the good Book says: "My son, . . . forsake not the law of thy mother." And the same writer says, in "the oracles" a mother taught her son: "The law of kindness is on her tongue." Yet mother was not a woman that winked at sin and whitewashed sinners. Aindness was the very heart and soul of every word of reproof or correction she gave her children, and never did she allow herself to talk of the wrongdoing and sins of others that kindness of heart did not control her tongue.

I have read descriptions given by others, and have enjoyed the imagery so beautifully and accurately portrayed, but never have I read one so real and vivid and that so truly describes my own mother, as that given below. There is hardly a thought expressed that does not fasten my mind on that which I have seen in her with my own eyes. Let us here read it, and may the mothers who read it strive to give their own children what mother has given to her own, and may every unmarried daughter who reads it hunger to live such a life and fill well the life here described:

"A worthy woman who can find? For her price is far above rubies. The heart of her husband trusteth in her, and he shall have no lack of gain. She doeth him good and not evil all the days of her life. She seeketh wool and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands. She is like the merchant ships; she bringeth her bread from afar. She riseth also while it is yet night, and giveth food to her household, and their task to her maidens. She considereth a field, and buyeth it; with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard. She girdeth her loins with strength, and maketh strong her arms. She perceiveth that her merchandise is profitable; her lamp goeth not out by night. She layeth her hands to the distaff, and her hands hold the spindle. She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy. She is not afraid of the snow for her household; for all her household are clothed with scarlet. She maketh for herself carpets of tapestry; her clothing is fine linen and purple. Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land. She maketh linen garments and selleth them, and delivereth girdles unto the merchant. Strength and dignity are her clothing; and she laugheth at the time to come. She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and the law of kindness is on her tongue. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children rise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her, saying: Many daughters have done worthily, but thou excellest them all. Grace is deceitful, and beauty is vain; but a woman that feareth Jehovah, she shall be praised. Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her works praise her in the gates." (Prov. 31: 10-31.)

What if every mother on earth were such a character? Would this old world not be a good place in which to live? Certainly mother did father "good and not evil all the days of her life." Indeed, she worked "willingly with her hands." And how often did she arise while it was "yet night" and give "food to her household!" How often have I seen her put out fruit trees with her own hands! This she did so long as she was able. And when some one would say, "Why, mother, you will never live to enjoy the fruit of the seed you are planting," she had but one reply: "I am trying to fix things for somebody else to enjoy after I am gone." Yes, she would lay "her hands to the distaff, and her hands hold the spindle," with all that this means. I can remember holding the skein as she wound the thread into balls that she had made on the old spinning wheel. Indeed, she stretched out her "hand to the poor." Many times have I seen her fix the buttons on the coats of the "tramps," as we then called them, who would call at our home for a piece of bread. Never did she of her own accord turn a beggar away. Father at times would tell her that she was making a mistake in giving so much away-that many tramps are such just because of unwillingness to work. But her answer, almost invariably, was: "I can't stand the thought of one of my children's being hungry or cold and any one's refusing to give bread and warmth when in their power to do so. He is the son of some mother, and I know not who she is, but I know how she feels." O, what a mother she was! A billion worlds could not buy from me the impressions she made on my soul, not so much by what she said, but by what I saw her do with her own hands.

I have said all that space will allow, but not all that my heart wants to say. Mother was born on February 23, 1842, and died suddenly on February 24, 1925. She had lived to bury five of her own children and four stepchildren and father, who preceded her in death about eight years and who died at the age of eighty-two, and is survived by two sons and one stepdaughter. She had observed her eighty-third birthday in the home of Sister John Batey, near the old Rock Spring Church, where she had seen all of her children baptized into Christ. She was almost foolishly fond of Sister Batey and her children, and never can I forget them for being so kind and sweet to mother. She had enjoyed the day, had played some with the children before retiring, and seemed to have slept well, but at six o'clock the next morning fell asleep in the arms of her Lord while seated in a chair. Mrs. Hall and I were in Los Angeles, Cal., at the time, and this made it all the harder for us. But the fact that she slipped out so quickly and did not linger to call for me-which she certainly would have done had she lingered-enabled us to stand up under the shock. We were right in the midst of a wonderful meeting with the Central church of Christ in Los Angeles. Her death came on the tenth day of the meeting, and there were but five more days remaining.

It took but a moment's thought to decide what must be done-viz., push the work all the harder, if possible, till my promised time had been fulfilled, then hurry home to do for the body in which she once lived all that love knows to do. The thing that made this possible was the consciousness that I had that this was exactly what she would have said do. The rule of my life has been to never let the putting away of bodies in which souls once lived interfere with my efforts to rescue perishing souls in bodies yet alive Mother had always stood by me in this. So I wired my brother at once to embalm the body and place it in a vault to await our return.

As most of the readers know, Mrs. Hall and I returned to the East the first of 1922, so that we could be close to mother and do whatever was in our power to make her last days happy. She spent half the time with us and the other half with Brother Tom and wife, and the wives of two men never played a sweeter rôle in their efforts to help their husbands be faithful and true to this sweet. mother in her old age than our wives did. Mother was devoted to both of her daughters-in-law. Brother and I will ever be thankful for what God enabled us to do to the one who had meant so much to us.

Mrs. Hall and I arrived in Nashville at 9 P.M., March 5, and mother was buried in City View Cemetery, near our old home, in Rutherford County, Tenn., on March 6. Brother F. W. Smith conducted the services, and beautiful indeed they were. He will never know how much like a father he then felt to me. She saw him baptize me into Christ about thirty-three years ago and loved him much. F. B. Srygley is another preacher she very much loved, and he would have helped with the services had he been here. One of the things we had planned when we got back from Los Angeles was to have Brother Smith and Brother Srygley in our home for dinner with mother.

May God bless all of our boys and girls with love and tender affection for their mothers. May he raise up more mothers like mine. And, in closing, I want to thank all who have sent cards and letters and telegrams expressing their sympathy. Russell Street, as a congregation, was so sweet and good to us. Mother is gone, so far as this life is concerned, and now I must strive all the more earnestly to go onward and upward with the work Christ gave his life to establish.

TENNESSEE ORPHAN HOME, COLUMBIA, TENN. BY J. W. F.

The writings of Brother J. C. McQuiddy in behalf of the Tennessee Orphan Home continue to bear fruit. He wrote articles quarterly, suggesting that Christians could help orphan and dependent children by taking them into their own homes or contributing to the Tennessee Orphan Home, where they are properly trained and cared for.

The great apostle to the Gentiles, in admonishing the elders of Ephesus, among other things, said: "In all things I gave you an example, that so laboring ye ought to help the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, that he himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Since the annual report of November 1, 1924, to this date twenty-six new children have been admitted and twelve formerly placed in homes have been returned, making thirty-eight admittances. During the same period forty have been placed. Fifteen applicants are now on the waiting list, to be admitted as room can be made for them.

Many congregations give monthly contributions, and others give quarterly, semiannually, and annually, which can be counted on for maintaining the children. Now, as the number of children to be cared for are increasing, it is to be hoped that congregations not heretofore having fellowship with the Tennessee Orphan Home will join in the partnership with those who are maintaining the Home, which will result in more good being done. Those situated to care for orphans in their respective families are doing as good work as those helping to care for them in the Home. We all admit it is the duty of a Christian to help the needy, and the Tennessee Orphan Home stands ready to cooperate in every good work. Prompt acknowledgments are made of contributions, and visitors are welcomed at all times to investigate the work of the Home.

BROTHER MORTON'S "ACCOUNT OF LABORS."

The venerable and sainted Brother James H. Morton, of Lewisburg, Tenn., has published, in pamphlet form, a very interesting account of his labors in the gospel. The account of the experiences of Brother Morton, through the many years of his long and eventful life in which he has preached the Word, will prove helpful and beneficial to all who will give it a careful perusal. Many years ago Brother Morton had the very high honor of being the man who baptized J. C. McQuiddy, editor and business manager of the Gospel Advocate for over forty years, and to whose busy and eventful career many thousands are eternally indebted.

Brother Morton's "Account of Labors" sells for fifteen cents per single copy; ten or more copies for ten cents. Copies may be had by writing directly to Brother Morton at Lewisburg, Tenn., Route 9.

REPLY TO THE GOSPEL ADVOCATE.

BY REV. J. G. BOW, D.D., LOUISVILLE, KY.

This sheet, published at Nashville, Tenn., still rings true to Campbell's doctrine that immersion for the remission of sins is the "gospel in water."

In their issue of March 12 they take me to task for an article in the Western Recorder, because I said, "Baptism has nothing to do with the salvation of the soul."

He says, "Any man is standing in his own light who depends on sprinkling or pouring;" and he could with equal truthfulness have added or immersion.

None of these acts were ever designed to save the soul. Paul said: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." (Eph. 2: 8-10.) "Saved by grace through faith."

Some one has used the illustration that all the main avenues in the city of Washington lead up to the National Capitol. Get on any one of them and turn toward the center of the city, and it will lead you up to the Capitol. This, he said, is an illustration of the various churches. All going to the same place, but going by different ways. He said the Episcopal Church is one way to heaven, the Presbyterian Church is another way to heaven, the Methodist Church another way to heaven, the Baptist Church (meaning, I suppose, what we mean by the Baptist denomination) was another way to heaven, the Disciples Church another way to heaven, and so on to the end of the catalogue.

You often hear: "We are all going to the same place, but boing by different ways." There is no truth in it. None of these churches is the way to heaven. We do not believe, do not teach, that the Baptist Church is the way to heaven. Jesus said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14: 6.) Whenever you exalt a church or an ordinance to be the savior of souls, you misrepresent the gospel, dethrone Christ, and delude souls, even if you so exalt the ordinance of baptism.

Peter said: "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4: 12.)

The writer states: "It is equally difficult to understand how Mr. Bow can say baptism has nothing to do with salvation."

Not at all difficult to one who wants to know and is willing to accept the truth. The Bible teaches: "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." Then, to teach that you must add baptism to cleanse or save the soul contradicts God's word and brands him as a liar; for John said: "He that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." He does not earn it by any kind of obedience; God gives it. It is in his Son and not in man's baptism.

The Advocate quotes the standard passages of all Campbell's disciples. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." (Mark 16: 16.) Nowhere in the Bible does it say he that is not baptized shall be damned. It is only upon the unbeliever that that doom is pronounced, as in this same verse.

"Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." (Acts 2: 38.) That is far different from the Advocate's interpretation, "in order that your sins may be remitted." Lastly: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts 22: 16.) This, of course, is a symbolical cleansing. Water cannot wash the sin stains away from the soul.

Then the writer in the Advocate adds: "We have no other motive than simply to take the Bible for what it says. Very well. Let us see if he means that. In Acts 10: 43 this same apostle, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, said: "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Will he take the Bible for what it says? Here is Peter and all the prophets, about forty in number, all testifying to the believer receiving remisof sins. "Through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." And this enjoins upon them the duty of being baptized, and Peter so commands. Note, after they had believed and received remission of sins, and God had purified their hearts by faith, then, and not until then, were they scriptural subjects for baptism. And Peter asks: "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?"

Take notice, Peter says: "Put no difference between us [Jews] and them [these Gentiles], purifying their hearts by faith." Saving all alike—namely, by faith. As Paul said: "Seeing it is one God, which shall justify the circumcision (the Jew] by faith, and uncircumcision [the Gentile] through faith." (Rom. 3: 30.) That sounds quite different from the teachings of Campbell, Lard, Tyler, Anderson, McGarvey, and the Advocate.

You say baptism is commanded. Yes, most certainly, but only to the believers. It is a farce and a sin to be baptized before believing, before being regenerated. If a citizen should don the uniform of an officer or soldier and go strutting through the camp, he would be arrested as a say.

In the great commission (Matt. 28: 18-20), Jesus, with all authority, commands his redeemed followers to "go," to "teach"—that is, "make disciples, or Christians" (so correctly reads the margin), baptizing them—just these Christians, no one else. That command puts out of commission every man and every church who baptizes any one, adult or infant, to make the recipient a Christian. Jesus Christ requires regeneration before baptism. Only Christians are to be baptized, or else you must expunge the great commission from your Bible.

Again, my friend of the Advocate says: "We will take God's word for what it says." Let us see if he will. "By him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." (Acts 13: 39.) Does he believe what the word says, or must he add baptism? "But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they." (Acts 15: 11.) Does he believe the grace is sufficient, or must be add baptism? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." (Acts 16: 31.) Will he accept the statement of these inspired men, or will he go and add Campbell's baptismal regeneration before he accepts it? "Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe." Please read the paragraph, Rom. 3: 19-31. How easy for him to accept it, if Paul had only said, "upon all them that are baptized!" "Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead," etc. (Rom. 4: 23, 24.) "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." Cor. 1: 21.) "But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe." (Gal. 3: 22.) "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." (Gal. 3: 26.)

In Paul's day no one became a child of God except by faith in Christ Jesus. Neither do they now. Time would fail us to tell of all the undoubted passages that predicate salvation, eternal life, on faith in Jesus Christ. "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." (John 3: 14, 15.) "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3: 16.) So of John 5: 24; 6: 40; Acts 10: 43; Rom. 1: 16; 3: 26; 9: 33; 10: 10; 1 John 5: 10-13; John 20: 31; Eph. 2: 8-10; 1 Pet. 1: 5; Luke 7: 50; and numerous other passages. Does the Advocate writer really believe God's word?

Once more: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." (Tit. 3: 5.) Yes, sir, every one who teaches salvation by baptism says the "washing of regeneration" means water baptism. If that be true, then you dispute the text and claim you are saved by works; but that is not the worst glaring falsehood, because the text says positively that God does the saving, and the means he uses is the "washing of regeneration." Then, if the washing of regeneration is water baptism, that is the means by which God saves the soul; then, of necessity, God must do the baptizing.

If the Romish dogma of baptismal regeneration is true, then God cannot save a soul in this world unless he can get some poor sinner to help him do the baptizing. If that doctrine be true, Jesus never saved any one. He never baptized anybody.

True, Jesus said, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19: 10); and Paul said: "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners" (1 Tim. 1: 15). Now, if baptism is necessary to salvation, then the coming and life and labors of Jesus were dismal failures, or else Jesus and Paul were mistaken about the object of his coming.

A MEETINGHOUSE ON A BATTLEFIELD.

BY L. L. BRIGANCE.

Every real Christian believes in war. He believes it is his duty to fight, to kill, to destroy. In fact, if he is a Christian, he is a soldier. He has already enlisted in the army. He is not a conscript, but a volunteer; and the term of his enlistment is not for three months or a year, but for life. In this army there are no furloughs nor discharges. The only release from service is by desertion or death.

But while all these things are so, the Christian does not believe in carnal warfare. "For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh: (for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds.)" (2 Cor. 10: 3, 4.) Although the Christian soldier is forbidden to take up "carnal weapons" and to "war after the flesh," nevertheless he is commanded to take unto himself "the whole armor of God," "the sword of the Spirit" and to "fight the good fight of faith." In this great warfare every soldier that follows the leadership and obeys the commands of his Captain will come out more than conqueror through Him that loved him.

On the western bank of the Tennessee River, in Hardin County, Tenn., lies one of the greatest battlefields of the Civil War. Here the Blue and the Gray met in mortal combat on April 6, 7, 1862. Out of seventy-seven thousand men engaged, twenty-three thousand of them fell in this awful conflict, the greatest harvest of death that had ever taken place in a single battle on the Western Hemisphere.

The Government of the United States has set aside this famous battlefield as a military park. It contains about four thousand acres, is laid out in beautiful driveways; and is covered with monuments, tablets, and pieces of artillery. The roar of guns and the smoke of battle have long since faded away, and in the mouths of some of the very cannon that belched forth death and destruction on that memorable day sixty-three years ago birds peacefully build their nests and rear their young. Few places to-day could be found more suggestive of peace than Shiloh Military Park.

On this old battlefield there is a little handful of the Lord's army "fighting the good fight of faith." They are striving to preach and practice the gospel of peace. They are weak in numbers and means, but are strong in faith and courage. Two great tabernacle meetings have been held by N. B. Hardeman, with Tommie Nix, of Nashville, and Elam Derryberry, of Portland, Tenn., leading the song services. Another one will be held this summer, beginning on the third Sunday in August. Brother Hardeman will do the preaching and Brother Derryberry will lead the singing.

Now, these brethren are trying to build a meetinghouse in which they and their brethren from all over the country may worship God "as it is written." They have a beautiful and well-located lot inside the park, with a deed that protects them against innovations, and they have subscribed about one thousand dollars. They need about twenty-five hundred or three thousand dollars more. They are asking the brethren and churches to help them on the ground that a meetinghouse on this park will not only serve them, but hundreds of others from all over the country. Thousands of visitors from nearly every State in the Union come to the park every year. Hardsurfaced roads are being built into it from both sides of the river, which means that more and more people will visit it in the future. It is a strategic point at which to build up a New Testament church. All around them the country is destitute, so far as the primitive gospel is concerned. These brethren now meet in an old, dilapidated schoolhouse that is dark, cold, and dirty.

There are many congregations all over the country that could send them one or two hundred dollars and would be all the better for doing so. Their religious enemies—sectarians, digressives, and others—are already predicting failure. They are our brethren, and the cause is worthy. Are we going to let them fail, be humiliated and discouraged, just because we are too selfish to come to their rescue? This is about the only instance in which I have ever made a public appeal for help. I don't like to do it. I wouldn't do it now if I didn't think the situation demanded it and that the case was a worthy one in every sense.

Bring this before your congregation without delay. Send them a liberal contribution. They want to let the contract at once, so the work can start as soon as the weather opens up. Send to E. A. Emmons or John Bell, elders, Pittsburg Landing, Tenn.

OUR MESSAGES

Send us a new subscriber.

Every man is his brother's keeper.

R. P. Cuff preached at Center, Ky., last Lord's day.

Leslie G. Thomas preached at Franklin, Ky., last Sunday.

J. Paul Slayden preached at McMinnville, Tenn., last Lord's day.

J. W. Dickson preached at Lawrence Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

John E. Winkler preached at Pilcher Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

The Nashville Banner says: "The only term in universal use is 'gimme,'"

A. B. Lipscomb preached two splendid sermons at Scottsboro, Ala., last Lord's day.

All Christians should be busy telling their unconverted neighbors what to do to be saved.

Our agents will kindly remember that they are not to receive commissions on their own subscriptions.

Fritzie, in the funny paper, says: "Vot I don't understand iss v'y you cackle so much mitouid laying a egg."

Foy E. Wallace, Jr., and Austin Taylor are to begin a meeting at Kenedy, Texas, April 12, if the Lord wills.

Dr. W. Boyd advises us that E. H. Ijams, of the David Lipscomb College, will preach at Donelson, Tenn., next Lord's day.

C. R. Nichol is in an interesting meeting in Moultrie, Ga., which will continue till April 6; then he will go to Pensacola, Fla.

Lloyd Scobey preached for the New Shops congregation, this city, last Lord's-day morning. William R. Essex preached at night.

John R. Williams, Hornbeak, Tenn., March 23: "The Gospel Advocate is always full of good things. I wish for it a great increase in circulation."

J. W. Dickson preached for the brethren at Franklin, Ky., on the fourth Lord's day in March, with good crowds in attendance. The work there is encouraging.

L. L. Yeagley preached at Foster Street, this city, last Lord's day. There were two confessions, with one baptized "the same hour," and one other placed her membership.

C. G. Vincent, Corsicana, Texas, March 27: "The church here is in a splendid working condition and is doing more than ever before in its history. We all rejoice in the progress made under our God."

T. Q. Martin, of St. Marys, W. Va., will begin a series of meetings at Reid Avenue Church, this city, on the third Sunday in April. B. H. Murphy will conduct the song service. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

C. M. Pullias closed a splendid meeting at Russellville, Ala., last Friday night, with fourteen baptisms. L. B. Jones preached last Sunday morning and night. Brother Pullias will begin at Lawrenceburg, Tenn., next Lord's day.

S. F. Morrow, Tampa, Fla., March 25, sends six subscribers and says: "More to follow. It is no trouble to get subscribers if one will work. We could double in sixty days if we could get workers. I have more than I can do in Florida."

Ira Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, March 23: "The meeting closed here last night. Eighteen additions to the congregation—eight by baptism. Alva Johnson helped us from March 9 to March 18. The writer then continued over the fourth Lord's day. B. R. Bassel led the singing."

F. C. Sowell has given considerable attention to teaching and instructing the children in the Tennessee Orphan Home the Scriptures. So it will be hard to find an equal number of children or grown people more familiar with the teachings of the Bible than the children of this Home.

G. A. Dunn, Jr., Gainesville, Texas, March 24: "During the services of this past Sunday there were eight additions to the Central congregation, which makes twenty-one during the last month and a half. Each Sunday afternoon I preach for surrounding congregations, and was with Valley View this past Sunday."

J. Fairs Nichols, Murray, Ky., March 23: "I preached at Friendship, in this county, yesterday. I am sending in my renewal and also another renewal for the Gospel Advocate. I can say that the Advocate is the very best paper I have yet seen or read. The editors and contributors are to be praised for loyalty to the faith."

F. B. Srygley preached to two large audiences at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, on Sunday, morning and night. He also met with the adult Bible class at the Sunday-school hour and reviewed the lessons studied during the past quarter. W. Silas Moody will teach the class and preach at both services next Sunday.

Willie Hunter, Tompkinsville, Ky., March 23: "I wish you would express, through the Gospel Advocate, my thanks and deep gratitude to the brethren of Nashville, preachers, Christian men and women, for the many kind favors and deep interest shown me while in the hospital. I shall never forget the splendid Christians of Nashville."

H. F. Oliver, Austin, Texas, March 23: "At the close of the sermon last night, when the invitation for those who desired to obey the truth was given, a man and his wife came forward and made the good confession, and will be immersed to-morrow night. Also, two others placed their membership with the Hyde Park Church and will work for the Lord's cause with us in the future."

W. M. Oakley, Cookeville, Tenn., March 27: "Our work in Putnam County moves on. During the month of March I have preached at Buffalo Valley, Smyrna, Martin's Creek, Antioch, and will preach at Baxter to-morrow. At all of these places the Lord's work is prospering. Our tent work will begin soon. We are looking forward with pleasure to the time. I am praying and working, leaving results with the Lord."

W. F. Lemmons, Hagansport, Texas, March 23: "I preached here on Saturday night, yesterday morning, and last night. I baptized three yesterday evening—two Baptists. I have held several meetings here and one debate with the Baptists. The work at Pecan Gap is getting in a way to accomplish more than hitherto. We have started a midweek Bible study and song practice. I can hold some summer meetings."

Mrs. D. L. Paden, Cherokee, Ala., March 16: "Another good brother, Warren Paden, aged thirty, of this place, has gone to receive his reward. Brother Paden was found dead in the log woods near his home on the evening of March 16. He was killed by a log that rolled back after it had gone nearly on the wagon. This good brother was counted by every one who knew him as an exceptionally fine man, and all who knew him mourn his departure."

A. J. Bachman, Huntington, W. Va., March 23: "The Lord's work is progressing nicely in this city. Four have been added to the fellowship in the last three weeks. The congregation here has bought a lot in a good section of the city and hopes to build a new meetinghouse in the near future. If the brethren or congregations will send us a contribution to help us pay for the lot, we will appreciate it very much. We feel that we can do a greater work for the Lord when we get a new building. Will you help us to get it?"

Jesse R. Bailey, Rock Island, Tenn., March 9: "I have changed my address from Daylight to Rock Island. There is no church of Christ at Rock Island, so I go seven miles to Antioch to worship. I preached for them there last Lord's day. There is a faithful little band there, and I am encouraging them to subscribe for the Gospel Advocate, and several have promised to subscribe in the near future. I go to Cherry Springs, in Warren County, next Lord's day. I have been taking the Advocate for some time, and would feel lost without it."

James E. Chessor, Spencer, Tenn., March 23: "H. M. Phillips, who labors for the Lawrence Avenue church of Christ, in Nashville, Tenn., closed a twelve-days' meeting here on Friday night, March 20. Brother Phillips gave chapel talks each morning and preached at night and three times on Sunday. Four were haptized and five reclaimed. Eight of these are students of Burritt College. Brother Phillips is an excellent chapel lecturer, and the faculty and student body concur in the opinion that the choice of Brother Phillips was fortunate. The church also was edified and much pleased with his strong gospel sermons."

Preach to your neighbors.

If a Christian is not enjoying his profession, something is wrong with it.

Jesus established one church. Uninspired and fallible men started the rest of them.

No man should covet his neighbor's wife, but every man should covet a large, generous heart.

The righteous cannot hold out the olive branch of peace so long as the forces of evil are active.

There are two pathways through life—the narrow and the broad. In which are you journeying?

Infidelity has made no progress in abolishing the Bible, as it has more admirers than ever before.

Casting out beams is a better calling than mote pulling. The former can be practiced with much profit.

Men must learn to master untoward conditions before they can master themselves and their fellow men.

If some men worked as vigorously at the religion of Jesus Christ as they do at pulling motes out of the eyes of their brethren, they would yield a mighty influence for good.

No man should be willing to fill a position for which he has not been specially fitted by consecration of heart and training. God wants consecrated and trained men for his work.

When God wants a man for a great work, he measures him on the inside and not on the outside. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but Jehovah looketh on the heart."

Cecil B. Douthitt, Martin, Tenn.: "Foy E. Wallace, Jr., of Wichita Falls, Texas, and Austin Taylor, of Uvalde, Texas, were with the church at Martin, Tenn., for a protracted meeting which began on March 1 and continued eleven days. Four were baptized during the meeting, and on Sunday after the meeting closed E. P. Smith baptized a prominent physician of the town. Many others were deeply interested who hitherto have not been."

Inez Buford Baker, Dickson, Tenn.; "I am so happy to be able to read the Gospel Advocate again. For two or three years my eyes were so I could not read at all, and I quit taking the Advocate. It is like an old friend returned after a long absence. I can read a little now, and wanted the Advocate at once. It stands for a pure gospel. As soon as possible I want to try to get every one who has just come into the church to take the paper, for it will be such a help to them. The Lord bless the paper and every one connected with it."

Dr. R. L. Eaton, Atlanta, Ga., March 27: "I want to thank you and all connected with the Gospel Advocate for the very splendid way and manner in which the grand old advocate of the truth is being handled. It seems to me that it gets better with every issue. I hope you will continue to 'lay on, Macduff.' We at West End Avenue are now hearing the truth expressed by Brother Hardeman in a way that we have not heard before. He is a mighty man of God. All are interested. Good audiences are attending."

W. D. Black, Sweetwater, Texas, March 26: "We are busy in the Lord's work. At the night service last Sunday we had six additions to the local congregation—four restored and two by membership. This makes thirteen additions since last report, four having placed their membership and three being restored prior to this. In addition to the local work here, I drove to Eden, Texas, on March 2 and preached five nights and two days, assisting Clem Wesley Hoover in a meeting which he had carried on seven or eight days. One was baptized before I arrived and one after I got there, with one or two restored. Please note that our meeting at Sweetwater, with C. McClung, of Weatherford, doing the preaching, will begin on April 5."

Will W. Slater, Neosho, Mo., March 17: "The meeting at Roland, Okla., closed with three baptized and one restored. About eighteen promised to keep house for the Lord. John Towery held a meeting there last fall and baptized several. Brother Towery is a good man, but has never yet taken a stand on the music question, and they had been using the organ all the time. I gave a lesson on that subject, and feel sure much good will come from it. Brother Taylor did excellent work as a singer. The church at Fort Smith will hold a meeting for them this year, and Brother Green will preach in the afternoon on Sundays until the work is well under way. This leaves me in Neosho in a meeting with W. T. Hines. He is doing the preaching and I am leading the songs."

Right living is based on sound doctrine. A man who does not believe and teach the truth is not living right, howsoever pious and sanctimonious he may be.

K. C. Moser, Oklahoma City, Okla., March 24: "F. L. Young, of Paris, Texas, has recently closed a meeting with the Tenth and Francis congregation of this city. There were no additions, yet I am sure that much good was accomplished. Brother Young will be remembered as a very consecrated and deeply spiritual character. Two fine young men were baptized last Lord's day. We are still hoping that we will be able to start another congregation here this year. Several more churches are needed."

Bynum Black, Ma Alester, Okla, March 27: "With March.

gation here this year. Several more churches are needed."

Bynum Black, McAlester, Okla., March 27: "With Mrs. Black and Bynum, Jr., I made a visit back to Arkansas recently. I found the cause prospering in most places we visited. I preached at Grubbs, in Jackson County, and at a place in Cardin Bottom, on the Arkansas River, west of Little Rock. One lady who decided to give up Baptist doctrine came forward and demanded baptism. I shall leave in a few days for Moody, Texas, for a meeting, and then hope to be at home some before the close of J. Will Henley's meeting, which will begin about April 5."

G. F. Mills, Midlothian, Texas: "May I not congratulate Henley's meeting, which will begin about April 5."

G. F. Mills, Midlothian, Texas: "May I not congratulate the Gospel Advocate on its first-page editorials? They have the earmarks of the gospel in its purity and simplicity. They correspond with the teaching and preaching of the pioneers of the reformation, Alexander Campbell, Barton W. Stone, Ben Franklin, Tolbert Fanning, John H. Dunn (who was an uncle of mine), and many others. Let me encourage and admonish you to stay in the old paths, for the simple gospel obeyed will surely gain the pearl of great price, I don't think that there has appeared a better piece in the Advocate in a long time than the first-page editorial of February 26."

J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., March 22: "It has been

J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., March 22: "It has been several weeks since my last report of the work at C Street Church, this city. We have had three additions, but we had to withdraw from three for ungodly conduct. It was painful for us to withdraw from one of our former elders, but his conduct was such that we had no other choice, so at the eleven-o'clock service to-day we publicly withdrew from William E. Eckenrode and two sisters for creating divisions in the congregation. We all feel that a bright future is before us since we have removed them from our midst. As in other instances where parties have been withdrawn from, others who have been deceived by them are in a pouting mood, but we are hopeful that they will soon learn of their error and do their duty. Pray for us."

soon learn of their error and do their duty. Pray for us."

J. D. Matthews, Marietta, Okla., March 25: "I am just home from a trip through the northern part of Oklahoma. While on this trip I preached at Healdton, Wirt, Gipsy, Maysville, and Bristow. My son that was burned in the Bristow explosion on January 29 will soon be ready to go to work again. We have a small but faithful band of brethren at Bristow. This is the home of Rue Porter. I heard him preach three excellent discourses while there. Frank Murry is preaching half time for Healdton and half for Wirt. On my way home I visited Paul's Valley and heard Ira Wommack preach one discourse. I filled my regular appointment at Lebanon on the fourth Lord's day in March, preaching on Saturday night and on Sunday and Sunday night. I preached at Powell on Sunday afternoon. Hardy E. Baugh is working with the church at Marietta at the present time, and the work is moving along very nicely. I have some time for meetings not yet taken. Brethren desiring my services should address me at Marietta, Okla., P. O. Box 72."

DAVID LIPSCOMB ON ORGANIZATION.

(Gospel Advocate, March 24, 1910.)

All meetings of churches or officers of churches to combine more power than a single church possesses is wrong. God's power is in God's churches. He is with them to bless and strengthen their work when they are faithful to him. A Christian, one or more, may visit a church with or without an invitation and seek to stir them up to a faithful discharge of their duties. But for one or more to direct what and how all the churches shall work, or to take charge of their men and money and use it, is to assume the authority God has given to each church. Each one needs the work of distributing and using its funds as well as in giving them.

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Bemittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

EDITORIAL

"THE CREED IN THE DEED."

BY F. W. SMITH.

The much discussed subject of the so-called "creed in the deed" occupied quite a prominent place in the recent discussion at Columbia, Tenn., especially in so far as J. J. Walker was concerned, who evidently thought he was making quite a "hit" for the organ and society brethren. While Brother G. C. Brewer met and completely exposed Walker's quibbling over the "restrictive" clause in the deed to church property, I wish to publish the following with suitable comments:

The recent action of the State Senate in passing the anti-evolution bill brings forcibly to mind how little some people have advanced.

The bill passed is not constitutional in that it sets up a particular religious view as being the one that the State schools are to be governed by—namely, the popular literal interpretation of the story of creation in the book of Genesis.

A recent article in a journal published in Scotland, ferring in a whole column article to the anti-evolution bill ferring in a whole column article to the anti-evolution bill in Tennessee, stated that the only place among the English-speaking races of the world that such an act would even be considered was in the United States of America. As much as I feel ashamed of the supreme legislative body of my State, I earnestly hope that it is the only State in the Union which could pass such a bill in the form that it was, and, with the same sense of shame for the Union, I am glad the United States is the only English-speaking country in the world which would even consider such an act. sider such an act.

It is not a question of whether evolution is true or not true, but a case of the popular sentiment of a people developed and intrenched to the extent where they have become arrogant, bigoted, and degraded to the point of resorting to force to insure that their own belief will be taught. I feel that if they could they would eliminate the principle of evolution in other schools and colleges and even churches, and also other so-called "modern thought."

The idea of evolution is no new thing; it is as old as history; the most ancient records record it, both physical and spiritual.

Any one who will take the trouble to inquire into the matter can readily find that there is nothing to fear in the teaching of evolution. It is not that that makes young people irreligious. It is the preconceived ideas of the orthodox, the hypocrisy (that also has seriously hampered the missionary in his work among the so-called heathen), the refusal to face truth, and the principle of meeting questions with a rebuke and abuse.

questions with a rebuke and abuse.

Let us make our young folks more religious by recognizing the truth. Youth must have the truth, and nothing but the truth; they will get it one way or another. So why make knowledge prohibitory? Why be afraid? It is fear (as said one Senator who said he was afraid not to believe the Bible story) that drives the orthodox to restricting knowledge. But fear never conquered in the world and never will conquer, and the truth will win out. And it will be little thanks that the generation that passed the bill will get from those to come, who ever demand the the bill will get from those to come, who ever demand the light, the way, and the truth.

E. M. MATTHEWS.

1501 Fatherland Street.

The above appeared in the Nashville Tennessean of March 19. This is, in principle, exactly what the restrictive clause in the deed to church property is intended to do, and it would be interesting to know just how J. J. Walker stands on the action of the State Legislature in enacting a law to prohibit the teaching of evolution in our public schools. Most certainly the public schoolhouses of the State belong to the State, because they are built by the State's money, just as meetinghouses are built and owned by those who furnish the money.

Now, if the State has the right to protect her children against the teaching in our schools of that which is regarded as harmful because it squarely contradicts the word of God as to the "origin" of man, why would not those owning meetinghouses have the right to protect their property against being used to propagate what they regard as doctrine contrary to the word of God?

It may be that our friend, J. J. Walker, will claim, as does E. M. Matthews, that "the bill passed is not constitutional in that it sets up a particular religious view as being the one that the State schools are to be governed by-namely, the popular literal interpretation of the story of creation in the book of Genesis." The "fallacy" of such reasoning as the above is apparent from several considerations.

(1) Since the State authorities are sponsors of our public schools, will E. M. Matthews or J. J. Walker dare say it is unconstitutional for the State to exercise the authority in selecting the kind of teachers to be employed in the public schools, a thing which has always been done, and against which no complaint has been made?

(2) The State, by the passage of the bill under consideration, does not say to E. M. Matthews or any one cise outside of those over whom the State has control and for whose instruction she is responsible, that he or any other citizen shall not believe the theory of Charles Darwin regarding the origin of man, or that he shall not teach such infidelity to his children.

(8) If a father or mother has the right to say what shall be taught their children in the home, because the children are committed to their care, why has not the State the right to say what shall be taught the children committed to its care?

(4) How dare E. M. Matthews or any other evolutronist limit the State's guardianship, while freely exercising such guardianship himself?

(5) But we are told that "the bill passed is not constitutional in that it sets up a particular religious view." This complaint could as well be lodged against the Constitution of the United States, because that document prescribes "a particular religious view "-viz.: "That all men have a natural and indefeasible right to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own conscience." Let Mr. Matthews, J. J. Walker, or any one else undertake to interfere with this "particular religious view," and see how far they will get in prohibiting it.

(6) It is because of that clause in the Constitution of these United States that parents have the right to teach their children what they believe the Bible inculcates, and on the same principle the State has the right to prohibit the teaching to those committed to its care that which it regards as destructive of faith in the word of God.

RESORTING TO FORCE.

E. M. Matthews thinks the opposition to the infidel theory that denies the Bible account of creation, including the origin of man, emanates from "arrogant, bigoted, and degraded" people "to the point of resorting to force to insure that their own belief will be taught." This is a terrible arraignment of those who believe the Bible, and on their behalf E. M. Matthews' statement is here flatly and unequivocally denied. J. J. Walker and those of his way of thinking indulge in the same sort of tirade against those who insert the "restrictive clause" in deeds to church property.

But to show the falsity and inconsistency of the position of both Matthews and Walker, let us note (1) the fact that Matthews (I will suppose) owns the home in which he lives and to which he holds a deed in his own name. Does any one for one moment, in the light of his condemnation of the act passed by the Legislature, believe that E. M. Matthews would permit what he calls an "orthodox hypocrite" to use his house to teach against rodern evolution? If not, on what ground would he prohibit such teaching, if not on the legal ground of personal ownership? But, according to Matthews, contention against the State, he himself would use force. (2) J. J. Walker is preaching in a house deeded to and owned by the "Christian Church." This very fact constitutes what Walker terms the "creed in the deed," and against which he so vehemently rants. Does any one believe that the Woodland Street Church would permit its house to be used to teach what that church does not believe the Bible teaches? Would it open the doors of its meetinghouse on the demand of one who wanted to teach that the Bible is not divinely inspired and that Jesus is not the divine Son of God? If not, on what ground, if not because of the legal document called a "deed" and personal ownership, would it, or could it, withhold the keys to the house? Now, if Brother Walker's church, by its legal document. restricts the kind of teaching and practice that is to be engaged in in their meetinghouse, why is it wrong for others, by a legal document, to do the same?

WALKER'S PEOPLE PUT "CREEDS" IN DEEDS.

For the benefit of Brother Walker and all who contend that the "restrictive clause" in the deeds to church property constitute a "creed in the deed," I call attention to the fact that the Christian Standard, the chief organ of those who use instrumental music in their worship and work through humanly organized missionary societies, not only indorses the "creed in the deed," but actually rejoices over the matter. In its issue of July 2, 1910, the Christian Standard, after its sharp criticism of the Gospel Advocate on what it termed the "creed in the deed," in the very same issue, on its editorial page, said: "We note with extreme pleasure the endowment of a Bible chair in Bethany College by T. W. Phillips, who donates thirty thousand dollars for the purpose, and with even greater pleasure we note the precaution taken that this fund shall be held sacred for this purpose. The donor stipulates that the chair shall never be filled by one who denies the miraculous birth, the divinity, or the actual resurrection of Jesus. The written condition on which he endows the chair stipulates that the trustees of the college may have three months to remove an offending teacher, and that, on failure to do so, the thirty thousand dollars shall be forfeited at once to the National Benevolent Association." How does Brother Walker like his "creed in the deed?" What is the difference between deeding money and deeding houses? Do not houses represent money?

But back to E. M. Matthews. He says: "Let us make our young folks more religious by recognizing the truth." He means, we suppose, "the truth" that man sprang from a monkey. Just how such a conception of man's origin could make any one more religious is difficult to comprehend, but it is easy to understand how such a conception could lower man in his own estimation and cause him to wish that Mr. Monkey had not brought him into existence; for pride of ancestry is a noble thing, and the monkey theory destroys such noble feelings.

Unlike Mr. Matthews, I am proud of my State and those who passed the bill against which he writes; and if it becomes a law, great will be the thanks of all who believe God's word.

ANOTHER GOOD MAN HAS GONE FROM US. BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

On January 21, 1925, at his home in Franklin County, near Russellville, Ala., our brother, John T. Underwood, passed, by death, into the eternal state of the kingdom. The body of our friend and brother was buried at Spruce Pine, Ala. Funeral services were conducted by Brethren Jones, of Russellville; J. H. Horton, of Tuscumbia; and J. F. Chambers, of Florence.

Brother Underwood was about seventy-three years old, and had been a preacher of the ancient gospel about forty-five years. He was a humble, good man, who was entirely satisfied with what he could read in the Bible. He preached the conditions of salvation from past sins which are found in the commission of the Lord and that were preached by his chosen apostles. He was also satisfied with the simple worship which the apostles approved in the days of inspiration.

Brother Underwood was a student of Mars' Hill Academy, as I remember, in 1880, his last year there being my first year. While Mars' Hill was not established with any view of opposing innovations upon the worship of God, such as instrumental music and human organizations for the spread of the gospel-for these things were not discussed at that time, as they had spread but little-yet I believe that fewer pupils of that school have gone into these unscriptural things than any other school I know. Brother Larimore had a way of impressing upon young men the importance of the Bible, and the Bible alone, which had a wonderful influence in holding them to the truth. There was never any question about the ownership or control of this school. It was owned by Brother Larimore and controlled by the principles of New Testament teaching. Christian men and women taught in it, and it was, in a very important sense, a Christian school; but it was not owned by the churches, nor was it thrust upon them for their support. When Brother Larimore saw proper to quit teaching the school at Mars' Hill, it ccased to be, and, therefore, could never depart from the faith and become a menace to New Testament teaching.

After Brother Underwood left Mars' Hill, he settled at Marietta, Miss., and supplemented his support from the churches by the labor of his hands. He never had a business or an occupation that prevented him from contending earnestly for the faith. While he lived at Marietta, I was called there to defend the teaching of the New Testament on the subject, action, and design of baptism. in a public discussion. It was through his influence and effort that this discussion was arranged and carried through. The bold stand he made against what he believed to be error may have injured his business with some of his influential neighbors, but he loved what he believed to be the truth better than he did his business. From Marietta he moved back to Alabama and settled on a good farm in what we used to call "Russellville Valley," where he made his home till his death.

Though Brother Underwood was a preacher of no mean ability, he was never a care upon the churches, as he labored with his hands for his support and for the support of others who were dependent upon him. Like the apostle Paul in his memorable speech to the elders of the church at Ephesus, he could have said: "Yea, ye yourselves know, that these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me. I have showed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20: 34, 85.) No doubt he received financial help from churches and individual Christians; but most of those who loved the apostolic way in North Mississippi and North Alabama were poor in this world's goods, and he, therefore, chose not to be a burden on them. I believe that men can consistently receive a support for themselves and families while they do nothing but preach the word, yet it would have been impossible to have permanently planted the truth in the field where he labored had it not been for men like him who could preach often at their own charges. It will be an evil day for the truth when all such men are crowded out by a lot of young men who may make preaching a profession and godliness a way of gain.

As I understand the matter, Brother Underwood spent the last few years of his life as an invalid, with little opportunity to teach people how to live, but with a good chance to teach them how to suffer affliction and how to die. "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." (2 Cor. 4: 17, 18.) A few moments in the glory world will pay for all the suffering which our brother endured. He had an opportunity to show his neighbors, his family, and his brethren how to submit to the will of God even in death and die like a man of faith, like a righteous man. "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!" (Num. 23: 10.)

Brother Underwood has gone to join the great number of Mars' Hill pupils who have preceded him to the glory world. Our teacher and faithful brother and a few of his pupils remain on this side, but I was surprised when I could count more who have passed over the river than I could of those who yet remain. This fact has greatly impressed me with the brevity of human life and with the importance of being prepared for the summons which must shortly come to us all.

John T. Underwood was a good, faithful man, and his place will not be easily filled. His family will miss him more than all of us; and may the Lord deal gently with them, and may they be prepared to meet him in that city where afflictions and death can never come.

"THINK ON THESE THINGS."

BY E. A. ELAM.

Inasmuch as all are human and make mistakes; inasmuch as "in many things all stumble" (James 3: 2); and inasmuch as the Lord condemns "strife, jealousies, wraths, factions, divisions, parties, envyings" (Gal. 5: 17-21), it behooves all to study the following scripture:

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. The things which we both learned and received and heard and saw in me, these things do: and the God of peace shall be with you. (Phil. 4: 8, 9.)

Inasmuch as "whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is become guilty of all" (James 2: 10), is it not as absolutely essential to salvation to "think on" and to practice the things enjoined above as it is to detect error in the teaching and to find faults in the practice of others? There is such a thing as seeing a mote in another's eye while there is a beam in one's own eye. Jesus does not condemn casting the mote out of another's eye, but he does condemn trying to do that with a beam in one's own eye. All know that what he teaches should be done first. And all know, furthermore, that he says that he who would cast a mote out of his brother's eye while there is a beam in his own eye is a hypocrite. All know, too, that just preceding these declarations Jesus says: "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured unto you." (Matt. 7: 1-5.)

Inasmuch as the Lord says, "Try your own selves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves" (2 Cor. 13: 5), it behoves all to practice strict self-examination while scrutinizing others, in order to see that their own hearts and lives are right before God. "Happy is he that judgeth [condemns] not himself in that which he approveth." (Rom. 14: 22.) "Consistency is a jewel."

Inasmuch as all have faults, make mistakes both in teaching and in practice, and come short in many other respects, all should rejoice to exercise in humility the forbearance, long-suffering, love, and forgiveness so abundantly taught in the New Testament and so admirably practiced by the Savior.

But let us give attention to the passage quoted above.

"Finally" introduces the conclusion of all Paul had taught the Philippians. This is embraced in the following summary: "Whatsoever things are true," "honorable," "just," "pure," "lovely," "of good report," virtuous, and praiseworthy. "All things that pertain unto life and godliness" (2 Pet. 1: 8) have not only been revealed now, but must be practiced. All things whatsoever that are true, honorable, just, pure, lovely, virtuous, and praiseworthy, as taught by the Lord, must be practiced to-day in all associations and dealings and relationships with all men—citizens of any government, neighbors, the employer and employee, husbands and wives, parents and children—and in reverence and love all duties to God must be discharged.

"Whatsoever things are true" means, not some things which are true, not some part of the truth, but all things which are true—speaking the truth at all times, loving the truth always, and whatever is according to truth; open, sincere, and nothing hidden. God blesses those who speak truth in their hearts (Ps. 15: 2) and who love "truth in the inward parts" (Ps. 51: 6).

"Whatsoever things are honorable" means whatever is "grave," as in 1 Tim. 3: 8, 11 and Tit. 2: 2, and whatever is venerable—that is, worthy of veneration in character. Christians must cultivate nad maintain characters which command respect and veneration. How very different is this from the frivolous and worldly lives and the light characters of many church members and even of some teachers and preachers!

"Whatsoever things are just" means all duties to God and men. This word "just" is used many times in the Eible and means much—obedience to God and whatever is right between men. Joseph was just in his treatment of Mary. (Matt. 1: 19.) It is "right"—that is, just—for children to obey their parents in the Lord. (Eph. 6: 1.) God is just, and men must obey God and be just in all their dealings with one another.

"Whatsoever things are pure" means "pure from carnality, chaste, modest." (Thayer.) In Titus 2: 5 the word is "chaste." In 2 Cor. 11: 2 the church is spoken of as a chaste or "pure virgin," unsulfied. In 1 Pet. 3: 2 the word is "chaste," and the "chaste manner of life" of Christian women is commended. In 1 John 3: 3 it is stated that as Christ is pure, every one who hopes to see and be like Christ purifies himself. So Timothy was commanded to keep himself "pure." (1 Tim. 5: 22.) The Corinthians had proved themselves "pure" in regard to the incestuous person under consideration. (2 Cor. 7: 11.) "The wisdom that is from above is first pure."

thought. Christians must not entertain carnal, immodest, and unchaste thoughts.

"Whatsoever things are lovely" means the things which render one pleasing in the true sense, acceptable, and lovely; the things which render one lovable.

"Whatsoever things are of good report" means things which show good will to others, graciousness and kindness to others. To think on these things will help all to speak well of others.

"If there be any virtue, and if there be any praise," means, not that there is any doubt of the excellencies of all these things named above, but that inasmuch as they are virtuous, productive of goodness in thought and action, and are praiseworthy, they must be practiced.

"Think on ["take account of "—margin] these things." This shows that the thoughts must be controlled and points out the things upon which all must set their thoughts in order to continue in God's service and to be saved in heaven. The Lord teaches all how to think of themselves—not more highly than they ought to think, but soberly, not to be wise in their conceits. (Rom. 12: 3, 16.) Thinking on the things specified by the Lord will prevent all wrong thoughts of others.

Verse 9 leaves us not to guess what these true, honorable, just, pure, and lovely things and things of good report are, but says whatever has been heard and learned and received from Paul, an inspired apostle, and whatever has been seen in his inspired example, "these things do." Men in their judgment and wisdom cannot know and set the standard of these things, because man's thoughts and ways are not God's thoughts and ways (Isa, 55: 8, 9), and it is not in man to direct his steps (Jer. 10: 23), for the wisdom of men is foolishness with God (1 Cor. 1: 20; 3: 19).

MATTHEW HUDSON GILL.

BY J. A.

The passing of Brother Hudson Gill, of Allensville, Ky., has left a very poignant grief in the hearts of many of the readers of the Gospel Advocate. Brother Gill was an exemplary young man of much promise and hope and enjoyed the very highest esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Reared in a household of faith, a member of the well-known Gill family of Kentucky, he exhibited in life those attributes and traits of character that are pleasing to God and that rendered his life a blessing to society.

Matthew Hudson Gill was born on December 8, 1893, and was the son of Brother and Sister Demas F. Gill, of Allensville. He obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother T. B. Larimore in 1908. Funeral services were conducted at the family residence by Brother D. H. Friend, of Louisville, Ky., in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends, many coming from Louisville, Woodburn, Russellville, and Elkton, Ky., and from Nashville, Gallatin, and Clarksville, Tenn.

From Brother D. H. Friend, a brother-in-law of Hudson, we quote the following, in Word and Work:

"Hudson was greatly loved by all who knew him, and our hearts are sad in giving him up just in the glory of his manhood, yet we sorrow not as those who have no hope. He held in his heart a reverential fear of God; found much delight in the worship of the church; honored his father and mother; extended a helping hand to others, with a smile and a word of cheer; abhorred that which was evil and impure. Surely it could be said of him that 'no man despised his youth,' for he showed himself an example 'in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity.'

"To him it was not given to reach the average life, measured in time; but since we 'live in deeds, not years,' ha leaves a good name, a precious heritage, to comfort his father and mother, three brothers, and two sisters, as they pursue their journey to that blessed home which seems a bit nearer now since Hudson went away.

"I cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead! he is just away;
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.
And you, O, you who the wildest yearn
For the old-time step and the glad return,
Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of there as the love of here;
Think of him still as the same, I say:
He is not dead, he is just away.

"With the sweet assurance that 'all is well,' let us trust Him who alone is able to assuage our sorrows and sustain by his grace."

NOTHING LOST.

We scatter seeds with careless hand,
And dream we ne'er shall see them more;
But for a thousand years
Their fruit appears,
In weeds that mar the land,
Or healthful store.

The deeds we do, the words we say,
Into still air they seem to fleet;
We count them ever past;
But they shall last—
In the dread judgment they
And we shall meet.

COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Having last week written of the unveiling here of a statue of Gen. Joseph Wheeler, my commander in war and subsequently my friend and neighbor in peace, my mind was so full of thoughts pertaining to war when Sunday came that I was impelled to try to preach, both morning and evening, on 2 Tim. 2: 3: "Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." I am, however, so averse to every form, phase, and feature of war that I am probably scarcely capable of writing on the subject.

Still, there remains the thought that it is good to be a soldier. One of my inside circle of friends here is my nearest neighbor. He is, I believe, about two years older than I am, and not very old at that. He was a scout in the Federal army when I was a scout in the Confederate army. He developed into a great lawyer; I, into a preacher. Recently he took me to the preaching part of the funeral services of a Federal veteran of the war of the sixties. He took good care of me, and saw me home safe and sound. When we separated at my door, I said something that evidently sounded somewhat gloomy, whereupon he promptly took me by the hand and very earnestly said: "Let's be soldiers as long as we live." That brings me back to my text: "Endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ."

I am glad I never did one single, solitary thing when I was a soldier, in that literal sense, of which I have ever had right or reason to be either sorry or ashamed; still, I am glad my military career closed before I enlisted in the army of the Lord—before I became a soldier of the cross, a follower of the Lamb. When I wore the gray, I never considered myself brave; but, so far as I know, nobody ever called me a coward. Now,

"I'm not ashamed to own my Lord, Or to defend his cause, Maintain the honor of his word, The glory of his cross."

My service in the Confederate army was not the hardest form of service. In war—literal war—there are, some one has said, three great departments: artillery, for noise; cavalry, for show; infantry, for fighting. According to that, I belonged to the show department, for I spent all my days as a Confederate soldier in the cavalry service, and rode the same horse all the way through. Of course, I endured hardness. Every soldier does that. Jehovah, Jesus, the Holy Spirit, and Heaven says to every soldier of the cross: "Endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." The great I AM, who can bring light out of darkness, good out of evil, life out of death, and elicit the brightest bolt out of the bosom of the blackest cloud, can bring life, light, and liberty out of the awful carnage and cruelty of war; but soldiers in the war leading to these results must endure hardness.

At Valley Forge, during the darkest period and coldest winter of the Revolutionary War, some man, probably too old for military service, passing by a thicket of underbrush, heard a voice that so impressed him that he drew nearer quietly, to see and hear who and what it was. A few short steps brought him to where he saw George Washington on his knees in earnest, fervent prayer, while tears dripped from his upturned face. The unseen listener thanked God and took courage, saying: "God will certainly hear and answer such a fervent prayer as that. The success of our cause is sure." Then and there the barefoot American soldiers marked the frozen ground with their bleeding feet, but they neither murmured nor complained.

In the depths of that dark and dreadful winter, George Washington fully realized the need of drawing as near to the Lord of heaven as possible, which he did. I claim as one of my old-time friends, loyal and true, General

(and brother in Christ) R. M. Gano, of Dallas, Texas, whose great-grandfather buried George Washington by baptism into death at Valley Forge that eventful winter and raised him up "to walk in newness of life." Washington and his soldiers endured hardness that we might be free, politically. We should gladly endure hardness that others, even generations yet unborn, may be free spiritually.

A British officer visited Gen. Francis Marion. "the Swamp Fox of the Carolinas," to arrange for an exchange of prisoners or some other business in that line. Marion invited the officer to dine with him. The invitation being accepted, Marion, a few moments later, raked with a stick a tempting lot of roasted sweet potatoes out of the heap of hot ashes in which they had cooked, brushed them with his sleeve, arranged them properly on a piece of pine bark, and told the Red Coat to help himself. Those precious potatoes were not the entire feast, however. The two men had plenty of water, as well as potatoes-good water, such as abounds in the Carolinas to this good day. The British officer asked Marion if that was his usual fare. Marion said: "Not exactly; a little better than usual." The officer then asked Marion what pay he received. Marion replied: "Nothing." History says the astonished Englishman forthwith resigned his commission and retired to private life, saying it was folly to fight such soldiers fighting for such a cause.

Marion and his men endured hardness as good soldiers of our country and cause. We should gladly endure hardness as good soldiers of the cross—of Christ and his cause—and make sacrifices, too. No sacrifice is too great for soldiers to make when duty demands it. Russia sacrificed Moscow, the capital, a great city, burning it to ashes, to crush Napoleon and destroy his army, somewhat more than a century ago. That was a great sacrifice, and the results, noth immediate and remote, were great. Christians gone before made great sacrifices that have resulted in much good, and we should not hesitate to do the same.

Captain Nathan Hale, of the American army, was hanged by the British in Revolutionary times. He met death bravely, heroically, telling the men who executed him he had only one regret—that he had but one life to give for his country. Our Savior gave his life for us, and we should gladly live and die for him. Let us endure hardness, as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

According to the Bible, the blessed Book of books, all the worlds and all their wealth were Christ's; but he sacrificed all that he had, became the poorest of the poor, and died on Calvary's cruel cross, that we, through him, might have everlasting life. Surely, then, we should rejoice and be glad to "endure hardness, as good soldiers of Jesus Christ." The tendency of the triumph of Christianity is to hasten the coming of the blissful time when "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." (Isa. 2: 4.) As soldiers of the cross under the leadership of the Lord, the Prince of Peace, let us try to so live as to hasten that glad day.

UERY DEPARTMEN

We are again asked about the right of divorced people to marry.

All that any one can know in regard to this important question is clearly stated in the New Testament. study all this in faith is to learn all that God teaches on the subject. Nothing must be left out and nothing added. No one must argue with God or against what he says. One trouble is, sometimes a person wishes God to say more than he does say or to leave out something he does say, One person wants to believe that whatever the civil law allows is right, and therefore scriptural, and that every divorced person, whatever cause is assigned for the divorce, has a right to marry another. This is clearly unscriptural, and therefore wrong. Another person wants to believe that no divorced person has a right to marry another. We can learn the truth in regard to this only by studying all that God says on the subject. Hence, I cite the following scriptures: Matt. 5: 27-32, especially verses 31, 32; Matt. 19: 3-9; Mark 10: 2-12, especially verses 11, 12; Luke 16: 18; 1 Cor. 7: 8-17, especially verse 11. Not one of these passages contradicts the other and must not be so construed as to do so. From these we learn, as Jesus says: "Whosoever shall put away his wife, except for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and he that marrieth her when she is put away committeth adultery." In Mark and Luke the exception, "except for fornication," is omitted; but that omission does not destroy the exception made by Jesus himself in Matthew. The omission of the word "repentance" in Mark 16: 15, 16 does not destroy the necessity of "repentance" given in Luke 24: 46, 47, and other passages.

Then, according to the scriptures, for the cause of fornication a man may divorce his wife, or the wife her husband, and marry another. But if for any other cause a man divorces his wife, or the wife her husband, and marries another, he or she commits adultery, and the one who marries the divorced party commits adultery. This is true because "what therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." God has joined husband and wife together, "so that they are no more two, but one flesh." God alone can give the cause of separation. No civil authority on earth can set aside the law of God.

But if husband and wife cannot live together in peace, they may separate, or live apart, but are not permitted to marry another. On the contrary, they are encouraged to become reconciled to each other and live together in harmony and peace.

We learn this from all the scriptures on this subject, as cited above. I repeat, no one can learn the will of God on any subject without studying all God says on that subject. To do less than this is to be governed by ignorance or prejudice or a partisan spirit, or, it may be,

Since writing this, another query has come, which says:

We are taught that Christ left nothing undone; and since in Luke 16: 18 he left this clause out, I am about to believe that there is no excuse for a divorced person to remarry, but for the cause of fornication he may get a divorce. Would not you, or any of the rest of us, have made the complete statement under the circumstances, if it were intended that one could marry again?

Since "Christ left nothing undone," he said on this subject, "except for fornication." Under Moses, the divorce carried with it the right to marry another. Under Christ, for some reasons husband and wife may live apart, but without the right to marry another, "except for fornication." Christ is instructing his disciples as well as replying to the Pharisees.

Dear Brother Elam: I have just finished reading your splendid article, "Miracles Have Ceased" (No. 1), in the Gospel Advocate of February 12, and have greatly enjoyed it. It has served to strengthen and confirm my understanding of the truth, first, that in both the Old and New Testaments it is clear that the primary purpose was to show convincingly that the servants of God were sent of him and were his authorized representatives in Judice.

to show convincingly that the servants of God were sent of him, and were his authorized representatives, including his Son; that, although most of the miracles performed by Jesus were those of compassion, mercy, and love—restoring sight to the blind, unstopping the deaf ear, healing all manner of sickness, etc.—that the benefit to the suffering was of secondary importance.

Still, it is clear, I think, that God has always been interested in the temporal well-being and happiness of those who love and trust him. I do not, of course, know the scope of your proposed investigation of this subject, what your future articles will include or cover; but, in support of the proposition that God has not been unmindful of the health and happiness of his people on earth, I remind you that through Moses he gave Israel the best code of sanitary laws for the preservation of health the world has ever known. In a word, he provided for both the temporal ever known. In a word, he provided for both the temporal and spiritual welfare of Israel.

Jesus came and established a new and better order of things—at least, spiritual. Question: Is it not reasonable that God's interest in the health and happiness of his children here would be continued, and perhaps a new and better law for health and healing be given, since we are the temple of God's Spirit? Did he give such? If so, what is it?

It is conceded that it is far easier to ask than to answer questions, and in this connection I would remind you that these questions are not intended to indicate my views, if I have any decided or definite views; although I venture to suggest that we all ought not only have open minds, but should crave to know all of God's will.

Is it possible that the church is living beneath her privilege in the important matter of health? (See James 5:

ealth? (See James 5: Sincerely yours, J. G. WILKINSON.

14, 15.) Fort Worth, Texas.

Yes, "God's interest in the health and happiness of his children" under Christ is continued and even better laws are given. How will this do? Since Christians are the temple of God, and the Spirit of God dwells in them; since even their "body is a temple of the Holy Spirit," and they should glorify God in their body, because they are not their own, but have been bought with a price; and since "the temple of God is holy," and "if any man destroy the temple of God, him will God destroy;" therefore, God's children should be holy, as he is holy, and should de nothing which will impair their bodies physically or mentally-should eat nothing, drink nothing, smoke nothing, chew nothing, indulge fleshly appetites in nothing. and do nothing whatever that will impair the growth of mind and body, or weaken them when grown, or in any way shorten life. (See 1 Cor. 3: 16, 17; 6: 19, 20.) This is a part of Christ's teaching in regard to the health of the body and mind, as well as of the soul. Nothing is more clearly and more strongly taught in the New Testament than temperance—that is, self-control. There is no law of health superior to self-control. In this there cannot be found among men a finer example than the illustrious Paul, who buffeted his body, bringing it "into bondage," not only that he might keep healthy, but be saved. The lack of self-control carries many to an early grave as well as to perdition. Paul gave Timothy instruction regarding health when he taught him to "flee youthful lusts" (2 Tim. 2: 22), that bodily exercise has some profit in it (1 Tim. 4: 8), and to cease to drink water, but to "use a little wine" for his "stomach's sake and . . . often infirmities" (1 Tim. 5: 23). Christians are commanded to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. (Tit. 1: 11, 12.) To curb the lusts of the flesh, to subdue the passions, and to live soberly are excellent and divine laws of health as well as of spiritual development.

Oil and wine externally applied were used as remedies. (Luke 10: 34.) In Mark 6: 13, when the twelve anointed with oil the sick, and healed them, why was the oil used, if not to teach the use of remedies? In other cases the sick were healed miraculously without remedies; then why use them at all, if not to teach their proper use or not to ignore them? So, in James 5: 14, 15, in the miraculous age, when the sick could be healed miraculously, oil was used while the elders prayed for the sick. Even now, since miracles have ceased, all known and healing remedies should be used, while earnest prayers should be offered in faith to God. To pray for daily bread while in idleness ignoring the means to produce bread is an abomination to God. So, to expect God in answer to prayer to cure the sick and to heal all broken bones while rejecting all means is mockery. All who trust God will pray to him most earnestly to bless all means used. That God answers the prayer of faith, that he teaches the use of all proper means, and that he blesses the means used, no man of faith doubts. Yet all the sick now do not recover. It is useless to pray unless it is said, " Thy will be done." Neither did all the sick in the miraculous age recover.

To live fully according to the teaching of the New Testament is to live the best and the longest and the happiest on earth and to be saved in heaven.

THE INCREASE OF KNOWL-EDGE.

BY H. C. FLEMING.

True science is systematized knowledge, the orderly arrangement of known facts. It matters not how the facts are learned, either by personal knowledge or by reliable testimony or investigation concerning the subject under consideration. No additions or subtractions can properly be made to known facts in proof of any proposition. Probabilities, may-have beens, and guesses are entirely worth-

The laws of nature and the revealed laws of God agree, because he is the author of both. To understand these laws, there must of necessity be searching and investigations of each, and stop where they cannot be fully comprehended.

But some persons will accept a matter in reference to each on very slight testimony or none at all, because their minds are biased by what they want to believe or disbelieve. Such will never gain any true knowledge of either science or the revealed will of God.

The revealed word of the Lord is of much more value to us than even correct science, because the one is for our everlasting welfare, but the other is only temporal. "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." (Dan. 12: 2, 3.)

"Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." (John 5: 28, 29.)

These quotations show clearly the superiority of the word of God to anything that man can form by pretended science or otherwise.

Knowledge gained through true science is valuable in the present life, but it can extend no further. Where science ends faith must begin, or detruction is the result.

"But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." (2 Pet. 3: 10.)

At that time, what will be the benefit of the knowledge gained by science? All men can surely understand that it must cease, because the necessity for it shall have passed away. "But the word of the Lord endureth forever."

Now, let us conceive of the scene at that time. Suppose that wherever you are on the earth, if you should see a great light of fire shooting up on any part of your horizon and extending all around the same like the wick of a round-wick kerosene lamp, but extending apparently to the stars of heaven, what, then, would you do? Could you appeal for help to anything except the great Creator of heaven and earth? This life is the time to make preparation for that event and many others foretold in the word of God.

"Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." (2 Pet. 3: 18.)

A TENT WANTED. By J. D. TANT.

I am farming three miles east of Greenville, a city of fifteen thousand people in the delta of Mississippi. The church of Christ is an unknown quantity in Greenville. If there is one member of the church of Christ here, I have not been able to find him. I want to hold a mission meeting here in June and establish the cause. If I am able to follow the plow all day and preach the gospel each night at my own charges, and pay for circulars, lights, and benches, do we have any church or members able to furnish me a tent to pitch in the courthouse yard? Will some one please loan or hire me their tent? Write me at once, at Greenville, Miss., Box 362.

Brother Tant is an able preacher of the gospel and a good man. We hope some of our readers will furnish him with a tent and assist him otherwise.

MISSIONARY STATEMENT FOR 1924.

The number in attendance at the Zoshigaya Sunday school, of which Sister Cypert has charge, has been increasing until now there are one hundred enrolled. Some of the teachers are babes in Christ; so Sister Cypert has a teachers' meeting every week, at which time she teaches the lesson to these Japanese Christians, which they, in turn, teach to the little folks on the following Sunday. Thus, in preparing the lesson to teach the children, they are really learning themselves. Early in the year she also assisted in a Sunday school for the earthquake sufferers, which was held in the barracks where these refugees were housed. When garments were given to those in need, tracts were inclosed, and it is hoped that in this way spiritual as well as physical relief may have been given.

Yanai San, who formerly helped translate the Sunday-school literature from English into Japanese, is now in military training. During his absence one of the other Sunday-school teachers is helping, and Ogawa San also assists in the work. These young people give their time to the translation free, and Sister Cypert pays for the printing out of her personal funds. She would like to enlarge this printing work. Who will make it possible by a regular contribution for that purpose?

Speaking of a protracted meeting held early in the year, Sister Cypert wrote: "Seventy seekers gave in their names. After the meeting these all had to be visited, and, as a result, eight out of the number have been baptized. Others yet are asking to be taught. I am planning to begin a class for ladies, one for girls, and one for young men soon."

One of the ladies' Bible classes which Sister Cypert conducted during 1924 met regularly every week in a study of the Bible by a very simple outline, which they enjoyed very much. The study hour was followed by interesting lessons in American sewing or cooking. Not even the hot summer months could break up the interest in this class, for every Friday they came together; and even one week when Sister Cypert was away some of them met together and had a short Bible study. There were also other classes in Bible study and in English.

Some money was contributed specifically for the kindergarten, but most of the expense of equipping it was met out of Sister Cypert's personal funds. It opened on September 15 with thirty pupils and two teachers, and before the close of the year there were thirty-nine enrolled. The work among these little folks is very interesting, and through them Sister Cypert is given an opportunity to meet their parents and in time to tell them the story of the Savior. The tuition almost pays the teachers, but more funds are needed for better equipment.

When Ogawa San was still in school and in need of the care and guidance of an older person, Sister Cypert took her into her home, and in time she obeyed the gospel and helped Sister Cypert in the Sunday school and in translation work. Just before Sister Cypert came home on her furlough, Ogawa San and Yanai San were married; and now, while Yanai San is in military training, which is compulsory in Japan, Ogawa San and the baby make their home with Sister Cypert. The baby is a sweet little thing just beginning to talk. When spoken to, she understands both English and Japanese, and the few words which she can say are some English and some Japanese.

The very many details of her work keep Sister Cypert extremely busy, and one time when writing to me she asked that I thank for her all those who had been contributing to her, and added: "I simply can't keep up my correspondence and the work I have to do, too. I must neglect one or the other, and I think it best to neglect the writing. I get so hungry to write just a friendly letter or two sometimes, but I very seldom get time. Most of my best friends are neglected, even my mother sometimes, and always my brothers and sisters." Are there some among Sister Cypert's contributors who will write her an occasional letter? I will gladly forward them, or, if you wish, send them direct to 68 Zoshigaya, Tokyo, Japan.

When the great earthquake of September, 1923, brought desolation to hundreds of thousands in Tokyo and elsewhere, and the American people very kindly sent gifts of money, food, and clothing, the people of Japan attributed this generosity to Christianity and were more favorably inclined to the acceptance of the gospel of Christ. But when the Exclusion Act was passed by Congress, the Japanese people "lost their confidence and decided that the help they had received was only deceitfulness and that the Christian religion was the prompter" of the immigration law also. As a result, where formerly there was interest manifested in the teaching of our Bible, now there is indifference and prejudice.

Is He "Master" or "Teacher"?

In all ages, more so now than ever, men have recognized the Son of God as the great TEACHER. Although He was both Teacher and Master—to the Disciples He was primarily a TEACHER and through them His TEACHINGS have regenerated the civilized world. And yet until the advent of The American Standard Version our Bibles referred to Him almost exclusively as Master instead of Teacher, whereas He was norm. BIBLE CROSS WORD

SHORT words and not many of them! This is a good puzzle to do when time presses, or if you are not very expert. You will need your Bible right at hand though.

A note of humor is added to this puzzle in No. 29, for although it is a good Bible word, found in Samuel, it is also a term applied to newly-fledged sailors during the war.

© 1925 THE J.O.W. 00. How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the whits spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the patter recidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

Solution of Puzzle in last issue

CHISM-KEY DEBATE. No. 1.

BY C. H. SMITHSON.

This debate was held in the Pine Street church house, in Texarkana. Texas, and continued ten nights, The first two propositions were along the usual line, and were handled as usual, on the points of doctrine and practice of the churches being scriptural, respectively.

But the last two propositions were unusual. Here is one of them: "Baptist churches are human institutions, and originated with uninspired men since the personal ministry of Christ and his apostles." J. W. Chism affirmed; R. B. Key denied.

Brother Chism first introduced a statement that no such thing as a "Baptist church" is mentioned in the Bible, and not even the peculiar doctrines of the Baptists are there, istancing total depravity and Christ as the "very and eternal God," and challenged for proof of Baptist doctrine in the teachings of Christ or his apostles. He then stated that, since the Baptist Church is not mentioned in the days of Christ or his apostles, we must look elsewhere for its origin. He then read: "The first regularly organized Baptist church of which we possess any account is dated from 1607, and was formed in London by a Mr. Smyth, who had been a clergyman in the Church of England." (Benedict's History of the Baptists, edition 1850, page 304.) He then showed that Mr. Smyth had baptized himself and thus started this first Baptist church. He fur-ther showed that Smyth's baptism was not immersion. (Vedder's History of the Baptists, new and illustrated edition, page 204.) Vedder says: "It is also certain that the baptism of Smyth and his followers was an affusion." Also, Whitsitt (Question in Baptist History, page 11), says: "Immersion baptism does not appear to have been practiced or pleaded for by either Smyth or Helwys," Brother Chism maintained that since the doctrine was not found in the New Testament, nor the Baptist Church mentioned therein, that this was the origin of the Baptist churches of to-day, and that they did not adopt immersion till the year 1641, and that they were first called "Baptist churches" by their own writers about 1644.

To this Mr. Key objected, asserting that he was not trying to prove church succession, but perpetuity, and trying to make a distinction between the two. He never attempted to prove his origin in the New Testament, but maintained that the Baptists had existed under different names along the ages, and so attempted to make out his chain.

Brother Chism challenged Mr. Key to give the names of the people he claimed as Baptists, saying that when he did he would read Baptist history to show that they were neither Baptists in name nor in doctrine. Mr. Key in his next speech gave the following: "In chronological order they stand as follows: Euchites, Massalians, Montanists, Novatians, Donatists, Paulicians, Paterines, Vaudois, Waldenses, Albigenses, Lionists, Berengarians, Pickards, Arnoldists, Petrobrusians, Henricans, Lollards, Wycliffites, Hussites, and German Anabaptists," (Benedict, page 40.)

Brother Chism replied: "Of the first two, the gentleman makes no attempt to identify himself with them, and but little is known of them. So we begin with the first he claims as Baptists-Montanists. Tertullian was one of them. They practiced trine immersion, called themselves "spiritual Christians," and claimed inspiration. "In their polity they seem not to have differed from the Catholics." Hence, they were not Baptists. Brother Chism cited Armitage and Vedder in proof of these and further assertions.

Next came the Novatians. Brother Chism showed that these were not Baptists. Novatian's baptism was affusion, and was also "to wash away his sins." So he could not be a Baptist of our kind.

Next came the Donatists. Brother Chism showed that they held the errors of the Catholics, practiced infant baptism, and taught "baptismal regeneration."

Next in order came the Paulicians. Brother Chism showed that they were called by different names in different parts of the country, as here "This was the sect known given: as the Manichæans, one of the first forms of heresy and the most persistent of them all, which under various names had endured from the age immediately succeeding the apostles. In the East they were long known as Paulicians, in Italy as the Paterines, in Bulgaria as Bogomiles, in Southern France as Albigenses, and in all these places as Cathari." He then showed that their doctrine was not Baptist. "They rejected water baptism like the modern Quakers; they declared the Lord's Supper to be the sacrifice of demons and would have none of it; they thought churches the dwelling place of demons." They called themselves "Christians." They were not Baptists, not evangelical heretics; they had a Pope; and their doctrine was not Baptist.

Next came the Waldenses, Vaudois, poor men of Lyons, or Lyonistsproperly, the Waldenses. Brother Chism then showed that these were pedobaptists. "Stress is laid on the fact that in the earliest of their literature that has come down to us the Waldenses are pedobaptists, or at least do not oppose infant baptism. It is also an unquestioned fact that the later Waldenses-those who found a refuge in the valleys of Savoy after the crusade of Simon de Montfort in Southern France-are found to be pedobaptists at the earliest authentic period of their history." This quotation from Mr. Vedder shows that they were not our kind of Baptists; and this is confirmed by Armitage. Dr. Armitage further says, quoting a Catholic: "They frequent our churches, are present at divine service, offer at the altar, confess to the priests, observe the church feasts, and celebrate festivals, reverently bowing their heads, though in the meantime they scoff at all these institutions of the church." Again: "Indeed, it is questionable whether they did not consider themselves as a body of holy men still within the church of Rome." This shows they were not Baptists as of to-day.

Next came the Anabaptists of Holland and of Switzerland, and Brother Chism showed from their own teachings that they were both affusionists and infant baptizers, and were not Baptists; that they did not begin to immerse till 1620; that only Augsburg had adopted immersion even so early as that; that there was no immersion in Holland. "A third important item is that there was no immersion practiced anywhere in Holland until the year 1620." Even after immersion was introduced at Augsburg and St. Gaul, they still practiced sprinkling, something like the Methodists now. "The Anabaptists of Augsburg . . . practiced immer-sion as well as sprinkling." Brother Chism then showed that the English Anabaptists were all affusionists till

He then showed that the Berengarians were simply Roman Catholics; that Berengarius himself was an archbishop of Rome, and taught heresy, and was killed for it. (Jones' Baptist History.) Thus went into wind all Mr. Key's claims.

1. B. WALKER, 1677 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. Key tried to make Chism say that Benedict said the first Baptist church was dated from 1607. But Brother Chism stated that it was not Benedict who said it; that the Baptist churches of England, assembled in a jubilee, were the authors of the statement, and not Benedict. So, if any such church existed before anywhere, these English Baptists in jubilee assembled had no knowledge of it. Hence the beginning of the Baptist churches.

Mr. Key then showed that a committee was sent by these to Holland to get immersion from them. But Chism showed that the Holland Baptists had not begun to immerse till 1620. So Key did not better his case at all. Brother Chism showed that they were not Baptists, but only Anahaptists—that is, rebaptists.

Thus it was clearly shown that the Baptist Church was started by uninspired men, and that, since the doctrine is not in the Bible, it is a human institution.

Whoever introduces a really good religious newspaper into a family does a work that is valuable beyond calculation. That work starts in the center of life's sea a ripple which will never cease in its outward and onward movement until it shall break upon the shores of immortality. Do you realize that, sister? Do you also realize that the consequences of neglect in this important matter are correspondingly fearful in its consequences? Then go to work,-Selected.

"I am glad to commend the Bible Leason Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Com-pany. They cannot fail of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)

"The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuff.)

"Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)

"I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)

"The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartly recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)

"A complete assortment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly commend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)

"As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)

"It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bibls School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

"Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, scriptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Puilliss.)

For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Blam was one of this has felt that Brother Blam was one of the best-prepared men in the bretherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

piessed to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

"I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Feloubet's Select Notes, I compare them weekly, I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Hoit.)

NOTES FROM WEST TEN-NESSEE.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

For some time I have been sick. not able to get out and preach to the people; so, while suffering and taking medicine, I have plenty of time to reflect and meditate over things in general and compare the present with the past.

A man said to me the other day: "If I were tired of living and desired to die, I would not take the suicide route. All I would have to do would be to write out what I knew about the people of this place and post it in one or more public places, and I would be shot before the sun went down." This statement has caused me to think of my own life-conduct, manner of living, etc. Some one has said that the true measure of character is the things we would do if we knew they would never be found out on us.

In my meditation I can plainly see many changes that have come over preachers, congregations, and the people. Some of these changes seem to me to be very hurtful to the spread of the world-wide and age-lasting gospel of God's dear Son. In my preaching I have always tried to advocate the right and condemn the wrong. While conducting a tent meeting on a certain occasion, a gentleman of strong sectarian belief said to me: "You are too hard, too plain, in your preaching. You are not like Brother B I heard him preach for ten days, and no one could tell what church he belonged to." I told that man I was glad to know that I was not like that preacher. Such charges against me by sectarians have been taken up by some of my own brethren and sisters. A brother said to me a few days ago: "Brother Williams, we need you to hold a meeting for our congregation, for the last three or four preachers we have had were so 'sweet-spirited,' so mild in their preaching, that the sects all fell in love with them and claimed them as their own." I said to him: "I am not like those preachers, for no sectarians have ever claimed me as one of their own." I hope I am not an alarmist, but, in the language of Brother J. D. Tant, let me say: "Brethren, we are drifting."

A great many of our brethren and sisters claim that one church is as good as another; that it makes no difference to what church you belong, just so you do right. Then when an old-timer, an old fogy like me comes along and says there is one church, and but one, he is called no more for that place. For a preacher to tell the people that Christ built but one church, and that all who want to be saved in heaven must beWE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF long to that church, is for him to render himself very unpopular with a great many members, so much so that he is wanted no longer. Parents do not control and discipline their children now as was done by the cad ones now gone. What is the result? Character blackened, lives black and homes ruined. In a great measure marriage has lost its God-given sacredness and turned into a brothel. Where I live and where I have gone preaching the gospel, the people all know that I am a very poor man. A brother said to me not long ago: "Brother Williams, one reason you do not receive more for your work is, you are too plain in your preaching-too hard on the sects." So there you are. Like Paul, I am not striving to please men, but God. Brethren, heed the warning of an old fogy and look well to what is preached and practiced. God has but one way of saving people, and that way is through the blood-purchased church of his dear Son. "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me," said Christ.

MOTHER.

Long before we came into the world we had a friend who labored long hours making the little clothes that we were to wear and who fondled each garment tenderly in anticipation of our arrival. That was mother.

Through the years of babyhood, through days of peevishness and nights of illness, we were guarded jealously and carefully by a friend. That was mother.

There was one who taught us to walk, who taught us to talk, and who taught us to pray at her knee. That was mother.

Through childhood's happy days we carried our tales of joy and woe to one who understood, to one who joined with us in our pleasures and soothed us with caresses when we were hurt. That was mother.

And on through school days there was one who helped us with our lessons, who made excuses for us if we failed to toe the mark, who privately admonished us for our pranks and publicly extelled us for our virtues. That was mother.

Into the classroom at college or into the countingroom of business there was one who followed us in spirit and eagerly awaited our return at night. That was mother.

Away from home there was one who always thought of us, whose nightly prayer was for our safety, whose daily hope was for our return. That was mother.

At home there was one who waited up for us, who fended us from unseen dangers, who suffered for us

when That was mother

Always at the end of the long journey, in good health or bad, in prosperity or adversity, there was one to meet us and take us to her bosom. That was mother.-Selected.

SCRIPTURE STUDIES

By JAMES A. ALLEN

(This article was written for publication in the Nashville Banner by some of the Nashville churches of Christ. We hereby consent to its republication by any one who may desire to so do.)

WE FEEL a very keen interest in getting before the general public the things that Jesus and the Holy Spirit command sinners to do to be saved. We realize that the general public is almost wholly ignorant of the teaching of inspired men on this most vital and important subject.

We do not wish to adversely criticize nor to say unkind things; but, at the same time, it is a well-known fact that none of the city's popular clergymen are willing to tell the people of Nashville what the Holy Spirit, through the apostles, commands them to do to be saved. We could name among these some of the most prominent preachers of the city, popular "pastors," who are members of "the Ministers' Alliance." None of them will permit passages of Scripture telling sinners what to do to be saved to be read, without comment, from their pulpits; nor would any of them give an honest inquirer the answer that Peter gave on the day of Pentecost. The careless, thoughtless public seems ignorant of the awful fact that men who are drawing handsome salaries for preaching the gospel refuse to preach it, and that men who enjoy the reputation of being great defenders of the Bible themselves taboo a part of it.

"GO YE THEREFORE," said Jesus to his apostles, "and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." (Matt. 28: 19.) "Go ye into all the world," said Jesus to them, "and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.)

Laboring under this commission from his Lord, Peter, on the day of Pentecost, said: "Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) Concerning the preaching of the evangelist, Philip, the Bible says: "But when they believed Philip preaching good tidings concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." (Acts 8: 12.) In regard to the Ethiopian eunuch, it says: "And Philip opened his mouth, and beginning from this scripture, preached unto him Jesus. And as they went on the way, they came unto a certain water; and the eunuch saith, Behold, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jess Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still; and they both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they came up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip; and the eunuch saw him no more, for he went on his way rejoicing." (Acts 8: 35-39.)

Speaking of the Philippian jailer, the Bible says: "And he called for lights and sprang in, and, trembling for fear, fell down before Paul and Silas, and brought them out and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved, thou and thy house. And they spake the word of the Lord unto him, with all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, immediately. And he brought them up into his house, and set food before them, and rejoiced greatly, with all his house, having believed in God." (Acts 16: 29-34.) "Many of the Corinthians," says the record, "hearing believed, and were baptized." (Acts 18: 8.) To the penitent, praying Saul of Tarsus, Ananias, a gospel preacher, said: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on his name." (Acts 22: 16.)

"BAPTIZO" is the word used by Jesus to represent the action to which he commands "every creature" to submit in order to be saved. It is also the word that was used by the inspired writers in recording what was done by every convert to Christianity in New Testament times. The meaning of any word, Greek or English, is not a question of opinion, but is a question of fact. There is not the slightest confusion or doubt as to the meaning of "baptizo." All, without an exception, who are acquainted with both the English and Greek languages, recognize that the word "baptizo" in the Greek original of the New Testament may be translated into English only by such words as to dip, to plunge, to submerge, to immerse. There is not a Greek-English lexicon in the world that does not so translate it. "Baptizo" cannot be translated by such words as "sprinkle" or "pour," as they have an entirely different meaning.

But, for the sake of the unlearned, we may say that the meaning of the word "baptism" may be learned from what was done in every case in the New Testament where the word is used. We give a few examples. Jesus was baptized in the river Jordan, and "went up straightway from the water." (Matt. 3: 16.) John baptized "in Ænon near to Salim, because there was much water there." (John 3: 23.) Philip and the eunuch "both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they came up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip; and the eunuch saw him no more, for he went on his way rejoicing." (Acts 8: 38, 39.) Baptism is represented as a birth "of water and the Spirit" (John 3: 5), and it is also represented as a "burial" and as a "resurrection" (Rom. 6: 4.)

All historians testify that immersion was the universal practice in the days of the apostles. There were no unimmersed persons in the primitive church. The whole religious world practiced immersion until the thirteenth century. The Pope of Rome licensed sprinkling for baptism in 1311. John Wesley, the founder of the Methodist Church, said: "Buried with him—alluding to the ancient manner of baptizing by immersion." John Calvin, the founder of the Presbyterian Church, said: "The word baptizo' signifies to immerse, and it is certain that immersion was the practice of the ancient church."

But many thousands of the citizens of Nashville are led by their teachers to refuse to be baptized. On first one pretext, then another, the command of Jesus to be baptized is minimized and eliminated. Nobody denies that the same passages of Scripture that command sinners to believe and to repent of their sins also command them to be baptized, and nobody can deny that Jesus said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." No man can belittle or ridicule the language of Jesus Christ, or pass it over with silent contempt, as Jesus declares: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." When "the dead, the great and the small," stand "before the throne" in the judgment, and the books are opened, the words of Jesus will face every man and be the law by which he stands or falls.

We wish to very solemnly warn all who love the Lord Jesus Christ, and who wish to obey him, that sprinkling is not baptism. We very kindly remind them that there is no safety nor salvation, for either time or eternity, except in loving and faithful obedience to the things that are commanded by the Lord.

From the scriptures above quoted it may easily be seen that penitent believers, upon being baptized into Christ, enjoy the remission of their sins and all the blessings attendant upon being admitted into that holy and apostolic church that Christ founded upon the rock. All Christians, all children of God, are members of "the church, which is his body," outside of which no man can please God or be acceptable in his sight. The same thing that makes a man a Christian makes him a member of the church; or, to put it in other terms, the same thing that makes a man a child of God makes him a member of the family of God. All of God's children are in God's family, or church. We submit, in the uttermost kindness, that, when a man becomes a Methodist, a Baptist, a Presbyterian, etc., he becomes something more or less than a Christian, as he can be a Christian without being either, and as the church of Christ was established many centuries before the establishment of either of these human denominations. A man must accept something that was not preached by the apostles, and that, therefore, is not Christianity, or any part of it, before he can be a member of any other church than the church Jesus built on the rock, or wear any other name than the name that was worn by that body of people who "were called Christians first in Antioch."

We plead for primitive. New Testament Christianity, for a "Thus saith the Lord" in all that is preached or practiced. We are aware that in no other way can the approval of God or happiness, temporal and eternal, be found and enjoyed.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 13.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

DIVINE WISDOM IN THE CROSS OF CHRIST. (Verses 10-13.)

10. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit. The great love of God, not seen by eye, nor heard by ear, nor revealed to the senses in verse 9, were revealed by the Spirit to the apostles, and made known through them to "the perfect" of verse 6. The Spirit searcheth all things, etc. The Spirit given to the apostles to guide them into all truth (John 16: 13) imparted to them a knowledge of the deep things of God, and they revealed them to the world. Hence, the secrets of the divine wisdom concerning the redemption of man are made known.

11. For what man knoweth, etc. A man's spirit knows all his thoughts and secrets, though these are all unknown to his neighbors. So God's Spirit knows all the divine secrets, and imparts these wherever he dwells in full measure as the spirit of knowledge. The Spirit revealed the hidden counsels of God to man, and searcheth... the deep things of God. He is not only acquainted with and privy to the surface and outside of things, but he searcheth things to the bottom. He searcheth not only the deep things of man, as of kings and princes, whose hearts are a great deep, but the "deep things of God."

12. Now we have received, etc. The Spirit received by the apostles was the Holy Spirit and not the spirit of the world. He was to guide them into all truth (John 16: 13), and for this reason they were enabled to know what God had imparted freely to them. Paul declares what spirit they had not received-namely, the spirit of the world-that is, the spirit which suggests worldly wisdom and savors only of worldly things, which acts and influences only worldly men. In the whole generation of worldly men there is the same worldly spirit, and this spirit of the world is an earthly spirit; it is low, a little and a narrow spirit. It reaches out after earthly things; but future and invisible things, which are far off and out of sight, are neither believed nor sought after. Paul also declares what spirit they had received-namely, the spirit which is of God. He states also the use this spirit was to them-namely, that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. That is, the Spirit showed the apostles both what God is and what the things of God are. They were enlightened with the knowledge of the grace and goodness of God which is revealed to them in the gospel. They knew both divine mysteries and divine mercies, both what God had done for them and what he had wrought in them, which are "the things that are freely given to us of God."

13. Which things also we speak. The doctrine of the gospel, "the hidden wisdom," "the mystery of God," imparted to them by the Spirit, they spoke to others. As often as the apostles spoke the truths of the gospel, the Spirit presented these truths to their minds, clothed in words and language to correspond with the words and language spoken by the parties addressed by the apostles, which was the only way these truths could have been revealed to the hearers; for men are so accustomed to connect ideas with words that they always think in words. The language in which the gospel was revealed to the apostles, and in which they delivered the gospel to the world, is what Paul calls "the form of sound words" (2 Tim. 1: 13), which Timothy had heard and was to hold fast. Every one, therefore, ought to beware of altering or wresting the inspired teaching in their expositions of it. These things the apostles spoke, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but in words given by the Holy Spirit. Comparing spiritual things with spiritual—that is, comparing the things which were written by the Spirit in and under the Old Testament with what is now revealed to us under the New Testament. The apostles did not speak in the words and after the manner now counted by the Gentile philosophers to the learned and wise, but in the very words and after the very manner which the Spirit taught or revealed to them. They spoke and wrote by the immediate inspiration of the Spirit, as well as the prophets of the Old Testament, and delivered nothing as from God but what God revealed to them by his Spirit.

THE NATURAL AND SPIRITUAL MAN. (Verses 14-16.)

14. But the natural man. The natural man is the uninspired man. He receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God. God did not give the truths of the gospel to the uninspired or natural man to reveal to the world, because they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them. Every man who has not the miraculous gift of the Spirit, as the apostles had, and has no way of obtaining knowledge only by his senses and natural understanding, is a natural man, and for this reason he could not know the deep things of God until after they were revealed through the inspired men. The reason assigned why the natural or uninspired man cannot know the deep things of God is, they are spiritually discerned. That is, the natural or uninspired man cannot know divine things by that wisdom which he alone will be conducted by. Spiritual things must be spiritually discerned; for, being mysteries, they are not knowable by human reason, but by spiritual revelation. The wisdom of the world—that is, the learned and the wisest natural or uninspired men in the worldwas unable by the sharpest light of reason to discover the mysteries of God as related to the scheme of man's redemption revealed in the gospel. Hence the necessity of a supernatural revelation to make known the mysteries and wisdom of God to the world, which revelation was made known through the apostles.

15. But he that is spiritual—that is, the inspired man through whom God revealed the truths of the gospel to the natural or uninspired man—judgeth all things. By the aid of the miraculous indwelling of the Spirit, the spiritual or inspired man is able to reveal the deep things of the Spirit to the natural or uninspired man so he can understand and comprehend them. Is judged of no man. That is, the inspired or spiritual man is on a higher level than the uninspired or natural man; hence, he, from a lower level, is not able to estimate the spiritual or inspired man. God, in all ages, has used inspired or spiritual men to reveal or make known his will to the natural or uninspired man.

16. Who hath known the mind of the Lord? etc. That is, what natural or uninspired man has known the will of God before its revelation through spiritual or inspired men? We have the mind of Christ. The apostles had the miraculous indwelling of the Spirit, and were, therefore, spiritual men, and had—that is, understood—the mind of Christ concerning the gospel plan of salvation. We cannot know or find out God but by revelation. (Luke 10: 21, 22.) The revelations of God were intended to be understood by those to whom and for whom they were made. These revelations were always made through inspired men. (2 Pet. 1: 20, 21; 2 Sam. 23: 2.) The spiritual men were not always under the spirit of inspiration, nor was everything revealed to them at once; but when God saw fit to reveal anything, he put his words into their mouths and caused them to speak them, not for their own benefit exclusively, but for the benefit of such as were intended to be affected by the revelation. (Eph. 3: 1-5.) Here were things that had been hidden from the world for ages, which God had now revealed to his holy apostles and prophets by his Spirit; and the apostles wrote them in the New Testament that the reader may understand that which hitherto had been a mystery. However profound and long concealed this mystery, when it was revealed to the apostles and they wrote it in the New Testament, it was a mystery no longer, for the very object of writing it was that the reader might understand his knowledge in the mystery. That God put his Spirit into men to reveal things of which uninspired men could know nothing until spiritual men revealed them, after which they were plain enough to be understood by all, may be seen in the following examples. When Joseph was a slave in Egypt, he was put into prison; and after a time the king's chief butler and baker were put into the same prison. (Gen. 40: 5-8.) Each one told Joseph his dream, and Joseph, or rather God through Joseph, gave the interpretation. (Gen. 40: 20-23.) Why could not the baker and butler interpret their own dreams? Because they were natural men-not discerners of spiritual things. Why could Joseph interpret and make plain that which was foolish to them until revealed? Because he was a man in whom the Spirit of God dwelt and through whom God made revelations to natural men. In this connection study Gen. 40: 14-32; Dan. 2: 1-34; 5: 5-30.

THAT OVERWORKED SMILE. BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

"His preaching is always so pleasant, and he never forgets to smile!" This is all very well, provided; but the proviso should not be overlooked. For one can smile and smile and yet be a villain. It is the divine requirement that gospel preachers shall be compassionate and kindly ever in relation to their public. But just as specifically does Jehovah forbid that dulcet tones and oversweetness be resorted to for public favor, and he warns that men shall not employ good words and fair speeches with selfish and ulterior motives.

One great harm which results from this super-graciousness in a preacher is that it can lead some of his auditors into the fatal supposition that the awful warnings and dangers of the gospel can be ignored. A mother can direct her boy in such a mild way as to negative her commands and lead him to suppose that disobedience is harmless, or she can speak so positively as to incite him to fear and obey, and yet in both instances employ precisely the same words. Alas, I fear this is true of many a so-called "gospel preacher." Though he speak nothing but the truth, yet his overweening regard for the feelings of his hearers causes them to miss the danger they are in, and they feel that, after all, there is not so much to fear from disobeying God. He is weazel-worded; employs such terms and manner as to suck the force out of the gospel he professes to preach.

But perhaps our most alarming symptom is the way such a preacher refuses to endanger his standing by teaching the church unpleasant but saving truth. Many evils cry for correction; in many a congregation ungodliness is rampant and unrebuked. Of this the preacher is well aware, just as he knows that they who go that way arrive finally in hell. Withal, the churches need guidance and constructive criticism, though to give this (for the time being, at least) may cost the preacher some of his popularity. But the timeserver wants others to pull these chestnuts out of the fire; he must not hurt his standing and name. Rather, he confines himself to such lessons and such places as will enable him to keep his hold upon all, even the most ungodly. He delights to mouth of love and kindness, in flowery speech and eloquent periods. The result is that everybody is pleased (unless it would be the Lord) and pats him on the back and tells him he is grand. But may I here inquire how any one can be so consistently smily, correct, and smooth, and at the same time profess to preach truth which led Christ and his inspired preachers into such horrible persecutions at the hands of their hearers? Is not such a one rather an ear tickler, seeking his personal aggrandizement? At least, is not his smile a bit overworked?

THE LOS ANGELES MEETING AND THE JAPANESE MISSION.

BY S. H. HALL.

As has already been reported, I began a meeting with the Central church of Christ, Los Angeles, Cal., February 15, and continued it till Sunday, March 1. I have never been in a meeting in which so much was done in so little a time. Fourteen made the good confession, five were restored to fellowship, and two were added by statement. Two elders were appointed to work with the three they already had and five deacons were appointed. Three substantial business men were appointed to look out the best bargain in a lot for a permanent home for this congregation and a nice start was made on a building fund in cash and pledges. I was delighted with the personnel of the congregation. Above four hundred of as fine workers as I have ever seen are in that congregation. They have a mind to work, and a great future is before them. I found Brother S. E. Witty, the local minister, well liked and highly appreciated by the members. He is considered one of the best personal workers we have. He and his good wife, as well as other members of his family, are godly in their living and are very much devoted to the cause of Christ.

While there it was my pleasure to preach for Brother Cassius, our faithful colored brother, at Watts, Cal., just a little way out from Los Angeles. He is doing a very great work, and I was so much pleased to find in his son one of our most loyal and faithful members. A man's children, as a rule, very clearly indicate the life that he himself has lived. Brother Cassius' son certainly honors his father and is a dependable elder of the colored congregation at that place. I hope to see and be with this good work again, and am glad to say that all fellowship given to this work will be worthily received.

One of my greatest pleasures while in Los Angeles was in being with Brother Ishiguro and his faithful wife in the work they are doing among the Japanese. I was with them the first Lord's-day morning I was there in their Bible study for the little folks. This was a treat. Forty-six were present on that occasion. Sisters Bell Ragsdale and Vivian Cox, members of the Central congregation, have been helping much with this work by teaching a class each in English. Sister Hettie Lee Ewing, one of Texas' best school-teachers, will soon join this work, with the idea of helping Brother and Sister Ishiguro in their English classes and at the same time learn well the Japanese langage and customs with the idea of later going to Japan for regular work.

It was my pleasure to preach to Brother Ishiguro's congregation, with a number of interested Japanese who are not members, the last two Lord's days I was there. Brother T. Kanamine, the first Japanese convert in this mission, was my interpreter. He did his work well. I have never seen more beautiful services in my life than the prayer and song service that I witnessed just before speaking to these people. Ishiguro is a leader and knows well how to have everything done just right. Above everything, the consecration of himself and his wife to the cause of our Lord and Savior and the beautiful reverence that adorns the services made my short visits with him some of the most helpful things that have come into my life. In a letter just received from Brother Witty, I learn that Ishiguro is expecting to have two more ready for baptism shortly. May God bless this work and make it grow and grow until its light will be seen in Ishiguro's homeland, to the helping greatly of those faithful souls we already have in Japan so faithfully preaching the word.

I was so busy while in Los Angeles that I did not get to visit much. I spent a short time in Brother Fugua's home in Pasadena and saw the splendid printing plant he has there that is turning out much free literature. Due to Sister Fuqua's condition, Brother and Sister Fuqua were with us only one night. I was so sorry to hear, after returning home, of Sister Fuqua's complete breakdown in health. May the Lord spare her to this good husband, who has ever been so untiring in his efforts to teach the people by tongue and pen, is my prayer. I did not get to see Brother G. W. Riggs, who is one of the pioneer workers on the Pacific Coast, while there, as he was in the East on a visit. It was my pleasure, however, to see his good wife, and also to get to be with him just a short while at the Gospel Advocate office just before he left Nashville on his return trip. I was with the brethren in Ontario one night, and was delighted with their beatiful new home for the congregation there. These are fine people, and they are doing a good work. I met quite a number of brethren from the other congregations in Southern California. I was glad to see the venerable A. C. Brown again. We got to make a short visit in the home of Brother and Sister J. C. Estes in Pasadena. We have no souls more faithful and loyal to the cause of our Lord, in my judgment. Time would fail me to tell by name the many other friends it was our pleasure to meet. And they were all so very good to us and spared nothing in trying to make our stay a delightful one.

The one sad thing about the trip was mother's going away suddenly while we were away. And our good friends in Los Angeles did their best to carry our burden for us. One thing that I failed to mention in last week's Advocate about mother's death that should have been mentioned was the thoughtfulness of the Central congregation and also of the Japanese congregation in each sending a beautiful wreath, made of what they call "everlasting flowers," for mother's funeral. They will never know how deeply this was appreciated. The Lord bless them and make us worthy, to a degree, of such love.

Our home while there was with Brother and Sister A. A. Godfrey and their two daughters and son. I have never been in a home not my own and felt more at home while there than in this one. We have no better people. May this pleasure be ours again!

OUR EFFORTS TO SAVE THE LOST. BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

The above caption would appear all out of place and most ridiculous to a certain class of religionists, because it is all out of harmony with their theory of the religion of Jesus Christ: God, before the world was, foreordained a certain number of the human family unto eternal life and reprobated the other portion to eternal perdition, and that this number is so fixed that it cannot be changed in any way, and of course, if so, man can do nothing in order to his or any one else's salvation.

In the face of this theory, we find this kind of teaching from the word of God: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." (1 Tim. 4: 16.) "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."

(James 5: 19: 20.) "And others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh." (Jude 23.) "Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth." (1 Tim. 2: 4.) "The Lord is not slack concerning his promize, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." (2 Pet. 3: 9.) Thus we see that God wills that all be saved. He is "not willing that any should perish." All people will be saved if they will de his will. "Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persens: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." (Acts 10: 34, 35.) Jesus "became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Heb. 5: 9.)

Not only do we find that God wants all to be saved, but we find also that he uses human agency to save, as is clearly taught in the foregoing scriptures. There are no two propositions more plainly and positively taught in God's word than these two propositions: First, God wants all to be saved and has fixed for it to be that way, and all who will to be saved will be saved. Second, God uses human agency or instrumentality to carry out his purpose, or plan, and does not save any one without it. Then, to what extent should I be interested, and what kind of an effort should I put forth in order to save? These are questions confronting me, you, and all of God's people today, and there is no getting around them, and there must not be any shirking of responsibility.

What a serious matter it is for me or any one of God's children to undertake to shirk this, so important and so serious a responsibility! To do so means the loss of souls so precious in God's sight-souls lost, doomed to eternal punishment. No wonder Jude said: "Some save [with fearl, snatching them out of the fire." (Verse 23.)

Just a few weeks back a subterranean explorer up in Kentucky was trapped in a cave many feet from the mouth by a sliding boulder which held him fast, making it impossible for him to get out without help. The news of this man's being entombed alive in that condition spread all over the nation, and in every issue of the papers there came out in bold headlines something about it. The eyes of a nation, and perhaps nations, were centered upon this poor fellow. The hearts of the people everywhere went out in sympathy for him and his people. They rushed to the scene from many miles away and from different States to see and try to help. A rescue effort was inaugurated; the Governor of the State was enlisted; geologists, mining engineers, and experienced miners from different parts of the country came; food, bedding, tents, and various kinds and types of tools and machinery were shipped there; and physicians and expert surgeons were sent to the scene. From a spirit of sympathy and love for suffering mortals, a wealthy Chicago widow, Mrs. James G. Blane; in addition to the numerous donations in money, put up thousands of dollars to meet necessary expenses. The efforts were made under strict military authority, and for days and nights men worked mightily, exposing themselves to the inclement weather and hazarding their own lives by venturing where danger was so imminent to get this poor man out alive. But despite all of this, it was all to no avail. The man died before these efforts could reach him, and danger was so great when they did reach him and found him dead that upon wise and deliberate counsel, they abandoned the undertaking of getting even the lifeless body out.

Would I have raised my voice or lifted my hands against such demonstrations and extraordinarily heroic efforts? Never, never! It showed the great heart and magnanimous spirit in the people of our country. Could my presence there have done any good toward helping to rescue this poor man, I certainly would have gone; and if my giving thel ast cent of money or the last morsel of food, or anything else within my power to give, would have rescued him, I certainly would not have withheld it.

But listen, my dear friends. While this occurrence was horribly sad to contemplate and we shrink back and shudder at such a calamity, yet this was temporal suffering and temporal death. It belongs to time. "Fear not them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both scul and body in hell." (Matt. 10: 28.)

Man is the captive of Satan, lost in sin and doomed to eternal night and an awful punishment with the devil and his angels, "where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." To save man from this is a work of rescue. It is snatching people out of the fires of hell. How much more interested and how much more heroic our efforts should be! One has to do with immortal souls and an awful eternity; the other, with the temporal life and physical rescue and safety. Which should be the more serious?

SERMON OUTLINES

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION

A Book of Three Hundred New Sermon Outlines

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has three hundred sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, mara helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the conomitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

THE GOSPEL SONG. No. 2. BY CHARLES H. GABRIEL.

The young writer must not expect each and every song he writes to be a success. His friends may insist that any one of them should make him famous, but such is not the case. I remember my first "speakin'-day" composition. I felt sure I had old man Demosthenes backed off the stage as an orator; but when the hard-hearted professor got through criticizing that piece of literature in the presence of the assembled school, it was as full of holes as a mosquito net, and I could have crawled through the smallest mesh.

Talent, observation, experience, and practice. You must keep everlastingly, conscientiously, and intelligently at work. Fifty years ago I wrote my first song. Since them I have written hundreds that got no farther than the wastebasket, and published hundreds that should have gone into that receptacle. During the last thirty-five years it has been my rule in life to write something every day, if only to keep in practice. When a song is written, unless it be intended for some special purpose or occasion, lay it away for a time, and when it is reviewed it quite probably will not be the great success you imagined it would be.

I repeat that talent, observation, experience, and practice are the stepping-stones by which the young writer must cross the river into the land of success. His early melodies, harmonies, and arrangements will be faulty in many respects, and his song, if printed as it leaves his hand, will reflect upon, rather than commend, his ability. He should have his work edited by some competent critic before it is offered for publication. After this has been done, he should study carefully to know why certain changes were made in his work by his reviewer, and if he is wise he will not again make this same error.

The composer must not be afraid of work. After the melody has shaped itself to his satisfaction, it must be written down and harmonized. The literalist may employ an amanuensis, but the song writer must be his own copyist. To write out an ordinary gospel song, the author will be obliged to touch his pen to paper from one thousand to fifteen hundred times for the music alone, while many compositions will require from two to three times that number.

Now, the young author may discover that a wide sea lies between his early manuscripts and a publisher. He must not be discouraged, however, because compositions of authors of established reputation sometimes fail to make the harbor. Should your manuscript be returned to you, even without comment, don't be disappointed. That particular publisher may not have fancied the subject of your song; it may not have been the exact style that appealed to him; the hymn may have been faulty or the music lacking in the variety his needs called for. There are many factors concerned in the make-up of a music publisher's repertoire, as is true of current magazines and newspapers, in that each has an adopted policy of its own, and it is not always feasible or good business ethics for a publisher to say just what does or does not meet his demands. It may be that your song is exactly what some other compiler is searching for. Try him, and keep on working.

Just a word about the hymn, or text of a song. The potency of a hymn that has a message, that inspires the composer, I can only describe by analogy.

You have looked into the heart of some rare flower and become fascinated by its pistil wonders, its stamen mysteries, its marvelously colored petals and shaded corolla. You have stood enthralled by the divine nature of its creation, while its fragrance formed a calyx of enchantment between you and the world about you. So it is with a perfect hymn.

The fields and woods are radiant with flowers, but the garden of gospel hymns is almost overgrown with weeds. Many botanical weeds are interesting and beautifully formed, but the gospel-hymn weed is without one redeeming characteristic.

Poetry is the natural language of worship, and the only fit speech for music. It is easy to dabble in, but hard in which to reach excellence.

The construction of a hymn must be perfect in feet, accent, rhythm, and rhyme, and its several stanzas have absolute conformation. Its content should have dignity, depth, and diction. Each line should show a definite part in the framing of its message.

A hymn and a poem are materially different in sentiment and fabrication. A poem may be uneven in feet, broken in accent, and vary in lines; but the hymn, as before stated, must be radically even to be eligible for music. Superfluous words may easily be avoided by a careful syllabic consideration.

The wise hymnist will avoid the use of words of more than one syllable at the close of a stanza, since words should be sung as nearly as possible to the manner in which they are spoken. For example, "Help me to-day to help others" is neither melodious nor will it admit of a pleasing musical cadence; yet by a simple reconstruction the sentence would read, "Help me to help others to-day," making a much stronger and more musical sentence. Words of two or more syllables may be used to close the first and third lines of the stanza, if such use seems necessary. A too liberal use of the sibilants is objectional and inexcusable, as synonyms can always be found.

A hymn sings its own tune, and the poet should be very careful in the placing of vowels and consonants, using them where rhythm and accent demand or deny, thereby making the hymn melodious and its rhetoric more euphonious.

As is the case with a song, a hymn must always have a climax and each stanza culminate uniformly, or music cannot bring out its sense or beauty.

The style of a hymn should be graceful—that is, spontaneous. Its diction should be varied by a choice of language and manner of expression, without repetition of words, and be enriched with the higher graces of composition. Its phraseology should be becoming to its subject, by the fascination of the mode in which its sentences are phrased, so that by the structure of its language the conjunctive relation of words will admit of an easy and smooth enunciation. This will relieve that deplorable "running together" of speech so ill becoming the singer and annoying to the listener. A hymn should be free from long words that are difficult of pronunciation, especially when such words occur on unaccented feet of the verse.

To my mind, the perfection of hymn writing is a combination of force, strength, energy, grace of style, musical cadence, and a beautiful figure, with the irradiation of imagination and fancy.

Do not hope to write anything strictly new or original, either in words or music. There are scores of examples we might be justified in terming "plagiarism," but which, in many cases, may be but coincidents.

The church needs young composers of music as never before, if this branch of Christian worship is to be kept alive. A generation ago scores of writers were at work, while to-day it would be difficult to name a "baker's dozen." All the old writers, save one, have gone to their reward, while few are rising up to carry on the work of their predecessors.

Finally, after your song is written, the public is the last court of appeal for its success. No man has ever lived who qualified as an infallible judge for the people. What I like, you may not, and vice versa; and that in which neither of us discovers beauty or usefulness, others may—and do. The public is no respecter of persons or authors, and never, to my knowledge, has an author been successful with everything he wrote. Many of the old masters were prolific writers, yet but a few of their compositions have become classics or were published. Many individual sacred-music writers wrote hundreds of songs, of which but a limited number survived half a dozen years. One reason for this is because of the prodigious strides toward excellence by which our music is steadily advancing.

Now and then an author gets a song his immediate judgment tells him will be an unusual success, but the reople prove it to be an absolute failure, while one he sets little value upon leaps at once into popularity. This is not true in music alone, but in literature and the arts as well.

Possessed of the necessary talent, coupled with a yearning after excellence as a composer or hymn writer, the way is clear to every one, and the work is delightful if done for the work's sake; but he who enters the sacred-song field for commercial reasons alone will be disappointed. However, the good Book says that the laborer is worthy of his hire; and if you are prompted by a love of sacred song and its message, your successfulness and material prosperity will depend entirely upon your ambition in the work, your patience to labor, and your determination to succeed.

CONSIDERING MR. BRYAN'S DIZZY REVERIES. BY A. M'GARY.

In this writing I shall not consider Mr. Bryan himself, but some of his deductions deduced from his honest misconceptions of Christ and his gospel and plan of salvation and church.

Mr. Bryan himself is a good man, as the world counts goodness—I dare say, as good as the very best. But Mr. Bryan is a good man with a bad cause—the cause of variegated, gospel-perverting, world-blinding sectarianism; for, with his outstretched arms of charity, he rapturously embraces all forms, phases, and varieties of sectarianism as so many "Christians" in saying: "Hundreds of millions of Christians are scattered over the world." His "hundreds of millions" must necessarily take in every sectarian in the wide world, from the Pope of Rome to the very least child of delusion—from the "mother of harlots" to her youngest daughter, and every sectarian child of her large family of daughters. There has never been, from the birth of Time till now, that many real "Christians" on the face of the earth, during any age or day of its existence, nor do I opine that there will ever be.

Mr. Bryan was inculcating concerning John 15; 1-11 when he said the things I'm considering. He said: "Christ was teaching in a land where the vineyard was a very important branch of agriculture, and he used the vine to show the vital connection between himself and his followers."

So far, so good. But conspicuously evident is it that Christ was not "using the vine to show the vital connection between himself" and the "followers" of "blind guides" who "teach for doctrines the commandments of men," thus making "the commandments of God of none effect, "which is the condition of at least ninety-nine per cent of the "hundreds of millions" of so-called "Christians "" scattered over the world." Christ was not "using the vine to show the vital connection between himself" and these, because there is no "vital" or any other sort of "connection between" him and them. Mr. Bryan would know this is so, if he would accord himself the privilege to know it. But in order to do so, he would have to pull off his ancestral, sectarianized spectacles, through which he has been vainly attempting to read the Bible all the while, and do some real, sure-enough reading. Christ's question, "How readest thou?" is one of the most important questions ever propounded to man.

Christ said, for one and all, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God;" and the word of God informs us how to "seek," in order to "find," as follows: "Seek ye out of the book of the Lord, and read: no one of these shall fail." Such as do this do not "fail" to find "the kingdom of God." And those who thus "seek" and find "the kingdom of God" and are "born of water and of the Spirit" "enter into the kingdom of God." And it is "the vital connection" between Christ and these that "the vine" and its "branches" of John 15: 1-11 illustrates so scripturally and beautifully and reasonably and logically.

But a vast, vast majority, instead of "seeking first the kingdom of God," as Christ directs, "seek first" and last and all the while the kingdom of the clergy, which is divided and subdivided and sub-subdivided into a heterogeneous mass of so-called "orthodox" sects, all bearing marked spiritual relationship to that "mother of harlots and abominations of the earth" mentioned in Rev. 17: 1-10. In this motley mess of spiritual confusion and delusion are to be found the, by far, greater portion of the "hundreds of millions" of so-called "Christians scattered over the world," referred to by Mr. Bryan.

If he should take it upon himself to rove the earth in quest of some "vine" with "branches" of such varied productivity as would enable him to fairly illustrate, by its different "branches," even the different sects (to say nothing of the individuals composing these sects) that make up the full sum of denominationalism, he would be a rover the remainder of his days, even if he should live forever!

Even if some "vine" could be found playing such a prank on nature as bearing peaches, pears, apples, oranges, apricots, melons of all kinds and varieties, pumpkins, squashes, and gourds, though it would excite and challenge profound attention as nature's greatest monstrosity, yet it would, in its lack of still greater wondrousness of production, be wholly inadequate as a means by which to illustrate the religious monstrosity of present-day sectariandom, which embraces at least ninety-nine per cent of the "hundreds of millions" to whom Mr. Bryan refers.

Though Mr. Bryan did not express the "branch-church" idea in his article I'm considering, that idea is easily read between the lines. And it is a correct idea when the "branches" are pointed in the right direction—Romeward.

In the fear of God and in the light of his word, I declare with all the emphasis and sincerity of my mind, heart, and soul that not one sect in the entire realm of sectariandom or denominationalism has any "vital" or other sort of "connection" with that church to which Christ referred when he said: "Upon this rock I will build my church." I am more than willing to carry this conviction with me to the final judgment, and also the conviction that they are all spiritual descendants of that "mother of harlots" mentioned in Rev. 17: 5. They all bear spiritual resemblances of that hierarchic family—some more and some less—just as is the case in natural daughters of natural mothers.

Mr. Bryan says: "If all Christians were united—not necessarily in one church organization, but in a zeal for the coming of God's kingdom and the doing of God's will on earth as it is done in heaven—they could revolutionize the world." A fraction of this is fine—yea, superfine. This part: "If all Christians were united, they could revolutionize the world." Yes, if all Christians were united, as few Christians as there are, speaking of them comparatively, "they could revolutionize the world."

But when Mr. Bryan says "Christians," he means sectarians. He is, however, naturally too charitably inclined to deny that a Christian is a "Christian." In fact, the only difference, in his view, between a sectarian and a Christian is that a sectarian looks more like a "Christian" to him than a Christian does, owing to the fact that he looks at both only through the ancestral, sectarianized spectacles he has worn constantly all his life. Hence, when he says, "If all Christians were united, they could revolutionize the world," he means that "if all sectarians were united, they could revolutionize the world," though he is naturally so charitably inclined that he would not kick Christians out of such "union"—if such "union" were possible, which it is not. It would be no more impossible to lash a caballada of wild Spanish ponies together with a rope of sand than it would be to "unite" all sectarians, unless they would all abandon their sectarianism and accept the gospel of Christ in the way provided in Christ's commission to his apostles, which is the only possible way to accept it.

But I will agree with Mr. Bryan that if "all sectarians lhe calls them "Christians" level to united, they could revolutionize the world." And if it were possible to "unite" them in the way he vainly imagines they could be "united," they not only "could," but would, "revolutionize the world "—in about the same way that the papal power "revolutionized" it when that power was at the zenith of its devilment.

Though I have not yet touched the chief things of Mr. Bryan's article, with which I intended to deal when I "took up my pen" (pencil), this has waxed to such length already as to preclude the introduction of, and worthwhile attention to, any other point of Mr. Bryan's preachments, within reasonable bounds. Hence, Propriety whispers: "Rest here for a week or more."

OUR MESSAGES

- H. C. Hale preached at Lewisburg, Tenn., last Sunday.
- F. W. Smith preached at Franklin, Tenn., last Lord's day.

- J. H. McBroom, of Atlanta, Ga., preached at Charlotte Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

George W. Miller, Osage, Okla., March 30: "I began our meeting here last Saturday night. Walter Teague, of Claremore, Okla., is leading the singing."

Granville L. Cullum preached at Burns, Tenn., last Lord's day. Brother Cullum is announced to begin a meeting at Joe Johnston Avenue, this city, next Lord's day.

Abe Martin says: "'Affections that kin be alienated an' scattered around hain't worth nothin', said 'Squire Swallow, as he threw th' Bentley-Purviance-Mopps case out o' court t'day."

Fred E. Exum announces that he is ready and anxious to preach for any congregation that will call for him. With him will be Fred Scott, of David Lipscomb College. Call Main 3422.

The directors of the Fanning Orphan School will meet at the School on Thursday, April, 9, at 2: 30 P.M. The directors of the David Lipscomb College will meet at the college at 2 P.M., Friday, April 10.

B. C. Goodpasture, Atlanta, Ga., April 3, sends three subscribers to the Gospel Advocate and says: "Brother Hardeman is in the second week of a very interesting meeting with the West End Avenue congregation. There have been three additions to date."

George W. Graves, Nashville, Tenn., March 31: "Last Lord's day I preached in Crittendon's Bend, in Wilson County, three times. One was baptized and one was restored. Next Lord's day I am to preach for the Millersburg congregation, in Rutherford County."

Willie Hunter, Tompkinsville, Ky., April 4: "There was one baptism here last week. The brethren here manifested a noble spirit toward me and my family during my confinement in the hospital. The Gospel Advocate is fine. Your reply in last week's issue to the 'Rev.' Bow was a clincher. There is nothing to lose or fear on the side of truth and right."

Any sister who anticipates a trip to Europe this summer for the purpose of studying and sight-seeing and wishing a traveling companion is requested to correspond with Miss Margaret Ehresman, of Harding College, Morrillton, Ark."

Sarah Mulliniks Bennett, Leland, Miss., to S. F. Morrow: "After reading your article, 'The Work of the Church,' in the Gospel Advocate of February 19, I feel that I must write you and tell you that I wish you and all the other brethren would write more on this subject."

- E. A. Elam preached at McMinnville, Tenn., last Lord's day. His subject was: "Wrong no man, corrupt no man, take advantage of no man." (2 Cor. 7: 2.) Evening subject: "The Goodness of God." Brother Elam will preach at Murfreesboro, Tenn., next Lord's day, morning and evening.
- R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, March 31: "Our meeting began last Sunday morning and is being conducted entirely by home forces, and every man seems willing to do his duty. We have two or three or four or five good song leaders, together with lots of other good help, and the song service is proving excellent."
- W. D. Black, Sweetwater, Texas, April 1: "Our full seating capacity was taxed at the morning hour yesterday. Roy Clark preached for us. At the close of his sermon a young married lady made the good confession and was baptized last night. Our meeting is to begin next Sunday, with C. McClung, of Weatherford, doing the preaching."
- S. M. Spears, Colorado Springs, Col., March 26: "On March 22 we who are laboring in the name of Christ at Colorado Springs were again encouraged by hearing the name of Christ confessed by one young lady and by another sister's returning to duty. We read the Gospel Advocate weekly with both interest and profit. May its editors and contributors ever be loyal to the cause."
- H. J. Stafford and wife, Ludlow, Ky., April 4: "We have a sweet, Christian girl, eighteen years old, who has lost her health. She has been sick for three months. We believe God's promise recorded in Eph. 6: 1-3, and she has spiendidly kept these requirements. We earnestly ask all Christians reading this to join with us in prayer for our child's recovery, if it be our Father's will. She would greatly appreciate a word of comfort and cheer from any one who cares to send it. Address Pauline Stafford, 21 Hay Avenue, Ludlow, Ky. Please pray for us."

George J. Hipp, Fort Pierce, Fla., March 31: "R. V. Cawthon, of Mount Juliet, Tenn., began a meeting here on the third Sunday in March, in the Woodmen's Hall. We did not have large crowds, but at almost every service there were some that had never heard the gospel before. There were no additions, but I am sure good seed was sown. Brother Cawthon has promised to return next winter, and we hope and pray for a great meeting then. Several said they had never heard anything like that before. We want to get a tent and put it up in the heart of the city next winter."

W. C. Ramsey, Stop, Ky., April 3: "Wayne County is experiencing some debating. J. H. Gosser (Christian), of Russell County, met J. W. Thurston (Baptist) at Stop, Ky., in a discussion. The writer met E. L. Mitchell, of the First Baptist Church at Monticello, in discussion at the Oil Valley church of Christ, March 23-27. C. R. Nichol is to meet H. B. Taylor in a four-days' debate, beginning on May 5. O. F. Shearer has a proposition signed with E. L. Mitchell to be discussed some time in the future. We certainly enjoy these discussions, as it brings the truth before the people, and the Baptists dread it so much."

J. S. Daugherty, Rockdale, Texas, April 1: "I was with the brethren at Teague, Texas, last Sunday, with one baptized."

Frank Baker, Berry, Ala., April 2: "I preached for the church at Eldridge, Ala., last Lord's day. We had a fine hearing both day and night."

- W. H. Neill, Huntsville, Ala., April 1: "James M. Neill preached for the West Huntsville congregation on the second Lord's day in this month, with two restorations."
- M. S. Mason, Springfield, Mo., April 1: "Since writing I have visited places near home and preached two funerals. I have the latter part of May and first part of June that I would be glad to place where brethren can use me."
- H. J. Stafford, Ludlow, Ky., April 4: "I still love and appreciate the Gospel Advocate. To it I am indebted largely for what Bible knowledge I have, and it has helped me more in trying to live the Christian life than I can ever express."
- D. M. English (colored), of Nashville, Tenn., recently conducted two tent meetings in Brownsville, Tenn. The white brethren there heard him preach most of the time and aided in a financial way. The brethren advise that Brother English is a splendid preacher.
- C. J. Massey, San Antonio, Texas, April 3: "I am ready to preach the gospel wherever a preacher is wanted. The church I have been laboring with for nearly two years, the Government Hill church of Christ, of this city, has consented to let me go out and hold some meetings during the next three or four months."
- J. C. Mosley, Union, S. C., April 3: "Brother Burton and I preached two evenings for Brother Gibbs in Greenville. I will now move to Moore, S. C., Route 1, where I will labor with two congregations and do mission work at other places. We will hold a meeting at Pauline, where the Baptists claim nine hundred members in one church."
- T. P. Burt, Claude, Texas, April 3: "On account of the high altitude at Hereford, Texas, I have changed locations and am now at Claude, Texas, P. O. Box 298, and am open for meetings, song drills, and singing schools wherever I am needed, as I will be in the evangelistic field for the rest of the year. Write me, brethren, if you need my work, and I will try to do you good.
- S. E. Templeton, Amarillo, Texas, April 1: "Last Lord's day was filled with much interest for the disciples of Christ worshiping at Tenth and Fillmore Streets. Within the past thirty days nine disciples have been added by relation, one of this number confessing his sins. Just recently one was baptized into Christ here from Canyon as a result of the good work being done there. G. C. Brewer is to begin a meeting for us on May 31."
- R. V. Castles, Fort Worth, Texas, April 4: "The Highland Park church of Christ, of Fort Worth, Texas, will broadcast a service over WBAP, Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Sunday, April 19, 5 to 6 P.M. (Fort Worth time). Meter length is 475.9. Elmer L. Nichols, who labors with us, will preach on the subject, 'The Greatness of the Bible.' Tune in at that hour. If you listen in, write us, for it will aid in getting another engagement."
- Will W. Slater, Irving, Texas, April 3: "The meeting at Neosho, Mo., closed on Sunday night. Eleven took membership and one was baptized. W. T. Hines did the preaching and I led the songs. James E. Laird, of Tulsa, Okla., will begin our spring meeting on April 12 and continue it three Sundays. If you need a singing school, a singer for your meeting, or a meeting this fall, write me. I want to finish out the year in the evangelistic work."
- W. S. Moody preached at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day, both morning and night. Two were baptized and one was restored. Brother Moody also taught the adult Bible class in the Sunday school. This class is composed of over one hundred members and is constantly growing. The total attendance was four hundred and eighty-two. The elders and other workers of the church hope to reach the five-hundred mark by June 1 and are working toward that end.
- H. N. Mann, Riverside, Tenn., March 30: "Ira A. Douthitt recently held a good meeting here. The meeting continued seven days, with fine interest and good audiences both day and night, and resulted in ten baptisms and three restorations. The number at each day service was over one hundred for the full time, and was said to be the best for Riverside. Brother Douthitt loves the cause of Christ and preaches the gospel with power. May his kind increase, and may the Lord's kingdom grow and increase."

A. A. Bunner, 3553 West One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, Cleveland, Ohio: "The best issue of the Gospel Advocate—taking it from cover to cover—that has come into my hands in many a day is the issue of March 5. I would like to have all of this issue that you can possibly spare me just to send to the preachers of this great city. I mean by 'preachers' both Roman Catholic and Protestant, and especially preachers of the Christian Church. How many copies can you let me have?"

Sister D. M. English, 2515 Albion Street, Nashville, Tenn., April 3: "Alonzo Jones, of 2324 Alameda Street, is in the City Hospital very low. He has traveled a great deal, carrying the gospel to the poor. Now he has come nearly to the end, and I think it would be good for every disciple of Christ to lend a hand to help support his wife and five children. The children are small. Brother Jones has been unwell for sometime, but just kept going for the sake of his family and doing just what he could for the Lord that has blessed him."

- J. V. Armstrong Traylor, Louisville, Ky., April 1: "If any of the readers of the Gospel Advocate have friends or relatives living in Jeffersonville, Ind., who are members of the church of Christ, I am kindly asking that they write me at New York Hall, Louisville, Ky., giving me their names and full addresses. We are trying to get a congregation started there. I am preaching there some. We have the Tabor Lodge Hall rented in which to worship. It is located on the corner of Market and Wall Streets. We worship in the main room on the third floor."
- F. L. Paisley, Louisville, Ky., April 2: "Recently I made a call in the Christian Leader for a singer to assist me in a tent meeting in Toledo, Ohio, beginning on June 14. A. H. Whitacre, mayor of Jerry City, Ohio, offered his services and is recommended as a fine singer. I suppose arrangements have been completed. Toledo is the third meeting in succession I shall hold for which I see not so much as traveling expenses, and the meetings are from three to five hundred miles apart. I have some time the first half of June I would like to spend with a congregation able to support a meeting. Address me at 1126 Jefferson Street, Paducah, Ky."

William Paisley, Toledo, Ohio, April 1: "The church in Toledo is growing nicely. We have fairly good attendance each Lord's day. We are planning on a meeting to begin about the middle of June, to be conducted by F. L. Paisley, of Louisville, Ky. The little band here needs help and would highly appreciate any amount from any person or church. The church owns no house, and a place to hold a meeting will cost no little sum. The faithful few meet at 1:30 P.M. in a Christian Church house at Detroit and West Central Avenue. Please help us. Send all contributions to L. A. Hinds, Rossford, Ohio. We will duly acknowledge all receipts."

F. B. Srygley says: "It was my pleasure to be with the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, on the fifth Sunday in March. I was the teacher that day of the largest Bible class I have ever taught. There were one hundred and one in the class. It was a review of the lessons of the first quarter of the present year. With the books all closed, this class was able to give the name of each lesson and answer a few leading questions on each, which showed that they had not only learned the lessons, but that they still remembered them. There were over four hundred and sixty present in the Sunday school, and a large audience remained for the sermon and the worship. I was familiar with the Eighth Avenue congregation when a few comparatively young men of that congregation started the work on Twelfth Avenue. These brethren by faithful work and consistent living have built up a congregation that is reaching more people than perhaps any other congregation in the city. It was a pleasure to me to be with them and see how the work has grown in their hands. May the work continue to increase until it reaches all that part of the city.

BROTHER McQUIDDY'S BOOK.

"The Profitable Word" contains a choice selection of the writings of J C. McQuiddy, editor and publisher of the Gospel Advocate for over forty years, carefully compiled by A. B. Lipscomb. It is a gem and contains some of the best thoughts of a great mind. The book contains 196 pages, and is neatly bound in silk and stamped in gold and white metal. Now ready. EDITORIAL

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

"I love to tell the story Of Jesus and his love," but it is sad to tell the story of one who loved and served the Lord, after that faithful, loving servant has ceased to love and serve him here; hence, it is with sadness, but in the light of love and Christian gladness, that I undertake to try to tell the story of the life and labors of our beloved brother, A. S. Derryberry, who peacefully passed away a few months ago, thus ending a life of usefulness here and beginning a life of blessedness "over there." "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his

I knew Brother Derryberry from the days of his grandfathers, and I think I knew him well, having lived under the same roof with him a long time, and I never knew him to do or say anything of even questionable propriety, so far as morality or loyalty to Christ was concernednever. Moreover, the Derryberry family is and has long been a very large family, a large flock, without even one black sheep in it. This may seem somewhat strange and extravagant, but I believe it is a safe and conservative statement.

Brother Derryberry never posed as a big preacher; but, in his own quiet, earnest way, he did a great work, and I predict that many will rise up to call him blessed long after those who knew and loved him here shall have gone into the fathomless depths of the boundless beyond. Nor did he seek the easy places in his ministry; but, following the footsteps of his Master, into the highways and byways and destitute places he went, sowing the seed of the kingdom, to save the souls of the lost; and through his efforts the gospel was preached to the poor, without money and without price. Few, I believe, have received less remuneration or compensation for labor in his line than he received; yet no such thought as "less labor in some other line might pay me better" ever entered his mind, I almost know. With Paul, the peerless apostle, he could consistently say, "This one thing I do," and he did it as wisely and well as he could, never murmuring, never complaining, but always to the right being true.

Our beloved brother was born-in Maury County, Tenn., I think-April 29, 1851. He obeyed the gospel when he was only fourteen years old. He was a husband, faithful, tender, and true, thirty-five years. His bereaved wife says that in all their life together, she never saw her husband angry or knew him to speak an unkind word. That is a wonderful tribute from a safe source, for a wife knows her husband, if any one does. Of course, he had to meet many of the ills of life that try the patience and burden the souls of the sons and daughters of men, but he did not allow those trials to embitter his spirit or sharpen his speech. He met them with the patience and forbearance of a gentle, considerate, consistent Christian.

He might be said to have inherited Christianity. In his native county the church of Christ is and long has been very strong. In that selfsame county the Derryberry family is and long has been very strong, and the Derryberry family is solid for the church of Christ. It was natural, then, for Anson Derryberry to become a Christian when scarcely more than a child, to live the Christian life faithfully and devotedly, and, later, to preach the gospel in his native county and State and elsewhere, establishing congregations, strengthening those already established-doing the work of an evangelist wheresoever duty called him, as long as he was able to go.

Sick and suffering five years, he was hopeful, patient, and considerate till death stilled his heart and stopped his sufferings, August 9, 1924. We are born to die, and, dying, we must die; but happy is that man who, when the end comes, is as well prepared to go as I believe A. S. Derryberry was-who can look back upon a life spent, as his was, in the service of the Lord.

Brother Derryberry left, to lament their loss, an affectionate wife and one son. The bereaved wife has a worthy son, his wife and children, to ease the shock of her loss and help to make her happy, as I hope she will earnestly try to be. The son, Elam Derryberry, in whose home at Portland, Tenn., his father passed away, is a vigorous young man, of clean habits and untarnished reputation, and I predict and pray for him a long, successful, and happy life. He is a singing evangelist, thoroughly trained, and very successful in his line of Christian work.

Bereaved wife and son, daughter-in-law and grandchildren, as well as all of us who loved Brother Derryberry, can, in the midst of sorrow at his going away, thank God and take courage, remembering his unswerving loyalty to the Lord, his faithful life of service, and the good he did in proclaiming the gospel to a perishing world; for we are assured that "blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

THE PRIVILEGE AND DUTY OF CHRISTIANS TO TEACH THE BIBLE TO OTHERS.

BY E. A. ELAM.

Of whom we have many things to say, and hard of interpretation, seeing ye are become dull of hearing. For when by reason of the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need again that some one teach you the rudiments of the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of solid food. For every one that partaketh of milk is without experience of the word of righteousness; for he is a babe. But solid food is for full-grown men, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern good and evil. use have their senses exercised to discern good and evil. (Heb. 5: 11-14.)

This passage should be seriously studied and the truths which it states should be laid to heart. It gives the sad condition of the Hebrew Christians at that time, and shows why they were discouraged, why their knees were feeble and their hands were hanging down, and why they were about to turn away from Christ.

The reason is, they had "become dull of hearing"- that is, their hearts were slow and sluggish in studying and learning the prophecies and other truths concerning the Christ. Some of these things were "hard of interpretation," not because they could not be understood, but because the Hebrew Christians had not exercised their senses in the study of the Scriptures to do so. They were still babes in Christ, and had to be fed upon milk, and not solid food, and had need again to be taught the A B C of the gospel. They did not know the difference between good and evil, truth and error.

They were sharply reproved for this and were told that by the time this letter was written they should have been feedil g upon and relishing the "solid food" of the gospel and should have been teachers of others.

For the same reasons we are forced to see that not a few "church members" to-day are in the same sad predicament; because they call evil good and good evil, put light for darkness and darkness for light, etc., and do not know enough about the New Testament to see the difference between the church of God in its completeness and fullness and the various religious denominations of the present day. Not only so, but being "without experience in the word of righteousness," they seem not to know the difference between modest apparel and immodest dress, virtue and vice, righteousness and world-liness, godliness, and wickedness.

But especial attention is called to this passage to emphasize the fact that the Hebrew Christians were reproved for not being able to teach the word of God to others, and to ask: Do not many to-day deserve the same reproof?

All the church at Jerusalem, scattered abroad on account of persecution, "went about preaching the word." (Acts 8: 1-4.) This they were prepared in heart, in practice, and in the knowledge of the truth to do.

One thing some seem not to have learned—namely, that one may be sufficiently good in heart to teach the truth, but do not understand it sufficiently to do so. On the other hand, one may understand the truth sufficiently to teach it, but may not be true to it and true to God, therefore, and may not be sufficiently interested in the salvation of others to do so. Paul declares that the Roman Christians, being "full of goodness" and "filled with all knowledge," were "able also to admonish one another." (Rom. 15: 15.)

These two things must go together-goodness and knowledge of the truth, and goodness first. Satan is sufficiently informed in the Scriptures to teach them. He quotes the Scriptures fluently and abundantly-accurately, too, when it serves his wicked purpose to do so; or he twists them and perverts the gospel and handles the word of God deceitfully, as suits his purpose. He comes as an angel of light and his ministers appear as servants of righteousness, in order by "their smooth and fair speech" to beguile the hearts of the innocent and to destroy the very elect of God. Therefore, a man is not a good and true preacher of the gospel and faithful teacher of "the word" because he knows and fluently quotes the Scriptures, or is intellectual and learned in the wisdom of this world, or is an orator. Not at all so; but, like Paul, all his intellect, learning, and knowledge of the Bible-all his powers of mind and soul-must be consecrated to the service of God, and, therefore, to the advancement of his kingdom among men. He must determine to know nothing, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. He must on all occasions and under all circumstances and influences be true to God and faithful to the truth. Incalculable harm has been done by such men.

On the other hand, great harm has been done by good men who are obsessed with the desire to be teachers of others—of both the church and those not in the church when they themselves do not know the will of God, but have need that some one teach them the first principles of the oracles of God and feed them as babes upon spiritual milk.

It is sadder still when none in a congregation have not sufficient practice in righteousness and sufficient exercise of their senses in the study of the Bible to "discern good and evil" or to distinguish between truth and error, right and wrong. In this case the blind lead the blind, and both fall into the ditch.

It is a blessed thing, then, that God says: "Be not many of you teachers, my brethren, knowing that we shall receive heavier judgment." (James 3: 1.) While it is the duty of Christians to teach others, it is first their duty to be really good in heart and life and to have sufficient knowledge of the truth to do so.

God grants his children the right and makes it their duty to teach others, but he forbids their teaching error and reproves them for not being competent to teach the truth. No man is "pure from the blood" of others until he has first set a good example and, next, has done what he can financially and otherwise to teach "the whole counsel of God" to others.

This matter of being "full of goodness" and "filled with all knowledge" in order to be able to teach others has been made by the Lord of the very greatest importance and most essential to the growth and development of the church, but a matter which has been very much overlooked, if not willfully neglected, by many congregations and not a few preachers. Indeed, with some it seems to have no importance at all, because their bad example does not stand in their way of teaching, and with some it matters not whether they preach the truth of God or the wisdom of the world.

God has made the elders of the church—of every congregation of saints in the world—examples both in their godly lives and correct teaching. In the qualifications of elders given by the Lord it is clearly seen that they must be pure, true, righteous, and godly men—men without reproach in the church and of good report from those without the church; also, they must be "apt"—that is, competent—to teach. They must hold "to the faithful word which is according to the teaching," that they "may be able both to exhort in the sound doctrine [or teaching], and to convict the gainsayers. For there are many unruly men, vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision, whose mouths must be stopped; men who everthrow whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake." (Tit. 1: 1-11.)

Since there were vain talkers and deceivers, unruly men, teaching things which they ought not for filthy lucre's sake, whose mouths must be stopped, in the days of Timothy and Paul, who can doubt there are such to-day and that they should receive the same treatment? But God has made the elders the leaders in this serious and most necessary work.

The harmony and peace of the church and spread of the gospel depends as much upon this necessary work as upon anything else. In fact, there can be no peace and advancement of the truth without it. Since the church is "the pillar and ground of the truth," it must preserve the truth in its purity and power and see to it that nothing but the truth is preached or taught. But let it be emphasized that elders must be scriptural ones, and, therefore, sufficiently good and competent to do this work.

Until the church in every place can develop and can have scripturally qualified elders—qualified in heart and goodness, in character and ability to teach the truth, and in faith and self-sacrifice doing the scriptural work of elders—it will never prove itself the light of the world or glorify God as it should.

This is God's order of things and can no more be changed or modified or played with than can his way of entrance into the church. The one is as divine and as binding as the other. He who tampers with this order of God, or makes light of God's scriptural elders, or plays politics in the church in the selection of elders, must be guilty of treason against God.

"WOULD BE VERY UNWISE."

BY F. W. SMITH.

Since the statement in last week's Gospel Advocate, "It would be interesting to know how J. J. Walker stands on the action of the Legislature" relative to teaching evolution in the public schools, my attention has been called to the following, which appeared in the Nashville Tennessean of March 13:

Senator Evans read a letter signed by a number of ministers of Nashville, calling upon the legislators not to pass the bill. The letter read:

pass the bill. The letter read:

"To the Senate of Tennessee (courtesy of Senator Sims):
We, the undersigned, citizens of Tennessee, representing all parties, professions, and religious denominations, petition your honorable body not to pass the anti-evolution bill which is now before you for consideration.

"A similar bill has been submitted to the Legislatures of other States, and in every case, after due deliberation, the bill has been defeated. We are thoroughly convinced that the passage of the proposed bill by our Senate would be very unwise.

that the passage of the proposed bill by our Senate would be very unwise.

"[Signed] Dr. George Stoves, pastor of West End Methodist Church; Dr. James I. Vance, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church; Dr. E. P. Dandridge, rector of Christ Church; Dr. T. C. Ragsdale, Presiding Elder of the M. E. Church, South, Nashville District; Dr. John L. Hill, Secretary of the Baptist Sunday School Board; Dr. L. C. Kirkes, pastor of Hillsboro Presbyterian Church; Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Secretary of the Board of Education, M. E. Church, South; Dr. A. C. Holt, assistant pastor First Presbyterian Church; Dr. John F. Baggett, pastor of Meridian Methodist Church; Dr. J. J. Walker, President of the Ministers' Alliance, pastor of Woodland Street Christian Church; Dr. H. B. Trimble, pastor of McKendree M. E. Church, South; Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor of Tulip Street Church; Dr. W. M. Cook, pastor of Waverly M. E. Church, South; Dr. T. A. Kerley, pastor of South End M. E. Church, South."

From the above the name of J. J. Walker appears on

From the above the name of J. J. Walker appears on the list of the preachers who petitioned the legislators to permit the teaching of the infidel theory of evolution to the children of the State; for, since the State has the "power" to prohibit such teaching, a petition to the State to not exercise such power is equivalent to indorsing the doctrine of evolution. -If not, why not?

GROUND OF OBJECTION.

The "ground" upon which this "Ministers' Alliance," of which "Dr." J. J. Walker is president, is thus expressed: "The passage of the proposed bill by our Senate would be very unwise." Now, as to why it "would be very unwise," this "Ministers' Alliance" did not inform the Senate, and consequently we are left to form our own conclusions regarding their action in the premises.

With no further light on the subject, the natural and logical conclusion is that the "Ministers' Alliance" is not only not opposed to the doctrine that man sprang from a lower order of animal creation, but really desire that such doctrine shall be taught in our public schools.

Furthermore, it would be exceedingly difficult for the gentlemen composing the "Ministers' Alliance" to show from either a legal, moral, or biblical right why they should not justly be charged with upholding the theory of modern evolution, or the Darwinian doctrine of the origin of man. They have informed the custodians of the children in our public schools that it "would be very unwise" to pass a bill to prohibit such teaching; and it stands to reason that if they could have submitted either a legal, moral, or scriptural reason for their opposition, they most certainly would have done so.

(1) They are compelled to admit that guardians have a legal right to protect what they conceive to be the highest and best interests of their charges when such legal action does not infringe upon the rights and privileges of others. There is not a college or university in the land that does not avail itself of legal safeguards relative to what it conceives to be right and proper toward those committed to its care. Why, then, should such right be denied the State regarding those committed to its care?

(2) Not only has the State the legal right to protect its wards, but it rests under the moral obligation to do so against whatever is believed to endanger the best interests of such. These are self-evident propositions which are beyond the pale of controversy.

(3) What, then? The gentlemen of the "Ministers' Alliance" have but one alternative left for the defense of their petition to the Senate-viz,, it would be unscriptural, or contrary to the Bible, to have a law passed to prohibit the teaching of evolution in our public schools, and they had as well face this single issue, for in the estimation of all thoughtful and right-thinking people they have committed themselves to this position.

THE MAIN GROUND OF OBJECTION.

Let there be no camouflaging upon the part of the "Ministers' Alliance," but let them, like men, face the real issue and show their true colors before the world. If they do not believe the Bible account of man's origin, let them come out in the open and declare their convictions, and not hide behind the indefinite statement, "The passage of the proposed bill by our Senate would be very unwise." Because of what would such an action on the part of the Senate "be very unwise?" Is not the Bible account of creation, including man, true? If so, why does the "Ministers' Alliance" wish that the children in our public schools shall be taught that the Bible as not true?

It seems to me that these gentlemen have placed themselves in rather an awkward attitude to pose as ministers of the gospel of Christ, or to ask people to believe the historic statements of the Bible; for, if the Genesis account of creation is not true, how can credence be placed in any statement of holy writ?

A REFRESHING ATTITUDE.

It is, indeed, decidedly refreshing to turn from the religiously nauseating spectacle of the petition of the "Ministers' Alliance" to one from the Baptists to the same Legislature on the same subject, as follows:

Baptist ministers of the city, in the regular weekly meeting of the Baptist Pastors' Conference, held this morning at the Baptist Sunday-school Board building, adopted resolutions calling upon Gov. Austin Peay to sign the evolution bill, arguing that in tax-supported schools no man has a right to set forth teachings that attack and undermine Christianity by destroying the faith of child-no man has a right to set forth teachings that attack and undermine Christianity by destroying the faith of childhood in the Bible.

The resolutions were signed by the Rey. Tom L. Roberts, of the Grace Church, president of the Conference; and the Rev. R. E. Grimsley, of the Judson Memorial Church, the secretary.

The resolutions follow:

"Whereas, the Legislature of the State of Tennessee has passed a bill to prohibit the teaching of evolution in the public schools of Tennessee; and,

"Whereas, we believe that such a law is just and in keeping with the principles of democracy which guarantee religious liberty to all; and

"Whereas, the teaching of any theory that contradicts the fundamental principles of Christianity is in itself a menace to the vital facts upon which Christianity in all of its well-established forms stands; and

"Whereas, we believe that in all tax-supported schools, wherein teachers may not propagate their Christian beliefs, no man has a right to set forth other teachings which attack, contradict, and undermine Christianity by destroying the faith of childhood in the Bible, which is the Book of the Christian's faith; therefore,

"Be it resolved by the Baptist Pastors' Conference of Nashville, Tenn., representing twenty churches and ten thousand members, that we appeal to our Governor to sign the bill."

From the foregoing it is manifestly clear that the sweeping statement by the "Ministers' Alliance" in the words, "We, the undersigned, citizens of Tennessee, representing all parties, professions, and religious denominations," was entirely a misstatement of facts in the case. The Baptist brethren repudiate the action of the "Ministers' Alliance," and it can be perfectly safe to say that there are more than forty churches composed of those who wish to be known as Christians only in Nashville and Davidson County, to say nothing of thousands in the State that repudiate the petition of the "Ministers' Alliance."

God can always bring good out of the course and conduct of those who are against his word, and we may trust him to overrule for good the opposition to his truth of this action on the part of the "Ministers' Alliance," whose president is J. J. Walker, the man who is so anxious to have the churches of this State depart from the New Testament order of things.

Since the bill has the signature of the Governor and thus becomes the law of the State, the "Ministers' Alliance" and its president are forbidden to encourage the destruction of faith in the word of God by having the infidel theory taught in our public schools.

BROTHER JOHN B. COWDEN WRITES ME AGAIN.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

The following letter is self-explanatory:

West Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Brother Srygley: I inclose copies of tracts on open and close membership, which you have publicly criticized "on sight unseen." If you had read the tracts instead of the Standard's prejudiced view of the same, you would then had to do your own misrepresenting instead of following the lead of the Standard. Both the Advocate and the Standard have become so prejudiced that they cannot tell the truth about those with whom they differ; but with the tracts about those will have to misrepresent on your own responsibility. Among the many misrepresentations of your criticism of my tracts, I point out only two.

First, on baptism. The only way that I "gossip" in the tract about baptism by immersion is the same way that you and the Standard gossip about it—that is, to say that to me there is no other baptism; and the only spiritual baptism mentioned in the tract is baptism "obeyed from the heart." West Nashville, Tenn .- Dear Brother Srygley: I in-

Second, I do not agree with Peter Ainslie on the subject of open membership any more than I agree with you. I think that you are both wrong. He advocates and practices open membership toward all the followers of Christ, and you only toward the immersed. He receives all into the church, and you receive only the immersed; while I, believing this to be a function of Christ alone, receive no one into the church. I have the same fellowship as he, and am more conservative than you on this question. I do not receive even the immersed, while you do. Brother Ainslie goes a step beyond you, and both of you step beyond the authority of the New Testament. I agree with the Peter of the New Testament, who received no one into the church on the day of Pentecost, but left this to Christ, who added the saved to the church. (Acts 2: 47.)

I think that you should at least do me the justice of

I think that you should at least do me the justice of publishing this letter in your department of the Advocate. Yours very truly, JOHN B. COWDEN.

Brother Cowden seems to think that I have to misrepresent him, as he says: "If you had read the tracts instead of the Standard's prejudiced view of the same, you would then had to do your own misrepresenting instead of following the lead of the Standard." I do not have to misrepresent Brother Cowden, and I am surprised at his making the charge against me and then asking me to publish his effort at an insult in the Gospel Advocate. It will be noted that he says that "both the Advocate and the Standard have become so prejudiced that they cannot tell the truth." That is refreshing (?) so far as I am concerned, but I do not know how the Standard feels about it. It has been some time since one of these sweet-spirited brethren has given it to me quite as hot as that. But I would have the brother remember that I quoted from the Standard, and I did not know then that Brother Cowden had turned it out for falsifying. I thought the Standard could tell the truth; but I knew that one time when it was opened to John B. Cowden to tell why I did not debate with him at Columbia, he told that I ran off to Alabama to keep from debating with him, which was not true; but I thought he could have told the truth about it, but that he neglected to do it.

The brother says the only way he "gossips" about baptism by immersion is the same way that I do. I do not do it. There is no such thing as baptism by immersion, for baptism is immersion. It is as foolish to say "baptism by immersion" as it would be to say "immersion by immersion." Immersion cannot be without immersion, and neither can baptism be without immersion. So, if you have gossiped at all about baptism by immersion, you did not do it as I do, for I do not do it at all.

The brother then says: "I do not agree with Peter Ainslie on the subject of open membership any more than I agree with you." There it is again. It looks like Brother Cowden is determined to insult me. He first yokes me up with the Standard by intimating that I cannot tell the truth any better than the Standard can, and now, to add insult to injury, he tries to yoke me up with Peter Ainslie by saying that he does not agree with him any more than he does with me. Well, I have this to say, then: if he does not agree with Ainslie any more than he does with me, he does not agree with him to hurt. But I am persuaded that he has deceived himself on this point, for he agrees exactly with Ainslie in that he recognizes people as followers of Christ, and therefore Christians, who have never been baptized. The only difference between Cowden and Ainslie is a technical difference and not a practical one. He admits that the unbaptized are Christians, but he allows the Lord to add them to the church if he wants to; while Ainslie admits the same and admits them into his church without baptism.

The brother says: "He [Ainslie] advocates and practices open membership toward all the followers of Christ. and you only the immersed." I do not know what the brother means by practicing open membership, but I believe that God will give membership to all the followers of Christ; and I believe that all who follow Christ will be baptized, while Brother Cowden and Brother Ainslie do not. Still Cowden says he does not agree with either one of us. On this point Cowden and Ainslie are agreed, and I do not agree with either one of them.

Again, he says: "I do not receive even the immersed, while you do." Who said I did? Brother John B. Cowden. I deny the allegation and call for the allegator. I have been saying for many years that no man could give church membership. God alone gives it; but he gives it to all that obey him. Baptism is one of the conditions upon which God has promised admission into his church. And still John B. Cowden says I do not teach this. This has been taught through the Gospel Advocate continually for thirty-five years, to my certain knowledge. I do not say that Brother Cowden is so prejudiced he cannot tell the truth, but I do say he can make as many mistakes in trying to represent an opponent as any man I know. The trouble with Brother Cowden is not on church membership, but it is on his anxiety to work and worship with those who have not obeyed the Lord.

Brother Cowden says in his tract: "It is our part to preach baptism as a condition of salvation and church membership, but it is not our part to sit in judgment upon those that are not baptized or upon those that are, as we do by preaching either 'open' or 'close' membership." I am not asking Brother Cowden to sit in judgment on those that are baptized or upon those that are not, but what I want him to do is to sit in judgment on his own preaching. Does he preach the truth when he preaches that baptism is a condition of salvation and church membership? If he does, he should be slow to encourage any one to believe that he can have either salvation or church membership without complying with that which he says "is our part to preach."

The trouble with Brother Cowden seems to be that he does not believe his own preaching. The brother then asks this very pertinent question: "But if baptism is a condition of salvation and church membership, does it not follow that the Lord adds only the baptized?" I would answer that question in the affirmative by saying it certainly does. It appears to me that any one would be compelled to answer it just that way. But hear his answer: "All the scripture warrants us in saying is, he adds the baptized. The word 'only' is nowhere used in the New Testament in connection with salvation and church membership." Hold, Brother Cowden, you are not trying to play on the word "only," are you? " Except one be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3: 5.) I suppose to enter into the kingdom of God is the same as entering into the church; and if so, then no one will get church membership except. But Brother Cowden says there is no "only" in connection with church membership; but except is as strong as the word "only." I hate to spoil your little playhouse on that, Brother John; but Jesus did it for you, and not I. Your only hope to escape here is to do like your coworkers and worshipers-say that "born of water" is not baptism.

The brother says "When we use the word "only" in this connection, we add to that which is written, or, at least, we speak where the Bible does not speak, and come dangerously near limiting the sovereignty of the Lord, who 'hath mercy on whom he will.'" I do not add to the word of God when I say, "Except one be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God;" and if any one comes "dangerously near limiting the sovereignty of the Lord," it was Jesus, and I am in no danger for preaching and believing it. I know the Bible says that he "hath mercy on whom he will;" but on whom does he will to have mercy? "Though he was a Son, yet learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and having been made perfect, he became unto all that obey him the author of eternal salvation." (Heb. 5: 8, 9.) Brother Cowden admits that Christ commands baptism, and still he is willing to work and worship with those who have never been baptized.

The brother says he can work and worship with the unbaptized, but that he does not take any one into the church; the Lord does that. Brother Cowden does not affirm that the Lord will take them into the church without baptism, but he seems to think he might do so; but on what ground he bases his hope he does not say. He nowhere quotes a passage to prove that God will take the unbaptized into the church, but he is willing to take them into his fellowship and work and worship with them without any scriptural warrant whatever. He cites no apostolic example or command for his action, but he is willing to do it. He had better quit trying to save the unbaptized and try harder to save himself. He refers to no apostolic church that worked and worshiped with the unbaptized, but still he is willing to do it. This gives them all the encouragement in their error that he could give them. There is one argument which the brother does not use which his brethren generally use when they want to do something for which they have no authority in the New Testament, and that is "Christian liberty." Why did the brother not make this point, as it fits here just as well as it does on the use of the instrument in worship? Brother Cowden should put it about this way: "I know I have no scriptural authority for working and worshiping with the unbaptized, but it is my Christian liberty." I am sorry the brother overlooked this argument (?).

TRUTH SEEKING.

(David Lipscomb, in "Salvation from Sin.")

Why do the Scriptures need an interpreter, or an interpretation in a creed? Did God make his revelation so obscure and mystical that some human being must interpret it so it could be understood by the people for whom he gave it? If so, why? Was not God as able to make a revelation that man can understand as man is to explain it for him? Which one of the creeds is more easily understood than the Bible? Is not the Bible as good a creed as man can make? Is not the claim that God's word needs a human interpretation a presumptuous claim that man is able to improve on God's work? Jesus spoke to and for the common people. If he spoke in language they could not understand, it was either because he did not wish them to understand it or it was because he was not able to make it so they could understand it. Which was it? Does the command, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ," need an interpretation? What terms can make it plainer? All efforts to explain have confused the simple words of the Bible. "Repent," "turn," "cease to do evil," "learn to do well "-do these terms need interpretation?

If a child is told to believe in its mother, its father, its teacher—to turn from its rebellious ways toward these—does the language need interpretation? If not as applied to these common relations and when used by men, why do they need it when applied to our relations to God when used by God?

Then, "be baptized." Our translators have beclouded the meaning of this term somewhat by failing to translate it. This was done not because there was any doubt about the meaning of the word Jesus used, for there is not a lexicographer or real scholar in the world that does not tell it means to dip, to plunge, to immerse. But this human right to interpret the word of God for man gave ground to change the ordinance, and then an unknown word must be introduced to prevent a plain contradiction between God's word and the human interpretation and practice.

But it is said that we are buried with him—we are planted in the likeness of his death. If a child is told to bury a thing, or it is said "the man was buried" or "the corn was planted," do these expressions need an interpretation when used by man? Why should they when they are used by the Holy Spirit? When a merchant tells his clerk, "Go to the bank for money;" or the mother tells the child, "Go to the spring for water;" or the farmer tells the workman, "If ye will come and work for me a day for a dollar"—do any of these expressions need an interpreter or an interpretation in the common affairs of life? Why should they need it when God uses the very simplest and most common words and forms of speech in their most common acceptation?

The interpretations that man makes of the Bible are more difficult to be understood than the Bible itself, and there is tenfold more controversy over them than there is over the teachings of the Bible. This leads me to say the divisions and controversies of the religious world are not over what is in the Bible. They are concerning practices not in the Bible, that have been introduced into the faith and practice of the church by men who presume to interpret the Bible.

As examples, the Bible says: "Be baptized," "ye were buried," "were planted," "were raised," "were baptized in the Jordan," "baptized with suffering." No one doubts that immersion is baptism. There is no controversy over that question. If nothing but immersion was practiced, there would be no controversy as to what baptism is. But the Bible never speaks of sprinkling as baptism. So when men introduce sprinkling or pouring as baptism, controversy arises; but it is not about what the Bible teaches or what is in the Bible, but about what is introduced by man.

Then the Bible says: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." There is no controversy about the baptism of believers. All accept that, But some say unbelievers—infants—should be baptized. The Bible says nothing about the baptism of unbelieving infants. Over this baptism controversy arises; but the controversy is not about what is required in the Bible; it is about what is added by man.

On the subject of "baptism unto the remission of sins" the Bible teaches that he who believes, repents, and is baptized receives the remission of sins. None doubt this. Some contend that man can be pardoned without baptism on faith alone. The Bible does not say so. It only mentions faith alone to condemn it. Hence the controversy is concerning what man teaches that is not in the Bible,

On the work of the Spirit the Bible plainly teaches that the Spirit of God convicts, converts, and saves through the word of God. (See Acts 2; 1 Cor. 4: 15; James 1: 18; 1 Pet. 1: 22, 23; and every example of conversion given in the New Testament.) There is not an example of one being converted, save through the word. Then there is no controversy over this question. But some contend that the Spirit works directly on the heart to convict and convert sinners, without the instrumentality of the word. Of this the Bible says not a word. So over this there is bitter controversy. It is not about what is taught in the Bible. It is caused by the introduction of things into the faith and practice of Christians not taught in the Scriptures, and to introduce these things is to add to the things written in the word of God.

These are the chief points on which there is controversy in the work of conversion. I think an unbiased person ought to see that the effort to interpret and improve the order of God has produced the controversies on these questions, and that the controversy is not concerning things commanded in the word of God. I might follow this up and show the controversies in the church in reference to work and worship are not about things required in the Bible, but concerning things that people add to that word; not concerning things God has ordained and required in his word, but concerning things men add to the requirements of God.

The Bible does not need an interpreter nor an interpretation. It only asks men to accept it, in its simple, plain terms—made so plain by God that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein. He is to add nothing thereto nor take aught from it. The requirement of God is to believe and do in religion only what God has required, excluding from the faith and practice of Christians everything not required by the word of God. If they will do this, all divisions and parties and strifes over untaught questions will disappear, and Christians will be of the same mind and strive together with God and one another for the upbuilding of the cause of God and the salvation of men. To introduce anything into the service of God not required in the Bible is to introduce division and strife.

ART OF LIVING TOGETHER.

The art of living together is one which lies at the root of domestic happiness. Here are a few suggestions which, having found useful, I pass on to my readers. In order to live happily with others, we must not insist that there is only one way of doing things, we must avoid unnecessary criticism of others' methods, and we must freely allow large liberty in all personal details of management. How foolish to have some stock subject of disputation, about which there is always friction and irritation, amounting, perhaps, in the course of years, to positive alienation! Equally unwise it is to forget that it is the little pebbles that hurt the feet, and that a sufficiently sharp tack, however small, may make a shoe quite unendurable. It is not well to expect too much of others, being mindful of the fact that we ourselves make large demands upon their patience or toleration. There is always the danger that familiarity will swallow up courtesy, that the sweet attentions so common before marriage will cease after marriage. We need constant reminders to keep watch for little opportunities to praise, to show sympathy, to rejoice with the glad and weep with the sorrowful.— Exchange.

COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

With more work on hand than I can do, Brother Boles has kindly consented to take charge of our Query Department. This is sincerely appreciated by me and will be by our readers. We know of no one more competent in both heart and ability to do this work. He has no hobbies to ride or theories of his own to urge. He is a student of the Bible from beginning to end, and most conscientiously desires to teach only the will of God on all subjects. He has the qualifications given by Paul, "full of goodness, filled with all knowledge"—knowledge of the truth, not of the wisdom of the world. With satisfaction and encouragement and in unfailing love of the truth we gratefully turn this work over to Brother Boles.

Please tell just how the loaf should be made for communion services on Lord's day, giving the scripture, chapter and verse.—X.

There is no scripture telling "how the loaf should be made for communion services on Lord's day." There is no scripture telling how "the fruit of the vine" is to be Jesus very probably used unleavened bread in made. giving the Lord's Supper to his disciples. The Lord's Supper was given by Christ at the feast of the passover, just after he and his disciples had eaten the passover, and it is very probable that he used the same kind of loaf, or part of loaf, that was used in eating the passover. The law required unleavened bread to be used at the passover. "And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and unleavened bread; with bitter herbs they shall eat it." (Ex. 12: 8.) "And thou shalt sacrifice the passover unto Jehovah thy God, of the flock and the herd, in the place which Jehovah shall choose, to cause his name to dwell there. Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it; seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread therewith, even the bread of affliction." (Deut. 16: 2, 3.) While it is very probable that unleavened bread was used in giving the Lord's Supper, no instruction in the New Testament is found for making the loaf. We may know that unleavened bread will be acceptable, as it was probably used in giving the Supper. Other kinds of bread might be used, but the unleavened bread is generally used.

Please explain, through the Gospel Advocate, 1 Cor. 15: 29, which says: "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?"—EMMA WATSON, Adams, Tenn.

"To determine the meaning of a sentence, we must look at its connection, purpose, and scope. This is one of a number of arguments to prove the resurrection of the dead. After giving other arguments, he asks: 'Else [if the dead rise not] what shall they do which are baptized for [in view of their resurrection from] the dead, if the dead rise not?' He was giving reasons why they should believe in the resurrection. We are baptized and enter into Christ because we must die, and in order that we may be fitted to be raised in him and live with him forever. Why are we baptized in order to death, if the dead rise not? If the dead rise not, what shall they do who are baptized in view of the resurrection from the dead? In view of their dying, they are baptized; so are baptized in order to their well-being after death. If they are not to be raised, why are they baptized to fit them for the resur-This is Paul's argument." (D. Lipscomb.) Brother Lipscomb has stated Paul's argument better than I could, hence I have quoted him. Paul did not have in mind the erroneous practice of a living person's being by ptized for a dead friend.

Was Christ nailed to the cross? If so, in what passage of scripture can I find it?—X.

Yes, Christ was nailed to the cross. "But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the prints of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and put my hand into his side, I will not believe. . . . Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and see my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and put it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing." (John 20: 24-27.) Paul, in speaking of the law of Moses, says that Christ took it out of the way, "having blotted out the bond written in ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us: and he hath taken it out of the way, nailing it to the cross." (Col. 2: 14.)

O D D

Please publish what you have to say in regard to the day set apart for worship and partaking of the Lord's Supper,—X.

Jesus arose from the dead on the first day of the week, as the Scriptures frequently state. "Now late on the Sabbath day, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulcher." (Matt. 28: 1.) "And when the Sabbath was passed, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, bought spices, that they might come and anoint him. And very early on the first day of the week, they come to the tomb when the sun was risen. . . Now when he was risen early on the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, from whom he had cast out seven demons." (Mark 16: 1, 2, 9.) "But on the first day of the week, at early dawn, they came unto the tomb, bringing the spices which they had prepared. And they found the stone rolled away from the tomb. And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus." (Luke 24: 1-3.) "Now on the first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, while it was yet dark, unto the tomb, and seeth the stone taken away from the tomb. . . . When therefore it was evening on that day, the first day of the week, and when the doors were shut where the disciples were, for fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you." (John 20: 1-19.) We find that the early Christians met on the first day of the week to break bread, or eat the Lord's Supper. "And upon the first day of the week, when we were gathered together to break bread, Paul discoursed with them, intending to depart on the morrow, and prolonged his speech until midnight." (Acts 20: 7.) "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I gave order to the churches of Galatia, so also do ye. Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store as he may prosper, that no collections be made when I come." (1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.) As the first day of the week was the time upon which the disciples met to eat the Lord's Supper, this day has been called "the Lord's day." "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and I heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet." (Rev. 1: 10.)

He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase; this is also vanity. When goods increase, they are increased that eat them: and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes?—Eccles. 5: 10, 11.

I am getting strong again now since the operation-strong enough so that I am going to train the mule for riding; only, I will not have a saddle until Lawyer can get one sent up from below, and I have not been able to send him any money for it so far. I have been looking for the money to get another mule, which was spoken about, but it has not come yet. I have been plowing with only four oxen since one got sick.

I have in, I suppose, near three and one-half acres of corn and about one and one-half acres of peanuts. want to get in quite a bit more corn and Kaffir corn. I tell you I have to cut down this expense all that is possible. We are run into the hole every year, and will continue to be until we can stop this continual drain. It is essential that we keep natives on the place to teach them, and that means expense unless we grow food. have another month and a half to get planting done, then after that we can do fall plowing for next year, for a few months-perhaps two or three months. Thus we can get in more next year than we have this year. Then another thing: We have to get something more to eat here on this ranch for ourselves; and the more we can grow, the more we have; and the more expenses we cut down, the more we can have. Now we need two or three cows, and when the Lawyers get here there will be double the need.

We are very much in need of money, too, but are not in the position Brother Lawyer is. We are living on as little again this year as possible, or we are trying to. Funds have been low for four or five months and our grocery list is giving out. Still, we are not starving, unless it is for certain foods. We try to give the babies what they need whether we get it or

We had nine more baptisms the other Sunday, making fifty for the year. Some of these were working boys, and so passed on where we do not know anything about them. wonder, sometimes, if these should be baptized, for they cannot read the New Testament. Yet I know they must be, if they properly understand what they are doing and wish to be baptized. I will indeed be glad when Lawyer gets here to share in some of this responsibility.

The house is still standing, as I am unwilling to go further in debt than what we are. We are living in the same old mud huts-I suppose will through this wet season. The ceilings, doors, and screens are to be put in the other house yet. The roof is on, the plastering done, the windows out here, and the floors down; but on account of mosquitoes we cannot live there without ceilings and screens.

As I said before, the house is costing us more than we figured. One reason, we are trying to put in ceilings which we did not figure on, and then we just "naturally" missed figures. I blame the manager of Phillips for part of this misfiguring, for things are costing more than he said. Then the rest of the "miss" I missed.

But enough for this time. I hope you are getting along well with all your work. Love to you all from us W. N. SHORT. all.

Sinde Mission, Livingstone, South Africa.

The foregoing is an extract from a private letter which I take the liberty of giving to the brotherhood, because it sets forth a situation which reveals the inner working of a missionary's life. These men will not tell their needs to the brotherhood in general usually, but those of us who keep close to them know what it means to be away from home, friends, and loved ones, in a strange and sometimes hostile country, and often without the proper means of support. This man should have money to finish the house so he can get out of the mud hut in which he is now living. He should have a span of mules for transportation and to work in raising foodstuff for himself and family. Brother Lawyer is now in Bulawaya and should go on up to Sinde at once, but there is no place where he can take his wife and babies until this house is finished.

The church at Harper, Kan., has indorsed these two men and is supporting Brother Short, but it cannot supply funds for buildings, etc., nor can it support Brother Lawyer; so this church has indorsed me and given me appointment to act as its "messenger" to solicit funds for this worthy and needy work.

Sullivan, Ill., March 31.—I have been trying to preach for a good mahy years, and have given fourteen years to school work. I am not teaching this year, but am giving my full time to church work. I am just now teaching singing in Pleasant Grove Church, near Lyons, Ind. Will fill regular appointment in Mitchell, Ind., next Lord's day. Most of my work is in Indiana. We expect to locate in Southern Indiana next summer. Brethren, if you want preaching or singing or lectures on evolution or Romanism, let me know.—H. D. Leach.

Ackerman, Miss., March 30.—Since my last report I have visited Hamilton, Dancy, South Tupelo, Shady Grove, and Red Hill. The work at most of these places seems to be doing very well. The brethren are working in harmony for the advancement of the cause. I will go next to Duffee for a week's meeting, beginning on the first Lord's day in April. I hope to have with us there Brother J. F. Buffington, of Crandall, the preacher who lately came from the Baptists and was baptized by the writer on March 1. I will go from there to Kitchener on the second Lord's day; thence to Clifton, near Hillsboro, for a few-days' meeting.—H. D. Jeffcoat. Lebanon, Tenn., March 29.—The Lebanon, Tenn., March 29.—The meeting at Muncie, Ind., grew more interesting at each succeeding service. I began there on March 8 and continued nearly three weeks. Nine were baptized and one was restored, making sixteen members there now. They have agreed to meet from house to house for the present, and I am to go back there as soon as I can. Brother A. M. Burton sent me a check covering my railroad fare and some over, and the church that I established at Birmingham sent me a liberal contribution to assist in supporting me in this destitute field. This is the second mission field that has helped to support me this year. To my mind, Brother A. M. Burton is the greatest missionary in the church to-day. If it were not for him, much of my work would have to go undone. I am now at Lebanon in a fine meeting, with interest increasing at each service.—M. Keeble.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 29.

—I received the first copy of the Gospel Advocate to-day that I have seen for some time. It sure seems good to read from all its good writers, many of whom I have heard in meetings. I formerly lived in Chattanooga, Tenn., and was a member of the Ridgedale congregation of that city. We have a small congregation here of about twenty-five members, mostly from Tennessee and Alabama, and we are doing fine. We have a lot that was given to us by a member who lives in Detroit, worth about two thousand dollars, and we expect to build on it soon. We have about six hundred dollars in the treasury and a thousand or more pledged, but we still need a few hundred more and a good preacher. I have not heard a gospel sermon since I left Chattanooga, more than a year ago, but we have regular services each Lord's day. Any of our preachers who may be passing through this part of the country are invited to come to see us. We are meeting at present in a private home, but all will be welcome and their presence will encourage us.—Harry C. Johnson.

APPEAL FOR AKRON, OHIO. BY A. A. BUNNER.

On Lord's day, March 8, I visited and spoke for the brethren at Akron. We had a large attendance of deeply interested hearers, and I want to say that the church there is wide-awake and alive to every good word and work. A visiting brother from Kentucky introduced himself to me and said: "You have a fine and live congregation here." It is alive, too, and stands for the principles of the gospel in all of its length, breadth, height, and depth. They are all willing workers, and are rapidly growing in knowledge and grace. They are just the kind of a body of disciples of Christ whose influence is and will continue to be felt in a great city like Akron. And what I say about these brethren, such good men as J. Madison Wright, E. E. Joynes, Brother Davis, and others, who have preached for them, will heartily indorse. They are still meeting in the Bowen School auditorium, but they have purchased suitable lots on which to build in the best part of the city, where they can reach and have an influence with the best citizens of the place, and they expect to begin building their house of worship the first of May, something they greatly need, and I know they will not leave a stone unturned to reach and convert the people.

Now, brethren, I come to you with an appeal on their behalf. They both need and deserve your liberal support in this, their time of great need. Brethren, in the name of our Lord and in behalf of the precious souls in this great city, I ask and beseech you to remember them in their labor of love, and that you both individually and collectively heed this appeal and send them the needed help. Send at once, for they need your hearty and liberal cooperation. Send all contributions to Brother Russell Davis, 282 West Miller Avenue, Akron, Ohio, and the receipt of every cent will be duly acknowledged and faithfully applied to the work of building. Brethren and sisters, in the name of the Lord, do heed this appeal at once.

Brother Bunner presents a worthy appeal. We think brethren should go to the assistance of those who are endeavoring to establish the cause of Christ in the great Northern and Eastern cities. J.A.

SONG SUNBEAMS

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, in a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

BIBLE CROSS WORD PUZZLE

ONLY nine squares, but the four nine-letter words which run in parallel columns down the entire length of this diagram make it quite a problem in working out a solution. In all, there are only fifteen black squares on a surface of eighty-one—quite a proposition! Also, to add a little more difficulty, chapter references are given, but no verses.

@ 1925 THE J.C.W. CO. How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

DEBT A BAD THING.

BY E. G. BUTLER.

It is a bad thing for a person to be in debt much or little, and not able to pay the debt. To the honest man it is indeed a great worry not to be able to meet his obligations according to promise and expectations.

It has been said that "debt is a good guardian," and in some cases this seems to be true; but even this does not make it a good thing. The case wherein it might be said that "debt is a good guardian" is where one has gone in debt for real estate, which real estate is all the time worth the money owing on it and even more, and the one owing the debt is very anxious to pay up and clear his land of any incumbrance; and, therefore, he works harder and oftentimes does without things he and his family actually need in order to get able to pay this debt against his land. Why? Because some one is pushing him? No, not that; for in many cases the party to whom the purchase money is going would be glad if the other fellow would fail, so that he (the seller) could get the land back after it is possibly half paid for. No, it is not this pressure that makes the purchaser work hard and live hard in order to get his land paid for, but it is because he realizes that it is a bad thing to be in debt.

It is bad from every standpoint to be in debt. Many have been the quarrels and oftentimes more serious trouble because of a debt. Many times neighbors fall out with each other and are never friends any more because of a misunderstanding about what one is owing the other, Many fights and many murders have occurred on account of a debt.

Another way in which debt causes serious trouble is when misfortune comes, such as serious sickness or crop failures. Let some member of the family get sick and have to be carried away from the country home to the city hospital for an operation, the cost for all of which runs up to several hundred dollars, or let a drought come and cut the crop short one-half or two-thirds, then the man in debt is afraid he will lose his land or other property on which he has given a mortgage to secure the payment of the debt. Or if he has given personal security for a friend, he is afraid he will have the debt to pay. But if there are no debts, sickness, or short crops, other adverse winds may blow, but all will get by.

Yes, indeed, debt is a very unpleasant, undesirable thing, especially to the honest man. No man who has proper respect for his obligations likes to be involved in debt. The Bible tells us that "the borrower is a servant to the lender" (Prov. WE BUY AND SELL ALL KINDS OF Cures Malaria, Chills and Fever, Dengue or Bilious Fever.

22: 7), and there is nothing more true. No man is a free man, in every sense of the word, while involved in debt, and no man knows this more than the honest man who is laboring under a burden of debt. But there is no man but that likes to be free and feel free and ready to look the world in the face without a blush.

Again, the Bible tells us to "owe no man anything." (Rom. 13: 3.) Hence, the very God of heaven warns us to steer clear of debt.

And speaking of the probability of the man who signs his neighbor's note as surety having the note to pay brings to mind another bad feature of debt. It is a bad and dangerous thing to commence signing other men's notes as surety. feelings have come and friendships have been severed many times from this one cause. For instance, A goes to B to borrow five hundred dollars. B says: "I can let you have it, provided you can pay it back promptly next fall. I am at building in the fall, and I'll need every dollar I can rake up." A says: "If I have no bad luck, I can replace this money as soon as I can make and gather this crop." B says: "What about security to the note?" A says: "I think I can get C to sign the note with me." B says: "If you can, that will be all right. C is perfectly good. I would lend him ten thousand dollars on his paper alone, if I had it and he wanted it." A sees C about signing the note with him. C hesitates. A says: "If I have no bad luck, I can pay the money back easy enough next fall." C agrees to sign, and the note is drawn up. A and C sign the note, the money changes hands, and the transaction is closed. A spends the money largely in an effort to make a big crop, but on account of dry weather-a cause over which he has absolutely no control-he makes almost a complete failure. Fall comes on, pay day arrives, and A can't do a thing. B has te have his money to finish his house. C has it to pay, and he gets mad and says some hard things about both A and B. Friendship all gone between neighbors on account of a debt that A could not pay, but could have got by without making. Again, the Bible is with us on this proposition, for Solomon gives us plain instructions along this line. (See Prov. 6: 1; 11: 15; 17: 18.)

Debt a bad thing? Sure it is. No man, old or young, white or black, honest or dishonest, likes to be in debt. And this on its face proves conclusively that debt is a bad thing. "O," says some one, "debt is not a good thing; neither is it such a bad thing as you would have us believe."

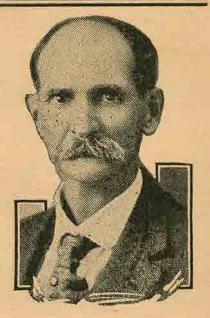

Well, if debt is not a good thing, then evidently it is a bad thing-so bad that it has caused much trouble in many different ways. Among the worst, it has caused many a man to snuff out his own life.

There are many men in this country who spend a majority of their days under a burden of debt. They work hard and live hard, but manage bad. They go through life from early manhood paying some one ten per cent interest on a few hundred or a few thousand dollars, which takes all they can spare above a scant living for themselves and their families, with never a day but what each would pay every dollar he owes if he could; but he can't, and so he goes along and lives and dies under a burden of debt.

Concluding, to the youth of all time I would say with emphasis: Young men, beware of debt!

J. F. WOODY

Gastonia, N.C.—"I think Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the finest blood medicine that can be found anywhere and no word of mine can sufficiently praise it. My brother-in-law recommended it to me when I was in very poor health. My blood was poisoned with malaria, had a bad cough and my bronchial, tubes were choked up so that I could scarcely breathe and could not raise. My bowels were constipated so that I never felt well, just dragged myself about, but the 'Golden Medical Dscovery' drove out of my system all the impurities, stimulated, cleansed and enriched the blood, so that I felt life was worth living. I can I felt life was worth living. I can recommend it to anyone who feels rundown and miserable,"—J. F. Woody, 205 S. King St.

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

- "I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)
- "We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)
- "I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pro-nounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)
- "We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criti-cism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)
- "I am giad to commend the Bible Lesson Heips issued by the Gospel Advocate Company. They cannot fail of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)

 "The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuff.)
- "Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)
- "I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)
- "The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartily recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright,)
- "A complete assortment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am giad to say I consider it excellent, and giadly commend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)
- "As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)
- "It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)
- "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, scriptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day, Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Puilias.)
- "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Blam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Guarterlies for years.
- pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes. I compare them weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.)

THE AGED ONES.

BY L. E. JOHNSTON.

There seems to be, among some at least, a belief that things which are old are not in fashion. It almost seems sometimes as if, with a few, this idea applies to people who have lived a considerable time; which, however, is a very great mistake on the part of those entertaining the belief.

I have read in an old book I have that "the hoary head is a crown of glory; it shall be found in the way of righteousness." And, by the way, this book o' which I speak is the oldest one of which I (or others) have any knowledge; yet it leads the world of books to-day in the list of "best sellers."

Youth is very beautiful and very wonderful for its ideals and its aspirations, its hopes and its possibilities. Yes, and for its work; for youth is a time for work as well as a time for learning and hoping.

The French have a proverb: "If youth only knew; if age only could," This has much truth, approximate truth. For youth is learning and age can do very much. Observe how, in the world to-day, the words of weight are mostly spoken by those who have had time to think. Note, too, the pictures of those who meet to decide great questions. The whiteness of the heads is impressive.

Age, good and wise old age, has gathered mental and spiritual strength. The physical force may grow less, but this means only that the old house must by and by be built over. The one who dwells within will have the strength he has gained, the life and character built up with so much effort and pain. He will have these when the rebuilt and glorified house is his. (Rev. 22: 11.)

Somehow, to many, the term "old" is distasteful. It was not always so. One said, "Once I was young, and now I am old," in what seemed almost an exultant strain, as though the years had been a God-given reward. For sometimes they had been so promised.

There is something very solemn and very beautiful in the thought of those who are approaching the time of their promotion. If you knew a near friend of yours were to be presented to a grand earthly sovereign, with what interest you would regard him! How much more wonderful is it when one is to enter the presence of the King of kings, to share forever the glory and joy in the mansions prenared!

Sometimes the one who has made the long and difficult journey becomes overborne with the weariness of it. Or perhaps he is too lacking in selfesteem to strongly hope for all God has waiting for him. Some have felt so. (Matt. 25: 37-39.)

But the promises are sure. And the one who is to be the judge is the one who, after living and suffering in this world, went to a cruel death that he might make a way through which these may enter where he is. (John 14: 1-3.)

Now You Can End Superfluous Hair Like I Did Mine

AT ONCE AND FOR ALL

horror and humiliation of a disfiguring hairy growth on the face, neck, arms, and legs can possibly know what joy and happiness came over me when first I realized that at last all trace of superfluous hair had gone and my skin was clear, soft, and smooth, like that of a babe. And this after years of torture and disappointment with almost every depilatory, liquid, wax, paste, powder, and other methods, including razors, that I had ever heard of. Before I hit upon the simple, easy, harmless new way which has given me such amazing and lasting relief from my affliction, the ugly hair came back thicker and heavier than before. When I confided to some of my friends how I had at last solved the age old problem of getting rid of superfluous hair—at once and for all—they felt it would be selfish not to share my secret with others. OUR REDEEMER.

Dear Lord, who on the lonely mount Didst foil the subtle tempter's power, Pity, and hear our troubled plaint For rescue in temptation's hour.

Our every frailty thou dost know,
The heart of flesh to sin inclined;
Fix thou our faith, our hope in thee,
Our refuge sure, there peace to find.

Alone thy conquest makes secure; Through thee we may victorious prove.

Help us to strive and to endure, Lord, keep us steadfast in thy love. —Mary Welden.

GLORIFY GOD IN YOUR BODY.

So inconsistent are mankind, they illuse their poor bodies most cruelly, most wickedly; they treat them as a boy does a plaything; sacrifice their well-being to every idle whim of the mind and every low caprice of the appetite. If they are remonstrated with, they will pay no heed; they say, "O, I am very well," or, "I am never accustomed to think of my health," or, "I don't believe this will hurt me." They will go yet further; they will shut their eyes to the plainest indications of suffering health; they will not notice little ailments; they will think they are nothing and persist in all their evil practices, and all their friends encourage them; until at last the mischief gets a little worse, they become what they call ill, and all is terror and distress. A fuss is made, as unreasonable as the former neglect. Everything is sacrificed to this oncedespised health; and yet when it is regained, it is only to be again trifled with in like manner. . . I do not advocate people trying to keep well out of a cowardly fear of being ill or suffering pain or losing life, but as a religious duty, in order that they may render to God the full service he demands of them .- James Hinton.

A TRUE LADY.

I was once walking behind a very handsomely dressed young girl, and thinking as I looked at her beautiful clothes, "I wonder if she takes half as much pains with her heart as she does with her body?"

A poor old man was walking up the walk with a loaded wheelbarrow, and just before he reached us he made two attempts to go into the yard of the house, but the gate was heavy and would swing back before he could get in.

"Wait," she said, "I'll hold the gate." And she held the gate until he had passed in, and received his thanks with a pleasant smile as she passed.

"She deserves to have beautiful clothes," I thought, "for a beautiful spirit dwells in her breast."-Exchange.

BY JAMES A. ALLEN

LAST WEEK, in an article that was also published in the Nashville Banner under the heading, "Sprinkling Not Baptism," we gave some attention to what men and women must do to be saved. We pointed out the crying sin of the preachers and of great denominations in refusing to teach sinners the things that were taught by the apostles.

The fact that the religious world itself rejects parts of the Bible that do not suit it is a crying shame that ought to be shouted from the housetops. It is nauseating and disgusting to hear preachers who will not read from their pulpits certain passages of scripture that tell sinners what to do to be saved rave and vociferate about evolution and the virgin birth. The sin they commit in refusing to tell sinners what to do to be saved is worse and more heinous than the sin of the outspoken infidels in denying the divine origin of the Bible. If it were not for them, there would be no infidels. It is not as horrible for men who are outspoken infidels to repudiate the passages that tell of the virgin birth as it is for men who claim to be preachers of the gospel, and who make their living on such a claim, to repudiate the passages that tell sinners what to do to be saved.

WE ARE TRYING to arouse Christian people to a realization of the situation. We are trying to arouse the churches to go before the general public with the gospel as it was preached by inspired men in New Testament times.

Ample means are at our disposal. We should take advantage of all the means available. Last week, with the help of several of the Nashville congregations, we published an article in the Nashville Banner very solemnly warning the citizens of Nashville that "sprinkling is not baptism." With the help of the brethren, we hope to repeat the performance. The great denominations may choose to fight, or they may treat us with silent contempt. In either case we hope to reach the people. Tracts and pamphlets should be carried into every house in every neighborhood of the city.

Every member of every congregation should read the Gospel Advocate and then pass it on to his or her neighbor. The editors of the Advocate are men of experience in preaching and teaching the word of God; they have no fads or fancies of their own, but are determined to be true to the Book, to know nothing "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." Two dollars a year for such a large, weekly journal as the Gospel Advocate is an insignificant thing from a financial standpoint. Every Christian in the country ought to subscribe for the Advocate, not only for the good it will do him and his family, but also for the assistance he may thus render us in our struggle to publish everywhere the things that were taught by inspired men.

GREAT OPPORTUNITIES are before us on every hand. We very earnestly wish to take advantage of them. The eye of Alexander, Cæsar, or Napoleon, fired by all their ambition, never looked over such a field of operation as that which confronts the humblest Christian. Let us arouse ourselves for the conflict; let us gird on the armor of light and press forward in the good fight of faith.

Christian people are aware of the fact that the general public, as a whole, is totally uninformed as to what sinners must do to be saved, and that men who pose as preachers of the gospel are persistently refusing to preach it. What are we going to do about it? Sit supinely by, while multitudes go down to death and ruin, temporal and eternal? Others may choose a softer course, but, as for the Gospel Advocate, we propose to serve the Lord. We propose to cry aloud and to warn the people, as they value their lives, to flee the wrath to come, and to make their calling and election sure by doing the things that are commanded of the Lord.

The early disciples "went about preaching the word." We wish to see the disciples to-day imitate their example. By so doing they can readily publish the gospel throughout the world and establish congregations of Christians everywhere.

We rejoice in the fact that all the religious world concedes that the doctrine we preach is scriptural. Ours is the only religious position before the public that all denominations admit to be right. From the Pope of Rome down, all admit that if a man believes the gospel, repents of his sins, and is baptized, upon a confession of faith in Christ, he is saved and safe; and all of them agree that, if he remains faithful to this profession, he will be granted "an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

All agree to this. But there is doubt and controversy on everything else. If a man accepts sprinkling for baptism, many will indorse and commend him; but others, just as numerous and respectable, will call his action in question. But if, upon becoming a penitent believer, he is immersed, even those who imagine sprinkling would do just as well acknowledge that he is safe and that the position he thus occupies is invulnerable.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

CHRISTIAN ACTIVITY.

BY S. F. MORROW.

On February 12 I received a letter from Brother J. G. Malphurs, of Blackwater, Mo., concerning some members at Erin, Tenn. In his letter he stated that we are having some trouble with the transgressive brethren over church property. I have been thinking for some years I would give to the brethren what Brother Lipscomb said to me about a lawsuit he had helped to fight over a house in West Tennessee. He said they lost the suit in the lower court, but that he felt sure if they had carried the suit to the Supreme Court they would have won it. We can all understand this. Most of the denominations use instrumental music in the worship and know so little about the true worship of God that they are naturally biased in their judgment. Yes, carry it to the Supreme We have men there who have judgment, and usually decide cases according to facts and justice. If you are forced into a suit, do not be careless, but give all the facts, the truth, and nothing but the truth, and all the truth. If we do this, I believe Brother Lipscomb's judgment will be vindicated.

Brother Lipscomb further said that we lost property that should never have been lost. If some of our brethren cared as much for a house of worship as they do for their own property, we would lose but few. Too many of our brethren who claim to be loyal are wasting their time and talent robbing God, while the transgressive element is robbing the church of the houses that were built by good old brethren and sisters at a great sacrifice, so that they could worship God the way he taught them to in his holy word. When the brethren lost their house at Tullahoma, Tenn., I received a letter from them, saying: "Come, and bring a tent and a preacher." We secured Brother L. S. White. He made a great fight for the truth and closed with fifty-four members who said they wanted to worship God "as it is written." I thank God. From what I hear, they are growing and doing well. How did they lose their house? They agreed for all to use the house. The transgressive brethren were to use it in the morning and we in the evening. This went on for a few Lord's days. The lock was changed, and we were locked out of our own house. I cannot understand how people claiming to be Christians could do this. A good old Sister Brantley said to me during the meeting that she had lost in the last two years her husband and son, but that that sorrow did not hurt her so much as being locked out of the house of God. My prayer to God is that he will have mercy on these brethren and that they may all return to the true worship of God. What did Jesus do in the temple at Jerusalem? He drove them out, and said to them: " My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves." (Matt. 21: 13.)

Let me say that I wish it understood that I do not believe that the mass of the brethren and sisters are to be blamed as the leaders. So let us treat them kindly and teach them "the way of the Lord more perfectly." I thank God that many of them are returning to the true worship. "The wicked flee when no man pursueth: but the righteous are bold as a lion." (Prov. 28: 1.)

the righteous are bold as a lion." (Prov. 28: 1.)

We are receiving many calls for gospel tents and preachers in destitute fields. What shall we do with them, brethren? Will we continue preaching to large, well-established congregations that should be teaching others? What did Jesus say to do with the man who buried his talent? He said to cast him "out into outer darkness," where there would be "weeping and gnashing of teeth." Last year I was in one of the towns near Nashville, Tenn. One of the leading members said: "We will have to turn off our preacher or build a larger house." I said to him: "What about the small congregations around you?" He said they were dying; that the members who had cars were coming to hear their preacher and neglecting their home congregations. Is that preacher pleasing God or the devil? Is he declaring "the whole counsel of God?" If he were, this would never be. Jesus said: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! Ye say, and do not." It seems that some of us so-called "loyal" teachers won't say, much less do. Jesus said: "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." I saw a statement in the Gospel Advocate a few weeks ago that some of our brethren in Alabama were planning to build a thirty-five-thousand-dollar house. Yes, brethren, build a parsonage, as the Methodists are doing, and be like the nations around you. No doubt many thousands in your State never heard the simple story of the cross. May the Lord help us all to see ourselves as we are, and turn to our God while it is day; for the night will soon come, when man's work is done.

We had a happy day at Gary, in Tampa, last Lord's day. Four precious souls made the good confession and were baptized immediately. Three of them were Catholics. The mother said at the service on Lord's-day night that she felt like a new woman since she had put her Lord on in baptism. We are teaching them, as Paul did, from house to house. Sister Dasara, Sister Sanders, and other good sisters are doing a great work teaching the children of this neighborhood. We began a work this morning on our new house of worship. Pray for us, that we may "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" in all we do, and that all may be done for the honor and glory of God and the salvation of precious souls.

"SET THINE HOUSE IN ORDER." BY S. H. HALL.

In Isa. 38: 1 we have the following words: "In those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz came unto him, and said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Set thine house in order: for thou shalt die, and not live."

These solemn words every accountable soul that now lives must some day fully realize. I am not satisfied with my ability to make people think! Whenever you can get a soul to stop and sure-enough think and reason about life and death, staying here and going, time and eternity, that soul will surrender to God and give his best in the service of our Lord by doing what is best for fallen man the little time he stays here. But getting man to come to himself and to really act sanely is the great problem before those who are striving to save souls and extend the cause of Christ.

This inability of mine once became distressingly discouraging to me and I came very nearly giving it up and quitting; but when I looked into the history of our Lord's personal work on earth, I found that he, in many instances, failed. "Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not." (Matt. 11: 20.) Even where he did his very best—and this he was able to always do—and the most of his mighty works, he left souls unsaved.

Then I recall those sad and, to a large degree, melancholy words in Matt. 23: 37: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" Then, when I follow the history of the inspired apostles, I find their experience to be the same as that of our Lord. In many instances did they fail to get man's attention. This brings to my mind a statement of Jehovah concerning Israel, found in Deut. 32: 28, 29: "For they are a nation void of counsel, neither is there any understanding in them. O that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!" Is it not true that the very burden of the living word as we have it in our Bible is to get us to consider our eternal destiny and set our house in order to launch out into the ocean of the great

But I call your attention to the reason for the com-mand, "Set thine house in order." The reason is given. Have ye noted it? It is: "For thou shalt die." Certainly death, then, is an incentive for right living. It is a reason for our getting right with God and staying right with him. It is a reason for daily observing the "Golden Rule:" "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." And just here a statement from the writer of the Hebrew letter comes to my mind: "And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment: so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." (Heb. 9: 27, 28.) There are three thoughts that are inseparably tied together in the Bible-viz., death, the second coming of our Lord, and the judgment. You will find all three of these thoughts in the scripture just quoted. The judgment and the second advent are associated in that wonderful charge to Timothy in 2 Tim. 4: 1, 2.

But I have already stated that the serious and solemn words, "Set thine house in order: for thou shalt die," are words that the last one of us must some day realize. They are words that we right now should fully appreciate. God has said these very words to us as much as he ever did to Hezekiah. Of course, these words had reference to his immediate death in this case; but has not Jehovah thundered it into our ears to set our houses in order, because we, too, must die?" We do not know the time of death, whether it will be to-day, to-morrow, or later; nor do we know whether our Lord will come even before death takes place with us, or whether we will be among the living when he comes, to be changed in a moment, in the "twinkling of an eye," and be caught up with the resurrected saints to meet him in the air. But we know that our stay here is destined to change, and that this change may come at any moment; hence, we are admonished to be always ready, for we know not the day nor the hour.

Are not these words of Paul wonderful? "For I am now ready to be offered." Do you remember the words of our Lord in Luke 12: 35-37? "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." But what about those whom he finds not watching? Does not this scripture declare that they cannot be called "blessed?" In the parable of the five wise and the five foolish virgins, you remember, it says that while the foolish "went to buy [oil] the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage." Yes, those that are ready would go in to-day if he were to come. And whether we live to see his coming in our flesh is not so important; we will either live to see death or his second advent. If death to-day should come to us and we were ready, it would be better for us; for to depart and be with Christ is "very far better" than staying here, so declares the good Book. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." But what about the death of those not his saints?

But we come now to ask a very vital question: What is it to have your house in order?

First, we must have obeyed the gospel of Christ. Our Lord is to take vengeance on those who obey not the gospel. (2 Thess. 1: 7-9.) The blessed dead are those who die in the Lord. (See Rev. 14: 13.) All of God's promises are in Christ yea and amen. (2 Cor. 1: 20.) We are complete in Christ. (Col. 2: 10.) We are free from condemnation in Christ. (Rom. 8: 1.) Eternal life is in Christ. But the Bible teaches that only those who obey the gospel are in Christ. Christ said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Paul says: "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 26, 27.)

Yes, you must be in Christ, else it is not possible to set your house in order. The command presupposes that you are a child of God. It was given to a child of God; hence, there is such a thing as a child of God's setting his house in order for death. But to those of you who are out of Christ, let me say, if you would be saved, if you would become the beneficiaries of our Lord's death, you must turn your backs on Satan and sin, be buried with Christ in baptism, and raised into the new life in Christ.

But what must a Christian do to set his house in order? I think that many of them are out of order. There are two things that I wish to suggest—viz., your heart must be right, first, toward God; second, toward man.

To have your heart right toward God, there must not be one thing that you are consciously doing that he does not want you to do, or that you are leaving undone that he wants you to attend to. He has commanded you to "give attendance to reading." (1 Tim. 4: 13.) Have you been doing this? He has commanded you over and over again to pray. Have you been doing this? He has commanded you to visit the fatherless and the widow in their afflictions, and to keep yourself unspotted from the world. Have you been doing this? He has commanded you to forsake not the assembling of yourselves together for work and worship. Have you been doing this? He has commanded you to be fruitful in every good work. What have you been doing-just fruitful in one or two good works, and even in these just because it suited your convenience? Then, what about your giving? How do you stand here? The Bible declares that those who give not as they are commanded rob God. (See Mal. 3: 8-10.) And do you know that I seriously fear that entirely too many would not be able to set their houses in order if called upon to die to-day. If a man has robbed God, what does it take to make it good? I know of no way except to give God what belongs to him. This statement has reference to tithes. Suppose a man had been giving only one-half of a tenth for eight or ten years instead of a tenth. Would he not have to give the other half that he had been holding back for these ten years? Or would he just have to say: "Lord, forgive me, and from now on I will give a tenth?" What about his unpaid dues? What does repentance mean, anyway, if it does not mean to restore what is due? If I had stolen one hundred dollars from you, what would repentance mean other than restoring to you that which I had wrongfully taken from

We are commanded to lay by in store on the first day of the week as we have been prospered. There are members who do not do this and have not been for years; and during all these years they have been robbing God. How will you go about setting your house in order? Just say, "Lord, forgive me?" No. You must make good that which you have withheld from the Lord. Yes, to set your house in order is a timely thing to do; and-hear me-the time is coming when you will want to do so and cannot.

But your heart must be right toward your fellow man. You cannot treat man just any way and be ready to go. Here I wish to give the twelve "I wills" extracted from the Golden Rule (Matt. 7: 12) by Eugene C. Sanderson:

1. I will not speak evil of any one.

I will not criticize any person against whom I am prejudiced.

3. I will restrain my tongue when I am angry.
4. I will withhold my words when I have a doubt as to my motive in speaking.

5. I will not be a "talebearer." I will not tell or repeat anything that will make unkind feelings between people or that will create prejudice.

6. I will try not to hear unkind or wrong things, and will do all in my power to discourage those who indulge in unkind words.

7. I will cultivate a habit of placing a charitable construction upon the words and conduct of my fellows.

8. I will do all in my power to help the weak, the erring, and the distressed.

and the distressed.

9. I will cultivate kindness of thought and expression in all my relations in life.

10. I will be clean in my words.

11. Believing that every one has some good quality or qualities, I will look for the good and emulate it; and when I find evil, I will pray that its possessor may be delivered from its power.

12. In all things I will aspire to "walk in the Spirit," that I may not "fulfill the lusts of the flesh."

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 14.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

Chapter III.

PROOFS THAT THE CORINTHIANS WERE YET CARNAL. (Verses 1-4.)

Verse 1. And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual. The Corinthians were undeveloped spiritually, and therefore Paul could not, during his first visit among them, speak to them the deep things of God. They were not qualified to receive them, They believed the gospel to be a revelation from God, but were so much under the influence of their former heathen training, principles, and prejudices that they were not, during Paul's first stay among them, capable of comprehending spiritual things properly; neither had they conjured their evil passions at the writing of this Epistle, as is evident from the strife and divisions among them. Hence, he could not then, nor now, speak to them as experienced or developed Christians. As unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. That is, undeveloped and weak like the newly converted. They were in a great measure carnal and still undeveloped and weak in grace, though eminent in spiritual gifts. (See chapter 1: 5.) The works of the flesh so prevailed among them that at their best they were but babes in Christ. Observe that even among the true and real members of the church some are spiritual and some are carnal-some are full grown and some are babes.

2. I have fed you with milk. That is, the first and plainest truths of the gospel—the simple rudimentary principles of the gospel. Not with meat. That is, the stronger and deeper doctrine of Christ. All teachers, like Paul, should adapt their teaching, not according to age, but according to the advancement of the taught. The teaching should be classified, not according to age, but according to the advancement and ability of the learner. Observe that it is great prudence and wisdom in preachers of the gospel of Christ to instruct people in the first principles of religion, in order to their regularly advancing higher in Christianity. Teachers in the church are spiritual nurses. They first must feed with milk, then with meat; otherwise they will not nourish, but destroy, But the great trouble here is, so many preachers themselves remain babes, weak and undeveloped, that they are not able to feed their hearers on the strong meat, and, as a result, both the teacher and the taught sit around on faith, repentance, and baptism. They are not able to feed nor to be fed on the strong meat.

3. Ye are yet carnal. That is, worldly-minded. So much so that ye are not yet developed sufficiently to receive the higher and the deeper doctrine of Christ-the meat of the gospel. The envy, strife, and divisions existing among them is Paul's proof that they are yet carnal and walk as men-that is, walking after the manner of men in the world, and not after Christ, as Christians should walk. They still retained and exhibited the jealous and disorderly spirit characteristic of men in the world. They lived according to the corrupt nature of man. They had the seed and root of grace abiding, and yet the relics of corruption remaining in them. They had too much of this to show a healthy growth. Envy, as a root, bears strife, and strife breeds divisions and factions. It is the cause and companion of strife. Strife and contention, differences and divisions, are often found in the churches of Christ and among particular Christians; but where these prevail in and among any, it is evidence that they are carnal, and walk as men.

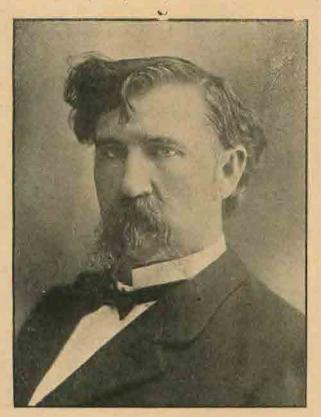

4. One saith, I am of Paul, etc. The division in the church at Corinth was over the spiritual teachers, and Paul, in naming himself, shows that he would condemn any sin of division, even though the division were in favor of himself or the dearest friend. Here the apostle set a good example for teachers in all ages of the church. The teacher should criticize the friend if he is in error before criticizing the enemy, as did Paul. The fact that they were divided in following these teachers and leaders, instead of following Christ, is further proof to the mind of the apostle that they were yet carnal. One saith, in opposition to another, "I am the disciple of Paul;" and another, "I follow Apollos;" and thus, probably, they called themselves after the names of their admired preachers, factiously crying up one minister above another. It is the duty of people to have a high esteem of faithful ministers of Christ, yet they must not let their respect degenerate into a sinful admiration of their persons, as did the Corinthians, for their praising one minister above another is both sinful and dangerous. When the gifts and abilities of one preacher are cried up, to the contempt of others, it occasions enmity and dissension among preachers themselves, as well as among the people. However, this was not true among the apostles; but perhaps this is accounted for because they were not as great fools over praise and honor as are some preachers to-day. Many a promising young preacher has been converted into a bigot and a fool and rendered worthless in the Master's vineyard by praise and compliments of the brethren. Brethren should be careful as to how they compliment and praise the young preacher, lest they be the means of destroying his usefulness. Many of the older preachers cannot stand too much praise. Praise God and not the preachers is the divine rule.

THE PASSING OF DR. C. N. NEWMAN. BY W. B. M'QUIDDY.

On Tuesday, March 10, 1925, Dr. Charles N. Newman, of Tullahoma, Tenn., passed from earthly scenes into the world eternal. His death was sudden and unexpected. He had been ill only a few hours of angina pectoris.

Dr. Newman was born on October 16, 1856, and was at the time of his death a few months more than sixty-eight years of age. His boyhood days were spent and around Jefferson City, Tenn., to which place his body was borne for interment. He practiced his profession for several years in Normandy, Chattanooga, and Loudon, Tenn., and from the last-named place removed to Tullahoma in the year, 1904, and continued in his chosen profession until his death. "He was one of the best-known physicians in this part of the State and also well known in East Tennessee. His family was one of the pioneer families of that section. He was not only well posted on matters concerning his profession, but was one of the best-informed men in this county on history and an inveterate reader of standard literature."

In November, 1893, during a meeting conducted by DR. CHARLES N. NEWMAN.

Brother F. B. Srygley at Normandy, he confessed his faith in the Lord Jesus and was baptized by Brother Srygley and the writer in the clear waters of Duck River. For several years after this event I was associated with him in church work and observed the interest he took in spiritual matters and his "growth in grace and the knowledge of the truth." He was a diligent student of the word of God and had a very clear conception of its divine truths. Brother J. D. Floyd, of blessed memory, once spoke to me concerning the Doctor's extensive knowledge of the holy Scriptures. He possessed a comparative copy of the New Testament containing the King James Version and the Revised Version in parallel colmns, and its well-worn pages gave evidence that it had been faithfully read and studied. He requested his wife to place this loved book in the casket with his body, and this was done. funeral services were held at his residence, on March 11, by Brother C. E. Jackson and the writer.

Surviving Dr. Newman are his wife, Mrs. Florence Peck Newman, and two sons by a former marriage, Charles and Harry Newman, of California.

We cherish the fond hope of meeting again our friend and brother "in the land that is fairer than day."

"A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we leved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
God in his wisdom has recalled
The boon his leve had given;
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in heaven."

THE POWER OF THE CROSS.

We never get past the cross. It grows more precious every day and every step of the Christian's way. It is heaven's trade-mark on everything that expects to pass the gates of heaven. The principle of death and resurrection is the profoundest principle connected with our Christian life. Abraham's Isaac had to be laid down in death and taken back in resurrection as God's Isaac before the promise could have right of way. Not only must our evil things be given up to be crucified, but our best things must go through the cross and come forth with the stamp of the resurrection. Our natural graces and virtues must be exchanged for supernatural gifts and enduements. Our very prayers must first often seem to fail, then come back to us as from the grave. Our service must be buried seed and bear upon it the stamp of the cross. Yes, and even this earth itself must pass through its great and final catastrophe and come forth as the new heaven and the new earth with the sign manual of the cross as the mark of its divinity and immortality.-Selected.

I will govern my life and my thoughts as if the whole world were to see the one and to read the other; for what does it signify to make anything a secret to my neighbor, when to God (who is the searcher of our hearts) all our privacies are open?—Seneca.

NELSON COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSY.

(A. Campbell, in Millennial Harbinger, January 4, 1830.)

Many good men whose whole lives have been one continued struggle with themselves—one continued warfare against error and iniquity—have reprobated religious controversy as a great and manifold evil to the combatants and to society. Although engaged in a real controversy, they knew it not, but supposed that they only were controversialists who were in debates and discussions often. Had they reflected but a moment, they would have discovered that no man can be a good man who does not oppose error and immorality in himself, his family, his neighborhood, and in society as far as he can reach, and that he cannot oppose it successfully only by argument, or, as some would say, by word and deed, by precept, and by example.

There can be no improvement without controversy. Improvement requires and presupposes change; change is innovation, and innovation always has elicited opposition, and that is what constitutes the essentials of controversy. Every man who reforms his own life has a controversy with himself, and, therefore, no man who has not always been perfect and always been in company with perfect society can be a good man without controversy. This being conceded (and who can refuse to concede it?), it follows that whensoever society, religious or political, falls into error, or, rather, so long as it is imperfect, it is the duty of all who have any talent or ability to oppose error, moral or political, who have intelligence to distinguish, and utterance to express, truth and goodness, to lift up a standard against it, and to panoply themselves for the combat.

But yet, plain and obvious as the preceding remarks may be, many will contend that religious controversy, oral or written, is incompatible with the pacific and contemplative character of the genuine Christian and promotive of strifes, tumults, and factions in society, destructive of true piety toward God and of benevolence toward man. This is a prejudice arising from the abuses of controversy. Admit for a moment that it were so, and what would be the consequence? It would unsaint and unchristianize every distinguished patriarch, Jew, and Christian enrolled in the sacred annals of the world, for who of the Bible's great and good men was not engaged in religious controversy? To go no farther back than the Jewish lawgiver, I ask, what was his character? I need not specify. Whenever it was necessary, all-yes, all the renowned men of antiquity were religious controversialists. Moses long contended with the Egyptian Magi. He overcame Jannes and Jambres, too. Elijah encountered the prophets of Baal. Job long debated with the princes of Edom. The Jewish prophets and the idolatrous kings of Israel waged a long and arduous controversy. John the Harbinger and the scribes and Pharisees met in conflict. Jesus and the rabbis and the priesthood long debated. The apostles and the Sanhedrin, the evangelists and the doctors of divinity, Paul and the skeptics, engaged in many a conflict; and even Michael fought in "wordy debate" with the devil about the body of Moses. Yet who was more meek than Moses, more zealous for God than Elijah, more patient than Job, more devout than Paul, and more benevolent than John?

If there were no error in principle or practice, then controversy, which is only another name for opposition to error, real or supposed, would be unnecessary. If it were lawful, or if it were benevolent, to make a truce with error, then opposition to it would be both unjust and unkind. If error were innocent and harmless, then we might permit it to find its own quietus or to immortalize itself; but so long as it is confessed that error is more or less injurious to the welfare of society, individually and collectively considered, then no man can be considered benevolent who does not set his face against it. In proportion as a person is intelligent and benevolent, he will be controversial, if error exist around him; hence, the Prince of Peace never sheathed the sword of the Spirit while he lived. He drew it on the banks of the Jordan and threw the scabbard away.

We have only to ask how we inherited so many blessings, religious and political, contrasted with our ancestors some five hundred years ago, to ascertain of what use controversy has been, and how much we are indebted to it. All was silent and peaceful as the grave under the gloomy scepter of Roman pontiffs under the despotic sway of the Roman hierarchy until Luther opened the war. Roman priesthood denounced the "ruinous errors" and "damnable heresies" of Luther, the "deadly influence" of the tongue and pen of the hiersiarch; but they fasted and prayed and denounced in vain. No crocodile tears "over the souls of men," no religious penances for "the church in danger." no invocation of "all who loved Zion," no holy cooperation of "the friends of evangelical principles" could check the career of this reforming Hercules. Bulls of excommunication assailed him as stubble would Leviathan in the deep. "He feared no discipline of human hands." All was impotent and unavailing. The fire then kindled, though oft suppressed, yet burns.

The controversy begun by Luther not only maimed the power of the Roman hierarchy, but also impaired the arm of political despotism. The crown, as well as the miter, was jeopardized and desecrated by his Herculean pen. From the controversy about the rights of Christians arose the controversy about the rights of men. Every blow inflicted upon ecclesiastical despotism was felt by the political tyrants.

Religious controversy has enlightened the world. It gave new vigor to the mind, and the era of the Reformation was the era of the Devival of Literature. It has enlightened men upon all subjects, in all the arts and sciences, in all things-philosophic, literary, moral, and political. It was the tongue and pen of controversy which developed the true solar system, laid the foundation for the American Revolution, abolished the slave trade, and which has so far disenthralled the human mind from the shackles of superstition. Locke and Sidney, Milton and Newton, were all controvertists and reformers, philosophersliterary, religious, and political. Truth and liberty, both religious and political, are the first fruits of well-directed controversy. Peace and eternal bliss will be the "harvest home." Let the opponents of controversy or they who controvert controversy remember that had there been no controversy, neither the Jewish nor the Christian religion could have ever been established, nor, had it ceased, could the Reformation have ever been achieved. It has been the parent of almost all the social blessings which we enjoy.

If, indeed, all mankind were equally in love with truth, equally rational, equally intelligent, and equally disinterested, we might have only to propose a change for the better, and all would embrace it; but just the reverse of this is the true history of society. He is but little experienced in the human heart, he knows but little of the world, who imagines that what appears clear, wise, and useful to him, appears so to all; or that it is only necessary to support truth and goodness by unanswerable arguments to render them universally triumphant. more clearly and forcibly an unpopular truth is argued, the greater will be the dislike to it by all who are interested in representing it to be an error. Melancthon was for a time the subject of an illusion of this sort. He once told Luther that so clear were his apprehensions, so deep his convictions, and so forcible his arguments that he could soon convince all Germany of the truth of the Reformation principles. He became an itinerant and commenced a campaign against the priesthood. On returning from his first tour, Luther said to him: "Well, Melancthon, what speed?" "Alas!" replied the young reformer, "old Adam is too strong for young Melancthon."

A little experience will convince the most astute that the clearness and force of argument will not subdue opposition. It very frequently provokes the greater rescriment. The adversaries of the Messiah are proof of this; so were the aristocrats in the late Virginia convention. Orpheus could, by his music, as easily have caused the oaks to follow him, as could the Republicans, by their arguments and demonstrations, have caused the oligarchs in power to consent to extend equal rights and immunities to the proscribed casts in this commonwealth.

When error has but a single ally in the corruptions of the human heart, it is very formidable; but how strong when pride, passion, and interest become its auxiliaries! To overcome these, reason and logic must be strong, indeed, and rhetoric most persuasive. Pride, ambition, and selfishness are all powerful allies of error. Hence, double, triple, and quadruple the evidence necessary to convert a layman will not often convince a priest. The pride of the understanding is the most invincible of all sorts of pride, and more especially when religion is the problem. A bigoted skeptic, a prejudiced sectary, and an interested priest are more without the pale of reason, are more beyond the reach of controversy, than the errorists of any other school. But while error lives and falsehood has an auxiliary upon earth, controversy will be necessary and argument indisnensable.

When controversy proceeds from benevolence, it will be more successful and less injurious to the comfort of them who are engaged in it; but when argument and debate are dictated by resentment, prompted by pride, or controlled by the lust of power, the hearts of the combatants must be polluted and their passions inflamed. The wrath of man never did, and it never can, effect the righteousness which God requires, nor can it promote the happiness of man. When we love truth for its own sake, and when our efforts to maintain it proceed from brotherly kindness and love to all men, then we will plead its cause with force and with success; and then, and then only, will we be sanctified and blessed in the work. But a controversy for opinion, or for truth, instituted by vanity, by the pride of understanding or the lust of power, will pollute the heart, aggravate the passions, sour the temper, and terminate in vain jangling; but because it has been abused, shall we desist from the use of it? This would be to make a covenant with death and an agreement with destruction. This would be to live in vain and to die without honor. This would be to depart from the example of the confessers, martyrs, and apostles of Jesus, and to renounce our allegiance to the King eternal, immortal, and invisible. For so long as error in principle and in practice exists, so long will it be the duty and the felicity of the intelligent and the good to oppose it; and as long as there are conflicting creeds, sects, and divisions among religionists, so long will it be our duty to "contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

But never was there so much need to study the "suaviter in modo" and the "fortiter in re," amiability in the manner and firmness in the purpose, as in the defense of truth. We must conciliate the passions, while we besiege the understanding. We are not to suppose all our opponents to be knaves and impostors, to be interested and obstinate. We must remember that in this world of weakness and of error the good and the virtuous are often found enlisted under the banners of error. There are honest differences of opinion, and men equally sincere and virtuous on both sides of every question. This must never be lost sight of. It is, nevertheless, true that our great models, the prophets and apostles-nay, the Savior himself-though often mild as the genial influence of spring, were sometimes severe and surly as the winter's blast. At one time and amidst one class of opponents they were as gentle as the balmy zephyrs on beds of violets; at another time and amidst other opponents, they were like the mountain storm roaring through the cliffs. Soft and persuasive were their words and arguments to those who appeared honest in their convictions, but severe and tart were their reproofs to such as appeared obstinate in error. Hence, Paul, who instructed his son Timothy to imitate him in all things, admonished him to instruct some opponents "with all meckness," and "sharply to rebuke and confute" others; so did Peter and Jude in their Epistles. "Make a difference," says Jude, between those "who are complainers, who walk according to their own lusts, whose mouths speak great swelling words, and admire men's persons for the sake of gain"—"have compassion upon other errorists;" " save them with fear, hating the garments spotted by the pollutions of the flesh." man ever spoke more severely of certain teachers than Peter in his second Epistle. We must, in all our controversies, make the same differences. When we find persons like Balaam, obstinately intent on covetous courses, for the sake of others we must not spare them; but courtesy and benevolence will be our best guides, and a good example will often achieve more than a thousand argu-

To your posts, then, O Israel! Remember, you have enlisted not for six months, like some of our sectarian militia, but you have vowed allegiance during the war. "Fight the good fight of faith." Keep your eyes upon the Captain, and when the conflict is over he will cover you with laurels which will never wither, and bestow upon you a crown of righteousness which fadeth not away.

THE VITALITY OF RELIGION.

The liberty, the freedom, the democracy we speak so much about are big ideas and require more of those enjoying their benefits than we are apt to realize. I see no vehicle but the church, with its message to the secret spirit of men, by which to fashion an essential character. This institution, imperfect as it is, divided as it is, partial, priest-ridden, pew-rented, full of dry-bone doctrine and deadly traditionalism, is, in spite of all its defects, the one institution dedicated to making character and basing its message upon the Sermon on the Mount. This badly battered, upheaved world needs nothing so much as a high type of integrity and lofty character, the making of which is the real work of religion.-Dr. Carl Reiland.

SERMON OUTLINES

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION

A Book of Three Hundred New Sermon Outlines

BY A. J. BACHMAN.

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has three hundred sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, mar-riage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

OUR MESSAGES

Home-grown piety is best.

Living solely for self is a poor business.

The leech bleeds the hand that feeds him.

The man enslaved by sin is a slave indeed.

The way to heaven traverses the self-denial route.

Those who flock with the crowd are constantly changing.

You must learn to do good by first ceasing to think evil.

Christ waged a constant warfare on the devil and his emissaries.

One was baptized at Lindsley Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

W. E. Morgan began a meeting at Flint, Mich., last Lord's day.

I will fear no evil so long as Jesus leads me every step of the way.

Instead of abolishing criticism of wrongdoing, abolish the evil itself.

Wilson Herron preached at Burnett's Chapel, near Lavergne, Tenn., last Lord's day.

- G. W. Hardin changes his address from General Delivery to Box 797, Ponca City, Okla.
- F. B. Srygley preached to two splendid audiences at Leiper's Fork, Tenn., last Lord's day.
- S. P. Pittman is doing a splendid work with the Broadway church of Christ, Knoxville, Tenn.
- C. C. Brown, Daytona, Fla., April 2: "I preached last evening at a sick home. Two made the good confession."

Charley Nichols, Clay, Miss., April 8: "The Gospel Advocate is doing a grand work which eternity alone will tell. I enjoy your writing very much."

- H. Roy Hobbs: "If thou couldest but always continue humble and little in thine own eyes, and keep thy spirit in due order and subjugation, thou wouldest not fall so easily into dangers and offenses."
- G. A. Shaver, Moultrie, Ga., April 8: "Brother Nichol has just closed a great meeting with the little band here. Three came into the one body. There was much rejoicing, for those coming with us were all dear to our hearts."
- H. Leo Boles preached to two large and appreciative audiences at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. Brother Boles also taught the adult Bible class at the study hour. This class now numbers over one hundred.
- H. D. Jeffcoat, Duffee, Miss., April 8: "Brother Buffington, of Crandall, is here with me, and has preached two good sermons. So I will say to the brethren in Mississippi and Alabama that the church has a new preacher in this field, and we should call him out and help him."

George H. Porch advises that H. T. King preached two fine sermons at Belmont Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. Morning subject, "Hope in Christ;" evening subject, "Friendship Between David and Jonathan." Large crowds morning and evening. Two confessions and baptisms.

- W. N. Ridge desires to devote his entire time to preaching the gospel. Brother Ridge is a splendid young man and a good preacher, and we are glad to very heartily commend him. He is open for meetings at any time, any place. Write him at Route 4, Box 53, Nashville, Tenn.
- C. H. Smithson, Hatfield, Ark., April 6: "Yesterday was spent with the saints at Nash, Texas, and it was pleasant indeed. Next Lord's day I will be here at home, and hope to have a fine hearing. I have some choice time for meetings in the spring and summer. I am in a position to furnish a fine singer for schools or meetings."
- J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., April 5: "We had two splendid services at C Street to-day, with one addition at the night service. Our mission in the Midland Valley Addition is growing with each service, and we are in need of a house to meet in, as the place we use is too small to accommodate those who desire to attend. Pray for the work here."

W. P. Myhand, Jackson, Ala., April 6: "We are rejoiced at the thought of our beloved brother, G. W. Jarrett, coming back to meet with us for a while. We are always glad to have him with us. He has a welcome in any of our homes. He never speaks evil of any of his brethren or of any preacher. He is sound in his teaching, and he does not sugar-coat it for gain or court favor with the sects. His address will be Jackson, Ala."

Frank Shackelford, Hope Hull, Ala., April 5: "I read with interest every piece you write for the Gospel Advocate, and enjoy them all, as I do practically all it publishes, but I believe I appreciated your reply to 'Rev.' J. G. Bow, in the issue of April 2, more than any you have written, because of your peaceful, quiet, Christianlike manner of handling the matter and the unanswerable facts you present. The Advocate is a power for good, and was never better."

- W. T. Hines, Dodge City, Kan., April 6: "I closed my third meeting with my home congregation (Neosho, Mo.) with twelve added to the church. Will W. Slater, of Irving, Texas, who is one of the best singers and preachers in the church, led the song service. Congregations will make no mistake in calling him for meetings. I closed my year's work with these good brethren, and will take up the work with them again in November. At present I am at Dodge City in a meeting."
- J. B. Rodd, Moberly, Mo., April 4: "A very small sudience meets at my residence each Lord's day for worship. We want to have a protracted meeting in June, to be held in a tent, but we have not been able to locate a tent to date. We want to borrow or pay a small rental for one, and will pay the freight charges both here and back if not too far. Our support for the preacher has been assured, but a tent is necessary before we can hold the meeting. Who has one we can secure? Write me."
- R. L. Colley, Union City, Tenn., April 6: "Charlie Taylor, of Paducah, Ky., has just closed one of the greatest meetings in the history of the church here. The house was full at almost every service, and at some of the services many were turned away for lack of room. Thirteen were baptized, two were restored to their 'first love,' and twenty placed their membership. Of the latter number, two came from the 'digressives,' desiring to worship as 'it is written.' The church was greatly strengthened in every way."
- T. W. Phillips, San Antonio, Texas, April 6: "The meeting with the church of Christ on South Flores Street, this city, continued fifteen days and closed last night with a fine interest and attendance. J. S. Newman did the preaching, Five were added to the congregation, four of them by confession and baptism. San Antonio is a great city with more than two hundred thousand people, and the door of opportunity stands wide open to the churches of Christ at this time. Pray for us, brethren, that we may go forward with the work as good soldiers should. The Beacon Hill meeting will begin on the second Sunday in May, with Foy E. Wallace, Jr., and Austin Taylor in the lead."
- W. C. Phillips, Chattanooga, Tenn., April 2: "Last Lerd's day was a good day with the Cowart Street church of Christ, this city. At the merning service Mrs. W. E. Setliffe made the confession, and at the evening service her husband made the confession. Immediately after the evening services they were both buried in baptism. Also one restoration at the evening service. On March 31, at 12:30 P.M., in the prayer-meeting room of the Central church of Christ, this city, in the presence of Brethren Hoover, Graham, and Etheridge (ministers), I solemnized the rites of matrimony between W. H. Hackworth, of Stevenson, Ala., and Miss Sue Willie Smith, of Paint Rock, Ala. Both are members of the church of Christ. I'm for the Gospel Advocate on and no."

I'm for the Gospel Advocate on and no."

Will J. Cullum, Livingston, Tenn., April 4: "Our work at Livingston and in the vicinity is moving forward, with a general interest being aroused among the churches of Christ. J. D. Jones is the minister at Monterey, Crossville, and Algood: J. Pettey Ezell, at Cookeville; W. M. Oakley, evangelist in Putnam County; and the writer, at Livingston; and, with a fine spirit of coöperation being shown, we hope for good results. At this writing I am in a mission meeting, preaching to a full house each evening. I am to begin a meeting at Dalton, Ga., on April 14. We are encouraged to keep the battle raging against departures from the word of the Lord, and at this writing we are endeavoring to induce the Christian Church to have a discussion of the instrumental-music question. We will make known in the near future the results of our efforts to have this debate."

The man who doesn't believe in prayer hasn't faith.

A devoted, devout, regenerated man will be devoted to the ancient order of things in the church, to knowing and doing the whole will of God.

The man who believes that the universe is traveling at so many billion miles a second and can't believe in God has a queer sort of a kink in his make-up.

We published in the Nashville Banner last week that none of the city's popular clergyman are preaching the gospel, and not one of them has denied it so far.

W. M. Mann, Clinton, Okla., April 9: "We have just closed the best meeting in the history of the church in Clinton. Fourteen were baptized. The preaching was done by J. Will Henley."

C. A. Norred, Florence, Ala., April 10: "One was baptized last Lord's day. The Poplar Street Church is building a house here for the colored brethren and will give attention to work among the colored people here."

I. A. Douthitt, Sedalia, Ky., April 10, to F. W. Smith: "I have just read your article in the Gospel Advocate of April 3. I appreciate the way you are going after that bunch of infidels. Give them more of it. You are helping us young preachers."

I. A. Douthitt, Sedalia, Ky., April 10, to F. B. Srygley: "I just want to tell you how much I appreciate your reply to J. B. Cowden in the Gospel Advocate of April 9. I believe if I were Cowden I would let you alone, and I imagine he will from now on."

W. D. Black, Sweetwater, Texas, April 6: "Our meeting starts off well. Two good sermons yesterday, with fine crowds and good interest. Two placed their membership. C. McClung, of Weatherford, will be here to-day, the Lord willing, to do the rest of the preaching."

J. G. Malphurs, Blackwater, Mo., April 10; "A well-qualified lady teacher is needed at Blackwater, Mo., to work in a private school conducted by Christians. None but a faithful member of the church is wanted. A good work for some one looking for Christian association."

F. L. Young, Charco, Texas, April 7: "I am resting, fasting, and feasting in the land of roses and grape fruit. This is my first vacation in forty years. I hope soon to be well and back at work in the Lord's vineyard. The dear Lord is so good and time is so short. Let us work and pray."

James E. Chessor, Spencer, Tenn., April 6: "J. E. Acuff, of Nashville, Tenn., visited his family here yesterday and preached a strong sermon on the Beatitudes (Matt. 5: 3-12). Price Billingsley will preach here on the first Sunday in May, and also deliver lectures before the student body of Burritt College."

T. W. Phillips, Jr., Shreveport, La., April 6: "One confession and large crowds yesterday. We set two hundred and fifty as a goal to reach by October in our Bible-school work. The first Sunday in last October there were only thirty-three in the classes. We have had above one hundred for several Sundays now."

J. D. Mathews, Marietta, Okla., April 6: "I preached for the Shadydale congregation on Friday night, Saturday night, and on Sunday and Sunday night. Our audiences were large and very attentive. There is an open door here for much good to be accomplished. There is a large field here, but the laborers are few."

L. E. Carpenter, Port Arthur, Texas, April 5: "The Sixth Street Church, this city, continues to grow along all lines. Our reports show one hundred and seventy new pupils enrolled in our Sunday-morning Bible study since the first of this year. Our revival starts off well, with great crowds and interest. Three added the first day, though we were forced to begin it with home forces. Brother Billingsley will be here Monday. Let us work harder and in a more definite and systematic way this year than ever before."

O. M. Reynolds, Albuquerque, N. M., April 6: "Several have been added at 1135 Forrester Avenue since last report. G. A. Dunn, Jr., is to assist us in a big tent meeting on June 14-28. On May 22 I am to begin a meeting at Kress, Texas. Beginning on July 1, I shall do general evangelistic work, going anywhere I may be called. July and August are already promised. We intend to make our home for years to come at Abilene, Texas. The Gospel Advocate is great."

O. F. Shearer, Monticello, Ky., April 8: "The proposed discussion between H. B. Taylor (Missionary Baptist) and C. R. Nichol (Christian) will be held on May 5-8, at the courthouse in Monticello, Ky. Two two-hour sessions each day—morning and night. The general church questions are to be discussed. To reach Monticello, buy your railroad ticket for Burnside, Ky. Taxies from Monticello meet all trains and will bring you over promptly. Monticello and the surrounding neighborhood are arranging to take care of a number of visitors. You are cordially invited to come and be with us in this discussion."

W. M. Burkhalter, Athens, Ala., April 6: "I am now living at Athens, and managing a grocery store. I was raised near Nashville, just one mile from Cedar Grove Church. I was baptized by your father in White's Creek many years ago. Brother McQuiddy conducted the meeting. Brother Lambert, of Waverly, Tenn., conducted a revival at Athens last fall, and I went back into the church here and am working all I can. I have been taking the Gospel Advocate a few months, and am getting a lot of enjoyment from reading it. Several members of our church are reading the Advocate. I think you gave Mr. Bow a complete answer. We have preaching only on the second and fourth Sundays. I wish we had some one to preach every Sunday."

P. J. Fox, Lewisburg, Tenn., April 10: "I am sending you renewal subscription for my mother, Mrs. Fannie Fox, who is in very feeble health and on that account is not able to read nor write. The Gospel Advocate has been coming to us in her name for over forty years. I sure enjoy your front page, and never fail to read it when the Advocate comes. I read it often to mother, and she, too, enjoys your writings. Any one who will read the first page of the Advocate and do accordingly cannot make a mistake, and will not regret it when his time draws near. This will be, I am thinking, the last time the Advocate will be subscribed for in mother's name, for I fear another year will find her in the great unknown. However, she will be faithful till the end. I wish you and the Advocate much success, and hope that it will visit every home in the land."

James E. Chessor, Spencer, Tenn., April 10: "The Burritt College building committee has let the contract for constructing the concrete base for the new dormitory to V. M. Elrod, Lebanon contractor, at a reasonable consideration—twelve hundred dollars. Ground was broken on April 8, and the job will be finished within two weeks. The blue print calls for a U-shaped base, with court next to the administration building, the dormitory to contain eighty rooms and to be furnished with steam and water. For the present, however, the foundation for only two ells is to be made, the building to contain forty or fifty rooms. The policy of the board of trustees is to build no faster than incoming funds will admit, thus steering clear of debt and financial obligation. They have funds to lay the foundation and to burn a quantity of brick, and then, perhaps, to lay some brick. The brick will be made at the low price of six dollars per thousand. A large quantity of old brick will be utilized also, when the two antiquated and inadequate dormitories now in use are torn down. It is to be hoped that the new dormitory can be built without delay or handicap. The earlier it is finished, the better, the school's welfare requiring it."

BROTHER McQUIDDY'S BOOK.

"The Profitable Word" contains a choice selection of the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, editor and publisher of the Gospel Advocate for over forty years, carefully compiled by A. B. Lipscomb. It is a gem and contains some of the best thoughts of a great mind. The book contains 196 pages, and is neatly bound in silk and stamped in gold and white metal. Now ready. EDITORIAL

"THE NEW HAMPSHIRE DECLARATION OF FAITH."

BY F. B. SRYGLEY,

A series of articles by John Bunyan Lemon, D.D., of Greenfield, Mass., has appeared in the Western Recorder on the above subject, in which some strange things are said. As a sample of this Baptist literature, I quote the following:

The New Hampshire Declaration of Faith is the correct name of the document which twenty years afterwards was spoken of as a "Confession of Faith." It has been by far the widest circulated Baptist literature in the world. It has been read on every continent and studied in well-nigh every school of learning where Baptist history has been thought important.

This single pamphlet has had more than one hundred thousand circulation, not to mention the tens of thousands, perhaps millions of copies, printed in whole or in part by Baptist churches throughout the land for free distribution in their own communities. It is possible that this brief, timely document has alone saved our entire Baptist denomination from disintegration and decay.

From the foregoing quotation I am very much impressed with the wide circulation of this unauthorized document, as "it has been by far the widest circulated Baptist literature in the world." It will be noted that it is Baptist but not Christian literature. One could read the New Testament all his life and never know that such a document ever had an existence. There have been more than one hundred thousand copies of this "Confession of Faith" circulated, besides the tens of thousands, perhaps millions, which have been printed by Baptist churches for free distribution. These Baptist churches could see more in it than I have ever been able to see, or they would not have given it such wide circulation.

The brother certainly does give praise to this "Confession of Faith" when he says: "It is possible that this brief, timely document has alone saved our entire Baptist denomination from disintegration and decay." This is equivalent to saying that the New Testament would not have saved it from "disintegration and decay." This is evidently true, for the New Testament does not say one word about the "Baptist denomination." One can read that book for a lifetime and never learn one thing about the "Baptist denomination," or other denominations, for that matter. No wonder the Baptists needed an outside document to save them from "disintegration and decay." The only allusion that the New Testament makes to the "Baptist denomination" is to condemn it when it condemns division: "Now this I mean, that each one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apellos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ, Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were you baptized into the name of Paul?" (1 Cor. 1: 12, 13.) This passage condemns division. What is the "Baptist denomination," except a part or a division among those whom they claim are Christians?

The gentleman further says in defense of the Baptist "Confession of Faith:"

It is bad enough, even now, in New England and in the Middle West, to find scores of Baptist pasters who have no clear idea of what an orthodox Baptist church is. And there is no short-cut way for them to find out authoritatively, no official document by which they can get their

It was so in New Hampshire in 1780. There was no official standard by which a church or an individual could official standard by which a church or an individual could get recognized measurement. Every man had a perfect right to insist that he was orthodox and his church a regular Baptist church, despite the fact that no two of them agreed together. A consensus of opinion was out of the question, because the churches were few in number and separated by miles of wild and unsettled territory. Theological seminaries had not yet got a-going, and denominational societies were in their infancy. There was no "court of appeals" for religious questions. Every man was a law unto himself. They had the Bible, to be sure, but every denomination was claiming that for its creed. The people wanted to know why a church should call itself "Baptist" instead of "Presbyterian" or "Congregationalist."

Why is it so bad " to find scores of Baptist pastors who have no clear idea of what an orthodox Baptist church is?" Of course this is admitting that they cannot find what it is from the New Testament; but if it is not revealed in the Bible, what difference does it make whether they ever find out or not? Neither Paul, Peter, James, John, nor any other writer of the New Testament ever found out; or, if they did, they did not make it known, as they say nothing about it in any of their writings now extant. If it made any difference to them, they expressed no regret over the matter. Then why should the Doctor worry? "In New Hampshire in 1780" there was no official standard by which a church or an individual could get recognized measurement." This is a clear admission that the New Testament does not recognize the Baptist denomination, because we all know those Baptists of New Hampshire had a New Testament, even if they were not willing to use it. Though they had the New Testament, still they had no "recognized measurement." They had the measurement all right of the New Testament church, but the trouble was that they did not recognize it. It seems that the Baptists of New Hampshire-and all over the world, for that-were, and are yet, in this predicament. The New Testament does not recognize them and they do not recognize it. I have known for a long time that this was the trouble with my Baptist friends, but this is the first time I have had one of their "big guns" to admit it.

Of course, every man had the right to insist that he was orthodox and his church a regular Baptist church, if he wanted to; but none of them had the right to insist that the New Testament church was the Baptist Church, for it is not and never has been. The brother says no two of these Baptist churches agreed together. That is not as bad as is the fact that no one of these churches agreed with the New Testament; if it had, it would have been the church of Christ instead of the Baptist Church. They could not get "a consensus of opinion," "because the churches were few in numbers and separated by miles of wild and unsettled territory." It is strange that under these wild conditions these misguided ones did not think to turn to the New Testament and all get together on it.

If they had all followed the Bible, they would have been together even though they were "separated by miles of wild and unsettled territory." The apostolic church stuck together on the apostolic doctrine, and they had no theological seminaries or denominational societies, not even in their infancy.

But the Doctor says there were no "courts of appeal" in New Hampshire in those early days. Neither was there such a court in apostolic times. True, they appealed to the inspired ones in those days, and those few churches in New Hampshire should have appealed to the same authority; but the Baptists of New Hampshire could not have made their appeal to this court, because they have no case before it. Their church is not the one that went before the apostles. "Every man was a law unto himself." For that reason they should have taken the divine law and become law-abiding citizens in the kingdom of heaven.

The Doctor says: "They had the Bible, to be sure, but every denomination was claiming that for its creed." That is a poor excuse for giving up the Bible as their guide and writing a "confession of faith." I do not think the Baptists ought to go square back on the word of the Lord because others are claiming it as their creed. I do not believe in going by the majority, but I certainly would not let others drive me from the Bible by any such claim. The Doctor ought to know that not every denomination is going by the Bible, whatever they claim; for, if they were they would not differ as they do. What the Doctor should have taught these religious "Bolsheviks" who were a law unto themselves is that they should not only claim the Bible as their creed, but should in reality make it such and be governed by its divine requirements. No wonder the people wanted to know why a church is called "' Baptist' instead of 'Presbyterian' or 'Congregationalist.'" They could never find any reason for it in the Bible; and if there is none in that book, then there is no scriptural reason. The church of the New Testament was never called either "Baptist," "Presbyterian," or "Congregationalist." Christ called it his church: "Upon this rock I will build my church." (Matt. 16: 18.) "All the churches of Christ salute you." (Rom. 16: 16.) called "the church," "the church of God," "the church of the first-born," but never "the Baptist Church." No wonder these New Hampshire Baptist churches had to write a "confession of faith," as they could not even find their name in the one the Holy Spirit wrote.

RELIGIOUS JOURNALISM.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The printed page is, perhaps, one of the most forceful ways of impressing ideas upon the human mind, and it is certainly the most extensive way; because, while comparatively few hear the spoken words, multiplied thousands read the same message in print.

Then, again, while the "spoken" message may fade from memory with no power to recall or reproduce it, the "written" message is permanent, and can be referred to in the event of the lapse of memory. Thus, in point of "accuracy," at least, we see the advantage of recorded history over that of mere tradition. In this respect the people living in what is termed the "patriarchal" age had not the advantages of those since Moses committed to writing his history as recorded in the first five books of the Bible.

Without the teaching of Christ and his apostles in the permanent form presented in the New Testament, we could neither write nor speak with freedom of "certainty" upon the great themes of Christianity either from the pulpit or the press; but since the revelation of God to man has been, by inspired men, committed to writing, we can always have a standard by which to prove or test the utterances of both pulpit and press.

A religious journal, then, is to be "judged," not by the whims and prejudices of men, but by the divine standard—the written word of God. This judgment should deal with the "accuracy" of its statements—that is, as to scriptural teaching—and with the "spirit" and "manner" in which it condemns error and advocates the truth. There is a certain amount of "dignity" and "freedom" from that which gives unnecessary offense to those in error that should always characterize a religious journal.

Until it is clearly proven that those from whom a religious journal may differ are dishonest, and are "willful" perverters of the truth, all reflections and insinuations to the contrary should be studiously avoided. But in so far as a Christian and dignified exposure of religious error is concerned, the lines cannot be too sharply and forcefully drawn between the truth and the doctrines of men. The more vivid and forceful the contrast is made to appear between truth and error, the better it is for the truth, and any religious journal that fails in this respect is untrue to its professed mission.

Now, the Gospel Advocate has always had a well-defined policy, and it is the sincere desire and firm determination of those into whose hands it has fallen to maintain to the best of their ability that policy. Hence, such expressions as were heard at the Columbia debate by an advocate of the inventions of man in Christian worship, that the "Gospel Advocate is an unholy sheet," do not move us in the least. The Advocate, from the beginning of departures from the truth, has, because of its opposition to such departures, been subjected to all such unkind and untruthful thrusts.

Furthermore, the Advocate will not be intimidated nor swerved from its course of opposing all religious errors in the worship and service of God by the "criticisms" and "faultfindings" of that class who mean well, but are too fearful of displeasing those from whom we differ. We must be true to the truth; and while in its advocacy we, no doubt, make mistakes in manner and spirit, we gladly welcome and invite kindly criticism and helpful suggestions.

However, very often the editors and contributors of the Advocate are "misjudged," and consequently censured for that of which they are entirely innocent. To conduct a religious journal so as to please everybody simply cannot be done, a thing of which we have ample proof nearly every week. To illustrate: An article appears in its columns regarding which letters of high commendation are received in one mail, and perhaps in the very next a letter or so of condemnation is received. Hence, that which appeals to and pleases a large number of readers may displease some others. What, under such circumstances, should a religious paper do? It should continue to teach the truth of God, regardless of the consequences. The apostle Paul had some experiences from which we may learn a lesson. He said: "For am I now seeking the favor of men, or of God? or am I striving to please men? if I were still pleasing men, I should not be a servant of Christ." (Gal. 1: 10.)

We are perfectly sure that it is very "displeasing" to our brethren who use instrumental music in their worship and work through humanly organized missionary societies to have the unscripturalness of such things pointed out. But the Advocate could no more be true to its mission in contending "for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints" and cease such opposition than it could be true to that mission and cease its contention for the one baptism of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Paul said: "So then am I become your enemy, by telling you the truth?" (Gal. 4: 16.) If teaching the truth leads people to be displeased and causes them to condemn and unkindly criticize those so teaching, so much the worse for the critics.

As a sample of dissatisfaction with the teaching of this journal, we call attention to the following:

Gentlemen: I have been hoping that you would stop my subscription when it expired without my troubling to write you, since not I, but some unknown friend, enrolled me on your list, I must, of course, appreciate the courtesy of the "friend," and I certainly recognize the sincerity of the motives back of your paper; but I must say that I know of no other paper that does so much harm to the people who read it trustfully as does your weekly. It is too bad to have such an outworn philosophy foisted on men to-day.

X.

This is not published to make the "unknown friend" feel that a subscription to the Gospel Advocate was thrown away, and for that reason the name of our dissatisfied friend is withheld. The simple fact is, we feel highly complimented over the strictures from the author of the above, because it is evident that what he terms "an outworn philosophy" is the opposition of the Advocate to "modern evolution," which teaches that man sprang from a monkey, and to "modernists," who deny the inspiration of the Bible and the divinity of Christ.

While we regret exceedingly that our friend entertains such skeptical ideas and that he regards the gospel of Jesus Christ as "an outworn philosophy" that is doing "so much harm to the people who read it trustfully," we are not at all discouraged and will continue to press the claims of Jesus.

The following from the lamented J. C. McQuiddy is worthy of note: "An article that will not in some way bring the readers into closer communion with God, or in some degree elevate, uplift, and make them more useful, should be eliminated from the columns of a journal, even though the editor incurs the frowns of a contributor. One day the public may applaud his efforts, and the same public may condemn him the next day in most scathing terms. It is certain as death that he cannot please everybody. Of course an editor is not infallible or inspired; he makes mistakes as do other people; but God demands that he be true to himself and his convictions."

THE PRIVILEGE AND DUTY OF CHRISTIANS TO TEACH THE BIBLE TO OTHERS. No. 2.

BY E. A. ELAM.

To people of faith, and to all, therefore, who love God, his word is sufficient. No course of human reason is necessary. All they wish to know is God's will, and they are willing and ready to do it. It is their meat to do his will and to accomplish his work. (John 4: 34.) If this is not true with all "church members," they lack faith and have not sufficient love for God.

From the many Scriptures quoted in the last article and from many others which might be quoted it is clearly seen that it is the privilege and duty of all Christians to teach the word of God to others. In fact, he who does not work for the salvation of others is himself not a Christian.

Christians, then, should be ready to teach the word of God at all times, and, therefore, wherever opportunity affords.

In the first place, parents should teach it diligently and daily to their own children. (Deut. 6: 6-10; Eph. 6: 4.) Nothing can take the place of this home teaching and training; nothing can repair the injury which children suffer who do not receive such instruction and training.

Parents who fail to teach the word of God diligently to their children and to train them in the fear of God do not properly and sufficiently love them.

Home is God's ordained institution for the training and development of children. It is both his kindergarten and great training school for usefulness and good; parents are the teachers, and the Bible is the textbook. Mothers must "rule the household" (1 Tim. 5: 14), and fathers must "nurture" their children "in the chastening and admonition of the Lord" (Eph. 6: 4), having them "in subjection with all gravity" (1 Tim. 3: 4), and must lead them into the faith of the gospel (Tit. 1: 6).

Schools in which the Bible is taught on Sunday, or Sunday schools, and schools in which the Bible is taught daily as a textbook are a great good within themselves and can help parents very greatly in the discharge of this sacred duty, but cannot relieve them of it.

Here a very serious matter arises. There is a fast-growing disposition on the part of the State to control more and more the teaching and training of children. More and more, therefore, some parents may feel less and less their responsibility to teach and train their own children. But nothing can relieve parents of this responsibility, neither can the State encroach upon the rights and duties of parents. Parents must exercise their rights to say that the faith of their children in God, Christ, and the Bible must not be undermined in schools of any kind.

On the other hand, when parents have done all this in the fear of God for their children, they have met their obligations and are then guiltless in God's sight, whether or not after this their children accept or reject the teaching of the Bible. The responsibility rests then upon the children. The children of many pious fathers and godly mothers have turned out badly, not because they were not well taught and trained, but in spite of such teaching and training. While God punished Eli for the wicked course his sons pursued, he did not punish Samuel for the same sins committed by his sons. Why the difference? It must be in the fact that Eli did not restrain his sons, and Samuel tried to restrain his, but could not. There is no record of God's censuring Samuel for his sons' wickedness. On the other hand, it seems that Samuel deposed his sons from being judges. The children of other godly fathers and mothers in the Bible did not always live the best lives.

But parents must never fail to do their duty.

In addition to their own families, Christians must endeavor to teach the word of God to all within their reach.

Jesus did this. He taught during the day and at night; he taught in the synagogues and in the temple; he taught on the mountain and in the plain; he taught on the land and on the sea; he taught in the homes of the people and along the dusty highway; he taught the poor and the rich; he taught saints and sinners; he taught by asking and answering questions; he taught one at a time, or classes, or multitudes; he contended publicly and mightily against the scribes and the Pharisees, denouncing them as hypocrites and children of Satan, but in gentleness and mercy he taught unfortunate and fallen women. He passed none by.

He sent out his apostles to teach all nations. They taught wherever and whensoever they could find an audience.

Paul's Example in Teaching.

Paul furnishes a most excellent example in this particular, as well as in all others. He exhorts all to be imitators of him, even as he was of Christ. (1 Cor. 11: 1.)

Without space to dwell upon his whole life work in this particular, let us notice only a few striking instances.

At Ephesus "he entered into the synagogue, and spoke boldly for the space of three months;" and when he left, he reasoned "daily in the school of Tyrannus. And this continued for a space of two years; so that all they that dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord, both Jews and Greeks." (Acts 19: 8-10.) He taught there "from house to house," as well as "publicly," and admonished "every one night and day with tears." (Acts 20: 20-31.) His teaching during this time was not confined to Ephesus, because "all they that dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord." He was not "the pastor" or "the minister" of the church in Ephesus; he did not have "charge of it."

This was a great work and is a remarkable example for all preachers. Whether or not they can accomplish as much as Paul did, they can be filled with the same spirit, be prompted by the same holy desire, and do all they can of the same work.

And let it be understood that when Paul preached in synagogues he did not indorse the teaching and practice of the Jews who worshiped in them, but embraced every opportunity to teach them the truth and to lead them out of error into the acceptance of the Christ. This he continued to do until put out of the synagogues.

So preachers of the gospel to-day should preach and teach the truth, the whole truth, until for doing so they are shut out of the places where they teach and preach—that is, they should preach the gospel in its fullness and power in anybody's meeting or pulpit, and should teach the truth in any school or anywhere else; but they should not preach or teach in any place, which place is wrong within itself, without in wisdom, in courage, and in the spirit of Christ pointing out this wrong, or in any place where error is upheld without pointing out the error. To preach and teach in such places and remain silent on the errors and wrongs practiced is to compromise the truth and prove unfaithful to God.

Faithful preachers cannot do this preaching and teaching without either converting their audiences or being shut out; but they must have the courage to do it.

Paul sat down and taught the women at the place of prayer by the riverside at Philippi, and at midnight he taught the jailer and "all that were in his house." (Acts 16: 13, 32.)

At Athens, as his custom was, Paul "reasoned in the synagogue with the Jews" on the Sabbath (Saturday); "in the market place every day with them that met him;" and "in the midst of the Areopagus" he taught the learned Athenians. (Acts 17: 2, 17, 22.)

Before the unrighteous Felix and profligate Drusilla, Paul "reasoned of righteousness, and self-control, and the judgment to come" (Acts 24: 24, 25); and he made a mighty effort to teach Festus, Festus' military tribunes, and King Agrippa and Bernice, as they sat in great pomp before him (Acts 25: 23 to 26: 32). As the Lord had said, Paul stood before kings, bearing the gospel of salvation to them. (Acts 9: 15.)

Paul was always courteous and dignified either before kings or their subjects, kind and considerate of both rich and poor; but he never fawned, cringed, courted favor, or compromised the truth. He preached everywhere and to all alike the same gospel, and a pure and holy life to all alike.

While at Rome, Paul "abode two whole years in his own hired dwelling, and received all that went in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching the things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ with all boldness, none forbidding him." (Acts 28: 30, 31.)

Some Others Who Taught the Truth.

Philip preached "good tidings concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ to the Samaritans, and he preached Jesus to one man as he journeyed in his chariot.

Priscilla and Aquila are still other examples. They took the eloquent Apollos "unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more accurately." (Acts 18: 26.)

As we have seen, all Christians mentioned in the New Testament, except those who became negligent, taught the word of God to others as they had ability and opportunity.

With these examples of Jesus, the apostles, and early disciples before us, and in the light of all these scriptures, we cannot resist the conclusion that it is now the privilege and the duty of all Christians, according to their abilities and opportunities, to teach the Bible to everybody in every place and at all times—whenever and wherever one or many may be found ready to learn. They should teach it on Sunday morning, Sunday afternoon, Sunday night, and on any other day of the week, in any place, and to everybody who will receive it. But it is the truth, the whole truth, they must teach.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

On receipt of a copy of the book, "The Profitable Word," just published by the Gospel Advocate Company, Nashville, Tenn., I said: "This is a neat book." When I saw it was a collection of the cream of the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, collected by A. B. Lipscomb, I said: "It is bound to be a good book, for Aleck knew Clayton intimately and well a long, long time, and was closely associated with him in his work; hence, he knew exactly what to put into the book and what to leave out"—the latter being scarcely less important than the former. Then I read one chapter of the book, and I said: "That chapter is well worth the price of the book"—and I'm expecting to find the work good, better, and best from the beginning to the end.

The frontispiece consists of a picture of Brother Mc-Quiddy that looks almost as if it were going to speak, and underneath the picture is his characteristic autograph.

I am sure there are blessings in this book for all who will seek them, and I bespeak for it an extensive and speedy sale.

The story of the life, labors, and success of J. C. Mc-Quiddy should be an inspiration to all, especially to the young who hope to toil upward to heights sublime. Brother McQuiddy was one of my pupils—one of my Mars' Hill boys; but I claim no honor for his career, for his powers of greatness and success were developed after his school days were ended, I think,

May the Lord always abundantly bless the loved ones he left behind him, and the lonely members of his own family are not the only ones who sadly and sorrowfully mourn over his startlingly sudden and unexpected departure.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

Please explain, through the Gospel Advocate, John 14: 2. Are the mansions already built, or are they being prepared? We will appreciate the explanation.—Ouida Mathias, Hyman, S. C.

The scripture referred to is: "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you; for I go to prepare a place for you." It simply means that Jesus left earth and went to heaven, and that he has made it possible for all who will to go. He was comforting his disciples, who had just been informed that he would soon be separated from them. He tells them that he is only going before them and will prepare a home for them, and that they could be with him forever. His departure from them was necessary in order to make an entrance for them possible. He made this preparation by his death and shed blood. He has not only prepared a place for us, but he has prepared the way for us to reach that place. He says: "I am the way, and the truth, and the life." It should be a comforting thought to us to know that Jesus has prepared a place for us. Heaven is a prepared place for a prepared people who are following him in the prepared way.

Please tell whether or not the Scriptures uphold women's teaching a class of any degree on the first day of the week. Please give the meaning of 1 Cor. 14: 34, 35; 1 Tim. 2: 9-15. Are women permitted to teach at all, according to these scriptures, and especially where there are able men to take the place? I have always been taught that women are not permitted to teach in public. I am very anxious to have this information.—Wallace L. Coleman, Paris, Tenn.

The scriptures referred to are: "Let the women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but let them be in subjection, as also saith the law. And if they would learn anything, let them ask their own husbands at home: for it is shameful for a woman to speak in the church." "Let a woman learn in quietness with all subjection. But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have the dominion over a man, but to be in quietness." These scriptures are plain and easily understood by those who are yearning to know the truth of God. The statements are clear, direct, and forcible. Women are not permitted to take a public part in the church. However, there is nothing in these scriptures that forbids a woman's teaching a class in a quiet way. If she is competent to teach, she should do so in the humility and quietness of her sphere. Priscilla helped to teach Apollos "the way of the Lord more accurately." This was done in a quiet way. There are two ways of teaching the way of the Lord-publicly and privately. God has restricted woman's teaching his word to the private way.

Please explain Acts 18: 18. Why was Paul's head shorn, and why did he make a vow?—X.

The scripture referred to reads as follows: "And Paul, having tarried after this yet many days, took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence for Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila: having shorn his head in Cenchrea; for he had a vow." We do not know why Paul made a vow nor when he made it. By some this is thought to be a Nazarite vow, but the facts as stated in the brief record do not warrant such a conclusion. Sometime previous to his coming to Cenchrea he had made a vow, and had permitted his hair to grow during the period of the vow, and now at its close he resumed the regular shaving of his head, which was customary at that time. Paul shaved his head to declare that his vow had been discharged.

Please explain 1 Cor. 5: 11-13 .- J. J. Cox.

The scripture referred to reads as follows: " But as it is, I wrote unto you not to keep company, if any man that is named a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a reviler, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such a one no, not to eat. For what have I to do with judging them that are without? Do not ye judge them that are within? But them that are without God judgeth. Put away the wicked man from among yourselves." is teaching the Corinthians against the evils which were common at that day. He warns them against encouraging wickedness. The one who encourages wickedness is guilty of sin. It was considered an encouragement to eat the common meal with any one at that time. To go into one's house and sit down to a common meal was taken as an indorsement and encouragement of the life that the one who was giving the meal was living. Such an indorsement as eating the common meal with the one was to fellowship that one in his wicked life. Such Paul is condemning.

It does not have reference to the Lord's Supper, as some believe. Christians should have no interchange of hospitality with members of the church who are guilty of the sins mentioned above. The church would be disgraced and corrupted by any friendly recognition of such evils.

(1) Please give through the "Query Department" the reason why the church of Christ does not "open the door of the church." (2) Explain Luke 23: 33-43. Why should we be baptized, as these malefactors were not?—X.

1. The church of Christ does not "open the door of the church," simply because the door is not closed. Jesus says: "I am the door." People enter the church by the authority of Christ. Obedience to the gospel terms of salvation puts one in the church; or one who obeys Christ is added to the church, and the Lord does the adding. No man or set of men can keep the one who obeys the gospel out of the church, as one is added to the church by the Lord through one's obedience to the gospel. Of course, I mean the church of our Lord. Men may keep one from entering other churches; that is, men may, close the door of other churches against one, but they have no power to open or close the church of Christ. It is the language cf Ashdod for men to talk about "opening and closing the door of the church." There is no scriptural authority for such.

2. The thief lived and died under the law of Moses. Baptism is a command of God under the Christian dispensation. Baptism was not a part of the law of Moses, but it is a command of God to people to-day. Abraham, David, and many others of God's heroes were saved and were not baptized, simply because God did not require it of them; yet they all had to do what Jehovah required of them in order to be saved. We have no claim upon the promises of God to-day when we refuse to obey his plain, positive command.

I notice in my American Revised Bible that in the eighth chapter of Acts the thirty-seventh verse is left out. Please tell through your good paper why it is left out.—X.

Verse 37, which is omitted by the American Standard Revised Version, is: "And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." All standard versions of the New Testament now leave out this verse. It is thought to be an interpolation. It is found in one ancient manuscript which is probably dated in the latter half of the second century, but none of the other manuscripts contain it. We do not know how or why this interpolation was made. Some think that it was made to express the apostolic custom of taking the confession.

COUNTRY SPECTACLES.

Tom and Harry had been in the country less than a week, when one day they came into the sitting room and threw themselves discontentedly upon the carpet.

"What's the matter, boys?" asked grandma. "You look almost as much out of sorts as your father did one time when he was a little boy and was chased round the yard by a turkey gobbler."

They brightened up a little at this and made her tell the story. But when she finished they fell back into their former attitudes of listless dejection.

"It's so awful poky in the country," complained Tom.
"I don't see what makes father like it. There's no boys to play with, no people flying round, no nothing. It's just stagnation."

Harry mumbled a dolorous assent.

"You didn't bring your country spectacles along," said grandma. "Of course you can't expect to see much without them."

They stared at her questioningly.

"You are wearing city ones now," she went on, placidly, "and can see nothing but the bustle and confusion of streets. When people change their residences, they always should change their spectacles."

Harry looked blank, but Tom's eyes began to twinkle with an inkling of her meaning.

"Don't believe we could see much with country ones here," he muttered.

Grandma affected not to notice.

Suddenly Harry rose to a sitting posture and began to sniff the air suspiciously.

"Aunt Hannah making doughnuts?" he asked, eagerly.
"I wouldn't wonder." Grandma sewed on composedly, and Harry's eyes grew bigger and bigger. "Why doesn't she tell me to run out and get some?" he thought, impatiently.

At length her thread run out, and she reached across to a spool on the window sill and broke off a new piece.

"If you boys are willing to enter my service for, say, half an hour," she said, "you may then take some doughnuts and your fishing poles and go down to the brook for the rest of the forenoon."

They were on their feet in an instant. Evidently they were energetic enough if they knew what to do.

"What is it, grandma? Of course we will," they cried.
"Very well. Now, I like to know what is happening outside, but I am so busy to-day that I will depend on you for the news. Harry, you go and sit under that big apple tree and watch everything going on. See how many varieties there are, and how many houses they are building in the tree. Watch the ants going up and down the trunk, and see what sort of work they are up to. And if there are any butterflies and grasshoppers or anything else around, just watch and tell me all about them.

"And, Tom, you go to the arbor in the corner of the garden and do the same thing. I will ring the bell at the end of half an hour, and then you may come and tell me what you have seen."

The boys raced out of the house to see which could get to his station first: Tom, with a sly twinkle in his eyes, as though he understood the little game, but was willing to humor it; and Harry, taking the matter more literally, and evidently determined to get all the news he possibly could for poor grandma.

When the bell rang at the end of half an hour, they came back with glowing faces and sparkling eyes.

"O grandma!" they both cried. Then Tom stopped and let Harry tell his news first.

"There were ten birds," the little fellow went on, excitedly, "and I counted four different kinds and three nests. And such funny ants! Two of 'em were carrying a regular mountain of a load up the trunk, and when they got tired two more came and took their places, and when they got tired some more came. And then there was a little chap running back and forth and speaking to every one he met. I guess he was telling them they were frying doughnuts upstairs." And Harry rolled on the floor and laughed uproariously at the recollection.

Tom looked at grandma and colored a little self-consciously.

"I guess it isn't such a bad place," he acknowledged, manfully. "You are right about the spectacles, grandma; and I'm going to wear my country ones after this. I saw no end of funny things—butterflies and bugs and all sorts of queer stuff. And there was a chipmunk sitting on the wall and scolding me for all he was worth. I am going out there again and make friends with him if I can. Come along now, Harry, if you don't want me to eat all the doughnuts."

Grandma listened to them as they went noisily to the kitchen, then picked up her work.

"It isn't hard to get along with boys if you meet them halfway," she thought.—Frank Herbert Sweet.

CRUMBS.

We like to believe that we are generous, but what do most of us really give? Crumbs! Merely crumbs! Crumbs of money-what proportion of our incomes do we really give away? Crumbs of kindness-how many of us give of our time, our consideration, our appreciation, our thought, and our love to a love-starved world? Perhaps we give a little money, but we are most of us misers in little courtesies, little kindnesses, and little attentions to the sad and sick and lonely. We are misers in appreciation where appreciation is due, and that is what makes life so abominably commonplace and what makes most of us so commonplace and uninteresting. We are commonplace, uninteresting, and unattractive in proportion to our lack of imagination; for imagination, and imagination only, enables us to put ourselves in the place of the other fellow; and just as soon as we put ourselves in his place we will understand him, pity him, and love him, and he will love us and become worthy of our love as we become correspondingly worthy of his.

Therefore, for our own sakes, if for no higher motive, and to render ourselves attractive and beloved, let us look to it that our neighbors, our friends, our business associates, the world, old and young, rich and poor, receive something better from us than mere crumbs.—Henrietta Lee Coulling, in Christian Advocate.

DAVID LIPSCOMB ON ORGANIZATION.

(Gospel Advocate, March 24, 1910.)

All meetings of churches or officers of churches to combine more power than a single church possesses is wrong. God's power is in God's churches. He is with them to bless and strengthen their work when they are faithful to him. A Christian, one or more, may visit a church with or without an invitation and seek to stir them up to a faithful discharge of their duties. But for one or more to direct what and how all the churches shall work, or to take charge of their men and money and use it, is to assume the authority God has given to each church. Each one needs the work of distributing and using its funds as well as in giving them.

BONHAM.

Death claimed the body of Sister G. W. Bonham on Monday, January 26, 1925. She would have been sixty-three years of age on April 30. Her husband, two daughters, and one son survive. Sister Bonham was "born again" about fifty years ago, being baptized by that lamented man of God, John S. Durst. Her life was sweet, sincere sevene and steadfast in the sincere, serene, and steadfast in the most holy faith. Solomon spoke about her in Prov. 31. David revealed the Lord's attitude in Ps. 116: 15: "Precious in the sight of Jehovah is the death of his saints."

J. E. WAINWRIGHT.

BLACK.

Brother Dougal S. Black died in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, on Janu-ary 23, 1925, in his eighty-fifth year. Funeral services were conducted at Mrs. Lloyd's, where he made his home, by Brother Clifton, of Beamsville, and the remains were brought to Glencoe, Ontario, for burial. I knew Brother Black for about twenty years, and al-ways considered him to be a faithful and loyal disciple of Christ. He was very liberal with his means for the support of the gospel and to help the poor. He was a reader of the Gospel Advocate for a number of years, and when he was through with it he would pass it on to others where it would do He was much interested in the salvation of others. S. WHITFIELD.

WRIGHT.

WRIGHT.

The family circle was deeply grieved when the death angel came on April 17, 1924, and took away the much-beloved wife of J. H. Wright, of Nashville, Tenn. She was the daughter of William Westbrooks, a preacher of the gospel, who passed away many years ago. I think Aunt Julia was one among the best of Christian women. She was always cheerful, kind, and gentle to everybody. She was the mother of eleven children, four of whom are living. No mother ever had a greater love for her children than did she. She was past fiftyone years of age when the summons came. We feel assured that she was well prepared in heart and life to take the journey. Our counsel to the bereaved ones is that they follow her footsteps as she followed Christ. Brother Todd spoke words of comfort Brother Todd spoke words of comfort at the grave. The body was laid to at the grave. The body was lated at the grave. The body was lated at rest in the family burying ground at Link Tenn. HER NIECE, MABEL.

DENTON.

On Wednesday, December 24, 1924, my dear sister, Mrs. G. T. Denton, crossed the great divide to try the realities of the unseen world. Her pilgrimage upon this earth was nearly sixty-six years. She obeyed the gospel at the age of sixteen, and lived a consistent Christian life until she was called hence. She leaves a husband, two children, two grandchildren, two sisters, two brothers, and a host of friends and relatives. We mourn her loss, but look forward to the great reunion on the other side. truthfully said of her that "she looked well to the ways of her that "she looked well to the ways of her household, and ate not the bread of idleness." "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." A SISTER.

DOWLING.

Mrs. Emily Dowling, wife of Brother J. B. Dowling, of Lake Butler, Fla., departed this life on January 19, 1925, after a long illness, surrounded by her loved ones and many friends and neighbors who wept sorely friends and neighbors who wept sorely as her gentle spirit quietly slipped out of its earthly tabernacle and soared away into the paradise of God, where it is free from the vanities and vexations of the flesh, there to await the redemption of the body at the judgment. Sister Dowling had been a member of the church of Christ about forty years. Indeed "a mother in Israel," she was a true wife and a true mother to her five children, who are all grown and some of whom are members of the "one body," as is also the bereaved husband and father. To them I would say: Weep not for her as those who have no hope, but live for God and his cause, and all will be as those who have no hope, but live for God and his cause, and all will be well at the judgment. The writer was called to say the last solemn words over her lifeless body, at the burial ground near Swift Creek, in Bradford County, near where Sister Dowling was born and reared.

HENDLEY.

Lorinah Paralee Hendley, daughter of James and Lucinda Proffitt, was born on February 2, 1856; was married to William E. Hendley on June 28, 1872; and died on November 23, 1924. She and her husband became obedient to the gospel of Christ in the year, 1897, being baptized at the same time by the late N. W. Proffitt. From that time until her death—more than twenty-seven years later—she retwenty-seven years later—she remained faithful to the cause of Christ. She was respected and loved by her She was respected and loved by her neighbors, and all who knew her were her friends. She loved her husband, her children, and her home, and all her family were devoted to her. In her married life with Brother Hendley there was an example of almost perfect union. They were married while very young, each being under eighteen years. To them were born six children—two sons and four daughters—all of whom, except one daughter, surdren—two sons and four daughters—all of whom, except one daughter, survive her. In her death the writer loses his youngest and last sister. With her husband and children, we can say that while we mourn her death, we have sufficient evidence from the life she lived that she has entered into the rest that remains for the people of God.

S. HOUSTON PROFFITT.

MAYBERRY.

Martha Emily Mayberry, daughter of James and Lucinda Proffitt, was born on July 10, 1853; was married to Henry J. Mayberry en December 2, 1869; and died on October 28, 1924. Early in life she obeyed the gospel of Christ, being baptized by Brother William Kuykendall in April, 1873. She was a faithful and active Christian until death called her hence. She gave more than a half century of service to the cause of the Master. She was loved and respected by her neighbors, and her friends were numbered by her acquaintances. She loved her husband and children, and they were devoted to her. I have often thought that hers and Brother Mayberry's wedded life was one of the most perfect unions I have ever known. She was married in her seventeenth year, and her husband was enteenth year, and her husband was only one year older. To them were born nine children, two of whom died in infancy, while seven—four sons and three daughters—reached manhood and womanhood and survive her, all of whom are Christians. In her death the writer loses his oldest sister, but, with her husband and children, can say that we do not mourn her death without hope, for it is written, "Blessed are the dead who die in the "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," and we have abundant evi-dence that she has fallen asleep in S. HOUSTON PROFFITT.

CHISM-KEY DEBATE. No. 2. BY C. H. SMITHSON.

The last proposition discussed was as follows: "The church of which J. W. Chism and his brethren are members (known as churches of Christ) originated with Alexander Campbell and his associates in the nineteenth century in the United States of America." Key affirmed; Chism denied.

On this proposition, Mr. Key opened by saying: "I am not here to make war on Chism or his people; I am not here to prove the scripturalness nor unscripturalness of the proposition; but I am here to show that Alexander Campbell started a church, and then to show that the church Chism is a member of is identical with it, and then to challenge him to show that the church of his faith existed before Campbell."

Mr. Key read from history and from clippings about the work of the Campbells, reading from the "Declaration and Address" of Thomas Campbell, showing that they were starting something.

Mr. Key had read continuously from modern writers who would call the people of past ages "Baptists," and Brother Chism had continued to challenge him to read from any contemporaneous writer who would call them "Baptists," or who would show their teachings to be Baptist. This he never did. So. Mr. Key concluded his first speech with a challenge to Chism to "back up and hitch on" to the apostolic church, evidently supposing that Chism would try to run a line of succession.

When Brother Chism came to reply, he stated that the history that had been read was about as accurate as could be given in so short a time, and said: "While Mr. Key is reading history, I will tell you something. I will just preach you a gospel sermon." He then gave the parable of the sower, and quoted Luke 8: 11: "Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God." He then reasoned that a seed had the life germ within itself, and, hence, this "word" had the life element in it; that a turnip seed was of such a nature that it would take hold on the soil, sap it up, and convert the soil into a turnip; that the soil in the parable is man's heart, his thinking faculty, and that the seed had the life germ, the idea, in it; that the word, containing the idea, the life germ, would take hold of the soil, man's heart, thoughts, and convert the soil into a Christian. He then showed that this was done on Pentecost. Peter preached, the people heard, believed, and were baptized, and immediately we read of "the church" for the first time in the New Testament where the disciples of Jesus were ever called the "church." He then went to Ephesus, showing that the word, the same seed, was planted there, and then the church at Ephesus. Again, the same seed was sown at Corinth, and "many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized," and shortly we read of the "church of God which is at Corinth." The same word was sown at New Lisbon, Pa., November 18, 1827, and was heard, believed, and obeyed, and so constituted the "church of God at New Lisbon." He said the same word was planted at Crystal Falls, Texas, some forty-four years ago, and that he heard it, believed it, and was baptized, with some eighteen others, and shortly there was the "church of God at Crystal Falls." He also said that the same seed sown would make the same kind of plant, for the reason that like always produces like. He then stated that some years ago scientists found some wheat hid away in an old temple in Egypt. This wheat had been there for three thousand years, these scientists said. A Mr. Johnson brought some of this wheat to America and planted it: and notwithstanding the seed was wheat, it produced Johnson grass. Of course even Mr. Key could see the absurdity of this. He then reasoned that seed does not partake of the nature of the person sowing it, but produces after the nature of the seed sown; and since the word sown was God's word, though sown by the Campbell's, it would produce children of God-Christians.

Mr. Key complained that Chism did not follow his history. He then took up the parable of the sower, barely mentioning it; then he jumped to the parable of the tares (Matt. 13: 38), and claimed that the good seed was not the word, but the children of the kingdom, and that the children of the kingdom must be continued to make more children of the kingdom.

Replying to this, Brother Chism showed that Jesus was here talking of the wheat and tares, not as sown, but after the seed had sprung up; and so the plant that had come from the seed sown-the word-were children of the kingdom, and the plants that had come from the seed the enemy had sown were children of the wicked one. Hence, the seed, "the word of God," when planted, would produce when it sprung up children of the kingdom; and when two or more of these were associated together in keeping the ordinances, it was a church of God or Christ.

Mr. Key demanded that Chism show a succession from the apostles to the present time, which challenge Brother Chism answered by an appeal to Dan. 8: 14, showing that the casting of the truth down to the ground

How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will turnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

was the pollution of the sanctuary. and that the cleansing would be but the reinstatement of that same truth. He then went into detail, showing that the vision began 473 B.C., and as each day was given as a symbol of a year. the time would be 1827 for the reinstatement of this truth. He then showed that this date was acknowledged to be the beginning in practice of what had been taught for several years past. He then showed that the seventy weeks of Dan. 9: 24-26 was to seal the prophecy and that it turned exactly a day for a year. He then showed the fall of pagan Rome to be 492 A.D. and the thirteen hundred and thirty-five days (years) dating from that ended at 1827, the blessing promised; that the papacy proper was set up in 537 A.D., and by 606 his look had become more stout than his fellows, and that the twelve hundred and ninety days from this event again brought us to 1827; and that from the same event the twelve hundred and sixty days (years) ended at 1798 (beginning of that year), the time when Burthier, the French general, bound the Pope, thus taking away his power, to consume it to the time of the end, and that it was during this twelve hundred and sixty years the Pope was to have full sway and was to scatter the power of the holy people, which he had done. He then showed that the work of the Campbells and their associates was to restore the ancient gospel, and that this was precisely what the cleansing of the sanctuary was to be. Hence, he "hitched on"—as he expressed it: "All right, Mr. Key, I have backed up and hitched on."

Mr. Key's only effort along this line was to complain that Chism was not debating logically and to try to show that this prophecy was of temporal Israel. But Brother Chism showed that Israel in the flesh had no promise left more than the Gentiles, since they rejected Christ (Jer. 19: 1-11). and that all these promises were on conditions which the Jew had never kept (Jer. 18: 7-12).

Brother Chism closed by showing that Key affirmed that Campbell originated the church, and showed that "originate" means to produce for the first time. He showed that Key's affirmation was not correct, but that Campbell was only using the gospel, the seed that produces children of the kingdom, and, hence, that the churches coming from this work were not original products, but were reproduced from the same old gospel seed, and, hence, were churches of God and of his Christ.

There is nothing which makes us love a man so much as praying for him.-William Law.

Now You Can End Superfluous Hair Like I Did Mine

AT ONCE FOR ALL

miliation of a disfiguring hairy growth on the face, neck, arms, and legs can possibly know what joy and happiness came over me when first I realized that at last all trace of superfluous hair had gone and my skin was clear, soft, and smooth, like that of a babe. And this after years of torture and disappointment with almost every depilatory, liquid, wax, paste, powder, and other methods, including razors, that I had ever heard of. Before I hit upon the simple, easy, harmless new way which has given me such amazing and lasting relief from my affliction, the ugly hair came back thicker and heavier than before. When I confided to some of my friends how I had at last solved the age-old problem of getting rid of superfluous hair—at once and for all—they felt it would be selfish not to share my secret with others. So I have decided to explain exactly how I succeeded to any one interested ABSOLTELY FREE if you will simply aend me your name and address with a stamp for sealed reply.

COUNTING THE COST.

BY H. C. FLEMING.

Nearly all people make mistakes in their temporal affairs because they do not count the cost correctly before beginning a work. (See Luke 14: 28-30.) And this counting is necessary in all our affairs, both temporal and spiritual.

Mistakes often bring fearful results. If any one of mature age will call to mind the mistakes he has made in temporal affairs and note the results, he will see that the cause of these failures is the lack of knowledge in counting the cost. In such cases, if there were some one who knew what the results would be and would give warning in time, how unwise it would be not to heed his advice! But the majority of men will form their own plans and try to execute them, and these plans always fail in a greater or less degree.

The yielding to temptation is a fruitful cause of these failures. Note how King Saul, by his own reasoning, forced himself to offer a sacrifice contrary to the law and thereby lost the kingdom. (1 Sam. 13: 12.) King David, because of pride, ordered the numbering of the people and thereby caused the death of seventy thousand. (2 Sam. 24: 15.) Again, he yielded to the temptation to commit adultery with the wife of Uriah the Hittite, and this caused him to have Uriah slain by the sword of Ammon. (Read 2 Sam. 11, 12.)

In our spiritual affairs we have the infallible word of God to guide us; but if we neglect to comply with it and substitute our own reasoning instead, notwithstanding we may be perfectly honest in our intentions, failure is sure to result—the loss of the soul; therefore, why do some men quote an isolated portion of the Scriptures and make a hobby to their own destruction and to all whom they mislead, riding it in a gallop all over the land, thereby causing confusion and the disruption of the body of Christ?

Such as this is the cause of infidelity. because the world makes no distinction between the errors of men and the truth revealed in the word of the Lord. "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ," (2 Thess. 1: 7, 8.)

Would it not be much better to count this cost, learn the will of God, and obey it?

Often when following our own plans we fail to count the full cost of the possibility of failure, and thereby bring upon ourselves and others the very thing we are trying to avoid; and this is true of the leaders of the world in trying to bring peace by the plans of men-they bring war instead.

All should take into account the wages of sin, which is death, and the cost of man's salvation from eternal death-the sacrifice of the Son of God.

"For consider him that endureth such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds." (Heb. 12: 3.)

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

- "I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)
- "We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)
- "I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pronounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)
- "We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criticism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)
- "I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Company. They cannot fail of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)
- "The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuft.)
- "Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)
- "I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)
- "The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartily recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)
- "A complete assortment of the Sundayschool literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly commend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)
- "As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethress literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)
- "It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)
- "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, sortgural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day, Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pullias.)
- "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Elam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)
- "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes, I compare them weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.)

REASONING TOGETHER.

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

"Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord." (Isa. 1: 18.) I often wonder if we really consent to such a procedure. Is it possible to so do now, or was that just a suggestion of and for the long ago? To suit most meetings supposed to be for reasoning together, it would be better stated: "Come now, and let us wrangle together, and get wrought up, and at last get mad and go away holding malice toward each other and talking about one another." I have often wondered why smart men could not always reason together instead of wrangling. Is it a lack of Christianity on the part of the ones come together? Is it not possible to so control self as to calmly present the reasons for the views taken? As a rule, the issue is seldom presented and closely discussed. Instead, foreign matter is introduced, self-justification is resorted to, and the exact point at issue is lost sight of, and the greater part know not the purpose of the coming together.

In Acts 15 is a clear case of reasoning together. Each one stated his reason, and then a cool, deliberate decision was reached by carefully considering the reasons presented. Another outstanding thing is that they spoke one at a time while the rest listened. So often several want to talk at once, and but few will listen till the other finishes. "All the multitude kept silence, and gave audience. . . . And after they had held their peace, James answered," etc. (Acts 15: 12, 13.)

Paul said he withstood Peter to the face. (Gal. 2: 11.) It was not a side caucus and a smoothing over of the matter in his presence, but it was a clear-cut statement of what he believed, and that to the face. There is no indication that either got mad or said hard things about the other after it was over. They just reasoned like Christians ought, considered things presented, and accepted the truth, regardless of what was formerly believed or practiced.

Brethren, do you think these things are recorded for us to follow? If so, I wonder if we will not make up our minds to so do, and see that we act it out in our coming together to reason. Do not forget to reason, not wrangle.

DOUTHITT-LOWRY DEBATE.

BY COLEMAN OVERBY.

This debate was held at "Skull-bone," in Gibson County, near Bradford, Tenn., between B. L. Douthitt and T. F. Lowry, of Parsons, Tenn., beginning on March 17 and continuing four days.

"Skull-bone" has been the scene of many conflicts between the Baptists and the church of Christ, and the church has emerged from each battle with the truth triumphant.

In January, the last, A. U. Nunnery met Brother Douthitt in a four-days' discussion on the origin of the church. The Baptists were not so well pleased, thinking the weakness in the man and not in the position held. This resulted in Mr. Lowry and Brother Douthitt signing propositions on the design of baptism and apostasy.

No attempt will be made to give the arguments. Some interesting observations relative to the audiences, speakers, and debates will be mentioned only.

The attendance was one hundred per cent throughout all the sessions and the attention was almost rapt. People came many miles to hear, and they heard all that each disputant had to say. Such attention will bear fruit to the glory of God.

Mr. Lowry has what the average person would call "earmarks" of a successful debater. (1) He has a "loud speaker" that seems to be both tough and elastic. (2) He has the ability not to see an argument or the inability to see one, however telling and effective. (3) He fights the air with his fists and stamps the floor vigorously throughout his speeches. (4) He makes a desperate effort while in the negative to introduce enough extraneous matter to keep his opponent from the issue.

Brother Douthitt speaks rapidly, is concise and pointed in argument, simple in his presentation of the truth, makes few arguments, stays with the issue, and presses the opposition strongly.

Honorable controversy is a great weapon the Almighty has placed in the hands of mortal man to expose error and exalt the truth. In this section of Tennessee, Lowry has had four debates within the last seven months. In his first discussions he conducted himself nicely, but in his last ones, especially this one, he said many things that approach blasphemy.

Be it said to Brother Douthitt's credit, he quitted himself like a man. The church was highly pleased with his work. The writer kept time for Brother Douthitt; A. U. Nunnery moderated for Mr. Lowry.

Several preachers were present, including Brethren C. B. Douthitt, J. L. Holland, J. R. Stockard, W. R. Hassell, R. L. Colley, and T. G. Curd.

In answering advertisers, please mention the Gospel Advocate.

For God esteems it one of his glories, that he brings good out of evil; and, therefore, it were but reason we should trust God to govern his own world as he pleases, and that we should patiently wait till the change cometh or the reason be discovered.—Jeremy Taylor.

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book —merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

The Christian Advocate, under the heading, "Protestantism on Its Knees," urges an observance of "the Lenten season," thus:

Protestantism throughout the United States should be on its knees during the Lenten season praying for its missionary enterprises. At a time when practically the whole world is opened to the advance of the kingdom of Christ many churches are afflicted with a strange apathy. The failure of many churches to meet their pledged support of missionary enterprises has overwhelmed mission boards with debts and brought the leaders in all denominations to pour out their souls in prayer for a revival in interest and a reconsecration to the great work of the Christian church. The prayerful study of the last days of the ministry of Christ on earth should awaken anew the zeal of his people to carry out the church's program of missions. The Lenten time makes us mindful of the Savior's offering of himself for the world and appeals to us to be of the same spirit.

Do inspired men teach us to be more prayerful "during the Lenten season" than at other seasons? Or did inspired men teach the primitive churches to observe "the Lenten time?"

All acknowledge that both questions must be answered in the negative. Where does the Christian Advocate get its observance of "the Lenten season" and "the Lenten time?" All authorities concur in testifying that Lent came from the same source from which originated sprinkling for baptism, and our Methodist friends are as much in courtesy bound to acknowledge their indebtedness to the gentleman from Rome for the one as for the other.

"Forbidding to marry," or the pretended celibacy of the clergy, is no more a mark of "the man of sin" and "the son of perdition" than "commanding to abstain from meats," or observing Lent. Sprinkling, Lent, instrumental music—all these things came from Rome, not Jerusalem. No man who continues steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine can acknowledge the pretended authority of the Occupant of the falsely so-called Fisherman's Chair. "A Western Preacher," writing on "Fools for Christ's Sake," in a recent issue of the Apostolic Review, says:

But it is not only the people of the world who will call us fools for our belief and practice, but oftentimes many of our religious neighbors will regard us as fools if we tell them that the Bible means just what it says on all things. To insist that one must obey all the commandments of Christ in order to be saved is sure to bring down upon us the scorn of some of them. To insist on an uncorrupted and unperverted gospel is a little bit more than some of them can stand. In conversation with some of them one time, I insisted that baptism is essential to salvation, and one of them came up and stuck his face close to mine and said: "You are crazy!" But that was the way the "religious" crowd in Paul's time talked of him. It is, of course, to be expected that such will speak evil of us; but it certainly is just a bit unexpected at times when those who are supposed to be true followers of Christ will talk to us in the same manner. But that frequently happens, especially if they are of the type who seem to think that to be church members is sufficient to save them eternally.

The very thing that makes a man acceptable in the sight of God is the thing that causes the world to regard him as a fanatic or fool. To please God, a man must lose all thoughts of self, all nations and ideas of his own, and entertain no preference on any subject, except a preference to do that which God prefers. He cannot take a position and then go through the Bible in search of passages that may be used to prove that his position is right; but, without taking any position of his own, he prayerfully and diligently searches the Bible to find what its position is, and, without quibble or question, with the implicit faith of a child, he cordially and heartily accepts what God says in the Bible.

When a man has this sort of faith, the world thinks he is a fool, but God thinks he is wise. As long as a man has a mind of his own he cannot have the mind of Christ. No man doubts that God, through Christ, commands "every one of you" to repent and be immersed. All who have no mind of their own, all who are willing to be regarded as fools for Christ's sake, immediately, without quibble or question, proceed to obedience. All who have minds of their own, who will not do what God commands unless they can see the sense in it and unless they prefer to so do, notwithstanding their loud "Lord, Lords," displease and disobey God by ignoring what he has commanded. Their energetic labors, their schemes and plans, all their great exertions and endeavors, are lost to them and bring them no reward. "In vain do they worship me," saith the Lord, "teaching as their doctrines the precepts of men."

There is something distasteful and uncandid in the discussion of "psallo" by our transgressive brethren. At the same time their debater is endeavoring to prove that the word means "with or without" an instrument, all of them know, and the debater knows, that, at the very time the word was used by inspired men, the churches sang, never played, and that, six centuries later, the Pope of Rome introduced the first organ. The meaning of "psallo" can be learned from what the people did when it was used. But our erring brethren have a mind of their own and are going to have their "liberty" to do as they please. The introduction of the organ is not the seat of their trouble. In their attitude to God and to his word is where the trouble lies.

In an article in the Methodist Advocate, entitled "Calling the Previous Question on Unification," in which he opposes the instruction of delegates and urges that delegates be sent to Conference uninstructed, Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon says:

There is yet a more serious matter. In certain sections of the church, where the bishops in charge are opposed to unification, congregations, made up of men and women and little children of tender age, are being called upon to vote on the question of unification! Now, the supreme lawmaking body of the church, the General Conference, by an overwhelming majority, refused to allow this method of voting and directed that the orderly and constitutional processes of the church be followed. I solemnly ask: "What are we to expect from the rank and file of our people when men in authority ignore and disregard the acts of the General Conference?" This also is a new thing in Southern Methodism.

A Quarterly Conference or a District Conference may do this new and unheard-of thing and instruct a delegate how he shall vote; but it has no power to bind him, and there is no law in our Discipline which would compel any man to vote against his judgment and contrary to the promptings of the Holy Spirit.

Without discussing the much-debated question of "unification" between Methodists, we simply wish to call attention to the fact that the Bishop acknowledges "the General Conference" to be "the supreme lawmaking body" of the Methodist Church. There is something strange in men's going to the Bible to prove that things which originated in "the General Conference," "the supreme lawmaking body," came from God. Anything that came from God certainly did not come from the General Conference. Anything that comes from the General Conference certainly does not come from God. All that came from God is revealed in God's word. God is the only Lawmaker and Ruler. God is not the maker of laws not revealed in his word.

When people get right with God, they automatically get right with all children of God. Can a man be right with God and wrong with a child of God? The same thing that makes a man a child of God makes him a brother to all of God's children. If Methodists would become united with God by discarding "the General Conference" as "the supreme lawmaking body" and by taking only the Word of God as their guide, they would automatically become united as Christians, and, instead of long and bitter debate over a vote on "unification," they would give "diligence to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

The Bishop says: "I solemnly ask: What are we to expect from the rank and file of our people when men in authority ignore and disregard the acts of the General Conference?" May I solemnly ask: "What are we to expect" when men who claim to be preachers of the gospel "ignore and disregard" the word of God? "What are we to expect" when they preach things for which they can find no authority in the word of God? "What are we to expect" when they refuse to preach things that are found in the word of God? We prefer the Bible to "the General Conference;" and if we can stay right with God, we have no fear of discord with any of God's people. All "the promptings of the Holy Spirit" are contained in the Bible. The Holy Spirit speaks to men only through the Word, only through the Holy Scriptures. There is no communication from God to man, no "promptings of the Holy Spirit," except what can be found in the Bible. The Holy Scriptures contain a full, complete, and perfect revelation of God's will to man. Woe to the man who adds thereto or diminishes from it!

The "judgment" of any man is as far from "the promptings of the Holy Spirit," contained in the words of the Spirit, as the heavens are far from the earth. Men had better not risk their own "judgment" on sacred concerns. Let them go to the Bible in search of "the promptings of the Holy Spirit."

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

CAN THE SPIRIT OF A CHILD OF GOD SIN? BY R. L. WHITESIDE.

Some Baptist debaters contend that the regenerated spirit never sins; that all sins committed by a child of God are of the flesh. They would thus free the spirit from all blame and guilt. This effort at argument is made in the interest of the doctrine of the impossibility of apostasy. Just how the spirit can remain pure and guiltless while the body murders and engages in debauchery has never been satisfactorily explained. Such an idea is repugnant to common sense and contrary to the teaching of the Bible. The doctrine implies that the spirit, full of love for the enemy, seeks to do him good, while the body, full of hate, murders him; that the spirit, pure and holy, can seek the conversion and salvation of a person, while the body, full of lust, seduces and accomplishes the moral ruin of the same person. If a man who believes such did not show decided traces of sanity along other lines, we would believe that he should be locked in a padded cell where he could do neither himself nor another any harm.

The spirit is the responsible part of man. It is that which lifts him above the animal and makes him a responsible being. Just how the spirit of a sinner is responsible for what he does and the spirit of a Christian is not responsible for what he does is beyond comprehension. But suppose we admit, for argument's sake, that every sin committed by a child of God originates in the appetites and passions of the flesh, that by no means frees the spirit from responsibility and guilt. God makes the inner man responsible for what the body does. "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey the lusts thereof." (Rom. 6: 12.) Here Paul addresses the intelligent, responsible part of man, the spirit. To that spirit he gives a charge over the body: "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body." If, then, the spirit allows sin to reign in the body, the spirit disobeys God, and, therefore, sins. The language shows plainly that when the spirit yields and allows the body to sin, the spirit is obeying the lusts of the body instead of God. Can any one think for a moment that the spirit which obeys the lusts of the flesh instead of God can be guiltless?

The desire for certain things may grow out of the fleshly propensities, but the purpose to gratify that desire is formed in the heart. Hence, Jesus said: "Every one that looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery already with her in his heart." (Matt. 5: 28.) (Hence, though there be no overt act of the body, the heart is defiled by the thought. The sin of the heart comes first. If the Bible said nothing on this point, any thoughtful person would recognize this truth. But hear Jesus further: "For out of the heart come forth evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, railings: these are the things which defile the man." (Matt. 15: 19, 20.) "For from within, out of the heart of men, evil thoughts proceed, fornications, thefts, murders, adulteries, covetings, wickednesses, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, railing, pride, foolishness: all these evil things proceed from within, and defile the man." (Mark

7: 21-23.) Can anything be plainer? Can any one be so blinded by falsehood as to believe that all these abominable crimes, which Jesus says proceed from the heart, defile only the body-that they originate in and proceed from the heart, the spirit, and yet the spirit remains pure and holy and free from guilt or blame? Add to the foregoing what is said in James 2: 1-4: "My brethren, . . . do ye not make distinctions among yourselves, and become judges with evil thoughts?" Does the body or the spirit do the thinking? Settle this in your mind, and you will have no trouble in determining whether the spirit sins.

Adam was a son of God (Luke 3: 38), and yet he sinned and fell. The Baptists bear witness to the fact that his spirit sinned. But, contrary to their plea that the spirit of a child of God cannot sin, these advocates of the impossibility of apostasy argue that Adam's body and spirit became totally depraved by his sin, and that this depravity of body and spirit passed to all his posterity. And thus these advocates of the impossibility of apostasy, these who claim that the spirit of a child of God cannot sin, base their doctrine of the depravity of the body and spirit on this assumed universal apostasy. Can anything be more contradictory?

The body is the instrument through which the spirit acts either for good or bad. Only through the body may the spirit while tabernacling here manifest itself. The members of the body are not responsible, but they may be used by the spirit as instruments of either sin or rightecusness. "For as ye presented your members as servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity, even so now present your members as servants to righteousness unto sanctification." (Rom. 6: 19.) Herein is the spirit's responsibility; and in the way it uses these members of the body is seen either its glory or its shame; and this use determines the spirit's standing with God. Hence, Paul affirms: "For if ye live after the flesh, ye must die; but if by the spirit ye put to death the deeds of the body, ye shall live." (Rom. 8: 13.) It would be needless to say to a thoughtful person that Paul does not here refer to the death of the body, for that will die, no matter how you live. Nor does he affirm that the spirit of an alien sinner will die if he walks after the flesh, for the spirit of the alien sinner is already dead. He here speaks of the spirit of the child of God; that will die if it allows the flesh to dominate.

"Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body." (1 Cor. 6: 18.) This is a striking passage when allowed to speak in its own language, though few passages have been more abused. It teaches that the body is not the responsible agent in sin-"Every sin that a man doeth is without the body." "Without the body," "exterior to the body," "beyond the body." See the lexicons on the Greek adverb "ektos," here used with the force of a preposition. Look at different translations. I am writing this away from my books, and cannot quote them. I heard a good brother quote Paul thus: "Every sin that a man doeth is without the body but the sin of fornication." He then added: "Here Paul says that fornication is the only sin of the body." I was amazed. Paul said no such thing. Read again what Paul said. Paul's doctrine is that, while every sin that we commit comes from the spirit and not the body, as Jesus also taught, there are some sins (and he here mentions specially the sin of fornication) that are against the body-that is, they are hurtful to the body. While all sins defile the spirit, there are some sins that hurt the body. The body is not the responsible part of man in sin, but such sins as fornication, drunkenness. etc., are hurtful to the body.

When you "blow your own horn," you make music that disgusts all sensible people.

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 15.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

THE WORK OF PAUL AND APOLLOS. (Verses 5-9.)

Verse 5. Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos? Their carnality or worldly-mindedness manifested itself in selecting and following these leaders instead of following Christ. One party followed Paul and another followed Apollos. The apostle answers his own questions, "Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos?" by saying, ministers by whom ye believed. That is, we are only God's agents or servants through whose teaching you believed on Christ. We, like yourselves, are only servants, and the Lord is the Master of all. As the Lord gave to every man. That is, to every Christian man. All Christians have both the power and authority to lead people to Christ, as well as Paul and Apollos. Neither Paul nor Apollos was the author of their faith; they were only ministerial helpers of it. They were God's inspired ministers, giving out to their hearers as God gave it to them; therefore, you ought not factiously to boast of their gifts, nor to create parties on that account. Observe: (1) That the ministry of the word is the instituted or ordained means and instrumental cause which God has appointed for working faith in the hearts of men. (2) That God has furnished his ministers with a variety of gifts and abilities (but they must cultivate and develop them), all which he makes use of in order to that end. (3) That, therefore, the ministers of Christ ought neither to be deified nor nullified, neither to be cried up nor trodden down. They are not efficient causes, but only instrumental means of faith. Render, therefore, unto God the glory of the author, and unto the ministers the honor of the instrument or agent-servant.

6. I have planted, etc. That is, Paul planted the spiritual seed, the word of God (Luke 8: 11), and Apollos watered or cultivated the spiritual plant which had sprung from the spiritual seed planted by Paul; but God gave the spiritual growth, the seed its vitality and the plant its life. God is the great cause, and Paul and Apollos only means or agents. I planted. That is, I first preached the gospel among you, and first instructed you in the principles of Christ. I converted you to Christ, and after me came Apollos, and watered or cultivated the plant, the church, but it was God that caused the seed which I sowed to germinate, and the plant which Apollos watered to grow and increase. Observe: (1) That it is an act and favor in God to send out ministers to plant the seed of the kingdom among a people who never before heard it, (2) That it is an act and further favor in God to follow a people with a succession of ministers in order to the cultivation of the plant which came from the seed formerly sown among them. (3) That God to-day sends both the seed sower and the plant cultivator by convincing each of his duty through the teaching and influence of the gospel. (4) That all that ministers can do is but to plant and cultivate. They can neither give increase nor procure the success of their ministerial endeavors. God's agents should thank him that he does not require the success of their labors at their hands. Diligence and endeavor is ours, but the blessing and success is God's, He will never blame his agents for not doing the work he has reserved to and for himself.

7. So then neither is he that planteth anything, etc. This is said after the manner of the Easterns, who represent things comparatively small as nothing. Paul, the planter, and Apollos, the cultivator, were as nothing. God that giveth the increase is all in all. Without him neither the planting nor the cultivating avails. power is all from God, who gives life and growth to both the seed and plant. The meaning is, neither he that planteth nor he that watereth is to be esteemed as anything of themselves alone, but the glory of all is to be ascribed to God who giveth the increase. They may have the most excellent gifts, yet they cannot, with themselves, make the word they preach produce the fruit. The "increase" belongs to God.

8. He that planteth and he that watereth are one. This is another argument against division. Though their labors are different, yet they are both employed in one general work-namely, the saving of souls. As servants, their work is different, but kindred, and each will be rewarded as a servant, and according to his own labor. Not according to his success, but according to his faithfulness. He who labors much in faithfulness, though with small success, will receive a great reward. All this reasoning has yet the same force. Spiritual teachers are still God's instruments, and as entirely dependent as ever on God's blessing to give the increase to their labors. Without this, they are nothing. With it, their part is so small that they hardly deserve to be mentioned. May the hearts and hands of God's servants become more united and retain a due sense of the honor God bestows upon them in employing them, and may they faithfully labor, not as for themselves, but for the great Proprietor of all, till the day comes when he will reward them in full proportion to their fidelity and diligence. Paul and Apollos were one in their design and scope, doctrine and practice, in the aim and end of their preaching; therefore, the division should not exist over them. Although there is a variety and diversity in the gifts of the ministers of Christ, yet, the intent and design of their ministry being one, they ought to agree as one. They should be one in doctrine and practice, one in love and affection, aiming at one and the same mark-namely, the glory of God and men's salvation-as they are one in office, institution, and end. Each Christian will receive "his own reward," not his brother's reward. The measure and rule of this reward is, "according to his own labor," and not according to his success; according to his faithfulness and industry, and not according to the fruit of his ministry. If he labors faithfully, God will reward him proportionally, though few or none have believed and embraced his teaching.

9. For we are laborers together with God ["God's fellow workers"-A. R. V.l. Paul and Apollos were God's laborers, and fellow laborers with each other. Ye are God's husbandry. This is the sum of what went before. It is a comprehensive word, taking in both a field, a garden, and a vineyard, or any piece of ground under cultivation. The Jewish nation is called "God's vineyard." (Isa. 5: 1, 2.) The church at Corinth was God's field in which Paul and Apollos labored. Ye are God's building. The figure is now changed. The church at Corinth, reared through the labors of Paul and Apollos, is "God's building." This is still an argument against division. Paul and Apollos are God's builders, and the church at Corinth is the building they put up. This is a spiritual building. The thought is, these two men are only God's employees, and how can each of these have a party when they themselves are only employees of God? Observe the honorable title put upon the ministers of God: they are "laborers" or workers "together with God." There is no success without God. They must labor with him, not without him. They labor with him when they follow his directions revealed in the gospel of Christ, and without him when they fail to follow these directions. To the degree that one departs from these directions, to that degree does he labor without God. They work only by an external application of the ministry of the word and the means of grace to the souls of men. They are under-laborers with God, and he honors them by working by, through, and with them for the conversion of men. We should not overlook the honorable relation in which the church stands to God. The church is composed of the people of God, and these constitute his "husbandry," his "building." A building is not of itself, nor is a field clothed with goodly fruit of itself. The phrase implies dominion and absolute sovereignty. The master is the orderer of the house, and the husbandman the disposer of his ground. It denotes propriety and interest; that we are not our own, but God's. The house is the owner's, not its own.

THEIR DOOM IS FIXED.

BY S. H. HALL.

One of the most needed things to-day is to get people to have a living consciousness of God. Our Lord declares that life eternal is to know God and Jesus Christ, whom he sent into the world. (See John 17: 3.) We should come to know, undoubtingly, the fact that Jehovah cannot be overridden, that he cannot be outdone and his purposes defeated by feeble man. In Heb. 4: 12 we have the following words from Goodspeed's translation: "No being created can escape God's sight, but everything is bare and helpless before the eyes of him with whom we have to reckon."

There is a statement in Second Thessalonians that all should know and before which they should tremble: "With all deceit of unrighteousness for them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God sendeth them a working of error, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be judged who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." (2 Thess. 2: 10-12.) Anything is unrighteous and devilish that, in any way, is in opposition to the truth. Much religion that we have in the world is very unrighteous because it continuously stands in opposition to some truth. You find people even taking pleasure in opposing the truth. They are not conscious of the fact, however, that they are opposing the truth. They are deluded, and are so because God has willed that such should be deluded.

But who are these God-deluded souls? They are those who "refuse to love the truth." It is a dangerous thing to do. That soul who coolly and deliberately refuses to love the truth, and persists in so doing until he becomes fixed in such an attitude toward the truth, is doomed to damnation. He will not cease to be religious; he may become more and more zealous in his religious activities; but God has willed that all such should fall under "strong delusion," believe a lie instead of the truth they refuse to love, and be damned. There is no getting around this. God is. It is his will that such shall fall absolute captives to error. Many such we have in this old world.

How sorely we need to admonish the people that the only safety there is for us is to love the truth with all our being and let our meat and drink daily be to take it all, without addition, subtraction, or minimization. Jehevah puts his arms about such a soul and guards such against error and leads him from one degree of light and knowledge to greater light and knowledge. If we continue in what word of his we know, we have the assurance that we are indeed his disciples, and the truth we will come to know more and more and be made free by it. (See John 8: 31, 32.) Jehovah tells us in Isa. 66: 2: "But to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and that trembleth at my word." It is also declared that Jehovah meets those who remember him in his ways. Get into the truth and stay there, and our God you will always have to bless and protect you. How timely to quote here the following words from Second John: "Whosoever goeth onward and abideth not in the teaching of Christ, hath not God: he that abideth in the teaching, the same hath both the Father and the Son!" (Verse 9.)

Have you ever heard church members say nice, sweet things about teachers of error and knock faithful ministers of the gospel? I think I have heard such and seen such along life's way. I have seen a few preachers in life that made baptism almost a hobby, I think. I have seen a few others who seemed to emphasize another command to the neglect of others. But when you hear a church member knock the man who preaches often on baptism, and saying such nice, sweet things about preachers who try, with all their might, to tear baptism out of the Bible and actually destroy it from the minds and hearts of the people, put it down that that church member is in danger. Which is the greater sinner—the one who emphasizes a command too much or the one who strives to destroy our Lord's blood-sealed commands? You could not prove the former a sinner at all-you might prove that he is a bit lacking in wisdom-but the latter you know to be a downright rebel before God. When church members hate the former and praise the latter, it goes to show that, even as it was in the days of the apostles, people come among us who are not of us. And so soon as they find they cannot boss and have their way by suppressing the truth and have the teaching so done as to tickle their itching ears, they leave us; and the sooner, the better. "They went out from us, but they were not of us." (1 John 2: 19.)

Let it be remembered that the church of Christ has no mission here on earth, if you take from her the right to stand boldly, fearlessly, and one hundred per cent uncompromisingly for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. We have plenty of religious orders to defend the doctrines of men. We have plenty to make war on certain commands and portions of the Bible. But it is the duty and mission of the church of our Lord to "contend"—yes, "contend" is the word—for every word of our Lord and let not one word be taken from the plan of salvation. A Methodist once accused me of preaching too much on baptism. My answer was: "Perhaps so, but it is due to the fact that I have to do my part of the preaching on baptism and yours, too, as well as that of lots of others who are trying to tear it out of the Book." If the enemy would try to tear faith out as they do baptism, I think they would find loyal ministers there to see that it is not moved. And such an effort would necessitate more preaching on this command.

Let us love the truth—every bit of it. So long as we do this, God will take care of us. But if you consciously refuse to love a command our Lord has given, you are doomed to damnation.

IN MEMORIAM.

(Written by Mrs. S. M. Cook, of Charleston, Miss., in memory of Brother M. C. Cayce, who departed this life on April 19, 1922.)

Our thoughts keep turning back
To the memory of one so dear,
Who winged his flight to God
In the springtime of the year.

To know him was to love him, So much like the Christ was he, Seeking to save and serve others, That they the light might see.

He measured up to the standard Of denying himself for his Lord, Leaving love, home, and business, To go and preach the word.

And having left all for his Master, We know that a hundredfold Of joy in Christ he received in this life, And in heaven joys untold.

So each year as the spring in her beauty comes We'll remember our brother and friend, And we'll try to live and serve as he did, And so receive a crown at the end.

SUGGESTIONS.

BY H. C. DENSON.

Just recently it was my pleasure to hear Brother S. H. Hall preach at the Ninth and Russell Streets church of Christ. I was greatly impressed with the work this church is doing. Many things done by these faithful Christians are worthy of commendation, but there is one practice of theirs in particular I wish to commend.

Several sisters of this congregation make regular visits to the hospitals of the city on a certain day of each week, carrying fruit and flowers to sick members of the body of Christ and others who need and appreciate such visits. I know this practice of pure and undefiled religion has its effect.

Now, it frequently happens that Christians from outside the city come to these hospitals and remain for days and even weeks, and the matter never becomes known to Christians in Nashville who would gladly visit them.

I suggest that when such persons are sent to the hospitals in this city, that some one who knows of this inform the Gospel Advocate office. Then those Christians in the city who desire to visit and comfort the sick can secure the desired information from the Advocate office.

I suggest that other congregations in Nashville follow the example of the Ninth and Russell Streets Church. Send out a committee of your members to make regular visits to the hospitals and homes where the sick, widows, and orphans are waiting for help and consolation. Such practice among all the Nashville churches would greatly enlarge the borders of the kingdom. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." (James 1: 27.)

WASHINGTON'S REGARD FOR HIS MOTHER.

Gen. George Washington when quite young was about to go to sea as a midshipman. Everything was arranged, the vessel lay opposite his father's house, the little boat had come on shore to take him off, and his whole heart was bent on going. After his trunk had been carried down to the boat, he went to bid his mother farewell, and saw the tears bursting from her eyes. However, he said nothing to her; but he saw that his mother would be distressed if he went, and perhaps never be happy again. He just turned round to the servant and said: "Go and tell them to fetch my trunk back. I will not go away to break my mother's heart." His mother was struck with his decision, and she said to him: "George, God has promised to bless the children that honor their parents, and I believe he will bless you."—Selected.

The man who labors to please God is sure to be happy in this life and in the life to come.

DAVID LIPSCOMB ON ORGANIZATION.

(Gospel Advocate, March 24, 1910.)

All meetings of churches or officers of churches to combine more power than a single church possesses is wrong. God's power is in God's churches. He is with them to bless and strengthen their work when they are faithful to him. A Christian, one or more, may visit a church with or without an invitation and seek to stir them up to a faithful discharge of their duties. But for one or more to direct what and how all the churches shall work, or to take charge of their men and money and use it, is to assume the authority God has given to each church. Each one needs the work of distributing and using its funds as well as in giving them.

WHO IS A GOSPEL SUBJECT?

BY JOHN T. LEWIS.

This is my fourth article on this subject. My only object in writing on this subject is to get the truth before the readers of the Gospel Advocate.

Brother C. E. Holt says in the Advocate of December 11 that he is sure I have raised a "false alarm." Yet Brother Holt has made five labored efforts to answer my three previous "alarms." I have not had the pleasure of meeting Brother Holt since I turned in the first "false alarm;" therefore, I do not know how he looks or feels over this matter. I have seen a few firemen who looked awfully worried and mightily disgusted after making a long run to answer a "false alarm." But I cannot see how calling attention to a human practice in a matter in which the destiny of human beings is involved can be a "false alarm."

Brother Holt says: "There is only one disqualifying element, and that is the lack of faith on the part of the individual." Then he asked the question: "Who is able to say when a little boy or girl is old enough to believe the gospel?" I thought Brother Holt answered this question himself in the following statement: "A sweet little boy of six summers, on his way home from Sunday school, said to his mother: 'Mamma, I want to do everything that Jesus wants me to do.' Does he believe in Jesus? I could wish that all adult Christians had such simple and beautiful faith as this little child. Who would forbid the children to come to Jesus? Thank the Lord for a gospel that takes care of the children." Now, if faith is the only qualifying element, and if Brother Holt had not found "such simple and beautiful faith as this little child" had, in "all adult Christians," I cannot see why the little fellow is not a gospel subject, and, if a gospel subject, why the age limit would not be fixed at "six summers." But Brother Holt says: "I did not mean for it to be thus taken, and no one except Brother Lewis so far as I have learned, has so misunderstood me." I am sorry I misunderstood you, Brother Holt. Excuse my obtuseness.

Under the old law children became responsible to God for their sins and began to pay the "atonement money" at the age of twenty. "Every one that passeth over unto them that are numbered, from twenty years old and upward, shall give the offering of Jehovah. The rich shall not give more, and the poor shall not give less, than the half shekel, when they give the offering of Jehovah, to make atonement for your souls. And thou shalt take the atonement money from the children of Israel, and shalt appoint it for the service of the tent of meeting; that it may be a memorial for the children of Israel before Jehovah, to make atonement for your souls." (Ex. 30: 14-16.)

Under the New Testament the only qualifying statement is "men and women." I know whenever boys and girls get to where they may be thus designated they are gospel subjects. This statement is not worth the time it will take you to read it, if it is not the truth.

But I must sum up my arguments and Brother Holt's answers. "Then opened he their mind, that they might understand the scriptures; and he said unto them, Thus it is written, that the Christ should suffer, and rise again from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name unto all the nations, beginning from Jerusalem." (Luke 24: 45-47.) The Holy Spirit, through Peter, began this teaching thus: "And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 38.) Brother Holt answers these scriptures thus: "Who said that sin is a qualification for baptism? Jesus was not a sinner, and he was baptized." If Brother Holt had been present when Jesus gave the commission, and asked his question, and also suggested to Christ that he was not a sinner and had been baptized, maybe Christ would have changed the commission so as to include innocent children; but since the change was not made at the beginning, Brother Holt will have to excuse me for objecting to the change being made now.

Again, Christ said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) Brother Holt's explanation of this scripture is as follows: "But Brother Lewis wants to know from what children are saved, children who have not actually committed sins. The answer to this question is easy, and it seems that all who have studied the divine word intelligently could give the answer thereto. First, the child is saved from baneful and destructive influences of the world by being translated into "the kingdom of God." Here again I am confronted with my stupidity. I have never "studied the divine word intelligently" enough to understand how baptizing innocent children will save them "from baneful and destructive influences of the world by translating them into the kingdom of God." However, I do not hold Brother Holt responsible for my ignorance on this subject.

"But many of them that heard the word believed: and the number of men came to be about five thousand." (Acts 4: 4.) "And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women." (Acts 5: 14.) "But Saul laid waste the church, entering into every house, and dragging men and women committed them to prison." (Acts 8: 3.) "But when they believed Philip preaching good tidings concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." (Acts 8: 12.) "But Saul, yet breathing threatening and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest, and asked of him letters to Damascus unto the synagogues, that if he found any that were of the way, whether men or women, he might bring them to Jerusalem." (Acts 9: 1, 2.) If these scriptures teach anything, they teach that the Lord "added men and women" to the church in New Testament times; they teach that "men and women were bap-tized" in New Testament times; that the Jerusalem church was made up of "men and women;" that all who were "of the way" in Paul's day were "men and women." Here is where I leave the matter. Brother Holt, speaking of my teaching, says: "The tendency of which is to exalt human opinion above faith and throw the whole system of redemption into a state of uncertainty and doubt." I cannot understand how teaching just what Jesus Christ and the apostles taught "exalts human opinion" or throws anything into "doubt and uncertainty." It may be that when I shall have "studied the divine word intelligently" I will understand this matter better.

Brother Holt says: "If we are guided solely by the teaching of the New Testament in our study of this subject, the whole matter becomes easy to understand as to who are proper subjects of baptism and as to the purpose or design thereof." He then submits the following as his proof: "Brother John Fry, of Columbia, Tenn., superintendent of the Tennessee Orphan Home, says that when children in the Home reach the age of twelve years they are taken into the church—that is, they are permitted to confess their faith in Christ and submit to baptism. If children in the Home can render acceptable obedience to the gospel at the age of twelve years, it would seem that other children might, when properly taught, do the same. But why fix the age at twelve years? Some children a few weeks younger than twelve years might, with perfect safety, be allowed to become citizens of Christ's kingdom on earth."

Again, Brother . Holt says: "In this connection I am reminded of a statement from the peerless preacher, Brother T. B. Larimore. I have heard him say more than once that he (Brother Larimore) could have been scripturally baptized at the tender age of seven years. Of course he was not baptized at that early age, but he said he could have been. I could not doubt this great man's word in regard to such a grave and important a matter." Now, Brother Holt is an old, experienced debater, and I am sure he does not expect me to answer all his arguments; so I will pass up these two ad hominem arguments and get back on solid ground—"the divine word."

"We who died to sin, how shall we any longer live therein? Or are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? We were buried therefore with him through baptism into death." (Rom. 6: 2-4.) If this teaches anything, it teaches that one must first die to sin before he can be buried with Christ "through baptism into death." Therefore, it precludes a possibility of scripturally baptizing an innocent child. Brother Holt says if this position is correct, I should tell what "we are to do with the thousands in our congregations who were baptized before they reached the required age, before they became eligible to a place in the kingdom." Now, I submit that that job belongs to those preachers who have been in "the cradles and the nurseries"—not to Lewis.

To be fair with Brother Holt and let him have the last word in this discussion, I will close with his parable, which, I think, barring the "Arabian Nights," is the richest thing I ever read. The parable follows: "I was reared in the country, and in the early winter we would kill hogs with which to make our meat for the following year. We did not wait for the meat to spoil before applying salt to it. We salted the meat to save it, and did not wait for it to be spoiled by flies and vermin before doing so. Did we do the proper thing? Upon the same principle let us do our best to save the children. Jesus said: 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.'"

Now, Brother Holt, all I mean by saying that your parable is funny to me is because you want us to do all we can to save what Jesus Christ says, "for of such is the kingdom of God;" and I do not see how either salt or water can do that.

WHY I BELIEVE THE BIBLE. BY MARIE M'CONNELL.

Much has been said in the last few years by "higher critics," so-called, concerning the Bible. It seems fitting, therefore, that those who accept the Bible should set forth their reasons for this faith, inasmuch as the Book commands: "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you." (1 Pet. 3: 15.) The foundation of our Christian hope lies in the Bible. Therefore, it is up to us to prove that the Bible is true, if we would have others believe that our hope is not a delusion. If asked why I believe the Bible to be true, and, consequently, the word of God, I would give the following reasons:

1. I believe the Bible is true because of its enduring qualities—because it lives. It is the oldest book in the world. It was begun by Moses and completed, sixteen centuries later, by John. It is a complete record of time and eternity. It treats of things from the "beginning" of the world and reaches into the hereafter. Man-made books become obsolete, but the Bible endureth forever. It is so full of life and vitality that it imparts life to other books. Most literature which has survived any considerable length of time is based upon the Bible. "Paradise Lost" and "The Pilgrim's Progress" are examples of the books which live because they draw their inspiration from the Bible, which is the only book that never becomes dull from re-reading. Truth never dies—the Bible lives always. This is strong proof of its veracity.

- 2. I believe the Bible is true because of its influence upon those with whom it comes in contact. It is well adapted to human nature. It uplifts, civilizes, and sanctifies man. It has placed its imprint upon our literature and our laws. Even our calendars point back to the year of the birth of the Bible's foremost character. Where the Bible is unknown, ignorance and superstition prevail. Without the Bible, we know neither our origin nor our destiny. Could a falsehood enlighten mankind as the Bible has? If so, our moral ideas are mistaken ones, and falsehoods are the greatest and most worth-while things in the world. But no! That is absurd, and we know that the Bible is true.
- 3. Despite the fact that the Bible was written by different men at different places in different ages, it contains no contradictions. This is marvelous, but true. There have been some seeming contradictions, but, under examination, they have been harmonized. The men who wrote the books of the Bible were in a position to know whether they were inspired or not. These men believed that what they wrote was true so strongly as to suffer persecution rather than not write it. They were so confident that what they wrote was true that they did not even try to harmonize it with other portions of the Bible. This is evidence that there is no imposture about the Bible.
- 4. If God is the author of the Bible, it is true, because his word is true. Good men, bad men, Satan, angels, or God are the authors of the Bible. Good men or angels are not its authors, because, if they had been, they would not have ascribed it to God, thereby telling a lie. Bad men or Satan are not its authors, because they would not have condemned sin and upheld righteousness. In fact, the sublime thoughts of the Bible could not have originated in evil, or even human, minds. Therefore, by eliminating all other possible authors, we perceive that God is the author of the Bible; hence, it is true.
- 5. If we are to take the testimony of the really great men of the ages, as we do on other subjects, we will have to admit that the Bible is true, because all our great scholars have expressed their belief in the Bible.
- 6. The Bible has been repudiated by infidels through all the ages, but no evidence of its falseness has been produced. It has stood firm through all tests. Surely, if the Bible were not true, the world would have discovered it by this time. For every effect there must be an adequate cause. Then, why has the Bible continued to be regarded as true? It must be because it is true.
- 7. I believe the Bible is true because all of its prophecies have been, or are being, fulfilled. The prophecies regarding the desolation of Babylon, the outcast state of the Jews, the papal claims, and the "waxing worse and worse of evil men" are being fulfilled before our very eyes. This proves the Bible is true.
- 8. I feel fully assured that the Bible is true; but if it were not, those who believe it are happier in this life and just as safe in death as the infidel. If it is true, as I have proved, the infidel is lost, while we are saved. So, either way, those who believe the Bible are on the safe side.

BROTHER McQUIDDY'S BOOK.

"The Profitable Word" contains a choice selection of the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, editor and publisher of the Gospel Advocate for over forty years, carefully compiled by A. B. Lipscomb. It is a gem and contains some of the best thoughts of a great mind. The book contains 196 pages, and is neatly bound in silk and stamped in gold and white metal. Now ready. Send $1.50 and get a copy.

OUR MESSAGES

Your time belongs to the Lord.

We carry an excellent line of good books.

Some people live from one newspaper to another.

People avoid repenting by diverting their minds.

J. L. Hines preached at Adams, Tenn., last Sunday.

There is no triangle in Christ's marriage with his bride.

H. Leo Boles preached at Murfreesboro, Tenn., last Sunday.

C. M. Pullias is in a splendid meeting at Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

E. A. Elam preached at Chapel Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

F. B. Srygley preached at Pilcher Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

H. T. King preached at Belmont Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. There was one baptism.

Hugh H. Miller preached at Ashland City, Tenn., last Lord's day.

J. D. Boyd preached at Cottontown, near Gallatin, Tenn., last Lord's day.

Lee Jackson, Oakland, Miss., April 16: "John E. Dunn is preaching in the meetinghouse in Charleston, Miss."

S. H. Hall preached at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day. There were two good audiences and five confessions,

H. S. Lipscomb preached at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. There was one restoration.

Lytton Alley preached for the congregation worshiping at Twenty-second Avenue, North, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. There was one baptism.

A. O. Colley, Greenville, Texas, April 17: "Our work with the church at Greenville and the Home is starting off with much interest. We are to begin a meeting with home forces on April 26."

If you wish a complete refutation of the doctrine of R. H. Boll, order the review of Boll's doctrine by Whiteside and Nichol from Mrs. C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas. Fifty cents per copy.

A. B. Lipscomb is in a splendid meeting at Eighth Avenue, North, this city. The meeting began last Lord's day. Preaching every night at 7:30 o'clock. W. G. Klingman is leading the song service.

T. Q. Martin, of St. Marys, W. Va., began a meeting at Reid Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. Prof. B. H. Murphy, of David Lipscomb College, is leading the singing. Services every night at a quarter to eight o'clock.

J. E. Green, Scottsville, Ky., April 15: "I. A. Douthitt closed a meeting here last night. It resulted in three baptisms, one restoration, and the church greatly encouraged and edified. I would not think of doing without the Gospel Advocate."

J. B. Brown, Murray, Ky., April 13: "Two splendid services at Sixth and Vine Streets, this city, yesterday. Fine interest manifested in the Bible lessons. Preaching by Alonzo Williams. Increased attendance at both the morning and evening services."

Have you entertained the view that R. H. Boll's teaching has been only "harmless guesses?" Read the review of his position by R. L. Whiteside and C. R. Nichol and see what he really teaches. Order from Mrs. C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas. Fifty cents per copy.

Louis Dasaro, Tampa, Fla., April 15: "The work in Tampa is fine. On March 5 four Italians were baptized; on March 22, three Italians and one American; on March 29, one American. We are building a house in which we will have services for both Italians and Americans at different hours. These people are very anxious to be taught, but in order that I may stay here all the time I will have to have support, and so all will do a great good in helping in this. We earnestly solicit the help of the brethren and sisters in Christ."

James E. Chessor, Spencer, Tenn., April 15: "Your clear-cut, succinct expose of one 'Dr.' Bow has elicited warm commendation. I've heard several speak very complimentary of it. I read it with genuine relish. Your work is splendid. You are running some mighty good material. Smith on the evolution bill this week is great."

W. A. Foster, Hornbeak, Tenn., April 15: "I prize the Gospel Advocate very highly and am always glad when the day rolls around for the next issue. I think we are getting some of the best and most mature thoughts from some of our best men that we have had in a long time. Keep up the good work. It's a great help to us young fellows."

John H. Allen, Horse Branch, Ky., March 27: "I have been making an effort to introduce the Gospel Advocate here, and am sending herewith two subscriptions. The church work in Kentucky is doing fairly well. I am now in mission work. If any church desires a preacher, I have open dates from now until June. I am enjoying the Advocate, and especially the first-page articles."

W. P. Lowe, Indianapolis, Ind., April 14: "As we are now permanently located and have a neat, comfortable house to meet in, all seem to have a mind to work. We meet now each Wednesday evening at seven-thirty for prayer service, a thing we had not done heretofore. We use Brother Elam's helps in our Lord's-day Bible study, and all like them, too. Two became identified with us at our prayer service on Wednesday evening, April 1, and three at the following Lord's-day services."

J. Madison Wright, care of Mr. Jared Dart, Hubbardsville, Madison County, N. Y., April 13: "I began a meeting on April 12 at Hubbardsville. While East I want to hold a meeting at every place in New England and adjacent territory that wants a meeting." Brother Wright proposes to do some real missionary work by holding meetings in the New England States. To hold such meetings in new places, Brother Wright is compelled to look to the churches for support. Two or three congregations could easily sustain Brother Wright in this work. Write him and make arrangements.

Cullum at Sixth Avenue, North.

Price Billingsley, Port Arthur, Texas, April 13: "We are in a truly great meeting in this city. I speak in a tabernacle fifty by one hundred feet in size, the site whereon the brethren plan shortly to erect a meetinghouse. About a hundred come to the day services, and nightly great audiences eagerly give ear to the gospel. Some ten souls have obeyed the Lord as we now enter the second week of the engagement. Good was done in Frankston, where we closed at the water on the night of April 5, leaving the little congregation in an improved and hopeful condition, this Port Arthur revival having begun by home forces that same morning. L. E. Carpenter is the evangelist here. He is an energetic and consecrated young man, esteemed by all. From here I shall go home for a short rest and visit to Burritt College, returning to Texas soon for other meetings, the first in the new building in Houston, starting May 10."

C. E. Wooldridge, Dallas, Texas, April 14: "Since the

C. E. Wooldridge, Dallas, Texas, April 14: "Since the second Lord's day in last November I have been laboring with the churches at Ferris and Trumbull, a little over twenty miles out of the city. Last year we built a splendid brick building at Ferris and added about thirty members to the congregation. I am now giving three-fourths of my time to that work, while I give the other to Trumbull. We have just closed an eight-days' meeting at Ferris. Several were added to the congregation, and we feel that the work was built up greatly. C. H. Roberson will hold the annual meeting in July, and we hope then to see further results from our season's work. The work at Trumbull gets better every month, and we expect to have a good meeting with Brother Carney, of Waxahachie, in August. I will be in protracted-meeting work from the first of July until November or later. I would be very glad to have one meeting for June, and have an open date covering the last three Lord's days in August. I will be in Tennessee and Alabama in September and October."

- J. C. Hutchinson preached at Old Hickory last Sunday.
- G. W. Sweeney preached at Richland Creek last Sunday.
- Leslie G. Thomas preached twice at Franklin, Ky., last Lord's day.
- O. H. Tallman, Springfield, Tenn., April 13: "We went to Paradise Ridge yesterday and preached to a full house."
- A. S. Hall, Sulphur, Okla., April 14: "The work here in Sulphur continues in good shape. One addition by restoration last Sunday."
- Foy E. Wallace, Jr., and Austin Taylor closed a tendays' meeting at Hillsboro, Texas, on April 5, resulting in forty-six additions—thirty-three baptisms.
- K. C. Moser, Oklahoma City, Okla., April 17: "Three more baptisms and one restoration last Lord's day. We are to begin our first mission meeting at Britton, Okla., next Sunday. I will do the preaching."
- H. W. Wrye, of Killeen, Texas, may be secured for a protracted meeting to begin on the fourth Sunday in September, if written to immediately. Brother Wrye is an able man and is successful in the evangelistic field.

The David Lipscomb College Quartet will sing for the local broadcasting station, WCBQ, to-night (Thursday, April 23) at half past eight o'clock. Three of the selections will be "Whispering Hope," "Face to Face," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

- W. E. Morgan, 1420 Avenue A, Flint, Mich., April 17: "My meeting with the church here is getting in full swing. There have been three confessions to date, with others "almost persuaded." The meeting goes grandly and encouragingly on. The Lord be praised."
- A. G. Freed preached at Waverly-Belmont, this city, last Lord's day. Brother Freed is booked to preach the commencement sermon for the high school at Huntingdon, Tenn., the first Sunday in May, and for the high school at Cornersville, Tenn., the second Sunday in May.
- W. D. Black, Sweetwater, Texas, April 14: "C. Mc-Clung, of Weatherford, Texas, closed here last Sunday night. Four were baptized, five were restored, and four placed their membership. I preached at Weatherford last Sunday to two fine audiences, with one baptized and one restored."
- C. P. Poole, Medford, Mass., March 27: "We meet each Lord's day at 2:15 in the Phillips Brooks House, Harvard Yard, Cambridge, and are glad to have all who are in Boston to visit us. There are about fifteen students who are Christians, but it is hard to follow intellectualism and also Christ."
- Silas E. Templeton, Amarillo, Texas, April 6: "There was manifested much interest in all the services held yesterday in the name of Christ at Tenth and Fillmore Streets. At the morning service our building was crowded to the very limit, and there was one addition from the Christian Church."
- J. S. Daugherty, Rockdale, Texas, April 13: "Two large audiences at Cameron yesterday. One sister returned to the true church from the retrogressives. I am to begin my first meeting for the year 1925 at Keechi, in Leon County, April 25. I have the first half of June open for a meeting somewhere if wanted."
- Jesse P. Sewell, Fort Worth, Texas, April 13: "Sunday was a nice day with us at Southside. We had two hundred and eighteen in the Bible school. There were five confessions, and four Christians placed their membership with us. Our meeting will begin on April 19. W. D. Bills will do the preaching, and Elvin Bost will lead the singing."
- W. S. Long, Jr., Detroit, Mich., April 13: "The Vinewood Church had two excellent services yesterday. There were three confessions at the morning services. Eight have lately come into the one body by baptism and others by membership. This church is doing some good work toward the poor and the orphan homes. Much work like that is needed. May more and more be done."

Roy Lawyer, Sinde Mission, Livingstone, North Rhodesia, South Africa, March 6: "Arrived here at 5 P.M. Train was six hours late. Brother Short had waited with several of his native boys since ten o'clock in the morning. Our train had been laid up on account of washouts, but Brother Short had no way of knowing about the trouble. Only a footpath leading to the mission site eight miles from Siding. Signs of much work having been done on the mission, timber cut, stumps grubbed, and buildings erected, besides regular teaching and preaching. Brother Sherriff has done a great work."

F. O. Howell, Jackson, Tenn., April 17: "The work at the Highland Avenue church of Christ is moving on in fine shape. We have had several additions to the congregation since Brother Billingsley's meeting. I will end five years of preaching for this congregation the first of December. I will be in a meeting at Monette, Ark., the last of April."

Lucas North, Ethridge, Tenn., April 17: "I have enjoyed the pleasure of attending the meeting at Lawrence-burg and hearing Brother Pullias preach. There have been several additions, large crowds, and fine interest. Although the house is large, it overflowed Sunday, and Sunday night we went to the high-school auditorium. The meeting continues."

A double wedding occurred on April 15 at the home of the officiating minister, L. L. Yeagley, 1701 Villa Place, Nashville, Tenn., the contracting parties being Mr. J. Robert Lyell and Miss Mary Frances Smiley, and Mr. Arthur T. Derseweh and Miss Caroline Blanche Smiley. All are members of the church of Christ. The Gospel Advocate extends congratulations.

The family of A. G. Freed desire to express their appreciation and thanks to the churches everywhere for their many kindly courtesies, inquiries, and prayers in Sister Freed's sickness. We are glad to say that she is now much improved. One telegram read: "We have never met you, but we want you to know we are praying for the recovery of Sister Freed," It is great to be a Christian—just "a member of His body."

B. C. Goodspasture, Atlanta, Ga., April 13: "The Hardeman meeting closed on Sunday evening, April 5. It is not necessary to say that record-breaking audiences heard the primitive gospel presented in a clear, convincing, masterful manner. There were three additions. S. H. Hall preached to a large and appreciative audience at West End Avenue on Wednesday evening, April 8. One was added by statement yesterday."

T. E. Tatum, Hallsville, Texas, April 14: "The Gospel Advocate is a great paper. I want some copies to hand out as samples with the view of getting subscriptions. The first article in the issue of April 9 is worth the entire annual subscription. F. W. Smith's article under the caption, "Would Be Very Unwise," is worth two dollars. Several other articles of April 9 are worth two dollars each. Send me samples, but don't make the Gospel Advocate any better."

W. M. Oakley, Cookeville, Tenn., April 13: "I preached at Smyrna, this county, on the first Lord's day, morning and night; at Liberty, Jackson County, yesterday at 11 A.M. and 3 P.M. I will preach at Martin's Creek next Lord's day and at Bethlehem on the fourth Sunday in this month. Our first tent meeting is to begin on April 28 in West Cookeville. Will J. Cullum will do the preaching, and J. Pettey Ezell and the writer will assist. We expect a glorious meeting."

R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, April 15: "The church in Terrell has just closed a splendid meeting, covering fifteen days, beginning on March 29 and closing on April 12. The meeting was conducted by our home forces—singing, preaching and praying. There were five churches of the city to begin meetings at the same time. There was nothing like a 'union revival' about the meetings. Every church simply held its own meeting; but the arrangements and advertisement to hold the meetings all at once proved to advantage in that it did well advertise the meetings and caused, I think, a much better attendance than otherwise we would have had. There were five baptisms in one meeting."

E, S. Kerr, Brookport, Ill., April 17: "I take this method of letting you know what a joy it is to me to read your articles, also those of F. B. Srygley, F. W. Smith, S. F. Morrow, A. McGary, E. A. Elam, and J. L. Hines. I have been taking the Gospel Advocate for fifteen years, and I do not believe that I am mistaken when I say that it is better than I have ever seen it, and it will remain so just as long as you brethren teach as you are now. Its readers do not have to read between the lines to see what you mean to teach. We have members of the church of Christ everywhere that will tell us that they know that the denominations are wrong and have not the truth, but they believe they will be saved. This idea is becoming more prevalent among the people as the years come and go, and it seems to me that this is a weakness of ours in not teaching it stronger. I believe if all of our preachers for the last fifty years had preached and taught as you brethren are doing in the Advocate, conditions in the church of Christ would be different from what they are to-day. My prayer is that you all may be blessed with long life and may continue to teach the blessed truths of our Lord."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, F. D. Srygley, and J. C. McQuiddy.

EDITORIAL

MAKING DIFFERENCES WHERE THERE ARE NONE.

BY E. A. ELAM.

Brother Elam: I am writing for information. Sometime back our Sunday-school superintendent brought a bell into the church. The day he brought it in he broke up the Bible study before we got through with the lesson by ringing us out with the bell, being generally in a hurry to get through with the lesson. The day he put his bell in operation he brought division and strife into the church, and a few have not been to the church wavely wavely in circum. The and a few have not been to the church worship since. He knows that it has brought division in the church, but refuses to take it out.

Now, what should be done-take it out or keep it in the church at the expense of harmony and peace? The church was at peace when the bell was brought in.

Brother Elam, if this is worth your time and space, please answer through the Gospel Advocate. X.

This letter is given simply to show that there should be no contention, strife, and division in congregations over things which do not differ, and that all should be able to see the difference between things which do differ. There is no difference between a brother's publicly announcing that the period for Bible study is over and tapping a bell to announce the same fact. There is no difference between writing on a blackboard or hanging up cards giving the number of songs in order to be used in the service and the song leader's announcing them one at a time just before singing. There is no difference between baptizing in a pool in a house and in a pool in a field or woodland, in a lake or stream.

When I first started to school just after the War between the States had ceased, the teacher stood in the schoolroom door and called sufficiently loud for all scattered pupils to hear, "Come to books!" All understood this. Later on another teacher for the same purpose rang a bell. In still another school the only signal to the pupils to go to their work was the prompt entrance of the teacher at the right time into the schoolroom. To contend that these different teachers of different schools should adopt the same method of announcing the study hour would be foolish. But this is not so foolish as to raise contentions and to cause trouble in congregations over methods of announcing songs or when the period for Bible study has ended, or of making other announcements, or the place of baptism, or any other method or means of doing things, where God has specified none.

Some years ago a very good brother said that on a visit to relatives in a certain town he attended the Bible study and joined in the worship of the congregation. Soon after all had gathered he heard the tapping of a bell, calling all to order, and, to use his own language, "looked around to see if there was not an organ somewhere in the house." Apparently he did not see the difference between the announcement of the time to begin or to close Bible study by the tapping of a bell and instrumental music in the worship of God; to him there was a great difference between the tap of a bell for this purpose and saying, "Let us begin."

Some years ago, in a meeting in a distant State, one evening six or eight came forward, confessed their faith in Christ, and stated that they were ready to be baptized "the same hour of the night." There was a pool in the house, but the last one to make the confession, who was a young lady, said to me that she did not intend to be baptized in that pool. What, then, should I have done? Should I have told her that if she could not be baptized in that pool she could not be baptized at all, or would have to get some one else to do it? Would that have been Christian? O, no. I asked where she wanted to be baptized. She replied: "In running water." I asked some brethren where such water could be found, and was told about two miles or further out of town on a certain road. and then to the left up the creek a mile or so further. I asked the preacher living there if he would attend to this. He replied that he suspected that the young lady would prefer my doing it. Therefore, after baptizing six or seven in the pool and redressing, I went with some others and the young lady in buggies to the designated place, most cheerfully baptized her, redressed again, reached my stopping place in time for a nap before breakfast, and went happily on with the meeting the next morning at half past ten o'clock.

Since there is no difference between baptism in a pool in a house and in a running stream, then I can as gladly baptize one in a running stream as in a pool, when that one prefers the stream, or in one place as the other. Just so, when one objects to making an announcement through the tapping of a bell, I would most gladly make it some other way, not because I think some other way is more scriptural, but for harmony and peace. What is the difference?

But I am sorry for the man who cannot see the difference between such a bell and instrumental music in the worship, or between a tuning fork and an organ.

In still another congregation a few most worthy members were objecting to writing on a blackboard the number present for Bible study, the amount contributed, etc., and were about to cause trouble over it, when it was suggested publicly and very wisely that all should cease to agitate the question until it had been studied in order to ascertain how much-or, rather, how little-was involved in it, and until all should learn to "follow after the things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another." (Rom. 14: 19.) This course ended the agita-(Rom. 14: 19.) This course ended the agitation, and the peace and edification of the church went on as beautifully as a deep and smooth-flowing river.

That brethren are afraid they may engage in some unscriptural practice is a good indication and proves a safeguard against departures from the truth and the introduction of innovations upon the worship of God and work of the church; but it is sometimes true that some are so afraid of doing wrong that they do but little good or nothing at all. The "Do Nots" will as certainly be lost as the ones who are aggressively wrong. "I was hungry, and ye did not;" "I was thirsty, and ye did not;" "I was a stranger, and ye did not;" "I was naked, and ye did not," "I was in prison, and ye did not." "To him therefore that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." "Every one that heareth these words of mine, and doeth them not;" "Not forsaking our assembling together, as the custom of some is;" and faith without works is dead. We must be just as much afraid of not doing good-of not doing all God has commanded—as we are of doing something wrong.

All should know, too, that when God has specified the way in which anything he commands shall be done, it is death to substitute for his wisdom and way human wisdom and way; but, on the other hand, when God has not specified the way and means of doing that which he commands, the church is left to use its judgment in selecting the best methods and means in its power. Examples: Since God specified to Noah the dimensions of the ark and the kind of wood out of which to build it; to Moses, the dimensions of the tabernacle and the various materials out of which to build it; to Joshua, the way in which to capture Jericho; to the priests, how to remove the ark of the covenant and the whole tabernacle from place to placeit would have been disobedience and death to do these things in any other way, as in the case of Uzza. where God has not specified the means and methods of doing things he has commanded to be done, it is sin to attempt to fasten upon the church one certain way. God has commanded the church-all who are scripturally prepared to do so-to teach the Bible to others; but he has specified no one particular method of teaching. method of teaching, then, can be used. Some good people use tracts as a method of teaching; some write books of sermons; some write articles for papers; some prepare comments on given portions of Scripture, and some on the whole Bible; some teach orally from the pulpit and some privately from house to house. He is presumptuous and foolish who undertakes to destroy all these ways, ecept one, and that the one he chooses.

Again, when God commands certain things to be done without specifying the method, the time, and place of doing these things, some method and time and place are implied. For instance, that God commands baptism implies some place of baptism; and since everything must be done decently and in order, some decent place is implied. Since God commands his children to meet upon the first day of the week to break bread or to otherwise worship him as he directs, a place of meeting is implied, and, for the reason given above, it should be a decent, convenient, and comfortable one.

Since God commands Christians as they have opportunity to work that which is good toward all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of faith (Gal. 6: 18), they must use such opportunities as present themselves and such methods and means as are in their power to do this.

Let it be understood, however, that in the use of methods and means, where God has prescribed none, no principle of the gospel must be violated.

THE TENTACLES OF ECCLESIASTICISM.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Under the heading, "The Necessity of Some Constructive Changes and Adjustments," regarding the latest ecclesiasticism, which was born when the disciples organized their first missionary society, E. L. Powell, of Louisville, Ky., writes the Christian-Evangelist as follows:

A very fine opening was made at the Cleveland Conven-A very one opening was made at the Cleveland Convention to consider certain matters as respects the various corporations which function through the International Convention. The United Missionary Society—both its general board and its executive committee—is amenable to the Irotherhood in that its membership of one hundred and twenty is named by the nominating committee appointed by the various State and provincial conventions. This nominating committee fills all vacancies and presents new names; it is thoroughly representative of the whole brotherhood. No member of the general board of the United Society or the executive committee of the society is eligible to immediate reelection. This is as thoroughly democratic as could be desired, and yet in no wise affects

The other corporations which function through the International Convention, it seems to me, should be amenable equally with the United Missionary Society to the brotherhood as respects its membership. There is no reaches the statement of the continuous of the continuous through the continuous thro ble equally with the United Missionary Society to the brotherhood as respects its membership. There is no reason why the same constitution, in this particular, at least, should not govern all of these corporations—namely, the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity, the National Educational Board, the Welfare and Temperance Board, and, perhaps, some others. The brotherhood would feel, at least, that they had some part in conducting the affairs of these various organizations which make their appeals for money and support to the whole brotherhood, if they were, at least, given the opportunity, through this nominating committee, approved by the State and provincial conventions, to supply vacancies in these boards.

I feel, as respects the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity, that a continuous presidency of this board is particularly resented. Why could not this committee, which was named by the Cleveland Convention to effect reconciliations and to make recommendations, preserve the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity, while indicating that its membership should be chosen in the same way as the membership of the United Society is chosen and that a new president should be elected every year?

Really the organization has come to relate itself, so far as other religious hadion are sentent of the same to the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion are sentent of the same way as the religious hadion.

Really the organization has come to relate itself, so far as other religious bodies are concerned, in such way that our plea for Christian unity—which is the only plea that we have as a religious body—is now summed up and concentrated in the person of one man; in fact, during the Cleveland Convention, I discovered that the present commission on Christian Unity, as well as a great host of other people, have the feeling that Dr. Peter Ainslie is the only man who has the necessary sweetness of temper and graciousness of personality to represent us in this glorious aim of the Disciples of Christ. To my mind this is strangely inconsistent. Especially now is there an opportunity given to keep the association intact, but to change the personnel of it and to have that personnel chosen by the State and provincial nominating committee. Just now it is particularly inappropriate that Dr. Ainslie should longer continue as president. While he has a perfect right to practice open membership, with the consent and approval of his congregation, and while he should not be asked to resign on account of such practice, yet his continuance as president presents the rather strange spectacle of a leader for Christian unity dividing his own religious communion in seeking to achieve unity!

There is no finer man among us than Dr. Peter Ainslie; but if we value our own plea for Christian unity, we cer-Really the organization has come to relate itself, so far a schism among us.

There is no finer man among us than Dr. Peter Ainslie; but if we value our own plea for Christian unity, we certainly will not have as the head of the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity one whose open declaration for open membership—however scriptural and justifiable such declaration—has created and will continue to create a schism among us.

In an article appearing in a nondenominational paper from an outsider, who was present at the Cleveland Convention, he has this to say: "President Corey pronounced the Constitution under which the body proceeds as the most unheard-of form of control in parliamentary history. I think he was putting it correctly. To have but three actions on any one recommendation from the recommendations committee—approval, disapproval, or recommittal, without amendment or recommendation—is surely to reduce the main body to the status of a rubber stamp. As I see it, the whole Convention is the recommendations committee. The crowd I was in is just the audience." There can be no doubt that the recommendations committee must in some way be changed so that an intelligent discussion in some way be changed so that an intelligent discussion from the floor of the Convention shall be made possible.

We are tied hand and foot by our Constitution as respects the recommendations committee. Just how this change can be brought about consistently with the efficient carrying forward of the business of the Convention and carrying forward of the business of the Convention and guarding against too much discussion on the floor is something which wise men must work out. As the matter stands now, it is an impossible situation. In point of fact, as the writer above quoted says, the real Convention is the committee on recommendations. "It seems to make impossible any of the straight facing of issues," says the writer, "that I have known in other denominational gatherings." The mere criticism will get us nowhere. The necessity of some constructive changes and adjustments in harmony with the democratic genius of the Disciples is absolutely imperative. Surely there is wisdom enough among us, even though we may not make the Convention among us, even though we may not make the Convention a delegated body, at least, to preserve some of the freedom of discussion and intelligent consideration which in the old days marked these great gatherings.

I hope that something has been started at the Cleveland Convention that will set us free ultimately from the domination of that sort of machinery which is at present so generally provocative of bad feeling and a sense that somehow we are dominated by a very few fine people to the exclusion of any sort of real and unembarrassed participation in the International Convention on the part of the many. the many.

When this modern ecclesiasticism was crawling on its knees as an infant, it was quite willing to be "amenable to the brotherhood;" but when it came to man's estate, it demanded that the "brotherhood" should be amenable to it. So that now, in the language of E. L. Powell, the tentacles of this religious vampire are so wrapped about the "brotherhood" that "we are tied hand and foot by cur constitution as respects the recommendations committee."

The heads of this ecclesiasticism saw that the "brotherhood" had entirely too much liberty and freedom in its scattered "boards" under different control and supervision; hence, they succeeded in merging all of these "boards" into one mammoth concern under one "board" which possesses and exercises the spirit of a religious dictator over the "brotherhood."

Note this pitiful wail: "The brotherhood would feel, at least, that they had some part in conducting the affairs of these various organizations which make their appeals for money and support to the whole brotherhood, if they were, at least, given the opportunity, through this nominating committee, approved by the State and provincial conventions, to supply vacancies in these boards." All the "brotherhood" is permitted to do is to shell down the shekels to keep this ponderous machinery going, and what a glorious (?) privilege that is!

Since "Dr. Peter Ainslie," who is in the saddle, "is the only man who has the necessary sweetness of temper and graciousness of personality to represent us in this glorious aim of the Disciples of Christ," not only advocates but practices "open membership," and is perfectly acceptable to the big "board," the "brotherhood" must remain "tied hand and foot" or kick out of the whole thing. Gentle reader, this is the vampire that Clubb, Walker. Cowden, and others are seeking to fasten upon the churches of Tennessee.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Recently I received, from a friend in Tennessee, a request that I write something about the school for the blind in Washington, for the benefit of a young woman who desired that information, as well as for the pleasure and profit of my blind friends everywhere.

I immediately began investigating, to learn where the school for the blind is located here, and, much to my surprise, I found there is no such school in the District of Columbia. There is in Baltimore, forty miles distant, a large school for blind children, and connected with it are shops where the blind are taught various trades; and blind children of the District are sent to that school, authorities of the District having made arrangements with the State of Maryland to care for its blind children and teach them whatsoever may be desired.

There are in Washington City, however, a Home for the Adult Blind, the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind, a National Reading Room and Library for the Blind, and in the Library of Congress a similar room. We have visited all these places, and have been interested in the good work done by them all.

The Home for the Blind, located at 3050 R Street, Northwest, can take care of seventeen, and it is always filled, with many on the waiting list. A home for the blind was established in Washington, years ago, by the Aid Society of the District, and was kept up by private subscriptions. When, later, a fund of about half a million dollars was left by Mr. Henry Hurt and his wife for the establishment of a home for the blind, to be called "The Henry and Annie Hurt Home," these two enterprises were united and the present Home was secured. It is still partly kept going by private subscriptions, the endowment fund not being sufficient to meet all its requirements. An addition to the building is being erected which will raise the capacity of the Home to forty, but there are many more applications for admission than can be granted even with the increased capacity. The Home is a very pleasant place, attractive, comfortable, and convenient, for either blind or sighted people, and the men and women who gain admission there are fortunate indeed.

The Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind is located at 1808 H Street, Northwest, in a four-story-andbasement residence that, like many former Washington homes, has been converted to public use. There a few blind persons pursue certain work: teaching of instrumental music, typewriting, reading of proof of publications for the blind, the caning and repairing of chairs and other cane work, making mops and brooms, and piano tuning. The workers do not live at the institution, but go there daily to work, and are paid about eight dollars a week for their work. The institution is kept up partly by receipts from the work done there and by an appropriation of fifteen hundred dollars a year from the Government. This enables the management to pay, if not a living wage, at least a sufficient amount to make them partially self-supporting. But the house, the income, and the appropriation are all too small to take care of all who apply there for work-not sufficient to take care of even half those who would be glad to be employed at that

It seems strange, when Uncle Sam counts his money no longer in terms of millions, but in billions, that the appropriation for this work is not at least ten times as large as it is. If our Congressmen would visit the Institute and see its needs as I saw them, I am sure the appropriations for the blind would be very materially increasedmade abundantly ample to take care of the blind in the District, who are anxious to be self-supporting.

The Institute is under the control of six directors, all blind, and the vice president of the board, Mr. Ramisch, is also manager of the institution. The teachers and workers are blind, as were all we saw at the Institute. except Miss Mary Frost, who is the secretary and the "eyes" of the institution. Her name is not an index to her character, I'm sure, for she is bright, warm-heartel, and sunshiny.

The National Library for the Blind is located at 1800 D Street, Northwest, in one of the temporary buildings erected by the Government during the World War, to take care of the increased amount of work. This library was founded in 1911, and its first president was Thomas Nelson Page. Its object is the circulation of books in embossed or raised type for blind readers. City libraries usually have only small collections of books for the ilind, which are soon read by local readers; hence the need for large libraries of such books that are accessible to readers all over the country. The National Library has accumulated books by gift, by purchase, by printing, and by hand copying, until there are in the collection 11,516 volumes, and these are sent free to its list of 2,558 eaders scattered all over this country, Uncle Sam transporting them from the library to the readers and bacl again without charge.

Several methods of embossed writing, I am informed, have been used in the United States-the New York Point, the American Braille, and others. During the World War, however, it was found necessary to adopt a uniform system of writing for the blind; hence, the Revised Braille system was adopted. With the exception of a few minor changes, that is the same as the English, or British, Braille, and in the near future it is to be hoped we shall have a Universal Braille system for the blind. The Braille method is based on all possible combinations of six dots arranged in a group, which the blind read by passing the tips of their fingers lightly over the dots. We print the Braille books on only one side of the paper, but the English are printing on each side, and that will soon be done here, of course, as we do not remain long in the rear of our cousins across the water. The constant touching of the dots in reading would, it seems, soon wear them away, thus making the letters illegible; but each sheet, after being printed with the little dots, is given a coat of shellac and carefully dried, thus preventing the wearing away of the dots by touch of the fingers of readers.

Books in Braille are large, it requiring much more space than printing for the sighted, necessarily. A book of ordinary size (six by nine inches), in pica type, would make in Braille five volumes; and volumes in Braille are, many of them, ten by fourteen inches in size. Of course, when we adopt the system of printing Braille on both sides of the sheets, the books will not be so large.

The National Library is extensive, containing books for all classes of readers and on all subjects-history, ethics, philosophy, science, plays, essays, poetry, translations of the classics, biographies, and fiction. The blind world is very much the same, in its choice of reading, as the seeing world, and what appeals to one will appeal to the other. The demands of readers increase more rapidly than the collection of books, as the books are in circulation from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Florida and Texas to Canada and Alaska, there being eighty thousand blind people in the United States.

Miss Giffin, the courteous, efficient lady in charge of the National Library for the Blind, has several assistants, all blind. There is considerable work incident to conducting the library: selecting books from lists sent in by readers, packing, addressing, and shipping by parcel post; caring for the correspondence incident to the work, copying books with the little Braille writer, setting Braille type, printing, hand copying, folding, eyeleting, verifying, shellacking, collating, and binding Braille books; keeping a record of books sent out to readers, receiving them when returned, and arranging them in place on the shelves. On each book is pasted a card, with the title of the book and the name of the author in Braille letters, so that these blind workers can place the books with speed and accuracy. The books are sent out in canvas-covered holders, with the address of the reader plainly printed on a certain part of the holder. On the reverse side is the address of the Library, and when ready to return the book the borrower simply incloses it in the holder and reverses the flap, so that the address of the Library is outside, and it goes back, making the round trip, thanks to Uncle Sam, without any cost whatsoever to the Library or the reader.

Many books are hand-copied at the National Library for the Blind and also at the homes of the copyists, they being paid so much a page for the work. All Braille manuscript is carefully read and corrected by blind proof readers before the books are bound. At the Columbia Polytechnic Institute we saw Miss Grady, who teaches music and typewriting and uses any spare time she has reading proof, making corrections of Braille print with the dainty little implements they use for that purpose. Perhaps she did not make the corrections quite as quickly as a sighted proof reader might make them on a printed page, but they were daintily, deftly, and accurately made.

In the Library of Congress is another reading room and library for the blind, whence books are sent out to readers all over the country and where work similar to that done at the National Library is carried on. That library contains about ten thousand volumes, which are furnished by mail to about twenty-four hundred readers. The Red Cross Society here also gives employment to blind persons who do copying and proof reading of Braille books.

The work of the National Library depends upon membership fees, contributions, legacies, and a small appropriation from the United States Government. There is such need of the expansion of the work that those engaged in it hope interest in it may be aroused in the various ceneficent organizations and clubs of the country. I think the Government should make appropriation sufficient to care for the blind-to provide an adequate fireproof building to carry on the various departments of the library work, by which paid employment could be given to men and women all over the country, with shops where manual work could be provided for all the blind of the District who desire such work.

It is also the desire of the National Library that the news be spread far and wide of the rich storehouse of information and entertainment that is within reach of every blind person in the United States, all that is necessary to secure reading matter being to mail a card, containing the name and address of the sender, to the National Library for the Blind, 1800 D Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C. Blind pupils in school are supplied with books for their education, but during vacations are anxious for books to read. Many adult blind are also eager for something to read, being deprived of so many of the enjoyments of the more fortunate sighted world.

When we think, as suggested in a little booklet issued by the National Library, "of a keen mind, awake all day, day after day, year after year, yet compassed by a night that knows no dawn, a darkness that is never lifted, it seems that all those blessed with sight would delight in lightening that darkness, by helping to keep those busy minds fed and nourished by the transference of printed thought."

THE CHRISTIAN STANDARD HAS ENOUGH OF IT. BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

Brother Edwin R. Errett, in the Christian Standardas it seems, talking for the Standard-gives his readers what he calls "my caveat," and to explain what he means he has over his article the following: "Straight Talk to False Witness Bearers." As an introduction to what he is about to say, he says the following very sensible and pertinent things:

A HIGH PURPOSE.

Every man has in his good name that which is of real value. It is a talent which he is bound to use to the best of his ability. He cwes it to himself, his influence, and his family to shield his good name.

There is, however, a peculiar obligation along this line resting upon any one who occupies a position in any degree that of leadership in a good cause. To those who follow him, and those who associate with him, he owes to be a position as well as his character clean. To to keep his reputation, as well as his character, clean. To his cause he owes it. To truth itself he owes it. Not least of all, he owes it to those very persons who, with possibly good intentions, but with mistaken zeal, spread false stories that tend to besmirch his name. If they be sincere and misled, they will, above all others, be indebted to and grateful to him for his laying to rest such slander.

I am sure Brother Errett is right in his position that a man ought to do everything that is right in protecting his good name, but sometimes it may be best even for that purpose to bear persecution in silence. We should not overlook the passage that says: "For hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example, that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." Brother Errett had the right to set himself and the Standard right, but it seems to me that, in his effort to do this, he uses stronger language than was necessary. For instance, he uses this language: That is a gross and malicious lie." Again, he says: "That is therefore a lie out of the whole cloth;" "That is another lie;" "Another falsehood." I cannot bring myself to believe that such language as this is necessary in order for a Christian to protect his good name.

The brother begins his vitriolic article by a reference to the way the late Theodore Roosevelt did the man who told a falsehood on him. I know Mr. Roosevelt was considered a great man, but the Christ is the example for the Christian and not Mr. Roosevelt. It would be hard for the brother to harmonize his strong language with the Sermon on the Mount and with the conduct of Jesus, who was misrepresented worse than the editors and owners of the Standard have ever been. The brother follows the quotation above with this statement:

Sad as it is to confess it, this greatly beloved brother-hood of ours is fast becoming a great whispering gallery of slander. Brethren have not been content to tell one another very unsavory stories of the actual misdeeds of their brethren. They have enlarged upon them. They have invented wrongs where none exist. They have actually appeared to take pleasure in attributing to single or the prethren wrong matirizes in direct violation of Matt. actually appeared to take pleasure in attributing to sincere brethren wrong motives, in direct violation of Matt. 7: 1. And—mirable dictu—they are actually jumping with pleasure to meet any tale of false motives or unfaithful actions. From all over the brotherhood comes proof of such wicknedness.

An enemy hath done this. It is nothing less than diablically appeared to take pleasure in attributing to since the such at the such as the bolical.

The fact that men and women of otherwise high character are engaged in this sort of thing only makes more impressive the awfulness of the situation. If these fine characters—these missionaries, these secretaries, these evangelists, these ministers, these elders—have been dragged down to this sort of mud-slinging, it must give us pause! Where will this end?

Some of us have known for some time from actual experience that those who make up this "greatly beloved brotherhood of ours," with all their talk of the sweet spirit, were no better than the rest of us when one dared to attack their unscriptural organization; but I did not know that the "beloved brotherhood" was a "great whispering gallery of slander." I call this "some gallery" myself. I was afraid they were right bad, but this is a little worse than I expected to hear from one who actually knows. I really guess they are no worse than they have been all the time, but they have simply turned their "whispering gallery of slander" on the Standard. They formerly did all these things to the Gospel Advocate, and the Standard never tried to prevent it, so far as I know; but when this "greatly beloved brotherhood" turns on the Standard, it can see it perfectly plain. It is no worse to misrepresent the Standard than it is to misrepresent the Advocate, but it does seem to make a difference with the Standard as to "whose ox is gored." The Standard should have patience with its "greatly beloved brotherhood," because it has stood by them "cheek for jowl" for, lo, these many years. It encouraged this brotherhood in building up unscriptural organizations in the form of missionary societies, and now, because they have gone too far with these things, the Standard has turned against the United Christian Missionary Society; and when this same beloved brotherhood turns on it, it has no patience with the "whispering gallery of slander." Be patient in all things. "Let patience have its perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing."

After the Standard had corrected some of the false charges which had been made against it by this "greatly beloved brotherhood," it then exhorts them in these words:

It is not in any sense a pleasure to deal with these matters. But no one who loves this brotherhood can sit comfortably while this sort of unscrupulous conduct goes on.

The brotherhood must be brought to its senses. Just as some political enthusiasts presumed upon the fact that the political battle gave opportunity for all sorts of attack, and, therefore, lent themselves to some character sniping, and the statement of the same process. there are brethren who have, with more or less sincerity and considerable zeal, taken advantage of the differences existing in the brotherhood to do some sniping with "dumdum" bullets supplied from a more or less obscure arsenal.

It is about time we came to our senses. This guerrilla warfare persisted in will end in the complete destruction of this brotherhood. "If ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another."

We must realize that there is nothing but evil in the argumentum ad hominem. We must learn to differ as brethren, to maintain our love for one another despite our varying tastes. We must be interested in the truth only. If we continue to leap so happily at any unsavory story, and the second of the s God himself cannot save our rotten souls.

I am curious to know what arsenal the Standard refers to as "a more or less obscure arsenal." I do not wish these dear, misguided brethren any harm, and I do not rejoice that they are biting and devouring one another, but maybe while they are thus biting each other they will quit trying to bite us who have so far kept out of their greatly beloved brotherhood." I thought we had them about muzzled so they could not bite us, but it looks like they have got the muzzle off and are going for one another.

The brother closes his article with the following warning:

A WARNING.

Now, as part of my contribution to a sobering of the brotherhood, I hereby serve kindly, but stern, warning upon my brethren that as surely as I find my name the butt of any false charge that will in my judgment tend to mar my little power among my brethren and weaken the cause for which I stand, I shall, as soon as I have the evidence as to where and by whom the charge has been made, bring proper legal action with the sole purpose of advertising the falsity of the charge.

Now you have it straight. You had better be good or you will get a lawsuit on your hands. This may not conflict with the quotation already made, "when he suffered, threatened not," but it appears to me to need some explaining. Be patient, brother, and remember that the Standard may have encouraged these erring brethren in their departure from the truth by not opposing all organizations "outside of and above the local church," as your Brother Lappin puts it.

SERMON OUTLINES

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION

A Book of Three Hundred New Sermon Outlines

BY A. J. BACHMAN.

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bibleclass teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has three hundred sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, mar-riage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate. A good book to use in your Lord's-day services,

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

In Matt. 20: 1-16, do we understand that all went into the vineyard? In verse 4 it is stated that they went their way. Does this mean they went into the vineyard or not?

—WILLIE HUNTER.

I think that verse 4 indicates that they went into the vineyard. It reads as follows: "And to them he said, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way." H. T. Anderson translates "and they went their way" as follows: "And they went." Moffatt translates that sentence: "So they went in." The Emphatic Diaglott translates it: "And they went." The Greek-English New Testament translates it: "And they went." They were seeking work or employment, and the master of the vineyard was looking for laborers. The wage for hire was satisfactory to both parties. Why should we not conclude that they went into the vineyard, as the above translations state?

Some in our Sunday school claim that Judas took the Lord's Supper on the night of the betrayal. I do not think so, because Satan entered him when he took the sop before the Supper. Please inform us.—Mrs. J. A. JONES, Lynnville, Tenn.

The scriptures which bear upon this subject are as follows: "And he answered and said, He that dipped his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me. The Son of man goeth, even as it is written of him: but woe unto that man through whom the Son of man is betraved! Good were it for that man if he had not been born. And Judas, who betrayed him, answered and said, Is it I, Rabbi? He saith unto him, Thou hast said." (Matt. 26: "And when it was evening he cometh with the twelve. And as they sat and were eating, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, One of you shall betray me, even he that eateth with me. They began to be sorrowful, and to say unto him one by one, Is it I? And he said unto them, It is one of the twelve, he that dippeth with me in the dish." (Mark 14: 17-20.) "And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the apostles with him. And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer: for I say unto you, I shall not eat it until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. And he received a cup, and when he had given thanks, he said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves: for I say unto you, I shall not drink from henceforth of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come: And he took bread, and when he had given thanks, he brake it, and gave to them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me. And the cup in like manner after the supper, saying, This cup is the new covenant in my blood, even that which is poured out for you. But behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table." (Luke 22: 14-21.) These scriptures make it plain that the twelve were present at the supper, that Judas was present, and that Jesus said, "Drink ye all of it." No mention is made of Judas or any one else having left. The record says: "He then having received the sop went out straightway." (John 13: 30.) No construction should be placed on this scripture which would make it contradict the others which are quoted above. It seems clear to me that Judas was at the Lord's Supper.

(1) Is it a violation of 1 Cor. 14: 34, 35 for a woman to teach a class of children or young women in the Lord's-day Bible school? (2) When we meet on the first day of the week to break bread, what are we required to do besides take the Lord's Supper? Please give scripture reference for each item of the worship. (3) At what time during the worship must we take the Supper, or does it make any difference?—J. Wilson Smith.

1. No, it is no violation of the Scriptures for a woman, who is a competent teacher and faithful to the Lord, to teach any one at any time, provided her teaching does not violate God's word. The woman is not to usurp authority over man. Her sphere is in the private realms of life, so far as her teaching God's word is concerned. To teach a class of children on Lord's day is a commendable work and should be encouraged by all Christians.

2. The early Christians furnish us an example for worship. "And day by day, continuing steadfastly with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread at home, they took their food with gladness and singleness of heart." (Acts 2: 46.) "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the prayers." (Acts 2: 42.) This gives a general outline of the worship in the early church. Praising God, exhortation, prayer, contributing, and teaching are all included in the above scriptures. There may be other items of worship or things which may be done on the first day of the week.

3. There is no set time of day for taking the Lord's Supper. Any convenient hour that suits the worshipers may be set. Some congregations have different hours—that is, a part of the church cannot assemble at the eleven-o'clock service, but can at the evening service; hence, the Lord's Supper may be eaten by those who assemble at the eleven-o'clock service, and in the same house, without any division or strife, another part of the church may eat the Lord's Supper at the evening service. The point made here is that no specific hour has been designated by the Scriptures. Hence, the hour is left to be set by the members of the church, this hour to be selected by those who are to eat the Lord's Supper, and such convenient time as suits them. Of course, it is understood that all meet on the first day of the week.

I would like to have your exegesis of Heb. 6: 1, 2, especially verse 2. Why is baptism here in the plural, since Paul in Eph. 4: 5 says there is "one" baptism? Also, what is referred to by the "laying on of hands?" The Mormons claim that the laying on of hands after baptism for the reception of the Holy Spirit is a part of the principles of the gospel. How would you answer their claims on this?—X.

There is no contradiction between Eph. 4: 5 and Heb. 6: 2. Baptism as used in Heb. 6: 2 is in the plural number. There are different views offered explaining why the term "baptism" is put in the plural. Under the Christian dispensation we have at least three baptisms mentioned. First, the baptism of the Holy Spirit; second, a baptism in fire; third, a baptism in water, belonging to all believing penitents who are to be brought into the body of Christ. "I am therefore, on the whole, inclined to the opinion that it is these three baptisms that our author here refers to. If this is not his meaning, then I think we must accept the first hypothesis." (Robert Milligan.) The other opinion which Mr. Milligan alludes to is that the writer has reference to the baptism of John the Baptist, Christian baptism, and the baptism of Jewish proselytes, and the divers Jewish washings which are referred to in Heb. 9: 10.

It would be well if character and reputation were used distinctively. In truth, character is what a person is; reputation is what he is supposed to be. Character is in himself, reputation is in the minds of others. Character is injured by temptations and by wrongdoing; reputation, by slanders and libels. Character endures throughout defamation in every form, but perishes when there is a voluntary transgression; reputation may last through numerous transgressions, but be destroyed by a single, and even an unfounded, accusation or aspersion.—Abbott.

WHAT ARE YOU WORTH?

When one asks, "What is Mr. So-and-So worth?" he really means, what is his property worth—what is his money worth? The average person's estimate of a man is raised or lowered by the answer he gets in dollars and cents.

Real estate, personal property, holdings, houses, mills, factories, grounds, tangible assets, servants, luxuries, machines, dividends, dollars, gold dust—these are the things that weight heaviest in man's scales. But there is an Old Testament text which says that man seeth not as God seeth; for man looketh at the outward appearance, while God looketh at the heart.

Is any man really worth five hundred million dollars? Is he worth it to his community, his church, to his fellow citizens? Is he worth it to the poor and the wretched? Is he worth it to asylums, to hospitals, to charity?

What is the man worth as a citizen? Is he public-minded? Is he socially-minded? Is he public-spirited? What does he care about overworked mothers and underfed children? What does he care about dirty politics, grafting officials, unclean spirits? And caring, what does he do about it all? What does he care about better schools, cleaner streets, and a better community?

What are you worth? In time, thought, effort? In ideas, interest, ideals? Do you contribute yourself to the general weal?

While the community has increased a hundredfold in tangible wealth in the last decade, has it developed ten per cent in spiritual force? In engendering faith and good works? In fellowship, and brotherhood, and kindness, and purity, and tolerance on the part of its citizenship?

Character is finer than cash; but the two together make a fine combination—one that can scarcely be excelled! Goodness is purer than gold; but together they make a pair that might work miracles! Divinity is nobler than dividends; but together they might produce a heaven on earth! The Golden Rule is squarer than the rule of gold; but together they might measure out untold benefits to the race!

While the city has finer pavements, better streets, handsomer homes, greater businesses, has it at the same time and in the same ratio increased in God's business? Are the people ten per cent more generous, more kindly disposed? Are they more Christlike, loving, brave, and true?
Are the children ten per cent happier? Are young women ten per cent safer? Have crime, graft, and profiteering been reduced? Has drunkenness been lessened? Have lust and immorality been checked? This is the way to determine true worth!

What are you worth in moral values, in spiritual estimates? What are you worth in Christhood—to the church; to the town; to God? What are you worth?—Thomas F. Opie, in Southern Churchman.

IN HIS DRAWING-ROOM.

There was a young man in the Middle West who had been more or less interested about his soul's salvation. One afternoon, in his office, he said: "I will accept Jesus Christ as my Lord and Savior."

He went home and told his wife, who was a nominal professor of religion, that he had made up his mind to serve Christ, and he added: "After supper to-night I am going to take the company into the drawing-room and erect the family altar." "Well," said his wife, "you know some of the gentlemen who are coming to tea are skeptics, and they are older than you are; and don't you think you had better wait until after they have gone, or else go out into the kitchen and have your first prayer with the servants?"

The young man thought for a few moments, and then he said: "I have asked Jesus Christ into my house for the first time, and I shall take him into the best room, and not into the kitchen."

So he called his friends into the drawing-room. There was a little sneering, but he read and prayed. That man afterwards became Chief Justice of the United States Court.

A MESSAGE TO HUSBANDS AND WIVES.

Recently a Chicago jurist, Judge Joseph Sabath, presided over his ten-thousandth divorce case in a period of four days. The judge has spent thousands of hours listening to the weary recital of those who either never loved at all or, through some mistake or failure, had ceased longer to care.

The judge is not proud of the civilization that displays such a social condition as this reveals in one American city.

I feel that his ideas are well worthy of spreading all over the United States.

While the rural home has been more secure from the separation disease than the city home, it is well for us to ponder the sage and practical advice of this judge.

To husbands these words are addressed: "Make your wife a real partner. If no children are born to you, adopt some. Supply your wife with sufficient funds to maintain the household. Work together, play together, grow up together, and share the responsibilities together."

To wives the judge speaks as follows: "Do not allow yourself to be treated as a weak, dependent little thing. Do not be afraid to soil your hands. Do not be afraid of the one really big thing in your life—motherhood. Make your husband feel that he is the one man in your life. Do not flirt. Make your husband share in the responsibilities of home life."

To both man and wife the judge gives this parting advice: "Avoid heated quarrels. Speak out frankly, but do not develop arguments. Differences should be settled on the very day that they develop. Sympathy, good humor, and a desire for mutual understanding are the supporting pillars of the home. One of the fixed rules of every household should be: "Good humor in parting in the morning, and a cheerful meeting in the evening."

THE BIBLE IN THE HOME.

The test of the nations is their loyalty to God's word. The nations which have honored God's word, and which are honoring God's word, are the nations which have his blessing.

The State will never be guided into ways of constructive peace and permanent development through society's aim and desire to better mankind. Reform movements, no matter how strong and efficient they may be, can never reform the State or the nation until that reform begins at the fireside. There is no chance for men to do, in their interests and desires for others, what God has said the father and the mother, the husband and the wife, the brother and the sister, must do.

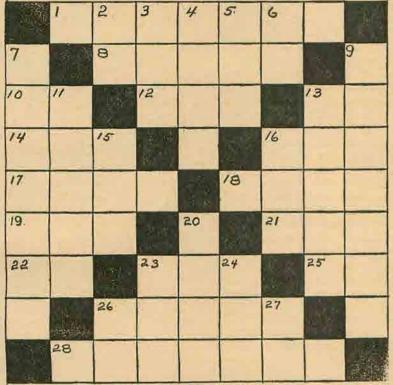

The Bible is the one great power which God has given to us, to instruct us how to build our homes aright.

BIBLE CROSS WORD

ALTHOUGH this looks like a short and easy puzzle, the fact that each section is cut off from the others means that there are not so many clues from cross words. Then too, the references given are not so definite as some in the other puzzles; so, though it is not of large size, it is by no means too easy for the expert to try.

How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

DENOMINATIONALISM.

Stranger: "Good morning, brother. May I ask if you are a Christian?"

Minister: "I am."

Stranger: "To what church do you belong?"

Minister: "I can answer your question by asking you one: Are you a Christian?"

Stranger: "I am."

Minister: "Then tell me to which Christ you belong."

Stranger: "There is only one Christ."

Minister: "How do you know?"

Stranger: "There is only one revealed in the Holy Scriptures."

Minister: "Then why do you ask me to which church I belong, since there is only one church revealed in the Holy Scriptures."

Stranger: "What church is that?" Minister: "Let the Scriptures answer. 'Upon this rock I will build my church.' (Matt. 16: 18.) Whose church is this?"

Stranger: "It is certainly Christ's church."

Minister: "Paul tells us that the church is Christ's body (1 Cor. 12: 12, 13; Rom. 12: 4, 5; Col. 1: 17-29; Eph. 4: 1-16), and we know that Christ does not have two bodies, and one head on many bodies would be a monstrosity. He also tells us that the church is his bride, and we know that he does not have many brides. (Eph. 5: 23-27.)"

Stranger: "I mean to ask, to what denomination do you belong?"

Minister: "I tell you that I do not belong to any denomination; I am simply a Christian and a member of the church of Christ."

Stranger: "May I ask to what branch of the church you belong?"

Minister: "I do not belong to a branch. I belong to the Vine, and am a full-grown branch myself. (See John 15.) I tell you that I am a member of the body of Christ, which is his church; and when I was baptized into him, I put him on and am a Christian only. (See Gal. 3: 25-27.)"

Stranger: "But you know that there are many branches of Christ's church, and it is generally recognized that they are classed as denominations."

Minister: "You cannot find a hint of such a thing in the Scriptures. I shall be glad to have you mention chapter and verse that gives the name of a single branch that may be called a denomination. The disciples (not denominations) are branches. Read John 15 and see for yourself."

Stranger: "I have heard it explained this way all my life."

Minister "Is it not strange that, if these denominations known to-day are branches of the church, that the Vine grew to be a great Vine and many years old before a single branch appeared?"

Stranger: "But you must belong to a denomination, since there are so many claiming to belong to his church."

Minister: "When Peter preached on the day of Pentecost and the men cried out to know what to do to be saved, and were told by the inspired apostle to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; and when they immediately obeyed this word and were added, will you kindly tell me the name of the denomination to which they were added? (Acts 2: 37-42)."

Stranger: "They were added to Christ and were members of his church, and at the end of that day there were three thousand souls that constituted the church."

Minister: "Right you are: and they were Christians only, and did not distinguish themselves one from the other by wearing a human or a denominational name."

Minister: "Another question: When Peter preached to the Gentiles (Acts 10) and they heard, believed, repented, and were baptized, may I ask to what denomination they attached themselves?"

Stranger: "Certainly they were members of the church Christ promised to build."

Minister: "Was the church in Antioch a denominational church? If so, give me the name."

Stranger: "It was a church of Minister: "Were those who were converted on the day of Pentecost and those who were converted in the home of Cornelius members of a denomination?

Stranger: "I presume not."

Minister: "When Philip preached to the Ethiopian and baptized him, did he unite with a denominational church?"

Stranger: "We presume not." Minister: "These converts were simply Christians, for the reason that they followed Christ and belonged to him."

Minister: "If a man should hold a union meeting in your city and one hundred persons were to hear the gospel, repent of their sins, confess Christ, and be baptized in his name, just like they did on Pentecost, what would they be?"

Stranger: "Christians."

Minister: "To what church would they belong?"

Stranger: "The church of Christ."

Minister: "Suppose twenty should join one denomination, twenty another, twenty another, and forty should decide to meet on the first day

Stranger: "Is it not a fact that the oldest church is the Roman Catholic Church?"

Minister: "It is not the oldest church. The Roman Catholic Church is founded on tradition; the church of Christ is founded on Jesus Christ. The Roman Catholic Church did not come into existence until hundreds of years after the church of Christ was established. Christ's church was founded in the city of Jerusalem; the Roman Catholic Church was founded in Rome."

Minister: "Denominationalism is sectarian, and sectarian means division, and division is a sin. Paul rebuked certain ones in the church at Corinth for wearing the names of inspired men and pronounced it carnal, and he declared that carnality is death. (See 1 Cor. 1: 10-13; 2: 1-9; Rom. 8: 6.) If it is a sin to wear the name of an inspired man, is it not a sin to wear any other name than that of Christ? Human names cause division; division hurts the heart of Christ. (See John 17: 20.) The disciples 'were called Christians first in Antioch.' (Acts 11: 26.) 'If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf." (1 Pet. 4: 16.) -W. H. From the Brethren

Barrackville, W. Va., April 7.—I began a meeting here for the church of Christ, in their new house, on the second Lord's day in March and continued it until Tuesday after the third Lord's day, when my physical strength gave way, and I called Brother T. H. Kirkman, of Wellsville, Ohio, who came and continued the meeting for twelve days longer, closing on the last Lord's-day night with a full house and visitors from other congregations from twelve to fifteen miles around. The meeting was well attended from the beginning, seating room at times being at a premium. The interest was fine all the way through. As results of the meeting, two took membership with the congregation, one was restored to fellowship, and two were baptized. Many new friends were gained for the cause, and the prospects are good for a greater reaping in the near future from this seed sowing. Brother Kirkman knows the Scriptures and handles "the sword of the Spirit" efficiently. We thank God for the success of the gospel and press on in the great work of the Master with greater zeal. May God's richest blessings be with all who are striving for the faith of the gospel.—

J. F. Ice.

Clovis, N. M., April 11.—Since my last report I have preached at Mel-rose, some twenty-five miles west of Clovis, where I make my headquarters; several times over at Farwell, on the line between Texas and New Mexico; and out at Oklahoma Lane, some ten miles over on the Texas side. some ten miles over on the Texas side. I have also been over to Sudan, Texas, to assist the few brethren there in getting started in building up the cause in that new town. A lot was selected upon which to build a house and application made to the owner of the land for the lot or lots, as he donates lots to churches wanting to build, and a building committee was appointed to see after the building of the house. So we are looking forward build, and a building committee was appointed to see after the building of the house. So we are looking forward to the time when these brethren will have a place of their own in which to meet. I have gone to points in this new field where I did not get one cent. I also went to one place by invitation of the brethren (there are but few there), and received only one dollar. This was a trip of seventy miles, too. But I am still here on the job. I am now at Bellview, N. M., some forty miles north of Clovis, where I delivered a lecture in the High School Auditorium to a large crowd. The house would not hold the people. I am to speak at Ruth to-night upon the same subject (evolution and the Bible), and on Sunday morning I am to go back to Clovis and preach both morning and evening. Some few have to go back to Clovis and preach both morning and evening. Some few have ordered a few of my Bible pictures and mottoes. This helps me, and I certainly appreciate it. One church sent me five dollars to help me in preaching the gospel in this part. May the good Lord bless us all in every good word and work. My sick son is better, but his wife is in a sanitarium in Texas. I have been unable to get them out here. I would say to the brethren in New Mexico or at points close to Glovis that I am ready for meetings. Let's get busy.—D. S. Ligon. Rockwood, Tenn., April 14.—We are to begin our meeting on the first Sunday in May. We consider ourselves very fortunate in securing Brother Charles Holder, of Bridgeport, Ala., to labor with us during the meeting. We are to use the tent if the weather will admit. One of our preaching brethren has agreed to help us in a mission meeting in this part of the State this summer. He is a worthy man and a man of family. Who will agree now to support him for this meeting? Then who will agree to help us in another? We can use a dozen preachers. Brethren, if you are doing no mission work, write me that you will support a worthy man for a meeting, and I will try to get the man. I have not the heart to ask a man to come over here without some means of support. Brother Turner, of South Harriman, and I are going to do all we can toward evangelizing this county. Brother Cullum, at Livingston, is to use the tent through June and July; then we are to have it for the rest of the summer and fall.—Thomas J. Wagner.

manila, Ark., April 14.—I came to the State of Arkansas on January 31, and since that time I have preached at the following places: Manila, Blytheville, and Leachville, in Arkansas; Hollywood, Cardwell, and Antioch, in Missouri. There are many of our transgressive brethren in this country. In the month of March they held a meeting at Monette, Ark., and they received members from the Methodist Church who had been sprinkled without baptizing them. We also have a good number who are true and loyal to the Bible. On April 5 the church at Manila went out in the country to a place called "Poplar Corner." We carried dinner, and had a good service and a nice time. I preached that day to a large crowd, and, beginning on Monday night, I preached each night until Friday night. The Methodists let us use their house. The gospel was preached without fear or favor. On Friday evening three Baptists and one Methodist, having learned "the way of the Lord more perfectly," were buried with their Lord in baptism. I hope to do much good in the Lord's vineyard this year. I am now at Manila, preaching here one-fourth time, and at other places the rest of the time. All of my time for this year is taken. About the first of July I shall leave this field to take up my protracted-meeting work in Tennessee. I have a fine little band of Christians with which to labor over here. They are few in number, but they have a mind to work. We have a nice, new house in which to worship.—E. T. Brazzell.

Santa Rosa, Cal., April 15.—The last Sunday in March was a day of great rejoicing for the church here. There being no regular appointment, we let the boys conduct the meeting. We had just finished studying Hebrews in our young people's Sundayschool class, and the talks were all from that book. Six boys spoke—Paul Kindig, Sherman Lanier, Ralph Wilburn, Leonard Wilburn, Tolbert Gardner, and David Gardner. Although it was new to them, they made real speeches, well delivered. The speeches showed a remarkable degree of preparation—good material, well outlined, and just to the point.

* Afterwards Brother Wilburn, one of the elders, made a very appropriate speech of appreciation and commendation. He was so rejoiced at the good work of the boys that he could hardly speak. After the meeting he said: "I might have done a little better if I hadn't bawled so like a big baby crying for another piece of pie." Brother A. D. Gardner spoke at the night service on "The Conscience." People may do wrong. We all do wrong through ignorance and otherwise, but one must follow one's conscience—follow out the highest impulse of the heart according to the light one has. The apostle Paul did this when he was persecuting the Christians, and the trait which caused him to do with his might what he thought to be right, although it was wrong, was the very trait that so well fitted him to be the great apostle, teacher, and leader he was, under so severe and trying persecutions. The Santa Rosa Christian Academy is working nicely. I am sure Brother Gardner's influence with his pupils had a great deal to do with the success of the boys' speeches referred to above.—Felix G. Owen.

A VISION OF THE AGES.

BY W. N. ABERNATHY.

The church of Christ dates its existence from the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ. The congregation planted at Jerusalem on that day became the mother church, and the first persecution resulted in the planting of various churches throughout the Roman Empire, which at that time was just approaching the zenith of its power. Its dominions included almost the entire civilized world, and her institutions embraced the culture of the ages. In A.D. 323 Constantine ascended the throne and embraced Christianity. Christianity now became practically the state religion, which developed into the papacy. Rome now began to be overrun by hordes of barbarians from the north, who embraced the Christian religion and spread it over Central Europe, from whence it found its way to the While these barbarians accepted Christianity from Rome, they rejected her civil institutions, and civilization largely went to pieces when Rome fell in 476 A.D. The fall of Rome with her institution marks the beginning of the "Dark Ages." during which but little progress of any kind was made. For about twelve hundred years civilization slumbered and slept while religion groped its way in darkness. Christendom was divided into what has been known as the "Western Church," or Roman Catholic Church, and the "Eastern Church," or Greek Catholic Church. Mohammedanism, which had risen during the sixth century, was now established in Western Asia, Northern Africa, and in Spain. By the year 1000, Norway and Sweden had been Christianized, England and Ireland having been converted to that faith several centuries before. Jerusalem, the birthplace of the church of Christ, having fallen into the hands of the Mohammedans, became the object of much concern throughout the Christian world, and during the twelfth and thirteenth centuries many efforts in the form of crusades were made to wrest the Holy City from these infidel Turks. Though these crusades failed in their design, they became a factor in the great awakening that was soon to follow. As ignorance is a breeder of corruption, the church suffered severely during the "Dark Ages." When the light of the great world reformation began to be turned on, it revealed conditions that were alarming to the more pious lovers of the Sacred Canon. Wicklyffe's translation of the Bible into the English tongue led to a much clearer knowledge and better understanding of that precious volume. Martin Luther, the noted German scholar, became horrified at the sale of indulgences through the unscrupulous Tetzel, and set in motion the forces that were soon to shake the Christian world from center to circumference. Next we see John Calvin driven from France by persecution, only to fortify himself in the strongholds of Switzerland, where he swings to the opposite extreme from Romanism and gives birth to the theory of unconditional election and predestination. Stepping back to the beginning of the sixteenth century. we see England wrested from the Pope by Henry VIII. and the Church of England established. Printing has been invented and knowledge is spreading everywhere, giving rise to the Renaissance (the new birth). Christopher Columbus has given to the world a new continent and everything is taking on new life. Catholicism has now become jealous of the rising tide of Protestantism and again brandishes the old sword of persecution. But this child of Providence subsequently takes flight on the wings of the Mayflower and plants itself in the soil of freedom.

Unfortunately, the tares of division also find lodgment, and soon Protestantism is an army of warring factions devouring each other. Amidst the religious carnage, Roger Williams appears upon the scene with the flag of religious tolerance, only to be driven into exile. But his doctrines could not be exiled from the hearts in which they had been planted. We will now go back across the Atlantic and see John Wesley as he rescues the Church of England from the slums of infidelity and dissipation. But these are stirring times, and we must hurry over to America to witness the struggle for independence. Now the smoke of battle has scarcely cleared away when we hear the guns of the French Revolution announcing that imperialism must give way to free institutions. But hark! What is that I call hear? During these stormy times of persecution and in traveling through the perilous waters of reformation the religious world lost its compass; they have lost their chart. The crew and sailors are drifting about in the fog of human tradition, guided by conflicting creeds and confessions of faith. Yea, it is the voice of the Campbells, Stone, Scott, and others calling to the sects to lav aside their party names and human creeds and be united upon the Bible as their only chart, the word of God their only compass, and the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures as a rudder to steer them in all their undertakings. Now we are in the dawn of the twentieth century, and never has an era in the world's history opened with the horizon more radiant with the splendor of promise. The ingenuity of the past few decades has blessed the world with seemingly almost every invention possible to meet the needs of the human race, and the channels of commerce are flowing freely with prosperity. But alas! The sky soon becomes darkened with war clouds and the world is engaged in the most Titanic struggle that civilization has ever experienced. In the Argonne forests Imperialism and Democracy meet in deadly combat. The streams are reddened with the blood of both the Eastern and Western continents. Here the divine right of kings makes its last struggle and lies buried in the field of ignorance and superstition. As the smoke of battle clears away Darwinism is asserting its claims, and in this theory of evolution the church is facing a gigantic enemy of which only time can measure its strength. The writings of Voltaire, Tom Paine, and Bob Ingersoll have gone down with the passing of history, but the Bible is now read by more people than ever before. The church has withstood the storms of persecution and the deridings of human philosophy, and it is filling the earth as the waters cover

Because our Savior is invisible is no sign he cannot speak to us or hear what we say to him. Long years ago did we not all hear our mother's voice coming up the stairway where we were afraid of the dark in our little bed? Did not our father speak and quiet our fears? So our Father in heaven speaks; we hear him and are content.-Exchange.

UPERATIONS FOR FEMALE TROUBLES

Some Are Necessary, Some Are Not These Women Gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Fairview, S. Dakota,—"A year ago I was sick in bed for three weeks and the doctor said I would not be any better without an operation. I had bearing-down pains and sick headaches, with pains in the back of my neck. I felt tired all the time, down-hearted, and got poor and pale and was scarcely able to do anything at all for some time before I took to my bed. The doctor said one of my organs was out of place and caused all my troubles. I was too weak and run-down to think of an operation and of an operation and as one of my neighbors told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began taking it. I have received great relief from it and recommend it very highly. It cannot be praised too much in cases of female weakness."—Mrs. O. M. RING, Box 106, Fairview. South Dakots. Fairview, South Dakota.

New Jersey Woman Writes

Camden, New Jersey.—"I take great pleasure in writing you this testimonial. I was a great sufferer of woman's ailments and doctors told me 18 years ago that I must have a serious operation to remove some of my organs. I refused to have it done and took a full course of your medicines for six months, then after the full course I took a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound covery week or two, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine every Spring. I am well and stout and still have my organs they wanted to remove. It was while I was in the hospital that I heard your medicines praised by other patients there. I have recommended them to my friends and to my own family. You may use this testimonial far and near, from the smallest paper to the largest, and I will gladly answer letters from women who wish to know what the Vegetable Compound has done for me and what it will do for them if they give it a fair trial." Mrs. J. RICH, 322 N. 40th St., Camden, New Jersey.

Through neglect, some female trou-bles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary, but most of the common ailments are not surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after operations have been advised.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported that they had been benefited by its use. COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

"I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)

"We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)

"I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pro-nounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)

"We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criti-cism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)

"I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Com-pany. They cannot fail of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)

"The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible atudent. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuff.)

"Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)

"I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)

"The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartily recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)

"A complete assortment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospet Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly com-mend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)

"As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethran's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)

"It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)

"Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is in my judgment, sortptural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day, Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pullias.)

"At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Eliam was one of the has felt that Brother Eliam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson)

"I have used Elam's Quarterlies for very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

"I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptural citations and references—Scriptural that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes. I compare tham weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holi.)

SCRIPTURE STUDIES

BY JAMES A. ALLEN

No man can attain success and happiness in life unless his whole endeavor is to please God. No amount of worldly success, in any line of human endeavor, apart from the service of God, can constitute a successful life.

The knowledge of God is within the intellectual grasp of "the whole creation." The story of Jesus is the most simple and the most profound story ever told. No man with gray matter enough in his cranium to make him responsible can be so illiterate or so unlearned as to be unable to grasp the gospel story. The most talented and learned scholars of earth, after a lifetime of study and toil, are unable to fathom the depths of the fountains of wisdom and knowledge contained in the simple gospel.

The world needs the simple gospel, the simple story of Jesus. All else is vain, unsatisfying, and shadowy. No amount of eloquence, no degree of pulpit entertainment or fascination, can serve as a substitute for just a plain narration of the simple gospel. When a preacher begins to desire to show and preach himself; when he craves popularity and wishes to deliver sermons that will make him famous; when his thought is more to please the people than it is to please God, then his preaching is robbed of the power to bring sinners to the cross, to cause the churches of Christ to flee from the inventions of men and to boldly and candidly strive to come up to the New Testament in doctrine and practice.

"Only let your manner of life," says the apostle to the Gentiles, "be worthy of the gospel of Christ: that, whether recome and see you or be absent, I may hear of your state, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one soul striving for the faith of the gospel." Glorious results are to be anticipated when Christians "stand fast in one spirit" and "with one soul" strive "for the faith of the gospel." God is the author and maker of the bonds that bind Christians together; and such being true, the primary and fundamental thing, that which is necessary to establish unity of effort among them, is to get all to recognize the authority of God.

It is impossible to arouse friction among people who recognize the authority of God, who recognize that it is God's prerogative, not man's, to say what the religious world shall preach and practice. If all denominations would this day resolve to preach and practice nothing except such things as are sustained by a "Thus saith the Lord," how long would division and sectarianism exist in the world? The very moment that all the world accepts the Bible as their guide and resolves to preach and practice the things that are taught therein, adding nothing thereto and diminishing nothing therefrom, that very moment denominationalism will vanish away and nothing will remain but one great brotherhood in Christ.

Two men cannot disagree as long as both of them take the Bible. As long as neither of them preaches anything that cannot be preached in the words of the Bible, union and communion are just as sure to grow and thrive among them as that God is God and as the Bible is the word of God.

There could never be a dispute on any subject if all would preach and teach just what God says. It would be impossible to get up an argument on baptism if no man would say a thing on the subject except what he can read in God's word. The same thing is true of all other subjects.

Some of our brethren, having divided the churches over their speculations on the fulfillment of unfulfilled prophecy, very egotistically assume the rôle of martyr and piously demur that they have a right to preach on every subject they can find in the Bible. Well, it would be difficult to present a more artful misrepresentation than that. Who has ever objected to their preaching on any subject of which the Bible treats? We even go further and say that no one objects to their preaching on unfulfilled prophecy if they will confine their preaching to the simple reading of the unfulfilled prophecy. Trouble does not begin until they leave what they can read and say things that they cannot read. The world can unite on what it reads in God's word. All else must be regarded as apples of discord and as roots of bitterness.

The Bible is the Book for us all. We can never unite on anything else. All who accept it are brethren and "stand fast in one spirit, with one soul striving for the faith of the gospel." Controversy and antagonism cease to be the moment all agree to stand upon "the Bible alone." All who preach or practice anything that they cannot read in the Bible are building on the sand; and when the rains descend, the floods come, and the winds blow, in inconceivable anguish, as long as all eternity, they will bitterly regret that "it fell."

MR. BRYAN'S "BIBLE TALKS." No. 2.

BY A. M'GARY.

In his pathetic outcry for a "union" of his "hundreds of millions of Christians Isectarians I scattered over the world," Mr. Bryan is but wailing to the wild winds—"every wind of doctrine" that enters into the make-up of the foul atmosphere of "orthodox" sectarianism that is stifling real Christianity.

Indeed, they are "scattered"—"scattered" in two senses of the term—geographically and creedally "scattered." In the latter sense they are so badly and confusedly "scattered" that "all the king's horses and all the king's men" could not pull them together into such "union" as that for which Mr. Bryan's sincere heart is so piteously weeping.

In teaching that people need not "necessarily be in one church organization" in order to the accomplishment of "the union" for which Christ prayed, as Mr. Bryan teaches, he is teaching diametrically contrary to both revelation and right reason! It would be as impossible to effect such "union" outside of the "one church organization" to which Christ referred when he said, "Upon this rock I will build my church," as it would be to turn the world over with a broken broom straw.

In Christ's parable of the "vine" and its "branches," to which Mr. Bryan directs attention in his deliverances that I'm considering, the "vine" represents the "one church organization" which Christ was to "build," and did build. How can any one possibly so twist his imagination as to cause it to imagine that the "vine" represents more than "one church organization?"

If there is any lesson at all to be drawn from Christ's saying, "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me," it is that no one who is not "in Christ," in his "church, which is his body" (Eph. 1: 22, 23), can bear "fruit" to the honor and glory of God and Christ.

Had not Mr. Bryan's sectarian forbears fastened denominational spectacles over his spiritual vision with a deathlike grip, I dare say he would not be teaching that the "union" for which Christ prayed can exist outside of the "one church organization" existing by Christ's authority. He's crying for what he calls "Christian union" out of Christ, as is evidenced by his saying, "Not necessarily in one church organization;" for all who are out of the "one church organization" organized or "built" by Christ, "which is his body" (Eph. 1: 22, 23), are out of Christ; for the only way to be "in Christ" is to be in his "body, the church" (Col. 1: 18.)

Mr. Bryan says: "The first step is to become a branch of the 'True Vine.'" This is good, perfectly splendid, as far as he went; but he didn't go far enough. He should have gone on and told the "step"—or, rather, as Paul states it, "the steps of . . . faith"—that one must take to become "a branch of the True Vine." But, in stopping where he did, Mr. Bryan was true to form, the form of his conglomerated theology, the faith of which takes no "steps" in the gospel direction. It takes but one "step" Christward, stubbornly refusing to budge a peg further in that direction, and there dies in its tracks (James 2: 17)—that is, dies as to "the way of righteousness," but remains very much alive and flagrantly active in the "unrighteous" ways of sectarianism, the guides into which ways are "blind guides," who so guide "the blind" that they "fall into the ditch" of delusion.

These "blind guides" say to "the blind" millions:

"We have seen a great light." But the "light" they have seen is not "the marvelous light" of the gospel, but that deceptive and misleading firedrake that is ever loudly quacking, "Lo, here! or, Lo, there! See, here! or, See, there!" in the expansive march of sectarian delusion. Christ says: "Go not after them, nor follow them." Howbeit, "hundreds of Christians [so-called] scattered over the world" have gone after and are following them.

In not going on to tell what "steps" to take in order to "become a branch of the True Vine," Mr. Bryan reminds me—as do all "guides" of his school of confusion—of the very pertinent story of the guide in the desert, who was placed there to guide thirsting wayfarers to a spring beside the way, that they might slake their thirst.

The story goes somewhat as follows: A bunch of wearied, footsore travelers approached the guide with their tongues out and their throats parched from thirst, beseeching him to direct them to the spring, whereupon he began to descant to them in learned and eloquent style about the crystal beauty and icy coldness of the spring's water; and this he kept up till, from suffering impatience, they cried out: "Please show us where the spring is!" Then he became as eloquently loquacious about the refreshingness of the water. When they could endure the delay no longer, in moaning tone they said: "Point out the way to the spring at once, else we perish." His reply was: "There are so many ways to it that it's 'not necessary' for all of you to go the same way. Let each of you choose the way he believes will carry him to the spring and conscientiously pursue it, and you'll all get there." To say the least of this matter, that "guide" was strictly "orthodox," as most of the world counts "orthodoxy."

As Mr. Bryan said, in substance (I've mislaid the article containing his very words), that he desired and "prayed for correction," wherein he might be in error, and as I regard him as a profoundly sincere man in error, I'll conclude my consideration of his teachings by asking some questions, hoping that he may duly consider them.

How does one "become a branch of the True Vine?" Or, as becoming "a branch of the True Vine" and becoming a member of "Christ's body," or "church," are but two ways of speaking of one and the same spiritual state or condition, how does one become a member of Christ's church, or body? As I so well know the teaching of the theology under which Mr. Bryan has been reared, I can easily anticipate his reply to my question, if he shall deem it worthy of his attention—I do anticipate and express it as follows: "By faith only."

Now, knowing—as I think I do—Mr. Bryan's humility of spirit and broadness of mind, I'm expecting him to give some sort of attention to my remarks concerning his publicly expressed religious views. Hence, I will answer, in advance, the so-called "orthodox" "faith-alone idea" of becoming "a branch of the True Vine," or becoming a member of the church or body of Christ, or becoming a Christian, as briefly as I possibly can, in order to save space for some other questions and considerations. I do this, in order—if he shall pay attention to my kindly meant criticisms—that he may be able to clearly distinguish between his and my ideas pertaining to the question.

John 8: 31, 32 says: "Jesus said to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." This "freedom" is evidently the "freedom" referred to by Paul when he said: "Ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness." (Rom. 6: 17, 18.) And, evidently this freedom referred to by Christ and Paul is freedom from sins of their then "past." (See Rom. 4: 25.)

But here is the main point I desire to impress: As Jesus said to "those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," it stands out as clearly as the shining sun at high noon that Jesus does not regard belief on him, without obedience to him, as any badge of "freedom from sins," or even of discipleship.

As Christ states that those "who believe on him" must, after "believing on him," "continue in his word" in order to be made "free," or be his "disciples indeed," away goes—or ought to go—that Luther-devised delusion, salvation (or freedom from sin) "by faith only," or, as Mr. Bryan calls it in his lesson I'm reviewing, "vital connection with Christ"—"a branch of the True Vine." Of ccurse salvation is by faith, because "without faith it is impossible to please" God. But the point in the divine scheme of redemption at which faith reaches salvation is the point of obedience. Hence, Paul wrote: "We have received grace and apostleship, for obedience to the faith among all nations, for his name." This is the same "obedience" to which he referred in Rom. 6: 17, 18.

John 1: 11 says: "He [Christ] came to his own [his own people—the Jews], and his own received him not [did not believe on him—that is, a vast majority of them did not]. But as many as received him [believed on him], to them gave he power [privilege] to become the sons of God." This was the condition of "those Jews which believed on him," to whom he said: "If ye continue in my word, ye shall be my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Thus "to them gave he power [privilege] to become the sons of God."

"Believing on Christ" is good, provided the believer continues in his word till it makes him free, or, as Paul puts it, "believes to the saving of the soul." (Heb. 10: 30.) Otherwise, belief in Christ is no better than belief in Mohammed. Many during Christ's time on earth "believed on him," who did not continue in his word till it made them free—did not "believe to the saving of their souls." Such was the case with "many of the chief rulers" among the Jews. (See John 12: 42.) And such is evidently the case to-day with a very vast majority of those "hundreds of millions of Christians [sectarians] scattered over the world"—they have not "believed to the saving of their souls," because they are "drawing back" (see Heb. 10: 39) from "the obedience to the faith" to which Paul refers in Rom. 1: 5.

I have disappointed myself in this article, in that, when I began it, it was my intention to herein say all I had purposed saying in review of Mr. Bryan's teachings. But much of it remains unsaid. So I beg the Gospel Advocate to indulge me a little more.

A FORETASTE OF THE BETTER WORLD. BY S. H. HALL.

Recently it was my pleasure to be in Atlanta, Ga., for two days. A union service had been arranged at the West End Avenue house of worship on the Wednesday night I was to be there. It stirred my soul to see such a fine audience, consisting of old friends with whom I had formerly labored and quite a number of new faces I had not seen before. At my request, they sang some of the old songs that we considered our leaders when I lived and labored in that city, such as "Keep on Climbing," "Travel On," and "The Grand Old Book." It has been some time since I heard singing that sounded so good as this. I would love to call every old friend by name and tell something good that I know about each, but space forbids this. There is one thing that is a peculiar pleasure to meviz, that after laboring with those people for about fourteen years, I left them with not one enemy among them, so far as I know. I would not take a world like this for their love and esteem. Some of the sweet faces of their best were not seen, because they have slipped away into that better world; but they still live in the hearts of those who continue the good work.

Brother B. C. Goodpasture, in whose hands this work was left when we moved to Los Angeles, is in a class almost to himself among our young preachers. He obscrved his thirtieth birthday the day before I arrived in that city. He is a student, reads much, and is always growing. He has one of the best libraries I have ever seen. The work has prospered in his hands, they having to enlarge their auditorium to accommodate the crowds, and now need to do so again.

I was glad to learn of the great work Brother McBroom is doing at South Pryor Street. They are having a full house now all the time.

Brother N. B. Hardeman had just closed a fifteen-days' revival the Sunday before I was there. His preaching had great effect in deepening the appreciation of the members in the old Jerusalem gospel.

Such meetings as I had with the old friends in Atlanta make me think of "the better world." It is good to go back and see old friends and talk of the good old days we spent together in the Christian warfare; but it will be a better day when we can meet all the heroes and heroines of the faith in the home of the soul, where we can spend eternity together talking of our battles on earth and of how our Lord made us victors in every contest so long as we trusted him by faithfully surrendering to his leadership.

Just now the Russell and Ninth Streets Church is enjoying her greatest prosperity. Our house is full every Lord's day. There were five confessions last Sunday (April 19), among the number a prominent Methodist. Our young people are working better than I have ever seen at any time or place. May the Lord help us to keep the good work going.

THE EVILS OF INFIDELITY.

BY ALFRED ELLMORE.

One of the strange things is that when some men lose faith in God's word they become immoral. I have in mind a boy whose mother and grandmother were strong in the faith of Christ until the death of the parents, when they broke up and scattered, and this boy went to work among some immoral people, where he imbibed some of their false teaching, and he forsook the worship, and soon he began to drink and swear, and went from bad to worse, until he became an outcast, a vagabond complete. And though we suffer our faith in Christ to weaken, what possible benefit can it become to us to drop into sin and disgrace? But this is the tendency. When we lose faith in Gcd, we soon lose everything, both here and hereafter. But if we cling to our faith in the Bible, we gain everything here and have the assurance of eternal life.

Another very strange thing is that a large majority of those who are outspoken against the Bible are those who know but little about its contents. Very few can quote intelligently from memory from the great Book.

But one who who has become skeptical asks: "What evidence have you that there is such a Being as the one whom you adore and worship, and of the city with its beauty and its grandeur as a home of eternal happiness for man?"

We answer: Of ourselves we know nothing of the country; and since the Bible is our only source of information, and it is always perfectly reliable, we receive these wonderful things, not as matters of knowledge (we have not seen them), but, having heard of them, we receive them by faith. And since the Holy Bible is the only source of information pertaining to the great future, we kindly ask of you how you obtained the knowledge that the Bible is only a great storybook, and that there is no God and no devil, no heaven and no hell. Please reveal to us the truths from some other source not revealed in the Bible. Tell us, please. If you know, give us the source of your knowledge; if you only believe, give us your evidence. But if you have neither faith nor knowledge, please withhold your opinions. The world has already a thousandfold too many religious opinions. Give us revelations as old as the Bible. And since you know so many things about God and man, you know that man is an eternal being. Spirits never die. So God, man, and the Bible truths endure forever. And you should not marvel that men of faith are anxious about the future. Believing the Bible, we believe there is a heaven, a place of eternal rest for the righteous; and believing this, we believe there is also a place for the wicked.

And since God is infinite in all his attributes and in all his works, he does things, not only just right, but perfect—his way and no other way. In the final ending he will either save all in one great throng, the righteous and the wicked together, or he will separate them.

But says another: "I do not believe that a Being who is infinite in all his attributes—love, power, goodness, and mercy—will consign one of his creatures to eternal punishment." Certainly not! To illustrate: Here is a rich man who has an only son, on whom he is spending his love and means. But the boy has contracted the sin of drunkenness, and the father has spent time and means, cried and prayed, to reform him, but all to no purpose; he continues in his evil way and fills a drunkard's grave. Now, did the father send his son to ruin? No, but he let him go to ruin. So will God do with those who do wickedly in spite of all his entreaties. He will let them go to hell. Why, the grossly wicked cannot enjoy the strictly pious here for one hour; then how could they, if permitted, enjoy such associations forever?

NEED A MEETINGHOUSE.

BY J. A.

About ten years ago some interested Christians, with Sister J. Claude Martin, of Nashville, Tenn., induced Brother Henry T. King to go to Quebeck, Tenn., for the purpose of conducting a mission meeting. As a direct result of that meeting, there were ten baptisms, and also much favorable interest was aroused, which has continued until the present time, notwithstanding many discouragements. From the first the interest of those who assisted in starting this work has never waned, and they have sought opportunity to assist the brethren at Quebeck to permanently establish it.

A desirable location has been secured for the erection of a meetinghouse, with the restrictive clause in the deed, and the brethren are now anxious for assistance in building a modest house in which to worship "as it is written." The need is urgent and the people are in every way worthy. Help extended them will bear much fruit to the glory of our Lord.

Besides Sister Martin, of Nashville, who contributed the lot upon which to build, the first contribution to the erection of this meetinghouse comes from Sister W. H. Vandyke, of Alamo, Tenn. Sister Vandyke, who worships with the Cairo congregation, near Alamo, sends two dollars and says: "I am now sending the widow's mite from mother and boys, and I am sending a hearty Godspeed to Sister J. Claude Martin in her efforts to plant the cause at Quebeck. My daily prayers and my every effort, though feeble they may be, as God knows my poor heart, is that all may come to a knowledge of the truths of the gospel in its fullness and that they may study to show themselves approved unto God, workmen that need not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth."

The brethren at Quebeck are poor and financially unable to build a meetinghouse; and as such a house is badly needed, we feel sure that many congregations, as well as individual brethren and sisters, would like to have a part in it. Brother King, who held the meeting already mentioned, says: "I want to add my word of personal guaranty and special appeal in behalf of these brethren at Quebeck. I know them, and know what Sister Martin has already done for them, and I assure the brethren of the integrity of this appeal."

We commend this very worthy appeal to the brethren. All who desire to have a part in assisting these brethren at Quebeck may send their donations to Mrs. J. Claude Martin, 2314 West End Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 16. BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

THE ONE FOUNDATION. (Verses 10-15.)

Verse 10. According to the grace of God which is given unto me. This grace was given to Paul when he was called to the apostleship. This I take to be "the grace of apostleship." (Rom. 1; 5; 1 Cor. 15: 10; Gal. 2; 9; 2 Cor. 6: 1; 12: 9.) He ascribes the work at Corinth to God and not to himself. A wise master builder. A skilled carpenter in all manner of workmanship. I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. Paul laid the foundation at Corinth, and Apollos brought in new material upon it, and gave the whole church a cultivation. God was the Architect or Master Builder; Paul and Apollos, the carpenters. The Architect drew up the designs and the carpenters executed them. Let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. Since Christ is the only foundation of the church, there should be a most careful building upon it, that all the teaching and material may be consistent with the foundation. Paul "laid the foundation "-that is, he was the first to teach them the rudiments and fundamental principles of the Christian religion. The foundation was laid in the minds or hearts of people by preaching the gospel and the cultivation done by exhorting the church to duty. It is the first duty of the gospel preacher to lay at first a good foundation of scripture knowledge in the minds and understandings of the people. Unless we have a knowing people, we cannot expect a strong spiritual building. All sermons will be dashed to pieces upon the rock of man's ignorance, if they be not well taught and instructed in the principles of Christianity. Hence the importance of both the teacher and the taught studying the Scriptures. Paul is careful to ascribe all his strength and success as a wise master builder to the grace of God. It is the duty of every godly man to attribute all the good which is either received or done by him to God. We should observe the admonition of Paul to all spiritual builders to take heed that they lay no other foundation than that which was laid by himself, and that they build suitably upon this foundation. They are to be careful that they preach no other doctrine than what Christ and the apostles preached and laid as the foundation of Christianity, and that they do not build upon that foundation any doctrine which may endanger their own or the people's salvation.

11. For other foundation can no man lay, etc. There is only one foundation of the church, and that is Christ. (Matt. 16: 16.) This foundation stone was laid by God. (Isa. 28: 16.) Paul's work under the directions of God was to point men to this foundation as the only Savior and to induce them to believe and obey the gospel, and thus lead them upon the foundation. Paul's preaching laid the foundation among the Corinthians-that is, the principles of the gospel in their hearts. To preach Christ is to preach the fundamental or foundation truths of the gospel. Paul is not speaking of a system of doctrine, but of Christ, the foundation of the spiritual building or temple of God, consisting of all who believe and obey the gospel. Of this temple Christ is called the foundation, because on him, as the Christ or Son of God, the whole fabric rests. Hence, all obedient believers are said to be "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." (Eph. 2: 20.) Christ is the firm, immovable Rock of Ages, in every way sufficiently strong to bear all the weight that God himself or the obedient believer can lay upon him. God, in his divine wisdom, in the promises and prophecies of the Old Testament and in the preaching of the apostles, pointed out Christ as the Rock of Ages. Teachers of the gospel of Christ ought to lay no other foundation than Christ. They are to lead people to, and build them upon, no other rock but Christ. All threatenings, promises, commands, duties, and privileges are to be preached and pressed with respect to Christ. He is to be laid as the only foundation in respect of knowledge, in respect of faith, in respect of justification, in respect of intercession and acceptance with God. The teacher's great work is to set Christ forth in all his glorious fullness, to represent him in all his offices, as a glorious object for the eye of faith to look unto and fix upon.

12. If any man build upon this foundation, etc. Observe that the apostle does not allude to the doctrine of Christ, but to the material built on this foundation, called "gold," "silver," etc. The doctrine of Christ is never represented as the church; but the material, the disciples, is the temple or church of God. These are "lively stones built up a spiritual house." (1 Pet. 2: 5, 6.) Christ is the only foundation for all builders to build upon. The church or temple will be of the character of the material built upon it. If this material be imperishable and molded into the image of Christ by the apostolic teaching, it will be well. If erroneous doctrines be taught and unstable men-wood, hay, stubble-be brought onto the foundation, all will be destroyed. Men and women are this material. The immovable is the gold, silver, and precious stones. The unstable is the wood, hay, and stubble. There are three kinds of material that can stand the test of fire and three that cannot. Some think that Paul here speaks of two sorts of preachers under the metaphor of builders-(1) some that are sound and orthodox, who hold the foundation, and build upon it gold, silver, and precious stones—that is, such sincere and wholesome doctrine as will bear the touchstone and trial; (2) others that are unsound and erroneous, who hold indeed the foundation of Christianity, but build upon it such doctrines as will not stand the trial, expressed by wood, hay, and stubble, which are not proof against the fire. It is true that good and wholesome doctrine is as good as gold, and that all erroneous and false doctrines are no better than wood, hay, or stubble, vain and unprofitable, vile and contemptible, and will be cast away as dross; yet these are not what Paul is here considering, as is seen from reasons given above. He who teaches false doctrine is no better than the doctrine, and is under as great condemnation as, if not greater than, the doctrine; yet he who "suffers loss" "shall be saved." (Verse 15.) Why should he lose his doctrine and yet be saved himself?

13. Every man's work shall be made manifest. That is, the material each builder brings onto the foundation will be tried and proven what sort it is. For the day shall declare it. That is, the day in which the material is tested. Some think this the day of Christ's coming, but I am persuaded in my own mind that it is the day of testing. The fire shall try every man's work, etc. The fiery trials of persecutions and temptations. As fire destroys wood, hay, and stubble, but leaves the gold, silver, and precious stones, so the unstable material brought upon the one foundation by the builder will apostatize when the fiery persecutions and temptations come upon them. Romish clergy, perceiving that his doctrine, properly managed, might be made an inexhaustible source of wealth to their order, have represented this fire of purgatory as lighted up from the very beginning of the world, and have kept it burning ever since, and have assumed to themselves the power of detaining souls in that fire, and of releasing them from it according to their own pleasure; whereby they have drawn great sums of money from the ignorant and superstitious." This cannot be the popish purgatory fire, because Paul says, "The fire shall try every man's work," and the popish purgatory fire does not do this. His tries the wicked ones only, while the fire spoken of by Paul tries every Christian's work.

14. If any man's work shall abide, etc. Stand the test. He shall receive a reward. That is, the builder's material will be saved.

CALLS FOR BROTHER SRYGLEY.

BY J. A.

Last year, with the help of some of the readers of the Gospel Advocate, Brother F. B. Srygley, one of our senior editors, responded to a very urgent call for preaching in some of the Western States. Brother Srygley spent some time in Colorado and New Mexico and succeeded in accomplishing much good.

Among those baptized by Brother Srygley last year were two persons to whom baptism was peculiar and unique, as neither of them had ever seen any one baptized before. Brother Srygley is eminently fitted to carry the gospel to new fields. He preaches to the people with a plainness and simplicity that enables them to at once appreciate the clear teaching of the word of God and to recognize the importance of conforming to a "Thus saith the Lord."

We are very much interested in encouraging Brother Srygley in missionary work of this kind, as we should send our best preachers to new and difficult fields. Earnest and insistent calls have come to him, from the places where he preached last year, to return to them again this year; and to Brother Srygley's credit, we are glad to announce that he has consented to go and that he is making his arrangements accordingly. He intends, if the Lord wills, to hold at least three meetings in these destitute places of the West.

And as these places are unable to sustain Brother Srygley financially while preaching for them, we are suggesting that readers of the Gospel Advocate lend a hand and have a part in the work. We are aware that many of our readers would rejoice to participate in missionary efforts of this kind, and that the consensus of opinion is that more work of this kind should be done.

All who desire to assist Brother Srygley in responding to these Macedonian calls and in preaching the gospel at these destitute points may send their donations to James A. Allen, Gospel Advocate office, Nashville, Tenn., and proper acknowledgment will be made.

BROTHER McQUIDDY'S BOOK.

"The Profitable Word" contains a choice selection of the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, editor and publisher of the Gospel Advocate for over forty years, carefully compiled by A. B. Lipscomb. It is a gem and contains some of the best thoughts of a great mind. The book contains 196 pages, and is neatly bound in silk and stamped in gold and white metal. Now ready. Send $1.50 and get a copy.

HEALTH HINTS

- 1. A healthy appetite is to be acquired by early rising, regular exercise in the open air, a cheerful mind, and abstinence from tobacco, narcotics, and intoxicating liquors.
- 2. The food should be eaten slowly, so that it may be well masticated and mixed with the saliva.
- 3. Animal food is sooner digested in the stomach than vegetable, but it is more stimulating or heating to the system. Flesh that has been long salted—dried hams, beef, etc.—is less easily digested and less nutritive than fresh meat.
- 4. Farinaceous and vegetable food, generally, is slower of digestion than animal, but it is less heating. Many kinds of vegetable food are very nutritive.
- 5. Solid food or food of a certain fibrous or pulpy consistence is more fitted for digestion in the stomach than rich soups, jellies, and all highly concentrated sauces. The latter are rendered more digestible by the addition of bread.
- 6. In summer the food should consist principally of vegetables; in winter a larger amount of animal matter may be taken, especially by the laborer.
- 7. Bread constitutes a wholesome addition to all our meals. It should be perfectly raised, fully baked, and one day old.
- 8. Salt, on all occasions, and a very moderate quantity of pepper are safe and grateful additions to our food. Beyond this, however, all seasoning becomes injurious.
- 9. Eating of a number of different dishes at one meal oppresses the stomach and interferes with digestion. This is not to be understood, however, as condemning the proper admixture of animal and vegetable food at the same meal.
- 10. All excess in eating should be avoided; but the quantity of food proper to be taken at one time depends entirely on the constitution, age, habits, degree of health, season of the year, climate, etc. The best guide is to be found in the calls of a healthy appetite.
- 11. Health and strength of body depend upon the health of the stomach, and consequent perfection of the digestive powers, much more than upon the quantity or even the quality of the food taken.
- 12. Water is the most wholesome drink. Toast and water, sweetened water, or water with a slight addition of a vegetable acid are useful diluents during the summer.
- 13. Distilled and fermented liquors impede digestion, and, when drunk to any extent, invariably destroy the tone of the stomach and of the system generally.
- 14. The stomach ought not to be overdistended with fluids during, immediately preceding, nor after a meal.
- 15. When the stomach is weak, very little fluid should be taken during or after eating. Dry, solid food requires more dilution than that which is juicy or fluid.
- 16. Exercise should be used in the intervals between meals, but not immediately before or after them.

CAUSES OF DISEASE.

The causes of most of our diseases, or at least of that numerous class which it is in our power entirely to prevent, may be enumerated thus:

1. Insufficient Exercise.—He who does not spend several hours every day in some active exercise—as walking, riding on horseback, or in some amusement which calls nearly all the muscles into play—must inevitably suffer from a diminution of bodily strength, defect of appetite, and imperfect digestion, and become sooner or later the subject of disease.

- 2. Late Rising and Late Retiring.—There are few things which contribute more to shorten life than the habit of keeping late hours, and consequently of rising from bed late in the morning. The advances of weakness and disease from this cause are, it is true, by very gradual steps, but not the less certain to be ultimately felt.
- 3. Breathing Impure Air.—A constant supply of fresh air is even more important than of food or drink. An individual may, for a long time, control the sensation of hunger, or even the more imperious one of thirst, but life will most certainly be destroyed if pure air be withheld from the lungs for a very short period. The air is rendered impure by being loaded with animal and vegetable exhalations, by its free circulation being prevented by a number of persons breathing it when confined in a close chamber, and by the processes of fermentation and combustion.
- 4. Insufficient Ablutions of the Body.—It is not enough for the preservation of health that merely the hands, the feet, and the face be washed frequently, but that the whole surface of the body be repeatedly purified by immersion in a bath of appropriate temperature. To all, the frequent use of the bath is an important means of preserving health, but to none more so than to the laborer and mechanic; and to such the time and means for bathing should be afforded in every city and every extensive manufactory, wherever situated.
- 5. Inattention to the Cleanliness of Clothing and Dwellings.—Independently of the injury which the health of individuals suffers from a neglect of strict personal and domestic cleanliness, the contamination of the air from the decomposition of filth accumulated in and about a dwelling has not infrequently communicated disease to whole families and neighborhoods. Repeatedly whitewashing the walls of a house and scrubbing the floors is not merely, therefore, a source of tasteful comfort, but a direct means of preserving health.
- 6. Food Rendered Pernicious by Modern Cookery; Adulteration in Foods and Drinks; and Abuse of Appetite.— While a moderate quantity of plain, wholesome food—in other words, the food in ordinary use—is essential to the maintenance of life, all excess in its use, all complicated processes of cookery, and every artificial means, whether by high seasoning, variety of dishes, or foreign savors, of keeping up the appetite beyond the wants of the system, are decidedly injurious. Every species of adulteration, also, to which our food or drink is subjected, from whatever motive, detracts from its wholesomeness. Let it be remembered, too, that the health and strength of the body are not supported by the quantity of food consumed, but only by so much as is capable of being converted, by the powers of the stomach, into pure chyle and blood.
- 7. Giving Way to the Passions.—Experience fully proves that nothing contributes more effectually to guard the system from disease and to prolong life than a calm and contented state of mind. Individuals who give way on every occasion to the influence of passion not only injure materially their health, but are often promptly destroyed. Violent anger and ambition, jealousy and fear, have produced the speedy death of thousands. In cultivating an amiable, peaceful, and virtuous disposition, therefore, a man not only insures his happiness, but promotes his health also.
- 8. The Unnecessary or Imprudent Use of Medicine.— Pomestic quackery has ruined many constitutions. A dose of medicine taken with the view of preventing an attack of disease not infrequently invites one which otherwise would not have occurred. The absurd practice of loosing blood or taking purgatives and other remedies in the spring and autumn, under the erroneous idea that by so doing the blood is rendered more pure, should be carefully avoided.

IGNORANCE OF THE BIBLE.

That the present generation is ignorant of the Bible, no one disputes, and many charge that much of the crime of our day is due to the fact that the Bible is an unknown book in many homes. If you consider it as a book of worship, in which we find revealed the will of God for our salvation, this ignorance and indifference are not to be wondered at, for man by nature cares nothing for salvation as pointed out there. All that the Bible teaches is feolishness to him, because it is spiritually discerned.

For this reason, when we hear men lamenting the indifference of men toward the Bible, while we may regret it, we never wonder at it. It is just what one would expect, and, in fact, it is what the Bible itself teaches.

From another point of view, it is a matter of wonder. The Bible not only points out the way of salvation, but, apart from this, it is a storehouse of literature, giving the finest specimens of poetry and history that are to be found in our language.

Harvard University, founded in 1636, is not only the oldest college, but it had an attendance in 1924 of nearly seven thousand students.

When a man has a diploma from Harvard, he is supposed to be thoroughly educated.

Despite these facts, when Dr. Stratton, of New York, lectured before three hundred Harvard students, he discovered that only six of them had read the Bible in the course of that day and that only eighteen admitted that they had read it through.

Only one-fourth of them would confess that they believed in a living God, and even less than that were willing to admit the divinity of Jesus Christ.

This country is classified as one of the Christian nations of the world; yet, if these three hundred educated men are a fair specimen of the people of the United States, we fear that the classification is wrong.

We hope that the parents of our section will realize the importance of Bible instruction and begin in early youth to train their children.—Exchange.

NOTES FROM WEST TENNESSEE.

BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

Notes from West Tennessee are scattering and far between. Several reasons for this could be given, but not necessary. One main reason is my physical condition, with which I do not wish to burden the readers by calling attention to the three or four different ailments the doctors have located in this old body of flesh. I am not worried over these fleshly ailments like I am about the spiritual ones. I am trying to keep up my regular Bible reading and study of duty to God and my fellow man. Knowing my condition better than others, except the doctors, and knowing that unless I should get better soon I could not fill my engagements for this year, I notified each place where I had promised to labor of the fact and told them if they so desired they could call some one to fill the time I had promised. All but one said: "We will wait and see if you won't get better. If you don't, then will there be time enough for us to look out for some one else." This made me feel better. Another thing that made me feel much better, and for which I thank God, a few brethren and sisters that I have never seen in the flesh sent me a contribution and their prayers for me and mine. Each one told me how much he or she enjoyed reading "Notes from West Tennessee." May God bless each and all of them. I hope and pray that I may never betray such love and confidence.

Last Lord's day (April 19), morning and evening, 1 preached at the Kentucky Schoolhouse in Kentucky Bend. At but few places and but few times in life have I ever witnessed such zeal and devotion to the teaching of the Bible. Never before have I witnessed such a change in an entire neighborhood as can be seen in Kentucky Bend. One night out of every week they meet at the home of some brother or sister and spend an hour or two in singing. Another thing that is visible, they have the old-time gospel love for each other. As a matter of course, the devil will invade the sanctity, love, and fellowship of the congregation after a while and scatter the flock. By the help of God, while able, I shall do all I can to keep him out, and help them in every way I can to hold fast unto the end. Of all the congregations that I have built up since I began preaching, I stayed with them until they quit me. All have quit me but two. Of course they quit in order to do better. No one can lay any blame to them for that.

I notice in a religious paper where a brother preacher contends that all preachers should be graduates of some college or university, with a "D.D." or "Ph.D." to their names. In this he may be right. But if he is right in this, what about the great amount of work done by poor preachers with a limited education-never able to go to college? Will all this work be lost from the fact that the preacher was not a graduate of some institution of learning possessing the legal right to confer degrees? Not long ago, when a certain preacher's name was mentioned in regard to holding a meeting, it was remarked by some: "No, it will never do to call that man; he is not educated well enough to preach for this congregation." I am not an educated (degree) man, but I claim to have common sense. I also claim that an education is all right unless it makes a fool of the fellow. In that event, it would be better for him to be as I am, and many more gospel preachers that I know, who are not what the world calls "educated" men, but who know the old story and love to tell it to poor lost souls whenever and wherever they can. Will some highly educated preacher tell me if all the work done by us uneducated preachers will be lost? Brother Tant, which way are we "drifting" now?

SERMON OUTLINES

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION

A Book of Three Hundred New Sermon Outlines

BY A. J. BACHMAN.

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bibleclass teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has three hundred sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

320 pages. Price, $1, postpaid. Address Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn. A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, Advocate Compa Nashville, Tenn.

OUR MESSAGES

Let us hope that this dancing business is on its last legs. Philip, the evangelist, was one who preached a full gospel.

"If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

God allows a man to advance as fast as he is willing to advance,

Some people who believe in God would rather not study the Bible.

The man who makes mistakes in little things will make them in big things.

Clayton L. James preached at Lindsley Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

There are two destinies—eternal life, eternal death. Which will be yours?

We should never become wise at the expense of goodness as did Adam and Eve.

Be a man with a mission, and ever be conscious of a great and glorious destiny.

The man who does not cultivate a taste for reading good books never realizes what he misses.

The man who is always trying to get into a bigger place is usually too small for the place he is in.

There is not much danger that a man will die of overwork if he never does anything but his duty.

- L. G. Thomas, of the David Lipscomb College, preached at Pilcher Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.
- J. R. Hovious preached for the Green Street congregation, this city, last Lord's day, morning and evening.

Cultivate and grow

- "Humility, that low, sweet root From which all heavenly virtues shoot."
- S. H. Hall preached at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day. There was one by statement and one baptized.
- R. H. Boll's doctrine reviewed is found in a new tract just from the press, by R. L. Whiteside and C. R. Nichol. Order from Mrs. C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas. Fifty cents per copy.
- G. L. Cullum closed a two-weeks' meeting at Joe Johnston Avenue, this city on Surface right. There were good crowds and fine singing throughout the meeting. The song service was led by Clayton Smith, of West Nashville. There was one baptism.
- W. H. Callender preached at Owens Chapel, in Williamson County, Tenn., last Lord's day. Brother Callender was an elder in this congregation for many years. At the age of eighty-two he is still hale and hearty and taking a great interest in the work of the Lord. Brother Callender is a stanch friend of the Gospel Advocate."
- W. D. Bills, San Antonio, Texas, April 14: "Excellent services at the Grove Avenue congregation last Lord's day. Three added to the congregation by baptism and one by membership. One other to be baptized to-morrow night. I am to begin a meeting at Fort Worth next week with Jesse P. Sewell and the Southside congregation."
- J. D. Derryberry, Macon, Ga., April 25: "The tent meeting in South Macon, which began on April 12, continues with increasing interest. Brother Landis is depending wholly upon the gospel as God's power to convert the people. To date one has been added by primary obedience and one reclaimed. The meeting will continue indefinitely."
- P. L. Copeland, St. Augustine, Fla., April 25: "R. C. White, with J. D. Derryberry directing the singing, is to hold a meeting in St. Augustine, beginning on the first Lord's day in May and continuing three weeks if interest demands. We shall be glad to have visiting brethren or brethren passing through town attend the meeting. In this meeting the gospel will be preached as it was on the day of Pentecost, and we are trusting that much good may be done."

The review of R. H. Boll by Whiteside and Nichol covers his teaching of the kingdom, the second coming of Christ, and the book of Revelation. The review is fifty cents per copy. Order from Mrs. C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas.

James P. Drane, Newalla, Okla., April 24: "George W. Miller was with the New Hope congregation last Lord's day and preached a splendid sermon on the establishment of the kingdom. Brother Miller is an able gospel preacher, and any congregation wanting a preacher for meetings will do well to call him. His address is Chandler, Okla., Route 7, Box 52."

Will W. Slater, Irving, Texas, April 13: "Crowded house at all services yesterday. It was the beginning of our spring meeting. One man, seventy-three years of age, a Baptist, made the good confession and was baptized for the remission of sins. James E. Laird, from Tulsa, Okla., will be here to-day to continue the meeting for two weeks. I am to be with him in Tulsa the first of May."

A. B. Lipscomb is in a great meeting with the church on Eighth Avenue, North, this city, with good crowds and increasing interest. Brother Lipscomb is delivering a series of splendid sermons. There have been four baptized at this writing, one of whom came from the Presbyterians. Lytton Alley, one of the elders of the congregation, is ably assisting in the meeting. W. G. Klingman is conducting the song service.

Ben West, Sinton, Texas, April 16: "I spoke at funerals at Rockport and Aransas Pass during the last week. Large crowds at all Sunday services. A fine service of song at Taft in the afternoon. I am to speak at Adams next Lord's day in the afternoon. The Sinton church is in a continuous revival, with thirty added in the last three months. We have one of the best male quartets, all members and officers of the Sinton church, and we have spirited gospel singing in all services."

Sister B. W. Davis, 939 Delmas Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., April 24: "Since last report Mr. Davis has gained strength. His general condition seems to be improved. The doctors think he will be able to undergo another operation in a few days. The next will be extracting his teeth. Owing to his condition, they advise that he go to the hospital. We hope, however, he will not have to remain many days. As soon as he recovers from this, they will reamputate his limb. We are hoping that this will result in a permanent restoration of health. We are at present in need of help, and will appreciate continued help until Mr. Davis is through with his operations."

J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., April 20: "We had two splendid sermons yesterday at the C and Kankakee Streets Church. Charles Stetson, an old pioneer preacher, was with us at the night service and gave us a splendid lesson, Brother Stetson has been in this State for more than forty years, and was a sure-enough cowboy for years before he was converted to Christianity, since which time he has been on the go, preaching the gospel. To see a man with the infirmities of age fighting for 'the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints' is a very great encouragement to me, and leads me to resolve anew to try a little harder to do more than before. I love all gospel preachers, young or old, but, somehow, I have a tenderer feeling for an old soldier than I have for a young one."

As indicating the demand on David Lipscomb College for men to deliver commencement sermons, we mention the following: A. G. Freed is to deliver the commencement sermon for the high school at Huntingdon, Tenn., on the first Sunday in May. Brother Freed is also to deliver the commencement sermon at Cornersville, Tenn., on the second Sunday in May, and at Gainesboro, Tenn., on the third Sunday. W. H. Owen delivered the commencement sermon at Blountsville, Ala., last Sunday. R. P. Cuff is to preach the commencement sermon at Winfield, Ala., on the second Sunday in May. E. H. Ijams is to preach the commencement sermon at Shop Springs, Tenn., on the second Sunday in May. H. Leo Boles is to preach the commencement sermon at Manchester, Tenn., on the first Sunday in May. Brother Boles is also to make the commencement address for the high school at Adairville, Ky., on Friday, May 15. E. A. Elam is to deliver the commencement sermon for the high school at Dibrell, Tenn., on the first Sunday in May. Brother Elam is also to deliver the commencement address at Burritt College on May 8, and to preach the commencement sermon for the high school at Moulton, Ala., on the third Sunday in May. S. P. Pittman is to preach the commencement sermon for David Lipscomb College on the fourth Sunday in May. C. M. Pullias is to deliver the class address for the David Lipscomb College on Wednesday, May 27.

- T. Q. Martin is in a meeting at Reid Avenue, this city.
- J. Leonard Jackson preached at Watertown, Tenn., last Sunday.
- R. P. Cuff preached at Boscobel Street, this city, the last two Sundays.
- D. C. Allen, Oakland, Cal., April 20: "I am trying to get others to subscribe for the Gospel Advocate."
- C. R. Nichol will begin a meeting in Mount Pleasant, Tenn., on May 10. C. H. Woodroof will assist in the meeting.
- J. W. Shepherd is preaching in Richmond, Va. Brother Shepherd is doing a splendid work. His address is 705 West Grace Street, Richmond, Va.
- W. N. Abernathy, Westport, Tenn., Route 2, April 24: "I closed a good meeting recently at Milan, Tenn. I go to Hickory Plains next Lord's day,"
- Foy E. Wallace, Jr., and Austin Taylor closed an eight-days' meeting, April 19, at Kenedy, Texas, resulting in thirty additions—twenty-seven baptisms.
- A public man must be ready to forgive. There should be no room in his life for private vengeance and spite. Magnanimity is a characteristic of the mighty.
- W. T. Hines, Englewood, Kan., April 19: "I closed at Dodge City, Kan., with one restored and one baptized. I will begin at Pleasant Hill, near Rosston, Okla., to-night."
- A. B. Barret, Fayetteville, Tenn., April 23: "Please announce that I have resigned here, and I will receive my mail at Austin, Texas, General Delivery, until further notice."
- Emmett G. Creacy, Horse Cave, Ky., April 21: "I preached three sermons—Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night—at Red Boiling Springs, Tenn. I will be at Gilead next Sunday."
- A. R. Hill, Avon Park, Fla., April 20: "I am now in the third week of a mission meeting at Frostproof, Fla. One addition to date. We hope to plant a congregation at this place. This is indeed a mission field."
- C. C. Brown, Daytona, Fla., April 20: "I preached two discourses yesterday, with two additions. The church here is little more than a year old. For a while we had quite a struggle, but now there are additions almost weekly. Pray for us."
- T. W. Phillips, Jr., Shreveport, La., April 20: "J. E. Wainwright preached here yesterday. Attendance at the Bible classes was one hundred and thirty-four, an increase of one hundred and one since the first Sunday in October. There were three added."
- C. M. Pullias closed at Lawrenceburg, Tenn., Wednesday, April 22, with twenty-one baptized. The crowds were so large the meetings had to be held in the auditorium on Sundays and Sunday nights. Brother Pullias is to begin at Paducah next Lord's day.
- J. Fairs Nichols, Murray, Ky., April 21: "I was again with the church at Antioch, Ill., last Lord's day. Brethren, pray for the cause. There is a splendid mission field in these parts. I am now engaged all the time for work. There is need for more laborers."

The review of R. H. Boll, by Brethren Whiteside and Nichol, is ready, at fifty cents per copy. Order from Mrs. C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas. Sister Nichol advises that she has not brought a large edition of this work from the press. Order at once to insure a copy.

Two interesting services especially adapted to young people were held at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, on Sunday. Edward Craddock made an uplifting talk at the morning services, and Fred Scott led the singing. Both are students at the David Lipscomb College.

- F. B. Srygley began a meeting with the Ridgedale congregation, Chattanooga, Tenn., last Lord's day. C. H. Woodroof, who preaches for the Ridgedale congregation, says: "Our meeting started off this morning with an overflow house. We are expecting a great meeting."
- G. A. Dunn, Jr., Jasper, Ala., April 20: "On last Thursday night I preached the first sermon in the new building of the Central church of Christ at Gainesville, Texas. I am to begin a meeting with them on the first Sunday in May, assisted by Tillet S. Teddlie. We began here yesterday with three services, with a wonderful attendance. We have only a few members here meeting in the courthouse, but hope for greater things. Gus Nichols, of Cordova, is certainly working for this meeting."

- C. H. Smithson, Hatfield, Ark., April 21: "The second Lord's day in this month was spent here, at home, with the finest service we have had. The crowds were not the largest, but the spirit of the service was the standard. Last Lord's day was spent with the saints at Saratoga, Ark."
- Will W. Slater, Irving, Texas, April 20: "We are having a great meeting. Brother Laird is a great preacher, one among the best Bible teachers we have. Eight confessions to date. The meeting will continue all this week. Pray for us. I am to be at Tulsa, Okla., the first of May."

James E. Laird, Irving, Texas, April 20: "I am in a meeting here. Eight additions and good audiences. Will W. Slater and B. M. Taylor are leading the song service. Our meeting at Tulsa will begin on the first Lord's day in May. Brother Slater will conduct our spring meeting."

Tice Elkins, Temple, Okla., April 24: "I am in a mission meeting at Byers, Texas, with C. L. Taylor leading the songs. The meeting has been going on one week. Six added—five by baptism—and more expected. We will buy the Christian Church meetinghouse there and 'carry on' for Christ."

George W. Graves, West Nashville, Tenn., April 21:
"On the second Lord's day in this month I preached at Lillamay, morning and afternoon. On the third Lord's day I preached at Sixth Avenue, this city. Two were reclaimed. Next Sunday I am to preach at Cornersville, Tenn. Our home enjoys the Gospel Advocate."

- R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, April 20: "Yesterday proved that our work in the late meeting is still bearing fruit. Crowds were good at both hours, and the interest in every way much improved. At the evening hour there were two splendid men to make the good confession, and the baptisms are expected to be had on Wednesday evening."
- G. Mitchell Pullias, Miami, Fla., April 20: "The meetings with the church here yesterday were well attended and encouraging. One was restored and one took membership. I began work with the church here on February 1. There have been three baptisms and several to take membership. Interest is good along all lines, and we are expecting great things from the church here in the future."
- T. E. Tatum, Jackson, Tenn., April 22: "The church of Christ worshiping at the courthouse in Jackson holds regular services each Lord's day. Preaching on the first and third Lord's days in each month. All visiting brethren are welcome to worship with us. The church has bought a nice lot, centrally located in the business part of the city near Court Square, on which they hope to erect a nice church building in the near future."

Horace W. Busby, Fort Worth, Texas, April 25: "The Brownwood meeting closed last Wednesday evening, with about one hundred added from all sources—fifty-six baptized. Brother Forrest is working with this congregation and is doing a fine work. There have been two hundred baptized in my meetings since the first of January. J. W. Acuff and I are to begin at Burnet, Texas, on Sunday, and from there I go to Georgetown for the second and third Lord's days in May, and from there to Lometa for the fourth and fifth Lord's days."

- L. L. Brigance, Detroit, Mich., 2279 Harding Street, April 24: "I am here in this great city trying to preach the word. I am with the Fairview congregation, which is composed principally of English and Scotch. Their manner of conducting the services differs considerably from ours in the South, but I cannot say that it is less scriptural. There is a solemnity and reverence that is sometimes lacking in Southern churches. I am enjoying my association with them and trust I may be able to do them good. Old Brother Muirhead, one of the elders and a full-blooded Scotchman from the old country, is a great lover of the Gospel Advocate."
- A. C. Traylor, Palmetto, Fla., April 24: "My work with the church in Manatee and Sarasota counties moves along pleasantly and profitably. Good audiences and splendid interest greet me at each service. The members of the different congregations have a mind to work and are carrying on the work of the Lord with a spirit of cooperation, peace, and harmony that is above the ordinary, and are working together for the upbuilding of the cause of Christ in a way that is commendable and worthy of special mention. Good wishes to the Gospel Advocate and its force of faithful workers that are teaching the truth in love, without fear or favor."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, F. D. Srygley, and J. C. McQuiddy.

SERIOUS TROUBLE IN THE BAPTIST HOUSEHOLD. BY F. W. SMITH.

It seems that the Baptist denomination is having serious trouble with that class of infidels within its ranks termed "modernists" and "evolutionists," insomuch that T. T. Martin, in News and Truths, is calling for a division of the Southern Baptist Convention. Martin's complaint is

I am deeply sensible of the gravity of the proposal to divide the Southern Baptist Convention. But it is far more serious not to divide it. We have come to a crisis. The issue we are facing is fundamentalism or modernism. These terms have well-defined meanings.

Fundamentalism teaches that the Bible is the word of God; modernism teaches that the Bible contains the word of God—hence, that some of the Bible is God's word, some of it is not.

Fundamentalism teaches that the Savior was born of a human mother without a human father; modernism teaches that the Savior had both a human mother and a human father.

Fundamentalism teaches that the Savior died for our sins, as our substitute, as our real Redeemer from all iniquity; modernism denies that he was our substitute, denies that he actually paid for our sins.

Fundamentalism teaches that the Savior is coming back to earth again in bodlly presence; modernism denies this and teaches that Christ's coming again will be a spiritual coming.

Fundamentalism teaches a future bodily resurrection; modernism denies this.

Fundamentalism teaches that by direct creation God brought the different species into existence; modernism teaches that God brought them into existence through the teaches that God brought them into existence through the process of evolution, from lower species to higher through millions of years. All modernists are evolutionists.

Every honest Baptist of the South knows that fundamentalism and modernism "can no more mingle than the pure lights of heaven and the awful fires of hell;" that "there is a clash here as profound and as grim as that between Christianity and Confucianism."

As the editor of the Christian Century, of Chicago, a modernist, puts it, "amiable words cannot hide the differences." "Blest be the tie" may be sung until doomsday, but it cannot bind these two worlds together. The God of the fundamentalist is one God; the God of the modernist is another. The Bible of the fundamentalist is one Bible; the Bible of the modernist is another. The church, the kingdom, the salvation, the consummation of all things kingdom, the salvation, the consummation of all thingsthese are one thing to the fundamentalist and another these are one thing to the fundamentalist and another thing to the modernist.

"As go our schools, so go our young people. The Southern Baptist Education Association, at its recent meeting in Memphis, Tenn., went on record as indorsing the following: "The Bible cannot be taken literally and never was meant to be." "The colleges take no nominal sides of either of the factions, avoid alliance with either fundamentalism or modernism, and strive to bring them together on a working basis."

A college that will "avoid alliance" with the teaching that the Bible is the word of God, that the Savior was born of the virgin Mary, that the Savior died for our sins as our substitute, that he is coming to the earth again in bodily presence, and that there will be a resurrection of our bodies, has no right to go to honest Baptists for their money, and is obtaining money under false pretenses.

Again: "Let the colleges emphasize the fact that fundamentalism and modernism are not necessarily exclusive of one another."

one another."

A college professor or president who would stand for that is unworthy of training any Christian's children, and

A college professor or president who would stand for that is unworthy of training any Christian's children, and no young man or woman is safe under such teachers.

Again: "Now, with these two schools of thought Ifundamentalism and modernism] before them, what are the colleges to do? Both parties belong to our denomination, as do the colleges, and both, therefore, have somewhat to do with our colleges."

"Both parties" ought not to belong to our denomination. The modernists have not the honest manhood to get out; then they ought to be put out. They have no right to "have somewhat to do with the colleges." But that is just what they are after—to "have somewhat to do with the colleges" and virtually steal the hard-earned money of Baptists who gave it for the propagation of what fundamentalism stands for; and having stolen it, to use it to damn our young people.

Again: "The Southern Baptist educators appear unwilling to be classified in either school. In general, the answers of the college officials are by no means condemnatory of modernism."

Remember, reader, that that was indorsed by the Southern Baptist Education Association.

The North went just this way, and we are following more rapidly than they went.

Everybody who is posted knows that evolution is at the bottom of all this, and that this is to cover up and protect a few evolutionists among us. Is it true, is it manly, is it Christian to thus blind the common people and lead them into the camp of the evolutionists? Can our official lead-crs afford to crucify their consciences and lead ourchurches astray this way?

A division of the Southern Baptist Convention will settle all of this trouble.

Let us, by vote of the Convention, agree to divide peaceably, in this way: Let all who indorse this action, this stand taken by the Southern Baptist Education Association, go into one Convention; let all who reject and repudiate this action go into the other Convention: to every college; to every denominational paper, to every newtor, to every

Let the proposition be submitted to every church in the Southern Baptist Convention; to every college; to every denominational paper; to every pastor; to every evangelist; to every church on foreign fields; to every mis-

The dividing line territorially could be the Mississippi River, allowing churches to go to either Convention, though not in that Convention territory.

Where there is a division as to a college or other property, one Convention can buy the other's interest.

As to the property owned by the Southern Baptist Convention or our boards, this can all be adjusted by a com-

Modernists ought to have enough self-respect, enough sense of fairness, not to wish to hold churches and preachers against their convictions. Those who stand for the fundamentals do not wish to hold the modernists. Those who are "flunkeying to modernism," the stool pigeons for evolution, will be our chief opposers.

Our curses are those abominations of desolation, the straddlers, and "the man with a hole under the fence," who can bob on either side, as his interest may seem to demand.

Let these other two bodies push these two aside and separate in peace. If this is not done, there is going to be fearful division and strife; there are yet seven thousand who have not bowed the knee to Baal. The Southern Baptist Education Association would not have dared to indorse these statements I have quoted before the seventy-five-million campaign. Not one-third of the money that was given would have been given had this action been taken before the seventy-five-million campaign; but now that they have our money, they pop their fingers in our faces, and turn to bootlick John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for his money, too.

Mark my words: Southern Baptists will yet repudiate the schools and men who put through this action by the Southern Baptist Education Association. The last one of them should have the Christian manhood to resign.

The foregoing is an exceedingly stout arraignment of the modernist element in the Baptist Church, which seems to have control of the whole Baptist machinery—universities, colleges, conventions, and all the strings to institutional religion among the Baptists. It appears that the Baptists did a very unwise thing for their denomination when they centralized seventy-five millions of money in the hands of a few men. They should have known that "wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered," or that centralized wealth in religion breeds the same corruption that it does in commerce or politics.

But we cannot suppress the thought that had T. T. Martin considered for a moment, he would have discovered the fact that there is as much Bible for "modernism" as there is for the Baptist denomination. Hence, it is suggested that the real solution of the whole trouble into which the Baptists have fallen is to do away with the denomination, the sectarian or denominational name "Baptist," return to the New Testament order of things, and handle the "modernists" in each congregation according to New Testament church polity.

With all the humanly organized machinery with which the Baptists are loaded down, the "modernists" have so much play that it becomes exceedingly difficult to handle the situation by such men as T. T. Martin. So much room is afforded for playing politics and the working of "inside wires" in order to get control of the machinery that the "higher-ups" have little trouble in gaining the advantage.

All conventions, associations, conferences, general assemblies, and boards of a religious nature that seek to control the affairs of local congregations are wholly unwarranted by the word of God and should be repudiated by every soul that desires to follow the Lord Jesus Christ. The Baptists, like that class of religionists who call themselves the "Disciples" of Christ, are afflicted with destructive higher critics who believe only that part of the Bible that appeals to, and harmonizes with, human reason. And it seems, with both of these denominations, that these religiously cloaked infidels have control of all the machinery on to which their local churches are seemingly tied, and which is moved just as the master hands desire.

What is here given is a warning to Christian parents regarding the schools and colleges to which they send their children. Why it is that so many parents will send their children to schools, colleges, and universities that are "shot through" with infidelity is a profound mystery. It may be because of a false pride and a desire to crown their children with some worldly glory that they thus endanger their souls' eternal interests. Why not seek some place of learning that is absolutely free from even a suspicion of any and all forms of infidelity to which their children may go and be fitted for usefulness in the world, instead of sending them into hotbeds of skepticism? Surely such places of learning exist somewhere; and if none such can be found, children would be infinitely better off knewing only how to read and write than to be filled with infidelity.

Ever; failure in religion has in it the elements of selfruin. 'Fear not, little flock," said a friendly voice a long while aro, "it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The goodness, wisdom, power, and mercy of God converge on this point. In no case is failure possible where faith lays hold of the hope set before the willing sou!.—Exchange.

A SERMON ON BAPTISM.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

(Dr. J. L. Alexander, of Dixon Springs, Tenn., furnishes us with a copy of this sermon by Brother Larimore.)

"If ye love me, keep my commandments." (John 14: 15.)
"Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." (Matt. 16: 24.)

"Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: and lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." (Matt. 3: 13-17.)

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.)

"John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins." (Mark 1: 4, 5.)

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.)

"And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." (Luke 3: 3.)

"And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John. But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him." (Luke 7: 29, 30.)

"After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea: and there he tarried with them, and baptized. And John also was baptizing in Ænon near to Salim, because there was much water there: and they came, and were baptized. For John was not yet cast into prison." (John 3: 22-24.)

"When therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John, (though Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples,) he left Judea, and departed again into Galilee." (John 4: 1-3.)

"Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." (Acts 2: 38.)

"For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." (Matt. 26: 28.)

"But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." (Acts 8: 12.)

"Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus. And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing." (Acts 8: 35-39.)

"And brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway. And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house." (Acts 16: 30-34.)

"And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized." (Acts 18: 8.)

"And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts 22: 16.)

"What shall we say then? shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." (Rom. 6: 1-5.)

"For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 27.)

"Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. For in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power. In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ: buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." (Col. 2: 8-12.)

"Which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ: who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him." (1 Pet. 3: 20-22.)

"And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (John 17: 3.)

"And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him." (1 John 2: 3-5.)

"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." (Rev. 22: 14.)

MAKING DIFFERENCES WHERE THERE ARE NONE. No. 2.

BY E. A. ELAM.

The teaching of the New Testament by which the good will, harmony, peace, and love of a congregation can be preserved and maintained must be taught with as much emphasis, as continuously, as vigorously, and as faithfully as the conditions of the pardon of past sins; but is this done? The Christian life and salvation in heaven depend upon the practice of these things. But does it not seem that some few almost everywhere "follow after things which make for" trouble and which cause contention and strife?

Error in teaching and practice should be shunned and should be fought, and heresy should be abominated; but these things should first be fought and abominated in one's self. Certainly and most assiduously the truth, peace, and the edification of all should be sought. No one should ever seek error and heresy, strife and division. By honest and daily study of the Bible and by "experience of the word of righteousness," or practice of the truth, one should have so exercised the senses as to be able "to discern good and evil" (Heb. 5: 11-14); but one is altogether one-sided or a half Christian, if Christian at all, who is simply a heresy hunter, and always an objector and a faultfinder. One should have enough of the spirit of Christ, have sufficient knowledge of the truth and be so well exercised in the practice of it, as to be able "to discern good and evil" and to know when and to what to object. Some are destructive critics; others are constructive edifiers.

As a Jewish mark, and not as a religious act, Paul circumcised Timothy (Acts 16: 3), but not "for an hour" would he consent to the circumcision of Titus, being a Greek, as an act of obedience to Christ (Gal. 2: 1-5). We now should be able to discern such differences. But until by the study of the Bible, by sufficient exercise of patience and love, and by continued practice of the truth we are able to discern such differences, we are yet bates in Christ and incompetent to teach others.

I repeat, that such passages as these seem to make no impression upon some, even if they have ever learned that such are the commands of God.

Furthermore, we should know full well that "the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit." (Rom. 14, 17.) Let us connect this with another passage. To the Pharisees, Jesus said: "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: neither shall they say, Lo, here! or, There! for lo, the kingdom of God is within you." And the margin says, "in the midst of you." (Luke 17: 21.) It did not come with pomp and splendor, a blast of trimpets and military display, worldly power and glory-a temporal, earthly, political affair. Neither did it come with imposing and stately church edifices, ecclesiastical offices, regalia, and machinery-"not with observation." The whole life of Jesus-the humble, self-sacrificing life of the "man of sorrow and acquainted with grief," of the lowly and despised Nazarene, his fulfillment of the law and the prophets, the Sermon on the Mount and all his otler teaching, his going about doing good, his death and sied blood on the cross for the sins of the world, his resurection, and his ascension to the throne on high-shows low the kingdom of God came. Jesus, the King, the principles and spirit of his kingdom, and the life of his disciples ware in their midst. Thus this kingdom is in the midst of people to-day.

Or, if Jesus means by saying, "The kingdom of Gd is within you," that the teaching and spirit of this kingdom must be within the hearts and lives of its subjects, then we ask, can one be a subject of this kingdom without maintaining these things in the heart and practicing them in the life?

But what are we to have "within us"—in the heart and life—in order to be in this kingdom? Certainly ve are to have "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit." Without this, no one has been "born again," or of God into this kingdom. But when all professed Christians keep unspotted from the world, feed the lungry, clothe the naked, visit the fathers and widows in their affliction, are not forgetful to entertain strangers, care for the sick and afflicted, look after the aged and infirm, go about doing good, preach the gospel to every creature, teach all nations, are rich in faith and good works, prove themselves the salt of the earth and the light of the world, and make this their life work, then people will know that the kingdom of God has come and is in their midst. This will prove to be the mightiest argument possible that the kingdom of God has been set up.

We must learn, then, what "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit" are. These must be understood before "the kingdom of God" can be understood and appreciated. But the purpose of this article is to show that one must have experience in the practice and enjoyment of these things before one can "discern good and evil" and can truly teach others.

In Dan. 2: 44 it is declared that "in the days of those kings [the ones mentioned above] shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom;" and in Acts 15, 16, James quotes Amos 9: 11, 12, in which it is declared that God would "build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen," and "the ruins thereof," and would "set it up." It is necessary to understand when this kingdom was "set up" in order to understand and to teach the truth; but when is all this understood? To argue in a partisan and denominational spirit that this kingdom was "set up" on the first Pentecost after Christ's ascension [which is true], or that it is yet to be "set up," without the "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit," which this kingdom embraces, is pharisaical and a farce. If all preachers and scribes and all other church members would truly practice the righteousness, rejoice always in the life, and follow the broad, deep, and lasting peace in the Holy Spirit of this kingdom, all people would know it has been "set up," is in existence now, and will become a huge mountain and fill the whole earth.

But with so much partisan spirit, rivalry, vanity, pride, love of display, self-esteem, self-seeking, desire to be popular, fault finding, misrepresention, backbiting, slander, abuse, wrangling, contention, strife, division, etc., it is no wonder that some think this kingdom certainly has not yet come. Connect with this the love of pleasure, the love of money, the worldliness, and the lack of self-control in a great many other church members, who can but be deeply impressed with the question of Jesus: " Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"

In this most grievous state of affairs among so many professed citizens of this kingdom of "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit," what is the first and most important thing to be done? It is, as Jesus has already said to his disciples, to seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and, therefore, to "follow after the things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another."

LOCAL CHURCH LIFE.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

The Christian Standard seems to be running a page on the above subject by S. S. Lappin, of Bedford, Ind. Brother Lappin was formerly the editor of the Christian Standard and is a very pleasing writer who frequently says good things. In the Standard of recent date the following appeared:

A SHOW OF WISDOM.

The rally of December, 1923, conducted by the Clarke Fund forces at Cincinnati, was repeated in December, 1924. This agency shows wisdom in that it is giving time and attention to local church problems. The opening period of every forenoon was given to the consideration of questions that affect the local church.

It is a strange thing that, with all our organizing outside and above the congregation, we have left so little place for the discussion of local church life, and especially does this seem strange when we reflect that the congregation is all we have.

all we have.

It will be noted that Brother Lappin says of the "Clarke Fund forces," whatever that is: "This agency shows wisdom in that it is giving time and attention to local church problems." Likely so, and it would show more wisdom if it would give more time and attention to local church problems. This reminds me of the man who was said to have fed his cow on sawdust mixed with bran. After trying his mixture for some time, he reached the wise conclusion that the more bran he used, the better the feed. I believe this is true of Brother Lappin's "Clarke Fund forces;" the more time and attention they give to the local church, the better. In fact, they should give all their time to the local church and leave out all the other sawdust.

Brother Lappin further says: "It is a strange thing that, with all our organizing outside and above the congregation, we have left so little place for the discussion of local church life, and especially does this seem strange when we reflect that the congregation is all we have." It seems strange to me that a good writer like Brother Lappin would contradict himself in a single sentence. In the first part of the sentence he speaks of "our organizing outside and above the congregation," and in the last part of the sentence, in italics, he says "the congregation is all we have." I suppose the "our" and the 'we" must refer to the same party, and yet the "our" seems to have organization "outside and above the congregation," while the "we" have nothing but the congregation. I cannot explain this apparent contradiction, unless the brother means by "our organizing outside and above the congregation" that this had been done by these brethren without scriptural warrant, while we have scriptural teaching for the congregation and for nothing else. Whether this is what the brother means or not, this is the exact truth in the matter. The New Testament authorizes the congregation, or local church, but it requires nothing outside or above it. The congregation is a divine institution, while all these outside organizations are human. Brother Lappin seems to know this; but if he does, how can he approve these human organizations which he admits are outside and above the divine organization? I would dislike to approve of a human organization which was above the divine. In all things I want Christ and his teaching to have the preëminence. If these human organizations are above the congregation, why should Brother Lappin think it strange that they get most of the time and attention, while the congregation, which is lower, should get only a small part of the time and attention of these same fellows who have organized that which is above the congregation? This ought not to surprise the brother at all. What I think he ought to try to do is to teach these misguided ones to get out of the organizations which are above the scriptural congregations and give not only a larger part of their time to the divine congregation, but give it all to it. It is a characteristic of man to feel proud of what he does; and if he has the right to organize anything which is above the church which Christ built, why should he not give more of his time to it? If it is best for a Christian to give half of his time to these human organizations, why is it not best to give it all to them? No one should be satisfied with working half of his time for the best thing. He ought to give all of his time to the best organizations. And if a Christian cannot give all of his time to these human organizations, he ought not to give any. It should be all or none.

In justice, I must say that his idea seems to have struck us nearer home, as we have a few that appear to think they are doing nothing unless they are building up some outside institution through which to work. This thing of working with and for the congregation is too small and not enough like the nations around us to satisfy some of our would-be religious workers. I grant that it looks rather old-fashioned to be satisfied to give all our valuable time to the only thing that Brother Lappin himself admits is all that we have. Come clean, Brother Lappin. If the congregation is all we have, then come out of everything else and do not be satisfied with a division of your time with these man-made institutions, but give it all to the only thing we have. This is good doctrine, and it is to be hoped that the brother and all others will try to live up to it. God, through Moses, said: "In every place where I record my name I will come unto thee and I will bless thee." (Ex. 20: 24.) God's name is on no institution except the church. It is the only thing he ever built, and it is the only institution that has the blood of Christ upon it; therefore, not a part, but all our time, should be given to it. Our lives should be consecrated to it, and to it only.

The statement made by Brother Lappin that "the congregation is all we have" is literally true, when understood to mean that it is all that we have by divine authority. Everything outside of and above the church is unscriptural and antiscriptural. The Lord help us all to see this truth.

I will be much obliged to Brother Lappin if he will publish this in the Christian Standard; and if he does so, I will inform the readers of the Gospel Advocate of the fact. If the readers of the Advocate never hear from me on this subject, they may know there is "nothing doing."

CHARACTER OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

He is fallen! We may now pause before that splendid prodigy, which towered among us like some ancient ruin whose frown terrified the glance its magnificence attracted. Grand, gloomy, and peculiar, he sat upon the throne a sceptered hermit, wrapped in the solitude of his own originality. A mind, bold, independent, and decisive; a will, despotic in its dictates; an energy that distanced expedition, and a conscience pliable to every touch of interest, marked the outline of this extraordinary character; the most extraordinary, perhaps, that in the annals of this world, ever rose, or reigned, or fell. Flung into life, in the midst of a revolution that quickened every energy of a people who acknowledged no superior, he commenced his course, a stranger by birth and a scholar by charity. With no friend but his sword, and no fortune but his talents, he rushed in the list where rank, and wealth, and genius had arrayed themselves, and competition fled from him as from the glance of destiny.

He knew no motive but interest, acknowledged no criterion but success; he worshiped no God but ambition, and with an Eastern devotion he knelt at the shrine of his idolatry. Subsidiary to this, there was no creed that he did not profess, there was no opinion that he did not promulgate; in the hope of a dynasty, he upheld the crescent; for the sake of a divorce, he bowed before the cross; the orphan of St. Louis, he became the adopted child of the republic; and with a parricidal ingratitude, on the ruins both of the throne and tribune, he reared the throne of his despotism. A professed Catholic, he imprisoned the Pope; a pretended patriot, he impoverished the country; and, in the name of Brutus, he grasped without remorse, and wore without shame, the diadem of the Cæsars!

Through this pantomime of policy, fortune played the clown to his caprices. At his touch, crowns crumbled, beggars reigned, systems vanished, the wildest theories took the color of his whim, and all that was venerable, and all that was novel, changed places with the rapidity of a drama. Even apparent defeat assumed the appearance of victory; his flight from Egypt confirmed his destiny; ruin itself only elevated him to empire. But if his fortune was great, his genius was transcendent; decision flashed upon his councils; and it was the same to decide and to perform. To inferior intellects his combinations appeared perfectly impossible, his plans perfectly impracticable; but, in his hands, simplicity marked their development, and success vindicated their adoption. His person partook of the character of his mind; if the one never yielded in the cabinet, the other never bent in the field. Nature had no obstacle that he did not surmount; space no opposition he did not spurn; and whether amid Alpine rocks, Arabian sands, or Polar snows, he seemed proof against peril, and empowered with ubiquity.

The whole continent trembled at beholding the audacity of his designs, and the miracle of their execution. Skepticism bowed to the prodigies of his performance; romance assumed the air of history; nor was there aught too incredible for belief, or too fanciful for expectation, when the world saw a subaltern of Corsica waving his imperial flag over her most ancient capitals. All the visions of antiquity became commonplaces in his contemplation; kings were his people; nations were his outposts; and he disposed of courts, and crowns, and camps, and churches, and cabinets, as if they were titular dignitaries of the chessboard.

It mattered little whether in the field or in the drawingrcom; with the mob or the levee; wearing the jacobin bennet or the iron crown; banishing a Braganza, or espousing a Hapsburg; dictating peace on a raft to the Czar of Russia, or contemplating defeat at the gallows of Leipsig; he was still the same military despot.

In this wonderful combination, his affectations of literature must not be omitted. The jailer of the press, he affected the patronage of letters; the proscriber of books, he encouraged philosophy; the persecutor of authors and the murderer of printers, he yet pretended to the protection of learning; the assassin of Palm, the silencer of de Stäel; and the denouncer of Kotzebue, he was the friend of David, the benefactor of De Lille, and sent his academic prize to the philosopher of England.

Such a medley of contradictions and at the same time such an individual consistency were never united in the same character. A royalist; a republican and an emperor; a Mohammedan; a Catholic and a patron of the synagogue; a subaltern and a sovereign; a traitor and a tyrant; a Christian and an infidel; he was, through all his vicissitudes, the same stern, impatient, inflexible original; without a model, and without a shadow.—Phillips.

CHARACTER COUNTS.

A jeweler in a Western town found a precious treasure in a peculiar place. His home coffee mill was broken, and he took it apart to find what was the trouble. He discovered that it had been wrecked by the action of a stone of some sort that had even cut its way into the metal of the grinders. He took the stone to his jewelry store, and, putting it under a microscope, discovered that it was a large diamond of the blue-tint variety and was worth two hundred dollars.

It is thought that the diamond got mixed up with the coffee when the grain was screened in South Africa, where the coffee was raised. The diamond was about the size and dull color of a coffee grain.

What a striking illustration of the value of reality over the sham and pretense! The diamond was plain and unpretentious, but, being a diamond, wherever it was found, no matter how humble the circumstances or associations, it was a precious treasure. So true character will ever come to its own in the end.—Homiletic Review.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

(1) Can a man worship God alone? If so, why meet with others? Or can he do both? (2) Do the words "worship" and "serve" come from the same word in the original? Has the Lord promised to be with the individual alone, as indicated in Matt. 18: 20, or is it only in the sense of 1 Pet. 3: 12? I have reference in the last question to the man about his daily work. (4) Is the Lord's-day offering for the poor saints alone? (5) Does 1 Cor. 9: 14 conflict with 1 Cor. 16: 1? (6) How is the preacher to be paid and the general expenses of the house of worship, etc., to be met, if the offering is for the saints only? I shall thank you for an early consideration of these questions.—S. S. McMahan, Etowah, Tenn.

1. Yes. A man can worship God alone "Enter into

1. Yes. A man can worship God alone. "Enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret, and thy Father who seeth in secret shall recompense thee." (Matt. 6: 6.) Prayer is a part of the worship, and surely one can pray alone. It is an extreme position to say that one cannot worship God alone. There is a mutual help and encouragement in meeting with brethren and sisters. The social as well as spiritual influence of brethren and sisters is a blessing. There is a development to be had in communion and conversation with the people of God. One can worship in the public assembly or in the private recesses of his home.

2. The Savior said to the tempter: "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." (Matt. 4: 10.) Here we have both words used. "Worship" as here used comes from the Greek word "proskuneo;" the word "serve" comes from the Greek word "latreuo." Sometimes the word "worship" includes service, and sometimes the word "serve" includes worship.

3. The Lord has promised never to leave nor forsake his children. If they are faithful to him, he is ever with them. "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 20.) This promise belongs as much to every child of God as it does or did to the apostles. Since Jesus is always with those who are faithful to him, he is with them in their private devotion and daily life as much so as he is with them in their public worship and service. The presence of the Lord always represents a blessing if his people are faithful to him.

4. The Lord's-day offering may be for the poor or for any other good work, such as preaching the gospel, feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, paying the janitor at the church house, building church houses, or any work that the church may do that is pleasing to the Lord.

5. No, 1 Cor. 9: 14 does not conflict with 1 Cor. 16: 1. No passage of scripture conflicts with any other passage. All of the statements of the Holy Spirit are harmonious. It may be that man cannot always see the harmony; nevertheless, any part of God's truth harmonizes with every other part of it. In 1 Cor. 16: 1, Paul is talking about a special contribution for the poor, while in 1 Cor. 9: 14 he is speaking of supporting the gospel.

6. The answer to this question may be found in the answer to No. 4 above. We may be sure that the Lord has made ample provisions for carrying on his work.

Please answer the following questions: Is it scriptural for a preacher, when he is called to serve a congregation which has no elders, to select and appoint a board of advisers?—X.

It is never scriptural for a preacher or any one else to do anything contrary to the New Testament order of things. The Scriptures say nothing about "a board of advisers." The New Testament pattern for a church requires elders. After Paul and Barnabas had preached the gospel in a number of cities and churches were established in these cities, the record says: "And when they had appointed for them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they had believed." (Acts 14: 23.) Again, Paul, in writing to Titus, says: "For this cause left I thee in Grete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that were wanting, and appoint elders in every city, as I gave thee charge." (Tit. 1: 5.) Thus we have the record stating that elders were appointed in every church. Other scriptures give the work of these elders. It is a dangerous thing for any preacher to turn aside from the New Testament order.

Please explain Acts 18: 18. (1) Why did Paul "keep a vow" and "shear" his head when the law was done away? (2) When was Paul "alive without the law once?"—X.

1. The Scripture referred to is: "And Paul, having tarried after this yet many days, took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence for Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila: having shorn his head in Cenchrea; for he had a vow." We do not know what Paul's vow was; neither do we know when he made this vow. He followed the custom of the Jews at the expiration of his vow. He violated no principle of the law of Christ in doing this; neither did he enjoin a custom upon any one else. Many of the customs of the Jews were observed with no reference to the law.

2. Paul says: "Howbeit, I had not known sin, except through the law: for I had not known coveting, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet: but sin, finding occasion, wrought in me through the commandment all manner of coveting: for apart from the law sin is dead. And I was alive apart from the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died; and the commandment, which was unto life, this I found to be unto death." (Rom. 7: 7-10.) Sin is a transgression of the law; and where there is no law, there is no sin, or the violation of law. Paul is representing the people or seed of Abraham before the law was given. They could not transgress the law until after the law was given. This law was given to lead them to Christ and to righteousness. The law had its penalties, and when it was violated they had to receive its penalty; and the penalty was death. Christ took the law out of the way, nailing it to the cross. * * *

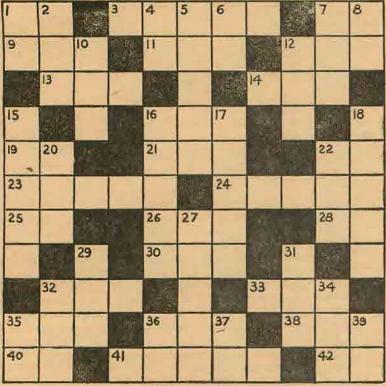

Will you please answer through the Gospel Advocate the following questions? (1) If it be wrong to use organs in church worship, would it not also be wrong to use them at all? Or, if you use them, would it not be wrong to sing while playing, as singing is the only music we are required to use? Is it wrong to have these instruments in the home? (2) Which one of the apostles wrote Acts of the Apostles?—(Miss) LOURIDENE GILL, White Bluff, Tenn.

1. There are many things which a Christian may do or have in his private life which do not belong to the public worship in the church. I see no wrong or principle violated in a Christian's having flowers in the home with which to make pleasant the home life. I rather think the cultivation of flowers brings a blessing to one. Flowers may be used to comfort the broken-hearted and to cheer the sick; yet for one to bring flowers and try to make them a part of the public worship would be wrong. So one may have instruments of music in the home life, but they cannot be made a part of the worship without violating God's will. The one who attempts to bring into the public worship anything other than that which God has prescribed is going beyond that which God has written. We are taught to abide in the teachings of Christ. "Whosoever goeth onward and abideth not in the teaching of Christ, hath not God: he that abideth in the teaching, the same hath both the Father and the Son." (2 John 9.) God has prescribed just what will be pleasing to him in the worship, and we dare not go beyond that.

2. It is generally understood that Luke wrote Acts of the Apostles. Luke was not an apostle.

BIBLE CROSS WORD

THERE are more men's names in this Biblical cross word puzzle than anything else. Most of these names are from the Old Testament. But there is, also, a smattering from the New Testament. And there are some words, of course, that have lived on the pages of the old black dictionary.

How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

Bowling Green, Ky., April 20.—I visited the congregation at Price's Chapel on Lord's day. This congre-Chapel on Lord's day. This congregation seems to be strictly adhering to New Testament teaching and is getting along fine. I am to go back, the Lord willing, on the third Sunday in May. This congregation is eight miles from Bowling Green. I am booked for a two-weeks' meeting at a mission point near Bowling Green. I have previously conducted two meetings at this place. The opportunity to preach Christ, is not limited to meetings at this place. The opportunity to preach Christ is not limited to this particular place. There are many such places. Christ said, "Go." So any one who is interested in the cause of the Lord and wants the gospel preached, but who is poor in this world's goods, is asked to drop me a card.—William Freeland.

Osteen, Fla., April 18.—I closed a two-days' meeting with the church at Mims last night, as a result of which three souls were added to the one body and the church encouraged to greater activity. The Bible school was also strengthened and the song service made more interesting. was also strengthened and the song service made more interesting. I came to this place to-day to begin a mission meeting to-morrow. We will use the Methodist meetinghouse. Sister W. V. Phillips is the only member of the true church here, and it was by her invitation that I came. Thus it will be seen that this is strictly mission work at a destitute strictly mission work at a destitute place. I am praying that God will open the hearts of some honest souls who may become obedient to the gospel here. To this end I ask the prayers and cooperation of all the faithful ones in Christ,—J. O. Barnes.

Tucson, Arizona, April 15 .- On my return from Tennessee to California, I stopped off (April 4) at Tucson and I stopped off (April 4) at Tucson and spent one week, preaching every night but one in a private house. I found fifteen or more members of the church, who were not meeting for worship. They promised to meet regularly hereafter, and a nice auditorium in the county courthouse was secured for that purpose, in which place we had the first meeting last Lord's day, with twenty or more present. Brother J. W. Grant started a small congregation here about seventeen years ago, but for the lack of enteen years ago, but for the lack of leadership they soon disbanded, and for the same reason they have met only intermittently since. In the meantime the "digressives" started meantime the "digressives" started a church and captured about half of the original band. This digressive church, along with other denominations, observed "holy week" and had the Lord's Supper on Friday night. Brother R. S. Walker has located at Tucson for his health and expects to make this his permanent home. While he is not strong, he is physically and otherwise able to preach and teach and do efficient church work. He expects to do what he can; and teach and do emclent charter work. He expects to do what he can; but if he had some regular support so he could give all his time and energy to the work, I believe a nice congregation could soon be built up. Tucson is a town of about fifteen thousand population. It is a noted health resort, and a true church should be maintained here, not only for the benefit of those who live here, but for the good of brethren who come here from other places.—G. W. Riggs.

Monterey, Tenn., April 17.—On the first Lord's day in March, morning and evening, I preached at Monterey, Tenn.; on the second Lord's day, morning and evening, and on Wednesday night before, at Crossville, Tenn.; on the third Lord's day, morning and evening, at Monterey, with one reclaimed; on the fourth Lord's day, two sermons at Algood and one at Netherland; on the fifth Lord's day, morning and evening, and on Saturday night before, at Hilham, Tenn. We have an interesting Lord's-day service at each of the places mentioned, and we try to have it as often as the Lord's day comes. We also have midweek prayer meetings and Bible studies at two of these places, and we can see good results coming from the faithful efforts of those who are at work in a private way. Now, with Brother Turner at Harriman, Brother Wagner at Rockwood, Brother Ezell at Cookeville, Brother Cullum at Livingston, and Brother Oakley in Putnam County, the outcome looks very encouraging to me. May the Lord bless every consistent effort that may be made in this field of labor and in all other places for the advancement of pure, unadulterated Christianity.—J. D. Jones.

Holtville, Cal., April 13.—Yesterday the church here enjoyed the presence, in both Bible study and worship, of the Hanchen family and Brother Peralt, of Ontario, Cal.; Sister Peralt, of El Centro, Cal.; three Cannon families, the Dunn family, a sister, and Brother A. Jennings, of Somerton, Ariz. Brother Jennings preached to a well-filled house at eleven o'clock. The church at Holtville is made up of good, substantial members, most of whom are well grounded in the truth and are willing to work. We are at peace and have good, instructive talks by some one or more of the brethren, both at the morning and evening services, every Sunday. We have three classes in Bible study—one woman teacher, a good, godly mother in Israel, well grown in grace and knowledge, who teaches the little ones; use two glasses in dividing the cup among ourselves, two plates in passing the bread, two baskets in which to take the collection for carrying on the work we are doing here; and are living in all good conscience as to our way of worshiping. We think it according to knowledge.—Ernest L. Sprinkle.

FROM EAST TENNESSEE.

BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

The work with the Cleveland church is moving along well. The Lord's-day Bible-school attendance has gone to one hundred and seventy-eight. Four have been added to the church recently—three by baptism and one restored.

I preached four times last Lord's day—twice at the church at Cleveland, once at a schoolhouse four miles out, and at the county jail to about twenty prisoners at five o'clock.

On the fifth Lord's day in March 1 preached at Athens in the morning and at Niota in the afternoon.

Brother Glenn and some more of our young people went to Niota last Lord's day and helped them out in their Bible study and communion service. Brother B. B. Posey and others of the Athens church have been doing nobly by the Niota work. They have been going up every Lord's day and helping in the work. We all appreciate this so much. Brother Sam Pittman preaches at Athens at 11 A.M. and at Niota at 2:30 P.M. on the fourth Lord's day in this month.

Brother R. C. White, of Nashville, Tenn., will begin a meeting at Rogersville next Lord's day. Brother White will also begin a meeting at Big Springs, in Meigs County, on the third Lord's day in June.

Brother R. A. Largen, from Fayetteville, Tenn., will begin a meeting early in May at Ooltewah, Tenn. He will conduct another meeting following this one at another point to be determined upon between this and the time. The church at Fayetteville is going to support him in a month's work up in this country. This is fine in the Fayetteville church. Will not six or eight of our good, strong churches help us support an evangelist up in the country above Knoxville? This is so much needed.

We are pressing on all we can in this East Tennessee work. We do want to bring it to the front in gospel work. The work is so laborious, both to body and mind, I am anxious to get other workers up here to help us plan and share these burdens.

Six or eight good congregations could support a man easily and at the same time carry on their home work. But we appreciate the little contributions; so send them on. We can do the work, anyway, if we can get enough of these little contributions together.

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book

—merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

WORD FROM OKLAHOMA.

BY T. H. MATHESON.

These notes are from that part of Oklahoma that sticks out toward the west and joins New Mexico. It has been a long time since anything has been seen in the Gospel Advocate from this part. Now that I have regained my health, I promise a few notes occasionally.

I have not reported a word since about this time last year. I think it was just before our trip to Tennessee. I ask permission to mention a few things in connection with that trip before I go further.

On account of a mission meeting, we were a little delayed in our start by "car route" to my old home; but a shortness of means and a plentifulness of mosquitoes in Arkansas soon brought us to the home of my father, who lives near Macon, Tenn. We made our headquarters happily at father's while we visited, and I preached at several points.

It was a treat to me to be again in the home of Brother J. H. Aiken, who lives near Brownsville. Though I was sick while there, I never spent happier hours. It was Brother Aiken who preached to me most before I obeyed the gospel, and it was he that encouraged me most in making my first feeble efforts at preaching the gospel of Christ. From the time I was but a boy even until now I have regarded him as a strong, Christian character.

It was our good fortune to spend a short time in the home of Brother J. A. Gray and wife, at Jackson. They did everything they could to make our visit pleasant. They brought back afresh the former days, when, as a youth in the Lord's cause, I needed encouragement. Though they have no children, they know how to take care of a poor child in the Lord.

It was near Kenton, in the home of my uncle, J. H. Anderson, that we had another feast. It had been some time since I was with him, and never before with my family. Uncle Jim is a good, jolly fellow, and knows how to make one feel at home and enjoy himself to his soul's content. Though he and Aunt Laura are Baptists, they made arrangements for me to preach over one Lord's day at Christian Chapel, not far away, where there is a good little congregation. Aunt Laura possesses one of the kindest and sweetest dispositions that I know of to-day.

I never want to go back home without visiting my mother's grave. When I was there this time, the keepers of the cemetery had just got through clearing off the little mound and about the little headstone. I chanced to have a little money, and gladly contributed to the keepers who had made this the cleanest cemetery that I have ever scen. Though mother sleeps, I rejoice to think of her as "asleep in Jesus," and of the life that meant so much to me, and of the day when we went together in our obedience to the Lord.

The time soon came when we had to make another trip through Arkansas and brace the western wind. Father, mother (stepmother-and no one ever had a better stepmother), brothers and sisters were told good-by, and we were soon upon our way, thinking how hard it is for loved ones to be separated. The older I grow, the closer I would like to live to my parents and be able to help them and to make their last days pleasant.

There are very few gospel preachers in this section-so few that it would be impossible to hold a preachers' meeting. I wonder if I could get in correspondence with a preacher who would like to move to a great field. We have a good home (house) for some good, active preacher who will move here. The right man can find plenty of work and support. My address is Goodwell, Okla.

CHURCH AT AKRON, OHIO. BY A. A. BUNNER.

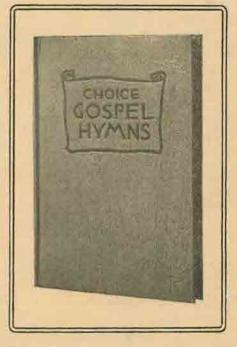

On the second Lord's day in April I was greeted by a large and enthusiastic audience of deeply interested brethren and sisters in Christ, along with many outsiders, at Akron, Ohio. It is a pleasure to meet with and preach to the brethren at Akron. They stand foursquare on the gospel of Christ, with no hobbies of any kind to ride, and they have no time for preachers who come their way riding any kind of a hobby. There are quite a number of young brethren and sisters in this congregation who are rapidly growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. It is just the kind of a congregation that is needed in that great and wicked city. Its influence is being felt for good all over the city, and, like the church in Rome, their faith will be "spoken of throughout the whole world."

Brethren, I want to call your attention to the appeal I made for them in the Gospel Advocate of April 9, and to again ask you, in the name of our Lord and Master, to heed this appeal and send them the much-needed help. They expect to begin their building about the first of May, and they need your help. Send contributions to Brother Russell Davis, 282 West Miller Avenue, Akron, Ohio.

Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and its editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer, says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of real songs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. HARDEMAN'S TABERNACLE SERMONS

VOLUME II

Price, $1.50, postpaid.

These sermons were delivered to from five to eight thousand people. Hardeman believes the gospel and has the courage to proclaim it. The sermons are strong, clear, and forceful. Thousands were charmed and delighted by these sermons here in Nashville. Many thousand people have read them with much satisfaction and profit.

A copy of the book should be in every library.

We do not expect to have this book of sermons in stock very long. If you want a copy, you should order at once. It would do much good to circulate a number of copies among your friends. The truth is mighty and will prevail.

BOSWELL-HARDEMAN DISCUSSION ON INSTRU-MENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

Price, postpaid_____$1.50

The Boswell-Hardeman discussion on instrumental music in the worship is now ready for distribution. If you have not already given us your order for the discussion, you should do so at once. The subject is a live one and the interest in it is growing. So many who have built on the silence of the Bible have espoused "open membership" and have denied the inspiration of the Scriptures and the deity of Christ that the people are realizing as never before that it is dangerous to build on the silence of the Bible.

This discussion was conducted in a good spirit throughout, each speaker showing marked consideration and courtesy for his opponent. Ira M. Boswell did as well as any one can do who undertakes to prove that instrumental music in the worship is scriptural. Any failure that he made was not on account of his lack of ability, but was due to the weakness of his position. N. B. Hardeman presented the truth in a forceful and convincing way.

Buy the book and circulate it among those who use instrumental music in the worship.

TRIBUTE TO A WORTHY MAN.

BY FRED M. LITTLE.

Truly great men are those who render the greatest service possible for the good of mankind. Such was Brother W. J. Haynes, of Grady, Ala. Brother Haynes was born in the year 1858, and died on March 20, 1925. He *obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Samuel Jordan, of Highland Home, Ala., in his youth.

Under adverse circumstances Brother Haynes received the best education that the schools of the country could give fifty years ago. He began to preach the gospel when he was twenty-two years of age. His life work thereafter was teaching school and preaching. He taught for a number of years in his own private school at Grady, his home. He taught the Bible daily to all who came under his tutelage. Many young men went out from his school inspired to preach the word of the Lord as a result of having been taught and encouraged by Brother Haynes.

But his greatest work was that of an evangelist. He traveled over portions of several Southern States laboring to build up the kingdom of God. As he was an able preacher, an excellent singer, and, above all, a good man, his labors were fruitful of much good. Thousands of people were led to Christ by his ministry, and hundreds of congregations were established throughout Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, and Texas. He fearlessly, but very lovingly, set forth the terms of salvation with convincing effect. He knew the Bible thoroughly. Very few could quote more of the Bible by memory than Brother Haynes. His ministry was one of love, for he went out without any assurance of monetary reward. He held meetings and filled appointments many times at his own expense.

The true greatness of the man can be estimated when it is an evident fact that his own community loved and appreciated him best because they knew him best.

He reared a family of several children and provided for them well. He was married the second time, and spent the last years of his life at his home at Grady, Ala. The last four years were inactive because of failing health.

In the death of William J. Haynes, another great hero in the conflict for truth and righteousness has fallen. Brother Samuel Jordan preached the funeral at Prospect Cemetery, near old Strata Church, where loving friends and relatives paid their last respects to his earthly remains. He, like Abel of old, still speaks though he is dead.

WORK IN CLEVELAND, OHIO. BY A. L. HENDERSHOT.

We wish to acquaint the brethren with the condition confronting the church of Christ in this city. After many years of waiting and struggling as best we could, without a suitable place either to worship or to preach the gospel, we determined to build a house, and this was done the latter part of 1924, and dedicated on January 11, 1925. This was followed by a protracted meeting, which resulted in sixteen additions to the congregation. We wish to make this church the center of missionary work in this city, and, in order to do this, we must maintain a regular preaching service here and there. This we are striving to do. Our house is not elaborate, but it is substantial, and of a character such as is demanded by its location and surroundings. On account of the requirements of the city building code, the structure cost more than it otherwise would.

Our membership is small, and none have any income except their daily earnings. While we all are doing all we can, and some more than they can afford to do, it is not sufficient to meet our present needs. We have bills to pay on our building which must be met at once, if we are to retain our property and our good name.

Brethren, we are appealing to you to assist us in this our extremity, to the utmost of your ability. We are the only congregation in this city of a million people which is striving to proclaim the gospel in its truth and simplicity. The opportunity to do good here is great. We beseech you in Christ's name to assist us now, and thus make possible the great work before us.

We are needing three thousand dollars to carry us through our present crisis, after which we hope to be able to handle the situation ourselves. Will you assist us with one Lord'sday's contribution, or more if possible? All contributions will be publicly acknowledged unless otherwise requested.

Address all communications to the clerk, A. L. Hendershot, 7815 New York Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

WOMAN AILING FOR A YEAR

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound— Happy Results

Newcastle, Pa.—"I was all run-down and everybody thought I was going into a decline. I had been ailing for a year with pains in myright side so that I could hardly stand on my feet. When I walked I felt as if something was falling. I was not able to do any work and had a nurse most of the time. She pound, so I gave it a fair trial. Some women think one bottle should cure them, but I did not stop at that. I took them, but I did not stop at that. I took more and got better, and am able ever since to do my own housework. There was a time, when I would complain of not feeling well, that my husband would say, 'Go to the doctor.' But now he will tell me to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's, and it has always helped me. I have had druggists tell me that they had something better, but they don't tell me that now, for I take no other. I have been taking the Vegetable Compound now for five years. AIKEN.

On May 20, 1846, James Hamilton Aiken was born in Londonderry, Ireland. On March 30, 1925, at his home in Haywood County, near Brownsville, Tenn., he peacefully fell asleep in Jesus. He came to this country with his parents in 1856. On April 4, 1872, he married Miss Ellen Johnson. To this union seven children were born, all of whom survive him. His wife also survives him. He was baptized into Christ, on April 7, 1872, by Brother A. D. Whitelaw. From then to the day of his death he was an earnest, faithful, consistent Christian. For forty-five years he preached the gospel, and did much good in this section. He will be greatly missed by the church at Cliff Creek, where he worshiped, and by the whole community. His loved ones do not sorrow as those who have no hope, for they expect to meet him "in the sweet by nity. He obeyed the gospel at the early age of sixteen, under the preaching of Brother E. Hoover. He moved to Huntsville about fourteen years ago and has been a faithful member ever since. Because of his faithfulness and qualifications he was chosen as elder of the West Huntsville Church, and was devoted and loyal to the end. and was devoted and loyal to the end. Brother Northeut was affected with lung trouble and was confined to his bed the last six months of his life, but he bore his affliction with patience. He was conscious to the end. Funeral services were held at the West Huntsville meetinghouse, conducted by Brethren J. A. Jenkins and Boyd Fanning. He leaves a wife, five children, four brothers, two sisters, and a father to mourn his loss. To them I would say: Be faithful to the end, and it will be a happy meeting on the other side of the river. J. I. Jones.

MOORE.

MOORE.

On February 19, 1925, at the home of her son, W. A. Moore, Tupelo, Miss., the gentle spirit of Mrs. Jonathan Moore left its earthly tenement of clay and winged its flight to the pearly gates. She was modest, quiet, and retiring in disposition; loving, kind, and gentle toward all with whom she came in contact. Her beautiful life is more effectual than any sermon or tribute that could be spoken or written of her. Her memory will ever live in the hearts of those who knew and loved her best, and the influence of her life will be felt by many. Truly can it be said of her: "None knew her but to love her." From early girlhood her life was spent near Thyatira, Miss. Here she was married to Jonathan Moore, and together they lived a righteous and godly Christian life until some two and a half years ago, when he was called to his heavenly home. To those who are left with bleeding hearts I would say: Weep not as those who have no hope. "She is not dead, but sleepeth." "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." May God comfort the sorrowing and heal their broken hearts, and may they at last be reunited with those they love in that home where there is "no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying."

MAY.

Mary (Barnette) May was born on August 25, 1849, and died on February 20, 1925, living to the age of seventy-five years and a few months. We feel that she was truly "a sheaf ripe and ready for the garner." She was baptized in the summer of 1891 by J. L. Haddock. She was the mother of six children—five girls and one boy. Two girls died in childhood. Three girls, the son, and eleven grandchildren are living. The children are all members of the church. The husband and father, J. J. May, died on February 15, 1905. The son and his family have cared for mother and the oldest sister, who has been a cripple since childhood. I for mother and the oldest sister, who has been a cripple since childhood. I never knew a better Christian family. They all love one another, and were so good and kind to their parents. Mother was confined to her bed for about eight months; but neither children nor grandchildren ever seemed to tire, but were ever ready to do anything for "Ma" and "Grandma." Brother Hassell spoke words of comfort to the bereaved relatives and a fort to the bereaved relatives and a host of friends, after which she was

HELLUMS.

Sarah Elizabeth Rutherford was born on January 4, 1852, and passed into that blessed sleep, at her home at Charlie, Texas, on July 24, 1924. At the age of seventeen years she was united in marriage to William Hapward Hellums, and in their young days both were bartized into Christ. To this union were born fourteen. To this union were born fourteen children, ten of whom survive their mother. Her faith in the God she loved and worshiped never wavered, and her love for the church was a love of service. She not only knew what God has said in his revealed will, but God has said in his revealed will, but she believed what he said, and en-joyed reading his word daily and singing praises to his name. She was devoted and true in all the relations of life, and has left to her children, all of whom are members of the church and who know the duties, privileges, and pleasures becoming to Christians, a Christian character that stands as a monument to the cause of Christians, a Christian character that stands as a monument to the cause of Christ, and to her accuraintances a friend indeed. Mother was in a dying condition several months before death came as a relief. Though she dreaded the pangs of death, she looked forward to that home of many mansions, whose builder and maker is God, and where there will be no more sorrow and parting and where all God, and where there will be no more sorrow and parting and where all tears shall be wiped away. Her body was consigned to the grave in the Pursley Cemetery beside that of her husband to await the judgment day.

HARDEMAN.

HARDEMAN.

On the evening of April 3, 1925, our beloved brother, Jasper M. Hardeman, ended his earthly pilgrimage, which extended through a period of eighty years, ten months, and twentyfour days. In giving up Brother Hardeman, the church in Pulaski, Tenn., has given up one of her most faithful and beloved members. He was an inspiration to all, and his sunny smile brought cheer to many sad and lonely hearts. He was a peacemaker in the church and community in which he lived. He was always present when the church doors were open, if he and his family were well. He was a man who believed that God hears and answers prayer. The devotion and faithfulness of his six children during the last week of his life is evidence of his having reared his children to love and respect him and his faithful companion. He expressed his desire to live that he might yet be useful to the Lord in his vineyard. He died, however, completely submissive to the Father's will, in full assurance of a brighter home. He had been a member of the church of Christ about forty years. Brother Northeross baptized him during one of his meetings in Giles Brother Northcross baptized him durfrother Northcross baptized him during one of his meetings in Giles County. He leaves, to mourn his departure, a faithful companion, six children, one brother, a number of more distant relatives, and a host of friends. He was an uncle and admirer of our beloved N. B. Hardeman. Funeral services were conducted at Funeral services were conducted at the church in Pulaski by the writer on Sunday, April 5.

SCRIPTURE STUDIES

BY JAMES A. ALLEN

The teaching of Jesus Christ embraces all the conditions and relationships of life. No man can live under circumstances in which the Scriptures are not applicable to him. In sickness and in health, in adversity or in prosperity, whether male or female, there are passages in the Bible that are directly applicable to him or her, and from which may be derived the proper strength and guidance.

The simple directness and clearness with which God's word presents man's duty is one of the marvelous wonders of the Bible. A Book that the most learned sages of earth cannot exhaust or fathom, it is yet the only Book extant from which the illiterate and unlearned, "the wayfaring men, yea fools," can gather intelligible conceptions of their origin and destiny, and can intellectually grasp, with precision and clearness, a satisfactory account of their obligations, responsibilities, and duties.

Having tried, in their most mature development, all that the world can offer, and having tested, by personal experience, all the rewards and penalties of wisdom, wealth, power, and pleasure, under one of which four heads may be classified every desire and craving that ambition may incite Solomon, having found them all to be "vanity and a striving after wind," declares "the end of the matter" to be simply that, for a man to be successful and happy, he must "fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man."

No man can be happy who does not do his duty. The duties of both sinner and saint are so plainly and clearly presented in God's word that any responsible person may easily comprehend them. No man who loves righteousness and desires to do right can rest at ease while ignoring and disregarding his duty. Those who love the Lord will gladly and happily obey his commandments.

The very soul of true religion is embraced in this principle. In 1 Cor. 13 Paul assures us that the greatest of all is love. When the Savior was asked, "What commandment is the first of all?" he responded: "The first is, Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God, the Lord is one: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. The second is this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these." Love to God can find its expression only in obedience to God. "If ye love me," said Jesus, "ye will keep my commandments." The Lord adds: "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself unto him."

The cardinal principle, then, of true religion consists of that love to God that obeys God. Without this, all else is vain. No amount of zeal and activity, no matter if a man can preach "with the tongues of men and of angels," or if he bestows all his goods to feed the poor or gives his body to be burned, unless he has that love of God in his heart that prompts him to do the things that God commands, he is become simply "sounding brass, or a clanging cymbal," and he is "nothing."

The denominational world seems very slow to learn that it is better to obey than to sing and pray. Many are singing and praying, and even preaching, who cannot find it in their hearts to submit to the will of God and to do what God commands. The services that they offer to God are services that their own wisdom suggests and approves; and these services and their worship are offered to God because it pleases them to so do, not because God is pleased to accept such at their hands.

It seems amazingly strange that a creature of reason should bow down and pray to God at the same time he is refusing to do what God commands. Clergymen, in the city of Nashville, deliver sermons and seem to pour out their very souls to God in prayer, who will not read, nor permit others to read, to their congregations the things that the Holy Spirit commands sinners to do to be saved. And when such things are forced upon their attention, instead of anxiously seeking to really learn what God's will is, they introduce every quibble available to show that God's word does not mean what it says and that it is not at all necessary to do what God commands. And such people preach, and pray, and sing!

God accepts only such service as he commands man to perform. "What thing soever I command you," says the Lord, "that shall ye observe to do: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it." The Bible forbids a man to do anything as service to God that it does not command him to do. It prohibits what it does not require. "Not to go beyond the things which are written" (1 Cor. 4: 6) means that we must preach and practice "the things which are written" and nothing else. The language of Peter, "If any man speaketh, speaking as it were oracles of God" (1 Pet. 4: 11), forbids a man to speak anything that he cannot read in the oracles of God. This principle recognizes that God is the Author of all service he accepts. For man to offer service to God that God does not command him to offer is for man to offer service to God that man himself is the author of.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

BY EMMA P. LARIMORE.

No, Mr. Larimore is not sick, as some of his friends have feared; but, having a series of meetings in progress here and also having with us visitors who want to see Washington, we have spent the days sight-seeing and the evenings in attending the meetings; hence, we have skipped a beat in the writing. I am doing the writing this week, because I want to tell the children about the Easter egg-rolling at the White House. Mr. Larimore did not attend that function, it being a little out of his line; but he kindly offered me his space in the Gospel Advocate in which to write of what I saw and heard that day.

It has long been the custom for the children in Washington City to gather on the south lawn of the White House, the Monday immediately following Easter Sunday, and roll Easter eggs down the slopes of the lawn. The egg-rolling custom has been observed in some parts of the world, it is said, since the days of the Pharaohs-kings reigning in Egypt more than three thousand years agoof whom you children have read in studying in the Bible the story of Joseph. Just when this custom began to be observed in Washington City, I do not know. No one seems to remember or to have heard who first started the Easter eggs rolling on the White House lawn, but now it is an established custom granted the children of the city every year, Easter Monday. The schools here have an Easter vacation lasting a week; hence, they are free to enjoy the egg-rolling.

The north, or front, lawn of the White House is always open, and the public may pass through it at will and enjoy its beauty; but the south lawn is reserved for the inmates of the White House, and is rarely opened to the public. It is well adapted to the egg-rolling activity, being very large, and, instead of its being a smooth, green level, there are four little knolls on its surface—small hills—and down these knolls the bright-colored eggs are sent rolling in every direction. The merry little folks run after the eggs, and, of course, there are collisions and falls and bumps and bruises, but no broken bones.

One grown-up may accompany each child through the gates, which are carefully guarded. Many are very glad to borrow a child on that occasion, as no one can enter the gates unless accompanied by a child, and the age limit is ten years. That limit is not strictly enforced, however, for I am sure there were children present who were over ten years old. I took with me a little girl, Felicia Lee Locke, who is in my Sunday-school class, her mother, being fortunate enough to have two little girls, kindly offering to lend me one. Little Hazel Cardwell, a friend of Felicia Lee and Eleanor Raymond, was there with her mother; and instead of our taking the three children in, they took us inside the gates without any questions being asked. I saw many grown people who had no child with them halted and turned back by the guard at the gate. So, you see, that was one day when children were the important members of any party trying to attend the eggrolling. Some little boys-I am not sure little girls ever do so-stand just outside the gates and hire themselves to any grown-ups who come seeking admittance without a child to give them the right to enter. The boy walks in with his temporary foster parent, receivese a litle money for the favor, and scampers out at the gate of exit, to hire himself to some other childless man or woman who wants to get inside. It is said that some of these boys make a nice little sum that way; but policemen and guards keep a sharp lookout for frauds of that sort.

The scene on the lawn was very pretty on April 13. The day was bright, beautiful, and warm, the children were gay and happy, and the grown-ups were busy trying to keep up with their charges. There were many Girl Scouts on the ground, and they directed the games of the children, picked them up when they fell, soothed them when they cried, took care that no damage was done to shrubs and flowers on the lawn, and helped whensoever and wheresoever helpers were needed. The gayly-colored eggs were rolling down the green slopes in every direction, with happy children scampering after them. Some were tossing balls, others playing London Bridge, Drop the Handkerchief, I Spy, and other games I remember playing when a child, as well as new games I did not know. As noon drew near, children and grown people gathered in groups and ate their lunches.

It was estimated that there were ten thousand children on the lawn that day and not less than four hundred thousand eggs rolled, but that seems to me to be a rather big estimate as to the eggs. Forty eggs to each child seems to be entirely too many eggs; but on the street car we boarded to reach the White House there were many children, and each child had a little basket or box of eggs. After rolling the eggs till they were broken, many of the children ate them, and the grass looked as if there might have been a shower of bits of bright-colored eggs. But the children were entirely free. There were no restrictions as to keeping the grounds trim and neat, and no one was required to pick up eggshells or other scraps.

In the midst of the grounds is a large pool, with jets of water all around its rim, flashing back in rainbow hues the rays of the warm spring sun. Careful, anxious mothers had no fears of their little ones' falling into the pool, however, though there were always many children about it, as it is well wired to keep children at a safe distance.

Mrs. Coolidge, mistress of the White House, came out on the lawn, her two white dogs with her, and was at once the center of a group of children eager to shake hands with her. Mr. Coolidge, the President, came out on the south portico, overlooking the animated scene, and waved his hand to the smiling children. That day (April 13) was, doubtless, to them tinged with sadness, it being the anniversary of the birth of their son, young Calvin Coolidge, who died less than a year ago.

In the afternoon the celebrated Marine Band played, and at three o'clock the gates were opened to all who wished to go in. By that time the children had tired of egg-rolling and other games, and many had gone home; hence, the presence of so many grown people could no longer interfere with their sport. At five o'clock the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," after which all went home.

Long ago the White House lawn was large enough for all the children of the city to have room to roll their Easter eggs on its green slopes; but the number of children has grown steadily, while the lawn remains exactly the same in size; so, many children go to Rock Creek Park and others to the grounds of the Soldiers' Home for the annual egg-rolling festival. The green slopes of those two places were alive with children that day. It was a bright, pleasant day following a "spell" of cold, dark weather, and the warm spring sunshine was a boon to all who love to get out into God's great outdoors.

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 17. By C. E. W. DORRIS.

MAN'S WORKS TO BE TESTED. (Verse 15.)

Verse 15. If any man's work shall be burned. That is, the material not able to stand the test will be destroyed. He shall suffer loss. The builder will lose his material and his time and labor spent on it. But he himself shall be saved. That is, the builder may lose his material and all his time and labor given to it; but if he proves faithful in the test, he will be saved. The builder, as well as his material, will be tested. Yet so as by fire. As one escaping some evil with great difficulty. He is saved, but barely saved, like one who escapes from a burning building where all or almost all of his goods are consumed. We should observe that the salvation or damnation of the material has no effect on the salvation or damnation of the builder; neither does the salvation or damnation of the builder affect the salvation or damnation of the material. The salvation or damnation of each depends upon the faithfulness or unfaithfulness of the individual himself. builder may lose all his material and yet be saved himself. if he proves true; and the material may all be saved and yet the builder be lost, provided it proves true. The salvation of the material does not depend upon the goodness and purity of heart and soundness of the preacher who does the baptizing, but upon the motive and purpose of the heart of the one baptized and his faithfulness afterwards. If a believing penitent is baptized to obey God, and does it because God demands it of him and to get into Christ, this feature of his obedience is genuine though the administrator may have, at the time of the baptizing, held many false ideas and theories about it. The obedience of the baptized is not to be rejected on account of the false ideas, theories, and doctrines of the administrator. This should put an end to the so-called "rebaptism." He who will not fellowship a baptized believer because he was baptized by one who held to, taught, and practiced some error, when he is trying to get away from and out of the false doctrines and practices of the administrator, is a sectarian.

THE SIN OF DEFILING GOD'S TEMPLE. (Verses 16, 17.)

16. Know ye not that ye are the temple of God? The disciples of Corinth composed the church at Corinth. The Spirit of God dwelleth in you. The Spirit of God dwells in all obedient believers—the church. (Acts 2: 38; 5: 32.) The Spirit is given to God's children. (Gal. 4: 6.) The world cannot receive the Spirit. (John 14: 17.) The reception of the Spirit at the house of Cornelius was a miracle. (Acts 10: 44-46.)

17. If any man defile the temple of God. Destroys the local church. Him shall God destroy. He who defiles the church or temple of God by carnal divisions and doctrines fundamentally wrong will be visited with the wrath of God. He who thus defiles the temple of God is a worse character than he who pierced the side of the Son of God, because he defiles the spiritual or better part, while he who pierced the side of Christ only marred the temporal part. This character will not be saved at all-not even "so as by fire." The apostle describes the sin and punishment, not only of such teachers as from worldly motives allure bad men into the church or continue them in fellowship by willfully perverting the doctrine and precepts of the gospel, but also of those hypocrites who for worldly ends intrude themselves among the faithful and put on a great show of godliness. The expression, "if any man destroy the temple of God," being general, is no doubt applicable to any false teacher and hypocritical Christian who spoils the temple of God. Nevertheless, Paul, in this passage, had more particularly in mind the false teacher and the faction at Corinth who had spoiled the temple of God at that place by their divisions as above stated. This is an argument to the Corinthians to show the evil of their divisions. They are the church and temple of God, and, therefore, not to be profaned by divisions. The Corinthians, by being converted to Christianity, became a church of Christ, a holy temple, in which the Spirit of God dwelt, and where the spirit of division ought not to be. Observe: (1) That the people of God in a given locality constitute the church or temple of God in that locality; (2) that the Spirit of God dwells in the church or temple of God; (3) that those who defile the church or temple of God, either by factious divisions or erroneous doctrines or corrupt living, provoke God to destroy them.

THE GLORIOUS ESTATE OF THE CORINTHIANS. (Verses 18-23.)

18. Let no man deceive himself. A caution against the tendencies of party sins. Self-deceit is the ground of all other deceit. Whatever deceit is abroad, it begins at home. A deceitful heart will not spare so much as itself, although the self-deceit be most unnatural and monstrous, most fatal and pernicious. If any man among you seemeth to be wise, etc. That is, if any man seem to be wise in the wisdom and learning of this world, let him embrace the doctrine of Christ, which the world calls "foolishness," and so become a fool to them, that he may be wise according to the wisdom of God. All human and worldly wisdom comes far short of, and is but a mere shadow and appearance compared with, the wisdom of God manifested in the gospel. If one is wise in his own estimation and that of the world, let him select that which the world calls "foolishness" that he may be wise unto salvation. This kind of wisdom Paul severely condemns, because it stands in opposition to the wisdom of God. He commands all teachers of the gospel to teach its doctrine and precepts sincerely.

19. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. That is, it is so in God's estimation; he counts it so. That which the world thinks is wise is only foolishness in God's sight. If we compare wit with grace, learning with true religion, a rational head with a gracious heart, the latter infinitely transcends the former in the account of God. All the admired wisdom of worldly men is nothing but contemptible folly in the esteem of God. The world's wisest man is God's biggest fool. For it is written. In Job 5: 13. He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. Not only while they think they are acting wisely, but by their own wisdom, which itself is their snare and the occasion of their destruction. No wisdom or craftiness of man can stand before the wisdom and power of God.

20. The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise. Not only does he know the thoughts of the worldly-minded, but the spiritual-minded as well; hence, he cannot be deceived by either. That they are vain. The thoughts of the worldly-wise are empty and foolish in God's sight. The subtle contrivances of men who are opposed to the methods which God's wisdom has appointed are vain—are utterly ineffectual for accomplishing what they intend by them. Wherefore those wise teachers, whom Paul reproved, labored to no purpose when they endeavored to build the temple or church of God by methods which God condemned. The choicest and best thoughts of the wisest men are vain—yea, vanity. Note that Paul introduces a double testimony from the Old Testament to prove his assertion that the wisdom of the world is foolishness with God—the first from Job 5: 13, the second from Ps. 94: 11.

21. Therefore. Upon the whole. Let no man glory in men. No teacher belongs peculiarly to himself, and for this reason we should not form parties around human leaders. All things are yours. They had been enriched in everything, in utterance and in knowledge, by the grace of God. (Chapter 1: 4, 5.) The supernatural gifts of tongues and knowledge had been imparted to them, so that they were not inferior to other Christians in privileges. (Chapter 1: 7.)

22. Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas. The three parties over whom they were divided were all equally theirs to serve them for Christ's sake. Or the world. The leap from the three preachers to the world greatly enlarges the thought and shows that the world is not our master, but the servant of the children of God. Every one in the world, however excellent in gifts or grace or office, is also your servant. Or life. Life is yours, to school fit, and qualify yourselves for heaven. Or death. Death is gain to the Christian. By it he comes into possession of his eternal reward. Or things present. All " shall work together for good to them that love the Lord." Or things to come. Probably things future as related to this present life, also in life eternal. All are yours. The climax in this world and the world to come, should not get the idea that the property of all the things in the world is vested in Christians by an exclusive title, but that, by the direction of the providence of God, all things, prosperous or adverse, whether present or future, shall be made subservient to the promoting of their virtue in the present life, and of their felicity in the life to come. Thus far they may consider themselves as having an interest in all things, and may survey them with pleasure as making a part of their treasures; and among the rest, death itself is theirs, as it is the appointed means of bringing them to the vision and enjoyment of God and all heavenly blessings.

28. Ye are Christ's. His property, subjects, and members, because he has bought us with his blood. Therefore, instead of being disciples of Paul, Apollos, and Peter, you are disciples of Christ. Christ is God's. mediator, he refers all his services to God's glory. Christians own all else, but do not own themselves. are not their own, but the property of Christ. Christians are disciples and servants of Christ, and Christ is God's disciple or servant, at least in revealing the plan of salvation. (John 7: 16; 8: 28; 12: 49; 14: 10; 1 Cor. 11: 3.) Paul closes his discourse with the admonition not to glory in any man, neither in Paul, nor Apollos, nor Cephas, seeing they were all theirs. That is, all the apostles and ministers of Christ, from the highest to the lowest, from the least to the greatest, and all their ministerial gifts and labors, are all ordained and appointed by God for their use and service. All true ministers and ministerial abilities are wholly for the church service and spiritual advantage; all their power is for the church's preservation; all their gifts are for the church's edification. Their message is for the church's comfort and consolation. Thus all things in and belonging to the church are ours. The true Christian uses this life in promoting God's glory and securing his own salvation. Death, that which is in itself so terrible, is for his advantage. It delivers him from a sinful world and passes him on into heaven. All events of providence which befall us, whether prosperity or adversity, health or sickness, riches or poverty, are all sanctified to us, and are instrumental for the sanctifying of us. They are blessings, and dispensed in love to us. All future things which may befall us in this world and in the world to come shall be to our abundant advantage, whether they be merciful or good things, or grievous and sad things; particularly death is to come, but to die is "Ye are Christ's." That is, not Paul's, nor Apollos', nor Cephas' disciples or servants, but Christ's only; therefore, glory only in him. Consecrate all to the service of Christ and resign all to the will of God. Ye are Christ's by adoption, by redemption, and by conquest; therefore, glory in him, and in him only.

I have always said, and always will say, that the studious perusal of the Sacred Volume will make better citizens, better fathers, and better husbands.—Thomas Jefferson.

CHRISTIAN SCHOOLS.

An article headed, "Tending Toward Denominationalism," by Brother J. L. Hines, appears in the Gospel Advocate of April 2, on page 315. In this article Brother Hines points out some very flagrant blunders in an advertisement by Brother A. R. Holton. That Brother Holton, who is president of a college, was so indiscreet as to fall into the patois of denominationalism is regretfully astonishing. Brother Hines' criticism of Brother Hines' criticism of Brother Holton, are intured by a sealour has my whole hearted indeprenant. ishing. Brother Hines' criticism of Brother Holton's un-scriptural phraseology has my whole-hearted indorsement. But in that article of criticism Brother Hines gives us a paragraph of remarks on the operation of Christian schools in general. These remarks are as erroneous and injurious as Brother Holton's "denominational thunder." I refer to the following from Brother Hines' article: "Christians have a legal and scriptural right to own

"Christians have a legal and scriptural right to own and operate schools, as private institutions, just as farmers, business men, or printers; but just a little common Bible judgment teaches us the impropriety of farmers, business men, or printers' begging the churches for money to run their private business. Yet a Christian farmer has the same right to beg the churches for funds to run a Christian farm as a Christian teacher has to beg the churches for funds to run a Christian school. There is no authority for either in the Scriptures. Even if Christian business men should start such a 'drive,' scarcely a cent would they get unless they tacked 'Bible' or 'Christian' to the name of their enterprise. The same is true of the colleges. If brethren cannot run schools on a solid financial basis, they had better quit. But after securing thousands of dollars from the brethren at large, I find that board and tuition in said colleges are no cheaper than others."

Does Brother Hines mean to teach that it is wrong

Does Brother Hines mean to teach that it is wrong for men who are running an enterprise which is not self-supporting, but admittedly good for humanity, to solicit funds from the brethren for the purpose of maintaining that enterprise? "If not, that is the impression it makes on his readers, anyway."

on his readers, anyway."

Not many months ago a new hospital was built in our town. Of course, this "enterprise" was not self-supporting at first, and, therefore, not on a "solid financial basis." But the promoters of this "enterprise" wanted to put it on a "solid financial basis" as soon as possible, and called on the Martin church for funds. We gave about one hundred and forty dollars. An operation at this hospital is "no cheaper than others." Did we do wrong in giving one hundred and forty dollars to build a hospital? If it is not wrong for us to contribute to the building and mainone hundred and forty dollars to build a hospital? If it is not wrong for us to contribute to the building and maintaining of a hospital, is it wrong for the promoters to ask us to do that which is not wrong for us to do? Did we do wrong in not telling the physicians who were working for this hospital that if doctors cannot build hospitals "on a solid financial basis, they had better quit?"

Sometimes brethren who are running orphans' homes write to the church at Martin asking for funds for the maintenance of these homes. And sometimes we respond liberally. Ought we to tell these brethren that if they cannot run these homes "on a solid financial basis, they had better quit?"

Of course, these brethren who are running the Chris-had better quit?"

Of course, these brethren who are running the Christian schools, and who "have a legal and scriptural" right to run them, would not get a cent "unless they tacked 'Bible' or 'Christian' to the name of their enterprise." If a brother should come to us for a meeting, he would not get a cent "unless" he "tacked Bible or Christian" to his enterprise. We do not want anything that doesn't have both "Bible" and "Christian" hanging to it somewhere. It is because "Bible" and "Christian" are tacked so securely to the hearts of our children when they attend the Christian schools that all Christians ought to contribute to the building and maintaining of them. to contribute to the building and maintaining of them.

to contribute to the building and maintaining of them.

The use of denominational terms by the president of one school doesn't prove that such terms are used in all schools. We still have some brethren running schools in Tennessee who use sound speech and know the difference between denominationalism and Christianity. If one school teaches denominationalism, let the mothers and fathers in Israel take their children out of that college and send them to another. Brethren of greater faith and loyalty than those who are running the Christian schools in Tennessee cannot be found.

The need of Christian schools was never greater than now. Infielity and sectarianism are rampant. Our children must be educated somewhere by somebody. We have brethren who are capable teachers, free from every phase dren must be educated somewhere by somebody. We have brethren who are capable teachers, free from every phase of infidelity and denominationalism. Being deeply moved for the eternal welfare of the boys and girls whose faith in God is insidiously destroyed by many colleges, these faithful and loyal brethren have undertaken to build and operate schools where our children are bedyeated and operate schools where our children can be educated and rooted and builded up in Christ and established in their faith, instead of Darwinism and denominationalism. We believe the brethren who are running these schools are believe the brethren who are running these schools are doing a good work, because Brother Hines says they have a "legal and scriptural right" to run them. And since very few school-teachers and preachers have money enough to do this good work as it ought to be done, we believe all Christians ought to be glad to have fellowship with them in "every good work" (2 Cor. 9: 8; Tit. 3: 1) and rejoice at the opportunity to put their money where it will contribute to the spiritual growth and development of the youth of our land.

Brother Hines in one paragraph seems to suppose that it will contribute to the spiritual growth and development of the youth of our land.

Brother Hines, in one paragraph, seems to suppose that because a school receives money from the churches, and the "United Christian Missionary Society" receives money from the churches, too, that one is just as unscriptural as the other; but in the next paragraph he seems to have discovered the difference when he says: "Christians have a legal and scriptural right to own and operate schools, as private institutions," Christians do not have a "scriptural right to own and operate" the United Christian Missionary Society, either as a private or public institution. The difference is in the work they do. The United Christian Missionary Society "operates" the church by usurpation. Schools which are made possible by the liberality of Christians build boys and girls mentally and spiritually. Orphans' homes, which are made possible by the liberality of Christians, feed, clothe, and shelter unfortunate children. If a school is as unscriptural as the United Christian Missionary Society because both receive money from the churches, an orphans' home supported by the churches is as unscriptural as either. To compare either Christian Schools or orphans' homes to the United Christian Missionary Society is as absurd as to compare Paul to Judas.

Let us never lose sight of our opportunities nor fail to use every one of them for the advancement of the kingdom our Lord died to establish. Cecil B. Douthitt.

The following letter is from Brother A. R. Holton. president of Thorp Spring Christian College, to Brother J. L. Hines:

Thorp Spring Christian College, Thorp Spring, Texas, April 6, 1925.—I have just read "Tending Toward Denominationalism" in the Gospel Advocate of April 2. May I say that I agree with everything that you have to say. I come to offer an apology and an explanation. The matter going into our advertisement in the Firm Foundation of March 10 came about under the following circumtion of March 10 came about under the following circumstances: I had engaged the services of an advertising agency in Dallas, Texas. I had sent them a write-up of the main facts that I wanted to go into this advertisement; they sent back the copy to which you refer. In our rush to get this copy to the Firm Foundation, it was not edited; therein I made a great mistake. If you have noticed what I have had to say during the five years of my connection with Thorp Spring Christian College, you have never found anything tending toward denominationalism. You will also notice that we ran "ads" for several weeks after the one you refer to, in which "ads" there was nothing of the kind as indicated by the issue of March 10. I accept the correction and assure you that the advertise-I accept the correction and assure you that the advertisement was due to carelessness on my part in the office.
Yours fraternally,
A. R. HOLTON, President.

Brother Hines informs us that he is glad Brother Holton has seen fit to make the above correction. Brother Hines

I want to commend Brother Holton for his high ideals I want to commend Brother Holton for his night life is of Christian integrity and manhood. If all brethren, upon seeing their own mistakes by "carelessness," would breathe the spirit of our good brother, Holton, there would be fewer church troubles and there would be a breaking down of suspicion, and the Lord's army would press forward in the spirit of Jesus and in humility of the truth.

The abuse of a thing must be distinguished from the thing itself. Mistakes and errors are made in the work of schools, religious journals, housing and feeding widows and orphans, and in the work of the churches. The thing itself cannot be condemned because it is perverted or abused.

The education of children is a practical reality confronting parents, not a fiction nor a speculative theory. Something has to be done about it. Before any one condemns the very commendable efforts of those who are endeavoring to put the right sort of an education within the reach of boys and girls, they should suggest something better. He is a bad builder who would take everything away and put nothing in its place.

It is certainly right for Christians to conduct schools and colleges. We only regret that so few Christians are competent to so do. It would be shameful, and would bring about a most unenviable condition of things, if no Christians were conducting schools and if there were no Christian schools. No man can suggest, in rebuttal, that we have State schools. Are Christian parents to depend on worldly teachers for the education of their sons and daughters? The man who would make such an argument has no conception of the distinction between the world and the church.

But is it wrong for individual Christians or for congregations to assist in sustaining Christian schools? We may differ on the expediency of a multiplicity of drives and campaigns for money, and we may even go so far as to suggest the possibility of some of our schools putting too great an emphasis on money; but would this show that it is wrong to contribute to the support of a much-needed work that is not, of itself, self-supporting? The State supports its schools, and the rich contribute millions to the endowment of worldly colleges and universities. Certainly Christians should contribute to the support of Christian schools.

It would be right to contribute to the support of a Christian farm or a Christian factory, if good could come of it. Still, we wish to emphasize the fact that our schools and colleges are individual affairs and that, while the churches may contribute to their support if such be their desire, they are not "church schools" and have no jurisdiction whatever over the churches. Instead of being owned by the churches, such schools own themselves, and stand or fall upon their own merits and responsibility.

SERMON OUTLINES

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION

A Book of Three Hundred New Sermon Outlines

BY A. J. BACHMAN.

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bible-class teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

The book has three hundred sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

MISSION FIELDS

MISSIONS.

BY ROBERT S. KING.

If you were asked the following questions about the work of the church, what would be your answer?

How many foreign missionaries does it support?

In what countries are they located?

How many mission stations do they look after?

What is the church doing to reach the foreigners in this country?

What is it doing to reach the Jews in America?

What effort is your congregation making toward starting or in helping carry on a mission or a mission Bible class?

What effort is being put forth to train leaders and teachers for the future years?

What effort is being made to enlist the young people of the church in mission work, especially in the foreign field?

What is being done to promote definite and earnest prayer for our missionaries who are making so many sucrifices to tell the sweet story to those who know it not?

What are you doing to interest the church in all peoples and all nations?

"Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 18-20.)

Our Lord has given us a wonderful record of his life, death, and resurrection, confirming it by much proof, and placed in our hands this commission to tell the story to others.

We should read it every day, study it, pray over it, read it to the church every Lord's day, and ponder it until we have a passionate desire for souls. We should meditate upon it until we can earnestly and fervently pray "the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest;" for the harvest is plenteous, and the laborers are still few.

Do we realize that the mission of the church is missions, and that it is a big business? We would resent the charge that we are antimissionary, and we are not, but most of us have a mighty poor conception of the task before us. Almost three-fourths of the world lies in heathen darkness to-day. In round numbers, eight hundred million are practically untouched by the gospel, and millions more have only an imperfect knowledge, such as the Catholics and other denominations have given them.

Dare we not step forth from our pleasant homes and loved ones to take the message of salvation to heathen lands and claim the promise, "Lo, I am with you always?"

Why do the young people of our churches never volunteer for service in these neglected places? Lack of teaching on this important subject is the only answer. Missions will advance when we begin teaching the church her duty along this line.

Keith Faulkner once made this statement, which has become somewhat famous: "While vast continents are shrouded in almost utter darkness, and hundreds of millions suffer the horrors of heathenism, or of Islam, the burden of proof lies upon you to show that the circumstances in which God has placed you were meant by him to keep you out of the foreign field."

Paul said: "How shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent?"

Christ is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to a knowledge of the truth. In view of this fact, do we earnestly desire the salvation of souls, and have we earnestly tried to obey the Lord's marching order of the great commission? We are going to have to stand before God some day and give an account of the deeds done in the body, and we cannot look into his face unafraid and unashamed if we fail him now.

The church has some who are faithfully trying to take the glad tidings to those who know not God. These have left their pleasant homes and loved ones and this good land, where we can worship without fear of being molested and where there are none to make us afraid, and have crossed the seas to take the message to those in heathen darkness.

Here is the honor roll of those who have "left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or children, or lands, for my sake," and are faithfully declaring the unsearchable riches of Christ to a dying world: J. M. McCaleb, Tokyo, Japan; Miss Lillie D. Cypert, Tokyo, Japan; Clara E. Kennedy, Tokyo, Japan; Erroll A. Rhodes, Japan; Bess Wheeler Rhodes, Japan; Miss Sarah S. Andrews, Japan; Harry Robert Fox, Japan; Pauline Hickman Fox, Japan; Orville D. Bixler, Japan; Annie Davis Bixler, Japan; Herman J. Fox, Japan; Mrs. Herman J. Fox, Japan. These missionaries have nine little children.

The most prominent native evangelists are: Yunosuki Hiratsuka, Otoshigi Fujimori, Ebine and Herosia Ishiguro (the latter of whom is at present in Los Angeles, Cal., doing mission work); Max Langpaap, Honolulu, Hawaii; Ora T. Langpaap, Honolulu; Will N. Short, South Africa; Adelia O'Neal Short, South Africa; Ray Lawyer, South Africa; Zelma Wood Lawyer, South Africa; John Sherriff, South Africa; Emma Sherriff, South Africa.

India, with 330,000,000 people, has no missionary of the church of Christ. A remnant of the native church still exists, and there is need of a young couple to take up the work. China, with her four hundred and fifty millions, is absolutely untouched, so far as the church of Christ is concerned. The harvest is white and the reapers are few.

"Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" (Isa. 6: 8.) Dare you not finish the quotation?

Jesus told the Samaritan woman at the well: "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water."

We know him and have obtained this water that satisfies, and now we must give the same to others: "Freely ye have received, freely give. And: "If ye know these things, blessed are ye if ye do them."

Funds for the workers will be cheerfully forwarded without expense by the writer, in care of this office.

MISSIONARY WORK IN MICHIGAN.

BY LESLIE G. THOMAS.

While our attention is being called to mission work beyond the sea, we ought not to forget the work that should be done here at home. It is not the purpose of this article to minimize in any way the work abroad, but rather to point out opportunities around us that should not be allowed to go by unnoticed. With God there is no "home" and "foreign" missions. It is all missionary work with him.

The United States has a population of more than one hundred million souls. Approximately one-fifth of this number live in the Southern States. The gospel is quite well known in some parts of this section of the country, but beyond this a New Testament congregation of worshipers is the exception and not the rule. Millions of people near our door have never heard of the blessings Jesus offers them through the gospel.

Inasmuch as I had the privilege of spending more than five years in the great mission field of Michigan, I want to say a word about the work in that State.

Michigan has a population of more than three millions. There are eighty-three counties, and, if I am not mistaken, the number of congregations of Christians only will not exceed twenty-five in the entire State. Detroit has five white and one or two colored congregations, with one or two in its suburbs. Grand Rapids, the next city in size, has none; and Flint, the third city, with a population of approximately one hundred and thirty-five thousand, has one congregation.

For nearly five years some of the Detroit churches have been supporting a man in that mission field. During the four years they supported me (I supported myself the first year I was in the State), I was the only gospel preacher outside of the city of Detroit who gave his full time to the work. Brother Charles S. Black is now laboring in those parts, and, so far as I know, he is the only one outside of Detroit who is now devoting his entire time to the work.

Perhaps this is not the greatest mission field in the world, but I am sure that it deserves our attention. Is there a church or several churches in the Southland that will select a mission point in that State and support a man in the work there? Or is there a man who is willing to go to Michigan and support himself until he firmly establishes the cause of Christ in some destitute place?

[Editor's Note: Brother Thomas has done a great work in Michigan, and is now in the David Lipscomb College preparing himself for a greater work of the same nature in the same State. He is to be very greatly commended for his zeal and diligence in missionary work.]

OTHER GREAT MISSION FIELDS.

Evangelists sent and sustained by our various congregations should be kept busy preaching and teaching in such great cities of the United States as New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, St. Louis, San Francisco, and Washington, D. C.

And there are also many congregations in such States as Tennessee, Kentucky, and Texas that are amply able to send one or more evangelists to the great cities of Europe and South America. Jesus, our Lord, says: "The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest."

T. Q. MARTIN'S MEETING AT HENDERSON. BY L. L. BRIGANCE.

The one and only T. Q. Martin, of St. Marys, W. Va., recently closed an unusually good meeting at Henderson, Tenn. Brother and Sister Martin came to us as strangers, but they won the hearts of the church and town before they had been with us many days. They are an unusually fine pair—kind, courteous, cultivated, and Christian. It was a genuine pleasure to be with them and to have them with us.

Brother Martin is a great preacher. He knows the one great theme of every gospel preacher—"Christ, and him crucified"—and is kind, loving, and fearless in proclaiming it. His denunciation of all forms of sin and unbelief, especially of the so-called sciences that are trying to undermine Christianity, is something terrible to hear. It almost startles you like the lurid flash of lightning or the roar and crash of thunder. Brother Martin's manner of preaching is different. It was quite new to us. There is a rich vein of wit and humor, mingled with tenderness and pathos, running all through his speech, like the twisting together of gold and silver threads. Sunshine and showers, laughter and tears, follow each other like the shadows of clouds across the landscape.

T. Q. Martin has a gift that few of our preachers have—that is, of being able not only to reach the minds of men, but their hearts as well. He is evidently emotional by nature; and some great sorrows through which he has passed have deepened this side of his character. We have many others, perhaps, that can speak as ably to the intellects of men as Brother Martin, but few, if any, that can reach their hearts like he can. Having become disgusted with the appeal of the denominational preacher almost entirely to the emotions, we have swung to the opposite extreme of appealing almost exclusively to the intellect. The gospel is a mixture of things that appeal to both, and so ought our preaching to be. It is so with Brother Martin.

Great crowds attended this meeting. The whole town probably never turned out so well before. A good impression was made upon all. There were eighteen baptisms, the spiritual life of the church was deepened, members of the body were brought closer to God and to one another through our good brother's labors among us.

A very happy event of the meeting was a visit of Brother and Sister H. L. Calhoun, who came to make preparations to live and labor in Henderson in the future.

It turned out that Brethren Calhoun and Martin were old schoolmates and fellow laborers in the gospel in years gone by. Both of them had sat at the feet of McGarvey and Grubbs and Graham in their younger days. It was a happy meeting between them, one of the bright spots in life to which we look back with joy in the years to come. Brother Calhoun, of course, would not preach for us during Brother Martin's meeting, but he made a wonderful speech at the opening exercises of Freed-Hardeman College one morning while there. He impresses you most favorably. With all his great learning and culture, he is the very embodiment of simplicity and humility. He seems to be supremely happy in his new relationship, and as eager and enthusiastic as a boy over the prospect of his future connection with the churches of Christ and Freed-Hardeman College.

Sister Calhoun, although a very highly cultured woman, is, nevertheless, plain, simple, and motherly. She impresses you as a good, Christian wife and mother who is interested in the church, her husband and children, and the proper education and training of the young.

If any one should be further interested in Brother and Sister Calhoun, there will be an article about them and one from him, together with his picture, in the Freed-Hardeman College Bulletin, which will be out about the middle of May. A postal card will bring it to your address.

The church at Henderson will long remember Brother and Sister Martin's sojourn among us, and we trust that in the providence of God they may soon come our way again.

BROTHER McQUIDDY'S BOOK.

"The Profitable Word" contains a choice selection of the writings of J C. McQuiddy, editor and publisher of the Gospel Advocate for over forty years, carefully compiled by A. B. Lipscomb. It is a gem and contains some of the best thoughts of a great mind. The book contains 196 pages, and is neatly bound in silk and stamped in gold and white metal. Now ready. OUR MESSAGES

H. C. Hale preached at Lewisburg, Tenn., last Sunday. You don't know how much good you can do until you try.

Hugh H. Miller preached at Stiversville, Tenn., last Sunday.

There was one restoration at Lindsley Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

Those who live every day as though it were the last day never fall from grace.

- T. Q. Martin began a meeting at Grandview Heights, this city, last Lord's day.
- A. G. Freed preached the commencement sermon at Humboldt, Tenn., last Sunday.
- S. H. Hall reports two good crowds and one confession and baptism at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day.

A colored preacher in Mississippi was called to quit preaching by a squad of white caps. What are we coming to?

Andy T. Ritchie began a meeting with the congregation at Sixth Avenue and Buchanan Street, this city, last Lord's day.

Foy E. Wallace, Jr., and family change residence from Wichita Falls to Denton, Texas, and should be addressed at 914 Carrier Street.

- W. S. Moody preached at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. One lady came from the Baptists.
- A. B. Lipscomb closed a fine meeting at Eighth Avenue, North, this city, last Lord's day, with six baptisms. W. G. Klingman led the singing.
- F. B. Srygley is in a splendid meeting with the Ridgedale congregation, Chattanooga, Tenn. C. H. Woodroof preaches for this congregation.

Forney Roberson, Jasper, Ala., April 30: "Our meeting, with G. A. Dunn, Jr., of Texas, doing the preaching, is great. Seven additions so far,"

- F. C. Sowell hopes to meet his thirty-ninth annual engagement at South Harpeth, in Williamson County, Tenn., on the second Lord's day in May.
- R. C. White and J. D. Derryberry began a mission meeting at St. Augustine, Fla., May 3. The meeting will continue as long as the interest demands.

Married, at the home of Andrew Mayche, on the Hillsboro Road, Sunday, April 26, Harvey Clifton Herndon and Addie Mai Whited, H. S. Lipscomb officiating.

H. Leo Boles delivered the commencement sermon for the high school at Manchester, Tenn., last Lord's day. Brother Boles also preached in Manchester last Lord's-day night.

Price Billingsley is announced to begin a meeting for the Houston Heights church of Christ, Houston, Texas. Brother Billingsley preached at Charlotte Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

- R. C. White closed a meeting at Rogersville, Tenn., April 26, with two restored. There was good interest throughout. This is a congregation that came from the "digressives" last summer.
- B. C. Goodpasture, Atlanta, Ga., April 28: "Two fine services at West End Avenue last Sunday. Two were added by statement and one came from the Christian Church. One was added by statement on the preceding Sunday."

We regret to inform our readers that Sister Price Billingsley was called upon to undergo an operation at an infirmary in this city last Monday, but we are glad to say that she stood the operation well and is rapidly convalescing.

H. R. Daniel, Elkton, Ky., May 1: "I will preach at Millerstown on the third Lord's day in May, the Lord willing. I have some time this summer and fall not taken, and would be glad to have some calls to hold meetings. The Gospel Advocate is a help to me. It gets better all the time."

L. E. Jones, 417 East Fifth Street, Metropolis, Ill., April 1: "On account of the great storm that swept Southern Illinois and destroyed some of the places where I was to hold meetings this year, I have some time that I could give to meetings where they could use me this summer and fall."

While living, Brother McQuiddy frequently called attention through the Gospel Advocate for quarterly contributions to be made by churches to the Tennessee Orphan Home; and, also, to Christian families, able to do so, to adopt children and "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

A. Smith Chambers, Florence, Ala., April 28: "The last month and a half has been a time of growth and progress for the Sherrod Avenue church of Christ. There were about fifteen baptisms, some by statement, and our meetinghouse was almost completed. The congregation here has asked me to hold their meeting next year."

Jake Hamilton, Alabama City, Ala., April 20: "We had good crowds yesterday, both morning and evening. Carl Smith preached a splendid sermon on 'Preach the Word.' In the afternoon we conducted a mission meeting out from Gadsden, with prospects for a church to be established there, making the fourth loyal church of Christ in Etowah County."

R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, April 27: "The interest in our meetings in Terrell was good yesterday. In spite of the fact that the weather was rather threatening at both hours, a good attendance was had. At the close of the meeting last evening one more (a lady who made the confession at the prayer-meeting hour last Wednesday evening) was baptized."

Adolph Border, Knobel, Ark., April 21: "There are thousands of people who love and appreciate the Gospel Advocate. For every individual who criticizes the Advocate it has hundreds of stanch supporters, and so the raving of such people does not amount to so very much. The Advocate does great harm all right, but it does this great harm to the devil's cause."

J. C. Mosley, Moore, S. C., May 2: "The work is going on encouragingly in the churches at Moore and Stone Station. We have six Bible lessons each week. I will begin a protracted meeting at Stone Station next Lord's day. I could use a number of back numbers of the Gospel Advocate, if the good people would send them to me. These people are anxious to read."

Will W. Slater, Irving, Texas, April 28: "Our meeting closed Sunday night. We had a great meeting. Twenty-two were baptized and much good done otherwise. I am now ready to devote all my time to the evangelistic work in holding meetings, teaching singing schools and musical normals, or doing evangelistic singing wherever I may be needed. I begin at Tulsa, Okla., next Monday."

W. N. Ridge, one of our young preachers, supplements the assistance he receives in preaching by laboring with his own hands in selling wall paper, calcimine, and fresco cleaner. Brother Ridge is handling a good line, and any of the brethren in need of wall paper, calcimine, or fresco cleaner will do well to write Brother Ridge at Route 4, Box 53, Nashville, Tenn., or call him at 7-4999-J.

Jack Meyer, Charleston, Miss., April 20: "The Charleston congregation closed its spring meeting on Sunday. The meeting continued fifteen days. John E. Dunn did the preaching, and the singing was conducted by the writer. There were three baptisms and one restoration. We had the largest crowds in several years. It has been difficult to get a good hearing in this section, one baptism being as difficult to obtain as ten in some sections usually frequented by our big evangelists. But the people are gradually becoming more interested, and we feel that Brother Dunn has carried us far into the hearts of the people."

R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., April 29: "I arrived home from Florida on March 18. I have been sick ever since, but have managed to preach somewhere every Lord's day. I was with my home congregation on the fourth and fifth Lord's days in March. I preached at Cowan on the first Lord's day in April, at Sewanee the second Lord's day, at Bean's Creek the third Lord's day, and at Tullahoma and Ross the fourth Lord's day. I canceled all protracted meetings until the third Lord's day in May. I will begin a meeting in Alabama City, Ala., the third Lord's day in May, the Lord willing. My health is improving some. I think I will be well again soon. I will preach again at Tullahoma next Lord's day. I ask an interest in the prayers of all Christians everywhere."

J. L. Hines preached at Allensville, Ky., last Sunday.

Married, at the residence of W. B. Atchley, 1205 Acklen Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., on April 18, Dr. Mack M. Green and Emma Mai Eubank, James A. Allen officiating.

Married, at the residence of James A. Allen, 900-B Sixteenth Avenue, South, Nashville, Tenn., on April 16, William B. Hooberry and Marie L. Savage, James A. Allen officiating.

Married, at the residence of James A. Allen, 900-B Sixteenth Avenue, South, Nashville, Tenn., on April 29, William Ezell, Jr., and Sarah Elizabeth Grimes, James A. Allen officiating.

James E. Chessor, Spencer, Tenn., April 29: "Price Billingsley, of McMinnville, Tenn., preached here on April 26, morning and night. He also lectured at chapel on Monday morning."

G. W. Jarrett, Jackson, Ala., April 16: "Last Lord's day was a fine day with us at Dossville, Miss. I preached on Saturday night and on Lord's day, morning and night, to large and attentive audiences."

Jesse F. Love is making arrangements to go to Fort Myers, Fla., to hold a tent meeting. There are thousands of cities in these United States in which some of us ought to make arrangements to hold a tent meeting.

- C. R. Nichol (Christian) and H. B. Taylor (Baptist) began a debate at Monticello, Ky., last Tuesday. We have requested J. L. Hines, one of our correspondents, to write a report of the debate for the Gospel Advocate.
- J. Fairs Nichols, Fancy Farm, Ky., April 27: "Last Lord's day was fine for the church at Friendship, east of Murray, Ky. I preached to a fine audience. The Lord willing, I shall be there again on the fourth Lord's day in May."
- M. S. Mason, Eldorado Springs, Mo., May 1: "I am now at Eldorado Springs in what we trust will be a successful meeting. Raymond L. Hazlet, of Morrillton, Ark., is my capable song leader. We will be here till May 10."

Thomas E. Milholland, Bartlett, Texas, April 30: "I am with a fine people here. I am engaged till the last Sunday in August. I am thinking of doing more field work. I love to see people obey the Lord, and so I love to preach the gospel."

A. R. Hill, Avon Park, Fla., April 27: "The Frostproof mission meeting closed last night after three weeks' duration. The few Christians that I found there promised to begin regular worship. One came from the Baptists. This is truly a mission field."

James E. Laird, Tulsa, Okla., April 28: "The meeting at Irving, Texas, came to a close last Sunday night after continuing over three Lord's days. There were twenty-two additions and much good accomplished otherwise. Will W. Slater will begin our meeting here next Sunday."

Homer Davis, Blanket, Texas, April 28: "The meeting here began last Friday night. Seven have answered the call. It was a pleasure to have Tillet S. Teddlie with me in the Bowie meeting the first of this month. I am giving all of my time to revival work. Address me at Ranger, Texas."

- A. B. Barret, Fayetteville, Tenn., April 20: "I recently spent six weeks lecturing in Texas on evolution. I also held two debates, one with the Seventh-day Adventists and one with the anti-Sunday-school brethren. I am to moderate for C. R. Nichol in his coming debate with Taylor (Baptist) at Monticello, Ky., May 5-8."
- D. S. Ligon, Clovis, New Mexico, April 14: "Fine interest and a good hearing at both morning and evening services here Sunday. In the afternoon I went over to Melrose, some twenty-five miles west of here, and preached to an interesting crowd of people. Brethren, I am doing my very best to 'preach the word' in this country. I preach three times almost every Sunday. I have not been saying much about it, but I am busy just the same. May the good Lord bless the faithful."
- J. W. Chism, Little Rock, Ark., April 28: "Our work at Texarkana is doing well. I never worked with a better congregation, one that believes in doing good and that does not forget to communicate to the sick and needy. I am at this writing in Little Rock in a fourteen-days' meeting which began last night with a fine hearing. M. O. Daley is preaching here. He is a good and faithful man and a good preacher. When we close here, he is to hold a meeting for us at Texarkana, beginning on May 10."

- J. W. Brents, Topeka, Kan., May 2: "About the first of July I shall give up the work here of my own accord and move to Tennessee. I am leaving a needy field and an excellent congregation, but circumstances demand that I be nearer my people, from whom I have been absent nearly twenty years. I shall be busy."
- J. H. Morris, Tuscumbia, Ala., May 1: "I was at Caryton mission on Saturday night before the fourth Lord's day in April and on Sunday morning, and at Jackson's Ridge in the afternoon. These points are both mission points in the west end of Colbert County, Ala. I will hold two meetings at mission points in this county in July."

We regret to advise our readers that M. D. Davis, of the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, passed away last Lord's day. Brother Davis was stricken about 11:30 A.M. while at service, and passed away without regaining consciousness. H. Leo Boles and W. S. Moody conducted the funeral at the Twelfth Avenue meetinghouse last Monday. A more extended notice later.

Charles Holder, Bridgeport, Ala., May 1: "My home was completely destroyed by fire yesterday. A house near me caught fire, and in a few moments my own was in ashes. We saved about all our household goods. Our home is partially covered by insurance. My wife is in poor health. This is the hardest blow, I think, I have ever had; but God still lives, and I believe in those for whom and with whom I have labored for twenty-two years in the Lord's service. I would appreciate the prayers and fellowship of the disciples with whom I have labored. I ask the prayers of all God's people."

- E. D. Martin, Eagle Lake, Fla., May 2: "I recently closed a meeting with the church in Haynesville, La. We had good attention, and seven were baptized. The people there are hungering for the truth, and I shall do more work in that section of the country in the immediate future, the Lord willing. I am scheduled to begin a series of meetings with the congregation in Winter Haven, Fla., on the first Lord's day in May. This little nucleus is striving to put the Lord's kingdom upon a permanent basis in this beautiful town. They are in need of funds for building purposes, and the restrictive clause in the deed insures against any innovation. Send a donation to George Flack, at Winter Haven, and the same will be acknowledged promptly."
- J. O. Barnes, Lake City, Fla., April 30: "Our mission meeting at Osteen, on the East Coast, closed on the night of April 26, with one addition. Conditions were unfavorable for a successful meeting. We used the Methodist meetinghouse for our services. The attendance was small and interest dull, but we trust that some other good will be manifest at the judgment as a result of this seed sowing, for we sowed down that little village with religious tracts arranged by some of our best brethren. This meeting was made possible by Sister W. V. Phillips, who is the wife of Dr. W. V. Phillips, originally of Bear Creek, Ala. This was a 'Macedonian call,' as there is no established church there, and necessitated much sacrifice on the part of the preacher and the three members there."

Ben West, Sinton, Texas, April 26: "Four victorious and happy services yesterday. Three additions—two by baptism, one a Baptist of long standing. Baptizing on Wednesday night, Sunday night, and again next Wednesday night. Revival and soul-winning campaign grows in interest. Over fifty additions since January 1. The evangelistic campaign continues in this church through 1925. (Acts 5: 42.) The male quartet in this church sings all over the county and the minister is speaking the word effectively. The writer is to make baccalaureate addresses before large classes of high-school graduates in the Sinton and Sodville high schools, and will speak at Rockport in May. The Sinton church is in the greatest campaign of its history."

C. C. Sudberry, Boston, Tenn., April 27: "In regard to my sister, who is confined to her bed and had requested to be baptized, I beg to say that, after I discussed the matter over with you and Brother Srygley on Saturday morning, I got busy, and, with Sister Lipscomb assisting, we set the stage, and Brother Hall baptized her the next morning at ten o'clock. The husband opposed us very strongly, but we proceeded just the same, and Brother Hall carried it out nicely. I would be glad if you would inform as many brethren and sisters as possible about this case and request them to visit her, as she needs all the encouragement possible, as her mother, who is also her nurse, is of the Methodist faith. Her name is Mrs. Morris Thompson, 1417 East Greenwood Avenue, Nashville, Tenn."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, F. D. Srygley, and J. C. McQuiddy.

THE YEAR OF JESUS' BIRTH.

BY E. A. ELAM.

A brother says, "We should use the Bible and not helps, as they are not in accord with the Bible," referring to "Elam's Notes," and cites as proof that these lessons give the time of Christ's trial, crucifixion, etc., as A.D. 30, when "the time should be A.D. 33 or 36."

This leads me to think something should be said in regard to the time of Jesus' birth, life, death, and ascension, in addition to the comments in the "Notes."

As has often been said in these "Notes" themselves, if there is anything in them out of harmony with the Bible, that thing should be rejected. It is my prayer and exhortation that nothing but the truth shall be received.

But, if every book is to be rejected as a whole because perchance it contains a mistake, then men should cease writing books, pamphlets, articles, preaching sermons or teaching classes, or even talking on Bible subjects. Our brother himself would have to cease teaching, because he says these things occurred "A.D. 33 or 36." His statement is uncertain; for if it was 33, it was not 36; and how is our brother to know? We are curious to know, too, what he teaches his classes on this subject, and where, without what he calls "helps," he could learn anything definite on the subject. No Bible dictionary, commentary, or any other "help," so far as I know, places these occurrences in A.D. 36. Must all authorities on this point be ignored, and must classes or a congregation accept his bare statement in regard to it?

He says "we should use the Bible and not helps;" but the Bible does not state definitely the day or month or year when Jesus was born. By referring to history and thereby learning at what time Augustus Cæsar, Herod the Great, Tiberius Cæsar, and Pontius Pilate reigned, we can learn about the year in which Jesus was born. But the history of these rulers is a "help."

This brother's declaration that "we should use the Bible and not helps," concerning chronology, is on a par with the similar declaration concerning not a few other things. The truth of all this is, he seems to wish a class or congregation to accept his oral "helps," inaccurate and haphazard as they may be, instead of studious, accurate, and authoritative ones. Just so, not a few others would have a class or congregation to take as the veritable word of God their unstudied, unprepared, and not always correct oral comments on a lesson or a text, and call that "using the Bible only." This is to those who really study and understand the Bible, strange, inconsistent, and ridiculous.

With this before us, we do not wonder that James says: "Be not many of you teachers, my brethren, knowing that we shall receive heavier judgment. For in many things we all stumble [in chronology as well as in other things]. If any stumbleth not in word, the same is a perfect man, able to bridle the whole body also." (James 3: 1, 2.)

Studying this passage causes us to come with fear, trembling, and much prayer to the work of trying to teach the word of God, either orally or by pen. How fearful are the consequences when one goes before a class of young people, or stands before an audience of grown ones, without thoughtful, prayerful, and long, earnest preparation!

Other passages like James 3: 1, 2 seem to make no more impression upon some than if they were no part of the word of God at all. With other qualifications, a brother, before he is appointed an elder, must have shown that he is "apt to teach." But what does "apt to teach" mean? All should know it means capable of teaching-that is, the word of God.

In Rom. 15: 14 Paul states the Roman brethren were "able also to admonish one another" because they were "full of goodness" and "filled with all knowledge" of what? The answer is, knowledge of the truth. Some are sufficiently good to teach, but have not sufficient information and knowledge of the Bible to do so. Some may have sufficient knowledge to teach, but not sufficient love for God and the salvation of souls, and are not, therefore, sufficiently devoted to the truth to do so.

Timothy, a student of the word of God under Paul, although in a measure inspired, was commanded to still diligently study to present himself "approved unto God. a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2: 15.) We preachers sometimes preach on this text, but we dwell on "rightly dividing the word" for the instruction of others, which instruction very many need, and fail to apply to ourselves the command to study, and to study diligently, that we may be able in our teaching to do this.

Every man is forbidden to think more highly of himself-his gifts, attainments, and ability-than he should, and to be wise in his own conceits-his own notions and theories. (Rom. 12: 3, 16.) This prohibition should be as conscientiously and as strictly observed as the one forbidding lying, stealing, fornication, or any other disobedi-

Yet it is sometimes the case that the less general information a man has, especially the less he knows of the word of God and the less of the Spirit of Christ he has, the more presumptuous he seems to be, the less he feels the need of "helps," and the stronger his desire to act the teacher. Peter says, "If any man speaketh, speaking as it were oracles of God" ((1. Pet. 4: 11); but he is far from saying that whatever such men attempt to teach are "oracles of God." He says all teachers and preachers must be sure they are teaching and preaching the "oracles of God," and not their own "oracles."

WHEN, THEN, WAS JESUS BORN?

The birth of Jesus, the Christ, the coming of the Son of God into the world-" God manifest in the flesh"is the very greatest and most wonderful event in the history of mankind. This fact concerns us most. But we can learn something of the time when Jesus was born.

The Bible states that Jesus was born during the reign of Herod the Great, Augustus Cæsar, and other rulers mentioned (Luke 2: 1, 2; Matt. 2: 16-18), and was crucified during the reign of Tiberius Cæsar and that of Pontius Pilate, governor of Judea (Luke 3: 1), but it does not state the exact year or time of the year when Jesus was born. As stated above, we learn from history when these men reigned.

Two things should be known:

(1) The dates placed in the margin of some Bibles were put there by men, and in the New Testament years after it was written, and not by inspiration; just as the division of the Bible into chapters and verses was made by men. The divisions are quite convenient, but they were not made by inspiration.

(2) Reckoning time from the birth of Jesus did not begin until several hundred years after his birth; and it has been agreed by those who have studied the question that a mistake of four years was made, which places his wirth in the year B.C. 4. Brother McGarvey says: "According to the received chronology, Jesus was born in the last year of Herod; and he was, therefore, less than a year old when Herod died. His birth occurred four years previous to our common era; the era having been erroneously fixed by Dyonisius Exiguus in the sixth century." Brother Lipscomb says the same, as do other scholars.

This monk fixed the date of Jesus' birth 753 after the building of Rome; but this cannot be the right date, because Jesus was born before the death of Herod the Great, and Herod the Great died in the spring of 750 after the building of Rome. Jesus, then, was born as early as 749 after the building of Rome, or B.C. 4.

There is no proof whatever that Jesus was born on December 25. On the contrary, it seems altogether probatle that he was not born on that day.

"The International Bible Dictionary" says it is puzzling to some that the date of Jesus' birth has been given four years before his actual birth. This dictionary explains: The reason is that the dating of events from his birth began centuries later; and the monk, Dionysius Exiguus, who first published the calculations in A.D. 526, made a mistake of about four years.

The date fixed by this learned monk has been so long n general use that it is hardly possible to change it, and it is not necessary for practical purposes to try to do so. In preparing Bible lessons for the last twenty-five years, whenever they embraced the life of Christ, I have called attention to these facts, thinking it well enough for stucents of the Bible to know them, and knowing that it is not setting aside the Bible to teach them.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The following questions have been on hand for some time:

Farmersville, Texas, March 20, 1925.—Dear Brother Smith: I see in the Advanced Quarterly for this quarter, page 52, you say: "The thief was in his grave forty-three days and nights before any one was commanded to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

(1) Do you mean to say that this promise was given in the great commission, which was given after Jesus rose, or in Peter's sermon in Acts 2?

(2) How do we know that the day we keep is the Lord's day?

(3) Would you use the literature published by any company where some of the members object to it?

(4) If so, would you have these lessons before the church assembles, as such, to "edify itself in love," or do you think the exercise of these lessons is or should be a lesson of the ediferation?

part of the edification?

(5) In such exercise, would you divide the members nto classes and have women do part of the teaching, or would you have men who are able to do this work? If there was not a man who could do this teaching and there were one or more sisters who were able, would you use them? In the case before the writer's mind, there was one man who would teach and there was not anything used but the New Testament. Did the one teacher do wrong in having this godly sister take the smaller ones and teach them the New Testament while he taught the others? To this work there were opposers, and they have divided the church over this work. What course would you take had you helped to establish this church? Would you meet on and submit to their rule or would you meet on and submit to their rule, or would you go

(6) What would you do where some of the members want the communion set and where some oppose the use of it? Would you advise its use, or would you disapprove of it unless all were willing? If its use is scriptural, it should be used; if not, what course should those who oppose it follow?

We have both cases, and I would be glad for you to teach us out here in Texas, where the churches are torn into pieces over these questions and other questions that grow out of them.

Please write as many articles as you will. I do not What would you do where some of the members

Please write as many articles as you will. I do not think there is a question that needs your advice worse. I am certainly enjoying the Quarterlies and the "old reliable" Gospel Advocate these days while these things mentioned are at work. May you have many years to serve God and bless man.

Your humble brother in hone.

Your humble brother in hope R. T. Sisco.

1. The promise, "shall be saved," in Mark 16: 16, is equivalent to the "remission of sins" in Acts 2: 38. See, also, Luke 24: 46, 47. The reference in the Quarterly is to the great commission.

2. The day Christians meet to proclaim the Lord's death till he comes is known to be the Lord's day, or the first day of the week, in the same way that generations to come will know that the Fourth of July marks the declaration of American independence-viz., by the continuous custom of observance.

3. No one has any right to say what "method" I shall adopt in teaching the word of God, just so I do not interfere with the method of some one else. If I see proper to use Sunday-school literature in teaching, he who interferes is a sinner, making and binding a law where God has made none.

4. The meeting for teaching and instructing all classes of people, whether in the church or out of it, by different teachers separated into classes, should be done either before or after the assembly of the church which meets to break bread and perform other acts of prescribed wor-

5. God has given to man common sense, and expects him to use it in doing what he is commanded to do in the most efficient way, when no particular way for doing it is specified. God commands his children to teach his word anywhere and everywhere. He has not limited them to time, place, or method, when such time, place, or method does not interfere with some specific divine arrangement. fundamental law of instruction is the adaption of what is taught to the capacity of those being taught. Common sense suggests graded lessons, teaching each according to the capacity of receiving instruction. The very people who oppose the classification in our Lord's-day schools and the graded Sunday-school literature would tear up creation if the public schools to which they send their children did not follow that rule. If they should enter the school and find but one teacher, with old and young, big and little, all in the same class and being taught the same thing, a howl would go up that would alarm the natives. A woman, just so she does not assume authority over man, has as much right to teach the word of God as any man; and whenever she has an opportunity to do so, she disobeys God if she refuses. When appointed by an elder or one approved by the elders to teach a class on Sunday morning, she certainly is within her Christian rights if she does so. I would use competent sisters in class work whenever needed. Those who have divided the church with their opposition to class teaching and godly women's teaching those assigned to them have committed a great sin; and unless they repent and cease such opposition, it will, in my judgment, be bad for them in the judgment.

6. Churches are not compelled to use the "separate" communion set; but I have seen but few congregations, covering a period of forty years and an acquaintance with "thousands" of churches, that did not have "separate" cups or glasses. For a man to worship with a church that uses from two to six cups, as most churches do, and then oppose the use of forty or fifty, is ridiculously inconsistent, and he should really be ashamed to lift his voice against the separate communion set. However, rather than divide the church over such a matter, I would advise the continuance of the two or six cups, and try in patience and prayer with kindly teaching to show the brother his inconsistency.

There are plenty of men in Texas and elsewhere that are opposed to making laws and binding them on God's children where he has left them free, who could do such work in correcting such evils as well or better than I. However, I appreciate the kindly words of Brother Sisco, and am always ready to render him and others any assistance within my power. He is a good, God-fearing, and self-sacrificing man, and all such men are indeed valuable to the cause of Christ.

THE ENDEAVOR SOCIETY AND THE BIBLE SCHOOLS.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

More than a year ago I wrote what I thought was a harmless little article on the Endeavor Society as a church society. Brother D. A. Sommer copied that article in the Apostolic Review and asked me to put Bible schools in the places where I had the Endeavor Society. I saw his article in the Review, but I owned no Bible school and did not feel that I was set for their defense, and so passed it by, thinking if there were any Bible schools that were usurping the work of the church and taking honor to the school instead of giving it to the church, I could not defend them and would not try to do so. Matters went on till I received two letters-one, as I now remember, from my friend, Brother Beasley, of Paducah, Ky. I then took the matter up again and told Brother Sommer if he would put the Apostolic Review in the same places where he had put Bible colleges, I thought he would be able to see the question of schools as individual enterprises in which a Christian might teach the Bible exactly as he and others were using the Apostolic Review, founded by Benjamin Franklin. This was the only issue I made with Brother D. A. Sommer, yet he tried to get me to affirm in debate the following proposition: "Human organizations of Bible colleges, such as David Lipscomb College and Abilene Christian College, established by Christians for the purpose of teaching the Bible along with secular studies, are scriptural." I told the brother I would not affirm any such a proposition, but stated a proposition in plain words: "Human institutions, such as the unorganized Apostolic Review, founded by Benjamin Franklin, are scriptural." As I now remember, Brother Sommer let the matter drop here, and I heard no more from it till Sieter Larimore sent me a letter which was addressed to Brother and Sister Larimore, but which was evidently intended for me. Following is the letter in full:

Washington, D. C., March 19, 1925.—Dear Brother and Sister Larimore: During the pleasant visit that Cornelia, Junior, and I had with you recently, you will remember that we discussed somewhat a letter that Brother George Blake had written commenting upon the position that Brother Srygley has taken upon the Bible-school question, and you stated that you preferred that Brother Srygley defend his own position in the matter, and offered to forward Brother Blake's letter to Brother Srygley.

Brother Blake thinks the letter referred to above is not in shape to send as it is written, and also that the argu-

in shape to send as it is written, and also that the arguments contained therein are those used by Brother Srygley himself against the Christian Endeavor Society, as published in the Gospel Advocate about December, 1923, or January, 1924, I think. I am, therefore, inclosing a copy of the article on which I would like to ask a few questions, the answers to which would help me to arrive at the truth ("Thy word is truth") concerning this perplexing question.

As I understand Brother Srygley, he believes that a Christian may use the Bible school in teaching the Bible. In other word, that it is neither commanded nor forbidden in the New Testament, and that, therefore, Christians have a right to the use of their opinion and judgment in the matter. Now, I believe that nothing could go further to clear up the questions in my own mind over this matter than to have clearly set forth the reasons why each argument used by Brother Srygley in the inclosed article against the Christian Endeavor Society will not also condemn the Bible school.

The following questions may serve as a guide:

The following questions may serve as a guide:

1. (See paragraph 2.) Does not the use of a Bible school to do a work of the church (teaching the Bible) make such institution an attempted aid to the church?

2. (See paragraph 3.) Is it not equally true of the Bible school that it cannot rest upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets. Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, and likewise that it cannot be a part of the church?

3. How can we "give Christ the glory in his church and not divide our time and hearts with the institution of men," when we use the institution of a school to team the Bible?

As you will see, the above questions do not cover all the arguments in the article against the Christian Endeaver Society and are not meant to take the place of the big question of why Brother Srygley considers that the resoning used does not apply with equal force to the raigious school. Any information that Brother Srygley may be able to give me on the above will be appreciated and will be carefully and prayerfully studied.

With best wishes for your health and happiness, I am, Very truly yours, 121 Maryland Avenue, N. E. Hubert E. Hall.

It will be noticed that Brother Hall claims that he wants to arrive at the truth on the Bible-college question. But why should he not be just as anxious to arrive at the truth on the newspaper question? It is true that he does not own or operate a religious newspaper, and for that reason he may make himself believe he is not interested in the scripturalness of newspapers. Neither does he own or operate a Bible school. Then why should he be so anxious to have that question settled? There is no Bible college in Washington City and no one there who owns or operates one. If I understand the matter Brother Hall is one of the number in Washington City who left the congregation and started another because they did not believe in Bible colleges. Suppose Brothe Hall is right in believing that Bible colleges are unscrip tural, would he be justified in dividing the church h Washington over the question? No one was asking hin to believe in a Bible school or give one cent to the support of any Bible college. These few brethren pulled off fron the church in Washington and reported the matter to the Apostolic Review, a newspaper which stands precisely or the same footing that Bible colleges should occupy. Suppose some of these college presidents do believe that their school is a church institution; that only proves that they are mistaken, and I do not see any reason for Brother Hall's trying to divide the body of Christ over that matter. They have no more right to do such a thing than I have to divide the church over a newspaper which no one is asking me to support or defend.

Brother Hall says: "As I understand Brother Srygley, he believes that a Christian may use the Bible school in teaching the Bible." Thus far you understand me per-Schools are not church property, though some may believe they are. They should belong to the man or men who build them, and Christians can and should use them through which to teach the Bible if they have the chance. Christians have the right to use any means or agencies in teaching the Bible, such as the printing press the mail, or anything which does not interfere with the independence, autonomy, or work of the local church.

Brother Hall seems to think answers to his three questions will clear up the matter very much. I will try to answer the questions to the best of my ability.

1. "Does not the use of a Bible school to do a work of the church (teaching the Bible) make such institution an attempted aid to the church?" I should think that would depend on how it is used. If Christians would use schools through which to teach the Bible as Paul used "the school of Tyrannus," I should say "No" to the brother's question. "But when some were hardened and disobedient, speaking evil of the Way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, reasoning daily in the school of Tyrannus. And this continued for the space of two years; so that all they that dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord, both Jews and Greeks." (Acts 19: 9, 10.) This is as far as I have ever gone in using a Bible college, and this is as far as I ask Brother Hall to go in advocating schools through which to teach the Bible; and even if Brother Hall cannot conscientiously go as far as Paul did in using a school through which to teach the Bible, I still would not be in favor of dividing the body of Christ over the matter, especially if he did not try to make a law for me where God has made none. Brother Hall seems to think he can make a law to govern me in this matter; but he should remember that Christ is the only Lawgiver, and his law is to go "into all the world" and "teach all nations." Brother Hall says go into all the world, but do not go into any school, because the man who built it may have had a wrong idea about it; and therefore we must stay out of these schools, even if we have the opportunity to teach in them.

2. "Is it not equally true of the Bible school that it cannot rest upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, and likewise that it cannot be a part of the church?" I think so. It cannot be a part of the church any more than a farm can be a part of the church. 1 really think this is true, whatever the man who owns and operates the school thinks about it. I do not ask Brother Hall to believe that any school is a part of the church, because if this were true there would be a Bible school wherever the church was found, for we cannot have the whole without all of its parts; but the church does exist where there is no Bible school. In fact, there was none in Washington where Brother Hall once met, but he left that church and started up another, I reckon, because some one believed that a Christian could patronize a Bible school or teach the Bible in such a school.

3. "Can we give Christ the glory in his church, and not divide our time and hearts with the institutions of men," etc.? I do not see any necessity in dividing our hearts and time with a school just because we teach the Bible in it, any more than Paul divided his heart and time when he was teaching in the school of Tyrannus.

Now I have answered Brother Hall's question, and I would like to ask him a few. (1) Where is the scripture for dividing the body of Christ in Washington City over the Bible school, when there is not one in five hundred miles of the place? (2) What right have you to leave the congregation in Washington and start another, when no one is demanding that you patronize a Bible school or even believe that you can use one in which to teach the Bible? (3) How can you be consistent in opposing my teaching the Bible in a school founded by man and indorse the Sommer family in teaching the Bible through the Apostolic Review, founded by Benjamin Franklin? Bemember, Brother Hall, it is your action in leaving the church in Washington and joining in with others in starting another congregation antagonistic to it that is on trial now, and not mine. I have never advocated dividing the body of Christ over this question. I will admit that likely many school-teachers have erroneous ideas on this question, but I would be afraid to divide the church over it. It is, as I see it, a most fearful thing to do. Jesus loved his spiritual body above his natural body, and you should have a good reason for dividing it before you do it. Since you have been a party to this division, I beg you to retrace your steps. The church in Washington has never asked you to build or patronize a Bible school, and, as I see it, you have taken the wrong course in this matter.

CALLS FOR BROTHER SRYGLEY.

BY J. A.

Last year, with the help of some of the readers of the Gospel Advocate, Brother F. B. Srygley, one of our senior editors, responded to a very urgent call for preaching in some of the Western States. Brother Srygley spent some time in Colorado and New Mexico and succeeded in accomplishing much good.

Among those baptized by Brother Srygley last year were two persons to whom baptism was peculiar and unique, as neither of them had ever seen any one baptized before. Brother Srygley is eminently fitted to carry the gospel to new fields. He preaches to the people with a plainness and simplicity that enables them to at once appreciate the clear teaching of the word of God and to recognize the importance of conforming to a "Thus saith the Lord."

We are very much interested in encouraging Brother Srygley in missionary work of this kind, as we should send our best preachers to new and difficult fields. Earnest and insistent calls have come to him, from the places where he preached last year, to return to them again this year; and to Brother Srygley's credit, we are glad to announce that he has consented to go and that he is making his arrangements accordingly. He intends, if the Lord wills, to hold at least three meetings in these destitute places of the West.

And as these places are unable to sustain Brother Srygley financially while preaching for them, we are suggesting that readers of the Gospel Advocate lend a hand and have a part in the work. We are aware that many of our readers would rejoice to participate in missionary efforts of this kind, and that the consensus of opinion is that more work of this kind should be done.

All who desire to assist Brother Srygley in responding to these Macedonian calls and in preaching the gospel at these destitute points may send their donations to James A. Allen, Gospel Advocate office, Nashville, Tenn., and proper acknowledgment will be made.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

In Rom. 4: 9-15, Paul teaches that Abraham's faith was reckoned to him for righteousness before his circumcision, and that it was so reckoned that the "promise might be to all the seed"—that is, to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews. But James (2: 21-24) connects the offering of Isaac with Abraham's justification by faith. Isaac was offered more than a score of years after the time when Paul said Abraham's faith was reckoned to him for righteousness. I want to know what Abraham's offering up of Isaac had to do with his justification by faith several years previous. If Abraham was not justified till he offered Isaac, he was then justified in circumcision, the very thing that Paul denies. Next, if Abraham's justification was complete while he was in uncircumcision—and it must have been, or else Paul had no point against the Jews in Rom. 4—what besides faith was the condition of his justification? And then, what is the bearing of all this on the matter of justification to-day? (See Rom. 4: 25, 24.)—K. C. Moser, Oklahoma City, Okla.

I am satisfied that there are no contradictions in the Bible. We may not always be able to see the harmony that exists; nevertheless, the harmony exists. Our being unable to see it does not destroy the harmony of all truth. The blessing of justification by faith comes alike to Jew and Gentile. Abraham was justified before he was circumcised. His circumcision was a seal of his justification. His justification did not depend upon his circumcision. He was the father to all who believe who are in an uncircumcised state, as he is the father to all the Jews or circumcised who walk in his steps.

We do not know exactly how long Abraham had been justified when he received the mark of circumcision. Many think that it was about thirteen years. He was circumcised in his ninetieth year. Ishmael was thirteen years old at that time. He was justified before Ishmael's birth. Paul is showing that Abraham was justified before he was circumcised. This shows that justification was not confined only to the Jews or the circumcised.

Abraham's offering up Isaac was the culmination of his acts by faith. In the offering of Isaac he climbed higher up the mountain of faith and enlarged his horizon of the blessings of Jehovah. He came into a fuller realization of the blessings of righteousness. Paul has shown that justification is not based upon circumcision, and hence the Jew could not exclude the Gentile. This seems to be Paul's argument.

- (1) Please explain Rom. 13: 14. How do we put on Christ? I told my class it meant to repent and live the new life; while others said Gal. 3: 27 should settle it, which says nothing of the new life. (2) Is the expression, "erring Christian," in the Bible? If so, how can we err Christlike, and when did Christ err?—M. F. Holl, Shelbyville, Tenn.
- 1. The scripture referred to reads as follows: "But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make no provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof." We first put on Christ in baptism. "Or are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death?" (Rom. 6: 3.) Again: "For as many of you as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ." (Gal. 3: 27.) One cannot be baptized into Christ without putting on Christ; and if one puts on Christ, that one is in Christ; and if one is in Christ, he is a new creature. "Wherefore if any man is in Christ, he is a new creature: the old things are passed away; behold, they are become new." (2 Cor. 5: 17.) We live the new life in Christ. No one can live a Christian life out of Christ.
- 2. No, the phrase "erring Christian" is not in the Bible. The idea is there, as Christians err. Not many, if any, can say that they are without sin, without an error. If one is in error and persists in that error, he will finally be condemned. God's children make mistakes and must be forgiven. In that sense they are "erring Christians."

Please explain 1 Cor. 9: 19-23, through the Gospel Advocate.—J. W. Scott, Newbern, Tenn.

The scripture referred to reads as follows: "For though I was free from all men, I brought myself under bondage to all, that I might gain the more. And to the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, not being myself under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law; to them that are without law, as without law, not being without law to God, but under law to Christ, that I might gain them that are without law. To the weak I became weak, that I might gain the weak: I am become all things to all men, that I may by all means save some. And I do all things for the gospel's sake, that I may be a joint partaker thereof." (1 Cor. 9: 19-23.) Paul adjusted himself to the customs and peculiarities of all classes without violating any principle of the Christian religion. He observed the Jewish distinction as to meat (1 Cor. 8: 13); he performed the rites as to vows (Acts 21: 26); he honored their feast (Acts 20: 16); he classed himself among the Pharisees (Acts 23: 6); he even had circumcision administered (Acts 12: 3). In none of these things did he violate any part of the law of Christ. He did what he could to win all classes to Christ.

Is it right for a brother or sister to marry an unbeliever or one who is a member of some denominational church or society? Please answer through the Gospel Advocate.—C. M. Springer.

I suppose the querist means to ask, "Is it scriptural" when it is said, "Is it right?" The following are the scriptures which bear upon this question: "A wife is bound for so long time as her husband liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is free to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord." (1 Cor. 7: 39.) Paul, in arguing his liberty as an apostle, says: "Have we no right to lead about a wife that is a believer, even as the rest of the apostles, and the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?" (1 Cor. 9: 5.) "Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers: for what fellowship have righteousness and iniquity? or what communion hath light with darkness?" (2 Cor. 6: If these scriptures are followed, one is on safe grounds. A violation of these is a violation of God's law, and no one may expect to enjoy the greatest degree of happiness by violating God's law.

Please answer this question for me. Is it wrong (1) to use leavened bread and (2) individual glasses in the Lord's Supper?—X.

- 1. The Scriptures do not tell what kind of bread should be used on the Lord's table. Since the Scriptures do not give any directions as to the kind of bread to be used, it seems to me that any kind that is convenient will do. It vecurs to me that there should be enough thought given to the preparation of the Lord's table to prepare a suitable bread for the Lord's table. The solemnity and importance of the Lord's table demand that thoughtful attention be given to the preparation of the loaf.
- 2. There is no scripture designating the number of cups to be used. Since the number is not designated, any convenient number may be used. No sound argument can be made from the fact that the Savior took "a cup" or "the cup." He who tries to restrict the number of cups is legislating where God has not. This is a dangerous thing to do.

A PRESIDENT AND HIS MOTHER.

What would you be thinking about if to-morrow you were to be made President of the United States? This is the story of one of the great Presidents of the United States, and what he thought about just before he was made President. He lived near Cleveland, Ohio. And a few days before the great ceremony, he wrote to his old mother and said: "I want you to go to Washington with me." She was very much surprised. And after thinking it all over, she wrote to her son, of whom she was very fend and proud, and said: "I cannot go to Washington with you, my boy. I would be quite out of place there among the great people whom you will meet. I'll stay at home and pray for you." Her son quickly sent back the answer: "I'll not go without you." And so together the old lady and her illustrious son traveled to the capital city. They went to the same hotel. And when the time came for the ceremony, they went out together, his mother leaning on his arm. They entered the carriage and drove to the Capitol, where a great crowd of over a hundred thousand people was waiting. It was a gala occasion-the high platform and all the celebrated men from all over the country, governors, judges, and ministers, and the great sea of faces that were turned to the one central place where the new President was. The people noticed that instead of taking the chair that was provided for him, he gave it to his mother. Then he delivered his inaugural address. And after he had taken the oath to be true to his office, and before he sat down, he turned and put his arms around his mother and kissed her.

Do you know who this wonder-man was? He was one of the martyred Presidents. His name was James A. Garfield. I think that was one of the most beautiful things he ever did. And I think that all that great crowd of people, after the din was over and they had gone home, thought so, too.—Eugenie du Maurier.

"I DON'T LOVE YOU NOW, MOTHER."

A great many years ago I knew a lady who had been sick for two years, as you have seen many a one, all the while slowly dying with consumption. She had one child —a little boy named "Henry."

One afternoon I was sitting by her side, and it seemed as if she would cough her life away. Her little boy stood by the post of the bed, his blue eyes filled with tears to see her suffer so. By and by the terrible cough ceased. Henry came and put his arms around his mother's neck, nestled his head in his mother's bosom, and said: "Mother, I do love you; I wish you were not sick."

An hour later, the same loving, blue-eyed boy came in all aglow, stamping the snow off his feet. "O mother, may I go a skating? It is so nice. Ed and Charley are going."

"Henry," feebly said the mother, "the ice is not hard enough yet."

"But, mother," very pettishly said the boy, "you are sick all the time—how do you know?"

"My child, you must obey me," gently said his mother.

"It is too bad," angrily sobbed the boy, who an hour ago had so loved his mother.

"I would not like to have my little boy go," said his mother, looking sadly at the little boy's face, all covered with frowns. "You said you loved me—be good."

"No, I don't love you now, mother," said the boy, going out and slamming the door.

Again the dreadful coughing came upon her, and we thought no more of the boy. After the coughing had commenced, I noticed tears falling thick upon her pillow, but she sank from exhaustion into a light sleep.

In a little while muffled steps of men's feet were heard coming into the house, as though carrying something; and they were carrying the almost lifeless body of Henry.

Angrily had he left his mother and gone to skate—disobeying her; and then, broken through the ice, sunk under the water, and saved by a great effort, was brought home barely alive to his sick mother.

I closed the doors, feeling more danger for her life than the child's, and, coming softly in, drew back the curtains from the bed. She spoke: "I heard them—it is Henry. O, I knew he went—is he dead?" But she never seemed to hear the answer I gave her. She commenced coughing—she died in agony—strangled to death. The poor mother! The boy's disobedience killed her.

After a couple of hours I sought the boy's room. "O, I wish I had not told mother I did not love her! Tomorrow I will tell her I do," said the child, sobbing painfully. My heart ached; to-morrow I knew we must tell him she was dead. We did not till the child came tully into the room, crying: "Mother, I do love you." O, may I never see agony like that child's as the lips he kissed gave back no kiss, as the hands he took fell lifeless from his hand, instead of shaking his hand as it always had, and the boy knew she was dead.

"Mother, I do love you now," all the day he sobbed and cried. "O mother, mother, forgive me!" Then he would not leave his mother. "Speak to me, mother!" But she could never speak again, and he—the last words she had ever heard him say were: "Mother, I don't love you now."

That boy's whole life is changed; sober and sad he was ever after. He is now a gray-haired old man, with one sorrow over his one act of disobedience, one wrong word embittering all his life—with those words ever ringing in his ears: "Mother, I don't love you now."—Selected.

THE GIFT THAT JESUS WANTS.

A missionary was preaching to the Maori tribe of New Zealanders, telling them of the sufferings of Christ for them.

Then stood forth a plumed and painted chief, the scarred warrior of many fights, and as his lips quivered he spoke: "And did the Son of the highest suffer this for us men? Then chief would like to offer him some poor return for his great love. Would the Son of God like to accept the chief's hunting dog? Swift of foot and keen of scent, the tribe has not such another, and he has been my friend."

But the missionary told him that the Son had no need of such gifts.

Thinking he had mistaken the gift, the old chief resumed: "Yet, perhaps he would accept my well-tried rifle. Unerring of aim, the chief cannot replace it."

"No, not that."

For a moment the chief paused; then, as a new thought struck him, suddenly despoiling himself of his striped blanket, he cried, with childlike earnestness: "Perhaps He who had nowhere to lay his head will yet accept the chieftain's blanket."

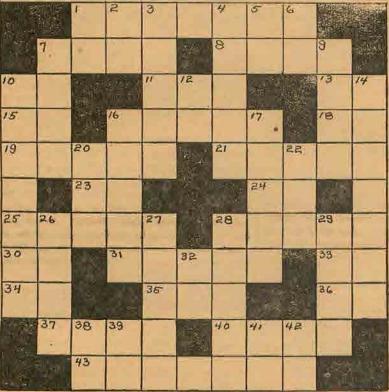

Touched by love's persistency, the missionary tried to explain to him the real nature of the Son of God; that it was not gifts, but men's hearts, he yearned for.

For a moment a cloud of grief darkened the rough features of the old chief; then, as the true nature of the Son of God slowly dawned upon him, laying aside his blanket and rifle, he clasped his hands, and looking up into the blue sky, his face beaming with joy, he exclaimed: "Perhaps the Son of the Blessed One will deign to accept the poor old chief himself!"—Selected.

CROSS WORD BIBLE

THIS squared-off design, with the central cross, has four side words of moderate difficulty. Two at least are not hard to guess; everybody knows who was the first Christian martyr and anyone who can count can soon determine which is the fourth book of the Old Testament.

There is an interesting hit of Biblical lore mentioned in definition No. 8.

@ 1925 THE J.C.W. CO. How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a che to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

Hornbeak, Tenn., April 17.—Has any one in Obion County or adjoining counties a tent that I can get for a meeting, to begin on the second Lord's day in August, in a place where we have no place to meet except a small schoolhouse, and it entirely too small for the meeting? If some one will furnish me a tent, I will send for it and return it at the close of the meeting, and be responsible for the tent until it is returned. If you have one that we can use, please write me at Hornbeak, Tenn., and I will complete the arrangements. There are still open fields for work in this field. So why don't the congregations that are able get behind some man and have meeting, to begin on the second Lord's able get behind some man and have fellowship in this much-needed work? Who will be the first to act?—W. A. Foster.

Oakland, Miss., April 20.—Brother John E. Dunn's meeting with the Charleston congregation closed on Sunday night with excellent results, During the two weeks continuance of this meeting people were present from Grenada, Clarksdale, Senatobia, Webb, Summer, Tutwiler, Oakland, Water Valley, and other towns. On Sunday afternoon five persons were baptized at Oakland by Evangelist Jack Meyer and placed their membership with the Oakland congregation. These persons had all been going from Oakland to Charleston to hear Brother Dunn's sermons. This makes twelve additions to the Oakland congregation within the last few land congregation within the last few months. Brother Jack Meyer is doing a good work in this part of the Master's vineyard.—Lee Jackson.

Hilham, Tenn., April 10.—One of the most pleasant things while I was at Burritt College recently was the oratorical contest or try-out for a representative from Burritt for the State contest. Miss Kate Kell was the winner and will represent Burritt at McMinnville. Burritt College will soon have a new boys' dormitory. The work of laying the foundation is now in progress. I want to say to all that have received succor from Burritt and to the friends of this institution that has stood for true education and apostolic Christianity so long, do not fail her now, for she needs your help. God will be pleased with your help, and you can help the world by helping Burritt College. To fail her at this time would be like one withholding help from a parent in old age. —B. P. Upton.

Flint, Mich., April 27.—Our meeting, which has been in progress for the past two weeks, came to a close on Sunday night, with a full house and the interest at the highest point. Brother W. E. Morgan did the preaching, and it was done with much force and emphasis. Brother Morgan is a good man, and preaches the gospel in its purity and simplicity without fear or favor. No congregation that is contemplating a meeting and has not yet selected a man will make a mistake by calling Brother Morgan for the work. Never before in the histake by calling Brother Morgan for the work. Never before in the his-tory of the church at this place has such interest been manifested, not only by the members, but also by peo-ple from the outside. Never before was the attendance by the members themselves so marked, and never bethemselves so marked, and never before was a meeting financed without having to call on other congregations for help, which indicates that the church here now has a mind to work, and with as bright a future as ever faced any congregation. The visible results of the meeting were six baptisms—a young man and wife and four other young men, all of whom are full of enthusiasm and willing to work. The last night of the meeting proved to be the most solemn of all. Four elders and three deacons were chosen and approved by the congrechosen and approved by the congrechosen and approved by the congregation and then appointed by Brother Morgan to direct the work of the church. The elders are: J. W. Williamson, J. M. Baker, G. W. Morris, and C. B. Thomas. Deacons: Charles L. Rogers, E. M. Carpenter, and J. C. Austin.—C. B. Thomas.

Florence, Ala., April 15.-The Sherrod Avenue church of Christ at North Florence is about one and one-half years old, having organized in Octo-ber, 1923, with a membership of twenty-five, worshiping each Lord's day in a school building. A few months ago we decided that we had so deago we decided that we had so developed in numbers that we needed a permanent place of worship. We now have an active membership of one hundred and twenty-five, with one hundred and eighty-five enrolled in the Bible school, and with splendid attendance and much loyalty to the work. We are endeavoring to erect a building in which to meet that will be not only comfortable and conveniently arranged for preaching as well as Bible study, but a place of worship in keeping with the cause we represent and love, located in a splendid community, and which as our represent and love, located in a splen-did community, and which as our town grows will become more and more centrally located. The build-ing, when completed, will cost ap-proximately twenty-five thousand dol-lars, and will meet all demands for many years to come. Our congrega-tion, being young, is not very strong, either numerically or financially, and we find it necessary to go to friends outside the congregation to solicit aid, a thing we very much dislike to do. The congregation has certainly been very liberal in subscribing to this work, and I feel that others would be glad to have a part with us. Our little congregation has subscribed about twelve thousand dollars and bought a nice lot, and the building, which will have a seating capacity of which will have a seating capacity of more than five hundred and a dozen class rooms, is half finished. I might add for the information of all that our deed contains the usual restrictive clause, making the property secure for all time to come. Any donation you feel inclined to make will be greatly appreciated by the congregation, and especially by me, and I am sure the Lord will bless you. Please present this matter to the congregation where you worship, as we need help badly.—J. A. Hunt.

WILL WE DO IT? BY J. H. HINES.

To see a young man with the spirit of a martyr offer himself to spend and be spent in a distant land for the love of Christ; tear himself away from his parents and his brothers and sisters to take what may prove to be an eternal leave of the scenes and companions of his youth; abandon his native home and his native tongue to bear the glad tidings of a precious Savior to a heathen people-this is enough to fill our hearts with joy and gladness and cause selfishness to blush and hang its head in shame.

To see a delicate young woman who has been dandled in the lap of parental tenderness, with a heroism which nothing but Christian principles could support, tear herself, for the last time, from the arms of a trembling mother and speechless sisters, to encounter the dangers of the sea and the perils of a torrid clime, in order to support her husband by her smiles and prayers in a foreign country, is enough to make us shake off the graveclothes and go forth to live and sacrifice for Jesus so long as we live. Brethren, will we do it?

Brother E. S. Jelley and his beloved did this very thing. In the year 1905 they bade farewell to their native home, friends, and loved ones and sailed to the distant land of India to carry the old, old story of God's redeeming love to the poor, lost, dying heathen. There his wife made the supreme sacrifice; there he gave sixteen years—the best part of his lifeto the cause he loved so dearly. After sixteen years of privation, want, and suffering, which brought about a breakdown, he was compelled to return home. Now he is again in the homeland, among his brethren-not the strong man that he was sixteen years ago, but a man broken in health, brought on by the sacrifices he made. But he still loves the souls over there, and is now traveling over the land, among the churches, trying to stir them to greater activity along missionary lines. Call him, Brother Jelley has made a great sacrifice. He not only gave sixteen years of his life to India, but he gave two thousand and seven hundred dollars of his own money that the work might not be hindered. Who will imitate him?

We should love him for his work's sake and should not permit him to suffer. But at this present time he is in need. He and his family of nine are hungry, sick, and poverty-stricken. He needs help. Will we give it?
A letter received recently states that they are in dire need. Can you think of a chairless house, an empty pantry, clotheless children, and a sick father? That is the picture of Brother Jelley's home—the man who spent sixteen years as a missionary to India. He states that the rent is due, coal and wood to buy, board for a son to pay, and his little children need clothing, and no money.

Will the church of the living God, the greatest and most sublime institution on the earth, let a brother who has sacrificed and suffered as Brother Jelley has, suffer for the necessaries of life? I ask, brethren, will we do it? Send your tokens of appreciation and gifts of love directly to E. S. Jelley, Gate City, Birmingham, Ala.

OUR NEW CHINA MISSION.

BY R. C. BELL.

Our foreign mission gifts have increased from nothing to seventy-five or one hundred dollars per month, besides the special material gifts in personal things sent to some of the missionaries.

Two of our present members have volunteered for China. Two others, who have been volunteers for more than four years, will be sent, the Lord willing, at the same time. I have never been present in any meeting where there was as much rejoicing as there was in a recent meeting, at a special missionary program, when these plans were all made known. It was a wonderful meeting.

If the Lord wills, these missionaries will sail next September. It will take five hundred dollars each to pay for railroad fare, steamboat ticket, freight, incidentals, and setting up with household equipment. means that between now and September we must raise two thousand dollars. The Morrillton congregation stands sponsor for this work. We must keep up our present plans, as we cannot "rob Peter to pay Paul." We must have your cooperation. Congregations should be glad to help in this work. The Morrillton congregation urgently invites you to have fellowship with us in this work. Write us at once and tell us what your assistance will be to help these four missionaries reach China.

WORK AT AKRON, OHIO.

BY RUSSELL DAVIS.

Since my last report I have received the following donations to aid the Akron church in their effort to get a house of worship: Grace Pickett, Indiana, $5; Sister Clovis, St. Marys, W. Va., $10; Rowena Martin, Ohio, $5; church at Ozark, Ohio, $10; church at Laings, Ohio, $10; church at Tabernacle, N. J., $10.

We are working on plans at the present time to decide just what kind of house to build; but we have decided on a brick-veneer house, which will probably cost us about ten thousand dollars and seat three hundred and fifty people. We plan to put in the basement, just as if we were going on with the house, but put a temporary roof over it, finish it up, and occupy it for a year or so. Then, when we can get it paid for, there will be no bother about financing the rest. We can easily do this, and it will save us about four hundred dollars a year rent.

This will be quite a burden on the congregation here, so we are again asking if there are not some who are interested in the work here that will help us. We feel that there ought to be some who are in position and are willing to aid us when it becomes evident to them that we mean business. We expect to get things started just as soon as we can get some financial plan worked out.

If there is any one with the money and disposition to help us, send donations to me at 282 West Miller Avenue, Akron, Ohio.

If in doubt as to our standing as a loyal congregation, write the publishers of this paper or any of the preachers in this part of the country.

A SERIOUS SUPPLICATION.

BY S. E. TEMPLETON.

God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the one true God of the Old and New Testaments, through the name of thy Son, Jesus Christ, I ask that each reader of the Firm Foundation may get the copy of that paper published on March 10, 1925, and read on page the advertisement put out by Brother A. R. Holton concerning the Thorp Spring Christian College; and then secure the copy of the Gospel Advocate published on April 2, 1925, and read the article on page 315 by Brother J. L. Hines, in which the truth is so plainly set forth in regard to the matters under consideration. May each soul who has read or may read the advertisement and the article, which is a true correction of the advertisement, see the important necessity of doing all the work of teaching and training the rising generations as will be pleasing in thy sight. May we not drift away from thee and thy Son through our desire for an education, but may we be truly educated, that we may win souls to Christ, May schools in which Christian men and women teach multiply, but may such schools not be a means of drawing us away from an acceptable service in this life to thee and thy Son. In the name of Jesus Christ, thy Son, and my Savior, and the Savior of all who obey, I offer this supplication.

PREACHER WANTED.

The following letter is self-explanatory:

Tulare, Cal., April 17.—The congregation in Tulare is planning on securing a man to locate here and preach for us at least half the time, and we will cooperate with two other congregations that can use him half the time. We want a man—voung man—who understands the Book and is able to defend the doctrine of Christ, and we want him to be a live wire, so to speak. If you know of a good man that you think will fill the requirements, please write me that I may correspond with him. We want him to locate in Tulare and work with the church here and preach two Lord's days in each month here, and the rest of the time at other congregations. We will take the matter up with the other congregations and see and we will cooperate with two other with the other what we can do.

OPPOSITION.

BY H. C. FLEMING.

At the beginning of the Christian era there was much opposition to the teachings of Christ and his chosen witnesses-the apostles; and this opposition was so fierce that it caused the crucifixion of Jesus Christ and the persecution to death of his apostles and of unnumbered members of those who believed their teachings and became obedient to the faith. The Jewish opposition was because of their misunderstanding of their own scriptures and the substitution of their traditions instead of the facts revealed in them; that of the Gentiles, because of the fear of the destruction of their idolatrous and hideous crimes in that worship.

But Christianity prevailed over all opposition and was united in one body until the "man of sin" began to be developed; and this "man of sin" soon began the persecution of all who would not submit to him in the same manner which the pagans and Jews had persecuted the first Christians, and this persecution by him seems now to be appearing again wherever he has the power, and he is seeking that power by all kinds of schemes and deceptions. At the present time the world seems to be in about the same condition as the Jews and Gentiles were at the first coming of the Lord Jesus; but as Christianity triumphed at the first coming, so will it triumph at the second coming.

Paul, in 2 Thess. 2: 8, says: "And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." (See, also, verses 7, 9-12.) By this we are assured that all opposition will finally be overthrown.

As the Jews were divided into sects and parties at the beginning of Christianity, so is the world to-day. Think of the thousands of false teachings that are being promulgated and spread all over the land and throughout the world! It would take too much space to note them all; so I shall leave them in this general way, with the consolation that they are all eventually to be destroyed. O, erring ones, look to our Guide and forsake your errors, lest you be destroyed because of them!

We can know the truth by the law and the testimony. Some are opposing one error with another. This can be of no avail, for nothing but truth will stand the test before the great Judge of all the earth.

We must cast aside all speculations, human opinions, and teachings of men who wrest the Scriptures to their own destruction. We know this when by false reasonings they come to false conclusions not revealed in the word of God, and many of them in pointblank opposition to that word.

When troublesome times begin to come upon the earth, for consolation read Luke 21: 25-28.

NEW YORK MISSION.

BY E. E. SHOULDERS.

We had a good audience and fine service last Sunday. Dr. John Young, of this city, spoke for us, and gave a splendid lesson on some special phases of Christianity. Taking into consideration the various difficulties under which we are laboring, the work seems to be moving on very nicely. We have had a few out-of-town visitors for the past two or three Sundays. Let no one contemplating a visit to New York City forget to come and worship with us Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, 226 West Fifty-eighth Street.

The amount of money received for the Brewer-Woodroof meeting, held here last September, was $2,813.94. The entire expense of the meeting was $2,510.50, leaving a balance on hand of $303.44. After some deliberation, it was thought best to put this balance in a special fund to be used for future evangelistic work.

Again, I want to take this occasion to express our deep gratitude to the donors who made it possible for us to have our meeting. For the good that was accomplished we give our Heavenly Father the praise.

We should like to see others take an interest in this work. Let me urge that you talk for the New York mission, pray for it, and support it; and I predict that in the not far distant future we shall see a real strong church in this city. Let us pray that the Lord will send more laborers into this field.

THE BOLES ORPHAN HOME.

We wish to say to the brother-hood at large that the management of the Boles Orphan Home appreciates your fellowship in the recent effort which was made to pay off the indebtedness of the Home. We received about twenty-five hundred dollars as a result of the drive, and some are still sending. The open accounts amounted to about thirty-five hundred dollars, and contributions for the month of April assisted in meeting the most urgent claims.

We now have about forty children that have been sent from Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and other points in Texas. It seems that each child that is accepted must be the last, and we have been advised by many to take no more; but these brethren do not

BY COLEMAN OVERBY.

This debate was held at New Concord, near Murray, Ky., between C. B. Douthitt, of Martin, Tenn., and R. L. Riley, of Arlington, Ky., beginning on March 31 and continuing four days.

On the first day Mr. Riley affirmed the origin of Baptist churches. He used Zech. 6: 12, 13; John 17: 3, 4; Luke 16: 16. He was pressed by Brother Douthitt to find one mention in the Bible of Baptist churches, to give one historian that mentions Missionary Baptists before the seventeenth century, to find one peculiar truth taught by Baptists, and to give the time and place of the origin of the church.

On the second day Brother Douthitt affirmed that the church of Christ is scriptural in origin. His affirmation showed the church to be scriptural in promise, in prophecy, and in fulfillment. He used Dan. 7: 13, 14; Isa. 2: 2, 3; 28: 14-17; Octs 2; Eph. 1: 19-22; 4: 9-11.

The third day found Mr. Riley affirming that sinners are saved by faith without further acts of obedience. He used Eph. 2: 8, 9; John 3: 15, 16, 18; 5: 24; Tit. 3: 5. Brother Douthitt readily took from him his proof texts, showing that even Mr. Riley was in doubt on the matter, as he would not take a stand on John 12: 42, 43; 8: 30, 31; Acts 26: 26; 11: 21. He also showed that confession came after faith and that men are saved by confession. Mr. Riley had both his scriptural references and illustrations taken from him.

On the fourth day Brother Douthitt affirmed the possibility of apostasy. He substantiated his contention from 1 Cor. 10: 1-10; Deut. 7: 6-9; 14: 1; Heb. 3: 6-19; James 1: 13-16; John 15: 1-5; Matt. 25: 14-30. A bare mention of these arguments composed Riley's reply.

The discussion was well attended, and the house would by no means accommodate the crowds. The order was excellent on the part of both the speakers and the audience. The matter was pitched on a high plane and remained so throughout.

This was Brother Douthitt's first discussion. His arguments were clear, convincing, and persuasive.

Brethren from other churches that attended were so well pleased with the work done that they extended to the speakers an invitation to repeat the discussion. Five places invited a repetition. Brother Douthitt heartily and anxiously accepted, but Riley refused stubbornly. The challenge was broadened to any Baptist, but with no response. Straws indicate which way the wind blows.

Before the debate closed two Baptists stated that they had been changed by the debate. Yet many say debates are harmful and do no good.

The following preaching brethren were present: T. G. Curd, B. L. Douthitt, Stanley Jones, David Thompson, Newt. Moody, Gus Nichols, Wilfred Heflin, R. L. Hart, Byron Henry, Alvin Reavis, and Jewel Cox.

Brother Douthitt will do great work anywhere in defense of the truth. His work is commendable, highly so.

The writer served as timekeeper for Brother Douthitt; W. O. Hargrove, of Almo, Ky., was moderator for Mr. Riley.

SCRIPTURE STUDIES

BY JAMES A. ALLEN

The church of Jesus Christ has encountered perilous times. In some places many of the elders of churches are Masons and many of the preachers are Ku-Klux. Friction and antagonism, engendered by such things, have paralyzed the work of the church. In some places open division has brought disgrace upon the cause for which Jesus died. No apology can be offered for such conditions.

This state of things is causing much regret and grief among all who love the prosperity of the church, and can but be regarded as a bad indication for the future of the work. We feel that the time has come for somebody to speak out and to raise the cry of repentance and reformation.

D. Lipscomb said: "It depends very much on the kind of a Christian a man proposes to be whether it is wrong for him to join the fraternal orders or not. If he intends to make an earnest, faithful, devoted Christian, he has no time, taste, or service for anything, save the church of Christ; if he intends to live the Christian life and make himself a follower of Christ and fit himself in character for heaven, he will give his talent, means, time, and love to the church of Christ, with none to bestow on any other association or brotherhood; but if he only intends to profess to be a Christian, not to make a strict member, and live a life of ease and pleasure and trust to church membership to save him, without a godly and holy life, he had as well join these brotherhoods and divide his time and means with these as to take any other course of life that will not develop the Christian character. A prominent Mason, not a Christian, once told me that while he was a Mason himself and thought Masonry did good in a temporal way and in various ways, he did not see how a preacher or member of the church of God-which is claimed to be the perfect organization, able to bestow all good and entitled to all the service, time, and means of a person-could join another institution and divide with it his time, means, and affections. He said it in speaking of the death of one of the most prominent preachers that ever lived in Nashville, who died and was buried with Masonic honors. He clearly intimated that his respect for that man was lowered by his joining a human society while claiming to be a leader and teacher in a divine one. Preachers and others often join organizations of this character thinking it will give them influence, but it seems to me it declares to the world that they do not find their religion and their church as good as they claim to believe it, else they would not divide their time, service, and means with other institutions, seeking the little good they give. It seems to me that an elder or preacher who does this weakens his religious influence and character in so doing with all who know the claims of Christ and his church, Teachers that do this certainly do not love the Lord with all the strength and the mind and the soul, else they would have no time to devote to these worldly institutions, and in this fail to set the example Jesus requires of his teachers, as such lack the essential qualifications of elders and teachers. The best way is to teach them better. Show them the example of earnest fidelity and singleness of purpose to serve the Lord. Perhaps you show a failure to hold the church of God and his religion in high esteem in some other way as displeasing as this. Let us try the healing and saving process rather than the destroying one. But Christians should do all they do in the name of Christ and as members of his body, not as members of other bodies. Christ provides for all good to his servants in his church." ("Queries and Answers," pages 183, 184.)

No man can be a Christian and something else at the same time. To the extent that he becomes something else, to that extent he ceases to be a Christian. God does not command men to perform any service or work that they cannot perform as Christians and as members of the church. "Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work," (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.) The Christian, "the man of God," is "furnished completely" for all service as a member of the church. No Christian is furnished with directions to do anything that he cannot do as a Christian.

"Seeing that his divine power hath granted unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that called us by his own glory and virtue." (2 Pet. 1: 3.) "All things that pertain unto life and godliness" are in Christ, in the church. No human institution can claim anything that pertains "unto life and godliness." If any human organization has good features and does any good work, it borrows its good features from the church and does the good work that God commands the church to do. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ." (Eph. 1: 3.) All good is in Christ, in the church.

We must adhere to the Scriptures. We regret that some have become so "soft" on preaching the gospel as to create a suspicion in many places that they are unsound in the faith.

BLIND MINDS.

BY JOHN ALLEN HUDSON.

"But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." (2 Cor. 4: 3, 4.) "Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." (Matt. 15: 14.) "Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart." (Eph. 4: 18.) "And Jesus said, For judgment I am come into this world: that they which see not might see; and that they which see might be made blind. And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, Are we blind also? Jesus said unto them, If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say. We see; therefore your sin remaineth." (John 9: 39-41.) "And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive: for this people's beart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them." (Matt. 13: 14, 15.)

No physical blindness this, but blindness of a weightier sort; no material blackness this, but the blackness of damnation self-imposed. The human eye is a most delicate organ. It is sensitive to the many colors that play in a gorgeous sunset. The irridescency of the sun-pierced spray we call the rainbow does not lose its splendor upon the normal eye.

The verdant earth in spring, the unfolding roses with the gentle releasing of rich aromas to regale the nostrils of man, the majesty of floating clouds in the far-flung blue, the interplanetary void, the stateliness of a mighty landscape that suggests eternity and fills the bosom with an ache for it knows not what, are beheld by the eye and the influence of them lives in the mind because of the eye. What must it mean to one to be blind and not to see what those who have eyes do see!

The darkness of midnight settles. The silver disk off in space that sometimes lights the nights is missing. The skies are overcast so that the stars do not twinkle for us. What a darkness! Physical darkness.

The spiritual eye is affected with ophthalmia. Worse. The sensitive optic nerve has been cut. The soul and God are dissevered by the stroke. The splendor of the eternal Word, the majesty of the Almighty Father, the great beauty of the spiritual landscape thrown across the way of man, with its mountains of glory and grace and its valleys of refining sorrows and sufferings, may not be seen. Man is spiritually blind. This loss of sight is far worse than the loss of the physical sight, for its consequences are eternal.

The gospel is hid—if hid—to those who are lost. It is hid from them, and they do not know it. They think they see, as Jesus said. The god of this world, Satan, with all of his wiles, with all he holds of the earth, shuts out the light of the glorious gospel of Christ. He obtrudes things, forces a close-up, obstructs the sight; and men gladly suffer it and claim they see.

"Ye suffer fools gladly," said the apostle Paul. Men suffer the devil to blind them and shut out the light of the gospel, and they do it with alacrity.

To those blinded by sectarianism, by the doctrines and commandments of men, who by their traditions reject the commandments of God, what a day of revelation will the judgment be!

"Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity." (Matt. 7: 22.)

TRUE GLORYING.

BY S. H. HALL.

In Gal. 6: 14, Paul says: "But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world."

It is said that men are continually deifying something. "No man can serve two masters" is a statement that cannot be questioned, for our Lord declares this. But I think it just as true to say that no man lives without serving some master. We will have a God. Find man, I care not in what condition, and you find him deifying something. If it is not the true God or some idol, it is self. The prophecy in 2 Tim. 3 points out a time when self, to a large degree, will be universally worshiped: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves." And because of this self-love they will be "covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away."

Knowing this inherent weakness of man, the call of our Lord for discipleship places the ax at the root of this evil tree by demanding self-denial, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." (Matt. 16: 24.) We cannot even begin to follow Christ unless we first begin to deny self.

This enthroning self and letting him reign as king is the thing that curses the religious world as nothing else these days. I saw somewhere the following words about preachers and public speakers: "A man may have a poor memory concerning everything else on earth, but he can always recall the exact words of every printed compliment he ever received, including the punctuation." I fear this is too true of entirely too many who claim to be religious teachers among us. So unlike Daniel of old and the matchless apostle Paul are we when we think of glorying in anything except the wisdom of our God and his ways. With Paul it was: "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." But he could do this, because by the cross he had been cut down, crucified, and buried, and raised into a new life in Christ. Those of us upon whom the cross has never been allowed to take hold glory in ourselves.

"Therefore let no man glory in men." This means the best of men, for this statement was made to stop the Corinthians from glorying in Paul, Cephas, and Apollos. (See 1 Cor. 3: 21.) Here it would be well to read Acts 14: 11-15. What better are we than those heathens when we would make gods out of men? "For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away."

(1 Pet. 1: 24.) This is the best that can be said of man. "But the word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you." (See verse 25.)

I never like to hear men introduce what they are pleased to call "new ideas," and seemingly enjoy men's glorying in them because of their "new ideas." If they have any ideas that are worth receiving and making sacrifices for, they will be found not to be "new ideas," but rather ideas as old as "The Grand Old Book," the Bible, and from which book these ideas are taken. Man had better study his Bible more and delight more in it; for there are no ideas worth our time and attention, save those found therein. "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." (Jer. 6: 16.)

And let us not forget that a man can glory in his own boasted soundness and loyalty, and even his goodness and purity. This is one of the most common ways of deifying self. Push self aside and behold your utter nothingness, and let our Lord have the throne in your heart and life.

"O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." (Jer. 10: 23.) If this is true-and who would dare deny it?we want no human directions along life's way in our religion, but all orders we desire to take from the Guide that knows and makes no mistakes in directions given. "Jehovah is our Guide," the Book declares. "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterwards receive me to glory." (Ps. 73: 24.) Moses had directions to go by when he built the tabernacle. "For, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed thee in the mount." (Heb. 8: 5.) I do not understand that any soul could have arisen after Moses and given new plans that God would have accepted or that could have been considered an improvement on those Moses received. Let us stay with original orders as we endeavor to save sinners and build up model congregations. The plan we have was purchased with the blood of our Lord. It is a terrible sin to lay it down for one that some man may have imagined.

SAVING THE LOST. BY GEORGE W. FARMER.

The matter of the salvation of the world is taken far too lightly to-day, and it is not given that serious and prayerful consideration by professed Christian people that it so urgently demands. It is hard to get the world to realize its lost condition, and, to my way of thinking, this is largely due to the indifference on the part of the church members.

The fact is, we will never make much headway in this, our Lord's business, till we get away from the spirit of levity and actually get down to a more serious consideration of our duty to the unsaved world. There is no work of more transcendent importance and that should be fraught with more "fear and trembling" than this work. To get professed Christian people to take it seriously seems to be a matter of impossibility. We are only playing at it, and in many instances making a most ridiculous farce of the effort.

I stated in a previous article that God wants the world saved. He is "not willing that any should perish [be lost], but that all should come to repentance," and he has committed this work of saving or bringing souls to Christ to men, and the efforts put forth upon their part should be strenuous and heroic efforts. What hinders so much in this great work? Let me tell you. Listen to me. Jesus said: "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." There is no truer saying than that. The whole atmosphere of the present century is inflated with the spirit and ambition for gain in material things, such as money, houses and lands, stocks and bonds. Again, a large per cent of the people are absolutely drunken on pleasure and curiosity, and are wildly seeking these things, and to meet this depraved appetite the genius and wits of the world are digging up and turning over heaven and earth to find the things upon which their fancies are preying. These are things they want, and these things they are going to have and enjoy, and poor lost men and women can go to the devil.

This is the spirit of the times. No wonder we make so little progress in this most sacred work. I tell you, ninetynine per cent of the church members need to clothe themselves in sackcloth and sit in ashes and cry mightily unto God to forgive their poor, pitiable, and unprofitable souls; and they must repent of this sinful neglect and call upon God to forgive if they ever go to heaven.

The very first word, so to speak, in the vocabulary of the great Christian system is "sacrifice." God made sacrifice, and Jesus Christ made sacrifice. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3: 16.) "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." (1 John 4: 10, 11.) God gave his Son to leave heaven and to come to this low ground of sorrow and take up his abode with sinful and undone humanity, to walk with them, to talk with them, to lead a life of self-denial and endure hardships, and, last of all, to die the shameful and cruel death of the cross. He said one time when with his disciples: "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." (Matt. 8: 20.) This expresses how poor he became. And why such a life of sacrifice? It was in order that man might be saved.

Now, do we make sacrifice? If so, what and how much? With a vast majority of us, in experience we do not actually know the first letter in the alphabet of sacrifice. There never has been a time since I can remember that there was more money in circulation and when it was within reach of more people than for the last few years, and there has never been a time in the history of the present civilization when people had more and lived better than they do now in this country. They dress more extravagantly and have more to eat and more of the real comforts and luxuries of life. Just think of the money invested in automobiles, from the Ford car up to the finest and most expensive one made! Think of the great amount of gas and oil that is used for pleasure riding! Then here come the thousands of movies that are being operated today, and they have to be supported, and the professed Christian people are helping to keep them up, too. Then comes the radio. We must have a radio or we are too far behind the times. Think of the time and money spent in connection with these machines! Then there are the fashionable clubs and clubhouses and the games for amusement and recreation. The fact is, the people do what they want to do, and they have what they want to have. They ride in their fine cars, spend money without stint to see the game or the show, and dress in their silks and satins; but no time nor money to invest in precious souls.

When the contribution basket is passed before them on the Lord's day, they drop in a penny, a nickel, or a dime. This is the reason our church treasury is always depleted and embarrassed. Penny, nickel, and dime contributions go into the treasury, when there should be contributions of fifty cents, one dollar, and even five dollars. Penny, nickel, and dime contributions, with silks and satins, fine cars, victrolas, radios, clubs and clubhouses, popular games and sports, is placing a very, very low value upon poor lost souls. If this isn't a travesty upon the religion of Jesus Christ, I do not know the reason why.

The widow's mite was acceptable and speaks volumes, but "she cast in all that she had, even all her living." Let us not deceive ourselves in thinking that if we cast in only the widow's mite that it will meet the demands. We are to give as we are prospered." (1 Cor. 16; 2.)

With the manifold opportunities of making and handling money to-day, the church should be supporting more missionaries at home and abroad than ever before. Our efforts to save the lost will be proportionate to the value each one of us places upon the soul.

IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL.

(Sermon preached by Henry T. King on Easter Sunday at the Belmont Avenue church of Christ, Nashville, Tenn.)

"For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed to us-ward. For the earnest expectation of the creation waiteth for the revealing of the sons of God. For the creation was subjected to vanity, not of its own will, but by reason of him who subjected it, in hope that the creation itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only so, but ourselves also, who have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for our adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body For in hope were we saved: but hope that is seen is not hope: for who hopeth for that which he seeth? But if we hope for that which we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." (Rom. 8: 18-25.)

For several weeks I have been speaking to you of the privileges of the Christian religion. I have reserved for this speech a discussion of the principle that gives to us hope of immortality.

This series of sermons was begun with a discussion of the privilege of prayer. I would like, therefore, to allow this speech to be a suitable climax and conclusion to that series that was ushered in with the discussion of the privilege of a person here in this world, encompassed with human limitations, prostrating himself, and in confidence addressing the Deity of all the universe. Because, while that is a privilege surpassed by few, the one which I seek to present to you to-day is one that can go with us into that shadowy vale whose intricate windings none of us can describe, but whose farthest point emerges into the light of a day made brilliant by the face of God.

This of which I speak to you to-day is the staff on which the weary soul leans when the arms of friends have failed, when the strength of life has ebbed, and when everything material and earthly passes into a dim background and sheds no light on those steps that lie out before. This that I would present to you to-day is that which can give to one strength when strength itself has become weakness; it is that which would give to one life when life itself is ceasing to be; it is that which would give to one a clear vision and an insight into the future when his eyes of flesh become glazed with the coldness of death. The thing that I speak to you about to-day as a privilege of Christianity is the privilege to entertain the hope that beyond the wreck of worlds and the crash of matter and beyond the dissolution of body and soul there is to be a conscious life, a glorious habitation, a perfect association, an unending period of rhapsodic bliss.

In the paragraph that I read to you from the eighth chapter of Romans, the apostle Paul, by the hand of inspiration, draws slightly aside the curtain that swings between the finite and the infinite and allows us to look into the dim past where the judgment of God, because of man's sin, brought down the world he had created, and allows us in that glimpse to see the anguish and to hear the grounings of creation. I confess to you that the most extravagant imagination is unequal to the task of comprehending the agony of creation itself as it waits "for the revealing of the sons of God."

Any ordinary intelligence must recognize there is something wrong with this world, with all its sordidness, all its sadness, all its sufferings, all its shame, all its sin; none can doubt in the face of these things there is something radically wrong. When our own hearts ache almost to the bursting point, when our own reason reels with its burden until insanity appears almost to stalk our path; when our bodily strength has failed and we falteringly seek our path, we think life is a tragedy. When we multiply this by all of the sorrow of the teeming millions of the world, we know there is a tragedy-great, vast, and deep. But when, added to this, there comes the hint of inspiration bidding us see the shuddering of the planets, to hear the sobbing of the stars, and making us_behold the sun and the moon veiling their faces in shame and seeking earnestly for the day when "the sons of God will be revealed" and creation will be restored to its original purity, we can but bow our heads and say: "O Lord, how long until the consummation of the age?"

This is a glorious period in the life of our planet. The flowers that gladden our hearts this day whisper to us the perfumed words of hope. The birds that sing echo to us the cadence of this hope. Those dreams and longings that are born in our hearts are joined with the cries of the Holy Spirit, who helps us in "groanings that cannot be uttered," and indicate to us how necessary it is, how natural it is, that there should be in the human heart a hope of a day that is to be.

Centuries before Jesus Christ was bern, and probably several centuries before the appearance of Moses and the inauguration of the Jewish religion, there lived a philosopher whose soul was great, whose heart was pure, whose mind was clear, and who, aided by these and inspiration as well, sought to pull aside the curtain between time and cternity and answer the great question of the human soul. The question that troubled him was: "If a man die, shall he live again?" The answer to that question can be found in clear statements only in the Christian religion. The answer to that question can be found in emphatic demonstration only in the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

And nearly nineteen hundred years ago on this particular day the answer to Job's question, the answer to the unuttered longings of creation itself, was given to the world when the angels of God came from glory and rolled away the stone that shut up in the tomb the body of Jesus Christ, when the power of God came and made it possible for him to take up his life again and to walk courageously before all and reveal himself to chosen ones who should proclaim to the world in his name the resurrection of the dead.

I have an idea if one were rich in material wealth, he would appeal to any normal mind. It is the glory of this I am associated was recently being interviewed by a bond salesman. He told the salesman he had very little money to invest. He had reserved ten thousand dollars for a trip to Europe. He had reserved a few other thousands for expenses of one kind and another. He had only about twenty thousand dollars left to invest. That sum appearing to him as small change! What such affluence can mean, I can but imagine. But it must be great. But there might come a time when all this wealth would be of no avail. Certainly there is coming a time when it can go no farther than the purchasing of a monument to be erected at the grave where our ashes sleep. The satisfaction that would come from the possession of wealth can go no farther than the grave. It is not possible, therefore, for the hope of wealth to mean so very much to the individual.

There is another thing that appeals to me. I think it would appeal to any normal mind. It is the glory of this world. The applause of our fellow men, their approval, is worth considerable. Elbert Hubbard said: "If a man has as many as three friends in even a large city, he will be able to get by." Well, the confidence, the affection, the loyalty of devoted friends represents a wealth transcending the power of money and the value of precious But even this has its limitations from two sources. Human applause is a variable thing. It is so variable when viewed in the light of history it becomes almost paralyzing. Also the loyalty and the love of friends can only minister to us while we are here with them. When the curtain is rung down and we have passed from this stage on which we have been wont to associate with our friends, we will be ushered on to a platform where the drama is strange, the whole situation unknown. Our friends cannot go. We must journey alone, unless there be something above and beyond them.

There is another thing. Love of our immediate family is one of the most precious feelings the heart can know. The tender affection that binds together a family has within its compass the most beautiful thing the human eye will see, the human heart will know, in this world. And yet there will come a time when the strong arm of father can no longer provide or protect. There will come a time when the gentle touch of mother's hand can no longer soothe or inspire. There will come a time when mother's kiss can no longer banish pain or infuse hope. There will come a time also when children can no longer minister to parents nor reverence them, save in memory. All these things are destined to crumble with the crash of the world. Riding serenely on this current of cross purposes is the "Ark of Safety," in which stands a Pilot who has sailed all seas, weathered all storms, charted all currents, investigated all ports, and equipped every lighthouse. Every one who believes in Him and enters the vessel with him will find, when the storms rage thickest, the thunders roll loudest, and the lightning flashes most fearsomely, that the Captain of our salvation will guide us through all the trials that seem confusing, uncertain, and discouraging, and bring us at last to a peace whose pleasures cannot be exaggerated.

Christianity comes to us, therefore, offering us an opportunity for service, offering us the privilege of personal contact with kindred souls, and establishing for us telephonic connection with the central office of all the universe, where the ear of Almighty God will hear our feeble cry and the powers that are his shall be diverted to our relief while we live here and provide a home for us after death.

Christianity comes to us with the power to preserve the spark of infinity that lives in our bodies, but was originally derived from the Spirit of our God. That power will sustain us and make it possible for us to ride the crest of the waves, and, though beaten back here and there, sometimes discomfited, sometimes discouraged, to arrive at last safe home with our God.

The Christian religion brings to us that on which we may lean for service, that on which we may lean for satisfaction, that on which we may lean for a consideration surpassing in value the wealth and honor of the world. Though the stars cease to shine, though they destroy themselves in their clashings, and though the world itself ceases to be and the eternal day of reckoning comes, our souls, purified and redeemed in the blood of Jesus, will view it all with complacency, firm in the conviction that the hand of God doeth all things well.

I ask you if it is not worth all of the service, all of the sacrifice, that one could be called upon to render, to have the sense of satisfaction that no shadow can be too thick for the love of God to shine through, that no darkness can be too dense for the hand of Jesus to reach down and soothe the soul, and that no crushing calamity can be so great but the outstretched and everlasting arms will bear us up and make us more than conquerors through Him that loved us and gave himself for us? I ask you if God Almighty, who made us and gave us our mental yearnings, our heart longings, our soul seekings, has not of his own fullness poured out to us satisfaction for all these and condensed them into the Christian religion, at whose head is his Son.

I ask you, if that be true, is it not a privilege and an henor to confess Him and bow to his will and say: "As for me, I will walk the path of righteousness, I will walk the path of suffering, I will walk the path though it lead through sorrow and shame, because the path leads from the foot of the cross to the throne of God."

CALLS FOR BROTHER SRYGLEY.

BY J. A.

Last year, with the help of some of the readers of the Gospel Advocate, Brother F. B. Srygley, one of our senior editors, responded to a very urgent call for preaching in some of the Western States. Brother Srygley spent some time in Colorado and New Mexico and succeeded in accomplishing much good.

Among those baptized by Brother Srygley last year were two persons to whom baptism was peculiar and unique, as neither of them had ever seen any one baptized before. Brother Srygley is eminently fitted to carry the gospel to new fields. He preaches to the people with a plainness and simplicity that enables them to at once appreciate the clear teaching of the word of God and to recognize the importance of conforming to a "Thus saith the Lord."

We are very much interested in encouraging Brother Srygley in missionary work of this kind, as we should send our best preachers to new and difficult fields. Earnest and insistent calls have come to him, from the places where he preached last year, to return to them again this year; and to Brother Srygley's credit, we are glad to announce that he has consented to go and that he is making his arrangements accordingly. He intends, if the Lord wills, to hold at least three meetings in these destitute places of the West.

And as these places are unable to sustain Brother Srygley financially while preaching for them, we are suggesting that readers of the Gospel Advocate lend a hand and have a part in the work. We are aware that many of our readers would rejoice to participate in missionary efforts of this kind, and that the consensus of opinion is that more work of this kind should be done.

All who desire to assist Brother Srygley in responding to these Macedonian calls and in preaching the gospel at these destitute points may send their donations to James A. Allen, Gospel Advocate office, Nashville, Tenn., and proper acknowledgment will be made.

Sometimes it is easier to preach a long sermon than it is to perform a short duty,

BROTHER McQUIDDY'S BOOK.

"The Profitable Word" contains a choice selection of the writings of J C. McQuiddy, editor and publisher of the Gospel Advocate for over forty years, carefully compiled by A. B. Lipscomb. It is a gem and contains some of the best thoughts of a great mind. The book contains 196 pages, and is neatly bound in silk and stamped in gold and white metal. Now ready. REVIVAL AT PORT ARTHUR, TEXAS. BY L. E. CARPENTER.

Brother Price Billingsley has just closed a great meeting with the Sixth Street Church, this city. There were nineteen baptized, five took membership, and three were restored. Those baptized came from the "digressives," the Catholics, and the Methodist and Baptist churches here. I have baptized many Catholics here and several from the various denominations, some who had been members of denominations for more than half a century. There are several others whom we expect to baptize soon. One of the greatest features of this meeting was the fact that about ninety-five members rededicated their lives to God at one of the morning services. This means power for the future work here. This was the best meeting we have ever had. The church was lifted to a higher plane in every way. Christ as our only hope, his word as our only guide, and his church as our only medium of work and worship were stressed repeatedly. His uncompromising plea for the Bible, and the Bible alone, as our guide, and the need of the church and world alike to hear God in all things, laying aside all creeds and our own "think so's," had its telling effect on this town.

We have lost many members in the past year on account of the large refineries here laying off so many men. We have lost in various ways about eighty-five members of this church, and possibly one hundred and fifty from our Bible-study work; yet we still have a membership of over one hundred and fifty in the church and as fine a working little congregation as I have ever seen anywhere. Our contributions run over four hundred dollars per month. We are helping to support the Lawyers in South Africa, supporting a native helper for the Shorts in South Africa, helping our orphan homes and Bible schools. In addition to the regular work here at home. The ladies are doing much work among the sick and at the hospital and day nursery. I am not mentioning all the things we are doing, by any means, and I am not speaking of any of it in a boastful way, but if by any means I may help to stir others to try harder to do greater things for God. Regardless of all these members' moving away and other hindrances here, we have not missed but one Sunday in over eighteen months having new pupils to enroll in our Sunday-morning Bible study. Many other churches could do this same thing, and even much better, if they would work as hard as we have here.

There were also six subtractions during this meeting for disorderly conduct and strife. This church stands foursquare for purity in the pulpit and in the church as a whole. It stands for God's teaching on matters of discipline as well as other things and refuses to fellowship preachers or any one else who stands withdrawn from till they straighten up. This stand has caused us trouble here; but we are going to stand by the old Book on this matter, let come what may. Many people are afraid to stand by the word of God on this point and seem glad to get members from other congregations to build up in numbers, regardless of their standing in the church where they came from. This is disastrous to the cause in general and is cowardly and wicked on the part of those who do it. Any church that harbors members in it that are withdrawn from, whether preachers or not, should be treated as disorderly members, and unless they repent should be disfellowshiped by all other faithful congrega-

No preacher that is loyal to God and his church will preach for or in any way fellowship a church whose preacher or leaders stand withdrawn from elsewhere. What say you, brethren? Am I right on this matter or not? If not, what is the right thing to do in such a case? Will we demand that the world must hear God in all things, regardless of cost, to become Christians, while we are lax in applying his word to us in these matters and go by it only as it suits us conveniently? To be afraid to obey God in all matters of Christian duty, fellowship, and discipline is as bad as for denominations to be afraid to go by his word on first principles. If each congregation would practice what God says on this point, they would clean up the camp in many places. The Bible is our guide in practice as well as faith. Brethren, we cannot improve on God's ways here. This is God's way of saving the disorderly, the church, and the world; otherwise, it becomes a stumblingblock to the world and a snare to the church.

ILLNESS OF SISTER ANDREWS.

BY ROBERT S. KING.

The friends of Sister Sarah Andrews will be sorry to learn that, at the urgent request of the Japanese doctor at Shizuoka, she went to Tokyo to see a foreign doctor, as her health had been very poor the past winter. After a careful examination, an X-ray picture was made of her chest, both front and back, and I am sorry to say the picture shows the upper part of the right lung and the lower part of the left lung affected, though not badly. Both of the doctors think she should come home; but as her heart is in the great work, she begs to be allowed to stay. So he has recommended that she spend the summer in a city in the northern part of Japan where the altitude is higher and very light rainfall. He said Shizuoka, her present home, is the best place in Japan to live in winter.

Sister Andrews is anxious to stay and serve, but feels that it would be an imposition on the church, as she is unable to work much. Friends, I do not feel that way about it, do you? I know how her heart aches for the people among whom she has labored so long, and I feel that she has already made enough sacrifices to be put on a pension the rest of her life, and I know you feel that there is nothing too good for her and that you want her now to use the means sent her to the end that she may regain her health.

Let me quote just a paragraph from a recent letter:

Needless to say this is a big question. I have faith that, by God's mercy and grace, I can get well in Japan, and my desire is to try, at least, until fall. Is it too great an imposition on the church? All I want to live for is for service, and I believe, God helping me, I will get able to serve. I am praying earnestly and doing all I can toward that end, and the friends here are praying, and I begriends in America to carry my case to the throne of mercy. I am so anxious about the work; and since so many young members are leaving for other places, I fear the church could not stand alone if I should have to go, unless some one came to take my place. Pray that I may be led in all these things by our Father. I love the Lord, and I want his will to be done, whatever may be my wish. He knoweth best. He knoweth best.

Church of Christ, here is an opportunity. "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" Dare you finish the quotation? (Isa. 6: 8.) Friends, God is "able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think," and prayer moves the hand that moves the world. Let us pray for Sister Andrews, that God will spare her for the great work she has undertaken, and that she may be restored to her usual health and strength. If it be God's will for her to come home, let us be prepared for the emergency. It takes money to cross the sea, and she is ten thousand miles from home and loved ones. It also takes money to stay in Japan. Let us not fail her now, for we may be partly responsible for her present condition, for we let her live seven long years in a Japanese

SPIRITUAL ADULTERY. BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

When Israel looked to Egypt for help and in this spirit joined affinity with surrounding peoples not of God, she apostatized, and God called her an "adulteress." Instead of wholly relying upon the Lord and being content with his blessings, she looked to idolatrous nations for help, which was whoredom, and for which the Lord visited her with terrible punishments. She professed still to be faithful to God, but in alliance with evil disproved her professions, for in this she actually rejected God. She became corrupt and was shorn of her power. This holds a terrible warning for spiritual Israel to-day. For in his blood-bought church God gives assurance that all who enter there are perfect and complete, having all blessings which a loving Father can give his own. Yet for blessings and protection many in the church turn to plants which God did not plant. And regardless of their professed loyalty to God, all such in truth turn from and reject God, and in a spiritual sense become adulterers and Pointedly and oft-repeated doth Jehovah declare that Christians can serve and honor him nowhere save in his vineyard, in his church. Not a blessing which Masonry, for instance, holds out that may not be enjoyed in Christ; not a vow therein can one take for right and holy living but is made in becoming a Christian; not a door opened for service to men by any means whatsoever but the Lord offers in the church of the Son of his love. Thus all lodges are useless. But, in addition, they rob God and his church, and through their carnal trappings they feed human pride and induce to glorying in the flesh, and we know this glorying is not good. Man will glory in a human institution, rather than in the divine. Thus the lodge is against the church, for it steals time and money and influence and honor which by rights belong to God and his church.

But now the saddest part of all. Politics and these lodges are sweeping increasingly into the ranks of God's people, wrapping their evil tentacles about even preachers and teachers of the word. This is manifest to all who inform themselves of true conditions in Israel of to-day. The blight of this spiritual adultery is being felt almost everywhere. But will men speak out and in language that cannot be misunderstood warn of these grave perils? Alas, for the most part they will not! And why their silence? Do they not know these to be evils and dangers? Indeed they do, and in private they will admit it. Then why not cry against them and help stem the tide of departure? Because for sooth it is easier to leave the troublesome questions alone. You see what motives command them. Were they to speak up and preach the truth, they would array against themselves many who now love and praise and support them, and they choose the easier course. Brethren, God is witness I do not want to be extreme or severe; but some awful evils grow apace in our midst, and the soul of me burns to see church leaders and preachers lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God.

Say not the days are evil; whose to blame? And fold the hands and acquiesce. O shame! Stand up! Speak out! And boldly in God's name!

TENNESSEE ORPHAN HOME.

BY J. W. F.

A committee of the directors, appointed for the purpose, met at the Tennessee Orphan Home to consider plans by which more could be done to help a greater number of dependent children, and recommended suggestions heretofore outlined, which were published in the Christian Leader and commended by F. L. Rowe, who has great interest in helping to develop the unfortunate into useful citizenship. He said that under such a plan we could show the world one of the greatest coöperative works that has ever been conceived. He also wrote a personal letter encouraging our directors to become interested in establishing a Christian Girls' Home in Nashville, so that every ambitious orphan girl could be stimulated to make good by becoming worth something in the church and in the world. Such a home solves the question, so far as girls are concerned. He said, as a director of Potter Orphan Home, he would cooperate in every way possible to bring about the great program.

Brother H. C. Shoulders, superintendent of Potter Orphan Home, said: "I believe every suggestion and plan you have made is a good one, and I think it a good work. You can count on my doing what I can to put such a good work over in the name of our Savior."

The plan, briefly outlined, which so far has been approved by those who have studied the matter: If Fanning Orphan School, which is a great training school, where girls get Christian education, the Tennessee Orphan Home, and the Potter Orphan Home could be connected, in a cooperative working capacity, with a Girls' Home in Nashville, where large girls could take various positions so as to become self-sustaining, and have a Christian home in which to live, then a way would be open for dependent girls, educated in the Fanning Orphan School and by the Tennessee Orphan Home in the Columbia public schools, to become self-sustaining. Potter Orphan Home is well adapted for taking care of large boys, as it is on a farm, and near enough to Bowling Green for the larger boys to be educated in the public schools. It is much harder to properly care for senior girls than senior boys; therefore, a good Christian home in Nashville could be started on a small scale and grow into one of the greatest homes for caring for and giving Christian training to girls who have to work for a living, and such a home would be a boon for the girls who finish at Fanning Orphan School and those of the Tennessee Orphan Home who finish in the city public Tennessee Orphan Home operates to full capacity. Twelve orphans are now on the waiting list until we can make room for them, which will be done by finding good family homes for children now in the Tennessee Orphan Home. Since June 1, 1924, sixty-nine new children have been admitted and eighty-one have been placed; and during the last eleven months twenty-three, formerly placed, have been returned to the Tennessee Orphan Home, and some of them placed again. Seventy-two is the daily average number of children in the Home.

WHY THE CHURCH IS PAUPERIZED.

Roger Babson, the noted statistician, has issued a statement declaring that Christian people in this country are not giving more than one per cent of their incomes to God's work. Babson says if Christians would pay into the treasury of the Lord one-tenth of their incomes, the annual receipts for God's work in this country would be four billion dollars. And this is exactly what every Christian ought to do. We are to give not less than a tenth with which to finance his kingdom.

No wonder the work of the kingdom lags and the church of God is pauperized. Men and women enjoying Christian privileges and opportunities give God a "handout" and withhold from his cause and work that which belongs to him.

Christians of America would not be poorer, but richer; not less happy, but more happy, if they would obey God's plain and unmistakable teaching in the word. Truly has one said that the next great revival needed is a revival in Christian giving, a revival in the sense and practice of stewardship. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." (2 Cor. 16: 2.)—Selected.

OUR MESSAGES

H. C. Hale preached twice at Green Street, this city, last Lord's day.

Is your congregation supporting an evangelist to preach in destitute places?

Leslie G. Thomas preached at both services at Waverly-Belmont last Lord's day.

Any man who has a proper appreciation of the church will not join anything else.

C. D. Crouch is in a good meeting with the Richland Creek congregation, this city, John P. Lewis, of the David Lipscomb College, preached at Hill's Chapel, near Nolensville, Tenn., last Sunday.

L. W. Thompson, Hot Springs, South Dakota, May 7: "I am preaching for the Riverside Church at this place."

Married, near Lavergne, Tenn., on May 8, 1925. Peyton Simmons and Thelma Goodwin, James A. Allen officiating.

Norman N. Davidson preached at Lindsley Avenue, this city, last Lord's-day morning, and James A. Allen preached at night.

S. H. Hall preached at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day to two good audiences, with four added by statement.

The meeting at Sixth Avenue and Buchanan Street, this city, continues this week, with Andy T. Ritchie doing the preaching.

- H. Leo Boles preached two excellent sermons at the Twelfth Avenue Church, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night.
- C. E. W. Dorris preached at the residence of Mr. Sam Houghley, on the Cumberland River, near Sandersville Ferry, last Lord's day.
- B. W. Bigham, Ballinger, Texas, May 11: "I have been a regular reader of the Gospel Advocate since 1892—about thirty-three years."
- A. B. Lipscomb will deliver the commencement sermon for the Fort Deposit, Ala., high school, and will also speak Sunday evening for the church.

Homer Davis, Abilene, Texas, May 6: "The Blanket meeting closed on Sunday night. Eleven obeyed the Master—six baptized and five restored. I go next to Canadian, Texas."

- C. C. Brown, Daytona, Fla., May 7: "I preached two discourses last Lord's day, with one addition. Others will soon step out on the Lord's side, for which we give the Lord thanks."
- F. B. Srygley closed a splendid meeting with the Ridgedale congregation, Chattanooga, Tenn., last Sunday night. There were large audiences, with one haptized, and two to become identified with the congregation.
- H. F. Pendergrass, Birmingham, Ala., May 6: "Please announce, through the Gospel Advocate, my change of address from 6808 Sherman Avenue, Houston, Texas, to 308 St. Charles Avenue, Birmingham, Ala."
- T. Q. Martin is in a splendid meeting with the Grandview Heights congregation, this city, with one baptism and one to become identified with the congregation. Brother Martin's meeting is announced to close Thursday night of this week.
- I. V. Manly, of Velma, Okla., will be in West Tennessee a part of June and all of July and wishes to hold at least two mission meetings. Any places or churches which may desire his services for these meetings should address him at once at Velma, Okla.

The church of Christ at Gary, Fla., is planning for a meeting in the near future and would like to know of some congregation that has a number of discarded songbooks they would like to dispose of. We are using the "'Revival Gems' combined with 'Pearls of Song.'" If we could secure enough of these to make two hundred—as we will need about that many—we would be glad, but will consider any good scriptural book. Address P. G. Millen, 310 East Park Avenue, Tampa, Fla., giving prices and name of book.

Willie Hunter, New Orleans, La., May 5: "The church at New Orleans has just closed a good meeting, with D. H. Friend doing the preaching. Eight were baptized, one was restored, and the church was much strengthened and encouraged."

Jake Hamilton, Alabama City, Ala., May 5: "Two good sermons from Carl Smith yesterday, with a mission meeting in the afternoon. R. E. L. Taylor will begin our meeting on May 17. This meeting has been well advertised, tracts and personal work included."

- I. A. Douthitt, Sedalia, Ky., May 5: "I have just finished reading 'What Was Nailed to the Cross?' or, Is the Seventh-day Sabbath Binding on Christians?' by F. W. Smith. I believe this is one of the best little booklets I have ever seen on this subject. I wish every Christian could read it."
- A. S. Landis, Macon, Ga., May 8: "Our tent meeting closed on Friday, May 1. There were five additions, one restoration, and two to place membership. At the close of prayer meeting on Wednesday night a Methodist was baptized as a result of truth learned at the tent. We expect others. J. D. Derryberry directed the song services in this meeting."
- "Smiles and Tears" is a book of poems, written by G. B. Dooley, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn. Brother Dooley, who is fifty-eight years of age, has been crippled for fourteen years, and has the indorsement of some of the best men in Lawrenceburg. His book is filled with splendid poetry and sells for one dollar a copy. Kindly address G. B. Dooley, Lawrenceburg, Tenn.
- W. N. Abernathy, Westport, Tenn., May 8: "A certain brother has furnished the means and the preacher is ready to do some mission work in West Tennessee or near-by territory, provided the place is actually destitute and there is prospect of making the work permanent. No need to plant the seed where the crop cannot be cultivated. Address W. N. Abernathy, Westport, Tenn."
- P. L. Copeland, St. Augustine, Fla., May 9: "R. C. White, assisted by J. D. Derryberry as song leader, began a meeting for the church at this place last Lord's day. This is a mission point, but to date we have found six who claim to be members of the one body not found heretofore. The interest is good, and we are praying that the meeting may be a great success for the cause in this town."
- A. R. Hill, Avon Park, Fla., May 6: "The prayer meeting at Sweetwater last week was well attended and much interest was manifested in the study of the Bible. Both services were well attended here last Lord's day. I was with the few Christians at Frostproof in the afternoon. They will meet for worship from house to house every Sunday now. I am much encouraged over the outlook there."
- J. P. Sewell, Shady Dell, Route 5, Fort Worth, Texas, May 6: "The Southside meeting was good. Brethren Bills and Bost did their work well as preacher and song leader. Practically the entire congregation worked faithfully each day. There were about twenty additions to the congregation—sixteen by baptism. Our Bible school reached two hundred and seventy-seven last Lord's day, a growth from one hundred and thirty-five in about three months. We are at the corner of College Avenue and Leuda Street. Worship with us when in the city."

charles T. Powell, Woodbury, Tenn., April 21: "I am only expressing the same as others have when I say that I delight to read the Gospel Advocate. I enjoy every article. The Advocate, no doubt, is wielding untold influence. I would I were able to place it in every home, especially in the homes of those who are not able to pay. Heretofore I have been teaching in the summer and fall, but I have decided to give this time to preaching. If any congregations need my assistance, I will be glad to do my part, for I realize that the gospel is needed to be proclaimed to all people."

M. C. Cuthbertson, Dallas, Texas, May 6: "The work at the Garrett Avenue church of Christ, in Dallas, has rached the point that we are now ready to enter our new building. Garrett Avenue will cease to be after next Lord's day. The congregation will move to its new building, corner Sears Street and Summitt Avenue, Northeast Dallas. Our work started with this congregation about twenty-one months ago. At that time we had about eighty-eight members and a Bible school of fifty or sixty. We now have about one hundred and fifty members and a Bible school of one hundred and thirty. I enjoy the Gospel Advocate very much, and I think it is doing a fine work. May God give you courage to always stand for the truth."

- A. B. Barret preached at Belmont Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.
- E. G. Cullum preached at Trinity Lane, this city, last Lord's day.

David Thompson, Mayfield, Ky., May 5: "Two good services here last Sunday, with the best audiences in some weeks. A good service at Mount Olivet in the afternoon."

A. M. Plylar, Jasper, Ala., May 7: "I am just home from Lamar County, Ala., where I preached on Saturday night and three times on Sunday. These brethren have a mind to work."

James A. Allen and Everett Woodroof are announced to begin a tent meeting on the South Campus, the old Peabody grounds, this city, next Lord's-day night. All are cordially invited.

R. D. Smith, Terrell, Texas, May 4: "There was a good interest in our meetings yesterday. One more lady made the confession at the morning hour and was baptized at the close of the evening service."

Furnished Rooms Wanted.—I want to correspond with some one near the Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., with reference to furnished rooms and a garage, with the view of doing light housekeeping this summer. Address E. S. Samuels, principal of Enid High School, Enid, Miss.

- E. C. Coffman, Houston, Texas, May 4: "Large crowds attended both services at the First Church yesterday. Two were baptized, one restored, and one added by statement. This makes a total of ninety-three additions since last June. We hope to pass the century mark by the close of the year."
- W. F. Lemmons, Roxton, Texas, May 4: "Please state that my address is changed from Box 245, Pecan Gap, Texas, to Nashville, Tenn., General Delivery. I am in a meeting at Roxton, and settled the church trouble yesterday, and the future prospects are bright. We will close here the middle of the week."
- Mrs. B. W. Davis, 939 Delmas Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., May 8: "Mr. Davis went to the hospital Tuesday afternoon. They reamputated his limb Wednesday. The operation was serious, but with the untiring hands and the prayers of many faithful ones he rallied and is improving. However, his condition is serious."
- · E. T. Brazzell, Manila, Ark., May 4: "I filled my regular appointment at Manila on Saturday night and on Lord's day and Lord's-day night. Large audiences and great interest. The cause here is growing fast, and in snite of the opposition we expect to press on in the good work until the people know the truth."
- G. P. Bowser (Christian), of Louisville, Ky., and the Rev. J. W. Terry (Baptist), of this city, began a sevendays' debate at the St. John Baptist Church, corner of Twelfth Avenue and Cedar Street, this city, last Monday. The subject of the debate is: "Which church is scriptural in origin, name, doctrine, and practice?"

Gordon H. Turner, Columbia, Tenn., May 5: "The girls of David Lipscomb College will present a delightful comedy drama in the auditorium of the Central High School building at Columbia on Friday night, May 15. The college quartet will sing on this occasion also. There will be no admission. The program will begin promptly at eight o'clock."

"Christian Unity—How Promoted, How Destroyed. Faith and Opinion," by D. Lipscomb, is the most complete, the clearest, and the ablest discussion of the question of faith and opinion, written by an uninspired man. Sixty-four pages, heavy paper cover; price, only ten cents. Congregations would do well to buy them and distribute them among the members.

We kindly request the elders of congregations to publicly call the attention of the congregations to the great good to be derived from having the Gospel Advocate come into their homes. No man can estimate the results of having a good religious journal enter the homes of people every week. The Advocate is the oldest and best journal devoted to the propagation of Bible Christianity.

Mrs. James L. Newman, Sales Creek, Tenn., May 8: "May 24 will be home-coming day for the church here in Sale Creek. It has been fifteen years since the congregation first met in its present building. Some who helped to build the house have gone to sleep in Jesus; others are away. Dinner will be served on the ground. We trust that all who can will be with us. Leslie G. Thomas will hold our meeting, beginning on the fifth Lord's day in August."

All of the great reformers who pleaded for a return to the apostolic order of things refused to worship with instrumental music. Nothing can eliminate this significant fact.

Men who are preaching for the empty honor of being considered great orators never do much in the way of converting sinners. To preach so as to save a soul from death is inestimably better than to make a reputation as the greatest orator on earth.

Send us $1.50 for "The Profitable Word," by J. C. McQuiddy. A collection from the writings of J. C. McQuiddy, carefully compiled by A. B. Lipscomb. Brother McQuiddy was a talented and vigorous writer, and all who give "The Profitable Word" a careful reading will be greatly repaid.

J. W. Dunn, Jacksonville, Texas, May 4: "Our mission meeting has been fine. More than forty people will meet on Lord's days in the Odd Fellows' Hall for worship. This meeting will close on Wednesday night. Many people around Jacksonville have attended, with from two to six ministers at each service. I am doing the preaching, while C. M. Moser is looking after the song service. This is the first effort under the new East Texas tent, and all are happy at the results thus far."

The Gospel Advocate deeply regrets to inform its readers of the death of Dr. Carey E. Morgan, the pastor of the Vine Street Christian Church, this city. Dr. Morgan suffered a stroke of paralysis last Saturday evening at 6:30 and passed away at 1:30 Sunday morning. Funeral services were conducted at the Ryman Auditorium on Tuesday afternoon by W. E. Ellis, of Paris, Ky. Dr. Morgan was a genial and lovable man and was widely known. We extend our most sincere sympathy to his family.

Herbert E. Winkler, Nashville, Tenn., May 4: "My brothers, Norman and Grover, who were with me in the Pulaski automobile wreck, Sunday night, April 19, and I will soon have recovered enough to be on duty again building the church house at Albany, Ala. I preached at Green Street, this city, that day and was returning to Albany, to be on duty Monday morning, when the lights on our car suddenly went out, and before the car could be brought to a stop we dropped off a bridge and, turning bottom upwards, fell twelve feet into a creek, only one of us escaping without broken bones."

"Those conducting the tent meeting in Nelmar Terrace wish to announce that Evangelist R. C. White, of Nashville, Tenn., who is assisted by J. D. Derryberry, is a forceful speaker and capable of giving lessons beneficial to all who attend. In his sermon last night he took as his text, 'What think ye of Christ? whose son is he?' He dwelt upon prophecies concerning the divinity of Christ and showed that, according to history and the Bible, Jesus was not a mere man, but was the Son of God and the Savior of men. He showed further that when the judgment is set all must face Christ and confess him to be Lord, to the glory of God." (St. Augustine Evening Record, May 6.)

- C. L. Taylor, Petrolia, Texas, May 1: "The meeting at Byers, Texas, closed last night with an overflow crowd. The Methodist Church, in their customary manner, began a meeting to keep the people from hearing the gospel, but to no avail. Byers has been dubbed the hardest place in this country to get a hearing, but we got it. Our building was too small from the start. Tice Elkins, of Temple, Okla., did the preaching, and to say it was done exactly right is to say nothing strange to those who have heard him. Fifteen were baptized and one took membership. There is now at Byers a fine little congregation with a happy outlook. Brother Elkins goes to Ryan, Okla., to begin to-night. I will preach here at home next Lord's day. We praise God for all his goodness."
- day. We praise God for all his goodness."

 S. E. Templeton, Amarillo, Texas, May 4: "On last Thursday night I closed a very interesting meeting in Lockney, Texas, with four baptisms and one restoration. The meeting was in progress for twelve days and nights. After August 31 I shall give my time to protracted-meeting work only. I have been doing local work for a number of years, holding only a few meetings each season. But before moving to Oklahoma and Texas at least half of my time was spent in meeting work in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Georgia. The Lord willing, I shall be pleased to assist any congregation in a meeting at any time, should my services be desired. My permanent address is P. O. Box 474, Amarillo, Texas. I shall be pleased to hold meetings anywhere my services may be desired. At present I am doing local work with the Tenth and Fillmore Streets Church, Amarillo, Texas."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, F. D. Srygley, and J. C. McQuiddy.

EDITORIAL

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Our "protracted meeting"-series of meetings-began April 19 and ended May 3. While there were only three additions to the "one body," likewise to our local church, or congregation, we consider it a great success. Hardeman did the preaching, and that is equivalent to saying the preaching was as good as the best. We hope to reap good results from Brother Hardeman's sowing from now till September 22, at which time Brother G. C. Brewer is booked to begin a series of meetings with us.

Brethren at Memphis, Tenn., where Brother Hardeman is booked for a series of meetings in the near future, recently wrote me for my opinion of him, as a preacher. My reply was, "I think there is no greater preacher than Brodie Hardeman," and I am of the same opinion still; but I believe Brodie is not one whit better than Grovereither of them as good as the other, if not better.

Brother Hardeman had fine attendance and good attention all the time, many who attend our regular services once a week, and likewise many who, I think, had never been in the house before, not missing even one of his sermons. He storms the strongholds of sin and assails wickedness in high places with a fearlessness calculated to convince all that he is in fullest sympathy with the peerless apostle Paul when he triumphantly exclaims: "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

Brother Hardeman's preaching is logical, scriptural, clear, concise, and convincing. He sometimes says: "Now, I know not what you think about it, nor do I care; but that's what the Bible says about it, and that satisfies me." He never resorts to sacrilegious tricks or unholyroller claptrap, but always manifests due regard for the dignity of the cause of Christ and the sacredness of his word. He is strong physically, as well as morally, mentally, and spiritually, and he both purposes and proposes to preserve his physical strength by prudent living, the persuasive power of pies, puddings, and promiscuous pastry to the contrary notwithstanding. He recognizes the wisdom and importance of Solomon's admonition: "When thou sittest to eat with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee: and put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite." (Prov. 23: 1, 2.) Though strongly socially inclined, he makes no social engagements that he believes may even possibly, not to say probably, prevent his making proper preparation for preaching. Though he has traveled extensively, he rarely refers to his travels in preaching. Though scholarly, he never makes the slightest unnecessary display of his learning. He simply preaches the word.

He neither worries nor wastes time over "the oppositions of science falsely so-called;" but he does clearly explain the meaning of fundamentalism and moderism as applied to religion from a Christian point of view, the former being God's eternal truth; the latter, infidelity.

Paul exhorted Timothy to "preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine," all of which Brother Hardeman does. He also manifests due regard for the following admonition and instruction from the same source: "But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes. And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, putient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth; and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will." (2 Tim. 2: 23-26.)

IS HE CONSISTENT?

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

We have a brother who started out with great determination to oppose the individual cup in the Lord's Supper, but he soon found that he was up against trouble in his own practice, as he had been using two or more cups. The argument was soon made against the brother that if when it is said, "And he took a cup, and gave thanks, and gave to them, saying, Drink ye all of it," that there was only one cup used, then it would be as sinful to have two cups as it would to have twenty. The brother seems to recognize the justice of this argument and tries to fence against it in the following way:

Some have been unable to see consistency in my position in making no fight against two cups, yet determinedly opposing the individual cups. But my position is consistent and was not jumped at without a careful study of God's word. There is a difference in spirit and purpose between the use of the two cups and the individual cups. between the use of the two cups and the individual cups. Two cups are used mostly as a matter of custom. Somebody started it, and nobody knows who or when. The spirit of the worship is not changed. A large number drink from the same cup and think only of the death of the Lord. But the introduction of individual cups is a direct and deliberate attempt to stop all real communion of the blood of Christ in the worship. Such a spirit could only be developed in an age of worldly wisdom, lukewarnness, and lack of brotherly love and lack of reverence for the New Testament. Technically, two cups are unauthorthe New Testament. Technically, two cups are unauthorized; but as the spirit of the institution is not changed, I think best to make no fight here.

We have a case similar to this in the New Testament. Paul circumcised Timothy because of the Jews in the neighborhood. (Acts 16: 3.) Left alone, Paul would not have circumcised any one. But as it was a Jewish custom, not a law of God at that time, and as Paul judged it would do more harm than good to try to change the custom, he submitted to it.

But that it spread no further, Paul absolutely refused to circumcise Titus, who was a Greek. "But not even Titus who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised: and that because of false brethren privily brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty be circumcised: and that because of false brethren privily brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage: to whom we gave place in the way of subjection, no, not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you." (Gal. 2: 3-5.)

Paul submitted to the circumcision of one man and absolutely refused to submit in another case, very similar, but still slightly different, and I can do the same thing in regard to cups, and be consistent and scriptural.

The brother says: "Some have been unable to see consistency in my position in making no fight against two cups, yet determinedly opposing the individual cup." Why does the brother say some have been unable to see his consistency? There is no one who can see a thing that does not exist. There may be some who think they can see a thing that does not exist, but it is impossible for any one to see consistency where there is none. The brother himself does not see it; he only thinks he does. One had as well argue that he can see a mountain where there is none as to argue that he can see consistency where there is none.

The brother undertakes to prove that he is consistent by what the apostle Paul did, but this would not prove it. If it proved anything on the subject (which it does not), it would prove that Paul was inconsistent, rather than that he is consistent. I never like to hear a man trying to prove that he is consistent. I much prefer to see one prove that he is right. When did Paul ever try to prove that he was consistent? The man who does much of that kind of work is usually trying harder to take care of himself than he is to take care of the truth. One might be consistent all of his life and be wrong, while he might be inconsistent and be right part of the time. Who cares whether this brother is consistent or not on the one cup or two, since he is wrong about it? When Jesus took bread and gave thanks, it was the bread that is mentioned, and not the container; and so, when he took the cup and gave thanks for it, it was the contents of the cup for which he gave thanks, and not the container. While the brother makes quite an effort to take care of his own consistency and introduces Paul to prove that he is consistent, he seems not to care whether he makes Paul inconsistent or not. I have more interest in Paul's writings than I have in the brother's, and I shall not sit quietly by and see him misrepresent the apostle and make no effort to correct him.

The brother says: "There is a difference in spirit and purpose between the use of the two cups and the individual cups." It will be noted that he does not say there might be a difference, but that there is a difference. How does he know about the "spirit and purpose" of the one who uses the one cup, the individual cup, or the company who use the two cups? "For who among men knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of the man, which is in him?" (1 Cor. 2: 11.) This very consistent brother must know, for he says there is a difference in the "spirit and purpose" between the two. How does he know this unless he knows the spirit and purpose of his brethren?

The brother says he did not jump at his conclusion "without a careful study." I do not know how he reached the conclusion that he knew the spirit and purpose of his brethren unless he did jump at it. In his great research and careful study of this question, he must have overlooked the apostle's statement.

The brother excuses himself for using two cups without divine authority on the ground of custom. Very well; if he will wait a while, it may be the custom to use the individual cup; and if custom can make two cups right, it might make them all right. If not, why not?

The brother says "technically" two cups are unauthorized. How does he know it is only "technically" done? If two cups are unauthorized, they are unauthorized. I wish the brother had told us by what course of reasoning he reached the conclusion that it was only technically done. And if two cups are unauthorized only technically, how does he know but that the individual cup is unauthorized technically? He seems to think if it is only technically unauthorized, that it is really authorized; and if that be true, the world ought to be able to know when anything is only technically unauthorized.

The brother gives this as his reason for making no fight against the two cups, when, as a matter of fact, all thoughtful readers will naturally believe that he makes no fight here because it would be a case of suicide to do it.

I do not blame the brother for refusing to commit suicide, but I do blame him for trying to get Paul in the same condition that he is in. Paul did not circumcise Timothy with only the purpose to please the Jews, but he also had n lawful reason for doing so. The law of Moses was both a civil and religious law. The religious and typical law of Moses was abolished at the death of Christ, but the civil law lasted until the nation was destroyed. Paul enjoins upon all Christians the duty to keep whatever civil law they are under; and since it was known that Timothy's mother was a Jew, and since Timothy was to be in Judea, where the civil law was binding upon all the Jews, it was necessary that all Jews be circumcised, for circumcision was a part of both the civil and the religious law. This was the reason Paul circumcised Timothy, and it was also the reason why he refused to circumcise Titus. I hope the brother, in his effort to excuse himself for his contradictory position on the cup, will not put the inspired apostle in the same condition.

The brother must have given great study to the question, since he can see in the actions of the apostle in circumcising Timothy and refusing to circumcise Titus a reason for favoring two cups and opposing twenty.

'I confess I have never studied the subject enough to see this. My idea is that the brother will do more good if he will use his time and effort in preaching the gospel, and not give so much study to a distinction without a difference.

THE LORD'S-DAY WORSHIP. No. 1. BY F. W. SMITH.

There is not a more important subject that could engage our attention than the above, and I regret that the following request could not have been complied with before now:

Lott, Texas, March 16, 1925.—F. W. Smith, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Brother Smith: I should be glad for you to take up the Lord's-day worship and write an article on the significance of each item in the worship. Hoping that you may see fit to do this soon, I am, Yours in Christ, R. E. GRIFFITH.

To get before us the exact data regarding this most important matter, we should have the divine record—viz.: "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and the prayers." (Acts 2: 42.) This was affirmed of those who were added to the church on the day of Pentecost, for it is said: "They then that received his word were baptized: and there were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls." (Acts 2: 41.) These Christianized Jews had come into a new life that could be developed only by doing what is affirmed of them in verse 42, and what was true of them in this respect is true of all who are baptized into Christ. Hence, we note first,

- 1. Negatively speaking, they did not continue in the law of Moses, for that had been abrogated in the death of Christ by being nailed to the cross. "Having blotted out the bond written in ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us: and he hath taken it out of the way, nailing it to the cross." (Col. 2: 14.)
- 2. They did not continue in the teaching of John the Baptist, for his was simply a preparatory ministry, preparing those who accepted his teaching to believe on the Lord Jesus when he should come. "John baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him that should come after him, that is, on Jesus." (Acts 19: 4.)
- 3. They continued in the teaching of the apostles, into which they had "entered" upon their faith, repentance, and baptism. These brought them into a new state that imposed upon them new and holy relations with sacred obligations. How completely this harmonizes with the delegated authority and commission of the apostles—viz.: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28: 19, 20.)

This narrows the investigation of the nature of the worship ordained to be observed on the Lord's day, or the first day of the week, to the teaching of the apostles. Whatever, therefore, the apostles did not teach those baptized, beginning with Pentecost, to observe as worship to God, is vata and sinful.

ITEMS MENTIONED.

The "teaching" of the apostles covers a wide field, dealing with the whole course and conduct of the Christian life, or the threefold duty of man—viz., "to live soberly, righteously, and godly." (Tit. 2: 12.) Hence, the items mentioned in Acts 2: 42 constitute but a small part of their teaching, and these pertain to acts of "worship" appointed in connection with the first day of the week.

As to the "order" in which these items are to be observed, we have no direct teaching, and nothing from which a necessary inference can be drawn that there was a fixed order. All the things mentioned are to be attended to; but as to which should come first, we are not told. Consequently no one should devise a "fixed" or "an ironclad" order, and bind it on the children of God, as though God had commanded it.

They continued in "fellowship;" and while the word 'koinonia," translated "fellowship," is, in a few places in the New Testament, limited to the contribution of the saints, as in Rom. 15: 16 and 2 Cor. 9: 13, yet its full meaning is "common participation" in all that pertains to religious worship and service. Christians are said to have fellowship with Christ, the Holy Spirit, each other, and the Father. (See 1 Cor. 1: 9; 2 Cor. 13: 14; 1 John 1: 7; 1 John 1: 3.) In the light of this fact, I cannot see how the term "fellowship," when the saints assemble on the Lord's day to worship, can be limited to the contribution on that occasion. That they did contribute when assembled on the first day of the week is made plain: "Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper, that no collections be made when I come." (1 Cor. 16: 2.)

It is scarcely necessary to argue that the congregations of the New Testament had a common treasury in which they placed offerings for the maintenance of the poor and other necessary expenses connected with the worship and service of God. For the maintenance of the temple worship, and repairing of the temple when needed, there was a common treasury. (2 Chron. 24: 8-14; 2 Kings 12: 16.) "And he sat over against the treasury." (Mark 12: 41.) For the necessary expenses of the ministry of Jesus and his apostles they had a common treasury, with Judas as the treasurer. (John 12: 6; 13: 39.)

But to continue in "fellowship," in its fullest meaning, is not confined to the worship on the first day of the week. The saints should have not only constant, but a deep, spiritual fellowship with God, Christ, the Holy Spirit, and each other, at all times and in all places. A realization of this fact will prove a safeguard against visiting places or engaging in anything contrary to the teaching of the apostles.

The contribution, as one element of fellowship when the saints assemble on the first day of the week, is, as a rule, very poorly done. The divine rule is, "as he may prosper" (1 Cor. 16: 2), and each individual is left to deal with his own conscience in the matter. All know or have a pretty clear conception regarding the matter of ability, and should act with the divine rule in mind.

I close this phase of the subject with the following: "Nothing is binding on Christians, save what is found in the new covenant. All that was good in former dispensations was brought into this. We may use the old dispensation and the decisions under it to see how to interpret the laws of the new covenant, just as the courts go back to laws and decisions under the old constitutions as examples to interpret under the new constitution. No specific amount is required under the new, because God only desires that which is willingly given from the heart. We may safely reason, as God required one-tenth under Moses, when he did so much more for us in Christ, he would expect more from us; but if we cannot do it willingly, he does not wish any of it. I know of no way of determining how much we must give, except for every one to study these examples and the gospel of the Son of God, and give what he can do cheerfully and gladly. This does not suit us sometimes, but it seems to have suited God, and we had best conform our views of what is best to his law and order." (David Lipscomb.)

A WORTHY WOMAN.

BY E. A. ELAM.

"A worthy woman who can find? For her price is far above rubies." (Prov. 31: 10:)

God's models, either in the natural or spiritual world, are perfect. He is the greatest artist who can most nearly put nature in all its symmetry and beauty on the canvas, and he is the greatest servant of God who most closely follows the divine example.

God gives sublime examples of faith in both the Old Testament and in the New Testament. The eleventh chapter of Hebrews contains a shining list of these most worthy examples.

Jesus is the great Exemplar, the perfect Model, shining as "the Sun of righteousness" upon the world—the sun which never sets. Whoever follows him "shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

As in the flower and fruit, the tree and the forest, the dewdrop and the fountain, the river and the ocean, the hill and the mountain, the valley and the plain, the clouds and the sky, the stars and the moon and the sun, God has placed before all women his perfect model for their emulation. This is found in the thirty-first chapter of Proverbs, in the first five verses of the second chapter of Titus, in several verses of the fifth chapter of Second Timothy, and in many other passages in which God gives woman's proper sphere and true mission. In these passages God states his purpose in the creation of woman, which is to be a help suited to man's real need.

The examples of many godly women, shining forth from the pages of the Bible, show that weman has filled and can yet fill her true mission; how she has proved herself, and can yet prove herself, to be the blessing her Creator intended her to be.

On the other hand, it matters not how refined and cultured, how well educated and brilliant women may be, or how well they may function in other spheres, if they fail as wives and mothers, as home builders and home-keepers, and otherwise to fill their true mission, they blasphene the word of God. (Tit. 2: 5.)

Contrasting the self-sacrificing, heroic, and loving service of God's model woman with the life the large majority of women are now living, we are not astonished that the Lord asks, "A worthy woman who can find?" or at the declaration, "Her price is far above rubies."

To note this contract—how women, old and young, neglect and even abandon home, seek pleasure and amusement, feel no sense of responsibility, and strive to dress and act as men—is simply shocking. It is distressing, also, to note that as true, faithful, and worthy women are fast passing out, there are very few arising to take their places. This is not the training and purpose of the rising generation of young women.

One more landmark was removed and one more faithful woman was added to the list of the ones who have gone when our beloved Sister Talley, of Lebanon, Tenn., died.

Of Sister Talley her son-in-law, and our good friend, Judge E. G. Walker, writes:

Dear Brother Elam: It is the desire of the children that you write for the Gospel Advocate a sketch of the life, character, and death of Mrs. Talley. You knew her for a long time, loved her and her children, and they love you.

Mrs. Talley was born on November 17, 1845, and died on April 6, 1925, at the home of her daughter at Lebanon. She was born and reared, married, reared her family, and lived and died in Wilson County. She had been a member of the church for over fifty years. She was the widow of the late Spencer B. Talley, with whom she lived for over fifty years. Four children—Mrs. A. N. Trice, C. C. Talley, Mrs. J. W. Allen, and Mrs. E. G. Walker—survive her. A son, Marion, died about thirty-five years ago. She was the daughter of Major M. B. and Elizabeth Kittrell.

She came to live with us thirteen years ago, and her presence in our home has been a blessing to me and to my children. Her quiet, Christian life has left its imprint on the minds and hearts of my family and has drawn me closer to God.

She loved me as her own child, and when death was slowly coming on she often invoked the blessings of God upon me and my family. The day she died she was conscious for a short while, and called for our baby, Frances, her namesake, and had her lifted up to her bed, and she pressed that innocent little head against her tired, struggling heart and asked God to bless and keep her dear little life. She often admonished me to walk humbly, love mercy, and do justice.

Her favorite chapters were Rom. 12, 1 Cor. 13, and the Twenty-third Psalm.

A good woman has gone, and, as has been said by some one, if every one for whom she did some loving-kindness or spoke some cheering words had brought a blossom to her grave, she would sleep beneath a wilderness of flowers.

We love you, Brother Elam; we appreciate your sermon preached at her funeral; we value your friendship; and we trust that God will spare you for a long life of continued service.

Sister Talley made the confession of her faith in Christ under the preaching of Brother J. M. Kidwill, and in repentance was baptized by him. She worshiped the Lord with the congregation at Bellwood, Tenn., until she, with Brother Talley, removed to Lebanon. In faithfulness to God she lived in all relationships—as neighbor, friend, daughter, wife, and mother. Christianity with her was an everyday living reality—daily loving, daily serving, an abiding comfort, sweet peace, and lasting joy.

Sister Talley was gentle by nature, but she cultivated and possessed true womanly and Christian characteristics. She was courageous, steadfast, firm in her convictions of right, but unpretentious, free from vanity and worldly pride, and made no display of righteousness. Her influence for good fell upon all about her as the silent but allpervading heat of the sun. Her children rose up and called her blessed. The heart of her husband safely trusted in her, and he truly trusted in her. She did him good and not evil all the days of her life. She loved the Bible—that is, loved to read it and was delighted to hear it preached. She read it daily; and when she became too sick and feeble to read it herself, some one of the family, usually her son-in-law, read it to her.

Brother and Sister Talley enjoyed the blessing of seeing their children grow up and settle about them, useful men and godly women. They now possess the rich inheritance of the good name left them by their parents. The sweet memory of father and mother is embalmed in the memory of their children.

It is true my family and I loved Brother and Sister Talley, and we still love their family. Our association and work together in the church for so long have woven the chain which binds our hearts in Christian love. I preached the funeral sermon when Marion was buried; also, when Brother Talley passed on a few years ago.

The exceeding great and precious promises of God to the righteous living and concerning the righteous dead are so numerous that our attempts to apply them in comforting the bereaved is like standing amid so many flowers in a garden of beauty, resplendent with loveliness.

One promise which embraces all things that can come into the Christian's life is: "And we know that to them that love God all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose." (Rom. 8: 28.) To respond to the gospel call and to work according to God's plan for the accomplishment of his purpose in loving obedience to him is to have the assurance that absolutely all things—health or sickness, plenty or poverty, friends or foes, life or death—work together in the goodness and power of God for our good.

To the Christian death has no sting, the grave no victory. God has given him the victory through the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ through death has brought "to naught him that had the power of death, that is, the devil," and has delivered "them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." (Heb. 2: 14, 15.) "For we know that if the earthly house of our tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal, in the heavens." The righteous dead are in the care and keeping of God, for those who "are fallen asleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Then the righteous living will be changed "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," and all together shall "be caught up in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words," (See 1 Thess. 4: 13-18.)

These promises are very comforting, causing us "to rejoice greatly with joy unspeakable and full of glory." (1 Pet. 1: 8.)

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; for their works follow with them." (Rev. 14: 13.) They are blessed forevermore. "Precious in the sight of Jehovah is the death of his saints." (Ps. 116: 15.)

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

Please explain, through the "Query Department" of the Gospel Advocate, 1 Tim. 5: 5-9. Did Paul consider a woman a widow if her husband was dead?—A SISTER IN CHRIST.

Yes. "Widow" here comes from the Greek word "cheera," which means "bereft." "Widows indeed" are those bereft of husband and who are truly destitute, being aged and helpless, having neither children nor grandchildren. They are wholly dependent in their helpless condition upon the church.

Please answer, through the Gospel Advocate, the following questions. (1) What is the Holy Ghost? Give all the information possible on this question. (2) What is it to blaspheme against the Holy Ghost?—X.

- 1. The Holy Spirit is the same as "Holy Ghost." The Holy Spirit is one member of the Godhead, which is constituted with God the Father, Christ the Son, and the Holy-Spirit. (See John 7: 39: Acts 2: 1-5; 19: 2; Rom. 5: 5.)
- 2. To blaspheme is to speak against. "Therefore I say unto you, Every sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Spirit shall not be forgiven. And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever shall speak against the Holy Spirit, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, nor in that which is to come." (Matt. 12: 31, 32.) "Verily I say unto you, All their sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and their blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme: but whosoever shall blaspheme against the Holy Spirit hath never forgiveness, but is guilty of an eternal sin; because they said, He hath an unclean spirit." (Mark 3: 28-30.)

Kindly answer the following questions through the Gospel Advocate. (1) Do the following scriptures contradict? "And the Lord said unto Moses, write thou these words. . . And he was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments," (Ex. 34: 27, 28.) Referring to the same writing, Moses says: "At that time the Lord said unto me, Hew the two tables of stone like unto the first. . . And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables which thou brakest. . . And he wrote on the tables, according to the first writing the ten commandments," (Deut. 10: 1-4.) How do these statements harmonize? Who did the writing? (2) What is the meaning of David's statement: "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me." (Ps. 51: 5.) (3) What is the "Jerusalem which is above, . . . which is the mother of us all? (Gal. 4: 26.) Are we born of that mother? (4) If the fact that John the Baptist was less than the least in the kingdom of God (Luke 7: 28) proves that he was not in the kingdom, then does not the fact that Paul was "less than the least of all saints" (Eph. 3: 8) prove that he was not a saint? If not, why not?—A. H. Smith, Dancy, Miss.

1. No. The Scriptures do not contradict. No two scriptures contradict. In Ex. 32: 16 we are told that the two first tables were the work of God and the writing was the writing of God; but here Moses is commanded to make tables of his own workmanship, and God promises o write on them the words which were on the first. It seems that Moses was commanded to write these words and that he wrote upon the tables. But in Deut. 10: 1-4 it is expressly said that God wrote the second tables as well as the first. We are to understand that Jehovah wrote upon the two tables. What Moses wrote was a copy of what Jehovah wrote on the tables. The copy that Moses wrote was made under the direction of God.

- 2. This verse has been relied upon to teach total depravity. It does not so teach. Paul says: "Among whom we also all once lived in the lusts of our flesh, doing the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature children of wrath, even as the rest." (Eph. 2: 3.) Again, Peter says: "Who in time past were no people, but now are the people of God: who had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy." (1 Pet. 2: 10.) Wickedness and sin were all about David, even from his birth. Temptation and allurements of sin were ever present with David as with us.
- 3. The figure of "mother" as used in this scripture does not necessarily mean that one is born of this "mother." One can be a "mother" to another without having given birth to that one.
- 4. The reasoning of the querist here is not sound. John the Baptist was not in the kingdom of God or church. The comparison used here is between the state of the Jewish nationality and the church or kingdom of God. The church is so much higher than the Jewish nationality that the least in the church is higher and greater than the greatest in the Jewish nationality. Under the law of Moses one is a servant, while in the church one is a child of God—a wide difference in the rank and relationship to God.

The phrase as used in Eph. 3: 8 expresses the humility of the apostle Paul. Because of the persecution which he had made against the church and because of the great mercy which he had obtained, he expresses his humility and unworthiness of God's great grace to him, and says that he is "less than the least of all the saints."

- (1) Did the priests who served in the tabernacle make an offering before bathing in the laver? Just what did they do before entering the holy place? Please state the order in which these things occurred. (2) Can bathing in the laver be a type of Christian baptism, as some have preached?—X.
- 1. No one could stand before Jehovah without being cleansed, or purified. All defilement of the flesh had to be removed before the priest could officiate at the altar. The high priest had his inauguration, and on the day of atonement bathed before each solemn act of propitiation. "And Jehovah spake unto Moses saying, Thou shalt also make a laver of brass, and the base thereof of brass, whereat to wash. And thou shalt put it between the tent of meeting and the altar, and thou shalt put water therein. And Aaron and his sons shall wash their hands and their feet thereat: when they go into the tent of meeting, they shall wash with water, that they die not; or when they come near to the altar to minister, to burn an offering made by fire unto Jehovah. So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not: and it shall be a statute forever to them, even to him and to his seed (Ex. 30: 17-21.) "And throughout their generations." he set the laver between the tent of meeting and the altar, and put water therein, wherewith to wash. And Moses and Aaron and his sons washed their hands and their feet thereat; when they went into the tent of meeting, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed; as Jehovah commanded Moses." (Ex. 40: 30-32.)
- 2. There is no scripture which indicates that "bathing in the laver" was a type of "Christian baptism." There is some similarity between the two, but there is nothing to indicate that it is a type. Allusions in the New Testament to the Jewish washings are frequently made. The scriptures indicated or quoted above show that the priest bad to wash before going to the altar or going into the tabernacle.

The closer a man gets to God, the more sensible does he become of his mistakes.

AT LAST.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And, in the winds from unseen spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown,

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant, Leave not its tenant when its walls decay; O Love Divine, O Helper ever present, Be thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting— Earth, sky, home's pictures, days of sun and shine, And kindly faces to my own uplifting The love which answers mine.

I have but thee, my Father! Let thy Spirit Be with me then to comfort and uphold; No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit, Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if, my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy abounding grace,
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place—

Some humble door among thy many mansions, Some sheltering shade where sin and sorrow cease, And flows forever through heaven's green expansions The river of thy peace.

There, from the music round about me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last, beneath thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

THE BOY THAT WOULD NOT LET HIS SISTER WANT.

A French paper says that Lucille Romee, a pretty little girl with blue eyes and fair hair, poorly but neatly clothed, was brought before the Sixth Court of Correction under a charge of vagrancy.

"Does any one claim you?" asked the magistrate.

"Ah, my good sir," said she, "I have no longer any friends. My father and mother are dead; I have only my brother James, but he is as young as I am. O, dear! What could he do for me!"

"The court must send you to the house of correction."

- "Here I am, sister—here I am—do not fear!" cried a childish voice from the other end of the court. And at the same time a little boy, with a sprightly countenance, started forth from amid the crowd and stood before the judge.
 - "Who are you?" said he.
 - "James Romee, the brother of this poor little girl."
 - "Your age?"
 - "Thirteen."
 - "And what do you want?"
 - "I come to claim Lucille."
 - "But have you the means of providing for her?"
- "Yesterday I had not, but now I have. Don't be afraid, Lucille."
 - "O, how good you are, James!"

"But let us see, my boy," said the magistrate. "The court is disposed to do all it can for your sister. However, you must give us some explanation."

"About a fortnight ago, sir," continued the boy, "my poor mother died of a bad cough, for it was very cold at home. We were in great trouble. Then I said to myself, I will become an artisan, and when I know a good trade I will support my sister. I went apprentice to a brush maker. Every day I used to carry her half my dinner, and at night I took her secretly to my room, and she slept on my bed, while I slept on the floor, wrapped in my blouse. But it appears the poor little thing had not enough to eat; for, unfortunately, one day, she begged on the boulevard. When I heard she was taken up, I said to myself: 'Come, my boy, things cannot last so; you must find something better.' I very much wished to become an artisan, but at last decided to look for a place. I have found a very good one, where I am lodged, fed, and clothed, and have twenty francs a month. I have also found a good woman who, for these twenty francs, will take care of Lucille and teach her needlework. I claim my sister."

"My boy," said the magistrate, "your conduct is very honorable. The court encourages you to persevere in this course, and you will prosper."

The court then decided to render up Lucille to James, and she was going from the bar to join her brother, when the magistrate smilingly said: "You cannot be set at liberty until to-morrow."

"Never mind, Lucille, I will come and fetch you early to-morrow." Then he said to the magistrate: "I may kiss her, may I not, sir?"

He then threw himself into the arms of his sister, and both wept warm tears of affection.—Selected.

DELIVERANCE.

What a wonderful word is this! In some way or other it finds its way into the experience of all. Who could not tell of hairbreadth escapes from a great calamity, or even death? The writer has had many such experiences. Many years ago, when quite a little chap, I remember making mud pies by the River Manifold when in flood. Reaching for some water, my head went giddy, and in a moment I was carried away downstream, as it seemed, to certain death. But the alarm was raised, swift feet went to the rescue, and the strong arms of the young village blacksmith bore me back to safety again. Need I say with what veneration, gratitude, and admiration the name of my timely deliverer has been held since? A few years ago, when paying a visit to my native village, passing through an old country lane, I heard the pleasant clang and ring of the blacksmith's hammer. What music to my ears! Where was the man who risked his life to save me from a watery grave?

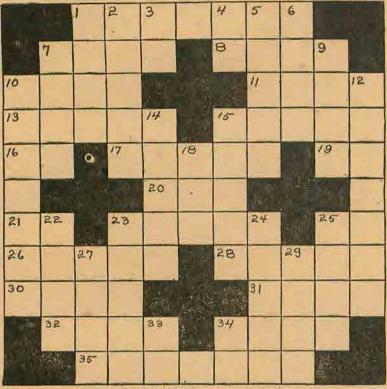

Much water had passed under the bridge, and many changes had taken place since then. Ruminating thus, I came to the door of the smithy and stood face to face with my old friend of over thirty years ago. What pen can describe the thought and emotion that thrilled my whole being! How empty were the words to express my thanks and gratitude! How great the debt that could never be repaid! We walked along the old rustic lane as he retold the story of my rescue, and as we parted my thoughts went to another deliverance which is the experience of all true Christians. We have been delivered from past sins, the present dominion of sin, and the future penalty of sin -destruction and death. Jesus, our great Savior, not only risked his life, but freely gave it up for all, even to suffering an agonizing death by crucifixion. The day will come when we shall all stand before him face to face. We shall look on him who was pierced. How shall we feel then? What emotions will sweep through the soul?

Will remorse and despair take possession of us, or shall we really love his appearing? What privilege is ours to follow on, never looking back, watching, praying, serving, pressing on until we meet our great Deliverer face to face, "all raptured through and through, in God's most holy sight!" With what joy should we prepare for the glorious time, "when, by His grace, we shall look on His face!"

—J. T. Bassett, in Apostolic Review.

BIBLE CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FOUR fairly long words compose the sides of this puzzle. The four square crosses balance the rest into evenly divided sections, so that most of the words are of four or five letters, and there are only a few two-letter spaces

How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or bad merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

HERMAN HAYNES WHEEL-HOUSE.

BY S. P. PITTMAN.

Death at any age or stage in one's life is sad. It is crushing to the parents to give back the precious babes they have been privileged to keep for a few days; but then, they are safe from molestation. It is heartbreaking to the children to "lay away" the lifeless bodies of "father" and "mother," and see their dust commingle with the common dust of Mother Earth; but then, they have had their day, have fulfilled their earthly destiny, and are ready to go.

But there is an inexplicable pathos when the family, bound together so lovingly by the strong tie of friendship, is called upon to part with a young man or young woman with a beautiful childhood in the past, having crossed the threshold of manhood or womanhood, facing the future with a glorious prospective career.

Such was the sad circumstance in the death of Herman Wheelhouse, of Rutherford County, Tenn. Having graduated with honor from the high school at Murfreesboro, in 1921, he entered the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, where he made a splendid record with both teachers and fellow students. He was devoted to his school work, and had his heart set on the completion of his course in June, and the entrance into his life's work. But his commencement came earlier than he anticipated, and his degree was conferred by a higher institution. Through sheer tenacity of purpose, it seems, he lingered on, hoping still, when all the rest had given up hope. It was pathetic to see his wasted body lying so long in the hospital at Knoxville, as he longed and prayed for recovery.

A sadly sweet feature in Herman's case was the remarkable devotion of his father, who sat by his bedside day after day and night after night for weeks and months in that city, away from home; and the affectionate devotion of his sisters, one of whom was with him much of the time. The mother had gone on some time before to the "Better Land;" so his father, C. G. Wheelhouse, and the two sisters, Mrs. Marvin Holt and Mrs. Woodson Mitchell are the nearest relatives left.

The funeral took place in Midland, near Fosterville, Tenn., and the interment in the Haynes burying ground. Brother C. M. Pullias made an appropriate talk at the funeral, and six of his fellow students of the university served as pallbearers.

Herman was born on September 28, 1902; obeyed the gospel at the age of fourteen; and died on December 15, 1924.

NEED A MEETINGHOUSE.

About ten years ago some interested Christians, with Sister J. Claude Martin, of Nashville, Tenn., induced Brother Henry T. King to go to Quebeck, Tenn., for the purpose of conducting a mission meeting. As a direct result of that meeting, there were ten baptisms, and also much favorable interest was aroused, which has continued until the present time, notwithstanding many discouragements. From the first the interest of those who assisted in starting this work has never waned, and they have sought opportunity to assist the brethren at Quebeck to permanently establish it.

A desirable location has been secured for the erection of a meetinghouse, with the restrictive clause in the deed, and the brethren are now anxious for assistance in building a modest house in which to worship "as it is written." The need is urgent and the pepole are in every way worthy. Help extended them will bear much fruit to the glory of our Lord.

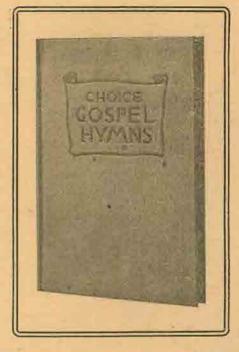

Besides Sister Martin, of Nashville, who contributed the lot upon which to build, the first contribution to the erection of this meetinghouse comes from Sister W. H. Vandyke, of Alamo, Tenn. Sister Vandyke, who worships with the Cairo congregation, near Alamo, sends two dollars and says: "I am now sending the widow's mite from mother and boys, and I am sending a hearty Godspeed to Sister J. Claude Martin in her efforts to plant the cause at Quebeck. My daily prayers and my every effort, though feeble they may be, as God knows my poor heart, is that all may come to a knowledge of the truths of the gospel in its fullness and that they may study to show themselves approved unto God, workmen that need not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth."

The brethren at Quebeck are poor and financially unable to build a meetinghouse; and as such a house is badly needed, we feel sure that many congregations, as well as individual brethren and sisters, would like to have a part in it. Brother King, who held the meeting already mentioned, says: "I want to add my word of personal guaranty and special appeal in behalf of these brethren at Quebeck. I know them, and know what Sister Martin has already done for them, and I assure the brethren of the integrity of this appeal."

We commend this very worthy appeal to the brethren. All who desire to have a part in assisting these brethren at Quebeck may send their donations to Mrs. J. Claude Martin, 2314 West End Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

From the Brethren

Corinth, Miss., April 29.—I am as busy as I can be each Lord's day, preaching at four different places, Florence being one of them. Brother Keeble, at the call of the white brethren, held a meeting there and a little band was started. I was asked by the white brethren to look after them and train them and teach them the way of the Lord. I have been trying to do so for the past two years. The white brethren bought them a lot with a house already on it for a preacher to live in and are building a meetinghouse for them. I want to say that the greatest work I ever saw done by the church of Christ among negroes is in Florence. It is wonderful, and we all should be thankful to the Lord.—J. Hannon.

Alma, Ark., April 28.—With about fifty other preachers, I enjoyed a feast of good things, temporally and spiritually, at the "get-together meeting" at Morrillton, April 20-25. I had two motives in attending this meeting—a desire to meet the different brethren I was assured would be there, and to assure myself as to the college before placing any of my children therein. I want to say that I am fully satisfied that we have no sounder or more loyal school anywhere than Harding College. The spiritual environment surrounding the school can be readily seen and felt whenever one comes in contact with either teachers or pupils. One of the pleasures afforded us while there was listening to the college quartet in several selections. This quartet is said to be the finest in the State. On my return I stopped over Lord's day (April 26) with the brethren at Clarksville. Not being able to satisfy them in two discourses, I have promised to give them two weeks in September. The work at Alma still moves forward. We are expecting our tent, and then to evangelize Crawford County.—C. C. McQuiddy.

Fresno, Cal., April 30.—On April 5

Fresno, Cal., April 30.—On April 5 the Nevada Avenue Church began a series of meetings, with G. Earl McCay doing the preaching, which continued till April 26, closing with a full house. We had decidedly the best attendance and attention that we have ever enjoyed here. Four young persons were baptized, and we trust the saints were strengthened and encouraged to more zeal and greater work. This was Brother McCay's first visit to these parts. He held a two-weeks' meeting at Armona, three weeks here, and began on Lord's-day evening at Dinuba. He makes no effort at a display of learning, eloquence, or oratory, but diligently and faithfully presents to his hearers the teaching of God's word on any subject under consideration and earnestly pleads with saint and sinner to accept and obey. We believe more interest will be taken in the study of the Word, which, of course, will increase and strengthen our faith. A lack of knowledge of God's word is the chief cause of so much worldly-mindedness, and hence a lack of spiritual growth and development among the professed followers of Christ. Good interest is being shown in our Bible studies, and especially are some young talents being developed. Brethren, if any of you have relatives or friends or know of any wandering members anywhere on the Pacific Coast, give us their names and addresses, and we will try to get in touch with them and do them good if possible. Success to the Gospel Advocate.—J. A. Craig.

Pensacola, Fla., May 1.—I am in an interesting meeting in Pensacola, with the congregation at the corner of Alcanez and Jackson Streets. The work in this city is due largely to the efforts of that wonderful man, J. A. Harding. For the past twenty years Brother W. T. Tracy has been a resident of this city and an untiring worker for the cause of Christ. For some years he labored with this congregation, and then began work in the western part of the city, where, through his efforts, with the assistance of some other faithful ones, there is a splendid congregation. Brother Tracy continues to work with that congregation. For five years Brother C. W. Landers has been laboring with the congregation I am assisting in the present meeting. He is an untiring worker and a preacher of splendid ability. With such preachers as W. T. Tracy and C. W. Landers in the city, the work can but prosper. Brother G. E. Shaffer, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., is directing the song service in the meeting. He is a young man of sterling qualities, with an abiding interest in the work of the Master, and does not confine his work in meetings to the directing of the song service, but uses his influence and talks with interested ones about living the Christian life. He tells me he has some open time which can be had for song work this summer. To the end that he may be of the assistance you may need in your meeting, address him as above, and have him with you in your meeting.—C. R. Nichol.

Camden, Ark., April 29.—The church at Camden is getting along nicely. In November, 1920, a few of us separated ourselves from the "digressives" and went to work. Brother R. L. Colley, one of our leading young preachers, held our first meeting. Brother Hugh Hogg, at that time of Stephens, Ark., conducted the song service. Since that time Brother Hogg has married, and he and his good wife are living in Camden and are a wonderful help to us in many ways. One month after we had our first meeting we bought a house and lot from the Catholic people, which is very well located, for two thousand dollars. The interest we have paid, with some improvements we have made, cost us, in all, about twenty-seven hundred dollars. Last week we had the pleasure of paying the last dollar of this debt. We are using lesson helps put out by the Gospel Advocate Company, and a great Bible help it is. The Lord willing, Brother Brooks Stell, of Delight, Ark., will begin a meeting for us on the third Sunday in May, to continue over the fifth Sunday. All who know Brother Stell know what we are going to have then. We are planning to have Brother Harvey W. Riggs, of Morrillton, Ark., locate with us about the first of June. We believe he will be able to do us much good. Brother Riggs is just finishing school at Harding College, situated at Morrillton. We ask the prayers of Christian people everywhere that we may press on in the good work of our Lord, ever keeping in mind the Golden Text of our lesson of April 26: "Be thou faithful unto death."—S. T. Garner.

A LETTER FROM JAPAN.

BY NELLIE STRATTON.

A letter which I received from Sister Lillie Cypert early in the year was so very interesting that I felt that others would like to read it, too. Here

It is awful to begin the new year by neglecting my letters, but that is by neglecting my letters, but that is just what I have done. When one doesn't understand a thing like that, it's difficult to pardon; so I'm going to tell you the reason.

Since I wrote you last, we have opened the Girls' School. Quite a humble beginning, to be sure; but even then, when every twist and turn is to be directed by one person, even to the cleaning, it's a pretty big job. I haven't been able to find a single Japanese helper who will go ahead without being directed. I don't mean, either, being given their tasks and then let go in their own strength; they must be held up and coached all along the way, just like holding a baby while it learns to walk. Therefore, it takes almost as much time to have anything done as it does to do it youranything done as it does to do it yourself. Anyway, we have the school opened. We have only three girls in opened. We have only three girls in the dormitory at present, but expect more when the new school year opens in April. We are teaching those we have the Bible every day. The little kindergarten is doing fine, the little kindergarten is doing fine, but I'm not giving as much time to it as I'd like to because of the other work. However, the teachers seem to be getting along very well. They are also studying the Bible. One of them comes to me for a lesson almost every day; the other one, who is a Christian, once every week.

The ladies' class keeps up interest, The ladies' class keeps up interest, and even now, when we are doing very little to teach them how to sew or knit, they come for the Bible study only, which shows they are interested in that.

We had a real surprise for Christmas. The church in Abilene, Texas, sent us many patterns, yards and yards of cloth, and loads of buttons, thread needles class nins and just

I must not forget to say that in each of the fine bundles they sent there were some personal things. Later they sent another box entirely personal. So many useful things, and things I really needed. Two woolen union suits and some woolen stockings were among the needed things.

I've waited toward the last of this letter because I don't know just how to thank you for the bexes you sent, the check for five dellars to pay the duty that I didn't have to pay at all and which I put in the general fund, also the generous check for one hundred and forty dollars. It was so very, very sweet of you, and the candy so good, the gown and stockings needed, and useful things, besides, how nice! Well, any way, I thank you beyond words to express, and the check has been the means of my being able to open the school now. Thank God for it, then also those who had a part in it.

In the evening, though, we had a wonderful surprise. My grocer boy brought us a lovely cake, and Brother McCaleb had a lovely dinner, which we had a part in; and just before we sat down to the table Miss Kennedy received a fine, big fruit cake from her home church, and it got here in perfect condition. When she put it on the table, we really began to realize it was Christmas. December 25 is her birthday; so we celebrated both at once.

THE NEW YORK MISSION.

BY E. E. SHOULDERS.

On Sunday morning, April 26, we had another very fine service. One addition by statement. It surely would be a great boom for the New York church if more Christians strong in faith and character could come to New York and live, at least for a year or two, until the work is more permanently established. We already have a goodly number of young Christians here, but, unfortunately, they are in the class that is by no means hot. I have done about all I know to do to reawaken them. The many alluring temptations of "little old New York" seem to have completely choked out the word and there is no more room for Christ in their hearts.

We had a very sweet service last Sunday (May 3). There were no additions, but everything just moved along so nicely. A splendid audience was assembled for worship, and the largest number at Bible study that we have had for some time.

But all the good things that might be said do not take away the responsibility of a lack of funds for the work. We are greatly in need of more support, but, due to so many appeals being sent through the papers, I have hesitated to say anything about it. I want to urge that more churches and individuals who are not contributing to this work begin now. We have on our records people who have been contributing to this work for the past five years; so why not others have a part with them? I do not feel like calling upon these good people who have been so faithful in their support for this mission to do any more than they are already doing. Our funds are inadequate. Are you ready?

Send your contributions to George M. McKee, treasurer, 1991 Broadway, New York, N. Y. I assure you that your donation, whatever it may be, will be deeply appreciated. Pray that the Lord will send more laborers into

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book -merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid: $2.25 per Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

TAYLOR.

On February 14, 1925, the death angel visited our old home and claimed our dear father, A. J. Taylor. Our old home ties are broken. The Lord called our mother away on December 3, 1920. Father was born in Perry County, near Linden, Tenn., in 1844. He obeyed the gospel many years ago under the preaching of Brother Larimore. He lived a true Christian life until God called him home. He had no fear of death. He told us not to grieve for him, for he was going to be with his loved ones who had gone on before—mother and two sisters. He leaves to mourn his death five sons and one daughter, besides many sons and one daughter, besides many other relatives and a host of friends. But our loss is his eternal gain. We do not weep as those who have no hope, but hope to meet him in heaven, where parting will be no more.

HIS DAUGHTER, DELLA.

TAYLOR.

John Taylor was born, near Vanleer, Dickson County, Tenn., on June 3, 1855. He married Miss Laura Williams on February 22, 1880. It was my pleasure and privilege to baptize them about twenty-five years ago.
During the same meeting I also baptized a daughter and a young man and young lady who were living with them at that time. It was my pleasant privilege to be in their home many times after that. One of my true friends left this world when Brother Taylor died. At the time he was baptized we had but few members here, no house of worship of our own, and as bitter religious prejudice,
I thought, as I had ever known; but own, and as bitter religious prejudice, I thought, as I had ever known; but Brother Taylor lived to see what he seemed to desire so much—a good, comfortable meetinghouse, nicely located, finished and paid for, and a zealous little congregation worshiping therein. There were many things in his life to indicate his faithfulness in the church. So his noble wife wrote me: "I am not grieving as one without hope." He died on October 31, 1924, after a lingering sickness of more than four months.

BIRD.

BIRD.

On Friday afternoon, April 10, 1925, in the city of Dallas, Texas, the angel of the glory world came and called for the sainted spirit of Mrs. J. W. Bird (née Mary Moore), and wafted it into the realms of God's paradise to await the great day of all days. Sister Bird was born on May 22, 1857, and "born again" in 1876. She was baptized by Brother Elihu Scott at Union Chapel, in Obion County, Tenn. She was married to Brother J. W. Bird, one of the very best and most devoted husbands, on September 22, 1878, by the preacher who baptized her. God blessed this union with four children, two of which died in childhood. Two children are yet living—R. A. Bird, of Dallas, and Mrs. E. D. Brigance, of Henderson, Tenn. Mrs. Brigance is a teacher in the Freed-Hardeman College. One grandchild is left, Bristol Pauline Bird, aged twelve. Sister Bird was a mother to her brother's children, J. A. Moore and Mrs. Pearl Tatum, of Henderson, Tenn. She is the last of her father's family. The funeral was conducted by W. L. Oliphant, minister of the Oak Cliff Church, and J. B. Nelson, of the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church, in the Oak Cliff Church, where a large concourse of church members and friends attended. Interment was at Waxahachie, Texas. Sister Bird was truly a good woman, as mother, wife, neighbor, and church member. She was loved by all who knew her.

NICKS.

The death angel has again been in our midst and claimed for its own our dear grandfather, Tolbert Fanning Nicks. He was born on February 10, 1843, and departed his life on January 14, 1925. He obeyed the gospel in 1860, making sixty-five years of his life in the kingdom and service of his Lord. He was ever ready to help 1860, making sixty-five years of his life in the kingdom and service of his Lord. He was ever ready to help any good cause. He was in the Civil War, but on account of poor health he was given an honorable discharge. He was sick and suffered a great deal during the days that followed, but he would never say that he was not able to work for a living in order to draw a pension. He was a faithful and loving father and companion and a man whose hopes and affections were centered on things above. His usual conversation was on the Scriptures and things of an eternal nature. He was married to Miss Melvina Corlew on February 13, 1867, and to this union nine children were born. She passed away on January 25, 1881. He was again married to Mrs. Mary J. Rodgers, May 21, 1883, who preceded him to the grave in June, 1919. The last eight months of his life he lived with his daughter, Mrs. Mack Fussell, near Dickson, Tenn. He is survived by four sons—Will, John, Dally, and Fanning, Jr.; one stepdaughter, Mrs. M. C. Chambers, of Nashville, Tenn.; thirty-eight grandchildren, sixteen great-grandchildren, three step-grandchildren; one brother, Alex. Nicks, of Nashville; one sister, Mrs. A. O. Speight, of Ashland City, three step-grandchildren; one brother, Alex. Nicks, of Nashville; one sister, Mrs. A. O. Speight, of Ashland City, Tenn.; besides a host of other relatives and friends. We realize our loss is his gain, and we should weep not as those who have no hope. He told us so many times that he was ready and willing to go. While we sorrow here, we can picture the happy meeting "over there," and pray that we may all prepare to meet our God and join the happy family when our summons comes. Funeral services were conducted by Brother E. W. Daniel, of Dickson, after which he was laid to rest in the Rock Church cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

DO WE FORGIVE? BY MRS. J. D. TAYLOR.

Little children are the most beautiful "forgivers" I know of, and in this more than anything we should be like them. In a real "fist and skull" fight I have seen two little boys wipe the blood of battle from their little noses and be as sweet and friendly as if nothing had happened, and even compliment one another on the fighting qualities of each. And we grown folks get our feelings hurt over the least misunderstanding, and in heartbroken voices we say, "I never will forget what she said," and often we go pouting around for weeks if a friend and brother corrects us; sometimes many, many suns "go down" on our wrath. Well, when we do this, we are on the wrong road, and some morning we may wake up in a warmer country.

Our Sunday-school lesson about Stephen was what set me to thinking, and ever since that lesson I have been trying to rid myself of all bad thoughts and keep my heart full of love; and unless you try it yourself, you can't ever know how happy I have been. All my work has seemed easier, and I seem to get it up and finished better, and one day I thought: "Maybe my loved ones can write the inscription on my tomb that I have always wanted-' She hath done what she could." You know, I don't want them to write it unless they can conscientiously do so; but "love covers a multitude of sins," and maybe they will think I did what I could, but God will know.

I knew a tombstone agent once who told me he was taking an order for a most forgiving little woman. This woman's husband had dled, and all his life he had drunk and neglected his wife most shamefully; and he not only drank, but "cussed" and told lies. When making out the order, the tombstone man gave the woman the inscription book which he always carried as a help to those who could not think of nice words to put on their stones. After studying the book a little while, the little old woman said in a trembly voice, "Here's one that suits Billy exactly," and the tombstone agent read where she pointed: "Too good for earth, God took him home."

I think the more spiritual-minded we are, the more we can stand slights. Jesus was spiritual-minded, and he is our example, and think what he stood! When they treated him so cruelly, he went right on doing good and praying for them. Almost his last words were: "Father, forgive them." Rom. 8: 6 says: "To be spiritual-minded is life and peace." I think to forgive is life and peace, too.

BY JAMES A. ALLEN

The life of man is made up of opportunity. All improvement and enterprise in any line of human endeavor would be impossible were it not for the ability to take advantage of an opportunity. Men who have risen to any prominence and who have contributed to the wellbeing of the race are men who exercised the right use of their good judgment in promptly grasping every chance that was presented to raise them higher and make them more efficient in the duties and transactions of life. Energy of mind and of body is required to successfully accomplish any object of importance and that would be of any benefit to an individual or to the world. Solomon said: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in Sheol, whither thou goest." (Eccles. 9: 10.) Every failure in both the religious and the commercial world has been brought about by men's not concentrating the full strength of their being upon the task that lay immediately before them and by their carelessly and indifferently managing their affairs. No man need expect to accomplish any object that is worth being accomplished unless he works diligently and persistently and wisely chooses the best means to effect the desired ends; and this principle is as true when we come to deal with religious problems as it is in business and secular affairs. The great and important lessons embraced in the "whole duty of man," which is to "fear God, and keep his commandments," can never be learned until man takes advantage of the means that God has placed in his reach through which he might learn them. Instead of praying for light, and at the same time not making any effort to receive it, and working the mind into convulsions and fits of exhaustion at a mourner's bench or upon the straw, those desiring to walk in obedience to God should procure their Bibles, brush away the dust, and read the light as God has placed it before the world and invited them to receive it. "Take fast hold of instruction; let her not go: keep her; for she is thy life." (Prov. 4: 13.) "Buy the truth, and sell it not; Yea, wisdom, and instruction, and understanding." (Prov. 23: 23.)

God has not in any age done for man what he could do for himself. What man could not do and what is not within the power of humanity to do, God has always done and will always continue to do. When sin and iniquity carried the human family into degradation and ruin and beyond the power of an arm of flesh to help, God began the development of a gospel plan that would bring assistance and salvation to all such as would lay hold of the proffered mercy thus brought within the reach of "every creature." And now, that God has extended to man an opportunity of being saved that he could not have procured for himself, he calls upon him as a rational and reasonable creature to render obedience to the terms and faithfully comply with the conditions as named by Him who brought life and immortality to light by his resurrection from the dead, and who commanded his ambassadors to evangelize the world in his name. Jesus said: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." (Matt. 28: 19.) "Preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) Sinners may agonize tears of blood and may live and die endeavoring to find God in the remission of their sins; yet if they will not "believe and be baptized," they shall never be saved and shall never come into the possession of a single spark of hope that all will be well with them in eternity. While it is good to pray, and while God will answer the prayers of all who pray for light if they are willing to walk by as much of it as they have, yet no prayers, no agonizing, no amount of tears will answer the demand to "arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." (Acts 22: 16.) "He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer is an abomination." (Prov. 28: 9.) * * *

Jesus said: "No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." A profession of the Christian religion is a solemn pledge, publicly avowed by every applicant for membership in the church of Christ, that he will consecrate for life all the powers in his possession to the service of Jesus, that he will utilize every moment of his time for the advancement and upbuilding of his cause, and that every sentiment of his heart shall be upon the side of God and the right. The examples left on record by the first members of the primitive church show us the beauty there is in such a profession, and demonstrate the good that can be accomplished by a practical exhibition of all it implies. In the midst of violent surroundings and in the face of combined ranks of cunning and well-disciplined opposition, they practiced the principles of that pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father, which consisted in visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction and in keeping themselves unspotted from the world. The wants and needs of the brotherhood and of all men were looked after and cared for and the poor had the gospel preached unto them. It was clearly emphasized by the apostles that, while baptism brought an individual into a saved condition and a remission of the sins of the past, every person rendering obedience to it was necessarily obligated to work out his own salvation with "fear and trembling" in order that he might remain in a saved condition and receive the end of his faith, even the salvation of his soul; and, under their instruction, as they spoke "as the Spirit gave them utterance," the Christian people successfully pleaded the cause of their King in all the civilized world and daily increased in their good works of faith and labors

The fact that God requires anything shows that it can be done, and that man has the opportunity and the ability to do it. The fact that God has laid the twofold work of converting the world and building up the spiritual nature of those converted upon the church shows that the church can do such a work and that it must do it or it will never be properly done. It does not lie within the province of any other institution that could possibly be "organized" to perform the work of the church of God. They can, indeed, and they have made a mockery at it, and have attempted to perform this work through the instrumentality of an institution to which the apostles never belonged and that they never heard of, except in connection with the great apostasy; but in every instance it has proven to be of them as Jesus once said of some religious zealots: "When he is become so, ye make him twofold more a son of hell than yourselves."

One of the greatest causes of neglect and indifference among those who profess to be disciples of Jesus is a lack of faith-people do not believe the word of God. There is a great majority of those who have come into the church by gospel admission who cannot be made to believe, for their lives, that the salvation of their souls depends upon their faithfulness and diligence in religious matters and upon a regular and punctual attendance at the meetings of the saints; and what makes the matter worse is that they will argue dogmatically that they are right and that the Scriptures do not require such at their hands. To put it in plain English, divested of all ambiguity, they cannot see how the Bible means what it says. This savors too much of that spirit which works in the children of sectarianism. But such people as thus dishonor God and his word by refusing to live in his service want to be "let alone;" they do not want to be "worried" by so many invitations to do what they ought to know, and what they do know, is their duty to do. They may be "let alone" here, after the second and third admonition; but the judgment, in which the secrets of men are to be judged, will not "let them alone" when God shall decide the destiny of "every creature" according to his works. Persons thus disposed to be Christians in name, but not in practice, can follow the fortunes of business with an interested-step, rain or shine, but are always "too tired" or "too sick" to present themselves at the house of the Lord on the appointed occasion. Yet a little folding of the hands, a little closing of the eyes to sleep, a little reading of a newspaper by a cozy, warm fire, while the world is going down to ruin. They ought to be "tired" when the time comes to assemble with the saints, because they were "born tired" and have got into a rut and cannot get out. When judgment begins at the house of God, it will be too late to correct such mistakes and the sins of such a life.

People had better be careful how they construe and how they apply the word of God. It shall stand in increasing glory when they are gone, and shall be loved and obeyed by the best and wisest men and women of the earth when they shall be sleeping the years away in the forgotten silence of the grave. Every king that ever lived, with all who have disputed its all-sufficiency as a rule of Christian faith and justice, shall submissively bow the head and bend the knee in humble acknowledgment of its authority and of its standing and worth before God. The influence of the lives of good men that is yet felt through the deeds they did while living, and who, being dead, yet speak, testify in reason's ear that it is best for man to delight himself in the law of the Lord, to let it be his meditation day and night, and to make it the man of his counsel and the rule of his action in all the affairs and transactions of life. Indeed, all those ignoble characters of former days who had the audacity to dispute the claims of the Bible and to blaspheme its sacred contents have left their names in disgrace before the eyes of the public and have long since exemplified to all well-thinking people that they were not even distantly acquainted with the great subjects upon which they proposed to treat. Time has worn the polish off of their favorite theories, and their creeds of irreligion and sectarianism have been exploded by subsequent generations and their fallacy shown to all who will see.

Man should accept what God says with the simplicity of a little child. Indeed, God calls upon children to obey their parents because it is best for the child, and thus illustrates the spirit in which man should look to him and implicitly receive and obey his commandments. Jesus said: "Except ye turn, and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven." Divesting the mind of every vestige of a proud and haughty spirit and sincerely resolving to be governed by the word of God and to live and die by what it teaches, we must spend time in God's service if we would spend eternity in his presence. Let us strive to live right.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

HISTORICAL POINTS OF THE LIPSCOMBS.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

As the world has become greatly indebted to the Lipscomb family, it is proper that some information concerning it be given; and especially will such data be interesting to the many friends of William Lipscomb and David Lipscomb.

The first Lipscomb who came to America was named Thomas. He came from West England, from Devon or Somerset County. He was forced to leave to save his life from the vengeance of King James II. about the year 1686 or 1687.

In the Monmouth Rebellion, in West England, which was largely Protestant, he sided with James, Duke of Monmouth, against his uncle, James II., who was the last Catholic king of England. After the battle of Sedgemoor, the adherents of Monmouth were scattered, captured, and slain without mercy by James II.'s infamous Judge Jeffreys. Even young boys and girls were arrested and sold as house servants and slaves.

Our Lipscomb friend got aboard a ship at Bristol and sailed for America, was wrecked on the Bermuda Islands, and from thence made his way to Virginia, no doubt with an abiding hatred in his heart for tyranny, religious and civil. From him there arose a large family that has scattered from the Lakes to the Gulf. The record shows three members in the Continental Army following Washington through his campaign from Boston to Yorktownone, a colonel; one, a captain; one, a first lieutenant; and I dare say there were some as high privates. They were evidently imbued with the same principles or ideas of freedom that filled the soul of this great captain, who by his will manumitted his slaves. For some time in the first half of the nineteenth century we see Granville, the son of David, with his brothers, William, Thomas, John, and Dabney, and sisters, Tahpenes (Tappy) and Fanny, coming from the old home in Louisa County, Va., to Franklin County, Tenn. Granville later emigrated to Illinois and settled near where Peoria now is, with the purpose of setting his slaves free. The miasmatic conditions along the Sangamon River and the death of his wife and two children discouraged him, and he returned to Franklin County, Tenn. He was married three times. His first wife was a Miss Deweese, who bore him one daughter, Kerenhappuch, who married N. B. Smith, a teacher, a graduate of Franklin College. The second wife was his cousin, a Miss Lipscomb, who bore him two sons, William and David, dying in Illinois with her two infant children. His third wife was Miss Jane Breeden, who bore him three sons and two daughters. The sons were John (who still lives near Winchester, Tenn.), Granville, and Horace; and the daughters, Ellen (Mrs. Gardner) and Louisa (Mrs. Woods), are still living.

The pioneer Granville's two sons by his second wife, William and David, attended the Tolbert Fanning School, Franklin College, near Nashville, and became, the one a teacher and the other a preacher, both excelling in their lines.

William Lipscomb married Miss Anna Fulgham. To this union there were born and lived to maturity five sons and one daughter—Granville, James, David, William, Harry, and Mamie (Mrs. Davis). There survives one son, David, and the one daughter. David Lipscomb married Miss Margaret Zellner. To them was born one son, who died in infancy. David was imbued with the aggressive, restless spirit of his father, who, being a member of the Baptist Church, was expelled therefrom because, after a diligent study of the Bible, he began to teach doctrines that his Baptist brethren looked on as heretical. All his brothers and sisters became simply Christians along with him, except Dr. Thomas Lipscomb, who had united with the Presbyterian Church. He lived and died in Shelbyville, Tenn.

Granville Lipscomb, one of the sons of the pioneer by his third wife, married a Miss Swift, going back, as did Jacob, to the old country—Virginia—to find her. To them were born six sons—John, A. B., H. S., Granville, Edwin, and Perry—and two daughters—Louisa (Mrs. Neeley) and Marcia (Mrs. Crothers). These are all living and known to the people of Nashville and vicinity.

The brothers and sisters of the pioneer Granville, except Thomas and William and Tappy, emigrated to Texas, and their families became numerous and prosperous.

As far as known, none of the name or blood lines has ever been hung or figured in the courts, except as attorneys or judges, but have in the main done honor to the name of their ancestor who for conscience's sake and safety came over the sea.

William Lipscomb, with Tolbert Fanning, founded the Gospel Advocate in 1855. The Advocate was forced to suspend during the Civil War.

David Lipscomb recommenced the publication of the Advocate in January, 1866, and continued as senior editor until his death on November 11, 1917. He took a firm stand for the original principles of the Restoration Movement, and on account of his earnestness and zeal, together with the great ability he manifested, in contending for the Bible order, he at once became the stormy petrel around whose head gathered one of the greatest and bitterest controversies of modern times. For over half a century he stood, like a balance wheel, between the innovators, on one hand, and the rabid extremists, on the other. A history of this struggle would be one of the greatest romances of modern times.

David Lipscomb was, in reality, the founder of the Fanning Orphan School. After the death of Tolbert Fanning, Mrs. Fanning sent for him and stated her desire to have their property used for this purpose. He became the leading spirit in thus founding this school for orphan girls. He was also the leading spirit in founding the Nashville Bible School, now David Lipscomb College.

No man of modern times has had a clearer conception of the New Testament church than David Lipscomb, and no man has exerted a better influence in laboring for the cause of God and of humanity.

MISSIONARY NEWS AND NOTES.

BY ROBERT S. KING.

A Chinese proverb says: "A journey of a thousand miles begins with one step." If you are doing no mission work, begin now. Take the step to-day.

The church at Morrillton, Ark., is planning to send out four missionaries to China this fall. This congregation stands sponsor for the work, other congregations cooperating. This is certainly good news, and their example should be followed by others. Who will be next?

A couple are planning to go to India at an early date.

The bee that makes the honey never lingers around the hive. Take a lesson from the busy bee. "Go ye, therefore."

Some one has said there are three kinds of Christians—hand, feet, and knee. The feet Christians go and tell the story to all peoples, the hand Christians work and send, and the knee Christians pray. Which kind are you? "He that prays most gives most," some one has said.

Brother John Sherriff and wife, of Bulawayo, South Africa, have spent many years in missionary work at their cwn charges; but they could accomplish much more for the Master if some one would support them so that he could devote his entire time to the work. Who will hold the ropes while they go down into the pit?

"And the angel said unto them, Be not afraid; for I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people." Yes, Africans, too.

Ray Lawyer and wife, sent out by the church at Harper, Kan., late last year, have at last reached their destination. They were delayed at Capetown for a month. The rainy season is now over, and they can comfortably settle down in their mud hut.

It is said that a missionary and his wife can reach fiftytwo thousand in a generation.

It's great to be a missionary!

WORK AT RICHMOND, VA.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

A small congregation composed of seven members was banded together to keep house for the Lord by Brother W. S. Long in July, 1923. Brother Price Billingsley held a meeting for this little band of disciples in 1924, with fairly good success.

Brother J. W. Shepherd was on his way from Detroit to Nashville when he was headed off by a call to go to Richmond and take up the work there. An extract from a letter to me, written by Brother Shepherd, March 10, 1925, after arriving in Richmond, explains the situation there. The extract is as follows: "Quite unexpected to us, we are in this city. We were headed for Nashville, and were expecting to reach there at as early date as we could get over the road between Chattanooga and Nashville. While looking forward to that, a call came from this city to help the few brethren and sisters living in this city. We decided to do this, and in answer to this call arrived here on February 27. We thought living expenses were high in Detroit, but so far we have found our expenses higher than there."

A letter from Brother Shepherd, dated April 23, says, "I do not know of another church within less than a hundred miles;" and, "My expenditures since coming here have far exceeded my income." Another extract from the same letter says: "We are now looking at a church building owned by the Presbyterians with a view to buying the same. They feel that they have outgrown the place, and want a larger and finer house. This is a good house, located in a desirable locality, and we feel that if we can get that, our work will take on new life in every way. We are now meeting in a hall on the third floor of the Y. W. C. A. Building, right down in the business part of the city, surrounded by old, established churches, the membership of which has been connected by that particular ism for generations, and there is no possibility of getting the ears of them. In the locality where we want to get, there is an opportunity to reach a good class of laboring people."

It is plain that both the work and laborer is needing assistance. Since the last letter quoted from, a godly brother, and one who has been and is now greatly interested in the work, has advised Brother Shepherd to proceed with a proposition toward purchasing the meetinghouse, since it can be purchased at a much less price than it is worth. Now is the time to take advantage of the opportunity to get a good house, located in a good locality, at less cost than building, and that, too, perhaps, in a less desirable location. The house can be secured for eight thousand dollars. It is suggested that the house be purchased.

All who wish to take part in the Richmond work may address J. W. Shepherd, 705 West Grace Street, Richmond, Va., or A. M. Burton, Life and Casualty Building, Nashville, Tenn. State whether your check is for the building or for Brother Shepherd's support. Brother Shepherd knows nothing of my writing this.

MOTHERS' DAY BY MRS. E. A. ELAM.

Since to-day (May 10) is Mothers' Day, it occurs to me to reprint a beautiful poem taught me by my sainted mother in my happy days of childhood in the sunny long ago. These memories to me are most precious. Our father died when our baby brother was only six years old; our oldest brother was sixteen; I, fourteen; and our sister, ten. We clung together and to our mother with the fondest devotion. Our sister went nearly twenty years ago to join our father, leaving me with the admonition to take care of "mammy," which I did as faithfully and lovingly as I could. God was good to me and permitted me to keep her to a ripe old age. Then without a pain she fell asleep.

My oldest brother, with whom I had always walked hand in hand, who had shared all my joys and softened all my sorrows, was four years ago called by the silent reaper. Him I miss most of all. My youngest brother, who was always tender-hearted, helpful, sweet, and kind, and I are left. Our own little Sam Webb, too, went home. And so to-day, on "Mothers' Day," as I receive fond messages from the children that remain, my heart reverts to these dearest recollections.

Many to-day have their mothers with them, blessed with their happy association and safe counsel. Let all such suffer a word of exhortation. Make your mothers happy while they are yet with you by thoughtful and kind remembrance, but, above all, by faithful service. As they grow feeble, lead them gently down the hill, and I can wish for you no greater blessing than the one my mother bestowed upon me when she told me I had never given her any trouble.

Mothers' Day is a beautiful conception; but coming only once a year, it may lead some into the danger of thinking that properly remembering mother on that day will suffice for all the other days of the year. In one sense every day should be mothers' day. It is true the same things cannot be done every day for mother, but she must be remembered and cared for and loved every day. The command of High Heaven is to honor father and mother at all times, under all circumstances and conditions. The promises and blessings of God rest upon all who do this. This is a part of Christianity.

It is very sweet indeed to mothers to be remembered by children on Mothers' Day, however far apart they may be. She hears again their innocent prattle and lives over the time when she had them with her, while her prayers follow them always.

But here is the poem:

My Mother at the Gate.

There's many a lovely picture on memory's silent wall, There's many a cherished image that I tenderly recall— The sweet home of my childhood with its singing brooks and birds, The friends that grew beside me with their loving looks and words,

The flowers that decked the wildwood, the roses fresh and sweet,

The bluebells and the daisies that blossomed at my feet— All, all are very precious and often come to me Like the breezes from a better land beyond life's troubled

But the sweetest, dearest picture that memory can create

Is the image of my mother—my mother at the gate. 'Tis there I see her standing, with her face so pure and fair, With the sunlight and the shadow on her snowy cap and hair; I can feel the soft, warm pressure of that hand that clasped my own; can see the look of fondness that in her blue eyes shone; I can hear her parting blessings through the lapse of many vears:

I can see through all my sorrows her own sweet, silent tears.

But ah! amid the darkest trials that have mingled with my fate

I turn to that dear image—my mother at the gate.

But she has crossed the river, she's with the angels now; She has laid aside earth's crosses, and a crown is on her brow:

brow; She is clothed in clean, white linen, and walks the streets of gold,

O loved one safe forever within the Savior's fold!

No sorrowing thoughts can reach thee; no grief is thine to-day;

God gives thee joy for mourning, thy tears are wiped away.

Thou art waiting in that city where the saints and angels wait,

And I'll know thee, dearest mother, when I reach the pearly gate.

THE SOUL'S GREATEST NEED.

BY S. H. HALL.

It would be a source of no little satisfaction to me if I could say something every time I write or speak that would carry a blessing to each hearer and reader. Life is so very short and uncertain. Whatever we do to help man along life's way must be done quickly, else be left forever undone. There is every reason for man's striving to be continually interested in things that are vital to his eternal well-being. "Boast not thyself of to-morrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." (Prov. 27: 1.) "Behold, now is the acceptable time; behold, now is the day of salvation." (2 Cor. 6: 2.) Now is the time for each soul to fix well the heart on those things that save and sanctify. To defer such matters is to go wholly against everything that could possibly be considered sensible.

When it comes to considering the soul's greatest need, it might be well to look at it from its negative side. The soul does not need to be concerned about the things of the world. "Ye adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore would be a friend of the world maketh himself an enemy of God." (James 4: 4.) "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the vainglory of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." (1 John 2: 15-17.)

The above scriptures are easily understood. The very first word in discipleship, as has been before stated, is that of self-denial. "If any man would come after me," says Christ, "let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." You remember this was said to the apostle Peter when he so stoutly demurred to our Lord's going to the cross. He had just told his disciples that he must go to Jerusalem and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, but the third day would rise again. To this Peter objected, saying: "Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall never be unto thee." "But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan: for thou art a stumblingblock unto me: for thou mindest not the things of God, but the things of men. Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever would save his life shall lose it: and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it. For what shall a man be profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and forfeit his life? or what shall a man give in exchange for his life?" Have you studied this in Matt. 16: 21-26?

In connection with the above, I would like for some of the church members to read the following: "These things I command you, that ye may love one another. If the world hateth you, ye know that it hath hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own: but because ye are not of the world, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." (John 15: 17-19.)

It is bad when you see members of the church more concerned about their social clubs and card parties than they are about the prayer meetings, Bible classes, and other works in which some of the church members delight to have a part. And the members of their social clubs and card parties they have a foolish fondness for, when to love the members of the church is a heart exercise they are strangers to. Such members are wedded to the world, not to Christ, and unless they are converted they will be lost. As John says, "the world passeth away, and the lust thereof," and with it will go those who have walked in the ways of the world, "but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

'From this last quotation from God's eternal truth it is easy to see that doing the will of God is the soul's greatest need. But doing God's will calls for self-denial, for a crucifying of the flesh and taking up a cross and following Christ. And if you follow Christ, I think you will find yourself "going about doing good," and not so much concerned about the foolish and fashionable ways of the world.

Think of it as long as you please; and the more you think and look things squarely in the face as they are, the more you will come to see the folly of being wedded to the ways of the world. We have to do with the things of this life for too short a time to become fascinated with them. "What is your life?" we are asked in the Scriptures. Then the answer is given in the following words: "For ye are a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." (James 4: 14.) This important question and answer is found, too, right in the midst of God's teaching us not to boast of to-morrow. We are taught, in all of our plans for the future, to say: "If the Lord will, we shall both live, and do this or that."

The soul's greatest need is to be made to realize that wisdom cries all around us, long and loud, that the only life that a man can live that has any sense to it is a life of obedience to our Lord and Savior, a life of constant and continued readiness to lay aside this mortal body and let angels take us to that land of endless day. Every soul that reads this will be called from this stage of action either prepared or unprepared. May God help you to be ready.

BOLL'S DOCTRINE REVIEWED.

The review of the doctrine taught by Brother R. H. Boll, of Louisville, Ky., by R. L. Whiteside and C. R. Nichol, is a complete refutation and exposure of the false and divisive teaching of R. H. Boll and his associates. This review should be in the hands of every Bible student. The doctrine, which is a combination of Russellism and Adventism, has done much to disturb and divide the children of God. But there is nothing left undone by Brethren Whiteside and Nichol to show how utterly antagonistic to the plain teaching of God's word is this doctrine advocated by Boll and his colaborers. Price, fifty cents. Order from Mrs. C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas.

SCHOOL DISCIPLINE.

BY DAVID LIPSCOMB.

What is a students' council?

Why is a students' council?

How does a students' council feel when its decision is reversed or set at naught?

Question 1. A students' council is a gesture toward republicanism or self-government of the students, for the students, and by the students, and is usually a farce. Such an animal did not exist in the good old days when infraction of rules was punished by the ferrule on the spot, or by a birch, peach, or hickory switch after school hours.

Question 2. It is an effort on the part of a faculty to sidestep unpleasant duties entailed by their positions; to shift responsibilities; to be able to say to the convicted offender, "You have been tried by a jury of your peers;" etc. That "listens" good, far better than it works.

Question 3 may be answered by questions: Does said council feel that it is sitting on the top of the world after said reversal of a decision made over a very grave offense—to wit, housebreaking, theft, and destruction of property? Does not said council feel like a hard-boiled hat that has been sat upon by a two-hundred-pound man? Does it continue to function? Is it not as ancient Troy that was, and whose ruins smoke from the ground?

Is it not true that the ordinary boy resents the authority of said council far more than he would that of his faculty? Is not this especially true of the country boy, the boy not accustomed to umpires and traffic cops? And this brings us back to Question 2. Why is a students' council? Cannot a faculty of seven or eight strong men control a bunch of one hundred boys? Can they put up a plea that they cannot leave the ministry of the textbooks to round up offenders and switch them soundly when they need it, or dismiss them from the school if the offense is as grave as the one reported? We are certainly fallen on evil times if such offenses or offenders go unwhipped of justice.

This may not be as sweet-spirited as Peter Ainslee would have written it, but there are times and circumstances when sweet spirits have no place.

SHALL CHRISTIANS BE INTOLERANT?

BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

Law violators are ever willing to leave officers alone, if only officers of the law will return the compliment. So is the attitude of quacks toward faithful dispensers of medicine and of religious errorists toward those who faithfully follow God in all things. But shall those who enforce the law leave criminals alone? Shall good doctors demean themselves kindly toward fakes? Shall men in error pleading with us to be friendly be suffered to go unmolested? What shall we say to these things?

What is the Christian's attitude toward sin? To the law and the testimony; what hath the Lord spoken? (See Isa. 8: 20; Jer. 23: 35.) It is decreed of God that he shall grieve at sin (Ps. 139: 21; 2 Chron. 19: 2); contend with it (Prov. 28: 4; Jude 3); dispute with it (Acts 9: 29); publicly show it (Acts 18: 28); lift up voice against it (Isa. 58: 1); not consent to it (Ps. 50: 18; Prov. 1: 10; Eph. 5: 11); hold not peace at it (Isa. 62: 6); rebuke it (Lev. 19: 17; 1 Tim. 5: 20); utter it (Lev. 5: 1); withstand it (Gal. 2: 5); hate it (Ps. 119: 104; Rom. 12: 9); and warn against it (Ezek. 33: 8; 1 Thess. 5: 14). Very many passages could here be added plainly showing that to treat with sin by keeping silent is to choose the course which aligns with the wicked, though done in good will.

It is the nature of divine truth to be intolerant. Christianity is absolute or nothing. The real thing does not change. It is a struggling, active, uncompromising, and dangerous thing; its mild-seeming precepts, high explosives. It relentlessly opposes everything else in the world, and whoever would change or compromise it thereby corrupts it; when it makes terms with anything, it ceases to be divine, and the pleasure of the Lord withdraws, because his purpose in it is defeated. An Alabama attorney of note said recently of my preaching that he did not so much mind hearing it were not the logic so merciless toward what others believe. He was told this was no fault of mine. He was shown that respect for the divine order compelled active opposition to everything that was not of it.

In our religious communities there comes from all parties a great cry for peace and union by mutual concession and compromise. It is agreed that all should come together, but that every party should concede something, and, above all, that every one shall be allowed his own way. Naturally the Lord is not asked in on this. And let a man dare to speak up and urge that the way of the Lord is one which all should respect and follow or by the Lord be condemned, who refuses everything the Bible does not specify, and he becomes an outlaw, a bigot, good for nothing but to be cast out altogether. In the eyes of sectarians, this is the unpardonable sin.

But some among us are enamored with these overtures from the sects. Even some of our preachers are beguiled into thinking that to listen to this charming will facilitate the spread of the word, though it mean the exact opposite. What shall we do? Preach the word as God's! Let us stand for it positively and war with every phase of falsity. Fidelity to Jehovah and the salvation of souls admits of no other course on our part. Reflect upon God's attitude toward all those who in the past have changed his law, even in the least. Never did one escape with his life without repentance. Then shall we allow men following the flesh to take it for granted that we excuse them or believe them safe in so doing? Ten thousand times, No!

THE SOUL'S MIRROR.

BY D. P. CRAIG.

All human life and character is portrayed by truth. So, truth is, in fact, the mirror of the soul. It reveals the thoughts, counsels, and purposes of the human heart. It depicts life and distinguishes the false from the true.

Thus truth conceals nothing and is impartial. No false pictures are painted. Everything fantastic and unreal is eliminated.

But truth demonstrates its potency in many ways. Its power is not exhibited in a few lifeless and inoperative precepts. It is the mighty force that has controlled and dominated the present system of affairs since time was born. It is the germ and source of all life, which quickens, creates, and makes that which is old new, and that which is new old. Hence, the doctrines of the world systems cannot and do not contain the substance of God's redeeming, ennobling, and sanctifying truth. They all fall far short of that truth of which Jesus spoke and the apostles wrote. The Master spoke according to the will of God; modern lecturers speak according to the will of man.

Truth asserts its power in heart throbs, in the moods and impulses of the human heart. True, the multitudes daily feed upon something which men call the truth, which is extolled by the popular leaders as the gospel truth of the New Testament. But in the eyes of a genuine truth lover, whose mind will receive nothing but the precious seed, these man-made systems are counterfeit, mere pretensions, and hypocritical; they are void of power, unable to engage the attention of a true believer or to captivate his heart. Therefore, the Savior said that no word of God shall be void of power; but many words taught after man have no weight and are ineffectual.

Once the world was void of this moral and effulgent light. But the day dawned. The Sun of Righteousness arose with healing in his wings. Truth in all her majesty appeared. All false images were uncovered.

But ever since that glorious period men have loved darkness more than light, because their deeds were evil, their images, lives, and characters so besmirched with sin that they desired to hide their faces from him. Many characters are self-characters, unreal, because they would shut out the truth from their lives.

I perceive that nowadays it is a rarity to see a "natural person." By this I mean that so few have loved the truth supremely, have conformed themselves to the image of God, which is the glorious gospel of Christ.

How strange it is that men dread the hour of revelation when they examine themselves and search the secret counsels of their heart! And yet there comes a time in the life of every individual when the Spirit of Truth searches our poor hearts and reveals all that is in them.

Admitting that imitations are often difficult to detect, yet there is something about an impostor that will find him out. I have often seen him not only unveiled before God, but all his nakedness and love of self stand exposed to the scorning and accusing eyes of the world.

But the great moment comes when we stand in the divine presence of God, when he searches us as a sharp two-edged sword would open and lay bare any fleshly thing. And in that moment we cannot hide. We have only to close our eyes and blush with shame.

The enemies of truth are skilled these days. Spiritual fakers are numerous. The greatest adversary to the truth is he who would attire himself in saintly robes and speak the wisdom of the world in the name of the Christ. "They speak great swelling words of vanity." Through the agency of such, as the instrument of Satan, the truth can become an inconsistency and of no effect.

Still, truth has drawn a true picture of man and his character. Truth is an image and a person, not a mere attribute, not a mere thing used to impress the moral power of God. Jesus Christ was the Truth, because he was full of grace and truth. In him truth becomes the finished painting, and as a model God has invested him with all that he would have us be. God, the divine Artist, placed the model before him, drew the outlines, the features, and the stature, with unerring exactness. Hence, he produced a masterpiece.

But nothing enduring was ever painted, except facts and truth. A thing which is a creature of the imagination never lived; it vanishes into everlasting oblivion. A lie will be a lie, no matter how highly glossed or colored. In vain may men chase phantoms and imaginations. Truth lays his heavy hand upon their faces and obscures them forever.

And truth is reflected through earthen vessels, and, as in the life of the Son of God, it becomes a force and personality which molds the being into the image of the Author. Like presents like.

Too, truth consistently praises and blames the acts of man through men, and employs human talent as an illustration of its great magnifying and revealing power.

But upon the wall of time the adversary of Truth has painted and hung another picture. It is the picture of a life which has sought to have true life without the truth. Surely this is a creature of the imagination. Many times we have seen it. Upon the heart of such a being lies a dark and gloomy veil around which gathers midnight darkness. The soul is in prison, sits in the valley of darkness and the land of the shadows and death.

The horror upon its visage is too painful, and we turn away in misery. But when the soul seeks nothing but the truth, how different! The veil is taken away, and with an unveiled face it beholds the image and glory of God. Thus it is changed from an unnatural image into a natural image, even into the image of truth itself. O thought sublime!

Hence, nothing strikes us so forcibly as that truth commends itself to every man's conscience, casting light on the hidden things of darkness and upholding them for a full and critical inspection. And the man who has been truly converted to the truth, rejoicing in the image of God more and more, the inner man, is enabled to drink at the everlasting fount of life day by day.

Truth will surely reveal the kind of creatures we are. Every day we look into this mirror, whether or not we are conscious of it, we see ourselves as we are seen. Perhaps we often fail to recognize our soul's distorted and ugly features. But we cannot learn what kind of persons we are until we have looked squarely into the mirror of truth. There only do men ever desire to change their faces or characters. The conviction comes when we realize how far we are from the divine image. Men may compare themselves with the image of human standards and feel comparatively easy; but when they see the image of God and realize how unlike it they are, O what an awakening!

So we cannot escape from the fact that life is a mirror. Human actions and words are mirrors, and will unveil the character with that same clearness and exactness as when we look into a mirror and behold the face and features of the physical man.

In the gospel, truth has painted both the terrestrial and celestial man, and thus mortal and eternal life are clearly drawn. Therefore, Truth is the author of life.

And Truth is never more powerful than in comparison. In God's revealed will he has told us of the good and bad dwelling in the heart of man. While detailing the virtues, he has told us in searching and ponderous words that the heart is deceitful and desperately wicked, and from it may proceed every vile and filthy thing.

Hence, to be that person which God would have us to be is to look continuously into the mirror of Jesus Christ. When looking earnestly, the truth makes us free, and free indeed. It terminates in a translation from darkness to light, where we escape all the entanglements and allurements of the world and walk in this heavenly way, the true way which he hath consecrated to us.

TRIP TO TEXAS.

BY J. A.

On a recent visit to Texas, Brother and Sister E. A. Elam availed themselves of the opportunity of spending two days in San Antonio, one of which days was the first Sunday in May. On Sunday morning they went out to worship with the Denver Heights church of Christ. Upon learning who Brother Elam was, Brother Arthur Slater and other brethren so importuned him that he yielded to their persuasion and preached, morning and evening, on the great subject of love.

Brother Elam reports with much pleasure the most hospitable reception that congregation extended to him and his wife and says they asked why he and his wife spent the time from Friday night until Sunday morning in a hotel. He replied that upon their forgiveness he would do so no more, but that should he ever return to San Antonio he would "do better."

Brother Elam found this congregation alive spiritually and at work for the Master. It enjoys the service of Brother Arthur Slater as its preacher, a man of piety and devotion to the truth. On the other hand, he enjoys the love and coöperation of the church.

After the morning service, Brother and Sister J. T. Mauldin took charge of Brother and Sister Elam for luncheon and dinner in the evening. Brother Slater devoted himself and car in the afternoon to showing them the antiquated missions, including, of course, the Alamo, and the parks, carrying them through valleys of beauty and gardens of loveliness. A pleasant call was made on Brother and Sister Newman and the family of Brother W. D. Bills. He would have been glad to call upon Brother Phillips had time permitted. There are other preachers there whom he would have been glad to meet.

Brother Elam reports that such hospitality shown to strangers is commendable and truly makes the heart glad. He trusts that in the providence of God he may be led that way again.

BROTHER SRYGLEY'S WESTERN WORK.

The following contributions have been received to assist in the missionary work that Brother Srygley plans to do in destitute fields of the West this summer: Hugh J. Phillips, Ridgetop, Tenn., $10; L. N. Sparks, Red Bay, Ala., $1; Mrs. J. H. L. Behms, Llano, Texas, $5; Miss Mattie Behms, by Mrs. J. H. L. Behms, Llano, Texas, $2; Miss Mattie Johnson, Franklin, Tenn., $1; Mrs. J. L. Richardson, Franklin, Tenn., $1; M. C. Kurfees, Louisville, Ky., $20; J. N. Sullivan, Shelbyville, Tenn., $10; Mrs. J. W. Peery, Hohenwald, Tenn., $2.50; Mrs. Barton Dement, Christiana, Tenn., $2; Mrs. S. H. Caile, Johnson City, Tenn., $1.50; J. O. Manning, Whitlock, Tenn., $5; J. O. Wisenbaker, Valdosta, Ga., $4; G. T. Mustaine, Horse Cave, Ky., $25.

The letters that have accompanied these gifts are a source of great encouragement to Brother Srygley. Sister S. H. Caile, of Johnson City, Tenn., says: "Living as I am in a place where there is no loyal church of Christ, I am more touched by the missionary appeal than ever before. I know what it is to hunger and thirst to hear the pure gospel of Christ." Hugh J. Phillips, of Ridgetop, Tenn., who sent the first contribution, says: "I hope Brother Srygley has the best of success in his meetings." J. O. Manning, of Whitlock, Tenn., says: "I inclose check to help bear expenses of Brother F. B. Srygley, and pray God that he may go and do much good for the cause of Christ and in saving souls." Sister Mattie A. Johnson, of Franklin, Tenn., writes to Brother Srygley: "I do feel such a great interest in your great undertaking that I want to express to you my heart's desire for your success. I know that the prayers of the righteous avail much. We are all so anxious that you succeed that we earnestly pray our Father in your behalf." Brother G. T. Mustaine, of Horse Cave, Ky., says: "My prayers go with Brother Srygley's mission work in Colorado, hoping that it may do much good for the cause for which Jesus died."

Among those baptized by Brother Srygley last year were two persons to whom baptism was peculiar and unique, as neither of them had ever seen any one baptized before. Brother Srygley is eminently fitted to carry the gospel to new fields. He preaches to the people with a plainness and simplicity that enables them to at nee appreciate the clear teaching of the word of God and to recognize the importance of conforming to a "Thus saith the Lord."

We are very much interested in encouraging Brother Srygley in missionary work of this kind, as we should send our best preachers to new and difficult fields. Earnest and insistent calls have come to him, from the places where he preached last year, to return to them again this year; and to Brother Srygley's credit, we are glad to announce that he has consented to go and that he is making his arrangements accordingly. He intends, if the Lord wills, to hold at least three meetings in these destitute places of the West.

And as these places are unable to sustain Brother Srygley financially while preaching for them, we are suggesting that readers of the Gospel Advocate lend a hand and have a part in the work. We are aware that many of our readers would rejoice to participate in missionary efforts of this kind, and that the consensus of opinion is that more work of this kind should be done.

All who desire to assist Brother Srygley in responding to these Macedonian calls and in preaching the gospel at these destitute points may send their donations to James A. Allen, Gospel Advocate office, Nashville, Tenn., and proper acknowledgment will be made.

OUR MESSAGES

The truly great are always humble.

The golden calf never gives any milk.

A fast man gives the devil good exercise.

It is always better to be silent than silly.

Hugh H. Miller preached at Yell, Tenn., last Sunday.

You cannot do wrong and get away with it. Sin will tell.

H. C. Hale preached at Fifth Street, this city, last Lord's day.

No one need be sour in spirit in order to be sound in faith.

Leslie G. Thomas preached twice at Franklin, Ky., last Lord's day.

C. H. Smithson, Tioga, Texas, May 14: "I am now located at Tioga, Texas."

One confession and one restoration at Lindsley Avenue, this citý, last Lord's day.

James E. Chessor is preaching on Sundays at various places in Hickman County, Tenn.

C. C. Patterson, of Denver, Tenn., reports that R. B. Henry is in a good meeting at Denver.

S. H. Hall reports two fine services at the Russell Street church of Christ, this city, last Lord's day.

Wanted—Two young lady boarders in a nice, Christian home. Telephone 3-2058-W.

John L. Rainey preached the commencement sermon at Moulton, Ala., last Sunday, and preached for the church at night.

M. D. Baumer, Carthage, Tenn., May 14: "There have been three additions by statement to the church here during May."

T. Q. Martin closed a fine meeting last Sunday night at Grandview Heights, this city, with thirty baptisms and four restorations.

J. V. Armstrong Traylor, Oak Grove, Ky., May 11: "I began a meeting here yesterday. The interest is good. One addition last night."

R. P. Cuff preached the commencement sermon at Oneonta, Ala., last Sunday. Brother Cuff preached for the church in the morning.

C. C. Patterson, Denver, Tenn., Route 1, May 14: "R. B. Henry, of Stewart County, is holding a series of meetings at the Hustburg church of Christ this week."

W. E. Morgan preached at Knoxville, Tenn., last Sunday in the absence of Brother Pittman. On Sunday a week ago Brother Morgan preached at Monticello, Ky.

J. S. Daugherty, Rockdale, Texas, May 4: "I closed the Keechi meeting last night, with an overflow audience. One was baptized and one wandering brother was restored." Coleman Overby, Lexington, Tenn., May 14: "C. B. Douthitt, of Martin, Tenn., and Coleman Overby will begin a series of meetings at Junction City on the first Lord's day in June."

F. B. Srygley recently closed a splendid meeting with the Ridgedale congregation, Chattanooga, Tenn. One was baptized before Brother Srygley began and two became identified with the congregation.

Everett Woodroof and James A. Allen are in a tent meeting on the South Campus of the old Normal School, corner Lindsley Avenue and University Street. Services every night at half past seven o'clock.

- G. T. Mustaine, Horse Cave, Ky., May 15: "I am just home from Monticello, Ky., where I attended the Nichol-Taylor debate, which I think was a perfect victory for the truth, and believe much good was done."
- A. J. Veteto, Normal Tenn., one of the best song leaders among Christian people, has the following dates open: June 7 to July 2; August 2 to August 20; September 2 to October 5; October 28 to November 8."
- I. A. Douthitt, Sedalia, Ky., May 4: "The meeting at Springfield, Tenn., closed on the night of May 3, with eight baptized, two by statement, and one from the 'digressives.' I begin at Louisville, Ky., on May 10."
- J. Fairs Nichols, Murray, Ky., May 11: "The church here, I am hoping, is to accomplish much. Alonzo Williams is doing great preaching. I preached for the church here last night. I shall be at Antioch, Ill., on the third Lord's day."

Will W. Slater, Irving, Texas, May 11: "Four additions to date. Tulsa is a hard place. Brother Laird is doing a great work here. The meeting will continue all this week, maybe longer. I have some open time for meetings or singing schools this fall."

E. G. Cullum is announced to begin a tent meeting with the Eleventh Street church of Christ, this city, next Lord's day. W. G. Klingman will lead the singing. The tent is on Eleventh Street, one block south of Shelby Avenue. Services will begin every night at 7:40 o'clock.

Mrs. John W. Nelms, Shelbyville, Tenn., May 12: "Words cannot express my appreciation of the Gospel Advocate force. I am so thankful that we have such true and honest people, and may the Lord ever be with them and bless them in their fight for truth and right."

Ira Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, May 13: "We have had over forty additions. One confession last Lord's day. The church at O M is also doing fine. They have recently built a new tabernacle, and I am to preach the first sermon in it next Lord's day. The interest at Quail is growing."

- R. E. L. Taylor, Decherd, Tenn., May 12: "I preached at Rossville, Ga., last Lord's day. One young man made the good confession and was baptized, and two confessed their wrongs. The Lord willing, I will begin a meeting with this congregation on the fourth Lord's day in June."
- J. H. Hines, Montgomery, Ala., May 13: "J. H. Mc-Broom, of Atlanta, Ga., conducted a good and interesting meeting with the Highland Park Church. There were four by baptism and one by letter. I shall leave for Atlanta Saturday to assist Brother McBroom in a series of meetings."
- G. A. Dunn, Jr., Gainesville, Texas, May 14: "There were eleven additions at Jasper, Ala., and one at Coal Valley. Gus Nichols, of Cordova, directed the singing. The meeting here began with large audiences. There was one confession last evening. Tillit S. Teddlie has charge of the song service."

John T. Smithson, Louisville, Ky., May 15: "The meeting at Atwood Street church of Christ closed on Sunday night, May 10. The writer did the preaching, and O. N. Scott had charge of the song service. Two were added to the congregation—one by primary obedience to the gospel and the other by membership."

George Cantrell, Hamilton, Ala., May 11: "A. Smith Chambers, of Florence, preached three strong sermons here yesterday and Saturday evening. W. V. Walker, of Tuscumbia, preaches for us on the fourth Lord's day in each month. G. A. Dunn, Jr., of Gainesville, Texas, will conduct our meeting about the first of September."

Frank Baker, Berry, Ala., May 11: "I am to visit Florida the last of May, the entire month of June, and probably July. The extension of my vacation to July will be determined by the demand for my services in Florida. Some of the points under promise for work are: Burlington Church near Hildreth, Lake City, and Dowling Park."

It is less trouble to take the trouble to be immersed than it is to conveniently accept sprinkling and tussle with doubts through a lifetime.

W. M. Mann, Clinton, Okla., May 4: "I would like to say that we have been on the upgrade here ever since Brother Henley's meeting. A fine crowd was out yesterday. I was at Butler, where we had a good hearing."

Thomas E. Milholland, Bartlett, Texas, May 4: "Last Lord's day we had the largest attendance in the Bible study and the largest attendance at the eleven-o'clock service we have ever had, save during protracted meetings."

Telegram from Price Billingsley, Houston, Texas, May 18: "The Houston Heights revival is great, with growing interest and attendance and several additions. The congregation is in fine shape, housed in a modern and most convenient building, and is increasing its effectiveness. I spoke a public commendatory word of the Gospel Advocate."

G. H. Turner, Columbia, Tenn., May 15: "Charley Nichols, of Texas, began a meeting at Mount Pleasant last Lord's day. There is talk here now of a discussion on modern liberalism, or evolution, or simply infidelity, between possibly Brother Nichols and any of a few public men here who have forsaken 'the old paths,' if the latter have grit enough to stand on their purported convictions. We will announce later if it materializes."

Cled E. Wallace, Temple, Texas, May 5: "Our meeting with the West Side congregation in Wichita, Kan., was well attended. Nine were baptized, several restored, three from the 'digressives'—seventeen in all. I appreciate and heartily approve the positive way the Gospel Advocate stands up for New Testament principles. The Advocate is a source of strength and inspiration to me. My next meeting will be at Childress, Texas, beginning on May 10."

Elam Derryberry, Glasgow, Ky., May 13: "I am in a good meeting here with M. L. Moore, of Bowling Green, Ky. A meeting in which I had promised to lead the singing, announced to begin on May 24, has been canceled, and on account of this I have two weeks open for that time, beginning May 24." Brother Derryberry is a most excellent song leader and a splendid young man. Any congregation would be fortunate to get him for that time.

—J. A.

- I. B. Bradley, Dickson, Tenn., May 14: "The Lord willing, I will begin a meeting in De Soto, Mo., on the fourth Lord's day in this month. There are just a few loyal Christians there, and they have no place of worship, but have secured the Knights of Pythias Hall for this meeting. After returning from Missouri, I expect to be with the church in Elba, Ala., for about two weeks. The brethren are making great preparations for this effort, advertising and otherwise getting things in shape."
- J. E. Wainwright, Corpus Christi, Texas, May 4: "T. W. Phillips, Jr., is busy with the Fetzer Avenue Church. I preached some while there. There was one confession and two were identified. I am now assisting the Runge church in a meeting. This is the home of T. F. Young and Foy E. Wallace, Sr. The meeting is well advertised. We are using our new tent, which is a great thing. Over six hundred heard us last night. Homer Ferguson, of Kingsville, is leading the song service in an able manner. V. O. Teddlie and I are to begin at Taft on Sunday night, May 17, to continue over three Lord's days."

Sister U. G. Wilkinson, Box 592, Comanche, Okla., May 11: "I have a few copies of Brother Wilkinson's two books, 'Infidelity Against Itself' and 'The Great Conflict.' I will sell the two for one dollar and give one of his other tracts with each order. I have quite a few small tracts on the Sunday school and some others. Anyway, I will send three books for one dollar. I want to sell these off so I can have his new book printed. The sale of his books is about my only income. The old home was so near down that I am having it made over. I rented two rooms, and I am living near by, so as to attend the chickens and garden."

C. D. Crouch, Nashville, Tenn., May 18: "It has been announced, through the Gospel Advocate, that B. W. Davis has recently had his leg reamputated. The operation was serious, but successful. He is at the Protestant Hospital, where he will have to remain for quite a while. He is necessarily under heavy expense now. He has no source of income wherewith to meet these obligations, save the contributions from God's people. Brethren have been generous in supplying his needs, but just now his obligations are heavier and his needs are greater. He is cheerful and hopeful; thinks he will soon be able to be out preaching again." Send contributions to Mrs. B. W. Davis, 939 Delmas Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.50, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

THE LORD'S-DAY WORSHIP. No. 2.

BY F. W. SMITH.

Of course Christians should worship God every day in the week, every week in the month, every month in the year, and every year during their earthly existence. But there is one act of worship confined, by divine appointment, to the first day of the week-viz., the "breaking of bread," or the observance of the Lord's Supper. Hence, we note first,

TWO THINGS INSEPARABLY CONNECTED.

"And upon the first day of the week, when we were gathered together to break bread, Paul discoursed with them, intending to depart on the morrow; and prolonged his speech until midnight." (Acts 20: 7.) There are only three ways by which we can ascertain the will of God, and these are, a direct command, an approved example, and a necessary inference. It must not be simply an inference, but a "necessary" one.

In the passage before us it is specifically stated that the disciples in the city of Troas "gathered together" upon the first day of the week to break bread. No matter what else occurred while they were gathered together that day, it remains an incontrovertible fact that the primary purpose of this gathering together that day was to "break bread." It is also a fact that this "breaking of bread" was not a common meal, for Paul rebuked the disciples at Corinth for having such food when they came together, saying: "What, have ye not houses to eat and to drink in?" (1 Cor. 11: 22.)

Now, since it is nowhere in the New Testament mentioned or even hinted that the disciples came together on any other than the first day of the week to "break bread," it seems to me we should, for that reason alone, be afraid to associate the Lord's Supper with any other day of the week. But since we have the approved example, by the presence and participation of an inspired apostle at Troas; for partaking of the Supper on the first day of the week, we feel perfectly safe in following this example.

Again, since days are magnified and made memorable by being associated with certain events, such days become very significant to all related to these events. Jesus arose from the tomb on the first day of the week; and since we cannot disassociate his resurrection from his sufferings and death, the first day of the week and the Lord's Supper become inseparably connected. Hence, to meet on the first day of the week without the emblems representing the body and blood of Jesus renders the day empty and meaningless, in so far as a day of worship is concerned, no matter what other acts are performed on that day.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE SUPPER.

"This is my body, which is for you: this do in remembrance of me." (1 Cor. 11: 24.) In this short statement we have two things significant of the importance of the Lord's Supper. (1) "This do" makes the matter one of imperative duty, for it is a positive command of the Lord Jesus Christ. All, therefore, who come within the range of this command and who fail or refuse to break bread on the first day of the week are living in open rebellion against their Lord. This, of course, does not apply to those who are unavoidably hindered from assembling on the Lord's day, for God does not require impossibilities of mankind. (2) "In remembrance of me." Here is an act performed through and by which the children of God are to remember the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. It is appointed for that purpose, and no amount of simply mental action, whether in the home, by the wayside, or in the worshiping assembly, can be substituted for the eating of the bread and the drinking of the fruit of the vine.

A PROCLAMATION OF HIS DEATH.

"For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye proclaim the Lord's death till he come." (1 Cor. 11: Thus the Lord's Supper becomes a monumental institution, proclaiming the greatest event in the history of the world. In proclaiming the death of Christ, we proclaim all that it involves, and in so doing we proclaim our faith in his resurrection as a fact, as well as our faith in the promise of his coming for his saints.

Of course we cannot comprehend all that is involved in the death of Christ, but we do understand that he died to save our souls, and that alone should be sufficient to cause us to rejoice in the privilege of proclaiming his death till he comes. The very fact that any professed Christian is indifferent about the Lord's Supper proves beyond a doubt a lack of appreciation of what Christ has done for him, or else he does not understand the nature and import of the institution.

MEANS OF SPIRITUAL LIFE.

"Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his blood, ye have not life in yourselves." (John 6: 53.) It is not here claimed that this refers "specifically" to the Lord's Supper, but it evidently includes the observance of the Supper among other commands and duties imposed by the Lord. I take it that Jesus is here referring to the "appropriation" of the benefits of his atonement, which can only be done by obedience to his commandments. Since the possession and enjoyment of spiritual life is dependent upon obedience to the commands of Jesus, how can a professed Christian hope for such, while at the same time neglecting the means ordained to that end? To remain at home or go on a pleasure excursion on the Lord's day instead of to the assembly of the saints, if persisted in, simply means spiritual suicide, a thing that is being committed by many church members.

"THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH."

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

There has never been any doubt in the minds of thoughtful people outside of the Baptist ranks that the Baptist Church originated long this side of the days of inspiration, but no doubt there are many good Baptists who have been made to believe that the Baptist denomination originated in the days of the apostles. They believe this upon an assertion of their preachers without scriptural proof. Recently my attention has been called to an assertion of this kind in a Baptist paper called "The Spot Light." This paper is published in Nashville by one who calls himself "the Rev. Britton Ross." Commenting on the Sunday-school lesson for April 26, Mr. Ross says:

The First Baptist Church in Jerusalem had experienced a wonderful growth for about six years, and it was gaining in power and influence with the people and many were listening to sermons and exhortations such as caused them to think about their lost condition and turn to God for salvation, and the Lord was adding to the church daily such as were being saved; in addition, there was real fellowship among the brethren. What a wonderful thing it is to see brethren in the Lord working together for the saving of souls to the glory of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ!

It will be noted that the brother says that the church in Jersalem was "the first Baptist church in Jerusalem," but he does not say where the first Baptist church out of Jerusalem was located. It has been the contention of the Baptists of this country that the Baptist Church was organized before the day of Pentecost, and, therefore, before the things that took place on that day in the city of Jerusalem ever transpired. Forty years ago in this country they all contended that the church or kingdom was set up in the days of John the Baptist, and that they got their name from John. Of course all thoughtful people knew they were wrong about this, and after many efforts to prove it they abandoned that position and delared the church was set up when the apostles were chosen. They thought they had proof that the church eristed as an organized body before the death of Christ in the teaching of Jesus when he said, "Tell it to the charch." I have heard them argue long and loud over that stalement. The argument was that one could not tell it to the church unless the church existed. They could not be made to believe that Jesus was here giving advice to the church which was yet to be established.

It now seems that Brother Ross has come to Jerusalem to find the first church; and if that is what he means, he is right on that point for once. But what right has he to ay that this church was "the first Baptist church?" It was nowhere called a "Baptist church;" and if it were a Baptist church, why did not the apostles or the historian or some one besides Brother Ross call it "the first Baptist church?" Brother Ross has given it this name without one particle of authority for it. It is not only true that the church in Jerusalem was not called a "Baptist church, but no other church in all the New Testament was ever called a "Baptist church." In Paul's speech to the elders of the church at Ephesus, he had occasion to refer to the church in which they were bishops, but he did not call it "the Baptist church in Ephesus." This is his language "Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, in which the Holy Spirit hath made you bishops, to feed the church of the Lord which he purchased with his cwn blood," (Acts 20: 28.) If this had been a Baptist church instead of the church of the Lord, why did not Paul call it that? And if it was the church of the Lord, why does Brother Ross call it the "Baptist Church?" If Jesus Christ built the Baptist Church, why did he not say, "Upon this rock I will build the Baptist Church," instead of saying, "Upon this rock I will build my church?" And if all the churches in the days of the a ostles were Baptist churches, why did Paul say, "All the churches of Christ salute you?" (Rom. 16: 16.) an sure Brother Ross would not have missed that opportunity of saying, "All the Baptist churches salute you." Wherefore this change in name, if the Baptist churches of today are the same as the churches of Christ of that day? Would the name, "the churches of Christ," without any qualifying word, describe the Baptist churches of the present day? If it does, why does Brother Ross not use that name? If it does not, why does he claim they are the same? If the Baptist Church of to-day is the church of the New Testament, the name has been changed without divine authority. If the Baptists did it, it is a bad sign. Whenever a man changes his name, I always feel like asking what he has been doing that has made it necessary to change his name. But if the Baptists did not do it, why did they sit still and allow others to tamper with their name and ever make a protest? Since Brother Ross has given up the contention that the Baptist Church originated with John the Baptist, he has not even the semblance of an excuse from the Scriptures for the name "Baptist" or "Baptist Church;" but he has lost nothing of value in that, for the Baptists translated the New Testament and left the name out of it altogether. They translated "John the Baptist," "John the immerser." The News and Truth, a Baptist paper edited and published by Brother Taylor, of Murray, Ky., recently tried to help out on the present difficulty by quoting in that paper the following:

John the Baptist was a Baptist preacher, called and sent of God. Jesus was baptized by this Baptist preacher, going more than sixty miles on foot to find him (to Jesus it made a difference). Jesus called twelve disciples who were baptized by this Baptist preacher; hence, twelve Baptists. These twelve Baptists constituted the material out of which Jesus built his church; hence, a Baptist church. This is the church over which he said he was the head.

If the Baptists were correct (and I am sure they were) in translating the New Testament in their translation called "the Baptist Union Revision," it was "John the immerser;" hence, if the argument is correct, it would be this: "John the immerser was a preacher of immersion, called and sent of God. Jesus was immersed by this immerser preacher. Jesus called the twelve disciples who were immersed by John. These twelve immersed disciples constituted the material out of which Jesus built his church; hence, an immersed church." This is bound to follow if the Baptists translated the New Testament correctly. But why should Brethren Ross and Taylor exalt baptism above the Lord who commanded it by wearing a name that would indicate that their faith is in baptism instead of Christ?

But there is another reason why that church in Jerusalem was not a Baptist Church, and that is, it did not preach the same doctrine that the Baptists now preach. On the day of the establishment of that Jerusalem church the people who heard Peter's famous sermon asked: "What shall we do? And Peter said unto them, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." (Acts 2: 37, 38.) Does that sound like a Baptist preacher? No, he would have said: "Believe on Christ, and you shall receive the remission of sins before and without baptism." Brother Ross cannot deceive me on this point, for I was raised on Baptist teaching. It is also said of that Jerusalem church: "And the Lord added unto them day by day those that were sayed." (Acts 2: 47.) This is not true of the Baptist Church, for many of those whom they admit are saved are never added to it; and the Lord does not add to the Baptist Church, because that is done by a vote of the church. One may be saved and never be voted into the Baptist Church. What evidence does Brother Ross offer to prove that the church in Jerusalem was the first Baptist church in Jerusalem? Simply none, except his word, and all the facts then stated are against him.

Brother Taylor's claim that John the Baptist was a Baptist preacher is without proof. He was nowhere called "a Baptist preacher," but he is called "John the Baptist," not "John a Baptist." He was the only man in the New Testament that was ever called "Baptist," and if the fact that John baptized Jesus made him a Baptist, neither Jesus nor any other writer of the New Testament ever said so. "Baptist" was not John's name, but it was his occupation, like "John the blacksmith;" but if it had been his name, there is no proof that one would take his name because he baptized him. A Baptist means one who baptizes. Then why should Brethren Taylor and Ross give this name to women and others who never baptize any one? No, beloved, you are Baptists because you want to be, when you should be Christians because Christ requires it of you. "And it came to pass, that even for a whole year they were gathered together with the church, and taught much people; and that the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." (Acts 11: 26.)

"CONSTRUCTIVE WORK."

BÝ E. A. ELAM.

What is "constructive work?" "Constructive work" is an expression of indefinite meaning. All depends upon what is to be constructed and that which is to be accomplished by the construction.

God constructed the heavens and the earth, and his purpose for doing so is set forth in the Scriptures. He constructed the tabernacle of Moses and the temple of Solomon, giving the purpose of these constructions. Jesus constructed his church, of which the tabernacle and temple were types.

Jesus said: "Upon this rock I will build my church."

Jesus, then, built, or "constructed," his church, or he did not. As Moses built the tabernacle and as Solomon built the temple according to God's pattern of construction in every minute detail, so Jesus built his church according to God's directions. He did this, then, leaving this great work in no particular to any human being. It is full, complete, and perfect.

Our forbears wrote and spoke continuously of "the church about which we read in the New Testament," and of which Christ, and Christ alone, is the head. He "is head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." (Eph. 1: 22, 23.)

But what is the construction of the church? And how many professed preachers of the gospel and teachers of religion respect Christ's construction of his church? How many now can set this church in order and put it to work after the New Testament pattern?

Whatever else may be constructed and called a church, it is not only not the church of Christ, but is contrary to it, and, therefore, opposed to its progress.

God has not only made his church (which is the church of Christ) "the pillar and ground of the truth," but has taught it also to become self-edifying, "according to the working in due measure of each several part," or of every member, and to make "the increase of the body unto the building up of itself in love." Every church or congregation, properly constructed after the New Testament pattern, or every New Testament congregation, in due course of time becomes self-edifying. Every such church becomes not only self-edifying, but a radiating center from which the light of the gospel shines forth upon all surrounding communities, or is preached to all in reach of it. The congregation which does not send the gospel to others cannot be a church of Christ.

Some speak and write quite a deal of doing "constructive work;" but every preacher who has not this work of the church's becoming self-edifying and of sending the gospel to others has lost sight of the New Testament church and order of work, if he even had it, and is endeavoring to build up some "construction" of his own and different from the church of God.

In constructing his church, Christ placed in it elders, deacons, and other members, with their respective qualifications and duties. This is all; but all these are in it. The church is not properly set in order and set to work without these.

Christ gives clearly the scriptural qualifications of elders and also their well-defined work. These cannot be misunderstood.

While Christ gives most clearly every step sinners are to take in order to get into his church, or what to do to be saved from "old sins," he also clearly specifies the work of all ages and all classes in the church—old men, old women, young men, young women, husbands and wives, parents and children, masters and servants, neighbors and enemies, and the relationship and duties of Christians to civil governments, etc. He emphasizes and makes unmistakably plain the life the church must live in order to fill its mission and to finally enter heaven.

This is Christ's "constructive work." Any other is a liouse built on the sand. All preachers whose work is to change in any way the construction and work of Christ's church do destructive work.

All preachers in cities or the country, highly educated or otherwise, who teach the word of God daily from house to house and warn sinners night and day with tears; who set in order congregations according to the New Testament pattern; who build up Christians in the daily work of their homes, shops, offices, and all other places by teaching the dignity of work, the practice of honesty and uprightness, self-control and purity, and the exercise of faith and hope and love, and by teaching congregations to become self-edifying and self-sustaining, and to go "into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation," do real "constructive work." All others to something else.

But is this what some mean by "constructive work" Satan is a flatterer and an artful deceiver, "the deceiver of the whole world;" and since he first beguiled Eve and taught Aaron to make the golden calf as an "aid" to the worship of God, he has kept men busy in their own wisdom and self-conceit in constructing various religious organizations of their own as "aids" to the church of God, perfect within itself, as if God needed their advice and help to manage and accomplish his own work. This is not only an impeachment of God's wisdom and grace, but an exiltation of the human above the divine-in other works, of one's self above God. It is most distressing to see preachers and other brethren busily engaged in organizing and conducting their own lodges and flaunting their regalia in the face of the church and making a display before the world, instead of being humbly and powerfully clai in the whole armor of God that they "may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil," "and, having done all, to stand;" and in this way give God "the glory in tle church and in Christ Jesus unto all generations forever and ever." (Eph. 3: 20, 21.)

In regard to teaching the Bible in the home, n schools, or in any other place, when it comes to teaching the New Testament, if all do not teach the construction of the church as Christ has built it and do not teach all classes in it their duties and spheres, they do not teach the Bible, but something else instead.

There are hundreds of churches in Tennessee, for instance, as there are in other States, built after the divine model. Who did this great work? In every section of the State there were self-sacrificing men of faith, who, in the love of the truth and for Jesus' sake, preached the gospel wherever they could find an audience—in private houses, in schoolhouses, in groves, in halls, in courthouses, in warehouses, in church houses, from house to house, privately as well as publicly, and night and day. Notable among these was Jesse Sewell, the father of Caleb Sewell, of Corpus Christi, Texas, and William Sewell, of Abileie, Texas, and grandfather of Jesse P. Sewell, of Fort Worth, Texas. For the first fourteen years of his work as a preacher of the gospel, all that he received, aside from hospitality and brotherly treatment, was a pair of home-knit socks and one dollar.

When David Lipscomb and E. G. Sewell (brother to Jesse Sewell) removed to Nashville, there was only one congregation in this city. They worked away in a quiet, humble, steadfast manner with others like themselves, and now in Nashville and vicinity there are forty or more congregations, and still others in the county in which Nashville is the center. Other such men in the middle section of the State were so filled with the love of the truth and zeal for the salvation of souls that they "went everywhere preaching the word."

I am not saying that Jesse Sewell and these other self-sacrificing men should not have been liberally supported, for they should have been; but I am saying that the lack of support did not stop their preaching, and they did not wait for college and university degrees in order to begin. One grows sick at heart when he compares the great and grand, heroic and wonderful work of Jesse Sewell, of so-called "meager education"—a modest and meek, humble and faithful, zealous and godly man—with the pretenses and boasts and display of learning of some of these modern clouds without rain, all wind and no water, who never have planted one congregation.

But what of all this? This: About forty or more years ago, when the missionary society with its work was introduced into Tennessee and when there were not enough preachers in the State who favored it to hold a convention, those who were transported into the State came talking about these preachers I have named and hundreds like them as being "antimissionary," and called the elders who opposed their divisive work "bosses," etc. Now we meet with the same spirit in kind, if not in degree, in some who oppose "missionary societies" and contend for the all-sufficiency of the church. Some—I say "some," and hence not all by any means-but some young preachers, who would be the "ministers" of some of the largest and richest of these congregations and who would "take charge" of them, just as formerly the ones who worked in the societies desired to do, now speak of the elders and of their God-appointed work in about the same language and same spirit. The scriptural elders, with their scriptural qualifications and doing their scriptural work, stand in the way of these young and modern "ministers." Some of these young men seem to think these congregations were let down from heaven already built in order to furnish them places over which to "minister" and something to take charge of. They seem to have but little regard for the self-sacrifice and work of the men who started them and speak of them as men who did no "constructive work." Even if they do not call them "antimissionary," they call them "nonconstructive."

Some who do not pay their debts, or meet other obligations, or keep unspotted from the world, sometimes talk the loudest about "constructive work." One such recently went to a church which uses instrumental music in the worship and works in missionary societies, or is doing something else by this time.

The demagogue in political office does what he calls "constructive work" when he builds up a "machine" which will serve his own selfish ends and will perpetuate himself in office. So "the minister" who sets aside present elders who are unfavorable to his measures, appoints others to suit himself, and builds up a "machine" to serve his purpose and to fasten himself more securely upon the congregation, does his sort of "constructive work." All such "ministers" are in favor of the majority rule.

To ignore God's elders and their work, to build up clubs and cliques of social religious culture, and to call all this "the church of Christ," is very destructive indeed.

It is no argument at all to say that some "so-called elders" are not qualified and do not do the work of elders. The answer to this is: Build up some who are qualified and who will do their duty. The sinner says some in the church do not do right. Some preachers do not do right, but are immoral; some do not preach the gospel, or do their duty otherwise; but it does not follow that there are no pure and true preachers, or that there should be none at all. So, because some "so-called" elders are in no way qualified either in goodness or knowledge of the truth to serve and do not really serve, but act as figure-heads and dictators, it does not follow that the Lord made a mistake in appointing scripturally qualified ones in every church and gave plainly their work, or that preachers of the gospel should not help to develop such.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Virgil Larimore, my baby boy, recently spent two weeks with us here, his wife, Dessie, having passed away about one month before he left his home, in Florence, Ala., to visit us. Virgil, my last-born, has been and is, indeed and in truth, the Joseph of my declining years. He was sad, of course, his mind being necessarily on the one whose grave he left behind him; but he made a brave effort to be cheerful, and succeeded well under the circumstances.

December 4, 1907, he married Miss Dessie Jackson, of Florence, Ala., four miles from our old Mars' Hill home and school. Dessie was born June 16, 1878. Her mother died when she was only six years old; and when she was thirteen, her stepmother passed away, leaving her to bear the burden and meet the responsibility of keeping house and caring for a baby half-sister who died one year later, at the age of three, a sad bereavement that gave great grief to Dessie's tender, loving heart, so bravely meeting the sorrows and cares of life at such a youthful age.

Virgil and Dessie spent the first three years of their married life in the old Mars' Hill home. This gave us an opportunity to really know Dessie, and it is a source of comfort and consolation to know I have never had right, reason, or inclination to think or say even one disparaging thing of her. I have been in their home often when she, Virgil, and her father composed the family, and the very atmosphere of the home breathed peace, comfort, and happiness. I never saw Dessie appear to be in the least vexed, ruffled, or irritated about anything. She always seemed to be calm, quiet, satisfied, and cheerful.

Dessie passed most of her life in and near Florence, and was well known and highly regarded by the people of that community. She taught school several terms before her marriage, and during the World War, when there was a dearth of teachers, she cheerfully did her bit in that time of stress and trial by going back into the schoolroom as a teacher, at the request of school authorities. Being a successful and popular teacher, she continued her work in the schoolroom till forced by ill health to give it up, only a few months before she passed away.

She made a brave fight for life, having much to live for. The loved ones who were with her and tenderly cared for ber in her last moments did not—could not—tell her the end was so near; but that she realized the seriousness of her condition is evidenced by her pathetic appeal to her husband, just a brief time before she passed away—her last words on earth: "Don't let me go!" Then she fell into a sleep that knew no earthly waking. Her spirit returned to Him who gave it, and her body was laid to its last sleep in the peaceful cemetery at Florence.

She will be sadly missed by many. She was an efficient, conscientious teacher; a faithful friend; a kind, considerate daughter-in-law; an affectionate sister to the brothers who are left to lament their loss; a loving, thoughtful daughter to the aged father for whom she tenderly cared as long as she could, and to her husband a most devoted wife. He is the one who knew her best, and he says: "I think I speak correctly when I say a more devoted, loving wife and daughter has never lived."

She had no children, but she was devotedly attached to her brothers' children, and they, in turn, fondly loved "Aunt Dessie," and the memory of her love and tender care will remain with them while they linger here.

BROTHER SHEPHERD AT RICHMOND, VA.

As already noted in the Gospel Advocate, Brother J. W: Shepherd changes his address from Detroit, Mich., to 705 West Grace Street, Richmond, Va.

Brother Shepherd went to Richmond and took the work-Brother W. S. Long, Jr., gave up to go with the Vinewood congregation, Detroit, with which Brother Shepherd had so successfully labored for several years. Since locating in Richmond, Sister Shepherd has been seriously sick, but we are glad to say that she is now recovering in a satisfactory way.

From a private letter written by Brother Shepherd to Brother Elam we take the following extract:

The work is hard and attended by many difficulties; but the attendance has improved much since we came, and the brethren and sisters seem more hopeful. One of the worst things that we have to contend with is the place of meeting. We meet on the third floor of the Y. W. C. A. Building, and the approach to the building is up an additional flight of steps. We have some elderly people in the congregation, and they find it very difficult to climb so many steps. Now, there is an opportunity to buy a meetinghouse from the Presbyterians in a very desirable locality; but we are not able to buy it without assistance from the brethren elsewhere. I had a conference with one of the trustees yesterday, and he requested me to have the church make them an offer. I will bring it before the church next Sunday. Do you feel that you could bring it before the brotherhood in such a way that would arouse them to the importance of this point? This is all new to me, for I have never given much attention to raising money.

We are glad to have this report or any other report from Brother Shepherd concerning his good work and welfare. We take pleasure in giving this news to the brotherhood at large. We know something of the struggle heretofore of the faithful few in Richmond; and when this move is put on to raise the money to buy or erect a convenient and comfortable house of worship, we feel sure that brethren everywhere will generously respond. They have done so heretofore, and in this important case we are satisfied they will do so again.

The work at Richmond is in good hands. Brother Shepherd is a safe, conscientious, and unceasing Bible teacher. Some of our good brethren here in Tennessee have been, for some time, assisting in building up the work in Richmond. Richmond is a radiating center and should be a radiating point.

J. A.

A. CAMPBELL ON INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

Mr. F. W. Smith.—Dear Brother Smith: I am sending you with this a copy of Alexander Campbell's celebrated article on "Instrumental Music." Perhaps its appearance in the Gospel Advocate at this time might do good to some people who do not seem to know Mr. Campbell's views on this subject.

This article expresses my sentiments. You are at liberty to make whatever use you may think best of both the article and my letter. Your sister in Christ,

Bethany, W. Va. Mrs. HALL LAURIE CALHOUN.

In the Millennial Harbinger of 1851, Series 4, Volume I., printed and published by A. Campbell, Bethany, Va., on pages 581 and 582, may be found the following article:

INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

"Instrumental music is entirely in harmony with the most grateful, solemn, and happy feelings of which the human heart is susceptible. Indeed, sacred music upon an instrument tends, in a very considerable degree, to excite solemn and holy emotions; and we cannot forbear to say, that could the music of our churches be improved—could it be accompanied with an instrument—it would add very much to the solemnity of our worship; it would soothe and calm the feelings of the auditors; it would improve the order of the house; it would call into lively action the latent religious emotions of the heart, and add very much to the enjoyment on such occasions.

to the enjoyment on such occasions.

"Music exerts a mysterious charm upon man—it takes captive the citadel of life—carries him out of himself and leads him where it will. The shrill fife and the rattling drum inspire the soldier, just about to enter into battle, with a zeal and daring which no hardship can overcome and no danger intimidate, and causes him to rush headlong into the thickest of the combat, regardless of consequences. If martial music thus inspires the worshipers of Mars, will sacred music do less for the humble followers of the meek and lowly Jesus—the worshipers of the true and living God? No! It will not. It will inspire them, too, with zeal and courage, and impel them on to resist—not flesh and blood with instruments of death, but principalities and powers, spiritual wickedness in high places, with the armor of God and the sword of the Spirit.

The argument drawn from the Parker in favore of

The argument drawn from the Psalms in favor of instrumental music is exceedingly apposite to the Roman Catholic, English Protestant, and Scotch Presbyterian churches, and even to the Methodist communities. Their churches having all the world in them—that is, all the fleshly progeny of all the communicants—and being founded on the Jewish pattern of things—baptism being given to all born into the world of these politico-ecclesiastic communities—I wonder not, then, that an organ, a fiddle, or a jew's-harp should be requisite to stir up their carnal hearts, and work into ecstasy their animal souls, else "hosannahs languish on their tongues, and their devotions die." And that all persons who have no spiritual discernment, taste, or relish for their spiritual meditations, consolations, and sympathies of renewed hearts, should call for such aid, is but natural. Pure water from the flinty rock has no attractions for the mere toper or winebibber. A little alcohol, or genuine Cogniac brandy, or good old Madeira, is essential to the beverage to make it truly refreshing. So to those who have no real devotion or spirituality in them, and whose animal nature flags under the oppression of church service, I think, with Mr. G——, that instrumental music would be not only a desideratum, but an essential prerequisite to fire up their souls to even animal devotion. But I presume, to all spiritual-minded Christians, such aids would be as a cowbell in a concert.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

Please explain who crucified Christ, the Jews or the Gentiles, as we had the question up in our lesson recently and were divided.—T. P. BALLEY.

The scriptures which bear upon this question are as follows: "Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the Prætorium, and gathered unto him the whole band. And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe. . . . And when they had mocked him, they took off from him the robe, and put on him his garments, and led him away to crucify him." (Matt. 27: 27-31.) "And the soldiers led him away within the court, which is the Prætorium; and they called together the whole band. And when they had mocked him, they took off from him the purple, and put on him his garments. And they led him out to crucify him." (Mark 15: 16-20.) "And Pilate called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people, and said unto them, Ye brought unto me this man, as one that perverted the people: and behold, I, having examined him before you, found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him: no, nor yet Herod: for he sent him back unto us; and behold, nothing worthy of death hath been done by him. Pilate gave sentence that what they asked for should be done." (Luke 23: 13-24.) Pilate would have released Jesus when he was brought to him by the Jews, but the Jews would not agree for him to be released. They cried out: "Crucify him, crucify him!" The Jews were under the Roman Government, and could not put any one to death except by consent of the Roman Government. The Jews in heart were murderers. On the day of Pentecost, Peter, talking to the Jewish multitude, said, concerning Christ: "Him, being delivered up by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye by the hand of law-less men did crucify and slay." (Acts 2: 23.) Again, Luke says: "How the chief priests and our rulers delivered him up to be condemned to death and crucified him." (Luke 24: 20.) The Jews were guilty of crucifying Christ. The crucifixion was done through the agency of the Roman Government. The soldiers of the Roman Government did the execution. "The soldiers therefore, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments and made four parts, to every soldier a part, and also the coat." (John 19: 23.) Judas betrayed Jesus into the hands of the Jews. The Jews tried him with mock trials and would have put him to death, but they were afraid of the Roman Government. The Jews delivered Jesus to Pilate, the Roman governor, and Pilate and Herod examined him and found no fault in him. Pilate wished to release Jesus, but the Jews clamored against his release. Pilate finally consented for him to be put to death, and he was turned over to four Roman soldiers, who executed his crucifixion.

(1) How many persons were baptized on Pentecost—the three thousand? (2) Were there any women baptized? (3) The phrase "added unto them" means what? (4) Were there any women included in the one hundred and twenty? (5) Does the number "five thousand" (Acts 4: 4) mean five thousand besides women? (6) What was the gift of the Holy Spirit—the Spirit himself, remission of sins, the promise of eternal life, or something else?—James E. Chessor, Spencer, Tenn.

1. Yes, three thousand were baptized on the day of Pentecost. "They then that received his word were baptized, and there were added unto them in that day about three thousand souls." (Acts 2: 41.) McGarvey and others say that it was no task to baptize three thousand that day

2. No women are mentioned as being baptized on the day of Pentecost. There may have been women baptized, but the record does not so state. The first mention of women as being members of the church is found in Acts 5: 1, 14. The first mention we have of any woman's being a member of the church is in an incidental way, which leads us to think that other women before Sapphira had become members of the church. "And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women." (Acts 5: 14.) McGarvey says that the special mention of women here for the first time is a probable indication that among the converts there was now a greater relative number of them than before. If this statement be correct, we may infer that some women were baptized on the day of Pentecost. We do know that women were mentioned as being with the apostles just before the day of Pentecost. "These all with one accord continued steadfastly in prayer, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren." (Acts 1: 14.) Women were disciples of Christ while he was upon earth, women were waiting with the apostles for the "power from on high," and women are mentioned as being in the church soon after Pentecost. We know that the gospel invitation included women, and that Peter preached the gospel on the day of Pentecost. It is very probable that some women obeyed the gospel that

3. The phrase "added unto them" means that they were brought into the church. It is similar to the expression, "and believers were the more added to the Lord," and, "much people was added unto the Lord." (Acts 11: 24.) To be added unto the Lord or added unto the apostles who were in the church is to be brought into the church.

4. Yes, the one hundred and twenty mentioned in Acts 1: 15 included those who are mentioned in Acts 1: 14. The one hundred and twenty were probably all who at that time resided in Jerusalem. This would include women.

5. It is very likely that the five thousand mentioned in Acts 4: 4 means five thousand men. The Oriental custom of all nations at that time, and even now, was to number or count only the men.

6. The "gift of the Holy Spirit" was the Holy Spirit as a gift. This is a promise of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, by which we are to bear the fruit of the Spirit and without which we are not of Christ.

Is it right for Christians to call sectarians "brother," as I notice in the Gospel Advocate of July 17 one Brother Srygley calling Royce Taylor "brother" in answering his abuse? I won't call on one to give thanks at my table, nor to pray. If I am wrong, please correct me.—C. E. MULLEN.

It depends somewhat upon whether or not one encourages error or sin. No affiliation or relationship or fellowship should be had with any one in error that will encourage that one in error. On the other hand, all error should be corrected, and we should seek every opportunity to correct the error. Peter called the Jews who had murdered Christ "brethren." (See Acts 2.) If Peter could call the murderers of Jesus "brethren," I do not see why we should refuse to call those who are in error "brethren." It is not enough for one to say that Peter called the Jews "brethren" merely from a national or tribal relationship. Again, Stephen called them "breth-(See Acts 7: 2.) Paul also called them "brethren." (Acts 22: 21; 23: 1.) I know that Paul called these Jews "brethren" from a respect for the Jewish family to which he belonged. He could call them "brethren" without surrendering any truth or principle or truth of Christianity. In the same way I think I may call believers in Christ, though entangled in the errors of denominationalism, "brethren," without surrendering any truth or violating any principle of Christianity. We speak often of the "Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." This may be done without violating any principle of right or encouraging any one in error.

BIBLE CROSS WORD

THERE are, of course, some New Testament heroes in this cross word puzzle. But the greater number of words come from the Old Testament. You will find this test more interesting than difficult—more amusing

How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

ETERNITY.

BY ALICE STRATTON JOHNSON.

Let us look through faith into the unseen world; "for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

Life is short and time is on a swift wing, and before long the sun that shines to-day will shine no more forever. The constellation that adorns the canopy of blue at night will adorn it no more. Soon the awful crash, and heaven and earth, like a scroll, shall roll away; the night of earth shall have vanished before the dawning day of eternal splendor, and we shall stand in the presence of God.

Now is the time to examine our hearts and see that they are right with the Ruler of all things. Soon the mists shall have cleared away and we shall know as we are known. We shall awake to behold the morning of the resurrection, when we shall appear before the bar of the great Judge, hearing the awful sentence pronounced, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire," or welcome the sweet sound of a loving Savior's voice: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you."

Let us seek that Father while he may be found; for through channels of pearl the sparkling waters of God's own mercy flows, and through the lens of our spiritual vision we behold him as he is-a God of power and hope that shall our convoy be When passing to eternity; Our star of hope, so bright and fair, Will shine undimmed forever there.

Let us live so close to Him that we may have that hope that remains beyond this life, which will strengthen us amid life's ills.

A PECULIAR PEOPLE.

BY H. M. PHILLIPS.

In Tit. 2: 14 we are told that Jesus "gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Webster says "peculiar" means "one's own; not owned in common." Now, how fitting that is for those who belong to Christ, because they have been redeemed from iniquity and are to be zealous of good works! In the Old Testament, God's people were to be "a peculiar treasure" (Ex. 19: 5; Ps. 135: 4) and "a peculiar people" (Deut. 14: 2; 26: 18). Now, I notice it did not say a curious, odd, cranky, or foolish, but "peculiar people." While some of these words might suit, yet they are not the ones used. So to be peculiar would at least imply to us that what was owned in common in religious matters would not distinguish God's people from others. Now, there must be some very distinctive features which mark the real differences between God's own and what is owned in common. Israel wanted to be like the nations around them and have a king, and it seems many now who claim to be spiritual Israel are acting on the same principle. If we, as the people of God, or church of Christ, are not distinctively peculiar to the religious bodies about us, then either we are not God's own or else the religious bodies are all God's. The one outstanding feature is that we propose to give a Bible reason for all we do and teach. They say we think, believe, or feel like other things will do just as well. Now, if we work through a society not sanctioned in principle by the word of God, and so do they, wherein are we peculiar? If we soften up and fail to preach the real meat of the word, and they do likewise, wherein are we peculiar as God's own? If we attend practically all of the places of worldly amusement, and so do they, what is the peculiarity of us? If they say, join the church, and so do we; or if they talk of their preacher as pastor, and so do we; or if they place things in the worship not authorized by the Word, and so do we; or if they fail to do mission work, and so do we; or if they want all preaching, or almost all, at some large house, and so do we; or if they want a big, fine house and a large congregation and report to the papers about numbers, and so do we; or if they seek to be popular and cater to the whims of the world, and so do we; or if they fail to give as prospered, and so do we; or if they gossip and fuss and wrangle and find fault with each other and tear up a congregation, and so do we; or if they fail to consecrate themselves to God and study his word and live as it directs, and so do wewherein are we peculiar as God's own? Think seriously and act wisely.

It might be quite embarrassing to call the roll of preachers and laymen and jot down those who have not read a real book in a month, or two, or three.-Exchange.

UNDERSTANDING. BY H. C. FLEMING.

"See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil. Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is." (Eph. 5: 15-17.)

The above is a very important injunction to all who are endeavoring to so live that they may inherit eternal life, and it implies the ability to understand. No animal below man has this ability. However, man has; therefore, he is accountable if he does not understand. On this point of distinction between man and animals. I heard my teacher, W. B. Huddlestone, at Spencer, Tenn., on January 1, 1850, say to the school, using the monkey as an illustration, that you could teach him a great many tricks; but that if he were about to freeze to death and there was plenty of wood and kindling and fire or matches, you never could teach him to build a fire to warm himself. The revealed will of the Lord is plain and easily to be understood by those who have the will

Why, then, is there so much confusion among men in reference to that will? It must be apparent to any that think that it is because of the violation of the teaching of Paul, "That ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you." (1 Cor. 1: 10.) Furthermore, the preaching of Christ, and him crucified, became a stumblingblock unto the Jews, and unto the Greeks foolishness. (See 1 Cor. 1: 23.) That preaching is still a stumblingblock to the Jews and foolishness to the would-be wise of this age. But "the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men." (Verse 25.)

A little departure from the will of God, by its influence, brings confusion, and that confusion still more, and on and on until men are engulfed in the vortex of the great whirlpool of sin. (See 2 Thess. 2: 7-12.) Peter, in speaking to Christians, says: "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord." (2 Pet. 1: 2.) In verse 4 he mentions "exceeding great and precious promises" by which we "might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." A false understanding, as far as it extends, is detrimental to a correct understanding of the will of the Lord. Surely God has not given to man a revelation which he cannot understand, if he will take the pains to study what is revealed therein, and leave that which is unrevealed to the wisdom and power of God.

SELF-PRAISE.

BY FRED BLANCHARD.

"For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." (Rom. 12: 3.)

Lots of people are "blowing their own horns" to-day. In view of that fact, I want to tell of three men I know, with the hope that it will do good. I am sure most of us are hero worshipers, more or less. The triumvirate that I place highest in the church of Christ to-day, from the standpoint of ability, influence, etc., is composed of none other than T. B. Larimore, A. G. Freed, and N. B. Hardeman. I name them in order, I believe, of age. The greatest lesson I learned from the lives of these men is that the truly great are perfectly humble.

Whenever I think of Brother Larimore, the words "saint," "holy," "godly," "righteous," etc., naturally come into my mind. I do not believe there is a man living to-day who is better. His goodness is the secret of his marvelous power. I was fortunate to hear him preach through two protracted meetings and almost every Sunday and Sunday night for'a year. He reminds me of Elijah, Isaiah, and John the Baptist in the earnestness of his appeal. But I never heard him say one time that he was a learned man or a good man. He leaves it for the others to tell.

A. G. Freed can give the clearest exposition of scriptural truths of any man I know. To hear him preach on "Faith," or "To you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven," or "Ps. 23," is to hear the very best since the days of Peter and Paul. Probably Brother Freed has as good knowledge of the structure of the English sentence as any man living to-day. I have always thought that when he has "had his say" regarding a passage of scripture or a point in English, very little remained to be said. I went to school to him four years, and have heard him preach many times, but never once have I seen him appear to try to leave an impression on the minds of others that he was a smart man. He leaves it for the others to tell.

I am sure that thousands will agree with me that N. B. Hardeman is without a superior to-day as a public speaker, especially on Bible subjects. He has a good voice, a clear-thinking mind, and a splendid appearance on the platform. He has a remarkable knowledge of the Bible and a way of telling it so that all can understand. But he seems to be unconscious of his ability. For four years he was my teacher, and I am sure that he did not say one time that he was a fine public speaker. At least, I never heard him say it. He leaves it for the others to tell.

But all men are not like these. Not long ago I had a conversation with a man whom very few would know if I should mention his name. He said to me: "Brother Blanchard. I am a deep man in the Scriptures; I know the Book." He was complaining to me because the church did not use him more. He said: "If anybody can preach a gospel sermon, I can."

Another one told me he had one thousand sermon outlines of his own. Think of it, a whole thousand! I had just told him how hard I had to study to preach to the same congregation twice each Sunday for a year. What a blessing if I only had a thousand sermon outlines, all my own! I could preach twice each Lord's day for the same congregation for nine years, and then have sixty-four left. Several outlines. Then he told me he was a great success as an evangelist. He said that one year he baptized more people than any other man in the State.

Greenville, S. C., May o. On March 29 I began a meeting at Lebanon, Tenn., and continued it nearly two weeks. There were eight additional was much editions and the church was much edified. I will labor with them again in October, the Lord willing. On April 12 I began a tent meeting at Birming-12 I began a tent meeting at Birmingham, Ala. Good crowds attended the services. This was the first missionary meeting the colored church had ever attempted, and they were much encouraged. Three men obeyed the gospel. They are arranging to do a great work this fall. They have already held two meetings this year. I am now at Greenville in a tent meeting, and the outlook is bright. Brother G. F. Gibbs (white) arranged for this meeting for my people, and he and the congregation that he labors with are doing all in their power to establish the work among the colored establish the work among the colored people. It is encouraging to even be among such Christians. This meeting will continue three weeks. Brethren, pray for us. There is not a colored member here.—M. Keeble.

Ackerman, Miss., May 4.—I wish to make a report and to ask a question. I was with the new congregation at Duffee on the first Lord's day in April. They are doing good work and looking forward with great anticipation to July 12, when John P. Lewis and Homer Dudley are to be with them in a meeting. I was with the faithful few at Kitchener on the the faithful few at Kitchener on the second Lord's day in April, and found them with a "mind to work," getting ready to support a mission meeting at Sebastopol, beginning on June 7, with J. Roy Vaughan to do the preaching and the writer to lead the preaching and the writer to lead the song service. I next went to Hillsboro on the third Lord's day, to our new mission. There are only four members there. They are getting ready for their meeting, which is to begin on the fourth Lord's day in June, with the writer to do the preaching. I was with the church at Shady Grove on the fourth Lord's day at 11 A.M. Brother A. H. Smith, of Dancy, Miss., was at Oak Ridge at 11 A.M., and came over to Shady Grove and preached at night. Now to the question. I was called to preach the memorial sermon at Dancy on the to the question. I was called to preach the memorial sermon at Dancy on the second Lord's day in April, and at Clarkson on the third Lord's day, which I did, and preached the truth to the best of my ability. Did I do wrong in so doing? We had the regular Lord's-day worship at Clarkson. I do not go to memorials or anything else that deprives me of that. I was criticized by one of our brethren for doing this. The Gospel Advocate is fine. We enjoy it very much.—H. D. Jeffcoat. Jeffcoat.

[We think that instead of doing wrong, any one would do wrong to miss an opportunity to preach. Brother Jeffcoat' does not say what the memorial sermon was in memory of. A gospel sermon could not be regarded as a memorial of war or its victims. If a preacher will preach what Jesus and the apostles preached, without catering to public favor, he is not apt to become popular as a memorial speaker or as a holiday orator.—J. Edited by Charles H. Gabriel. Of this book and it editor, T. B. Mosley, a first-class music composer says: "It is the best book of the kind I ever examined. It is indeed a high-class collection of ressongs, suited for children, the most beautiful melodies, supported by rich harmonies, which are characteristic of Mr. Charles H. Gabriel, who is, no doubt, it a class by himself as a composer of this grade of music."

RANCIER.

George Rancier died on March 17, 1925, at his home in Killeen, Texas, aged seventeen years, three months, and two days. He obeyed the gospel in 1919, being baptized by Early Arceneaux. He was a student of Killeen High School, and came to dinner from school in high spirits of his coming graduation. He spoke happily to his father, mother, and sister, and while going toward the dining room fell and died suddenly of heart failure. He is survived by his parents, Brother and Sister Will Rancier; two sisters, Mamie and Margaret; and one brother, Russell. Funeral services were conducted by Elder H. W. George Rancier died on March 17, ices were conducted by Elder H. W. Wrye. WILL RANCIER. Wrye.

HAMRICK.

HAMRICK.

On January 3, 1925, Brother A. R. Hamrick, of Soddy, Tenn., passed into the rest room of the departed righteous. For about thirty-five years he had been a member of the family of God upon the earth, and was said to have lived a consistent Christian life. For some years he was an elder in the Soddy congregation. He is said to have filled the office well, and nothing but good reports of his life and work come from all who knew him, both in and out of the church. He leaves a wife and ten children, who have our deepest sympathy in the loss of such a good father and companion. Funeral services were conducted by the writer on Monday afternoon, January 5, and the body was interred in the Soddy cemetery.

W. C. PHILLIPS.

BLACK.

BLACK.

On February 14, 1925, I was called to Millport, Ala., by W. K. Black, to speak at the funeral of his father, Warn Black. Brother Black was born on March 20, 1845. He was married to Mary Ann Gleer in July, 1866. To this union were born ten children, only one of which preceded him to the spirit land. His wife departed this life on April 11, 1918. Brother Black obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Dow Randolph some fifty years ago and was faithful till death. He will be pleasantly remembered by some of our best preachers, as he served as elder of the congregation for a number of years. May each surviving child strive to meet these loved ones at the beautiful gate. child strive to heat at the beautiful gate. FRANK BAKER.

BLACK.

BLACK.

Brother Dougald Black died in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, in his eighty-fifth year. He was reared near Appin, Ontario, in a godly family. His parents and several of his brothers and sisters were members of the church of Christ. Brother Black was very liberal with his means to help the poor, for the support of the gospel, and to circulate good books, tracts, and papers. He took the Gospel Advocate for years, read it carefully, and then passed it on to others where he believed it would do good. where he believed it would do good. He had three sisters and four brothers, but he lived to be the oldest and was the last one to go. Brother Black lived in Hamilton for some thirty or forty years, and met and worked with the church in Hamilton. I knew him for over twenty years, and lelways looked upon him as a faith I always looked upon him as a faithful and loyal disciple of Christ. He was never married, and for a number of years he boarded at Mrs. Lloyd's, in Hamilton, where he died. She was good and kind to him, and when his good and kind to him, and when his money was gone she cared for him until the last. A few years before he died he made his home in London, Ontario, with Sister Rosser, who was his niece, and also for a time with Mr. Black, his nephew, near Appin, Ontario. Sister Black, his sister-in-law, waited on him at different times when he was sick and was with him when he was sick, and was with him the last two weeks he lived to assist Mrs. Lloyd in caring for him. Brother Clifton conducted services in Hamilton, and his remains were buried near Glencoe. S. WHITFIELD.

WILSON.

A. L. Wilson, of Mayfield, Ky., was born on June 14, 1883; obeyed the gospel about the age of sixteen; began preaching when he was twenty-two; was married to Miss Victoria Culp, of Bells, Tenn., on June 8, 1911; and died on January 14, 1925. Brother Wilson leaves on this side a mother, three brothers, a wife and Brother Wilson leaves on this side a mother, three brothers, a wife and four children, many relatives, and a host of friends, to live and pray to meet him in that place where death will never come. His entire life was spent in the county where he was born, except the time he was in school at Henderson, Tenn., and while he was away in meetings. This tells more eloquently than I can the manner of man he was. In this county he taught school for several years, and at the time of his death he was county superintendent of public schools. He spent the last twenty years of his life in preaching the gospel and in trying to build up the church. He was meek and lowly in gospei and in trying to build up the church. He was meek and lowly in spirit and timid in manner, adhering to the Bible with a tenacity seldom equaled. He was earnest, positive, kind, and persuasive in speech. I have known and loved him from childhead. I have never known a manner. hood. I have never known a man freer from egotism and self-conceit. hood. I have never known a man freer from egotism and self-conceit. His knowledge of, and reverence for, the Scriptures was wonderfully great and sublimely beautiful. In gentleness and meekness he was a fine example of New Testament Christianity. Brother Wilson loved the Bible, believed it, and reverenced it as the word of God. He carried out the charge that Paul delivered to Timothy, "Preach the word." He never preached himself, nor his family, nor his friends, but he preached Christ Jesus the Lord. He loved the church and honored it as a divine institution, perfect for all the purposes for which it was established. Eternity alone will reveal the good accomplished by the efforts of such a godly man. His tongue is silenced by death, but "he being dead yet speaketh."

SCOTT

SCOTT.

A noble Christian character has been called to rest, one who could truly say with Paul: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." Mrs.

Artie Jane Scott, daughter of Jonathan and Lou Mira Hall, was born on March 11, 1851, near Newbern, Tenn. Baptized by Elder Holmes at a very early age, she became a member of the church of Christ, of which she the church of Christ, of which she lived a consistent member nearly sixty years. She was married on October 17, 1877, to Elder Thomas Elihu Scott. To this union were born six children. She is survived by two sons—Homer, Wilson, Scott, Jackson, Miss., and Horace Hall Scott, Henderson, Tenn.; two daughters—Mrs. Miss., and Horace Hall Scott, Henderson, Tenn.; two daughters—Mrs. J. M. King, Newbern, Tenn., and Mrs. L. C. Abbott, Kenton, Tenn.; two sisters—Mrs. J. L. Holt, Memphis, Tenn., and Mrs. A. H. Sanford, Dyer, Tenn.; eight grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends. She was a strong, healthy woman almost to the time of her death, being most to the time of her death, being stricken suddenly, lingering only a few days, breathing her last in the home of her daughter with whom she made her home. She passed away on November 12, 1924. Sister Scott was a great woman, not as the world counts greatness, but as the Lord counts it. She was a devoted wife, a faithful helpmate to that most lova-ble and loving minister of God who labored so faithfully in the gospel in West Tennessee and other places; a West Tennessee and other places; a devoted, self-sacrificing mother, a home-maker and a home-keeper. Such a sweet and hospitable home it was! Full of love and joy! Where the stranger found a welcome and friends were made equal sharers in the love, joy, and peace that pervaded the household. It was a real blessing to know Brother and Sister Scott. She has gone to her heavenly home, but know Brother and Sister Scott. She has gone to her heavenly home, but her works will live after her. To the four devoted children, their wives and husbands, and the grandchildren, who must sorrow, but not as those who have no hope, let me say, as Paul did to Timothy: "Abide thou in the things which they hast learned and heat here which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them; and that from a babe thou hast known the sacred writings which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus."

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book -merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

Ethridge, Tenn., May 5.—I have just returned from a visit to Riverside, the home of Brother H. N. Mann. I enjoyed a good visit with him and his family; also with my nephew, Mr. Griggs, his wife and his three fine boys; Brother Spann (who is also a nephew) and family; also with our aged Brother Banks and family, and others. Brother Mann is an earour aged Brother Banks and family, and others. Brother Mann is an earnest worker in preaching the word in his sincere, earnest, and impressive manner, and his influence is felt as far as he is known. On Lord's day, May 3, I enjoyed meeting with the brethren at Hohenwald and hearing brethren at Hohenwald and hearing a good sermon by Brother Henry T. King, a man whom I have known and loved for many years. I was very favorably impressed with the church and with the people of Hohenwald. A finer, more intelligent-looking assembly of people cannot be found anywhere than the congregation I saw there. And they make no attempt whatever (neither men nor women) to conceal the fact that they appreciate a visiting brother.—Lucas North. a visiting brother.-Lucas North.

But it has required some time to get the work under way. We began meeting for Bible study in the home of Sister E. Meador early last January, and have been constantly working toward the establishment of the Master's cause in Tucson since that time. Brother G. W. Riggs, of Los Angeles, Cal., preached for us one week and assisted us in securing the courthouse for the Lord's-day worship, and we hope to hold this meeting place until we are able to find more suitable quarters. On arriving here we began an immediate search for members of the church, which led soon to the finding of four or five sisters. Since that time our number has grown slowly, but steadily, until we now have sixteen willing workers. There are also eight or ten others who were members before coming to Tucson, but who have not yet been willing to come out and help us bear the burden. Tucson is a city of nearly thirty thousand inhabitants, and is a creat health resort. There us bear the burden. Tucson is a city of nearly thirty thousand inhabitants, and is a great health resort. There is no greater missionary field in the world. But, somehow, no loyal gospel preacher has ever been able to remain long enough to establish the Lord's cause on a permanent footing. It is very difficult for a minister to earn his living here, for we have all the peculiar conditions that ordinarily characterize any great health resort.—Robert S. Walker.

BY JAMES A. ALLEN

He has a very poor conception of manhood who would abolish law in order that he might act as a free man. Whatever the skeptic may say against Christianity and against the universe being ruled by the law of God, he must admit that he himself is under the dominion of law equally as rigid and stern as any to which he objects. Everything is governed by law; every system of all the systems of the universe; every realm and kingdom of nature; every system of the human body; and we might come down to the fact that every atom is working under the control of recognized law, and that Providence, through law, is guiding the world in its progress and is thus attaining unto the great end of things, which is to render honor and glory to God and happiness to men.

$ $ $

Man is necessarily under the dominion of law. And notwithstanding the fact that the creation of man, made in the image of his Creator, was the crowning work of God, still man is the only order of creation that rebelled against God and that refused to be governed by the law of God. Where now is the man who thinks that God's law in the church may be disregarded; that any kind of service will do; that the blowing of a horn or the playing of a fiddle will do no harm? It was only a stretching forth of the hand, a little eating of a forbidden fruit; but it wrecked the world and brought misery upon man and all our woe. The fruit was nothing. It was disobedience to God, a refusal to obey God—to observe the law of God. As long as man continued to obey God, he was blessed and happy; he was the monarch of the earth, had the dominion over every living thing. All nature was in unison with the blessedness and happiness of man; and as they dwelt eastward in Eden, it was then that "the morning stars sung together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy."

As man lost the happiness for which God created him and became a sinner in the sight of heaven through the disregard of law, we might say, in this place, that it is through a compliance with law that he is again reinstated in the favor of God. The redemption of man from sin and from the grave, in the good providence of God, was to be made possible through the achievement of the great Lawgiver, of whom Moses in the wilderness was but the faintest type. In speaking of Immanuel and his reign, the prophet said: "The government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and of peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it, and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even forever." "Out of Zion," said the same oracle, "shall go forth the law, and the word of Jehovah from Jerusalem." Through the law of adoption, under the reign of Jesus, man may leave the kingdom of darkness and sin, which he entered by transgression, and may become an adopted child of God-a partaker of the blessings of God's family, or church.

The law of God in conversion and in the growth and development of Christian character as adopted children, as members of the church, is as unchangeable and neverchanging as the course of the sun in the heavens. The church is, in all respects, what it ought to be in order to properly school and prepare man to live in heaven. It does not need any human touch to expedite its progress in this work or to make it more alluring in the eyes of a wicked and idolatrous world. In the erection of the tabernacle, which was a type of the church, Moses was warned of God to observe implicitly the directions given in the making of every article, small or great; "for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern that was showed thee in the mount." If Moses could not deviate in the slightest particular, if he could not add a single curtain or door in all the structure of that wonderful tabernacle, where is the man who can in any way change the order given by apostles and prophets in the great living temple of the Lord, in the church of the living God, which is the pillar and support of the truth?

It is the appointment of God that we worship and work in the church in harmony with apostolic direction. But man is conceited and is prone to want to improve the laws of his Maker. Instead of living as a consistent Christian and as a member of the church of God, in the great work of evangelizing and reforming the world, he endeavors to get up a little rival institution, aping the glory and grandeur of the church, that is founded simply and solely upon nothing under the shining heavens but buman presumption and conceit, to do the great work for which God established the church and set it in order. The mere existence of a human society to do the work of the church is an open rebellion against Heaven; it is an attempt to set the wisdom of man above the wisdom of Cod. And howsoever much it is our desire to see the heathen converted, to see them pointed to the Light of God, we shall wish them the blessing of remaining in heathen ignorance forever in preference to bowing at the slirine of partisan devotees, to becoming a party to the high-handed crime of presumptuously ignoring an institution that God established in his wisdom and that carried the gospel to the ends of the civilized world before the cumbersome machinery of modern times had originated in the brains of sinful men.

We wish to see the churches conform to the ancient and apostolic order. We wish to see the disciples of our day and time imitate the examples set by the disciples of that illustrious era, of that golden age, which yet shines as the most splendid century in the whole moral map of the world. As we look back over the night that settled between us and them, and as we see that it was caused by the presumption and folly of men who departed from God's order; and then, upon the other hand, as we think of the noble efforts of the reformers to turn the eyes of the people again to God and his word instead of the opinions and speculations of men, we are more than ever impressed with the fact that in this day, more than in any other since the grand defection, the Christian profession is growing gradually nearer the theory, if not the practice, of the ancient apostles. Brethren, why not the practice? We have the theory—that is, to speak as a whole. Why cannot we imitate the good works of the first disciples and their labors in the cause to evangelize and convert the world to God?

BOLL'S DOCTRINE REVIEWED.

The review of the doctrine taught by Brother R. H. Boll, of Louisville, Ky., by R. L. Whiteside and C. R. Nichol, is a complete refutation and exposure of the false and divisive teaching of R. H. Boll and his associates. This review should be in the hands of every Bible student. The doctrine, which is a combination of Russellism and Adventism, has done much to disturb and divide the children of God. But there is nothing left undone by Brethren Whiteside and Nichol to show how utterly antagonistic to the plain teaching of God's word is this doctrine advocated by Boll and his colaborers. ISRAEL'S JOURNEY TO CANAAN.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

THE BAPTISMAL COMMENCEMENT.

Israel's journey from Egypt to Canaan is clearly a type of the Christian's journey to heaven. Read thoughtfully 1 Cor. 10: 1-13; supplement with Heb. 3 and Heb. 11: 29. The passage in the Corinthian letter, to which attention is especially directed, is a solemn warning to Christians of all time, enforced as it is by Israel's failure, against the danger of apostasy. "Wherefore," run the final words, "let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

That the type may be seen at a glance, the following simple diagram is submitted:

Egypt	Red Sea	Wilderness	Cannan
Sin	Baptism	Church	Heaven

The Israelites were enslaved in Egypt. Under Moses. they passed through the Red Sea and were freed from their cruel taskmasters. Then they were sorely tried in the wilderness for forty years, a generation perishing on the march because of unbelief and disobedience. Finally the second generation entered Canaan, passing through the Jordan as their fathers had passed through the Red Sea, and entered into their promised inheritance. In like manner we were in the world held in bondage under sin. But we were made free from our past sins when in faith we were baptized into Christ. Then began our endurance as soldiers of the cross, as followers of Christ; and, finally, if we persevere, we shall cross over the mystic river of the borderland, the Jordan of death, and enter upon our inheritance, the "better country" we hope for. That the Spirit meant this type to instruct and encourage us is indisputable.

We are, as antitypes, in the same position with Israel. They became figures of us, as of the Corinthians, types, examples. "Now these things were our examples." "In these things they became figures of us" is a marginal rendering. "Now these things happened unto them by way of example [figure]." The segments of the journey are each typical. Egypt, the wilderness, and Canaan typify, respectively, the world, the church, and heaven. "The sea of transition represents the laver of regeneration, Moses foreshadows Christ, Israel the baptized disciples, the pursuing Egyptians are the sins left behind, and Pharaoh is a type of the devil." (Quoted by B. W. Johnson.) The analogy of the baptismal commencement is clear and pointed. "For I would not, brethren, have you ignorant, that our fathers were all under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea." With the walls of the sea on either side and the hovering cloud overhead, the Israelites at the Red Sea passage were buried out of sight of the Egyptians. That this prefigures immersion is indisputable. "We were buried therefore with him [Christ] through baptism into death."

LUSTING AFTER EVIL THINGS.

Mention of the commencement of the journey is incidental and introductory to the main burden of the passage. The object is to warn, to admonish, with striking examples, of Israel's failure. Now the history of this failure through unbelief is very human, and we can profit by a study of it. It may be that we shall find ourselves not a whit better or more stable than were the Israelites. We are men of like passions with them and possess simliar

Nothing was wrong with Israel's baptism. They all passed through the Red Sea. Deliverance came for all, and they all sang pæans of victory on the farther shore. Faith gave them a start. So far, good. "Howbeit Inevertheless] with most of them God was not well pleased." The Authorized Version reads, "with many of them." All were baptized, all were fed, all drank of the water supernaturally supplied; but notwithstanding God had done so much for them all without exception, with most of them later he was not pleased. Indeed, he was sorely displeased, and by his might they were overthrown in the wilderness. Why was this? Paul charges it up to their unbelief, to their exceeding sinfulness.

All started with Canaan as their goal, but most of them fell-a startling warning to Christians: "Now these things were our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted." The Israelites, then, were led astray by lusting after evil things, and a partial list of their sins is given, together with some of the punishments incurred. Many fell into idolatry; some committed fornication, twenty-three thousand falling because of this sin in one day; some made trial of the Lord, and perished by serpents; others murmured, and perished by the destroyer. Every transgression and disobedience had its just recompense of reward.

Now, Paul set these things down for our good. Especially were such warnings pertinent to the Corinthians, who were so much given to similar inclinations. Hence the solemn words that follow the enumeration: "Now these things happened unto them by way of example; and they were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the ages are come." Such warnings hold good for all time. God yet deals on the same principles; hence, these Israelitish examples enforce lessons of practical value. They are beacon lights to Christians. They are solemn danger signals to be heeded with profit or neglected with peril. Let no man, therefore, presume to think he is able to stand, that there is no danger of falling. If we think we stand-fatal delusion!-let us take heed lest we fall. The Israelites fell. The Corinthians lapsed into a state of decay. The Hebrews verged on apostasy. We, too, may fall. "Take heed!"

DANGER OF FALLING AWAY.

Now, Israel had faith to pass through the Red Sea. "By faith they passed through the Red Sea as by dry land." But they did not have faith to persevere, to endure. That is why they murmured, turned back in their hearts, rebelled. Theirs was an evil heart of unbelief. That accounts for their falling away from the living God. That is why their bodies fell in the wilderness. Their malady was the evil heart of unbelief, out of which comes only one fruit-disobedience. All the evil things charged to their account were the issues of unbelief.

And what awful deeds unbelief wrought! Israel's faith wrought the Red Sea deliverance; Israel's unbelief wrought the wilderness destruction. And without entrance into Canaan—their objective—their initial deliverance mattered not at all. What difference does it make whether they started from Egypt, if they are to fail of ultimate success—to start only to come short of the goal?

And what does baptism avail us now, if we are not to hold fast our confidence firm unto the end? What does it profit to start well, and to run well for a time, and then to fall away? Baptism is good—we are baptized into Christ; but by patience endurance in well-doing we enter into glory.

"Be thou faithful unto death." Then-the crown shall be yours.

INSTRUMENTAL-MUSIC QUESTIONS.

BY G. C. BREWER.

Several brethren have written to me for a copy of the questions that I submitted to Walker in the Columbia debate. I have only one copy, and I have not time to make other copies. It occurred to me that the Gospel Advocate might think them worth space and thus give them to all the brethren who want them. I cannot hear from Walker.

The questions are as follows:

1. Do the Scriptures teach us to use instrumental music in the worship of God?

2. If so, can we worship God acceptably without doing that which the Scriptures teach us to do—viz., use instrumental music?

3. If we can worship God acceptably without doing some things that the Scriptures teach us to do, what portion of the Scriptures are we under obligation to obey? Are we left free to do only that which pleases us?

4. If the Scriptures do not teach us to use instrumental music in the worship, in what sense is it "scriptural?"

5. Does the Greek verb "psallo" as used in the New Testament include instrumental music?

6. Does not Paul enjoin us to do that which "psallo" includes?

includes? 7. If "psallo" includes instrumental music, and if Paul enjoins us to psallo, can we obey Paul's injunction without using instrumental music?

8. If "psallo" does not include instrumental music, why do you use the word to prove that instrumental music is scriptural?

9. If instrumental music is not in the word "psallo," in what way does the word support your proposition?

10. If instrumental music is in the word, how can we obey the injunction to psallo without using instrumental

11. If we cannot obey the injunction to psallo without instrumental music, do you think that those to whom Paul first wrote and all other Christians for the first five hundred years of the Christian era ruthlessly disobeyed Paul's injunction?

12. Did not the people of Corinth, Ephesus, and Colosse

12. Did not the people of Corinth, Ephesus, and Colosse speak Greek?

13. Did they not, therefore, know what Paul meant for them to do when he told them to psallo?

14. If the word meant make instrumental music, and if they knew its meaning, how do you account for the fact that they never used instruments in their worship?

15. Is not their example in obeying this word worth more as an explanation of its meaning than all the modern lexicons?

16. Did they violate any plainly revealed word of God in leaving instrumental music out of their worship?

in leaving instrumental music out of their worship?

17. If not, would you violate any plainly revealed word of God in following their example—leaving instrumental music out of your worship?

18. If you would not, will you now stand by our agreement and leave out instrumental music for the sake of peace and unity?

19. Did not the early church "fathers"—that is, Justin Martyr and Clement of Alexandria—speak and write the Greek language?

Greek language?

20. Did they not know that Paul had taught Christians

20. But they included or even permitted the use of 21. If "psallo" included or even permitted the use of instrumental music, how do you account for the fact that these Greek-speaking "fathers" opposed instrumental

CONSISTENCY.

A man whipped his boy for using tobacco, but he used it himself. A brother condemns the picture show, but he sometimes goes when he is away from home. A brother condemned the circus, but he took in the parade and all of the free performances. A man condemned a dramatic performance at the theater, but a short time after his church put on the same play to make up money to finish paying the preacher's salary. A brother condemned the use of helps, but always took his teachers' Bible to the class with him. A brother bitterly condemned the basketball game, but he let his children go to it. A brother condemned the Adventist theory on the kingdom question, but later indorsed a man who was teaching the same thing. A certain congregation spent a great deal of money in debates against the Christadelphian theory that the kingdom of Christ is yet to be set up, but afterwards received, with open arms, a leader who preached the same theory, yet wears the name "Christian." A certain brother condemned a sister for teaching a class of children, but he wants her to have her special part in teaching and admonishing in the song service. A certain brother said that it was unscriptural to have more than one vessel in the communion service, yet he said it was all right to use two glasses, provided that a number of persons drank out of the same vessel, but that it was entirely wrong for one person only to drink out of one vessel. A brother was very faithful to go to church when there was not a lodge meeting to go to. A brother refused to go to a picnic, for he said it was wrong, but he went down on the streets and enjoyed and laughed at the filthy yarns that sinner Jones told. A certain brother had his religious paper discontinued in order to cut down expenses, but he used his tobacco the same as if times had been very prosperous. Is it consistent to be inconsistent? Consistency, where art thou? If we could only sit down and see ourselves pass by, we might be able to see things differently as to our own lives .- Herald of Truth.

CONTINUE TO COME TO CHRIST.

BY S. H. HALL.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," is a statement of our Lord that we are in the habit of calling "the great invitation;" and so it is. As a rule, we apply it to aliens in our exhortations to them to come to Christ; and I see no serious mistake in this.

I know of no more needed thing to-day than for us to give our Lord's call for the lost to be saved to all the denizens of the earth. When I think of the number who need to hear this call in comparison with the little we are doing, it staggers me. We should rejoice to know that soon two will go to China and others to Japan. May there be a sure-enough revival among us in mission work at home and abroad.

The way for the alien to come to Christ is simple. It does not take long for him to learn it. Three thousand learned the way on Pentecost. Hundreds in Samaria learned it in a short while. The eunuch learned it while Philip rode with him in his chariot. The jailer and his household learned it and obeyed it at the midnight hour. It is simply faith established in the soul that Christ is the Son of the living God, a whole-hearted repentance or turning your back on the evil of your life, a confession with your mouth that Christ is Lord, and a burial with Christ in baptism and a resurrection into the new life in Christ. All the converts under the preaching of the apostles learned this and did this, without an exception. No preacher in those days ever left penitent believers unbaptized. They either baptized them themselves, or some of their associates or helpers baptized them, at once. No one was made to believe or feel that he was a child of God till all of this was done. This is "coming to Christ" on the part of the alien. But what is called "the great invitation" of our Lord means more than this. In fact, it would be hard to prove that the invitation in Matt. 11: 28-30 is to aliens at all. It is addressed to those that "labor and are heavy laden." It is more applicable to the struggling disciple who is out seeking to save the lost souls of the earth. The setting or circumstances under which this invitation was given should be noted. Go back to Matt. 9: 35 and read right on through chapter ten and in chapter eleven till you come to this invitation, and you will see a better application of it than we are wont to give. First, you have before the disciples the multitudes, scattered, as sheep not having a shepherd, and our Lord reminding the disciples of the conditions and commanding them to pray for more laborers to be sent into the harvest. You find our Lord at once sending the disciples into this great harvest field

"as sheep in the midst of wolves." They are reminded that the opposition had called "the master of the house Beelzebub," and that they should not expect better treatment from the enemy. Then there is "John the Baptist" in prison, doubting whether Christ is the Messiah or whether he should look for another. Notice how calm and considerate our Lord was toward those whom John sent with this question. He kindly told them to go back and tell John that the blind see, the deaf hear, the lame walk, the dumb talk, the poor have the gospel preached to them, and blessed is the man that shall find no occasion of stumbling in him. And immediately he began to praise John by telling the multitudes that John was not "a reed shaken with the wind," nor a man clothed in regal attire, nor merely a prophet, but the greatest prophet that had been born of woman up to that time. We, as a rule, do not have such patience when some one shows signs of weakening. Look for the good in even the weakest and praise them for it, and you will, as a rule, save them. Then think of the unreasonableness of the people among whom our Lord and his disciples labored. "Whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like unto children sitting in the market places, who call unto their fellows and say, We piped unto you, and ye did not dance; we wailed, and ye did not mourn." That is, this is the way they feel and talk about John and our Lord and his disciples. They did not fall in with the ways of that evil generation. Hence, of John, who came neither eating nor drinking, they declared he had a demon; and our Lord, who came both eating and drinking, they accused of being a gluttonous man, a winebibber, and a friend of publicans and sinners. Can you think of a more unreasonable age than that? Then think of the wickedness of the cities! "Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not." Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum are all referred to, and are shown to be worse than Tyre and Sidon and Sodom of old.

Now follow him on and see how, in the midst of these circumstances, he burst forth into what we call "the great invitation, saying: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

Can you understand it? In the midst of conditions referred to above, our Lord had rest in his own soul! Is it not a bit difficult to see how he could have rest when the multitudes before him were scattered as sheep with no shepherd; John in prison, perplexed and doubting; and with the unreasonableness of the age that would accuse John of possessing a devil, and accuse our Lord of being a glutton and a winebibber, and the terrible wickedness of the cities in which his greatest works were done? Well, he had soul rest, else he could not have promised to give it to others that labored with him and were heavy laden. Have you ever been staggered as you struggled to extend the cause, when before you there seemed to be such great odds? And do not such conditions confront the loyalhearted to-day? Have you not felt your need of going to some one for rest and succor? This invitation, I opine, is for you. It is for such as our dear Sister Andrews and the other faithful laborers in Japan; Brethren Sherriff, Short, and Lawyer, and their loved ones, in Africa; and others at home and abroad who have forsaken all for Christ and sometimes become almost discouraged, not because of the odds against them, but of the heartless indifference of so many who claim to be disciples. This invitation, again let me say, is for those who "labor and are heavy laden."

Yes, we who labor need to continuously go to Christ, else we will become discouraged. Note how he tells us to come. He does not leave us in doubt about the way. "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me." Yes, we need to take his yoke and daily learn of him. The more we come to know him and understand him, the better able are we to press onward with the work. But note why he says do this: "For I am meek and lowly in heart." The alien does not need to learn so much this characteristic of our Lord, but his laborers, his disciples, do need it; and it is a lifetime job to study him from the standpoint of his meekness and lowliness. If all of us possessed his meekness, his lowliness, there never could be a church fuss nor anything among us to hinder the progress of the work.

Do we know his meekness? "The meek shall eat and be satisfied." (Ps. 22: 26.) "The meek will he guide in justice; and the meek will he teach his way." (Ps. 25: 9.) The Bible speaks of God's saving "all the meek of the earth." Read it-Ps. 76: 8, 9. "The Lord lifted up the meek." (Ps. 147: 6.) "He will beautify the meek with salvation." (Ps. 149: 4.) "The meek shall increase his joy in the Lord." (Ps. 29: 19.) Are you surprised that our Lord said: "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth?" (Matt. 5: 5.) And can you not understand now why Paul addresses the Corinthians in the following words: "Now I Paul myself entreat you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, I who in your presence am lowly among you?" (2 Cor. 10: 1.) And would it not be great if all disciples, everywhere, would approach each other "by the meekness and gentleness of Christ?" I close with the fervent prayer that the church to-day may come to Christ.

BROTHER SRYGLEY'S WESTERN WORK.

Many of the brethren are responding liberally to the support of the missionary work Brother Srygley is announced to commence in the near future. Complete reports will be published later.

The letters that have accompanied these gifts are a source of great encouragement to Brother Srygley. Sister S. H. Caile, of Johnson City, Tenn., says: "Living as I am in a place where there is no loyal church of Christ, I am more touched by the missionary appeal than ever before. I know what it is to hunger and thirst to hear the pure gespel of Christ." Hugh J. Phillips, of Ridgetop, Tenn., who sent the first contribution, says: "I hope Brother Srygley has the best of success in his meetings," J. O. Manning, of Whitlock, Tenn., says: "I inclose check to help bear expenses of Brother F. B. Srygley, and pray God that he may go and do much good for the cause of Christ and in saving souls." Sister Mattie A. Johnson, of Franklin, Tenn., writes to Brother Srygley: "I do feel such a great interest in your great undertaking that I want to express to you my heart's desire for your success. I know that the prayers of the righteous avail much. We are all so anxious that you succeed that we earnestly pray our Father in your behalf." Brother G. T. Mustaine, of Horse Cave, Ky., says: "My prayers go with Brother Srygley's mission work in Colorado, hoping that it may do much good for the cause for which Jesus

Among those baptized by Brother Srygley last year were two persons to whom baptism was peculiar and unique, as neither of them had ever seen any one baptized before. Brother Srygley is eminently fitted to carry the gospel to new fields. He preaches to the people with a plainness and simplicity that enables them to at once appreciate the clear teaching of the word of God and to recognize the importance of conforming to a "Thus saith the Lord."

We are very much interested in encouraging Brother Srygley in missionary work of this kind, as we should send our best preachers to new and difficult fields. Earnest and insistent calls have come to him, from the places where he preached last year, to return to them again this year; and to Brother Srygley's credit, we are glad to announce that he has consented to go and that he is making his arrangements accordingly. He intends, if the Lord wills, to hold at least three meetings in these destitute places of the West.

And as these places are unable to sustain Brother Srygley financially while preaching for them, we are suggesting that readers of the Gospel Advocate lend a hand and have a part in the work. We are aware that many of our readers would rejoice to participate in missionary efforts of this kind, and that the consensus of opinion is that more work of this kind should be done.

All who desire to assist Brother Srygley in responding to these Macedonian calls and in preaching the gospel at these destitute points may send their donations to James A. Allen, Gospel Advocate office, Nashville, Tenn., and proper acknowledgment will be made.

THE BIG PREACHER AND THE LITTLE CALL. BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

The story goes of a minister who received a call from a bigger church at an increased stipend, who told his charge he feared to listen to the call till he took it to the Lord. The little place was in suspense. Could they hold their man against mightier odds? They wondered. Finally one of the flock asked the minister's son what about it. The youngster replied: "Dad is still praying, but he's packed our things."

A preacher is made from the same soil as the rest of poor humanity, and if he does as well as others he deserves to be thought as well of. He is a more or less selfish and deserving biped. Just because he is in the highest calling men or angels know is no reason for our supposing he is lifted above the awful conflict forever raging between flesh and spirit. Is it fair to expect so much more of him than of others? The pot boils stronger at some points than at others. Shall we expect the impossible, and believe him less willing than his brothers to hear a call where is promised increase of power and income? Why shall we suppose him immune from such appeals?

I propose no cure-all for the diseases preacher flesh is heir to. I only recognize the issue raised here as one of the problems we should look squarely in the face and try honestly to meet. Irrecoverably in the ranks of the smaller fry myself, and with no aspirations for that which lieth beyond me, save that of employing every lawful means to spread the gospel to every nook and corner of the globe, I would add a word of encouragement for our lesser-known brethren, preachers or not. Withal, I would exhort that company of men we style "big preachers" to be more willing to hear calls coming from small and out-of-the-way places, seeing we stoop to conquer, and to take the lowly way is the one sure course, not alone of honoring God by saving souls and building up the kingdom, but also of genuine advancement.

I do not wish to be severe, but I have said that the bigpreacher-hunting church and the big-church-hunting preacher probably ought to be yoked together and turned loose on the range, so as to interfere as little as possible with the spread of the gospel, which to-day happily is best being carried on by that great (but for the most part practically unknown) body of God's servants who in a humble and quiet way effect wonders, which really will never be known till eternity is reached.

Let it be added that it is likely our religious papers are sadly out of focus as to actual conditions in our Israel, and we are paying entirely too much attention to preachers and congregations much in the public eye. It is quite likely the congregations doing the best work for the Master and the most useful of men in preaching the word are seldom or never heard from at all in our religious press, for but a small fraction of the great body moving into the course of the New Testament way ever gains the notice of the public. We misinterpret the importance of some men and movements, seeing we know so little of the remainder.

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 18. By C. E. W. DORRIS.

Chapter IV.

THE APOSTLES STEWARDS OF THE MYSTERIES OF GOD. (Verses 1-5.)

Verse 1. Let a man so account of us [the apostles] as ministers of Christ. Servants of the Master, and not heads of parties. Another argument for union. The original for "minister" signifies such servants as labor at the oar in rowing vessels. The church is the vessel, Christ is the Commander, and the rowers obey orders. Since Christ only commands, not his servants, there should be no parties formed among them. Stewards. The figure now changes, but still the idea is that they were servants. The steward has charge of the house for his master. The church is the house. Christ is the Master, and the apostles are stewards in charge, having the mysteries of Godthat is, God's revealed knowledge. Not their own knowledge, but God's. The apostles gave to the Corinthians doctrines which in former ages had been kept secret, but are now revealed to all through the preaching of the gospel by the apostles. Paul called himself "steward" to show that the deepest doctrine, as well as first principles of the gospel, was intrusted to him to reveal, and that his faithfulness as a steward consisted not only in his revealing them just as he received them from Christ, but in his revealing them just as his hearers were able to receive them. Here is wisdom for preachers of to-day. They should be "wise as serpents, and harmless as doves" (Matt. 10: 16)—that is, they should have that prudence and discretion which enables men to receive what is fit to be done, according to the circumstances of time, place, persons, manners, and end of doing. Otherwise, they are apt to defeat the design of their aim.

2. It is required in stewards, etc. The main object in all the stewards of God is that they be faithful to their trust. Paul had, in the foregoing chapter, warned the Corinthians against an undue esteem of their teachers and a factious preference of some before others, to the great scandal of religion and the prejudice of the gospel; yet he did not mean to draw them off from paying that due honor and deserved respect which belong to their character. But he desired them to account them all neither more nor less, but as "the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God." Observe: (1) That the minister of Christ is a person deputed by the command, and invested with the authority, of Christ to preach the word, and that the church is to account the office and work of the ministry as a divine appointment in the church. (2) He is a steward of the truths of God, to open and explain them for the spiritual edification of all Christians as well as to the world, and to defend and maintain them against the opposition of all adversaries. They must not suffer vermin to destroy the provisions of God's household. (3) That the truths of the gospel should be taught and handed down from one faithful servant to "faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." (2 Tim. 2: 2.) This is God's way of calling to the ministry. (4) That the qualification of a steward is, "that a man be found faithful." There is no ground for trust where there is no truth. The faithfulness in our stewardship includes several things. First, purity of intention. A pure end in all our work and service must be desired. Secondly, sincerity and integrity of heart. A faithful minister is a sincere-hearted minister, who preaches his sermons first to himself and then to his hearers. Thirdly, diligence. A slothful minister can never be a faithful steward. He must study the truths of God and defend them with steadfastness. (2 Tim. 2: 15; 4: 1-4.) We look for happiness from God as long as he is in heaven, and he expects faithfulness from us as long as we are upon earth. Fourthly, impartiality. We must take the same care of, manifest the same love unto, attend with the same diligence upon, the poorest and lowest in God's family, as we do the rich, the great, and the honorable; for all our souls are at one price, and rated at one value with the Lord. We must be impartial stewards, for we must give an account of our stewardship before an impartial God.

3. It is a very small thing, etc. The thought is, the Lord is the one who should count Paul a faithful steward, and not that he should count himself faithful or that the Corinthians should do so. Of course, with the divisions at Corinth, some disparaged him. Not as if Paul were unconcerned whether the Corinthians had a good esteem of him or not, or were regardless of his reputation among men; but the meaning is, he did not much value himself upon the opinion and judgment which any persons had of him, knowing that his case would not be finally determined by any man's judgment, nor yet by his own. He did not judge himself, for he might be deceived in his judgment; therefore, he left his judgment to the judgment of God. It is a happy thought to all Christians that they have a more righteous Judge to be examined and tried by than either the world or themselves. The world's judgment may falsely condemn them, their own judgment may flatter and deceive them, but the judgment of God will deal impartially with them.

4. For I know nothing by myself ["against myself," A. R. V.]. Paul was not conscious of not being a faithful steward. Yet am I not hereby justified. While he was not conscious of any unfaithfulness in his stewardship, yet he did not depend on this as a sufficient reason for his justification in God's account. He that judgeth me is the Lord. By his judgment I stand or fall. The words cf this verse are not to be understood as relating to bodily errors, for Paul had to fight to keep it under, but with respect to his stewardship over the mysteries of God -that is, delivering the scheme of redemption. In this his conscience cleared him of all unfaithfulness and neglect of duty, yet he did not consider this as proof that he was justified before God. This is a strong evidence that conscience is no guide in religion. His sincerity comforted him, but could not justify him. The reason Paul did not plead his own righteousness before God is, "the Lord" "judgeth me." While he pleaded his innocency before man, yet he realized he had to be judged by a heart-searching God, who knew him better than he knew himself. He knew that when God came to look over his work that he would spy that which the most eagle-eyed person could not spy.

5. Therefore judge nothing before the time. That is, let no one form premature judgments before the time appointed of God for judgment. Until the Lord come. That is the time for judgment. Who will, etc. God will bring to light the things which are now covered with impenetrable darkness, and manifest the most secret springs of action, the principles and intention of every heart. Then shall every man have praise of God. When God renders his decision at the coming of Christ, every faithful steward will receive honor and glory from God. Not until then can the Corinthians form an infallibly correct understanding of their spiritual instructors. The Corinthians were not to pass any judgment on Paul's general character and behavior as an apostle till Christ, his Master, came and judged him. In such, and many cases of like nature, to judge rightly, we ought to have the knowledge of men's hearts, as the apostle insinuates in the letter part of the verse. The only punishment the church can inflict upon offenders is withdrawing fellowship from them. Paul does not mean to condemn all judgment of persons, words, or actions, or to command us to suspend our judging till the day of judgment; but he forbids rash censuring-unadvised, uncertain, and unseasonable judging of the hearts and final states of men.

We may judge what appeareth, but not what is hidden and unseen; for the judging of hidden things is referred to God, from whom nothing is hidden. For us to judge the heart, or that which does not appear, is to assume the office and to take upon ourselves the place of God. Only he that is invisible can look into that which is invisible. He who has the knowledge and the secrets of the hearts of all men, and has all these subject to his judgment, is God. This is as it should be; for every good man, though now dispraised and despised, censured and condemned, and loaded with scandals and false reports by man, shall have praise and reward from God, the righteous Judge, in the judgment. We may judge open violation of law, but can go no farther.

THAT EMERGENCY CALL.

BY F. B. SHEPHERD.

Many brethren have been interested in knowing the why and wherefore of the emergency call for five hundred dollars for Africa that was made some months ago. I am sending the letter which I have just received from Brother Short, which fully explains the need and will fully justify him in making the appeal, and me in relaying it to the brotherhood. Several of my personal friends responded immediately, and it was possible for me to cable him the full amount within forty-eight hours after receipt of his call. The following letter is self-explanatory:

Sinde Mission, Livingstone, N. R., South Africa, March 19, 1925.—Dear Brother Shepherd: I am awfully sorry the cable has put you in such a condition. I almost wish I had never sent it. Yet, as I stated, though rather mildly, the stores were pressing us for the money. We had waited for so long to pay them, and they had said they wanted their money by the end of the month. Another store was charging us interest on the overdue account, and had also called upon us for a settlement. Of course. store was charging us interest on the overdue account, and had also called upon us for a settlement. Of course, these things are, or might be, considered minor subjects when compared to a serious accident or illness of some kind. There was nothing terrible that happened, but it was a case of unusual urgency. The stores had been waiting for over six months. We had waited from one week to another for that length of time, expecting every week to receive enough to get the bills paid, but each week we were disappointed. We received some along, enough to just about keep the current expenses going, and all the time we were living on as little as possible in order to do even that.

Our children have not had the proper food, and Mrs. Short has been almost distracted with living so crowded up here in this mud house. Two or three times when a real hard wind came along she has had to put the sunshade up inside of the house in order that the children might not be choked by the dust falling through the burlage. might not be choked by the dust falling through the burlap ceiling. I got along very well myself, and so will say only this: I have bought but three pairs of trousers and one light coat since being in Africa. I have had no suit other than the one I came over here in, except one, and it was given me by the Harper people. And so each week, as our hopes of getting enough money to pay the bills were left unfulfilled, we were all the time getting more anxious. This continued, and our desire to keep a straight face with the stores kept increasing until we did not know what else to do but send the cable. The Lawyers were coming, and it was urgent that we get these bills paid, that the stores might let us have a little again in order to finish the house. It was a very urgent need. As I stated in the cable, we needed it at once.

It is exceedingly urgent that we get the house finished.

cable, we needed it at once.

It is exceedingly urgent that we get the house finished. (And it was for material for the house which we had purchased months ago that I sent the cable.) The white ants and borers are making great inroads on the poles of this house, so that the sooner we get out of it, the better for our health. Sawdust which the borers kick out is continually falling on us, day and night, and no telling how much of it goes into our lungs. And, too, I do not know when this thing will fall in. The white ants are all through the roof, in spite of the coal tar which we put on it. One or two of the window frames are eaten so much that they look as if they would fall out almost any time. The dirt floor under the bit of linoleum which we have is very damp and musty. However, we have not suffered very damp and musty. However, we have not suffered from that, that I know of. You see the necessity of getting the house finished, and to do this we had to have the money.

Our plans are as follows: Now that we can keep a straight face toward the stores, since having paid the long-standing bills, we want to get the material that is yet needed on time payment; but this time we will make arrangements for a time payment, paying as much as we can as often as we can and giving a little interest if necessary. So this time we are planning for a delay in getting the money, whereas before we were expecting it every day, or rather every week. We feel that the money will come sometime.

will come sometime.

Now, Brother Shepherd, I have told things in this letter that I have not told before and that I did not intend telling, for it always seemed to me that it was complaining too much. But since you had so much trouble and worried so much about us, I thought best to tell it, for your sake. I hope it will make a justifiable reason for you to give your friends for getting the money for me. Really, I am almost sorry I sent the cable, seeing it has added such a great burden to you, when you were already loaded to the limit. Now, having received your letter, I have decided to write the elders at Harper and tell them a few things that as yet I have never told them. They send us the one hundred dollars each month.

Delia is expecting to go to Bulawayo on to-morrow's send us the one hundred dollars each month.

Delia is expecting to go to Bulawayo on to-morrow's train. She will stay with Zelma for a time and bring a new baby back with her, all things working well. I would like to go down myself soon and get the rest of the material needed for the house. We must have that completed by the time the women folks return, which will likely be in June. We must have the house finished by then.

Lawyer is with us now, and you don't know the help and comfort it is to have another man to help with the work and counsel. He is taking right hold and relieving me of so much strain already. I wish you good-night.

W. N. Shorr.

All true Christians will rejoice at the opportunity to help in the support of those who are preaching and teaching the word of God to the peoples of earth. There are many churches abundantly able to support this work. Will they do it?

The world is sadly in need of being evangelized. Men and women by countless thousands are going down to death and eternal despair. As long as churches are stingy and niggardly the work will never be done. "But this I say, He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Let each man do according as he hath purposed in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." (2 Cor. 9: 6, 7.)

OUR MESSAGES

Wanted-To get into communication with J. M. Norwood.

There were eight confessions at Lindsley Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

Will W. Slater, Tulsa, Okla., May 18: "The meeting continues in Tulsa with great interest."

- S. P. Pittman preached the commencement sermon at David Lipscomb College last Lord's day.
- H. C. Hale preached at Russell Street Church, this city, last Lord's day in the absence of S. H. Hall.
- W. Claude Hall has accepted the presidency of the Oklahoma Christian College at Cordell, Okla.
- J. Fairs Nichols, Fancy Farm, Ky., May 17: "I was with the church at Antioch, Ill., this morning."
- J. D. Gunn, of Sparta, Tenn., preached for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night.

Wanted—A teacher (lady) of Latin and Mathematics. Address David Lipscomb, Fanning Orphan School, Nashville, Tenn.

Married, in front of the Lindsley Avenue church house, this city, May 23, George H. Cochran and Myrtle Rainey, James A. Allen officiating.

- J. E. Bacigalupo preached at Rural Hill, near Lavergne, Tenn., last Lord's day. He was also at Gowan's mission, in Rutherford County, in the afternoon.
- Leslie G. Thomas preached both morning and evening at Pilcher Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. One was baptized and one was restored at the evening service.

David Lipscomb advises that Dr. J. S. Ward recently closed a very successful meeting at the Fanning Orphan School. Nine of the young lady students were baptized into Christ.

- R. V. Cawthon preached the commencement sermon at the Baldwin County High School, Bay Minette, Ala., last Lord's day, and also began a meeting with the church at Bay Minette.
- W. B. West, Jr., Decherd, Tenn., May 18: "On the second Lord's day in this month I was with the congregation at Hoover's Grove. We had fine services at Sewanee yesterday and last night."

Robert Alexander, Hobart, Okla., May 19: "I have just closed a twelve-days' meeting at Oilton, Okla., with twenty-two baptized and four restored. J. H. Antwine, of Bonham, Texas, led the song service."

R. C. White and J. D. Derryberry recently held a fifteen-days' meeting at St. Augustine, Fla., with good attendance and good attention. Brother White found six members that had not been located before."

Homer Davis, Miami, Texas, May 19: "Sunday, May 10, I enjoyed the day with the church at Canyon, Texas. Their new meetinghouse was greatly needed. On Saturday night we began a meeting at Miami. One restoration last night. I go next to Perryton, Higgins, and Canadian."

- H. C. Denson, Gallatin, Tenn., May 18: "I preached to a good audience in Gallatin on Sunday morning, Brother Sykes being at White House for a commencement sermon. I shall speak a good word for the Gospel Advocate and put on some new subscribers if I can in connection with my other work."
- Mrs. J. L. Bagley, Anniston, Ala., May 18: "Gardner S. Hall, who is now located with the church at Anniston, has just closed a two-weeks' meeting. There were four additions—three small girls who have been attending Bible study on Lord's day regularly and one young lady from the Baptists."

Emmett G. Creacy, Horse Cave, Ky., May 22: "The Lord willing, I will begin a meeting with the East Side congregation, in Indianapolis, Ind., on the second Lord's day in June. A tent has been secured and will be erected at 4400 East Washington Street. Vernon M. Spivey, of Nashville, Tenn., will lead the singing."

John W. Fry, Columbia, Tenn., May 15: "The directors and friends of the Tennessee Orphan Home will hold their regular annual meeting on Thursday, June 11. Visitors are welcome, for it is desired that they acquaint themselves with the work of the Home and the care and development of the children. Friends and neighbors will supply dinner on the ground to all who attend the meeting, including the children and matrons of the Home."

Mrs. B. C. Scharnagel, Tuscaloosa, Ala., May 18: "Please announce through the Gospel Advocate the death of my father, J. R. Phillips, in his eighty-eighth year. He passed away at his home at Bear Creek, Ala., on April 25, 1925, after two weeks' illness. He had been an elder in the church more than fifty years, and had read the Advocate from the first number issued, each week, besides causing it to be read in many other homes."

F. L. Paisley, Paducah, Ky., May 16: "Two weeks ago I closed a meeting at Nicholasville, Ky., in the courthouse. I found three members there. The infidelity now taught by the so-called 'Christian Churches' in Lexington, just ten miles away, is having a terrible effect. To look upon the beautiful grounds of the famous 'College of the Bible' and think of the grand old servants of God who formerly taught there and then think of present conditions would make angels weep."

Mrs. Mattie L. Allen, Nashville, Tenn., May 12: "I have been reading the Gospel Advocate for forty years, and always receive each copy with a thrill of joy. I read it all each week and feel greatly benefited. Your firm stand for the Bible, and it alone, for our rule of faith and practice is felt throughout America and helps all true Christians to build up in the most holy faith and to go forward in the discharge of duties as followers of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

W. S. Long, Detroit, Mich., May 19: "One baptism at the Vinewood Avenue Church on Lord's day, and a good house at all the services. Many people are coming from other parts of the country to this great city to seek employment, among whom are members of the church. It would mean much to the faithfulness of the members who leave their home congregations if the elders and ministers would teach them to take letters with them and place their membership with the nearest congregation where they go. I shall appreciate letters from any one who has relatives or friends here. Address W. S. Long, 1445 Clark Avenue, Detroit, Mich."

Mrs. S. H. Coile, "The Bandbox," Johnson City, Tenn., May 10: "Sunday after Sunday I come away from worship sickened by the innovations of the Christian Church, which is very powerful here. As far as I know, there are only two loyal Christians here, both of us women, whose husbands are sectarians. The 'digressives' have a membership of seventeen hundred and are growing. I believe this is fertile ground for the sowing of 'the word,' as is all of East Tennessee. I pray constantly that some strong congregation will send a missionary to this field. I am inclosing a check to cover my renewal to the Gospel Advocate. It is the only thing that keeps my courage up. I read it eagerly each week, and always feel that my faith has been strengthened by so doing. Your front-page articles are especially fine, I think. I doubt if you good people who live among your fellow Christians and luxuriate in the preaching of the simple gospel can realize what a beacon light the writings in the Advocate are to us scattered Christians, who are struggling, unaided, against all odds to serve the Lord as 'it is written.' I would not have the courage to fight without the Gospel Advocate."

have the courage to fight without the Gospel Advocate."

J. G. Allen, 1412 Baltimore Street, Muskogee, Okla., May 18: "We had splendid services yesterday at C Street Church, and we all think the prospects bright for the future of this congregation. I have heard of many strange things in this life, but I had a brand-new experience yesterday, of which I wish to tell in a few words. Yesterday I received a telephone call to preach a funeral. Dr. J. C. Putnam, a prominent dentist, had passed away. I called to see his wife, who is a Christian; but the Doctor was nothing religiously. His wife said she wanted me to preach the funeral. She said the Doctor had often spoken of me, and she knew I was his favorite. She said that on Thursday the Doctor called her to his bedside and told her he would soon die, and he wanted her to baptize him. She wanted to send for me; but he said no, she must do it. He arose from his bed, went to the bathtub, filled it with water, got inside, and begged her to baptize him. She repeated the words and baptized him. He arose perfectly happy and slept for several hours. Well, I preached the funeral, but said nothing about his baptism. If any reader of the Gospel Advocate ever heard of a similar case, please let me know."

If you wish to make good time, you must not go too fast. Every time we forgive a brother, we open heaven to our prayers.

Some cannot fall from grace. They do not have any to fall from.

When you go away from home, do not forget that God is everywhere.

Ben West, Sinton, Texas, May 14: "One confession and baptism last week."

If our religion makes us want to fight to defend it, we have the wrong kind.

P. W. Stonestreet, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was among our visitors last week.

If we go to church without praying for the service, the devil may go with us.

The man who has done his prayerful best has done all God requires him to do.

John C. Taylor changes his address from Georgetown, Texas, to Obion, Tenn.

Christ was willing to hang on the cross in order that we might sit on a throne.

No instrument is equal to the human voice. Let the people be taught to sing.

No man can see the beauty of the divine character until he has been made a partaker of it.

The best thing for a man who has a burden to carry is to help others carry their burdens.

J. C. Estes, Pasadena, Cal., May 21: "Good day last Sunday. One good sister restored."

Common sense is the art of seeing things as they are, and of doing things as they ought to be done.

J. O. Rushing, Henry, Tenn.: "We certainly appreciate the Gospel Advocate. It is the best paper published."

Lytton Alley preached two excellent sermons for the Eighth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's day.

- W. M. Behel, Rogersville, Ala.: "I would like to know the post-office address of O. D. Maple, author of 'Maple Lectures.'"
- C. H. Black, Menard, Texas, May 11: "I have sold my crop, so am ready to devote all my time to preaching. Write me here."

The Gospel Advocate office is in communication with a splendid preacher who may be secured for a meeting. Kindly address us at once.

- John B. Mobley: "I am a member of the one body, and try to be a faithful one. I am a reader of the Gospel Advocate, and think it a fine paper."
- D. S. Ligon, Clovis, N. M., May 19: "One baptism recently. I am doing my best. Will the churches help me hold a mission meeting at Endee, N. M.? I pray that the brethren will help me do this."

David Thompson, Mayfield, Ky., May 18: "Yesterday was a good day with the church of Christ here. Good audience at each service. To-day we began week-day classes for children and young people, and had a good beginning."

- W. W. Bates, Whitwell, Tenn., Route 1, May 18: "I closed at Whitwell on May 15, with one returned to the fold. I am now at Cartwright in my third meeting at this place. The house was packed at both services yesterday, the first day of the meeting."
- T. W. Phillips, Jr., Shreveport, La., May 18: "Our meeting began yesterday, with the largest crowd in the history of the church present at the night service. Six were added during the day. James D. Kelly is leading the singing and I am doing the preaching."
- W. W. Still, Harvest, Ala., May 16: "Wife and I are now located five miles southeast of Harvest. I am doing manual labor during the week. There is no loyal church of Christ at Harvest. If any church needs my services for a meeting about the middle of August, write me at Harvest, Ala., Route 1."

Allen Phy, Brownsville, Tenn., May 18: "Our work here moves on very well. I preach for the church here twice each Sunday. I have preached at the following near-by places: Shepp, Wilson's Schoolhouse, Sunny Hill Schoolhouse, and Denmark. There are only two churches of Christ in this county."

- W. P. Skaggs, Madisonville, Texas, May 23: "Our summer meeting will begin on June 5, with W. D. Bills, of San Antonio, doing the preaching, B. M. Taylor leading the song service, and the rest of us praying and working for a great meeting."
- C. C. McQuiddy, Alma, Ark., May 21: "Last Sunday was a rather strenuous day at Jenny Lind. I preached at 11 A.M. at the church; 3 P.M., a decoration address at the cemetery; 5 P.M., a private lesson in a brother's home to some Presbyterian ladies, with prospects of baptizing them; 8 P.M., at the church."
- A. E. Freeman, Guthrie, Okla., May 16: "I want to say amen to Brother Allen's article on the all-sufficency of the church in the Gospel Advocate of May 14. More articles in our papers and more preaching along this line of thought is needed. I am to be away in evangelistic work this summer and fall."
- G. A. Dunn, Jr., Booneville, Miss., May 18: "My part in the Dunn-Teddlie meeting at Gainesville, Texas, came to close on Thursday night. Brother Teddlie and my father continued on through Sunday. There were twelve additions during the time I was there. Brother Aldridge and I began here yesterday."
- J. H. Morris, Tuscumbia, Ala., May 23: "My first mission meeting of the season, which began at Weeden Place, near Florence, Ala., May 12, preaching at night only, closed at the water, May 23, with seven baptisms and four restorations. The truth was firmly but kindly presented, and we believe much good was accomplished."

Charles G. Akin, of Nashville, Tenn., May 18: "T. Q. Martin closed at Grandview Heights Church, this city, last Lord's day, with thirty-four additions to the church. This was one of the best meetings from every standpoint held at Grandview, and the congregation has already booked Brother Martin for the 1926 meeting."

Everett Woodroof (leading the singing) and James A. Allen (preaching) are in a splendid meeting in a large tent on the old Normal School Campus, corner Lindsley Avenue and University Street, with eleven confessions and one restoration at this writing. Services every night (except Saturday) at a quarter to eight o'clock.

- I. A. Douthitt, Louisville, Ky., May 18: "Our meeting with the church at Bardstown Road and Napoleon Boulevard, Louisville, enters its second week. The house was packed last night, and the people turned away would have filled half our house. Among the preachers that are attending are M. C. Kurfees, John T. Smithson, and R. A. Craig."
- E. Gaston Collins, Meaford, Ontario, Canada, May 18: "We had good attendance and a good spirit of reverence and devotion in meetings yesterday. I shall also preach at about four other places within twenty miles of Meaford. I like the Gospel Advocate, and deeply appreciate the first-page article in the issue of May 14. More such articles will do good."
- F. L. Young, Paris, Texas, May 18: "After a two-months' vacation, I am at home and in the harness again. My health seems to be restored. I can preach three times a day, but cannot walk so far. Our meeting is to begin on May 22, with Wallace and Taylor leading. In many ways the Gospel Advocate grows better and better with every issue. May its circulation increase tenfold."

The Jones Chapel congregation, of Williamson County, Tenn., desires to support W. L. Karnes in a mission meeting this summer. Let any brother who knows of a town of four or five thousand people, in which circumstances are favorable for such a meeting to result in the establishment of a new congregation, kindly address John M. Jones, Franklin, Tenn., Route 5.

Charles Taylor, Paducah, Ky., May 18: "C. M. Pullias, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., has just closed a splendid meeting with the church of Christ in this city, which resulted in sixteen baptisms, one reclaimed, and six by letter. Brother Pullias goes next to Jackson, Miss., beginning there on the first Lord's day in June. I shall begin a meeting at Paris, Tenn., next Lord's day."

C. W. DeArmond, Drakesboro, Ky., May 18: "I have preached recently at Bakersport, Ky., and Shiloh, three times at each place, and at Hickory Stand four nights last week. One made the confession and was baptized, coming from the Baptists after having been a member for thirty years. I will begin a meeting at Sugar Grove tonight. I am going back to Bakersport on the fifth Sunday and preach, and will begin a meeting at White Plains on June 1."

EDITORIAL

"W. J. GORRELL, IN APOSTOLIC REVIEW." BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

It seems that some of the contributors of the Apostolic Review would not have much to contribute to that journal if it were not for the Bible colleges. They must study about these colleges all day and dream of them by night. Preaching the gospel and teaching people how to live seems to be a secondary matter with the contributors to that paper. Recently a Brother Gorrell, from Moundsville, W. Va., had published in the Apostolic Review an article taken from the Gospel Advocate, written by J. L. Hines. Brother Gorrell was so impressed with the truthfulness of Brother Hines' article in criticism of an advertisement of a Bible college that he had the entire article republished in the Review. The brother gave due credit to the Gospel Advocate by adding, "J. L. Hines, in the Gospel Advocate." Of course, the brother had the right to do this, since he so heartily agreed with Brother Hines; but, instead of giving the Gospel Advocate credit also for printing such good reading matter, he had to criticize it in the following language:

Reads like an old Review article, doesn't it? And just note where we found it—in the journal that started this "Bible" college heresy among us! Right there and renote where we found it—in the journal that started this "Bible" college heresy among us! Right there, and no place else! So when these folks get their eyes open to this educational-society danger, isn't it about time for them and some others to quit calling us hard names because of the same sort of a fight we've been making the last twenty-five years? Do they want to jump in now and take credit for discovering this "tendency toward denominationalism" in "our" own colleges? Well, let them. We'll be satisfied, so long as they apologize for their error in formerly boosting these schools, and—continue to "fight the good fight" by exposing their spiritual crookedness.

The brother says: "Reads like an old Review article, doesn't it?" I answer his question, No. A Review article would have advocated dividing the church over the fact that some one believed that a Bible college was a church institution and not a private enterprise.

The brother then says: "And just note where he found it!" The brother seems to want to make the impression that the article was lost and he found it in the Gospel Advocate. It looks like he wants a chromo for finding it. It was not lost, brother. Some of us of the Gospel Advocate never have been as bad as Brother Gorrell thought we were. Some of us down this way have known all the time that schools and newspapers were not church property any more than farms and dairies were church property. We have felt all along that a Christian brother or brethren could establish a school or a newspaper and teach the Bible through either, and do it in harmony with the command of Jesus when he said: "Go, teach all the nations." We have not at any time felt that Brother Gorrell or the Review had the right to say that we could use the Review, founded by man, through which to teach the Bible, but that we could not teach it through a school founded by man; and if any one should study the Bible in a Bible school, that he should not be allowed to preach in any of our churches, but that he could use the Review all of his life and for that reason be fit to preach anywhere and divide the church over Bible colleges in places where there was not one in five hundred miles of them. It is all right to run the Review and teach "Bible Readings" without a positive command of God, but to even believe that one could patronize a Bible school makes one a "new digressive!" Brother Gorrell, the legs of the lame are not equal.

The brother asks if it it is not time for us to quit calling them hard names. I have never called them hard names, unless pointing out their inconsistencies is calling them hard names. I show these Review contributors up in their true light, and then if it takes a hard name to describe them, I am not responsible for it. I have discovered no "tendency toward denominationalism" in our own colleges, because I have no colleges; neither have I a paper like the Apostolic Review, founded by man, through which I can oppose all Bible colleges as "new digressives" and say nothing about the scripturalness of the paper, when it stands exactly on the same footing upon which the college should stand. This may be all right with Brother Gorrell, but I cannot see it.

The brother then quotes from one of these Bible colleges that "the properties are owned by the churches of Christ." I have no doubt that the brother who wrote that thought he was telling the truth, but he was mistaken. church of Christ cannot own property, as it is not organized under the laws of the State; and, besides, I belong to the church of Christ, and I am sure that I do not own one cent in that college or the Apostolic Review, either. Both should be owned by Christian men and women, and the Bible should be taught in both.

In his remarks on Bible schools the brother further says: "Asking for funds to support a Bible college? Yes, and had you noted that your own church and community are included in the asking?" I hardly know what the brother means by this question and answer, but I will say that a Bible college has as much right to ask a church or community for money to run a school as the Review has to ask for money with which to run the Review. Will Brother Gorrell deny that the Review has asked for money with which to support itself? As I understand the matter, a Christian has the right to own and operate a newspaper or a school, and that he can teach the Bible through either; or if one Christian cannot own and operate a paper or a school, any number of Christians can band themselves together to do either, and as long as these schools or papers do not interfere with the autonomy of the churches, there is no harm done; but neither the schools nor the papers can be owned by the church of Christ, because it is not an organized denomination. does the Review not jump on the papers that think they are owned and operated by the church of Christ? Is it because it does not want to infringe upon what it believes is its own rights to beg for money from churches and individuals to run itself? I know a newspaper which some people think is owned and controlled by the church of Christ in a certain State, but the Review says nothing about that, and why?

Some schools may be wrong and fail to understand their relation to the church of Christ, but some papers are in the same condition. Instead of opposing all schools and newspapers because of this fact, I prefer to try to teach both their true relation to the church of Christ, and not try to divide churches over either the Bible college or the newspapers. I do not know of a Bible college in all the country that has tried to divide churches over their existence as the Review has done. This is not calling Brother Gorrell or the Review "hard names," but it is stating facts as they are and allowing the readers to select a name that will describe them.

If Brother Gorrell thinks that he can show that he has a right to use the Review, founded by man, through which to teach the Bible, and that I have no right to use a Bible college through which to teach the Bible, I will be glad to open the columns of the Advocate to him to do it, provided he can get my replies in the Apostolic Review. If anything comes of this offer, the readers of the Advocate will know it; but if they see nothing more of this in the Advocate, they may know that there is another contributor of the Review up against something he cannot handle. We shall wait and see.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

My attention has recently been called to the question of children's being encouraged to obey the gospel as early as they can understand it, appreciate it, believe it, and intelligently obey it. I have known parents to oppose their children's obeying the gospel, and years afterwards, when those same children, deeply engrossed in the things of this world, were utterly indifferent to all appeals of the gospel, I have known those self same parents to bitterly regret having combated those early inclinations of their children.

Neither reason, revelation, history, observation, nor experience justifies the thought that children should not be encouraged to obey the Lord as early as they can do so understandingly. It is the duty of parents to train their children for glory, honor, and immortality, and the earlier this training is begun, the better, of course. If we would "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," we should begin before the allurements of the world have gained an all-absorbing hold on their tender natures. As early as they can hear and recognize His voice, they should be led to and into the fold of the tender Shepherd of souls, this leading, of course, being done by patiently teaching them the truths of the gospel; nor should such teaching ever cease, as long as the children are under the influence of their parents.

Children differ so much in development that it is not possible to designate an age at which they should obey the gospel. The youngest child I have ever baptized was seven and a half years old. That is an earlier age than chilaren usually obey or can obey he gospel, and I do not suggest this as a precedent; but the circumstances surrounding that child were peculiarly calculated to develop early the devotional principle of his nature. His mother was left a widow when her only child was a little babe, she herself being scarcely more than a child in years, and her son had been her constant companion all his life. She had read the Bible to him and taught him its precepts earnestly and prayerfully, and at the age of seven he wanted te obey the gospel. She persuaded him to postpone that step; but six months later he still so earnestly desired to become a Christian that she brought him to me, asking me to question him to learn whether he understood and appreciated the truths of the gospel. After talking with him, I was fully persuaded that he understood the importance of becoming a Christian and the way to do so as well as many persons thrice his age understand it. I baptized him; and, as he walked away, after being baptized, he said: "Now, mother, I have a fight to fight, and I must fight it like a man." Three years later his mother wrote me of his life as a little Christian, saying: "Instead of regretting the step he took at so early an age, I rejoice that he took it. If I am competent to judge, his life since then has been a new life. I am sure, from what I know of the three years he has lived the Christian life, that any little child, properly instructed, who earnestly and intelligently desires to be baptized, can safely be allowed that privilege, provided there is some one who loves and will carefully and prayerfully lead the little lamb. Not that I have always been faithful, and not that my boy never falters and fails. His life, though regarded by those who know him as nearly always exemplary, may not be better than that of some children as old as he who are not Christians; but a difference in motive is a world-wide difference. He comes to me at night with a confession of the wrongdoings of the day-and these generally are remarkably few-and closes the day with an expressed resolve to 'try to be a better boy to-morrow.' He has begun to read the New Testament through; and even when I forget, he will say, it matters not how tired and sleepy he may be, 'I must read my verses before I go to bed.' If I were asked upon what I depend most for my child's continued faithfulness and final victory, I would say: Prayer for him, more, by far, than even training; for, except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but I have seen this boy since he became a man more than six feet tall, and he was then still fighting the fight of faith "like a man."

Having led children to and into the church of Christ, we should continue the work of training them for glory, honor, and immortality. They should be put to work by the older members of the congregation with which they are associated, that they may grow in grace and develop till they reach the "measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." I believe we discourage young Christian and drive them away from the post of duty by a vast superfluity of "don'ts," the force of which is rarely broken by a righteous, prudent, proper "do." It is the nature of young people to do. Indeed, they must do or die. Why not teach them to do, encourage them to do, and give them something to do—to do the right, of course?

I'm sorry to say I know, and know of, very few congregations of Christians-churches of Christ-in which young members wait on the congregation in the communion and contribution service; whereas I know, and know of, many in which aged men do this, who tremble and totter as they perform this sacred service. "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I" never known why a few elderly men should persist in doing all the work, as well as all the scolding, in the church. Why not teach and encourage the young to do something? Why not even let the sisters help a little in some departments of the work of the church—in their legitimate sphere? I know one church where it required the very nicest kind of diplomacy to open the way for some of the sisters to even set the Lord's table! The impression that had to be overcome was that a man-and not only a man, but an old manhad to do that.

I am glad to say that in our congregation in Washington City those who have oversight of the congregation have young men to wait on the congregation in the communion and contribution service, four young men being appointed and requested to serve in that capacity a certain length of time, and then four others do that work for another period, and so on. In this way all who are available serve in turn, thus becoming accustomed to public work, and there is never any hitch or hesitation in the work.

We should be careful to train our children-especially in our families-to take part in the contribution service. Occasionally I have known the father of a family to make the entire contribution for the family, notwithstanding the family included several Christians. There is in that course no training for the children of the family, except training in the wrong direction. All of us need teaching on the duty of Christian giving, and the earlier this teaching is begun, the better, of course. The father may be the sole money-maker in the family, but he is not, except in very rare cases, the sole worker in the family. The mother is usually a wage earner, even if she is not a wage receiver, and she is entitled to a fair share of the earnings and the privilege of contributing a portion of her hard-earned money to the cause of the Lord-doing the contributing herself, too. The children should have a regular share of the work of the household to do, and also a share in contributing to the work of the church. Parents can and should arrange for their children to meet these Sunday contributions by providing a way for them to earn, in some praiseworthy way, in the home, as much money as it is necessary, proper, and best for them to handle, and then teaching them that a portion of all they earn should be contributed to the Lord. The Jews were required to give one-tenth of their earnings to Jehovah; and, as we are reminded over and over again in the New Testament that Jehovah has blessed us with an infinitely better covenant than that granted to the children of Abraham, we should be afraid and ashamed to offer Him less than one-tenth of our earnings, especially as he puts us upon our honor at that point.

"Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings." (Mal. 3: 8.)

CONSTRUCTIVE WORK. No. 2.

BY E. A. ELAM.

Continuing our study of constructive work, attention is called to the truth that some things are to be torn down, thrown upon the scrap pile, and even destroyed. But to be tearing down and destroying always, and building up nothing, is making no progress, but is saying, and doing not—is pharisaical. This is as a man always grubbing in a field—digging up bushes, pulling up stumps, cutting briers, blasting out rocks, etc., but never planting and cultivating a crop and reaping a harvest.

Then there is great necessity of knowing what to tear down and to destroy; also, of knowing where to begin such work. No doubt many go at this backwards. They may "tithe mint and anise and cummin," but they leave "undone the weightier matters of the law, justice, and mercy, and faith."

But what are the things which should be torn down, or eradicated, and destroyed? Knowing what these things are will help to know where to begin and how to do the work. Paul says:

For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war according to the flesh (for the weapons of our warfare are not of the flesh, but mighty before God to the casting down of strongholds); casting down imaginations, and every high thing that is exalted against the knowledge of God, and bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ; and being in readiness to avenge all disobedience, when your obedience shall be made full. (2 Cor. 10: 3-6.)

The "strongholds" of Satan are to be cast down. In these he has intrenched himself. No compromise can be made, no armistice can be agreed upon, and there is no release from this war.

The weapons to be used in this warfare are not according to the flesh. Carnal weapons are vanity, pride, love of display, worldly wisdom, worldly tactics, or shot and shell and sword. But the weapons to be used in this warfare are, nevertheless, "mighty before God," as marching by faith around the walls of Jericho, "to the casting down" of the enemy and his fortresses.

While some are opposed to the use of gunpowder, cold steel, and poisonous gases in their fight upon some forms of error, they nevertheless war according to the flesh—that is, in a partisan spirit, sectarian pride, denominational rivalry, bitterness, envy, vituperation, misrepresentation, slander and persecution. An attack upon one's character is worse than a physical attack upon his physical life.

But what and where are these "strongholds?" The expressions, "casting down imaginations [as the margin says "reasonings"], and every high thing" in one's imaginations, or reasonings, "that is exalted against the knowledge of God," plainly show not only what Satan's strongholds are, and, therefore, that which must be destroyed, but also where they are. All should be able to locate them. They are in one's self.

"Bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ" shows also that which must be done while Satan is being cast out. The house which has been swept and garnished must not be allowed to remain empty. One must not only cease to do evil, but must learn to do well. Evil imaginations, vain reasonings, and unrighteous thoughts not only must be forsaken, but God's thoughts and ways must fill their place. (Isa. 55: 8, 9.) One must not only escape "from the corruption that is in the world by lust," but must become a partaker of the divine nature. "The divine nature" means the nature or attributes of God. Of these one must become a partaker in so far as they are not beyond human reach. No man can be all-powerful, all-wise, etc.; but every one should be merciful, forbearing, forgiving, gracious, light, and lovein other words, Christlike, Godlike.

But why repeat all these things? Every one who knows anything about the Bible knows they are true. But to know to do good, and do it not, is sin. The Bible teaches that he who steals, commits fornication, loves the world, and does not respect and honor the word of God, not only has no business trying to preach, but is a reproach to the cause of Christ.

Another point in regard to casting down the "strong-holds" of Satan, or casting out Satan, is that one must cast out Satan out of one's self. One must not be so busy casting Satan out of others that one cannot keep the devil out of one's self, or casting motes out of the eyes of others that one cannot take time to cast beams out of one's own eye. Yet, is it not sadly true that some seem so busy tearing down the theories, notions, and vain reasonings of others that they have lost sight of their own morality and spirituality, their own righteousness and true holiness, and the building up for themselves true and strong Christian characters?

These are very strong and comprehensive declarations of God, and show where and why so many fail.

These "imaginations, and every high thing that is exalted against the knowledge of God, and bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ," are individual matters—that is, they must be done by each individual—each preacher, teacher, and every other one who would gain the victory over Satan and sin. One man cannot control the imaginations of another and cannot bring the thoughts of another "into captivity to the obedience of Christ."

Paul included himself in this. This was his individual effort. In all his preaching of Christ, and him crucified, in all his opposition to error of every kind, and in all his work in building up the church in every place, he kept his heart right, his life pure, and his conscience void of offense toward God and men. He says of himself: "We wronged no man, we corrupted no man, we took advantage of no man." He never misquoted an author, misrepresented an opponent, or slandered a soul. He performed no logical gymnastics. He was clothed in the whole armor of God. The sword of the Spirit, the word of God, was his aggressive weapon. He was as righteous as he was aggressive, as holy as he was strong and courageous. In his differences with Peter, Barnabas, and Mark, he was brotherly and true, faithful and firm; but he never nagged at them, slurred at them, tried to excite any prejudice against them, or endeavored to induce congregations to discard them as preachers or as his coworkers. Of course, it is understood that they saw and acknowledged their mistakes.

It is a great pity that some brethren with equal love for the truth, equally conscientious, equally faithful to the gospel of Christ, etc., cannot discuss questions with one another without saying "smart" things, cutting and rasping things, and sometimes hateful things, and without counting one another as heretics. Every one knows there are fair, just, courteous, and honorable rules of discussion. This is especially true of Christians. I do not believe that when some die, wisdom, all real scholarship, loyalty to God, faithfulness to Christ, and love of the brother-hood will die with them.

IN DEFIANCE OF THE LAW.

A school-teacher by the name of J. T. Scopes, of Dayton, Tenn., has brought himself into the limelight by defying the law enacted against teaching the infidel theory of man's origin, or the doctrine of so-called "evolution."

Judge John R. Neal, chief counsel for the defense, according to a newspaper publication, deposes as follows:

As one of the attorneys for the defense, I welcome Mr. Bryan's announcement that he will appear in the antievolution test case for the prosecution. His great reputation as an orator and publicist gives promise that our test case will be a battle royal.

We desire, however, to say most emphatically that those who look upon our effort to have the antievolution law declared unconstitutional as a fight in behalf of any theory of evolution greatly mistake the real issues in-

The question is not whether evolution is true or untrue, but involves the freedom of teaching, or, what is more important, the freedom of learning.

As we see it, the great question is whether the Tennessee Legislature has the power to prevent the young minds of Tennessee from knowing what has been thought and said by the world's greatest scientists and thus to prevent them from forming their own judgment in regard to questions of life and science.

We regard it as equally un-American, and therefore unconstitutional, whether it is kingly or ecclesiastical authority or legislative power that would attempt to limit the human mind in its inquiry after truth.

On the assumption that Judge Neal has been correctly reported, we most positively deny his statement regarding the issue involved. There is only one "theory" of evolution, and it is strictly a theory, unproven and impossible of demonstration—viz., that man sprang from a lower order of animal creation. Of course, there are different "brands" of this infidel theory; but, no matter how it may be labeled, it is always the same old Darwinian theory.

There is an evolution in fact, without any theory or guesswork—viz., that both vegetable and animal organisms evolve to full maturity from "seed," each producing or propagating its own kind without any change whatever in species. This evolution is being constantly demonstrated before the eyes of man in the natural world. Hence, is is nonsense for Judge Neal or any one else to be talking about the issue's involving anything save that man did not originate as the Bible declares. Who, for one moment, would deny the evolution as witnessed in the natural world all about us?

Why not, then, be candid, and not seek to hide the real issue from the people by saying: "The question is not whether evolution is true or untrue, but involves the freedom of teaching, or, what is more important, the freedom of learning?" This defender of Scopes in violating the law should have been more specific, and stated exactly what is proposed to be taught, and let the parents of the children decide as to the freedom of any man to teach ti em that God's word is not true.

If this Mr. Scopes were teaching the children intrusted to him the bald-faced infidelity of Hume, Voltaire, Paine, or Robert G. Ingersoll, would Judge Neal defend him on the ground of "liberty" to so teach? If not, why not? The parents who believe God's word regarding the creation of man consider the "theory" of evolution taught by Scopes and the "world's greatest scientists" (?) just as rank infidelity as ever any of the noted infidels mentioned taught.

Let it be emphasized with all possible force that there is not upon the broad earth a Christian who believes that man came into existence in any way other than that stated in the Bible. It would be as impossible for one to believe that man evolved from some lower order of animal life and be a Christian as it would be to make wings and fly to the moon. Never mind about the professors, preachers, and editors that are teaching the "theory" of evolution, for not one of them should have the brazen effrontery to ask a soul to believe one word of the Bible. If the Genesis account of man's creation is not true, on what ground can these wise (?) gentlemen ask us to believe any part of the Bible?

Again, the false issue raised by the defenders of the "theory" of evolution in asserting that this is not a religious question needs to be exposed to the limit. Any question touching the origin of man is most vitally connected with the religion of the Bible and affects the humanity of the Lord Jesus Christ. But these same evolutionists have not one word to say against the law forbidding the teaching of any theory of religion or the Bible in our public schools! Why does not Judge Neal and those of his way of thinking oppose the law against teaching the Bible in the public schools, on the ground that it involves the "freedom of teaching, or, what is more important, the freedom of learning?"

It is further reported that "Dr. H. A. Morgan, president of the University of Tennessee," will be asked to aid in the defense of Professor Scopes. Are we to understand by this that the head of the State university is a believer in and an advocate of the "theory" which flatly contraducts the Bible? No wonder, then, that the students of this university paraded the streets in Knoxville with caricatures of the State legislators, and shouting: "Long live Darwin!"

How do the taxpayers of Tennessee, who believe God's word regarding the origin of man, relish the idea of being taxed to keep up an institution whose students shout, "Long live Darwin?" There were men in the Legislature that voted for the bill to prohibit the teaching of the infidel theory of evolution in our public schools who, comparatively speaking, have pounds of brains to a few grains of gray matter in the craniums of the students shouting, "Long live Darwin," while displaying caricatures of their superiors.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

WITHDRAWING FROM THE DISORDERLY.

BY J. G. ALLEN.

I have read several articles lately on the above subject that caused me to wonder, "whither are we drifting?" The point that astonishes me is this: We have boasted of our ability to identify ourselves with the New Testament church in all points, knowing full well that if we fail in just one point, we lose all. Again, we insist that we to-day are contending that each congregation is an independent body to manage its own affairs, under its own eldership, without any outside interference. Still, in some places, brethren urge parties that have been withdrawn from by the eldership of another congregation to unite with them without these parties righting the wrongs for which they were withdrawn from. And worse still, the elders of a congregation will engage a preacher to labor for them that has been withdrawn from by the eldership of another congregation, without the said preacher making any amends at all.

Now, brethren, there is utterly a fault among us along this line; for just the moment we deny the authority of the eldership we lose our identity as a church of Christ. The Gospel Advocate has many able men connected with it as editors and writers, and I hope that some of them will give some lessons on this subject.

PROGRESS IN FLORIDA.

BY S. F. MORROW.

Brother Watson preached for the Gary congregation, Thirty-sixth and Ninth streets, Tampa, Fla., on the last Lord's day in March, with one baptism. Brother Dasaro preached on the first Lord's day in April, with four baptized. The Lord is blessing our labors. We are now worshiping in our new house. The house is thirty by fifty feet and will seat about three hundred. It has four Sundayschool rooms. All are working together in love and unity. We began a tent meeting on the last Lord's day in March, in Seminole Heights, a good location for another congregation. We are finding several members in this field who have moved to Tampa recently and seem anxious to go to work. They met last Lord's-day morning to teach the children and all older ones. Forty persons were present. A fine start for a rainy morning. The cool weather has hindered some. When it is warm the crowds are fine, and the preaching by Brother T. B. Thompson, of Lakeland, is excellent. I had the pleasure of going to Lakeland last Lord's day to teach while Brother Thompson was in Tampa. With pleasure and surprise I found a good-sized congregation, well taught. They esteem Brother Thompsen highly for his work's sake. I also found other good teachers. Sister Thompson has a midweek class; also Sister Pope, of Nashville, Tenn., with whom I labored in Sunday school at Reid Avenue years ago. We never had better teachers than Sister Pope and Sister D. D. Hamilton, of Reid Avenue. I am glad that we are learning that sisters can do something besides warming a seat. I must say I never spent a more pleasant day than in Lakeland. It looked like Nashville, with Sister Pope's son-inlaw's precious little daughter as I used to know her, and many other Tennesseeans, and some from other States. We bespeak for this congregation a great future. insure this, keep up your daily reading of God's word and all take the Gospel Advocate and read it and learn and keep yourselves posted as to the great work the loyal brethren and our good Bible schools are doing. Don't forget, when you come to Tampa, we have some noble brethren and sisters here, and to know them is to love them. We have to soon have several congregations here, as we have in Nashville. D. Lipscomb said to have many small congregations, and the Bible teaches the same. Unfortunately, some of our unfortunate preachers teach to the contrary. Judge ye who is right, the Lord or the unfortunate preacher. May the Lord help us all to do more, read his precious word daily and prayerfully to learn our duty to our God and how we should treat each other, and work together in love and unity. When one congregation has a meeting, let all other near-by congregations come and work for the salvation of souls and the glory of God. To this end let us all work and pray. Let brethren who have children and friends living in Tampa write them. We have two loyal congregations in Tampa, and hope to soon have more. You will find one at the corner of Nebraska and Twentieth Streets, and one at Thirty-sixth and Ninth Streets. The tent is now in Seminole Heights, on North and Central Streets. All will welcome vou.

NELSON COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

We have a small congregation here, getting along nicely. But there is one who refuses the loaf because it is not broken up in pieces small enough to go around. I would be pleased to have you explain that point. Did the Lord intend for the one that waits on the table to do all of the breaking, or did he intend for each individual to fulfill his command as did the apostles that had that custom?—R. W. CRAIG, Duffee, Miss.

There is no scripture authorizing any particular individual to break the bread in small particles. The following scriptures give the complete record: Matt. 26: 26-29; Mark 14: 22-25; Luke 22: 14-20; 1 Cor. 11: 20-29. These scriptures instruct us that the disciples of our Lord are to eat the Lord's Supper at the appointed time in memory of Christ. Not one word is said about who should break the loaf into particles. It is exceedingly sinful for brethren to quibble over such minor things. The one who says that any particular person must break the loaf is legislating where God has not legislated. He is laying down laws where God has not spoken, and commits a crime against our Lord in thus legislating for the Lord's people. The brother who makes this contention should be taught the word of God in kindness and love; yet he should be made to realize the exceeding sinfulness in causing a disturbance over such things.

Please answer, through the Gospel Advocate, the following questions: (1) Was Judas Iscariot ever a true disciple? (2) Explain how Christ was made perfect through suffering.—SARAH MULLINIKS BENNETT.

1. We should understand what a "true disciple" is. "Disciple" means "a learner." I am sure that Judas was a disciple—that is, he was a learner. I am sure that he learned much during the three and one-half years that he was with Christ. I take it that he practiced some things which he learned, but he was not throughout this time a faithful disciple. We are told that Judas was a thief and a devil. "Jesus answered them, Did not I choose you the twelve, and one of you is a devil?" (John 6: 70.) "Now this he said, not because he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and having the bag took away what was put therein." (John 12: 6.) It seems that Judas did not let the principles which Christ taught take hold of his heart and direct his life. Near the latter part of Christ's ministry, Judas sought to betray him. This shows that he had not let the teachings of Christ purify his heart. No good fruit was produced in Judas' life by the word of God. This was because Judas would not let the words of Christ control his life. We are told that Satan entered into Judas. Satan never enters a man unless he is to become a welcome guest. Brother D. Lipscomb said: "I do not think he ever entered a good man's heart or a clean animal. He entered the swine; they were unclean." Of course, Judas cannot be called "a true disciple." A true disciple will let the teachings of Christ guide him in the ways of righteousness; this Judas did not do.

2. Christ was not made perfect until he had suffered. "But we behold him who hath been made a little lower than the angels, even Jesus, because of the suffering of death crowned with glory and honor, that by the grace of God he should taste of death for every man. For it became him, for whom are all things, and through whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the author of their salvation perfect through sufferings." (Heb. 2: 9, 10.) Again: "Though he was a Son, yet learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and having been made perfect, he became unto all them that obey him the author of eternal salvation." (Heb. 5: 8, 9.) Again: "Forasmuch then as Christ suffered in the flesh, arm ye yourselves also with the same mind; for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." (1 Pet. 4: 1.) To be made "perfect through sufferings" means properly to be full, complete, wanting in nothing. As it is applied to Christ, it means simply that he was fully qualified for the work that was before him; that he was made complete and entire, wanting in nothing. It took the sufferings of Christ to prepare him as the Redeemer of man. He is to become our High Priest; he is to be our Mediator. to represent us to the Father. He must needs be tempted in all points as we are and suffer as we must suffer in order to make him the merciful, perfect High Priest for us. It is clear that he is made perfect through his sufferings, but as to what this perfection consisted in is a little more difficult for us to determine. Christ must suffer to be fully prepared to honor God and magnify his government by making an adequate atonement for the sins of the world. "Thus it is written, that the Christ should suffer, and rise again from the dead the third day." (Luke 24: 46.) Ey his suffering he becomes the Captain of our salvation, and is adapted to the nature, wants, and circumstances of those whom he came to redeem. The religion of Christ must reach and bless poor, suffering, sinful humanity, and in the divine wisdom it seems that this could best be done by Christ's sufferings. It is said that no one is fully qualified to visit the sick and administer to the wants of the afflicted who has not himself drunk deep of the cup of human sorrow and of human suffering. Christ drank of the cup of suffering to its very dregs.

I want some information concerning women teaching Sunday-school classes in public assemblies. I have thought for some time it was wrong for them to do so. I am a member of the church of Christ and want to do only the things pleasing to God. Recently I have been selected teach our senior quarterlies, the class consisting of young men and women. I cannot see why there would be much difference in teaching in the pulpit and the class, as our house of worship consists of only one large room.—X.

This question has been answered a number of times in the "Query Department;" however, we are willing to make further suggestions. I think that there is to be made a distinction between teaching a class and publicly preaching. Paul, in Corinthians, is instructing Christian women to "keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak." (1 Cor. 14: 34.) Woman is not to take the lead nor usurp authority over man. "But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have dominion over a man, but to be in quietness." (1 Tim. 2: 12.) No woman should aspire to the leadership of the church or to have dominion over man; but if she is asked by the elders of the church to teach a class in a humble and private way, I see no scripture violated. If she is competent to teach, she should be willing to serve in that humble capacity to the best of her ability. It is sinful for any one to bury his talent or fail to use the God-given faculties for advancing the cause of Christ.

It is to be commended in the good sister for wanting to know just what will be pleasing to the Lord. If all our sisters were as fearful of displeasing the Lord as this sister seems to be, greater progress would be made in the church. It is a great drawback to the teaching if there are several classes being taught at the same time in the same room. However, if this cannot be removed, then this sister should do her best, under the fear of God and in humility, to instruct those who may be in her class.

BIBLE CROSS WORD

ANOTHER short puzzle for the inexperienced or for a time contest between a group of Bible students. The winner of the first puzzle sets a time limit for others, who compete in a puzzle-solving competition.

How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle © 1925 THE J.C.W. CO.

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and energy form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

Solution of Puzzle in last issue

NEEDS OF POTTER ORPHAN HOME.

BY H. C. SHOULDERS.

When we took charge of the Potter Orphan Home the first of March, the trustees decided to spend about three thousand dollars on repairing the buildings, putting in electric lights, city water, and improving the farm. Everything we have mentioned is very necessary in order to make the Home what it should be. The work is now under good headway, and we are anxious to push the work right on till everything has been completed.

We have thirty-three children in the Home. We also have applications for about twenty more, which we are having to hold off till the repair work can be completed. When the repairs have all been completed, it will double our capacity. To complete the work as it should be, we will need from one thousand to fifteen hundred dollars more.

In order to raise the amount needed, I am asking each congregation to make a special contribution to the Potter Orphan Home on the fifth Sunday in May. Brethren, this seems like a great big sum; but when you think of several thousand people to give this amount, it becomes a very small thing for so many. Then I appeal to every man, woman, and child to take this to the Lord in prayer, talk Potter Orphan Home special collection, and then give as you have prayed. Make all checks or money orders payable to Potter Orphan Home or H. C. Shoulders, treasurer, and send to Route 4, Bowling Green, Ky.

BASSETT-GARRETT DEBATE.

BY A. S. LANDIS.

This debate was conducted on the nights of May 14, 15, under the tent used by the church of Christ in Columbus, Ga. Brother Garrett was in a series of meetings, and Mr. James Bassett (Nazarene) took exceptions to some things Brother Garrett had to say about holiness. The result was the signing of the following propositions: (1) "The Bible teaches that a man can and does live in a state of sinless perfection." James Bassett affirms; Hugh E. Garrett denies. (2) "The Bible teaches that Christians to-day receive a literal baptism of the Holy Spirit which burns up their carnal nature and leaves them without a desire to sin." James Bassett affirms; Hugh E. Garrett denies.

Mr. Bassett signed as affirmant of both propositions, but it was agreed that a Mr. Weir (Nazarene) would affirm the second one. Each speaker had two speeches-forty minutes for the first and fifteen for rebuttal.

I cannot begin to give the arguments advanced in this discussion. Both Nazarene preachers could see only one kind of sin, and that was such as lying, stealing, murder, etc. They used their old-time argument that a sinning Christian would be like a white blackbird, an honest thief, a truthful liar, etc. Brother Garrett met every argument with scripture.

The Nazarenes seemed to put more confidence in Webster's Dictionary than in God's word, and criticized Brother Garrett, they said, for rejecting Mr. Webster's definition. Brother Garrett replied that he accepted Webster just as long as Webster and God agreed; but when Webster or any other man contradicted the plain statements of God, of course he preferred to accept God in the matter.

Brother Garrett relied solely upon the word of God for his defense, and those who know him know that his defense was made with force and had a telling effect upon the audience. He administered withering rebukes to men who would wrest or twist the Scriptures: but he was courteous, and not one time was there an objection to his language or charges from the other side.

This was Brother Garrett's first debate; but it would be hard to find a man who could produce more scripture in the same length of time than he did. He asked a number of legitimate questions, all of which were completely ignored. He, however, answered plainly every question put to him. He used none of the arts of the professional debater, but met every argument "head on." He impressed his hearers with his familiarity with the Bible, losing no time in searching and looking, but knowing exactly what he wanted and where to find it.

Many complimentary remarks were made by sectarians, among whom were some Nazarenes. Several sectarian preachers were present.

Mr. Weir moderated for Mr. Bassett and a Mr. Harrison for Mr. Weir. I tried double duty as well as Brother Garrett, and filled that place for him as best I could both nights. From the expressions of a number of Methodists and others, I am sure that good was done.

The Bible has a friend and defender in Hugh E. Garrett.

PREACH THE WORD.

BY H. J. PHILLIPS.

No man or set of men will ever do better than to preach the word of God. The Baptists are having some trouble about their doctrine. It seems that they are about to make some changes in their "New Hampshire Confession of Faith." I wish they would. The way to change it would be to do away with it, buy a New Testament, and teach the world what is written therein.

I have little time for any preacher that will refuse to tell sinners what to do to be saved. Any one that can read the word of God can tell a sinner what to do to be saved. The preacher that is honest with himself and God will not preach more or less than the words of Christ and his apostles. If a man was guilty of breaking Moses' law, he was punished under the law. All preachers know that. But to-day we have men and women that are living lives in violation to God's law, yet they claim to be the children of God. Jesus said: "If ye love me, ye will keep my command-ments." Woe will be unto the man Woe will be unto the man that fails to preach the gospel. The preacher that wants to tell the world of Jesus and his law of forgiveness, nothing more or less, ought to try a few sermons on Mark 16: 16; Acts 2: 38; 11: 12; 8: 35-39; 10: 48; 22: 16. And after people have obeyed from their hearts the gospel, then they should be called "Christians" (see Acts 11: 26), and nothing else.

The world does not need human creeds to save it. What we need is men that will preach the word. God has no other way to save sinners, save by his word, and that must be taught by God's people. The only agent through which the word of God is taught is man. The same principle is just as true with the devil. So long as Satan can get a preacher to preach something instead of the gospel, he is well pleased; but so long as man preaches anything other than the true gospel of Jesus, God is not pleased. So long as man fails to teach a sinner that faith comes by hearing the word of God, that he must repent of his sins, that he must confess Jesus with his mouth before man and be baptized into Christ, he is not preaching the word of the Lord.

Gal. 3: 27 tells us how we get into Christ: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Again, in Rom. 6: 3: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" In Rom. 10: 15 we have a beautiful statement of a true preacher of the word: "As it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!"

We cannot feel other than sad when we see our own people refuse to accept Christ. Paul said he could wish himself to be a castaway for his people Israel.

The preacher that preaches the word in the love of God has done all he can do. Every man that refuses to accept the word must hope only to spend eternity with the lost of earth. Jesus has extended his invitation to all men everywhere to come to him and live. It is not God's will that any should perish, but that every man come to repentance. "Shun not to declare the whole counsel of God," then when our fleeting days are over here on this earth, we shall have the hearty approval of our Lord and his host to bid us home to rest. If a man is guilty of stealing here in our country, it is awful; but the man that steals from God is even worse. We have people all over our land and country that will steal out of Jesus' commandments the very essence of what they mean; and not only this, but they will substitute other things for God's law. They will teach you that four ounces of water is enough to baptize twenty people and have water left, yet Jesus himself walked to the river of Jordan. Jesus has said a man must be "born of water." Paul, in Rom. 6: 4, tells us that "we are buried with him by baptism into death," showing that we must be put out of sight in the watery grave and that we must be raised from the water. Paul tells us that the gospel is the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. We must obey from the heart a form of doctrine that will represent a death and burial.

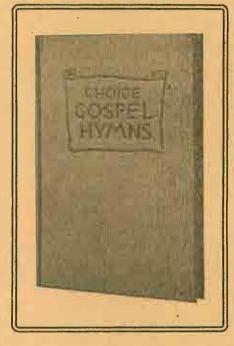

May God hasten the day when men will throw away all creeds and teach no more the doctrines of men, but every one teach for doctrine the commandments of God. Then we will be of the same mind and teach the same doctrine.

HARDEMAN'S TABERNACLE SERMONS

VOLUME II

Price, $1.50, postpaid.

These sermons were delivered to from five to eight thousand people. Hardeman believes the gospel and has the courage to proclaim it. The sermons are strong, clear, and forceful. Thousands were charmed and delighted by these sermons here in Nashville. Many thousand people have read them with much satisfaction and profit.

A copy of the book should be in every library.

We do not expect to have this book of sermons in stock very long. If you want a copy, you should order at once. It would do much good to circulate a number of copies among your friends. The truth is mighty and will prevail.

BOSWELL-HARDEMAN DISCUSSION ON INSTRU-MENTAL MUSIC IN THE WORSHIP

Price, postpaid $1.50

The Boswell-Hardeman discussion on instrumental music in the worship is now ready for distribution. If you have not already given us your order for the discussion, you should do so at once. The subject is a live one and the interest in it is growing. So many who have built on the silence of the Bible have espoused "open membership" and have denied the inspiration of the Scriptures and the deity of Christ that the people are realizing as never before that it is dangerous to build on the silence of the Bible.

This discussion was conducted in a good spirit throughout, each speaker showing marked consideration and courtesy for his opponent. Ira M. Boswell did as well as any one can do who undertakes to prove that instrumental music in the worship is scriptural. Any failure that he made was not on account of his lack of ability, but was due to the weakness of his position. N. B. Hardeman presented the truth in a forceful and convincing way.

Buy the book and circulate it among those who use instrumental music in the worship.

WORD FROM BROTHER YOHANNAN.

BY J. W. GRANT.

When I published on February 17 that I had mailed Brother Yohannan a check for one hundred and eighty-five dollars, I said it would be at least May 20 before we would hear that he had received it, and so it was; for to-day (May 20) I have a letter from him telling that he has received the check and expressing his gratitude and thanks as follows:

I was afflicted from the standpoint of finance. I thank you all very much for your sympathy toward us. I have received your welcome and kind letter of February 17 with a draft for thirty-eight pounds, eleven shillings, and eight pence. [It cost the one hundred and eighty-five dollars.] I thank you all very much indeed. It reached me in the day of big need. It was a great joy to my children with myself. My little girl, with my son, they said: 'Father, you have promised to pay your debt; the remaining will buy you wheat and clothing.' For three months we have not used sugar with tea, only with the raisins. I am not able to mention everything in what condition we have been. I did not have much strength to sow my land or to build us a place to shelter ourselves. To have us a helper will cost us a great deal. My aunt is very feeble from stomach trouble this whole winter. My father-in-law and mother-in-law still are faithful in the Lord. Our members in Oroomiah for present time are about twenty. They are not reassembled from Hamadan, from Kermanshah, from Bagdad, and from Russia. They are abroad for their lives till the conditions are improved. Still I am doing my Christian duty. Little is going on, and slowly. Because my children are small and I have no helper, I am not able to travel but little distance. I wish you to excuse me. For the sake of my children I am trying to find me a good helper. Then I will have opportunity to travel more to different places. For the present time we are like vagabonds. My Christian wife, she is not going from my mind. She left with us a good name and good examples. She was not only a wife to me, but a colaborer. I never will forget her. Out of the money you sent I bought a skirt for my mother-in-law, gave her condole, etc.

I am your brother in Christ, ALEXANDER KH.B. YOHANNAN.

Daylight, Tenn., May 18.—I have just returned from Jackson County, Tenn., where I preached at three different places. On the first Lord's day in April I preached at Philadelphia, with five additions—two by restoration and three by baptism. On the second Lord's day I preached at Antioch Church, where I have been preaching for many years. On the third Lord's day I preached in the Free State, two miles and a half from Gainesboro.—W. G. Wilson.

Fort Deposit, Ala., May 20.—Our work here is moving along nicely. We have splendid crowds at all our services. We are looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to the first Sunday in July, when Brother W. Clarence Cooke, of Lynchburg, Tenn., will begin our meeting. Last Sunday Brother A. B. Lipscomb preached our commencement sermon.

Fort Deposit, Ala., May 20.—Our work here is moving along nicely. We have splendid crowds at all our services. We are looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to the first Sunday in July, when Brother W. Clarence Cooke, of Lynchburg, Tenn., will begin our meeting. Last Sunday Brother A. B. Lipscomb preached our commencement sermon. It was very instructive and inspiring. In the afternoon he preached at Mount Willing, eleven miles west of here. This was a digressive church for a number of years, but the first of this year they agreed to keep the organ silent if I would preach for them once a month. We hope to do much good there in the future. In the evening Brother Lipscomb preached at Fort Deposit to a large and attentive audience.—D. E. Mason.

North Little Rock, Ark., May 18.—
In this town of fifteen thousand inhabitants a few of us are trying to lift the gospel banner. We are a mere handful, but we began buying a lot in 1922 and have it over half paid for. One hundred and eighty-two dollars would cover the balance due on the lot. When paid out, we can borrow on it and put a house of worship there. We are now meeting each Lord's day at the lone of one of our members, and we use Gospel Advocate literature. One year ago Brother Daley, from the Twelfth Street and Thayer Avenue Church, in Little Rock, held a meeting on our lot, but with no visible results, except that we became a church, using what material we had for deacons, elders, etc. J. E. Armstrong and Norman Fisher were appointed deacons. We have a large field and such a heavy burden to carry that we are asking for help from our brethren to pay out on our lot so that we can have a place of worship. Any contributions sent to us will be gratefully received. Please send to J. E. Armstrong, 411 Olive Street, North Little Rock, Ark.

Street, North Little Rock, Ark.

Jasper, Ala., May 15.—Brother G. A. Dunn, Jr., recently held a twelve-days' meeting at Jasper, in the courthouse, in which the writer led the song service. Six were baptized and eight became identified with the congregation as the result of the meeting. Two or more were from the "digressives," who have a church in Jasper. One afternoon we went to Coal Valley and baptized a lady who had been taught the truth by her mother-in-law, but who had never heard a gospel preacher. After Brother Dunn was gone the digressive preacher tried to reply to Brother Dunn's discourse on the music question. I think it did us more good than harm, for it was the weakest thing I ever heard. He took the erroneous position that God's word does not require Christians to sing in church worship, and said many things equally as absurd. After the services I had a conversation with him, in which he contended for instrumental music as an aid to the singing or to lead the songs. I suggested that they get a graphophone to lead the prayers. He said it would be all right. I suggested that we have a friendly discussion on the music question, but he would not accept.—Gus. Nichols.

Columbia, Tenn., May 19.—On last Sunday Brother Alonzo Jones; of Nashville, Tenn., pitched a battle here in the defense of the Son of God against which the best troops and the most distinguished generals of the other side were absolutely powerless. During the morning session Brother A. C. Holt, of Nashville, Tenn., led out on the "firing line" and Brother Jones brought up the "rear," and every shot that was fired went to the place whereunto it was aimed. In the afternoon session Brother Jones led out on the "firing line" and Brother Holt brought up the "rear," and strange, but true, our hearts did burn within us while these men spoke with power the wonderful words of God. The army of the Lord is quite young in Columbia, but brave and daring, and within the course of a few years we hope to see a large congregation here in the name of the Lord of hosts. A small contribution was taken up for the Nashville Christian Institute, which was highly appreciated. May the Lord continue to smile upon this work and send more laborers into the vineyard to work; for truly "the harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few."—Annie C. Tuggle.

North Alexandria, Tenn., May 15.— The church of Christ at this place recently purchased a lot for the purpose of erecting a church building. The lot, which is situated in a most desirable location, was bought at a very reasonable price (four hundred dollars), and is fully paid for. The deed covering the lot contains the restrictive clause protecting the property from a possible separation. The congregation of the North Alexandria Church, though small, is strong in the faith, with very great hopes in the future of strengthening the cause and extending the gospel to lost men and women through this section. Any congregation or individual who might wish to give for this purpose will be greatly appreciated by this small body of Christian workers and at the same time be aiding in the cause for which we stand.—T. H. Nixon.

RAY.

Dixie Mann Ray, daughter of John and Ella Moseley Mann, was born on August 4, 1888, and departed this life on December 9, 1924. She was married to Felix C. Ray on December 20, 1914. She was baptized into Christ by Brother J. W. Grant at the age of fourteen. She left four children, her husband, two sisters, two brothers, with a host of other relatives and friends, to mourn their loss. She was educated at Decherd, Tenn., and at Burritt College. At both places she made many friends by her quiet, kind, and constant disposition. Above all else, Sister Ray is remembered in all else, Sister Ray is remembered in this community because of her loy-alty and zeal in the church. There alty and zeal in the church. There was never a question as to where she stood when the Bible was under consideration. If it was shown her in the Scriptures, there was no further question. And with equal care she question. And with equal care she loved her home, and gave herself continually to better it and make it brighter. We are walking by faith, not by sight, as our hopes enter into the promises in store for them that die in the Lord.

SRYGLEY:

James Milton Tolbert Srygley, of Town Creek, Ala., was born on De-cember 14, 1846. He was baptized by Brother Jesse Wood in 1866. He was married to Miss Maude Roberts on August 20, 1873. To this union ten August 20, 1873. To this thich ten children were born, seven sons and three daughters, all of whom are liv-ing except two, one daughter and one son, the oldest and the youngest of the ten, who died when quite young. Brother Srygley was a member of one of the best families of North Alabama. He was a first cousin of our beloved brother E. S. Sweden of North Northwille. brother, F. B. Srygley, of Nashville, Tenn., and was a fine character. He was a good man in the fullest sense of the term. He was one of the best and truest friends I ever had or exand truest friends I ever had or expect to ever have. He had spent the past winter with his youngest daughter, Mrs. Lillian Srygley Rickard, in Fort Worth, Texas. He died in Sheffield, Ala., in the home of his son, Edgar Srygley, en route to his home at Town Creek, which place he hoped to reach before his eyes were closed in death. A large number of friends in death. A large number of friends and relatives attended the memorial services preparatory to the interment of his body in the beautiful cemetery in Tuscumbia, Ala. C. E. HOLT.

CRIIMP.

William Crump, son of John and Mary Davis Crump, son of John and Mary Davis Crump, was born on May 18, 1856, in Sumner County, Tenn., and departed this life on March 30, 1925, at Nashville. Tenn. He was married to Annie Elizabeth Morgan on May 1, 1877. This union was blessed with twelve children—seven boys and five girls. Of this large family, the mother and seven children still survive. Brother Crump was a still survive. Brother Crump was a remarkable man in many respects, chief of which was his lovable personality, which drew a host of friends to him and held them with an imperishable bond. His faith in the promises of God was an outstanding virtue of his godly life. No man believed stronger than he in the all-sufficiency of the word of God, and it was his privilege to serve Jehovah through storm and sunshine for more than fifty years. He was baptized into storm and sunshine for more than fifty years. He was baptized into Christ in early life by Dr. Hobson, at Cottontown, Tenn. A pillar in the church of God on earth has been removed to find a place in the eternal tabernacles of His heavenly kingdom. May His almighty arm support those who are bowed under the burden of grief and sorrow till Jesus shall wipe all tears away at the happy reunion all tears away at the happy reunion "over there." Lytton Alley and H. Leo Boles conducted the funeral service at the Twelfth Avenue church house in the presence of a large assemblage of sorrowing and sympathizing friends. LYTTON ALLEY.

GOUGH.

GOUGH.

Elder L. Gough was born in Kentucky on November 28, 1847, and died on December 31, 1924, at Waxahachie, Texas. Brother Gough came to Lamar County with his parents at the age of nine years, and lived near Roxton till twenty-one, when he went to Fannin County, where he made his home with an older brother. He obeyed the gospel when eighteen years of age, and truly his life was one of service in the Master's kingdom. He preached the gospel of Christ for nearly fifty years, and was never happier than when in the Master's work. For several years before his death his health was such that he was denied this happiness, and he often felt that his last years were useless because of his inability to continue active service. He was one of the old pioneers whose labor was never crowned with worldly remuneration but the idea of vinning souls to tinue active service. He was one of the old pioneers whose labor was never crowned with worldly remuner-ation, but the joy of winning souls to the cause he loved was his greatest reward. He was married, in 1869, to Almedia Brecheen, the wife of his youth, his helpmate while rearing the family, and his nurse and com-fort during his sickness and death. The last word that he ever spoke was The last word that he ever spoke was "mother," for such was what he had called her since children had come to them. This was truly a union of love which grew with hardships and increasing cares. Nine children were born to them, eight of whom are yet born to them, eight of whom are yet living—four sons and four daughters. Their home was one of Christian influence, and these Christian parents have had the satisfaction of seeing their entire family become members of the one body. Father is gone, and we miss him; but we weep not as one who has no hope, for "blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." How often I have heard him speak of that "city not made with hands," and I know he will dwell therein forever. He was faithful to the end, and truly know he will dwell therein forever. He was faithful to the end, and truly he shall hear the words: "Well done, good and faithful servant: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Brother F. L. Young, of Paris, Texas, spoke words of comfort to the bereaved ones, after which his body was laid to rest at Klondike. Texas. Although to rest at Klondike, Texas. the weather was intensely cold, many followed his remains to its resting place, and his grave was literally covered with beautiful flowers, tokens of love and appreciation from his many friends and relatives. These lines are written to his memory by a daughter who loved him devotedly and who will always thank God for the influence and counsel of such a Christian father. His devoted wife, our lovely Christian mother, through the mercy of God, is spared to us a little longer.

110 Seventh Avenue, North NASHVILLE, TENN. SIMPLICITY TOWARD CHRIST.

BY C. A. NORRED.

Simplicity toward Christ is a spiritual fundamental. In 2 Cor. 11: 3 "simplicity" translates a word whose meaning is "singleness;" consequently, the phrase, "simplicity toward Christ," is equivalent to singleness or sincerity toward the Lord Jesus Christ. The attachment of the early Christians to the Lord was marked by a definite sincerity. Luke, in narrating the spread of the gospel around Jerusalem, states that the people of Lydda and Sharon "turned to the Lord." Barnabas admonished the disciples at Antioch to "cleave to the Lord." If our course of life is to be approved of Heaven, our minds must be single to the Lord. I know there are other things besides sincerity toward the Lord, but without sincerity they are meaningless. Sincerity toward the Lord Jesus Christ is essential: it is fundamental.

There is such a thing as having our sincerity beguiled by an increasing double-mindedness. There are some whose lives force you to conclude that while they want joys of heaven when they die, they want "the pleasures of sin" while they live in this world. Such a life has been denuded of sincerity toward Christ.

Then, we may be beguiled by a theory or a policy. Just as a penny held against the eye shuts out the light of the sun, a theory or a policy which is allowed to enthrone itself above the Christ eclipses the Sun of Righteousness in the soul. Everything must be subservient to the Lord of glory. As a singer may "stop at the words," we may stop at the end of a theory or a policy. When that occurs in our lives, we have been beguiled from sincerity toward Christ.

Again, there is "modern ostentation," which can so easily divide our hearts against our Lord and Savior. A certain material equipment and consideration of numerical increase are involved in the service of the Lord, but they must ever be made secondary. Eloquence may be used for God, but it must never, in professed service to God Almighty, be used for itself. There is such a thing as worshiping the temple rather than God. There is such a thing as number lust, and there is such a thing as leading souls to put their trust in the wisdom of men, rather than in the power of God. In these days of "drives" and "movements," one is often forced to wonder if the Lord of glory has not been abandoned for hollow pomp and pageantry that must perish with the using.

Sincerity to Christ is essential. Enshrine the Lord Jesus Christ in your heart and be true and loyal to him, knowing that he is living and knows the very thoughts and intents of your heart. Know you that without sincerity toward Christ all your proffered service to Heaven is vain. Allow nothing to beguile your mind from Jesus Christ. Serve him as though there were nothing else in time or eternity. It is Christ or nothing. "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ."

If thou turnest in toward thyself to live to thyself, to be happy in the workings of thine own will, to be rich in the sharpness and acuteness of thine own reason, thou choosest to be a weed, and canst only have such a life, spirit, and blessing from God as a thistle has from the sun.—William Law.

Where you find conceit, it is folly to look for much of anything else.

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training before the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book

—merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

The Christian Sun, Richmond, Va., "official organ of the Southern Christian Convention," under the heading, "Bible Reading for Ohio Schools," says:

Just before adjournment, the Legislature of Ohio passed the Buchanan bill, providing that ten verses of the Bible shall be read in the opening exercises in every classroom, and that the Ten Commandments shall be learned by every school child. The bill will now have to be signed by the Governor; and if he vetoes it, it will be dead until 1926.

It would not be a bad suggestion if somebody would introduce a suggestion that "the Bible shall be read" in the churches. And especially would it be a good thing if somebody would suggest to our popular "pastors" the great propriety of reading, in their churches, the various passages from Jesus and the apostles telling sinners what they must do to be saved.

Great interest is being manifested in the approaching trial of John T. Scopes, a high-school science teacher, of Rhea County, Tenn., on a charge of teaching evolution in a public school in violation of the Tennessee law. Concerning the indictment, promptly returned by a Rhea County grand jury, a Nashville daily says:

Judge John T. Raulston, presiding, charged the jury on the law of the theory of evolution as it shall be taught in the public schools of Tennessee, the first time such a charge has been delivered in a Tennessee court.

charge has been delivered in a Tennessee court.

The indictment as presented to the grand jury reads:
"That John Thomas Scopes, heretofore, on the 24th day of April, 1925, did unlawfully and willfully teach in the public schools of Rhea County, Tennessee, which said public schools are supported in part and in whole by the public school funds of the State, certain theory and theories that deny the story of the divine creation of man as taught in the Bible, and did teach instead thereof that man has descended from a lower order of animals, he, the said John Thomas Scopes, being at the time and prior thereto a teacher in the public schools of Rhea County, Tennessee, aforesaid, against the peace and dignity of the State."

The issue to be decided by the courts is whether or not the law forbidding the teaching of evolution in public schools is constitutional. While the Gospel Advocate is not in politics, we submit the opinion that the law is constitutional, as it is but an application of the will of the men who wrote the Constitution. The Constitution itself becomes unconstitutional and needs changing when it ceases to express the will of the majority of the taxpayers of the State.

The naked fact is that an overwhelming majority of the taxpayers of Tennessee do not want infidelity taught in the schools that they are taxed to support. A self-respecting teacher, who thinks it is smart to persist in teaching the unproven and absurd theory of Darwin that man sprang from the lower animals, knowing the sentiments of the men who are paying his salary, should be ashamed to accept it. Certainly, such teachers are free men and possess the privilege of doing like they please; but the manly and honest thing for them to do is to do like they please in schools of their own, not in schools belonging, by virtue of taxation, to other people.

Concerning "a doctored Bible," Len G. Broughton, in the Western Recorder, says:

It is an interesting document, this doctored Bible of our modern days, with its unproven philosophies. We may engage in all sorts of mental gymnastics around it, and we get great delight from the speculative exercise; but when its makers attempt to force us to lay aside our old Bible, with its Genesis account of man made in the image of God, and accept the built-down man of the metropolitan museum, made of bones of monkeys and gorillas ingeniously put together by so-called scientists, and pin our faith to it as being actual proof of our monkey origin—I say, when it comes to pass that a few so-called scientists and overambitious educators attempt to force upon a believing church such humbuggery for the purpose of destroying our Bible and making themselves appear smart, our great believing hosts of Southern Baptists will everywhere enter their internal, external, and eternal protest against its being proclaimed from their pulpits or schools, whether the schools be operated by church or State.

The Gospel Advocate wishes to suggest that "this doctored Bible of our modern days" covers more than the "Genesis account of man made in the image of God" or a denial of the virgin birth of our Savior. In the first place, the "doctoring" administered to the Bible by the religious world itself is responsible for the "doctoring" that it has received from infidels.

Is it any greater crime to deny the statement of Moses that "God created man in his own image" than it is to deny the statement of Peter that baptism is "for the remission of sins?" Is it not as fearful to deny one statement as it is to deny the other? When so-called scientists" attempt to force us to lay aside our old Bible," do they do any worse than do so-called preachers who "attempt to force us to lay aside" some of "our old Bible's" plainest statements? Many who cry, "Lord, Lord," deny "even the Master that bought them" and endeavor to undermine his divinity by repudiating what he commands.

The very verse that authorizes a man to be a Baptist is the same verse that authorizes him to "accept the built-down man of the metropolitan museum, made of bones of monkeys and gorillas ingeniously put together, by so-called scientists." To teach things that the Bible does not authorize is as much infidelity as to deny the truthfulness of any statement contained in the Bible. The religious world itself is responsible for the fearful spread of infidelity.

It seems that the present effort to do away with the Bible and to make infidelity universal should bring the religious world to their senses. It is as great infidelity to build up churches unknown to the Bible or to teach sinners that it is nonessential to "repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," as it is to teach the absurd guesses of Darwinism or to deny the virgin birth of our Lord.

The false theory of evolution should be gone over carefully and exposed and refuted in detail. And while this is being done, it should be remembered that the whole Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, rests upon Christ, and that the great cardinal, fundamental fact that attests the divinity of Christ is his resurrection from the dead. Jesus quoted from and indorsed the writings of Moses and the prophets. If Jesus rose from the dead, he is the Christ, the Son of God; and if Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, all that he indorsed is true. All these questions rest, in their final analysis, upon the divinity of Christ. The greatest proof of the divinity of Christ is his resurrection from the dead, and his resurrection from the dead is the best-proved fact in the annals of mankind. Instead of throwing a smoke screen over infidelity and wickedness, in both our schools and churches, let matters be brought to their true issue, and let facts be attested to by qualified witnesses and competent testimony.

THE SINFULNESS OF SIN.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

Sin is generally misunderstood. Men do not appreciate its terrible enormity. Certainly there is not such a realization of the guilt and deadliness of sin to-day as should be. Men would recoil from sin as from a deadly thing if they properly understood its enormity. They have yet to learn that sin is exceedingly sinful, notwithstanding the Bible reveals its origin, its workings, and its blighting results. God is not responsible for this ignorance. He has given its history. The history of man, for that matter, is in a very large sense the history of sin; for man has sinned from the beginning, and God, instead of covering his transgressions, has recorded them for our admonition. Repeatedly has he warned man not to sin. Moses, in his solemn farewell addresses, foretold the awful consequences of sin; but, notwithstanding, the Jews sank deeper and deeper in iniquity, until finally they were exiled and scattered among the nations. Jesus and his apostles taught much concerning sin, but we are loath to profit by this teaching.

The universality of sin deceives people as to its enormity. It is a common thing. One cannot condemn sin without in some degree condemning oneself, for no man can say he has not sinned, does not sin, nor has had to do with sin. "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." "If we say we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us." Sin has never been eradicated from the earth, and it is coextensive with the inhabited globe. It is a peculiar fact that the sin of the race, no less than the original sin of Adam, made necessary the crucifixion of Christ. "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." The very best of men fall into sin. "For in many things we all stumble." We cannot exclude ourselves from sinners, "for then must we needs go out of the world." Sin is a common thing, as evident as the works of the flesh. We have come to regard it as a necessary evil. Not so. It is an evil to be dealt with, to be rooted up.

Sin is said to blind. "And even if our gospel be veiled, it is veiled to them that perish; in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of the unbelieving, that the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God; should not dawn upon them." No mortal would reject the gospel of his salvation and judge himself unworthy of everlasting life if he were not blinded to his own best interests. But the lure of the primrose way-the vain, illusory pleasures of the worlddeceives millions. Jesus charged the Pharisees with spiritual blindness. "Ye blind guides," he said. "Thou blind Pharisee." The slayers of the Christ were so blinded that they did not recognize the enormity of their crime; hence the petition on the cross: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." The Laodiceans were self-deceived. Lukewarm, wretched, miserable, destitute, the church at Laodicea prided herself upon her self-sufficiency. Yet she was wretched, miserable, poor, blind, and naked, and knew it not, and stood in need of eyesalve to anoint her eyes that she might be able to see. Blind in their arrogance, deceived as to their real condition, and rather well pleased with themselves, here were worshipers who were oblivious to the fact that they were groping in the Stygian darkness of sin.

The secular press, by the wholesale publication of crime for sensational effect, is doing much to dull the finer moral sense of the reading public. The newspapers have ferreted out evil and spread it before us every morning to such an extent that we have become familiar with murders, embezzlements, robberies, prize fights, divorces, and other revolting forms of lawlessness. Tales of crime, written in highly sensational style and oftentimes grossly exaggerated, occupy the most prominent columns and appear in the most conspicuous headlines. On the front page is exhibited the brutal face of some prize fighter, or murderer, or robber, as though the features were those of a Lincoln or a Burroughs. Thus the insidious and sinister influence of the secular press tends to deceive people as to the enormity of sin.

Strange as it may seem, the pulpit may be held justly to blame for much of the misconception as to sin, Ministers, presuming to represent Jesus Christ and to speak his words faithfully, have not uniformly painted sin in its true colors, but frequently have resorted to easy teaching to tickle the ears of a pleasure-loving audience. Christ came into the world to "call sinners to repentance," but oftentimes evangelists go into communities seething in wickedness only to bandy words about the "social problems confronting the church." The great vices that nest and breed in our cities are sometimes said to need simply a better environment, improved sanitation, more fresh air and light, for their eradication. Let it be remembered that Jesus never directly mentioned a so-called social problem; but he did teach that sin originates in the heart, and that, therefore, there is individual responsibility for its existence. "For out of the heart come forth evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, railings." There may be outside promptings to sin, conditions which help to aggravate evil which alr ady exists; but it is vain to imagine that a change in external conditions will of itself bring about a change of the human heart. The sinner must realize personal responsibility for personal sin. No social arrangement, however ideal, can promise any effectual benefits unless there is brought home to us as individuals a profound sense of personal sin.

The pulpit also is shirking responsibility by refusing to warn against the worst sins. It is popular, on the other hand, to make much ado about the world growing better. They tell us with gusto that civilization is in the ascendancy and that righteousness is increasing with enrightenment. The testimony of the Spirit is that "evil men and impostors shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Present-day evils are not warned against as they should be. Dancing is on the increase, and in the most disgraceful and debauching forms. Sometimes Christians dance, with but feeble protest from pulpit or elders. The moving picture is a sinister evil that is habitually winked at. Money lovers and usurers occupy pews in fashionable churches where fawning pastors are careful not to tread upon their toes. Immodest dress, fornication, unscriptural divorce, card playing, parlor gambling, drunkenness, and many other crying evils go unwhipped of justice and unrebuked. Many preachers prefer to deal in generalities, to talk about God's boundless love and grace, the atoning blood, universal peace, disarmament, and social problems. They find few cases of downright wickedness.

Our material prosperity has tended to make us gross. It has so engrossed the energies of the people and so monopolized their time that they have ceased to meditate upon the teachings of the Bible. They do not take the pains to see themselves in the divine mirror. Our amazing prosperity has blinded our eyes to the worth of spiritual realities. Man's success in invention and discovery, in harnessing into service the forces of nature, his progress through education and philanthropy, has deceived man himself into believing that he is self-sufficient and rendered him insensible to his utter need of a Redeemer. Hence, this age is heedless to the gospel appeal. The word of God has lost nothing of its dynamic potentialities, but the story of the cross falls upon listless ears.

Be not deceived as to this age. It is a crooked and perverse generation, and God's people must save themselves from it. With all its enlightenment, it is exceedingly sinful. In the days of Noah there were "giants in the earth "-giants in stature and in sin. It is even so today. There are giants in selfishness, in covetousness; giants in immorality and profanity; giants in infidelity and irreverence. Often the greater the intellectual equipment and business acumen, the greater the sinner. There is a deal of tinsel and whitewash in evidence, and the inside of the cup wants cleansing. The pulpit is responsible in a large measure for the lamentable condition prevailing in refusing to call a spade a spade. Faithful preachers are doing what they can to stem the wave of sin which has swept over the country, by saving sinners, but they are battling against odds.

KNOWLEDGE THAT MAKES US GROW.

BY S. H. HALL.

Paul speaks of some "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." (2 Tim. 3: 7.) People get into this condition because they fail to learn and submit to the one truth or fact without which man can never grow—viz., that God's word is static, fixed, unchangeable, but that man is not so; that man needs to continually change and conform his life and character to the teaching of the everlasting and unchangeable word of God; that the heavens and the earth may change, be moved, and even pass away, but God's word will stand forever.

The sin of the ages has been and still is that man will continually try to change the truth to suit his own preconceived ideas and notions, when the only possible way to make progress is to know, of a certainty, that the truth is unchangeable, but that man needs to change daily into the likeness of that glorious character so clearly revealed to us in the Holy Scriptures. In Rom. 12: 1, 2 we are commanded to "be not conformed to this world," but to "be transformed by the renewing of" our minds, that we "may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." Paul speaks of those who "changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshiped and served the creature more than the Creator." (Rom. 1: 25.) actuality, God's truth cannot be changed; but, in practice and our way of living, we often change it. This is done when we try to twist and pervert it to suit our own carnal and selfish desires. When this we do, we are serving the creature and not the Creator. This always debases and degrades us. We should get the fact well established in our hearts, and daily be conscious of it, that man needs to change, not the truth. When we become willing to continually change to make our lives conform more and more to the truth, we are getting where life becomes easy. Man can be changed, and needs to be; but the truth, never. It is a hard life to live when we pursue that course in religion that demands that we be forever trying tc change the unchangeable, forever trying to change that which is right and should be forever left as it is. Such a course in life continually makes worse and worse, destroys joy and peace, and establishes discontent and unhappiness. But when we recognize God's truth as absolutely perfect and all-sufficient, and that we need to be changed, and that the only way to obtain it is to surrender to Christ and ever conform our lives to the teaching of God's word, we have found the only way for true growth, and the way of joy and peace, and the only sensible life to live.

THE DEBATE AT TWELFTH AVENUE AND CEDAR STREET.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

This discussion was between our Brother G. P. Bowser and one whom they called "Dr. Terry," a Baptist preacher. They were both colored, but rather unequally yoked together. Brother Bowser is a quiet, unassuming-man, yet he possesses a wonderful knowledge of the Scriptures. He is a natural logician, who knows when he has proved a thing as well as he knows when his opponent has not done so. "Dr." Terry is a blustering, overbearing speaker, who has the matter he uses all written out, some of which bears on the subject, but much only remotely. He has considerable native ability, which, if he had the truth, he could use quite effectively on an opponent. The first thing which he should do would be to throw away all of his preparations for debating and take his Bible and arrange some of its plain facts in a way to use them in the very language of the Scriptures; but, in order to do this, he would have to cut loose from the Baptist faith and cease trying to prove its inconsistencies.

I noticed that these colored debaters treated each other with great respect, and both the speakers and the congregation behaved themselves extremely well. Some white audiences and debaters could improve themselves in this respect by imitating these colored people.

Terry and his Baptist brethren showed too much anxiety over the contributions, which were constantly made prominent by them. Brother Bowser and his brethren were exceedingly nice in this respect, and I feel that he was very well supported for his labors.

Brother Bowser deserves a support for his loyalty to the word of God, and I predict for him great usefulness in the Master's service if he does not get mixed up too much in the foolish idea of a future millennial kingdom. He showed none of this in his debate, and it is to be hoped that he may never be entangled in this unapostolic interpretation of the prophets.

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 19.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

Chapter IV .- Continued.

FORMING JUDGMENTS OF RELIGIOUS TEACHERS.

(Verses 6-9.)

Verse 6. These things, brethren. The things gone before in chapters 1, 2, 3. I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos. Instead of using the names of the false teachers at Corinth, Paul uses his own name and that of Apollos to illustrate to them lessons he wishes to get before them. That ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, etc. "Learn not to go beyond the things which are written." (A. R. V.) The lesson Paul desired them to get was that they should not, in thinking of men, go beyond what is here written or scripture warrants. You should not exalt one preacher as your leader while seeking to pull others down. Not only should we not think of our teachers beyond what is warranted by the Scriptures, but in each act of worship and service as well. Paul renews his former argument, that neither the Corinthians nor any other Christians should so overvalue and magnify some ministers of the gospel as to undervalue and despise others, making men of eminency the heads of factions and parties; but that they esteem all ministers as agents of Christ, doing nothing of themselves, but assisted by the grace of God, to whom the success and entire praise of all their labors is due. This is to think of them according to what is written. (See chapter 3: 6-8.)

7. Who maketh thee to differ? Either in gifts or graces. This is an expression to show the Corinthians that no one had given them graces except God. Why dost thou glory, etc.? A rebuke for glorying over things given them.

These spiritual gifts were given you, and, therefore, you have no room for glorying. The ministers who have received the greatest gifts from God should be most humble themselves, and none should despise others who have received less. There is danger of ministers possessed with great abilities, eminent for gifts, being puffed up themselves, and people are too prone to glory in them. There is a temptation in good things to pride. The best of men may become overheated by what they have received, and Satan may take occasion from this to puff us up with pride; therefore, Paul uses this humbling and pride-modifying expression, "What hast thou that thou didst not receive?" There is nothing wherein one minister, or indeed one man, differeth or is distinguished from another but it is given him from God. It is God and not himself that maketh him to differ.

8. Now ye are full. The Corinthians abounded with spiritual gifts, and so did the apostles. But the apostles, by continual want and sufferings, were kept from selfcomplacency. The Corinthians suffered nothing; and havhaving plenty of all things, they were pleased with and applauded themselves. They were like children, who, being promoted in this world, disregard their poor parents who suffered in sacrificing to make their promotion possible. Ye are rich. A proverbial expression, denoting the most plentiful circumstances—a rebuke in irony for boasting over gifts given them. Reigned as kings without us. That is, the Corinthians thought themselves as important as if they were kings. I would to God ye did reign. The climactic rebuke which follows the irony. I would ye had attained the height of holiness, that we also might reign with you. This is the keenest of the rebuke. If they were exalted as highly as they thought they were, this would enable the apostles, who gave them the gifts, to reign with them. Their gifts were of a lower rank than those of the apostles; therefore, Paul, whom they considered of less importance than themselves, was the greater. The Corinthians were, in their own estimation, in their reigning state; but Paul, who was the greater in power, was only in his suffering period. This also shows that the Corinthians should not think of themselves more highly than they ought to think. You think yourselves so full and rich in all kinds of knowledge that you despise me, your spiritual father. I am looked upon as a dull fellow, not worthy to be named with your new admired teachers; you advance yourselves as much above me as a king is above his own subjects. I wish with all my heart your happiness and exaltation were real, then you would be high enough for me to share with you in it; but instead of this being real, you are only puffed up with notions and have too much conceit. Spiritual pride-that is, boasting of and glorying in the gifts, graces, or privileges which are conferred upon us—is a sin with which the evil one strongly tempts, and weak Christians are extremely prone to the practice and commission of.

9. God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death. In contrast with the Corinthians, the state of the apostles is given. Alluding to the Roman custom of bringing forth the criminals whom they gave a chance to escape with their lives in fighting with themselves or wild beasts, so that he who escaped was reserved for slaughter another day, so they might well be called persons appointed to death. By comparing the apostles to these devoted persons, Paul has given us a strong and affecting picture of the dangers which the apostles encountored in the course of their ministry-dangers which at length proved fatal to most of them. At "last," near the close of the games, gladiators doomed to die were led forth and shown to the spectators, then stripped of all armor and exposed naked to the attack of others. So the apostles were a spectacle unto the world, etc.-that is, doomed to reproach, suffering, and to death. By "the angels," to whom the apostles were made a spectacle, some think are meant the evil angels, who may be supposed to delight in the blood of the martyrs. Others think they are the good angels, to whom the faith and constancy of the apostles gave great joy. I am of the opinion that both were intended, for it must have animated the apostles in combating with their persecutors to think that they were disappointing the malice of evil spirits, while they were making the angels in heaven and good men on earth happy by the faith, patience, and fortitude which they were exerting in so notable a cause. They were set as upon a theater or stage, in public view, where heaven, earth, and hell are spectators. God, angels, and men wait to see the glorious triumphs of our faith and fortitude.

WESTERN MISSIONARY WORK.

Since last report the following contributions for the Western missionary work, to be conducted by Brother Srygley, have been received: B. F. Hart, Petersburg, Tenn., $5; Mrs. Stella Odom, Statesville, Tenn., $2; I. C. Furris, Henderson, N. C., $5; Mrs. Mary M. Hooper, Lyles, Tenn., $20; Lee Jones, West Point, Ga., $10; Cynthia J. Ralston and family, Estill Springs, Tenn., $3; Mrs. J. F. Winter, St. Petersburg, Fla., $5; church of Christ at Auburntown, Tenn., by J. T. Carter, treasurer, $12.50; John R. Williams, Hornbeak, Tenn., $3.

Jesus commanded: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." (Mark 16: 15.) 'Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." (Matt. 28: 19.) The early disciples were intensely missionary. "They therefore that were scattered abroad went about preaching the word." (Acts 8: 4.) It is a sad comment on the churches of Christ that there are great sections of these United States, to say nothing of the rest of the world, that have never heard the gospel. We think there are about a thousand churches in Tennessee alone, besides many congregations in Kentucky, Texas, Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and other States. The slow progress made by the churches in spreading the gospel will stand as a witness against them in that day, and the cry of the souls they could have saved, but for their lethargy and indifference, will ring in their ears through an endless eternity.

Brother Srygley made a trip to the West last year and did much good. He was partially supported by contributions from readers of the Gospel Advocate. The call comes for him to return, and he has decided to respond. These places cannot support a preacher, yet they are crying for the gospel. Any one desiring to assist in sustaining Brother Srygley in this work may communicate with James A. Allen, Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

MEETINGHOUSE AT QUEBECK, TENN.

The following contributions have been received to assist in building a much-needed church house at Quebeck, Tenn: From Mrs. W. A. Vandyke, $2; Mrs. Mattie Johnston, $1; Mrs. Richardson, $1; Highland Avenue Church, $25; Mrs. H. J. Canterbury, $2; Norman Davidson, $15; David Lipscomb, $5; Hiram Higgins, $2.50; Lawrence Avenue Church, $25; Sarah Ehresman, $2; and Mrs. J. Claude Martin, $100. Total, $180.50. Sister Martin, in her great desire to assist these brethren, also kindly donated a desirable lot upon which to build, well located, and with the restrictive clause in the deed. The brethren at Quebeck are not able to build without help, and the house would be a great advantage to the cause in that community. The Gospel Advocate is glad to assist Sister Martin in this worthy enterprise. Kindly address all communications to Mrs. J. Claude Martin, 2314 West End J. A. A. Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

MAKE HOME LIFE BEAUTIFUL.

Let me say to parents: Make the home life beautiful, without and within, and you will sow the seeds of gentleness, true kindness, honesty, and fidelity, in the hearts of your children, from which they will reap a harvest of happiness and virtue. The memory of the beautiful and happy home of childhood is the richest legacy any man can leave to his children. The heart will never forget its hallowed influences. It will be an evening enjoyment, to which the lapse of years will only add new sweetness. Such a home is a constant inspiration for good, and as constant a restraint from evil.

If by taste and culture we adorn our homes and grounds and add to their charms, our children will find the quiet pleasures of rural homes more attractive than the whirl of city life. Such attractions and enjoyments will invest home life, school life, the whole future of life, with new interests and with new dignity and joyousness, for life is just what we make it. We may by our blindness live in a world of darkness and gloom, or in a world full of sunlight and beauty and joy; for the world without only reflects the world within. Also, the tasteful improvement of grounds and home exerts a good influence, not only upon the inmates, but upon the community. An elegant dwelling, surrounded by sylvan attractions, is a contribution to the refinement, the good order, the taste and prosperity of every community, improving the public taste and ministering to every enjoyment.-Exchange.

COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have heen introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

MR. BRYAN ON SAUL'S CONVERSION. BY A. M'GARY,

When I wrote my third article in review of Mr. Bryan's learned and ornamented fallacies concerning the teachings of Christ and his apostles, I had no thought of offering anything more in review of him.

But since writing that article I have read him on the conversion of Saul of Tarsus, in which deliverance he pursued such a different course from that he followed in reference to the eunuch's conversion that I feel constrained to publicly draw the very marked contrast I see between his two courses.

In his discussion of the eunuch's conversion, he paid such close attention to all the revealed facts and details in the case that he almost lost his "orthodoxy," retaining it only "by the skin of his teeth," in saying that the eunuch "was baptized to symbolize the washing away of his sins." He might have said, with just as much show of sense, reason, revelation, or authority, that faith symbolizes hearing the word of God, and repentance symbolizes the will's determination, and confession symbolizes faith in Christ.

Sectarians, in contending that "baptism is merely a symbolizing ordinance," "merely" simpletonize their idea of baptism!

But when Mr. Bryan took up Saul's conversion, it seems that he determined to keep a most scrupulous grip on his "orthodoxy" and not wander a hairbreadth from it, and he didn't! For he made the "light that shined round about" Saul the whole thing-the ne plus ultra-in his conversion, and said that "thousands had, since that, experienced the same." Yet, if both his present and eternal welfare depended upon his doing so, he could not show a case like it, either before or since its occurrence in the case of Saul of Tarsus-not one case, from Adam to Bryan, both included. And I dare say there will never be another like it between now and the sounding of "the last trump," the claim of "orthodoxians" that it occurs in all of their conversions to the contrary notwithstanding. There is just one, and only one, thing that occurred in Saul's case that does not occur in "orthodox" conversions -"blindness." However, there are two differences between the blindness in Saul's case and that in "orthodox" conversions. Saul's blindness was physical, and theirs is spiritual; and Saul's lasted but three days, while theirs lasts forever, except in very rare cases.

The knowledge and wisdom of "orthodoxians" with reference to Saul's conversion is amazing, wonderfully so, the amazing wonderfulness of it being that they, so many centuries removed from the occurrence of Saul's conversion, should know so much more about it than Saul himself did at the time, or ever after the occurrence learned.

Had Saul, at the time the "light shined about him," possessed the knowledge and wisdom that our "orthodoxians" have (or imagine they have) concerning that "light," he would have been as happy as a lark in May during those three days that intervened between the coming of the "light" upon him and his reaching the place "in the city" where Christ had informed him it would be told him what he must do. Poor fellow! His lack of "orthodoxic" information concerning that "light's" being "the power of God unto his salvation" caused him to suffer "three days" of intense mental anguish and heart agony, instead of the thrilling and exquisite joy and inexpressible delight he would have experienced during that same time, had he only known the divine purpose of the "light" as "orthodoxians" know it (or imagine they do).

Moreover, had he possessed such information, it would have spared him of making that apostolic mistake of writing what he did, as follows: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith."

Pitiful Paul! Though he was a wise teacher, considering his "times of ignorance," according to the wisdom (or imagined wisdom) of "orthodoxians," he would not be competent to teach in the most backwoods "orthodox" church of this day and generation!

Why, Paul was so far behind the "orthodoxians" of to-day, in spiritual wisdom, as to not even know that baptism is "merely a symbolizing ordinance." It's easily perceptible in his apostolic writings, in which he frequently referred to baptism, that he believed, to the very close of his earthly career, that when Ananias said to him, "Be baptized, and wash away thy sins," that he meant exactly what he said, and that his sins were "washed away" in baptism instead of in the "light" that "shone round about him" three days before.

If Mr. Bryan had dealt with Saul's conversion as assiduously as he did with the eunuch's, and had kept track of Saul from the time the "light shone round about him" till he got "into the city" to learn what Christ had said to him would there be "told what he must do," as closely as he kept track of the eunuch from the time Philip "joined himself to the chariot," in obedience to the Spirit's instruction, till he (the eunuch) and Philip "came up out of the water" and "the eunuch went on his way rejoicing," he (Mr. Bryan) would have easily seen that Saul's miserableness ended right where the eunuch's joyfulness began—after obedience to Christ's command, "Be baptized."

And then, if Mr. Bryan could have mustered sufficient spiritual strength to have broken off the sectarian shackles that enchain him to the delusion that is called "orthodoxy," he would have soliloquized with himself about as follows: "It's no wonder, in the light'of Christ's saying, 'Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth [what you preach] and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not [what you preach] shall be damned,' that Saul's miserableness ended and the eunuch's joyfulness began when they were baptized."

Mr. Bryan, as closely as he followed the footsteps of the eunuch, saw no such "light" in that case as that which "shone round about Saul." But there's one notable thing he did see in keeping track of Philip and the eunuch. He saw the personal presence of the Spirit. But I fear he was so obsessed with "orthodoxy" that he did not duly note the very significant fact that the Spirit did not furction in the eunuch's conversion as "orthodoxy" so loudly asseverates that he (the Spirit) functions in "orthodox" conversions—did not operate by direct impact upon the mind or heart of the eunuch, but addressed him through the preacher, Philip.

COMMENDATION.

I have very carefully read "A Review of R. H. Boll," by R. L. Whiteside and C. R. Nichol, and I consider it a complete scriptural reply to the fallacies of R. H. Boll and his associates. These brethren have very carefully examined the prophecies and the interpretations placed upon them, and have shown that they are made to contradict the plain word of God. The compilation of the scriptures bearing upon the subject of the kingdom of Christ would be worth to any student far more than the price of the book; but with the argument presented and the scriptures, I consider the book of great value to any one who desires to learn the truth on the subject under consideration. The book should have a wide circulation, and all brethren who have been in any way misled by this Adventist-Russellite doctrine should be encouraged to read it. It can be ordered from Mrs. C. R. Nichol, Clifton, Texas. Price, fifty F. B. SRYGLEY. cents.

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN FREED-HARDEMAN COLLEGE.

BY L. L. BRIGANCE.

This well-known institution is nearing the close of its seventeenth session. It opened its doors in the fall of 1908, under the name of the National Teachers' Normal and Business College, with an enrollment of about four hundred and seventy-five pupils. It maintained a large attendance for several years until the State normals and county high schools, with their great popularity, began to cut down its patronage. Another thing that has adversely affected it was its failure to qualify for recognition by the State and the college associations.

In 1919 its name was changed to "Freed-Hardeman College," under which it has been operating ever since. Two years ago A. G. Freed and N. B. Hardeman withdrew from the faculty, and W. Claude Hall and C. P. Roland succeeded them. The school has been a success under their management. The enrollment has remained just about what it was before they took charge of it, and the work and discipline have been excellent.

Now some important changes are being made for the future. Because of an S. O. S. call from Cordell Christian College, the board of trustees has agreed to release Brother Hall that he may become president of that school. They regretted to give him up, but felt like it was their duty in order to save another Christian school. The agreement was mutual and pleasant, and Brother Hall leaves with the kindliest of feelings toward the school and every one connected therewith.

On the other hand, Freed-Hardeman College retains Brother Roland, than whom few better school men can be found. In addition, it acquires some men whose ability in their fields of labor stands second to none.

H. L. Calhoun, who was for many years identified with our "transgressive" brethren, having seen the "error of his way" and the futility of his course, has taken his stand with those of us who oppose all departures from the simple work and worship of the New Testament church. He resigned from all "digressive" churches the first of this year and has been preaching for "loyal" churches within his reach ever since. He begins his work with Freed-Hardeman College next session. Brother Calhoun is without doubt the greatest scholar and Bible teacher among us. He is an A.B. of Kentucky (now Transylvania) University, and a graduate of the College of the Rible under McGarvey and associates. He is a B.D. from Yale and an A.M. and a Ph.D from Harvard. He was first-honor man in Kentucky University, also the College of the Bible. He was one of the four selected to speak at Yale on commencement day; was president of the Semitic Club at Harvard, and also received the Williams Fellowship, the highest honor Harvard has to bestow. He and Sister Calhoun traveled in Europe, Egypt, and the Holy Land during the summer of 1913. He taught in the College of the Bible, Lexington, Ky., from 1904 to 1917, and was dean of this famous institution from 1912 to 1917. He was selected by J. W. McGarvey to succeed him; and if there is any man living to-day who is able and worthy to wear the mantle of McGarvey, it is H. L. Calhoun. Brother Calhoun will give his time to teaching the Bible, Hebrew, Greek, etc.

N. B. Hardeman is so well-known to the readers of the Gospel Advocate that it is not necessary to say much about him. He holds the degrees A.B. from West Tennessee Christian College and A.M. from Georgie Robertson Christian College. He was for twelve years superintendent of public instruction in Chester County, Tenn. He was one of the founders of Freed-Hardeman College, which bears his name, and has spent the greater part of his life in the schoolroom. He goes back into the school next session, and will devote himself to teaching the Bible and related subjects.

The High School of Freed-Hardeman College has been placed upon the accredited list of schools by the State Department of Education, and the college has been admitted into the Tennessee Association of Colleges as a fully accredited junior college entitled to all the rights, privileges, and consideration belonging thereto.

In addition to Grammar School, High School, and College, Freed-Hardeman College maintains the following departments: Bible, Instrumental Music, Voice, Vocal Music, Expression, Shorthand and Typewriting, Business, etc.

A strong faculty of teachers in every department is being engaged, and the school expects to do superior work in every line.

A SHOWER FOR THE CHRISTIAN HOME.

BY MRS. E. A. ELAM.

At the suggestion of Sister Lipscomb, the ladies of the congregation at David Lipscomb College gave a shower of staple groceries for the Christian Home, Nashville, Tenn.

Brother and Sister Robert S. King, always ready for every good work, did much toward creating an interest in this undertaking.

In the kindness of our matron, Miss Mary Delk, the reception hall of Avalon Home, David Lipscomb College, was thrown open to receive the packages.

Some members of the Charlotte Avenue congregation, having learned of this intention, voluntarily joined us in this affair by sending some liberal donations. This leads ut to suggest that every congregation in the city, or any one elsewhere, would be glad to follow this example and give such a shower once a quarter or once every six months.

The plans are that a larger and permanent Home will be ready for occupancy by October; then a linen shower, inclding everything needed in the Home from dishcloths to tablecloths, pillowcases to sheets, will be in order and appreciated. A little from the many will mean much to the Home. It seems that an opening day of the new Home would be a propitious time for this shower.

This Home appeals very strongly to me, as it no doubt does to every one, because of its offered help to two classes of the most dependent ones—children and the aged. What better work can be done than to assist working and struggling mothers with their children, or the other extreme of life in the decrepitude of age? We are all familiar with what the Bible says about caring for the widows and orphans; also, rising up before the hoary head and honoring the face of the old. All the world loves youth, and it is easy to interest people in children; but those who have grown old in the services of life and are no longer able to care for themselves no less need our tender care.

To relate how the shower was conveyed to the Home must not be overlooked. Sisters Hilldrop and Williams were ready with their cars to serve this purpose. There were about seventy-five pounds of sugar, about twenty-five jars of preserves, about fifty cans of fruit and vegetables, potatoes, meal, coffee, rice, money, etc.

When Sister Williams' car was called for, Brother Roy Williams replied that he would send a truck if needed. I tell this, so that in the event any one has a truck load for the Home he may call Brother Williams, and he will see that the things reach their destination.

O my soul, do thy part with all thy might! Little thou mayest be, insignificant and hidden, and yet God seeks thy praise. He listens for it, and all the music of his great universe is made richer and sweeter because thou givest him thanks. Bless the Lord, O my soul!—M. G. Pearce.

OUR MESSAGES

- A. B. Lipscomb preached at Scottsboro, Ala., last Lord's day.
- O. D. Bearden, of Atlanta, Ga., made us a very pleasant visit last week.
- H. C. Hale preached at Grant, in Smith County, Tenn., last Lord's day.
- Leslie G. Thomas preached at Waverly-Belmont, this city, last Lord's day.
- E. A. Elam preached at Union, in Sumner County, Tenn., last Lord's day.
- E. A. Elam changes his address to Lebanon, Tenn. Correspondents will kindly note.
- George W. Graves, Nashville, Tenn., May 27: "Last Sunday I preached at Ostella, Tenn."
- C. M. Pullias preached at Murfreesboro, Tenn., last Lord's day and at Lascassas in the afternoon.
- Martin English, Goodway, Ala., May 29: "Carl Barnette, of Greenville, Ala., began a meeting here last night."
- W. D. Bills and Arthur Slater are in a meeting at Community House, corner Quintona Road and Main Street, San Antonio, Texas.
- S. H. Hall, Birmingham, Ala., May 26: "The meeting goes well in North Birmingham, with large crowds and one confession last night."
- J. L. Hines preached at Haldeman Avenue, Louisville, Ky., last Lord's day. Brother Hines began a meeting at Carlisle, Ky., on June 2.
- Oscar Parham changes his address from Pinewood, Tenn., to Franklin, Tenn., Route 3. Brother Parham is one of our best preachers.
- E. P. Hebert, Fountain Head, Tenn., May 28: "E. P. Watson, of Shelbyville, Tenn., will begin a meeting at Jones Chapel on the second Lord's day in June."
- H. F. Pendergrass, who changes his address to 308 St. Charles Street, Birmingham, Ala., has been preaching for the West End Church since the first Lord's day in May.
- Jeff Morris gave away seven yearly subscriptions to the Gospel Advocate and several Bibles last year. A most excellent way to do real missionary work. "Go, and do thou likewise."
- J. Fairs Nichols, Murray, Ky., May 25: "There was one restoration on Saturday night at Friendship. The Lord's-day morning services were splendid. I love the Gospel Advocate."
- W. F. Lemmons preached for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. Brother Lemmons will soon leave for Montana to engage in missionary work.
- C. H. Williams, Morrison, Tenn., May 25: "S. C. Garner, of the County Line Bible School, Bakersfield, Mo., preached three able discourses for the church of Christ at Morrison on May 23, 24."
- A. S. Reynolds, Wellington, Texas, May 26: "Any church of brethren wanting a meeting may write me at Dothan, Ala. I will begin a meeting at Esto, Fla., on the third Lord's day in July."
- F. O. Howell, Prattville, Ala., May 25: "I began a protracted meeting at this place yesterday. There were two confessions for baptism at the first service. On the first Sunday in July I will begin a meeting in Atlanta, Texas."
- W. S. Long, Jr., Detroit, Mich., May 25: "There were two additions at Vinewood at the evening services yesterday—one by confession and baptism and one from the United Brethren who had been baptized for the remission of sins."
- C. W. DeArmond, Drakesboro, Ky., May 28: "I closed a good meeting at Sugar Grove, Ky., recently, with nine baptisms. Brother Forgy preached here five nights recently and baptized four persons. Brother Hyde, of Drakesboro, is in a meeting at Hickory Stand."

- Gardner S. Hall, 1505 Marvin Hill, Anniston, Ala., May 25: "I recently held two interesting meetings, one at Peaceburg, near Alexandria, Ala., and one here at Anniston, which resulted in three and four additions, respectively."
- James A. Allen and Everett Woodroof closed a tent meeting on the South Campus, corner of Lindsley Avenue and University Street, last Sunday night, with twenty baptisms, three restorations, and two from the Baptists who claimed scriptural baptism.
- F. B. Srygley is in a splendid meeting with the St. Elmo congregation, Chattanooga, Tenn. A telegram, dated Monday, June 1, advises that there have been four confessions to date and that the meeting will continue another week. Brother Srygley is doing some of his best preaching.
- W. M. Mann, Clinton, Okla., May 25: "We seem to be holding our own here since the meeting. Good crowds out at all the services yesterday. Our young people's Bible class is doing a fine work. On account of conflicting dates, I can hold a meeting in June and one in August. Who wants the time?"
- W. M. Oakley, Cookeville, Tenn., May 25: "The tent meeting in West Cookeville, which has been in progress for three weeks, with preaching by Will J. Cullum, closed last Friday night, with three baptized and one restored. I was at Bethlehem, in the Eighth District, yesterday, and preached at 11 A.M. and 7:30 P.M.; and at Twin Oaks at 3 P.M., which resulted in six restorations. Our work in Cookeville and Putnam County moves gloriously on."
- J. R. Hastings, Blytheville, Ark., sends three new subscribers to the Gospel Advocate, and says: "I want to do a little missionar" work, and I do not think that I could do any better work than to place the Gospel Advocate in new homes, because its editors are 'not ashamed to declare the whole counsel of God.' 'Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.' (1 Cor. 15: 58.)"
- Wilson Herron, Nashville, Tenn., May 25: "After a delay of several months, the Rains Avenue work is well under way. After much delay we secured a lot on the corner of Rains and Moore Avenues for five hundred dollars, to be paid one-half cash and the balance in monthly notes of twenty dollars each. We have the restrictive clause in the deed. We are erecting a small but comfortable house, and have the framing and siding up, and are trying to get the roof on by next Lord's day. Contributions received to date: Waverly-Belmont Church, $50; Jones Avenue Church, $10. For this we are very thankful, and we hope that others may desire fellowship in this work. Send contributions to W. Herron, 409 McIver Street, Woodbine Station, or to Everett Woodroof, 136 Green Street, Nashville, Tenn."
- J. G. Allen, 1412 Baltimore Street, Muskogee, Okla., May 25: "C Street Church, this city, has recently enjoyed two splendid spiritual treats. T. W. Croom, of Indianola, Okla., was with us last Thursday night, and preached a fine sermon; then on Friday night Jeff D. Morgan, of Miami, Okla., arrived in town, and preached for us on Saturday night and at both services on Sunday; so we all are in fine spirits, and feel that a bright future awaits us. C. McClung, of Weatherford, Texas, is to hold our fall meeting, and the 'Bishop' of Franklin (Tenn.) is to be with us in the spring. Let any gospel preacher that has cause to stop over in Muskogee call telephone 3219-J, and a free bed and meals will be furnished while here. Now, be it understood that this invitation does not include hobbyriders, such as anti-Bible schools and anti-Sunday schools, etc.,' but only sound, gospel preachers."
- c. A. Taylor, Louisville, Ky., May 26: "We have just closed the best meeting the Bardstown Road church of Christ, Louisville, has ever had. I. A. Douthitt did the preaching, and we certainly were delighted with his clear, forceful, but kindly, presentation of Bible truths. Two or three evenings were largely devoted to lectures on his trip to Palestine, and these proved to be not only extremely interesting and instructive, but attracted and pleased many nonmembers who returned to hear the gospel sermons. M. C. Kurfees and John T. Smithson, as well as many of the members of the Haldeman Avenue and F. Street congregations, stood nobly by us in the meeting. R. A. Craig, of Shelbyville, Ky., was with us one night. Six were baptized, one of them a man of mature years and head of a family. His wife came forward with him and asked to be identified with us. She had been worshiping with the Broadway Christian Church."

J. A. Cullum, Altus, Okla., May 26: "The work here is growing."

W. M. Oakley preached at Pilcher Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

Ira Lee Sanders, Wellington, Texas, May 28: "I am now in a mission meeting at Binger, Okla."

J. C. Mosley, Moore, S. C., May 16: "The work here is moving on with good interest and good crowds."

We are in touch with an able and talented preacher who would consider a change of location. Address the Gospel Advocate office.

H. R. Hogg and S. T. Garner, Camden, Ark., May 30: "Brooks Stell closed a week's meeting on May 24, with three baptisms."

John W. Hedge, Kosse, Texas, May 26: "I am now in the midst of a fine mission meeting at Bearden, Ark. I go next to McGehee, Ark."

J. S. Daugherty, Rockdale, Texas, May 25: "Two large hearings at Oakwood yesterday, with a husband and wife restored to their 'first love' at the evening hour."

Gus Nichols, Cordova, Ala., May 30: "I recently baptized a fine young man here. My time is all taken till late in the fall. I begin at Millport, Ala., on June 24."

- J. E. Wainwright, Corpus Christi, Texas, May 13: "Twenty-three baptisms and one from the 'digressives' at Runge, Texas. Homer Ferguson, of Kingsville, led the singing."
- J. B. Nelson, Dallas, Texas, May 25: "On May 22 N. B. Hardeman closed a meeting with the Pearl and Bryan Streets Church, in Dallas, with eight baptisms and five by restoration and relation."
- J. V. Armstrong Traylor, Louisville, Ky., May 26: "The meeting in which I was engaged at Oak Grove, Ky., closed last Sunday night, with five additions—three baptisms and two from the Christian Church."

Will W. Slater, Irving, Texas, May 25: "I will preach at Holdenville to-night, and will begin a week's song drill for the church at Maud to-morrow night, then on to Drumright for a two-weeks' meeting."

Charles C. Shockney will begin a series of meetings at the New Shops church of Christ, corner of Twenty-seventh and Torbett Avenues, this city, on the second Lord's day in June. All are urged to attend these meetings.

Sister Gertrude Palmore, Glasgow, Ky., May 28: "M. L. Moore closed an interesting meeting at this place on May 21, with eight baptisms. Success to the Gospel Advocate. May the good seed sown bring in a bountiful harvest."

D. K. Estes, G. D. Lagrone, and W. A. Taylor, elders of the church of Christ at Tulsa, Okla., May 25: "Will W. Slater, of Irving, Texas, closed a meeting for us, with fifteen baptisms and ten identified with the congregation otherwise."

Ira Wommack, Sulphur, Okla., May 25: "I closed a good one-week's meeting at Elmore City, Okla., with three preaching services yesterday. I baptized five people. We had dinner on the ground. I will begin a meeting at Wirt to-morrow."

Ben West, Sinton, Texas, May 28: "During June home forces will conduct a revival. We are baptizing more people than ever before. Last Lord's day I preached the baccalaureate sermon for the Sinton high school, and on May 17 at the Sodville high school."

E. E. Shoulders, 1324 St. Nicholas Avenue, New York City, N. Y., May 28: "The New York City church of Christ holds services each Lord's-day morning at 226 West Fifty-eighth Street. Bible study and worship at ten and eleven o'clock, respectively. Let's get more laborers into this field."

W. D. Black, Sweetwater, Texas, May 27: "My brother, C. H. Black, of Menard, Texas, has sold his crop and is ready to answer calls for meetings or Sunday appointments. If you need a man to help you in a meeting, either in song or preaching the word, call him. Address C. H. Black, Menard, Texas, Box 38, for the present."

Price Billingsley, Stamford, Texas, May 28: "The Heights meeting in Houston, Texas, is history at last, closing last Lord's-day night with a record attendance and a goodly number added to the congregation by primary obedience. We get away to a good start in the Stamford tent meeting. From here I go to Tulia, Texas."

Men worthy to serve God for gain are willing to serve the devil for nothing.

More than one man who can see the mistakes of Moses is stone blind to his own.

Many a man who goes to church with a long face sells goods with a measure that is too short.

- E. A. Elam has been requested by the Committee of Arrangements to take part in the program at the unveiling of the statue of the late Senator Edward W. Carmack on the Capitol grounds, June 6. Brother Elam preached the funeral of Senator Carmack at the time of his burial at Columbia, Tenn., and for many years was one of his most intimate personal friends.
- C. Petty, Pineapple, Ala., May 24: "I have meetings for nearly all the summer. I lack only two to fill all the time I will be able to give, and I would like for them to be in North Alabama. If some of the places in North Alabama see this and will write me, I would like to be with them in meetings as in the long ago. Best wishes to the Gospel Advocate and its writers."

Charles L. Talley, Hopkinsville, Ky., May 29: "G. A. Dunn, Sr., of Dallas, Texas, and Tommie A. Nicks, of Nashville, Tenn., will begin a two-weeks' meeting here with the Seventh Street church of Christ on Lord's day, June 7. Owing to the fact that I failed to secure a tent in which to do some mission work, I will have time to preach in two meetings at any time from now until September 1."

Jesse F. Love, Fort Myers, Fla., May 26: "I am at Fort Myers, Fla., waiting for my new tent to come that Brother White is making for me, so I can hold a meeting here. There are only five members that I have been able to find. If any reader of the Gospel Advocate knows of any members of the church of Christ in or near Fort Myers, write me, and I will hunt them up. If you have friends here, write me, and I will visit and try to interest them in the word of God."

Joe A. Mason, Estill Springs, Tenn., June 1: "J. M. Gainer will begin a meeting at the church of Christ at this place, beginning on Sunday, June 28, at 11 A.M. Services each evening at 7:45 o'clock. J. Elam Derryberry will be in charge of the singing. All are invited to be with us." Any of the brethren who may visit Estill Springs during the meeting will find Brother Mason to be a most excellent host and a most diligent worker in the vineyard of the Lord.

- C. Petty, Pineapple, Ala., to F. W. Smith: "While the Gospel Advocate writers all stand foursquare on all things the Bible says, which makes it such a great paper, yet some things impress us more than others. In your article on religious journalism you said, 'We must be true to the truth.' I want to grasp your hand on that saying, for, as I see it, that is our only hope. I have been knowing you for forty years, and the nearer you get to your final home, the truer you are. May the Lord bless you, my brother."
- S. Houston Proffitt, Chattanooga, Tenn., May 25: "Yesterday was a great day with the congregation at Sale Creek. It was home-coming day. Fifteen years ago (the first Sunday in May) the congregation first occupied its new house of worship, which had been built with many sacrifices by the members of the church and also with some outside help. Much good has been accomplished by this congregation. I spoke to the church in both the forenoon and afternoon, and lunch was served on the ground."
- W. Halliday Trice, San Francisco, Cal., May 23: "Should any of the brethren visit this State this season, they will find a hearty welcome at our place of worship. We meet in Richmond Hall, Fourth Avenue and Clement Street. The Berkeley brethren meet in Stiles Hall, Dana and Alston Way, near the University. The work is moving along nicely in San Francisco and Berkeley. I am still preaching for the Berkeley brethren in the evening, but they are expecting a brother to locate with them soon. My address is 1281 Sixth Avenue."

Aruna Clark, Chattanooga, Tenn., May 25: "There seems to be fine interest and good work among the Chattanooga congregations at this time. F. B. Srygley recently closed a good meeting at Ridgedale and is now doing some fine preaching at St. Elmo. Brother Woodroof is in a meeting at Mount Pleasant. Brother Ethridge is at Englewood. W. C. Phillips has returned to evangelistic work in East Tennessee and is at this time in a meeting at Copperhill. In the absence of Brother Hoover from the city, I spoke at Central on May 17, morning and night, and yesterday I returned to the Cowart Street congregation for regular work. Brother Largen is at Ooltewah."

CONSTRUCTIVE WORK. No. 3.

BY E. A. ELAM.

Reference to "the whole armor of God" (Eph. 6) shows again where Satan's strongholds are. They are "the wiles of the devil," "the principalities," "the powers," "the world rulers of this darkness," "the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places." Against all these, Christians, including preachers, must wrestle. In order to "be strong in the Lord, and in the strength of his might;" in order to stand against all these wiles and powers, and to quench all these fiery darts; and in order, having done all, to stand, it is necessary to take the whole armor of God.

The flesh, Satan's stronghold again, with all of its works, as described in Gal. 5: 16-21, must be stormed, captured, and destroyed. "And they that are of Christ Jesus have crucified the flesh with the passions and the lusts thereof."

This is the great and good fight which Paul made, for he says: "So fight I, as not beating the air: but I buffet my body, and bring it into bondage: lest by any means, after that I have preached to others, I myself should be rejected." This is the fight which, at the end of his life, Paul said he had made.

Paul told Timothy to "fight the good fight of the faith." Timothy could do this only by being free from the love of money, fleeing youthful lusts, and following after "righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience [steadfastness], meekness."

Some preachers are called "fighters," and some boast that they are "fighters." All depends upon what they mean by being "fighters." All depends upon what they fight, in whose armor they fight, in what spirit they fight, and for what purpose and for whose glory they fight. All Christians are soldiers and must fight this "good fight of the faith "-must fight their own flesh with all of its appetites, lusts and passions, and the devil with all his wiles and powers.

Preachers, as other men, may yield to temptation, be overtaken in some trespass, repent, be forgiven, bring forth fruit worthy of repentance, "recover themselves out of the snare of the devil," and accomplish good; but it is impossible to see how preachers who make "provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof," who frequently repeat their immoral acts, leave unpaid debts in various communities, and fail otherwise to meet their obligations, can have the effrontery to stand before an audience and claim to be preachers of righteousness and true holiness-that is, the gospel of Christ. This is not contending earnestly for "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints," but is pharisaical, a farce or burlesque. Such preachers seem to be fond of getting their names in all available places of public print and as often as possible. Their sermons are always "splendid," audiences "splendid," services "splendid," interest "great," and all the converts they make are "noble" and "precious" souls! This is all right when it is all right, and when the preacher is all right; but "splendid" and "great," "noble" and "precious," "grand" and "glorious" cannot apply to every move such preachers make, every sermon they preach, or every service they hold. There is joy in heaven among the angels overy every sinner who repents-poor or rich, Jew or Gentile, red or yellow, black or white-for God is no respecter of persons.

Paul was the chief of sinners, repented, obeyed God in faith, and was saved. But while he was the chief of sinners, he was not pretending to be a preacher of the gospel; he was doing all in his power to destroy it. When he changed, he changed. He faced about; he turned around in the middle of the road; he ceased to do evil and learned to do well; he gave up then and there his position of standing and honor among the Pharisees and with the supreme court of the Jews, all sources of income, and, without counting the cost, blind and penniless, he began at once to serve the Lord-counting all that he had attained heretofore as loss and as refuse that he might gain Christ and finally be saved in heaven. He conferred not with flesh and blood, but began immediately to preach zealously Christ, whom he had so zealously persecuted.

Every preacher and every one else who sees his mistakes, repents of his wrongs, seeks to repair injuries he has done others, and strives, Paul-like, zealously to obey God, should be congratulated and encouraged, and will be, by every true child of God.

Paul told the Corinthians to be "in readiness to avenge all disobedience, when your obedience shall be made full." Note, they could not avenge disobedience in others before they had made full their own obedience. Jesus did, and then taught. Paul exhorted all to follow him in as much as he followed Christ. He commanded Titus and Timothy to set good examples in all honesty, uprightness, purity, faithfulness, and godliness. All elders are commanded to be "ensamples to the flock." Christians are the light of the world.

Churches of Christ throughout the world should arise in the strength of God and demand that all preachers, all elders, and all other teachers in the church shall be honest, upright, clean, righteous, and godly men. The time has come for churches to make this demand of preachers, elders, and other teachers. If preachers, elders, and other teachers have so lost their sense of responsibility to God and men to lead such pure and godly lives as the Bible requires, the churches should demand it of them; they should cease to preach and teach.

The downfall of both the kingdom of Israel and the kingdom of Judah was hastened by the covetousness, greed, drunkenness, licentiousness, and false teaching of prophets and priests. It would be most profitable to read the history of the downfall of these two kingdoms with this in view.

What the New Testament now says in regard to corrupt and false teachers and the solemn warnings it gives against such seem to make no impression upon many congregations. Such teaching and warnings seem not to be regarded as the word of God at all.

AN OPEN-MEMBERSHIP CHURCH.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

In the Christian Standard of recent date one Orrin Still gives us his experience with an open-membership church for which he preached some time; and if his experience is worth anything, the open-membership church is a failure even as a worldly institution. Brother Still first gives us something of the history of the church in the following words:

The congregation of which I write was organized about feurteen years ago by a band of faithful disciples. Just so have many of our best congregations started. Soon after the organization this congregation became a mission of one of the large, city missionary societies. This city missionary society, if not in form, was, however, in practice, an auxiliary of the State Missionary Society, which was in turn loyal to the United Christian Missionary Society. The city missionary society sent preachers to this little congregation.

It will be noted that this congregation was organized "by a band of faithful disciples." Just so. That reminds me very much of some things that have happened right here in Nashville. Many years ago "a band of faithful disciples" organized a church on Woodland Street, in East Nashville. There was no society here then, and things moved very peaceably and quietly for a few years till a few outsiders from north of us came down with their missionary society and took possession of the church and the house.

It seems that the congregation of which Brother Still writes also fell into the hands of one of the city missionary societies. This city missionary society was "an auxiliary of the State Missionary Society, which was in turn loyal to the United Christian Missionary Society." This is enough, Brother Still. Right here at the source of the trouble you should begin and keep up the fight. The city missionary society was the beginning of all the trouble. The Standard is now waging a terrible warfare against the "United Christian Missionary Society," but it does not oppose all organizations for missionary work outside of the local church. It has been but a short time since the Standard boasted that it favored organization, but opposed the abuse of it. According to Brother Still's statement, could the big society to which the Standard objects ever have got hold of that little church had it not been for the two little ones between it and the church? The Standard seems to want to kill the old mother and raise all the little ones. Why not level your gun on the whole brood of vipers? One is as bad as the other, if not worse. The Standard will defend the little ones and put up a weak fight against the big society. It was the city society that sent the preachers to this church, and it was, therefore, more responsible for the departure of the church from the apostolic way than the big one.

The little church of which Brother Still writes awoke to the situation too late. Hear him on this point:

I was the first minister that the church ever called. The congregation had differed with the society about the power of the society to dictate in its affairs, and, a few months before I was called as minister, it had severed connection with the missionary society.

If the Standard and other leaders had done their duty, this little church might never have had such a connection to sever: I am certain it never would have had such a connection had it followed the teaching of Christ and the apostles. But the Standard is not opposed to outside organization, provided it is of the right kind. There is no right kind. A Christian had as well try to defend any other sin, provided it is the right kind, as though there could be the right kind of wrong. Listen to the brother's wail still further:

Their action came too late to save the church from reaping the fruits of being the mission of a radical, destructively critical missionary society. The last minister sent by, and partly supported by, this missionary society received into the congregation thirty-five persons who had never been immersed. I think he called them "associate members" at first. Some of the unimmersed claimed associate membership, while some insisted that they had been told from the first that they were full members of the church. The talk of associate membership was just a plan to confuse the congregation at large as to the nature of the issue before them. No distinction was evident on the church roll or in the minds of most of the members. In the pulpit (according to the testimony of both the immersed and the unimmersed in the congregation) the missionary preacher made such statements as the following: "Certainly Jesus was immersed, but Jesus was also circumcised; and I have as much authority to insist that you be circumcised as to insist that you be immersed." "Baptism is only a beautiful picture to impress the mind of the young."

It can be seen from the above that the brother's opposition to missionary societies is only to the "radical, destructively critical" kind. The brother does not seem to object to the society because it is unscriptural, but because it was of the wild kind. The gentle ones are wrong, brethren; but if they were not, any of them are liable to go wild at any time. When people without a human creed leave the Bible, they can get wild faster and more of it than any people in the world. It makes no difference whether these immersed ones were called "associate members" or "members," they were wrong and should have been taught better. This reminds me of Brother Cowden's distinction without a difference. Brother Cowden wants to take them in, not as members, but as "workers and worshipers," and it would not be five years till Cowden himself could not tell one from the other. Better stand by the Book, brethren, and take care of yourselves, instead of trying to make apology for those who have never obeyed the gospel. The trouble with that missionary preacher the brother describes is that he did not believe the Bible. The fact that so many of the Standard's missionary brethren do not believe the Bible would cause me to investigate very carefully the theory before accepting it. I confess I do not like the company. The Bible says: "Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers."

It seems that this open-membership business had been kept a secret from even the new preacher and that he found out the conditions by accident after he had been with the church for some time. Hear him on this point:

One evening, as we were being entertained in the home of one of the church families, the good lady of the home remarked that she and her family were not regular members of the church. She said: "We are associate members." We inquired what this meant, and were told that associate members of the church were members who had never been baptized. We asked if there were others in the church who had not been immersed, and learned that the church treasurer and his wife were German Lutherans, while others among the deacons were United Brethren, and one was a Catholic baptized in infancy. No one knew the exact number of these unimmersed. There were about thirty-five. One of these had been received without any form of baptism whatever.

If Brother Cowden could get his theory to working, he would have about the same results under a slight difference in name. Under Brother Cowden's theory some would have to say: "We are not members of the church at all unless the Lord has added us secretly; we are only enrolled as 'workers and worshipers.'" Brother Cowden himself could not tell whether they were members, as he says the Lord might add some who have never been baptized, but the Lord has not authorized him to say so positively. He can "work and worship" with them whether they are in the church or not. Brother Cowden could not tell that German Lutheran and his wife that they have never been baptized into Christ, because he says the Lord may have added them some other way. And that Catholic whom the brother says was "baptized in infancy," but who was only sprinkled in infancy, Brother Cowden would enroll as a "worker and worshiper." I wonder what kind of work as a teacher of Christianity he could do for Brother Cowden and his friends. He certainly could not teach people to be buried with Christ in baptism, as his actions would contradict his words. No, beloved, there is no way to be right except to take the plain words of the Bible and stand by them. It is almost sure that John B. Cowden and J. J. Walker stand hand in hand on this question of open membership for "workers and worshipers," and I am wondering if all these brethren in Nashville and Tennessee are willing to indorse them as leaders in their Zion. Surely, brethren, you cannot afford to do this. "Come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord." There is no safe way but the strait and narrow way.

As this church kept the fact a secret from even the new preacher, I am wondering if there is not more of this open membership among these erring churches than has ever come to light. Sometimes preachers are a little sly in their unscriptural work and hide things from those who have not yet become willing to go all the gaits. You had better watch them, brethren, when they get too liberal with the word of God and the promises of God. In this they are liberal with that which does not belong to them, and any one who will do such a thing will bear watching. Come back, brethren, to the old paths, and let us walk therein together. Some of us are still standing right where you left us. We are still trying to preach the ancient gospel and are offering people membership in the body of Christ on the terms laid down in the New Testament. We know this is safe, and nothing else can be safe.

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

I have not heretofore tried to describe the Capitol, realizing the impossibility of conveying, by any description I can give, a correct idea of that magnificent structure—its majestic proportions, the dignity and grace of its design, and the beauty of its ornamentation, without and within. It ranks as one of the most impressive buildings in the world. Situated on Capitol Hill, ninety-seven feet above the level of the Potomac, it overlooks much of the city, and is itself a conspicuous feature of the landscape.

The Capitol grounds, including the lawns about the Senate and House office buildings, comprise an area of about sixty acres. Within this area are not less than eight hundred trees—oaks, elms, magnolias, sycamores, and many rarer species; and many of them have attained full growth. Fine specimens of shrubbery flank the terrace walls and adorn the grounds, abelia, boxwood, evergreen, privet yew, crape myrtle, and other shrubs being abundantly planted; and these trees and plants make of the Capitol grounds a gem of landscape gardening and form a wonderful setting for the building in the midst of it.

There is perhaps no public building in_the world that exceeds the Capitol at Washington in ease of accessibility and approach by traffic or by pedestrians. There are fifteen points of entrance to the grounds for vehicles and twenty-six entrances by sidewalks. Included in the area of the grounds are about ten acres of concrete sidewalks and more than eight acres of asphalt driveways—a total of nearly nineteen acres. Several street-car lines pass near it, making it easy to visit the Capitol, though you may not own an automobile, as, of course, we do not.

The corner stone of the Capitol building was laid by George Washington, then President of the United States, September 18, 1793. The wings of the central building were completed in 1811, but were partially destroyed by fire set by the British in 1814. The entire central building was completed in 1827. The building was then almost square, but extensions to the north and south were begun in 1851, President Fillmore laying the corner stone, and in 1859 these extensions were occupied by the Senate and the House of Representatives, respectively. The entire length of the building now is seven hundred and fifty-one feet and four inches, its width is three hundred and fifty feet, and its area is three and a half acres. Its most impressive feature is the great dome rising from the center three hundred and seven feet above the esplanade at the eastern entrance and terminating in a lantern-shaped peak, this being surmounted by a bronze figure of Armed Liberty nineteen feet high. This great white building of marble and Virginia sandstone, crowned with its lofty dome, and extending far to the north and the south, amid its setting of tall trees, shrubs, and flowers, is an impressive sight; and at night, when the dome is brilliantly lighted, it looks, indeed, like "a city set on a hill."

The principal front of the building is on the east side, it being expected, when the foundations of the Capitol were laid, that the growth of the city would be in that direction. But the city has grown westwardly, and the Capitol is usually reached from the western entrance. Going east on Pennsylvania Avenue—the great thoroughfare of Washington familiarly referred to as "th'avenoo" -from the White House and the Treasury Building, the great dome of the Capitol is in plain view all the way, rising above the tall trees that surround it. Pennsylvania Avenue halts at the Peace Monument, in front of the west entrance to the Capitol grounds, to resume its course at the diagnal—the southeastern—portions of the grounds. This approach to the building is up gradually rising lawns and flights of steps leading to elevated terraces or esplanades, and then to an open court which extends the full length of the western front and around the north and south ends of the building. Evergreen shrubbery flanks the terrace walls, and, when the season permits, palms and flowers beautify the terraces and the broad open court around the building, and a great fountain in the center of the lower terrace adds to the beauty of the western approach. From the open court the Washington Monument is in plain view, and in winter the Lincoln Memorial, the windings of the Potomac, and much of the city can also be seen, but in leaf-time that view is somewhat restricted. The west door gives access to flights of steps that lead to the rotunda of the building.

On the eastern side, which is more easily accessible by either street car or automobile, three broad flights of marble steps lead to the porticoes in front of the central building and to the two extensions. The central flight of steps leads to a portico one hundred and sixty feet long, supported by Corinthian columns. A group of statuary to the south of the steps symbolizes the discovery of America-Columbus in armor copied from a suit of armor actually worn by Columbus and preserved in Genoa, with an Indian girl kneeling at his feet. To the north of the steps is a similar colossal group depicting a pioneer in desperate conflict with an Indian warrior, with his wife and child crouching at his feet. This eastern front is the scene of Presidential inaugurations. In a grandstand temporarily built over the steps the incoming President takes the oath of office, surrounded by high officials, and in view of tens of thousands of spectators gathered on the esplanade in front.

From this portico—through the famous Rogers bronze doors, each panel of which represents a scene in the life of Columbus—entrance is had into the rotunda, a great circular room ninety-seven feet in diameter, immediately below the dome that crowns the Capitol. Looking up from the rotunda the view is unobstructed to the top of the dome, one hundred and eighty feet above. The panels in the walls of the rotunda are ornamented by eight oil paintings, by American artists, some of them very familiar to us by having been reproduced upon our paper currency and Columbian postage stamps. The four early historical paintings—the Landing of Columbus, the Discovery of the Mississippi, the Embarking of the Pilgrims, the Baptism of Pocahontas—are to some extent imaginative; but the Revolutionary pictures, by John Trumbull—Signing the Declaration of Independence, Surrender of Burgoyne, Surrender of Cornwallis, and the Resignation of General Washington as Commander of the Army—are probably true to the scenes they depict. These paintings are twelve by eighteen feet, and were secured at a cost of seventy-four thousand dollars. The rotunda is further adorned with statues and busts of Washington, Lincoln, Hamilton, Jefferson, Lafayette, and other men whose history is interwoven with the history of the United States. Above these paintings are sculptured portraits and historical scenes, and a fresco encircles the wall far above, illustrating various periods in the history of this continent, and the ceiling of the dome is beautified with paintings.

From the rotunda an arched doorway leads through a circular vestibule to Statuary Hall, a semicircular room, ninety-five feet at its greatest width. The House of Representatives occupied this hall from 1808 till the close of 1857, with the exception of three years immediately after the Capitol was partially burned by the British. In this room Ex-President John Quincy Adams, then a Representative from Massachusetts, in February, 1848, was prostrated at his desk by paralysis, resulting in his death two days later. A star set in the floor marks the spot where he fell.

This hall is now used for memorial statuary, each State having been requested to send-statues in marble or bronze of two of its most illustrious citizens. Many of the States have responded, and the hall is an interesting place in which to ponder the history of the various States whose citizens are there represented. Among the many statues of noted men, only one woman appears, Frances E. Willard, contributed by Illinois.

Statuary Hall has some remarkable acoustic properties, curious echoes, whispers easily heard at a distance, and ability to hear at a distance what is inaudible near by being the curiosities of sound noticed at certain points. These peculiarities were very trying when the hall was used for public speaking, and many efforts were made to overcome these defects, but now they are only a source of amusement to sightseers.

In the corridor immediately north of the rotuda is a circle formed by Doric columns resting on a low balustrade. Under the floor beneath this is a crypt which was built for a tomb for George Washington's body; but, as his relatives would not consent to the removal of his body from Mount Vernon, this crypt was never used for that purpose.

A long corridor extending south from Statuary Hall leads to the House of Representatives in the southern extension of the Capitol, and a similar corridor on the north leads to the Senate Chamber in the northern extension. As this article is already rather lengthy, however, I shall postpone a description of these extensions of the Capitol till another time.

THE LORD'S-DAY WORSHIP. No. 3. BY F. W. SMITH.

Continuing the subject of worship on the first day of the week, we now come to "the prayers" in which those who were baptized continued. While prayers were associated with the breaking of bread, they were not, like the latter, confined to the assembly on Lord's day. Hence, we note

SOME OF THE DIVINE EXHORTATIONS TO PRAY.

"Pray without ceasing." (1 Thess. 5: 17.) This denotes the "frequency" and the "continuity" of prayer on the part of professed Christians, and it cannot be neglected without endangering the salvation of the soul. Christians are thus exhorted: "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." (James 4: 7.) One of the most effectual ways, if not the most effectual way, to resist the devil is on bended knees before the throne of God in earnest and sincere prayer. Every saint that neglects this heaven-born privilege becomes an easy prey in the hands of Satan; for a prayerless soul is a powerless soul, and without the power that comes through the medium of prayer we are weak indeed. The first sign of spiritual decay and the first step in backsliding, or drifting away, is a disinclination to pray. When one begins to feel that prayer is altogether a matter of duty and has lost the soul craving and relish for communion with God, the danger point has been reached.

In such a state a child of God needs to be aroused and made to realize the danger confronting him. To such Paul's exhortation is, indeed, fitting—viz.: "Wherefore he saith, Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall shine upon thee." (Eph. 5: 14.) Spiritual death had overtaken those here addressed; but had they been given to earnest and devoted prayer, such would not have befallen them.

SEASONS AND PLACES OF PRAYER.

As to these features of prayer, we are unlimited. There are, of course, limitations as to time and place regarding public prayer, but not so with private petitions to God.

"With all prayer and supplication praying at all seasons in the Spirit, and watching thereunto in all perseverance and supplication for all the saints." (Eph. 6: 18.) The secret or private communion of the soul of man with the Heavenly Father can be enjoyed under any and all circumstances that may arise. Hence, "at all seasons" gives the child of God unlimited access to the throne of grace, so far as time is concerned.

As to the "place" of prayer, the apostle exhorts: "I desire therefore that the men pray in every place, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and disputing." (1 Tim. 2: 8.) If this refers to public prayers, it certainly includes private petitions as well; and while public prayers, under certain conditions, are limited as to place, private prayers are not circumscribed at all. I take it that when the saints assemble, as such, whether on the Lord's day or at any other time, public prayer must occupy a very prominent place in their meetings for the purpose, in part, to edify each other.

THE SPIRIT OF PRAYER.

The spirit in which prayers are offered to God becomes a matter of the greatest importance, since we are to worship God "in spirit and in truth." (John 4: 24.) Our prayers are as much circumscribed by these two conditions of acceptable worship to God as any other act of worship we perform, and it behooves all who would approach the throne of grace to look well into the nature of their prayers.

No one should approach God in prayer in an unforgiving spirit, for Jesus plainly teaches: "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." (Matt. 6: 14, 15.) Such förgiveness as will entitle one to be heard by the Lord must be from the heart. (See Matt. 18: 21-35.)

We must pray in the spirit of submission to God's will, and all our prayers should be qualified with, "not my will, but thine, be done." (Matt. 26: 39:) Dictating to God—that is, telling God what he should do or what he must do—is not praying to God, but is well-nigh a presumptuous sin. God is not man that he can be approached in any such spirit or manner.

Again, our prayers should always conform to God's will, and we should never ask God to do that which is contrary to his revealed law. "And this is the boldness which we have toward him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us." (1 John 5: 14.) This necessitates a careful study of the Bible, noting the history of God's dealings with the human family, getting fixed in our minds the principles of divine revelation, that we may know how to pray. "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss." (James 4: 3.) To ask "amiss" means to ask "beside the mark"—that is, the mark God has set at which prayer should be aimed. God's word must guide our prayers, else they will miss the mark. The reason assigned for asking amiss is, "that ye may spend it in your pleasures." It would be in harmony with God's will to ask him to prosper his children in their business affairs, but not for the purpose of hoarding wealth or spending it in unlawful gratification of the flesh. There are two kinds of covetous church members. One covets money to store it away simply for the feeling of possession, and another covets money to spend in what he calls a "good time." Both classes are traveling the road to perdition as rapidly as the wheels of time can roll.

Much more needs to be said on the subject of prayer, but for the present we will let some one else pursue the subject.

Our next installment will be on the subject of the song, or praise, in our worship to God.

THE OLD FRONT DOOR.

I remember the time when I used to sit,
A happy and thoughtless boy,
When father came home from his work at last,
And I was tired of my toys;
I remember the time—and none more sweet
Shall I know forevermore—
When I sat at the eve by my mother's side,
On the sill of the old front door.

I remember I'd sit till I fell asleep,
And list to their loving talk,
While the crickets chirped and the fireflies bright
Flew over the garden walk;
And oft would father tell the tale
Of the time long years before,
When he led his bride to a happy home
O'er the sill of the old front door.

I remember when grandfather failed and died,
And eighty years old was he,
And when I knew that never again
He would ride me upon his knee;
And though but a gay and thoughtless boy,
I wept, and my heart was sore,
When I saw them bear him slowly out
O'er the sill of the old front door.

It is many a weary day since then,
And I, too, am old and gray;
But the tears come crowding into my eyes
When I think of the long-past day;
And I only hope that, whatever end
Fate may have for me in store,
I shall pass once more, ere I pass away,
O'er the sill of the old front door.

BUILDING A HOME.

When a man builds his home, he builds for eternity. Is it not amazing that affiancing in life is so often a matter of merriment and of joke, when it decides so much for this world and the world to come? O, build not your home on earth upon the sparkle of a bright eye or the color of a fair cheek. The time will come in your history when you will want in your home not a pet nor a toy, but a heroine, and you will find that life is not a gay romance, but a tremendous reality; and coming home from your store, or office, or shop, or factory, or studio, you will need some one in your home with a face both cheerful and sympathetic.

There is an aged man who looks back to a certain crisis in life when his fortune went away and reason almost left the throne. He knew not what to do. He remembers a particular evening when he came home from the store. He hardly dared break the news to his wife; he could not bear to tell her he had suspended business, that he had stopped payment, that his fortune was gone. He went into the house, closed the door upon the world, and in domestic peace found a foretaste of that heaven where panics never come. Ah! If it had not been for that help you had, what would have been the result when you told her of your financial embarrassment and misfortune? She was cheerful; she was sympathetic; she was helpful; she helped you all through those dark days of trial; and after the piano went, she could sing without the accompaniment just as well as she ever sang with it.

A Christian minister in England called upon a house of great destitution. There were the husband, the wife, and there were the children. Everything was indicative of want and struggle. The minister of the gospel said to this young man: "Your mistake was in marrying so early. Do you not think that was the mistake of your life?" The man had been told that that was the mistake of his life before. The minister said: "It would have been better for you to have gone on and got something of a property before you entered into the marriage state. Don't you think it would have been better?" And the man looked around, his eyes filled with tears, and he looked at his poorly clad wife and said: "No, sir; she's been the same to me all through."

Ah! There are some who would never have known what their homes were worth if trouble had not come. Perhaps your companion in life may have been too fond of the world and its gayeties; but one touch of misfortune turned her into a Miriam, shouting the triumph on the banks of the Red Sea. If you have spoken of frivolity and fondness of display as the chief characteristics of woman, you may have to correct your mistake in some bitter pass of life, when, all other resources having failed, you are upheld by a wife's hand suddenly armed for the emergency. O, in this tremendous pass of your earthly existence, cry unto God and ask his direction. Make a mistake here, and you make it forever.

Blessed is that home in which the newly married couple dedicate their souls to Christ. Blessed the family Bible in which their names have just been written. Blessed the hour of morning and evening prayer. Blessed the angels of God who join wing-tip to wing-tip over that home, making a canopy of light and love and blessedness. It may be only yesterday that they clasped hands, but they have clasped hands forever. The orange blossoms may fade and the fragrance may die on the air; but they who marry in Christ shall walk together on that day when the church, the Lamb's wife, shall take the hand of her Lord and King amid the swinging of the golden censers.—T. DeWitt Talmage.

GET THE CHURCH AWAKE.

One of the chief conditions of a genuine revival is an aroused church. God does not often work without the zealous coöperation of his people. There are exceptions to this rule. Once in a while the indifference of the church may be ignored. Sometimes the sight of people flocking to the altar will warm up a cold church. But is it not usually the warmth which comes from temporary exhilaration at the sight of success rather than deep and genuine spiritual life?—Selected.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

Please explain the difference in sinning and falling from grace, in the Gospel Advocate.—Sam J. Johnson, Duck Hill, Miss.

"Falling from grace," or "fallen away from grace," means to sin to the degree of getting from under the favor of Jehovah. Of course, when any one sins, Jehovah is displeased, but one can continue sinning until Jehovah will withdraw his favors and mercies. When such is the case, one has fallen away from grace. To persist in any one sin would lead to the same result.

I have been a reader of the Gospel Advocate for the past forty years. Of all papers, I never found its equal. What a wonderful place this world would be to live in if all men were as godly as the men connected with the Advocate! Inasmuch as there has been quite a lot written in regard to marriage and divorce, will you please answer through the Advocate a few questions for me? (1) I do not believe God ever made a mistake. I am familiar with what the Bible says about the matter: "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." But the point I want you to explain is, do you think every man and woman you see living together because they obeyed the civil law—do you believe they are man and wife and that they twain become one flesh? I have often heard such persons say: "I just married for spite;" "I just married for a place to stay;" "I just married to dodge the draft." With such a couple a divorce suit is the result. Did God join this couple together, or is that where the devil gets in his work? If so, aren't this couple living in adultery? If they are, does not man that joined them together have a right to put them asunder? If God did the joining together, do you think there would be any cause for divorce? (2) If you please, let me present one more couple. We sometimes hear them say: "We cared nothing for the church. We just joined to please a certain young girl or a certain young man that we kept company with." No change of heart or purpose, and they go on in the same old rut. I don't propose to be a judge, but by their fruits ye shall know them." Do they belong to the one body, the church?—J. E. PIGG, Aspen Hill, Tenn.

1. Our brother has touched upon a very vital question.

1. Our brother has touched upon a very vital question. The question of marriage should be more closely studied from the scriptural point of view. Marriage is a divine institution and should be respected as such. The relation of husband and wife is sacred and must not be severed for trivial causes. The great peril of the divorce evil is due in a large measure to a failure on the part of fathers and mothers and others in teaching God's word on this subject.

Young people should be taught the sacredness of marriage and should be impressed with the fact that marriage relations are life-lasting. They should be taught that when they enter into this sacred relationship of life, they are doing so in obedience to the command of God, and such obedience must be respected by all lovers of God's truth. There is so much looseness and disregard for the holy bonds of matrimony that young people have come to look lightly upon the union of husband and wife. Not only is the church in danger of corruption, but society in general is cursed by the laxity that is now practiced between husband and wife.

The Scriptures recognize but one cause for separation and a remarriage. The New Testament teaching is very clear that nothing, save adultery on the part of one party, breaks the marriage bond. For either husband or wife to be guilty of adultery severs the marriage bond. The Scriptures recognize a separation of husband and wife, or a living apart, without the marriage bond's being broken. Paul says: "That the wife depart not from her husband (but should she depart, let her remain unmarried, or else be reconciled to her husband); and that the husband leave not his wife." (1 Cor. 7: 10, 11.) This shows the possibility of husband and wife living separate, but they must remain unmarried or "else be reconciled" to each other. Any marriage entered into by either party when the one cause for separation does not exist is adultery.

No law or ordinance of church or state can keep the union of man and woman from being adultery if this one cause of separation does not exist. God's law is supreme. No man or government of man can nullify God's law. The State may grant divorce and remarriage contrary to God's law, but this does not make it right in the sight of God; it only becomes legalized sin. There is no power or virtue in the statutes of man to keep such union from being adultery. It may, and I suppose does, give a respectability in society to this sin, but it does not expunge the exceeding sinfulness from the act. Young people should know this, and should be clearly taught that sin is sin, and that man has no power by his sanction or encouragement to keep sin from being sin.

What God has joined together, no man should put asunder. No one should attempt to sever that which God has united. In this scripture our Lord has given the broad and general rule that the bond of marriage ought never to be broken, and that he who breaks it is in rebellion against God. Of course, God, who joined them together, may put them asunder by prescribing the condition of lawful divorce; but man has no power to set aside or ignore God's law in this respect. This stamps the approval of Jehovah upon the marriage bond and places a fearful condemnation upon any one who would attempt to break the bond. No human ordinance or decree has a right to annul God's law, and those who live in a union which God does not sanction are living in open rebellion to Jehovah and cannot expect to receive the blessings of Jehovah while so living.

2. No one can come into the church except through the door, which is Christ. He says: "I am the door." "I am the way." Through obedience to the gospel the Lord adds to the church. He adds all who obey the gospel to the church; he does not add any others to the church. People may be deceived; they may deceive themselves and think that they are in the church, when in truth they are not in the church. The Lord does not have different ways of adding people to the church. There is but one way, and that is through one's obedience to the gospel.

I do not think that one can incidentally or accidentally obey any of God's commands. One may outwardly appear to be obeying God; one may seemingly be baptized into Christ, yet never enter him. One must be "obedient from the heart" in order to please Jehovah. Jehovah looks upon the intentions of the heart, and the intentions have everything to do with obedience to the command of God. One must purpose in his heart to obey God. It cannot be an incidental happening, but must be a distinct and clear purpose to please God, if it is obedience to his command.

Was Barnabas an apostle? If so, in what sense was he an apostle? If not, please explain Acts 14: 14.—JAMES M. NEILL.

Yes, Barnabas was an apostle. "But when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard of it, they rent their garments, and sprang forth among the multitude." (Acts 14: 14.) An apostle is one who is sent, one who is sent out. This is the primary meaning of the word "apostle." Barnabas was sent out by the church at Antioch; hence, he was an apostle. He was not an apostle in the sense that Peter and John and Matthew were. They were sent by Christ, and were especially qualified for certain work. Barnabas did not have these qualifications and was not an apostle in the sense that others were. He was not one of the twelve.

BIBLE CROSS WORD PUZZLE

A CONVENTIONALIZED cross, often used in decorations, is used as the design of this puzzle. Although it has not as many spaces as some others in the book, it is so well balanced that it has a variety of interesting combinations of words—and very few abbreviations!

© 1925 THE J.C.W. CO. How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

THE SECOND COMING OF THE LORD.

I believe the Bible. Therefore, I believe in the second coming of my Lord. My church teaches the doctrine. And yet I grow sick at heart when I think of the fanaticism that has surrounded this doctrine. These folks who have as their constant motto, "Jesus is coming soon," have done the cause of Christ much harm. No man knows when Jesus is coming. Only God knows.

The result of this fanatical zeal has been such movements as Russellism, Pentecostalism, Dawnism, McPhersonism, and a large array of other isms. These leaders have persuaded their followers that Jesus is just about to make his second appearance, and have amassed thousands of cohorts, ready and willing to pour their money into the laps of such leaders. while they stand with upturned faces watching for the coming of the Lord. Watch these date-setters! Watch these almanac-fixers! Watch these people who are ready to tell you that the world cannot last another twelve months!

I have in my hand a little folder distributed at the doors of my church a few Sundays ago. It is entitled, "The End is Upon You." It is an affirmation of the speedy coming of the Lord, and is issued by the Adventist people. I have another folder assuring me that through it "God is speaking to his people directly from heaven," saying that Jesus would come in February, 1925. It was published by the "Bible Students' Association." I have a third leaflet, from Milwaukee, calling for a free-will offering to-day-at once-so as to send out | terature concerning the "sure and certain and immediate coming of the Lord."

All this is bunk! It is worse than bunk! It is mockery of God! It is blasphemy!

No man knows the time.

Moreover, it is constantly bringing into disrepute a most beautiful and wholesome hope of the hearts of true Christians.—Shuler's Magazine.

DEATH OF W. J. HAYNES. BY M. L. STRONG.

Brother W. J. Haynes, of Grady, Ala., passed to his better home on Friday, March 20, 1925. He was buried near his home on Saturday, March 21. The funeral services were conducted by Brother Samuel Jordan, of Highland Home, Ala. In the passing of Brother Haynes the church of Christ in Alabama lost one of its most faithful and loyal preachers. Brother Haynes was born and reared not a great distance from his birthplace. In early life he began to apply himself, and by diligent effort acquired a splendid education and taught school for something like thirty years, mostly at Strata and Grady, Ala. He was twice married. His first wife was a Miss Watkins. From this union were born four daughters and three sons, all of whom are still living. His second marriage was to Miss Georgie Roberts, of Valdosta, Ga., who survives him. Brother Haynes lived to see all of his children added to the church and married before his death.

Brother Haynes was induced to enter the field as a preacher of the gospel by that prince of men. J. M. Barnes, of Highland Home, Ala., and was one among the best preachers in the church of Christ. Hundreds of people have been added to the church through his efforts. He, with Brethren Barnes and Jordan, established the cause of Christ in the city of Montgomery, Ala., and labored for many years for the church in Montgomery until the cause was permanently established in that city. He spent much of his time preaching in destitute fields where there was no church of Christ, preaching the gospel without money and without price. His labors extended over a wide field in the States of Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, and Texas. Few men had stronger faith or were more loyal to the word of God than was he. He was indeed and in truth a faithful servant of our Lord Jesus Christ. 'In his preaching he was clear in presenting his subject-matter, logical, forcible, and often very eloquent, especially so in trying to get sinners to obey the gospel. Among his wide circle of friends, no preacher was more loved and respected than he. At the time of his death he was about sixtysix years old. He suffered from a stroke of paralysis about ten years ago, from which he never finally recovered, but continued to preach up to within about two years of his death. It was my privilege to see and be with him often during a period of thirty years, and during all this time I never saw one thing in his life that seemed to be out of harmony with that of a true servant of God. He leaves to his children a rich legacy more precious than rubies or gold, the memory of a faithful child of God. No doubt he will have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

LUCKETT.

Mrs. Mary Hall Luckett was born on February 18, 1906, and died on April 8, 1925. She said: "I am prepared to go, and I am going to a better place. Don't shed any tears for me." She became identified with the church of Christ in September, 1920, under the preaching of Brother J. W. Ballard. Her departing words show that she was faithful to the end. Mary was a good, obedient girl, and we loved her so much. O how sad it is for us to have to give her up in the bloom of her life! But if it was the Lord's will, we are willing for her to go, and we only say farewell for a while. May the Lord help us to so live that we can finally meet and be with her forevermore in heaven, where there will be no more parting nor sad Mrs. Mary Hall Luckett was born there will be no more parting nor sad farewells.

RUTLEDGE.

On May 17, 1925, one of our best men fell asleep in the arms of Jesus —Brother Melvin Rutledge, of the Union Hill congregation, near Galla-tin, Tenn. Brother Rutledge was a young man. He obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Sikes, under the preaching of Brother Sikes, of Gallatin, sometime last year, and a more consecrated Christian does not live. Many times I have been in their home, and never did I see a thing amiss in this young man. He was a noble boy while small, very obedient to his dear father and mother. To Brother and Sister Rutledge I would say: Weep not as those who have no hope. He has only quit the walks of men to walk in a better country. Brother Rutledge has left a father, a mother, two brothers and one sweet little sister, with many friends, to mourn his death. E. T. BRAZZELL.

MORGAN.

MORGAN.

Robert Clyde Morgan, son of Brother and Sister W. C. Morgan, of Town Creek, Ala., passed out of this world on April 8, 1925, after several days of suffering, in his twenty-ninth year. He entered the kingdom of God on earth when a youth, and was a faithful soldier in the Lord's army—not perfect, of course, but strong in the faith of the gospel, in which glorious faith he triumphantly passed into a glorious realization of life eternal. He was an employee at Wilson Dam, near Florence, Ala., at the time of his untimely death—untimely as we poor mortals see things. He was an industrious, economical man, providing for his young wife and three little children. We had a memorial service at his parents' home at Town Creek, and then conveyed his body to its last resting place at Courtland, Ala. More than half of his short life on earth was spent in the fellowship of God's people—the church of Christ at Town Creek.

HUMPHRY.

Brother W. D. Humphry, who was being cared for in the Tipton Orphan Home, died on April 11, 1925. He was born in Kentucky seventy-eight years ago. He preached for fifty years. He did much preaching in his early ministerial life in Kentucky and Tennessee. Later he came West and did much preaching till old age and ill health came on him. Two and one-half years ago he and his devoted companion came to the Tipton Ornhan Home, where they had since devoted companion came to the Tipton Orphan Home, where they had since been cared for, and the Home is now caring for his faithful widow. Brother Humphry was a scholarly man. He preached a few sermons here after he came. Their children all died years ago and left them alone in this world, and now Brother Humphry has crossed over the river and left his faithful and devoted companion alone. But this Home will gladly care for her till the messenger comes for her. He requested that I have charge of her till the messenger comes for her. He requested that I have charge of his funeral; so Brother Cabe, of Electra, Texas, and I conducted the services before a good audience. He had arranged the scriptures he wanted read, and they were beautifully arranged. May the Lord lead his life companion gently on, and at last may they be reunited in the world beyond.

Relieved of Catarrh Due to La Grippe

Thanks To PE-RU-NA

Mrs. Laura Berberick, over 70 Mrs. Laura Berberick, over 70 years of age, 1205 Willow Ave., Hoboken, N. J., writes: "A severe attack of La Grippe left me with a hoarseness and slime in the head and throat. I had chronic catarrh. It grew worse. I could not lie down or sleep at night. I was always bothered by the slime, pain in the back and a terrible headache every back and a terrible headache every morning.

Finally I bought a bottle of Pe-ru-na which was of great bene-fit. It gave me blood and strength. It have no pains in head or back, nor noises in the head. The slime has gone and I can sleep. My weight has increased. I am cheerful and happy, thanks to Pe-ru-na, which I shall always keep in the house and recommend to my friends."

For every form of catarrh Pe-ru-na meets the need, Coughs, Colds, Nasal Catarrh, Indigestion, Bowel disorders are all forms of catarrh.

BIBLE SCHOOL AT KILLEEN. TEXAS.

BY H. W. WRYE.

The Killeen Bible School closed its first session on Friday night, May 1. Early last winter we conceived the idea of a school of the Bible for young people, to be conducted at night, as the prospective students were in the public school during the day. After advising with the brethren, they erected a substantial, five-room building for educational purposes. On the night of January 13 we launched the school, with an enrollment of thirty young people eager for the great lessons of the Bible. That number was increased to many more; but as they were irregular in attendance, they were not counted. However, the school settled down to about thirtyfive real hard workers three nights in the week. The work was divided into two departments-juniors and seniors. Brother G. C. Black, the efficient superintendent of the Sunday Bible school, taught the juniors, while I directed the seniors.

The juniors studied Bible history and the plan of salvation; while inspiration of the Bible, Bible history, and how to teach the Bible occupied the time of the seniors. The art of chart-making and teaching through the eye, together with verbal illustration, was taught with gratifying results.

Probably no other congregation of the church of Christ in the United States has had a similar work. The effort proved successful beyond expectations. Eternity alone can reveal the good accomplished in the four months' work. One young man emerges therefrom able to preach the gospel. Probably some will attend one of our Bible colleges next fall; and if they do, they are better prepared for the work than those who have not had some church training. Would it not be fine if all the congregations would establish week-day schools for their children and their neighbors' children to become educated in the Bible?

"GO, PREACH THE GOSPEL." BY J. L. HINES.

Jesus said to his disciples: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The reason for the proclamation of the gospel is: "It is the power of God unto salvation." Christ died for the world. It is God's will that all men be saved. But he has decreed to save all who believe on him through Christ, his Son. Men cannot believe unless they hear; hence the command: "Go, . . . preach the gospel." And woe unto every disciple who neglects or fails to preach the good news.

McQUIDDY'S RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC

Reading music is purely a mechanical problem, and a too liberal use of theory will confuse rather than help in attaining desired results.

Any one may learn to read music accurately and rapidly who will never be able to sing acceptably, for various reasons. Some sing naturally, as do the birds, while others must have long and thorough training be-fore the ability is acquired to sing the Major Diatonic scale correctly; others are unable to sing in "tune," and consequently must have severe drill under a competent instructor before the voice is brought under control. The student will, therefore, understand that neither theoretical technicalities nor voice building will be discussed in this book -merely the art of reading music.

There is no better music composer in this or any other country than is the editor of "McQuiddy's Rudiments of Music." Price, 20 cents, single copy, prepaid; $2.25 per dozen, not prepaid. Address

"An Open Door," setting forth the prospects of doing some real missionary work in the heart of Kentucky. Several preachers responded to the call (and were placed as fast as I could place them), but no church as yet has signified its willingness to help pay the expenses of a single meeting. But the meetings will be conducted, the Lord willing-yea, even at the expense of sound, sage, gospel preachers. These self-sacrificing preachers will, no doubt, start new congregations, and then the "ministers" go. I could not consistently ask others to do what I was unwilling to do; so I have made arrangements to conduct two mission meetings in Kentucky-at Carlisle and at Mount Olivet-the first to begin on June 2; the latter, on June 16. There is not a member of the church of Christ at Carlisle, and only one at Mount Olivet. These meetings are the fruits of my preaching twice on the streets at Carlisle last summer. The church at Covington, Ky., furnishes us their tent and chairs for the Carlisle meeting, and Max Ogden, of Winchester, Ky., has volunteered to lead the singing. The expense of this meeting, so far as I know, will have to be met by the writer. The Mount Olivet meeting is to be conducted in the courthouse. The one member there has signified his willingness to pay the board of the preacher and singer (J. D. Derryberry) and for advertisements. The opportunity is given you to help conduct these meetings. "SUCH AS I HAVE." BY H. C. DENSON.

It was the ninth hour, the hour of prayer. The devout Jews were assembling for their temple service. A poor, lame beggar waited at the gate called "Beautiful." He asked alms of the passers-by. As Peter and John were about to enter the temple, this unfortunate man asked alms. Then Peter said: "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." At once his ankle bones received strength, and he walked with Peter and John into the temple. Such is the brief account of the healing of this poor man, lame from the time of his birth. an example for all Christians. Peter gave, not silver and gold, but such as he had. This gift of Peter was much better than silver and gold. It could not be purchased with money.

Thousands of people to-day are lame. I speak not of physical lameness, but mentally, morally, and spiritually they are lame. They are in need-dire need. You have it within your power to give. You may not have money. Neither is money always what is most needed, but you can give. Give what you have.

People are in need of the righteous life. Are you able to influence and instruct? If so, give such as you have—influence them for good and instruct them in the way of righteousness. Thousands of people need consolation. Give such as you have; console them. Many are suffering for the lack of kindness. Speak the kind word. Perform the kind deed; give such as you have.

O that Christians would always give such as they have! If the wealthy would give their means; if those who do not have an abundance of this world's goods would only give such as they have—cheer, comfort, and kindness—this world would be a much better place in which to live.

From the Brethren

Topeka, Kan., May 15.—Announcement was made in the Gospel Advocate recently regarding my contemplated move to Tennessee. This is to further say that my home, after July 1, will be at Henderson. It is my purpose to place my children under the influence of Christian teachers and where the Bible is honored. My work will be that of an evangelist, believing I can do more for Him whom I serve this way than any other way. In the meantime I expect to do all I can for the school. It needs the encouragement of us all. Infidelity in all its phases is sweeping cur country. An excellent way to counteract this deadening influence is through our schools. May they all prosper. Correspondents may address me at Topeka, Kan., Twentythird and Penn.—J. W. Brents.

Montgomery, Ala., May 13.—The history of our congregation can be traced back to 1908, when a tent meeting was held in this part of the city by J. E. Dunn. Weekly services were continued irregularly until May 17, 1911. On October 8, 1911, a congregation was organized, with about seventy members, whose desire was to carry forward the work and worship as a free and independent church, to be known as the "Highland Park church of Christ," taking as its only and all-sufficient rule of faith and practice the New Testament Scriptures. The first church building occupied by the church was an old storehouse, which was remodeled and used till August, 1923. But with the steady growth of the congregation and the consequent need for more adequate accommodations, it was decided that a larger and more modern house should be erected; so, on March 15, 1923, the church began to build the present church house and completed it the following July. We have a spacious auditorium that will seat four hundred and fifty people and eleven classrooms. I have been with the church nearly five years. We have two hundred and eighty-two members.—J. H. Hines.

Barrackville, W. Va., May 27.—I was at Sancho over the fourth Lord's day in April and preached three times, and one man confessed his wrongs and renewed his covenant. I started this little band last December with twelve names on the list, and they now number about sixteen. I was with the church at Odell Knob over the first Lord's day in May and spoke three times. One woman made the good confession and was baptized. I preached for the Salem Church over the second Lord's day in May, with a good attendance, and found them still earnestly contending for the one faith. On the third Lord's day in May I preached both morning and evening for the Blueville church. They are making great preparation for a series of meetings to be held by Brother J. A. Taylor, of Arkansas. Last Lord's day I preached for the church here at home. I want to add a hearty amen to the article of Brother E. A. Elam, entitled "Constructive Work," in the Gospel Advocate of May 21, page 492. Would to God that every member of the one body, as well as all others, could read and re-read that article! It makes my heart ache to see the wreck and ruin caused by lodgeism, societyism, pleasure, and popularity, and the desire to compromise by teachers who will smooth these things over in order to be popular and get a good salary and live in ease and comfort. May God speed the day when men who claim to be loyal will stand firm and true for the purity of the faith. We surely are living in perilous times, and may God help us to "cry aloud, and spare not;" for the night will come, when none can work.—J. F. Ice.

"AND HE DIED."

BY H. C. FLEMING.

This statement is made in Gen. 5: 3-5: "Adam lived a hundred and thirty years, and begat a son in his own likeness, after his image; and called his name Seth: and the days of Adam after he had begotten Seth were eight hundred years: and he begat sons and daughters: and all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died."

The record further on is similar to this, stating the number of years Seth lived, and he died; and in like manner to Adam's posterity, and that they all died.

There are only two exceptions where the end of this life was not death-Enoch and Elijah-and no others on to the present time.

Death has reigned from Adam to Moses, and from Moses till now.

I am reliably informed that I was born on July 15, 1842. My memory extends back to a short period of that time. In a retrospective view I call to mind many acquaintances of youthful and other days and begin to inquire, where are they? As far as I am informed, nearly all are dead. All my mother's family, except myself, are dead; all my uncles and aunts and my dear life's companion are dead. I still linger. I know not why, but I do know that I must before long join them.

"For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15: 22.) That all die is forced upon the world by its daily demonstration before their eyes, but some refuse to believe in the resurrection to life again. This is not because of the lack of testimony. God has given assurance of it unto all men in that he raised Jesus Christ from the dead. (See Acts 17: 31.) This assurance is as certain as that the power from which life originated still exists.

There can be no effect without a cause; and as we constantly see the effects of life and death, why search for something to prove it false? O vain man! Can you limit the power of God? You see the effects of his power over all matter and all intelligence. Could this exist without him?

The Bible-school attendance has gone to two hundred and twenty-six, and we have been forced to add on two large classrooms to the rear end of our meetinghouse.

Brother S. P. Pittman preached at Athens in the forenoon and at Niota in the afternoon of the fourth Lord's day in April. Brother Vernon Rozar preached for the churches at these places on the first Lord's day in May. The brethren and sisters were delighted to have these brethren with them, and enjoyed their preaching very much.

Brother R. A. Largen, of Fayetteville, will begin a meeting at Ooltewah next Lord's day; Brother Etheridge, of East Chattanooga, at Englewood; and Brother W. C. Phillips, of Cleveland, at Copperhill; and I am informed that Brother F. B. Srygley will begin at St. Elmo on the same day. That is pretty good for the firing line up in this country.

Brother R. C. White will begin a meeting at Big Springs, in Meigs County, on the third Lord's day in

Needs of the churches: A more efficient eldership; a more aggressive spirit in its work and worship; more of the real, genuine spirit of "I want to be a worker for the Lord;" more study of God's Holy Word; more prayerfulness and less prayerlessness; more consecration and less desecration: a fuller sense of realization and appreciation of the greatest work to which God has ever dedicated his people; more of the spirit to sacrifice unto the Lord; more honesty in trying to meet our obligations to our God.

THE EMPTY NEST.

No bird at home in nest to-day, No one to sing the lovely lay, No one to bring the bit of food, No one to watch above the brood!

All empty is that nest to-day, December's come and past is May, With flow'r and bloom and leafy bower And springtime sun and gentle shower.

Poor empty nest, your barren walls, Must wait in vain, for no one calls . To bring the life of other days And sing again the lovely lays.

O, empty nest, you grip my heart! You stir my soul, the teardrops start. I see a home, once filled with joy, The joy of youth without alloy.

But empty is that home to-day; The children all are far away, And parents watch by empty hearth; No shout of joy, no childish mirth!

But Hope can see a brighter day, The children all return to stay;
"Tis heaven now—no parting there—"And life is freed from every care.
—J. T. Ogle.

When a fellow knows his business, he doesn't have to explain to people that he does. It isn't what a man knows, but what he thinks he knows, that he brags about. Big talk means little knowledge.—G. H. Lorimore.

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

- "I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)
- "We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)
- "I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pro-nounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made," (Ira C. Moore.)
- "We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criti-cism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)
- "I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Company. They cannot fail of being helpful tany church using them." (C. A. Norred.)

 "The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuff.)
- "Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)
- "I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)
- "The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartily recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)
- "A complete assortment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently. Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly com-mend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)
- "As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson. Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)
- "It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lessons." (A. G. Freed.)
- "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, sortputral and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pullias.)
- "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Elam was one of the best-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)
- pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)

 "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptures that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes. I compare them weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Hoit.)

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

An article in the Christian-Evangelist, written by Henry C Armstrong and entitled "Christian Union Movements World-Wide," says:

We are living in the day of a world movement for Christian unity. Never before could this have been said. Not that Christian unity is something new. There have always been voices and movements for the reunion of the church, but none of them before has attained to world proportion and world importance. As a matter of fact, no age since Pentecost has been without its witness for this sacred cause. Unity was the vital principle most zealously guarded by the apostles and leaders of the early church, and from the second century to the present time there runs a long line of names, from Ignatius, Irenæus, and Cyprian to Thomas and Alexander Campbell, Philip Schaff, and Robert H. Gardiner, illustrious for their devoted advocacy of Christian unity. Paul's vision of a united church and Christ's prayer for it have never been wholly forgotten.

We regard it as an indication of a better day that large portions of the religious world are beginning to recognize the importance of Christian unity. The divisions in the religious world are not only iniquitous and sinful, but are unreasonable and absurd. They all have the same Bible. Does the Bible authorize and teach one to preach something that it instructs somebody else to contradict?

Jesus prayed that his disciples "may all be one." (John 17: 21.) The end in view was, and is, "that the world may believe that thou didst send me." The world is rejecting Jesus on account of things taught and practiced by professed followers of Jesus themselves. Infidelity is caused by the churches' not being willing to be governed by the Bible, by churches suppressing parts of it and introducing other things it does not authorize. It is disgusting to see popular "pastors," so-called "preachers of the gospel," raving and ranting because some infidel professor denies the Mosaic account of the origin of man.

Of course, Christ indorsed Moses, and the divinity of Christ is the best-proved fact in God's universe; but Christ also sent his apostles "into all the world" to "preach the gospel to every creature," and these so-called "preachers of the gospel" who are raving so about the infidels are such infidels themselves that they will not permit what the apostles commanded sinners to do to be saved to be read from their pulpits.

The effort to bring about Christian union will be an abortion until everybody gets humble enough in the sight of God to be willing to come to the Bible. If all would accept God's word as their guide, preach what they can read therein word for word, "adding nothing thereto, nor diminishing from it," man-made denominations, with their man-made creeds, would automatically vanish and we would have Christian union before the rising of to-morrow's sun. No one expects all denominations to ever become converted to any one of them. Methodists do not expect all to ever become Methodists. Baptists do not expect all to ever become Baptists. The only thing there is any hope of all ever becoming is simply Christians. The only church all can ever unite in is the church of Christ.

It seems that the very enthusiasm of some causes them to rather be wrong and die without hope than to abide in God's word and be saved. Our West Texas "transgressive" brethren are whooping up another "convention" to be held at Abilene on June 12-16. The Christian Courier tries to boost things thus:

As the day approaches for the Abilene convention, we are more and more anxious about the attendance. This is the great gathering of the year for Texas disciples. Every church should be represented by a fine delgation.

It is sad that our "transgressive" brethren are bent on folly. The loose construction they put on the Scriptures has already led them to infidelity and open membership.

The apostasy, "the man of sin," in the primitive church early developed the practice of sending delegates from the churches to a general convention that assumed jurisdiction over the churches. Instead of the apostolic order of a plurality of elders on an equal footing, each congregation scon found itself under the rule of one man known as "the bishop." The rule of "the bishop" spread from a single congregation to a diocese, and from that to "the universal father," "Lord God the Pope."

The Scriptures teach that every congregation should be an independent organization and should, as a congregation, under its own elders, do its own work. It cannot send delegates to participate in any work larger than the work of the congregation. It may "send once and again" to the assistance of any engaged in doing a good work, but it cannot participate in the organization of anything larger than a local congregation.

Denominational organizations, including that of our "transgressive brethren," are bowed down beneath the weight of their own machinery. The basis of this machinery, and what it takes to operate it, is money, not personal faith and consecration and individual effort. All that the churches that go into the general organization have to do is to pay, and the standing of the church is rated by the way it pays. A church rich in faith, but poor in this world's goods, as the Savior was, can have no standing.

The worldly spirit has taken hold of "the transgressives." They are determined to have their "liberty" to go ahead with things for which there is neither precept nor example in the word of God. They are in a more dangerous condition than their sister denominations. Their sister denominations are coming toward the truth; they were once in the truth and are going from it.

GOOD BOOKS.

Many splendid books are published and handled at our store. Good religious books should be kept in every home. They have a refining influence on the young. Their educational value cannot be overestimated. The Gospel Advocate Company would like to help you educate your family by introducing good books into your library. Here is a list that should be in every home. How many of them have you?

- "Sermons," by J. W. McGarvey.
- "Eunice Loyd," by R. R. Moody.
- "Bible Readings," by Isaac Errett.
- "The Glorious Gospel," by Adcock.
- "The Querist's Drawer," by Errett.
- "Lands of the Bible," by McGarvey.
- "Gospel Sermons," by T. W. Brents.
 "The Gospel Preacher," by B. Franklin.
- "Letters and Sermons of T. B. Larimore."
- "Travels in Bible Lands," by A. T. Ritchie.
- "Seventy Years in Dixie," by F. D. Srygley.
- "Larimore and His Boys," by F. D. Srygley.
- "The Profitable Word," writings of J. C. McQuiddy.
- "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons," by N. B. Harde-
- "Nelson's Complete Concordance," by M. C. Hazard, Ph.D.

DO YOU KNOW THESE FACTS?

That 21,000,000 letters went to the Dead Letter Office last year?

That 803,000 parcels did likewise?

That 100,000 letters go into the mail yearly in perfectly blank envelopes?

That $55,000 in cash is removed annually from misdirected mail?

That $12,000 in postage stamps is found in similar fashion?

That $3,000,000 in checks, drafts, and money orders never reach intended owners?

That Uncle Sam collects $92,000 a year in postage for the return of mail sent to the Dead Letter Office?

That it costs Uncle Sam $1,740,000 yearly to look up addresses on misdirected mail?

That 200,000,000 letters are given this service yearly, and-

That it costs in one city alone $500 daily?

And do you know that this vast sum could be saved and the Dead Letter Office abolished if each piece of mail carried a return address, and if each parcel were wrapped in stout paper and tied with strong cord?

Moral: Every man knows his own address, if not that of his correspondent. Put it in the upper left-hand corner.

HE THAT ASKETH.

BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

Shall we always give to him that asketh, or shall we give to him that asketh only when we know that he has come by his destitution honestly? In other words, what is a deserving case of charity-or, rather, what is not? I submit that not infrequently this is a nice question to decide. Of course, Jesus said: "Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away." But he could not have meant that we should give to every one that stretches forth the hand, for this would not be a blessing in every instance; in some cases it would work a positive injury. Jesus is teaching us that we must cultivate a compassionate heart, that we must be ready always to help the less fortunate. He is telling us that we must be charitable.

There are so many appeals that we must of necessity deny many of them. Indeed, there are so many pleading hands that we often stand distressed and bewildered, not being able to cast a mite into each hand. If we only knew the deserving hands, we feel sure that our aims would be the better bestowed. But how are we to know? In the country it is not such a difficult problem. There the abjectly poor are comparatively few, the disposition to beg is not so prevalent, and sham and fraud cannot be so easily practiced. There are so few claims made upon the neighborhood charity that benevolent people can respond to every local call. Be it said to the credit of the Southern one-horse farmer—the hillsman, especially—that he seldom ever turns down a plea for help. No widow or orphan suffers in his locality, no tramp hunts for a haystack or goes from his door hungry. To turn away a benighted traveler would incur the neighborhood contempt. Hence, all wayfarers are entertained alike, deadbeats and angels unawares. But in the city it is different. You must turn down many appeals. You cannot dismiss every beggar, like Sir Launfal, by tossing each one indifferently a "piece of gold in scorn."

There are many professional beggars, many adepts at deception. Often it is almost impossible to detect the impostor. William Dean Howells presents the difficulty in a pointed little story. He met a little girl on a cross street in New York who burst into tears at sight of him and asked for money to buy her sick mother bread. The very next day, while passing through the same street, he saw the same little girl burst into tears at sight of a benevolent-looking lady, whom she asked for money for the same good object. The lady gave her nothing, and the child tried her woes on several other people, none of whom gave her anything. Doubtless some of these people thought her an impostor, but some were indifferent, callous, unmerciful. It is true that they could hardly be expected to know whether she was forcing her emotions or begging from a broken heart. The average person would have thrown her a coin and passed on. We usually get rid of street beggars that way. Of course it would be impossible to accompany every beggar home to see what the actual conditions are.

I would not be picayunish in little items of charity. But I think we should give intelligently, as well as cheerfully. In other words, I would say that we should know, as a rule, that our gifts are bestowed upon worthy objects of charity. This may require a little investigating; but practical Christianity is nothing if not businesslike in its methods. There should be intelligent design in private as well as public charity or it will often miscarry. Let the heart prompt the offering, but permit common sense to bestow it. The heart leads blindly, and if we follow its dictates we shall find ourselves casting our alms to the winds by giving to worthless characters. I know a tender-hearted widow who keeps herself poor by feeding good-forncthing waifs and mendicants. She disfurnishes herself and children to feed and clothe fawning parasites, and she certainly has forgotten that in her case "charity begins at home." There are many such big-hearted Christians who need to employ a bit of reason in practicing the Christian virtue of giving. There are folks who give freely, but do not give wisely.

But there are many more who do not give freely, cheerfully, and some who not give at all. I do not think that often we shall have to go far to find worthy objects of "The poor ye have with you always." Our greatest trouble is that we are not looking for deserving cases of indigence. I fear that many of us have "stopped our ears at the cry of the poor," and are blind to the pitiable straits of the great army of unfortunates. There are not as many destitute in the rural districts as there are in the towns and cities, as stated, but there are enough cases of genuine charity to cultivate the sympathies of Christians. Lazarus lay at Dives' gate full of sores, but the rich man regarded him not. The unfortunate traveler lay bruised and bleeding on the Jericho road, but Levite and priest passed him by. Both of these were worthy cases of charity, but they were neglected. Let me tell you emphatically that there is a Lazarus at your gate whom you may feed and clothe or turn away empty, and there is some unfortunate sufferer that awaits your ministrations. You may not have to bind up wounds, but you will be called upon to sit by the bedside of the sick and dying. You must be ready to help when the call comes.

Do not try to shift responsibility to others' shoulders. The charity of the State or of the church cannot relieve you of individual obligation. Public charity has its function, but there is need of private charity. You say that a certain widow—homeless, friendless, without relatives—should be sent to the poorhouse; and you would thus break her heart by carting her off to the county farm. Why not help to provide her a home in the neighborhood, and be a friend indeed? Shame on the community boasting a church of Christ that will permit a worthy widow—a "widow indeed"—to go to the county poorhouse! Shame on the Christian who would advocate it! The church in every community should be a charitable institution, should undertake a regular charity, and Christians as individuals should be ministers of mercy.

Suppose the church is falling down in this regard—what then? That does not excuse you as an individual Christian. Do not, therefore, excuse yourself because the church as a body does not undertake charity work. Do not blame it upon some one else, upon an institution; if you are delinquent, blame yourself. You can do your individual part, if others will not. "If a brother or sister be naked and in lack of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Go in peace, be ye warmed and filled; and yet ye give them not the things needful to the body; what doth it profit?" Indeed, what doth it profit? What doth it profit the destitute? What doth it profit you?

I have said that you should give intelligently. But, above all, give cheerfully. If you would be profited, give of your heart's bounty, not from a sense of duty. Give because you love your fellow. Give of service as well as of substance—yourself as well as your means.

"He gives nothing but worthless gold Who gives from a sense of duty.

Not what we give, but what we share—
For the gift without the giver is bare;
Who gives himself with his alms feeds three—Himself, his hungering neighbor, and Me."

PRAYER OF TRUST.

BY E. C. FUQUA.

Thirteen years ago Mrs. Fuqua had her first operation, and an hour before going to the operating room she composed the following prayer of trust, which expresses at the present her true sentiments. I copy it here:

Father of tender mercy,
Look down on me this day;
Forgive my many, many wrongs,
And take them all away.

I know I am weak and sinful,
And prone to leave the way
That leads to life and joy and peace—
To the land of "endless day."

Be with me in this trying hour Of weakness, fear, and pain; And please, dear Lord, for Jesus' sake, Give me my health again.

Direct the doctor's skillful hand, And guide the knife aright, And may I live for years to come To fight the gospel fight.

And after a long and useful life In thy dear "vineyard" spent, Take me home to rest with thee, Then shall I be content.

I JUST WONDER.

BY PRICE BILLINGSLEY.

The Lord pictures two apparently contradictory attitudes which his preachers must assume toward the world. Of course, there are no contradictions in the Bible; when we understand, there is perfect harmony, throughout, and the most symmetrical and consistent character in all the world is the one trued up in full accord with the gospel.

One attitude is that of positive and outspoken opposition to all sin and all sinners—opposition which neither bends nor ends. The preacher is bidden so to speak as that he shall be hated of all men, and the truth which he brings, instead of making for peace, makes rather for the sword, and arrays the members of the same household one against another. We are plainly told of the Lord that those whom all men praise are to be avoided and their loyalty to be questioned, seeing that they who seek to please men cease to be God's servants, the favor of the world being purchased at the awful price of divine hatred and abomination. Man's favor is the exact equivalent of the Lord's enmity. In the most explicit terms we are told this by Jehovah.

The other attitude is that of conciliation, utter friendliness, and compassion toward the erring. We must be utterly inoffensive and harmless, even courting the good will and favor of men, and to seek to please them in all things. We are to strive to be at peace with all, and by good works to force their admiration. Emphatically, it is affirmed that he who serves Christ is acceptable to God and approved of men. Thus we grow in favor with God and men.

There is no contradiction here; manifestly these are but two sides of the same truth, each complementing and qualifying the other. Together they present a picture so full of warning and counsel for us as to challenge our devoutest consideration, which I attempt to reproduce here. Some of our preachers puzzle and alarm me. We all need to be corrected, to have our attention called to weaknesses and dangers which thrive and menace us largely because none will speak up. Conscious of my own weaknesses, I invite reproof from any who feel disposed to proffer it; and if what is here said stings a bit, in kindness to myself let it be remembered that I hate that which is harmful and hindering and devoutly love all the saints of the Lord.

The inescapable, all-absorbing labor of the gospel preacher is to correct gross evils, rebuke sinners, and endure as best he may their consequent ill will and opposition. All this by faithfully preaching the word. Christ left us the example. He placed truth in sharp contrast with popular error so as to pluck upon his devoted head the anathemas of the entire religious world, including some of his own company. But some of our preachers boast of long-standing favor with churches not yet in the perfect state, and talk of the whole-hearted good will and cooperation of the entire surrounding world, including the sects and other ungodly. And when such go on for months and years so perfectly poised, sailing in unruffled waters to the praise of all, I cannot help feeling their boast is a reflection upon my Lord, seeing neither he nor his inspired preachers achieved anything of the kind. And when a preacher to-day is so consistently smily, correct, and smooth, daring nothing that might make him suffer. though it be in the interest of the good of others, is he dealing in good words and fair speeches with the motive of advancing his own personal and selfish ends? I just wonder.

THE CHRISTIAN HOME, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Do you know of an Old Ladies' Home managed by the church of Christ? I am getting old—nearly seventy-six—and have no near kinsfolk. I do not know but that I may have to go to some place like that sometime. I have a little home here with which I could pay my way. I pray the Lord to bless you all.

The church of Christ is itself an "Old Ladies' Home." Taking care of "the fatherless and widows in their affliction" is one of its main lines of business. The good sister making the present inquiry is more fortunate than most others, in that she is not entirely without means.

Realizing the great importance of providing a Home for our needy old people, some of the Nashville brethren have set about to build one. There is no such Home in existence now. About a dozen old people, members of the church of Christ, are now being cared for by the Little Sisters of the Poor, a Catholic institution, while others of our members are being cared for at various other places sustained by men and women who are not members of the church. We quote from the "Prospectus:"

"About 1921 a small work was started in the western part of Nashville, by a few members of the church of Christ, under the direction of O. C. Lambert. The object was to help the unfortunate in that section of the city; to minister to the sick and distressed; to supply food, clothing, medical attention, fuel, and other necessities to those in need and worthy of assistance. A Day Home was established where the children of mothers who were compelled to work in the factories were cared for during the day. The children were given nourishing food and the older ones were also taught lessons from the Bible, thus throwing around them an influence for good which, for the most part, was lacking in their home life. A weekly Bible class was conducted for the older people of the community. The interest shown and the gradual increase in attendance was most gratifying. This work grew to such an extent that the Home was moved to another part of the city where opportunities for doing good were even greater. Nashville City Board of Health became interested and provided a nurse who devotes her entire time to the Home. A clinic was established, and the Home renders great service in ministering to the physical, as well as the spiritual, needs of those in distress. This Home and Clinic has been and still is supported by monthly contributions from certain congregations and individuals, and these will continue their support until a new and more nearly adequate Home is in operation.

"The Home just mentioned is in a rented building entirely inadequate for the need and opportunity. There have come to us from time to time many appeals on behalf of aged sisters and brothers who have no one to care for them and no suitable place to live. We made arrangements to take care of a limited number of such cases. Since then the appeals have become more numerous. Recently one brother reported two of our aged sisters and one of our aged preachers spending their last days in a Catholic institution. An investigation followed, and, to our surprise, we found more than a dozen of our own brethren and sisters in Catholic or other institutions where they were denied the privilege of serving God 'as it is written.' It was determined that a shameful condition of this kind must be remedied. It is, therefore, proposed to build a new and modern Home wherein these and others may be cared for as is their due. A generous brother has given valuable and beautiful grounds. Funds are being raised to erect and equip a suitable building. Christian people are responding with their prayers and means as this worthy cause is presented to them. should want a share in building the Christian Home for 'those of the household of faith."

To the end that everything connected with the building of this Home for our needy old people may be conducted scripturally, some of our foremost brethren, including E. A. Elam, F. W. Smith, F. B. Srygley, H. Leo Boles, C. M. Pullias, R. V. Cawthon, and others, have carefully gone over the matter and indicated the scriptural course. The erection of the Home shall be a private enterprise in which members of the church of Christ intend to do their Christian duty to their needy brethren and sisters.

The following Nashville brethren have been selected as trustees of the property: R. W. Comer, Washington Manufacturing Company; W. H. Sewell, Druggist; Norman N. Davidson, Standard Furniture Company; Dr. J. S. Ward, Life and Casualty Insurance Company; Roy F. Williams, Williams Printing Company; George S. Davis, Arcade Post Office; Robert S. King, Post Office; Fletcher L. Williams, Williams Printing Company; M. N. Young, Real Estate: Dr. John S. Cayce, Physician: J. C. Lawson, Moving and Storage; Neely Porch, J. S. Reeves & Co.; Harvey Herbert, T. L. Herbert & Co.; Greg Baker, Post Office; J. C. Tuley, Nashville Railway and Light Company; and J. E. Acuff, Life and Casualty Insurance Company. The above-named brethren will also act as a board of directors, of which Norman N. Davidson has been selected as president and Fletcher L. Williams as treasurer.

Building this Home to provide for these old people is a most commendable work. The Bible plainly and repeatedly commands that orphans and widows shall be taken care of. "And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me." (Matt. 25: 40.)

THE WORK IN TAMPA, FLA.

BY S. F. MORROW.

About eight weeks ago we stated in the Gospel Advocate that we had commenced work on a house of worship for the Gary congregation, located in northeast Tampa, on Thirty-sixth Street and Ninth Avenue. We are thankful to say the Lord has blessed our labors. A nice house, thirty by fifty feet, has been completed and seated. I have been for forty years helping to build houses of worship, and must say I have never seen brethren work more faithfully. Two weeks ago last Lord's day Brother Watson preached the first sermon in the house. I was with the new congregation in Seminole Heights, which resulted from the tent meeting held by Brother T. B. Thompson, a full account of which meeting will appear soon.

On the first Lord's day after the meeting closed we had seventy who met for what we call "Sunday school," which was a very encouraging start. Literature and songbooks were ordered at once from the Gospel Advocate Company. We were still worshiping under the tent, encouraged by good crowds and zealous brethren and sisters who want to worship as "it is written" in the Book of all books. We realized the need of a house. We made an appeal at prayer meeting, and in about thirty minutes we had fifteen hundred dollars pledged, and the house was bought before the following Lord's day. This was the best prayer-meeting collection I have known.

The good Lord has abundantly blessed our labors. Since January two new congregations have begun to worship in their own homes, which gives us three loyal congregations in Tampa. We hope and pray that they all may work together in unity and love and that several more congregations will soon be established in this fast-growing city.

Mrs. Morrow and I left Tampa last Tuesday for Dallas, Texas, to visit our daughter, Mrs. Lester M. North, and her daughter, Harriet. We found them well and delighted to see us and that we could be with them to attend the Hardeman meeting, which began on May 10 at the Pearl and Bryan Streets church of Christ. We left Tampa by boat for New Orleans, a distance of three hundred and ninety-five miles, and crossed the Gulf of Mexico the long way. I always loved water, but got enough on this trip, especially while I was so sick. I have always heard that being seasick was the worst form of sickness not to kill, and I now believe it. I asked the nurse what could be done, and he said that if I could see land I would get relief. The nearest point was one hundred and fifty miles; so I had to fight it out. I thought of the great apostle Paul, and thought more seriously than ever of the time when he was on that great, stormy sea fourteen days and nights. We were glad to turn our faces homeward to Nashville and to meet loved ones here and to mingle our voices together in praise to Him who doeth all things well.

NOTES FROM WEST TENNESSEE.

The thirtieth anniversary at Obion was rained out. It was a great disappointment to many, and especially a few who always attend to get a square meal—a sore disappointment to them. Brother L. K. Harding followed with a two-weeks' meeting, with fourteen or fifteen baptisms. The congregation at Obion has outgrown the house and is planning for improvements to the building.

The third Lord's day in May was the nineteenth anniversary at Rehoboth, and quite a large crowd was in attendance. Only eight present that were there nineteen years ago. I preached at night the following week until Wednesday night. They have eighty members at Rehoboth, and on Tuesday and Wednesday nights the whole congregation, except forty-two, was present. For fear I would lose the other half, I quit and came home.

On the fifth Lord's day in May I went to Kentucky Bend and preached, morning and evening, to a houseful of hearers. Just as I was winding up the evening sermon a little cloud arose in the east and it began to thunder and lighten. The audience got nervous; so I called for a song, sung two verses, and the crowd began to go-not come. When I dismissed the congregation, only a few came to say good-by; quite a number I have not seen since. However, I had two invitations to spend the night, but came on home, with no rain to fall on me. I thought of that great and dreadful day that is to come to all, where autos will not take the multitude to a place of safety. Why are so many people afraid of death? If prepared to die, it is only passing out of pain, sorrow, grief, and death into joy, peace, and happiness. For this I am striving day by day. Not only am I striving to be saved myself, but to get others to obey the gospel and be faithful until death. The promise made to all who will do this is "a crown of life." Man's origin, mission, and destiny as taught in the Bible are discredited by so many people in this age. The devil is using all his forces to overthrow the Bible and destroy the hope of a future life. If hope of a future life can be banished from the human heart, it will turn this old world into a veritable hell and make a demon of every man and woman. For me, I shall still believe the Bible is the word of God; that God created me and tells me how to live in this world in order to have peace in the next. If it shall finally prove to be true that I sprang from a tadpole, ape, or monkey, I will lose nothing after death. So there is a safe side to the evolution question; and inasmuch as our future happiness all depends upon our being on the safe side, why, then, not cast all speculations to the moles and bats and accept and contend for that which is not only safe, but infallibly safe?

After an examination by a diagnostician, the report was not as favorable as I would like for it to be. He advised an operation of the stomach, but not to my acceptance. He said I had a fighting chance without an operation, and I told him I would fight it out on that chance. So many have written to me desiring to know the nature of my trouble that I give the above for the benefit of those who are interested in me and my work. While able to go, I shall continue to preach to sinners and strive to live a devoted life in God's service; and when the time comes for me to go, I hope to be prepared to enter that beautiful city of gold. Pray for me and mine.

ASSISTANCE FOR QUEBECK, TENN.

Since last report the congregation at Pelham, Tenn., through Brother Polk Sims, sends five dollars to assist in building a meetinghouse at Quebeck, and Sister Houston Dudley, of Nashville, Tenn., sends twenty-five dollars for the same purpose.

Brother H. T. King held a mission meeting at Quebeck and started the work. Sister J. Claude Martin, of Nashville, kindly donated an excellent lot, well located, with the restrictive clause in the deed. The brethren at Quebeck are few and poor and are unable to build without assistance. A meetinghouse would be a great asset to the work and would be a great help in firmly establishing the congregation and increasing its membership.

The Gospel Advocate is glad to assist Sister Martin in this good work. We suggest that several strong congregations make some substantial contributions. Any contributions, great or small, will be thankfully received and appreciated. Address all communications to Mrs. J. Claude Martin, 2314 West End Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

BE THE BEST.

If you can't be the pine on the top of the hill, Be a scrub in the valley—but be
The best little scrub by the side of the rill;
Be a bush if you can't be the tree.

If you can't be a bush, be a bit of the grass,
And some highway happier make.
If you can't be a "muskie," then just be the bass,
But the liveliest bass in the lake.

We can't all be captains; some have to be crew; There's something for all of us here; There's work to be done, and we've all got to do Our part in a way that's sincere.

If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail;
If you can't be the sun, be a star;
It isn't by size that you win or you fail.
Be the best, whatever you are.

TAYLOR-NICHOL DEBATE.

BY J. L. HINES.

A religious debate took place at Monticello, Ky., between H. B. Taylor (Missionary Baptist) and C. R. Nichol (Christian), for four days, beginning on May 5. Many of our readers know these men. H. B. Taylor, as a polemic, is highly honored among the Baptists. C. R. Nichol is a forceful speaker, a logical reasoner, a cultured and refined Christian gentleman. I followed both speakers carefully, and I shall try to give the arguments of each as accurately as possible.

The first proposition was as follows: "Missionary Baptist churches, to one of which I belong, are scriptural in doctrine and in practice." H. B. Taylor affirmed; C. R. Nichol denied.

In defining the terms of his proposition, Mr. Taylor said: "'Church' means an assembly of baptized believers. The word 'church' is always used in the local sense. 'Church' and 'kingdom' are not identical. 'Church' is a republic, while 'kingdom' is a monarchy. The kingdom is entered by the new birth, but the church is entered by baptism. Matt. 28: 18-20 was given to a Missionary Baptist church."

Brother Nichol showed that the word "church" is sometimes used in the general sense (Acts 9: 31) and that "church" and "kingdom" are synonymous expressions (Matt. 16: 19, 20), and said: "There was no Baptist Church on the earth until 1607, and the Missionary branch did not exist until 1832."

On the origin of the church, Mr. Taylor first made "the temple argument." (1) David prepared the material; (2) Solomon built the temple; (3) the sacrifice was offered; (4) then the Shekinah light came into it. (1) John the Baptist prepared the material; (2) Christ built the church; (3) the sacrifice (Christ) was offered; (4) then the Holy Spirit came into it.

Brother Nichol replied: "If David, Solomon, sacrifice, and light were types, of what or whom was Hiram, a heathen artisan (2 Chron. 2), a type? The temple was built and destroyed, rebuilt and destroyed, and built again and destroyed again—of what was that a type?" Taylor was pressed so hard on these points, with many others, that he forsook the temple argument altogether after the first session of the debate. Mr. Taylor never attempted to locate the origin of the church, or the Baptist Church, any more than to say that it was set up before the death of Christ. "Kingdom" to him meant "the world" sometimes, "the whole house of Israel" at other times, and quite often the millennial kingdom. He was driven from place to place like a pebble before a giant wave of the sea.

In the matter of election, Mr. Taylor subscribes to the "Philadelphia Confession of Faith." His main proof text in support of election as taught by the Baptists was Rom. 8: 29, 30. He declared emphatically that some were predestined to eternal life from the beginning, and some to eternal damnation, and that the number is fixed. Brother Nichol answered his argument on Rom. 8: 29, 30 with the last clause, "them he also glorified"—past tense. At this junction Taylor was asked: "Do nonelect babies ever die?" In every speech this question was propounded, and it was the last sentence of Brother Nichol's closing address, but Taylor made no attempt to answer it.

In discussing the question of depravity, Mr. Taylor declared that all are born sinners, "fathered by the devil and of the same moral nature." When asked where the spirit of the babe came from, he answered, "From the parents, by the law of nature;" but when shown that God formed the "spirit within man," he attempted to cancel that passage by another which says, "God forms the body in the womb," and asked, "Is the body holy?" This was met by an argument on Rom. 12: 1, 2 and a declaration, supported by scripture and logical reasoning, that both the spirit and body of the infant are holy. Brother

Nichol asked: "If father and mother are regenerated, will their offspring be like them or not?" Mr. Taylor replied: "The wiggle-tail is not like its parents-mosquito." Brother Nichol asked: "Inasmuch as all are born sinners, according to Baptist doctrine, what becomes of the infant who dies?" Mr. Taylor replied: "The Adamic sin was atoned for by Christ on the cross, and all infants who die are regenerated and saved." Mr. Taylor said: "The mind, affections, will, the inner manthe whole man comes from his parents." He further said, "There is a big viper and a little viper," and cited Matt. 3: 7. "Therefore," said Mr. Nichol, "according to my opponent, the adult is a big snake and the infant is a little snake; but Christ took away the Adamic sin for all, and allows some to grow to sin, then damns them because of said sin, and at the same time knows they cannot help it. That is the God of Baptists. But, Mr. Taylor, do nonelect babies die?"

On repentance, faith, and baptism, Mr. Taylor followed the line of argument usually followed by Baptists. Brother Nichol said: "If repentance comes before faith, as Baptists teach, there is confusion in heaven; for the angels rejoice when one repents, but God is displeased without faith." "If saved by faith only, salvation is without grace (Rom. 5: 2) and without the power of God (Rom. 1: 16)." Mr. Taylor said, "If a child of God dies in willful obedience to God's plainest commands, he will be saved," and cited Moses as an example; but Brother Nichol showed that Moses repented. Taylor declared that God killed Moses for willful disobedience and took him to heaven. He said: "Repentance and faith are the only conditions of pardon." When asked if love is a condition, he said: "No, love is a fruit." Taylor argued that baptism is no part of the gospel; but when asked if there could be a Baptist Church without baptism, he had to admit there could not. "Therefore," declared Brother Nichol, "Baptist churches are made without the gospel."

Following are Brother Nichol's rebuttal arguments: (1) Believed, turned to the Lord. (Acts 11: 21.) (2) Believe, baptized, saved. (Mark 16: 16.) (3) Repent, turn, sins blotted out. (Acts 3: 19.) (4) Repent, baptized, remissions. (Acts 2: 38.) (1) Repent, baptized eis aphesin hamartion. (Acts 2: 38.) (2) Blood shed eis aphesin hamartion. (Matt. 26: 28.) Mr. Taylor said that "eis aphesin hamartion" in Acts 2: 38 means "because of," but, pressed hard, he never told what it means in Matt. 26: 28.

On the communion question, voting, associations, conventions, etc., Mr. Taylor made weaker arguments than lesser lights in the Baptist denomination.

The second proposition was: "The church of Christ, to which I belong, is scriptural in doctrine and in practice." C. R. Nichol affirmed; H. B. Taylor denied.

On the subject of origin, the seed argument was the first introduced, after the terms of the proposition had been defined. (Gen. 1; Luke 8; Acts 18: 8; 1 Cor. 1: 1, 2.) The usual arguments as to origin were used. Taylor contended, however, that Mark 9: 1 was fulfilled six days later on the mount of transfiguration. He was asked, "Who died?" but he kept silence.

As to doctrine, a list of scriptures, thirty in number, were quoted, to be let alone by Mr. Taylor. The eldership, deaconship, faith, repentance, baptism, character of lives, Lord's Supper, contribution, singing, and prayers were discussed; but about the best Taylor did was to read extracts from the Gospel Advocate, Mosheim, Dexter, Hort, Campbell, McGarvey, H. T. Anderson, and others. The people could see that he was fighting a man of straw of his own creation. Mr. Taylor said: "If Christ had not died, there would have been churches and salvation just the same." Brother Nichol showed that, if that be true, Christ died for naught, and that people could have been saved without the shedding of Christ's blood.

On weekly communion, Brother Nichol introduced Acts 14: 23, "every church" (kata ekklesia); Luke 8: 4, "every city" (kata polin); 1 Cor. 16: 2, "the week" (kata mian sabbaton). This was answered by saying: "The English does not say 'every week.'"

Mr. Taylor argued that the name "Christian" came from the heathens. Brother Nichol showed that the word from which we have "called" in Acts 11: 26 is "chrematizo," and is used in Acts 10: 22, "warned of God;" Heb. 8: 5, "warned of God;" Heb. 11: 7, "warned of God." Mr. Taylor's only reply was: "'Of God' is not in the English in Acts 11: 26."

Discussing apostasy, Brother Nichol showed that the devil was the first to preach the impossibility of apostasy. He then showed that Israel was called God's children (Deut. 14: 1), that twenty-three thousand fell in the wilderness on account of committing fornication (1 Cor. 10: 1-8), and that two were killed in the very act (Num. 25: 8). The following questions were asked Mr. Taylor: "Can a child of God lie?" "Can a child of God commit fornication?" "Can a child of God call his brother a fool?" "Can a child of God die while drunk?" The first three were answered in the affirmative; the last, in the negative. Brother Nichol then said that if one desired to live forever he should get Baptist religion, for by this system he would never die. As to one who calls his brother a fool, Brother Nichol reminded that Christ said he "shall be in danger of the hell of fire." (Matt. 5: 22.) Taylor argued that Christ was speaking of the law and that "hell of fire" there meant the judgment of the law. He read verse 21, skipped verse 22, and read verse 23. His attention was called to this several times, but he never read verse 22, where Christ said, "I say." Mr. Taylor was pressed so hard on apostasy that he made several wild assertions, such as these: "All Israel will be saved;" "No saved man can die in disobedience;" "Adam was under the law;" "If apostasy be true, no one would be safe in heaven;" "A saved man cannot be condemned, because he is not under law, but under grace." Brother Nichol illustrated the possibility of apostasy by a vine and branches. (John 15.) Mr. Taylor replied: "A good tree cannot bring forth corrupt fruit." "But, Mr. Taylor," said Brother Nichol, "you said a child of God could lie, commit fornication, etc., is that good fruit?"

I have never witnessed a greater victory for the truth, nor have I ever seen a man so confused as was H. B. Taylor. He said little about Greek; but in some debates before, when he knew his opponent did not know Greek, he used it much. He never used the term "Campbellite." The Methodists and Disciples of Monticello conceded victory to Brother Nichol, and they were astounded at Baptist doctrine as unveiled by him.

DAVID LIPSCOMB COLLEGE.

BY H. LEO BOLES.

We think it fair to the public in general and the great host of friends of David Lipscomb College in particular to say something in the press about this institution of learning. All the readers of the Gospel Advocate know something of the innate modesty of Brother David Lipscomb, who did so much for this college; the readers also will recall his humility and his abhorrence to boastfulness. The college is still imbued with his modest spirit and has always been very conservative in its claims, lest it be considered boastful about its merits. However, an institution which has rendered and is now giving such valuable service to the young people will be pardoned for calling attention to some of its merits.

It would be a lamentable condition for the cause of Christian education if David Lipscomb College did not exist. How much would be lost to the youth of our country! David Lipscomb College has a mission to fill and an important service to render; it may rightfully glory in its high mission and distinct service. It is giving a type of education that is peculiar to a large scope of country. The far-reaching quality of training that it is giving to its students makes it a blessing to humanity. The educational advantages which it furnishes are large contributions to character building.

The Bible is taught daily to every student. Each student is asked to prepare and recite at least one lesson per day in the Bible. The Bible is taught, not merely as a textbook, but as the word of God. It is taught by men who fear God and respect his word. The students are taught by example and precept to give due reverence to all the sacred truths of the Bible. No education is complete without a thorough knowledge of the Bible. Any system of education that ignores or blasphemes the Bible is a curse to young people. Parents who send their children to a school or college where their faith will be weakened or destroyed commit a crime against their children. It is the prayerful effort and devout hope of the faculty of David Lipscomb College to send the children back to the parents with a fuller knowledge of God's holy truth, a deeper piety of life, better prepared to honor God and serve humanity. It is the aim of the college to strengthen the moral fibers of their character as well as to develop the intellectual powers.

The college is better prepared to fill its mission now than it has ever been. It has a strong faculty of consecrated men and women who are teaching for the good that they can do, and not for the money which they can make out of teaching. The faculty list has nine members who hold the Master's degree from universities. Two members of the faculty have the M.A. degree from Vanderbilt University, one from Valparaiso University, one from Mercer University, three from Peabody College, one from the University of Texas, and one from Harvard University. One member of the faculty has completed his residence requirements of Ph.D. from Harvard. Two members of the faculty hold B.S. degrees-one from Peabody College and the other from the University of Chattanooga. The faculty with their degrees represent seven universities. This gives a variety, not only of degrees, but of methods of training. The above is mentioned that all may know that the faculty is as strong as can be had from educators who are loyal to the church of our Lord. Of course, none of the teachers claim to approach the lamented D. Lipscomb and J. A. Harding as Bible teachers; however, no stronger Bible teachers can be found in any college now than those who are teaching the Bible at David Lipscomb College.

The college has won an honorable position among educational institutions. It stands high among colleges of its rank. All of its work is fully accredited. It is a member of the Tennessee College Association and the American Association of Junior Colleges. As an educational institution, it has and justly merits the confidence and respect of the best educators in the country. It has earned an enviable name for its thoroughness of work and the high class of students that it sends out every year. It is difficult to go into a community throughout this section of the country where the influence of its students for good is not felt.

The college maintains an A-1-grade High School—that is, it gives the four years of high-school work. It has a strong high-school faculty. No high school in the State can offer such advantages as does the High School Department at David Lipscomb College. Its high-school students have the following advantages: They have the association of college students, access to college laboratories, access to college library, and are taught the Bible daily. There is also a grade department or grammar school connected with the High School Department. Students may enter in any grade and find class to suit.

In addition to the college work and high-school and grade work, the Fine Arts are taught. The college maintains the following departments in the Fine Arts: Expression, Spoken English, Piane, Art, Home Economics, Voice, Violin, Shorthand, and Typewriting. A student may take the regular literary work and, in addition, take one or more studies in these departments. The college is well equipped to render service that will give a complete education. It is coeducational. A girl is as safe at David Lipscomb College under the chaperonage of experienced Christian matrons and teachers as she would be at home. They are safer here than they would be in many homes.

The year which has just closed was one of the best in the history of the college. The enrollment was the largest in the history of the college. The capacity of the college was packed to its limit. I doubt if there was ever assembled a better student body for its size. The spirit of loyalty to the institution and its ideals was fine. There were fifty-three graduates in the College Department and twenty in the High School Department. We will be glad to give any further information to any who are interested in this great work. The new catalogue is now out and will be mailed to any address upon request. Address David Lipscomb College, Nashville, Tenn.

As the friends and patrons of David Lipscomb College who were present at the different exercises of the commencement programs, especially on alumni and commencement days, know, the college never experienced a more satisfactory and encouraging closing, and never one so largely attended. The promises and prospects for an increased future attendance were never so encouraging.

As president of the Board of Directors of David Lipscomb College, I am pleased to say that we are delighted with the progress that the college has made and with the work it is doing. We are glad to commend to fathers nad mothers and all young people who are of school age this college. Its management, discipline, work, and college activities are such that we feel that it will be a blessing to any student who will come and place himself under the influence of the college. Furthermore, we are glad that it can offer to the brotherhood and public such courses of training as will best qualify young people for the greatest usefulness in life. The study and practice of the Bible are daily emphasized as the most important work of life, and without which all learning and life are failures. To this end we teach all who come under our influence.

E. A. ELAM.

OUR MESSAGES

Two confessions at Lindsley Avenue, this city, last Lord's day.

- J. G. Allen, of Muskogee, Okla., will begin a meeting at Franklin, Ky., on Lord's day, June 21.
- C. H. Smithson, Tioga, Texas, June 1: "One was reclaimed yesterday at Shannon, Texas."

Louis Dasaro, of Tampa, Fla., will lecture for the C Street Church, Muskogee, Okla., June 17.

If we open the door to a doubt, the devil will have a messenger with bad news ready to come in.

- J. S. Daugherty, Rockdale, Texas, June 1: "Two excellent services at Teague, Texas, yesterday. One at Fairfield in the afternoon."
- A. G. Freed preached at Foster Street, this city, last Sunday. Brother Freed will begin his summer's evangelistic work with a meeting at Mayfield, Ky., next Lord's day.

Wanted—In the hill country of Georgia, good board in Christian family, near a church of Christ, for two ladies and thirteen-year-old boy. Must be reasonable. 2101 Oak Street, Jacksonville, Fla.

- J. Fairs Nichols, Fancy Farm, Ky., June 1: "The fifth Lord's day in May was a splendid day for the church at Birmingham, Ky. I had an excellent hearing. Please note change in my address."
- R. C. White and Elmo Phillips began a strictly mission meeting at Hartford, Ky., June 7. There are only four or five members there, and they not meeting, but it is hoped to establish a true church.
- M. D. Baumer, Carthage, Tenn., June 1: "We had a good day yesterday, with one by baptism and thirty-six dollars raised for missions for Stephen D. Eckstein, E. E. Shoulders, and Brother Lawyer."
- C. C. McQuiddy, Alma, Ark., June 3: "P. Taylor, Tipton, Okla., gave a great lesson at the Park Hill Church, Fort Smith, Ark., last Lord's-day morning. I spoke at the evening hour. One confessed her wrongs."
- F. L. Young, Paris, Texas, June 1: "Our meeting closed last night. We had large audiences, fine lessons, and several baptisms. Brother Wallace is a splendid gospel preacher. I shall conduct only a few meetings this summer."
- S. E. Templeton, Amarillo, Texas, June 4: "G. C. Brewer is in the first week of a very interesting meeting here. Two baptisms to date, two from the 'Christian Church,' and four restorations. The meeting will continue through June 14."

A fuss between brethren in the Lord is the devil's revival.

James E. Laird, Tulsa, Okla., June 1: "Two interesting services yesterday and last night, with one addition at the morning service. We are making great preparations for Wilbur H. White's meeting in September."

- J. A. Cullum, Lawton, Okla., June 2: "I am here in what promises to be a great meeting. Elvin Bost, of Fort Worth, Texas, is director of songs. I hope to be in Memphis the last half of June. Our work in Altus is growing."
- G. A. Dunn, Jr., Sheffield, Ala., June 2: "The twelvedays' meeting at Booneville, Miss., closed on Thursday night with the largest attendance they ever had. There were five additions, three coming from the Baptists. W. G. Aldridge led the singing."
- J. G. Malphurs, Blackwater, Mo., June 4: "The lawsuit filed by the digressive faction was to have been tried during the present term of court, but it has been indefinitely put off by transferring the case to another county. The 'digressives' left us in February and are meeting in a school building. We are getting along real well at the old church building, and expect to stay there."
- Emmett G. Creacy, Horse Cave, Ky., June 3: "I preached to two splendid audiences at Gamaliel, Ky., last Lord's day. Send names and addresses of friends and members of the church who are in Indianapolis, Ind., to J. C. Hazel, 35 North Colorado Street, and we will look them up. The meeting will begin on the second Sunday. The place of meeting, 4400 East Washington Street."
- J. L. Hines, Carlisle, Ky., June 3: "The meeting started last night, with the tent full and at least one hundred outside. Singing good, led by Max Ogden, of Winchester, Ky. Remember, there is not a member of the church of Christ in Carlisle, and no church sent me here; only the command, 'Go,' brought me here. Pray for the meeting." That is the way to do. Brethren, send to the support of Brother Hines. He has to eat.

Elders of the church of Christ at Old Hickory, Tenn.: "On Sunday, June 21, our meeting at the Powder Plant will begin under the big tent, with R. V. Cawthon doing the preaching and William G. Klingman leading the singing. This is a very important place just now, in view of the increasing activities of Du Pont people and the consequent increasing population, and we want to get the gospel of Christ before as many of them as possible. On Sunday, June 28, there will be dinner on the ground. Come that day sure, and bring your baskets and your friends, and enjoy a big day with us. Preaching each evening at half past seven o'clock."

- C. M. Pullias is in a meeting at Jackson, Miss.
- F. W. Smith began a meeting at Pikeville, Tenn., last Lord's day.
- R. V. Cawthon began a meeting at Green Street, this city, last Lord's day.
- Will J. Cullum preached at Charlotte Avenue, this city, last Lerd's day.
- H. C. Hale and J. Roy Vaughn began a mission meeting at Sebastopol, Miss., last Lord's day.
- J. T. Harris, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., began a meeting at Springfield, Tenn., last Lord's day.
- Jesse Owen, Lavergne, Tenn., advises us that I. A. Douthitt will begin a meeting at Lavergne next Lord's day.
- W. S. Moody preached for the Twelfth Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. There was one restoration.
- H. A. Dixon, Petersburg, Tenn., June 1: "I have some time open during this month and next for singing. Let any one desiring my services as song leader write me."
- T. E. Tatum, Jackson, Tenn., June 3: "The brethren worshiping at the courthouse in Jackson have begun the work of building a new church house."

Sister Annie C. Tuggle (colored) is now representing the Gospel Advocate among her people. We will appreciate any kindness that may be shown Sister Tuggle.

Alonzo Williams, Murray, Ky., June 2: "I am changing my address from Water Valley to Murray. G. A. Dunn, Sr., will begin a meeting here on June 21. Leon Holland will lead the singing."

C. B. Thomas, Flint, Mich., June 1: "I would be glad for any who may have relatives or friends living in or around this city, who might be interested in the church, to send me their names and addresses."

Charles C. Shockney preached at Lischey Avenue, this city, last Lord's day. Brother Shockney will begin a meeting with the New Shops congregation, this city, next Lord's day.

W. W. Bates, Cannon Creek, Tenn., June 1: "I began a meeting at Cartwright, Tenn., on May 17, which closed on May 31 with five baptisms and one restoration. I am in a meeting with the church here."

Will W. Slater, Irving, Texas, June 1: "I have just closed a week's song drill, preaching over Sunday, at Maud, Okla. I will begin a meeting at Drumright, Okla., to-night."

- T. P. Burt, Mineral Wells, Texas: "I am now located at 501 Northeast First Street, this city, and am open for meetings during a part of July, August, and all of September."
- M. O. Daley, Little Rock, Ark., June 1: "We are all looking forward to the time when we can get into the downtown meetinghouse. Two additions from the First Christian Church at last night's service."
- O. F. Shearer, Monticello, Ky., June 5: "There were one hundred and fifty-four in the Bible school last Lord's day. The debate between H. B. Taylor and C. R. Nichol, held here in May, was a success for the truth."
- Joe Copeland, Mangum, Okla., June 1: "Nine years ago I had a nervous breakdown that almost killed me, but I partly recovered. Now it has come again. I want the prayers of the brethren for my recovery again. It is urgent."
- H. D. Hasty, Johnsonville, Tenn., June 3: "We wish to thank our many friends for their kindness through the sickness and death of our father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hasty. They both were faithful until death and died in the Lord."
- W. B. West, Jr., Decherd, Tenn., June 4: "On the fourth Lord's day in May I was with the congregation at New Zion. Last Lord's day I was with the congregation at Beech Grove. The Lord willing, I will begin a meeting with this congregation on the third Lord's day in July."
- J. E. Wainwright, Corpus Christi, Texas, June 1: "We had four confessions and one identification at Taft, Texas. Much opposition, a hard fight, but a noble victory for the truth. Hundreds admitted a better understanding of the Lord's church nad his doctrine. V. O. Teddlie directed the singing."
- J. W. Brents, Topeka, Kan., June 2: "We recently closed a very interesting meeting here in Topeka.

Bethel Cooper, of Salem, Ark., led the singing. There were three additions. Many outsiders heard the sermons who had never attended before. After the first of July correspondents should address me at Henderson, Tenn."

- T. M. Karnes, Trenton, Tenn., June 2: "I am not personally acquainted with the Gospel Advocate staff, but love you for your works' sake, for your hard fight against sin and strong plea for the simple gospel. There is enough gospel in each copy of the Advocate to save the world, but sin lieth at the door."
- T. W. Phillips, Jr., Shreveport, La., June 2: "Sunday night brought to a close a glorious meeting for the church here, with ten additions. For the first time in the history of the congregation outsiders attended in large numbers. I wish to express my appreciation of the work being done by the Gospel Advocate."
- E. G. Cullum is in a splendid tent meeting with the Eleventh Street Church, this city. Brother Cullum is doing some excellent preaching. There have been fourteen baptisms, two restorations, and two to become identified with the congregation to date. Services every night at a quarter to eight o'clock.

James D. Smith, Cumberland City, Tenn., June 1: "We are still maintaining our Sunday school with much interest. On next Lord's day we will have our first service in our new meetinghouse. On the following Sunday our annual meeting is to begin, with A. S. Landis doing the preaching and J. J. Bedwell leading the song service."

Wanted—A young married man who is a good song leader and wants to change his location for one in the fastest-growing town on the east coast of Florida, who is willing to worship God "as it is written." We have openings for teachers in our schools now. Give reference. Also, carpenter or painter. Write to George J. Hipp, P. O. Box 773, Fort Pierce, Fla.

James M. Neill, Huntsville, Ala., May 30: "H. M. Phillips, of Nashville, Tenn., closed a successful meeting with the Merrimack church of Christ last night, with two baptized and three restored. I enjoy reading the Gospel Advocate and wish it could be in every home. Any church desiring my services as a preacher may address me at 303 A Street, this city."

- J. S. Scott, Erwin, Tenn., May 27: "I write to say that I am deeply sensible of the worth of your noble paper. I have been reading the Christian Standard, but I like the Gospel Advocate the best. I am going to make an effort to put your paper into more homes as I evangelize. I fully appreciate the bold stand you take against sectarianism, which some would call 'radicalism.'"
- S. H. Hall closed a splendid meeting with the North Birmingham Church, Birmingham, Ala., June 5, with eleven baptisms, three restored to fellowship, and two by statement. Brother Hall reports that Hugh A. Price is working with this congregation and that a fine work is being done. Brother Hall preached at Russell Street, this city, last Lord's day, with good audiences, one baptism, and one restored to fellowship.
- B. R. Durham, Lavaca, Ark., Jung 1: "We cannot think about doing without the Gospel Advocate. It comes every week just brimming full of good things. Do not ask me to tell you how to make it better, for I am not able to answer a question like that. The Advocate has a force that can withstand the attacks of denominationalism and with the sweet story of the cross lead sinners to life eternal."
- J. H. McBroom, Atlanta, Ga., June 3: "It was my pleasure to assist the Highland Park church of Christ, Montgomery, Ala., in a splendid meeting from April 26 to May 9. There were four baptisms and one by letter. The South Pryor Street church of Christ, Atlanta, Ga., is making wonderful progress in every way. We have just closed a great meeting. J. H. Hines, of Montgomery, Ala., assisted us. Nine by primary obedience, one from the Baptists, and four by letter. We have had around sixty additions in the last twelve months."

Willie Hunter, Tompkinsville, Ky., June 6: "The church work here moves on encouragingly, with good crowds and fine interest at every service. I and my family have just returned from a visit to our former home in Tennessee. I preached a few days at the old home church, assisted by D. H. Knight, with one baptized (my own daughter) and two others restored to the path of duty. On my way down there we stopped over on Saturday at Old Macedonia, in Clay County, where I preached to a large crowd at the decoration, with one added by confessing his sins. We are planning and working for a good meeting here in August, with G. C. Brewer to do the preaching."

Conducted for a half century by D. Lipscomb, E. G. Sewell, F. D. Srygley, and J. C. McQuiddy.

$2.00 a year, in advance; to Canada and foreign countries, $2.60, in advance.

Remittances will be at our risk when sent by express or post-office money order, in registered letter, or by draft payable to our order.

When changing your post-office address, tell us your old as well as your new address; otherwise two papers might be charged to you. Subscribers, after paying for their papers, will favor us by noting whether the date on the address label is changed, and, if it is not changed within a month, by writing to us. We are careful, but mistakes may occur or letters may be lost. Our rule is to change the date on the day payment is received; but the mechanical work of correcting and printing the list takes time, and payments even from near-by places may not appear the first week. Credits for payments from a distance may be even more delayed. Mistakes are easily rectified if prompt notice is given.

The date on your tab shows the time to which your subscription is paid. When money is received, the date will be changed, which will answer for a receipt. Two weeks' time must ordinarily occur from the time your remittance is sent before the tab on your paper is changed; if not changed by that time, notify us at once.

EDITORIAL

WORD FROM WASHINGTON.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

Last week I described the central, or main, building of the Capitol, reserving the description of the extensions of the building for another article; so this week I'll resume our tour of the Capitol where we quit last weekin Statuary Hall.

From that hall, by the south door under the arch, there is a long corridor leading to the Hall of Representatives. If Congress is in session, the doors of the Hall are guarded by doorkeepers, whose business it is to see that no one enters who has not "the rights of the floor." This legislative chamber, unsurpassed by any in the world, is an oblong room one hundred and thirty-nine feet long, ninetythree feet in width, and thirty-six feet in height, "the floor "occupied by the Representatives being one hundred and fifteen feet by sixty-seven feet. It is lighted by a ceiling of glass panels set in framework of iron, and on the panels are painted the arms of the various States. Against the south wall is the Speaker's desk of chiseled white marble, raised considerably above the floor, and below this are the desks of the clerks and official reporters, the latter keeping a stenographic report of everything said and done in the House, these reports to be published in the Congressional Record the next morning. The seats of the Representatives are arranged in concentric semicircles, with aisles radiating from the space in front of the Speaker's desk.

The Assistant Doorkeeper sits at the Speaker's left and the Sergeant at Arms on his right, he being the Speaker's policeman, the representative of the physical force that backs up the civil rule. On a marble pedestal at the right of the Speaker is the Mace, which the Sergeant at Arms must bear aloft in his hands when executing the commands of the Speaker to enforce order or to conduct a member to the bar of the House. The Mace is a bundle of ebony rods, bound with bands of silver, on its top a silver globe surmounted by a silver eagle. When occupying its pedestal, it signifies that the House is in session and under the Speaker's authority. When placed on the floor, it signifies that the House is in a committee of the whole. The Mace was adopted by the first Congress, and has been in use ever since.

Above, along the four sides of the Hall, are galleries, with seats in tiers, which are reached from the floor above, and from these galleries visitors may see and hear what is done and said in the hall below, though it is sometimes difficult to understand the proceedings, the House being a rather noisy group, with its more than four hundred members. The galleries are divided into sections for diplomats, for ladies, for friends of Congressmen, the press, and the public, the capacity of the galleries being about one thousand. Beneath the galleries, in the rear of the Representatives' seats, are cloak rooms, where members hang their hats and overcoats and smoke and talk, beyond the hubbub of the House.

On the right of the Speaker's desk hangs a full-length portrait of Washington, ordered by Congress in 1832, to commemorate the hundredth anniversary of his birth. To the left is a portrait of Lafayette, made in 1822. Over the main entrance to the Hall, opposite the Speaker's desk, is the famous clock whose hands are turned back the last day of the session, that it may not mark the time for adjournment before the business of the House is finished.

Across the southern end of this wing are the handsome retiring rooms of the Representatives, and at the end is the House lobby. These rooms are richly furnished and contain portraits of many former Speakers of the House. At the eastern front are the rooms of the Committee on Appropriations, the Ways and Means Committee, and the most northeastern room occupied by the Committee on Military Affairs. On this floor are also the Speaker's room and the offices of the clerks of the House.

The gallery may be reached by ascending either the east or the west staircase—handsome staircases of Tennessee marble. The distribution of the various sections of the gallery is indicated by labels over the doors. The section over the Speaker's desk is reserved for the press and is fitted with desks. At least half the gallery, with seats for five hundred persons, is open to the public, which may come and go at will. Certain rooms on this floor are devoted to House committees.

Going north from the rotunda, the Supreme Court room is on the right of the corridor in the central, or main. building. It was occupied by the Senate before the extensions were added to the main building, and has been the scene of many historic debates. It is a semicircular room, with a low-domed ceiling. A row of Ionic columns supporting a gallery extends across the room opposite the entrance, and in front of these columns are the chairs of the Justices of the Supreme Court, the chair of the Chief Justice in the center; on his right hand the Justice who has been longest in service, and beyond him the second, third, and fourth; and upon the left of the Chief Justice the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth, or youngest, in order of appointment. Along the wall are ranged busts of former Chief Justices. The clerk of the court is on the right and the marshal on the left of the Justices; and the tables for the Attorney-General, official reporters, stenographers, and counsel legally admitted to practice there occupy the semicircular bar in front. Outside the bar are seats for spectators, a limited number being admitted at a time. On the opposite side of the corridor is the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court.

Passing down the long corridor from the main building to the north, the Senate wing is reached, and in the center of that wing, surrounded on all sides by corridors, as is the Hall of Representatives, is the Senate Chamber. This room is one hundred and thirteen feet long, eighty feet wide, and thirty-six feet high, including the galleries, which extend around the room and will seat one thousand persons easily. The room is lighted by a glass-paneled ceiling, the panels of which are ornamented with symbolisms of war, peace, union, progress, the arts, sciences, and industries. The space under the galleries on the east, west, and south sides is partitioned into cloak rooms for the Senators, and on the north side is the Senate lobby.

The Vice President of the United States is the president or presiding officer of the Senate, who sits upon a platform within an arched niche in the center of the north side. At his right is the Sergeant at Arms, and at his left the Assistant Doorkeeper. In front of him is the desk of the Senate clerk, and on the floor of the arena are the tables of the official reporters. Each Senator has a seat and a single desk, and the seats and desks are arranged in concentric rows, with aisles between radiating from the space in front of the official reporters. The desks are marked with silver plates bearing the occupants' names. The Committee on Rules assigns the seats at the beginning of a session of Congress, the members having the longer terms of service usually occupying the seats in front. In the Senate, as in the House, Democrats are seated on the right of the presiding officer, Republicans on the left. The gallery above the presiding officer's desk is reserved for the press, and facing him are the galleries reserved for the Diplomatic Corps and for the families of Senators. The first and second seats of the latter are reserved for the President and Vice President.

Opening on the corridors surrounding the Senate Chamber are various rooms. One is the President's room, set apart for the use of the President of the United States when at the Capitol, to which he goes in the closing hours of Congress to sign bills passed just before adjournment. It is a very handsome room, decorated with portraits of Washington and his first cabinet. In the center is the table on which Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation. Another notable room is the Marble Room, where Senators hold consultations and receive privileged guests. That room is constructed entirely of marble, its Corinthian columns being of Italian marble, the paneled walls of Tennessee marble, and the ceiling of marble from Vermont. There is also a Vice President's room, a public reception room, a District Committee room, all handsomely furnished and decorated, as well as rooms and offices occupied by clerks, sergeant at arms, and other

Two great stairways—one of Tennessee marble on the eastern side and one of white marble on the western side—lead to the gallery floor above.

In the Senate lobby are self-registering thermometers, barometers, wind indicators, etc., a branch of the United States Weather Service, where are recorded the phases of weather all over the country; and the House is provided with a similar weather service.

In the basement, which may be reached by one of the four great stairways in the corners of the extensions or by at elevator, are many committee rooms, handsomely decorated and frescoed—the room occupied by the Committee on Indian Affairs, Committee on Agriculture, Foreign Relations Committee, Territories Room, and others. On this floor, which is the ground floor of the building, being in a level with the esplanade on the east and the terrace or open court on the west, are the post offices of the House and Senate, a public restaurant, clerks' rooms, elaborate bathrooms for the members of Congress, and various other rooms and offices. A basement corridor extends from end to end of the Capitol, nearly seven hundred and fifty feet, reputed to be the longest passageway in any public building in the world.

In the sub-basement, which is not open to the public, are a machine shop, a fully-equipped carpenter shop, a paint shop, and rooms where various supplies are kept. An array of electrical supplies is always on hand, and the gardeners' tools are also stored in the sub-basement. On this floor is the elaborate machinery for heating and ventilating the Hall of Representatives and the Senate Chamber. Fresh air is drawn in from a remote part of the grounds, and its temperature and degree of dryness are regulated by machinery. A power plant five blocks away furnishes electrical power for the building.

Our Capitol, with its extensive grounds, its nearly two hundred rooms, its countless paintings, statues, sculptures, its ornamentations without and within, is a wonderful building that must be seen to be properly appreciated.

THE SIN OF ADDING TO OR TAKING FROM THE WORD OF GOD. No. 1.

BY E. A. ELAM.

It is frequently declared in the Old Testament, and as often in the New Testament, that nothing must be added to and nothing taken from the word of God.

Preachers and other teachers quote repeatedly these declarations, whether or not they adhere strictly to them.

But what is the sin of it? The sin of it is, it is rejection of the authority of God and of the blood of Christ; in the finality, it is rejection of God, of Christ, of the Holy Spirit, of the Bible, and of salvation.

Let us see that it is a rejection of God and his authority, or his right to govern man and to rule the world. If God has not this right, then his word—that is, his law—amounts to nothing.

Amid the indescribable and awe-inspiring scenes of Sinai, God first spoke the law to the people; he then wrote it with his own hand upon the tables of stone; Moses then told all the words of Jehovah and all the ordinances to the people, and by God's directions he wrote all these words—"all the words of Jehovah"—in "the book of the covenant." This done, Moses made the offerings specified; sprinkled the blood upon the altar; then he read "the book of the covenant" in the audience of the people, and they said: "All that Jehovah hath spoken will we do, and be obedient. And Moses took the blood," "and sprinkled both the book itself and all the people" (Heb. 9: 19), "and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which Jehovah hath made with you concerning all these words" (Ex. 24: 1-8).

In this way the law was made and sealed. God bound himself by "the blood of the covenant" to keep it—to fulfill its every promise, to bestow its every blessing, and to carry out its every detail. Behind it were his wisdom, his authority, his power, and his love. Moses repeated this from time to time during the remaining forty years he was with the people, and especially in his farewell address contained in Deuteronomy. He charged them at different times to add nothing to and to take nothing from, the word of God. For instance, he said:

And now, O Israel, hearken unto the statutes and unto the ordinances, which I teach you, to do them; that ye may live, and go in and possess the land which Jehovah, the God of your fathers, giveth you. Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish from it, that ye may keep the commandments of Jehovah your God which I command you. (Deut. 4: 1, 2.)

Again:

What thing soever I command you, that shall ye observe to do: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it. (Deut. 12: 32.)

The curses of God were pronounced upon the prophet or teacher who would speak a word presumptuously in God's name which he had not commanded, or would speak in the name of other gods. "That same prophet shall die." (Deut. 18: 20.) Furthermore, if a prophet or dreamer of dreams should do "a sign or a wonder, and the sign or the wonder come to pass"—that is, a miracle—in order to lead the people "after other gods" to serve.

them, no heed should be paid to that prophet. This God allowed in order to prove the people whether or not they would serve him with all the heart and soul. This prophet should be put to death, because he had spoken rebellion against God. (Deut. 13: 1-5.) Then to add to or to take from the word of God is presumption and rebellion.

The reason given why the people should not add anything to or take anything from the word of God is, "that ye may keep the commandments of Jehovah your God."

Should they add anything of their own wisdom to the word of God and keep that in addition, nothing they did would be obedience to God, because that would be placing their wisdom above God's wisdom; and that which they did of God's commandments would not be obedience to him, but obedience to the dictates of their own judgment, because they would be doing that which God says only in so far as their wisdom approved of what he says. The same would be true should they take anything from the commandments of God. For this reason it is said:

The secret things belong unto Jehovah our God; but the things that are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law.

No man, however great his learning or deep his piety, can know the secret things of God. Let all forever be impressed with the fact that the things which have been revealed have been made known for the express purpose "that we may do all the words" of God—that is, that we may obey God. Again, it is seen that this is the test. He who seeks after "the secret things" which belong to God and is not contented with the things which God has revealed has not purposed in his heart to implicitly obey God, but is seeking to appear wiser than God. He is seeking to know and to appear to teach that which man cannot know, which it is impossible to know.

We should know the history of Balaam-his place of residence, his love of "the hire of wrongdoing," his running riotously into error for hire, his teaching Balak to cast a stumblingblock before the children of Israel, his attempt to curse the people of God, his open rebellion against God, and his destruction. (Deut. 23: 4, 5; Josh. 24: 9; Neh. 13: 2; Mic. 6: 5; 2 Pet. 2: 15; Jude 11; Rev. 2: 14; Num. 31: 8.) By no means would I have any one like Balaam-covetous, designing against God's people, destitute of respect for God's will, and rebellious; but I do wish that not a few had as much sense as Balaam. He told Balak, the king of the Moabites, that he had no power at all to speak more or less than God had spoken (Num. 22: 38), and that if Balak would give him a house full of silver and gold he could not go beyond the word of God to do more or less (Num. 22: 18), or to do either good or bad of his own mind (Num. 24: 13). He did not say he would not do this, for he would have done so for money, and he tried to do so; but God changed his curses into blessings. He should have said in faithfulness to God that he would not, if he could have done so, go beyond the word of God to say and to do more or less. This is the true spirit of every servant of God.

No man has the ability, and certainly not the power, to speak more or less on any subject than God has spoken; hence, no man can do such a thing. I wish every man had sense enough to know this.

Many a man thinks he has God and an abundance of all things if he has money and goods. He relies on them, and boasts that he cares for no one. Lo, he has indeed a god who is called "mammon"—that is, money and goods, on which he sets all his heart—and this is the commonest idol in the world.—Martin Luther.

THE LORD'S-DAY WORSHIP. No. 4.

BY F. W. SMITH.

In the institution of the Lord's Supper, as a memorial of Christ's body and blood, we find that they sung a hymn before going out. The record says: "And when they had sung a hymn, they went out." (Matt. 26: 30.) This leads us to consider the praise or music made in connection with other acts of worship on the first day of the week when the disciples met to "break bread."

EXHORTATIONS TO PRAISE.

We will find, in the general instructions to Christians, the nature of the songs to be sung in worship to God, as follows: "Speaking one to another [marginal reading, "to yourselves"] in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody with your heart to the Lord." (Eph. 5: 19.) Again: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly; in all wisdom teaching and admonishing one another with psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts unto God." (Col. 3: 16.)

These passages settle the question as to the nature of the songs to be sung in praise to God—viz., spiritual—that is, in keeping with the nature and design of Christianity, in harmony with the Spirit of God, and such as will edify and minister grace to those who sing. Songs offered in praise to God are not to be judged merely by the tune or music to which the words are set, but by that which the words of the song teach. Many people are carried away by the music of a song without ever stopping to consider as to whether or not the words of the song are in harmony with the word of God, or as to whether or not the song edifies and ministers grace to the heart.

Many of the songs sung at religious services partake of "rag time" music that belongs strictly to the "jazz" age in which we are living. When we come together to worship God, whether in the assembly on the Lord's day or at any other time, such songs, and such only, as teach the truth, stir the deeper emotions of the soul, placing the affections on things above, should be sung.

THE SPIRIT IN WHICH WE SING.

Since singing spiritual songs, psalms, and hymns constitutes a part of the worship God has ordained, this part of the worship, as all others, must be rendered in "spirit and truth." But we cannot sing "in spirit" no matter how correctly the song may be worded, unless our souls are in the singing. There must be no cold formalism, simply the movement of tongue and lips; but the heart must be in it, else it is no worship at all that God will accept.

Singing for mere entertainment in religious services, no matter how artistically it may be done, does not come vithin one of the essentials of acceptable worship of God. To say, "The singing was beautiful," or "pleasing to the ear," may be all right in so far as that goes; but if it reached not, and failed to stir, the spiritual nature, Ifting the soul heavenward, it was simply mockery in the sight of God.

I would much prefer to join in with those whe sing from the heart with discordant voices and out of time than to mingle my voice with a professional choir of religious entertainers who simply sing to be heard of men. Unless there is the spirit of genuine devotion in our singing, we would better not sing at all. God calls for the heart in all we do as worship and service, to him; and unless we conform to his will in the matter, we cannot worship and serve him acceptably.

SINGING IN THE ASSEMBLY.

By the "assembly" is meant the gathering together on the first day of the week to "break bread" and perform other acts of worship ordained of God for that solemn occasion. Whatever enters into this worship by divine appointment is for the whole assembly of Christians, to be engaged in by all for mutual edification and that common participation involved in the "fellowship," at which time not anything can be done by proxy. We would as well have some one eat the bread and drink the wine or contribute money for us as to have some one sing for us. Singing may consist in the four parts—soprano, alto, tenor, and bass—and when one is singing either part, he is doing what is required—viz., singing. But if all sing but one part, soprano, that will be doing what is required. But it would not be fitting, nor, in my judgment, at all in keeping with the example given when the Supper was instituted, for just one to sing in the assembly on the Lord's day.

Solos, duets, and quartets are altogether permissible even in the use of religious songs, but such seem altogether out of place in connection with God's appointed worship on the Lord's day. Such singing has in it more of the element of entertainment and is greatly divorced from the common participation involved in the fellowship of the Lord's-day worship. Let us refrain from any and all efforts at entertainment on the solemn occasion of commemorating the death and suffering of our Lord.

BROTHER SRYGLEY'S WESTERN WORK.

Since last report the following contributions have been received to assist Brother Srygley in holding some missionary meetings in the West this summer: A. A. Mitchell, Como, Miss., $2.50; Mrs. John T. Underwood, Spruce Pine, Ala., $1; J. N. Owen, Nashville, Tenn., $10; Virginia Conway, Pineville, Ky., $2.50; T. M. Karnes, Trenton, Tenn., $2; H. B. West, Hopkinsville, Ky., $2; W. V. Davidson, Nashville, Tenn., $25; J. D. Smith, Glasgow, Ky., $5; J. N. Murdock, Petersburg, Tenn., $2.

Brother Srygley has touched a responsive chord in the hearts of many by consenting to enter upon missionary work of this kind. Great sections of these United States are almost wholly without the gospel. Why not send preachers into these sections to hold missionary meetings and establish new congregations?

The venerable John R. Williams, of West Tennessee, who is one of the strongest and soundest preachers in the ranks of Christian people and who is well-known to readers of the Gospel Advocate, says: "On account of my physical condition I can't do the work I desire to do, but out of my small income I can, to a small extent, help others in 'sowing the seed of the kingdom.' So I desire to have fellowship in this mission work." Brother Lee James, of West Point, Ga., says: "It is indeed a pleasure to have the opportunity of giving when we know that the full gospel of our Lord and Master will be preached."

Brother Srygley made a trip to the West last year and did much good. He was partially supported by contributions from readers of the Gospel Advocate. The call comes for him to return, and he has decided to respond. These places cannot support a preacher, yet they are crying for the gospel. Any one desiring to assist in sustaining Brother Srygley in this work may communicate with James A. Allen, Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

J. A. A.

There is no sort of wrong deed of which a man can bear the punishment alone. You cannot isolate yourself and say that the evil which is in you shall not spread. Men's lives are as thoroughly blended with each other as the air they breathe; evil spreads as necessarily as disease. Every sin causes suffering to others besides those who commit it.—George Eliot.

OPEN MEMBERSHIP.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

There has been much said lately in the Christian Standard on the above subject. Of course, there is no such thing mentioned in the New Testament. One can read that book all his life and never learn one thing on the subject. But it has been very thoroughly discussed in the Standard. The meaning of the term, "open membership," as discussed in the Standard, is the admission into the church of members who have never been scripturally baptized. Many of the Standard's brethren have grown so broad that they are willing to admit members into their churches on sprinkling or pouring for baptism, or, which is about the same, admit them into the church without anything which is even called baptism.

Brother John B. Cowden has recently written a tract on the subject of church membership which has made this unscriptural thing a very live issue in the Christian Standard. Brother Cowden seemed to think he had put the question up to his brethren in his tract in such a way that they could have all the glory and honor from the other sectarians without taking any responsibility upon themselves for the unscriptural practice. Cowden wanted to get the thing without assuming any responsibility. This is a cowardly way of getting the advantage of the Lord. Cowden's idea as advocated in his tract is not to admit the unimmersed into the church, but allow the Lord to do that, if he wants to, and they will record them not as church members, but only as "workers and worshipers." It seems to me that this is a distinction without a difference. If one is competent to do church work and worship, it seems to me he would be a member of the church. Brother Cowden has by his tract laid bare the fallacy of working and worshiping with these unbaptized people. He seemed to think that his brethren were so thoroughly converted to the practice of working and worshiping with these unbaptized people in their union meetings that they would be compelled to accept some theory of what they called "open membership;" so he published the tract, and seems to think he has ground upon which they all can unite and have all the benefits of "open membership" on a dodge of the question.

Brother Briney has been reviewing Brother Cowden's tract, and I must say he has done very well, considering that he was handicapped on the question of "working and worshiping" with the unbaptized. Give it to him, Brother Briney, as best you can with your inconsistent practice; for you will never be able to give him a "lick amiss," unless you strike at him and miss him, a thing you are liable to do with your handicap in your own practice of working in these union meetings, when you know that a majority of them have never been baptized. There is no danger of the would-be brave J. B. Briney coming out square against the practice of working and worshiping with the sectarians in their union meetings.

I have been a little amused at the way they would accidentally hit each other in their discussion over Brother Cowden's tract. Brother Briney walloped Brother Cowden around most unmercifully in his review of the Cowden tract, but Brother John was allowed to come back at the cld war horse in a recent issue of the Standard, in which he made the following remarks:

Furthermore, I maintain that the reception of church members is not only a disturbing tradition and nonessential, but is subversive of Christ as head of the church and membership in the same, or, at least, it displaces his addition of members in the minds of the people. If we can decide who are and who are not members of Christ's church, what is there left for him to do except to add those that we have decided are members? So it is not the silence of the Scriptures on the reception and record of church members that excludes it from the church today, but the trouble that it has caused, and the violence it does to the preëminence of Christ as head of the church, while the reception of the followers of Christ as workers and worshipers, for which Brother Briney asks me to give chapter and verse, does neither. We have welcomed all the followers of Christ to the work and worship of the church without doing violence to any principle of the Scriptures or giving offense to any one. Even one "after the straitest sect of our religion" as Brother Briney could have no scruples against receiving the unimmersed into the work and worship of the church, because Paul freely worshiped and worked with all the religious sects of his day. Furthermore, if it is found expedient on the grounds of having "everything in decency and order" to keep a record of them as workers and worshipers, this also may be done without violation of scriptural principle or offense to any one, and such a record will serve every practical need of the congregation.

The trouble with Brethren Cowden and Briney is that their practice of working and worshiping with the unbaptized in their union meetings has about convinced the world that neither of them has proper respect for the commands of Christ on what it takes to make a Christian. Neither is competent to teach the other the truth on this subject, because the practice of both in these union meetings has set aside the New Testament teaching on the conditions of salvation. I am like the man was when his wife was fighting a bear, while he was up on a joist of his cabin. He said: "This is one fight I have no interest in, as I do not care who whips." I do not care who whips in this fight, because they both need whipping for working and worshiping in these union meetings with people that they know have not obeyed the Lord, and they have their mouths closed so they cannot even tell the people what Christ and the apostles commanded them to do to be saved. The worst thing I see in this quotation from Cowden is his effort to get the apostle Paul in the same predicament by the statement that "Paul freely worshiped and worked with all the religious sects of his day." I cannot see how Brother Briney can deny this for Paul, because in his debates on the instrumental-music question he makes the same unwarranted charge against the apostles. Brother Briney said in his debate with me that the apostles continued right on in the temple after the day of Pentecost, worshiping with these infidel Jews, using the instruments of music of the temple. Hit him again, Brother John, on that point. I am sorry to see you try to get the apostle Paul in the same inconsistency you are both in on this subject, but I have no sympathy for your Brother Briney, because he ought to know better, because I myself taught him better not so long ago. Peter said to the Jews on Solomon's porch: "The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Servant Jesus; whom ye delivered up, and denied before the face of Pilate, when he had determined to release him. But ye denied the Holy and Righteous One, and asked for a murderer to be granted unto you. and killed the Prince of life; whom God raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses." (Acts 3: 13-15.) Notwithstanding this strong condemnatory language of the apostle Peter, Brother Briney argued with me that Peter and John went up to the temple to worship with these infidels, and used the instrument of music in the worship. I know there was no sense or reason in this, but this was Brother Briney's argument to sustain his apostolic example for the use of the instrument. Brother Cowden says: "Paul freely worshiped and worked with all of the religious sects of his day." Surely the brother has not studied carefully the history of Paul's life as given by Luke in the Acts of the Apostles. Paul and Silas went to Antioch of Pisidia, "and they went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and sat down." This was exactly what good, pious Christians would have done; but to say that they went there to work and worship with these infidel Jews is more than I can see in it. "And after the reading of the law and the prophets the rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, Brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on." If Paul had arose and said, "Brethren, I am enjoying your work and worship as Jews, and I have nothing to say in condemnation of your abrogated system of religion," I would be willing to very heartily indorse the statement of Brother Cowden that Paul worked and worshiped with all the sects of his day, if Paul had said that; but since he did no such thing, I am compelled to enter my protest against such an accusation against the great apostle to the Gentiles. Following this we have the first reported sermon that Paul preached, and it was very much like the one Stephen lost his life for preaching to the Jews with whom Brother Cowden says Paul worked and worshiped so agreeably. In this memorable speech of Paul, he said, among many other things: "Be it known unto you therefore, brethren, that through this man is proclaimed unto you remission of sins: and by him every one that believeth is justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." (Acts 13: 38, 39.) This does not look to me like Paul worked and worshiped with all the sects of his day. I am willing for Brethren Cowden and Briney to console each other over the fact that they are anybody's dog that will hunt with them, but I object to their effort to make people believe that Paul was any such man as they are on that point. Paul endured too much persecution for preaching the truth to those infidel Jews to have to lay under any such false

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible—the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

LOYALTY TO CHRIST.

BY J. N. ARMSTRONG.

We preachers "string out" in our preaching "conditions" of salvation, but after we have done our best it is all summed up in this one thing—"loyalty to Christ." There is no condition of salvation not included in this. It is not wrong to name the "conditions" as we often do it, and sometimes it simplifies matters and is very advantageous to an audience. But he that gets those "conditions" without vitally connecting the whole with Christ and without their being vitalized with the spirit of loyalty to our Lord fatally misses the mark. Nothing is chedience to God but that service prompted by loyalty to our Master. One may feed the poor and do only humane service, benevolent work; whereas another may do the same service, feed the poor, and do Christian service, obey Jehovah. (See 1 Cor. 13: 1-7.)

No one would be so cruel to the world as to want to diminish from the kind deeds done to humanity. The world is unkind enough. God forbids anything happening that would hurt this kindness or that would increase the cold and inconsiderate cruelty found on every street corner. Still, much of the kindness, benevolence, and needed service done to humanity is born of the earth, and is never obedience to Jehovah.

There is another kindness born of heaven; another service prompted by Him who died for sinners. This is the highest type of service possible to an individual of Adam's race. Comparatively speaking, there is not much of it in the world. There are not many hearts going about doing good because they love our Lord and because they make it their chief business to reproduce his life.

It is true, no doubt, that much of the kindness, unselfishness, and benevolence now in the world can be traced indirectly to Christ, our Lord. But those who do such service are so far away from Christ that he is the least of their thoughts. They do nothing "for the Lord's sake." The world is all the better for all such service, and a better place to live in, but such service could not be called loyalty to Christ.

The world is wicked, corrupt, and doomed, as all Bible students know. But O, what a world it would be, stripped of all the good brought into it by Christ Jesus, our blessed Lord! Could we this minute turn out of the world all the kindness, unselfishness, and goodness inspired directly and indirectly by the Man of Galilee and leave this cruel world just as it would be had Christ never come, what a revelation it would be even to us who love our Lord most, and how glad we should be to turn it back! Still, after attributing to our Lord's influence such credit and glory, we have to say there is but little real loyalty to our Christ. There are only a few hearts compared to the teeming millions of earth that are devotedly loyal to the Christ and who live "for the Lord's sake." Still, it is these few that keep the light burning. Otherwise it would go out forever.

Loyalty is invisible. Nobody ever saw loyalty itself. Loyalty connotes the feeling and sentiment that accompany allegiance to a sovereign or cause. It is devotion, unwavering devotion, to a superior or to a cause. It is loyalty that makes martyrs.

The fruit of loyalty is everywhere manifest. Jesus says: "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Again: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven."

(Matt. 7: 21.) Again: "If a man love me, he will keep my word." (John 14: 23.) "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." (Verse 21.) "Hereby know we love [loyalty], because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3: 16.) All of this means that it is vain for one to profess to be loyal to Christ until one reverences every command and every word of God as the word of God. One cannot even pray to God, unless one is glad to hear every word of God and anxious to obey from the heart every commandment of our Lord. This is the acid test of all loyalty to God.

We must not mistake, however, partial obedience for loyalty to Christ. There is, perhaps, no denomination in this country whose supporters are not taught some of the word of God and who do not obey parts of his teachingyea, who are not very zealous for parts of this teaching, while all the time they have a dislike, a distaste, even a despicable feeling toward some of the plain teaching of our Lord. Are they not loyal to their party rather than to Christ? Are they not accepting those parts of the word of God that suits them that they like, and that support their denomination and that constitute their "plea?" Is this loyalty to Christ? Where is the denomination that welcomes the teaching of the whole word of God, and that would delight in having "the word" in all of its beauty and effectiveness preached to its members? Such a delight would be incompatible with denominationalism.

Loyalty to Christ supports Christ, all of Christ, everything that belongs to Christ. It loves and espouses the whole cause of Christ, and is willing to lay down life in the interest of Christ. At Harding College we do not count him loyal who "hollows" and "whoops" for Harding College; but we call him loyal who supports in his life the ideals, policy, spirit, and service of the institution. So loyalty to Christ stands for and supports Christ—his ideals, his aims, his spirit, his every word. Can we truthfully say we are not partisans, but Christians—nonpartisan Christians?

It is so hard to live in a world so cursed as ours is with parties, factions, divisions, different schools of thought, cliques, clans, tribes, classes, preachers, and denominations, and keep oneself out of partyism. It is not easy to be zealously loyal to Him, only to Him. I think it would be true to say that even the best and most intelligent of Christ's people have not yet attained unto such liberty in Christ Jesus, although they know well no other goal is worthy of their efforts.

What I mean is this: Few hearts, if any, with all of our good intentions, have yet learned to love all the truth -rather, have learned to want all the truth. We love a part of the truth, only a part of it. To illustrate: I have had rather a rare experience as a representative of Christ. My work has led me into different parts of the country. I have lived among and served with God's children in seven different States of this country. I do not mean that I have only held meetings in these seven States, but that I have lived and made my home in seven different States. Mine has been a varied experience with God's children. In all of these places in which I have lived, I have found great servants of God, men and women who were loyal to God and who loved his cause. But in all of these sections of country I found one fault, common fault -namely, partiality in search for truth. In every place I have found that some of the plainest and among the most practical truths the Lord has ever taught had to be taught carefully, wisely, delicately, and on the installment plan, if they would receive it at all. In every one of these places it would have been easy to have trouble over the teaching of some plain truth, practical truth. We have never had this trouble; but we could have had it, had we not endeavored to be wise as serpents and harmless as doves. I have never lived in a section in which some brethren would not have rebelled against the teaching of plain and practical truth freely and fully taught; hence, Paul-like, had to feed them upon milk until able to take solid food, and it is a fact that some never become so able. Truly, we love parts of the truth.

I have found that in changing from one place to another that certain truth that would be received most freely and fully, truth concerning which we could teach all parts and on all sides of it in the old place, had to be taught delicately and sparingly in the new location. Yes, brethren, we are partisans in our love for God's truth. We are much inclined to love only the truth that lets us alone in our business or social life, and even in our religious life.

But whole-hearted loyalty to Christ seeks to know and love all the truth of Christ. It is willing to hear all the truth, and does not grow weary and tired of the teaching of truth, any truth, in Christ. Really, are we Christians—just Christians, nonpartisan Christians? Is our loyalty that of loyalty to Christ, or to our party?

TENNESSE ORPHAN HOME.

On June 1, 1924, children in the Home, 67. Since June 1, 1924, to the first day of June, 1925, 75 new children admitted and 95 children placed, and 34 children that were formerly placed returned to the Home, and some of them replaced. Daily average for the twelve months, 72 to 75. We have had no fatal sickness, but have had three operations for appendicitis, all troublesome tonsils removed, and the necessary dental work done. So far as is known, all children placed in family homes are congenial, contented, and happy. When that is not the case, they are returned to the Tennessee Orphan Home. The children know they have a home in the event those with whom they are placed are not satisfied with them; yet, at the same time, they try to make good wherever placed. Albert Pinkston is still in Pine Breeze Hospital, and writes that he is rapidly recovering from a serious case of pneumonia. When at the worst, Brother and Sister E. H. Hoover and others ministered to him. Myrtle Perrigo made such great improvement in the Nashville Hospital that Brother and Sister C. J. Osteen, Gainesville, Fla., took her back to their home, and have since adopted her. The two girls we sent to the Fanning Orphan School, the one to the State School for the Blind, and the one to the State School for Deaf and Dumb have all returned to the Home for the vacation period. We have cared for more little children under five years old than at any time heretofore, and this department is kept full to capacity. Many children come from bad environments and are undernourished; so it is interesting to see them come out and develop physically, mentally, and morally. Brother F. C. Sowell is doing a great work in teaching the Bible to the larger children. There are few, if any, Sunday schools that can show an equal number of children as well advanced in the knowledge of the Scriptures as the Tennessee Orphan Home children.

We trust that all the directors will arrange to be present at the meeting at the Home on Thursday, June 11. This meeting is for the purpose of electing directors for the ensuing year. At the last meeting of the directors it was decided to increase the Board of Directors from fourteen (the present number) to twenty directors, and get them distributed so their locations in the different sections will be a benefit to the Home; for they will be in position to advise and otherwise assist in handling the children, both in admitting them into the Home and the placing of them in suitable family homes, and can advise from time to time how children placed in family homes in their respective localities are being cared for. We have so many now placed out in family homes that it looks like it is going to be necessary to employ some suitable woman for the purpose of visiting the homes where children are placed and see how they are being cared for and trained.

SERMON OUTLINES

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION

A Book of Three Hundred New Sermon Outlines

BY A. J. BACHMAN.

Just the book for preachers, elders, deacons, Bibleclass teachers, and others that take public part in church services.

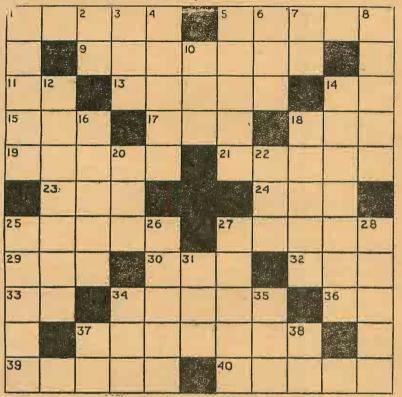

The book has three hundred sermon outlines and a helpful supplement containing funeral texts, marriage ceremonies, forms for church letters, and Hedge's "Rules" for debate.

A good book to use in your Lord's-day services, prayer meetings, and young people's meetings. Let the leader announce the subject, hand slips of paper containing different sections of the outline to the members who are to take part in the next meeting, requesting them to make a talk or read the scriptural references on that section of the outline. Or, let the leader put the outline on the blackboard, omitting the scriptural references, then ask the congregation to supply the correct scriptural references at the next meeting, and give reasons why they selected these references.

320 pages. Price, $1, postpaid. Address Gospel Advocate Company, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

BIBLE CROSS WORD PUZZI

THIS is a good puzzle to use as a starter when someone has heretofore held out against the puzzle craze. It is of average difficulty, not as easy as the very simple diagrams, but with no "tricks" or catchy definitions. The or catchy definitions. adept will be able to solve it in a very short time.

How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle © 1925 THE J.C.W. CO.

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

MONTANA MISSION WORK.

BY W. F. LEMMONS.

For three years or more I have been soliciting funds for the support of Brother Golphenee in Montana. This work has progressed from one small congregation, in 1919, to some six or seven small churches, ranging from four or five members to about thirty, some on the east end and some on the west end of the State. One congregation has been started in North Dakota and two or three in Wyoming as a result of our efforts.

I am now (May 29), in Nashville, Tenn., on my way to Montana for two months' mission work. From every quarter they have urged the necessity of my coming at this time (1) on account of conditions that have arisen and (2) that I may organize the field for more efficient work in the future. Brother Golphenee considers my coming so necessary that he volunteered to offer me fifty dollars a month of his own mission money and to work with his own hands while I do the work for which I am called there.

Surely, brethren, you will not allow Brother Golphenee to stop his work in that needy field where they are starving for the gospel and where but few, possibly not one out of every fifty thousand, have ever heard the unmixed truth. I want him to continue his work. Surely the churches will support me while we hold forth the word of life to the heathen. It will cost me over one hundred dollars to go and come, besides incidental expenses. You know what I ought to have for the two months' work.

When the many calls came to me, I gave up everything else dear to me that I might go to that field. I have strong faith in God. I believe in my brethren. There is no harder field and none more destitute of the truth than Montana. The church of Christ does not own a church house in the State. We raised nearly a thousand dollars to build a church of Christ in Montana, and the bank failed that it was deposited in and left us with no

If you desire fellowship in this work, please send your liberality to W. F. Lemmons, at Elmdale, Montana, or to the Gospel Advocate, Nashville, Tenn., during June and July. Brethren, pray for your humble servant in that field and for Brother Golphenee, that we may fight bravely and loyally for the truth, and all will be well.

Brother Lemmons is a faithful Christian and a splendid preacher. For some time he has taken much interest in the Montana work. It seems fitting that the call should now come that he himself go to Montana.

COX.

Mrs. Mary Ann Cox, of East Florence, Ala., died at 10:30 A.M. on March 11, 1925. Sister Cox was sev-March 11, 1925. Sister Cox was seventy-three years, six months, and nine days old. She obeyed the gospel early in life, being baptized by Brother L. A. Nichols, one of the old pioneer preachers of the gospel, and lived a faithful and consecrated Christian life until the end came. She was a Miss Green in girlhood, and was married to Mr. Cox in 1874. To this union four children were born. Her husband died thirty-one years ago, and three children also preceded her, leaving one daughter (Sister Renfro) and several grandchildren to mourn and several grandchildren to mourn her departure. But we sorrow not as those who have no hope. The writer spoke words of comfort at the funeral. J. H. Morris.

COX.

COX.

Elder Alfred Cox was born on October 14, 1840, and died at the home of his son, in Chatham, Miss., on December 11, 1924. aged eighty-four cember 11, 1924. He leaves his only son, John Cox, of Mississippi, and one daughter, Mrs. Whipple, of Louisiana, with grandchildren and greatgrandchildren, to mourn his death. He was an elder in the church of Christ for many years, and a more scriptural one would be hard to find. Elder Cox located in Lawrence County, Tenn., near Summertown, more than thirty years ago, and was instrumental in building up the church at that place, where he worshiped until nine years ago. Since that time he has been with his son in Mississippi. Brother Cox loved the church, and we feel that we have a just cause for grief. Our hands have been weakened by his going away. His children brought his body back to the old home to be buried by the side of his faithful wife. Funeral services were conducted by the writer in the house that he labored so hard to build, and where he worshiped for many years. May his loved ones be blessed with the good things of this life and finally a home with him in heaven.

SELLERS.

On April 27, 1925, at 6:30 P.M., the spirit of Brother L. S. Sellers left his body. Brother Sellers was born on September 2, 1854. In December, 1876, he was married to Miss Agnes Cates. To this union ten children were born, five of whom, with his wife, survive him. In 1882, Brother Sellers was "born again"—"born of water and of the Spirit." He and his wife were taptized at the same time, both going down into the water together. Having become obedient to that form of doctrine delivered unto us, he became thereby free from sin and became a servant of righteousness. It was my pleasure to know and became a servant of righteousness. It was my pleasure to know Brother Sellers only a short while, but during this time I was impressed with his godly life and devotion to the cause for which Jesus died. The writer conducted the funeral services in the building that is used by the church of Christ in the presence of a church of christ in the presence of a host of relatives and sympathizing friends. His body was laid to rest in the beautiful little cemetery at Little Sandy Ridge. The floral offerings were beautiful. May God's richest blessings rest upon the loved ones, and may they realize in this hour of afflic-tion that God is the only source of comfort and consolation.

STUBBLEFIELD.

STUBBLEFIELD.

Sister Sallie Stubblefield, wife of Brother J. R. Stubblefield, of Viola, Tenn., died in an infirmary in McMinnville, on February 1, 1925. She was buried at Viola on February 2. Brethren W. P. Willis and Frank Blue conducted the funeral services. She was born on July 21, 1862. Her parents died when she was small, leaving her and one brother, G. B. Campbell, who died several years ago. She obeyed the gospel of Christ in early life. She was married to Brother J. R. Stubblefield on December 31, 1890. Four sons and one daughter blessed this union. She lived to see all her children obey the gospel and start in the Christian life. Her sons are all worthy and upright gentlemen. Her daughter is an accomplished Christian lady, who, when her father was left so lonely, left school and came to him. So now she joins her father, as did her dear mother, in reading the Bible and praying to the Father of our Lord. I never knew a better-trained family than J. R. Stubblefield and Sallie Stubblefield have raised. She joined her husband in his work; in fact, she enjoyed having the gospel preached as much as he did in preaching it. Truly a great woman has finished her work on earth. My dear brother, I commend you to God and the word of his grace, which is able to build you up and give every needful thing. Your dear mother and children and the church need you. I am praying for each one.

TRAVIS.

TRAVIS.

J. W. Travis, who lived in Henderson, Tenn., for seventeen years, was called to the other side on February 6, 1925. Brother Travis left a wife and two children—Roy Travis, of Jackson, Tenn., and Mrs. Annie Davidson, who still lives at the old home in Henderson. Brother Travis was born on May 28, 1852, near Yorkville, Tenn., where he resided until coming to Henderson. Every person who knew Brother John Travis spoke of him as an honest, godly character. He was always greatly interested in church matters, and was a regular attendant until just a while before he died. He was stricken with paralysis J. W. Travis, who lived in Henderchurch matters, and was a regular attendant until just a while before he died. He was stricken with paralysis some five or six months before his death. This stroke left his health impaired until he was not able to do much more work. He was a carpenter by trade, and the best one in all the country. He did an honest day's work, had every piece to fit, and was never negligent of his duty. He reared his children, instilling into them the same degree of honesty and conscientious living that characterized himself. His influence was always for good. When petty quarrels and roots of bitterness were prevalent in a community, he always steered clear of that bitterness which often is felt in communities torn by strife. He was never partisan, but one of those men who always try to strew flowers in the pathway of humanity. A great number of people attended his funeral services, thus indicating their love and appreciation for such a godly man who had passed away. All that loving hands and yearning hearts could do was done in his last sickness. I had occasion to visit him many times, and was always impressed with that care and thoughtfulness on the part of family and friends for his welfare. It was also my privilege to speak at the funeral services. May the Lord bless the children and the good, noble wife, whose health is now rather impaired.

From the Brethren

Port Arthur, Texas, May 30.—The De Queen Park congregation is meeting in their new house now. New seats were installed last week. There were one hundred and nineteen in attendance at tht Bible classes on Sunday, with one hundred and fifty enrolled. We have eight classrooms and a large auditorium. Brother Joe W. White, of West Columbia, Texas, preached on Sunday and on Tuesday night of last week for us. Brother Findley preached at the new mission where our old house was moved to, in the afternoon, and at the new house at night. We had large crowds at all these services. The Lord is blessing us, and we are thankful. New members are coming to us almost every week. Peace and love prevail as from the beginning. This young congregation seems destined to grow into one of our large churches in a few years. Brother Wilbur H. White will do the preaching in our meeting in August.—L. B. Badgett.

Union, S. C., May 30.—I have just returned from Newport, N. C., where I was in a meeting which resulted in four baptisms and one from the Freewill Baptists who was satisfied with her baptism. On my return I stopped at Wilmington and preached to a fair audience. I found the members there determined and very hopeful. Wilmington is a fine little city for a good preacher to locate in. Opportunities there are unlimited. With the thirteen members to begin with, it will be a fine place to work. They have bought a well-located lot and hope to build on it. It is my opinion that any one having fellowship with this work will not be disappointed. In my absence from Union all services were carried on by local brethren. The first Sunday that I was away Brother Gallman preached at both services, and the next Sunday Brother Black preached both morning and evening. Brother Maness, our efficient song leader, taught the midweek Bible classes, and Brother Buckner taught my Sunday-morning class. It is such a pleasure to be associated with brethren who can and are willing to do such work.—Thomas H. Burton.

Danville, Ill., June 1.—I left home on this trip last Thursday, going first to Covington, Ind., where I visited Brother A. Ellmore, who has been so active in the Master's work, both as preacher and as a writer, for a great many years. He is nearing his eighty-seventh birthday. His bodily activity is badly impaired and his steps are few and tottering. But his noble wife, his children and grandchildren, and the congregation are trying to help in keeping him contented. I found him still praying earnestly for the success of the gospel of Christ.

I also baptized a fine young man who had been a Baptist, and a woman eighty-three years old who had been a Methodist. of the twenty-seven, twenty-one were baptized, four were restored, one placed membership, and one came from the Christian Church. The church at Alabama City is only about church at Alabama City is only about two years old, but they all seem to be of one mind and to be living in peace. The following preaching brethren were present: R. N. Moody, of Albertville, Ala.; Gardner Hall, of Anniston, Ala.; Brother Hardin, of Gadsden, Ala.; and Carl Smith, of Alabama City. Jake Hamilton, a fine young man, is one of the leaders. He is wide-awake and never tires. His Ford car belongs to the church, as he keeps it busy hauling those that want to hear the gospel. Brother Hooten is another one of the leaders. His "Ford" is also used in hauling those who want to hear the gospel. I made my home with Brother Hamilton and who want to hear the gospel. I made my home with Brother Hamilton and his mother. The song service, led by Brother Howard Broughton, was fine.

BIG DAY AT LEWISBURG, TENN. BY ANNIE C. TUGGLE.

Perhaps not in the history of Lewisburg has there been a more glorious time among the disciples of Christ than on Sunday, May 31, when Brother A. C. Holt, a young minister of the church of Christ, held a large audience spellbound as he broke unto them the words of eternal life.

During the morning session Brother Holt emphasized the fact that in the word of God there is power, and his whole sermon was full of life and interest from the beginning to the end. In the afternoon services he declared unto a waiting audience "the whole counsel of God." chose for his subject, "The God-given Treasures," and talked not at his hearers, nor over their heads, but directly with them. His whole purpose was to instruct and inspire his fellow beings.

Brother and Sister Black, of Nashville, Tenn., former residents of Lewisburg, were present, and other visitors from Nashville and near-by places.

Brother Ligget and Brother French, both elders in the congregation, made it quite pleasant for all who were present. The sisters supplied the multitude with plenty to eat.

When some one asked a missionary if he liked his work in Africa, he replied: "Do I like this work? No, my wife and I do not like dirt. We have reasonably refined sensibilities. do not like crawling into vile huts through goat refuse. We do not like association with ignorant, filthy, brutish people. But is a man to do nothing for Christ he does not like? God pity him, if not. Liking or disliking a thing has nothing to do with it. We have orders to 'Go,' and we go. Love constrains us." Such a love begets the strength to do the "all things."-Selected.

HARDEMAN ATTACKS INSTRU-MENTS.

BY J. A. A.

Brother N. B. Hardeman's prominent standing among the churches is largely due to his fidelity to God's word and to his boldness in declaring it. Well known and much admired, the very place he occupies in the affections of the brethren may be attributed to his courageous and unflinching love for the truth.

Harbert Avenue Church, The Memphis, Tenn., has just recently built a magnificent house, spending a huge sum of money that, in our personal opinion, is incompatible with the spirit of Him who was born in a stable. Hardeman was invited to hold the first meeting, and, in the fine house and before the élite crowd, he promptly attacked the use of instrumental music. The world would be better if we had more Hardemans. The Memphis Commercial Appeal, under a main heading, "Hardeman Attacks Use of Instruments," and a subheading, "Bible Doesn't Give Them a Place in the Church," carries the following:

Musical instruments in churches are modernist affairs, are without Biblical authority, and are evidences of presumption on the part of men, according to Evangelist N. B. Hardeman, who is in the midst of a revival service at the new Union Avenue church of Christ. Dr. Hardeman last night spoke to more than twelve hundred people who crowded into every seat in the church. Hundreds were

In discussing the subject of the evening sermon, "Why We Do Not Have Instrumental Music," Dr. Hardeman said the New Testament had nothing to say on the question, and that instrumental music was not used by Christians until in the seventh century of its existence. However, many branches of Christians do not yet use musical instruments, he explained. Important among these are the Greek Catholics. The minister told of visit-ing many Greek Catholic churches in the Near East.

"There was no hint or intimation

"There was no hint or intimation of musical instruments in the apostolic church," said Dr. Hardeman, "and it was not begun until after the year 600, when musical instruments began to appear in Catholic churches. were taken up by Protestant churches in the fifteenth century.

Dr. Hardeman based his objection to instrumental music on the fact that Testament, and that to add forms of worship to the methods outlined in the Bible was to invite the wrath of God. He challenged any one who is willing to defend the use of organs or other musical instruments in worship to musical instruments in worship to meet him in the auditorium for a dis-cussion of the issue, but said he knew there would be none to answer him, there would be none to answer him, as there is no divine authority.

For worship of God, Dr. Hardeman said the New Testament authorized the teaching of the gospel, prayer, observance of the Lord's Supper, contribution of means, and song. Man has no right to go beyond what Mothers can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve their daughters of those troubles they so often have. They know from experience the value of the Vegetable Compound in the treatment of these complaints and many, like Mrs. Holford, give it to their daughters.

God suggests as forms of worship, he said, and referred to the instruments used by David, which for a time were tolerated by God, but later were were tolerated by God, but later were condemned by him.

Those who go to David's time for an explanation of the use of musical instruments should be consistent, he suggested, by using incense and sacrificing animals. All these were done under the Mosaic law, but there is no authority for them in the New Testament.

"God cannot be worshiped in any way except that which has been authorized by God," said Dr. Hardeman.
"Other ways are vain. I do not care for man-made creeds and confessions. I accept the Bible only. It is God's, and I accept every word of it."

Many people attempt to defend the use of organs in churches by stating that the Bible does not forbid them. Dr. Hardeman said, in explanation. The speaker finds sufficient evidence that organs are displeasing to God in the fact that the Bible does not in-clude them in the forms of worship that are acceptable.

Dr. Hardeman finds favor with tun-Dr. Hardeman finds favor with tuning forks in sacred song service, because they are used only to give the key, or pitch, to the singers, and are not used as accompaniment during the song. If they were, it is the opinion of Dr. Hardeman that they would be a detriment, rather than a help, as they would make it more difficult to hear the words from which the worshipers draw their inspiration. shipers draw their inspiration.

Songbooks, containing notes, approved because notes are made in approved because notes are made in singing, and, therefore, are included in the Biblical plan of worship.

Dr. Hardeman finds just as much disobedience of the word of God in using musical instruments in worship as he would had Noah failed to use gopher wood in the building of the ark, as he was ordered by God to do. God also ordered, in the Mosaic time, that lambs be sacrificed. It would have been just as much an act in defiance of God to use some other aniance of God to use some other animal or to add other animals to the sacrifice as it is to use musical instruments in worship to-day, according to ments in worship to-day, according to Dr. Hardeman.

The speaker pointed out that many favor the use of musical instruments in worship because they will attract crowds or because people like them and enjoy them.

"We are not to follow our wishes or the desire of a congregational man

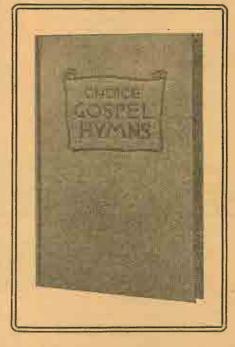

"We are not to follow our wishes or the desire of a congregational majority in such matters," he warned. "We are to do the will of God. We are to perform acts that will be a pleasure to him. The Christian church is not a democracy to do the will of the majority. It is a monarchy to do the will of Jesus Christ, who is King."

COMMENDATIONS OF BIBLE LESSON HELPS

- "I am delighted with your Lesson Helps, and regard them as the best I have examined." (C. W. Thompson.)
- "We have been using the Lesson Helps for fifteen years or more. I noticed the change, and, in my humble judgment, think it good." (W. G. Harrison.)
- "I have received sample copies of your Lesson Helps and examined them. I pro-nounce them as good, so far as I can think, as can be made." (Ira C. Moore.)
- "We are using your Sunday-school Lesson Helps at Fairfax church of Christ, this city, and think they are good. We have no criti-cism to offer." (M. P. Lowry.)
- "I am glad to commend the Bible Lesson Helps issued by the Gospel Advocate Com pany. They cannot fail of being helpful to any church using them." (C. A. Norred.)
- "The Quarterlies are fine. They should be a great help to the Bible student. I would be glad if Bible classes that do not now have them would take up their use." (R. P. Cuff.)
- "Your Quarterlies received and briefly examined. They show that much time and care have been exercised in their preparation. They are clear, scriptural, and to the point." (E. L. Whitaker.)
- "I think the Quarterlies very instructive and helpful in the study of the Scriptures both in the home and in the public assembly, and it will give me pleasure to commend them to all the faithful workers in my field of labor." (J. D. Jones.)
- "The Sunday-school literature that is published by the Gospel Advocate Company I can heartily recommend to any one who is in search for good helps on our Sunday-school lessons." (Robert E. Wright.)
- "A complete assertment of the Sunday-school literature published by the Gospel Advocate Company was sent me recently Having examined it carefully, I am glad to say I consider it excellent, and gladly com-mend it to congregations, teachers, and classes." (T. B. Larimore.)
- "As a whole, I think your Lesson Helps far surpass other literature of its kind. Here in this great mission field (Louisiana) where we have placed them, many comparisons have been made between them and both the denominational and our society brethren's literature, and at no time have your Lesson Helps come off second best." (C. C. McQuiddy.)
- "It is a pleasure to write a word of commendation of Brother Ellam's Notes on Bible School Lessons. They are the product of one who has given the greater part of his life to the study and teaching of God's Word. They are true to the Bible, comprehensive, and scholarly. If you love the truth, you will be delighted to study with him these wonderful lossons." (A. G. Freed.)
- "Brother E. A. Elam's Notes, as published annually, is, in my judgment, sorigtural and the best thing of its kind I have ever seen or that is published to-day. Everybody ought to have a copy and preserve it for study and reference. Brother Elam's twenty-five years' work, if every year should be bound in a separate volume, the twenty-five volumes would be a great addition to any library. (C. M. Pullias.)
- "At the Central church of Christ in Fort Worth we have been using in our Bible school Elam's Notes and other literature of his. For a great number of years the writer of this has felt that Brother Elam was one of the hest-prepared men in the brotherhood for the preparation of such literature. His Notes, in our best judgment, represent, or reflect, the best efforts he has ever made. Both as an elder of the congregation and as a teacher in our Bible School, I have very great pleasure in indorsing his Notes. To the extent that an expression of our views is of value, I assure you we are very pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkinson.)
- pleased to give it." (J. G. Wilkingon.)

 "I have used Elam's Quarterlies for years. They are superior to any that I have seen. Elam's Notes on Bible School Lessons are much fuller than they. They give the historical setting as to time and place that is needed and valuable. They give so many scriptural citations and references—Scriptural citations and references—Scripturas that introduce the text or corroborate the text—that the average student may know the geography, the history, and the full meaning of the lesson. They give so many lessons, deducted from the copious citations of Scriptures, that the student may know more perfectly God's will. For years I have used Peloubet's Select Notes. I compare them weekly. I do not hesitate to say that Elam's Notes are infinitely superior, if you want to know the Bible." (C. F. Holt.)

CURRENT COMMENT

By JAMES A. ALLEN

James E. Chessor, one of our very best correspondents, strikes at a glaring evil thus:

Ministers, presuming to represent Jesus Christ and to speak his words faithfully, have not uniformly painted sin in its true colors, but frequently have resorted to easy teaching to tickle the ears of a pleasure-loving audience. Christ came into the world to "call sinners to repentance," but oftentimes evangelists go into communities seething in wickedness only to bandy words about the "social problems confronting the church."

Present-day evils are not warned against as they should be. Dancing is on the increase, and in the most disgraceful and debauching forms. Sometimes Christians dance, with but feeble protest from pulpit or elders. The moving picture is a sinister evil that is habitually winked at. Money lovers and usurers occupy pews in fashionable churches where fawning pastors are careful not to tread upon their toes. Immodest dress, fornication, unscriptural divorce, card playing, parlor gambling, drunkenness, and many other crying evils go unwhipped of justice and unrebuked. Many preachers prefer to deal in generalities, to talk about God's boundless love and grace, the atoning blood, universal peace, disarmament, and social problems. They find few cases of downright wickedness.

We commend Brother Chessor's plainness and courage in speaking of these things. Our preaching brethren are largely to blame for the conditions that exist, in that they avoid speaking out against them as Brother Chessor has done. Preaching the gospel is personal, direct talk to persons, not vague and impersonal talk on everything generally and nothing in particular. Men must be saved individually, not in the aggregate.

John the Baptist rebuked King Herod pointedly and personally for his sin in taking his brother Philip's wife. He offered no pretty but vague talk on "social problems," but got down to facts and told Herod specifically what he was doing that was wrong. He lost his head by so doing, but it is not man's business to figure on consequences, as consequences belong to God. Jesus personally and specifically pointed out the wrongs of the scribes and Pharisees. He named their sin and added: "And ye have made void the word of God because of your tradition." (Matt. 15: 6.)

In language personal and direct that could not be misunderstood, Jesus said: "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father it is your will to do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and standeth not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father thereof. But because I say the truth, ye believe me not. Which of you convicteth me of sin? If I say truth, why do ye not believe me? He that is of God heareth the words of God: for this cause ye hear them not, because ye are not of God." (John 8: 44-47.) Those who imagine that the Spirit of Christ is manifested by compromising truth or accepting wrong rather than fight for the right have no proper conception of what the Spirit of Christ is. Many deceive themselves and others in thinking they are cultivating a lovable spirit when the love of truth is not in their hearts. Love makes a man loyal to the truth.

No amount of pretty talk on love and the milk of human kindness can mitigate the fact that when a preacher fails or refuses to tell the people to "repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," he fails or refuses to preach the gospel. We are trying to bring to the attention of the public that great religious denominations and great socalled preachers of the gospel, popular "pastors," who are members of the "Ministers' Alliance," are not telling sinners what the apostles command them to do to be saved. If we failed to so do, we would be as great or greater sinners than these so-called preachers of the gospel are. Jesus said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16: 15, 16.) Any preacher who tells people that they can be saved without becoming penitent, immersed believers need not waste his time talking pretty about "social problems," or any other kind of problems, as such preaching can never lead people to be Christians in this life or lead them to an "abundant entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" in the world to come.

"Rev." S. M. Lynam, in the Christian Sun, Richmond, Va., says:

Sometime ago Edwin Markham, the beloved American poet, sent a complete statement of his creed to the Universalist Leader. His creed interested us, and we pass it on:

"Here is the truth in a little creed,
Enough for all the roads we go;
In Love is all the law we need,
In Christ is all the God we know."

We are inclined to think that Markham's creed, lived up to, would bring a great deal of harmony into the world which men do not now know, and any creed that can bring us peace without and within is worth our pondering; for, after all, we are seeking for just that—peace without and within.

We agree "that Markham's creed, lived up to, would bring a great deal of harmony into the world which men do not now know," but not in the way men who wear the title of "Rev." seem to think. Their idea of love seems to be that a man must acquiesce sweetly in the teaching of anything by anybody, and that he must not lift his hand or raise his voice against any doctrine, however false or hurtful it may be.

Such an idea of what constitutes love is the exact reverse of the truth. Paul, in 1 Cor. 13, teaches that a man may preach with the eloquence of men or angels, that he may give all his goods to the poor, or may even make the capital sacrifice of giving his body to be burned, and yet be "profited nothing" by a failure to have that love that humbly and trustfully, in childlike faith, simply does what God commands. Obedience is the test that shows whether or not a man has love. Jesus said: "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." (John 14: 15.) Until a man is willing to forget his own preferences and to lose his own will in an earnest desire to do God's will, he does not love God. A preacher who can find it in his heart not to preach anything in the word of God need not deceive himself into thinking that he loves God.

People who are not willing to abide in "the things which are written" do not have the love of God in their hearts. When men are willing to preach and practice things for which God's word gives them no authority, they do not love God. When men walk in their own wisdom, do what they themselves prefer to do, and do "whatsoever is right in their own eyes," they love themselves, not God.

The man that loves God is the man that comes to God's word with no ideas or notions of his own. His only idea is to simply learn what God's will really is, as it is revealed in his word, and his only desire is to faithfully and zealously do what God wills for him to do.

What God wills for men to do is revealed and commanded in his word. It is not God's will that man do anything that is not commanded in his word. So, for a man to love God, he must preach and practice God's word.

No preacher can love his fellow men when he refuses to tell them what the Holy Spirit, through inspired men, commands them to do to be saved. Any preacher who encourages his fellow men to trifle with the destiny of their souls by substituting sprinkling for baptism certainly does not love them. A sickish sweetness of countenance, a pious gait in the walk, or a heavenly cadence in the tones of the voice are not manifestations of love. To sit sweetly still while others abuse and pervert the truth, which only has power to save, manifests the very opposite of love. Let us learn that love of God can be manifested only in strict obedience to God.

THE DILIGENCE OF THE ANTS.
BY JAMES E. CHESSOR.

"There are four things which are little upon the earth, but they are exceeding wise." (Read Prov. 30: 24-28.) There are four little creatures upon the earth-the ants, the conies, the locusts, and the spider-that are represented as possessing a wisdom that makes up for their weakness and insignificance. Though "little people," they are exceeding wise, and Solomon commends their wisdom to us. The ants manifest their prudence by providing their food in the summer, so that through the long winter months they suffer no privation. The conies are a feeble folk, yet they manage to make the strength of the rocks their own, and so find adequate protection against tempest and enemy. The locusts, unable to effect anything divided and scattered, make up for their individual weakness by mutual cooperation, and go forth "by bands." The spider takes advantage of its very insignificance and creeps unobserved into the palace of the king. The instinct of these wee little folk lifts them into great respectability, and we can learn of them. Let us consider first the lesson of the ants.

"The ants are a people not strong, yet they provide their food in the summer." "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise: which having no chief, overseer, or ruler, provideth her bread in the summer, and gathereth her food in harvest." (Prov. 6: 6-8.) The lesson of the ant is not difficult to understand; it is the hackneyed lesson of diligence. It stresses the importance of "doing a day's work in its day." There is not a more industrious or busy insect than the ant, not excepting even the little busy bee that "doth improve each shining hour." Throughout the hot, long summertime the ants are assiduous workers, bearing to their winter homes bits of sweets and food, toiling, now singly, now in groups whenever it becomes necessary to unite their strength. Unlike the honeybees, there is not a drone among them; unlike men, none are "born tired," none are shirkers, none are slackers. They locate their jar of sugar, form their line, and keep on the march until they have sufficient sweets stored up for winter. Solomon points the sluggard to the ant, and says: "Consider her ways, and be wise." Franklin repeated the lesson of the ant in various proverbs. The farmer in particular should be interested in the lesson of the ant. It comes home to him as few lessons can. Like the insect, he must provide his food in the summer, or be in want when winter comes, when snows fall. There is a time to sow and a time to reap, but he that fails to sow shall not reap. The motto of the ant is a simple one-Work!

Why should not the Christian worker profit by the wisdom of the ant? Why should not laborers in the Master's vineyard be ant-busy every day? Let us recall for a moment the parable of the laborers in the vineyard The householder went out "early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard." He did not wait until the sun was hot, but went out early, because he wanted a full day's work. Those hired at the early hour, presumably at six o'clock in the morning, bore the burden of the day and the scorching heat, working industriously until eventide. Also those who entered at the eleventh hour (five o'clock in the afternoon) worked faithfully until the close of day. The reward was for the worker, not the idler-for the laborer who had been ant-busy in the vineyard. If they had not worked while in the vineyard, they should not have received the shilling. They were not rewarded for length of service, but for willing service and diligence. The householder went out to hire laborers, he employed laborers, he rewarded laborers.

It is needless to say that Jesus wants the youthful worker as well as the aged saint in his service. He wants young men and young women to work in his harvest; laborers that can give their best years to advancing his kingdom; young lives that can the more easily be molded into exemplary Christian character. "Remember also thy Creator in the days of thy youth." "Let no man despise thy youth." To the unemployed youth Jesus is saying: "Why stand ye all the day idle?" To those willing to hire he is saying: "Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you." Indolence, dissipation, wild-oats sowing are excluded; work is required. There are at least two good reasons why young people should enter the vineyard. The first is that they may be able to accomplish more for the Lord-do a full day's work. The second is that they may have time to tone down and develop a more perfect character. The earlier the young reaper enters the harvest, the more sheaves he shall be able to reap, bind, and garner; the more souls he may win for Christ. Then no one, however early he may enter the church, has any more time than he needs to work upon the gross bulk of his personal character. It is no child's play to buffet the body and bring it into subjection, to bring every thought and imagination into captivity to the obedience of Christ. Moreover, it is not best, nor is it safe, to burn out the candle of one's life in wayward living and then blow the ashes into the Almighty's face. It is the divine will that youth shall consecrate its exuberant life to the divine service-all its faculties, powers, aspirations, activities. Then when old age comes after a life of consecrated diligence, there will be no remorse, and in the hour of death there will be no need for death-bed repentance.

Christians are taught to do good as they have opportunity. "So then, as we have opportunity, let us work that which is good toward all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of the faith." (Gal. 6: 10.) If we follow Christ, walk in his steps, we have no option as between idleness and work; we simply cannot be his disciple and refuse to be diligent in every good work. Jesus worked, and a servant is not above his Master. "We must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh when no man can work." (John 9: 4.) "Night," as here used, is the time when man's work is ever, when the period of his probation has ended. It is the night cometh, when no man can work." (John 9: 4.) "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in Sheol, whither thou goest." (Eccles. 9: 10.) The ant prepares for the dreary, dormant months of winter; we must make ready for impending night, whose shadows approach apace.

We ought to be diligent in laying up treasures in heaven. Here again is the wisdom of the ant. We heed the wisdom of the ant, not by laying up treasures "where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal" (for even the ant would not be commended if it laid up its store by the roadside, where the next beast would lick it up or the next wind sweep it away), but by laying them up in heaven. There is such a thing as laying up in store "a good foundation against the time to come."

Learn of the ant to be diligent. The harvest will pass, the summer will end. "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." (Jer. 8: 20.) Go to the ant, thou slothful Christian; learn of her ways, and be wise. Busy yourself in redeeming the time, because the days are evil.

A SHORT STAY IN BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

BY S. H. HALL.

Beginning on May 24, it was my pleasure to be with the North Birmingham congregation in a series of meetings, closing on Friday night, June 5. It was one of the most pleasant meetings I have ever been in. We had a fine hearing from start to finish, and eleven souls were baptized into Christ, three were restored to fellowship, and two names were added by statement.

Mrs. Hall was with me, and we made our home with Brother and Sister Bryan, who live just across the street from the church house. We have never lived in a better home. God's name is reverenced in this home. There are four children, and they are being brought up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." The oldest son, just starting into his "teens," is a member of the church.

During this meeting I was blessed by being thrown with Brethren John T. Lewis, Hugh A. Price, W. C. Graves, and H. F. Pendegrass, besides a number of other preachers who have been developed in the Birmingham work. Brother Price labors with the North Birmingham congregation, and he has built up a fine congregation at this place. Brother Lewis now works with the Woodlawn congregation, and you could find no congregation more wide-awake to the extension of the cause of our Lord. Brother Pendegrass has just moved from Houston, Texas, and begun work with the West End congregation, the mother church. This is the strongest congregation in numbers and money. They had just completed a lovely home, in which the man who labors with them lives. Brother Graves labors with the Lewisburg congregation and at other places, and publishes "The Truth in Love" twice a month. This is a little four-page paper that the Birmingham forces put out as free literature. It is so edited as to be suitable to hand out to any and all seekers after the truth. It is put in the hotels, drug stores, and other public places, and rolls are sent to the different congregations for free distribution. This is one of the best pieces of work that I have yet seen. Every town, city, and community should have such a paper. Let your local forces edit it. They know your needs and can give better the community that which will help it most. I have, for the last fifteen years, used the mimeograph and put out "The Friendly Visitor" where I have labored; but the brethren at Birmingham have a better work, in my judgment, and I want to see them make it grow as their field enlarges.

The Birmingham work stands as a monument to Brother John T. Lewis, who went there years ago and started with almost nothing, and has stayed with it and seen it grow until the power of the gospel is being seen and felt by thousands in that section. The one fine thing about the work is the way they develop preachers. I do not know how many they have, but it seemed like they were all looking in this direction. This is as it should be. The Pirmingham work abounds in missions in and around the city. The brethren that I have named not only see after the work in their respective local congregations, but go out to these missions, and send their young men whom they are encouraging to become teachers, and thus a wenderful work is being accomplished.

Brother Graves is one of our Atlanta boys, and I must say that I am very happy over the way he has grown and the work that he is doing. It seems that one of the most natural statements we have in the Bible is the following: "Greater joy have I none than this, to hear of my children walking in the truth." (3 John 4.) Brother Pendegrass is a great worker, and so is Hugh A. Price. These Birmingham brethren work together in perfect harmony and peace. I never saw better team work, and it is a joy to be with them.

AN INTERESTING LETTER AND WORTHY APPEAL.

BY E. A. ELAM.

The letter referred to is from our worthy and beloved brother, J. W. Shepherd, and the appeal is from the few earnest brethren and sisters in Richmond, Va.

Our readers have been informed to some extent of the beginning and progress of this work in Richmond. As in all such places, especially in large cities where the cause of the simple and pure worship of God, unmixed with the "fads and fancies" and inventions of man, this work has to be built up from the smallest beginning. But God teaches us not to "despise the day of small things."

Brother Shepherd says:

The work here is progressing nicely, and we hope it may go forward much more successfully when we get the house that I wrote you about. Things have not gone forward as rapidly as I had hoped when I wrote you. We made the Presbyterians an offer for this building, but they were slow in accepting it. They had a business meeting, however, on May 17, and accepted our proposition. We signed the papers of agreement last Monday. . . We are to make our first payment on July 1 of this year, and want to make it as large as possible. We have about one thousand dollars in sight, but we are anxious to make it much larger, if possible.

The appeal which appeared recently in the Gospel Advo-

The appeal which appeared recently in the Gospel Advocate brought us five dollars from Sister M. O. Daley, of Little Rock, Ark. She and her daughter were members of the Vinewood (Detroit, Mich.) congregation a year or more while I was there. Word from Vinewood tells me that I may expect them to stand by me in this effort. I have felt sure they would.

This letter puts before us the fact that this small congregation has bought this Presbyterian house and needs help to pay for it.

The Vinewood congregation, of Detroit, is a good one, which has the missionary spirit and cheerfully will help this worthy work; but it can do only its part. So our good brother, A. M. Burton, of Nashville, Tenn., who gladly has been helping all along to support the preaching of the word in Richmond, can do only his part. Others just now must rally to this effort to secure this house.

This is a worthy work in every way. (1) Preaching the simple and pure gospel of Christ, free from the theories and commandments of men, in Richmond is as much missionary as in some foreign field. (2) The few brethren there now need a house of their own in which they can carry on the work of the church and worship of God unmolested, under their own vine and fig tree. This will save the expense of paying rent on some out-of-the-way hall and the great inconvenience of having to remove at times from place to place. This is a sensible, practical, and righteous thing to do. Therefore, individuals and congregations should do something at once for this work.

Let it be suggested, then, that every congregation set a Lord's day soon on which to make a contribution for this purpose; pay for this house, bargained for at a very low estimate; and then be ready for some other such good work. This request would not be made if we did not know the great need of this work and that the appeal is a most worthy one. And let me say that when such an earnest, worthy appeal has been made to the churches of Christ they always respond—some more, some less; but thy respond.

Since Brother Shepherd has been at work about ten years in Detroit until his recent removal to Richmond, some of the younger members of the church throughout the South and readers of this paper may not be so well acquainted with the arduous, faithful, and heroic work he has done. Besides his work when a young man in our country, he did a good work in New Zealand and Australia, journeyed through England and Scotland, visiting many churches in these countries. He also visited many of the most prominent libraries in the world, principally for the purpose of obtaining what many scholars of worldwide fame say on baptism in order to make his most valuable book, entitled "Handbook on Baptism." Since his return to his native land he has been unceasingly at work for the great cause he loves. For a long time and until he removed to Detroit he was on the editorial staff of the Gospel Advocate, and all the old readers are acquainted with his most efficient work there and the Christlike spirit which characterized his writing in always contending "earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints."

He is now, as he has time from his work of building up the church wherever he may go, editing Brother Lipscomb's Commentary on the New Testament, which he hopes to begin to give to the printers in installments soon, and which will be a most valuable work.

There is not a man in the church who has been proved more faithful to the cause of Christ, and who, by a continued study of the Bible and through love for the truth, is better prepared for this work in Richmond.

Let us take this matter under consideration and appoint a day for the contribution, or let individuals send contributions to it.

Send contributions to J. W. Shepherd, 705 West Grace Street, Richmond, Va.

DEALING WITH THE DISORDERLY. BY L. E. CAPPENTER.

This is a very grave question, and one that we should let God settle for us by his word, keeping our personal feelings and preferences out of it. The sowing of discord, contention, and strife in the body of Christ is a terrible sin, even worse than that of Judas, who betrayed Christ. Yet many who claim to love God and the souls of men will do this very thing many times when their own selfish purposes and desires are involved. All efforts should be made as God directs to restore such offenders and to settle all troubles in the church by divine authority. God gives directions for this in Matt. 18; 15-18; Gal. 6: 1, 2; Matt. 5: 23, 24; James 5: 19, 20; and many other passages. These actions are then ratified in heaven (Matt. 18: 18), and must be regarded by all faithful Christians everywhere. When we have an irritation or infection in one member of our body and all efforts prove inadequate to restore it to normal conditions, we amputate that member to save the body. The body is more valuable than any one member. This principle holds good in the body of Christ; yet many times a whole church is retarded, torn to pieces, and many souls lost, because of the contentions of a disorderly member.

What sins do people have to commit to be scripturally withdrawn from? How far should we let them go before any action is taken? On this, as all other things, let God tell us. I give here a list of sins God says are ample reasons for withdrawal: Improper marriage relations (1 Cor. 5); fornication (1 Cor. 5: 9-11); covetousness, extortion, idolatry (you do not have to literally worship idols to be an idolater), reveling, drunkenness, walking disorderly; one who will not work and a busybody (2 Thess. 3: 11); one who causes divisions and occasions of stumbling (Rom, 16: 17); sowing discord (Prov. 6: 6-12); any personal sin not repented of (Matt. 18: 15-18; Matt. 5: 23); any contentious or factious person (Tit. 3: 10); one who abides not in the truth (2 John 9: 11; James 5: 19, 20; Gal. 1: 8, 9); also one who holds to or follows those in these sins and thus stands against the church in its actions (2 John 11). Unquestionably this is God's way of saving the disorderly, the church, and the world.

How shall we treat disorderly members? Let God tell what he thinks about it: Deliver such a one to Satan. (1 Cor. 5: 5.) Purge out the old leaven. (1 Cor. 5: 7.) Have no company with them. (1 Cor. 5: 9.) Do not eat with them. (1 Cor. 5: 11.) Put them away from you. (1 Cor. 5: 13.) Withdraw yourselves from them. (2 Thess. 3: 6.) "Note that man," "have no company with him." (2 Thess. 3: 14; Tit. 3: 10, 11.) To fail to do this is to disobey God, endanger the church, and, hence, the souls of all men. To encourage them in their way, bidding them Godspeed, is to be guilty with them. (2 John 10, 11.) What say you, brethren? Will we plead for a "Thus saith the Lord" in all things in our teachings, while in our practice we are afraid to obey him in these all-important matters? Israel had to clean up the camp, or all rested under a curse and were guilty with the one who did the wrong. This principle is true tc-day. There never was a brighter future for the church of Christ than now, and God can turn all curses into blessings for us if we but live and work in such a way as to enjoy his favor in all things.

SELF-RELIANCE.

Henry Ward Beecher used to tell this story of the way in which his teacher of mathematics taught him to depend upon himself.

"I was sent to the blackboard, and went, uncertain, full of whimpering.

"'That lesson must be learned,' said my teacher, in a very quiet tone, but with terrible intensity. All explanations and excuses he trod under foot with utter scornfulness. 'I want that problem; I don't want any reason why you haven't it,' he would say.

"'That's nothing to me; I want the lesson. You need not study it at all, or you may study it ten hours, just to suit yourself. I want that lesson.'

"It was tough for a green boy, but it seasoned me. In less than a month I had the most intense sense of intellectual independence and courage to defend my recitations.

"One day his cold, calm voice fell upon me in the midst of a demonstration, 'No!'

"I hesitated, and then went back to the beginning, and, reaching the same point again, 'No!' uttered in a tone of conviction barred my progress.

"'The next!' And I sat down in a red confusion.

"He, too, was stopped with 'No!' But he went right on and finished, and as he sat down was rewarded with, 'Very well.'

"'Why,' whimpered I, 'I recited it just as he did, and you said, 'No.'"

"" Why didn't you say "Yes" and stick to it? It is not enough to know your lesson; you must know that you know it. You have learned nothing until you are sure. If all the world says "No," your business is to say "Yes," and prove it." - Selected.

BROTHER SRYGLEY'S WESTERN WORK.

Since last report the following contributions to the support of the missionary meetings to be held by Brother Srygley in the West have been received: Mr. and Mrs. Beall, St. Elmo, Tenn., $5; Mrs. Willie B. Bruner, Fort Deposit, Ala., $1; S. L. Barker, Las Vegas, N. M., $1; W. B. London, Cornersville, Tenn., $5; W. L. Brown, Celina, Tenn., $5; church of Christ at Sugar Creek, near Gainesboro, Tenn., by Marion Harris, $10.

Brother P. C. Breeden, Terrell, Texas, under date of June 4, says: "I inclose post-office money order for five dollars for Brother Srygley for his Western missionary work. I hope he may do much good. I have heard him preach often, and consider him well suited to preach the gospel in places where they have never heard it.

Large sections of these United States constitute some of the greatest missionary fields in the world. More of the kind of work to be done on this missionary tour by Brother

Srygley should engage the attention of the churches. Every church should continually send an evangelist into fields of this kind, or send "once and again" to the support of one already there. All who wish to have a part in this missionary tour to be conducted by Brother Srygley may communicate with James A. Allen, Gospel Advocate, 110 Seventh Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

CHURCH HOUSE AT QUEBECK.

Sister Martin reports the following additional contributions to assist in building the meetinghouse at Quebeck, Tenn.: J. B. Duke, Washington, D. C., $15; Mrs. Vandyke, Alamo, Tenn., $2; Mrs. Sloan, Humboldt, Tenn., $2; Chapel Avenue church of Christ, Nashville, Tenn., by J. H. Sutton, $30.

Building this meetinghouse at Quebeck will greatly strengthen the cause in that community. Sometime ago, through the efforts of Sister Martin, Brother H. T. King went to Quebeck and conducted a mission meeting, in which much good was done, and efforts are now being made to put the work on a permanent basis. A meetinghouse is needed, but the few brethren there are not financially able to build. Sister Martin has given a splendid lot, well located, with the restrictive clause in the deed. Any one desiring to assist in this good work may address Mrs. J. Claude Martin, 2314 West End Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

NELSON COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the

American Standard Bible

By M. C. HAZARD, Ph.D.

A concordance is a word-finder—an index to the words in the Bible designed to increase your knowledge of what the Bible contains by enabling you to find easily any word, verse, or subject in the Bible.

This new Concordance, by Dr. M. C. Hazard, is the first Complete Concordance ever issued to the American Standard Version of the Bible-the most accurate version of the Holy Scriptures in the English language.

Five years have been occupied in its completion, during which time the editor and publishers have had constantly in mind the problems of the Bible student. Comparisons have been made with other concordances and numerous improvements have been introduced to make a work so accurate, so full, and so convenient that it will be an indispensable working tool in handling aright the word of truth.

COMMENTARY ON FIRST CORINTHIANS. No. 20.

BY C. E. W. DORRIS.

THE APOSTOLIC TRIALS. (Verses 10-13.)

Verse 10. We are fools, etc. In this and the three verses following the sad worldly lot of the apostles is set forth. They were called "fools" on account of their faith in Christ. The apostle repeats ironically the things which his enemies in Corinth said of him, and in the same spirit of irony he attributes to them the contrary qualities. The apostles selected a path of sorrow that made the world call them "fools," This they did for Christ's sake. Ye are wise in Christ. That is, in your imaginations you are wise in your religious speculations. We are weak. The apostles felt a human timidity in preaching the simple gospel in the face of the splendors of the Greek philosophy which was at Corinth. Ye are strong. In your own conceits. The false professors of Christianity branded the apostles with folly for exposing themselves to sufferings and death for Christ's sake. In their estimation the apostles were fools because they ran so many hazards for the sake of Christ. The wisdom of suffering Christians in hazarding all for Christ and laying down their lives in the cause of Christ has been always accounted weakness and folly by the men of the world.

11. Unto this present hour we both hunger, etc. Through a greater part of our ministry we suffer want for the needs of life; we are often in want of food, drink, and clothing, are buffeted (beaten), and, like the Lord, have no certain home. This, with his "working with" his "ewn hands" (verse 12), being written at Ephesus, where he abode near three years, shows that the apostle took no maintenance from the Ephesians any more than he had done from the Corinthians. This is no compliment to these churches; for, had they done their duty, he would not have suffered hunger and nakedness, in which the wretchedness of poverty consists, but would have been pientifully supplied with the ordinary necessaries of life. Had he devoted all his time in working at his trade of tentmaking, no doubt he could have procured for himself a sufficiency of convenient food and raiment. But as he devoted much of his time to preaching, his gains were small; and even these he shared with his helpers. (Acts 20: 34.) No wonder, then, the apostle was often in want. His argument is this: Who would then have been an apostle of Christ, even with all its spiritual honors and giories, who had not a soul filled with love both to God and man, and the fullest conviction of the reality of the doctrine he preached, and of that spiritual world in which alone he could expect rest? For a fuller account of Paul's sufferings, see 1 Cor. 11: 23-28; 2 Cor. 6: 3-5.

12. Labor, working with our own hands. The apostles were obliged to make tents for maintenance while they preached the gospel. This, no doubt, was the case in every place where no church had been formed. This he mentions perhaps to put the false teacher to shame, who probably not only demanded maintenance from the Corinthians, but was living in ease and luxury through their liberality to him. Possibly he also meant to criticize the Corinthians for thus supporting an unworthy character while letting the apostle of Christ and their father in the gospel suffer. Being reviled, we bless, etc. They did not return revilings, persecutions, defamation. but blessings given in return. This is a most amiable picture exhibited by the power of the grace of God through his servants. Man is naturally a proud creature, and his pride, as a rule, prompts him to avenge himself in whatever manner he can, and repay insult with insult. But Paul returned good for evil. He suffered all indignities for Christ's sake.

13. Being defamed. Blasphemed. Man is blasphemed when anything injurious is spoken of his person, character, or conduct. Blaspheming against men is anything by which they are injured in their persons, characters, or property. We are made as the filth of the earth, etc. That is, we are considered by the world as its sweepings, the scum; as refuse utterly worthless and repulsive. This shows the strong faith, devotion, and heroism of Paul, and the great debt we owe to such characters. Who can imagine a more glorious triumph of the truth than that which is gained under such trying circumstances? When Paul, who was in the eyes of the world more contemptible than graceful, appeared in a mean, perhaps tattered, dress before persons of the highest distinction, and commanded such attention, and made such deep impressions on the hearts of his hearers, he displayed the part of a hero. The apostles suffered in their bodies by hunger, nakedness, and stripes; in their names, by scandals and reproaches, being accounted "the filth of the world, and . . . the offscouring of all things." This word, say some, signifies that dirt and filth which scavengers rake together in the streets and carry off and throw away. Others think it an allusion to the sacrifices which the heathens used for the lustration of a city, who, when their city was under any great calamity, chose out some very base, vile, and nasty person, burnt him in a ditch, and cast his ashes into the sea as a sacrifice unto Neptune, saying: "Be thou a purgation for us." Such a base and vile esteem had the world for the apostles and messengers of Christ. It was not only at their first entrance upon their duty, when all the world was set against Christianity, that they met with this usage, but all along, from the first hour they began to preach the gospel even unto this "hour," did they meet with opposition and persecution. As long as there is a devil in hell and wicked men on earth, all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. But surely the dregs in this cup have in all ages been reserved for the ministers of Christ. One reason for this is, preaching the truth stirs up the rage of the evil. The humble behavior, the meek and patient carriage and demeanor of the apostles under all this load and burden of reproach and scorn, disgrace and shame, persecution and ill usage, should not be overlooked. "Being reviled, we bless" that is, when we meet with opprobrious words, we are so far from rendering evil for evil or railing for railing that we speak well of, and wish well to, the persons that are thus injurious to us. "Being persecuted" by them, "we suffer it" patiently from them; "being defamed" by any of them, "we entreat" God for them, to pity them. We also entreat them to pity themselves. To publish invectives against those, though the worst of men, who reproach and persecute us, is a modern piece of zeal, which the apostles and sufferers in the primitive times were not only little acquainted with, but perfect strangers to.

ABILENE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE.

BY BATSELL BAXTER, PRESIDENT.

Abilene Christian College closed its nineteenth session on the second day of June. At that time more than half of the rooms had already been reserved for next fall together with ex-students, gave the college one of the best together with ex-students, gave hte college one of the best gymnasiums in the State; the seniors presented the college with a gift costing more than three hundred dollars; and the students raised nearly seven hundred dollars to send one of their number to the mission fields in China. The enrollment in all departments, not counting the Correspondence and Extension Departments, was nearly seven hundred.

Abilene Christian College is a standard four-year college. The work given leads to the B.A. degree. This was the first college among our brethren to extend the work from junior to senior rank. This enables the student to finish in the school in which he starts his college work.

The college work is planned to provide for the needs of students in several special fields.

We do not maintain a "preacher factory." All students are required to study the Bible. However, in addition to the courses in Bible, there are courses in Christian Evidences, Philosophy, Bible Geography, Church History, History of Reformatory Movements, Authenticity of the Scriptures, and other courses which every preacher needs.

Many young men are turning to medicine. Christian College offers all of the work prescribed by medical colleges as premedical work. In addition, there are courses in Physiology and Anatomy, Entomology, Hygiene and Sanitation, and Comparative Anatomycourses which will be very valuable to a physician. All of this work receives full credit in the medical colleges.

The student who is preparing to take a standard law course can get either two or four years of work in Abilene Christian College that will be of great benefit in his work. All work will be credited in the law schools. Courses in History, Finances, Banking, General Economic Problems, Government, Economic History of the United States, American History and Government, and others are given that bear directly on this field.

For the student who is preparing to enter some scientific field, such as civil engineering, electrical engineering, scientific farming, etc., there are certain courses in science and mathematics which are given the first two years as a general foundation on which to base the special study which is to follow. Abilene Christian College offers these basic courses in Mathematics, Chemistry, Biology, German, French, etc., and these are given full credit when the student transfers to other schools.

Abilene Christian College is empowered by the Texas Department of Education to give the same certificates to teachers that are given by other standard colleges. These certificates are transferable to other States. Our students are making such a good record for the college that for the past two years we have not had enough students to fill the places that have called upon us for teachers.

All of the work mentioned above can be got in a Christian environment under the guidance of Christian instructors who are specially trained in their field. These men and women have time to devote personal attention to every student.

There are on our campus seven brick and stucco buildings, as follows: A three-story brick dormitory for young men, two three-story brick dormitories for young women, a brick administration building of twenty-six rooms with a library of eight thousand volumes, a two-story brick home for the president (also used as a home for young men), a brick gymnasium, and a stucco dining hall. All of these buildings are modern in every respect. In addition, there are a number of frame buildings awaiting replacement with permanent structures. All buildings are heated with steam or gas. All rooms in the dormitories have basins with hot and cold water.

THE UNION AVENUE MEETING.

BY JOHN ALLEN HUDSON.

The church of Christ has been backward in Memphis from its beginning, some twenty years ago. It has entered upon a new era. The meeting just closed marked an epoch.

The preparation for the meeting was extensive. We had provided adequate quarters by erecting the new building. We came out of an unfrequented section to one of the most prominent locations in the city of Memphis.

In the matter of publicity, we distributed ten thousand blotters in the downtown section; scattered ten thousand handbills; mailed five hundred special invitations; placed thirty-five discs the size of the rim for a spare tire on the rear of the Bee Line Taxicab Company's cars that were being driven constantly over the city; placed four hundred small cards as danglers on street-car straps; got permission to place signs on the announcing boards of the street cars on the front and rear; made speeches and invited out the combined police force of the city; addressed bodies of employees in different institutions; had a line of engagements for Brother Hardeman at the Mazda Grotto Luncheon Club, the Shrine Luncheon Club, the Civic Club, and other places; and, finally, the church did constant personal work.

To secure Brother Hardeman for the meeting, we had to beg his time from others to whom it had been promised. He was at his very best. He was freely discussed over the city. The daily papers carried briefs of his sermons. The Commercial Appeal "covered" the meeting through a special reporter. The sermons provoked much comment. The subjects, "Instrumental Music in the Worship" and "What the Jews Have Contributed to the World," were masterpieces. No question before the religious world was evaded. There was no temporizing. The modernists were classified with the infidels and flayed openly through press and pulpit. A challenge was issued for any man to undertake to defend as scriptural instrumental music in the worship. Although in a combined opposition meeting in Memphis, the "transgressives" kept quiet. They passed in silence the public challenge that was heralded to the whole city and the sections where the daily papers go.

The contributions for the three Sundays of the meeting totaled more than thirteen hundred dollars.

The auditorium of the new building seats twelve hundred people. Many times were people turned away, being unable to get into the building for standing room.

We had a number of visiting brethren during the meeting. Old friends of Brother Hardeman over the Tri-State territory came to hear him again. The preachers who visited the meeting were: Jesse P. Sewell, S. P. Pittman, Allen Phy, H. I. Copeland, C. A. Norred, Brother Woodey, and C. R. Nichol. Brother Archie Neal and Brother J. E. Black, of Memphis, cooperated.

Brother F. D. Smith conducted the song services. The congregational singing was the best.

There were one hundred and one additions. I do not know just now how many were baptized, but we certainly used the new baptistery.

GOOD BOOKS.

Many splendid books are published and handled at our store. Good religious books should be kept in every home. They have a refining influence on the young. Their educational value cannot be overestimated. The Gospel Advocate Company would like to help you educate your family by introducing good books into your library. Here is a list that should be in every home. How many of them have you?

- "Sermons," by J. W. McGarvey.
- "Eunice Loyd," by R. R. Moody.
- "Bible Readings," by Isaac Errett.
- "The Glorious Gospel," by Adcock.
- "The Querist's Drawer," by Errett.
- "Lands of the Bible," by McGarvey.
- "Gospel Sermons," by T. W. Brents.
- "The Gospel Preacher," by B. Franklin.
- "Letters and Sermons of T. B. Larimore."
- "Travels in Bible Lands," by A. T. Ritchie.
 "Seventy Years in Dixie," by F. D. Srygley.
- "Larimore and His Boys," by F. D. Srygley.
- "The Profitable Word," writings of J. C. McQuiddy.
- "Hardeman's Tabernacle Sermons," by N. B. Harde-
- "Nelson's Complete Concordance," by M. C. Hazard,

OUR MESSAGES

Many of those in the harness never wear out anything but the backing strap.

A. B. Lipscomb will preach at Lewisburg, Tenn., next Lord's day, morning and night.

There were seven confessions in F. B. Srygley's meeting at St. Elmo, Chattanooga, Tenn.

- S. P. Pittman is in a fine tent meeting at the corner of Main and Carroll Streets, Dallas, Texas.
- J. C. Hutchinson preached at Park Avenue, this city, last Lord's day, with two confessions and baptisms.
- Annie C. Tuggle, Nashville, Tenn.: "The Gospel Advocate is a success because it works on the inside of the 'inward man.'"

John C. Taylor, Mango, Fla., June 9: "I began here on Sunday, June 7. Interest is fine. I will be here till June 21, and then go to Plant City."

Married, at the bride's residence, on Lynnwood Avenue, Sunday, June 14, at 10 A.M., Dr. Guy Manning and Miss Julia Alice Hartman, A. B. Lipscomb officiating.

James E. Laird, Tulsa, Okla., June 8: "Two good services yesterday and last night, with one addition. Peace and harmony prevail and all have a mind to work."

W. E. Morgan, Clarksdale, Miss., June 5: "Jack Meyer and I are in the midst of a real mission meeting here. I have open time for a meeting somewhere the first half of July."

L. R. Wilson, Henderson, Tenn., June 9: "Our new house will be located on Shannon and Chester Streets, one block west and one south of the courthouse, where we now meet."

Mrs. Stella Odom, Statesville, Tenn.: "I appreciate the work the first-page editor of the Gospel Advocate is doing. It is fine. May God spare him a long time yet to teach the truth."

J. Leonard Jackson began a meeting at Soperton, Ga., last Sunday. Brother Jackson will be in meeting work until September, at which time he will return to his work in Lebanon.

Do your neighbor a favor by persuading him to subscribe for the Gospel Advocate, and have it come to his home every week. The Advocate has been the means of converting many.

Jake Hamilton, Alabama City, Ala., June 7: "We had two good audiences to-day to hear J. L. Ezell, of Birmingham. There were two additions—one confession and one from the Baptist Church."

For six subscribers we will give a copy of "Questions Answered," by Lipscomb and Sewell. This is one of the most valuable books ever published. It contains an encyclopedia of information.

D. W. Lundy, Ravenscroft, Tenn., June 8: "One lady made the good confession at our regular Lord's-day meeting yesterday and was baptized by the writer. Long live the good the Gospel Advocate is doing."

George W. Miller, Chandler, Okla., June 7: "I preached to-day at Stony Point Schoolhouse, near Cleveland, Okla. I will preach to-night at the High Grove Schoolhouse, five miles east. My next meeting will be at Foyil, Okla."

- J. L. Hines is in a splendid tent meeting at Carlisle, Ky. This is a missionary meeting, and Brother Hines is to be heartily commended for being willing to do work of this kind. A more extended report of this meeting will appear next week.
- T. W. Phillips, Jr., Shreveport, La., June 8: "Excellent crowds and two additions yesterday. We began a mission meeting at Bossier City, La., Sunday, under the auspices of the Fetzer Avenue Church here. Bossier City is adjacent to Shreveport."
- M. S. Mason, Springfield, Mo., June 3: "I am now at Monticello, Mo., in a good meeting which will continue till June 10. This vicinity is the scene of the work of some of the greatest pioneers of the Restoration. I go from here to Kerens, Texas, June 14-28."

T. P. Burt, Mineral Wells, Texas, June 11: "Last Lord's day I went to Loving, Texas, and preached morning and afternoon to small but very attentive audiences. They asked me to come again on the third Lord's day. I have some time open for protracted-meeting work."

Allen Phy, Brownsville, Tenn., June 11: "Our meeting at this place will begin on the first Sunday in July. James A. Salmons, of Franklin, Ky., will have charge of the song service, and the writer will do the preaching. We have preaching at 11 A.M. and 8 P.M. each Lord's day, Bible study at 10 A.M., and also a Bible class each Wednesday night."

J. S. Daugherty, Rockdale, Texas, June 8: "As a reward for our persistency and hard work at Benchley, Texas, the Lord granted us a gracious victory for the truth there yesterday. Two young men and two young ladies confessed their Savior and were buried with him in baptism in the afternoon. A large hearing greeted us at the evening hour."

Aruna Clark, East Lake, Chattanooga, Tenn., June 11, to F. B. Srygley: "I just want to state that the work you have done here in the two recent meetings is very much appreciated by many of the brethren. I heard one man say that you had done him more good than any one he ever heard, especially last Sunday afternoon. We are expecting great results to follow those two meetings. Our work moves on very well at Cowart Street."

J. E. Blansett, Dallas, Texas, June 13: "We have just closed our fourth meeting at the Hamilton Avenue mission, in Dallas. We had the best attendance that we have had in three years. There were two baptisms and one restoration from the digressive church. S. P. Pittman is doing excellent work in the meeting at the Peak and Main Streets church of Christ here this week. There have been seven baptisms to date, six by membership and restoration."

W. N. Abernathy, Westport, Tenn., June 10: "We had good audiences at Fairview and at Viewpoint last Lord's day, morning and night. B. S. Laws had a fine hearing at Williams Chapel, near Westport, on that day, at two services; also a good hearing at Anark at night. The fourth Lord's day in this month will be a busy day in this section. J. R. Stockard will preach at Williams Chapel and at Hilliard; Coleman Overby will conduct two services at Clarksburg; Brother Freed will begin at Huntingdon; and I go to Hickory Plains on that day."

D. S. Ligon, Clovis, New Mexico, June 9: "The church at Clovis had an all-day meeting on the third Sunday in May, with dinner on the ground and singing in the afternoon. One young man was baptized on the second Sunday night, and last Sunday one lady from Oklahoma came forward and identified herself with the church as a member of the one body. Last Sunday morning I preached at Farwell, Texas, and in the afternoon out at Oklahoma Lane, but back here at Clovis at night. I am to begin a meeting at Portales on the first Sunday in July."

Marion Harris, Gainesboro, Tenn., May 5: "I am now one among the oldest subscribers to the Gospel Advocate. I am nearing my seventy-seventh year. The Advocate has paid me a visit once a week for these many years, and I cannot afford to miss a copy, for it is getting better every year. And just so long as such men as Srygley, Elam, Boles, Smith, Hall, Allen, and others who write for the Advocate live the brotherhood may expect the Advocate to grow and get better and to be kept clean from all innovations of men. May God bless such men, and we trust and hope their lives will be spared many more years and that untold good will be accomplished by them."

Robert E. Wright, Bradentown, Fla., June 12: "The work here is doing well. We have had one confession and baptism since last report. Brethren passing through this part of the State are invited to meet and worship with the Leonard Street church of Christ, at the corner of Locust and Leonard Streets. Some of our brethren from Tennessee will make inquiry for the 'Christian Church,' and when they do so they will always be pointed to our 'transgressive' brethren. Inquire for the church of Christ, and then sometimes you will be pointed to the 'transgressive' brethren. There are two churches in Bradentown known as the church of Christ. One is known as the 'Central church of Christ,' or the 'Central Christian Church.' Sometimes they call it by one name and sometimes by the other, seeking to confuse the minds of the people. These brethren are our 'transgressive' brethren. The other church is the Leonard Street church of Christ, and they strive to build up churches on the New Testament order only. Preaching brethren, don't fail to teach the churches of Christ against the innovations of men everywhere you go."

- F. W. Smith is in a splendid meeting at Pikeville, Tenn.
- F. B. Srygley preached at Hillsboro, Tenn., last Lord's
- J. E. Bacigalupo preached at Fifth Street, this city, last Lord's day.
- B. F. Hart, Petersburg, Tenn., June 15: "I sure enjoy your articles."
- J. R. Stroop preached two excellent sermons for the Twelfth Avenue congregation last Lord's day, morning and evening.
- D. N. Barnett and E. J. Smith are to begin a discussion at Crowell, Texas, on June 23, on the method of Bible study.

Married, at the Lindsley Avenue Church, Nashville, Tenn., Thursday, June 11, Ralph Carter Bright and Flora D. Pursley, James A. Allen officiating.

- J. D. Boyd preached for the Twenty-second Avenue congregation, this city, last Lord's day, morning and night. Lytton Alley will preach for this congregation next Lord's day, morning and night.
- I. L. Brigance, Clarksville, Tenn., June 11: "I began a meeting here last Sunday. We are having a fine interest. One baptism up to the present. Prof. B. H. Murphy is leading the song service."

Vernon Rozar, Zolfo Springs, Fla., June 14: "Recently I preached twice in Athens (Tenn.), once at Niota, and three times twelve miles north of Athens. I baptized two young ladies while there."

- J. W. Dickson preached at Lischey Avenue, this city, last Lord's day, with one from the Methodists and one from the Presbyterians, both making the good confession and being baptized the same day.
- I. A. Douthitt, Sedalia, Ky., June 10: "I have just closed a good meeting at Lyles, Tenn. Eleven were baptized and two came back to the church. I am to begin a meeting at Lavergne, Tenn., June 14."

Ira Wommack, Sulphur, Okla., June 8: "My meeting with the brethren at Wirt, Okla., closed last night. The visible results were four restorations and eleven baptisms. Of the fifteen, twelve were heads of families."

- E. C. Coffman, Houston, Texas, June 8: "I closed my first year's work with the First Church yesterday. There were one hundred and nine additions from all sources during the year. The increase in other things was proportionate."
- S. M. Jones, Beamsville, Ontario, Canada: "There have appeared some very valuable articles in the Gospel Advocate from F. B. Srygley, F. W. Smith, and James A. Allen. May they continue to give no uncertain sound, even though the opposition be strong. The need for such articles is great."
- Ben F. Harding is in a splendid meeting with the Boscobel Street congregation, with three baptisms to date. The meeting is being conducted under a tent at the corner of Seventeenth Street and Shelby Avenue. William G. Klingman is leading the song service. Services every night this week at a quarter to eight o'clock.
- W. B. McPherson, Akron, Ohio, June 7: "I recently preached twice at Walnut Hill, near Dunmor, Ky. I was also at Drakesboro, Ky., and preached for them. On May 17 I baptized Mrs. Grigery at Bowling Green, Ky. From Bowling Green I came to Akron, where I have lived for five years. I expect to continue a good work in Akron. Pray for me."
- H. D. Jeffcoat, Ackerman, Miss., June 13: "John P. Lewis and Homer Dudley were at Dancy last Lord's day and are now at Stewart; H. C. Hale is at Duffee; and J. Roy Vaughn is with me in a tent meeting at Sebastopol, and we are having large crowds and much interest. Brethren Vaughn and Hale are to go with the tent to Sturgis to begin the third Sunday. We have to do much personal work in this field, but we are teaching them in their homes, on the street, in the shops, and in the tent."
- A. A. Godfrey, Los Angeles, Cal., May 31: "You will kindly pardon me, but I have read so often from your splendid pen that I desire to send you a few words of thanks. I want you to know that I appreciate above measure your most excellent teaching in the things that pertain to righteousness. Many times do I hand out the Gospel Advocate, pointing the reader to your writings. I love the church, I love righteousness, and I love you for your works' sake. May God bless you with many days yet to proclaim his preciousness."

- R. V. Cawthon is in a fine meeting with the Green Street congregation, this city. There have been two baptisms to date. Brother Cawthon preaches every afternoon and night this week at three o'clock and seven forty-five,
- H. C. Shoulders, superintendent of the Potter Orphan Home, Bowling Green, Ky., urges all friends of the Home to attend the home-coming to be held on the grounds on July 1. All are assured of a pleasant and profitable time.
- M. L. Moore, of Bowling Green, Ky., has just closed a most excellent meeting with the Chapel Avenue congregation, this city. Brother Moore is a strong and able preacher, beisdes being a clean, devout man, and he delivered a series of sermons that were interesting and instructive to a high degree. Nineteen were baptized, two reclaimed, and two from other congregations became identified with Chapel Avenue.
- W. F. Lemmons, Elmdale, Montana, June 9: "I am now at Elmdale, having reached this place on time, and began the first meeting of the two-months' mission work on Saturday night, and our crowds are good. Brother Golphenee, our missionary, lives here, and is conducting the song service. I will hold two meetings in this section, then go to Big Horn, and from there to Buffalo, in the west end of the State. Pray for us and for this work."
- J. G. Allen, Muskogee, Okla., June 8: "The C Street Church enjoyed two splendid services yesterday. We are expecting to begin a tent meeting in the Midland Valley Addition soon, and at its close to build a house on a lot that we have already paid for, then we will have another church in this city. Louis Dasaro, of Tampa, Fla., is to lecture at the C Street Church on Wednesday night, June 17, at which time we expect an overflow house. Brethren, pray for the work in Muskogee."

For three subscribers to the Gospel Advocate we will give a copy of either of the following books: "The Life of Raccoon John Smith;" "Smith-Lofton Debate;" "Srygley-Cayce Debate;" "Campbell on Baptism;" "Campbell and Owen Debate;" "Campbell and Purcell Debate;" "The Christian System," by A. Campbell; Volume II. or Volume III. of "Letters and Sermons of T. B. Larimore;" "Biographies and Sermons," by F. D. Srygley; "Folk-McQuiddy Discussion on the Plan of Salvation."

- F. C. Sowell, Columbia, Tenn., June 10: "The services and results were greatly enjoyed by the congregation at the First Church in Columbia on the first Lord's day in June. There were seven confessions and baptisms. In the afternoon we went to Centerville with twenty of the orphan children and had a fine Bible drill before a large crowd, and the church made a nice offering for the children. I preached at home at night and baptized the seven that made the confession at the morning service."
- F. L. Paisley, Evansville, Ind., June 8: "We closed here last night. A splendid young congregation, the majority of it from Kentucky and Tennessee. Several families from Nashville. I promised to return next year. I begin next in Toledo, Ohio. If you know of members there, send me their addresses, 228 Millard Avenue. If you know of members in Evansville, write J. B. Groves, 1210 South Government Street. The church here is growing. Several promised to subscribe for the Gospel Advocate." If they keep their promise, they will make more faithful members of the church.
- W. M. Oakley, Cookeville, Tenn., June 12: "I preached at Smyrna, this county, last Lord's day. I will be at Baxter next Lord's day. We will move and set up the tent in the fifteenth district next week, ready to begin a meeting on June 21. This will be the first of a series of tent meetings in this county this year. I will, the Lord willing, be at Boma on the first Lord's day in July; third Sunday, at Buffalo Valley; first Sunday in August, Martin's Creek. Leonard Kirk, of Hampshire, Tenn., Route 1, will join me in this work and will have charge of the song service. We need your love and prayers."

 W. S. Long, Jr., Shippensburg, Pa., June 11: "A ten-- need your love and prayers."

 W. S. Long, Jr., Shippensburg, Pa., June 11: "A tendays' meeting is soon to close with the church of Christ at Jacksonville, Pa., near this little city. This is a fine little congregation in the beautiful Cumberland Valley. New members are being added by finding homes here. It is an ideal place to live. I shall return to my work in Detroit, Mich., in a few days. C. M. Derryberry, of Columbia, Tenn., led the song service for me. He has been with me three years in that kind of work, and is the best colaborer I have ever had. Not only is he a good song leader, but a good teacher and a devoted Christian. Any church desiring his services in a meeting or to drill the church for a meeting in July or August may write him at Columbia, Tenn."

A FALSE CONCEPTION OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

BY F. W. SMITH.

The following appeared in the Nashville Tennessean of May 4:

Elder Stewart Kime, pastor of the Fatherland Street Church of Seventh-day Adventists, occupied the pulpit Saturday, preaching on the presence and power of the Holy Ghost in the church.

"Ignorance is displayed when we pray for the descent of the Holy Spirit," he said. "He is here now, and has of the Holy Spirit," he said. "He is here now, and has been since Jesus finished his work on earth. He declared it was expedient that he return to the Father, so that the Comforter could come. 'And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever.' (John 14: 16.)

"When the time foretold by the prophet Daniel had come, God sent his Son. 'He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?" (Rom. 8: 32.)

"When his earthly work was finished. Jesus ascended him also freely give us all things?" (Rom. 8: 52.)

"When his earthly work was finished, Jesus ascended to the courts above to plead his blood in our behalf, but sending the Holy Spirit, who is omnipresent to work with and through the church. If this mighty miracle-working power is not seen in the church to-day, it is because there is no contact with the dynamo of heaven."

In stating that Elder Kime has a false conception of the Holy Spirit, it is not meant to convey the idea that his conception is false in every particular; for, when he says, "Ignorance is displayed when we pray for the descent of the Holy Spirit," he states the truth. Especially is this true when men pray for the descent of the Spirit to enter immediately into the hearts of sinners to convert and save them.

Elder Kime gives as a reason for his statement, this: "He is here now, and has been since Jesus finished his work on earth." Yes, the Holy Spirit is here now to convert sinners in the same way that God and Christ are here-viz., in the word of truth. But it is not in this sense or way that Elder Kime thinks the Holy Spirit is here, for he says the Spirit is "omnipresent to work with and through the church."

As proof that Elder Kime is contending for a work of the Holy Spirit" with and through the church," separate and distinct from that exerted through the word of truth, we have only to note the following: "If this mighty miracle-working power is not seen in the church to-day, it is because there is no contact with the dynamo of heaven."

A FEW OBSERVATIONS.

- 1. The Elder's conception of the mission and work of the Holy Spirit as related to the redemption of man is the same as that of the majority of Christendom, and it renders powerless the word of God in the conversion of sinners. For, "if," as stated by Elder Kime, "this mighty miracle-working power is not seen in the church to-day, it is because there is no contact with the dynamo of heaven," of what possible use can be the word of God, and why should the gospel be preached?
- 2. The theory advanced by the Elder places the matter of conversion in the realm of the miraculous, for he speaks of the Spirit's "mighty miracle-working power." Now, the "miraculous" power of the Holy Spirit is purely physical, and the Elder's view of conversion reduces the matter to a physical process, thus eliminating the moral element from the power put forth to convert the soul.
- 3. Since the gospel of Jesus Christ is distinctly declared to be God's power unto salvation (Rom. 1: 16), and since the gospel is a thing to be preached, believed, and obeyed (Mark 16: 15, 16; 2 Thess. 1: 6-10; 1 Pet. 4: 17), we can readily see that the matter of conversion is a moral process, begun, carried on, and consummated by the moral power of the gospel of Jesus Christ. But if, as Elder Kime and the majority of the religious world claim, the condition of a sinner is such as to necessitate a direct, miraculous work of the Holy Spirit in order to quicken or make alive the sinner, then truly is the work of the Spirit in such a case as purely physical as that of raising Lazarus from the dead.
- 4. Since faith is the first element in the process of conversion, and since faith in the heart of the sinner is produced by the belief of the revealed word (Luke 8: 11, 12; Rom. 10: 17; John 17: 20), where is the necessity for Elder Kime's "mighty miracle-working power" of the Holy Spirit in the conversion of a sinner? Is it claimed that the sinner cannot believe until he is moved upon by this "mighty miracle-working power" of the Spirit? If so, why does the Holy Spirit fail or refuse to put forth this "mighty miracle-working power" upon the hearts of all sinners, instead of letting millions die and go to perdition because of a lack of faith?

THE DYNAMO OF HEAVEN.

Elder Kime refers to the "mighty miracle-working power" of the Spirit as "the dynamo of heaven," and says if this power "is not seen in the church to-day," that we are not in touch "with the dynamo of heaven." Now, Paul tells us that the gospel is God's dynamo (power) (Rom. 1: 16), and that it is such unto salvation. But, according to the Elder, when one comes in contact with the gospel of Jesus Christ, he has not come in touch with the "dynamo of heaven;" but, in order to do so, he must come in contact with the "mighty miracle-working power" of the Holy Spirit.

Has the Elder never read what the prophet Jeremiah has to say about the dynamic force of God's word? "Is not my word like fire? saith Jehovah; and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?" (Jer. 23: 29.) With all due respect for Elder Kime and all others of his way of thinking, we must dissent from the doctrine that without the "mighty miracle-working power" of the Holy Spirit no one can come in "contact with the dynamo of heaven."

This "mystical" conception of the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ has, in my judgment, done more to retard the spread of Christianity in the world than all other hindrances combined. Had the apostles of Jesus Christ preached such a doctrine, they could never have established Christianity in the world. Especially would they have made poor headway among the heathen Gentiles, whose religion was of the mystical and superstitious kind, handed down from generations. They would hardly have exchanged such an inherited religion for a similar kind with a Jewish stamp.

The propagation of such religious teaching as Elder Kime assigns to the Holy Spirit in the conversion of sinners is what keeps thousands from hearing and obeying the simple gospel of the Son of God. If I did not believe that the gospel, believed and obeyed, without the "mighty miracle-working power" of the Holy Spirit, would save men and women, then I would quit preaching it.

A SPLIT IN THE BROTHERHOOD.

BY F. B. SRYGLEY.

In a recent issue of the Christian Standard there is an article under the above caption by Edwin Errett. Brother Errett begins his article with the following remarks:

We hear much these days about a "split in the brother-hood." Those who launch new missionary enterprises and Those who launch new missionary enterprises and hood." Those who launch new missionary enterprises and those who support such enterprises are accused of causing a "split in the brotherhood." Very many splendid souls, dissatisfied with the conduct of the International Convention and the United Society and affiliated organizations, are unwilling to take any vigorous part in supporting new work, for the simple reason that they cannot abide the thought of a "split in the brotherhood."

I, too, have been hearing nearly all of my life about a "split in the brotherhood," and I am beginning to wonder what "the brotherhood" is, that it can be so easily "split." If the brotherhood is a divine thing, it ought not to be split unless the Bible authorizes it to be split; but if the Bible teaches that it ought to be split, then by all means let it be split. Moreover, I want to be at the splitting; and if there is anything I can do to help split it, count me in. I am willing to lend my support to anything that the Bible commands.

It will be noted that Brother Errett says: "Those who launch new missionary enterprises and those who support such enterprises are accused of causing a split in the brotherhood." Very likely they are guilty as accused. But what is that thing here called "the brotherhood?" It is not a local congregation, for the brother says: "Very many splendid souls, dissatisfied with the conduct of the International Convention and the United Society and affiliated organizations, are unwilling to take any vigorous part in supporting new work, for the simple reason that they cannot abide the thought of a 'split in the brotherhood." Is there any brotherhood in the New Testament larger than a local church and smaller than all Christians? If so, where can it be found? I would like to read about this brotherhood and see what the record says about splitting it. I am not concerned especially about but one split. I do not care how many splits may come, unless I should live in a way that would cause a split between me and the Lord. If a split must come between me and anything, I hope it may be between me and everything else, except between me and the Lord. If I am true to him and his word, he will never suffer a split between us, and this is the only split that could injure me in "the sweet by and by." I firmly believe that if Brother Errett will follow the Bible there will be a split between him and the International Convention, the United Society, and all these affiliated organizations, for nothing of the kind is found in the New Testament. It looks like Brother Errett has got himself into a condition where he has to split with something, but my advice to him is not to split with the word of God; for, if he does, then the split will be between him and the Lord, and I consider that very dangerous.

But what does the brother mean by "the brotherhood?" It cannot be the church of Christ; for the body of Christ is composed of all of his children, and I claim to be a humble child of God, but I do not belong to this brotherhood which is about to split. I know many men and women who have obeyed the gospel that know nothing of this brotherhood made up of "the International Convention and the United Society and affiliated organizations." These men and women all belong to the church of Christ; therefore, "the brotherhood" cannot be the church or body of Christ.

What is it, then, but a party in religion, a sectarian body? I know Brother Errett says he is opposed to all parties and sectarian bodies; but he must be mistaken, because here is something which he belongs to that is not the body of Christ, which he admits he has been accused of splitting. I am wondering if he counts Brother Book in this brotherhood. In the same paper from which I clipped the above quotation Brother Book has a short article which he calls "A Conversation on a Bible Theme," in which the following is found:

"You claim to speak where the Bible speaks, I believe? Then, why is it you do not baptize as the Bible authorizes you to baptize?"

I do.

"From what I know of your people, you dip a man only one time, and you know that the Bible emphatically teaches that it takes three dips to make one baptism."

In the first place, I desire to inform you that I have no people; I am simply a member of the body of Christ, and am a member of his church.

In this quotation from Brother W. H. Book, in the same paper where Brother Errett is lamenting a split in the brotherhood, the brother says: "I have no people; I am simply a member of the body of Christ, and am a member of his church." That has the true gospel ring, and I am wondering if Brother Errett counts Brother Book as one of "the brotherhood." I can say with all my heart just what Brother Book here says, and there will be no split with me if Brother Errett will quit that "brotherhood" and "have no people" and be "simply a member of the body of Christ." If he will obey Christ, he will be a member of his body, and then his brotherhood will be all Christians. I am wondering if Brother Book considers himself a member of that brotherhood which is about to split. If he does, did he become a member of it at the same time he became a member of the body of Christ? I am sure that Brother Book was baptized into the one body; and since this is true, did his baptism put him into "the brotherhood" which Brother Errett seems to think is about to split? If not, is not "the brotherhood" of which Brother Errett speaks a different thing from the one of which Brother Book says he is a member?

Brother Errett is deeply concerned over "the brotherhcod," just like any other denominationalist is over his denomination. Brother Errett's "brotherhood" seems to use about the same tactics that any other denomination would to keep its members in line. Hear the brother on this point:

A good part of the cry against "splitting the brother-hood" comes from the vicinity of those who advocate the United Society. There seem to be some who have the idea that it is necessary to promote loyalty to the International Convention and to the United Society if we are to avoid "splitting the brotherhood."

Of course it comes from them. They are at the head of the denomination and live off of the organizations. Whom do you expect to look after these splits, if not the men who profit by the organizations of the brotherhood? hope the brother will look after such things, because I, like Brother Book, belong to the church of Christ, and it takes all my time to do my duty in that body without trying to hold this unauthorized "brotherhood" together. I would not be surprised if these brethren are right in their contention that one has to be loyal to the United Society in order to be loyal to the international convention, because it seems to me the United Society has the whip handle, and you will have to swallow the whole thing or get out of what you call "the brotherhood." The Standard has not been loyal to the creature of its own creation. It helped to build up the societies, which then went together and made the "United Society." Now, why has it turned against it? Its answer is that the United Society is not run right. But the Standard was warned long ago that all such institutions would be run by designing men, and they always go farther and farther away from the truth. Why not come out boldly on the truth and say there is no scriptural authority for any such organization? All societies in what the Standard calls "the brotherhood" are denominational organizations without scriptural warrant. It is no use to trim around on the leaves and twigs of this unscriptural tree, but you should lay the ax of truth at the very root of this tree and cut it down. "But he answered and said, Every plant which my heavenly Father planted not, shall be rooted up." (Matt. 15: 13.) Why should Brother Errett trim around and try to save some of these organizations, when not one of them was planted by the divine There is nothing in religion of which God is the author, except that which is found in his word. The word of God is the seed, and any crop in the way of an organization that has not its source in this divine seed is of human origin and should be rooted up. Let Brother Errett stop organizing new enterprises which are not authorized in the New Testament and thus close up the split between him and God, and advise all others to do the same, and then, as far as I can see, he will not be responsible for any split that may occur in any "brotherhood," which seems to me to be another name for a denomination. Brother Errett seems to want a loose, disjointed denomination that cannot be split. But a thing that is so loose that it cannot be split is no account if it is not split. So the best plan is to return to the word of God and resurrect the old statement: "Where the Bible speaks, we will speak; and where it is silent, we will be silent."

THE SIN OF ADDING TO OR TAKING FROM THE WORD OF GOD. No. 2.

BY E. A. ELAM.

This principle is eternally true; hence, it is emphasized in the New Testament. The issue is between obedience and disobedience to God. The reason God forbids the addition of anything to, or the subtraction of anything from, what he commands is that all may learn obedience to him. Obedience to him is the supreme lesson he has sought and is still seeking to teach the human race.

The very act of adding anything to or taking anything from the word of God is disobedience. But it is more; it is the greatest sin man can commit against God, because it is presumptuous sin; it is rebellion.

The exaltation of man's wisdom above God's wisdomadding some things to or taking some things away from the word of God-is "the mystery of lawlessness" mentioned by Paul, and which developed into "the man of sin," or the "lawless one," described in 2 Thess. 2: 1-12. Any man's presuming to add to or take from the word of God, in the new testament, the gospel of Christ, the church of God, the work and worship and the pure Christian life of that church, is, to say the least of it, the beginning of the exaltation of oneself "against all that is called God or that is worshiped" and to set oneself "forth as God." This is true, because the man or body of men that would add anything to or take anything from the word of God declares in that act that human wisdom considers that God has not said enough or has said too much, and, in either case, has made a failure to govern or guide aright the human race.

Whosoever goeth onward and abideth not in the teaching of Christ, hath not God: he that abideth in the teaching, the same hath both the Father and the Son. (2 John 9.)

To abide in the teaching of Christ is to be satisfied and contented with that teaching and to continue steadfastly to practice it. To do this is to have God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit. To go beyond this—"beyond the things which are written" (1 Cor. 4: 6)—to be restless, not satisfied with Christ's teaching, and to desire and to try to teach more than God has revealed through Christ, is not to have God; it is to leave the church, the Holy Spirit, Christ, and God behind. On what does the man who attempts to do this stand, except upon his own speculations, and wisdom, and presumption?

But though we, or an angel from heaven, should preach unto you any gospel other than that which we preached unto you, let him be anathema. As we have said before, so say I now again, If any man preacheth unto you any gospel other than that which ye received, let him be anathema. (Gal. 1: 8, 9.)

Paul, with his learning, culture, and wide experience, determined to know nothing, "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified," and his preaching was "not with excellency of speech or of wisdom," or "in persuasive words of wisdom;" and yet it was not ineffective, but was "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." All this was to the effect that the faith of his hearers "should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." (1 Cor. 2: 1-5.) The gospel is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth: to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." (Rom. 1: 16.)

Paul preached not himself, "but Christ Jesus as Lord," and himself a servant (bond servant) "for Jesus' sake." (2 Cor. 4: 5.)

Paul did not shrink from preaching the "whole counsel of God;" he preached all the will of God, because it was God's will and the salvation of men for him to do that; but he preached nothing more,

Timothy was solemnly charged before God, in the name of Christ, and in view of the judgment, to "preach the word." He and Titus were also charged to avoid "untaught questions," or all questions not revealed, and, therefore, not embraced in the gospel. Every man is forbidden to speak anything but "oracles of God." (1 Pet. 4: 11.) No man can know anything else to speak.

I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto them, God shall add unto him the plagues which are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part from the tree of life, and out of the holy city, which are written in this book. (Rev. 22: 18, 19.)

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven. (Matt. 7: 21.)

Jesus made this declaration in the conclusion of the Sermon on the Mount, in his solemn warnings against false prophets. These prophets are to be known by their fruits, and the "good fruit" is obedience to God. The man who teaches anything more or less than faithful obedience to God, whatever his learning and worldly wisdom may be, and whatever else he may teach as service to God, is a false prophet. This is a most God-dishonoring and soul-destroying thing to do.

God declares with great clearness and sufficient strength for all to understand that the wisdom or learning of this world is foolishness with him; that when in his wisdom the world through its wisdom knew not God, it was his good pleasure through the revelation of what the world calls "foolishness" to save those who believe the gospel; that what the world (as it does to-day) counts "the foolishness of God" and "the weakness of God" is both wiser and stronger than the wisdom and strength of men; and that Christ crucified is to both Jews and Gentiles the power and wisdom of God.

Let all brethren-I say "brethren," both teachers and preachers in the church—study with deep earnestness and prayer again and again the first four chapters of First Corinthians—study these chapters in order to learn fully what they really teach and in order to apply this teaching to oneself. Many have quoted so many times these passages in their efforts to teach others that others must not add anything to or take anything from the word of God and that others must not follow the wisdom of men that they have lost sight of the fact that they may be likewise guilty and that these passages apply with equal force and condemnation to themselves.

One of the most fearful things to be considered and confronted in adding anything to or taking anything from the word of God is that such an act breaks and destroys God's covenant and declares that in the new covenant, or new testament, the blood of Christ is an entirely unnecessary thing—that is, "an unholy thing;" therefore, it is a rejection of the blood by which redemption has been purchased, and, hence, a rejection of Christ.

Let us see. Study Heb. 9: 11-28, especially verses 16-23; study these in connection with Ex. 24: 1-8. That is, kind reader, study all these passages, if you desire to learn the truth and to see and to feel the enormity of the sin of adding anything to or taking anything from the word of God. Let us not take it for granted that we fully understand all that these passages teach without further study. But let us remember that all which they teach cannot be brought out in the closing lines of this article. Enough can be said, however, for us to see that to add to or take from a blood-sealed covenant is to break the covenant and to reject the blood by which the agreement has been sealed.

1. In regard to "the first covenant," "Moses wrote all the words of Jehovah;" then he read "the book of the covenant" to the people, and they said: "All that Jehovah hath spoken will we do, and be obedient." They agreed to this. Moses then sprinkled with blood "both the book itself and all the people," and said: "This is the blood of the covenant which God commanded to you-ward." To add anything to this agreement, this covenant, after it had been sealed or dedicated by the blood, and after God had thus solemnly bound himself to fulfill every jot and tittle of it, was to reject it and count this blood as nothing.

2. This Heb. 9: 23-28 declares is true concerning the new testament and the blood of Christ. "Apart from the shedding of blood there is no remission," all the wisdcm of the world to the contrary notwithstanding. Then without the blood of Christ no sins can be remitted. Also the blood of Christ is all-sufficient, for he is the propitiation for the sins of "the whole world," and his blood cleanses from all sin. (1 John 1: 7: 2: 2.) He declares of his own blood and of the new covenant-"the heavenly things themselves "-" This is my blood of the [new] covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission (Matt. 26: 28.) In quoting this, Paul says: of sins." "This cup is the new covenant in my blood." (1 Cor. 11: 25.) "The church of the Lord," the church of God, has been purchased with Christ's own blood. (Acts 20: 28.) The church of Christ, the gospel of Christ, the new testament, including, of course, every act of obedience, every act of worship, and every service of every kind required by the Lord, have been dedicated by the blood of Christ. God has bound himself by this blood to bless and save all who will comply with this new covenant. The following, then, is true: The only way to reach the blood of Christ and to be cleansed and saved by it is through the new testament-that is, the new covenant, dedicated by his blood. Nothing else has been dedicated by his blood. Then to add something of man's wisdom to this covenant, or to take something from it, is to reject it, is to reject the gospel of Christ, is to reject the blood of Christ and to count it an unnecessary and an unholy thing.

BY T. B. LARIMORE.

In Washington City, as in many other cities, we have "drives" of various kinds—special efforts toward a certain desirable goal, which may be attained by calling attention to the desirability of that goal—and these drives sometimes extend over an entire week. We have had "Better Homes Week," "Children's Welfare Week," "Safety First Week," "Fire Prevention Week," and many other "weeks," until it seems that each period of seven days in the year is claimed for some special "drive." This week (June 1—June 7) is "Better Mailing Week" in Washington City—and elsewhere, I presume. Special efforts are being made this week by the postal authorities to eliminate some of the cost and worry incident to undirected or misdirected mail by calling attention of the public to this big item of cost in the postal service.

The local post-office authorities prepared and have had delivered at every address in the city a card a little larger than the ordinary postal card, containing on one side the proper form of address for a letter, and on the other side a definition of a "nixie" and statements of some of the loss occasioned by them. In post-office parlance a "nixie" is an incorrectly addressed or an unaddressed piece of mail. These poor "nixies"-orphans of the mail servicecost the United States Government, it is said, about $1,740,000 yearly. The taxpayers of our country-some of them-complain much of the costs of running our government, because the greater the cost of the government, the greater the taxes, of course. Now, this is one item of the cost of the government that we can help to reduce by exercising care to never put into a mail box or post office one of these troublesome little "nixies."

The proper form of address for letter or card, as shown on the sample card delivered to each address in this city, is: On a line a little below the center of the card and somewhat to the right-hand side should be written the name of the addressee—the person to whom the letter or card is to be sent; on a line below should appear the street address, if the addressee lives in a city; on the next line should be written the post office, and lastly, on a lower line, the State. In the upper left-hand corner should be written or printed, "After —— days return to," and this should be followed by the name and address of the sender, all the writing being as legible as it is possible to make it.

These "nixies"-misdirected or undirected letters and parcels—cause extra expense because they must be taken out of the regular postal routine and receive special attention. Telephone and city directories must be examined in each case and every possible effort made to locate the addressee. If the address of the sender appears on the envelope, a letter, after being held the required number of days, can be returned to the sender for better address, and the matter is disposed of promptly. However, if the address of the sender does not appear on the envelope. the letter is held in the office where received a week, and is then sent to the Dead Letter Office, there to be opened and the address of the sender ascertained, if possible. This entails loss of time, and loss of money also, necessitating more clerks to do the work of the post offices and more delay in notifying the sender that a letter has not been delivered.

The cost of one of these "nixies" is, of course, inconsiderable; but from the various post offices in the United States approximately 21,000,000 letters and 803,000 parcels go annually to that port of missing mail, the Dead Letter Office. Last year the Washington City post office sent to the Dead Letter Office 165,000 "nixies"—862,000 of which were letters and 3,300 were parcels—mostly for lack of proper address. About 100,000 letters are put into the mail each year in these United States in blank envelopes, without any address whatsoever; about $12,000 in postage stamps and $55,000 in cash are removed annually from misdirected envelopes; and the records show that $3,000,000 in checks, money orders, and drafts never reach their destination.

Parcels sent through the mails should be well wrapped, of course. The Washington City office sent to the Dead Letter Office last year 4,200 valuable articles found loose in the mails. The exercise of proper care by the sender—the use of strong wrapping paper and more care in wrapping and tying the parcel—would have saved this loss. In most cases when packages are sent by mail the sender wants the package to reach its destination in good condition, and the person to whom it is sent would be glad to receive it promptly and in good condition; hence, carelessness in wrapping or addressing the package causes a disappointment at both ends of the line. A poorly wrapped package must have "hospital service"—must often be sent to the proper place for better wrapping—and "hospital service," like "directory service," makes extra work, requires more clerks, and necessitates added cost.

As further education in the line of better mailing, all letter boxes here exhibit, in large letters, where it must be seen by every one mailing a letter, the question: "Is your return address on the envelope?"—a most effective reminder to careless letter writers. Postmaster New is also using the moving-picture theaters in this better-mailin "drive." Twelve thousand theaters in various parts of the country will display postal slogans this week to further impress upon the public mind and memory the importance of care in the addressing of letters and wrapping of packages.

To get rid of the accumulation of "dead" articles left on his hands, Uncle Sam holds an auction sale every year. They are not "blind" sales, however, where the purchaser buys "a pig in a poke," not knowing what he has purchased till he opens the package, as is the case in Express Company sales. The goods are open for inspection before the day of sale. The Washington public was invited to come to the main post-office department building, Wednesday, June 3, to inspect the articles to be auctioned off the following day. A great variety of articles was there: Toys, automobile tires, rat traps, radio sets, coal hods, axes, overwear and underwear of all sorts and sizes for men, women, and children, Bibles (there were not less than twenty Bibles) razors, cameras, furniture polish, cross-cut saws, and a long, long list of other things. Many articles had been grouped and were sold in lots. Typewritten lists had been prepared for circulation; hence, prospective buyers could examine the goods, and mark on the list those on which they wished to bid at the sale. There were a thousand lots on the lists, but that included many times one thousand articles. For instance, in one lot two hundred and thirty pairs of miscellaneous hosiery were sold; in another, one hundred handkerchiefs. The bidders were seated in a large hall on the day of the sale, the articles were put up and sold rapidly, and the entire lot was disposed of. No post-office employees could bid at the sale.

This sale was arranged for "Better Mailing Week" as an additional object lesson, and it was indeed an impressive lesson to see so many articles that had been lost through lack of care—a lesson to make the careless careful and to make the careful more careful to avoid imposing "nixies" on the postal service. It would be well for us all to remember that every piece of mail that has to have "directory service" or "hospital service" or must be sent to the Dead Letter Office entails additional expense on Uncle Sam—unnecessary expense, too—and it is also well for us to remember and never forget that we pay all of Uncle Sam's expenses, necessary and otherwise.

QUERY DEPARTMENT

BY H. LEO BOLES

I want to ask two questions, as follows: (1) Was Barnabas an apostle? (See Acts 14: 14.) (2) Can you give me some light on Rev. 20: 4-6? What is the first resurrection, and when will it take place?—W. H. NEILL.

- 1. Yes, Barnabas is called an "apostle." "Apostle" means one who has been sent out. Barnabas was sent out by the church at Antioch. He was not an apostle in the same sense that Peter and John and others were.
- 2. I do not know what "the first resurrection" means. I know what some say that it means, but I do not know. Adam Clarke says it is supposed to be the resurrection of the martyrs. B. W. Johnson says it is the great moral and spiritual resurrection that brings in the millennium.

Please explain some points with reference to the twelve apostles. (1) Are you sure that the choosing of Matthias in Judas' place was approved of God, or was it authorized by Christ or the Spirit? (2) In Acts 2: 14, does Peter's standing up with the eleven mean eleven others than himself, or himself included? (3) In 1 Cor. 15: 5, Paul refers to them as "the twelve." Was not this after Judas' death and before the choosing of Matthias? How do you account for that? (4) In Rev. 21: 14, John saw in the foundation of the wall of the city the name of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. Do you not think that the apostle Paul's name would have been here inscribed? (5) I note in Acts 14: 14 that Barnabas is also called an apostle. Was he such in the same sense as the other apostles? I know this is not essential to the salvation of any, neither do I approve of speculation, but I am somewhat disturbed over this question and will appreciate very much your help in the matter.—H. J. Stafford, Ludlow, Ky.

Matthias was chosen to take the place of Judas. Jesus had ascended to the Father and had told his apostles to remain in Jerusalem until the Holy Spirit should come. It was about a week from the time that Jesus ascended to the Father before the Holy Spirit came on the day of Pentecost. During this time Matthias was chosen to take Judas' place. Peter took the lead in directing the minds of the apostles in the selection of Matthias. He quotes Ps. 109: 8 as proof that God would select one to take Judas' place. Peter quotes this scripture as authority for what was about to be done in selecting one to take Judas' place. "And they put forward two, Joseph called Barsabbas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias. And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, who knowest the hearts of all men, show of these two the one whom thou hast chosen, to take the place in this ministry and apostleship from which Judas fell away, that he might go to his own place. And they gave lots for them; and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles." (Acts 1: 23-26.) The whole affair shows that they proceeded by the authority of God and in fulfillment of the prophecy which had been given concerning the selection of another apostle. There is no disapproval of what was done, and it seems to have received the approval of Jehovah.

Please explain, in the Gospel Advocate, what "revelings, and such like," in Gal. 5: 21, means.—X.

The scripture referred to reads as follows: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, sorcery, enmities, strife, jealousies, wraths, factions, divisions, parties, envyings, drunkenness, revelings, and such like; of which I forewarn you, even as I did forwarn you, that they who practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." (Gal. 5: 19-21.) Paul here is enumerating the works of the flesh. He specifies fifteen by name, and then uses the phrase, "such like." This phrase has reference not only to the last of the fifteen sins, but has reference to the list of sins here mentioned. It includes any other sin similar to those mentioned above. The Emphatic Diaglott translates the phrase, "and such like," by the phrase, "and things similar to these." The phrase, "and such like," means all the sins that proceed from the evil passions of degraded man in addition to those above specified. This would include dancing, carousing, etc. All sins of every conceivable nature are forbidden and condemned. Idolatry and all of its kindred sins are condemned by this scripture. Drunkenness and all of its kindred sins, or sins growing out of drunkenness, are condemned. Revelings and all kindred sins are condemned. All "the works of the flesh," which include all sins, are condemned by this

Is that disciple referred to in John 18: 15 John himself? If so, please tell me chapter and verse in which I can find it.—Mrs. Mattie Morris, Tuscumbia, Ala.

Yes, "that other disciple" is thought to be John, the writer. It is thought that he modestly refrained from calling his own name. Other references similar to this one are found in the book of John. "There was at the table reclining in Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved." (John 13: 23.) Again: "She runneth therefore, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple whom Jesus loved." (John 20: 2; see, also, John 21: 7, 20.) It is generally understood that Peter and John were the two disciples mentioned here.

HOME READING

THE SHEPHERD OF SALISBURY PLAIN.

Many of our readers are acquainted with that beautiful tract, "The Shepherd of Salisbury Plain." The substance of this narrative is a correct account of David Saunders, of West Lavington, who died about the period of its publication. The conversation represented as passing between the shepherd and a Mr. Johnson really took place with Mr. Stonehouse, a neighboring clergyman, who afterwards befriended the shepherd on many occasions.

Mr. Stonehouse, who was on a journey, and somewhat fearful, from the appearance of the sky, that rain was at no great distance, accosted the shepherd with asking what sort of weather it would be on the morrow. "It will be such weather as pleases me," answered the shepherd. Though the answer was delivered in the mildest and civilest tone that could be imagined, Mr. Stonehouse thought the words themselves rather rude and surly, and asked him how that could be. "Because," replied the shepherd, "it will be such weather as shall please God, and whatsoever pleases him always pleases me."

Mr. Stonehouse was quite satisfied with this reply, and entered into conversation with the shepherd in the following manner:

"Yours is a troublesome life, honest friend."

"To be sure, sir," replied the shepherd, "'tis not a very lazy life, but 'tis not near so toilsome as that which my Master led for my sake; and he had every state and condition of life at his choice, and chose a hard one, while I only submit to the lot that is appointed me."

"You are exposed to great cold and heat," said the gentleman.

"True, sir," said the shepherd; "but then I am not exposed to great temptations; and so, throwing one thing against another, God is pleased to contrive to make things more equal than we poor, ignorant, short-sighted creatures are apt to think. David was happier when he kept his father's sheep, on such a plain as this, and singing some of his own psalms, perhaps, than ever he was when he became king of Israel and Judah."

"You think, then," said the gentleman, "that a laborious life is a happy one?"

"I do, sir; and more especially so, as it exposes a man to fewer sins. If King Saul had continued a poor laboring man to the end of his days, he might have lived happy and honest, and died a natural death in his bed at last, which you know, sir, was more than he did."

God blessed Saunders with an excellent wife and numerous offspring; he had sixteen children, and twelve of them, at one time, were "like olive branches around his table." It is not to be supposed that a poor shepherd, with such a family, could be without difficulties, especially as his wife suffered much from sickness. His wages were but six shillings and threepence weekly (about one dollar and forty cents), out of which he was sometimes obliged to pay a boy for assistance; but when times of peculiar necessity occurred, God always raised him up a friend. Mr. Stonehouse (afterwards Sir James Stonehouse) repeatedly assisted him; and sometimes his good neighbors, in humbler life, united to supply his wants. In one of his letters, in his old age, he thus writes with much Christian simplicity: "As for my part, I am but very poorly in body, having very sore legs, and cannot perform the business of my flock without help. As to the things of this world, I have but little share; having my little cot to pray and praise God in, and a bed to rest on; so I have just as much of this world as I desire. But my garment is worn out, and some of my Christian friends think they must put their mites together and buy me one, or else I shall not be able to endure the cold in the winter. So I can say: Good is the Lord! He is still fulfilling his promise: 'I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.' "-From an Old Book.

BIBLE CROSS WORD PUZZLE

THIS may seem rather an easy diagram, with three solid black spaces on each side, but unless your Bible is at hand you may be caught on some of the shortest words.

One term, you will notice, is taken from the Apocrypha. This little-known collection of early Hebrew writings is well worth reading for its own sake, as well as to find the name of the native city of the Maccabees.

How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzle ○ 1925 THE J.C.W. CO.

© 1925 THE J.C.W. do. How to Solve a Cross Word Puzzie (13)

To work out this puzzle, the white spaces must be filled with letters forming words answering to the various horizontal and vertical definitions given below. The horizontal and vertical words are not the same, but each gives a clue to the other. The first letter of each word is indicated by a number which refers to the definitions listed below.

It is advisable to first fill in, in both directions, those words which you know to be correct. These will furnish hints to those words which you do not know or had merely guessed at. When the puzzle is solved correctly, the letters in the white spaces will spell words both horizontally and vertically. The black spaces are the blind spots of the puzzle and merely form the pattern, incidentally designating the ends and beginnings of the words contained in the puzzle.

OBITUARIES

FLEMING.

Nannie Eliza, daughter of Minor Nannie Eliza, daughter of Minor and Rachel Hanes, was born in Hickman County, Tenn., on November 12, 1845, and died near Franklin, Ky., on January 31, 1925. She obeyed the gospel in her teens and lived a consistent Christian, being a member of the congregation at Old Dunlap, Tenn., until her marriage to Robert Stuart Fleming (who preceded her to the grave eighteen years.) She then moved to Simpson County, Ky. Soon after her marriage Brother E. G. Sewell established the Bethel congregation, and she was its oldest member. Sewell established the Bethel congregation, and she was its oldest member. She had been a subscriber to the Gospel Advocate since her marriage. Surviving are: one sister, Mrs. A. M. Bibb, Charleston, Mo.; four children—Mrs. E. C. Stuart, Melvin, Robert, and Nannie Mai; and seven grand-children. It was her pleasure to see all her children and grandchildren (with the exception of the baby girl) members of the one body. After a short service by Brother C. D. Crouch, the remains were laid to rest in Green the remains were laid to rest in Green Lawn Cemetery, Franklin. All the Lawn Cemetery, Franklin. All the family were present at her burial except one grandson, Larimore Stuart, who is in Detroit, Mich. Had she lived until November, her years would have been fourscore. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." MRS. ALLEN PHY.

HELLUMS.

My mother, Sarah Elizabeth Rutherford Hellums was born on January 4, 1852, and died on July 24, 1824, at Charlie, Texas, where she had resided Charlie, Texas, where she had resided only a short time. Her parents were George Rutherford and Lavenia Crum. Fifty-five years ago she was married to William Hellums at Hick-ory Flat, Miss., by W. A. Crum, who shortly afterwards baptized them into Christ. She is survived by one brother, five daughters, five sons, and twenty-five grandchildren. Her eldest son, O. S. Hellums, of Dawson, Texas, is a minister of the gospel. She read the Gospel Advocate over forty years. the Gospel Advocate over forty years. She took a keen interest in current events and dally searched and discussed the Scriptures. Only serious illness kept her from the Lord's-day worship. Her life was one of toil and sacrifice for others; and this she did cheerfully believing she would recheerfully, believing she would re-

She was devoted and true in all the relations of life, and has left to her children, all of whom are members of the one body, a Christian character that stands as a monument to the cause of Christ. Having had heart trouble for Christ. Having had heart trouble for years, her death was expected at any time. When I arrived from the far West to her bedside and gazed on her calm features in death, I thanked God for her life. Her remains were laid to rest at Pursley by our father. Funeral services were conducted by Brother Lee Pursley and Brother Vincent near by, in the church where she had worshiped for twenty years.

HOPPIE LINVILLE.

TUCKER.

On April 2, 1925, Brother M. A. Tucker was laid to rest in Holladay Cemetery. Brother Tucker has a record in the cause of Christ that is record in the cause of Christ that is to be emulated. He was born near Clarksburg, Tenn., on July 15, 1839. At the age of fourteen he obeyed the gospel under the preaching of Brother Plattenburg, at Roane's Creek. I have been informed that this was the first congregation of the church of Christ in West Tennessee, and began Christ in West Tennessee, and began work in 1825. Brother Tucker and Sister Mary Ann Leslie were the first two to bring a gospel preacher to the town of Holladay, and through their efforts there is to-day a splendid congregation of the church of Christ there. For many years he had been one of the most faithful of the members of this congregation, and as such had always been among the first in one of the most faithful of the members of this congregation, and as such had always been among the first in supporting the preaching of the gospel. In his passing the community feels the loss of one of its oldest and best citizens; the church feels and misses the services of an able, consecrated elder in the cause; and his children feel keenly the loss of a father who never failed to point them, both by precept and example, to the higher life in Christ Jesus. Brother Tucker is survived by two sons—M. A. Tucker, of Jackson, Tenn., and W. T. Tucker, of Memphis, Tenn.—and six daughters. To these we could give no better words of solace and comfort than the statement of the great apostle to the Gentiles: "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." (1 Thess. 4: 13.)

BARTLETTE.

On March 24, 1925, at the home of Brother and Sister Everett B. Bartlette, on Martin's Creek, in Putnam County, Tenn., the gentle spirit of Sister Lucy (Burges) Bartlette, wife of Brother Bernice Bartlette, left its earthly tabernacle and winged its way back to God. She was at the time of her death twenty-one years, eight months, and ten days old. She obeyed the gospel during the year 1919 and was faithful unto death. While attending Burritt College she and Bernice Bartlette met, loved, and were happily married on December 1, 1924, coming direct to Martin's Creek to make their home. "Lucile" (as we called her) was quiet and re-(as we called her) was quiet and retiring in disposition, loving, kind, and gentle toward all with whom she came in contact. Wilmington, Delaware. - "I was nervous and weak and not at all reg-ular. I worked in a factory at the time and could not work very much.

I was sick over a year, then a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I started to vegetable Compound and I started to pick up as soon as I began taking it. Then I took it again before my first baby was born and I never had a bit of trouble. I recommend it highly."

—Mrs. Jane Crossan, 612 Pine St., Wilmington, Delaware.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped many other women just as it has helped Mrs. Dakan, Mrs. Meyn and Mrs. Crossan.

Consider the statements of these women. They give you the benefit of their actual experience with the Vegetable Compound.

A nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of the Vegetable Com-pound reports that 98 out of every 100 have been benefited by its use.

This is a remarkable record and proves the dependability of the medi-cine for the relief of the troubles women often have.

For weak and run-down conditions so common after child-birth it is well adapted. It strengthens and tones up the system and restores normal health.

The Vegetable Compound contains no harmful drugs or narcotics and can be taken in safety by the nursing mother. For sale by druggists everywhere.

From the Brethren

Corinth, Miss., June 10.—On the first Sunday in June I preached in the new meetinghouse in Florence, Ala., built by the white church of Christ. These white brethren have done a wonderful work here for my people. This property cost five thousand dollars. The church in Tuscumbia gave the windows. The building is a nice one. It has a baptistery and two dressingrooms. They also have a house for the preacher to live in. They want a good man to move there and live in this house—a house with and live in this house—a house with three good rooms and water at the door. They want a strong man, one that knows the way.—J. They formerly lived in Tennessee. Both seemed surprised to know there was a church of Christ here. Sister Blocher was a Sewell before her mar-Blocher was a Sewell before her marriage, a near relative of the great Sewell family. Let all remember that we are in our house at 1201 Cruft Street, and not in the abandoned storeroom at 1430 East Raymond Street. Take a Shelby car to Cruft Street, then walk east one block.—W. P. Lowe.
